Passenger pleads for life

Hijackers still holding 36 in Kuwaiti airliner

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — A Kuwaiti passenger aboard a hijacked jumbo jet pleaded with his government today to give in to the Arab gunmen's demands and said they would kill everyone aboard if Kuwait refused.

Negotiations to free about 36 hostages aboard the Kuwait Airways Boeing 747 were suspended.

The hijackers have demanded that Kuwait free 17 pro-Iranian extremists convicted of terrorism. Kuwait has rejected the demand.

The plane was commandeered April 5 on a Bangkok-Kuwait flight with 112 people aboard. It was first diverted to Mashhad, Iran, where 57 people were freed. It went on to Cyprus, where two hostages were killed and 13 released, and flew to Algiers on Tuesday.

The hijackers, thought to number about eight, are armed with grenades and guns and have threatened to blow up the plane and kill their hostages.

In a call from the plane to the control tower, the passenger identified himself as Ahmed Zayed.

"My name is Ahmed Zayed," the passenger said over the radio to the control tower. His words were monitored by reporters. "Hello. Hello to my family. I am in good health. I ask the government to release the 17 Islamic Jihad prisoners. If not, they will kill us all."

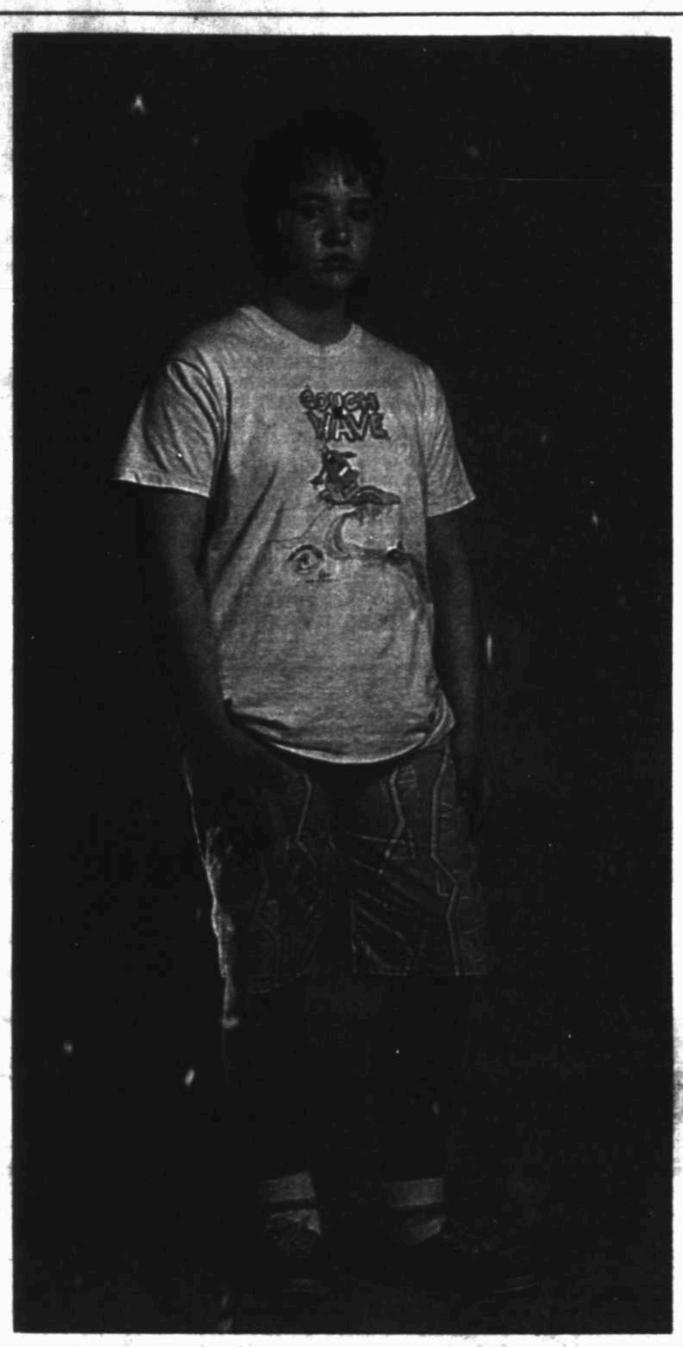

The call came after the official Algerian news agency, Algerie Presse Service, reported that talks between Algerian negotiators and the hijackers had been suspended. It did not say why the talks were broken off.

The talks had reached an impasse on Wednesday. A ranking Algerian official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Wednesday that Kuwait's "intransigence" had created the standstill.

A Cypriot official said the jet was refueled and allowed to leave Cyprus only after Algeria gave assurances that the remaining passengers would be freed on arrival there.

"Our objective all along was the safe release of the hostages. We believed we had succeeded in this when the hijackers released ... hostages here, with the rest to be freed in Algiers," government spokesman Akis Fantis said.

Shorts like these 13-year-old Shonna Deel models can't be worn to school, though the school district has no problem with miniskirts several inches shorter, Shonna's mother said.

Does dress code 'skirt' the issue?

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A disgruntled mother got "short" with her daughter's junior high principal Wednesday in opposition to a dress code she claims "skirts" the scales of justice.

Shonna Deel, 13, was standing with friends on a patio outside the lunchroom when her principal told her she had to go home and change clothes.

She was wearing long shorts, a T-shirt, a blue jean jacket, bobby socks and tennis shoes.

If her mother couldn't come pick her up from school, she could go find some sweat pants to wear for the remaining three periods, she said the principal told her.

Shonna, 13, said principal David Adams did nothing when she wore the same shorts to school several weeks ago.

The shorts in question — "jams" — are similar to what used to be called Bermuda shorts and hit at the knee.

Though the shorts are outlawed, girls may wear much shorter miniskirts without fear of admonishment, according to school district policy.

The seventh grader has never gotten in trouble for wearing her yellow or white miniskirts which are about five inches shorter than the jams, she said.

She paid $10 or $11 for the shorts and each of the skirts, she said.

Long shorts also make daily life at school less worrisome than a miniskirt that "you always have to watch out for," Shonna said.

Questions on status of deputies 'insured'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Two Midland County commissioners fear the county's law enforcement liability insurance is in jeopardy because adventurous volunteer deputies are making worldwide headlines pursuing bogus arms deals.

But Sheriff Gary Painter says the deputies — Ron Tucker and Gary Howard — pose no liability risk to the county and charged the latest round of publicity is an "attempt to discredit the sheriff's department."

Commissioner Win Brown Wednesday voiced concern that the pair "won't be covered under the type of policy we're hoping to get," because of their volunteer status and high profile pursuit of sting operations.

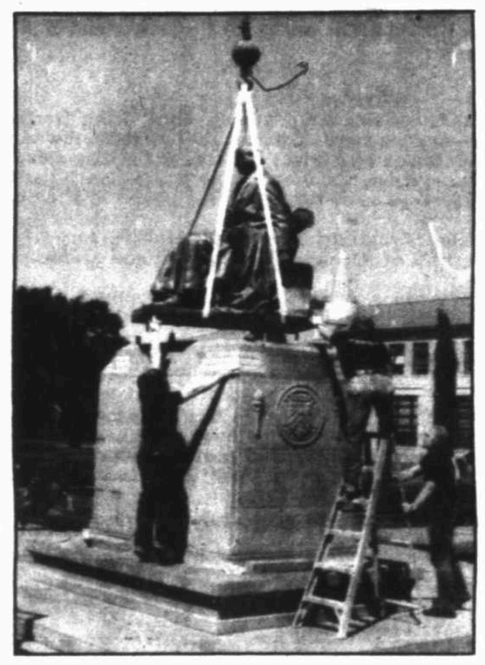

"We really don't think they're actual county employees," said Brown, who also serves as vice president of the Texas Association of Counties' Risk Management Pool. The committee screens applications and awards liability coverage to county governments across the state.

Commissioner Durward Wright added, "Not being that familiar with the procedures of insurance companies, I think it would be natural that they would (look at the duputies' status) when considering our application."

Wright said he's visited privately with Painter and expects eminent action to change the duo's volunteer status.

Painter said he's not afraid to "stand up in any court in the land to defend what we have done and what they (Howard and Tucker) have done."

While the statue of Rice University founder William Marsh Rice has for 58 years withstood all manner of minor mayhem, nobody had succeeded in moving it — until Tuesday. After a security guard chased about 20 people from the scene, he noticed the state had "turned its back" on the administration building. Professional movers, above, spent 3 ½ hours Wednesday performing an "about face."

Campus hijinks turn serious with Rice statue's rotation

HOUSTON (AP) — The bronze campus statue of Rice University founder William Marsh Rice has been festooned with hats, coats, military regalia and other prankster accoutrements over the past 58 years.

This time, he was turned on his pedestal.

Just before dawn on Tuesday, a campus policeman spied about 20 people around the 2,000-pound Rice statue and noticed a spotlight that usually illuminates the statue was dark. As he approached, the crowd scattered in all directions, said Campus Police Chief Mary Voswinkel.

Ms. Voswinkel said the officer was able to stop one student, who was driving a pickup truck away from the quadrangle. The officer took the student's name and let him go, then sped back to the statue to investigate.

The statue appeared intact — but it was facing the Fondren Library to the south instead of the Lovett Building to the north.

Later, it took a crew of professional museum movers and a crane to do an about-face on the statue. The turnaround took 3½ hours and attracted a crowd of about 50 students, administrators and faculty members.

"It was a student prank," said Bill Noblitt, Rice's director of university relations. "It was a rite-of-spring type thing."

Noblitt said the vandalism could have had serious consequences, because students apparently used an A-frame built from 4-by-6 beams to lift the statue. The lifting devices that were found had cracked, and the statue could have fallen during the moving operation.

Pact to pull Soviet troops from Afghanistan signed

GENEVA (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union today signed an accord to end Moscow's intervention in Afghanistan and allow the Red Army to start pulling out its 115,000 troops on May 15.

Afghanistan and Pakistan also signed the agreement in a solemnm 10-minute ceremony in a marble and gold council chamber at U.N. headquarters. Pakistan was representing the Afghan guerrillas, who have vowed to continue their war to oust the Marxist government in Kabul.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who signed for the United States, said the agreement would allow the people of Afghanistan to determine their own future and to restore the independence they have earned through "blood and sacrifice." Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze signed for the Soviet Union.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar of the United Nations said the U.N.-mediated agreements "represent a major stride in the effort to bring peace to Afghanistan."

Also signing the accord were Foreign Minister Abdul Wakil of Afghanistan and Acting Foreign Minister Zain Noorani of Pakistan.

The settlement followed six years of on-again, off-again negotiations between Afghanistan and Pakistan, which neighbors Afghanistan and is home to an estimated 3 million Afghan refugees.

Frigate patrolling Gulf hits mine

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Navy frigate on patrol in the Persian Gulf apparently struck an underwater mine today, the Pentagon said. Four sailors were injured.

The ship, the USS Samuel B. Roberts, was in no danger of sinking, said Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard. He said that no one was killed and that the four sailors had not sustained life-threatening injuries.

The ship is based in Newport, R.I.

"At approximately 10:10 this morning EDT, the USS Sam Roberts...experienced an underwater explosion in the Persian Gulf at a point approximately 70 miles due east of Bahrain Bell (a navigational aid)," Howard said.

The spot is near Farsi Island, which the Iranian Navy has used in its attacks on gulf shipping.

The explosion "caused flooding in the engine room and some hull damage. The flooding is under control, and the ship is in the process of pumping out the water. It's operating under auxiliary power."

Howard said that the USS Wainwright, a cruiser, "is en route to the site to offer assistance and should be there soon."

Trial in wrong county stirs debate on man's release

ATLANTA (AP) — The mistrial granted to a murder defendant whose case was prosecuted in the wrong county has triggered debate on whether he should go free, and on the ethics of his lawyer, who knew about the error but kept mum.

"All this guy's got going for him is me," public defender Bob Joiner said Wednesday. "If I've got to help the prosecutor, my God, he'd be better off without a lawyer."

Stephen Craig Schiefelbein, 38, was accused of fatally stabbing a man who invited him to dinner Christmas Eve 1986 at an Atlanta home that purportedly straddles the line between Fulton and DeKalb counties.

The mistrial was granted April 6, the second day of his trial in Fulton County Superior Court, when a prosecutor learned that the house actually is in DeKalb County and that Joiner had known it all along.

Joiner contends that his client should go free because a second prosecution, this time in DeKalb County, would violate the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy.

"It would be a miscarriage of justice if he were able to escape because of a problem like that," said Steve Roberts, chief assistant district attorney in DeKalb County, where the state may press for a trial.

Law officers in both counties assured prosecutors the house was in Fulton County, said Assistant District Attorney Linda Finley, who learned the truth when she telephoned a witness after the first day of Schiefelbein's trial.

Ms. Finley said she was reviewing the next day's testimony with the owner of the house when "he informed me that his house was in fact about two houses over the line in DeKalb County."

The next day, Joiner said he had known of the mixup and Judge Philip Etheridge declared a mistrial, telling Joiner he had "wasted a lot of time and did your client absolutely no service whatever."

Joiner said Wednesday it "never even occurred to me" to tell the judge earlier because ethics rules for lawyers require him to use any defense that is not frivolous.

Joiner "had an obligation not to say anything," said Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr., a Yale Law School professor of legal ethics and the main draftsman of the American Bar Association's model code of ethics.

"The defendant in a criminal case is permitted to require the state to go to its proof on every possible issue, and it's the state's responsibility to carry the burden in that respect," Hazard said. "The defendant did nothing to mislead the prosecution, and I think (Joiner) did the right thing."

University of Georgia law professor L. Ray Patterson said legal codes of ethics discourage disclosures of information by defense lawyers but conflict with a lawyer's duties as an officer of the court.

"Frankly, I sympathize with the lawyer," said Patterson, a former dean of Emory University's law school. "The courts have not given good guidance on this. They've waffled on the issue."

Joiner says federal courts have held that part of a criminal case is proving it is being brought in the right court, so failure to prove that voids the entire prosecution. Another trial would be double jeopardy, he said.

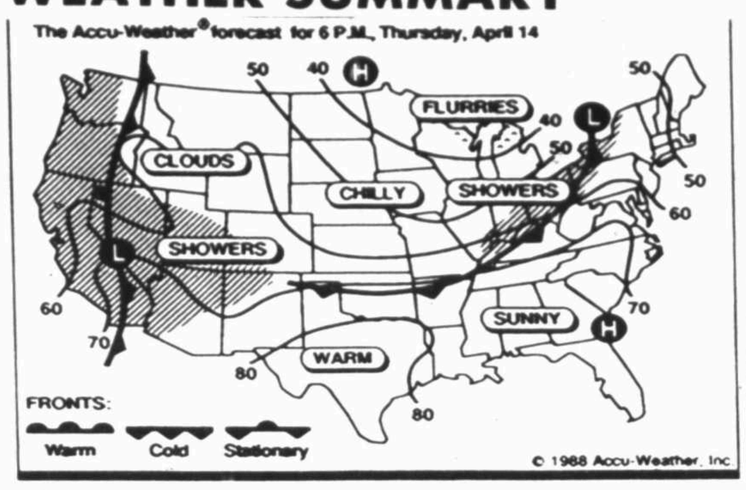

Etheridge disagreed with that argument, saying his court never really had jurisdiction over the case so "anything we did would be a nullity."

Roberts said the DeKalb County prosecutors already have found legal precedents supporting a retrial, but no decision will be made until the case file and the judge's order are received from Fulton County.

Joiner also contends that there are factual issues in the case.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cloudy skies anticipated

Skies will be cloudy tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. There is a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms, some possibly severe. The low should reach the upper 50s with south winds blowing at 10-20 mph.

Friday's skies are expected to be partly cloudy with the chance of showers remaining at 20 percent. The high will be in the middle 80s with winds shifting slightly and will be from the south to southwest at five to 15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 86 was 11 degrees below the record high of 97 set for that date in 1972. Today's low of 45 was 16 degrees above the record low of 29 set for this date in 1983.

STATE

Dense fog rolled in across extreme Southeast Texas early today, reducing visibility to near zero in some areas and prompting the National Weather Service to issue a dense fog advisory.

The dense fog was reported in the Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area and extended about 20 miles into the Gulf of Mexico.

Forecasts called for widely scattered to scattered showers and thunderstorms through tonight across West Texas and for a chance of thunderstorms across northwestern portions of North Texas tonight.

Skies will be partly cloudy over the eastern half of the state and mostly cloudy through tonight across southern and western portions of the state.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 50s, ranging from the 40s in the Panhandle to the 60s in extreme South Texas.

Highs Friday will be in 70s and 80s over most of West Texas except in the Panhandle where readings will be in the 60s, in the 70s and 80s across North Texas and in the 80s and 90s in South Texas.

Skies were mostly cloudy over most of Texas at dawn today. A cold front just north of the Panhandle triggered some light shower activity.

Early morning tempertures were in the 50s and 60s. Extremes ranged from 50 at Midland to 68 at Laredo.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 59 at Amarillo, 51 at Wichita Falls, 56 at Fort Worth and Waco, 54 at San Antonio, 61 at Corpus Christi, 67 at Brownsville, 61 at San Angelo, 53 at Lubbock and 61 at El Paso.

NATION

Strong wind and rain today battered the Atlantic Coast from North Carolina to Maryland, while another storm drenched the desert Southwest.

Forecasters warned of continued high winds and coastal flooding along the mid-Atlantic region, where strong winds and waves pushed two homes into the sea and covered highways on Wednesday. Wind gusted to 70 mph off Cape Hatteras, N.C.

Salisbury, Md., had .47 inches of rain during a six-hour period ending early today. Rain also fell over parts of Michigan, Illinois, Iowa and southeast Nebraska.

In the West, rain fell on Arizona, southeast California, southern Utah, Nevada and the northern Pacific Coast. Las Vegas, Nev., had .44 inches of rain during a six-hour period ended this morning.

Skies were clear or partly cloudy over much of the rest of the nation.

Kalispell, Mont., reached 74 degrees on Wednesday, tying its high temperature record for the date set in 1913.

Today's forecast called for rain scattered from the Pacific Coast across the Great Basin and the Central Plateau; rain from the lower Great Lakes across the upper Ohio Valley into western New England; snow over upper Michigan; sunny skies over the remainder of the nation.

Woman testifies on daughter's mauling

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A woman testified she screamed for help and tried to pull a lion away from her daughter as the animal wrestled the child to the ground and ripped off part of her skull.

Sonia Hernandez was the last witness called before the prosecution rested its case Wednesday in the trial of Gary Durkovitz, 35, of Houston.

Durkovitz, whose trial was moved on a change of venue, is charged with injury to a child after his lion named "Samson" attacked 8-year-old Roxanne Hernandez at the Texas Flea Market in Houston on Oct. 10, 1987.

The lion was at the flea market as part of an exhibit and Durkovitz was walking it out of the flea market on a chain when the attack occurred.

The lion bit into the girl's skull, exposing her brain. Roxanne has undergone reconstructive surgery and faces more operations to correct part of a missing skull and a bald spot on her head.

Roxanne and her mother, both testified Wednesday, but the girl said all she remembered about the attack was that "the lion got me. I didn't know what it was."

Mrs. Hernandez testified that they went to the flea market last October to buy a gift and that the attack occurred shortly after they entered the building.

"The lion was wrestling with my daughter and I was pulling it trying to get it off my daughter," Mrs. Hernandez said. "I was screaming out for her and she was screaming out for me.

"I was screaming for help and she would call out my name, 'Mom, Mom, help me,' " she said.

Mrs. Hernandez said she pulled the lion's mane, but to no avail and that the animal tried to put the girl's head into its mouth.

"I saw the lion when he took her scalp off," Mrs. Hernandez said. "I felt really helpless at that time and at that moment I felt it was going to kill her."

She said a security guard shot the lion and it loosened its grip on her child. It later was destroyed.

She said several men told her to lay the child on the ground and she tried to calm her daughter for 15 minutes before an ambulance arrived.

"I was telling her that I loved her and she said that she loved me and I told her everything was going to be fine," she said. "She had blood all over her head and she was pale."

Mrs. Hernandez said her daughter was in the hospital a month before she went home. Roxanne had a homebound teacher until February when she returned to school.

Mrs. Hernandez said Roxanne's academic performance has declined.

"She has trouble concentrating on her work during the day and she has trouble following directions," Mrs. Hernandez said.

Roxanne, wearing a light green dress and a white sailor's cap to cover her injured head, was on the witness stand for only 15 minutes and answered mostly "yes" and "no" questions.

Defense attorney Robert Scardino, who has called the lion attack "a tragic accident," did not question the mother and daughter and state prosecutors immediately rested their case.

Scardino also complained to State District Judge Ted Poe of Houston that the media coverage of the trial was intense and was "pro-prosecution."

Earlier in the day, David Ruhter, mammal curator at the Houston Zoo, testified that lions seek out children, but are intimidated by adults.

"It attacks its prey because it moves," Ruhter said. "It's his livelihood. You see it in 9-week-old cats when they attack a ball."

DRESS

"I think that there is something wrong with the school district's policy," said Rhonda Self, the girl's mother.

Girls can wear dresses "that you can see their bottom when they bend over," but they can't wear shorts that "hardly show the knees.

"They want to stop teen pregnancy, but let's let them wear miniskirts and not shorts," Ms. Self added.

Shonna, whose family moved to Midland from Odessa almost two months ago, said when she went to the office to call her mom, the secretary asked her if she was going to cry.

"I guess it kind of hurt my feelings," said Shonna, who made six As and one B on her last report card.

Five girls were sent home Wednesday, Adams explained later that afternoon.

Midland Independent School District policy states shorts of any length are not acceptable for those in junior and senior high school.

"We don't catch them all every day, but we are supposed to," Adams said.

Several years ago, when walking shorts were the new rage, the district tried to let girls wear them to school, the principal said.

However, given that compromise, the females — who make up 99 percent of the students sent home for dress code violations — stretched it and wore shorts much too short, the principal said.

So now, neither girls nor boys are allowed to wear shorts, though Shonna said she saw a boy wearing shorts at school Wednesday.

This problems crops up as summer nears, Adams said. Miniskirts have not been too short to warrant sending a girl home, he added.

But he would if he thought it too closely resembled the "microminis" of the 1950s and 60s, he said.

Ms. Self will air her complaint at the next MISD Board of Trustees meeting April 26, she said.

The dress code is contained in the policy book students receive at the start of each school year, Adams said.

Shonna began classes at Alamo Feb. 1 and never got the book, she and her mother said.

The uniform Shonna wears when playing on the school volleyball team consists of shorts much shorter than the jams, her mother said.

"And they wear those when travelling to different schools.

"You know, parents buy their kids clothes," Ms. Self said.

"If the school board wants to buy her clothes, they can tell her what to wear."

The Moslem insurgents fighting the Marxist Afghan government for 10 years have headquarters in Pakistan. Pakistan also serves as the conduit for foreign military aid to the guerrillas.

Perez de Cuellar opened the 10-minute ceremony by thanking Afghanistan and Pakistan for their "tireless efforts." He also thanked the United States, which supports the guerrillas, and the Soviet Union, which backs the government, for agreeing to guarantee the accord.

COUNTY

"Their liability is no different from any other law enforcement officer in this county. Their names have been bantered around and, right now, they look like a good punching bag.

"I don't think it's fair," he said.

Howard and Tucker have earned a reputation in the U.S. as "bounty hunters," the Sunday Times of London reported last week. The two set up "sting" operations by luring American arms dealers into supposed supply roles for the Khomeini regime in Iran, according to the British newspaper.

Knight-Ridder newspapers, quoting "well placed sources," reported that Howard and a third Midland County deputy, Fred Lewis, had proposed an undercover operation "against" a Mexican airstrip allegedly used by international drug smugglers trading arms for narcotics.

A report on the proposal, estimated to cost $24,000 monthly, was carried in the March 10 edition of the Dallas Morning News.

The idea was offered to John Cupp, a former aide to Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, according to the report.

Cupp had served with Lewis, a former U.S. Army Delta Force commando, Knight Ridder reported after learning the contents of a memo found in the safe of Marine Corps Lt. Col. Oliver North.

Painter Wednesday defended the deputies. "I feel a very strong bond with those men," said the sheriff. "They've put themselves on the line for me, for this county and for the nation."

Painter deputized Howard and Tucker in January 1985, but neither deputy has ever received payment for services rendered to the entity, according to County Treasurer Dee Thompson.

Painter said Howard and Tucker have worked under contract for several U.S. Government agencies. They volunteer their services to the county when called upon, he said.

Both are classified as "basic deputies" under the auspices of Midland County and remain active on the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education computer records in Austin.

Brown worries that if the pair are identified with the county, costs for law enforcement liability coverage will soar beyond the county's reach, he said.

Midland County has operated without a blanket of liability coverage in the two years since most insurance underwriters began to deny coverage, Brown said.

The denials — evidence of a nationwide crisis in insurance coverage — are in part the result of large jury settlements awarded across the state against counties in wrongful death, discrimination and other civil lawsuits, according to the commissioner.

Brown said the TAC didn't start offering its own liability insurance policies to county governments until recently.

The commissioner worries that Howard and Tucker's high profile operations — if associated with the Midland sheriff's office — will lead to high-dollar civil lawsuits. The possibility would be particularly troublesome in federal court, where no monetary caps are placed upon jury awards, Brown said.

"A litigant can name anyone they want to in a lawsuit," Brown said. "I don't care what waivers are signed, that still doesn't keep a party from including you in a suit.

"It's up to the jury to determine if there was a connection between you and the party that created the cause of action," he added.

Howard and Tucker helped orchestrate an August 1987 sting at Midland International Airport in which a Portuguese national was taken into custody and later indicted with conspiracy to commit theft.

Victor Fonseca was lured to the hangar to inspect what he thought were radar parts for U.S.-built Hawk missiles. However, the crates contained nothing but gravel.

Fonseca was arrested in front of national television news cameras, but State District Judge Vann Culp threw out the indictment, ruling that the allegations were too vague and failed to specify the owner of the "stolen" missile parts.

The district attorney's office declined to continue prosecution of Fonseca, and he was freed in January.

"It was well-conceived," said Tom Moffett, business manager for the physical plant department. The pranksters apparently climbed to the roof of the Architecture Building to disconnect the spotlight and had painted the A-frame black to help conceal it.

The student who was questioned will face disciplinary action from the university, but Rice officials did not release further details.

Predictably, the serious nature of the vandalism was lost on the wisecracking students.

"It was really windy yesterday," one onlooker said, winking.

Most students were pointing the finger of blame at some engineering majors, citing the planning and expertise involved in the caper.

John Miner, a senior civil engineering major, just rolled his eyes when asked if he knew the perpetrators.

"I think William Marsh Rice got mad because of the latest tuition increase and decided to turn his back on the administration," he joked.

There are believed to be about 32 Arab passengers and four crew members aboard the plane. Three passengers are members of Kuwait's large royal family.

This morning, the blue-and-white plane was moved to the end of a runway at Houari Boumedienne airport to permit the safe landing of a plane carrying Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, who arrived on a state visit.

Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid, before greeting Kaunda, met briefly with Mohammed Al-Osaimi, deputy foreign minister of Kuwait.

The president was given a message from Kuwaiti Emir Shiek Jabar Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah, according to Algiers radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London. No details were provided.

A newspaper in Abu Dhabi said today that an agreement had been reached for the release of the Kuwaiti hostages.

Al-Ittihad, quoting unidentified diplomatic sources in Larnaca, said "an agreement was signed by hijackers, Kuwaiti, Palestinian and Algerian officials, for releasing passengers and hijackers in Algerias in exchanging for reducing sentences against the 17 persons in Kuwait jails."

