Army soldier's funeral uninterrupted

Westboro Baptist Church protesters were a no show

ANDREWS — Despite threatening to protest the funeral of the recently deceased Andrews' soldier, there weren't any Westboro Baptist Church members in attendance Friday.

But hundreds of self-described patriots, war veterans and parents of active duty soldiers lined State Highway 176 in front of the James Roberts Civic Center to honor U.S. Army Sgt. John Castro.

"My youngest son is serving in Afghanistan defending our freedom," said Danny Turnbow, who is retired from the U.S. Army. "If he were killed and we had a memorial, I don't know what I would do if some stupid (person) came and interrupted his service."

Turnbow said he simply wanted to stand up to the protesters and show support and respect for the family.

"The family is grieving, and (Westboro church members) are trying to tell them their son deserved to die," he said. "This isn't right."

The church issued a proclamation earlier this week thanking God for improvised explosive devices and called such funeral services "pagan orgies of idolatrous blasphemy."

Another father of current soldiers in battlefields in the Middle East echoed Turnbow's sentiments.

"My son was shot in Iraq and if he would have died and someone wanted to protest his funeral, I'm not sure I could tolerate it," said Billy Rodriguez about his son, Joshua Rodriguez.

His other son, Jacob Rodriguez, currently is deployed in Afghanistan.

Rodriguez said he can understand what the Castro family is going through because he lost

Architecture is focus of downtown walking tour

By Audrie Palmer
Staff Writer

Residents will be able to view mid-century to modern architectures on a walking tour this morning around the downtown area.

Midland architect Mark Wellen will lead the free tour, which is open to the public. Those wanting to participate should meet at 10 a.m. in Centennial Plaza.

The tour is being held in conjunction with the Inaugural Texas MODern Month, and Wellen said he hopes to raise awareness of the need to preserve some of Midland's buildings.

"There are great examples of mid-century and modern architecture here," he said looking across Centennial Plaza Friday afternoon.

The tour will be about a mile of walking covering a two-block-by-four-block area and will include about 20 buildings officials have identified as buildings from that period. It's expected to last between one and two hours, Wellen said.

MDC to negotiate deal with Elite Steel Components Ltd.

By Kathleen Thurber
Staff Writer

The Midland Development Corp. voted unanimously Friday to negotiate an economic development deal with a steel supplier that would bring 31 new jobs to the area and more availability in supplies to the construction and oil industries.

After opening in January, the owners of Elite Steel Components Ltd. approached the MDC about helping the company become established in exchange for bringing jobs to Midland with an average annual wage of $41,000, MDC Business Development Director Don Woodward said.

"We don't have a company of this type in Midland," Woodward said.

The total dollar amount of the economic development agreement has not been determined, said Chairman Robert Rendall, who will negotiate for the MDC. The length of the agreement also still is being worked out between the two parties. Rendall said it likely will give the company the ability to hire its 31 employees over a period of time.

"It's a company that's already here, and they're going to be expanding their production capability and will maintain a larger inventory of steel products for the construction industry, so hopefully there'll

Multiple grass fires ignite in Midland

By James Cannon
Staff Writer

Several wild fires plagued Midland firefighters throughout Friday, as it was yet another red flag fire warning day.

The Midland Fire Department was able to contain a grass fire on Farm-to-Market 3503, about six miles west of FM 1788, about 9 p.m. Friday.

The fire, called "The Watts Fire," consumed about 12 acres of grassland and took four Odessa units, five Midland units and one Northeast unit about an hour to get the fire under control. MFD also deployed two road graters to create fire breaks, Battalion Chief Chad Clark said.

The department also used new aerial mapping software and laptops to track the blaze and plan containment zones and a fire perimeter to ensure the fire did not spread in the windy conditions.

Dale Little, the Midland County fire marshal, said the fire started as a result of a truck pulling a chain. No charges have been filed as of press time Friday night.

As soon as firefighters had the FM 3503 fire contained, MFD was alerted to a flare- up of an earlier fire on East County Road 126, between South County Road 1140 and South County Road 1135 shortly after 9 p.m.

Dispatch advised there were hot spots flaring back up from the 2 p.m. fire. Several brush fire rigs, fire engines, front-end loaders and other heavy equipment were dispatched earlier in the day to contain the blaze. Volunteer firefighters, MFD and the Texas Forest Service responded.

The fire has consumed an undetermined amount of grassland, as of press time, and was being controlled by several fire engines Friday night.

There were several other smaller fires throughout the county Friday, including a late night fire in vacant lot near East Pine Avenue and Peterson Street.

Today will be another red flag day as winds will be high, humidity will be low and drought conditions still will persist.

Texas City plants restarting after power outages

By Juan A. Lozano
Associated Press

> "The restart process continues with some production units back online. It will still be a couple of days before the plant reaches planned rates."
> — BILL DAY
> Spokesman for Valero

HOUSTON — Several southeast Texas refineries and chemical plants shut down by power outages earlier this week have restarted, company officials said Friday.

The restart processes at facilities owned by BP, Dow Chemical and Valero were expected to take up to several days to complete.

BP's refinery, which is the third largest in the country and can process up to 460,000 barrels of crude oil each day, began its restart process Thursday evening. The others began restarting Friday.

"The restart process continues with some production units back online. It will still be a couple of days before the plant reaches planned rates," said Bill Day, a spokesman for Valero, whose refinery can process up to 245,000 barrels per day.

Dow Chemical expected the restart process at its facility, which manufactures more than 30 chemical products used in such things as plastics, solvents and pharmaceuticals, to continue through the weekend, said spokeswoman Beth Dombrowa.

The facilities in Texas City, located 35 miles southeast of Houston, were knocked offline after experiencing power outages late Monday evening and early Tuesday morning. There were additional outages Tuesday evening and early Wednesday.

The oil and chemical companies said they held off bringing their facilities back online until they were satisfied the cause of the outages had been determined.

Texas New Mexico Power Co., the electricity provider for the refineries, says it believes the outages were caused by salt and other residue that has built up on transmission equipment at substations and other locations, leading to short circuits. The residue is apparently due to the lack of rain and extremely dry conditions the area has recently been experiencing.

Crews with Texas New Mexico Power were expected by the end of the weekend to finish cleaning all equipment that provides power to those refineries and chemical plants that were affected by the power outages, said company spokeswoman Cathy Garber.

Crews then were expected to move on to cleaning equipment for other industrial customers in Texas City and that work would probably take a couple of weeks to complete, Garber said.

The power outages late Monday evening and early Tuesday morning prompted Texas City officials to advise residents to stay indoors because of potentially harmful chemicals that might have been released in the air when production units were forced to shut down because of the outages. The advisory was lifted several hours later.

Officials with the various oil and chemical refiners said their tests didn't find any harmful levels of emissions as a result of the outages. The Texas Commission on Environmental Quality initially reported that some readings taken by its staff members showed high levels of volatile organic compounds. But the agency later said those high readings were invalid.

The commission still is evaluating other sources of emissions data related to the power outages, said agency spokeswoman Andrea Morrow.

Bill would bar Planned Parenthood from health plan

Associated Press

AUSTIN — In the latest wave of a nationwide opposition to Planned Parenthood and abortion affiliates, a small group of Texas senators voted Thursday night to ban the group and others like it from continuing as a member of the Medicaid Women's Health Program.

The bill approved by two of three senators on the Health and Human Services subcommittee would renew the program for five years but exclude abortion providers or abortion affiliates from participating in the program that gives low-income women exams, screenings and other family planning services.

The hardest blow comes from a provision of the bill that said if Planned Parenthood or other abortion affiliates sue to overturn the plan, the program will be completely dissolved.

The bill's author, Sen. Bob Deuell, R-Greenville, has been hard-pressed by groups wanting to keep public money from funding abortions in Texas. While he said the bill isn't an "ideal solution," Deuell said he did what was necessary to keep the Women's Health Program running — and that meant honoring the wishes of pro-life groups.

"I'm just facing the political reality," Deuell said. "If I didn't do this, the Women's Health Program wouldn't be renewed. I can't get the bill through any other way."

Planned Parenthood calls the legislation the latest in a series of attacks to defund the group. The group said 40,000 women will be immediately denied access to health care.

Two MISD campuses temporarily in shelter-in-place

From staff reports

Midland ISD administration officials placed Carver Center and Washington Math & Science Institute in a shelter-in-place temporarily Friday after the Midland Police Department reported shots in the area.

After the threat had passed, and Carver, 1300 E. Wall St., and Washington, 1800 E. Wall St., campuses proceeded regularly.

According to MISD, "shelter-in-place" is when the outer doors to a campus are locked, and no one is allowed to enter or exit the building.

"Everyone handled this situation well, and the students and staff at the campuses will continue with a normal school day," Superintendent Ryder Warren said.

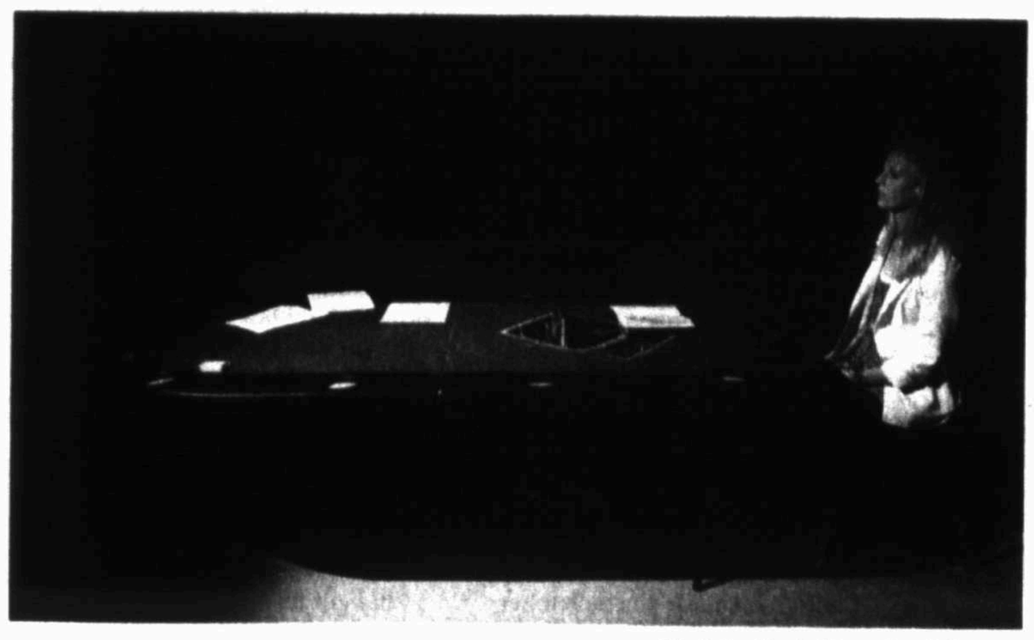
Students bond over murder mystery film

By Kathleen Thurber
Staff Writer



Cindeka Nealy/Reporter-Telegram

Emma Berry, 17, talks earlier this week about playing "Henrietta" during a featruette recording for "The Peculiar Confessions of a Murderess Mind" at Midland Classical Academy. The film is a class project that students wrote, acted, directed and edited.

When Victor Black turns up murdered inside of a hotel, every guest becomes a suspect.

Of course, the incident takes place in the confines of the vintage-era motel, so every guest also is a witness. And that's where the great detective Roger Paine comes in to sift through the details of the tangled tale. How he solves the crime of "dastardly proportions" is what viewers will find out Thursday during the premier of Midland Classical Academy's "The Peculiar Confessions of a Murderous Mind."

Seniors taking the Fine Arts Two elective course at the private school produced the full-length film. From crafting the story line and finding the costumes to shooting the film and editing scenes, the students said they quickly found there's more to creating a movie than having actors in front of a camera. Still, they said having a finished product to show family and friends on the big screen at the Cole Theater was worth the sometimes 15-hour Saturdays that went into production.

"It was much harder than I thought it would be," said Meg Jones, 18. But, she added, "It helped us bond as a class."

The idea for the film came from the more than 25 that were tossed around among the group during the fall semester, said Joel Davis, who instructed the course with Brandon Shuman.

Rebecca DeShan, 18, said she and another student always have liked the board game Clue and suggested they consider basing a movie on the premise of a murder mystery that mirrored the game.

Their peers latched onto the idea immediately. It wasn't until Shuman reminded them the board game already had been turned into a film. The students, though, said they figured they could make the story their own and were able to formulate a film that while similar in theme, is quite different from the 1985 Paramount Pictures flick, DeShan said.

"When this idea was presented, it was unanimous," Jones said.

The students learned how to operate the equipment and software necessary for filming and production during the first semester, Davis said. By January they had an outline of the story written and worked to put together the details of the script as the shooting progressed, Davis said.

Caleb Lightfoot, the 17-year-old who spent hours on the audio and soundtrack for the movie, said much of each character's dialogue was written by the student playing the role. They tried to have the scenes written at least a week before each was filmed, he said, but sometimes they tweaked lines or put on the finishing touches during the shooting process.

"It just really makes you aware how much they put into (a movie)," Lightfoot said.

Shuman said parts of the story also were reworked along the way.

"It was very much an editing process for us," he said. "We did some major rewriting halfway through the film and somehow it all came together."

About 95 percent of the work on the film is done out of class, students said. Enrolling meant giving up Saturdays and agreeing to work through the evenings to get things done.

Grayson Bewley, 18, was among a smaller group of students that did the bulk of the editing. He said he spent most of his recent evenings dedicated to the movie. Bewley, who plans to pursue a career in the film industry, said the class provided a great experience.

Shuman said others who have completed the course also have continued with film-related studies. For most students, he said the class is less about finding a future career and more about being able to work together to create a big project.

"Each class is markedly different," Shuman said.

Filming took place at the White Pool House, Museum of the Southwest, Midland Country Club and at a cabin in Ruidoso, N.M., among other places, Shuman said.

Emma Berry, 17, helped to put together the props. She said the group scoured thrift stores and found costumes to borrow from places like the Midland Festival Ballet.

"The Peculiar Confessions of a Murderous Mind" will be the last film in "awhile" the school will produce, Shuman said. He's been involved with the class for seven years and will not teach the course next year.

"That's kind of bittersweet," he said, echoing the sentiments of students who said they were glad to see the film finished but are unsure of how to fill their newfound free time.

"What are we supposed to do on the weekends now?" said Spencer Richardson, 18.

As land borders tighten, drug smugglers fly

Associated Press

CALEXICO, Calif. — The visiting British pilots were training near a naval air station one night this month when their helicopter came within about 150 feet of an ultralight plane flying without lights. The ultralight darted away toward Mexico without a trace.

The near-disaster over the Southern California desert was an example of drug smugglers using low-flying aircraft that look like motorized hang gliders to circumvent new fences along the U.S. border with Mexico. The planes, which began appearing in Arizona three years ago, now are turning up in remote parts of California and New Mexico.

And in a new twist, the planes rarely touch the ground. Pilots simply pull levers that drop aluminum bins filled with about 200 pounds of marijuana for drivers who are waiting on the ground with blinking lights or glowsticks. Within a few minutes, the pilots are back in Mexico.

