First Carter budget called 'lean, tight'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today sent Congress the first complete budget of his administration, describing it as "lean and tight" but sufficient to meet the country's needs.

The president's proposed 1979 budget calls for outlays of just over $500 billion, making it the first half-trillion-dollar budget in the nation's history. Spending in the current fiscal year is projected at $462 billion.

The proposed deficit in the 1979 budget will be a near-record. Carter disclosed last week it would be almost as high as the $82 billion deficit in fiscal 1978, which would make it the third highest ever.

The record deficit for any single year was $66.4 billion in fiscal 1976. The 1979 fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

The proposed budget includes Carter's plan to cut taxes by $25 billion beginning on Oct. 1, with $17 billion in tax cuts for individuals and $8 billion for business.

Carter's proposed budget reduces the federal share of the nation's Gross National Product from 22.6 percent in 1978 to 22 percent next year.

Carter said his goal is to reduce the federal share of GNP to 21 percent eventually.

The defense share of the proposed budget increases somewhat more than the rest in terms of real purchasing power. Carter asked for future spending authority for defense of about $126 billion, and somewhat less for actual 1979 outlays.

Defense outlays this year are projected at about $105 billion.

The budget also includes Carter's previously disclosed jobs programs.

The huge deficit proposed for 1979 moves Carter further away from his campaign commitment to balance the budget by fiscal 1981. And Carter acknowledged in his economic report to Congress last Friday that it is increasingly unlikely this goal can be met.

Plan includes modified goals

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's budget for 1979 sets an unemployment goal of 5.8 percent and an inflation target of 6 percent, both within two years.

It also says the nation's gross national product will hit the $2 trillion mark for the first time in 1978.

And in a projection that may dismay some Americans, the budget indicates it may be impossible to ever get unemployment back to the old full employment level of 4 percent.

It said full employment now would be 4.9 percent unemployment, and that this might decline to 4.7 percent by 1983, but probably not below that.

"These rates are consistent with a 4 percent rate in 1955, adjusted for changes in the composition of the labor force toward groups that typically experience higher rates of unemployment," said the budget documents, which were sent by Carter to Congress today.

Carter's goals for the next few years are to gradually reduce both unemployment and inflation by one-half of 1 percentage point each year. The nation's jobless rate was 6.4 percent in December and inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, was 6.5 percent during 1977.

Here are Carter's specific economic goals for the next two calendar years:

1978 — Unemployment, 6.2 percent in the fourth quarter; inflation, 6.1 percent, and the GNP, up 4.7 percent.

1979 — Unemployment, 5.8 percent; inflation, 6 percent, and GNP, up 4.8 percent.

While those goals may translate into what seems like a slow rate of improvement to many Americans, administration economists believe it is the best that can be done without igniting new inflation or worsening unemployment, since both are to be dealt with simultaneously.

Carter's economic advisers say his $25 billion tax cut program for 1978 is essential to maintaining economic growth in the 4.5-5 percent range that will make it possible to achieve even the modest goals he has set.

The GNP, which is the total value of goods and services produced in the economy, grew by 4.9 percent in 1977, after discounting for inflation. Administration economists say it would slump to 3.5 percent in 1979.

Jury selection begun for Yarbrough trial

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Former Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough lost three motions and won only one this morning in his forgery and perjury trial.

District Judge Mace Thurman set jury selection for 2 p.m.

Thurman denied defense motions to question prospective jurors individually, to throw out the indictment and to keep the jury together after it has been selected.

The judge granted a motion to allow the jury to set punishment in the event Yarbrough is found guilty.

Waggoner Carr, Yarbrough's lead attorney, told the judge the individual questioning wouldn't take long because it would be made "on the one subject of the effect the news media might have had on them on the guilt or innocence of the defendant."

Carr said one remark by one juror to the others about what he had read might decide the case.

'Deceit' charged

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menahem Begin flung a charge of deceit back at Egypt today, telling the Israeli Parliament that Egyptian negotiators reneged on a promise of demilitarization in most of the Sinai Peninsula.

Defending Israel's behavior during the now-stalled peace talks, Begin's statements to the Knesset were studded with new recriminations of the Egyptians.

The prime minister told the Knesset that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat agreed during his visit here in November that the Sinai Peninsula, once returned to Egypt, should be demilitarized from the strategic Gidi and Mitla passes to the Israeli border.

But when military talks opened in Cairo earlier this month, Egypt went back on this promise and said the demilitarized zone should start only 40 kilometers (23 miles) from the Israeli border, Begin said.

"This is a difference of 140 to 160 kilometers," he said. "This difference is all the world to us ... we will not leave any chance that the Sinai will again be a basis for aggression ... not one Egyptian soldier will cross the Mitla and Gidi passes."

In a speech Saturday to the Egyptian Parliament, Sadat accused the Israelis of deceiving him by agreeing first in preliminary discussions that Jewish settlements in the Sinai were a side issue and then making them a central issue when full-fledged talks began.

More trees to arrive

The pecan tree sale sponsored by The Reporter-Telegram and the VIP Committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce has been so successful that the trees temporarily have been sold out.

However, another shipment of 1,700 trees is enroute to Midland, and the sale will resume at 4 p.m. Wednesday. So far, more than 4,500 pecan trees have been purchased since the sale began on Jan. 21.

The trees are being sold at a special price of $8 as a project to help beautify Midland.

Newest figures confirm Sunbelt's rapid growth

By H. JOSEF HEBERT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many Americans no longer are just dreaming about a carefree life in the sun or the mountains. They're going there at ever increasing rates, says the U.S. Census Bureau.

In addition to rapid growth in the "Sunbelt" states, the government agency said Sunday in an interim report, there have been significant population shifts into the western mountains and the more rural northern states of New England.

"We were surprised at the very strong growth of the mountain states," said Donald Starsinic, of the Census Bureau's population division.

Starsinic, whose office compiled the 1977 statistics, said the romanticism of the slow paced lifestyle in the western mountains probably has had much to do with the shift.

And he noted that Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire — which have the same attractions — also showed population increases, although the other New England states are losing people.

"These states are not tremendously built up. There's plenty of room for expansion, more pleasant living, perhaps cheaper living," Starsinic said in an interview.

The Census Bureau said the population of the nation as a whole grew 6.4 percent between 1970 and 1977, to 214,689,000.

The growth in the Sunbelt and corresponding population decline in the industrial belt of the Northeast and North Central regions has for some time been apparent. The new figures confirm the trend.

The statistics said California had the largest increase in population, with 1.9 million more people than in 1970, a 9.6 percent boost. Florida and Texas were close behind, with 1.6 million new residents each.

But Starsinic said the latest figures show the desirable regions "are spread around a lot more" than had been expected.

