'Red Ribbon Week' set For drug, alcohol abuse awareness

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Staying off drugs, away from alcohol and off tobacco will be the message that Hereford High School students take to their younger peers next week as "Red Ribbon Week" kicks off throughout the city.

Cindy Simons of Hereford High School said the week of festivities is the work of several high school groups working together.

"The purpose of Red Ribbon Week is to heighten awareness of the danger of drug and alcohol and tobacco use and to get the kids involved in the war on drugs," said Mrs. Simons.

The highlight of the week will be simultaneous pep rallies held at all local schools but West Central Intermediate School on Monday.

They will start at 8:15 a.m. at the five primary and intermediate schools, Hereford Junior High and SOAR High and will last for about 30 minutes.

The rally at West Central will be held at the same time on Tuesday.

At the rallies, representatives from the Student Council, PAL Club, cheerleaders, athletes and other interested students and teachers will encourage students to stay off drugs, alcohol and tobacco.

And, said Mrs. Simons, they will tell the youngsters "the good things they've been able to do (being) involved in school activities, because they are drug free."

As a result, the high schoolers will act as role models for the younger students.

Every student in the schools will receive a free red ribbon as well, that proclaims "Too Smart For Drugs. Hereford ISD, Drug Free Schools and Communities."

Mrs. Simons said the rallies are open to the public and parents are encouraged to attend.

In conjunction with Red Ribbon Week, students at all city schools will be decorating their classrooms and halls and will be able to take advantage of special daily themes.

Monday will be Peer Pressure Reversal Day, where students may wear their clothes inside out.

Tuesday is Shoo Out Drugs, where everyone wears mismatched shoes.

Wednesday is Wear Red Day throughout the district and Drugs are Un-Bear-Able at the elementary level, which involves dressed teddy bears.

On Thursday, Pair-Up Against Drugs is the theme and students will dress as twins.

Finally, the week ends on Friday with Black Out Drugs and everyone is encouraged to wear black clothing.

Red Ribbon Week activities also will come to the high school.

The PAL Club is selling special "Hereford Proud to be Drug Free" ribbons to raise money for club activities.

Those are available at the school and the public may purchase them.

In addition, four programs will be held on Thursday, Oct. 28, featuring Jonathan L. Hutson, a special agent with the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

Hutson will speak on Project S.A.V.E., which is a program designed to inform and educate the students about the legal aspects and liabilities of underage drinking.

The presentations will be made in the auditorium during second period, 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.; fifth period, 1:05 p.m. to 1:55 p.m.; sixth period, 2 p.m. to 2:50 p.m.; and seventh period, 2:55 p.m. to 3:45 p.m.

"I'd like to invite anyone from the community to come to any of these programs," Mrs. Simons said.

Homecoming royalty

Hereford High School 1993 Homecoming King and Queen Gabriel and Rosie Medrano ride along in style during the annual Homecoming Parade on Friday. The couple was crowned to reign over the Friday festivities during the annual Pep Rally before the parade. They were introduced at special pre-game activities before the homecoming game. District-leader Pampa put a damper on the celebration by scoring a 42-12 win over the Herd.

HHS homecoming great... despite outcome of game

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Hereford High School's homecoming was a gala celebration all day Friday and for almost half the football game Friday night. The Herd jumped to a 12-0 lead, but the well-balanced Pampa team scored 42 unanswered points to beat Hereford in the important District 1-4A clash.

Students, parents and Herd fanatics of all ages were packed into the Hereford High School gymnasium at 2 p.m. Friday to cheer their football team.

The 1,000-person seating capacity was taken and band members, cheerleaders and the Herd football team sat on chairs on the floor.

From the halls came the steady beat of the band percussion section. Suddenly "Hail Hereford High" began and the band entered the gym to the cheers of the crowd.

It was just the beginning of the annual Homecoming Pep Rally and it certainly served its purpose -- to get the Herd faithful pumped up for their Friday night game against the Pampa Harvesters.

As the varsity football team was introduced, screams and cheers for favorite players drowned out the speaker. Later, each player was given a cow tag with his number on it and a hug from a cheerleader. The cheering continued.

As the Homecoming Queen and King candidates and their attendants were introduced, more cheers erupted.

Finally, when Rosie Medrano and Gabriel Medrano were introduced as 1993 Homecoming Queen and King, the place went wild.

The two were crowned and, flanked by their attendants, took their thrones for the remaining proceedings.

They also rode in the parade following the rally and were introduced during pre-game festivities at the football game.

Attendants were: Rob Reinauer and Cassie Abney, freshmen; Natalie McWhorter and Marquise Brown, sophomore; Michael Brown and Olga Cera, junior; and Lexi Sciombato and Hayden Andrews and Melissa DeLeon and Hondo Nava, senior.

The school band, cheerleaders, drill team and twirlers all participated in the rally, which lasted approximately 30 minutes, leaving half an hour for parade participants to get arranged.

The parade featured floats from the different classes, bands, police vehicle with screaming sirens, low-rider trucks and other community floats.

The 25-minute affair left the high school, traveled south on Avenue F to Park Avenue, west to Main Street, then south to Second Street.

The FHS Mighty Maroon Band went to Borger Saturday night in quest of its 33rd straight "1" rating in UIL marching competition.

Photographs, stats and information about the game can be found on Page 6A.

Money-back guarantee on super collider claimed by Richards

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Ann Richards said Friday that Texas has a money-back guarantee from the federal government over the super collider.

Richards said the state will pursue "whatever is necessary" to make the U.S. government reimburse the state for what Texas has paid into construction of the atom smasher that was shut down by Congress.

She declined to put a dollar amount on how much Texas has spent on the project near Waxahachie, but super collider officials say more than $400 million of a $1 billion state bond issue has been expended.

"As far as I am concerned, we have a contractual relationship with the United States government, and we expect the United States government to fulfill its side of that contractual relationship by whatever is necessary," Richards said.

"We can accept in kind or in cash but I insist that the federal government is going to live up to its obligations that it made," she said.

Richards said she will meet next week with Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary and possibly President Clinton on where to go from here.

She said federal energy officials must report on how to maximize the value of what has been constructed so far, including the feasibility of using super collider assets in pursuit of an international high physics project.

Richards criticized Congress' vote to kill the project, saying it was targeted by members who wanted to be able to prove they were cutting the budget by pulling the plug on the $11 billion atom smasher.

71 early votes cast here

A total of 71 votes had been cast by Friday afternoon in Deaf Smith County for the Nov. 2 constitutional amendment election.

Early voting on the amendments will continue through Friday at 5 p.m. in the Deaf Smith County Clerk's office.

Texas voters will decide on 16 amendments, some related to local issues in other parts of the state, in the election.

Attracting the most attention statewide is an amendment that specifies that no tax on personal income may be levied by the state without voter approval.

Keywanettes float

Members of the Hereford High School Key Club and Keywanettes "Jazz it up" aboard their Mardi Gras float in the Homecoming Parade Friday. The group was dressed in New Orleans-style clothing in keeping with the Mardi Gras theme of the parade.

Group opposes Smith building acquisition

Trustees deny request for more debate on purchase

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

Since the Hereford Independent School District has already made the decision to purchase the Smith building, a request by the Hereford chapter of United We Stand America to discuss the issue at next Tuesday's board meeting has been turned down, it was announced Friday by Supt. Charles Greenawalt.

The board's decision was outlined in a letter to Charles Ward, UWSA acting chairman, who had delivered the group's request to Greenawalt Thursday. Signed by 17 citizens at a UWSA meeting, the group asked to be placed on the agenda to discuss six specific items in connection with the building purchase decision.

In the letter of response, Greenawalt stated, in part: "If you wish to have these items considered at another meeting, you can address the Board of Trustees during the agenda item Public Comments. If a board member makes a motion to consider these items, with a second, a vote will be taken thereon.

"Once the Board votes to put these items on the agenda, then they will be on the agenda at the next meeting. These items cannot be discussed at the Oct. 26, 1993, meeting, however, as the only thing that can be discussed at the Oct. 26 meeting is whether or not to place the requested items on the next agenda."

Although the state open meetings law and board bylaws spell out the process for agenda items, Ward said Friday that "it sounds like a ploy to stall for time by not allowing us to be on the agenda for Tuesday."

Ward added that UWSA members would attend the board meeting Tuesday night for public comment. "We urge citizens--whether they oppose or favor the issue--to attend the board meeting Tuesday night. Everyone's input is important."

Of the six items requested to be discussed, five dealt with the building purchase and one with alleged violations of parliamentary procedure at board meetings.

The specific items which were requested for discussion included: 1) Abandon the purchase of the Smith building; 2) Failing this, put the decision as to whether or not the school district may use the Smith building to a vote of district patrons; 3) Then, if the purchase was completed.

Agenda released for Tuesday school meet

The Hereford Independent School District board of trustees have announced the agenda for their regular October monthly meeting, to be held at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 26, in the school administration building, 136 Avenue F.

The session is open to the public and will include a public comment time during the course of the meeting.

Heading the agenda are two public hearings, one to take comment on student performance at Bluebonnet Intermediate School and Hereford Junior High School, and one to hear about the 1992-93 Academic Excellence Indicator System report.

The student performance hearing was required after the Texas Education Agency notified HISD officials that test scores at the two schools did not meet state standards and must be improved or the schools will be labeled as low-performing next year.

The TEA requires the hearing to allow the district to explain a plan to improve the scores and what sanctions may be imposed if that improvement is not reported.

The AEIS hearing regards the report, which was recently received by the district.

The report is a summary of the school district's overall performance during the 1992-93 school year. This annual report also compares HISD with all schools statewide and with schools that are Hereford's size and have a similar ethnic makeup.

Copies of the report will be available to the public at the meeting.

Also on the agenda for Tuesday's meeting is consideration of a resolution to execute contract of sale for purchase of property.

At their meeting last month, trustees voted to purchase the vacant Smith Building to use as an administration building and central warehouse.

The resolution will enable the district to complete the sale.

Other agenda items include:

- Walcott transfers.
- Campus improvement plans.
- An energy management report.
- Discussion of a proposed Parks and Recreation Board.
- Discussion of the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District board of directors.
- Consideration of bids for high school language labs.
- Reports from Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt and the three assistant superintendents.

Chevron station has grand opening

Conway Oil held a grand opening for the newly-remodeled and enlarged station at US-385 and Moreman Friday afternoon. Ed Lacey, with scissors at left, manager of Conway, is assisted by employees at the ribbon-cutting ceremony. The chamber's Hustlers and KPAN Radio were involved in the event. The station also features a convenience store and brushless carwash.

Co-defendant says Hutchison lied about his political work at state treasury office

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A co-defendant of Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison says he wants to cooperate with prosecutors and clarify that the then-state treasurer lied to investigators about his political work at the state agency, according to a copyrighted story by the Houston Chronicle.

David Criss said late Friday that he'd been hurt by the fact that he didn't cooperate last summer with Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle, the paper reported in Saturday editions.

"I won't be the scapegoat any more," Criss said.

"Last time, I sat on my hands and I didn't talk," he said. "This time, I plan to talk about what happened at the Treasury and I plan to talk about all the matters involving this investigation, and I'm hoping that Mr. Earle will see that as cooperation."

Criss resigned from his $52,000-a-year job as planning director for the Treasury last year after admitting he'd done political work for Hutchison on state time.

Criss said Mrs. Hutchison hadn't told investigators the truth about his activities at the Treasury.

"Kay Hutchison lied when she said she didn't know what I was doing," he said.

Mrs. Hutchison, 50, was indicted last month on charges of using her previous office of state treasurer for personal and political gain, then destroying records as part of coverup.

She denies any wrongdoing, saying the charges are aimed at hurting her 1994 re-election bid. Mrs. Hutchison is a Republican; Earle is a Democrat. Earle denies her claim.

Mrs. Hutchison's attorney, Dick DeGuerin of Houston, said Criss is "dead wrong."

"Maybe he doesn't understand what she said," DeGuerin said. "Clearly, in all of her statements ... she said clearly she knew that David Criss did non-state work."

"In fact, he was talented at stuff like that, but he was supposed to be doing it on his own," he said. "She has never said she didn't know he was doing any political work at all. Once the problem came up, they figured out what the cost was as close as they could. He repaid that cost and he resigned. Now, he may be bitter about that, and I would expect that he is."

Neither Criss nor his attorney, Charles Burton of Austin, has contacted the district attorney's office, officials said.

"Anything along those lines, we would be in touch with his attorney," said Assistant District Attorney Darla Espinoza. So far, that hasn't come up in their conversations, she said.

A message left at Burton's residence Friday night was not immediately returned to The Associated Press.

Earlier Friday, Earle said he is moving to drop pending ethics charges against Mrs. Hutchison. But the prosecutor also said he plans to seek new indictments from a second grand jury.

The senator's spokesman, David Beckwith, called the action "a wan effort to justify further delay."

Author to tell about early Texas at local schools

Students in four Hereford schools will have the opportunity Monday and Tuesday to meet an author whose books tell about the early days of Texas.

Maurine Walpole Liles of Floresville will visit students at West Central Intermediate and Hereford Junior High Monday. Tuesday, she will appear at Shirley and Bluebonnet Intermediate Schools.

The author of Rebecca of Blossom Prairie, she will appear dressed as the title character and do a dramatic presentation of one or more of her novels.

Liles is the great-great niece of Rebecca Walpole Garner who was the grandmother of John Nance Garner

IV, who served as vice president of the United States for two terms.

Her visit in Hereford is hosted by library media specialists at the schools where she will appear, including Bera Boyd, Karen Solomon, Dee Ann Matthews and Susan Cardinal.

A life science teacher in public and private schools for a number of years, Liles holds a bachelor's degree from Texas Christian University. She also is certified as a cytotechnologist and histology technician by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists.

Liles has written sequels, Kitty of Blossom Prairie and The Boy of Blossom Prairie Who Became Vice President, to Rebecca of Blossom Prairie.

Cattle futures rally ahead of ag report

By the Associated Press

Cattle futures rallied Friday ahead of an Agriculture Department report showing fewer animals coming to market than expected.

Live cattle for delivery in October gained .48 cent and settled at 74.25 cents a pound; October feeder cattle were .15 cent higher at 85.50 cents a pound; October hogs were 1.45 cents lower at 45.95 cents a pound; and February pork bellies were .50 cent higher at 57.97 cents a pound.

Lumber futures, responding to a strong cash market, gained the daily limit for the second consecutive session.

The lumber delivery for November at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange gained $10 and settled at $348.10 per 1,000 board feet.

Grain and soybean futures prices retreated on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat for delivery in December lost 3 1/2 cents and settled at $3.35 1/2 a bushel; December corn was 2 1/4 cents lower at $2.53 1/2 a bushel; December oats were 1 1/2 cents lower at $1.38 1/2 a bushel; and November soybeans were 2 cents lower at $6.21 1/2 a bushel.

Profit taking sent precious metals lower on New York's Commodity Exchange.

Gold for delivery in December lost $1.50 and settled at $371.30 a troy ounce; and December silver was 7.5 cents lower at $4.455 a troy ounce.

Gasoline futures were sharply lower and most other energy futures also declined at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Blood bank in Hereford Wednesday

The Blood Bank will be in Hereford on Wednesday, Oct. 27, from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Donors who gave blood on Sept. 8 at Hereford Auto Center will not be eligible to give as not enough time has elapsed since that donation.

According to organizers, 179 people gave blood at the September drive.

Kitty Weidauer, assistant manager of mobile resources for Coffee Memorial Blood Center in Amarillo, said the blood drives in Hereford have become a vital part of the Community Lifeblood, which in turn enables someone in need of blood to receive it.

The regular blood drives are sponsored by the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

Child Care Food Program conducted by council here

The Texas Migrant Council Inc. has announced its sponsorship of the Child Care Food Program.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Remember—"Children are the living messages we send to a time we will not see."—Mick Stevens.

Stevens is a Hereford graduate, (his father was superintendent here in the early 60's), and a professor at WT in Canyon. If you missed his editorial in the Amarillo paper on Sunday, it would be worth your time to read it!

Take note, David Ruland. When Junior Historians "went to the polls" to elect officers, they had a 95.2% of their members registering and voting! Due to this turn-out, a run-off election in three positions is necessary, so final results will not be reported until later this week. Candidates made campaign speeches and spent time on posters to gain votes.

Seventh and eighth grade PACE students have completed their study of The House of Seven Gables and of Treasure Island with various projects, many of which are on display in the library. Some of these will be on display during Education Fair, also.

Projects included a model of the Sugar Cube Ship done by Andrew Del Toro; The house of seven gables by Brandon Stow; a life-size pirate by Jamie Steiert; a paper mache ship by Chris Cory, Carey Lyles and Matthew Irish; a pirate newspaper by Jamie Steiert and Jessica Wuerflein; pirate meal from the Black Spot Cafe hosted by Kitt Wimberly and Laurie Gilbert and a "rap" written and performed by Andrew Carr.

Students recognized for doing a fantastic job in the area of the President's Challenge on Physical Fitness and Sports are Ramiro Zapata, Jose Villarreal, Chris Ortiz, Miguel Sanchez, Robert Chavarria, Johnny Cavazos and Albert Chavarria. These young men scored above the 50th percentile on the five test items which are the One Mile Run, Curl-ups, Sit and Reach, Shuttle Run and Pull-ups. These students are in Coach Nino and Coach Perez' P.E. Classes. Congratulations to each one!

Teachers are working daily to prepare students for the TAAS testing which will be given next spring. TEA continues to do things to the dismay of teachers and entire school systems, but now they've really done it! Actually, this act is on the verge of sacrilege. Due to a conflict with the scheduling of the not so beloved TAAS student tests, the TEA has rescheduled Texas Public Schools Weed for 1994. Historically, the event has been held during the first full week of March. However, in 1994, TPSW will be observed February 28 through March 4. Will Christmas be next for TEA to change?

Textbooks have TAAS practice in each unit and teachers will be exposing students to other help in this area. In fact, teachers are meeting in subject areas, attending workshops and trying every means possible to help students to attain their potential.

However, (to quote Stevens again), "Do our children and grandchildren deserve an opportunity for a quality education, or will we continue to measure success on how well students perform on some obscure state-mandated tests? Why do we continue to treat only the symptoms of the problems with education and not the problems themselves?"

Every citizen should contact those in Austin who "make the rules", and do so on a regular basis!

Chamberlain on task force

Hereford Regional Medical Center (HRMC) pharmacist Rita Chamberlain has been appointed to a task force to study pharmacy practice in small hospitals, according to Ron Rives, CEO of HRMC.

The task force, appointed by the Texas Society of Hospital Pharmacists (TSHP), is preparing a report for that board. The task force is charged with identifying the needs of pharmacists practicing in small hospitals, recommending methods by which TSHP can better serve the needs, and recommending a way to communicate the findings to all concerned.

"The hospital pharmacist is responsible for dispensing all medications to hospital patients as prescribed by the physicians," Chamberlain explained. "We must review drug therapy and serve as an integral part of the patient care team. Pharmacists in small hospitals face some unique challenges because of small staffs, economic conditions, lack of specialized resources, and higher drug acquisition costs."

Texas Pharmacy Week is being observed Oct. 24-30, and Chamberlain said "hospital pharmacists are pledged to make a difference in healthcare."

Focus on Your City

By BOB JOSSEERAND
Mayor, City of Hereford

BREAKFAST WITH THE MAYOR!! Come join me at the Ranch House Restaurant on Friday, Oct. 29, at 7 a.m. for a dutch-treat breakfast. I really encourage you to come visit if you have any questions about the direction the City is going, or what our projects happen to be.

If you have suggestions for the City you would like to see carried out, or if you have anything pertaining to City government, wake up a little earlier and come to breakfast.

You may think we are repeating ourselves way too often with some of this, but I think it's important that the citizens of Hereford know where we are headed on various projects, so you probably are getting an overdose. Please bear with me as I review some of the steps we have taken recently.

The number one item, of course, is our moving ahead with providing water for the City. Our $3 million bond issue has been sold, we will have money next month and we immediately will begin drilling a deep well into the Santa Rosa formation, some shallower wells into the Ogallala formation and the construction of a new million-gallon storage facility.

