County Bank Deposits Stand $200,000 Above Year Ago

A bank call issued March 12 shows that Collingsworth County is in better shape than a year ago, according to reports of the three institutions, with deposits standing approximately $200,000 above those of March 3, 1958.

Beyond this, the deposits are more than one-half milion dollars higher than two years ago.

Combined assets also are above those of last year, now standing at $6,599,729.99, compared to last year's figure of $6,536,898.41, and assets of two years ago, $5,174,656.61.

Deposits at the current call were $6,122,210.28, compared to $5,917,360.27. one year ago.

Loans and discounts are approximately $60,000 under last year's amount, totaling $2,938,675.32 compared to $3,102,457.61 in 1958. However, it is more than a half million above the loans and discounts reported at the same period in 1957.

Undivided profits are above last year, totaling $114,451.55 in comparison to the 1958 undivided profit figure of $103,409.98.

Commissioners Study Plans for New Jail

Members of the Commissioners Court met with Bill Cantrell, Lubbock architect, Tuesday, March 24 to go over plans for a county jail, drawn about three years ago.

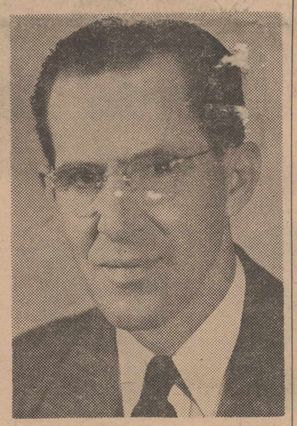

No official action was taken, and the commissioners decided to inspect new jails in near-by counties before coming to any decision, Judge C. C. Bishop reported.

"When the people get ready for a jail, then we'll be ready to build it," he said.

Court members plan to visit new jails at Benjamin and Aspermont Wednesday, April 1.

The plans as drawn are set up with cells to handle 22 people, a size the county probably would never need, the judge point out.

At the time the plans were drawn, the cost of the jail was estimated at $46,000, but Cantrell told the court that it probably would cost around $50,000 to build the same jail now.

3-Year Immunity

Dodson to Vaccinate Its Canines Saturday

The annual community-wide dog vaccinating will be held at Dodson Saturday, March 28, from 8:30 to 10 a.m., County Agent Bob Lynch has announced. It will be at the Farmers Co-op Gin.

Lynch explained that the vaccine to be used this year is of a more permanent type than that used in this area at any time previously, and gives the dogs three-year immunity from rabies.

It will be necessary for those who had their dogs vaccinated last year to bring them back for another vaccination, he pointed out.

There has been no case of rabies in the area, but Dodson residents, where rabied animals were found last year, are holding this mass vaccination as a precautionary measure, Lynch explained.

Last year, when the first vaccination was held, so many dogs appeared that the supplies of vaccine were exausted at Wellington, Hollis, Childress and Memphis.

A charge will be made for vaccinating the dogs this year.

Pups will get a half-shot, and any animal of weaning size or larger may be vaccinated, Lynch said.

National Guard Unit Becomes Rifle Platoon in Reorganization

Wellington's unit of the Texas National Guard went pentomic this week with the sweeping changes effected to modernize the National Guard through the United States.

In doing this, it lost its identity as a medical company and became Company E, of the 1st Battle Group, 142nd Combat Arms Regiment.

Lt. Col. Dale V. Watkins, commander of the medical company since its formation ten years ago, leaves the Wellington unit, and joins the headquarters staff in Amarillo He will be the medical advisor to the commanding officer.

This simply means that Col. Watkins will be at the Amarillo unit when he is needed there, and it will have no effect on his civilian practice of medicine in Wellington.

In the re-organization, the Shamrock National Guard unit was combined with the Wellington unit. Company headquarters will be in Wellington, and the new commanding officer is Capt. Williard Harral, who has been commanding officer of the guard unit at Shamrock.

1st. Lt. Jim Cochran will be a platoon leader here, one of four the company will have and the only commissioned officer living in Wellington.

The executive officer is 1st. Lt. Slade Ball of Shamrock. Other platoon leaders are 1st. Lt. Billy Leonard, a member of the guard here but living in Childress and 1st. Lt. Paul Macina, Shamrock. Another will be named.

M-Sgt. Raymond McGill remain the full time guard empoyee here and WO Doug Rives holds that position at Shamrock.

Announcement of the National Guard changes were made in Austin last week by Governor Price Daniel.

Texas' famed 36th Division will now have five battle groups, with the local unit as part of the 1st Battle Group, 142nd Combat Arms Regiment.