"It's like dropping a bomb from an aircraft," said Jeffrey Calhoon, chief of the Border Patrol's El Centro sector, which stretches through alfalfa farms, desert scrub and sand dunes in southeast California.

The Border Patrol has erected hundreds of miles of fences and vehicle barriers along the border and added thousands of new agents, so drug smugglers are going over, under and around.

As U.S. authorities tighten their noose on land, ultralights are another tack to smuggle marijuana. The Customs and Border Protection agency counted 228 incursions along the Mexican border in fiscal 2010, up from 118 a year earlier, when it began keeping track. There have been 71 since the start of fiscal 2011 on Oct 1.

The agency counts an incursion when authorities seize an aircraft or nearby drugs, when a trained source spots an aircraft that is correlated by radar, or when enough people see an aircraft to establish a cross-border flight pattern.

Tunnels are another means to circumvent tightened border security. Lined with rail tracks, lighting and ventilation, two were discovered in San Diego in November that netted a combined 50 tons of marijuana on both sides of the border. U.S. authorities found 71 clandestine tunnels since October 2008, more than during the previous six years.

Smugglers also use single-engine wooden boats to ferry bales of marijuana up the Pacific Coast. U.S. authorities seized 47 tons of narcotics off of Southern California shores since October 2008, including 740 pounds this month in an abandoned craft at Dana Point, about 75 miles north of the border.

Under Federal Aviation Administration regulations, ultralights weigh less than 254 pounds, carry just five gallons of fuel and fly at a top speed of 63 mph. They are not designed to carry anything other than a pilot. No pilot's license or certificate is needed, though regulations advise that the aircraft should not be flown over populated areas or in the dark.

But drug pilots often zip along at night just above power lines.

Kevin Kelly of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement was with about a dozen agents looking for ultralights under a full November moon in the desert east of Nogales, Ariz., when he heard what sounded like lawnmower in the sky. The aircraft appeared from the south.

"It's got this big, long wingspan — it's almost like Batman," said Kelly, ICE's assistant special agent in charge of investigations in Nogales. "It's almost like a glider with a little guy underneath it piloting it."

FUNERAL

his wife two years ago.

"I know how devastating a loss can be, but I couldn't imagine losing a son," Rodriguez said. "And on top of it all, I couldn't imagine a group of people wanting to come and protest."

Rodriguez and Kendall Amos, a retired Lamesa firefighter — standing amid a group of people holding signs in front of the center — said they simply wanted to show support.

"He's just one person, he's just one person, she's just one person and I'm just one person," said Rodriguez, pointing to several people standing nearby. "But together we are a group of individuals showing support for our soldiers and respect for the family."

Amos agreed and said all Americans should be thankful for the duty Castro performed for this country.

Several others said that although they completely disagree with the Westboro church, people are allowed to have differing views because this is a free country. They said there is a time and place for everything.

"Whether or not (Westboro) members support the war or this country is irrelevant," said Kristen Leonard of Andrews. "These troops are dying for their right to freedom of speech; they can at least show support for that."

Although many were ready to confront the protesters or form human walls around them to alleviate what they called "eye sore of protesters," all said they were happy the event was anti-climactic and that the protesters didn't show up.

Even if protesters had shown up, there were law enforcement officers patrolling the area and police surrounding the funeral service.

Several dozen motorcycles with Patriot Guard Riders led the procession to the James Roberts Civic Center shortly before 6 p.m. The procession ended with the bike riders holding American flags in the air as the Army honor guard led the body of Castro into the hall.

DEAL

From 1A

be less lead time for people who are constructing," Rendall said.

Carrianne Bassett, office manager at Elite Steel, said the company manufactures and supplies steel for several uses including metal buildings, structural steel needs and for the oil industry. The business is located at 7604 W. County Road 116 on the same property as Lozoya Welding Inc., she said.

Filemon Lozoya, who owns Lozoya Welding, is a partner in Elite Steel's operation, Woodward said.

Rendall said the deal falls into the category of development of an existing business, and it likely will thrive off the expansion of the "base industries" already in Midland.

Woodward said they plan to have the deal finalized by the end of May.

Bassett said they've had inquiries for employment from people in the area and from those living in other states who've heard about the growing economy in West Texas and are looking to move.

Because Elite Steel Components Ltd. is located outside the city limits, Woodward said it is eligible for fewer dollars than if it was within the limits. Businesses inside the city's limits add to Midland's property tax rolls.

"They will be spending money in town," he said. "For that type of business, we wouldn't expect them to be located in the city."

He said the company also will have to sign an agreement that indicates it is willing to be annexed if the city were to grow in its direction, Woodward said.

Woodward said it's not uncommon for a company to approach the corporation about providing incentives. Some will come into the office, others inquire online and others are referred from a bank or area entity, he said.

Overall, inquiries from outside and interest from companies the MDC has contacted is up, particularly from 2009, Woodward said.

"I'm busier now than I've ever been," he said.

In other business, the MDC board was provided a presentation on a video and photograph marketing tool called "Midland in Motion" that the MDC is looking to pursue.

Natalie Shelton, real estate and marketing coordinator, provided a clip of a video and said such a tool would be useful in displaying at trade shows, on its website and in the general promotion of Midland and the MDC's "opportunity zones."

The videos would depict a particular area and would highlight Midland events, people and places, she said.

"It's a creative way companies can see Midland," she said.

She said they would like to have four videos produced, including one that would be an overview of Midland and one each to focus on the opportunity zones of downtown, aviation and transportation and lastly innovation, commercialization, energy and education.

The videos and copyrights to all of the photos used would cost $14,000, she said. She anticipated another $500 would be needed to cover music copyrights.

With current materials containing old images of Midland and other marketing products using stock images that don't depict people in Midland, Shelton said it's time they update it.

Although it wasn't on the agenda for a vote, the board members said they would support the MDC pursuing the videos and photos. Funding for the materials would come out of the promotions budget that is set aside and also is covering the cost of the MDC's website update, said President Mike Hatley.

TOUR

projects in Midland that could be included on the tour, Wellen said officials wanted to keep this first one simple, but they could expand it over time.

One example of a building that tour participants will see is the old Honolulu Oil Co. building at 204 W. Illinois Ave. and North Loraine Street. Wellen said it serves as a great example of a building that was designed to be responsive to the environment. The building is 61 years old, and Wellen said it has the slant of California-modernism in its design as well as how the windows were built to shade the elements and wind and protect the architecture.

"There's a lot of potential for re-birth," he said.

While most of the buildings downtown have been altered in some way, there are a few that haven't, he said.

The current Bank of America building, at 303 W. Wall St., is one of the tallest buildings downtown. It's 58 years old and largely has been untouched throughout the years. The interior has been well preserved and has remained the same, Wellen said.

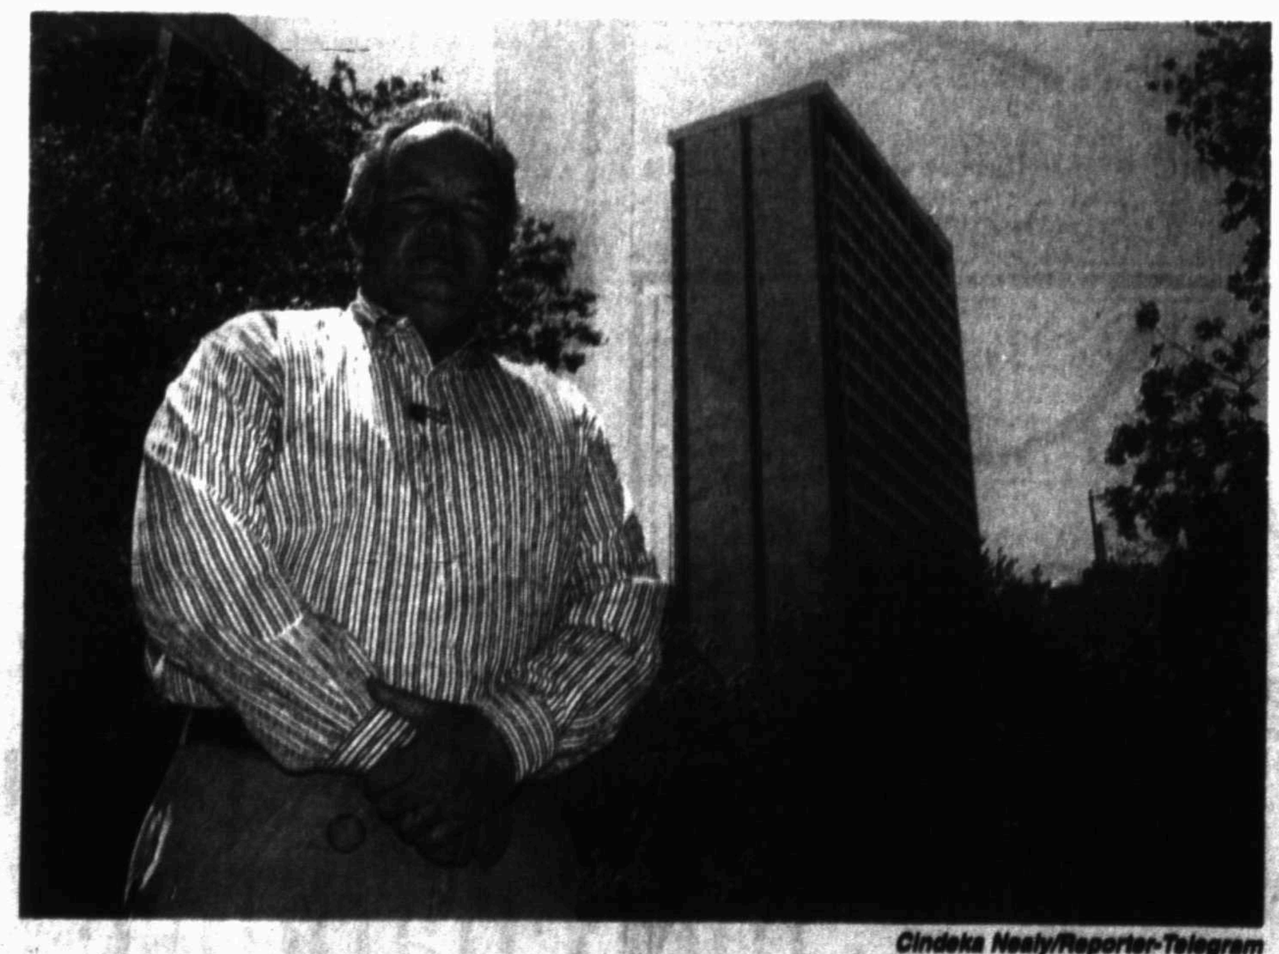
"It's a real gem of a building of that period," he said.

There are a few downtown buildings that were erected before 1900, but many of the buildings have been built following the oil booms and busts, and the architecture and character can be seen through the structures.

Many of the buildings have been so severely altered under new treatments, unlike cities such as San Angelo where several blocks of businesses still are intact and being used. The one unique thing about Midland is the large tower structures that lend to the nickname of the "Tall City," Wellen said.

While there are several vacant structures because of out-of-date mechanical and electrical systems that make them functionally obsolete, Wellen said he believes rehabilitation could make some of them useful again.

"I believe if we have a strong downtown, it will only make Midland better," he said.



Cindeka Nealy/Reporter-Telegram

Mark Wellen will lead a tour today that will highlight some of the historic mid-century to modern architecture design of buildings, such as the Bank of America building on Wall Street, during the Downtown Midland Walking Tour.

In 1955, the American Association of Retired Persons (later simply AARP) was founded in Washington, D.C.

FORT WORTH

Bill would make invasive pat-downs a felony

A former Miss USA's claims of being groped during a pat-down at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport could be a criminal matter under a bill gaining momentum in the Texas Legislature.

If it becomes law, it would be a felony for a security officer to intentionally touch someone's private areas — even on top of clothing — unless he has probable cause to believe the person is carrying something illegal.

The bill's sponsor, State Rep. David Simpson, said the invasive pat-down searches at airports are taking away people's dignity.

Last fall the Transportation Security Administration started a new pat-down procedure.

TSA spokesman Nicholas Kimball said the agency doesn't comment on pending legislation. But he said the current security measures are the best ways to mitigate the risk of terrorism.

AUSTIN

Committee wants to make English official language

English would become the official language in Texas and all official functions would have to be in English, under a law approved by the House State Affairs Committee.

The measure passed the committee late Thursday on 7-3 vote along party lines.

State Rep. Leo Berman authored the bill, which the Legislature has repeatedly debated in the past. The bill declares the traditional and common language of the United States and Texas is English. It also says knowledge of the common language is essential to exercising constitutional rights.

House reviews Dept. of Transportation

By Chris Tomlinson
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The House renewed the Texas Department of Transportation on Friday, in what the bill's author said was an attempt to improve transparency and efficiency at one of state's largest agencies.

The legislation, known as a sunset bill, reviews the state agency every four years. The department was supposed to be reviewed two years ago, but lawmakers put it off until this year.

If it becomes law, the bill would allow the agency to appoint an inspector general and prohibits commissioners from accepting campaign contributions to run for public office. The proposed law would also create stronger rules against the agency attempting to lobby for legislation. The bill passed on a voice vote, and it will move to the Senate once it passes an additional procedural vote.

Debate on Friday focused on who should lead the agency and potential new toll roads.

Democratic state Rep. Ruth McClendon, D-San Antonio, pushed to abolish the five-member appointed commission and replace it with a single elected commissioner. The measure failed to pass.

> "Do we know how many roads we own in Texas now? Do we know how many we've sold, or rented out? There needs to be some way for us to monitor what we're doing.
> — YVONNE DAVID
> Democratic representative from Dallas

One amendment that passed would change how commissioners are appointed. Instead of all five being appointed by the governor, one would be recommended by the speaker of the House, and one appointed by the lieutenant governor.

Most issues centered on where and how the agency's money would be spent. Several others gave local transportation authorities greater say in planning or guaranteed that money allocated for a local project remained in that community.

State Rep. Larry Phillips, R-Sherman, proposed allowing cities to enter into comprehensive development agreements to ease traffic jams in the Houston, Austin, Dallas-Fort Worth, Rio Grande Valley and South Padre Island areas. These agreements allow for public-private partnerships to build toll roads.

"We have to come up with a solution for these regions," he said. "We want to make sure the taxpayer gets the best value for these projects."

Rural lawmakers feared it would concentrate spending on those specific areas. Others worried that the state was entering into too many public-private partnerships.

"Do we know how many roads we own in Texas now? Do we know how many we've sold, or rented out?" asked state Rep. Yvonne David, D-Dallas, in arguing against the amendment that passed 109-27. "There needs to be some way for us to monitor what we're doing."

An amendment also passed that would allow the department to sell the international bridge in Presidio to the city and the county. The Mexican side of the bridge charges a toll and the measure would allow the city and county of Presidio to raise revenue by also charging tolls after the sale.

Democratic state Rep. Pete Gallego of Alpine added an amendment that would ban traffic cameras on state roads, unless approved following a public hearing, and banning them completely in towns with fewer than 40,000 residents.

