

Annual FFA banquet held

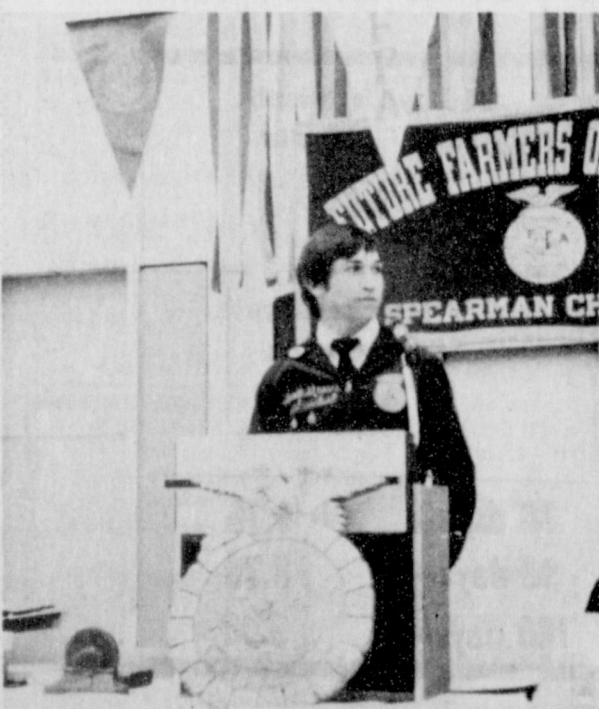

FFA members named for outstanding service this year include: L. to R., Scott Strawn, Travis Patterson, Byron Sutterfield, Gary Thomas, Pat Tucker, Danny Close, Greg Reimer, and Jon Garnett.

Dr. Tom Latta and Roy Bulls were named as honorary members of the Spearman FFA at the annual FFA Banquet held Monday night.

Travis Patterson introduces the guests at the FFA Banquet.

FFA President Scott Strawn and guest speaker, Tom McDonald, Area I FFA President, are shown above at the annual FFA Banquet.

Mike Dixon, last year's Spearman FFA President, introduces the speaker, Tom McDonald, at the FFA Banquet.

Downtown committee report:

The Downtown Revitalization Committee of the Spearman Chamber of Commerce has set some goals for Main Street.

The first major project is to make a park area at 320 Main. The plans are to clean up the vacant building, paint the walls and paint a mural on the walls. Then they plan to place park benches, planters and picnic benches in this area for people to use.

Also, at 217 Main the plans are to use old wood to make it attractive. Park Benches and planters could also be placed in the recessed area. Permission has been given by the landowners for these projects to be done.

The Downtown Revitalization Committee is composed of Martha Boyd, Chairman; Judy Nelson, Molly Holton, Irene Snider, Kay Vernon, Tami

Janzen, and Mary Brock. They would appreciate suggestions, labor, supplies or donations to help make this possible. If clubs would like to adopt a tree or park bench, these will be appreciated. Let's all work together to Put a Shine on Spearman and bring some pride to Main Street.

If you would like to work on these areas, or donate some old wood, new wood, paint or any other supplies to help make these areas attractive please call the Chamber of Commerce office at 659-5555 and we will have someone pick up the supplies.

Lee Roy Mitchell attends class reunion

The 1940 class of Saint Jo High School met April 30 in Gainesville, Tx. with their junior and senior year sponsor Mrs. Annette Lombardo Jackson.

There were thirty six in graduation class, eighteen boys and eighteen girls. Out of this class all boys were in the Armed services of their country and all returned.

Only two are deceased from this class although some have lost their mates.

There were thirty three present at the reunion with twenty two of those 1940 class members.

Lee Roy Mitchell of Gruver attended.

Dollars and sense lay the foundation for fortunes.

Amy Anderson selected finalist

Miss Amy Suzanne Anderson, age 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Anderson of Gruver, has been selected as a finalist in the 1983 "North Texas" National Little Miss Pageant to be held at the Quality Inn Central in Amarillo, Texas on July 9, 1983. The "North Texas" National Little Miss Pageant is the official state preliminary for the Texas National Little Miss Pageant to be held in August 1983 in Irving, Texas. The National Little Miss Pageant is affiliated with the Miss National Teen-ager Pageant which is in its 12th year and is nationally syndicated for television.

The winner of the pageant will receive a cash award, portrait, crown, banner, trophy and a sponsorship paid to the Texas National Little Miss Pageant in August.

Contestants will be judged on poise, personality and appearance. All contestants will draw or color a picture best describing their personality which will be a part of the personality judging. Contestants are 4-7 in age and come from various sections of the state.

Miss Anderson is being sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Troy Phillips of Brownfield, Texas.

Arts & Crafts Guild Meets

The Arts & Crafts Guild met Friday at Cattlemen's Restaurant with Mrs. W.L. Russell as hostess.

Attending were members, Mrs. Garrett Allen, Deta Blodgett, Fred Daily, Guy Fuller, Pope Gibner, Fred Hoskins, Bruce Sheets, Joe Trayler, Kiff White, and two guests, Mrs. John Berry and Mrs. Del Taylor of Lakin, Ks. and the hostess.