Algerian officials said there were intensive negotiations Wednesday in which they carried messages from the Kuwaiti gvernment delegation in an airport VIP lounge and the hijackers in the plane.

When the talks reached an impasse Wednesday night, they were suspended to let all parties rest, the Algerian official said.

Algeria set up a high-level negotiating committee, divided into two teams, led by Interior Minister Hedi Khediri.

Smial Hamdani, one of Algeria's most experienced diplomats and secretary general of the Foreign Ministry, headed the team responsible for contacts with the Kuwaiti delegation, led by Deputy Foreign Minister Mohammed Al-Osaimi.

Hamdani was involved in the successful negotiations in Algiers for the release of the American hostages held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in 1981.

UN health official says tear gas linked to Arab deaths

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A U.N. health official who visited Israel's occupied territories said today that Palestinians are suffering abdominal pain, miscarriages and muscular weakness from tear gas Israel is using against them.

Dr. John Hiddlestone, U.N. Relief and Works Agency director of health affairs, said in a telephone interview that he saw Palestinians experiencing symptoms "which were not those usually associated with tear gas."

But he added: "I'm not actually accusing anybody of anything."

The agency said the gas was being used improperly. The Israeli army denied the charge.

Agency spokesman Ron Wilkinson reported several cases in which tear gas had been thrown into closed areas, houses, schools and a clinic in Israeli-held territory.

"It says right on the canisters that it must not be used in a confined area. So it (the gas) has particular toxic effects when it is thrown into a room," he said.

"One label says: 'For outdoor use only. Contents may cause severe injury if not used in accordance with this warning instruction.'"

In the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip, agency spokeswoman Christine Debaigh said a 70-year-old woman, Wadfah Farraj Allah, was dead on arrival at Jabaliya's U.N. clinic on Wednesday after troops hurled a tear gas canister into her home.

Shifa Hospital officials said Mrs. Allah suffocated after inhaling the gas. An army spokesman denied the account and said that "results of an autopsy carried out by the (government-run) Pathological Institute in Abu Kabir showed the woman died of natural causes."

UNRWA is providing shelter, education and medical assistance to Palestinian refugees living in the Middle East.

"I am a physician and my worry is that people are having other symptoms than normal tear gas symptoms," Hiddlestone said.

"We need to know what's being used in the hope we can do more for these people because the abdominal pain is extremely severe of women who have been miscarrying and have had premature labor," he said.

The doctor said he also met people suffering from "great muscular weakness" after exposure to gas used by the Israelis.

He said those ailments occurred without eye, nose or throat irritation, "so that even though you have tear gas which is in improper concentrations when it's put into closed spaces, the symptomatology of some people is not that which is normal as a result of tear gas."

An army spokesman said: "There is no truth to the report we are using a new type of toxic gas. The purpose of tear gas is to limit casualties and to cause as little damage as possible by avoiding physical confrontation with the rioters."

He said tear gas could be lethal if inhaled by people already suffering from heart or other health problems, or if used in a small enclosed space.

"The army does not use tear gas in small enclosed spaces, at least not on purpose," said the spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Boston-based Physicians for Human Rights has expressed concern that the Israelis may be misusing tear gas.

The American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee, a lobbying group, contends that more than 30 people have died in Israel and in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip from exposure to tear gas.

Palestinians strike against mass arrests

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians staged a general strike across the occupied territories today to protest mass arrests of Arabs. Hospital officials said one Arab protester was killed and two wounded in clashes with Israeli soldiers.

The strike, ordered by the PLO-affiliated underground leadership, was to support 4,800 Palestinians detained by Israeli troops since an Arab uprising was launched last December.

Most of the 110,000 Palestinians with jobs in Israel didn't show up for work. Arab shopowners closed their doors in the cities of Ramallah, Nablus, Bethlehem, Hebron, Jerusalem and Gaza.

Since Dec. 8, 144 Palestinians and two Israelis have been killed in anti-occupation unrest in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, according to U.N. figures.

Protests broke out today in two refugee camps in the Gaza Strip and two cities in the West Bank, according to Arab media reports.

Wael Hassan Asmar, 24, was shot in the heart and died at Al Ittihad Hospital in the West Bank city of Nablus, an emergency room official told The Associated Press.

The two wounded were identified as 12-year-old Mohammed Fuad Taha, who lost his right eye after being hit by a rubber bullet in Tulkarem, and Rebhi Shihada Rehan, 17, who was in critical condition with a bullet wound in the stomach, said an official at Rafidiyeh Hospital in Nablus.

The army denied allegations that soldiers were using tear gas improperly against Palestinians or using a particularly toxic form of the gas.

The director of Israel's Government Press Office, Yoram Ettinger, said he plans to bar Palestinians from distributing press releases to foreign journalists in their mailboxes at the press office.

"Being committed to the PLO they shouldn't expect Israel, whom the PLO wants to destroy, to facilitate their dissemination of information," Ettinger told the English-language Jerusalem Post daily.

Ettinger's plans were protested by the Foreign Press Association.

Wednesday, soldiers arrested 70 Palestinians in a raid on the West Bank village of Salfit, whose residents had rejected Israeli authority and set up their own government, Israeli media reported.

Salfit, 20 miles north of Jerusalem, became a symbol of an organized liberated town, a model of quiet civil disobedience, Israeli media reports said, and the army feared the model would be adopted by other communities.

Since Dec. 8, 144 Palestinians and two Israelis have been killed in anti-occupation unrest in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, according to U.N. figures.

The village was headed by a committee of Communist Party members and representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization's Fatah branch that had provided community services for 6,000 residents and created a system of guards, Israel Television said. Residents were barred from painting anti-Israeli slogans or erecting roadblocks.

Israeli media reported as many as 70 people were arrested. The army put the number of detainees at "several dozen." The television showed many of the men, blindfolded with white rags, sitting on the ground on a village street.

At the Lebanese border, troops killed three Palestinian guerrillas who tried to enter Israel before dawn on Wednesday on a hostage-taking mission.

In the Gaza Strip, soldiers wounded 53 Arabs in a refugee camp with metal bullets, rubber bullets, tear gas and beatings, U.N. and hospital officials said.

Wednesday, Arab activists punished Palestinian merchants defying PLO orders to open their stores only for three hours in the morning. The activists firebombed a money-changer's shop in east Jerusalem and set fire to stalls at a produce market in Bethlehem, police and witnesses said.

Worm turns fortunes for Australian town

KORUMBURRA, Australia (AP) — The federal government has chipped in $11,000 to help save the 12-foot, gurgling earthworms that transformed Korumburra from a near ghost town to a bustling tourist attraction.

Several years ago, Korumburra decided to promote the invertebrate, which has 16 hearts and is a hermaphrodite, meaning it is both male and female.

The great Gippsland gurgling earthworm is so named because of the sucking and gurgling noises it makes when it burrows, sounding like a bathtub draining water. Townsfolk credit the earthworm, whose scientific name is megascolides australis, for helping turn their fortunes around.

An annual worm festival called Karmai, after the aboriginal word for giant earthworm, is held each March. It celebrates the worm with parades, carnivals and even an earthworm queen.

Recently, however, intensive farming in the worm's small habitat has raised fears the worms' days are numbered.

Korumburra is in Gippsland, an area of the southeast state of Victoria that once was covered by a rain forest where the worms thrived. Today, that habitat has been reduced to an area of 100 square miles around the Bass River.

Settlers, who thought the worms were snakes, cleared Gippsland's rain forest with its 300-foot trees in the 1880s to make room for dairy farming and cattle raising.

Although not officially protected, the earthworm is now listed as endangered, according to worm expert Georgina Hickey of the Australian Museum.

Federal Environment Minister Graham Richardson announced an $11,000 save-the-worm grant last week as part of a $383,000 package to study other threatened species in Victoria, such as the koala bear and the fairy penguin. Korumburra began exploiting the earthworm as a tourist attraction in 1977 after the local coal mine went bust, a butter plant shut down and young people began heading to Melbourne, 75 miles away, in search of jobs.

"The worm saved the town," said Mark Holmes, on whose property most of the worms are found. "The worms helped people have an identity. I don't know if they're proud of what they've got but we've got something unique. We've got a thing that is dropping off the face of the earth."

Promoting the giant worms wasn't easy, local tourist official Judith Nicholl admits. "Of all things in the world, how do you promote a worm?" she told a recent visitor. "It started out as a fun thing but now it's very serious. Now when visitors arrive the first thing they ask is 'Where is the worm?' "

Visitors now flock to Korumburra, population 2,800. The town's shops display fluffy toy worms and cute cutouts on windows, colored pink because brown, the worm's natural color, isn't attractive.

Festivities climax with a 100-foot fake worm resembling a Chinese dragon that is hoisted and weaved through main street by 60 or 70 children.

A nocturnal animal, the worms are difficult to dig up and residents discourage the practice because the worms can break apart and bleed to death when yanked from the rich clay on which they thrive.

Townsfolk proclaim the worm as the world's largest, although long worms are found elsewhere in the world.

Despite their fame, the local worms remain underground. There is no worm museum in Korumburra or even a display. However, entrepreneurs John Matthews and Tony Zoanetti opened a worm attraction at Bass, 25 miles down the highway toward the Phillip Island penguin reserve, a major tourist attraction.

There, visitors enter a 300-foot-long building shaped like an earthworm and can walk through a section that simulates the internal view of the worm's stomach, complete with gurgling noises.

Panama says U.S. soldiers fired at 'palm trees'

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panama's military rejected a report that U.S. soldiers engaged up to 50 intruders in a two-hour firefight at a fuel depot.

Maj. Edgardo Lopez Grimaldo of the Panamanian Defense Forces told reporters Wednesday night the U.S. Marine sentries had "confused the swaying of tropical palm trees with non-existent enemies."

He also accused the Marines of moving 100 yards into Panamanian territory during the incident and called it the "24th Gringo military invasion of Panamanian soil."

The U.S. Southern Command said about 100 Marines were involved in the firefight with between 40 and 50 "unauthorized personnel" first spotted at dusk Tuesday at the 800-acre Arraijan Tank Farm, an underground fuel depot located near Howard Air Force Base outside Panama City. There apparently were no injuries on either side, said U.S. spokesman Col. Ron Sconyers.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Israel honors martyrs

JERUSALEM (AP) — Rush hour traffic came to a two-minute standstill today as the wail of air raid sirens opened Israel's annual memorial day for the 6 million European Jews slain by the Nazis in World War II.

The nation's radio stations played melancholy tunes throughout the day. Restaurants and houses of entertainment were shut by law for 24 hours ending at sundown today.

More than 100 memorial ceremonies were scheduled throughout the country.

Holocaust Day, officially called Martyrs and Heroes Remembrance Day, is commemorated on the anniversary of the start of the Warsaw Ghetto uprising of 1943, when Polish Jews used pistols to fight Nazis in tanks.

This year, the commemoration comes amidst a four-month spate of anti-Israeli violence in the occupied territories that has claimed the lives of 144 Palestinians and two Israelis.

Honduras begins hearing

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The Honduran Congress began hearings on the deportation of a reputed drug baron to the United States that caused violent protests and forced the government to impose a state of emergency.

The emergency decree was issued for Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula on April 8 after 2,000 demonstrators, enraged over the forced extradition of Juan Ramon Matta, burned the U.S. Consulate and U.S. Information Service office in the capital. The decree was lifted Wednesday after tension subsided.

Police and soldiers arrested Matta in a pre-dawn raid on his Tegucigalpa home April 5 and deported him to the United States by way of the Dominican Republic the following day without a passport. The Honduran Constitution forbids the extradition of Honduran citizens.

Matta, 43, a Honduran citizen, is being held at a maximum security federal prison in Marion, Ill., on drug trafficking charges. He also was wanted for questioning by U.S. authorities in connection with the 1985 torture-slaying in Mexico of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar.

Sandinistas express doubt

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A Sandinista negotiator charged that Contra rebels are not serious about ending the 7-year-old civil war, and a meeting set for Friday to work out a definitive cease-fire appeared to be in jeopardy.

"We have serious doubts they want to enter into a definitive cease-fire," Deputy Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco told reporters Wednesday night.

Employer of Meese's wife wins $50 million lease renewal

WASHINGTON (AP) — A real estate developer whose family pays for the salary of Attorney General Edwin Meese's wife, Ursula, was granted a $50 million lease renewal on a building the government said risked the health and safety of Justice Department workers.

Thirteen days after obtaining the new lease, the developer and his partners sold the building for $22.6 million more than they had paid for it two years earlier — a 60 percent profit, according to District of Columbia land records.

The developer, Howard S. Bender, was the principal owner of the building in late 1985 when the Bender Foundation, his family's tax-exempt philanthropy, donated $120,000 to the Multiple Sclerosis Society to hire Ursula Meese at $40,000-a-year for three years, the society's lawyer said.

The lease — a renewal at more than three times the previous rent — was signed even though the landlord had not cleaned up an air system environmental inspectors said was a health hazard that could explain above-average sickness there, according to government documents.

And the lease was signed even though the easy public access required by another tenant "jeopardizes (Justice's) ability to provide adequate security...and increase the opportunity for sabotage and other covert activities," a government document said.

An attorney for the Meeses denies any wrongdoing on their part in the transactions, but acknowledges that the Benders and Meeses know each other. The Benders refuse to discuss the matter. A key government official said Meese played no role in the real estate decision.

But the MS society's records on Mrs. Meese's job have been subpoenaed by independent counsel James McKay as part of his investigation into whether Meese committed federal crimes, according to James Bierbower, attorney for the MS Society.

NATION

Federal law makes it a felony for a federal official to take any governmental action that would affect the financial status of his spouse. Further, a presidential order forbids federal officials from conduct that might give the appearance of a conflict of interest, even where one does not exist.

The seven-story Chester Arthur Building on the rundown fringe of downtown Washington houses the headquarters of the Justice Department's Immigration and Naturalization Service.

In March 1985, Bender, vice president of the Bender Foundation, and other investors acquired the building at an apparently inauspicious moment in its history.

Public records show that Bender and his associates paid $37.5 million — nearly twice the assessed value — for the building.

At the time, the building's most valuable asset was the federal lease, which was due to expire within a year and would be put up for bids by other landlords.

In fact, the federal government had already taken steps to move out.

On Aug. 8, 1984, Congress had approved a Reagan administration plan, pushed by then-Attorney General William French Smith, to begin moving some federal offices out of the building. The plan called for a new lease there in 1986 for only 63 percent of the space the government had before.

However, three months after the Bender partnership bought the building, the administration told Congress that its plans had changed dramatically.

In June 1985, the General Services Administration — the government's housekeeping agency — notified Congress it wanted to keep the immigration service in the full 264,000 square feet at Chester Arthur.

That same month, immigration officials complained of illnesses among INS employees apparently caused by the building's air system.

On Sept. 26, 1985, assistant immigration commissioner James Kennedy formally requested an environmental inspection from the General Services Administration.

Against this background, in the fall of 1985, the Benders made two separate efforts to get Mrs. Meese on a payroll.

First, they tried to interest Mrs. Meese in a public affairs job at their radio station, WWDC, which has a rock-and-roll format, but Mrs. Meese declined, MS attorney Bierbower said.

Then, in October 1985, the Bender Foundation indicated it would contribute $120,000 to the MS society for a development director, Bierbower said.

"There was no question that MS had in mind that Ursula would become the development director" at the time the Bender Foundation put up the money for the position, Bierbower said. "We were after Ursula Meese." She had previously worked there as a volunteer.

Howard Bender's wife, Sondra, is president of the family foundation and a member of the MS Society board.

Eastern welcomes safety study

MIAMI (AP) — Reeling from setbacks in Congress, the courts, and at the cash register, Eastern Airlines faces new problems with federal government investigations under way.

But the airline's president says he welcomes a major federal investigation into the management of its parent Texas Air Corp. as a way to highlight his company's performance.

The Department of Transportation launched an unprecedented inquiry Wednesday into Texas Air's finances and management, to determine whether the company is fit to carry commercial air traffic.

The Federal Aviation Administration also on Wednesday slapped Eastern with $823,000 in new fines for safety violations and said it was beginning an inspection of the carrier's entire fleet.

Eastern President Phil Bakes said the DOT probe "certainly isn't going to help" Eastern's financial troubles, which include the loss of $900 million over the past 10 years. Eastern also reported a nearly 20 percent drop in passenger revenue during March.

"The very idea of an investigation into safety is scary to the flying public, but we welcome it because we hope the whole story of Eastern Airlines dedication to safety and performance will finally be told," Bakes said.

Bakes blamed the labor unions at Eastern, which was near bankruptcy when Texas Air acquired it in 1986, for political agitation that he said brought on the government's scrutiny of the company.

"We hope this (investigation) means an end to the behind-the-scenes lobbying and media manipulation by the unions and the end of the scare tactics," Bakes said.

Charles Bryan, the leader of Eastern's Machinists union, said Washington was expressing its own concern over the management of Eastern and would not have acted so decisively simply because of complaints from labor unions.

"What we have right now at Eastern Airlines and the Texas Air empire is dealmakers and lobbyists running the airline," said Bryan, president of the Machinists District 100, which represents 12,000 of Eastern's 32,000 employees.

Eastern pilots, flight attendants and mechanics contend Texas Air management has sacrificed safety and intimidated employees in order to cut costs at Eastern, where Bakes wants to reduce labor costs by nearly 30 percent.

Eastern's unions bitterly have opposed Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo's plans for trimming costs and restructuring the airline, including the spinoff of its profitable Northeast corridor shuttle.

On Wednesday, a new union lawsuit accused Eastern of violating a labor contract by using company planes to train non-union flight attendants to serve passengers in the event of a strike.

The Transport Workers Union of America, Local 553, charged Eastern planes are being used by Orion Lift Services Inc., an independent cargo airline, to train non-union flight attendants.

In recent weeks, more than 150 congressmen have expressed support for a closer examination of Texas Air management practices and held hearings over the issue.

Federal judges last month blocked Eastern from spinning off its Boston-New York-Washington shuttle into a Texas Air subsidiary and also from using Eastern planes to train Orion Air personnel. Eastern had lined up the North Carolina-based cargo carrier to fly its routes in case of an employee strike.

The $823,000 civil penalty imposed Wednesday against Eastern comes 14 months after Eastern agreed to pay $9.5 million in penalties because of earlier safety infractions. FAA officials said the latest fine stems from record keeping and maintenance infractions similar to those found in the earlier action.

Transportation secretary says Texas Air safety probe should reassure travelers

Burnley

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley said today the federal investigation of Texas Air Corp. and its subsidiary Eastern Airlines should be considered a "shot across the bow" of any airline that might compromise safety due to financial pressures.

Meanwhile, an Eastern official blamed the investigation announced Wednesday on pressure from unions.

Burnley also said that air travelers should be greatly reassured by a planned month-long safety probe of Eastern's fleet, saying it could bring "the safest 30 days in the history of that airline or almost any airline in U.S. history."

Burnley, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said he would not hesitate to fly Eastern despite the investigation and a proposed $823,000 fine he announced on Wednesday.

Burnley said Federal Aviation Administration officials have not been satisfied with Eastern's performance since it was taken over by Texas Air 14 months ago. "They've made a lot of progress on the safety side, on the maintenance side, but we don't know that they're quite where we want them to be," he said.

"We've got to be absolutely certain that no airline is building up financial pressures that cause anybody in the company to think that there's any reason to cut on the safety side," Burnley said. "If there's any other airline in this country which is even contemplating that strategy , I certainly hope that they take this as a shot across the bow."

Eastern President Phil Bakes blamed the FAA action on pressure from unions which have raised public safety issues during negotiations with the airlines. Bakes said on "CBS This Morning" that Eastern has invested $150 million more in maintenance since the Texas Air takeover.

"The FAA has been under enormous political pressure because of the union negotiations," he said.

Eastern ran full-page ads in newspapers today, including The Washington Post and The New York Times, saying it welcomed the probe because it will show the airline is operating safely and has been unfairly treated by federal authorities.

"We're confident the outcome will be a very good one," Bates said.

Texas Air called both investigations unwarranted and blamed them on pressure from union leaders who "have mounted a continuing campaign of distortion and lies" about safety at both Eastern and another subsidiary, Continental Airlines.

Continental is the country's fourth largest airline, while Eastern is the sixth largest. Together they carry nearly 20 percent of the nation's air traffic.

Eastern has for months been embroiled in a bitter confrontation with its labor unions, which are resisting management's call for significant contract concessions.

Delegates give Dukakis lead over Jackson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic party leaders and politicians whose support as "super delegates" could prove crucial in winning the presidential nomination are giving Michael Dukakis most of the 49-delegate lead he holds over rival Jesse Jackson.

Were it not for the support of these delegates, who are going to the Democratic National Convention because of offices they currently or formerly held, Dukakis would be ahead of Jackson by fewer than seven delegate votes, according to a survey by The Associated Press.

Dukakis has 764.15 delegates overall including 72.5 votes from super delegates. He has gained 24 of those super delegates over the last month, including nine members of the Senate nominated this week to attend the party's convention.

By comparison, Jackson is supported by none of the 32 senators nominated this week. He has 715.1 delegates overall, including 30.1 super delegates, a gain of 11 over the last month.

Sens. Albert Gore of Tennessee and Paul Simon of Illinois, whose own presidential campaigns are lagging far behind those of Dukakis and Jackson, were nominated by their Senate colleagues to be convention delegates. Gore picked up an additional four Senate delegates, while Simon gained two.

The nominations were made in a closed-door meeting of Senate Democrats on Tuesday. A list of the nominees was obtained by the AP.

Still, 268.25 super delegates, most of those chosen so far, remain uncommitted, some saying they believe they have an obligation to defer making a choice and others saying they just can't make up their minds. Sixteen of the senators named so far are uncommitted.

"It looks wide open," said LarryAnn Willis, a delegate from Oregon. "I'm not convinced that any of the three candidates still in the field are who we should go with."

Others are waiting for local party leaders to make a decision so they can follow suit. Leo O'Brien, a delegate from New York who is party chairman in Albany County, said he put off picking a candidate until Gov. Mario Cuomo endorsed a hopeful.

Then Cuomo said last week he would not endorse anyone until the primaries and caucuses are over in June.

"I waited for Mario, and now I'm left holding the bag," O'Brien said.

In all 4,164 votes are to be cast at the national convention July 18-21 in Atlanta, and 2,083 are needed to win the nomination.

The super delegates from the House and Senate will be among as many as 646 party leaders, governors and others who will be national convention delegates.

Former Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson warned that the super delegates should not be used to thwart Jesse Jackson's candidacy.

"I think the Democratic Party must avoid at all costs even the perception that it is acting in any way to deny that which Jesse Jackson has won fair and square," he said.

Gore, who is running a distant third in the overall delegate count with 404.55, has the support of 33.55 super delegates, 10 of whom have become supporters in the last month.

Simon, who suspended active campaigning after his single-digit, fourth-place finish in Wisconsin, has picked up three super delegates over the past month, raising his overall total to 171.5, including 18.5 super delegates.

The Simon campaign has been urging super delegates to stay uncommitted, according to George Miller, a delegate from Texas who said campaign officials told him "worse things could happen than a brokered convention."

While the campaigns have been trying to win over super delegates, at least one says he's been overlooked: James Jones, a former state senator from Virginia.

"I don't get no respect, even if I am a super delegate," he said. "It's amazing that no one has called, but I think it shows the extent to which the national campaigns are stretched thin."

Reagan says he didn't know about fabricated quotes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan insists that he was never aware his spokesman concocted quotes for him and says he is getting tired of "kiss-and-tell books" written by his former aides.

Reagan, answering questions at a meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, also said Jesse Jackson's policies have not been scrutinized adequately in the Democratic presidential race because it might be "misinterpreted into some kind of racial attack."

In a wide-ranging question-and-answer session on Wednesday, the president commented for the first time on two issues — the sensitive topic of race in the 1988 presidential race and the controversy over the new book by his former spokesman, Larry Speakes.

Speakes, in his book "Speaking Out," reveals that he twice gave quotes to the press corps claiming the words were Reagan's when in fact they were not. One incident occurred after the downing of a Korean Air Lines jet in 1983, and the other came during the 1985 Geneva summit between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

When the story surfaced earlier this week, Reagan aides described the president as angry to learn of the deception. Speakes, however, said in subsequent interviews that Reagan knew at the time of the practice and did not object.

On Wednesday, Reagan said, "I was not aware of that and just learned it recently, as all the rest of you did, and I can tell you right now that I have no affection for these kiss-and-tell books that are being written, and I find it entirely fiction."

Reagan did not directly answer the question of whether he approved of the practice or would allow it to continue. His current spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, has condemned the practice.

Reagan's reference to "kiss-and-tell" books evidently refers not only to Speakes' book, but to "Behind the Scenes," written by his former deputy chief of staff, Michael K. Deaver, and a forthcoming volume by former chief of staff Donald T. Regan.

The president also was asked about Speakes' contention that he "does not read many newspapers thoroughly."

"Well, I begin with the comics," Reagan said, confirming part of Speakes' account and drawing a laugh from his audience in the process.

The president said that was "a lifetime habit," and that he then turns to the editorial pages. He said he also looks through news clippings prepared by his staff because of the volume of papers published outside of Washington.

Woman goes ahead with abortion despite Illinois court order

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A woman underwent an abortion in defiance of a court order obtained by the would-be father, but attorneys for both sides still want the state Supreme Court to settle the dispute.

At issue is whether a woman has the sole authority to decide to have an abortion or if a father has rights that give him a say in the decision.

Attorneys for the 18-year-old Terre Haute woman told the high court Wednesday that she had terminated her first-trimester pregnancy, but said the decision was hers alone.

Their notice came a day after they asked the high court for an immediate review of the lower court injunction that prohibited an abortion.

A 61-page brief by the man's attorney, James Bopp Jr., said the woman's reasons for wanting an abortion are "an immature reasoning process, are insubstantial and border on the frivolous, and do not outweigh the strong interests of the father in seeing the child born and in his custody."

Bopp described the woman as an unemployed high school dropout who began a relationship with the man, a delivery truck driver in Terre Haute, following a date on New Year's Eve.

The lower court ruling cited testimony that the woman wanted an abortion to preserve her figure , Bopp said.

Gold eases way back into world monetary market

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gold, the magical metal, is easing its way back on the world monetary stage after a 15-year absence.

The latest move is admittedly a small one, far short of returning to the gold standard which ruled world currency values for almost three decades following World War II.

But the top finance leaders of the seven major industrial nations did endorse a plan Wednesday to use the price of certain commodities to help them coordinate economic policies.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, who is pushing the idea, has singled out gold as one of the commodities which should be included as a barometer in guiding policy decisions by the world's largest economic powers.

The so-called Group of Seven, including the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy, also agreed at their Wednesday meeting to continue efforts aimed at preventing the dollar from declining any further.

The United States and its six allies decided in September 1985 to push the dollar lower to correct America's huge trade deficit, but the countries have been trying since February 1987 to halt the currency's decline.

The effort did not meet with much success last year, and the steadily deteriorating dollar was cited as one of the reasons the world's financial markets were thrown into turmoil last October.

But since Dec. 22, the major industrial countries have crafted a new strategy to stabilize the dollar and that agreement has held for the past four months, backed up by periodic intervention in currency markets, the process of buying the dollar to prop up its value.

In early trading in Tokyo, the dollar dipped marginally as analysts said the Group of Seven statement contained nothing which had not been expected.

Baker first unveiled his commodity price indicator at the last meeting of the seven countries' finance leaders in September. Some nations expressed skepticism then, wondering whether the idea was a veiled effort to re-introduce a gold standard.

But Baker picked up enough converts to get the proposal endorsed, although other finance ministers stressed that many details of the plan, including just what commodities to include, still remain to be worked out.

