See a penny...

Ole Olsen holds a penny to symbolize his firm's 1-cent sale — buy a Lear Jet for $1 million and get a second for a penny.

...And it only cost a penny

By JIM PRESNELL
Energy-Business Writer

Now! See our 1-cent Sale! Come and get 'em!

For one week only, Petro Jet Aviation Inc., an aircraft charterer and broker at Midland Regional Air Terminal, is having a 1 cent sale. Buy one of four fast, sleek jet aircraft for a cool $1 million and get the second jet for one penny.

Equipped with a wet bar, a telephone, sink-in seating and an atmosphere of lofty luxury, the flip-open door of a Lear Jet stares at the observer, eyeing his wealth. Lear Jets have been termed the "fastest moving office in the world" for busy executives and staffs.

A classic case of excess supply triggered Petro Jet's unique effort to stimulate some demand. Through a sales technique best known to K-Mart Stores Inc., Petro Jet will try to unload its inventory of jets so it can buy more of them. The sales technique seems strange as the company president describes the "prestige and status" of owning a Lear Jet.

But offbeat or not, Petro Jet's sale has garnered "incredible" response, officials said, especially from people who did not know they could afford a Lear.

Out of five, four jets remain. One 10-seat Lear Jet 25 was sold Wednesday for a sum greater than $650,000. It was not part of the 1-cent sale.

Lear Jets cost $2.2 million new — and that includes figuring a 6 percent discount from the Tucson, Ariz., factory.

Two years ago, a used Lear Jet sold for $1.2 million — right at book value. In fact, offers-to-buy were refused as high as $1.5 million, because the plane's owner had more money than that invested in the craft.

Ole Olsen, president of Petro Jet, said Thursday his company is offering the six- and eight-seat planes at lower than market value in this one-week offer because "today's economy is weakened. This dictates competitive pricing — dealing in volume, we can reduce the price to better enable people to afford a Lear Jet.

"The price is now equal or lower than the price for a (slower) turboprop aircraft," Olsen said. These words came from the same marketing man who offered in 1981 "Buy a Rolls Royce for a million dollars and get a Lear Jet free!" Three of the car/jet pairs were sold.

In having a Lear Jet at your disposal, if you're a businessman, Olsen said "You leave when you feel like leaving. You go direct to your destination. You return when you need to: There's no more basing your business schedule on the schedules offered by commercial airlines."

"And we don't lose your luggage," commented Petro Jet sales manager Marc Mustafa.

Petro Jet invested in an inventory of Lear Jets recently because prices were depressed and the company found good deals. Interim use of the planes for charter service — at $2.50 to $2.75 per mile — helped pay costs of service and has kept the firm's five Lear Jets in top flying shape, say company officials.

A trip to Butte, Mont., is over $5,500 by Petro Jet charter — but you can take who you like, stay just a little, and come back. If one is with associates at a meeting in Butte you can forego staying in any hotels, renting cars, or any other tiresome expenses — just fly, meet, and fly back.

Calculation changes net slight CPI rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department, rejiggering its major measure of inflation, said today that consumer prices rose a scant 0.2 percent in January. Had the old calculation been used, consumer prices would have been unchanged.

Housing costs rose substantially, as had been expected under the new formula, but heating oil prices posted a record drop and gasoline prices were also off sharply.

The old calculation had been widely criticized for over-emphasizing the effect of homeownership costs.

Under the new Consumer Price Index formula, the department said housing costs rose 0.5 percent in January. Under the former calculation, housing costs tumbled 0.8 percent in December.

Gasoline prices last month fell 3.3 percent. As of January, gasoline prices were 10.6 percent below their peak level of March 1981. Home heating oil prices plunged 4.1 percent. Prices for both fuels fell in December.

The fresh declines in energy prices are largely the result of the continuing worldwide oil glut. Analysts expect even further declines as some major exporting nations have cut their wholesale prices and others ponder similar price slashing.

Assessing the record fall in heating oil prices — the sharpest drop since such records were first kept in 1952 — department analysts cited the lingering surpluses and recession, increased conservation efforts and the mild winter.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the new inflation report "indicates price increases in the United States are continuing at a very moderate level."

"It's good news because it indicates this factor, coupled with potential energy price decreases, makes the inflation picture for 1983 look increasingly favorable," he said.

Food prices, meanwhile, climbed a tiny 0.1 percent after holding steady in the two previous months. Medical care costs, which soared thourghout 1982, rose a sharp 0.8 percent.

Inflation last year was 3.9 percent, the smallest rise in a decade. Under an experimental measure similar to the new one, 1982's inflation at the retail level would have been 5 percent.

For the 12 months ending in January, prices rose 3.8 percent under the new formula. If last month's 0.2 percent seasonally adjusted rise held steady for 12 straight months, the yearly gain would be 2.1 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure the department makes public.

Under the old measure, consumer prices fell 0.3 percent in December, only the second decline recorded since 1965. The department, revising its calculations for the two preceding months, said today that prices held steady in November and rose 0.4 percent in October.

The department, in refiguring the housing cost component of the index, is attempting to measure what homeowners would charge themselves if they were renting their homes. By no longer considering current home prices and mortgage rates, the department is eliminating the investment value of a house.

Analysts in and out of government said the old formula gave too much weight to swings in mortgage rates and home prices. Skyrocketing interest rates and home prices tended to skewer the index upward while recent falls may have understated inflation.

Under the new "rental equivalence" formula, the department said that a typical homeowner have seen his costs rise 0.7 percent in January, while a typical renter's costs were up 0.6 percent.

The new calculations are reflected only in the department's Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers.

They won't be made for two more years in a companion index — the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers — which is widely used in collective bargaining agreements and in adjusting Social Security and other government payments.

Though Reagan moves quickly on EPA, critics still dissatisfied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although President Reagan wasted no time replacing three fired managers at the Environmental Protection Agency, some congressmen say they won't be satisfied until he does something about Administrator Anne M. Burford.

For her part, Mrs. Burford acknowledged to reporters Thursday she had considered whether she may be becoming a political liability to the president. But she said she rejected the notion.

"I am not a quitter. I am there to do a job," she said in a television interview in San Francisco.

However, some of the subcommittee chairmen who have been pursuing allegations of mismanagement and political manipulation of a $1.6 billion hazardous waste clean up fund said Mrs. Burford — Anne Gorsuch before her marriage Sunday — will have to go.

"If they think this is a fresh start, they have got to start at the very top," said Rep. James Florio, D-N.J. "If the administration wants to send out a signal of a new beginning, Mrs. Burford is the one who has set the tone."

Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., called Reagan's personnel shifts Thursday "too little, too late" and said a real house cleaning "should aim a little bit higher."

The president, however, said the only scandal brewing at the EPA "is in the media that's talking about it."

However, The New York Times said in today's editions the White House had begun its own investigation of contacts between the president's senior aides and the EPA to determine whether the cleanup program had been manipulated politically.

Unidentified officials were quoted as saying counsel Fred Fielding was gathering "issue alerts" sent over by the agency last year, and from April to September directly to Edward Rollins, the top political staffer.

Rollins was quoted as saying he did not pay much attention to the bulletins and never asked EPA or any other agency to change or delay a planned action.

Meanwhile, Rita Lavelle, whose firing by Reagan on Feb. 7 triggered the flood of allegations, ended up 10 hours of congressional testimony Thursday with the revelation that she believes her telephone has been tapped.

She said she had "no idea" who might have done the bugging, but she said she confirmed suspicions of a tap by testing her telephone with a handheld electronic device.

In addition to hearing Ms. Lavelle's testimony, the House Public Works subcommittee heard a tape recording of unidentified EPA employees discussing burning agency records.

After the mention of burning records, one employee said "like Watergate?" and another replied "like Stringfellow-gate," an apparent reference to the Stringfellow Acid Pits in Riverside, Calif., a dump which has become the focus of several investigations.

Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, D-Ga. and chairman of the subcommittee, said the workers noted they were "kidding" and he said he believed that to be the case.

Levitas' subcommittee, which reached an agreement with the White House last week over release of subpoenaed documents, was to begin receiving those documents in closed session today.

Man's paper on China leads to expulsion from program

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — An anthropology student expelled from Stanford University's doctoral program after writing about forced abortions and infanticide in China has vowed to "use every recourse" to appeal the decision.

"A scholar's first duty is the truth," said Steven Mosher after learning of his expulsion Thursday. The faculty committee weighing his academic fate "chose to believe the charges that were brought against me by the Chinese," he said.

"The Chinese say I used the article to attack China," Mosher said. "But they do not say the article was wrong."

The Stanford committee had investigated complaints that the 34-year-old student violated professional ethics and engaged in illegal activities while doing field research in Guangdong Province, in southeastern China, for 10 months during 1979 and 1980.

Faculty members would not comment on the complaints.

But a letter from department chairman Clifford Barnett, which Mosher disclosed, praised his "excellent academic record" and said the decision to expel him was made with great regret.

Asked whether he regretted the article, Mosher replied, "I don't regret it at the moment. When the article initially came out, I came under a great deal of pressure by those who felt I was ... jeopardizing opportunities for others to go to China to do research."

Odessa man, son killed in separate cycle mishaps

ODESSA — An Odessa father and his young son were killed three hours apart here Thursday afternoon in two separate motorcycle accidents, both involving trucks.

Police said the first fatality occurred when a 1977 Yamaha driven by 29-year-old Frank Wayne Bolton crashed into two trucks near the intersection of 16th Street and West County Road about 12:25 p.m. He was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital an hour later.

Bolton's son, 12-year-old Donnie Wayne Bolton, died at MCH early this morning. He had been severely injured when his 1983 Honda also struck a truck. That accident occurred about 3:35 p.m. Thursday at the intersection of 42nd Street and Flamingo Road.

The Department of Public Safety said the boy's motorcycle hit a welding truck driven by Clifford Doyle Williams of Odessa. He was not injured.

City police, who investigated the first accident, said the elder Bolton was southbound on West County Road and ran into the rear of a city truck stopped for a red light at 16th Street. The motorcycle then veered into a nearby gas station and struck a truck parked at the gas pumps. The city truck was driven by 30-year-old David Askevich of Odessa.

Services for Bolton and his son are pending at the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home. The boy was a sixth-grade student at Murray Fly Elementary School.

No charges were filed in either accident, according to police.

AP Laserphoto Map

Sunny skies are forecast for most of the nation Saturday, according to the National Weather Service. Cold weather is expected across the northern tier, with mild weather through the South. Rain is forecast for the Pacific Northwest.

Cloudiness, some showers forecast

As the end of February grows closer, so does the end of a relatively dry month. Chances of showers, which should decrease to 30 percent for tonight and Saturday, are expected to raise the .06 of an inch of recorded precipitation for the month. Precipitation for the year stands at 1.22 inches.

A canopy of clouds will continue to hover over the Tall City through Saturday. Lows tonight are expected to drop into the lower 40s while temperatures should reach the lower 60s Saturday.

Winds will be from the south and southeast at 10-20 mph tonight, continuing from the southeast at 10-20 mph Saturday.

Thursday's warm high of 72 was 12 degrees below the record high of 84, set for that date in 1956. The overnight low of 38 was 27 degrees warmer than 1960's record low of 11.

Oil ministers gather for session in Paris

PARIS (AP) — Oil ministers from Venezuela, Mexico, Algeria and Kuwait met here in the latest series of emergency contacts among major oil producers worried about recent price cuts by three countries.

As the Paris meeting convened Thursday, Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani met in Riyadh with his Libyan counterpart, Kamel Hassan Maghur, in a last-ditch effort to forge a unified oil price reduction within OPEC.

But informed sources there said the Saudis were growing increasingly skeptical of reaching a new oil price reduction accord by all 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

For every $1 cut in the oil price, the price of gasoline at the pump could drop as much as 2½ cents a gallon.

"An OPEC meeting will be necessary," Algerian Energy Minister Belkacem Nabi told reporters here Thursday. "It is indispensable that a general consultation takes place. We want all action concerning prices and production to be taken within OPEC as they have been for 22 years."

Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti said the once-powerful cartel, which controlled the international market in the 1970s, was experiencing a difficult period.

"It is a test for our organization and we will have to prove that we can get out of these problems, which are short-term problems," he said.

Calderon Berti said Venezuela favors a meeting of OPEC oil ministers to discuss the current market situation but that it wants "guarantees" that such a meeting will be successful before committing itself to another OPEC conference.

OPEC meetings in Geneva last month and in Vienna in December failed to reach a unified position on either pricing or production quotas.

The Saudis, reportedly trying to win OPEC support for a $4 reduction in the $34 a barrel OPEC price, might boycott a special session of the cartel, informants in Riyadh said. An OPEC meeting is reportedly scheduled next week either in Geneva or Vienna.

The leading Saudi newspaper, Al-Riyadh, said: "The current negotiations in Riyadh are the last chance to save what can be saved" for OPEC and the world economy. It added that the "first wave of recession" in a price war would inundate all oil producers.

Yamani announced on Wednesday that Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Kuwait, Iraq and Indonesia had agreed on a unified pricing strategy, but he revealed no figures.

Besides Libya, the Saudis are encountering resistence from some of their Arab allies in the Persian Gulf, Iran, Nigeria and Ecuador.

Calderon Berti said he will go to Riyadh today to meet with gulf oil producers. Another Venezuelan delegation will fly to Oslo for talks with Norwegian officials following earlier meetings with the British, he said.

He said Mexico has indicated its willingness to confer with other major oil producers, including those outside the cartel, and that Venezuela and Mexico also agree on the importance of bringing consumers into negotiations with producers to establish principles for "a long-term relationship."

Britain and Norway started the latest round of cuts by slashing $3 off their North Sea crude, making it $30.50 a barrel. Nigeria, the only OPEC member to break from the organization's official pricing structure, had a $5.50 reduction to $30 a barrel.

The falling price of oil gave investors a new confidence and stocks soared. In Washington, President Reagan called the price decline "more good news for the world economy" and said it would spur economic recovery and "free vast amounts to real resources that previously had been devoted to energy."

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said a 10 percent drop in world oil prices would reduce the U.S. oil bill by more than $10 billion and could increase the Gross National Product by between one-quarter and one-half percentage point. He said a decline in oil prices "is clearly to be desired."

Reagan postpones decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite assurances that congressional leaders would probably back him, President Reagan is postponing a decision on attempting to further decontrol natural gas prices at a time of skyrocketing consumer bills.

Energy Secretary Donald Hodel told Reagan Thursday that he got a "generally favorable" response from congressional leaders in his talks with them the past two weeks on the administration's proposals.

But deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan indicated that he wants to talk with those congressmen himself before deciding whether to send decontrol legislation to Capitol Hill.

Although Speakes said Reagan did not indicate when he will make that decision, Rep. James Broyhill of North Carolina, the ranking Republican on the House Energy Committee, told GOP colleagues the administration is expected to submit its proposals in early March.

Energy Department sources acknowledged that officials worked late Wednesday night putting together a 33-page draft bill for consideration at at meeting Thursday between Reagan and his Cabinet Council on Natural Resources.

Reagan campaigned in 1980 on a pledge to speed up decontrol of natural gas, but the administration's efforts have been sidetracked for two years because of stiff opposition in Congress.

Hodel, sent out by the White House two weeks ago to test the waters on Capitol Hill, has defused some of that opposition with a bill including provisions that the administration claims would protect consumers from rate increases averaging 25 percent this winter.

After meeting with Hodel, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy Committee, called the administration's proposals "innovative" but reserved judgment on them. Dingell had vowed earlier to block any bill that would accelerate decontrol under the 1978 Natural Gas Policies Act.

House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois sent a letter to Hodel expressing general support for the proposals but asking for additions that would protect consumers from having to pay for expensive imported gas.

Road project delayed by nine rare orchids

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — State officials have halted work on a highway interchange until engineers decide what to do with about nine frail orchids added to the endangered species list last year.

"We're just on hold until we can come up with an agreement with the Department of Interior on what needs to be done about it," said D.D. Williamson, a planning engineer for the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

The nine Navasota Ladies Tresses, known to botanists as Spiranthes Parksii, are about 10 percent of that species known to exist, said Dr. Jim Johnson, acting head of the endangered species section of the U.S. Department of Interior in Albuquerque, N.M.

The flowers grow near a bridge that will be affected by a project to convert Texas Highway 6 into a four-lane thoroughfare between Bryan and Navasota, about 25 miles to the southeast. The highway department, which will need five years to finish the strip, is spending $10 million buying the right of way.

Johnson said it may be possible to shift the site of the interchange a few hundred feet in either direction to skirt the hill where the orchids bloom for nine days every October.

The highway department has known about the flowers for some time, but was unaware of their specific location, Williamson said. Federal documents were intentionally vague in describing the site to keep the public from discovering the plants, he said.

He said officials were surprised to learn that their plans were in jeopardy.

"We thought we were free and clear," he said.

The highway department has been working since the 1960s upgrading Highway 6 to a four-lane thoroughfare from Waco to Houston.

Deputies investigated

Sheriff Dallas Smith today said two of his deputies are under investigation for allegedly mistreating a rural county man during his arrest for public intoxication last summer.

Smith said the man, 52-year-old Charles Howard Smith of Rt. 6, never filed a complaint with his office and that he didn't learn of the accusation until County Judge Bill Ahders informed him of a letter Ahders received this week from the man's attorney.

The lengthy letter — written Feb. 18 by attorney Bob Evans — accuses two patrol deputies, ages 29 and 31, of abusing Smith following his arrest Aug. 22. Smith allegedly suffered a cut to the head that required two or three stitches to close.

Sheriff Smith said the deputies have not been suspended and that an internal investigation is under way. He declined further comment.

Judge Ahders said the letter merely apprised him that Evans had been retained in the case and did not appear to be a formal "notice of intent to sue," as is required by law if a suit is to be filed against a governmental entity.

Evans could not be reached for comment.

Man's body found near Big Spring

BIG SPRING — The body of a man discovered north of Big Spring Wednesday after having been slain by a shotgun blast to the head has been identified as that of William Robert Kay, 39, of New York.

Peace Justice Lewis Heflin has ruled murder, according to Howard County Sheriff A. N. Standard.

A man who surrendered to officers the morning of the grisly find is still considered a suspect, "but not as strong a one as we first thought," said Standard. "He's been transferred to another law enforcement agency on another charge, and we'll be interviewing him again at a later date."

Kay's body was found by a county resident beside a paved road 5½ miles east of Fairview, a town situated eight miles north of Big Spring on U.S. 87. Investigators believed Kay was shot at approximately 5 a.m.

This winter high on 'measure of misery'

By RANDOLPH SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A new government "measure of misery" indicates that some of the worst winter weather to afflict Americans in this century occurred early last year.

Meteorologists at the National Weather Service and the University of Delaware developed what they call the "weather stress index" to measure how winter affects people.

The index, which includes humidity, air moisture, wind and temperature, shows that areas east of the Rocky Mountains suffered the most uncomfortable days of the century on Jan. 10-11, 1982.

On Jan. 10, Norfolk, Neb., had a temperature of minus 23 degrees Fahrenheit, but it felt like minus 58 when the wind and humidity were calculated. On Jan. 11, Philadelphia's minus 3 felt like minus 14 and Atlanta's minus 4 felt like minus 20, the weather service said.

The new index assumes that people adjust to "normal" weather for the season in their area, and calculates the stress index based on how the weather differs from what would be normal.

