By J. W. King, Sr.

From a military standpoint the campaign in North Africa is over. Only a few scattered German and Italian soldiers remain outside the Cap Bon area and mopping up is continuing. The Axis have not a single port or air field left and their resistance can have little effect on Allied plans in the future.

With the campaign in Africa practically over the Allies can focus their attention on the invasion of the continent of Europe. No one outside the high command of the Allies knows where or when the blow will fall. The American air forces have already struck a mighty blow on Sicily. 400 planes took part in the raid and pilots say nothing remains of the harbor of Palermo. Such blows as these will more than likely continue and grow heavier until those places have been softened up for invasion.

The American people rejoiced at the good news when Allied soldiers entered Bizerte and Tunis. It took some hard fighting to dislodge the Axis from North Africa and it will take still harder fighting to invade the continent. We here at home must not become complacent and think the war will be over in a short time. Many long months of hard fighting in which thousands of American soldiers will fall are ahead of us. We must continue to buy Bonds, turn in our scrap, raise all the food we can, and anything else that needs to be done to supply our soldiers and our allies with the necessary food and equipment to carry them through the rest of the campaign. Remember that when we have finished with Germany we still have those little brown devils of Japan to wipe out.

It is always a grand and glorious feeling in West Texas when a good rain comes. Although this section was not suffering too much for moisture, the splendid rain that fell Sunday night was very welcome.

Quite a bit of improving is going on in Loraine. The Lorex Theatre has rebuilt and repainted the awning in front of the show. O. L. Griffin has re-roofed and put a new awning and porch in front of his telephone building, and has also put a new awning on the post office building. Gus Magee is putting a new floor in his building and tenanting the front getting it ready for some tenants. Others should follow their example.

Loraine hasn't had its usual spring cleanup and there are some spots about town that take on the aspect of a junk yard. For health and beauty let's get busy on a cleanup.

It has been brought to our attention that the City Council has not for the past few years published a statement of the financial condition of the city. We know of course that it should be done but we don't know why it hasn't. A party called to our attention Article 1023 of the Revised Civil Statutes which reads as follows: "Financial Statement.—The City Council shall, at least ten days before the expiration of each municipal year, cause to be published in a city newspaper a correct and full statement of the receipts and expenditures from the date of the last annual report, together with the sources from which the funds were derived, and showing for what purpose disbursed, the condition of the treasury, together with such information as may be necessary to a full understanding of the financial condition of the city."

The people of the city are entitled to know the condition of their affairs and we hereby call attention of the City Council to the fact that it is their duty to make such report.

Gift Shower For Miss Thomas

Spring flowers were decorations for party rooms at the home of Mrs. Frank Johnson Saturday afternoon when Mrs. John Johnson, Mrs. Garland Faulkenberry and Mrs. Lily Bennett entertained with a gift shower for Miss Ronel Thomas who is to be married May 20th to Lt. Al Simmons in a ceremony in the post chapel at Williams Field, in Chandler, Arizona.

Mrs. Faulkenberry and Mrs. Bennett welcomed guests and registered them in the white satin bride book which was made and presented to the bride by Mrs. John Johnson.

Guests were then invited into the dining room where Vita Mae Riden pinned favors of miniature airplanes with the body of pastel larkspur and paper wings which held the words "Al and Ronel May 20th." Bonnie Ruth West and Juanita Brown served punch.

Guests were then invited into the bedroom where gifts were displayed. Mrs. John Johnson registered guests and gifts in the room.

Mrs. K. L. Taylor played a medley of songs on the accordion "Go Feather Your Nest," "Love Nest," "Coming in on the Wing of a Prayer" and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

MCCOLLUM HOME SCENE FOR SUPPER

Mrs. Thomas Riden, Mrs. Henry Riden and Mrs. Dee McCollum entertained with a supper Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dee McCollum. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Land, Mrs. Harold Holman and baby of Big Spring, Corp. Garland Land of Camp Beal, Calif., Miss Lorene Land of Los Angeles, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. Henry Riden, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Doss and daughter Diana, Mr. and Mrs. Jay McCollum and son of Colorado City, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Jennings and daughter of Denton and H. B. McCollum of Phoenix, Arizona.

Dinner guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Mung Sunday were Miss Ethel and Bobbie Beaty of Midland, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith from the Keystone ranch. Afternoon visitors were Messrs. and Mmes. Allor, Plez and Loyd Beaty and their families.

Canning Sugar Now Available

The Mitchell County War Price and Ration Board this week issued the following statement in regard to canning sugar.

"This office will begin to accept applications for canning sugar on Monday, May 17. Applications will be handled in much the same manner as gasoline applications are handled and may be mailed into the Board with the War Ration Books 1 of the applicants. Applications will be made out by the consumer, passed on by the Food Board, and mailed to applicant."

"We have been advised by the Washington Office that the 25 pound limit placed on canning sugar is to be used as a maximum figure and is not to be used as a guide, and that the average allocation of canning sugar per person per annum must not exceed ten pounds. Allotments will be made on the same basis as last year, that of one pound per each four quarts of finished fruit. No one should ask or be given more sugar than is necessary to meet his minimum requirements."

GROUP ENJOYS PICNIC

Those enjoying a picnic supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Riden Friday evening were Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Land, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Roberts and Maxine, Mrs. Tommie Henderson and baby of Midland, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Riden and daughter Vita Mae, Mrs. J. C. Hall, Jr. and son Jimmie, Mr. and Mrs. Dee McCollum, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Doss and daughter Diana, Mr. and Mrs. Vern Lich of Tulsa, Okla., Mrs. Harold Holman and baby of Big Spring, Lorene Land of Los Angeles, California, and Mr. and Mrs. Jay McCollum of Colorado City.

ATTEND DELTA KAPPA GAMMA DINNER

Miss Pearl Gann, Clara Shoemaker, Eula Carter, Edith Wilkerson, and Mrs. E. C. Raney attended a dinner for the Beta Epsilon Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma at the home of Mrs. Vivian Shropshire in Colorado City Saturday evening. Mrs. E. C. Raney and Miss Clara Shoemaker were initiated into the society, which is an honorary sorority for women teachers.

Mrs. J. E. Shewbert of Sweetwater visited Mrs. Floyd Richey Tuesday afternoon.

Hail Damages; Moisture Fine

A good rain amounting to about three fourths to an inch fell over most of Mitchell County Sunday night. The moisture will revive pastures and small grain as well as materially aid crops that had just come up.

Considerable hail damage was reported southwest and south of town. Many crops will have to be replanted. The hail in town was light but did some damage to gardens and fruit trees.

CONGRESSMAN MAHON CONDEMNES JOHN L. LEWIS

Washington, D. C.—Congressman George Mahon, in condemning John L. Lewis and the coal strike recently, said that Lewis was guilty of treasonable conduct and should have been shown months ago that he is not greater than the U. S. government. The people are aroused, and they have every right to be said.

In a speech in Congress Mahon said that Lewis had in effect repudiated our government and joined our enemies and that this latest act against the government by Lewis had fully vindicated all those who had been fighting for legislation to prevent strikes in war time and for a firmer policy by the President against our enemies within the U. S.

Mahon and many other members from the South have been demanding for months that strikes should be outlawed for the duration. The President had secured a pledge from Lewis and other national labor leaders that there would be no strikes and that there would be no legislation of a firmer policy against strikes is now thought probable.

CEMETERY WORKING

C. W. McAnally requests us to announce that the Lone Wolf Cemetery will be worked Thursday, May 20. Everyone interested in keeping this cemetery in good condition is urged to meet there on that day with appropriate tools.

Mexicans are especially urged to come and clean off their part of the cemetery.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mrs. K. L. Taylor will present her music pupils in a recital at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the Methodist Church. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Victory Concert Friday Night

The final Victory Concert for this school year will be presented at the high school gymnasium on Friday night, May 14. The high school band under direction of Harold Martin, will furnish the major portion of the program. Pupils of the first, second and third grades will be presented in their Rhythm Band and other numbers.

Admission will be a War Bond or Stamp of any denomination.

The public is invited and urged to attend. Encourage the students by your presence at the concert and at the same time help to provide money that will whip the Axis.

JUNIORS HAVE FULL WEEK CELEBRATING BIRTHDAYS

Riden Home Scene for Dinner.

Austin Fuller of Colorado City was honor guest on Sunday, May 2, when Mrs. N. I. Reiter, Jr. entertained a group with a dinner in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Riden.

A large white birthday cake with the words "Happy Birthday" in pink centered the dining table.

Others present were Marie Preston, Janell Henderson, Ralph Hall, Homer Lucas, Tommie Jean Riden, and J. N. I. Reiter, Jr.

Melvalene Blair Celebrates Birth.

Melvalene Blair celebrated her seventh birthday Wednesday afternoon in her home, when her mother entertained with a party for her and her schoolmates.

Games were played and pictures were taken. A patriotic theme was used in decorations. A red, white and blue basket holding a U. S. flag held the gifts, red and white roses with blue larkspur were flower decorations in the parlor rooms. The table was centered with the birthday cake which held seven candles.

Melvalene was given a pool of thread and told to wind this thread on the spool which led her to the basket of beautiful gifts from her friends.

