Ellis Cuts Admission
Same High Type of Programs Will Be Offered At Lower Admission Charges

A reduction in admission charges at the Ellis Theatre is being announced this week, offering patrons of the show the same high type of program for less money. The new rate schedule is now in effect. In commenting on the reduction, Carl Ellis, owner of the theatre, stated that the programs would be the same, with the same number of short subjects and the feature pictures would be of the same high standard as offered in the past. Mr. Ellis also said in this connection that the reduction may not be permanent, that they were going to give it trial, for the time being.

"Under the new admission schedule," Mr. Ellis stated, "it will take a good many more patrons to come up to our average gross receipts. If we do not have this expected increase it will be necessary to revert back to our old schedule. However we feel that our patrons will take advantage of this reduction and will attend more shows. Under no consideration will we cheapen our programs to meet this admission reduction."

GIVE CREDIT WHERE CREDIT IS EARNED

Although the Perryton Rangers have lost out in conference grid honors, there are two organizations in the Perryton High school that cannot be defeated and should such a contest be held, would take District 1 honors without doubt, and that is the pep squad and the high school band.

In the only two games of the season when the Rangers were outplayed, these loyal groups were "back of the boys" to the very last down just as they were cheering them on in more favorable situations. In the entire Panhandle there is not a more loyal group of girls than the ones that form the pep squad, nor is there a better managed organization. Much credit for this is due the leaders, Miss Janice Murphy and Miss Tommie Lee Hogland, as well as the faculty sponsor, Miss Eugenia Mitchell.

During every game they have paraded the field and presented a new "stunt" in an orderly and well trained manner and they deserve much credit. The High School band, under the direction of G. Ward Moody has also done much to instill "pep" into the Rangers.

RESERVES ARE TO PLAY MORSE

1932 RANGERS WILL MEET MORSE AGGREGATION ON LOCAL FIELD FRIDAY

The 1932 Rangers will meet the Morse grid eleven on the local field at 3:00 o'clock Friday afternoon in their first game of the season, giving local football fans an opportunity of seeing the boys play who will wear the red and white colors into competition next season. The Ranger Reserves are a scrappy bunch of youngsters having been pitted against the regular squad in a game in scrimmage practice and have developed some remarkable material. While they are light in weight they are expected to play Morse a good game. Admission charges, of ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents will be made at this game in order to pay expenses.

BUSINESS HOUSES WILL CLOSE ARMISTICE DAY

Practically every business house in Perryton with the exception of drug stores, filling stations, garages and restaurants, will be closed all day Wednesday, November 11, Armistice Day. It is the desire of the American Legion, sponsors of the Armistice Day celebration that all business houses be closed as a fitting memorial to the great day, just thirteen years ago, when the order, "Cease Firing," flashed around the world. It was the greatest Armistice in the history of the world and it is only fitting that we should have enough patriotism to keep the memory of the day sacred and observe it as a holiday.

Rangers Win First Night Game From Shattuck

PILE UP 21 TO 7 LEAD UNDER FLOOD LIGHTS

Is First Away From Home Game Of 1931 Season; Redem Two 6 To 9 Defeats

Play a Brilliant Game

C. BuDoise Makes 92 Yard Run For Lone Shattuck Counter; Hull, Grogan and Johnson Score

The Perryton Rangers, in their first out of town game and playing for the first time on a lighted field, won from the Shattuck Indians last Friday night by a 21 to 7 count, breaking their hull of the previous two weeks to redeem the two 6 to 9 defeats handed them by Spearman and Follett.

The Rangers, coming out of their quail, broke lose in one of their most spectacular offensive games of the season, upsetting all hope to win from the powerful Shattuck eleven. Max Dean, playing in the backfield for the first time, substituting at quarterback, had perfect control of the team and along with Johnson made steady gains through the line. Hull and Grogan showed their flash around ends, while the entire Ranger line worked as a perfect machine. Shockey's punting was one of the outstanding features of the game.

The Rangers started their offense when they took a Shattuck fumble and advanced to the 1 yard line where they were held for downs. Shattuck punted back and the Rangers pushed forward on a steady advance until Hull slipped over for the first Ranger touchdown, near the close of the first period.

