Fun Fest to offer lots of activities for senior citizens

For $15, senior citizens can golf, pitch horseshoes and washers, play softball, attend a banquet, dance — and a whole lot more.

It's all in friendly, competitive fun. The event is the annual Senior Fun Fest, planned May 31 and June 1 at Scurry County Coliseum.

Fun Fest is open to men and women 60 years of age and up. Each contestant will receive a commemorative T-shirt. Gold, silver and bronze medallions will be given to first, second and third place winners in each event.

The activities begin at 5 p.m. Friday with nine holes of golf at the Western Texas College course or miniature golf at Western Golfland.

Opening ceremonies for the Fun Fest are set for 8:45 a.m. June 1, but contestants can get up earlier and participate in a walk-a-thon at 7 o'clock.

Donuts, juice and coffee will be available at the opening ceremonies, which will include a formal dedication of the new Duncan Horseshoe Courts.

Activities at 9 a.m. include a run-a-thon, a stationary bike distance race, horseshoe and washer pitching, a casting contest and a softball throw.

An exhibition softball game begins at 4:30 p.m., followed by a banquet at 7 and a dance at 8 o'clock.

The $15 fee entitles participants to enter as many or as few contests as they would like.

Guests and spouses will be charged $3 for the banquet and $3 for the dance, or $5 for both. The banquet will include a meal.

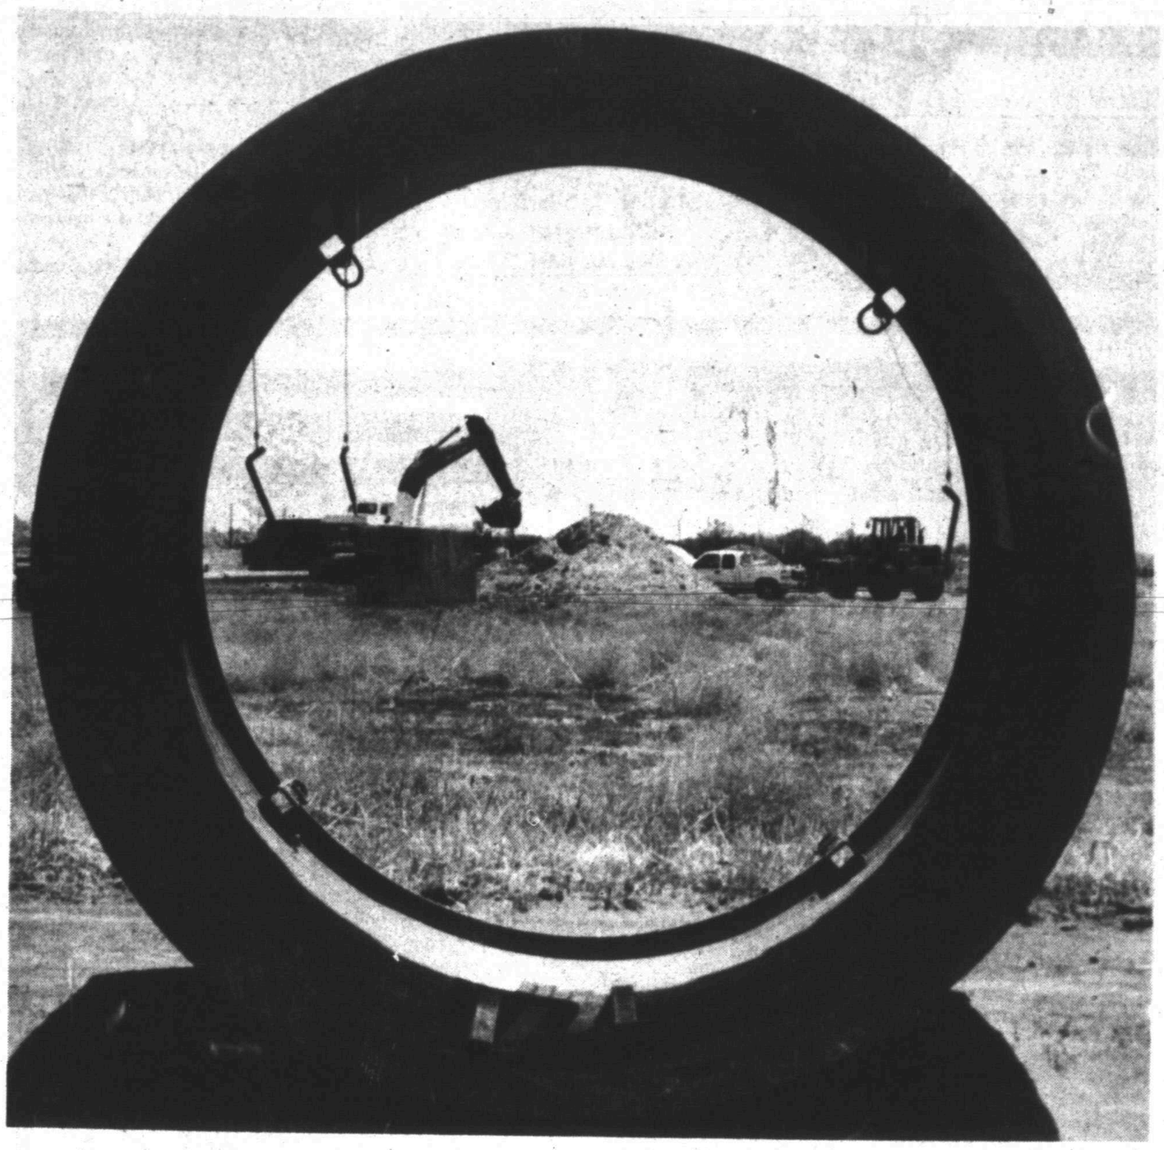

To enter or for more information, call the Snyder Chamber of Commerce at 573-3558.

SHS baccalaureate set Sunday

Baccalaureate services for 186 Snyder High School seniors will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday in Worsham Auditorium.

Special speaker for the event will be Dr. Marty Akins, pastor of the First Baptist Church, on the topic, "Who's Gonna Get Your Lunch?"

Graduation ceremonies will be held at 8 p.m. next Friday in Scurry County Coliseum.

Water and sewer pipe has been delivered to the site and work on this phase is expected to be completed in about 90 days — some four months earlier than engineering estimates. (SDN Staff Photo)

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "There's only one consolation to making poor grades — nobody will think you've been cheating."

—Think Rain!—

The day we repeated the church bulletin item about the difference between an "off day" and a "day off," we got a lesson.

In the newspaper business, an off day can be caused by many things, but press woes are at the top of the list. The day started early with a called in complaint, but that was mild compared to what would follow.

A pressroom employee dropped a red rag into the press. Even a non-mechanical type knows that's not good. However, the press crew responded admirably, and both C-City and Snyder papers came off the press with only a minor delay.

The "off day," like the story said, makes you not only long for a "day off" but also makes you appreciate the days that appear normal — whatever normal may be.

—Think Rain!—

Norris Lofton, retired production foreman for SACROC, is a pretty good example of taking adversities in stride — even though his brother, Sun Gas Plant retiree Henry Lofton, is there with the constant reminders.

Norris and his wife enjoy an R.V. behind which they pull a pick-up for local travel. Norris was near Kerrville when he noticed that his pickup was not towing smoothly. In fact, he wondered if his RV might not need a tuneup.

About five miles down the road, Norris got out to check things out. He found a nightmare had become reality. He had forgotten and left the pickup in reverse.

Norris muses, "You have to laugh about it so you won't cry."

—Think Rain!—

While preparing for this weekend's Rotary District Assembly in Snyder, local club members were asked for items that could be stuffed in a bag for the 100 or so visitors expected from out of town.

Rotarian Marlin Terrell, who is enduring the drought and low cattle prices, made an officer. "Could you use about a hundred cows?"

McCaulley man, 27, enters 2 guilty pleas

A 27-year-old Fisher County man was sentenced Friday in 132nd District Court after pleading guilty to a pair of felony charges.

Patricio Martinez pleaded guilty to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and failure to stop and render aid, offenses that occurred on Dec. 5.

District Judge Ernie Armstrong sentenced Martinez to serve 180 days in the Scurry County Jail and two years in a state jail facility, probated for five years, for the vehicle theft. He was also fined $250.

For failure to stop and render aid, Martinez was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, probated for 10 years, and fined $500. Martinez was also ordered to make restitution totaling $16,800.

Martinez, a resident of McCaulley, was arrested Dec. 9 in Dallas, still driving a 1994 Chevrolet pickup stolen in Sylvester. The defendant was also charged in Fisher, Hill and Midland counties.

The incident started when Martinez reportedly stole a 1977 Chevrolet Blazer in Hillsboro on Dec. 5 and drove to Snyder, where he was involved in a three-vehicle accident. Five people were treated for minor injuries.

Martinez managed to flee the scene in the Blazer, then stole a 1992 Chevrolet van and headed for Roby. Alerted that Martinez might be coming to Fisher County, law enforcement officials located him at his parents' residence. He escaped by running out the back of the residence.

Martinez then reportedly stole a tractor early the next morning, drove the tractor to Sylvester, where he then stole the 1994 Chevrolet pickup which he drove to Dallas where he was arrested.

Clinton signs 'Meagan's Law'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Eager to look the toughest on crime, President Clinton signed a bill Friday requiring neighborhood notification when sex offenders move in. "Today, America circles the wagons around our children," he said.

Staging back-to-back events 850 miles apart, the president delivered a forceful response to presidential rival Bob Dole, who opened a new phase of his campaign Thursday by calling the Clinton administration "tough on cops." Echoing Dole on Friday, House Speaker Newt Gingrich and other Republicans said Clinton's record on crime didn't match his tough rhetoric.

"Today, America warns: If you dare to prey on our children, the law will follow you wherever you go — state to state, town to town," Clinton declared.

The occasion was his signing of the so-called "Megan's Law," named for a slain New Jersey 7-year-old. It strengthens requirements in the 1994 anti-crime bill by making states notify communities when a convicted sex offender moves into a neighborhood.

But the nitty gritty of judicial policy was quickly lost in an atmosphere of political one-upmanship, as Democrats and Republicans fought to tap into voter anxiety about crime.

Flying to St. Louis with House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., the president wrapped up a week of anti-crime events designed to co-opt a traditionally Republican campaign theme. He vowed to "preserve lawfulness."

Wiping his brow in an overheated high school gym, the president urged America's teen-agers to help him win the war on crime, particularly his effort to stem "the rising tide of violence among our young people."

County court meets Monday

One item of old business — the appointment of a replacement member for the Scurry County Welfare Board — plus routine approval of the minutes from various county boards are the main items for consideration when Scurry County Commissioners Court meets Monday at 10 a.m.

The court will also consider budget amendments and line-item transfers.

Splash Day set Thursday

Splash Day at Towle Park Pool will be held next Thursday, the final day of school.

The pool will open at 1:30 p.m. and admission is free.

Regular pool hours this summer will be 1:30 to 5 p.m. Saturday through Thursday. Admission is $1.50 for age 17 and under and $2 for 18 and over.

Family Swim Night will be held each Saturday from 6:30 until 8 p.m. Cost per family is $4, if accompanied by a parent. Individuals pay $2 each.

A special Family Swim Night has been set for July 4 with swimming from 8 p.m. until dark. The pool will be cleared at dark and swimmers can watch the fireworks from poolside.

A concession stand will be open during operating hours, featuring shaved ice, soft drinks and a variety of candy. No outside food or drinks will be allowed to be brought into the pool area.

Garner will attend Girls State in June

Christy Garner has been selected to attend The American Legion Auxiliary Bluebonnet Girls State, set for June 11-21 at Texas Lutheran College in Seguin.

Kiwanians also help with the program.

The purpose of Girls State is to educate young women in the duties, rights and responsibilities of American citizenship.

The girls participate in a mythical 51st state where, for a period, they organize their own city, county and state governments. They choose their own officials in accordance with regular election procedures and learn the duties of the various city, county and state offices.

They introduce and debate their own bills in a legislature and justice is administered by their own law enforcement agencies and courts.

The program is non-partisan. Political parties the "National" and the "Federal" are purely mythical.

Basic qualifications for Girls State are leadership, citizenship, scholarship and character.

Garner, the daughter of Jerald and Andrea Garner, attends Snyder High School.

Astro-graph By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Sunday, May 19, 1996

More financial opportunities could be in store for you in the year ahead. Your success will depend on how wisely you make your choices.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Listen to your inner voice today, even if it advocates taking a radically different course. A new approach will help you to win a difficult battle. Taurus, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you might have an opportunity to meet someone who could become a good friend. However, take care not to misread this person's character.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can achieve your objectives today if you keep your priorities in order. Focus on your work-related ambitions before you think about having fun.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) When the going gets tough, your resolve will get tougher. You could be resourceful today when trying to overcome the impediments which block your progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can find a better way to accomplish a routine assignment today. Do not be afraid to implement this new idea. You will save both time and money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your initial assessment of situations might not be the best today, so don't judge impulsively. Make an effort to look at the fine print.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A situation you have left hanging can be finalized to your satisfaction today. You will have a satisfied feeling when the job is finally done right.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today, a chance meeting with a friend could be a pleasant experience for both parties. You will enjoy the diversion and she may profit from what you say.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Subdue the temptation to pass the buck today in regard to an assignment you're better qualified to handle. What the surrogate does might have to be done over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A casual remark made by a close friend might provide you with the solution to a personal dilemma you've been unable to discuss with anyone.

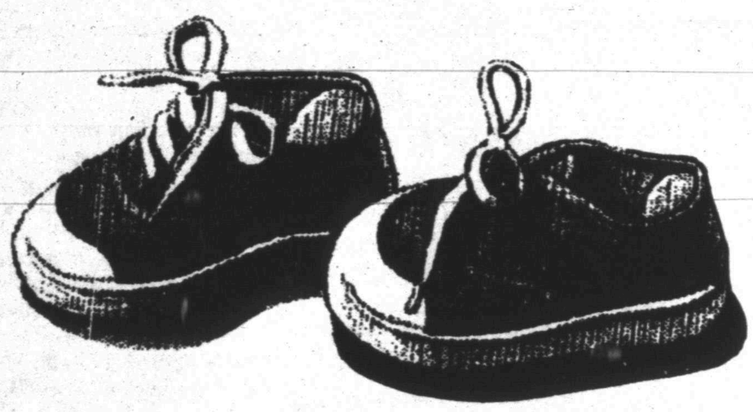

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you might have an opportunity to spend quality time with a person you don't know very well. You might even cherish this experience.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your dynamic personality will have a positive effect on everyone today. You will have everyone laughing and feeling good about himself.

SHS'er named 'All-American'

Ana Hernandez, Snyder High School student, has been named an All-American Scholar by the United States Achievement Academy.

She is the daughter of Anita Hernandez of Snyder and the granddaughter of Candelario Aguilar and Pauline Gauna, both of Sweetwater.

Chris McMahon

Grandson of McGlaugn's to AF Academy

Christoper Michael McMahon, a senior at Kingwood High School northeast of Houston, has accepted an appointment to the U.S. Air Force Academy.

McMahon is the son of Michael and Debra McMahon of Houston and the grandson of Doug and Jean McGlaun, former Snyder residents now living in Fort Worth.

Texas Football listed Chris as a pre-season all-state defensive candidate in District 21-5A, considered by many to be the toughest district in the state.

In addition to his defensive skills, he was the punter and kicker and tied a long-standing Houston area record with a 55-yard field goal.

The Academy recruited Chris as an outside linebacker. Heavily recruited, he chose the Air Force Academy because of its commitment to excellence in academics as well as athletics.

He was voted "most athletic" by classmates at Kingwood after also excelling in the discus, high jump, sprints and anchored two relay teams. Chris hopes to continue his track and field career as a decathlete in the Air Force. In addition, he has received numerous academic honors and will graduate with a 4.26 GPA.

Your Birthday

Monday, May 20, 1996

In the year ahead, you may benefit from some interesting changes in financial or social arenas. These changes will be initiated by friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today, you may have to contend with someone you dislike immensely. Do not demean yourself by going out of your way to patronize this person. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The costliest involvements might turn out to be the least fun today. Try to find inexpensive and pleasurable pursuits.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your ambitions will be easily aroused today, but you might focus on the wrong objectives. Do not waste time on goals that have little value.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A misunderstanding can only be resolved if it is brought out into the open today. Silence will only keep the issue smoldering.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you don't have anything nice to say about a friend today, remain silent. Any abusive comments will identify you as the source.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A friend who has cooperated with you in the past might not continue to be helpful if you fail to give him or her appropriate acknowledgment today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Guard against the tendency to blame others for your mistakes. If this pattern persists today, it could create serious problems with co-workers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Someone with whom you'll be involved today might try to exploit your resources. He or she might try to maneuver you into an undesirable commitment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today, do not make a major decision before considering all of its ramifications. Your judgment might not be sound. Take a second look.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) People who usually support you when you need it might not be available today. You should try to fend for yourself when faced with important assignments.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In an attempt to improve your financial situation today, you might be tempted to take a risk that goes against your better judgment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Usually you treat associates in a cordial, considerate manner. Regrettably, these splendid qualities might not be expressed today.