Thus, the discomfort criteria for New Orleans and Bismarck, N.D., would be quite different, with each index designed to measure stress in the individual city.

For example, residents of New Orleans would be expected to be very uncomfortable on a winter day with a temperature of 15 degrees, 80 percent humidity and a wind of 15 mph. The same conditions in Bismarck, however, would be considered just about normal.

The new index is generally expressed as a value ranging up to 100 indicating the number of days the local population would be less uncomfortable than under the conditions indicated.

For example, in the theoretical conditions shown for New Orleans, the index would be 99, meaning that 99 days out of 100 would be expected to be less severe in that city at that time of year. For Bismarck, the same conditions would yield a value of about 30, meaning that 30 days out of 100 could be expected to be less severe.

Eastwood warned Reagan of plans for Gritz's raid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Clint Eastwood told President Reagan in advance that former Green Beret James G. "Bo" Gritz planned a raid into Laos to find American prisoners of war, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

The newspaper said Eastwood told Reagan he had given money to the rescue effort, and that the government should be officially involved, according to testimony before the Senate Intelligence Committee.

When Reagan asked his advisers about Gritz, Robert McFarlane, chief deputy to National Security Adviser William P. Clark, told the president the government should not get involved with the decorated Vietnam war veteran, according to an unidentified administration official quoted by the Times.

"The president said, 'Fine,'" the official added.

However, Gritz team members said messages they received in Southeast Asia advised that Reagan supported them completely, the newspaper said.

Former Green Beret Charles J. Patterson, 37, of Dinuba, Calif., told the Times he heard Eastwood say he could get help from Reagan if necessary.

"He said he could get us in contact with the president," said Patterson, who was part of the rescue effort. "He (Eastwood) had the phone number. And when we supposedly got a prisoner, he was going to call the president and tell him we did have one and that we needed help to get the rest."

Eastwood has declined comment on the matter.

The Times said that in a November telephone call to Reagan at his Santa Barbara ranch, Eastwood told the president he had contributed $50,000 to the Gritz mission. Gritz's associates have put the amount at $30,000. Actor William Shatner also contributed $10,000 to Gritz, which Shatner has said was only for rights to Gritz' life story.

Gritz, 44, a retired lieutenant colonel, led a patrol of Americans and anti-Communist guerrillas on a futile search into Laos last Nov. 27, but hostile forces killed one guerrilla and wounded three others. Gritz led a second raid Jan. 30, and another guerrilla died.

Gritz, who was reportedly on another mission in Laos, told the Times in a message dated Feb. 12 that he has "some POW ID." He did not say if the "ID" was from a living prisoner.

New breed of pirates 'steal' from themselves

LONDON (AP) — A new breed of pirates who plunder their own ships and deftly falsify papers caused worldwide losses approaching $2 billion last year, special investigators say.

Old-style pirates remain active, particularly in Southeast Asia and West Africa, but authorities say assaults on ships amount to a fraction of marine fraud losses to insurers, cargo owners, shippers and banks.

As recession forces down freight rates, fiercely competitive small shippers offer discounts of up to 50 percent. But some indulge in skullduggery including scuttling their own vessels — or reporting false sinkings — to hide evidence of stolen cargo or insurance fraud.

Sometimes ships divert to unscheduled ports and reappear under different names.

"Losses are impossible to determine, but I would say well over 1 billion pounds ($1.6 billion) is a good estimate," said Eric Ellen, head of the London-based International Maritime Bureau.

Ellen, former chief constable of the Port of London Authority Police, set up the bureau for the International Chamber of Commerce in 1981 to help victims and to marshal forces against marine fraud.

Insurance companies also struggle to counter the growing wave, pursuing culprits who cross borders quickly and operate in international waters or remote ports.

"These people operate in an area of non-enforcement and can afford to be brazen," Ellen said. "As soon as we find a way to combat one type of fraud, someone comes up with another."

In one historic case, the supertanker Salem sank off Senegal in 1980 with $60.2 million in insurance on a cargo of oil. The crew had suitcases and fresh sandwiches packed but did not manage to save the ship's log to explain mysterious explosions and the lack of distress calls and a long sinking.

Later, police said the ship had secretly unloaded its oil in South Africa under another name. Arrest warrants were foiled by extradition problems and insurance claims are still in court.

Ellen's office received 130 complaints last year of suspicious sinkings, diverted ships and other fraud. "Who knows?" he shrugged, at a loss to predict the full extent. "There could be a 100 times more we don't know about."

Insurance companies are major victims. Often, agents say, original insurers cannot — or do not — establish fraud and reinsurance companies take the losses.

"Companies are now taking a closer look at what reinsurance contracts they accept," said Geoffrey De'ath of the London Institute of Underwriters.

Fraud is difficult to establish, De'ath acknowledged.

"But, for example, there have been a number of cases in the Far East of ships loaded with stereo equipment going down in blue calm waters, with the crew sitting around in lifeboats watching," he said. "That tends to give pause..."

Frequently, no insurance is involved.

Some shippers borrow money on goods that exist only on forged bills of lading, often selling phony cargo two and three times. Or they might pack scrap as valuable merchandise or fake sinkings.

Crooked entrepreneurs charter ships from owners desperate to put ships to use in a slack market. They pay a small deposit for the charter and collect substantial freight payments from shippers attacted by bargain rates. Then they disappear, leaving the shipowner with someone else's freight and the cargo owner with his goods undelivered.

Agents can sometimes track down those responsible and induce them to make good on losses, often with the help of local authorities. But often culprits vanish, changing identities or going into hiding.

Single-vessel companies can sell their assets for a token sum — to themselves under another name.

"Obviously, shippers get wise if the same people repeat their frauds," said Ellen. "But you don't have to make too many millions to retire and lose yourself."

Marine fraud, once mainly found in West Africa and Southeast Asia, is now also burgeoning in the Mediterranean. In Asia, after 60 sinkings from 1974 to 1979, insurance companies set up the Far East Regional Investigation Team which reported evidence of well-organized and widespread scuttling operations.

Apart from marine fraud, shippers also face mounting piracy and pilferage.

Singapore authorities dispatched extra patrols last year to fight pirates who board ships forced to maneuver slowly in narrow channels. In several cases, raiders climbed the sides of supertankers to rob crews.

Mexican president calls on landowners

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid called on small landowners to produce the foods that the people of Mexico need.

Speaking to the National Federation of Small Landowners, the president said increasing production and productivity would be one of the most effective ways of fighting soaring inflation here.

Inflation ran at about 100 percent for 1982.

Oil price predicted

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An American energy specialist predicts the price of oil may fall as low as $25 a barrel.

Dankwart Rustow, a political science and sociology fellow at the City University of New York's graduate school, said that the ideal situation would be for the price to stabilize at about $29 per barrel.

He spoke to reporters whil visiting installations of the state Pemex oil monopoly.

Child dies, three people missing when boat capsizes

DALLAS (AP) — A 2-year-old child was dead and three others were missing today after a boat capsized on the wind-swept waters of Lake Ray Hubbard northeast of here, authorities said.

Three other people were rescued shortly after the accident, which took place about 8:30 p.m. Thursday, according to Dallas park police.

The body of Christopher Eshom of Dallas was discovered shortly before 3 a.m., according to the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

Authorities continued to search the lake for two men and a woman.

The three survivors, including two men and a woman, were found by Park Police Officer Lenward Harvey while he was on patrol shortly after 9 p.m. on the western shore of the lake.

"I just drove around here on patrol, and I heard this guy hollering for help," Harvey said.

The three were "cold but otherwise uninjured," Harvey said.

The seven, who were members of two families, were attempting to return to shore from a fishing trip when the 18-foot boat capsized about 1,000 yards offshore, authorities said.

Man sentenced for taking piggy bank

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who took a 2-year-old girl's piggy bank and coin purse during a residential robbery has been sentenced to life in prison as a habitual criminal.

Samuel Shannon, 25, was convicted of aggravated robbery Thursday and automatically sentenced to life imprisonment by State District Judge Frank Price.

Shannon was convicted of theft in 1979 and burglary in 1980. State law calls for an automatic life sentence for anyone convicted of three felonies.

Shannon and an accomplice, Wanda Logsdon, 35, used pistols to rob Connie Knight and her daughter Aug. 31 at their home in southwest Houston, prosecutor Don Smyth said.

Ms. Logsdon was recently sentenced to 35 years in prison for robbery, Smyth said.

Ms. Knight and her daughter, Elizabeth, were robbed after they returned to the home from a grocery store, Smyth said. When a neighbor and her daughter came to the house to visit, they also were robbed, he said.

Shannon and Ms. Logsdon used the Knights' suitcases to load up jewelry, brass items and the little girl's piggy bank, containing about $15, and her coin purse, which had 50 cents in it, Smyth said.

Lawyers appointed for Tafoyas

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Austin lawyers have been appointed to represent a former Green Beret and his wife charged with lying on income tax returns.

U.S. Magistrate Phillip Sanders said Thursday no trial date has been set for Eugene Tafoya and his wife Betty Jo Tafoya.

Sanders said Thursday he had appointed John Barrett to represent Tafoya in the tax case. The magistrate named David Wahlberg to represent Mrs. Tafoya.

Tafoya was an associate of Edwin Wilson, a former CIA agent recently convicted of smuggling arms to Libya. Tafoya allegedly received $90,000 from Wilson, supposedly to be used to leave the country.

A criminal charge in Canada alleges Tafoya firebombed a car belonging to Wilson's business enemies.

In another charge, the 46-year-old former Green Beret was sentenced to two years in prison for shooting a Libyan student in Colorado. That conviction is on appeal.

Officer fired for fighting

BEAUMONT (AP) — Beaumont Police Chief Willie Bauer has apologized to two gas station attendants and fired an officer who fought with them after they refused to pump leaded gasoline into a car that required unleaded fuel.

"In accordance with the recommendation of this department's disciplinary review board, Patrolman C.B. Shearer's employment with this department has been terminated," Bauer said Thursday in a statement.

Bauer said the department offered its "sincerest thanks and our apologies" to the service station attendants.

Shearer, 29, fought with the two service station attendants Friday night after his wife went to the station and tried to buy regular gas for her car, Police Sgt. John Kerr said.

The fight was broken up by two other patrolmen, Kerr said.

Shearer, a 3½-year police veteran, was off duty at the time but was carrying a gun. Authorities declined to say whether the gun was involved in the fight.

Regulations require off-duty officers in Beaumont to carry guns at all time, Kerr said.

After the gas station attendants told Shearer's wife they couldn't fill her car with regular fuel, "she came home and explained to the officer that they wouldn't pump gas into the car. So he went down to the station and got into an argument," he said.

"The officer supposedly identified himself as a police officer and requested identification from the attendants," Kerr said. "They refused and he called for a police unit."

U.S. marshal shoots convicted killer in court

AMARILLO (AP) — A Death Row inmate stunned a courtroom when he yelled that he had chosen his "way to die," lunged at a deputy U.S. marshal and was critically wounded by a single gunshot.

Convicted killer Charles Rumbaugh was shot Thursday by Deputy U.S. Marshal Olen R. McClendon after the inmate swung with a makeshift weapon at the officer and shouted, "Shoot me!"

C. Rumbaugh

Rumbaugh was in critical but stable condition today at Northwest Texas Hospital after undergoing surgery for a gunshot wound to the upper left chest, said Gwen Hailey, assistant director of nursing services.

A night nursing supervisor, who asked not to be identified, said surgeons removed part of one of Rumbaugh's lungs, but could not remove the bullet because of its location in the chest.

Rumbaugh, 25, had just testified at his competency hearing that he was not depressed and was aware of his surroundings, when he suddenly said, "I have already chosen my way to die — by shooting."

He pulled the weapon from his clothes and swung at McClendon, who drew his .38-caliber pistol and fired once.

Rumbaugh's weapon, authorities said, was a metal bucket handle covered with cloth on one end.

Testimony from psychiatrists resumed an hour after the shooting.

"This occurance in the courtroom has illustrated," psychiatrist William S. Logan said after the shooting. Logan testified before the shooting that Rumbaugh is a severaly depressed man with "suicidal tendencies."

Rumbaugh wrote a letter earlier this year to a state district judge asking that his lawyers not file any more appeals on his behalf. Rumbaugh said the jury that convicted him had decided that he was a "defective humanoid who must be eliminated."

Rumbaugh twice has been convicted and sentenced to die in the 1975 killing of an Amarillo jewelry store operator during a robbery. He waived his right of appeal after the second conviction, but his parents obtained a stay of execution, claiming Rumbaugh was not mentally competent to waive the appeal.

U.S. Marshal Clint Peoples of Dallas said the inmate had told his deputies before that he would make someone kill him.

"We've had a lot of trouble with him," Peoples said. "He's a bad actor."

Peoples quoted Rumbaugh as telling one deputy that if the state wouldn't execute him, "I'll make my own arrangements."

"And then he said...'I think I'll just make them kill me now.'"

Thursday's hearing had been under way about an hour when Rumbaugh pulled the weapon — which authorities first thought was a sharpened screwdriver — shortly after 10 a.m.

A woman screamed and U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson sat stoically as authorities scrambled to the front of the courtroom. No one else was hurt.

Potter County Sheriff T.L. Baker said the weapon was fashioned from the wire handle off a plastic cleaning bucket, with cloth wrapped around the handle. He said it probably couldn't have hurt anybody.

Baker said he thinks other prisoners smuggled the weapon to Rumbaugh. Baker said the inmate was strip-searched twice before he was taken to the courthouse for the hearing, and his clothes were inspected piece-by-piece.

He said Rumbaugh had no weapon of any sort when he left the Potter County jail, but said the inmate might have arranged with another prisoner to leave it for him in a holding cell at the courthouse.

"They (deputies) watched him while he got dressed and took him over to the federal building and put him in the holding tank. What happened from that point, if anyone got in to see him, we don't know," said District Attorney Danny Hill said.

Authorities sealed off the courtroom after the shooting and the FBI took over the investigation.

"We can confirm the fact that we are investigating the incident as an assault on a federal officer," said FBI special agent Scott Hendricks. He refused further comment.

Rumbaugh had been scheduled to die July 22 last year, but U.S. District Judge George Cire issued a stay of execution on July 20, a day after Rumbaugh's parents filed an appeal on his behalf. The appeal contended Rumbaugh was not mentally competent when he wrote State District Judge George E. Dowlen on June 11 asking that his execution date be set.

Rumbaugh's parents said their son, since age 13, had a "history of self-mutilation and overt suicidal tendencies."

Rumbaugh once told The Huntsville Item, at Huntsville near the state prison, that he hoped to establish that he was insane when he killed Michael Fiorillo, 58. He complained to the newspaper that he had not been allowed to enter testimony about "flipping out" in Pennsylvania two weeks before the slaying.

He said insanity is "really, my only defense."

His 1976 conviction was thrown out in 1979 by the Court of Criminal Appeals, on the basis of secret tapes that were admitted into evidence at the trial.

Professor: Lettering is an art

PITTSBURGH (AP) — When the Society of Scribes honored Arnold Bank, one of the country's deans of calligraphy, a few years ago, former student Maureen M. Squires of Philadelphia described him as "strong, challenging, ornery, brilliant, patient-impatient, caring, manipulative, eccenentric, artistic."

At 74, he hasn't changed. He still strikes fear and love into the hearts of students at Carnegie-Mellon University, where he has taught for 23 years.

"Most students adore him," says Myrna Rosen, founding member of the Calligraphy Guild of Pittsburgh, who puts herself in that category. She has taken the professor's course seven times and now helps out in his classroom.

"He knows so much about life, the world, the birth of civilization. But sometimes a student will leave the class in tears."

A short, rumpled man with goatee and thick glasses, Bank, who is blind in one eye, retired in 1972. But he continues to teach part time, making his way around the Carnegie-Mellon campus these days with the aid of a cane.

HIS STUDENTS run the gamut from the rank amateur who doesn't even know what calligraphy is — he says it's "the art of making good letters and arranging them well" — to the professional who pulls in a second income from her fancy pen-and-ink work on wedding invitations, announcements and the like.

There's even an occasional Bank devotee like computer science major John Renner of Yankton, S.D., who understands what Bank means when he calls calligraphy "the wisdom art."

"I call it the wisdom art," explains Bank, "not because you're wise if you do it, but because of what you learn when you go through the process of doing it."

While most of Bank's other students work on producing a calendar for any three months of the year using old-style, linear and free-style numbers, plus a copy of Lewis Carroll's "Jabberwocky," Renner is trying "to create lower-case letters for Roman capitals used on monuments."

BANK'S instruction is individualized. He shows one student how to capitalize on an error. "That's apologetic," he tells her about a letter she had left out of a work and boldly inserted inside another letter. "Combine both letters in the same space and style. That's design."

The art has fallen on hard times, Bank notes, even though amateur interest in it has burgeoned.

"Calligraphy has been taken over by the housewives and students," Bank says. "It has become a great amateur production. I'm puzzled by it...I think it's something you have to work at all your life."

Born in Harlem of a Polish father and a Belgian mother, Bank did his school homework at the same table where his father, a decorator, designed drawings for gilded plaster ceilings and columns.

"I EARNED money making maps for my teachers in grade school," he says. In high school he made signs for a local grocery store.

Listed in the international "Who's Who in Graphic Arts," Bank created among other widely known work the lettering for the John D. Rockefeller "Credo" at New York City's Rockefeller Center.

He doesn't agree with his colleagues in the design department who insist design is not art. He believes that a calligraphy student should have "a feel for coloring, drawing and type" — as well as curiosity about such questions as "How did people write in the time of Moses?"

Men sentenced for refusing to seek medical care for his son

CHARLOTTE, Mich. (AP) — A 23-year-old man who said he was "obeying God's law" by refusing to take his sick son to the hospital has been sentenced to a year in jail.

Kenneth Sealy had been on probation after being convicted previously of involuntary manslaughter in the death of his 11-day-old daughter from pneumonia and dehydration. Eaton County Circuit Judge Hudson Deming ruled Thursday that Sealy broke the conditions of his probation by not seeking medical care for the son, since placed in a foster home.

After the death of Sealy's daughter, another son was taken from Sealy and died after court-ordered surgery for a stomach tumor.

Men arrested for stealing cannon shells

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A two-month undercover operation has ended with the arrest of four men for allegedly stealing 24 tons of 90mm cannon shells from Nellis Air Force Base.

U.S. Attorney Lamond Mills said the suspects were arrested Wednesday after they attempted to sell the munitions to an undercover agent for $100,000. Mills refused to say how the shells, estimated to be worth between $300,000 and $500,000, were stolen from the base.

Mills called the seizure "the largest...of these types of munitions in United States history." The Air Force had been unaware of the thefts until informed by federal officials, according to a spokesman.

Hoover ordered break-in, professor says

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — President Herbert Hoover, paralyzed by the worst depresson in U.S. history, ordered a burglary at a Democratic Party office in New York in 1930, according to a history professor.

Jeffrey M. Dorwart of Rutgers University said he learned of the order in a diary kept by Glenn Howell, the naval intelligence officer assigned to the break-in. Howell and an aide were told to take potentially damaging files they believed were in the office, but came up empty-handed, Dowart said.

Hoover ordered the break-in because he believed the Democrats had information so damaging that if made public "it would destroy both his reputation and administration," Dorwart said.

Couple sucessfully tests 'lemon law'

EAST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A couple whose new Ford station wagon quit shifting into reverse after 81 miles have become the first people to successfully test the state's new "lemon law."

