Ask Us

Q—Is it legal for a vehicle to pull someone on a bicycle by using a rope? I have seen this several times on the Lamesa Highway.

A—It is illegal for anyone on a bicycle or other manually operated apparatus (skateboard, tricycle, skates, etc.) to attach themselves by any means to any moving vehicle.

Road tests

DALLAS (AP) — A passing grade from any state-certified driver's education program will now suffice for the Department of Public Safety exam.

The rule was changed because DPS had too few examiners to handle the thousands of teen-agers seeking licenses every year, Capt. John Cizek told The Dallas Morning News. Cizek, who oversees the process in North Texas said that 13 other states also allow similar programs.

Boy Scouts

CHICAGO (AP) — United Way officials in Chicago have put the Chicago Council of the Boy Scouts of America on probation because of its insistence on a religious oath and its exclusion of homosexuals.

Officials say...

Rural communities will suffer under landfill regulations

ABILENE — Proposed landfill regulations by the Evironmental Protection Agency are good in theory, but misplaced and too expensive for sparsely populated West Texas, area leaders said during Thursday's public hearing with the Texas Water Commission.

The regulations, due to go into effect Oct. 9, 1993, could result in an estimated increase of more than $350,000 a year in Snyder city landfill costs, according to officials.

According to Subtitle D of the Federal Resource Conservation Recovery Act, landfills operating after the October 1993 deadline will have to install a liner, monitor ground water contamination and methane gas and ensure financial assurance.

"The primary concern of the water commission is protection of the water table, which is an admirable concern," said Snyder of Snyder staff member Vick Chambers. "But some of us West Texans who barely know what a water table or an aquifer is wonder why we have to go with the same rules as the Hill Country."

Chambers was one of about 60 representatives of area cities and counties who attended the public hearing. The Texas Water Commission will take public comment through July 15. TWC will draft

Airport needs regular hours, county commissioners charge

Scurry County Airport board members and employees were questioned by commissioners Thursday about hours of operation for the airport and performance of airport personnel.

According to commissioners, the hours of operation and employee schedule approved for the airport and the county policy concerning comp time are not being followed.

Commissioners expressed their desire to see the airport run on a regular schedule, with any changes in hours of operation to be brought before the court.

"The airport has to be run for the people of the county," said Commissioner Roy Idom. He added that a mechanic should be on hand on a regular basis and that the airport should have regular hours of operation.

According to Idom, previous hours set for the airport were 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. during the winter, with the airport to remain open until 8 p.m. during the summer months.

The airport board recently changed those hours, and has been closing at 6 p.m. since the first of June. Board members said that they were unaware that the changes had to be made through the court.

The board is to present a request for changing the hours at the commissioner's Monday meeting.

Commissioners questioned the scheduling of airport employees and the amount of comp time being turned in.

They expressed concern that the outside employment of Airport Manager/Mechanic Darrell Mize, who does piloting in his spare time, is interfering with his performance at the airport.

"I don't care what he does in his spare time," said Idom. "We just need a manager and mechanic, and he has to be there on a regular schedule."

Idom reminded board members that they discussed the need for increased business at a recent meeting. "The only way to do this is to have someone there," he said.

Pilot David Strelecki asked commissioners if there had been any complaints about the airport operation. Idom responded that there had been some, but no written complaints.

"As a board, we can't correct what we don't know," said board member Roger Blackard.

County Judge Bob Doolittle stressed that there needs to be better communication between the court and the board. Commissioners agreed that any complaints received concerning the airport would be turned over to the board.

Commissioners held a brief executive session to speak with Mize concerning his responsibilities at

'Ritz' lighting slated Saturday

An official "Lighting of the Ritz" celebration will be held Saturday as members of the Ritz community theatre board are planning to light the marquee and other neon on the building around 9 p.m.

Local civic clubs will set up food and activity booths on the square about 6 p.m. Live entertainment will be included in the celebration from 7 until 9 p.m. Local businesses on the square have been asked to extend their hours of operation.

The Snyder Wheels car club and car clubs from Lubbock and Abilene have been invited, and will line the street in front of the theatre with classic cars.

Also on display will be plans chosen by the board for the interior renovation of the theatre. Designs were submitted earlier this year by a group of graduate students majoring in architecture at Texas Tech University. The project was headed by Dr. Michael Anthony Jones, associate dean for graduate studies and research at Tech.

Memberships for the first production season of the theatre will be available beginning at Saturday's celebration. Season memberships will be $30 for six tickets, $60 for 12 tickets and $100 for 24 performances. Productions are to be held in other locations around the city until the interior renovation is complete.

According to Mike Thornton, president of the community theatre board, fund-raising for the interior renovation is expected to begin soon.

Noah melodrama opens this evening

The Noah Project's fourth annual melodrama, "Little Nell," opens this evening in the Western Texas College Fine Arts Theatre.

A second performance is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday. Tickets for both performances are available at the theatre box office.

Tonight's performance is set for for 7:30, with a Coney Island supper at 6:30. Tickets for the meal and show are $7 for adults and $4 for children ages five to 12. Children under five will be admitted free when accompanied by an adult.

Tickets for Saturday's 2 p.m. matinee are all $4, with no meal included.

As the plot of "Little Nell" unfolds, the audience will be encouraged to cheer the good and boo the evil as it watches the heroine, Little Nell Wilkins, and the hero, Hector Skyscraper, struggle to defeat the evil intended by the villian, Carlton Bainbridge.

Performing in this year's melodrama are Helen McLeod as Nell, Clay Jacobs as Skyscraper, Sam Robertson as Bainbridge, Gale Northcott as Ma Wilkins, John Gayle as Pa Wilkins and Tena James as the prompter. Jan McCathern is director for the performance.

Refreshments will be available during intermission.

The evening will begin with a sing-along, led by Jerald Garner of Colonial Hill Baptist Church. Entertainment between acts will be provided by the Deep Creek Cloggers and the Colonial Hill Handbell Choir.

Money earned from the melodrama will go to support the Noah Project, which provides assistance and counseling to victims of family violence.

Coast-to-coast ride has brief stop in Snyder

By Shirley A. Gorman
SDN News Editor

For a brief time last week, Snyder's population increased by one — Carlos Miguel of Seattle, Wash., who stopped to visit Joe and Barbara Granato during his coast-to-coast bicycle journey.

On Aug. 26 last year, Miguel, 28, dipped his bike in the Pacific Ocean and set out on his journey. His goal is the Atlantic Ocean, and when he reaches it he intends to dip his bike in those waters also.

He actually set out on his journey from Bainbridge Island near Seattle. From there he trekked to Los Angeles and then Las Vegas before "running out of money," he said. He spent the winter in Death Valley where he found a job working in a kitchen.

Miguel later returned to Las Vegas before striking out for Zion National Park in Utah, the Grand Canyon in Arizona and New Mexico, where he spent a week in Silver City and volunteered to assist with a bike race.

Snyder and the Granatos were next on his itinerary. He knew of the Granatos through their niece, Becky, who insisted he "had to stop in Snyder to visit them."