Miss Venezuela wins 1996 title

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The new Miss Universe, Alicia Machado of Venezuela, said she planned to spend her first day of stardom enjoying some of life's most basic pleasures.

"I'm going to something I haven't been able to do in three weeks: eat, eat, eat and sleep," she said Friday night after beating out 78 contestants from around the world for the title.

Machado, 19, made a sign of the cross as she was crowned by her predecessor Chelsi Smith, a 22-year-old college student from Deer Park, Texas.

Machado, who is studying law and business management, described herself as a simple person and said she has no boyfriends. She told judges during her interview that she would rather be smart, than rich or beautiful.

"Venezuelans should be very proud, not of me, but of our country," she told reporters through a translator. "Intelligence is more important than beauty."

A Reception will be given in honor of

Don & Sara Gressett

who are retiring as Owner & Operator of the Lota' Burger Restaurant in Snyder.

Join us as we express our appreciation for their 41 years of hard work, support and service to the community.

Radar outage blamed for flight delays

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Arrivals and departures at DFW Airport were delayed about 45 minutes Friday night because of a radar processor failure at the control tower, federal officials said.

The failure was in the terminal radar automated control system, which puts the identity tags on the radar blips, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman John Clabes in Oklahoma City.

"They could see the airplane on the screen but couldn't see what it was," he said.

Clabes said other processors took over when that processor failed at 8:15 p.m.

It was back in service at 9:13, he said.

Clabes said the failure was not part of the regional air traffic control center, which is operating on older computer systems awaiting replacement.

The FAA has earmarked millions of dollars to replace radar and communications equipment at air traffic control centers in New York and at other cities including, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland and Dallas-Fort Worth.

The FAA says the new computers will not be up and running for 18 months or more.

Financial Focus

Sports fans know the frustration of a team beating itself with foolish mistakes. An otherwise flawless performance can be ruined when a team member forgets a basic rule.

Investing is much like sports. You can devise all sorts of fancy strategies and moves, but if you don't follow a few basic rules, you're sure to be sidelined.

Just what are those basics? The Franklin Templeton mutual fund group recently distributed to its shareholders a list of basic investment strategies. These fundamental ideas can serve as guidelines for any investor.

IMPLEMENT OBJECTIVES. Set an objective, and work with your investment professional to create a plan to meet it. Then, put the plan into action.

CONSIDER INFLATION. Understand how inflation erodes your buying power. Remember spending $3,000 to buy a car? Today, it's easy to spend 10 times that much. Tailor your financial plan with investments that have a history of outpacing inflation.

PAY YOURSELF FIRST. Build wealth with consistent periodic investments. This not only builds capital but also lets you benefit from dollar-cost averaging.

DIVERSIFY. Don't put all your eggs in one basket. This means you should buy different types of investments - stocks, bonds, mutual funds, money market instruments, real estate and more. Changing economic conditions affect various investments differently. Diversification helps you avoid a total loss.

UNDERSTAND RISK. Risk is more than a chance of losing money. Types of risk include currency risk, interest rate risk, market risk and purchasing power risk, or inflation. Understand the specific risks of each type of investment.

BE PREPARED. After you have a plan, monitor and review it regularly. Don't lose sight of long-term objectives by concentrating only on short-term performance. Stick with your plan, and fine-tune it if necessary.

PLAN YOUR ESTATE. Some people avoid estate plans because of fears about legal complexities. A competent adviser will help you understand these complexities and work in your best interests.

REDUCE TAXES. It takes a professional to understand our tax code. Meet with trusted advisers, and plan your investing around tax benefits that are friendly to you.

SEEK PROFESSIONAL ADVICE. Form your own investment team, including an attorney, tax adviser and investment professional. Make sure each individual is familiar with your financial objectives and that they all work together for your benefit.

PUT COST IN PERSPECTIVE. A sales charge or advisory fee may be a bargain if the advice and service you receive merits it.

There's probably nothing in this column that you haven't heard before. That's why these ideas are called basics - they're simple, and you hear them often. But it's still too easy to forget them.

The best way to stick with the basics is to get help. The days of do it yourself investing are gone. Estate and tax laws, combined with the variety and complexity of investments, make professional guidance a must.

Finding trusted advisers who know the rules of the game is the fastest way to victory. Sports fans call it teamwork.

Outlook good for conjoined twins

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Doctors said Friday that the early prognosis looks good for separating conjoined twin boys who were born in Southern California after their Mexican parents illegally crossed the border.

Hever Aron and Roman Alan were born Thursday in a hospital in the San Diego suburb of Chula Vista.

They are attached from the chest to the upper abdomen, and have a shared liver, but each has his own heart, kidney and lungs, making future separation likely, said Dr. Paul Jagger, director of the University of California San Diego Medical Center.

"These are two healthy boys," Jagger said.

The twins underwent tests to determine how much of their upper chest and intestines might be connected. Doctors said they should know within a couple of days whether separation is possible.

The boys are the third pair of conjoined twins born in Southern California this year.

It wasn't known how Andrea and Ramon Moreno, of Tijuana, Mexico, crossed over the border to deliver the babies in the United States, Jagger said. He said medical officials in San Diego were aware the woman was carrying conjoined twins, but believed she planned to deliver them in Mexico City.

The issue of pregnant Mexican women crossing the border into the United States has become controversial in the immigration debate.

Eight persons are indicted in billing scam

WACO (AP) — Eight more people have been indicted on federal fraud and conspiracy charges for allegedly sending $1.8 million in bills to Plantation Foods from 22 made-up businesses between 1987 and 1993.

The fake bills were for parts and services to a turkey processing plant owned by Waco-based Plantation. The indictments came from a Waco federal grand jury on Wednesday but were not announced until Friday.

Former Plantation employee Guy Marvin Eskew, 42, of Elm Mott, was indicted along with seven others, none of them Plantation employees.

The others are Charles John Brown, 57, New Port Richey, Fla.; William Brown, 53, and Scott A. Smith, 33, both of Park Forest, Ill.; William Ray Parmer, Jr., 33, Lubbock; Sherry Ann Stillman, 32, and Rhonda Dion Watson, 33, both of Jacksonville, Ark.; and Henry Solon Witt, Jr., 37, of Waco.

If convicted, each individual faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison and fines of up to $250,000.

No trial date has been set.

Six others — including three former Plantation employees — already have been convicted in federal court on charges stemming from the same scheme and in February were sentenced to prison terms ranging from six to 30 months.

A University of Minnesota survey of Saturday morning TV revealed that advertising on kids' shows promotes exactly the opposite diet from what the U.S. Department of Agriculture recommends.

LIMITATIONS OF THE MOSAIC LAW
The Law of Moses was not a perfect (complete) law. It was only a shadow of the perfect law which was to come (Hebrew 10:1). It was limited in its SUBJECTS in that it was a Jewish law given by God to the Jews through a Jew (Moses) to be bound upon Jews by Jews. It was not intended for gentiles. In fact, it built a great doctrinal wall of separation and enmity between Jews and gentiles (Ephesians 2:13-22).
Moses' law was limited in PURPOSE. Its essential purpose was to bring blessings upon a physical nation. It was a tutor or schoolmaster to help prepare the Jews for the New Covenant (Galations 3:23-29). Its purpose was not to save the world but rather to bring the world, particularly the Jews, to the Savior.
The Mosaic law was limited in POWER. As a covenant of anticipation and preparation it did not bring salvation in and of itself (Galatians 2:21). For man to be saved it was absolutely essential for Christ to bring His great spiritual law and to fulfill the limited law of Moses (Romans 8:1-4).

Duck shows Daffy attachment to Taurus

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Chris Pikl's pet duck has developed a daffy attachment to his 1994 metallic blue Ford Taurus. Pikl thinks it's love.

"I don't know if it thinks of the Taurus as its mate or what," Pikl said.

Whenever the car arrives at Pikl's home in the hills southeast of Salem, the duck rushes to its side.

"It walks around and around it," Pikl said. "Sometimes it sits under it. Sometimes it rubs against the tires. It doesn't do it with any other vehicle."

As a general rule, ducks don't get amorous with large inanimate objects, experts say.

"I've heard reports about ducks, for a small period, attaching themselves to other animals, a cow or a pig or a dog," said Will Hill, a wildlife biologist with the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife. "I haven't heard anything about cars. This is a first."

Perhaps, Pikl says, the duck is lovelorn. Its mate passed away a couple of years ago. Or maybe the duck's vision is out-of-whack.

"It's screwball," Pikl said. "I can't explain it. Call a vet."

'Going to jail sale' draws large crowd

LAKE OSWEGO, Ore. (AP) — Before John Hunter heads off to the big house, he's selling off the contents of his small house.

Scores of bargain hunters lined up early Friday for the start of Hunter's 3-day "going to jail sale" in this affluent Portland suburb. For hours they went elbow-to-elbow, pawing through an array of compact discs, videos, computer games and software.

"I don't want to have to store it," said Hunter, 24. "Sell it off and put the money in the bank."

Hunter didn't say exactly why he was going to prison. But Mary Sullivan of the Sheridan federal prison, where Hunter is to report on June 3, said he was convicted of lying to a federal grand jury.

He is scheduled for release in 1998.

Tigers need two wins again...

It was a Sherman tank

By Brent Taylor
Sports Editor

WICHITA FALLS — It was one of those nights when nothing seemed to go right as the Snyder Tigers dropped the first game in the best-of-three area playoff here Friday, 12-2, to the Sherman Bearcats.

The game ended after 4½ innings on the 10-run rule.

Snyder found itself on Saturday in the same situation as a week earlier after losing the opening game of the bi-district series with Granbury. The Tigers had their backs to the wall and had to win consecutive games to advance. If Snyder wants to continue the title drive, the Tigers were faced with winning a pair of games again on Saturday.

Game two was set to start at 1 p.m. at Hoskins Field with the third game, if necessary, to start 30 minutes after game two.

The Tigers managed only three hits off Sherman pitching Friday. Snyder right fielder Gene Pollard had two of them with doubles in the first and fifth. The third hit came in the fourth when Kyle Beck singled.

Snyder used three pitchers. Clay Berryman got the start, but was knocked off the mound after one and a third innings. Ty Estes came in, but lasted only one frame.

Patrick Cumbie was next on the mound and finished the game. Berryman was tagged with the loss. The trio of Tiger pitchers were pounded for 12 hits, struck out four and gave up five free passes.

Snyder also hurt itself by commiting six errors while Sherman had only three blunders.

The Bearcats got on the scoreboard early with two runs on three hits in the bottom of the first. Designated hitter Shawn Riley picked up three runs on one swing of the bat as he homered over the left-center field fence in the second inning.

The wheels really fell off in the third as Sherman sent 11 batters to the plate and came away with six runs on five hits, three walks and two Tiger miscues.

Sherman was on top, 11-0, and things were looking bleak for Snyder. The Tiger faithful who made the 180-mile trip to Wichita Falls continued to encourage the Tigers.

In the top of the fourth, David Smith reached base on a walk and would later score on an error by the Bearcats' catcher.

Sherman got the run back in the bottom of the inning to maintain a 10-run lead. Snyder needed three runs in the top of the fifth to keep the game going, but could only manage one.

With Jeremy House standing on second after reaching base on a fielder's choice, Pollard smacked a ground-rule double over the center field fence, scoring House.

Adam Whitworth picked up the win for Sherman. He allowed two runs on three hits, fanned three and walked three in four innings of work. Joe Gilbert came on to pitch the fifth, giving up one run on one hit.

Berryman allowed six hits for Snyder. Estes gave up five runs on two hits and Cumbie was tagged for two runs on four hits.

The winner of the Snyder-Sherman series will take on the Andrews Mustangs in the regional semi-finals later this week. The Mustangs advanced by defeating Canyon Randall, 7-2, Friday in Plainview.

Two Baylor gridders arrested

WACO (AP) — Five people, including a current Baylor University football player and another who recently graduated, have been arrested for allegedly using a stolen credit card number to purchase thousands of dollars worth of electronic equipment.

Kevin Rhea, a backup quarterback for Baylor who played in four games last season and graduated last week, and Roderick Kinney, who as a sophomore started as Baylor's noseguard last year, were charged with credit card abuse and engaging in organized crime.

Also charged were two other Baylor students and an employee who worked at a local Circuit City store.

The scam allegedly originated with an American Express credit card number obtained by Rhea.

Arrest affidavits state that Rhea first used the card number to make purchases at Circuit City and then passed the number on to the others, who made additional purchases of their own.

Several thousands of dollars worth of merchandise was allegedly purchased, including stereo systems and speakers, televisions and cellular phones, police said.

The charges are third-degree felonies punishable by two to 10 years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Baylor football coach Chuck Reedy said he had no plans to take any immediate action against Kinney until the case is played out in court. Kinney, a 6-3, 285-pound sophomore from Sugar Land Dulles, is Baylor's only returning starter on the defensive line.

For Bulls against Orlando...

Fouls not part of strategy

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bulls won't double-team Shaquille O'Neal every time he touches the ball. And they don't plan to foul him every time, either, even though he shoots free throws poorly.

The Orlando center's playful response to Knicks coach Phil Jackson's approach is this:

"I love you Phil," O'Neal said with a big smile after a practice this week. He went on to add: "We're just going to play our game. If they double me, we'll play through it. If they don't double me, then I'll do what I do best."

"Hack-A-Shaq," is the defensive philosophy that says a team would rather have the 7-foot-1, 300-plus-pound Orlando center shooting free throws than ferociously dunking balls at every turn.

But the Bulls, especially foul-prone center Luc Longley, don't want to talk about that strategy headed into Sunday's opening game of the Eastern Conference finals.

"We don't want to encourage that. We're going to try to play him straight up," Longley said.

"Stopping Shaq is my primary function in the series. I don't think you're ever going to stop him, but you just make him take shots as far away as possible and keep him off the glass and take it from there," he said.

"Ideally, you don't want to have to double-team every time because that opens up the other guys."

Even though the Bulls have four centers and 24 fouls to give, Jackson doesn't want his centers labeled as foulers.

"They called fouls indiscriminately against our centers (last year) and we don't want that to happen this year," Jackson said.

Shaq shot 48.7 percent from the free-throw line this season and has made only 40.4 percent of his shots from the line in eight playoff games.

In the other NBA playoff game on Saturday, Gary Payton and the Seattle SuperSonics meet John Stockton and the New Orleans Jazz Saturday in the opener of the Western Conference finals.

Rangers bow, 12-10...

Tribe can come back

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Indians seemed to have everything back from their 1995 AL championship season except the ability to come from behind late and win.

Manny Ramirez helped restore part of that mystique Friday night with a seventh-inning grand slam that lifted the Indians to a 12-10 win over the Texas Rangers.

It was Cleveland's first win this season in 11 games in which they trailed going into the seventh. Last year, the Indians had 48 come-from-behind wins, 27 in their last at-bat.

"Well, we certainly didn't plan to fall seven runs behind to a team like the Rangers, but it worked out for us. We just battled back and then Manny unloaded," Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove said.

Texas, which led 9-2 in the fifth inning before blowing the lead, is now 20-2 when leading after six innings.

Ramirez lined a 3-0 pitch off Gil Heredia (1-3) into the left-field stands for his second career grand slam as the Indians won their 13th straight home game.

Albert Belle extended his hitting streak to a career-high 18 games with an RBI single off Jeff Russell that pulled Cleveland to 10-6 in the seventh. Eddie Murray followed with an RBI single.

"Up until tonight, Jeff Russell has been Mr. Perfect," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said. "It's just one of those nights. He got a couple of strikes to a couple of guys, but couldn't put them away."

After Murray's single, Ed Vosberg walked Jim Thome to load the bases, and Heredia came on to face Ramirez.

Murray and Texas' Kevin Elster each had four hits. Elster hit two homers and two of the Rangers' club-record eight doubles.

Murray had three singles and his fifth homer of the season and 484th of his career. He drove in two runs, passing Ted Williams for 10th on the career list with 1,840.

Elster, who scored four runs and drove in four, tied the club record with four extra-base hits in his first four-hit game since May 23, 1990. He hit his eighth homer to open the third inning, had RBI doubles in Texas' six-run fourth and two-run fifth and had a 435-foot homer to center in the seventh.

He flied to right with two runners on in the ninth and finished 4-for-5.

