Voters could get say on legislative pay raise

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas voters would decide whether state lawmakers deserve a 200 percent pay raise above the $7,200 yearly they currently make under legislation overwhelmingly approved by the House Monday.

The legislation, offered in the form of a resolution by Rep. David Hudson, D-Tyler, would tie senators' and House members' salaries to gubernatorial pay.

The lawmakers would draw one-quarter of what the governor makes, which amounts to $23,358, based on the $93,432 yearly appropriated by both chambers for Gov. Bill Clements over the next two years.

In addition, the House speaker and lieutenant governor would gross half the governor's paycheck, or $46,716.

The House Monday also approved an amendment to Hudson's resolution to hike from $30 to $81 "per diem" daily living expenses lawmakers may claim during a legislative session. If passed by the Senate and signed by Clements, both the amendment and pay hike scheme would come before Texas voters in November balloting as a single proposed amendment to the Texas Constitution.

The pay raise would take effect the first day of the 72nd Legislature in 1991.

Before logging a 103-38 approval, House members voted down a proposal by Rep. Billy Clements, D-Lufkin, to scrap the ties to the governor's paycheck and institute a gradual increase of specified amounts over three years.

Lee High School senior Prachi Shah, 15, will graduate third in her 1989 graduating class. She then will be a premed student at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md.

15-year-old leaving LHS to pursue medical studies

By BRIAN PEARSON

In three years, when most others her age will be rounding the last leg to high school graduation, Prachi Shah plans to be taking college premed classes, with aspirations of becoming an ophthalmologist.

The Lee High School senior, who turned 15 in November, not only will receive her diploma next month but graduate with the third highest academic standing in her class.

Like the day she, at the age of 12, started classes at the 3500 Neely Ave. campus, Miss Shah said she is a little nervous about walking the collegiate halls with older classmates.

But adjusting to different academic environments hasn't been a big problem for Miss Shah, who has attended public and private schools in the Permian Basin and the northeast United States.

Sino-Soviet relations now 'normalized'

BEIJING (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Deng Xiaoping shook hands today and normalized relations between the world's two Communist giants while outside their meeting hall tens of thousands of people chanted for democratic reform.

"We can take this opportunity to publicly announce the normalization of Sino-Soviet relations" after 30 years, Deng said to applause from Soviet and Chinese participants in the meeting.

The 84-year-old senior Chinese leader welcomed Gorbachev in the red-carpeted Eastern Hall of the Great Hall of the People as "comrade" but did not give him the bear hug he reserves for close friends and allies.

In the opening minutes of their 2½-hour meeting, he told the 58-year-old Soviet president that the world's "key political problems" have arisen from Soviet-American Cold War tensions.

That confrontation, he said, had helped prevent Sino-Soviet reconciliation but now "there may be a turning point in competition" between the two superpowers and "the situation is changing from confrontation to dialogue." The United States and China normalized relations in 1979.

Outside in Tiananmen Square, tens of thousands of students, teachers, journalists, workers and onlookers reminded the leaders of momentous change of another sort.

The students, who consider Gorbachev a hero for the political reforms he has championed at home, issued appeals for him to take up their cause for democratic reforms with China's leaders.

Their three-day occupation of the square, China's symbolic center of power, forced officials to move an official welcoming ceremony for Gorbachev on Monday as he arrived for a four-day visit.

Vote results unchanged in recounts

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Recounts conducted this week for two municipal candidates who lost races by a handful of votes nine days ago did not change the results, officials say.

Midland restaurateur Jose Cuevas Jr. tallied another eight votes during the Midland City Council District 2 recount requested by the runner-up contender the Rev. Bill Palmer.

Palmer originally lost the race to Cuevas May 6 by 12 votes.

The recount conducted Monday afternoon, however, discovered eight additional Cuevas votes, City Secretary Bill Clanton said.

The third District 2 candidate, Robbyne Fuller, was represented at the recount by her husband, James Fuller, Clanton added.

Dianne Anderson officially lost the District 6 Midland Independent School District trustee race for the second time in as many years this morning.

Mrs. Anderson, who ran for the seat in 1988 and lost to the late Bob Rich, requested the recount this year because she lost the race by seven votes May 6.

During this morning's school district recount, Midland dentist Larry Rusk retained his win over Mrs. Anderson, MISD Business Manager Don Ferguson confirmed.

Mrs. Anderson picked up one additional vote. As a result, Rusk has officially won the race by a six-vote margin, Ferguson said.

The additional eight votes which surfaced during the Cuevas-Palmer recount were a result of incorrect voting methods, Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert said today.

Although staff members at her office work diligently to educate voters of the correct way to fill out a ballot, some nonetheless do not fill in the open area in the arrow beside the candidate's name, Ms. Calvert said.

When votes are tabulated electronically on election nights, the machine disregards votes filled in on the ballot incorrectly, she said.

The only alternative to the situation is for Election Administrators' office staff members to recount each of the thousands of ballots on election night after the process is done electronically, Ms. Calvert explained.

In each recount procedure, the candidates were present or represented by relatives, officials said.

Manual recounts lasted more than two hours in both cases and were paid for, according to election law, by the contenders who officially lost the races this morning.

"I think we can expect the new norm for rig counts to be around 700 to 1,000 rigs; I don't think the rig count will ever get back to 4,000."

Arco president

Arco president sketches encouraging landscape

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Arco President James A. Middleton offered words of encouragement today for the oil and gas business.

Speaking to the Midland Chamber of Commerce Annual Membership Breakfast, Middleton said the main problem with the domestic oil industry was low morale, as characterized by a low rig count, but noted that improved oil prices could improve morale and drilling activity.

Said Middleton: "The current price of over $20 a barrel is a pretty healthy price." He feels the improved price could begin to be reflected in an improved rig count as early as this year, but does not see a major increase in drilling levels.

Middleton, a native of Tulsa, said he expected the rig count to average 800 this year, getting up to 1,000 by year end. "I think we can expect the new norm for rig counts to be around 700 to 1,000 rigs; I don't think the rig count will ever get back to 4,000."

While confessing that the price of oil was neither knowable nor predictable, Middleton said the actions of OPEC were somewhat predictable.

He said that by using production to control the world price of oil, the Saudis and OPEC were merely trying to maximize long term revenues by keeping oil competitors outside of OPEC off guard. "Under the circumstances, I think I might have done the same thing, if I were them," said Middleton. "It's their oil and they can do as they please with it." Middleton called the "cheating" on production quotas an OPEC tactic for keeping other oil producers off balance.

Forbes: 51 Texans among 800 best-paid executives

Associated Press

Texas is home to 51 of the nation's 800 highest-paid chief executives, with a median total income of $800,000 last year, according to a Forbes Magazine survey.

A dozen Texans fell among the top 250 best-paid executives running America's biggest public companies, Forbes reports in its May 29 issue. At least one in the top 15 lost ground.

Overall, Houston chief executives ranked 22nd in median total compensation — including salary, bonus checks, stock gains and other compensation — while Dallas executives ranked 23rd nationwide.

Houston had 22 residents on the list, and Dallas had 19. There are four from Fort Worth, three from San Antonio and one each from Amarillo, Daboll and Galveston on the list.

J. Virgil Waggoner, chief executive officer of Sterling Chemicals in Houston, earned $7.38 million in 1988 to rank 14th among corporate executives nationwide and No. 1 among his Texas colleagues. Waggoner, 61, has been CEO of Sterling Chemicals for three years.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Mostly cloudy skies and a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms with some possibly severe are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be near 60 and winds will be out of the south at 10-15 mph.

Wednesday will be partly cloudy with the chance of thunderstorms decreasing to 30 percent and the high reaching only into the low 80s. Winds will continue out of the south at 10-20 mph.

Monday's high of 88 was 14 degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 102 set for that date in 1988. The overnight low of 69 was 27 degrees warmer than the record low of 42 set for this date in 1945.

STATE

Severe thunderstorms roared across North Texas early today, forcing evacuations of about 100 people in Gainesville which received as much as seven inches of rainfall.

Phillip Herbst, Dallas DPS communications supervisor, said he had received a teletype from the Emergency Management Coordinator in Gainesville asking for assistance in evacuating about 100 people.

Interstate 35 was closed temporarily near Gainesville, but reopened within about an hour.

Gainesville and Cook County authorities were not immediately reachable because telephone circuits were consistently busy.

Areas west of Gainesville in Cooke County also were pelted with baseball-size hail.

A tornado warning was issued just before 6 a.m. for Lamar County as forecasters reported that a funnel cloud was moving in the direction of Paris.

Paris Police dispatcher Dahl Rosson said spotters sighted the funnel cloud about 10 miles southwest of Paris, but it moved back into the clouds accompanying the storm system.

Tornado warnings were also issued during the morning for Nacogdoches, Panola and Shelby counties. There were no immediate reports of damage.

Flash flooding was reported at Gainesville during the pre-dawn hours. Earlier, golf ball-size hail pelted the Muenster area and small hail was reported in other counties south and southeast of Wichita Falls.

Sherman reported golf ball-size hail before dawn.

Streets and roads were reported to be closed because of high water in Baylor, Jack and Archer Counties early today.

Flash flood warnings were also in effect in Delta and Lamar Counties.

A severe thunderstorm watch was in effect across North Texas until noon today as forecasters warned of heavy rainfall, damaging hail, high winds and dangerous lightning as the storm moved eastward across North Texas.

"If U.S. producers get any help in supporting higher oil prices, it will come only when OPEC has determined that they were solidly in control of the market," he said, pointing out that oil prices were now about where OPEC wanted them.

"When oil prices are $20 in the U.S., they are about $18 FOB in the Persian Gulf for Saudi Light. That's exactly where the Saudis said they wanted them."

Middleton said U.S. producers could expect no help from the government in stabilizing oil prices, because there was simply more interest in maintaining low energy prices because there were more voters affected by low prices. He said the government might respond to supply problems but would do nothing to cause the price to go higher.

"You would think that with declining U.S. production and increasing crude oil imports the federal government would be concerned about saving the domestic industry, but that's not necessarily the case."

The engineering graduate from Rice University said there was still lots of oil to be found if operators would only set their sights on what's there and not expect to find giant discoveries.

"An independent who looks for 2 million barrel fields today, can make money," Middleton said. "We have an abundance of data for drilling wells and our success rates in drilling producing wells has not changed in years. We are making as many discoveries today as we were 20 years ago." He feels large discoveries are still to be found in Alaska and offshore, but explains that those would be made primarily by the "big" players — the major oil companies and very large independents.

Middleton said he was optimistic about the natural gas industry. He said natural gas was coming to the end of 35 years of federal regulation and would be totally controlled by market forces. "Natural gas will be a good commodity and a good business for us in the energy industry," he said.

Middleton reported, however, that the industry was changing and natural gas producers must also become natural gas marketers. "Arco is very involved in marketing its gas, and I expect the small producers to become involved in marketing through associations."

"I am hoping oil prices have bottomed out and this will be the year the independent oil operators come back with new vigor," said Middleton. "The energy industry needs independents. There are things you do that we do not do. And, we need you politically."

Iran denies involvement in Pan Am crash

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran today denied involvement in the Dec. 21 bombing of a Pan American jumbo jet that killed 270 people, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, quoted an unnamed foreign ministry spokesman as saying that the CIA had alleged Iran was involved in the bombing. He said the allegations were "mere lies."

Shortly after the crash, an anonymous caller purporting to speak for a pro-Iranian group called Guardians of the Revolution telephoned major news organizations in London to claim responsibility for the disaster.

Western investigators have been quoted as saying they suspect the bombing was carried out by a radical Syrian-backed Palestinian faction.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command at the behest of Iran.

The front's leader, Ahmed Jibril, denied in a U.S. television interview April 15 that his group carried out the Pan Am bombing.

Numerous news reports have quoted some investigators as saying that Pan Am Flight 103, flying from Frankfurt to New York, may have been bombed in retaliation for the downing of an Iranian airliner in July.

The U.S. missile cruiser Vincennes shot down the Iran Air plane over the Persian Gulf after mistaking it for an Iranian fighter jet. All 290 people aboard were killed.

The bomb aboard the Boeing 747 exploded as the plane was flying over the Scottish town of Lockerbie.

All 259 people aboard were killed, along with 11 people on the ground.

IRNA quoted the foreign ministry spokesman as saying that the West was using the Pan Am bombing as a pretext to confront Iran, "particularly after the West's defeat in the Salman Rushdie affair."

Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, in February issued a death sentence against the British writer for allegedly blaspheming Islam in his novel, "The Satanic Verses."

That plunged Iran into a major confrontation with the West. Tehran claimed that widespread backing for Khomeini's action in the Moslem world amounted to a defeat for the West.

The Iranian spokesman accused the United States of being "a founder and promoter of state terrorism," IRNA said.

He branded the downing of the Iran Air Airbus an act of state terrorism, IRNA noted.

At-large City Councilmen J.D. Faircloth and John Castro also were elected on May 6.

Others elected to another term on the school board were incumbent president James Fuller, District 1, and District 7 representative Ken Marks.

Her parents have been even more itinerant. Her father, Harshad, an ophthalmologist, came from India, while her mother, Teresita, is a Philippines native.

After living in Manila, the family in 1976 moved to Springfield, Mass., where her father did an internship. The Shahs lived in Buffalo, N.Y., and Cherry Hill, N.J., before moving to Odessa in 1985.

Coming from seventh-grade advanced classes in New Jersey, Miss Shah said she found her classes at Nimitz Junior High School unchallenging and below her level of knowledge, so she enrolled as a 10th-grader in Midland Christian School. Eck County Independent School District, she said, would not allow her to enroll in Permian High School.

She attributed her advanced placement to the private school in Buffalo that allowed her to work at her own pace.

"I progress at a quicker rate than other students, so they had to compensate by moving me ahead a little," Miss Shah said.

When moving to Midland three years ago, she said she decided to go back into public schools so she could take special advanced classes.

"We were asking which school was better, Midland or Lee, and it was a phenomenal vote for Lee," she said.

Because she had to make up some lost credits, Miss Shah began her high school career by going part time to Lee Freshman High School and then spending a half day at LHS. The transition to LHS — when, at the age of 13, she jumped in with the junior class — wasn't easy, she said.

"People weren't asking 'Who are you?' and 'How can I help you?'" she said. "It was 'How old are you?' and 'What are you doing here?'"

"A lot of people saw me as an age. It put up a lot of social barriers."

But she was able to break through those walls by getting extensively involved in extracurricular activities, such as the debate team, National Honor Society, academic decathlon team, Latin Club and other clubs.

Her studies, though, still took priority, said Miss Shah, who never made less than an 'A' for a semester in high school but made two six-weeks 'Bs' in computer science last year.

"I like to learn and I'm naturally curious," she said. "I don't consider myself as having a driving force. I try not to make it such a compulsion that it controls every facet of my life."

She attributed much of her inspiration to her parents and LHS teachers.

"My parents always supported me, and I think that's great," she said. "The teachers here have bent over backward to help, and that's made quite a difference."

Now Miss Shah must face the transition into college. Even though she placed third in her class and made a 1,300 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, Miss Shah found it difficult to get into a university.

"A lot of them told me I wasn't old enough to go to college and I should wait until I was 18, when I reached my full maturity level," she said.

Prestigious Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., accepted her, but her mother will have to move with her.

"She said she plans to attend medical school and become an ophthalmologist specializing in the diseases of the retina and vitreous body. Finding her niche early in life, she said, has been one of the factors leading to her academic success."

"Many students are discouraged about school because they're not successful at a certain subject," she said. "If the classes you're in are not suited to you, you'll find a niche somewhere else."

Jane Carrens, LHS instructional services director, called Miss Shah a well-rounded student always willing to pursue new interests.

"She was kind of a phenomenon when she came over here two years ago," Ms. Carrens said. "The work and the load she has carried has not been an imposition on her."

"She's done things she didn't have to do, and I've never seen her struggle."

PAY

Clemons' proposal, based on an opinion that voters want to know how large a pay increase they're approving, would have hiked members' salaries to $12,000 in 1990, $16,000 in 1991 and $20,000 in 1992.

The salaries go no higher, Clemons said, because "I don't think people want to give us ... a full-time salary so we'll become full-time legislators."

Clemons later voted against Hudson's resolution.

Also in opposition was Rep. Tom Craddock, R-Midland, who felt that "we're not a full-time legislature. The pay is on a part-time basis."

Craddock also had problems with elevating the speaker's salary above that of other members. "I don't think that's right," he said.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, commented on the "bad timing" of the proposal, saying, "The problem is that we're sitting there fighting today over a $300 million shortage in the appropriations bill."

In addition, "This dog has already bit Congress," he said, in a reference to the U.S. Congressional pay hike proposed last fall but discarded because of adverse voter reaction.

"There's no doubt in my mind that the House and the Senate, the speaker and the lieutenant governor need a pay raise," Stiles said. But "I just don't feel like getting bit any more."

Rep. Henry Cuellar, D-Laredo, was among the 103 lawmakers who liked the pay hike idea. "I truly believe that the state legislators don't make enough money to cover the time that they have to spend here," he said.

In addition, "The work doesn't stop when you go back to Laredo," he said.

Another legislator, Rep. Frank Colazo, D-Port Arthur, thought the proposal is designed so Texans who go to the ballot box will have an opportunity "they didn't get from the U.S. Congress."

And Rep. Ron Lewis, D-Mauriceville, felt the raise would make the Legislature more representative of Texans as a whole.

"Is this body going to be a body of the majority of the people, who are middle class people? Or is this going to be a body of the rich?" he asked.

Lewis also supports the pay hike for personal reasons. "I knew what this job paid when I ran for it, and I ran for it anyway," he said.

"But I didn't know we were going to be in a hundred special sessions. I love this job, but at what point in time do you say, 'Look, I work hard.'"

WEALTH

Fort Worth's Gerald Grinstein, who heads Burlington Northern, was paid $21.5 million in 1988. At 56, he led the company less than 6 months when the survey was done.

Joseph R. Canion, 44, of Houston's Compaq Computer, was paid $1.867 million after heading the company for seven years.

Other Houstonians making the list and more than $1 million last year include: Harold S. Hook, American General; Robert Cizik, Cooper Industries; Kenneth L. Lay, Enron; James L. Ketelsen, Tenneco; James D. Woods, Baker Hughes; Oscar S. Wyatt Jr., Coastal Corp.; and John F. Woodhouse, Sysco.

In Dallas, Jerry R. Junkins, 51, of Texas Instruments earned nearly $1.5 million to lead the corporate executives in Big D. The head of Texas Instruments for four years, Junkins ranked 167 nationwide.

Other Dallas executives who earned more than $1 million and made the Forbes rankings include

David R. Tacke, E-Systems; Harold C. Simmons, Valhi; Jess T. Hay, Lomas Financial; Darwin E. Smith, Kimberley-Clark; and William R. Howell, JC Penney.

Fort Worth-based AMR, the parent of American Airlines, paid Robert L. Crandall, 54, $1.33 million last year, including compensation.

Forbes reported chief executives in the beverage and tobacco industries were the highest-paid group.

CEOs at beverage and tobacco companies earned a median $1.51 million, followed by chief executives in communications and media and CEOs of financial service companies, who dropped to third place.

The $1.51 million median compensation of the 10 beverage and tobacco CEOs in the survey was up 30 percent from 1987, Forbes said.

Median compensation was $1.47 million for the communications and media chieftains, $1.34 million for the financial services bosses, $1.32 million for food-processing chiefs, and $1.30 million for CEOs of surface transportation companies.

REFORM

A planned wreath-laying ceremony was canceled today and the protesters later surrounded the Great Hall, halting traffic and forcing Gorbachev's afternoon meeting with Premier Li Peng to be moved to a guest house several miles away. More than 3,000 students have staged a hunger strike on the square since Saturday.

One of the student demands is that Deng, the architect of China's economic reforms, step aside. They characterize Deng as a dictator who has served too long and is too old to understand the urgency for political reform.

But in a meeting with Gorbachev, Communist Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang launched into an unusual defense of Deng, saying the party still needs his "wisdom and experience."

A Foreign Ministry spokesman quoted Li Peng as telling the Soviet leader: "China needs a peaceful environment externally and a stable environment internally. Only thus can we accomplish modernization."

Strike by Special Forces included in U.S. plan for ousting Noriega

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration has a contingency plan for ousting Panamanian Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega that would involve a surgical strike by elite Special Forces, according to a senior administration official.

The plan would not be implemented unless the United States has the full backing of other Western Hemisphere nations and all other policy options have been exhausted, said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Central Intelligence Agency officials expect Noriega to try to provoke a large-scale U.S. military invasion through actions by the Panamanian Defense Forces (PDF) against Americans in Panama.

By luring the United States into the use of force, Noriega presumably could strengthen his own hand by accusing the United States of actions to abrogate the 1979 Panama Canal Treaties.

The Pentagon already has ordered Gen. Fred Woerner, the commander-in-chief of the 10,300 U.S. troops in the Canal Zone, to avoid overreacting to isolated incidents by Panamanian forces, according to the administration source.

NATION

U.S. asks nations to withdraw envoys from Panama — Page 7B

Before considering military action against Noriega, the Bush administration wants the Organization of American States, whose foreign ministers meet here on Wednesday, to condemn Noriega's handling of last week's Panamanian elections.

The United States, the policymaker said, wants to make sure any effort to oust Noriega is seen as collective effort of Western Hemisphere countries and not merely as a U.S. action.

U.S. officials are hoping that senior officers of the PDF will force Noriega to step down and leave the country. Exile reportedly has been offered by Spain and a number of other countries.

A senior U.S. intelligence official here said Noriega may not have much support in the 12,300 man PDF beneath the level of colonel.

The U.S. hope, the source said, is "to turn the lieutenant colonels" against Noriega so that bloodshed can be avoided.

Noriega is under indictment by the United States for his alleged involvement in drug-trafficking.

The Bush administration will not wait for more than another few weeks before considering the use of special forces either to kidnap or assassinate Noriega, the source said. He also noted that U.S. lives could be lost in such an effort.

Still, the official said: "There is no question that we have the capability to carry this out cleanly and efficiently."

Gorbachev says Soviet weapons shipments halted to Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, moving to ease superpower tensions over Central America, told the United States that his government has halted its weapons shipments to Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista regime.