Miguel arrived last weekend and stayed through Monday, before leaving early Tuesday morning for Dallas. While here he made friends with the Snyder couple's dog, visited the Texas Tech University Museum and in general "ate, slept and rested."

From Dallas he will head to Kansas and then the East Coast before returning home. He is planning to be in New England in the fall.

He was interviewed in Flagstaff, Ariz. by a documentary crew

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Be suspect of the restaurant with a "get well" card in your fortune cookie."

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

Larry Crabtree, in the Vernon Daily Record, recently attended a funeral and overheard a conversation between two elderly women who had come to pay their repects to their long-time friend.

"She really looks good, doesn't she," said one.

"Well, she should," replied the other. "She just got out of the hospital."

Kim Pease, in the Rotan Advance, had a little item about the difference in styles of various physicians.

Pease said an old-fashioned doctor is one who still calls a cold a cold.

A well-known actress once explained why she thought so many marriages ended on the rocks. She said, "The trouble with most men is a woman who marries one for life and she then discovers he doesn't have any.

That reminded Hereford's O.G. Nieman about the female divorce attorney who moonlights as a stand-up comic. The divorce lawyer describes herself as a "change of life attorney."

A sample of her humor included some comments about her own husband. "I've been married 37 years. That means, if I'd killed the guy the first time I thought about it, I'd be out of jail by now."

Dave Bryant, in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, spotted an interesting quip:

"Sticks and stones will make a house; however, love and dreams will make a home." He added, "Better not try to get a mortgage on it though."

Tsongas' supporters free to back Perot

BOSTON (AP) — Paul Tsongas may be supporting Bill Clinton, but that apparently doesn't mean he'll try to keep his fans from defecting from the Democratic race to back independent Ross Perot.

"I'm a Democrat but I'm not a Democrat who is going to be trashing Ross Perot," Tsongas, Clinton's former rival, said Thursday after learning some of his supporters are urging volunteers to back Perot.

Janet Ritchie, co-founder of Tcitizens for Tsongas, said the group would be mailing letters to volunteers encouraging them to work for Perot. She said she did not consult Tsongas on the move.

"This is a very independent group of people needless to say, very energized and very issue-focused," Tsongas said. "It's the kind of constituency that the Democratic Party should take very seriously."

Clinton's campaign called any decision to back Perot premature.

Tcitizens for Tsongas was formed after the former Massachusetts senator suspended his campaign for lack of money. It tried to keep support for Tsongas alive until the convention.

Ritchie said she was angered by reports of the negotiations between expected nominee Bill Clinton and Tsongas over his role at the convention.

"If they're not going to listen to him, then I'll go to Perot," she said.

"I think this is premature," said Clinton spokeswoman Max Parker. "There's been no decision what role Sen. Tsongas would like to play."

Tsongas, who won the New Hampshire primary and several others before fading to Clinton, will probably speak at the convention, but the two men are still haggling over details.

Tsongas had also asked that some of his more conservative economic proposals — a cut in the capital gains tax rate for long-term investments, cuts in entitlements and a spending cap — be included in the Democratic Platform, but the latest draft does not include them.

Tsongas said any defections should be over issues.

Limerick Gets No Laughs From Indignant 'Old Maid'

DEAR ABBY: I read the following limerick in your column. It was signed by "Westport Pete" — whoever he is. To refresh your memory:

"There was an old maid from Duluth
"Who wept when she thought of her youth
"Remembering the chances
"She had at school dances
"And once in a telephone booth."

Being an old maid myself (not by choice), I found this limerick offensive, uncouth and perverted. Abby, I gave you credit for having better taste and higher morals than that.

I am in my 60s, and I am unmarried because I thought enough of my siblings to stay at home and help raise them when our father deserted our mother 50 years ago. Our mother has since gone to her heavenly reward and one other sister (also unmarried) and I are holding down the fort.

I just wanted to tell you that I have enjoyed your column in The Lincoln Star for many years, but that poem really got my dander up!

I hope you print this. And if you do, please don't print my name. Sign me ...

OFFENDED OLD MAID
IN LINCOLN, NEB.

DEAR OFFENDED: I thought that limerick was entertaining enough to justify the possibility of offending a few readers. Sorry.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing on behalf of my friends and myself. We are a small group of very close friends who love to be together and go clubbing. We are all happily married with children.

The problem is whenever we get together, one girlfriend (I'll call her Ellen) wants to include her husband. Now, don't get me wrong, we all have our times together with our husbands, but when we get together to go out, we prefer it to be "just the girls." Besides, Ellen's husband is a total bore. Also, when Ellen invites us to her home, her husband joins the group and dominates the conversation.

Is there a tactful way to tell Ellen that we girls really don't want to be bothered with her husband — without losing her friendship or hurting her feelings?

THE GIRLS IN PHILLY

DEAR GIRLS: I know of no "tactful" way to tell a friend that her husband is a total bore and you don't want to be bothered with his company. However, unless you are willing to tolerate the presence of this insensitive intruder, you girls will have to lay it on the line with Ellen. Simply tell her that you girls intended to have an all-girls night out and, inasmuch as "no one else" includes her husband, you would appreciate it if she didn't include hers. Period.

DEAR ABBY: I appreciated all of your letters on forgiveness. My dictionary defines forgiveness: "to no longer feel resentment toward an offender."

I do not believe that means to be all huggy-kissy again, bend over and take another kick in the shorts.

To no longer feel resentment, I offer this verse about forgiveness:

"The friend who ran off with your wife,
"Forgive him for his lust;
"The chum who sold you phony stocks,
"Forgive his breach of trust;
"The pal who schemed behind your back,
"Forgive his evil work;
"And when you're done — forgive yourself
"For being such a jerk."

A FORGIVING SOUL
IN FLORIDA

DEAR FORGIVING: This isn't new to me; I published it in 1988. But for those who may have missed it, I honor your offer.

Dr. Gott By Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please explain selective IgA deficiency. My 34-year-old husband is always sick.

DEAR READER: IgA is an immune globulin — an antibody — that is part of a larger family of immune globulins. In humans, there are five major classes: IgM, IgG, IgA, IgD and IgE. Each class has a different molecular weight and serves a different function.

For example, IgA (which is present in most of the body's secretions) acts as an early anti-viral and anti-bacterial defense. Patients with an IgA deficiency are more susceptible to infection because the body is unable to identify and control infection literally before it begins.

Immunoglobulins are measured using complex blood tests, such as immunoelectrophoresis.

In some cases, immune globulin deficiency is inherited; in others, it may result from serious infections, such as AIDS.

With respect to IgA deficiency, this condition is the commonest and mildest of all immuno-deficiencies. It is usually inherited and needs no treatment (such as administration of supplemental immune globulins). Although many patients with this deficiency have recurrent infections, treatment with antibiotics, as the need arises, ordinarily clears up any problem. I suggest you return to your doctor to discuss additional treatment options, including supplemental immune globulins.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Blood — Donations and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: After experiencing shortness of breath and periods of almost blacking out when going up stairs, my doctor ordered breathing tests that diagnosed restrictive lung disease. Is this serious and what has caused my problem?