While Florida had a 22 percent increase in the number of people coming into the state, its rate of growth declined by one-third during the past two years, the bureau said.

At the same time, a string of mountainous states stretching from Montana to Arizona and New Mexico showed an overall population increase of 21 percent, 11.9 percent of that attributed to people coming from other parts of the country.

Increasingly, said Starsinic, states such as Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona and Nevada in the West and Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire in New England have become more popular. Alaska had the highest increase, 34.6 percent, but much of that was attributed to the oil pipeline boom, the bureau said.

In contrast, each of 10 industrial states of the Northeast and North Central regions has less people today than seven years ago or showed only slight increases well below the national average.

The Census Bureau said the shift in population — if it holds up until the official census in 1980 — would mean a change in congressional district lines, with nine seats in the House of Representatives shifting.

Following current trends, said Starsinic, Florida and Texas would each gain two seats, and Arizona, California, Oregon, Tennessee and Utah would each gain one. New York would lose three seats, Ohio would lose two, and Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania and South Dakota each would lose one.

Odessa attorney, struck by vehicle, dies Sunday

BIG SPRING — A well-known Odessa attorney died Sunday after being struck by a vehicle six miles east of Big Spring on the north service road of Interstate Highway 20.

A spokesman for the Department of Public Safety said Raymond C. Stoker, 71, had parked his car in the west-bound lane of Interstate 20 and left his vehicle to obtain assistance at a nearby residence.

A wrecker was sent from Big Spring to remove Stoker's vehicle from the traffic lane. Stoker rode back to his vehicle in the wrecker, the DPS spokesman said.

The driver of the wrecker parked on the shoulder of the north service road. According to the DPS, Stoker ran behind the wrecker, across the service road and was struck by a vehicle driven by Clifford Holt Balzer of Big Spring.

Stoker was pronounced dead at the scene by Big Spring Peace Justice Bob West.

The accident was investigated by Trooper David Jones of Big Spring.

Crane speech extols virtues of laughter

CRANE — To call him the "laughing preacher" would be apropos.

He laughs, kids around and tells yarns in trying — and succeeding — to make others laugh.

And in doing so, this laughing-est preacher, Gil Stricklin, would leave a message. After all, that's part of a minister's mission.

He was in Crane the other night to earn a tidy bundle of bucks as the mainline speaker at the annual Crane County Chamber of Commerce banquet.

Naturally, he poked some fun at some "local characters" to get the 180 banquet goers interested in what he had to say.

Among those he "picked on" was Doug Damron, a town-slicker whom Stricklin described as the man of the eight Cs: Crane County Chamber of Commerce Cow-Chip Chunking Champion.

Damron, a former chamber president, made his mark and dubious sporting fame as a top-notch chip chunker a while back.

The folks got a kick out of that.

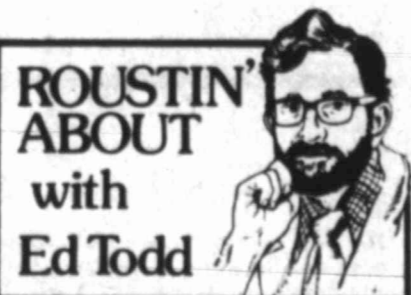

Still in his warm-up period, the comedian of the hour turned to the portly Larry Sheppard, the funeral home director who had just completed his year-long stint as president of the chamber of commerce.

The thoroughly Baptist Stricklin said Sheppard has the looks of a man of import:

— The graying at the temple gives him "the look of intelligence."

— His stout build and paunchiness give him "the look of success."

— And his "real tight underdrawers" give him "the look of concern."

Sheppard and all got a nice chuckle out of that. He can take the ribbing.

After pretty well localizing things, Stricklin got down to his text, which was about "the most precious possession."

"What you don't use (of those fleeting seconds) will be taken away from you" and "your bank of time ... (has) no carry over," said Stricklin, a former staffer-follower of evangelist Billy Graham. At present, he's up in the hierarchy of the Southern Baptist General Convention in Dallas.

He told joke after joke about preachers and wives. Of course, his own wife, who wasn't there to hear, was the butt of most of the joking.

Occasionally, a tale or a "dig" went flat.

"That joke wasn't born here, but it sure died here," he'd say on the rebound.

Stricklin talked and talked about the "faulty use of time." And he devoted about 90 percent of his podium time to talking about laughter.

His theme was this:

— Take time to laugh.

— Take time to live.

— Take time to love.

"He who laughs most lives longer," said Stricklin. With that, he coupled good dieting, a workable exercise program and the ability to adjust to situations.

In the few moments left, he talked about taking "time to live" and taking "time to love."

"Live life well, live enthusiastically," he exhorted.

"Don't wake up one day and find out that life has taken off without you," he said. . . . "You see, you only have today. That's the only day God has promised you."

At long last, "laughing preacher" Stricklin left his joking behind and spoke directly of love.

He quoted psychologists Sigmund Freud and Erich Fromm on love, and, finally, he quoted from the Bible.

"God is love," he said. "The Bible said it best."

Double-dealing

Thanks to the now-famous boom microphone in New Delhi, the world knows that President Carter is going to send Indian Prime Minister Desai a "cold and very blunt" letter protesting India's resistance to international safeguards on nuclear technology.

But the world also knows that President Carter is going to sell enriched uranium and heavy water to India, and it needed no fortuitously placed microphone to pick up this bit of intelligence. Mr. Carter announced it himself, loud and clear and before the Indian Parliament, which erupted with jubilant applause. And, significantly, he announced it scarcely two days after he had consummated a deal in Tehran to sell six to eight nuclear reactors to Iran.

The question arises — which does Mr. Carter wish to accomplish more, the curbing of nuclear proliferation or currying favor abroad by exporting of nuclear technology.

Curbing nuclear proliferation, of course, has been one of the president's main themes since his inauguration, and we do not doubt that it still is. To suggest that he's now out to export nuclear technology is, admittedly, to exaggerate the significance of his sales to India and Iran. Even so, Mr. Carter's announced goal of halting the spread of nuclear materials isn't quite what it used to be.

This much can be gathered by considering what happened to a bill designed, in compliance with a White House request, to set up strict procedures governing nuclear export licensing. The bill originally required "timely warning" for approval of any reprocessing of U.S.-supplied nuclear materials. Timely warning simply means a long enough time period for the United States to become aware of any illicit diversion of plutonium, which is retrieved through reprocessing of spent fuel, and to act against it, before a bomb can be made.

The administration, however, opposed such a tough requirement and haggled with Congress until the timely warning standard fell between the cracks of flexibility this past fall. Flexibility, said the administration, was what it needed in dealing with other nuclear nations — like India and Iran, for example — and so the bill, as now rewritten, allows reprocessing if, in the judgement of U.S. authorities, it won't increase appreciably the dangers of proliferation.