"Hopefully, Kevin Elster will enjoy this night," Oates said. "He deserves to. Unfortunately, we didn't win to make it easy for him to enjoy it, I told him that. It was quite an offensive display he put on."

Alan Embree (1-0) allowed only Elster's second homer and a walk in 2 1-3 innings, striking out four. Jose Mesa worked the ninth for his 16th save.

Houston Astros edge Pittsburgh

HOUSTON (AP) — Terry Collins wishes all of his decisions could be as successful.

On May 5, Collins and general manager Gerry Hunsicker decided to take Derrick May out of his platoon spot in left field and put him on bench duty, and Friday night May responded with a two-run homer in the eighth inning that rallied the Houston Astros to a 4-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"We needed to improve our bench, and one of the things that Gerry and I looked at was Derrick," Collins said. "We've had a good bench the last couple of years and we wanted to improve it this year."

Collins turned left field over to James Mouton on a full-time basis, and although he was hitless Friday night, Mouton hit in eight of the previous 13 games for a .289 average.

"I think a veteran does better in that (pinch-hitting) situation than a young guy," Collins said. "A young guy wants to contribute because he wants to stay in there. Derrick has patience and doesn't get intimidated."

The Astros were trailing 2-1 when Ricky Gutierrez tripled to start the eighth, finishing Pirates starter Zane Smith. Jon Lieber (0-1) relieved and May homered on a full count for a 3-2 lead.

Brian Hunter followed with an insurance run with a home run to left.

"I don't get too excited," May said. "I just take things as they come and don't get too excited about it."

May waited for the pitch he wanted.

Death, second accident mars Memorial Day race

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rookie Dan Drinan crashed hard against the wall in the first turn today during practice before qualifying for the May 26 Indianapolis 500.

He was taken by ambulance to the infield hospital for an examination, and there was no immediate word on his condition.

The crash came one day after pole-winner Scott Brayton was killed in a second-turn crash. It was the fourth crash since the track opened for practice on May 4.

When Brayton, the Indianapolis 500 pole-winner, came through the second turn during practice on Friday, something caused his right rear tire to go bad. The tire appeared to be cut, and once the underbody of the car started skidding on the pavement, Brayton was helpless.

Man freed after being jailed for 16-year-old drug charge

DENTON (AP) — A popular Little League coach who went to prison recently after a warrant for his arrest went unserved for more than six years was released from prison Friday.

Avan King was free for the first time since February, when he was imprisoned for a 16-year-old criminal conviction.

"Justice would be better served if this defendant's original sentence of six years in prison is probated," state District Judge Phillip Vick said.

Friends and relatives who had filled the courtroom applauded. King's mother, who came from Arkansas for the hearing, watched. His wife, Delia King, wept.

"It really hasn't sunk in yet," King said of his newfound freedom.

He has spent the past 16 years turning himself into a man neighbors knew best for his volunteer work with children. Friday, he talked of sharing his experience to warn teenagers about the dangers of drugs and the realities of prison.

"I saw people who were blind, people with no legs, people in wheelchairs," he said. "People who couldn't even understand how to get from one area to another. And there was no one to help them except other prisoners. There is no rehabilitation there. There are just warehouses to store people in."

Mrs. King has her own message from the ordeal.

"Both of us would like to talk to high school students, if the opportunity opens up," she said. "I would tell them about the bewilderment of not knowing what to do or who to turn to. I would say to them, 'Don't do this to your mothers.' "

King, who celebrated his 42nd birthday in jail Wednesday, was convicted in Denton County of delivery of a controlled substance on May 13, 1980. He appealed the conviction the next day and was released on an appeal bond. The appeal was finally denied in August 1989, and a warrant for his arrest was issued.

However, the warrant did not show up in computer records, and King's attempts to learn if a warrant had been issued were futile.

Through the years, King married and became a father.

Man keeps promise he made during Vietnam War years

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Whitman Alvin has kept a promise he made 27 years ago in Vietnam.

Alvin watched in horror on April 28, 1969 as a young man, hit by sniper fire, died at his feet during a reconnaissance mission.

"I made a resolution that that event would not be forgotten." Alvin told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Now, more than a dozen students at Miller High School, and dozens more to come, have funds to go to college thanks to Alvin's wish to memorialize a 19-year-old man he never knew — Army Cpl. Manuel Hernandez Jr.

The death traumatized him for years after the war. Alvin's struggle to cope with the carnage he witnessed took him to psychiatrists' offices and support group meetings for veterans.

Alvin squirreled away his disability checks and earnings from a government job deposited $50,000 in a college scholarship fund to honor Hernandez.

On Friday, four Miller students received a total of $2,000 from the fund managed by the Coastal Bend Community Foundation.

Alvin, 47, flew in from Osterville, Mass., for the event and to visit the family and friends of Hernandez.

"I think he just wants to do something to keep his memory alive," said Tomasa Hernandez, the 70-year-old mother of Manuel. "It's something that I can't even explain to myself."

The unlikely bond of a New Englander and Mrs. Hernandez was forged when librarian Margaret Rose ventured outside her stacks of reference books to help an out-of-towner.

Four years ago, the Corpus Christi Public Library received a letter from Alvin asking for help in locating the family of Manuel Hernandez Jr.

Ms. Rose combed a newspaper obituary index, only to find a reference to the death of Hernandez's father in 1989. The widow, Ms. Rose learned, had moved from her original address.

A trip to Rose Hill Memorial Park found the son's grave next to his father's. Fresh flowers and flags decorating the plots made her think that the family lived nearby.

She wrote Alvin of the discovery. He penned a letter back to the librarian, asking her to leave an enclosed letter to the family at the grave. Ms. Rose protected the letter in plastic wrapping and placed it among the flowers.

Tomasa Hernandez, who lives with her daughter, visits the graves of her husband and son every Sunday.

High-fiber diet makes good sense

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a senior female with chronic diverticulosis and irritable bowel syndrome. I experience periods of cramps and abdominal pain that may last for up to 10 days. What is your opinion on food or drink, specifically a high-fiber diet and moderate alcohol intake?

DEAR READER: Diverticular disease and irritable bowel syndrome are exceedingly common, especially in older adults. Diverticulosis, the presence of small out-pouchings in the intestinal lining, ordinarily cause no symptoms.

Irritable bowel syndrome, the cause of which is unknown, often produces gas, bloating and constipation or diarrhea. These symptoms tend to occur in cycles and are often related to stress and tension.

There is no consistently useful diet for either affliction. However, with respect to IBS, many authorities recommend a high-fiber intake and the use of bulking agents (Metamucil, Fibercon and others). Also, any foods that aggravate symptoms should probably be avoided. Moderate alcohol consumption should not affect either diverticulosis or IBS.

To give you more information on these conditions, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Diverticular Disease" and "Irritable Bowel Syndrome." Other readers who would like copies should send $2 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title(s).

DEAR DR. GOTT: About six years ago I was told by a urologist that the swelling in my left testicle was a hydrocele. He said I could let it go until it bothered me, or I could have surgery if I preferred. When I suggested draining it with a needle, he dismissed it as risky, mentioning the high probability of infection. When I sought a second opinion, the urologist said I could have it drained. What's your opinion?

DEAR READER: A hydrocele is a harmless collection of clear fluid beneath the covering of the testicle. It does not require treatment unless it enlarges (to cause discomfort or to get in the way). The fluid can certainly be removed with a needle, but the condition commonly recurs.

Also, as your first doctor mentioned, infection is always a possibility — although I believe that such risk is low, providing the drainage procedure is carried out under sterile conditions.

Most urologists favor removing the hydrocele itself — not just the fluid — because such a simple operation virtually cures the problem permanently.

I recommend that you allow your second doctor to remove the fluid. Then, if the hydrocele recurs, you can always consider more definitive surgery.

DEAR DR. GOTT: About five years ago my husband began getting spots on his legs with no pigmentation. The spots have progressed to his arms and face. He's in excellent health, but we wonder what the spots represent.

DEAR READER: The most common cause of spotty depigmentation in the skin is vitiligo, a harmless condition that is a cosmetic nuisance. Although no one knows why vitiligo develops, the disorder is sometimes associated with an underactive thyroid gland and other auto-immune (self-allergy) afflictions.

In addition, low-grade fungus infection in the skin can cause white patches.

To determine the nature of his skin problem, your husband should be examined by a dermatologist, who will test him further (with skin scrapings and blood tests) and recommend therapy, such as anti-fungus creams or, if appropriate, topical cortisone.

Rape suspect, 11, tells police he's too young to be charged

TORONTO (AP) — Police say an 11-year-old boy suspected of raping a girl was unruffled after his arrest, calmly telling officers he was too young to be charged with the crime.

The 13-year-old victim was walking home from school two weeks ago when a group of boys forced her into an apartment, pinned her to the floor and took off her clothes.

She was taken to a bedroom and the 11-year-old forced her to have intercourse, police said.

Detective Duncan Miller said the accused rapist, arrested Thursday, cannot be charged under the federal Young Offenders Act because he is under 12. At a custody hearing Thursday, the boy was placed in the care of the Children's Aid Society and will go to a Toronto group home.

"He is fully aware of his rights," Miller said.

Federal justice officials have maintained treatment and community programs — not prison — is the best way to reform child criminals. But the right-wing Reform Party, many victim advocates and police have lobbied for the minimum age to be lowered.

The 11-year-old boy was taken into custody Thursday along with three others aged 10, 13 and 15. They were not identified because of their ages.

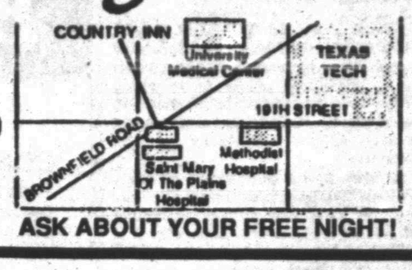

Police have a thick file on the 11-year-old boy and believe he's responsible for a string of other crimes, including auto thefts and robberies.

Publisher killed for attacking government

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Gunmen shot and killed a newspaper publisher in the streets of the capital, in the latest attack on journalists critical of Cambodia's coalition government.

Two people on a motorcycle shot Thun Bunly three times from behind as he drove his motorcycle through Phnom Penh on Friday, police officer Ek Krit said today.

Publisher of the Khmer Ideal newspaper and a member of the opposition Khmer Nation Party, Thun Bunly wrote articles critical of the two-party government created by U.N.-sponsored elections in 1993.

The first freely elected government in decades, the regime is accused by human rights groups of trying to intimidate the news media through violence and legal pressure.

Boorda's death casts cloud over Navy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Jeremy Boorda recently urged senators probing the role a crack fighter pilot played in a Navy scandal to consider the flyer's entire record, not just "a very terrible moment in time."

Now that the chief of naval operations' own terrible moment has cast a cloud over the Navy, one can imagine him urging the same not only for himself, but for the service whose battered reputation he was working to restore.

The Navy, an institution with a proud history and the world's most powerful seaborne force, has been continually buffeted by criticism since the 1991 Tailhook sexual-assault scandal.

More recently, decorated admirals have been forced out over allegations of sexual harassment or insensitivity and the prestigious Naval Academy has been rocked by allegations of drug use, larceny and worse. F-14 fighter jets have suffered crashes at an alarming rate.

The mounting problems inevitably have prompted some finger-pointing at the Navy's top leadership.

On Thursday, before he shot himself to death, Boorda knew he might well become the next source of embarrassment for the Navy in which he had served for 40 years. Questions had arisen about the legitimacy of the combat valor awards that he had worn.

President Clinton had appointed Boorda to the Navy's top uniformed job in 1994 after Adm. Frank Kelso II resigned in the aftermath of the Tailhook scandal.

In recent interviews, Boorda had emphasized his determination to move the Navy away from the controversies that dogged it.

He was known for getting out to meet enlisted sailors. Administrative actions were taken to curb alcohol abuse on Navy bases.

But the troubles continued.

Adm. Richard C. Macke resigned as commander-in-chief of the Pacific Command in November, after telling reporters that three U.S. servicemen who raped an Okinawan girl should have hired a prostitute instead.

Macke's replacement, Adm. Joseph W. Prueher, had to answer questions about his handling of an incident when he was commandant of midshipmen at the Naval Academy: several male students had chained a female to a urinal.

In December, a senior officer in Europe, Rear Adm. Ralph L. Tindal, took early retirement after a Navy review panel found him guilty of adultery, fraternization, conduct unbecoming an officer and sexual harassment.

At least seven serious incidents involving F-14s have been reported in the past 17 months, resulting in the deaths of at least seven people.

And the academy, the training ground for many of the Navy's top leaders, had become a troubled place recently, following allegations of drug abuse, car theft, cheating and sexual misconduct involving midshipmen.

The morning of Boorda's death, the service newspaper Stars & Stripes carried an article about 13 sailors who were arrested on drug charges in Naples, Italy, Boorda's old NATO command post.

Earlier in the week, the independent newspaper Navy Times ran an anonymous letter saying Boorda should resign. "Every officer from four star to the newest midshipman at the academy has no respect for the man at the top," the letter said.

That letter came just weeks after former Navy Secretary James Webb leveled scathing criticism at the Navy's top leaders in a speech at the Naval Academy. While he mentioned no names, it was clear that at least some of the criticism was directed at Boorda.

In March, Boorda spoke with feeling to senators after the Armed Services Committee blocked promotion of a top-flight Navy pilot because of a possible link to lewd behavior at the Tailhook convention of naval aviators.

Parents discover son is college dropout

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Brad Wagner told his parents he had a job lined up after college. They showed up to watch him graduate, only to learn he hadn't been in school since 1993. And he hasn't been seen in a week.

Wagner's parents were not aware of any problems he was having over the last four years. They gave him money, and he talked about engineering classes and homework and Virginia Tech football.

"We gave him a tuition check and spending money and paid his rent" for the last four years, his father, John Wagner, said.

Police were seeking information after Wagner's parents reported him missing Monday. He last spoke with them eight days ago.

Officials at Virginia Polytechnic Institute said Wagner entered the university in fall 1992 as an engineering major, and was enrolled through fall 1993. He did not enroll the following spring.

The fascade never crumbled. Wagner's father often traveled to Blacksburg to attend Virginia Tech football and basketball games with his son.

On other weekends, Wagner — known as Mugsy — made the two-hour drive home.

Even his housemates believed Wagner was a student.

"He'd come in and talk about some killer test he'd had that day," said Sam Larson, one of Wagner's two roommates. "He'd say: 'I just finished my big project, now I can go out and party.'"

"He had me buffaloed. He had everyone buffaloed," Larson said.

His parents just want him home.

"No matter what the problem, anything can be worked out," the elder Wagner said Friday from his home in Bristol. "We love him, and we want him to come home."

A friend was the last person to see Brad Wagner. He dropped him off at a car rental agency last Saturday — the day his parents thought he would be graduating. He rented a maroon 1996 Oldsmobile Achieva.

Wagner last talked with his father May 10. The Wagners had planned to meet their son the next morning at his house. He wasn't there; his belongings were.

"He didn't take a pair of shoes, a shirt ... not even a toothbrush," Larson said.

Wagner's roommates had given him money to pay the $700 monthly rent. The landlord called Thursday to say Wagner's rent check had bounced, Larson said.

Friends and family explored places they thought he might have gone, including favorite camping sites.

But John Wagner said he did not think his son went camping because he didn't take any of his gear with him.

He said his son has never been in trouble and that his disappearance was "totally out of character." He told them he had lined up a job as a chemical engineer in Charlotte, N.C., after graduation.

'Dolphin safe' label has new meaning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists are split over legislation that would allow imports of tuna caught by methods once roundly condemned for killing dolphins in the process.

The bills also would give new meaning to the "dolphin safe" label on tuna cans since 1990.

The measures, supported by the Clinton administration, would again let the valuable yellowfin tuna be caught using methods that locate the mature fish by chasing the dolphins that swim with them, encircling all in mile-long nets.

The "dolphin safe" label would be allowed only for catches in which the observer can certify no dolphins were killed or seriously harmed — a restriction that backers say is tighter than the current one.

Opponents say the label should continue to forbid tuna caught by chasing and encircling dolphins. They argue that the practice is cruel and stressful and that the proposed new policy cannot practically be enforced.

Administration officials say an agreement with Latin American countries last fall will protect dolphins and other sea life in the eastern Pacific Ocean.

A number of environmentalist groups, including Greenpeace, support that argument. Others, including the Sierra Club, call the proposal a giant step backward.

"The whole thing is a scam being put over on us by the Mexican government and the Venezuelan government that want access back into the U.S. market for tuna that is not dolphin-safe," said Dave Phillips, executive director of the Earth Island Institute, a San Francisco-based environmental group fighting the measure.