Baker has insisted that his approach is not an effort to return to the gold-based monetary system that existed between the end of World War II and 1973. For most of that time, the price of gold was fixed at $35 an ounce and the currencies of other governments were set at fixed rates based on the dollar.

President Nixon broke the link with gold in 1973 as the so-called Bretton Woods system crumbled under the weight of rising inflation and large trade imbalances.

Couple, girl fight to regain custody

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A couple who sought to adopt the baby of an unmarried Navajo woman have agreed to give the girl back but vow to fight alongside the mother to regain custody of the child from tribal authorities.

Despite the wishes of Allyssa Kristian Pitts' 21-year-old mother and the couple that has cared for her since her birth July 20, a judge has ruled that the child must be turned over today to Navajo authorities.

Patricia Keetso, who gave up Allyssa so that she could have a life away from the reservation in Arizona, says she'll fight to get her back and return her to the would-be adoptive parents, Cheryl and Rick Pitts.

"I love my baby and want her to get something out of life," she said tearfully at the Pitts' home Wednesday.

The Pittses, saying they are "devastated" by the prospect of losing the baby they love and helped bring into the world, still hope to get her back but aren't sure what will happen next.

Keetso said her mother, who was brought to California for the court hearings, was threatened with prison if the baby were not returned.

Smelt spawning again

CHICAGO (AP) — On spring nights, pearls of light from lanterns and campfires sparkle along Chicago's dark seawalls and breakwaters as thousands of people wait for tiny silvery fish to wander into their nets.

The smelt are spawning again, a decades-old rite of spring that is part social event, part business and part recreation along the Great Lakes during the six-week season from April 1 to May 15.

Smelting is almost a way of life.

"I've been doing it for 30 years, and I've run through friends, family, my kids — nobody loves it quite as much as I do," said Herman Telkamp, who staked out his spot four hours before he could legally lower his net at 7 p.m.

Rainbow smelt, 6- to 8-inch members of a family resembling the trout, have been eaten in Europe and Canada for centuries.

Dolphin law criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators are criticizing the Reagan administration for taking four years to implement a law aimed at reducing the number of dolphins that drown when they are snared by huge tuna nets in the eastern Pacific.

"Wholly inadequate," says John Kerry, D-Mass.

"An embarrassment," adds John Breaux, D-La., one of the authors of the 1984 law passed by Congress in an effort to put teeth into the Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972.

The 1984 statute requires the National Marine Fisheries Service to bar importation of tuna caught by a foreign nation if its tuna boats fail to take steps to protect dolphins, as the U.S. tuna industry is required to do.

"The foreign tuna fleet in the eastern tropical Pacific is killing over 100,000 dolphins a year and our government agencies have done little to implement the 1984 changes designed to address the problem," Kerry said Wednesday at a Commerce Committee hearing.

Dolphin kills began increasing in the late 1950s, when tuna fishermen switched from baited hooks to gigantic seines. For reasons unclear to biologists, the popular yellowfin tuna congregate beneath groups of surface-swimming dolphin, which then serve to mark the tuna schools to fishing boats.

Sandinista abuse revealed

MIAMI (AP) — A pilot held five years in Sandinista prisons said he was threatened with death and denied medical treatment as part of systematic psychological torture apparently directed by Cuban intelligence agents.

Roberto Amador, 42, shot down during a Contra supply flight in 1983, was one of the first prisoners freed as part of last month's truce agreement between the Nicaraguan Resistance and the leftist Sandinista government.

He arrived here Saturday to join his wife and three children.

Amador and other Contra officials said at a news conference here Wednesday they believe there are up to 12,000 political prisoners inside Nicaraguan jails despite government claims to the contrary.

Amador said he had been threatened before leaving Nicaragua and told not to talk to reporters.

Commercial disputed

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — Kellogg Co. has refused to change or cancel one of its TV commercials for Nut & Honey Crunch cereal, despite claims by an activist group that the ad promotes violence against homosexuals.

In the commercials, cereal eaters play off the Nut & Honey name by answering the question of what they are eating with the reply, "Nothing, honey."

The Chicago-based Coalition Against Media-Marketing Prejudice called "offensive" one version that shows a western chuck wagon cook being threatened by gun-toting cowboys who believe he has called them "honey."

The commercials "send a serious and dangerous message — that gays and lesbians or anyone perceived as sexually or behaviorally different are easy and acceptable targets for trivialization," the group said Wednesday outside Kellogg headquarters.

Kellogg, however, said it would be overreacting to change the commercial or pull it off the air. The company refused to accept evidence from experts on psychology, advertising and violence who backed the group's claim, said spokesman Arthur Johnston.

Clean air act turned down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency today declined to establish a new clean air standard to protect asthmatics from peak exposures to sulfur dioxide that might last only a few minutes.

Those exposures might occur around sources that meet all current standards based on longer measurement times, sources like coal-burning power plants, smelters and factory boilers.

A burst of emissions from a plant, or even rare wind patterns, might cause people living nearby to face high concentrations briefly.

Environmentalists denounced the decision embodied in a draft affirmation of current standards.

"There is a whole slew of evidence" accumulated since 1980 that many asthmatics are not being protected by current standards, said David Doniger of the Natural Resources Defense Council, claiming that "for this administration the wishes of the utility industry always come first."

Bob Yuhnke of the Environmental Defense Fund said his organization would try to get a court to order a short-term standard established.

DEA boosts firepower

MIAMI (AP) — Federal agents fighting America's war against drugs got a hefty boost of firepower Wednesday with the announcement here that they will carry semi-automatic submachine guns.

Each of South Florida's 341 Drug Enforcement Administration agents will be issued a 9mm Colt semi-automatic submachine gun that will fire three bursts every time an agent pulls the trigger, officials said.

The increased firepower was welcome news for DEA agents who until now had to go into battle carrying six-shot, .38-caliber handguns and shotguns against drug dealers firing 50 and 100 rounds a pop from fully automatic Uzi and Mac-10 machine guns.

DEA spokesman Jack Hook called it parity.

All 3,000 DEA agents will be issued submachine guns as quickly as possible, officials said, but South Florida was chosen to be first because it is a mecca for drug dealers.

Study: Prison doesn't work

CHICAGO (AP) — Get-tough criminal laws may satisfy public opinion, but they are failing to cut crime rates and are forcing prison officials to cope with even more prison crowding, a new study concludes.

"The prison route, the idea that we ought to send everybody to prison and keep them there, just doesn't work," said John Austin of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

"In California, for instance, the number of inmates has tripled since 1977, and the crime rate has not dropped 1 percent," he said Wednesday.

The study, based on the crime and incarceration rates for nine states, projects a 30 percent increase in parolees over the same five-year period.

Youth dies from fall

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A 19-year-old fell to his death from an upper-level at Anaheim Stadium during a California Angels-Chicago White Sox game, officials said.

The youth struck the roof of a gate outside the stadium and then fell to the ground, landing on his back, during the sixth inning of Wednesday night's game, said Sheri Erlewine of the city's public information office.

The victim died immediately according to a coroner's investigator, who withheld the victim's identity pending notification of relatives. Police were investigating, but believed it was an accident, Erlewine said.

Shultz says he is confident Soviets will honor Afghan agreement

Shultz

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says he is confident the Soviets will keep their promise to withdraw from Afghanistan under an agreement hailed as the first step toward ending the bitter Afghan struggle.

Shultz flew to Geneva today to join Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze at the ceremonial signing of a series of settlement accords. Among them is a Soviet pledge to withdraw an estimated 115,000 Red Army troops from Afghanistan.

Shultz and Shevardnadze also plan to issue statements reaffirming their nations' right to continue aiding the Afghan factions — assuring that the war will go on as a civil conflict.

There was fresh evidence of continued warfare on the eve of the signing.

U.S. government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed reports from Western diplomats in Pakistan earlier in the week that Soviet forces near Kabul were sent to relieve Gardez, a beleaguered Afghan Army garrison south of the capital, amid fierce fighting with U.S.-backed guerrillas.

The units were said to consist of an undetermined number of soldiers and 420 vehicles, including T-72 tanks, armored personnel carriers and mobile rocket launchers.

Gardez is 80 miles south of Kabul and 60 miles from Pakistan, staging area for U.S. aid to the resistance.

Mujahedeen guerrillas recently cut the road to Gardez, where a Soviet special forces regiment is garrisoned, said one source.

Another source said convoys of trucks also were sent into Afghanistan from the Soviet Union in the past week, but it was not clear if the trucks were filled with troops or were empty.

Before leaving for Geneva, Shultz told members of House and Senate foreign affairs committees that he had faith in the Soviet promise, committee members said.

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, one of Capitol Hill's ardent champions of U.S. support for anti-Soviet guerrillas in Afghanistan, said after meeting Shultz he accepted the assurances.

"The bottom line is that the Soviets are getting out," Wilson said.

Under the withdrawal agreement, the Soviets are supposed to pull out 50 percent of their troops within 90 days, and the entire contingent by Feb. 15, 1989.

That would mark the end of a Soviet troop presence in Afghanistan that began with a December 1979 airlift of Red Army forces into Kabul to back pro-Moscow Afghan leaders in their war against insurgents.

Hijacking offers no easy solutions

One disturbing fact became depressingly obvious this week as the hours ticked away while Arab hijackers still controlled a Kuwaiti jetliner: All the experience with hijackings in the past, all the calls for airport security screening of passengers, all the analyses of so-called "experts" is meaningless when a hijacking is in progress. At that point, it's too late to discuss ways to prevent hijackings and becomes rather a matter of dealing with the crisis situation.

This most recent hijacking hasn't been markedly different from the others in years past. Basically, it has involved the hijackers holding the plane and passengers hostage and demanding that authorities meet their demands, in this case calling for Kuwait to free 17 convicted terrorists. Then the hijackers want to be allowed to leave for an unspecified neutral country.

As in past hijackings, being in the media spotlight has, in all probability, given the hijackers another thing they've wanted: an international platform from which to issue their demands. It has become obvious in recent years that as long as the world allows this type of lawlessness to exist without swift retribution, it will continue.

Again with this hijacking, involved officials discussed storming the aircraft in hopes of saving the lives of at least some of the passengers. That idea apparently was rejected since an attack did not occur. Was that the right decision? From one standpoint, perhaps it was since more passengers have not been killed. Perhaps not, however, from the standpoint of the message that it transmitted to all would-be hijackers — that as long as they can hijack a plane and hold passengers against their will with the threat of death, the civilized world is helpless to do anything to stop them.

As long as they can satisfy their lust for power via a hijacking, terrorists will resort to that means of "controlling" society. But what can society do to thwart such lawlessness? Society isn't helpless, but the choices aren't without costs of their own.

It's always a difficult decision to put innocent individuals at additional risk in a hijacking. After all, they're in such a predicament usually at no fault of their own. Examine the options:

If no action is taken to storm the plane or to rescue passengers, all or a number of them could eventually be released unharmed as has been the case this time. As time goes on, perhaps the hijackers may make an error that would allow the aircraft to be retaken by officials.

On the other hand if the plane is stormed, perhaps all or most of the passengers could be freed and all or most of the hijackers either captured or killed. Such action also would tell the involved hijackers and any potential terrorists that the world was not simply going to look the other way at such actions.

But both scenarios leave out the worst case examples of what could go wrong, ending in death for the passengers and crew and destruction of the aircraft. That's always a very real possibility. And even in a standoff, some passengers likely will be "sacrificed," as in this instance.

Still, society's hands are not tied completely. What society can do is continue to upgrade airport security around the globe and to work toward development of a special strike force to combat terrorists during actual hijackings if circumstances seem conducive to such an approach. Those steps and others potentially can reduce the terrorism risk.

For the long haul, however, responding to actual hijackings will mean making tough decisions about the fate of those held against their will by hijackers — and that isn't a pleasant thought.

Another View:

The wrong answer

Under a 1981 law, a family otherwise qualified for food stamps cannot get them if its need results from the fact that one of its earners is on strike. For no one else does food stamp eligibility depend on the cause of his or her poverty. The program was designed to keep people — and especially children — from going hungry, for any reason. A person can quit work voluntarily and his or her family is still eligible for food stamps if the family's resources are meager enough. The only requirement is that an unemployed worker be willing to accept work that becomes available elsewhere.

There may be room for abuse here, but given that these are the rules, the exclusion of strikers is patently discriminatory. Nonetheless, the other day the U.S. Supreme Court, while acknowledging that fact, upheld the anti-strike rule, 5-3. The majority found that the discrimination passed constitutional muster because it served two legitimate purposes — saving money and maintaining the federal government's neutrality in private labor disputes.

That argument is not as reasonable as it sounds. As the dissenting justices pointed out, the money saved by the anti-strikers rule is insignificant. Strikers' families, Justice Thurgood Marshall wrote, have accounted for less than one-third of 1 percent "of non-public-assistance households participating in the food stamp program." More important, if saving money stands as sufficient justification for discrimination, then Congress would be allowed to exclude any politically unpopular group from any public benefit.

As to the supposed neutrality of the anti-striker rule, the dissenting justices, like the lower court whose decision the Supreme Court has now overturned demonstrated that it just isn't so. No law excludes the management side of a labor dispute from any public benefit for which it might otherwise be eligible — like government loans to relieve strike-caused financial difficulties, or even food stamps themselves, if, for instance, a small-business-owner's income drops because his or her workers are on strike. "Altering the backdrop of governmental support in this one-sided and devastating way," as Marshall wrote, "amounts to a penalty on strikers, not neutrality."

The lower-court had gone too far when it held that the anti-striker rule violated the constitutional right to free association — by making it difficult for individuals to stick by both their unions and their families. As the Supreme Court majority countered the government does not abrogate a right by refusing to subsidize it. But a different issue is raised when the government penalizes people for exercising their rights. The question at the heart of this case was not about subsidies but about discrimination — in a program whose benefits are otherwise based solely upon need. The Supreme Court answered it wrong.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, April 14, the 105th day of 1988. There are 261 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 14, 1865, President Abraham Lincoln was shot and mortally wounded by John Wilkes Booth while attending the comedy "Our American Cousin" at Ford's Theater in Washington. The president died the following morning.

On this date:

In 1759, George Frideric Handel died in London.

Bush survey draws praise, dodging

WASHINGTON — Before Super Tuesday, George Bush had few admitted fans among the men and women who have shared the Reagan Cabinet with him. Now, it is not surprising that the Cabinet members, all Republicans, have nice things to say about the man who has the nomination in his grasp.

Jack Anderson

But when our associate Dale Van Atta surveyed 33 current and former Cabinet members in mid-February, the majority politely dodged the request to assess Bush, or they criticized him off the record.

When we asked for "examples of policy decisions or actions in which the opinion or work of Mr. Bush made a difference over the past seven years," only five accepted our invitation.

Two of the five — Secretary of State George Shultz and former White House chief of staff and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan — spoke up only after Bush had the nomination sewn up.

The No. 2 man at the State Department, John Whitehead, spoke for Shultz. He said Shultz was "an admirer" and that Bush undertook "substantive policy trips" for the president. He conducted sensitive discussions, "working hard and doing his homework well" for these missions.

An aide to Donald Regan said his boss appreciated Bush's input and was high on the efforts of a Bush-led 1982 task force on immigration, drug and economic problems in south Florida.

Meanwhile, Washington is waiting for Regan's book on his White House years, due out in several weeks, to see how he deals with Bush. A source who has read the manuscript says Regan is even-handed about Bush, though his book will do nothing to dispel the notion of Bush as an outsider. That is a reputation Bush himself has nurtured in his protestations of innocence regarding his role in the crucial decisions about the Iran-contra arms deals.

The two men willing to put themselves firmly in Bush's camp before Super Tuesday were former Secretary of Energy James B. Edwards and former Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell.

Edwards told us: "I think George Bush, and I sincerely mean this, will make one of the finest presidents this country has seen."

He praised Bush's "leadership in the area of reducing the amount of regulations that we had" when Bush served in 1981 as chairman of the Presidential Task Force on Regulatory Relief.

But former Secretary of State Alexander Haig has been highly critical of Bush's role with that very task force. During the heat of his own presidential campaign last December, Haig charged that Bush took two and a half years to produce a 126-page report. Haig said, "It's a big, thick report. But it's not as big or thick as the regulations that remain on the books, untouched to this day."

Bell praised Bush for the same task force. In a typed, two-page letter, Bell wrote us that the task force had provided recommendations for his department "concerning administration of student financial aid programs and guaranteed student loans."

According to Bell, Bush "had a deep and genuine interest in providing access to higher education to needy students."

Bell wrote, "I believe that George Bush will be an excellent president ... He is a very intelligent, personable and dedicated leader. He is a man of the highest moral principles and his family members all reflect the fact that he is a family man and a dedicated father."

Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Samuel R. Pierce, Jr., was more measured in his response. But he pointed to a record that demonstrated that Bush "has been a very effective vice president who has contributed substantially to the development and execution of administration policy."

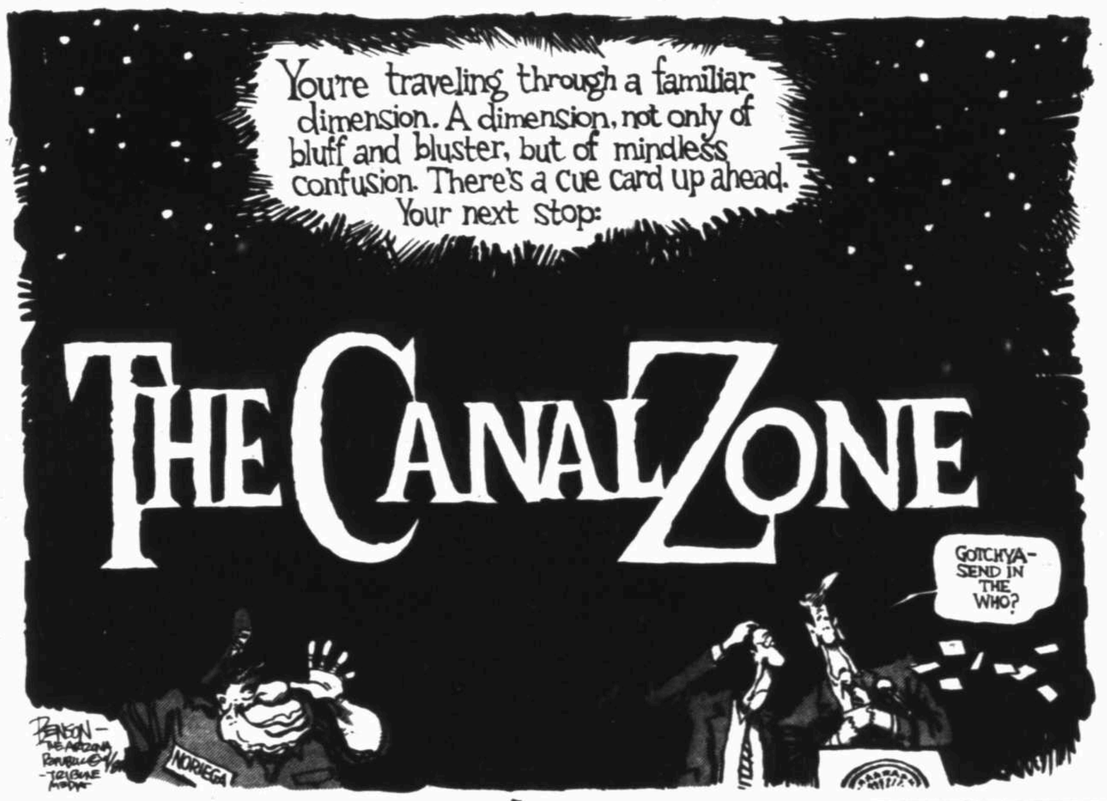

Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng said, "Bush has been a splendid vice president and a key member of the Reagan team." But Lyng cautioned that he did not "intend to indicate a personal preference among the candidates. It is my intention to support the Republican nominee strongly."

Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci had his press spokesman, J. Daniel Howard, write a letter: "Mr. Carlucci believes that it would be inappropriate for any sitting secretary of defense to take part in the ongoing political debate. Please be assured that his reluctance to answer your questions in no way should reflect upon his opinion of the vice president. On the contrary, Secretary Carlucci holds the vice president in the highest regard."

U.N. Ambassador Vernon Walters responded through a letter from Rose Sue Berstein, his press spokeswoman: "The ambassador is a personal friend of the vice president, for whom he has great respect. He does not think it appropriate for him to answer the questions you have posed in your letter."

Finally, former Secretary of Health and Human Services Richard S. Schweiker said he didn't want to respond because he is currently president of a life insurance trade association that doesn't support candidates.

Smoker has one life to give for cigarette!

The firing squad from Riker's Island marched out on the parade ground. Six soldiers, led by Captain Loughboro, lined up at attention, facing the wooden post.

Art Buchwald

Two soldiers, one on each side, marched Tony the Termite to the post and tied his hands behind his back. Captain Loughboro stepped forward with a blindfold and tied it around Tony's eyes.

"Would you care for a cigarette?" the captain asked.

"Yes, I would," Tony said. "I'll take a king-sized mentholated."

The captain drew one out of a pack and placed it in Tony's mouth. He was about to light it when a uniformed inspector from the city's Anti-Smoking Unit ran on the parade ground and cried, "Halt! You cannot smoke on this property during a firing squad execution."

"That's ridiculous," the captain said. "Puffing a last cigarette before being shot is an ancient military tradition."

"Never mind tradition. No one is permitted to blow smoke within 10 feet of another person as it's hazardous to everyone's health. Tony isn't just doing harm to himself but to the firing squad as well."

"Suppose I move the squad 10 feet back?" the captain suggested.

"That still would be considered secondhand smoke. Don't you have any respect for human life at all?"

The captain turned to Tony, "Would it bother you to give up your last cigarette?"

"It certainly would. This is a free country and when it comes to puffing, I know my rights."

The captain riffled through a book. "He's right," he said to the inspector. "It says here no one can be shot unless he is offered a last cigarette of his choice."

"But we're only doing this for his health. If Tony sucks on that fag he's going to develop a terrible cough."

"I'll worry about that," Tony protested. "It's too late to quit smoking. I should have done it years ago when it had some meaning. Now, let's knock off the sweet talk and give me a light."

The inspector said, "That's the trouble with people who face capital punishment. They think of nobody but themselves. We are never going to have clean air if smokers ignore the rights of others. Well, I'm warning you. If the captain lights up your cigarette I'm going to arrest you for violating the law and it's going to cost you."

Tony asked, "What will I get?"

"Thirty days and a $50 fine."

"I'll take it. That's better than what they are going to give me now," Tony declared.

The captain barked at the inspector, "I won't hear of it. This man has been sentenced to die by the firing squad and you are interfering in the outcome. Get out of here."

"I'm giving you notice," the inspector admonished, "that you can be locked up for aiding and abetting a smoker, which is a capital crime. I suggest you dispense with the cigarette and get on with the execution."

Tony said, "I protest. There is nothing to prove that smoking is hazardous to your health. I will fight to my dying breath to enjoy my last cigarette because I have only one puff to give for my country. I say, 'Give me liberty or give me a Marlboro.' "

The captain said to the inspector, "Now you've done it. We're not going to be able to shoot him until he goes to Smoke Enders."

GEORGE F. WILL

Brinkley's history captures D.C.'s substance

WASHINGTON — A tall, stately, elegant Washington monument, David Brinkley, has written a book, "Washington Goes to War." Trees do not grow fast enough to produce the paper that will be needed to print copies of it when readers start spreading the word about his hilarious and instructive tour through the alphabet soup of wartime Washington's proliferating agencies such as PWPGSJSISIACWPB (it had something to do with plumbers).

George F. Will

It was a Washington of patriotic slogans ("An idle typewriter is a help to Hitler"); a Washington in which a gas mask once hung from the President's wheelchair and the second most powerful person was the Speaker of the House, a Texan whose office wall was adorned with five portraits of Robert E. Lee, all facing south, and who did not socialize because "these Washington society women never serve chili"; a Washington to which the Soviet foreign minister came carrying a suitcase filled with sausages, brown bread and a pistol; a Washington with 15,000 outdoor privies and a cleaning establishment that dealt with white flannel suits by taking each one completely apart at the seams, hand washing each piece, drying each in the sun, then reassembling the suit in a process that took at least a week (longer when skies were cloudy) and cost $10.

Brinkley has written an impressionist history, comparable to a pointillist painting composed of small points of color which, seen whole, comprise a remarkably truthful record of reality. Impressionism was a style of painting especially accessible to the growing middle-class public of the late 19th century. Brinkley's book is history rescued from the sterility of the academic clerisy and made accessible to the general reader.

Since Napoleon, war has been an increasingly collective and collectivizing enterprise. It has been the great intensifier of forces and accelerator of history. The Second World War lit the long fuse of liberation for women and blacks. (At NBC, as elsewhere, women were not allowed to broadcast news because the company considered them "biologically incapable of total objectivity.")

There were many wartime drives for scarce materials such as rubber. (Interior Secretary Ickes scooped up the White House doormat, and a service-station sign announced, "We accept anything made of rubber except condoms.") One of Brinkley's riveting details, inserted in his narrative without fanfare, is that a scrap-metal drive collected an old slave chain from Mississippi. The melting of that chain was a sign of coming times.

Brinkley's book has an understandable undertone of melancholy about the transformation that war wrought on the provincial 19th-century city that Washington was until the 1940s. But the cure needed for what ails Washington today would be more of what has made today's Washington — growth. It needs a growing diversity. What ails Washington is the self-regarding, self-absorbed knowingness of a town with too few competing elites — commercial, financial, religious, academic, literary, artistic.

Much, but not too much, has been made of the recent move of the quarterly journal, "The Public Interest," from New York to Washington. The move symbolizes the supplanting of New York by Washington as the intellectually ascendant city. Lawrence Mone of the Manhattan Institute is among those who worry, with reason, about unhealthy aspects of this.

Washingtonians, he says, pride themselves on merely instrumental knowledge, of how things work and the personalities who make them work. This produces a myopic pragmatism altogether too proud of itself and in need of enrichment by abstract speculation. Washington has a "brushfire-fighting mentality" and a blinkered indifference to questions not intensely practical.

The capital came to be in a swampy village because of a deal struck in Manhattan in June, 1790, when the secretary of state (Jefferson), treasury secretary (Hamilton) and a Virginia congressman (Madison) met. The deal was that the national government would move south and would pay the Revolutionary War debts, many of them owed to Northern financiers, many of whom were Hamilton's friends.

This was, as Sen. Pat Moynihan says, an essentially "constitutional" settlement establishing "a separation of powers" as important in its way as that between the branches of government. Culture "in the largest sense" was in New York. Government was to be elsewhere. The result has been provincialism in both places.

When read with this in mind, Brinkley's is a cautionary tale about how the nation's capital achieved critical mass. Deprived of New York's diversity, Washington is, in Moynihan's words, "not prepared to be great. The power is unrefined. There are too few filters of sensibility through which ambition must pass toward fulfillment; too few standards that must be set." And too few Brinkleys.

Local Rotarians to mark 60th anniversary

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The Midland Downtown Rotary Club celebrates its 60th anniversary this month, and the history of the organization is in a very real sense the history of Midland.

According to the official history of the club, in January 1928 Ellis Boyd, of Fort Worth, a district governor and member of the Sweetwater club was appointed sponsor of the Midland club. On Jan. 26, 1928, a meeting was held in the offices of the Southern Ice and Utilities Company — and the first officers and directors were elected.

W. Ily Pratt, a dry goods retailer, was elected president. Kenneth Ambrose was elected vice-president, Elliott H. Barron was elected secretary, amd Fred Wemple was elected treasurer.

The charter list of Midland's Rotary Club numbered 25 when the group was certified to the Rotary International offices in Chicago.

In 1988 the Midland club has 118 members. As they prepare to attend an anniversary dinner tonight at Midland Country Club, longtime Rotarians reflected on the club's history.

