Plan to affect three Midland thrift branches

■ Clements comments on plan; Related story — 10C

From Staff and Wire Reports

A $2 billion assistance package to combine four insolvent thrifts into a Dallas-based savings and loan is expected to impact three Midland branches.

Southwest Savings Association, the state's 18th largest thrift has agreed to acquire 78 offices and branches of the four troubled S&Ls as part of a federal plan to revive the flagging industry

The plan, announced Wednesday, may be the largest merger in the federal Southwest Plan designed to rescue the state's ailing thrifts, officials said.

The four thrifts to be acquired within the next year are Stockton Savings Association of Addison; Lamar Savings Association of Austin, the state's 11th largest S&L; City Savings and Loan Association of San Angelo; and Briercroft Savings Association of Austin, said George M. Barclay, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas.

City Savings and Briercroft Savings both have branches in Midland. Briercroft has two locations — 200 N. Loraine St., and Illinois Avenue at Midkiff Street. City Savings is at 600 N. Marienfield St.

A spokesman for Southwest Savings in Dallas said it was too early to predict the fate of any of the Midland branches, that several months review would be required before making a final determination, but added that the branches that would be looked at first were those duplicating branches located near existing Southwest branches.

The spokesman was also unable to predict a name change for the Briercroft Building, now named for Briercroft Savings. "If there is a name change on the building, it will have to be worked out at a later date with the owner," he said. New banners and signs bearing the Southwest Savings name are reported en route to Midland.

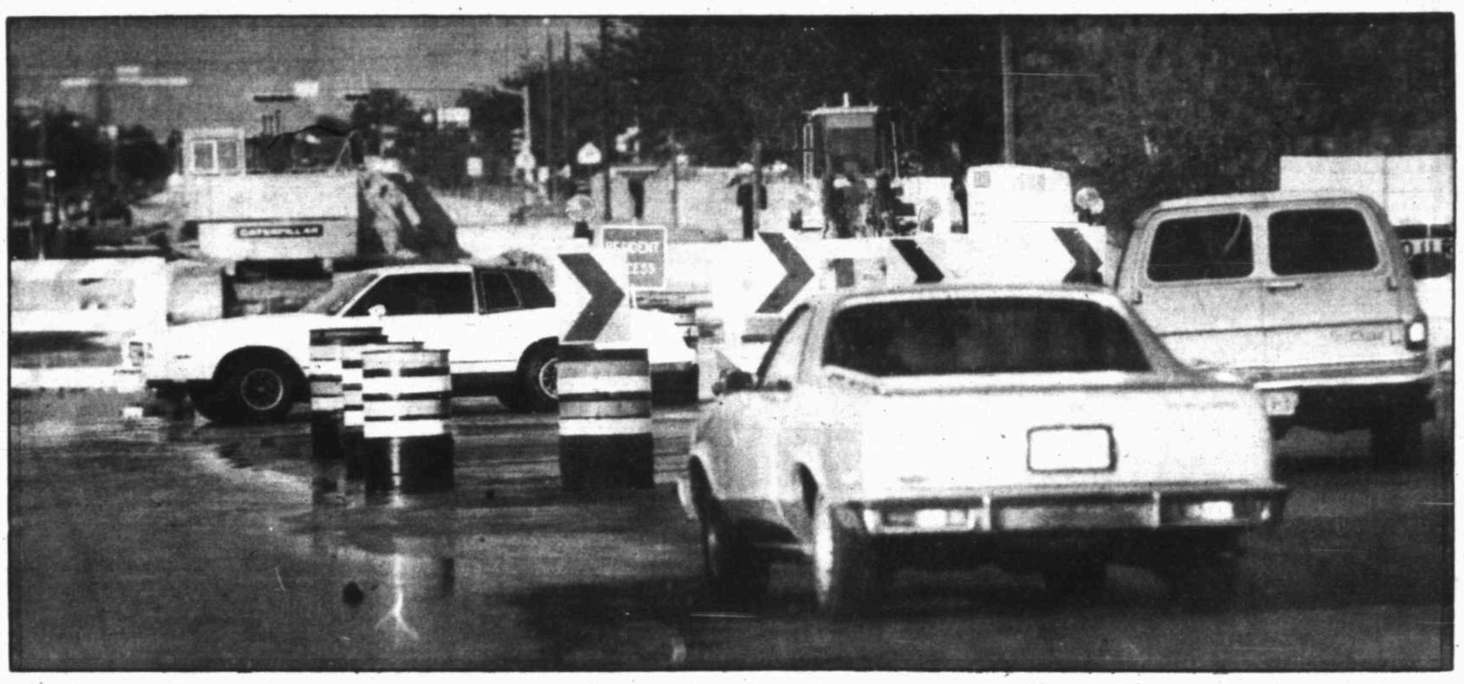

Locally employees of City Savings and Briercroft Savings said they were informed of the merger Wednesday afternoon. This morning all three Midland branches were answering the phone as Southwest Savings.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. will spend a record $2 billion on the deal over a 10-year period, Barclay said.

Southwest is contributing $25 million of subordinated debt to the consolidated company as equity, but no outside capital will be used.

The thrifts have combined assets of more than $4 billion, 75 percent of which are in commercial and "nonconventional" real estate, and combined deposits of more than $4.4 billion, Barclay said.

Rain during reconstruction of Wadley Avenue has caused a delay in implementation of the project's second phase.

Weather delays work on Wadley

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Recent wet weather has slowed reconstruction of Wadley Avenue and delayed plans for a major flip-flopping of traffic patterns that city officials had hoped to implement late next week.

"There'll be very little work out there today," observed project engineer Bill Greathouse this morning, referring to construction on the major east-west thoroughfare between I and Garfield streets.

Laying blacktop over dirt and gravel dampened by rain could result in potholes and asphalt "waves" when the street reverts back to general use, he said.

Compounding the problem is Wadley's position as a major flow route for flood waters from south-central Midland, he said. "It doesn't even have to rain on the street to slow the project down," he noted.

City crews are attempting to alleviate much of the problem by keeping manholes open during wet periods, he said.

The city's contract with South Texas Construction Co. of Midland calls for finishing the project within 125 days of its April 4 starting date. The contract also allows for 10 days of delay due to weather.

Greathouse said the contractor has applied for an additional extension because of utility lines found unexpectedly close to the surface. "When you're digging up an old street, you don't always know what you're going to find underneath," he said.

"As far as being on schedule — you have so many phases of it," he said. "Plus or minus three or four days is not going to make that much difference."

City engineers had hoped to implement the project's second phase of construction next Thursday, Greathouse said. But because of the rain, that phase and an accompanying change in traffic patterns will have wait.

Currently, Wadley between and I and Garfield only is open to one-way westbound traffic as contractors finish reconstruction of the south side of the thoroughfare.

Neighbors capture alleged rapist of 7-year-old

HOUSTON (AP) — A mob of neighbors chased down and apprehended a man accused of breaking into a Houston home and raping a 7-year-old girl, authorities say.

One of the neighbors said later that if they had known why they were chasing the man, they might have killed him.

The man was chased for about four blocks by about eight people, surrounded and held until police arrived, officers said.

"I think we basically got there before anybody had a chance to lay into him," Sgt. Bill Staney of the Juvenile Division told the Houston Chronicle.

Charles Franklin Ireland, 42, was being held in the Harris County Jail today in lieu of $20,000 bond on charges of burglary of a habitation and aggravated sexual assault of a child.

Ireland is accused of climbing through a window of a house late Tuesday and sexually assaulting the girl in her bedroom, Staney said. Her 5-year-old sister also was in the room and saw the attack, he added.

The girls were alone in the house while their mother worked at her evening-shift job. Staney said she normally had a baby sitter stay with the girls, but she told police she had no money to pay the sitter this week and left them at home with a padlock on the front door.

The girls' father does not live with the family, Staney said.

Neighbors saw Ireland climbing back out the window and heard the little girls screaming, Staney said.

"They could hear these girls screaming frantically," he said. "It's a mostly Hispanic neighborhood, so when the neighbors saw this big white guy coming out the window, they knew he didn't belong there."

Ireland did not resist and was not harmed by the neighbors, Staney said.

Guadalupe Ramirez, one of the people who chased the man, said they heard someone yelling and ran toward the house.

"We were behind him. There were about eight of us," he said.

"We were trying to catch him, but we really didn't know exactly why," Ramirez, 43, said. "If we had known what had happened he might have died."

Ramirez said Ireland started crying after he was caught.

"He just started crying, crying like a baby," Ramirez said.

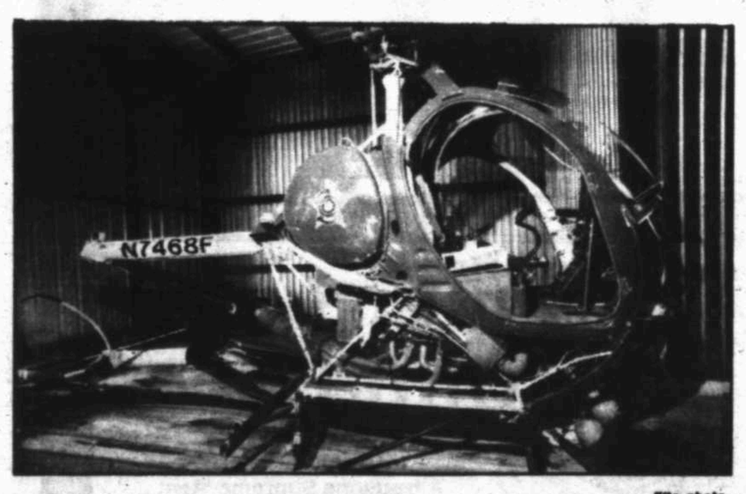

The girl was released from Ben Taub Hospital Wednesday after treatment.

Ireland, a welder, told police he didn't remember assaulting the girl, Staney said.

Ireland was charged in August 1984 after calling the local U.S. Secret Service and FBI offices from a northeast Houston telephone booth and making a threat against President Reagan.

Agents said his threat stemmed from a belief that Reagan was sending money to Africa instead of helping people in this country.

Staney said Ireland also was paroled from the Texas Department of Corrections in October 1982 after serving about five months of a two-year sentence for auto theft.

The damage to this helicopter, which crashed last week on an east Midland County ranch, may ground the county's plan to implement an air surveillance program, officials say.

Copter crash could ground county surveillance plans

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland County's plan to implement an air surveillance program may never get off the ground, Sheriff Gary Painter admitted after last week's helicopter crash that was blamed on the pilot's inability to steer clear of an angry cow.

The charging animal hooked its horn on the 1976 Hughes 300C helicopter's skid during a roundup Friday, forcing the machine to overturn.

"It may never fly again," said Painter in his assessment of the damage to the aircraft acquired for the purpose of conducting air surveillance missions across the county.

The county-owned helicopter, valued at $85,000, was covered under liability insurance, but was operating without protection from collision, the sheriff explained.

Commissioner Win Brown said Wednesday that commissioners expect Painter to give a detailed account of the events leading up to accident and his reasons for using the copter in the roundup.

Jackson blames racist remarks for plot

Associated Press

Democratic presidential contender Jesse Jackson suggested that racist comments by "irresponsible public leaders" helped create the climate for an alleged assassination plot against him. Republican George Bush, meanwhile, sought to put some distance between himself and President Reagan on Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

The presidential candidates were campaigning on both coasts — in California and New Jersey — as they headed into the final round of primary contests next month.

California's will be the biggest primary of the season, offering 314 Democratic delegates, with 109 at stake in New Jersey. Montana and New Mexico hold primaries the same day, with 43 Democratic delegates up for grabs between them.

Michael Dukakis, the Democratic front-runner, is working to lock up the Democratic nomination in the final four June 7 primaries. He expressed hopes Wednesday for a calm Democratic convention this summer, even as Jackson was renewing his objections to the party delegate-selection process.

Jackson, campaigning in Fresno, Calif., was asked about this week's arrest of a St. Louis couple accused of plotting to kill him. Londell Williams and his wife, Tammy, were also charged with threatening an informant and possessing an automatic rifle.

Papers filed in federal court indicated Londell Williams told an informer he was a member of The Order and other white supremacist groups, and that Jackson should be killed.

But lawyers for the couple said each denied belonging to a white supremacist group, and the FBI said no evidence had been found that the pair belonged to The Order.

Jackson initially downplayed word of the arrests, saying, "I cannot just focus on the two people arrested in St. Louis."

But later he told reporters: "The climate for this kind of antagonism and violence, of course, has been set by many irresponsible public leaders (whose) attacks based on race have set a divisive and dangerous climate, such as the one ... in New York in April, for example."

Jackson was apparently referring to comments by New York City Mayor Ed Koch during the New York primary campaign last month. Koch said, among other things, that Jews would be "crazy" to vote for Jackson.

Jackson met privately Wednesday with nearly three dozen rabbis and Jewish leaders in Los Angeles, in what he described as a "step toward healing the wounds." Many Jews were offended by Jackson's 1984 reference to New York as "Hymietown" and his association with Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan.

A dozen demonstrators outside the Hollywood hotel where the session was being held chanted "Lose, Jesse, lose" and "Jew hater."

Jackson was campaigning in California again today.

Bush, who wrapped up a seven-day West Coast campaign swing, made an anti-drug message his central theme Wednesday.

Campaigning in Los Angeles, he said that as president, he wouldn't "bargain with drug dealers-...whether they are on U.S. or foreign soil."

But he repeatedly refused to state his views directly on the administration's attempts to cut a deal with Noriega, who is under indictment on drug charges. In fact, he didn't even mention Noriega's name.

Bentsen 'flattered' by speculation he could be Dukakis running mate

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says he's flattered by talk he could join Michael Dukakis on the Democratic ticket for president, but he's much more interested in his job as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

"I enjoy being mentioned, and that's as far as it goes," says Texas' senior senator.

Should the two run together, they would be recreating a Texas-Massachusetts ticket like the one Democrats John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson rode to victory in 1960.

"I have absolutely no interest," counters Bentsen. "As chairman of the Finance Committee, I can make a difference and I enjoy that responsibility."

But Bentsen's fellow Texas congressmen say they wish he'd change his mind and consider becoming the Massachusetts governor's running mate.

Bush edges away from Reagan on Noriega negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush is standing just a little farther from Ronald Reagan's side today after proclaiming that a President Bush would not negotiate with either terrorists or drug dealers.

But the Republican vice president refused to criticize President Reagan for administration negotiations with Panamanian leader Manuel Antonio Noriega, who is under U.S. indictment for drug trafficking.

The GOP nominee-to-be didn't even mention Noriega's name as he touted his own drug enforcement policies on Wednesday in Los Angeles.

"Drug dealers are domestic terrorists, killing kids and cops and they should be treated as such," Bush said at the Los Angeles Police Academy.

NATION

"I won't bargain with terrorists and I won't bargain with drug dealers either, whether they are on U.S. or foreign soil."

Bush didn't expand on those phrases and repeatedly refused to comment on the Noriega situation directly.

But in background discussions, aides said that if Bush were to become president, he wouldn't do what Reagan is doing — offering to drop drug indictments if Noriega will yield his power in Panama.

"President Bush just wouldn't make a deal with a guy like Noriega," said one aide.

The vice president has never directly criticized the administration's dealings with the Panamanian leader.

Bush's latest pronouncement wrapped up a weeklong Western campaign swing that had been dogged by Reagan administration controversies. Those problems are sticking to Bush, he conceded Tuesday, helping drive down his ratings versus Democratic front-runner Michael Dukakis.

The Republican standard-bearer used this trip to New Mexico, Oregon, California and Washington to lay out some differences — if not dramatic ones — with Reagan. For example, he called Monday for action on acid rain, where the administration has for the last seven years called only for more study.

The Noriega situation is a particularly sticky one for Bush, for it hurts him on an issue — drugs — that aides say he wants to use against Dukakis in the fall. Bush chief of staff Craig Fuller said the speech is the first of a series by the vice president on drugs.

Asked why polls show Democratic front-runner Michael Dukakis is perceived as tougher on drugs, Fuller said:

"The voters will get a chance to decide who will be tougher on drugs...You can count on the vice president spending more time on the problem," Fuller added.

In words and actions, Bush worked Wednesday to emphasize his commitment to fight drug abuse and his different approach from Reagan's.

The vice president began the day with a private meeting with Los Angeles police chief Daryl Gates and then visited a storefront, raided by police earlier this month, where the potent cocaine derivative crack was sold and used.

Asked about the practical value of his visit to the onetime crack den, Bush bristled a bit.

"It's not show business," he said. "Anybody who has practical experience, you learn more from them. You try to learn and understand and then take action."

Then Bush visited an elementary school class in the city's Drug Abuse Resistance Effort — DARE — where police officers teach a course about drugs and how to reject pressure to use them, and went to the Los Angeles Police Academy to present awards to outstanding students in the DARE program.

Man denies plotting to kill Jackson

Williams

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — The man accused of conspiring to assassinate Democratic presidental candidate Jesse Jackson says he sympathizes with white supremacists, but denies belonging to extremist groups.

"I do have prejudices...against anything that isn't white," Londell Williams said Wednesday from a federal detention center.

Williams

The 30-year-old Missouri man and his 26-year-old wife, Tammy, were being held without bond in this city across the Mississippi River from St. Louis. Federal agents arrested them at their apartment Friday. The arrests were announced Tuesday.

"I did not conspire to kill Mr. Jackson," Williams said. "If the man makes it to president, more power to him.

"All I'd like to see is a president that is for the people. I imagine that's all any red-blooded American would want," said Williams, a construction worker and laborer.

Neighbors of the couple, who live in rural eastern Missouri near Washington with their three daughters, said the arrests surprised them.

"He seemed a down-home hillbilly type, and she was nice," Dave Siebert said. Siebert said he had seen guns in the Williams' apartment.

"Well, you walk into anybody's home in this area and they'll have a shotgun," he said. "But he had a rifle like the kind Rambo carries."

The couple are charged with conspiring to kill Jackson, threatening an informer and possessing an automatic rifle, authorities said.

Federal agents said Williams claimed he belonged to two violent white-supremacist groups: The Order and the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord (CSA).

Franklin County, Mo., Sheriff Paul J. Bruns said the case stemmed from an incident earlier this month, when his department received a call about a domestic argument in which a woman brandished and fired into the air what appeared to be an automatic weapon.

An informer told investigators that Williams not only possessed a rifle that had been converted to fire as a machine gun, but that he was also part of a plot to kill Jackson on June 21 or July 4, Bruns said.

The sheriff said the informer led officers to a wooded area, where they found the altered AR-15 assault rifle. Federal authorities were brought into the case May 10.

A Secret Service agent testified Tuesday that agents taped a conversation in which Williams told the informer the Covenant wanted the rifle back and was planning Jackson's assassination.

According to a criminal complaint, Jackson was to be killed because he "was getting too close to being president of the United States."

There have been about 100 threats against Jackson this year, according to his campaign. The threats have increased in the last month, Secret Service agents said.

Williams said he knew of no one conspiring to kill Jackson.

He said he had lived in a part of southern Missouri known for attracting members of extremist groups. He said he knew of former CSA leader James Ellison, who is serving a federal prison sentence, and that he knew Richard Butler, the head of the Aryan Nations, which spawned The Order.

"There's nothing in the hills that another hill person doesn't know," Williams said. "There are some things they do I support. I have been raised the very same way a lot of them have been raised, but I'm not part of their activities and I'm not a member of their groups."

Tom Den Ouden, who heads the Springfield, Mo., FBI office, said he had found no evidence Williams or his wife belonged to The Order or the CSA.

Londell Williams' mother, Mildred Williams of Norris, Ill., said her son "had no problem" with black people, and pointed out that his brother's two adopted children are black.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

A 40 percent chance of thundershowers is in the forecast for tonight, and a few may be severe, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the lower 60s and winds will continue southeasterly at 5-15 mph.

Friday's forecast is expected to be much the same with a 40 percent chance of thundershowers. The high will reach only into the upper 70s, and winds will be southeasterly at 5-15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 88 was 10 degrees cooler than the record high of 98 set for that date in 1946. The overnight low of 59 was 13 degrees warmer than the record low of 46 set for this date in 1971.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms, including some that may reach severe levels, are expected to continue across most of West Texas through tonight and into Friday morning.

The showers and thunderstorms were being triggered by a low pressure system at the surface in West Texas and an upper level storm system over northern Mexico.

Skies were to be clear to partly cloudy with warm to hot temperatures over the rest of the state.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s, ranging from the mid 50s in the Panhandle to the lower 70s along the coast in South Texas.

Highs Friday will be in the 60s in the Panhandle and in the 80s and 90s over the rest of West Texas, in the 80s and 90s across North Texas and in South Texas.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s and 70s over North Texas and South Texas and in the 50s in West Texas. Extremes ranged from 51 at Guadalupe Pass to 76 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 57 at Amarillo, 64 at Wichita Falls, 65 at Fort Worth, Waco and Austin, 67 at San Antonio, 63 at Houston, 74 at Brownsville, 57 at Lubbock, 60 at Midland and 68 at El Paso.

NATION

Thunderstorms dropped heavy rain on parts of Pennsylvania today, sending streams over their banks, while rain and drizzle fell over much of the northern Atlantic Coast and the upper Ohio Valley.

Showers and thunderstorms were common from western Minnesota and the eastern Dakotas to the central and southern High Plains.

A few showers dampened Florida. Widely scattered showers fell over the central Rockies and the Pacific Northwest. Fair skies prevailed elsewhere in the nation.

A thunderstorm in Nebraska spawned a tornado Wednesday evening south of Hershey, but no damage was reported. Thunderstorms produced dime-size hail north of Pecos, Texas, and at Statesville and Mooresville, N.C., and small hail in Colorado.

Several high-temperature records were set Wednesday, including 92 degrees in Fargo, N.D., topping the 90-degree record set in 1941; 94 in Lake Charles, La., beating the 92-degree mark of 1961; and 93 in Port Arthur, Texas, besting by one degree the 1933 record.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms from eastern lower Michigan, eastern Indiana and Kentucky to the Atlantic Coast, from central Maine to Maryland and Delaware, and from northwest Wisconsin to the upper Mississippi Valley, South Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming, eastern Colorado, western Kansas and northern New Mexico. Sunny skies were predicted for much of the rest of the nation.

Swaggart aide quits denomination

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The pastor of Jimmy Swaggart Ministries' Family Worship Center followed the television evangelist's lead and has resigned from the Assemblies of God Church, said two of the denomination's ministers.

The ministers, who asked not to be identified, said the Rev. Jim Rentz resigned both his ordination by the church and his position as a presbyter on the Louisiana regional council of the Assemblies of God.

Rentz resigned at a Monday meeting of local church leaders because he is going to align himself with the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart, one of the ministers said.

Swaggart, who is scheduled to resume preaching Sunday, withdrew from the church in April after the Assemblies of God defrocked him for refusing to accept a year's suspension for an admitted but unspecified sin.

An admitted prostitute has said Swaggart paid her $50 a visit to pose nude while he watched.

The Louisiana council originally recommended a three-month suspension, but later relented and accepted the national council's recommendation.

Swaggart said he would abide by the Louisiana council's original recommendation and would not preach again until May 22.

Rentz, who was co-pastor of the Family Worship Center with Swaggart before the evangelist stepped aside, has served as pastor during the last three months.

The Rev. Jerald Ogg, who was once a top Jimmy Swaggart Ministries official, was elected to take Rentz's place on the Louisiana council. Ogg left the ministries in April to start his own church.

Ogg confirmed that he had been elected sectional presbyter but would not comment on reports that Rentz had resigned.

Swaggart did not actually preach but spoke at length to worshippers during Wednesday services at the Family Worship Center. He took a microphone to lead the singing while the ushers in the church collected contributions.

Rentz also attended Wednesday's service but made no comments to the group about his reported resignation.

Swaggart laughed as he sang with the crowd of about 500 in the sanctuary, then spoke more soberly about his recent experiences.

"I want to apologize to some of you that have asked, over the past few days or even weeks, to see me," he said. "And, I have not seen anyone, that I can remember. I cannot recall seeing anybody."

Swaggart said he and his wife Frances had spent the last few days in "constant prayer." He said he had not even met with several people who wanted to give him money.

"It was hard to turn those down, and we haven't turned them down, but we really just haven't seen anyone," he said.

Swaggart said he and his wife asked God what he wanted them to do.

"We have sought, as earnestly as a human being can, to follow exactly his will because, knowing if we miss that will, even one little iota, even a tiny bit, that the consequences would be disastrous," he said.

Swaggart acknowledged, too, that the odds were "astronomical" against his fulfilling his call to "evangelize the world through television."

WADLEY

Under Phase Two, crews will divert their efforts to the street's north side, leaving southern lanes open only to one-way eastbound traffic.

When the change takes effect, westbound drivers "will find that they're going to have to go around," said Greathouse.

City-marked detour routes suggest those drivers use as alternates Loop 250 one mile north of Wadley or Golf Course Road and Scharbauer Drive one mile to the south.

The change also means eastbound drivers currently following the north and south detours will have access to Wadley, Greathouse noted.

The project engineer estimated contractors will finish Wadley's southern lanes by next Friday. Changeover efforts — including moving of barricades and detour signs — then would occur early the next week, he said.

The flip-flop will be small consolation to merchants at the Plaza Shopping Center on the southeast corner of Wadley and Garfield. Drivers during southside construction have had only limited access to the shopping center's entrances, but will have better access when work moves north.

Plaza merchants three weeks ago had asked the city to note on detour signs that business access, however tenuous, remained available during construction.

Jeff Sharifi, manager of the El Chico restaurant, said Wednesday that the new signs have not affected customer traffic very much, but "at least we don't hear the complaints anymore."

"There is really not much we can do while the construction is going on," he said.

With the clearing of Plaza Shopping Center entrances will come greater confusion in access across the street at Oakridge Square, Greathouse acknowledged. However, "We will attempt to make the access as easy a possible," he said.

At least one Oakridge Square merchant, gift shop owner Sue Gould, was supportive of city efforts during construction. "I really feel like they're doing everything they can," she said.

"If people want to come to my shop, they're going to make every effort to get here," she said. "When they tear up this side of the street, I may feel the effects, but I don't think it will be that bad."

But Gwen Thomas, owner of the Backstage beauty salon, was peeved that city crews shut off water service without warning in connection with construction. Some Backstage customers were in the midst of permanents and beauty mask treatments that needed water to complete, she said.

Later, another water shutdown took place at a time different than what was announced, causing some customers to seek service at a different beauty salon, she said. "That hurts. That hurts bad," she said.

Second phase construction on Wadley's north side between I and Garfield should take about three weeks, depending on weather condition, Greathouse said.

Crews then would move to Wadley between Garfield and Whitney streets and follow a similar phased plan — with continued one-way traffic — until the project is finished, he said.

CRASH

"We were lucky nobody was seriously injured," Brown said of pilot Jerry Lee, 47, who was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital for cuts, bruises and a twisted knee he sustained in the crash.

Commissioner Scott Welch, a proponent of the air surveillance program, believed the sheriff's use of the helicopter to make routine flights could help reduce criminal activity in the county.

The lack of a helicopter jeopardizes the entire program, Welch admitted.

Painter said last week that he had enlisted the helicopter's assistance in rounding up the 700 Hereford cattle, which deputies were ordered to seize. The sheriff described the cattle as malnourished based on information provided by the Midland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA).

According to the sheriff, the helicopter was rounding up cattle at the Turner Ranch, located on State Highway 158 and County Road 1379, when the accident occurred.

He said the animal lunged at the helicopter as it hovered about four feet off the ground and hooked one of its horns in a lower skid.

When Lee lost control of the aircraft, the rotor blade hit the ground and the machine capsized, coming to rest on its top, he added.

Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe ordered 650 head sold earlier this week and the remainder were returned to their 86-year-old owner, Lois Turner.

Proceeds from the sale went to pay for the cost of housing, feeding and rounding up the herd. The ranch was to receive the excess profits.

Decade's worst dust noted

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An unusually arid spring has kicked up what meteorologists are calling the worst blowing dust in at least a decade, damaging crops and creating hazardous driving conditions in Minnesota, South and North Dakota.

Light rain that fell in parts of northern Minnesota and North Dakota today will help somewhat, said Sam Standfield of the National Weather Service in Minneapolis.

"It will help at least keep the dust down for a while, but we're going to need more rain than this to end the drought problem," Standfield said.

In northern Minnesota, the dry spring has caused the worst conditions of blowing dust in a decade, said William Larson, head of the University of Minnesota's soil science department.

The dust has been even worse in North Dakota, says state climatologist John Enz. "Over most of the state, we've had the driest September-through-April since the 1930s," he said.

Conditions are poor in the northeast and northcentral sections of South Dakota, where officials have declared an agricultural disaster in 13 counties, said state climatologist Bill Lytle.

"There have been a lot of calls from farmers reporting crop damage," said Wally Nelson, superintendent of the Southwest Experiment Station of the University of Minnesota at Lamberton.

RACE

However, aides, speaking on background, said the message was that "President Bush just wouldn't make a deal with a guy like Noriega."

In Los Angeles, the vice president stopped in at a storefront, raided by police earlier this month, where the potent cocaine derivative crack had been sold and used. Later, he visited the Los Angeles Police Academy and said he would convene a Cabinet-level "council of war" against illegal drugs.

The delegate race is over on the Republican side — Bush mathematically clinched the nomination last month in the Pennsylvania primary.

On the Democratic side, Dukakis has dramatically widened his delegate lead in recent weeks. By the latest AP count, he has 1,643 to Jackson's 974.

Jackson's campaign has written to Democratic Party chairman Paul Kirk, complaining that under the delegate-selection process "the vote of the people is distorted."

Jackson has long maintained that the support of so-called "super delegates" — party and elective officials who have a vote at the convention — should be roughly in line with the popular vote. But under party rules, the super delegates are not bound to follow primary results in their states.

The letter to Kirk, signed by Jackson's campaign chief Willie Brown and Jackson adviser Walter Fauntroy, the District of Columbia's delegate to Congress, urged the party chairman to consider the "moral and political questions" raised by the rules.

BENTSEN

"Bentsen would be the tremendous asset that we need, for the main reasons that he's well respected, his seniority in the Senate and his knowledge of domestic and international problems," says Rep. Solomon Ortiz of Corpus Christi. "I hope he'll reconsider — then we'll have the Democrats in power again. He's fit, he's sharp and he's a Texan — he's got all the qualities."

Most of the state's congressmen who will be superdelegates to the Democratic National Convention in July appear lukewarm toward Dukakis, and only two — Reps. John Bryant of Dallas and Albert Bustamante of San Antonio — are committed to the governor.

Only two of the state's other Democratic congressional superdelegates are committed to other candidates — Reps. Kika de la Garza of Mission to Sen. Paul Simon, and Mickey Leland of Houston to Jesse Jackson.

The other 12 are uncommitted.

Some Texas Democrats say they're convinced Bentsen — who defeated George Bush for the Senate in 1970 — could help beat the Republican again, both in Texas and nationally.

But Texas Republican Party Chairman George Strake says he doesn't buy that, although he wouldn't mind seeing Bentsen, 67, on the ticket anyway.

"We'd just as soon see him do it," Strake said Wednesday.

THRIFT

"There's no desire to create megathrifts," Barclay said. "But when you absorb four institutions, you've got a lot of work in front of you. We don't have much larger institutions so we don't anticipate much larger transactions."

Barclay said even though the merger will begin with a large, 116-branch outfit, Southwest will quickly begin shutting down its duplicated services.

"Within six months of the transaction, Southwest will make a substantial reduction in branches, especially where there is duplication," he said.

C. Todd Miller, chairman and chief executive of Southwest Savings, said the company planned to substantially reduce the number of branches.

"We don't know how many branches we will close," Miller said. But he said customers of all the thrifts will be notified of branch closings by mail.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board has now resolved the problems of eight Texas thrifts under the Southwest Plan, which was announced by the board in February and initiated last week.

The Southwest Plan goal is to fold 109 or more insolvent S&Ls into 25 to 30 surviving institutions. Last year, Congress granted the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. authority to raise up to $10.8 billion from the industry to fund recapitalization of surviving thrifts.

The merger of four ailing thrifts into Houston-based Coastal Banc Savings was the first consolidation under the Southwest plan in a transaction that involved a $138 million contribution from the FSLIC. That transaction included $3.5 million from a private investment group.

"All of these transactions will be unique," Barclay said. "This one doesn't include outside capital. Some transactions in the future will have significant outside capital."

As part of its assistance in the deal, the FSLIC will provide Southwest Savings with a 10-year note worth about $483 million.

In exchange, the FSLIC will receive warrants to purchase 50 percent of Southwest's common stock. The FSLIC will receive 90 percent of Southwest Savings' first $60 million in profits.

David Colgren, a spokesman for the FHLB, said officials believe Southwest Savings will show a profit within two years.

Stockton Savings had total assets as of March 31 of $543 million with a net worth of negative $347.7 million and deposits of $784 million.

Lamar Savings Association, the object of a lawsuit filed by the FSLIC for regulatory violations, has total assets of $1.9 billion, a net worth of negative $331.9 million and deposits of $2.1 billion.

City Savings and Loan Association has assets of $687.3 million, a net worth of negative $221.9 million and deposits of $866.2 million. Briercroft has total assets of $868.1 million, a net worth of negative $22.7 million and deposits of $658 million.

