Texaco bill faces Senate filibuster

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill labeled Texaco's "only opportunity" to emerge from bankruptcy won slim approval from a state Senate committee Tuesday but faces a filibuster on the Senate floor.

After five and a half hours of often-heated testimony before a gallery packed with red-star-wearing Texaco employees, the Senate Jurisprudence Committee voted 4-3 for a bill that would save Texaco from having to post a $12 billion bond to continue its historic legal battle with Pennzoil. If it becomes law, Texaco would have to put up no more than $1 billion to maintain its appeals.

Texaco chairman Alfred DeCrane called the action "a very positive step." Pennzoil supporters said the bill "stinks" and called it "rank special interest legislation" that gives Texaco another end run around the Texas courts.

"I'm here today to urge your consideration of a bill which, in Texaco's perspective, would provide the only remedy from our possibly being excused from bankruptcy prior to the total disposition of this matter," DeCrane told the committee. "I see it as our only chance, but I don't see it as necessarily a sure chance."

Joe Jamail, Pennzoil's lead attorney, said the bill "is not going to help them one damn bit" and accused Texaco of trying to change the rules in the middle of the game.

The Senate Jurisprudence Committee voted 4-3 for a bill that would save Texaco from having to post a $12 billion bond to continue its historic legal battle with Pennzoil.

"What they're saying is, 'We the wrongdoers want to set the price to pay for our wrong,' " Jamail, a flamboyant Houston trial lawyer, said. "This is wrong and everybody that knows anything about it knows that it is wrong."

"There's not enough perfume in France to take the stink off it," Jamail added.

Texaco filed for protection from the bankruptcy court April 12, three days after the bill was introduced in the Legislature and one day before a state appeals court hearing to determine what security it must post to continue its appeals.

A Houston jury in 1985 awarded Pennzoil a record $10.53 billion judgment against Texaco, ruling that Texaco had wrongfully persuaded Getty Oil to break a merger contract with Pennzoil and instead merger with Texaco. A state appeals court reduced the award to $8.53 billion, but the judgment has grown to about $12 billion with interest.

Under current Texas law, Texaco must put up a bond equal to the amount of the judgment while it appeals the decision. DeCrane said posting a $12 billion bond would "dismember the company."

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said he introduced the bill "not out of concern for the big rich" but in response to "countless phone calls from widows, widows of Texaco pensioners, who thought their husbands left them well fixed to live off the dividends of their stock."

American volunteer slain in Nicaragua

MATAGALPA, Nicaragua (AP) — American colleagues of the Oregon engineer killed by U.S.-backed Contra rebels today blamed the Reagan administration for his death and reaffirmed their commitment "to stand alongside the Nicaraguan people."

The body of 27-year-old Benjamin Ernest Linder, 27, of Portland, arrived in this provincial capital early today, his coffin carried by four men from the village more than 20 miles away where he was slain Tuesday.

Linder was the first American volunteer working on behalf of the Sandinistas to be killed by the Contras in the rebels' 5-year-old guerrilla campaign against the leftist government.

Nicaraguan accused the Reagan administration of criminal responsibility for his death.

Nicaraguan officials said Contra rebels killed Linder and two Sandinista militiamen in an attack in the northern village of La Camaleona in neighboring Jinotega province, where the rebels have been increasingly active in recent months.

Linder was working on the construction of a small hydroelectric plant in the village 85 miles northeast of Managua.

An American acquaintance of Linder said he usually carried an assault rifle "for protection" when he ventured outside the village, but did not know if he had the gun with him Tuesday. One report said he was unarmed at the time of the Contra raid.

About 50 foreign volunteers, most of them Americans, paid last respects at the office of the presidential delegate in Matagalpa, where Linder's coffin was placed. Dozens of wreaths surrounded the open casket holding the body of the red-bearded volunteer.

"We hold the Reagan administration and the U.S. Congress fully and directly responsible for the murder of Benjamin Ernest Linder and call on the people of the U.S. to deamand an immediate end to all us support for this unjust war," said a statement drafted by Linder's fellow volunteers and read by Mary Risacher, of Washington.

"Rather than being intimidated by this assassination, we U.S. citizens working in the northern war zone of Nicaragua reaffirm our decision to continue to stand alongside the Nicaraguan people in their struggle for peace and justice," the statement said.

Former area banker convicted on lesser charge

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Former Odessa banker Kenneth Martin Jumper grinned widely and excitedly Wednesday, as he left the federal courtroom to hug family members after a jury had convicted him of taking a $100,000 kickback in 1982 for his procuring a $2-million loan.

His was a mixed blessing.

His conviction was for a misdemeanor offense, and the maximum penalty which U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton can impose is a one-year prison term and a $5,000 fine.

But Jumper was acquitted on a felony count, which could have resulted in a five-year prison sentence, for making false entries in bank records.

"The positive side is that the jury found the defendant (Jumper) guilty of lining his own pocket," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship, who joined Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom McHugh in prosecuting the 58-year-old Jumper.

Jumper, former chief executive officer and chairman of the board of the now-defunct National Bank of Odessa, currently is a loan officer for a Bryan savings association.

"We would have preferred that the jury convict him on both counts," said Blankinship, who previously won Midland-Odessa white-collar-crime cases involving bank presidents, vice presidents and directors. "I don't have any quarrel with it (the verdict)," he said.

Jumper's defense attorney, former Ector County District Attorney John Green of Odessa said this morning that Jumper is "happy and elated" with the outcome. Green added his expectation that the misdemeanor conviction would be overturned on appeal.

The "kickback" or gratuity offense was a misdemeanor crime until October 1984, when it was upgraded to a felony offense for which a five-year prison term could be exacted.

PTL board seeking 'new face, new direction' for ministry

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL's board moved to put "a new face" on the ministry by cutting off payments to the Rev. Jim Bakker, his wife, and the woman whose tryst with him led to the scandal the Rev. Jerry Falwell says has shattered faith in all evangelists.

The board also decided Tuesday that Bakker would not be allowed to return as the ministry's head, agreed to investigate allegations of homosexuality and wife-swapping at PTL, and accepted the resignation of the Rev. Richard Dortch, his successor as president and host of the "PTL Club" TV show, Falwell said.

"I was conscious that if PTL is to make it, (it's) got to have a new face, new direction, new administration, everything new," Falwell, the board's chairman, said Tuesday night on ABC News' "Nightline."

Falwell, the founder of Moral Majority and a TV evangelist, was to be host of today's "PTL Club" show. In a broadcast interview earlier in the day, Falwell firmly ruled out any appearance by Bakker on the television program anytime soon.

"I certainly am never going to say 'never' to anyone, but I can only say this: At this time or even anywhere in the foreseeable future, a guest appearance (by Bakker) would be out of the question," Falwell said on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Falwell said he hasn't heard from Bakker since Tuesday's board meeting, and he repeated his contention that Bakker should not try to make a comeback at PTL.

"I would be deeply disappointed and very surprised if Reverend Bakker indicated that he was more concerned about himself than the future of the ministry," Falwell said. "I've said it before and I'll say it now: His return to PTL would guarantee the end of the ministry and I don't think that's what he wants."

In its five-hour meeting at PTL's Heritage USA complex, the board decided that Bakker and his wife, Tammy, would no longer receive salaries or bonuses, Falwell told a news conference. The Bakkers reportedly were paid $1.6 million in salary and bonuses last year.

The 500,000-member PTL, which stands for People That Love or Praise The Lord, is at least $50 million in debt, Falwell said. Attorneys will help settle royalties the Bakkers earn from sales of records and other items.

The board's executive committee will investigate allegations by the Rev. John Ankerberg, a TV evangelist, that Bakker was involved with prostitues and homosexuals, Falwell said. He said Bakker, who has denied the charges, will be allowed to "face his accusers" when the panel interviews them.

Falwell, appearing Tuesday night on "The Larry King Show" on Cable News Network, said the board heard tapes from people who made the allegations to Ankerberg, and called the tapes "convincing."

"These people are credible people," Falwell said, adding that he needs to hear Bakker's response before forming a final opinion.

The board also named Harry Hargrave, a Dallas investment consultant, as chief operations officer. His job will include sorting through the ministry's financial problems.

Bakker relinquished control of his ministry and the Heritage USA retreat here to the new board on March 19 after admitting a tryst with Jessica Hahn.

Some $265,000 in PTL money had been set aside for Miss Hahn to ensure her silence about the tryst. A total of $150,000 was placed in a trust fund.

Albany's Catholic schools presenting sex from Christian perspective

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a special series on AIDS education. Contributing were Hearst news staff members in San Francisco (Calif.), Seattle (Wash.), Albany (N.Y.) and Midland as well as the Hearst Washington Bureau. This story deals with the program in Albany.

By TIM SPOFFORD
Hearst News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — Catholic schools in New York's Capital District are responding to the outbreak of AIDS with lessons in human sexuality that emphasize a Christian perspective.

In addition to teaching the facts about AIDS, teachers in the Albany Roman Catholic Diocese are urging students to "say no" to sex outside marriage.

The Albany diocese takes credit for having the first such program in New York state, and one of just a few in a Catholic school district anywhere in the nation.

"We're the only diocese in the state with a human sexuality curriculum in place," said Diocesan School Superintendent Gail B. West.

Catholic schools treat the subject of acquired immune deficiency syndrome within church teachings, West said. For example, since Catholic teaching bars sex outside of marriage, teachers avoid discussing the use of condoms to prevent AIDS. "That's a non-issue, because if you're abstinent, there's no need for a condom," said family life educator Jack Simeone.

Diocesan schools began developing a sex education program five years ago, after Albany Bishop Howard J. Hubbard called for a new human sexuality curriculum for all Catholic school students in grades kindergarten through 12.

Teachers in the diocese received training in the new lessons, and parents met with school officials to learn how sex would be discussed in their children's classrooms. The new curriculum went into effect this year in grades kindergarten through 8.

Detailed lessons about AIDS do not begin until the seventh grade. For students in the lower elementary grades, the new curriculum avoids graphic, detailed information about AIDS and many other aspects of human sexuality.

"It's not as though you go into the kindergarten and talk about AIDS, because you wouldn't go into kindergarten and talk about drugs or alcohol, either," said Sister Maureen Joyce, executive director of the diocese's Community Maternity Services.

In kindergarten through fifth grade, there is no mention of AIDS in classes, although teachers will answer questions one-on-one if a pupil asks.

The reason for avoiding general discussion is that most grade-school pupils are too young to comprehend the AIDS problem, diocesan officials said.

"As sophisticated as kids seem to be, they're still extremely vulnerable," said Sister Kathleen Pritty, principal of St. Joseph's-St. John's School in Rensselaer (cq). "We don't want to terrify kids."

She added, "If a child says, 'My daddy has AIDS,' " then that child's questions are answered privately.

Lessons about sex begin as early as the second grade, when students are taught about breast feeding and the proper terms for "anus" and "urethra," for example.

Waldheim says U.S. lacks proof against him, is 'hurt' by ban

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — President Kurt Waldheim, his voice quavering, today attacked U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese for barring him from the United States without proving allegations Waldheim helped persecute Jews during World War II.

In a speech in Eisenstadt, 40 miles south of Vienna, Waldheim departed from prepared remarks to express his hurt at the decision, and to assail Meese for placing him on a "Watchlist" of undesirable aliens.

"What use are the statements of Mr. Meese that 'it's just a suspicion on the basis of which he was put on the so-called Watchlist?'" Waldheim asked, his voice shaking with emotion.

"'We didn't say he was guilty, we just voiced a suspicion,'" he said, in an apparent mocking imitation of American authorities.

The U.S. Justice Department says evidence shows Waldheim aided in the deportation and execution of thousands of Jews and partisans while a lieutenant in the German army in the Balkans.

On Tuesday, Meese said Waldheim "participated in persecutions for reasons of race or religion under the Nazi regime."

"We have gone over his record meticulously," Meese said in Brussels. "We permitted Mr. Waldheim and his lawyers to submit all kinds of facts or evidence," for his defense, "but his evidence was not sufficient." The attorney general did not make public the evidence he said the United States had.

On Tuesday night, Waldheim denied the allegations in a five-minute address on Austrian radio and television.

"Let me emphasize that there can be no proofs of guilty conduct," he said.

Waldheim, speaking today to an audience of World War II victims in Eisenstadt, the site of a Jewish cemetery and museum, said that the American action left him with "a spiritual wound."

"Everywhere in the world the legal principles are valid that somebody can only be declared guilty if the guilt was proved," Waldheim said. "In the whole democratic world, this principle is valid.

"And this principle, ladies and gentlemen — and this you will understand especially as victims of the war — was seriously violated."

Voicing a sentiment widespread among Austrians, the president added that "we regret this all the more because it is a question here of our American friends for whom we have friendly feelings."

The 68-year-old Waldheim, who was secretary-general of the United Nations from 1972-82, was elected president of Austria, a largely ceremonial post, last June.

The American decision has shocked Austrians and triggered what Waldheim on Tuesday called "an impressive wave of sympathy and solidarity" behind the president.

"Regardless of party preferences, a deep emotional wave is going through Austria," Die Presse said in a front-page commentary. "Bitterness and abhorrence will follow the shock."

"Nothing was examined, but (U.S.) presidential elections are coming up," it said. "Mr. Bronfman and his World (Jewish) Congress want some kind of advance payment."

The World Jewish Congress headed by Edgar Bronfman began issuing charges against Waldheim last year, and Bronfman was among American Jewish leaders who praised the U.S. decision.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, on a visit to Paris, also praised the move but said Tuesday he understood it was a compromise because of doubts within the American judicial system about the charges.

In his broadcast speech Tuesday, Waldheim made no mention of the Holocaust or Austria's role in World War II. Germany annexed Austria in 1938, and some Austrians served in the German army.

Foreign media freer to report in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — After courts struck down key parts of censorship decrees, foreign media are reporting on South Africa more freely than at any time since a state of emergency was imposed in June 1986.

Local news organizations are proceeding more cautiously, pending expected government appeals of the court rulings.

U.S. and British television newscasts Monday showed police whipping students — white and black — at the University of Cape Town after a demonstration protesting the South African commando raid on alleged guerrilla targets in Zambia over the weekend.

Newspapers of the English-language Argus group carried photographs of police firing tear gas.

Such television footage and photographs had been forbidden under emergency decrees overturned by two Natal province Supreme Court rulings within the past five days.

Plane emergency lands for asthmatic passenger

LONDON (AP) — A British Airways jumbo jet made an emergency landing at a Royal Air Force base in southwest England after a 12-year-old asthmatic girl on board lost consciousness, officials said.

The 747 was carrying 370 passengers to London from Orlando, Fla. The British girl, Susan Watts, became ill about 90 minutes after the plane took off from a Bermuda stopover.

A nurse gave her oxygen, but as the supply diminished the captain decided to make a emergency landing at the air base at St. Mawgan, 300 miles west of London.

"It was definitely a life-or-death dash," said the captain, Barry Stevens.

A Royal Navy helicopter flew the girl and her parents to a hospital in Truro on the Cornwall peninsula, where officials later said she was conscious and "in a comfortable condition."

Museum artifact stolen

MANTOVA, Italy (AP) — An ancient Egyptian stone slab that once was used for magic rituals was stolen from the Egyptian museum in this northern city, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

The agency said Tuesday that the slab was stolen April 23 while the museum was open to the public. It said the theft was not disclosed until now, but did not say why.

The 5-by-4-inch oblong slab, which is made of black basalt and decorated with a god-figure sculpted in relief, is from the 4th century B.C.

America in Hebrew copy

LONDON (AP) — A Hebrew manuscript written in 1551 has been found to contain the earliest known Hebrew description of America and the Caribbean islands, Sotheby's auctioneers said.

The manuscript came light in Israel after being owned by the same family for more than 400 years. It is expected to sell for $40,000 to $50,000 at a May 24 auction in Jerusalem.

Sotheby's said Tuesday the manuscript is the earliest known copy of a book of science, geography, mathematics and astronomy by Moshe Almosnino, who lived from 1516 to about 1581.

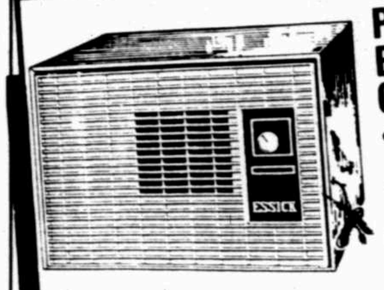

The book includes a description of "an inhabited place of the new Indians" called America after the Italian navigator Amerigo Vespucci, who sailed to the West Indies and South America in 1499 and 1501.

By sixth grade, they learn about the existence of sexually transmitted diseases such as AIDS or syphilis. According to the new curriculum, teachers are also expected to tell sixth-graders that "sexual conduct between persons of the same sex is homosexuality."

"AIDS is mentioned, but detailed instruction about it does not begin until the seventh grade," said Sister Margaret Sickles, spokeswoman for diocesan schools.

In seventh grade, students learn that AIDS is fatal and that the victim, as well as the victim's family, may suffer physically, socially and spiritually.

A key theme in these early lessons is the need for Christian understanding.

"We talk about what we do for other people — how we comfort these people and their families," said Dennis McDonald, a consultant who helped develop the new curriculum.

"We want children to respond in a compassionate way to AIDS victims," added Sister Margaret.

According to the new guidelines, seventh-graders should learn that sexual intercourse outside marriage — both heterosexual and homosexual — "is a sinful act" that may lead to "insurmountable guilt, anxiety and hurt."

Teachers warn that risks such as pregnancy and venereal disease go with promiscuity.

"It's a countercultural message — it's a radical message," said Sister Maureen. "It's going against society's values at the moment."

While TV, films and billboards exhort young people to enjoy extramarital sex, Catholic schools are warning teen-agers they may pay a heavy psychological price for one-night stands, she said.

"These short-term relationships really take their toll on people, and they're no way to live," said Roseanne DeFabio, principal of Saratoga Central Catholic High School.

Although the lessons on AIDS for high school students are yet to be completed, the Albany diocese has outlined the curriculum to be taught, beginning next fall. High school students will learn about AIDS in four different classes: science, health, social studies and religion.

In a biology class, for instance, they will study the way the AIDS virus breaks down the immune system and makes the body susceptible to pneumonia and other diseases.

In social studies classes, students may learn how the AIDS outbreak is affecting society's attitudes toward monogamy. Religion teachers, meanwhile, will tell their students that AIDS is one potential consequence of engaging in sex outside marriage.

Health teachers may explain the extent of the AIDS epidemic, and how the medical community has tried to cope with it. Diocesan officials said that for high school students, there will be explicit discussions of sodomy and precisely how the exchange of bodily fluids can lead to AIDS.

Because of this frank approach to the facts about AIDS, at first glance Catholic schools may seem much like public schools, Simeone said. Both tend to outline the alternatives and consequences that youths face when they are sexually active, he noted.

But while public school teachers are often told to conceal their values on such subjects, Simeone said, teachers in Catholic schools are expected to take a "strong moral stance."

For example, in the Albany diocese, teachers are required to tell their students that sexual activity is barred outside of marriage. Furthermore, Catholic students are not instructed that condoms can help them prevent AIDS.

Public schools tend to assume that teen-agers will be sexually active, so they teach their students that using a condom is one way to prevent venereal diseases, Simeone said. "But we don't operate under that assumption, so the condom is a non-issue."

Not everyone agrees it's a non-issue.

Ted Eastlund, an Albany physician who is also chairman of the education committee of the AIDS Council of Northeastern New York, said Catholic schools make a mistake by failing to teach youths about condoms.

"I think it's important to assume that youths are sexually active," Eastlund said. "The condom is one of the excellent ways to prevent sexually transmitted diseases."

Even some Catholics in Albany argue that parochial school students should learn about condoms in their classes. "Within the curriculum, there should be information about safe-sex techniques, including condoms," said John Harden, vice president of New York State Catholics for a Free Choice.

Despite the stand of the Catholic hierarchy, Harden added, rank-and-file Catholics have much the same views as non-Catholics on the subject of contraceptives.

But diocesan officials insist that recommending condoms to prevent venereal disease amounts to encouraging sex outside marriage.

"Marriage is a sacrament," West said, and Catholic schools teach that sex without matrimony is wrong. "That's their mandate."

THURSDAY: Demand for information

Rap artists aim at AIDS education

"Get protection and use sex safely
Use condoms, use jells, or just say no
AIDS is claiming victims like the cocaine blow
It's a heavy situation so don't take this light
Don't throw your life away for a toss in the night...."

SAN FRANCISCO — Rap artists Leroy Palmer and Johnny Williams belted out these lines to win a contest sponsored by the San Francisco Health Department this year.

The contest, part of the health department's campaign against AIDS, was aimed at teaching teen-agers about the disease. Palmer and Williams, both 18, have been asked to perform their rap as a public service announcement on radio and television. They also won $500.

"Everybody thinks AIDS is serious, but a lot of them say they aren't worried about it because they are straight," said Palmer. "This is the kind of stuff kids should know. They should be careful."

Teens who entered the contest had to rap on two of three subjects — AIDS, sexually transmitted disease and drugs. Contestants were given a list of definitions of key terms and were encouraged to use correct anatomical and medical terms.

Palmer and Williams, who both graduated last year from Riordan High School and now go to San Francisco City College, created a stir when they ended their performance in front of the "rap off" judges by throwing dozens of condoms into the air.

"People started grabbing for them," said Williams. "A few kids got their hands slapped."

Williams said he picked up most of his knowledge from TV, family and friends, but he never had classes that discussed AIDS at Riordan, a private school.

"Kids should be learning about AIDS from the schools," he said. "A lot of them have the wrong information."

Reagan feels instruction must include right, wrong

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says instruction in schools about AIDS and sex education should not be separated from teaching what is right and wrong.

The president, who is scheduled to attend a fund-raiser for the fight against the deadly disease on May 31, said Tuesday that he was "shocked" condoms had been given out during a church service in an effort to publicize their use in combatting AIDS.

In an interview with six newspaper reporters, Reagan also complained that sex education dwells on the physical, rather than the moral, implications.

Also, the president's staff is considering setting up a blue-ribbon panel to consider the issues involved in the health threat.

Linder anticipated attack by rebels

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The only U.S. citizen reported killed by the Contras in Nicaragua once said he expected to be attacked by the rebels fighting the leftist government.

"The Contra generally don't attack against the army," said Benjamin Linder, in a Dec. 20, 1984, interview with WPKN in Bridgeport, Conn. "They attack against campesinos (peasants). We're expecting them, although hoping that they don't attack our project, it's a possibility."

Linder, a 27-year-old volunteer, was reported killed Tuesday morning.

Nicaraguan officials said the mechanical engineer died in a small village in northern Nicaragua where he was working on the construction of a small hydroelectric plant for the left-wing Sandinista government.

Friends said he was there for humanitarian reasons only.

"He was not there to fight a war. He was there to build," said Kirsten Moller, a former co-worker.

"We have blood on our hands. We as a country killed that boy," said Howard Glazer, a neighbor and longtime friend of Linder's parents in Portland. "It was our bullet."

A member of the organization to which Linder belonged said he was singled out by the rebels and executed. Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto said he was kidnapped first. However, a social activist gave a conflicting account, saying Linder died during a grenade and gunfire attack that also killed two Nicaraguans.

It was the only reported death of a U.S. citizen working for the Sandinista government during its war against rebels backed by Washington.

"It's the beginning if we don't do something to stop this," Glazer said. "There will be a lot more dying."

William Seaman, a friend and fellow engineer, said he warned Linder about working in remote areas subject to Contra attacks and land mines.

"We said, 'Ben, maybe the Contras won't kill Americans, but a land mine isn't going to discriminate,'" Seaman said at his Portland home. "He said he was careful. He insisted on working in a lot of areas where a lot of other people wouldn't go."

Seaman, a member of the Portland Central America Solidarity Committee, called Linder courageous and dedicated to his work. "He was wanting to give something to the people of Nicaragua who he really loved dearly."

Linder was a member of the Nicaraguan Appropriate Technology Project of NICA, a pro-Nicaragua group based in Bellingham, Wash., said Tom Voorhees, a NICA member, in a telephone interview from his home in Clinton, Wash.

"He was a very strong believer in the right of the Nicaraguan people to exercise their own self-determination and to try to build a non-aligned country, and his work had a lot to do with relieving human suffering and was strictly of a humanitarian nature," Voorhees said.

Linder's father, David, is a retired pathologist who worked for the Oregon Health Sciences University.

AMERICAN

After the statement was read, someone shouted the name of the slain man, and those gathered shouted in unison, "Presente! Presente!" — meaning "He is with us." A wake was to be held for Linder tonight.

An estimated 200 Americans are in Nicaragua as volunteers. They generally say they work in Nicaragua because they oppose U.S. policy toward this country or because they simply want to help.

Alejandro Morales, an employee of the Nicaraguan Energy Institute for which Linder had worked when he first came to Nicaragua in 1985, told The Associated Press in Matagalpa that Linder was "a very special man...happy." He said the American was "a highly qualified technician" who "went to work in an area where (even) the Nicaraguan technicians were afraid to go."

Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto sent a protest note to Secretary of State George Shultz saying the attack was carried out "by a counterrevolutionary group under contract to the U.S. government."

D'Escoto said the attack "makes clear once again the terrorist and criminal nature of the acts promoted by the administration of the United States within its bloody official policy of state terrorism, a practice that has been condemned by the international community."