Chester and Ann Sobolewski were given a new car after they complained to the Better Business Bureau and their state representative. State law provides for replacement or refunds on car purchases under certain conditions.

But Ted Hoffman, vice president of Calvin Ford, where the Sobolewskis bought their lemon, said the law had nothing to do with his decision to replace the car. "We did this because we wanted to take care of them," he said.

Ohio income tax raised by 50 percent

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio taxpayers will begin paying almost twice as much state income tax as the old permanent rate starting Tuesday to offset a projected state deficit of $511 million by June 30.

Democratic Gov. Richard Celeste signed the bill into law Thursday.

The measure retains a 50 percent income tax surcharge that was implemented last fall and otherwise would have expired next month. It also adds another 40 percent permanent increase and imposes a 0.5 percent increase in the public utility excise tax for four months.

Salvation Army sued for power outage

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — A favorite old song of the Salvation Army is "Brighten the Corner, Where You Are." But the charity organization is being sued for allegedly causing a power outage.

Delmarva Power & Light Co. filed suit in Superior Court seeking more than $15,000 in damages from a Feb. 4, 1981 incident when a city block lost power after a Salvation Army truck struck a utility pole.

The suit claims James Raughley of Marshallton was driving negligently and recklessly when his Salvation Army truck struck the utility pole.

Salvation Army Capt. George Childs, administration of a rehabilitation center, disputes the suit's claims.

"The truck didn't go off the roadway," he said, adding that the pole was one of several "tilting toward the street" that was hit by the top of the truck while the vehicle was on the road.

Girl sliced by propeller

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A 5-year-old girl who walked into a spinning propeller while picking up a dropped toy before boarding a plane was reported in critical condition today at DePaul Hospital.

Airport police identified the girl as Samar Mohammad, and said they believed she was from Saudi Arabia. Officers said the girl, her mother and two other children were boarding a commuter flight to Columbia, Mo., to join the girl's father, Abkar Mohammad, who was attending a medical conference.

Robert Fairras, assistant director of operations and maintenance for the Airport Authority, which operates Lambert-St. Louis International Airport, said the girl walked into the prop at about 7:15 p.m. Thursday as she tried to retrieve a toy she dropped while boarding an Air Midwest flight.

Panel condemns WWII internment

Japanese-Americans happy with report

DENVER (AP) — Fish market owner Frank Torizawa just shrugged and laughed after learning that a government commission had condemned the internment of Japanese-Americans during World War II.

"I don't really give a damn now (about the report)," said the 70-year-old Torizawa, who lived behind barbed wire and guard towers for three years in Granada, Colo., but now resides in a Japanese enclave here.

"I've been saying for years that they should do something like that, but nothing happened. A lot of the old-timers who were in the camps have passed away, and they've (the U.S. government) just been dragging, dragging their feet," he said Thursday.

A government panel issued a report Thursday calling the internment of 120,000 Japanese-Americans, which began in 1942 shortly after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, "a grave injustice."

The Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians blamed the wrenching relocations on "race prejudice, war hysteria and a failure of political leadership," not the "military necessity" alleged by the Justice Department in arguments to the Supreme Court.

Last month, the American Civil Liberties Union and several Japanese-American organizations asked the court to erase the convictions of Fred

Frank Torizawa

Korematsu, Gordon Hirabayashi and Minoru Yasui for violating the relocation order.

The 40-year-old cases have become symbols to those who lost their homes and livelihoods on the West Coast simply because they were of Japanese descent.

Yasui, now executive director of the Denver Commission on Community Relations, called the commission's report "a historic document."

"For the first time officially on the record, the United States government through this federal commission is saying that the evacuation was not founded upon military necessities," he said at a news conference in Washington, D.C.

In Denver's Sakura Square, Torizawa owns and operates the Granada Fish Market, named for his place of internment. The square, a neighborhood of shops and restaurants, is dotted with oriental plantings and centers around a Buddhist temple and high-rise apartment buildings. The $4 million downtown development is Colorado's unofficial center of Japanese culture.

In the middle of the square stands a bust of former Colorado Gov. Ralph Carr, the only Western governor who invited Japanese-Americans to live freely in the state during World War II.

Thousands came and formed a close community in Denver known as "Japan Town."

"It took (the U.S. government) a long time to admit they were wrong, though I'm certainly glad this finally happened," said Ken Fujimori, who runs the complex. "A lot of people like myself who came out of the camps were pretty bitter."

Fujimori, like Torizawa, was an American citizen when he was interned with his family.

The commission made no recommendation on whether to compensate the survivors and their heirs, but Fujimori feels payment now would be an empty gesture.

"It would have been important right after the war, when we came out of the camps, when we really needed it," he said.

Los Angeles, San Francisco and a half-dozen other Western cities have offered reparations to former employees who lost their jobs because of relocation.

Legislation being prepared by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Rep. Mike Lowry, D-Wash., proposes paying $25,000 to everyone who was interned or to their heirs.

Takimora, who started his now-flourishing fish market with $25 in his pocket, said survivors "most certainly" should be paid. But even if they aren't, he says, the report still serves a purpose.

"I don't think that 95 percent of the Americans know that we went in...something like concentration camps," he said. "It's important to educate people so something like this will never happen again."

Reagan wants another version of 'new federalism'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is asking Congress to enact a scaled-down version of the "new federalism" package designed to pull the federal government out of social programs.

Reagan, speaking to state and local officials at the White House, said Thursday that the legislation includes a proposal to wrap numerous federal programs into four "megablock grants" that would give the governments that administer them the flexibility to shape them as they wish.

The $21-billion program would allow states to keep or kill at their option 16 service programs, from child adoption aid to sewer grants.

The resulting single state block grant would account for more than half the funds the federal government now spends on the affected programs. It would be financed, at least for the next five years, by federal excise taxes on alcohol, tobacco and telephones.

Another $7 billion now spent in general revenue sharing and for community development would be folded into a separate new block grant to be administered by local governments.

About $2 billion raised by the new nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax would be used to finance a third block grant, for transportation, that would turn over to the states a half-dozen federal ground transportation programs, including highway safety grants, non-primary bridge projects and a program to phase out road-railroad grade crossings.

A fourth, smaller block grant would absorb existing federal programs that help provide housing insurance, repairs, rent subsidies and self-help grants to the needy in rural areas.

When Reagan outlined his "new federalism" plan a year ago, he envisioned a bold swap of responsibilities in which the government would take over state-run Medicaid programs for the poor and turn over all food stamp and welfare programs to the states.

Kids' hospital teaches by doing

Minnesota students learn medical procedures

MAPLE LAKE, Minn. (AP) — The surgeon gripped the bone drill tightly, pressing it to the patient's chest.

As 10 other hands hovered nearby with clamps and pads, the drill bit slipped and skidded across the patient's chest.

"How do you use this thing?" the frustrated doctor demanded.

But the stuffed patient with flaming red hair didn't even bleed, despite the clumsy ministrations of the 7-year-old student physician.

The operating room at St. Timothy Parish School was part of Kids Community Hospital, where children are doctors and nurses.

The program's creators say they hope their version of "playing doctor" will make children less anxious when they go to the hospital for real.

"For the first time somebody is willing to share these things that have been such a mystery," said Joan Pribyl, volunteer coordinator for Kids Community Hospital.

"A few of our nurses put their heads together and decided there should be some way to relieve kids' anxiety when they go to a hospital to visit someone or are admitted to the hospital themselves," Ms. Pribyl said.

The Monticello-Big Lake Community Hospital organized the mobile children's hospital, equipping it with instruments and patients.

The hospital goes to nursery schools and grade schools in the area, giving children an inside glimpse of the medical world.

Mimi Fogarty of Maple Lake volunteered to help with the program at her son's school because she recalled how frightened her children had been when they were thrust into an emergency room.

Advance exposure to hospitals, equipment and methods might ease the fear next time, Mrs. Fogarty said.

"We get kids in the hospital who are afraid of the most basic things, like having their blood pressure taken," said Colleen Spike, a nurse from the Monticello-Big Lake hospital who advises St. Timothy volunteers.

Maybe if children realize not every syringe means a shot, they won't "fly off the table" when the doctor enters the examination room, Ms. Spike added.

Jodi Bruns, 6, said she was not afraid of hospitals after working in the emergency department, newborn ward, operating room, and examining equipment and charts at Kids Community Hospital.

Intravenous feeding was important to heal people with "sick arms," the first-grader explained seriously. And shining a tiny light into someone's eye was probably the best job in the hospital, Jodi said.

Volunteers carefully explained sutures, mist tents, X-rays and a newborn isolette at the five hospital stations in the gymnasium. The volunteers were instructed in advance by nurses.

A blond-haired boy smiled broadly as a woman wrapped his arm with a blood pressure cuff. Another listened intently to the thump of his heart beneath the stethoscope.

"Most of them have a lot of questions," Ms. Pribyl said.

Woman fined for books

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — A municipal judge has ordered a woman to pay a $104 fine for keeping eight books she had checked out of the city Public Library for as long as 16 months.

Municipal Judge Donald J. Floyd ordered Myra Sue Byers to pay the $104 fine on Wednesday.

Burma displays jade boulder at gem sale

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — A 33-ton jade boulder found in Burma's northern jungles and hauled part of the way here on a specially built road has gone on display at the 20th annual government gems sale.

It has an ordinary, grayish appearance but green streaks will appear when it is polished, gem experts say.

Groups of bandits ambushed the convoy carrying the jade several times en route to Rangoon from Kachin state, about 800 miles north, but government guards successfully held them off, according to reports.

The boulder was hauled by train and truck, traveling 80 miles on a road built especially for the trip.

The largest known raw jade stone before the discovery of the Kachin jade was 22 tons, experts said. They declined to place a value on the find.

Officials said the stone would eventually be cut and put on auction.

The government relies on its annual Gems Emporium, which began in 1964, to offset the substantial illegal gem trade. Last year's sale brought in $5.36 million. According to government figures, earnings since 1964 are $74.5 million.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Many women experience chest pain while pregnant

Dear Dr. Solomon: I gave birth a few months ago and everything turned out the way I had hoped it would. But while I was pregnant, I was really nervous. Very often I could feel my heart pounding and I thought I had pains in my chest. Also, I was always tired. My obstetrician kept telling me that everything was all right, and it turned out that he knew what he was talking about. Do other pregnant women feel the way I did when I was pregnant? — Joyce, Youngstown, Ohio

Dear Joyce: Many pregnant women experience symptoms that could be mistaken for cardiovascular disease, however, the symptoms are usually a result of the pregnancy and they generally disappear a few weeks after the woman gives birth.

Distinguishing the kind of symptoms you describe from those associated with actual cardiovascular disease highlights the importance of good obstetric care.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I used to jog on a neighborhood high school track, but going around in circles became too monotonous. So I marked off the number of miles I want to run on my car's odometer and started running in the street. For safety's sake, I always run facing traffic. Recently, my legs began bothering me and a friend of mine, who is marathoner, told me it's because the road is curved to provide for drainage, so I'm always running on a slant. Is there anything I can do about this? — Keith, York, Pa.

Dear Keith: Dr. Donald E. Baxter, an orthopedist at the Southwest Bone and Joint Clinic in Houston, says the condition you describe is similar to the short-leg syndrome. And, yes, it can be caused by the tilt in the road. According to Dr. Baxter, the treatment for the condition is fairly simple: Alter your daily route.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Now that the insulin pump has been around for a while, I'm wondering what the verdict is. I'm a diabetic and I usually don't like to try anything that's new. But what I'd like to know is what effect the pump has on the possible complications of diabetes. — Hal, New York City, N.Y.

Dear Hal: At present, there is no evidence that the insulin infusion pump can reverse the complications of diabetes once they have become established. The jury is still out on whether the pump can prevent complications from ocurring in the first place.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My nephew has been on steroids and his doctor told him he should see an eye doctor. Can you tell me what steroids have to do with the eyes? — Ms. L.G., New York City, N.Y.

Dear Ms. G.: Patients who are on steroids for an extended period of time increase the risk of developing cataracts or glaucoma. The treatments' benefits may require that it be continued, but these side effects make regular check-ups by an ophthalmologist advisable.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I went for my regular annual physical examination a few days ago and my doctor did some tests. After doing a rectal examination, he said he was checking for occult blood. What kind of blood was he actually looking for? — Randy, Silver Spring, Md.

Dear Randy: Occult blood is blood that generally can't be observed but can be revealed through simple laboratory tests. Non-visible blood in the stool is often an indication of disease activity.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Will you settle an argument by answering two questions? Haven't doctors found a cure for herpes? And is it possible to get herpes from a toilet seat? — Stanley, Fort Worth, Texas

Dear Stanley: A drug that speeds the healing of sores and may reduce pain in the first attack has been developed, but is not a cure for herpes. The drug (acyclovir) also is not indicated for use in repeat attacks of the disease.

The answer to your second question appears to be a qualified "maybe." There is real disagreement about this. Some researchers have reported that the herpes virus can live outside the body at room temperature for up to 72 hours. This would suggest that herpes could be picked up from a toilet seat, but it is extremely unlikely. Covering a public toilet seat with toilet paper before sitting down, in any case, makes good sense.

White releases seven on parole

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Seven persons sent to prison from the West Texas area have been released on parole by Gov. Mark White upon recommendation of the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Daniel Adams, convicted in Ector County May 24, 1982, of two counts of delivery of marijuana, was paroled to Tennessee after serving and earning one year and 11 months of a six-year sentence.

Larry Wayne Culpepper, convicted in Ector County Sept. 17, 1974, of burglary with intent to commit theft, was paroled to El Paso County after serving and earning eight years and seven months of a 10-year sentence.

Gary Ralph Greeson was convicted in Hutchinson County Dec. 17, 1980, of theft by check; in Howard County Oct. 29, 1980, of theft by check; and in McCulloch County Nov. 13, 1980, of theft by check. He was paroled to Tarrant County after serving and earning four years and six months of a 10-year sentence.

Jose Alfredo Marquez, convicted in Ector County April 12, 1982, of burglary with intent to commit theft, was paroled to El Paso County after serving and earning two years of a six-year sentence.

John Olivas, convicted in Ector County Jan. 3, 1979, of burglary with intent to commit theft, was paroled to Ector County after serving and earning five years and two months of an eight-year sentence.

Edward Ontiveroz, convicted in Howard County Sept. 2, 1981, of burglary of a habitation; and in Reeves County Sept. 28, 1981, of burglary of a building, was paroled to Gaines County after serving and earning two years and 10 months of a five-year sentence.

Joann Phillips, convicted in Ector County June 1, 1982, of burglary with intent to commit theft, was paroled to Lubbock County after serving and earning one year and 10 months of a three-year sentence.

Classroom newspaper use favored

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Legislation authorizing the Texas Education Agency to allocate money to state school districts to buy newspapers for classroom use will be favorably reported to the House by the committee on public education.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner of Alice, a former school teacher, would not require any district to use newspapers in classes.

"It would provide an opportunity for those who want to use newspapers," Ms. Glossbrenner told the committee, which approved the measure, 7-0. Two committee members were absent.

"Newspapers really are a text material, and for that reason it (the program) needs special funding," said Ms. Glossbrenner, who added the TEA indicates about $250,000 a year could be spent on newspapers if funds are available.

Newspaper use in classes is increasingly important since textbooks are no longer on a five-year cycle, but an eight-year one, she said. History and government teachers use newspapers "to bring textbooks up to date, so to speak," although, she noted, English and science instructors use them also.

Also testifying in support of HB 141 was Lois Avery, director of educational services at the Houston Chronicle and part-time instructor at Houston Community College, who told the committee newspapers had a "profound effect" on citizenship. "They're (students) more aware of public affairs and public issues," she said.

DHR foresees more government funds

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Human Resources is expecting the state will be allocated $1.97 million from the Department of Energy sometime in March so contractors can continue weatherization programs in 241 Texas counties, a DHR spokesman says.

Agencies scheduled to receive allocations in the Midland area are West Texas Opportunities, Inc. of Lamesa, which serves Andrews, Borden, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Martin , Midland and Upton counties, $22,627; and Big Bend Community Action Committee of Marfa, which serves five nearby counties, $6,665.

Allocations to specific agencies are based "on climate factors and the number of substandard homes" in the area served, says Charles Smith, director of special programs for the DHR.

DHR implemented the weatherization program last July — taking it over from the Texas Department of Community Affairs — by entering into cost reimbursement contracts with 51 nonprofit organizations in the state, Smith said.

The Energy Department funds will be available to the state April 1 if the allocation is approved, according to DHR. The funds would be expended through March 31, 1984.

A public hearing has been scheduled for 10 a.m. March 4 to receive comments on the 1983 program and allocations. The hearing will be held in the DHR Board Room, 706 Banister Lane, Austin.

Two preserved specimens of the snail darter. The minnow, which stopped construction of a TVA dam for two years, is being removed from the endangered species list.

Snail darters no longer endangered species

WASHINGTON (AP) — The snail darter, the three-inch minnow that prompted a court to temporarily block construction of a $130 million dam, is thriving and about to lose its status as an endangered species, Interior Secretary James Watt says.

The darter, which became an environmental symbol of the 1970s, is in the process of being downgraded from an endangered to a threatened species and eventually could be left without any federal protection, according to Watt.

He said that Fish and Wildlife Service biologists have found darter populations in at least six east Tennessee waterways.

"They found it was not endangered," he told the House Appropriations energy and water subcommittee Tuesday.

"With further biological research and evaluation, it's conceivable they would take it clear off the (protected) list," Watt added.

Asked afterward if the snail darter is thriving, Watt replied, "Oh, yeh."

Ten years ago, the snail darter was discovered in the Little Tennessee River above the site of the Tellico Dam proposed by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Environmentalists feared destruction of what was believed to be the minnow's only natural habitat. They succeeded in convincing a federal court in 1977 that the darter's endangered status mandated a halt to work on the nearly completed dam.

Work was stopped until 1979, when Congress and President Carter agreed on legislation exempting the Tellico Dam from the endangered species law. In the process, some Little Tennessee darters were moved to the Hiwassee River.

6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♣.

There is one rule that, if you observe it unfailingly, will save you a fortune over the years. Before playing to the first trick, pause to count your tricks and plan your play.

We do not like jumping to three no trump on anything except a hand that has a 4-3-3-3 pattern. However, we must admit that we, too, would make an exception with this North hand. South's jump to slam was a reasonable shot—his partner's 16-18 points were all outside spades, so they had to fill in the minor holdings.

West led the five of clubs, and those declarers who can't wait to get a hand over with will probably go down. They will draw trumps and plan to discard a diamond on the ace of hearts, and then rely on the club suit to produce three tricks. Depending on how they timed the play, they could easily end up losing two club tricks.

However, the club lead should alert declarer to the possibility that the suit might not break. He can count 11 tricks in top cards, and there is another way to score a twelfth trick—via a diamond ruff in dummy.