Before Wednesday's purchase, Southwest Savings had total assets of $1.48 billion, a net worth of $27.6 million and deposits of $998 million.

Miller said the Southwest Plan should be completed within the next 12 months.

'Panic anxiety' common among adults

NEW YORK (AP) — Three out of every 20 adult Americans are so afraid of such everyday aspects of life as heights, air travel and enclosed spaces that they actually experience feelings of panic when confronted with them.

A survey conducted by the Upjohn Co. shows twice as many women as men acknowledged "panic anxiety."

Meese says resigning would be admission of guilt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III is launching a counterattack against his critics and telling conservative senators he won't resign in the absence of evidence of wrongdoing.

Meese's private lawyers said Wednesday that a Senate subcommittee report is "seriously wrong" in accusing Meese of violating a White House policy by assisting scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp.

In addition, Meese's counselor at the Justice Department, William Bradford Reynolds, claimed that subcommittee chairman Carl Levin of Michigan hadn't given the panel's members an opportunity to vote on the report.

In response, Levin said: "The report was circulated to every member of the subcommittee for comment...Release of the report was approved by the subcommittee members."

The report issued earlier this month says that then-White House counselor Meese and his deputy violated a White House policy barring contacts with procurement officials, resulting in favoritism toward Wedtech.

Meese's private attorneys, Nathan Lewin and James Rocap, said the subcommittee report was incorrect because the White House policy permits contacts with procurement agencies when the White House has a legitimate interest in information about procurement matters.

President Reagan had campaigned in the South Bronx, N.Y., area where Wedtech was located and had expressed an interest in promoting jobs in the area.

Independent counsel James McKay, who has been conducting a criminal investigation of Meese's involvement with Wedtech and other matters, is expected to issue a report in several weeks raising ethical questions about the attorney general's behavior, sources familiar with the investigation have said.

Meese told seven conservative Republican senators on Wednesday that if he resigned now it would be an admission of guilt when there is no evidence he has done anything wrong, congressional sources said.

The attorney general made the comment after being asked by one of the conservative senators whether he had weighed the possibility of quitting, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Meese's 90-minute, closed-door luncheon at the Capitol came two days after it was disclosed that the attorney general had fired his staunchly conservative chief spokesman, Terry Eastland, allegedly for not defending him aggressively enough.

After the meeting, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., told reporters the subject of Meese's future had come up "peripherally." Helms added, "I assume he'll be attorney general for the rest of this year."

The meeting was "a good, candid, frank, amicable discussion about the operations of the Justice Department," said Christopher Simpson, press secretary for Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who also attended the meeting.

"The best thing for all concerned is to wait to see the McKay report," added Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

In related developments:

— Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., has written to the House and Senate Judiciary committees accusing Patrick S. Korten, Meese's new chief spokesman, of making false statements while he was chief spokesman for the Office of Personnel Management, The Washington Post reported today.

In a letter obtained by the newspaper, Ford said he was stunned when Meese appointed Korten, who as OPM spokesman "lost all credibility...as a result of repeated instances of false and or misleading statements" to the House Post Office and Civil Service committee which Ford chairs.

— Peter Flaherty, chairman of the Citizens for Reagan, a 100,000-member lobbying group, urged Meese to "fight it out...My impression is that the attorney general is anxious to confront his critics and anyone who thinks Ed Meese is leaving soon is going to be disappointed."

Judge refuses to postpone Mecham trial

Mecham

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Gov. Evan Mecham has lost a last-minute bid to delay the start of jury selection in his criminal trial on charges of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

About 100 prospective jurors were scheduled to arrive at Maricopa County Superior Court today for the first step in choosing a jury for the case against the ousted governor and his brother, Willard.

On Wednesday, a state Supreme Court justice refused a defense request to delay the trial until the high court considers a defense motion to return the charges to the state grand jury. However, the justice agreed that the Supreme Court will hear arguments on that issue June 1.

The state Court of Appeals rejected a defense claim Monday that the Mechams were denied "substantial procedural rights" in the grand jury process.

The former governor said Wednesday he could not predict whether he will fare any better in court than he did at his state Senate impeachment trial. The Senate removed the 64-year-old Republican on April 4, a year into his first term.

"I haven't broken any laws," Mecham said Wednesday. "I looked at the laws. My attorney looked at the laws. We've had experts look at the laws. We haven't broken any of them."

The prospective jurors were to be given a questionnaire worked out by the prosecution, defense and trial Judge Michael Ryan and designed to ferret out obvious bias for or against the former governor.

The field is to be narrowed by the attorneys and judge with the remaining prospective jurors to be called back for questioning either Monday or Tuesday.

Mecham faces six felony counts on three charges — perjury, filing false documents and fraud — accusing him of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan. Willard Mecham, who was his brother's 1986 campaign treasurer, faces three similar counts.

Prosecutors said the Mechams failed to report the loan from Tempe developer Barry Wolfson on personal or campaign financial statements until after a newspaper reported the contribution.

The former governor could face up to 22 years in prison if he is convicted on all six counts.

If the attorneys are unable to choose an impartial jury from the initial pool of 100, defense attorney Michael Scott has said he probably will seek either to dismiss the charges or to move the trial to another location.

Scott said other motions may be filed before trial testimony begins, probably after Memorial Day. Both sides have said they expect testimony to take two to three weeks.

In papers filed Wednesday with the state Supreme Court, defense attorneys said the Mechams were entitled to "an adequately informed and properly instructed grand jury."

"Instead the attorney general's office, in its inordinate thirst for an indictment, and perhaps the celebrity that prosecuting a controversial governor can bring, repeatedly tested the very limits of judicial tolerance to which they might go in the manipulation of this grand jury," the defense said.

Mecham's attorneys contend that prosecutors were not justified in pursuing a grand jury indictment after an earlier grand jury was disbanded.

Also Wednesday, the defense asked Ryan to reconsider a claim that the Mechams were victims of selective prosecution.

Ryan has rejected several other defense motions, including a proposed change of venue and a motion by Willard Mecham for separate trials.

Mecham was convicted in the Senate of trying to thwart a death threat investigation and of misusing $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund by loaning the money to his auto dealership.

He also was impeached on charges of concealing the $350,000 loan, but the Senate decided not to consider that charge for fear of prejudicing Mecham's criminal trial.

Seven charged in bank scheme

CHICAGO (AP) — Two bank employees and five other men have been charged in a sophisticated embezzlement scheme that succeeded in siphoning nearly $70 million from the First National Bank of Chicago to banks in Austria.

However, U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas said Wednesday that the conspiracy was cracked before the suspects could withdraw the money transferred illegally from the accounts of three of First National's corporate customers.

Valukas said authorities had filed charges of illegal wire transfer of funds against two First National employees, a third Chicago man, and three men from Detroit. He identified Armand Moore, 30, of Detroit, as ringleader of the failed scheme.

Four of the men were arrested late Tuesday or early Wednesday. A fifth man, bank employee Gabriel Taylor, 27, has been charged but is cooperating with authorities.

Another Detroit man, Leonard Strickland, about 50, was still at large today, as was a seventh defendant identified in the criminal complaint only as "the Reverend," Valukas said.

The federal prosecutor said that $70 million was transferred illegally Friday from the accounts of three of First National's corporate customers — Chicago-based United Airlines; New York-based Merrill Lynch & Co.; and Louisville, Ky.-based distiller Brown-Foreman Corp. — to two New York banks.

The money then was transferred to three accounts in two banks in Vienna, Austria.

Valukas said no money had been withdrawn from Citibank and Chase Manhattan in New York, or from Creditanstalt and Focobank in Austria.

"But you could call this sophisticated in that the money actually made it to the (Austrian) banks," said Valukas.

First National spokesman Anthony Zehnder said neither the nation's 10th-largest bank nor the three corporate customers whose accounts were involved in the wire-transfer scheme would lose any money.

Valukas said authorities were attempting to determine whether the accounts at the Viennese banks were fictitious. Two were in the names of companies, Lord Investment Inc. and GTL Industries, and a third was in the name of Walter Newman.

"Our investigation into whether others are involved is continuing," Valukas said.

He said evidence would be presented to a federal grand jury as it considers further charges.

Congress to accept anti-drug task force

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress say they'll accept President Reagan's call for a bipartisan anti-drug task force, but some question his election-year timing and wonder why he didn't act sooner.

Reagan called Wednesday for the task force to find a consensus within 45 days on all aspects of the anti-narcotics campaign, and said the battle against illegal drugs is in danger of being "tripped up" by political debate.

Reagan's proposal comes as his administration faces mounting criticism on the drug issue, most notably for its willingness to consider dropping drug charges against Panamanian military leader Manuel Antonio Noriega.

And with elections approaching, the nation's politicians are trying to outdo each other as foes of drug abuse. Presidential candidates speak of the issue, lawmakers are demanding that the military be more involved, and congressional task forces in both houses are studying new, comprehensive legislation to supplement a major 1986 drug bill.

Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y. and chairman of the House select committee on narcotics, said of Reagan: "In this political year, he thought there was still something more that had to be done and I could not agree with him more."

But Rangel noted that the task force proposed by Reagan would report "on the eve of the Democratic convention this July and the August Republican convention."

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said Wednesday, "We welcome the president's belated leadership. We are ready to cooperate with him.

"We have already begun to work," Byrd said. "The administration has been lax in the treatment of this subject. The president has suddenly decided he will cooperate with the Congress."

On Tuesday, Byrd appointed a "Working Group on Substance Abuse" as part of the Senate's Democratic Caucus. The group, to report by June 29, will work to "expedite the consideration of legislation to strengthen existing drug laws and to provide additional resources for the drug abuse crisis."

Reagan made his comments in New London, Conn., in a commencement address at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy.

"If we cannot remove the politics from drugs, how can we hope to remove the drugs from our communities, workplaces and schools?" Reagan asked his audience of 159 white-uniformed, graduating cadets and their relatives.

"Illegal drug use is the foremost concern in our country. And, frankly, as I finish my final year in office and look ahead, I worry that excessive drug politics might undermine effective drug policy," he said.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said he "welcomes the administration's interest in the drug issue" and pointed out that the House established its own bipartisan task force on May 9 to produce a new drug bill.

Rep. Larry Smith, D-Fla. and a member of the House narcotics committee, said Reagan was "plowing old ground. We already had task forces and already had bills with bipartisan support. This is a feeble attempt to justify what has been a failed policy."

Funerals set for five young bus crash victims

RADCLIFF, Ky. (AP) — The state observed an official day of mourning today, as grief-stricken friends and families gathered to bid farewell to five of the 27 victims of one of nation's worst bus crashes.

The first funerals for crash victims were set for today for four girls who attended Radcliff Middle School: Mary Catherine Daniels, 14; Julie Ann Earnest, 12; Denise Ellen Voglund, 13, and Amy Wheelock, 14. A fifth, 14-year-old Tina Michelle Mustain, was to be buried in Tyler, Texas.

Flags across Kentucky flew at half-staff to honor the memory of the 24 children and three adults killed Saturday night when their bus was struck head-on by a pickup truck heading in the wrong direction on Interstate 71.

"If it were possible to turn back the clock, we would," Gov. Wallace Wilkinson said Wednesday in declaring today's official day of mourning. "Whatever consolation we can give will never make up for the loss of friends and loved ones."

A memorial service for all 27 victims was planned for tonight at North Hardin High School in Radcliff. Most of the other funerals were scheduled for Friday.

Although fatal bus crashes also occurred this week in Cleveland and New York state, a deputy administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said today that school buses are remarkably safe.

Miller, on the CBS' "This Morning," said that the Saturday crash "was no accident. This was a crash and this was caused by a drunk driver."

The Kentucky crash involved a converted school bus carrying members of a church group from an amusement park near Cincinnati. Most of the victims were military dependents or had ties to nearby Fort Knox. The service at the high school's 2,400-seat football stadium will include hymns and a performance by the post military band, said Lelia S. Haddle, secretary to Mayor Joseph Hutcherson.

The fort has also sent chaplains and counselors to help families.

'Blackouts' on cable TV predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's cable television subscribers will face "massive blackouts" in service under a new federal policy allowing local stations to buy exclusive rights to syndicated programs, cable industry officials say.

Under the policy approved 3-0 by the Federal Communications Commission on Wednesday, cable TV systems that broadcast the same programs in a local station's viewing area will have to black out the shows or substitute other programs.

Some in the cable industry are predicting dark screens and the demise of some TV superstations as a result.

Ted Turner, chairman of Turner Broadcasting Inc., which owns nationally distributed WTBS, said the new rules "do not give the cable industry a realistic chance to avoid massive blackouts."

FCC Chairman Dennis R. Patrick said the new rules will result in less duplication of programs and will provide an incentive to produce new programs.

"Blackouts will only occur if cable operators seek to cause turmoil for short-term political advantage, which I cannot believe they will do," he said.

The National Cable Television Association said it will challenge the rules in court.

"The FCC pulled the plug on the favorite TV programs of millions of people," NCTA President James P. Mooney said. "People whose favorite programs disappear will be angered and bewildered" and the cost of syndicated programming will rise, he added.

The rules will likely reduce how often TV viewers can see syndicated reruns of shows like "M-A-S-H," "Taxi" and "My Three Sons."

A cable subscriber now can see one of these shows several times a day if it is aired by a local broadcaster and by out-of-town superstations whose signals are carried by the local cable operator.

"The rule of reruns is what prevails today," Patrick said. He said that by giving broadcasters a measure of programming protection, the rules will increase the value of their programs to advertisers. More ad revenue, in turn, will foster production of new programs, he said.

In addition, cable systems will be forced to be come up with more programming, he said.

He also said cable systems should not have to resort to blackouts to comply with the rules because of a one-year transition period, a variety of exceptions that will be allowed and the amount of substitute programming that is available, Patrick said.

But the cable industry expects that at least some screens will go dark and that some of the smaller TV superstations may return to being just local stations.

That view was expressed by Jeff Treeman, senior vice president of United Video, the Tulsa, Okla.-based cable carrier that distributes superstation signals including WGN. He said cable systems in some large markets, where independents can afford to buy exclusive rights to programming, may have to black out or substitute shows for as much as 40 percent of a superstation's programming.

Similar rules were dropped by the FCC in 1980. Since then, cable systems have been able to carry the signals of out-of-town stations such as WTBS in Atlanta, WWOR in the New York area and WGN in Chicago, which have become known as superstations, even when those stations transmit programs whose rights were bought by a local TV station.

Under the new exclusivity rules, TV stations will be able to negotiate for exclusive rights to a syndicated program and will be able to force a cable system to honor that contract by blacking out that show when it is aired by a superstation on the system.

NATION IN BRIEF

Reagan plans to drop indictments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is ignoring Senate appeals and appears intent on offering to drop drug smuggling indictments against Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega in return for his resignation as defense chief.

The State Department's No. 3 official, Michael Armacost, said Wednesday that the objective is to find a way to remove Noriega from politics and withdrawing the indictments "may represent one means" of accomplishing that goal.

Armacost said that approach "may be a worthwhile way of proceeding" because Noriega would be beyond the reach of U.S. prosecutors so long as he remains in Panama. He noted that the U.S. extradition treaty with Panama does not provide for the extradition of Panamanian nationals.

On Tuesday, the Senate voted 86-10 to approve a nonbinding resolution expressing opposition to dropping the indictments.

Armacost made his remarks during a trans-Atlantic interview with foreign reporters sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency. His statement broke what had been a prolonged news blackout by State Department officials on the nature of the discussions with Noriega.

Middleburg student suspended

MIDDLEBURY, Vt. (AP) — The president of Middlebury College suspended a fraternity for hanging a battered female mannequin splattered with red paint from a balcony during a toga party earlier this month.

College President Olin Robison on Wednesday accepted the recommendation of the school's community council to ban the Delta Upsilon fraternity from living in its house next year or functioning as a social organization.

Members of Delta Upsilon also must participate in a sexism awareness course, said college spokesman Ron Nief.

The fraternity was deluged with criticism last week after several students complained about the mannequin used as a decoration at the party.

The mannequin's breasts were mutilated and splattered with red paint, and its head and face were bashed in, according to a letter of complaint seven students wrote to Robison.

Hastings impeachment begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lawyer who guided the Watergate impeachment proceedings against President Nixon in the House in 1974 is back on Capitol Hill to present the case for impeaching Federal Judge Alcee L. Hastings.

Returning today to testify before a House Judiciary impeachment panel is New York lawyer John Doar, a former assistant U.S. attorney general for civil rights in the mid-1960s and special counsel to the House Judiciary Committee in its move to impeach Nixon a decade later.

The deliberate, soft-spoken Doar was selected by a special, five-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta to lead its exhaustive, 3½-year investigation of Hastings' judicial conduct.

Hastings was acquitted in 1983 of conspiring to solicit a $150,000 bribe from two convicted racketeers.

But the judicial panel said it had found "clear and convincing evidence" that Hastings conspired with Washington lawyer William A. Borders to solicit the bribe in exchange for a promise of lenient sentences.

Group lobbies for cashing policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banks should be required to cash government checks for the elderly and the poor even if they have no accounts with the financial institutions, an advocacy group told lawmakers.

Peggy Miller, representing the Consumer Federation of America, told a Senate subcommittee on Wednesday that people on Social Security and welfare would be willing to pay a fee of $2 for the check cashing service by banks, even though legislation does not call for it.

Backers hope Senate ratifies treaty quickly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has overwhelmingly rejected the first conservative attack on the U.S.-Soviet medium-range missile treaty and backers say the chamber should now move quickly to ratify the pact.

In a key early test, the Senate voted 91-6 against a point of order raised by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who claimed that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev wasn't authorized to sign the treaty and the Senate should therefore not ratify it.

After that tally late Wednesday, Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "I think the vote we've just had is an indication of the strong support we have for this treaty. Let's get on with it."

Dole said he hopes the treaty is ratified before next Wednesday morning, when President Reagan leaves for his Moscow summit meeting with Gorbachev.

Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., agreed with Dole. "Let's do our work. Let's not fool around, which I think we are doing to a large extent on the amendment that was just defeated...I don't know what benefit there is in waiting until after the summit begins to ratify this treaty."

"There is no cause for further, untimely delay," said Exon.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., said "the American people want the president to have a ratified treaty in his briefcase when he meets" Gorbachev.

The Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty, signed Dec. 8 by Reagan and Gorbachev, calls for the elimination of all missiles with a range of 300 miles to 3,400 miles.

Helms contended that because Gorbachev was signing as the general secretary of the Soviet Union's Communist Party, he represented a political party and not the Soviet state.

"This document now at the desk is not binding on the Soviet Union. It is only an agreement between the president of the United States and the head of a foreign political party," said Helms.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, agreed with Helms, noting that "if Gorbachev is removed from power someday, they could easily come back and say he was only the head of the Communist Party and therefore the treaty is invalid."

But Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., responded that "there is no substance whatsoever to the claim that the treaty was not legally signed...Treaty making is a matter of common sense and wise judgment."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said there was no question that Gorbachev was representing his nation when he signed the pact.

"It is clear that Mr. Gorbachev and no one else in that delegation was the chief representative of the Soviet Union," Pell said.

Earlier, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said the treaty can be approved before Reagan goes to Moscow only if members limit themselves to "serious, legitimate amendments."

But Byrd noted that Senate rules make it easy for a single senator to offer a string of amendments and use other tactics that could delay a final vote.

Helms rejected what he said he were insinuations that he was raising technical points simply for the sake of delay. "What is occurring is not dilatory, but is instead and, in fact, deliberative," he told his colleagues.

The Senate still faces an unresolved fight over the legal interpretation of treaties.

That dispute arises from Reagan's claim that he has the legal right to unilaterally change how a treaty is viewed by the United States. He has asserted that right in relation to the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

Democrats who control the Senate have added an amendment to the INF pact which says no future president can reinterpret the pact without Senate approval. Republicans object to the addition.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said Wednesday that the interpretation amendment was a "booby trap" that "creates confusion and confrontation." He called it "a turf battle extraordinaire in which the Senate is seeking primacy in the treaty-making process."

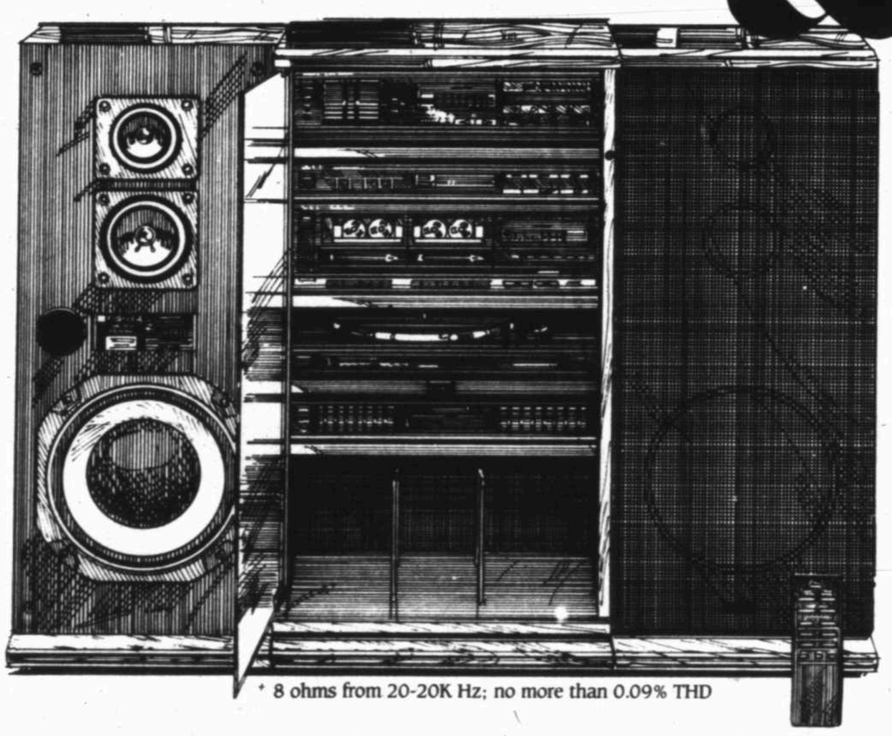

But Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., disagreed, arguing that the Senate should protect its rights. "If we do not do this, the Senate's role in treaty-making will be completely obliterated," he said.

Russian bear limps out of battleground

The bloodied Russian bear has finally begun to limp out of Afghanistan. That's no small "defeat".

Not since 1955, when the Soviet troops voluntarily left Austria, has the U.S.S.R. withdrawn from a territory that it took by force. In fact, this marks the first time the Soviet Union has been compelled to roll back the borders of communism because of a military defeat.

The 1,200 troops who led the evacuation from Afghanistan recently are the first in a nine-month pullout under the terms of the Geneva accords that call for the complete withdrawal of 120,000 Russian soldiers who were sent there nine years ago.

Most of the credit for the Kremlin's change of heart, of course, belongs to the Afghan freedom fighters who defended their country with extraordinary valor. Still, their victory was due in no small part to the Reagan doctrine that ensured a steady flow of weapons and ammunition to the resistance. Since 1979, the United States has sent the guerrillas more than $3 billion worth of military hardware, including Stinger missiles that destroyed nearly 200 Soviet planes. All told, an estimated 80,000 Soviet troops were killed or wounded. The Reagan administration has promised, moreover, to resume military aid to the freedom fighters if Moscow sends arms to prop up the puppet communist government in Kabul.

That government is almost certain to disintegrate soon after the departure of its Soviet protectors. So precarious is the position of Afghan President Najibullah that most experts predict that he and his henchmen will soon seek refuge in the Soviet Union.

A pitiful Afghan army numbering 30,000 men served the Marxist government and its Soviet overlords. Fewer than 10 percent of these undisciplined troops were considered reliable once the freedom fighters began to close in on the nation's larger cities. The only question is whether the seven guerrilla factions that coordinated their campaigns of liberation can compose their differences in victory and in peace. That seems unlikely in a nation long beset with tribal differences.

Undoubtedly, the Soviets are glad to be getting out of the Afghan quagmire. Several unnamed Soviet foreign-policy specialists conceded as much last week to Western correspondents in Kabul. They said the war was unwinnable militarily and that a political solution was unlikely so long as Soviet troops tried to occupy the country. They also admitted that, inasmuch as the Afghan regime lacks popular support, it was pointless for the Soviet Union to bear the economic and political costs of a prolonged, divisive conflict. And, they agreed that the war of attrition was impeding improved relations with the United States, Western Europe, and China.

So it is that Mikhail Gorbachev decided more than a year ago to staunch his "bleeding wound" in Afghanistan. One wonders whether he might be prompted to do the same in Ethiopia and Angola. Perhaps the inevitability of history coupled with a timely assist from the Reagan doctrine will persuade Gorbachev to cut Soviet losses with further withdrawals from global commitments that are draining his nation and creating more world turmoil.

Corruption plagues tropical nation

WASHINGTON — Shysters and con men from around the world test their scams in remote South Pacific islands — a fertile frontier for cowboys looking for a quick buck. The motto in many of the tiny tropical nations seems to be: Let's make a deal.

Jack Anderson

In recent years, the Republic of Palau has struck deals with an Australian hit man, a New York firm peddling bogus bonds and a London power company that put money in the pockets of Palauan politicians. That's a lot of double-dealing for a nation of less than 15,000 people.

There are 10,000 miles separating Palau's white beaches from Washington D.C., but the United States still has a stake in what happens in the island republic.

Palau is the last Pacific nation under a trust territory relationship with the United States. It falls under the authority of the Department of the Interior and receives two-thirds of its $15 million annual budget from the U.S. government.

Rumors of scandals in Palau have alarmed members of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. Last November, Chairman Morris Udall, D-Ariz., and Ron de Lugo, D-Virgin Islands, asked the General Accounting Office to investigate.

Since Palauan President Lazarus Salii came into office in 1985, he has shown a penchant for curious business deals. Salii signed a permit in March 1986 to let Australian Gary Camm run "charter aircraft operations" in Palau. Less than a month later, Camm was arrested in Manila for both alleged gun running and drug smuggling. He later confessed to being a hit man on a mission to kill a group of foreign nationals in Manila.

In 1986, Salii asked the United States for tax-free status on a $400 million industrial-development bond issue he had arranged with the New York investment firm of Mathews and Wright. The United States balked and the deal fell through. Mathews and Wright vice president Arthur "Abracadabra" Goldberg, and his partner were indicted last December by a Guam grand jury on 52 counts of fraud, bribery and obstruction of justice in Pacific nations and across the United States.

Salii succeeded the nation's first president, Haruo Remeliik, who was assassinated outside his home in June 1985. Salii's spokesman, Bonifacio Basilius, told us the whirlwind of charges against Salii were strictly "political. It's an election year here, too," he said.

Our associate Jim Lynch interviewed several former and present Palauan officials, who made it clear that Salii is more than the victim of political mudslinging.

"It got to the point where it seemed everything in Palau was for sale," said Paul James, who was Palau's assistant attorney general for seven months last year. "I have no doubt whatsoever that (Salii) is involved in every scheme whatsoever to manipulate the Palauan government to his own advantage." James left Palau "to avoid becoming an accomplice to what was going on." He is now an attorney in Washington.

Martin Wolff, formerly a legislative counsel to the Palau senate, left Palau several months after his car was firebombed in 1985. Wolff claims President Remeliik was assassinated shortly after announcing that he planned to expose a payoff scandal behind construction of Palau's power plant, a boondoggle that buried the nation in $32 million of debt. Wolff believes his own car was bombed because he also wanted to expose the scandal.

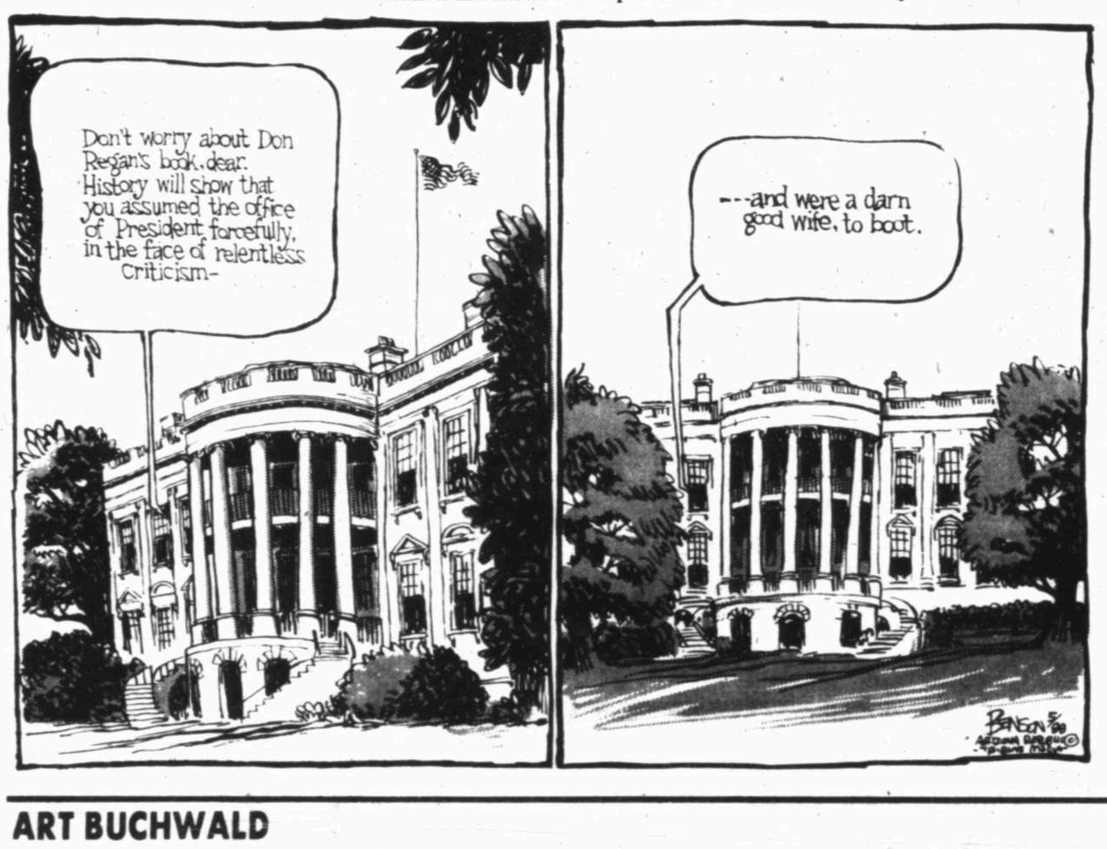

The builder of the power plant, International Power Systems Co., of London made $1 million in what the GAO calls "questionable payments" to Palauan officials. Salii got $200,000, which he claims was for legitimate business transactions.

Reagan administration officials say the ongoing congressional investigation into Palau is a stall tactic by the interior committee to avoid approving a Compact of Free Association which will give Palau its independence. The administration has been negotiating the compact in which Palau gets its freedom and agrees to an American military presence on the islands.

But a majority of Palau's National Congress backs the interior committee's stance, that the United States must investigate allegations of corruption in Palau while it still has some control over the country.

Seventeen members of Palau's congress sent a letter in April to Interior Secretary Donald Hodel urging him to continue investigating corruption in Palau. The Palauans' letter noted that their constitution gives them the power to investigate their own government, but that power is "meaningless when a gun is pointed at your head. ... Why is it necessary for us to have to remind you, again and again, that Palau is a trust territory and that the United States has responsibilities as well as rights in Palau?"

Rich focused on issues

During an election it is a challenge to find a candidate who remains focused on the issues instead of attacking the opponents. Frequently, the race begins with the candidates discussing the issues, only to end up with their focus on the other candidates and the inadequacies of their opponents. This makes it difficult for the voter to decide which candidate to support.

As I have observed Bob Rich during the Midland Independent School District school board elections, I've been impressed with his determination to focus on the issues, not his opponents.

I have been impressed with his desire to thoroughly educate himself about every situation which confronts him. He prepared for this race by becoming as knowledgeable as he could about the current problems and issues of our school system. He has continued to educate himself by having an open ear to the public, listening to our concerns and our suggested solutions. Therefore, I believe he will continue to research, listen, and make logical evaluations as a school board trustee.

Elections have a way of bringing out the true character of those in the race, often leaving the voters disappointed and frustrated. Likewise, this election has shown Bob Rich's true character. What I see now is what I have seen all along: integrity, honest open-mindedness and the desire to represent, not dictate. Bob Rich has been, and remains, my choice for MISD school board District 6.

Staley for equal schools

I am pleased to see that one of the school board candidates has championed the "equal schools" cause for Midland Independent School District.

The dedication of past school boards since 1960 to maintaining equal schools has made our Midland schools and community unique in the state. Other similarly sized districts have not made the effort for fairness and thus have ended up with an imbalance in the makeup of student bodies. Other districts have not realized that the makeup of a high school student body is as important to the quality of schools as any other factor.

Thank you George Staley for coming out and taking a firm stand. I hope that all those elected will continue to work for fairness for all in the composition of our two excellent high schools.

Robinson has know-how

Having just completed an oustanding term on the Midland Independent School District board, Betsy Robinson should be re-elected next week. Not only have Betsy's efforts brought national recognition to MISD schools, but she brings with her the necessary "carryover expertise" that will be so important to our new board.

A vote for Betsy is a vote for experience, dedication and good old-fashioned "know-how". Vote Robinson on May 21st.