In a world rushing pell mell toward nuclear power (by conservative estimates, more than 1,000 reactors will be operating by the end of the century), perhaps it is just as well that Mr. Carter's goal of curbing nuclear proliferation isn't so hard and fast anymore. It can be argued persuasively that, if the world is going to go nuclear anyway, it ought to buy the technology from us, the better that we might have some control over it.

What puzzles us, though, is why the president is not as flexible about nuclear energy at home as he is abroad. Why does Mr. Carter persist in suspending U.S. production of plutonium; and why does he oppose the Clinch River (Tenn.) breeder program? Why, especially since these actions were intended as signs to the world that the U.S. means business about de-emphasizing nuclear energy? And why the nuclear cutbacks at home when the rest of the world is so unimpressed by them?

Maybe now Mr. Carter will start to bend a little at home; maybe now he will concede the need for plutonium in the United States. For our part, we'll welcome some presidential flexibility on this matter, even through the instrument of some reporter's boom microphone.

Oriental heroin said on rise

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Quiet panic is rippling across the American drug scene because a Washington-financed crackdown south of the border is converting "Mexican mud," the staple of U.S. heroin addicts, into milk sugar sludge.

The success of the war on Mexico's heroin poppy fields can be demonstrated by one cold-turkey fact: In the last 18 months, laboratory samples of street heroin seized in our cities has shown the purity level dropping from 13.5 to 4.5 percent. Before the crackdown, Mexican drug wholesalers delivered a product containing 70 percent pure heroin and 30 percent adulterants, usually milk sugar. Now U.S. narcotics agents are confiscating shipments that test out a 16 percent heroin and 84 percent dilutants.

At the same time, the price of even the understrength heroin has almost doubled in the past two years, undercover agents report. There was a time when Mexican wholesalers in the narcotics trade had to deliver their product as Caesar's wife, and the street-corner peddler risked his life if he "cut" his illicit merchandise too much. This is no longer true.

Police sources have told us that if a dealer fobbed off 3 percent heroin to heavy users just a white back, "he would have been killed." But today all street heroin is heavily diluted; the stronger stuff is simply no longer available.

This is a double-edged development. First, the good news. The U.S.-Mexican campaign to stamp out heroin poppy growing in the remoteness of Mexico's Sierra Madre mountains seems to be succeeding. According to the Drug Enforcement Administration, 47,063 poppy fields, representing more than 10 potential tons of heroin, were eradicated in the past year alone by spraying, burning and patrolling.

So, now for the bad news. Some top drug abuse experts fear that the drastic decline in heroin purity may touch off an increased crime spree by heavy users in this country. Hard-core addicts will have to steal and rob more to support their more expensive habit.

One veteran narcotics officer, warning that the adulterated product would bring more drug-inspired crimes, explained: "The new hypes don't mind the weak stuff. But for the old hypes, nothing is strong enough. Hard-core holdouts are going to continue to use more heroin and steal more."

The experts also anticipate that the drying up of the Mexican connection may cause the spread of heroin production further afield where U.S. influence is less persuasive. The powerful Mexican Mafia families are looking elsewhere for profits, lending their smuggling expertise, for example, to developing the stealthy shipment of South American cocaine into the United States.

CHARLEY REESE:

Some persons had rather 'lie around' than work

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — Winter Garden, Fla., is one of the citrus growing areas of the Sunshine State and right now growers and harvesters are having trouble finding enough farm workers to pick the fruit.

The reason they are having trouble finding enough farm workers to pick the fruit is that the federal and state governments have made it too easy to collect welfare, unemployment and food stamps.

In plain words, some of these people would rather lie around and eat up your tax dollars than work.

Before you drown yourself in tears of sympathy for the poor Florida farm worker — and there's been so much propaganda it's easy to do — let me tell you how much they can earn picking oranges in the sunshine.

They can average about $3 an hour. One payroll I checked showed a man and his son earning $264 in five and a half days; a mother and two daughters, $276; and a man working alone, $192 for the same period of time.

That is not bad pay for a job that requires no education and no expensive training and no great amount of experience. The growers, by the way, provide workmen's compensation and unemployment taxes. Some of the larger corporations even provide health insurance.

One frustrated grower recently visited the food stamp office and found over 50 healthy-looking young and middle-aged men in the line. Not one wanted to work. Not one knew anybody who did.

The law requires that people drawing most types of public assistance be actively in pursuit of a job, but there are so many loopholes and the bureaucrats are so nonchalant, the requirement is a farce.

Most liberals refuse to face this but some human beings are just plain sorry and by that I mean they are lazy and devoid of both pride and ambition. They work only when they have to. When the government removes the incentive to work, they flat won't. They'll sit at home and spend their government dollars and they will lie through their teeth to get them.

The only way you can get these sorry types off their rear ends is to make it impossible for them to draw welfare. Then, when they get hungry enough, they'll go to work.

I don't think any American objects to providing public assistance to the truly needy — to the people who honestly can't find work, to the elderly and to the disabled. But it's long past the time we should have stopped feeding the lazy.

If we do not stop this insanity, our economic system will collapse. It's not a question of more government programs. Social workers and do-gooders can't motivate these people. It's simply a question of personal values. They do not value work and apparently, neither do the liberals who are always making excuses for their sorrows.

There is a bit of irony. If the socialists and the stupid do-gooders succeed in destroying the free enterprise system, the totalitarian government that will inevitably follow will put these farm workers back into the fields — for less pay and at the point of a gun.

They are cutting their own throats and if they had ever visited the cane fields of Cuba, the potato fields of Russia, or the rice paddies of Red China, they would see what's in store for them. There are no social workers in those fields; just armed guards.

The difference between these louts in the welfare line and a good American is illustrated by the experience of a man I know who is now a successful businessman. When he first arrived in Florida from Long Island with no job and no friends, he asked the man who put gas in his car for a job. When he went to eat, he asked the restaurant manager for a job. Within two days, he was working in a plant unloading and loading heavy sacks of fertilizer.

That is the spirit of the great American worker who has produced the wealth these parasites are living on. I think when you fail to condemn the lazy, you betray the worker, and when you take the earnings of the worker and give to the worthless you are committing an immoral act.

Not all of Florida's farm workers are like these bums. Many, particularly the Mexican-Americans, are solid family people who are both industrious and frugal. They, too, are betrayed when government showers dollars on the lazy.

If we are to keep the American economy working, the do-gooders are going to have to take a crash course in economics. Government does not produce wealth; it merely confiscates it from those who do and then redistributes it.

The producers of wealth — of the food and other material goods — are the workers and owners and investors. If the government continues to rob the worker to feed the non-worker, then one day we're going to have a strike that will see both management and labor walk out the door.

