Tax breaks okayed by CED voters

Voters in County Education District 11 let it be known Saturday they were agreeable to giving themselves a tax break but strongly opposed to a personal property tax.

Saturday's turnout — about 665 voters over five counties — indicated most citizens were apathetic, or perhaps confused, concerning the issues.

In a state constitutional amendment election giving voters the opportunity to vote on the local options Saturday, 179 Scurry County residents voted "yes" while 168 voted "no."

Statewide, the constitutional amendment passed 467,115 for and 346,826 against. Had it failed, the local options election — also held Saturday — would have been moot. Lawmakers set the elections on the same date in order to speed the process of implementing the options.

When it got to the local options, County Education District 11 voters approved an option to allow a 20 percent homestead property tax exemption on a home's market value, 547 to 113, and an additional $10,000 to homeowners who are over 65 or disabled, 546 to 119.

They rejected a tax on personal property, however, with 92 voting for and 566 voting against.

County Education District 11 includes Scurry, Fisher, Kent, Garza and Crosby counties.

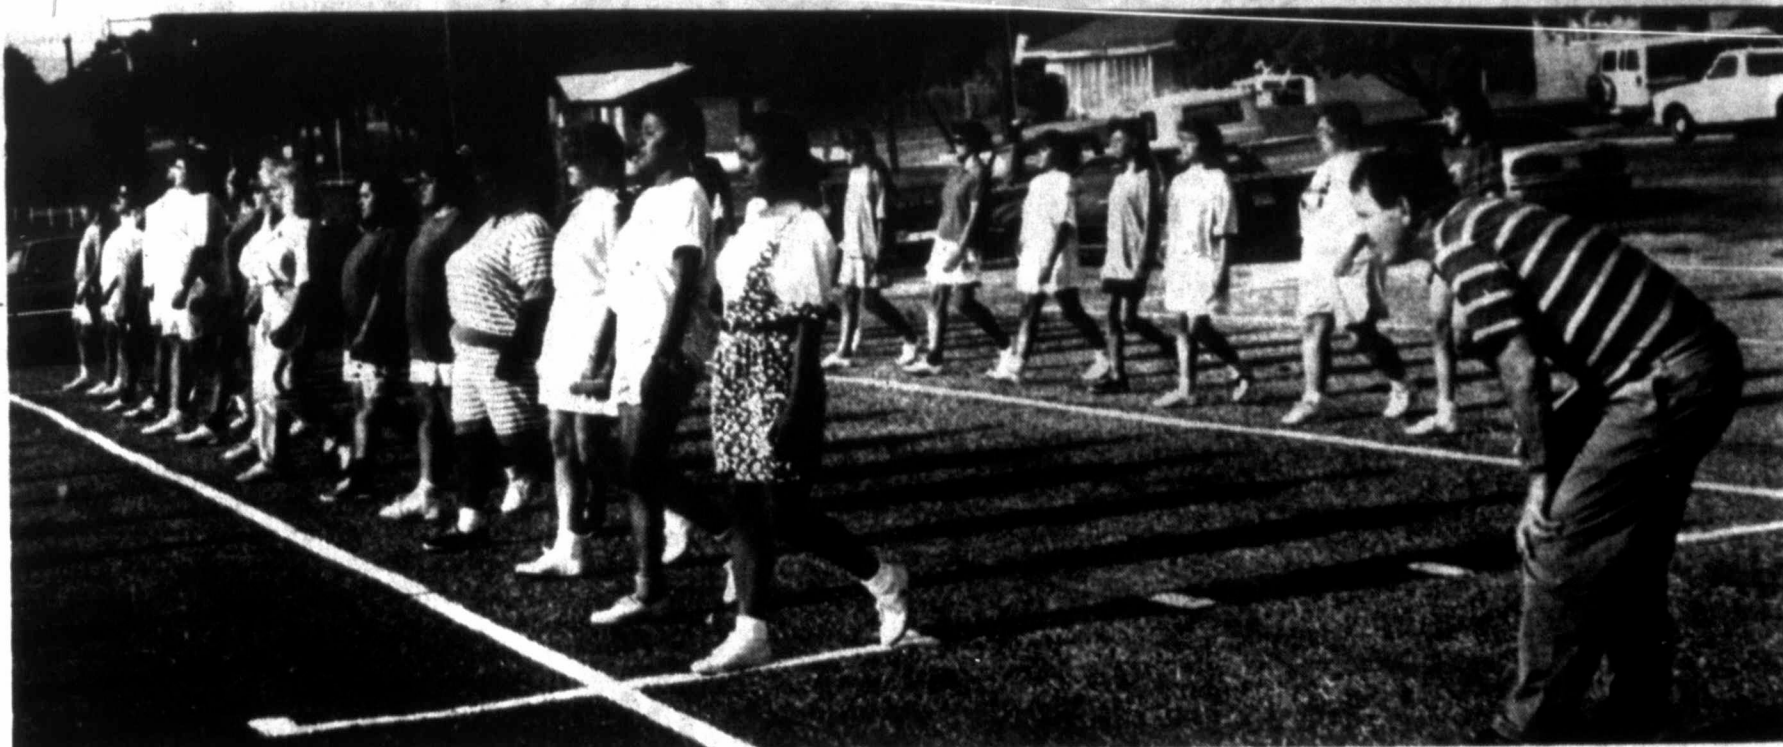

While area voters passed the exemptions and the tax options amendment by a narrow margin, they — like the rest of the state — voted down an amendment which would have authorized up to $300 million in general obligation bonds to pay for loans to Texas students attending state colleges and universities. Scurry County residents nixed the proposed amendment by a vote of 210 against and 129 for.

Windham in-service held at college here

Some 74 teachers, administrators and other personnel from the Daniel and Clements units and the Texas Department of Criminal Justice central office in Huntsville began in-service for the Windham school system today at Western Texas College.

Selden Hale III, chairman of the TDCJ board, will address the group in a keynote speech at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Fine Arts Theatre. Hale is a graduate of West Texas State University and St. Mary's Law School and has a private law practice in Amarillo. He was appointed chairman of the board by Gov. Ann Richards.

Today's activities began at 7 a.m. with opening remarks from Dr. Lane Murray, superintendent of Windham school system, and Ken Smith, regional administrator for the Western Region. Also addressing the group was Carl Robbins with the Texas Employment Commission in Austin. Robbins, an ex-offender, is a key figure in

Redistricting plan proposed Public hearing slated for 7 p.m. Thursday

Scurry County commissioners formally proposed a county precinct redistricting plan and set a public hearing on the issue as they convened for their weekly meeting this morning at the county courthouse.

The court also heard a request from Scurry County Museum officials, passed a resolution and okayed a line-item budget transfer.

"We don't particularly like how we had to do it, but it was the best alternative we saw available," said Precinct 3 Commissioner C.D. Gray of the redistricting proposal.

The proposal will include redrawing precinct lines to make Precinct 1 the minority-dominated area while maintaining equal populations in each precinct. Currently, Precinct 1 has a minority population of just under 46 percent. The changes would result in a 52.8 percent minority population for the precinct.

Significant boundary changes in Precincts 1 and 4 will be needed to achieve the 52.8 percent. Minor changes are expected in Precincts 2 and 3.

The proposal is a result of a meeting last week by members of commissioners court and an Austin law firm in an effort to achieve a minority-dominated precinct, as mandated by the Justice Department.

As commissioners set a public hearing for 7 p.m. Thursday in the county courtroom, County Clerk Frances Billingsley explained that redistricting would be "very expensive" for her office, requiring new maps and overtime hours for office staff. Gray asked Billingsley to prepare some cost estimates for commissioners.

Shirley Leftwich, director of Scurry County Museum, and museum board members attended this morning's meeting to request $1,007 in additional funds for the museum. Leftwich explained that the amount was needed to maintain current salary levels for the museum's two full-time salary personnel.

"Our budget has been cut drastically. If we had any fat we would cut it. We are cutting into the meat," said Leftwich, noting that cuts in higher education funding had forced Western Texas College officials to cut the museum's budget by some $11,000. She also said the Museum Association was in the process of planning fundraisers in an effort to minimize the loss.

Commissioners tabled any decision on the request, noting the absence of Precinct 1 Commissioner Jerry Morgan and (see COUNTY, page 8)

SHS student athletes begin workouts today

Almost 200 Snyder High School student athletes showed up for the start of summer workouts today as practice began for football and volleyball.

Coach David Baugh reported 103 players in the Tigers' grid camp while coach Patty Grimm's Lady Tigers boasted 34 attending morning practice for junior varsity and varsity volleyball. Another 35-40 are expected for the freshman session at 6 p.m.

A total of 68 football players from the varsity and JV squads were on the SHS practice field today. Add to that 35 freshmen and more expected to report later in the week.

The SHS gridders began the day at 6:30 a.m. with bench and squat weight tests and a timed mile run. Daily defensive workouts will be held from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., followed by a 9:45-10:30 a.m. kicking drill. The Tiger offense will practice from 6-7:30 p.m. following a 5 p.m. "skull session".

Incoming freshmen will practice from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. only.

The team's annual Watermelon Bowl intrasquad scrimmage is set for Saturday. The first action against an outside opponent will be the Aug. 22 controlled scrimmage versus Ft. Stockton in Stanton. A second practice game is set for Aug. 30 against Crane there.

College trustees to discuss budget, personnel matters

Western Texas College board of trustees will take action on a resignation and a recommendation to hire a special needs coordinator, approve a retirement plan for part-time employees and discuss the 1991-92 budget during its August meeting, set for 5:45 p.m. today.