Gorbachev informed President Bush of the decision in a letter this month and confirmed it in conversations with Secretary of State James A. Baker III in Moscow last week, a Bush administration official said Monday night.

Prior to his Moscow visit, Baker had cited Soviet support of the Sandinistas as a litmus test for U.S.-Soviet relations, questioning whether Gorbachev's deeds would live up to his words of conciliation toward the West.

Bush received Gorbachev's letter before Baker went to Moscow, where the secretary of state met with Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

The U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, stressed that Gorbachev's assurances did not foreclose delivery of other forms of military assistance besides weapons. That assistance could include vehicles, supplies and clothing. Baker did not persuade the Soviet leaders to cut off that assistance as well, the source said.

Baker

Also, the Soviets declined to suspend their military support of Cuba, the other prominent Soviet client state in the region, the official said. The United States had also sought to have the Soviets halt supplies to Cuba.

The United States estimated that the Soviets provided $500 million in various forms of military aid, including weapons, to the Sandinista government in Nicaragua last year.

There was no immediate breakdown of Soviet military aid to the Sandinistas, but weapons account for much of $500 million.

Rebels, known as Contras and backed by the United States, have been fighting the Sandinista forces since 1981. The United States provided arms to the Contras, but Congress subsequently limited U.S. assistance to so-called humanitarian aid.

Gorbachev's move marks another step by the Soviet leader to lessen superpower tensions. He informed Bush that all Soviet weapons deliveries to Nicaragua were suspended at the beginning of 1989 and would not be resumed, the administration official said.

Baker, while in Moscow, said he had made headway with Gorbachev and Shevardnadze toward cooperation in Latin America, the Middle East and other areas, but did not disclose the Gorbachev letter.

In the Kremlin last week, Shevardnadze reiterated to Baker that weapons deliveries had ceased and Gorbachev underscored the commitment at a 3½-hour meeting with Baker, the official said.

Bush unveils anti-crime package

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President George Bush Monday proposed a broad $1.2 billion anti-crime program aimed at combating drug-related street violence with more federal officers and prosecutors, tougher mandatory sentences, more prison space and an increased threat of the death penalty.

"We're going to take back the streets by taking criminals off the streets," Bush said at a memorial service at the Capitol for police officers slain in the line of duty.

"It's an attack on all four fronts — new laws to punish them, new agents to arrest them, new prosecutors to convict them and new prisons to hold them."

Also, as expected, Bush announced that he would make permanent the temporary ban he slapped on the importation of military-style semiautomatic assault rifles in March.

Bush also said the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms would continue to study American-made assault rifles with an eye toward banning their production and sale as well if they cannot be shown to have a legitimate sporting purpose.

The president, in an attempt to satisfy the National Rifle Association, which wanted no ban at all, as well as those who wanted a total ban, announced that he would seek legislation banning the manufacture, importation and sale to private citizens of gun clips holding more than 15 bullets.

But the Gun Owners of America called it a "public relations stunt," and said its membership feels "betrayed by the man that they elected last year... If the Bush administration thinks that we won't notice this back-door attempt to ban handguns in the name of curing the assault-rifle problem, it has better think again."

An administration official, who briefed reporters on the condition of anonymity prior to Bush's speech, said the 15-shot limitation on a gun's bullet capacity "will hit virtually all assault weapons, whether they're domestic or foreign-made."

The official added that rather than get "mired" in a debate with Congress and the NRA over what is an "assault rifle," the president chose to control "the most distinguishing characteristic" of the guns that have become popular among criminals — the large-capacity, detachable clips.

Assault rifles, such as the imported Chinese model used in the Stockton, Calif., playground shooting on Jan. 17, typically use clips holding 30 or more bullets. While most hunting rifles are semiautomatic — firing each time the trigger is pulled — their clips or magazines typically hold only six to eight bullets.

"Common sense has to play an important part in this discussion (of guns)," Bush said. "The fact of the matter is that nearly half the households in this country have guns. The guns are already out there, and the overwhelming majority are legitimately owned for legitimate purposes."

But, he added, "The right to own guns is not a license to harm others."

The administration official said most of the $1.2 billion cost of Bush's package would be financed from a $4.5 billion discretionary fund included in the budget compromise reached earlier this spring between Congress and the White House.

Bush called for Congress to pass legislation doubling — from five to 10 years — the mandatory minimum prison sentence for the use of a semiautomatic weapon in crimes involving violence or drugs — "no probation, no parole, no matter which judge they get."

Bush also said the attorney general would be directed to advise federal prosecutors "to end plea bargaining for violent federal firearms offenses. Those who use guns will do time — hard time."

A shortage of prosecutors has led to unacceptable plea bargains for violent criminals, Bush said.

The president also urged Congress to enact legislation expanding the scope of the federal death penalty that would include the use of a firearm as an "aggravating factor" that would be considered in deciding whether the death penalty should be imposed. Bush also called for adding to the list of federal capital offenses murder for hire, which is increasingly a part of drug trafficking violence.

Daughter of Cowboys owner working as congressional aide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 22-year-old daughter of new Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones is making $60,000 a year as an aide to a congressman who lists a personal loan of at least $100,000 from Jones among his liabilities.

Less than a year out of Stanford, Charlotte Jones holds three titles on the staff of Rep. Tommy Robinson, D-Ark. Her father has been a friend of Robinson since childhood and a financial backer of the congressman's political career. Jones became a multimillionaire in the insurance, oil and gas businesses.

In February, he purchased the Cowboys football franchise for an estimated $140 million.

According to Robinson's 1987-88 financial disclosure form, he and Jones are partners in a farm in Arkansas. Robinson listed among his liabilities a personal loan from Jones of between $100,000 and $250,000. Jones' daughter said Monday she did not know how much Robinson still owes her father but that monthly payments on the loan are being made.

She conceded in an interview that her father's relationship with Robinson was instrumental in getting her a job on the congressman's staff as a $31,000 constituent caseworker after graduating from Stanford last June with a degree in human biology.

"I cannot deny that I'm here because of my father," she said. "But it's not the money, it's the motivation that he encouraged in me."

Ms. Jones described her meteoric rise since then to the three-title position she now holds — administrative assistant, office manager and press secretary — as more of her own doing.

"I have a different kind of access to him that makes it easier for me to interrupt him or intervene with him on behalf of somebody else," she said of Robinson. "I think he feels secure with me being here."

"We've had a close, honest friendship since I was in high school and did a paper on him when he was sheriff. He knows that when he's not here that I or somebody in the office is not going to go off and do something he doesn't approve of or that gets him in political trouble."

Robinson could not be reached Monday. But he has defended the arrangement earlier, saying Ms. Jones has performed her tasks "in an exemplary way" and adding, "You don't really expect me to hire one of my enemies, do you?"

Diet Pill: "Safe And Effective" Says Govt. Panel

ORANGE, CA — A significant weight loss breakthrough of unprecedented magnitude has just been made. A new bioactive diet pill program containing amazing "E.A.B. Plus" has been perfected and is being marketed under the tradename Anorex 2000™.

Researchers are calling it the "diet miracle of the '90s." Anorex 2000 with "E.A.B. Plus" actually turns the body into a "fat burning machine" which consumes its own stored fat, flab and cellulite thus shedding pounds and inches like magic. A Govt. panel of doctors and health experts found E.A.B. Plus "safe for effective weight loss." However it is an extremely powerful anorectic — instructions should be followed carefully.

Expense Delays Marketing
Anorex 2000 was developed after years of expensive research. Consequently it is not cheap — but it works! As one doctor commented, "My patients would pay many times the cost of Anorex 2000 to finally lose all the weight they want and need to lose — to finally realize their dreams of a thin, beautiful, healthy body. Some of my overweight patients actually lost too much weight with Anorex 2000."

Free 30 Day Trial Offer

Anorex 2000 is so effective and the results are so astonishing that the manufacturer is offering a 30 day free trial. If you postdate your check a full 30 days, it will be held to let you prove to yourself that you can safely lose all the weight you want. If you are not 100% satisfied with the remarkable change you see in the mirror, just return your Anorex 2000 and your check will be destroyed uncashed. You have no risk — you can't lose money, only years of unwanted fat and years off your appearance.

Send check or money order for $36.45 (+$3.50 for shipping and handling) for a 30 day supply or $64.00 (+$3.50) for a 60 day supply to Anorex 2000, 4642 E. Chapman Ave. Dept. Spill hearings begin; Otters return home

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Seven otters pulled from oil-polluted Prince William Sound nearly two months ago have become the first to be returned to the waterway and are tagged with radar clips for monitoring.

The otter release came as commercial fishermen opened the halibut season Monday and a day before today's start of hearings into the nation's worst oil spill.

The tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground March 24 on a charted reef 25 miles south of Valdez. It leaked nearly 11 million gallons of oil, polluting hundreds of miles of shoreline and killing countless birds, fish and marine mammals.

The four male and three female otters were freed Monday into Simpson Bay, about 25 miles northwest of Cordova.

"That's something very measurable," said Coast Guard Vice Adm. Clyde Robbins, the federal cleanup coordinator. "Everybody can see that and understand that, and that's why I like it."

The first otter was released at the shore of a shale- and shell-covered beach. She waddled into the water, turned around and lifted a paw as if to wave at the 30 onlookers, who cheered at the sight.

The animals had been undergoing treatment at an Exxon-funded rehabilitation center in Valdez where 45 other otters remain under observation.

"It's the happiest day for the otter rescue center," Director Randall Davis said.

Simpson Bay was chosen because it was untouched by oil, has a stable food source and has a large otter population, Davis said.

Despite the radar, tracking won't be easy, biologist Chuck Monnett said. The signals can be picked up only while the flippers are out of the water, but wildlife watchers hope the flippers' movement during swimming will provide an adequate signal.

"This will be an excellent opportunity to learn more about the animals' behavior once they are returned to the wild," biologist Gary Sonnevill said.

The seven otters were selected because they appeared fully rehabilitated. "Blood samples appear normal, and the otters' fur once again will fully insulate the animals," Davis said.

WASHINGTON — Treasury is looking for a way to get government employees to pay taxes from the source, who are error-prone, an independent GAO report says.

GAO placed blame on Congress for not forcing the Revenue Service to do a better job of collecting taxes from the source, who are error-prone, an independent GAO report says.

In turn, GAO is not complying with the law that requires it to make payments made by contractors to their income tax revenue loss. Even though tax return IRS is not identical to file such.

"The importance required in payments made by contractors cannot be overstated," Posner said. "It is billions in independent contractor all income."

Posner told the IRS estimate because about employers miss as independent.

NATION IN BRIEF

GAO: Treasury losing funds from contractors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Treasury is losing billions of dollars because employers — including the government itself — fail to withhold taxes from the paychecks of workers who are erroneously designated as "independent contractors," the General Accounting Office said today.

GAO placed a good share of the blame on Congress, which, in an effort 10 years ago to curtail the Internal Revenue Service, made it more difficult to crack down on employers who violate the withholding provisions.

Paul L. Posner, a GAO associate director, said in testimony prepared for a House Government Operations subcommittee that the failure of workers designated as independent contractors to report some or all their income is at the root of the revenue loss.

In turn, GAO found, employers are not complying with requirements that they file reports with the IRS on payments made to individual contractors. Even when auditing business tax returns, the report said, the IRS is not identifying businesses that fail to file such reports.

"The importance of employers filing required information returns on payments made to independent contractors cannot be overemphasized," Posner said. "IRS officials estimate that billions in taxes are lost because independent contractors do not report all income."

Posner told the subcommittee on consumer affairs that in 1984 alone, the IRS estimated it lost $1.6 billion because about one of every seven employers misidentified employees as independent contractors.

Eggs lower in cholesterol

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — New testing methods and improved farming practices have led government researchers to conclude that eggs have 22 percent less cholesterol than previously believed.

A study released Monday by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the industry-supported Egg Nutrition Center found the average large egg has 213 milligrams of dietary cholesterol.

The government has said since 1976 that eggs contained 274 milligrams.

Extra large eggs have about 230 milligrams of cholesterol, and medium eggs about 180 milligrams.

The study was welcomed by the egg industry, which has seen sales plummet $1 billion during the past five years after warnings about the risks of heart disease associated with the fatty substance.

Sailors die of asphyxiation

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The two sailors killed in a fire aboard the aircraft carrier USS America died of asphyxiation, the Navy said.

Petty Officer 3rd Class Richard E. Childress, 22, of Ham Lake, Minn.,

and Airman Recruit Larry J. Brunson, 19, of Akron, Ohio, were on watch in a jet fuel pump room when the fire broke out Saturday evening as the ship was cruising several hundred miles off North Carolina.

"They sounded the alarm and were evacuating the space when they were overcome by fumes and noxious gas," Lt. Cmdr. Michael John, a Navy spokesman, said Monday night.

Both were asphyxiated, John said. A team of Navy investigators on Monday flew from Norfolk Naval Air Station to the carrier, said John.

Pilot safe in jet crash

HEBER SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — A U.S. Marine Corps A-4 jet fighter crashed on Brewer Mountain about 20 miles northwest of Heber Springs on Monday, but the pilot ejected and was uninjured, an Air Force spokesman said.

The plane, assigned to Marine Air Group 42, Detachment B, at Memphis Naval Air Station in Tennessee, was involved in local training at the time of the accident, according to Chief Warrant Officer Tim Butcher at Memphis NAS.

The name of the pilot could not be obtained.

Military and Federal Aviation Administration personnel were investigating the cause of the crash.

Alar use to be stopped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Apple growers are halting use of Alar in the wake of decreasing apple sales because of reports linking the controversial chemical to cancer.

The International Apple Institute said its members have decided to stop using Alar, which regulates growth and extends the shelf life of the fruit.

"By September of this year, the already low levels of Alar will be reduced to virtually zero," Derl I. Derr, president of the International Apple Institute, based in nearby McLean, Va., said Monday in a news conference. "Simply, the U.S. apple industry is not going to use Alar."

First day of LA teachers' strike cripples district

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first day of a teachers' strike crippled the nation's second-largest school district as more than 20,000 teachers abandoned chalkboards for picket lines five weeks before the end of the school year.

Although the school board met in a seven-hour session that lasted into late Monday and both sides held informal talks, the walkout entered its second day today.

"We've been on the brink of settlement before," Catherine Carey, spokeswoman for the United Teachers-Los Angeles union, said Monday night. "We're cautiously optimistic because lines of communication are open and we're anxious to settle."

"However, we expect we're going to be on a full blown strike."

School Board President Roberta Weintraub said the seven-member board would meet again today.

"I'm hopeful that it won't go more than two or three days," union president Wayne Johnson said of the strike. "There's still a possibility that might happen, but that depends on the board."

The union represents 22,000 of the district's 32,000 teachers, nurses and counselors. Johnson, who joined striking teachers at Hamilton High School, said more informal talks would take place, but no formal negotiations had been set.

The union claimed that 25,000 teachers did not show up for work Monday, 4,000 more than the district's estimate.

Monday morning attendance showed that 430,000 of the 590,000 students were in class but hundreds left junior and senior high school campuses after becoming bored. School officials said they would not be punished for truancy.

"All we're gonna do is sit and vegate," complained Maureen Lim, 15, a Hamilton High freshman.

The schools were being overseen by 12,650 substitute teachers, aides and administrators. The board had increased substitute teacher's pay to $165, up from $137.

It was the first strike since 1970 for

"I'm hopeful that it (the strike) won't go more than two or three days."

— Wayne Johnson

the 600-school Los Angeles Unified School District.

A so-called "fact-finder" from the state was to present a report Wednesday regarding the unsuccessful 16-month contract negotiation.

The teachers are demanding a two-year 21 percent pay increase, relief from unpaid duties such as playground patrol, and greater control in choosing curricula.

The district most recently offered a 21.5 percent pay increase over three years. It also has offered to set up councils at individual schools so that teachers would have greater input in setting curriculum. Teacher governance systems already are established in Dade County, Fla., Chicago, and Rochester, N.Y., schools.

California schools chief William Honig accused the teachers union of using grades to pressure a settlement.

The strike deadline was pushed up two weeks, from May 30 to May 15, when Superintendent Leonard Britton refused to authorize pay for teachers who failed to turn in final grades.

Teachers in the district annually earn from $23,440 in beginning salary to $43,319 for those with doctorates, 98 extra course units and 19 years' experience.

Administrators' salaries start at $37,000 for program coordinators and $95,600 for associate superintendents. Britton earns $141,000.

Clean air standards vital to environment

President Bush, whose advisers are still divided, will offer Congress in a few weeks his plan to revise the Clean Air Act.

The nearly 20-year-old law, which aimed to sweep pollution from our skies, has unquestionably made the nation's air much cleaner. But it needs updating because of the continuous rise of automotive vehicles on the roads as well as the deterioration of many lakes and streams from acid rain.

The battle over changing the law will, at times, be fierce. U.S. industries, in strong competition here at home and abroad, will argue against many of the billions of dollars which environmentalists wish them to spend to combat pollution. They do not believe some of the proposed cleanup of acid rain, smog, and toxic air are cost effective. Industry has some sound arguments.

The environmentalists point out that 135 million Americans live in areas that have not yet met old ozone standards. They insist some will die of cancer and other illnesses as a result of this degradation. They also maintain that the heavy burning of fossil fuels has caused some of the present global warming. This trend must be stopped through national and world accords.

It is now widely agreed that this country has progressed in cleaning its air and made other environmental improvements because of the national standards set in 1970. State and local governments previously set these benchmarks and most did poorly. It is obvious that more must be done on a national scale.

Nevertheless, clean air is an extremely complex issue. There are no sweeping or quick fixes. The risks and costs of the president's new plan should be considered on a case-by-case basis — not on emotion or unscientific claims. Acceptable answers lie somewhere between the legal aims of industry and environmentalists.

Recover lost bomb

Japan is the only nation ever to suffer a nuclear bombing.

The Japanese, still nursing their radiation victims, are understandably shocked by the revelation that the Navy dropped a "smoking" nuclear bomb 80 miles offshore of a Japanese island in 1965 — and kept it secret.

The bomb was on a plane that accidentally rolled off the deck of the aircraft carrier Ticonderoga, killing the 5-foot, 4-inch pilot.

How did it happen? "When Lt. Webster got into the airplane, he was too short to reach the pedals," said William Lane, a crewman aboard the Ticonderoga at the time. "The plane started rolling across the deck. We saw him look at the handlers as if to say, there are no brakes, or, I can't reach them, or something."

"As the airplane went over, he still had his hands up on the forward part of the canopy. The canopy tilted down and crushed his hands. He couldn't get out. The bomb broke a way from the airplane and was bobbing around (on the sea surface) with smoke coming out of it. My feelings were that if that atomic bomb goes off, this is all going to be vapor."

Lane's hair-raising account, reported by The San Diego Tribune, sheds light on how the Navy dropped a smoking nuclear bomb 80 miles off the coast of Japan. The pilot's short stature was not the only factor. Antiquated equipment was used on dangerous missions. Safety nets were missing from the ship's elevator.

The account doesn't explain why the Navy cloaked the incident in secrecy. Or why the media didn't report it, even though reporters were aboard the Ticonderoga at the time. It's difficult to imagine an editor receiving a reporter's account of the incident and saying, "Plane overboard, smoking A-bomb off Japan — no story!"

America was at war in Vietnam at the time. The newspaper Stars and Stripes was reporting that the United States wasn't using napalm, while sailors "were loading those weapons on an almost daily basis on that ship," Lane recalls. And the code of secrecy may have been extended to the Japanese government, which was sometimes informed of incidents that were anathema to the Japanese people.

Even now, 24 years after the fact, the United States should apologize formally to the Japanese people. The H-bomb must be checked for any radiation leaks and, if possible, recovered.

We are left with a sense of the surreal: a Japanese island threatened with a nuclear explosion because a U.S. pilot was too short to reach the brake pedals on a plane careening across an aircraft carrier. Perhaps Dr. Strangelove was aboard the Ticonderoga that day.

Israelis split over Palestinian 'intifada'

JERUSALEM — The Palestinian uprising against the Israeli occupation has progressed from the streets of the West Bank to the study halls of Jerusalem. The uprising, or "intifada," started with teenagers throwing rocks. Now intellectuals are hurling missives.

Jack Anderson

The Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies cast the first stone. In an open challenge to the ruling Israeli Likud party's policies, the center warned recently that the intifada will rage until Israel accepts a Palestinian state. The center concluded that the Palestinian people widely support the Palestine Liberation Organization. That means Israel must come to terms with its old enemy, the PLO.

Here are excerpts from the battle of the intellectuals:

■ Why has the intifada been able to sustain itself and how long can it continue?

The Jaffee Center says that "there is little likelihood that the intifada would cease" without political negotiations to end it.

The Jerusalem Institute says the intifada has flourished because Israel has allowed it to. "... the Israel Defense Force has not been ordered by the political level to suppress it."

■ What is the risk to United States-Israeli relations?

The Jaffee Center says that the tougher Israel gets with the Palestinian upstarts, "the more it jeopardizes U.S. support."

The Jerusalem Institute thinks the real damage is being done by the Israeli left. "The effect of its activities in the United States has been to loosen the emotional ties between Israel and parts of American Jewry, making the latter a much less effective lobby on Israel's behalf."

■ Has the legendary Israeli fighting spirit met its match?

"After 41 years of struggle and war, Israeli society is showing increasing signs of national fatigue," according to the Jaffee Center.

Not true, says the Jerusalem Institute. The only ones getting tired are "in some left-wing intellectual and social circles."

■ Will the intifada lead to even more radical Arabs?

"The mere fact of continuing occupation necessarily aggravates Palestinian frustration," says the Jaffee Center. "This almost certainly means further radicalization."

But the Jerusalem Institute thinks the Palestinians are becoming more radical because they are afraid of the PLO and Muslim fundamentalists, and are afraid that Israel can't protect "passive and cooperative" Palestinians. "The best insurance against fundamentalism is not the PLO but Israel."

■ What happens if Israel tries to maintain its current status in the West Bank and Gaza Strip?

The Jaffee Center says that the situation will change, "and this probably means for the worse."

But the Jerusalem Institute thinks Israel would be foolish to give up control of the territories. "For as long as Arab unwillingness to negotiate officially with Israel on the basis of any territorial dispensation safeguarding Israel's vital security interests persists, Israel should maintain the status quo. The intifada should be suppressed."