High-speed rail also got a nod, in an amendment that allows the department to establish rules for trains that travel in excess of 185 miles per hour.

Senator to keep fighting guns on campus bill

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A Texas senator said she'll let her own bill die before allowing it to become the vehicle for permitting concealed handguns in Texas college classrooms.

Sen. Judith Zaffirini of Laredo said Friday she'll first try to stop the guns amendment from getting on her bill that would give universities flexibility to deal with budget cuts.

If that doesn't work, the Democrat will let her bill die without a vote. The showdown could come next week.

Zaffirini said her bill would save universities millions of dollars.

Sen. Jeff Wentworth, a San Antonio Republican, tried earlier this week to attach his guns amendment to Zaffirini's bill and appears to have the votes to succeed.

Wentworth has not been able to muster enough votes to pass the guns issue on its own.

Sheriff evacuates rural community

A rural Texas neighborhood has been evacuated as gusty winds push wildfires closer.

Joe Mazzeo, spokesman for an interagency team assisting with fire management, said the Kimble County sheriff ordered the evacuation northwest of the town of Junction on Friday because the nearby Oasis fire jumped containment lines on the north end and was approaching Interstate 10.

Kimble County sheriff's dispatcher Kelli Harames said the McGowan Estates was evacuated near Ranch Road 1674 as was as the area around County Road 171. No injuries were reported.

It was not known how many people were impacted. Junction is about 140 miles west of Austin.

The Texas Forest Service reported that extreme fire conditions remain across West Texas and parts of East Texas.

Wildfires in the Possum Kingdom area were 100 percent contained.

Senate votes to expand college vaccine law

The Texas Senate has voted to require freshmen and transfer college students get vaccinated against bacterial meningitis.

Lawmakers voted two years ago to require the vaccine for freshmen and other new students who live on campus. The Senate bill expands that to cover all new students, even those living off campus.

Nicolis Williams, a Texas A&M University student who lived off campus, died of complications of bacterial meningitis in February.

Sen. Wendy Davis, a Fort Worth Democrat, authored the bill.

According to the Texas Medical Association, there are about 1,500 cases of bacterial meningitis in the U.S. every year.

FAA orders air traffic control management shake-up

By Joan Lowy
Associated Press

> "This sends a powerful message, and it's the right message. It's one way to shake up the culture."
> — GREGORY MCGUIRK
> Associate professor of air traffic management at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach, Fla.

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration on Friday replaced three high-level managers in the nation's air traffic control system following embarrassing incidents of controllers sleeping on the job and making potentially dangerous mistakes.

In a shake-up of the system, new managers were appointed to key positions that oversee the operation of airport towers and regional radar centers that handle planes flying at high altitudes as well as approaches and departures, the agency said in a statement. A new manager was also appointed to run a regional radar center near Cleveland. The previous managers are being reassigned.

The performance of mid-level managers also is being reassessed, the FAA said. And teams of experts are examining several of the agency's more complex facilities, including the Cleveland center and one on Long Island in New York, to ensure agency policies are being followed and professional standards upheld.

"This sends a powerful message, and it's the right message," said Gregory McGuirk, an associate professor of air traffic management at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach, Fla. "It's one way to shake up the culture."

But Missy Cummings, an associate professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said shuffling managers doesn't get at the root cause of many of the incidents.

The limits of human physiology necessarily mean that night shift workers in all industries, not just controllers, are going to fall asleep on the job from time to time, said Cummings, a human factors expert. Boredom is also a factor. The less activity there is to keep workers' minds engaged in the dead of night, the more likely they are to fall asleep, she said.

Earlier this month, a controller working an overnight shift at the Cleveland center was suspended for watching a DVD movie while he was supposed to be directing air traffic. In February, a supervisor at the Long Island center complained that controllers on late night shifts routinely took naps during breaks and played electronic games when traffic was light.

On Wednesday, FAA replaced the acting manager of a regional radar facility in Warrenton, Va., that handles approaches and departures for airports in Virginia and Maryland. The action came a week after a controller at the facility allowed a plane carrying first lady Michelle Obama and Jill Biden, wife of Vice President Joe Biden, to fly less than three miles behind a much larger military cargo jet as the planes approached Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland.

FAA regulations require a separation of at least five miles when the plane in the lead is significantly larger to prevent the trailing plane from encountering dangerous wake turbulence. Controllers at Andrews also directed Obama's plane to abandon its landing and circle the air base to give the cargo jet time to get off the runway.

Also Friday, FAA named a five-member review panel composed of internal, labor, industry and academic safety experts to evaluate the agency's training of new controllers.

"This is just the beginning of the process to make sure we have the best possible team in place," Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood said.

The changes are part of a comprehensive review that LaHood and FAA Administrator Randy Babbitt promised after a series of incidents that have embarrassed the agency, made controllers the butt of jokes by late night comedians, and raised public jitters about the safety of flying.

Since late March, the FAA has disclosed five incidents of controllers sleeping on the job. Three of those controllers have been fired, while two others and a manager involved in the incidents have been suspended. In one case, a plane transporting a critically ill patient had to circle Reno-Tahoe International Airport because the pilot was unable to reach the lone controller working an overnight shift in the tower. In another, two airliners landed at Reagan National airport near Washington without control tower assistance because the lone controller on duty at midnight had fallen asleep.

The controller who watched the movie in Cleveland and a manager at that center also have been suspended. So have two controllers at an airport tower in Lubbock, who were unreachable for a period of time while working an overnight shift.

Another controller was suspended for actions that allowed a Southwest Airlines jet with 142 people aboard within about 500 feet of a small plane about 11,000 feet over central Florida.

Shuttle Endeavour's last trip delayed

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The historic next-to-last space shuttle launch was scratched Friday because of mechanical problems, spoiling a visit from the president and dashing the hopes of the biggest crowd of spectators in years, including the mission commander's wounded wife, Rep. Gabrielle Giffords.

NASA hopes to try again Monday to launch space shuttle Endeavour on its final voyage.

President Barack Obama and his family stopped at Kennedy Space Center anyway where he met briefly with the Arizona congresswoman before visiting the shuttle crew. Giffords, who is recovering from a gunshot wound to the head, arrived in Cape Canaveral on Wednesday to attend her husband's launch.

She hasn't been seen publicly since the Jan. 8 assassination attempt in Tucson, Ariz., and left her Houston rehabilitation hospital for the first time to travel to Florida. A close friend said her family indicated she would stay in Florida at least until Monday. The friend asked not to be named because he was not authorized to speak for the family. Giffords' staff could not be reached for comment.

Ruth Sabinsky, orginally from Denmark, reacts after the Space Shuttle Endeavor's launch was scrubbed as she sat in a Titusville, Fla., park Friday. She has seen every Endeavor launch.

Giffords had been expected to watch the liftoff in private — as were the other astronaut families.

"Bummed about the scrub!! But important to make sure everything on shuttle is working properly," her staff said via Twitter.

Endeavour was fueled and the six astronauts were heading to the launch pad when the countdown was halted, about 3 1/2 hours before the 3:47 p.m. liftoff. NASA's silver-colored astrovan did a U-turn at the launch control center and returned them to crew quarters.

It would have been the first time in NASA history that a sitting president and his family witnessed a launch. As a consolation, Obama and his family got an up-close look at Atlantis. It will make the last shuttle flight this summer as NASA winds up the 30-year program and retires the fleet to museums.

The president and Michelle Obama met briefly with Endeavour's crew. Obama told them he's hoping to get back to Florida for a shuttle launch.

"One more chance, we may be able to get down here," Obama said.

Launch director Mike Leinbach said the next launch try for Endeavour would be Monday at the earliest — and hinted at an even longer delay. Technicians will have to crawl into the engine compartment to track a suspected electrical short in a power distribution box.

"We'll fly no orbiter before its time, and today she just wasn't ready to go," Leinbach said.

As many as 700,000 spectators had been expected to crowd nearby coastal communities. For days, police have been warning of massive traffic delays.

Tammi Flythe, among the thousands gathered across the Indian River in Titusville with her two children, was crushed. They traveled in from Tampa, about 130 miles across the state.

"I really wanted my son to experience this," she said.

At the press site at Kennedy Space Center, astronaut James Kelly, a two-time shuttle pilot, took the news in stride. "When you have technical problems, you delay. That's it. You delay," he said.

Tornado survivors pick up pieces as Obama visits

Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Survivors of the deadliest tornado outbreak since the 1970s struggled to begin rebuilding their lives in the wind-wrecked landscape Friday, enduring blackouts and waiting in long lines for gas as their remaining possessions lay hidden in the rubble. President Barack Obama arrived in devastated Alabama to console victims whose emergency safety net has been so badly frayed, at least one town was begging for body bags.

As Obama stepped off a plane at the airport in hard-hit Tuscaloosa, rescuers and survivors combed the remains of neighborhoods pulverized by Wednesday's outbreak that killed at least 319 across seven states. In one of its first official assessments of the tornadoes' strength, the National Weather Service gave the worst possible rating to one that raked Mississippi and said it was the strongest to hit the state since 1966.

Associated Press

President Barack Obama visits tornado damage in the Alberta neighborhood in Tuscaloosa, Ala., on Friday.

The president's arrival drew a muted response from Tuscaloosa resident Derek Harris, who was pushing a grocery buggy down a street where virtually every home was heavily damaged. The 47-year-old and his wife hoped to use the cart to salvage a few belongings from his home.

"Hopefully he'll give us some money to start over," Harris said of Obama. "Is FEMA here? The only place I'm hearing anything is at the Red Cross center."

Some were more upbeat about the president's visit, including 21-year-old Turner Woods, who watched Obama's motorcade pass on its way to tour damaged areas. "It's just really special having the president come here," she said. "It will bring more attention to this disaster and help get more help here."

After witnessing the damage in storm-wracked neighborhoods, Obama said he's "never seen devastation like this."

He promised residents: "We're going to make sure you're not forgotten."

The situation was dire about 90 miles to the north in the demolished town of Hackleburg, Ala., where officials were keeping the dead in a refrigerated truck amid a body bag shortage. At least 27 were killed there, and the search for missing people continues.

The only grocery store, the fire and police departments and the school are destroyed. There's no power, communications, water or other services. Fire Chief Steve Hood said he desperately wants flashlights for the town's 1,500 residents because he doesn't want them to use candles that could start fires.

"We don't have water to put out any fires," he said.

People have looted a demolished Wrangler jeans plant, and authorities locked up drugs from a destroyed pharmacy in a bank vault, said Stanley Webb, chief agent in the county's drug task force.

"If people steal, we are not playing around. They will go to jail," he said.

Elsewhere, drivers hunted for fuel for cars and generators after many gas stations were shuttered by power outages.

In rural northeast Alabama's Crossville, 25 to 30 vehicles lined up at the Fuel-Z. The station had been the only one open for many miles until a generator part failed Thursday night.

An employee said the repair might take until today, but Natasha Brazil and her boyfriend weren't going anywhere in their Dodge Durango SUV. She lives about 10 miles away but said she only has enough gas for another mile or two. They'd arrived Thursday night after the generator broke.

"We've been sleeping here all night. Well, I wouldn't call it sleeping, crammed in the back of an SUV," she said.

UGANDA
Riots erupt, leaving 2 dead

KAMPALA — Army troops and police fired live bullets at rioting demonstrators Friday, and at least two people were killed and 120 wounded in the largest anti-government protest in sub-Saharan Africa this year.

Rioters burned tires in downtown streets as security forces fired tear gas and guns, and a Red Cross spokeswoman said 15 of the wounded and been hit by live bullets. Battles between protesters and police also were reported around the country.

The protests are the first serious demonstrations in sub-Saharan Africa since a wave of anti-government protests swept leaders in Tunisia and Egypt out of power. Ugandan President Yoweri Museveni, who has been in power for a quarter-century, has vowed repeatedly that his government will not be taken down by protests.

CANADA
Late leftist surge spices up election

TORONTO — Until a few days ago, Monday's election looked set to give Canada another mandate for the Conservative government. Instead, Prime Minister Stephen Harper could be out of a job if polls are right in predicting a late surge for the left.

The unexpected gains for the New Democratic Party have upended previous soundings that predicted the Conservatives would get enough votes to form a minority government, perhaps even a majority one. Now a new scenario has emerged in which the New Democrats and the Liberals together win enough seats to eventually form a coalition.

"We've had an earthquake here, and it's all happening very quickly," said Nelson Wiseman, professor at the University of Toronto, after EKOS, a private polling company, gave the Conservatives 33.7 percent, the New Democrats 28 and the Liberals 23.7. The pollsters said they questioned 3,000 voters and gave a margin of error of 1.8 percentage points.

Tunisia rebukes Libya over cross-border incursions

Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya — A battle between Libyan troops and rebels spilled over the western border into Tunisia on Friday, drawing a sharp rebuke of Moammar Gadhafi's regime from the neighboring government.

Clashes along the Tunisian border have escalated since Thursday, posing a new challenge for Gadhafi within the western half of the country where he must consolidate his control to cling to power. Rebels captured most of the east early on in the uprising against Gadhafi that began in February.

On the other major front in western Libya, NATO foiled attempts by regime loyalists to close the only access route to the besieged rebel city of Misrata, intercepting boats that were laying anti-ship mines in the waters around the port. The port is the only lifeline for the city of 300,000, which has been under siege for two months.

Libyan government spokesman Moussa Ibrahim said he was unaware of the attempted mine-laying but said the government is trying to prevent weapons shipments from reaching the rebels by sea. He said aid such shipments must be coordinated with the authorities and should preferably come over land.

The government offensive on the Tunisian border along with shelling that killed 15 in Misrata on Friday and the attempt to mine the Misrata port show the regime is redoubling efforts to crush stubborn pockets of resistance in the west.

In the capital Tripoli, residents reported rising tensions over fuel shortages, a result of international sanctions imposed on Gadhafi. Witnesses said there have been clashes between residents and troops, including with stones and tear gas, at gas stations in recent days, after security forces tried to cut into huge lines.

In another indication of shortages, the government sent text messages to mobile phones of armed supporters, urging them to stop firing in the air in order to save ammunition for "our crusader enemies," said two city residents who spoke on condition of anonymity for fear of reprisals.

Gadhafi has clamped down hard on dissent in the capital. Shooting is heard frequently in Tripoli, some of the volleys fired in the air in pro-Gadhafi rallies. However, opposition figures said there have also been sneak nighttime shooting attacks on army checkpoints in the city.

The actions of the Libyan leader, increasingly isolated since the start of the crisis, drew new condemnations Friday.

'Fast Five' revs up preposterous fun

By David Germain
Associated Press

Review

If the "Fast Five" filmmakers had thrown in giant, shape-shifting robots, talking apes and some vampires, the fifth installment in "The Fast and the Furious" franchise would hardly have been more outlandish.

That said, the movie will get you where you're going. Pretty cars, prettier women, insanely absurd action that truly thrills even as it shatters all physical laws, and enough testosterone-fueled violence to satisfy the most-rabid WWE SmackDown crowd.