New 'trick' in election

You can't teach an old dog new tricks and that goes for some of our old school board members, too. In spite of our new single-member district elections, some of our old school board members are so rigid in their thinking that they can't shake the at-large mentality. They are running ads in the paper to endorse a candidate who isn't even in their district, much less their precinct.

Are they going to try to vote for "their candidate" as well?

ART BUCHWALD

White House today means book tomorrow!

Mr. Richard Thompson, I see by your records here that you are 16 years old, and that you are applying for a high school internship at the White House."

"Yes sir. It has always been my dream to intern for the President of the United States."

Art Buchwald

"Could you tell me why you want to work in the White House?"

"I wish to write a book about my experiences there."

"You what?"

"Yessir. But I don't want to do one of those vanity type histories. I desire to tell the truth as I see it. I'm going to call it The Last Emperor With No Clothes."

"You sound very ambitious, but slightly disloyal."

"It isn't a question of disloyalty. The public has a right to know what the First Lady is really like. If she's running the country the citizens should be informed. I intend to describe in detail how it feels to work in a place where all decisions are controlled by the zodiac."

"And that's the reason you want to be a White House intern?"

"No, of course not. I hope to find out how the President makes up his mind and why so many of his advisers wind up in front of grand juries. This is not a 'kiss and tell' book, though I am determined to discover why the Reagan kids are always trashing their parents."

"Richard, what you've told me so far is very impressive, but it seems to me that you must have better motives for wanting to become an intern. Could you give me a few?"

"I do but they don't sell books. The way I see it, if this book is a hot seller I will earn enough royalties to go to college. Three publishers have promised to give me advances if I can become part of the White House inner loop."

"Is there any particular position you would like in the White House?"

"I want to be a gofer in the Oval Office. That way I can be in on everything the President does. Don Regan says that Mr. Reagan is very wishy-washy when it comes to the big decisions. I'd like to see this for myself, because to make the book work I have to be an eyewitness to history."

"I'm not sure that the Administration is looking for a high school intern who wants to be an eyewitness to history."

"Everyone else is writing a book about the Teflon President. Why shouldn't I? Please don't think everything I write will be negative. I plan to say nice things about the Reagans unless, of course, Nancy engineers my dismissal. You have to understand this sir, I'm a fighter and if the First Lady starts to push me around I'll get even."

"I keep looking over our requirements for the summer intern program and I can't seem to find an empty slot on the White House staff for someone who wants to write a book about us."

"I think it's very important that you have an intern who wants to author the definitive story on what happened here in the summer of '88. It is essential that we know what the Reagan Administration was like at the very moment it started to fall apart. Only a 16-year-old intern is capable of doing it."

"Well Richard, I must say you make a convincing case for an internship. Can we get back to you?"

"OK but please hurry it up. The Book-of-the-Month Club wants my story by September."

GEORGE F. WILL

Gramm prefers substance to cottage cheese

WASHINGTON — As the two probable presidential nominees tiptoe toward their rewards, dispensing rhetorical cottage cheese, Sen. Phil Gramm, the Texas Republican, is too polite to ask "Where's the beef?" But he knows how to provide some. He thinks about policy with a boldness both candidates lack and with a substance George Bush should borrow.

George F. Will

Seven years ago Gramm, an economics professor turned congressman, was a Democrat who could be forgiven for feeling that he and a few friends were at the wheel of the world. Back then, when the world was young and David Stockman was king, a handful of conservative Democratic congressmen, called boll weevils, were crucial to President Reagan's narrow win for his tax and spending cuts. Since then, Gramm has become a Republican, a senator and co-author of the emblematic legislation of this decade.

The deficit was $233 billion when Gramm-Rudman was enacted. If this year's Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction targets are hit, the deficit will be $136 billion and will have been cut in half as a percentage of gross national product. In the last 11 election years, spending has grown, on average, 10.5 percent. If Gramm-Rudman is enforced, spending will grow just 4.5 percent this year. Last year spending rose only 1.4 percent. The entitlement portion of government grew by more than that, but the non-entitlement portion shrank.

If Gramm's only objective were the confinement of government, his policy would be sterile. However, he connects that goal with growth of opportunity at home and of democracy abroad. It is, for conservatives, an agenda for social invigoration. For liberals, it is an example of what an agenda looks like.

Since the end of the 1982 recession, Gramm notes, the U.S. economy has created nearly 16 million jobs. The number of workers earning just the minimum wage has fallen 25 percent. The number of people working for businesses that employ 500 or more workers has declined. This decline testifies to entrepreneurship creating new businesses, to a shift toward smaller units of manufacture, and to efficiencies forced by foreign competition.

The dangerous drive for protection from such competition ignores some facts.

The quadrupling of America's trade deficit since 1982 has not prevented creation of 14 million new jobs, or a 28 percent decline in unemployment — while unemployment rose 17 percent and 20 percent in Japan and the European Community, respectively. The trade deficit did not prevent the economy from creating jobs three times faster than Japan and 20 times faster than West Germany. The trade deficit has not meant the eclipse of manufacturing. The deficit has coincided with an annual increase of 125,000 manufacturing jobs from 1982 through 1987. Today, as for the last 50 years, manufacturing is about 20 percent of GNP.

Gramm's doctrine of social invigoration has a foreign-policy application. Development aid has, he says, been based on a misunderstanding of the Marshall Plan's success. That plan was less important for its direct material aid than for its substantial reduction of trade barriers against European and Japanese goods. The Marshall Plan primed the pumps and opened markets.

The mistaken interpretation of the plan — that it was the New Deal let loose upon the world, exporting creative statism — has given rise to foreign aid that expands collectivism and the public sector in recipient nations. Proper policy, says Gramm, would emphasize the political fecundity of such economic rights as the right to private property and the right of contract. Capitalist empowerment of individuals breeds pressure for democratization.

A goal worthy of the American people, says Gramm, is to give nations not merely a slice of cake but the recipe for baking cakes. Trade should be conditioned on adoption of free-market policies.

Thanks to the recipe, Taiwan has a per-capita income 13 times that of Communist China. Thirty-five years ago, South Korea had a per-capita income of $50. Today it is $3,000 and South Korea is a world power, ninth in GNP, seventh in defense spending.

South Korea, Gramm believes, may be confirming the conservative hypothesis that economic development driven by capitalism generates pressures for democracy. The success of the Asian rim is not due to uncommonly talented populations, but to a capitalist system (it should be an American export) that elicits extraordinary efforts from common people.

Now, one need not subscribe to all the substance of Gramm's synthesis of policies. Various Democrats — Sens. Bill Bradley and Pat Moynihan are examples — offer alternative fusions of political theory and practice. All such examples of intellectual reach underscore how terminally timid are the current thoughts of the two cottage-cheese candidates.

Soviet official cites 15,000 dead in Afghan war

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet media official today confirmed that 12,000 to 15,000 Soviet soldiers died in Afghanistan during the Kremlin's more than eight years of military involvement in that country's civil war.

Eduard Rosental, a political observer for the government news agency Novosti, confirmed a recent report by the Paris-based Agence France-Presse news service that 12,000 to 15,000 Soviets had been killed in Afghanistan.

Rosental's comment during a news conference to discuss Afghanistan's history was believed to be the first time a Soviet official has approximated the death toll from the Soviet intervention.

He had been asked by a reporter how many soldiers had died in the war.

He reviewed various Western media assessments, including the AFP report, and said: "I think the figures cited by Agence France-Presse are more or less correct, but you can obtain more correct figures from our military men."

Gennady I. Gerasimov, the Foreign Ministry spokesman, has promised to bring high-ranking military officials to a news conference soon to discuss the war's costs in more detail, Rosental said.

A Soviet-inspired revolution in April 1978 brought a Marxist leadership to power in Afghanistan. The Kremlin sent troops and tanks in December 1979 to help the allied Kabul government fight U.S.-backed Moslem rebels.

Under a U.N.-mediated accord signed in Geneva on April 14, the Soviets began pulling out their 115,000 troops from Afghanistan on Sunday and are expected to complete the withdrawal within nine months.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said after the signing ceremonies in Geneva that his government would release casualty figures once the pullout began.

No date for the Gerasimov military press conference has been announced yet.

A U.S. State Department report released in December estimated the total number of Soviet casualties in Afghanistan since 1979 at "at least 33,000 to 38,000, more than one-third of whom were killed.'

That would make the number of men killed in combat between 11,000 and 12,700, or more. "Those estimates do not include heavy losses to disease," the State Department report added.

The report said disease is "rampant" among the Soviet troops, particularly dysentery and hepatitis caused by poor hygiene.

If the death figures mentioned by Rosental are correct, then the Soviet Union suffered far fewer losses in Afghanistan than the United States did in the Vietnam War.

A total of 47,253 Americans were killed or mortally wounded in combat in Vietnam and adjacent military theaters of Southeast Asia, and more than 150,000 were wounded.

Rosental rejected a reporter's suggestion that the Kremlin was abandoning an allied government still beleaguered by a nationwide insurgency.

15,000 Armenians rally in capital

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of people rallied in Armenia to tell authorities the sentencing of an Azerbaijani man does not address their demands that a neighboring region be annexed, a dissident source said.

"They think the problem goes deeper than sentencing guilty people," Vladimir Ryabokon, an editor of the dissident journal Express-Khronika, said Wednesday.

Ryabokon said about 15,000 Armenians rallied in the streets of Yerevan, the Armenian capital, on Tuesday, a day after Talekh Salekh Ogli Ismailov was found guilty of premeditated murder and given the maximum sentence of 15 years.

It was the first conviction in connection with three days of rioting that broke out in the Azerbaijani city of Sumgait on Feb. 28.

Ryabokon said there were no arrests by police during Tuesday's protest.

Dissident editor says KGB police took equipment

MOSCOW (AP) — The editor of a well-known Soviet dissident journal said police held him for a week and seized the computer and printer he uses to produce the magazine as well as its archives.

KGB security police "even took all the pictures off the walls," Sergei I. Grigoryants told reporters in his Moscow apartment Wednesday.

The editor said that his arrest and detention show that Mikhail S. Gorbachev's promised reforms have not ended civil rights violations by the state security apparatus.

The former political prisoner was arrested May 9 with four other people at a small country house he uses to produce his 11-month-old unofficial magazine, named Glasnost after Gorbachev's policies of more openness in society.

Grigoryants, a literary expert, said the officers had no arrest or search warrants, and a judge convicted him of "malicious disobedience" of a police officer and sentenced him to seven days in jail without a proper trial.

"It is a result of the demonstrably sharp deterioration in the situation in the country of people's rights," he said.

The actions show that Gorbachev's drive for democratization of Soviet society and openness has not meant more tolerance of dissent, Grigoryants said.

Grigoryants was released from jail Monday and the following day tried to visit the house in the village of Kratkovo, 25 miles southeast of Moscow.

Police sealed off the house and prevented him from entering, saying he must prove to a prosecutor he has the right to live there and that his property won't be returned until he shows evidence it belongs to him.

Grigoryants said, however, that a prosecutor told him the matter should be taken up with the militia. "It's not even clear to whom to turn," he said.

The editors of Glasnost hope to continue publishing, but they are having trouble getting needed equipment and offices.

Glasnost was the first privately controlled periodical to be published openly in the Soviet Union. Past dissident magazines had been published clandestinely and many of their publishers were arrested.

Grigoryants was sentenced in 1983 to 10 years in prison for writing for an underground bulletin on human rights. He was pardoned in February 1987.

His arrest May 9 came hours before a group seeking to found a political party called the Democratic Union planned to meet in his offices.

The weekly newspaper Moscow News has accused the Democratic Union of seeking to replace socialism with capitalism and called its members "convinced enemies of our system, the political and economic system of the Soviet Union."

The Democratic Union calls for multiparty parliamentary democracy, independent trade unions, a new constitution and the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Eastern Europe and areas of the Soviet Union seized in World War II.

Human rights group criticizes Gorbachev

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A human rights group said Andrei Sakharov, the Nobel Peace laureate, wrote Mikhail S. Gorbachev criticizing the Soviet leader for his handling of recent ethnic unrest in the Soviet Union.

"Glasnost appears to be crushed when it is most needed," wrote the nuclear physicist who won the Nobel prize in 1975.

The Bukovsky Foundation, a lobby group for Soviet dissidents, released excerpts of Sakharov's letter translated into English at its annual Sakharov Conference on Wednesday, saying it was written in April but never publicized.

Sakharov was invited but did not attend the conference on "Blank Spots in Soviet History," the Amsterdam-based organization said.

Now living in Moscow, Sakharov was exiled to the city of Gorky from 1980 to 1986 for criticizing his nation's intervention in Afghanistan.

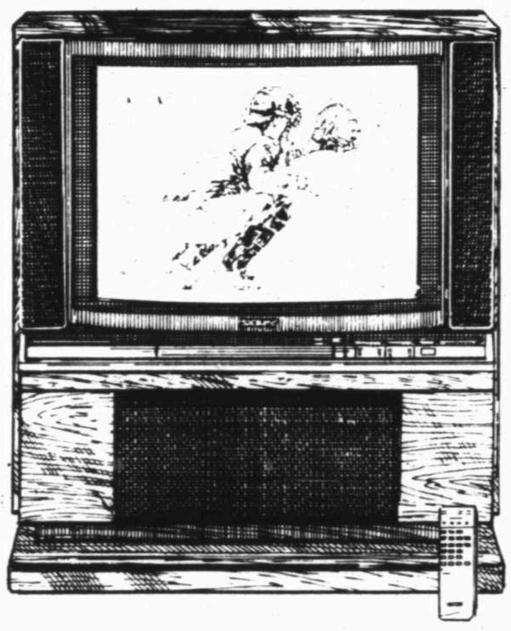

Expelled Soviet dissident Vladimir Bukovsky, for whom the foundation is named, Wednesday predicted that Gorbachev will have to increase consumer prices, and that could lead to unrest in Soviet society.

Gorbachev told Sakharov soon after receiving the letter that it would be published in the popular English-language weekly Moscow News if the dissident was willing to "soften some of his language," the foundation said in a preface to the letter.

Sakharov refused, the foundation said. It added that the letter was signed "with deep and sincere respect."

Gypsy magician juggles for a living on streets of El Paso

By BERTA RODRIGUEZ

EL PASO (AP) — The Gypsy magician and a county commissioner stood facing each other in the shade of the Courthouse, comparing notes on each other's jobs.

"You work in here?" Djando Jacques Odilon asked. "Are you a lawyer?"

"No, I'm a county commissoner," Charles Hooten said.

"You commission things for the county," Odilon, 45, said, "and I am a juggler."

Hooten tossed a quarter in Odilon's bucket. It bounced back out.

As Odilon picked it up, a bystander commented that the quarter didn't want to stay with Odilon.

"I will give it back to you," Odilon told Hooten. And he did, a gesture that may be what sets him apart from many of the other people who live on the streets of El Paso.

Odilon goes by the name "Djako" (pronounced jock-o). Since coming to El Paso two months ago, he has become a familiar face to downtown workers and visitors.

He juggles brightly colored rubber balls in the air to the jingle of bells wrapped around his ankles. He'll do card and sleight-of-hand tricks, but he won't accept money to tell fortunes. It's a rule he has set for himself.

Odilon is reluctant to relate specifics on names and dates about his family and his past, but said he is the son of a Frenchwoman and a U.S. soldier who met in Germany during World War II.

He said he was born in Caracas, Venezuela, in 1945 after the war and that the family later spent some time at Fort Bliss.

Odilon said that after his parents were divorced in the early 1950s, he went to live with his grandfather in Paris. He said he gets his Gypsy blood from his grandfather.

Odilon said when he lived in El Paso as a child, he would go to San Jacinto Plaza with his father, who would sit on the park benches with his friends. He remembers looking through the bars surrounding a fountain that used to be the home of alligators. To his child's eyes, the creatures looked like rocks, he said.

"Where did the alligators go?" he asked during an interview last week. Told that they were moved to the El Paso Zoo for their safety, Odilon shook his head sadly.

After living with his grandfather for four years, Odilon returned to the United States. "After that, I am here. An American guy," he said with a flourish.

Until 10 years ago, he traveled through the United States with circuses and carnivals, and doing some general labor work, he said.

Again, he declined to be specific about details and his travels since then. He refused, even, to say where he learned to juggle.

"Where does anyone learn anything in the world?"

A passer-by dropped a handful of coins in Odilon's bucket. They made a satisfying clunk.

"Ole! Buena fortuna a su vida," good fortune in your life, he said, a blessing he bestows on everyone who contributes to the till.

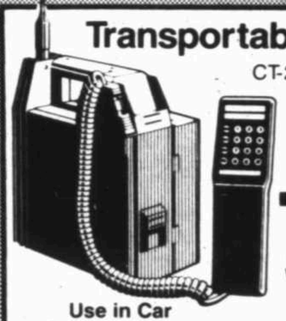

Odilon said he wants to dispel the stereotype images that people have of Gypsies as thieves and hucksters.

"Traditionally, Gypsies always travel. Why, I don't know," he said with a shrug. "We like to. We ought to wipe out every border. Let everybody go where they want."

Rape case expected to go to jury

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A jury was scheduled to hear final arguments today in the trial of a Midland man who was found asleep on a couch just after he allegedly raped a 67-year-old woman at knifepoint.

Albert McAfee, 28, is accused of aggravated sexual assault and burglary for the Dec. 15, 1987 attack on the woman in her one-bedroom southeast Midland home. He is being tried in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Court.

Early today attorneys for both sides conferred with Baskin about the court's four-page instruction to the jury.

The instruction was delivered to the jury and deliberations were expected to begin by this afternoon.

Defense attorney Paul Williams called only one witness during the two-day trial, when he recalled the victim to the stand Wednesday.

She told the five-man, seven woman jury she never actually saw the blade of the pocket knife the attacker threatened her with.

But in response to questions from prosecutor Robin Sams, she said she had heard the knife "click" open.

Much of the testimony in the trial was medical and scientific, including the fact that the woman — who was widowed in 1963 — contracted gonorrhea after the attack.

But a test that was performed on the defendant was negative, according to testimony.

Pathologist Dr. David Shneidman, who was called to the stand by Ms. Sams, testified that the gonorrhea virus is "fastidious" and sometimes eludes best efforts to detect it.

A man who has the disease could be tested, and the results of that test could be negative, the doctor said.

"A positive is significant, but a negative doesn't necessarily mean anything," Shneidman said.

But on cross-examination, he told Williams accurate gonorrhea tests aren't difficult to admininster, and in fact "tens of thousands" are given every year in the United States.

According to earlier testimony, the woman was attacked after a man forced his way into her home. He forced her to undress and raped her at least twice before he fell sound asleep on the couch, testimony stated.

Police entered the home a few minutes after the attack, and found McAfee asleep on the couch, several officers testified. He was shirtless, and had a pocket knife in a pants pocket, according to testimony.

If convicted, McAfee has requested through his attorney to be sentenced by Baskin. He faces up to a life sentence if he is found guilty.

Grave ornament theft angers parents

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The mourning following the death of a child and then her burial on her fourth birthday was grievously compounded with anger and shock when parents of Sheri Michelle Broyles discovered that some of their daughter's grave ornamentation had been disturbed and stolen at Fairview Cemetery.

Michelle, who had suffered from leukemia, died on May 12 and was buried on May 14 — her birthday.

Her parents, Owen and Melba Broyles, returned to the grave the next morning to find a satin pillow, formerly pinned to a cross, and baskets for floral arrangements missing.

"It was bought for my daughter — in honor of Michelle — and not for anyone else," the grieving mother said. "I think that we were just shocked that something like this would happen and more shocked that anyone would do that. Some people don't have respect for anybody or anything at any time."

The mother's pain and anger over the pilfering seemed further to deepen her grief.

"A part of you has died," Mrs. Broyles said of the loss of her daughter. "And you feel that your soul has been ripped out, and you'll never be the same."

Her daughter was "extremely loving, full of life, meticulous and organized," Mrs. Broyles, 36, said. "She was just the type of child every parent dreams of having. Everything you'd want in a child, Michelle was that. Easy to handle. She never gave me a hard time about going to the doctor's office."

Michelle was Mr. and Mrs. Broyles' second-born child. Another daughter, Melissa, is 9 years old, and a son, Shawn, is 16 months old.

Copper Daugherty, sexton of the Midland County-owned cemetery, was disturbed over the tampering with the grave.

"We don't have a great deal of it (vandalism)," Daugherty said. The cemetery is closed at nights.

"This little girl was buried on her fourth birthday," he said Wednesday. "And the mother, when she called me on Monday, was really distraught. Somebody has just got to be sorry to do that" to the child's grave.

Daugherty said that perhaps the person who took Michelle's satin pillow and the dainty baskets "might repent or bring back the pillow and baskets or at least they'll think about it. I just get upset talking about it."

"I wish there was some way somebody could bring them back and not say anything or leave it by the (cemetery) office," Daugherty said. "It's like her mother said, 'They were Michelle's.'"

Glenwood expansion planned

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Expansion plans are under way to nearly double the size of 15-month-old Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital, an official said today.

In addition, Glenwood will add programs, services and recreational facilities, said Russ Thomason, the hospital's interim administrator.

The Midland hospital will add 48 beds to its 64-bed capacity, Thomason said this morning.

Currently, 36 hospital beds are devoted to children and adolescents and 28 beds are designated for adults, he said.

The 48 new beds likely will be used for adolescents and adults, Thomason said.

"We're hoping that expansion will enhance the programs we have in place, the administrator said.

"The expansion also indicates there is a need for it in the Permian Basin."

Glenwood is the only psychiatric hospital in the Permian Basin.

Though Glenwood still has a few vacancies, Thomason said the expansion is needed to ensure that no one would ever have to be turned away for treatment.

The hospital will also add an outdoor park and playground for its children's programs, he said.

A new gymnasium will be built which will also serve as an auditorium.

All of God's creatures have 'plenty of smarts'

Todd

Just yesterday, I read a magazine treatise that proposed to be an enlightening revelation: "How Smart Are Animals?"

Interesting.

Essentially, the article said nothing that just about any old country boy or girl doesn't already know.

Of course, they're smart.

How smart?

Very smart.

Smart enough to survive.

And smart enough to find their way in the dark without a flashlight or a Seeing Eye dog, too.

"Can Animals Think?" asked the piece.

Of course.

Don't be foolish.

You might ask, "Can Humans Think?" But the big question is, "Do They?"

There is plenty of evidence to support whichever argument your temperament opts for at any particular moment.

The headline to the article made a statement every country lad and lass and their enlightened city kin would appreciate: "The Wisdom of Animals."

Mankind's limited ability to discern smartness is necessarily hampered by mankind's vantage point.

Humans see and perceive things the human way and, blindly, often fail to consider that animals in the sky, on land and in the waters likewise have their peculiar ways.

"...Different creatures live by different forms of awareness," astutely said the article.

That concept is the mark of an enlightened soul who is primed for more enlightenment.

Oftentimes, learned scientists and opinionated laymen dismiss animals' keenness with one word: "Instinct."

And when birds, fish and cats find their way "home" in the dark over long distances, is that feat not to be held in wonderment?

Or do we dismiss it and say, "dumb luck," "dumb coincidence," or "dumb genius."

'Tis the genius of a species.

And so was physicist Albert Einstein a genius among his species within his field of research.

The point is this: All of God's gifted creatures, from that beauty called wildlife to the tamed critters, have plenty of smarts. And were those creatures to experiment with humans and to gauge man's and woman's intelligence by their own standards, complexities and perspectives, how, indeed, would humans fare?

Ennis man dies in wreck

An Ennis man was killed Wednesday afternoon and his wife seriously injured when their car ran off Interstate 20 and struck a concrete bridge support, the Department of Public Safety reported.

John Curthbert Abell Jr., 67, was pronounced dead at the scene at 2:49 p.m. by Howard County Justice of the Peace Willie Grant. The accident occurred in Howard County, five miles east of Coahoma, according to reports.

Betty Abell, 64, suffered multiple fractures and lacerations in the accident, and was taken to Scenic Mountain Medical Center in Big Spring. She was listed in stable condition, reports said.

The couple was traveling in a 1985 Oldsmobile two-door eastbound on I-20 in the outside lane, when Mrs. Abell, who was driving, apparently fell asleep at the wheel, DPS reports said.

The car veered off the north side of the road, struck a bridge overpass and became airborne. The car rolled over at least once, reports said.

The driver and passenger wore safety belts, the DPS report noted.

Agencies receive offerings

Offerings from "A Night to Honor Israel" in the Permian Basin, held May 2, have been presented to two charitable agencies.

Checks for $1,500 each have been presented to the Jewish National Fund and Hadassah, organizers Jack and Judy Stone announced.

Accepting the JNF contribution was Dr. Robert Podhurst of Houston, Southwest Director of the fund.

Podhurst, who was present at Midland's Holiday Inn Convention Center for the event honoring the 40th anniversary of Israeli statehood, said the money will be used to expand the Permian Basin Forest. He expressed deep appreciation for this area of trees, established after the first "Night" in May 1987, and West Texans' role in reclaiming Israel's barren land.

The gift earmarked for two hospitals in Jerusalem was received by Bernice Edelstein of Brownsville, president of the Texas chapter of Hadassah. That 76-year-old service organization operates its medical facilities with no regard for religion or national origin, treating all persons in the Middle East.

Quality Circles improve departments' efficiency

By LYN MILLER

What is composed of a small group of employees who meet on a regular basis for the purpose of identifying, analyzing and solving quality problems which arise concerning particular work areas? Give up? It is a Quality Control Circle.

The Quality Circle program came to the attention of the city of Midland when former City Manager Jim Brown visited the John Gray Institute in Beaumont in 1985. This privately funded, non-profit institute is associated with the Lamar University System. The primary mission of the institute is to promote economic development and to facilitate improvement in productivity and quality of work life.

In December 1985, a half-day manager's awareness workshop was conducted at City Hall by a representative of the John Gray Institute. In this workshop, basic concepts of the program were introduced to the City Administration. A Steering Committee was appointed in January 1986, for the purpose of accomplishing the planning and initiation of the Quality Circle program for the city of Midland.

A part time facilitator was appointed by the City Manager to oversee the total Quality Circle effort, to serve as liaison with the John Gray Institute and to arrange for the training for the program. The pilot training Quality Circle program began in May 1986 with an in-depth, one-day steering committee program and a series of two-day leader and team training programs taught by representatives of the John Gray Institute.

Presently the city of Midland has 15 active circles which represent 12 different departments. These meetings afford the members (city employees) an opportunity to express ideas and opinions with regard to their particular work areas. As a result, several changes have been made in various departments which have improved efficiency, saved money and/or raised the morale of the employees.

Some of the improvements initiated are as follows:

In the Police Department, duplication of information in certain reports has been eliminated;

Radios have been installed in the Code Enforcement Division's vehicles which has increased efficiency and enhanced safety for that division;

The Customer Service Department has implemented the use of a "door hanger" message card for the purpose of notifying residents who are not at home of a visit by a worker from that department and/or the type of work performed. Utilizing this means of communications has decreased unnecessary phone calls to the department, improved public relations and saved time for both office workers and service representatives;

The Department of Airports instigated a departmental picnic which was a big success, aiding employee relations and raising employee morale;

Several departments have initiated an "employee of the month" program, which has proved very successful.

These are but a few of the specific improvements accomplished by the Quality Circle program, but on a broader scale, the program has brought to the attention of the employees the importance of communication, not only between employees and the management, but also the public.

It has, in some cases, prompted departmental cross training and regularly scheduled staff meetings, and has promoted increased training in safety.

The Quality Control Circles are in the process of attaining many of the goals and objectives for which this program is designed, such as:

1. Promote job involvement and employee motivation;
2. Enhance the quality of services provided by the city;
3. Promote more effective teamwork;
4. Promote employee decision making;
5. Further communications with the organization;
6. Improve the professional posture of hourly workers;
7. Improve management-employee relationships.

Both the management and the employees of the city of Midland are pleased with the results of the Quality Circle program and will continue to evaluate ways of improving efficiency in providing services to the residents of Midland, as well as making Midland a leader among Texas cities. To learn more about the Quality Circle program, contact Lyle Winjie at 683-5422.

GLENWOOD

"This will allow us to hold more seminars and programs for the public," Thomason said.

A majority of the patients Glenwood has been treating suffer from depression or adjustment problems, the administrator said.

Those two conditions often stem from a divorce, death in the family or loss of job, Thomason said.

With construction and expansion will come additional employment opportunities at Glenwood, he added.

Thomason said he had no dollar figures on how much the expansion will cost.

Construction should begin this fall and be completed by the following spring.

Glenwood is owned by Healthcare International, an Austin-based firm which owns 24 hospitals in nine states.

Texas does weak job of protecting poor, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The percentage of poor people living in Texas is significantly higher than the national average, but the social safety net designed to protect them is one of the nation's weakest, a new study says.

In addition, the state's poor face significant tax burdens in the form of sales taxes, said the report by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a non-profit research organization.

In its research, the group measured the 50 states and the District of Columbia using what it called 10 modest standards of assistance to evaluate whether safety nets were sufficient.

Texas and three other states — Alabama, South Dakota and Indiana — met none of the standards, but programs being implemented in South Dakota and Alabama take them off the zero-standards list, said Robert Greenstein, executive director of the center. No state met all 10 standards.

The center defined the poverty level as $11,629 for a family of four in 1987, and its study focused on states' benefit programs and income-related policies such as cash and medical assistance programs, food stamps, unemployment insurance and low-income housing.

Greenstein said Texas' recent economic problems and traditionally high unemployment rates and poverty along the border don't entirely explain its inadequate safety net.

"You can't say it's because it's one of the poorest states — it's now around the middle or slightly below the middle (32nd from the top in per capita income)," Greenstein said. "It leads you to conclude it is internal policy decisions."

Another problem may be that the state's revenue base "is not that large" because Texas does not have an income tax and "may not have the state resources to provide as adequate of a safety net," he said.

Beyond that, however, "you're talking in part about the political weakness of low-income people in Texas and the generally conservative cast to state politics," Greenstein said.

But other more conservative states have better safety nets, as do other states with lower per capita income, he said.

The report said an estimated 15.9 percent of the population of Texas, or 2.6 million, people, were living in poverty in 1985 — putting the Texas poverty rate almost 2 percentage points above the national poverty rate of 14 percent.

"For those who are poor in Texas, eligibility for government assistance and the level of benefits they receive are highly dependent on whether or not they are working, married, elderly, disabled, parents or children," the report said.

"Those who qualify for assistance are unlikely to receive a level of aid that lifts them close to the poverty line."

The report said Texas' level of Aid to Families with Dependent Children cash assistance to single-parent families ranks 48th among the states and the District of Columbia.

A mother and two children with no other income received a maximum AFDC benefit of $184 per month in 1987, which the report said equaled less than one-fourth of the poverty line.

Since 1970, maximum AFDC benefits have delined 57.7 percent in Texas after adjusting for inflation, the report said, "the steepest decline of any state in the nation."

Texas also does not provide AFDC benefits to two-parent families with children, unlike 28 other states. It also lacks a general cash assistance program for poor single individuals and childless couples who are not elderly or disabled.

Many poor families are also left out of Medicaid coverage, the report said. And elderly and disabled people may receive the basic federal Supplemental Security Income grant, but that leaves them below the poverty line and Texas is not among 27 states that supplement this coverage.

The report said Texas has not adopted any of the state Medicaid options that would extend coverage for elderly and disabled poor people beyond what is required by federal law.

Texas also has a restrictive unemployment insurance program and in 1986, 23 percent of unemployed Texas received unemployment insurance benefits in an average month, the report said. Texas ties for fifth-lowest unemployment insurance coverage rate in the nation.

For unemployed two-parent families and their children who do not qualify for unemployement benefits, or who have exhausted their coverage, little or no safety net exists. The same is true for jobless single individuals or childless couples who are not elderly or disabled.

"They are ineligible for virtually any cash assistance, regardless of how poor they may be. In many cases, they are ineligible for health care coverage as well," the report said.

Texas trucker rams his way through traffic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A rampaging tractor-trailer driver from Texas allegedly rammed more than two dozen vehicles along 40 miles of freeways Wednesday, leading the California Highway Patrol on a chase through heavy rush hour traffic.

No one was seriously hurt, the CHP reported, but some people whose cars were struck suffered minor injuries.

The truck was "apparently intentionally ramming other vehicles on the westbound San Bernardino Freeway" near San Dimas, about 30 miles east of Los Angeles, CHP spokesman Mike Maas said.

Altogether, more than 24 accident reports were made, Maas said.

"He was just going straight ahead," said CHP Officer William Cobb, who pursued the trucker along the Hollywood Freeway, where the chase ended. "Whatever got in his way, he just kept pushing."

Near the end of the 40-mile swath of destruction, Cobb said he flashed his lights at the driver, trying to get him to stop. Cobb said he turned on the siren of his motorcycle, to no effect. Finally, he pulled alongside and motioned for the trucker to pull over.

"He looked at me, shook his head and said, 'No way,'" Cobb said.

The Highway Patrol, joined by a police helicopter and a dog unit, finally stopped the 18-wheel rig in heavy traffic as it was plowing ahead at about 5 mph, Maas said.

The driver, identified as Charley Tom Lee Jr., 25, of Haltom City, Texas, was stopped shortly before 4 p.m. and booked for investigation of numerous counts of assault with a deadly weapon — his truck.

Lee also was to be booked for investigation of possession of a controlled substance, evading arrest, reckless driving and possessing a concealed, loaded weapon.