The meeting will begin in executive session to consider personnel matters. Also on the agenda is the consideration of a request for tax exemption by Snyder Neighbors

Sharing and a progress report from a computer committee.

The board is expected to accept the resignation of Janet Coffey, cosmetology lab assistant, and approve a recommendation to hire Bob Scott as special needs coordinator.

Discussion of the 1991-92 budget will focus on setting a hearing and an update on state legislative action.

The board may also schedule a workshop prior to the hearing, in order to revamp portions of the budget. Dr. Harry Krenek, college president, said that it appears that funds from the state will be cut by 2.6 to 2.7 percent, which would amount to some $60,000 to $65,000. He noted that health insurance premiums have also increased. Neither of those items were included in a tentative budget presented to the board last month.

Tentative revenues listed at that time were $6,024,358. A projected tax rate of $.2020 would bring in $1,851,613.

Week-long rodeo closes...

AJRA contestants save best for last

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

Contestants in the just-completed AJRA National Finals Rodeo saved the best for last in Saturday's televised finals from Scurry County Coliseum.

Three bareback riders scored over 70 points while girls 16-19 barrel racing's top three finishers slipped in under the magic 15-second mark.

Saturday's rodeo wound up a week of performances in which year-end champions were crowned in all events.

Chris Stanford of Verhalen captured the night's top score in bareback riding with his 77. Stanford, the season's world champion in his event, beat out Keller bronc rider Randy Baker, who scored a 74, and season runner-up Pete Hawkins of Southlake, who took home a 72 from the finals.

Barrel racers in the girls 16-19 division were paced by Iraan's Mecca McMullen, who flew through the course in 14.48 seconds. Ashley Looney of Del Rio, the year's all-around winner, came in a close second on the night with a 14.55 clocking and a 14.64 gave outgoing Miss AJRA Jamie Bean of Ft. Hancock third position.

Cody Owens of Rankin impressed the judges to the tune of 71 points to win the boys 12-and-under steer riding, beating out Wheeler's Mike Johnson, who registered a 67. Owens was the year's top AJRA steer rider.

Crane junior bull rider Cory McFadden, reserve champion in the event for the rodeo season, captured first place in the boys 13-15 age group Saturday with a 73. Melvin wrangler Reed Corner's 67 was good for second place.

Winners in Saturday's timed events included steer wrestler Philip Morris of Elgin who took a 5.65-second time for top honors; tiedown roper Ryan Robinson of Denton, who notched a 9.22 for first place; and Chris Irwin of Andrews, who turned in a 14.73 elapsed time to win the boys 12-and-under barrel race.

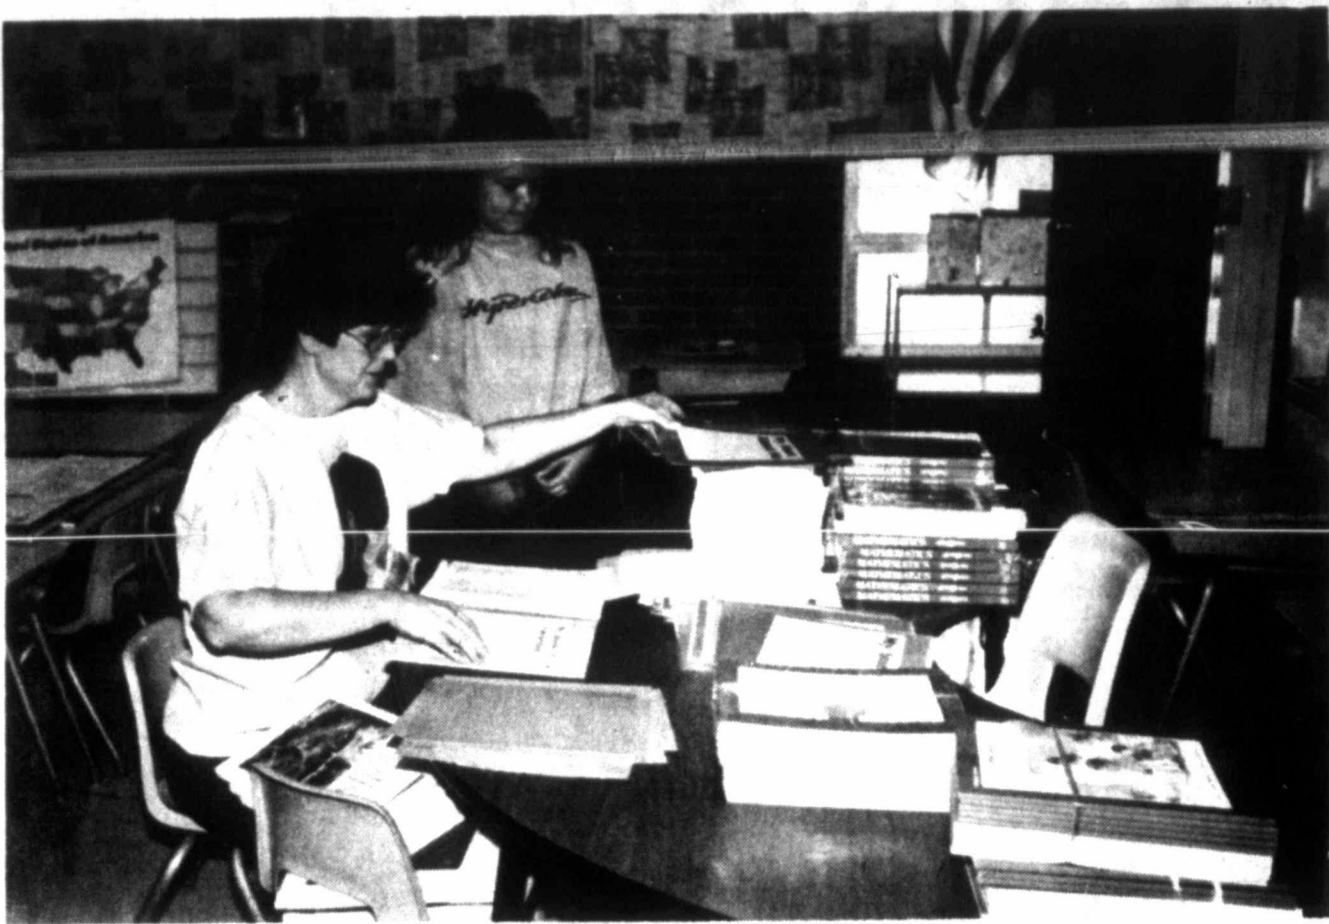

Morris wound up the year in second place in steer wrestling behind Barry Simpton of Del Rio. Talina Bird of Post, Sonora's Pam Jones and Carlsbad, N.M. cowgirl Tibba Smith each scrambled to under four-second times in breakaway roping.

Bird, optional roping and goat tying champ for 1991, took a 3.38 and first position over Jones' 3.59 and Smith's 3.86.

Smith was the AJRA girls 12 and under all-around and pole bending title holder at the season's end.

Girls 16-19 breakaway roping was also a close race Saturday as winner Lorissa Edmondson, newly crowned Miss AJRA, nipped Melrose, N.M. talent Christ Sultemeier for first. Edmondson, runner-up in all-around, optional roping and pole bending for the year, posted a 3.22 followed by Sultemeier's 3.97.

Dryland cotton crop's potential good

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Timely rain and hot weather is needed through September if the 25-county Texas dryland cotton crop is to achieve its growing potential, an agronomist said.

"The fruit load is out there for a big crop," said James Supak, a cotton agronomist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Lubbock. "But we may have to have above-average weather for cotton from here on out for it to achieve the full potential."

Supak said the crop has rebounded well from a dry period early this summer.

He said this year's High Plains cotton crop is about two weeks late, but it's on track for a large yield as it enters a critical time for boll maturation.

"We have an excellent fruit set just about everywhere, with a high percentage of the squares and bolls having been retained to this point," Supak said. "In fact, this is one of the better set crops I've seen up here."

The crop's production potential, based on conditions around Aug. 1, is estimated at 3 million bales off 3.25 million standing acres, officials said. More than 3.6 million acres were planted.

Growers last year produced 2.95 million bales off 2.77 million harvested acres for an average per-acre yield of 510 pounds, the third highest yield ever.

If 3 million bales are harvested this year, it would mean an average yield of about 443 pounds per acre, just below the five-year average of 448.

Supak said much of the dryland crop is faring as well as the irrigated cotton.

In general, the agronomist said, the earliest bolls in even the early planted crop may not be as advanced as expected. The number of days the bolls have been on the plant, would indicate they should be more mature.

Many ranchers eligible for emergency haying, grazing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drought on the nation's farms may not be as widespread as in the past few years, but the National Farmers Union says the land this year is parched and producers across the Corn Belt and Great Plains could be devastated.

According to the Agriculture Department, emergency haying and grazing on land normally taken out of production had been authorized as of Friday for livestock producers in 316 counties in 24 states.

Producers in far more counties had been allowed to graze their livestock on set-aside acres in the past three summers under the emergency program, according to data from the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

In early August 1988, emergency haying and grazing had been approved for 2,181 counties in 39 states, ASCS records show. At this time in 1989, there were 977 counties in 22 states authorized to participate, and in 1990, the figure was 412 counties in 16 states.

The fact that fewer counties have been approved this year is a sign, said one ASCS official, that drought and other extreme weather is not as widespread this year.