There were conflicting reports on the slaying. A government official, commenting on condition of anonymity, said six Contras walked into Linder's office and shot him.

D'Escoto's note said Linder was "kidnapped and later murdered."

Eduardo Griffin Noland of the private U.S. group Witness for Peace and some Nicaraguan travelers who arrived at the scene shortly after the raid both quoted witnesses as saying the attack occurred while Linder and six Nicaraguans were on the outskirts of town surveying a pipeline.

The travelers told reporters in Matagalpa that Linder was unarmed when a Contra commando unit struck with grenades and rifle fire. They said four of the Nicaraguans with Linder were militiamen, who customarily provide security in small settlements in the war zones.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty said she had no information on the reports of the death. "We're checking into them," she said.

BANKER

Jumper is the seventh former Midland-Odessa banker to be convicted of bank fraud since 1985, when the Federal Bureau of Investigation intensified its investigation into banking practices in West Texas. Sentences have ranged from six-year to 24-year imprisonments, and restitutions have been up to $550,000.

While Jumper is sheduled for sentencing at noon June 9, his 37-year-old son, Ricky Lan Jumper of Midland, is to be sentenced May 19 on five counts to which he had pleaded guilty Friday. Two of those five counts are related to the charges brought against his father.

The senior Jumper was acquitted of the felony offense of making false bank statements by not reporting his interest in an oil-well drilling venture, DAK Drilling Co. The prosecution claimed that Jumper's 9.9 percent interest in DAK was a conflict of interest with his banking business. Jumper's son, who had owned a similar interest, pleaded guilty to the offense.

The senior Jumper maintained that he was not obligated by law to report his DAK interest, since it was below a 10-percent share. The government claimed otherwise.

The younger Jumper also pleaded guilty to accepting a $10,000 gift from William B. "Bill" Sears, the late Odessa grocer, investor, and NBO director and NBO's largest stockholder, for procuring a $2 million loan for Son's Fabrication Inc., which had built oil-field rigs. He could be sentenced up to 18 years in prison by Bunton.

Ricky Jumper's father was convicted of receiving $100,000 from Sears, who had signed a guaranty on a $2-million loan from Mercantile National Bank in Dallas. That loan, which was funneled through NBO, went to Terry Lawson and David Pearson, co-owners of Son's Fabrication. Kenneth Jumper, who denied he was acting as an agent for Mercantile in procuring the loan, said Sears paid for the $100,000 as "consulting fees."

Out of that $100,000, Jumper said he paid his son, who was an NBO vice president and commercial loan officer, the $10,000 as a "finder's fee." Lawson and Pearson of Son's Fabrication initially had approached Ricky Jumper, who was their loan officer, about obtaining the $2 million loan, which NBO could not fund. The senior Jumper said he reported the $100,000 income from Sears to the Internal Revenue Service. "I didn't try to hide it at all," he said. Jumper was paid by Sears after Son's Fabrication sold the 12,000-foot rig, apparently for $3.7 million at peak of the oil boom, and Son's Lawson and Pearson had paid Sears $250,000 for guaranteeing the $2-million loan.

Jumper denied that he had helped secure the loan in his role as NBO's chief executive officer. He said Mercantile would not fund the loan without a guarantee to ensure Mercantile got its $2-million were Son's not to repay the loan.

"Bill (Sears) decided he would like a joint venture with the (Son's Fabrication) rig," Jumper said. He said Sears, who had $1.4 million in deposits at NBO, was "one of my closest friends" and was "always looking for an investment." Jumper, who had joined NBO in late 1958 just before the bank opened in early 1959, was earning between $50,000 and $60,000 a year as NBO's CEO. About a year before the bank failed in 1983, it had deposits of $150-million, testimony indicated. Jumper said Sears had agreed to pay him $100,000 after Jumper had signed an IOU as a co-guarantor on the $2-million loan. "I would have owned Bill Sears 40 percent of anything he lost." But since Sears didn't lose but gained, Sears paid Jumper $100,000 or 40 percent of the $250,000 fee for guaranteeing the loan.

"(In) 36 years of banking," said Jumper, "I never knowingly violated any banking regulation."

In his closing arguments in the two-day trial, Blankinship said that Jumper was "wearing three hats" at the time he was working for NBO in securing the $2 million "participation" loan from Mercantile. "He represented NBO. He represented Mercantile. He represented Kenneth (himself). He was selling out all three."

He told the nine-woman, three-man jury that "Trust is what banks are built on. Trust is what we have got to have.

"If you (jurors) won't insist on it (by their verdict), there won't be any integrity in banks."

McHugh focused on "conflict-of-interest" allegations.

"A man may not serve two masters," McHugh said. "If he has two masters to answer to, he may not know which way to go."

Defense attorney John Green differed.

"The fact that he (Jumper) was making money is not wrong in this country of ours," Green said. "This bank did not suffer."

Federal statutes do not prohibit a banker from making outside investments as along as those ventures do not conflict with or have bearings on the bank for which he works.

Green said that NBO "never funded one cent on this $2 million loan" from Mercantile through NBO to Son's Fabrication. "To make money on a partnership deal (with Sears)... is not a violation of the law."

Green suggested he was concerned about the public's image of bankers as a result of the FBI's investigation into banking practices and as result of indictments and convictions of bankers.

"The fact that bankers have a bad name right now," Green. "I worry about that. People don't like bankers. People don't like lawyers."

Pennzoil attorney Laurence Tribe, a Harvard Law School professor, said the bill "would impose a special rule for the big and the rich" and is unconstitutional. Jamail said Texaco workers and pensioners would be better off under Pennzoil management and away from executives who "could care less about workers in Texaco refineries."

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, spent about 45 minutes questioning Jamail in detail about the lawsuit. Some Texaco lobbyists feared that the delay would cost Parker the votes he needed to move the bill out of committee. Washington said he would filibuster the bill when it comes up for Senate debate.

DeCrane, who did not testify at last week's House Judiciary Committee hearing, spent the afternoon talking privately with several members of that panel. An informal survey of seven of the nine members found lukewarm support for the measure, but Chairman Mike Toomey, R-Houston, said he expects the committee to vote it out "within a week."

Miss Hahn received a small amount of the remaining $115,000, with the rest going for legal fees. The payment was arranged by Dortch.

The sex-and-money scandal now threatens all TV and radio ministries, and has hurt all Christian churches in America, Falwell said. "There's a general distrust out there we must heal. I don't ever remember a time when people were having such a heyday ridiculing all that is Christian.

"A lot of faith has been shattered."

Following Falwell's news conference, Mrs. Bakker stepped outside her Palm Springs, Calif., mansion, and said she and her husband will miss the people at the Christian retreat they founded.

"We're very sad right now," she said, her voice breaking. "Jim will be back soon and he's going to give everyne a statement. He'll...explain our side of what happened.... I just want to thank everyone for being patient with us."

Mrs. Bakker would not say where her husband was, but said the statement could come this week.

PTL will no longer make payments to Miss Hahn because her public statements about Bakker violated provisions of an agreement under which she received them, said attorney Norman Roy Grutman, counsel for the board.

Grutman said PTL would seek repayment of money already given to Miss Hahn.

The 27-year-old Miss Hahn tearfully told reporters Tuesday that it was a former Bakker aide who leaked the details of the tryst and settlement.

"I have done everything I've been asked to do. I've kept quiet," she said in front of her West Babylon, N.Y., house. "My main interest is seeing this over. It has nothing to do with money right now.

"I'm tired of people being ruined by this thing. There's no reason for this to go on week after week. I would like it to end so people can feel encouraged when they go into church — so they can feel peace."

The board also accepted the resignation of the Rev. Rex Humbard Sr. from the board and fired Bakker's personal aide, David Taggart.

Falwell said Humbard, a Pentecostal, told him: "I'm a little older than you are, and I'm not able to ride this horse."

PTL reported $129 million in revenues last year from its TV ministry and associated enterprises, including the Heritage USA theme park, shopping center and hotels.

Falwell said he was unsure who would replace Dortch as host of the "PTL Club," but that he would preside for the next few days. "I do not plan to permanently sit in that seat."

Firm honors 'most heroic' dogs

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — A pair of dogs credited with saving a man's life received medals and were honored as the nation's "most heroic" dogs.

Champ and Buddy, owned by Harvey and Anneliese Schmidt of Dickinson, were cited Tuesday on the steps of the Capitol for going "above and beyond the call of duty as man's best friend."

Ken-L Ration sponsored the 34th annual "Dog Hero of the Year" award, presented to the tune of music from a high school band to Champ, a 7-year-old terrier, and Buddy, a 3-year-old mixed breed.

The two dogs were credited with saving Marvin Dacar's life on Dec. 13, 1985.

Dacar, of Bismarck, became trapped beneath a 2,600-pound heavy-equipment tire he was unloading alone at a Dickinson warehouse near the Schmidts' home. For more than two hours, in 20 below zero temperatures, he pounded on a door and screamed for help.

For most of that time, Buddy and Champ barked in their home, until Mrs. Schmidt finally let them out.

"They stood at the end of the driveway and barked as if they wanted me to follow," she said. "I went with them towards the warehouse, where I heard someone yelling."

Special counsel charges Channell with conspiracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The independent counsel investigating the Iran-Contra affair today charged fund-raiser Carl R. "Spitz" Channell with conspiracy to defraud the U.S. Treasury of taxes owed on more than $2 million raised for Nicaraguan guerrillas by the foundation he headed.

In a one-count criminal information filed today by independent counsel Lawrence Walsh in federal court, Channell was charged with conspiring with others "known and unknown to the independent counsel" to defraud the Internal Revenue Service "by impeding, impairing, defeating and obstructing the lawful governmental functions of the IRS" in the collection of income taxes.

The charge, the first filed since Walsh's position was created in December, carries a maximum penalty upon conviction of five years imprionment and a $250,000 fine.

A criminal information is a charge filed by a prosecutor without going before a grand jury.

The fact that Walsh brought in an information rather than an indictment means that Channell waived his right to have the case heard by a grand jury. In virtually all cases, this means that the defendant charged in the case has agreed to plead guilty to a specific charge and cooperate with the prosecutor.

Gail Alexander, a spokeswoman for Walsh, said the charge "carries the same weight (as an indictment) but is just a different instrument. A defendant can waive his right to an indictment for a number of reasons."

Asked why Walsh proceeded without going to the grand jury, she said, "I think at a court hearing this afternoon it will become apparent."

Correction

In the April 27 edition of the Reporter-Telegram, it was erroneously reported that a vehicle driven by Shelly Hodges, 2700 W. Washington Ave., was traveling eastbound on U.S. Highway 80 when it struck another vehicle.

The Department of Public Safety reported the last name of the woman as Hodges, but the correct last name is Hedges. Also, the DPS reports her vehicle was traveling westbound.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

AP Laserphoto

WOLF CREEK, Mont. (AP) — Wary residents kept guns at hand today as police searched the wild country for up to four snipers, including two escaped killers linked to a total of six slayings, who fled after a four-hour shootout.

Aircraft with heat sensors buzzed through the night skies over the foothills around Holter Lake, a reservoir on the Missouri River. More than 100 law officers searched for the heavily armed fugitives, who slipped away after trading hundreds of rounds with police Monday and wounding two campers.

Two of the suspects are wanted in a double-slaying last weekend in Colorado, authorities said.

"My gut feeling is they're still in the area," Lewis and Clark County Sheriff Chuck O'Reilly said Tuesday evening, but he conceded that the suspects could slip into neighboring Cascade and Meagher counties.

The snipers apparently climbed mountains northeast of a ridge where the shootout occurred, O'Reilly said. He would not say what new steps authorities might take.

Police searched cabins and boathouses, warning residents to lock their boats.

Frenchy Forgette, who operates the Oasis Bar, said Tuesday that residents are keeping guns within reach. Forgette quoted one patron as saying he planned to have a "Wolf Creek lunch," — a can of beer and a loaded gun — and empty both.

"I got the gun out," said a clerk at the Canyon Store and service station, who refused to identify himself.

County, state and federal officers combed the sparsely populated area Tuesday, but found no trace of the snipers. Three planes and a helicopter flew over thousands of acres surrounding the reservoir, and a tracking dog was brought in.

The shooting broke out Monday afternoon after shots were fired at officers investigating an abandoned, rolled-over van near Holter Lake.

O'Reilly said the van was taken from the scene of the double slaying.

The shooting intensified, and two campers were slightly wounded when gunfire struck their car. The shooting lasted until darkness, when deputies backed off and began evacuating residents and campers from the recreation area midway between Helena and Great Falls.

One camper, John Harrington, who lives in Great Falls, 45 miles north of the recreation area, said he spent Monday night with his wife and seven other people near the shooting area.

"We were nervous. The biggest thing to me was that these guys might want hostages," he said. "We'd doze off during the night. We were waiting for that knock at the door." He said the group pulled two motor homes and a camper on a pickup truck together, believing there is "safety in numbers."

The two male suspects were identified late Tuesday as escapees from a California penal institution where they were serving terms for homicide.

Steven Miller, 34, and John "Doc" Whitus Jr., 36, escaped Feb. 21 from California Medical Facility in Vacaville, said prison Lt. Bob Houston. Whitus was convicted in 1972 of two drug-related killings; Miller was convicted in 1976 of two slayings, including a police officer.

Until late Tuesday, O'Reilly and authorities in Adams County, Colo., had tentatively identified the men as Paul or Michael Brandt and David Charles Lund but said those names might be aliases.

The sheriff said the two men have been described as survivalists, but he was not sure whether they are experienced in the mountains.

Adams County Sheriff's Capt. Carl Blesch said authorities want to question the two in the execution-style slayings of Grace Kuamoo, 73, and Russell Swartzmiller, 48, whose bodies were found near Byers, Colo., last weekend.

The victims also were survivalists, he said, adding that a number of guns were stolen in Colorado.

A third person with the men was identified only as a woman they picked up in Wyoming on their way to Montana. O'Reilly said the woman is "not a hostage," and he believed a fourth person, possibly another woman, is with the fugitives.

State Rep. Tom Bulger of Great Falls said he and his wife may have given a ride to one of the snipers Monday.

Bulger said he picked up a man who said his van had overturned. The tall, mustached man was intoxicated but amiable, Bulger said, and they talked about fishing on the way to Holter Lake Lodge.

The snipers were last spotted Monday night, when about 300 rounds were fired, O'Reilly said.

Nakasone visit, trade sanction vote coincide

WASHINGTON (AP) — A battle between the Reagan administration and House sponsors of a tough trade-retaliation bill is clouding Japanese Prime Minister Yashurio Nakasone's mission to ease trade frictions.

Both sides were predicting a close vote today on a proposal by Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., that would force Japan and other nations with large trade surpluses with the United States to reduce those imbalances by 10 percent a year — or face retaliation.

The vote, scheduled for late today, was to come just hours before Nakasone arrived in Washington for meetings with President Reagan and other top officials.

House leaders said the measure was not intended as an insult to Nakasone, although some lawmakers conceded it could prove embarassing to the visiting head of the Japanese government.

"If the leader of Japan is right here, it's a lot easier to get a message to him," said Rep. Jim Jeffords, R-Vt.

The Gephardt proposal is the most restrictive amendment expected to be consided by the House as it debates a far-reaching, 900-page trade bill.

The Democratic-controlled chamber debated the measure — similar to one it passed last year but which died in the then-Republican controlled Senate — for nearly seven hours Tuesday, but did not take any votes.

A private headcount by Democratic leaders showed late Tuesday that Gephardt could count on 170 to 180 firm votes for his measure, according to sources who spoke only on the condition of anonymity. If all members of the House cast their votes, 218 votes are required for adoption.

However, the sources stressed that a large bloc of undecided votes remained, particularly among Democrats.

Republican sources, who also spoke only if not named, said their headcounts showed that 10 to 20 of the chamber's 177 Republicans would vote for the Gephardt measure.

They agreed that undecided Democrats held the key.

Nakasone, who will meet with Reagan on Thursday, also is seeking the lifting of $300 million in U.S. tariffs on Japanese televisions, computers and power tools — but administration officials suggested he may leave empty handed.

Reagan imposed the 100 percent tariffs two weeks ago.

Safety board urges FAA to cut back flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Near-collisions between aircraft are becoming all too frequent, and the Federal Aviation Administration should cut back some flights to ease the pressure on air traffic controllers, the head of the National Transporation Safety Board says.

NTSB chairman Jim Burnett raised his concerns in an interview Tuesday as it was learned that four more near-collisions involving comercial jetliners had occurred last Saturday, an unusually high number for a single day.

FAA confirmed the incidents, but makes a practice of not independently making the information public, claiming it is raw report data that has yet to be investigated.

It was the third time in less than a month that at least three near-collision reports were filed in a single day by the pilots of commercial airliners. Last year there were on average fewer than one such report a day.

"The indication we get is that this situation is getting worse instead of better and very dramatically so," Burnett said. "And we have in addition a lot of pressure being built...to expedite traffic in order to reduce delays."

Burnett in recent weeks has stepped up his criticism of the air traffic control system, questioning the FAA's ability to handle an increasing number of flights. He told The Washington Post this week that perhaps too many flights are being permitted and some flight reductions are needed.

Elaborating on the remark, Burnett said Tuesday he wasn't advocating across-the-board flight reductions but said the FAA should "even the peaks and valleys" of airline activity. He also said flights during peak periods and in busy airspace should be shifted or eliminated to maintain the margin of safety.

"In my view we're already in a situation of concern, even before having reached the summer period" when air travel is higher, the NTSB chairman said.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen, in a statement issued through a spokesman, rejected suggestions that any new restrictions are needed. "The FAA is charged with the safety of the air traffic control system. At no point would we compromise that responsibility and permit more traffic than the system can handle," Engen said.

William Bolger, chairman of the Air Transport Association, noted that the airlines have gone 20 months without a fatal accident and said in a statement, "There's no reason to cut back summer flights." The airline group has complained that air traffic control shortcomings already are restricting traffic and causing delays.

Burnett, however, insisted that there are danger signals and maintained that he is relying on the FAA's own statistics.

Last year, he said, the FAA received 57 reports of "critical" near-collision incidents involving commercial aircraft in which planes "avoided hitting each other merely by chance."

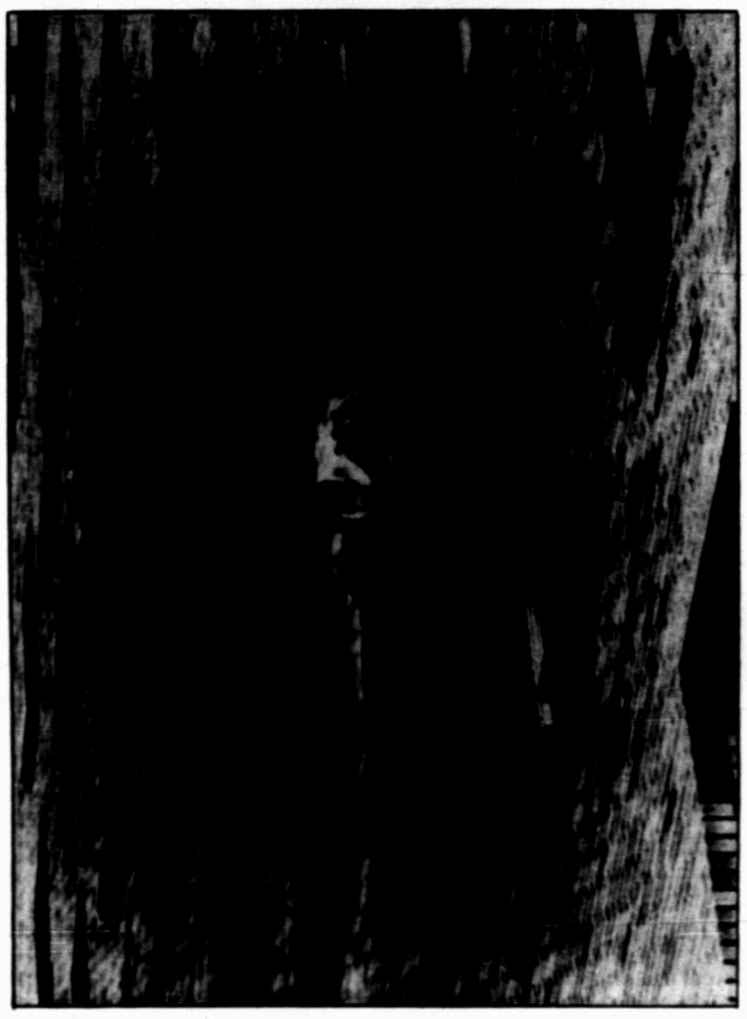

He also cited, as he has previously, the increase of all near-collision incidents during 1986, an increase of such incidents by 13 percent during the first three months of this year and the recent soaring of controller errors by 18 percent during the first quarter.

"In addition, we see the anecdotal evidence," said Burnett, noting the reporting of four near-collisions by pilots April 10 and three similar incidents in a single day barely a week later, as well as the four last Saturday.

Only scant information was available about those four incidents. According to the FAA, they involved:

— An American Boeing 727 whose pilot reported an unknown glider passing within about 300 feet to the left near Fort Meyers, Fla.

— A Continental DC-9 which reported leveling off to keep an unidentified Piper aircraft "in sight as they passed within several hundred feet" at 3,000 feet near San Jose, Calif.

Biplane that may have beaten Lindbergh sought

MACHIAS, Maine (AP) — A high-tech search is under way this week for clues to the disappearance of a French biplane that may have beaten Charles A. Lindbergh across the Atlantic by 12 days in 1927.

Since Sunday, searchers have combed a small section of dense woods 12 miles north of Machias for the wreckage of l'Oiseau Blanc, or the White Bird.

It is the 11th such search in the area by Richard Gillespie and his wife, Patricia Thrasher, of Middletown, Del., "aviation archaeologists" who have made a career out of looking for long-lost planes.

The White Bird disappeared after taking off from Paris at dawn on May 8, 1927, with two aviators in quest of a $25,000 prize offered for the first non-stop flight between the United States and France.

Less than three weeks later, on May 21, Lindbergh arrived in Paris from New York in his Spirit of St. Louis and claimed the $25,000 prize. He was the 79th man to complete a trans-Atlantic flight, but the first to do it alone and the first between France and the United States.

Gillespie and Ms. Thrasher, founders of the 400-member nonprofit International Group for Historic Aircraft Recovery, are certain the White Bird made the crossing in 40 hours, only to crash after reaching the fog-bound Maine coast.

The search has been dubbed Project Midnight Ghost after Lindbergh's remark that the White Bird had "vanished like a midnight ghost."

Sentencing plan offers hope — but

Something's terribly wrong when a federal judge sentences a dangerous felon to 30 years in prison and the criminal is back on the streets in less than 10 years. Congress concluded as much three years ago when it created the U.S. Sentencing Commission, which was charged with eliminating the glaring disparity between time awarded and time served.

After 18 months of hearings and study, the seven-member panel has produced sentencing guidelines that, if approved by Congress, are supposed to make punishment more uniform and more certain. Unfortunately, the commission's recommendations are considerably weaker than the ones proposed last September.

For example, federal judges would be allowed far more leeway in criminal sentencing than originally envisioned. Under the revised recommendations, judges will have unlimited discretion to depart from the sentencing guidelines for any "aggravating or mitigating" circumstance, so long as they give their reasons in writing. This loophole is a result of complaints by the American Bar Association that strict sentencing guidelines would reduce judges to dispensing assembly-line justice.

The commission also agreed to lower prison sentences than initially proposed, and many of these terms could be negotiated away in plea bargains, with consent of the prosecutor. Moreover, it recommends that the new system, which is scheduled to become effective in November, be delayed until August 1988 so judges can try out the guidelines on a voluntary basis.

That's certainly a good move, since one critic — Rutgers law professor Paul Robinson — has complained, "If Congress asked for Rambo, what it got was Don Knotts."

In all fairness, the proposed sentencing guidelines are an improvement over the present system. Parole release for federal prisoners would be phased out over five years. Time off for good behavior would be virtually eliminated, which was a sorely needed change. And lenient federal judges would be placed on a short leash.

Nevertheless, problems concerning judicial discretion and plea bargaining must be resolved before Congress adopts the commission's guidelines. Otherwise, the laudable objectives of truth in sentencing and certainty of punishment will remain unfulfilled and justice will remain undone.

Another View:

Lilliputian politics

President Suharto called it a "festival of democracy," but his landslide victory in Indonesia this week (April 25th) was about as spontaneous as a regimental parade. All competing parties favor his re-election to a fifth term, all are financed by his regime, all endorse his nebulous "Pancasila democracy" meant to bind together a huge, sprawling nation of over 175 million people.

Americans are right to wonder if Indonesian-style democracy is as stable as President Suharto complacently insists. If so, why does he keep stunting the political development of the world's fifth most populous nation?

In truth, nobody knows what's stirring below, though hints of potential trouble abound. Suharto is a 65-year-old general who behaves as if no provision for succession is needed. He came to power in a 1966 coup that the military claimed was essential to block a Communist takeover. That bloody and dangerous year witnessed the massacre of 500,000 people, mostly ethnic Chinese. Since then, the only elections have been to a National Assembly that has never initiated any legislation. Next spring, the members just elected will join an additional 100 named by the military to form a super-assembly that will almost surely elect Suharto to his fifth five-year term.