We will continue to move as rapidly as possible to get two more Santa Rosa Wells down as well as several Ogallala wells. I don't know about you, but to me, this is a very exciting project and one which we certainly need.

City parks are high on our agenda right now. We're going to take a hard look at picnic shelters, a portable bandstand, additional picnic tables, jogging paths and, hopefully, planting a lot more trees. I encourage you, if you have suggestions for park improvement, contact one of our City Commissioners, the City Manager or me. We really would like your input.

The swimming pool is moving ahead; however, right now we're waiting on engineering and architectural drawings before we can hold further meetings to discuss any possible citizen input. We probably will not have the pool completed by swimming season next year, but we should be too long after that.

There has been some positive response from all those involved in the pool planning so far and, if you have thoughts or suggestions, please express them to us.

Again, let me encourage you to come for Breakfast with the Mayor, and as always, I welcome your suggestions for a better City of Hereford.

The newly-formed local chapter of United We Stand America(UWSA) is still questioning the Hereford Independent School District's decision to purchase the Smith building. A news article on the latest developments can be found on Page 1 of this issue.

Since the UWSA group and some citizens are also questioning the manner in which school board meetings are conducted, we decided to research the state open meetings law and HISD board bylaws to explain the rules governing these meetings.

First, it's simple to make comments to the school board. Show up at a regular meeting and sign up for the "public comment" time as you enter, indicating the topic on which you wish to speak.

If you wish to be included on the official board meeting agenda, it's not quite as simple. Contact the board president or superintendent to request an item be placed on the agenda. The agenda for a meeting is, as a final matter, within the discretion and control of the board. And, the board can refuse to place an item on the agenda.

The state's open meeting law provides that a board may not deliberate, discuss, or make any decision on any subject not on the agenda. Specific factual information or reading of existing policy may be furnished in response to inquiries.

Actual discussion about an agenda item may come only after it has been properly posted for 72 hours as required by the open meetings law. If the board of trustees refuses to place it on the agenda, then that settles the matter.

The following rules and policies are listed in school board bylaws:

The agenda shall be prepared under the direction of the superintendent with the advice and consent of the president of the board. Any board member may place an item on the agenda.

The agenda for meetings of the board normally will be closed at noon of the fifth calendar day preceding regular meetings and at noon of the third calendar day preceding special meetings. Regular meetings shall be held on the fourth Tuesday of each month at 6 p.m., unless otherwise provided by the board.

At regular board meetings the board shall allot 30 minutes to hear persons who desire to make comments to the board. Persons who wish to participate in this portion of the meeting shall sign up as they arrive, indicating the topic about which they wish to speak. No presentation shall exceed five minutes. Delegations of five or more persons shall appoint one person to present their views before the board.

During comment time, if a person requests deliberation on a topic, the board cannot, under the open meetings law, discuss the item. It can decide whether or not to put it on the next agenda for discussion.

Public participation is limited to the designated open forum portion of a meeting. At all other times during board meetings, the audience shall not enter into discussion or debate on matters being considered by the board.

If the superintendent or board president won't put a requested item on the agenda, the trustee wanting that item on the agenda can make a motion at the next meeting that the item be placed on the next agenda. It is then up to the board whether they want that item to be placed on the agenda.

Discussions shall be addressed to the president of the board and then the entire membership. Discussion shall be directed solely to the business currently under deliberation, and the board president shall halt discussion that does not apply to the business before the board.

The board president shall also halt discussion if the board has agreed to a time limitation for discussion of an item and that time limit has expired. Aside from these limitations, the president shall not interfere with debate so long as members wish to address themselves to an item under consideration.

Happy Homecoming!

Now you need to realize that it is kind of strange for me to wish people a Happy Homecoming -- even to celebrate it at all -- because this is the first homecoming season I have spent in a small town.

You see, growing up in a large city like Albuquerque, which at the time I was in school had 10 public high schools plus something like five private schools, there was not a real sense of community surrounding the schools to begin with.

Then, the high schools I attended were rather large (my graduating class was 717 people, which would equal two years' output of Hereford High School!), which kind of made intimate celebrations somewhat difficult to have.

Oh, sure, we had a homecoming game and I'm sure I played in the band for those games my sophomore and junior years. It's just that homecoming was not a community EVENT. It was something that happened simply because it had always happened.

That's why it is so novel to me to come into a community where people decorate their businesses for Homecoming, where there is a parade through the middle of town and everyone gets excited about The Game.

When I was in high school, the band attended the home games and the cheerleaders were there. Some of the students attended, but there were not that many other people in the stands and the stadium was not all that full.

Here, I am asked several times through the week if I am going to the game, or if I have "my tickets" yet.

All in all, I like the idea of the entire community getting involved in the high school activities.

Homecoming is a positive celebration. It takes our minds off the more negative images associated with public schools -- such as juvenile problems, crime, gangs, teen pregnancy, test scores, etc. -- and focuses them on a football game.

So, I hope everyone made sure to go to the game -- or at least listen to it on the radio -- and let the Hustlin' Herd know you supported them.

(Since this was written Thursday, I don't know how the game turned out, but we hope for the best).

Speaking of school-related news, I don't know how many of you heard about the controversy brewing in the Hempstead school district near Austin.

Seems four young "ladies" on the Hempstead High School cheerleading squad went out and got themselves pregnant.

Well, the mean old school administration had the gall to kick them off the cheerleading squad (probably over some silly argument that the mini skirts, tight panties and letter sweaters don't come in maternity sizes!).

Anyway, now everyone is all up in arms over the cruel way these poor innocent girls were treated.

The National Organization of Women (you know, the one headed by the woman with a husband and a lesbian lover?) is screaming discrimination.

They say that Title IX of the federal 1972 Education Amendments prohibits discriminating against pregnant students and that the girls (one of whom has since had an abortion and been welcomed back to the squad with open arms) should be allowed back on the squad.

Seems to me that someone there is losing sight of the basic problem, which is that there are three girls out there who are facing a whole lot more trouble than just not fitting into their mini-skirts and sweaters.

These are girls who now must take on the responsibility of raising a child -- even though they did not have the responsibility in the first place to abstain from sex or use birth control methods to avoid pregnancy.

Seems like they have a lot more facing them in the next several months than making sure they get to games on time and remembering which cheers are which.

An AP news analysis

Health care plan

By KAREN BALL

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - It's a given that Congress won't act on health care until well into 1994, guaranteeing election-year politics will come into play. What's unclear is whether that helps or hurts the prospect of the president getting his plan passed.

Some supporters of President Clinton's plan are wary, arguing that as November 1994 draws closer, lawmakers may be less likely to approve a bill that could mean tough choices and sacrifice -- at least in the short run -- for their constituents. And no one's going to want to stick around Washington when they could be home campaigning.

Others say lawmakers, well aware that many voters put health care at the top of their worry list, will be eager to take home a trophy -- such as the passage of health reform -- to prove they deserve a return trip to Washington.

"Everyone's going to want to run on this issue, for or against," said Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., who predicts Congress will act by August 1994. "They'll want to say it was a great idea and I tried to help you, or it was a rotten idea and I tried to save you from it."

The White House is banking on the election-year to help. "Majorities of both parties cannot go home and face voters one more time without doing something on health care," said Paul Begala, a Clinton political aide.

Timing seems to be on everyone's mind.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, is so troubled about the plan bogging down he sent House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., a letter complaining about the leadership not yet having a game plan for proceeding.

Dingell urged Foley to assign Clinton's bill in an orderly fashion -- with deadlines for action -- to all the relevant committees. Lacking such a strategy will render the process "so chaotic," Dingell said, it will "destroy any opportunity" to pass a serious bill next year.

"I think the speaker was appalled at what has to be done in the time frame he's got to deal with," Dingell said in an interview, noting that the White House hasn't even finished drafting the legislation yet. "Overwhelmed? No, I'm not overwhelmed yet, but I will be if we don't get to start on it soon."

But the idea of deadlines has gotten a cool reception from other key players, such as Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

And House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., whose committee may get into friction over jurisdiction with Dingell's panel -- has said he won't go along with deadlines. Lawmakers only set themselves up for failure and criticism if they set deadlines, Rostenkowski argues.

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Oct. 14

Wichita Falls Times Record News on Medicaid:

The myopic view of the Potomac River gang has come clearly into focus once again from the perspective of the taxpayer and again, it isn't a pretty picture.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock is leading the charge to show Congress that one facet of the budget act passed in September should have been scratched from the race before it could come out of the gate and pull up lame.

Bullock's ire is raised by a provision that orders states to see recovery of nursing home costs from the estates of deceased Medicaid recipients.

... This ill-conceived idea is one more case of the federal government mandating a program that will do nothing but add an additional expense to state government, an expense that stands little chance of recouping any tangible amount of revenue.

Bullock estimates that just setting up the bureaucracy needed to implement the program could cost as much as half a million dollars and could show nothing in return.

Putting the squeeze on citizens who are already so poor that they need governmental assistance to provide even basic health and residence services is a poor way to say to the taxpayer, "See, we're trying to make government more cost efficient."

Oct. 18

The Monitor (McAllen) on Somalia:

Why March 31? Why not Jan. 1? Or even better Nov. 1?

Somehow President Clinton apparently thinks the good guys can beat the bad guys in Somalia before March 31, allowing U.S. troops to hold their heads high when they end their "humanitarian" mission. U.S. troops haven't made much headway in trying to bring peace and stability to this African nation since they arrived last December.

Missing from all the recent discussion over the timetable for withdrawal has been any official pronouncements about what compelling national interest might be served by keeping U.S. troops in Somalia. Our armed forces exist to protect our national interests, not to serve as a global social services agency.

Too bad the Senate wouldn't bite the bullet and force the president to bring the troops home more rapidly. No more Americans should have to give their lives to carry out a mission that lacks any clear objective.

Oct. 15

Pecos Enterprise on communications merger:

Danger for the American consumer lurks behind the announced merger of Bell Atlantic Corp. and cable TV giant Tele-Communications Inc.

The danger is combining two monopolies into one, giving them more power and money to extend their monopoly over consumers, controlling prices and access to information.

In announcing the merger, it was noted that the two companies will combine extensive programming resources of the world's largest cable company with the regional phone company's expertise in two-way communications.

It's the start of what telephone companies have long dreamed and have been gearing up to do for some time. They want to build a super highway of information, providing telephone, interactive television cable, news and advertising as well as bill paying and shopping.

We're not sure of the demand just yet for such a system nor of the ability of the public to access all that is available.

But, the main danger and a really big problem is they will have sole control of what we can see, hear and read with vast capital resources that would possibly overwhelm competition. This is something that regulators, including Congress, need to look at very carefully.

Oct. 15

San Antonio Express-News on Henry B. Gonzalez and Federal Reserve:

Like Don Quixote, House Banking Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio is tilting at another windmill, the Federal Reserve Board.

... Gonzalez wants the 12-member Fed board's secret meetings recorded. He wants the board opened to minorities and women and put under congressional oversight, including Senate confirmation of board members.

While that sounds very democratic, the Fed is a peculiar bird. It needs less, not more, oversight. Often, it must act quickly and decisively.

For example, the day after the stock market crashed on Oct. 19, 1987, Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan announced the board would infuse enough currency into the banking system to avoid a cash shortage.

It isn't perfect, and may be too independent for a consumer watchdog like Gonzalez. But it must be above politics to do its job properly, and for now, we'd rather see bankers setting fiscal policy than members of Congress.

Oct. 15

Temple Daily Telegram on INS:

Attorney General Janet Reno said so herself: The Immigration and Naturalization Service is a "stepchild" agency. The problems surrounding illegal immigration have been ignored by Washington for such a long time that the INS receives little direction from the capital.

It should be no surprise, then, that Attorney General Reno didn't know about the so-called border blockade by the U.S. Border Patrol in El Paso, Texas, before it happened. The Border Patrol is a branch of the INS, which is under the Justice Department.

That Washington knew nothing about the blockade, which had political reverberations in the United States and Mexico, is astounding. It shows a singular lack of concern and communication between the top levels of the Justice Department and Border Patrol agents in the field.

Haiti's civilian government tries to avoid showdown

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haiti's weak civilian government worked Friday to avoid another showdown with the powerful military, this time over gasoline.

In Washington, the U.S. government blocked the American assets of 41 leading Haitians who either participated in the coup that toppled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide or have worked to block his return.

The gas crisis came just eight days before a deadline for the return of Aristide under a U.N. peace plan. The oil and arms blockade was imposed by the United Nations to force the military to yield power.

All sides doubt that the elected president can return by Oct. 30.

The government-military showdown started when Texaco joined Shell and Esso in closing its pumps in line with the international oil embargo.

Malval told reporters he would ask the oil companies to request an exemption to the embargo to allow sales of oil stocks. He said he would make the request himself when meeting at the United Nations next week.

It was not known if Malval's offer would be accepted. It contradicted his earlier statements that he told the military that shutting the gas stations "was none of the government's business."

The military accused Malval's government of conspiring with Aristide to increase hardship on Haiti's people. It threatened to use force to get gas flowing immediately and posted soldiers at the few gas stations still open.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said Washington will view "extremely seriously" any attempt by the Haitian army to provide gas by seizing foreign-owned gas depots.

A conservative businessman with army ties, Jean-Claude Roy, dismissed Malval's offer as a ploy and accused Malval and Aristide of orchestrating the shutdown.

"Before yesterday, the only country not taking part in the worldwide embargo was Haiti. Now Haiti has joined the gang. It is imposing the embargo on itself," Roy said.

Army commander Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras has demanded the distributors open the fuel tanks. Unless they do, the nation could be out of all but black-market gas by the weekend. That would disrupt aid deliveries, cause price increases and shut down businesses.

"We have little margin for error," said Chris Conrad, who runs operations in Haiti for CARE, which feeds 620,000 of the nation's 6.5 million people daily. If the shutdown goes on for two weeks, "we'll be in our meltdown phase."

An army spokesman, Col. Jean-Robert Gabriel, told The Associated Press that Cedras hoped to settle the issue "through dialogue."

Shell and Esso stations looked deserted, although a few independent stations were open. At a few Texaco stations with remaining fuel, dozens of cars lined up, and motorists fumed under the midday Caribbean sun.

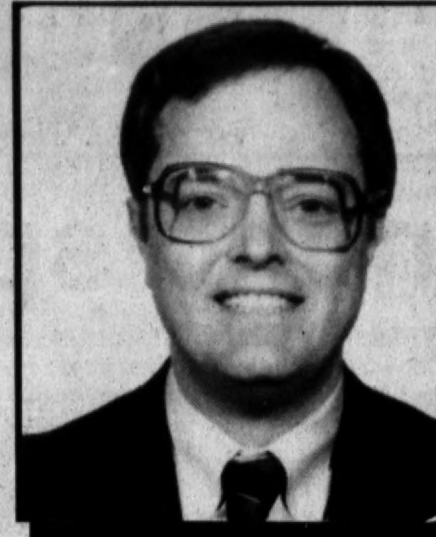

"Is this a country? Only God can save us!" said an idled driver of a colorful jitney, known locally as a tap-tap.

Refusing to give his name, the 40-year-old driver, about 10 cars from the pumps of a Texaco station, said he paid $2 a gallon on the black market for diesel fuel Thursday night, up from the open pump price of $1.30.

At the pumps were two khaki-clad soldiers with automatic weapons. At another Texaco station at the intersection of John Brown and Martin Luther King Jr. avenues, four police and soldiers with automatic weapons stood guard.

Soldiers tried to keep lines at the pumps moving and maintain order, and also were on duty to keep the stations open. Some went to closed stations to try to get them to open.

In Washington, the Foreign Assets Control Office seized the U.S. assets of Cedras; the army's No. 3 officer, Gen. Philippe Biamby; and 39 other soldiers and right-wing leaders who either participated in the Sept. 1991 coup that toppled Aristide or have worked to block his return.

Herd Homecoming spoiled by Pampa outburst

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Hereford's football team charged out of the gate and had a 12-0 lead before some in the large Homecoming crowd found their seats Friday night in Whiteface Stadium.

Turnovers killed the Herd's momentum, though. Pampa wrapped quick touchdowns on either side of halftime to turn the game around into a 42-12 win for the Harvesters.

"We turned the ball over in the second half right off the bat," Hereford coach Danny Haney said. "We turned it over on our first possession. We turned it over on our (third) possession. That'll kill you."

The game started with great promise for Hereford. On the third play of the game, Hereford tailback Marquise Brown took a pitch right, made a cut and sprinted 62 yards for a touchdown. Terance High's extra point kick was blocked.

On Pampa's first play from scrimmage--following J.J. Mathis' 38-yard kickoff return past midfield--the ball slipped out of quarterback Tony Cavalier's hands and Hereford's Mark Kuper fell on it at the Hereford 46.

This time Hereford traveled by air, as quarterback Elias Reyna hit Marc Haney for 11 yards on third down, then found Hayden Andrews for a 33-yard bomb. Then, on fourth-down-and-goal, Reyna pitched to Brown, who threw to tight end Kuper in the end zone. Reyna's pass for two points was intercepted, but Hereford led 12-0 with only 3:16 elapsed.

Pampa fumbled again on its next possession, as tailback Greg Moore couldn't control a handoff from Cavalier. Hereford's Jacob Lopez recovered at the Hereford 45.

That's where it all went bad for the Herd. After a 16-yard pass from Reyna to Kuper set the Herd up at the Pampa 35, Reyna fumbled the snap and Pampa recovered.

A 16-yard run by tailback Greg Moore started a nine-play, 63-yard touchdown drive. Cavalier capped the drive with a three-yard keeper, sliding through Hereford defenders at the goal line.

"He's a dadgum jitterbug," Kuper said of the small, quick-footed Pampa quarterback. He ran for 66 yards and threw for 196, often after long scrambles.

Tim McCavit's kick cut the Hereford lead to 12-7 with 2:05 left in the first quarter.

Hereford's tried to answer, but its next drive stalled at the Pampa 28. Haney called a timeout to call the right play on a fourth-and-seven situation. The Herd didn't get back to the line quick enough and was called for a five-yard delay of game penalty.

"I didn't hear him call for us," Haney said. "He set the ball before I knew it."

Hereford still was going to go for it on fourth-and-12, but an illegal procedure penalty moved the ball back another five yards, forcing Hereford to punt.

Pampa took the touchback and drove 80 yards in seven plays for the go-ahead score. The Harvesters were helped by a 16-yard run by Mathis, a freshman, on a reverse, then by two more Hereford penalties.

For the touchdown, Cavalier hit Derahian Evans with a short pass and Evans shook a high tackle near the Hereford 30 and ran untouched the rest of the way to the end zone.

McCavit's kick--he was perfect on six extra point tries--gave Pampa a 14-12 lead with 7:48 left in the second quarter.

On Hereford previous drive, a 15-yard run by Brown on the next-to-last play of the first quarter was good for a first down. It would be the last first down Hereford would get until the fourth quarter.

The two traded punts in the second quarter. A 35-yarder by Cameron Betzen--his shortest of the evening--pinned Pampa at its own seven-yard line with 3:40 left.

The Harvesters weren't interested in taking it easy and going into halftime with a 14-12. They drove, and a 16-yard pass from Cavalier to Mathis moved Pampa into Herd territory at the 44. A clipping penalty put Pampa in a first-and-27 hole, but a 12-yard run by Moore and a 15-yard reception by Mathis gave them just what they needed for a first down at the Hereford 34 with 17 seconds left in the half. Cavalier went long and found Greg McDaniel in the end zone for the TD, and Pampa took a 21-12 lead into the lockerroom. It didn't take long in the second-half for Pampa to pad its lead. On the first play of the second half, Moore ran 76 yards for a touchdown.

Suddenly Hereford trailed 28-12.

The teams traded fumbles in Hereford territory--by Brown and by Moore. After a Hereford punt, Pampa started another long scoring drive--61 yards on eight plays--capped by

Don't let him run

Hereford's Jacob Lopez (40) tries to keep containment on Pampa's shifty quarterback, Tony Cavalier. Pampa spoiled the Hereford Homecoming with a 42-12 win Friday at Whiteface Stadium.

Herd needs Borger to lose two games

All true Herd fans should be ready to pull for Pampa for the next two weeks and for Caprock in two weeks, because two losses by Borger and one more loss by Randall is the only way Hereford can get into the playoffs.