But for the farmers who are affected, their land is much drier than drought-stricken land in the 1980s, said Howard Lyman, legislative analyst for the National Farmers Union.

Man accused of kidnapping leads officials to body

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A Texas man accused of kidnapping a 10-year-old girl over a week ago has been charged with capital murder after leading authorities to the girl's body near a southern Mississippi highway.

Donald Leroy Evans, 40, of Galveston early Sunday led officials to the body of Beatrice Louise Routh, who was abducted from a Gulfport playground Aug. 1. She had been raped and strangled, an autopsy said.

"He led us to her," said Pearl River County Sheriff Lorraine Lumpkin, adding that court rules prevented him from saying whether Evans confessed to the murder.

Evans was charged with Beatrice's kidnapping Aug. 5 after he was arrested in Tangipahoa Parish, La. Beatrice was not with Evans at the time and he initially refused to say where she was.

Authorities searched through Mississippi and Louisiana for Beatrice, who suffered from asthma aggravated by the heat.

"Evans was instrumental in leading investigators to the body," FBI spokesman M.C. Overton in Jackson said.

Gulfport police chief George

Payne told the Biloxi Sun Herald that Evans was being held in the Harrison County Detention Center after being charged with capital murder by Pearl River authorities.

Harrison County prosecutor Bobby Payne said he would meet with Pearl River authorities today to decide how to pursue the case.

"We will confer with the Pearl River people Monday to see if they're going to go forward with capital charges," Payne said. "If they don't, we will."

Beatrice's body was found in woods off Mississippi 43 in Pearl River County, Sheriff Lorraine Lumpkin said. The area, near the Louisiana border, is about 15 miles northwest of Picayune and 110 miles southeast of Jackson.

Brooks' former aide target of grand jury investigation

AUSTIN (AP) — A Travis County grand jury is investigating a former aide to Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

The aide was identified as Charles F. "Chuck" Rice Jr., 36, who left Brooks' staff a year ago, the newspaper reported in its Sunday editions.

Three years ago, within months after Brooks intervened with state regulators to help a Houston bingo operator, Rice received stock in the operator's bingo company, the newspaper said.

And after Brooks interceded last year at the Department of Public Safety on behalf of North American Morpho Systems, a computer firm vying for a multi-million dollar contract, Rice was hired as the firm's Capitol lobbyist, even though the firm did not get the contract, the newspaper said.

The American-Statesman reported that Travis County prosecutors are investigating whether Rice violated state conflict-of-interest laws while working for Brooks.

Rice, in an interview, denied any wrongdoing, insisting that the events were separate business deals unrelated to his $28,000-a-year Senate job, the newspaper said.

Brooks, a senator since 1967, said he welcomes an investigation to clear the air.

"From what I know, there was no conflict, but I can see the perception problem," he said.

Under state law, legislative aides are prohibited from accepting outside jobs or compensation that could impair their independence or judgment. They also are barred from making personal investments that could pose a conflict of interest.

Rice said he has done "nothing that I see any conflict with. I've always tried to be straight with all of it ... I did not profit from anything."

But the American-Statesman said according to interviews and documents it had obtained, Rice — while a Senate aide — also helped establish two trade groups whose members could have benefited from legislation sponsored by Brooks.

Rice said he worked for the groups on his own time. "Everything I've done ... I've done it above board."

Dallas museum to acquire artifacts

DALLAS (AP) — By the end of next month, the Dallas Museum of Art hopes to acquire a collection of ancient gold jewelry and some national notoriety.

An Italian antiquities dealer collected the pieces to create what is considered the most important single accumulation of ancient Greek and Etruscan jewelry in the 20th century.

DMA director Richard Brettell says the 120-piece Moretti Collection "will catapult the DMA into international prominence in the field of classical jewelry," Brettell said.

Negotiations should be final next month.

The first showing is scheduled for Oct. 9. However, some of the artifacts will be reserved for a showing in 1993 when the new Hamon Building opens.

The collection includes a gilded olive wreath, gold rings and examples of diadems, earrings and necklaces dating roughly from the 7th to the 2nd century B.C.

Also in the collection are several pieces found in a 2nd century Roman goldsmith's shop, including gold ingots and bracelets that were being repaired at the shop.

"The collection was formed by a man who knew as much as anyone about classical jewelry, and the objects are in a remarkable state of preservation," Brettell said.

"Very few pieces will need conservation, but the museum's new conservator of objects will arrive and examine the collection in September."

The museum recently hired John Dennis, who worked formerly at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

Next shuttle flight to study ozone layer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA's next shuttle flight is a trip by Discovery next month to release a satellite that will study the ozone layer.

The Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite is the centerpiece of a $740 million program. It is designed to conduct the first systematic, detailed study of the upper atmosphere from space.

"Specifically, we hope to better understand causes of ozone depletion," said project manager Charles Trevathan. "More generally, we plan to assess the role of human activities in atmospheric changes."

Discovery's five astronauts will release the 14,500-pound satellite during the five-day flight, scheduled to begin around Sept. 12. It will be the 13th voyage for NASA's most traveled shuttle and the 43rd shuttle trip overall.

NASA planned to roll Discovery to the launch pad today.

On Sunday, Atlantis landed at Cape Canaveral after a nine-day mission. The crew put a $120 million communications satellite in orbit and conducted experiments aimed at easing the ill effects of space travel on the body.

Four of the 10 scientific instruments on the satellite released by Discovery will measure the temperature and concentration of ozone in the stratosphere, which begins about 9½ miles above Earth and extends to about 39 miles.

This layer of ozone, a form of oxygen, shields against harmful ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

Scientists contend the ozone layer is being destroyed by chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, released by refrigerators, air conditioners and some aerosol sprays.

The consequences of ozone depletion are thought to include an increase in skin cancer, cataracts and immune deficiencies, and destruction of crops and the plankton that supports marine life.

During the satellite's mission of at least 1½ years, scientists hope to observe the autumnal buildup and breakup of the Antarctic ozone hole. The hole, or depletion, is formed by clouds, extreme cold and certain wind patterns.

The satellite is being sent up so it can cover two Northern Hemisphere winters.

It will measure wind, temperature, the atmosphere's chemical composition, solar energy and energetic particles from a 372-mile-high orbit.

NASA relies on the 13-year-old Nimbus-7 satellite to monitor ozone concentrations over the South Pole. An instrument on the spacecraft measured a shocking 45 percent decline in ozone density in 1987 and again in 1989.

The early spacecraft "looked at bits and pieces of the puzzle," said NASA's Carl Reber, project scientist for the new satellite. The new satellite will "look at all the parts of the puzzle, or as many parts as we can," he said.

The mission will be the year's fifth shuttle flight. Another mission is planned for 1991, a November trip by Atlantis to release a missile warning satellite.

A violinist and bridge player

By Phillip Alder

One of the world's top violinists, Alfredo Campoli, died in March at 84. Music was in his blood: His mother was a top soprano who was particularly admired by Verdi, and his father was a professor of violin at Rome's prestigious St. Cecilia Conservatory.

Alfredo started to play the violin at 5, and by 13 he had won so many competitions that he was asked never to enter again.

His music career blossomed, but after he learned bridge in 1928, he always checked out the location of the local bridge club wherever his busy concert schedule took him. For example, in 1953 he made his New York debut at both Carnegie Hall and the Cavendish Club.

Campoli's bridge expertise can be judged from today's deal. Cover the East-West hands; then plan the play in four spades, West leading the heart two and East putting up the queen.

North's two-club response was the Drury convention, promising a maximum as a passed hand and at least three spades in support of South.

It was clearly necessary to keep West off the lead, so Campoli ducked the first trick. He won the heart return, played a trump to dummy's queen, ruffed a heart in hand, went back to dummy with another trump and ruffed the last heart. Next came the diamond ace, a diamond to dummy's king, and a diamond ruff. Having eliminated the red suits, Campoli led a club and inserted dummy's 10. East won with the jack but had to concede either a trick to the club king or a ruff and discard. Whichever he chose, Campoli would lose only two club tricks, thus making his contract.

Relatives mourn murder of young woman and children

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Relatives of Teresa Law cried and held hands at the woman's memorial service this weekend, but the sadness was underscored with feelings of anger over four deaths they say might have been prevented.

On Thursday Teresa's husband, Richard Law, a 23-year-old cook, shot and killed his family and then himself in the living room of their home.

The day before, Law had been released from a state psychiatric hospital where he was examined for two days after attempting suicide.

"What has happened here should not happen to anyone," said the Rev. Mike Evans during the 30-minute service Sunday at University Heights Baptist Church in Odessa.

A graveside burial service for Mrs. Law and the children is scheduled for Monday afternoon. A burial service for Richard Law is set Monday morning.

Teresa Law's relatives are angry with officials at the Big Spring hospital who they say paid no attention to Law's vow to buy a gun or his drug use.

The incident has prompted a review of evaluation procedures at the Big Spring hospital, an administrator said.

Police found no drugs in the Law home and are waiting for results from a toxicology test on his body.

Law was upset that his wife wanted to end their 3-year marriage, witnesses told police. On Wednesday night, after he returned home from the Big Spring state hospital, Mrs. Law again asked for a separation and Law agreed to move out, police said.

Police took Law to the hospital Aug. 4 after he cut his neck in front of his wife. Law told police he attempted suicide twice before and would buy a gun and kill himself in front of his wife, according to a police report.

Law bought a gun from a pawn shop Thursday morning, apparently lying on a federal gun ownership form that asks whether a buyer has a history of mental problems. Texas requires no forms or background checks for gun owners.