True, the regime isn't gratuitously brutal and has been spared serious insurgencies on its 13,500 islands. Yet it is also true that Jakarta reeks of corruption, nepotism and repression. The economy has stagnated as oil prices have sagged. Yet Suharto resists stimulating investment through freer trade, simplified taxes and the scrapping of state monopolies. Instead, capital is lavished on inefficent, protected steel mills. Censorship stifles needed self-criticism; a Jakarta newspaper was closed down for reporting on the Suharto family's interests in state-run monopolies.

There's also restlessness among younger Indonesians, who care little about what happened in 1966. Many have turned to the Indonesian Democratic Party, which is allowed to contest elections if not Suharto's rule. Even so, the party scored heavily and could be a challenger to the entrenched Golkar Party. A wise regime would surely relax censorship and allow more elbow room for new parties. These remain the best means of allowing for political evolution, rather than revolution.

For the most part Washington has indulged Indonesia, selling it arms and shrugging off its illegal grab in 1975 of the former Portuguese colony of East Timor. That support, though sometimes questionable, has earned the United States a friend's right to remind Suharto that the surest recipe for violent change is to make peaceful change impossible. Indonesia is too big for Lilliputian politics.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, April 29, the 119th day of 1987. There are 246 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 29, 1945, American soldiers liberated the Nazi concentration camp in Dachau, Germany, where tens of thousands of people had perished.

On this date:

In 1429, Joan of Arc entered the besieged city of Orleans to lead a victory over the English.

In 1861, Maryland's House of Delegates voted against seceding from the Union.

In 1862, New Orleans fell to Union forces during the Civil War.

In 1863, newspaper publisher William Randolph Hearst was born in San Francisco.

In 1894, several hundred unemployed men known as Coxey's Army swarmed into Washington to ask Congress for help.

In 1913, Swedish-born engineer Gideon Sundback of Hoboken, N.J., patented the zipper.

In 1946, 28 former Japanese leaders were indicted in Tokyo as war criminals.

In 1985, the space shuttle Challenger lifted off with seven astronauts and a mini-zoo of monkeys and rats.

Ten years ago: Pope Paul VI and the archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Donald Coggan, participated in a Christian unity service in the Vatican's Sistine Chapel, but conceded that serious obstacles remained to Roman Catholic-Anglican conciliation.

Five years ago: In a nationally broadcast address, President Reagan blamed Democratic leaders in Congress for a breakdown the day before in talks aimed at reaching a bipartisan budget compromise.

One year ago: The Soviet Union appealed to the West for help in fighting a reactor fire at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant that sent a radioactive cloud across northeastern Europe.

CIA foul-up worse than arms scandal

WASHINGTON — For those who are sick and tired of the Iran/contra arms scandal, here's fair warning: That fiasco should soon be dwarfed by the CIA's incredible mismanagement of the hundreds of millions of dollars Congress has appropriated for Afghanistan's freedom fighters since the Soviet invasion seven years ago.

Jack Anderson

Our own investigation reveals that the Afghan mujaheddin are lucky if they received even 40 percent of the covert funds intended for them. Counting matching money from Saudi Arabia, we estimate that the CIA has spent a total of $3 billion for arms aid to the anti-Soviet guerrillas.

But at least $1.2 billion of that has been stolen — skimmed off by rapacious arms dealers, crooked CIA agents and corrupt officials along the weapons trail in Egypt, Pakistan and the People's Republic of China. In secret testimony on Capitol Hill, the CIA has claimed that 80 percent of the arms purchased reached the Afghan rebels.

This is preposterous, and the CIA knows it.

After we heard of the monumental mismanagement from CIA sources and others, Dale Van Atta flew to Pakistan to investigate. He drove to Peshawar, once a sleepy British colonial outpost on the northwest frontier, now a sprawling city teeming with Afghan refugees. It is the headquarters of all the mujaheddin organizations and where virtually all the CIA's weapons are supposed to be delivered to the guerrilla recipients.

But Van Atta made an astounding discovery. There is no CIA official in Peshawar to check what the freedom fighters actually receive. And from interviews with mujaheddin sources, it became clear that less than half the weapons bought by the CIA ever make it as far as Peshawar.

Pakistani officials insisted that they would allow closer CIA contact with the mujaheddin, particularly to check on the arms supply line. But they said the CIA has never taken them up on this offer.

In fact, our sources said that CIA officials in Islamabad, the Pakistani capital, are forbidden by their superiors to ask the mujaheddin about arms deliveries. The only existing direct contact between the CIA and the mujaheddin fighters in Pakistan is through former Army personnel hired by the CIA to train the Afghans in the use of American Stinger anti-aircraft missiles.

Our investigation has revealed that the CIA's Afghan arms supply line is riddled with graft and waste from start to finish, on a scale not seen since the agency's covert programs in Vietnam. The opportunity for corruption is enormous, and the evidence of abuse includes reports of kickbacks made to CIA agents by Pakistanis who have shared in the boodle themselves.

The Afghan arms scandal has been years in the making. Yet the Reagan administration has made no effort to track the supply line back from Peshawar to the CIA paymaster in Langley, Va.

Now, at long last, Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., chairman of the Budget Committee, has asked the General Accounting Office to follow the CIA's money trail. Gray's action was prompted by a shoestring lobbying outfit, the Federation for American Afghan Action, headed by Andrew Eiva.

Eiva and the FAAA have close contacts with the mujaheddin groups, and they estimate only 30 percent of the money Congress appropriated for arms from fiscal 1980 through 1984 reached the freedom fighters in the field.

The CIA's ridiculous claim that 80 percent of the arms bought and paid for were delivered to the mujaheddin is a bare-faced lie. The fact is that the CIA has no way of knowing what was actually delivered — because they have no one on the scene on Peshawar to check the receipts against what was purchased in Langley.

It's not that such information is unavailable.

"The CIA does not have the manifests because they don't want them," one disgusted source said. "That's why the CIA has no idea of how much is getting through. They have only half the information: what they bought."

JEWISH HOSTAGES: Even as his influence in the Middle East grows by the day, Syrian President Hafez Assad seems to be more worried than ever about the tiny Jewish population in his country. Syrian Jews find it more difficult to obtain exit visas, and typically only one member of a family is allowed to leave, to ensure that he or she will return. Jews who try to leave illegally are now being given stiffer sentences: one year instead of the usual six months. For all his enhanced regional and international prestige, Assad still feels the need to hold the Jewish community hostage against an attack by Israel.

MINI-EDITORIAL: The "slumming" tendencies of the insensitive rich don't seem to have changed much since Larry Hart spoofed the privileged snobs who went "to Harlem in ermine and pearls" during the Great Depression. The big difference seems to be that nowadays a slumming expedition to an inner-city ghetto might be a little too exciting even for the most ennui-enervated. So the plight of society's losers is being made available to sheltered suburbanites in the cute, cuddly form of a "bag lady" doll. For $40 to $500, spoiled scions of the nouveau riche can have their very own downtrodden plaything to laugh at and feel superior to. How delightful.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

SALT treaty shaker: It's all in the 'details'

WASHINGTON — Who'd a thunk it: a dozen years after the death of detente, after a decade of Reaganaut criticism about a "fatally flawed" pair of SALT treaties, comes now Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger — together again — to warn that the Reagan administration may be going soft on the Russians.

William Safire

In their first syndicated collaboration, our two foremost strategic thinkers complain about the zero option, brainchild of the Reagan hawks, in which the superpowers would turn the clock back to the days before the big Soviet intermediate-range missile escalation.

Not good enough, according to Kissnix: The presence of our nuclear missiles in Europe now offsets the Soviet advantage in tanks, planes and troops. Not only should we refuse to allow 100 missiles to remain to threaten the Far East, we should put a new condition on the deal we have long offered in Europe: Remove all missiles only when the Russians eliminate their conventional superiority. (Sen. Sam Nunn, who shows signs of going squishy on SDI, supports this approach, as do Europeans who want their defense on the cheap.)

Kissnix is rebutted by a faction called Shultznitze, which says: We have to be willing to take yes for an answer. If we renege on our offer now, after having won our point, we will lose all momentum toward arms reduction.

Who's right — the out-of-office former detenteniks turned neo-hardliners, or the in-office former hardliners turned neo-detenteniks? The moorings of mind-set have slipped and pundits are forced to order a la carte. One man's selections:

1 — The Kissnix criticism is right to insist on a "real zero" on medium-range missiles. The emplacement of 100 missiles to threaten China, Japan and Korea is too good a deal for the Russians, and would make verification 10 times more difficult.

One way to get down to real zero would be to place our countervailing 100 missiles in our Aleutian Islands, no matter how Alaska's Sen. Ted Stevens kicks; that deployment would make useless the big Soviet Pacific naval base at Petropavlovsk. By taking advantage of "Seward's Folly," we could negotiate away each side's final 100 medium missiles entirely. (This would also remind Far Eastern trade predators that "protection" has another meaning.)

2 — The Kissnix approach is wrong to insist on linkage of nuclear reduction to conventional reduction.

There is good linkage and bad linkage. It makes stabilizing sense to link space shield development to reductions in offensive intercontinental missiles; it also makes sense to link progress on arms reduction to Soviet behavior on human rights, invasion of neighbors, support of the subversion of Central America and intensity of espionage. As Kissnix has long posited, weapons don't cause wars; warmaking policies cause the use of weapons.

Secretary George Shultz has been suckered into public concentration on one medium-range treaty and should shift the world focus to good linkage, like the need to reduce the dangerous number of Soviet ICBMs and for the Russians to pull out of Afghanistan.

Bad linkage is all-or-nothing bargaining that gets nothing. Linkage, as we saw in the fast shuffle that was Reykjavik, can cut two ways: We were proceeding on a series of negotiations when Gorbachev suddenly revealed at the end that everything was linked to the abandonment of SDI testing. That's the customary Soviet negotiating trick, as Ed Rowney, the man who does not flip-flop, points out: The threat of losing all gives the Russians leverage at the 11th hour.

Bad linkage also undermines progress by avoiding sacrifice. Reduction of nuclear arms in Europe, which is inexorable, means that Europe will have to spend more to defend itself. The odd decouple is a fact; the American presence will one day be absent, and Europe will or will not assume the burden of its own defense. The U.S. can negotiate time for this transition to continental independence, but we should not delay nuclear reduction until the Russians become the Swiss, embracing general disarmament.

3 — Both Kissnix fears and Shultznitze hopes must focus on verifiability.

Ever since Anatoly Dobrynin predicted a future for on-site inspection at a Les Gelb dinner party in Alexandria six years ago, the Russians have been talking verification. Now, this week in Geneva, we will see how far they are prepared to apply glasnost specifically to their means of waging war. If the past is any indication, they will offer stunts and propose that the details be worked out later.

No deal. The safety of the world is in the details.

ART BUCHWALD

Working in U.S.A. — for Uncle Sam, yet!

According to the Tax Foundation, a typical American will have to work 123 days for the government to pay his taxes in 1987. Yes, for 123 days we will all be slaving for Uncle Sam before any money trickles down to us.

Art Buchwald

Unlike many, I consider it an honor and a pleasure to labor for my country. I'm ready to devote my 123 days to any department in the government that will have me.

There are so many to choose from. The first thought is to put in my time with the IRS. As a taxpayer I could teach them a lot. I would like to revise the 1040 form so people can understand it. Even if I just simplified the first three paragraphs I could become a national hero and run for President. My only fear is if I do a good job, the IRS will get mad and keep me there as a hostage while they audit the last five years of my returns.

I wouldn't mind serving 123 days in the State Department. I understand you meet some very interesting people in State, and you go to a lot of nice parties behind the Iron Curtain with beautiful girls named Natasha and Olga. You can't become an ambassador in 123 days, but there is nothing to prevent you from rising to Assistant Secretary of State. Give me a bucket of acid rain and a school of whales and I'll negotiate any treaty the President wants.

One of the departments I would seriously consider is Defense. What I like about the DOD is that you get to spend unbelievable sums of money in a span of 123 days, and half the hardware doesn't work. Besides spending money I could be a spoiler. My dream would be to wait until the disarmament people drew up a complete arms-reduction plan and then sabotage it just as it was about to be signed.

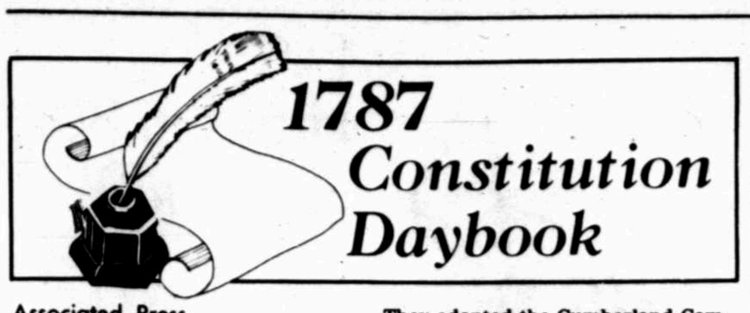

I've never told this to anyone before, but I've always wanted to do a 123-day stint for the Justice Department. Justice lawyers have all the fun. They fight affirmative action, have oddball ideas about what the Constitution means, support prayer in school and launch attacks against the Supreme Court.

One of the reasons I want to be part of Justice is that it would give me a chance to sit next to Attorney General Ed Meese and devise a defense for him when he is asked why he covered up evidence during the Irangate investigation. Ed has had problems with his Irangate alibis, and he needs somebody for 123 days to make his tales jibe with the facts.

Although I'm big on the Justice Department, I doubt if I want to work for the CIA. They're always giving you lie detector tests and truth serum, and I am in deathly fear they're going to find out what I did with the money which was supposed to have been turned over to all the sleazeball arms dealers in the Middle East with the CIA's blessing. If I worked for the CIA I know it would take less than 123 days to wring me dry.

The one spot left where I could serve my government for 123 days is the White House. It would be interesting and at the same time restful. Everybody has a different opinion as to what it's like to be on the inside. Don Regan says toiling at the White House is nothing to write home about. Yet Ollie North and John Poindexter both say it's a great place because you can do anything you want to and they leave you alone.

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Jacob Hiltzheimer reports that he is pleased with a few drops of rain. This has been an exceptionally dry April for Philadelphia, there being only one inch of rain and one inch of snow. Hiltzheimer attends church twice today.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

William Samuel Johnson reports it continues fair in New York. He attends church at St. Paul's.

There is still much alarm in New York at the prospect that the Congress may move to Philadelphia. John Rutherford writes from New York to Gen. James Robertson, a member of North Carolina's Assembly:

"The town is much alarmed at a late attempt to move Congress to Philadelphia, it was then defeated by one vote, but it is expected when Maryland comes forward, being at present unrepresented, that it is again intended to make another Trial. If Philadelphia succeeds, it will much affect the Rents and Trades of this place (New York City) and we shall lose the Society of the Foreign Ministers and Delegates' but the Ministers and Officers of Congress who have Houses and are established here seem most alarmed, as they must move at great expense, and they esteem Philadelphia more sickly and disagreeable, especially in the hot months."

DELEGATES TODAY

At Mount Vernon, the weather is 58 in the morning and 74 at noon. George Washington continues at Fredericksburg. He dines at Col. Charles Carter's.

Augustus Van Cortland requests Col. Alexander Hamilton's legal assistance in collecting a debt.

LOOKING BACK
James Robertson

James Robertson as a young man settled in western North Carolina in the Watauga area. In 1779, he led an exploration west to the Cumberland River. A party joined him in erecting a settlement there on Jan. 1, 1780. They adopted the Cumberland Compact and Robertson continued active in local affairs.

In 1787, he represented Davidson County in the North Carolina Assembly. When this area separated to form Tennessee, Robertson was a member of the constitutional convention of that new state. Throughout his life he was actively involved with the Cherokee and Chickasaw Indian tribes. He was the Chickasaw agent at his death in 1814.

Rats 'hangin' out' at chic celebrity mall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The rats are down, but not out, near Beverly Hills, in a chic mall where the rich and famous come to browse and shop.

Rats have been on the loose through the $100 million, eight-acre Beverly Center for the past two months and it will be costly to zap them because "only the real smart ones are left," a rodent hunter said Tuesday.

The eight-story mall, which defines the city's skyline between Beverly Hills and West Hollywood, is a favorite of such actors as Ally Sheedy, Jeff Goldblum, Teri Garr and John Candy, who are often seen shopping at the trendy stores, at the multi-theater cineplex or the Hard Rock Cafe, a hip eatery.

The rats that also are hanging out at the mall are the roof rat, a grayish-brown rodent, and Norway rat, a dirtier animal.

Exterminators have succeeded only in chasing them from one area to another, said Jay Woods, regional vice president of Miami-based Bugs Burger Bug Killers.

"We hear them rooting around in the rafters," Woods said. "There is a lot of evidence they are there. But it is hard to determine population."

The exterminators "tell us that after two to four weeks, they will be eliminated," said Lawrence Beerman, Beverly Center's general manager. "After that, it's really a matter of routine maintenance to make sure they don't come back."

He said vendors normally are responsible for their own pest control.

Fifteen of the center's 31 food vendors face possible prosecution for allegedly failing to rid their premises of rats and mice, Los Angeles County health officials said Tuesday.

The names of the establishments whose cases have been turned over to the city attorney for investigation were withheld, said Charles H. McMullen, a chief sanitarian with the county Department of Health Services.

Health inspectors have found rat droppings throughout the 900,000-square-foot structure, including at at least 20 food establishments.

"It's serious enough that we want to nip it in the bud," McMullen said. "They could just take the place over, and we don't want that."

Lack of a coordinated effort has let the rats multiply and learn from the mistakes of their captured fellows, said Woods, adding he is confident the rats will be doomed "within a month" because "if we don't eliminate them, we don't get paid."

"Only the real smart ones are left at this point," he said. "We aren't going in there thinking it is going to be easy. Rats are smart."

Arthur Graham, president of Bugs Burger, refused to say how much the eradication would cost.

Poisonous bait and trapping techniques are the likely method for getting rid of the rats, Woods said. A meeting to discuss strategy was planned this week with Beverly Center tenants.

Move toward privately operated prisons to grow

WASHINGTON (AP) — With 34 states under court order to relieve overcrowding in their prisons, the movement toward privately operated prisons will grow, according to a study by the National Institute of Justice.

The study, released Tuesday, noted that 1,100 inmates are serving time in privately operated prisons in four states: Florida, Kentucky, Minnesota and Tennessee.

The inmates are serving time for crimes ranging from drunken driving to murder. Three years ago, there were no adult offenders being held in secure, privately run state or local facilities.

Medicare making changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Medicare system is making important changes administratively, and Congress should wait before writing laws to reform the federal health care insurance program for the old and disabled, the head of the program says.

Dr. William Roper, administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration, told the Senate Finance health subcommittee on Tuesday that changes should be in place before the fiscal year ends Sept. 30.

He said the agency has increased its budget for oversight of nursing home care and is expanding nursing home requirements while tightening up certification and other rules for Medicare and Medicaid facilities.

Ray Charles aids the deaf

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer Ray Charles may be blind, but when he appeared before a house subcommittee looking into funding for medical and scientific research, he pleaded for more money to solve hearing disorders.

"Hearing is my life blood, along with my music," Charles told the House Appropriations subcommittee for the departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education on Tuesday. The singer, whose full name is Ray Charles Robinson, has recently joined with Ear International to set up The Robinson Foundation for Hearing Disorders.

Doctors, heads of various health agencies and people suffering from a number of disorders testified before the subcommittee about the importance of increased funding for research. One witness complained that about 60 percent of grants for research go unfunded.

Volunteer gets first stamp

WASHINGTON (AP) — An 80-year-old Atlanta woman who helped found a church-run center to aid needy families will receive the first letter mailed using a new postage stamp commemorating the 100th anniversary of the United Way.

The letter from President Reagan to Theodora James was hand-canceled Tuesday by Postmaster General Preston R. Tisch. The stamp was dedicated at special ceremonies for the community help movement's centennial.

Mrs. James directs Atlanta's West End Ecumenical Emergency Assistance Center.

Forecast for 8 AM Thursday

Highs in 80s predicted

From Staff and Wire Reports

Summer-like weather conditions of the past several days will continue through Thursday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. A high in the upper 80s and sunny skies have been predicted.

The NWS forecast for tonight calls for a low in the middle 50s and fair skies for the Midland-Odessa area. Winds will be out of the south at five to 10 mph tonight, increasing to five to 15 mph on Thursday.

Tuesday's high was 13 degrees below the record high of 93 set for that date in 1948. Today's low was nine degrees above the record low of 41 set for this date in 1968.

STATE

Mostly fair skies and mild temperatures prevailed across Texas today as a high pressure system continued to dominate the state's weather.

There were some mid-level clouds over far West Texas, but skies were clear elsewhere in The Lone Star State, the National Weather Service reported.

Winds were light and variable over the Trans-Pecos while south to southwest winds prevailed over the rest of the state. Wind speeds were generally 5 mph to 10 mph.

The early morning extremes ranged from a cool 42 degrees at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to a mild 73 degrees at Galveston.

The forecast calls for a chance of isolated thunderstorms over far west texas this afternoon and evening.

In West Texas, highs will be in the 80s and lows will be in the 50s. In South Texas, it will be partly cloudy through Thursday with highs in the 80s and low 90s and lows in the 60s. North Texas will be sunny with highs in the 80s and lows in the 60s.

NATION

A storm spread snow through New England today as fair weather prevailed across much of the rest of the nation.

Concord, N.H., had 4 inches of snow by early today and Portland, Maine, had 3 inches. An inch of snow covered Brunswick, Maine, and Boston.

Snow extended across much of eastern and central New England. Rain and thunderstorms were scattered across eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

A storm warning for heavy snow and gusty winds was posted for northeast and central Massachusetts while snow advisories were issued for much of the rest of New England.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Texas Utilities Electric Company (TU Electric), in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the Company's intent to obtain a Certificate of Convenience and Necessity for the proposed South Pegasus 69 kV Substation Tap Line, as described below.

The proposed 69 kV line will lie wholly within Midland County. The line will begin in TU Electric's existing Pegasus 69 kV Tap Line at a point approximately 5.5 miles north of Farm-to-Market 1787 and 5.3 miles west of Farm-to-Market 1788. From this point the line will extend in a southeasterly direction approximately 5.5 miles, terminating at TU Electric's proposed South Pegasus Substation to be located on the north side of Farm-to-Market 1787 approximately one mile west of the intersection of Farm-to-Market 1787 and Farm-to-Market 1492. The estimated cost of this project is $565,000.

Persons who wish to intervene in the proceeding or comment upon action sought, should contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas at 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or call the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 for teletypewriter for the deaf within 15 days of this notice.