The correct line is to win the first trick in hand and then cash the king-queen of diamonds before touching trumps. Now declarer can afford to draw two rounds of trumps before ruffing a low diamond on the table. He can then return to his hand by ruffing a heart to draw the outstanding trumps, and the slam is in the bag.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, February 26, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: "Buffalo Bill" Cody, Hall of Fame pitcher Grover Cleveland Alexander and comedian Godfrey Cambridge were born on this date. Also sharing this birthday with you: Johnny Cash, Jackie Gleason "Love, Sydney" star Tony Randall. Hedge your bets in the months ahead so that you do not come up short. The business outlook is much improved. What first appears to be a mistake will turn out to be a godsend. A romance with a friend turns into something quite serious. Avoid people who like to argue. They drag you down when you need to feel "up." Work obligations will sometimes keep you from your loved ones.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Exercise willpower and you will meet your family obligations on time. Being right all the time does not win you admirers. Let loved ones in on your plans. Ask for suggestions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): First impressions are very important right now. You get an opportunity to meet influential people at the last minute. Listen to your intuition. Make the most of a second chance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those who matter like what you have to say this weekend. Your social connections can help you make an important business deal. A problem involving an older relative becomes less worrisome.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some members of the opposite sex are put off by your intelligence. You would not be interested in them anyway. Tackle household chores early in the day. An exciting invitation arrives later.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You find that your loved ones want to make life easier for you. Although long journeys are not favored, short trips can be invigorating. Romance is in the air!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be careful what you say if someone angers you today. Hasty words could come back to haunt you. Help a young person find a job to pay his or her bills.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do something positive to make romance happier. Friends will listen if you want to let off steam. You get excellent results when family members pool their ideas and resources.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A father-son relationship grows stronger as a result of today's events. Your imagination creates a special world for loved ones. Evening is the best time for intimate talks.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A deteriorating relationship can be saved if you play your cards right. A second occupation brings you welcome cash. Try not to borrow or lend money to a good friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Something you do today may be misconstrued. Go ahead if you know you are right. Romance flourishes in an atmosphere of trust. You feel better when you get the rest you need.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Morning is the best time to ask a family member for a favor. Although travel is favored, you will probably enjoy being at home more. Let others make the social plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): With a little willpower, you can now break a bad habit. If you feel that your recent hard work is unappreciated, speak up! You have earned some praise.

Let Ozzy perform

Efforts by a number of Odessans aimed at preventing a British rock singer from performing there next month raise an interesting question of "rights." Specifically, when the rights of two groups are in conflict, must one group necessarily lose and one win?

Ector County has filed suit in Midland federal court because of concerns expressed to commissioners by various Odessans about rock singer Ozzy Osbourne. Those Odessans seem to feel Osbourne's conduct in past performances was offensive and that the county should be able to break its contract with the singer without penalty.

A group called Odessans for Decency and others say Osbourne worships the devil and contend in past performances he has mutilated animals.

On the other hand, promoter Randy Shelton of Stardate claims none of the alleged offensive acts has occurred and that none will in the future. The promoter says Osbourne's March 8 show in Odessa should not be canceled.

The situation appears to be this: Osbourne wants to perform. Osbourne's Odessa fans want to see him perform. Ector County wants out of the contract because of anti-Osbourne sentiment expressed by individuals and at least one group who want to protect the moral sensibilities of Odessans.

Who's right? All those concerned with the performance have voiced legitimate arguments. They're all correct. Each has a defensible right. Settling the issue, though, requires stripping away side issues to find and address the one overriding "right." That right is the singer's to perform, the fans' to attend the performance and those who oppose Osbourne's appearance to not attend and to, if they choose, exert effort to keep others from attending.

The real issue here involves freedom of expression and of speech which has been interpreted by the courts over a period of decades and the realization that freedom does not restrict individuals from exercising common sense on matters of moral concern.

The actions of those who have opposed the Osbourne concert can't be faulted on moral grounds. They obviously believe what they are doing is in the best interests of all the residents of their city. Their commitment to the moral fiber of Odessans is most commendable.

Overshadowing the concerns of those few individuals, though, are the rights of all the people of the nation who are provided freedom of choice by the First Amendment. Those who oppose the Osbourne concert have an option they can exercise if they so choose. If their efforts to prevent Osbourne's appearance are allowed to succeed, however, thousands of other Odessans will be deprived of that freedom of choice.

Hypocrisy at Berkeley

The students who rudely heckled U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick off a stage recently at the University of California-Berkeley, professed concern about U.S. human rights policies abroad.

All they accomplished, however, was to trample on the right of Kirkpatrick to speak and the right of others on the campus to hear her.

That the students' distasteful conduct made it virtually impossible for Kirkpatrick to be heard is bad enough. Even worse, the deafening protests against U.S. aid to the embattled, democratically elected government of El Salvador forced her to cancel a second campus speech.

The students' obnoxious behavior is a disservice to a campus with a proud intellectual tradition and belies their own rhetoric.

To criticize the United States, on one hand, for not aggressively pursuing human rights, and, on the other, to deny freedom of speech to Ambassador Kirkpatrick is nothing but hypocrisy.

Another View:

Evaporating hope

For months the reports have been discouraging. Whatever it is that the United States is trying to do in El Salvador seems to be failing — or at least fairing poorly. There has been a stab at land reform, but in the short range it has crippled agricultural production. There were elections last year, but the extreme right seems only to have consolidated its grip on the government, giving the appearance that it is not exactly beholden to the peasantry. The army has been given arms and training, but Gen. Wallace Nutting, chief of the U.S. Southern Command based in Panama, has complained to Congress that by not going on enough patrols, the Salvadoran army is not effectively combatting the leftist guerrillas.

Patience is running out. Frustration is growing. "There's a mood of incipient insurrection in Congress," Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., announced recently. "There's a growing concern our policy is leading nowhere." But, the Reagan administration insists that the United States must plug its finger in El Salvador or watch the stain of communism spread deeper into Latin America. It has proposed on the strength of a reduced rate of civilian-killing by the Salvadoran government and its agents that another $226 million in economic and military aid be sent to the country.

To critics horrified at the economic chaos — unemployment is more than 40 percent and starvation-level poverty is just around the corner — and the lack of military stability, there was a flicker of good news when reports began circulating recently that the United States might try to set up talks with exiled leftist politicians as a step toward reconciliation and accommodation in El Salvador.

But Secretary of State George P. Shultz, in testimony to the House Foreign Relations Committee, said those reports were unfounded. He blamed the civil war in El Salvador on the guerrillas and declared paternalistically: "If they want to take part in a civilized way in the activities of that country, they are welcome to do that." Can skeptics be blamed for thinking the welcome sounded rather cold?

Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa., who calls himself a moderate on the issue, told the secretary his tough talk posed a dilemma for would-be supporters of American goals in El Salvador. "If you continue the hard-line attitude, you are going to lose support not only in the committee, but in the Congress and the country. I would urge you to give people who share your long-term objectives some hope. You haven't done that so far."

With every record of fresh fighting, that hope recedes. It is nearly gone now. The longer the administration delays finding a formula for a political settlement, the sooner that hope — and the goals it might help achieve — will evaporate altogether.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Soviets want Mideast air battle test

WASHINGTON — Intelligence sources believe the Kremlin will try to goad its Syrian clients into another air battle with Israel sometime soon — whether the Syrians like the idea or not.

Jack Anderson

The Russians' hope of provoking a Syrian-Israeli clash has nothing to do with politics, ideology or Middle East strategy; it's a matter of military necessity. The Soviets' high command desperately needs to know whether the latest surface-to-air (SAM) missile systems it has deployed in Syria are vulnerable to Israeli pilots in their American-made aircraft. The Israelis easily knocked out the earlier SAM missiles that Syria placed in Lebanon.

The ease with which the Israeli planes eliminated some of the Russians' most advanced missile batteries has the Soviet generals scared. They face the appalling possibility that the SAM missiles, on which their entire tactical military doctrine depends, are obsolete as fast as they roll off the assembly line.

This behind-the-scenes intelligence story has not been told before. It was given to my associate Dale Van Atta over a period of months by intelligence sources, who showed him top-secret documents.

The action began in spectacular fashion on June 9 and 10, when Israeli jets destroyed 19 Soviet-made SA-6 batteries in the Bekaa Valley of southeastern Lebanon — without losing a single plane. This astounding military feat was all the more impressive when it is remembered that these Syrian missiles had inflicted terrible punishment on the Israeli air force in the 1973 war.

What had happened in the intervening nine years? The Israelis had developed a variety of techniques and weapons — including a decoy drone called the Scout and radar-jamming "chaff," which confused or blinded the Syrian missile crews for three minutes — long enough for Israeli planes to destroy them.

Needless to say, the Syrians were stunned. So were the Russians.

The Kremlin sent its No. 2 air-defense expert to Lebanon to find out what had gone wrong. He ordered the Syrians to deploy an even more advanced SAM system — the SA-8. And this time, Soviet advisers would be directly involved, coordinating the defense and even manning the controls.

The SA-8's radar is much more sophisticated than the SA-6's; the Russians were fairly sure the Israelis' electronic countermeasures wouldn't work.

But on July 24 the Israelis knocked out the SA-8 batteries, losing only one F-4 fighter in the process. Intelligence sources have learned that the battery which shot down the lone plane was manned by Soviet advisers, not Syrians. In fact, when the Israelis sent planes back in to pulverize the F-4 wreckage and keep its secret gear out of enemy hands, they killed a dozen Soviet technicians, who were already poring over the downed plane.

Understandably shaken by the failure of their missiles up against American technology and Israeli skill, the Soviets rolled out their super-hotshot SA-9, and shipped in more Soviet advisers to man them. The Israeli air force dispatched the new missiles in strikes on Aug. 10 and Sept. 8.

To appreciate the alarm that these humiliating defeats caused in the Kremlin, it should be emphasized that the Soviets have assumed for years that their huge numbers of SAM missiles would be the backbone of their air-defense system. Their 9,400-plus SAM launchers make up the biggest air-defense establishment in the world, according to a top secret Pentagon report.

But the Israeli David had challenged the Soviet missile Goliath and beaten it — handily.

Now the Russians have deployed updated SA-5 missiles in Syria, the first time any have been sent outside the Soviet Union. These SAMs are supposed to be most effective against slow, high-flying aircraft — the very kind of intelligence and command-control-communications planes the Israelis had in the air over Lebanon when they destroyed the 19 missile batteries and 100 Syrian warplanes in a single week.

But will the SA-5s perform any better than the SA-6s, 8s and 9s? The Kremlin doesn't know, but it wants to find out. This test is so important in the opinion of U.S. analysts, that the Soviets will precipitate a Syrian-Israeli clash.

POSTAL PIQUE: New York songwriter Robert Warren recently dashed off a ditty he's certain will strike a sympathetic chord in the nation's postal patrons. It's titled, "Hail, All Hail the U.S. Mail!" and a typical verse goes: "I posted a letter from Houston to Dallas, but thanks to an unscheduled jaunt — it finally got there just 20 days later, by way of Montpelier, Vermont." Shortly after the song was recorded, Warren's mail service began to get erratic. Letters were misdirected and deliveries were skipped. A Postal Service official assured him that the lousy service was unintended.

EGGHEAD JUNK FOOD: "Low Q" pills are the latest fad in Washington, home of the nation's deep thinkers. Packaged like vitamins and selling for $5 a bottle, the little pills reportedly will lower your IQ by 10 points if taken regularly.

Low-Q pills are actually nothing more than miniature red jellybeans, so the marketing genius behind the nonsense produce, Richard Basini, gave a case of them to the nation's No. 1 jellybean fan in the White House.

In a bipartisan jibe at two prominent political figures, from fad-prone California, Basini wrote: "We know Jerry Brown (overdosed) several times (on Low-Qs) while he was governor. Word has it he was hooked by former Sen. S.I. Hayakawa."

INSIDE REPORT:

Soviet 'cheating' reveals treaty flaw

WASHINGTON — The second Soviet test of a new ICBM in four months has dropped a hot potato in the lap of a Reagan administration that has been ducking questions about Soviet violations of SALT II that even hard-liners say are difficult to prove because of treaty loopholes.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Pressure is mounting from administration arms control realists for an attack on Soviet violations of the spirit of SALT II — but more important, on the treaty itself as pathetically inadequate to protect U.S. interests. Some officials want to go further: Use the new Soviet testing as justification for renouncing the treaty which, though unratified by the U.S., both countries have said they will abide by. President Reagan is unlikely to go that far.

Soviet critics were mortified last October when the administration ignored the first new Soviet test. Skillful publicity highlighting that Oct. 26 test might have helped in the fight against nuclear-freeze resolutions on 10 state ballots Nov. 2, but the White House maintained silence. Continued silence now would look like consent.

The new test — triggered from Plesetsk range Feb. 8 — appeared to have been at least a double violation of the treaty. SALT II limits new intercontinental ballistic missiles to only one on each side but the missile fired Feb. 8 was clearly new and different from the missile tested Oct. 26. That indicates the Russians are now in the final testing stages for not one but two new missiles. There is reason to suspect that three additional ones may be on the way.

Moreover, the Feb. 8 firing appears to have been 100 percent encrypted. That means that U.S. monitoring devices, which are supposed to guarantee access to vital testing data, learned nothing.

But proving Soviet violations of the unratified SALT II treaty is no simple matter, given the porous nature of the treaty itself. That explains the advice privately given to William P. Clark, Reagan's national security adviser, from arms control specialists who fear that runaway Soviet testing may doom the U.S. to permanent inferiority. Their advice: Attack the Soviets head-on for blatant violations of the spirit of SALT II; at the same time draw a beach on SALT II itself as a virtual invitation to Russian cheating.

The reason is found in Article IV. This pernicious clause, insisted upon by Moscow, allows the testing of modernized versions of existing missiles. But what the Russians call an updated version of an existing missile may actually be a wholly new weapon. On Feb. 8, the Soviets tested a "light" mobile ICBM with four MIRVed warheads; no existing "light" missile is either mobile or MIRVed in the same way.

The missile tested on Oct. 26 is known to be a medium-heavy type with 10 MIRVed warheads. Although the U.S. may not be able to prove it, neither new ICBM can be honestly defined as a modernized version of older weapons.

This puts the U.S. into a dangerous bind accurately foreseen by opponents of SALT II during the Ford and Carter administrations. It makes a mockery of demands by Sen. Alan Cranston, former vice president Walter F. Mondale and other arms controllers for Senate ratification. They see SALT II as the salvation of America in the nuclear age.

Precisely the contrary is true. The Soviets are using SALT with their customary skilled eye for the loophole to get as far ahead of the U.S. as technology permits. Two years ago Reagan decided not to seek SALT II ratification. He was only half right; he should have gone further — exposing the treaty as a delusion that would lead not to real arms control but to nuclear proliferation. Precisely such proliferation is exemplified in the Oct. 26 and Feb. 8 Soviet tests.

Industry needs a helping hand

To The Editor:

The editorial in The Midland Reporter-Telegram recently (Feb. 19, 1983) entitled "Industry policy needed" advocated the coordinating of our national economic policies into "a strategy to promote industrial growth and increase U.S. exports." The writer went on to recommend that "we should adopt a industrial policy of our own" similar to that of Japan. It is an excellent editorial, succinct in the analysis of the situation.

But the writer failed to mention the outcome of our present course, which will allow foreign competitors "to beat us out in our own market and in world markets." The present domestic business retrenchments, slowdown, and failures will continue. And when our industrial base is reduced to a skeleton of its former might, the U.S. will then be vulnerable to economic pressures and possibly blackmail by those same foreign competitors. The ultimte scenario is the end of society as we know it. Look at the Third World to see what awaits us.

Calvin Coolidge once said, "The business of America is business." And it's time we got back to the business at hand, the protection and restoration of our industrial base and the continuation of the highest standard of living the world has ever known.

Write and tell your congressmen that it's high time the federal government met this challenge to your livelihood and interests. The job you save will be your own!

Faith restored

To The Editor:

Today I had my faith restored in my fellow man.

I was looking at Atari consoles to purchase, so that we would have something for children to play with, when visiting in our home.

While asking if the cartridges were ever put on sale at a reduced price, I commented that a certain one was my deaf nephew's favorite.

As we continued talking, the young man unlocked the case, removed a cartridge. I didn't say anything, even though I wasn't planning to purchase a cartridge until I purchased the console. We walked back to the counter, I took out my wallet and he put the cartridge in a sack, stapled it, put a paid tag on it and said, "Tell your nephew to enjoy this."

I'm standing there with the money half out of my wallet, my mouth open and can hardly speak. Somehow I think I thanked him and said you are a good guy or something.

I left that store with cold chills and they didn't leave for hours. It has been a very long time since I have seen anyone do such a kind, compassionate, thoughtful deed.

I do not know the young man's name and I will not name the store, but he knows and, mainly, God knows.

You can be sure I will shop in that store more and will definitely purchase an Atari there.

I just wanted to publicly thank him since I was so speechless at the time.

Poison pen

To The Editor:

I am replying to Robert Creighton's latest and hopefully his last letter.

Mr. Creighton's hobby must be slinging mud at Israel in this column. Frankly, I wish he'd find a new hobby.

Robert, ole boy, you are redundant! You're becoming a bore and you're causing me to become one. Everyone who reads "letters to the editor" regularly, knows that you hate everything that has to do with the nation of Israel. They also know that I love Israel.

You've made your point, so do us both a favor and give your poison pen a rest.

Who loses?

To The Editor:

In response to Robert Creighton's letter saying that America is a real loser if we have Israel as an ally, according to the Word of God, the Bible, America is a loser if we don't have her as an ally.

I refer Mr. Creighton to: Ex. 23:27, 2 Chr. 20:29 and Isaiah 60:12-14. In fact, the whole book of Isaiah is enlightening on this subject.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1919, Oregon became the first state to tax gasoline.

One year ago: A House committee voted to cite Interior Secretary James Watt in contempt for failing to provide subpoenaed documents to the panel.

Today's birthdays: British actor Tom Courtenay is 46 years old. Former Beatle George Harrison is 40.

Thought for today: "Nothing is ever accomplished by a reasonable man." — George Bernard Shaw, Irish-born author-playwright (1856-1950).

Teacher escapes by riding the rails

CHIPPEWA, Pa. (AP) — A smelly boxcar lurching along behind a freight train is a far cry from a high school English class, but Wayne Cole bridges both worlds and says both are educational.

Cole, 38, teaches ninth- and 12th-grade English and coaches the girls' track team at Blackhawk High School about 50 miles northwest of Pittsburgh.

For the past 20 years, in his spare time, he has joined the legions of vagabonds, nomads, outcasts, tramps and hoboes bumming around the country on trains.

"I'm no hobo, but I can blend right in. I learned their system. It's been a tremendous educational experience. I've seen all of America riding those trains," said Cole, a teacher since 1969.

"It's an escape. It's an adventure. It's an aesthetic kind of wandering. It's spiritual, even. There's a lot of time for thinking and wondering," he added.

"You can ride through the slums of Chicago or pass a high mountain trail in the Rockies. And one of the most beautiful sights in the world is looking at the lightning bugs in an Iowa cornfield through the door of a boxcar."

Cole has tramped in 36 states, Canada and as far afield as Guatemala. But the romantic appeal of "catching out" on a boxcar is tempered by risks.

"It's dirty. It's noisy. It's lonely. You can get killed doing it. It's dangerous, but that's part of the adventure," said Cole. "If I had a son, I probably wouldn't let him do it. As I get older, I definitely think twice about getting on them."

Hobo ridership reached its peak in the Great Depression when an estimated 2 million people rode the rails. The current economic pinch and high jobless rate are swelling ridership again, Cole said.

In American folklore, the restless migrants who ride the rails are defined liked this: "A hobo works and wanders. A bum drinks and wanders. A tramp dreams and wanders."

The wayfarers congregate in what they call jungles, a camp of tar-paper shanties where they eat, sleep and congregate.