Then both the bureaucrats and the parasites will starve.

INSIDE REPORT:

Closed-door talks in Rhodesia show marked success

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Contrary to reports of deadlock and rancor, closed-door talks in Rhodesia aimed at moderate black government are showing conspicuous success — posing a challenge to official U.S.-British policies against any "internal settlement" presided over by Prime Minister Ian Smith.

Confidential official minutes reveal that prior to holiday adjournment Dec. 21, the only major disagreement was over white minority representation in parliament, and even on that the shape of a final compromise seemed to be emerging. Even more impressive is what the transcripts reveal about the tone of the dialogue between the Smith government, formerly dedicated to white supremacy, and black nationalists who have done time in Smith's prisons.

Consider this Dec. 14 statement by Smith: "It is a fact that the (Rhodesian) civil service system is white. It is also a fact that the education system is against the blacks. I commit myself to seeing that no more blacks are denied these things and more blacks come into these services. There are dramatic changes to take place. We don't want (armed) revolution because it is not good for us. Have faith."

"If I didn't have faith, I wouldn't be here," replied the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, the black leader who returned to Rhodesia last summer after two years in exile.

Most revealing about the official minutes are not predictable disagreements but the absence of rancor. Aside from mutual complaints by Evans Novak Smith and the blacks about "provocative" language, the only truly nasty encounter was between the two rival black leaders, Sithole and Bishop Abel Muzorewa, over a side issue: which of them was leaking reports of the negotiating sessions.

If this congeniality produces an agreement, Washington and London will be on the spot. Disdaining the Salisbury talks, the U.S. and Britain insist that Joshua Nkomo — political leader of a Soviet-backed guerrilla force — must be present. Yet Nkomo has turned down pleas from Sithole to join the talks and is sustained in that intransigence by Lord Carver, British Commissioner-designate for Rhodesia under the Anglo-American peace initiative. Currently in South Africa, Carver has attacked in advance any settlement at Salisbury.

The talks in Salisbury began Dec. 9 with Bishop Muzorewa proposing a British chairman to preside. The lack of strict racial alignment became clear when Smith, Sithole and tribal chiefs all opposed that suggestion.

Smith, bowing to black insistence on 18-year-old voting, abandoned a 21-year voting age. The next disagreement came over Smith's proposal to "retain" Rhodesia's civil service system while the black leaders wanted to "establish" one.

"The use of the word 'establish' will cause fear among whites because it connotes the doing away with what's here," Smith argued. He suggested a compromise with the word "maintain" — in the sense of maintaining "good standards." Sithole replied: "I do not quarrel with 'maintain' in light of the explanation. Let's go on. I will compromise."

Quickly, the negotiators agreed on constitutional "safeguards" for the civil service, judiciary, pensions and other aspects of black majority government in the new "Zimbabwe." They fendered on Smith's demand for a guaranteed one-third white membership in Parliament, needed to protect these safeguards.

Muzorewa on Dec. 13 accepted the one-third "blocking" proposal but insisted that white legislators be elected by all voters, dominated 30 to 1 by blacks. "If white representatives are to be chosen by common roll," Smith reported, "the blacks can elect puppets. It is a non-starter."

"I appeal to you all to use less provocative language," Sithole admonished Smith. He later agreed with Smith that "if white representatives are to truly represent white interests, they must be chosen by whites." But Sithole wanted only a one-fifth white bloc in parliament, insufficient for the one-third needed to block changes in the new constitution. He explained: "As soon as you make parliament subject to blocking by a racial group you create strife."

Deadlock. Claiming he had heard "through my bush telegraph" of previous black agreement to the proposals now rejected, Smith declared Dec. 15: "Without a blocking third, I won't even start to sell anything to the whites... We will be laughed at." Sithole replied the "blocking third" would be derided by the outside world as a "sellout deal."

But in the Dec. 21 session preceding holiday adjournment, signs of hope appeared. Asserting that "we are not dogmatic on the method of election," Muzorewa indicated acceptance of a separate ballot for whites for the first few years but with whites limited to one-fifth, not one-third, of Parliament. Sithole seemed to suggest that, to begin with, a one-fifth vote could block constitutional changes.

That drew rough outlines for possible compromise as negotiations resumed Jan. 10. But what really points to compromise is the spirit expressed at the talks by a legal adviser to Muzorewa named Dumbuchena: "There is a difference between this conference and those before. For the first time, we have a measure of understanding and agreement." It is a difference that London and Washington so far refuse to appreciate.

DEAR ABBY
Duck dinner deal 'fowl'

By ARIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A group of us men were lunching together at our club when a man (I'll call him Mr. Duck Hunter) said, "I've had a fantastic season and have some ducks put away for all of you."

Another man (I'll call him Mr. Big Shot) spoke up and said, "My wife is an expert at preparing wild duck, so why not send all the ducks to my house and she'll prepare a duck dinner for all of us?" Everyone agreed it would be great.

Months passed and no duck dinner. Finally, Mr. Duck Hunter asked me if I'd ever been invited to Mr. Big Shot's for that duck dinner. I told him I hadn't. Then he said he had sent 12 ducks to Mr. Big Shot's house as promised, and that's the last he heard of them.

My question: Shouldn't someone ask Mr. Big Shot what happened to the ducks? And if so, who should ask? —NO

Beverly Nicholson, Home Economist for Texas Electric, is trained and experienced in the efficient use of electric appliances.

"For every way to use electricity in the kitchen, there's a way to use it more efficiently."

"Keeping your heating and cooling costs down are the biggest ways to save electricity, but there are lots of little ways, too.

Part of my job is finding the most economical way to use your kitchen appliances. Here are some ideas I've found useful:

Use flat-bottomed pans. The flatter the pan the better its contact with the cooking unit. A tight-fitting lid on your pan will reduce cooking time.

Use less water. By cooking vegetables with the least amount of water possible, you'll improve their appearance, nutritive value, and save electricity.

Reduce cooking time. Thaw meats before cooking them. This will save cooking time and energy.

Use your oven timer. Opening your oven door unnecessarily causes heat loss and extended cooking time.

HUD remodels housing program section

DALLAS (AP) — The Department of Housing and Urban Development has plucked its much-maligned Section 235 housing program off the shelf, remodeled it, and is placing it back in the forefront of the construction industry.

HUD Secretary Patricia Harris informed delegates to the National Association of Homebuilders here Sunday of the decision and got nothing but praise in return.

"I personally have very little patience with the view that our record as a nation in the subsidized single and multi-family market is a poor one," she said. "It is time that we stop focusing on the failures of these programs and come to realize that they have been in truth very successful."

The old 235 program was halted by the Nixon administration after several scandals were uncovered in its operation. However, the 1978 model has some new wrinkles.