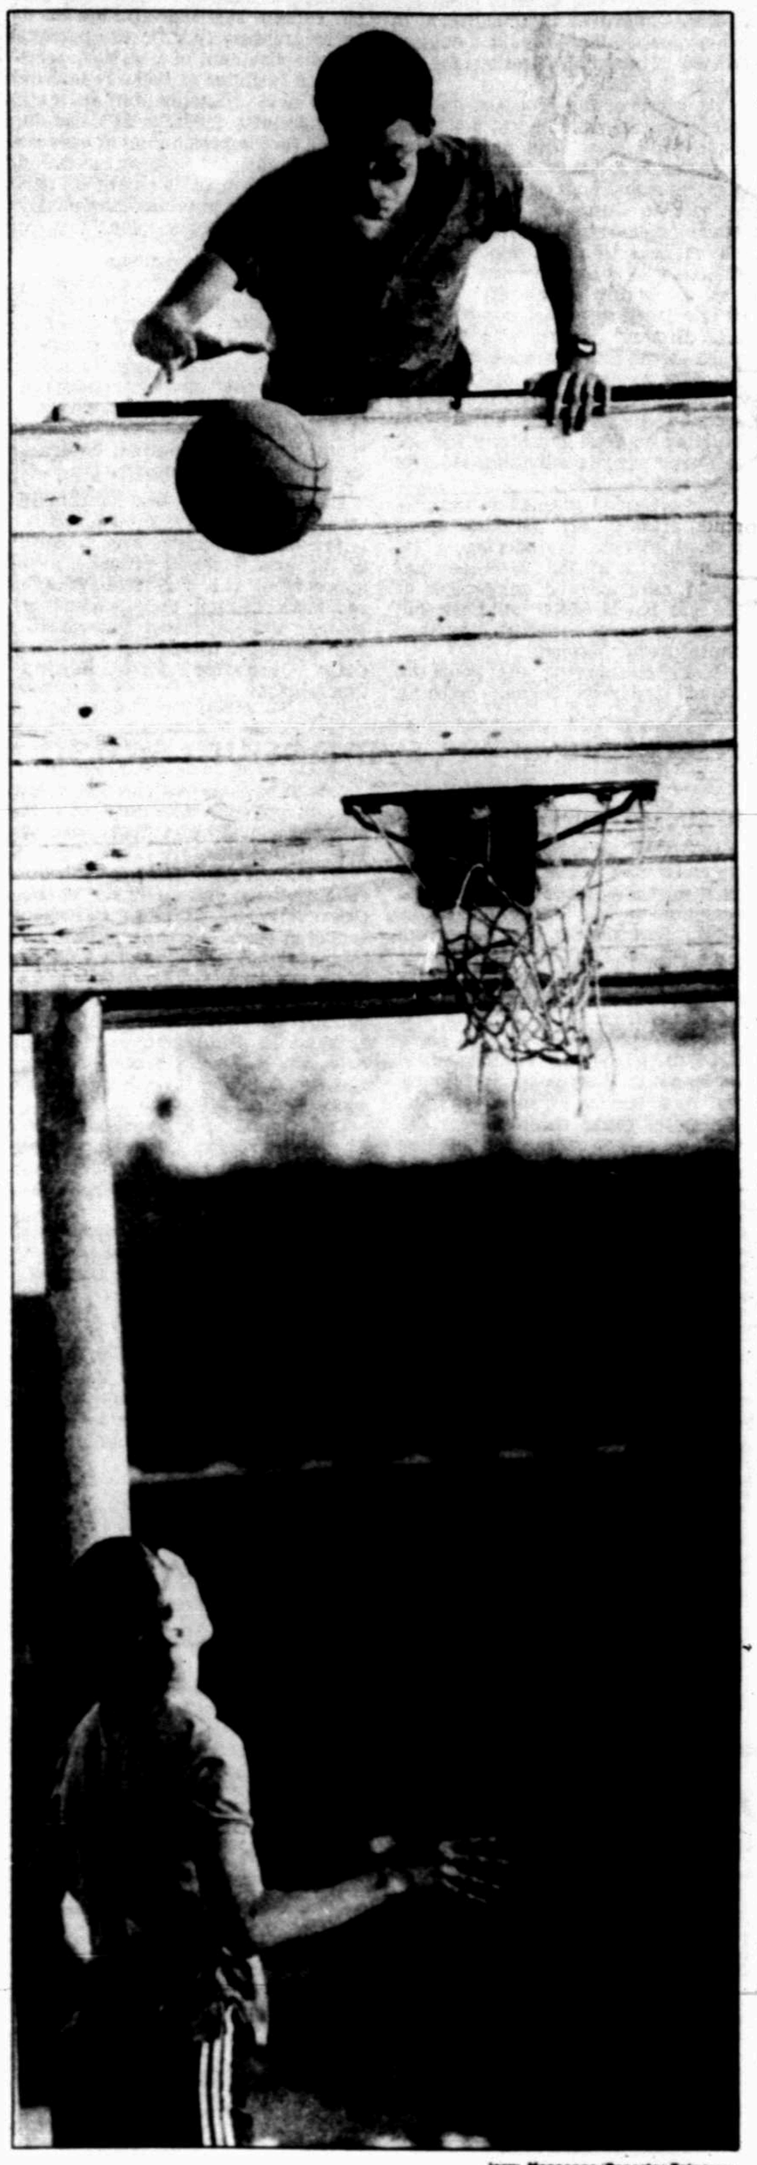

A complete copy of the application, including maps showing the location of the transmission line, is on file with the Public Utility Commission of Texas at Austin, Texas.

MISD trustees elect Newman president, replacing Jackson

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Newman

Midland school trustees Tuesday unanimously elected Fred M. Newman president of the seven-member board, replacing Bill Jackson, who stepped down after serving in that position for more than two years.

Trustees called the reorganization of the board routine.

Trustees also elected K. Michael Conaway to occupy the vice president's seat vacated by Ron Britton. Joe Reed was elected to a second consecutive term as secretary.

In stepping down, Jackson thanked fellow trustees for their support and cooperation during his two-year term.

"It's been a rewarding two years," he said "We haven't always agreed, but when push came to shove, we put our shoulders together and did the job that needed to be done."

Before the vote, trustees tackled a short agenda comprised of routine chores — including the approval of personnel appointments and resignations, financial statements and bills payable.

Trustees awarded a bid of $78,100 to Raco Inc. of San Angelo for a walk-in freezer-cooler for the food service warehouse.

The board also approved a bid of $11,197 to Jack Sherman Chevrolet to purchase a food service delivery van.

In other action, the board accepted gifts totaling $5,496 from the Emerson Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association.

The gifts included a laminating machine for a teacher's work room, storage cabinets for musical instruments, playground equipment, a microwave oven and library shelves among other items.

Trustees also approved on first reading revisions in board policies for academic awards, honor graduates, ranking of graduating seniors and pupil evaluation and grading.

Midland Independent School District Superintendent Joseph P. Baressi Jr. said the revisions were designed to delete wording in the policies that pertained to this year's senior class.

Trustees also approved the tax collection report for March.

According to MISD business manager Don Furgeson, tax collections totaled $27.9 million to date, while the delinquent taxes ran at $694,321.

Council approves funds for BAC tutorial, word processing center

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A Midland city councilman said Tuesday he fears a southeast center, which will offer tutoring, word processing training and recreation for senior citizens, is duplicating some services already available.

Councilman Gordon Marcum said he voted Tuesday against a $40,000 contract with the Black Advisory Council because the group is spending about half of their budget on word processors and training is already available at Midland College.

"I just hate to duplicate other services in the community," Marcum said.

But Black Advisory Council President Dorothy Smith said word processing training is needed in southeast Midland because most southside residents are hesitant to enter the "foreign" world of Midland College and take advantage of courses.

"We do find there is some hesitancy for people in that community to take advantage of what Midland College offers," she said.

For example a low percentage of south Midland residents have taken General Equivalency Degree courses offered at the college, Ms. Smith said.

However, 82 residents are taking a GED course in session at an area church, she said.

The City Council approved of the advisory council's $40,000 contract in Community Development Block Grant funds on a 5-1 vote. Councilman David Godfrey was absent.

The City Council also approved a $75,000 CDBG contract with the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children to furnish their new shelter.

Although he is concerned about duplicating word processing training, Marcum said he supports the tutorial service and senior citizens' recreation to be offered at the center.

The center, based at the Hollowell United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St., should open by June and will "enhance" the city's southside, Ms. Smith said.

The advisory council hopes to improve the job skills of area minorities by offering word processing classes two nights a week. The classes will be taught by two part-time instructors and advisory council volunteers, Ms. Smith said.

"For us to compete in the job market we needed to offer some type of training in the word processing field," she said.

Along with word processing training, the center will be open two nights a week to tutor the community's youth, Ms. Smith said.

"We hope to achieve, at the tutorial center, a place for young people to go and study and get help with their homework," she said.

A senior citizen's recreation program will also begin in June and run through the summer months offering free hot lunches two days a week, trips to the theater and arts and crafts classes, Ms. Smith said.

The senior citizens classes will rotate among southeast area churches, while the tutorial and word processing classes will remained based at Hollowell Church, she said.

Police name public information officer

White will work out of crime prevention office

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

When police Cpl. Jim White reports for work each day, he wears the department's uniform with the usual complement: shiny badge, stripes, .38 caliber handgun, oiled and loaded.

Starting today, he also begins carrying a copy of the Open Records Act.

White, 34, is the department's first official public information officer. Working out of the crime prevention office, he will be the conduit between the media and police, and the department's official spokesman.

Tonna Rice, the department's communications supervisor, said a PIO is necessary because of an increase in the volume of major crime calls that have been coming in the last six months.

"I found there was an increasing need to contact the news media," she said. Ms. Rice and Lt. Hank Norton, who heads the MPD information management section, had been responsible for press relations, but she said that was on top of already full-time positions.

"We tried to diversify, but with our schedules the way they were, we just couldn't do it," she said. "I think both ends suffered, we did and the media. I don't think we did a poor job, but we just couldn't donate 100 percent of our job to the news media."

Cpl. Jim White

White, who worked in Fredericksburg and the San Antonio area before he came to West Texas, said the designation of a PIO in Midland is timely, and he said working out of the crime prevention office is an ideal situation.

"I'm certified in crime prevention, and I've always been interested in community relations," he said.

"If we can have a good rapport with the press, if we can give them what they need and what they are due, I think everyone will benefit."

White's office hours will be weekdays, but he said he will be available during off-hours to be called to a major crime scene, or when the department's Special Response Team is called out.

"I will be called out if it is deemed necessary," he said. "It will be up to the local commander."

White said despite inherent friction between the two, the police and press can work together because they are similar.

"There is an immediate hostility, sometimes, between the two; but our job, too, is to gather information. That's what a cop does — gathers information, but he diverts it, uses it another way."

White said the popular image of police officers — most widely spread by television and motion pictures — is "inaccurate."

"I sometimes wish it was that exciting at times," he said. "Nothing makes me feel better than to make a good arrest. It does happen, but it just doesn't happen that often."

White said despite the friction between police and press, most officers accept the fact that the press won't go away.

"I think most realize that law enforcement has become so much more specialized," he said. "I think they believe it is another sign of the times."

From Staff and Wire Reports

SALT LAKE CITY — Dr. Joe T. Boyd, a Midland, Texas, chiropractor, is one of four named in a temporary restraining order issued which blocks his chiropractic clinic and another one in Utah from advertising and collecting $3,500 advance fees for a chiropractic treatment for dyslexia.

Boyd was out of town until Sunday and could not be reached for comment, a nurse at Boyd Chiropractic Clinic in Midland said this morning. A residential phone number for Boyd listed in the 1986 Midland City Directory was disconnected.

The order was signed by 3rd District Judge Leonard Russon Tuesday to halt a screening clinic sponsored by Wayman Chiropractic Care in Salt Lake County and Dyslexia Centers of America in Midland, Texas.

Advertisements for the clinic had said children accepted for treatment would be given "adjustments of the spinal and cranial structures, muscular balance and the occular system...As these treatments remove the neural imbalances, there is complete elimination of dyslexia in a majority of cases treated. A marked improvement has resulted in the remainder."

A complaint filed in the district court by the state Division of Consumer Protection and the Division of Occupational and Professional Licensing alleges the advertisements were false and deceptive because the treatment doesn't work.

The complaint named Hugh Wayman and Larry Wayman of the Salt Lake clinic and Jerry Koch and Joseph Boyd of the Midland center. A receptionist at Boyd's clinic in Midland said this morning that Koch had moved to Houston and no longer worked in Midland.

Larry Wayman said the screening clinic was canceled due to too much pressure, and, although he believes in the treatment, all the money collected would be returned and the treatment would not be provided.

"We're just sorry about this whole situation," he said. "I've been in practice for 18 years and I've never seen so much pressure in my life."

A hearing on the state's request for a preliminary injunction is set for May 11. The suit also seeks return of the money collected and repayment of investigation costs and attorney's fees.

Dyslexia is a broad term for a number of learning disabilities, most commonly a reading handicap in which symptoms include reversing letters or words or writing in mirror images.

In most cases, the victims do not learn to read well or spell well, said Dr. William McMahon, assistant medical director of in-patient psychiatry at Primary Children's Hospital.

McMahon and Cheryl Keuhne, director of the learning disabilities center at Primary, testified in sworn affidavits that the chiropractic treatments offered do not have the results as represented.

Odessan's trial for murder continues

ODESSA — The trial of an 18-year-old man accused of killing his infant son in April 1986 by allegedly stuffing a sock down the baby's throat continues in 70th District Court today.

District Judge Gene Ater recessed the trial shortly after 4 p.m. Monday when defense attorney Richard Alvarado informed the court a key witness subpoenaed to testify could not be called because he was a witness in a divorce trial in Midland. Ater said he would contact the judge of the Midland court to see if the witness could be released so the trial could continue at 1 p.m. today, or earlier if possible.

Assistant District Attorney Roger Jones rested the state's case shortly after 3:30 p.m. after a 21-year-old aunt of the infant, Helen Gomez, testified that Orlando Hernandez Banuelos did not seem particularly upset when his baby son was discovered missing about 8 a.m. April 1, 1986. He was "just sitting there on the couch," she told the jury of eight men and four women.

Monahans residents have monopoly in area McDonald's game

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Linda Jean Heard

Most exit a fast food restaurant with one hand in the bag digging furiously for stray french fries.

But two Monahans residents, Linda Jean Heard and Rose Mary Lyles, found winning tickets to "The $40 Million Monopoly Game" instead when they exited McDonald's restaurants earlier

"Well, it sort of stunned me for awhile. I thought there was a catch to it," said Mrs. Heard, 39, of her $10,000 win Tuesday.

The game is being conducted in 7,100 participating McDonald's in the United States in cooperation with Parker Brothers, manufacturers of the original Monopoly game.

Javier Lyles

Participants receive stubs that correspond to board spaces on a miniature Monopoly game when they buy the food at the fast food chain franchises. Various combinations can net players food or money.

April 9 was just an average hot afternoon for Mrs. Heard and her 19-year-old son.

"We were on the way to the ball park and he said he wanted a Coke," she remembered.

She said she didn't look at her "instant winner" ticket until she got home. "I couldn't believe it."

She said she went back to the Monahans McDonald's, open just two days at the time, and talked with the manager to verify the ticket.

"Everyone was surprised," she said.

The check came in the mail Monday afternoon, but not before a complicated verification procedure which spanned Monahans, Los Angeles and Dallas, she said.

First on her list of things to do with $10,000 is to visit her sister in Wisconsin, she said.

Extra money will also come in handy, she said, considering that her husband had been the victim of an oil-related layoff for eight months last year.

"I'm going to pay some bills, save a little and just do some other things" with the rest of the money, Mrs. Heard said.

"I've never won anything in my life...maybe a dollar here and there on the M-System (grocery store) races."

"Water Works" turned out to be the lucky $1,000 stub for Rose Mary and Javier Lyles.

"I was in Odessa with my mother-in-law and son," Mrs. Lyles, 30, recalled.

She had taken her husband's mother to a doctor's appointment the afternoon of April 3.

Her 4-year-old son "bugged" her all afternoon to take him to McDonald's, Mrs. Lyles said.

"They threw the tickets in the bag and I didn't think about it. I hadn't read the rules of the game or anything.

"I usually just throw everything away, but this time I asked my son what we did with the tickets. My son had them," Mrs. Lyles remembered.

Later that evening, her husband, Javier Orlando Lyles, 31, told his wife the ticket might be worth something.

"He said, 'This looks like a winner. If this could be worth $1,000, we better go check it out,' so he went back to McDonald's the next day to claim the prize," Mrs. Lyles said.

She said she has "new faith" in contests. The money the family won will help go to medical bills.

Half of the $1,000, which the Lyles received Friday, will go to help Mrs. Lyles' mother with eye surgery, and the other half will go to helping pay for the Lyles' new baby, which is due in June.

DEATHS

Dixie Steele

Mrs. J. Albert "Dixie" Steele, 89, of Midland, died early Tuesday at a local hospital.

Services will be 2 p.m. Thursday at the First Presbyterian Church chapel with the Rev. Russ Ritchel officiating.

Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park, under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Steele was born July 12, 1897, in Marshall, Mo., to John Edward and Virginia Guthrey Pickett. She was educated at Central Missouri State Teacher's College, then taught elementary school in Miami, Mo. She married the Rev. John Albert Steele June 16, 1926.

They served pastorates in Fort Branch, Ind.; Elk City, Okla.; Vernon; Lee's Summit, Mo.; Sacramento, Calif.; and Paxton, Ill., before retiring to Midland in June of 1967.

Mrs. Steele was active with her husband in various church ministries, including Hope Lutheran Church, Westminister Presbyterian Church, and Christ Presbyterian Church. She was a member of the Martha Circle of First Presbyterian Church.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1981.

Survivors include two sons, John A. "Jack" Steele Jr. of Midland and Newton J. Steele of Huntsville; one daughter, Ginni Steele Reese of Austin; 10 grandchildren and several cousins, nieces and nephews.

Lessie Lucille Seales

Lessie Lucille Seales of New Braunfels died at a New Braunfels nursing home.

Services will be 2:30 p.m. Thursday at the Ellis Funeral Home chapel.

Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park, under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

House tentatively OKs bill altering death penalty law

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House has tentatively approved a bill sponsored by a Houston lawmaker who says the state's death penalty law unfairly executes accomplices in some slayings.

The measure by Rep. Larry Evans, D-Houston, would require jurors to decide whether an accomplice was "a cause" of the death. He said the bill probably would have meant a life sentence, instead of death, for at least one Texas convict who has been executed.

Also Tuesday, the House gave a wild two-hour ride to a mass transit bill that took several sharp turns before winning tentative approval.

Another measure winning preliminary approval would give domestic companies a break when bidding against foreign firms for state business.

Evans said his capital punishment bill might have spared Doyle Skillern, who was executed in 1985 for his part in the slaying of a narcotics officer. Evidence showed Skillern was in a car during a drug deal that ended with the slaying. Charles Sanne, the triggerman, is serving a life sentence.

"I think this bill would go a long way toward correcting that type inequity," Evans told the House, which gave the bill tentative approval in a non-record vote.

The measure faces another House vote that could send it to the Senate.

Under the bill, jurors in cases in which more than one person is charged with capital murder would have to decide whether a defendant was "a cause" of the death. Evans said evidence showed that Skillern was not a cause of the officer's death.

He also said there was some doubt as to whether Charlie Brooks, who in December 1982 became the first Texan executed in many years, was the triggerman in his case.

"It's the type of thing that really does not occur too often, where you have more than one defendant charged in a capital murder. But in those instances where it does happen, I think this bill goes a long way toward correcting the problem where the lesser culpable person receives a greater punishment," Evans said.

The mass transit bill produced some of the wildest floor action of the year. After many changes, the bill wound up with provisions that would allow Austin and Corpus Christi voters to lower their sales tax for transit although Corpus Christi, at one-half cent, is already at the minimum. It also would set up a new, mostly elected mass transit authority board in Houston.

San Antonio, Dallas and Fort Worth MTAs were amended out of the bill on the House floor.

TRIAL

Earlier, Jones read part of Banuelos' statement admitting his guilt before calling Odessa Police Det. Fred Price, who witnesses the autopsy on the baby and "interviewed" Banuelos before he was formally arrested.

In his confession, Banuelos admitted stuffing the sock down the baby's throat and placing a clothespin on the child's nose after he spit out a bottle and wouldn't quit crying.

In cross-examining Price, Alvarado attempted to read portions of the confession Jones had eliminated, which he later contended would mitigate against the apparent brutality of Banuelos' action.

Ater finally allowed Alvarado to read the eliminated portions of the statement over Jones' objections.

In addition to admitting his guilt, Alvarado said, Banuelos stated that when he noticed the baby wasn't breathing he tried to remove the sock but couldn't reach it, that he put the clothespin on the baby's nose thinking it would force him to regurgitate the sock.

When Banuelos realized the baby was dead, Alvarado told jurors, he told Price he felt so bad he wanted to commit suicide, that he wanted to tell about it, that he wanted to die.

In attempting to show Banuelos, who attended Permian High School, was not known to be violent or belligerent and had never been in any kind of trouble, Alvarado called several relatives and friends who testified he was easy-going and not given to violent behavior.

Ms. Gomez testified that when the baby was born prematurely to her sister, Modesta, in November 1986, he was named Orlando Banuelos Jr., and that her sister and Banuelos continued to reside with their respective parents. She said Banuelos, who lived at 709 Laredo Drive, used to spend the night with her sister at the Gomez home, 2549 W. 10th St., "once or twice a week."

The body of the baby was found in a Dumpster in an alley near the Gomez home several hours after he was discovered missing from its crib in the young mother's room.

According to the Banuelos' statement, he and the baby's mother were awakened by the infant's crying and she was going to get up to give the baby a bottle, but Banuelos told her he'd do it. When the baby spit the bottle out and continued to cry, he said, he stuffed the sock in the baby's mouth, thinking it would silence the crying, but still allow his son to breathe through its nose.

House OKs bill backing U.S. goods

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House Tuesday easily approved a union-backed bill that would let state government give preference to U.S. goods unless foreign products cost at least 10 percent less.

The so-called Buy America legislation, hailed by some as a jobs-creation measure, gained tentative House approval in a 106-33 vote. The bill is a top priority of various labor unions, which contend that foreign companies — with their cheap labor — dump inexpensive products in the United States and cost workers' jobs.

Rep. Ron Lewis, the bill's sponsor, said that while he favors free trade, the United States and Texas must protect its industries and jobs. "All I'm saying is let's play by the same rules, let's play on the same playing field," said Lewis, D-Mauriceville.

The bill still requires a procedural third vote in the House. A similar bill is pending in a Senate committee.

Some opponents said the preferential treatment would drive up the cost of parts, equipment and other goods the state regularly buys. At a time when the state is pinching pennies, it cannot afford to pay more money for the same products, they argued.

Rep. Bill Hammond, R-Dallas, said domestic firms might intentionally overbid on contracts because they know their prices won't have to be as competitive. But Lewis said most contracts have many bidders and doubted a firm could receive contracts by purposely overbidding.

"This is just a fair bill for Texas and for the country," Lewis said, noting that foreign-made steel is being used at a new bridge near Baytown. Texas and U.S. steel mills are losing jobs and cannot afford to lose those contracts, he said.

Odessa council to review permits for private jails

ODESSA — City Council members Tuesday approved an amendment to an ordinance that will allow council review of permit applications for privately run jails.

Approval of the proposed amendment was not unanimous, but came on a 4-to-1 vote, with new council member W.A. "Dub" Kennedy casting the dissenting vote.

Prior to voting on the proposal, council members heard from numerous citizens who also oppose establishment of privately run jails or halfway houses in the city.

The latest proposal comes from J.L. "Jimmy" Moore, who has applied to the City Planning and Zoning Commission for a specific use permit that would allow him to remodel and convert the old Gulf Oil building on West 2nd Street for use as a privately run minimum security detention facility.

The amended ordinance was proposed after council members spent several months considering a request for a zoning variance that would have allowed conversion of the old Sands Motel on East 2nd Street for use as as halfway house to house prison parolees.

While considering the proposal, council members decided existing ordinances failed to define and did not contain sufficient guidelines to cover granting specific use permits for establishment of minimum security jail facilities or halfway houses.

The new ordinance defines minimum security facilities as those designed for "imprisonment of persons who are charged with or convicted of law violation and who are not permitted access into the community without guard supervision."

Under the new ordinance, facilities of this type would be restricted to city areas zoned only for light or heavy industry, or future developmental areas. Such private facilities would be allowed no closer than 420 feet from the nearest residential property and property owners within 1,000 feet of a proposed facility would have to be notified before a specific use permit could be granted.

Mayor Don Carter, who has said he favors location of a minimum security prison in the Odessa area because of the jobs it would produce, says approval of the ordinance doesn't represent council endorsement of Moore's proposal; Moore he must still gain a specific use permit from the City Planning and Zoning Commission.

Local diabetes symposium slated

From Staff Reports

The latest techniques for managing an incurable disease will be related to physicians and other medical personnel during "Exchanges in Diabetes," Saturday at the Petroleum Club, 501 W. Wall St.

The symposium, sponsored by Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and is open to physicians, nurses, registered dieticians and other medical personnel in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico at no charge.

Diabetes ranks behind heart disease and cancer as the third leading cause of death, according to the American Diabetes Association.

Dr. Luther B. Travis, medical director of the Children's Diabetes Center with the University of Texas Medical Branch Hospitals at Galveston, will speak on "Management of Children with Insulin Dependent Diabetes Mellitus," and "Special Projects for Diabetic Children."

Dr. Charles Kilo of St. Louis, Mo., heads the Kilo Diabetes and Vascular Research Foundation at Washington University. An associate professor of clinical medicine/diabetes, he will speak on "Current Concepts in the Diagnosis and Treatment of Type II Diabetes."

Dr. Robert Weinstein is an associate professor of medicine at the University of Chicago Pritzker School of Medicine. His topic will be "Management of Infectious Complications of Diabetic Patients."

Other speakers include Dr. David Schade, Albuquerque, N.M.; Dr. Krishna M. Pinnamaneni, Tempe, Ariz.; Dr. R. Daniel Braun, Odessa; and Helen Bolen, R.N., B.S., Minneapolis, Minn.

The symposium has been accredited by the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center for continuing medical education for physicians and nurses.

Persons interested in attending should contact Lana Cunningham at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, 683-2273, extension 25.

On the same day, the Midland chapter of the American Diabetes Association will be conducting its first John J. Redfern Jr. Memorial Bike Ride Plus to raise funds for diabetes research. For more information, contact Kara Jennings at 682-0314.

Top two ECISD board positions go to women

ODESSA — The top two positions on the Ector County Independent School District Board of Trustees for the first time will be occupied by women.

Board members meeting Tuesday night elected Vickie Gomez to succeed Mickey Jones as president of the school district governing body. Ms. Gomez is serving her third term on the ECISD board.

Dr. Lee Buice, in her first term on the board, was elected vice president.

Ms. Gomez is not the first woman to serve as president of the ECISD board. Longtime board member Shirley Huffaker also served as president of the board. This is, however, the first time the top two positions have been occupied by women.

Board members Tuesday night considered 16 recommendations from the Drug Education-Intervention Committee that included closure of Ector County school campuses during lunchtime. The board discussed the proposals at length but deferred approval pending further study.

The recommendations, developed by Dr. Wayne Milligan — director of planning, evaluation, research and development — call for doing away with student and faculty smoking lounges by spring 1988, as well as the wearing of name tags by all district employees and secondary students beginning in January 1988.

The recommendations also call for a review of district policies regarding drug use, utilization of drug-sniffing dogs, drug education curricula and the scheduling of in-service workshops on substance abuse and identification.