Guard Units in the group will be Wellington, Borger, Canyon, Tulia, Plainview, Pampa, Dumas Dalhart and Shamrock.

Wellington, Borger, Canyon and Tulia were part of the historically rich 142nd Infantry Regiment before the modernization move. Two battle groups were formed from the 142nd, the Panhandle group and a West Texas group at Brownwood.

The remaining three 36th Division battle groups are at Waco, Houston and San Antonio.

The new lineup in the Panhandle is to have the group headquarters and Company A at Amarillo, the Combat. Support Company split between Canyon and Borger; Company B at Pampa; Company C split between Tulia and Plainview; Company D split between Dumas and Dalhart and Company E split between Wellington and Shamrock.

Col. Simpson has pointed out that the split units result in little or no cut in Guard personnel because of the larger size of the pentomic infantry companies.

The split units are divided to have company headquarters section and two rifle platoons at Tulia, Dumas and Wellington and a rifle and a weapons platoon in Plainview, Dalhart and Shamrock. The Combat Support Company has headquarters, counterfire, mortor and radar platoons at Canyon; the guided missile and reconaissance platoons at Borger.

The Units at Pampa, Dumas, Dalhart and Shamrock, new to the 36th Division, were components of the 474th Field Artillery Battalion, a non-divisional organization commanded by Lt. Col. Dock Stewart of Pampa.

Col. Simpson said no Texas city is to lose its Guard troops as a result of this modernization move and that Guard in Texas will now be in an even better position to assist civil authorities in case of disaster.

The Wellington unit, under Col. Watkins command, has been considered one of the outstanding units of the 36th Division.

Why Not Also Compare U. S. and Soviet Taxes?

For many months in fact, for years, it has been the fashion in this country to compare our record and our achievements with those of Soviet Russia.

Soviet science, we are told, is ahead of ours. Soviet education puts our system in the shade. Soviet relations with foreign countries is a diplomatic masterpiece by comparison with the operations of our State Department. When we are called upon to take a closer look at ourselves as a nation we must do so in the light of how we will appear to other people in other nations—and especially by comparison with Russia.

In all but one respect do we carry along in these comparisons. When it comes to spending the nation's funds, we carefully avoid comparison with the Soviet.

President Eisenhower, in his budget message to Congress in 1959, asked that body for spending authority up to $77,000,000,000 for 1959-60. He described this as an "economy budget" and asked the Congress not to exceed its allocations in any itemization.

This is the greatest peacetime budget in history for any nation. It will amount to a per capita impost of $500 for every man, woman and child in the United States. It represents a leap from $40,000,000,000 since 1950. In Soviet Russia, on the other hand, the 1958 budget was $25,720,000,000, representing an increase from $17,300,000,000 in 1950. This was a per capita cost of $32 for every man, woman and child in Soviet Russia in 1958. In other words, the American citizen is taxed almost 16 times the rate his Russian compeer is compelled to pay.

Yet if the big spenders in Congress have their way, the federal budget will far exceed the huge figure the president asks.

But federal taxes are by no means all taxes. In Houston, for instance, city government costs about $60 per capita. The Houston school district budget is about $45 per resident. The county government comes to nearly $25 a head, the state more than $100.

Such considerations were weighed by the Council of State Chambers of Commerce when it recommended to Congress recently that, while it approves the economy aims of President Eisenhower in his budget message, it finds the President's economies not sufficient. The chamber group suggests that $3,200,000,000 be slashed from the budget, most of it coming from foreign aid apportionments. Congress most likely will pay little heed to this petition unless it be backed by the citizenry. The taxpayer should make himself heard, otherwise there will be no economizing.—The Houston Chronicle.

Too Much Security and Entertainment?

One aspect of the juvenile question has bothered us considerably. This is the frequent complaint voiced by teenagers that they "have nothing to do and no place to go." That is complete, unadulterated balderdash.

It is an easy out-cropping of the current demand for security from "the cradle to the grave."

Since when have red-blooded Americans become so lacking in initiative and imagination that they must have everything done for them by a "beneficent" community or paternalistic federal government.

Never has any generation of youngsters been provided with so much with so little effort on their part.

Motion pictures, radio, television, automobile transportation, boating and water sports facilities have all come into full bloom during the era of the present generation. The older generation grew up with none of these facilities. Yet there was seldom complaint about a lack of activities or entertainment.

They improvised their own games and activities.