Among their ranks are mental patients, criminals and winos who are pursued by railroad officials known in the jargon as yard bulls, 'bo chasers and cinder dicks.

Then there's the 6-foot-1, 185-pound Cole, with his blond hair and blue eyes.

"Everybody should try it once, but you have to know what you're doing," he said. "To me, it's a means of transportation, a cheap way to travel. You can choose where you want to go and you have space to move around. There's also a definite sense of wanting to know where the train is going."

Cole has spent half-year sabbaticals in 1980 and 1981 plus his summers taking trains to the Feather River Canyon in California, Glacier National Park in Montana and Black Canyon in Colorado.

He's ridden empty train engines, cabooses, coal cars, flatbeds, piggyback cars and boxcars — known as "side-door Pullmans."

Not all of them are designed for comfort.

"It's more like 'slamtrak.' There will be lots of times when a boxcar will be pitching you around, going 60 or 70 miles an hour, and shaking you so bad you can't even stand up," said Cole.

"That's when you say, 'What am I doing out here?' But the chaos of steel is music," he added.

By knowing the train schedules and befriending workers in the railyards, Cole can get from western Pennsylvania to Seattle in 70 hours. At times, though, he's had to wait 36 hours in the weeds for a freight.

His hobo dress is bib overalls and he lugs a 40-pound backpack with bedroll and food. Unlike other tramps, Cole carries traveler's checks to pay for an occasional hotel room or to rent a car for sightseeing.

"I think there will always be people riding the rails. It's universal," said Cole, who once went around the world by train and boat.

"We're going into outer space now. I think people will be tagging along out there, too."

Asians gobble up idea of American fast-food chains

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — American fast food outlets are trying it out in Thailand again, offering assembly-line hamburgers, pizzas and donuts in competition with noodles, curry snacks and coconut sweets sold from tiny shops and push carts.

While the chains have made inroads in other parts of Asia (McDonald's claims to have sold 870 million hamburgers since moving into Japan in 1971), they have been slow to win over Thais, whose taste runs to the hot and spicy.

An attempt by foreign companies in the 1970s proved a costly failure for firms such as Colonel Sanders' Kentucky Fried Chicken and Wimpy, a British hamburger chain.

"This time the timing is right," claims William Heinecke, an American entrepreneur and Thailand resident.

Thai tastebuds, he says, are ready for what he and others are offering because of a faster-paced lifestyle in Bangkok; a rise in personal income and a greater number of Thais picking up Western eating habits through travel and study abroad.

Heinecke pioneered the Western fast food concept with Sala Foremost, a local version of American ice cream chains. Then he turned to what most operators in other Asian countries have done: acquired local franchises from the big American companies.

Over the past two years he has opened seven Mr. Donuts and two Pizza Huts. More outlets are slated for both and Heinecke is negotiating with a third American fast food enterprise.

Shakey's, another pizza chain, and Dunkin' Donuts are already here. Fast-food style hamburgers are available at Hoburger, a survivor of the 1970s and run by Asian businessman J.J. Ho, and at the newly opened Burger House, a basically local enterprise started by Americans.

Others said to be poised for entry include A & W root beer, Dairy Queen, Wendy's and McDonald's, perhaps the most successful American fast food venture in Asia.

But the record of those already here is mixed and the profits of others coming do not seem to be guaranteed.

"It is Thailand's own, well-developed and well-beloved variety of fast foods that poses a formidable challenge," wrote the Hong Kong-based marketing magazine Media.

Thailand brims with carts dispensing instant noodles and Chinese "dim sum" snacks. Sidewalk braziers produce grilled, spicy chicken. Small food shops offer a dozen varieties of curry dishes.

Most of these eateries can produce a greater range of food at cheaper prices.

"A fast food meal is not one of the cheapest meals in Thailand as it is in other parts of Asia," says Heinecke.

Burger House charges 35 baht ($1.50) for its big burger and 7 baht (30 cents) for a soft drink. Within a quick walk of the outlet are several shops offering noodles with a wide variety of fresh toppings for 10 baht (43 cents) or less. Tea is free.

Thais generally like spicy, hot foods, and most American fast food is bland in comparison. Some of the chains, both here and in other parts of Asia, have thus tried to alter the product to suit local tastes.

"Wrong," says Heinecke. "You change the customers to accept the international taste. You don't change the product to suit local tastes."

Heinecke claims his unaltered Pizza Hut pizzas proved an "instant success," somewhat to his surprise since Thais, along with most East Asians, traditionally have shunned cheese.

Still, Heinecke and other fast food entrepreneurs here must draw their clientele from a relatively small pool — urbanized Thais, college students with a Western bent, foreign tourists and residents.

American fast food has done best in Japan but now faces stronger competition from domestic rivals, a trend foreseen in other Asian countries.

McDonald's, with 347 outlets in Japan, has broken all sorts of records. Its outlet in Tokyo's Ginza area was for a time the top sales leader worldwide, while one Tokyo suburban outlet, at Enoshima, holds the world's record for a single day's sales — $28,000 worth on Jan. 1, 1982.

Japanese in 1981 also gobbled up 17.6 million chickens at nearly 400 Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants, while pizza chains like Shakey's have grown in popularity, particularly with the younger set.

Singapore and Hong Kong, both with booming economies and a fast pace of life, have thriving American fast food businesses, although Chinese equivalents are as well patronized as ever.

Kentucky Fried Chicken, which failed in both Hong Kong and Thailand, is Malaysia's most popular fast food chain, with a yearly turnover estimated at $8 million to $10 million. A local enterprise has set up "Sateria" to compete with the American chains. It sells a Malaysian snack called "satay," beef and chicken slices served on a stick and dipped in a thick sauce.

Fast-food outlets have done well in the Philippines.

"We never expected anything like this; Filipinos are hamburger eaters," says McDonald's marketing officer, Baby Bringas, about the chain's first outlet in the Philippines which opened in 1981.

An operator in Manila claims the Philippine capital, with 27 outlets, also is the world's Shakey's pizza parlor capital.

Other fast food chains are also flourishing there. Among the latest is Taco Bell, which serves Mexican food.

The big hamburger enterprises have yet to enter Indonesia, but Kentucky Fried Chicken has 11 outlets in four cities which claim to be doing well.

FDA skeptical about ads for prescription drugs

NEW YORK (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has "serious reservations" about advertising prescription drugs to consumers, and it wants to study the practice before deciding whether to regulate such ads, the agency's commissioner says.

"I cannot emphasize strongly enough for you that FDA has not formulated a policy on this issue," Dr. Arthur Hull Hays Jr. said last week in a speech to the Pharmaceutical Advertising Council.

"We certainly do not want to be perceived as encouraging, without important qualifications, direct-to-consumer promotions...FDA has serious reservations about pharmaceutical companies and advertisers moving into this uncharted area," he said.

He said he hoped that pharmaceutical companies and advertisers would not rush to advertise prescription products to consumers and thereby force the FDA into the hasty formulation of a policy.

"The issues are far too important to be treated in piecemeal fashion," he said.

"Direct-to-consumer promotion of prescription drugs...represents a significant enough departure that I am not comfortable moving ahead without some reliable knowledge of its effects," Hays said.

Until recently, prescription drugs have been advertised only in publications directed toward doctors. Last year, however, ads for prescription drugs began appearing in newspapers and consumer magazines.

Peoples Drug Stores, a chain of retail drug stores, advertised Zovirax, an ointment effective for treatment of some herpes infections. Merck Sharp & Dohme, a pharmaceutical company based in Pennsylvania, placed an ad in Reader's Digest for Pneumovax, a vaccine against bacterial pneumonia.

Boots Pharmaceuticals offered consumers a $1.50 rebate on the purchase of Rufen, a prescription anti-arthritis drug. CIBA Pharmaceutical Company of New Jersey planned to advertise Transderm-Nitro, a skin patch for treatment of angina, but, according to the Washington Post, dropped the idea when the FDA told the company that the public might be misled by the ads.

Hays said there are questions about how such advertising should be designed so that it will give consumers accurate information on a drug's drawbacks as well as its benefits.

American living in Japan connoisseur of Asian culture

TOKYO (AP) — For 31 years Meredith Weatherby has devoted himself to making the art and culture of Asia — in particular those of Japan — familiar to Americans.

During that time he has been a widely known publisher, book designer, translator and art collector.

Now, at 67, this jack-of-all-arts from Waco has embarked on a new career: the creation of collages from old Japanese books. His works have sold out in four recent exhibitions here.

He first came to Japan as a diplomat in the years just before World War II. During a subsequent stint in the U.S. Army he mastered Japanese, returned to Japan with the Occupation as a consul, then moved to Seoul as first secretary of the American embassy in time to take part in the 1950 retreat before advancing communist forces.

He quit the foreign service to join Vermonter Charles Tuttle in establishing the publishing firm of that name here in 1951. Ten years later, he struck out on his own, setting up John Weatherhill Inc. With ties to Harper and Row in the United States, it soon became known to book connoisseurs for its carefully crafted, handsome editions of works on Asian and Japanese art, customs and religion.

It illuminated the new, and hitherto little known, worlds of Zen Buddhism, Chinese painting, Asian folklore, Japanese cloisonne, netsuke and Chinese snuff bottles, Japanese architecture, furniture, flower arrangement and tea ceremony.

Through Weatherhill, many Americans — and Asians — learned for the first time of the intriguing complexities of wrapping five eggs, among other things. They also read about the endless uses and beauty of bamboo, the traditional Japanese kabuki and noh dramas, the story behind Sumo, an ancient form of wrestling, and the joys of the piping-hot Japanese bath.

The English-speaking world first read the Japanese novelist, Yukio Mishima, in 1951 through one of Weatherby's translations. The work was "Confessions of a Mask," the troubled writer's autobiography which Weatherby considers his best. Later, he translated "The Sound of Waves," a charming but less revealing book.

When Mishima committed hara-kiri suicide at 45 in 1971, after vainly exhorting the army to rise up and overthrow the government, Weatherby was not surprised.

"He realized his best work had been done. He was primarily a dramatist and he had to make the grand gesture," he said.

Keepers train zoo animals

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Cairo zoo works like a coin-operated circus.

For instance, if you hold out a five-piaster (seven cents) piece in the palm of your hand, Oweida the African elephant sticks his trunk through the bars of his cage, sucks up the money and passes it to his keeper, Mohammed.

Oweida curls his trunk up over his head and waves as Mohammed says "thank you, bye-bye" in Arabic, English and a number of other languages. For another five piasters, Oweida rocks on his back legs and does a little dance.

Khadra the lioness and Hosneya the bear also growl, roar and stand on their hind legs and beg for you to give their keepers a tip, known in Arabic as baksheesh.

Children love it, but baksheesh is illegal and it's one of zoo director Dr. Saad Badrawi's many headaches. "If you tell me the name of the keeper who took money from you, I will suspend him for a week," said Badrawi, sitting in his panelled office on the grounds of the 83-acre zoo in Giza, on the west bank of the Nile.

But to stay out of trouble, most of the keepers incorrectly identify themselves as Mohammed — the most common name in the Arab world.

And who is going to begrudge them a little tip? Their monthly salaries, paid by the Ministry of Agriculture, range from 30-60 Egyptian pounds ($40-$80). Badrawi, who is paid 140 pounds, says there is not much he can do.

"In all the world," he says. "baksheesh is rampant."

It also is illegal to feed the animals. But what parent can resist paying a little baksheesh to get a picture of his child feeding a bit of sweet potato to the giraffes or the ostriches, or a minnow to Hassan the seal, or peanuts to the monkeys and the Indian elephant, greens to the two-humped camels and the hippopotami, or a scrap of bread to Hosni the multicolored hornbill?

Cal State Fullerton players rejoice after pulling off an upset over the University of Nevada-Las Vegas Thursday night. UNLV went into the game as college's No. 1 ranked team.

Chaps escape WTC

MC in position to start national title defense

SNYDER — Midland College finished Western Junior College Athletic Conference play here Thursday night with a 74-65 victory over Western Texas College.

The victory gives MC a 17-1 conference mark, tying last year's conference record when the Chaps went on to win the national junior college championship.

It took some time, however, for the Chaps to put this one away Thursday. Western Texas held a 41-35 halftime lead and MC didn't get the lead until only 8:31 was left in the game.

Western Texas had to play the second half without Richie Fells, who is the second leading scorer for the Westerners this year. Fells was ejected from the game with 3:50 left in the first half after two technical fouls were called on him. Fells took a couple of swings at MC's 5-6 Spud Webb and both benches emptied onto the floor.

Little damage was done to either team during the altercation, but WTC had to play without Fells for the rest of the game.

Ervin Williams, who had 14 points for the Chaps, brought MC to within one point at 55-54 with a rebound layup and that signaled a seven-point MC point run that put the Chaps in the lead for good.

Chester Smith, who canned 17 points, followed Williams with a field goal, a free throw and a layup as the Chaps rolled to a 59-55 advantage. MC never trailed after that.

The Chaps would have been in real trouble against the Westerners had it not been for Nate Bufford in the first half. Bufford led all scorers with 21 points, but 16 of those points came in the first half, mostly on long range bombs. He hit on his first six shots from the field.

Still, WTC led by six points at the half until Williams, Smith and Webb, who had 12 points, put the Westerners away.

Larry Banks led WTC with 20 points whsile Daryl Ward had 12. The only other Westerner in double figures was Darrell Joiner with 10.

Midland College, ranked 20th nationally in the new junior college poll, can now turn its thoughts to defending its national championship.

The Chaps will be the host team for the Region V tournament Thursday through Saturday at Langford Chaparral Center. The winner of the Region V, a single elimination tournament, will have to face another region winner, probably either San Jacinto or Laredo, for the national tournament berth.

The national tournament is held each year in Hutchinson, Kan., this year March 15 through March 19.

Eight teams will vie for the Region V title next weekend, but MC draws a seeded position in Thursday's first round game by virtue of winning the WJCAC title and will not have to play one of the stronger teams until the semifinals Friday. Region V playins will take place this weekend and Monday. Last year MC won the Region V title with a victory over Cooke County in the finals and then went on to win the national championship with victories over Westark, Dixie, Vincennes and Miami Dade North. It took the Chaps two overtimes to defeat No. 1 ranked Miami Dade North in the national finals.

Runnin' Rebels finally run out of gas

By The Associated Press

The Runnin' Rebels finally ran out of gas.

After 24 straight victories that shot Nevada-Las Vegas to the top of the Associated Press college basketball poll, the nation's No. 1 team finally went down the tubes with an 86-78 loss to unheralded Fullerton State Thursday night.

"Fullerton State outplayed us the entire game but the big factor was the second half," said UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian. "They came down and scored the first two times they had the ball. Fullerton played a great game. Give them all the credit."

Leon Wood scored 21 points and had a game-high 12 assists in leading the Titans over the nation's last major college unbeaten. UNLV, which has already clinched the Pacific Coast Athletic Association title, is 14-1 in the league.

"On the East Coast we're known as Fullerton State Who?" said Fullerton Coach George McQuarn. "But I thought we could play with them all along. I thought if we played hard for 40 minutes we could beat them.

Top Ten

Tim McCormick scored 18 points, including nine in a crucial 3:22 stretch during the second half, to lead Michigan's upset of Indiana. Michigan led 41-40 with 13:47 remaining in the game when McCormick sparked an eight-point Michigan outburst by scoring six points to give the Wolverines a 49-40 advantage.The Hoosiers got no closer than five points the rest of the way.

"We had to go with McCormick, with them going with a little lineup," said Michigan Coach Bill Frieder. "I thought he was super. We're doing a better job of getting the ball inside."

Scott Skiles sparked a late rally with six straight free throws in the game's final minute to lead Michigan State over Ohio State.Skiles, who finished with a career-high 35 points, sent the game into the third overtime on a jumper to tie the game at 89-89.

"Apparently he was better than anyone else we've played against," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller of Skiles. "It was a great game by Michigan State. They did one or two crucial little things you have to do right to win the ballgames."

Vanderbilt guard Phil Cox sank both ends of a one-and-one free throw opportunity with one second remaining to lift the Commodores over Tennessee.The victory was Vandy's second in a row over their intrastate rival.

"Ballgames are never over until time runs out and you don't win unless you're ahead," Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe said. "They got the ball in the right hands and Cox did what he had to do. We were never in position at the end with much of a lead and time running out."

Darren Daye and Kenny Fields combined for 45 points to lead UCLA over Southern Cal.Daye scored 24 points before suffering a knee injury late in the game and Fields added 21.

Second Ten

Michael Jordan scored 22 points and Sam Perkins added 20 as North Carolina ripped Wake Forest and snapped a three-game losing streak.

"We went back to the fundamentals," Jordan said of this week's practice sessions. "Coach (Dean Smith) felt we weren't fundamentally sound the last three games."

Antoine Carr scored 24 points and Wichita State overcame first-half turnovers to cruise past Creighton. The victory was the 16th straight for the Shockers at home.

Bob Hansen scored a career-high 24 points to lead Iowa past Wisconsin. Hansen became the 16th Iowa player to go over 1,000 points, with 1,007.

"For us, Bobby Hansen came out playing very aggressively," Iowa Coach Lute Olson said as he credited the Hawkeyes' defense for the victory."If you play great defense, it's amazing how good your offense goes. I think our defense took the wind out of their sails early tonight."

Last week when rumors were circulating that the New Jersey Generals were offering Herschel Walker $16.5 million to turn pro, Dale Hansen, a Dallas TV commentator, noted, "If Walker turned on that much money to stay in school, he does need more education."

Did You Know?...

In the 1982 National Football League season, nine of the 28 teams passed the ball more times than they ran it.

Walker ready to live with pro decision

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Herschel Walker dropped his head into his hands for a moment before answering the question. What did he regret most about the controversy over his exit from college football?

"I guess I feel bad that the kids who look up to me will see me leave under this situation and feel let down. I hope that doesn't happen. It all depends on how the adults in their lives feel about it," Walker told The Atlanta Constitution on Thursday.

The Heisman Trophy winner, breaking his silence on his jump to the United States Football League, stepped outside his Athens apartment to face reporters and photographers and granted a brief interview with the Atlanta newspaper.

"I may have made some bad judgments in the past but enough has been said," Walker said. "There's more to this than meets the eye and that's all I'm going to say about it now. I've made my decision and I'm ready to go on with my life."

The three-time All-American tailback reportedly will earn $5 million over three years with the New Jersey Generals in the richest pro football contract in history. The contract was signed just hours after the University of Georgia declared him ineligible for his senior season.

"I've been down a little, but I'll be OK as soon as I get out of this atmosphere. It's kind of gloomy," Walker said.

He said he would head for his home in Wrightsville today before reporting to the Generals' camp in Orlando, Fla., on Saturday.

"I guess I should already be there (in Orlando), but everything happened so fast," Walker said.

"I'm in shape because I've been running track, but that's not exactly football shape," he said.

Asked about the Generals' season opener March 6, Walker said, "If I'm there, I expect to play. I don't think they hired me to sit on the bench.

"I don't know much about my new team but I'm looking forward to getting down there."

The team's fans were looking forward to Walker. Season-ticket orders came in a pace projected to reach 3,000 tickets in the two days following his signing.

The signing ended five days of controversy in which Walker initially denied reports that he had signed a contract with the Generals last week. Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said he was convinced Walker was telling the truth because "Herschel's never lied to me."

Dooley, however, declared Walker ineligible Wednesday after discovering that Walker actually had signed a contract, a violation of NCAA rules.