Hereford lost 42-12 to Pampa Friday.

"What this does is takes us out of controlling our own destiny," Hereford coach Danny Haney said. "We've got to depend on some other teams."

Friday night's other games in District 1-4A saw Randall upsetting Borger 27-6 in Borger and Dumas knocking off Caprock 40-21 in Amarillo.

The District 1-4A standings after Friday's games: Pampa, 3-0; Borger, 2-1; Randall, 2-1; Hereford 1-2; Dumas, 1-2; and Caprock, 0-3.

Hereford's win over Randall gives the Herd an advantage over Randall in a two-way tie, but Hereford's losses to Pampa and Borger, both by wide margins, would put the Herd at a disadvantage in any possible three-way ties for playoff berths.

Virtually the only hope for Hereford is this scenario: 1) Pampa wins out, beating Borger and Randall and claiming the outright district title at 5-0; 2) Hereford wins out, beating Caprock this week and Dumas the final week and finishing 3-2; and 3) Borger loses to Pampa and Caprock (that would be the tough part), finishing 2-3.

With a loss to Hereford in the final week, Dumas would have at least three losses, regardless of what happens in next week's Randall at Dumas game. A Randall loss to Pampa in the final week would be necessary to give Randall two losses--its loss to Hereford would break that two-way tie, making a Randall win over Dumas irrelevant.

There are many other possibilities if one or more of these games end in a tie--too many to list here--but if Caprock could just tie Borger, it would help Hereford.

DALLAS (AP) - Chances are, Odessa Permian coach Tam Hollingshead and Hart coach Danny Wilhelm are going to face some difficult questions this week about their latest game.

So, coach Hollingshead, why did you let your top-ranked 5A team settle for a 21-21 tie against district arch-rival Midland Lee - at home - when a risky two-point conversion would've given you the victory?

So, coach Wilhelm, how did your third-ranked team in Class 1A get wiped out 67-0 by Sudan?

Answers to those questions and more highlight the eighth - and, thus far, most exciting - weekend of high school football.

Exciting as in three of Class 5A's 10 best teams tying or three other ranked games pitting ranked teams or, wackiest of all, Sudan's thumping by three score and seven.

There also were more typical results, such as Class 3A's top-ranked Southlake Carroll racking up consecutive victory No. 69 - a dandy 55-0 whipping of Fort Worth Castleberry - and shutouts by the top teams in 2A and 1A.

No doubt the biggest game of the night was the Permian-Lee game, an annual grudge match of epic proportions.

Maybe that's why Hollingshead was willing to save face by letting Eric Stevenson kick an extra point with 15 seconds left instead of sending all-state running back John Williams plunging toward the goal line.

Williams had been successful at it all night, scoring from the 2 and twice from the 1. He had 171 yards on 29 carries and two lost fumbles, one of which led to a Lee score.

Hollingshead decided not to go with Williams or anyone else, instead rationalizing that a tie - Mo-Jo's first since 1990 - would do more for their chances at a district title and a playoff bid than a loss.

"No hesitation," Hollingshead said. "We didn't want a district loss. We were going for the tie."

They got it, and now the Panthers must beat district-leader Abilene Cooper, and San Angelo Central, to retain the 4-5A title.

Permian, however, is not likely to stick atop Class 5A. They'll probably yield the top spot to Dallas Carter, a 27-6 winner over Dallas Adams.

—YOUR EYES—

"PERFECT" 20/20?

When visual acuity is tested, what does 20/20 mean? Only that the eyes can see clearly at 20 feet what most normal eyes can. But many other visual skills are involved in seeing.

The familiar eye chart -- the one with the E on top -- is just the most basic vision test. Your optometrist is more thorough, and will measure other factors:

- Can you see clearly to read at arm's length? (near vision)
- Can you focus quickly from near vision to far and back again?
- Is side vision clear?
- Do two eyes focus together? Can you judge distances accurately?
- Can your eyes follow a moving object easily?

Where these visual skills are deficient, a person may experience problems like headaches, eye fatigue, or learning difficulties -- despite having 20/20 distance vision. That's why it's so important to see your optometrist for a thorough examination.

Ruiz cut in pro fight

A cut over the left eye stopped Hereford's Jaime Ruiz in the third round of his boxing match Wednesday in Mississippi.

"The blood got in my eye," Ruiz said. "I couldn't see. I couldn't see his right hand hitting me."

He was doing well up to that point, he said, even opening a cut above the eye of his opponent, Danny Aponte (9-0), in the second round.

Ruiz didn't get on television, though ESPN was broadcasting some of the bouts on his card. He said he warmed up "about five times" at the ESPN people's urging, but his fight didn't end up starting until after the cable sports network's telecast was off the air.

Ruiz falls to 3-2 in his professional career.

HERD

Moore's 26-yard run. Pampa led 35-12 with 4:36 left in the third quarter.

There was a big difference between Hereford's offense in the first quarter and it offense in the second and third--largely because the Herd's three fumbles came very early in drives.

Brown had 109 yards rushing in the first quarter; 58 the rest of the game. Reyna had 90 yards passing in the first quarter; 48 the rest of the game.

"We were blocking well, executing well. We weren't turning the ball over," Haney said of the first quarter success.

Pampa's success in the second and third quarters changed Hereford's offensive strategy for the worse.

"They scored two touchdowns," Haney said. "When you're down 35-12, you get out of your game plan. You've got to do different things."

Hereford stopped Pampa cold on two consecutive possessions, then the Herd drove to the Pampa eight-yard line. Reyna threw twice into the end zone but couldn't get a touchdown, and Hereford turned the ball over on downs with under 10 minutes left in the game.

Pampa then drove 92 yards in 11 plays for its final touchdown. The drive included five plays of 10 or more yards, and Floyd White went the final three yards.

It was a disappointing loss, the first Homecoming loss in a long time. Kuper, a senior and a captain, said the team would be back next week, though.

"This team's got a lot of pride," Kuper said. "I've got faith in these guys. They're not going to turn their backs; they're going to stick through it. We'll just keep our heads up and do our best from here on out."

Cowboys deny Emmitt-less games were played

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) - Some members of the defending Super Bowl champions don't believe they've lost a game this season. They figure owner Jerry Jones lost two by not having Emmitt Smith signed. Players like offensive guard Nate

Newton and wide receiver Michael Irvin claim 4-0 records as the Dallas Cowboys head into their second bye week of the season. "When we have no distractions, all the other teams have to answer to us," Newton said. "We're 4-0. The whole team is counting it that way." "We're 4-0," Irvin said. "I don't remember losing two games."

The Cowboys 26-17 victory over the San Francisco 49ers made their record officially 4-2 despite Newton's protest. Dallas trails the New York Giants by a game in the NFC East. Dallas comes back for a three-week stretch against divisional foes with a game at Philadelphia and then Texas Stadium matchups against the Giants and the Phoenix Cardinals.

"It's a difficult stretch that will help us see where we stack up in our division," Johnson said. "The Giants are playing at a high level. They're doing something that allows them to win games and that's running the football and stopping the run." "Philadelphia has the same record as us. They're very talented and with two weeks to get back on track we know they'll be ready for us at home. Phoenix showed what it can do against Washington. They're playing like a lot of people expected them to prior to the season."

Cowboys have quickly returned to form. In fact, Johnson said the team is better after six weeks than it was last year, although the team had an additional victory.

"I think we're playing better now," Johnson said. "I think we're further along. The San Francisco game was a test for us and we responded in a positive manner. That we could spot them seven points, come back, then lose the lead again and finally win the game like we did tells a lot about what this team can do in the future."

Johnson likes to talk about the "three phases" of the game: offense, defense and special teams. The coach gives the Cowboys high marks in those departments.

"We have an explosive offense, we are showing good balance on defense, and we have playmakers on the special teams and our punting and placekicking can't get much better," Johnson said.

Johnson puts extra emphasis on his special teams, which is one of the reasons why linebacker John Roper was cut when he was caught asleep during one of the film sessions.

"We expect certain things from our players," Johnson said.

While Johnson believes his team is playoff-bound, he stops short in saying the Cowboys should be considered the best in the NFL.

"It's too early to say we are the best," Johnson said. "It's a long season with a lot of games to play. I do feel we will win our division."

Bengals hope for TDs vs. Oilers

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - Cincinnati coach Dave Shula is seeing red over his team's winless start. Scoring inside the 20 (the red zone) has been a problem for the Bengals (0-6). They will still be looking for their first victory Sunday against the Houston Oilers in the AstroDome, where they are 0-8 since 1984.

"We've moved the ball pretty well but we haven't come away with touchdowns," Shula said. "We've been forced into turnovers or kicking field goals. Last week, we couldn't get in the end zone twice inside the 20."

Shula is trying to take a realistic approach in bailing the Bengals out of their third worst start ever.

"We haven't run the ball effectively at all," Shula said. "The only semblance we had was against Kansas City. Other than that, we haven't had any contribution out of the running at all."

"When you're forced to be one dimensional as on offense, it can be very limiting as to what you can get done."

The Bengals rushed 34 yards in last week's 28-17 loss to Cleveland. Shula doesn't want to take the Bengals No. 2 ranking in AFC pass defense out of perspective.

"Our pass defense started out where we were able to limit teams but at this point we're having problems against the run," Shula said. "Realistically, that's why we rank so high in pass defense. Teams haven't had to throw the ball."

Cincinnati ranks 26th in the NFL against the run.

Jay Schroeder will start at quarterback for injured David Klingler. Schroeder replaced Klingler last week and threw two touchdown passes against the Browns.

"We're a little frustrated, obviously, with all that we've been through," Schroeder said. "We've worked really hard in practice but we didn't play well last week."

"I think overall we've done some things good at certain times. Other things, we were doing well last week and not so well this week. We just have to put together a complete game. We haven't done that this year."

The Bengals can't match the Oilers for controversy. The Oilers ended a three-game losing streak with a 28-14 victory over New England last week that did nothing to restore calm.

Starting tackle David Williams was docked his $111,111 weekly pay check for skipping the game to be with his wife and newborn son.

Quarterback Warren Moon was benched for the game but came off the bench and directed the victory when Cody Carlson suffered a groin injury.

Wide receiver Haywood Jeffries and offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride got into a sideline shouting match in the second quarter.

Now they'll attempt to get momentum against the Bengals.

Coach Jack Pardee hopes Moon's brief stay on the bench will help him regain his touch.

"We never lost confidence in him to begin with," Pardee said. "We made the change because we had made turnovers but it wasn't putting the blame on Warren to begin with. He hadn't been perfect and no one else had either."

Despite their offensive problems, the Oilers rank No. 5 in the NFL in passing offense and 10th in total offense.

SWC may not be able to fill Alamo Bowl slot

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - The Southwest Conference is having a dismal football year but the worst insult could be just around the corner.

The league is guaranteed three bowl invitations but there is something written in the fine print. Under NCAA regulations, a school can't accept a bowl bid unless it has six victories against Division I-A competition.

The way it looks right now with six weeks left in the season only two SWC schools may make it. In a worst case scenario, there could be only one.

Too many non-conference losses have concocted a possible recipe for disaster.

Texas A&M with five victories appears on the way to either the Cotton Bowl or John Hancock Bowl. The Cotton Bowl takes the SWC champion and the Hancock in El Paso will take the second-place team. The Hancock Bowl pays out $1 million.

Also waiting out there for the SWC is an invitation from the Alamo Bowl, which has reserved a spot for the league's third-place team, and a $700,000 payday. Since all SWC teams share in the bowl profits, the league could ill afford to blow the bucks in this day of gender equity and increased women's scholarships in the athletic programs.

The Alamo Bowl, which pits the SWC against the fourth-place Pac-10 team, is making contingency plans. Officials have been scouting the surprising Louisville Cardinals. The pass-happy Cardinals would make an exciting team for San Antonio fans to watch. The Cardinals have a game at Texas A&M on Nov. 13.

Baylor appears to have the inside track to one of the bowls with four victories and games left against Texas Christian, Georgia Tech, Rice, and Texas.

Rice has four wins but only three count in the bowl formula. The Owls have to throw out their 14-13 victory over Division I-AA Sam Houston.

Rice has games left against Texas A&M, SMU, Baylor and Houston and must win three of them.

Texas Tech's 45-16 victory over Rice did severe damage to the Owls, who haven't been to a bowl since the 1960s.

"We raised a lot of expectations but that loss really hurt," said coach Fred Goldsmith.

Texas has only one win and must play road games at Texas A&M and Houston after a game on a neutral field Saturday in the Alamo Dome against Southern Methodist. The Longhorns also get Texas Tech, Baylor and TCU at home. If the Longhorns win five games, they will qualify for the NCAA standard.

Texas Tech and TCU have two victories each while SMU and Houston have won only one game. Bowl fever won't be gripping those campuses.

The league has been taking its lumps nationally for its 9-16-2 non-conference record which is one of the three worst all-time marks in league history. The league hasn't had a losing non-conference mark since it was 17-18 in 1988.

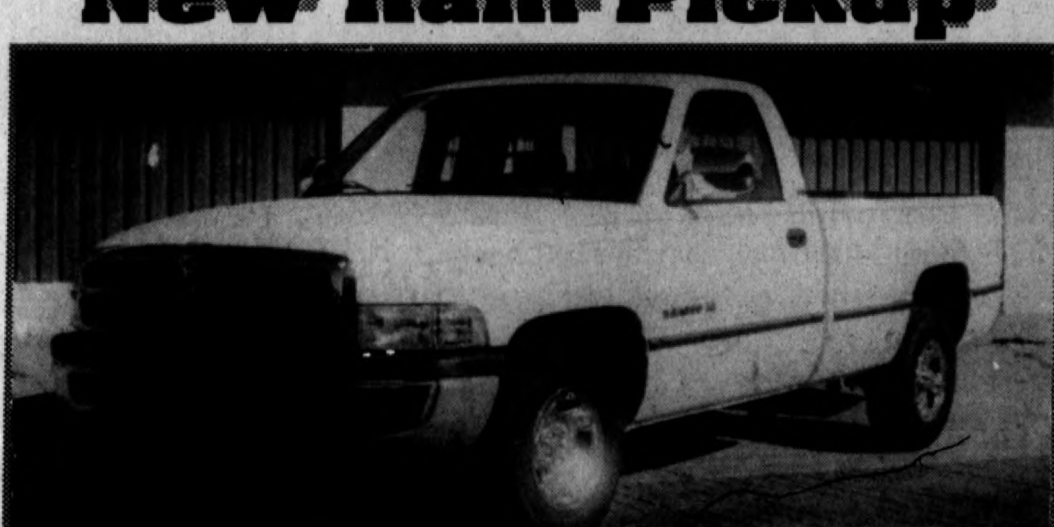

Filling a spot in the Alamo Bowl certainly didn't cross new commissioner Steve Hatchell's mind when he announced the affiliations this May at The Associated Press Sports Editors meeting in Austin.

"It's not something we worried about," Hatchell said. "But our down year in non-conference wins has hurt."

Nobody said Hatchell was going to have an easy job getting things going again in the SWC.

In this case, he's absolutely powerless.

More rainfall is crucial to Texas deer crop

AUSTIN (AP) - Here is a preview of Texas deer hunting conditions, prepared by Texas Parks and Wildlife:

Deer across Texas are in fair shape with most areas of the state receiving sufficient rainfall earlier in the year. Most of these same areas, however, went through extended dry spells and definitely need more rain before winter.

The spring rains helped with fawn production and antler development earlier this year and the drought should push more deer out into the open, inevitably improving hunter success this year.

"Overall, the Texas deer hunting season for white-tailed deer is going to be real good this year. There will be a lot of pleased hunters, a lot of successful hunters," said Butch Young of Hunt, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's white-tailed deer program leader. "For a good meat hunt, I would recommend the Edwards Plateau. For trophy animals, hunters should go to South Texas. Traditionally, that has been a big trophy area and it will be again this year."

Texas Parks and Wildlife biologists began their annual deer census in mid-July and results won't be complete until some time in late October. However, biologists who are conducting the field surveys are aware of current conditions in their particular area.

Panhandle

Once again timely rainfall produced suitable vegetation for the deer herd.

With much of the state in an extended drought, the Panhandle only began drying out the past three to four weeks, said Danny Swepston, TPWD wildlife biologist from Amarillo.

"Our numbers are fairly close to last year. We're expecting a good season," he said. "We're beginning to dry, but we haven't gone through a drought like most of the rest of the state. The numbers appear to be good, so I suspect we'll have a good year."

"Usually, if the deer are in good shape now, they will be in good shape during hunting season."

Swepston said the rainfall has helped in all areas. The deer are in good condition and the whitetail fawn crop is average, about 30 percent. Biologists also noticed some nice mule deer and whitetail racks during census counts.

"We've got a good antler crop. We've seen some pretty good deer. We had a good winter and the deer were in good shape through most of the summer when antler development is most important," he said.

Whitetails also are in good body condition. Timely rains have given the deer plenty to eat until now, when the winter wheat crop begins to come on. Swepston said a continued dry spell, though, will hurt the dry land wheat.

"It won't be a bumper year. I think if it continues drying, the deer will be moving into the wheat fields," he said. "We've come through in good shape."

Edwards Plateau

The number of deer seen in spotlight surveys is up, a noticeable amount in some counties, but a dry summer and fall will keep them from getting fat, said Max Traweck, TPWD wildlife biologist from Kerrville.

The fawn crop is average to above average. The quality of deer is not as good as last year - bucks are average to above average but antlerless deer are still thin. While some areas are having a good acorn crop of the Edwards Plateau is spotty.

"Most of the bucks look fairly good, but the old does are still fairly drawn," he said. "Last year we had a very good acorn crop and the deer were in good shape fatwise. This year they're not as fat. Most of the Plateau is still pretty dry."

Traweck said when the area has better than average conditions for deer, the counts tend to go down. "The deer are out there, you just can't see them. But they're in good shape." In dry years such as this more deer are seen during counts but they're not as fat.

"It ought to be a good year for hunters," he said. "They'll be visible and hitting the feeders. There's no shortage of deer. They're just not in as good shape."

Oak Prairie

As with most of the state, the Oak Prairie had good rainfall until the end of June. Late summer and fall drought will help hunter success but not the deer, said Bob Carroll, TPWD wildlife biologist in La Grange.

"Our counts are generally up this year. With no live oak acorns to speak of and with extra dry conditions, our counts usually are up," he said. "We're going to have probably one of our higher kills in recent years. It'll be a good year for the hunter."

While a lack of acorns and other foods are keeping the fat off whitetails, antler production should be fine. Carroll said good rainfall through June enabled the bucks to avoid any problems when the drought came.

The Oak Prairie region had an average fawn crop, about 25 percent to 30 percent in post oak habitat and 50 percent in live oak habitat.

Carroll said the deer are not very fat and they lost whatever fat they had on them. A continued dry spell could begin to hurt the population.

Pineywoods

Good early rainfall and intermittent rains during the summer helped the Pineywoods avoid severe drought conditions. Poor mast production and an extended dry spell this fall could lead to a long hard winter for deer.

Clayton Wolf, TPWD wildlife biologist in Jasper, said whitetail numbers in the Pineywoods appear to be up across the board, mostly adult deer. The fawn crop was a little lower than average (45 percent is average).

"Overall, we've had a decrease in the acorn crop over the last couple of years. It's probably below average; water and willow oaks are producing some," he said. "It ought to make hunting better. Deer will have to hunt harder to eat. Hunter success ought to be up to eat."

Wolf said the Pineywoods also had pretty good antler production this year. The region did not get dry until mid-July or August, which is late enough that antler growth was not affected.

Food plots may be a savior for deer. Landowners who have planted food plots may see more deer this year. Recent rains also will help cool-season forbs get started and some soft masting producers that are still producing.

"Overall, it seems like just when it would get dry, we would get rain. It couldn't come more frequently, but the summer wasn't as bad as it could have been," he said. "It will be tough on later arriving fawns."

"It'll be a good year if our harvest is up because with a low mast crop it could be a long winter for our deer."

Possum Kingdom

The deer outlook in the Possum Kingdom region is good for the region, but conditions differ depending on whether you're in the eastern or western half of the area.