DEAR READER: Restrictive lung disease means loss of the lung's elasticity, which inhibits the ability to breathe in enough oxygen. The condition is a common consequence of lung scarring, which occurs in chronic infections and a disease known as interstitial fibrosis.

These patients are short-winded and intolerant of exercise. When performing acts such as stair-climbing, they may feel faint because their lungs cannot supply enough oxygen for the increased activity.

The diagnosis is established by pulmonary function tests showing reduced lung volume and shallow breathing at rest.

Using these tests, restrictive lung disease can be easily differentiated from obstructive disease (emphysema), which is characterized by blockages in the respiratory tree without intrinsic restriction of lung motion. The two diseases cause identical symptoms.

Treatment for restrictive lung disease is unsatisfactory because the problem is mechanical and irreversible. Patients must simply adapt to a lower level of exertion. Oxygen therapy sometimes helps.

Teacher group supports bullet tax

AUSTIN (AP) — A tax on bullets could help school districts pay for security measures, the Texas Federation of Teachers has told a House subcommittee on gangs.

"School districts are having to spend increasing amounts of money to combat violence and vandalism," Walter Hinojosa, TFT legislative director, told lawmakers Thursday.

For example, Hinojosa said, Houston Independent School District has spent more than $1 million on security, including metal detectors for a number of schools and security personnel.

Truancy programs also would be a good investment of state dollars, Hinojosa said.

The subcommittee headed by Rep. Eddie de la Garza, D-Edinburg, at a previous hearing received testimony proposing a 1-cent tax on each bullet and shotgun shell sold, said his administrative assistant, J.J. Garza. The tax would raise an estimated $3 million a year, he said.

"We thought, hey, we ought to lay claim to some of those dollars for public education. We're in the forefront of that fight against gang activity," Hinojosa said. He said the group would seek a lawmaker to sponsor such a bill. The Legislature next meets in regular session in January.

Hinojosa told the subcommittee that education can be a "relatively cheap date" in the effort to combat juvenile crime.

He cited figures that the state spends about $16,000 a year to keep a criminal in prison, compared with $3,700 to educate a student.

"Unfortunately, many of the kids active in gangs today will end up on the expensive end of this government dole," Hinojosa said.

The subcommittee also heard from state Attorney General Dan Morales, who said the Legislature should explore the idea of regional alternative education and youth service facilities to help fight the gang problem.

"Fighting gang violence requires a declaration of war, but it is a war for the hearts and minds of misguided kids," he said.

Victims of plane crash had experienced other tragedies

By JOAN GOESSL
Associated Press Writer

Members of a family killed in a plane crash in southern New Mexico were prominent in their community and no strangers to tragedy.

The crash of the twin-engine plane late Wednesday in rugged mountains east of Alamogordo killed six people, including prominent rancher William Gene Whitehead, 40; his wife, Leigh Whitehead, 36; and their daughter, Kara, 8. All were from Llano County in Central Texas.

Another victim, Kenneth Ben Stout, 36, of Big Lake, Texas, also was a member of a prominent Texas ranching family. Stout was a golf pro at Pebble Beach, Calif. A sixth victim was identified late Thursday as Charles Courtion, age unknown. The pilot was identified as William Rodney Baldwin, 38, hometown unavailable.

The Whiteheads were involved in a much-publicized 1987 case in which Kara, then 2, was abducted from her home in the middle of the night while her parents slept. The child was returned unharmed to her parents after a shootout between state police and the suspected abductor. The suspect and Texas Ranger Stan Guffey were killed in the shootout.

The body of the Whitehead family's maid, Denise Johnson, 22, was found after the shootout. Officials said they believed she had been killed two days before the abduction.

The Whiteheads were a happy family despite the tragedy, William Whitehead's father said Thursday.

"I can't tell you a lot," Gene Whitehead said in a telephone interview from his home in Menard County, east of Llano County.

Brain defects study expanded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators probing an outbreak of birth defects along a section of the Texas-Mexico border will expand their study beyond the waters of the Rio Grande.

Environmental and health officials also will look to the sky.

The probe is an expansion of an earlier-announced $352,000 Environmental Protection Agency study to see if the Rio Grande is linked to a puzzling outbreak of brain and spinal defects.

The expanded two-year study, due to begin within weeks, also will focus on air pollutants to see if they might be tied to anencephaly and other neural tube defects. Some researchers suspect airborne poisons blown in from Mexico may be linked to the birth defects.

Since 1989, at least 30 babies in South Texas have been born without most of their brains, afflicted with anencephaly, a defect that kills the infants within a matter of days. The rate far exceeds the national average.

A local survey found most of the mothers lived within a 2.4-mile radius of the Rio Grande.

"It is clear to me that EPA is making these tragic health epidemics plaguing our border and Rio Grande air and water quality problems a high priority," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said Thursday. "I hope this new initiative can help reverse these disturbing health trends."

The EPA will bring several federal health agencies into the study, said Erich Bretthauer, EPA assistant administrator for research and development.

In two weeks, the EPA will hold a meeting in Washington to coordinate the study with officials of the Department of Health and Human Services, Centers for Disease Control and the U.S. Public Health Service, Bretthauer said Thursday.

"We are going to take a look at all we know with respect to the incidence of anencephaly in that area, looking at what the ... exposures are of chemicals to people living in the Brownsville-Matamoros area," he said.

The study also will examine whether "there are any gaps in our understanding of what chemicals people are being exposed to," said Bretthauer, who is in charge of the study.

The Food and Drug Administration will assist in the investigation and will examine dietary habits of study participants. And, U.S. officials will be working with their Mexican counterparts, who have "some data we are very interested in," Bretthauer said.

Gramm, R-Texas, and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, pegged the price tag of the expanded study at $1 million. Bretthauer said he was not sure what the final cost would be.

Said Bentsen: "While it is not clear that the birth defect rate is directly related to the presence of toxins in the river, we need to explore that possibility."

The EPA study isn't the only one on the drawing board. The CDC is conducting a study with the Texas Department of Health examining mothers of the babies born with birth defects. And, medical officials in the Brownsville area are doing air sampling and looking at possible environmental causes.

Juvenile criminals could be released early due to crowding

HOUSTON (AP) — Crowded conditions at the Texas Youth Commission have authorities considering an early release plan for juvenile offenders similar to one set up for the state's adult criminals.

The state already has been forced to reduce the amount of time some juvenile offenders spend in commission facilities because of limited funds, said TYC spokesman Gary Fuchs. But he said steps still must be taken to allow releases when facilities become overburdened.

"I think this is so serious," Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay told The Houston Post. "We're going to wind up (operating) like the big jails over there."

A surging number of violent juvenile offenders, aggravated by financial woes, has triggered the crowding problem, Fuchs said. "We knew that would be controversial."

TYC would invoke the discharge procedures if commitments by counties are not substantially reduced or if the particular youth being committed does not meet standards passed recently by the Texas Juvenile Probation Commission board.

Those standards, which go into effect in September, include an "ideal commitment criteria" and county commitment performance targets.

A final decision is expected to be made by the TYC board by July 23. Counties are supposed to submit written responses to the proposal by July 10.