The meeting Friday, May 6 will be in the homes of Mrs. Joe Trayler.

Some TV viewers recently saw W.C. Fields in The Bank Dick. One scene in a saloon was better comedy than anything made by the U.S. industry since 1940.

Artist Of The Month

Jo Tolleson of Morse, Texas, is the Hansford County Library's Artist of the Month for May. Jo's display includes many lovely watercolors and oils, as well as pen and ink. Some of her painting surfaces are very unique. There is a striking windmill painted on an Aeromotor windmill blade. Old cedar strips, tree bark, barn wood, and tree slices from the backgrounds for paintings of chipmunks, raccoons & owls.

Jo began drawing and painting at an early age. She took lessons in oil from Priscilla Rea, took lessons from Hazel Rumberg watercolor lessons and ink drawing from Georgia Holt and J.W. Dillard.

Jo and her husband, Jack, lives with his family in Morse. A daughter, Donna Smith and family live in Mertzon, Tx. The Tollesons farm in the Pringle-Morse area and attend the Church of Christ in Stinnett.

The Artist of the Month is a service provided by the Spearman Twentieth Century Club, a Federated Club.

A "Center Piece" by Alma Remy

How time flies by--only four weeks until Hansford Roundup days and celebration and it is on May 28th. We will be having our Bazaar at the center. You must come on down and take a look at the many things we will have ready for sale. I'm sure you'll be surprised as well as happy to find just what you want for yourself or for a friend. These are all made by volunteer workers who come to work each Thursday of every month. This may be a work day, but it is also a fun day for all who came and join in with a covered dish luncheon at noon.

Hansford County ladies are good cooks as well as talented people who are getting things done for the center.

So, don't be the one who is on the outside of all the action--come down and be a part of it. Time is running out--You may have an idea we haven't thought of yet--do come!!

Ferrell's

return home

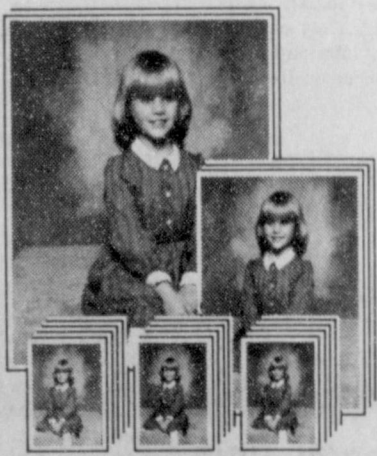

Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Ferrell have recently arrived home from visiting relatives Mr. and Mrs. Bob Russell of Midland and Mrs. Sammy Price and children of Brady.

They also attend Spring Fling No. 2 at the 4-H Center near Brownwood.

GEROGE COLLARD RETURNS HOME

George Collard who has been hospitalized for the past several months in Amarillo, following a stroke is now at home.

Combining printed or textured fabrics is the idea behind an exciting current fashion trend. These fabrics can be combined in a single garment, or several garments of contrasting fabrics may be worn together to create the effect.

Practice is the best way to get a feeling for which fabrics and prints work well together. There are no set rules for this technique, but here are several suggestions:

FOR PRINTS

1. Use a common color when mixing prints. Try to select the strongest or most dominant color or shade.

2. Fabrics using the same design in different sizes work well in combination. A wide stripe and a narrow stripe may be used together, for example.

3. A positive-negative effect can be created by using two calico prints that are identical except the print and background are reversed.

4. Related or similar prints often coordinate well. Just remember that overwhelming prints or prints with no predominant color scheme do not mix easily.

5. When mixing different patterns--like stripes with plaids--remember that each pattern should be about the same size and color.

6. Consider using a dot or stripe with a small scale print in the same color.

FOR TEXTURES

1. A "fuzzy" fabric will often mix well with a flatter surfaced one.

2. Consider the weight of each fabric if you are mixing them in one garment and make sure that they are not too different.

3. Arrange the fabrics with the most delicate on top and the heavier fabrics toward the bottom, for a more pleasing appearance.

4. Be sure to select compatible fabrics with the same care requirements.

Prints and textures can be tied together with binding, bias details, compatible lining, piping or foldover braid. Use accessories like belts, ties or scarves to accent color for a finishing touch.

Look at current fashion trends for ideas about mixing prints and textures for an exciting look to update your wardrobe.

Annual Palo Duro United Christian Ashram planned

The 10th Annual Palo Duro United Christian Ashram will be held July 8, 9 & 10 at the Ceta Canyon United Methodist Campground near Happy, Texas.

The United Christian Ashram movement was founded by the late evangelist, missionary Dr. E. Stanley Jones at Sat Tal, India in 1930. Ten years later in 1940 Brother Stanley bought the Ashram Retreat concept to North America. Today there are Ashrams held around the world including the International Ashrams which is held at a different location each year.

The Ashram (pronounced AH' Shram) is a disciplined Christian retreat where Christians of all denominations come to enrich their spiritual life and deepen their walk with God. The one and only creed the Ashram has is "Jesus is Lord."