Opting for a blowout of a movie with no restraints whatsoever, the filmmakers wisely add former wrestling superstar Dwayne Johnson as a relentless federal agent to go toe-to-toe with Vin Diesel's driving ace Dom Toretto, who's again on the run along with his sister, Mia (Jordana Brewster), and cop-turned-outlaw Brian O'Conner (Paul Walker).

Directing his third chapter in the franchise, Justin Lin applies that over-the-top-and-then-some approach to everything in "Fast Five." If it can move, it can move faster. If it can crash, it can crash harder. If it can roar, it can roar louder.

It's nonsense, but when Hollywood does nonsense right, it can be a lot of fun. Lin now is far more assured as an action director, crafting stunts and chases that zip along so recklessly you won't much care how utterly impossible they are.

Associated Press

In this film publicity image released by Universal Pictures, Vin Diesel, left, and Paul Walker are shown in a scene from "Fast Five."

Likewise, Lin and screenwriter Chris Morgan, who wrote the last two "Fast and Furious" flicks, step up the silliness of the dialogue and the characters' mannerisms to let the audience in on the joke that no one is supposed to take any of this seriously. People strut and pronounce in such farcical fashion that it goes beyond stupid and somehow becomes, if not clever, at least crafty.

The filmmakers do actually achieve cleverness with a surprise or two. You'll want to stay through a portion of the end-credits to catch one of them, a jolting tease for the franchise's preordained sixth installment after "Fast Five" hauls in its fortune.

In the current story, Dom is hunting his own fortune after Brian and Mia break him out of custody in a dementedly excessive prison-bus escape. Hiding out in Rio de Janeiro, the three join a daring car heist that puts them at odds with local crime boss Reyes (Joaquim de Almeida) and sets super agent Hobbs (Johnson) on their trail.

"Fast Five," a Universal Pictures release, is rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action, sexual content and language. Running time: 130 minutes. Two and a half stars out of four.

Capsule reviews of other new releases

"Hoodwinked Too! Hood vs. Evil" — Red Riding Hood needs a better agent. Months after being refashioned in a werewolf tale, she's back in this computer-animated sequel to the mostly forgotten 2005 original. The fractured fairy tale has returned with 3-D graphics, more polished animation and less wit. Red (Hayden Panettiere assuming Anne Hathaway's role), Wolf, Twitchy and Granny are now special agents in the Happily Ever After Agency. Led by the dapper, long-legged frog Nicky Flippers, they pursue the kidnapped Hansel (Bill Hader) and Gretel (Amy Poehler). PG for some mild rude humor, language and action. 85 minutes. One star out of four.

"Prom" — It's not just prom, it's Disney's "Prom." And so no one smokes, no one sneaks in peach schnapps in a flask and no one gets lucky in the back of a limo. This is all about that magical night when everyone gets together, regardless of the social hierarchy that had been firmly in place the past four years, and dreams come true. Still, the sweetness and guilelessness of "Prom" is actually strangely charming, and for its target audience. PG for mild language and a brief fight. 103 minutes. Two and a half stars out of four.

MHS stakes claim to 3-5A championship

From staff reports

ABILENE — A five-run sixth inning allowed the Midland High baseball team to pull away from Abilene Cooper for good in a 13-8 Bulldogs victory at Cougar Stadium on Friday.

With the win the Bulldogs clinch a share of the District 3-5A title along with in-town rival Lee. The two teams flipped to decide seeding prior to Friday with Lee winning the toss.

Bulldogs	13
Cougars	8

This gives the Rebels the right decide whether they want to be the top or second playoff see out of the playoffs. It's a decision Lee is yet to make, leaving MHS wondering for now where it sits in the Class 5A postseason bracket.

Sims

The Bulldogs fell behind Cooper 3-2 in the bottom of the second, but put together a four-run rally in the third, pulling back out in front 6-3. They extended their lead to 8-3 in the top of the fifth, only to see Cooper score three in the bottom part of the frame and pull within two runs.

MHS finally put the Cougars away with a five-run outburst in the sixth, taking a 13-6 advantage.

The Bulldogs had five extra-base hits by five different players. Matt Reyes, Alex Mata and Michael Cristiani each doubled, while Shane Sawyer and Travis Sims both homered.

Rebels beat Abilene High to claim share of district title

By Jonathan Hull
Sports Writer

The last three baseball seasons have been nothing short of frustrating at Lee. But that trying time, during which the Rebels made no playoff appearances, are now in the past.

The Rebels picked up a share of the District 3-5A title Friday with a 9-1 victory against Abilene High (10-18, 4-8 in District 3-5A) at Ernie Johnson Field. The win completes a worst-to-first turnaround after finishing last in District 2-5A in 2010.

"It's been a complete 180 from last year," Lee senior Kyle Copeland said. "A lot of things have changed. We're caring more now. There's a lot of want in us. The last few years haven't turned out the way we've wanted it to. This year we went out and got it done."

Rebels	9
Eagles	1

There will not be a seeding game between Lee (23-10, 10-2) and Midland High (23-9, 10-2), which are sharing the 3-5A title. The two teams flipped prior to Friday with the Rebels winning. That means Lee coach Hector Limon has the right to choose either the district's No. 1 or No. 2 playoff seed.

It's a decision Limon isn't rushing to make as he wants to see how the bracket fills out first.

"We've got to go in and look at all the dynamics," Limon said. "We've got to see how a few more games play out. We've got to come in as a staff and start working on that."

The Rebels didn't waste any time in their pursuit of the 3-5A title Friday night. They pushed three runs across in the first inning with Randy Kidwell coming up with the big hit — a two-RBI triple to the center field wall. Kidwell scored with the next batter Luke Stice singled to right.

OVER TO FIRST Lee pitcher Mick Limon (15) throws the ball to first baseman Michael Broeig in an attempt to pick an Abilene High baserunner Friday at Ernie Johnson Field.

A RBI-single by Copeland in the third plated Mick Limon and put the Rebels up 4-0. Tyler Reynolds then hit a two-run homer in the fourth, giving Lee a 6-0 advantage.

Copeland made it 8-0 with a two-RBI triple in the sixth. The senior second baseman then scored on a Kidwell single to right. The Rebels appeared relaxed at the plate all day and showed no signs of being too tense with the district title on the line.

"We've got a saying 'OGAT.' That's one game at a time," Copeland said after going 2 for 3 with three RBI and two runs scored. "That's what we're doing. Even the playoffs will be one game at a time."

While the Rebels did their job at the plate, Lee pitcher Mick Limon was hard at work on the mound. Limon

MCS baseball team looks for first state title

By Len Hayward
Sports Editor

Midland Christian baseball coach Mike Munguia is like any coach heading into the playoffs with a talented team expected to make a deep run in that he's a little apprehensive.

It's been almost a month since the Mustangs have played a competitive opponent, but Munguia's apprehensions may only go as far as him because the team he coaches is more than ready for the playoffs.

"It's been pretty intense these last few weeks," said Mustang senior Stephen Withrow. "We are getting ready, trying to win it all."

Withrow

Redman

The Mustangs enter today's TAPPS 4A bi-district game against Tyler All Saints sitting on a 28-5 record, and a district championship in TAPPS 1-4A. The two teams will play at noon at Christensen Stadium.

But what has this team focused and ready is the fact that they want to do something no other team in the Mustangs baseball program has done — win a state title.

The school has won titles in football, boys basketball, softball, tennis and girls golf, but baseball has yet to bring any state hardware back to the campus on Culver, and players such as Withrow and senior Hunter Redman are determined to do it this season.

"That's what we've been working on this year, is getting there and not having to feel how we have in the past," said

Lady Dawgs take opening game of series

From staff reports

CISCO — The Midland High softball team had a sluggish start in the first game of its Class 5A bi-district series with Arlington Martin on Friday night, but found a groove later in the game to take a convincing 7-1 victory.

The Lady Bulldogs (22-12) opened the game with single runs in each the first and second innings, but then scored two in the fifth and three more in the seventh to clinch the victory.

Midland High and the Warriors (17-14) will play Game 2 of the series at noon today at Cisco High School, and a possible third game will be 30 minutes after that game.

If the Lady Bulldogs hit like they did on Friday, and Kelsey Hoppel pitches another solid game, they could be looking at a sweep of the series.

Hoppel was 2 for 3, with Noami Posada going 2 for 4 at the plate with two RBI and Merissa Ramirez also had two hits and an RBI in the victory. Junior Valari Sisneros also added an RBI double in the victory.

"Our kids started waiting on the ball a little bit better," Midland High coach Shawnda Vines said after Friday's win. "We started getting a little bit more solid hits."

Hoppel, meanwhile, kept the Warriors in check for most of the game with another solid performance.

Hoppel pitched all seven innings, facing 25 batters, four over the seven-inning minimum of 21, and allowed four hits with seven strikeouts and no walks. Hoppel has not lost a game since she was pitching against Lee in

Lady Rebels face 1-0 hole to start playoffs

From staff reports

TUSCOLA — The Lee softball team couldn't overcome a rough first inning and ended up dropping Game 1 of its best-of-three Class 5A bi-district playoff series with Arlington Bowie, 8-3.

Game 2 is set for 2 p.m. Saturday with a third game, if necessary, set to occur approximately 30 minutes following the completion of the second game.

The Lady Rebels (22-12) committed five errors in Friday's loss with three coming in the first inning. The mishaps allowed the Lady Volunteers (25-8) to score five runs in the opening frame, despite only one hit making it out of the infield.

"It was not pretty," Lee coach Wes Overton said. "We were not focused. We calmed down some from there, but we never really recovered from that and it's hard to."

Bowie's five-run inning came after Lee had put two runs on the board to open the game. It was the only lead the Lady Rebels had. They managed to cut Bowie's lead to 5-3 by adding a run in the top of the third, but the Lady Vols answered immediately again, scoring two in the bottom of that frame for a 7-3 advantage.

However, take away the errors and the Lady Vols scored only two earned runs. Overton said he feels the Lady Rebels stood toe to toe with Bowie in every inning, but the first.

"We'll talk about that very thing," Overton said. "We had as many hits. They left three people on base, we left five on. It was even other than the errors. There's a lot of ifs and buts you can raise for this game."

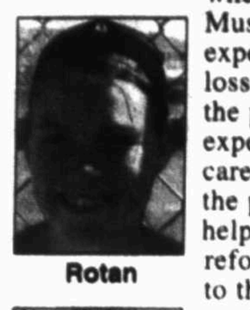
MCS starts playoffs on the road

By Len Hayward
Sports Editor

The Midland Christian softball team is entering new territory today, and it's not just because they are playing a new opponent in the TAPPS 4A playoffs.

It's because for the first time in more than a decade, the Lady Mustangs will not be starting the playoffs in Midland. Midland Christian's fourth-place finish in TAPPS 1-4A forces the Lady Mustangs to hit the road today and take on TAPPS 2-4A champ, Waco Reicher, in a bi-district game in Waco.



Rotan

Ream

This is just one more new road block for a team that has seen its fair share with a new coach, key injuries and finishing an up-and-down season. But as the playoffs begin there is a sense that this is a new chance to prove that Midland Christian is still one of the elite programs in TAPPS.

"We went from being the top dog to being underdog, and now we want to prove that we are still the good team that we were," said senior Ashlynn Rotan. "We are still good, and we still have the talent."

The Lady Mustangs finished the season with a 12-25 record, and ended the year by being swept in a pair of TAPPS 1-4A games against Fort Worth Southwest Christian, and then beating Dallas Christian in a non-district contest a day later.

Even after a year where the Lady Mustangs have experienced more losses than many of the players have experienced in their careers, the start of the playoffs has helped the team refocus on returning to the state tournament.

Midland Christian will be bolstered this week by the return of senior pitcher Stormi Ream, who has been out for nearly a month battling a knee injury. Ream has spent much of the past few weeks doing rehabilitation on the knee to prepare for the postseason.

Ream's return bolsters a young team that learned a few things about itself in her absence, and even Ream said she was pleased with how the team responded in her absence.

"I'm just proud of our girls that they fought through everything and still make the playoffs," Ream said. "That's what counts, and shows you that they are ready to fight for the state game."

Returning to the state tournament is the priority for this team, and Rotan admitted that it's been different preparing this past week knowing that the playoffs will begin on the road.

But starting on the road only reinforces the team's feeling that it are a dangerous underdog in a tournament where some teams are expecting them to do much.

"I think it gives us a lot more motivation," Rotan said. "People don't expect us to be that good, and we want to show people that we are."

And the process begins today in Waco.

TAPPS 4A BI-DISTRICT MIDLAND CHRISTIAN AT WACO REICHER

Format: One-game playoff
When/where: Noon today, Record: Midland Christian 12-25, Waco Reicher 27-5
Notes & Quotes: The Lady Mustangs received a boost to end the regular season with a 20-3 pasting of Dallas Christian in a non-district game. Plus, entering today's game, the Lady Mustangs will have senior pitcher Stormi Ream return to the team. Ream has missed much of the last month of the season with an injured knee. Ream will pitch today, but Midland Christian coach Judy Hardy said that Ream returning also helps the lineup. "It gives us another big stick in the lineup," Hardy said. ... Waco Reicher is in its first year in TAPPS 4A and is coming off a state title season in 2010 in Class 3A. Reicher has picked up where it left off last year by sweeping through TAPPS 2-4A with a 12-0 record and a 27-5 overall mark. ... Hardy said the key for her squad today will be being aggressive at the plate. "We have to be mentally smart and make the routine plays," Hardy said. "We have to go up there be aggressive and put the ball in play."
Next: Winner will play either Tomball Concordia Lutheran or San Antonio Christian in a TAPPS 4A regional round game

Bruin's 3 goals lift Dynamo over United 4-1

HOUSTON (AP) — Will Bruin scored three goals and the Houston Dynamo extended their unbeaten streak to six games with a 4-1 victory over DC United on Friday night.

The rookie from Indiana gave Houston (3-1-3, 12 points) the lead in the fourth minute. He took a pass through the D.C. defense from Geoff Cameron and punched it in from 14 yards out in the left box.

United (2-4-1, 7 points) tied it on Marc Burch's goal off a free kick in the 39th.

Bruin answered in the 41st minute after taking Brad Davis' cross from the right and heading it in from 7 yards out in the center. He added another header in the 57th minute off Davis' free kick to make him the first Houston rookie to record a hat trick, and the first MLS rookie to do it since Zack Schilawski had one on April 10, 2010, against Toronto FC.

Cam Weaver added a goal in the 62nd minute.

UTPB splits with Arkansas-FS

ODESSA — Even though The University of Texas of the Permian Basin picked up a 4-0 win over Arkansas-Fort Smith in the second game of the series, it very easily could have pulled off a first-day sweep. Instead, the Lions took a 10-9 victory in the opener taking advantage of four errors by the Falcons.

A bases-clearing triple by Kyle Cormier in the fifth inning of the second game broke a scoreless tie and was part of a four-run inning for the Falcons. The three-bagger by Cormier, who also picked up the win on the mound, was his first of the year.