James Mims, a member since 1945, is the son of Percy J, Mims, one of the charter members of the club.

"Lots of fun," Mims said. "It is fun to reminisce, and to think about those people who were the lifeblood of the community when it was just a small town."

When the club numbered only 25, those 25 "were the community, literally," Mims said.

"It was a very close, tight-knit community," he said. "Folks like Clarence Scharbauer Sr., and Ralph Barron, who helped organize the First Baptist Church."

Percy Mims, who started the family insurance firm, also started West Texas Abstract Co., his son recalled.

The current Rotary Club is as strong as ever, according to Mims.

"Essentially, Rotary was organized to let businessmen get to know one another, and let them start personal friendships," he said. "That need is still there.

"Essentially, Rotary was organized to let businessmen get to know one another, and let them start personal friendships. That need is still there. Rotary is alive and well."

— James Mims,
Rotary Club member

"Rotary is alive and well."

Bill Collyns, an honorary member of the Midland club since 1966, regularly has attended meetings since 1935.

"Rotary has been very aggressive and has done a lot of youth work," Collyns said. "There has been a lot of interest in High Sky Childrens' Ranch, and a boys' club was organized."

The anniversary is "quite an accomplishment," according to Collyns.

"Through the years Rotary has been very beneficial for Midland," he said.

James Zimmerman, a former club president and member since 1966, recalled some of the charitable work of the club — and it's biggest challenge as an international organization.

"Rotary International is on a campaign to wipe polio out," Zimmerman saod. "And we are going to do it. It's called "Polio Plus, " and the idea is to pay for immunizations, especially in the Third World countries."

The campaign — which the local club is participating in — already has "raised millions," Zimmerman said.

The club's scholarship programs and foreign student exchange program have been a big part of his Rotary experience, Zimmerman saidas he looked forward to the evening's celebration.

"I'm certainly going to be there, and I expect we will have quite a get-together," he said.

MC schedules final two speakers of lecture series

From Staff Reports

Final two speakers for Midland College's Free Enterprise Lecture Series make their presentations next week.

Erle Nye, president of Texas Utilities Company in Dallas, and Odessan John Bushman, chairman of the board for both Banc Home Savings Association and A-1 Mobile Homes, are to be presenters.

Nye will speak on Tuesday and Bushman on Thursday.

Both presentations will be in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium, starting at 7:30 p.m.

Nye's topic is "Changes in Economic Development and Diversification in Texas."

Bushman will speak on "The Permian Basin Today."

Each lecture lasts about 30-45 minutes, followed by a question period and reception. The public is invited to attend the lectures without charge.

Nye received his Bachelor of Science degree in Electrical Engineering from Texas A&M University and his Juris Doctor degree from Southern Methodist University. A native of Fort Worth, he served in the U.S. Army Signal Corps following graduation from college. Proposed law won't effect pawn shops

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

A proposed city ordinance calling establishing a 10-day holding period for goods purchased by second-hand dealers won't have much affect on Midland's pawn shops, the police sergeant who recommended the measure said Wednesday.

Sgt. Tom Hyde said that pawn shop owners under state law already must hold goods 90 days before resale.

The City Council Tuesday tabled consideration of the measure because city staff had not consulted with second-hand goods dealers — including pawn shop owners — prior to bringing the law before the council.

Said Mayor Carroll Thomas Wednesday of the postponement: "On more than one occasion in the past we've passed something without properly consulting with the people directly affected.

"I just felt like we've got to stop doing that," he said.

Thomas echoed concerns voiced by council members Gordon Marcum and Robert Rendall during a Tuesday council meeting that this particular ordinance may not offer much room for negotiation with the affected parties.

"We may end up not agreeing on what to do, but at least we owe them the courtesy," Thomas said.

Hyde said businesses mainly affected by the new measure would be those not already regulated by state statutes — second-hand furniture dealers, for example, or other "next to new" kinds of businesses.

Purpose of the law is to allow law enforcement officers additional time in checking with the shops in searches for stolen goods, he said. Under current city statutes, shop owners must hold goods only 48 hours, he said.

In addition to lengthening the holding time for goods, the proposed measure may offer a break to shop owners by loosening paperwork requirements, Hyde said.

Under current city law, shop owners must keep written records on all merchandise they buy for later resale. The proposed statute would establish a $25 floor under which the paperwork would be unnecessary, he said.

Chocolate, ice cream addict comes out of the closet

Todd

As I was gorging myself with milk chocolate, my boss, who likes to know what I'm up to, peered over my shoulder.

"What's this?"

My first impulse was to deny it was anything, but it was too late. Chocolate, obviously.

I could tell he savored the moment of discovery.

"You're abusing your body."

I had no intentions of hearing that ...again. But I do hear it now and then.

It seems that I am not so subtle in my slant on popular habits, including tobacco smoking — a refinement which the newspaper's city editor, Gary Ott; his sidekick, Rick Brown; and some of their underlings have mastered well.

They, especially Ott, suck on cigarettes as if they were the very breath of life and the sustainer of health.

Light up a Lucky. Walk a mile for a Camel. Cry out for Philip Morris. Puff on a Marlboro while you're at full gallop on a wild, back-country horse up in the mountains. Spend your change on Old Golds before St. Peter opens wide those pearly gates and says, "Enjoy your last smoke, fellows. No idle puffing allowed here."

On Earth, they suck and blow in the tradition of the newspaperman who is afraid his shirt-tail might get caught in the deadline squeeze before he draws that last puff from the cursed cigarette and drinks that last cup of dark, black, rich, full-bodied coffee that confirms daybreak.

Abuse my body?

I'll show them what real abuse is! I can take it. No pantywaist here. (But please don't tell my cigarette-smoking, coffee-drinking editors that my boyhood nickname out in the cotton field and in the country store was "Sissy." Imagine that.)

Puff and stuff.

Abuse is abuse is abuse.

Nobody tells me I'm abusive without getting flak. Abuse my body — this temple?

I wouldn't dare, would I?

Never. I know my priorities. I am in control. I do things right. Not first, not last, but always. Who can be more perfect? What a marvel am I. What a fool. What nonsense. What tomfoolery.

My mistake was having the chocolate out in the open. Before, I was more of a closet chocolate glutton than I am today. I'm coming out. No pretense. I am tired of hiding my true self. Yes, I am a chocolate (and ice cream) addict who demands equality and recognition. I want to gorge, gorge, gorge until I'm rollickingly dazed and throwing-up sick. Give me another "hit" of chocolate and ice cream. Lay it on and get those chocolate and ice-cream factories running day and night.

Give me fuel. Inject my veins with solace and the highs of chocolate and ice cream.

Now, were I to impart a little more bits of truth, I just might suggest that I can take it, fellows, full force. Give me a plug of tobacco, a shot of coffee, and a bottle of booze, and I'll really show the world how to live.

Yes, sir, I can tell Gary Ott (who edited this column) how the cow eats the cabbage. I could smoke up a storm if I had a mind to and leave him coughing and hacking in my wake of smoke. Like (or, is it "as") a real man, I smoked those real cigarettes — those without filters — such as Lucky Strike and Camel regularly. Mostly, I was a Lucky man. And coffee? Make the brew dark, hot and ripe. I wanted to feel it as surely as I would a shot of Kentucky moonshine or the kiss of a scrumptious woman.

Speaking of addictions, I'm glad I am not into any of that south-of-the-border stuff, such as cocaine, marijuana and heroin. Were I, I'd be in the clink, in Big Spring or Bellevue, and out of my gourd. I'm afraid that I would heighten the meaning of addictions to tobacco, coffee, women, booze, milk-chocolate, sugar, and ice cream. I want it all. Now.

Abuse my body?

I suppose so.

You see, it's an all-or-nothing thing with me.

Texaco says dead woman, husband former employees

From Staff Reports

A 26-year-old woman who was shot to death in Big Spring late Tuesday was a former employee of Texaco Inc. in Midland, as was her husband who is accused in the slaying, a company representative said Wednesday.

Carly Dunn worked for the company as a secretary in the Midland office until July 1987, according to Charlie Rentz, Texaco's manager of public and government affairs. She began work for the company in July 1982, Rentz said.

Ms. Dunn was shot to death about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday at her home in Big Spring, according to Big Spring police Capt. Lonnie Smith. Her husband, Dennis, 39, a Big Spring police officer, was arrested and has been charged with the killing, Smith said.

The Texas Rangers have been assigned to investigate the shooting because it involves a police officer, Smith said.

Dunn was a longtime Texaco employee, Rentz said.

He began work for the company in June 1969, and was a drilling foreman when he left the company in July 1987, Rentz said.

Man held on drug charges

From Staff Reports

Police Roundup

A 31-year-old Midland man is in city jail today on drug charges following his arrest Wednesday, according to Midland police.

At about 11:40 a.m. Wednesday, narcotics officers and members of the police Special Response Team (SRT) armed with a search warrant entered a home at 1603 Butternut Lane. Police found the man inside, and confiscated four grams of suspected heroin and a nine millimeter handgun, according to reports.

About $1,125 cash was also found in the home and was confiscated, according to reports.

In other reports, a 24-year-old Midland man is being held on robbery charges after he allegedly stole four dollars from a woman early today.

According to police Cpl. Jim White, the victim told police she had just exited a bus and was walking home about 3 a.m. today, when a man approached her near the intersection of Pennsylvania Avenue and Mineola Street. After a short struggle, the man fled on foot, reports said.

The victim flagged down a nearby patrol car, and told the officer about the robbery. The man was arrested minutes later at the Kent Kwik convenience store, 810 Florida Ave., police said.

The woman was not injured in the incident, White said.

Lay missionary to speak

From Staff Reports

Val Liveoak, a registered nurse and lay missionary in El Salvador, will speak about her experiences at 7 p.m. Saturday at Casa De Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane.

Ms. Liveoak has been working with a Catholic parish in rural El Salvador for 15 months, organizing a health promotion project. She is a representative of the South Central Yearly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends and a member of the Austin Friends Meeting. Her work is supported by various churches and individuals.

Her local talk is being sponsored by Midland Friend's Meeting. Anyone interested in current events in El Salvador is encouraged to attend.

Post office to aid taxpayers

From Staff Reports

Customers wishing to have their income tax returns postmarked April 15 and cannot make the customary cut-off time for mail dispatch, will be able to take their tax returns to main post office, 100 W. Wall Ave., where a service counter will be manned from 8 p.m. to midnight. During that time, returns will be postmarked April 15, according to Stan Sartain, manager of customer services.

"The only location in town that this service will be offered is inside the main post office, and the service counter will be adjacent to the mail drops inside the lobby," he said.

"Customers bringing their tax returns inside the main post office before midnight, April 15, can be assured of an April 15 postmark," Sartain said.

TCU students to protest perceived cover-up of threats against minister

FORT WORTH (AP) — Students at Texas Christian University today planned to protest what they called an administration cover-up of threats, reportedly racially motivated, against a black campus minister.

Police said two people threatened the Rev. Jessee Truvillion, who last week found a black cat with its throat slit in his car.

Truvillion, university minister to minority students, had just left a seminar sponsored by the Black Student South Africa Scholarship Fund when the pair shouted from a car, "You are a dead cat, buddy!" and yelled racial obscenities at him.

Truvillion, 53, told TCU campus police he ignored them and drove up the street, but they followed and tried to ram his convertible until he swerved off the road.

He said he stopped the car to talk to students after the two drove away. One student noticed the cat lying in the back seat.

"This was a premeditated act of racism, and everyone's denying that," said John Rodenberg, a 20-year-old religion and social-work major from Fairfax Station, Va., who organized today's rally. "We're venting out our frustrations."

TCU's coordinator of minority affairs, Logan Hampton, said he's glad students were discussing the incident, but did not think it was racist.

"TCU is no utopia, but our problems are no greater than anyone else's," he said. "It's unfortunate that people use this one incident to say TCU is racist."

Margaret Bahr, vice chancellor for student affairs, said while TCU administrators have not classified the incident as racial, they viewed it as "reprehensible" and would seek prosecution.

DEATHS

Lucy Flores

Flores

Services for Lucy "Rives" Webb Flores, 78, of Midland will be at 3 p.m. Friday in the First United Methodist Church with Dr. Charles Lutrick, pastor, officiating. Ellis Funeral Home will be handling the arrangements.

She died Tuesday evening at a local hospital.

Born on May 27, 1909 in Farmersville where she was reared, she graduated from high school and attended Wesley Junior College in Greenville and taught in a nearby community. She attended Draughn's School in Dallas and returned to Farmersville where she married S.F. Flores in 1935. In 1937 they moved to Monahans and she was named Woman of the Year by the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority in 1959. In 1964 they moved to Midland where she was a volunteer with the Head Start Program, the Department of Equal Opportunity Center, and with the Meals on Wheels Program in which she was still active at the time of her death.

Professor wants to use comics to teach English

EL PASO (AP) — A researcher plans to take a comic approach to teaching English to Spanish-speaking pre-schoolers, using cartoon strips to help the youngsters recognize words.

University of Texas-El Paso psychology professor Edmund Coleman hopes to draw on a government grant to fund his teaching method.

Words taught using Coleman's "pictograph" method are drawn to look like what they mean.

For example, in one comic strip, a small child cuts eyeholes out of the two e's in the word "see." In another, the three letters in the word "egg" resemble hard-boiled eggs.

Coleman has applied for a $150,000 Department of Education grant that would pay for printing and advertising small cartoon booklets that parents could use in conjunction with televised, non-animated comic strips.

The teaching method was tested two years ago when the El Paso Herald-Post and an independent city TV station teamed up in a literacy project. Coleman said he has refined the process during the last two years.

"Man, they (the comics) work," he said. "Children 3 and 4 years old learn to read almost instantly."

He said some children have learned up to 10 words a day during experimental teaching sessions.

The strips are extremely skimpy as far as plot and character development, but Coleman said education — not entertainment — is the point of the comics. Most of the strips are drawn by two artists Coleman hired.

Two years ago, the Herald-Post printed the simple comic strips on the page with the television log. KCIK-TV ran 30-second spots between weekday-afternoon animated cartoons in which that day's comic strip was pictured while a narrator pronounced the day's word.

Coleman applied for a grant from the Education Department's bilingual education program, but he said the teaching method is equally successful at teaching English-speaking children to read their native language.

"If you think of reading as a staircase of books, the first-grade reading classes aren't at the ground floor," he said. "It's as though our first 40 or 50 steps on the staircase are missing. This method supplies those missing steps."

He said he hopes to persuade El Paso's public TV station to broadcast the strips every day before "Sesame Street" if he gets the grant. The station could mail out the printed strips to parents who request them.

"I'd like to get it in lots of stations," he said. "I would like to see KINT-TV (El Paso's Spanish-language TV station) get involved, but I'm not going to start lining up stations until I get the grant."

Convicted killer's execution date scheduled

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who has been on Texas' death row for 12 years received a May 26 execution date for the 1975 killing of a disabled cancer patient.

Billy Joe Woods, 41, said nothing Wednesday during a brief proceeding in which State District Judge Miron Love scheduled the execution date.

Prosecutor Bert Graham said Woods was sentenced to die by injection in 1976 for the capital murder of Mable Ehatt, 63, who was raped. She was struck on the head with a frying pan during an Oct. 10, 1975, break-in at her Houston apartment.

Woods was caught at the apartment complex by police. The victim's hair was found on his clothing.

Man who finds mouse remains in beer reaches settlement with Coors

AUSTIN (AP) — A man who said his life changed for the worse after he found a decapitated mouse in his beer has reached a settlement with Adolph Coors Co., attorneys said.

Ted Gerardi sued Coors in 1982 after finding the mouse's remains in a beer he was drinking during a get-together at his Richland Hills home.

The Texas Supreme Court on Wednesday set a May 4 date to hear arguments in the case brought by Gerardi against Coors. But C. Tony Wright, a Dallas attorney representing Gerardi, and Michael Jung, a Dallas lawyer representing Coors, said Wednesday the parties have settled and are working to finalize the agreement.

If it is finalized, the Supreme Court appeal would be dismissed, a Dallas appeals court order for a new trial would stand and the trial judge would enter a ruling in favor of Coors in the case, Jung said.

In return, Coors has agreed to a "substantial" settlement, Wright said. The attorneys said they could not discuss details of the settlement because of a non-disclosure agreement.

Court records in the case say Gerardi became ill after finding the mouse and continued to suffer incidents of vomiting for at least two years.

Gerardi, a Watauga public safety officer, said he was teased by fellow officers about the mouse. He said the incident interfered with his job because he could no longer stand to be near intoxicated suspects, according to records.

In addition, records indicate, Gerardi became terrified at the sight of rodents and was no longer able to go hunting because of that.

Coors disputed that Gerardi found mouse remains in the beer. The company added that precautions taken during the bottling process would prevent such a thing from happening. If a mouse had been in the beer, it argued, the rodent did not get there while the beer was being bottled.

A Dallas jury awarded Gerardi $50,101 for actual damages — including pain, suffering and mental anguish, and medical treatment — and $500,000 in exemplary damages. The trial judge granted a motion by Coors to eliminate the latter award.

The 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas reversed the judgment and sent the case back for a new trial. It said the trial judge was wrong to strike the exemplary damages, but the judge also should not have allowed the introduction of evidence, over Coors' objections, about the beer company's profits for 1981-85.

IRS preparing for last minute tax returns

AUSTIN (AP) — Noting that only about 50 percent of the expected tax returns have been filed, Internal Revenue Service officials say they are prepared to handle the rush of last-minute returns.

"It's no problem for us. We're prepared to handle the remaining returns because this has been kind of a trend for the past several years," said Sally Sassen, public affairs officer for the IRS in Austin. "We're getting more and more returns in the last week."

Deadline for filing 1987 income tax returns is midnight Friday.

The IRS Service Center here processes returns from Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arkansas and Louisiana.

In the five-state region, about 12 million income tax returns are expected. About 6 million had been received by Wednesday, Sassen said.

"A lot of people wait to file late because they owe money, and most feel there's no reason to give the government money earlier than you have to," she said.

Some people are waiting for their returns to be completed by professionals, while others just naturally wait until the last minute, she said.

Because this is the first set of returns based on the Tax Reform Act of 1986, Ms. Sassen said, more people might have questions about their returns. The IRS has extended its hours for taxpayer assistance for those with filing problems, she said.

"We want to make sure we have plenty of people around to answer questions," she said. "In the past, people who have waited this long have been on their own."

"Friday is our 'taxes roundup day,'" Ms. Sassen said. "We're going to rope in those ol' tax returns."

To celebrate, IRS employees will be dressed in Western attire, she said.

Persons unable to file a return by deadline can request an extension form, which allows four additional months to file, she said.

"We don't require an explanation in order to get an extension. However, we do require money. It's an extension of time to file, not to pay," she said.

Assistant chief put on leave

DALLAS (AP) — City officials placed assistant police chief Charles Busby on paid administrative leave Wednesday, after state investigators told police that a criminal investigation involving Busby may be referred to a grand jury.

The case involves Busby's ownership of an unlicensed private security agency, which has been under investigation by the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies.

Under state law, private security agencies must be licensed. Busby has said that while he schedules officers for off-duty jobs, he does not employ them, making his firm exempt from the state law, the Dallas Morning News reported in today's editions.

Acting police chief Louie Caudell put Busby on leave "pending the resolution of legal issues relating to how he has arranged for the service of off-duty officers to work off-duty jobs," police spokesman Ed Spencer said.

Spencer said Busby, the department's fourth in command, has not violated any police department directives. And Caudell issued a memorandum that said a preliminary verbal opinion from the city attorney's office was that Busby had not violated state laws.

Ex-deputy who lost election demands recount

KERRVILLE (AP) — A former Kerr County deputy who lost by five votes in her attempt to unseat Sheriff Cliff Greeson says she will ask for a recount.

Frances Kaiser said Wednesday she had "too many questions" about the election to not ask for a recount.

"I think the sheriff will do anything to get what he wants, she said. "I worked for him for four years and I know what kind of man he is. That is why I resigned."

"There are just too many questions about this election to let it slide," Ms. Kaiser said. She said she is prepared to take the matter to state district court if the recount does not change the outcome of the election.

Greeson says he is confident a recount will not change the vote totals.

"I don't anticipate it being any different," the sheriff said. I won by five votes, and that is as good as 5,000."

Unofficial results of Tuesday's runoff race show Greeson received 3,662 votes and Ms. Kaiser, 3,657.

Greeson, who has been in office since 1983, says he has no reaction to the recount request.

"I am just going to watch the recount and see what happens," he said.

Kaiser said she plans to contact the district attorney's office to request an investigation into the election if the recount does not change the outcome.

"I've had calls about the absentee balloting and other strange things during the counting," she said. "I am going to pursue this all the way."

District Attorney Ron Sutton said he had not been contacted about any investigation into the election.

STATE IN BRIEF

Two explosions caused by gas leak, official says

LEVELLAND (AP) — Two explosions that rocked the Levelland Motel this weekend, critically injuring two occupants, were caused by an underground gas leak, Fire Marshall Thurman Davis said.

"We don't know how the leak began, but the leakage found an ignition source," Davis said.

A Bowie couple, Jim and Sarah Atteberry, remained in critical condition Wednesday night from burns they received in the fire started by the explosions Sunday, a hospital supervisor said.

Atteberry, 42, suffered second- and third-degree burns over 75 percent of his body and Mrs. Atteberry, 49, received second- and third-degree burns over 70 percent of her body, said hospital spokeswoman Jill Hinckley.

Authorities initially believed that there was only one explosion, but Davis said the first explosion touched off another in the motel's attic.

The fire did an estimated $250,000 in damage to the motel, officials said.

Channel traffic delayed

HOUSTON (AP) — Traffic through the Houston Ship Channel was held for up a second day as salvage operations proceeded slowly in raising a sunken tugboat, officials said.

The 37-foot tug sank Tuesday morning for unknown reasons, and the Coast Guard closed the busy channel while crews worked to stabilize the vessel and hook it to cables so it could be lifted by a crane.

After salvage operations ended Tuesday evening, authorities allowed some vessels to pass through the channel, Coast Guard officials said.

When salvage efforts resumed Wednesday, the channel was again closed until after nightfall, said Coast Guard Seaman Vicki Eastland.

By Wednesday evening, the tug had been partially raised, so that part of its bow was above water. Recovery is to continue today.

Experimental plane crashes

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — An experimental plane crashed in a field Wednesday after its wings came off, but the pilot parachuted to safety with only scrapes and bruises, and no one on the ground was hurt.

Pilot Mark Brown of San Antonio, Texas, was participating in the Sun 'n Fun Fly-in when the crash occurred.

Organ demand exceeds supply

Humphreys

The field of organ transplantation has expanded dramatically in the past few years, moving from a risky experiment to more of a standard therapy. What has made this possible is better patient care, improved tissue matching techniques and improved anti-rejection medications. In particular, the drug cyclosporine — which came into use with heart transplants in 1980 — was a significant development in that it helped lessen the rejection phenomenon which plagues transplantation procedures.

Even though the problems of rejection have not been solved by any means, considerable success has been achieved in transplantation of whole organs such as the kidney, heart, liver, pancreas and lung, and tissues such as skin, cornea, bone and arteries.

Advancement in organ transplant knowledge and technology have produced a predictable increase in demand for donor organs. Indeed, the demand for organs and tissue far outstrips the supply. For example, there were 8,976 kidney transplants performed in this country in 1986, but another 10,000 people with kidney failure remained on waiting lists for transplants, and 11,000 new cases of kidney failure develop each year.

The shortage of donated organs and tissues has been addressed by publicity campaigns to enhance public awareness, and more recently, by federal legislation requiring that families of potential donors be advised of their options in that regard. Hospitals participating in the care of Medicare patients are mandated to develop protocols for organ procurement which:

- Assure that families of potential organ donors are made aware of the option of organ donation and of their option to decline to donate;
- Require discretion and sensitivity with respect to the circumstances, views and beliefs of such families; and
- Require the hospital to notify an organ procurement agency upon the death of a patient who is a potential donor.

This most recent legislation is an amendment to the Social Security Act and amounts to a federal "required request" provision. It has the effect of making mandatory what previously was considered to be a voluntary process of soliciting organ donors.

Why did the voluntary system not work? Besides a lack of public awareness, there are difficult personal and psychological concerns raised by organ donation. The donor is required to recognize his or her own mortality. The family is forced to deal with a loved one in what they may perceive to be a cold-hearted manner. The caregivers are required to intrude upon an already grieving family and to consider the welfare of other patients besides the one for whom they are providing care.

Another drawback to the previous voluntary system of soliciting organ donors is that many hospitals lack a brain death policy. In the past a person was considered dead only when circulation and respiration had ceased irreversibly. That definition has been rendered obsolete by technology which can maintain these functions indefinitely, even when the entire brain is nonfunctional. Without a policy which includes brain death in the definition of death, a hospital is in a dangerous legal position with regard to a patient organ donor who is being maintained on a respirator. Deliberately not including brain death as a criterion in the definition of death is not the answer either, because organs obtained from a donor whose circulation and respiration has ceased are not usable. The previously mentioned tissues are usable, however.

Deciding to donate organs or tissues is not easy for donors or their families. Particularly difficult is the decision for organ donation, because the donor usually has experienced some unexpected and irreversible catastrophe, and the family already is in the depths of grief over it. Reasons to favorably consider a donation are that it is an opportunity to improve the lives of one or several other people, it costs the donor nothing and it does not disfigure the donor.

Each of us should consider our positions on this sensitive issue and decide if we would be willing to be a donor of organs and/or tissues. Those who are so inclined should:

- Carry a donor card which can be obtained by filling out and mailing in a form stating their wish to be a donor. (The form, which must be signed by two witnesses, can be obtained from the Department of Public Safety Office in Midland); and
- Advise their families and their physician of the intent to be a donor.

Death for ourselves or our loved ones is a difficult reality to contemplate, but one which must be faced. Even in a time of loss for ourselves there is an opportunity to give to others, and that opportunity should be considered.

Dr. James Humphreys is Executive Director of the Midland City-County Health Department.

Epilepsy treatment now more precise

Associated Press

The treatment of epilepsy, a neurological disorder associated with sudden, excessive bursts of electrical energy in the brain, is being managed with greater precision, according to a physician at the New York University Medical Center.

An article in an upcoming issue of the center's Health Letter estimates epilepsy affects between 1 to 2 percent of the population, or 2 to 4 million people in the United States, who periodically have seizures or convulsions.

"More accurate procedures for measuring the blood level of anticonvulsant drugs allow us to be more precise determining if the person is taking the medication as prescribed, how well it is being absorbed, and if there is any interference in metabolism between medications," commented Dr. Irving Fish, associate professor of clinical neurology and director of pediatric neurology.

"By following blood levels, we can avoid doses that are too low to be effective and can identify a problem before a drug enters a toxic range," Fish added. "Along with clinical observation, this enables us to establish the most effective dosage level."

Typically, epilepsy first occurs in childhood; betwen 40 to 50 percent of these children outgrow the condition. "When epilepsy begins during childhood, it is usually of unknown cause, or may be the result of congenital injury. Onset after age 20 is more likely due to a defined underlying cause: a tumor, abscess, or vascular malformation in the brain; head trauma; a metabolic disorder; or drug or alcohol abuse," he noted.

Most people with epilepsy control their seizures by taking anticonvulsants — medications which subudue the brain's overactivity — on a daily basis. A small number of people whose seizures are not adequately controlled by drugs, and can be traced to a specific area in the brain, are candidates for the surgical removal of the epileptic focus.

Phenobarbital, a barbiturate, was first introduced in 1912 as an anticonvulsant in epilepsy. The most frequently prescribed drugs today include phenytoin (Dilantin), carbamazepine (Tegretol), and valproic acid (Depakene). "Different types of seizures will respond to different medications," Fish observed.