Guests were Barbara Small, Norma Jan Snyder, Jackie Richey, Janice Sue Forbus, Mattie Ewell Griffin, Shirley Preston, Joan Mayo, Wanda Martin, Thomas Bob Long, Deryl Bennett, Lovell Richardson, Dale Baird, Richard Blair, Charles Lee Griffin, Carolyn Martin, Billy J. Long, Dorthy Lou Blair, Billie Blair, and Melvalene.

Assisting Mrs. Blair in entertaining were Mmes. Tommie Long, Jack Richey, Elbert Martin, and Bennett Blair.

Billie Joe Martin Celebrates 9th Birthday.

Billie Joe Martin celebrated his 9th birthday Thursday afternoon when his mother entertained a group of boy friends. Lawn games were played and refreshments of sandwiches, potato chips, lettuce, birthday cake and punch were served to Willard Pratt, Dale Baird, Doyle Mayes, Junior and Lawrence Cook, Gordon Mahon, James Carroll Wilson, Charles Lee Griffin, Thomas Bob Long, and Merlyn Bruce.

Charles Lee Griffin Birthday.

At the home of Mrs. K. L. Taylor Mrs. Floyd Griffin entertained Saturday afternoon honoring her son Charles Lee on his 10th birthday.

Games were played, directed by Eloise Preston and Bessie Ann Price. Mrs. Griffin served refreshments of sandwiches, cookies, punch and birthday cake to Billie and Delbert Thompson, and Mary Rose and Dixie Lee Templeton of Colorado City, Ragan Martin, Gordon Mahon, Dale Baird, Eae Narrell, Patsy and Peggy Beaty, Alton Sparks, Melvin Baumann, Shirley Taylor, Deryl Bennett, Billie Joe Martin, Junior and Lawrence Cook, Bonnie Doi Horton, Charles Kidd, Fatsy Green, Betty Jean Horton, Shirley Preston, Bobbie Price, Melvalene Blair, Barbara Small, Janice Stewart, Mattie Ewell Griffin and Charles Lee.

Howard Bryant Honored

Honoring her son Howard on his sixth birthday Mrs. Joe Bryant entertained Friday afternoon with a play party at her home for Howard and little friends.

After games refreshments of punch and birthday cake were served to Bobbie Mote, Jackie Richey, Norma Jan Snyder, Ethel Haygood, Jimmie Bryant, Wend

Commencement Sermon Sunday

The high school gymnasium is expected to be filled on Sunday evening, May 16, when Rev. H. A. Polnac, pastor of the local Baptist Church, will deliver the Commencement sermon to the 22 seniors of the 1943 graduating class of Loraine High School.

The processional and recessional marches will be played by Mrs. K. L. Taylor.

The invocation will be given by Minister A. R. Lawrence which will be followed by the congregation singing "Ready", led by T. J. Riden. Following the sermon the congregation will sing "Onward Christian Soldiers" with Mr. Riden leading. Benediction will be said by Rev. E. C. Raney.

Members of the class are: Edgar Faumann, Merlin Kennett, Dayton Bruce, Rae Furrow, Albert Givens, Bernard Hackfeld, George Hoover, Jr., Dudley Jarratt, Harold Johnson, Bryan Mabon, Merrill Martin, Forest Meadows, Carol Preston, Mason Richburg, Harold Thompson, Raymond Nix, Frank Martin, Truman Nix, Eula Mae Anders, Maxine Baniard, Ouida Blair, Lena Faye Barrow, Doris Butler, Ina Mae Haygood, Eleanor Green, Mary Layfield, Billie True Linnam, Ellie Jean McCollum, Gypsy Ted McCollum, Betty Jane Trott, Nettie Mae Martin, and Neta Grace Sparks.

A. M. REED HOME SCENE FOR FAMILY REUNION

Mothers day was the occasion for a family reunion when all three children of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Reed met in their home to hold a joint celebration of their 60th wedding anniversary. Mr. Reed's 80th birthday and Mother's day.

Those present for this occasion were L. A. Reed and Mrs. J. T. Savell and daughters of Denton, Mrs. Laura Kirkman and son Kenneth, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Holland and children of Loraine, Mrs. P. W. Saunders and children of Landers, and Miss Gussie Reed. Other visitors were Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Ussery of Champaign, and Mrs. Tom Scowan and Mrs. Emily Bird of Loraine.

FUDS OF MRS. MARTIN PRESENTED IN RECITAL

"Honoring our parents, home and country" was the theme for the afternoon program given by music pupils of Mrs. W. K. Martin Sunday at the Methodist Church.

The welcome was given by Frances Bell Griffin, and Leagan Martin announced the program.

Piano solos were played by Jimmie Hall, Effie Lyn Shephard, Annie Pearl Kingston, Ruby Fae Beights, Tommie Jean Riden, Fatsy Green, Peggy and Patsy Beatty, Marie Beights, Dorothy Caswell, Jeannine Martin, Nelda Jo Yarbrough, and Dorothy Duke. Readings were given by Norma Jan Snyder, Gloria Wheeler, Nell Kingston, Glenda Kay Simmons, Billie and Bobbie Williams. Teddy Ray Brown and Patsy Green gave vocal solos with the group singing in the chorus.

Norma Jan Snyder, Gloria Wheeler, Nell Kingston, Glenda Kay Simmons, Jimmie Hall and Billie and Bobbie Williams made up a primary song group.

Janell Henderson, Tommie Jean Riden, Marie Preston, Betty Marth sang "That Wonderful Mother of Mine."

A piano duet was played by Dorothy Duke and Jeannine Martin.

The high school girls' chorus of Mara Lee Coffee, Ouida Adams, Billie True Linnam, Vita Mae Riden and Gypsy Ted McCollum sang "Savior Hear Us."

The program closed with the entire group singing "Have You Ever Been in Texas in the Spring?" "Texas," and "Let's Bring New Glory to Our Glory."

Bobbie Joe Kingston sang with the chorus.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mrs. W. R. Martin will present her closing recital for the year Monday night, May 17, at the high school gymnasium when her entire class will take part in "A Party in the Music Studio."

The program will start at 8:45 and the public is given a cordial invitation to attend.

Bill Banks, Billie Finch, Dale Baird, Mutt Curtiss, Doyle Mayes, Janice Sue Forbus and Howard.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allies Tighten Tunisia Trap on Axis; Russ Offensive in Caucasus Menaces Germans' Bridgehead at Novorossisk; FDR Envisions Postwar Youth Service

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Adm. William F. Halsey, commander of the U. S. naval forces in the South Pacific (right) is shown as he conferred with Hon. Walter Nash, New Zealand minister to the U. S., following Nash's arrival at Allied headquarters recently. Nash visited Halsey during an inspection tour of Pacific islands in which New Zealand troops are active.

TUNISIA: Smooth Teamwork

Irresistibly the Allied offensive in North Africa had rolled on toward Tunis and Bizerte.

Like well-coordinated teams the various commands performed their tasks. Principal objective of the British First Army had been the Axis last mountain barrier before the plain of Tunis in the Medjez-El-Bab sector. Chief assignment of Lieutenant General Patton's American troops had been the overwhelming of three enemy hill positions on the road to Bizerte. And although the American forces ran into heavy counterblows in their enveloping tactics around Mateur and Tebourba, they had continued to drive ahead.

While these two strategic movements were being carried out as a prelude to a combined Allied assault, French troops in the south executed a maneuver that had cut the Pont-du-Fahs-Enfndaville road and exposed the flank of the Axis troops facing General Montgomery's Eighth army.

While the Germans faced the inevitable decision of final surrender or annihilation their commanders were using every possible device to slow down the Allied advance. Resistance against the British First army had stiffened sharply at the crest of Bou Aoukaz mountain, overlooking the valley to Tunis.

RUSSIA: Battles in the Air

While Berlin reports announced that a large-scale Russian offensive had been undertaken against the Nazis' Kuban bridgehead in the Caucasus, Moscow communiques said that aerial fighting was the principal activity along the far-flung front.

This aerial activity had various significances on various sectors. In the Caucasus, the Russian strategy was to wear down Nazi air power and thus enhance the Red army's efforts at dislodging the Germans from their bridgehead around Novorossisk.

In east Prussia, Red aerial bombing assaults were directed at breaking up concentrations of German troops and supplies being prepared for Hitler's spring invasion.

REFUGEES: U. S.-Britain to Aid

Plans to ease the plight of war refugees in areas outside of occupied Europe and to reject any measures that might involve bargaining with Germany were believed by observers to have been embodied in a set of recommendations agreed on by delegates to the Anglo-American conference on refugee problems, held in Hamilton, Bermuda.

Observers indicated that the conference's recommendations include the temporary relocation in Africa of 80,000 refugees now in neutral countries until the end of the war, as well as provisions for the feeding and care of refugees unable to leave neutral countries.

TRAINING: For Postwar Youth

The idea that the youth of America, making use of industrial plants and military camps might well give a year's service to their government in the postwar era was advanced by President Roosevelt.

Declaring that his recent inspection trip of war activities had convinced him that the armed forces and the home front factories are in their stride, the President said he was wondering what could be done after victory is won, with camps and plants in which millions have been invested. While he had no specific program to offer, he emphasized the benefits in physical condition and mental alertness that men and women in service and war-work uniforms had realized in the last few months. He indicated he thought their training should be extended to all young men and women in some form after we win the war.