On the Hollywood Freeway, the truck hit about a dozen vehicles, closing three traffic lanes and creating a traffic jam more than 10 miles long.

The semi-tractor trailer was bound for Los Angeles with a load of ironing boards, and the driver's route was traced by accidents reported on the Pomona and Hollywood freeways, Maas said.

"We had just a trail of accidents reported as we were trying to catch up with this guy," Maas said.

"It was in very heavy traffic and at very low speeds, and the truck was ramming his way through the traffic," Maas said.

Justice goes to weight-loss clinic

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Justice William Kilgarlin has a weight problem and is at a Florida clinic for two to four weeks because of it, a newspaper reports.

Richard Jenson, the justice's political consultant, told the Austin American-Statesman that Kilgarlin's weight condition has been aggravated by consumption of alcohol.

Jenson said Kilgarlin has no drinking problem that he knew of and that "the real problem is his weight," the newspaper reported Wednesday.

Kilgarlin, 57, a Democrat, is up for re-election this year. He faces Republican Judge Nathan Hecht of the 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas.

Jenson told the American-Statesman he didn't know where in Florida Kilgarlin had gone, but said Kilgarlin left late last week and would return to Austin in two to four weeks.

"They're going to try to set up a long-term weight reduction and maintenance program for him," Jenson said.

Justice Oscar Mauzy said Kilgarlin's doctor has told him for some time that "he's been gaining too much weight and has told him if he didn't stop it, he would have to put him on a strict diet, and I guess that has happened."

Justice Franklin Spears said that despite his absence, Kilgarlin intended to remain active in court business and left his votes on cases considered Monday and Tuesday.

Spears said Kilgarlin has "never told me, but he weighs over 300 pounds and he has high blood pressure. He's just flirting with a stroke. I remember the last time he went he came back and he had lost a lot of weight and he was on a diet and exercise program.

"But he had gotten busy, quit exercising and gained an enormous amount of weight," Spears said.

Degree at end of road for female truck driver

AUSTIN (AP) — Ruth Burtenshaw of Nova Scotia was a high school dropout at 15, a truck driver at 17 and — after experience in the "real world" — will get a college degree at 25.

Ms. Burtenshaw will be among 5,000 University of Texas at Austin degree candidates at commencement exercises Saturday night.

"Ruth obviously did not follow the usual road in getting into UT," said Dr. Jane Lippmann, associate dean of liberal arts.

Ms. Burtenshaw said, "I was a rebellious and frustrated ninth grader — far from a shining student. I got fed up and quit."

She attended Commercial Safety College in Nova Scotia and became a professional truck driver at age 17, hauling everything from watermelons to peanut clusters in a route from Bakersfield, Calif., to New York City.

Later the 5-foot-5, 120-pounder tried to get work in Texas, but said "unless you weigh 300 pounds and have gravy stains on your T-shirt, it's hard."

"Reality was slapping me in the face — I had no future," she said.

But Ms. Burtenshaw passed her high school equivalency test in Austin and enrolled at Austin Community College. She also had a part-time job, and one day while making a delivery to UT's Admissions Office, she decided to fill out an admission form.

General concerned about use of military in war in drugs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Concerns about the military being used in the nation's war on drugs have been voiced by a top military commander who says it takes away from the military's primary work, national defense.

"We have to be careful," Army Gen. James J. Lindsay, Special Operations Command chief, told an Armed Forces Week audience Wednesday.

"The primary mission of the military is still the defense of the nation," Lindsay said, "but we need to address the drug problem in this country as well as others."

Lindsay made his remarks to about 300 people attending a luncheon sponsored by the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce and San Antonio Rotary Club.

Some members of Congress, including many liberal members, want to give the military broad police powers to battle the drug trade, he said.

"They want to give us nightsticks," he added. "We just want to defend the country."

Part of his command's mission is to be prepared to fight low-intensity conflicts in other parts of the world, Lindsay said. And drugs, he said, often are involved in some countries' struggles.

"In Columbia, the guerrillas are better equipped than government soldiers because of arms they buy with drug money," he said.

Congress created his unit after failures on long-range raids like the doomed 1980 mission to rescue American hostages in Iran and operational difficulties between services during the Grenada invasion, Lindsay said.

Special Operations Command is a joint-service command formed in 1987 with staff members of the Army, Marines, Navy and Air Force.

It has 35,000 troops, 20,000 on active duty and 15,000 in the reserves.

Special operations units have the capability to fight as guerrillas, run deep penetration raids into enemy territory, perform reconnaissance missions far behind enemy lines and help allies prevent guerrilla warfare in their countries, he said.

Rice's 'Yeastie Boys' rise to occasion

HOUSTON (AP) — What do U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and Mr. Potato Head have in common?

Rice University sophomore Douglas C. Elliot knew the answer, and it propelled the college team into final competition for the 1988 College Bowl.

Koop and a costumed likeness of the famous toy shared a stage on Nov. 17, 1987, during which Koop accepted Mr. Potato Head's pipe to highlight an anti-smoking publicity campaign.

In the U.S. National College Bowl finals May 27-29, Rice will face 15 other schools on the Chicago campus of the University of Illinois. The Rice team finished second in the national contest in 1982.

The 1988 Rice team, called "The Yeastie Boys," won a regional contest in Baton Rouge, La., in February, defeating Louisiana State University.

Among the other teams in the competition are Harvard, Princeton, Kent State, North Carolina State, the University of Chicago, the University of California at San Diego and Indiana University.

'Beastmaster' gets prison sentence

HOUSTON (AP) — The so-called "Beastmaster" has been given a five year prison sentence.

Gary Durkovitz, 35, received three concurrent five-year terms after pleading guilty to two charges of indecency with a child, and one charge of sexual assault of a child.

Last month, Durkovitz was convicted by a San Antonio jury of injury to a child, and given a 10-year probated sentence and fined $5,000 in connection with an attack by a lion he owned that mauled an 8-year-old girl.

In the Oct. 10 attack, Roxanne Hernandez was severely injured when the 350-pound lion, which Durkovitz was using at a flea market exotic animal show, became excited and injured her.

After the mauling, Durkovitz's landlord found photographs of nude boys on the walls and floors of Durkovitz's apartment and turned them over to investigators.

Prosecutors claimed the boys — now ages 9, 12 and 15 — were lured into sexual acts with the promise of performing with animals. The charges date back to Jan. 5, 1986.

Prosecutor Alice Brown said Durkovitz agreed to the plea bargain as did the families of the boys involved.

'Non-violent' man sentenced to die

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A 32-year-old man described as non-violent by friends and as a killer and liar by the prosecution has been sentenced to die by injection for the shooting death of a Corpus Christi policeman.

Because a jury in 117th District Court determined that Alberto Alaniz Valdez of Corpus Christi shot Sgt. Dan Bock deliberately and poses a continuing threat to society, Judge Robert Blackmon on Monday sentenced Valdez to die by injection, as required by law.

Valdez, 32, was convicted Friday of capital murder after the jury of eight women and four men deliberated almost one hour. He was found guilty of the Sept. 9, 1987, shooting death of Bock, 40, a 13-year veteran of the Corpus Christi Police Department.

Valdez was accused of shooting Bock with his own service revolver as they grappled after a high-speed chase. Bock was shot four times — twice in the head.

Valdez testified last week that not he, but a friend named "Chico," shot the officer.

Capital murder conviction upheld

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has upheld the capital murder conviction of a defendant who killed a man after arranging to meet him on the pretext of buying his Medina County lake property.

In a 7-1 opinion, the court Wednesday affirmed the life sentence given to Lynn Murphy Creel in the October 1981 kidnapping, robbery and murder of Wilson J. Smith.

Creel had arranged to meet with Smith, whose wife had befriended Creel's girlfriend, to talk about the lake property, according to court records. Creel later told his girlfriend he had Smith in his van, and later indicated Smith had been killed, records say.

Creel took Smith's watch and ring, according to records. Smith's decomposed body was found in a barn in January 1982.

The Bexar County appeals court affirmed Creel's capital murder conviction, as did the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Bus crash victim to be buried

TYLER (AP) — Funeral arrangements were pending today for a girl who died in a fiery bus accident in Kentucky that killed 27 people.

Lloyd James Funeral Home in Tyler was handling the funeral and burial of Tina Michelle Mustain, 14, of Radcliff, Ky.

Ms. Mustain's relatives, including a grandmother and two uncles, live in the Tyler and Chandler areas.

She was an eighth grader at Radcliff Middle School who was active in band, basketball and softball. She was a member of the Radcliff First Assembly of God church, which owned the bus.

The bus collided head-on Saturday night with a pick-up being driven north in the southbound lanes of Interstate 71 near Carrollton, Kentucky. The man driving the truck has been charged with 27 counts of murder.

Dallas postal employees arrested

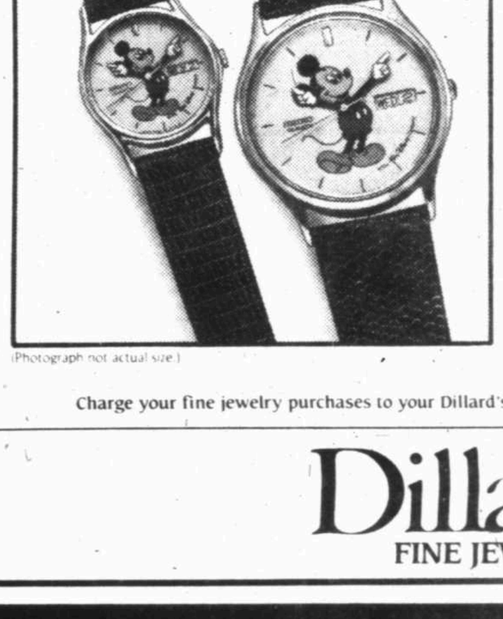

DALLAS (AP) — Two postal employees sought on charges of trafficking cocaine and marijuana at the Dallas Main Post Office have surrendered, authorities said.

Postal inspectors conducted a nine-month undercover investigation into drug use at the Dallas post office and arrested 10 employees Tuesday, said U.S. Postal Inspector Jim Travell.

The final two employees suspected in the case, Jay C. Allen, 34, a mail handler, and Dianna Stephens, 39, a mail processor, surrendered to officials Wednesday morning.

The employees are accused of selling between a quarter-ounce to several pounds of marijuana or between a half-gram to a quarter-ounce of cocaine to undercover officers at the postal center, Travell said.

Officials say others may have taken Jewish funds

Nachman

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The late head of West Germany's Jewish community may not have acted alone in the apparent embezzlement of millions of dollars of government funds earmarked for Holocaust survivors, prosecutors say.

The family attorney for Werner Nachmann, who died in January, said Wednesday that he had been unable to determine where the missing money had gone and that Nachmann may have squandered much of it.

The family has filed for bankruptcy in Karlsruhe, where Nachmann lived and ran a wholesale textile business.

Nachmann, who headed the Central Jewish Council for 23 years until his death from a heart attack at age 62, may have had accomplices in the scheme, said Manfred Roething, a spokesman for the Karlsruhe prosecutor's office.

He said investigators would seek to determine "whether other parties may be liable for prosecution as accessories."

Government officials have vowed to bring the truth to light. A top aide to Chancellor Helmut Kohl is to meet Friday with Heinz Galinski, who succeeded Nachmann as council president.

Jewish leaders have expressed shock and outrage. They say they believe Nachmann had for years embezzled money earmarked for Holocaust survivors around the world, which he was in charge of disbursing.

Galinski said Nachmann appears to have stolen more than $6 million.

But Peter Paepcke, the Nachmann family attorney, said he believes the late Jewish leader may have embezzled up to $15 million and used some of it to bolster his failing business.

Paepcke, who said he had worked for Nachmann for a decade, indicated he believed Nachmann had squandered some of the money. He said he filed for bankruptcy March 30 for Nachmann's heirs and the Karlsruhe-based company.

"I do not understand this yet," he told West German television. "The sums of money that were apparently taken should have been more than enough to cover (the Nachmann business') debts."

"I can only conclude that perhaps the money also went elsewhere," he added without elaboration.

Eberhard Braun, a court-appointed investigator who has been examining Nachmann's financial records, told The Associated Press he found unexplained income of $13 million in Nachmann's company records.

Jewish leaders vowed to launch their own investigations to help clear up the case.

"We will use all legal means at our disposal to take action against everyone who took part in this," Hanover Jewish leader Michael Fuerst said in a telephone interview.

Nachmann, who became Jewish Council president in 1965, was in charge of disbursing about $236 million that had been allocated by the government in 1960 for Holocaust survivors who had not previously made reparations claims.

Korean protesters battle police for third day

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Protesters battled riot troopers with firebombs and rocks in the center of Seoul for a third day today after police broke up a funeral march with volleys of tear gas.

The demonstrators called for an end to President Roh Tae-woo's government and demanded that the 40,000 U.S. forces based in South Korea under a mutual defense pact be forced to leave.

Clashes began when riot police fired volleys of tear gas to break up thousands of students trying to march past City Hall. The huge crowd fled as showers of tear-gas bombs exploded in its ranks.

Students retaliated with firebombs, rocks and bricks and battled police for control of the city's main shopping area. Firebombs exploded against buildings and among squads of riot police.

"Down with the military dictatorship" and "Drive out the Yankees," protesters screamed as they hurled rocks at police.

Riot police seized dozens of protesters and roughly hauled them away. Both sides hurled rocks at and hit each other. Police declined to give any figures on arrests or casualties. It was the worst rioting in several months.

In the southern city of Kwangju, 3,000 students yelling anti-government slogans battled riot police with firebombs and rocks today at Chonnam University. The battle began when police fired tear gas to stop the students marching into the streets.

About 3,000 students march out of Chonnam University after a rally denouncing the governments of South Korea and the U.S. in Kwangju, South Korea, today.

Fighting started in Seoul after authorities allowed 25,000 people to march and stage rallies for more than five hours in memory of Cho Sung-man, a student who committed suicide on Sunday in a ritual form of anti-government protest sometimes used by radicals. His body was to be taken to Kwangju for burial.

The funeral procession marched through the center of the city, snarling traffic for miles.

"Down with the murder regime," marchers shouted as musicians in white mourning clothes beat drums and cymbals. Singers chanted dirges and dancers in white performed a ghost dance.

"We will never end our struggle until we destroy Roh's regime," said one angry woman student.

The march ended in front of City Hall, where protesters burned an American flag as speakers denounced the government. Marchers were to disperse under an agreement with police, but many started to march again and police attacked.

Black police armored vans fired salvos of exploding tear gas bombs into the marchers and hundreds of cars were stranded in the sprawling City Hall square.

About 5,000 riot police in green combat fatigues poured into the streets and chased fleeing students.

Students seized several nearby streets and set fire to part of a subway station and some shops as they hurled firebombs at police. Terrified pedestrians fled, many choking from the tear gas. Shopkeepers locked their doors.

Fighting swirled around several luxury hotels in the city center and frightened foreign tourists looked on in astonishment or ran for cover.

Firebombs set ablaze a roof garden at the Lotte Hotel and fire trucks forced their way through the fighting to extinguish the fire.

It was the third day in a row that the center of the city had been hit by rioting.

Rabin blames Jordan, Egypt for not ending guerrilla raids

JERUSALEM (AP) — Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin accused Jordan and Egypt of not doing enough to prevent guerrilla raids into Israel from their territory.

Rabin made the comment Wednesday, a day after one Palestinian guerrilla crossed the border fence between Jordan and Israel and was wounded and captured by Israeli troops. Two other guerrillas escaped back to Jordan.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the authorities in Egypt and Jordan are doing sometimes not everything that can be done to prevent the (infiltrations)," Rabin said on Israel radio.

Tuesday night's infiltration was the second from Jordan and the 13th attempt since the Arab uprising began Dec. 8 in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Since Dec. 1, guerrillas have twice tried to enter Israel from Egypt.

Rabin linked the increase in infiltration attempts to the "intefadah," Arabic for uprising. He charged the PLO with inciting terror attacks from Lebanon, Jordan and Egypt as well as inside the occupied lands to breathe life into the rebellion.

But Rabin said that thanks to the army's tough response, the uprising was dying out. "We have seen a gradual reduction of civilian violent activities as a result of..measures we have taken such as arrests, administrative detentions, deportations," he said on a tour of the Gaza Strip.

Jordan denied that the latest raid into Israel was launched from its territory, saying it "would never allow infiltrators to cross from Jordan into occupied Arab territories."

In another development, Israeli troops backed by helicopters and bulldozers on Wednesday carried out a pre-dawn raid on two Arab mountain villages and were surrounded by hundreds of stone-throwing Palestinians. Hospital officials said one Arab villager was killed and 10 were wounded.

Troops also shot and wounded four Arabs during a confrontation in the marketplace of Nablus, the largest West Bank city, the army said.

The fatality Wednesday brought the Arab death toll in the uprising to 191, according to U.N. figures. Two Israelis also have died.

Arab doctors said at least 20 Palestinians were injured by beatings and rubber bullets during the clashes in Abwein and Arura, neighboring villages north of Ramallah. Witnesses said hundreds were arrested.

An army spokesman confirmed one Arab was killed and nine wounded. But he refused comment on the arrests or the reason for the sweeps on the final day of Id el Fitr, the three-day Moslem holiday marking the end of the holy month of Ramadan.

Even video photography is possible at depths of water up to one hundred feet if you put your video camera into a watertight housing.

Tips on taking your camera below

Copley News Service

One of the first rules a photographer learns is to keep his or her cameras away from the water. We have been breaking that rule for many years as there is a world of incredible beauty below the surface of tropical seas. Today, we will address some basic points to remember for successful underwater photography.

There is no doubt that taking pictures in the water is more complex than dry-land photography, and it requires special knowledge and equipment. Basically, there are two approaches to getting your camera wet without a major repair bill. One is to put your regular camera into a watertight housing; the other is to use a camera especially designed for use underwater.

The alternative is to tak our regular (dry-land) camera put it into a watertight housing. One of the best-known companies in this field is IKELITE Underwater Systems, P.O. Box 33100, Indianapolis, IN 46203. IKELITE makes watertight Lucite housings for most of the well-known makes of cameras. Controls on the outside of these housings allow for the setting of shutter speeds and/or lens openings and focusing.

There is a shutter release and a winding mechanism, but the latter can be eliminated if your camera has an auto-winder or motor drive. The overall package with a housing may be larger than a self-contained underwater camera, but the advantages of a single lens reflex with motorized advance may be worth the increase in size. Weight is not a factor underwater as these housings are designed for neutral bouyancy. IKELITE also makes several models of underwater electronic flash units.

Another protective device for a dry-land camera is the Ewa-Marine, a clear plastic bag with a watertight seal. The bag has a built-in glove that allows the photographer to manipulate the controls for focusing, film advance and shutter release. The glove models of the Ewa Marine can be used underwater at depths up to 100 feet and are distributed by Pioneer Marketing and Research in Westmont, New Jersey, (800) 257-7742.

The use of a wide-angle lens is important in underwater photography. You must remember that you are working in an alien environment and that even apparently clear water contains a great deal of floating sediment. With a wide-angle lens, it is possible to get closer to your subject and still include all you want in your picture. The standard lens for the NIKONOS is a wide-angle 35mm, but it also has a 28mm and even a super-wide 15mm lens. Such lenses can also be used on a standard camera inside a Lucite or plastic housing. Don't forget that the fewer minute floating particles that exist between your camera lens and the subject, the clearer and sharper the resulting picture will be.

Below the surface of the water, you are in a world of fluid motion and shifting currents. If the light level is sufficient, you should try to keep your shutter speed at least as fast as 1/125th of a second to avoid blurred images.

Do not overexpose. Remember that there is more light in clear tropical water than you think. If your camera does not have automatic exposure and you do not have an underwater light meter, figure roughly one-half stop more exposure for each ten feet of depth in clear water, based from normal exposure on the surface.

Make sure that your underwater camera or underwater housing is completely watertight by checking all the O-rings and seals. Lubricate the O-rings and seals and inspect them for foreign particles, such as sand, before each dive.

If you give it a try, we think that you will share our enthusiasm for underwater photography. The next time you sit on the balcony of your resort hotel and look out across that expanse of gently undulating aquamarine sea, think about the marvelous world below the surface. Try it and open the doors to an exciting new experience.

Exposing Life's Edges in Black and White

By KEITH L. THOMAS
c.1988 Cox News Service

ATLANTA — The half-naked hunk in the muscle T-shirt. The jet-setting fashion designer at home on the range. The vivid portrait of black men in America. The leggy model holding the perfume bottle. The aging boxing champ standing alone in the new-fallen snow.

Their images converge in similar shades of gray.

Color their world black and white.

Over the past several months, major magazines and scores of advertisers have switched to black-and-white photography as a stunning means of style, substance and expression. Stark, impressive monochromatic photo spreads are popping up in a growing number of publications: Newsweek, Time, Sports Illustrated, Life, Rolling Stone, National Geographic (yes, National Geographic) and Vanity Fair. They've even made their way to such slick, color-packed wonders as Travel and Leisure, which carried a powerful black-and-white pictorial of Dublin, Ireland, in its April issue.

And why not? Whether it's a moving story on AIDS or an avant-garde ad for men's underwear, black-and-white photography is back with a visual vengeance.

"I think the American public has just been inundated with images of all kinds, particularly with color images," said Don Abood, president of Picture Group Inc., a Rhode Island-based photo agency with about 125 photographers worldwide.

The Picture Group has been receiving more and more requests for black-and-white news and feature photos, Abood said. At several photography conferences last year, including one in Atlanta, Abood predicted there would be a major shift toward more black and white.

But he points out that it's not necessarily a trend among photographers since many have worked with black and white for years. Instead, he thinks major publications, advertisers and the public to a certain degree now are beginning to understand and appreciate the beauty and lasting significance of black-and-white photography.

"I think using color for the sake of using color is just no longer interesting," Abood said. "Magazines these days, and even some newspapers, are simply packed with color. When you use black and white, it tends to stand out on the pages. You can really see the content of a black-and-white picture. In some cases, it's like staring at reality."

Aside from artistic and aesthetic qualities, black-and-white photography tends to require fewer technical and lighting tricks.

Peruvian regional government says troops killed 100 peasants

AYACUCHO, Peru (AP) — The top elective body in Ayacucho Province said soldiers entered a village and massacred about 100 peasants, many with bayonets, in retaliation for a rebel ambush of an army convoy.

The military, in a communique issued late Wednesday, called the charges unfounded and said they were aimed at blocking efforts to capture the Maoist Shining Path rebels. In Lima, lawmakers said the government would investigate.

The alleged massacre reportedly occurred just hours before the Pope John Paul II arrived in Peru during a four-nation South American tour. He did not travel to Ayacucho, which is 230 miles southeast of Lima.

The leftist-oriented Ayacucho Provincial Council said troops swarmed into Cayara, 50 miles south of this provincial capital, on Saturday and slaughtered the peasants.

Cayara residents told council members soldiers "indiscriminately" killed 30 to 50 defenseless young men who were harvested corn in fields surrounding the town of 1,000 people, the council said in a statement Wednesday.

Residents said troops then herded 50 more peasants into a chapel and killed them, the statement claimed.

It said townspeople told the council they were unsure how many people were killed because the attackers poured gasoline on and burned some bodies and because many people had gone into hiding.

The council is headed by Ayacucho Mayor Fermin Azparrent, a member of the Marxist opposition party the United Left.

Senate President Jorge Lozada said the government of President Alan Garcia would investigate.

Leftist and human rights groups have frequently accused the military in the past few years of killing civilians in areas where rebel activity is intense and soldiers suspect villagers of sympathizing with the insurgents.

The Ayacucho military command said on Wednesday that 100 guerrillas of the Shining Path movement ambushed two army trucks around midnight on Friday near Cayara.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Iranians hit neutral tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian speedboats attacked a Norwegian tanker twice in the Strait of Hormuz today, firing rocket-propelled grenades that set the vessel afire and injured one crewman, shipping executives said.

The 55,173-ton Berge Strand, an empty liquefied petroleum gas carrier sailing to Saudi Arabian ports, was the second vessel attacked by Iran in the Persian Gulf in the last two days.

Iranian speedboats raided the Japanese-owned Ace Chemi Wednesday, following Iraqi attacks on Iranian terminals and tankers.

The shipping executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Berge Strand was damaged slightly in the first attack by two speedboats, at 6:30 a.m. (9:30 p.m. CDT Wednesday). They did not know what weapons were used in the first strike but said no injuries were reported.

An hour later, one of the speedboats caught up with the Berge Strand and pumped five rocket-propelled grenades into its accommodation quarters, then veered away, the sources said.

A small fire broke out and flying shrapnel injured one of the 19 crew members in the face and forearm, the sources said. The crew, believed to be Norwegian, put out the fire.

Nicaraguan talks continue

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government and the rebels have tentatively agreed to hold a third round of talks in hopes of securing a lasting peace, the government announced.

A communique issued Wednesday night said the U.S.-supported rebels, known as Contras, have agreed to a government proposal to hold the talks May 25-28 at an as yet undetermined location.

The agreement was reached at meetings Tuesday and Wednesday between deputy Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco and Azucena Ferrey, one of the five directors of the Nicaraguan Resistance.

According to the communique, the Sandinistas proposed that the third meeting be held in Managua, as the previous two had been, but the Contras appeared reluctant and delayed the decision on a site.

Japanese inspect ship

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — Soviet officials today reluctantly allowed Japanese investigators to search a portion of a Soviet passenger ship to determine what caused a fire that killed at least 11 people and injured 35.

After 70 minutes of heated negotiations with Soviet consular officials, police agreed to pare down to 15 a team originally consisting of more than 60 investigators.

New gains made against dreaded glaucoma

Copley News Service

One night two years ago, a retired fireman was startled by a strange flashing in his left eye. "It was like an electrical light," he remembered recently. "It stopped right away, but it was enough to alert me that something was wrong."

The man saw an ophthalmologist the next week. Nonetheless, in the months that followed, his vision deteriorated, until now he must strain to watch television.

As do 3 million other Americans, this retired fireman has glaucoma, the country's second-leading cause of blindness. Another 10 million Americans are at high risk of developing the disease, caused when pressure mounts inside the eye.

Most patients are diagnosed with glaucoma when the disease has already begun its destructive course — and, for many, irreversible vision loss has already occurred. Unfortunately, diagnosis at this stage is like noticing a plumbing leak when the carpet is already under a foot of water.

"In the past, what glaucoma therapy has been is that we treat patients once they have already lost vision," said Dr. Robert Weinreb, a leading glaucoma specialist and professor of ophthalmology at the medical school at the University of California at San Diego. "And when we treat them it is not to return their vision, but to prevent further loss."

Largely a silent disease, glaucoma progresses slowly. Occasionally, there are symptoms, such as eye flashing. But these generally occur after vision has already been lost.

Because it gives little warning, glaucoma has been diagnosed primarily through regular eye exams that measure optic pressure. These are recommended annually for people over age 40, especially those at high risk, such as diabetics and those with a family history of glaucoma.

But, as Weinreb noted, these tests can not identify the earliest optic changes in the disease. "The problem," he said, "is that the diagnostic tests just haven't been very good."

In the months — perhaps years — before glaucoma can be identified, subtle changes are occurring inside the eye. Pressure is carving out the surface of the nerve head. Optic nerve fibers are getting thinner and thinner. And the retinal cones — the ones that help us see the color blue — are beginning to malfunction.

Years ago Weinreb, now 38, realized that these changes were the key to early diagnosis of the disease. But how to measure them?

The answer lay in assembling a team of scientists and researchers: experimental psychologists, optical engineers, physicists, electrical engineers, biochemists, cell biologists and computer scientists. Under Weinreb's leadership, this UCSD team has now designed a trio of instruments that promise to record the earliest signals of the disease.

As this new technology becomes more widely available, glaucoma will be diagnosed earlier, and progress of the disease will be more carefully monitored.

"In the past, we've always had to say 'Oh, yeah, things appear to have gotten worse,'" Weinreb said. "But by the time you could observe that with a (hand-held) ophthalmoscope, things would have gotten considerably worse. By seeing changes earlier, we can initiate more timely therapy to prevent loss of vision."

But for Weinreb, early diagnosis is only part of the goal. It was at Harvard Medical School, as a student, that he decided to specialize in glaucoma, specifically because the disease is so rife with unanswered questions. "In probably no field of medicine are there so many unknowns," he explained recently. "We don't know what causes it, we have no cure, and the treatments are not very good. By making small progress in any one of these areas, we can improve the quality of life for thousands of individuals."

Weinreb is tackling all aspects. In addition to work in early diagnosis, he has dramatically improved the success rate of glaucoma surgery. In his laboratory, he and his colleagues have propagated the optic cells specifically involved in glaucoma, with hopes of understanding how and why they malfunction. Soon he will begin new research aimed at understanding the genetic basis of the disease and the underlying molecular biological processes.

Glaucoma is a genetic disease, but its inheritance is complicated. Weinreb sees one family in which four siblings, all in their 70s, have glaucoma, and now their children are developing the disease as well. But in other families, the disease skips generations, or affects some members and not others. Weinreb suspects that several factors — perhaps several genes — may be responsible for causing glaucoma.

Freezing may save sight of preemies

DALLAS (AP) — The sight of premature babies who suffer a potentially blinding disorder may be saved by freezing part of the eye, researchers said.

A $9.6 million experiment involving 23 medical centers nationwide found cryotherapy reduced by about 50 percent the number of children who go blind because of the disorder retinopathy of prematurity, or ROP.

ROP affects 2,600 prematurely born infants in the United States each year and causes blindness in about 650.

The National Eye Institute, which sponsored the trial, said the results were so promising it stopped taking new patients into the study and alerted 2,300 pediatric opthamologists and other specialists Feb. 12 that they refer potential patients to one of the study centers.

The ROP disorder develops when an infant is between four weeks and 14 weeks old, but doctors aren't sure what causes it, said Dr. George Sanborn of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, who was involved in the study.

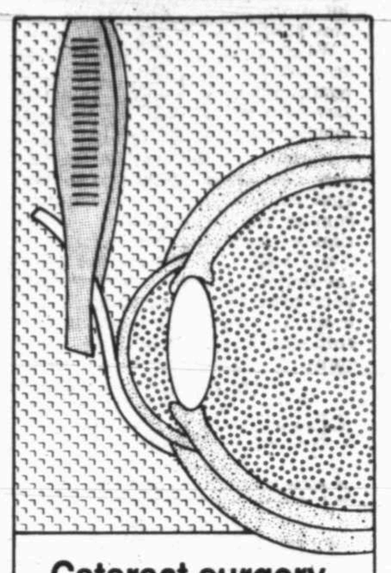

"Previously, it was thought that high levels of oxygen used to save premature infants caused the damage, but that turned out to be oversimplistic," Sanborn said. "The key seems to be low birth weight."

He said the eyes, like other organs and body parts, are immature in prematurely born infants and still developing at birth.

ROP causes the developing blood vessels of the retina — the light-sensing tissue at the back of the eye — to grow excessively, which leads to bleeding, scarring and retinal detachment.

The freezing therapy creates a ring of scar tissue that slows or stops the growth of the vessels.

The results of the study, led by Dr. Earl Palmer of the University of Oregon, were published in the May issue of "Pediatrics."

Expert says eliminating varicose veins important to health, vanity

Hearst News Service

They are cursed, covered up and burned. Overused and underpraised. Even when they're not in the mood, they carry us wherever we want to go.

According to Dr. Guylaine Lancot, a phlebologist and leading authority on varicose veins, it's high time we took notice of our legs. She has written a book, "How to Have Great Legs at Any Age," and says that although people want to have great legs, they all too often neglect their lower limbs.

She stresses that great legs are "not a matter of mere vanity. They are critical of our health and well-being."

While fashion magazines state that the definition of great legs is legs that are long, lean and perfectly proportioned, Lancot says they are "strong, healthy and attractive." She acknowledges that heredity plays a large part in determining whether or not our legs will resemble those of Betty Grable or King Kong. It's what you do with those legs that makes the difference.

You cannot change some things about your legs. Genes determine the general shape, the length of the bones and the width of the tendons.

"You can change the muscles — make them larger or smaller — and develop thinner or bulkier muscle fibers," Lancot says. She says you can get rid of cellulite and unsightly spider and varicose veins, and help change the skin on your legs from dry and scaly to smooth and silky.

Some of the simplest changes produce immediate effects, Lancot says. Improved posture and gait can help you feel a lot better and improve the appearance. Improper posture (the proverbial slump) and gait (the all-too-common toed-out variety) can result in a rotation of the pelvis, which can affect the spine and damage the knees. She advises people to stand up straight and tall, with abdominal muscles contracted and knees slightly bent.

Exercise plays an obvious role in the quest for great legs. Lancot recommends doing both aerobic exercises (walking, running, bicycling, swimming, tennis, etc.) as well as muscle-specific exercises, which she outlines in her book.

While aerobic exercises improve the cardiovascular system in the legs and replace fat tissue with muscle tissue, muscle-specific exercises shape the legs by working and strengthening particular muscles or muscle groups. Stretching is of the utmost importance.

"You can't just ask a cold muscle to jump into action," Lancot says.

Even if you don't injure your legs exercising, there's a good chance that they'll hurt at some point during your life.

"More than 50 percent of adults have aching legs," Lancot says. While aching legs remain "a big mystery to most doctors" Lancot says that venous causes (those associated with the veins) are quite common. If you have leg pain during exercise, restless legs, heaviness and aching in the legs after standing for a half-hour or so, or numbness when you go to bed, the problem is most likely in your veins.