Shockey made a beautiful 87 yard out of bounds punt to open the second period. A line play netted 5 yards and then C. BuDoise made a spectacular 92 yard run for the lone Shattuck counter. The second Ranger counter came in the same period when the locals recovered a fumble and drove down the field. Grogan carrying the pigskin over. Again in the third period the Rangers started an offensive drive on their own 33 yard line and by steady gains, carried the ball over for the third touchdown. Johnson being responsible for the final plunge. Grogan converted two points by place kick after touchdowns and Johnson one on a line buck. Shattuck scored after their touchdown with a pass.

The Rangers were clearly the better team, outplaying the Indians in every branch of the game, registering 13 first downs to 3 by their opponents, gaining 213 yards in scrimmage to 149 by Shattuck and 92 yards of this total was made on one play. Shockey's punting averaged better than 32 yards while the Indians punted a trifle over 30 yards.

The line-up for the start of the game follows:

McMILLEN NOTES
There were forty-two members and one visitor present at Sunday School last Sunday, and sixty-one were there to hear the wonderful sermon preached by Rev. J. M. Sibley. That ought to give Rev. Sibley and our Sunday School Superintendent something to argue about. The Young People's Class elected all officers and appointed a committee to choose a name for the class next Sunday.

The Waka basket ball team came down last Friday to show McMullen how to play ball. The girls did a good job of it by running up a score of 21 to McMullen's 4, but the Waka boys were defeated 11 to 16. They played good clean ball and we are looking forward to another game with them some time later.

The box supper Saturday night was a success in every way. A large showed their appreciation by spending $37.07 for the boxes sold. Games were played after the supper, and everyone seemed to enjoy the entire evening.

Mrs. Urban was missing from Sunday School last Sunday on account of sickness.
D. P. Unruh had the misfortune of losing his granary and sheds by fire early Sunday morning. It is thought the fire was caused from a short circuit in the wiring of his car which was kept in the shed.

The car, some machinery, and about two tons of maize heads were burned, in addition to the buildings. The car and buildings were partially covered by insurance.

Mrs. Gilman Flowers and infant son, Joe Hale, are getting along nicely.
Mr. and Mrs. Earl Waide were dinner guests in the W. E. Dear home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Mallett and Rev. J. M. Sibley visited in the Gilman Flowers home Sunday afternoon.

Thomas Cook was on the sick list the first part of the week.

FRESH in nature's way

CAMELS are never parched or toasted

FRESHNESS and flavor in a cigarette come right back to natural moisture.
If you overheat or process tobacco so harshly as to dry out all natural moisture you drive out freshness and flavor too.
Camel never parches or toasts the fine Turkish and mild Domestic tobaccos it uses—they are naturally smooth, cool, mellow, with natural moisture retained.

That's why the Camel Humidor Pack proves such a blessing to Camel smokers—it brings them a fine cigarette fresh to start with, and fresh to smoke.
If you don't realize what natural moisture means in genuine freshness and flavor, switch to Camels and see.
Try this mild, slow-burning, throat-friendly favorite for just one day—then leave it, if you can!

In the Third corps the Eightieth division had taken the Bois de la Cote Lamont after hard fighting, but attack after attack made with dogged determination across the open space toward Brioules-sur-Meuse was rolled back by the galling fire of the enemy from the town and its vicinity and by the artillery firing from east of the Meuse.

The Thirty-third division maintained its position September 27 and 28 and on September 29 relieved the Eightieth division by extending its left along the northeastern edge of Bois de la Cote Lamont, where it occupied difficult ground under the dominating heights east of the Meuse.

The Fourth division captured Nantillois September 27, but was forced by enemy counter-attacks to retire. The town was retaken and held on the following day by troops of the Fourth and Seventy-ninth divisions. After three days of almost continuous fighting the Fourth had taken the Bois de Brioules and entered the Bois des Ognons, but could not hold the latter against counter-attacks the deadly machine-gun and artillery fire of the enemy. The fortitude and courage of the Fourth division in these operations were inspiring.

Meet Strong Resistance.

The Thirty-seventh division on September 27 attempted to advance beyond the Ivory-Montfaucon road, but each time it reached there was driven back by heavy shelling. On September 28, however, it pushed forward to a position north of the Cierges-Nantillois road. Cierges was entered, but not held. The following day the division again attacked Cierges, but the advance was abruptly halted by concentrated artillery fire.

The Ninety-first division on September 27 encountered strong opposition at Epionville, which was reached, but could not be retained. Eclisfontaine was taken, but was evacuated as an artillery barrage was to be laid on the road through the town the following day.