Harris County's juvenile board voted Wednesday to notify the state of its concern.

"You can't release your way out of an overcrowding problem," said Donald Lee, an aide to Lindsay. "That's the lesson we learned from the adult system."

The early release of state convicts has been criticized as causing an increase in crime and jail crowding in Harris County.

In a letter to TYC Executive Director Ron Jackson, Teresa V. Ramirez, Harris County's executive director and chief juvenile probation officer, said discharging certain offenders will send a message that TYC is not the worst punishment they face.

As a result, the youths will try to fail in the more stringent local programs so they can be referred to TYC and eventually released, she wrote. She also warned that new intensive supervision programs in Harris County might be severely affected if the proposals are not changed.

Fuchs said fund shifts made during the last legislative session show lawmakers favor spending more on the juvenile probation system than the residential spots in the youth commission.

"The expectation was less youths would be committed to TYC," Fuchs said.

As a result, the TYC board said if a county sends more than a certain number of youths to the commission, another youth from that county will be released.

"We are going to have to look at significantly limiting the number of youth we receive," he said.

But Ms. Ramirez, who criticized the plan as a "quota" system, said the average juvenile from Harris County who is sent to TYC already has committed six to nine offenses. "A quota system disregards the discretion of the court," she said.

Judd worries

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Despite a best-selling solo album, country music singer Wynonna Judd fears failure.

"I constantly worry that I'll get out on stage and fall on my face or totally humiliate my family," she said. "Am I gonna get out there and ... spell potato wrong or something?"

Miss Judd, 27, who used to tour as The Judds with her mother, Naomi, also says she misses her mom. Naomi Judd retired in January because of chronic hepatitis.

"On one hand, I feel real proud. I put this band together and I'm making decision," she said of her solo career. "And then I get on the bus and I feel like, you know, where's Mom? It feels very foreign to me. It's like somebody cut off one of my arms or something."

Miss Judd, whose solo debut album "Wynonna" has sold more than 1 million copies, is to perform in Costa Mesa on Saturday.

Crackdown in Mexico didn't last very long

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Industry officials are downplaying a short-lived environmental crackdown on several plants accused of mishandling toxic substances.

The Secretariat of Social Development, or Sedeso, temporarily closed down at least five plants, including two twin plants, this week and indicated it would audit others.

Most of the affected plants were open again by Thursday morning. Some industry officials were terming the crackdown a political ploy to impress Luis Donaldo Colosio, the new head of Sedeso, the agency that recently absorbed Mexico's environmental agency.

The closures coincided with Colosio's visit to the area.

"We feel the closure was unjustly political," said Fred Quintana, executive director of the Matamoros Maquiladora Association. "We think it was a show and we feel very strongly that we were the pawns."

The agency closed plants said to be mishandling toxic substances and threatening the health of employees. Specific substances were not named.

Hector Hernandez, director of Sedeso in Matamoros, did not return repeated phone calls from The Associated Press.

The five plants that were confirmed to have been affected were: Stepan de Mexico, a Mexican company that produces ingredients for detergents and soaps; Retzloff, a Mexican pesticide company; Ranco de Mexico, a twin plant that makes electrical components; Puertas y Vidrios de Matamoros, another twin plant; and Aceitera Matamoros.

Four other plants are facing audits, according to Sedeso. There were also unconfirmed reports that one plant had been closed permanently.

Quintana said the two twin plants were open again as soon as environmental officials left town. The bulk of the complaints against them involved paperwork and procedural matters, he said.

The Stepan de Mexico plant was inspected and a reactor used to mix chemicals was still shut down Thursday, said Joan Kusher, a spokeswoman for Northfield, Ill.-based Stepan Co.

"It's quite temporary," Ms. Kusher said. "It seems to me that they are just trying to have a good show. ... It sounds to me like they are trying to show that they are very effective."

The Ranco plant was opened Wednesday morning. Company officials quickly resolved all issues brought up by Sedeso, Dan Seaman, vice president of operations, said in a statement.

"No releases of any hazardous chemicals were involved," he said.

Early thought, late victory

By Phillip Alder

Today's cliche is "Look before you leap." It is often written that more contracts are lost by the wrong play at trick one than at any other single trick. There is an excellent way to cut down your errors at trick one: Work out your plan before you play from the dummy.

Cover the East-West cards in the diagram. Against your contract of five clubs, West leads the diamond king. How would you try to win 11 tricks?

South opened with a strong, artificial and forcing two clubs. North's two diamonds was a negative response. After two natural bids, South guessed well not to pass over three no-trump, a contract that probably would have lost the first six tricks.

South ruffed the diamond king with the club two and then sat back to consider the problem — too late! Eventually he cashed the club ace, hoping to drop a singleton eight. Then he led the spade king. However, West signaled with a high spade to show an even number, so East had no inclination to duck the ace. When South had to lose two heart tricks, he was one down.

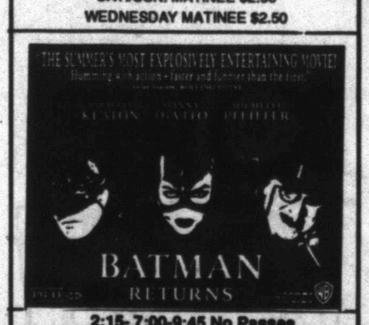

If South had paused before playing from the dummy at trick one, he might have noticed dummy's great club cards. He should have ruffed high at trick one and then led the spade king. Let's assume it is won by East and he switches to a heart. South wins with the ace and leads a low trump toward dummy. Eventually he will get into the dummy with a club, thus gaining access to the spade winners on which to throw his heart losers.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"I SAID, 'WHAT WOULD YOU EVER DO WITHOUT DENNIS?'"

Eagles' star Brown killed in car crash

BROOKSVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Friends and colleagues of Philadelphia Eagles star defensive lineman Jerome Brown say they will best remember him for his zany humor in the locker room and his kindness off the field.

Brown, 27, was killed Thursday when the sports car he was driving skidded out of control and flipped on a slippery road in his hometown, Brooksville police chief Ed Tincher said.

Brown's 12-year-old nephew also died in the single-car accident, Tincher said. The boy's name was not immediately released.

A witness who wouldn't give his name said Brown's car was demolished.

"He hit a palm tree when he left the shoulder of the road," the witness, identified only as a Brooksville man, told the Ocala Star-Banner. The car "rolled over and wound up against a light pole."

Brown, a powerful 6-foot-2, 295-pound tackle, anchored the Eagles' defensive line. He was voted to the Pro Bowl the past two seasons.

"This is a devastating loss to his family, his friends, his community and obviously to this football team," Eagles general manager Harry Gamble said. "He was warm and caring. He was a special person."

Known for his flamboyance, Brown symbolized the outlaw image of the Eagles during Buddy Ryan's tenure. He spent all of last season's training camp holding out for more money, but when he returned with a contract worth more than $1 million with incentives, he gave his new coach, Rich Kotite, a hug as he headed for the field for the team's first game.

The Eagles took Brown with the ninth pick overall in 1987 draft, after he came out of Miami as an All-American.