Calling the old 235 program a "costly failure," Mrs. Harris said the new attempt at subsidized housing will include a three percent down payment plan and a mortgage interest rate of four percent.

Another change will include a government subsidy to pay the difference between the program's mortgage interest rate of four percent and the market interest rate.

"We are confident that the combination of these program changes with the improved efficiency in HUD's field office processing will lead to 40,000-50,000 reservations in the coming year," she said.

Robert Arquilla, NAHB president, said builders "welcome this new effort by HUD to make their existing programs more workable and applicable to a larger number of American families.

"If we can see a follow-through of this new effort and commitment from HUD produce a speed-up and simplification in processing, we will indeed have a highly effective instrument for producing much needed housing."

Mrs. Harris said the new program will be limited initially to new construction although she said she would retain the right to extend it to existing housing.

"We have also made the commitment to make program to $32,000 for this program work in all regular homes, $38,000 parts of the country, for homes for large urban and suburban, families and $44,000 for Sunbelt and Frostbelt," large family homes in high cost areas.

Mrs. Harris said Congress in 1977 raised the Federal Housing Administration mortgage limits for homes in the program to $32,000 for this program work in all regular homes, $38,000 parts of the country, for homes for large urban and suburban, families and $44,000 for Sunbelt and Frostbelt," large family homes in high cost areas.

On 24-hour potential test it pumped 45 barrels of 30-gravity oil and 50 barrels of water, through perforations from 7,809 to 8,704 feet.

The pay was treated with 4,000 gallons and fractured with 120,000 gallons. Gas-oil ratio was 1,378-1.

Location is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 37, block 40, T-3-S, T&P survey. It is a 1/2-mile south-west extension.

EMPIRE WELL

Amoco Production Co. No. 16 South Empire Deep Unit has been completed as a producer in the Empire, South (Morrow) field of Eddy County, N. M.

The operator reported a 24-hour potential of 3.5 million cubic feet of gas per day, through a 20/64-inch choke and perforations from 10,918 to 10,936 feet. Gas-liquid ratio was 27,344-1.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 17-18s-29e and 17 miles southeast of Artesia.

SECOND WELL

Amoco Production Co. No. 15 Empire South Deep Unit also was completed in the Empire, South (Morrow) field.

It finalized for a 24-hour potential of 1.04 million cubic feet of gas per day, through a 23/64-inch choke and perforations from 10,824 to 10,880 feet. Gas-liquid ratio was 260,000-1.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 8-18s-29e and 17 miles southeast of Artesia.

ODOM STRIKE

Texas International Co. No. 10 Edwin Parks, recently reported as the Ellenburger well in the Dixon (multipay) field of Mitchell County, has been classified as a new pay discovery for the field — the Odom reef.

The strike finalized for a 24-hour flowing potential of 126 barrels of 47-gravity oil, no water, through an 11/64-inch choke and perforations from 6,986 to 6,996 feet.

Total depth is 7,300 feet and 5 1/2-inch casing is cemented on bottom.

Location is 660 feet from north and 560 feet from east lines of section 1, block 1-A, H&TC survey.

Explorer scheduled

Tejas Oil Operators of Midland spotted location for No. 1 W. W. McArthur, a 7,800-foot wildcat, two and one-half miles southeast of Spur in Dickens County.

It is 2,067 feet from south and 2,035 feet from west lines of section 227, block 1, H&GN survey.

There is no nearby production.

Soviet Union looking to Tyumen oil region

By DAN FISHER
The Los Angeles Times

TYUMEN, U.S.S.R. — Somewhere beneath an Alaska-sized expanse of tundra and frigid forest here in western Siberia lies the key to the Soviet Union's ability to satisfy its energy needs over the next decade.

For all the talk about coal and atomic energy, the Soviet Union, like the United States, must rely mostly on oil and natural gas to meet its needs for the next several years. And when it comes to oil and gas, the Tyumen region in Alaska, California and Texas rolled into one.

The resources are staggering: The Soviet Union's largest oil field, plus the world's largest natural gas field, which contains as much gas as all the known fields in the United States, excluding Alaska.

The problems of developing those resources are also staggering. About 80 percent of the region's known fields are covered by swamps and bogs. There is a housing shortage so severe that some workers commute from as far as 1,700 miles away. There are few roads and the average drilling rig reportedly is idle two-thirds of its time while being moved from one location to the next. Temperatures in the winter drop to 60 degrees below zero. In the summer, according to one statistics-loving official, the region is infested with 111 pounds of mosquitoes per acre of water.

It is the combination of problems and potential that has made this desolate region the center of an international debate that has important economic and strategic significance.

The U.S. CIA contends that the impressive 20-year growth record which has seen the Soviet Union eclipse the United States as the world's leading oil producer is about to peak. According to a CIA report, output here will begin to decline sharply in the early 1980s, prevent the Kremlin from meeting its export commitments and possibly turning it into a net importer of oil before 1985.

Western oil industry sources and other experts say the CIA is probably overly pessimistic. While the big annual production increases of the past may soon disappear, they say, the Soviet Union faces nothing like an energy crisis.

"Predictions that the Soviet Union will soon become a net oil importer appear as hollow today as in the late 1960s, when that view gained currency among Western observers," the Tulsa, Okla.-based Oil and Gas Journal said in a recent special report.

For their part, Soviet officials are not ready to concede that a production decline lies ahead. Western Siberia is the reason.

Andrei A. Trofimuk and other pioneers who insisted that there was "black gold" beneath the Tyumen region's bogs and marshes were derided as "Siberian fanatics" until oil and gas was discovered here in the 1950s. It was not until 1964, however, that regular oil production began. Today the West Siberian fields account for fully a third of the nation's oil output, and the production is still rising.

It was due to the Tyumen region's productive fields that the Soviet Union surpassed the United States in oil output three years ago. The Tyumen fields also helped the Soviet Union become a major oil exporter, earning a reported $5 billion in badly needed hard currency in 1976.

Last November, a plenum of the Communist Party's Central Committee said that for at least the next 10 years the Tyumen region will be the country's most important energy-producing area. By 1980 it is expected to account for half of all Soviet oil production and more than a third of its national gas. The traditional oil and gas producing areas are in central and southern European Russia.

It is a tall order, even for resource-rich western Siberia. The current five-year plan foresees output of between 6 million and 6.2 million barrels of oil a day from western Siberia by 1980, more than three times the expected capacity of the Alaska pipeline. As recently as late 1974, officials expected production of only 4.6 million to 5.1 million barrels a day from the region.

The biggest field in the region — and in the country — is about to reach a production peak, a well-placed Communist Party official said here. Sergei D. Velikopolsky, head of the party organization in Nizhnevartovsk, said that the big Samotlov field will reach maximum output next year, level off for seven to eight years, then decline — "maybe even sharply, because it has reached its peak before schedule."