Criticism of the contract, which made Walker the first undergraduate to turn pro before his collegiate football eligibility, continued Thursday.

The American Football Coaches Association said it plans to meet within a week with the NCAA Pro Relations committee and USFL officials.

"I'm mad and upset," said AFCA Executive Director Charlie McClendon.

Three colleges have barred the USFL from their campuses, including Georgia Tech.

Dooley said, "What hurts is that knowing Herschel the way I do, I know this isn't what he wanted. I think he thought he'd be able to handle it, but at age 20, he was no match for what he became involved in. He got no guidance from his family. The people close to him did a great job of keeping him away from me."

But Walker did consult his parents, said his father, Willis Walker.

"Herschel, as always, has kept in constant touch with me throughout this, and there have been no surprises," he said.

USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons issued a statement in New York saying the league initially was approached by Walker's attorney, Jack Manton, and then by Walker himself about playing in the league.

The NFL turned him down and Commissioner Pete Rozelle said the league remains committed to its policy of not drafting undergraduates.

Manton, 39, of Cumming, Ga., confirmed he contacted the NFL hours before Walker signed with the USFL.

"I told them the deal New Jersey had offered and asked if they would both match it and provide the same market opportunities as the New York area," he said.

Simmons said Walker told the league he had made similar overtures to the NFL and Canadian Football League.

CFL spokesman Greg Fulton denied Walker or a representative approached the league and said league rules prohibit signing an import who is an undergraduate.

Walker said he would return to Athens later this year to complete work on his degree. Simmons said J. Walter Duncan, owner of the Generals, "insisted" that Walker agree to complete his education.

"Although our eligibility rules remain intact, the USFL invites thoughtful input from all colleges and universities, the NCAA, the NAIA, the CFA, and any other appropriate entity to suggest a reasonable and rational set of rules which would be considered to be legal and would balance the desires of the colleges against the obvious rights of an individual to seek employment," Simmons said.

Manton said he expects to be the scapegoat in the affair "but the only thing I have done is to serve as an adviser until it became evident that Herschel had made up his mind which way he wanted to go. I did not push him into making the decision to leave Georgia and play professional football."

Manton would not disclose his fee. It was reported he will receive less than 2 percent of the contract and will earn a percentage of the fees Walker receives for endorsements.

Walker is eligible for 1985 NFL draft

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Thursday that former Georgia running back Herschel Walker will not be eligible for the NFL draft until 1985 unless he graduates from college before the 1984 draft.

But Rozelle also said the NFL's draft rules are subject to court challenge, and he said the NFL owners would likely discuss them in light of the Walker case at a regularly scheduled meeting next month in California. Walker signed a three-year, $5 million contract Wednesday to play with the New Jersey Generals of the U.S. Football League.

"I personally am opposed to drafting undergraduates, but sure, it will come up," Rozelle said.

Under NFL rules, college players are ineligible for the draft until they have either graduated or used up all four years of eligibility for college competition, or until five years after they entered college.

Since Walker had used three years of his college eligibility before signing with the USFL club, he would not be eligible for the 1984 draft unless he graduates next year. Given the time demands of USFL competition, it would be difficult for Walker to graduate with his class, although technically possible by attending classes next summer, fall and winter.

In any event, once Walker does become eligible for NFL competition, it's likely he will be drafted, even if he is under contract to a USFL club. Under current rules, he cannot be drafted this year.

Once drafted by an NFL club, Walker would be free to sign with that team any time after he had discharged his contractual obligations with the USFL. According to the NFL, any club drafting him would retain exclusive NFL rights to him for four years, even if he played in another league for the entire period.

It's 2-5A vs. 8-5A in Region I girls' basketball tournament

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

This weekend's Region I girls' basketball tournament at Langford Chaparral Center seems to justify the University Interscholastic League's decision of expanding the state playoff system to include the top two teams from each district.

This year is the first basketball season the UIL has allowed district runners-up to participate in post season play and two of the four teams in the tournament are second place finishers.

El Paso Eastwood and Irving Nimitz are accompanied by their district champions, El Paso Bel Air (District 2-5A) and Duncanville (District 8-5A), making the regional tournament a battle of super districts.

Adding to the trivia of this tournament is the fact that the El Paso schools and the 8-5A schools tied for their district crowns at the completion of their regular seasons. Duncanville beat Nimitz in a one game playoff while the El Paso schools flipped a coin.

Duncanville will face Bel Air in the tournaments' opening game at 6 p.m. today while Eastwood will take on the smallest team in the tournament, Nimitz, at 8 p.m.

IF PLAYOFF experience can be translated into points, then Duncanville should walk away with the regional tournament.

The Panthers have won the 8-5A district title for 18 consecutive years, the last fifteen coming under head coach Sandra Meadows.

"We've made the regional playoffs every year since 1973 until last year when we lost a one point decision in bi-district," she said. "In '76 we won the state title over Lubbock Monterey." None of the other teams have ever advanced as far as regionals.

But Duncanville will also have the youngest team on the floor as the Panthers start four juniors and a sophomore.

Meadows uses a double low post, single guard offense. Center Cathy Nixon (6-1) is the Panther's leading scorer with a 16 point average. Cheryl Woodruff (5-10) will play the other post position.

At fowards for the 28-5 Panthers will be 5-10 Shelly Wolf and sophomore Kim White at 5-7. The tournaments' smallest player, 5-1 Traci Green, will start at point guard.

THE BEL AIR players have an emotional incentive that could make or break the team. Jeanette Sutton, who was the only coach the Highlanders' girls' basketball program has had since the school opened in 1957, died of a heart attack Sunday.

The Highlanders defeated Lubbock Monterey Tuesday for the Area crown 71-61. After tying Eastwood for the district title, Bel Air won the right to be the top seeded team in the district on a coin toss. The Highlanders then beat Jefferson 68-46 in bi-district.

Fred Anaya has been named interim coach for Bel Air.

The Highlanders are the most experienced team with four senior starters.

LaTanya Thompson, the leading scorer at 11.5 per game, will start at center.

Kim Payton, the only underclassman starting for Bel Air, is the second leading scorer at 11.5 per game. Payton will be joined at foward by 5-7 Maggie Reyew.

The starting guards for Bel Air will be 5-4 Monica Campos and 5-3 Marina Ortega.

IF HEIGHT is a factor in the tournament, Eastwood has an advantage with two starters over 6-foot.

Alex Provencio, a 6-1 center, is the second leading scorer for the Troopers, averaging 15.5 points per game. Debbie Anderson, a 6-0 foward, has been injured most of the season with a torn tendon, but in the Area contest against Midland High, the senior scored 11 points and helped Eastwood dominate the inside game.

The Troopers' leading scorer is Carol Glover, a 5-10 forward who averaged 18 per game.

"I can put Glover anywhere," Eastwood head coach Roland Menser said. "Inside, outside, wherever I need her she'll do a good job. With Anderson back in the lineup our team is at its best this season."

At 18-9 Eastwood has the poorest record of any team in the tournament but the Troopers upset District 1-5A champion El Paso Coronado (25-3) in bi-district then manhandled Midland High 58-44 in the Area contest.

Carla Clark and Margo Campbell will be the starting guards for Eastwood.

DESPITE ITS lack of size Nimitz uses a double low post offense. The Vikings' tallest player, 5-foot-8 Jerrilyn Edgar, is one of the centers. Things fall off from there as the other low post, Monica Schultz, is a mere 5-6. Despite her petite size, Schultz is Nimitz leading scorer (11.5 per game) and rebounder (8.1).

Forward Wendy Pate is Nimitz' only other player in double figures. At 5-5 the senior foward is averaging 10.6 points per game. Vicki Valentine, a 5-4 junior, is the Vikings' other starting forward.

Starting at point guard will be 5-2 Marlee Clark. The junior has been a defensive leader, causing 147 turnovers.

Nimitz has shown a tendency toward defense in its two playoff games. The Vikings beat Haltom 35-34 in the bi-district game and held Fort Worth Paschal to 33 in the Area victory, 42-33.

"We play a man-to-man defense," coach Al Tiller said. "The closest we come to a zone is being accused of it."

Tickets for each tournament game are $4 for adults and $2 for students. Saturday's championship game will be played at 2 p.m. with the winner advancing to the state tournament in Austin next week.

Shame on the houses that Georgia's Herschel Walker built

An AP Sports Analysis
By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

It takes only two words to capsule this week's football shenanigans which will hereafter be known as "Walkergate." One is a question: "Why?" The other is an admonition: "Shame."

Shame on all their houses.

Shame on Herschel Walker, possibly the greatest ballcarrier we'll see in our lifetime, who allowed his himself to be to be tarnished by an overly zealous agent and who engaged in devious tactics that belie the image of a nice, level-headed kid the country had come to know him.

SHAME ON the agent, attorney Jack Manton of Atlanta, who, while his purposes were understandable, must be criticized on his unsavory methods. Shame on the U. S. Football League, which violated announced principles and then raised its arms in a show of false "Not Me!" innocence.

Shame on the University of Georgia and the NCAA which, confronted with reliable reports of a signed contract, did a cursory, brushover check and said it's not so.

Walker insisted he had signed no contract and was remaining at Georgia — statements which he later said were false and for which he apologized.

The NCAA and Georgia administrators gave him a clean bill of health. They acted as if they just hoped the problem would blow away.

Then came the smoking gun.

Now the 'whys?"

Why was this deplorable cover-up necessary in the first place? Who was stupid enough to propose a written contract, knowing such a paper was flagrantly against NCAA's rules, archaic as they might be in modern times.

Why did the U. S. Football League, just a-bornin', use silly excuses to try to violate a promise its administrators made to follow the National Football League's code of not tampering with college players until the players' class has graduated?

NOBODY CAN blame Herschel Walker for considering — and even ultimately accepting — lifetime security with a pro contract from the USFL's New Jersey Generals, offering him an estimated $5 million for three years.

Here's a kid from a middle class Georgia family who had given three of his best years to the University of Georgia, winning the Heisman Trophy and leading the team to the national championship. His obligations had been fully paid to the university and now were only to himself.

He could go to Harvard a dozen years, do graduate work at Oxford and never in all his years make that kind of money.

It's the way he did it that cast an odor over the entire scenario. Some can blame his actions on youth and naivety. But, even under stiffest pressure from his agent, they were inexcusable. Even at age 20, with three years of college under his belt, Herschel must have been aware of the rules.

If he and his agent thought going pro was a wise move — and it probably was — he should have made the move openly. Magic Johnson and Isiah Thomas did it as undergraduates in basketball, and nobody raised an eyebrow.

Having signed the contract without study and later changing his mind, he might have wiggled out of it if he hadn't waffled and told fibs.

If he had openly said, "I goofed. Forgive me. I want to finish college. I want to run in the Olympics," he would have found a lot of sympathy among the NCAA hierarchy.

Instead he tried to cover up while his agent was seeking to get a better deal from the NFL. Greed raised its ugly head. The NFL didn't bite — much to the credit of the league and Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

THE SAME sort of credibility was not displayed by the USFL. Who can doubt, despite its loud protestations, that landing Walker, the greatest of his time, was in the league's game plan from the beginning?

It's logical and understandable — although the lame excuses are not.

The USFL and its TV sponsors needed a player of Walker's prominence to give the new league a bigtime aura, just as the signing of Joe Namath by the New York Jets legitimatized the old American Football League.

The USFL gained credibility in one way and lost it in others. It has now declared open war with the powerful NFL. It has alienated college coaches and brought new fear to the campuses.

The event left a blemish on both the USFL and Walker which won't soon go away.

Lesson in mile run begins Phase II

NEW YORK (AP) — Ireland's Eamonn Coghlan will find out tonight in the USA-Mobil Track and Field Championships whether Steve Scott has learned the lessons he taught him about running the mile indoors.

Last Saturday at Cleveland, Coghlan, the fastest indoor miler in history, outmaneuvered Scott on the final lap and beat the American record holder for his fifth victory without a loss this season.

Coghlan got ahead of Scott on the outside, then cut in front of him. The surprised Scott, knocked off stride, threw up his hands in protection and hit Coghlan in the back.

Afterward, Scott, who wound up third behind Coghlan and Spain's Jose Abascal, claimed interference. But he never filed a formal protest and the result stood.

Coghlan contended he did nothing illegal and there was no body contact between the two other than Scott pushing him. However, Coghlan later admitted that if he were in Scott's position, he would have reacted differently.

"I would have forced him to the top of the track," said Coghlan, who has beaten Scott six in a row and 15 of 19 indoors.

Coghlan also said he later apologized to Scott for having cut him off — then took him to the turn on the track and showed him the proper way to run it.

"I was definitely in front of him and he should have pushed me on the turn," explained Coghlan. "But there are no hard feelings about what happened."

Coghlan and Scott will meet twice in the mile this weekend. After tonight, they will race Sunday in the U.S. Olympic Invitational at East Rutherford, N.J.

Others in tonight's mile will be Abascal, defending champion Jim Spivey, Ireland's Ray Flynn, John Gregorek, Chuck Aragon and Ross Donoghue.

Attention also will focus on Carl Lewis' bid to become the first man in 38 years to win the 60-yard dash and the long jump in the indoor national championships. The only athlete in the meet's 95-year history to do it was Barney Ewell in 1945.

Lewis, the sprint and long jump champion in the 1981 and 1982 outdoor championships, is the defending champion in the indoor long jump.

He also holds the indoor bests in both events — 6.02 seconds in the 60 and 28 feet, 1 inch in the long jump.

In addition, Billy Olson, the only pole vaulter to clear 19 feet indoors, will take another crack at that barrier. Olson, whose indoor best is 19-0¼, will try and surpass the all-time best of 19-0¾ set outdoors by Vladimir Polyakov of the Soviet Union.

Besides the Coghlan-Scott battle in the mile, there should be other notable head-to-head confrontations.

Five players indicted for November rape

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — An Orleans Parish grand jury has indicted five Southern University athletes accused of gang-raping a woman in a New Orleans hotel after the Bayou Classic football game last November.

The five are accused of aggravated rape, which carries a possible maximum penalty of mandatory life in prison.

They have been free on $10,000 bond since they were booked last December. After the indictment Thursday bond was raised to $50,000 each.

The players are accused of raping a 25-year-old woman from New Iberia. She told police that three of the players pulled her from an elevator in the Marriott Hotel about 5:30 a.m. after the Baton Rouge school had defeated archrival Grambling 22-17 in the Louisiana Superdome.

The woman said two others joined the group after she was forced into the hotel room and that all wore Southern University football jerseys. Police said the woman told them she was raped several times and forced to perform oral sex.

Indicted were Thomas E. Hudson, 21, Houston, Texas, a freshman defensive back; Ernest Bell, 20, Houston, a receiver; Herman Coleman, 20, Houston, a freshman quarterback; Kim Ray Davis, 20, Atlanta, Ga., a sophomore punter; and Linwood Hamilton, 25, Easton, Penn., a freshman nose guard.

The New Orleans Times-Picayune, The States-Item quoted sources as saying the five testified before the grand jury, along with other defense witnesses, as did the woman who told police she did not know any of the attackers.

The players were not arrested for a week after the attack, and the newspaper quoted sources as saying it was because officers were checking the credibility of the accounts given by the woman and the players.

NBA wants limited payroll

By RANDY HARVEY
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

At least 10 of the National Basketball Association's 23 teams are experiencing financial difficulties and as many as three are on the verge of collapse, proving once again that free enterprise does not come cheap.

In an attempt to prevent the wealthy, predatory franchises from devouring the not-as-wealthy franchises, the owners have presented to the NBA Players' Association a revenue-sharing proposal that will limit salaries.

WHILE THE players have acknowledged the necessity of such a proposal, the two sides are far from reaching an agreement on the specifics. If no progress is made in negotiations, this season will probably be interrupted by a strike.

Question: When would the strike occur?

Answer: It would begin with games of April 2, 15 days before the end of the regular season.

Q. The average annual salary for an NBA player is $246,000. Each player also receives approximately $20,000 a year in additional benefits. Why would they strike?

A. They earned their standard of living through the courts and collective bargaining. While they are still protected by the courts, their collective bargaining agreement expired last June. The owners have allowed them to play this season under that previous contract.

But if there is no new agreement by next season, the owners have threatened to eliminate guaranteed contracts, pension and medical benefits and first-class air travel.

They also have threatened to reduce rosters from 12 to 10 and require players to give 75 percent of the money they receive from shoe contracts to their teams. The argument over shoe contracts isn't as petty as it seems. For example, Los Angeles Laker rookie James Worthy recently signed with a company for $1 million.

These regulations are unacceptable to the players, but they have only three choices: Either accept the new contract proposal by the owners, continue to negotiate or strike.

Q. What is the owners' new contract proposal?

A. Beginning next season, players would receive 40 percent of the league's gross revenues in salaries.

For example, the league's gross revenues for the 1981-82 season were about $92 million. Of that, $36.8 million would be paid to the players in salaries and benefits. That would be divided equally among the teams, which means each could pay no more than $1.6 million a year for player salaries.

Q. TO whose advantage would that be?

A. The league realizes that equal payrolls do not guarantee parity. But they at least would give the financially beleaguered teams, the Indianas, Utahs and Kansas Citys, an equal opportunity to compete with the Lakers, 76ers and Celtics.

Q. What are the players' reservations? Didn't National Football League players strike because they wanted a share of the revenues?

A. That's correct. NBA players aren't opposed to the idea of accepting a share of the revenues, but, like the football players, they want 55 percent. They justify their demand by pointing out that player salaries now account for 55 percent of the league's revenues. The owners contend that's one of the problems, but the players aren't willing to take a cut.

Lee, MHS in golf hunt

BIG SPRING — The Midland Lee and Midland High girls' golf teams headed into today's final round of the Big Spring Invitational golf tournament with a shot at the team title.

Lee posted a first round 372, one stroke behind leader El Paso Coronado. MHS has some ground to make up after a 383, but stand in third place. Big Spring and Snyder follow with 390 in the 16-team field.

Van Horn's Bonnie Gomez and Snyder's Lisa Franklin set the medalist pace Thursday, each shooting 80. Lee's Gayla Strickland owns an 82 for third place. Others in the medalist chase are Hereford's Tiffy Dirks, 83; Big Spring's Patricia Jones, 84; Coronado's Becky Aguilar, 86; and Midland High's Kelle Mobley, 88.

Other Lee golfers include Susan Fesmire, 93; Lisa Burnett, 98; Shari Saikim, 99; and Stacy Childers, 100.

Other Midland High team members are Stacy Owens, 92; Kristi Raney, 101; Darla Smith 102; and Pam Emerson, 114.

Thursday's first round was held at the Comanche Trail Municipal course while today's finishing 18 was set for the Big Spring Country Club.

ABC to open with Generals

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Herschel Walker's professional debut will be televised by ABC-TV when the fledgling United States Football League opens its season March 6, the network announced Thursday.

Walker, who signed a contract with the New Jersey Generals Wednesday, is expected to play in the season opener against the Los Angeles Express at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

The game was one of three Sunday telecasts the network planned for opening day. ABC-TV also plans to televise Chicago at Washington and Philadelphia at Denver. The network will televise USFL games every Sunday through July 3.

USFL disparity just may be its problem

By BOB OATES
Los Angeles Times and
Washington Post News Service

The University of Texas has a sports publicist named Jones Ramsey who has never cared much for basketball, baseball, hockey, tennis, lacrosse, track or even horseshoes.