Ms. Gomez has suggested that, since the board will probably accept the recommendations, timetables for implementation of as many as possible should be moved up to make them operative by the beginning of the next school year.

Perot backs education funding

AUSTIN (AP) — Additional plans for a May 5 rally and a grass-roots tour of Texas to urge increased spending for public and higher education have been made by Dallas computer magnate Ross Perot and legislative leaders.

Perot talked Tuesday with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Gib Lewis and their staffs.

Perot said last week he was leading a drive to push for public and higher education funding and to defeat moves to dismantle reform programs approved by previous legislatures.

Perot said he was willing to spend his own money to sponsor a May 5 rally in Austin and if necessary launch a statewide tour of the state to get support for the education funds.

Gov. Bill Clements, who wants education spending cut for the next two years, is in the midst of a 17-city tour to oppose proposals by Hobby and others for higher taxes, earmarked for education.

State should build up small firms, Hightower says

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Economic development should hinge on building up small companies, not wasting millions of dollars trying to attract large corporations, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says.

"We've got to build new industries at a grass-roots level, build them through cooperatives, build them through individual efforts, through partnerships, government working in partnership with true enterprise people of our society," Hightower said. He said many states spent millions of dollars in trying to attract a Toyota plant, which Tennessee eventually landed.

Hightower said his department is assisting in the development of 52 agriculture processing projects, involving more than $218 million.

When completed the projects will create 5,000 new jobs and first-year sales will top $600 million, Hightower said.

Hightower criticized national government and corporate officials for forcing hard economic conditions that hurt workers.

Since 1981, when President Reagan took office, the number of corporate executives making $1 million annually has increased, Hightower charged.

He said since 1978 more than 11 million manufacturing jobs have been lost nationwide and that thousands of corporate mergers, leveraged buyouts and takeovers in 1986 helped only a few.

"What we're doing is investing in the rich," Hightower told the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union.

"They think they're the top dogs and you all are just a bunch of fire hydrants out there," he said.

Midland woman arrested in theft of store's jewelry

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

Midland police today announced the arrest of a 23-year-old Midland woman and the recovery of more than $7,000 in jewelry reported stolen from a local retail store.

According to police spokesman Cpl. Jim White, Rowela Jacob Aromin, 3600 N. Midland Dr., was arrested by detectives April 23. White said the woman was charged with felony theft, and bond was set at $10,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

According to White, Ms. Aromin was an employee at Service Merchandise, Midkiff Plaza, at the time of her arrest. Police said the jewelry was first reported stolen in June 1986, and that the thefts continued into 1987. White said the woman was hired in April 1986, quit three months later, but was rehired.

White said a break in the case came when police found that the stolen jewelry had been sold in the city.

Police are also investigating the burglary of a residence in the 700 block of Clay Street.

Reports said a 19-inch color television set valued at $500, a cable television converter box valued at $250, a purse, credit cards, and $9 cash were stolen.

In other reports, police have two suspects in the burglary of a residence in the 4400 block of North Garfield Street. Reports said an AM-FM cassette stereo valued at $120 was stolen.

Theater manager's killer awaits likely execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Clifford X. Phillips, convicted of the 1982 robbery-slaying of a Houston theater manager, awaited an early Thursday execution while his attorneys were unable to raise new legal issues in efforts to save his life.

Phillips, 52, who prefers to be called by the Islamic name of Abdullah Bashir, was convicted of strangling Iris Siff, 58, who was working late the night of Jan. 12, 1982, at the Alley Theater.

Phillips earlier worked as a security guard at the downtown playhouse. Police said he told them he intended to rob the woman.

"I'm remorseful — absolutely," Phillips said in a recent death row interview. "It was never my intention to kill the woman. It was unfortunate."

Phillips strangled Mrs. Siff with his hands and with a cord from a nearby telephone.

Phillips, a Buffalo, N.Y., general contractor who had come to Houston only four months earlier, found work at the theater as a security guard but was fired from the job.

In his confession, police said he admitted that he sneaked into the theater and strangled her when she resisted a holdup attempt.

Testimony at his trial showed he stole the woman's television, fur coat, jewelry, tote bag and Lincoln Continental. Police arrested him in Los Angeles.

He served seven years in prison in New York after convicted in 1970 of killing his 3-year-old son by forcing water down the child's throat. The child's body was found in a suitcase in the Bronx. The conviction later was reversed, records showed.

Phillips would be the 23rd Texas inmate to be executed since the state resumed the death penalty in 1982. Two prisoners have been executed so far this year.

The state attorney general's office said it was unaware of any legal action on Phillips' behalf.

"As far as we know, there's nothing in the works that would grant him a stay," spokesman Ron Dusek said. "We would fight a stay and in all likelihood, he would not get one."

Phillips' attorney, Jim Skelton, said he has exhausted all legal avenues.

"I don't know of anything that can be done for Clifford Phillips at this point," he said.

State judge expected to rule on school financing case

AUSTIN (AP) — The bitter 2½-month court battle over state school financing came down to one question:

Should Texas give more state school aid to property-poor school districts than to those with lots of rich taxpayers?

State District Judge Harley Clark was scheduled to give his answer at 9:30 a.m. today in a special session.

Final arguments in the long, complex non-jury civil trial were held April 23.

The suit was filed in 1985 against the state by 67 property-poor school districts who contend the current division of state school funds is discriminatory.

The state, joined by 48 other school districts, claims the distribution, set up by 1984 school reforms, is fair and adequate.

Collision between school bus, truck injures 16 people

*SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Fifteen students and a bus driver were injured when the school bus and a five-ton gravel truck collided south of here, authorities said.

The bus, which was carrying about 23 students, belonged to the Southside Independent School District. The five-ton truck was owed by Antonio Huerta of San Antonio.

The accident occurred about 4 p.m. Tuesday about 10 miles south of the city.

Five students and bus driver Katherine Aldrich, 64, who was trapped for about 45 minutes, were taken to Brooke Army Medical Center, said hospital spokesman Capt. Jerry Zellers.

Seven children were taken to Southwest General Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Debbie Reed.

Lynn Blanco, spokeswoman at Medical Center Hospital, said three children taken there would be treated and released.

The truck was traveling east on Loop 1604 and the bus was traveling south on Pleasanton Road when the vehicles collided about 4 p.m., authorities said.

Emergency care doctors now get special training

Emergency room training used to be something residents would get while being rotated around a hospital, getting experience from every department, said Charles Yoakum, a spokesman for the Dallas-based American College of Emergency Physicians.

EL PASO (AP) — Emergency care physicians used to get their training more or less on the job, but now there are special programs for such physicians.

Texas Tech University runs one of only three emergency residency programs in the state, producing what officials say is a 6-year-old medical specialty. The Lubbock-based university's program works out of El Paso County's Thomason General Hospital and handled 37,000 patients last year.

Emergency medicine trains interns to look at a wide range of problems, said Jim Hastings, a spokesman for the Texas Tech program.

"They have to be able to respond immediately to any kind of crisis," he said. "It's a broad-based specialty."

Emergency room training used to be something residents would get while being rotated around a hospital, getting experience from every department, said Charles Yoakum, a spokesman for the Dallas-based American College of Emergency Physicians.

Anyone rushed into an emergency room would be attended by "anybody who was on duty — it could be an intern, a pediatrician," said Yoakum.

Beginning in 1980, when the American Board of Emergency Medicine started certifying emergency medicine specialists, 64 accredited residency programs have cropped up around the nation.

"Before, you got that training when and where you could...and a lot of it was on-the-job training," said Yoakum.

"Keep in mind, though, that there are many fine physicians who've been doing it (emergency medical care) for years and do a fine job," he said.

Certification in a specialty is not a requirement to practice medicine, said Susan Dunsmore of the American Board of Emergency Medicine, or ABEM, in Michigan.

"You don't have to be certified to practice in a specialty, but major hospitals require certification," she said.

Specialization means an easier time getting a job for a brand-new medical doctor, said Yoakum. The emergency specialty has become the second-most declared by students coming out of medical school, behind orthopedics, he said.

The Texas Tech emergency program at El Paso County's Thomason General Hospital received formal approval from the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education in March. It had been functioning for more than five years under provisional accreditation and produced 12 graduates.

In 1986, the emergency program handled 37,000 patient visits, averaging five or six major trauma cases a day, said Hastings.

"Major trauma cases are severe physical injury, auto accidents, gunshot wounds, knifings — anything that's not a bellyache," said Hastings.

Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio and Darnall Army Community Hospital in Fort Hood, north of Austin, have the other two emergency medicine residency programs in Texas, said Ms. Dunsmore.

The ABEM is the latest of 23 specialty boards in the United States under the American Board of Medical Specialties.

Dollar recovers

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against most major currencies in early European trading today. Precious metals rebounded, with gold bullion rising above $450 and silver above $8.

Currency traders said the dollar was trading within a narrow range in light volume. They attributed the lack of activity to the closing of Japanese markets today for a national holiday.

In London, the dollar rose to 140.90 Japanese yen, up from 139.45 yen in Tokyo late Tuesday.

—1.8005 West German marks, up from 1.7990

—1.4775 Swiss francs, up from 1.4677

—6.0025 French francs, up from 5.9925

—2.0307 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0265

—1,284.50 Italian lire, up from 1,283.50

GOLD

In bullion trading, gold and silver prices rose in line with trading in New York late Tuesday. Speculative trading has caused wide fluctuations in metals' prices in recent days.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price $451.75 a troy ounce at midmorning, up from $449 late Tuesday.

The metal was bid at $451.30 in Zurich, up from $447.50.

Earlier, gold closed in Hong Kong at a bid of $450.48, down from $452.63.

Silver bullion was bid at $8.12 in London, up sharply from Tuesday's rate of $7.75.

March activity indicates continued growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main forecasting gauge of future economic activity rose a moderate 0.4 percent in March, indicating continued growth in coming months, the Commerce Department said today.

The gain in the department's Index of Leading Indicators matched a revised 0.4 percent increase in February, gains which had followed a 0.4 percent decline in January.

The back-to-back increases still were well below a huge 2.3 percent advance last December, a gain which had been powered by a last-minute rush of buying activity by consumers and businesses seeking to take advantage of expiring tax breaks.

The steady gains in the leading index support the Reagan administration's belief that there is no danger on the horizon of the country tumbling into a recession.

Private economists agree, although they believe that economic growth this year will be much lower than the administration is predicting.

These analysts believe that rising interest rates in recent weeks, triggered by the falling dollar and new fears of inflation, will cut into growth in the second half of 1987.

The strength in the index in March came from the month's big rise in stock prices, which set a string of new record highs during the month. However, the stock market has dropped substantially during April with the Dow Jones industrial average falling by more than 170 points. This steep decline will be a big negative influence on the April index.

In all, six of the nine indicators made positive contributions in March.

In addition to the rise in stock prices, other positive factors were a decline in unemployment claims, changes in business delivery times, a rise in orders for capital equipment, a gain in orders for consumer goods and an increase in building permits.

Three indicators held back growth. The largest negative factor came from a drop in the length of the average work week, followed by changes in raw materials prices and a slowdown in growth of the money supply.

Two indicators, business and consumer credit and business inventories, were not available for inclusion in the report.

The various changes left the leading index at 187.5 of its 1967 base of 100.

The leading index is composed of a group of forward-looking business statistics designed to predict the course of the economy six to nine months down the road.

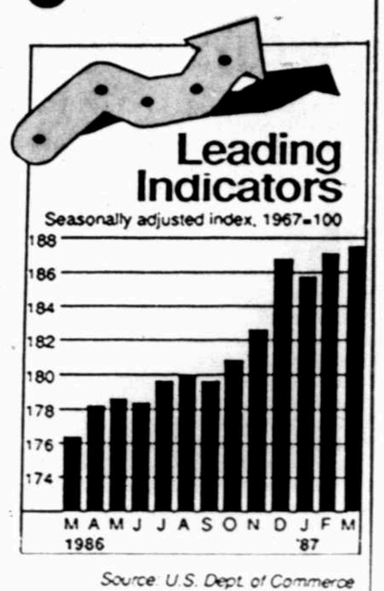

Many economists believe the economy will suffer a big dip in activity in the current spring quarter before recovering to grow at a moderate pace for the rest of the year.

The economy, as measured by the gross national product, advanced at an annual rate of 4.3 percent in the January-March quarter, the fastest rate in almost three years.

But many analysts saw weakness in the figures because so much of the strength came in rebuilding business inventories, which was occurring at the same time that consumer spending was declining. Analysts said this will result in unwanted inventories in the current quarter which will have to be worked off before production can begin growing again.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, predicted that the GNP would slump to an annual growth rate of 1 percent in the April-June quarter before improving to a rate of around 2.2 percent in the second half of the year.

That outlook would translate into economic growth for the entire year of around 2.4 percent, very similar to last year's lackluster 2.5 percent increase, which had been the slowest pace since the recession year of 1982.

Source: U.S. Dept. of Commerce

The Reagan administration is sticking by its forecast that growth will rebound to 3.2 percent for all of 1987.

Job opportunity makes for 'tough decisions'

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

"If they knew what the situation was like in other parts of the country, they would keep their jobs." That is how Carl Poston, one of Iowa Beef Processors newest employees, sums up local applicants' concerns about replacing union workers in Nebraska.

IBP officials are in Midland through Friday recruiting meat processing and slaughter personnel for their Dakota City, Neb. plant.

At its peak the plant may employ up to 3,000 workers, according to company spokesman Gary Mickelson.

The thousands of openings are the result of a strike by Local 222 of the United Food & Commercial Workers union.

Poston, an Odessan who went through the two-hour application, interview and physical process Tuesday, accepted a $6.00 per hour job on the "kill floor" of the plant. Poston's wife and both her parents applied for work in the Dakota City plant as well. If accepted for employment, the move to Nebraska will be a family adventure — loading up the travel trailer and heading out.

Poston will begin work on the slaughter room floor May 18, he said. "A man's got to do what he has to to feed his family."

Others were less self-assured in reaching the "tough decision" to uproot their lives for the sake of a job.

Mack Ellis, a truck driver who has been unable to find steady trucking employment for more than three years, left the Holiday Inn T-Dome unsure of whether he would make the move north in pursuit of employment.

"I probably will. I've never seen it (the economy) this bad here. They keep saying the area's going to come back, but I don't know if I can last that long.

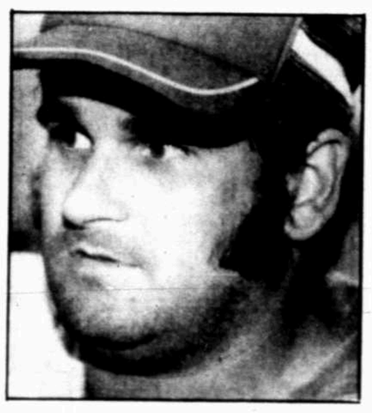

"And I don't want to leave West Texas," said the Odessa native on Tuesday afternoon. "But I don't have many other choices."

Midland is the latest stop on a recruiting tour that has taken interviewers to hotbeds of oil-related unemployment across the Southwest. IBP personnel and recruitment ads were reported in Oklahoma City and Houston earlier in the month.

National officials of the AFL-CIO have been openly critical of IBP recruiting practices. "In any given year, nearly 40 percent of the workers in Dakota City are injured," Robert Harbrant wrote to refugee groups around the country.

"If you send inexperienced refugees into a meatpacking plant during a strike, an even higher number are likely to be injured in the workplace," said the letter from the president of the AFL-CIO's Food and Allied Service Trades department,, according to the Associated Press.

IBP spokesman Mickelson called the AFL-CIO announcements a "misinformation campaign" against the company.

"A man's got to do what he has to, to feed his family."

— Carl Poston

The company's labor woes were initially fueled by the union's rejection of an IBP contract offer and the resulting company lock-out which began in mid-December. After three months, the firm decided to reopen the plant March 16 — at which point the UFCW local voted to strike the company.

"The plant reopened the following day with former union members we invited to return to the plant," Mickelson said.

Employment has steadily increased since then, processing only for about two weeks, with "kill" operations resuming April 1. Currently there are two processing and one slaughtering shift working.

Furrs adds Big Spring jobs

From Staff Reports

Former employees could be among those hired to work in two Big Spring supermarkets recently purchased by Furr's Inc. from Safeway.

Big Spring was among the area communities affected by last week's closing of 131 Safeway stores, which cost 8,500 employees their jobs.

However, the damage was temporary, as Lubbock-based Furrs, Inc. purchased the two Big Spring stores, and began interviewing prospective employees for positions as stock, produce, floral and bakery clerks, cashiers, deli and fish clerks, meat cutters and wrappers and sack clerks.

One Safeway store remained closed, but the Safeway at No. 1 College Park — now a Furrs Supermarket — opened Monday at 10 a.m. The new store will feature a beer and wine department, an in-store bakery, delicatessen, bulk foods area, fish market and floral shop.

Furrs purchased 14 Safeway stores in eight cities, including the two in Big Spring, three in Abilene, and one each in Brownwood, Sweetwater, Snyder and Breckenridge.

At about the same time Big Spring shoppers learned their Safeway stores were closing, it was announced that the Big Spring K mart will be closed in July, leaving 60 employees without jobs.

Maxus Energy Corp. President Charles Blackburn poses with the company's new symbol. Formerly known as Diamond Shamrock Corp., the company announced the name change Tuesday.

Shamrock's new name reflects aspirations

From Staff and Wire Reports

As part of a previously announced restructuring plan, Diamond Shamrock Corp. announced Tuesday that it will change its name to Maxus Energy Corp.

The company's refining and marketing subsidiary will keep the Diamond Shamrock name and logo as Diamond Shamrock R&M Inc., said Charles Blackburn, Diamond Shamrock chief executive officer and president.

The company announced in February that it would spin off its refining and marketing division into a separate public company to be based in San Antonio.

Meanwhile, the crude oil and natural gas exploration and production company will become Dallas-based Maxus.

"We think this name reflects not only who we are but who we aspire to be — the best oil and gas exploration and production company in the U.S.," said Blackburn, who will assume the title of Maxus chairman later this week at the company's annual stockholders meeting.

Greg Drwenski, a senior petroleum engineer at the Midland Maxus office, received a $500 cash price for submitting the name "Maxim," which closely resembled the final name. "I thought it was real amazing to be chosen from among 900 entries," he commented.

"I tried to come up with a name that showed the direction of the company, which is finding reserves at the lowest possible cost." He said he had submitted several suggestions for a new name. According to Drwenski, approximately 500 Diamond Shamrock employees submitted suggestions and 400 suggestions came from outside the company. "I think it's an excellent name and there's no other name close to it in the oil and gas industry," Drwenski commented. The Midland office has 13 employees.

Penney plans Dallas move

NEW YORK (AP) — J.C. Penney Co., the nation's third-largest retailer, will relocate its headquarters from New York to Dallas in a move that will affect 4,000 people at its 45-story midtown tower, according to a report published today.

There was no immediate confirmation from Penney of The New York Times report, which cited unidentified consultants helping to plan the move.

The move had been rumored for two years. City officials who negotiated with Penney for several months in an effort to keep the headquarters in New York said the loss in jobs would cost the city millions in income tax revenue.

"Even with these moves, we have experienced substantial job growth this year," said Alair A. Townsend, deputy mayor for finance and economic development.

BP, Standard set sale price

By Robert Cole
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The British Petroleum Co. and the Standard Oil Co. agreed Tuesday on a $7.82 billion price for B.P.'s purchase of the 45 percent of Standard Oil that it does not yet own.

The agreement, which won the unanimous endorsement of Standard Oil's 16-member board of directors, will make British Petroleum the third-largest oil company in the world. It would be outranked only by Exxon and the Royal Dutch-Shell Group.

At $7.82 billion, it would also be the nation's third-largest takeover, after Chevron's $13.4 billion purchase of Gulf in 1984 and Texaco's $10.1 billion deal for Getty in the same year.

Subject to court approval, the deal also provides for the settlement of stockholder suits challenging B.P.'s earlier offer for the company as "grossly inadequate."

Stephen Lowey, one of three lawyers who headed litigation brought by 20 lawyers in nine lawsuits, said the settlement came on the eve of a hearing to decide whether the court would delay B.P.'s tender offer until purportedly misleading information was corrected.

"The $440 million extra that we got for stockholders," he said, "is the largest settlement in the history of securities class-action litigation."

The lawyers are now expected to seek court approval for a $22 million fee, which would represent 5 percent of the increase obtained.

Responding to the new offer, which traders valued at $74 a share, or perhaps $74.50, Standard Oil's stock advanced $1.25, to $73.375, in New York Stock Exchange trading, with 7.1 million shares changing hands. It was by far the day's most actively traded issue, trading between a high of $73.75 and a low of $73.375.

Midland could be site of new plastics plant

By MELLA McEWEN

Rumor from the Midland Chamber of Commerce is that Steve Hardin, the departing director of economic development, is working closely with an out-of-state company that is tentatively planning to build a plant in Midland.

McEwen

According to chamber sources, the plastics-related plant could employ between 200 and 250 when it opens. Hardin said company officials tell him they're definitely going to build the plant, but he has no other details.

It was recently reported that Texas banks lost $883.2 million in 1986, the highest in the nation and a state record. However, one Midland bank seems to be bucking that trend.

UNITED BANK has maintained quality assets, liquidity and a high capital-to-assets ratio. Those factors and the bank's healthy earnings have entitled it to an "A" rating by Sheshunoff & Co., one of the highest awarded by this national reporting service. The bank is also recognized as the top performing bank in this region, as listed in the Veribanc Blue book. The Holt Advisory Report lists United among the top 50 banks in the U.S. in its peer group of $100-million in assets.

BEALLS, in Midland Park Mall, has announced a new shopping courtesy for shoppers 55 years old and over, called "Club 55".

According to manager Bob Jackson, "any individual 55 years 'young' and over can register to join Club 55 and receive a 15 percent discount on 'Club 55 Day,' which is presently the first Tuesday of each month. There is no charge for membership."

Jackson added that Bealls intends to add other courtesies for members as time goes on. "Much depends on membership interest. Right now we want to see if 'Club 55 Day' at Bealls is meaningful to the membership."

Pennzoil earns $12.1 million

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co. reported net income of $12.1 million for the first quarter of 1987, up from a net loss of $16.1 million for the first quarter of 1986, the company announced Tuesday.

Earnings per share for the first quarter of 1987 was 20 cents, compared to a loss of 49 cents per share for the first quarter of 1986.

Revenues for the first quarter of 1987 amounted to $444.7 million, as opposed to $513.7 million for the comparable period in 1986, the company said.

During the most recent quarter, Pennzoil's oil and gas segment continued to realize significantly lower earnings due to lower prices and volumes for oil and natural gas, according to Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke.

Operating income for the company's petroleum products segment was down slightly from last year's level due to lower refining margins, Liedtke said. Sales of motor oil achieved higher sales volumes and better margins, Liedtke said.

For the three months ended March 31, revenues from oil and gas production amounted to $114.5 million, compared to $167.6 million for the period the year before, the company said.

Revenues from petroleum products from for the first quarter was $305.6 million, down from $318.6 million the year earlier.

Congress urged to raise $15 billion for FSLIC

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two ranking House Democrats urged Congress Tuesday to raise $15 billion over the next five years to help the ailing Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which government auditors say is technically insolvent.

The $15 billion and five-year period is the same as the Reagan administration has requested. Congressional committees have already passed lower amounts over a shorter period.

The House Banking Committee has approved legislation to raise $5 billion over the next two years, a plan supported by the savings and loan industry. The Senate Banking Committee has approved a $7.5 billion, two-year plan as part of a larger, more encompassing banking bill.

Rep. Fernand J. St Germain, D-R. I., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said last week he would not permit the Senate-passed S&L rescue bill to reach the House floor because it contains highly controversial provisions to force a restructuring of the financial services industries.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Tex., and St Germain said in a statement Tuesday "our monitoring of the continuing problems in the industry has convinced us that the committee-passed bill needs to be beefed up.

"We are in agreement that the situation does, indeed, require the kind of long-range confidence that can be infused with a $15 billion, five-year recapitalization plan - similar to that approved by the House in the last Congress and supported by the administration," they said.

Wright and St Germain said their proposal will provide "a balanced program for FSLIC recovery. On the one hand, enough funds to restore confidence to give the regulators needed authority, and on the other hand, a specific program of forbearance that assures that the regulators use the funds properly and not as a bludgeon to wipe out legitimate business."

They said they would ask the House to move the FSLIC bill separately and not along with other provisions, as in the Senate version. "We are hopeful that the Senate will lend their cooperation to moving this legislation to the president's desk as soon as soon as possible," they said.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, has said that FSLIC is insolvent under ordinary accounting principles.

STANDARD

On March 25, when B.P. first announced its offer for Standard Oil, it proposed paying $70 a share. Standard Oil's stock immediately jumped $6.50, to $71.375, but dissident stockholders filed suits for more money. Tuesday's sweetener called for B.P. to raise the offer to $71.50, add a 70-cent-a-share dividend and a warrant (or right) to buy B.P. stock in the form of American depository receipts. One warrant would be issued for each five Standard shares owned. Traders valued the warrant at about $1.80, giving the B.P. package a value of at least $74 a share.

Frederick P. Leuffer Jr., who follows oil for C.J. Lawrence, said the agreement "paves the way for B.P. to do the deal quickly without any significant opposition."