COCAINE POWER — A new superpower is emerging in Latin America — the Medellín drug cartel. It has a death grip on half a dozen Latin American governments. It has largely financed Panama's military dictator Manuel Noriega, enabling him to defy U.S. economic sanctions. Paraguay's economy has become dependent on drug smuggling. In Peru the cartel has formed an alliance with terrorists. The cartel has also weakened Bolivia, Colombia, Honduras, Haiti, Jamaica and Mexico. Where does the money come from? American cocaine users.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Once again, George Bush has proved that he doesn't want anyone around him whose star shines brighter than his own. Bush turned a cold shoulder on the outspoken and honorable Surgeon General C. Everett Koop. Apparently Koop wasn't bland enough for the president. When it became clear that Bush had no place in the administration for Koop's talents, Koop graciously resigned. Bush's ego cost him a good man.

World ruled by force, not economic power

Too many Americans do not understand the difference between an apple and an orange, or to be more specific, between a gun and a checkbook.

Many times I've heard people equate economic power with military power, and now there is even a new group of people, well-intended but not without naming, who suppose that economic sanctions can become a substitute for arms.

What nonsense. The world is ruled by force, not by economics. Machiavelli was correct when he said there are three things in the world — bread, money and iron (meaning weapons), but of the three, iron was the most important, for with it one could get the other two.

The richest man in town can be easily shot dead by the poorest. The richest nation can be plundered by a poor army — and history offers ample after example.

In a conflict, the only advantage of economic power is the ability to buy weapons and to hire men to use them. It was not, as is often said by short-thinkers, the economic power of the United States that destroyed Nazi Germany and Japan but rather the arms and men purchased with that economic power.

In 1951, the economic power of the United States exceeded that of North Korea and China by manifold, yet those two poor countries fought the United States to a stalemate, forcing it to leave their aggression unpunished despite the loss of thousands of American and South Korean lives.

The fact that food is rationed in Cuba does not diminish the fighting ability of the Cuban armed forces. An army will always requisition or seize whatever food it needs to fight on. In our own Revolution, the economic power of Great Britain absolutely dwarfed that of the 13 colonies.

The issue was decided with firepower, not with buying power. Somerset Maugham put it nicely when he said, "It is well to have right on our side, but it is madness to forget that unless we have might as well it will avail us nothing. We must believe that God loves men of good will, but there is no evidence to show that He will save fools from the results of their folly. Might doesn't make right but it makes it possible for right to survive."

The confusion of economic and military power is so child-like and naive, it's almost beyond argument. It's like trying to explain relativity to a 2-year-old.

But let's give it a try. Different things do different things and have nothing to do with each other. David Rockefeller has enormous economic power, but he couldn't survive one round with a club boxer, much less Mike Tyson. A boxing match is decided only by physical strength, physical skills and reflexes. Neither wealth nor education nor intelligence has anything to do with the outcome.

Wars are physical clashes and are decided by the armed forces that fight them. No nation, lacking sufficient arms and the will to use them, can impose its will on another. The world's narrow passages are not kept open because international law says they should, but because maritime nations with superior military power have forced them open. Israel survives among much more economically powerful enemies because of its superior fighting forces.

Economically, the West overshadows the Soviet Union, but while the Soviet Union is short of refrigerators, underarm deodorant, fine wines, and fancy shoes, it has no shortage at all of tanks, artillery, armored personnel carriers, nuclear missiles, submarines, surface ships, and bombers. You will please note that since 1945, the economically superior West has not forced or even persuaded the Soviet Union to do one damned thing it didn't choose to do. On the contrary, the concessions have come from the West.

As kids might put it, get real, folks.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Bush's 'new path' best for NATO defense

ATLANTA — Emboldened by the success of his scheme to subvert NATO with a Russo-German Entente, Gorbachev has just issued an ultimatum: Unless the Western alliance drops its intention to modernize the short-range missile that helps Europe offset Soviet military superiority, the Soviet Union will violate the intermediate-range treaty it signed with such fanfare only last year.

How's that for blustering arrogance? Unless he gets his way — unless we give up our right secured in previous treaties to maintain a credible local nuclear deterrent — then forget about Reagan's INF deal.

This "new thinking" is revealed to be the same old duplicity: While the U.S. considers treaties to carry the force of law, Gorbachev has just vividly demonstrated he does not consider his nation bound by treaty any more than his predecessors.

Does he expect to get away with threatening unilateral abrogation?

Yes. He counts on his apologists in the West's disarmament lobby.

West Germany's devious foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who sees a Fourth Reich rising from NATO's ashes to dominate Europe's economy; the grand old American negotiator Paul Nitze, whose ill-advised "walk in the woods" would have given the Soviets what they later had to trade real missiles for in the now-threatened INF treaty; the brilliant Nitze biographer and disciple, Strobe Talbott of Time magazine; Democratic Sens. Sam Nunn and Joseph Biden, grabbing any device to whack at executive power; and assorted old mutual-assured-destructionaries.

Adding to the weight of the Gorbachev intimidation, and contributing to the systematic snookering of Secretary of State Baker in his foreign travels, is support for the Soviet no-nuke position from the ambush of deep background by Ronald Reagan.

The former president, irritated at the contrast in style ostentatiously shown by his hands-on, in-touch successor, has let it be known that Bush is failing to capitalize on the momentum of détente established in the Gorbachev-Reagan embraces.

Thus does the Long-trusting Left combine with the Newly-entranced Right to squeeze the Sensibly-cautious Center. Resisting the stampede to denude our defenses, President Bush last week brought forth the fruit of his four-month strategic review in an important speech at Texas A&M.

"Containment worked," he said, crediting the recent Soviet reforms to internal contradictions and Western resolve rather than any Kremlin change of heart.

After dutifully touching the bases of hope ("we are approaching the conclusion of an historic postwar struggle") he proposed that we move "beyond containment" to a "new path" — one that will respond to realistic change in Soviet behavior where it most endangers freedom.

"Promises are never enough," he warned, and listed the means to earn trust: reduce the overwhelming Soviet forces, free Eastern Europe, stop supporting terror in the Middle East and subversion in Latin America, and "achieve a lasting political pluralism and respect for human rights."

This unsentimental better-safe-than-sorry approach was not what Gorbachev or the world's detentists wanted to hear. They wanted a "bold new initiative" — specifically, a pre-emptive concession to strip our forces of nuclear arms and make it possible for Gorbachev to maintain military superiority on the cheap.

But the Bush administration's prudent strategy does not throw away containment's gains. To his meat-and-potatoes approach, he felt the need to add an "open skies" sauce, which will be useful in verifying conventional arms cuts; the central thrust, however, is to press for what is in the free world's interest: free the captive nations and peoples, permit market forces to introduce prosperity and stop causing trouble around the world.

The no-nonsense strategy, previewed in Bush's recent speech about Poland, drew on the thoughtful historical analysis made public April 1 by Robert Gates, deputy national security adviser, who reminded us "for 70 years we repeatedly have seen a system in crisis proclaim reform and turn to the West for help while the essential features of that system at the end of the day remained unchanged."

I remember writing hall-détente speeches for President Nixon; this time around, I'm for Bush's "new path," requiring the steady earning of trust.

Gorbachev has already succeeded in fraying the free world at its German edge, and Genscher is in effect sending the Americans home.

Good luck, Europe, on your next treaty with the East: The Soviet dictator has just reserved the right in advance to abrogate it at will.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, May 16, the 136th day of 1989. There are 229 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Sixty years ago, on May 16, 1929, the first Academy Awards were presented during a banquet at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel. The movie "Wings" won best production; Emil Jannings and Janet Gaynor were named best actor and best actress, not for any one picture.

On this date:

In 1763, the English lexicographer, author and wit Samuel Johnson first met his future biographer, James Boswell.

In 1770, Marie Antoinette, 14, married the future King Louis XVI of France, who was 15.

In 1866, Congress authorized minting of the 5-cent piece.

In 1868, the U.S. Senate failed by one vote to convict President Andrew Johnson as it took its first ballot on one of 11 articles of impeachment against him.

In 1905, actor Henry Fonda was born in Grand Island, Neb.

In 1920, Joan of Arc was canonized in Rome.

In 1946, the musical "Annie Get Your Gun," featuring songs by Irving Berlin and starring Ethel Merman, opened on Broadway.

In 1948, the body of CBS News correspondent George Polk was found in Solonika Bay in Greece, a week after his disappearance; Greek leftists and rightists each blamed the other side for the killing.

In 1955, American author and critic James Agee died in New York.

In 1960, a Big Four summit conference in Paris collapsed on its opening day as the Soviet Union leveled spy charges against the United States in the wake of the U-2 incident.

In 1975, Japanese climber Junko Tabei became the first woman to reach the summit of Mount Everest.

In 1977, five people were killed when a New York Airways helicopter, idling atop the Pan Am Building in New York City, toppled over, sending a huge rotor blade flying.

In 1987, Kentucky Derby winner Alysheba captured the Preakness Stakes in Baltimore. Alysheba fell short in the Belmont Stakes the following month, failing to become the first Triple Crown champion since Affirmed in 1978.

Ten years ago: Labor leader A. Philip Randolph, who was also a prominent figure in the modern civil rights movement, died in New York at age 90.

Five years ago: The U.S. House of Representatives approved a compromise allowing production of only 15 of the 40 MX missiles that President Reagan had called for — and only if the Soviet Union failed to return to arms talks by the following April.

U.S. red tape strands herd of llamas

ST. JOHN'S, Antigua (AP) — A herd of llamas and alpacas en route to the United States from the cold high Andes of Chile has been stranded for seven weeks in the heat of a barren Caribbean island.

Seventy-five of the woolly beasts have perished, mostly from the heat and stress.

The 178 survivors are awaiting delivery to American buyers as trendy pets, pack animals or breeding stock in a $2-million export deal.

But they have been held up by U.S. regulations on foot-and-mouth disease and have become the center of a feud involving animal-welfare activists, the Antigua government and the U.S. investors.

In all, 268 llamas and alpacas were shipped, but 15 died in a crating accident aboard a Bolivian cargo plane on takeoff from Chile.

After the remaining 253 arrived in the twin nation of Antigua and Barbuda, about 250 miles east of Puerto Rico, residents protesting their presence on Barbuda blocked a quarantine station and forced the herd onto uninhabited Billy Island off Antigua.

"Straight from the beginning it was a fiasco," said John Walsh, regional director in Boston of the London-based World Society for the Protection of Animals, which monitors the commercial use of animals. "In my view, it shows a lack of concern for the animals."

At one stage, the beasts, which belong to the camel family but have no hump, were dying at a rate of two a day on Billy Island, a hill of coral rock, scrub brush and a few scrawny trees.

Because llamas and alpacas live above the treeline in the Andes, they have no instinct to seek shade and succumbed in temperatures hitting the mid-80s.

"They really were just dropping like flies because of the heat," said John Scharfner, a scuba-diving instructor hired to camp out on the island and care for the animals. "They didn't know enough to get in the shade. Most of them would just lie out and bake in the sun."

Since then, workers have built shelters with blue plastic tarpaulins to shade the herd, and set up a supply line of hay and fresh water brought from Antigua in 55-gallon drums. Intravenous tubes and spray pumps were used to rehydrate the animals.

Paula Vachon of Sarasota, Fla., one of the four partners in the export deal who has been supervising the operation in Antigua, said only one animal had died this month — a llama with a leg cut that got infected.

The llamas and alpacas were brought to Antigua and Barbuda, about 250 miles east of Puerto Rico, by two Florida businessmen, David Strickland and Keith Kerr. Another partner is Kerr's wife, Diane.

Strickland, a Sarasota developer, has been doing business in Antigua and Barbuda for 17 years. Kerr, who owns a construction company in Palmetto, Fla., has a 12-acre private zoo that includes lions, tigers, cougars, bears, wolves, bobcats and an 8-year-old elephant.

Strickland said the partners bought the exotic creatures in Chile for $50 to $120 each and hoped to sell them for $6,500 to $15,000 each. The deal would have netted a profit of around $2 million, he said.

The International Llama Association estimates there are 25,000 llamas and 1,000 of the smaller alpacas in the United States.

In recent years, the graceful, mild-natured creatures with thick, woolly coats, have become increasingly popular and valuable. Males typically sell for $10,000 and breeding females $30,000, but prices vary greatly. A prize stud reportedly sold for $115,000 last year.

Strickland said the idea was to export llamas and alpacas to pay for both a wildlife park in Antigua and a $450,000 quarantine station the investors built on Barbuda.

The project went awry when a barge carrying the llamas and alpacas arrived off Barbuda on March 23. An unruly crowd formed and refused to allow the vessel to unload.

Underlying the protest was local hostility to a cement company Strickland owns with Deputy Prime Minister Lester Bird of Antigua and two other Cabinet ministers. The company uses sand from Barbuda in construction.

The main problem for the animals now is that the exporters shipped them from Chile and brought them to Antigua, and neither country is regarded by the U.S. government as free of foot-and-mouth disease, a contagious virus that can devastate livestock.

The animals have been inspected by a veterinarian from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, but they cannot enter the United States without undergoing a 90-day quarantine. The only approved facility, the Harry S. Truman Animal Import Center in Fleming Key, Fla., is booked through the end of September with a shipment of Chinese pigs.

Llama association president Fred Bauer accused the exporters of trying to circumvent USDA regulations by setting up an unauthorized quarantine station. "Nothing seems to ring quite true with this deal," he said.

Francie Stull, who raises Russian wolfhounds near Austin, Texas, bought 160 of the animals from the Florida investors for more than $1 million and has already pre-sold 49 of them for about $500,000.

She said she was unaware until this past September that Antigua had not done the necessary screening to be declared free of foot-and-mouth disease but had been assured there would be no problem in obtaining the status.

Asked what was likely to happen to the animals, she said: "My best guess is that they will be put in some kind of facility where they are comfortable and be used as a breeder herd for the next couple of years while we negotiate the red tape."

Mrs. Stull said she had fully insured her animals, but Strickland said the rest of the herd was not covered. He said the partners stood to lose $1.3 million if the animals cannot be brought into the United States.

The government here has agreed to allow construction of another quarantine station, this one on a peninsula of Antigua, along with the promised wildlife park as a tourist attraction.

"We don't want these animals to suffer anymore," said government spokesman Barry Stevens.

AP Laserphoto

Rev. Bob Chandler and his wife Cherry look forward to the day their adopted daughter Tina can live with them again. The Dallas couple adopted the child ten years ago. The couple is now undergoing therapy to treat pre-adoption abuse.

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. Bob Chandler looks forward to the day when his adopted daughter can live with his family again. Rhonda Stanton looks forward to the day her adopted daughter can live with someone else.

Their stories differ, but both tell of a dark side of adoption:

"The excitement of adopting, falling in love with a child, wanting the child desperately and deeply, and going through the grief of learning you're not going to have the child you dreamed about," Chandler said.

Dan and Rhonda Stanton returned 2½-year-old Stacey to the adoption agency after learning her brain had ceased developing. Stacey lives with a foster family, but a judge has ruled the Stantons cannot sever their parental ties.

Bob and Cherry Chandler sent their daughter away for counseling for sexual abuse she suffered before adoption — abuse they blame for breaking apart the family. They and five other sets of adoptive parents are suing the state for failing to disclose the extent of their children's pre-adoption abuse.

"Lack of information can destabilize an adoption that would have otherwise been successful," said Richard Barth, associate professor at the University of California-Berkeley School of Social Welfare. Barth and an associate followed 1,000 adoptive families in 1980-1984 and found that the less information families had about their children, the likelier were such problems as runaways, disobedience or physical attacks.

Ten percent to 15 percent of adoptions are stopped before they're finalized and "a smaller minority" are dissolved, estimated Jeff Rosenberg, director of public policy for the National Committee for Adoption, a Washington-based, non-profit group of adoption agencies, parents, children and experts.

The Stantons, who have been married 11 years, explored adoption after exhausting all means to conceive. Their disappointment turned to anticipation when they learned in 1985 that the private adoption agency Hope Cottage was seeking 50 adoptive couples.

In October 1986, 3-week-old Stacey came to their suburban Dallas home.

"The moment she was placed in our arms, she was our baby," said Stanton, 39, an insurance agent. But Stacey's mental development stopped at four to six months, said Mrs. Stanton. "She never learned to wave bye-bye, play patty-cake. Little Stacey never turned in."

By the time tests revealed Stacey would never develop, the Stantons had adopted her. Stacey went back to Hope Cottage last June, but Mrs. Stanton says emphatically, "We didn't return her, we gave her up."

Last July they asked Dallas Family Court Judge Hal Gaither to legally declare the child not theirs. In February, they told Gaither they were not equipped to raise a severely retarded child.

"I have a deep compassion for special children, but I don't have the emotional makeup to teach them," said Mrs. Stanton, 41, a former elementary schoolteacher.

"Where do you draw the line?" Gaither said recently. "Do you allow the adoption agency to come back and pick up kids because they cry at night or if it has blue eyes and you wanted green eyes? No. You can't turn a child back in."

Gaither terminated the Stantons' visitation rights and relieved them of financial responsibility, but refused to erase their parental rights in case the adoption agency later had its own financial or business problems. "What if...an adoption agency agrees to take a child back into custody...and they go bankrupt or a new regime comes in and won't honor the contract, now where is the kid?" he said.

Chandler, who decided to adopt because it was a Christian thing to do, admits that as he tried to cope with his daughter's violent behavior he thought about taking her back to the Texas Department of Human Services.

After many visits with counselors, the Chandlers finally found a Colorado psychiatrist who said the girl's behavior was the result of sexual abuse. She has been undergoing treatment at the Colorado clinic since January; the Chandlers don't know when she'll be able to come home.

Bill OK'd which would expand UTPB

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill that would authorize lower-level courses in engineering and energy-related fields at the University of Texas at the Permian Basin passed through the Senate Monday although some legislators warned that it threatens to undermine area junior colleges.

The UTPB amendment hitched a ride on Senate Bill 895 — sponsored by Sen. Ike Harris, R-Dallas — that would order four-year status in natural sciences, mathematics and engineering at UT-Dallas.

The bill also includes a provision making Pan American University at Brownsville a component of the University of Texas System.

The Senate approved the bill despite the protests of Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, Senate Finance Committee chairman, who urged an interim study of the need for another four-year undergraduate college in North Texas.

"It's just not good policy," Caperton said of the move to expand the Dallas campus without the approval of the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board. "It's a throwback to the old days when you created a campus when you had the power," he said.

"If it's a good idea in 1989, it will be a good idea in 1991, after we've had a chance to study it," he added.

After the Senate tentatively approved the bill May 10 with the UTPB enhancement attached by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, the Senate Monday voted 20-8 to bring up the bill and 19-10 to send it to the House of Representatives, where Rep. David Cain, D-Dallas, has 32 co-sponsors and hopes for a quick review in the Higher Education Committee.

Permian Basin representatives in the House were divided along county lines, with Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa, pledging to work for expansion of the 20-year-old Ector County campus and Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, warning that the expanded university could undermine Midland Junior College, Odessa College and Howard College in Big Spring.

"It's going to be an uphill battle, but I'm optimistic as always that things will come out good," said Watkins, chairman of the budget subcommittee of the Higher Education Committee. "I think there's a real problem with the UT-Dallas bill itself and my amendment being on that bill there is a problem, but I'm going to do my best," he said.

Watkins noted there was resistance against expanding any of the upper-level institutions. Supporters of UT-Arlington, the University of North Texas and Dallas County Community Colleges were particularly concerned about the potential competition with an expanded state university in Richardson, he said.

Craddick was one of those with problems. "Junior colleges in our areas are against it and the statewide junior college association is against it," he said. "They're not protected under this bill. We've spent a lot of time and money and effort in the Permian Basin to develop three good junior colleges to feed into the school and I feel at this point I can't support UTPB," he said.

"Maybe the Coordinating Board needs to do a study and see what we need to do with all the upper level schools if something needs to be done," Craddick said. "I really don't think with the number of students at UTPB and with the number of students available now in the junior college system that it should be done at this time." Midlander Frank Cahoon, a Coordinating Board member, said today he wants to see what impact the Montford amendment will have on local junior colleges prior to pledging his support in either direction.

Should the proposal win approval in the House and be sent to the Coordinating Board for approval, a staff study would be conducted, he explained. Coordinating board members then would grant approval or disapproval.

Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, whose district includes Midland, voted against expansion of UTPB, but he said the junior colleges apparently did not get their forces out against the bill.

While he shares Craddick's concern about the junior colleges, Sims noted that the UTPB campus at least would need approval of the Coordinating Board and the University of Texas System Board of Regents to add the lower-level courses.

"If they're going to do it, at least they're going to do it from the proper direction," he said. "They certainly should establish rules how they're going to go about it."

Doctor advises women not to drink during pregnancy

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Babies in the womb consciously don't "take a drink" even if their mothers do.

And their mothers would be wise to say "no" to ingesting any alcoholic drink during pregnancy, said Dr. Robert H. "Bob" Hardy, a Midland obstetrician-gynecologist who specializes in prenatal care.

"The best advice to a pregnant woman, or to a woman about to become pregnant," Hardy said, "is to abstain from all alcohol."

Hardy's admonishment comes at the outset of National Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS) Awareness Week, which is being promoted by the National Council on Alcoholism and by the Midland Council on Alcoholism/Drug Abuse.

Children who are "brought into the world" with alcohol-related birth defects are suffering needlessly, and their condition "disrupts a lot of lives," said Davis Payne, president of the Midland Council on Alcoholism. "We need to view the overall picture," Payne said, "and to think this thing all the way through. And that's what the mothers need to do."

Hardy is encouraging his patients to do just that.

Alcohol is "now recognized as the leading known teratogen" — an agent that can cause birth defects, including malformations.

In North America, Hardy said, alcohol ingested by pregnant women causes more "birth defects than anything else." The defects may include varying degrees of mental retardation and cranial facial defects.

Alcohol ingestion, he said, is the "most commonly identifiable cause of mental retardation." The defects may be "very mild to very severe." But that "depends on the level of ingestion of alcohol by the mother," he said.

Abstinence from alcohol is the most preventable cause of mental retardation.

In Midland, physicians have detected "very little" alcohol-related defects. But even one defect in 1,000 deliveries is appreciable, he said.

High-levels of alcohol ingestion by the mother may cause problems in the child. Certainly, "high-level chronic ingestion throughout the early portion of pregnancy and, in fact, probably in most of the pregnancy" has been linked to birth defects.