The quadruple murder-suicide is the most brutal crime in the memory of Odessa police and one of the grizzliest in Texas this year.

A similar incident occurred in Houston in April, when a man killed his four children and then himself after his wife left him. The Houston man, Chung Dinh Vu, also bought a gun hours before killing his family.

Evans told 75 people attending Sunday's service that Teresa Law, 20, devoted her life to her children — Kyndra Sue Maxwell, 4, Richard Allen Law II, 3, and Robert Lee Law, 22 months.

Mrs. Law was a part-time nurse aide, but spent most of her time at home taking care of the children.

"She loved her kids and ... her kids loved her," said Evans, a minister at Tabernacle Baptist Church in Cabene.

A major earthquake in the Soviet Union, measuring 6.9 on the Richter scale, devastated northern Armenia, with official estimates putting the death toll at 25,000.

"I suppose I can afford to make her a fashion statement from head to toe...as long as she stays 36 inches tall."

Daly drives to PGA title

CARMEL, Ind. (AP) — John Daly didn't just run away from the rest of the field. He drove. And drove. And drove.

And for four rounds in the PGA Championship, it was all the others who crashed trying to keep up with him.

"I didn't think. I just hit it," said Daly, a virtual unknown who easily won over an enthusiastic crowd and had even the sport's established stars shaking their heads in amazement with his powerful drives.

The four rookie tamed the long, tough Crooked Stick course and won the PGA Championship Sunday in his first major tournament.

Daly, the longest hitter in professional golf and a last-minute entry, completed his improbable and incredible victory with Sunday's round at 1-under par. Even a double-bogey on the 17th hole didn't stop him. By then, he still had a three-stroke lead, and victory — if not assured — was at least in sight.

He easily outdistanced his challengers with his drives and finished 12 under par at 276 for the tournament, beating Bruce Lietzke by three strokes.

Even after three-putting for the double-bogey on No. 17, he took a three-stroke lead into the final hole and clinched the victory and $230,000 first prize with a par-4.

Lietzke came in at 70 for a four-round total of 279. Jim Gallagher Jr. was at 5-under 67 for the round and finished at 7-under 281. Kenny Knox, Daly's partner in the final two-hole, bogeyed the last hole and finished at 6-under 282. Steven Richardson and Bob Gilder tied for fifth at 283.

NFL roundup...

QB's fight for starting jobs

by The Associated Press
While the NFL exhibition season doesn't mean much in the standings, there are plenty of individual races going on. The quarterback jobs with the New York Giants and New Orleans Saints, for instance.

With the Giants, Phil Simms and Jeff Hostetler are battling for the No. 1 spot. Ditto at New Orleans, where Steve Walsh and Bobby Hebert are going head to head.

Following Saturday's 31-20 victory over Green Bay, Walsh seems to have taken the lead over Hebert. The Giants' quarterback derby, however, is another story. "I'm not sure what the situation is," Hostetler said following a 16-10 loss to the Cleveland Browns.

"I don't assess my own performances," Simms said.

The quarterback race for the defending Super Bowl champions wasn't advanced much, with Simms going 4-of-7 for 35 yards and Hostetler 5-of-10 for 42 yards. Simms, however, threw a 2-yard touchdown pass to Howard Cross, while Hostetler lost a fumble that led to a Cleveland score.

Both quarterbacks have won Super Bowls for the Giants.

Meanwhile, Walsh guided three touchdown drives in a little under two quarters against Green Bay at the Superdome. Walsh completed 10 of 15 passes for 131 yards, two touchdowns and one interception. Hebert, a five-year starter who sat out last season in a salary dispute, did not play because of a strained groin.

In other games Saturday, it was Miami 29, Tampa Bay 13; Kansas City 19, the New York Jets 10; Washington 27, New England 6; Philadelphia 29, Cincinnati 24; Seattle 17, Indianapolis 7; Buffalo 21, Detroit 16, and Minnesota 34, Pittsburgh 24.

Sunday night, Phoenix beat Chicago 12-10.

On Monday night, the Los Angeles Raiders are at Dallas and the Los Angeles Rams play host to San Diego.

Browns 16, Giants 10
Mike Oliphant's 14-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter gave Cleveland its first victory under ex-Giants assistant Bill Belichick.

Oliphant scored the winning touchdown two plays after rookie Michael Jackson caught his second long pass of the night, a 48-yard gain.

Saints 31, Packers 20
Walsh, acquired from Dallas in a trade last year, had one of his best games for New Orleans as the Saints scored their most points since a 35-7 victory over Tampa Bay in the ninth game of last season.

Bills 21, Lions 16
Jim Kelly shook off effects of a nagging hamstring injury and threw a touchdown pass in his first game since the Super Bowl. Kelly played 1½ quarters and completed six of 11 passes for 43 yards, including an 8-yard TD to Keith McKeller.

Backup Gale Gilbert led a 53-yard scoring march for the Bills in the third quarter and added a 13-yard TD pass in the fourth.

Dolphins 29, Buccaneers 13

Scott Mitchell threw touchdown passes of 30 and 5 yards to Freddie Banks to fuel a 19-point final quarter by the Dolphins.

Redskins 27, Patriots 6
Terry Hoage scored on a 45-yard interception return 1:31 into the game and Washington built a 21-0 lead in handing New England its 16th straight loss and 24th in 25 games, including six exhibition contests.

Cowboys face L.A. in exhibition duel

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The new Dallas Cowboys get their first chance to shine on prime time national television under coach Jimmy Johnson tonight.

And they'll be putting a new offense on the field for the nation to watch.

The Cowboys return to Monday Night Football for the first time since Oct. 3, 1988, when they play host to the Los Angeles Raiders in a 7 p.m. CDT kickoff at Texas Stadium.

Then, the Cowboys played New Orleans and Tom Landry was the coach and Steve Pelluer was the starting quarterback. Tex Schramm was the general manager and Bum Bright was the owner. All are out of the organization now.

Owner Jerry Jones said the Cowboys welcome the chance to be in the big show.

"I think it's a sign we're making some progress when the national networks start noticing us," Jones said. "We are happy they chose us."

It marks the 12th preseason game between the two clubs, with the Raiders owning an 8-3 margin.

Odds makers rated the Cowboys, who opened with a 24-14 victory over Kansas City, as one-point favorites over the Raiders, who have lost 24-17 to San Francisco and 19-17 to Miami Dolphins in Tokyo.

Television viewers will see the Cowboys unwrap their new offense as coordinated by Norv Turner, who was with the Los Angeles Rams. Turner has installed the Rams' passing game into the offense and quarterback Troy Aikman has been impressive during summer camp.

Aikman hit 8 of 12 passes for 73 yards and a touchdown against the Chiefs, while backup quarterback Cliff Stoudt hit 8 of 10 passes for 124 yards and two touchdowns.

Emmitt Smith, the NFL's Rookie of the Year last year, rushed 18 times for 69 yards operating out of the new Dallas offense.

"Emmitt may play only a quarter because we want to look at Curvin Richards and Ricky Blake," Johnson said.

Raiders coach Art Shell was expected to start an all veteran offense against Dallas with Jay Schroeder at quarterback, Marcus Allen and Steve Smith at running backs, Willie Gault and Mervin Fernandez at wide receivers, and Ethan Horton at tight end.

Allen was held out of the Tokyo game.

Steve Beuerlein, who had a touchdown pass late in the game against the Dolphins, was expected to see considerable action at quarterback along with Vince Evans.

The Raiders defeated Dallas 16-14 at the Los Angeles Coliseum last year.

Rangers edge Brewers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers outfielder Juan Gonzalez put his troubles behind him. Teammate Kevin Brown didn't.

Gonzalez committed a two-run error in the first and made up for it when he slapped a game-winning RBI single into left as the Rangers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 in 10 innings Sunday night.

Brown, meanwhile, threw solidly if not spectacularly while going after his first victory in six starts. He exited the game with Texas ahead 4-2 but saw his chance for a victory disappear when reliever Jeff Russell served up a two-run homer to Paul Molitor with two outs in the ninth.

Brown lasted 7 1-3 innings, allowing eight hits and two unearned runs.

Milwaukee starter Don August allowed seven hits and four runs over 6 1-3 innings.

Junior High football players in Snyder will report later this week for equipment issue.

Eighth graders are scheduled to get their gear at 1 p.m. Thursday at the SJHS fieldhouse.

Seventh grade gridders will report at 1 p.m. on Friday for equipment.

Junior golf tourney is scheduled

Snyder Junior Golf Association has planned a tournament for Wednesday at 8:30 a.m. at Snyder Country Club.

Sox rookie tosses unlikely no-hitter

Wilson Alvarez had pitched in the major leagues before. He just had never gotten anyone out.

But on Sunday, Alvarez turned his ERA of infinity into invincibility. The 21-year-old rookie threw one of the most improbable no-hitters in history, shocking his new Chicago White Sox teammates and shutting down the Baltimore Orioles 7-0.

Alvarez, called up from Double-A on Saturday, pitched the sixth no-hitter of the season in just his second big-league game. His other appearance was for Texas on July 24, 1989 — he started against Toronto that day and faced five hitters without retiring a single one, giving up three hits, including two home runs, and two walks.

"A couple years ago, I didn't have too much experience," Alvarez said. "That happened too quick. They call me up after I played just three weeks of AA ball. Right now I feel more comfortable."