Without the new legislation, backers say, international agreements to protect the dolphin would collapse. Foreign fleets would go back to killing dolphins and selling to countries that have no rules.

Also, restrictions that shield dolphins encourage fishing methods that kill young tuna, sharks, sea turtles, billfish and other important marine life.

"The issue really has gotten more complex than it used to be," said Nina Young, marine mammal specialist at the Center for Marine Conservation, one of five environmental groups acting in a rare alliance with congressional Republicans.

Imports from several Latin American countries have been blocked by 1988 amendments to the Marine Mammal Protection Act. Mexico came under embargo in 1990. The restrictions have helped reduce the number of U.S. tuna boats in the eastern Pacific Ocean from 35 to four since 1990.

Legislation introduced by Reps. Randy "Duke" Cunningham, R-Calif., and Wayne Gilchrest, R-Md., cleared the House Resources Committee last week. A Senate version awaits Commerce Committee action.

Support comes from the Environmental Defense Fund, National Wildlife Federation and the World Wildlife Fund in addition to Greenpeace and the Center for Marine Conservation. Opponents include the Sierra Club, the Earth Island Institute, the Defenders of Wildlife, the Humane Society of the United States and Pub Citizen.

The measures carry out the Panama Declaration, an agreement worked out last October with the environmental groups, the United States, Latin American countries and the southern Pacific island country of Vanuatu to protect not only dolphins but also other ocean life.

The agreement calls for certification of fishing vessels and internationally certified observers on each vessel to guarantee the limit on dolphin deaths to fewer than 5,000 a year — out of a population of 9.6 million.

The agreement was signed by Belize, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, France, Mexico, Panama, Peru, Spain, the United States, Vanuatu and Venezuela.

Dolphin kills totaled more than 100,000 in 1989 but fell below 4,000 last year.

Supporters argue that technical advances make it possible to free the captured dolphins without killing them. The bills call for further study of the issue.

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., and others have introduced bills that would keep the label standards intact.

The bills are: Cunningham-Gilchrest, HR2823; Miller-Studds, HR2856; Breaux-Stevens, S1420; Biden-Boxer, S1460.

Young player wins $1 Million

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The World Series of Poker championship title belongs to a college dropout who has spent the past seven years playing professional poker. He used two pairs to beat out an Oklahoma pathologist.

Huckleberry "Huck" Seed, 27, outlasted several players with titles from other World Series of Poker games and with twice as many years of experience. He won $1 million and a 14-karat gold bracelet at Binion's Horseshoe Hotel & Casino on Thursday.

Seed defeated Dr. Bruce Van Horn of Ada, Okla., about 4:30 p.m. PDT with a pair of eights and a pair of nines after an intense threeway battle with Van Horn and John Bonetti, who holds three World Series of Poker titles.

Van Horn, 57, won $585,000, and Bonetti, 67, won $341,250.

Seed, who was the last person to enter the $10,000 buy-in No-Limit Texas Hold'em competition, maintained his poker face after the win and seemed unfazed by the money.

"I'm pretty excited. This is just the way I am," the gangly young man explained with a sheepish grin. "That's one of the qualities that keeps me from going on tilt while playing."

Seed said he had no immediate plans for the money and it "probably won't change me that much.

Weekend off to busy start for officers; nine arrested

Nine people were arrested Friday and early Saturday morning as the weekend got off to a busy start for local law enforcement agencies.

Arrested at 11:35 a.m. Friday was a 27-year-old male who was taken into custody at the adult probation office on outstanding city warrants for disregarding a stop sign and failure to appear.

Officers arrested a 29-year-old male at 8:32 p.m. Friday in the 2800 block of Avenue F on an outstanding warrant for speeding and failure to appear.

The first of numerous alcohol-related arrests was made at 8:46 p.m. Friday in the 2500 block of Avenue H when a 53-year-old male was arrested for public intoxication.

Following a report of a possible intoxicated subject leaving Rip Griffin's, DPS troopers arrested a 28-year-old male at 9:38 p.m. four miles west of Dermott on U.S. Highway 84 for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated.

Following a report of a disturbance at Snyder Country Club at 11:25 p.m. and a subject leaving possibly intoxicated, officers arrested a 40-year-old male at 11:40 p.m. in the 2200 block of College Avenue for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated.

At 12:32 a.m. Saturday, officers arrested a 40-year-old male for public intoxication in the 900 block of College Avenue.

At 1:07 a.m. Saturday, officers arrested a 25-year-old male for public intoxication in the 400 block of 29th Street.

A 16-year-old juvenile was taken into custody at 2 a.m. Saturday in the 1600 block of Avenue R for a minor consuming alcohol.

At 3:07 a.m. Saturday, officers arrested a 21-year-old male in the 1800 block of 23rd Street for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated and driving while license suspended.

In other activity Friday, DPS troopers investigated a minor accident at 4:03 p.m. at the intersection of Gary Brewer Road and FM 1609 involving a Snyder Independent School District bus. Involved were a 1979 International passenger bus driven by Gary Moore of 4110 Eastridge and a 1988 Toyota pickup driven by Jady Gilbert, Box 318. There were eight passengers on the bus and no injuries were reported. The district dispatched another bus to finish the route.

An offense report for a dog bite was submitted at 4:24 p.m. Friday from 408 29th Street in reference to a 10-year-old boy being bitten.

Officers were notified at 2:17 a.m. Saturday of a possible gunshot victim at Cogdell Hospital emergency room.

An air conditioning motor had fallen near where a bullet was resting and the subject at first thought the shell had discharged, striking him in the leg. However, a hospital spokesman said the wound was caused by the motor falling on the 16-year-old boy.

Birthday girl disappointed; she gave better than she got

DEAR ABBY: If you give a birthday gift to a friend, isn't it proper for the friend to remember you with a gift on your birthday? I thought that was how it worked.

I always try to give my friends gifts for their birthdays. However, my birthday was a week ago and not one of the six good friends to whom I gave gifts gave me one. One gave me a card, another made cupcakes to share with everyone at lunch, and another friend decorated my locker. (I'm a high school student.) The other three did nothing.

Perhaps this is just my opinion, but I don't consider a card a gift. To me a gift is something material that someone has put some effort into making or buying — not something that was put together at the last minute. The cupcakes and decorated locker were very nice and I appreciated them, but after having given them real gifts for their birthdays, I was disappointed not to receive any. I'm sure it wasn't a matter of money for any of them.

I don't intend to say anything to them about it, but when their birthdays come around again, should I still give them gifts, or should I just wish them happy birthday with a card?

I love to give gifts, but I find it offensive when people don't treat me the same way I treat them.

DISAPPOINTED BIRTHDAY GIRL

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: A real gift (in my opinion) is something given from the heart in the spirit of generosity, with no thought of receiving anything in return.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 53-year-old widow with four grown children who are not financially well-off. My deceased husband left me fairly well-fixed financially. I have several bank accounts that I share jointly with my 28-year-old son. The house is in my name alone.

I met a very attractive man. He recently moved in with me and we're talking marriage. He is twice-divorced and claims he doesn't have much — just an old car and some furniture he has in storage. We have a small joint bank account.

Abby, do you think it would be wise for me to get a prenuptial agreement?

UNCERTAIN IN UTAH

DEAR UNCERTAIN: A prenuptial agreement is a sound idea. And you would be wise to have a lawyer draw it up. Put everything in writing before you tie the knot. Good luck and best wishes.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Count me among those who are disturbed when I pull back the covers on a motel or hotel bed and it becomes completely unmade.

I'm a traveling technician who's often on the road several nights a week. It seems to me that managers and owners should occasionally spend the night in randomly chosen rooms at their own inns. If they did, perhaps we travelers wouldn't have to suffer with lightbulbs so dim we have to turn on every light in the room. (One good bulb would have done the trick.) And perhaps we wouldn't have to endure heating and air-conditioning systems that swing back and forth between too hot and too cold. If they slept on some of those hard beds, they would know how uncomfortable a poor mattress can be.

These irritations occur in luxury hotels as well as budget accommodations.

Please tell Ruth Anne Young, who complained about the way beds are made in hotels, that she isn't "daft" for being irritated. I, too, am irritated.

DEAR ABBY: I was very disappointed in your response to "An Adoptee's Wife in Richmond, Va." My heart does not ache for adoptees denied information concerning their parentage.

I have all the information I could possibly want about my parentage. The two wonderful people who adopted me as an infant are the only parents I've ever known — and they are the only parents I need to know. They are my parents.

I do not need to search for my heritage. It lies in the ancestors of the best parents I could ever have asked for. They chose me, and had I been given the opportunity, I would have eagerly chosen them.

Any two people can make a baby, but it takes special people to raise and nurture a child to adulthood. These are parents.

I do not feel that anything is missing from my life. I am truly blessed. Many adoptees feel certain that their only family is the one with whom they have lived with since infancy; I, for one, need nothing more.

You may use my name.

BOB ADAMS, DANIA, FLA.

DEAR BOB: What a beautiful tribute to your parents.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a devoted reader of your column for many years. Your advice is usually right on target.

I recently visited my physician and noticed a framed poem hanging in his office. After reading it, I knew at once it was something you would want to print in your column, so I asked the receptionist if she would please make a copy for me.

DEAR ABE BROWER: Thank you. You were right on target. Perhaps one of my readers will know who the author is. It's well worth space in my column.

THE TONE OF VOICE
(Author Unknown)

It's not so much what you say
As the manner in which you say it;
It's not so much the language you use
As the tone in which you convey it.
"Come here!" I sharply said,
And the child cowered and wept.
"Come here," I said —
He looked and smiled
And straight to my lap he crept.

Words may be mild and fair
But the tone may pierce like a dart;
Words may be soft as the summer air
But the tone may break my heart;
For words come from the mind
Grow by study and art —
But tone leaps from the inner self,
Revealing the state of the heart.

Whether you know it or not,
Whether you mean or care,
Gentleness, kindness, love and hate,
Envy, anger, are there.
Then, would you quarrels avoid
And peace and love rejoice?
Keep anger not only out of your words —
Keep it out of your voice.

San Andreas Fault shows that two big earth quakes occurred

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Geologists digging near Palm Springs have found evidence of one of the biggest displacements ever seen along the mighty San Andreas Fault: a 72-foot gap likely created by two major quakes.

The quakes probably rattled the earth along the fault's Mission Creek segment hundreds of years ago, the scientists said in interviews.

By digging trenches into soil and rock in the Coachella Valley south of Palm Springs, the geologists discovered evidence that the temblors may have sliced apart a stream channel, shifting the segments 72 feet apart.

At least two quakes — one about 300 years ago and another 250 to 400 years earlier — moved the earth that distance, said Thomas Fumal and Michael Rymer, geologists with the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park.

Each quake would have had to be powerful — magnitude 7.7 to 7.8 — to trigger such a seismic shift, they said. A magnitude 7 earthquake is major, capable of producing widespread, heavy damage.

Each earthquake would have had to displace nearly 36 feet, "about as large as we've seen before," in San Andreas quakes farther north, Fumal said.

Additional quakes also might have powered the 72-foot shift, Dan Ponti, another geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey, said Friday.

"We can see at least two. There may be another one or two in there," he said, adding that the preliminary findings leave many unanswered questions about when another temblor might jolt the Mission Creek segment.

Brunson graduates

LUBBOCK — Rhonda Brunson of Snyder, was one of 174 students who participated in graduation exercises at Lubbock Christian University this spring.

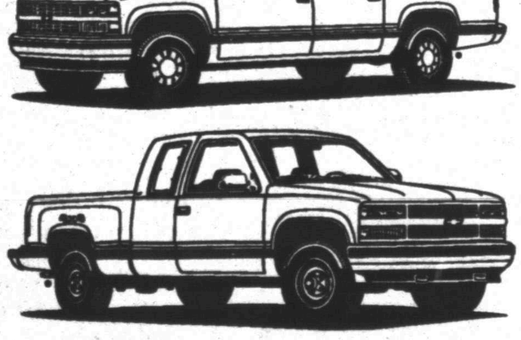

Brunson graduated with a bachelor of science in interdisciplinary studies and is the daughter of Roy Simmons and Sue Baldwin.

Brunson was a member of Christliche Damen women's social club and has been named to the Dean's List.

Dole kept resignation plans secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a town famous for its news leaks, Sen. Bob Dole somehow managed to keep a momentous decision secret for a month.

Even a group of 18 Republican governors who met with Dole the day before he announced he was planning to quit the Senate to devote full time to his GOP presidential candidacy had no inkling of his intentions.

"You talk about a guy who can keep a secret, he did a good job. I was amazed. I really was amazed," said Texas Gov. George W. Bush.

Kansas Gov. Bill Graves, who must appoint a temporary successor to Dole in the Senate, was asked directly by a reporter Tuesday afternoon if Dole had given any indication he might resign to focus on the White House race.

"None whatsoever," Graves said then.

About 24 hours later, Dole was standing in a packed auditorium announcing he would end his 27-year Senate career by June 11.

Dole chuckled about the secrecy on Friday, telling a radio audience that he made up his mind about 30 days ago that his campaign needed this dramatic kick-start.

No one figured it out, Dole said, "even though I hinted it to the press last week. I said "Next week's going to be a big one," as I got off the plane last Friday, but nobody caught on."

By all accounts, Dole told Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour the news two weeks ago in his Senate office. Also present was Scott Reed, Dole's campaign manager.

Other than his wife, Elizabeth, and daughter Robin, Dole told virtually no one else until the day of his announcement. Not House Speaker Newt Gingrich, not Minority Whip Trent Lott, not even his Republican colleague from Kansas, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum.

Kassebaum said she got a clue as to Dole's plans on Monday, when Dole dropped by the annual Washington meeting of the Kansas Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

"He said he had to get out in the country and that he was going to make an announcement soon," she said. "I kind of looked at (Rep.) Pat Roberts and said, 'Well, what do you think that means?' I still thought resigning was something he might do after the (August) conventions."

Kassebaum and most other lawmakers believed Dole simply meant he would relinquish most of his duties as majority leader. Indeed, Wednesday morning's newspapers were filled with stories about how Dole would give the powers to a trio of Senate GOP leaders while he concentrated on his campaign.

Nobody mentioned resigning outright.

Norway's whalers brace for new protests as season opens

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Norway's whalers are preparing to slip quietly out of their ports to avoid trouble on Monday, when the much-protested hunting season opens.

Since resuming commercial whale hunts three years ago despite a global ban, this northern country of 4.3 million people has seen demonstrations, boycott threats, confrontations on the high seas and sabotage.

It also angered many by quietly lifting a six-year ban on hunting seal pups this year. The arctic hunt for more than 17,000 pups ended early this month.

The protests against whaling have intensified this year with Norway's near doubling of the minke whale quota to 425, up from 232 last year. The United States and several other nations have denounced the hunt, as have an ex-Beatle and his wife.

The first minke whales may already be facing harpoons, since fisheries officials said Wednesday that several of this year's 35-40 boats are allowed to start the hunt at will in the North Sea. Last year, 33 boats took part.

Norway rejects a nonbinding 1986 ban imposed by the International Whaling Commission. The small, oil-rich country claims the minke whales it hunts are plentiful, and that whaling is a responsible use of its natural resources. It agrees, however, that other, endangered whale species should be protected.

Despite defending the hunt, the usually open government appeared skittish about this year's sharply increased quotas, set May 4. It did not announce them, as it routinely did in the past, and only revealed the number after it was leaked to the news media.

"I think it shows how afraid they are," said Katarine Brubakk of Greenpeace Norway. "I think they hope that if they don't put it in writing in a news release, it wouldn't cause trouble."

Halvard Johansen, director of resource management at the Ministry of Fisheries, denied any concern.

"We just didn't see that it served any purpose to announce the whale quota this year. We announced it to those who are involved, the whalers," he said.

The result was what one Norwegian newspaper called "environmental hysteria."

The United States formally protested on Friday, saying commercial whaling already has brought some species near extinction. A bipartisan group of 23 congressmen asked for U.S. trade sanctions if next week's hunt goes off as planned.

Yeltsin offers to put opponent in charge of economic reform plans

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin said Saturday he had offered to put his third-place opponent in charge of Russia's market reforms if he'd drop out of the presidential race.

He said he proposed the post of deputy prime minister for liberal economist Grigory Yavlinsky, but Yavlinsky wanted more.

"This is reform, his brainchild, his sphere of action," Yeltsin said on a campaign trip to the Siberian city of Krasnoyarsk, according to the ITAR-Tass news agency. "But his pride won't let him accept the offer."

The president said he still hopes he might strike a deal with Yavlinky, his main liberal challenger.

Yeltsin has been courting several centrist and liberal candidates in his bitter fight to beat Communist challenger Gennady Zyuganov in June 16 elections, but Yavlinsky is considered the key one.