Any program that might develop, he said, probably would be only partly military.

COAL SHOWDOWN: FDR Moves Swiftly

Blunt had been President Roosevelt's warning to John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, to end the tie-up in the nation's soft coal fields.

The need for blunt action, however, had been clearly evident, for even at the moment the President had threatened to use his powers as commander in chief to prevent interference with the war effort, 75,000 miners already were on strike and a walkout of the entire 450,000 bituminous miners had been threatened.

Terming the miners' walkout as "strikes against the U. S. government itself" the President said that such action was clearly a violation of labor's "no-strike" pledge.

JOBS VS. PAY: Essential Shifts OK

As the War Manpower commission extended its employment stabilization program to the entire nation, workers anywhere in the United States were permitted to shift from one essential job to another at higher pay, provided such transfers "enhance the war effort."

Previously such job shifts could take place only in 70 areas covered by the WMC's regional stabilization programs. The commission's action was taken after representatives of organized labor had protested that job transfers under the former regulations favored workers in the stabilization areas at the expense of workers in other regions.

Under the new plan, any worker in an essential industry may transfer to a higher-paying job in another essential industry if he obtains from his employer, from the U. S. employment service office in his area, or from his local WMC office, a "statement of availability" which declares that his transfer will benefit the war effort.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington, D. C.

AIR PRISONERS IN GERMANY

The fate of American fliers in the Doolittle raid has raised the question: What happens to airmen who go down over Europe? Here is the answer from an officer of the U. S. bomber command in England.

If fliers bail out and get down safely over France, Belgium or occupied Europe, their chances of getting back to England are pretty good. They become prisoners of war, but in the course of exchanging prisoners, they may soon get back to base.

If they bail out over Germany, there's not much chance of getting back. But so far as we know, the treatment of air prisoners is similar to that of other prisoners, and varies according to rank.

There is one incident, however, that damns the German record—the story of Paddy Finucane. Most people suppose that the famous RAF ace lost his life because his Spitfire crashed into the channel after being hit over France.

The truth is—though this has never been published—that as Finucane was falling, he was strafed by German machine gunfire, and he was already dead when he hit the water.

Thus a new meaning comes to Finucane's famous phrase, "This is it, chaps."

TOUGH JOB

When you sift down all the hullabaloo about Elmer Davis and his Office of War Information, the only valid criticism you can make against the drawing Hoosier is that he is working too hard. The last two weeks when he went on the air, he was so exhausted he had a stand-by alongside ready to take up his script if he collapsed.

Davis works far into the night, tries to read all that his voluminous office produces, sees almost everyone who wants to see him.

But given a tough situation, basically he has done a good job. Senators like Montana's Wheeler and Nevada's McCarran, whose acid digestive systems are always poisoning their political outlook, make a wry face at Davis. But Wheeler and McCarran are always demanding more facts and inside fact is that Davis has been fighting their battle in keeping the American public informed.

Most of Davis' fight is getting news, squeezing it out of government bureaus which don't want to give, making the army and navy release facts which show up their mistakes, rowing with Czarubber Jeffers because his estimates on tires are too rosy.

When Davis stepped down from his well-paying radio job to correlate government information, everyone envied him his job, thought he had a softie. But the job of digging news, accurate news, unpleasant news out of the government is not soft. And it is not popular.

Davis is a good newsman. Being such, he is not popular, never will be in some quarters.

Note: Davis did his best to release the story on bombing Tokyo long ago. Several times he urged the White House that the American public should know the facts. Earlier, when the Japs released a picture of U. S. fliers supposedly captured in the Tokyo raid, Davis wanted to point out the truth, namely that these were naval fliers, not Doolittle's. They had been captured in a naval battle. This explanation was broadcast to foreign countries by OWI, but Davis, through no fault of his, was not permitted to tell folks at home.

FDR'S CONGRESSMAN

As commander-in-chief, the President has supreme powers in the conduct of the war, but he is just another citizen on the books of the Hyde Park, N. Y., rationing board.

At a recent White House meeting, the President was telling three congressmen, Gale, Republican, of Minnesota, Jackson, Democrat, of Washington, and Manasco, Democrat, of Alabama, about the "red tape" involved in buying meat and groceries on his trips home to Hyde Park.

"I have my problems with point rationing the same as you fellows," he grinned.

"Why don't you write your congressman?" suggested Republican Representative Gale.

The President reflected briefly, then threw up his hands and roared with laughter.

"Oh, no," he exclaimed, "not that!"

The man who represents the Hyde Park district in congress is Hamilton Fish, one of the most vitriolic, vituperative foes the President has in congress.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

A high ranking army officer, just back from a U. S. tour, makes this observation: "High morale may be lowered by too much talk of post-war planning, which makes the boys think the show is almost over."

If the Japs were still in their Washington embassy, they could set their clocks by lanky Will Clayton, astute deputy to Jesse Jones, who walks three miles to work every morning. He passes the defunct Jap embassy precisely at eight.

Kiska, Jap Threat to Alaska and United States

This map shows you what the busy Japs have accomplished on the Aleutian island of Kiska since they occupied it last June. Despite repeated bombings by our air forces, the Nips have succeeded in installing formidable military establishments on the island with a view to future operations against Dutch Harbor, our naval base in the Alaskan area, and against Alaska itself. Proximity of the major enemy base at Paramushiro makes it possible for Kiska to be reinforced with comparative ease.

Enemy Weapons Compared at Aberdeen, Md.

The foreign material branch of the ordnance department of the U. S. army has in its possession many enemy weapons that they have brought to this country for comparison purposes with our own weapons. At right, Lieut. Edwin Davis holds a shell at the breech of the "mystery" 88-mm. anti-aircraft and anti-tank gun that was talked about so much in the beginning of the war in Africa. Right: Colonel Jarrett holds a mortar shell for the German 81-mm. mortar, which almost compares with the American mortar in design.

Strangest Army Air Force Field

Shang-Ri-La field, perhaps strangest army air force field in the nation, has been opened at Glendale, Calif. Duplicating field conditions in remote operating areas, the odd field offers practical knowledge of how planes and engines may be changed and serviced under actual combat conditions. Dispersal of ships and camouflaging of aircraft is practical.

Marine Ace Reports Good News

Capt. Joe Foss of the marine corps, who scored sensational air victories while serving on Guadalcanal, is shown reporting to his boss, Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the marine corps, in Washington. Foss, who hails from Sioux Falls, S. D., shot down 26 Jap planes to tie Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker's World War I record. Photo shows General Holcomb and Captain Foss.

Royal Inspection

Princess Elizabeth, elder daughter of King George of England, is shown inspecting the grenadier guards, famed regiment of which she is colonel. The princess wears the regimental cap badge in her hat. She was 17 years old on April 22.

Puzzler for Brown

Staff Sgt. John Brown at the army airfield at Bainbridge, Ga., is puzzled. Although he's been in the army since 1919, he is getting a notice from his draft board at Evergreen, Ala. What worries him is will he get that furlough to go home?

Tales of the Town:

When the editors and publishers were in town for their annual convention several of them were talking shop . . . One recalled the time when Heywood Broun was a cub and he was instructed to come in very early one Christmas morn . . . When Broun arrived—the empty city room depressed him. The desks were littered with remnants of the previous night's tale clippings, bare spikes, curled up cheese sandwiches and beer containers . . . Suddenly, off in a corner, a telegraph instrument started to click . . . Tobacco tins were jammed against the telegraph "bugs" to make them louder . . . One after the other joined in the monotonous chorus—all chirping the same message . . . He could tell, he said later, that they were trying to report something important happening somewhere, but he couldn't understand a word they were tapping . . . Finally, in came a sleepy telegrapher . . . Broun said: "Please tell me what is happening. They are all clicking madly. Maybe a liner has been sunk or a king assassinated or an earthquake! I'm sure it's a big story and our paper is being scooped!" The veteran listened—to one after the other—and then smiled . . . "This is Christmas, son," said the old-timer, "they are all saying the same thing. A Child is born—a Child is born—a Child is born!"

In the days when most of the papers were on Park Row, a certain editor was nicknamed Simon Legree because of the way he kicked around some of the staff . . . One night, and this is journalistic history, a staffer couldn't stand the abuse any longer . . . He threw the editor down a flight of stairs . . . The next night when he came in the staff presented the reporter with a gold watch inscribed: "For the Best Journalism in 1928."

One night some of us were privileged to meet Sgt. Al Schmid, the Philadelphia boy who was decorated at Guadalcanal for erasing over 200 Japs until one of their grenades blinded him . . . Al, who is Dutch-Irish, has a different slant on the war . . . He talked a lot about two of his buddies, one Rivers, a Protestant, who died there, and one named Diamond from Brooklyn, a Jewish chap . . . "They say," said Al, "that I killed 200 Japs. I don't know how true that is. I never said that. I was told so by people who read it in the papers" . . . And he kept talking about the others—wishing hard that he could do something about "waking up the people back home!"