Other culprits include arthritis, muscular strain, sciatica and arterial disease. Lancot advises getting a clear diagnosis before attempting to solve the problem. If conventional doctors cannot help, she urges people to explore alternative treatments, such as acupuncture, applied kinesiology and reflexology.

Varicose veins, a problem for 40 percent of women and 25 percent of men, are Lancot's specialty. When she became a doctor, she was disturbed to learn that the vast majority of women with small or medium-sized vericose veins were often ignored by physicians, who were more interested in performing surgery on patients with advanced venous disease.

Varicose veins are veins that are dilated and unable to carry blood back to the heart. The valves that regulate the blood flow in the veins may be working improperly or may have stopped working altogether.

There are two types: Spider veins, often called broken capillaries, are the small, bluish varicose veins most often found on the sides and back of the legs. They are relatively harmless, but unsightly. Larger varicose veins can rupture and cause phlebitis, swelling and excema.

The tendency to develop varicose veins is an inherited trait. Aggravating factors include pregnancy, aging, standing for long periods of time and being overweight.

NO TAMPERING WITH STATISTICS

Prior to the introduction of the child-resistant bottle, accidental ingestion of aspirin accounted for most accidental poisonings among children in this country. According to the National Center for Health Statistics, ninety-two children died of aspirin overdose in 1967. By the time aspirin bottles were outfitted with tamper-resistant caps in 1972, that figure had dropped to forty-six. Everyone's hopes were finally met in 1985 when it was reported that not a single child under age 5 died from accidental aspirin poisoning. This hopeful statistic is bolstered by others. Between 1972 and 1984, childhood deaths from drugs has declined by more than two-thirds. This is wonderful news for us all, and a tribute to the drug industry's commitment to safety.

INFORMATION TAKEN TO HEART

With all the attention being paid to blood cholesterol levels these days, it may be necessary to refine our understanding of the subject. A blood cholesterol reading is based on how many milligrams of cholesterol is in a deciliter of a person's blood. When this level is under 200, a patient is considered to be safe in his risk of coronary heart disease. A level between 201 and 239 carries a moderate risk. Readings above 240 carry high risk. It is estimated that fully one-quarter of adult Americans are in the latter two categories. In addition to cholesterol readings, a patient will also want to know the ratio of low-density lipoproteins (LDL's) to high density lipoproteins (HDL'S). HDL's carry cholesterol out of the bloodstream, while LDL's supply cholesterol to arterial walls. The greater the HDL/LDL, the better.

When you go through the supermarket these days, more and more food items are marked "light", "low in saturated fats", or "fat free". Read the "fine print" on the labels for the ingredients. Ask your physician what you may or may not include in your diet. At the Medi-Help, Inc. , 805 W. Wadley @ A, preventative health care is emphasized. We offer the Medfast medical weight loss program which includes nutritional counseling. Office hours: 8-8, 7 days a week. Tel. 687-2704 for further inquiries.

HINT:
A lipoprotein is a fatty protein that binds with cholesterol and transports it. Cholesterol does not move on its own.

New Mexico faces numerous fights over state's water rights

By SUE MAJOR HOLMES

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A lot of the battles being fought in New Mexico today are over water.

Water rights cases that have been in court for years pit Indian users against non-Indian users. Other cases have New Mexico fighting for water against neighboring states.

A growing urban population competes for water against traditional agricultural interests. Dwindling supplies and contamination are becoming larger concerns.

And what New Mexico can do with the limited amount of water within its borders is complicated by federal laws, court decisions, pending lawsuits and agreements with other states.

"Choices made now will dictate the way we live 20 years from now," said William "Bing" Grady, chairman of the executive committee of New Mexico First. "Those choices are pretty important. It's a scarce resource with almost unlimited demand."

About 120 New Mexicans who are members of New Mexico First are discussing the issues surrounding water this week in a town hall meeting on "Water: Lifeblood of New Mexico."

The meeting at Angel Fire is the second in a planned series of town halls on various subjects sponsored by the non-profit organization. New Mexico First was formed to bring New Mexicans from all backgrounds together to try to resolve policy issues facing the state.

Town hall participants will spend two days discussing water issues in five separate groups, then debating and making recommendations all together on the third day. The recommendations will go to various policy makers.

"It's a topic about which many people care very deeply, but a lot of people don't know the facts or the seriousness of the problem...It ought to be perceived as a serious problem by everyone in the state," Grady said.

A six-member research team from the New Mexico Water Resources Research Institute at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces wrote a 148-page background report for the town hall.

Grady said he hopes that report and any recommendations from the town hall are spread around the state because of the importance of the subject.

"The crisis is becoming more obvious," he said.

Linda Harris, information coordinator for the water institute and one of the research team members, said the report was meant to be understandable to people who don't deal with water issues every day.

"Working in the water area, we make assumptions that people know things, and they really don't," she said.

"New Mexico First, for example, wanted to know how you would make a difference in the decision-making process. How do you affect this, if you wanted to have a voice in this, how would you do it...I don't think it had ever been written down before," she said.

The report is published by New Mexico First, but Ms. Harris said the water institute plans to ask for copies for its water resources library at NMSU.

New Mexico is a semi-arid state with a growing urban population. The report says the state has just over one million acre-feet of surface water available, but those supplies are fully appropriated, meaning all rights already are claimed. New uses can come about only when existing water rights are retired.

Only a quarter of the state's 20 billion acre-feet of ground water is fresh water, the report said. About 90 percent of the fresh water lies in declared water basins under administrative authority of the state engineer. Half the fresh water being pumped now is being taken faster than it can be replenished.

The water institute report breaks concerns into six major issues: reconciling new and historic uses, dealing with a limited supply, protecting water quality, meeting future demands, administering the water supply and participating in the water market.

The report discusses the historical development of water management and the movement from development to management.

It details who manages water, from the state engineer to municipalities and various regulatory agencies.

Horticulturist crazy about 'rare' locoweed

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. Geoffrey Stanford beams proudly, like a doctor who has just rescued a patient from the grim reaper.

"Isn't it beautiful?" he says, gazing at a rocky hillock where two clumps of hairy plant have sprouted purple flowers.

This is his patient, this thing about a foot high. This is the object of two years of nurturing. This is locoweed.

Now understand that Stanford is English by birth, a medical doctor by training and a horticulturist only by self-teaching. And he's a trifle eccentric. He wears sandals with his suit and tie, for example, and his head and face are great bushes of white hair.

But, locoweed?

Yes, that highly poisonous range plant that makes horses, cattle, goats, sheep and anything else that eats it go crazy before it kills them.

Stanford has rescued it.

It was near oblivion in the Dallas area, he says, thanks mainly to development and urgent warfare by area farmers and ranchers tired of finding their stock gone wacko on the weed.

A lot of animal owners had hoped they would never see or hear about locoweed again. They did not count on Stanford, a retiree, who is the founder and director-emeritus of the Dallas Nature Center, a preserve for scientific study of plants in southwest Dallas.

He has, among hundreds of experiments and samples of native American plants, one small patch of Oxytropis lambertii, known commonly as Lambert's crazyweed, which he found growing alongside a road in North Dallas and transplanted two years ago. It has just begun to flower

He won't say exactly where he found the weed because a little more of it still remains and he doesn't want anyone to go out there and stomp on it.

And he knows what locoweed can do.

"Horses love it," he says. "They actually become addicts. It's like hashish or cocaine in that you can take a little of it at a time." But eventually the poison's attack on the nervous system will prove fatal.

No, Stanford says chuckling, he hasn't been nibbling on the leaves or smoking the seeds.

"A plant that's as poisonous as this must have something in it that no one knows about," he says. "We don't know what good might come of it.

"Besides," he adds reflectively, "God put it there, and who are we to take it out?"

Rather, Stanford says, it's his duty to see that the locoweed thrives. Toward that end, he will divide each clump into three parts about next February. Anyone who would like to plant a division in his back yard is welcome to give Stanford a call, he says.

"I'll put them on a waiting list."

Those who are impatient with waiting lists might consider a drive to West Texas instead.

In the Trans-Pecos area near Lubbock, for instance, there is no shortage of the more than 30 species of locoweed, and no shortage of Lambert's crazyweed, says John Hunter, who teaches range and wildlife management at Texas Tech University.

Carhenge artist driven to re-create Great Wall

ALLIANCE, Neb. (AP) — Carhenge creator James Reinders plans to complete his paean to Stonehenge next month, and said today that his next project could be a Great Wall made with — what else — cars.

Reinders, 60, a Houston petroleum consultant, said in a telephone interview that he plans to go to China to study the Great Wall there. He hopes to construct a section of the Great Wall with cars.

He said he hadn't decided where his Great Wall would be built, but that it probably would be somewhere in Nebraska.

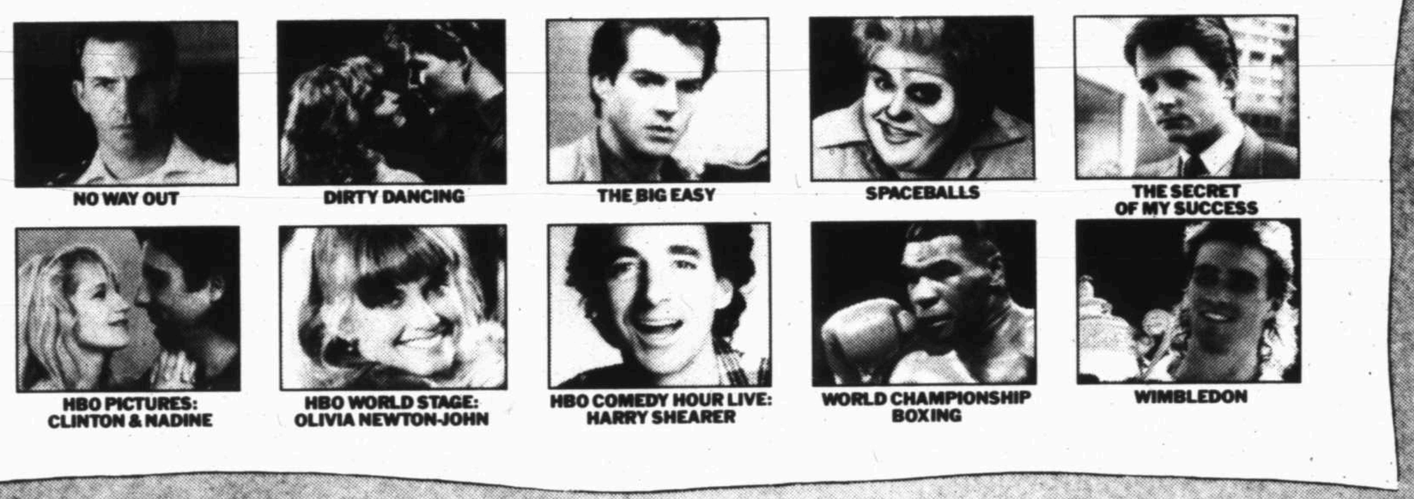

Reinders practices what he terms "crude art," and says Carhenge has been the only piece to catch any attention. He said he doesn't care to discuss his earlier works.

He'll return to his hometown June 19 to begin putting the finishing pieces on Carhenge, old cars set upright in the ground and others welded across the top to resemble the monument in Great Britain.

Earlier this month, the City Council said the controversial artwork could stay as long as Reinders obtained $100,000 in liability insurance and assure that the site is maintained and not turned into a junkyard.

Reinders said today that he uses cars because "that's the type of material most readily available anywhere in the world. It's good sculpture material."

Bodyguard finds Christian belief hard

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Big Chick Huntsberry has turned to God, but the 340-pound former professional wrestler and bodyguard for rock star Prince says turning-the-other-cheek is still hard to swallow.

"I might be a Christian, but I'm not an idiot," says the 6-foot-6 Huntsberry, who has become an evangelical sensation since rejecting drugs and rock 'n' roll and devoting his considerable self to Jesus.

"If some dude smacked me, I'd probably smack him back. But I'd pray for him afterwards...You don't have to be a sissy to love Jesus."

Huntsberry, 47, said he once had a $1,000-a-day cocaine habit. He found religion when his 6-year-old grandson, Jeremy, recovered from a choking episode last summer.

In January, he started "Big Chick Ministries" and began thundering across the nation warning teen-agers and their parents about drugs, suicide and rock music.

Retired executive finds happiness as handyman

DALLAS (AP) — For the legions of people nearing retirement age, Jack Garrow of Dallas offers some simple advice: Wrap your fingers around a nice cool paint brush.

Or a hammer. Or a saw.

In other words, keep going, Garrow says.

"Get a hobby," he says. Stay busy. Do some good for someone else.

Garrow, 65, chose the tools — and indeed the trade — of a handyman when he retired in 1986 after more than 30 years as an insurance executive. Today he paints rooms, refinishes floors, builds fences and cabinets, remodels kitchens and adds decks and wings onto houses — mostly for fun.

At a time when the over-65 population is growing at ever-increasing annual rates (the American Association of Retired Persons says it signs up about 8,000 new members every day), and when government and private studies show most retirees return to work for extra income, Jack Garrow is a little different.

"I've got plenty of money," says Garrow, who spent 19 years with Modern America Corp., and retired as the Chicago-based firm's Western regional manager. "I just like to stay busy, and mostly I like to do work for old folks, or divorcees with children, people who need some help."

He charges by the hour at a rate influenced by how well he likes the customer and how badly he is needed. By industry standards, he admits, he comes cheap.

"Sometimes I'll put in maybe 60 hours on a project, four hours one day, five hours the next, and then I'll add it all up and look at the customer and think, 'I can't charge that much,' " Garrow says. "I'll take off about 15 hours.

"My wife gives me holy hell about it. She says, 'You don't charge enough. You're not making any money.' "

He shrugs. Making money isn't his purpose.

"I've spent most of my insurance career as an executive in upper-management...where there's a lot of pressure," he says. "I used to come home and do this," and he ran a paint brush along a window sash, "just to relax. This is great relaxation."

All the management tests he took told him he was a workaholic. He still is. "At night at home, instead of sitting down and watching television, I'd rather take a course in how to lay tile," he says.

His handyman work grew out of an earlier attempt to get rich owning rental property. He didn't get rich, but he did learn how to rehabilitate a succession of duplexes and houses he owned.

His entrance into the realm of being a landlord came about eight years ago when he bought eight duplexes sight-unseen in what he thought was a nice Dallas neighborhood.

"I said to my wife, 'Well, Jane, let's go down and see what we've just bought,' " he said with a wry smile. "They were unbelievable. Terrible."

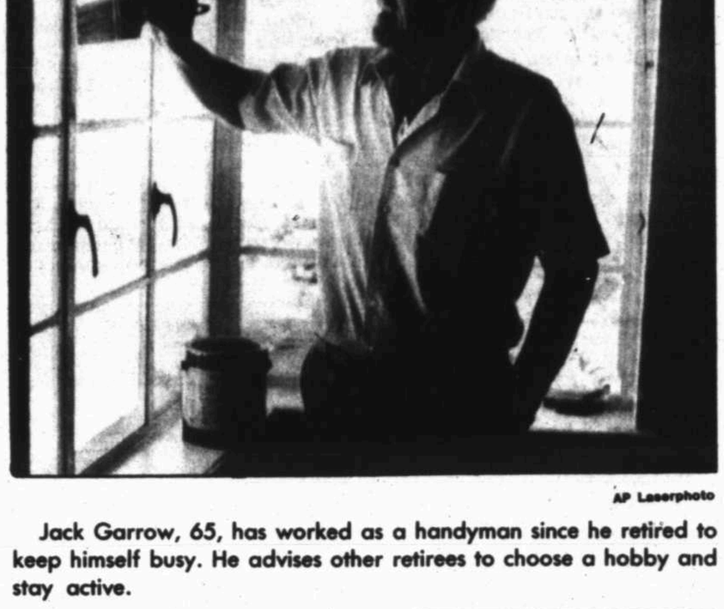

But reworking them and then several North Dallas houses provided him with a new career and with a handful of people who passed his name around among friends. His reputation spread by word-of-mouth, and now he has more work than he can handle, he says.

One of his customers, Pamela Ellerman, hired Garrow last week to prepare a room for a baby she and her husband, Jeff, are expecting in a few weeks.

"He's just incredible," she said. "He's wonderful."

Maybe so, but at home he's just like any other husband.

"My wife has to drag me in to get me to do anything around the house," he says.

Celts plowed in Garden

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Now that the Hawks have put an end to their string of futility at the Boston Garden, the Celtics will have to win in Atlanta to avoid their earliest ouster from the NBA Playoffs in five years.

The Hawks beat the Celtics 112-104 Wednesday night to break a 13-game losing streak at the Garden, take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal and put themselves within a victory of meeting the Detroit Pistons for the right to advance to the league championship series. Detroit eliminated Chicago in five games with a 102-95 victory.

"It's a great feeling, but we have to keep everything in perspective," Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins said. "We have to play another game (or two)."

Game 6 is scheduled for Friday night at the Omni, where the Hawks have beaten the Celtics eight of the last nine times they've played.

A seventh game, if necessary, will be in Boston on Sunday.

Tonight at Salt Lake City, the Los Angeles Lakers, seeking to become the first team to win consecutive league championships since the Celtics in 1968-69, will try to oust the Utah Jazz. The Lakers, aiming to win their fifth title this decade, lead 3-2 in their Western Conference semifinal series.

The other Western semifinal also could end tonight if the Mavericks, leading Denver 3-2, beat the Nuggets at Dallas.

If seventh games in those series are necessary, they would be played Saturday at Inglewood, Calif., and at Denver.

"We felt going into the series we were a better team than Atlanta," Boston forward Larry Bird said. "Maybe that hurt us."

But it came as no great shock to Boston guard Danny Ainge.

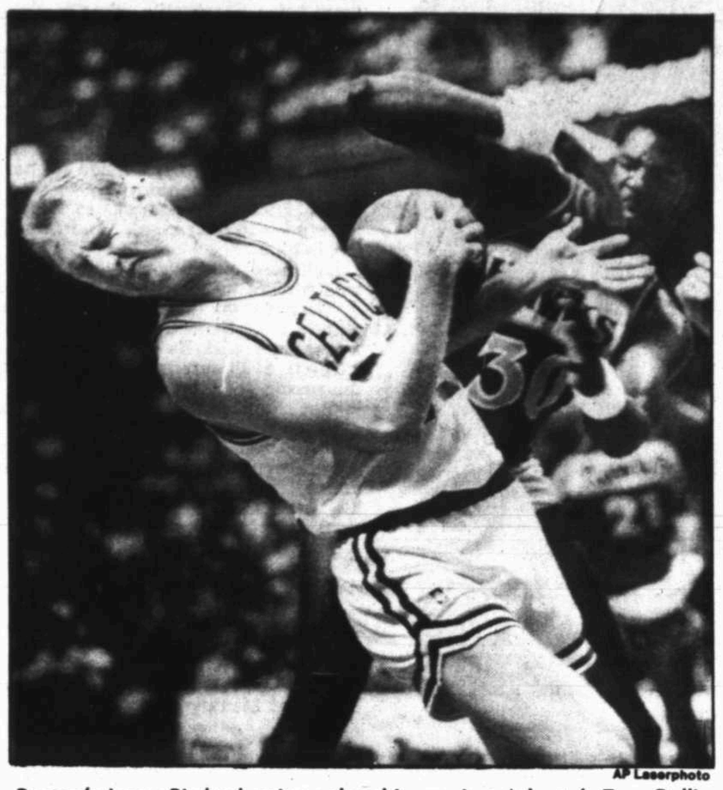

"They are a great team," he said of the Hawks. "They have a lot of confidence now and it's going to be difficult in Atlanta."

The Celtics are hoping to avoid becoming the fifth team in league history —the first since 1977 — to lose a seven-game series after winning the first two.

Boston, which reached the finals in each of the last four seasons and won twice, hadn't lost to the Hawks in Boston Garden since a 114-105 setback on March 1, 1985.

"We believed we could do it," Atlanta guard Glenn Rivers said.

Now Boston, seeking its 17th NBA championship, will have to beat a confident Atlanta team twice to continue that quest.

Boston's Larry Bird takes it on the chin against Atlanta's Tree Rollins (30) during the Celts' Tuesday night loss.

The Hawks rebounded from their two losses to win Games 3 and 4 at home.

"When you beat a great team ... it's got to help your confidence," Rivers added. "The Celtics gave us the open shots and we hit them. In the past, we haven't."

Two free throws by Wilkins' with 2:07 left gave Atlanta a 99-98 lead and launched a 10-0 run that lifted the Hawks to victory.

Bliss trades Ponies for Lobos

By PETE HERRERA
AP Sports Writer

ALBUQUERQUE — If his opening act is any indication, Dave Bliss indeed is ready to take over the No. 1 show in town.

Bliss is leaving Southern Methodist University to become the head coach at New Mexico, a school where basketball is king regardless of the season.

Bliss inherits a program rich in fan support but hungering for national prominence. While New Mexico has ranked in the top 10 nationally in attendance for 22 consecutive years, the Lobos haven't been to the NCAA Tournament since 1978.

It was that shortcoming that paved Bliss' road from Dallas to Albuquerque as the successor to Gary Colson. Colson won more games than he lost in eight seasons at New Mexico — a 146-106 record — but his failure to get the Lobos to the NCAA Tournament eventually led to his forced resignation on April 26.

"It's clear we haven't been to an NCAA Tournament and our expectations are that we will win the WAC (Western Athletic Conference) and get involved in the national scene," New Mexico athletic director John Koenig said in announcing that Bliss had agreed to a five-year contract.

Bliss used Wednesday's press conference to show that a basketball coach can also have a sense of humor.

Noting he became New Mexico's top choice only after Indiana coach Bob Knight turned down the job last weekend, Bliss said, "I understand he turned it down because (UNM) President (Gerald) May refused to give Bob an unlimited chair budget."

Knight, often the center of controversy for his actions on and off the court, is a longtime friend of Bliss, who assisted Knight-coached programs at Army and Indiana. In fact, Knight stopped at a payphone during a trip to Cincinnati on Wednesday to make a call to the news conference.

Before Knight's call came through, Greg Remington, New Mexico's sport's information director, informed the audience the Indiana coach would be calling. New Mexico athletic director John Koenig, who heard only a part of the announcement, turned to Remington and said, "Who?"

"Bobby Knight," Bliss said. "You remember him, don't you, John?"

"Dave will bring great organization to the job and I don't think there is a better man for the job at New Mexico than Dave," Knight said.

Bliss said he appreciated Knight's support, but more so his decision to remain at Indiana.

"He did what the drug ads say: just say no," Bliss said.

MC netters prevail

From Staff Reports

PASADENA, Texas — Midland College swept through all its quarterfinals matches Wednesday to earn a shot at the National Junior College Athletic Association women's tennis title.

At the end of the Wednesday's action, Midland, with 28 points, had a one-point lead over Odessa and Tyler, who were tied for second with 27 each. The tournament is being played at the Strawberry Tennis Center in Pasadena, and is being hosted by San Jacinto College. Semifinal action is set for today, with the finals on Friday.

"The tournament winner likely will be determined (today)," said MC coach Joe Williams after he saw his team slam its way through the third day of the five-day event. "Rebeca (Nevarez-Ayon) really gave us our opening," as she defeated the number one seed, Wendy Frazier of Tyler, in three long sets. "That took out one of Tyler's players and left us in a good position."

Nevarez-Ayon, seeded sixth, used three hours and 30 minutes before she edged Frazier 7-6, 2-6, 6-4.

Raquel Colvin, the Chaps' No. 1 player, needed a tie-breaker to win her fourth round match over Traci Guy of Mesa, Ariz., 6-4, 7-6.

Caroline Bhaguandas, playing third, also needed a tie-breaker to dispose of Diane Horton of Sinclair College, Ohio, 6-2, 7-6.

Gabi Csorba, playing No. 5, was pushed to three sets before defeating Mari Shaffer of Peace College, N.C., and No. 6 Jill Vallandigham won, 6-3, 7-5 over Kim Franklin of Palm Beach College, Fla.

Williams was beaming over the play of his revamped doubles teams, which took straight-set wins in their quarterfinal matches.

Today the Chaps face three Tyler players and one from Odessa College in semifinal singles action. The Lady Chaps face Tyler in the No. 1 doubles and Palm Beach, Fla., in the other two doubles matches.

Frogs will rebound, according to Wacker

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Jim Wacker says West Texas has been good to him in his five years as head football coach at Texas Christian University. He got a chance to reciprocate some of that good will in Midland Wednesday.

Wacker appeared in Midland both to play golf at Green Tree Country Club and appear at a gathering of Permian Basin-area TCU alumni.

Several Midland-area players are in line for major roles on the 1988 Horned Frogs, including wide receiver Allan Foret, center Jeff Daily, defensive end Darrell Davis, tight end Coy Stewart and running back Scott Ackroyd.

But Wacker also shared his thoughts on Southwest Conference football in general and TCU grid fortunes in particular.

The former Southwest Texas State mentor said SWC football should be on the rise after some rough years in the middle of this decade.

"Everything I see is really encouraging," Wacker said. "Eliminating alumni from the recruiting process has helped as well as having Proposition 48 (the NCAA academic standards).

"Now they're bringing kids in that have a chance of making it."

But the real key to SWC grid resurgence is all nine schools taking care of their own, Wacker said. And that's what he says TCU is doing.

"First, I don't think it's my responsibility to worry about the other schools. My job is coaching kids and getting them going in the right direction.

"We have to control our program and our kids," he said.

Boosters have cleaned up their act, too, at least at TCU, according to Wacker.

"The boosters have wised up, too. We told them from day one what they couldn't do and what we would do if they did it.

"I think they saw what it did to the program," Wacker added.

It's official. The Pro Golf Tour, a major new professional golf enterprise, will make Green Tree Country Club a stop on its fast-growing tour July 21-24.

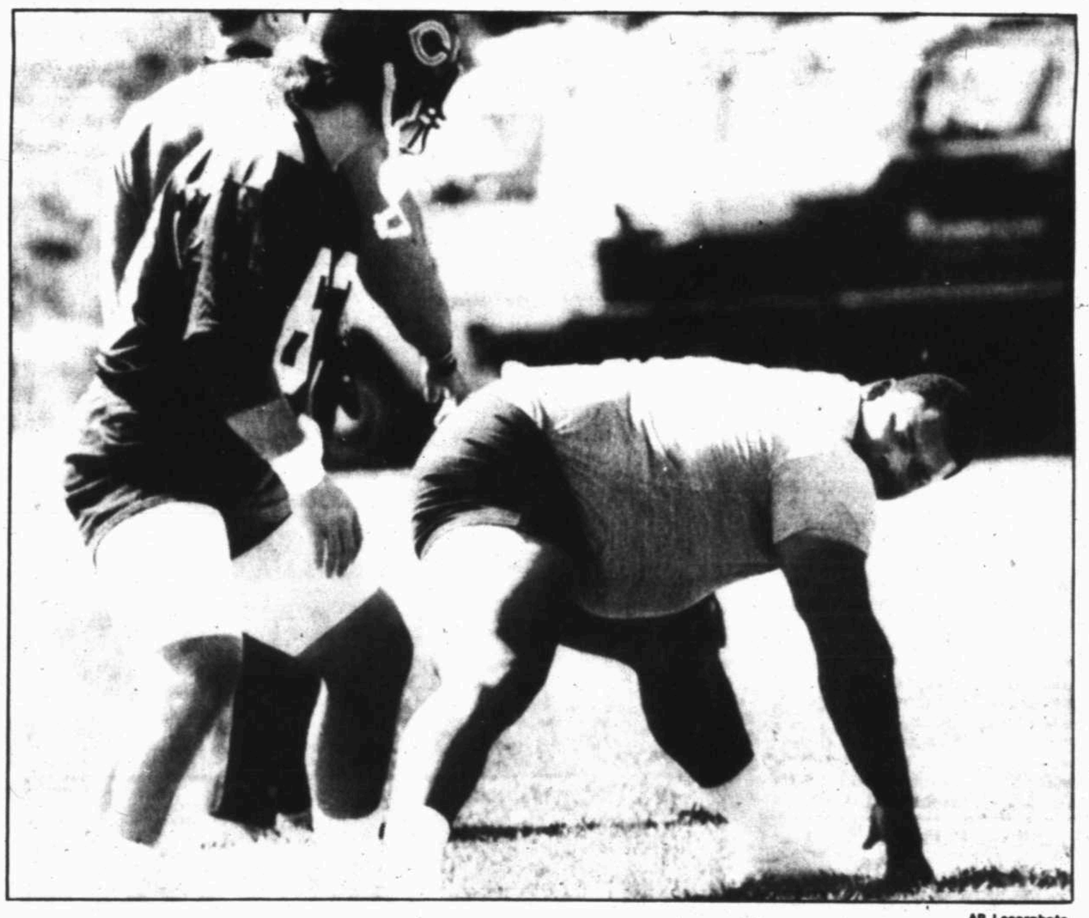

Aytch Johnson, president of the PGT, in revealing that Midland would be one of the 18 tourney sites this year, announced a pro-am July 20 will precede the $100,000 event.

The tournament sponsor and the charity that will benefit from the proceeds of the event will be announced in early June.

THIS IS the first full season of play for the PGT, and each of the tournaments will offer a $100,000 guaranteed purse.

The tour began in Mobile and Birmingham, Ala., in March, suffered a rainout in Jackson, Miss., and then resumed with tournaments in Mission, Corpus Christi and Lufkin, Texas.

Drum roll please ... sense of humor a must at SMU

Williamson

Doug Single is probably the only employed guy in the United States who would want the job of athletic director at SMU.

Some say the ad read — WANTED: One tough, dedicated stand-up comic, who can keep his sense of humor over the next five years. Must have survived The Improv in Hollywood and can't be sidetracked by the bag men of Dallas and the Southwest Conference. Must never accept under the table money or find it attractive. Must produce a winning program without talent, without support and with a smile.

Single has never been to The Improv, but so far, he's still smiling. The tough part, however, is still down the road.

SMU is now under the NCAA's "Death Penalty." No football or recruiting for two years. But according to Single, complete with comic smile, that's the easy part.

"THE DEATH Penalty punishment is not the two years SMU has to go without football," notes Single. "The punishment is the five years after we start playing again.

"It isn't easy to walk out of a stadium after a huge blowout. I know. I've been there before. You can talk about Columbia all you want, but I was at Northwestern in 1981 and that was the worst team in the country. I was part of that.

"You've never lived until you've gone through something like that. I remember one game against Ohio State. We score first, but naturally miss the extra point, but we were leading 6-0. We got beat 70-6."

That's the carnage SMU can expect to suffer in 1989 when the Mustangs are allowed to kick, pass and tackle once again. You had better be a comic able to see the lighter side of things.

"We're going to take freshman kids and put them against some of the best teams in the country. It's not going to be pretty, but we're going to do it the right way — the way it's supposed to be done," Single recently told a meeting of Texas' sports editors in Austin.

OF COURSE, that translates into the fact that the bag men who courted the SMU football program with less than appropriate gifts will be eliminated.

"It may be tough, but I will have no regrets in announcing to the press that SMU has pulled the plug on any association with persons or groups who seek to aid our program in an illegal manner. We are going to be tough on self-investigation and other schools should be too."

And then Single took to his comic role, adding, "The bag men of SMU are out of the way for the most part. Our economy and Chapter 11 has done most of that for us already." Drum roll, please.

Single would also like to see a change in the SWC at the way conference schools go one-on-one, institution to institution.

"I come to the Bible Belt and find it as one of the most unfriendly places, at least in the Southwest Conference. We seem to have a Shoot Your Partner mentality here and that's got to change," says Single. "We've got to work together and that might be hard to accomplish.

"Shoot, you know no one is going to take it easy on SMU. This is a Take No Prisoners conference. There are too many people with long memories. They remember every defeat they suffered against SMU."

SINGLE SAYS that SMU will eventually recover, but it won't be in the near future. He knows there are still some dark days ahead.

"We're still going to do it right. We're going to turn things around 180 degrees from the way SMU has done things in the past," said Single.

"For instance, we will not sign any non-qualifier under Proposition 48. Some schools like Oklahoma and Notre Dame will do that, but I can't speak for them. We want to get out of the exploitation business, so we are through at SMU taking kids who have no chance at getting a degree at our institution.

"We won't be an elitist in our policies, but we're going to take athletes who qualify and we are going to have polygraph tests in the contracts of our college employees. It's in my contract."

Single is saying the words we want to hear from college athletics, but we also wonder how long his message will be heard. Seventy-six to zip can bury a message in a hurry. Single and his Mustangs are in for some lonely days. Let's hope Single can keep the drum roll rocking.

Angels nip Mets

From Staff Reports

JACKSON, Miss. — Pinch-hitter Jesus Alfaro knocked in the winning run in the seventh and added an insurance RBI in the ninth as the Midland Angels defeated the Jackson Mets 4-2 Wednesday.

The Angels won three of the five games at Jackson and finish the current road trip 6-4.

Jackson manager Tucker Ashford protested the game in the fourth inning after Mets' first baseman Kirk DeLuka attempted to steal home. Ashford claimed Midland catcher Mike Knapp came out of the catcher's position to receive a pitch from Shane Young as DeLuka charged for the plate.

Had DeLuka successfully stolen home, the Mets would've taken a 3-2 lead.