Baseball games and outdoor basketball games were in evidence on every vacant lot. And of course, a considerable portion of their time was also occupied in helping their parents with farm and household chores.

Rather than place the blame for juvenile restlessness and delinquency on the lack of facilities we are inclined to believe they have been enjoying too much of too many things—without having to work for anything. —Hillsboro (O.) News-Herald.

Lester Myers, the Amarillo Junior College teacher who has received a national Science Foundation scholarship for advanced study at the University of Texas, taught his first school at Quail. He almost worried himself sick the first few weeks wondering if he were capable of teaching the students any math and science. Their report is he certainly did, but you had to study.

Ruby Farrar says she's getting ready to start spring sewing for herself and her daughter Bonnie. Ruby is one of those women who "just loves to sew." Says she: "When I work downtown, I always look at customers dresses and wonder where they got the material."

Duard Scott went up to McLean to speak to the Methodist Men, made a serious talk, but lightened it with touches of humor. For example:

There was the oldtimer—a rancher who got a good dose of religion and promptly went about setting straight his misdeeds. Down the road he dropped in on a neighboring rancher and offered to pay for a few calves he had promiscuously slapped his brand on in the days before he was able to afford religion.

"Well," says the neighbor, now able to afford religion himself, "Let's just call it even on that calf branding count."

A while back, Dan Henard sent Glen Anderson of Rifle, Colorado, one of those Texas flies—an authentic trout fly except the hook is about six inches long and the feathers are in proportion. This week Dan received, packed in dry ice, a mountain trout that is full 30 inches long by Dan's measurment—not fisherman's measure either. Along came a telegram: "Get those Texas flies in production. They're really hitting them through the ice."

Glen, in case you're a late comer used to live here and has a sense of humor akin to Dan's.

Dear Editor:

I see where the Girl Scouts in San Francisco are in the Teamsters Union doghouse on account of they have been peddling non-union cookies.

My organized neighbor says if the Hoffasters manage to whip the pony-tailed little union busters into line, it will be a great day for the country.

On account of it will teach these future wives of union men to righteously avoid touching any item which does not have a union label on it, except portable money.

I see where a congressman wants to pass a law to give extra pensions to federal employees who get high blood pressure or heart disease from working for the government.

My tax-tuckered neighbor says this would be a fine thing for overstrained taxpayers, but he never dreamed anybody else could ruin his health on a government job.

But he reckons it is pretty nerve racking for a conscientious bureaucrat, having to get along with an old inefficient tax system which leaves nearly as much money on the taxpayers' hands as it takes to Washington.

I see where a New Hampshire town elected a lady to their city council and a couple of their male city fathers up and resigned.

My tolerant neighbor says he don't know what type of experience these fellows have had, but he thinks most public boards he has sat on needed a touch of feminine won't power.

Says the country is showing the sad effects of being run by a generation of men who can persuade themselves they have got to have a new car when the old one gets to smelling used.

I see where a little girl in Florida heard about what a hard-up shape the government is in and offered Uncle Sam her $61 savings to help out.

My Melancholy neighbor says this proves the sad decrepitude of our educational system, where a junior citizen can get to be 11 years old without learning the first principale of American get-along.

Says a properly-informed young lady would have known better than to let the internal revenue hunters find out she has got $61 they overlooked somehow.

I see where Draft General Hershey don't go along with the theory that college-learned draftees are too high-toned to be put on KP like common soldiers.

But my far-sighted neighbor says it's reasonable that slide-rule chauffeurs are wasting their talents when working as pot moppers.

Says, though, it is going to be a fouled up world when the federals get all of our schools aided and everybody gets too smart and important to cook, wash dishes on carry out the garbage.

I see where Texas Congressman Alger wants to pass a law saying a farmer can forget acreage restrictions and produce as much as he wants for his own use, without the government taking him for a fat fine.