When the G-Men collared the last big bunch of Nazi spies (just before we entered the war) some of the prisoners revealed the following . . . That after the advance men had been smuggled in and had made all the most elaborate preparations (laying the ground work with secret radio stations and all the other standbys) the Nazis sent over their very best agent . . . He was a man who had worked all over the world, and he had never failed on any assignment . . . There was just nothing this bloke didn't know about the noble art of espionage . . . And he was sent here to take charge of matters . . . On his first day in New York the other Nazi spies gathered to meet him—where he planned to give them their instructions . . . On his way to the rendezvous, however, something went wrong with the script . . . Even the higher-ups in Berlin never figured to coach him in a most important detail . . . How to cross the street at Times Square.

The great spy was killed trying to get out of the way of a cab.

The Big Show:

Sallies in Our Alley: Dick Himber heard Colonel Romulo (he helped rescue MacArthur) tell it at a party. "It was the one joke," said Romulo, "that kept us laughing on Bataan until the end. A mamma rabbit and a daddy rabbit were in the woods when they saw a pack of wolves. They hid in a cave. 'How long will we hide here?' asked the mamma rabbit . . . 'Until,' was the reply, 'we outnumber 'em!'"

The Front Pages: The most important problem for some newspapers was reported by United Press from Providence, R. I. The State Senate, it appears, passed a measure that would make it mandatory for Rhode Island newspapers to print names and addresses of all writers of editorials—and ditto for those whose letters are published under the Letters to the Editor columns.

Quotation Marksmanship: G. Martin: True generosity is the ability to accept ingratitude . . . The Alabama Times: Show courtesy to others not because they are gentlemen, but because you are . . . Eugene O'Neill: The censorship which begins by banning a strip tease show always finishes by condemning as treason a play which hints that Washington might not have chopped down that tree . . . Anon: He is a Clark Gable-bodied young man . . . Schopenhauer: Life is a business that does not pay expenses.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

CHOSES: Smith college students will be called upon to give one hour's service daily, without remuneration to the college in the hope of eliminating the necessity of an additional fee to meet rising cost. President Herbert Davis announced.

MEMOIRS: Paul Reynaud, former French premier now lodged in a small dark cell in a prison in the Pyrenees is spending his time writing memoirs.

MARKSMANSHIP: Allied medium bombers scored a direct hit on a 2,000-ton Japanese vessel in the Aru sea, north of Australia, the United Nations headquarters announced.

THE STORY SO FAR: When Will McPhail leaves for Moose Bay, Robin Dale decides to follow him. On the way she meets Will's brother Angus, a dour Scot who hates women. He does not know that she is engaged to Will, and Robin realizes that she must not come between the two men. So instead of seeing Will, Robin stays on board when the White Queen docks. But Will, operating a crane, sees a girl on the deck. As he turns to look he loses his balance and is killed. Learning that Angus blames her, Robin goes to see him with a man named Jenkins, a fellow passenger on the White Queen. They talk to an ugly man, and Robin asks who he is.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VI

"Pat Donohoe. He's McPhail's boatman," Jenkins said. "I suppose McPhail will be back for the funeral."

"Oh!" He meant Will's funeral! Will was dead, and they were going to bury him. She had not realized death till she heard that word. She was suddenly very tired. When she suggested returning to the hotel, Mr. Jenkins, after some good-natured protest, agreed.

Robin slept and waked and slept again. At noon she rang for coffee and toast. She wondered a little why Mr. Jenkins did not come to take her to see Mrs. Free; but she was glad he did not. Slowly, during the long afternoon, she emerged from the protective numbness which had followed the first shock of Will's death, so that she could feel the keen ache of pain; and that night she did not sleep at all. The rain drove against her windows all night long, and when dawn came, there was no slackening in the storm. She stared at the sluicing panes, and thought, Will would be buried today, and she hated this raw new wilderness town full of hard men, with mud underfoot and rain and gusty wind over all. When she dressed and went down, the clerk named Dave looked at her curiously.

"When will there be a boat for Rimouski or Quebec, or—anywhere?" she asked him.

He seemed surprised, and for some strange reason maliciously pleased. He said a cruise boat would touch here some time in the afternoon, bound for Quebec.

"Do you suppose I could get a cabin on her?"

"Yes. I know she's not full."

Afternoon? Will would be buried this afternoon. She could not go till then. "What time will she be here?"

"Can't tell yet," he said. "We'll get word later today." He hesitated.

"Mr. Jenkins left a message for you. Said he'd be back tonight."

"Oh!" She had quite forgotten Mr. Jenkins. "Thanks."

After lunch a man spoke to her in the lobby. There was something about him remotely familiar. He made conversation in a courteous way, without offense, and he spoke at last, too casually of Mr. Jenkins.

She recognized him then as the man who had crossed the dock to look down at Mr. Jenkins' boat, when Mr. Jenkins stopped to go aboard her that first day. She asked suddenly:

"Why are you interested in Mr. Jenkins?"

"I?" His tone was too surprised. "You and he old friends, are you?"

A question to answer her question. Too many questions. She wondered with complete irrelevance, why Will had not met Angus when the White Queen docked.—Why had Will stayed in the cab of the crane and let Angus drive away to shore? Why were men afraid of Mr. Jenkins? What tickets? Who was it Mr. Jenkins allowed to come in? Where was Mr. Jenkins today? Too many questions. She asked:

"Don't you know any answers?"

Before he could reply, the clerk named Dave came to her. "They don't know when the funeral will be," he reported. "Mr. McPhail's brother hasn't come back yet. They're waiting for him."

She nodded thanks, and suddenly she was dreadfully afraid that something had happened to Angus. Fear choked her so that she could not speak. She fled up the stairs to her room. Hours later the clerk knocked on her door. "Miss Dale, the funeral's passing right now."

She caught up hat and slicker and ran to the stairs and down. "The cemetery's right up on the hill," he told her. "They're just getting there." He pointed the way; and she went out into gusty wind and driving rain.

She saw Angus, his garments wet and torn, his old hat more battered than ever, his cheeks gaunt, his eyes red and sunken. He stood by the grave.

As she approached, his eyes lifted to meet hers. His eyes were bleak as winter. They made her cold. She said tremulously: "Mr. McPhail. I want to talk to you. I want to tell you..."

He interrupted her, in flat tones. She thought his voice was like that of a deaf man. "I've nothing to say to you, and I don't want to hear anything you can say."

She protested softly: "But I just want you to know how sorry..."

He said curtly: "Be off!"

She cried in a hurt bewilderment: "But Mr. McPhail..."

"Then stay if you like I'll go."

He turned on the word and strode away. Robin was suddenly angry. He needn't act so! She started after him, to tell him so. He walked so fast that, trying to overtake him, calling his name, she had to run; and she slipped and floundered in the mud.

She cried out to him, even then; but he did not turn. Pat Donohoe lifted her to her feet and with awkward hands scraped mud off her garments, and he said gently:

"Let him go, ma'am! Let the poor man go!"

Then he himself went after Angus, not seeking to overtake him, keeping ten paces behind.

When Robin came back to the hotel, her bewildered thoughts were more in order. She was no longer angry; but she was puzzled now.

There had been more than indifference in Angus McPhail's eyes, and more than grief. There had been a cold and furious rage; and it was a specific rage at her! A dozen questions filled her mind.

She stripped off her soaked and muddy clothes, and she thought wearily that reasons did not matter. Clearly, she could do nothing to help him, to ease his hurt. She might as well go home. She changed into dry clothes, then went down to consult the clerk.

He said the boat would dock at six or half past; would sail at nine. It was already after five. She asked:

"Can you get a car to take me down to her?"

"There aren't any taxis. Mr. Jenkins was very tired. She had not slept at all last night, very little the night before; and her eyes burned and ached. When she closed them, they were more comfortable; so she kept them closed, listening to the rapid-fire conversation in the cabin, wishing she could understand what they were saying. It began not to matter...

She was awakened by the opening of the cabin door, the sudden flood of light in her face. She rolled on her side, scrambling out of the bunk, scrambling to her feet, blinking and confused. The floor lifted and tilted under her. Silhouetted in the cabin door stood a man in a battered old hat. It was Angus McPhail's hat. The man was Angus McPhail.

But the engine was running! They were going somewhere! The boat pitched under her feet, and she almost fell, staggered, caught at his coat to save herself. She cried:

"Heavens to Betsy! What happened? Where are we?"

He said in a harsh, grating tone: "Three hours out of Moose Bay toward Labrador!"

Three hours out of Moose Bay toward Labrador! The light was in Robin's eyes, blinding her. Angus McPhail was a dark silhouette in the doorway; and his dry tones were like the rustle of dead leaves in an icy wind. Three hours out of Moose Bay... She wrinkled her brows, peering into his shadowed countenance, trying to understand this incredible thing he said. She protested, in a half whisper, "Three hours! But didn't you know I was here?"

The boat was pitching and tossing. She clung to his coat to keep from falling down, till he freed himself, drew back. Then she stumbled into the cabin, sat down on one of the benches by the narrow table. Angus moved aside to let her pass; he stood above her, his legs spread, his head a little bowed; and when he did not speak she said, still vague with sleep:

"Then you'll have to take me back, won't you? I'm sorry to make so much trouble."

He was so long in answering that she began to be fully awake. When he did speak, he said in a strange blurred voice: "You came aboard. I didn't ask you. You got yourself into this. Get yourself out!"

His lips were twisting strangely. She asked in a puzzled wonder: "Are you trying to frighten me?"