Kurt Walker earned the win for the Angels, his second against one setback. In 5⅓ innings, Walker scattered only four hits and struck out five. Newly acquired Miguel Alicea picked up the save, his second. Alicea came on with two out and the bases loaded in the ninth and forced Craig Shipley to pop up for the final out of the game.

Rich Rodriquez, 1-4, took the loss for Jackson.

Midland collected only six hits in the contest; Jeff Manto and Knapp both had doubles. Jackson pounded out nine hits in the losing effort.

The Angels take today off, a travel day, and will return to Angel Stadium Friday night to host Arkansas. Gametime is set for 7 p.m.

In other Texas League action Wednesday night, the San Antonio Missions defeated the Shreveport Captains, 8-7; Wichita blanked Tulsa, 11-0, and Arkansas whipped El Paso, 8-3.

Two free throws by Dennis Johnson with 2:25 to go gave Boston its last lead, 98-97. But the parade to the foul line by Atlanta — which made 22 of 24 free throws in the final period — doomed Boston.

Atlanta was led by Kevin Willis with a playoff-career-high 27 points. Wilkins added 25 points and Rivers 21.

For Boston, Robert Parish had 24 points, Bird 22 and Johnson 20.

Pistons 102, Bulls 95

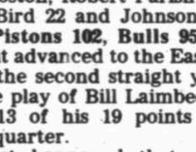

Detroit advanced to the Eastern final for the second straight year behind the play of Bill Laimbeer, who scored 13 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter.

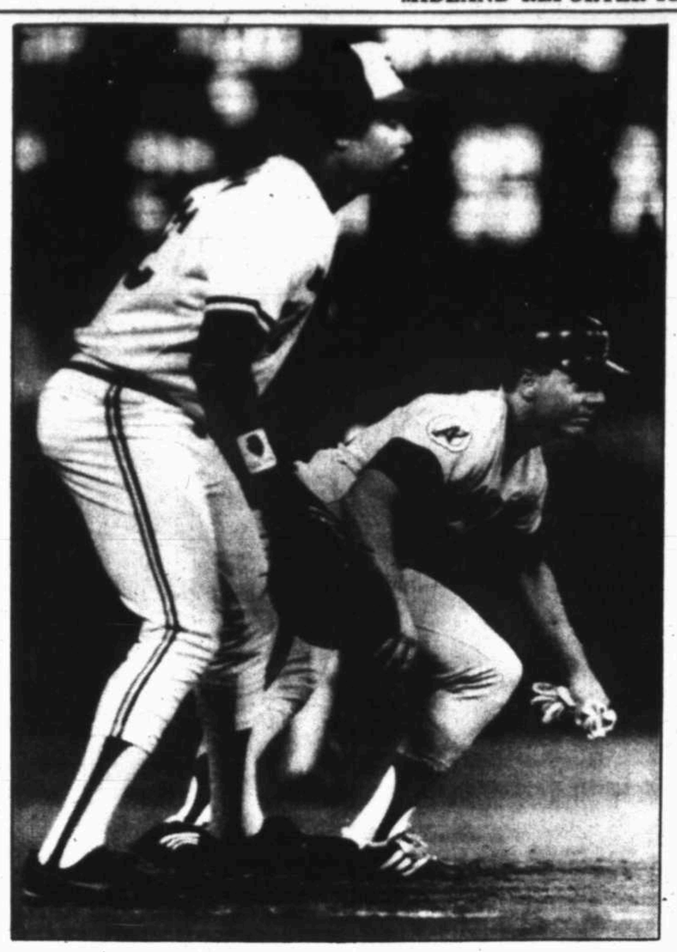

"It just happened that my six, eight, 10 points in a row came at the end of the game," Laimbeer said. "That's where it became a point to get the shots to fall in and ours did. That got the crowd into it."

Laimbeer pulled down 13 rebounds and helped Joe Dumars lead a defensive effort that held Chicago's Michael Jordan in check.

Detroit's defense, which held Jordan to 23 and 24 points in the third and fourth games of the series, held Jordan to 25 — just nine in the second half — in Game 5.

Mavs look for clincher

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks can advance to the NBA Western Conference playoff finals for the first time in franchise history with a victory over the crippled Denver Nuggets tonight.

Two years ago Dallas was knocked out in the semifinals by the Los Angeles Lakers 4-2, the best the expansion Mavs have ever done.

"Our goal was to do a lot better in the playoffs this year and if we beat Denver we will pass another milestone," said Dallas Coach John MacLeod, who replaced Dick Motta after he resigned following a first round upset by Seattle in 1987.

Denver could again be without All-Star guard Lafayette Lever and forward Jay Vincent.

The Nuggets said Lever, who has a strained knee, definitely won't play. Vincent, sidelined by a pulled calf muscle, was listed as questionable.

The Mavericks won 110-106 Tuesday night in Denver to take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal.

"This was an extremely big win for us," said Dallas forward Mark Aguirre, who scored 25 points Tuesday night, including a crucial 3-pointer with 19 seconds left. "We can end it at home now, but we can't think it's over yet."

Rolando Blackman, who scored 18 of his 24 points in the second half, said the series "has been tough and will continue to be tough despite Denver's injuries. We can't afford any kind of a letdown Thursday."

Roy Tarpley, named the NBA's top sixth man Wednesday, showed why with 21 points and 16 rebounds.

The undermanned Nuggets were no match for that trio. Vincent, averaging 17.5 points during the playoffs, and Lever, averaging 17.0, were the second-and third-leading scorers for the Nuggets.

"It's not something we can think about," said Denver Coach Doug Moe. "We have to win one in Dallas. It will be a tremendous hurdle for us."

The Nuggets shot free throws poorly on Tuesday.

Denver was the NBA's best free-throw shooting team during the regular season, hitting 80.4 percent. Coming into Tuesday's game they had hit 84.4 percent in the playoffs.

Life tough for Hendricks

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Elrod Hendricks was sitting back enjoying his stint as interim manager of the Baltimore Orioles. Then the team acted like, well ... like the Baltimore Orioles.

"For a while, when we were up 8-2, I thought that was it," said Hendricks, filling in for manager Frank Robinson who is hospitalized with a ruptured disc. "I thought we had them right where we wanted them."

Before the Orioles sewed up their sixth victory in 37 games, Hendricks saw the California Angels rally for five runs in the final two innings and almost tie the game when Fred Lynn made a charging catch of a sinking liner by Johnny Ray for the final out.

"I'm drained," Hendricks said after Baltimore's 8-7 victory Wednesday night. "And I thought I suffered in the bullpen."

Baltimore took advantage of eight walks and two wild pitches by loser Mike Witt, 1-5.

"We had some timely base hits, and I guess the walks helped, too," Hendricks said. "I don't know what was wrong with Witt. He usually pitches well against us."

The five-run outburst matched the biggest inning of the season for the Orioles.

"But the Angels just kept coming back," Hendricks said.

Rangers 4, Blue Jays 0

Geno Petralli's two-run double off the glove of Lloyd Moseby was the key hit and Ray Hayward, 3-0, pitched a six-hitter as Texas defeated Toronto.

Ruben Sierra and Steve Buechele hit consecutive solo homers in the seventh inning off Todd Stottlemyre, 1-5, to seal the victory.

Red Sox 4, Athletics 1

Dave Parker's two-base error and a two-run throwing error by pitcher Dave Stewart helped Boston down Oakland. Stewart, 8-2, was outdueled by Boston's Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 5-2, who scattered six hits, walked four and struck out four in eight innings as the Red Sox snapped the Athletics' four-game winning streak.

Oakland's Carney Lansford had a pair of singles for his 21st multi-hit game, tops in the majors. His 63 hits also leads the majors.

Royals 8, Twins 2

Home runs by Bo Jackson, Kurt Stillwell and Danny Tartabull backed Bret Saberhagen's eight-hitter as Kansas City downed Minnesota. Saberhagen, 5-4, struck out four and walked four as he threw the 35th complete game of his career. He has four of the Royals' six complete games this season.

Stillwell, the ninth batter in the order, broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth when he hit a two-run homer off Allan Anderson, 1-3. Stillwell, who singled in the third, is 7-for-15 in his last five games and has homered in his last two.

The Royals' outfielders threw out three runners, two by Jackson.

Tigers 3, Brewers 1

Luis Salazar scored the go-ahead run on a ninth-inning balk by Milwaukee's Teddy Higuera as Detroit defeated the Brewers. With the score 1-1, Salazar led off the ninth with a single and went to third on a single by Alan Trammell. On a 1-0 pitch to Chet Lemon, Higuera, 3-3, was called for his fifth balk of the season, sending Salazar home and Trammell to second. Trammell later scored on Larry Herndon's sacrifice fly.

Detroit's Doyle Alexander, 4-2, allowed eight hits, walked three and struck out seven.

Ray Knight had four hits for the Tigers.

Indians 2, White Sox 1

Joe Carter doubled home two runs and Tom Candiotti, 6-1, pitched his sixth complete game as Cleveland defeated Chicago. Carter's two-run double off Melido Perez, 3-1, gave the Indians their seventh victory in their last eight games.

Candiotti allowed seven hits, struck out seven and walked none as he lowered his ERA to 2.04. His sixth complete game tied Chris Bosio of Milwaukee for the major-league lead.

WACKER

The Horned Frogs were slapped with stiff NCAA penalties in 1985 after it was discovered that several players had been receiving "financial aid" beyond the NCAA scholarship guidelines.

But the Frogs have done their time and were able to sign the NCAA limit of 30 players to letters-of-intent this spring for the first time in several years. Their only West Texas signee was Odessa Permian back Shawn Crow, but the Frogs return several former Midland High and Midland Lee players, including:

— Davis, a starting defensive end last season. "He's our best defensive pass rusher," Wacker said. "He really showed a lot of improvement this spring."

— Daily, who started two games at center last season but is projected as the full-time starter this year. "He's our fastest offensive lineman at 4.8 (in the 40-yard dash) and a good athlete," Wacker said.

— Foret, who was injured most of the spring but is still expected to be a top-flight backup at wide receiver.

— Stewart, a rangy lad who has been tried throughout the offensive line but has finally settled in as a tight end who may see some playing time this season, according to Wacker.

— Ackroyd, a young man expected to see playing time as a backup fullback in the Frogs' wishbone formation - something they use about 20 percent of the time.

SWC gearing up for tournament

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Three nationally ranked teams, two of them with bids to the NCAA playoffs safely in hand, are among the four teams competing in the Southwest Conference baseball tournament which begins Thursday.

Third-ranked Texas and fifth-ranked Texas A&M, the top two finishers in the league race, are already in the NCAA field. Arkansas, ranked 21st, and Baylor are also in the double-elimination tournament. The winner of the tournament gets the SWC's automatic NCAA berth.

Texas plays Baylor at 1 p.m. today and Arkansas takes on A&M at 7 p.m.

The tournament runs through Saturday with games at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. If a seventh game is needed, it would be at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Texas finished the regular season with a 51-8 record and won the conference championship with an 18-2 mark. Head coach Cliff Gustafson, who won his 1,000th game earlier this season, is expected to start pitcher Eric Stone, 15-2, against the Bears.

The Longhorns are led at the plate by SWC batting champ Mike Patrick, a designated hitter who enters the tourney hitting .391.

Angels nip Mets

From Staff Reports

JACKSON, Miss. — Pinch-hitter Jesus Alfaro knocked in the winning run in the seventh and added an insurance RBI in the ninth as the Midland Angels defeated the Jackson Mets 4-2 Wednesday.

The Angels won three of the five games at Jackson and finish the current road trip 6-4.

Jackson manager Tucker Ashford protested the game in the fourth inning after Mets' first baseman Kirk DeLuka attempted to steal home. Ashford claimed Midland catcher Mike Knapp came out of the catcher's position to receive a pitch from Shane Young as DeLuka charged for the plate.

Had DeLuka successfully stolen home, the Mets would've taken a 3-2 lead.

Kurt Walker earned the win for the Angels, his second against one setback. In 5⅓ innings, Walker scattered only four hits and struck out five. Newly acquired Miguel Alicea picked up the save, his second. Alicea came on with two out and the bases loaded in the ninth and forced Craig Shipley to pop up for the final out of the game.

Rich Rodriquez, 1-4, took the loss for Jackson.

Midland collected only six hits in the contest; Jeff Manto and Knapp both had doubles. Jackson pounded out nine hits in the losing effort.

The Angels take today off, a travel day, and will return to Angel Stadium Friday night to host Arkansas. Gametime is set for 7 p.m.

In other Texas League action Wednesday night, the San Antonio Missions defeated the Shreveport Captains, 8-7; Wichita blanked Tulsa, 11-0, and Arkansas whipped El Paso, 8-3.

Two free throws by Dennis Johnson with 2:25 to go gave Boston its last lead, 98-97. But the parade to the foul line by Atlanta — which made 22 of 24 free throws in the final period — doomed Boston.

Atlanta was led by Kevin Willis with a playoff-career-high 27 points. Wilkins added 25 points and Rivers 21.

For Boston, Robert Parish had 24 points, Bird 22 and Johnson 20.

Pistons 102, Bulls 95

Detroit advanced to the Eastern final for the second straight year behind the play of Bill Laimbeer, who scored 13 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter.

"It just happened that my six, eight, 10 points in a row came at the end of the game," Laimbeer said. "That's where it became a point to get the shots to fall in and ours did. That got the crowd into it."

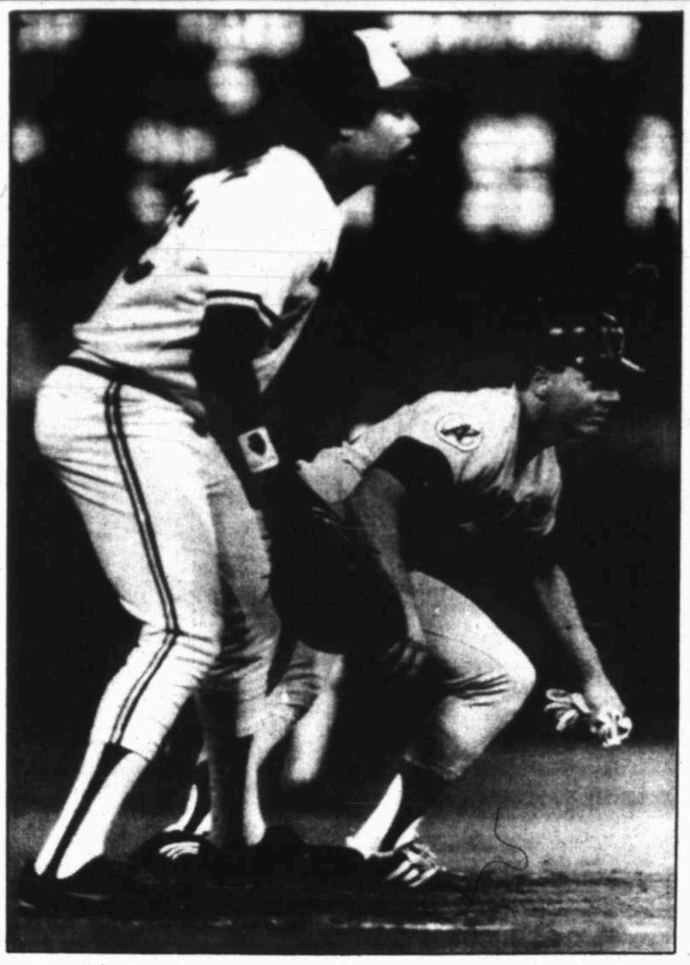

Laimbeer pulled down 13 rebounds and helped Joe Dumars lead a defensive effort that held Chicago's Michael Jordan in check.

Detroit's defense, which held Jordan to 23 and 24 points in the third and fourth games of the series, held Jordan to 25 — just nine in the second half — in Game 5.

Mavs look for clincher

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks can advance to the NBA Western Conference playoff finals for the first time in franchise history with a victory over the crippled Denver Nuggets tonight.

Two years ago Dallas was knocked out in the semifinals by the Los Angeles Lakers 4-2, the best the expansion Mavs have ever done.

"Our goal was to do a lot better in the playoffs this year and if we beat Denver we will pass another milestone," said Dallas Coach John MacLeod, who replaced Dick Motta after he resigned following a first round upset by Seattle in 1987.

Denver could again be without All-Star guard Lafayette Lever and forward Jay Vincent.

The Nuggets said Lever, who has a strained knee, definitely won't play. Vincent, sidelined by a pulled calf muscle, was listed as questionable.

The Mavericks won 110-106 Tuesday night in Denver to take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal.

"This was an extremely big win for us," said Dallas forward Mark Aguirre, who scored 25 points Tuesday night, including a crucial 3-pointer with 19 seconds left. "We can end it at home now, but we can't think it's over yet."

Rolando Blackman, who scored 18 of his 24 points in the second half, said the series "has been tough and will continue to be tough despite Denver's injuries. We can't afford any kind of a letdown Thursday."

Roy Tarpley, named the NBA's top sixth man Wednesday, showed why with 21 points and 16 rebounds.

The undermanned Nuggets were no match for that trio. Vincent, averaging 17.5 points during the playoffs, and Lever, averaging 17.0, were the second-and third-leading scorers for the Nuggets.

"It's not something we can think about," said Denver Coach Doug Moe. "We have to win one in Dallas. It will be a tremendous hurdle for us."

The Nuggets shot free throws poorly on Tuesday.

Denver was the NBA's best free-throw shooting team during the regular season, hitting 80.4 percent. Coming into Tuesday's game they had hit 84.4 percent in the playoffs.

Life tough for Hendricks

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Elrod Hendricks was sitting back enjoying his stint as interim manager of the Baltimore Orioles. Then the team acted like, well ... like the Baltimore Orioles.

"For a while, when we were up 8-2, I thought that was it," said Hendricks, filling in for manager Frank Robinson who is hospitalized with a ruptured disc. "I thought we had them right where we wanted them."

Before the Orioles sewed up their sixth victory in 37 games, Hendricks saw the California Angels rally for five runs in the final two innings and almost tie the game when Fred Lynn made a charging catch of a sinking liner by Johnny Ray for the final out.

"I'm drained," Hendricks said after Baltimore's 8-7 victory Wednesday night. "And I thought I suffered in the bullpen."

Baltimore took advantage of eight walks and two wild pitches by loser Mike Witt, 1-5.

"We had some timely base hits, and I guess the walks helped, too," Hendricks said. "I don't know what was wrong with Witt. He usually pitches well against us."

The five-run outburst matched the biggest inning of the season for the Orioles.

"But the Angels just kept coming back," Hendricks said.

Rangers 4, Blue Jays 0

Geno Petralli's two-run double off the glove of Lloyd Moseby was the key hit and Ray Hayward, 3-0, pitched a six-hitter as Texas defeated Toronto.

Ruben Sierra and Steve Buechele hit consecutive solo homers in the seventh inning off Todd Stottlemyre, 1-5, to seal the victory.

Red Sox 4, Athletics 1

Dave Parker's two-base error and a two-run throwing error by pitcher Dave Stewart helped Boston down Oakland. Stewart, 8-2, was outdueled by Boston's Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 5-2, who scattered six hits, walked four and struck out four in eight innings as the Red Sox snapped the Athletics' four-game winning streak.

Oakland's Carney Lansford had a pair of singles for his 21st multi-hit game, tops in the majors. His 63 hits also leads the majors.

Royals 8, Twins 2

Home runs by Bo Jackson, Kurt Stillwell and Danny Tartabull backed Bret Saberhagen's eight-hitter as Kansas City downed Minnesota. Saberhagen, 5-4, struck out four and walked four as he threw the 35th complete game of his career. He has four of the Royals' six complete games this season.

Stillwell, the ninth batter in the order, broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth when he hit a two-run homer off Allan Anderson, 1-3. Stillwell, who singled in the third, is 7-for-15 in his last five games and has homered in his last two.

The Royals' outfielders threw out three runners, two by Jackson.

Tigers 3, Brewers 1

Luis Salazar scored the go-ahead run on a ninth-inning balk by Milwaukee's Teddy Higuera as Detroit defeated the Brewers. With the score 1-1, Salazar led off the ninth with a single and went to third on a single by Alan Trammell. On a 1-0 pitch to Chet Lemon, Higuera, 3-3, was called for his fifth balk of the season, sending Salazar home and Trammell to second. Trammell later scored on Larry Herndon's sacrifice fly.

Detroit's Doyle Alexander, 4-2, allowed eight hits, walked three and struck out seven.

Ray Knight had four hits for the Tigers.

Indians 2, White Sox 1

Joe Carter doubled home two runs and Tom Candiotti, 6-1, pitched his sixth complete game as Cleveland defeated Chicago. Carter's two-run double off Melido Perez, 3-1, gave the Indians their seventh victory in their last eight games.

Candiotti allowed seven hits, struck out seven and walked none as he lowered his ERA to 2.04. His sixth complete game tied Chris Bosio of Milwaukee for the major-league lead.

The Horned Frogs were slapped with stiff NCAA penalties in 1985 after it was discovered that several players had been receiving "financial aid" beyond the NCAA scholarship guidelines.

But the Frogs have done their time and were able to sign the NCAA limit of 30 players to letters-of-intent this spring for the first time in several years. Their only West Texas signee was Odessa Permian back Shawn Crow, but the Frogs return several former Midland High and Midland Lee players, including:

— Davis, a starting defensive end last season. "He's our best defensive pass rusher," Wacker said. "He really showed a lot of improvement this spring."

— Daily, who started two games at center last season but is projected as the full-time starter this year. "He's our fastest offensive lineman at 4.8 (in the 40-yard dash) and a good athlete," Wacker said.

— Foret, who was injured most of the spring but is still expected to be a top-flight backup at wide receiver.

— Stewart, a rangy lad who has been tried throughout the offensive line but has finally settled in as a tight end who may see some playing time this season, according to Wacker.

— Ackroyd, a young man expected to see playing time as a backup fullback in the Frogs' wishbone formation - something they use about 20 percent of the time.

SWC gearing up for tournament

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Three nationally ranked teams, two of them with bids to the NCAA playoffs safely in hand, are among the four teams competing in the Southwest Conference baseball tournament which begins Thursday.

Third-ranked Texas and fifth-ranked Texas A&M, the top two finishers in the league race, are already in the NCAA field. Arkansas, ranked 21st, and Baylor are also in the double-elimination tournament. The winner of the tournament gets the SWC's automatic NCAA berth.

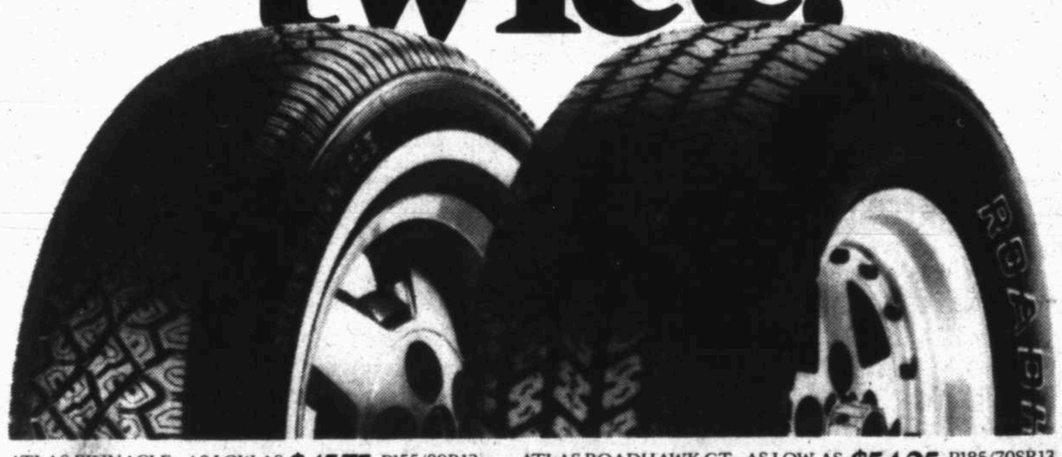

Texas plays Baylor at 1 p.m. today and Arkansas takes on A&M at 7 p.m.

The tournament runs through Saturday with games at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. If a seventh game is needed, it would be at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Texas finished the regular season with a 51-8 record and won the conference championship with an 18-2 mark. Head coach Cliff Gustafson, who won his 1,000th game earlier this season, is expected to start pitcher Eric Stone, 15-2, against the Bears.

The Longhorns are led at the plate by SWC batting champ Mike Patrick, a designated hitter who enters the tourney hitting .391.

Knocked out Met knocks off Padres

Associated Press

Keith Hernandez went down for the count, then got up and knocked out the San Diego Padres.

Hernandez, the New York Mets' all-star first baseman, was kneed by a baserunner in the fifth inning Wednesday night. He was knocked dizzy, but remained in the game after being revived.

"I really don't know (if I was knocked out)," Hernandez said after the Mets beat San Diego 5-2 as Bob Ojeda pitched two-hit ball for 8 1-3 innings. "I was wondering if I was on the base. There was a guy on third. I tried to get up but when I heard (umpire) Lee Weyer say 'out,' I said to hell with this and laid down there a while.

"It was like Tyson's right hand. That's what it felt like. If he came back with a combination, I would have been knocked out."

Two innings later, Hernandez did some slugging of his own against pitcher Jimmy Jones, who had collided with him at first base. With the score 1-1, Ojeda singled, Len Dykstra was safe on catcher Benito Santiago's throwing error, and, after Ojeda was picked off and Wally Backman struck out, Hernandez homered.

NL Roundup

Astros 4, Pirates 2

Slumping Alan Ashby struck out three times. But he also had a two-run single in the sixth inning, rallying the Astros. Visiting Pittsburgh lost its fifth in a row.

Ashby had four hits in his previous 33 at-bats prior to his game-winner off Doug Drabek. Nolan Ryan, pitched six innings and got the victory, despite striking out only two. Dave Smith got his eighth save by pitching the ninth.

Expos 3, Dodgers 0

Homers by Andres Galarraga and Tim Wallach supported rookie John Dopson's first major league win. Dopson pitched six scoreless innings, allowing three hits.

Dodgers starter Orel Hershiser, who has lost two in a row after opening the season 6-0, struck out eight, walked two and allowed five hits. But one of them was Galarraga's eighth homer of the season, leading off the second. That was all Montreal needed.

Giants 5, Phillies 1

At San Francisco, Mike Krukow gave up four hits, struck out six and walked three before being relieved by Scott Garrelts with two on in the ninth. Garrelts got Lance Parrish to hit into a double play to pick up his second save. Parrish had homered in the second inning.

Reds 8, Braves 4

At Cincinnati, Dave Collins' suicide squeeze bunt put the Reds ahead in the seventh inning and he added a two-run double in the eighth.

The Reds scored twice in the seventh to overcome a 4-3 deficit.

Cardinals 4, Cubs 1

Tom Brunansky, whom St. Louis acquired for power, provided plenty at Wrigley Field with a pair of doubles. His second double was good for two runs in the eighth.

Fehr strongly suggests expansion

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON — Donald Fehr, executive director of the Major League Players Association, hopes to force the league's owners to consider expansion with help from Congress and markets vying for a team to call their own.

Fehr is currently on a barnstorming tour of several cities interested in getting a baseball franchise. He was in the nation's capital on Wednesday to help present a study he said shows "many cities that can support franchises that don't have major league baseball."

The study, which analyzes 23 major markets and is commissioned by the union, does not present any conclusions. But Fehr said the report will soon be updated with conclusions, and at that point the league's owners had better watch out.

"What will follow that will depend upon the response we get from people on (Capitol) Hill, from various municipalities and others," Fehr said. "I think you'll see some things happening before too many weeks go by."

LAST MONTH, the Senate Baseball Task Force threatened to consider removing baseball's antitrust exemption unless a timetable for expansion is established. In the meantime, Fehr hopes to keep the pressure on the owners by presenting the study to cities still clinging to the hope of gaining a major-league franchise.

"If a city can support a team, it ought to have a chance to have one," Fehr told the District of Columbia Baseball Commission. "We ought not to be telling American citizens you can't go watch baseball games because we want to maintain a vacant market. That's nuts, but that's what (the owners) do."

He accused the owners of making franchises "artificially scarce" and said the owners won't do anything about it unless they are provoked.

"At no time in the history of baseball has anything ever been done willingly to fill a vacant market," he said. "The only time there is a response is when somebody sticks enough pins in them and threatens to stick enough more.

"The whole expansion process has to be brought out of the closet," Fehr said. "There has to be on-the-record, public discussion everywhere as to why major league baseball is allowed to get away with such nonsense."

Owners representative Barry Rona said in New York that the union is pushing expansion for selfish reasons.

Fehr admitted that the union would indeed profit by expansion. But he added, "This is one area in which the public interest and the players' interest precisely coincide. The process of expansion has been very frustrating for everyone."

He said several cities could house a major league team tomorrow, but may never get the chance because the owners won't give them a shot.

Rain putting a damper on baseball

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — Whether the Los Angeles Dodgers, Boston Red Sox and some other teams can win their divisions this season might depend on the weather.

Rainouts are reigning in the majors this year, creating an overflow of doubleheaders and a flood of potential problems.

The Seattle-New York game scheduled for Wednesday night was the 28th to be wiped out by bad weather this year. Only 27 games were postponed all last season.

"It will be a strain, depending on the type of games you have," Dodgers pitching coach Ron Perranoski said. "If it goes down to the last couple of months, it puts a big strain on us."

The Dodgers, whose pitching has put them in first place in the National League West, have already been rained out five times. That includes four straight days in April, three of them at home. No games were rained out at Dodger Stadium last year and never had three in a row there been washed out.

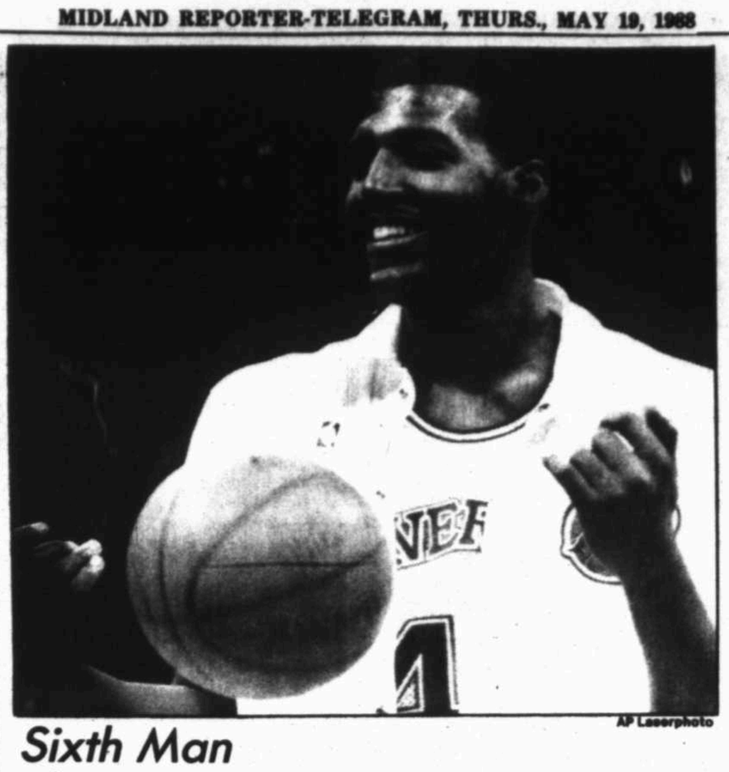

Boston, one of the favorites in the American League East, leads the majors with six rainouts. Two were at Chicago, where the Red Sox will now have to play doubleheaders on July 8 and 9.

"Thank goodness that comes just before the All-Star break," Boston manager John McNamara said. "But there's nothing we can do about the weather."

Baltimore, Milwaukee and the Chicago White Sox have been rained out four times.

"I wish we had more of these when we were 0-21," said Baltimore coach Ellie Hendricks, who is running the Orioles this week while Manager Frank Robinson is recovering from a ruptured disc.

Minnesota, Atlanta, San Diego and Philadelphia need to reschedule three games. One of Philadelphia's is a tie game with Montreal that ended in the seventh inning because of rain.

Dallas center-forward Roy Tarpley, the Mavericks' spark off the bench, has become the team's first player ever to receive a major post-season award. Tarpley received league honors as the best Sixth Man, which goes to a player for outstanding contribution by a non-starter.

GOLF

Johnson and E. M. (Bud) Sullivan, two golf-oriented businessmen who make their home in Palm Desert, Calif., founded the PGT a year ago.

"We tried it out in Indianapolis and Cincinnati last summer," said Johnson, "And we had a full field for both tournaments."

And full fields have marked every tournament thus far, confirming the belief of Johnson and Sullivan that there is a lot of young golf talent just itching for a chance to display its wares.

THIS TOUR gives them the opportunity and an alternative, saving the expensive, lonely trips to foreign tours. And Johnson contends the golf fans will watch here will be on a par with the PGA tour, pointing out the per round stroke average is lower than that of the tour golfers.

Johnson said he was especially happy to bring the tour to a course with the championship qualifications of Green Tree CC.

The tour is arranged geographically for economy and convenience with Midland one of four WT-New Mexico stops, beginning in El Paso July 7, moving to Rio Rancho in Albuquerque July 14 and finishing in Amarillo July 28.

May 26, the tour begins a four-week run that will include Louisville, Cincinnati and Indianapolis.

THE SEASON ends in September with the PGT championship at Palm Coast, Fla.