The eastern half of the region, particularly Palo Pinto, Hood, Erath and Walker counties, is in good shape with an increase in the whitetail population, said Jim Dillard, TPWD wildlife biologist from Mineral Wells. "The fawn crop looks good and antlers are in pretty good shape prior to that period."

He said the acorn crop is turning out better than previously thought. "It's a pretty fair acorn year."

Dillard said the deer are in good shape. The area has gotten some good rain the past few weeks. "Our deer numbers seem to be holding well. They're maintaining a stable population. Harvest ought to be up." From San Angelo west to Big Lake, however, the whitetail population is down, due in part to a dry winter and spring, said Lee Miller, TPWD wildlife biologist in San Angelo.

"We had a low fawn crop. We probably even lost some deer. There were too many and not enough to eat."

During late summer counts Miller said biologists saw some good deer, just not in the same numbers as the past couple of years. A dry spring probably hurt the antler production.

"It should still be a good year. Things are greening up out here some. It's not as bad as it has been," he said. "A good acorn crop is helping the deer herd, but more rain is needed before winter. It's dry enough that it should help hunter success. Deer are coming through the feeders and probably should through the season unless we get a bunch more rain."

"This will be a good year to work on your antlerless deer numbers," Miller said. "You always have to be prepared for drought out here."

Post Oak Savannah

The Post Oak deer herd has been in decline for a few years and this year's herd is similar to last year's, said Nathan Garner, TPWD wildlife biologist from Tyler. The herd was hurt by dry conditions this summer and another low fawn crop.

"We had spotty cases of an increase in fawn production, but the fawn crop is basically the same as last year. It hasn't rebounded," he said. "We're in a habitat crisis."

Overgrazing and coastal bermudas are two of the factors blamed for the habitat crisis in the Post Oak. That combined with drought-like conditions has hurt the area.

Garner said the deer are lean and he doesn't anticipate a lot of body fat going into the season. There also is below average acorn production. "Later in the fall deer are going to be scrambling to find something to eat."

One thing he believes could help the deer herd is the Landowner Assisted Management Permit System. "We expect fewer does to be killed in the upper Post Oak. It might help turn the population around. LAMPS, along with habitat improvements, could help habitat improve."

South Texas

South Texas will be South Texas again this year. Last year was a record year for trophy bucks and this year could be an excellent year, too, although no one can say for sure how good. On the downside, a lack of rain in a couple of months will soon begin causing problems.

Jay Williams, TPWD wildlife biologist in San Antonio, said whitetail numbers are up in most of South Texas, as much as 15 percent in some areas. The fawn crop and antler production range from good to excellent because of good early rainfall.

"Fawns were on the ground before it quit raining," he said. "There are a lot of good bucks out there, too. We had good antler production."

Very little rain the past two months has hurt range conditions and, if South

Texas doesn't receive rain soon, could cause problems this winter.

"Conditions are fair but deteriorating fast. Unless we get some rain, we're in trouble," Williams said. "We're very dry. We need some rain right away so the range can begin recovering before winter. If we don't get any rain before winter, we're going to be in trouble."

Trans-Pecos

The Trans-Pecos region seems to be running opposite from most other areas of the state. Whereas most areas had early spring rains and an extended drought that began in the summer, this region had its drought early in the year, not receiving much rain until mid-summer, but doing fine since then.

The lack of rain in the spring hurt fawn production in mule deer and whitetails, said Mike Pittman, TPWD wildlife biologist from Fort Davis. The fawn crop in most areas of the Trans-Pecos is very low because of drought. In Terrell and Pecos counties, the whitetail population is down 30 percent - there are still plenty of deer in the area, he said.

"These deer are in pretty good condition now, with late summer rain," he said. "The deer seem to be going into winter in pretty good shape. The drought mainly affected reproduction."

The habitat is in good shape, he said. "There are still some places which haven't received much rain, but overall forage conditions are good."

The archery season runs through Oct. 31 statewide. The general whitetail season is Nov. 6-Jan. 2 for most of the state and Nov. 13-Jan. 9 in South Texas. The late South Texas antlerless only season is Jan. 15-30, the special South Texas (14 counties) season in Nov. 13-Jan. 16 and the special South Texas (14 counties) antlerless only season is Jan. 17-30. The general mule deer season is Nov. 20-Dec. 5 in the Panhandle and Nov. 27-Dec. 12 in the Trans-Pecos. For bag limits check your local county listing.

Who Was Better?

NEW YORK (AP) - Who was better, Man o' War or Secretariat? Lucien Laurin, trainer of Secretariat, commented on that when in New York for a celebration of the 20th anniversary of Secretariat's Triple Crown victory.

"I don't know," Laurin said. "But if they raced I know that Secretariat would have given Man o' War a run for his money. It was a long time between Man o' War's 3-year-old year, 1920, to Secretariat in 1973."

Habitat projects offered to landowners

Seven landowners in the Panhandle and South Plains have joined with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation to enhance wildlife habitat and provide opportunity for the demonstration of wildlife habitat enhancement practices.

TPWD has received the largest grant ever awarded by the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation to help private landowners enhance wildlife through voluntary partnerships.

Projects are cost-shared on a 50-50 basis by the landowner and the foundation. TPWD provides technical assistance and program coordination for the program, called Texas Private Lands Initiative.

Sixteen types of projects that will enhance habitat on private lands have been identified by TPWD. Shelterbelt establishment and wetland conservation are types that may be funded in the High Plains and Rolling Plains.

During the spring this year, three shelterbelts were established in Hartley, Briscoe and Randall Counties. These plantings will benefit pheasants, quail and songbirds.

Four to six rows of conifers, deciduous trees and shrubs are planted in the shelterbelts. Among plants used are Rocky Mountain juniper, Eastern red cedar, locust, bois d'arc, mulberry, skunkbush sumac, fourwing saltbush, American plum and sand plum.

The designed areas must be fenced and planting beds must be prepared. Gene Miller, technical guidance biologist, reported that "with site prep, tree planting, fabric-laying and supplemental watering during the growing season, landowners are enjoying 95 percent survival and good growth areas."

A minimum length for belts is one-quarter mile with four rows of plants. Cost to the landowner will not exceed $3,000, said Miller.

"We are looking for more cooperators and need to get site prep underway now for next spring."

Three of four approved wetland projects are already in place in Randall and Gray Counties. Another, located in Hale County, will be initiated in the spring.

Wetland projects cost-shared under this program involve play lakes in the High Plains and riparian wetlands, such as bogs, wet meadows, etc., associated with creek and river bottoms, in the Rolling Plains.

Jim Ray, regional waterfowl biologist for TPWD, said the area is dotted with more than 19,000 playa and saline lakes as well as many miles of creek and river bottoms and their associated riparian wetlands.

"These wetlands, wet or dry, are oases of wildlife habitat in our intensive agriculture," Ray said. "Wet playas provide obvious benefits of available water for migratory birds and other wildlife in an arid region.

"When dry, and when vegetation is protected, playas provide food and cover for wildlife. Students involved in a Texas Tech University study a few years back flushed over 400 pheasants from a single playa. Playa lakes surrounded by grass and large and small grains provide fantastic pheasant habitat."

Wetland projects conducted under the Private Lands Initiative involve playa lakes surrounded by a highly diverse grass and legume mixture and a four-strand barbed wire fence.

"We can cost-share with the landowner on establishing the grass and legumes and on fencing costs," Ray said. However, there is no provision for cost-share on dirtwork in playa basins.

"On riparian areas we will cost share on fencing costs of four-strand barbed wire fences intended to reduce grazing in and around wetlands," said Ray.

TPWD is looking for more cooperators at this time, Ray stressed.

Agreements involving both shelterbelt establishment and wetland conservation are for 10 years, at which time total control and materials revert to the landowner.

"We hope that the landowner will be so impressed with what he's seen during the 10-year agreement that he will continue to manage the site as was conducted under the agreement," Ray continued.

Under terms of the agreement, the landowner allows pre-arranged demonstrations for other landowners at the project site. Ray and Miller said there is nothing like showing proven techniques and seeing another landowner help "pass the word."

TPWD biologists are making contacts with a number of landowners who are interested in the Private Lands Initiative.

More information may be obtained by contacting Ray or Miller at the TPWD office in Amarillo, 806-353-0486 or 353-3141.

Cotton yields projected below '92

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. cotton yields are expected to average 614 pounds per harvested acre for 1993, which is 86 pounds below 1992 and equal to the final 1989 yield, the Agriculture Department says.

"Since early August, cotton crop conditions have deteriorated," USDA's Economic Research Service reported.

The latest Crop Progress report for the week ending Oct. 17 indicated that only 47 percent of the crop was rated good or excellent. Twelve percent was rated poor, with the rest in between.

The largest crop reductions have occurred in the Delta and Southwest regions, the report said.

The Delta estimate of production has declined 800,000 bales, or 12.4 percent, from August. Yield losses were reported in all Delta states except Missouri.

In the Southwest, estimates have fallen 600,000 bales, or 9 percent, since August, with nearly all the losses in Texas.

"Cotton mill use continued strong as the 1993-94 season began," the report said. "According to the latest U.S. Commerce Department consumption report, domestic mill use in August totaled 922,000 bales, about 9 percent above last year's 849,000 bales."

"On a daily basis, consumption averaged approximately 42,000 bales, the highest monthly rate since the 1950-51 season. In addition, the August daily rate is the highest for that month in over 50 years."

Another indication of the strength in the cotton mill business is the share of fibers used in the cotton system, the report noted. During August, cotton's share inched up to 75.6 percent, compared with 75.3 percent in both June and July.

Yarn and denim mills continued to operate near capacity as the 1993-94 season began.

The average price received by upland producers continued lower as the 1993 harvest progressed. Through mid-September, the price received by farmers averaged 51.6 cents per pound, down from 53.1 cents a month earlier and in September 1992.

The price of cotton delivered to domestic mills also has declined, the report said, while polyester and rayon staple prices have held steady. Base quality cotton delivered to mills fell to 57.2 cents per pound in September, the lowest monthly average since November 1986.

"With competing fiber prices higher and the continued strength in consumer demand for cotton products, mills are likely to maintain high usage levels of cotton fiber," it said.

Capital investment rises in machinery

WASHINGTON (AP) - Capital investment in farm machinery increased during the first eight months of 1993, with combine purchases up 15 percent and tractor purchases up 10 percent, the Agriculture Department says.

One factor in the increased capital investment in such machinery was the 20 percent increase in farm income in 1992, said a recent Agricultural Resources Situation and Outlook Report. "Since machinery purchases tend to lag behind farm income, the income increase led to more purchases in 1993," it said.

"Interest rates are below 1992 levels, another positive factor for increased farmers' equity position, which also contributed to higher demand for farm machinery," it added.

In another area, the report said average 1993 farm herbicide prices rose 1.9 percent and insecticide prices climbed 7.7 percent.

Pesticide manufacturers' costs increased in order to develop additional data to reregister older products, and to research and develop new products.

"Many manufacturers have also embarked on expensive biotechnology research," the report said. "Dealers' costs have also risen, especially for liability insurance."

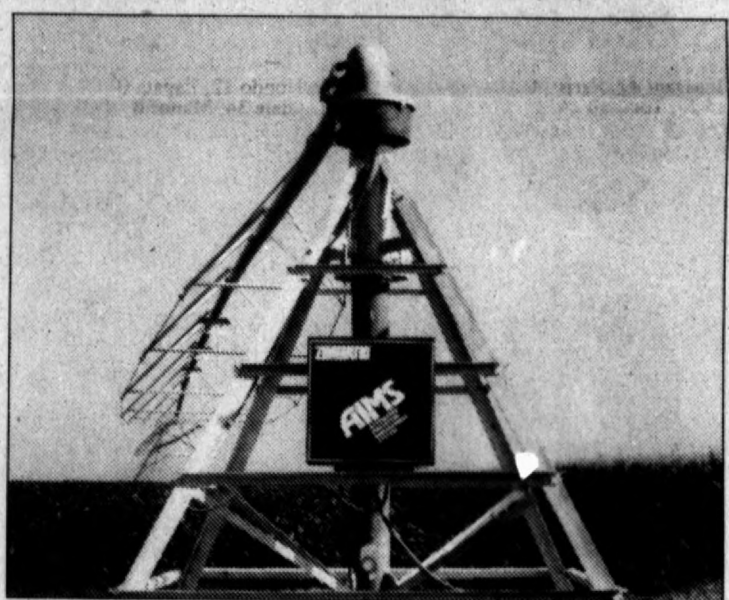

In the 1992-93 crop year, soybean planted acreage stayed the same, the report said, while the increased barley, oats and cotton planted acreage was offset by decreased corn, sorghum and rice acreage.

Milk production falls under '92

WASHINGTON (AP) - Milk production in the 21 major dairy states during September totaled 10.1 billion pounds, 1 percent below production in the same states in September 1992.

Production per cow in the 21 states averaged 1,250 pounds for the month, 4 pounds above September 1992.

There were 8.11 million head of cows on farms in the 21 major states, 125,000 below September last year.

Ripley's curator seeks strange, curious items

By CHERYL HALL

The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP) - The strangest things excite John Turner - and he spends his life hunting them down.

As curator for Ripley's Believe It or Not!, this 64-year-old British gent racks up a 100,000 frequent-flier miles a year total on four airlines as he scours the world for the truly peculiar.

From a 250-year-old crown made of a Tibetan monk's bones to a 8-foot model of the leaning Tower of Pisa made by an arthritic Englishman using 224,174 matchsticks, Turner has to keep the oddities flowing to maintain his company's expansion program that adds two to three museums annually.

He must track down and acquire more than a thousand curiosities each year to fill the new museums and to freshen the 20 existing operations, including the Ripley's in Grand Prairie where the human-bone crown and matchstick Tower of Pisa reside.

"After 23 years with the company, I have a good idea what value an item might have to Ripley's," Turner says during a stopover in the midst of a five-week U.S. artifact safari.

Wherever he goes, he's looking. He came up dry on his Dallas visit last week. That's OK, too.

Though Turner manages the world's oddest stock, he follows basic tenants of inventory control: Merchandise has to fit the Ripley's mix and the price has to match potential return.

Interesting and unique are often the easy parts. But an artifact also has to be authenticated and have a "believe it or not" story line.

And while it's difficult to be too weird, some offerings are simply too grotesque for a family amusement attraction - even Ripley's. For example, Turner recently was offered the work locker of mass-murderer Jeffrey Dahmer. The seller wanted several thousand dollars for it. Turner says he wouldn't give him two cents.

By Turner's accounting, an item must be able to generate enough additional ticket sales over a three-year period to pay for itself. So a military paraphernalia collection of Kaiser Wilhelm II - worth every penny of its $750,000 asking price to a collector - is out of the question for Ripley's because the economics don't work.

His most expensive purchase, a 22-foot fairground organ found in an East German barn after the Berlin Wall came down, is headed for the Branson, Mo., museum under construction. He paid $70,000 to buy and restore the grand musical instrument, but he's certain it's worth it.

"The people who hear it will marvel at it and tell their friends, 'You just have to go hear it.'"

The pipe organ will share the limelight with a six-ton, 42-foot-wide ball of twine found recently in Mountain Springs, Texas, billed by Ripley's as the "heaviest thing to cross the South since Elvis' 1977 comeback tour."

While an associate spotted the twine ball, Turner discovered a strange ball of his own: the 5,500-pound ball of barbed wire headed for the Ripley's in St. Augustine, Fla. The massive wire creation was featured in a English newspaper Turner happened to be reading. He phoned the home office in Toronto, which dispatched someone to buy it the next day.

"How do you wind a 15-foot ball off barbed wire?" he asks. "Never mind why." Such idiosyncracies still mystify him.

"They've got to be a little bit cuckoo in a nice way to do some of the things they do, some of the hobbies people have," he says with a laugh.

Valuing is tricky. As with most negotiations, the asking price is usually higher than Turner is willing to pay. He has a Ripley's expense account and full authority to draw whatever funds he needs to close the deals.

Sometimes, neither side has a clue as to what something is worth, and it takes a bit of dickering. In the case of the barbed wire ball, they settled on $4,500. It will be transported from Chandler, Ariz., to Florida on a flatbed truck "with a police escort I expect" later this month.

Certain types of artifacts - like ancient crowns, trumpets and bowls made from the remains of Tibetan monks - are mainstays of the Ripley collection. Turner then has a purchase history to guide him.

He's bought eight or nine (it's hard to keep track of exactly how many) shrunken heads, paying from between 250 British pounds (about $387.50 today) to $8,000 "depending on the head, who has it and what they want for it."

He has a corner on the market of P.T. Barnum's most famous fakes, FeeJee Mermaids - a collection of monkey heads and upper bodies sewn by taxidermists to fish tails and exhibited in 1842 as mermaids. The last one purchased at a Christie's auction cost him $1,200.

"I know of another in Manchester (England) that I'm trying to get," he says, his eyes excited by the anticipated hunt.

He has bought stuffed six-legged cows, eight-legged lambs and two-headed goats. He found a two-headed snake that was still alive. "I've got a tape of that one," he says with pride.

Getting things into the United States can be tough. He recently had to burn life-size chicken-wire-and-straw creations of an elephant, two gorillas and a cow that he had shipped from Manchester because U.S. inspectors said they might contain marijuana seeds.

And he has to stay abreast of endangered species laws that even cover antiques. An antique African warrior draped in leopard skins has to stay in England, where such things are allowed.

Turner got into the oddity business through the backdoor in England. His father spent eight years building a 1-inch-to-1-foot scale model of a Victorian carousel and sold it in 1971 to a Ripley's that was opening in nearby Blackpool, so he could visit it every day.

Turner, who sold sophisticated coal mining equipment at trade shows around the world, helped his dad install the carousel. When the manager was fired after the first week, Ripley's asked Turner to take over the new museum.

Later he moved to the United States to manage the St. Augustine property, where he proved his procurement adroitness.

In 1990, he tried to retire but the company came up with another plan. He could become the company's first true successor to Robert LeRoy Ripley (who died in 1949 at the not-so-ripe old age of 56) and literally follow in his footsteps as globetrotter extraordinaire. Find stuff, track it down with no additional management duties, play golf on the side. He wouldn't get paid much, but the travel would be free.

Sounded swell to Turner. So far, it has been.

Earlier this year, he was reading Vogue magazine about an Italian who had carved 30,000 books out of wood. "I wondered, 'What on earth would he want to do with 30,000 wooden books?'" Answer: he built a house with them.

"It's fun for me to set off on the paper trail, trace the guy down and see if I can get it. The whole thing has evolved into a sport - like hunting only I don't kill."

MRS. BRYAN Q. KENNEY
...nee Tori J. Mazurek

Mazurek, Kenney wed in afternoon ceremony

Tori Jean Mazurek of Lubbock became the bride of Bryan Quintin Kenney of Humble during a mid-afternoon wedding ceremony Saturday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church. Officiating was Msgr. Orville Blum of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Sam and Leona Mazurek of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of John and Agnes Kenney of Humble.

White fresh assorted flowers adorned the altar, and yellow and white bows marked the pews. The unity candle was given to the bridal couple by Bridget Williams.

The bride's sister, Bridget Williams of Victoria, was matron of honor. Best man was the groom's brother, Stuart Kenney of Humble.

Bridesmaids included the bride's sisters, Amanda Leonard of Brownwood and Pam Shepic of Rowlett, and the bride's sister-in-law, Beth Mazurek of Lubbock.

Groomsmen were the groom's brothers, Richard Kenney and Kevin Kenney, both of Humble, and John Kenney of Seattle, Wash.

The bride's niece, Angie Williams of Victoria, was junior bridesmaid.

Elizabeth Williams, the bride's niece and daughter of Bridget and Randy Williams of Victoria, was flower girl. The bride's nephew, Teddy Shepic, son of Jeff and Pam Shepic of Rowlett, was ring bearer.

Carolyn Evers accompanied Darla Stengel and Treaver Leonard of Brownwood as they sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Ave Maria," respectively.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in an elegant white designer's gown of regal satin featuring a Queen Anne neckline, bishop sleeves, and a fitted bodice which was encrusted with pearls and jewels and crowned with clusters of jeweled flowers and molded medallions. The princess waistline was attached to a full, flowing satin skirt fashioned with Venice lace medallions and crystalized hand-beaded designs.