He echoed in a dry scorn, "Frighten you?" His husky, low tone was more alarming than a shout. She remembered, now fully awake, his violence at Will's grave. It had been more than the madness of grief. It had been, definitely, anger at her. She lowered her head so that he might not see terror in her eyes; and she sat thus, with her face hidden, trying to guess some reason for his anger. It was possible that Will had told him about their love for one another; but even that could not wholly explain his rage now that Will was dead.

Before she could find words, he asked suddenly: "What did you want aboard here?"

She looked up at him. "Why—just to speak to you. Just to say—the words people do say to those who are grieving."

His voice rose a little, dry and harsh as rust. "Couldn't you speak your piece ashore? Why were you so sure you'd be welcome in my cabin? Why should you think I wanted you?" His fists were tight at his sides. "Curse you, if it's men you're after, go forward in the fo'c's'le! Maybe Romeo and Pat will let you share their quarters. I won't."

His very extravagance steadied her. She looked at him in quiet appraisal. It was not fair to treat what he said as though it were said by a sane man. She asked: "Have you eaten anything these three days? Have you slept at all?"

"Hah! There's a woman for you! Feed the brute. Put him to bed. He'll be in better humor in the morning."

"Please!"

"If you expect me to take you back to Moose Bay—you're due to be disappointed."

"Did you know I was aboard before you left there?"

He said, almost sullenly: "No. Not till half an hour ago."

kins will take you, won't he? He'll be back any time now."

Mr. Jenkins was nothing; but if he knew she was leaving, he might annoy her with urgencies to stay.

"Oh, no!" she said hurriedly. "I'd rather he didn't know I was going."

The clerk nodded as though approvingly. "Sorry, I thought you were a friend of his. I can drive you down, myself, after six o'clock. I'm off then for half an hour."

She thanked him. She arranged to leave her muddy garments to be cleaned and forwarded; then returned to her room to pack. At six she descended; at five minutes past, she and the clerk were in his car. He said:

"Steamer's not in yet; but I have to be back at half past, and there's no one around to take you down later."

"I can wait on the pier," she assured him. "If Mr. Jenkins asks where I am, don't tell him, will you?"

"I didn't think you looked like a friend of his," he said. When they reached the end of the pier, the steamer was not yet in sight. They sat in the car till he had to leave. When she was left alone, Robin looked toward where Angus McPhail's motor cruiser and Mr. Jenkins' boat had been tied up two days ago. Mr. Jenkins' boat was gone; but McPhail's was there. She walked that way and saw that the cabin scuttle was open, so he must be aboard.

She decided to make one last attempt to talk to him; and—shaking a little at her own temerity—she descended the ladder and called his name into the cabin.

But no one answered. She was disappointed; but if he came before the cruise boat docked, she might still make him listen to her. She decided to wait for him; so she climbed up on the dock again and brought her bags to the head of the ladder that led down to his boat, where they would be under her eye.

A workman passed and said, "Hi, babe!" She wished she need not be so conspicuous. Then it began to rain again. It was silly to stand here and be soaked. She climbed down the ladder and took shelter in the cabin to wait for Angus there.

She heard an engine murmur and then bark more loudly as the reverse gear took hold. Another boat was mooring just off of this one. It must be Mr. Jenkins, returning; so she kept out of sight. Then she heard Mr. Jenkins' voice on the dock above her. He spoke French—which she did not understand—and someone answered him, and a moment later she heard feet coming down the ladder.

Mr. Jenkins must be coming aboard; and she did not wish to see him! She stepped into the stateroom and closed the door of it behind her. A moment later, she heard footsteps in the cabin, and two voices.

She stood in the narrow space between the bunks and the fore and aft bulkhead which divided the stateroom from the compartment where the engine was. She was afraid they would open the door and find her. Mr. McPhail must surely be here soon. She dared not show herself until he came; but she need not stand. She sat down cautiously on the lower bunk. The upper bunk was so near the lower that she could not sit upright without bumping her head, so she lay down. She was wide awake, listening to the voices, wondering what Mr. Jenkins and the other man were discussing so seriously.

She was very tired. She had not slept at all last night, very little the night before; and her eyes burned and ached. When she closed them, they were more comfortable; so she kept them closed, listening to the rapid-fire conversation in the cabin, wishing she could understand what they were saying. War Brings America Knowledge of How To Eat Properly; Once Lowly Vitamin Now Important Item in Balanced Diet

U. S. Finds It's Protein and Not Meat That Counts; Most Nutritive Cuts Once Scorned by Housewives; Heavy Meals Necessary for Workers.

By AL JEDLICKA

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Time was not so very long ago when all of this nutritive and vitamin talk sounded kind of silly.

That was the time when almost everybody thought that vitamins were something that came in capsules or pills; when women figured that they knew all of the tricks of the culinary trade, and when we all liked food for its taste and gave little consideration to its minerals, proteins, carbohydrates, etc.

Plates were heaped with potatoes and meat; if there were any kids around, few vegetables were served because they didn't like them; and then more potatoes and more meat, and finally a great big slug of pie, was put down to top off a good meal.

If the Little Woman came home from some cooking school all worked up about the science of food and its preparation, the head man dampened her enthusiasm by gently but firmly advising her that all that vitamin and mineral stuff was the bunk, and meat and potatoes were good enough to keep the world going.

In fact, the head man argued convincingly, hadn't the world been living on potatoes and meat, etc., since man's memory runneth, and hadn't she, as well as he, been raised on the old standbys—and, what was wrong with them? Nothing! of course.

But that was before December 7, 1941. A lot of things have happened since then and one of them is Mr. and Mrs. America's attitude toward the vitamin and its entourage. Meat and other rationing have thrown us on the defensive and it is now a question of stretching foods, finding substitutes and all of the time seeking to maintain nutritive values.

The upshot of the whole thing is that we might emerge from the war with a more intelligent knowledge of food, of the purpose of its varieties, and consequently be in a position to guide our healthy growth by exact standards.

If we were to be awfully enthusiastic about the situation, we might say that scientific nutrition may be the one big development following the war, just like the automobile came into its own in 1919. But a lot of people who will find it hard to reform their old eating habits probably would argue to the death that we were wrong, because the airplane will be the thing with peace.

Must Find Proteins.

Since meat rationing came along, food experts have been pointing out the necessity of seeking other sources of protein. In so doing, they have consorted us no end by their reminder that, after all, it's not the Blood, lungs, stomach, pancreas, kidney, brain, sweetbreads and hearts—these are among the items which the housewife passed up with untroubled conscience on her shopping tours.

One nutritionist remarked that the meat packers who knew the peculiarities of the people, put choice tidbits like those mentioned above into their canned dog food. As a result, he says, much dog food was superior in nutritive value to some of the meat canned for human consumption.

"There is one thing we shall do well to remember," the nutritionist declares, "and that is there is no evidence to support the theory that when we buy expensive cuts of meat we are buying more or better protein than the cheaper cuts would provide us."

"Generally speaking, American habits of choosing, buying, preparing and serving meats have been wasteful of both food value and money. Americans in the main have scorned the animal organs and the cheaper cuts of muscle meat, tasteful and nutritious though these may be. Many people habitually spurn fat meats. On the other hand, we rush to buy the cuts which include a large proportion of bone and gristle, which represents waste."

Find Adequate Diets.

The National Research council in a recent report on nutrition asserted that inadequate diets and malnutrition have been found to be extremely high in protein and economical in production. It has been estimated that the same amount of protein as in meat can be raised from soybeans at about one-tenth the cost.

Other high protein foods include white, navy and kidney beans; black peas, peanuts and peanut butter. Peanuts never have been taken very seriously except at ball games maybe, but with the emphasis on their decided food value and the industrial use for their oil, they have come into extensive cultivation in the South.

Nutritionists have been careful not to put all of their eggs in one basket, however.

While pointing out the food value of vegetables, one expert explains: "... 'Ersatz' dishes of beans, peas, lentils and the like are foods having a lower biologic value than meat itself. They are sometimes referred to as meat substitutes, and they are useful, but one should make certain that milk, eggs and cheese are included in the menu to furnish biologic values similar to meat, chicken and fish."

To obtain a balance in diet for necessary nutrition, another expert steps to the head of the class with the suggestion that milk, leafy green or yellow vegetables, potatoes, citrus fruits, tomatoes, whole grain or enriched cereals, meat or meat alternates and occasionally an egg be included in the day's meals.

Meats Also Have Vitamins.

This expert had in mind the fact that besides protein, meats also possess vitamins and minerals; so that in finding protein substitutes, it is also necessary to supply vitamin supplements.

Vitamin B1 and vitamins B2 and G are present in meat, chiefly in pork. To make up for any losses, whole wheat bread, enriched bread or cereals and milk may be eaten instead.

Some nutritionists believe that considered that most of them have something on the ball.

For instance:

It's the style to eat potato skins. Baked potatoes or potatoes cooked in their jackets have a lot of good minerals just beneath the skin, so when they're thrown away we're not getting the greatest nutritive value for our money. And this brings up the subject of eating the greens under salads. Valuable minerals and vitamins are stored there to be had for the eating.

The sugar supply should go farther now because it's considered good manners to stir tea and coffee vigorously after adding sugar, so we can get its full sweetening value. This will be even more important when iced tea days appear—if we have the iced tea.