"The two greatest sports in Texas," Ramsey likes to say when the Longhorns begin spring practice each March, "are football and spring football."

On the professional level, the people who run the new United States Football League think that they can expand that sentiment to include the rest of America.

Their premise is that sports fans want football 11 months a year, if not 12. Are they dreaming? Will the USFL survive? Can a spring football league succeed?

As the 12 USFL teams head into the first week of their first regular season with a full schedule of six games March 6-7, those are the questions being asked.

They won't, however, be immediately answered. This is an equation that can't be computed, in fact, for four or five years, regardless of whether the games are at first poorly or well played — or poorly or well attended — for it has three variables.

Over the long term, will there prove to be a sufficient number of:

—Fans?
—Good players?
—Wealthy, capable leaders?

Nobody really knows — although some critics are guessing that the USFL will indeed survive and, probably, merge with the NFL later in the 1980s.

Here are three viewpoints on the basic three variables:

Fans: According to market researcher Frank N. Magid, 75 percent of America's big-city adults think of themselves as pro football fans; 76 percent would watch spring and summer football on TV; 63 percent might attend in person, and 53 percent would prefer pro football to baseball on television during the spring.

Players: Dallas Cowboys Vice President Gil Brandt: "The USFL problem isn't a shortage of players. Some of their clubs are making trouble for themselves with some of the salaries they're paying — but if the talent is evenly distributed, there are enough qualified players in this country for another pro football league."

Leaders: Cleveland Browns President Arthur B. Modell: "The USFL has more leadership than any new sports league since the AFL (which, 15 years ago, forced a merger with the NFL). I have a high regard for the ability and integrity of their commissioner. Chet Simmons. He is a television man, but they have enough football minds in that league. And their roster of owners is generally impressive. They have some persons of great affluence."

Modell noted, however, that several USFL owners (including Bill Daniels of the Los Angeles Express) have been talking about making good in two years, or not at all, and said that he has one main reservation about the new league's leadership.

"The thing millionaires have in common is that they don't like to lose money," the Cleveland owner said. "These people may not realize how long it will take (to turn the corner financially). If they aren't planning on at least a five-year program, they aren't being realistic."

In the end, Gillman's Law will probably determine the duration of the new league.

"It isn't how much money you have," said the man who wrote the law, Sid Gillman, the veteran Hall of Fame coach. "It's how much you'll spend. Millionaires who throw their money into football are bound to prosper eventually. This is a business that grows all the time. But it isn't a bottom-line business. You don't ask questions, you just pay the bills. Football owners who peek at the bottom line are doomed to fail."

Modell, Gillman and other NFL men agree with Brandt that finding suitable playing talent isn't a USFL problem.

"There are thousands of players out there," Kansas City Chiefs President Jack Steadman said.

Just in the last two years, in fact, two NFL teams, San Francisco and Washington, have risen from the bottom to the top with numerous castoffs that nobody else wanted — Jack Reynolds, Dwight Hicks, Bill Ring, Nick Giaquinto, and 20 or 25 other free agents.

Contemplating the start of a new league, pro football veterans tend to question the supply of spectators, not talent.

"The USFL was created to fill a need that might not be there," Dallas writer Steve Perkins said.

Ed Fiori, Mike Gove share Doral lead

MIAMI (AP) — Ed Fiori and Mike Gove both said they fully expected to be playing well when the PGA Tour started its swing around Florida.

So it was no real surprise that they shared the first round lead in the $300,000 Doral-Eastern Open Golf Tournament with 7-under-par 65s.

But it was a very pleasant for Lanny Wadkins, who found himself a single shot back at 66.

"I was kind of apprehensive as to how I'd play this week," said Wadkins, coming off a 10-day bout with the flu."I'm the kind of guy who likes to come out here ready to play, not come out here to get ready to play. I hadn't been able to practice at all when I was home, so I didn't know what I'd do."

What he did was solve a putting problem that has plagued him all season.

"Probably the best putting round I've had all year," said Wadkins, a three-time winner last season and a runner-up in the first two events this season.

"My putting was kind of suspect on the west coast. If I'd putted like this, I'd have won the first two tournaments in a cakewalk."

Ken Green, who had the best tournament of his brief career last month in the Bing Crosby, also had the putting touch. He holed five times from the 25-foot range — two of them for par — for a 67.

Tom Kite, seemingly ever-present in the top 10, had a 68 and was tied, three shots off the lead, with Jim Booros and Peter Oosterhuis, a Briton now living in California.

Defending champion Andy Bean and Lee Trevino topped were among 18 golfers at 69. Masters title-holder Craig Stadler matched par 72 on the 7,065-yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club and PGA champion Ray Floyd, twice a winner of this event, was one stroke better at 71.

Jack Nicklaus shot a 70 that included a double-bogey 5 on the 13th hole, where he missed the green, played a poor pitch and eventually missed a 3-footer."Just kind of a blank spot in the day," Nicklaus said.

Gove, 27, who hasn't challenged seriously in three previous seasons on the PGA Tour, one-putted 11 times and piched in once as he established two career firsts. The 65 represented his low score as a pro and it marked the first time he'd led or shared the lead in a Tour event.

"I had to re-qualify for the tour (at the Tour school) last fall. I was 36th out of 50 so I haven't had a lot of chances to play this year. But I've been playing well ever since the school last fall and I was looking forward to playing here."

Fiori, who acquired his third Tour title in last year's Bob Hope Classic, was even more positive about his no-bogey performance.

"I've got all the confidence in the world in my game right now," he said. "I've been playing well all year and I've just been waiting to get to Florida. "I'm expecting to play well here. I like the golf course. I've got everything in line.

"I should be able to make a good run at 'em."

Clippers shock Boston Celtics, 122-107

By The Associated Press

Sure, the Boston Celtics had played five games in eight days on the West Coast and might be expected to let down after beating the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers one night earlier.

But is that any excuse to lose by 15 points to the San Diego Clippers, who until January were among the biggest pushovers in the National Basketball Association?

"We don't have to hang our heads," Boston Coach Bill Fitch said after the 122-107 defeat Thursday night. "The way they played tonight, even if we had had a week's rest, they might have won."

Asked if it was the biggest victory of his coaching career, Clippers Coach Paul Silas replied: "I imagine so. I guess you could say that. It was a great win."

Just as the Celtics got key contributions from several players in beating Los Angeles on Wednesday night, the Clippers' victory was a team effort.

Rookie Terry Cummings led the way with 25 points and 14 rebounds, center Bill Walton shot 10-for-14 and had 22 points and five blocked shots, guard Lionel Hollins scored 24 points and veteran reserve Randy Smith was 6-for-7 for 14 more.

Hollins scored 11 points in the period as the Clippers outscored the Celtics 33-21 to take a 92-74 lead. Boston didn't threaten seriously in the final period, to the delight of 13,838 fans at the San Diego Sports Arena, the second sellout of the season for the Clippers.

Bucks 114, Rockets 103

Sidney Moncrief scored a career-high 42 points as Milwaukee handed Houston its seventh straight loss.

Moncrief had 18 points in the first period, but it took a pair of 20-footers by Junior Bridgeman in the final minute of the first half to give the Bucks a 60-59 lead at intermission. In the fourth quarter, Moncrief added 12 points and teammate Marques Johnson hit 11 of his 33 to keep Milwaukee ahead.

James Bailey led the Rockets with 26 points and 14 rebounds.

Hawks 116, Pistons 107

Johnny Davis, who didn't play until Jan. 2 because of a contract dispute with Indiana, played his best game of the year, hitting 10 of 16 shots and scoring 24 points for Atlanta against Detroit.

Dominique Wilkins added 20 points and center Wayne "Tree" Rollins hit 7-of-8 attempts and blocked eight shots for the Hawks.

Terry Tyler scored 14 of his 20 points and hit all seven of his shots in the third quarter as the Pistons cut an 83-59 deficit to 13 at the end of the period. But they could get no closer than seven points in the final 12 minutes.

NBA Roundup

Nuggets 138, Sonics 129

Dan Issel scored 30 points and Alex English added 24 as Denver outlasted Seattle.

The game was tied 69-69 at halftime, but the Nuggets shot 63 percent from the field and outscored the Sonics 39-25 in the third period to take control of the game.

Gus Williams led Seattle with 27 points.

Suns 110, Jazz 103

Larry Nance scored 15 of his 23 points in the first quarter and Phoenix held on to beat Utah, which lost for the 13th time in 14 games.

The Suns led 41-27 after Nance's first-period outburst, but the Jazz rallied to take their only lead of the game, 98-97, in the fourth period. A basket by Alvan Adams gave Phoenix the lead for good.

Mark Eaton, Utah's 7-foot-4 rookie center, had 12 points, 12 rebounds, seven assists and six blocked shots.

Okamoto, Lopez seek Tucson title

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Defending champion Ayako Okamota and Nancy Lopez are among 17 of the top 20 players on the women's pro tour in 1982 participating in the Tucson Conquistadores LPGA tournament, which begins today.

In 1982, Okamoto walked away with $18,750 for winning a sudden-death match against Sally Little.

Lopez won the tournament two years ago. She is off to her best start in her pro career, with one tourney win already this year and another second-place finish — the Elizabeth Arden Classic and the Sarasota Classic, respectively — among the three LPGA stops on the tour to date.

Lopez is less than $11,000 away from reaching the $1 million level in career money, which she can accomplish with a first-or second-place finish in Tucson.

The tournament will also feature 34 of the top 40 from a year ago and has its largest field ever — 138.

This year's purse has been increased from $125,000 to $150,000. That means the winner will receive a check for $22,500 for the three-day, 54-hole tournament, which is being played at Randolph Park North Course.

"It's probably one of the strongest, if not the strongest field, we've ever had," said Boots Widener, the LPGA's senior tour official.

In fact, except for JoAnne Carner, last year's leading money-winner, all of the top 10 money winners are entered.

The Conquistadores, sponsor of the Joe Garagiola Tucson Open, first stop annually on the men's tour, bailed out the LPGA after the Arizona Mining Association dropped its sponsorship of the tournament.

Among the top players entered are Little, Sandra Haynie, Pat Sheehan, Beth Daniel and Amy Alcott.

In addition, Hollis Stacy, Kathy Whitworth, Jan Stephenson, Pat Bradley, Sandra Spuzich, Kathy Postlewait, Donna Caponi and Donna White are among the entrants.

Stephenson is getting a lot of attention here this week after the release of her Maryiln Monroe look-alike poster, which was just released to the market.

Whitworth was the first woman golfer to top the $1 million mark in career winnings. She is a member of the Golf Hall of Fame.

Bosox won't pay motel bill for players' wives

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — At least some of the Boston Red Sox figure they've taken a loss already — the club is going to bill them for their wives' motel stay during spring training.

The bad news was passed out Wednesday with the expense money after the first formal drill.

Players were advised that wives staying with husbands in a room at the Holiday Inn will be billed $125 a week. The motel is owned by a group which includes Red Sox co-owner Buddy LeRoux.

"I think it stinks," said veteran pitcher Bob Stanley. "It's pretty expensive to bring your family down here — $2,200 just for Sox spring training. It's worth it to have your family here with you. It's not nice, but if you gotta do it, you gotta do it....

"Things are changing, and it ain't for the better....I mean, we're on the road enough to where it's good to have your family here in the spring.

"I've got the money, but a lot of the young guys don't. It costs them 700 bucks to bring their wife and baby down here....

"Sure, I can pay for it, but how about a young player like a Dave Schoppee, who isn't making a lot of money? It's tough. His wife quit her job to come down here."

The club's traveling secretary, Jack Rogers, said the team has always figured on two players to a room in training camp but let wives stay with players without extra charge for many years.

"My wife thinks they don't want her down here because they're charging us extra," said catcher Gary Allenson. "I don't think that's necessarily the case. But they should have told us in the spring training newsletter they sent us in December....

"Some guys might not be able to afford it. You're supposed to be thinking about baseball, and now you've gotta worry about where your next meal is coming from. This is my fourth year here, and I never had to pay for my room."

Georgia Tech bans USFL from campus

Georgia Tech football Coach Bill Curry has banned the United States Football League from the school campus, the third college to do so in the wake of the USFL's signing of Georgia's Herschel Walker.

"I've been concerned with the USFL pulling our guys out of school anyway, even those who are eligible before they finish their degree requirements," Curry said.

Coaches Emory Bellard of Mississippi State and George MacIntyre of Vanderbilt declared their campuses off-limits to USFL representatives.

Super Bowl hero Joe Theismann, who initially turned his back on the National Football League, believes Herschel Walker "made the right move" by signing with the United States Football League.

But Theismann does have reservations about how good Walker is. "I'm curious about one thing. I watched him on artificial turf in the Sugar Bowl (against Penn State), and he's a different player than on real grass. I didn't see the same football player I saw in highlight films. I didn't feel he was as aggressive."

BASEBALL

Houston Astros relief pitcher Dave Smith says he won't let a broken finger on his throwing hand keep him out of spring training games.

Smith broke the ring finger on his right hand Wednesday when he tried to field a ground ball barehanded.

"I'll still be able to pitch with it," Smith said. "I'll just remove the splint and throw during games."

Patricia Jane Bench, 48, sister-in-law of Cincinnati Reds' third baseman Johnny Bench, was killed Thursday when fire destroyed her home northeast of Cincinatti, Lt. Jim Wigner of the Allen County sheriff's office said.

Her husband, William Bench, 40, and a guest, Randall Underwood, 37, were injured. They were listed in fair condition in Parkview Hospital.

Mrs. Bench apparently died of smoke inhalation and heat. Her body was found about 30 feet from a door in the dining room.

Mike Ferraro, the Cleveland Indians' first-year manager who underwent surgery for removal of a cancerous kidney only two weeks ago, was at spring training camp Thursday for the team's first offical workout for pitchers and catchers.

"I feel like I went through my toughest part of the year, but at no time did I ever think I wouldn't manage," Ferraro said. "Each day, I've been feeling better and better. I have to have faith in the doctors that they diagnosed what I had and accept that they did it correctly."

The American League Cleveland Indians have hired Brian Doyle to manage their Class A Batavia team. Doyle, who was a .400 hitter for the New York Yankees in the 1978 World Series, played for the Indians' Class AAA affiliate, the Charleston Charlies, last season.

In another move, the Indians have released Dave Rosello and Ricky Baker from Charleston and traded Charleston's Rob Pietroburgo to San Diego for a player to be named later.

BASKETBALL

It was a most inopportune time for Bob Huggins to get the flu, considering Walsh College was completing its first undefeated basketball season.

Despite a 102-degree temperature, Huggins guided the little Catholic liberal arts school from Canton, Ohio, to its 30th victory this week, a 96-83 decision over Ohio Dominican.

His illness, however, robbed Huggins of none of his humor. At home in bed Wednesday, he said by telephone, "I've got the strep throat now. But it feels better than going 0-and-30 and having the flu."

Attendance at Continental Basketball Association games has topped the 250,000 mark for the first time in the 37-year history of the league.

Official attendance figures released Thursday showed CBA teams drew 251,089 fans through their first 203 games, for an average of 1,237. The figures represent a 32 percent increase over last year's average attendance, the league said.

The Albany, N.Y., Patroons lead the CBA in average attendance with 2,012 fans per game. Rochester, N.Y., is second with 1,651, followed by expansion teams in Detroit, 1,578; Albuquerque, 1,530; Capser, Wyo., 1,454, and Oshokosh, Wis., 1,368.

The Utah Jazz have signed guard Kenny Natt to a contract, raising their roster to the National Basketball Association limit of 12.

The 6-foot-3 Natt had averaged 16.6 points per game with the Albuquerque franchise in the Continental Basketball Association. He played last year for the CBA's Alberta Dusters, hitting 18.6 points per game.

Volcker comments on rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker says although some interest rates charged by banks seem "quite high" in light of recent declines in inflation, he sees little point in trying to talk lenders into lowering rates.

Volcker told the Senate Budget Committee on Thursday the best strategy is to reduce federal budget deficits and hold monetary growth in check. He said that would reinforce gains against inflation and provide an economic climate in which rates would almost inevitably fall.

Volcker's comments came one day after President Reagan told reporters interest rates "can and should" decline further to avoid upsetting the economic recovery now apparently under way.

Reagan said that since inflation has declined so much, he saw "no reason why the banks can't bring those interest rates down another notch or two."

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., asked Volcker, "If the president is now jawboning the banks, why isn't the Fed?"

"He outranks me," Volcker replied, but added interest rates "not only should (decline) but will in the kind of environment I foresee."

Chrysler made money in '82

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. turned its first annual profit in five years in 1982, the company says, but it lost $96.1 million in the fourth quarter and its automotive operations continued to lose money for the entire year.

Chrysler, the third-largest U.S. automaker, reported Thursday that it earned $170.1 million for all of 1982, helped along by $239 million it gained from the sale last March of its defense subsidiary.

The four major U.S. automakers as a whole posted earnings of $321.5 million — the first group profit since 1979 when they earned a combined $3.03 billion.

Chyrsler's loss in the fourth quarter, which the company attributed mainly to a five-week strike by 10,000 Canadian workers, came on sales of $2.21 billion. A year earlier it lost $66.9 million on sales of $2.53 billion.

In earlier annual reports, industry leader General Motors Corp. said it earned $962.7 million last year, second-ranked Ford Motor Co. lost $657.8 million and American Motors Corp. lost $153.5 million.

Money market fund assets fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Assets of the nation's 302 money market mutual funds fell $1.3 billion this past week, the 12th consecutive weekly decline, according to the Inverstment Company Institute.

The latest decline in the week ended Wednesday followed a $2.6 billion drop the previous week and left the funds' assets at $191.1 billion, the lowest level since they stood at $189.6 billion on March 17, 1982, the Washington-based mutual fund group said Thursday.

The assets have fallen $41.2 billion since they reached a record high of $232.3 billion in the week that ended Dec. 1, 1982.

The latest average yields on the money market funds showed little change from last week, according to Donoghue's Money Fund Report, a trade journal.

The seven-day average yield was unchanged at 7.82 percent in the week ended Wednesday compared with the previous week, it said. The 30-day average yield rose to 7.81 percent from 7.80 percent the previous week.

Fewer autoworkers on layoff

DETROIT (AP) — There were 5,700 fewer U.S. autoworkers on indefinite layoff this week, the industry says, but U.S. car production was expected to remain stable.

The decline in layoffs was attributed largely to callbacks of 5,000 workers at General Motors Corp.

An industry reports released Thursday said the number of U.S. autoworkers on indefinite furlough fell to 254,350 this week from 260,050 last week.

Temporary layoffs this week, however, rose to 5,850 from 2,709 last week.

Meanwhile, Automotive News reported U.S. auto production this week will reach 131,687, a slight 0.8 percent boost from last week's 130,572, but up 45.5 percent from the 90,509 autos built in the comparable week in 1982.

So far this year, the carmakers have built 50 percent more cars than they did by this time last year, or 903,908 compared with 602,673.

Mexican loan gets comments

NEW YORK (AP) — The Bank Advisory Group for Mexico says it has received commitments for a $5 billion, six-year loan to Mexico.

William Rhodes, senior vice president of Citibank which shares with Bank of America the post of chairman of the advisory group, said Thursday that the loan will come from about 530 international banks.

He said the loan will be signed sometime next week with the exact date depending on the time required to receive replies from banks around the world on loan documentation.

The loan raises to about $85 billion Mexico's public and private debt to North American, European and Asian banks.