The queen's court cathedral-length all-satin train was accented with European lace cut-outs studded with pearls and jewels and decorated at the hemline with double edged borders of European lace.

The bridal veil of tulle with pencil edging was attached to a princess crown of satin roses and pearls. She carried yellow roses, ivy, fern and stephanotis. Traditional jewelry completed her wedding attire.

Bridal attendants wore navy blue tea-length princess style dresses fashioned with short kimono sleeves, crochet lace collars and floral trim. They carried navy, white and yellow roses. The flower girl wore a navy taffeta dress with the collar and hemline trimmed with lace. She carried a crochet basket with flowers matching the attendants' flowers.

The bride's niece, Katie Williams of Victoria, invited guests to register at the reception held in the KC Hall.

Cake was served by Lesa Kelln of Amarillo, Sammee Mazurek and Karri Kenney of Humble, the groom's sister-in-law. Dinner was served by Loretta Urbanczyk.

Arranged in a rainbow over the main refreshment table were balloons in assorted wedding colors. The bride's three-tiered wedding cake was decorated with miniature mums and featured bride and groom figurines in the cake's center. The groom's cake featured a picture of the Boston Celtics.

Leaving for a wedding trip to San Antonio, the bride wore a floral dress created similar to the bridesmaids' dresses.

The couple will make their home in Houston.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1986.

The groom graduated from Humble High School in 1986 and from Texas Tech University in 1990 with a B.A. degree in management. He is presently employed as a claims representative with State Farm.

Wedding guests represented Florida, Alabama, Rowlett, Humble, Victoria, Seattle, Wash., New York and Houston.

Class reunion being planned

The Hereford High School Class of 1974 is making preparations for its 20-year reunion which has been scheduled for the summer of 1994.

The class is seeking updated information and addresses for fellow graduates.

If you have information regarding any of the 1974 Hereford High School graduates, you may forward it to the attention of Mauri Montgomery, 313 N. Lee, Hereford, or call 364-5146 after 5 p.m.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) —

There's no place like home.

Vince Gill came back to this city to find a street named in his honor and a billboard proudly proclaiming the city to be the country music star's hometown.

Gill, winner of five Country Music Association awards, returned to the city he left nearly two decades ago to visit family and compete Thursday in the Vince Gill Festival of the Horse Celebrity Golf Tournament.

Gill lives in Nashville, Tenn., but insists he hasn't forgotten his hometown.

"Oklahoma City is a place blessed with character and common sense," he told the crowd.

Public invited to jewelry sale Friday at hospital

The Hereford Regional Medical Center's Auxiliary is hosting a jewelry sale from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Friday in the dining room lobby of the hospital.

The sale, which is a major fund raiser for the auxiliary, will feature fashionable jewelry for all occasions. For sale will be 14k gold and sterling silver earrings, bracelets, watches and rings at exceptional values. Other costume jewelry and gemstones will also be featured.

Profits from the sale will be used for the hospital's adopt-a-room project and various auxiliary projects.

"This is a great time to do some early Christmas shopping," Quintna Waits, auxiliary president, said. "Customers will have a chance to make some excellent buys and help fund worthy projects at the same time."

The U.S. receives more legal immigrants than any other country. Between 1820 and 1984, about 52 million people officially arrived on our shores.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DAVID RICKMAN

Ruiz, Rickman vows spoken here Oct. 9

Wedding vows were exchanged by Cynthia Charlene Ruiz and John David Rickman, both of Hereford, during a mid-afternoon wedding ceremony Saturday, Oct. 9, in the Fellowship of Believers Church. Officiating was Doug Manning.

The bride is the daughter of Charlie and Lilia Ruiz of 411 Centre St. and the bridegroom is the son of Johnny and Martha Rickman of 239 Ave. D.

The church was decorated with an antique wicker wedding basket containing an artificial peach floral arrangement. Peach and green bows adorned the pews.

The bride's sister, Sylvia Menius, served as matron of honor and the bride's brother-in-law, Randy Menius, was best man.

Bridesmaids included Carlota Ruiz, the bride's sister, and Amanda and Susan Rickman, the groom's sisters.

Groomsmen were Danny Torres, the bride's cousin; Nicky Ruiz, the bride's brother; and Todd Murray. The bride's nieces, Chelsi Lynn Ruiz, daughter of Carlos and Lina Ruiz, and Amanda Lee Menius, daughter of Randy and Sylvia Menius, were flower girls. Omar Pesqueda, son of Oscar and Dora Pesqueda, served as ring bearer.

Barbara Manning accompanied vocalists, Janna Kelly of Canyon and Carlota Ruiz and Daniel Ruiz. Principal wedding selections included "Evergreen," "Battle Hymn of Love" and "The Rose."

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a designer's floor-length white bridal gown accented with hand-beaded lace appliques, a sweetheart neckline and a box bow which marked the back waistline. The skirt swept into a chapel-length train.

The bride also wore a fingertip-length veil belonging to her sister and carried her sister's bridal bouquet of white roses and baby's breath with pearl accents.

Bridesmaids wore seafoam green dresses and the honor attendant wore a peach colored dress. They were designed with off-the-shoulder necklines created with ruffles and fronts adorned with beaded lace appliques. The skirts were created by cascading ruffled layers which reached to the hemlines.

Tina Ruiz invited guests to register at the reception and dinner/dance held at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Connie Calderon and Lina Ruiz served cake. The bride's cake consisted of four tiers of strawberry, white, and Italian cream and featured round and hexagon tiers draped in ruffles and pearls and trellised in lattice. It was topped by the traditional bride and groom miniature figurines. Both the bride's cake and the groom's chocolate cake were made by the groom's mother.

The bride wore a teal suit with a peplum jacket and slim skirt.

The couple resides in Hereford. The bride is a 1993 graduate of Hereford High School and the groom, a 1991 graduate of HHS, is employed at Suit's Auto Supply.

Wedding guests represented San Angelo, Canyon, Elbow, Amarillo and Boise, Idaho.

Between The Covers

What didn't sell is put away now, and another Friends of the Library Book Sale has come to an end. Measured in terms of money made, books bought, and new memberships purchased, it was a big success! Thanks to all of you who helped by helping set up, purchasing books, or spreading the word! Next month the Friends will be sponsoring a Dinosaur Party for National Children's Book Week. We'll tell you more about it in another column.

Remember back in the good ol' days when about the most dangerous thing that could happen on Halloween was being in the outhouse when some kid turned it over? Of course, that's a little far back for me, but I do remember yelling "Trick or Treat!" knowing that if there were no treats (perish the thought!), we would be hard pressed to think up a trick. But then, it wasn't often we had to worry about no treats. All the neighbors knew us, and knew we'd be around on Halloween night, and some worked all day to provide us with loads of tasty homemade treats. The only harm any of us came to was getting our fingers mashed in a slamming car door (or an upset stomach). Halloween was one of the highlights of our year, and while we may have dressed as witches and ghosts, death and evil were the furthest thing from our minds.

Back in those "good ol' days" horror movies were rarely horrifying, and today are downright laughable. See for yourself with this year's Halloween Special The Fly, starring that master of horror, Vincent Price (who was more sinister and diabolical than Freddie Krueger ever will be, if just because he was so genteel). The Fly, if you are unfamiliar with the story, is the tale of a scientist (Price) who has developed a means to transfer matter by breaking it down to electrons (or some such wizardry). His experiment goes awry when his particles get mixed up with those of a fly, much to the disappointment of both. If you haven't seen this version, or seen it in a while, this is your chance, and you can't beat the price. The free movie is this Thursday at 7:00 in the library basement, and popcorn will be for sale.

Keeping with the Halloween theme, we have a few spooky books going out this week, including the latest collection from Stephen King, Nightmares and Dreamscapes. This is a collection of short stories, some never before published.

Older sports fans will want to see Fridays with Red, a personal memoir about Red Barber, one of baseball's most listened to announcers. Trekkies who wish to go where no memoir has gone before will beam in to William Shatner's Star Trek Memories. And if you haven't quite gotten over the death of Superman last year, read The Death and Life of Superman, a sci-fi account of what happened, and what happens when the Man of Steel comes to life again. Rick Stanley, borrowing a phrase from the Elvis hit "Suspicious Minds", recounts his famous stepbrother's "tragic lifelong search for love" in Caught in a Trap.

If you read The Coming Economic Earthquake by financial counselor Larry Burkett, you'll want to read Whatever Happened to the American Dream. Burkett claims that modern American ideals are vastly different from what they were our first 150 years, and that we can reclaim what we've lost. In somewhat the same line is Pat Robertson's The Turning Tide, subtitled "The Fall of Liberalism and the Rise of Common Sense."

Christian fiction by Bodie Thoene, Michael Phillips, and Judith Pella has been popular at Deaf Smith County Library. This week we are adding to the "Shiloh", "Stoneycake", and "Hollister" series by these authors. See you at the library!

Organization hears annual report recently

The Order of the Eastern Star met recently in the Masonic Hall for their regular stated October meeting. Beverly Brooke, junior past matron, gave her annual report.

Mrs. Brenda Cox was welcomed as a guest.

L.J. Clark, worthy patron, led the Obligation around the altar for everyone present.

Linda and Larry Knowles and Betty Rector of Friona served as hosts in the dining room following the business meeting.

MINOT, N.D. (AP) - Bill Cosby doesn't deny that his next television show might not break much new ground, but that's OK.

The star of "The Cosby Show" says he's developing a detective series.

"The world may not need another one, but they may want one," Cosby said Thursday at the annual Norsk Hostfest, a Scandinavian festival running through the weekend.

Thank You

Mere words cannot express the thanks and appreciation we want to convey to everyone who rallied around us after Anthony's accident during the football game Thursday night. To the doctors, ambulance attendants, coaches, teammates and friends, the care, support and prayers you gave us was simply overwhelming.

Thankfully, Anthony is now back at home and doing very well. Again, thank you and may God bless each and everyone of you.

WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL, NEWSPAPER SELLS IT BEST.

No matter what it is you're selling, newspaper can sell it best. You can show it. Describe it. Explain it. Compare it. Offer a coupon for it. And cover your entire marketplace with it. All in one day. And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message.

People believe it when they read it in the paper. Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

Newspaper. It delivers.

Coral reef aquariums toured by club

KIM HOUSE, ANDREW GEE

Engagement announced

NEW YORK (AP) - Aspiring Kennedy in-law Daryl Hannah was pilloried for her apparel choices, while Joan Rivers joined Sharon Stone atop the latest best-dressed list in People magazine.

Mixing work boots with knee socks was one of several fashion flubs that earned Hannah the dubious honor, though the magazine's critics conceded in the Oct. 25 issue that the actress "could dazzle in a brown paper bag."

The magazine said Hannah's favorite accessory these days is John F. Kennedy Jr. Marriage rumors remain tabloid fodder.

River's classic taste put her at the top of the list. The saucy comedienne's style strength was described as "chic with cheekiness."

Stone, pictured in gowns by Valentino, Vera Wang and Calvin Klein, said picking the right outfit can be nerve-wracking.

"You can't imagine how you could've had on 65 different things in 20 minutes," she said. "I do that when I'm having very bad PMS."

Kimberly Jean House of Amarillo and Andrew Warren Gee of Route 4, Hereford, will wed Jan. 1, 1994, in Trinity Fellowship Chapel in Amarillo.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Oscar S. and Opal House of Amarillo and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Warren P. and Billie Jo Gee of Route 4, Hereford.

Miss House graduated from Amarillo High School in 1992 and is a graduate of the South Texas Institute of Pet Grooming. She is currently self-employed as a dog groomer at Dog Patch U.S.A. in Amarillo.

Gee is a 1989 graduate of Hereford

High School and is currently a senior ag business major at West Texas A&M University. He is a spring 1994 candidate for graduation. He is self-employed as a farmer north of Hereford.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Readers: I want to take this time to thank all of my readers who submitted their favorite get-out-quick hints. We received so many great hints that it was very hard picking the top 10.

Here are some of them:
• Designate a place to always keep the keys, and while in the shower, think of what accessories to wear. — Jill Short, Columbus, Ohio

• If anything is to be different from our routine schedule, I make a note and put it in the bathroom the night before and decide on bathroom routine and give everyone their fair time. — Amelia Cagle, Harvey, La.

• All homework must be put in my briefcase and put in the car before I go to bed, and the children put all their school items in their backpacks before going to bed. — Rosemary Hanratty, Houston, Texas

Aren't these the best! You will be seeing many of the get-out-of-the-house-fast hints in upcoming columns. — Heloise

MISSING KEYS

Dear Heloise: I had to smile when I read your information on locking your keys in the car.

The hints wouldn't work for me, as I've locked myself out too many times. I've got a better way. When I go somewhere with the car, I put my extra set of keys on a large safety pin and pin it inside a pocket. If I don't have a pocket on what I'm wearing, I pin them on my bra strap. — Martha Starz, Brainerd, Minn.

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE.

Prosecutors and police differ on views of video

By ERNEST SANDER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - While prosecutors are discovering the limitations of videotape as evidence in the courtroom, many police departments are moving ahead with plans to use video cameras as a law enforcement tool.

Two recent sensational beating trials suggest that footage of a crime being committed isn't necessarily the damning evidence that might be expected.

Even before they had entered the courtroom to face assault charges in 1992, the four Los Angeles police officers who rained baton blows on Rodney G. King had been deemed guilty by public opinion.

With the infamous 90 seconds of videotaped evidence in hand, people wondered how the officers could possibly be let off.

But they were. And in a separate case still in progress, a long list of prosecution witnesses have described in horrifying specifics the assault on truck driver Reginald Denny during the Los Angeles riots. Yet so far only one of them has been able to identify the defendants.

Still, police in places like Palmdale, Calif., Fredricksburg, Va., and Newark, N.J., insist that videotaping has become a valuable part of crime control and they are using it against graffiti, drugs and theft.

Sure, video cameras are a deterrent, they say, but they are also more than that.

When three men kicked, beat and shot Officer Darrell Lunsford to death with his own gun in Garrison, Texas, his patrol car video camera recorded much of the attack. The jury that saw the tape convicted two of the men, while the third pleaded guilty.

"The old adage: 'A picture is worth a thousand words,' is true here," said Maureen Siegel, chief of criminal operations in the Los Angeles City Attorney's office.

In downtown Newark, an officer sits in a kiosk in front of several TV screens that display images from six closed-circuit cameras mounted on poles and street lamps in a 2-square-mile section of downtown. The kiosk officer relays the information to field officers.

Newark police say auto burglaries and street robberies have decreased and criminals have been prosecuted using the tapes as evidence. Further, the cameras are being hailed by local citizens and the business community.

"The video cameras have gone far beyond our expectations," says Newark police director William Celester.

Other police departments are investing in video camera equipment and counting on similar results.

For $8,600, Palmdale bought a remote-controlled video camera that uses infrared technology to take pictures of graffiti taggers at night. The mobile camera is hidden on rooftops or in bushes.

In Fredricksburg, police use hidden cameras to tape drug transactions.

Patrol cars in some parts of the country have video cameras fixed on their dashboards. Officers carry wireless microphones that are good for up to 1,000 feet. In addition to being prosecution evidence, the footage can be useful in fighting claims of police abuse.

Yet, other cops and video camera critics say the technology is too dangerous, too expensive, too invasive and can be taken out of context.

"It's just a gigantic problem," says Cmdr. John White of the LAPD detective services group. "We've been dealing with this for a number of years now and we haven't come to any final conclusion on what to do."

Which leaves L.A. cops like Officer John Smith out on a limb. In late July, Smith used his personal video camera, which he had mounted in his patrol car, to record a gang rape that he was responding to.

The LAPD had no rule prohibiting what he did, nor one condoning it. So in the next 48 hours, Smith was told to take the camera out, then allowed to put it back in, then told to remove it again.

Then he was ordered not to talk about the case.

LAPD's video camera debate did not begin with Smith, however.

In its 1991 report on the department, the Christopher Commission recommended putting video cameras in all patrol cars. Yet a pilot program that would outfit seven cars was vetoed in January by then-Mayor Tom Bradley, although recently endorsed by a Los Angeles City Council committee.

Police Chief Willie Williams has said he understands the cry for video cameras but is concerned about the expense. He has estimated it would take about $8.5 million to install cameras in all cars.

Next to some of the technology police are considering - satellites that can take pictures of the entire city, thermal imaging that locates people by sensing their body heat - video cameras seem mundane.

But some police say their effectiveness should not be underestimated.

That message has not been lost on private citizens, some of whom are arming themselves with video cameras and becoming crime-fighting partners with police.

Take Gary, for instance, who lives in Hollywood, overlooking a wall that is a favorite among graffiti taggers.

In his apartment a video camera is set up by the window. With the lights off and the shades drawn, he films taggers at work.

He keeps detailed records of all his videotaping - date, time, and suspect number - and supplies police with copies of his tapes.

Gary, who is unemployed, does the videotaping mostly for the reward money - $500 per arrest. He's made $1,500 in the last year, he says.

But such a hobby is not without danger.

"I always live in fear and I always try to avoid seeing them and them seeing me," says Gary, who asked that his last name not be used.

Gary thinks the rock that was thrown through his window and the bullet that ricocheted off his door were warnings from the taggers.

Police have trained an entire corps of lookouts in the San Fernando Valley. The Volunteer Surveillance Team consists of about 50 members. Police set up crews of six or eight to do continuous filming from vacant apartments or other locations.

Despite a video camera craze in the making, others note that the technology is fraught with unanswered questions.

"People have a tendency to place videotape at the top of the rung as far as reliability, and I don't know if that is necessarily true," says Terry White, one of the prosecutors in the first King beating trial. "Videotape is just like any other evidence in that it is subject to different interpretations."

As the King footage demonstrated, videotape can leave the viewer without a context. What happened before and after the footage? Is the tape obscuring some other important information?

"The videotape probably is only going to be part of the story," says White, now a grand jury adviser.

Many also predict that greater reliance on videotaped evidence would cause logistical headaches for police departments. Where would all the tapes be stored and for how long? Who would have access to them?

Los Angeles City law states that all police evidence must be kept for 10 years. Maintaining the videotapes would mean constructing temperature controlled rooms free from electromagnetic fields.

Also, there are some doubts about the reliability of the camera equipment. Because the LAPD has yet to do thorough testing, for example, it is unclear how the sound quality would be affected by a rainstorm or a chase in progress.

And what about privacy? Erwin Chemerinsky, a law professor at the University of Southern California, says as long as videotaping is done out in the open, in public spaces, there are few legal restrictions.

But, adds Jerry Wilson of the non-profit Crime Control Institute in Washington D.C., "People do things in public spaces that they would not like to have pictures taken of."

The thought of cameras at every intersection sends chills down some people's spines.