We used to eat bread and gravy when we ate alone, or put aside our "Sunday" manners, but now it's the style to eat gravy on hot biscuits, muffins and bread. Every homemaker is being asked to save all drippings and to serve them as gravy to extend the good meat flavor and add nutritive value to the meal.

Everyone likes to eat around the bone of a juicy broiled lamb chop or a piece of fried chicken, and now we're not only told that it's permissible from the standpoint of manners, but we're encouraged to follow this procedure because it's the trend.

Learn to Carve.

Not the very least of the suggestions is one directed toward the head man as well as the little woman. Nowadays, if Papa does the carving at the table, Papa is advised to learn how to carve.

It seems there's more to carving than merely wearing the badge of authority; indeed, good carving avoids waste, assures uniform slicings (important to the preservation of harmony in every home) and affords extra servings.

Perfectly elementary in itself is the fact that a sharp knife is essential to a good carver. And equally elementary, a good carver should take enough interest in his tool to assure its care. Thus, knives should not be let loose in a drawer where other metal can dull or nick the blade. A properly sharpened knife can be kept keen for a long time by a dozen strokes with a steel before use.

In carving any cut of meat, it is desirable to understand the anatomy of bone structure of the cut to be carved and to remember that meat should always be carved across the grain. Steak, because it is tender and the meat fibers are already relatively short, is an exception to the rule.

There's always been in them, is no estimate of their value. A serious family convalesce over expenditures of the first quarter of the year is sure to result in discovery of ways to save money.

"The first thing that clutters up a budget," says the committee, "is debt. Loans, installment payments, charge accounts and delinquent bills are a heavy tax on any income. Obviously, the only way to get clear is to pay off."

HERE'S WAY TO BUY BONDS—GET MORE SLEEP!

An extra hour's sleep in "the near side" of the evening was recommended as a war thrift measure by the National Thrift committee. With small wage earners facing the necessity of buying more and more war bonds, the National Thrift committee issues the warning that drastic economies on the home front are inescapable. Health-giving sleep will automatically curtail many extravagances, in the opinion of the committee.

Spring cleaning of budgets is recommended by the committee as an aid to the purchase of more bonds by every family. Recognizing that most budgets are as full of old habits at this time of year as closets are cluttered with clothes, the committee suggests a family conference upon items to be discarded for slimming living, with consequent saving.

Out-moded budgets, the committee says, are unpatriotic in war time, and the fact that certain things have always been in them, is no estimate of their value. A serious family convalesce over expenditures of the first quarter of the year is sure to result in discovery of ways to save money.

Senior Chatter

"The Lorraine's" arrived over the weekend, and everyone's running around getting autographs. In other words, our annuals are here, and they seem to be exactly what we ordered.

Last week we told you that in our little memo books that we received with our invitations there were places to write about the personalities in our class. They are: Most popular boy and girl, Rae Furlow and Doris Butler; most handsome boy and most beautiful girl, Harold Johnson and Eula Fae Anders; best in athletics (girl), Nettie Fae Martin; best in academics (boy), Truman Nix and Frank Martin; class prophet, Mason Ridenburg; class historian, Eleanor Green; class poet, Ouida Blair.

Some of our "traditions" are: class song, "Let's Bring New Glory to Old Glory"; class colors, blue and white; class flowers, roses.

We want everyone to remember the Baccalaureate Services Sunday night, May 16, at the High school gym. The speaker will be Rev. H. A. Polnac.

Junior News

There's not anyone singing "Spring is here, tra-la-trala" now because it is as cold as winter time.

The Seniors are back with us after being absent last Friday. We missed them a lot.

Every one that was vaccinated for diphtheria was back meaning and groaning with their arms. Isn't that right Miss Carter?

Just two more weeks of school, and most of us will be Seniors (we hope). Here is the general gossip of the class. Why all the gloom last Thursday and Friday, Vida Mae? Bonnie has started stepping out again after so long a time. "Nurf" has her old smile back this week; I wonder why? "Say Faye" where did you get the ring? Ouida, how was the show Sunday night? (or was it a show?) The Junior girls are proud to say that they have at last won a soft ball game. Lester, who was your girl friend Friday night? I believe the bug has bitten Pierce at last, (just ask a certain little Soph girl.) Why doesn't the old reporter ever think of any interesting news? She often wonders herself.

Spanish Club Picnic

Last Wednesday at 11:45 all the Spanish Club members piled into about four cars and went to the Road Side Park for a picnic. And what a picnic it was! Do you know what we had to eat? Listen in, and we'll tell you. We had every kind of sandwiches, all the clives and potato chips we could eat, the best deviled eggs, coolies, pickles, good old cold cokes, and we ate ice until we nearly turned to frost. After we had eaten until we couldn't eat any more we made pictures, played games, talked and put ice down each other's back and had a grand time. We got back to school at 2:00, and all you could hear the rest of the day was about the Spanish Club picnic.

There were 23 members of the club who went, and all of us want to thank Mrs. Ison for the best picnic we ever had.

Mrs. Laura Clark and Mrs. Mattie Williams of Sweetwater visited Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Richley from Saturday until Monday.

Mrs. Farrell Costin and son of Alpine are here this week visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Meadows.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Norman and children and Mrs. Webb of Colorado City visited Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crowe over and Miss Annie Jarratt here Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Mendor of Roscoe were guests in the home of their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Cope Sunday.

Mrs. S. E. Clement is here this week visiting her daughter, Mrs. G. K. Baker.

Royal James of A. C. C., Abilene, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. James, over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hugh Jameson of Silver visited in the L. W. Rhodes home Tuesday.

C. M. Black left Tuesday for Cisco where he will visit his sister.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hille and Mrs. J. H. Neill returned Sunday night from a three weeks visit in the east. Mr. and Mrs. Hille visited in Arkansas and Mrs. Neill in East Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Riden entertained with a dinner Monday night. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Dee McCollum, and H. B. McCollum of Phoenix, Arizona, Pfc. and Mrs. J. C. Hall, Jr., and son Jimmie. Lt. and Mrs. N. I. Rieter Jr. and Harold Rieter.

Mr. and Mrs. Muri Hoover and son Jerry of Denver City spent from Thursday until Monday here visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Hoover. Jerry had his tonsils removed at the Johnson hospital Friday.

Laughing Around the World

With IRVIN S. COBB

A Belated One from Arkansas

By IRVIN S. COBB

DOWN in Arkansas in the old days there was a jerk water railroad with a reputation. The reputation was that it never adhered to its schedule. Operating crews, and patrons as well, came to regard the time-card as the work of a practical joker.

There was a certain traveling man who rode over the line at frequent intervals. One afternoon when he disembarked from a smelly 'lay-coach' at his destination he hailed the conductor.

"Old man," he said, extending a large cigar, "accept this, with my compliments, as a slight token of gratitude."

"What's the notion?" inquired the other.

"Because I've been traveling on this road for twelve years and this is the first occasion when we ever got in exactly on time."

"Mister," said the conductor, "that looks to me like a mighty good 'gar and I'm fond of smoking. But I can't take nothin' on false pretences. I've got to tell you the truth!"

"This ain't today's train. This is yesterday's train."

BIDS WANTED

Bids will be received by the Office of the Mayor of the City of Loraine, Texas, not later than June 3rd, 1943, for furnishing the following water pumping equipment and necessary appurtenances:

The turbine pump shall be designed to deliver 200 gallons per minute as its rated capacity against a maximum head of 185 feet, and to successfully operate against a minimum head of 150 feet at a speed not to exceed 1800 RPM.

The pump shall be oil lubricated or water lubricated. Column pipe and drive shaft shall be in sections not more than ten feet (10) long. Oil lubricated pumps shall have enclosed drive shaft with bronze or porcelain covered impeller, and bronze shaft bearings. Shaft bearing shall be at intervals of not more than ten (10) feet. Water lubricated pumps shall have bronze or porcelain covered impellers with rubber shaft bearings held in proper alignment with "spiders" at not to exceed ten foot (10) intervals. Water lubricated pumps shall have stainless steel shaft from the pump head through the impellers, or stainless steel sleeve or other non-corrosive metal at bearing points. Oil lubricated pumps shall have stainless steel shaft through the impellers only.

The pump shall be provided with a strainer and suction pipe not less than 5 feet long, and not more than 10 feet long.

The motor shall be vertical type, hollow shaft, ball or roller bearing, 220-440 volt, three phase, 60 cycle, 40 degree rise, A. C. The motor shall have ample power to drive the pump with out overload when operating at any head between the maximum and minimum. In no case shall the motor be less than 23 H. P.

Oil or water lubricated pumps shall be equipped with automatic lubricating devices to insure proper lubrication during the starting and running of the pumps.

The pumps shall be securely mounted on the foundation according to the latest approved engineering practice, and shall be set so that the column hangs vertical. It is intended to set the pump with the intake approximately 20 feet off of the bottom of the hole. Length of suction pipe may be varied in order to use standard lengths and set the suction to the proper level.

The contractor shall furnish and install a reduced voltage starting switch, and shall provide protection for the motor against over-load and low voltage, and shall furnish and install the necessary wiring for the pump and motor according to N. E. L. A. standards latest edition.