Anticonvulsants are neurological depressants. As such, they may cause drowsiness, which can sometimes interfere with job, school and social performance. "Although in most cases the person can be made free of side effects, at times a compromise may have to be reached between perfect seizure control and the side effects of anticonvulsant medication," Fish said. "Together, the individual and the physician can determine the most acceptable balance."

"Most physicians today avoid prescribing multiple medications, preferring to prescribe one drug whenever possible," Fish stated. "Single therapy permits better monitoring; if side effects are a problem, it is clear which drug is causing them."

Quality-of-life issues for the person with epilepsy are increasingly recognized in the overall treatment plan. "Discrimination in school and workplace, and social ostracism, do occur," Fish noted. "Misconceptions about epilepsy are still prevalent. It is not a mental illness, nor does it impair intelligence or physicial development or performance."

Research doesn't link alcohol, breast cancer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A federal study has found no suggestion that drinking alcohol increases a woman's chance of breast cancer, a result that clashes with recent research.

"Conclusive statements or general recommendations concering the relationship between alcohol consumption and breast cancer seem premature," said Susan Chu of the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Perhaps some alcohol-related factors, rather than alcohol itself, account for the effect shown by other test subjects, she said. "We have difficulty explaining why our study differs from those other studies," she said.

Nobody has shown any biological reason why alcohol would raise a woman's breast cancer risk, she said.

At a recent meeting of science writers sponsored by the American Cancer Society, Chu described results of a study of 3,252 women between the ages of 20 and 54 with newly diagnosed breast cancer and 2,971 other women chosen for comparison.

All the women were interviewed in their homes and asked about their alcohol-drinking habits in the previous five years. If they drank, they were asked to estimate how many days a week they drank and how much they consumed on each day.

When data from the two groups were compared, Chu said, "we found no relationship between drinking in the past five years and breast cancer risk."

Two studies released in May that did find an increase in risk gained a lot of attention, she said.

The studies, directed by scientists at the Harvard School of Public Health and the National Cancer Institute, cited an apparent increase in risk with as few as three drinks a week.

But the principal authors of both studies said the data were not strong enough to recommend changes in drinking habits for American women.

The cancer society has no formal recommendation on alcohol and breast cancer.

Lawrence Garfinkel, the society's vice president for epidemiology, said Sunday that several studies had shown no added breast cancer risk from moderate drinking.

"The jury's still out," he said. If there is a risk, he said, "it has to be very, very minimal."

Future studies should focus on the age that alcohol consumption began and how long it has lasted, Chu said.

In another paper presented at the science writers' conference, a researcher cited research data challenging the link others have found between dietary fat and cancer.

Calories are the dietary villain rather than fat, said David Klurfeld of the Wistar Institute in Philadelphia, who studied rats that were chemically treated to encourage tumor growth.

The contention has been debated for some time among scientists, whose findings have been mixed.

Klurfeld said his studies showed the direct link to cancer risk appeared to be body mass, because the rats that exercised enough to work off calories had a lower cancer risk than animals that were sedentary.

The cancer society says dietary fat may play a role in breast, colon and prostate cancers.

MOTHER AND CHILD

A very important period for a pregnant woman and her fetus is the first two weeks after conception. During this period, there is no differentiation of cells in the embryo. If enough cells are harmed by a drug, then the embryo will die. No congenital malformations happen at this early stage. It is an all-or-nothing situation. During the next one to two months, the organ systems are developing, and this time period is the most critical for the developmet of abnormalities. After the end of the eighth week, differentiation of the organs is completed. The first trimester of pregnancy, therefore, is the most significant period for the occurrence of deformities and the survival of the fetus. During this time, no medicine of any kind should be taken unless advised by a doctor. This includes non-prescription drugs for colds.

If your doctor advises medicine you're sure to find it by coming to ALLEN'S PHARMACY, 2101 Midland Dr, 689-9999. We have a complete prescription department plus over-the-counter medications. If you have a question on a drug just give us a call. You'll always find us friendly and courteous. See our selection of greeting cards, candy and gifts for Mother's Day. FREE HEARING TESTS SET FOR SENIOR CITIZENS

MIDLAND - Hearing Centers of America, Inc., announces the grand opening of a new hearing aid facility in La Villita Office Building, 3325 W. Wadley, Suite 115. (Formerly Better Hearing Consultants). In celebration, Hearing Centers of America, Inc. will be providing FREE electronic hearing tests to senior citizens, for the next three Mondays, by appointment only.

The tests have been arranged for anyone who suspects they are losing their hearing. Such persons generally say they can hear but not understand conversation. Testing with the latest electronic equipment will indicate whether your hearing can be helped electronically.

Everyone, especially those over 60, should have an electronic hearing test at least once a year. If there is a hearing problem, a free hearing test may reveal that newly developed methods of correction will help, even for those who have been told in the past that a hearing aid will not help them.

Available for inspection on the test days will be features found in the Automated Hearing Systems. These aids are especially designed for nerve deafness. No standard batteries to buy, rechargeable. No need to adjust volume control wheel.

Call 699-3001 today to schedule your FREE hearing test by a state licensed Hearing Specialist.

SOUND ADVICE

By Orland Purcell, M.S., Audiologist

THE IMPEDENCE TEST

In a healthy ear, the air pressure is the same inside and outside the eardrum. This allows the eardrum to vibrate freely when sound waves hit it. The vibrations pass through the ear so that we hear, and they also reflect back into the air. Too little or too much pressure on the inner side of the eardrum makes the eardrum too stiff to conduct and reflect sounds properly. This is one result of a middle ear disorder which causes the auditory tube to become blocked. Impedence testing, which measures sound reflection under differing pressure in the ear canal, indicates how well the eardrum passes sound waves into the air. It aids in detecting and diagnosing a problem.

Difficulty in hearing produces social pressures also. AUDIO ACOUSTICS HEARING CENTERS, INC., 32 Village Court, provides the hearing instruments that allow for the return of a more normal sounding surroundings. In this fashion one is able to more fully enjoy their family, friends and surroundings. For the sounds that make a difference, let AUDIO ACOUSTICS HEARING CENTERS, INC. help you. Tel. 682-5033. Open 9-5 Mon.-Fri.

A CLEAR DIAGNOSTIC VIEW

The chiropractor will frequently use a full spine x-ray to get a view of the spinal vertebrae on a single film approximately three feet long. It gives and indication of the body's ability to cope with the internal distortion of the patient's spine. If the sacrum is lower on one side than the other, the vertebrae immediately above it will tilt. Subluxated vertebrae lose their normal relationship and the spinal column's balance is disturbed. A plumb line dropped from the center of balance in the neck might well miss the center of balance in the pelvis by a half-inch. This places strain on many areas and creates functional twists and cruves in the spine. Full spine x-ray views make this kind of measurement possible and eliminate the risk of missing this important diagnostic information.

When you visit CHIROPRACTIC CENTER, 2206 W. Louisiana, you will find the latest availalble diagnostic tools so that your problems and discomforts may be analyzed and addressed. We offer the chiropractic exam that aims at the source of your problem and strives to offer the applications that provide relief and long-term corrections. For more information on how chiropractic may help you, please call CHIROPRACTIC CENTER. Tel. 683-3244. Hours: 9-6 Mon., Wed., Thurs., 9-1 Tues. & Fri.

HINT:
The chiropractic exam involves the use of a number of tests and procedures developed through years of research in many countries.

HEALTH BEAT

by Kanti Patel, M.D.

HOSPITAL'S GROUND FLOOR

The concept of "public health" did not really come about until the fifth century B.C. Until that time, only India had established anything resembling the modern workings of a hospital with gentle treatment of patients and stress on proper nutrition and cleanliness. It was not until the Greeks established a relationship between stagnant water and malaria that a natural cause for disease was found. Until that point, plagues were regarded as a punishment from the gods. When Hippocrates wrote, "Air, Water, and Places", it was regarded as the first systematic attempt to associate human disease with environmental causes. This work became the foundation upon which the 19th-century sciences of immunology and bacteriology were built.

With the administering of childhood immunizations, such diseases as measles and polio are now part of the past. While most vaccinations don't have to be repeated beyond childhood, some are necessary for international travel and for those at high risk of certain diseases. Make sure your family immunization schedules are up-to-date. At MEDI-HELP, 805 W. Wadley @ A, we believe in the importance of childhood immunizations for preventive health care. laboratory and x-ray facilities are located on-site. Hours: 8-8, 7 days a week. Tel. 687-2704.

HINT:
With the exception of India, there were no hospitals in the world prior to the 19th century.

Feeling "Old"?

or can I do something?

Aging doesn't mean you have to feel tired all the time. A thorough physical examination will help discover any conditions which call for improving the physiologic and immunologic processes in the body.

Lifestyle measures such as adopting a healthy emotional outlook, proper diet, exercise, and avoidance of harmful substances are all important. We refer to this as "health enhancement."

Is there more to health enhancement?

Dr. E. W. McCullough prescribes several new physiologic treatments involving:

1) Tissue oxygenators — to give off oxygen to ischemic (anemic) tissues.
2) Anti-oxidants — to remove free radicals.
3) Cell energizers — to increase cell energy.
4) Fat burners — to burn fat instead of carbohydrates.
5) Metabolic catalyzers — to accelerate building up or tearing down of protein.
6) Plus other methods to correct glandular imbalances, cholesterol abnormalities, and circulation problems.

If you want to do something to feel better, you are invited to consult with Dr. McCullough.

FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will meet a strong-willed individual, full of fire, who could change your life. Many positive forces are at work where love, money and career are concerned. Extend yourself and those around you will do the same. Rid yourself of hangers-on who sometimes drag you down. You need associates who share your vision! October brings a flurry of investment activity. Romance is a source of great joy.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Elizabeth Montgomery, actress Claudia Cardinale, novelist Henry James, blues singer Bessie Smith, artist Leonardo da Vinci, painter Thomas Hart Benton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Give serious consideration to a business deal you are offered now. A thorough approach pays off handsomely. If you have fallen behind in your work, this is a great day to catch up!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Shrewd financial manipulations will put you back on top again. Perform more services for yourself, but do not reject offers of help. Conduct business by phone if it will keep travel costs down.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A special relationship has given you more interest in settling down. Stick with a diet or other rules set down by your doctor. Reduce the tension in your life. Refuse to quarrel.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): People are not always what they seem. Do not allow someone to use your money or good name. Check your home's security if you have travel plans. Cash in on an expert's business advice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Paying attention to details today will earn you a bonus later on. Diversify your investments. Romance may be getting too intense for your taste. Cool things off by getting away for a while.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): As long as you have freedom to make your own decisions, all is well. Your social life is on the upswing. Welcome opportunities to meet people from different walks of life. You gain new perspectives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You feel more energetic today. Tackle difficult tasks. Teamwork will help boost profits. Inspiration will peak this afternoon or evening; everything you touch will flourish!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Helpful forces are gathering in the background. A financial situation will soon be back on the right track. Projects requiring team effort should be promoted and given top priority. Lend a helping hand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stick to a schedule and you will accomplish more. Do not be foolish with money. Keep cash transactions out of close relationships. A frank talk with mate puts an end to anxiety.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your co-workers prove very helpful now. A new project can be launched without a hitch. Postpone signing agreements, however. You need to get several estimates before authorizing home repairs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Deal with people away from the public eye. Influential people may try to pressure you. Resist them and follow your instincts. Tact helps you strengthen the bonds of friendship. Avoid being critical.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Tackle odd jobs early in the day. Go over all correspondence relating to a tax or insurance matter. Now is the time to make long-range plans.

Opening lead: Two of ♠

This hand comes from rubber bridge—nothing other than 150 honors could explain South's determination to rebid his five-card heart suit with his balanced hand. Not that we are enamored with North's decision to respond two spades on his four-card suit either—a value bid of three no trump is more to our liking. East's double was lead-directing, requesting his partner to lead dummy's first-bid suit. Except that his partner had mentioned the denomination first, North could have saved the day by converting to six no trump, a contract that could not be defeated from his side of the table.

West duly led the two of spades, and it was obvious to all and sundry that it was a singleton. Declarer did not fancy his chances, but he was not prepared to surrender without a fight. He decided to try to put the fact that West held only one spade to good use. He rose with dummy's ace of spades, then drew trumps with a minor-suit card. Declarer discarded his two losing spades on the tens of diamonds and clubs, and brought home the slam for the loss of only one club trick.

Declarer cashed the ace-king of clubs and ace of diamonds, then overtook the jack of diamonds with the table's queen. Now he led the jack of clubs and discarded the king of diamonds from hand!

West was helpless. Down to nothing but minor-suit cards, he had no option but to win the queen and then put declarer back in dummy

We don't know who played this hand. If nobody claims it, perhaps we'll pass it off as our own in years to come.

Audrey Hepburn says saving millions of children 'God-given opportunity'

Hepburn

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Audrey Hepburn, who visited drought-stricken Ethiopia recently, joined UNICEF officials in calling for help in the battle against world hunger.

"To save a single child is a blessing...to save millions of children is a God-given opportunity presented to us by UNICEF," the 58-year-old actress said Wednesday at a news conference.

Lawrence Bruce, the international children's fund president and chief executive, announced UNICEF's latest drive to raise $22 million for medicine, vaccines and other non-food relief.

"We have the means of cutting by half the present global death rate of 38,000 children each day...and I find it unconscionable that these children should die of preventable causes," Bruce said.

Hepburn's eyes glistened with tears as she described the poor, starving children she saw in Ethiopia while accompanying Bruce for five days in mid-March.

She noted that as an adolescent in Holland after World War II, she was the recipient of food from a United Nations relief agency.

"Without that nutrition, my health might well have been impaired for life," she said.

ATLANTA (AP) — An Atlanta-based organization for terminally ill children has given out 100 tickets to pop star Michael Jackson's concert here tonight, but needs a few more tickets to meet the number they were asked to get.

"Once the word came out that we had tickets, the phone was ringing off the hook," Linda Dozoretz of the Children's Wish Foundation said Wednesday.

Ms. Dozoretz said the organization needs 24 more tickets to fulfill every request it got. "We're trying to see what we can do," she said. "It would be a wonderful experience."

The group, which grants wishes to terminally ill children, was awaiting confirmation from Jackson's staff on whether he will be able to meet some of the children, Ms. Dozoretz said.

Castro

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Cuban leader Fidel Castro has been honored by the World Health Organization for giving up his famous cigar and setting a smoke-free example for his countrymen, Cuba's official news agency says.

Castro was given two medals by Carlyle Guerra de Macedo, director general of the Geneva-based organization, in a ceremony Tuesday at Havana's Palace of the Revolution, said Prensa Latina in a dispatch received here Wednesday.

The WHO announced the honor on April 7, the first worldwide "No Tobacco Day." Castro, whose cigars were almost as much a trademark as his beard, was cited for pledging in 1981 never to smoke in public and subsequently quitting.

• • •

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Counterculture journalist Hunter S. Thompson canceled tonight's scheduled speaking engagement at the University of Arizona because of alleged death threats, his agent says.

Thompson, 48, who lives near Aspen, Colo., has received numerous telephone threats in the past week, agent Greg Werckman said Wednesday in New York City.

Thompson, creator of so-called "gonzo" journalism, has written several books, including "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas" and "The Great White Shark Hunt."

Thompson has developed a reputation for rowdy behavior and drinking on the speaking tour, and his appearance initially had been opposed by student leaders.

LONDON (AP) — P.D. James, one of Britain's top detective fiction writers, has been named to the government-funded Arts Council to lead a campaign to stimulate interest in literature, particularly in schools.

"We have a wonderful, almost miraculous literary heritage," Ms. James said Wednesday. "Now we need to stimulate our writers and poets in the future."

Ms. James, whose books include "Cover Her Face" and "Death Of An Expert Witness," will preside over the council's literature panel.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A downtown theater operator said Wednesday he is yanking the controversial film "Colors," which is about street gangs, because his staff is afraid it will draw violence.

"The staff at the theater were in a panic because the home turf of one of the gangs in the movie is just a couple of miles from downtown," said Bob Laemmle, co-owner of the popular Laemmle theater chain.

The movie, which stars Sean Penn and Robert Duvall as Los Angeles policemen battling street gangs, is set to open Friday. It was scheduled to be shown at the Laemmle Grand, which is downtown next to a luxury hotel.

"The fact that a movie theater...two days before, decides not to play a motion picture — that happens all the time," said Joel Resnick, in charge of distribution for Orion Pictures. He said about 70 theaters in the greater Los Angeles area will show the film.

Hopper

Before a screening of the film Wednesday, director Dennis Hopper said: "There is nothing in this film that glorifies being in a gang." He added that the film story is told from police officers' point of view.

"I don't know how people can twist it around and say I'm glorifying gangs."

However, the Beverly Hills-Hollywood chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People joined the chorus objecting to the film opening in Los Angeles during a period of heightened tension over gang violence.

Nearly 100 people have been killed this year in gang-related violence in Los Angeles County. Last year, there were 387 gang-related killings.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Deborah Harry, songwriter Irving Berlin, jazz musician Lionel Hampton, and transsexual tennis coach Renee Richards are among dozens of celebrities who owe back taxes to New York state, a newspaper says.

Miss Harry owes $241,354 for record royalties and Berlin owes $5,500, according to state records cited by the New York Post on Wednesday.

Richards, an ophthalmologist, owes nearly $33,000 and master vibraphonist Hampton's Lionel Hampton Enterprises owes $10,500 in withholding taxes, the paper said.

Object of Rotary.... is to encourage and foster the ideal of service as a basis of worthy enterprise and, in particular, to encourage and foster:

FIRST... The development of acquaintance as an opportunity for service.

SECOND... High ethical standards in business and professions, the recognition of the worthiness of all useful occupations, and the dignifying by each Rotarian of his other occupation as an opportunity to serve society:

FOURTH... The advancement of international understanding, goodwill and peace through a world fellowship of business and professional persons united in the ideal of service.

Observes 60 YEARS OF SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY AND FAR BEYOND

HOW IT CAME ABOUT:

The year was 1928, and Midland and Midlanders were becoming more and more interested in community growth, progress, and overall betterment.

Rotary International also was expanding westward in Texas at that time, and a group of interested Midland citizens approached District Gov. Ellis Boyd of Forth Worth with the idea of forming a Rotary Club here. The governor responded favorably by delegating the Sweetwater Rotary Club as the sponsor of the proposed Midland Chapter. On the evening of Jan. 26, 1928, the organization was perfected with the election of Officers and Directors for the Rotary Year 1928-29.

W. Ily Pratt was elected President; Kenneth Ambrose, Vice President: Elliott H. Barron, Secretary and Fred Wemple, Treasurer.

Rotary International promptly certified the list of 25 charter members, and on April 10, 1928, Charter No. 2782 was presented to the club at a gala dinner meeting held in the Midland High School Building.

Thus, the Midland Rotary Club came into being as a lively, active, influential service organization–the first Rotary Club on the T&P Railroad between Sweetwater and El Paso. It was evident from the start that the club was destined to become a pace-setter, and this certainly has held true in the aggressive spirit and willingness to serve the community and mankind in general during its 60-year existence. Always strong on leadership, the club has furnished six district governors, as well as others in leadership roles in the community and beyond.

The club's activities and projects have been numerous and varied, far too many to list herein, as Rotarians always have stressed the idea of "Service Above Self."

Youth welfare always has been a high priority item in the club's programs and projects, although not limit strictly to that activity in meeting community needs.

Yes, Midland Rotary looks back on 60 years of service with pride and pleasure, while at the same time looking ahead with interest and dedication to the next 60 years of "Service Above Self."

Chaps lose two, sign four

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Midland College Chaparrals Stewart Barnett and Clifton Jones signed national letters of intent Wednesday, both going to established Division One programs in the west.

Barnett, a guard, inked with the University of Wyoming while Jones will attend the University of Idaho.

Barnett said although he has not yet visited the Wyoming campus in Laramie, he was impressed with the way the university and its program were presented to him in talks with head coach Benny Dees.

"Coach told me a lot about it," Barnett said. "I saw their highlight film. My hopes are high that I can do the best I can."

Barnett said the legacy left behind by former San Antonio standout Fennis Dembo, who will graduate from UW this year, will be clearly felt by the Cowboys next season.

"He's leaving everything behind," Barnett said. "We'll be pretty compatible (with the rest of the conference)."

Wyoming, 27-6 last season, is in the Western Athletic Conference, competing along with other nationally-known programs at UTEP, Brigham Young and New Mexico.

Jones, who just returned from a visit to the University of Idaho campus also likes what he sees, and views his upcoming team as a contender in the 1988-89 season.

"Their new head coach (former UTEP assistant Tim Floyd) has brought his winning ways to Idaho and I'm going to bring my winning ways to Idaho," Jones said.

Jones, who hopes to start next year at forward for the Vandals, said the fact that the school offers electrical engineering — his major — as a field of study weighed heavily in his decision to move north.

Idaho finished this past season at 19-10. The Vandals have been picked to win the Big Sky Conference next season.

Both Barnett and Jones said they will miss the atmosphere of Midland — particularly the warm weather atmosphere.

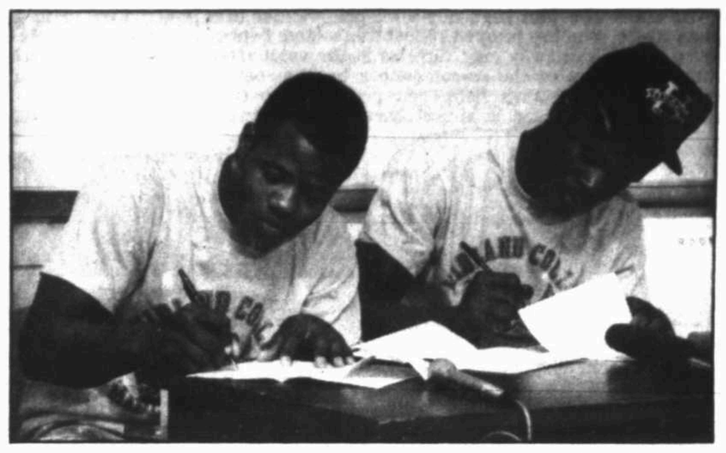

To fill the shoes of Barnett and Jones, head coach Reggie Franklin has signed four top Texas high school stars, three of whom could move into starting positions next year.

Franklin pulled down a recruiting gem when 6-1 Derrick Daniels and 6-0 Randy Williams — both standouts at Ft. Worth Dunbar last season — signed with the team earlier Tuesday night.

Franklin said Daniels will be looked at as the Chaps point guard while Williams, also a guard, is predominantly known for his shooting.

"This is the first time in my six years here that we've had a player from Dunbar," Franklin said.

Payton involved in accidental shooting

By F.N. D'ALESSIO
Associated Press Writer

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. — No charges will be filed against former Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton in the accidental shooting of a manager at Payton's suburban Chicago restaurant, police say.

The shooting occurred Wednesday when an employee handed Payton an automatic pistol that no one knew was loaded, Police Chief Kenneth R. Alley said.

"I can say at this time without hesitation that it was an accidental discharge," Alley said.

Elmer Hutson, 28, of Hoffman Estates, was in fair condition after undergoing surgery on his left leg at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, nursing supervisor Gail Hillary said.

"Walter is extremely upset over the accident," Alley said. "He was extremely cooperative with us, and so was his wife, Connie."

Payton's home telephone is unlisted, and he could not be reached for comment.

But Mrs. Payton told reporters: "Walter's fine. He's just disturbed about his employee."

Payton's agent, Bud Holmes, called the accident "a most unfortunate, freak kind of mishap."

Holmes said Payton is "so extremely cautious and careful. He's a fanatic about being careful with weapons. Walter wouldn't hurt a flea."

Mrs. Payton was in the office of the restaurant, Studebaker's, when the gun went off as were several of Payton's employees, the chief said.

Alley said Payton had left the recently purchased pistol on his desk and was using a telephone when an employee, whom police would not identify, handed him the gun.

"It appears that they were just about ready to go home," said Alley, who declined to identify the employee who handed Payton the gun.

"Walter was on the telephone sitting beside the desk," Alley said, "and placed the telephone back on the receiver and turned back, and the gun went off striking Mr. Hutson in the left leg just below the knee."

The gun, a French-made, 9mm automatic pistol, was registered to Payton, a gun collector who had the proper registration, Alley said.

Police didn't know why the gun was loaded, but Alley said it held eight rounds and had five left after the single shot was fired.

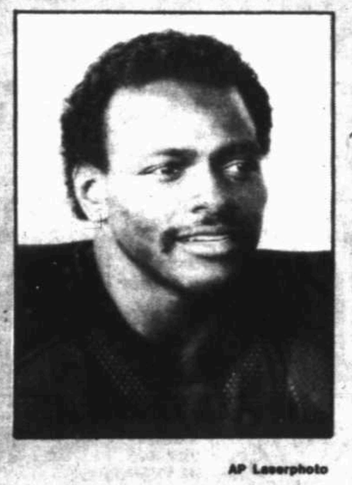

Payton told police he he normally didn't keep a gun at the restaurant but had brought it from his Barrington home several days ago.

"It was in the restaurant on a temporary basis and was on its way back to his residence," Alley said.

At a news conference, Alley said the gun was of a type which can easily go off accidentally.

"There were only a few people in the restaurant, and the office area is a good distance away, so none of them realized that anything had happened," Alley said.

Payton, who retired from the Bears at the end of the past season as the leading rusher in National Football League history, is a part owner of Studebaker's. He retired from pro football in January after 13 years and after accumulating 16,726 yards.

Mojo girls favored in district meet

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

SAN ANGELO — Only a collapse of the magnitude of the stock market's Black Monday will keep Odessa Permian's Lady Panthers from winning the District 4-5A track title Saturday at Angelo Stadium, but much more will be at stake for the 1988 entrants.

The 4-5A run is where athletes can earn Region I berths on the way to possible state berths in May.

Here is an event-by-event preview of how the girls stack up in that quest for post-season honors Saturday:

Long Jump: The record of 19-9¾ won't be touched, but Odessa High's Charlotte Collins is head and shoulders above the field with an 18-0¼ this year. Second place is up for grabs with at least five participants showing promise.

Triple Jump: Again the record of 39-9¾ is safe, but it could be a race between Collins, Lee's Khristie Davis and Permian's Stacey Tighe.

High Jump: This had been a weak event until Abilene Cooper's Tammy Scott set a Tall City Relay record with a 5-4¼ last week. Lee's Davis, OHS' Heather Robinson and Permian's Tighe in the battle for second.

Discus: No one will touch San Angelo's Amy Wilder, who is 20-feet better than the field and she is a good bet to bash the district mark of 130-feet. Second place is anyone's guess, but a good bet is San Angelo's Gail Allison.

Shot Put: Two for the money in Midland High's Tracy Parker (40-8) and San Angelo's Karen Cowley (39-2½). Best dark horse is Lee's Monica Ramirez. Record of 49-1¼ is safe.

3200: Cooper's Jessica Temple is almost a minute ahead of the field, but she didn't run this event last week, opting for the 1600 and 800. She should win both if she runs both. San Angelo's Rachel Sanders is a good bet for second with MHS' Myra Pina carrying the dark horse role.

400 Relay: Permian has the best time this year with a 49.81, but Lee has beaten Permian, including last week. Still, it's a 1-2 finish for the above unless a dropped baton gives OHS a chance.

800: Abilene High's Nena Hernandez was the early season favorite, but Permian's Kelly Burrows has taken over that role. There should be no surprises deeper than this.

100 Hurdles: The best appears to be Abilene High's Ernestine Pyle and teammate Sharon Webster with Cooper's Pam Brown in the running. Who wants it?