Brown was also known for his generosity. He volunteered to work with children in Philadelphia and started a football camp this year in his hometown.

"This football team is obviously devastated because of this loss," Kotite said. "Everybody who met him was touched. He certainly touched me. It hasn't quit sunken in yet."

Fellow tackle Mike Golic fought back tears.

"At this point you don't give a damn about football. We lost a great friend," Golic said. "His attitude was the attitude of the Eagles — trash-talking and hard-hitting. It went back all the way to Buddy Ryan."

Ewing injures thumb...

Robinson to start on US team

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — There's no argument about who will start at center when the U.S. Dream Team makes its debut Sunday.

David Robinson wins the job by default.

Robinson became the only not-so-banged-up center on the roster when Patrick Ewing dislocated his right thumb in the team's practice Thursday in San Diego.

Robinson has his own thumb problems. He's coming off surgery on his left thumb, which he injured March 16 in a game against Charlotte.

Robinson has been rusty as the team made up of mostly NBA stars practiced this week.

"I could tell that he hasn't played a great deal," U.S. coach Chuck Daly said. "But his conditioning is fine and he's worked on his game and it's coming along nicely."

Ewing injured his thumb when he took a pass from Magic Johnson and went up for a shot against Karl Malone.

"I was on a fast break and Magic threw me a pass and I went up for a layup," Ewing said. "I think it was Karl who came from behind and went for the block and got a piece of my hand and I hit it on the rim.

"If I had dunked it, it wouldn't have happened," Ewing said.

The thumb will be in a splint for five days, then the injury will be re-evaluated to see if Ewing can begin playing.

"The five days takes us to the middle of next week, almost all the way through the Tournament of the Americas," Daly said.

Actually, if he's cleared to play Wednesday, Ewing will miss only three of the anticipated six games the U.S. team will play over an eight-day period.

"All we will have to do is rebound and block shots," Ewing said. "We'll leave the scoring to the rest of those guys. We'll be fine."

The coaches met to discuss the possibility of adding another center to the team, but decided against it.

The roster for the Tournament of the Americas must be announced by 4 p.m. today and it was difficult to find someone who would be available, Daly said. Instead, Daly will have Malone and Christian Laettner play some at backup center. Laettner, the only collegiate on the Dream Team, is 6-foot-11 and played center for Duke, despite being projected as a power forward in the pros.

Daly said he will decide Saturday who will start when the team opens the Tournament of the Americas against Cuba on Sunday. The top four finishers among the 10 western hemisphere teams qualify for the Barcelona Olympics.

The U.S. team is undergoing a transition from a collection of All-Stars to a true team with players filling certain roles.

"I think we started out somewhere in the mentality of an all-star game and we're drifting back to reality and playing as a team, and I really like what I'm seeing," Daly said.

"It's kind of shocking to take a look at us," Daly said. "But then the reality comes back that you've still got to play the team game that kids play all over the world."

Scott Sanderson of the New York Yankees recently became only the ninth pitcher ever to notch wins against all 26 major-league baseball teams. He did it by defeating Milwaukee. The career distinction isn't without its down side, however, since a pitcher must be fairly well-traveled to accomplish it. Two others on the list are also still pitching: Baltimore's Rick Sutcliffe, who joined the group earlier this season, and Texas' Nolan Ryan.

Brown posts win No. 11

DETROIT (AP) — The Rangers' Kevin Brown became the American League's first 11-game winner with a four-hitter to beat Detroit 5-2 Thursday. Ruben Sierra had four singles and scored twice for Texas.

Brown (11-4) pitched his fifth complete game, allowing two runs, with two walks and nine strikeouts.

Rookie Buddy Groom dropped to 0-2, allowing four runs and eight hits in four-plus innings.

Wimbledon tennis...

McEnroe wins five-set match

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — One wears a knee brace and is losing his hair. The other spends almost as much time playing guitar as tennis. Both have wedding rings and small children.

But former champions John McEnroe and Pat Cash frolicked like a couple of teenagers Thursday on Centre Court, producing great tennis and high drama before McEnroe won in five sets.

And, for four hours, the unseeded veterans created the tension-filled tennis that has been in short supply at a Wimbledon tournament featuring few upsets and many lopsided matches.

McEnroe, a three-time Wimbledon champion, lost a pair of tiebreakers but rallied to defeat 1987 champion Cash 6-7 (3-7), 6-4, 6-7 (1-7), 6-3, 6-2.

"I climbed off the ropes and was able to get a second wind. He had me on the ropes," McEnroe said. "We both played really hard. It was a great match."

Only five of the 32 seeded players — three women and two men — were eliminated in the first two rounds, an unusually low number for the quirky grass courts of Wimbledon.

Jim Courier, the top seed who hasn't lost a set since the quarterfinals of the French Open, defeated Byron Black 6-4, 6-1, 6-4 on Thursday, but fourth-seeded Boris Becker needed five sets to beat Martin Damm.

Becker, who's won three Wimbledon titles and reached three other finals in the last seven years, defeated the Czechoslovak 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Andre Agassi, the 12th seed, started slowly but defeated Eduardo Masso 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3. David Wheaton, the 16th seed, defeated American compatriot Todd Martin 6-3, 6-3, 6-7 (3-7), 6-3 and will face McEnroe in the third round.

Others advancing to the third round included No. 9 Guy Forget and No. 14 Wayne Ferreira. Petr Korda, the sixth seed, was eliminated by Jakob Hlasek in a marathon match that went to 16-14 in the final set.

Women's defending champion Steffi Graf cruised to a 6-1, 6-1 defeat of Marianne Werdel and nine-time champion Martina Navratilova finished off a 6-2, 3-6, 6-0 victory over Kimberly Po in a match that began Wednesday.

Gabriela Sabatini, the third seed who lost in the Wimbledon final to Graf last year, was a 6-2, 6-3 winner over Isabelle Demongeot.

Jennifer Capriati, seeded sixth, crushed fellow American Pam Shriver 6-2, 6-4 in a Centre-Court mismatch that was even more lopsided than the score.

Also advancing were No. 9 Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, No. 11 Jana Novotna, No. 13 Zina Garrison and No. 16 Judith Wiesner.

Conchita Martinez, seeded eighth but a poor grass-court player, lost 6-3, 5-7, 6-4 to Natalia Zvereva.

McEnroe, 33, who won his last Grand Slam title in 1984, produced memories of his old brilliance against Cash — including drop shots, lobs and sharply angled volleys.

McEnroe, wearing a bright, red knee brace and a grimace when he missed shots, lost the tiebreakers but gradually regained control in the final two sets.

Cash is six years younger than McEnroe, but has played infrequently this year and fallen to 191st in the world. He said his lack of match experience made it emotionally difficult to finish off the match.

"You just get a bit sick of being a good loser, pushing the guys all the way and not beating them," said Cash.

Dodgers top Houston, 8-5

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One down and 21 to go.

The most critical 18 days of the Los Angeles Dodgers' season of underachievement began Thursday night with an 8-5 victory over the Houston Astros.

And while the defense appeared as suspect as it was in their just-concluded 1-10 road trip, the pitching of Ramon Martinez and the timely hitting of Lenny Harris and Jose Offerman were enough to overcome it.