Putting Yavlinsky in charge over economic policy might be interpreted as a new commitment from Yeltsin to market reforms, which have been painful and often floundering. In recent months, Yeltsin has purged the most ardent reformers from his government in what many see as a bid for the conservative vote.

Yavlinsky, trained at Harvard and fluent in English, has strong reformist credentials dating back to his radical plan to remake the Soviet economy in 500 days. The plan was never tried, but it established Yavlinsky's reputation.

In a meeting Thursday with the president, Yavlinsky said he wanted Yeltsin to replace the prime minister, the defense minister and several other officials he blames for the government "failures and mistakes."

Yeltsin balked at first, saying Yavlinsky wanted "too much."

Asteroid to 'narrowly' miss Earth on Sunday

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — An asteroid about a third of a mile in diameter will whizz past Earth at roughly 12:48 p.m. on Sunday, scientists said.

The object, the largest ever observed passing so close, will miss Earth by about 279,000 miles — a close call in astronomical terms.

There is no chance of an actual collision, scientists said. Since the asteroid was detected, astronomers at several observatories have carefully monitored its position and precisely calculated its four-year orbit around the sun.

It will come closer to Earth than all but five other objects ever detected, but will not come as close as the moon, which is 240,000 miles from Earth.

Carl Hergenrother, a University of Arizona senior majoring in atmospheric sciences, and Timothy Spahr, an astronomy graduate who now attends the University of Florida, made the latest discovery Wednesday.

They were using a 16-inch diameter telescope on Mount Lemmon, just outside Tucson, and detected it on photographs each of the two previous nights.

The object, called 1996 JA-1, is traveling through space at about 10 miles per second, or about 36,000 mph, and will cross a distance about 18 times the width of the full moon in one hour.

Spahr, Hergenrother and other astronomers who have plotted its course since its discovery say that makes its approach the sixth-closest known.

This asteroid is roughly one-tenth the size of one believed to have killed all dinosaurs and most other living things when it struck Earth 65 million years ago.

"This asteroid wouldn't destroy civilization if it hit Earth, but it sure would mess things up," Spahr said.

If the asteroid struck land, it might leave a crater several miles wide, devastating an area perhaps hundreds of miles across.

If it struck the ocean, it would produce tsunamis, or tidal waves, that could travel many hundreds of miles and devastate coastlines with waves towering nearly 200 feet high.

There is a chance that huge radiotelescopes could be used to bounce radio waves off the object, producing a radar image that would reveal its exact size, shape and surface texture.

But there may not be time to arrange for the use of the telescopes because the object is coming with little warning, said Steven Ostro, an astronomer who specializes in radar observations of asteroids.

Another recently discovered asteroid, perhaps three-quarters of a mile across, is expected to pass within 1.9 million miles of Earth a week from today.

German youth will graduate from Snyder High on Friday

Christoph Lux's stay arranged through Rotary Youth Exchange

Scurry County Folks

by Shirley A. Gorman

THE SNYDER DAILY NEWS

When 17-year-old Christoph Lux of Zerbst, Germany, where Catherine the Great was born, learned he would be living in Snyder for the current school year he did not know what to expect; images of cowboys and open prairies with much distance between cities began to fill his mind.

But as Christoph prepares to graduate Friday along with other SHS seniors, he has only praise for his year-long visit here.

Christoph, whose stay was arranged through the Rotary Club's Youth Exchange program, is currently living with Marvin and Julie Sentell. Last semester he stayed with Laddie and Lou McMillian and their sons, Chad, 16, and Kurt, who has already graduated.

In addition to the friends Christoph has made here, the graduation audience will also include his parents, Bernd and Christina Lux, who will visit here next week.

Christoph has a brother, Robert, 7, and a sister, Stephanie, who is 14.

Christoph is looking forward to donning the graduation cap and gown as he prepares to accept his diploma Friday night.

Like his fellow students, Christoph had to earn passing grades throughout the school year and on the TAAS tests before being allowed to graduate.

At SHS, he participates in band and will compete in state competition in a trumpet ensemble on May 27. He is also a member of the Art Club and recently entered a sculpture in Western Texas College's annual art show.

Christoph's hobbies include music, sailing and snow skiing. He sings in the choir at the First Presbyterian Church.

Though somewhat different from his school in Germany, Christoph said he enjoys Snyder High. He especially likes the extra curricular activities and being able to choose electives.

The school year in Germany is longer but has more breaks, Christoph said. Students also have a pre-determine . slate of classes that they must complete. Only PE and music theory are offered in addition to academic courses. German students, however, are allowed to choose whether they will attend school for eight, 10 or 12 years.

Those completing eight years usually enter the work force right after graduation. Those successfully completing the 10-year plan are eligible to enroll in trade schools. Students like Christoph, who have chosen the 12-year route, are eligible to go to the university after graduation. He has two years of high school to complete when he returns home. Then he must serve a mandatory one year in the military.

Christoph said it is too soon for him to know what field he is interested in. But whatever he chooses will be enhanced by living and studying abroad. Among other benefits, he has been able to hone his already good command of the English language.

Though this past year has been different for the young man, he has adjusted well and has not experienced much homesickness.

For him, the people he meets makes the "experience worthwhile." He enjoys learning about "another way of life," and recently compared German and American customs.

In Germany, for instance, Christoph said New Year's Eve is a time for fireworks. He said they also discuss what things they have done throughout the year as well as tell what they want to do during the new year.

In Germany, another custom is to open presents on Christmas Eve rather than Christmas Day. His country does not observe Halloween, but in February they celebrate "fasching" where everyone dresses up in costume and attends dances. This takes place two days before Ash Wednesday.

From former East Germany, Christoph also shared a little of what it was like when the Great Wall was torn down on Nov. 9, 1989. (See boxed story elsewhere on this page.)

German citizens' lives changed quite a bit after that, including his family's.

His parents worked for the government prior to the wall's demise. His father, a dentist, and his mother, a doctor, are both in private practice now.

Christoph said they now have "more freedom to travel." In the beginning, he said German people wanted to travel and that kept the East and West Germany borders crowded for a few months.

Christoph learned of the Youth Exchange Program through his father who is a member of the Rotary Club in Germany. He is the first student from his hometown to take part.

When Christoph first came to Snyder, an American student from California was staying with his family, arranged through the same Rotary program.

He chose the U.S. as his primary choice, but had no say in which of the 50 states he would live. He has not been disappointed though, as he finds life in Snyder and Texas appealing.

So far he has visited Dallas, Austin, Amarillo, San Angelo, Lubbock and Tulsa, Okla.

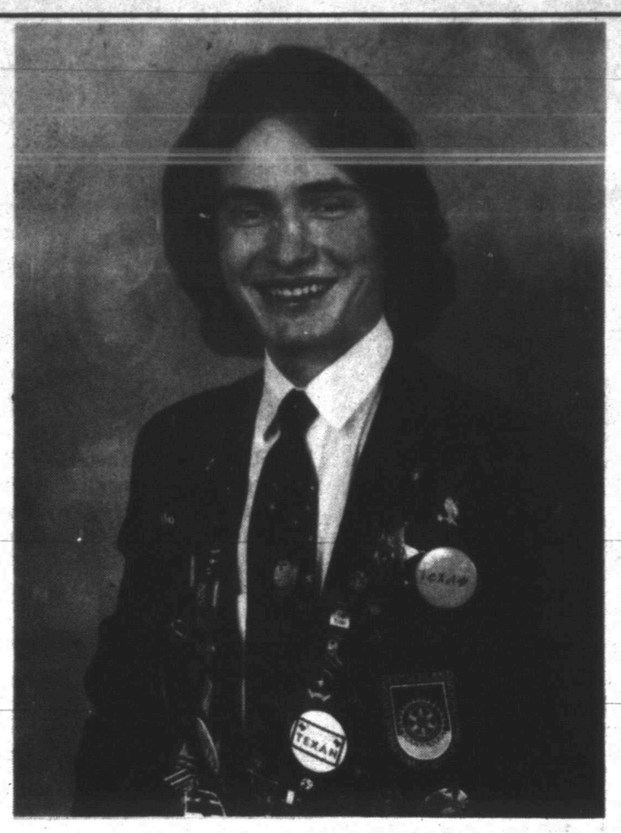

In addition, he has camped out in Palo Duro and skied in New Mexico.

Though this is Christoph's first visit to the U.S., he has visited other countries in Europe.

Julie Sentell said she and Marvin became involved with the Rotary Youth Exchange Program about three years ago when they were asked to keep an exchange student for a month.

The arrangement proved longer and the Sentells are still active in the program. She said she enjoys

The Berlin Wall: Aug. 13, 1961-Nov. 9, 1989

East German soldiers began building the Berlin Wall on Aug. 13, 1961 in order to seal off the east-west border. In anger, some Berliners called it the Schandmauer, or wall of shame.

President John F. Kennedy visited the Berlin Wall in June of 1963. After his death in November of that year the square in front of West Berlin's city hall was renamed for him.

France, Great Britain, the U.S. and the Soviet Union all signed on agreement in 1971, declaring that West Berlin was not part of West Germany.

Relations between East Germany and West Germany began to improve. By 1989, East Germans were demanding greater freedom. More East Germans began to flee to West Germany, by way of Hungary and Austria.

The East German government then ended all restrictions on travel and emigration to the West by East Germans. Soon, the 28 year-old Berlin Wall was opened, allowing East Germans greater freedom to travel or to move to West Germany and West Berlin.

East Germany and West Germany officially became unified on Oct. 3, 1990.

Mr. and Mrs. Kris Kimmell and Brandi

Couple wed in May ceremony

Brandi Gaskins of Des Moines, Iowa, announces the marriage of her mother, Denise, to Kris Kimmell.

Parents of the bride are Elaine Lumbard of Des Moines and Mel Lumbard of Jacksonville, Fla. Kris is the son of Bill and Gay Kimmell of the Dunn community.

The double-ring ceremony was performed at 3 p.m. May 18 at the historical Church of the Land in Urbandale, Iowa. Honor attendants were Brandi Gaskins, daughter of the bride, and Kasey Kimmell Johnson, nephew of the groom from Hayden Lake, Idaho.

The groom is sales manager for Y-Z Industries. The couple will reside in Houston.

Bad service pays nearly the same

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — If the dining experience is less than satisfying, does the waiter get a smaller tip? Maybe, but not by much.

Poor restaurant service appears to be rewarded nearly as well as good service, according to a study of three eateries in Houston and Columbia, Mo.

"If people get so-so service, they're likely to leave a standard tip and not reduce it. If they reduce it, it will be by very little," said Michael Lynn, an associate professor of consumer behavior and marketing at Cornell University's School of Hotel Administration.

Asked to rate their dining experience on a scale of 1 to 5, patrons of The Olive Garden and Bennigan's restaurants in Houston who gave a 4.6 or higher rating left a tip averaging 16.6 percent of the bill. Those who rated the service 4.4 or lower left 14.2 percent.

The same pattern emerged in a survey at a Red Lobster in Columbia, Mo. Those who praised the restaurant left an average 12 percent tip; those who didn't express praise tipped 10 percent.

Why would people stay the course on tipping when the service is poor?

"People are reluctant to disappoint others," Lynn said. "I've heard of cases where servers have publicly embarrassed people who left small or no tips at all, but that's rare."

Lynn's study with Jeffrey Graves of the University of Houston will appear in an upcoming issue of Hospitality Research Journal.

Tipping is not an incentive for excellent service unless customers differentiate between good service and bad, he said.

MARRIAGE ANNOUNCED — Clinton Garcia and Autumn Walker were married March 26 in the home of the groom's parents in Snyder. Parents of the bride are Lynette and Craig Zorn of Ingram and Johnny Walker of Snyder. Parents of the groom are Frank and Trudy Garcia. The couple will make their home in Snyder.

AUGUST WEDDING PLANNED — Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clinton Adams of Snyder announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Allison Anne Adams, to John Marshall Wilson III of Denton. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall Wilson Jr. of Spring. The couple plan an evening ceremony August 17 at First United Methodist Church in Snyder. (Photo by Tom Gonzales)

Look at 26 cards, not 52

It can be difficult to analyze a deal correctly when you are looking at all four hands. You see how the cards lie and play on that basis, disregarding percentages.

In my last deal from the Cap Volmac, the contract is two spades. Would you prefer to declare or defend?

North-South was using the Precision system. One club showed any hand with at least 16 high-card points. One diamond was the negative response. The rest was natural.

There seem to be eight tricks: five spades, one club and either two hearts or one heart and a heart ruff in the dummy. Yet it didn't work out like that. First, George Mittelman, from Canada, got the defense off on the right foot when he led a trump. This killed any hope of a heart ruff in the dummy. After winning in hand, declarer played a diamond to dummy's king. East won with the ace and returned a trump. Declarer won, drew the last trump and continued with the ace and another heart. Mittelman played low without a flicker.

We can see that putting up dummy's jack wins. But is that the right play? No — in isolation, finessing dummy's eight is better. Both plays work when the hearts are 3-3, but finessing the eight wins whenever East has a doubleton queen or doubleton king. Putting up the jack works only when East has a doubleton nine.

Knowing the odds, declarer called for dummy's heart eight and went one down. Afterwards, all three players congratulated Mittelman on his excellent defense.

Did you opt to defend? Or did you peek?

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Jones

April ceremony unites couple

Miss Gina Pierce and Mr. Paul Jones were wed at 2 p.m. Saturday, April 27, at Willow Park Inn.

Leeann Zajicek, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Chuck Wheeler was best man, and Lesa Pierce was flower girl.

The ceremony was performed by County Judge Ricky Fritz. A reception followed at Willow Park Inn.

Pierce is the daughter of Kenneth and Jan Pierce of Snyder. Paul is the son of Wallace and Barbara Jones, also of Snyder.

Following a honeymoon trip to Ruidoso, the couple will reside in Snyder.

Gina is the owner of Expert Hair Design and Paul works at Midwest-Electric Co-op Inc.

Graves takes stand against blowers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lawmakers hummed the familiar theme song to "Mission Impossible" as the star of the spy-thriller series, Peter Graves, took the podium at City Hall.

But he was not there Tuesday to talk about anything as glamorous as espionage, or even the film remake starring Tom Cruise.

Graves wanted to talk about leaf blowers.

"Leaf blowers are bad," Graves told council members considering a ban on the gas-powered gardening tools in residential areas.

"They call them leaf blowers, because, indeed, they do blow leaves around and around and around. But they also blow other things around," the 70-year-old actor said, mentioning fungus. "Are we going to put masks on our kids? In some areas of the world, plants, flowers and trees, and their arrangements together, have deep religious and philosophical meanings."

The council apparently agreed. The pro-ban vote was 9 to 4.

Deputies use pepper spray on actor

YUCCA VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Deputies used pepper spray to subdue the actor who plays nurse Malik McGrath on NBC's hit "ER" after he refused to leave a supermarket where his girlfriend works.

Deezer D., whose real name is Dearon Thompson, had gotten into an argument with his girlfriend and had become combative with the deputies who asked him to leave, San Bernardino County sheriff's Sgt. Allen White said.

Thompson, 31, was cited Thursday for making a harassing phone call and resisting arrest, White said.

Dixon set to speak at program

Adene Dixon will be the featured speaker and installation officer of the Founder's Day program of Zeta Lambda Chapter Monday evening.

Mrs. Dixon attended Texas Tech University where she earned her bachelor of science and master of education degrees.

She taught 25 years at Oak Grove Elementary School in Brownfield. She retired from teaching in 1993.

At the chapter level of the Delta Kappa Gamma Society International, she has served in multiple offices and positions, including chapter president.

On the state level, Mrs. Dixon has served as a member of four Alpha State Committees. She has been a presenter at several Area XII workshops and also served as a member of presentations teams at Alpha State Conventions.

She is now serving Area XII Coordinator.

In 1992, Dixon was a participant of the Golden Gift Leadership, Mangement Seminar in Austin. She has attended numerous Alpha State Conventions, International Conventions, and Southwest Conferences.

She has also attended three seminars for Purposeful Living.

Dixon is also a member of Phi Delta Kappa, First United Methodist Church, and Texas Retired Teachers Association. She has two daughters, seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

The Founder's Day program and installation of new officers will be held in the Martha Ann Woman's Club, beginning at 7 p.m. and hostesses will be Carolyn Derouen, Jamie Hall, Kaye Carter, Betty Henderson, Carolyn Limmer, Laurie Grinslade and Kay Hopper.

2,000 parade watchers wanted

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Everybody loves a parade. Some just aren't willing to be parade watchers — even if it's in a new movie starring Jack Lemmon and James Garner.