The Ashram consist of daily Bible study led by the Bible Teacher and preaching done by the Ashram Evangelist. For this year's Palo Duro Ashram the Bible Teacher will be the Reverend Frank Warden, associate Pastor of the Highland Park United Methodist Church in Dallas. Reverend Warden is also the author of the Trinity Bible Studies which is being used by hundreds of churches across the United States. The Ashram Evangelist will be the Reverend Jimmie Pyles, Pastor of the First United Methodist Church in Jennings, Louisiana. Reverend Pyles is the South Central Regional Coordinator for the United Christian Ashrams. In addition to the leadership provided by the Reverend Warden and Reverend Pyles music for the Ashram will be led by Gary Barron from Lamesa, Texas and the Reverend Wes Putnam of Plainview.

Ashram activities are not limited to and for adults only. The Ashram is designed for the entire family. This year one of the special activities for

Climatologist warns Spring peak season for Texas tornadoes

COLLEGE STATION — Texas is entering the peak season for tornadoes, although the destructive storms can occur any time of year warns an expert who has spent more than 20 years studying state weather patterns.

Since 1951, more than 2,100 twisters have touched ground statewide during the months of April, May and June — the period each year when tornado activity is the highest, says State Climatologist John Griffiths, a Texas A&M University meteorologist.

May is the worst month, said Griffiths, because about 30 twisters occur then — more than a fourth of all Texas tornadoes that touch down in an average year.

But residents of Texas, especially newcomers, should be aware that atmospheric conditions which spawn tornadoes can form at any time of day or night, warned Griffiths.

Mobile homes and automobiles are two of the most dangerous places during a twister, said Griffiths. A third of all Americans who died during tornadoes last year were either in a trailer house or vehicle at the time.

Malnutrition hinders effectiveness of tuberculosis vaccine

COLLEGE STATION — Malnutrition apparently hinders the effectiveness of the world's only vaccine against tuberculosis and may decrease protection among the poor and underfed who need it most, say Texas A&M University medical researchers.

Tuberculosis, though not spreading rapidly, remains a persistent public health problem. It infects another 20 million people worldwide each year and causes up to 5 million deaths annually, many of them young children. In the United States, said McMurray, about 30,000 new cases of TB are reported a year, with 7 to 10 percent of them in Texas.

Recent tests at Texas A&M indicate malnutrition — especially lack of zinc and protein from red meat in the diet — significantly impairs the ability of the vaccine BCG to give protection.

TTI researchers study break-away wooden utility poles

COLLEGE STATION — Transportation researchers with the Texas A&M University System are working to rid the nation's roadways of a menace that most drivers probably never notice — wooden utility poles.

Under a contract with the Federal Highway Administration, Dr. Don Ivey and a team of researchers from the Texas Transportation Institute are developing ways to make the pole break away under impact by vehicles.

"More than 4,000 fatalities per year on our roads, streets and highways involve wooden utility poles," Ivey said. "This project has a potential to gradually reduce traffic fatalities by up to 4 percent in the United States."

TTI is a research agency of the Texas A&M University System.

Food sterilization by nuclear radiation extends shelf life

COLLEGE STATION — A Texas A&M University food scientist says low-level nuclear radiation wastes could be safely used to sterilize and preserve foods.

Radiation could be used at food processing plants to keep potatoes from rotting and extend their shelf life up to a year and a half, said Dr. E. E. Burns. It might also be used to keep milk from spoiling, to preserve strawberries and other fruits and vegetables for longer periods of time, or to keep bread fresher longer.

The process would use radiation from atomic waste to kill microorganisms, such as bacteria, fungi and certain enzymes, that cause food to spoil, he said.

Tolerance isn't a matter of conversation; it's the business of living.

Mother's Day

The observance of Mother's Day is a recent one in the United States, having begun only in 1907.

It was the suggestion of Miss Anna M. Jarvis, a Philadelphia school teacher, that at least once a year sons and daughters should pay tribute to mothers.

Miss Jarvis, a native of Grafton, West Virginia, arranged for special service in one of the Philadelphia churches and suggested white carnations be worn by those attending.

The observance, on the second Sunday in May (this year the 8th), spread to every state in the United States in only four years. This testifies to the sentiment for such an observance in this country.

In later years, the custom of wearing a white carnation on Mother's Day was changed. Those whose mothers were still alive wore red flowers.

First observed in the United States, Mother's Day has become an international occasion: mothers in every area of the world are now honored each year on Mother's Day.

More than anyone, the mother who cares for home and her children is destined to influence the character and future of the country.

This responsibility may include outside work plus a steady ordeal of sewing, washing, mending, cleaning and teaching.

It is to mothers who dedicate themselves to home, family and children that the country owes such a debt of gratitude. It's this mother who represents the finest in our civilization.

Sarpalius bill would aid farmers with gas rates

(AUSTIN)—The prices some Panhandle Farmers pay for Natural Gas are exorbitant, according to State Senator Bill Sarpalius. Senator Sarpalius says many farmers pay higher rates than the people who live within the city limits. "It is unfair that this group of farmers has been charged much higher rates when their work is so essential to our entire State and Nation", Senator Sarpalius says.