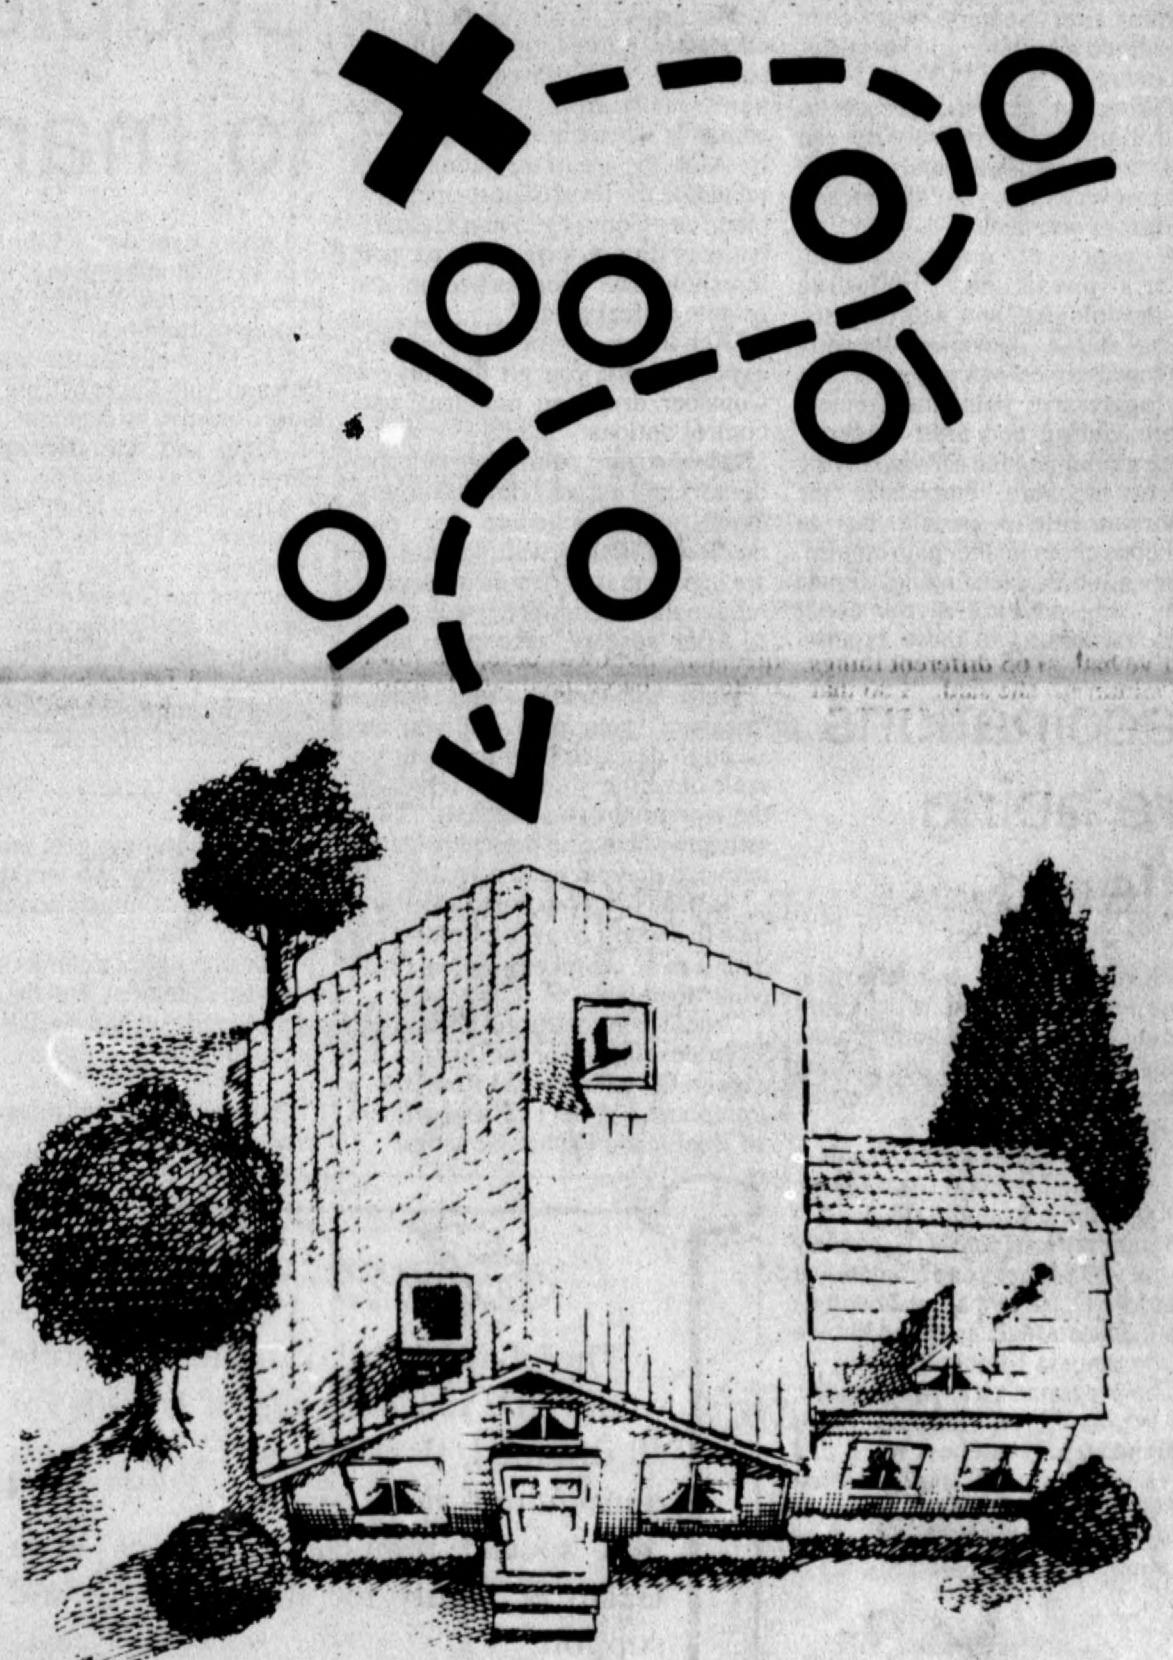

During some pretrial hearings in the Denny case, news got out that the LAPD was covertly videotaping the scene outside the courtroom, in the hope that the footage would lead them to other participants in the beating.

Chemerinsky and others denounced the practice.

In short, many agree, police departments should take cautious steps into the field of video technology.

"If we have a tape, great... But it's not necessary, at least not right now," Siegel says. "We don't need it to get convictions."

Tough-guy Robert Mitchum fights image of poet, children's author

By BOB THOMAS

Associated Press Writer
SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) - That barrel-chested tough guy and master of sleepy-eyed villains was in a playful mood as he met the Spanish press.

Why did he stop writing poetry and children's stories?

"Because it contradicted my image," shot back Robert Mitchum. What is your image?

"Dissolute, brutal, untrustworthy, a general ne'er-do-well."

Does your wife believe that image?

"Obviously not. She stuck around for 53 years."

And how did Mitchum feel about playing a minor role for small money in the remake of "Cape Fear," when he had starred in the 1962 original?

"I wouldn't call $250,000 for one day's work small money."

Mitchum was in Spain to receive the San Sebastian Film Festival's Donostia award for lifetime achievement.

"After 130-40-50 movies, maybe I deserve this," said Mitchum, whose roles ranged from light-hearted in "The Sundowners" to terrifying in "The Night of the Hunter" and the original "Cape Fear."

It was a rare lapse of modesty for the long-lasting star who has a history of deprecating all things Hollywood, including himself.

Last January, the Hollywood Foreign Press Association also handed him a career achievement award.

A star since 1945, Mitchum, 76, has been ignored by the Academy Awards after his supporting-actor nomination for "The Story of G.I. Joe," his first important role.

Why the belated recognition?

"They can't find anybody else," he said. "You get the feeling: 'Get him while he's still around. He's failing.'"

Mitchum remained in character throughout his stay in this seaside resort in northern Spain. He grumbled about having to don a tuxedo. He complained about lack of sleep. And while other festival visitors were viewing films from many countries, Mitchum stared blankly at CNN on a television in his hotel suite.

"Bob can't go anywhere," explained his wife, Dorothy. "Once in Rome we were told there would be no problem during the siesta. We went for a walk, and it ended in a riot. We had to take refuge in a shop until the police came."

One morning at the hotel, Mitchum came downstairs in the service elevator to have a breakfast interview in a closed dining room. The face is craggy, the eyelids annually droop one or two millimeters, otherwise the actor's appearance remains the same.

His latest film was a South African adventure with Bo Derek, which he said went directly to video.

The actor's resume includes such prestige items as "Heaven Knows, Mr. Allison" (John Huston), "Rio Grande" (Howard Hawks) and "Ryan's Daughter" (David Lean). Also numerous duds. Today's generation knows him primarily as the gruff but tender Navy officer in the epic TV miniseries "The Winds of War" and "War and Remembrance."

Mitchum's early years have long been befogged in legend. With little prodding, he reminisced about his life after leaving home at 16 in mid-Depression. His journey southward was interrupted in Savannah, Ga.

"They had a cure for the homeless then - 180 days on the Chatham County Gang No. 1," he recalled. "We got 21-10-21 meals a week and 10 cents worth of Bull Durham Golden Grain."

Afterwards, Mitchum headed west, riding the rails.

"Whole families would be huddled in freight cars," he recalled. "I was warned: 'Don't go into L.A. They'll put you in Lincoln Heights jail for delousing.' I was so weary I rode right into the Santa Fe freight yards."

Five Mexicans were under a water tower with three gallons of wine. They called me over, gave me some wine and told me how to get out. I thought, 'Jeez, a welcoming party for the bums! This is home!'

He worked as a dishwasher, busboy and longshoreman and acted in a local theater.

If you are suffering from hypertension, your physician may have told you to reduce sodium in your diet.

Sodium is found in salt (salt is 40 percent sodium); leavening agents (baking soda and baking powder); monosodium glutamate (MSG); condiments such as soy sauce, bouillon, pickles and olives; cured meats; many canned vegetables and frozen dinners; and most cheeses, sauces, soups and salad dressings. The general function of sodium in a recipe is that it:

- provides flavor;
 - acts as a preservative in cured meats and in brined vegetables such as pickles and sauerkraut; and
 - controls action of yeast.
- Once you have found what the sources are of sodium in the recipe, you can:
- eliminate it completely;
 - reduce the amount; and

-substitute more acceptable flavor or spice.

To choose the best approach, follow these guidelines to decrease sodium.

Salt may be omitted or reduced in most recipes. Do not reduce the salt in cured meats or pickled or brined vegetables because it acts as a preservative. It is best not to omit the salt in yeast breads because it helps control the rising action in yeast.

Start with a gradual reduction. For example, if a recipe calls for one teaspoon of salt, try one-half teaspoon. If you reduce the amount of salt gradually, you'll soon adjust to the less salty flavor.

Choose fresh or low-sodium versions of products. For example, choose low-sodium soups and broths, soy sauce, canned vegetables and tomato products.

Rely on herbs and spices rather than salt for flavor.

Use garlic or onion powder instead of garlic or onion salt.

Try fruit juice or wine for cooking liquid instead of broth or bouillon.

Moderate to severe pain is not necessary after surgery

Pain after surgery was once considered inevitable and harmless. Not today.

Taking an active approach to controlling pain after surgery can help you get well faster and improve your recovery while you enjoy greater comfort as you heal.

A panel of non-government experts--physicians, including anesthesiologists and neurologists, nurses and a consumer--recently developed clinical practice guidelines for "aggressive pain management before, during and after surgery." These guidelines and accompanying patient brochure, emphasize the important role a patient has in decisions about his/her pain control.

Scientific research findings dispute many long-standing myths about pain. According to these experts, moderate to severe pain is not necessary after surgery; suffering pain does not build character; and pain medications are seldom addictive, when given post-operatively. Also, the age of the patient is not related to the level of post-operative pain felt. Contrary to myth, elderly patients do not have a higher pain threshold than younger people, and infants do feel pain.

Ask the doctor or nurse what to expect before you go for surgery. Consider drug and non-drug pain control options.

Make a pain control plan with your doctors and nurses. Before surgery, agree on a schedule for pain medicines. Often, waiting until you are in pain makes it more difficult to relieve the discomfort.

After surgery, take pain relief medications if you begin to feel pain.

Help the doctors and nurses "measure" your pain. If you are asked to describe your pain using a scale of zero to 10, ten can represent the worst pain you ever felt. Then estimate where your present pain falls between that pain and no pain.

Tell the doctor or nurse about any pain that won't go away. Continuing pain can be a sign of problems with your operation.

These pain control guidelines have been developed for the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, a component of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Vaccinations are being offered

Pneumococcal pneumonia, combined with the flu, is the sixth-leading cause of death among older adults in the U.S. and the leading cause of pneumonia-related hospitalization.

In 1993, it is expected to result in the deaths of 40,000 Americans; 10,000 will die from the flu.

Senior citizens across the country can get vaccinations and educational materials at participating hospitals through a national campaign known as "Pneumonia Knockout."

The programs kicks off Monday, the beginning of National Adult Immunization Awareness Week, and runs through Nov. 19. It is sponsored by Voluntary Hospitals of America.

To find out where the vaccinations are being offered, call 1-800-213-1133.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

Last of two parts

Last week, in the first part of this series we detailed the value of having sound information on which to base business decisions. We pointed out that learning more about your customer is an excellent starting point.

This week we want to show you how to build your business by using customer information. You can use research to position your business more effectively to meet customer needs. A goal for every business, should be to identify a position or niche. This is the environment or place where you can serve your target customers better than anyone else.

This concept works well for individuals, too. Wouldn't you be worth more to an employer if you had special knowledge and skills that your co-workers couldn't match? Since your customers are the boss in your business, the same concept works. You must have something unique to offer your employer or customer to create a position of lasting value.

First, you must identify and understand the unfulfilled needs. Then you can move to fill them. If you cannot see any unmet need, you may not have a niche or position to fill. To survive in a "no niche" environment, you have to take business away from others.

10 research questions

Before you try to position or re-position your business, you should ask some questions. I'll give you 10 that are sound "what do we know" queries. Business owners and managers who can answer them see their businesses grow.

• Who are your customers? How can you describe them? Can you divide them into groups or classes?

• How much do you know about them? Do you know where they live, their lifestyles, their buying habits and their personal tastes?

• Do you know your customer batting average? If you don't know what a customer batting average is, keep reading this column. Next month we will discuss this topic in detail.

• Do you know what your customers think about your business? If you don't know, ask them. I think customers are flattered when business owners ask for their opinions. Finding out how your customers feel about your business can be very enlightening.

• What do your customers think about your competition? How can you find out? Once again, all you have to do is ask them.

• Do you know who your 10 best customers are? How about the top 25? The top 100? Use your records to find out. Not keeping customer records? Hm-m-mm.

• Have you personally had contact with your top 10 or 20 customers in the past month? In the past 3 months? If the answer is no, contact them today; tomorrow at the latest.

• Do you make it easy for your customers to complain to you? According to research, 96 percent of all customers who leave your business in an unhappy state of mind never tell anyone in the business. Your task is to make it easy for customers to complain. Not by providing lousy products and terrible service, but by making them feel comfortable in bringing a complaint to you. You can't solve problems that you don't know exist.

• Do you have a follow-up program for ex-customers? If not, start one now. Find out why they are ex-customers. You may be able to overcome past difficulties and regain business.

• Do you know what is going on within your industry? Industry trends and activity are important. Get involved with trade associations and order publications to stay informed.

Sometime soon you may be hailed with a "What do you know" greeting. I hope you will think to yourself we know a lot, but we're still learning. You see, good research is a never ending process.

COUNTRY CHARMER

Small Home With Great Amenities

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

Entry to this charming country style home is from a nicely sized front porch. The activity room is vaulted to the center and is generously sized for family comfort.

A unique kitchen and dining area are directly adjacent with only minimum walls, creating an open airy feeling. The sink is located in an angled cabinet area, behind which is a snack bar for those quick on the go meals. The bay window provides plenty of space for a table and chairs. The laundry room is near the kitchen, double garage, and U-shaped stairs to the basement.

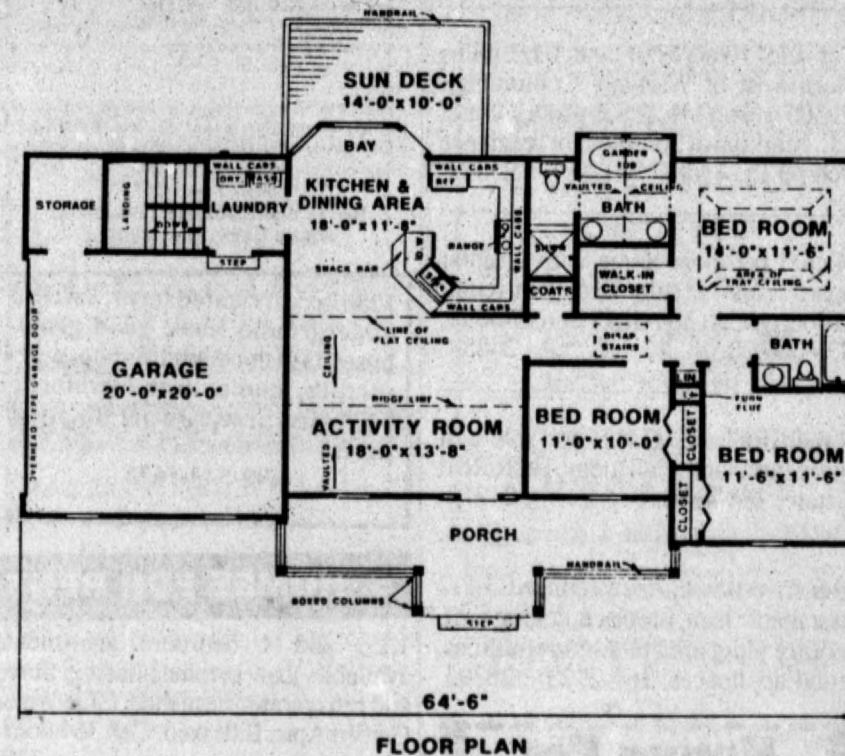

The bed room wing is somewhat isolated from the "noisy" areas of the home. There are three bed rooms, and two full baths. The front two bed rooms are generously sized. They both have ample closet space, and a hall linen closet is provided as well. The hall bath services both front bedrooms, as well as guests.

The master bedroom is enhanced by a large tray ceiling, creating the effect of open spaces. A large walk-in closet is accessible from the bed room as is the private garden bath. This bath has a vaulted ceiling, garden tub, double vanity, toilet and separate shower stall.

Plan Number 295 is available with basement, crawl space or a slab foundation. The country exterior is constructed of horizontal wood siding. It includes a real wood rail front porch, gable roof style, and two dormers.

Plan number 295 includes only 1,298 square feet of heated living space, and is available with a crawl space, slab or basement foundation. It is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans are furnished with special construction details for energy efficiency and are designed to comply with FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Voters would get to decide whether Texas ever has a state personal income tax under a proposed constitutional amendment on the Nov. 2 ballot.

Proposition 4 would give Texans income-tax veto power by preventing the levy, or any subsequent increases, unless approved in a statewide referendum. It also would require the revenue to be used to reduce school property taxes and aid education.

Supporters say it's giving power to the people. The Legislature under the current constitution could pass an income tax without a statewide vote - although that prospect has been described as unlikely because it would mean "political suicide."

Opponents come from different camps: Some fear it would open the door to an income tax by making the levy more attractive. Others say the measure is bad public policy and wouldn't reduce poor people's tax burden.

"I believe it's just a slick way of the Legislature getting around a very controversial issue," said Rep. Warren Chisum, D-Pampa, head of the Legislature's Conservative Coalition.

Jude Filler, executive director of the Texas Alliance for Human Needs, said her group would support an income tax that reduced poor people's taxes. But she said this measure would benefit "the largest property taxpayers - businesses."

Chisum also said that while school taxes would be reduced, there wouldn't be a limit on property taxes imposed by other local governmental bodies. "The potential for massive increases in local government spending then becomes very real," he said.

But Senate Finance Committee Chairman John Montford, who sponsored the proposal, says it's clearly meant to ensure any personal

"If taxpayers think that voting in favor of this proposition will save them from an income tax, they better think again," he said, painting what he calls a two-part strategy to the proposal.

"First, place the voter, rather than politician who can be voted out of office, in the position of granting the final approval of the dreaded tax," he said. "Second, tie the income tax to the voter's legitimate concerns about public education."

Ruthann Geer, president of the League of Women Voters of Texas, said her group opposes the proposition because it would "tie legislators' hands in one of the most important areas of legislative responsibility - raising the funds to run state government."

Some are suspicious because the idea was pushed by Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who had earlier supported a state income tax and is up for re-election next year.

"We think it was a very crafty political maneuver by Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock to avoid political heat for his support of an income tax," said Karen Hughes, state GOP executive director. "You've always got to be suspicious when a fox guards the henhouse."

But Bullock has said the proposal would make Texans "full partners with the Legislature in any future decision on this matter that affects everyone's pocketbook."

Other opponents say the proposal is confusing.

"We think people should be able to determine the consequences of an action, and we cannot figure out whether this amendment makes a state income tax more likely or less likely," said Mary Nell Mathis, who heads the watchdog group Common Cause in Texas. "So we vote no on general principles."

Ann Landers

DEAR READERS: Pass the humble pie. I'll eat a big slice with a side order of crow. I have barely recovered from the clobbering due to my ignorance about cows, and now I'm in big trouble with pet owners.