Dated at Loraine, Texas, this 12th day of May, 1943, A. D.

Signed: J. C. Hall, Mayor
Attest: S. B. Watlington,
City Secretary

WISHES

You're a graduate. You're one of those who are leaving the sheltered halls of learning for new and exciting experiences. And you're headed for bigger things!

Well, yours is a mixed blessing. Like everything else, it has its good points and its bad. You'll have it lots tougher than many who've preceded you, but you'll have one thing many of them never had!

For yours is the opportunity to help heal a sick and war torn world. It's a glorious opportunity and an unlimited one, for this world of ours is going to need a lot of healing. You're the doctor, and education your tools and medicine.

It's a big job. The diseases that terrorize most of the world are contagious ones, and it's up to you to see that America doesn't catch them. The life of a nation depends on you.

This opportunity of yours is a big and a vital thing. It's your chance to prove your gratitude for living in a great country, for the right to live as you please, for an education, for this graduation. It's your chance to prove to your parents, to your teachers, to your friends and to yourself that you're capable of shouldering responsibility and successfully carrying it out.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

I RECKON a jockey has a tough time of it, because he can't always win, and he gets blamed for everything the horse don't do. I heard that the owner of a fast racehorse was awful mad lately when his nag finished away back in a mighty important race. He called the jockey in and gave him an awful pawing that could be heard clear outdoors.

He says, at last, "Ain't instructions anything to you? Didn't I tell you to pass 'em all at the home stretch, and come in two lengths ahead?"

"Yeah, you did, all right," says the jockey, kinda shamefaced like, "and I reckon I should'a done it. But I couldn't a-bear to come in without the horse; I'm that fond of him, sir!"

WAR BOND QUIZ

Q. Does an album filled with stamps automatically become a Bond that will mature in 10 years?

A. No. It must be exchanged for a bond, and it will take no interest until it is so exchanged.

Q. Can payment of a War Savings Bond be made to the receiver or trustee in bankruptcy of the estate of a registered owner?

A. Yes, when bankruptcy or insolvency has been adjudicated and request for payment has been duly executed.

Q. Can I authorize my employer to get aside portions of my salary each pay day until enough is accumulated to buy a War Savings Bond?

A. Yes, if your employer has installed a Pay-Roll Savings Plan. More than 24 million wage and salary earners are saving their money this way.

Q. Can I invest a lump sum in War Bonds and receive from the investment a return in the nature of an annuity?

A. No. The purchase of each War Savings Bond is a separate transaction. Each Bond is dated as of the first of the month in which payment for it is received by an authorized issuing agent, and matures exactly 10 years from that date.

Remember--the longer you keep War Bonds, up to 10 years, the more valuable they become.

10. The heavy cruiser U.S.S. Salt Lake City, because it is said to have fought in more actions than any other surface vessel in the history of the United States navy.

Animals Not Stuffed

Despite their appearance, many animals in museums are not stuffed, says Collier's. In the American Museum of Natural History in New York city, for example, all the mammals in the North American Hall, including bison, moose, elk and musk oxen, are mounted on hollow forms and are so light in weight that they can be lifted easily.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Airplanes now transport workers and supplies to South American rubber forests in hours. Until war broke out on the "have not" list in the U. S., weeks and months were consumed in carrying supplies to the rubber tappers.

When one considers that for more than 20 years car and truck owners were encouraged to abuse their tires, through various forms of road hazards and guarantees, it must be acknowledged that a laudable patriotism is being shown by them now in conserving their rubber supplies.

Remember the days when 20 pounds pressure per cross section was the standard inflation recommendation? Tough riding and flats were the order of the day.

A new highway has been constructed to the Maricao gold mines in Peru. But rubber is the most important item being carried over it.

PETER AND JOHN PREACH TO SAMARITANS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:14-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest.—John 4:35.

The Church as it grows has problems, and so God calls leaders to serve Him in meeting and settling them for His glory and the good of the Church.

Philip had gone to Samaria (as a result of the first persecution of the Church) and there he had been used of God to bring many to faith in Christ. Now that the new groups of believers needed guidance and instruction, Peter and John were sent to help them (v. 14).

A proper understanding of, and attitude toward, God's gracious gift of salvation is of first importance. New converts must recognize that it is a gift: that it cannot be earned or bought, and that it issues in a life of service and testimony.

All three of these matters are covered in our lesson.

I. Spiritual Life and Power Is God's Gift to Believers (vv. 14-17).

The Holy Spirit was received by these early members of the Church by the laying on of the apostles' hands, but later He came directly into the believer's heart the moment he had faith in God. This is now our blessed privilege, and the provision for our every need as followers of Christ, to recognize the indwelling Holy Spirit.

What a glorious truth it is that the believer is indwelt by the Holy Spirit, He who is a divine person, not just a power or influence (1 Cor. 6:19). Thus every believer, including the humblest as well as the greatest, has in him the One who gives spiritual life and power, who gives grace for holy living, and empowers for service.

The greatest power in all the world—the power of the infinite God—is thus available to every true and yielded believer, as God's free gift.

Gone then is all boasting of our own strength, and gone are all excuses for weak and careless living. The power and grace are His, and He gives them to us as His gift. Christian friend, are you allowing the Holy Spirit who dwells in you, to inflame and use you as He will?

II. Spiritual Life and Power Cannot Be Bought by Works or Money (vv. 18-24).

Men of this world are so used to putting their trust in money that they come to think that one can buy anything. To them every man and every desirable thing must have its price. Let us be clear that there are men who cannot be bought, and that the best things in life bear no price tag. A mother's love, friendship, fellowship with God—priceless they are, but not for sale.

Above all let it be clear that eternal life, and the power of God the Holy Spirit, cannot be gained by piling up good works, nor by payment in the coin of this world.

Simon Magus wanted this power to improve his business as a magician. He made a very gross proposal, but one wonders whether he was any more to be censured than many in the Church today who are doing the same thing, though by more cultured and skillful methods.

Not only are there those who are trying to buy their own way into heaven, but also those who by holding the purse strings, try to control the message of the preacher. What about those who by their financial gifts seek to gain control of church organizations?

Their efforts are doomed to ultimate failure—God will see to that!—but in the meantime they do much harm to the cause of Christ. Many a church and pastor would like to rise up and say with Peter, "Thy money perish with thee."

III. Spiritual Life and Power Result in Testimony (v. 25).

Peter and John set the Samaritan Christians a good example as they went back to Jerusalem, by permitting the Holy Spirit to use them to testify and to teach the Word of the Lord in many of their villages.

One of the great hindrances to the carrying out of the great commission has been that Christians have received spiritual life, and even spiritual power, as though it were something for their own gratification or comfort. God saves us to serve Him in testimony and in life.

The Holy Spirit does not speak of Himself. He guides the believer in all truth (John 16:13), particularly the truth regarding Christ. The Spirit's primary interest is to glorify Christ (John 16:14).

It follows then that the Spirit-filled believer will be busy about speaking for Christ and glorifying His name. The Holy Spirit is ready to teach even the words to say that Christ may be lifted up and men be saved.

Peter and John, as good leaders of these new Samaritan believers, gave them by word and example a good foundation for growth in grace and usefulness to Christ.

Kathleen Norris Says: Everyday Human Bondage

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"Even if it's going home to dear sympathetic Daddy and Mother your path isn't all roses. They may have stood by you gallantly through your trouble with Dick but afterward they grow critical."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"MARRIAGE is an institution," some woman said in a play long ago, "and I hate to live in an institution."

She might just as well have said that life itself is an institution, and that we all, married or single, hate the bondage and the limitations that life imposes on us.

To be sure, to the unhappily married man or woman the unmarried ones seem more free. They can get away from the hateful little apartment with its whining and its untidiness, its bills and its discomforts generally. They can at least go to hotels, where a maid is paid to keep the bathroom in order and where cool coffee can be sent back to the kitchen.

That's the theory. But it is a miserably faulty theory, and a miserably unsatisfactory solution of the living problem. In marriage, and in marriage alone, is there true happiness for young persons, and it is only because they don't know how to marry that all the failures arise. It is a tragic truth that almost all the men and women who obtain divorces would cancel those divorces and try over again with the same mate, if they could, and that a second and third and fourth marriage only produce variations of the first fiasco, and infinitely and fatally complicate the lives they touch—children's lives, old persons' lives.

Society's Unwritten Law. When a man, like the comparatively young man who recently made an eighth marriage, tells the attentive press that he is sure that he has found the ideal wife at last, there is no law to stop his matrimonial career. But there is surely an unwritten law that covers such a case, and to belittle the sacred relationship of marriage with such flippancy ought to put him outside the pale of friendship with decent folk forever.

Most engagements are built on sexual attraction, and in the early years of most marriages it plays an important part. This is a truism so flat that it is superfluous to put it into words. Yet very few women, and no men, grasp the truth of that simple statement. The part of it they understand entirely omits the words "in the early years."

Every bride feels that the glory of young wifehood is so exquisite, the thrill that true marriage brings to her husband and herself is so overwhelming, the ecstasy of their first months together so perfect, that nothing can ever change.

"I haven't changed," wrote a four-years wife to me pathetically. "I love him just as much as I ever did, or more. But he likes an occasional evening away from home now, he likes me to ask pretty girls to the house and flatters them."