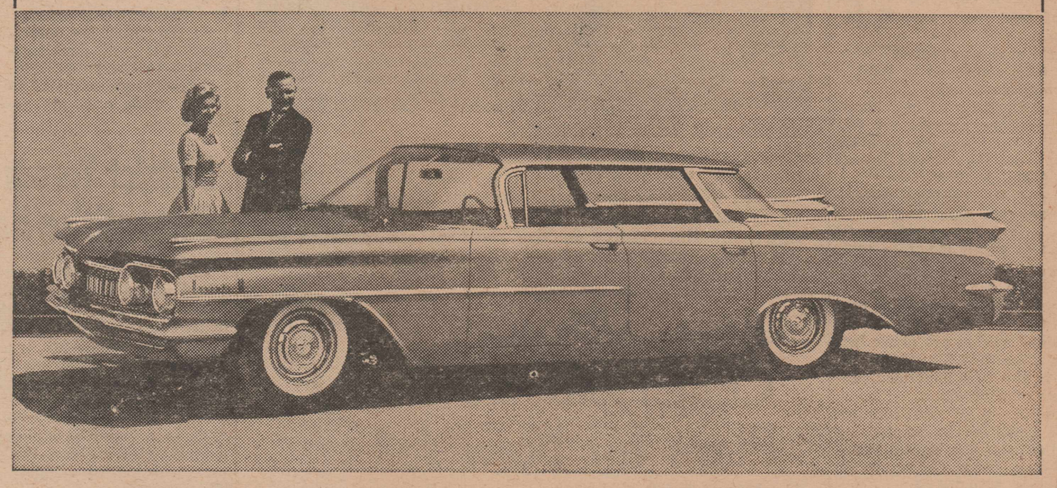

My ex-farmer neighbor says if this bill passes, he will study about going back to the farm himself.

Says a man might could make a living on the land under this regulation, if he got a printing press attachment for his tractor and, between harvest and spring plowing, produced a few $10 bills just for his own use.

Dynamation New in Movie Field

When a movie script calls for an actual skeleton to leap and thrust and parry in a deadly sword duel, how can it be done effectively?

The answer, of course, is to substitute an Olympic fencing master and, through the magic of Dynamation, turn him into a skeleton.

Simple, huh?

Famous Italian Olympic fencer Enzo Musumeci-Greco, is the "skeleton" in "The 7th Voyage of Sinbad," the Arabian Nights adventure filmed in Dynamation, newest movie-making miracle, and at the Ritz Sunday through Tuesday. A Columbia picture, the entertainment stars Kerwin Mathews and Kathryn Grant and co-stars Richard Eyer as the Genie.

One of the film's many exciting scenes finds Mathews as Sinbad dueling a skeleton, brought to "life" by a wicked magician. Musumeci-Greco subsituted for the skeleton but, through Dynamation, audiences see only an aticulated skeleton in action.

Commissioners Court Covers County Business

In a series of sessions recently, the Commissioners Court took care of business of the county.

In the first order, the court accepted the county depository pledge contract of the Wellington State Bank for county and school funds.

An opinion was received from County Attorney Paul Spillman that the county can legally pay the premium on the bonds for county officials, as was passed in an order at an earlier meeting.

A telephone for the office of county tax assessor-collector was authorized.

Claims were approved and an order passed authorizing the county clerk to issue one time warrant in the amount of $7,148.13 against the civil defense and disaster fund, payable to the Wellington State Bank, bearing interest at 3 per cent and due October 1.

Included in these bills was $700 to F. E. Coan for audit of county books for the calendar year 1958.

A transfer of $5,192.40 was made from the motor vehicle registration account to the road and bridge fund.

Former County Judge R. L. Templeton was employed as attorney to represent the county in a tax suit and O. T. Lackey was employed as his assistant.

On motion by Commissioner Pat O'Hair and second by Commissioner Alfred Knoll and carried unanimously, the court instructed the county clerk to notify any officials who show money due the county as specified in the 1958 audit report.

The 1959 budget was amended to transfer $3,000 from the unforseen emergency item to the parts and repairs item.

A warrant of $150 was approved against the FM road fund payable to the road and bridge fund.

Chicken Test Reports Here

As a service to chicken raisers, County Agent Bob Lynch has announced that he has available monthly reports on tests for laying qualities run each year at Texas A&M College, on chickens from 30 hatcheries of the state.

The tests run for a year and a half, and records are kept on mortality, production and feed costs. Reports on the results, as the monthly reports on the progress of the test may be had from Lynch to be used as a guide for selecting good laying chickens, he said.

Known officially as the 5th Texas Annual Raddom Edd Production Test, it is sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Texas Poultry Improvement Association.

"The West that Was"

NEW BOOK TELLS STORY OF WEST THAT IS ONLY MEMORIES

DALLAS — One of the West's last old-time cowmen died in Menard, Texas last month, John Leakey, whose grandfather founded Leakey, county seat of Real County, Texas. His death at 84 brought to a close a long life which saw the transition of the Old West into the new.

Not long before his death John Leakey told the story of his long and eventful life to Nellie Snyder Yost of Maxwell, Nebraska, daughter of another old-time cowman, which she put in a book just published by Southern Methodist University Press, "The West That Was: From Texas to Montana."