At Birmingham this year, 180 golfers were in the field and another 50 were turned away.

Johnson said a field of 168 golfers is anticipated for the Green Tree stop.

"We are not competing with the PGA tour," Johnson said, "but we do feel, very strongly, that there are many excellent golfers not playing on the PGA tour as there are playing on that tour."

"Right now we envision ourselves as the American Football League of golf. We are positioning the PGT as something that golf has long needed and we are doing it very carefully. The early success of our first year has proven very much so that there is a need, that the PGT will be accepted both corporately and by the public."

The PGT is composed primarily of players who have not yet won their PGA tour card and those who have earned it and then lost it, such as former PGA regulars like Rex Caldwell, Rod Curl, Frank Connor and Forrest Fezler.

Sons of famous tour players striving for recognition in their own right on the tour are Wayne Player, Bobby Casper, Kel Devlin, Donny Massengale, Griffin Rudolph and Kyle Coody.

The tournament will mark the first regular professional tour stop since the 1960s when the LPGA played the Tall City Tournament in Midland.

TENNIS

On the other side of the bracket, Odessa's five remaining singles players will go against two Tyler players, two from Palm Beach and one from Broward, Florida. The other semifinal doubles matches pit OC and Tyler in the No. 2 bracket, Odesssa against Indian River, Fla., at the No. 1 and Tyler against San Jacinto in the No. 3 bracket.

"We've gotten to the point we wanted to be with everyone still alive for the semifinals. Now we just have to win in those head-to-head matches (today)," Williams said.

Colvin faces Mandy Nall of Tyler, who gave Colvin one of her infrequent losses. Nevarez-Ayon plays Dorda Peruzovic of Broward, Fla.; Caroline Bhaguandas goes against Kim Wertenberger of Palm Beach, Fla.; Sara Hancock plays Stine Vogt-Anderson of Tyler; Gabi Csorba is against Bente Boemark of Tyler, and Jill Vallandigham faces Sharon Westfall of Odessa.

In doubles, Bhaguandas and Hancock meet Holm-Larsen and Vigander from Tyler in the number one bracket; Colvin and Vallandigham play Gibson and Peterson from Palm Beach at number two; and Csorba and Nevarez-Ayon are matched against Henrici and Franklin of Palm Beach.

Former Dumas coach Bill Spann to retire

By RICK THOMAS
Texarkana Gazette

REDWATER (AP) — Bill Spann, who is retiring after 35 years of coaching high school football, says he saw a lot in the four decades he labored with athletes in several different schools.

He's been victorious 175 times and won two Texas state football championships at Dumas, in the Texas Panhandle, before moving on to Burleson and finally to Redwater.

Yet it's his players and coaches that he remembers most when he talks about his upcoming retirement.

"If you didn't get some reward and satisfaction out of the kids you coach and help, it definitely wouldn't be worth it," said Spann. "I think my greatest reward really is the association of the young people of Texas and the close-knit family that you create in your coaching staffs."

Spann's football teams have won 175 games and lost 65, but that's not the bottom line for the veteran coach.

"I DON'T care what you accomplish, you don't feel like you're doing much unless you're working with somebody that you can help," he said. "I think a lot of time kids don't realize that you've helped them until several years later, but that's just part of it.

"I've had former players come by and say 'hello.' I think they're too embarrassed to say how much you meant to them."

Spann, who holds a master's degree from West Texas State University, started his coaching career in Oklahoma, where he spent four years. He then coached 20 years with the Dumas Demons, including 17 as head coach.

"We won 15 district championships and two state football championships, in 1961 and 1962," Spann said. "At one time, Dumas was the winningest team in the state in the 60s, which made me the winningest coach in the state in the 60s. We had three straight years were we were undefeated in regular season at 10-0, and we had a 24-game winning streak in 62-63."

IN 1976, Spann moved to Burleson and coached there three years. He came to Redwater in 1980.

"My 1962 team was probably my best," Spann said. "We went 13-1, losing our second game of the season, but we went undefeated from there on. The team that beat us played in the state championship game for the highest class, which was 4A back then."

Spann's most memorable game came in 1962, when Dumas played Brownwood, coached by legendary Gordon Wood, in the quarterfinals.

"They were leading 10-0 at halftime, and we beat them 38-10," Spann said. "We got on a roll in the second half and everything we did was right. Brownwood had won the state two years before, and we had won it the year before."

SPANN SAID another of his career highlights was that he was fortunate enough to coach all three of his sons. Dale and Carl still live in Dumas, and Mark lives near Kerrville. A daughter, Susan Harris, lives in Arlington.

"I've enjoyed what I've done for 35 years, but I think I've had enough," Spann said. "I intend to golf, to travel and enjoy myself.

"Every minute has been interesting and worthwhile, and I don't regret any of it. If I started over, I would do the same thing."

PLAY THE CARD YOU'RE KNOWN TO HAVE

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

	NORTH ♠ 8 5 4 ♡ A 9 3 ◇ A K Q 7 ♣ J 5 2
WEST ♠ K 10 ♡ K Q 10 7 6 4 ◇ J 10 8 5 ♣ 4		EAST ♠ J 3 ♡ J 8 5 ◇ 9 4 2 ♣ A K 9 8 6
	SOUTH ♠ A Q 9 7 6 2 ♡ 2 ◇ 6 3 ♣ Q 10 7 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♣

Sometimes you are marked with a certain card, either by the bidding or the play. In that event, it often pays to play that card at the first opportunity. It could yield surprising results.

East-West were using weak two-bids. Once South heard that neither East nor West had an opening bid, he knew he was going to find some useful cards in his partner's hand, so his three-spade bid carried little risk. North was delighted at the turn of events, and raised to game.

West elected to lead his singleton club. East cashed the king-ace and continued with a third round. Had West ruffed low, it would have been the third and last trick for the defense, assuming declarer was a skilled card reader. Since East did not open the bidding and had only made a single raise of his partner's hearts, it was highly unlikely that he held the king of spades in addition to the ace-king of clubs he had already shown. Therefore, as soon as declarer gained the lead he would have banged out the ace of spades, and that would have ended matters.

Fortunately, West was wise to the inferences declarer might draw from the auction. Instead of ruffing the third club with the ten, he ruffed with the king, the card he almost surely had to have! Now declarer had a choice of lines.

West exited with the king of hearts. Declarer won in dummy and, thinking that East held the remaining three trumps, he led a low trump from dummy and finessed the six when East followed with the trey. A happy West gathered in his ten for a one-trick set.

Piano to be hit of posthumous party

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — In his lifetime, John Cameron Young had a secret wish, an unusual fantasy: He wondered what an airborne piano would sound like crashing to earth. Now, a bit late, his friends will find out.

The Marin County man was 44 when he died three years ago, leaving an $800,000 estate. In his will, Young, whose life was full of adventure and fun-loving behavior, left $15,000 to three buddies who were instructed to toss one last party for their departed friend.

The professional guitar player told his friends to "give a party for themselves and as many of my friends as they can find that desire to attend."

As told by Young's friends, the Mississippi native moved to the San Francisco Bay area in 1972. He sang Delta blues and found time to be a parachutist, pilot, storyteller and business success with six furniture stores.

It took three years to straighten out Young's will, and on May 28, hundreds of folks are expected to gather for the memorial celebration.

They will indulge Young's strange fantasy — listening to a 300-pound piano crash to the ground from a hovering helicopter.

"He talked about that all the time," said Harry Murphy, 53, a Fairfax graphic designer who met Young in a San Anselmo saloon 10 years ago. "He'd sit here and say, 'Harry, we've got to have a piano drop. Can you hear it?...You take an old upright piano about 1,000 feet in the sky...'"

Murphy mused over that, and added fondly, "...I think he'll be able to hear it."

Murphy said a helicopter will drop an inlaid walnut upright from 50 to 100 feet near Sonoma County Airport.

"It's an arrogant, outrageous, playful, childish thing to do," said Murphy. "That embodies J.C."

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Soul music legend James Brown spent the night in jail on charges of drug possession and fleeing from police after his wife again complained he was abusing her.

Brown

The 55-year-old singer, known to fans as the "Godfather of Soul," was charged Wednesday with failure to stop for police, resisting arrest, assault against an officer and illegal possession of a revolver, police said.

Later in the day, Brown was charged with possession of the drug PCP after tests on a substance found in his car.

Deputies were dispatched to Brown's Beech Island home Wednesday after his wife, Adrienne, went to a neighbor's house and said he was abusing her, said Aiken County Sheriff Carrol Heath.

When officers arrived, Brown sped away in his car but was overtaken 1½ miles away, Heath said.

Brown told officers he was late for an appointment, the sheriff said. A scuffle ensued, but no injuries were reported. Brown remained jailed Wednesday night.

On April 4, Brown was charged with assault with the intent to murder, aggravated assault and battery after allegedly beating his wife with a pipe. He also was charged with firing a gun into a car while she was inside.

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees second baseman Willie Randolph says he has regular conferences with his kids, while actor-singer Kris Kristofferson modestly claims he only had the good taste to pick the right mothers.

Whatever their secrets, the two were among eight men honored Wdnesday as 1988's outstanding fathers by the National Father's Day Committee.

Randolph, who spends half the baseball season on the road, says he has to work at keeping communication lines open with his four children.

"We have conferences," Randolph said. "We dim the lights and just talk. You'd be amazed at the off-the-wall stuff. They can say whatever they want."

Kristofferson, who has six children by three wives and three adopted Salvadoran orphans, said, "I had the good taste to select mothers who would raise them. All I've done is love them."

Apparently love was enough, because all nine children now live with him and his current wife, Lisa, at their Malibu, Calif., home.

Other fathers honored were NBC White House correspondent Chris Wallace, FBI Director William Sessions, Fox Television sportscaster Bill Mazer, Tennis Hall of Famer Arthur Ashe, New York City police officer Steven McDonald, who was left paralyzed in a shooting, and broadcast personality Larry King.

Father's Day is June 19th.

• • •

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Lisa Bonet, who plays Cosby kid college student in NBC-TV's "A Different World" but has raised eyebrows by posing nude, is pregnant, a network spokesman said.

Bonet

Six months ago, Miss Bonet married musician Romeo Blue, also known as Lenny Kravitz.

There was no immediate word on how the pregnancy of the 20-year-old actress would affect her role in the series, according to a statement Wednesday from NBC spokesman Bob Meyers. The show, a spinoff of "The Cosby Show," was rated No. 2 for the season, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — To journalist Rick Reilly, North Dakota conjurs up images of "desolation, tundra, one two-lane highway." But movie reviewer Judith Crist says she thinks of a state full of "bright, no-nonsense people."

Reilly, a writer for Sports Illustrated, and Crist, a reviewer for TV Guide, were among notables who responded recently to a questionnaire about North Dakota sent by the tiny senior class of Willow City High School.

The eight seniors were miffed when Kellye Cash said her Miss America 1987 title gave her the chance to visit places "you never thought people actually lived — like North and South Dakota."

So they decided to find out what other celebrities thought of North Dakota.

"It's fun to see what other people's impressions are, but I don't think it changed (the class members') minds," said their teacher, Peggy Gregg. "They're all proud to live in North Dakota."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Asked how he felt about reaching his 80th birthday, Jimmy Stewart responded in characteristic Jimmy Stewart style: "Ah...well...uh, it seems rather high."

Reached at his office Wednesday, Stewart remarked that he hadn't given the milestone much thought. "Frankly, it sneaked up on me. After 75, I didn't pay much attention."

The birthday is Friday, but Jimmy doesn't plan any special observance. "Gloria has fixed up a party," he said. "I'll leave it all up to her."

The day is likely to be like any other. Every morning he leaves the Roxbury Drive house he has shared with wife, Gloria, for 39 years and drives to his office. He often has lunch at the Beverly Hills Hotel, then returns to the office to answer his mail.

"I'm getting more letters now than I did 15-20 years ago," he says in amazement.

Fears put stockmarket in tailspin

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Wall Street's underlying dread of another stock crash has been aggravated by two significant events, an upward spike in interest rates and the first notable selling by big institutional investors in several weeks.

Unresponsive to good news and obsessed with the bad, the stock market took another sharp spill Wednesday, depressing the Dow Jones industrial average to its lowest point in more than three months. Broader market indexes also fell sharply.

The declines themselves were not particularly new or alarming, because prices have been bouncing up and down for a while in a post-crash market dominated largely by brokers buying and selling to each other.

What concerned investment professionals this time was an influx of sell orders from large institutional investors such as pension funds and mutual funds, the flesh and bones of the stockholding public. The selling suggested that these crucial investors are growing exasperated.

"Today's the first day I've seen some real institutional liquidations," William King, head trader at Nikko Securities Co. International in New York, said as the selling intensified late Wednesday. "You're getting some acknowledgement from institutional investors that there's a problem."

Institutional selling partly was responsible for inflating the volume on the New York Stock Exchange, where 209.42 million shares were traded. It was the first time the volume exceeded 200 million shares in more than a month.

To the technical strategists who attempt to plot the stock market's course based on mathematical formulas and past behavior, the price drop signaled some serious concern as well.

The Dow industrials fell 35.32 points to 1,951.09 on Wednesday, the lowest since Feb. 9, when it closed at 1,914.46. At one point, the average fell through 1,950, which strategists have called an important "support level."

In addition, a drop in the Dow transportation average, which often precedes declines in the industrial average, suggested prices would keep falling.

OPEC official calls offer to cut exports 'out of balance'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — OPEC's secretary general said here Wednesday that a proposal from independent oil-producing nations for a 5 percent cut in their exports is "out of balance."

"In percentage terms the adjustment of 5 percent seems fair, but it means 180,000 barrels less for the independent producers and around 800,000 barrels less for the OPEC members, so it would be out of balance," Fhadil J. Chalabi said.

He spoke at a seminar on 21st century technology organized by the Mexican Petroleum Institute. His comments were carried by the Mexican domestic news agencies Excelsior and Notimex.

"The proposal will be analyzed at the organization's next meeting in June," Chalabi said. "a more concrete proposal is expected from the independent producers to defend the difficult situation that the market currently faces."

Mexico, the world's sixth largest oil producer, is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries but recently held talks with the cartel about reducing output in an effort to bolster sagging world prices.

Chalabi said the international oil market is in an "extremely weak situation" and greater cooperation between member and non-member nations of OPEC is needed urgently.

He said a recovery of oil prices can't be expected before 1990. "They are moving at about $18 per barrel, because of the overproduction of the market, which is inundated with petroleum."

Mexican Energy Secretary Fernando Hiriart said after the meeting with OPEC that Mexico will hold steady its export target of 1.36 million barrels a day until the 13-member cartel reaches agreement on a production cut.

Other non-cartel producers involved in the recent meeting in Vienna, Austria, were Egypt, China, Malaysia, Oman and Angola.

Japan consulate general discusses trade deficit

Japan is sensitive to the trade-imbalance between America and Japan and is adopting a strategy to overcome it, says Yasuo Hori, consulate general of Japan based in Houston.

In Midland to address the West Texas Producers Forum, Hori said Japan had a major stake in achieving trade equilibrium, because of its extreme vulnerability and dependence on imported energy, metals and food stuffs.

He cited a perception gap as part of the trade balance problem, saying Japanese markets were perceived as hard to crack because of the fierce competition, but those who persist could become winners. "There are many silent winners in the Japanese markets. Even Ambassador Mike Mansfield has said that Japanese markets are more open than Americans believe," said Hori, who has served with the Japan's Ministry of Foreign Affairs since 1955.

Hori said Japan was very apprehensive about the Omnibus Trade Bill, which he said could have an adverse effect on Japan. "You cannot turn trade on and off like water," said the native of Toyama, Japan. He said America's trade problems were global in nature and required a global approach, noting the growing trade imbalance between the U.S. and the European economic community.

Calling the relationship between Japan and the U.S. the most important bilateral agreement in the world today, Hori said Japan was undertaking a three point initiative to protect the agreement. The initiative includes:

- working with four monetary powers to realign currency, depreciate the yen and make it more attractive to export to Japan,
- embarking on a program to adapt Japanese industry, and,
- embarking on a long term policy to support economic growth through domestic demand with public works, thereby becoming less export oriented.

Hori said the U.S.-Japan relationship would be even more important in the future because in the 21st century the center of global structure would shift from the Atlantic ocean to the Pacific, with Japan, China, Singapore and Malaysia, Australia, Indonesia and the Philipines playing major roles in the world economy. He compared the shift of power to the move of commerce from the north to the Sunbelt in the U.S.

But he warned that the closer the ties become, the more the friction would grow.

He said Texas and Japan agreed and disagreed on energy matters. "We both want stable oil prices. For us the more stable the better. But," he added, "you want high prices and we want low prices. An abrupt change in oil prices, up or down, is what Japan fears most."

Hori said Japan was very vulnerable when it comes to energy because it imports 99.7 percent of its crude oil and most of it comes from the Persian Gulf.

Asked if Japan should be contributing to the U.S. military cost of keeping the Persian Gulf open, Hori said that was not an improper proposal. He said there was room for cooperation and a number of options to assist, including sharing the cost, had been discussed.

Hori, who has been in Houston only three months, was provided a tour of a working oil rig and later honored at a Chamber of Commerce reception at the Midland Center.

FSLIC deficit may require further congressional aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deficit in the fund that insures deposits in the nation's savings institutions more than doubled last year and congressional action "may well be needed" to keep it operating, the General Accounting Office said today.

The GAO, the auditing arm of Congress, said the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.'s liabilities exceeded its assets at the end of 1987 by $13.7 billion, up from the deficit of $6.3 billion a year earlier.

In testimony prepared for the Senate Banking Committee, the GAO said the fund, which guarantees individual deposits up to $100,000 in 3,120 S&Ls, was in "precarious financial condition."

It said the money available to the fund "probably will not be adequate" to resolve the problems of the nation's 505 insolvent institutions.

"While FSLIC has the resources to continue operating in the near future, it may not have sufficient resources to effectively deal with the industry's current and future problems," Frederick D. Wolf, director of the GAO's accounting and financial management division, said in the testimony.

The GAO report comes only nine months after Congress authorized the sale of $10.8 billion in bonds over three years to bring the fund enough money to clean up the ailing industry, which has been hard hit by the bust of oil and real estate markets in the Southwest.

Clements calls for quick action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Southwest Plan to merge insolvent Texas thrifts with healthy savings and loans must move quickly, Gov. Bill Clements says.

The governor said Wednesday that federal regulators agree with him on the need for speed in resolving the problem.

"We discussed in great depth furthering that plan and accelerating that plan," Clements said of his meeting with Federal Home Loan Bank Board Chairman M. Danny Wall. "We think that time is of the essence."

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board on Wednesday announced what may be the largest merger under the Southwest Plan — a billion-dollar acquisition of four Texas thrifts by Southwest Savings Association of Dallas.

The first consolidation under the Southwest Plan since its announcement in February went through last week — when Houston's Coastal Banc Savings Association acquired another four insolvent Texas thrifts.

Both moves were praised by Clements, who called Wednesday's acquisition "a good plan that we think will serve Texas well."

Texas banks may see worst year

FDIC head says woes will peak

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Texas banking industry may record its worst year ever in 1988 although the problems of Texas banks will top out this year, the chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. says.

"It seems clear that the problems will peak this year," chairman William Seidman said Wednesday. "Most of the major banks have been dealt with or will have been handled."

More than half of Texas banks reported lower earnings during the first three months, and one-third of the state's banks lost money, he said.

Among larger institutions — ones with assets of more than $100 million, two-fifths lost money, with charge-offs growing at twice 1987 levels, FDIC officials reported.

Bank failures in Texas, including 25 already this year, should reach 70 by yearend, Seidman said. In the last five years, one-third of the banks closed were less than five years old.

Seidman also said regulators are in negotiations with potential purchasers of First RepublicBank Corp.

"We are talking to people. We hope we can arrange some resolution to that situation in the near future. How soon, only time will tell," Seidman told reporters.

The FDIC is studying methods to remedy inequities in policies that now allow it insure all deposits in large failing banks, while limiting exposure to the normal $100,000 maximum at smaller institutions, he confirmed.

The agency in March provided such blanket coverage for deposits held by First Republic, prompting complaints by area independent bankers.

Regulators believe there has been no mass redistribution of funds to First Republic as a result of the expanded guarantee, although, "We have had a great number of protests about the inequities," Seidman said.

Seidman said "banks in the area," not foreign institutions, pulled funds from First Republic, triggering the company's solvency crisis and eventually the FDIC's $1 billion cash infusion in March.

Comparing the earlier woes at First City Bancorporation of Texas Inc., which last month completed a $1.5 billion federally assisted recapitalization. Seidman said that bank "never had the kind of run that developed at First Republic."

The FDIC did not prompt First Republic to suspend interest payments on all debt last week, raising the specter of a bankruptcy filing, was not prompted by the FDIC, Seidman said.

"The (First Republic) board acted on its own judgment," he said. "We are in daily contact with them. We have people stationed in the bank, so we are aware of what they are doing."

Seidman also said that Albert V. Casey, 68, lured out of retirement to run First Republic, has not been instructed to shrink the bank so that it might be more appealing to potential purchasers.

Seidman blamed the continuing Texas troubles on the duration of the state's recession and lack of an established branch-banking system "which tended to make it (Texas) much more susceptible to problems."

Texas's once-buoyant economy shielded bankers from the conservative lending practices of more recession-prone areas, Seidman said.

MARKETS

Higher inventories lower oil prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil futures prices declined Wednesday, pushed lower by an industry report showing swelling inventories of crude and heating oil, as well as weaker-than-expected demand for gasoline.

Contracts for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, fell 33 cents to settle at $17.43 per 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Among June contracts for refined products, wholesale prices for unleaded gasoline fell 0.51 cent to 52.23 cents per gallon, while heating oil fell 0.71 cent to 47.07 cents per gallon.

Andrew Lebow, senior broker and analyst at E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc., said a weekly report issued late Tuesday by the Washington-based American Petroleum Institute was negative for the market.

In particular, he cited portions of the report that showed stocks of heating oil up by more than 3 million barrels for the week ended Friday, and crude stocks up by 1.6 million barrels.

Increased supplies amid stable or shrinking demand put downward pressure on prices.

Dollar retreats after earlier gains

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell against most major foreign currencies in thin European trading this morning, and traders suggested it will remain in a narrow trading range for the rest of the week. Gold prices rose.

Earlier, the dollar fell 0.73 yen to a closing of 124.80 yen in Tokyo, in what traders said was a correction following sharp gains on the back of Tuesday's narrower-than-expected $9.75 billion U.S. trade deficit for March.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

–1.6988 West German marks, down from 1.7055

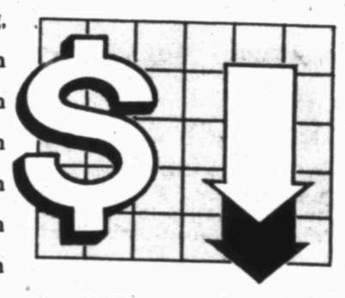

–1.4150 Swiss francs, down from 1.4215

–5.7517 French francs, down from 5.7700

–1.9022 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9090

–1,261.30 Italian lire, down from 1,265.50

–1.2434 Canadian dollars, up from 1.24125

In London, the dollar was also quoted at 124.75 yen, and one British pound cost $1.8660, more expensive for buyers than late Wednesday's $1.8605.

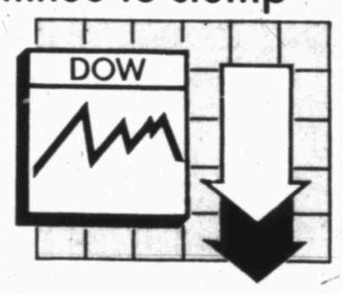

London's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $456.65 a troy ounce at midmorning, up from the opening bid of $455.50 and late Wednesday's $453.70.

In Zurich, the bid price was $456.60, up from $454 late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $3.02 to close at a bid $457.56.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid $6.70 a troy ounce, up from Wednesday's $6.58.

Stock prices continue to slump

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks slumped for the second straight day Wednesday on inflation fear and rising interest rates, wrenching down the key Dow Jones average to the lowest level in more than three months.

The Dow average of 30 industrials fell 35.32 points to 1,951.09, the lowest level since it closed at 1,914.46 on Feb. 9. Broader market barometers also fell sharply.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 4-to-1 in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed stocks, with 1,288 down, 283 up and 417 unchanged.

NYSE volume totaled 209.42 million shares vs. 133.85 million Tuesday. It was the highest level since a 234.16 million share day April 15.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Crude oil imports up 24 percent in April

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. imports of crude oil rose 24.1 percent in April from year-earlier levels while total domestic production registered a 2.7 percent decline, a trade association said.

The American Petroleum Institute reported Wednesday in its Monthly Statistical Report that U.S. imports of crude oil and petroleum products averaged 7.04 million 42-gallon barrels daily in April, up from 5.77 million barrels daily in April 1987.

IRS refunds $55.9 billion to taxpayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has refunded $55.9 billion to taxpayers this year, about one-eighth of the personal income taxes that were collected in advance in 1987.

The IRS said Wednesday that 65.1 million couples and individuals, or 80.4 percent of the returns that have been processed so far this year, qualified for refunds. The refunds averaged $860.

The total number of refunds was up slightly, from 64.8 million last year. The amount refunded declined, from $56.1 billion, as did the average, from $866.

BUSINESS TRENDS

Houston firm begs for contributions

HOUSTON (AP) — A firm that produces pipe flanges used in the depressed oil patch is placing help-wanted ads of a different sort — newspaper advertisements seeking money to keep the company alive.

"Please send money," reads the ad, which was placed in the Houston Chronicle. "You will receive nothing but a thank you for your help."

Tom Lyons, president of Federal Flange & Fitting Co., said Wednesday he had hoped to avoid such a desperate measure, "but I think it has come to be just that."

Consolidated records major Oklahoma oilfield discovery

TULSA — A recent discovery in Carter County, Okla. by Consolidated Natural Gas Co. is certain to be the company's largest oil discovery ever, and possibly the state's largest single discovery in the last decade, according to company officials.

CNG's latest project in the Cottonwood Creek field near Ardmore, the No. 1 Cottonwood "32-B" was tested at 3,976 barrels of oil and 2.8 Mmcfd through a 55/64 inch choke and showed minimal pressure drawdown. The field is being developed by CNG Producing Co.

The well is 250 yards away from an earlier well, drilled last November, that flowed 3,700 bopd and 2.9 Mmcfd. Consolidated is currently drilling three additional wells in the area.

The company holds 100 percent interest in the No. 1 "32-B" and in the first well. It also holds most of the interests in the surrounding acreage.

"The new well encountered pay at about 8,700 ft. in the same zone as the first well, and the fact that its flow exceeds that of the first is significant," said George A. Davidson Jr., Consolidated's chairman and chief executive officer. "This well means that the Cottonwood Creek field is certain to be Consolidated's largest oil discovery ever, and could, in fact, be the largest single discovery in Oklahoma in the last 10 years."

Davidson said that while it's too early to make any reserve estimates for the field, CNG booked approximately 4 million barrels of oil reserves from the first well.

Some jobs search for people

By ART GARCIA and CHRIS BARNETT
Copley News Service

Last October's stock market collapse has had a ripple effect on both Wall Street and Main Street, with many brokerages and businesses cutting back with layoffs and firing. And with some economists worrying about a slowdown that may lead to recession, other companies that haven't yet trimmed payrolls are closely watching budgets and putting a freeze on hiring.

Still, the jobs outlook isn't entirely bleak. There are opportunities looking for people with the right skills and experience.

"If I could find just 10 qualified candidates for jobs in hazardous waste engineering, I could place them with large industrial and environmental companies in a matter of hours," says John Sample, a Brooklyn management recruiter.

"But," he laments, "who has any experience in dealing with the disposal of hazardous waste material? These people are a real scarcity. It's a seller's market, if you're qualified for this type of position."

In general, though, the U.S. job market is seeing an increase in the number of middle-management positions, due partly to a broad trend toward smaller companies.

"Small companies have fewer executive levels than a Fortune 500 conglomerate, so there's also more chance for an employee to move up quickly," points out Roberta Weiner, editor of National Job Market, a career advancement magazine published biweekly out of Alexandria, Va.

Sample says geography can have a profound effect on any job market, but not necessarily in terms of geographic regions. There'a big shortage, for instance, of medical professionals in small-town America, yet similar job opportunities are scarce in bigger cities.

"America's demand for people in health care and related industries is poorly distributed geographically," he says, "but finding workers for those job vacancies can be difficult."

A recent issue of National Job Market looked at government statistics on industry job markets and sifted out what appears to be "the 10 hottest career industries" for 1988:

Nursing and health-care technicians: "Job opportunities are brightest in many of the country's outpatient medical facilities and emergency or surgery centers," says Weiner.

Hospitality: "Motels, hotels and restaurants are a bright spot for employment, since this service-oriented field is growing," she notes. "Managers are generally pulled up from the ranks."

Amusement and recreation: Weiner says the nation's trend toward enjoyable physical fitness has opened the job market for resort operators, fitness gyms and health spas.

Paralegals: "This is the fastest-growing job market in the United States today," she reports.

Publications and printing: "We are seeing a real demand for new specialty publications, magazines, tabloids. This is coupled with the boom in deskstop publishing and graphic design," says Weiner.

Accountants and auditors: The nature of business is changing, with globalization and a frenzy of mergers and acquisitions. This creates an expansive job market for accountants and auditors, she says.

Teaching and child care: Weiner sees a great need building in this sector, with pay scales rising to match the need.

Computer analysts: The computer age is here and with it demand "across the board" for researchers and programmers.

Engineering: A special emphasis on electrical engineers this year due, perhaps, to this field's historically high turnover.

Business services: A need for jobs contracted out to businesses, such as security guards, cleaning services, temporary help.

As Weiner's survey shows, there's an abundance of jobs and work opportunities — for those who work to find them.

Entrees' nutritional value better

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Over 177 new frozen dinners and entrees were marketed last year, giving shoppers an even greater choice among ethnic cuisines, "light" meals, dinner "classics" — and nutritional value.

Frozen dinners can be part of a balanced diet, but only if you know what they do and don't offer nutritionally.

Actually, frozen meals have improved through the years. Manufacturers have tried to respond to the nutritional concerns of the buying public.

Nutrition researchers at Tufts University recently evaluated 451 dinners and entrees for nutritional value and rated 44 of them as highly recommended and another 55 as falling only slightly short of rigorous standards for fat, sodium, calories and protein.

Just two years ago, the Tufts researchers assessed 350 frozen dinners and could highly recommend only 34 of them.

Consumers should read package labels for the following indicators of nutritional value in frozen meals and entrees:

■ No more than 300 calories per serving. If it's a single-serving entree or individual dinner, counting calories won't be difficult. But if the package contains multiple servings you'll have to exercise your own portion-control to stay in the limits.

■ No more than 30 percent of calories should come from fat. Americans have been urged to reduce their fat intake to this level to help reduce the risk of heart disease. A 300-calorie product should have 11 grams of fat or less to meet this requirement.

■ No more than 1,000 milligrams of sodium, which is about a third of the amount you should be getting in a day. If you sprinkle salt on your food at the table, you'll be adding more sodium.

■ About a third of the U.S. Recommended Dietary Allowance for protein, or about 15 grams.

■ A net weight of about 9 ounces or more to provide you with enough bulk to feel full.

Even when a frozen meal or entree fits these guidelines, it will still probably be low in one or more essential vitamins or minerals.

To make a balanced meal out of a frozen dinner or entree, add a raw or cooked vegetable, fruit or a salad.

These foods will provide vitamins A and C, plus some fiber, without adding a lot of extra calories.

New frozen meals provide enough calcium to reduce the risk of osteoporosis. Drinking a glass of skim milk with the meal or getting at least two servings of dairy products a day also is important.

Sundae sandwiches pass taste-test

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

When it comes to desserts, few things go together as well as chocolate brownies and vanilla ice cream. Top it with chocolate sauce, and what more could anyone want? (In fact, there is a restaurant here in town that earns big bucks serving ice cream-and-fudge-topped brownies to hungry R-T staff members.)

So naturally, when we found Betty Crocker's Brownie Sundae ice cream sandwiches in the frozen food section of our favorite supermarket, the small taste-testers were ecstatic — and so were some friends who just happened to be around to help out with the taste test.

We all enjoyed checking out Brownie Sundae, which is an ice cream sandwich made with ice cream and two layers of brownie. In fact, we enjoyed it so much we checked out two of the product's flavors — plain chocolate brownie with vanilla ice cream and walnut brownie with ditto.

Brownie Sundae is packaged six sandwiches (3.75 ounces each) in each 22.5 ounce box, and is priced at $2.89 per box. That breaks down to 49 cents each — or considerably less than the brownies and ice cream dessert at our favorite restaurant. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising is almost non-existant — I guess when you are Betty Crocker, that's enough. However, the label does carry this guarantee: "If you are not satisfied with the quality of this product or have questions or comments, please send your name, address and reason for dissatisfaction along with the entire package to: General Mills, Inc., Box 200-VR, Minneapolis, MN 55440. A prompt adjustment of equal value will be made." It's nice to know the company stands behind its product. (The label did proclaim the product to be "New!" But I already knew that.)

The taste-test proved to be as enjoyable as we had anticipated. The brownies were just chewy enough, the ice cream was frozen just enough and the vanilla was just right. Both boxes disappeared rapidly.