Epionville was finally captured September 28, and the Bois de Cierges was occupied after hard fighting. Two attacks of the division from the Bois de Cierges on September 29 crumbled under fierce artillery and enfilading machine-gun fire, but on the third attack, despite severe losses, Cierges was taken.

The full advantage of this important gain was lost, however, through the inability of the Thirty-seventh division to advance its left. This placed the right flank of the Ninety-first in a dangerous position, and it had to be withdrawn. During the afternoon the Thirty-fifth division was subjected to a heavy counter-attack, which also involved the left of the Ninety-first, but made no progress against it.

Battle Grows More Intensive.

Three new German divisions had appeared by September 30 on the front of the First corps, and the battle continued with increased intensity.

The Thirty-fifth division was stopped by heavy fire soon after its attack opened September 27, but later in the day it captured Charpeny and advanced to the ridge northeast, though suffering severe casualties. Montrebeau wood was taken September 28, and early next morning a detachment reached Exermont valley, but, being nearly surrounded, withdrew to the starting point. Encountering very heavy artillery fire and an advance of the German Fifty-second and Fifth guard divisions, the Thirty-fifth withdrew from Montrebeau wood, which it had taken the day before. The Thirty-fifth suffered heavier casualties than any other division during these four days of continuous fighting.

The Twenty-eighth division, though subjected to strong artillery and machine-gun fire from the bluffs of the Argonne, captured Montblainville September 27. It could make slight headway against firm opposition from positions in the vicinity of Champ Mahaut, and carried them on September 28, and also captured Apremont. On September 29, after repulsing a German counter-attack, a slight advance was made against the defenses of L. Chene Tendu.

The Seventy-seventh encountered stiff resistance in the Argonne September 27, and was held to a small gain, but moved forward about a mile on September 28. Next day its right advanced with little opposition.

During the first four days of fighting the First army, west of the Meuse, had made a maximum advance of about eight miles, reaching the Bois de la Cote Lamont-Nantillois-Apremont. The enemy had been struck a blow so powerful that the extreme gravity of his situation in France was obvious to him.

CHAPTER LX

The second phase of the Meuse-Argonne operation, the period from October 1 to 11, involved the heaviest strain on me and the army. There was little time to make readjustments among the troops, heavily engaged, without giving the enemy a respite in which to strengthen his defenses and bring up reserves.

The general attack was resumed at 5 a. m. on October, meeting desperate resistance by the enemy. In this attack, the Fourth division of the Third corps, in three days' bitter fighting, captured and held the Bois de Fays, making a gain of over a mile. Advances into the Bois de Peut de Faux were forced back by vicious counter-attacks. In similar hard fighting the Eighteenth division gained a foothold in the Bois des Ognons, against very heavy machine gun fire.

In the attack of the Fifth corps, the Third division pushed forward in the face of strong resistance. During the next two days this division extended its gains, but could make no headway against the Bois de Cunel. The Thirty-second division, which had taken Cierges October 1, advanced to just south of Gesnes on the fourth despite very severe hostile fire, and next day captured that town.

On the left of the army, the First corps was very successful. The First division in a fine display of power on October 4, drove a deep wedge into the enemy's line. This was of great value in affording space for the attack toward the Argonne to be launched later.

The fighting here was characterized by the stubborn nature of the German resistance and the offensive spirit of the division.

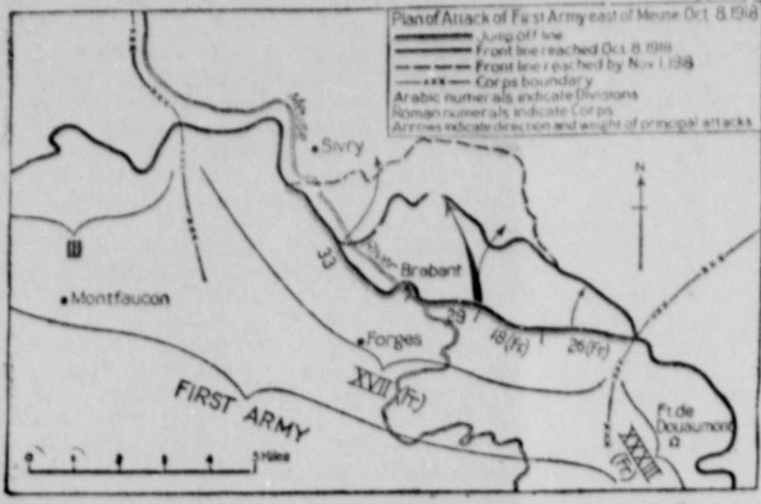

The right of the Twenty-eighth division fought its way down the Aire river in liaison with the First and captured Chebery. The left of the division encountered much opposition and made but slight gain, notwithstanding its repeated attacks. The division was now facing west for nearly three miles, along the Aire river. The Seventy-seventh division between September 29 and October 4 continued its attacks in the Argonne, advancing about a mile over difficult terrain.