The duo of Cormier and Daniel Bernal, who pitched the final two innings, allowed just three hits in picking up UTPB's third shutout of the season. Hits were at a premium for both teams as the Falcons tallied five hits, two of which were for extra bases.

The two teams will play two more games tomorrow starting at noon at Roden Field.

Redman, who is the Mustangs' catcher. "We would like nothing better than to do it for coach Munguia, and for the school since it hadn't been done before."

Being the first baseball team to win a state title is motivation enough for this team, and that has driven the team to play at a high level each game, Withrow said.

"We have for the most part because early in the season we struggled," Withrow said. "But as the season has progressed we've done what we are supposed to do and put teams away."

The Mustangs seem poised to make a run at the squad's first trip to the state tournament since the 2009 season with a team that is loaded with talent and experience.

All that talent and experience has to come together at the right time, but Munguia said he senses the team gearing up for the playoffs during workouts this week.

"It's been a long time since we've played a competitive game," Munguia said. "But they are ready to get back to where it means something, and I know they will show up and play hard."

GOLF ROUNDUP

ZURICH CLASSIC: At Avondale, La., Bubba Watson shot a 4-under 68 in shifting wind conditions Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Josh Teater after the second round of the Zurich Classic of New Orleans.

Watson, the Torrey Pines winner in late January, had a 10-under 134 total at TPC Louisiana.

The long-hitting Watson eagled the par-5 11th — his second hole of the round — for the second time, holing a 20-footer to get to 8 under. He added a 4-foot birdie putt on 13 and a 13-footer on 14, but bogeyed the 18th when he hit his third shot over the green from a bunker. He also birdied the seventh with a 3-footer.

Teater shot a 66, dropping two strokes with a double bogey on the par-5 18th.

John Rollins was 8 under after a 69. Dean Wilson matched the course record with a 64 to join John Senden (67), Jason Dufner (69), Matt Jones (71) and Webb Simpson (69) at 7 under.

AVNET LPGA CLASSIC: At Mobile, Ala., Sandra Gal birdied five of the final eight holes for a 5-under 67 and a one-stroke lead over Amy Yang in the Avnet LPGA Classic, the tour's only event in a six-week stretch.

Gal, the German star who won the Kia Classic last month in California for her first LPGA Tour title, had a 7-under 137 total on The Crossings course at the Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail's Magnolia Grove complex.

Gal bogeyed Nos. 9 and 10 to fall to 2 under for the tournament and even par for the day, then birdied Nos. 11, 12, 13, 16 and 17 to top the leaderboard.

BALLANTINE'S CHAMPIONSHIP: At Seoul, South Korea, Australia's Brett Rumford shot a 9-under 63 to take a three-stroke lead in the Ballantine's Championship, and leave top-ranked Lee Westwood six shots behind.

Rumford had a 10-under 134 total on the Blackstone course in the event sanctioned by the European and Asian tours. Miguel Angel Jimenez (67) and Soren Kjeldsen (66) were tied for second.

Tatum hired as Trinity basketball coach

By Len Hayward
Sports Editor

After Charles Tatum graduated from the University of Arkansas in 2004, he'd done a few different things but he somehow always found his way back to basketball, mainly teaching the game.

It was on the advice of his wife that he decided to pursue a career in teaching and coaching, and now Tatum will be doing it at the high school level.

Tatum, a 1999 Midland High grad who was part of the Bulldogs 1998 state title team, will take over as the new head boys basketball coach at Trinity School next season.

"When I came back, I worked at Alltel for a little while, and Merril Lynch, and I never really found my niche," Tatum said. "Basketball has been in my blood, and I spend so much time teaching it, one day my wife said, 'Why don't you just teach and coach,' and the rest was history."

Tatum will take over a Trinity program that finishes the 2010-11 season with a 10-14 record, and a semifinal finish in the Texas Christian Athletic Fellowship State Tournament. Tatum will take over for Orlando Padilla, who left the program after one year.

This will be Tatum's first high school head coaching job as he coached AAU teams and helped with the West Texas Whirlwinds basketball team the last few years.

Tatum will officially start on July 1, and will also teach seventh-grade Texas history at Trinity.

"It's a tremendous opportunity to be able to coach, not just basketball but to be a part of an institution like Trinity," Tatum said.

Tatum played for legendary Midland High coach Jack Stephenson and former Arkansas mentor Nolan Richardson. Tatum said the squad will use similar defensive principles and the offense will depend on the personnel.

"We are always going to stay true to the defensive side of that, but our offense is going to be more along the lines of our personnel," said Tatum, who has been teaching history at Goddard Junior High. "It's going to be fun I guarantee."

Trinity track teams end the day on top

From staff reports

FORT WORTH -- After five events, both the Trinity boys and girls track teams sit atop the team standings in their respective divisions at the TCAF Track & Field State Championships at North Crowley High School on Friday.

The girls hold a narrow lead atop the standings with 38 points, powered by Ariel Bell and Sophie Kim finishing first and second in the 3,200 meters. Bell won the event with a time of 14 minutes, 27 seconds, while Kim came in behind her at 15:10.

The boys team has 46 points and also took gold and silver in the 3,200. Sophomore Christian Farris set a TCAF record in the event, finishing in 10 minutes, 31 seconds. The previous record holder was his own teammate, senior Connor Brock, who placed second at 10:54.

Alex Young (long jump) and Jason Hilgemeier (triple jump) each pulled in silver medals for the Chargers.

Trinity coach Cindy Brock believes both teams could hold onto the top spots in each division's standings and bring home a pair of state titles. She is, however, more confident in the boys's chances compared to the girls.

"We are cautiously confident the boys will win the team title," Brock said. "We are two to three deep in most events and have a lot of top times. If things go as planned, then we should win. I'm not as confident with the girls because we don't have as many numbers, but there's a chance we could hang on."

Lady Chaps win series opener against WTC

From staff reports

SNYDER — The Midland College softball team won the lone game of a scheduled doubleheader with Western Texas College on Friday as the second game was postponed due to high winds.

The Lady Chaparrals (36-15 overall, 17-4 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference) won the first game of the twinbill 9-4, and then game officials decided to move the second game to Sunday because of winds that were gusting between 40-50 mph, MC coach Tommy Ramos said. The game will be played at 1 p.m. Sunday in Snyder.

The four-game Western Junior College Athletic Conference series will continue at 1 p.m. today at the Freddie Ezell Softball Complex with a doubleheader.

"We probably shouldn't have even played it because it just kept getting worse," Ramos said.

In Friday's lone game, the Chaparrals broke open a tight game with seven runs in the sixth inning.

Midland College's Kayla Parra and Gee Estrada led the offense each combining for two hits, with both each hitting triples. Parra was 2 for 4 with an RBI, and Estrada was 2 for 3 with three RBI. Angel Lopez finished 2 for 4.

In the circle, Yolanda Rios gave up six hits with five strikeouts and three walks in seven innings.

Chaparrals take doubleheader from NMMI

From staff reports

ROSWELL, N.M. — The Midland College baseball team used two quick starts and stellar pitching to sweep two games from New Mexico Military Institute on Friday in Western Junior College Athletic Conference baseball action.

The Chaparrals won the first game 7-0 after scoring a combined five runs in the first two innngs, and then won the second game, 9-1 by the run-rule after again scoring five runs in the first two innings. Three Chap pitchers combined to allow a total of seven hits over the two games.

Midland College (30-24, 19-11 in the WJCAC) and the Broncos will complete the four-game series beginning at 1 p.m. (CDT) today.

In Friday's opening game, the Chaps scored three runs in the first inning and and two in the second to take a commanding 5-0 lead. Midland College added two more in the fifth to complete the scoring, and starter Levi Westerlund kept NMMI in check the rest of the game. Westerlund pitched a complete game shutout and had seven strikeouts and no walks.

Tanner Mitchell was 1 for 4 and scored two runs in the game, and Cameron Mavroulis was 3 for 4 with a run, double and two RBI.

The second game was similar as Midland College opened with four runs in the first and another in the second, then the Chaps added single runs in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh innings. The game ended in the seventh inning because of the run-rule.

Starting pitcher Blake Stewart gave up one run on three hits with five strikeouts and four walks in six innings.

At the plate in the second game, Ryan Small was 4 for 4 with three runs scored and a RBI. Joe Wielbruda was 2 for 3 with two RBI, and had two sacfrifice bunts, while Nick Smelser was 2 for 2 with a walk.

Decker's home run sends Missions over 'Hounds

From staff reports

SAN ANTONIO — Cody Decker's home run in the bottom of the fourth inning held up as the San Antonio Missions took a 3-2 victory against the Midland RockHounds on Friday at Nelson Wolff Stadium.

Decker's home run gave the Missions their third run of the game and a 3-1 lead.

The RockHounds opened the game by scoring a run in the first when Jermaine Mitchell scored on a Stephen Parker single.

But Midland would not light the scoreboard again until the seventh inning when Parker scored on a Michael Spina double to left.

The RockHounds totaled 12 hits against four San Antonio pitchers, but left 14 baserunners stranded on the night.

The lack of offense overshadowed what was a solid performance by the RockHounds pitching staff on Friday. Starter Justin Murray was tagged with the loss after allowing three runs on three hits with three walks and a strikeout in five innings, but the Midland bullpen held the Missions scoreless through the final three innings.

Mickey Storey, Trey Barham and Neil Wagner allowed a combined three hits over those final three innings.

San Antonio starter Casey Kelly picked up the victory as Brad Bach had his seventh save of the season.

Kent Walton was 3 for 5 for the RockHounds, and Parker and Spina were each 2 for 5.

San Antonio (14-7) and Midland (12-9) will play the second game of a four-game series at 7:05 p.m. today.

FRIDAY'S MLB ROUNDUP

INDIANS 9, TIGERS 5: At Cleveland, Carlos Santana hit a grand slam with one out in the ninth inning to give Cleveland a 9-5 win over the Detroit Tigers as the surging Indians extended their home winning streak to 11 games Friday night.

It was the latest dramatic win for the Indians, who mobbed Santana at home plate after the switch-hitter drove a 3-1 pitch from Joaquin Benoit (0-1) over the right-field wall.

Chris Perez (1-1) pitched a perfect inning for the win as Cleveland twice overcame three-run deficits to earn its fourth straight win overall and hand the Tigers their fourth consecutive loss. The Indians remained unbeaten at Progressive Field since April 2 — their longest streak at home since winning 13 in a row in 1996.

Asdrubal Cabrera's two-run homer in the seventh tied the score. Matt LaPorta hit a solo homer off Tigers starter Max Scherzer to tie it at 5 in the seventh.

Cleveland has 17 wins in April, the most by the franchise in 111 years in the AL.

Miguel Cabrera hit a two-run homer off Indians starter Jeanmar Gomez.

ANGELS 8, RAYS 5: At St. Petersburg, Fla., Mark Trumbo homered and drove in four runs, Ervin Santana won for the first time this season and Los Angeles tagged Tampa Bay ace David Price.

Trumbo, who entered with one hit in 20 at-bats over his previous seven games, had two hits, including a two-run homer. The Angels have won nine of 13 road games this year.

Santana (1-3) stopped a personal seven-start winless streak, dating back to last season, by allowing four runs — one earned — and four hits over six innings.

Matt Joyce hit a three-run homer for the Rays, who had won five in a row.

Price (3-3), coming off three consecutive wins, gave up five runs and a career-high 12 hits in 4 1-3 innings.

BLUE JAYS 5, YANKEES 3: At New York, Ricky Romero got right back up after a frightening line drive flattened him, twice retired Alex Rodriguez in dicey spots and pitched Toronto past New York.

Jose Bautista hit his AL-leading ninth home run and J.P. Arencibia also connected off Freddy Garcia (1-1) for the Blue Jays. Rajai Davis returned from the disabled list and stole two bases, then scored when reliever David Robertson botched a first-and-third pickoff play and made a wild throw.

Robinson Cano hit a pair of solo home runs for the Yankees, including a shot in the eighth inning. New York went on to load the bases with one out, but Derek Jeter struck out and Nick Swisher grounded out.

A winner on opening day, Romero (2-3) had gone 0-3 in four starts since. Jon Rauch earned his fifth save.

MARINERS 8, RED SOX 4: At Boston, Jason Vargas pitched seven innings for his first victory of the season and Seattle took advantage of Daisuke Matsuzaka's injury to beat Boston for its fourth straight win.

Jack Cust hit a go-ahead double in the seventh as the Mariners roughed up reliever Bobby Jenks (1-2), who was booed after allowing two runs in the inning and coughing up a one-run lead.

National League

BREWERS 5, ASTROS 0: At Houston, Prince Fielder and Ryan Braun homered and Shaun Marcum allowed three hits over seven shutout innings to lead Milwaukee.

Marcum (3-1) allowed four runs and two homers in his last start against Houston, but didn't permit a runner past second base this time out. He struck out six and walked two.

The Brewers jumped on Brett Myers (1-1) early. Braun hit his 10th homer on a 2-1 pitch over leaping center fielder Michael Bourn in the first inning. Two pitches later, Fielder launched a 460-foot homer to right.

It was Fielder's fifth of the season and the ninth longest homer in Minute Maid Park history.

Myers pitched six innings, allowed five hits, four earned runs and he walked three and struck out eight.

PHILLIES 10, METS 3: At Philadelphia, Ryan Howard hit two homers, including a grand slam, and drove in six runs to back rookie fill-in Vance Worley and lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 10-3 victory over the New York Mets on Friday night.

Howard launched a two-run shot into the second deck in right field off starter Mike Pelfrey in the fourth inning to give Philadelphia a 2-0 lead. After making contact, Howard dropped his bat and stared in admiration for a couple of seconds at the 427-foot drive before trotting around the bases.

MARLINS 7, REDS 6: At Cincinnati, John Buck hit a three-run home run in Florida's five-run first inning and the Marlins held on to beat Cincinnati.

Emilio Bonifacio, Hanley Ramirez and Gaby Sanchez each had two hits for the Marlins, who have won four of five and improved to 8-6 on Fridays.

NATIONALS 3, GIANTS 0: At Washington, Jason Marquis pitched a five-hitter to beat Tim Lincecum, and reserve outfielder Laynce Nix made the most of a rare start by connecting for a two-run homer that carried Washington past San Francisco.

Marquis (3-0) struck out seven and walked none in his fourth major league shutout and first since 2009 with Colorado. Always a dangerous hitter, he helped his own cause with an RBI single and is batting .385.

Roloson, Stamkos help Lightning beat Capitals

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sean Bergenheim, Dwayne Roloson and the rest of the Tampa Bay Lightning picked up right where they left off.

Bergenheim scored early, Steve Downie had a goal and an assist, and Steven Stamkos netted the go-ahead goal on a power play, helping the Lightning beat the top-seeded Washington Capitals 4-2 on Friday night in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference semifinals series.

Roloson, Tampa Bay's 41-year-old goalie, made 26 saves.

Capitals captain Alex Ovechkin was held without a point and limited to two shots. Alexander Semin and Eric Fehr scored for Washington, which led 2-1 before allowing Downie and Stamkos to put Tampa Bay ahead with goals less than 3 1/2 minutes apart late in the second period.