Warner Bros. is looking for 2,000 people for a scene in "My Fellow Americans," in which two former presidents, played by Lemmon and Garner, join a parade to escape pursuing villains.

It turns out the parade is a gay rights march.

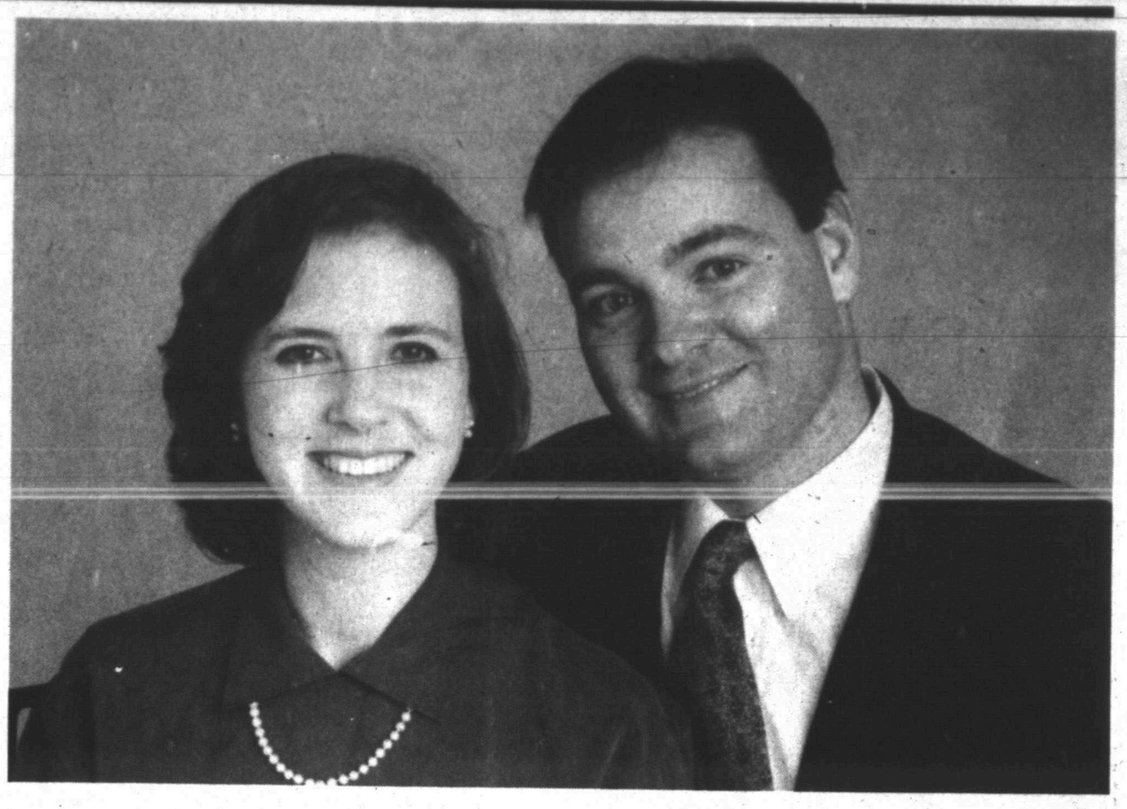

The issue turned controversial when North Buncombe High School declined an invitation for its band to appear in the scene. Principal Rodney Mangum said participating "would divide the community."

The folks at Warner Bros. don't see what the fuss is about.

"We're just making a movie, not trying to do anything political," said casting director Shirley Crumley. "This is just a comedy scene."

The scene is to be filmed Monday.

The following U.S. presidents never attended college: Harry Truman, Grover Cleveland, Andrew Johnson, Abraham Lincoln, Millard Fillmore, Zachary Taylor, Martin Van Buren, Andrew Jackson and George Washington.

OCTOBER WEDDING PLANNED — Dr. and Mrs. Edward Barkowsky of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Starkins of Long Island, N.Y. announce the engagement of their children, Lesa Ann Barkowsky and Gregory Starkins. The couple will marry October 5 in the First United Methodist Church in Austin. A reception will follow at the Lady Bird Johnson National Wild Flower Research Center.

Shaffer to serve as awards emcee

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Shaffer has come a long way from Canada. And he credits Stephen Schwartz with discovering his musical talents.

Shaffer will serve as the emcee Sunday when the Director's Company honors the Academy Award-winning composer and lyricist.

"If it weren't for him, I might still be going to auditions in Canada," Shaffer said.

The Director's Company, which encourages the development of theatrical directors, is putting on a show of highlights from Schwartz's career, including songs from "Godspell," "Pippin," "Rags" and "Pocahontas."

Tune presents students

Barbara Tune presented her piano students in a spring recital entitled "Parade of Soles" May 4 in the Martha Ann Women's Club.

Following the recital, Mrs. Tune recognized students participating in the Lubbock Music competition in February and the Abilene Music Festival in March.

In addition, she presented guild certificates to the following.

Hobbyist: Zipporah Peoples, Katie Kerley, Jacob Crawford and Joshua Kelley.

District: Jackie McKamie, Brandon Robbins, Emily Long, Hayley Grant and Vanessa Jones.

State: Traci Jordan, Audra Reneau, Amber Rich and Melinda Hernandez.

National: Stephanie Parmer, Sara Cantu, Wendy Proffitt, Jason Hall, Crisida Tyler and Laurie Kerley.

Mrs. Tune also recognized three students of which this is their last year of piano with her. Those students are Jacob Crawford (seven years), Josh Kelley (four years), and Casity Reneau (ten years).

Special awards went to the following students.

Most Promising Beginners: Stephanie Parmer and Wendy Proffitt.

Highest Guild Grades: Audra Reneau, first, and Stephanie Parmer, second.

Sight Reading: Joshua Kelley.

Rythmn: Laurie Kelley.

Progressive: Crissida Tyler.

Performance: Melinda Hernandez.

Outstanding Student of the Year: Sara Cantu.

Trophies and medals were given to each student receiving an award.

Ask Anne & Nan

By Anne B. Adams and Nancy Nash-Cummings

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I had a rhubarb wine recipe and misplaced it. I made the wine once and it was really good. Could you see if you could find me the recipe? — LESSIE FLEENOR, Bristol, Tenn.

DEAR LESSIE: We had just a terrible time finding even one rhubarb wine recipe and have no idea if it is the one you had — probably not. This one is a New England recipe from an old cookbook called "Mrs. Appleyard's Kitchen." (If our readers have other recipes, we would love to have them.)

RHUBARB WINE: Cut up enough stalks of young, pink rhubarb into inch pieces to make one gallon. Pound into pulp with a wooden mallet or other available wooden utensil. Add a gallon of boiling water. Let stand several hours. Strain through a fine sieve and measure it. For each quart of liquid, add three cups of sugar. Put into a large, well-scalded crock.

It will soon start fermenting and will keep doing so for about three weeks. When it stops bubbling and hissing, strain into sterilized cider jugs, using a funnel and filter paper.

Let stand about three days to settle, with tops in place but not tightened. Strain and filter again into sterilized quart bottles. If it is not perfectly clear, filter once again. Then cork the bottles tightly and store them in a cool place. It should be ready to drink in about five months.

CAUTION: When making rhubarb wine, use only crockery and glass containers. Crocks, jugs, bottles and corks are all available from the Cumberland General Store, #1 Hwy 68, Crossville, TN 38555 (1-800-334-4640).

While we're addressing the wine question, Ruth Tindall of Belleview, Fla., is looking for a recipe for homemade wine that uses frozen grape concentrate, water, yeast and sugar (she thinks).

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I am looking for a piece of equipment that looks exactly like a video camera that can be mounted on the outside of the house to prevent vandalism. The camera has a light on it to make it appear as if it were videotaping. — KAY RIEDEL, Topeka, Kan.

DEAR KAY: The "Real-Look Security Camera" is available from the Heartland America catalog, 6978 Shady Oak Rd., Eden Prairie, MN 55344-3453 (1-800-229-2901). It's item #K3-4634 and costs $39.99; shipping is free.

The description reads: "Designed for realism, this camera features a state-of-the-art mini-CCD look and battery-operated, flashing LED that gives the camera an 'on' appearance." It has a heavy gauge rust-resistant metal cover and a weatherproof design.

GADGET OF THE WEEK: Recently, we were given a wonderful little item made in Denmark called the JarPop. It opens the vacuum seal on jars so that the lids spin free without effort. It works like a charm and takes the dread out of trying to get those pesky lids to budge. We tracked down the source of the JarPop so we could pass the info on to our readers. It can be ordered for $3, plus $1 shipping, from JarPop, Cedar Fresh Home Products, 2400 Airport Rd., Kinston, NC 28501.

Hospital building to bear Helmsley name

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — A new building bearing the name of Leona and Harry Helmsley won't be offering any lavish accommodations.

Mrs. Helmsley turned out Thursday for the groundbreaking ceremony of Helmsley Pavilion, a new-and-improved version of Greenwich Hospital.

The hotel moguls donated $10 million toward the $117 million building to thank Greenwich Hospital, where Helmsley, 87, was treated for pneumonia in September. The Helmsleys are Greenwich residents.

"The staff was wonderful, care was exceptional and my Harry got better," Mrs. Helmsley, 75, said at the ceremony.

About 80 percent of the hospital will be torn down and replaced.

Clarke expresses concern for coral

SINGAPORE (AP) — Arthur C. Clarke has taken millions of readers into deep space with such books as "2001: A Space Odyssey." Now his concern is the bottom of the sea.

The science-fiction writer warned that scuba divers are ruining the undersea environment. Scuba divers often are blamed for littering, killing fish and plants and damaging coral with anchors or dropped equipment.

The 79-year-old Clarke, who uses a wheelchair and said he's more mobile under water than on land, was in Singapore on Wednesday for a two-day conference on scuba diving.

Clarke has spent 30 years campaigning against the illicit harvesting of coral on the coast of Sri Lanka, where he has lived since 1956.

SHS class of 1936 holds reunion

Snyder mid-term class of 1936 held a three-day reunion April 19-21 in celebration of the 60th anniversary of the event.

Guests attending were Edna Mae (Dunnam) Bunt of Coleman, and Mr. and Mrs. Willard Gladson and J.R. Huckabee of Snyder.

Mayme Lee Crowder, coordinator for the program and arrangements, accompanied the group on their tour of the Snyder area. Their tour included stops at the Scurry County Museum and the restored Ritz Theatre where "Welcome Class of 1936" was dispalyed on the marquee.

A banquet was held on the 20th at Rudy's. Mrs. Crowder had a cake made, and she used little school houses as favors. Her daughter made rose-bordered programs for the banquet.

Charles Lewis gave a quiz on senior activities, and Forrest Beavers brought a 1934 Tiger's Tale.

More Americans expected to vacation

NEW YORK (AP) — Premium prices at the pumps? Perhaps.

But a 2,681-mile trip across country from Los Angeles to Washington, D.C., will cost only about $12 more in gas this year than it did in 1995.

"Pocketbooks may be squeezed, but they're not snapped shut," said Graeme Clarke of the American Automobile Association.

In fact, 30.4 million Americans are expected to travel at least 100 miles this summer, an increase of 1 percent over last year's record 30 million vacationers, Clarke said.

Vacationers will take a record 232 million trips, an increase of 2 percent over last summer, said William S. Norman, president of the Travel Industry Association of America.

A family of two adults and two children can expect to pay an average of $193 per day for food and lodging — the same as last year. It is the second consecutive year the price of lodging and meals held steady, AAA said.

While more people plan trips, spending is expected to match last year's average of $1,076 per trip, because people are looking for bargains, Norman said.

"Last summer, we talked upscale and lavish," he said. "This summer, we are talking family and moderate economizing."

A telephone survey of 1,500 adults found 27 percent expect to travel more this summer, while 11 percent plan to travel less. Forty-three percent expect to travel the same amount and 16 percent plan to stay home.

Eighty percent, or 187 million vacations, will be road trips, an increase of 1 percent over last year. Seventeen percent, or close to 39 million trips, will be taken by air.

New York University physicist, Alan Sokal...

Is it gibberish or merely obscure? Scientist hoaxes academic journal

NEW YORK (AP) — Alan Sokal, a physicist at New York University, conducted a little experiment recently. He wrote an article that was close to pure gibberish and sent it off to a respected social science journal.

Then he sat back and waited to see if it would be published.

It was.

The article, an impenetrable bramble of physics and philosophy that appears to argue that the physical world does not exist, landed in the pages of the spring-summer issue of Social Text, a leftist journal of cultural studies published by the Duke University Press.

Then Sokal, adding insult to injury, wrote a gloating article about his own hoax for Lingua Franca, a magazine about academia.

"What's going on here?" he wrote in the follow-up article. "Could the editors really not have realized that my article was written as a parody?"

Well, no, the editors of Social Text concede.

In fact, editor Andrew Ross said Thursday, he thought the Sokal article was simply a bad attempt at philosophy by a scientist. He included it in the journal's new issue — which is devoted to a rift between scientists and cultural critics of science — as a "curio" intended to reflect the scientists' side of the debate.

But why would anyone publish something that appeared to be nonsense?

"Physics is obscure enough as it is, and philosophy is obscure enough as it is," Ross said, "and when you have physicists who are writing in that genre, then what they write is obscure. But there's a difference between obscurity and gibberish, right?"

Well, yes, sometimes. But consider what Sokal wrote.

In the opening paragraph, he lays out his basic theme: There are scientists, he asserts, who "cling to the dogma imposed by the long post-Enlightenment hegemony over the Western intellectual outlook, which can be summarized briefly as follows: that there exists an external world, whose properties are independent of any individual human being and indeed of humanity as a whole."

In other words, some dumb scientists actually believe that the world exists.

There follow many pages of impossibly dense scientific mumbo-jumbo, all supported by lengthy footnotes. From time to time, Sokal slips in little parenthetical zingers.

"Mathematically, Einstein breaks with the tradition dating back to Euclid (which is inflicted on high-school students even today!)," he writes. It's not hard to imagine him chuckling over his keyboard.

In his post-mortem in Lingua Franca, Sokal talks about how, at another point in his article, "I suggest that the 'morphogenic field' — a bizarre New Age idea proposed by Rupert Sheldrake — constitutes a cutting-edge theory of quantum gravity."

Not quite. Morphogenesis is defined as the structural changes occurring during the development of an organism.

"In sum," he says, "I intentionally wrote the article so that any competent physicist or mathematician (or undergraduate physics or math major) would realize that it is a spoof."

But not the editors of Social Text.

"I think Andrew (Ross) made a mistake, that's all," said Stanley Aronowitz, a professor of sociology at the City University of New York's Graduate Center and a founder of Social Text. Sokal's article, he said, "borders on gibberish and shouldn't have been published."

Still, Aronowitz and Ross insist that while Sokal may have succeeded in his prank, he failed in his larger aim of spoofing their work, which attempts to analyze science from a cultural perspective, much as postmodern critics have been deconstructing literature for years.

"It was a bad parody," Aronowitz said. "He just doesn't get it."

Sokal was out of town Thursday and couldn't be reached for comment. But he wrote in Lingua Franca that he decided to write the hoax out of a concern, heightened by his own left-wing politics, that leftist social scientists were spreading "nonsense and sloppy thinking" about science.

"Social Text's acceptance of my article exemplifies the intellectual arrogance of Theory — postmodernist literary theory, that is — carried to its logical extreme," he wrote.

Ross said Sokal's prank reflects the arrogance of scientists who resent anyone outside their field attempting to critique it. That, he said, was the basic point of Social Text's special issue. So in a sense, the Sokal hoax fit right in.

"I cannot really say I feel snakebit," he said defiantly. And then he paused.

"Well," he conceded, "I suppose I can."

Study says cellular phones interfere with pacemakers

SEATTLE (AP) — Cellular telephones — especially digital ones — can change the pace of pacemakers or speed up people's pulses when used near the heart-regulating devices, researchers said Thursday.

The interference occurred in more than half the 975 patients tested in a clinical study, according to the first large-scale U.S. study of the subject.

"Whatever kind of phone you're using, it's best to avoid carrying it around turned on in your breast pocket," said Dr. David Hayes, a co-author of the study, which was funded by Wireless Technology Research, a Washington-based organization that is funded by the telecommunications industry.

Interference occurred most often when a phone's antenna rested directly over the pacemaker, and only rarely when a phone was held at the ear, said Hayes, director of pacemaker services at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

Analog phones, the most common type of wireless phone available in the United States, caused interference in just 3.1 percent of the tests.

The patients were tested with five different types of cellular phones held at the ear and at different positions over the pacemaker. Interference, as defined by changes in an electrocardiogram, was seen in 53.6 percent of the patients.

The problems included "temporarily inhibiting or turning off the pacemaker and causing the pacemaker to pace the heart at an inappropriately fast rate," Hayes said.