And if high levels will cause the problem, Hardy asked poignantly, "at what levels are you willing to take the risk that you are safe?"

Low levels of alcohol ingestion have yet to be identified with alcohol-related birth defects.

But, Hardy said he asks his patients: "At what levels are you willing to take the risk?"

And the response usually is: "I don't want to (risk)."

The American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Hardy said, "recommends no alcohol ingestion" by pregnant women.

Pregnant women who have "a few social" drinks "probably have not done any major damage," Hardy said.

"I do believe there are instances of women who have drunk fairly moderately, who were not problem drinkers, who stopped when they found out they were pregnant, and they have gone on and carried, and the kids are fine," Hardy said.

Major problems have occurred when the pregnant women were "chronic, heavy abusers" of alcohol. The basis of the FAS studies has been "full-blown, heavy-duty non-recovering alcoholics," Hardy said. "And quite frankly, we know it happens," he said of alcohol-related birth defects.

The question many would-be mothers and mothers who drink may ask is "how much" alcohol can an expectant mother drink before causing damage to the child?

Hardy's answer is quite plain: "Don't take the chance."

Hardy would recommend that pregnant women, in particular, not to smoke tobacco.

"Those ladies who are having a little problem with alcohol — daily drinkers — can quit much easier by far than the tobacco smokers."

Tobacco smoking by pregnant women "stunts fetal growth," causes "premature labor," and leads to "small birth-weight babies," he said.

"There's no question. Tobacco is a big, big problem."

"We are just telling our patients now that...probably a woman could have a few drinks here and there and not have any problem," Hardy said.

"There is no evidence that a few drinks here or there creates a problem. But...we don't know. And that's why I tell my ladies: 'Fine, if you want to have a few drinks here or there. But my recommendation to you is 'don't.'"

Midge Erskine feeds fish to the pelican she is keeping at her home. She is hoping to have the bird moved to a zoo in Waco.

Injured pelican hitching ride from Midland to zoo in Waco

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A pelican who will never fly again needs a ride to Waco.

The big white bird was knocked out of commission when somebody shot him out of the air or while he was fishing in a lake.

"He was shot on Pleasure Lake near Stanton," said Midland bird rehabilitator Midge Erskine.

The bird's right wing was so damaged by the gunshot that he no longer can fly. And the Central Texas Zoo at Waco will take the bird if someone will drive or fly him there.

"The airlines don't fly to Waco (directly from Midland)," Mrs. Erskine said. She hopes some good-hearted soul driving or flying to Waco — possibly to pick up a son or daughter who is attending Baylor University — will give the bird a lift. Mrs. Erskine will provide a pet taxi to carry the bird.

The pelican, who has a hearty appetite, has been "eating us out of house and home," Mrs. Erskine said. "It's been hard to keep him in fish."

The American white pelican, a long-billed fish-eater that has about a 100-inch wingspan, has been recovering from the gunshot wound since mid-February when Midge and Woody Erskine took him in. "The wing was so damaged that it was non-repairable," Mrs. Erskine said.

The big bird flaps his wings as if preparing for a take-off run. His strong left wing extends and creates a strong blast. But the weakened right wing, barely extended and drooping, flaps feebly.

The Erskines tried to set the compound fracture, without success.

"We set it," Mrs. Erskine said, "but it didn't heal properly. He can't go back out into the wild, because he can't fly."

The pelican is a protected — but not an endangered — species. By law, the bird cannot legally be hunted.

Pelicans work in flocks to herd the fish into shallows, scoop them up into their pouches and swallow their meals whole.

"They are a very friendly bird, very gentle bird," Mrs. Erskine said.

Occasionally, they make grunts which sound "like a contented pig," noted Julia Frailey, a bird fancier.

Mrs. Erskine asked brothers Rob and George McAlpine of Midland to rescue the bird after she learned the pelican had been shot and was stranded on the frozen lake. "We just grabbed George's canoe," Rob McAlpine said, and the two brothers tied the canoe onto George McAlpine's car, and headed out to frozen-over Pleasure Lake about 30 miles east of Midland, where the two engineers windsurf in warmer weather.

Once in the lake, they broke ice and paddled toward the injured pelican, who was slipping and sliding.

"He looked pretty silly, running with webbed feet across the ice," Rob McAlpine recalled. "He had no traction at all. Birds are really graceful in flight," he said. "But birds are not graceful running, unless they are the chaparral."

The pelican, who was wintering in West Texas, finally made it to shore, as did the McAlpine brothers. And they wrapped the bird in a blanket and straightaway took him to the Erskines.

Whoever shot the bird didn't "mistake the pelican," which has distinctive features, for another bird, Rob McAlpine said. "It (the shooting) wasn't by accident. Maybe it was one of those things when they (hunters) had nothing else to shoot and had to shoot something."

He called Mrs. Erskine "a pretty impressive woman" who carved out a niche "to make the world a better place by saving some birds."

Blimp will be delivered month early

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A blimp designed to detect and track aircraft smuggling narcotics across the U.S.-Mexico border will be delivered a month ahead of schedule to the tiny West Texas town of Marfa, Congressman Lamar Smith announced Monday.

The blimp, called an aerostat, is about the size of a Boeing 747 and will be equipped with 3,500 pounds of radar equipment, according to the U.S. Customs Service.

The system, originally scheduled for delivery to Marfa in late June, will arrive on May 25. It will be inflated the first week of June and will be flown to an altitude of 10,000 feet in mid-July, Smith said.

"The support of this project by the West Texas communities has been the key to its success," Smith said. "I believe that to win the war on drugs we must first fight in our own backyards. These local victories are the basis for a national victory."

The white Kevlar blimp will be deployed 20 miles west of Marfa, a half-mile south of an isolated stretch of U.S. Highway 90. It will hover two or three miles above the desert plain, tethered to the earth by three cables.

From its position, the aerostat's downward-looking radar will be able to detect low-flying aircraft up to 260 miles away, according to Customs officials. They hope the aerostat will have the same power to deter wrongdoers as might a highway patrolman wielding a radar gun with a 260-mile range.

Smith has been a steady supporter of the blimp's deployment.

"This balloon is something I have been pushing for since arriving in Washington," the congressman said. "I am confident about its ability to be successful in slowing the drug traffic to Midland, San Angelo and West Texas."

Isolated cave dweller thinks it's still March

By RICHARD BENKE

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — An isolation researcher thinks she has two months to go in her underground hideaway when in fact there's only one week until she'll see her first daylight since mid-January.

Stefania Follini, a 27-year-old interior decorator from Italy, has been in a two-room, 200-square-foot Plexiglas house under the hills west of Carlsbad since Jan. 13, without sunlight or other ways of measuring time.

The only sounds she hears are those of her own voice, her guitar, or an occasional buzzer sounded by researchers in a computer-equipped trailer on the surface, 50 feet above her.

"The buzzer is just to get her attention," said Rita Franchini, interpreter and spokeswoman for Italian researchers who are sponsoring the experiment along with various U.S. universities and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

For about four months, the computer terminals have been Ms. Follini's only mode of communication as she simulates what it might be like for space travelers isolated for extended periods.

A team of researchers monitor her with three video cameras and microphones, and they type in occasional messages to her computer.

They also track her temperature, heart rate and blood pressure and test her blood composition for any hormonal and other chemical changes. Ms. Follini sends up samples daily by means of a canister on a string.

Questioned May 4, Ms. Follini said she thought it was March 7. However, at the request of The Associated Press, researcher Andrea Galvagno asked Ms. Follini to guess how far off her estimate was. She was not told the AP was asking or that anybody else was in the trailer.

She guessed she might be two weeks off.

Asked if she meant March 21, she replied in Italian on her keyboard. "About, but I'll celebrate spring a little later."

Galvagno said Ms. Follini will come out of the cave May 23 but will not be told until the afternoon of May 22.

Ms. Follini wasn't able to keep (Stephanie) Follini said she doesn't think there would be much difference between being isolated in space and being confined in a cave. She said it might be impossible to rescue her from space, but if the cave collapsed, it would be hard to save her here as well.

track of the time by her menstrual cycle because it stopped after she went underground, Galvagno said.

Galvagno and lead researcher Maurizio Montalbini have maintained a careful record of her sleeping patterns for the four months. For April 28-29, for example, she was awake 25 hours and slept 12; April 29-30 she spent 25 hours awake and four asleep; May 1 she was up 11½ hours, then slept 4½; and May 2, she was up 17 and slept seven.

Ms. Follini also has lost about 20 pounds. She passes her time reading, strumming, humming, writing messages on the computer and playing chess with herself.

For the first few months, Ms. Follini was "kind of grouchy," but in the last month she has become accustomed to her situation and is concentrating better, Ms. Franchini said.

Also, she said, Ms. Follini spent more time exploring the cave outside the enclosure in the early going but seldom heads out any more except to deliver her blood samples.

Ms. Follini said she doesn't think there would be much difference between being isolated in space and being confined in a cave.

She said it might be impossible to rescue her from space, but if the cave collapsed, it would be hard to save her here as well.

Still, she said, there is some comfort knowing her colleagues are just 50 feet above.

"I prefer to have my feet on the dear, old Earth — or under it," she said.

DEATHS

C. Craig Johnson

Services for C. Craig Johnson of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. Wednesday at Trinity Presbyterian Church with Dr. Al Moreau officiating and Rev. Braun, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, assisting. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He died early Monday morning at a Midland hospital.

He was born Feb. 11, 1930 in Dallas where he graduated from Sunset High School in 1947. In May of 1952 he graduated from Texas A&M University. He married Allene Robertson on June 14, 1952. He received his master's degree from Southern Methodist University in 1956. He joined the U.S. Air Force as a first lieutenant and served from 1952-56. In 1956 he moved to Midland and began work with Tidewater Oil Co. He also worked with MWJ Production Co. and Tri-Service Drilling Co. between 1965 and 1983. He was president of Tri-Service Drilling Co. in 1982-83. Since 1983 he had been an independent oil operator.

An avid golfer, he was a member and past president of Midland Country Club. He was a member and director of the Petroleum Club at the time of his death.

He was a member of Trinity Presbyterian Church.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Randall C. Johnson of Fort Worth; one daughter, Judy Johnson Grant of Midland; his parents, John Charles and Vesta Johnson of Dallas; one brother, Kenneth R. Johnson of Mesquite; three grandchildren; two nieces and two nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to a favorite charity.

I.N. Wilkinson

ABILENE — I.N. Wilkinson, 89, of Tuscola, father of June Wilkinson Cowden of Midland; died Monday at a local hospital.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Elliott-Hamill Funeral Home Chapel of Memories at 542 Hickory St. with Dr. Bill Bruster and Dr. David Hamblin officiating. Burial will be in Elmwood Memorial Park under the direction of Elliott-Hamill Funeral Home.

He was born Aug. 19, 1899, in Blooming Grove and moved to Jim Ned Valley at an early age.

He attended Stanton Military Academy in Stanton, Va., and the University of Texas. He was stationed in Waco during World War I where he was a captain in the U.S. Army.

He married Mildred Stroud on July 31, 1922.

He was an officer of Ovalo Bank in Ovalo and later president of the First National Bank of Winters. He retired in 1937 to run a farm and ranch near Tuscola where he resided until his death.

He was a 32nd degree Mason, a Shriner and a member of the First Baptist Church of Abilene.

Survivors include his wife of Tuscola; a sister, Thelma Foster of Sterling City; two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Memorials should be made to the West Texas Rehabilitation Center in Abilene or a favorite charity.

William Keel

PALACIOS — Services for former Midland police officer William Ben Keel, 65, of Palacios were Friday at 2 p.m. at the Palacios Funeral Home under the direction of Luman Mereness.

Interment at the Hartsville Cemetery near Wallis followed under the direction of Taylor Brothers Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday at Wagner General Hospital.

Born April 1, 1925 in the Luther community of Howard County, he was a member of the Point Comfort Church of Christ and the Masonic Lodge in Midland.

He was a 15-year member of the Midland Police Department and a 24-year resident of Palacios.

Survivors include his wife Ethylene Benton Keel of Palacios; one son, William Ben Keel Jr. of Katy; his mother, Flora Keel Bauguss of San Angelo; one brother, Don Virgil Keel of Granbury; and two grandchildren.

Annis Brazeal

Annis Dalton Brazeal, 80, of Midland died Monday afternoon in a local hospital.

Graveside services will be at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Oplin Cemetery in Oplin with Rev. Ben Walker officiating. Sizemore Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Brazeal was born July 7, 1908 in Whon and was the daughter of William Wilson and Ella Blanche Forehand. She was raised in Coleman County and later moved to San Angelo in 1933 where she was employed with Wallace Lab, Inc., until her retirement. She moved to Midland in 1980 and spent the last eight years pursuing her interests in sketching and painting.

She is survived by one daughter, Norma Autry-Gotcher of Midland; one sister, Maudie Keith of San Angelo; three grandchildren; five great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Minnie Dodson

Minnie "Nina" Dodson, 78, of Midland died Sunday at a local hospital.

Services will be 10 a.m. Wednesday at Sizemore Funeral Home Chapel of Memories.

Born Dec. 18, 1910 at Bonham, she was a homemaker and a member of the Assembly of God Church.

Survivors include four daughters, Lola Moore of Midland, Barbara Price of Millsap, Loretta Wells of Maggie Valley, N.C., and Phyllis Mattox of Bangs; two sons, Jim Myers of Fallon, Nev. and Charles Myers of Manteca, Calif.; 15 grandchildren and 19 great-grandchildren.

Cotton farmers waiting for rain

By WENDY E. LANE

LUBBOCK (AP) — Mid-May is the High Plains' optimal time for planting cotton, but a lack of adequate planting moisture is forcing many area farmers to watch the skies and wait.

The lack of rain ultimately could jeopardize the area's economic mainstay, with more than half the three million acres across the High Plains to be planted with cotton extremely dry, say crop experts.

Plains Cotton Growers Inc., a trade association of cotton producers in the 25-county area surrounding Lubbock, reported that as of last week, 60 percent or 1.8 million acres of the area's cotton acreage is classified as powder dry. That means that dryland farmers, those who do not irrigate their land, are unable to plant until rain comes.

About 60 percent of High Plains cotton acreage is not irrigated.

The best time for planting cotton in the area is early May through early June. However, the usual spring rains on which farmers depend to nourish seeds have yet to come this year, and a dry fall and winter failed to replenish the subsoil moisture needed for the summer growing season, said James Supak, Texas A&M extension service agronomist.

The city of Lubbock has gotten 2.4 inches of rain so far this year, compared with normal rainfall of 4.02 inches, said Bill Alexander of the National Weather Service, and surrounding areas are similarly dry. Although sporadic showers fell across the area over the weekend, they did little to help, Supak said.

"Overall, it hasn't set the stage for cotton planting," he said. "So far the rains have been very scattered and the amounts haven't been enough."

Dryland farmers are faced with the possibility of a so-called dry planting, which means planting seed without adequate moisture for germination, according to Supak.

"The risk is that a small rain would come and be enough for (the seed) to germinate, but not enough to establish a stand and then you would have to start over," he said.

Even if the prospects for a dryland crop seem bleak, farmers must plant to receive a price deficiency payment from the government, said Don Johnson, executive director of Plains Cotton Growers.

However, if a farmer dry-plants but the crop doesn't sprout after a preset cutoff date, usually in early June, he or she can plant another crop, said Alan Mackey of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service office in Lubbock.

"Once we get past the cutoff date, people are going to have to make a choice to decide to go with cotton or something else," said Supak.

He said soybeans are a possibility for growers north of Lubbock, but choices are limited to the south.

Crop experts say the coming two weeks will determine what kind of crop results from the parched soil in a region that accounts for one quarter of the nation's cotton.

Houston school mourns deaths of two seniors

HOUSTON (AP) — Students at Waltrip High School are mourning the deaths of two seniors who drowned over the weekend in Galveston — shortly after beach life-guards went off duty.

"This is a very sad day for the school and for the students," said Houston Independent School District spokeswoman Ria Griffin. "Waltrip lost two very fine young men."

Edward Twigg and Derrick Thomas, both 17 and varsity football players, drowned off Stewart Beach sometime after 6 p.m. Sunday.

Michael Stribling, a friend, said he and the victims had been swimming 75 yards offshore for about 45 minutes when they got tired and decided to swim back to the beach.

"He saw the other two struggling, saw a wave come and they just disappeared," said Beach Patrol Lt. Vic Maceo.

Four Beach Patrol members searched for an hour, Maceo said. Lifeguards at Stewart Beach are on duty from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on weekends.

Officials recovered Thomas' body from the surf near R.A. Apfel Park about a mile from Stewart Beach on Monday morning. Another body believed to be Twigg's washed up this morning, a Galveston County sheriff's spokeswoman said.

Sheriff's officials who interviewed Stribling and several other friends determined that no alcohol was involved, Maceo said.

Thomas was a varsity running back and Twigg played split end. Both were to have graduated June 10.

"These were fabulous young men, outstanding young gentlemen," Waltrip football coach Bill Barron said. "These two didn't know anything but 'yes, sir' and 'no, ma'am.' They were very special individuals."

Thomas' mother is a teacher at Waltrip and was his homeroom teacher.

Jury selection begins in suit filed by Wagner & Brown

From Staff Reports

Jury selection was to begin today in a multi-million-dollar federal lawsuit filed by a Midland-based exploration and production company against Dow Chemical Co. of Midland, Mich., and Dowell Schlumberger Inc. of Houston.

In the suit, Wagner & Brown is asking for $5 million in actual damages, accusing Dow and DSI of violating the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act.

Wagner & Brown claim that DSI and Dow had "cheated" the firm on oil-well services by doing inferior work and using inferior materials in acidizing, fracturing and cementing work on Wagner & Brown wells.

Dow and DSI's work resulted in lost profits due to "diminished production and producing capabilities" of the wells, claims Wagner & Brown, which owns and operates working interests in oil and gas wells in Texas and Oklahoma.

The company maintains that Dow and DSI used "junk" or "blowdown" cement in cementing projects and used "waste" acid or provided a "lesser amount" of sand, acid, gelling agents and other chemicals and additives in acidizing and fracturing projects.

Further, Wagner & Brown claim that Dow and DSI used a "systematic" plan designed "to cheat Wagner & Brown and every other customer with which Dow and DSI did business" and that the plan was "encouraged and sponsored" by the Dow and DSI management.

In 1984, Dowell became jointly owned by Dow and Schlumberger and changed its name to Dowell Schlumberger Inc. (DSI), according to court records.

The lawsuit covers the 1978-86 period, and the trial over the dispute is being held in U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's court.

Truck collides with tractor-trailer

GREENWOOD, La. (AP) — A refrigerator truck and a tractor-trailer loaded with scrap metal slammed together at the busiest intersection in Greenwood, killing one driver and pinning his passenger in the wreckage.

Willie A. Myers, 47, of Gladewater, Texas, told investigators that the refrigerator truck ran a red light at the intersection of U.S. Highways 79 and 80 and hit his truck, said the Caddo Parish Sheriff's Office.

Franklin Leon Williams Jr., 21, of Floydada, Texas, was killed, said investigator Ron Holder, a spokesman for the sheriff's office.

He said it took more than an hour for rescue workers to free Bobby Alan Marley, 42, from the wreckage of the refrigerator truck. He was taken by helicopter to Schumpert Medical Center, where he was reported in stable condition today.

"Marley is stating that he was driving his truck and the other guy was the passenger. But according to our coroner, there's no way. The coroner says he removed the dead man from behind the steering wheel," said Holder.

The hospital gave Marley's home town as Floydada, but Holder said his driver's license showed an address in Texico, N.M.

Myers had a gash across his forehead and was taken by ambulance to the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Shreveport.

Crime Stoppers seeks help solving aggravated robbery

Odessa Crime Stoppers is asking for the public's help to solve the aggravated robbery which occurred at the Kerr-McGee service station, 1701 S. Grant, in Odessa.

At 10 p.m. on March 20, just before closing time, two men entered the store while a third man pumped fuel into a blue Ford LTD. The suspects in the store looked around until other customers left.

When the attendant asked one of the suspects for payment, he removed a nickel-plated derringer from his U.S. Army jacket and pointed it at the attendant and demanded cash. The suspects then left the store and fled in the LTD, and were last seen headed east on the Interstate 20 service road.

The suspects were described as Hispanic men. One was about 34 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing 180 pounds with brown hair. He wore a green Army jacket and blue jeans. An other suspect was about 21, 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing 145 pounds with brown hair. He was wearing a flannel shirt with blue jeans. The last suspect, who drove the getaway car, was described as 6 feet tall weighing about 250 pounds. He was seen wearing a dark blue long-sleeved shirt.

Information that leads to the arrest of the suspects could be worth up to $1,000 cash this week only. Crime Stoppers also pays cash rewards for information that leads to the arrest of other felony suspects. Callers can remain anonymous.

Cash rewards are also paid for the recovery of stolen property and narcotics.

In Odessa, Crime Stoppers can be reached at 333-TIPS, and in Midland at 694-TIPS.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Volunteer your time and utilize your talents in a special way. The Volunteer Center will show you how. Here are just a few of the opportunities currently open:

■ There is a desperate need for volunteers to assist with the delivery of meals to the homebound. Deliveries are made daily between 10:30 and 11:30 a.m. Commitments of once a month to several times a month are most welcomed. Do consider helping this vital community service.

■ Join your efforts to those of Barbara Bush and teach others to read. A daytime training for a literacy program is scheduled for May 25. Volunteer tutors meet twice weekly for one-hour sessions at a time and place convenient to tutor and client.

■ See your words in print or hear them on the air. A volunteer is needed to assist with a media blitz of press releases and public service announcements prior to a local agency's 20th anniversary celebration. This short term project requiring four hours a week through late June. Hours are flexible and this project may be done at home. Good communication skills are preferred.

■ Crime victims have special needs. You can help by providing caring, emotional support through a victim's assistance program. Volunteers are asked to commit to 10 hours per month. An orientation and basic training will begin June 1.

■ Help volunteers volunteer. If you like talking to people and enjoy promoting volunteerism, this is a job for you. Take calls for a four hour shift once a week and assist callers in locating the perfect volunteer assignment. Training is provided.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center at 697-8781.

Art Van Dorn, commander of the Midland-based Permian Basin Drug Task Force, said his investigators likely will be alerted when air smugglers are detected.