Open government might not work

WASHINGTON (AP) — After nearly two decades of government in the sunshine, power to the people, and all that reformist stuff, there's a new rallying cry emerging on Capitol Hill: Bring back the smoke-filled rooms.

Actually, it's not much of a cry. Or even a shout. It's more like a hint, a whisper and a nod. But it's a real manifestation of the frustration lawmakers feel about their inability to get things done and the low esteem their jobs retain among the populace.

"I think that members of Congress are elected as politicians and politicians ought to be able to be left to work and perform as politicians ... to strike deals," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind. "A lot of reforms I used to support I no longer support," he said.

It's been nearly two decades since Capitol Hill was a safe haven for the closed-door, butt-burning sessions that people expect — maybe not like, but expect — of their elected officials.

The post-Watergate class of lawmakers vowed their Congress would stand as a shining contrast to the secretive, bugged and brutal tactics of Richard Nixon's executive branch.

So they changed the system. They took power from the "old bulls" and spread it around. They tried doors open to reveal inner workings of the legislative process.

But it hasn't worked out the way they hoped. To butcher an old butcher analogy, it's as though Jimmy Dean opened the doors of his sausage factory to show how he makes his product clean and wholesome. Maybe so, but it's not pretty, and neither is legislating.

"Ironically, by doing too much of a good thing, I think we've made Congress less influential rather than more," said Sen. David Boren, D-Okla.

Also ironically, Congress seems to get no credit from the public for operating under those "reforms." President Bush, who makes all his decisions in secret meetings with his Cabinet, Republican operatives, or foreign leaders, is widely viewed as an open and honest fellow while the Capitol is still seen as the home of the sleazebags.

"There's a kind of disdain for politicians and the work they do, the messy business of compromise," said Hamilton. "They like a world where principles are never violated."

And while not conquering its unsavory reputation, the Congress has added in recent years to an impression that it's too unwieldy.

A humongous staff of 12,000, up from 2,000 just after World War II, promotes a tail-wagging-the-dog atmosphere as the bureaucracy tries to impose its agenda. Meanwhile, overlapping jurisdiction between the 302 House and Senate committees and subcommittees leads to ugly intramural spats.

The closed-door budget summits of 1987 and again last year were examples of the lack of confidence lawmakers and the White House have in the normal legislative process.

Boren and Hamilton, joined by Sens. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., and Rep. Willis Gradison, R-Ohio, have announced legislation calling for a special joint committee to review Congress' operations and to recommend streamlining.

It may seem like a modest proposal to outsiders, but it's not within the institution.

Land set aside for super collider is being tested

WAXAHACHIE, Texas (AP) — Energy Department officials say environmental tests will continue today in Ellis County, where residents have expressed fears that the $8 billion super collider under construction could leak radiation.

For a month, helicopters have been used to test radiation levels in North Texas county, mainly to alleviate residents' fears, said Nat Brown, a director of the Energy Department's project office.

"The aerial flyovers are part of a radiation study to determine what type of radiation exists," Brown said. "There has been a fear that we are building a big radiation trap. We are not, and one way to prove that is to show what's there now."

So far, low-altitude helicopter monitoring has found nothing unusual in the area where the world's largest science project will be built about 35 miles south of Dallas, officials said.

"The exposure levels look ordinary, maybe even a little less," said project manager Allen Fritzsche.

The testing includes areas inside and just outside of what will be the Super Collider's 54-mile ring, Brown said.

Department of Energy officials said other testing this fall will include an environmental study of land acquired for the project and environmental assessment of the entire county.

Collider opponents are protesting the project with black and yellow bumper stickers on their cars.

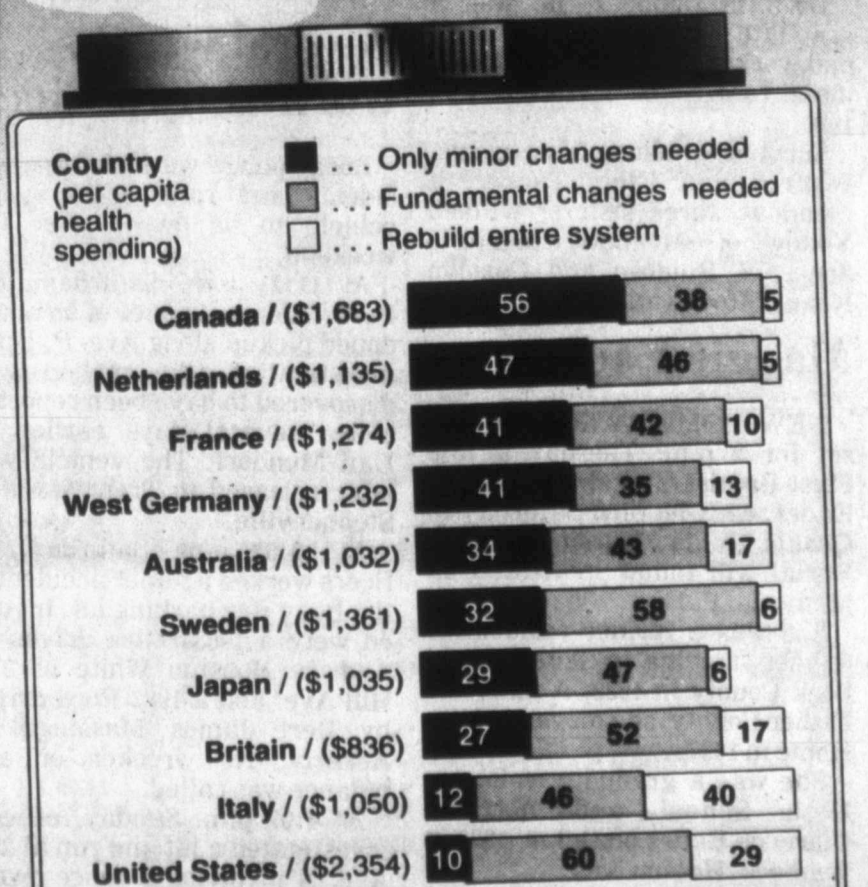

"Warning: Radioactive super-collider below," the stickers read.

Landowner George Caddell says he understands the concern.

"They won't really know for years about the radiation, and that's why you'll find a lot of people who don't want to live over this or near it," Caddell said.

Financially strapped lawmakers okay lottery

AUSTIN (AP) — State legislators, facing a $4.8 billion budget deficit and protests from taxpayers, will take a chance on a state lottery.

It's a voluntary levy they think Texans are anxious to pay.

AP analysis

"The people of Texas want to vote on a lottery, and we ought to give them that chance," Gov. Ann Richards said in urging senators to endorse a constitutional amendment to raise the the gambling game. Early Saturday, when a filibuster by Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, went bust after seven hours, senators voted 22-5 to give voters the final word.

On Nov. 5, Texans will decide whether the state runs the numbers game.

If opinion polls are correct — and they've shown more than 70 percent are in favor of the proposal — Texans could be buying lottery tickets by next summer.

"A lottery is the one thing they do favor," said Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, House lottery sponsor. "If you ask them how they feel about a sales tax, we'll get run out of the room. If you ask them about income-related taxes, they'll hang most of us."

Even though lottery income is dropping in some other states, Texas lawmakers decided the time had come to gamble.

Richards, who promised during her 1990 campaign to work for a lottery, was thwarted last spring, during the regular legislative session, in her first lottery bid.

So a week ago, the night before the House was to vote, she went on statewide television to urge taxpayers to lobby lawmakers to approve the lottery proposal. "Either we have a huge tax bill or we approve a lottery," she said in the broadcast.

Last Monday, the same House that had defeated lottery eight times since 1983 passed it with one more than the 100 votes needed.

"The issue here is whether or not you feel the people of Texas are competent to decide," said Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, in offering the proposal to senators.

Estimates indicate a lottery would raise about $471 million for 1992-93 and up to $1 billion after that. That's not enough to forestall a tax increase, but it should mean a lower tax hike, Montford said.

"It will take out a rather large chunk that we would otherwise need, but it is not going to solve all our problems," he said. "This is not the answer to our fiscal woes."

With the Texas economy battered in recent years by the oil bust, real estate collapse and savings and loan failures, the Legislature has raised taxes almost every year since 1984.

During the current special session, various tax protesters have converged on the Capitol. They've mailed tea bags to officials and, during one rally, chanted "get a rope" whenever Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock's name was mentioned. Bullock has unsuccessfully pushed for a state income tax.

Lottery opponents say that the game won't raise enough money, that it preys on the poor and that it is an unseemly business for state government to be involved in.

Rep. Billy Clemons, D-Pollock, said voters are being sold a bill of goods. The lottery won't provide anywhere near enough money and taxes still will have to go up, Clemons said.

'Methodical' killers did not disturb riches in the temple

PHOENIX (AP) — The killers who lined up and shot six Buddhist monks and three disciples ransacked their living quarters but left undisturbed a temple containing gold and jade statues and a "money tree," investigators say.

Details of the massacre emerged as investigators puzzled over a possible motive and looked into whether Asian gangs were involved. Some community members wondered whether the motive was racism.

The victims — six monks in saffron robes and three initiates — were found Saturday morning at the Wat Promkunaram temple. The bodies were side-by-side and face down in a living room of the remote temple 20 miles from Phoenix.

"The killings were very methodical," said Sheriff Tom Agnos.

Investigators said the killings occurred late Friday or early Saturday. Sunday was to have been a day of celebration, marking the end of three weeks of live-in training in religion and self-awareness for an elderly woman and two young men or teenagers, said Robert Johnson, whose Thai wife, Bupha, worships at the temple.