In the assault of October 2 a mixed battalion of the division moved forward more rapidly than the troops on its right and left, and became completely surrounded by the enemy. It became popularly known as the "Lost Battalion."

For four days every effort of the division to relieve this beleaguered force was unsuccessful, and every effort of the Germans to force its surrender was without avail.

French Call for Help

In the meantime the French Fourth army on our left had been held up at Blanc Mont. As a consequence, Marshal Foch appealed to me for assistance. Although I was loath to spare any troops from our front so serious was our own situation, I sent, in accordance with my promise, the Second division (Lejeune), which was followed by the Thirty-sixth (W. R. Smith.)

October 3 the Second division, accompanied by French tanks, in a brilliant maneuver against heavy machine gun resistance, stormed and captured the dominating German positions on the Medeah Farm-Blanc Mont Ridge, and continued on toward St. Etienne, which was taken on October 3 with the aid of one brigade of the Thirty-sixth division. This success carried forward the French divisions on its right and left and, as reported by General Gouraud, enabled the whole Fourth army to advance.

Our Second Army Organized. The broadening of the front of attack to the east of the Meuse and the probability that we should soon become engaged along our whole line made it advisable to establish another army. Accordingly, the Second army was formed with its front extending from the Moselle to Francoeur-en-Woevre, and placed under the command of Major General Bullard on the twelfth. The remainder of our front from Fresno-en-Woevre to the Argonne forest, inclusive, was left under the First army, to which Major General Liggett was assigned. Both commanders were recommended to me for promotion to lieutenant general.

My status now became that of commander of a group of armies. Major General Summerall was placed in command of the Fifth corps to relieve Major General Cameron, who was given command of the Fourth division. Major General Hines was promoted to the command of the Third corps in place of General Bullard. Major General Dickman, commanding the Fourth corps, was given the First corps and Major General Muir the Fourth.

These changes generally took effect October 12, but I retained direct command of the First army until the sixteenth.

CHAPTER LXI

The Meuse-Argonne operations carried out between October 7 and 11 consisted of four specific attacks, as follows:

(1) October 7. The First corps employing the Eighty-second division between the First and Twenty-eighth divisions, attacked the eastern edge of the Argonne forest.

(2) October 8. The French Seventeenth corps, re-enforced by the American Thirty-third and Twenty-ninth divisions, attacked east of the Meuse on the front Beaumont-Brabant-sur-Meuse, with the object of seizing the heights there.

(3) October 9. The Fifth corps, re-enforced by including within its front the First division, to which was attached a brigade from the Ninety-first division, attacked the heights of the Bois de Romagne.

(4) October 10-11. A general attack on the 20-mile front from Beaumont west to the Aire river. The French Fourth army had not been able to keep abreast of the American First army, and it was evident that clearing the Argonne forest would materially aid its advance. The opportunity presented itself just at this time. Although on October 6 the enemy continued to hold the heights of Cunel and Romagne, nevertheless sufficient space had been secured along the Aire river to warrant an attack to the west with the object of striking the rear of the enemy's positions in the Argonne forest.

There was another important factor that entered into the decision to force the withdrawal of the enemy from the Argonne. This was the predicament of the "Lost Battalion," which under Maj. C. W. Whittlesey had been holding out near Binarville since October 2.

Efforts to relieve the battalion had so far been unsuccessful, and the men had consumed their rations, and expended most of their ammunition, although most of the ammunition, although our aviators had tried to drop small amounts to them. The battalion was resisting heroically against great odds, without any thought of surrender.

Pursuant to the plan an attack was made by the Twenty-eighth and Eighty-second divisions against the left and rear of the enemy's positions in the region of Chatel-Chebery and Cornay. After a night march of eight miles the Eighty-second division (Duncan) entered the line between the Twenty-eighth (Muir) and the First (Summerall). In a series of daring movements to the west by the Twenty-eighth, Cornay, Chatel-Chebery and the dominating hills northwest of Apremont were captured.