"They (Customs) are going to call whoever they feel is needed to assist them," Van Dorn said. "Customs has no one assigned to our area, so they will have to call somebody, and it will probably be the task force."

Van Dorn said he is "very hopeful" the aerostat will slow down the flow of cocaine, heroin and marijuana from Mexico to Texas.

The Marfa aerostat will be the third along the U.S.-Mexico border. The others are at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and Deming, N.M. Three others are scheduled to be deployed, two in south Texas and one at Yuma, Ariz.

Once the entire border is covered by aerostats looking deep into Mexico, Customs officials believe smugglers will have to abandon aircraft and rely instead on risky ground transportation.

The helium-filled blimp and its ground base cost between $12 million and $18 million to build, with maintenance costs expected to be between $2 million and $3 million a year, Customs officials say.

A crew of about 35 General Electric engineers will staff the aerostat in the first few months, fine tuning the blimp and its radar. Later, a permanent crew of about 15 GE employees, supervised by Customs, will monitor the aerostat and feed information to a command center at March Air Force Base in Riverside, Calif.

A community celebration and dedication ceremony currently is being scheduled for September in Marfa, Smith said.

Terrain hindering efforts to fight forest fire

Rugged terrain was hindering efforts today to fight a fire that has burned about 1,100 acres in the Lincoln National Forest in southern New Mexico.

Fire information officer Bob Valen said 30 firefighters were fighting the blaze, which burned into Big Canyon on the Guadalupe Escarpment.

He said the blaze was spotted Friday in the Guadalupe Mountains National Park in Texas, where it burned about 100 acres before crossing into New Mexico.

Valen said the fire, dubbed the Camp Fire, is believed to have been started by lightning.

Congressmen observe colonias' destitute conditions

EAGLE PASS (AP) — Four congressmen visiting a colonia on the Texas-Mexico border tiptoed through mud puddles and observed an open pit where the neighborhood sewage is dumped.

The congressmen, who trekked through the poor neighborhood Monday, also took a sick infant to a doctor because her family could not afford medical treatment.

About 200 families live in the 45-acre area that has dirt roads, few street lights and no gas or sewer service. The neighborhood is among 600 colonias, clusters of unincorporated subdivisions outside city limits that lack such amenities as running water, electricity or sewage systems.

More than 150,000 people live in colonias along the Texas-Mexico border, according to the U.S. House Select Committee on Hunger. The committee is looking into problems at Texas colonias.

Four committee members, who also heard testimony Monday from community leaders about the colonia problems, toured a Kickapoo Indian neighborhood and another colonia called "Las Quintas Fronterizas," one of about 32 such areas outside the city limits.

The congressional panel's hearing comes as the Texas Legislature considers a bill that would provide $500,000 over a five-year period for infrastructure and road construction in the state's colonias.

During a visit to one of the homes, Texas congressman Mickey Leland, chairman of the committee, carried a sick 10-month-old girl out of a dilapidated shack and took her to a hospital after her mother said she could not afford treatment for an inner ear infection.

"It hurts me very much to see something like this," the Houston Democrat said. "A baby shouldn't have to suffer because her parents can't pay a bill."

The little girl, Maria Esther Hernandez, and her mother, Zenobia Hernandez, were taken to the United Medical Center's clinic where the child was given medication for the ear infection. The infant already had contracted and recovered from measles without seeing a doctor.

George Kypuros, administrator of the non-profit clinic, said the child's mother was confused a month ago when she asked about the cost for the treatment.

The woman left the clinic after she was told her bill would be about $30, including a past-due charge of $15, Kypuros said. The woman thought she had to pay the bill before the girl could be treated and she decided not to take her to a doctor, he said.

"It's not that she was denied an appointment, but if people leave with the impression that they can't be seen without paying, that's maddening," Kypuros said. "We try to collect as much as we can, but we won't turn people away."

The child's lack of medical attention underscores one of the many problems colonia residents face.

Most residents are unskilled, uneducated, seasonally employed migrant workers with no health insurance and who make an average annual income of about $6,000 per family.

Also, many infants die at birth or at a young age because their families cannot afford medical treatment and are forced to seek cheaper, but many times inferior, medical care across the border in Mexico, Leland said.

Also contributing to the problem are students living in colonias who drop out of high school because they lack self-esteem and are forced to work to help the family, said committee member Solomon Ortiz, a Democrat from Corpus Christi.

"I want my son, Ricardo, to do good in school so that he can get a better job and not have to live like we do," said Anna Maria Carlos, whose three-bedroom cement home was visited by the congressmen.

Maverick County officials have said that tight budgets have restricted them from providing basic services for the colonias.

"It is so unnecessary that conditions should continue to be as they are," the Rev. Bernard Doyon, pastor of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, told the committee during an afternoon hearing. "In a country of so much wealth and so much opportunity, our people — particularly so many children — are forced to live in such dire conditions and deprivations."

"It is unjust, it is appalling and it is a disgraceful waste of human potential," Doyon said.

The Democratic congressmen, also including Albert Bustamante from San Antonio and Eni Faleomavaega from American Samoa, said they hoped to bring the colonia problems to the attention of Health and Human Services Secretary Jack Kemp and other cabinet members.

Committee members also were told that stricter laws should be required to force developers to improve their properties before land is sold.

"The select committee on hunger has traveled to many countries throughout the world where the poor go hungry, the sick go untreated and the children have dismal prospects for the future," Leland said.

"For these people, the United States is a symbol of hope and prosperity. It seems that here in Eagle Pass and other areas along the United States-Mexico border, the destitution and oppression found in the Third World permeates our country and has taken root in the colonias."

To all customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company:

Public Notice

On March 14, 1989, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas an application which proposes to revise its Toll Restriction Tariff in Section 21 of the General Exchange Tariff. The Commission received the application as Docket No. 8700.

The application proposes to reduce the monthly rate for Toll Restriction residence service from the current $15 a month to $5 a month per residence access line. This proposed application will affect approximately 2,487 residence customers who presently subscribe to toll restriction. It is estimated that the proposed rate schedule will reduce the Company's annual revenues from this service by approximately $298,000, which is less than one percent of the Company's total intrastate revenues. If the application is approved, the effective date of the rate reduction will be set according to the Commission's Order.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A deadline to file motions to intervene has been set for May 30, 1989. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas at 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Information Office at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

Texas lawmakers raising funds for Wright's defense

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. House Speaker Jim Wright's chances of surviving recent allegations of unethical conduct are "at worst, 50-50," said a Democratic Texas Congressman in town to raise money for the speaker's legal defense.

"I think the odds are reasonably good. They're at least plausible," said U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson of Lufkin. But, Wilson added, Wright's "political situation has seriously eroded all over the country. If we can only hold the political erosion until we get our day in court, I think that we will prevail."

"And if we can pay the bills," Wilson added. He said Wright has spent $600,000 the past 12 months defending himself against charges he violated U.S. House rules of conduct.

"We're about broke. That's why we're here," Wilson said Monday. Texas Democratic Congressmen Martin Frost of Dallas, J.J. "Jake" Pickle of Austin and Jack Brooks of Beaumont were also at the fund-raiser.

Wright, D-Fort Worth, has been accused of 69 instances of House rules violations.

Wilson's comments followed a news conference Monday by Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Kent Hance about published reports that he urged the House Ethics Committee to investigate a Texas oil well deal involving Wright.

The House panel is examining a transaction that turned a quick profit for Wright's blind trust.

Hance, an outspoken Democrat-turned-Republican who has called for Wright's resignation, said he knew nothing about the oil deal until the Ethics Committee announced April 17 that it was under investigation.

Wilson said, "It defies belief that was not instigated by the Railroad Commission. I'm not saying it was Hance, but somebody did it. Somebody who wanted to hurt Jim Wright. It was a cheap shot."

Billionaire won't try to delay adoption of school textbooks

AUSTIN (AP) — A lobbying effort seeking to delay adoption of a new science book for Texas elementary school students has been abandoned by billionaire Robert Bass of Fort Worth because of bad publicity and growing legislative opposition.

Bass had sought the delay so that his publishing company could be in the competition for the right to sell elementary science books to Texas schools.

A compromise reached Monday by lobbyists for both sides calls for Bass to give up his campaign to block the scheduled adoption of both math and science texts at the same time for the 1991-92 school year.

Merrill Publishing Co., owned by Bass, had sought the change because the company was not ready with its science book. Critics charged that Bass stood to make millions of dollars if he got the delay, but Texas elementary students would have been left with outdated science books for an extra year or two.

"The schoolchildren of Texas have won," said Rep. Bill Hammond, R-Dallas, who opposed the Bass effort.

Both sides spent between $300,000 and $500,000 on the campaign, a knowledgeable lobbyist estimated.

Intentional transmission of AIDS virus could be criminal offense

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A comprehensive AIDS package won lopsided Texas Senate approval Monday with amendments to establish a criminal offense for intentional transmission of the deadly virus and to order tests of prostitutes and drug users.

As approved on a 25-3 vote, Senate Bill 959 also would allow courts to order confidential tests of those suspected of transmitting AIDS to law enforcement and emergency workers and would allow court-ordered sanctions for AIDS carriers who continued to engage in prostitution and intravenous drug use.

But the bill, which also would make it illegal to discriminate against an AIDS victim, drew praise from the chairwoman of an AIDS interim task force as a comprehensive answer to the public health threat.

"This is sound public health legislation," said the Rev. Chris Steele, an Episcopal priest from Houston who also served as Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's spokesman on AIDS. "If this is any indication of the direction our state is going to take, we just might have a chance of getting out from behind the eight ball," she said.

The bill stresses education, which she said "is our only vaccine against this disease." In stressing the criminal aspects of homosexual behavior and drug use, she said, the House bill passed this past week might prevent those groups with the greatest risk of infection from seeking AIDS counseling or education.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, the bill's sponsor, said education is needed because "there is so much misinformation and myth going around."

The bill directs the Texas Department of Health to develop and promote education programs and to assist nonprofit community organizations in efforts to expand health, education and social support services.

A budget conference committee has left $18.3 million for AIDS programs in the spending plan for the next two years, up from $3.5 million in 1988-89.

The Texas Education Agency also would make available an AIDS curriculum guide, using the most current information from the U.S. Public Health Service, as an option for school districts.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said his amendments would make it a third degree felony, comparable to attempted murder, to intentionally transmit the AIDS virus and to allow courts to require AIDS tests of persons convicted of prostitution and drug use.

While he supported the "more humane" aspects of the bill, Parker said it needed the criminal aspect. "It inhibits those who would clearly willfully engage in conduct knowing that it would transmit the virus to somebody," he said.

Attorney says client won't follow 'idiot' ringleaders any longer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man who exerts "a not very benign influence" over people is an alleged ringleader of a group of Texans arrested in a hotel room stocked with high-powered weapons, an attorney claims.

The attorney, who represents one of six Texans now awaiting trial on a series of misdemeanor weapons charges, told a judge Monday that his client quit his job to follow the group's alleged leaders but now the man "is not going to follow those idiots anymore."

In seeking John Barnhart's release from jail pending trial, his attorney, James Maloney, said a Rowlett couple were the leaders of a "hierarchy" of the group of Texans, who were believed to have been planning to defect at the time of their arrests.

Maloney said Richard W. McEwen and his wife, Billie Joy McEwen, decided for their own strange reason that something done by the United States caused them to go to Paraguay or the Soviet Union.

McEwen, 40, exerts a "not very benign influence" on people, Maloney said.

McEwen's attorney told District of Columbia Superior Court Judge Mildred Edwards that McEwen is afraid for his safety and chooses to remain in the Washington jail, rather than fight his $50,000 bond.

McEwen "feels safer in the D.C. jail right now," said his attorney, Ferris Bond. After Monday's hearing, Bond refused to disclose the source of McEwen's fears. He said McEwen is being held in administrative custody, segregated from other inmates.

Richard W. McEwen and his wife, Billie Joy McEwen decided for their own strange reason that something done by the United States caused them to go to Paraguay or the Soviet Union.

— James Maloney, attorney

Bond also said McEwen was exposed to Agent Orange while serving in Vietnam and requires a daily shower to manage his problems from the potent defoliant.

The attorney for Mrs. McEwen also did not contest her bond and asked to have her placed in protective custody.

Barnhart and the McEwens are among five Texans jailed on misdemeanor weapons charges stemming from a raid on the EconoLodge Motel in which a cache of weapons was seized, including a grenade launcher and machine guns. A sixth Texan, Reuben Anzaldúa, faces misdemeanor weapons charges stemming from his arrest by the Secret Service a day earlier outside the Soviet Consulate. Each is jailed on $50,000 bond.

A local man also arrested at the EconoLodge has been released to the custody of his father.

A search warrant indicates members of the group were planning to defect. Also, officials of the Paraguayan Embassy are investigating whether the group attempted to sell arms to an embassy official.

Officials have said Mrs. McEwen is a licensed arms dealer, and an attorney for Anzaldúa indicated at the hearing that his client also has "vari-

STATE IN BRIEF

Senate delays action on workers' comp bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate has delayed acting on an overhaul of the state workers' compensation system in order to give opposing sides "a last ditch effort" to settle their differences, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said.

Hobby said Monday the Senate will consider workers' comp legislation Wednesday. The lieutenant governor said he was concerned over whether a compromise could be forged.

A divided Senate subcommittee last week approved a workers' comp bill on a 4-3 vote. Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, one of those who opposed the measure, said he would present a substitute bill.

The House has already passed its version of changing the system in which workers are compensated for job-related injuries. The House bill has widespread business support.

Business interests claim high jury awards have driven up the price of employer-paid workers' comp premiums. But labor and lawyers who represent injured workers say if employers maintained safer working conditions then their premiums would go down.

The Senate subcommittee plan has tougher job-safety guidelines and makes it more difficult for a disputed claim to go to a jury trial. The House bill does away with jury trials in those disputes.

Labor and trial lawyers oppose both the House bill and Senate subcommittee bill, saying it favors business too much.

Ewings won't be in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Southfork just won't be the same this summer.

The Ewings won't be coming to Dallas for the summer, the first summer without the Ewings in Dallas since 1977, a spokesman for the television series says.

"They're not planning to come down at the usual time to shoot the first 12 episodes," spokesman David Stapf said. "No decision has been made for the entire year."

The city could lose as much as $5 million if Dallas stays away from the city for the entire season, according to Joe Pope, whose Dallas-based Film Productions Services company has provided crews and equipment for the series' annual visit to Dallas.

"From my own company, we bill more than $1 million every year," Pope said. "It means a lot. It's like being told you're not going to see a good friend again."

"It's more than economic, it's emotional," Pope said. "Up until last week, I was under the assumption they were coming in. They couldn't justify it (the expense) anymore."

Escaped inmate surrenders

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A convicted murderer who escaped last month after beating a female prison employee and fleeing in a stolen pickup truck is back in custody at the Texas Department of Corrections, authorities said.

John Newton Maddox, 49, a trusty working as a wrecker driver while serving a life sentence out of Liberty County, called prison officials from Houston Saturday and arranged to turn himself in, TDC spokesman Charles Brown said Monday.

The truck he is accused of stealing was recovered in the Sam Houston National Forest near Plantersville, he said.

Maddox — disgruntled because he couldn't get a furlough — pulled a knife and overcame his supervisor April 28 after picking up a disabled truck in a TDC wrecker, officials said.

Lisa Cummings was able to crawl onto the truck's bed and Maddox reportedly tried to knock her off by slamming the brakes, causing the truck to flip over.

Two men stopped along Highway 30 near Huntsville after the accident and Maddox stole their pickup truck and fled, prison officials said.

Voters abolish government

GALVESTON (AP) — A vote by Crystal Beach residents to abolish its 20-person city government was accepted by Galveston County Commissioners, who also agreed to keep a garbage collection site in the town open temporarily.

Harvey Bazeman, Commissioners Court legal adviser, said commissioners voted Monday to continue a lease agreement with a waste hauler on a week-to-week basis until residents can arrange for private sanitation service.

The county does not provide trash service, Bazeman said.

U.S. asks Latin lands to withdraw diplomats from Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The United States is asking Latin American nations to withdraw their ambassadors from Panama in an bid to force the ouster of military strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, diplomatic sources say.

The sources, who spoke Monday on condition of anonymity, said Washington is circulating a petition among the region's leaders in anticipation of an Organization of American States meeting on Wednesday in Washington.

A diplomatic withdrawal would be part of a general condemnation of the Noriega-backed government, which nullified the May 7 presidential elections.

International observers have said that opposition candidate Guillermo Endara clearly won the election. Endara and one of his running mates were beaten with metal pipes by Noriega supporters last Wednesday. The United States, Venezuela and Mexico have already recalled their envoys and one diplomatic source said Venezuela would ask the OAS to demand that the Panamanian government immediately recognize the results of the elections.

The opposition is demanding it be declared the winner. Government candidates have accepted the decision of the Electoral Tribunal and have refused to make any other public comments.

The OAS meeting was called to discuss the case and the opposition has called for a general strike in Panama to coincide with the gathering.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Davis left Panama on Monday after accusing Noriega of ordering his men to try to kill one of the opposition leaders, second vice presidential candidate Guillermo Ford, in Wednesday's assault.

"I leave Panama with a heavy heart, but with great hope," Davis told a news conference before leaving from Howard Air Base, a U.S. military installation near Panama City. "The Panamanian people have repeatedly been victimized by Noriega's brutality. Yet they are heartened by their election victory."

Davis said the attack on Ford during an opposition march "was meant to kill." Endara has been hospitalized with head injuries but was to be released today.

Ford called on Monday for the ouster of Noriega and said any talks with the military over a possible solution must center "on a definite point of departure, date and time and flight number" for Panama's de facto ruler.

He also said a solution must include recognition of the opposition's electoral victory.

Ford said he agreed that the attack on him was an assassination attempt, but that he did not know whether Noriega had ordered it, as Davis asserted.

WORLD

AP/Pat Lyons

Argentina's president-elect built working-class rapport

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Not a necktie was in sight at a street celebration of Carlos Menem's victory and for good reason — the charismatic president-elect has his roots and support in the working class.

Menem's rapport with factory workers, gauchos — cowboys from Argentina's rich pampas — and others helped return the Peronist Party to power 13 years after it was overthrown in a military coup.

Truck driver Alejandro Galindez, 27, who joined thousands of other Peronists in the streets after Menem's election on Sunday, said the victory "is a return to our roots."

Menem defeated Eduardo Angeloz of the governing party by 7.8 million to 6.1 million votes, or 47.3 percent to 36.9 percent.

The Peronist Party also won 67 seats in the Chamber of Deputies to give it 127 overall, or exactly one half; and one Senate seat to give it 23, also exactly a half. The party controls 17 of 22 provincial governorships.

Cabinet ministers facing a difficult transition until Menem takes office on Dec. 10 offered their resignations to President Raul Alfonsín today. Labor Minister Ideler Tonelli told Radio Continental.

"We thought it was opportune," Tonelli said.

Alfonsín was expected to reject the resignations, however.

In his victory speech, Menem called for "national unity" and urged "the forces of production, businessmen, farmers, workers, everyone," to put aside differences and "set the country in motion."

He also pledged an end to "the Argentina where some live well doing nothing and others live badly although they work all day."

The 58-year-old governor of tiny La Rioja province faces severe economic problems when he takes over from the Radical Civic Union.

Until then, the Radicals and Peronists must work together. But that will be difficult given their conflicting views.

Alfonsín has tried to balance the budget, which is deep in the red, by selling off state businesses. Menem's preference is to make the companies more efficient but keep them in state hands.

The Peronists have demanded increases in both the minimum wage and federal aid to the provinces. Alfonsín has tried to hold the line on each.

Menem specifically has said he will not press Alfonsín to step down early, but he's eager to take power. In Catamarca Province, where he attended a rally on Monday, he said, "We don't want to keep administering the crisis. We want to confront it and smash it."

Since February, the austral has been devalued by 84 percent, inflation and interest rates soared to near record levels, wages shrunk. Central Bank reserves dried up and workers were laid off.

The foreign debt stands at $59 billion.

'Priestess,' cult suspects indicted; Bail bids denied

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The alleged high priestess of a sacrificial cult and four members of the bizarre gang face up to a year in prison awaiting trial on murder and other charges stemming from the death of their "godfather."

Indictments were returned Monday against Sara Aldrete Villarreal, Omar Francisco Orea Ochoa, Alvaro de Leon Valdez, Juan Carlos Fragosos and Jorge Montes.

Judge Bernardo Tirado Gutierrez of the Mexico City 58th Penal Court refused to allow bail because of the severity of the charges. Murder carries a 50-year sentence in Mexico. Under Mexican law, the court now has a year to hand down a judgment in the case.

All five suspects were charged with homicide, two counts of criminal association, coverup and resisting arrest.

In addition, de Leon Valdez was charged with illegal use of firearms and wounding a law enforcement officer and Orea Ochoa was charged with violations of burial laws.

The charges stem from the death of the cult's godfather, Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, not from the ritual slayings. Authorities say Constanzo and Ms. Aldrete, 24, were the leaders of the cult.

Authorities say de Leon Valdez turned a submachinegun on Constanzo, a 26-year-old Cuban-born American, and his right-hand man, Martin Quintana Rodriguez, on May 6 when police began closing in on the Mexico City apartment where they were hiding out.

According to police and prosecutors, Constanzo ordered his own death and Aldrete urged on de Leon Valdez when he hesitated. She denies the charges.

Seoul blasts U.S. meddling in its affairs

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government warned Washington today not to comment on its internal affairs and said remarks by a U.S. official on the mysterious death of a radical student could harm relations.

The warning came as the Seoul government put riot police on nationwide alert to prepare for possible protests this week over the student's death and the ninth anniversary of a bloody 1980 anti-government uprising.

About 300 radical students calling for the overthrow of President Roh Tae-woo battled riot police with firebombs and rocks at Sungkyunkwan University in Seoul. Troopers with interlocked shields blocked the school's main gate to stop students from marching into the streets.

A Foreign Ministry official, who declined to be named in keeping with official practice, said a U.S. State Department official's comments on the death of radical student Lee Chol-kyu were unacceptable and incorrect.

"Unnecessary (American) comment on internal matters, particularly on a situation in which it does not know the truth, would not be of help to the U.S.-Korea alliance or friendly relations," the official said.