Samotlov produced about 2.6 million barrels of oil a day last year, more than twice the current output of Alaska's Prudhoe Bay field and about 60 percent of the output of the entire Tyumen region. Velikopolsky said that peak output from the field will be about 3 million barrels a day.

The CIA in its study had predicted that Samotlov would peak this year at a level of 2.6 million barrels a day and that it would produce at that level for a maximum of four years.

While the Nizhnevartovsk party official painted a more optimistic picture from Samotlov than did the CIA, the fact that production there will soon peak means that the expected increases in Tyumen region oil output are going to have to come from smaller, increasingly costly fields.

There are plenty of those around, according to Alexei S. Kuvshinov, chief of the development department for Gilyumennefag (the chief administration for oil and gas production in western Siberia). He said that only 20 to 25 of the region's 150 known oil and gas fields have been developed. Undeveloped fields, he said, should yield as much oil as the fields currently in production.

"We count on increasing production until 1990," Kuvshinov said. "Of course, the rate of growth may slow down."

ENERGY OIL & GAS

One of the newer producing areas is Surgut, about 400 miles northeast of here. Plans for expanding oil production there exemplify the way the Soviets are approaching the challenge.

There were seven fields in production in the Surgut area last year, and collectively they turned out about 500,000 barrels of oil a day, according to Nikolai P. Zakharchenko, director of the local oil and gas production association. By 1980, 11 fields are expected to be in production, and area output is scheduled to more than double. Eleven additional fields will be developed during the 1980s, and output is expected to increase at an annual rate of 12 percent to 15 percent during those years, Zakharchenko said. Output from the Surgut region should reach at least 3.3 million barrels a day by 1990.

To back up these ambitious development schedules, more than 27 billion rubles ($38 billion) will be invested in the Tyumen region during the 1976-1980 period, according to Yuri Rogachev, deputy chairman of the region's executive committee. The figure is nearly 2.5 times what was spent on the region in 1975.

As those plans indicate, Soviet officials here seem anything but pessimistic. For all their bullishness, however, they admit that the job ahead will not be easy. And there are indications that they are more concerned about the longer term than they admit.

Apparently the most significant concern is a drop in exploration activity in the Tyumen region. Earlier this week, Siberian oil pioneer Trofimuk warned in an article in Literaturnaya Gazeta that West Siberian exploration had been neglected for 10 years. "Why is exploration work stopped?" he asked rhetorically. "Because it was thought that very rich deposits (already discovered) would be enough forever."

While there is no question that there are additional sizable fields in western Siberia, he wrote, those deposits must be pinpointed and their size determined.

The Tyumen region party chief, G. Bogomyakov, echoed the warning in an accompanying article. He called for more coordination among the Ministries of Oil, Gas and Geology.

On the production side, the climate is the most obvious obstacle facing western Siberia's oilmen.

Only mild criticism given Carter's tax cut bill

By DAVE ESPO
WASHINGTON (AP)—
Republican leaders are offering "only mild criticism of President Carter's $25 billion tax cut plan, which is now before Congress."
House Minority Leader John Rhodes, R-Ariz., said Sunday the plan was a good start, but $51 billion in cuts is needed to fight inflation and overcome increased Social Security taxes.

Senate GOP leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said he is "pleased with the language" but added that, "so much depends then on the detail, how the tax cut, if there is a tax cut, is allocated."
Baker and Rhodes were on a television interview show as was Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, who predicted the plan would get through Congress.
He said it was premature to discuss any trade-offs the administration would make if compromise is needed.

It was not immediately clear how swiftly Congress would begin work on the tax proposals. The lawmakers begin their second week of the new session today.
The legislative calendar in the House this week is light, with only minor legislation on the schedule.

Senators are expected to spend the week debating the proposed revision of the nation's criminal code. Although Senate leaders had hoped to finish work on the measure in a few days, there could be scores of amendments.
The Senate Foreign Relations Committee plans one more day of hearings Wednesday on the proposed Panama Canal treaty before beginning work on the pact the following day.

The Senate Armed Services Committee, which does not have jurisdiction over the treaty, plans hearings on its military aspects and maintenance of the canal.
The Senate Human Resources Committee on Wednesday will study proposed legislation to overhaul labor laws and provide tougher penalties against companies that are willful repeat violators of organizing rights of workers.

Carter said in his tax message to Congress on Saturday that his proposals for cuts in personal and corporate taxes "would not be desirable" unless Congress goes along with "significant reform" at the same time.
"These reforms will make our tax system both fairer and simpler," he said.

The president's plan actually would decrease taxes by $34 billion, but revisions in tax laws would raise them by some $9 billion.
Administration officials said Carter's proposal is designed to provide the most relief to low and middle income taxpayers. According to the administration's estimates, the proposals would mean a tax savings of $258 for a worker with a family of four making $15,000 a year. At $20,000 the savings would be $270; at $25,000, $320.

Diplomat describes Phnom Penh

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP)—
Cambodia's Communist rulers have transformed Phnom Penh, a city of 3 million people in 1975, into a town of not more than 15,000 persons living among empty shops and streets converted to gardens, a Danish diplomat says.
Kjeld Mortensen,

Denmark's ambassador to China, Vietnam and Cambodia, told a Radio Denmark correspondent in Peking about the two-week visit to Cambodia from which he and envoys of Sweden, Finland, Tanzania and Iraq returned last week. The interview was broadcast Sunday.
Mortensen said no older people were to be seen in Phnom Penh and children, some as young as 10, made up the labor force. He said Cambodian officials described them as "active participants in the revolution."

He reported the side streets of the capital had been converted into vegetable plots, grazing ground for sheep or runs for rabbits and chickens.

have been admitted to Cambodia since Communists took over the country in 1975. Refugees reaching Thailand have reported many thousands of their countrymen died of starvation, disease and exhaustion after the Communists drove them from the cities and towns to convert the country into a completely agricultural society.

"Who says you can't sell by Long Distance."

Every business day, salesmen all across the country are ringing up millions of dollars in sales... by Long Distance.
Of course, you have to know what you're doing. You must have a system. My salesmen have it. Southwestern Bell showed us how to use a planned program of Long Distance calling to reach markets we've never reached before. And it's working!
For one thing, Long Distance creates an excellent selling atmosphere. Both the salesman and the prospect are in their own offices. So each feels comfortable and on equal ground. And there are fewer interruptions. The salesman is able to establish rapport, create interest, field questions, overcome objections, deliver a well thought out sales message and close the sale... all in a brief period of time.
Now each of my salesmen is using the telephone to bring in new customers. And since we can reach prospects anywhere by Long Distance, our market is expanding outward, and our profits upward.
With programs like this, it's no wonder the people at Southwestern Bell keep saying the system is the solution.
The next time someone tells you "you can't sell by Long Distance," tell him to call Southwestern Bell toll free: 1-800-821-2121. Unless, of course, he's your competition.