Not long ago, I advise "Mark's" girlfriend to immediately surprise him with another dog when he had to put this beautiful german shepherd to sleep. Apparently, I was barking up the wrong tree because I have been catching it from all sides. This is what my week has been like:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was appalled at the advice you gave to the woman from Virginia whose boyfriend had to euthanize his "best friend of 14 years." Would you surprise a parent immediately after the death of a child by showing up with a baby YOU picked out in an orphanage?

The pet lover must grieve in his own way, and often it takes a long time. If Mark wants another dog, HE should be allowed to select the breed, sex and color. Thank you for listening.--Another Pet Lover

From Wilmette, Ill.: DUMB, DUMB, DUMB! Your suggestion that Mark's girlfriend rush out and get him a puppy "to fill the hole in his heart" was stupid. Not only will the man not be thrilled, he just might refuse it. It is apparent that you know nothing about dogs, so why didn't you consult someone who does? You really bombed on that one.

Sarasota, Fla.: An animal is not a piece of merchandise that can be exchanged or replaced. As a volunteer at the local humane society, I've seen animals dropped off because some well-intentioned person decided to "surprise" a friend in the manner you described.

Minneapolis: Surprise him with a puppy!!! Would you say to a man whose wife had died, "Here's a nice girl you can have?" My younger brother's dog was hit by a car, limped home and died on our porch. My brother was coping pretty well until a neighbor woman called out her window, "I know where you can get a puppy." Then he fell apart.

Gary, Ind.: I'll bet you a dog biscuit to a doughnut that you will be in the doghouse because you advised the girlfriend to surprise her grieving fiancé with a puppy. A better suggestion would have been to allow Mark time to grieve and then give him a gift certificate so he could choose a pet when he is ready.

Virginia Beach, Va.: I had a cat from the time I was 3 years old. She became ill and had to be put to sleep. I, too, was inconsolable. Then my mom's boss asked if I would like to cat-sit while she went on vacation. She thought it would be therapeutic, so I agreed. Ann, the kitten was sweet, but I kept comparing her to my cat, who was better in every way. I'm ashamed to admit that as hard as I tried to be nice to the kitten, I was not as nice as I could have been. If she had given me that kitten as a surprise, I would have been in real trouble.

And now, dear friends, a reader in Halifax, Nova Scotia, wrote a letter that helped lift my spirits. Keep reading:

DEAR ANN: When "Rex" was hit by a car (he had been a member of the family for 16 years), I was deeply depressed for several days. Then my folks surprised me with another toy poodle, and it was the best gift I have received in my entire life.--K.F.

DEAR K.F.: Thanks for saving me from total disgrace.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, C/O Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You printed a letter recently from a woman who walked into her mother's hospital room and discovered that her mother had died half an hour before. I had a similar experience, so I can empathize with her.

My husband was seriously ill, but I did not expect him to die, nor was I told that death was imminent. When I visited "John" in the hospital, I always went directly to his room. One morning, I decided to speak to his nurse before going in to see him. When I inquired about my husband, the nurse took my arm and told me in a matter-of-fact tone, "He took a turn for the worse and passed away."

I couldn't believe what she was saying. When I asked why I hadn't been called, she had no answer and left me standing there.

I immediately went to my husband's hospital room, and the door was open -- anyone could have walked in. In fact, while I was there, the kitchen help walked in with his lunch tray.

I live only 15 minutes from the hospital. Had I been called when John took a turn for the worse, I could have been there with him. Yes, I know death is a common, everyday occurrence to nurses, but you'd think they would show a little compassion.

In the last few years, I have been hospitalized a number of times, and from my own experience, sad to say, there is no more TLC in nursing care -- it's all technology.--Fort Lee, N.J.

DEAR READER IN N.J.: My condolences on the loss of your husband. I agree that technology has resulted in less personal contact, but the majority of nurses go into the field because they truly want a career of service.

The next letter, however, strengthens your case and weakens mine. Here it is:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for "Still Grieving in Martinez, Calif." the woman who wasn't told when her mother died in the hospital.

My mother was a vibrant, vivacious, very active 53-year-old. She had a serious heart attack, but we were told she would survive. Over the next six weeks, Mom was in and out of the hospital.

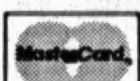

One day, while we were visiting her, she went into cardiac arrest. We were abruptly thrown out of the room, a code was called, and immediately, all kinds of machinery and personnel were rushed into her room. After about 15 minutes, a doctor came out and said, "Your mother is in bad shape, but we are doing everything we can."

Within 10 minutes, two young nurses walked out of Mom's room. They were laughing--engaged in a very animated conversation.

Our hopes soared, only to be told minutes later by the doctor that Mom had died. I will NEVER forget those two laughing faces as long as I live.--Still Heartbroken 10 Years later (Tamarac, Fla.)

Hampton adds perspective to 'The Great Depression'

Photographer Dorothea Lange's unforgettable 1936 portrait of Florence Thompson, a widowed migrant laborer, is one of the most evocative images of the Depression years of the 1930s. PBS examines this tumultuous time in American history with the seven-hour series "The Great Depression," beginning Monday.

BY MICHAEL SCOGIN

Many eyes will be on PBS in upcoming weeks as documentary filmmaker Henry Hampton tells the story of one of the most challenging economic and social periods in American history, in "The Great Depression." The series begins Monday, Oct. 25, and continues Mondays through Nov. 15.

Hampton's Blackside Inc., one of the nation's oldest minority-owned production companies, won six Emmy awards, a Peabody award and received an Academy Award nomination for its work on the 14-hour documentary "Eyes on the Prize," considered by many the definitive biography of the American civil rights movement. His follow-up, "The Great Depression," is one of this season's most anticipated PBS presentations.

Hampton doesn't disappoint. As with "Eyes," Hampton displays the ability to look back at a certain time in history and not only offer viewers a multicultural, multiregional perspective, but also use history to mirror the problems of today.

"I think people need reservoirs of history and memory around issues that seem insurmountable today," says Hampton. "If you look at that time, you will find oftentimes people got through. They found their way through the very difficult moments. You get a sense of the power that people have to create change in their own time."

Just as the civil rights era was a dramatic turning point in American history, so was the Depression. America shifted radically from the prosperity of the Roaring '20s to the economic depths of the 1930s, from unrestricted capitalism to the beginnings of a modern welfare state. America emerged from the Depression years as a country dominated by a national government rather than local ones.

"It was a powerful time in our nation's history when we literally shifted course," says Hampton. "It was a time when people really took their lives into their hands in many ways and moved forward."

"The Great Depression" draws upon the usual banks of archival and newsreel footage, but also makes compelling use of alternative sources to uncover how the nation's minorities, often neglected by mainstream media, dealt with the hardship of the time.

"The experience of Asian-Americans during the Depression is almost entirely undocumented by mainstream newsreel companies," says Jon Else, producer of the series' first installment, "A Job at Ford's." "So the footage that's in the series of Asian-Americans in California, for instance, is from home movies."

While most history books point to the stock market crash of 1929 as the beginning of the Depression, senior producer Terry Kay Rockefeller points out that the hard times actually began a few years earlier.

"We've gone back even into the late '20s and tried to tell the story of these people on the land who were already failing to make a living," she says.

Over the years, historians have disagreed over what exactly pulled America away from the Depression and the brink of a second social revolution. Was it President Roosevelt's sweeping New Deal programs or the onslaught of World War II?

"I would love to say that it wasn't the war, that America found within itself the will to deal with it," says Hampton. "You can't. It is clear that what we found in the war was an excuse to deficit finance and thereby pump the economic engine."

MOVIES ON TV

Taylor, Sheldon books adapted to film;
Saturday's films full of ghosts, witches, horror

BY BRETT ALAN BOBO

Two network movies are based on best-selling authors' books Sunday, Oct. 24. Sidney Sheldon's "A Stranger in the Mirror," airing on ABC, stars Perry King and Lori Loughlin as two people seeking fame in the gritty world of Hollywood. On NBC, Barbara Taylor Bradford's "Remember," a two-part miniseries, features Donna Mills as a woman whose presumed-dead fiancé might be alive. Cinemax's "Robert De Niro Day" presents six of the versatile actor's movies.

A cult favorite finally reaches TV Monday, Oct. 25, when "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," starring Tim Curry and Susan Sarandon, airs on Fox. "Remember" concludes on NBC. TBS gets an early start on Halloween with 1979's "Halloween II," and Dean Cain fans can see two of his films on American Movie Classics.

Tuesday, Oct. 26, CBS airs "Broken Promises," Cheryl Ladd and Robert Desiderio star in the story of a couple's frustrating effort to adopt a child.

Alfred Hitchcock devotees have another chance to see "North by Northwest" Wednesday, Oct. 27, on TNT. Cary Grant stars as an advertising executive who finds himself pursued by spies as well as law officers after he's mistaken for someone else.

The USA Network presents its original movie "The Cover Girl Murders" Thursday, Oct. 28. Showtime airs "Star Trek III: The Search for Spock."

Friday, Oct. 29, NBC rebroadcasts "The Return of Ironside," starring Raymond Burr. Sidney Poitier and Rod Taylor star in 1967's acclaimed film "In the Heat of the Night," airing on TBS.

"Double, Double, Toil and Trouble" features twins Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen in a tale about children trying to outsmart a witch and airs on ABC Saturday, Oct. 30. Horror fans have several choices: A&E's "House on Haunted Hill," TNT's "Prophecy" and USA's "Halloween II." Showtime presents Michael Keaton as a ghost in the comedy "Beetlejuice."

Oct. 24 - Oct. 30 HOROSCOPE

By C. C. Clark

Aries (March 21 - April 19)
You should seek counsel from a wise and helpful man. This man may be good at hiding his emotions, but he truly wants to help you.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20)
You must try to leave the past behind you. If you hang on to the past, you will lose new opportunities that are on the way.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20)
Success is yours, Gemini, if you keep trying. There is a possibility of travel in your future. Direct your efforts toward the arts and sciences.

Cancer (June 21 - July 20)
There is a strong person who is in a position to help you more than you know. Show compassion to those less fortunate.

Leo (July 21 - Aug. 21)
You must persevere and have the courage to succeed. There could be a new business venture on the horizon for you. Check details carefully.

Virgo (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22)
You will go through a difficult period for a while, but you will be stronger after the ordeal. Someone will help defend your actions.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)
It may seem difficult to keep up with the many demands of life, but in fact you are doing quite well. Do not take things at face value.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 22)
A sensitive and caring woman may help you see a situation in a different way. You will begin to see the success of your labor.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 - Dec. 20)
Change is inevitable, and never has it been more evident than now. You must revise your old way of thinking and garner new ideas about the world.

Capricorn (Dec. 21 - Jan. 19)
You must take a moment to step back and take stock of things. There may have been some irreparable damage done, but you will see things clearly.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)
There could be some surprises with finances, but it will be for the better. Do not put on false pretenses - others will find you out.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20)
You must stick to your guns and not be influenced by a persuasive person. It may not feel like it, but you have made the correct decision.

LET'S TALK

Dorn was cop before Klingon; Derek, Evans not siblings

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: My favorite character on "Star Trek: The Next Generation" is Lt. Worf, played by Michael Dorn. What other TV shows or films has he appeared in? I'd also love to see what he looks like without all that makeup! —C. Ray, Denton, Texas.

A: Dorn's other credits include guest appearances on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "Knots Landing," "Falcon Crest" and "227." He also played Officer Jed Turner for three years on the ABC series "CHiPs." On the big screen, he played Worf's grandfather in "Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country." For a peek at Dorn devoid of the hour-and-a-half of makeup that transforms him into the Klingon Worf, simply see the photo.

Q: Who is the couple on the sexy Taster's Choice commercials? Have they appeared on the syndicated "Highlander" series? —E. Eldridge, Portland, Ore.

A: Anthony Head and Sharon Maughan, British actors who had never worked together before until they were cast for the ads, portray the sophisticated Taster's Choice couple. They have not appeared in "Highlander."

Q: I am 13 years old. I like the actor Mark-Paul Gosselaar, who plays Zack Morris on NBC's "Saved by the Bell: The College Years." Where can I write to him? —Tommy Gatton, Danville, Ky.

A: Write him in care of "Saved by the Bell: The College Years," NBC Television Network, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91523.

Q: My mother is convinced that Linda Evans and Bo Derek are sisters; I don't agree. Could you clear this up? Also, I saw a TV movie called "Stranger in My Bed" with Armand Assante and Lindsay Wagner. Is it available on video? —Susan Rush, Pittsburgh, Pa.

A: Evans and Derek are not sisters, although John Derek (Bo's husband) was once married to Evans. "Stranger in My Bed," unfortunately, has not been released on video.

Q: Can you tell me who played Natty Gann in the movie "The Journey of Natty Gann"? What other films has she been in? —Alan Laman Jr., San Angelo, Texas.

A: Meredith Salenger starred in that 1985 Disney road film about a girl and her wolf (actually played by a dog).

Michael Dorn

Her other film credits include "The Kiss," "A Night in the Life of Jimmy Reardon," "Dream a Little Dream" and "The Edge of Honor."

Q: How long has the Family Channel's series "Rin Tin Tin, K-9 Cop" been on? Also, how old is the actor who plays Steve Katts? —A.Y., Hillsboro, Ore.

A: The show has aired for five years on The Family Channel. Andrew Bednarski, who plays Steve, is 17.

Q: I enjoy the work of Crystal Fox, who plays Officer LuAnn Corbin in the CBS series "In the Heat of the Night." I feel the character projects a positive image of an African-American woman. Please tell me all you can about her background and previous credits? —V.C., Mt. Pleasant, Texas.

A: Fox was born on New Year's Day in Tryon, N.C., and grew up in Detroit and Atlanta. She attended a performing arts high school where she studied dance and musical theater. This led to theatrical roles in "Little Shop of Horrors," "Ma Rainey's Black Bottom" and "The Rocky Horror Picture Show." She also toured nationally as Dinah Washington in the stage show "Mama, I Want to Sing" and appeared in the miniseries "Separate but Equal" and the feature film "Driving Miss Daisy." She currently lives in Atlanta, where she pursues her singing career when not working on "In the Heat of the Night."

Melanie Mayron stars as a dedicated physician whose responsibilities are threatening to overwhelm her, in "Other Women's Children," airing Sunday on Lifetime. Frederick Collins Jr. plays a young AIDS patient.

An everywoman's tale becomes Lifetime drama

BY SUZANNE GILL

"I can always tell who the villain in a Lifetime movie is," a reporter once complained. "I just look for the man."

Though this cable network for women has often aired films portraying men as the aggressors, that's not the case with "Other Women's Children," a drama airing Sunday, Oct. 24. Based on the novel of the same title by Perri-Klass, the telefilm stars Melanie Mayron ("thirtysomething") as Amelia Stewart, a staff pediatrician at a teaching hospital in Seattle. Geraint Wyn Davies co-stars as her husband, Matt, a contractor content with the slow lane, and Janet Du Bois plays the grandmother of an AIDS patient.

An enthusiastic wife, mother and friend, Amelia is equally pleased by her important new job—until the paperwork and patient load begin to crowd out any semblance of a personal life. While most working women will not identify with her high professional calling, they will certainly see themselves when the doctor's motive of loving concern for her patients turns to fear for her job as she tries to reclaim the balance between work and home.

Just as the story doesn't play quite fair when it gives its heroine a career as a lifesaver, it works on the viewer in a subtler way as well: Everyone wants a devoted doctor who will come at a run when the patient needs her.

While Klass's book drew raves, the movie's lapses (a psychologist who finds fault with her grandson's drawing) soon become distracting. One wants one's emotional investment back, but the story's tug is strong. When Matt finally demands attention for himself and their son, he is only the symptom, not the disease. As in life, the situation is problematic, and there is more than one villain. One might as easily blame the feminist movement as societal conditioning, Amelia's career choice as her thoughtless boss.

"I didn't want Amelia to look like she was having an emotional breakdown just because she had a job," Mayron says. "I asked the producers what the point of the film was. And they said, 'The point of the film is: Yes, women can have it all, but not without a price.'"

TRIVIA

In 1950, Jerry Lee Lewis was expelled from a small Texas Bible college for his vigorous, blues-tinged rendition of "My God is Real."

HIGHLIGHTS

"Let's do the Time Warp again." Tim Curry stars as the alien transvestite Frank N. Furter in the 1975 camp horror-spoof "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," which makes its TV debut on Fox Monday, Oct. 25. Executive producer Lou Adler says he never imagined the cult film airing on network TV, "mostly because I never thought we could do it a way that would perpetuate the theatrical experience." Fox's screening of the musical includes shots of typical audience interaction that made the film the most popular midnight movie ever.

HEREFORD'S

SENIOR SCENE

Supplement to The Hereford Brand NOVEMBER 1993

Center gearing up for annual festival

BY MARGIE DANIELS
Executive Director

The center is bustling with activity as preparations are being finalized for the Festival of Trees. We can hardly wait to see the 25 beautiful trees when they are previewed on the night of the festival gala Thursday, Nov. 18. Make plans to attend the tree auction on that same night; the Friday night fashion show and supper; Saturday night live with dancing and games; and the Sunday turkey buffet and the festival of choirs which follows lunch.

Be sure to tell all of the children you know about the Breakfast with Santa and Santa's Circus on Saturday, Nov. 20.

We need items for sale at the bazaar and baked goodies for the bake sale. Give us a call if you can help us out. If you can volunteer during the days of the festival for any of the activities, let us know. It will take many of us to get ready for festival events and to keep things moving along.

The festival is the major fund raising activity for the senior center. It is nice to be able to sponsor an event for people of all ages to enjoy.

The festival is also becoming quite well known. There have been calls from the Austin Statesman and the Houston Chronicle requesting specific information about the festival for them to publish in the travel sections of the two papers.

See you at the Festival of Trees Nov. 18-21.

President's Corner

BY SHIRLEY GARRISON
HSCA President

We are thankful for the good rain. It is very helpful to all the wheat, especially the dry land. I think the corn is harvested and the milo and seed crops are at about 70 percent completed. The cold spell last Thursday will help get the cotton ready and should raise the sugar in the beets. The corn yields, on the average, were below last year by some 15 percent. A lot of stocker calves have moved into the Hereford area and are being processed for the wheat and stalk fields.

The Senior Citizens Center is buzzing with activity, much of it is in preparation for the Festival of Trees Nov. 18-21. This is our main support activity for the center and it is absolutely necessary that it is successful.

This year, the volunteers are creating a special tree called the Hereford Senior Trunk Tree which will have decorations of different sizes designating Festival contributions of different levels. This gift tree will allow individuals to join with others to make a substantial group donation for this fund raiser.

Watch out for new rules when cashing in on your retirement

If you're leaving your job, facing retirement or taking a new position, you may well be entitled to some money from your company's retirement plan.

This could be one of the largest single sums you've ever received, and choosing how to save or invest it may seem overwhelming. You'll also have to pay taxes at some point.

Tax laws have changed recently, making it even more important for you to understand your options before you receive a lump sum or retirement-plan distribution.

Previously, employees could accept a check for the entire amount of a qualified plan distribution and reinvest (or roll over) the money into another qualified plan or Individual Retirement Account (IRA) within 60 days without penalty.

However, a new tax law which took effect the first of the year imposes a 20 percent withholding requirement on most retirement plan distributions, except those from IRAs.

In other words, if you take a distribution from a qualified plan instead of directly transferring it to another plan or IRA, 20 percent must be withheld and forwarded to the IRS, with the possibility of a later refund. Withholding cannot be waived.

The new law also applies to rollovers, defined as the direct payment of retirement plan money to you for reinvestment to a qualified plan or IRA within 60 days. If you are under age 59 1/2, you may also have to pay a 10 percent early withdrawal penalty.

To avoid taxes and penalties, you must either directly transfer your distribution or roll over all of your distribution by using other money, such as savings, to make up for the money that's been withheld.

The new law was enacted to pay for additional jobless benefits for unemployed workers. Some members of Congress have considered trying to repeal the law, but many experts believe such an effort would not succeed. Since tax law changes frequently, it's important to check with a tax advisor before you decide about your own circumstances.

In addition to your tax advisor, talk to your employee benefits department about the details of your distribution and options available. Also talk to your attorney or accountant to learn how your lump sum distribution fits into your overall estate plan.