Left an orphan by the murder of his father and the early death of his mother, John Leakey grew up with his Grandad of the same name. Quick tempered and fearless, the elder Leakey kept things moving is his section of Texas, and the account of these exciting times which John Leakey heard as a boy form the first part of his memoirs. There were many Indian fights, and John Leakey well remembers the last Indian raid in Frio Canyon. He was a boy of eight at the time and saw the bleeding bodies of Kate McLaren and Allen Lease brought to his grandfather's home.

King, Fisher, the famous gunman, helped Leakey's father gather cattle out of the brush. When Fisher was deputy sheriff of Uvalde County, he tracked down and killed the robber of a mail coach. After Fisher himself was killed, with the famous U. S. Marshall Ben Thompson, the mail coach robber's mother came to Fisher's grave on each anniversary of her son's death, piled brush on his grave, set it afire and danced around it in devlish glee. One of the many photographs in "The West That Was" is of King Fisher's grave with a temporary marker placed there by John Leakey.

John Leakey left Texas as a young man, worked his way to New Mexico with a cattle drive, got a job wrangling horses, then followed a trail herd to Montana and North Dakota where he spent th[illegible] of his active years. Six feet, six inches tall, he was well-known as a top cowhand, working on the OX, the W Bar, the 777, and other big ranches of that day. He herded cattle at 50 below, cooked for cowhands, and fought prairie fires by dragging split-open cattle carcases over the ground at the fire's edge. These and many other experiences are told in his book with an engaging simplicity and a remarkable amount of detail — names, places, and dates.

In 1910 Leakey married the widow of Lee Trotter, who started Trotters Post Office, Montana. By 1915 he had 44,000 acres of land and 5,000 head of cattle only to lose his holdings in the drought and depression years of the 1930's. His experiences with government agencies would be humorous if the result had not been tragic. He helped found the North Dakota Stockman's Association, and served as president for ten years; and his picture hangs in the Hall of Fame at the College of Agriculture in Fargo.

Finally, according to John Leakey's memoirs, when the old days were but "grass of a bygone summer," he packed his saddle and bridle, his spurs, and his bedroll, his Dutch oven and coffeepot in the pickup he had fitted with trailer bed and mess wagon equipment and drove back to Texas to spend his remaining years.

Those of a new generation who live in the towns and cities that have sprung up on what was once open range will read with delight John Leakey's spirited account of a life lived with gusto and will mourn the passing of a man who symbolized an era of hardihood, resourcefulness, and independence.

Mr. and Mrs. Garroll White at Home in California After Wedding Trip Here

Mr. and Mrs. Garroll White are at home at 2509 Carolina, San Pedro, Calif., following their wedding at the Wayfarer's Chapel at Portuguese Bond, Calif., and their wedding trip to Texas.

The bride is the former Miss Vita Marie Accetta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Accetta, 1212 Weymouth Avenue, San Pedro. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ocie White of Quail.

The Rev. Kennith Knox of Portuguese Bend performed the double ring ceremony before an altar on which were placed arrangements of white gladioli and chrysanthemums.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore an Angelo original dress of white lace over slipper satin and lace ruffles. The bodice was fashioned with long sleeves and a high scalloped neckline, sewn with sequins and pearls. Her illusion veil fell from a Queen of Scots coronet of sequins and pearls and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley, white orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Rita Magdamleno of San Pedro was maid of honor and Miss Zina Russo of San Francisco and Miss Scognamello of San Pedro were bridesmaids.

Marion Tidwell of Hedley was the best man and the ushers were Frank Accetta and Tommy Rubottom of San Pedro. Flavia Marie Accetta and Mathew Manzello of San Pedro were the flower girl and ring bearer.

A reception was held at the Woman's Club followed by a dinner attended by 275.

The bride attended St. Mark's School in St. Louis, Mo., and graduated from San Pedro High School.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Quail high school and now is associated with Tony's Imported and Domestic Grocery in San Pedro.

LOOKING AHEAD

by Dr. George S. Benson

JOHN'S PLEA TO WASHINGTON

John Jones works in an industry. He operates one of the small but amazingly productive machines in a plant that turns out a widely used electrical appliance. He is on an hourly wage rate. But the pay is good and his income is a little above the average for skilled workers in American industry. His monthly income is more than $450, his annual income above $5,000. John made out his federal income tax return two weeks ago, and he did some thinking and figuring. And then, for the first time in his life he wrote a letter to his Congressman.