100: OHS' Kasandra McDaniel will be shooting for her third straight title and she is unbeaten this year. McDaniel should also break her own record 11.97 that she has set twice the last two years. Lee's Melody Miller, second last year, is also back and should earn the other Region I berth. This is one of the girls glamour events.

800 Relay: Again Lee and Permian with the Rebels holding a season-long upper hand in this one with Carrie Roach on the anchor leg.

400: This is a chance for Permian's Burrows to become a two-event winner, but teammate Tracy Lawrence will push her in a 1-2 Mojo finish.

200: Permian's Laurie White has a slim shot at the 24.31 record, but if she falters, Lee's Roach could be a surprise. Don't count on anyone else to make the show.

1600: A possible Abilene sweep with Cooper's Temple and AHS' Hernandez with MHS' Pina laying groundwork for a Region I berth upset.

1600 Relay: Permian is No. 1 without a challenge, but the race for second place is interesting with virtually every team in the district having hope. Best second place bet is AHS with MHS the key dark horse.

Girls District 4-5A Track Records

Triple Jump: Diane White, Midland Lee, 39-9¾, 1985.
Long Jump: Diane White, Midland Lee, 19-9¾, 1985.
High Jump: Kerry Evans, Odessa High, 5-6, 1985.
Discus: Kelly Davis, Abilene Cooper, 130-0, 1981.
Shot Put: Lila Hines, Abilene High, 49-1¼, 1977.
3200: Claire Hardy, Midland High, 11:09.36, 1984.
400 Relay: San Angelo (Pace, Kelly, Cole, Bryant) 48.47, 1980.
800: Sandra Houston, Odessa Permian, 2:23.10, 1985.
100 Hurdles: Denise Jackson, Abilene High, 14.59, 1984.
100: Kasandra McDaniel, Odessa High, 11.97, 1986 and again in 1987.
800 Relay: Abilene High (Perry, Alexander, Webster, Medearis), 1:43.74, 1987.
400: Sonji McIntire, Odessa Permian, 57.76, 1984.
200: Ethel Edwards, Midland High, 24.31, 1987.
1600: Claire Hardy, Midland High, 5:30.30, 1984.
1600 Relay: Odessa Permian (McIntire, Gamble, Ellis, Wilson) 3:59.92, 1985.

Deshaies leads 'Stros past Braves

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Jim Deshaies was in a joking mood after posting a two-hit shutout in his first major league start since undergoing surgery last fall.

"Those guys in Osceola have got to be shaking their heads," Deshaies said. "They're not going to believe their newspaper in the morning."

Deshaies, battered around by Osceola six days earlier, stopped Atlanta cold Wednesday as the Houston Astros handed the winless Braves their eighth consecutive defeat, 4-0.

"They're going to think it's all fixed," Deshaies said of the Florida State League team that posted nine runs and nine hits in six innings off him last Thursday. "They're going to think the league up there's a fix. They're going to be shaking their heads in wonderment."

Deshaies, 1-0, was never in trouble against the Braves, giving up a bad-hop single to Dale Murphy in the second inning and a fly ball single to left by Damaso Garcia in the sixth. He struck out five and walked two in lifting his lifetime record to 6-1 against the Braves, a team he will face again next week in Houston.

Deshaies underwent arthroscopic surgery for a slight tear in his left rotator cuff last Oct. 9.

"It never really crossed my mind," he said when asked if he'd thought he might not be able to pitch again.

"Last year my arm wasn't completely weak like a real bad rotator cuff," he said. "I knew it wasn't that severe. Coming out of surgery everything was optimistic from the doctor's standpoint."

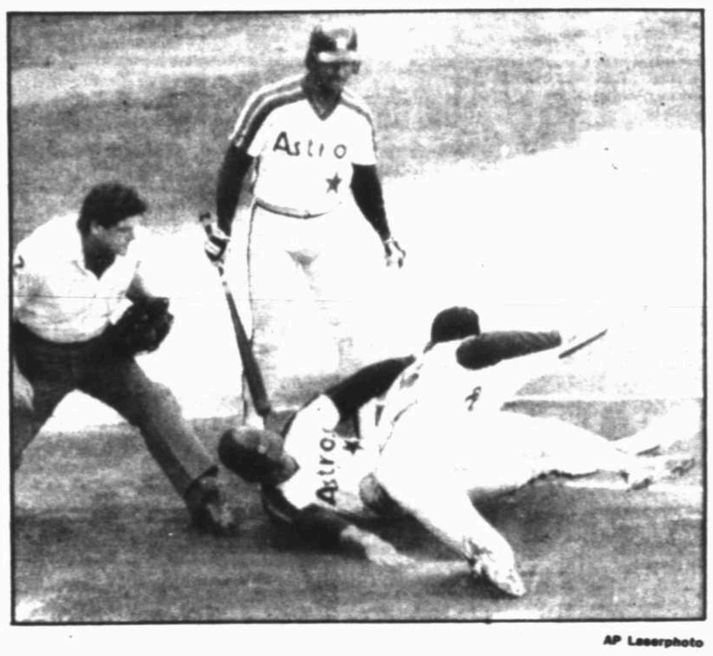

Deshaies said he never felt any pain in Wednesday's game.

"Once I started to get loose in the bullpen and saw I had pretty good velocity I wasn't that concerned," he said. "My big concern was how well my arm would hold up over a course of innings."

It held up for the distance, a 101-pitch performance that gave him the second shutout and third complete game in his career.

"He threw great," Houston Manager Hal Lanier said. "He really had great command of his slider. He had a good fast ball from the first inning on."

The Astros struck for three first-inning runs off Pete Smith, 0-1.

Andrews hosts 2-4A district meet

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Area track coaches are planning on a strong showing from their charges at the District 2-4A track meet in Andrews Friday and Saturday.

The Big Spring boys and Andrews girls hope to challenge for the team championship in their respective divisions, but the Lamesa boys and girls, Andrews boys and Big Spring girls will also seek to qualify representatives to the Region I meet in two weeks.

The Big Spring boys walked away with the 1987 district meet, but Steer coach Randy Britton doesn't expect that to happen again. Let him count the ways.

"First of all, (Brian) Mayfield has been slowed with an injury," Britton said. "Second, we don't have quite the depth we had last year."

Mayfield is being held out of the 110-meter high hurdles for fear of aggravating the foot injury that has hampered him all season. But the all-around star will still compete in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles, the long and high jumps, and both relays.

"His foot is okay," Britton said. "He got a late start, but the times he's been running have been just as good as last year.

"He has a chance to win all his individual events."

Indeed, Mayfield's only serious challenge individually may come from the likes of Monahans' Charles Thompson, who long jumped 23-4 under horrible conditions at the Sandhills Relays on April Fools' Day.

Big Spring's chances for district glory go far beyond Mayfield, however. There's Ben Gonzales, who has the endurance to finish third in last year's state Class 4A 1600-meter run and the speed to run a sub-50 second 400 meters. He's favored to win both distance races, along with helping out on the 1600 relay.

And what about Charles White, who clocked a wind-aided 10.2 in the 100 at Plainview last week and has run a 22-flat 200 as well? And Steve Jackson? He has the best district times in both the 400 and 800.

Steer sophomore Pete Buske may also have a chance to advance if he can approach or improve upon his best discus throw of 154-10.

While Lamesa's Gerry Woodberry is expected to challenge Thompson and White for sprint titles despite suffering a hamstring injury three weeks ago, Andrews coach Robert Crawford centers his hopes for a strong team finish on an outstanding stable of field event performers.

Diablos hammer Angels, 14-3

From Staff Reports

The El Paso Diablos exploded for 17 hits, including seven in the second inning when they scored 8 runs enroute to a 14-3 rout of the Midland Angels.

Midland's Danny Grunhard had a solo Halo homer in the top of the second, but it was not enough as Gary Sheffield, Alan Cartwright and Fred Williams each hit two-run homers in the second inning for El Paso to boost the Diablos from a 3-2 deficit to a 10-3 lead.

The Angels received their other two runs in the first inning when lead off hitter Jim Thomas, Grunhard, Jim McCollom and Tom Alfredson pounded out four straight singles.

Alfredson's one-bagger drove in Thomas, and a later single in the inning by Jeff Manto scored McCollom.

Steve McGuire, 0-1, took the loss for the Angels. Through five innings, the right-hander gave up eight hits and nine runs — all earned.

Angel manager Max Oliveras went to reliever Shane Young for pitching help, but Young yielded nine hits and five runs in five innings.

In other Texas League action Wednesday night, Wichita blanked San Antonio, 3-0 and Tulsa edged Arkansas, 7-5, in 11 innings.

Rick Nelson slugged a three-run homer and Mike Remlinger allowed only one hit to lead the Shreveport Captains to a 4-0 Texas League baseball victory over the Jackson Mets.

Dee Dixon tripled home the other run for Shreveport in the fourth inning.

Remlinger, 1-0, gave up only a single with two out in the sixth inning. He struck out nine, including six in a row and faced only one 28 batters in nine innings.

The losing pitcher was Mitch Cook, 0-1.

Chris Knabenshue singled home a run in the first inning as the Wichita Pilots defeated the San Antonio Missions, 3-0.

Boyt's performance hard to top

Patterson

In the relatively short time in which I have wielded this pen, Eric Boyt's performance Tuesday in leading the Midland High Bulldogs to a 6-1 victory over Odessa Permian was the best by a prep pitcher that these eyes have witnessed.

Too often, sports writers or sportscasters are inspired to write or speak in exaggerations. They will say, "He could do nothing wrong," or, "He was perfect." All too often, these verbiages are over-used to the point that truly spectacular performances are relegated to the mere average.

While Boyt was not perfect in the true sense of its baseball meaning, for much of Tuesday's game, Boyt could literally do nothing wrong. His performance was a sight to behold.

Only two Permian hitters even got the ball past the MHS infield.

Boyt's feat of striking out nine straight and 15 in the game began in the bottom of the first after second baseman Scott Hubert hit a sharp line drive that shortstop Jamie Surratt quickly put to rest.

After Hubert put aluminum to baseball, it would not be done again by Permian batters until the fourth.

Mike Winchell followed Hubert. He fanned on three pitches for Boyt's first K.

Next up was Arvay Villa. Five pitches, three strikes.

Shawn Almond led off the second. Five pitches, three strikes.

Mark Hitt. Three pitches, all strikes.

Rhett Hostenbach ended the inning. Four pitches, three strikes.

In the third inning, Arturo Ontiveros, Bryan Murry and James Smith came and went for Boyt's sixth, seventh and eighth consecutive Ks. In the third, Boyt threw only 10 pitches. Only one was ruled a ball.

Scott Hubert led off the top of the fourth and received four pitches, only one of which was a ball.

In the span of 3⅓ innings, Boyt threw 35 pitches, 27 of which were right down the pike.

Ten batters, ten possible outs, nine Ks.

Boyt said after the game it was his off-speed pitch that caught most of the batters off stride, but his split-fingered fastball combined with a curve also got the best of the Panther lineup.

For the record, after the nine straight strikeouts, Winchell singled, Villa laid down a sacrifice bunt and Almond grounded out to second to end the fourth.

Junior discus thrower Joe Don Finley has the second-best throw in Class 4A with a 171-11, while classmate Ronnie Seals has put the shot beyond the 54-foot mark and is pushing 150 feet in the discus.

Crawford also pins high hopes on pole vaulter Stephen Hines, who has jumped 13 feet this season. Sophomore Dustin Dunaway may surprise in the vault after sitting out most of the season with a broken foot.

Despite the Mustangs' field event prowess, Crawford realizes the cupboard is almost bare in the running events. Distance runner John Davila is expected to advance in both of his races, and both relays go into the district meet with a solid chance at third and an outside ghope for a regional berth.

"We're probably going to be third, maybe second," Crawford said. "We have to be lucky, but we could come out with 70 points in field events."

Sweetwater is almost universally considered the favorite in the girls division, but Andrews coach Denise Reed said her Lady Mustangs are ready for a run at the title.

"It'll be tough," she said. "They're kind of like us. They don't have a lot of depth, but they have plenty of good people.

"We'll have to be a little lucky, too."

The Andrews girls will rely heavily on field events, including shot putter Kathleen Johnson, long and triple jumper Christia Rogers, and high jumper Dee Dee Jenkins.

Johnson's 39-2 in the shot is among the top four throws in the state for 4A athletes, while Jenkins is a returning regional qualifier who has jumped 5-2 this season.

Rogers owns the district's best times in the 400, long jump, and triple jump, and Reed is also counting on points from freshman Becky Morales in the 800 and 1600.

Sweetwater will probably be challenged by San Angelo Lakeview, Monahans and Snyder as well as Andrews in the girls team competition. But while Lamesa and Big Spring may not be in the hunt for team honors, both schools may have their share of qualifiers.

Field event and track preliminaries will be held Friday. Field event finals will start at 10 a.m. Saturday, and the running finals will begin at 2 p.m.

PATTERSON—

Boyt struck out one batter in both the fifth and sixth and rounded out his performance by striking out the side in the seventh to reach his total of 15 Ks.

The right-hander ran the count full only three times.

First baseman Kyle Lusby did not record a put-out until the second out of the fourth. The Bulldog outfielders were needed only twice — to retrieve Permian's only two hits. The other six put-outs were all recorded by Bulldog infielders.

Boyt said he fought off any thoughts of pitching a perfect game saying that's what kills a pitcher's concentration.

"You can't get to thinking that," he said. "That's when you quit concentrating. You've just got to concentrate on keeping the ball down and getting them out."

Both Midland High coach Tim Whalen and Permian coach Bob Highly shared sentiments that Boyt's effort was one of the best — if not the best — they had ever seen.

"It's one of the best performances I've ever seen by a high school pitcher in terms of command," Highly said. "You can't feel bad when a kid throws like that."

The middle innings saw Boyt lose some of his flare, but he regrouped in time to finish as strongly as he started.

Four games remain for Midland High, and the Bulldogs need to win each one to assure themselves of a playoff spot.

With depth on the mound that also includes Joe Rendon and Kevin Rychell, the Dogs are capable of winning their remaining games with any of the three on the mound.

The question that lurks in the back of every Bulldog mind, though, is can the Bulldogs beat Cooper in Abilene?

Never fear. The same Eric Boyt that fanned 15 Permian batters Tuesday also threw a two-hit shut-out at Cooper two weeks ago.

Jimmy Patterson is a sports writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Dunbar reached the semi-finals in this year's 5A state tournament.

Also Midland-bound is 6-6 forward Calvin Rice — the younger brother of MC's Sidney Rice. Rice, who will graduate from Houston Madison, led the state in rebounding during the 87-88 season, with an average of 19 per game.

Also, 6-1 Eric Golightly of Houston Willowridge will next year be clad in a Chaps uniform. Golightly is another high school guard known for his shooting ability.

"I think you'll see another style of play at Midland College that you haven't seen before," Franklin said. "I think it's going to be more uptempo."

Franklin said he expects to hold another press conference within the week to announce still more signings of top high school talent — this time from outside of Texas.

Outgoing Western Junior Athletic Conference All-Stars and Midland College standouts Billy Ray Smith and Skeeter Henry are believed to be close to signing letters of intent at major universities. Announcements of their intentions are expected within the next couple of weeks.

The other runs came on a RBI single by Mike Basso and Terry Gilmore scored on a fielder's choice in the eighth.

Terry Gilmore, 1-0, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Ramon Martinez, 0-1.

Mike Scanlon's two-run double in the 11th inning gave the Tulsa Drillers a 7-5 victory over the Arkansas Travelers.

Scanlon's hit was set up by three walks surrendered by losing pitcher Mike Perez, 0-2. Scanlon hit the game-winner with two outs — a line shot that ricocheted off Traveler first baseman Jesus Mendez and sailed down the right field foul line.

The hit scored Stephan Glasker from third and Kevin Reimer from second.

Former Angel leads Athletics over Ms

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Just what the Oakland Athletics need — another hitter.

Rookie Doug Jennings went 4-for-4 with a home run and double and scored four times Wednesday night as Oakland crunched the Seattle Mariners 12-7.

"He was outstanding today," Athletics manager Tony LaRussa said. "That kind of hitting will get him more at-bats."

Jennings, a left fielder, played for the Midland Angels last season. He was drafted by Oakland last December and saw limited action early this season. Jennings hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning.

"It's always nice to do well in your first major-league start," Jennings said. "Seattle will always hold good memories for me."

Jose Canseco hit his fourth homer for the Athletics, whose lineup with Mark McGwire and Dave Parker has scored 51 runs in eight games. Canseco's homer hit the second-deck facade, only the fourth ball to reach that mark in the Kingdome's 12-year history.

"I've hit a couple home runs farther than that, but it sure looked good. I usually can't tell how much power I have, but when I hit that ball I knew right away I smoked it," Canseco said.

Oakland combined 14 hits and five Seattle errors to win. Canseco's two-run homer sparked a five-run third inning against Mike Campbell, 0-1.

"Campbell pitched well in the first inning, but he had control problems after that," Seattle manager Dick Williams said. "Canseco's home run really seemed to bother him."

Two outs later, McGwire, Jennings and Tony Phillips singled, loading the bases. Campbell threw a wild pitch and Stan Javier's two-run double made it 6-1.

Steve Ontiveros, 1-0, gave up five hits in five innings, including Mickey Brantley's two-run homer.

Rick Honeycutt pitched the final four innings for his first save, although he tied an AL record with four balks. He matched the mark set by Vic Raschi in 1950 and equaled by Texas' Bobby Witt on Tuesday.

Ontiveros also was called for a balk, and LaRussa and coach Dave Duncan were ejected for arguing about Honeycutt's last balk.

Orioles 9, Royals 3

Danny Tartabull drove in four runs and Floyd Bannister and Steve Farr combined on a three-hitter as Kansas City extended Baltimore's season-opening losing streak to eight games.

Tartabull went 4-for-5 with two doubles. Kevin Seitzer had three hits and drove home two runs, Frank White doubled and singled with two RBI and Steve Balboni homered in the Royals' 18-hit attack.

Bannister, 2-0, gave up two hits in six innings as visiting Kansas City won its third straight game.

The Orioles, off to their worst start ever, have been outscored 58-11 this season.

Yankees 5, Blue Jays 1

Richard Dotson pitched a four-hitter for eight-plus innings and New York scored five runs in the first inning and won in Toronto.

The Yankees, whose 7-1 record is the best in baseball, have yielded just 16 earned runs this season.

Dotson, 2-0, allowed only two hits until leadoff singles by Nelson Liriano and Lloyd Moseby in the ninth. Reliever Dave Righetti closed, giving up Pat Borders pinch-RBI single.

Rickey Henderson opened the game with a single, stole second and Willie Randolph had a bunt single. Mike Pagliarulo hit an RBI double and Claudell Washington then beat out a squeeze bunt for another run.

Dave Winfield, Don Slaught and Bobby Meacham hit run-scoring singles against Dave Stieb, 0-2. Winfield is 15-for-29 this season and has hit in all eight games, including six straight multi-hit games.

Indians 6, Twins 3

Ron Kittle, playing for the first time this season, hit a two-run homer and had a key RBI single as Cleveland beat visiting Minnesota.

The Indians trailed 3-2 entering the eighth, but Kittle's two-out single tied the score. Mel Hall followed with an RBI single and Brook Jacoby hit a two-run double.

Kittle, signed as a free agent in the off-season, homered in the first inning against Bert Blyleven. That gave Kittle eight homers in his last 20 at-bats against Blyleven.

Jeff Dedmon pitched 2 2-3 scoreless innings for the victory in his first Cleveland appearance. Juan Berenguer, 0-2, who relieved Blyleven to start the eighth, took the loss.

Minnesota's Kirby Puckett, who began the game in a 2-for-24 slump, had three hits. Greg Gagne also had three hits for the Twins.

Angels 5, White Sox 2

Jack Howell and Chili Davis hit two-run homers and Chuck Finley pitched five-hit ball for eight-plus innings, leading California over Chicago.

Finley, 1-1, won his fifth major-league start. He struck out seven and walked three.

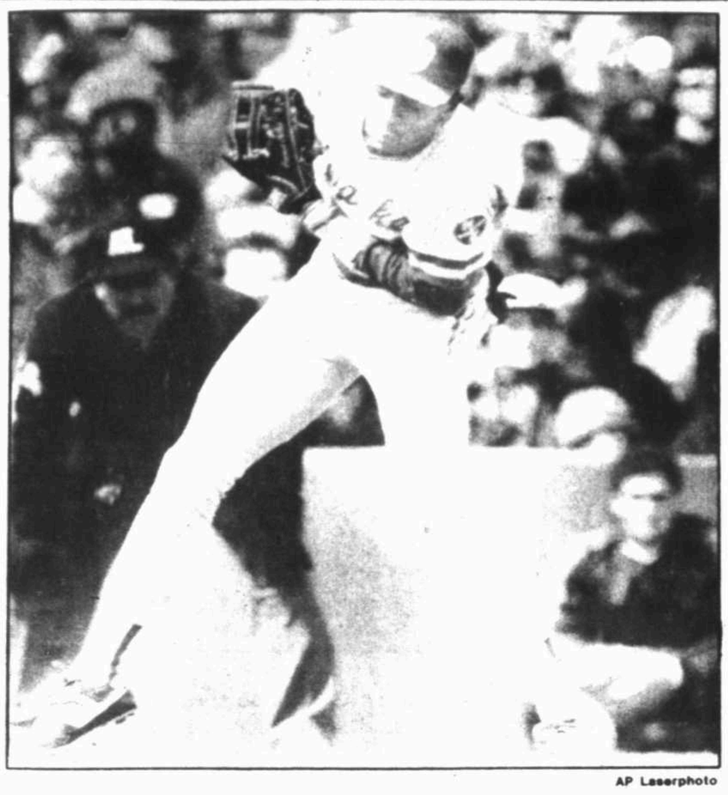

Howell's homer off Dave LaPoint, 1-1, broke a scoreless tie. Davis homered during a three-run eighth.

Fred Manrique homered for the visting White Sox.

Red Sox 6, Brewers 3

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd pitched five-hit ball for 6 2-3 innings and Ellis Burks hit a two-run homer as Boston beat visiting Milwaukee.

Boyd, who won just one game last year during an injury-plagued season, improved to 2-0.

Giants end losing skid

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

Will Clark homered with two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning to beat Cincinnati and halt San Francisco's three-game losing streak.

Clark's second homer of the season was a drive to right-center field off Pat Perry, 1-1, the Reds' fifth pitcher. Of Clark's 35 home runs last season, nine came off Cincinnati pitching.

Don Robinson, 1-0, got the victory with two innings of relief. He allowed one hit and struck out four.

The Reds took a 4-3 lead in the eighth on Paul O'Neill's run-scoring single and a sacrifice fly by Buddy Bell. San Francisco came back to tie it in the bottom of the inning, when Mike Aldrete singled and scored from first on Robby Thompson's double to left-center.

Cardinals 4, Cubs 3

Bob Horner hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the seventh inning to lift St. Louis over visiting Chicago.

Reliever Les Lancaster, 0-1, walked Tommy Herr intentionally to face Horner, who had reached base in his last nine plate appearances.

Pirates 7, Phillies 0

Brian Fisher and Jim Gott combined on a five-hitter and Pittsburgh turned four Philadelphia errors in the first three innings into four runs.

The Pirates have beaten the Phillies nine times in their last 10 games dating back to last season, including three of four this season.

Dodgers 4, Padres 3

Pedro Guerrero hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning to beat San Diego and give Los Angeles its sixth victory in eight games.

Fisher, 2-0, had a three-hitter entering the eighth but allowed two singles and was replaced by Gott.

Rodgers not favored

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Track Writer

BOSTON — Not long ago, Bill Rodgers always was among the favorites to win any marathon he entered. Now, he isn't even considered the top entrant in the Masters Division of Monday's Boston Marathon.

Certainly, Rodgers, four-time winner of the Boston Marathon, will be a strong contender to finish first among the over-40 field. But he will have to beat a strong contingent that includes Mick Hurd of Britain, Ryszard Marczak of Poland, Kjell-Erik Stahl of Sweden and Murray Hunt of New Zealand.

"It's not going to be easy," said Rodgers, who turned 40 last Dec. 23 and has run in one marathon since then, finishing 21st overall and second in the Masters Division in the Los Angeles Marathon.

"But to some degree, being older is easier," he said. "I don't have to win. You have your goals and aspirations, but being older, you cut back your training."

This being an Olympic year, Rodgers normally would be running in the U.S. Olympic Trials April 24 at Jersey City, N.J. But he realizes he no longer can keep up with the younger, faster marathoners, and so he chose to skip the Trials and compete in the marathon that has become synonmous with his mickname, "Boston Billy."

He said he had planned to run the Trials, but in December, two days before his 40th birthday, he injured an Achilles' tendon.

"I lost too much from the injury," he explained. "If I had recovered quickly, I would have run the Trials. The injury kept me out for three weeks.

"If I felt I could have finished in the top 10, I would have run. But I'm not up to it now. I wish I was fitter. I will miss running in the Trials."

In addition to the injury, Rodgers' training was slowed by financial problems.

His Bill Rodgers and Co., which marketed a line of running apparel carrying his name, was seized by the Bank of Boston, the firm's major creditor, last April. The move almost put the company out of business, shutting it down until two months ago.

"I didn't get paid for two years from the company," Rodgers said. "The bank bought my house (in Sherburne, Mass.). That way I was able to pay off the loan I owed. Now, I'm living in Dover (Mass)."

Now, the name of the company has been changed to High Tech Running Apparel and has moved its base of operations from Weymouth, Mass. to Laconia, N.H., and Rodgers is the only remaining stockholder of the original group of five, owning about 16 percent of the stock.

"My financial situation is fine now," Rodgers said. "I'm not broke. I'm out of debt.

"The company is doing well. We have good management and have tightened things up. We weren't a tough enough competitor before. We got squashed. Now, we should be right in there with the little companies again.

"And I'm in a great frame of mind. But that did take a toll on me.

"Physically, though, I feel tired. I've been doing a lot of promotional work and traveling."

Despite his age, Rodgers is one of the most active marathoners in the sport. Monday's race will be his sixth marathon in 18 months, the 52nd of his career and his 13th Boston Marathon.

He scored his first major marathon victory in Boston in 1975, and won again in 1978, 1979 and 1980. In 1975, he set an American record of two hours, 9 minutes, 55 seconds, and he broke it in 1979, clocking 2:09:27.

He also has won the New York City Marathon four times, from 1976-79.

O'Brien off to best start ever

ARLINGTON (AP) — Pete O'Brien says his off-season ritual of a practice he called "ghost-hitting" helped him to a blistering start at the plate this season.

Through seven games, O'Brien is hitting .600 (15-for-25) with two home runs and five multi-hit games for the best start in Rangers history.

Good batting practice is the secret to good hitting, O'Brien says, and he had batting practice every day — usually with only a bat, no baseball.

Whenever he felt like swinging the bat, O'Brien would step into the solitude of his garage, position himself in an imaginary batter's box between two parked cars, and wait for the pitch.

He would visualize facing pitchers such as Boston Red Sox starter Roger Clemens or New York Yankees reliever Dave Righetti and then use a heavier-than-usual bat borrowed from teammate Larry Parrish.

By spending as little as 10 minutes a day in his garage, O'Brien trained himself mentally to see the ball better and become more comfortable in the batter's box.

"Sometimes I'd go in there and bang out three hits in my first three swings and go back into the house," he told the Dallas Times Herald. "As long as I felt good that day, that's all that needed to be felt."

The process is similar to what boxers call "tunnel" vision — where their surroundings fade to black and all they see is their opponent.

Tom Robson, a Rangers coach and assistant hitting instructor, introduced O'Brien to "shadow hitting" when O'Brien was playing Class A ball in Asheville, N.C., in 1980, but O'Brien took almost eight years to incorporate it into his off-season preparation.