Agnos said robbery is a possible motive but that investigators hadn't determined if anything was missing from the ransacked living quarters. Worshippers said the temple contains gold and jade statues and a "money tree" with about $20 in singles left as offerings.

"The temple itself was not disturbed at all," Agnos said.

Temple members have told deputies the monks usually wore jewelry, and none was found on the bodies, he said.

Investigators believe there were at least two killers, Agnos said.

Investigators have not ruled out involvement of Asian gangs, but Agnos minimized that possibility. He said a gang investigator was called in, but only because "we want to cover all the bases."

The L-shaped, one-story temple building is the focus of religious and social life for about 300 area Thais as well as a few Cambodians and Laotians who adhere to the Theravada Buddhist teaching. Many who helped at the temple are Thai wives of American servicemen and military retirees.

On Sunday, about 100 black-clad worshippers gathered at a Thai restaurant to plan funeral services and discuss the temple's future with three monks from Los Angeles. The meeting was closed.

Some wondered if racism had a role.

"In America we have a lot of hate," Johnson said Saturday. "It's not just against blacks now, it's everybody."

"I can't believe this is a robbery, not with all the anti-Asian things going on," said Madeline Ong-Sakata, past president of the Arizona Asian Association.

She referred to two cases last year in which anti-Asian graffiti was sprayed on a Chinese church.

Agnos refused to say whether racist graffiti was found inside the temple.

Buddhist Ratchalee Yates of Tucson said she thought she left such violence behind when she emigrated from Thailand six years ago.

"I've never felt afraid here in the United States," she said in broken English. "They are happy. They don't do anything bad to anybody."

Ekachai Huansantia, 27, a Thai resident of Phoenix, was one of several worshippers who said they hadn't heard of any threats to local Thais.

"It scares me to death," said Betty Craft, a neighbor who traded gardening tips with the temple's monks. "I couldn't fathom anything like that because they were such nice, docile people."

State taxes will go up under current budget plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock says a proposed budget and tax bill before the Legislature is nothing to be proud of, but it gets the job done.

Lawmakers will consider a $59 billion budget and a $2.1 billion tax and fee increase in the final two days of the special session that expires at midnight Tuesday.

"There's no question in my mind there will be some slapping of our faces over this tax bill, and possibly over the spending, but I've done the very best I could," Bullock said Sunday.

Bullock is pushing for two-thirds approval of the tax plan in both the Senate and House so that it can take immediate effect. If the plan goes into effect immediately, then some of the more controversial levies will be dropped, Bullock said.

Revenue from the taxes and fees would go toward balancing a proposed 1992-93 budget that House and Senate leaders agreed to Saturday.

Message tells U.N. terms for release of all hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The United Nations today released a letter from Lebanese kidnappers that said freedom for remaining Western hostages hinges on the release of "our freedom fighters" throughout the world.

The broad demand by the Islamic Jihad sought to shift the pressure in the hostage crisis to Israel and its allied militia in southern Lebanon, which together hold about 375 Arabs. Israel also holds thousands of Palestinians from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

President Bush said the letter did not make sense to him. "We're back in the rumor game, the broad-demand game," he said while on vacation in Maine.

But a White House spokesman suggested the document also contains positive aspects. "We are considering this very carefully," said Marlin Fitzwater. "This letter is a basis for discussion by many, many people around the world."

Diplomatic activity intensified in the hours before the letter's release. A U.N. spokesman said U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar met in Geneva on Sunday with a top adviser to Israel's defense minister.

Former British hostage John McCarthy delivered the letter to Perez de Cuellar on Sunday during a televised ceremony in Britain.

Pro-Iranian Shiite groups freed McCarthy on Thursday and two more Westerners on Sunday: Frenchman Jerome Leyraud, 26, and American Edward Tracy, 60.

The letter to Perez de Cuellar said: "In view of our belief in the need for action to secure the release of our freedom fighters from prisons in occupied Palestine and Europe and also to solve the question of the detainees whom we are holding and the problems of their families, we call upon you to make a personal endeavor, within the framework of a comprehensive solution, to secure the release of all detainees throughout the world."

"In such an eventuality we would be perfectly willing to complete the process that we began today and to release the persons whom we are detaining within 24 hours."

English and French texts of the six-page letter, translated from the Arabic original, were released at the Geneva offices of the United Nations.

The group did not name the detainees it wanted freed, but could refer to Arabs held in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and to two Lebanese brothers jailed in Germany and a Hezbollah member imprisoned in Switzerland for hijacking. The pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, is believed to be the umbrella group for factions holding Western hostages.

The Arabs held in Germany and Switzerland were convicted after trials, and Israel has repeatedly said it will not discuss demands by the kidnappers to release nearly 9,000 detained Palestinian uprising activists.

Senate votes to prohibit 'canned hunt'

AUSTIN (AP) — So-called canned hunts in which wild animals kept in captivity are released for an easy kill would be outlawed under a bill approved by the Senate.

Sen. Mike Moncrief said Sunday the hunts represent a "deplorable situation, one which I find to be an embarrassment for Texas."

His bill was sent to the House on a 29-2 vote, and must beat the legislative clock, which runs out at midnight Tuesday. Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, said in so-called hunts great animals are killed in confined areas "under circumstances which offer absolutely no chance for a fair chase."

"Under the guise of a hunt, unscrupulous individuals with apparently massive macho egos pay thousands of dollars to experience the 'thrill' of the hunt," Moncrief said.

He told of a video that showed a declawed black leopard being released from a cage into what appeared to be a vacant lot. The leopard ran under a pickup truck, and dogs were released to attack. The hunter "made the shot from all of four or five yards away and then had the macho photos taken," Moncrief said.

Moncrief's bill is aimed at protecting lions, tigers, cougars, leopards, cheetahs, hyenas, bears and similar state-listed endangered species. The measure would make it illegal to kill any of those animals except where human life was threatened, or under narrowly defined exceptions.

Violators could be sent to jail for a year.

An amendment to delete cougars from the list failed on a tie vote, 13-13.

A bill that would authorize law officers to take immediate possession of the licenses of drivers who fail or refuse to take a blood-alcohol test was sent to the House on voice vote.

Legislative approval would make Texas eligible for $16 million in federal funds during the next five years, according to sponsor Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo.

"Automatic license revocation sends a clear message to drunk drivers that punishment will be swift and sure," Ms. Zaffirini said.

She said 29 states and the District of Columbia have such a law.

Bill Lewis, spokesman for MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving) said, "Time is short, but there is still enough time — two full days — to pass this bill if the leadership of the House stays behind it."

Senators also approved a bill to penalize school districts that spend excessive amounts on administration. If a district spent 10 percent above the state average, it could lose 40 percent of the difference between the excessive amount and the statewide average.

Girl Scouts plan to raze costly but traditional building

SEABROOK, Texas (AP) — The next generation of teen-age Girl Scouts will spend their summer-camp days in a modern dormitory setting instead of the 81-year-old mansion that was too expensive to maintain.

For more than 30 years, Girl Scouts from southeast Texas have been rewarded with a stay in the "Big House."

But Girl Scout officials plan to raze the mansion — one of the first homes built along Galveston Bay — at the Scouts' Camp Casa Mare, because the costs of renovation and upkeep are too steep.

Ann W. Schneider, executive director of the San Jacinto Girl Scouts Council, contends: "The house is very expensive to maintain and the decision of keeping it was not in the best interest of the Girl Scouts."

But officials of the Texas Historical Commission, the Greater Houston Preservation Alliance and the National Trust for Historic Preservation have contacted the Girl Scouts to try to save the concrete, mission-style home, purchased by the scouts in 1958 for $100,000.

Elizabeth Barker Willis, field office coordinator for the National Trust for Historic Preservation in Fort Worth, wrote Schneider last month urging the Girl Scouts to apply for available grants and low-interest loans to preserve the "Big House," as it is affectionately called by the campers.

Schneider and Anne S. Moeller, president of the council, responded a week later saying the council's board of directors "concluded that San Jacinto Girl Scout Council was not in the business of historical restoration and/or preservation, but rather in the business of serving girls and that our girl membership would be better served by a different type of facility."

Schneider said a 1989 survey concluded it would cost $800,000 to restore the home and that major repairs would be essential about every five years. She said that in the last 10 years, repairs have cost $650,000, and the tab is just too high.

The home, slated to be razed around Labor Day at a cost of $40,000, has structural problems stemming from reinforced steel within the concrete, Schneider said.

Schneider said the amount of money needed to restore the home will be better spent on the 41,000-member, 21-county San Jacinto Council.

In its place, the Girl Scouts are set to start construction this fall on a covered play shelter and swimming pool and next year plan to build a multipurpose building with dormitories, dining facilities and classrooms, Schneider said.

Houston Girl Scout leader Melody Rountree said more than 1,500 signatures were collected earlier this year from those in favor of restoring the "Big House."

"The main reason I want to see the house saved as a teacher is that this is such a great history opportunity," said Rountree, whose two daughters would be eligible to stay in the "Big House" next year.

"They keep telling us that we have to plan and go into the 21st century. Well, I don't think you have to destroy history to go into the next century."

"They want to plan a futuristic camp. This is a little camp; it's not a Disney World. There's land out there to build other buildings without tearing the house down."

Security guard job can be dangerous

DALLAS (AP) — Private security guard work may be an up-and-coming profession for the 1990s, but the jobs still don't pay much and can be dangerous, industry officials said.

The Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies reports more than 2,400 security companies operating in Texas. The board certifies and regulates companies and their workers.

"It's one of the fastest-growing industries around," Richard Haywood told The Dallas Morning News. Haywood, executive director of the National Association of Private Security Industries, said the industry expects to grow by 15 percent each year during the decade.

Security guard pay is low, but it's usually higher than what the guards were getting paid previously.

"You have a lot of people in transition," said Kenneth Farr, an independent security consultant. "They're in between jobs and looking for something. You have people who do this part time, to supplement their regular income."

Former Plano garbage collector Don Connelly joined the security ranks to work in a more exciting environment.

"I worked in Plano with the sanitation department," Connelly said. "After you sweat as many years as I have on a garbage truck, you'll know what I mean."

Although guards do some of the things policemen can't, like check building hallways, watch cars cruising through the parking lots or help people locked out of their apartments, the risks are imminent.

"It's pretty nerve-racking," said Edward Vaughn, a private security officer stationed at a restaurant next to a nightclub in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas. "We get shot at a lot out there."

"When the shots go off, people scatter. You never know where the shots are coming from. You never know if you're going home or not."

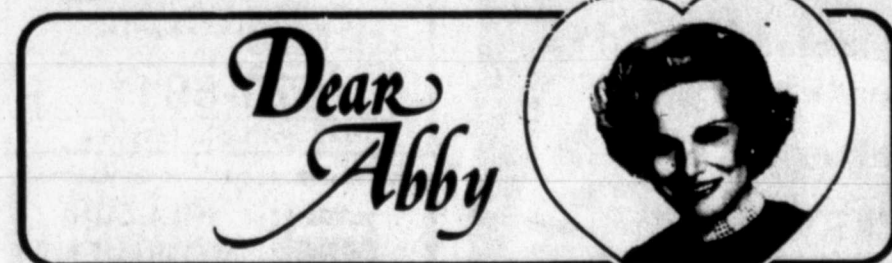

Anthony Hill, a journeyman guard averaging about $5.25 an hour in pay, said he once witnessed a man shot twice in the head while on the job. "I couldn't believe it. I was shocked," Hill said.

Despite the risks, most security guard employers are satisfied with the work the guards do.

"They're fine," said Rose George, assistant manager of an Oak Cliff apartment complex. "So far as I know, the residents are pleased with their work. We haven't had any negative complaints."

Mother-in-Law Uses Boots For More Than Just Walking

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1991 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law has never liked me, but time worsens things. She lives in another state, thank God, but she visits often.

Here is my gripe: One week after I gave birth to my second child, Mom was visiting me. I bent over to tie the laces of my firstborn's shoe, and she kicked me in the behind with her pointy-toed Western boot, then she let out a hearty laugh! My husband was right there, and he never said a word to her!

I later told a family friend about this incident and the friend couldn't believe it, so she went to my mother-in-law and asked her. Well, Mom wept hard, humiliated tears, saying, "Why, I can't imagine why she (meaning me) would want to tell a lie like that and cause trouble!"

Now Mom is coming to visit us again. I told my husband that if that woman pulls any more stunts like kicking me with her Western boots, I will call 911 and have her evicted.

Don't suggest counseling — it's a farce. My husband lies like his mother, and can double-talk his way out of anything.

HAD IT WITH ROUGHNECKS

DEAR HAD IT: Don't call 911 — that's for emergencies, not for a chronic pain in the behind.

Something must be wrong with your mother-in-law, and I think your husband must have inherited it. Just be grateful that "Mom" doesn't wear spurs.

second degree homicide and sentenced to serve 30 years.

While in the penitentiary, I completed all academic requirements for a B.S. degree in applied psychology.

I very much wish to become a registered nurse. Prior to my incarceration, I had completed two years of nursing school at a local four-year college. I intend to seek another undergraduate degree in nursing upon my release. The question is this: Will my being a convicted felon preclude me from pursuing a career in nursing?

I really do want to help people, Abby. Regretfully, it took this episode in my life to enable me to mature and come to an appreciation of life. I feel that nursing would also assist in my psychological healing as well. I am remorseful and I do regret my past actions.

H.B.

DEAR H.B.: Each state has its own requirements regarding licensing to practice nursing. Upon your release, write to the State Board of Nursing located in the capital city of the state in which you would like to practice. And if you enclose a stamped envelope, addressed to yourself, your chances for a response may be increased.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

DEAR ABBY: I have been an avid reader of your column for years. I am an African-American male, 30 years of age, who has been incarcerated for almost seven years now, convicted of

Dr. Gott Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would a heart condition have anything to do with my weakened chest, lungs and throat? I've been diagnosed with bronchiectasis, sinusitis and pneumonia nine times over the years and wonder if there is a connection.

DEAR READER: Bronchiectasis (chronic, localized infections in the lungs), sinusitis and pneumonia are not directly related to heart disease. Nevertheless, infection of any kind can aggravate a weak heart because inflammation and fever place added burdens on the cardiovascular system.

In my experience, the infections you mention can usually be helped by antibiotics. I say "helped" (not cured) because bronchiectasis, in particular, is virtually impossible to eradicate without surgery to remove infected portions of lung.

However, long-term use of antibiotics should keep your pulmonary problems under control. This, in turn, should have a salutary effect on your heart. Of course, you should also follow your doctor's advice about avoiding exposure to infections, taking good care of your health, using appropriate medicine for your heart disease and taking more antibiotics at the earliest sign of upper respiratory infection.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Living With Chronic Lung Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: We'd like to share information regarding the use of WD40 as appeared in a previous column. An older gentleman in a nearby community found the product gave him a great deal of relief — initially. He ultimately became ill, was hospitalized, and blood tests revealed he had WD40 residue in his system. He came close to death, and the experience convinced us this was not a suitable agent to be used for medicinal purposes.

DEAR READER: Thank you for sharing your experiences. As I stated in a previous column, WD40 is an oil-based product useful for lubricating objects, not people.

Although I was not aware of any toxic potential, I appreciate learning that WD40, when misused, may cause physical harm.

Environmental guide says Oregon rated tops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas and four other southern states rank at the bottom of a new nationwide survey of environmental conditions that calls the South "a region where the environment is under pressure."

Alabama came out last in the Green Index, a compilation of 256 indicators of environmental hazards and state policies put together by the Institute of Southern Studies, a public interest advocacy research group in Durham, N.C.

"There's a message of urgency for states that rank low," said Bob Hall, the institute's research director. "Citizens in those states need to take a club to the heads of their lawmakers."

The Green Index, published today by Island Press, added up measures of air and water pollution, toxic and other waste disposal, energy use, population density and the like to place Oregon third behind Hawaii and Vermont for pleasant and healthful conditions.

For strict environmental laws, Oregon ranked second behind California, but the strong showing pushed Oregon into first place overall.

Maine took second place in the total standings, followed by Vermont, California and Minnesota.

Southern states dominate the bottom of the table, with Texas, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana joining Alabama in the last five spots.

The South is "a region where the environment is under pressure," Hall said. "It's also the region where the lawmakers are very lackluster in their attitudes to the environment."

Pat Byington, a spokesman for the Alabama Conservancy, called on the state's leaders to take immediate action.

"The best thing about the Green Index is that it points out where our weaknesses are," Byington said. "We're calling on our political leadership and the people of Alabama to heed these warnings and come up with a plan to protect our environment."

The state Department of Environmental Management prepared a 11-page response to the index, defending Alabama's environmental policies.

"The Green Index does little to add to informed debate on significant environmental issues due to its use of outdated and, in some instances, incorrect information and its subjective analysis in ranking certain parameters," the statement said.

The Institute of Southern Studies describes itself as "dedicated to investigating economic, environmental and social conditions in the South and throughout the U.S." Hall said the group "takes a populist approach."

The criteria for the Green Index reflect a sweeping view of environmentalism — giving credit, for example, if the state unemployment rate is low and if wearing seat belts is mandatory under state law.

"We wanted to look at the environment broadly, not just the natural ecosystem, but at the manmade environment and the public health system," Hall said. "We included indicators that reflect the commitments of states to protecting public health and public safety."