To help ease the problem now facing many Panhandle Farmers, Senator Sarpalius has introduced Senate Bill 936. Senate Bill 936 gives Farmers the same rights other customers have to contest Gas Companies' rate decisions. "This Legislation will not mean an increase in rates, but it will mean a company must justify any and all rate increases a company seeks before the rate can change," Senator Sarpalius says.

Some Panhandle Farmers pay as much as five dollars and more per thousand cubic feet of gas while other natural gas customers pay much less, sometimes less than a dollar per thousand cubic feet of gas. Senate Bill 936 won't raise rates for some customers and lower rates for others to make all rates equal; however, Senator Sarpalius says the bill will keep prices from escalating without justification from the company. The company will have to justify all rate increases to the railroad commission.

Texas A&M to be world's center for scientific sea drilling

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M University will become the world's center for scientific ocean drilling, directing research operations for the earth sciences community for the next decade, announced Texas A&M President Dr. Frank E. Vandiver.

As a part of the program, which includes a huge deep-sea drilling ship that can drill at depths in excess of 20,000 feet, Texas A&M will be the repository for thousands of valuable deep sea core samples that will attract to the campus a large number of scientists from around the world.

Vandiver said the university was chosen unanimously by Joint Oceanographic Institutions Inc. (JOI) to direct the multimillion dollar scientific operation for the National Science Foundation's Advanced Ocean Drilling Program. JOI is managing the program for NSF.

Steer Evaluation & Production Symposium set

The Steer Evaluation and Production Symposium at Texas A&M University May 20-21 is designed to teach youth how to evaluate steers through the eyes of the show judge.

Carcass traits along with performance characteristics are the principles that a successful judge uses in selecting steers in the show ring, says Jim Smith, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Accurate visual appraisal of market steers requires a thorough understanding of the factors affecting carcass quality and composition. Carcasses are the primary unit of trade in the meat industry, so a great deal of importance is placed on them in evaluating market steers. In essence, carcass value (dressing percentage, weight, quality and cutability) determines what a meat buyer would be willing to pay for live steers.

Differences in body composition as they relate to visual evaluation of market steers will be demonstrated at the symposium, says Smith. Dr. Dennis Stiffler, Extension meats specialist and others in Texas A&M's Department of Animal Science, will show this by "freezing" of different composition. Sections will be cut away from the "Frozen" steers to demonstrate differences in fatness (Amount and distribution) and muscling (size of ribeye and thickness of quarter).

Indicators of quality and composition are related to the relative amount and distribution of fat, muscle and bone, explains Smith. Fat is the most variable tissue and has the greatest impact on percentage yield of retail product. Some fat is necessary for an acceptable level of quality, but excess fat must be trimmed away and is costly to the industry. Muscle reflects the amount of saleable product while bone -- structure, soundness and type -- is functionally important and fundamental to optimum production efficiency.

Most individuals have trouble relating the live steer to its carcass, says Smith, and the symposium is designed to help in this effort. Use of "frozen" steers and carcasses will make it easier for individuals to identify differences in muscle and fat and to associate these differences to those of the live steer.

For further information on the steer clinic and registration forms, contact the county Extension agent's office.

A&M economist urges rapid deregulation of natural gas industry

COLLEGE STATION — The Reagan administration could save consumers money if it deregulated natural gas before summer instead of gradual deregulation over the next three years, says a Texas A&M University economist.

"Although the long-term deregulation plan will ultimately mean lower gas bills for consumers, deregulating natural gas before summer would have a more immediate effect," said Dr. S. Charles Maurice.

Maurice pointed out that present regulations are forcing pipeline and utility companies into buying higher-cost gas when lower-cost supplies are readily available. He said the long-term deregulation plan only provides incentives for companies to keep cheaper natural gas supplies off the market until price ceilings are lifted.

Deregulation will insure extra supplies of natural gas, which will only cause prices to come down, he said. The problem for proponents of decontrol, Maurice added, is to convince people that increases in price would be temporary.

'Music in the Morgan Manner'

Some four decades ago, the big band sound was "on a roll" toward a stratospheric peak until it ran head-on into World War II.

Whether cruising the clubs or dialing the radio, the sound young and old alike locked in on was "Music in the Morgan Manner."

As the haunting strains of "Does your Heart Beat for Me?" wafted out, couples clasped hands and looked starry-eyed at each other.

Wednesday night in Spearman—thanks to the vision of the Rotary Club—250 people were starry-eyed but over Music in the Morgan Manner rather than each other.

—And after all these years, Russ Morgan fans were still a mixed bag: some danced while others just held hands and listened.

It was that way the first time we heard the Russ Morgan orchestra. He was playing a Fourth of July concert on the outdoor gazebo bandstand at Forest Park in St. Louis.

What an era!

Of course there was the usual controversy over who started it. Some say Ben Pollack, some say Don Bestor. Most agree Benny Goodman put the show on the road with the first nightly radio coverage of his club appearances. He was also the first band to have couples quit dancing entirely and surround the bandstand just listening.

Russ Morgan had this effect, too.