The results, similar to those of earlier studies, were presented at the 17th annual meeting of the North American Society of Pacing and Electrophysiology.

Phones using North American Digital Cellular technology, the type most commonly available in the United States, caused interference in 28 percent of the tests, the study found. NADC phones also showed interference when the phone was ringing or being dialed, Hayes said.

Tim Ayers, a spokesman for the Cellular Telecommunications Industry Association, said the study contained "no surprises." He said new methods to shield medical devices and cell phones are helping to lessen the problem.

Many hospitals already restrict the use of cellular phones or recommend against their use around pacemakers and other electronic medical equipment.

A special gift from a master teacher

DEANIE FRANCIS MILLS

My son received his packet from Mrs. Gressett today.

Sue Gressett was my son's third grade teacher at Northeast Elementary, a gifted master teacher if there ever was one. Much to our familial grief, she was reassigned to teach another grade at another school before our daughter could be blessed by being in her room. Not a school year has gone by since then that her name hasn't been mentioned lovingly at least once.

At the end of the third grade, she had each of the kids write an essay, and she told us then that she always returns the essays to them when they graduate high school.

Oh, but she did so much more.

Through the years, whenever Dustin's picture was in the paper for being in a play or winning an award or whatever, he would always receive a little note a few days later from Mrs. Gressett, containing the newspaper clipping and telling him how proud she was of him, how much she had enjoyed having him as a student, and how much she loved him. We kept each note from her and placed them lovingly in his scrapbook.

Adolescence was a particularly rough road for our son. Overnight, it seemed, a happy, bright, energetic little boy turned surly and rebellious, and it took all our energies and vigilance and love to help him through that twisting, torturous path and onto a smooth highway to his bright future.

One day during the worst of it, while wearily shoving a grocery cart down the aisle of the supermarket, I happened upon Mrs. Gressett, who immediately recognized me, remembered Dustin, and asked how he was.

"Not very good, to tell you the truth," I said anxiously. "He's not happy at all and his grades could be so much better. I just don't know what's wrong with him."

She nodded wisely and said, "Well, obviously it's because Dustin is such a perfectionist. He wants his work to be just right, and if it can't be, he doesn't want to do it. I remember that clearly from when he was in my class."

I thought, yeah right. Perfectionism? That kid? Ha!!

But I started watching him a little more closely when he talked about school, listening more carefully ... and sure enough, I realized that Mrs. Gressett had been right on the money. After that, we approached his schoolwork differently, and though he's not exactly an honor graduate this year, he is doing much better.

How could she know? How could she remember?

She's a gifted, master teacher, that's how.

Today, we received a thick packet from Mrs. Gressett. In it we discovered, not just the promised essay, but a whole file full of Dustin's nine-year-old drawings, the wishes of his heart, the longings of his young soul — and more newspaper clippings full of his little accomplishments, as well as group pictures with some of his oldest and dearest friends. There was also a poem about his class, written by his old teacher, and of course, a private, handwritten note for Dustin.

"I was a pretty neat little kid, wasn't I?" he asked as he wonderingly turned the pages, marveling at the photos of him and his friends, remembering the awards which he once collected proudly, before bumping down that rough old teenage road. "I was drawing dinosaurs even then!"

Sitting together, the pages between us, we talked about friends who'd moved away and friends who were still around, Mrs. Gressett, the joys of his childhood, the trials of his teen years, his upcoming graduation, and the promise of his future.

"You and Dad did the right things," he said quietly. "The trouble I got into was my own and had nothing to do with my parents. I'm just glad you hung in there with me. I've been thinking a lot lately about how much I'll miss this place when I'm away at school. I'll miss the country, and I'll miss you."

We talked about what he might like to do with his life, possible majors in college ... and about Mrs. Gressett. "Mrs. Gressett was the only teacher I ever had who believed in us no matter what we did, and continued believing in us no matter what happened. She made each one of us feel special."

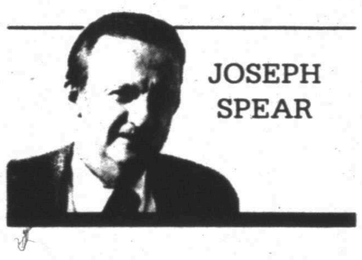

I wondered how many of these precious packets must have been mailed out through the years by those two loving hands, how many lives had been touched forever after by a school teacher who always knew — even when others gave up — just how unique and special each of these young lives truly is.

Maybe some of those kids who never went through the rough spots, and their parents, took that thick packet from their old teacher for granted. Maybe they meant to thank her but soon got busy and forgot.

By writing this, I'm not just passing on our love and appreciation to a master teacher — I'm thanking every teacher out there who ever saw the diamond in the rough, who ever loved a kid no matter what, who ever believed in them all as being "special," no matter what color their skin or what neighborhood they lived in or how "difficult" they were.

I'm here to tell you, as long as one of your students draws breath, your work will never, ever die.

The thieves wore pinstripes

JOSEPH SPEAR

Every once in a while, I have this nightmare in which I am locked in a room with a giant pie chart that shows how Joe's hide is being sliced up by various components of the economy.

There's a huge slice labled "oil companies." Another is designated "banks." Another is earmarked "cable TV." There's an "insurance industry" slice and a "cereal companies" slice. Only one little chunk of the pie chart is devoted to "other," which includes shelter, clothing, reading material and an occasional round of golf.

I think this means I have a deep-seated fear that I am being devoured by Greedy Creeps, and I instructed the Spear Foundation to investigate whether there is a basis in fact for this anxiety. Sure enough, the findings indicate that these six segments of the modern economy are threatening to eat us alive.

I suspect Big Oil is the worst, what with their periodic efforts to push gasoline prices into the stratosphere. They are certainly the most deceptive, because of their talent for conjuring up creative excuses couched in credible-sounding economic gibberish and oiltalk. "A jump in the price of West Texas Intermediate Spot Market Crude spurred another spike in pump prices today." Who among us can challenge that logic?

There are some of the highlights from the SF report:

—There are such things as legal thieves, and they dress in banker's blue. The cost of money is at a historic low, yet bank profits are at a historic high — $48.8 billion last year.

Banks are reaping obscene fortunes from personal loans, for which they charge an average of 15 percent interest. We used to refer to such practices as loan-sharking. We used to refer to such interest rates as vigorish.

So far, as best anyone can count, banks have invented at least 225 different kinds of fees for handling your money. There are deposit fees and withdrawal fees and fees for bouncing checks and a "deposit-item return fee" for depositing bad checks — even if customers are not aware they are depositing rubber.

There are fees for speaking with tellers and fees for using their stupid ATM machines, which were invented to obviate the need for costly human contact but are now being exploited for huge profits. According to the Center for the Study of Responsive Law, banks netted $2.2 billion in ATM transactions in 1995. Recently, the industry adopted a rule that allows banks on both ends of a noncustomer ATM exchange to collect a fee.

—Anybody who thinks the cable-television industry learned a lesson when Congress re-regulated them had best think again. According to the Consumer Federation of America, these Greedy Creeps zapped us for $6 billion a year in overcharges from 1986 to 1992, when they were unregulated. They are now free of the government yoke again, and already Tele-Communications Inc. and Tim Warner have jacked up rates as much as 10 percent.

—Ever heard of Operator Service Providers? They are the small long-distance carriers who contract to handle calls in public phone booths and then charge outrageous sums for them. I recently got smacked with a $9 charge to a wrong number. AT&T's fee for the same call would have been $2.65. Long distance is a $70 million business, so we're not talking small change here.

—What can you say about insurance that hasn't been said? It's a $2.5 trillion industry that screams poor-mouth as it squats on cash reserves of $160 billion and rakes in the dough writing policies and denying benefits. It's a shameless business.

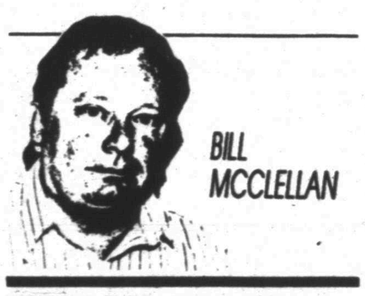

—You haven't hard much about the cereal makers lately, but really, what can be said after they've pushed the price of flakes and crispies and puffs and brans to five bucks a box?

Joe will get the Greedy Creeps. Joe will walk, use money orders, read books, write letters, buy term and eat yogurt.

That will put a dent in their profits.

In my dreams.

Court rules whites can't be hated

BILL MCCLELLAN

White people in Illinois can't be the victims of a hate crime because they aren't members of a "protected class."

That's what the state courts there have ruled.

Illinois state law says a hate crime is an assault or some similar crime inspired by race, religion, gender or several other specific attributes.

However, the courts have ruled that the law applies only when the target belongs to a "protected class," such as a racial minority.

In at least two cases so far, justices have ruled that since whites were victims of certain crimes, the perpetrators of violence against them could walk. Charges dismissed.

You should know that these cases weren't black-on-white crimes. They were actually white-on-white crimes, aimed at blacks.

The latest involved a 19-year-old sleeze named Damon Nance, who helped build a cross and set it on fire in a family's lawn. Nance is white and the family he targeted is white. But it seems that a member of the family had been dating a black man.

Nance didn't like that.

"The cross was burned in order to tell black people to stay out of this neighborhood," Nance said.

The cross burning earned Nance three years in prison under Illinois' hate crime law. But an appeals court recently overturned the sentence, saying that since Nance's immediate targets were white, and not a minority, they can't be the victims of a hate crime under Illinois law.

So, Nance is free to terrorize again. Charges against four others were dismissed.

The girl's mother doesn't understand.

"It was still a hate crime," said Carla Camp. "It was against my daughter and her boyfriend because he's black. That's hatred."

True, but that's not what the law says.

Wait. Actually, that is what the law says, but that's not the way the law is being interpreted.

"I think the law clearly was designed to cover this type of situation," said Betsy Shuman-Moore, a lawyer with Chicago Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights, who helped draft the law. She said the courts are interpreting it too narrowly.

Judges should recognize that any crime inspired by bigotry is a hate crime, she said.

Something like: a hate crime is a hate crime is a hate crime is a hate crime — no matter who commits it or who the victims are.

It would seem to make common sense, but the truth is, logic was tossed out of the courtroom years ago.

One other sad commentary:

Last Tuesday in San Antonio a woman gave a speech at a fund-raiser for a women's shelter.

Before the event, she attacked the news media for not reporting enough on domestic violence.

Then she proceeded to banish all cameras and tape recorders from the speech.

By the way, the fund-raiser brought in $32,000 for the women's shelter.

The speaker? Marcia Clark, lead prosecutor in the O.J. Simpson murder trial. For her humanitarian efforts, she pocketed $35,000.

Where's the justice?

Editorial Roundup

Felons over free world students

The San Antonio Express-News

No one — no one — would ever say that Texans care more about convicted felons than we do public school students.

But, without a doubt, that's the appearance.

There are interesting parallels as both groups have exploded in size since the 1970s.

After the Supreme Court ruled Texas' method of funding public education was unconstitutional, the state flailed away for two decades trying to equalize school funding and, as an extension of that, to equalize schools.

The result has been far less than perfect.

In contrast, after a federal court ordered the state to fix its prison system, it was done in fairly short order.

Voters overwhelmingly approved bond packages to build a series of new prisons and state jails that tripled the cell space, from some 48,000 beds in 1990 to about 145,000 today.

However, there is now so much space available that Texas is shopping around for other states' prisoners. Twenty-two months after the state agreed to build 18 state jails with room for 25,000 nonviolent offenders, only about 2,250 beds are filled, the Dallas Morning News reports.

We're not suggesting that Texas voters and lawmakers ignore prisons in favor of schools. Sadly, the jails probably will be filled eventually, and more felons behind bars means a lower crime rate.

But wouldn't it be as wise or wiser an investment if lawmakers and voters were as dedicated to funding schools? It is possible.

And, if in 20 years Texas has the nation's best school system, it probably won't need the biggest prison system.

On sobriety checkpoints

The Marshall News Messenger

Highway checkpoints have some staying power as a means for regulating social behavior, but we have reservations about them. We'll also admit occasional amusement.

The Associated Press reported ... about the reactions of some motorists in Keller, Texas. Seeing a flashing highway sign with the legend "narcotics checkpoint ahead," some drivers made U-turns or tossed items out of windows before reaching the fictitious checkpoint. But watching police swept down upon the people who were "littering" or "making illegal turns" and gave them traffic citations. A small amount of marijuana was seized.

We look with far more sympathy, however, upon the average Keller driver who is not in possession of illegal drugs. The average driver wouldn't know that the "narcotics checkpoint" was bogus, either, and might choose simply to avoid the checkpoint to avoid the "wait."

Now, Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) is coming forward with ways the Texas Legislature might make legal the establishment of "sobriety checkpoints."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled in 1994 that sobriety checkpoints are unconstitutional because the standards for their creation were different statewide. MADD proposes to provide such guidelines for state law enforcement officials.

At first blush, DWI and narcotics checkpoints appear only as effective tools combatting drunk driving and the illegal transportation of drugs. People shouldn't drive drunk, and they shouldn't serve as mules for narcotics traffickers.

But there are already laws against both circumstances.

Most people obey the laws. Checkpoints gather together the just and the unjust, and they represent an unacceptable level of harassment of the just.

It boils down to this: People who are breaking no laws should be free to travel the highways without official interference. Checkpoints weigh too heavily against this civil liberty, and we encourage (our legislators) to oppose new proposals placing travel restrictions on Texans.

Rather than checkpoints, more effective tools are available through the hiring of more patrol officers, more courts to handle DWI and drug offenses, sure service of the prison terms already authorized for these offenses, and the education programs that groups such as MADD do so well.

A Riggins memorial?

Dear Editor:

I would like to suggest that Snyder erect a 'living' memorial in honor of Marlowe Riggins. The first thing that comes to mind is maybe changing the seldom, if ever used, tennis courts next to the new jail into basketball courts where people from all walks of life and ages can come together and play.

Though my encounters with Marlowe were brief, I'm very proud to have known such a fine young man. He was a champion on all fields he chose to play and was exceptional in all of them as I'm sure you will agree.

I remember one particular incident when I had taken the singer, Robert Earl Keen, to one of Jerry Worsham's classes to sing and play the guitar and talk about life as a musician, after he had played a particular song, Marlowe spoke up and said, "You know, I've never really listened to country music but I liked that, that was cool."

As we were driving home, Robert was quiet for a moment then he said, "Man, I was nervous, I'd rather play for 2,000 people than to play for a bunch of high school kids. The last thing that kid said made me feel good; that was worth the trip. I've never seen kids that age so articulate and well-behaved."

I assured him it was purely accidental and they must have been tired. We laughed and drove on and when we pulled into the driveway he said, "Thanks, I needed that."

I cannot remember such a tragedy as this in all my time growing up here and since my return. Maybe if we could put up something like a few goals at these abandoned courts it would give young and old a place to blow off steam instead of pulling triggers on Sunday afternoon and taking one of Snyder's finest.

Even though this didn't physically happen here, it is no less painful, nor closer to home; we still heard the shot.

If there is anything that can be done, whether it's a basketball court or something else, where people can go and practice the many alternatives to killing someone, it should be made a top priority.