What British Petroleum wanted to avoid, he said, was "a big shoot-out in court for the next year and a half — like Royal Dutch when it took over Shell."

Royal Dutch had originally offered $55 a share for Shell, but after 18 months of tough litigation, it eventually raised the bid to $60 a share, or $5.6 billion.

Bryan Jacobosky, who tracks oil for Paine Webber Inc., said more than anything that the deal gives B.P. access to some $2.8 billion in annual cash flow, rather than the approximately $360 million in dividends it gets now. He felt B.P. might use the money for such things as drilling for oil and gas in the North Sea and China and continuing to make selective acquisitions outside the oil and gas business.

Even more significant, Jacobosky said, was that "B.P. thinks the best thing it can do with $7.8 billion is to buy out the minority shareholders." He added, "This suggests that B.P. is not excited about the conventional investment opportunities in the oil and gas business."

Three major American investment houses played significant roles in helping arrive at Tuesday's agreement: the First Boston Corp., which will collect $9.9 million as adviser to Standard's special committee of seven independent directors; Goldman, Sachs & Co., which could collect $8.7 million as adviser to British Petroleum, and Bear, Stearns & Co., which is expected to collect $2 million as adviser to the lawyers for dissident stockholders.

Goldman, Sachs had advised B.P. that the stock in what had been known until last year as the Standard Oil Company of Ohio was worth no more than $52.67 each under current conditions.

USX reports $97 million first-quarter loss

NEW YORK — The USX Corp., the nation's largest steelmaker, Tuesday reported a first-quarter loss of $97 million, while the Bethlehem Steel Corp., the third largest, posted a $25.6 million profit.

The loss at USX, which also has extensive energy operations, was narrower than the company's $249 million loss in the comparable 1986 period, a deficit reflecting a reduction of the oil inventories of its Marathon Oil Co. unit. The results for the recent quarter were hurt by a six-month shutdown of the company's steel operations in a labor dispute that ended in February.

"The current quarter's operating results reflect both the effects of the steel strike and costs associated with starting up our steel facilities after the labor agreement had been reached," said David M. Roderick, USX's chairman.

Roderick added that the start-up costs related to the steel plants would "trail into the second quarter," but added that "we are confident the worst is behind us now."

Southwest takes measures to reduce losses

DALLAS (SWN) — Southwest Airlines' consolidated net loss for the first quarter ended March 31, was $9,834,000, compared to net income of $2,727,000 in the first quarter of 1986, and represents a loss per share of $.30, compared to earnings of $.08 reported in the first quarter of last year.

Herbert D. Kelleher, chairman of the board and CEO, stated: "The principal reason for our first quarter loss was a deficiency in revenues, since our 1987 first quarter unit costs were considerably reduced from our unit costs in the first quarter of 1986.

"Accordingly, Southwest has recently taken a two-fold approach to enhancing its revenues. In order to increase yield, it has raised unrestricted fares to selected city-pair markets effective June 1, 1987. In order to increase load factors, it has recently reduced its 14-day advance purchase Fun Fares on Monday-Thursday and Saturday.

Texas Commerce posts $4.2 million loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Commerce Bancshares posted a net loss of $4.2 million for the three months ending March 31, a decline from earnings of $20.6 million recorded during the same period in 1986, officials said Tuesday.

The loss amounts to 12 cents per share, compared to the 63 cents per-share earnings in the 1986 quarter for the Houston-based bank that was recently acquired by Chemical New York Corp.

For the fourth quarter of 1986, the bank posted a net loss of $21.1 million, or 64 cents per share.

Managers' raises outpace blue-collar workers'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paychecks for the nation's 78 million full-time workers rose an average 4.2 percent in the past year, nearly double the rate of inflation, to a median $369 per week in the first quarter of 1987, the Labor Department said.

That compares with a median paycheck of $368 per week in the last quarter of 1986 and $354 per week in the first three months of 1986, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said Tuesday.

The bureau also said bosses are getting percentage pay and benefit raises more than twice as large as the increases for blue-collar workers.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Capital gains tax avoided by generosity with stocks

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Can I transfer some stock I own as a gift to my adult daughter simply by executing the required documents of transfer and delivering my certificates to the company's transfer agent? A friend tells me no capital gains tax is due on such a transfer. Is this true?

Doyle

A. Yes, to both questions.

Executing the documents can be done in either of two ways. You can fill out the assignment forms on the back of the stock certificates and have your signature guaranteed by a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company. Or you can fill out a "stock power" form, which has the same effect.

Then, deliver the certificates to the transfer agent. If you use the U.S. Postal Service, do it by registered mail, return receipt requested.

If you fill out a stock power, don't fill out the assignment forms on the certificates. And send the stock power and the certificates in different envelopes.

Make sure you have the transfer agent's correct address, which is listed in the annual report of the company whose stock is involved.

No capital gains tax will be due on the transfer because you are not selling the stock. Gifts, including the generous one you are planning, are not subject to capital gains tax.

If your daughter sells that stock at a profit some time in the future she will then be required to pay capital gains tax. So make sure to inform your daughter of your "basis" on that stock — the price at which you bought it or otherwise acquired it.

She will need to know that basis to calculate her profit or loss when and if she sells the stock. On gift securities sold at a profit, the recipient's basis is the donor's basis — meaning your basis becomes your daughter's basis. On gift securities sold at a loss, the recipient's basis is the donor's basis or the securities' market value on the date of the gift — whichever is lower.

Q. I disagree with your statement that registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, is counted as very safe. I sent my grandson a commemorative coin by registered mail more than a month ago. The coin was carefully boxed and insured for $10. My grandson never received it.

I'll get $10 from the Post Office, but I would much rather that my grandson got the coin. If I ever send another package it will be through United Parcel Service, not the U.S. Postal Service. Your comments?

A. There's no getting around the fact that the U.S. mails are far from perfect. Unhappy experiences such as yours do occur. Nonetheless, they happen only to a fraction of 1 percent of all mail deliveries.

Q. I have two 100-share certificates of the same stock, obtained at different times. The dates and serial numbers on the certificates are different, but the CUSIP numbers are the same. Will this make any difference if I try to sell both certificates?

A. No. You are the registered owner of 200 shares of that stock. The certificates are evidence of your ownership. You can sell any or all of the 200 shares.

Naturally, the certificates' dates and serial numbers are different. Each certificate is dated on the day it is issued. And each certificate has its own serial number.

CUSIP stands for Committee on Uniform Security Identification Procedures, which assigns a CUSIP number to publicly owned issues of stocks and debt securities.

All that company's common stock has the same CUSIP number. If the company has a preferred stock issue, it has another CUSIP number, as does the every issue of the company's bonds.

If you own any stocks or bonds of other companies, you find different CUSIP numbers on the certificates of each issue.

RECIPE MAKEOVERS

YOGURT CEREAL COFFEE CAKE

- 1-1/2 cups natural raisin bran or natural bran flakes, lightly crushed — replaces part of flour in classic recipe
- 3/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar — replaces 1½ c. sugar
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 3/4 cup whole wheat flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon double-acting baking powder — replaces 3/4 tsp. salt
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1 container (8 oz.) plain lowfat yogurt — replaces sour cream
- 2 eggs
- 1/3 cup skim or lowfat milk — replaces whole milk
- 1/4 cup oil
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix 1/2 cup of the cereal with 1/4 cup of the brown sugar and cinnamon; set aside. Mix flours, remaining sugar, baking soda, baking powder, salt and remaining cereal. Mix yogurt, eggs, milk, oil and vanilla until well blended. Stir into the flour mixture; blend well. Pour half the batter into a 9-inch tube pan sprayed with pure vegetable cooking spray. Sprinkle with half the cinnamon mixture. Repeat layers. Bake at 350° for 40 to 45 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan. Makes 14 servings.

About 160 calories, 2 g fiber, 4 g fat and 190 mg sodium per serving.

Don't give up favorite recipes just because you're watching your diet. Instead, change them. All it takes are some slight modifications in cooking methods or substitution of ingredients, combined with a little imagination and practice.

Here we illustrate how a classic Sour Cream Coffee Cake is transformed into a healthier indulgence. The traditional cake calls for sour cream at 500 calories. Substituting plain lowfat yogurt saves 375 calories alone. But, we didn't stop there. We reduced the sugar by half, eliminating even more calories. And we reduced the salt. In fact, you can put our makeover Yogurt Cereal Coffee Cake on the menu for 180 calories less per serving than the sour cream classic. And because natural bran flakes are substituted for part of the flour, our version is higher in fiber. This proves that recipes don't always have to be followed exactly. In fact, healthy substitutions can be made without significantly affecting the classic dish.

Making similar changes on your own favorites can be fun and rewarding. But, before you go off on your own, try some of the following healthy recipes—we've already done the makeover for you.

They are the healthy contemporary versions of some traditional family favorites you'll find in most cookbooks. Ingredient substitutions make the updated versions moderate in fat, cholesterol, sodium and calories, yet delicious and often higher in fiber. Now you can enjoy our counterpart without a twinge of guilt. What's more, we've added even more flavor and wholesome goodness by preparing them with ready-to-eat cereals. The results are a healthy collection of recipe ideas that will give you the incentive and confidence to "make over" your personal recipe file.

Here are some basic techniques for increasing fiber, while shaving hundreds of unnecessary calories, excess fat, cholesterol and sodium from your menu.

1. Change A Cooking Technique

Steam, boil, broil or bake meats or other foods, instead of frying. Prepare soups and stews in advance; allow to cool, until the fat becomes solid. Spoon off the fat before reheating. Cook with more whole grains, cereals, and fruits and vegetables. Trim all visible fat from meat and poultry.

2. Reduce or Eliminate An Ingredient

Many recipes call for more salt, fat or sugar than is really needed for good taste. By experimenting, you can learn how much you actually need. For example, salt and oil can be omitted from the water used to cook pasta without sacrificing flavor. You can also reduce sugar in many baked goods such as quick breads and cookies by as much as one-third to one-half and never miss it. Try adding vanilla or cinnamon to enhance the flavor.

3. Substitute One Ingredient For Another

In many dishes, you can make the following substitutions:

Classic	Healthier
butter or lard	margarine
whole milk	skim milk or lowfat milk
cream	evaporated milk
sour cream	plain lowfat yogurt or buttermilk
regular cheese	skim milk or lowfat cheese
salt	lemon, mixed herbs such as rosemary, basil, thyme, oregano
soy sauce	low sodium soy sauce or flavored vinegar
gravy thickened with fat and flour	gravy thickened with pureed vegetables ice cream	ice milk, sherbet or frozen yogurt
hydrogenated shortening	liquid vegetable oil such as corn, safflower or soybean refined flour	ready-to-eat cereal for part of flour

CHICKEN DIVAN

This delicious recipe has less than one-third the fat and sodium of the classic recipe.

- 2 boned whole chicken breasts, split
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1-1/2 cups boiling water
- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen broccoli spears
- 2 tablespoons margarine
- 3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 2 tablespoons skim or lowfat milk
- 1 egg, beaten
- Savory Cereal Stuffing
- 1/4 cup grated Swiss cheese

Add chicken and salt to boiling water; reduce heat and poach until tender, about 10 minutes. Reserve stock. Cool chicken slightly and cut each piece into 2 slices. Cook broccoli in reserved stock just until spears separate; remove from heat. Remove broccoli from stock.

Meanwhile, melt margarine in saucepan; blend in flour. Add 1 cup reserved chicken stock and the milk. Cook and stir until mixture comes to a boil and is slightly thickened. Add a small amount of hot mixture to egg, blend well and return to mixture in saucepan. Spoon half of the stuffing into a shallow baking dish. Top with chicken slices, then broccoli. Pour sauce over broccoli. Top with remaining stuffing; then sprinkle with cheese. Bake at 375° for 20 to 25 minutes, or until bubbly. Makes 4 servings.

About 250 calories; 2 g fiber, 9 g fat and 460 mg sodium per serving.

SAVORY CEREAL STUFFING

- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons margarine
- 2 cups Grape-Nuts flakes, slightly crushed
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
- Dash of pepper
- 2 teaspoons grated lemon rind

Saute onion in the margarine until tender but not browned. Combine with cereal and seasonings in bowl; toss to mix thoroughly. Use for Chicken Divan or as stuffing for roast chicken or pork chops. Makes 2 cups.

INCREDIBLE CEREAL QUICHE

This tasty and healthful quiche has 150 fewer calorie per serving than the higher calories classic, Quiche Lorraine.

- 1/4 cup diced onion
- 1 tablespoon margarine
- 1-1/4 cups shredded Gruyere cheese
- 4 ounces cooked chicken, shredded
- 2 cups whole wheat and bran cereal, harvest medley, slightly crushed
- 4 eggs
- 2 cups skim or lowfat milk
- Dash of pepper
- 1/2 cup biscuit mix
- 1 apple, peeled and thinly sliced (optional)

Saute onion in the margarine until tender but not brown. Sprinkle cheese, chicken and onion in greased 10-inch pie plate. Add cereal. Place eggs, milk, pepper and biscuit mix in blender; blend at high speed for 20 seconds. Pour over cereal in pie plate. Arrange apple slices on top. Bake at 400° for 30 to 40 minutes, or until knife inserted near center comes our clean. Let stand about 10 minutes before cutting. Makes 6 servings.

About 310 calories, 3 g fiber, 13 g fat and 450 mg sodium per serving.

CINNAMON APPLE NO-EGG MUFFIN

This muffin has 120 fewer calories and less fat than most muffins. High-fiber ready-to-eat cereal and whole wheat flour give it 2 times more fiber.

- 1 cup whole wheat flour
- 1 tablespoon double-acting baking powder
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1-1/2 cups natural raisin bran or whole wheat and bran cereal, any variety
- 1/3 cup skim milk
- 3 tablespoons honey
- 3 tablespoons oil
- 1 medium apple, peeled, cored and grated

Mix flour, baking powder, cinnamon and salt. Add cereal.

Blend milk, honey and oil. Stir into flour mixture until flour is just moistened. Stir in apple. Spoon batter into paper baking cups set in muffin pans, filling each three-fourths full. Bake at 400° for 25 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 12.

About 110 calories, 2 g fiber, 4 g fat and 120 mg sodium per muffin.

Spring foods combined in special meal

Hearst News Service

Spring is here; it's time for sailing and golf jokes ("Show me a good loser and I'll show you a man who plays golf with his boss") and lamb and asparagus and the first cookout of the year.

Leeks are available right now and they're delicious, so easy to prepare, so wonderful to eat. Good, firm smoked salmon can be found at most fish counters, and with it you can make delicious Belgian endive hors d'oeuvre in less than two minutes. Loin lamb chops grilled with rosemary, asparagus Rachel and, for dessert, homemade strawberry ice cream — a true seasonal welcome.

SALMON IN ENDIVE

3 ounces smoked salmon
3 ounces fresh ricotta
2 ounces whipping cream
1 pinch of white pepper
2 Belgian endive
½ cup chopped nuts (optional)

In food processor with a steel blade, mix smoked salmon, ricotta cheese, whipping cream and sprinkle or two of white pepper. (It's best to crumple up smoked salmon a bit to get it started.) Close top of processor and process for 60 seconds.

Using two teaspoons, pick up partial spoonfuls of salmon mix and spoon into the wide end of individual leaves of Belgian endive. (To separate the leaves, cut off disc-like wide end so leaves come apart easily.) If desired, sprinkle on chopped endive or bit of chopped nuts. Be sure to put filling only at the wide end of endive, leaving pointed end to provide fresh vegetable flavor.

CREAMED LEEKS

8 medium size leeks
Water to cover
2 tablespoons butter
Sauce:
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons all purpose flour
2 cups boiling milk
¼ cup chopped parsley

Buy one or two medium-sized leeks per person. Cut off leaves just where white part begins. Cut off hair-like roots with one cut of knife, slicing about ¼-inch above end of stalk.

Check remaining portion of leek for sand or soil in inner-circles. Push point of paring knife into leek stalk about an inch below soil and make slash back up stalk to end. Run water into gash; sand will wash out. Or, cutting across leek, make ¼-inch discs and place in bottom of colander; run cold water on discs. Either method will remove sand.

Cut leek into small pieces and lay in frying pan. Add about 1 inch cold water and 2 tablespoons butter. Put pan over medium high heat. Bring to boil and allow to cook until water evaporates, about 25 minutes.

While leeks cook, make white sauce by melting 3 tablespoons butter in saucepan over medium heat and sprinkle in 3 tablespoons of all-purpose white flour. Stir briskly with whisk to form roux. Dump in 2 cups boiling milk, remove from heat and stir. Add more milk or cream if mixture becomes too stiff; consistency of a good thick gravy is desired.

Spoon leeks into small plate, cover with sauce, garnish with bit of parsley and serve as appetizer.

ASPARAGUS RACHEL

1 bunch thin asparagus
2 red peppers
4 ounces thin-sliced pancetta
4 ounces grated Parmesan

Remove bottoms from asparagus, leaving only tender spears and stalks. Remove green core from red peppers, slice vertically into quarters. Take out white membranes and all seeds. Cut red pepper into juliennes about 4-inches long and ¼-inch wide.

Preheat the oven to 450 degrees.

To cook pancetta, place large frying pan over medium heat and add 2 tablespoons olive oil. Allow it to heat. Meanwhile, carefully unroll pancetta, which is an Italian bacon. Cut into strips about 5-inches long. Lay carefully in pan, making sure they are flat so whole strip touches bottom of pan. Move strips a little while cooking to prevent sticking. As soon as pancetta begins to cook on bottom, turn over and allow other side to cook. When pancetta is lightly cooked on both sides, remove and place on a paper towel. Continue until all pancetta is cooked.

Using melted fat from pancetta, cook red pepper juliennes about five minutes, stirring to prevent burning or sticking. Add asparagus and cook about three minutes; add cooked pancetta and remove to metal platter or baking dish. Sprinkle with cheese and put in oven four or five minutes to melt cheese.

LAMB CHOPS

Meanwhile, grill or broil two small loin lamb chops for each guest, cooking four to six minutes on each side, depending on preference. When chops first start cooking, sprinkle top of each chop with pinch of fresh rosemary. Sprinkle other side after turning.

Serve with asparagus.

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM

1 egg
⅓ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup cream
1 cup fresh strawberries

This recipe is from Donvier Ice Cream Maker instruction book, but will work in any modern ice cream maker. Beat egg and sugar together until thick and cream-colored. Mash berries and add them with cream and vanilla to egg and sugar mixture. Mix thoroughly and pour into ice cream maker, following manufacturer's instructions.

Vegetable dish features potato, apples

Associated Press

POTATO-APPLE SKILLET

2 small potatoes, peeled and cut into julienne strips
1 medium apple, cored and chopped (1 cup)
1 small stalk celery, bias sliced
¼ cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon cooking oil
Dash salt
Dash pepper
⅓ cup shredded Cheddar cheese

In a medium skillet combine potato, apple, celery, onion, oil, salt and pepper. Cover and cook over low heat for 15 to 20 minutes or until vegetables are tender, stirring occasionally. Sprinkle cheese over potato mixture. Serve at once.

What Southern Means

It means that being the best is more important than being the biggest. That's why Bryan wants to sell the best . . . not just the most. So we take time to find the finest cuts of lean beef and pork. And to very carefully season them just for the Southern taste.

We never take the shortcut of averaging out our taste so it fits the whole country. No wonder Bryan beats the big business bologna in taste tests.

WHAT'S COOKING

Three-year VIPS member SHAREs recipes

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Diane Claiborne, a member of Volunteers in Public Schools, believes in sharing, in more ways than one. As SHARE booklet chairman for the city council PTA, Ms. Claiborne has been involved in this community involvement program for two years.

SHARE is described in its booklet as a "classroom enrichment program coordinated by Volunteers in Public Schools (VIPS) for the Midland Independent School District. Volunteers from the community will SHARE their special talents in a variety of careers, hobbies and travels — thus reinforcing classroom lesson plans."

The booklet "is one of the ways that VIPS has devised to bring together teachers, students and the community," according to its introduction from Ms. Claiborne and Molly Bedrich, VIPS chairman. "Experience, talents and skills from the community-at-large are made available to our MISD students upon request from the classroom teacher."

Ms. Claiborne advised that the best way for interested persons to volunteer for the SHARE program is to contact the volunteer chairmen at their neighborhood schools.

In addition to her duties with SHARE, Ms. Claiborne has been a member of VIPS for three years. "Two years at San Jacinto (Junior High School) — we're at Midland Freshman (High School) now," the schools her daughter, Shauna, has attended. "I did the Student Council at Midland Freshman this year — I was the representative from the PTA to the Student Council."

The following recipes are some of her family's favorites:

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Diane Claiborne

CHEEZITS

½ pound margarine
2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ pound sharp Cheddar cheese, grated
1 cup ground pecans
½ to 1 teaspoon red pepper

Cream margarine and cheese in mixer; add other ingredients. Form log rolls about the size of a nickel. Roll in waxed paper and chill thoroughly. Slice thin and bake on cookie sheet at 350 degrees until barely brown on top.

PRALINE CHEESECAKE

CRUST:
1 cup graham cracker crumbs to 3 tablespoons sugar and 3 tablespoons butter. Press in pan and bake.

FILLING:
3 packages (8 ounces each) cream cheese
1¼ cups dark brown sugar
2 tablespoons flour
3 eggs
1½ teaspoons vanilla
½ cup chopped pecans

Blend cream cheese, sugar and flour. Add eggs one at a time. Mix well. Add vanilla. Pour over crust. Sprinkle pecans on top. Bake 40-45 minutes at 300 degrees. Turn off oven, open door and allow to cool in oven.

HAM SANDWICHES

Shaved ham
Thinly sliced Swiss cheese

Spread:
Mix together:
1 stick butter
1 teaspoon poppy seeds
2 teaspoons chives
2 teaspoons mustard

Spread generously on onion buns. Sandwich ham between slices of cheese on bun. Wrap in foil (can be frozen). To serve, heat for 15 minutes at 350 degrees.

Quiz rates 'kitchen aptitude'

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

How do you rate as a cook? Try this quick test to rate your kitchen aptitude.

■ Do you try new foods? Expand your food knowledge by buying one new item during each shopping trip. For instance, next time you're shopping, pick up some arugula or jicama to use in a salad.

■ Do you experiment with new recipes and food combinations? Expertise comes from experimenting. After you master a fluffy omelet, create a new filling.

■ Do you taste as you cook? Tasting is the best way to assure balanced seasoning. As a sauce, stew or casserole cooks, sample it. If it needs a flavor boost, add ⅛ to ¼ teaspoon of dried herb or spice, then give the seasoning a chance to simmer and release its essence. Taste again, adding more seasoning as needed.

■ Do you test for doneness and other temperature tests? Know the accuracy of your range and oven temperatures and check food before the end of the cooking time given in your recipe. Many recipes give a doneness test by describing the final color or texture. Use thermometers for cooking meats and candies.

■ Do you serve foods attractively? Even your family's least favorite foods will get more respect if they look good.

Scoring: The more "yes" answers the better! Your "no" answers show where to start your effort toward improvement.

Imported gourmet-style produce causes consumer questions

Associated Press

The influx of imported and gourmet-style fruits and vegetables into the American market is exciting. But very few of us know what to do with an Arugula.

Better Homes and Gardens Low Calorie Recipes magazine offers this handy guide to storage and serving suggestions for some of the newest offerings.

■ Daikon: Wash, peel and slice or chop. Use like radish in stir-fries, salads or relish trays. Store, wrapped in plastic wrap, in refrigerator one to two weeks.

■ Bok choy: Wash; chop or slice stems and leaves. Store, unwashed, in plastic bag in refrigerator a few days. Add to stir-fries.

■ Chinese cabbage: Store, wrapped in plastic, in refrigerator up to four days. Use as for round-head cabbage.

■ Anaheim chili peppers: A mildly hot pepper. Store in a paper bag in refrigerator one week. Wear rubber gloves to seed and chop.

■ Raddichio: Use in salads and as a garnish. Store in crisper in refrigerator up to one week.

■ Jicama: Peel and slice or chop for salads or relish tray. Store, unwrapped, in refrigerator several days; wash just before using. Strong flavored, so use sparingly in salads.

■ Enoki mushrooms: Trim bottom of stems before using. Eat raw or cook 1 to 2 minutes. Use in salads, soups, stir-fries or sandwiches. Store in refrigerator, loosely wrapped, up to a few days.

■ Chinese long beans: To use, trim ends and cut into 1- to 2-inch lengths. Steam for two minutes or until beans are crisp-tender; serve hot or cold. Store in the refrigerator for up to five days.

■ Leeks: Wash and remove tough outer leaves and all but 2 to 3 inches of tops. Cut off roots. Store in plastic bag in refrigerator up to two weeks.

■ Shiitake mushrooms: Grill or steam and serve whole or sliced. Store, covered with damp cheesecloth in refrigerator up to one week.

■ Cilantro: Strong flavored, so use sparingly. To store, stand in water; cover leaves with plastic wrap. Keep in refrigerator up to two weeks.

■ Sorrel: Store in plastic bag in crisper in refrigerator several days. To use, remove stems and wash. Use in salads or soups.

■ Passion fruit: Pulp can be pink, purple or yellow-green. Strain seeds; use juice to flavor hot tea or mix with other fruit juices. Halve fruit and eat from the shell, including seeds. Fruit is ripe when skin is wrinkled but fruit is still firm. Refrigerate ripe fruit.