Dominic Moore added an empty-netter with 40 seconds left for the fifth-seeded Lightning, who have won four straight games since falling behind Pittsburgh 3-1 in the first round.

The Lightning played most of Friday's game without veteran left wing Simon Gagne, who was helped to the dressing room after his helmet banged on the ice when he fell hard following a hit by Capitals defenseman Scott Hannan. The Lightning said Gagne would be re-evaluated Saturday.

Game 2 is Sunday night at Washington.

Roloson got the shutout and Bergenheim provided the only goal when the Lightning edged the Penguins 1-0 in Game 7 on Wednesday night. After that series ended, Tampa Bay flew straight from Pittsburgh to Washington, then was back on the ice less than 45 hours later for Friday's second-round opener.

The lack of time off didn't seem to bother the Lightning.

The Capitals, on the other hand, wrapped up their first series against the New York Rangers in five games last Saturday and had nearly a week off. Capitals coach Bruce Boudreau made light of the "Rest vs. Rust" story line Thursday, but perhaps there was something to it.

In the first round, rookie goalie Michal Neuvirth and the Capitals allowed the Rangers to score a grand total of two goals in the three games played at Washington. The Lightning surpassed that total in a span of two periods.

Neuvirth finished with 20 saves Friday. He entered the day leading the NHL with a 1.38 goals-against average and second with a .946 save percentage. No. 1 in the save category? Roloson.

Cowboys pick LB Carter, RB Murray

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys got new defensive coordinator Rob Ryan his first fresh piece — a speedy linebacker. Then they added another running back that can catch the ball out of the backfield.

Dallas used the 40th overall pick in the second round of the NFL draft Friday to select Bruce Carter from North Carolina. With the 71st pick in the third round, the Cowboys selected Oklahoma running back DeMarco Murray.

"Both of them are for their position extremely fast, they can run," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said.

It is the second year in a row the Cowboys used their second-round pick on a linebacker. Last April, they took Sean Lee out of Penn State.

Carter, a former high school quarterback and running back who has been clocked at 4.39 seconds in the 40-yard dash, started 44 of his 49 games at outside linebacker for North Carolina before tearing his left ACL late last season.

Before the injury that required surgery in December and forced him to miss North Carolina's bowl game, Carter had been considered by many to be a potential first-round pick.

"I just didn't want teams to overlook me just because of my knee," said Carter, who was forced to constantly answer questions about his injury during the pre-draft process. "It was very frustrating to hear it over and over again. It's something you have to explain."

Jones said that the Cowboys had Carter, who likely will play inside linebacker in the Cowboys' 3-4 scheme, graded "literally up there" in the first round. They felt fortunate he was available for their second pick.

"We do think we got the opportunity," Jones said. "Rehab probably had something to do with it."

Carter said he has started cutting on the knee and is getting back into a regular routine with his workouts, including squats and leg presses. Jones said Carter should be ready to contribute this season.

With the ninth overall pick Thursday night, the Cowboys selected offensive tackle Tyron Smith from Southern Cal. It was the first time under Jones' ownership that Dallas used a first-round pick on an offensive lineman.

The Cowboys have five picks for Saturday's final day of the draft. That will give them a chance to address needs such as cornerback, safety and defensive end.

Murray set Oklahoma's career record with 65 total touchdowns and 6,718 all-purpose yards in his 50 games. He had two 1,000-yard rushing seasons for the Sooners and averaged 27.6 yards on kickoff returns.

Jones said he called Barry Switzer, the former Cowboys and Oklahoma coach he considers one of the best running back evaluators, to weigh in on Murray.

Coach Jason Garrett likes Murray's versatility running and catching the ball, as well as blocking on third downs.

"He's a guy that's big and sturdy," Garrett said. "You see how long he his, how big his hands are, he's a physical looking halfback."

Murray said he learned plenty from Adrian Peterson the season they were at Oklahoma together in 2006, Peterson's senior year when Murray redshirted. That included blocking.

"I take a lot of pride in that, it was something instilled with me," Murray said.

Though Murray didn't return punts at Oklahoma, the Cowboys have looked at film of him doing that before and expect him to be able to contribute in that way as well.

Carter is also expected to be a special teams contributor after setting a UNC record with seven career blocked kicks (six punts, one field goal).

In his four seasons at UNC, Carter had 215 tackles (145 solo) with 9 1/2 sacks. He deflected nine passes and returned two interceptions for touchdowns.

Smith, Carter and Murray were among the players the Cowboys had visit their Valley Ranch facility before the draft.

"The visit was awesome," Carter said. "Jerry was an awesome guy. We sat down and had lunch together. ... I 'm just ready to learn and ready to get after it."

During that visit, Carter also spent time with Ryan, who taught him a few plays and then quizzed him about what he had learned in a short time. Carter said he did good on that.

And he already has a good impression of his new defensive coordinator.

"He's a fired-up guy. I love his attitude," Carter said. "He's a coach that loves to get after it, he's a players coach. ... He will jump up and down on the sideline with you. You just love coaches like that."

Lee, who was also coming off a knee injury in college, played 14 games in his rookie season for the Cowboys. He had 45 tackles and two interceptions, returning one of them for a touchdown off Indianapolis quarterback Peyton Manning.

Veteran linebackers Keith Brooking and Bradie James, the Cowboys' top two tacklers last season, are both going into the final years of their contracts. Brooking has played 13 NFL seasons, the last two in Dallas, and James has spent all his eight seasons with the Cowboys.

Texans draft Arizona's Reed, Miami's Harris

By Chris Duncan
Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Texans' first three draft picks all seem cut from the same mold: smart, hard-working defensive players who are comfortable fits for Wade Phillips' 3-4 alignment.

The Texans took converted Arizona defensive end Brooks Reed and Miami cornerback Brandon Harris with two second-round picks on Friday. Reed will play outside linebacker for the Texans.

Reed and Harris join first-round pick J.J. Watt, a defensive end from Wisconsin, to boost a defense that ranked 30th overall in 2010.

"We've drafted three players who are smart, good players, who want to work every day," Texans secondary coach Vance Joseph said. "Probably less flash than some other guys that we could've drafted. But we've got three solid players that are going to be the same every Sunday and that's important."

Houston took the 6-foot-2, 255-pound Reed with the 42nd overall pick. Reed started 27 games for the Wildcats, recording 87 tackles, including 15 sacks. He also forced four fumbles and deflected four passes.

"He's a mature, physical player at this level right now," linebackers coach Reggie Herring said. "In the NFL transition from college, play strength and play speed are probably the biggest adjustments. What he possesses right now, along with a great motor and great work ethic, he gives you a chance to make that transition."

Later Friday, the Texans moved up to the 60th overall pick to nab Harris. Houston dealt its third-round (73rd overall) and fifth-round (138th overall) picks to New England.

"He plays a like a five- or six-year veteran," Joseph said of Harris. "His route recognition and his football IQ are very high. When you meet the kid, he's energetic, he's a pro already. He's going to fit right in."

The Texans used their first three picks on defensive players for the first time since 2004.

Phillips, who replaced fired defensive coordinator Frank Bush, said the Texans would use the draft to rebuild a defense that ranked last against the pass. Herring said the renovation of the defense begins up front, and Houston acquired two cornerstones in Watt and Reed.

"This is a great start for our foundation, in our 3-4," Herring said. "When you throw in the other pieces that we already have, you've got a lot of young, speedy, anxious, hungry players who can't wait to get to work. This is a good start for us."

Herring also said Watt and Reed both have strong leadership skills.

"They bring you intensity, into the meeting room and onto the practice field. They will set the stage," Herring said. "They are the types of guys who are not going to look around to see who to follow. They're going to lead. That's the intangible parts and the things that bring extra to the table for this defense."

The knock on Reed is his short arms, but Herring said Reed makes up for that with his explosive burst off the line of scrimmage.

"Every player has holes," Herring said. "The first thing I would tell him when he comes in the meeting is that you win with your feet. And, son, you've got the fastest feet in this draft. Your feet put you in a position to win battles. He has as quick of feet as anyone in this draft. That's what separates him from average."

Appeals court grants stay, lockout back on

By Jon Krawcynski
Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — A federal appeals court threw the NFL back into chaos late Friday, granting the league's request to essentially put the lockout back in place.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis granted the league's bid for a temporary stay of a judge's order lifting the lockout so arguments can be heard on whether that order should be overturned altogether.

"The purpose of this administrative stay is to give the court sufficient opportunity to consider the merits of the motion for a stay pending appeal," the ruling said.

The decision came only hours after teams reopened their doors to players and some basic football operations began, and it came as the second round of the draft was under way.

Vikings vice president of player personnel Rick Spielman said he understood that the lockout would be reinstated. The Vikings hosted first-round draft pick Christian Ponder on Friday, and spent the entire day trying to get him up to speed as much as possible before having to send him home.

"When it was not a lockout, they were allowed to spend time here to get (playbooks)," Spielman said. "Now that the lockout's back in, he'll probably be leaving here shortly."

Tennessee Titans coach Mike Munchak said he was disappointed that the stay had been granted.

"As coaches we just want to get to work and get the players in the building and get going forward. Today was a positive day in that regard," he said. "It was nice having the guys in and being able to see some of the guys who are in town."

In an email to the Associated Press, New York Giants center Shaun O'Hara quickly reacted to the ruling: "yes just saw.....fun while it lasted!"

The 2-1 decision from a panel of the 8th Circuit was issued by Judges Steven Colloton, Kermit Bye and Duane Benton. It included a lengthy dissent from Bye, who suggested temporary stays should be issued only in emergencies.

"The NFL has not persuaded me this is the type of emergency situation which justifies the grant of a temporary stay of the district court's order pending our decision on a motion for a stay itself," Bye wrote. "If we ultimately grant the motion for a stay, the NFL can easily re-establish its lockout."

The appeals court is expected to rule next week on the NFL's request for a more permanent stay that would last through its appeal of the injunction. That process is expected to take 6-8 weeks.

WORKING OUT Dallas Cowboys quarterback Tony Romo, right, and tight end Jason Witten run drills at the team's headquarters and training facility Friday, in Irving.

Romo, top targets show up at Cowboys' facility

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

IRVING — Tony Romo and Jason Witten did more than just show up at the Dallas Cowboys' practice facility Friday. They even went on the field before it was off limits again.

Though they weren't seen throwing any footballs, the Pro Bowl quarterback who missed most of last season because of a broken left collarbone and the perennial Pro Bowl tight end were among a handful of players who ran and did some conditioning drills on one of the practice fields.

At least a dozen players were seen going into the Valley Ranch facility a day after the NFL said players could talk with coaches, work out at team headquarters and look at their playbooks.

"It was great to see players walking the halls," Dallas coach Jason Garrett said later Friday, before the start of the second day of the NFL draft. "Some of the guys got a workout in with (strength and conditioning coach Mike) Woicik and his staff back there, so it was fun to be around them."

By Friday night, a federal appeals court had granted the league's request to essentially put the lockout back in place.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis granted the league's bid for a temporary stay of a judge's order lifting the lockout so arguments can be heard on whether that order should be overturned altogether.

"We certainly would rather have the players here working out, but we understand the nature of this labor situation," Garrett said before the latest ruling. "We as an organization just need to be responsive to what's going on and handle it as best we can given what the rules are and what the situation is."

Among those who arrived the earliest at the Cowboys' facility was Pro Bowl receiver Miles Austin at around 7:30 a.m. He stayed for nearly two hours, then on his way out exchanged high-fives with Igor Olshansky as the defensive lineman came in through the players' entrance.

No players spoke to reporters, who weren't allowed onto the complex grounds in the morning.

Grizzlies finish off No. 1 seeded Spurs in 6 games

By Teresa M. Walker

Memphis wins series 4-2

Zach Randolph had 31 points and 11 rebounds and the Memphis Grizzlies advanced to their first Western Conference semifinals and made NBA history in knocking off the top-seeded San Antonio Spurs 99-91 on Friday night.

Memphis had been the franchise best known for empty seats and the unenviable NBA mark for playoff futility at 0-12 after being swept in its first three appearances. This time, a third straight sellout crowd cheered every bucket with a couple signs begging the Grizzlies to "Finish Them" in a town in desperate need of a hero.

The Grizzlies needed 10 seasons, but they have become just that as only the second No. 8 seed to upset a No. 1 seed since the NBA expanded the opening series to a best-of-seven.

They will play Oklahoma City in the semifinals.

Marc Gasol had 12 points and 13 rebounds for Memphis. Tony Allen added 11 points, and rookie Greivis Vasquez had 11 off the bench playing 24 minutes with Mike Conley in foul trouble most of the game.

Tony Parker led San Antonio with 23 points, Manu Ginobili had 16, Tim Duncan 12 and Antonio McDyess 10.

The Spurs led only twice at 2-0 and again at 80-79 when McDyess hit a 15-footer with 4:41 left.

That's when Randolph, the man cast off and unwanted when he arrived in Memphis in the summer of 2009, took over and scored 17 of the Grizzlies' 29 points in the fourth quarter.

He scored 10 of the next 14 for Memphis, with his hook putting Memphis ahead to stay at 81-80. Conley added a jumper, then Randolph hit a fall-away jumper, two free throws and another fall-away jumper for an 89-82 lead with 1:55 left. Randolph went to the bench to a huge cheer with 3.4 seconds left.

The Spurs, winners of 61 games in the regular season and the dynasty with four NBA titles with Duncan, turned the ball over three straight times while Randolph was putting away this franchise's biggest win. One desperate pass from Ginobili went right off Parker's hands.

San Antonio had gotten a reprieve with Gary Neal's clutch 3 getting the Spurs to overtime as they staved off elimination Wednesday night. But the Spurs talked of how lucky they were to pull out a game when they had their bags packed for the offseason.

Ginobili also had a big shot to help the Spurs stay alive. This game, he had an even more amazing shot, beating the buzzer at the end of the third quarter as he tossed up the ball from half court off balance and trying to beat the clock. He had been 3 of 10 from the floor before that lucky attempt pulled the Spurs to 70-66.

It just wasn't enough for a team that couldn't beat the Grizzlies in Memphis during the regular season and or the postseason. The Spurs edned this season dropping nine of the last 10 on the road and 16 of the last 19 in the postseason away from San Antonio.

Parker opened the game with a pair of free throws, then the Grizzlies took over. Allen scored on a floater in the lane, Randolph tipped in the ball as the start of 10 straight points by the Grizzlies. That prompted Spurs coach Gregg Popovich to scream at a referee for a timeout. But Vasquez and Allen scored for a 14-0 spurt before Parker finally answered with a layup.

Mavs savor ousting Blazers, set sights on Lakers

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press

DALLAS — The verbal jabbing of Phil Jackson and the mind games with Ron Artest will begin soon enough.

First, Mark Cuban wanted a day to celebrate his Dallas Mavericks making it to the second round to face the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Mavs won a playoff series Thursday night for only the second time since reaching the 2006 NBA finals, and it wasn't easy. A colossal collapse at the end of Game 4 in Portland forced a return trip to the Rose Garden for Game 6, and Dallas almost let another big, late lead slip away. Only this time, Dirk Nowitzki found a way to stave off those pesky Trail Blazers, scoring 33 points in the 103-96 victory.