The only two mistakes the Dodgers made were Offerman's wild relay throw from shortstop on a potential double play grounder by Scooter Tucker in the second inning and a dropped foul pop by catcher Carlos Hernandez that led to one of Jeff Bagwell's four hits.

Martinez (4-4) was charged with four runs and eight hits over six-plus innings. He struck out four, walked three and threw 105 pitches in his first start in 11 days.

Offerman had a pair of RBI singles off Jones and Brett Butler added a two-run triple off Joe Boever.

Congress, Bush put RR back to work today

DALLAS (AP) — Freight railroads have said they expected to have 75 percent of their trains running within 24 hours after back-to-work legislation is enacted.

Some spots — such as the Port of Beaumont — were dramatically impacted by the two-day rail strike that was ended early today by Congress and President Bush.

Bush signed the arbitration law at 1:02 a.m. EDT today, less than an hour after Congress acted. The new law orders a 35-day negotiating period.

Roger Campbell, spokesman for Fort Worth-based Burlington Northern, said 60 percent of the company's 365 parked rail cars were back in operation by 7 a.m. He said he expected to be in full operation within 24 hours.

"We have no idea yet what the economic impact is for Burlington Northern," he said.

Alex Tice, a spokesman for Union Pacific in Fort Worth, today said the railroad was well on its way to being back to normal.

"I've got some good news," Tice said. "As of right now we have at least 75 percent of our trains scheduled. Almost 50 percent are moving. By 6 o'clock tonight all trains halted by the strike should be fully operational."

In Beaumont, grain shipments scheduled to foreign ports had been delayed, while a load of military equipment expected to arrive this weekend would have been stranded, spokesman John Roby said.

"Everything's pretty well at a standstill," Roby told the Beaumont Enterprise.

Chevron spokesman Art Spencer told the Enterprise its Port Arthur lubricants and grease distribution center could not survive for long without rail service.

DuPont's facility in Orange, which produces ingredients for nylon and plastics, could have seen more than one-third of its efforts slowed, spokesman Mike Nicholas said.

"We have about 18,000 to 20,000 shipments annually and 38 percent of that is by rail," he told the newspaper.

"In this day and age of bad economic times ... it's hard to believe this could become a prolonged situation," Jeff Joachim of Houston's World Trade Distribution told the Houston Chronicle.

With $3.3 billion in total assets, Ross Perot would have no trouble financing his own independent presidential campaign. He built his fortune in the field of data processing.

Supreme Court says Mississippi colleges unlawfully segregated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that Mississippi's state-run colleges and universities are unlawfully segregated by race even though whites and blacks can attend the school of their choice.

The court said Mississippi has not done enough to overcome its history of legally enforced segregation because most black students still attend educationally inferior, predominantly black schools.

The 8-1 ruling is the court's first ever on racial segregation in higher education.

The decision's full impact is unclear. But it could force Mississippi, and some other states, to spend more tax money to upgrade predominantly black state-run schools.

Other options also may be available, such as eliminating duplication of programs at predominantly white and predominantly black schools.

Such possible remedies have some civil rights leaders worried about the survival of institutions that historically have offered the best chance for blacks to get a higher education.

Justice Byron R. White, writing for the court, said, "If the state perpetuates policies and practices traceable to its prior system that continue to have segregative effects ... and such policies are without sound educational justification and can be practicably eliminated, the state has not satisfied its burden of proving that it has dismantled its prior system."

Political, religious literature may not be banned by airports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that airports may not prohibit the distribution of political and religious literature inside their terminals. But by a separate vote, the court allowed bans on soliciting donations inside airport terminals.

The decision, just in time for the summer's peak travel season, is part victory and part defeat for the International Society of Krishna Consciousness Inc. The religious group challenged bans that kept Hare Krishnas from distributing literature and soliciting donations in terminals at New York City's three major airports.

In a rare move, the court announced its resolution of the aiport dispute in two separate decisions. The voting was fragmented.

Most importantly, a majority of the court ruled that an airport terminal is not a "public forum" in which the soliciting of donations would have constitutional protection.

But a separate majority ruled that handing out leaflets in airport terminals is protected by the Constitution.

The court split 6-3 on allowing airports to ban soliciting, and split 5-4 on not allowing them to ban leafleting.

After giving a brief summary of the various votes, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor drew laughs from the courtroom audience by stating, "Now, if anyone can figure that out they're doing well."

Writing for the court in its ruling on soliciting, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist said, "Face-to-face solicitation presents risks of duress that are an appropriate target of regulation."

Rehnquist was joined by Justices Byron R. White, Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas.

Columbia begins first experiments

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Columbia's astronauts studied a shimmering, shaking drop of water that moved in unexpected ways today as the crew got down to work on a busy slate of scientific experiments.

During their marathon 13-day space mission, the crew of five men and two women will grow crystals, set small fires in sealed chambers, and undergo medical tests needed to gain understanding of the effects of extended space travel.

Today, astronaut Eugene Trinh successfully deployed and levitated a shimmering 3/4-inch droplet of water laced with plastic tracer particles inside a special chamber, after two computer-controlled attempts failed. The small module is intended to use sound waves to vibrate and manipulate drops of liquid so scientists can investigate the drops' dynamics.

"You've got a very happy ... science team right now. Great job," science controllers at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., told Trinh.

However, the drop carried an uncontrolled clockwise spin — the same problem Trinh had experienced earlier when he tried to calibrate the instrument using a small blue ball. The ball spun rapidly, then skittered about the chamber like a pinball when the astronaut bumped it with two prongs.

Biker going coast-to-coast

was just another "Joe Blow" who had never been out of the West Coast. Being on the road makes a difference, he said.

Sometimes Miguel gets to spend the night indoors, but usually he camps out long the way in various pasturelands.

He usually carries four bottles of water and stops at little markets to purchase bread, fruit and other supplies. He had a cookstove but quit using it once the weather turned warmer, and sent it home to his parents.

He hasn't had any real difficulties other than the weather. Crossing a 117-mile stretch in New Mexico he encountered a ferocious hail and lightning storm which plagued him for six hours without letup.

Miguel barely had time to pitch his tent before the winds, rain and hail started. He had to hole up inside until the storm abated. He had parked his bike as far away from the tent as possible to prevent it drawing lightning.

The wind did its best to unravel his tent, but it held throughout the storm with Miguel scrunched up inside it.

He usually makes about 70 miles a day. He said he knows other bikers who travel much farther but he doesn't because he's "not in a hurry."

He rides a mountain bike which has been set up for touring. He used to ride it when he worked for a messenger service.

Miguel said he had always wanted to go on a cross country bike ride, but the idea for this trip was planted when he read a book — "Miles From Nowhere" — written by a couple who had biked around the world.

He began biking after high school because once the "glory days" were over he needed something to do, he said. He spotted his first bike in a window display and purchased it before the day was over.

When he informed his parents of his upcoming bike trip he said they thought he was crazy. His father advised him to ride a motorcycle. His mother still offers to buy him a ticket home every time he calls her.