As the demand for big bands proliferated, there was a search for the right sound. The development of the Glen Miller sound got the most attention but there were others before him. —And once you had your sound, your gimmick, you had to name it. Some of those names came from the sound, some came from a club where the band marked the most successful such as Glen Gray and the Casa Loma orchestra. His theme song was "Smoke Rings."

In a world dominated by the two-four beat of the "fox trot" there were some four-four rhythms and orchestra leader Henry Busse came up with a six-eight "Corn" rhythm that caused a sort of shuffle movement on the dance floor. It was an instant success. However Jan Savitt reproduced it in a four-four beat and coined the name "Shuffle Rhythm" first.

By the mid-thirties the compliment of a big band had standardized regardless of sound styling. There were three trumpets, three trombones, four reeds and a rhythm section of piano, guitar, drums and string bass. —Hence the name "Big Band." Of course, there were variations.

Some band leaders were instrumentalists, others were not. So, while the Benny Goodman band was strong on brass, his clarinet was still the big feature. His only serious challenge as a clarinetist came from Artie Shaw although there were others: Woody Herman, Jimmy Dorsey, Ted Lewis—and a Texas boy named Jimmy Joy who could play TWO clarinets at the same time!

Artists in brass developed, too: Russ Morgan, Tommy Dorsey, Bobby Byrne were the top trombonists—and while Russ Morgan was our favorite we cannot leave out "the big T"—Jack Teagarden. He was shortlived as a band leader preferring to make his mark in the brass section or in small Dixieland combos.

One of our most exciting big band evenings was when we paid to hear Tommy Dorsey and heard Russ Morgan in one of his most shining hours. He was a guest in the audience and Tommy Dorsey invited him on stage to play with them. Since Morgan's style was considered "sweet" then, Dorsey picked a ballad-type song.

The first eight bars, Russ Morgan's horn was pure honey, then...well, let present day Comedian Charlie Callas tell it. He was playing drums with Dorsey at the time:

"Russ Morgan puffed his cheeks and came down on that horn like a New Orleans tailgate rambler and he swung that poor little ballad on the rafters!...he swung it out the window!...he swung it through audience—and when he finally gave a double-note ending right with a paradiddle on the drums, there wasn't a dry thread on a single Dorsey sideman from keeping up with him!

"—And from that night on, among his fellow musicians Russ Morgan was no longer a "Schmalz" artist—he was a real ace on the 'bone!"

Russ Morgan was a virtuoso of the trombone AND the piano. Even though he preferred the trombone and had a regular piano sideman, many of his records have piano passages played by the maestro himself.

Russ Morgan had another talent that was more rare than being an instrumentalist in the big band era:

He could really sing!

But the least-known of Russ Morgan's talents was his ability as a song writer. He created several of the popular songs of his day. The most popular became so for an obvious reason: he composed his theme song, "Does Your Heart Beat for Me!" —And Russ Morgan had something else he always referred to as a blessing an almost exclusive among the big band leaders: —A son talented enough, motivated enough to continue the family tradition.

About the nearest approach to Jack Morgan's talent in the son of a big band leader—and he doesn't front a band today—is Peter Duchin, son of orchestra leader Eddie Duchin.

Eddie Duchin, like Glen Miller, joined the military to fight World War II. But Duchin was not in entertainment. Due to his family lineage, he spoke Russian and as the joint approach to Berlin began by allied forces and Russia, he was part of an eight-man delegation to Moscow to seek and accord for the coming situation.

Three successive days had ended in stalemate. In the evenings, the Russian hosts formally and politely provided food and entertainment. On the fourth night the American naval delegation was invited to contribute to the entertainment. None of Duchin's fellow officers on the mission knew his background and they looked helplessly from face to face.

Eddie Duchin arose, went to the piano and speaking in Russian for the first time, he commented on one of the Russian classics, its composer, then played. This developed into a four-hour concert.

The next day, the delegation reported for another hopeless session. The desired signed agreements were handed to them the minute they entered the hall. There was much hugging and kissing and toasting.

—And Eddie Duchin was offered Russian citizenship and a high rank if he would remain!

Just before his death, it is reported that Duchin commented:

"Wouldn't it be wonderful if world leaders could admit what big softies the Russian people are, to a man, when you speak their beloved language of good music!"

Where to the memories stop!

—They don't Ask Joel Lackey who has followed the fortunes of the Russ Morgan orchestra with a passion—a passion shared by many others for Morgan and other bands of this special time in the life of the United States.

Before closing, for the present generation—many of whom cannot understand the big band syndrome—consider their number, all in the same era, all obtaining fame, all amassing wealth. Let's go back to Ben Pollack, then...

Don Bestor, Abe Lyman, Benny Goodman, Woody Herman, Tommy Dorsey, Jimmy Dorsey, Guy Lombardo, Jan Garber, Glen Miller, Glen Gray, Hal Kemp, Chick Webb, Louis Armstrong, Artie Shaw, Harry James, Larry Clinton, Paul Whiteman, Bob Crosby, Richard Himber, Ray Noble, Henry King, Shep Fields, Will Osborne, Kay Kyser, Jimmy Lunceford, Wingy Manone, Charlie Barnett, Horace Heidt, Orville Knapp, Henry Busse, Jan Savitt, Del Courtney, Phil Harris, Ozzie Nelson...and of course, Russ Morgan.