South Korean dissidents claim Lee was tortured and killed by police and reject a government autopsy report that he drowned. The body was found May 10 in a reservoir outside the southeastern city of Kwangju.

Crusading Soviet prosecutors in trouble with high court

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY

MOSCOW (AP) — Less than two months ago, a criminal investigator turned an anti-corruption crusade into political magic and won a parliamentary seat with 86 percent of the vote.

Today, Telman Gdlyan is in trouble with the Supreme Court for jailing a scientist who died in prison. And the country's highest executive power said over the weekend he is interfering with an investigation of alleged abuses of power.

Gdlyan

But Gdlyan's fellow investigator, Nikolai Ivanov, has charged the two are running into trouble because their investigations are making high-ranking officials squirm.

The controversy gripping Gdlyan is a lesson both in rapidly changing Soviet electoral politics and in President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's effort to make his country one ruled by law rather than personal dictate.

Gdlyan, a 49-year-old senior investigator with the prosecutor general's office, last year exposed a corruption scandal in the republic of Uzbekistan that brought him national attention.

An article on the scandal, written by Gdlyan and Ivanov and published in Ogoniok magazine, caused uproar at the Communist Party conference in June and turned the two into national heroes.

Several months later, a criminal investigation began and led to the conviction of Yuri Churbanov, the son-in-law of former Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, on charges of accepting bribes. He was sentenced to 12 years in a labor camp.

Gdlyan capitalized on his popularity in March congressional elections — the country's first multi-candidate nationwide ballot in 70 years. Voters in Moscow's Tushinsky district swept him into office with 86.6 percent of the vote.

The balloting was marked by a strong anti-establishment streak. Boris Yeltsin's reformist campaign garnered 89 percent of Moscow ballots, and disgruntled voters in Leningrad and Kiev voted against government and party leaders.

But in a statement published last Saturday the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the country's highest executive body, came down hard on Ivanov and Gdlyan.

The statement in the Communist Party daily Pravda accused the prosecutors of making provocative statements in meetings and in the media about alleged violations of law by Soviet leaders.

It said the investigators' statements were designed to "disorient people and interfere in the work of a specially formed commission...to verify the numerous complaints of citizens about abuses by Gdlyan and Ivanov in carrying out their investigative work."

On May 7, the Supreme Court said it found systematic abuse in Gdlyan's handling of an investigation into prominent Estonian scientist, I.A. Hint. The 67-year-old scientist, who won the prestigious Lenin Prize, was convicted in 1983 of bribery, theft, and smuggling. He suffered from a cardiovascular illness and died in jail.

Gorbachev, a lawyer by training, has encouraged the Soviet courts to take on controversial issues that in the past they rarely touched. He has demanded the legal system be strengthened to prevent a return to rule by personal dictate, characterized by the leadership of Josef Stalin.

The Supreme Court overturned Hint's conviction and questioned whether Gdlyan should keep his job based upon charges he refused to hear Hint's arguments and denied him access to a lawyer. When Hint's wife died shortly after his arrest, the scientist was not told.

The court charged Gdlyan showed "an anti-humanistic character alien to Soviet criminal procedure and a cruel relation to the accused."

In an April 29 issue of the popular weekly, Arguments and Facts, Ivanov said high-ranking opponents were responsible for attacks on them.

"Efforts to shield participants, compromise investigators, endless 'verifications'...are links of the same chain, having little to do with the idea of creating a government based on law," he said.

Code names usually don't mean anything

By RUTH SINAI

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Nimrod Dancer," the name of the operation that dispatched 2,000 U.S. combat troops to Panama, is the latest in a long list of fanciful, hokey and sometimes incongruous codes used by the Pentagon to describe its missions.

"Nimrod Dancer — didn't he come in seventh at the Kentucky Derby?" a Pentagon official was overheard to wonder when word of the operation's code name was announced Thursday.

Nimrod, the Bible tells us, was a mighty hunter. Was he a dancer too? "No," said Lt. Kathy Woods, a Pentagon spokeswoman. "These names aren't supposed to mean anything. They have absolutely no significance on the face of it."

To make sure the names are totally random, a computer picks them, Woods said.

But once chosen, the combination of words, the number of their syllables or some other pattern does have significance for "those who need to know," said Lt. Cmdr. Jim Kudla.

Or, as explained in The Encyclopedia of Code Names of World War II, codes serve "as a type of mental shorthand for those in the know and to obfuscate the issue for those not in the know."

Winston Churchill, the master tactician who led the Allies to victory over Nazi Germany in World War II, may not have approved of the way codes are selected nowadays. In instructions to Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay in August 1943, Churchill wrote:

"Operations ought not to be described by code words which imply a boastful and overconfident sentiment...They ought not to be names of frivolous characters. They should not be ordinary words. Names of living people should be avoided."

The Pentagon also avoids the names of living people for operation names. But what would Churchill have made of Operation "Urgent Fury," the code name for the U.S. invasion of the Caribbean island of Grenada in 1983 to counter a Cuban-backed coup and evacuate American medical students?

While names like "Urgent Fury" may sound inspirational, their aim is purely operational. "You have to have a code name to use in communications during an operation," said Barry Blechman, an expert on defense issues at the School of Advanced International Studies of Johns Hopkins University.

Major operations have different code names for each component, he said. "One must be precise. If you use the wrong name, you could land a unit at the wrong place or bomb the wrong target."

Before computers got in on the act, some operation names actually had meaning the public at large could understand.

For instance, an operation mounted in 1968 by the 196th Light Infantry Brigade in Vietnam was code named "Attleboro," after the town in Massachusetts where the unit had trained.

In a more figurative although still understandable name, Operation Niagara in January 1968 conducted an average of 300 bombings daily in support of a besieged Marine base at Khe Sanh, Vietnam. The bombs rained down like a water fall.

Former President Nixon liked to keep his hand in on code name selections during the Vietnam War. There was Linebacker One, for a bombing operation, and then Linebacker Two for another one.

In the old days, some names appeared to reflect the portentous character of the operation, like a drumbeat roll. One of the most famous World War II code names was "Operation Overlord," the U.S. landing on the coast of Normandy as part of the Allied counteroffensive that rolled back Nazi forces from Western Europe.

Animals seem to be a favorite for code names of recent years.

Operation "Golden Pheasant" was the 1988 deployment of 3,200 U.S. troops in Honduras as a show of force against an alleged Nicaraguan incursion into Honduras.

"Praying Mantis," the insect that eats other insects, was the name used for the 1988 operation in which U.S. gunboats and aircraft destroyed or sank six Iranian naval vessels and two oil platforms in retaliation for a mine attack on a U.S. ship.

And in the same waters, "Earnest Will" was the operation in which U.S. Navy ships escorted Kuwaiti oil tankers in 1987 to protect them against attacks by Iran which was at war with Iraq. Some servicemen believed the name described the fortitude needed to undertake the dangerous mission, said a Pentagon official.

"Eagle Claw" was the disastrous 1980 operation to rescue American hostages in Iran.

Angels bury Travs 14-5, break losing skid

Sports Editor

You knew right away when Arkansas' Bernard Gilkey, the game's lead off batter, chased Reed Peters to the warning track in center with a towering fly, that this was no night for pitchers.

As Midland righthander Scott Lewis said after the game, "The wind was blowing so hard, I couldn't do anything with my curve or slider. I even started it behind the batter and that didn't work."

Nevertheless, the rookie from UNLV did enough to earn the decision in a 14-5 pummeling of Arkansas at Angel Stadium Monday night.

When it was suggested that he has pitched better and lost, Lewis countered, "I thought I pitched pretty well tonight, considering the conditions."

Lewis, 3-4, got into the seventh inning and led 10-5 when he left with a seven-hitter in the works. Vinicio Ceden and Luis Merejo finished up, allowing no runs and only one hit.

But it was a night that a lot of sick Angel bats got well as the Halos rocked three Traylor pitchers for 16 hits, including five doubles and two home runs.

John Orton, batting .096 in his last 15 games, came to life with a vengeance, hitting two doubles and his first homer of the season, a towering drive over the left field fence, to drive in four runs.

"The only adjustment I made was to wait on the ball longer. I had been lunging at it," Orton explained.

Shortstop Gary DiSarcina had two hits, Peters two, Dan Grunhard two and Everett Graham two. All had been in batting doldrums during the current homestand.

"You've got to give Joe (Maddon, the California Angels roving batting coach) credit," said Midland Manager Max Oliveras. "We worked out from 10 to 1 today, which gave Joe a chance to work with them."

Angel second baseman Mark Howe, left, awaits the throw from catcher John Orton as Arkansas baserunner Craig Wilson's chances at stealing second are doomed.

Maddon noted, "It was just a matter of time with these guys. They can hit."

Mark Howe, who isn't in a slump, collected three singles, but it was Vargas who ignited the Angels with his two-run homer to highlight the four-run third, putting Midland in front for good, 5-2. This one went in the slot between the scoreboard and the upper tier of the fence.

It seems to be Hedi's favorite target, and Vargas explains, "I like to get 'em the easy way."

Vargas is one guy in the Midland lineup opposing pitchers still fear. Frank Potestio, the Arkansas winner

Sunday night, was still sighing in relief Monday that he had survived Vargas without harm. "He's so strong. You have to be very careful with him."

Vargas stretched his current hitting streak to five games and although he had three RBIs, the homer was the lone hit.

Orton doubled to start the third inning rally, then plated two more runs with a double in the five-run fourth and his homer came in the seventh. In the fifth, shortstop Julian Martinez came in fast on the grass to rob the catcher of a possible fourth hit.

Cedeno relieved Lewis in the seventh with one run in, retired the final batter without any further damage and then fanned the side in the eighth.

"An entire season like he's been throwing will get him into a higher league," says pitching coach Gary Ruby. "He's got his forkball going for him now."

Bucks hurt in defeat

By CLIFTON BROWN
New York Times News Service

MILWAUKEE — As the Milwaukee Bucks' 21-point lead was slipping away Monday night, Coach Del Harris looked helplessly at his bench.

Terry Cummings, Paul Pressey, Ricky Green and Paul Mokeski were dressed in street clothes, injured and unable to play. And Larry Krystowiak was in a Milwaukee hospital, recovering from knee surgery after an injury he suffered Sunday.

Those multiple injuries, plus the relentless play of the Detroit Pistons, ended the Bucks' season. Detroit's 96-94 victory at the Bradley Center completed a four-game sweep in the Eastern Conference semifinals, sending the Pistons to the conference championship series for the third season in a row.

Detroit and the Los Angeles Lakers are the only two teams in the National Basketball Association that are unbeaten in these playoffs.

Now the Pistons can rest and await the winner of the Knicks-Chicago Bulls series.

"There was no way we wanted to play the Milwaukee Bucks again Wednesday night," said Joe Dumars, who led Detroit with 22 points.

"That was the driving force for us in the second half. We don't care who we play next. I never thought we'd sweep the Bucks, but we did. I'm not worried about having another long layoff. I need the rest."

Detroit's Rick Mahorn, foreground, can't contain his excitement as the Pistons come from behind to defeat Milwaukee 96-94 Monday night.

Two free throws by Jay Humphries cut Detroit's lead to 95-93 with 44 seconds remaining. Then, with the 24-second clock about to expire, Bill Laimbeer missed a 3-point shot, but Isiah Thomas chased down the rebound.

Thomas and Laimbeer passed the ball between them, killing time before Thomas was finally fouled with 8 seconds remaining. Thomas made just one of two free throws, putting Detroit ahead, 96-93.

Milwaukee called time out to set up a 3-point attempt. But as Ricky Pierce was about to shoot, he was fouled by Thomas with 2 seconds remaining.

"Give the Bucks credit," said Chuck Daly, Detroit's coach.

MHS honors spring athletes

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Spring 1989 brought one of the most successful sports seasons on recent record for the Midland High Bulldogs as the school honored its athletes Monday night at its annual Spring Sports banquet.

The tennis doubles team of Luke Morrow and Harper Essex which captured the state doubles title, a first-year soccer team which shared the district title and a pitcher which continues to grab accolades because of his fastball were some of the highlights of the spring season.

MHS pitcher Kevin Rychel, who signed last month with the University of Texas, grabbed Outstanding Male Athlete, and, for the second year in a row, swimmer Michaela Hasek was awarded Outstanding Female Athlete at Midland High.

Rychel was also honored as baseball's Most Valuable Player, and Hasek was awarded the Outstanding Girl Swimmer.

It was a close race for the top male athlete between Rychel and senior netter Luke Morrow. But Hasek, and all her swimming honors won by a landslide for the female honors.

Morrow was reportedly runner-up for Male Outstanding Athlete.

The Midland High baseball team, which finished third in district, awarded Clark Crawford with the Galverson Zachery Fighting Bulldog Award. Compared to last season's district championship, 1989 could be considered a disappointment for the diamond-men. Head coach Tim Whalen, though, assured a better showing next season.

Tom Esikhathi, head soccer coach, was the speaking highlight of the evening, despite grabbing the microphone for over 30 minutes in recognizing his co-district champion soccer team.

Morrow and Essex, who on Saturday won the Class 5A state doubles championship, received the longest and loudest ovation.

Lady Chaps off to good start

MC tied for lead at NJCAA tennis tourney

From Staff Reports

TUCSON, Ariz. — Midland College breezed through its first round matches here Monday in the opening of the National Junior College Athletic Association's national women's tennis tournament. That was the good news.

The bad news was that the Chaps were just one of seven teams which went undefeated as action began in the five-day tourney. Pima Community College is hosting this year's event.

Midland College, Odessa College, Tyler (Tex.) Junior College, Peace (N.C.), Broward (Fla.), Sinclair (Ohio), and Paris (Tex.) all are undefeated.

"The weather was surprisingly mild, about 83 today, and we really didn't have any problems at all," said MC coach Joe Williams. "In fact we lost just six games in our first seven matches."

After struggling for a tie in the Region V tournament with Odessa, the seeds show Midland is not the favorite to repeat as NJCAA champions. None of the MC players was seeded first in either singles or doubles. On paper, Tyler and Odessa get most of the nods to take the title which Midland College is seeking for the sixth time.

Raquel Colvin, playing number one for the Chaps, is seeded third behind Mandy Nall of Tyler and Julie Cass of Odessa. She'll have to win four more matches to take the title as the No. 1 singles draw is larger than the others.

Sharla Barone was seeded third in the No. 2 position, as was Maria Jimenez in the No. 6 singles. Mara Lencina drew the highest seed for the Chaps, second in the No. 1 singles. Marcela Vargas is seeded fourth in the No. 5 singles and Malin Waxegard is seeded fifth in the No. 3 singles.

Colvin and Barone are seeded fourth in No. 1 singles. Waxegard and Lencina are seeded second at No. 2, and Jimenez and Vargas were assigned the fifth seed in the No. 3 doubles.

Points are given for each win, plus a point for each bye followed by a win:

- SINGLES
- 1) Raquel Colvin (MC) had bye, def. Lillian Varga, Jefferson Davis State Junior College, AL, 6-0, 6-0.
 - 2) Sharla Barone def. Joelle Daun, Adirondack Community College, NY, 6-0, 6-1.
 - 3) Malin Waxegard def. Donna Lambert, Bergen Community College, NJ, 6-0, 6-0.
 - 4) Mara Lencina had bye.
 - 5) Marcela Vargas def. Jena Benefield, Jefferson State Junior College, AL, 6-1, 6-0.
 - 6) Maria Jimenez def. Corey Westhauser, Pima Community College, AZ, 6-0, 6-1.
- DOUBLES
- 1) Colvin-Barone def. Malbourn-Ammeraal, Ocean County College, NJ, 6-1, 6-0.
 - 2) Waxegard-Lencina had bye.
 - 3) Jimenez-Vargas def. Owens-Thomas, Jefferson Davis, AL, 6-2, 6-0.

JIMMY PATTERSON

A lesson on trimming the fat in Dallas

It's been a long time since someone has come down the pike and so infuriated the world of sports as has the new owner of the Dallas Cowboys.

It would be a safe bet that there has never been anyone who has so maddened the people of Dallas than Jerry Jones.

If first impressions count for anything, Jones has about 20 years left before he can effectively make peace again with Cowboy fans.

And don't give me that hogwash about how the first time the Cowboys win a game the fans will forget about Jones' brutal firing of Tom Landry and other former Cowboy support personnel.

It goes without saying that all of Jones' firings and hirings and reshufflings were bad enough for the image of the once mighty team. Now, though, Jones has gone out and bamboozled the former Cowboy hierarchy. Jones appeared at the Little Rock, Ark., Chamber of Commerce last weekend, blasting the buried generals who used to guide the Cowboys.

He told chamber members that Tom Landry was too old to coach today's generation of players.

Patterson

Jones then went on to defend his massive cutbacks. He has repeatedly said that the Cowboys are too fat (money-wise) and that existing staff members are underworked. Thus the need for the cutbacks.

There has been mention of closing down Valley Ranch as the team's headquarters, and pulling out of the training camp site at Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Surely there are other ways to cut expenses rather than to do away with the tradition of Thousand Oaks. I suppose, though, tradition has little meaning to Jones and I wouldn't be surprised to see him move his Cowboys' camp to Hot Springs or Little Rock or some other desolate Arkansas locale.

If Jones is so concerned about money, why, then, did he allow the team to send out a news release this week entitled "Cheerleaders Set Training Camp Roster"?

I don't imagine that there are too many people who care that Twigg Isip is returning for her second year with the Cheerleaders, or that Tiffany Hudson, an 18-year-old receptionist in Richardson, is a rookie.

At 25¢ a stamp, Jones let the Cowboys spend $300 mailing the news about Twigg and Tiffany to the 1,200 news organizations on its mailing list.

(It was interesting to note, though, that even the former Cheerleaders were upset with Jones' tactics. Thirty-one of the 45 on the Cheerleaders' roster are in their first year. Oddly enough, though, not a one from Arkansas.)

But Mr. Jones, forget the news releases about cheerleaders. That's where you can start with your much needed cutbacks.

There are other areas where you can save money, Mr. Jones.

■ First, cut your salary. As rich as you are, you can surely do without all that you deem necessary.

■ Cut Troy Aikman's salary in half. After all, wasn't it you who said Troy ought to ask for half of whatever he gets because he should consider it an honor to play for the Cowboys?

■ For that matter, cut your salary even more, since you should consider it an honor to own the Cowboys.

■ Lower the price of seats in Texas Stadium. Maybe then, more people will come to watch the Cowboys merely out of curiosity this season.

Mr. Jones, it's a long, uphill battle for you this season, expect it. Do yourself a favor and don't wait for any invitations from Dallas area Chambers of Commerce. Just make your speeches far, far away and hope the people of Dallas forgive you sometime this decade.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 17, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE

NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE:

Family ties grow stronger, providing a framework for good times. New financial gains are indicated. Save more time for yourself. Close alliances undergo positive changes. Romance becomes more exciting. Work at developing a better relationship with your children or siblings. You finally let go of your resentment for a family member or former friend. New report is likely.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON

THIS DATE: boxing champion Sugar Ray Leonard, distinguished journalist Stewart Alsop, actor Dennis Hopper, Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, opera singer Birgit Nilsson, actress Maureen O'Sullivan, Seattle Mariners coach Ozzie Virgil.

ARIES (March 21-April 19):

You find your work environment more appealing now. Wait awhile before going after a new position. Be careful not to over-dramatize a family situation. Curb your temper and let cooler heads prevail.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20):

Your ability to maneuver a proposal through troubled waters will pay off handsomely. You may feel torn between a child and your mate. Refuse

GEMINI (May 21-June 20):

Watch a tendency to be absentminded or a golden opportunity could escape you. You will be more psychic than usual this week. Write down all appointments. Don't miss a key meeting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22):

You amaze your peers with your ingenious solutions to problems. Be careful not to brag. Find more time for personal matters and spiritual pursuits. Send letters to faraway friends; they need your encouraging words.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22):

Move immediately to nail down a business deal. Confront a sarcastic person or things will only get worse. You radiate good humor that is contagious. Others decide to join forces with you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22):

Ride the wave of enthusiasm caused by your inventive proposals. A good time to ask for a raise. You may choose to move back to where you lived as a child.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):

Adhering to a diet-exercise program makes you feel better. Accept invitations to social events. Romance has a special glow this evening. You could be in love with love!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be sure you get the right training and equipment for outdoor activities. Ill-prepared campers jeopardize their health. Do not allow your friends to dictate financial decisions you should make for yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21):

New friends share your interest in travel and adventure. Family members are supportive of a career change. A good day to sign contracts. Real estate negotiations should go especially well. You prevail.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19):

Show that you have faith in your talents and abilities. A phone call boosts your spirits sky-high. It is time to think about making some changes in your appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18):

Growth patterns in business are inconsistent. Do something to change that. The decisions you make today could produce long-term benefits. Open your heart to someone having a rough time. Offer practical help.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20):

A friend's actions will be difficult to understand. A diplomatic approach will help bring about peace and quiet. A platonic relationship turns romantic. Know your own heart before asking for a commitment.

This hand looks simple enough. How would you play it in a duplicate pairs event? At rubber bridge? South was perhaps a little reticent in the bidding, especially since North persisted in no trump. That indicated some kind of diamond fit. However, with a void in hearts he was afraid he might not be able to reach dummy.

At duplicate, you have no problem. You are safe unless trumps are 4-1 and the queen of diamonds is offside, and you can collect an over-trick if trumps break and the diamond finesse works. So rise with the ace of hearts, discarding a diamond, take the diamond finesse and go down one trick like everyone else.

At rubber bridge, however, the over-trick is unimportant—your first concern should be to secure your contract should trumps break 4-1. Therefore, play a low heart from dummy to the first trick, ruff in hand and draw three rounds of trumps. When West turns up with four trumps, you can actually claim the contract.

Cash the ace-king of clubs and ace of diamonds. When the queen does not appear, simply solicit West's aid by throwing him on lead with his winning trump. No matter what suit he returns, he must put you into dummy. On a diamond return, either your jack wins or you capture the queen and return to the table with the ten to take a discard on a rounded-suit winner. And either a heart or a club return allows you to take two pitches on dummy's winners in those suits.

Relatives of dead celebrities want rights to names, images

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The Duke in lipstick? That's the way John Wayne was depicted on a greeting card, wearing a cowboy hat and bright, red lips. The message inside was about being homosexual.