As a result of several months on the road, Miguel said he is stronger, both physically and mentally, than he has been at any other time in his life.

"I should have done this years ago," he said. Miguel doesn't let big things worry him anymore. He's not sure what he wants to do when he does return home. For now, he's just enjoying the road.

French farmers blockaded Euro Disneyland today

MARNE-LA-VALLEE, France (AP) — Angry French farmers blockaded Euro Disneyland today, trapping thousands of tourists in their cars in the latest protest of proposed cuts in European Community farm subsidies.

"We have thousands of people waiting in cars," said a Disney spokesman speaking on company rules of anonymity. "They've come from many European countries and have driven overnight to get here. They have kids."

Some families abandoned their cars a mile from the park and walked to the ticket gate, where the farmers allowed them and tourists arriving by train to enter.

The cars and buses started backing up shortly before dawn.

Police work burglary case

Local police worked a burglary and filed a hit-and-run report Thursday.

At 8:16 a.m., Peggy Highfield notified police that someone had broken into a vehicle at Dupree Motors and stolen an equalizer. An offense report for burglary of a vehicle has been filed.

At 11:45 a.m., police were notified of a hit-and-run in the 2400 block of Avenue V. Involved were an unknown vehicle with a trailer which left the scene and a parked, unoccupied 1987 Chevrolet driven by Charles Adkins of Rotan.

Police filed a family violence report in reference to a disturbance in the 1100 block of 28th Street at 11:56 p.m.

At 12:53 a.m. today, a man filed an offense report for reckless conduct after he told police that another man had pointed a gun at him.

Landfill

rules and regulations for the state by the end of the year. Citizens will then have a chance to voice their opinions again before the rules are finalized.

"Most of us all had similar concerns with the expense of a Subtitle D-approved landfill and the minimal amount of taxpayer base to fund it," Chambers said.

"One point I thought brought it home is you have an entity that says all these groups need a car. They put it upon another entity not responsible for buying the car to pick out the car. You know that entity is going to pick out a Cadillac, of course. But the person buying it may only be able to afford a Chevette. That's kind of how we see it," he said.

John Sadlier, TWC enforcement team coordinator, said that the state intends to implement the West Texas Exemption. To be exempt, however, landfills must take in less than 20 tons of solid waste a day, have no evidence of groundwater contamination, receive less than 25 inches of rainfall annually, and have no practical waste management alternative.

The City of Snyder landfill doesn't qualify, because it takes in more than 20 tons a day.

"At this point, we wouldn't qualify," said Chambers. "If our voices were not heard yesterday at the hearing we'll still apply for an exemption, but we might not get it. We're encouraging the water commission to be site-specific instead of taking a blanket approach."

Chambers said that what is also frustrating is that the new rules disregard the effort and expenses communities such as Snyder have put into their landfills.

"They're changing the rules. Eleven years ago we spent a good deal of money getting this (landfill) permit, expecting to be able to use it for 30 years. Now, 12 years later, they're changing the rules. It adversely effects our investment."

Chambers said the TWC probably gets tired of everyone charging that the rules aren't fair. But he encourages anyone with specific input about the issue to write the commission before July 15.

LLoyd Bridges hospitalized today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Lloyd Bridges was hospitalized in a coronary care unit after undergoing tests, a hospital official said.

The 79-year-old actor, known for the TV adventure series "Sea Hunt," was admitted to the University of California, Los Angeles Medical Center on Thursday afternoon after he began feeling ill at his Malibu home.

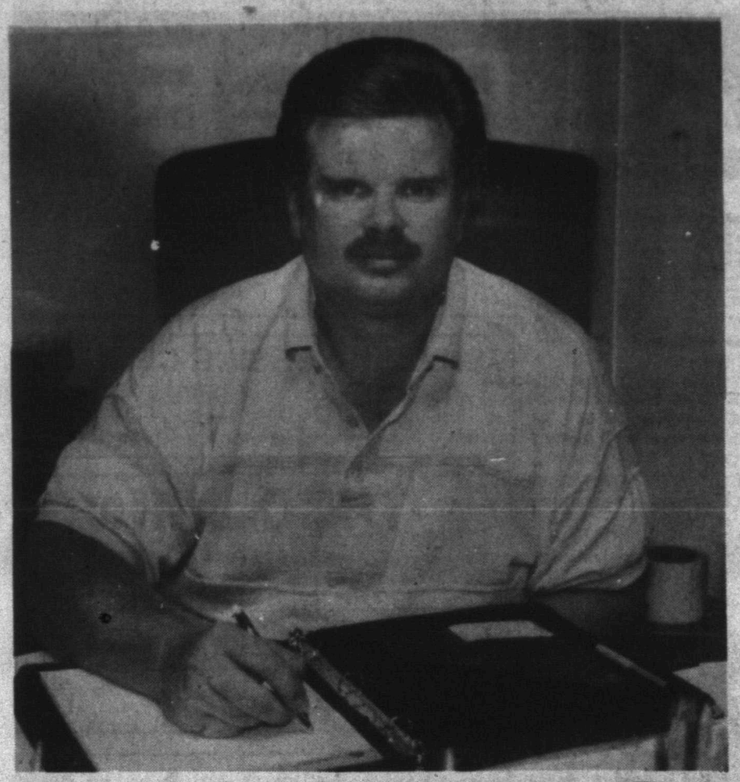

"He's stable. He's resting comfortably and he's doing well," nursing supervisor Susan Davidson said early today.

She would not elaborate on his condition but said more information would be released later today.

"Sea Hunt," which ran from 1957 to 1961, was a highly popular syndicated series in which Bridges played a former Navy frogman turned undersea investigator and rescuer. Bridges is also known for his work in such films as "Airplane!" and "Little Big Horn."

His sons, Jeff and Beau, are also actors.

Snyder pastor bound for Russia

BOUND FOR RUSSIA —Rev. Cary Moore, pastor of First Assembly of God in Snyder, will spend 10 days in Russia this August as part of a special evangelistic effort sponsored by Calvary Ministries in Orlando, Fla. This will be his first overseas missionary work. Previously, he has taken part in mission work on Indian reservations and in Mexico. (SDN Staff Photo)

Rev. Cary Moore, pastor of First Assembly of God in Snyder, will be one of 15 pastors in Texas who will spend 10 days in Russia this August as part of a special missionary evangelistic effort.

Moore and others in the group, including a nurse and missionaries, will leave the U.S. Aug. 17, bound for Bryansk, located some 250 miles south of Moscow. En route they will stop in Frankfurt, Germany and Moscow.

Calvary Ministries located in Orlando, Fla. is sponsoring the trip. Moore's father, Rev. Dean Moore, pastor of Central Assembly of God in Muskogee, Okla., will be the director.

Cary Moore will be the only pastor from this area to be included in this missionary effort.

Besides personnel, the group will take Bibles and other Sunday School material to be distributed to the people in Russia.

Moore said their primary reason for going is to install a pastor in Bryansk and to help him build a congregation. This will involve street evangelism and nightly crusades, Moore explained.

Language is not expected to be a problem because an interpreter will accompany them.