—And that is forgetting about that many more!

How could we possibly forget Count Basie and Duke Ellington!

The Count is one of those that survived the war. So did Woody Herman and his "Woodchoppers." Ralph Marterie was one of the strongest matches for the good old days big bands...

—But, until now, there just wasn't a market for them.

Perhaps the most successful person to make the transition from the big band era to the post war years was a man who played trombone for Artie Shaw and did some real upbeat arrangements for the Shaw band.

Some of Artie Shaw's greatest fame—and wealth—centered around his record of the only Cole Porter tune considered a flop until Artie Shaw recorded his trombone player's arrangement of "Begin the Beguine."

In 1958, Columbia records released an album that was delightfully big band and totally instrumental: "Ray Conniff does the Bop."

Big Band buffs who couldn't stand the 'bop' made this a big seller.

Columbia had another gold mine called Mitch Miller. When Miller had finished with all the Rosemary Clooney, Champ Butler, Frankie Laine, Norman Lubof, Sing-along-with-Mitch successes and was ready to rest, he suggested to Columbia brass that Ray Conniff take his crown.

They argued. He dug from his collection some old 12-inch RCA records of Artie Shaw and the Gramercy Five. There, plain as day, were the Ray Conniff trombone and arrangements.

The rest is history! For almost two decades, Ray Conniff has OWNED the bank!

—Meanwhile, back in the Plains Shopping Mall in Spearman, Texas, some 250 people have dined, imbibed, danced, listened to Music in the Morgan Manner and remembered.

As Jack Morgan leads the band through an old favorite from the big band era in the style of the big band era, a man—unidentified by those around him—leans back in his seat, closes his eyes and is heard to say...

"Them's my people!"

There have been so many under-water films about sea life, in recent years, we think it's time to concentrate again on life out of water.

Contestants needed for Miss Hansford Escort Contest

Mothers of 4 and 5 year old girls and boys who would be interested in having their children participate in the Miss Hansford Escort Contest to be held Saturday, May 21, 1983 in the Spearman High School Auditorium, should pick up entry blanks at Kid's Stuff.

There will be a limit of twelve couples this year, and the contest is for girls and boys who are four years old prior to May 21, but who will not turn six before that date. If you have any questions about the Escort Contest, please contact either Jackie Pearson at 2608 or Lynna Renner at 3587.

Texas A&M receives over $2.7 million from former students

COLLEGE STATION — A record $2.7 million was given to Texas A&M University by its Association of Former Students last year in annual fund gifts from more than 30,000 contributors, announced Jack G. Fritts, who headed the Texas A&M alumni association in 1982.

Fritts said unrestricted funds totaling $2,620,000 represent a new all-time record for giving through the alumni organization. The remaining $123,267 was restricted to specific Texas A&M programs and wishes of the donors, he explained.

"Texas A&M is the envy of my colleagues throughout the nation and it is precisely for this reason," said University President Dr. Frank E. Vandiver. "The substantial support of our former students enables us to become involved in projects that other institutions only dream about. It is this support that has always placed Texas A&M a cut above the rest."

Texas A&M's 110,000 member alumni association has in recent years ranked among the leaders nationally in both per-capita and total giving.

Deceiving

"They look like such a happily married couple, John."

"You can't go by looks, dear. They probably say the same about us."

LOUISA'S LETTER

Dear Louisa,

My problem is this: I have a good many friends because I am interested in church work and civic projects.

I also socialize in the community so when any of the children or grandchildren of these friends get married I am invited and I feel like sending gifts to all of them.

The problem is that I am over sixty and live on a retirement amount so you can see what that does to my budget.

Now lots of these grandchildren live in other states and there is no chance of me attending the wedding. Should I send gifts to these children?

On the Go—Fla.

Answer:

There is no obligation to send any gifts in answer to an invitation unless you wish to.

However, if you attend a person's wedding, I am sure that you would be embarrassed if you had not sent a gift.

Why not settle on a simple gift and send the same thing to all of the grandchildren.

If their parents have received invitations from relatives and sent gifts to them you would, naturally, feel obligated to return the compliment.

AUSTIN — Current agricultural trucking regulations have forced Texas consumers to pay higher prices for Texas products. For example, if you wanted to send a livestock shipment from Stratford, Texas to Amarillo it would cost you about $250. If you sent a livestock shipment from Stratford to Liberal, Kansas, the price you would pay would be approximately $150. The distance between Stratford and Amarillo is the same, so why is the price different? The reason is that intrastate (within Texas) rates are regulated and interstate (across state lines) are not.

The problem exists not only in Texas but in several other states. Currently, about 20 states, including Texas, are working on legislation which would support trucking deregulation for agricultural commodities.

In Texas, the regulation of the trucking industry is in the hands of the Texas Railroad Commission. The Commission regulates the trucking industry by setting rates for hauling freight, deciding who can carry that freight and by setting insurance requirements. For instance, under the current law, if you decide to haul freight between Amarillo and Houston, you must first apply to the Railroad Commission for a certificate of public convenience and necessity.