John, on his tax return, attached a slip that showed he had already paid more than a month's income in withheld income taxes; and yet he owed an additional sum for which he had to send Uncle Sam a check. He noted too the amount of taxes he'd paid through the year on purchases of merchandise. And he set about figuring how much indirect, or hidden taxes he'd paid during the year. When he totaled the whole thing up and then added his state and local taxes, John had a better understanding of why he didn't have a bank balance and was "just barely making ends meet."

Just A Little Guy

His wrote his Congressman and his two Senators. "I'm just a little guy," he hold them, "and I know the government performs some mighty valuable services for me and my family. But I've been doing some figuring and thinking a lot. In spite of the services, government has become a heavy burden on me. It's costing too much. Even in defense spending I suspect a lot could be saved. And since we're in a cold war we ought to be cutting expenses and not increasing them in all the other services. Please use your influence to cut government spending everywhere."

This is one of the most effective letters that could be written to Congress. It is sincere and moderate. If just half of the workers in American industry would take careful stock of how much tax they are paying and do what John has done, the pruning knife would begin to work in Washington.

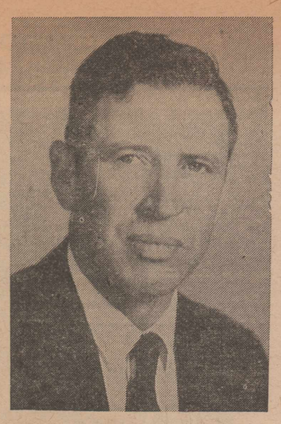

Thrift-Minded Don't Write

In Washington recently I visited with two members of Congress who are very influential in Congressional activities. We talked about the budget, the national debt and the deficit. Both men are sensitive to the wishes of their people back home. One showed me his day's mail. It contained several letters from people who were obviously banded together in an association to push for a Congressional appropriation for a particular project in their area. There was only one letter from a citizen asking that federal spending be cut back.

"We know that most of our people back home want to see government spending cut back," this Congressman said. "But we don't hear from many of them. We hear from the ones who have some personal interest in some project that requires federal spending. The thrift-minded people, the thousands who are aware that constantly increasing government spending has become a real burden, eating away at a man's earnings, simply do not write letters — at least not many of them write to me. It's is human nature for us to forget their situation and to be impressed by those who are constantly camping on our doorstep — asking for some costly spending project."

It is no exaggeration to say that the average American family could own and operate an automobile, or send a child through college, with the amount of money that could be cut from their tax bill if every possible measure of thrift were applied in government and if, for the duration of the cold war at least, plans for new projects and all unnecessary spending were set aside

On my desk is a report from a House of Representative subcommittee which made an ever-so-brief study of some phases of our foreign economic aid program. They turned up hundreds of items of stupid waste. Just one of these concerned a sawmill shipped to Iran three years ago by the benevolent custodians of our hard earned money siphoned off to Washington in taxes. The sawmill cost us $500,000. The Iranians found it to be useless — it couldn't handle the heavy teakwood logs of the region. It hadn't even been uncrated; just allowed to sit on the hillside and rust away. Let's more of us follow John's example and write our Congressmen. It could turn the tide, give us more money for our own family needs, halt the dangerous growth of powerful government, and preserve national strength.

Cross Roads Reporter Is McLean Speaker

Speaking with the dry wit that has made his "Crossroads Report" famous throughout this area, D. E. Scott of Wellington spoke to the Methodist Men's Fellowship of McLean Monday night, March 16.

Scott proposed the organization of a new club to be known as the SFPRBIC Club—Society for Putting Religion Back in Churches.

"Sometimes there are 2 or 3 nights a month when we don't have somewhere to go—so you can see there is a great need for another club," he said.

"Of course, we may run into opposition on this—probably from a lot of preachers—because it'll interfere with attendance contests, building campaigns and all those activities."

Scott said if the churches demodernized and discontinued trying to "keep up with the church down the street," then it might be possible to" get in a salvation sermon now and then.

"It might also restore a little reverence by getting rid of the casual, indulgent attitude God. We might have as much reverence as say, President Eisenhower or Elvis Presley speaks."

Since television and movies have come into their own, it has become big business to get people to come to church, the veteran newspaperman told his audience.

"I can't say as I blame preachers too much for soft-pedaling religion. After all, they've got to eat just like the rest of us.

"It might be a good idea," Scott concluded, "if we started bringing a little religion to church with us on Sunday and get it reconditioned a little."