Normally, at the start of a season, O'Brien said, he feels uncomfortable with his stance and swing, and that's why usually he starts each season slowly. In 1987, at this time, he was hitting .143 (3 for 21).

Near the end of spring training, he fell into a 2-for-35 slump he attributes to a lack of concentration, but he broke out of it by going 5-for-5 in a two-game series at Oklahoma City just before the season started.

How long can he keep up his torrid pace at the plate?

Tennis director killed

DALLAS (AP) — Ron Bookman, deputy executive director of the Association of Tennis Professionals, died when a car struck him as he rode his bicycle across a city street, authorities said Wednesday.

The driver stopped her car after the Tuesday night accident, and although no charges have been filed, the case has been referred to a grand jury, police spokeswoman Sherry Dorn said.

Bookman, 46, of Dallas had worked with the suburban Arlington-based ATP since 1980. He joined the association as director of communications and became deputy executive director in 1986.

The Houston native was joint secretary of the Men's Tennis Council, the nine-member body that administrates the men's Grand Prix tour, ATP spokesman Greg Sharko said.

Olympic boycott unlikely

LONDON (AP) — Olympic officials remain confident that there will be no mass boycott of next summer's games at Seoul, but they aren't holding all the cards.

Some of them are in the hands of the international track and field's governing body, while others have been dealt to organizers of a proposed all-star rugby tour.

If track and field's governing body allows South African native Zola Budd to continue to run for Britain, or if enough of the world's top rugby stars agree to play in a tour of South Africa this summer, there could be problems for the Olympics.

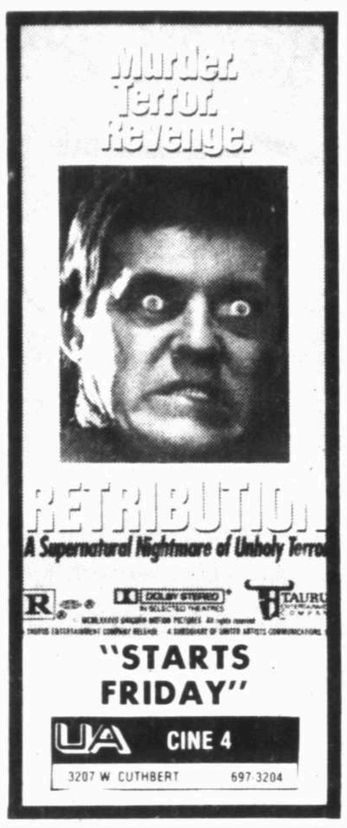

"These are very emotive issues for the Africans," said Sam Ramsamy, head of the South African Non-Racial Olympic Committee, a London-based organization that uses sports to apply pressure to the government of the racially segregated land.

A New Zealand rugby tour of South Africa led to an Olympic boycott 12 years ago, and several African nations threatened to boycott the World Cross-Country Championship last month before Budd withdrew.

International Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samaranch, who defused boycott threats in the socialist bloc through two years of globe-hopping talks, is confident there will be no repeat of the African boycott that hit Montreal in 1976.

Ramsamy said this week that he was much more optimistic than when the issues surfaced about a month ago that anti-Olympic action could be avoided.

THE CENTER
Ever wonder just what the Volunteer Center does? Well, we are part of a system of over 350 Volunteer Centers in the United States which serves an estimated 100,000 private organizations and public agencies. Our purpose is to promote and refer volunteers within the nonprofit community. Our services are provided free of charge and are available to any person who wishes to become a volunteer and to any nonprofit agency that agrees to the Center's requirements concerning use and treatment of volunteers. The Volunteer Center is not in competition with Midland's nonprofit agencies, rather, it strives to be a resource for the entire community.
For more information on where to volunteer or on how your agency or group can join the Volunteer Center, please call 692-8781

Wider trade gap surprises markets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit widened dramatically in February to $13.8 billion, its biggest shortfall since October and the second monthly jump in a row, the government said today.

Prices of stocks on overseas markets and the value of the dollar began falling almost immediately. U.S. markets were not open when the announcement was made.

The dollar lost 2 percent of its value against the Japanese yen and the German mark in the first minutes after the announcement; the West German and Swiss national banks bought dollars in an attempt to stem the fall in its value. Stock prices fell in London.

Analysts had largely predicted beforehand that the February deficit would shrink slightly.

The excess of imports over exports rose $1.4 billion from January's $12.4 billion imbalance.

For the first two months of 1988, the deficit is running at an annual rate of $157.6 billion, below the record $171.2 billion of last year but still worse than second highest imbalance of $156.2 billion in 1986, the Commerce Department said.

Imports of foreign manufactured goods, oil and farm products increased by $2.3 billion in February. Leading the surge were imports of electrical equipment from abroad, up $323 million, and auto and truck parts, up $298 million.

U.S. exports also rose, but by a smaller $1.3 billion from January.

Analysts had anticipated an improvement in the trade balance in February because of the normally slack winter demand for imported goods, lower oil prices and the fact that the month is the shortest of the year.

Dr Pepper merger with Seven-Up builds No. 3 soft drink firm

DALLAS (AP) — Robert B. Haas said his investment group hoped to score with the purchase of the Seven Up and Dr Pepper companies, but no one expected a 13-to-1 return within two years.

Prudential-Bache Interfunding Inc. said Wednesday it was purchasing a 49 percent stake in the Seven-Up and Dr Pepper holding companies, for $500 million in cash and $100 million in debt securities and preferred stock.

Dallas-based Hicks & Haas in 1986 made an initial equity investment of $45 million for the total $656 million Dr Pepper and Seven-Up purchases.

"Quite frankly, when we bought the two companies, we hoped to hit the moon," said Haas, one of the group's principals. "I doubt that anyone thought it would be this dramatic, this quick."

US economic outlook outstrips poorer nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economic prospects have improved slightly over the past six months in the United States and other industrial countries, but have dropped sharply in poor countries, according to estimates made public today by the International Monetary Fund.

In the United States the fund predicts that production will increase this year by the same 2.9 percent as it did in 1986 and 1987, with a slower increase of 2.7 percent in 1989. It predicts declining unemployment from 6.2 percent last year to 6 percent this year and 5.9 next year.

Inflation in the industrialized countries is pegged at 3 percent in 1988. But in the Third World, the report says, prices paid by consumers will go up by 46.7 percent.

Total growth in the Third World is put at 3.7 percent.

The report does not include population figures, but since Third World birth rates are high, the rise in income for each individual may be only about half as much. For industrial countries, the new growth figure is 3 percent.

"An important positive development in 1987 was the strengthening of policy coordination among the major industrial countries," says the fund's new "World Economic Outlook."

"The U.S. federal budget deficit fell substantially, as did deficits in other large countries with troublesome fiscal positions."

In the IMF's parlance, a country gets into a "troublesome fiscal position" when its government fails to collect enough taxes to cover its expenses.

The fund says the three most economically important Latin American countries — Brazil, Mexico and Argentina — have had serious setbacks in curbing inflation and there are signs of rising prices elsewhere. Fund officials doubt if their governments can do anything effective to stabilize their economies.

Sluggish growth in the Third World is blamed in part on a slowdown in India due to drought, and to lower pay and less investment in Brazil because of rising inflation.

Growth in China, South Korea and Taiwan, on the other hand, was called "particularly buoyant."

The predictions are made on the assumption that government policies and currency exchange rates will not change.

For the major industrial countries taken as a group the predictions include these for the years 1990 to 1992: a 2.8 percent increase in production and a slight increase in the jobless rate to 6.9 percent.

Short course slated for Texas Tech

From Staff Reports

The 35th annual Southwestern Petroleum Short Course — widely considered a "layman's SPE technical seminar" — will be held April 19-21 at the Petroleum Engineering Building at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

The short course, which annually attracts at least 300 oilmen to the Tech campus, will get under way with a one-day artificial lift school conducted by retired consulting engineer Howard Swaim, formerly of Conoco.

The April 19 problem-solving course, open only to advance registrants, will include a workshop on troubleshooting dynamometer cards.

The Wednesday and Thursday sessions will convene each day with an 8:30 a.m. authors' meeting and paper presentations beginning at 9:05 a.m.

Technical papers will cover subjects from natural gas compression and gas lift unit applications to preventive pumping unit maintenance and crude oil measurement errors.

Midland independent oil operator John E. "Chick" Smith will receive the 1988 J.C. Slonneger Award for advances he has pioneered in hydraulic fracturing processes.

Smith, who spent nearly 20 years with Mobil Oil beginning in the 1950s, was instrumental in establishing the School of Production Technology at Midland College, where he prepared and taught petroleum technology. He called the Slonneger award "one of the finest in the petroleum industry ... highly prestigious and I consider myself extremely fortunate to be selected.

Early retirees boost RV market

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

With summer just around the corner, many families will be hopping in their recreational vehicles and drive off toward open spaces.

However, an increasing number of those families consist of "empty nest" couples, early retirees who pack up and head out to visit their adult children or tour the country for weeks or months at a time.

"Our motor homes are bought almost exclusively by older people, because they have the means and the time to enjoy one," commented Allen Cason, a partner in Billy Sims Trailer Town of Odessa and Lubbock.

His company was recently named a Winnebago dealer, which he said will offer a more complete line of recreational vehicles.

He said motor homes are cost-effective for long trips because "you have your home, you can carry your own supplies and park where you want to be comfortable."

File Photo

"Minnie Winnies" — smaller, self-contained motors homes — are popular among active retirees looking for flexibility in driving and living features, according to Winnebago Industries Inc.

While motor homes are popular with the older customers, Cason said younger families — "first time" buyers — start out with a tent trailer and trade up to a motor home.

First City faces fifth debt tender deadline

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials of First City Bancorporation of Texas Inc. hope to complete a $1.5 billion reorganization plan for the troubled bank with a fifth and crucial deadline for debt holders to tender their holdings.

The deadline was extended from Tuesday to today for debt holders to tender their securities for less than face value. As of last week, 63 percent, or $143 million, of the bank's $225.8 million in bonds had been tendered. The company has modified the participation level from 90 percent to 70 percent.

The debt tender has been a stumbling block in the federally assisted bailout of the state's fourth-largest bank holding company. But last week, First City officials said they would complete the reorganization by Friday.

Under the arrangement, First City senior debt holders have been offered 45 cents on the dollar for their debt, while subordinated debt holders have been offered 35 cents.

Continuing to balk could be risky business, officials said.

"If the reorganization is not successfully completed, these factors, among others, will create a substantial doubt about the company's ability to continue in existence," the accounting firm of Arthur Andersen & Co. said in a letter accompanying a First City filing to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The first deadline was March 8, and four extensions have since been granted.

Time to tackle Workers' Comp reform

Howland

The Texas Association of Business has tackled an unenviable task as its No. 1 priority for 1988 — generating and maintaining interest in the less-than-glamorous issue of Workers' Compensation Insurance reform.

While admittedly not a grippingly dramatic subject, Workers' Comp reform and the TAB have several things working in their favor.

One, the issue is not all that controversial: most of the parties involved with Workers' Comp — employers, labor groups and government already agree that the system is in need of serious revamping.

Secondly, the last legislature already appointed a select interim committee, to accumulate facts, examine problems and make recommendations, whose results are available to the TAB in outline their proposed solutions.

Also, the groundwork for bipartisan support of a legislative initiative has been laid in meetings with state AFL-CIO officials and other labor leaders.

In addition, as Texas' economy gradually turns around, it may become more evident that inordinately high Workers' Comp costs are adversely affecting the state's ability to attract and retain jobs. The association has documented, in letters from various employers, that the state's dilapidated Workers' Comp system has been a crucial factor in deciding to close Texas plants or to locate new plant elsewhere.

And finally, the TAB has a particularly well-qualified and articulate spokesman leading their cause. On Tuesday. I was lucky enough to hear the TAB state chairman, Don Lummus from Plano, address a joint luncheon for the Odessa and Midland chapters of the statewide group.

Lummus, a former West Texas oil field hand who now owns and operates a bakery and food handling equipment manufacturing firm, reminded the group of Texas' position among the 10 highest premium-paying state's while benefits paid to Texan workers rank among the 10 lowest states.

Labor-intensive and historically high-injury industries, such as oilfield casing pullers, well servicing and drilling contractors felt the first wave of premium increases a few years ago. Since then, virtually every industry has borne the brunt of 30, 17 and 25 percent jumps since late 1984.

Total premiums paid by firms in the state have ballooned from $1.65 billion in 1984 to more than $3 billion by the latest estimates. Over the same period, the value of premiums paid into the risk pool for employers unable to get a private Workers' Comp carrier has exploded nearly eight-fold, from $66 million to $479 million in about three years, Lummus said.

The primary culprit in all these spiraling costs is the benefit system in the state which encourages lump-sum settlements which often bear little relationship to the injury or lost work time, critics say.

TAB staffers are currently meeting with labor officials at least monthly to draw up a list of those items which both groups are comfortable working to change.

The cooperation is important, Lummus said, "because if we get into a confrontation we'll wind up not getting anything."

Crude oil price rally continues

From Staff Reports

Oil prices continued an upward trend, with contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate gaining 10 cents to stand at $18.22 at midmorning.

Prices had showed signs of softening Wednesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange as the price for WTI opened at $17.95, down 14 cents from Tuesday's close. The price rebounded during the day to close at $18.12, a gain of 3 cents.

The rally in oil prices began Monday, when WTI jumped $1.01 on news that a number of non-OPEC and OPEC producers would meet to discuss ways to stabilize world oil prices.

Dollar tumbles on trade report

LONDON (AP) — The dollar plummeted in Europe today and gold prices dropped after the United States reported that its merchandise trade deficit widened $1.4 billion in February.

The dollar fell almost 2½ cents against the pound, nearly three pfennigs against the West German mark and more than 2½ yen after the trade report. The tumbling dollar compelled several major central banks to intervene and buy dollars to cushion the fall, traders reported.

The U.S. merchandise trade deficit widened to $13.8 billion in February from $12.4 billion in January, the Commerce Department reported.

Economists had expected the deficit to be between $11.2 billion and $11.8 billion.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell marginally to 126.15 yen, closing 0.30 yen lower than Wednesday. Later, in London, it was quoted at 123.75 compared 126.30 yen in the morning.

Here are dollar rates after the trade report was released, with midmorning rates in parentheses and compared with late Wednesday: 1.6650 (1.6920) marks, down from 1.6895; 1.3745 (1.4010) Swiss francs, down from 1.3983; 5.6510 (5.7385) French francs, down from 5.7295; 1.8740 (1.8972) Dutch guilders, down from 1.8950; 1,238.45 (1,254.00) Italian lire, down from 1,252.50; 1.2382 (1.2371) Canadian dollars, up from 1.23675.

In London, one pound cost $1.8675, compared with $1.8420 earlier in the day and $1.8445 dollars late Wednesday.

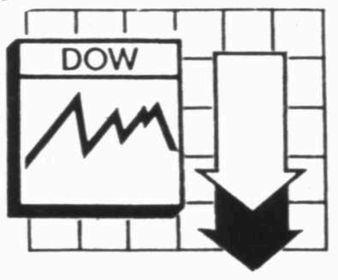

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $446.85 a troy ounce, down from late Wednesday's $449.25, and at midmorning today the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $447.

In Zurich, Switzerland, the bid price for gold was $447, down from $449.50 late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $1.34 to close at a bid $449.48.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.34 a troy ounce, down from Wednesday's $6.41.

Stock market rally takes breather

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a backward step Wednesday as traders cashed in some of the gains from the rally of the past six sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 129 points over the last six trading days, slipped 2.98 to 2,107.10.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 4 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 666 up, 829 down and 493 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 185.12 million shares, against 140.40 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index edged up .01 to 153.20.

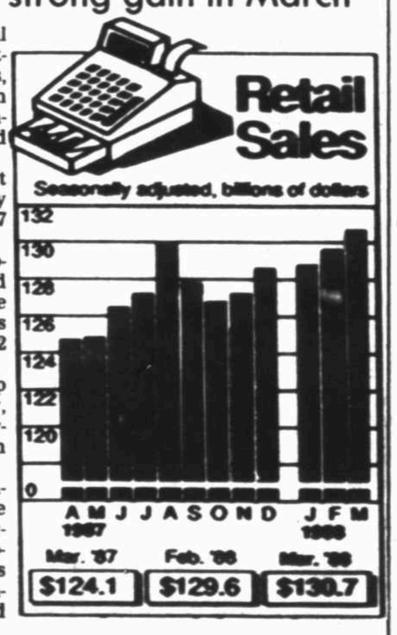

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $0.07 billion, or 0.003 percent, in value.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 210.23 million shares.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose .33 to 316.49, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up .18 at 271.55.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Retail sales show strong gain in March

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales, spurred by gains at department stores and auto showrooms, rose a strong 0.8 percent in March, the fifth consecutive increase, the government said Wednesday.

The Commerce Department said retail sales rose a seasonally adjusted $1.1 billion to $130.7 billion.

Sales were strong in all categories except furniture stores and restaurants, and were well above expectations. Most economists had predicted an increase of 0.2 percent to 0.3 percent.

The March increase came atop a 0.6 percent gain in February, revised upward from the 0.4 percent estimate released a month ago.

The latest rise was the strongest since a 1.1 percent increase in December. Ever since the October stock market crash, economists have watched retail sales closely for signs that the consumer sector of the economy would weaken.

Sales of domestic autos fall 10.8 percent

DETROIT (AP) — Sales of domestic cars and light trucks fell 10.8 percent in early April from a year ago after three months of unexpectedly strong results, according to domestic automakers.

The automakers said Wednesday they sold 230,486 domestic cars and light trucks in the eight selling days of April 1-10, down from 290,826 domestic vehicles in nine selling days the same period last year. Sales per day fell by 10.8 percent.

Flare agrees to sell Seismic Reflections

From Staff Reports

GeoQuest International, Inc., Houston, has agreed to purchase all the stock of Seismic Reflections, Inc. of Midland, according to John R. Butler Jr., chairman of GeoQuest.

Seismic Reflections is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Flare, Inc. The acquistion — which will add some 7,000 miles of seismic data to the GeoQuest data base — is expected to be completed before June 30.

Exxon discovery flows 520 barrels

From Staff Reports

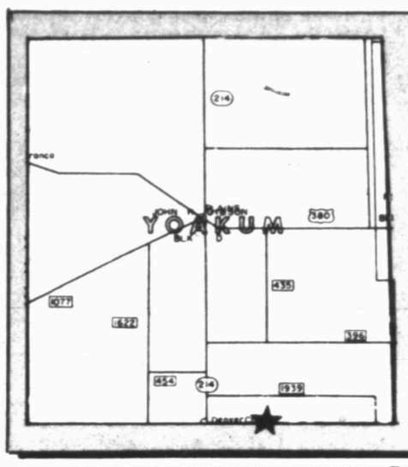

A rank wildcat in Yoakum County has yielded a Silurian discovery east of the Wasson Southeast field for EXXON CORP., MIDLAND.

Exxon potentialed the No. 1-B Annie Armstrong to flow 520 barrels of 34.8 gravity crude and no water on a 28/64 inch choke from perforations 12,372 to 12,313. Flowing tubing pressure was 53 psi, and gas-oil ratio is 13:1.

Permitted as a 14,200 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 12,375 ft. where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

The well topped the Atoka at 11,151 ft., Lower Mississippian at 11,677, and Silurian at 12,307 ft. on ground elevation of 3,488 ft. Pay was topped at 12,313 ft.

Location is 763 ft. from south and 7900 ft. from east lines of Section 28, Block C-35, PSL survey, 16.5 miles south of Plains.

★Silurian strike

Exxon Corp. has completed a 520 barrel Silurian discovery, on the line between Yoakum and Gaines counties.

Wolfcamp gas strike completed in Eddy

ENRON OIL & GAS CO. has recorded a Wolfcamp gas discovery in Eddy County, N.M., southeast of the Harkey field.

The No. 1 Harkey "35" State was finaled to flow 416 Mcfd on a 12/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 600 psi. The well flowed from perforations 10,364 to 10,380 ft., which had been acidized with 2,500 gallons of 7.5 percent acid.

Permitted as a 13,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 12,920 ft. and plugged back to 12,000 ft. A 4 1/2 inch liner was hung from 10,084 to 12,920 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,171.1 ft., include the Delaware at 2,340 ft., Bone Springs at 5,928, Second Bone Springs at 7,482, Harkey Sand at 8,200, Wolfcamp at 9,127, Pennsylvanian at 11,376, Atoka at 11,612, and Morrow at 12,103 ft. Pay was topped at 10,364 ft.

Location is 2,180 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 35, T24s, R27e.

Eddy producer flows 125 barrels crude oil

The Santo Nino field of Eddy County gained a new First Bone Spring producer as MANZANO OIL CORP. conpleted activity in the area.

On potential test, the No. 2 Elliott Federal flowed 125 barrels of 42.6 gravity crude, 250 Mcfd and 30 barrels of water on a 32/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 300 psi. Production is from perforations 7,109 to 8,193 ft., which had been acidized with 500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 6,085 barrels of gel and 420,000 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 2,000:1.

Drilled to 8,296 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 8,263 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,471 ft., formation tops include Anhydrite at 405 ft., Base Salt at 1,203, Queen at 2,462, San Andres at 3,320, First Bone Spring at 7,100, and Second Bone Spring at 7,999 ft. Pay was topped at 7,109 ft.

Location is 2,130 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 30, T18s, R30e.

Maxus finals Atoka well for 2.3 Mmcfd

MAXUS EXPLORATION CO. has added a new Atoka producer to the Antelope Ridge field of Lea County, N.M.

The No. 1 Federal "24-34" was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.3 Mmcfd on various chokes with a flowing tubing pressure of 4,020 ft. from perforations 12,132 to 12,164 ft. The interval was acidized with 6,000 gals. 25 percent HCL acid.

Drilled to 13,428 ft., the well was plugged back to 13,256 ft. A 5 1/2 inch liner was hung from 11,368 to 13,426 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,396 ft., include the Delaware at 5,262 ft., Cherry Canyon at 6,108, Brushy Canyon at 7,138, First Bone Springs at 8,598, Second Bone Springs at 9,502, Third Bone Springs at 10,451, Wolfcamp at 11,209, Strawn at 11,750, Atoka at 12,022, and Middle Morrow at 13,009 ft. Pay was topped at 12,132 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 34, T22s, R34e.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Only owner or heir can cash 'War Bond'

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I found a Series E, U.S. War Bond, in an old book. It is a $50 bond issued in April 1944. I tried to contact the people whose names are on the bond, to no avail. Is this bond of any value to me? If so, how much?

Doyle

A. Let's get the bad news out of the way, first. That bond is of no value to you, for the simple fact that you cannot cash it. U.S. Savings Bonds, which were called "War Bonds" during World War II and "Defense Bonds" in the postwar years, can be redeemed only by their registered owners. If the registered owners are dead, their heirs or representatives of their estates can cash the bonds after providing the necessary documents.

Savings bond paying agents, such as banks, are required to follow the rules in a U.S. Treasury Department "identification guide" to make sure bonds are redeemed only by legitimate owners.

I suggest you make an extra effort to contact the registered owners of that bond or their heirs. If you locate them, you'll be the bearer of glad tidings. That bond is worth $201.60. Its rightful owners might be willing to share that money with you for bringing it to their attention.

That particular bond will never be worth more than $201.60. It has been worth that amount since April 1984, when it reached its "final maturity" and stopped accruing interest. The oldest E bonds reached final maturity 40 years after their issue dates.

Q. I have a number of Series E and Series EE, U.S. Savings Bonds, purchased over the past 20 years. I would like to learn the present value of each bond, but I can't really expect my bank to determine the interest that has built up on more than 100 different bonds of various denominations.

Is there some way I can determine this interest myself?

A. Yes. You want two publications called "Tables of Redemption Values" — one for Series E and one for Series EE bonds. Both are available from Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402. The E bond version cost $2.25, the EE version $1.

Those publications usually are updated semiannually. Each has pages showing the accrued interest and the redemption value of bonds in particular months. The redemption value of an E or EE bond, of course, is the price at which it was purchased plus the interest that has built up on it.

Q. I have some U.S. Savings Bonds with both my name and my husband's name on them. He is deceased and I am in my eighties. What happens to these bonds when I die?

A. They will become part of your estate. Who gets the bonds after you go will depend on your will. If you die "intestate" — without a will — the laws of your state will determine who gets what you leave.

Right now, you are the sole owner of those bonds. This applies whether the bonds were issued in co-ownership form, with "or" between the two names, or in beneficiary form, in one name "payable on death" to the other.

Q. I purchase U.S. Savings Bonds as gifts for my grandchildren. I keep copies of the bonds in my files. Recently, I discovered two of the bonds have wrong Social Security numbers. What can I do to correct this?

A. The bonds will have to be sent to your district Federal Reserve Bank, which will reissue the bonds with correct SS numbers. The bank or other issuing agent at which you bought the bonds should help you with this. The details are spelled out in literature all issuing agents receive.

Q. In a 1930s type depression, would our U.S. Savings Bonds be safe?

A. Those bonds are debt obligations of our federal government, which has never defaulted on its debt. It won't in the future. Quit worrying. Your bonds are as safe as safe can be.

FDIC sale nets $1.1 million

From Staff Reports

Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. officials said they were pleased with the results of their latest auction, held Tuesday and Wednesday.

Gene Shrode, property manager for the FDIC in Midland, reported that the auction grossed $929,000 the first day, and about $250,000 the second.

"We anticipate the total will be around $1.1 million," he said, adding that the FDIC received 101 percent of the fair market value for the items sold, and that every item was sold.

More than 1,500 buyers from all over the country flocked to the auction to purchase items ranging from aircraft to Mercedes Benz cars, retail businesses, oil field equipment, jewelry, furniture, fixtures and office equipment. The items were purchased with loans from failed banks in the Midland-Odessa area, the Panhandle, El Paso and San Antonio, Shrode said.

Shrode noted that the auctions — held every four months — average $1 million. "This is such a good market, I don't see signs of the auctions letting up."

Bell

Schwab broker to address stock research

From Staff Reports

Dr. James Bell, manager of the local Charles Schwab & Co. office, will be the guest speaker at the Friends of the Library annual meeting at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Bell will speak on "Researching Your Investments." He noted that the public library's business section has excellent investment advisory services available to the public at no cost.

Prior to moving to Midland in 1968, Bell was a former assistant professor of chemistry at Penn State University. He was associated with National and First Affiliated Securities and Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith prior to joining Schwab. He will become president of the Friends of the Library later this month.

The public is invited to the meeting, whichwill be held in the main reading room of the libary.

Investigation could be devastating for Texas Air

By MARCY GORDON
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The flying public, already wary of financially-troubled Texas Air Corp., could be driven further away by the government's unprecedented special investigation of the nation's biggest airline company, observers say.

The Department of Transportation announced Wednesday it would investigate whether Texas Air and its management were "fit, willing and able" to carry commercial air traffic.

The company responded with full-page advertisements, headlined "Why Eastern Airlines Welcomes The Investigation," in today's editions of The New York Times and The Washington Post.

"We hope this means an end to behind-the scenes lobbying, an end to media manipulation, an end to the scare tactics used against our customers," the ad said.

The government has investigated small airlines and has revoked the operating licenses of some minor carriers. But analysts say the DOT's new inquiry is the first involving major U.S. airlines.

Houston-based Texas Air, an industry giant with a commanding 20 percent of all U.S. air traffic, is the parent company of Eastern Airlines and Continental Airlines.

The federal investigation, added to the company's financial and labor headaches, could drive still more passengers away as Texas Air's tarnished image deteriorates further, analysts said.

"It's quite serious," said James V. Cammisa, publisher of Travel Industry Indicators, an industry newsletter. "Both (Eastern and Continental) are suffering from image problems now, anyway."