We are sponsoring legislation in the Texas Senate which supports deregulation for agricultural commodities. Specifically, the legislation stipulates that a person transporting eligible agricultural commodities is not required to obtain a certificate of convenience and necessity if he or she holds an agriculture permit issued by the Commission. A person holding an agriculture permit would, under this legislation, be permitted to transport eligible agricultural commodities from any point of origin to any destination, within the state, at a competitive rate.

Free competition in agricultural trucking will lower the costs of delivering agricultural products and provide a profit to the producer with a lower total cost to the consumer. Lower cost to the agricultural producer means he can sell his delivered product at a lower price and still stay in business. Texas consumers will likely see more economical prices when free competition is allowed in agricultural trucking.

We feel this legislation will also open up agricultural trucking to a larger number of carriers and help drive down the cost of transporting agricultural products. There will be more intrastate business when the large grocers realize they no longer need to send their trucks out of state to buy produce and instead they can buy at home.

The legislation we have proposed will have a positive impact on the consumer, producer, shipper and trucker. We feel deregulation for agricultural commodities will help bring state regulation in line with federal regulation.

If you have any questions about this legislation or if we can be of any assistance to you, please let us know by writing, Senator Bill Sarpalius, P. O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

PARENT GUIDE

By Nancy Moore Thurmond
(Mrs. J. Strom Thurmond, author, Mother's Medicine)

Even though a child cannot see the wind, he can feel it. He can see what it does. The autumn wind takes the breath away. Its gusts blow leaves, hair, and loose soil.

Rocks are another good source of sensory stimulation. They come in different sizes, shapes, colors, textures, and composition. As your child looks at a rock, let him feel its surface.

How does the rock sound when it hits the brook? Does it break when it hits the ground? Does it bounce like a ball?

Mealtime is the key to developing a child's sense of taste. Eating should be a beautiful experience for your baby from the cradle on.

The dinner hour should be not only a happy, pleasant time for the entire family but also a nutritious learning experience.

Variety, color, shape, and imagination all play a part in meal planning, and will help the child develop an interest in food and a healthy attitude toward new flavors.

Much of child care revolves around mealtime. When fixing meals for a small child, do not forget to feed his five senses.

EATING OUT

By Rose Hughes
THE mark of a good restaurant is whether the owner or manager is one the scene watching, tasting, and listening.

EVEN the best facilities can produce improperly seasoned food, improperly cooked food and improperly mixed food—without supervision.

NOT long ago the writer dined in a family-owned restaurant where the manager was on the scene, clearing tables with the help and welcoming guests. But he didn't pay much attention to tasting.

THE portions were ample. Ingredients were quality, and plentiful. One felt a genuine regret that no one was watching over the seasoning.

AN order of beef barley and celery soup was tasteless. Yet the ingredients were there and the price was right.

THE waitresses at this restaurant obviously had no real training.

THEY were pleasant—which counts for much. In fact, one tip for this quality as much as for the food.

But the waitress on this occasion didn't know enough to bring the soup first—and brought it with the entree!

THAT could be eliminated if managers or owners would hold fifteen minute classes with waiters and waitresses weekly.

ONE tip to all waiters and waitresses is to bring steak sauce, ketchup or mustard, or whatever condiment is needed, before serving the hot meal.

AT least half the time the hot dish is brought and then the waiter or waitress goes after the condiments, while the food is getting cold.

ELEMENTARY procedure like this could be taught in a few minutes.

Know THE Weather

What is corpuscular radiation? Does it affect the earth's weather to any significant degree?

Corpuscular radiation is, in the simplest form, a sort of electric current.

It takes the form of charged particles which come into the earth's atmosphere from the sun. It is, then, a radiation from the sun.

Corpuscular radiation plays a major role in determining the earth's weather, according to many meteorologists.

It has the effect, when in an abundance, to heat the polar regions, as apart from the equatorial regions.

This produces extreme contrasts in the weather within short distances but generally makes for warmer, drier weather on most of the earth.

Scientists manipulate crop plants to produce own nitrogen

COLLEGE STATION — Soil and crop scientists at Texas A&M University are investigating methods of stimulating bacteria living among plant roots to supply extra nitrogen in soil and ultimately reduce the farmer's need for costly fertilizers.

Dr. David Zuberer of Texas A&M's College of Agriculture and other researchers here are exploring a biological process that may eventually allow food crops such as corn and wheat to produce more of their own nitrogen. Such research could one day save the natural gas needed to produce fertilizer, Zuberer said.

"Nitrogen is the plant nutrient required in greatest quantity and it is lacking in the soil of many Third World nations that can't afford fertilizer," he explained. "Developing a system in which soil bacteria could supply more nitrogen would be tremendous because nutrients could be supplied at lower costs."

Water pollution must be stopped, says researcher

COLLEGE STATION — The increasing pollution of the nation's fresh water supplies must be solved or it will literally be the death of us, says a nationally recognized authority on soil physics at Texas A&M University.

Dr. Kirk Brown, who conducts pollution research for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and has testified before national and state legislative environmental committees, said recently that there are alternatives to disposing of hazardous wastes in underground landfills.