Cuban left the court Thursday night with a huge smile. He sent a tweet complimenting Portland fans for their courtesy and he declined to say anything about his team's next foe. In an email Friday, he declined to comment about anything Lakers-related.

The playful banter is sure to come. But Cuban's biggest statement about the Lakers came last summer, when the Mavericks re-signed center Brendan Haywood, then traded for another big man, the more-agile Tyson Chandler. They made it clear they were collecting all the size they could get to try matching up with Los Angeles.

Here's how the pieces fit: If Chandler and Haywood can take turns helping slow the Lakers' big men, Pau Gasol and Andrew Bynum; if Shawn Marion and DeShawn Stevenson can help slow Kobe Bryant; and if Nowitzki can shake Artest and whatever else Jackson throws at him, then maybe Dallas can end Los Angeles' two-year reign as NBA champions.

"We have our hands full," Nowitzki said.

"We're going to have to play a perfect game to beat them," added point guard Jason Kidd. "I hope we're up for that challenge."

Prince William, Kate Middleton wed amid tradition, romance, large crowds

By Alan Cowell and Rovi Somalya
N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — With fanfare and flags under cool, gray skies, Prince William and his longtime girlfriend, Kate Middleton, were married Friday in one of the largest and most-watched events here in decades — an interlude of romance in a time of austerity and a moment that will shape the future of the British monarchy.

Just 90 minutes after they completed their wedding service, the couple stepped onto a balcony at Buckingham Palace, flanked by the royal family, to greet an enormous crowd stretching along The Mall toward Trafalgar Square — a traditional moment at royal weddings. When they kissed for the first time in public as a married couple, a cheer went up from the crowd, and the prince blushed.

Then — also a recent tradition — the newlyweds peered skyward to observe a 66-year-old Lancaster bomber from the Second World War flanked by Spitfire and Hurricane fighter planes from the same era flying over the palace in salute. While they waited, the newlyweds kissed again, and the crowd roared.

In one brief morning, the ceremony brought a sense of pomp and pageant to Britain's straitened circumstances, lifting the mood of many and seeming to strengthen the royal family's enduring struggle against skeptics critical of its unelected and privileged status in a constitutional monarchy that offers monarchs little real power.

A little over one hour after Prince William, 28, and Middleton, 29, arrived at Westminster Abbey to be married, the newlyweds emerged on a red carpet onto the streets to a peal of bells, stepping into a 99-year-old, open, horse-drawn carriage. They had started the ceremony as a prince and what the British call a commoner. They emerged as the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, their new titles granted earlier Friday by Queen Elizabeth II.

As much as the ceremony itself, Britons

Friends gather in Midland home for early-morning wedding

By Joan Huff

It's 2:50 a.m. The alarm sounds in our bedroom, alerting me that the royal festivities have begun thousands of miles away. Here in Midland — the closest I will come to a front-seat view of the royal wedding — friends will be joining me to share this exciting moment.

The coffee pot is turned on, (a ritual that will be repeated six times over the next few hours), the front and back doors are unlocked. Platters are on the table waiting to be filled with food for the royal breakfast.

The first guest wanders in about 3:10 a.m. It is my mother, Frances Buzard, who drove from Abilene so we could see the wedding together. Thirty years ago, we watched as Princess Diana and

Royal wedding by the numbers

LONDON — The royal wedding by the numbers:

- 1,900 people in Westminster Abbey for the ceremony.
- 650 invited to the post-wedding luncheon reception given by Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace.
- 300 invited for evening dinner dance for 300 close friends of the couple.
- 1 million estimated in London crowd.
- 2 billion estimated global television audience for wedding broadcast.

Royal wedding carriages

A list of cars and carriages used in the wedding of Prince William and Kate Middleton on April 29.

1902 STATE LANDAU: Prince William and Kate Middleton made their first journey as husband and wife from Westminster Abbey to Buckingham Palace in this red-and-gold fairytale coach, built for King Edward VII in 1902. The State Landau took Prince Charles to his wedding in St. Paul's cathedral in 1981, and both Charles and his new bride Diana rode the open-topped carriage back through crowded London streets after the service. Queen Elizabeth II usually uses the State Landau to greet heads of state on state visits to Britain.

ASCOT LANDAU: Two Ascot Landau carriages followed the State Landau, carrying best man Prince Harry, the maid of honor Pippa Middleton, and the bridesmaids. The royal family owns five Ascot Landaus — the queen uses one when parading through the annual Royal Ascot horse races.

SCOTTISH STATE COACH: The queen and her husband the duke of Edinburgh had originally planned to ride in the Semi State Landau but their plans changed. They instead traveled in the Scottish State Coach — built in 1830 and used for several Scottish and English processions.

CARS: Prince William came to Westminster Abbey in a Bentley, Kate Middleton, now the duchess of Cambridge, arrived in a Rolls Royce.

Royal wedding electricity surge

LONDON — The surge in electricity demand following the wedding of Prince William and Kate Middleton easily surpassed the impact of the wedding of Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

The National Grid said it recorded a 2,400 megawatt jump in demand — equivalent to a million tea kettles being switched on — once the couple returned to Buckingham Palace on Friday. That compared to the 1,800 megawatt surge after the Charles-Diana wedding in 1981.

Celebs, sports figures, royalty flock to wedding

By Raphael Satter
Associated Press

LONDON — It was a Who's Who of royalty, power and fame: David and Victoria Beckham, Elton John, royalty from across the world, prime ministers from across the realm and the cream of British nobility were among the nearly 2,000 guests inside Westminster Abbey for Friday's royal wedding.

Olympic swimming legend Ian Thorpe was among the first to arrive. Soccer star Beckham, hair slicked back, looked solemn in the great medieval building, with wife Victoria, a dark dress hiding her baby bump, at his side.

Chelsy Davy, Prince Harry's on-again-off-again girlfriend, was watching as the prince stood with his brother at the altar. Tabloids have speculated endlessly about the state of her relationship with the younger royal — and her invitation to the abbey was seen as a sign the pair were still close.

Other guests: Actor Rowan Atkinson, a friend of Prince Charles best known for his "Mr. Bean" act, Guy Ritchie, director of "Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels," photographer Mario Testino, who snapped the official engagement shots, and singer Joss Stone, who performed at a tribute concert for William's mother in 2007.

Elton John, who sang a version of "Candle in the Wind" at Princess Diana's funeral, was not in his usual eye-grabbing style: He wore a morning coat and (relatively) discreet lavender tie. He was in some ways the exception: For the three hours ahead of the start of the ceremony, the abbey was the place to mingle, see, be seen, and show off.

There were hats and fascinators by the bucketful — Ritchie's girlfriend Jacqui Ainsley sported a big black piece of headgear that looked like an ebony radar dish. Princesses Beatrice and Eugenie — daughters of Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson — had nearly vertical hats that looked liked sculptures had been drilled into their heads.

Socialite Tara Palmer-Tomkinson arrived decked out in royal blue: dress, hat, and heels, the color offset by the brilliant black-and-crimson of the Catholic cardinals invited to the wedding — Cardinal Sean Brady's attendance was a first for an Irish churchman in his position.

The guests came in silver minibuses, Bentleys, and an antique Rolls Royce. They walked down a huge red carpet thrown out in front of Westminster Abbey, which turned the entrance to the medieval church into a kind of royal catwalk show.

Many of Europe's crowned heads of state paused to pose for the cameras. There was Prince Albert of Monaco and his fiancee, Charlene Wittstock, both in gray; there was Swedish Crown Princess Victoria, dressed in peach, and Prince Daniel, his hair swept back over a stylish pair of spectacles; there were Dutch Crown Prince Willem-Alexander and Princess Maxima — the latter in a high-waisted scalloped dress and nude-colored heels.

Some of the royals came in military regalia, each with various configurations of epaulettes, braids, sashes and medals. Diplomats from more than 180 different countries rounded out the ceremony with suits, turbans and robes. Britain's top politicians joined the party — Prime Minister David Cameron, Deputy Prime Minister Nick Clegg, leader of the opposition Ed Miliband were among the senior politicians there.

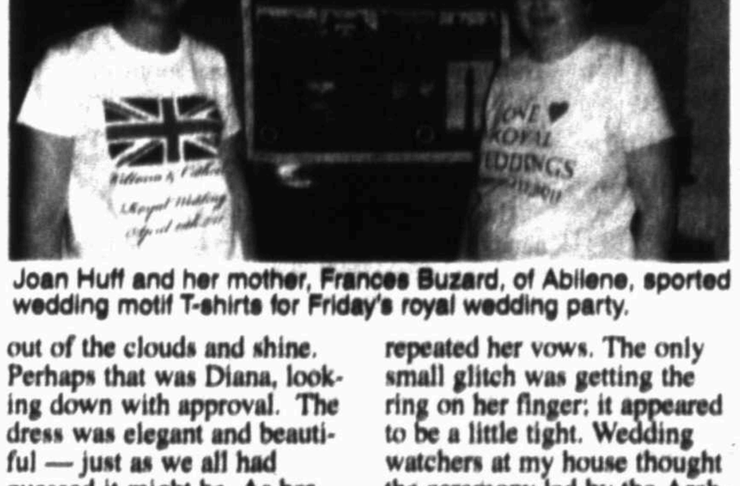
Prince Charles said their vows, and we wanted to share this wedding, too. She brought a surprise — T-shirts with wedding-day motif she purchased from a shop in Abilene.

The front door jiggled around 3:30 a.m. and our next guest arrived. The crown signs instructed each person to take a tiara and outrageously huge diamond ring. I found these at the local "jewelry store" (Hobby Lobby). Crowns and pearls, as well as tea towels from London were used as decorations. In addition, a commemorative plate of the event sat on the table and water bottles had been relabeled with "Will and Kate" or the date of the wedding. Three televisions were tuned in to the broadcast.

We all sat and guessed who was in each car as they began the drive to Westminster Abbey. It was exciting to see what each person was wearing. Prince William and Prince Harry, Prince Charles and Camilla, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip. Finally, Catherine Middleton stepped out and in to a waiting car to pass the thousands who stood to catch a glimpse of her passing.

When she finally arrived at the abbey, everyone was so anxious to finally see her stand up so we could get a good look at her dress. The sun took that moment to pop out of the clouds and shine. Perhaps that was Diana, looking down with approval. The dress was elegant and beautiful — just as we all had guessed it might be. As her sister helped arrange her train, we were glued to the television watching as she entered to meet her prince. Everyone had an opinion on her dress and the decorations in the Abbey as well as the multitude of hats worn by the guests.



Joan Huff and her mother, Frances Buzard, of Abilene, sported wedding motif T-shirts for Friday's royal wedding party.

As tradition had it, Prince William was not watching as she walked down the aisle, but when she arrived on the arm of her father, Michael, he turned and smiled and gave her a reassuring wink. We all thought we read his lips and that he told her, "You look beautiful."

Kate, or the Duchess of Cambridge, as she will be known, seemed to have nerves of steel as she flawlessly repeated her vows. The only small glitch was getting the ring on her finger; it appeared to be a little tight. Wedding watchers at my house thought the ceremony led by the Archbishop of Canterbury was simple, traditional and perfect.

While we watched, we also enjoyed breakfast of egg casserole, miniature quiches, potato casserole, blueberry scones, chocolate almond biscotti, hazelnut biscotti, homemade cinnamon rolls, Union Jack pizza, chocolate chip dip and royal blue velvet cake. As soon as the "I do's" were said, the champagne cork popped and we toasted with mimosas.

We decided we would all get together again (even at the early hour) for the coronation of Prince Charles whenever it finally happens. For now, I guess I'll have to put my tiara and ring away to save for the next royal occasion.

and many others had been fascinated by the closely held secret of what Middleton's wedding dress would look like. The curiosity was satisfied when she rode to the abbey wearing a creation by Sarah Burton for Alexander McQueen in white and ivory, with a train about two yards long. Traveling in a Rolls Royce limousine escorted by her father, Michael Middleton, she wore a delicate veil with intricate lace on the neckline and a diamond tiara lent for the occasion by Queen Elizabeth.

The ceremony — a British specialty in the choreography of royalty — was designed as much to celebrate their marriage as to inject national pride after years of discord and divorce within the queen's family. Reveling in the pageantry after the ceremony in the abbey, the couple waved to jubilant crowds as their procession, escorted by equestrian guardsmen in scarlet tunics and silver breastplates, traversed the streets of London toward Buckingham Palace.

Their open landau was closely followed by a closed carriage for the queen and her husband, Prince Philip.

For a time, the streets more used to black cabs and trundling red buses echoed to the clip-clop of hooves from trotting chargers and antique carriages.

On the final stretch of their brief, first journey as man and wife, the couple passed along the broad ceremonial avenue called The Mall leading to the palace, with the national anthem playing, the crowds cheering and, after fears of rain, a sliver of sunlight nudging past the clouds.

The wedding service had begun with a psalm and a hymn, "Guide me, O Thou Great Redeemer." The couple stood side by side before the altar. As she arrived to join him, Prince William whispered to her, and onlookers said he seemed to be saying, "You look beautiful."

The service followed Anglican tradition, with the prince and Middleton both declaring "I will" to the wedding vows pronounced by the Most Rev. Rowan Williams, the archbishop of Canterbury, the spiritual head of the Anglican denomination. Middleton did not pledge to "obey" Prince William, as was once usual, but instead to "love, comfort, honor and keep" him.

"I pronounce that they be man and wife together," the archbishop said. The service continued with the hymn "Love Divine, All Loves Excelling." Some onlookers noted that while the prince placed a wedding ring on his bride's finger, she did not reciprocate the gesture.

"With this ring I thee wed; with my body I thee honor; and all my worldly goods with thee I share," William said, repeating the words of the archbishop.

The couple's relationship, which began when they were both students of art history at St. Andrews University in Scotland more than nine years ago, has been broadly welcomed among Britons who have followed the royal family through tortured years of dashed hopes and scandal, much of it centering on the doomed marriage of William's mother, Princess Diana, to his father, Prince Charles.

Prince Charles himself attended the ceremony with his second wife, the former Camilla Parker-Bowles, now the duchess of Cornwall, whom he married in 2005 and who was once criticized by Princess Diana as the "third person" in her marriage.

Earlier Friday, the queen announced that Prince William would assume three new titles to be shared with Middleton — the Duke of Cambridge, the Earl of Strathearn and Baron Carrickfergus. A dukedom is the highest rank in British peerage.

Middleton will now be known as the Duchess of Cambridge, but she will also have the titles the Countess of Strathearn and Baroness Carrickfergus. According to British protocol, she will not be able to formally call herself Princess Catherine because she was not born a princess.

A southern flow on the back side of the high pressure area will allow a return of warm and humid air to the lower Mississippi Valley.

Girl fears she's falling behind in teen dating game

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 15-year-old girl who never has been popular with boys. It has always been something that has bothered me. The hardest part is watching my friends date while I have to stay home.