Although the continued operation of these two divisions was attended by severe fighting the results were immediate. From that region, the Argonne forest was cleared, and the Seventy-seventh division was enabled to advance to the relief of its "Lost Battalion." It then pushed on the north in pursuit of the retreating enemy.

East of the Meuse General Claudel's French Seventeenth corps, east of the Meuse, attacked October 8 with the object of seizing the heights northwest of Beaumont. At that time it consisted of two French and two American divisions, the Thirty-third and Twenty-ninth, making the corps in numerical strength two-thirds American. Though opposed by strong German resistance the assault was successfully directed by General Claudel, and our lines were advanced during the next few days to the commanding ground between Beaumont and Richene Hill.

In a well-coordinated operation the Thirty-third division (Bell) crossed the Meuse early October 8 by bridges constructed during the night, captured Consenvoye, and progressed up the neighboring slopes. The following day a further advance was made, but heavy fire from the Borne de Cornouiller and the failure of the troops on the right to keep up forced a retirement to the morning line. This ground was retaken despite strong resistance, and by night of the 10th the division had established itself on the west slopes of Richene Hill.

The Fifty-eighth brigade of the Twenty-ninth division (Morton), under command of the French Eighteenth division, against considerable opposition pushed forward into the woods south of Richene Hill on the 8th, and during the next two days completed the capture of those woods. On the 11th, the Twenty-ninth division took command of its Fifty-eighth brigade, still under the French Eighteenth division, on the 12th made important gains in the Bois d'Ormont.

In the next installment General Pershing tells of the third phase of the battle.

PERRYTON, TEXAS

APPROVES LOW COST HIGHWAY

JUDGE ELY, STATE HIGHWAY HEAD, GIVES OKEY TO CALICHE BASE CONSTRUCTION ROAD

The announcement last Saturday from the offices of Judge W. R. Ely, chairman of the Texas State Highway Commission, that he approved of the cheaper type of state and federal highway construction, should give impetus to the highway building throughout the Panhandle where there is an abundance of local road building material.

Judge Ely stated that some people had the idea that the department did not favor any type of road except concrete. This is a mistake, he added. Caliche base roads with penetration tops are the best highways that can be built anywhere. This statement from the head of the highway commission is of particular interest to the people of Ochiltree county, for it is the very type of road that we have figured on constructing, and as Judge Ely says, it can be built for not to exceed $10,000 per mile. Quite a difference from the $30,000 which was paid for concrete a few years ago.

Another big advantage with the caliche base road is that practically the entire cost of the highway is spent right at home, on account of it being a local material. Farmers, truck owners and laborers of Ochiltree county are very anxious to see action started at once to vote bonds for the paving of No. 117 and No. 4. On No. 117, the state pays a dollar for every dollar paid by the county, while on No. 4, the county only pays one-third of the cost, the state and federal governments sharing equally the other two thirds.

Endorse Red Cross

Heads of National Education Association and Parent-Teachers Endorse Red Cross

Mrs. C. W. Callaway, Chairman of the Ochiltree County Red Cross Chapter's membership Roll Call, which begins November 11th, made public today two statements from outstanding educators, just received from the Midwestern Red Cross Headquarters, St. Louis. The first, from Florence Hale, President of the National Education Association, said in part: "I am very glad indeed to endorse heartily the work of the American Red Cross, not only as a social agency of great value but also as an educational organization closely concerned with bringing about world understanding and world harmony. There is no other agency in the nation which occupies quite such a unique place in the social, civic and educational life of our country as does the American Red Cross. I sincerely hope that educators all over the country, in whatever line of work they are engaged, will give more than usual attention this November to the story of the American Red Cross and to its needs for the coming months."

"The Junior Red Cross is a recognized part of our school work everywhere. Already, many definite results have been seen along the line of interesting the children of the world in each other, so that the coming generations will be more likely to settle their differences in a civilized manner. Through interchange of the Junior Red Cross dolls and other friendship gifts, the peoples of the world are beginning to see how much alike they all are in their big underlying motives. This leads them also to realize the folly of sacrificing important interests to make war because of differences which are, after all, trivial when compared to the great similarities of purpose. The National Education Association is deeply interested in everything that pertains to the American Red Cross."

The second statement is from Mrs. Hugh Bradford, President, National Congress of Parents and Teachers; "The members of the Parent-Teacher Associations have as individuals been most appreciative of the splendid services rendered by the American Red Cross. It is our hope, in the realization of the immediate needs of children, that our members will be as far as possible join in Red Cross membership at this time."