"The problem could be avoided by not placing waste in landfills," Brown says, "but this would necessitate intensification of waste reduction, recycling incineration and land treatment as options for disposal."

Brown said some estimates are that only about two percent of our total usable groundwater has been contaminated by toxic chemicals.

"That doesn't sound like much," he said, "but if the aquifer you use for watering your livestock or for drinking water is contaminated, it looks more like 100 percent."

Harsh DWI penalties may be ineffective, safety educator warns

COLLEGE STATION — Harsh penalties for DWI convictions could do more harm than good if implemented, says a Texas A&M University safety education expert.

"My only fear is that people will overreact and make the penalties so strong that they will be ineffective," said Dr. Maurice Dennis, head of the Texas A&M Safety Education Program and co-author of the curriculum used by most Texas court-mandated educational programs for DWI officers.

"It (driving while intoxicated) is still not looked on as a purposeful act. If we said first offenders would all get five years at Huntsville (state prison), juries wouldn't convict. They're not going to take a chance on ruining this person's life because they're thinking, 'That could be me,'" said Dennis.

Dennis said the emphasis should be on higher rate of convictions with lighter sentences—for example, a mandatory 72 hours in jail for first offenders, plus participation in alcohol education.

Wind tunnel testing helps IH improve trucks' gas mileage

COLLEGE STATION — Truck designers at International Harvester are finding clues to greater fuel efficiency blowing in the wind at Texas A&M University.

The university's wind tunnel has been used for the past two years to help the firm improve gas mileage for its 18-wheelers.

In late 1982, International Harvester announced a successful coast-to-coast run of its largest Class 8 line-hauler, which averages 8.26 miles per gallon, about 2.5 mpg better than conventional trucks.

"We feel the increase in efficiency was due about two-thirds to aerodynamic changes and one-third to a better engine," said M. Eugene Olson, Harvester's project development engineer for aerodynamics.

Texas A&M's wind tunnel is operated by the Texas Engineering Experiment Station (TEES), the engineering research arm of The Texas A&M University System. The tunnel has been used to test projects ranging from the space shuttle to Dallas' Reunion Tower.

Texas A&M awarded $8.1 million contract to continue Gulf study

COLLEGE STATION — The largest single research contract ever awarded Texas

A&M University — $8.1 million to monitor the environmental impact of salt discharges in the Gulf of Mexico — was announced recently by the Department of Energy.

The project is part of the federal Strategic Petroleum Reserve Program in which salt is leached out of huge underground caverns along the Texas and Louisiana coasts and discharged 12 miles offshore through a pipeline. The caverns will then be used to store 750 million barrels of oil to be available in case of a national emergency.

"We have been involved in the largest environmental monitoring program in the Gulf of Mexico in history," said Dr. Roy Hann, head of the Texas Engineering Experiment Station's environmental engineering division.

Results of the earlier work, funded through a $2.6 million grant, showed only minor changes in marine life from the discharges.

The contract effectively extends the project for two and a half years, said Hann.

SOVIET COSMONAUTS

MOSCOW — The Soviet government launched a new first in space missions recently, sending up three cosmonauts for the first extended stay by so large a crew aboard one of its orbiting space stations.

FRENCH & DEFENSE

The French government recently proposed a five-year, $113.7 billion defense package that emphasizes nuclear weaponry.

The package included new medium-range missiles similar to those under discussion by U.S. and Soviet arms negotiators.

1980 census: 64 Americans average each square mile.

Curbing Bureaucratic Spending

Once again this year legislation has been introduced in Congress to stop heavy, last-minute spending by bureaucrats in government departments at the end of the fiscal year.

What happens, often, is that at the end of the fiscal year many agencies and departments realize they are not going to need all the money they requested--and were given by Congress.

So that Congress won't see they over-estimated their needs, which might result in lower appropriations, to hide the fact that they don't really need as much as they have been getting, a hasty effort is made to spend everything left in the final days of the fiscal year.

Of the several bills introduced, one by Congressman Bill Dickinson (R-Ala) is typical. It would limit governmental and departmental spending in the last quarter of the fiscal year to 25 percent of the total yearly appropriation for the agency or department.

Dickinson points out that in recent years some government agencies have spent almost half their yearly budget in the last two months of the fiscal year--August and September.

Lindbergh & May, 1927

Charles Augustus Lindbergh thrilled his countrymen and the world when he made the first non-stop flight from New York to Paris on May 20, 1927.

It took him over 33 hours and when he landed on the 21st in Paris he had flown 3,600 miles.

The Spirit of St. Louis, his monoplane, is now to be seen in the air and space museum in Washington.

His account of that flight, and several books by his also-distinguished wife, Anne Lindbergh, are widely read.

What is not widely known today is that Lindbergh tried his best to keep the United States out of World War II, fearing that strengthening communist Russia would produce a world more dangerous to America than one with a strong Germany.

But when the nation was attacked, he volunteered and though kept in the shadows by President Roosevelt, who then disliked him, he performed valuable military service for his country.

Earlier, of course, he and his wife had lost their son in a celebrated kidnapping case, which resulted in the executing of Bruno Hauptman for the four-year old's death.