There is a commercial that's been playing during the NBA games where two guys get into an argument over a call on a playground court and as they are about to swing at each other one steps back, takes the high road and hands the ball to his opponent and says, "We get the next one," and they turn and continue to play. I would never venture so far as to say what Marlowe might have said but an idea that came to mind might read:

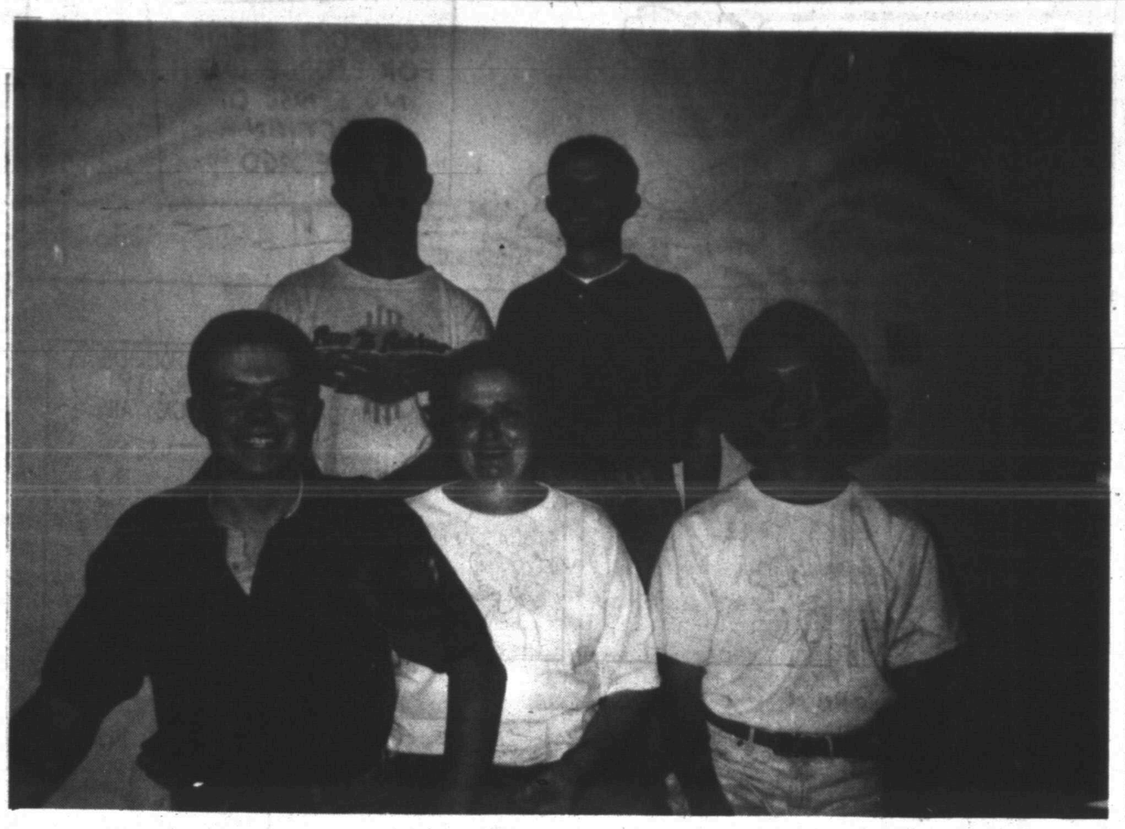

Marlowe Riggins Memorial Courts

"Respect the game, respect yourself, have fun."

Sincerely

Barry Tubb

Study: anti-cholesterol medication saves money

DALLAS (AP) — One of the nation's first anti-cholesterol drugs, which reduces the risk of death from coronary disease among heart patients, also may help them save thousands of dollars in hospital costs, according to a Scandinavian doctors' study.

By reducing hospitalizations for acute cardiovascular disease, simvastatin therapy almost pays for itself, the doctors wrote in a American Heart Association journal published this week.

That could be good news for tens of millions of Americans who annually fill prescriptions of drugs to lower cholesterol and other fats.

"In the United States, the resulting reduction in hospitalization costs over the 5.4 years of the trial would be $3,872 per patient, reducing the effective cost of simvastatin by 88 percent to (28 cents) per day," the team headed by Dr. Terje R. Pedersen of Oslo, Norway wrote.

Collecting hospital admissions data on 4,444 male and female coronary heart disease patients 35 to 70 years old, the principal investigator for the Scandinavian Simvastatin Survival Study evaluated the $2.75-a-day drug's impact on use of health care resources.

"The internal medicine doctors, the cardiologists that want to prevent heart disease with a pill, have never shown that it is cheaper in the long run to do that in comparison with people who are not treated and later suffer heart attacks, then die or have bypass surgery or angioplasty," said William Harris, director of the University of Kansas Medical Center's Lipid Research Lab.

"The burning question is whether it is more cost-effective for prevention than to treat only the people that get heart disease.

"At the end of the day, this is a very nice start to try to get a grasp on what is the cost of prevention," he said Thursday. "It should certainly not be the last word. There are too many other unquantifiable issues that are raised that you cannot put a dollar value on."

The so-called 4S study, a landmark examination of the health effects of lowering cholesterol, showed that giving the drug to heart patients reduced their hospital admissions by one-third during five years of treatment.

Initial results, presented in November 1994, showed that the treatment reduced the risk of death by 30 percent in patients who already had suffered heart attacks or angina pain.

Pedersen, head of cardiology at Aker University Hospital in Oslo, said in the latest 4S follow-up that simvastatin — considered the most potent of a class of anti-cholesterol drugs called statins — may prove to be more cost-effective than blood pressure lowering medications now used by five times as many patients.

But another study this year says statins should be reserved for patients in imminent danger of heart problems, such as those with known cardiac disease.

The study, published in The Journal of the American Medical Association, said simvastatin, marketed as Zocor by Merck & Co. of Rahway, N.J., and other statins at higher levels caused rodent cancer.

Merck, which provided a grant for the 4S study, has disputed the rodent tests' importance, saying human testing has not shown an increased cancer risk.

Dr. Scott M. Grundy, director for the Center for Human Nutrition at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas, said cost-effectiveness studies like the Scandinavians' are among the hottest topics in medicine now.

"The results of the original 4S study were earthshaking — a study of the first magnitude; that had to do with safety vs. benefit," he said. "This latest study has to do with cost vs. benefit.

Western Texas College honor rolls

President's List announced

Eleven students from Western Texas College were named to the President's List for the spring 1996 semester, the highest scholastic ranking achieveable at WTC.

To be honored, students had to maintain a 4.0 GPA while taking at least 15 academic credit hours.

Four of the students making the President's List were from Snyder. They were Susan Bigham, Joyce Boyd, James Fillpot and Teresa Kaye Scott. Also from Scurry County was Christopher Lambaren of Hermleigh.

Three on the list are from Colorado City, William Fred Everett, Sylvia Flores and Justin Wade Goebel.

Others were Stuart Coty Brasuell of Sweetwater; Stacy Hinson of Brownfield; and Craig Bailey Roberts of Marfa.

Merit List announced

Western Texas College has announced its Merit List students for spring 1996 including 29 from Scurry County. Some 26 of those recognized list Snyder addresses.

The Merit List is comprised of students enrolled for more than eight semester hours but fewer than 15 semester hours who earn a GPA of at least 3.5.

From Snyder, those on the list include Charles Ray Beasley, Claudina Bogard, Kathie L. Boulware, Robbie D'ann Braziel, Jim'Ed Michael Cope, April Jan Cowen, Arline Day, William Blake Durham, Robert Glenn Early, Dan Raymond Hicks Jr. and Barbara Justiss.

Others from Snyder are Edgar Wayne Knox, Clay Ryan Koening, Debora Lang, Tammy J. Logston, Melody Gayle Martin, Michael Glenn McLeod, John Paul Michel, Melissa Myers, Jonathan Dane Patrick, Mary Jo Patrick, David Perez, Christopher Jay Roemisch, Valerie Renee Sanchez, Michael Simmons and Jerilynn Tucker.

Also from Scurry County are three Ira students, Brenda Kaye Crowder, James Justin Donelson and Wendy Wilson.

Others on the Merit List are four Mitchell County residents, Maria Luisa Calderon, Matthew Austin Helm and Jefferson Leath Trulock, all of Colorado City, and Sheila Hale of Westbrook.

From other area towns are four from Roscoe, Stacey Ann Chaney, Fidel Martinez Jr., Carol Mulanax and Toni Tate; one from Rotan, Vicky Freeman; and two from Sweetwater, Bryan Lee Hoover and Brenda Lynn Sharp.

Two of those on the list are out-of-state or out-of-country residents. They are Tona Wright of Moriarty, N.M. and Kelly Smith of Wimborne, Alberta, Canada.

Dean's List announced

Forty students at Western Texas College appeared on the Dean's List for the 1996 spring semester.

To be named, students must have a 3.5 GPA and carry at least 15 hours of course work.

Twelve students from Snyder were recognized: Haley Boaz, Kimberly Sue Brade, Cindi Burrow, Michelle Lee Frazier, Melissa Diane Garvin, Sharon Lynn Gill, Christina Gonzales, Brett Michael Kennedy, Terry Lanell Kubena, Dale Elaine Neves, Jason Albert Osuna, and Regina Gay Sterling.

Rebecca Ann Sweet from Hermleigh also appeared on the list.

Others named from area towns were Jennifer Carol Morris of Colorado City; Carolyn Ann Tidwell of Sweetwater; and Rebecca Suzanne Gruben of Roscoe.

Also named to the Dean's List from various Texas cities were

Matthew Michael Braden and Forrest Allen Breeden of San Angelo; Christopher Jay Brown of Hamlin; Jonathan David Carroll of Hawley; Michale Dale Daniels of Panhandle; David Alan Debusk of Brady; Tonya Diersing of Hamlin; Christopher Allen Dry of Winters; John Jeffrey Hogue of Abilene; Colin Lynn Howeth of Haskell; and Jeremy Joseph Laak of Burnet.

Others were Jana Marie McCloy of Morse; Daniel Roy Moates of Duncanville; Ricky Lynn Partain of Panhandle; Kaycee Plugge of Burwell; Chrysta Leigh Ponder of Seymour; Lila Jo Rector of Knox City; April Lynn Reves of Avoca; Edward Robert Russell of Mineral Wells; Brian Smith of Aspermont; and Jaime Lynn Stewart of San Angelo,

From out-of-state was Emily Ann Schaffer of North Platte, Neb. and, from out-of-country, Ryan William Swagar of Calgary, Alberta, Canada; and Morten Vildhøj of Denmark.

11 pounds of cocaine seized

HEARNE (AP) — A routine traffic stop in Hearne led to seizure of about 11 pounds of cocaine and the arrest of an Oklahoma man authorities characterized as a major drug dealer.

Hearne police stopped a car driven by a 43-year-old Oklahoman on Texas 6 about 6 p.m. Wednesday and found about $7,500 in cash, dozens of firearms and cocaine worth an estimated $500,000, said Police Chief Johnny Sessums.

The man has been charged with a felony charge of possession with intent to deliver. Bond has been set at $1 million. However, police withheld his identity and whereabouts, saying disclosure might endanger his life.

Sgt. Dan Jones of the Brazos Valley Narcotic Task Force said agents from the task force, Oklahoma City Police narcotics division and the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration completed the delivery of the seized cocaine Thursday to a house in Oklahoma City.

Snyder Daily News named to new Media Honor Roll

AUSTIN — The Snyder Daily News was recently named to the Media Honor Roll, a program sponsored by a Leadership TASB project team, by Snyder ISD and Ira ISD.

Criteria for the nomination included media representatives' efforts to get to know the superintendent, board president, and the district's mission and goals; report school news in a fair, accurate and balanced manner; give a high profile to positive news about schools; visit the schools and maintain a policy of no surprises by sharing information with school officials.

In most cases, local school boards passed a formal resolution to add names of media from their communities. The Media Honor Roll will appear in the May issue of "Texas Lone Star," and certificates were created for presentation at the local level.

The Media Honor Roll was initiated by a Leadership TASB project team of board members.

Leadership TASB is a development program designed by school board members for school board members. The program is open to all Texas trustees who have fulfilled 30 hours of certified school board member training credit and have demonstrated leadership ability on their local board and in their community,

Q&A

What is 'GHB?'

In response to the growing concern among parents, educators and other affected members of our community, Snyder Daily News in cooperation with the Al-ANON support groups and the Snyder Area Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, is devoting this weekly column to your questions and concerns about the increasing threat of substance abuse in our community.

SDN will feature one or two of your questions each and every week. CADA, Al-ANON, and AA will attempt to answer each question, discuss each new topic, offer hope in a solution to this growing problem our community faces. Our question for today's column is:

"We have been hearing more and more about a new drug that supposedly is used for promoting strength training, body building and weight loss called "GHB." Are there any adverse side effects associated with this drug?"

GHB (Gamma Hydroxybutyrate Acid) is an illegal drug that has become alarmingly common in the West-Central Texas area. Street names for the drug include: "Liquid Ecstasy," "Somatomax," "Scoop" or "Grevious Bodily Harm."

GHB causes severe confusion and coma. It often causes breathing to stop. When mixed with alcohol or other drugs, it is especially dangerous. It is purchased most frequently at night clubs where it is often added to alcoholic drinks, a particularly hazardous practice. It was once thought that it might be of benefit to "body builders" due to stimulating growth hormones, but it turns out that this is not true. It has an insignificant effect on muscle building.

GHB is distributed in powder or in solution (rarely in pill form). It is not easy to detect when mixed in drinks, and it has been used by unscrupulous persons to "dose" other unsuspecting individuals.

GHB works in the central nervous system to cause mental depression and often stops breathing, especially when mixed with alcohol. This often requires that the person have a tube inserted into his/her lungs and be connected to a ventilating machine. It may cause vomiting into the lungs, a serious problem.

Several of the victims said, after recovering, that they did not know what happened, which is often the case because it is almost tasteless in mixed drinks. It is also risky because the user may be raped, murdered or robbed under the influence of the drug. There are reports from paramedic personnel that some employees of night clubs have been given the drug in their drinks.

As with other illegal drugs, the user doesn't really know what they are getting because it is made in illegal laboratories. It may be of bad quality, or even a completely different drug from what is expected. Dr. David Smith, Texas Commissioner of Health said, "We've got to get the word out to users and would-be users. GHB is dangerous and deadly."

Twenty-four hour confidential information is available by calling (915) 573-1141 or 1-800-659-6722. Information on help groups and individual's phone numbers may be found in the SDN Community Calendar.

Send your questions to P.O. Box 695, Snyder, TX 79550. Or you may call (915) 573-1141. All questions and personal inquiries may be submitted anonymously.

Photo identified

Charles Anderson was the first person to identify the man in the forefront of this photo as W.T. Baze. The photo depicts Mr. Baze in his blacksmith shop in about 1916. The shop was located on 26th Street and Deep Creek. No one has identified the man in the background. In conjunction with Scurry County Museum, the Snyder Daily News is publishing a series of old photographs which need to be identified. The first person to identify the subjects in writing wins a meal at Golden Corral. A new photo will be published next Sunday.

Senior Center News

'Assisted Living' program set

Bob Berryman, whose firm is interested in building an assisted living facility in Snyder, will present a program in the Senior Center at 11:30 a.m. Thursday.

Anyone interested in information about the project is invited to attend and visit with Berryman. Interested persons are invited to pick up survey forms to be returned to him.

The facility would be built with private funds, with the cost to tenants based on apartment size and the degree of assistance needed. Medical personnel would be at the facility around the clock. Tenants can provide their own furnishings or have furnishings provided. Meals can also be furnished.

A food handling workshop for anyone who helps with food service in the center has been moved from Wednesday to Thursday. The meeting begins at 1 p.m. and for those who wrap silverware, serve food or have any connection with the food service should attend.

Senior citizens are invited to wear red, white and blue on Friday in observance of Memorial Day. A special program is planned at 11 a./m., featuring patriotic songs sung with the help of the Sunshine Choir. The center will be closed on May 27 for Memorial Day.

Monday's activities include bridge at 9:30 a.m. and a domino tournament and a Snooker tournament at 10 a.m.

The Scurry County chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons will meet in the conference roon at 1 p.m., following an executive committee meeting at 11:15 a.m.

A program by Hoss Clayton and his band is scheduled at 11 a.m. Tuesday. A 42 Fun Day will begin at 9:30 a.m. Canasta is scheduled at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Skip-Bo at 9:30 a.m. Thursday and bridge at 9:30 a.m. Friday. The exercise class which meets at 11 a.m. each morning will meet at 10:45 Friday due to the Memorial Day program.

Senior citizens are reminded that they are voting for a new representative to the Silver Haired Legislature (SHL) will take place in the center on May 28. Even though this is not a contested race, it is important that all senior citizens vote to show their support of the SHL.

Information about the SHL can be obtained by contacting the Senior Center, located at 2603 Avenue M.

Beaumont man still in custody

BEAUMONT (AP) — A Beaumont man remained in custody without bond Friday after he was accused in a 24-count federal indictment of being the holdup man in a dozen bank heists and fast-food restaurant robberies.

Scyrus Hebert, labeled by police as "the Red Bandanna Bandit," was indicted on 12 counts each of bank robbery and firearms violations that accuse him of a one-man crime wave that netted more than $35,000 from businesses in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area.

Hebert, 24, already was under federal indictment on a robbery and firearms charge in the March 21 holdup at a Bank of America branch in Port Arthur.

The indictment returned Thursday superseded the previous indictment and accuses Hebert in the Bank of America heist and 11 other robberies of fast-food restaurants, a bank and a savings and loan.

Fort Hood soldiers take Army into computer age

FORT HOOD (AP) — A group of 5,000 soldiers aren't learning commands like obey your C.O. and follow the S.O.P. but are getting lessons in RAM, LED and WWW.

The soldiers, part of a project tagged Force XXI, are being trained in the latest front-line technology that will have them connected by computer technology and the Internet. They are learning to use computers that give detailed battleground information to troops and their commanders.

The software being used can monitor enemy and friendly positions on computer screens mounted on military vehicles and foot soldiers will wear video cameras on their helmets to get images into the system.