About 40 men were present at the Methodist Church to hear Scott. Tom Green is president of the Fellowship, McLean News.

"NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS"

The average person does not often use the term "negotiable instruments" in his everyday consersation, and the words may not mean much to him. Actually, it is just a mouth-filling term used in law to describe certain important pieces of paper that we normally call by simpler names.

Even though we seldom use the words, we deal with negotiable instruments all the time. Every check we write to pay the gas bill is a negotiable instrument, and so is your paycheck or pension check. The note you sign to by a new car, the money order purchase at the bank or post office, or the traveler's checks you take with you on a trip instead of cash, all are negotiable instruments.

It was all started by merchants who had to send large sums of gold or currency between cities or nations. They worked out a way to exchange money, or the value of money, by written messages, much of the time through a third party like a broker or bank. But when you deal in pieces of negotiable paper instead of hard money, there have to be certain standards and safeguards or the paper could lose its value.

Consequently, there developed a whole system of laws within nations and between nations, upon which all our business rests. Through the courts, if necessary, the owners of negotiable instruments may enforce the terms written on the paper.

In the United States things used to be confusing some times because of different state laws, but by 1924 all 48 states had adopted a Uniform Negotiable Instrument Law which sets up the same rules nationwide.

Since so-called negotiable instruments are so important; since they are ordinarily just like money in many ways; since they often are used like money, or are sold to other persons or companies, and since there are special laws defining the ins-and-outs of negotiable instruments which we wouldn't ordinarily have any reason to know about, there are one or two simple rules we should follow:

We should make certain we read what's on the paper, that we know what the words mean, and what the penalties and dangers may be, before signing our name.

Remember: You are the only person in the world with that signature, and the courts, as a rule, must take your signed promises at their face value.

You Can Test for Termites

Think you've got termites? They can exist in a house unsuspected for long periods. But, according to the editors of Changing Times, the Kiplinger Magazine, there are three ways to find out if they've infested your dwelling.

1. You can tell whether a beam or a sill is infested by tapping it with a hammer and listening for a hollow sound or by probing it with an ice pick or knife blade.
2. You can search the house, particularly in crawl spaces, around foundations and at utility service entrances, for the telltale tubes, a quarter to a half inch wide, that they build.
3. You can be on the watch for the swarms and wing droppings that may occur soon.

Sometimes homeowners see swarming insects but are not sure whether they are seeing termites or flying ants. If the insects have pinched waists and transparent wings, the front set being much larger than the back set, they are really ants. But if the bodies are nearly the same width stem to stern with no waist, and the wings are opaque and the same size front and back, you have found termites.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Joe Terry and Ken of San Diego, California are here on leave for 10 days visiting with relatives and friends. Donald Joe is in the Navy and stationed at San Diego.

Deck's DIDACTICS

—By Deskins Wells

The largest money bill in the history of the state has gone to the House for consideration and revision. The big battle of battles will come when the legislators start trying to decide just what shall be taxed and how much in order to raise the additional funds that will be required to keep the state from going further in the red. Some that have been suggested are a tax on natural gas, auto sales tax, retailers occupation tax, gross receipts tax, sales tax, transaction tax. Farmers may not pay too much attention to some of the methods of raising money mentioned above, but they will perk up their ears when they learn one of the proposals is to charge a fee for the use of both underground and surface water. That is getting pretty close to home.

If you ever get a tax slapped on you it is practically impossible to get rid of it. Can you remember when the federal income tax was only 3 percent of your earnings?

Over at Mangum directors of the Oklahoma Salt Fork Association have raised $3,000 from business men, farmers and ranchers to finance promotional work on the irrigation project west of that city. The money will be used for writing letters, sending delegates to Washington etc.

Wheeler County has experienced another grass fire and 250 acres were burned in Greer County from a discarded cigaret. Be careful when driving on the highway.

We are now approaching our rainy season and goodness knows it is about time it arrived. Sometimes April is a wet month, but it is generally May before the big rains come.

Went over to take a look at the new Greenbelt Electric building yesterday. There is nothing like it in Wellington from the standpoint of lighting, heating and air conditioning. As a city we are fortunate in having the permanent home of the Greenbelt located here for with its lines running over in Oklahoma and up to Goodnight as well as into Wheeler County, we are not exactly in the center of its operation. Incidentally I heard a man who is on another REA system complimenting the superior services of the one that operates out of Wellington. It seems that some of his neighbors who are on the Greenbelt have had power on certain weekends when he had none.