Nature has so arranged things that by the time that the first wild glamour of possession has worn off, for the man, the woman shall be absorbed in even more vital joys, the supreme joys of motherhood. But today's men and women very often put off those joys altogether, or at least delay them fatally, thereby completely defeating their purpose.

Intense Love Soon Burns Out. The purpose, I mean, of being able to revel uninterruptedly in the marital relationship. There is no quicker way to destroy it. The rule is the same as that of other appetites. Controlled, made only a part of a happy life together, indulged reasonably, physical love between a man and woman can last a lifetime. But it can also be burnt out in a few months' time, and that is what happens.

NO SOLUTION

Kathleen Norris again repeats her statement, made many times before in this column, that divorce is neither the right nor the lasting solution of marital difficulties. And she points to the tragic example of the frequently married and never happy people who are always seeking the perfect mate, the tailor-made marriage. You must work for a happy marriage, just as you must work for a strong financial position, or an enviable social position, or good grades in school. And, falling short of perfection or unqualified success, you must remember that divorce is still no solution.

pens over and over again with those men and women who are rich enough and optimistic enough, and let it be added, dumb enough, to marry four and five and six times, imagining that the will-o'-the-wisp connubial bliss is somewhere, waiting to be found ready-made.

When a man and woman are balanced, normal folk, aware that life has a thousand interests and delights other than that of sex; when they rejoice in the companionship that marriage brings, the mutual dignities and cares, the pleasures of hospitality and home making, the privileges of parenthood, then in the place of that first awed ecstasy of possession, that first ignorant, eager seizure upon life, comes something far rarer and finer: true married love, true appreciation of what is the great miracle of human hearts in this world.

Otherwise the first chill wind of reality destroys their marriage and leaves them forlorn indeed. When flattery and passion, novelty and excitement have had their day, a certain blankness descends upon the lovers, they don't know what's happened to them.

Patience, Humility Help.

Whereas, if they had character, if they had had good training, good homes, good example behind them, they would start fresh. They would replace excitement and passion and novelty and flattery with patience, humility, sympathy, courage. The man would analyze his own nature, asking himself seriously what the qualifications of a good husband should be; the woman should repeat to herself the wife's litany.

"That I may never do anything to make him love me less. That his home may always be the place he most wants to come. That he may trust me to spend my money wisely, keeping everything in proportion. That the years may find us growing only closer and closer together, depending more and more upon each other. Amen!"

But how many young men and women take that attitude today? How many say: "I was wrong. I'm sorry I was rude to your old friend. I'm sorry I forgot to telephone your mother."

Even if it's going home to dear sympathetic Daddy and Mother your path isn't all roses. They may have stood by you gallantly through your trouble with Dick, but afterward they grow critical. Your mother audibly admires your cousin Ellen, who stuck to Joe Masters through thick and thin. You hear your father saying pitifully to some old friend at the telephone: "No, Louise is back with us. Yes, too bad! Broke her mother's heart. Yes, hard on the small boy. Oh, I guess so. Faults on both sides!"

You can live with anyone once you master the secret of living with yourself.

WAR ON ALL FRONTS

A SERIES OF SPECIAL ARTICLES BY THE LEADING WAR CORRESPONDENTS

WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly

One day, Major General James Chaney, commander of the First Air force at Mitchell Field, New York, was flying comfortably at 10,000 feet in a twin-engine bomber. The general was looking down distastefully at the 30-foot waves, when he thought he saw two impudent little yellow-winged planes sitting on the water beneath him. He made his pilot circle and came down to investigate. He discovered that the planes weren't actually on the water. They were low over it, looking for submarines. They were units of the Civil Air patrol.

"How far is it to land?" the horrified general asked the pilot.

"Seventy-one miles the shortest way," the pilot said.

Chaney wrote Maj. Earle Johnson, national commander of the CAP. "I just wanted you to know," he said, "that you have no draft dodgers in that bunch."

Incidentally, CAP men are not deferred from the draft. Most of them have dependents or are overage or physically unfit for regular military duty.

CAP Part of OCD.

The CAP was started a week before Pearl Harbor as part of the Office of Civilian Defense. Plans were worked over for a month before that, by a committee of air-conscious people who refused to be skeptical. The main idea was to use the thousands of private pilots, planes and air enthusiasts, in work which could be done by men and equipment somewhat less high-powered than that used by the army air force.

Since then, the CAP has flown more than 14 million miles—top average is 87,000 miles a month. A wing was set up in each state, under a wing commander.

The boys and girls (several CAP groups are all women) meet three nights a week, usually, and study navigation, radio, meteorology, military drill and military courtesy. Those who bring their own planes get paid around $15 an hour, depending upon its horsepower, when it's actually in the air. But only the depreciation on the plane goes to the owner; the rest goes into a kitty from which all owners buy parts, tools and similar essentials, when they can get what they need.

Volunteers Must Go Anywhere. There are 21 CAP bases from Mexico to Maine, and a volunteer is just as likely as not to find himself sent for 30 days to a forsaken hole miles from the nearest civilization, where he has to live by his wits and courage.

One southern base, more than a hundred miles from the nearest hospital, has among its active workers a well-known doctor, who serves one month each year instead of taking a vacation. Out over the ocean one day, he was notified by radio that another man at the base was sick.

The doc tore back to find a young mechanic with a ruptured appendix. A workshop bench was made into an operating table, and with the few unspecialized surgeon's tools at hand, the doctor went to work. The young man is doing nicely today at the same old stand, and the doctor is still placidly flying the submarine patrol on his time off.

When the CAP first got the idea that its little put-puts could be death on subs, all even faintly orthodox military minds were properly skeptical. Finally Major Johnson, who throws off enthusiasm for the project in all directions, wangled $18,000 for a 30-day trial at a base near one of the worst ship graveyards on the East coast. The usual complement of a base commander and 76 men took over, with their customary collection of odds and ends for equipment, and went to sea in the aerial equivalent of pea-green boats.

Within ten days, General Bradley of the army air force came up to inspect the base. Ten days is scarcely time to set a new apartment in order, but he found the little airplanes buzzing over the ocean with such effectiveness that sinkings had dropped off 85 per cent.

Yet the planes carried no bombs, and could only radio the army or navy for help when they found a sub. Another base was set up, and another and another, and at each one, the sinkings went down.

One day two CAP planes found a sub. They badgered it until it rammed into a mudbank, but they didn't have as much as a rock to drop. No help came and the sub got away. When Gen. Hap Arnold, chief of the air force, heard of the incident, he blew up. The patrol planes would carry bombs, he said.

60 Was Basic Number

Unit in Ancient Babylon

The ancient Babylonian numerical system had 60, not 10, for its basic unit, reports Dr. George C. Cameron, University of Chicago archeologist who has been deciphering thousands of clay tablets.

While 10 can be factored evenly only by one, two, five and itself, the Babylonian unit had the advantage that it could be factored by one, two, three, four, five, six, ten, twelve, fifteen, twenty, thirty and itself.

When armored knights met, it was customary for each knight to raise the visor of his helmet as a means of identification. This gesture has come down through all armies in the form of the salute. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. With men in the Army, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard, actual sales records in their service stores show that Camel is the favorite. It's one of the favorite gifts with service men. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

Did you notice how short our summer was? The sudden win-

School to fall a bit. We had a number of visitors who were at home for mother's day. It is very commendable to go visiting and go to church instead of keeping everyone you visit away from church.

We had a special mother's day children in that department were invited. The children had several parts in the program. Mrs. Ber-

Brother Polnac brought a beautiful as well as inspirational message on "A true mother—the spirit of a True Church." The "War or Peace." The scripture was taken from James. "Ye have

Methodist Church

"The one who is a failure never has a look far when he begins hunting for excuses."
"There is a low grade of faith that soon degenerates into fatalism." "Very little gossip is able to survive after being greeted by silence." "The strange thing is that a man is satisfied with so little in himself demands so much in others."

There is much said today about gas and tires in relation to church attendance but is this not just another excuse many times to keep from attending services?
How many people have reduced their going to town, visiting the in-laws, taking the baby over to grandmothers to see them, or to go to quarterly family pow-wow?

"There is a growing conviction among some Church people that the services in God's house must not suffer because of the ravages of war or the limitations of travel.
Some ration boards take into consideration the needs of Church going people when they make it plain that they need gasoline to take them to and from Church.
We know of one family that religiously tithes their gasoline, setting apart one tenth of the monthly allowance of gas for Church attendance and Christian service. Let us keep the Church home fires burning as a part of our patriotic and Christian duty."

—Christian Education Magazine.
We had a good District Conference but due to many conditions prevalent now the attendance was smaller than usual.

We call to mind the Young People's Summer Assembly at Abilene May 31 to June 4. A good program is offered and we seek a good attendance to this meeting. We have some folders telling of the Assembly and hope to get them to you for observation. The entire cost of the Assembly after arriving at Mc-Murry is $8.00. This is the greatest $8.00 value we know about.
The youth who attend will get a new outlook on life and see life in all the best phases. The theme this time is: "Forward Along God's Way."

We shall, with the others of the Church, gladly welcome all regulars, stragglers, irregulars, and visitors at the sanctuary next Sunday. We try to make all services such that you will miss something when you are absent. Hours of meeting the same.