Borg No. 1 now; next week, who knows?

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — The $250,000 Grand Slam of Tennis doesn't have the tradition of Wimbledon or Forest Hills, but it does its bit to answer the question of who is the world's best male tennis player. For the moment, it appears to be Bjorn Borg.

The stoic Swede turned aggressive Sunday and whipped Jimmy Connors 7-6, 3-6, 6-1 on clay in a three-hour match that left 8,000 spectators and a national television audience applauding the numerous clean winners and crisp rallies.

"It's just the best tennis you'll ever see, win or lose," is the way Connors modestly assessed the clash.

BORG COLLECTED $125,000 for two days' work in the four-man event. Connors earned $60,000. Brian Gottfried won $40,000 by beating Vitas Gerulaitis 6-3, 6-3 in the consolation round earlier Sunday. Gerulaitis pocketed $25,000.

Borg credited a new game plan for his victory in the fast-paced final.

"Before the match, I said to myself, 'I'm going to play a little bit different,'" he said. "I said I was going to hit the ball hard and make him run after the ball.

"Before I have been pushing the ball more and slicing more. I kept him back and I kept him on the baseline. That's very important against Jimmy. This is probably the way I should always play against him."

But Connors disagreed, blaming the loss on his own aggressiveness.

"He wasn't forcing me at all. All he was doing was playing back and hitting a lot of topspins," he said. "I did most anything I wanted to, but I just missed the ball a few inches a couple of times.

"I'm not perfect — pretty close, but not perfect."

Connors started strong, running up a 3-1 lead in the first set. He broke Borg's serve to take a 5-3 advantage, but Borg broke back and saved two match points on his own serve to even the set 5-5.

The two players both held service to force a 12-point tiebreaker. Borg won that easily, 7-1.

The Swede had an opportunity to take a commanding lead in the second set. Leading 3-2, he had several chances to break Connors' service in the sixth game of the set. But a passing shot was wide and a backhand long, permitting Connors to even the set at 3-3. Connors won the next three straight, breaking Borg's service twice to win the middle set.

The final set was all Borg's. He won the first three games, had his service broken once, then took the last three for the title.

Connors put everything he had into every point right up to the end. In the final rally, he was still hitting the lines, and it took a fine backhand passing shot by Borg to close out the match.

The victory was Borg's second straight in the tournament. He beat Connors last year at Wimbledon but lost to him two weeks ago in the Grand Prix Masters in New York.

Borg declined to comment on whether the latest victory made him the World's No. 1 male tennis player. But Connors wasn't ready to step aside for Borg or anyone else, including Guillermo Vilas, who had to miss this tournament with a bad ankle.

"The year's still young," he told newsmen, "ask me in December."

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Navratilova defeats King; Drysdale wins

HOUSTON — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova of Dallas, dominated in four previous career starts against Billie Jean King, defeated the former Wimbledon champion 1-6, 6-2, 6-2 to win a $100,000 women's pro tennis tournament.

Navratilova, who won the Houston tournament for an unprecedented third straight year, had trouble in the opening set but got her overpowering serve and volley game working in the second and third sets to easily win the match and $20,000 first prize.

BALTIMORE — Fifth-seeded Cliff Drysdale defeated seventh-seeded Tom Gorman 7-5, 6-3 to win the $100,000 Baltimore International Tennis tournament.

Drysdale, who won only one minor tournament last year, earned a first prize of $25,000 while Gorman, a winner of only $27,000 on the pro circuit last year, earned $12,500.

TOKYO — Kim Warwick beat Jun Kuki 2-6, 5-7, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1 and Allan Stone bested Tsuyoshi Fukui 6-3, 7-5, 3-6, 2-6, 6-2 as Australia defeated Japan 3-0 in their Eastern Zone Davis Cup match.

Watson, Floyd share Crosby lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Tom Watson and Ray Floyd, who took turns throwing away the lead over the last few holes, staggered in with a share of the top spot in the rain-delayed third round of the $225,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

Floyd had a round of par-72 that included five birdies, three bogeys and a double bogey for a 211 total. Watson had a 71.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Carolyn Hill of Placentia, Calif., rallied from a four-hole deficit and won the 46th Doherty Challenge Cup Golf Tournament.

The youngest player ever to claim the title at 18, Hill defeated Canadian amateur champion and tournament medalist Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ontario, 3-and-1, in the 36-hole final.

Yarborough zips to Winston 500 win

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — Cale Yarborough scored a three-car length victory over Benny Parsons and David Pearson in the Winston Western 500, giving Oldsmobile its first Grand National stock car victory in nearly two decades.

Walcher, Ferstl tie in downhill race

KITZBUEHEL, Austria — Austria's Josef Walcher and West Germany's Sepp Ferstl tied for first place in a downhill race — the first time World Cup ski competition has produced such a deadlock.

For Walcher, it was a second straight first-place finish in 24 hours here and his fourth World Cup downhill victory. It marked the first triumph for Ferstl, whose best previous results were second-place finishes at Wengen and Laax, both in Switzerland, last year.

Both skiers were clocked in 2 minutes, 7.81 seconds. Austrian Klaus Heidegger won the men's slalom race Sunday, edging Petar Popangelov of Bulgaria by .04 seconds.

MARIBOR, Yugoslavia — Hanni Wenzel of Liechtenstein captured a women's World Cup slalom race, defeating Marie Eppler of West Germany by .48 seconds and increasing her lead to 25 points over Annemarie Moser-Proell of Austria in the overall standings.

Wenzel had a combined time of 85.37 seconds for the two runs down the course at Pohorje Mountain. Christin Cooper of Sun Valley, Idaho, the top American finisher, tied for sixth.

PIANCAVALLO, Italy — Gerlinde Strixner of Austria won the special slalom and moved into the top 10 overall for the European Cup in women's skiing.

Her total time was 1:53.59 for the two runs, ahead of Jill Wahlquist of Sweden in 1:53.98 and teammate Andrea Haaser in 1:54.64.

Bill Coleman nabs bowling victory

LAS VEGAS — Bill Coleman, who finished the match play format with a rush, continued his hot bowling in the nationally televised finals to win a $125,000 Professional Bowlers Association tournament.

Coleman, of Campbell, Calif., who averaged 251 Friday night, maintained a 247 pace in two games Saturday. He defeated top-seeded Johnny Petraglia of New York 237-191 for his first PBA championship.