"We find it repugnant," said Michael Wayne, the oldest of John Wayne's seven children.

Wayne is one of a host of relatives of dead celebrities who want the state of New York to give them exclusive rights to the names and images of famous family members. The relatives testified Monday at a legislative hearing.

A proposal before the Legislature would require the commercial media, artists and others who want to use the dead celebrity's persona to get permission. It would be up to the relative to decide how much the user would have to pay.

The exclusive rights would last 50 years after the celebrity's death. Violations would be a misdemeanor.

Nine other states, including California, have such laws. But in the nation's publishing and media center, Madison Avenue has free rein when it comes to using dead celebrities as pitchmen.

"The public that admired him has a right to have his public image protected, and who better to protect it than his family?" Wayne said of his Oscar-winning father.

"It's not fair that just anybody can walk up and take your relative's name and twist it around and do any kind of thing they want to do," added Ilis Nicole Holiday, sister of jazz singer Billie Holiday. Holiday objected to what she considered a false portrayal of her sister in the Diana Ross movie "Lady Sings the Blues."

Also at the hearing were Robyn Astaire, Fred Astaire's widow; Julia Ruth Stevens, daughter of Babe Ruth; and Everett Fields, grandson of W.C. Fields. They brought out books, posters and trinkets that contained their relatives' images.

Opponents of the proposal argued that it would impinge on First Amendment rights to free expression. One opponent charged that celebrity relatives were out to do some exploitation of their own.

"The wrong that these bills appear to redress is that the heirs of celebrities evidently do not feel that they are getting enough money for the use of the persona of their famous ancestors," said Jerome Wilson, lawyer for Time Inc. and the Magazine Publishers of America.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — A temperamental Roseanne Barr reportedly threatened to quit her hit series "Roseanne" during taping of early episodes and battled the executive producer, who has since left.

"She would come to me and say, 'I can't go on. I can't do it. I have to quit,'" Drew Ogier, the ABC sitcom's prop master, said in this week's TV Guide. "And I'd say, 'Just do this show.' We'd all have to help her out."

According to the Radnor-based magazine, executive producer Matt Williams left the show after Barr said either he or she had to leave. Ellen Falcon, the show's director, also left the series in mid-season.

The magazine quoted unidentified insiders with the show as saying Barr and Williams disagreed strongly over her character's development.

Once, Barr objected to a line her character was supposed to say to her husband, Dan, played by John Goodman. But Williams resisted any script change.

"She felt he did not take her seriously," said Ogier. "She left the set. It would happen over and over again. Sometimes she'd leave the set; sometimes she'd grin and bear it."

Spokesmen for Barr, Williams and Falcon all declined requests for interviews, TV Guide said.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A Mother's Day concert by country star Willie Nelson was a boon for boaters but a bust for the promoter.

Promoter Jerry McElveen said he lost $15,000 on the show at Augusta's riverfront, which attracted fewer than 3,000 paid ticketholders.

He claimed at least 1,000 people listened to the show for free from boats anchored in the river and 100 or more others heard it from a restaurant balcony. He also said a lot of money was tied up in tickets sold at outlets that were closed Sunday.

There were some tense moments before Nelson went on stage when his road manager learned McElveen might not have enough cash to pay the star, the promoter said. Nelson went on with the show once arrangements were made to pay his fee, manager Darrell English said Monday.

Tony Conway, Nelson's booking agent in Nashville, Tenn., said Nelson's contract probably cost about $40,000 to $45,000.

McElveen said he wouldn't attempt to bring another big-name act to the riverside venue. Dayton Sherrouse, executive director of the Augusta Port Authority, said there was no easy way to prevent people from seeing concerts from their boats. "It's a public river and a navigable waterway," he said.

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Bob Dylan will start a national tour by finding out how he plays in Peoria, a promoter announced.

"I've been working...to get Dylan for years," promoter Jay Goldberg said Monday. "This year, the timing was right, and he was looking to open the tour in the Midwest and at a place that was private and quiet and could still technically handle his show needs."

Goldberg said $20 tickets for the July 1 show at the 9,000-seat Civic Center Arena would go on sale Saturday. He predicted a quick sellout in the town famed for the show-business phrase, "Will it play in Peoria?"

"His finally playing here shows that Peoria will support top-name talent," Goldberg said.

Other details about the tour were not announced.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Gov. George C. Wallace, bedridden and unable to hear or see well, promised a return to better health on the 17th anniversary of the assassination attempt that shattered his presidential dreams.

"I can't be as active as I've been," said the 69-year-old Wallace, who was left paralyzed in the legs after being shot by Arthur Bremer while campaigning in Laurel, Md., on May 15, 1972.

In an interview with The Alabama Journal published Monday, Wallace said complications in his left hip forced him to curtail his activities. The newspaper gave no details on the ailment.

The Journal said Wallace, dressed in a hospital gown, spoke with a strong voice during the interview Friday at his Montgomery home.

Housing starts fall to six-year low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing construction, feeling the bite of higher interest rates, fell 27 percent in April to the lowest level in more than six years, the government said today.

It marked the first time housing construction had dropped for three straight months since the pace of activity slowed for five months in a row from February through June 1987, the Commerce Department reported.

Last month's decline followed decreases of 45 percent in March and 12.7 percent in February.

New homes and apartments were built at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.36 million units in April, the slowest pace since the 1.30 million pace of December 1982.

The housing industry has been among the sectors of the economy hardest hit as interest rates have edged upward over the past year. Interest on fixed-rate mortgages last month was averaging over 11 percent, up a full percentage point from a year earlier, according to a national survey by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

The Federal Reserve Board for a year has been pushing up interest rates in an effort to restrain inflation by restraining economic growth.

Construction of single-family homes rose 5.1 percent in April to an annual rate of 1.04 million units, after dropping 4.2 percent in March and 14.2 percent in February.

Apartment construction, meanwhile, continued its decline, falling 21.3 percent last month to an annual rate of 325,000 units. Construction of multi-family units had fallen 5.3 percent in March and 9 percent in February.

The overall decline in housing construction last month was led by 10.8 percent decrease in activity in the West, where starts fell to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 347,000 units.

Declines also were recorded in the Midwest and South. Construction was down 9.5 percent in the Midwest to a annual rate of 277,000 units and off 4 percent in the South to a rate of 529,000.

The Northeast, meanwhile, recorded a 35.9 percent surge in construction to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 208,000 units.

Applications for building permits, a barometer of future housing activity, turned up 7.2 percent in April.

Home sales differ on coasts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising mortgage rates hit home sales and prices hard in expensive Northeast cities in the first three months of 1989, but booming West Coast markets weathered the storm, a real estate trade group said today.

Elsewhere, industrial cities in the Midwest with low-cost housing showed healthy appreciation while depressed housing prices in Texas' two largest cities began to recover, according to the National Association of Realtors.

The median price of an existing home in the San Francisco area soared to $243,900 in the first quarter, meaning half sold for more and half sold for less. That represented a 31.8 percent increase from a year ago and was the steepest appreciation rate among 83 metropolitan areas surveyed by the trade group.

In fact, California accounted for the top five appreciation rates in the nation. Home prices in Orange County, which includes Anaheim and Santa Ana, shot up 30.2 percent to a median of $237,900. In Los Angeles, prices rose 26.3 percent to $201,000; San Diego, 21.9 percent to $163,900; and Riverside-San Bernardino, 21.6 percent to $116,000.

That compares with the 3.4 percent increase to $91,600 for the median-priced existing home for the entire United States.

"The hot spots definitely are on the West Coast," said Ira Gribbin, president of the Realtors.

Northeastern cities continued to be some of the most expensive places to live, but home prices in New York City and its suburbs, Boston and Worcester, Mass., and Hartford and New Haven, Conn., either fell or rose only modestly.

Parker & Parsley lays off 50 workers

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co., one of Midland's most-active oil and gas companies, has laid off 50 employees.

Scott Sheffield, president Parker & Parsley said most of the workers laid off were clerical workers in the land, geological and engineering departments with several geologists and landmen also being included. All were in the Permian Basin, according to Sheffield.

He said the 50 employees represented less than 10 percent of the 500 workers employed by Parker & Parsley and many of them could be hired back as early as September when the company becomes more active.

The employees were informed late Monday that they would be laid off because of inactivity associated with the recent sale of the Midland-based oil company.

"We delayed as long as we could on these cut backs," said Scott Sheffield, president Parker & Parsley, "but the company has been in limbo for the past six months as a result of a sale option granted to two former Southmark executives."

Southmark, parent company of Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co., had earlier granted a purchase option to sell the oil company to Gene E. Phillips, former Southmark chairman, and William S. Friedman, former vice chairman. The option was to expire April 24.

At the same time an option to purchase the company was also given to current management of the company in the event Friedman and Phillips did not exercise their option by the April deadline. When the former Southmark did in fact fail to meet the purchase deadline, the company was purchased for $49.6 million by a limited partnership comprised of management and JM Oil Co.

"We have not been buying leases or otherwise preparing for the presentation of a drilling fund, while this uncertainty over the sale of the company was taking place," said Sheffield. "Everything was on hold."

Parker & Parsley completed its last drilling fund program in December of 1988, but had remained active until the end of March.

AUTO REPORT Volkswagen planning to sell diesel cars again

New York Times News Service

DETROIT — Responding to higher gasoline prices and what it hopes is a group of eager buyers, Volkswagen AG said Monday that it would again offer a diesel car in the United States.

Volkswagen's move bucks a trend in recent years toward more powerful gasoline engines. Diesel-powered cars have nearly disappeared from auto showrooms.

Volkswagen United States, the automaker's import arm, said it would offer a diesel-powered Jetta sedan, imported from West Germany, at a base price of $10,110.

Other than the Mercedes 190 Diesel, the Jetta model will be the only diesel car offered in the United States and is Volkswagen's first such car since it withdrew the diesel-powered Rabbit in 1987.

"In addition to a very loyal group of Volkswagen diesel owners who have been pleading for new VW diesels, there are more than 2.5 million people in this country who own other brands of diesel automobiles and appreciate the simplicity, low cost of operation and the long cruising range of diesel-powered cars," said William Young, vice president in charge of the U.S. unit.

Ogilvy buyout creates second largest ad firm

NEW YORK (AP) — Ogilvy Group Inc. has agreed to an $864 million buyout offer in a deal that will create the world's second largest advertising and marketing concern.

The boards of Ogilvy and WPP Group PLC announced early today they had approved the buyout under which the London-based WPP will pay $54 a share in cash for all of Ogilvy's common stock.

The agreement came just hours before today's annual meeting of Ogilvy shareholders.

"While we would have preferred to remain independent and pursued many options to that end, we became convinced that a combination with WPP represented the most attractive course for the future of our organization," said Ogilvy's chairman, Kenneth Roman.

But he said after intensive conversations, he concluded the deal offered the best course for the company and its shareholders.

Martin Sorrell, chief executive of WPP Group, said he's certain the combination "will create the finest advertising and marketing services group in the world."

Sorrell began his pursuit of Ogilvy only 2½ weeks ago when he proposed a buyout at $45 a share.

Roman said Ogilvy preferred to remain independent and that its board would consider the offer in due course.

Decision on NWA sale due in June

New York Times News Service

ST. PAUL, Minn. — NWA Inc., the parent of Northwest Airlines, continues to consider alternatives to the hostile $2.7 billion takeover offer it has received from Marvin Rothmeier.

Rothmeier

Davis, NWA's chairman and chief executive Steven Rothmeier told shareholders Monday.

At the company's annual meeting here, Rothmeier said NWA was exploring a broad range of alternatives, including a sale of stock to a third party, a partial or complete liquidation of the company and a sale of the company.

Afterward, Alan Muncaster, NWA's chief spokesman, said a decision would be made in June.

Except for picketing by a few pilots protesting the possibility that NWA might add a heavy amount of debt to its balance sheet, the annual meeting went smoothly.

Early May auto sales off 8.2 percent

New York Times News Service

DETROIT — Sales of new domestic cars and light trucks were off 8.2 percent in early May when compared with the same period last year, which was unusually strong.

Compared with last month, the market's overall strength was down only slightly.

Analysts said that, if sales continued at their current pace, there would be no need for large production cuts at the Big Three auto makers.

Before the Big Three began sales incentives last month, analysts had been saying that the auto makers might have to slash production plans.

Car sales averaged 23,039 a day in the May 1-10 period, off 9.8 percent from the period last year, and light-truck sales averaged 13,485 a day, off 5.3 percent, the eight domestic manufacturers reported Monday.

There were nine selling days in the period this year and eight last year.

Car sales ran at a seasonally adjusted annual level of 7.4 million units, according to a formula devised by the Commerce Department.

"I don't think production cuts will happen this model year," said Chris Cedergren, auto analyst with J.D. Power & Associates, in Agoura Hills, Calif.

"The second quarter is locked in, and the Big Three believe they have already taken enough out of the third quarter."

But Cedergren said the Japanese have resumed their inroads into the American market, after losing some ground in 1988.

Japanese and South Korean auto makers have added nearly two additional points of car market share so far this year, more than wiping out Detroit's 1.5-point gain during 1988, when imports raised their prices in response to the weakening dollar.

The American subsidiaries of Japanese auto makers, known in the industry as transplants, took 4.6 percent of the domestic car market in early May, up 1.6 percentage points from a year earlier.

General Motors Corp. added 1.5 percentage points, for a total share of 46.8 percent, while Ford Motor Co. dropped 1.2 percentage points to 31.0 percent, and Chrysler Corp. dropped eight-tenths of a point to 17.6 percent.

GM sold 17,102 domestic light vehicles a day, down 5 percent from the comparable period last year. A 9.5 percent decline in the company's car sales, which averaged 11,554 a day, was partially offset by a 6.1 percent increase in its light-truck sales, to 5,548 a day.

Ford's light-vehicle sales were off 11.4 percent to 11,330 a day, with cars down 11.1 percent to 6,095 a day, and light trucks down 11.8 percent to 4,635 a day.

Chrysler's sales fell 12.1 percent to 6,415 vehicles a day, with cars down 14.6 percent to 3,260 a day, and light trucks down 9.3 percent to 3,125 a day.

Oil prices continue rally

From Staff and Wire Reports

Crude futures prices are continuing Monday's rally as traders make their moves ahead of next week's expiration.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, June contracts for West Texas Intermediate gained 44 cents to stand at $20.95 at midmorning.

The crude had gained 42 cents to close at $20.51 Monday.

Among refined petroleum products traded on the exchange, June heating oil, which rose 0.42 cent on Friday, gained another 0.77 cent to finish at 49.87 cents a gallon.

Wholesale unleaded gasoline for June delivery slid 0.92 cent to 66.09 cents a gallon. On Friday the near-month contract was off 0.27 cent at the settlement.

Andrew Lebow, an analyst at E.D. & F. Man International Futures Inc., said activity was quiet with most traders hunting for opportunities to make profits from the price discrepancies among the various energy futures contracts.

This emphasis on spread trading was most pronounced in the crude oil futures pit, he said, adding that traders were maneuvering to adjust their holdings ahead

Gasoline futures declined due to abundant supplies in New York harbor while a temporary tightness in local heating oil supplies caused traders to bid up heating oil futures.

Dollar off amid profit-taking

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell in moderate European trading this morning. Gold prices were mixed.

Foreign currency dealers said the drop on the heels of Monday's surge was the result of profit-taking and consolidation. European markets, except Britain's and Italy's, were closed Monday for the Pentecost holiday.

Traders said they expect positive dollar-buying sentiment to push the dollar higher unless there is some decisive action taken by central banks. In Tokyo, the dollar closed up 0.20 yen at 137.00 yen, despite reported intervention by the Bank of Japan. The dollar has gained 2.56 yen over the last four trading days.

Later in London, the dollar traded at 136.85 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

—1.9366 West German marks, down from 1.9415
—1.7330 Swiss francs, down from 1.7438
—6.5465 French francs, down from 6.5725
—2.1839 Dutch guilders, down from 2.1905
—1.4085 Italian lire, down from 1.411.00
—1.1876 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1905.

In London, one British pound cost $1.6455, more expensive for buyers than $1.6385 late Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $374.55, up from $374.00 late Monday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $374.40.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.51 a troy ounce, down from $5.53 late Monday.

Stock market continues climbing

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market kept moving ahead Monday, following through on its strong rally at the end of last week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 24.19 to 2,463.89 on top of its 56.82-point jump Friday, establishing a new post-crash high for the second straight session.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 927 up, 576 down and 491 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 179.35 million shares, down from 221.49 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 212.53 million shares.

Analysts said the surge on Friday prompted buying of stocks by money managers at investing institutions who were fearful of missing out on a continuing advance in stock prices.

The catalyst for the market's latest advance came Friday in the government's report of a smaller-than-expected 0.4 percent increase in the producer price index of finished goods for April.

That sent open-market interest rates tumbling, and increased hopes that the Federal Reserve was succeeding in its effort to curb inflation without pushing the economy into a recession.

As the new trading week began, there was talk of more favorable inflation news to come when the monthly data on the consumer price index are issued on Thursday.

Some analysts cautioned, however, that those hopes might not be fulfilled. Wall Street estimates call for a CPI increase of anywhere from 0.5 percent to 0.8 percent, after a rise of 0.5 percent in March.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $17.35 billion, or 0.56 percent, in value.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Court ruling victory for securities industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an important victory for the securities industry, the Supreme Court has ruled that disputes between investors and brokers must be resolved by arbitration, not in court suits.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices Monday overturned a 1953 high court decision that permitted lawsuits under an anti-fraud provision of the Securities Act of 1933. The case stemmed from a challenge by 17 first-time investors to standard brokerage contracts that order arbitration to settle all disputes.

Cray Research splitting into two firms

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Cray Research Inc., the world's largest supercomputer maker, will split into two companies by spinning off the division that has been developing what Cray says will be the world's fastest supercomputer, the company said.

The new company, to be called Cray Computer Corp., will be formed around Cray-3 operations based in Colorado Springs, Colo., where founder Seymour Cray has been developing his latest supercomputer, the company said Monday.

Fewer 16-24 year-olds seek summer jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of 16- to 24-year-olds seeking work this summer will be about 708,000 below the level of last year because of a continued population decline in that age group, the government said.

An estimated 3.3 million people in that age group, mostly students seeking summer jobs and high school and college graduates looking for permanent jobs, will enter the labor force between now and July, the Labor Department said Monday.

Coal mining fatalities match record low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rate of coal mining fatalities matched a record low pace in the first quarter of 1989 while the rate of deaths in the non-coal mining sector was up from the same period last year, the government said.

The Labor Department's Mine Safety and Health Administration on Monday reported 12 coal mining deaths in the first three months of this year, compared with 11 during the same period last year. But because of an increase in the number of hours worked in coal mining over last year, the agency said the fatality rate matched last year's record low of 0.03 for every 200,000 hours worked.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

King discovery flows 80 barrels

From Staff Reports

An undesignated discovery has been completed in King County, north of the Christopher field and northeast of the Tumbleweed East field.

SAUDER MANAGEMENT CO., Wichita Falls, has tested the No. 1-3 Pitchfork to flow 80 barrels of 37 gravity crude and no water. The well flowed through 4 1/2 inch casing which had been set at 3,861 ft.

Permitted as a 4,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 3,870 ft.

The well topped the Coleman Junction at 3,148 ft., Base Dathan Lime at 3,488, and Saddle Creek at 3,834 ft. Pay was topped at 3,706 ft. Location is 911 ft. from south and 1,850 ft. from east lines of J.V. Massey survey 3, 10 miles southwest of Guthrie.

★ King discovery

Sauder Management Co. has completed an 80 barrel discovery in King County.

Lower Cook opened in Concho County field

QUINTX EXPLORATION INC., Marble Falls, continues opening plays in the Branch South field of Concho County.

Quintx's No. 34 Whitehead opened Lower Cook pay in the field, tested to pump 53 barrels of 36 gravity crude and no water from perforations 1,110 to 1,122 ft. Production was natural.

Total depth was 1,500 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,094 ft., include the Salt Creek at 884 ft., Tannehill at 924, Crystal Falls Lime at 1,138, Lower Cook at 1,109, and King Lime at 1,278 ft.

Location is 225 ft. from north and 1,350 ft. from east lines of Section 151, EL&RR survey, Abst. 1037, 7.5 miles southeast of Eden.

Ellenburger opener tested in Crockett field

Ellenburger production was opened in the Block 38 field of Crockett County with completion of a project in the area.

RK PETROLEUM CORP., Midland, tested the No. 14-1 University for a calculated absolute open flow of 3.04 Mmcfd. The well flowed from open hole interval 8,196 to 8,246 ft., no treatment recorded. Condensate gravity was 60 degrees API and gas-liquid ratio was 11,097:1.

Permitted as a 9,200 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to total depth of 8,246 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,194 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,557 ft., formation tops include the Dean at 5,489 ft., Wolfcamp at 5,615, Canyon at 7,535, Pennsylvanian Detrital at 8,171, and Ellenburger at 8,200 ft. Location is 726 ft. from north and 606 ft. from east lines of Section 14, Block 38, ULS survey, seven miles southeast Barnhart.

Dallas oil operator extends Crockett pay

A completed project in Crockett County has yielded a half-mile northwest extension of Pennsylvanian gas production in the Howards Creek field.

J. CLEO THOMPSON, Dallas, finalized the No. 1 University "32-9" for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.3 Mmcfd. The well flowed from perforations 8,529 to 8,714 ft., which had been acidized with 15,000 gallons of acid. Condensate gravity was 53.6 degrees API and gas-liquid ratio was 3,691:667:1.

Permitted as a 9,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 9,119 ft. and plugged back to 9,118 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,275 ft., include the Strawn-Pennsylvanian at 8,518 ft., Detrital at 8,624, Silurian at 8,829, and Simpson at 9,000 ft.

PARTEE DRILLING INC., Big

Spring, has reopened Wolfcamp 7325 pay in the Howard Glasscock field of Howard County.

On potential test, the No. 1 Horace Garrett Estate et al flowed 283 barrels of 43 gravity crude, 290 Mcf and one barrel of water on a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 490 psi. The well flowed from perforations 7,522 to 7,556 ft., which had been acidized with 7,500 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,025:1.

Permitted as an 8,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,925 ft. and plugged back to 7,865 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,482 ft., include the Rustler at 1,160 ft., Yates at 1,320, Queen at 1,675, and Clearfork at 2,970 ft. Pay was topped at 7,520 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and east lines of Section 97, Block 29, W&NW survey, seven miles northeast of Forsan.