One way I was able to make myself feel better was by telling myself everything would change when high school started. By the end of our first week as freshmen, my friend "Lily" had a new boyfriend and I'm still alone. Her boyfriend actually joked that I should "play for the other team" because I have no chance of getting a guy. Needless to say, my friendship with Lily is over, but her boyfriend's comment is still sticking with me.

Abby, do I really have no chance with guys? Am I overreacting about not having a boyfriend? I feel I should have dated plenty by now. — WAITING FOR THE FIRST KISS IN JERSEY

DEAR WAITING: The comment Lily's boyfriend made was asinine and uncalled for. Please don't measure your worth using that immature boy's yardstick. Not being a belle of the ball in high school doesn't mean you won't blossom socially later. Many people do. You will get the kiss you're craving and validation, too, if you'll be a little more patient.

Use this time to concentrate on your studies, athletics, special interests, volunteering in your community and completing your education. Those things are more important than a boyfriend right now — and they'll leave you with less time to brood. When you're older, you will meet men (not boys) who value what you have to offer. And yes, I know you have probably heard this before, but it's true.

DEAR ABBY: I have a woman friend who is always saying to me, "I wish just you and I could go do something together." So the other day I called her and suggested we visit a local flea market — which we both love — and then go to a local festival. She replied that it sounded great, but she needed to talk to her husband, "Ted," to see if he wanted to join us.

Abby, she does this to me all the time. I'm tired of inviting her for a girls' day and having her come only if Ted is coming. Should I stop the invitations? — TICKED OFF IN FLORIDA

DEAR TICKED OFF: No, before you do that you should tell her how you feel about her sending you mixed messages. And if it happens again, THEN stop inviting her.

DEAR ABBY: I recently took my official college graduation photo and was excited to show my mom. She said she was OK with my giving her one of the small photos because she didn't want to put any more holes in the wall. It really upset me.

I am the first person in my family to graduate from college. Mom's comment about not wanting holes in the wall was unacceptable. I argued with her, cried and told her how I felt. Mom told me to get out and that I had no right to tell her what to do in her house.

I'm still hurt. I feel that if she's as proud of my accomplishments as she says, she should show it. She apologized later, but her comment still stings. Please help me get over it. — UPSET COLLEGE SENIOR

DEAR UPSET: I'll try. Your mother may have been tactless, but it's important that you bury the hatchet. Her pride in your accomplishments is not as important as your own pride in them. Remember that, and no one will ever be able to make you feel diminished!

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, April 30, 2011:

This year, you greet change more openly. Try to see where you are blocking yourself. If you travel or encounter a foreigner in your life, you will witness other approaches and lifestyles. If you are involved in higher education, just taking a seminar will open you up and release a lot of stagnant, learned ways of thinking. Your sixth sense helps home in on issues. Recycle during this tense and busy year. If you are single, check out anyone who enters your life with care. Someone might have a critical flaw! If you are attached, share more of your vulnerabilities. ARIES can trigger you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ Don't allow a momentary bout of the blues to take over. Your issues might have more to do with others. Could someone close to you be negative or touchy? Take a walk with a friend or plan another type of activity that reduces stress levels. Tonight: Dance the night away.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★ You might be repressing what is bothering you to such an extent that you cannot root it out. Do your best, because many of your actions revolve around this issue. If you are tired, take advantage of the weekend — take a nap. Tonight: Make it cozy and intimate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Your personality melts boundaries and advances a situation. Make plans to go to a baseball game or invite some friends on a picnic. You easily could be overwhelmed. Observe. Get to the bottom of a problem. Tonight: You are the party.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ Consider your many different options. Examine how much you are willing to tolerate, be it from an older friend or family member. You don't need to push yourself this hard. Honor fatigue. Take some time just for yourself. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ You might not be in the mood to deal with difficult, testy people. Take off for an adventure. See an art show or perhaps go explore an area near you. A relative or neighbor needs some time but can be a drag! Tonight: Break the mold.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Deal directly with partners, and share more of what is going on with you. There could be some manipulating and power plays going on. If you feel that manipulation surrounds you, know that you are the common denominator. Perhaps you have an unresolved issue. Tonight: A quiet chat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Often you are the source of your problems. Why not adopt another philosophy, at least for a day? Your ability to shake up the status quo emerges. If you get strong reactions, ask yourself if it is you. Tonight: Accept a loved one's invitation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Juggle different people and promises. Revise your plans, even if you don't want to. Toss yourself into a project or go to the gym. Flex and open up. Tonight: Just go for the moment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ What you've been doing hasn't drawn the results you have dreamt of. Have a conversation with a friend who knows a lot about such matters. Tonight: Sticking to your budget and having fun can work together.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ You have a great deal more impact than you realize. Open up to new possibilities surrounding both home and family. Like many people, you are more comfortable with the known rather than the unknown. Note any discomfort, and let it go. Tonight: Entertain from your home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You have the right words, but you also are listening fully. You could get upset about what someone doesn't say or misinterpret his or her words. Before getting distressed, try walking in the other person's shoes, and you might understand where he or she is coming from. Tonight: Out and about — a favorite spot.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ You might be overly aware of the costs of a friendship and your chosen direction. You also might want to revise your thinking about this friendship or have a long-overdue talk with this person. Be open about your ideas. Tonight: Allow another person to treat.

Nissan Maxima in aggressive stance is a four-door sports car

By Bob Plunkett

BLUE RIDGE, Ga. -- The pedal's on the floor and those low-profile performance tires are talking as we cruise the way-curvy 515 highway coursing over Blue Ridge foothills of north Georgia in a 2011 Maxima 3.5 SV, Nissan's muscular mid-size touring sedan.

With its sport-tuned suspension, responsive rack and pinion steering, enormous disc brakes linked to electronic vehicle control devices and awesome torque flowing from a high-tech aluminum engine, Maxima is an impressive vehicle that's nimble and quick and utterly fun to drive.

We see it as a four-door sports car.

A seventh-generation remake of Maxima occurred in 2009 with the wheelbase snipped by several inches and edgy sheetmetal forging the aggressive package styling.

For 2011 editions, Nissan adds some new exterior paint choices (Brilliant Silver and Metallic Slate) and a Sport Package option.

The Sport Package applies 19-inch aluminum alloy Light Hyper Silver wheels with 245/40VR19 all-season tires, a sport-tuned suspension, tail spoiler, xenon headlamps, heated exterior mirrors, heated front bucket seats and steering wheel, paddle shifters, premium leather upholstery and rear bucket seats with console, metallic-finish cockpit trim, smoked headlamp covers and dark chrome grille.

Note the keen shape of taut skin stretching over muscular shoulders and flat side panels interrupted by bulging fenders.

Inspiration for the design came from the twin-hull format of a sleek catamaran sailboat.

Exaggerated blisters on front fenders are separated by a broad hood that slopes down from the rear-canted windshield to a low prow scored with three horizontal bars of a chrome grille.

The double-hull shape lends visual breadth but also contributes to the car's keen score for aerodynamics. In addition, the design achieves nil lift at the front end, meaning front wheels will remain pinned against the pavement when running at speed without wind interference attempting to push the vehicle upward.

At the back of an arching roof the rear pillars work out a unique design that suggests a coupe-like silhouette.

And the tail is tall with a smooth deck over the trunk.

Trailing below Maxima's back bumper are dual exhaust mufflers with new rolled-edge tailpipe finisher tips.

The base-issue wheels are big and fat -- measuring 8 by 18 inches with ten-spoke aluminum alloys painted silver.

Wheels also spread wide on the chassis, as the wheel track width measures to 62.4 inches front and back.

Pushing wheels to edges of the platform adds stability to the stance and enhances Maxima's agility when cornering.

Maxima's suspension is totally independent with lightweight aluminum components.

In front there's a strut design isolated on a subframe.

In back a multi-link arrangement -- also isolated on a subframe -- produces firm stability to keep Maxima's tail in line by minimizing camber change when tracking through a tightly wound corner.

A vented disc brake stands at every wheel and all tie by computerized links to the anti-lock brake system (ABS) with electronic brake assist (EBA) and electronic brake force distribution (EBD).

Further, every Maxima model carries a traction control system (TCS) plus Nissan's vehicle dynamic control (VDC) device which checks lateral skidding on slippery pavement.

Other safety systems include a sturdy steel cage surrounding the passenger compartment and plenty of air bags concealed in the passenger compartment. The collection includes dual-stage frontal air bags plus side-impact air bags for front seats and curtain-style air bags mounted in the roof above front and rear outboard seats.

Maxima stocks a seriously powerful engine.

The juicy VQ35 3.5-liter V6 has DOHC (dual overhead cams) and four valves for each of six cylinders plus CVTCS (continuously variable timing control system).

It delivers top-grade beef -- 290 hp at 6400 rpm with 261 lb-ft of torque at 4400 rpm.

The engine links to Nissan's Xtronic continuously-variable transmission (CVT).

It never shifts from one gear to another because the CVT eliminates step-ratio gears of a conventional automatic transmission as well as the resultant shift shock. Instead, two variable diameter pulleys and a strong steel belt work to match the engine's output with the vehicle's speed, ultimately producing seamless acceleration.

The CVT features DRM (downshift rev matching) and ASC (adaptive shift control) with MSM (manual shift mode) and the optional solid magnesium paddle shifters perched on the steering wheel for hands-on-wheel shifting manipulations.

Maxima's cockpit provides twin front bucket seats and a rear bench with two sculptured positions but room for three.

Nissan constructs the 2011 Maxima in two trims -- 3.5 S and 3.5 SV.

Maxima 3.5 S is the price-leader edition although it carries a lot of standard equipment.

The list of stock gear includes a twin-zone automatic climate system, power controls for windows and door locks and exterior mirrors, cruise control and a trip computer, intelligent key with push-button starter, driver's seat with eight-way power and passenger's seat with four-way power, seats clad in premium cloth upholstery, a power moonroof and an audio system with eight speakers and AM/FM/CD6/MP3.

Maxima 3.5 S adds more premium equipment -- leather covering the seats, foglamps in front fascia, turn signal repeaters in exterior mirrors, driver's bucket with power lumbar and thigh extension, and a Bose sound kit with nine speakers and speed-sensitive volume control plus RDS (Radio Data System) and XM satellite radio service.

But optional packages apply even more equipment.

The new Sport Package adds those performance upgrades, the Premium Package installs luxurious cabin amenities, a Tech Package brings the Nissan Hard Disc Navigation System with Voice-Recognition and a Monitor Package nets a seven-inch touch-screen color monitor and RearView Monitor.

Nissan marks the MSRP on a 2011 Maxima 3.5 S at $30,810, or $33,530 for the Maxima 3.5 SV.

Numbers don't lie.

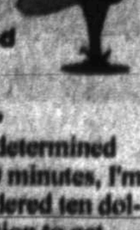
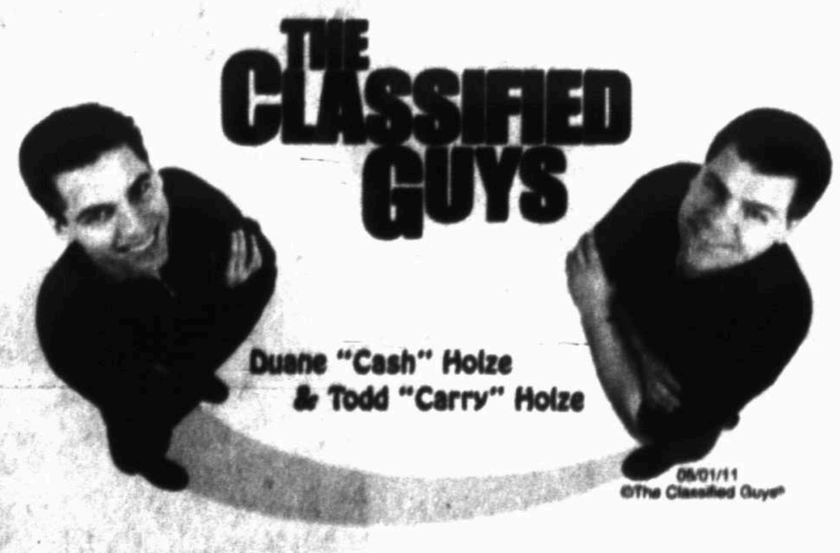
Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,

Last Saturday I bought a food processor from one of the many yard sales I visited. When I returned home, I realized it was missing parts and didn't run properly. I was so angry that someone would sell such junk that I went back to the sale to return it. The woman, however, refused to refund my money. She said that it wasn't her fault it didn't work and even tried to convince me that she never owned a food processor. It took 20 minutes of arguing, but finally she gave me my ten dollars. I felt accomplished until I passed one of the other sales I visited and realized something. I just returned the food processor to the WRONG YARD SALE. I was so embarrassed that I went straight home. But do you think I should have gone back to apologize and give the woman her money back?





Cash: If you were determined enough to argue for 20 minutes, I'm sure the woman considered ten dollars to be a cheap solution to get you to leave.

Carry: As you already know, the situation was a major blunder on your part. The basic answer to your question is, yes. You should have gone back and apologized to the woman. I'm sure she was shocked by your persistence, as well as the broken food processor.

Cash: When you shop at yard sales, there is never any guarantee of a return policy, especially if you bought the item at another sale!

Carry: Before you purchase anything, it's important to try it out and check that all the parts are included. Even with something as simple as a food processor, you can ask to plug it in and make sure the attachments are in the box.

Cash: It's never a good idea to assume that it is complete. Even sellers with the best intentions can accidentally forget parts.

Carry: Now even though the yard sale is over, you can still apologize to the woman and return her ten dollars. It's likely she is still confused by the whole situation.

Cash: If you don't feel comfortable in going back to the house to apologize in person, you could write her a letter explaining the circumstances. Since you were clearly in the wrong, she may appreciate your attempt to resolve your error.

Carry: Although if you decide to drop off the letter, just make sure you stop at the right house!

Carbon Copy

Everyone wants the sale of an item to go smooth. So whether you're the buyer or seller, it's always a good idea to write out a bill of sale. A simple document of the transaction can be reassuring for both parties. Even if you don't have an official form, you can use a piece of paper and write the buyer's and seller's name on it. List the item being sold with a description, price and any other pertinent information. When both parties sign it, it gives everyone a sense of reassurance about the sale.

Return Unopened

Most people who host a yard sale don't have a return policy. Since they are not in the business of retailing and their items are marked down drastically, it is unreasonable to consider such an idea. Retailers, on the other hand, need to take a different approach. Many consider returns a function of doing business and have very lenient policies to keep their customers satisfied. They know that if you have a positive shopping experience, you're likely to shop there again.

Lesson Learned

Our basement is full of stuff from years of collecting. No matter how many times I've asked my husband to clean it out, he always finds some excuse to put it off.

So when he left on his last business trip, I took matters into my own hands. I cleaned out all the used things and held a garage sale to sell it off.

My husband was shocked when he returned home and immediately went to see what was missing. As I stood proud of my accomplishment, he asked, "Did you sell my bowling bag?"

"I did," I calmly replied. "You don't even own a bowling ball."

"I know," he shrugged. "But I was hiding your anniversary present in the pocket."