Finally, a helpful guide that clearly explains your options when receiving a lump sum distribution is available free from the AARP Investment Program from Scudder Investor Services, Inc. Call 1-800-322-2282.

Fill the gaps in Medicare

Medicare is a vital part of a health insurance portfolio for millions of Americans. However, people must still find ways to pay for the things Medicare doesn't cover, such as deductibles and coinsurance charges. Medicare supplement insurance can help fill these gaps.

New Medicare enrollees may select from any one of 10 standardized Medicare supplement plans approved for sale in their state of residence. Plans start with a basic benefits plan or Plan A, and continue up through the comprehensive Plan J, which provides supplemental coverage for nearly all of Medicare's gaps.

Which of Medicare's gaps are most important for you to cover? First, identify your needs, then the plan that will meet them. Next, select a company.

It is important to investigate the plan providers in your state in order to find one that: is financially sound; offers competitive rates and top-notch service; and offers the plan you want.

The plans and their benefits are the same among all insurance companies offering Medicare supplement coverage, but rates will vary, sometimes significantly.

Find out if the company is using flat rating, entry-age rating or attained-age rating. Flat rating means a company charges everyone the same rate for a particular plan. The flat rate will not increase as you grow older.

Entry-age rating offers different rates for a plan, based on your age at the time of enrollment. Like flat rating, the rate will not increase simply because you grow older.

Attained-age rating means your plan's monthly rate will increase based on a predetermined age-rated schedule. Your age when applying for a plan may be used to determine your eligibility.

You'll also want to explore the potential difficulty of enrolling in the plan you want. Some Medicare supplement carriers underwrite all of the standardized plans, but some only underwrite a select few. If a plan is underwritten, the status of your health at the time of enrollment is used to determine your eligibility. Some companies may only ask a few questions regarding your health background. Others require an extensive medical history.

If you are enrolled or planning to enroll in both Medicare parts A and B, you can enroll in a Medigap policy up to three months prior to your 65th birthday. Several organizations and volunteer groups, including the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), can provide you with Medicare supplement insurance information. Your state's insurance department is another excellent resource for health insurance information.

For information about supplemental health insurance for people age 50 and over, call the AARP Group Health Insurance Program at 1-800-523-5800 and ask for Operator 181.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: Will Social Security accept photocopies instead of original documents as evidence to support a claim?

A: No. The person processing the claim must certify that he or she has seen the original document or a certified copy of the original. Documents can be altered and the alteration will not be visible in the photocopy. All original documents will be returned to you.

Q: I'll be 64 next June and I plan to retire then. When do I need to file for my Social Security benefits?

A: You can call Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213 or the local office at 376-2241, and set up an appointment to talk with a representative about your retirement plans now. Under current Social Security laws, many people can get additional benefits by filing a retirement claim that goes into effect in January, even if they don't plan to retire or cut back on their work until later in the year.

Q: I am 65 years old and I have been having a difficult time making ends met since my husband died. I have heard about SSI, but I think I own too much to qualify. I have a house, a car, and some property my husband left me. Should I apply anyway?

A: By all means, you should apply. First of all, SSI does not count many of the things you own that are essential to your support, like a house and car. And you can own up to $2,000 of countable resources ($3,000 if you're married) before it affects your eligibility. Also, if you still own too much, you may still qualify for benefits if you agree to sell the excess resources within a certain time (9 months for real estate, 6 months for personal property). In 1993, the maximum monthly Federal SSI benefit is $434 for an eligible person and $652 for an eligible couple, but many states add money to the basic benefit.

Q: I'm 63 years old and I've been off work for the past few months with some medical problems. I want to go back to work, but my doctor says I should retire. If I apply for Social Security benefits now, won't my checks be reduced?

A: Social Security retirement benefits are reduced five ninths of 1 percent of each month you receive them before age 65. At age 63, that would be a 13 percent reduction, however, there is no reduction if you qualify for disability. So you should apply for Social Security disability benefits at the same time you apply for Social Security retirement benefits. The retirement application can be processed more quickly than the disability application, and the benefit amount initially will be reduced. If your disability application is approved, your benefit amount will be increased.

Keys to senior fitness

For older people, experts say, exercise is an essential part of life. Walking, bicycling, dancing--any kind of aerobic exercise--can lower your blood pressure and keep your cholesterol levels down.

Of course, exercise will also help you maintain your normal body weight. And weight-bearing workouts deposit calcium in the bones, helping to prevent osteoporosis.

Before you start an exercise program though, be sure to check with your doctor. And once you get going, remember to drink plenty of water.

Doctors recommend drinking six to eight glasses of water each day. When working out, however, it's especially important to have a glass about 20 minutes before exercising and another 20 minutes afterwards to avoid dehydration.

It's also a good idea to take a couple of water breaks while you're exercising. Take along one of those handy squeeze bottles filled with water when you go for a walk or bike ride.

Up until 1830 when anyone purchased a bar of soap, the grocer simply hacked off a chunk from a large block.

To make sure your water tastes as good and refreshing as you want it to, you might consider installing point-of-use water-treatment system. The system can remove unpleasant tastes and odors and reduce the levels of many specific contaminants if they are present. There are a variety of water-treatment devices on the market, from small, easy-to-carry carbon filter pitchers to elaborate, more permanent distillation systems.

The carbon filter is a proven technique for improving many taste and odor problems that can affect water. It reduces many soluble organic contaminants, chlorine and solid particles.

The filter works by a process called adsorption, which means contaminants stick to the surface of the carbon. The longer the water stays in contact with the carbon, the more contaminants are reduced.

Reverse osmosis units force pressurized water through a membrane. As water passes through the microscopic membrane, most contaminants are left behind.

The system is especially effective at reducing lead, copper, radium, sodium, nitrates, some pesticides and scale-producing minerals, among other contaminants.

A distillation system works by raising the water temperature to boiling. At this point, the water turns to vapor, generally leaving behind contaminants, microscopic solids and organic materials. The water vapor then enters a condenser where it cools and returns to a liquid state.

Nutrition Notes

By CHARLOTTE CLARK
MS RD/LD
VEGETARIAN DIETS

Almost unnoticed vegetarian diets have entered the mainstream of American eating habits. Like many people, you may want to separate myths from facts about this eating pattern.

MYTH: If you have seen one vegetarian diet, you've seen them all.

FACT: Not true. Vegetarians who consume milk and eggs are called "lacto-ovo-vegetarians." Those who include milk, but no eggs, are called "lacto-vegetarians." "Semi-vegetarians" will eat some fish or poultry. The strict or total "vegan." "Macrobiotic vegetarians" emphasize whole grains and sea vegetables, and the animal products used are fish-based.

MYTH: There are very few vegetarians.

FACT: Vegetarian diets are growing in popularity. A recent survey found that there are now 12 million vegetarians in the United States, a significant increase over the last 10 years. Another survey by the National Restaurant Association found that 20% of customers want a vegetarian option when they eat in a restaurant.

MYTH: You can't get all the nutrients you need on a vegetarian diet.

FACT: lacto-ovo-and lacto-vegetarian diets can provide all the essential nutrients. As a diet becomes more restrictive though, it may be more difficult to get enough nutrients.

REMEMBER THAT THE ADEQUACY OF ANY DIET DEPENDS ON THE VARIETY AND THE AMOUNT OF FOODS THAT ARE INCLUDED.

The nutrient of greatest concern in the vegan and strict vegetarian diet is Vitamin B 12. There have been reports of Vitamin B 12 deficiency among strict vegetarians, including infants who were breast-fed by vegan mothers. This vitamin is found only in animal products or plant food products that have been fortified.

Nutrient needs are greatest during periods of growth. So, a vegan diet must be planned carefully to meet the needs of children. Young vegan children may fill up their small stomachs before they meet their energy needs. Therefore, high-calorie foods should be included in their diets regularly. Consideration should be given to calcium intake, vitamin D, and iron, as well. Nuts, seeds, peanut butter, avocado, fortified soy products, vegetable oil, spreads, and salad dressing can add needed calories and nutrients. When using nuts and seeds, be sure to chop finely for younger children.

MYTH: You can't get enough protein on a vegetarian diet.

FACT: It is difficult not to get enough protein if you eat sufficient food to maintain your healthful body weight. That's because all foods, except sugar and oil, contain some protein.

Basic protein foods for the vegetarian include whole wheat and enriched grains, dry beans and peas, and seeds and nuts. Every day a person needs 6 to 11 servings of grains and 2 to 3 servings of dry beans and peas, or nuts and seeds. Strict vegetarians may need more servings of these foods to supply their energy needs. Lower-fat milk and milk products, eggs, and cholesterol-free eggs alternatives are good sources of protein and other nutrients for vegetarians.

MYTH: Certain combinations of foods have to be eaten at the same meal to get the right amino acids (the building blocks of protein).

FACT: Certain protein-building amino acids are considered essential because our bodies can not make them. Therefore, we must get them from foods we eat. While all essential amino acids are readily found in animal foods, plant foods contain different amounts of particular amino acids, in some cases less, in some more. Fortunately, different plant foods can be combined to provide all the necessary amino acids. For example, the amino acids in rice combined with those in beans add up to a complete set. The amino acids in different foods can complement one another even when eaten at different meals. So, beans at lunch and rice at dinner are just fine.

MYTH: Vegetarian diets are low in fat.

FACT: Vegetarian diets may or may not be low in fat. It all depends on the food included. Some people are so worried about getting enough protein that they eat a lot of high-fat cheese. As we have seen, this is not necessary. Vegetarian diets that rely to a greater extent on plant foods are likely to be low in fat because few plant foods are high in fat. Olives, nuts, and avocados have a high fat content, but this fat is less saturated than that fat found in animal foods and does not pose as great a problem.

MYTH: Vegetarian diets are boring.

FACT: A diet is boring when you eat the same food every day, especially if they are prepared in the same way. With the abundance of vegetarian foods to choose from and the variety of ways to prepare them, there's no need for a meatless diet to be boring.

Also, many restaurants in the country are now serving meatless meals. For example, pasta primavera, vegetable lasagna, cold sesame noodles, and bean-filled tortillas are frequently found on menus. In addition, many new wholesome vegetarian convenience foods are now available in the marketplace.

Information is included in this article for individual's reference if their diet is low in calcium or iron.

Calcium Sources	Serving Size	Milligrams
• low-fat or nonfat yogurt	1 cup	415
• nonfat dry milk powder	1/4 cup	400
• ricotta cheese (part-skim)	1/2 cup	335
• nonfat or 1% milk*	1 cup	315
• soy milk (fortified)	1 cup	300
• tofu, firm	1/2 cup	260
• turnip greens, cooked	1 cup	250
• soybean nuts, dry roasted	1/2 cup	230
• broccoli, cooked	1 cup	180
• collards, cooked	1 cup	150

*Milk is fortified with vitamin D, which, with calcium, helps build strong bones and teeth. Other sources of vitamin D include: sunlight; fortified margarine, butter, and milk substitutes; herring, salmon, and sardines.

Facts about kidney disease

Most Americans take their kidneys for granted, yet one's survival depends upon them.

The kidneys perform four vital functions: ridding the body of waste products; ridding the body of excess fluids; regulating blood pressure; and stimulating red blood cell production.

In the United States alone, more than 400,000 adults and children suffer from kidney disease.

FACTS TO REMEMBER

-Kidney disease will affect one out of every 20 persons in your community.

-Urinary tract infections are the major cause of work loss among women.

-Untreated high blood pressure, strep throat and exposure to toxins are among the major preventable causes of kidney failure.

WARNINGS SIGNS OF KIDNEY DISEASE

-Swelling of parts of the body, particularly around the eyes, ankles and wrists.

-Lower back pain where the kidneys are located.

-Burning sensation during urination.

-High blood pressure.

-Change in the frequency of urination.

Since 1971, the American Kidney Fund has provided direct financial aid for chronic kidney disease sufferers, and conducted community outreach projects and education programs for renal patients, health care professionals and the general public.

Grocery shelves to feature new food labels in 1994

New labels will be required for food products on the grocery shelf after May 1994. A sample of the new look is included with this article.

The label will be called "Nutrition Facts." It is designed to provide the type of information that today's consumer wants and needs. In addition, it will give facts in a uniform and understandable manner.

For example, current cereal labels typically express serving sizes in ounces. The new label will show servings in a size more typical of what a person really eats (one cup). Plus, serving sizes will be required to be the same across product lines.

Today's diet plans place an emphasis on controlling fat intake. The new label simplifies this process. It shows what number of calories that come from fat in any serving.

The label will provide a good learning tool for consumers. It will show a breakdown of the nutrients that the FDA considers important to public health. It will have the value (in percent) of each item in terms of a healthy diet.

The label even provides a reference chart at the bottom. Consumers will be able to use it to help plan a careful diet.

A free booklet is available from the American Heart Association and FDA, How to Read the New Food Label. Write to Consumer Information Center, Dept. 79, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Leaf it up to nature: Create a compost area

For today's gardener, raking up fall's leaves is the easy part. Disposing of them is more difficult.

It has been estimated that 20 percent of our landfill space contains lawn and garden debris. With the current landfill crisis, a growing number of communities now refuse to accept leaves and grass clippings as part of their normal trash service. So, what can be done with this unavoidable fall harvest?

The Garden Council suggests recycling leaves, giving them back to nature in the form of compost or mulch. The process is easy and has a real pay-off for the gardener, as well as the environment. Dr. Doug Welsh of the Texas Agriculture Extension Service says composting is as easy as 1,2,3, and 4:

1. Gather the leaves. Rake the leaves into a pile and then run the lawn mower through to shred. Some lawn mowers now have leaf choppers attached to them. The leaves will be easier to handle and will decompose faster.

2. Create a compost area. This can simply be a hole dug into a remote corner of the yard, a home-constructed bin, or one of the commercial units now on the market. To construct your own compost bin, nail pieces of wood together in a "U" shape, 2 to 3 feet high. You can attach chicken wire to it to keep it aerated.

3. Add leaves in three-layer formula: 10 to 12 inches of leaves, one inch of soil and a handful of nitrogen fertilizer. Repeat layers to a three-foot level—filling the compost bin. Grass clippings and plant debris can also be added.

4. Add moisture and stir. the important difference between compost and rotting leaves is turning the compost material on a regular basis to add oxygen and moisture. If the season is dry, you may need to add some water, but don't soak.

A successful compost pile will generate considerable heat as micro-organisms break down matter. The middle of the pile can reach 150 to 200 degrees. On a cold day, when you see steam rising from the pile, you'll know you're making progress. This pasteurizing process will kill all weed seeds and diseased organisms, resulting in clean, healthy humus to add to the garden.

In cold climates, the compost pile will freeze in winter, but after winter's thaw, will start to cook again.

If space allows, it's best to keep two or three compost piles working so that one can be cooking while you use the other. During cool weather, it may take three months for the compost to be complete. You'll know it's done by the dark color and earthy smell.

Next spring, when you dig your "private label" compost into the flower beds, your plants will shoot up—more beautiful than ever—to thank you for recycling.

Porcelain dolls to be given away

Several members of the Hereford Senior Citizens Association are busy making porcelain dolls. In charge of the project are Rosalee McGowen, Jolene Bledsoe and Margie Daniels.

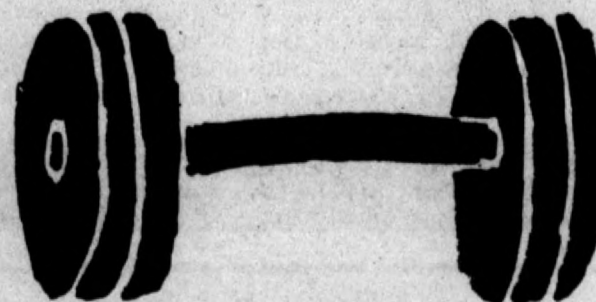

Two of the beautiful handmade dolls will be given away at a drawing scheduled during the Annual Festival of Trees Nov. 18-21.

Social Security

Q. If I ask someone to represent me when I file for Social Security disability, can that individual charge a fee for the service?

A. Yes, but the fees must be approved by Social Security.

Q. I am presently attending a Baptist Theological Seminary. After I receive my ministry, will I be covered by Social Security?

A. Yes. Under current law, the services that you perform in the exercise of your ministry are covered under Social Security unless you apply for an exemption on the basis of conscientious objection or opposition to the acceptance of public insurance on religious principles.

As a member of the clergy, you are considered self-employed. The application for exemption is IRS Form 4361--Application for Exemption From Self-Employment Tax for Use by Ministers, Members of Religious Orders and Christian Science Practitioners. Contact the Internal Revenue Service for additional information.

Q. Will Social Security accept photocopies instead of original documents as evidence to support a claim?

A. No. The person processing the claim must certify that he or she has seen the original document or a certified copy of the original. Documents can be altered and the alteration will not be visible in the photocopy. All original documents will be returned to you.

Q. I'll be 64 next June and I plan to retire then. When do I need to file for my Social Security benefits?

A. You should call Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213, and set up an appointment to talk with a representative about your retirement plans now. Under current Social Security laws, many people can get additional benefits by filing a retirement claim that goes into effect in January, even if they don't plan to retire or cut back on their work until later in the year.

Q. I'm 63 years old and I've been off work for the past few months with some medical problems. I want to go back to work, but my doctor says I should retire. If I apply for Social Security benefits now, won't my checks be reduced?

A. Social Security retirement benefits are reduced five ninths of one percent for each month you receive them before age 65. At age 63, that would be a 13 percent reduction, however, there is no reduction if you qualify for disability. So you should apply for Social Security disability benefits at the same time you apply for Social Security retirement benefits. The retirement application can be processed more quickly than the disability application, and the benefit amount initially will be reduced. If your disability application is approved, your benefit amount will be increased.

Q. I received a letter from Social Security that they plan to review my disability claim. My condition hasn't changed, and I am not working. Why am I being reviewed?

A. Social Security disability benefits are paid to people who are disabled and unable to do substantial work. The law requires that Social Security disability cases be reviewed periodically to see that beneficiaries are still disabled. The frequency of the review depends on the severity of your impairment and the likelihood of improvement. If your condition has not changed and you are not working, your benefits will not be affected.

Q. I am 65 years old and I have been having a difficult time making ends meet since my husband died. I have heard about SSI, but I think I own too much to qualify. I have a house, a car, and some property my husband left me. Should I apply anyway?

A. By all means, you should apply. First of all, SSI does not count many of the things you own that are essential to your support, like a house and car. And you can own up to $2,000 of countable resources ($3,000 if you're married) before it affects your eligibility. Also, if you still own too much, you may still qualify for benefits if you agree to sell the excess resources within a certain time (nine months for real estate, six months for personal property).

In 1993, the maximum monthly Federal SSI benefit is $434 for an eligible person and $652 for an eligible couple, but many states add money to the basic benefit.

Q. Does Medicare pay for home health visits?

A. Medicare pays for home health visits only if all four of the following conditions are met:

- The care you need includes intermittent skilled nursing care, physical therapy, or speech therapy;
- You are confined to your home;
- You are under the care of a physician who determines you need home health care and sets up a home health care plan for you; and

-The home health care agency providing services participate in Medicare.

When you no longer need intermittent nursing care, physical therapy or speech therapy, Medicare will pay for home health services if you continue to need occupational therapy.

Q. My neighbor just told me that once you qualify for Medicare, the program pays for all of your home health care. Is this correct?

A. No. Some home health care is covered, but those services not covered by Medicare include:

- 24-hour-a-day nursing care at home;
- drugs and biologicals;
- meals delivered to your home;
- homemaker services; and
- blood transfusions.

Q. When my ex-husband retires, can I receive wife's benefits even if we're divorced?

A. If you and your ex-husband were married for at least 10 years and if you are at least 62 years of age and currently unmarried, you will be eligible to receive divorced wife's benefits based on his Social Security work record. If your ex-husband is at least 62, you can receive divorced wife's benefits even if he is still working and not yet drawing his own Social Security retirement benefits if you've been divorced from him at least two years.

You can receive up to half of your ex-husband's benefit if you wait until you're age 65. At age 62, you receive about 38 percent. Any benefits payable to you do not affect those payable to his current wife or minor children.