ATLANTA — Phil Bonfiglio of Knoxville, Tenn., captured the 16th annual Atlanta Marathon track event, winning the 26-mile, 385-yard race in two hours, 27 minutes, 57.5 seconds.

Rams want more daring

By JIM MURRAY
The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

"WANTED: HEAD COACH OF THE RAMS. EXPERIENCED, CONSCIENTIOUS INDIVIDUAL, MALE, AMERICAN, OVER 18, NO HEAD COACHING EXPERIENCE NECESSARY. EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY FOR THE RIGHT PARTY. MUST HAVE PROJECTOR AND THOROUGH KNOWLEDGE OF ZONE DEFENSE. MUST BE READY TO PASS ON FOURTH DOWN. THROW INTO A CROWD.

In the coaching fraternity, the Rams head job has long been considered a plum. Coaches drool when they look over the personnel. Big, fast, smart, they have Super Bowl written all over them. Tom Landry might never lose with this set of characters. They have been smartly drilled by a succession of winning coaches. They have drafted as carefully as the Russian secret service. They play in the finest weather in a city with a long football tradition, a magnet media city with unlimited outside commercial opportunities.

And they lose to Minnesota every year.

Carroll Rosenbloom is a tough millionaire, if that term isn't redundant, who made his money selling uniforms to the Army in World War II and doubled it with shrewd investments later. One of these was the Baltimore Colts, who used to go to the Super Bowl all the time. When he swapped them for the Rams, Carroll just figured he'd be going there in a different-colored uniform.

HE HAD himself a new young coach and sat back to see which Roman numeral he would pick — IX, X or IX.

The team had not one but three quarterbacks, one black, one blond and one Polish. That's an awful lot of butts for one chair. Not surprisingly, they began pointing fingers at one another. Word leaked out the owner had directed the coach to play the blond because it looked better on magazine covers. Radio stations, the black press, and guys in bars took up the cry.

The owner wasn't worried. He sat back and waited for his coach to clear up the controversy. Come out, spit on the floor, clap his hands and announce, by God, the quarterback choice was his and his alone and shut up about it. I mean, that's the way Vince Lombardi would have done it.

Rosenbloom's coach did nothing. THE NEXT coach came when the coach took a trip out to the owner's beach house with the urgent, if

Bruins bring out best in Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The UCLA Bruins apparently bring out the best in Notre Dame basketball players.

"This is the juice we needed," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps after his team edged the Bruins 75-73 for their fourth victory in five games against the perennial basketball power.

"We peaked when we beat UCLA at Los Angeles this year, let down and now we've peaked again," said Phelps after his team survived the third-rated Bruins' second-half comeback in the nationally televised game.

The Irish, 11-3, can't celebrate the victory for too long. They play here again tonight against Dartmouth.

"OUR PLAYERS have to realize they can't think about this victory with the schedule we have," said Phelps. "I said earlier I thought we needed 20 victories to get an NCAA bid. Once we get that, we'll be able to relax."

Phelps said he hasn't been working his players as hard as he has in past years.

"We gave the players 15 days off within a 30-day period," he said. "We have five freshmen from five different states and I believe we had some homesick players. The time off has cost us some down moments, but I think it will pay off. The college season is too long and we think you've got to get a break."

Cameras are hazard of Crosby

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The wind came up, the cameras kept clicking and Ray Floyd's lead in the third round of the Crosby Pro-Am disappeared.

"On three straight holes, every time I started my backswing, I got hit with cameras clicking away," the golfer said after Sunday's third round of the Crosby tournament.

"It wasn't me they were taking pictures of," added the somewhat portly athlete whose playing partner here each year is one of Hollywood's box office kings, Clint Eastwood.

"IF YOU can win this tournament, you can win anywhere," said Floyd, who came close a few years ago when he lost in a playoff to Jack Nicklaus.

The Crosby is one of the two PGA tournaments — the Bob Hope Desert Classic is the other — at which spectators are allowed to bring cameras onto the course.

"There are more distractions here than in any tournament in golf," said Nicklaus. "But I've never skipped it, so obviously I enjoy it. That's the nature of the tournament. Many people are here mostly to take pictures of celebrities and to get autographs."

Floyd said his backswing has been disturbed so often by camera-toting Eastwood fans "that I just try to assume it's going to happen."

AND HE, like Nicklaus, never skips the tournament.

"I've played with Clint 13 years and I think this is just the second time we've made the cut," said Floyd, who retained a share of the lead with Tom Watson by saving a par on Pebble Beach's 18th hole Saturday.

"We played a lot of years before Ray was married and we partied a lot then," said Eastwood. "He was lucky if he made the cut himself."

Although sympathetic with his pro partner's complaint over distractions on the golf course, the actor added, "We have similar problems on movie sets."

Both Phelps and UCLA Coach Gary Cunningham, whose only two setbacks in his first year as head coach have been to Notre Dame, felt their players had accomplished a lot in the game.

Who said Fort Worth, Dallas rivalry dead?

DALLAS (AP) — Bad feeling between Central Hockey League rivals Dallas and Fort Worth exploded over the weekend and when the ice settled two players found themselves in front of a judge.

Fort Worth Texan Richie Hansen stands charged with aggravated assault on a police officer. Teammate Chris Ahrens is charged with a misdemeanor assault. Both men, who were sitting out the game with injuries, left jail on bond Saturday after Friday night's brawl.

The game, won by the Texans 6-2, turned into a slugfest in the third period when Dallas' Alain "Bam Bam" Belanger, the league's penalty leader, hit Fort Worth player-coach Billy MacMillan. The haymaker set the tone for what would come later in the stands.

ALEX MCKENDRY led the Texans off the bench and the Black Hawks responded. The game was halted for 18 minutes while the teams duked it out.

About 30 minutes later, a fight broke out in the stands when the Texans scored their fifth goal. Texans public relations director Doug Helton and Hansen cheered the goal, but some Black Hawk fans took exception.

"Some guy yelled the obvious obscenity at us," Helton said. "We stared back and the guy said, 'Yeah, I'm talking to you.' After that, two full beers were thrown at us and two fans came down at us. The bigger of the two guys hit me in the back of the head and knocked my glasses off."

HANSEN AND Ahrens, who was returning from the concession stand, joined the melee until Dallas police arrived.

"I was sitting in a chair after the policeman got me out of it," said Helton. "I saw the whole thing and at no time did I see a punch thrown at a police officer."

Hansen, the second leading scorer in the CHL, said Sunday the fighting had stopped when an officer grabbed him around the neck "and started choking me." He said he threw the officer to the floor but did not strike him.

"There are so many witnesses who saw it. They put handcuffs on me and took me in. I was surprised when they charged me with a felony like that," he said.

Club President Cliff Overcash Jr. said he is trying to get the charges dropped. He called the skirmish "just one of those things that comes with the game."