■ Casaba melon: Tastes similar to honeydew. When ripe, the skin is golden yellow.

■ Guava: Skin color ranges from green to yellow; flesh can be white, pink, red or yellow. Buy firm fruit that is as yellow as possible. Fruit is ripe when it has a strong floral fragrance. Ripen at room temperature; store in refrigerator up to two weeks. Eat out of hand or slice for fruit salad.

■ Santa Claus melon: A sweet melon with flesh similar to honeydew melon.

TRY A LITTLE TENDERNESS.

Years ago, people used 100% natural hickory to smoke sausage. It made the best tasting sausage back then, and that's why Bryan still uses only 100% natural hickory to make Smoky Hollow Sausage today.

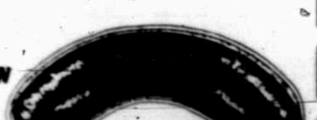

Bryan still makes Smoky Hollow the old-fashioned way, slow smoking it over 100% natural hickory to get the rich, full flavor that people in the South truly love. But what makes Bryan Smoky Hollow taste even better is the way it comes out...fork tender time after time, even when you grill it.

Not everyone takes the time to make their sausage that way anymore. But one taste of Smoky Hollow, and we think you'll agree it's worth it.

Bryan®
The flavor of the South.

THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: It is time to call in some of those IOUs and use them to lighten the heavy load you have been carrying. Take care of a health or weight problem before it becomes more serious. You cannot afford to ignore a professional's advice. Make your mate and children's goals your own goals and everyone will benefit. Welcome an opportunity to travel.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Actors Thom Bray and Perry King, actress Jill Clayburgh, country music star Willie Nelson, comedienne Eve Arden, "Hour Magazine" host Gary Collins, Queen Mother Juliana of the Netherlands, King Carl Gustav XVI of Sweden.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The emphasis is on savoring small pleasures. You get a boost in the pocketbook when you give up on committee decisions and make your own choices. Stay in step with your family.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Try to find projects you can develop on your own. Financing will become available when you need it. Accept an invitation to meet someone you have long admired. New alliances are favored.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Both business and romance will profit from your being more adventurous, less inhibited. You feel more confident about expressing your views. A special talent could bring in extra income. Seek advice from experts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Bring yourself up to date on recent business developments. Things could be moving in your favor now. Assess all aspects of a financial situation before seeking a solution. Tensions fade at work.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You now receive the active support of someone who has opposed your efforts in the past. Your co-workers count on you to be a steadying influence. Do not let them down.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be more affectionate and understanding with mate. Throw yourself wholeheartedly into an important work project. The progress you make this week could bring you new recognition. Higher-ups are impressed by your zeal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Yesterday's advantageous trends continue. A secret arrangement could lead to a wonderful moneymaking opportunity. An ongoing personal relationship requires "kid glove" treatment. Avoid making too many demands or promises.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are likely to be under close scrutiny. Keep everything you do strictly aboveboard. A sudden change in your work schedule gives you more time for pet projects. Do not neglect your obligations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An unexpected development could put money in your bank account if you move quickly. Stress could prompt you to overreact to job-related gossip. Disregard a rumor and smile. The future looks bright.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take off those rose-colored glasses and evaluate your own workload before agreeing to take on someone else's duties. You need to protect your contacts and resources. Mate is your strongest ally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Flattery is an exercise in futility when dealing with sharp people. Hard work and a willingness to put in overtime are what impress higher-ups. Romance requires a gentle approach. Be tender.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The social whirl could take on new meaning. Observe someone's body language if uncertain of what is going on. A subtle change in a relationship will both surprise and please you. Go slow.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1	1 ♠	2	Pass
2	Pass	4	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

Many players have a natural tendency to relax when a contract seems in the bag. That is a bad habit—you never know what dangers lurk in the shoals of distribution.

There are players who would pass with the South hand, which is a very marginal opening bid. However, that would be unlikely to affect the final contract, which seemed sound enough under normal circumstances.

West started with three rounds of spades, declarer ruffing the last of these. It might appear that declarer has the rest of the tricks, and that would indeed be the case if both red suits were to break 3-2, as is normal. But what if they split 4-1? See what happens if you exercise care in handling the suits.

Declarer started off by leading the ten of diamonds to the queen, then returned to hand with the queen of trumps. Next he led the nine of diamonds and made the normal play of the king from dummy. East saw there was no point in ruffing and, rather than surrender trump control, he pitched a club.

Now declarer's careful handling of his assets produced a huge dividend. He crossed back to hand with the king of trumps and finessed the eight of diamonds. East was helpless. He could ruff and shift to a club. But declarer would rise with the ace, enter dummy with the ace of trumps while pulling East's last heart in the process, and take two discards on the good diamonds. Declarer would thereby limit his losers to two spades and a trump, and his delicate handling of his entries plus the unblocking plays in diamonds reaped a rich harvest.

Maureen Reagan OKs 'boss'

M. Reagan

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Maureen Reagan, daughter of President Ronald Reagan and actress Jane Wyman, says she's finally accomplished enough to be referred to as "boss" instead of "kid."

Her accomplishments include being co-chair of the Republican National Committee and the U.S. representative to the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women.

"Everybody used to pat me on the head and said, 'OK, kid.' Now they say, 'OK, boss, what do you want me to do,'" she told a group of commodity market reporters on Tuesday after a speech on the status of women.

But being the daughter of famous parents still draws questions about them, and the first question she was asked after the speech Tuesday was about her mother, star of "Falcon Crest."

She gave a brief update on the TV series and then, in response to another question, said, "Yes, I'll be having dinner at the White House tonight."

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter told a group of youngsters that the prospects are slowly improving for a woman to be elected president.

Attitudes may have changed enough for a woman to be elected by the time his 19-year-old daughter, Amy, is old enough to run, Carter told the 70 11- and 12-year-olds who traveled to his hometown from central Georgia.

A woman "could be a good president, as good as any man," Carter told the gifted students Monday at the First United Methodist Church of Plains.

I. Perlman

NEW YORK (AP) — Violinist Itzhak Perlman decked out in a blond wig, dress and matching scarf for a birthday skit honoring Dorothy DeLay, the 70-year-old violin instructor who taught him and many other concert performers.

Miss DeLay watched Perlman along with some of her other well-known students, including Shlomo Mintz, Cho-Liang Lin, Mi Dori and Paul Rosenthal.

"I think it feels good to have me around, like a rabbit's foot, but they do it all themselves. As everybody does," she said.

In Monday night's spoof, Perlman tutored a series of mediocre pupils using Miss DeLay's mannerisms and her pet phrases "sugar plum" and "sweetie."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Nona Hendryx, who stood in the shadow of Patti LaBelle in the 1960s and 1970s, is treading on Tina Turner's turf with a seething, rhythm-and-blues-tinged album.

"I'm not trying to copy Tina or steal anything from her," she said. "I've been in this musical area for years and years, long before Tina became a solo star."

When the trend-setting rock-R&B group LaBelle folded in 1977, Miss LaBelle went on to wide appeal. But for Miss Hendryx, the group's primary composer, it was like "the end of a marriage, or being hit by a bomb," she said.

Now she's pushing her first EMI Records album, "Female Trouble."

She blamed a lack of support by her former record label, RCA Records, and her style for not getting radio play despite raves from some critics who call her a minor-league Tina Turner.

"It's been too black for pop radio and too white for black radio," she said recently. But, she added, "the radio formats, both pop and black, have been stretching in the past year."

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Best-selling author Stephen King told a horror story to a Maine legislative panel, describing how millions of dollars in film production money is slipping through the state's grasp.

Despite the Bangor-based novelist's preference to have movies adapted from his work shot in his home state, such films as "Stand By Me" and "Cujo" ended up being made as far away as Oregon and California, he said.

Speaking on behalf of a bill that would set up a commission to attract movie makers to Maine, King said Tuesday that when he asked a "Cujo" producer why the movie hadn't been shot in Maine, the response was, "Nobody asked us."

LONDON (AP) — Britain's tabloid newspapers are buzzing with speculation about a supposed lack of bliss in the marriage of Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

But the British domestic news agency Press Association quoted friends of the couple as saying the marriage is thriving and happy. And unidentified members of the royal household were quoted Tuesday as saying the speculation appears to be part of a newspaper circulation war.

According to the tabloids, Charles is "sad and lonely" and "drifting away from his Diana." Diana feels "trapped." The couple "now spend more time apart than together."

Charles, 38, currently is vacationing in Italy, while Diana, 25, is in London with their two children. They were married July 29, 1981.

News of the royals sells newspapers in Britain and the fight for circulation is fierce among the 12 national-circulation morning dailies, 10 national-circulation Sunday weekly papers and three London evening papers.

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Former Baltimore Bullets forward Gus Johnson died Tuesday night of brain cancer. He was 48.

Johnson, who played for the Bullets from 1963 until 1972, broke backboards with his dunks and wore a gold star on a front tooth.

He was a college player from the University of Idaho. He finished his NBA career at Phoenix in 1973. He also played that season with Indiana in the American Basketball Association.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mia Farrow, already the mother of eight children, and Woody Allen are expecting their first baby, the Daily News reported today.

The 45-year-old actress, and Allen, 51, who have never married, began their professional association in 1982 when Ms. Farrow made "A Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy" with the actor-director-writer.

The baby will be Ms. Farrow's ninth child and her first with Allen, columnist Liz Smith wrote in today's editions.

The actress already had twins sons, Matthew and Sacha, 17, and another son, Fletcher, 11, with conductor-composer Andre Previn during their marriage.

She subsequently adopted two Vietnamese children, Lark Song, 13, and Summer Song, 12, and two Korean children, Soon-Yi, 15, and Misha, 8. In 1985, she adopted a boy, Dillon, who is now 2.

Ms. Farrow and Allen currently are working together at the Kaufman-Astoria Studios on another film, which is not yet titled. They have made six movies together. Most recently the actress appeared in Allen's "Radio Days" and "Hannah and Her Sisters."

DEAR ABBY

Poisons from 'harmless' sources

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just finished your column on childhood poisoning. It was very good, but you missed one very important poison that parents don't recognize as such.

When my son was a toddler, he almost died of nicotine poisoning. He had eaten several cigarette butts from an ashtry. I called the poison control center immediately, and they didn't know what to do! As it turned out, ingesting cigarette butts can lead to shock, and then respiratory failure.

Please, please, tell parents not to leave ashtrays or cigarettes where children can get at them. We are lucky that our son is still alive, but we still question whether he suffered brain damage from this incident. I hope this will prevent others from going through what we did. — BARBARA WEISMANN, BUZZARDS BAY, MASS.

DEAR BARBARA: Thank you for your timely letter and some potentially life-saving information for parents who smoke — or entertain smokers. Read on for another sleeper:

DEAR ABBY: As a nurse who worked in an intensive care unit with poison victims, thank you for listing household items that are poisonous. May I add another to your list that is extremely dangerous and appears harmless?

Common cooking vanilla extract. It contains 30 percent alcohol, which is far more alcohol than liquor! How often we, as parents, comment that vanilla makes our foods taste better. How tempting it might be to a toddler. If a child were to drink a 2-ounce bottle of vanilla extract, it could cause irreparable damage — if not death. — TRACY MORSTAD, MINNESOTA READER

DEAR ABBY: My husband is retired and I hate it. He's home all the time so he brings in the mail, opens all of it and reads it — including any and all mail addressed to me — even letters marked "personal."

Yesterday I received a letter from our granddaughter. She's a waitress, newlywed and has a baby. She said she needs $500 to pay some bills. My husband hit the roof and forbid me to send her anything. Abby, I personally own some rental property and we've lived rent-free in a family home that I inherited. I have a nice savings account and have often helped members of my family in emergencies without my husband's knowledge, and I intend to do so as long as I live! (I sent our granddaughter the $500.)

He insists that anything that concerns me is his business and there is no need for privacy when it comes to mail. Abby, I wouldn't think of opening a letter addressed to him. Does he have a right to open my mail? And what should I do about it? — A WIFE WHO HATES RETIREMENT

DEAR WIFE: He has no right to open your mail — even Uncle Sam says so. If he continues to do so, get a post office box to ensure privacy.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "PARTICULAR" IN GREENSBORO, N.C: It's OK to be fussy, but the girl who thinks no man is good enough for her could be right. (She could also be left.)

(For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send a check or mwney order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Italian flavor in cheese twists

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

ITALIAN CHEESE TWISTS
¼ cup margarine or butter, softened
¼ teaspoon each basil, oregano and marjoram, crushed
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
16-ounce loaf frozen bread dough, thawed
¾ cup shredded mozzarella cheese (3 ounces)
1 slightly beaten egg
1 tablespoon water
2 tablespoons sesame seed

In a small bowl combine margarine, basil, oregano, marjoram and garlic powder. Set aside. On a lightly floured surface roll bread into a 12-inch square. Spread margarine mixture evenly over dough. Sprinkle with cheese. Fold dough into thirds. With a sharp knife, cut dough crosswise into 24 strips, ½-inch each. Twist each strip twice and pinch ends to seal. Place about 2 inches apart on a greased baking sheet. Cover; let rise in a warm place until almost double (about 30 minutes). Combine egg and water; brush over each twist. Sprinkle with sesame seed. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes or until golden. Makes 24 twists.

Sliced tropical fruits make nutritious salad

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

The tropics are as close as your supermarket's produce counter. At one time, papaya, mangoes and kiwi fruits were oddities; now we can enjoy their refreshing flavors often.

Tropical fruits are a good nutrition buy. Papaya and mango are rich in vitamins A and C, and kiwis are a good source of vitamin C.

TROPICAL FRUIT PLATE
2 bananas
Leaf lettuce
1 small fresh pineapple, peeled, sliced and cut into chunks (2 cups)
½ of a papaya, peeled, seeded and sliced, or 1 mango, peeled, pitted and sliced
1 kiwi, peeled and sliced
½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
3 tablespoons flaked coconut
3 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon ground ginger

Peel bananas; slice diagonally. Line a platter or 4 salad plates with lettuce. Arrange bananas, pineapple, papaya or mango, and kiwi fruit on top. For dressing, in a small bowl stir together mayonnaise, coconut, milk and ginger. Serve fruit immediately; pass dressing. Makes 4 servings.

'Genuine Spring Lamb' available in supermarket

By MERLE ELLIS

Spring came a little late this year. It was only a couple of weeks ago when we got the first lamb in the market, marked in official purple ink "Genuine Spring Lamb." That usually happens the first week of March. According to USDA regulations, lambs slaughtered between March 1 and October 1 qualify for the distinguished "Genuine Spring Lamb" seal to be stamped on the side of the carcass.

Actually, the term "Spring Lamb" is about as archaic in this country as the term "Spring Chicken." We have wonderful tender lamb available in American markets all year long.

Lamb consumption in this country has always lagged behind beef, pork, and chicken for a number of reasons. Among them, I believe, are the range wars of the early 1800s. I truly believe that some folks are convinced that they "don't like lamb" because their cattle-raising great grandparents on the Western range lands didn't. Why? "Because those critters ate the grass too short. They fouled the water holes. They even smell bad, like dirty socks. That's why!" Tradition is a powerful force in determining the food we eat and enjoy and lamb doesn't do too well in the tradition of much of America. It's too bad. Lamb is marvelous meat.

One of the best things American lamb has going for it is also one of its problems when it comes to a leg of lamb — size! Lamb in this country is larger than it is in other parts of the world. It has been bred to have a better "yield," a better ratio of edible meat to bone and fat. That makes a beautiful meaty leg, but a big one.

A 7- or 8-pound leg of lamb is a bit much for most families and a lot of people pass up even "Genuine Spring Lamb" because they don't want to eat leftovers for a week.

You don't have to! There are ways with a good big leg of lamb that will make several great meals even for a small family without a lot of leftovers.

Select the largest leg of leg available and ask the butcher to bone it for you, or you can do the job yourself. Then separate the individual muscles. Use your fingers to feel for the seams that separate them and the tip of your knife to cut them apart. There are four distinct muscles, the top leg (the most tender), the sirloin tip (also very tender), the bottom and "eye" (can be separated or left as one) and the shank group (the least tender, but in young lamb still very tender).

The top and tip muscles are perfect for lamb cutlets or a stir-fry dish. The bottom, eye and shank muscles make a great rolled roast, perfect for a small family, great on the rotisserie. Or simply marinate the piece in a vinegar and oil dressing for an hour or so and toss it on the barbecue grill for "butterflied leg of lamb."

This recipe is a perfect way to use the top and tip muscle from a leg of lamb. I got it from another butcher, Stuart McGrath, an Englishman who sells packing house equipment all over the world. He got it when he was cutting meat in the Pacific Northwest where hazelnuts (filberts) are abundant.

HAZELNUT LAMB CUTLETS

2 pounds boneless lamb cutlets
½ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup milk
1 egg
½ cup hazelnuts, finely crushed •
½ cup Parmesan cheese
¼ cup Rye Crisp crumbs
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon olive oil

Trim all the fat and any gristle from the lamb and cut into slices about ½-inch thick. Pound each cutlet to expand its diameter and reduce its thickness to about ¼ inch.

Dust the cutlets with seasoned flour, salt, and pepper and dip each in a wash made by whipping the milk and egg together.

Mix the hazelnuts, Parmesan cheese and Rye Crisp crumbs together and coat both sides of each cutlet, pressing the nut mixture well into the meat.

Saute the cutlets in butter and olive oil over moderately high heat for only a couple of minutes on each side until nicely browned. Serve immediately. Serves 4.

• Stuart recommends toasting the hazelnuts in a 200-degree oven for 20 minutes before crushing them.

Cheesecake roll designed so filling, cake bake together

Associated Press

This recipe is quick and easy because the filling is baked right on the cake!

SKIP-A-STEP CHEESECAKE ROLL

8-ounce container soft-style cream cheese
⅓ cup sugar
1 egg
1 tablespoon milk
1½ teaspoons finely shredded orange peel
½ cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
4 egg yolks
½ teaspoon vanilla
⅓ cup sugar
1 envelope (1 ounce) premelted unsweetened chocolate product
4 egg whites
½ cup sugar
Powdered sugar

Grease a 15x10x1-inch baking pan. Line with waxed paper; grease paper.

Combine cream cheese and ⅓ cup sugar; mix well. Add egg, milk and orange peel; beat until smooth. Spread in prepared pan; set aside. Stir together flour, baking powder and salt; set aside.

In a small mixer bowl beat egg yolks and vanilla with electric mixer on medium speed about 5 minutes or until thick and lemon colored.

Gradually add ⅓ cup sugar, beating until sugar dissolves. Stir in chocolate product until well combined. Thoroughly wash beaters.

In a large mixer bowl beat egg whites on medium speed until soft peaks form (tips curl). Gradually add ½ cup sugar, beating on high speed until stiff peaks form (tips stand straight). Fold yolk mixture into egg whites. Sprinkle flour mixture evenly over egg mixture; fold in just until blended. Spread batter evenly over cheese mixture in pan.

Bake in 375-degree oven about 15 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched. Immediately loosen cake from sides of pan and turn out onto a towel sprinkled with powdered sugar. Carefully peel off paper. Starting with narrow end, roll up cake. Cool. Drizzle chocolate glaze over roll. Makes 10 servings.

Chocolate Glaze: Combine 1 envelope premelted unsweetened chocolate product and 2 tablespoons margarine or butter, melted. Stir in 1 cup sifted powdered sugar and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Add 1 to 2 tablespoons boiling water to make a drizzling consistency.

Microwave meal makes Mother's Day more memorable

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

A traditional gift on Mother's Day is a big box of chocolates wrapped in shiny paper with a pretty bow. It sure looks nice, but most moms I know are involved in the great national pastime of trying to decrease (or at least maintain) their weight.

Unless your mother is a trim size 8 who can afford to down chocolates with wild abandon, a more thoughtful treat might be a delicious dinner that's not too high in calories. Besides, isn't it about time you started cooking for Mom? Just think of all the meals she's cooked for you over the years.

You see? I can lay on the guilt almost as well as she can. (Just kidding, Mom!)

An ideal Mother's Day dinner should be something that's tasty, not too difficult to prepare and won't keep you long in the kitchen, so you'll have more time to spend with the woman of the hour.

Today's quick-cooking microwave recipes make six healthy servings — enough to go around in case assorted siblings arrive to honor the family matriarch.

For this menu, you might want to make the Cheddar Corn Bread in advance, then just reheat in the microwave a few minutes before serving time. The carrots could be cooked until crisp-tender, then set aside while the fish cooks. When fish is done, complete the carrot recipe, adding water, cornstarch and almonds.

CAMBRIDGE COD FILLETS
¼ cup butter or margarine
2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
¼ cup diced onion
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, or lemon pepper
1 cup milk or half-and-half
2 pounds frozen cod fillets, thawed
Lemon wedges and parsley sprigs, for garnish

In 2-quart oblong glass baking dish combine butter, mushrooms and onions. Microwave, uncovered, on MEDIUM-HIGH setting about 3 minutes, stirring after 1½ minutes, until onion is just tender. Stir in flour, lemon peel, parsley flakes, salt and pepper, then blend in milk or half-and-half.

Cover loosely with plastic wrap and microwave 5 to 7 minutes on MEDIUM-HIGH setting, or until mixture bubbles, stirring every 3 minutes. Add thawed fish fillets, placing thicker portions toward outside of dish. Spoon sauce over fish.

Replace plastic wrap and microwave on HIGH setting 9 to 11 minutes, or until fish flakes easily with fork. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving. Garnish with lemon wedges and parsley sprigs.

GLAZED CARROTS WITH ALMONDS
6 to 8 medium carrots
¼ cup honey
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup water
2 teaspoons cornstarch
¼ cup slivered almonds

Scrub carrots and cut in ½-inch diagonal slices. Place in 1½-quart glass casserole; drizzle with honey and dot with butter. Microwave on HIGH, covered, 7 to 9 minutes, or until carrots are crisp-tender.

In small bowl blend together water and cornstarch until smooth. Stir into carrot mixture, then sprinkle with slivered almonds. Cover and microwave 4 to 5 minutes longer, or until carrots are tender. Let stand, covered, 3 minutes before serving.

Serves 6.

CHEDDAR CORN BREAD
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup yellow cornmeal
1 tablespoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup butter or margarine, softened
⅔ cup milk
1 egg
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese
Paprika

Combine flour, cornmeal, baking powder and salt. Toss with fork to blend, then cut in butter.

In small separate bowl beat together milk and egg; add to dry ingredients and mix well. Stir in shredded cheese.

Turn mixture into lightly oiled 9-inch-round glass baking dish. Sprinkle top lightly with paprika. Microwave on HIGH 4 to 6 minutes, rotating ¼ turn after 2½ minutes. Let stand 5 minutes before serving.

Serves 6.

Copley News Service

May Day is one of our oldest holidays, dating back to ancient Roman times when the goddess Flora was honored with a festival at the beginning of the month. Romans feared that if this celebration did not take place, the goddess would be insulted and would not make spring flowers bloom.

The custom of celebrating the beginning of May was carried into Europe by the Romans. Here, people believed that on Walpurgis Night — the night before May Day — spirits and ghosts were especially active. So they built fires and made loud noises to scare the spirits away.

The following morning, however, was all sunshine and merriment. A Maypole was decorated with flowers and ribbons and erected in the town square. Children still love to parade around the Maypole, weaving the multicolored ribbons around the pole in the traditional dance.

During the 19th century the custom of giving May baskets became popular. These were small baskets, often made of colored paper, which were filled with newly gathered flowers (and perhaps a poem), and delivered to family, friends or sweethearts.

A May basket is even sweeter when a few candies or cookies are included. Following are several recipes for wholesome goodies that can be wrapped in bright cellophane or foil and tucked in among the flowers. Kids especially love the Peanut Butter Banana Bites, healthful cookies that combine two of their favorite foods.

HONEY-PECAN DIVINITY
¼ cup water
1 teaspoon white vinegar
1 egg white
½ cup chopped pecans
½ teaspoon vanilla
30 pecan halves

Combine honey, water and vinegar in small saucepan. Cook over moderate heat stirring frequently, until mixture forms firm ball when dropped into cold water (or reaches 242 to 248 degrees on candy thermometer).

While mixture cooks, beat egg white until stiff but not dry. When honey mixture is of proper consistency, pour slowly into beaten egg white, beating constantly, until creamy, light and firm. Stir in chopped pecans and vanilla.

Drop by teaspoonfuls onto wax paper. When partly cooled, press pecan half into center of each piece.

Makes about 30.

PEANUT BUTTER BANANA BITES
⅓ cup butter or margarine, at room temperature
⅓ cup creamy-style peanut butter
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
1 cup mashed ripe banana (3 medium)
½ teaspoon vanilla
1¼ cups unsifted whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Combine butter, peanut butter and sugar in large mixing bowl; cream together until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, 1 at a time, then blend in mashed banana and vanilla.

Combine remaining ingredients and add, a little at a time, to banana mixture, blending well. Drop by rounded teaspoons onto lightly greased baking sheets.

Bake in preheated oven 10 to 12 minutes, or until lightly browned. Cool on wire racks.

Makes about 3 dozen cookies.