Moore, who sees this as "an opportunity of a lifetime," described the changes in Russia since Communism was overthrown several months ago as "phenemonal."

He added that the Russian people are "hungry for the word of God." Thus far, they have responded to evangelistic projects like "children at Christmas."

"The door has been opened for us in Russia and we need to act now because it could close again at any time," Moore said.

As the tour's official photographer he said he will be taking pictures and making videos of their work.

Moore was invited to participate in the upcoming evangelistic program, but had felt that duties in Snyder prevented him from accepting. However, about two months ago he said he felt "God call him" during a South Plains missionary service held in Lubbock.

Contributions are now being accepted for the purchase of Bibles and other material. Moore may be contacted at 573-3316, 573-2222 or in care of the church at P.O. Box 1133, Snyder 79550.

Harris Co. wants tax exempt bonds to build horse track

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County commissioners want to set up a non-profit corporation to issue nearly $100 million in tax-exempt bonds to build a Class I horse racing track.

The corporation, tentatively called Sam Houston Park Authority, would issue bonds for the state's first major track, approved for northwest Houston last year by the Texas Racing Commission.

Commissioners are expected to vote on the plan next Tuesday, but there has been no apparent opposition to the proposal.

"It's a good deal for Harris County and we've been negotiating on this for some time. We started out with a lot less on this deal," Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay said. "They came to us six weeks ago and it wasn't nearly as attractive as it is now."

The authority would become the sole owner of the track, now licensed to private investors including the Houston Sports Association, owner of the Houston Astros, the Houston Chronicle reported Thursday.

So far, investors reportedly have raised less than $10 million in private funding for the proposed $95 million facility.

"Once we began discussing this method of (public) financing, we really didn't spend any time working on the other (private investment)," said Gerald Holtzman, a Houston attorney and partner in the venture.

In a series of private meetings with commissioners, the investors proposed to borrow the money using the county's bond-issuing authority, without obligating taxpayers for repayment.

The bonds would be paid back over 25 years through track revenue, projected by the investors to be $30 million in the first year.

Commissioners would appoint a five-member board of directors to run the public corporation. The board, in turn, would negotiate a contract with HSA to operate the track.

Indictment filed for kidnapping suspects

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A former Exxon security manager and his wife have been indicted, accused of kidnapping the head of Exxon's international operations, who is still missing.

Sidney Reso, president of Exxon's Florham Park-based international division, was abducted from outside his Morris Township home April 29.

Arthur D. Seale and his wife, Irene J. Seale, and unspecified others were charged Thursday with conspiracy, kidnapping and extortion in the disappearance of Reso, 57.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Victor Ashrafi declined to elaborate.

FBI officials have said they hope that a third party is holding Reso, which would increase the chance that he is still alive.

The Seales, who are being kept in separate county jails, continued to keep their silence with investigators Thursday, according to FBI spokesman Bill Tonkin.

The indictment adds little new information about the kidnapping.

The Seales, both 45, were arrested in the early morning hours of June 19 following a four-hour series of ransom notes and phone calls that led investigators through a three-county tour of western New Jersey.

Over 200 FBI agents and local detectives were combing through the couple's records and past associations in the search for Reso. Search dogs from the Morris County prosecutors office were sniffing around the Seales' home in Lebanon Township, in Hunterdon County.

The FBI has confirmed accounts that Arthur Seale claimed to have worked with Reso and designed the executive security program at the oil company.

Dallas-based Exxon officials would not comment on the report. Seale worked with the company until 1987, the company said.

The couple moved to Hilton Head, S.C., and Vail, Colo., before moving into his parents' home in Lebanon Township.

Arthur Seale worked most recently at Intertel, an international firm specializing in providing security information to corporations sending employees abroad.

Intertel officials said Seale had worked on two jobs, but was never hired full-time.

"He was a stringer," said Robert Peloquin, chairman of Intertel. "He did some record checks for us."

Seale also worked as a patrolman in Hillside from 1968 through 1977.

Controversy over flag is causing furor

DALLAS (AP) — Texas lottery officials said Thursday that they made a mistake by making the Lone Star flag a scratch-off symbol and will replace it with stars when the next 100 million tickets are printed.

"Somewhere around 1908 Texas hanged a man for desecrating the flag," collector Dave Pawson of Plano told The Dallas Morning News. "You've got the law broken three times on each ticket."

The design of the second instant game, "Texas Match Up," required players to scratch off the state flag to reveal dollar values.

"Obviously there's nothing we can do about the 200 million tickets that we had printed," said lottery spokesman Steve Levine.

"Our intentions were honorable," he said. "This entire ticket was intended to honor Texas symbols. You've got the bluebonnet, the mockingbird and the flag."

Under state law, defacing the state or American flag is a misdemeanor punishable by up to one year in prison.

Levine said that the lottery's attorneys said that the tickets were not illegal.

"However, we have obviously offended the sensitivities of some people who take these things very seriously," Levine said.

IN THESE MODERN TIMES, GOING TO MARKET IS A MATTER OF GETTING INTO A CAR AND DRIVING TO THE SHOPPING CENTER. WE NEVER SEE THE MAN WHO GREW OUR FOOD, THE PEOPLE WHO MADE OUR CLOTHES, OR THE OTHER ARTICLES WE BUY AND USE. EVERYTHING IS PACKAGED NEATLY AND SHIPPED TO THE STORES WHERE WE DO OUR SHOPPING. BUT...

...THE BIBLICAL MARKETPLACE WAS ANOTHER MATTER. A CITY'S GATEWAY OPENED INTO A KIND OF PLAZA—HERE WAS THE MARKET, WHERE EVERY KIND OF TRADING AND SELLING TOOK PLACE. AN ANCIENT SAYING DECLARED, "ONE CAN BUY ANYTHING IN THE MARKETS OF JERUSALEM, FROM A FINE CAMEL TO A FALSE TOOTH!" AND YOU WOULD MEET THE MAN WHO RAISED THE MEAT YOU BOUGHT, OR THE GRAIN YOU WANTED FOR A FINE FLOUR—THE SHEEP-RAISER, THE OLIVE OIL-MAKER, THE FARMER, THE POTTER, THE CLOTH-SPINNER, WERE HERE TO PERSONALLY SELL YOU THEIR OWN GOODS. PEOPLE OF MANY NATIONS THRONGED JERUSALEM'S MARKETS—A DOZEN LANGUAGES MIGHT BE HEARD WITHOUT TAKING MORE THAN A FEW STEPS—A CONSTANT DIN OF VOICES, CRYING THE VIRTUES OF THIS MELON, THAT PERFUME, AGAINST A BACK-GROUND OF THE CLINK AND JINGLE OF THE MONEY CHANGERS, WITHOUT WHOM THE BUYING AND SELLING OF ALL THESE GOODS COULD HARDLY BE MANAGED. A POLYGLOT OF ACTIVITY, WAS THE ANCIENT MARKETPLACE WHEN "GOING TO MARKET" WAS AN EXCITING EVENT, INDEED!

NEXT WEEK: THE MOST IMPORTANT ANIMAL OF BIBLICAL TIMES!