Texas Air stock dropped more than $1 a share, to $10.75, on the American Stock Exchange when news of the investigation hit the market. The stock closed at $10.87½, down 87½ cents from Tuesday.

In a separate action on Wednesday, the Federal Aviation Administration announced a civil penalty of $823,000 against Miami-based Eastern because of "recurring trends" of violations of safety regulations. The fine was imposed just over a year after Eastern agreed to pay a $9.5 million penalty in connection with other safety violations.

The latest fine is based on findings from an investigation in September and October, but Eastern now has an opportunity to challenge it. If the airline can produce evidence the FAA considers valid, the fine could be reduced.

"No airline likes to raise the specter of safety at all," said Anthony Hatch, an analyst for Argus Research Corp. He said it's difficult to estimate how many people would not fly the airline because of the negative publicity surrounding the federal investigation.

Texas Air and its chairman, Frank Lorenzo, have been locking horns with unions at Eastern over proposed pay cuts and other labor issues. Lorenzo put Houston-based Continental into bankruptcy proceedings in 1983 and emerged with a non-union airline.

The Texas Air carriers have a huge debt of around $5.4 billion, but Lorenzo has set up a corporate structure that insulates the parent company from most of the burden. The company sustained record losses of $466 million last year.

His hard-nosed tactics, including stringent cost-cutting and periodically triggering fare wars, have caused bitter conflicts with the company's unions and elsewhere. More than 150 congressmen recently supported a resolution in favor of an investigation of Texas Air.

Lorenzo built Texas Air into major airline player

HOUSTON (AP) — Frank A. Lorenzo, chairman of Texas Air Corp., often has said one of his major goals was to solve problems connected with consolidating several airlines and winning back disaffected customers.

His task took on new dimensions after the Transportation Department's announcement Wednesday that it was investigating Texas Air's finances and management to determine whether the troubled airline was fit to carry commercial traffic.

Lorenzo was traveling Wednesday, and was not available to be interviewed by reporters, said Texas Air spokesman Bruce Hicks.

Lorenzo, 47, spent more than a decade building Texas Air Corp. into one of world's largest and most aggressive airline companies, acquiring such carriers as Continental Airlines, Eastern Airlines, New York Air, Frontier Airlines, People Express and smaller commuter airlines.

Texas Air's airlines now serve nearly one-fifth of the U.S. commercial airline market.

But along the way came major problems with coordinating computer systems, flight schedules, work forces, often bitter union-management relations and customer defection to other carriers.

Lorenzo

Texas Air has said problems in consolidating several airlines were unavoidable, and that by acquiring other carriers in many cases it was helping them stay in business.

After a bitter takeover battle in 1981, Lorenzo merged Continental with his smaller, regional carrier called Texas International Airlines. But by mid-1983, the new carrier was losing money heavily. Lorenzo took Continental to bankruptcy court, later emerging with a non-union airline.

But the losses continued, with Texas Air sustaining a company record loss of $466 million last year.

In an interview aired last week on ABC's 20/20, Lorenzo said he hoped to create the airline of the future.

"Our mission today is to put together and continue the process of smoothing out what has been put together, and to bring to the consumer what the consumer demands and create the airline for the 1990s," Lorenzo said.

"I can tell you that in my 16 years in this business, safety has never taken second place," he said.

> "Our mission today is to put together and continue the process of smoothing out what has been put together, and to bring to the consumer what the consumer demands and create the airline for the 1990s."
>
> Frank Lorenzo

Lorenzo studied economics at Columbia College, and received a master's degree in finance from Harvard Business School in 1963. He joined Trans World Airlines as a financial analyst in 1963 but left two years later to become manager of Eastern's financial analysis department. In 1966, he and Robert J. Carney, a Harvard classmate, formed a financial advisory firm.

Three years later, the two men founded Jet Capital Corp., which bought a controlling interest in Texas International in August 1972, with Lorenzo becoming the carrier's youngest president ever at age 32.

In 1981, Texas International bought Continental for $100 million, with the resulting carrier keeping the Continental name. Continental is now part of Texas Air, whose principal shareholder is Jet Capital.

RVs—

"Our RV market was travel trailers and tent trailers," he said. "Nationwide, 49 percent of the RV market is motorized vehicles. Locally, it's not 50-50 because a large number of people drive vehicles capable of pulling a trailer."

He added that in this area he can hardly give away the small- to mid-size motor homes, because people generally move up from a travel or tent trailer to a larger or "Class A" motor home, the price of which ranges from $35,000 to $75,000. He said the more popular-sized vehicles sell for around $50,000.

Cason commented that manufacturers have tried to hold prices steady, but they've crept up because of rises in labor and material costs. So far this year, sales are better than 1987, which was an improvement on 1986, according to Cason.

Motor homes have become increasingly luxurious over the years. Air conditioning is virtually a standard, and television sets and television antennas are commonplace — some even come with video cassette recorders. Cason noted that a customer recently had a satellite dish installed on an RV.

Some tent trailers come equipped with a shower, and most manufacturers have begun adding microwave-convection oven combinations to the vehicles.

Over the 15 years Billy Sims Trailer Town has been in the Permian Basin, Cason has seen RVs grow in popularity as they become more commonplace and accessible. In addition, more campgrounds — such as the KOA, or areas in state and national parks — have raised interest.

He said there's a good RV market on the West Coast and Northeast, and Florida, with its sizeable retirement popularity. And, of course, the Permian Basin. "We're in a beautiful part f the country, but, unfortunately, to get to a lake or the mountains, you have to travel a ways," he said.

DRINK—

When the deal is completed, Prudential-Bache becomes a major stockholder in a new firm merging the Seven-Up and Dr Pepper holding companies, forming the nation's third largest soft drink company behind Coca Cola and PepsiCo.

The Hicks & Haas group will retain 51 percent of the merged operation, to be called Dr Pepper-Seven-Up Cos. Inc.

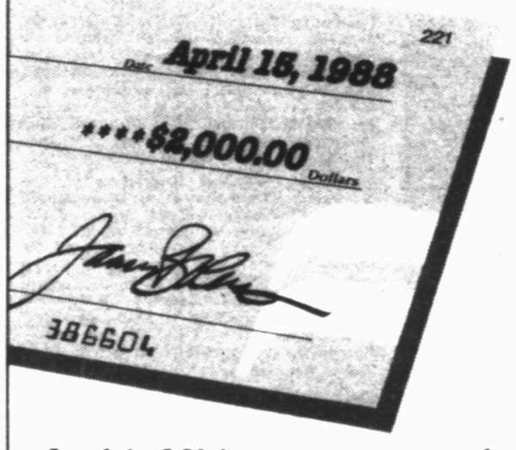

Prudential-Bache's role in the new company was not foreseen by management of Seven-Up and Dr Pepper when the pair announced an initial merger agreement March 1, officials said.

Haas said the Prudential-Bache purchase price was partially based on the strong performance of Seven-Up, which rebounded from a flat cash flow in 1986 to a cash flow of just less than $50 million in 1987.

Something special in the air.

Play FINDERS KEEPERS in the Reporter-Telegram

APRIL 10th-JUNE 10th

TWO WAYS TO PLAY!

IT'S SIMPLE! Complete the official Finders Keepers entry form that will appear each day in your newspaper or pick one up at our offices at 201 E. Illinois. Bring or mail the form to us. If mailing, address to: Finders Keepers, c/o Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702. Forty (40) names will be drawn from the current week's entries every Friday. The following week 8 names will appear randomly throughout the classified section Monday through Friday. Find your name in the classifieds and call us before noon the day following publication at 682-6222 to qualify! You'll receive a Finders Keepers T-Shirt and possibly win the $10,000 Grand Prize!

DOUBLE YOUR CHANCES! Pick up a free Finders Keepers bumper sticker at our offices, at the customer service booth at Midland Park Mall or at any Kent Kwik Convenience Store and all Kent Kwik Lube Center locations in Midland and Odessa. Our Finders Keepers spotters will be on the lookout in Midland, Odessa and surrounding cities. When your vehicle is spotted, the license tag number will appear in the classifieds. When you see your tag number, call us at 682-6222 by noon the day following publication to qualify! You'll receive a Finders Keepers T-Shirt and a chance at the Grand Prize!

BE A WINNER! Enter as often as you wish and read classified everyday! When you find your name or license tag number call us before noon the day after publication to qualify!

Remember - It's a new game each week! The more you enter the better your chances!

THE GRAND PRIZE $10,000 plus a trip for 2 on American Airlines will be awarded in a drawing of all eligible participants at Midland Park Mall on Saturday, June 18th at 4:00 p.m. The Grand Prize winner does not have to be present at the drawing to win.

CONTEST RULES

No purchase necessary. Copies of the Reporter-Telegram may be read at the Reporter-Telegram offices without charge or at your library. Contest rules and entry forms for this contest are on display in the lobby of the Reporter-Telegram office at 201 E. Illinois. Employees and independent contractors of the Reporter- Telegram, their agencies in this contest and their immediate family members (meaning brothers, sisters, children, mothers, fathers), and all persons living in the employees' home are ineligible to win any prize in this contest. The Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to publicize granted interviews with contestants and winners and publish or broadcast the name, likeness, voice and statements of each contestant or winner without payment or compensation to any such person.

The Reporter-Telegram assumes no responsibility for entry forms deposited with the United States Postal Service. Facsimiles of entry forms are accepted. No participant may be a winner more than once each week. The Grand Prize Winner is responsible for any applicable taxes.

Cut out and enter today!!

FINDERS KEEPERS OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM

☐YES, I want to play "Finders Keepers" and authorize the Reporter-Telegram to publish my name or license tag number in the newspaper. In the event I qualify or win I authorize for my photo to be taken and published.

Need more time for taxes?

Many tax payers expected to file for extentions

By GARY KLOTT
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — With all the complications in the tax law this season, more than the usual number of procrastinators are expected to seek a reprieve from Friday's filing deadline.

Putting off the day of reckoning is simple. You need only send in Form 4868 by Friday and the Internal Revenue Service will automatically give you four more months — until Aug. 15 — to file your return. You don't even need a good excuse. No explanation is asked for on Form 4868, which is titled "Application for Automatic Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return."

For those who owe the government money, the extension form is not a salvation. The extension gives you more time only to file the return, not to pay any taxes due. To avoid penalties and interest charges, taxpayers seeking an extension must estimate how much they owe and send in the payment with Form 4868 by Friday.

Only a couple of ploys will get taxpayers some extra time to pay up.

One of them, which is not really intended for the purpose of buying more time, is limited to people who have relatively simple financial situations and whose adjusted gross income is no more than $50,000. They can put off paying their taxes for at least a month by letting the IRS compute their tax.

All they need do is fill out most of the return form, stopping short of computing their tax liability, and send it in by April 15. The Internal Revenue Service will compute the tax and send a bill for any tax owed and will not charge interest or penalty for late payment as long as the money is paid within 30 days of the notice. Tax return booklets detail the eligibility requirements.

Last month the IRS sharply restricted what had been the most widely used method of delaying payment of taxes among upper-income Americans. For many years, taxpayers could get two months extra to pay their taxes by managing to be outside the country on April 15.

The ploy was so attractive that Continental Airlines featured the loophole in newspaper advertisements last month. The IRS, miffed, decreed that any such trip had to last at least two weeks. Thus, while the loophole still exists, it helps only those who can arrange to have a lengthy business or personal trip coincide with the tax filing deadline.

Otherwise, late payments are subject not only to interest charges, which currently run 10 percent, but also to a late-payment penalty of 0.5 percent per month. (The penalty applies if the unpaid amount exceeds 10 percent of the taxpayer's eventual tax liability.)

"It's cheaper to borrow from the bank in order to pay the IRS on time," said Albert Ellentuck, a tax partner in the accounting firm of Laventhol & Horwath.

Even those who cannot scrape together the money to pay the IRS on time should still be sure to file a return or apply for an extension by Friday, to avoid a late-filing penalty, which runs five percent per month.

Because the penalties for tardiness are so stiff, Ellentuck suggested mailing the extension request by certified or registered mail in case it is later necessary to prove that it was mailed before the IRS deadline.

If you can't afford to pay all the tax due by Friday, Stephen Pyrek, an IRS spokesman, advised enclosing whatever you can afford, to limit the late-payment penalties and interest charges. "If you owe $3,000 and all you can afford to pay is $500, then pay that," he said. The IRS will send you a notice about arranging to pay the balance.

Since the late-filing and payment penalties are based on taxes due, taxpayers who are due refunds will not be hit by a penalty, even if they file late and do not request an extension. But Pyrek suggested that they file the extension request on time in case their calculations are wrong or they are later audited and are assessed additional tax. In such cases, the late-filing and payment penalties could be imposed, he said.

Furthermore, even people who are confident that they owe nothing to the IRS may still wind up in trouble if they owe money to state and local tax authorities and are late in paying.

Filing for an extension of your federal tax return does not always automatically mean you get an extension on your state return. The procedures vary from state to state, according to Kenneth T. Zemsky, a tax partner and state tax coordinator at the accounting firm of Ernst & Whinney.

In New York, taxpayers who do not expect to owe additional tax need only to send in IRS Form 4868. But those who owe money to the state need to use New York State Form IT-370 to file for an extension.

In Connecticut, people subject to the state tax on investment income must file a "tentative" state tax return by April 15.

In New Jersey, taxpayers who have paid at least 80 percent of their tax liability through wage withholding or estimated payments can qualify for an extension simply by filing a copy of their federal extension application when they eventually file their return.

Form 4868 helpful at last minute

Associated Press

More taxpayers than ever will probably use Form 4868 this year: It buys you an extra four months to fill out all the forms — pushing the income tax return deadline back to August 15. Professional preparers expect to seek a record number of extensions, too, thanks to last-minute business from folks who have trouble coping with what was advertised as a simpler tax system.

Filing Form 4868 doesn't push back the deadline for paying your tax, however. If you expect to owe more than has been withheld from your salary — or paid via quarterly estimates — you're expected to send in a check with the request for the extension. As long as at least 90 percent of what you owe for 1987 is paid by April 15, you won't be hit with a late payment penalty. Good luck.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Fruit, chocolate meant to be eaten separately

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

Every once in a while some manufacturer will send a sample of its newest product to the office. As resident shopper and consumer, these products usually find their way to my desk (unless, of course, it's popcorn, in which case all the journalistic types around here insist on their own investigation), and from there to my house and the taste-testers.

The lastest of these edible freebies is, according to its accompanying literature, "easy-to-use, microwavable melting wafers for hand-dipping strawberries and other fruit." What that means is the product, called Dolci frutta, is round pieces of candy made to be melted in the microwave and have fruit dipped into it.

The little taste-testers were excited to see the boxes of "candy" that they were going to get to sample, and they couldn't understand the principle of melting the wafers and dipping fruit in it — so what we ended up doing is eating the Dolci frutta like candy, and going from there.

We checked out a box of con cioccolata (with real chocolate — this is supposed to be Italian candy wafers) and a box of crema bianca (creamy white with real yogurt, according to the press release) wafers for taste, price and advertising accuracy. The kids did most of the testing, with a little help from their friends.

Each 6-ounce box sells for around $1.69. (Remember, this is a new product and the samples came from the manufacturer. I suppose the price in the supermarket will be close to the suggested price, but each store will conduct its own sales, etc.) That's more than what a 6-ounce package of chocolate chips costs, but then this candy is made for dipping. And it's Italian!

Press release advertising says Dolci frutta is "unique ... available... versatile ... has taste ... quality ... has couponing (in fact, cents-off coupons for strawberries come on the boxes) ... convenient ... complete ("all you need to coat 2 pints of berries except, of course, the berries) ... fun ... beautiful (!)" Of all that gushiness, I actually can agree with "has taste" (who would eat chocolate if it didn't?) and "has couponing." I've seen the coupons myself. But I'm not sure about all those other adjectives.

In the taste-test, the young testers agreed that Dolci frutta was delicious. However, they thought dipping perfectly good fruit in chocolate or white yogurt candy sounded gross, but eating the wafers straight out of the box was just dandy. They even served the chocolate and vanilla pieces to all their friends, and the opinion was unanimous — fruit and candy should be eaten separately, not together.

Well, it was fun testing this freebie. I doubt that I'll buy it very often, though. I agree with the kids — fruit tastes better by itself. So does chocolate.

DEAR ABBY

Some days are gone forever

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I saw you on the Phil Donahue show and ended up in a big fight. You read from a book you had written in 1962. In it you said that wives should manage to live on what their husbands earn, because a career woman is a potentially good candidate for divorce. You also said that when a woman becomes financially independent, she neglects her husband and children, and her marriage falls apart — or words to that effect.

Then you said, "Oh, isn't that awful? I can't believe I wrote that!"

I told my wife that you were right on in 1962, Abby. She said I was full of it.

I know it's not possible to turn back the clock, but here's one man who wishes we could. Marriages were much healthier when women stayed home and took care of their husbands and raised their own kids. — ONE MAN'S OPINION

DEAR ONE: Judging from my mail after the Donahue show, a surprising number of men — and women, too — agree with you.

I maintain, however, that the days when men controlled women by keeping them poor, pregnant and barefoot are gone forever — thank the good Lord.

If a woman chooses to stay home and live on what her husband can provide, fine. But today, because more women can support themselves, they have a choice. I stand my ground, and rest my case.

DEAR ABBY: My brother has four grown children. He is divorced from their mother and is now married to a great girl. His ex-wife has also remarried. All his children are married, except "Tina," his youngest daughter, who is planning a big wedding. Tina was 5 years old when the divorce occurred.

As far as I know, my brother supported all four children until they were 18.

Tina has asked her stepfather to escort her down the aisle, which has hurt my brother deeply. For this reason he has refused to attend her wedding and has asked me and the rest of our brothers and sisters not to attend Tina's wedding out of loyalty to him.

Abby, Tina is still my niece and I'd like to attend her wedding, but if I go, my brother will probably disown me.

What should I do? — UPSET AUNT

DEAR UPSET: Do whatever you want to do. If your brother doesn't want to attend Tina's wedding, that's his business. But he has no right to ask anyone else not to attend out of "loyalty" to him — or for any other reason.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please use the power of your column to put an end to advertising that ridicules the deaf and hard of hearing?

In recent years, I have seen advertising that depicts an older person straining to hear the name of a product, so it is repeated several times — LOUDLY. I understand, of course, that an excuse is needed to repeat the name of the product in order to make a lasting impression on the buying public, but, Abby, where is the sensitivity to the problem of hearing? No one would think of laughing at a blind person who cannot clearly see the product. And who would be amused at an arthritic who cannot hold the product? So, why do we see advertising that ridicules the deaf and hard of hearing?

Please urge your readers to let advertisers know that a disability should not be abused in this manner. — MARTI PHELPS, CINCINNATI

DEAR MARTI: Your message came through clear as a bell. I hear you, and hope others do.

Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.

BETTER BUSINESS

Auto repair warning given

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

The Better Business Bureau is cautioning area auto repair shops to not assure auto owners that they will be reimbursed by the auto manufacturer for the cost of repairs or replacements of certain engine components (transmissions in partcular). Some auto repair concerns are reportedly displaying signs outlining procedures in filing claims for these costs through the manufacturer-sponsored autoline program, administered by the Better Business Bureaus. This can lead to false expectations and result in disappointment because each case presented to the volunteers who serve on the arbitration-mediation panel is judged on its own merits.

Refrigerator odor remedies are offered

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

One of the most unappetizing things is to open the refrigerator door and smelling the odor of spoiled food, long after the food has been thrown away.

This kind of odor problem is especially bad if you've been away and your refrigerator goes off for several days. Even an empty refrigerator, such as one in a rental home, camper or cabin, can develope an bad odor if it wasn't thoroughly cleaned before being closed for several weeks.

Removing the odor may not be easy. One of the most common solutions is to put an open box or dish of baking soda in the refrigerator to absorb the odor, but that will not be sufficient in all cases.

When the odor remains, another solution is to crush several charcoal briquettes in a dish and leave them in the refrigerator for several weeks. If you can still smell the spoiled odor, replace the briquettes with an open dish of vanilla extract. If nothing helps, the insulation inside the refrigerator wall may have absorbed the odor, making it impossible to remove.

The more common odor problems occur when someone leaves the refrigerator door open overnight. When this happens, odors can be more easily removed with baking soda, but the safety of your food may be in question.

Foods such as uncracked eggs, fruit juices, fresh vegetables, butter, margarine and hard cheese will be fine. Jams, jellies, salad dressing, pickles and olives also will be safe.

Other foods may be questionable.

If your refrigerator is set at 40 degrees or lower, is running properly, and the food still feels cold, most likely it will be safe to eat. This should be true of foods that were in the back of the refrigerator. But raw or uncooked meats and casseroles, especially those sitting near the door, may have gotten warm enough for bacteria to easily multiply. It is advisable to throw out any food you have doubts about to avoid the possibility of food-borne illness and its uncomfortable flu-like symptoms.

Marian Farr is Midland County Extension Agent, Home Economics.

Simpler may mean better in engines

Copley News Service

Does simpler mean better? When it can save car buyers money, it does.

Some auto designers believe that cars with simple, ultracompact, "two-stroke" engines could be on the streets in a few years. And they insist that will be the most important development in automotive technology in the 1990s.

Pound for pound, such motors would provide dramatically better performance than any conventional four-stroke engine. They could boost fuel economy by 20 percent or more, slash costs by $600 per vehicle because of fewer needed parts, and trigger radical changes in car styling.

"This could make all current engine technology obsolete," declares David E. Cole, director of the Office for the Study of Automotive Transportation at the University of Michigan.

VCR is part of younger set's life

By DUDLEY PERCY
New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — While most toddlers were still learning to walk, Megan Owens was studying the art of "fast forwarding."

Not on all fours across the living room floor. But on her parents' videocassette recorder (VCR).

Megan, 5, is an experienced video viewer. "She puts the tape in by herself," said her mother, Pam Owens. "She even knows how to rewind it when it's over."

With the push of a button, Megan can enter the fantasy worlds of "Mary Poppins," "Annie" or "Alice in Wonderland."

Her 2-year-old brother, Taylor, prefers "the dog movie," better known as "Lady and the Tramp."

Such are the tastes and talents of the nation's growing number of video kids, children well-versed in the use and command of their family's home video equipment.

"It's a part of their lives," said Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television, an advocacy group based in Cambridge, Mass. "Children who are used to using their VCR treat the videotape the way we used to treat our favorite books. They hug it. They carry it around. They feel they have control over it."

TO CHILDREN of parents who can afford it, video equipment is no more intimidating as a plaything than, say, a red wagon or a Barbie doll.

"Machinery is frightening to adults," Charren said, "because they're always afraid they're going to push a button too hard or turn a knob too hard. Children, on the other hand, don't seem to worry about breaking anything."

"Young children absorb technology naturally," said Keith Mielke, vice president of research for the Children's Television Workshop, which produces "Sesame Street," the long-running children's series on the Public Broadcasting Service. "When it's used wisely, it has tremendous potential for good."

Experts agree that the VCR can be both a source of entertainment and an educational tool, but parents must be selective about what they allow their children to watch.

"There really is remarkable material available," said Diana Green, editor in chief of Parents' Choice magazine, which reviews children's media. "But it has to be carefully chosen in order to be used intelligently."

Children's videos recommended by Parents' Choice include "Baby Song" from Hi-Tops Video; "Perfect the Pig" from Children's Video Library; "Corduroy and other Bear Stories" from C.C. Studios; and "Sign

CNS Graphic

Me a Story," a videocassette from Random House that teaches hearing-impaired children simple sign language.

PARENTS SHOULD steer away from slick packaged versions of commercial television that are geared more toward selling products than telling a story, Charren said.

"There's tons of junk, just like there's tons of books that really aren't worth the money."

Even if the videos are good, experts say parents should monitor their children's TV time and not rely on the VCR as a full-time babywatcher. A.C. Nielsen Co. research shows that children watch an average of almost four hours of television a day.

"Parents shouldn't think that the television set, even when it's running something beautiful, replaces a parent or the need for a parent," Charren said.

Some parents and experts argue that increasing interaction with video screens shuts out other forms of recreation and can lead to antisocial behavior.

"We intentionally don't have a VCR," said Kay Brewer, an Atlanta mother of three. "My husband and children want one, but I'm really trying to hold off. It's just one more thing that encourages them to watch a TV or a screen. I'd like them to do more creative, outdoor-play things."

But with more than 50 percent of American families owning VCRs, the video craze means big business for companies such as Walt Disney Home Video, the giant in the children's home video industry and the only company that extensively advertises movies and videocassettes for children.

DURING THE past Christmas sales season, Walt Disney Home Video sold more than 3 million copies of "Lady and the Tramp." Priced at $29.95, it is the best-selling video ever.

"The bottom line is that we have really, really high quality programming," said Tania Steele, Walt Disney Home Video spokeswoman. "People don't just want to go into a store and rent 'Lady and the Tramp' and see it once, they want to collect it as a real collector's item. It's something you put on your bookcase like a classic book."

Consumer research shows that parents are more likely to buy children's home videos than rent them because children enjoy repetitive viewing.

"It just amazes me," said Cathy McCumber, mother of three. "They'll watch the same movie over and over and over. I mean, really, how many times can you watch 'Dumbo'?" the Atlanta mother wondered.

Children's videocassettes range in price from about $10 to $30. Of the top 10 selling videos, three are for children, according to Billboard Publications.

Children do not just encounter VCRs on the home front. Day-care centers and preschools are also joining in the trend. "Our 2-year-olds enjoy the cartoons," said Carol Crowder, director of the Briarcliff Baptist Church Child Development Center. "I don't know what it is about the screen, but they'll sit and watch it."

VIDEO-GAME CONSOLES, plug-in cartridges and games for personal computers have also become a multimillion dollar part of the consumer electronics industry that is finding a lucrative market in young people.

"Every little boy between the ages of 7 and 12 in this neighborhood has a Nintendo game system," said Pat Leake, who lives in Brookwood and has two children.

Her 8-year-old son, Nolan, is revered as the neighborhood video game whiz. He learned to read so he could understand the directions to his family's home computer. Now, he writes his own computer games.

But children are using their home video equipment for more than just games and entertainment. They're also using it to do their homework as an updated version of Cliff Notes.

"We can always tell when books have been assigned in school," said Barrett Grey, manager of Blockbuster Video on North Druid Hills. "They start renting movies like '1984' and 'To Kill a Mockingbird.'

"But teachers are catching on. They're coming to get the movies so they ask questions that are only in the book," he said.

Coalition encouraging the recycling of plastic bottles

Copley News Service

In the near future, your new carpeting, stylish ski jacket or cozy sleeping bag may have been a soft-drink bottle in another life, thanks to plastic recycling.

A newly formed coalition of chemical and packaging companies is encouraging the recycling of plastic bottles. The campaign will concentrate initially on recycling plastic soft-drink bottles made of polyethylene terephalate, which can be recycled into other useful products.

Eventually, the program is to include all kinds of plastic containers, said a spokesman for the National Association for Plastic Container Recovery. The group's goal is to recycle 50 percent of bottles made of polyethylene terephalate by 1992.

EXPERIENCE A HEIGHTENED AWARENESS OF THE ROAD. AND EVERYTHING ABOVE IT.

Presenting a BMW you're encouraged to open up in even the quietest neighborhoods. The 325i Convertible.

A car which combines all the joys of open air driving with those of driving a BMW.

Joys which here include a 6-cylinder, 168-horsepower engine "of almost miraculous smoothness" (Motor Magazine). And an all leather interior offering ample room for four.

Those wishing to see a car deemed "alone in the automotive landscape" (Auto Motor und Sport) should proceed to our showroom. Where we invite you to examine the 325i Convertible by starting it up. And then opening it up.