Garza field gains 396 barrel producer

The Aljenda-BLP (Ellenburger) field of Garza County has gained new production and an eastern extension.

J.M. HUBER CORP., Amarillo, tested the No. 1-19 Middleton to pump 396 barrels of 39 gravity crude and 165 barrels of water from perforations 8,142 to 8,169 ft. Gas-oil ratio is 328:1.

Permitted as an 8,300 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,200 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,201 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from west and 810 ft. from south lines of Section 19, Block 8, H&GN survey, 10 miles northeast of Post.

New York area prices — the fifth highest in the nation after San Francisco, Orange County, Honolulu and Los Angeles — sunk 2.8 percent to $181,700. Boston, New Haven and Hartford — the sixth, seventh and eighth most pricey cities — posted appreciation rates of 0.9 percent, minus 1.3 percent and minus 0.5 percent, respectively.

"The affordability gap already caused prices to slow down in the high-cost areas. They were really hit hard when (mortgage) rates started jumping," said the trade group's chief economist, John A. Tuccillo.

Fixed-rate mortgages started out the quarter averaging 10.77 percent and jumped nearly half a percentage point to 11.19 percent by the end of the period. One-year, adjustable-rate mortgages went from 8.49 percent to 9.31 percent. During the first quarter a year ago, mortgage rates were falling.

The Federal Reserve Board has been pushing up interest rates since March 1988 in an effort to slow the economy enough to curb inflation. The housing and construction sectors are the most sensitive to the increase.

The five least expensive areas in the country were: Peoria, Ill., $42,000; Spokane, Wash., $50,200; Mobile, Ala., $50,900; Oklahoma City, $52,300; and Akron, Ohio, $56,000.

In Texas, the median price of Houston houses and condominiums recovered 4.5 percent to $62,900, while the median rose 2.7 percent to $88,400 in Dallas. However, home values in smaller cities in Texas and elsewhere in the Oil Patch continued to drop.

The five biggest declines were in Fort Worth, Texas, 10.9 percent; Oklahoma City, 7.4 percent; Baton Rouge, La., 7 percent; Worcester, Mass., 5.9 percent; and Tulsa, Okla., 4.7 percent.

Texas real estate values are being watched especially closely as Congress prepares to enact President Bush's savings and loan bailout. Texas accounts for about half of the S&L problem, and the taxpayer cost of the bailout will depend in part on how much the government can get for real estate owned by failed S&Ls.

A number of Midwestern cities, bolstered by a resurgence in manufacturing caused by last year's boom in export sales, posted strong appreciation rates, including Chicago, up 7 percent to $99,300, and Columbus, Ohio, up 11.6 percent to $73,900.

"The Rust Belt appears to be coming back," Tuccillo said.

The Realtors said the pace of existing home sales lagged nationally and in most states, although several states with low-cost housing areas managed to buck the trend.

Nationally, sales dropped to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.82 million units, down 6.6 percent from the last quarter of 1988. Twenty-eight states and the District of Columbia posted declines, while 22 states recorded increases.

West Virginia showed the greatest sales pickup, 61.3 percent, followed by South Dakota, 43.5 percent; North Dakota, 27.1 percent; Washington, 22.3 percent; and Vermont, 21.6 percent.

The states with the biggest sales declines were Alaska, 40.6 percent; Utah, 27.7 percent; Louisiana, 23.8 percent; Iowa, 20.2 percent; and Minnesota, 17.7 percent.

BUYOUT

On May 8, WPP said it had proposed to pay $50 a share for Ogilvy stock. Four days later Ogilvy said it had entered into formal discussions with WPP after the latter indicated it would be willing to increase its offer from $50 a share in order to secure a friendly agreement.

The agreement would allow the New York-based Ogilvy Group to operate autonomously within WPP, a fast-growing conglomerate of advertising agencies, public relations and marketing services concerns.

Roman will continue to head the Ogilvy operations within WPP.

In an added inducement, WPP said it would appoint Ogilvy founder David Ogilvy chairman of WPP Group. The current WPP chairman, John Symonds, will become deputy chairman.

Only two years ago, WPP stunned the advertising world with its uninvited but successful buyout of the parent of another U.S. advertising giant, J. Walter Thompson. That deal had cost $566 million.

The combination of WPP and Ogilvy will produce an advertising and marketing services giant that would have had combined billings in 1988 of about $13.5 billion.

That would put it only slightly behind the industry leader, London-based Saatchi & Saatchi PLC, which had billings of just over $13.5 billion in 1988, according to the trade magazine Advertising Age.

Sorrell said he intended to pay for the acquisition by raising about $350 million through an issue of convertible preferred stock. The rest would come from bank loans.

Ogilvy, founded in 1948, is one of the better known names in the advertising business. Its Ogilvy & Mather ad agency has many blue-chip clients including American Express Co., American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and Sears, Roebuck and Co.

LAYOFF

Sheffield said that once the final details of the sale are confirmed and a new drilling fund was sold many of the employees could be hired back, some as early as September.

"It will take about three months to get SEC approval for a drilling fund. We could be ready to sell it by October and ready to drill by December," Sheffield adds that he is confident the company will be able to sell drilling funds as long as the price of oil remains above the $15 level.

Deep, dark tan fades from fashion scene; Pale is posh

By LAURA ACCINELLI
Copley News Service

Hey, cats and kittens from Tanning Tech — brace yourselves. The tan is O-U-T. The Bronze Age is a washout.

Or so say beauty and fashion experts.

The American Academy of Dermatology just completed a national survey of those in the know, and word is that the deep, dark tan is fading. "I say no on tans and shun the sun. A tan might look devastating with that white dress, but it's the kiss of death," says Alese Marshall, a former model who now runs a modeling agency in Southern California. "It's not the look now anyway if you want to be fashionable."

The hue and cry for the '90s is pallor power.

Reports linking the sun's rays to wrinkles and skin cancer finally are leaving a mark. It's white, according to trendsetters. The Beautiful People, as always, are taking cover first — except, of course, George Hamilton, he of the Day-Glo tan.

One factor could be the growing use of Retin-A, the acne medicine hailed as a wrinkle remover. The drug makes some susceptible to sunburn.

Beyond the pale, however, are the masses, still recumbent on the sand. They are taking umbrage.

"Typical," grouches John Buchanan, 39, lolling at the beach. "I haven't tanned in years, and I finally move to California and now it's not the thing to do?"

Cheryl Font, 19, says, "I don't care what everyone else does, I have to be tan. When I'm pale, I don't even want to leave the house."

With few exceptions, the 50 beauty and fashion leaders surveyed, including fashion designers Donna Karan and Betsey Johnson, beauty editors of Vogue, Glamour and Women's Wear Daily, and Eileen Ford of the Ford Agency, said today's look is romantic, or studious. Milky-white Miss Marians are sexier than golden-toned mermaids.

Bill Blass, however, declined to participate in the dermatology academy's 3-year-old campaign against the sun, said an AAD spokeswoman. The designer sports a perpetual tan, his publicist wrote. The Evanston, Ill.-based association sent him pamphlets on skin cancer.

Fashion magazines, too, have declared the tan passe. The June issue of Mademoiselle attacks the notions that a tan is healthy and that pale isn't posh.

Moreover, sunscreen sales have tripled since 1982, and this year they are expected to overtake traditional tanning oils and lotions, says a Johnson and Johnson executive. Sunscreens with an SPF (sun protection factor) of 15 — blocking 93 percent of the sun's harmful rays — and higher are the best sellers in a $400 million market for sun-care products. Even the shoe-eyed and topless Bain de Soleil model is several shades paler.

The trend is apparent in swimsuit designs, too, says Anne Cole of Los Angeles-based Cole Swimwear. Time was, she said, that suits with T-backs and porpoises were unpopular. They left funny tan lines. The bikini, on the other hand, exposed whole sides of flesh to the sun.

"The ones without tan potential didn't sell. But now they're acceptable."

The move away from tawny, even for summer, started a couple of years ago, says makeup artist Cameron Ponce de Leon. "Every year we've lightened up, but this season it's really being reinforced."

He's applying a white primer under foundation.

"But women in Southern California are still going for the tan."

CMS Graphic

They've been beach bunnies since Day One, and it's hard for them to change, no matter what I tell them."

It was French fashion designer Coco Chanel who started the craze in 1922 when she returned from a cruise with a tan, once considered declassé. Out went a lady's accoutrements of hats, gloves, parasols, modest garments, and in slipped the tan. And a climb in skin cancer. It is the most prevalent form.

In 1935, when the tan was still coming into vogue, one in 1,500 developed malignant melanoma. Deadly, it's responsible for 75 percent of skin cancer deaths. By 1980, the chances of developing melanoma were one in 150. Today, they are one in 135. One severe sunburn in childhood or adolescence doubles the risk.

Fear of leathery, mapped skin is making a bigger statement on fashion than the risk of cancer, according to the AAD survey. Baby boomers, it seems, don't like what they see in the mirrors these days; as teenagers they thought they were invincible.

Still, whatever the trend, there are those who absolutely must wear a tan, particularly in the land of fun in the sun. Besides pale paranoia, it's hard to dodge rays in Southern California, where even dads brown left arms year-round on their way to the hardware store.

A survey last year by the dermatologists revealed that 66 percent of adults think a tan makes them look healthy. With 97 percent aware of the sun's damage, 30 percent still "worked" on a tan, some with no protection. The number of tanning parlors in America skyrocketed 55 percent in 1987 to 17,405, according to the Yellow Page Research Group in Omaha, Neb., a firm that compiles business information from telephone books across the country.

"Who is this guy running around the country saying tans are out? I mean, where is he getting his information?" asks Ken Torrence, a tanning bed supplier.

"Sometimes I think I have tanorexia," says Cheryl Font, slathering oil on a uniformly bronzed bod. She had skin cancers removed from her arm and cheek four years ago when she was 15. "I just love looking at my skin when I'm tan. It makes me so happy."

Ed Lange, founder of Elysium Fields, has noticed that more and more of the nudist camp's 1,400 members are taking precautions against overexposure and sitting in the shade.

Nina Blanchard, who discovered models Cheryl Tiegs and Cristina Ferrare, welcomes the no-tan trend. She imports models for her Hollywood agency from the Pacific Northwest for their pretty skin. Most Californians, she says, have ruined their skin's color and texture by the time they reach their mid-teens.

A "Hollywood High girl" who hung out on Will Rogers State Beach, Blanchard should know. She recently had a basal cell carcinoma removed from her lip.

"I won't deny that I like myself better with a tan, but today I regret any minute I ever spent in the sun. I'd rather be an unhealthy-looking alive person than an aesthetically pleasing corpse."

From Staff Reports

Shawna Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hill of Midland, has been named winner of the Miss Photogenic Midland of 1989 contest.

Other winners were Lisa Jacks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Jacks, first runner-up; and Heather Ferguson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Ferguson, and Tiffany Ray, daughter of Linda Ray, who tied for third place.

Natalie Roberts, Paige Prado and Elizabeth Coffman were given honorable mentions.

Miss Hill and Miss Jacks are juniors at Lee High School. Miss Ferguson and Miss Ray are seniors at Midland High School.

The contest was sponsored by Sam Hollis Photography.

Commercial technique workshop offered

From Staff Reports

Joan Stephens of New York City will conduct a commercial technique workshop noon to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at P.S. Images, 1105 Pueblo.

The workshop will cover some of the techniques of auditioning and feeling at home in front of the camera. With each eight hour workshop, participants will receive a television commercial acting textbook, personalized scripts and an on camera assignment with instant replay critiques.

The fee is $150 for the two-day workshop. For children eight years old and younger there will be a two hour workshop offered for $80.

Ms. Stephens began her New York television commercial acting school in 1979. She has molded the careers of hundreds of actors, actresses and spokespersons. She also conducts commercial technique workshops throughout the United States.

Partners shoot from hip with layout ideas

New York Times News Service

To Stephen Doyle, a 32-year-old conspirator behind the design of the magazines Spy, In Fashion and The New Republic, graphic design is a bit like driver's education.

"You communicate through layout," he said. "Type tells the reader when to speed up and when to put the brakes on."

In the hands of Doyle and his partners, William Drenttel, 35, and Tom Kluepfel, 33, typography is a turbo-charged vehicle through which mischievous and sometimes subversive ideas occur.

Their three-year-old firm, Drenttel Doyle Partners, has already had an impact on the look of American magazines.

Their design for Spy, with its collage-like use of tiny type, sidebars, background tints and snippets of information whispering like groundlings in the margins, has spawned a host of imitators, some seemingly separated at birth.

"We don't have a house style, but we do have a house thought process," Doyle said. "We like to analyze stuff to pieces, then shoot from the hip."

The firm was born on a spring day when Drenttel, then a senior vice president of Saatchi & Saatchi Compton, and Doyle, then an art director at M&Co., expanded their friendship and decided to talk business.

Today, they are attempting to "mix up the lines between design, advertising and marketing," in Drenttel's words.

He is reputedly the inspiration for Miles Drenttel, the supercilious ad man on the television show "Thirtysomething."

It seems one of the show's creators, Edward Zwick, is an old friend of Drenttel.

It is a dubious honor, but better Miles Drenttel than Michael and Elliot, characters in the show who ran an ad agency. As Doyle noted, "There's a major distinction; we're still in business."

The Mattress Center offers advice on mattress selection, comfort

At The Mattress Center, #1-A Dellwood Mall, owners Burt and Maryam Herrin take sleep seriously. Consider the following facts that affect your sleeping.

Seventy percent of people sleep on mattresses which are unhealthy for them. They are not getting the proper rest, therefore they are not functioning at their best level. The Better Sleep Council has notified all mattress manufacturers, requesting an all out effort to notify the public about how important it is to sleep on a mattress which provides the comfort and support needed to obtain healthful, restful sleep.

Permian Mattress and The Mattress Centers in Midland, Odessa and Abilene ask you to check the mattress or sleeping unit you are now using. Take your hands and feel your mattress without the bedding. If you feel springs or lumps, your mattress needs replacing. Even though you may think your mattress is comfortable, it is probably just something you've become used to. Remember, you spend eight hours a day every night for one-third of your entire life.

Before you buy a mattress, The Mattress Center recommends a three step process.

■ Lay on it for more than ten seconds. After all, you don't buy a pair of shoes without trying them on.

■ Check to see what the warranty is and what it covers. Notice what city the mattress is made in. On most warranties, the customer is responsible for returning the damaged product to the manufacturer, or you must wait for a factory rep to come and see your problem.

■ Make sure you have the right size of mattress in mind. Queen and king sizes provide more space for a more comfortable rest. Such sizes prevent rolling to the center.

At The Mattress Center in Midland, you can find virtually every mattress and every price category available on the retail market today. In the store are electric adjustable beds, tube water beds, latex foam rubber beds and high resilience premium foam mattresses.

"We are very excited to carry the Springwall Chiropractic mattresses," said owner Burt Herrin. "We feel like the Chiropractic mattress is one everyone can sleep on comfortably. It provides the proper amount of support that each individual's body shape and weight demands. Come in and take a free test rest on these and all of the other sleep ensembles available."

Also at The Mattress Center is a wide assortment of bunk beds, bedroom suites, solid oak and solid wood bedroom furniture. Many brass headboards in all sizes, wood and iron daybeds, some with hand-painted porcelain are in stock.

If you need just one mattress or one box springs, The Mattress Center will sell you just what you need.

Waterbed accessories for your conventional waterbeds and bladders, liners, heaters and conditioning are all at The Mattress Center.

"Our business is mattresses," concluded Herrin. "We have been making mattresses in West Texas since 1929. We are proud of the West Texas people for their continuous, hard working efforts and we will work hard to provide them with a bed that will give them the proper rest they need."

Stop by The Mattress Center soon, next to Kelly Moore Paints and across the street from Church's Fried Chicken. Call 689-0604 for more information.

Burt Herrin, left and Maryam Herrin, owners of The Mattress Center, invite you in their store to properly try out a mattress to suit your individual needs.

Zubiate's: A furniture specialist

Custom made furniture by Zubiate's Furniture Restoration adds a showpiece centerpiece to any room in your home or office. Hand crafted furniture has the advantage that you can adapt it to your decorating ideas. When you buy a factory production piece, on the other hand, is difficult, if not impossible, to change its appearance.

One of the best things about custom made furniture is that it is made to your own specifications, in whatever fine, durable hardwood you choose. Solid woods such as walnut, mesquite, maple and ebony hardwoods can be bookmatched for a beautiful, classic look you just can't get with most factory pieces.

One of the lovely looks of custom built furniture is the natural burls and figures of hard woods. This is something which factories often leave out. At Zubiate's, hand crafted furniture includes burls and figures on doors and inlays. Richard Zubiate and his staff can take a piece of wood that others may not use because it is too expensive or too impractical, and turn it into a work of art.

Every piece of wood is cut and fit individually. Drawers have to be fit just right. Each piece is chosen for the special purpose it is intended for.

Zubiate's uses the craft of frame and panel construction, which allows for wood movement during changes in humidity.

Custom veneers for doors and tops are cut to 3/16 of an inch, instead of 1/28 or 1/32, as in factory made pieces.

Choose a custom crafted piece from Zubiate's for a unique display case, a high boy entertainment center or a reproduction of an antique. Whatever your special needs, the professionals at Zubiate's can come with a beautiful, lasting work of art.

Besides building and designing furniture, Zubiate's also works with faux marble and custom finishes.

Richard is a meticulous worker who, in addition to building new furniture, can restore your damaged furniture to its original beauty.

Custom built solid wood furniture by Zubiate's Furniture Restoration, will be a showpiece for your home or office. Above is a front and back view of a piece of furniture made to the customer's own specifications.

Hidden treasures found in that old attic need not stay hidden any longer. Bring that piece of history into Zubiate's and receive in return a piece of furniture any homeowner would be proud of.

"In restoration work what you should try to do is leave the work as much like the original as possible," Zubiate explained. "Then you only replace the parts that have been damaged or may cause problems later on."

Call Zubiate's Furniture Restoration today and let Richard consult with you on a new work of art or a restoration piece. Call 682-5773 for more details or an estimate.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Crash of helicopter kills two during filming of war movie

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A helicopter filming an American action movie crashed and exploded today, killing at least two Americans and injuring five other people, officials said. Police said the injured included four Americans and the Filipino pilot, and all were in critical condition.

Investigator Joey Dimapilis said the Dolphin helicopter crashed at the foot of a hill near a mansion once owned by former President Ferdinand Marcos in Tagaytay, a mountain resort city 30 miles south of Manila.

Dimapilis said the helicopter was being used by the crew filming "Delta Force 2," starring American actor Chuck Norris. He said the bodies were charred.

The Rescue Coordinating Center and the film crew identified the two dead as Don Marshall and Gaddi Dansik. No hometowns were available.

The center said a third American may have been killed. But a member of the crew, Roland Santos, said they could confirm only Marshall and Dansik had been killed.

According to the center, the five injured were in critical condition and could not be moved. An aircraft from the U.S. run Subic Bay naval base was to fly to the crash site to pick up the injured.

The accident was the second involving a Norris film in the Philippines.

In 1987, a Philippine military Sikorsky helicopter rented by Norris' crew crashed in Manila Bay, killing three Filipino soldiers who had been working as extras.

The 1987 crash took place while Norris was filming "Missing in Action, Part III — Braddock."

The 1987 crash took place while Norris was filming "Missing in Action, Part III — Braddock."

The accident was the second involving a Norris film in the Philippines.

In 1987, a Philippine military Sikorsky helicopter rented by Norris' crew crashed in Manila Bay, killing three Filipino soldiers who had been working as extras.

Under Mexico's 1973 Foreign Investment Law, foreign ownership has been limited to 49 percent in most industries. The announcement came as negotiations on restricting the $107.4 billion foreign debt were to resume in New York. Mexico's pledge to modernize its protectionist economy are a crucial feature of the debt talks.

Europe will provide aid to Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Six European countries have agreed to provide a total of $50 million in economic aid to Nicaragua, according to President Daniel Ortega.

"The money will be used to keep the economy from collapsing and to help workers and producers," Ortega said Sunday on his return from a three-week trip to Western Europe.

Ortega's left-wing Sandinista government has said Nicaragua needs $250 million to support an emergency economic program to reduce inflation.

Ortega said Norway, Spain, Sweden, Denmark, Italy and Finland agreed to provide funds, but he did not give a breakdown for the amount promised by each country or say when or in what form the funds would be delivered.

He also visited France, Belgium, Norway, Greece, England, West Germany and Ireland.

Vatican calls for pornography laws

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican called today for tougher laws against pornography and violence in the media, arguing that freedom of expression cannot come at the expense of public decency or the moral welfare of the young.

The Pontifical Council for Social Communications issued a 13-page document that condemned pornography and violence in the media as a violation of human dignity and rights and Christian values.

"Pornography and sadistic violence debase sexuality, corrode human relationships, exploit individuals ... undermine marriage and family life, foster anti-social behavior and weaken the moral fiber of society itself," the document said.

The council said the media, lured by large profits, had "succumbed to the temptation of exploiting human weakness."

The document did not cite any specific cases or name any countries.

North Pole hikers on their way home

RESOLUTE, Northwest Territories (AP) — Eight explorers who trekked 620 miles to the North Pole to draw attention to humanity's assault on the fragile Arctic environment began their journey home looking haggard but happy.

The team on Monday flew to Eureka and then to their base camp in Resolute Monday night.

The explorers — from Britain, Canada, the United States, the Soviet Union, Japan, Australia and West Germany — reached the North Pole on Sunday and planted a U.N. flag. They were to fly to Ottawa today.

With their uncut hair and sunburned faces, the team members appeared haggard and exhausted on Monday night.

Expedition leader Robert Swan of Britain told a news conference that he hoped the trek, called Icewalk, achieved its goal of bringing attention to the environment and would spur politicians to do more to protect nature.

"We've got to work together as one world to take on the environment," said Swan, who became the first person to walk to the North Pole and South Pole. He had reached the South Pole in 1986.

The adventurers, who walked and skied, said temperatures were as low as 67 degrees below zero during the 56-day trek.

All suffered some health problems, from frostbite to influenza, but the American, Darryl Roberts, 23, of New York, suffered the worst.