Of course, it's not quite the same as at the restaurant — for one thing, Betty Crocker's brownies aren't warm. (Of course not, they have to be stored in the freezer.) For another, they don't come with fudge sauce.

But for store-bought ice cream from the supermarket's frozen food section, they're close.

I can't wait to try the kind with chocolate ripple ice cream ...

Affluent women choosing to buy more expensive cars

NEW YORK (AP) — As women go up on the corporate ladder and their salaries go up, they are also buying up in the car market, according to an article in Lear's magazine.

With their new prosperity, these automobile purchasers become fonder of fancier cars, and Detroit has already spotted a new market niche: affluent women.

"It takes no research project to determine that women will move further and further upscale," says Jayne Hamilton, president of Market Development Associates in Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

But in one sense women are buying down as well as up, Hamilton notes. In Southern California, she says, it has become trendy for women to tool around in pickup trucks.

'Seed gift' unapproved

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

The Rev. Ike's latest effort to collect contributions to his United Christian Evangelistic Association is a mass mailing nationwide which offers a paper "prayer rug" with a drawing of Jesus Christ imprinted on it, along with a set of instructions on how to obtain divine favors.

The instructions say the rug must be kept for one night only. "Do not keep it. I need it, I've got to mail it to someone else," he says.

The recipient is asked to make Ike "a sacrificial seed gift" of $5 to $15.

United Christian Evangelistic Association does not meet the Better Business Bureau's "Standards for Charitable Solicitations."

Federal law prohibits lead

EDISON, N.J. (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency estimates some 40 million Americans are exposed to drinking water containing lead above the acceptable level of 20 parts per billion.

A new federal law prohibiting the use of lead solder to join pipe in plumbing for potable water systems has resulted in a new product category — solders that do not rely on lead.

One such solder contains tin, copper and a small percentage of silver — the same three elements as in dental fillings. According to Engelhard Corp., which introduced the product, "Silvabrite 100," in addition to being safer, the new solders are generally stronger and more corrosion resistant.

The ban applies to all drinking water systems built after June 19, 1988.

DEAR ABBY

Mom worried by world's warlike ways

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of two small children, and like mothers all over the world, I am concerned about the possibility of a nuclear war. I'm just an ordinary person who doesn't know much about nuclear weapons, but I'm terrified when I look at my beautiful children and think what could happen to them in the event of a nuclear war. I owe it to my children to do what I can so they can grow up and have families.

What can one concerned mother do? I feel so helpless and alone. — A VERY CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: In 1985, Linda Smith, a young mother from La Jolla, Calif., visited the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C., with her four daughters. She was so overwhelmed by the loss of life in that war — and the possibility of even greater losses in the event of a nuclear war — that she started an organization called MEND: Mothers Embracing Nuclear Disarmament.

MEND is a non-profit educational organization that produces and distributes educational material for concerned mothers just like you.

MEND has 1,900 members in the United States, Canada, West Germany and India. It has been endorsed and supported by some people whose names may be familiar to you: Norman Cousins, The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, Jack Lemmon, Wallis Annenberg, Carl Sagan, Robin Williams, Joan Kroc, Jonas Salk and myself.

There is strength in numbers — and one ordinary person can make a difference by uniting with other "ordinary" people.

For information about joining MEND, write to: MEND, P.O. Box 2309C, La Jolla, Calif. 92038.

DEAR ABBY: I have been amused at all of the letters in your column lately from women who have been complaining because their husbands would not have a vasectomy.

Two years ago I decided that four children was enough and I did not want any more. I was 37 at the time with four children — ages 12, 10, 6 and 3. With my age and the fact that I have hypoglycemia, I did not feel I could go through another pregnancy. My husband was scared and reluctant to go through surgery, but because he loves me, he had a vasectomy.

Imagine what a shock it was to find out a few weeks ago that I am going to have another baby in September! My doctor said I am the third patient he has known who got pregnant after her husband had surgery — the chances are 1 in 900! So, all the women who push to get their husbands to have surgery should remember that it is not always 100 percent effective. (By the way, my husband is really excited about the baby and so am I, now that I'm over the shock.) — SANDY SHAFER, ST. GEORGE, UTAH

'Frank's Place,' 'Wonder Years' best new shows

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television's two best new shows are off the air just now but both seem likely to return in the fall. Let us give thanks.

In a purely personal survey, "Frank's Place" on CBS and "The Wonder Years" on ABC tied for best new show. The runner-up was ABC's "China Beach."

With the season over, let's take a look back at the best and the worst. This is strictly one reporter's opinion, and there are no awards — or booby prizes.

"Frank's Place," which stars Tim Reid as a New England college professor who inherits his father's Creole restaurant in New Orleans, is well-written and has wonderfully defined characters. It's a so-called "dramedy" with few laughs, but the stories are grabbing and get into the characters. It's also the first TV show to capture the essence of New Orleans and appreciate the difference between Creole and Cajun.

"The Wonder Years," told from the perspective of an adult looking back on his youth, is like reliving adolescence, but in the safety, and sweet privacy, of your living room. It all rings true: the domineering older brother, the nerdy best friend, the confusing infatuation with girls, and the parents who want to help but don't quite understand.

"China Beach," which tells of the women in Vietnam, has wonderfully drawn characters. You really care about these people.

Here are other best shows of the year:

"L.A. Law," NBC — The writing is unbelievably good, at times bordering on tasteless and tacky, yet so right for these offbeat, well-defined, well-cast characters.

"St. Elsewhere," NBC — Another show with great writing that dared to take chances and push the limitations of taste and naughtiness.

"Newhart," CBS — An underrated show that is a perfect blending of concept, writing, characters and acting. It's always true to its characters, always funny.

"Beauty and the Beast," CBS — The show that took the year's corniest concept and made it work as the most romantic show of recent memory.

"Designing Women," CBS — The first show to find Southern women both intelligent and incredibly funny.

"Aaron's Way," NBC — Wonderful schmaltz, well-written, best family show of the year. That didn't do it any good, though. NBC canceled it.

"Golden Girls," NBC — You know exactly how each character will react, yet you can't wait for them to do it. Funny, funny, funny.

"Cheers," NBC — Best comeback of the year. The show seemed to be on its way out, but they gave it a fresh, new look. Kirstie Alley deserves an Emmy.

"Night Court," NBC — Naughty, naughty, naughty. And incredibly funny.

"Tour of Duty," CBS — It isn't "Platoon," but it's not bad.

Other good shows: "Murder, She Wrote" on CBS, "Matlock" on NBC, and "Head of the Class" and "Perfect Strangers," both on ABC.

Audiences couldn't seem to decide about NBC's "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd." NBC did. It's canceled.

The jury is still out on ABC's "Hooperman." John Ritter is television's best comic actor, but he's too restrained here.

ABC's "Dolly!" proved once again that variety is dead. Dolly Parton sings well and has a winning personality, but her show didn't cut it. ABC has decided to do away with the weekly show but says Parton might do other projects for the network.

The pits:

"Highwayman," NBC — Dumb from every standpoint, including some of the worst acting, or nonacting, ever seen on television.

"A Different World," NBC — The only thing that would improve this unfunny show is to send Lisa Bonet back to "The Cosby Show."

"Supercarrier," ABC — A good idea turned into a cartoon.

The most disappointing show was ABC's "Moonlighting."

Special categories:

Best show on PBS: "Wonderworks," consistently first-rate.

Best TV movie: NBC's "The Ann Jillian Story."

Best miniseries: NBC's "Gore Vidal's Lincoln."

Best game show: "Jeopardy."

Perry Mason wins case; NBC takes ratings sweep

NEW YORK (AP) — Perry Mason won another case and helped NBC win the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings last week, part of the important May sweeps period.

NBC's average, prime-time rating for the week that ended Sunday was 14.7 and its share was 26. ABC was second with a 12.8 and 22 share. CBS had an 11.4 average rating and 20 share. NBC's season-to-date rating average is 15.8. ABC has 13.5 and CBS 13.3.

The rating is a percentage of the nation's 88.6 million households with televisions. The share is a percentage of sets in use.

Raymond Burr's latest stint as the ever-victorious defense attorney topped the Nielsens. Not far behind were a Barbara Walters special on ABC and ABC's miniseries "The Bourne Identity" starring Richard Chamberlain.

May is one of four months when local stations' ratings are measured for use in negotiating advertising rates, so the networks put on a lot of special programming to draw viewers to affiliates.

"Perry Mason: The Case of the Lady in the Lake" was the No. 1-rated prime-time network show of the week with a rating of 22.6 and a 35 share. NBC said it was the network's best Sunday movie rating all season.

In addition to "Bourne" and the usual series, ABC also made the top 10 with the theatrical film "Beverly Hills Cop," and NBC added to the top 10 part two of its sci-fi miniseries "Something Is Out There."

CBS, shut out of the top 10, came in 11th with the season-ending episode of "Knots Landing." But part one of its big miniseries of the week, "Beryl Markham: A Shadow on the Sun," fared poorly against "Perry Mason" and came in 43rd with a rating of 10.4.

The top 10-rated shows were: "Perry Mason" NBC, "The Cosby Show" NBC, "Cheers" NBC, "Beverly Hills Cop" ABC, "Barbara Walters Special" ABC, "Night Court" NBC, "Golden Girls" NBC, "Something Is Out There, Part 2" NBC, "The Bourne Identity, Part 2" ABC and "Who's the Boss?" ABC.

ABC said that it had calculated an 11 percent share increase for "World News" this quarter compared to the period last year.

NBC adding eight new shows to fall prime-time lineup

NEW YORK (AP) — First-place NBC is not making wholesale changes in its prime-time lineup for the fall, but is adding eight new shows, including a promising series set in a sophisticated New York restaurant from the producers of the critically acclaimed "St. Elsewhere."

Besides "St. Elsewhere," which the producers chose to end after this season, NBC is eliminating eight series: "The Facts of Life," "Crime Story," "A Year in the Life," "Our House," "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd," "Beverly Hills Buntz," "The Bronx Zoo" and "Aaron's Way."

Replacement series "Day by Day" and "In the Heat of the Night" made the cut. So did the 4-season-old "Miami Vice," which had been a question mark.

"Highway to Heaven" and "My Two Dads" are not on the fall schedule, but are still in production and will return as specials or replacement series, according to NBC.

NBC plans to start the season on Sept. 19 despite the strike by the Writers Guild of America, which already has forced CBS to announce it will start late. NBC opens with prime-time coverage of the Summer Olympics, followed soon thereafter by the World Series. ABC also is expected to announce it will delay the start of its season. ABC and CBS are expected to announce their fall lineups later this month.

NBC is adding these new shows:

Bill Moyers explores the power of myth with Joseph Campbell

By ROBERT BARR

NEW YORK (AP) — Joseph Campbell made his career teaching about life, as comprehended in the myths or stories people tell about themselves and the universe.

Half a year after his death, public television offered the first in a series of stimulating seminars with the great teacher May 16, with "The Hero's Journey," a one-hour documentary about Campbell.

Next Monday, PBS begins a six-week series of Bill Moyers' conversations with Campbell in "Joseph Campbell and the Power of Myth."

"The Hero's Journey" was a useful introduction to Campbell's ideas about mythology and his core conviction: "There is one mythology in the world," with variations called Christianity, Islam, Buddhism and so on.

A myth, in this sense, is not a lie, but a metaphor for the experience of life.

So, to Campbell, the idea of God is not true or false. "God is a metaphor for a mystery that absolutely transcends all human categories of thought, even the categories of being and non-being."

The metaphor is valid, he says, if "it is putting you in touch with the mystery that is the ground of your own being. If it isn't, it's a lie."

Though "Joseph Campbell and the Power of Myth" is simply the two men talking, it may be the most compelling television series this year.

The conversation is strewn with ideas that will be enlightening, provocative and at times maddening. The success of the series may be measured by the number of times a viewer will want to argue, and by the conversations that begin after the TV is switched off.

Campbell, who taught at Sarah Lawrence College for 38 years, died Oct. 30 in Honolulu at age 83. He left an extensive record of his work in books, including "The Hero with a Thousand Faces" and "The Masks of God."

"He is a writer of important scholarship, but you don't find the person in the writing," Moyers said in a recent interview.

"You find the mind there, but not the personality, not the power of the individual that comes through any great teacher. That's why I wanted to do so much with him. We would have his works, but we wouldn't have his teaching. Teachers have to be experienced, they can't be read."

Moyers didn't know much about Campbell when they met in 1979 for an interview that appeared two years later on "Bill Moyers' Journal" on PBS.

"We had over 14,000 requests for a transcript, so I knew I had touched a chord," Moyers said. "Even without the requests, I knew he had touched a chord because he moved me. He opened my eyes. He connected what had been unrelated phenomena in my own experience in life."

For this series, Moyers taped 23 hours of interviews and spent many more hours in informal conversations.

"We became pretty good friends, more so than I usually do with somebody I put on the air because I don't have that much time with them," Moyers said. "I was his perpetual student, his graduate student for life."

Campbell was raised as a Roman Catholic and fondly recalled that experience as "powerful, life-supporting and beautiful." But, like many another believer, his faith was derailed by Charles Darwin.

"The thing that saved me," he says, "was the Upanishads — Hinduism."

In those texts, he said in "The Hero's Journey," he found the same mythology as in Christianity, without the insistence that the stories were historically true.

Campbell "is the most spiritual man I ever met," Moyers said, but he knows that this series will not be welcomed by fundamentalists.

Close-up: 10 most dangerous cancers

LUNG CANCER

RISK FACTORS: Cigarette smoking, exposure to asbestos, arsenic, radioactive gas, and diets deficient in vitamin A; air pollution suspected.

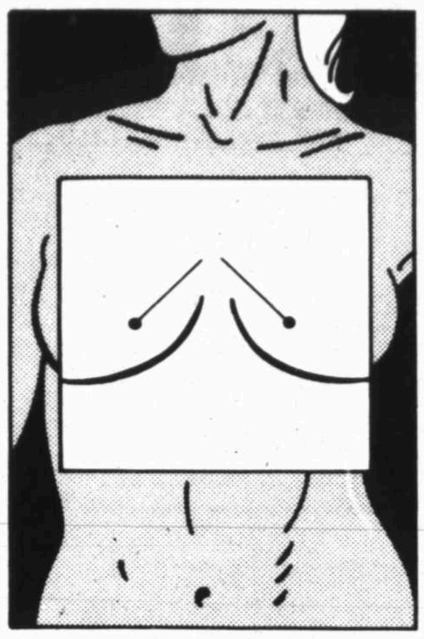

WARNING SIGNS: Persistent cough, sputum streaked with blood, chest pain, recurring attacks of pneumonia or bronchitis.

INCIDENCE: 149,000 new cases in the U.S. in 1986.

TREATMENT: Surgery, radiation to control tumors, or chemotherapy when disease has become widespread.

SURVIVAL: About 13 percent of patients live five or more years; 40 percent if detected in localized stage. These rates have slightly improved over the last ten years.

MORTALITY: 130,000 deaths in 1986, accounting for 35 percent of male cancer fatalities and 19 percent of female.

BREAST CANCER

RISK FACTORS: Women over 50 years old, previous incidence, or family history, of breast cancer, having children after 30, large doses of radiation, oral contraceptives, or high fat intake.

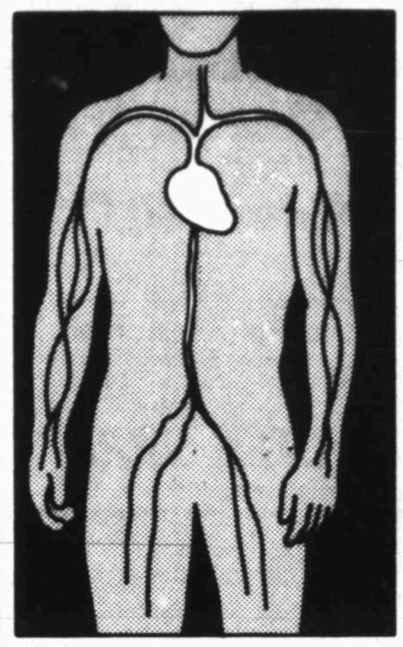

WARNING SIGNS: Persistent breast changes such as lumps, thickening, swelling, tenderness or nipple discharge.

INCIDENCE: 123,900 new cases in the U.S. in 1986.

TREATMENT: Various forms of surgery, ranging from local removal of tumor to mastectomy, chemotherapy and hormone manipulation.

SURVIVAL: About 75 percent of patients live more than five years. Of cases detected early, 96 percent survive.

MORTALITY: In the U.S., 40,200 deaths in 1986.

LEUKEMIA

RISK FACTORS: Down's syndrome, disorders of the immune system, chemicals -- such as benzene -- that suppress bone marrow function.

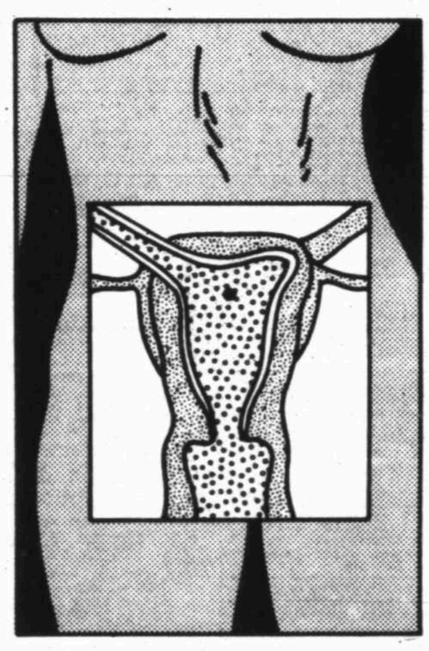

WARNING SIGNS: Acute fever, enlarged lymph nodes, fatigue, bone or joint pain, paleness, repeated infections.

INCIDENCE: 25,600 new cases in 1986, half will be acute, half chronic.

TREATMENT: Chemotherapy is the most effective, used in conjunction with radiation; bone marrow transplantation.

SURVIVAL: Overall five-year rate is 33 percent for whites, 29 percent for blacks. Recently, dramatic improvement has been made for victims of acute lymphocytic leukemia, survival rates going from 4 percent to 27 percent. In some medical centers, overall children's rate has risen to 75 percent.

MORTALITY: 17,400 deaths in 1986, a slight increase from 1985.

UTERINE CANCER

RISK FACTORS: For cervical: early age of first intercourse, multiple sex partners. For endometrial: infertility, failure of ovulation, prolonged estrogen therapy, obesity.

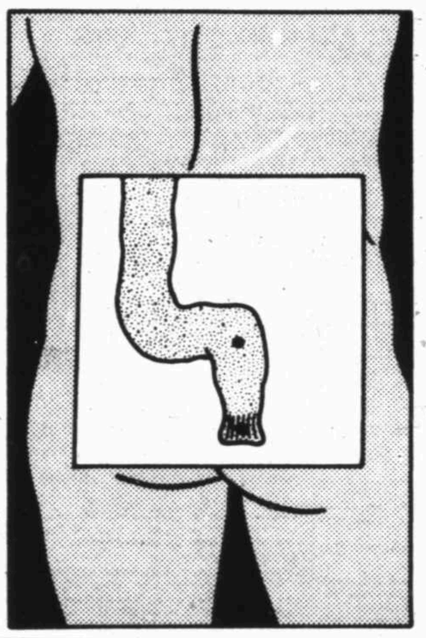

WARNING SIGNS: Intermenstrual and postmenopausal bleeding, unusual discharge.

INCIDENCE: 50,000 new cases in 1986.

TREATMENT: Surgery or radiation, or electrocoagulation (tissue destruction through intense heat by electric current). If widespread, hysterectomy is the usual treatment.

SURVIVAL: The five-year survival rate for cervical cancer patients is 65 percent, 80 to 90 percent if diagnosed early. Endometrial rates are 84 percent overall, 92 percent if detected early.

MORTALITY: 9,700 deaths in 1986.

COLON AND RECTUM CANCER

RISK FACTORS: Family history of the diseases. Research suggests that specific substances in the intestine may cause cancer. A diet high in fat and deficient in fiber content may increase incidence.

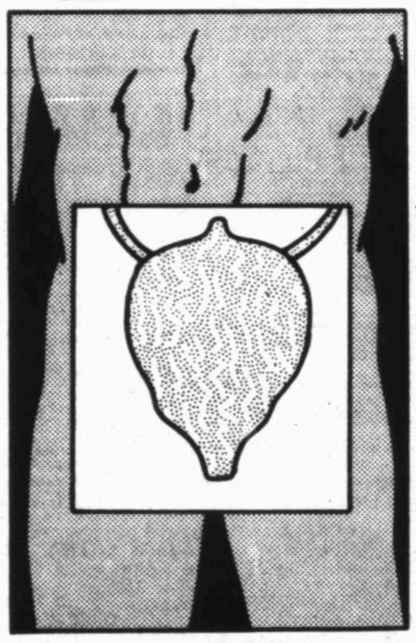

WARNING SIGNS: Bleeding from the rectum, blood in stool, change in bowel habits.

INCIDENCE: 140,000 new cases in the U.S. for 1986.

TREATMENT: Surgery, sometimes combined with radiation, is most effective. Drugs are being tested but so far none have shown great promise.

SURVIVAL: When detected in early stage, five-year survival is 87 percent for colon cancers, 78 percent for rectal cancers.

MORTALITY: 60,000 in 1986.

BLADDER CANCER

RISK FACTORS: Cigarette smoking, exposure to aromatic amines (often used in dyes) and working in leather and rubber industries. Suspicion of risk among hairdressers, painters, printers and textile workers.

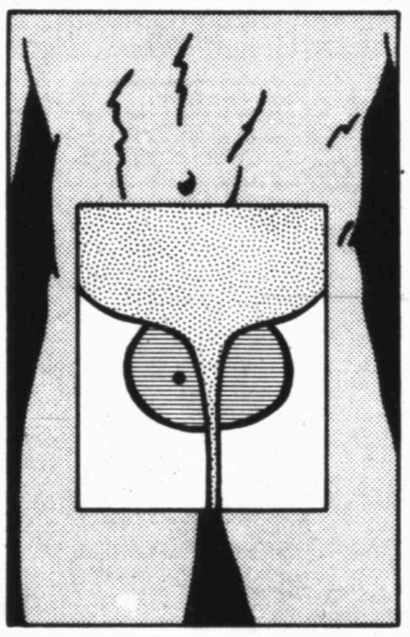

WARNING SIGNS: Bloody urine, increased frequency of urination, muscle spasms in the bladder.

INCIDENCE: 40,500 new cases in 1986, with nearly three-quarters of them men.

TREATMENT: Surgery, radiation, drugs.

SURVIVAL: Half live more than three years, but the survival rate can run as high as 85 percent if detected early.

MORTALITY: 10,600 will die in 1986, a slight decrease from 1985's total.

PROSTATE CANCER

RISK FACTORS: Black males in the U.S. have highest rate in the world. High fat diets, exposure to cadmium during welding, electroplating may increase risk.

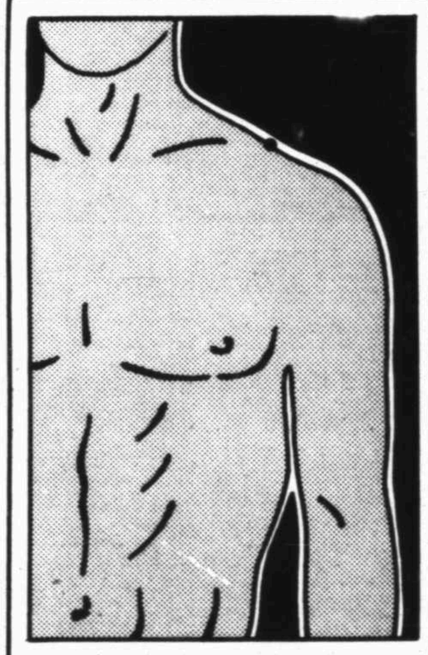

WARNING SIGNS: Often no symptoms in earliest stages; in later stages, weak or interrupted urine flow, blood in urine, pain in hips, back and pelvis.

INCIDENCE: In 1986, there will be 90,000 new cases in the U.S.

TREATMENT: Several surgical techniques, some not requiring incision. If widespread, radiation or removal of testicles.

SURVIVAL: Survival rates have improved steadily over past 20 years. Currently, five-year rates are 68 percent for whites and 58 percent for blacks.

MORTALITY: 26,100 Americans will die in 1986.

SKIN CANCER

RISK FACTORS: Fair complexion and excessive exposure to the sun. Higher rates among radium miners, those who work with coal tar, pitch, creosote and arsenic compounds.

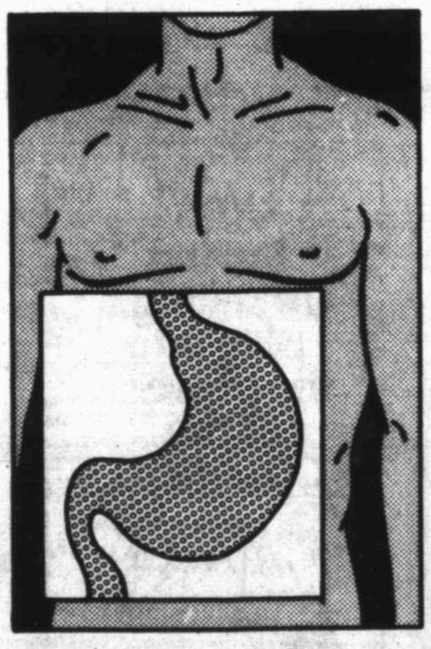

WARNING SIGNS: Change in size or color of mole or other darkly-pigmented skin blemish. Pale, waxy nodules or red, scaly patches.

INCIDENCE: More than 400,000 new cases in 1986, most easily curable. About 23,000 new cases of the more serious malignant melanoma.

TREATMENT: Surgery removing primary growth. Tissue destruction by heat, freezing or radiation also used. Researchers investigating use of vitamin A.

SURVIVAL: Cure is 100 percent in most cases with early detection and treatment. Melanoma spreads quickly, but five-year survival is 82 percent.

MORTALITY: 5,600 will die in 1986 from melanoma, 1,900 from other kinds.

STOMACH CANCER

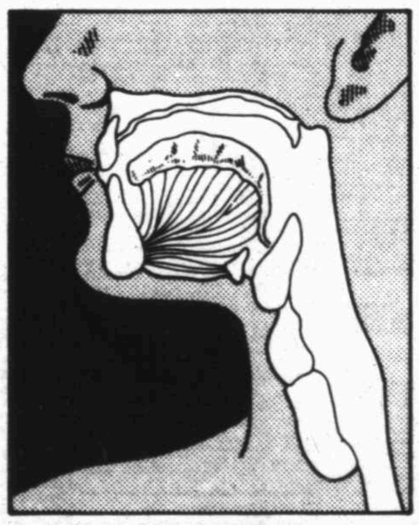

RISK FACTORS: Non-hereditary factors predominate; eating large amounts of pickled, salted, or smoked foods, diseases that affect stomach lining; cigarette smoking.

WARNING SIGNS: Similar to those of other digestive diseases; severe abdominal pain lasting more than six hours, bloody vomit, blood in stools, unexplained and persistent fever, weight loss.

INCIDENCE: 24,700 new cases in 1986, about the same as 1985.

TREATMENT: Because it is not usually detected until well advanced, therapy is difficult. Surgical removal of all or part of the stomach is the usual procedure.

SURVIVAL: Only half of all patients survive for more than six months; 13 percent live for five years or more.

ORAL CANCER

RISK FACTORS: Smoking, chewing tobacco, heavy drinking, and possibly ill-fitting false teeth.

WARNING SIGNS: Sores in the mouth that bleed easily and don't heal, lumps or thickening, reddish or whitish patches that persist, and difficulty in chewing, or moving tongue.

INCIDENCE: 29,500 new cases in 1986.

TREATMENT: Radiation, surgery, and perhaps chemotherapy.

SURVIVAL: Five-year rates range from 22 percent for pharynx to 84 percent for lip cancer; overall around 40 percent.

MORTALITY: 9,400 deaths in 1986, a slight decrease from 1985.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENT

TO: All women who, since January 31, 1985, applied for, or were discouraged from applying for production, warehouse or driver positions with Sierra Spring Water Co.

This notice is being given by Order of the Court to women who may be members of a class of women affected by settlement of a lawsuit called VASQUEZ V. SIERRA SPRING WATER CO., No. CIV S-86-1272 LKK (E.D. Cal). The lawsuit claims that SIERRA SPRING WATER CO. ("SIERRA") discriminated against women is hiring production, and warehouse workers and truck drivers in its facilities throughout the United States since 1985. SIERRA has denied any wrongdoing and denies that it discriminated against women.

A hearing has been scheduled by the Court to consider the settlement, on June 30, 1988 at 4 p.m. before the Honorable Lawrence K. Karlton at the address below. If the court approves this settlement all claims by class members against SIERRA for sex discrimination in hiring will be finally resolved in accordance with the terms of the settlement.

IF YOU ARE A CLASS MEMBER, YOU HAVE THREE POSSIBLE COURSES OF ACTION AT THIS TIME:

1. You can decide to take no action, in which case you will automatically be included in the class. As a member of the class you will not be able to bring any separate court action against SIERRA based upon claims of sex discrimination in hiring.

2. You may comment on or object to the proposed settlement. If you wish to have your comments or objections considered at the settlement hearing, you must file them in writing, on or before June 23, 1988 with the Clerk of the Court at:

Clerk, United States District Court
650 Capitol Mall
Sacramento, CA 95814
Re: Vasquez v. Sierra Spring Water Co.
No. CIV S-86-1272 LKK

IF YOU DO NOT MAKE YOUR OBJECTIONS BY THAT DATE, YOU WILL LOSE THE RIGHT TO OBJECT. BOTH the envelope and the document inside MUST contain the case name and number. If you do so comment or object, you have the right to appear personally or through an attorney at the hearing described above to present your comments or objections to the court. Except with special permission of the Court, you will not be permitted to object or comment at the hearing, if your comments or objections are not received in writing by June 23, 1988.

3. If you do not wish to be part of the settlement, and thus wish to preserve your right to file your own lawsuit, you must file a written request (letter or postcard) to be excluded from the class with the Clerk of the Court at the address given above, no later than June 23, 1988.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

The only complete statement of the terms of the proposed class action settlement is contained in the proposed Consent Decree itself and the papers filed in support of it, which you have a right to examine and/or copy at the above address.

1. SETTLEMENT CLASS

The proposed Consent Decree resolves the claims of all actual and potential female applicants and deterred female applicants who, at any time since January 31, 1985, have been denied employment by SIERRA on account of their sex for the job positions of production or warehouse worker or truck driver, excluding long-haul driver.

2. MONETARY AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

The proposed Consent Decree provides recruitment, hiring and promotion procedures, which SIERRA is required to follow. SIERRA is required to set aside a fund of $300,000 to be used exclusively for these purposes.

The proposed Consent Decree establishes a 30% goal for hiring of females in these job openings in California and a 25% goal for hiring of females in these job openings outside California. These goals will last 7 years unless SIERRA increases the percentage of women employed in class positions to 20%.

The proposed Consent Decree requires that SIERRA set aside a fund worth $200,000 for enforcement of the Decree. Every year it fails to meet the goals described above, a portion of the fund will go towards recruiting more women. Every year that Company meets the goals a portion of the fund will be returned to it.

The proposed Consent Decree imposes detailed reporting obligations to allow monitoring of SIERRA's compliance with the requirements of the Decree by plaintiffs' counsel.

The proposed Consent Decree will require SIERRA to pay $33,000 to named plaintiffs Vasquez, T.; Smith, S.; Butler, D.; George, R. and $67,000 to be divided between the following women ONLY: Casado, Q.; Castenado, M.; Druesheller, L.; Fryar, M.; Gayfield, K.; Hatchard, K.; Lopez, L.; Miranda, S.; Morales, R.; Neely, Y.; Nielson, M.; Rodriguez, A.; Salinas, L.; Sullivan, M.; Todd, L.

The proposed Consent Decree requires that SIERRA donate $50,000 to Equal Rights Advocates to be used to eliminate barriers to the employment of women in blue-collar jobs.

3. ATTORNEYS' FEES

The amount of costs and attorneys' fees to be paid to class counsel will be determined by the Court and will not be paid out of the sums listed above.

HOW TO FIND OUT MORE

If you have questions about the proposed Consent Decree, the settlement hearing or this lawsuit you may contact the attorneys who represent the class, Farnsworth, Saperstein & Saligman, 505 Fourteenth Street, Suite 1150, Oakland, CA 94612, (415) 763-9800. There will be no charge to answer your questions.

135 MEETING PEOPLE

I'VE searched for years for a warm, honest, family minded woman, and at 27 and still single, I'm beginning to believe that these expectations are too high. I've found party animals who live for the moment, and bitter divorcees who dwell on the past, and I've found women who think that there is something better in store for them than a man that makes her happy, or a man who is happy because of her. I hear that single men are outnumbered. I believe it, because there seem to be a lot of women who want the shining armor without the knight. Are you holding out for something you saw on T.V., or am I just too old fashioned? I own a wonderful business, a beautiful home, a nice car, am dependable, financially stable, very artistic, have brown hair, hazel eyes, and cannot find a loving woman to share it all with. Maybe I'm crazy, but I still believe that there is nothing more important in life than a happy family, and if you can handle that, I'll buy your dinner.