Guests in the home of Misses Rose and Marie Shadid and George Shadid were Mr. and Mrs. William A. Shadid of Anadarko, Okla., who were guests Saturday and Sunday. Joining them Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. John Shadid of Memphis; Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Shadid, Miss Ogla Shadid, of Altus, and Miss Eleanor Dakil of Childress.

Cotton Classing Sub-Station to Help Producers of Area

A cotton classing sub-station to be set up at Memphis has been approved by the cotton marketing division of the United States Department of Agriculture, and as far as is known now, it will be in operation by the time the cotton harvest begins this fall.

Notice of the approval came from John L. McCollum, southwestern manager of the cotton marketing division, USDA, in a letter to Bob Lynch, county agent.

The cotton classing sub-station will serve Collingsworth, Childress, Hall, Motley, Cottle, King, Donley, Wheeler, Briscoe, Armstrong Gray, and Carson counties.

The sub-station was asked by the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers Association, made up of gin managers and cotton farmers from the counties to be served. V. C. Durrett of Lakeview is president.

This new arrangement means that all cotton grown here will be classed at the Memphis sub-station, instead of at Altus, Okla. Those supporting it believe it will cut considerably the time required to get cotton classed, and this time element often can mean considerable money to the growers, especially late in the season when the market breaks.

The new sub-station will be equipped with a humidifier, and cotton will be held under the proper humidity for a specified period before it is graded. This, too, is considered an advantage to the farmer.

Under the proposal, the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers Association will furnish the building and equipment for classing the cotton, while the department of agriculture will pay the personnel to operate it.

Peggy Colson Wins County Spelling Bee

Peggy Colson, 13-year-old eighth grader student from Samnorwood, was named winner of the Collingsworth County Spelling Bee Thursday, March 19, winning over representatives of the other three schools of the county.

Winner of the junior spelling bee was Nancy Emmert of Quail.

Peggy will compete in the regional Spelling Bee at Amarillo in April, and the winner of that event will go to Washington to spell in the national bee, B. W. Beaird, county superintendent, said. Nancy will attend the Amarillo bee and the banquet for spellers, but there is no bee for junior spellers, beyond the county level.

This is not the first time Peggy has been a winning speller, as she won the junior bee two years ago. She is one of six children of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Colson who live about 7 miles north of Wellington.

Vicki Glenn competed in the senior bee as winner from the Wellington school. She is 14, in the eighth grade, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Glenn. She was school Champion two years ago.

Dodson school's representative was Billy Belt, 15, an eighth grade student. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Belt, and his sister, Betty Belt, was last year's school champion.

Three schools had representatives in the junior bee, all 12 years of age and in the sixth grade and entering the spelling bee for the first time. The winner, Nancy Emmert, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Emmert. Representing Samnorwood was Nancy Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hill, while Jannon Gulley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gulley, was the Dodson contestant.

From MP to Deputy Sheriff

Quail Girl Has Career in Law Enforcement

Winslow, Arizona, that calls to mind the Old West and its hemen, will tell you that it's deputy sheriff is small and charming—and so she is, for that job is held down by Mary Creed, now here visiting home folks.

With Miss Creed is her mother, Mrs Eva Creed. Formerly of Quail, they are visiting another daughter of Mrs. Creed, Mrs. Robert Gosnell and family.

In conjunction with her work as a deputy sheriff of Navajo County, Miss Credd is also a member of the Winslow police force.

Her duties are varied. For one thing, she must search all women prisoners and handle their cases. She acts as dispatcher in the sheriff's office and once sent out the call for a road block that resulted in the capture of a man wanted in California for murder.

"I dont' know when people wanted for crimes in other states will learn to stay off Highway 66," she said. There's a long stretch through Arizona that once you get on 66, there's no place to turn off. Winslow is on this, and if word comes of someone who is wanted, and is on this route, it isn't hard to arrest him at a road block, she explained.

Much of her work is with the Navajo Indians, for Winslow is near the Navajo reservation. Drunkeness is their chief offense, some women as well as men.

"A Navajo will lose face if he steals from a white man, but they steal from each other," she remarked.

Miss Creed is fascinated with her work and the people it brings through the law enforcement offices in Winslow. She takes her turn at night duty, along with the men with whom she has worked for the last year.

The former Quail girl served in the United States Army, assigned as a military police, before she entered civilian law enforcement work. Miss Creed was stationed in Washington, D. C. and Indianapolis, then completed her four year enlistment at Frankfort, Germany. Her work was with dependents of army personnel, and also included interrogations and investigations.