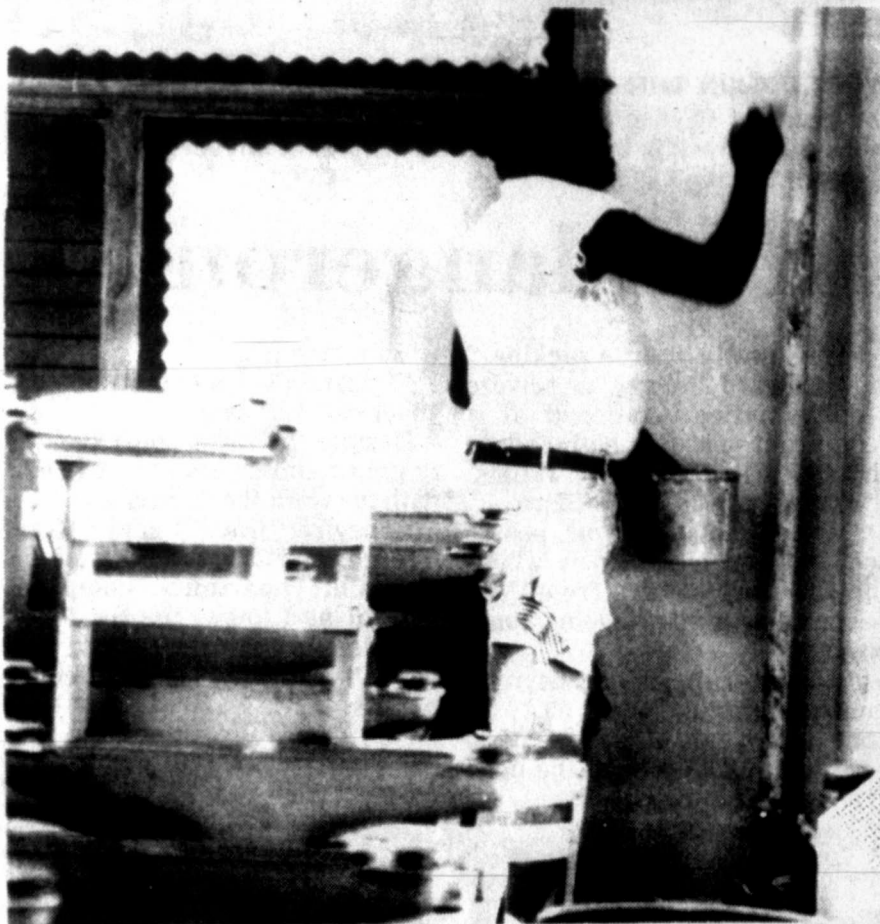

Most of the categories are more closely related to measures of pollution, such as pounds per capita of toxic waste releases or percentage of rivers failing to meet national water quality standards.

Alabama's rivers and streams rated fairly high — fifth place — but the state's total ranking was dragged down by dismal showings in such categories as infant mortality, quality of shellfishing waters and safety violations at nuclear power plants.

Oregon won points for its vigorous recycling programs and for relatively low acid levels in its abundant rainfall. It survived poor scores for oil spills and forest preservation.

The Green Index can be ordered from Island Press, 1-800-828-1302, if it can't be found in local bookstores.

Ten personalities pivotal to lawsuit

HOUSTON (AP) — Psychologists on both sides of Melanie Kramer's lawsuit agree she seems to have 10 personalities, but a court will decide if a Catholic charity official assaulted her or was involved in a romantic encounter with her alter ego, Monique.

Ms. Kramer, 36, is seeking more than $1 million for emotional distress, claiming that she had a complete emotional collapse after she was sexually assaulted by Morris Robichaux in 1988. She also says she has suffered post-traumatic stress disorder since.

Robichaux, 68, former president of the St. Vincent DePaul Society at Corpus Christi Catholic Church, claims he was seduced by the woman's sexually provocative personality, "Monique," and that their encounter was consensual.

Lawyer for both sides say they are prohibited from discussing the case under a gag order imposed by the court.

Ms. Kramer's lawsuit says she had just been released from Spring Shadows Glen in June 1988, and had arranged for $500 to be donated from Robichaux's charity.

When Robichaux visited her apartment to deliver the money, Ms. Kramer says, he "lost control of his emotions," and sexually assaulted her. She says he tried to return on several occasions but she wouldn't let him in.

Robichaux claims Ms. Kramer brought on the episode, holding his hand in a tour of the apartment. He says they kissed for 15 minutes before attempting sexual intercourse.

Bryant's can clean carpets expertly

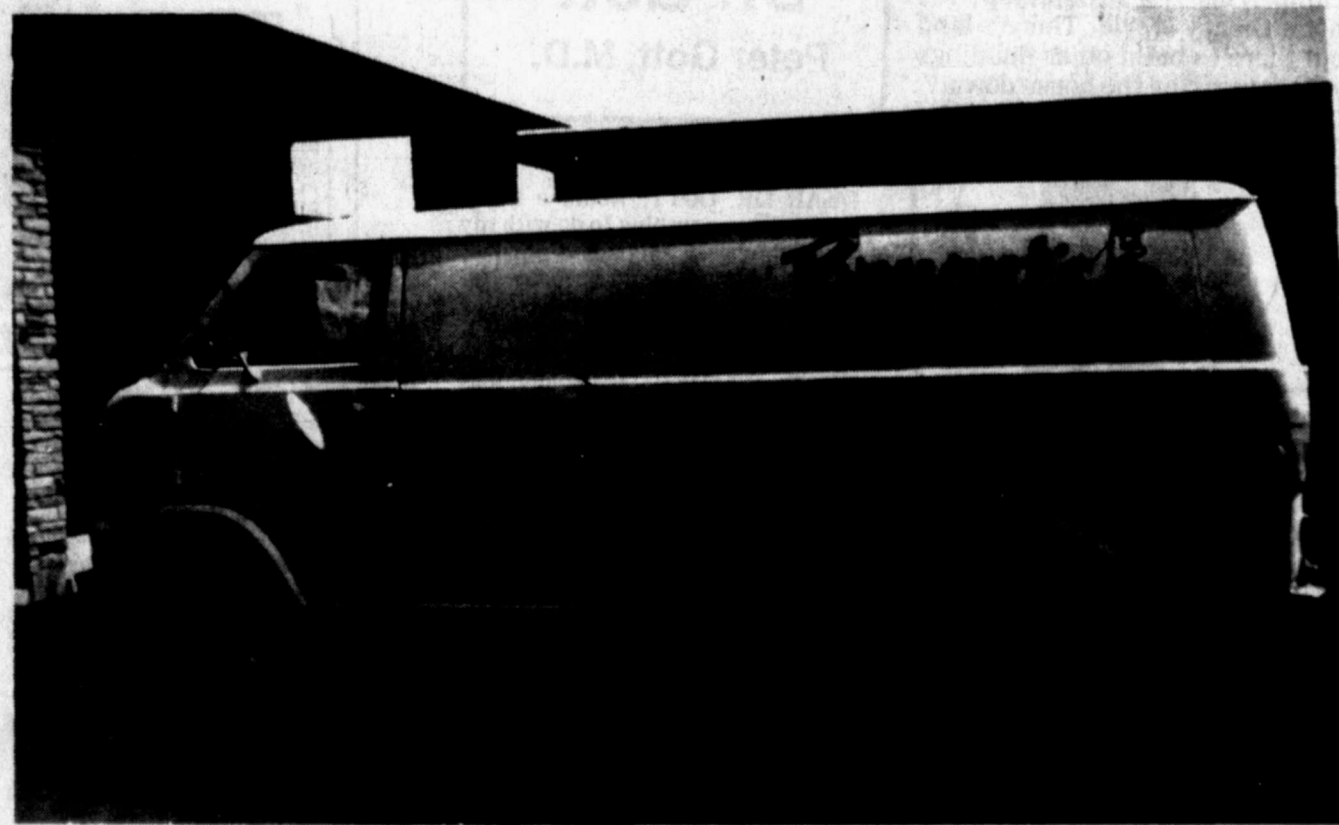

Bryant's Carpet Cleaning has served Snyder over 12 years. They have used or seen every type of carpet cleaning. Even though they could use a cheaper method, they prefer steam extraction. This method extracts the dirt and stains, whereas other methods leave the dirt in the carpet. For a clean and safe carpet, steam extraction is by far the best method.

Some methods leave the carpet wet, but they leave it only damp so it will dry in only a few hours. This is because they have the latest truck mount unit with more power than smaller units. The unit stays in the van and only the cleaning head goes into the house, eliminating spills in the home.

Most carpets need to be cleaned within a year, depending on the traffic. Not only can they be dirty, but after walking on the carpet awhile the carpet protector is worn off. They can clean the carpet and replace the carpet protector, which is similar to Scotch Gard.

In some cases they can clean the carpet as inexpensively as you can rent a machine. Many times when people try to do it themselves and the carpet won't come clean, they keep adding detergents to the machine. This results in the carpet becoming too wet. Also, the detergents leave a residue in the carpet and the carpet seems to get dirty quicker. Bryant's doesn't leave a residue in the carpet because they prespray with cleaners and when they go over the carpet with the cleaning head, they use only soft, hot water.

Carpets should be cleaned regularly if anyone in your home has allergies and also if you are moving into a different home.

For those who want to save money and not go to the trouble of moving furniture Bryant's can go around the furniture for as little

Schwarzenegger never changed his name

SUPERIOR, Wis. (AP) — A few years ago, Arnold Schwarzenegger told his University of Wisconsin-Superior professors that one day, everybody would know how to spell his name.

They told him he'd have to change it before folks could remember it.

That was in 1980, after Schwarzenegger received his bachelor's degree in business. The conversation occurred at a post-graduation gathering Lydia Binger, coordinator of the university's physical education program, had at her home.

Schwarzenegger's latest film, "Terminator 2: Judgment Day," sold $52 million in tickets its opening weekend. He was paid a reported $12 million.

When Schwarzenegger took correspondence courses at UWS, he already had won several Mr. Universe and Mr. Olympia titles and had been in the movies "The Villain," "Stay Hungry" and "Pumping Iron," a documentary about himself.

He completed the university's extended degree program much like any other student — with a few exceptions.

The program was only for Wisconsin residents, so school officials made Schwarzenegger a visiting faculty member.

And although Binger watched Schwarzenegger test for credit in swimming and archery, she waived testing him in bodybuilding.

Lucky actress

NEW YORK (AP) — A month ago, Julie Warner was doing dog-food commercials. Now, she's on the marquee with Michael J. Fox in "Doc Hollywood."

"I'm not saying I'm good. But I was lucky," Warner says in People magazine's Aug. 19 issue.

Warner, 26, plays a small-town ambulance driver who deters Fox from the glamorous life as a plastic surgeon in Beverly Hills.