WHOLE WHEAT ALMOND DATE COOKIES
1 cup butter or margarine, at room temperature
¾ cup brown sugar
¼ cup honey
1 egg, lightly beaten
¼ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups unbleached white flour
1 cup whole wheat flour
½ cup finely chopped almonds
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped dates

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Beat together butter, brown sugar and honey several minutes, until light and fluffy. Blend in egg, milk and vanilla.

Combine all remaining ingredients except dates and add gradually to beaten mixture, blending thoroughly. Stir in chopped dates.

Roll out on lightly floured surface to a little more ¼-inch thickness. Cut with cookie cutters to desired shapes. Arrange on ungreased baking sheets.

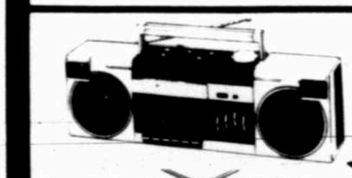

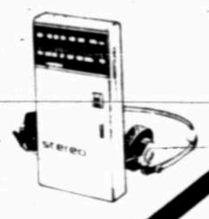

Bake in preheated oven 12 to 15 minutes, until lightly browned. Let cool on wire racks.

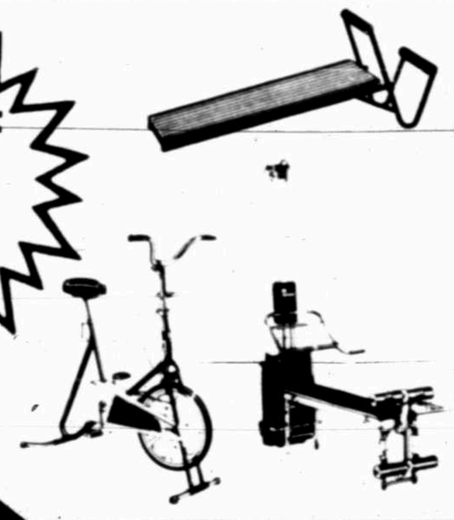

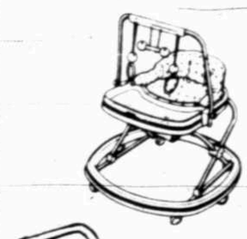

Makes 3 to 4 dozen.

Midlander has gun, will travel to Russia

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Paul Davis, III, not only has been invited to Russia, but has been urged to bring his gun.

Proof of the sincerity of Gorbachev's new "openness" policy?

Not quite. The 25-year-old Midlander is a member of the the four-man U.S. International Shooting team, which has been invited to compete in the trap shoot event in Moscow, starting May 15, and he will be in Russia for two weeks.

"We'll stay in the Olympic Village, the one used for the Games the U.S. did not attend," says Davis, a student at Texas Tech.

Three of the team members are 25 years old or younger.

"We will shoot four days, 200 targets, and since trap and skeet shooting can't be held simultaneously, because the facilities overlap, we'll be doing things such as going to the circus and ballet in between," Davis said.

DAVIS, a former Midland High football player, will be competing in trap, an event in which the U.S. won one gold and one bronze in the last Olympics.

"The U.S. is pretty strong in shooting," says Davis. "We will be competing against all the eastern block countries and most of the rest of Europe. The Italians and Czechs are the teams to beat."

The young Midlander feels good about his and the team's chances to do well. "On spring break, I practiced at Fort Benning in Georgia and shot 380 out of 400, a 95 average, which is a competitive score. Realistically, that wouldn't win, but it would be in the running. To win, I'll have to do a little better than I've been shooting."

As an eight-to-10 year old, Davis was on the All-American team, but he shot in competition only three years under the age of 18. The last year he shot competitively was at the age of 17 and he led the nation's juniors.

After Midland High, Davis attended Trinity University in San Antonio and played football for three years, but quit college after his junior year to join the Army. That's where his interest in shooting was rekindled. He was member of the U.S. Marksmanship team for three years.

Last year, he qualified for the World Cup matches at the U.S. Shooting Championships in Los Angeles.

THE TRIP to Russia means Davis is doing some cramming for finals at Texas Tech, where he is working toward a degree in business. He received special permission to take the exams early.

Davis points out that there are two styles of trap shooting, American and International. "In the American style, you have a trap house with one bird and the bird goes away from you 15 feet high and 25 feet away from the trap."

Davis goes on, "In International, the trap angle can be 50 degrees and the height can vary between one meter and 3 1/2 meters at a 10-meter spot away from the trap. So at 40 meters it can be pretty high."

During the actual competition, Davis will be on a squad with five other people. "Each takes his turn before moving to the next spot. That's another area of difference in the American and International rules. You have 15 traps in front of you, three at five different places. You shoot one of three birds. You know where the bird is coming from, but not which one. And the speed is a whole lot different. In American style, the target goes 55 yards before hitting the ground. In International the targets go anywhere from 85 to 90 meters and you get two shots at it.

"Scores are lower in International trap. A 95 is competitive. In American, if you miss any, you may as well sit down."

Sitting down may be less embarrassing than International trap shooting, where they honk a horn every time you miss. "It's a pretty difficult mental game.

You shoot a round at 8:30 and then wait two hours. It takes all day to shoot 100 targets so you've got to stay on top of if for a long time."

Paul Davis III
headed for Moscow

"In American trap, you can shoot 100 bullets in 30 or 40 minutes."

Joe Watters had already seen his shutout ruined on an unearned run, he wasn't about to let a couple of errors take away his shot at a complete game win.

So Midland Lee's senior righthander reached back and found a little extra in the sixth inning Tuesday. The result was a pair of Watters strike outs stranding three San Angelo baserunners and preserving a 6-2 Rebel win in their final home game of the season.

Watters now 3-4 for the season, finished up after allowing just five hits and a walk while striking out seven. And he had to get out of big jam in the sixth when San Angelo had the bases jammed with just one out and the Rebs leading 4-2.

"I wanted this game all to myself. I didn't want to go out with a loss in my last time out," Watters said. "I wanted the shutout real bad, but then I just wanted to get the win."

BUT SOME poor Lee fielding and a loss of concentration nearly had Watters yanked in the sixth.

After yielding a leadoff home run to the Bobcats Chris Lowry to close the Rebel margin to 4-2, Watters allowed a single to Marty Daniel. One out later, infielders Lance McClure and Danny Guerra booted consecutive grounders to load the bases. That's when Lee coach Ernie Johnson trotted to the mound.

"I've watched Joe pitch for a long time, and he gets to rushing and losing his mechanics in situations like that," Johnson said. "He needs to concentrate on mechanics to keep his control and keep the ball down. So I just told him to go slow and get that good leg lift."

With that advice, Watters was back on track and bearing down a little more.

"I just reared back and threw. My curve ball was breaking well all day, and thank goodness those last two batters couldn't hit the curve very well," Watters said.

"Joe threw probably about as good as he can throw. He was up to his capacity and that's all you can ask out of a player," Johnson said. "With the bases loaded there he really humped up and pitched well."

It was a piece of clutch pitching Lee has seen very little of in a season turned sour for Johnson and the Rebels. Lee has had few clutch performances, in the field, at bat or on the mound as Tuesday's win upped the Rebels' record to 5-6, 9-14. Lee can even its district mark when it travels to Abilene on Saturday.

LEE GOT a little bit of each against the Bobcats, as the Rebs touched starter Jeff Childress, 1-3, for two runs in each of the first two innings. Left fielder Kemp Laidly opened things up in the first with a bloop single to right field and Paul Bacon doubled him to third.

Jason Logi bounced into a fielder's choice scoring one run and Danny Jordan doubled to the left field fence for a 2-0 lead. In the second inning, Dudley Jordan and Robin Pyle contributed RBI for a 4-0 lead.

And with Watters mowing the Bobcats down, he retired nine in a row at one point, and coming through with the big pitches in the clutch, it was more than enough.

This was a real good win for us, the kids needed it," Johnson said after breaking a 9-game Rebel losing streak. "Now we can go to Abilene and have a good chance of winning on Saturday."

Diablos beat Angels, 11-10, in marathon

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — A marathon five-hour game in El Paso left the Diablos with an 11-10 victory over the Midland Angels in Texas League Baseball play.

In El Paso, a crowd of more than 4,000 dwindled to 30 by the end of the 13th inning. Diablo catcher Garrett Nago ripped a one-out single in the bottom of the 13th inning, scoring Lavell Freeman to end the five hour, two minute game.

Nago's hit, his third of the game, came off Midland's John Hotchkiss, who began the game as the Angels second baseman. Midland used six pitchers, El Paso five.

Bryan Duquette pitched a scoreless 13th to earn his first win of the season.

El Paso, which improved its Western Division-leading record to 13-9, led 8-0 after four innings.

The Wichita Pilots overcame the San Antonio Dodgers 4-3 in Wichita. A two-out infield single by Bill Wrona scored Tom Brassil to break a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning.

Pilots starter Eric Bauer went seven innings to even his record at 1-1.

Cowboys beef up front lines

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys may have to hire a calorie counter after literally beefing up their lines of scrimmage in the NFL draft.

Noseguard Danny Noonan of Nebraska, the first round pick, weighs 290 pounds and third round selection Jeff Zimmerman, an offensive lineman from Florida, tips the scales at 310 pounds.

"They'll be good players if they keep can their weight down," said Player Personnel Director Gil Brandt.

Zimmerman said "All people want to talk about is my weight. I guess I can put an end to it by coming to camp under 300 pounds."

Brandt said Zimmerman was "like those big linemen you see with the Washington Redskins and Los Angeles Rams."

Zimmerman played alongside Crawford Ker, who started for the Cowboys at guard last year.

He was on a diet for two months to bring his weight down to 310 after soaring to near 350 pounds on his mother's lasagna.

The Cowboys shored up their aging defense by picking massive Noonan and Baylor ball-hawking cornerback Ron Francis, a second round pick.

Noonan spends six days a week pumping iron in the weight room.

"I'm not a finesse player," Noonan said.

Noonan is targeted to replace Dutton, who also is from Nebraska.

"I think very definitely Noonan could be an impact player for us," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He has the size, speed and quickness you look for in a defensive lineman."

Landry said Noonan could play any position in the defensive line and be a good pass rusher.

Danny Noonan
...first round pick

Noonan was particularly tough against the run at Nebraska where he was a consensus first team All-Big Eight Conference and All-American selection.

He was the highest the Cowboys have drafted with their own pick since 1966.

The 5-10, 185-pound Francis, who intercepted three passes in the Texas game last year, was the 11th pick on the second round.

"He has good speed, good aggressiveness and good coverage ability," Landry said. "We rate him very high as a competitor. He will challenge for a job in our secondary."

Brandt said Francis was very productive. "He also has a 34-inch vertical leap. He doesn't have great size but we learned our lesson there. We want competiveness and Francis has it."

Oilers nab Highsmith

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers used their two first round selections in the NFL draft to pick a fullback with a defensive personality and a wide receiver who will never qualify as a jockey.

Playing the draft board to perfection, the Oilers made the right moves in picking all-purpose Miami fullback Alonzo Highsmith and North Carolina State wide receiver Haywood Jeffires, 6-2, 198.

The Oilers already had the fourth best receiving tandem in the NFL with 5-9 wide receivers Drew Hill and Ernest Givins, who caught a combined 126 passes last season.

But Oiler Coach Jerry Glanville wanted a taller target for quarterback Warren Moon.

"We wanted a receiver who couldn't qualify as a jockey," Glanville said. "We thought we owed it to the quarterback."

Jeffires set a Wolfpack career record with 14 touchdown catches and was second in receiving with 111 catches.

The Oilers traded their No. 8 first round pick to Buffalo for the Bills' No. 3 pick to get Highsmith. Houston used the 20th pick to take Jeffires.

"We went in trying to find people who could get their hands on the ball and then do something with it," Glanville said. "I wasn't keen on trading up but I'm glad we did."

Redskins take Wally Kleine in 2nd round

From Staff Reports

Wally Kleine, defensive lineman from Notre Dame, was obtained by the Washington Redskins with the Los Angeles Raiders, and was picked in the second round.

The 6-8, 299-pounder was projected as a sixth or seventh round pick by Tony Danieli, who specializes in such matters and whose ratings carry weight among NFL clubs.

The Redskins is looked upon as an offensive tackle prospect.

Kleine played at Midland High School, where he was a tight end.

Saturday's Kentucky Derby has Midland flavor

Battles

Kentucky Derby officials are probably quaking in their boots and it's little wonder. Midland will have two entries in the first jewel of racing's Triple Crown this Saturday.

One can only wonder if any community the size of Midland has ever had two horses running for the Roses in the same year.

Capote, the winter Derby favorite, is owned by Lloyd R. French-Barry Beal and Californian Eugene Kleine.

French was more familiarly known as as Bobby back in his days as one of Texas' best amateur golfers.

Capote finished fourth in the Wood Memorial and the Gotham Stakes, which is not the way Derby favorites are supposed to finish, but both were mud runs.

Capote won the Breeder's Cup in November, to earn its favorite's role and Qualify, also a horse in which French had an interest, took second. However, Qualify has since succumbed to a virus.

THERE'S a bit of history and nostalgia in Midland's other entry, Alysheba, the third place finisher in the Breeder's Cup.

Dorothy and Pam Scharbauer are daughter and the grand-daughter of Fred Turner, whose Tomy Lee won the 1959 Kentucky Derby.

Should Alysheba come through Saturday, a lot of tears will be shed, tears of joy and tears of sadness that Fred isn't here to share the historic moment.

That all sounds innocent enough, so why should the Derby officials perhaps be quaking in their boots?

Well, for one reason, Midland's previous entries in the Kentucky Derby are enough to make anyone in authority quake. One produced what probably is the classic's most bizarre finish. The other may have set a record for suspense in declaring a winner.

In 1957, Midland oilman Ralph Lowe's Gallant Man had the Derby tucked away in its saddle pouch when Willie Shoemaker put him into a victory trot.

Iron Leige sped by and was declared the winner.

Shoemaker had mistaken the sixteenth pole for the finish line and pulled up short.

The Irish-bred colt went on to prove itself by winning the Belmont, setting a record in the process and when Gallant Man passed the three-sixteenths pole it would have had a Preakness record and, at the quarter-mile pole, its time would have been a Derby mark.

THEN, TWO years later, Shoemaker, astride Turner's Tomy Lee made a spectacular stretch run to catch Sword Dancer, who had appeared to be running away from the field out of the turn, to win by a nose.

Shoemaker, with the memory of 1957 still fresh, must have been quaking in his stirrups while waiting for the verdict on the bumping protest lodged by Bill Boland on Dancer.

It took 17 minutes before the inquiry board ruled no foul had been committed and declared Turner's English-bred colt the winner.

So Midland-owned horses ran in Derbys that had folks reminiscing years after the race.

Why are the Derby folks maybe just a bit anxious? After the excitement created in the past, wouldn't you be apprehensive too with two Midland horses running?

Angry Ellis takes it out on Dallas Mavericks

Associated Press

Dale Ellis is still mad and is still getting even with the Dallas Mavericks.

Ellis, who spent most of his game time on the bench in three unproductive years with the Mavericks, scored a career-high 43 points Tuesday night, lifting the underdog Seattle SuperSonics to a 117-107 victory over Dallas and a 2-1 lead in their best-of-five NBA playoff series.

"I definitely want to beat these guys," said Ellis, who also had 14 rebounds. "I'm playing as hard as I can."

Ellis had 32 points in Game 2, including the game-winning free throws with two seconds left, but he said his two big games mean nothing if Seattle can't beat the Mavericks again on Thursday in Seattle or in Dallas on Saturday.

"I'm not completely vindicated yet," Ellis said. "There's still one more game. I just want to send those guys home."

Dallas beat Seattle in five straight regular-season games by an average of nearly 19 points, but Ellis said he was sure the Sonics could beat the Mavericks.

"I've taken somewhat of a role in convincing the team that we're as good as they are," Ellis said. "Dallas is the only team that outplayed us during the regular season. All we wanted to do is get them in a close game."

Ellis doesn't think he got a fair opportunity to play in Dallas.

"I don't think (Coach) Dick Motta really knew what he had in me," Ellis said. "He never really turned me loose to prove what I can do.

The Sonics took advantage of 4-for-17 shooting by the Mavericks in the first quarter to lead by as many 22 points in the first half before settling for a 55-37 margin at halftime.

Celtics 105, Bulls 94

Boston swept Chicago 3-0 for the second straight year and beat the Bulls for the 16th consecutive time as Larry Bird had 32 points and 14 rebounds and Dennis Johnson added 24 points and 10 assists.

The Celtics, who played without All-Star forward Kevin McHale because of an ankle injury, may get a week to rest while they await the winner of the Philadelphia-Milwaukee series.

Rockets 117, Trail Blazers 108

Houston lost all but six points of a 25-point halftime lead, but Akeem Olajuwon proved to be to much for Portland.

Olajuwon had 35 points, 11 rebounds and eight blocked shots for the Rockets, including a three-point play that defused the Trail Blazers' rally.

"I was not at ease until the last minute," Olajuwon said. "I didn't think we had the killer instinct when it was 25 points. It's just natural in this league to lose a little when you go up that much."

Islanders keep hopes alive against Flyers with 2-1 win

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Randy Wood was in no position to boast about a game-winning goal that kept the New York Islanders alive in the NHL playoffs. He was too busy trying to figure out how he scored.

The goal snapped a 1-1 tie at 3:27 of the third period as New York beat Philadelphia 2-1 to extend the best-of-seven Patrick Division series to a sixth game. The Flyers lead the series 3-2 with Game 6 set for Thursday night at Nassau Coliseum.

"I was tied up in front of the net," Wood said of his game-winner. "I felt a lot of sticks hit my leg. One could have been the puck."

It was.

Bryan Trottier outhustled Flyers' defenseman Brad Marsh for the puck and shot on goal. The puck hit Wood, probably on the skate, and glanced into the net.

"I was lying on top of (Flyers' goalie Ron) Hextall," Wood said. "I looked in the net and saw the puck. I was as surprised as anyone."

Montreal took a 3-2 lead over Quebec in the Adams Division final with a 3-2 victory in the only other NHL game Tuesday night.

New York's first goal, which tied the score at 14:18 of the second period, also was a fluke of sorts.

Rich Kromm shot the puck in from the top of the left circle under a sprawling Hextall.

"Ronnie (Hextall) caught his skate on the ice and tripped when he was coming out to make the stop," Flyers Coach Mike Keenan said.

Keenan said the Flyers were anxious to clinch the Patrick Division crown Tuesday night.

"But nobody said we were going to. There's not much you can say. We had a lack of offense. I think you have to give the Islanders some credit. They played a solid hockey game"

The Flyers' only goal came at 5:56 of the first period on a breakawy when Lindsay Carson beat Islanders goalie Kelly Hrudey. Hrudey turned aside 24 other shots.

Returning home could be considered a disadvantage for the Islanders, however. They've lost five of their last six games — and both playoff games — to the Flyers at the Coliseum.

Canadiens 3, Nordiques 2

Montreal, which fell behind Quebec 2-0 in their series, won its third straight game when Ryan Walter scored on a 15-foot wrist shot with 2:39 left in the game.

Prior to Walter's game-winner, both the Canadiens and the Nordiques had goals disallowed by referee Kerry Fraser. Walter's goal, his second of the game, came about 30 seconds after Alain Cote had apparently given Quebec a 3-2 lead, but Fraser ruled that coincidental minor penalties he had called on the play led to the goal, nullifying Cote's score.

The Canadiens, despite managing only 10 shots in the first 40 minutes, led 2-1 before Paul Gillis tied the game for the Nordiques 38 seconds into the final period.

Shayne Corson had a short-handed goal and Walter connected on the power play for Montreal, and Cote scored Quebec's first goal.

It was the first game of the series won by the home team.

Kipper bests Valenzuela

Associated Press

Bob Kipper knew what it would take to beat Fernando Valenzuela and the Los Angeles Dodgers. He had to pitch like Valenzuela, and he did.

The former Midland Angelo scattered seven hits over seven innings Tuesday night and the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Dodgers 6-1.

"I got my changeup over for strikes early in the game, then got some big outs later with the fastball," Kipper said. "I was glad to go out and pitch well early because when you're pitching against Fernando, you know you can't give up very many runs."

Junior Ortiz drove in three runs and ex-Midland Cub Mike Diaz knocked in two for Pittsburgh in a game played before 3,420 fans at Three Rivers Stadium, one of the smallest crowds ever to watch Valenzuela pitch in his eight major-league seasons.

Giants 6, Cubs 2

Mike Krukow, a 20-game winner last season, won his first game in four decisions this season as San Francisco beat Chicago.

Jeffrey Leonard's two-run homer keyed a five-run sixth inning against Rick Sutcliffe, 3-2, and reliever Frank DiPino.

Expos 7, Phillies 1

Floyd Youmans pitched six impressive innings and hit a solo home run, leading Montreal over Philadelphia in a game twice delayed by rain.

Joe Cowley, 0-4, pitched poorly again. Cowley, acquired in a preseason trade with the Chicago White Sox for Gary Redus, has worked 11 innings this season and has a 13.91 earned run average with 17 hits and 15 walks.

A crowd of 11,598, the smallest at Veterans Stadium since Sept. 12, 1983, sat through a rain delay of 13 minutes in the second inning and 65 minutes in the third.

Braves 7, Reds 3

Rafael Ramirez went 4-for-5, drove in three runs and sparked a six-run rally in the fifth inning that carried Atlanta past Cincinnati.

Padres 5, Cardinals 2

Steve Garvey drove in three runs and Ed Whitson worked six strong innings as San Diego won at St. Louis.

Oops, Brewers lose again

Associated Press

"We got whacked," was the way Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn described the Brewers' second loss in 19 games this season.

"We played hard, but it's hard to overcome the number of line drives the Angels hit ... and the balls they hit over the fence," Trebelhorn said after watching the California Angels crush his Brewers 10-5.

Even with the defeat, the Brewers lead the American League East by 3½ games with their 17-2 record, identical to the start the Oakland A's made in 1981 and the Detroit Tigers in 1984.

"They remind me of Detroit in '84," said Doug DeCinces, who led California's 17-hit attack with a three-run homer and two doubles. "Their whole lineup is hitting. They're very confident."

Brian Downing's two-run homer, his ninth of the season, put California in front for good and tied him with Milwaukee's Glenn Braggs for the major league lead. Jack Howell and Dick Schofield had solo homers for the Angels.

"The two losses that we had were games where we got beat," Braggs said. "You just have to tip your hat to them and say they played better than we did tonight.

"It's not that hard to take when you get beat," Braggs said. "But if you give the game away, those are the ones that are hard to swallow. We got beat, so we'll come back tomorrow."

Reliever DeWayne Buice, a 29-year-old rookie, got his first victory in his first major league decision, coming on in the sixth inning after starter John Candelaria was thrown out of the game by home plate umpire Mike Reilly for protesting a call on a pitch.

Rangers 3, Yankees 1

Edwin Correa, trying to become the youngest American League pitcher to throw a no-hitter in the modern era, held New York hitless for 7 1-3 innings.

Correa, 1-1, pitching one day before his 21st birthday, lost his bid when Willie Randolph singled to left. Don Mattingly followed with a double, knocking Correa out of the game. Dale Mohoric finished for his second save in the combined two-hitter.

Milwaukee's Juan Nieves, 22, pitched a no-hitter against Baltimore on April 15 this season.

Texas, which won its fourth straight game, scored all of runs on homers against Dennis Rasmussen, 2-1. Bob Brower led off the first with his first major-league homer, and Ruben Sierra and Larry Parrish hit consecutive homers in the fifth.

Orioles 3, Royals 0

Mike Boddicker tossed a one-hitter and Nelson Simmons had three hits. Willie Wilson singled in the sixth inning to break up the no-hitter.

The Orioles snapped a four-game losing streak and won for only the second time in their last nine games. They have won all five games Boddicker has started.

Mariners 6, Tigers 4

Two solo home runs by Ken Phelps and a two-run shot by Jim Presley supported Mike Morgan's pitching.

It was the Mariners third straight win and the Tigers' eighth loss in their last nine games.

Phelps hit his sixth homer of the year leading off the second and connected again in the sixth. Presley hit his second of the year in the third inning to give Seattle a 5-2 lead.

Athletics 7, Red Sox 1

Dennis Eckersley, coming on in relief of starter Joaquin Andujar, pitched six innings of two-hit ball.

Boston dropped its fifth straight game, its longest losing streak in two years.

Rookie Luis Polonia tripled and hit his first major-league homer, and Reggie Jackson hit his third homer, a two-run shot.

Indians 1, White Sox 0

Blue Jays 5, Twins 1

George Bell provided the power and Jim Clancy tossed a six-hitter. Bell drove in three runs, including two with a homer. Clancy, 2-2, who had only one victory in his last 10 decisions, gave its second complete game of the season.

Bell hit his fourth homer in his last four games and fifth of the year after Lloyd Moseby singled with two outs in the fifth to put Toronto ahead 5-1.

Susan visits Saddle Club.
I was delighted with my visit to Saddle Club! In addition to the individualized attention I was given by the professional leasing agent, I found the quality of Saddle Club's apartments far superior than I had imagined - and well within my budget.
I was pleasantly suprised to find that washers and dryers are available if needed and that I would have access to 2 swimming pools, 2 raquetball courts, 2 tennis courts, a universal weight room, sauna , jacuzzi, and professional aerobic classes.