Mexico asked for the $5 billion in additional financing this year as part of its proposed debt-restructuring program.

"The successful completion of the loan is an indication of confidence by the international banking community in Mexico's ability to surmount its current economic problems," Rhodes said.

Mexico, the world's fourth-leading oil producer, has been hard hit by dwindling revenue from falling oil prices and the worldwide oil glut.

Fewer file for worker benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department says new applications for unemployment benefits declined in the second week of February.

It was the second straight week that those applications were down.

Some 472,000 Americans filed first-time claims for jobless benefits with state employment offices in the week ending Feb. 12, a decline of 38,000 from the previous week's level, according to seasonally-adjusted figures released Thursday.

First-time claims for jobless benefits have been ranging between 460,000 and 560,000 a week since early December, but have been bouncing up and down in the last two months, sending mixed signals on whether the nation's unemployment has peaked.

The seasonally adjusted civilian unemployment rate fell from 10.8 percent in December to 10.4 percent last month, and the number of people listed as unemployed dropped from 12 million to 11.4 million.

The number of Americans drawing regular state-paid benefits fell to 3,930,000 in the week ending Feb. 5, down from the 4,022,000 of the prior week, according to the new report.

Unions want wage increase

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — The AFL-CIO is calling for an increase in the minimum wage, signaling trouble for President Reagan's plan to seek a "youth differential" with less pay for teen-age summer workers.

The federation's executive council, saying "inflation has sharply eroded the value of the minimum wage," declared Thursday it would lobby hard against Reagan's summer jobs initiatives in Congress.

The council took the action the same day it interviewed Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, who is preparing to enter the 1984 Democratic Party presidential sweepstakes.

Hollings said he wants the consensus labor endorsement that federation leaders will seek by December at the latest.

The policymakers turn to foreign affairs today in a scheduled meeting with Secretary of State George Shultz.

The Reagan administration had hoped to soften AFL-CIO objections to the sub-minimum wage proposal by stipulating in the legislation that the $2.50 an hour payment for those between the ages of 16 and 21 could be made during the summer months only.

This limitation, administration officials said, would allay labor's concerns that employers would merely replace adult workers with youths at the lower rate.

Jaycees honor Davidson, Bynum

By JIM PRESNELL
Energy-Business Writer

The Midland Jaycees heard a Washington perspective on taxes and other federal government policies Thursday at their annual Bosses' Night and Distinguished Service dinner.

Boss of the Year Rufe Bynum and Distinguished Service Awardee Robert Davidson were in the audience listening to Price Waterhouse's Bob Shapiro.

Shapiro, who is director of national tax policy at Price, said "Washington does not make tax policies in a vacuum. But the government does try to solve each problem it has through a tax law change."

Shapiro believes the government is pushing tax law changes as a panacea for the current economic pandemonium. He feels the feds are in error.

The government has no real tax policy, Shapiro said, because tax laws change radically each year. "There is no policy or consistency. The budget, revenues needed, and ways to get the funds are being constantly revised," he said, making a gloomy economic picture.

Rufe S. Bynum Jr.
1982 Boss of the Year

To demonstrate the government's policies are contrary to good sense, Shapiro noted that 1981 saw consumers getting the biggest tax break in history — the Economic Recovery Tax Act (ERTA).

What the government giveth, it also taketh away — the year after ERTA, Congress looked at expenditures and decided it needed more real taxes and less deficit.

So with the balanced budget clearly unreachable (since Ronald Reagan could not find more ways to cut outlays), the current administration passed — through the Senate — the largest additional tax package ever enacted, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act (TEFRA).

No matter that the taxes in this package aren't equitable, Shapiro said. That word is just there — tax laws have not and may never be equitable in this country.

Shapiro described several situations where equitable taxes will not work. He said, for example, that if oil companies were given a flat tax on each barrel of oil rather than a variety of oils and prices, those hurt by the government's move would try to stop the bill.

If consumers were to be subjected to a flat percentage tax, he continued, the mid-income families who would be hurt (because of a loss of deductions and tax credits) would aim a deafening thunder of discontent right at their Uncle Sam.

"Simplification of taxes, along with a balanced budget, seem to be the logical goals of our (mercurial) tax laws," Shapiro said. "But the bottom line — tax paid — must be the same or less, if this is going to be acceptable.

"The Windfall Profits Tax is not tax policy, it's energy policy," Shapiro said. "It was a quid pro quo to the decontrol of oil prices," he continued.

"Take energy credits. That's not tax policy, it's incentives for conservation of oil and gas. It encourages business and individual users to switch to different forms of energy, like coal, nuclear, solar, or wind power," Shapiro noted.

Steve Davidson, Midland Jaycees distinguished service award winner, is a native of the Tall City. He is a past president of the Jaycees. Davidson, a member of the city council, has been invovled in a variety of community activites; ranging from Casa de Amigos, to the Midland County Housing Finance Corp.

"Investment tax credits. That's not a tax law, it is a simple 10 percent credit to encourage investment and capital formation. Like accelerated depreciation, it is a simple economic incentive to invest," Shapiro said, describing several other tricky portions of America's corporate tax laws.

"We simply can't use our tax system to solve every one of our problems and still expect to have a simple system of taxes," he said. Economic and political problems are too complex to be solved with more or less of specific taxes paid, the speaker told Midland Jaycees.

Economic recovery is keyed to the Federal Reserve Board, not taxes, Shapiro said. "The Fed can halt inflation and bring interest rates down by: 1; Incresing the M1, our country's basic money supply, or 2; lowering the discount rate (now at 8½ percent) it charges for money."

Housing led this recession and must lead out, despite Fed inactivity, Shapiro said. He sees the Fed bumping money cost down and housing being stimulated for a recovery, if only Paul Volcker's stranglehold economics at the Fed are gone and forgotten.

It is not known whether Volcker will survive to the end of the Reagan "supply side" fiasco of economic posturing. Certainly, Reagan's own future is in doubt if current conditions are his idea of "good times," the speaker inferred.

Legislature a potential threat to Texas business

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Each day the 68th session of the Texas Legislature meets poses a potential threat to Texas business interests, says a lobbyist for a statewide business group.

The main threat comes from proposals to increase state taxes to offset a projected budget deficit, said Bill Gray, president of the Texas Association of Business (TAB). He spoke Thursday to local businessmen in Midland.

Another problem this year is that TAB doesn't feel it has enough votes in the Senate to accomplish any of its legislative priorities.

"TAB's role this session is primarily one of a watchdog," Gray said. "We'll do a great deal of searching for bad bills. It's easier to kill a bill in the Senate with 11 votes, than to introduce one with 21 votes needed to bring it up for debate."

Gray said TAB would prefer to be in an affirmative position, but it just doesn't have the votes.

New taxes are the major threat, however.

"In the recent campaign, I recall no one said anything about increasing taxes," Gray said, "but no sooner had they gotten to Austin than they began to articulate need for a tax bill."

Gray said TAB members and lobbyists who have visited state legislators report that once legislators took a look at the numbers, they had to admit that some form of revenue increase, or service decrease, was needed.

Texas' current budget is $31.4 billion over the next two years, with a projected deficit of $2 billion, which may lead to a tax bill for $2 billion, Gray said.

Four major spending issues may require new or additional funding:

— A new state wide water use plan, tagged at $423 million.

— A 24 percent salary increase for teachers, as called for by Gov. Mark White, which would cost about $2 billion.

— State highway upkeep, which requires $2.3 billion.

— Group insurance for teachers, at a price tag of $300 million.

"The increase in salaries for public school teachers is the real threat," Gray said. "For every one percent increase, it would mean an additional $96 million in taxes, so it mounts up quickly."

There are three possibilities for Texas legislators, he said: live within existing means, enact a tax bill, or suspend the Texas constitutional limit on deficit spending.

Gov. White favors increasing users fees, such as hunting and fishing licenses. Gray called this synonymous with taxes.

"They can't raise all the dollars they need by upping users fees, still, it is my guess that there will be no new taxes, but there will be some higher fees.

"We are hoping we'll get by without a major tax increase."

Gray said the hottest issue, "where blood will be let on the House and Senate floor," is the issue of changing the Public Utilities Commission (PUC). TAB favors keeping the PUC as is, with appointed rather than elected members.

"This puts us squarely across the table from the Governor," Gray added.

The right to work issue is safe in this session, Gray said, because no interest group in the state has enough votes to do anything about it.

"I've not seen any bills introduced that would threaten it."

Most Texas banks ready for shock

AUSTIN (AP) — Most Texas banks have cushioned themselves against the possible shock of loan forfeitures that plummeting oil prices could cause, say state banking officials.

"You can't say that the slowdown doesn't represent problems in the state of Texas, because it does," said Texas Banking Commissioner Robert Stewart. "But I do think it's been blown out of proportion."

U.S. analysts predict that within a few weeks, international oil prices will range from $27 to $30 per barrel. In February 1982, the spot price for crude oil was $33.38 a barrel.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has said that for every dollar a barrel the price drops, Texas loses $40 million in oil severance taxes.

"There are several (banks) around the state heavily involved in energy credits that are feeling the pinch now," said Stewart. "Any bank that was depending on last year's prices of oil to pay back today's loans — they've got problems."

But Stewart said diversification will save most banks from serious trouble, even if there are wholesale forfeitures on oil industry-related loans.

"Even the biggest banks down here, with the diversification they have — I'm sure they don't want to take any lumps on oil credit, but I don't think it would be enough to break many banks in the state," he said.

Stewart's office regulates state banks. About 800 banks, accounting for approximately half of those in the state, are national banks regulated by the federal Comptroller of the Currency, which has a regional office in Dallas.

Federal regional banking administrator George Clifton said about 20 percent of the national banks could be "significantly" affected by the dropping prices.

"I don't think we're going to have any banks that are going to be devastated by a modest downturn in energy prices," Clifton said.

A spokesman in the agency's Washington office admitted that banking officials are careful not to suggest any specific bank might be in trouble because a run on its assets would only make the situation worse.

Clifton said when energy prices began declining last year, his office accelerated its bank examination schedule. Now banks are checked at least once a year instead of every 18 months.

He said the failure of Penn Square Bank in Oklahoma City last year alerted the banking industry that bank failures were not a thing of the past. Most bank officers quickly moved to diversify their loan portfolios to cushion against forfeitures, Clifton said.

Stewart noted diversification is not easy for banks in areas dominated by a particular industry. Both Stewart and Clifton agreed that Midland-area banks are in the greatest danger.

"Anytime you are relying on one industry, a localized industry for your support, if something happens to that industry, you have got a problem," said Stewart. "Maybe I'm looking at it with rosy eyes, but from what I see, it's just not that much of a problem."

Optimism spurs market record

NEW YORK (AP) — Optimism about the economic turnaround and hopes for continued low interest rates spurred stock prices to record heights as the Dow Jones industrial average soared above the 1,100 level.

The average of 30 blue-chip stocks jumped 24.87 points Thursday to close at 1,121.81, surpassing the previous record close of 1,097.10 set on Valentine's Day.

The rise was caused by optimism that the economic recovery will bring further cuts in interest rates and falling oil prices, said Robert Stovall, an analyst at the investment firm Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Thomas Weber, president of the Wall Street Weekly Forecast, an advisory service from Vandalia, Ohio, predicted that the Dow "will rise to a range of between 1,121 and 1,155 in the next week or so before a correction occurs."

Pollution control measures set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Measures to begin reducing toxic pollutants such as cyanide and phenols from the nation's steel plants will begin immediately under a new pact among the government, industry, and environmentalists.

The agreement was reached Thursday on new government regulations requiring steel plants to have the "best available technology" installed for reducing toxic discharges from steel and iron plants by July 1, 1984.

Although the new regulations won't become law for at least three months, officials with the Environmental Protection Agency said steel manufacturers agreed to abide by them immediately.

According to the Natural Resources Defense Council, the agreement on the new regulations will reduce the amount of toxic wastes that steel and iron plants pour into the nation's rivers and streams by 53,000 tons a year.

Both the NRDC, a Washington-based environmental group, and the steel industry had challenged the regulations as they were proposed last May by the EPA.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained more ground in heavy trading today, continuing the upsurge that carried prices to record levels on Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed Thursday above the 1,100 level for the first time ever, rose another 3.29 to 1,125.10 by noontime today. In the two previous sessions, the average soared more than 41 points.

Advances outnumbered declines by about 8 to 5 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Utility and financial issues, which are particularly responsive to interest-rate swings, showed some of today's best gains. Great Western Financial rose 1½ to 22⅛; H.F. Ahmanson 1⅝ to 31¼; Consolidated Edison of New York ¾ to 20¾, and Gibraltar Financial ½ to 9½.

The NYSE's composite index rose .35 to 86.60. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .37 to 380.01.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 51.23 million shares at noontime, against 49.12 million at the same point Thursday.

Government may straighten out its alphabet soup

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — Are MMDAs OK for IRAs?

Only in today's weird world of financial deregulation could such gibberish actually amount to a pertinent question. And only in that same weird world could the answer be, "apparently yes, but not necessarily."

Before the answer is expounded upon, perhaps the question ought to be translated into something closer to English.

MMDA stands for "money market deposit account," the new high-interest savings account that banks and savings institutions have been able to offer since Dec. 14.

The MMDA was designed to compete with money-market funds operated by stockbrokers and mutual-fund organizations. As of early this month, more than $230 billion had been poured into MMDAs, while the total in money-market funds had fallen from about $230 billion at last year's peak to below $200 billion.

Even to someone who has been fully exposed to the blitz of advertising for these new accounts, the acronym MMDA may be unfamiliar. Banks and savings institutions commonly use other, zippier names like "money fund plus," "insured money fund" or "market money fund."

This displeases sponsors of the standard money funds, who contend an MMDA is not a "fund" in any sense of the word.

Says the Investment Company Institute, a mutual-fund trade group: "Unlike money market funds, the rates set on the new account result from arbitrary decisions made by the bank; they can be altered equally arbitrarily. Minus carefully explained managerial fees and expenses, money market funds pay shareholders exactly what they earn."

There are other important differences. MMDAs carry federal deposit insurance up to $100,000 per account, while money funds do not have this government backing.

Minimums to open an account at a money fund vary, but in many cases are set at $1,000. MMDAs must require an initial deposit of at least $2,500.

Let's suppose that a saver has sifted through all the basic information, collected pamphlets and prospectuses for a representative number of MMDAs and money funds and reached a decision. A local bank's MMDA looks appealing for an Individual Retirement Account (IRA).

As it happens, a reader in Dayton, Ohio, did just that, only to be turned down by several banks and savings and loans. Another IRA shopper got a similar refusal from a Darien, Conn., bank.

Why not an MMDA for an IRA? The maximum IRA contribution per year is $2,000, but someone just now opening an account could make the $2,500 MMDA minimum with a deposit of $2,000 for 1982 and $500 or more for 1983.

The reader in Dayton said his rebuffs had "something to do with check-writing privileges." Well, all right, the checking feature of MMDAs may not have much relevance for many IRA depositors. But money-market funds have checking privileges too, and that doesn't stop them from aggressively seeking IRA customers.

There appears to be nothing in the government rules against MMDA IRAs. At least officials at the United States League of Savings Institutions said they were unaware of any such obstacle.

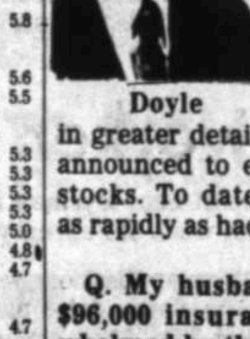
The problem, where it exists, seems to be that so much change has come so fast in the world of banking that many institutions simply haven't had time to put their IRAs and MMDAs together. Perhaps they will be able to, and will do so, before long. In the meantime, it looks as though customers like those in Dayton and Darien will have to plant their IRA seeds in other ground.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

NASDAQ system not bid, asked price

By BILL DOYLE

Q. NASDAQ's "National Market System" provides daily trading volume, high, low, last and net change prices on 180 over-the-counter stocks. Are those prices the bid or the asked prices?



Doyle

A. Neither. They are the prices at which transactions in those stocks took place between securities dealers. Those prices, however, do not include dealer markdowns and markups. So, investors sometimes get less than the reported low price when they sell and pay more than the reported high price when they buy.

NASDAQ's National Market System was started last spring by providing price quotations on 48 stocks in greater detail than on most OTC stocks. Plans were announced to expand it to include as many as 1,600 stocks. To date, that expansion hasn't taken place as rapidly as had been hoped.

Q. My husband died in August and I received $96,000 insurance money in October. I'm overwhelmed by this money, never having seen so much in my life. I was advised to put $45,000 in 182-day savings certificates, which I did, at 9.063 percent. I put $6,000 in a "NOW" interest-paying checking account, at 5.25 percent, and the other $45,000 in my savings account.

I am advised the $45,000 in the savings account should be put into a long-term investment, giving me high interest to live on. I know nothing about investments. I am afraid of stocks. They are unreliable. Where do I go to make long-term investments? Whom do I talk to?

A. There are two places you can go, a bank or a securities brokerage firm. Both can put you into various types of long-term investments, although a brokerage firm will probably offer a wider selection from which to choose.

Since you are against stocks, that narrows your choices to bonds and other "debt securities." As those two words indicate, when you invest in debt securities you loan money to the issuer of the securities.

Answer to today's Crossword Puzzle

IRS explains what to do about WPT refunds

WASHINGTON — In light of a 1982 district court decision concerning the constitutionality of windfall profit tax, the Internal Revenue Service recently explained how taxpyers should file claims for refunds of this tax.

In Ptasynski v. United States, the district court for the district of Wyoming held that "26 U.S.C. ss 4986 to 4998 inclusive, Title 1 of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act" are unconstitutional.

While the Ptasynski case has been appealed to the United States Supreme Court, there is some question at this time whether Code section 6511(h), which was added to the law by the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act, would be applicable if the district court's judgment is affirmed.

In general, Code section 6511 sets the time period for claiming credits and refunds for overpayment of any tax. Code section 6511(h) provides that if oil was subject to withholding under section 4995(a) when removed from the premises, but no Form 720, Quarterly Federal Excise tax Return, was required to be filed by the producer of the oil, then the return for purposes of fixing the time period for filing claims is the income tax return for the taxable year in which the removal year ends. The removal year is the calendar year bn which the oil is removed from the premises.

IN THIS SITUATION, the period for taxpyers to claim credits or refunds of windfall profit tax will expire three years after the due date for their income tax return for the year in which the removal year ends. Thus, calendar year taxpayers filing claims for oil removed in 1980 will have until April 16, 1984, to file the claims through which they would be eligible for any refunds due by reason of windfall profit tax paid in 1980.

In addition, the IRS said that if Code section 6511(h) does not apply, then the general rule of Code section 6511(a) will. The general rule is that if a return was required to be filed, the period for filing claims generally will be three years from the time the return was filed or two years from the time the tax was paid, whichever is later. If no return was filed then the period is two years from the time the tax was paid.

The IRS has determined that the principles of Revenue Ruling 60-58, published in Internal Revenue Cumulative Bulletin 1960-1, page 638, apply to this situation. Thus, producers not required to file returns for the periods in queston will have until three years from the due date of each quarterly Form 720 filed by the first purchaser of the oil to file claims. Accordingly producers subject to withholding that were not required to file returns, would be required to file claims by:

MAY 31, 1983, for oil removed in calendar quarter ending March 31, 1980;

August 31, 1983, for oil removed in calendar quarter ending June 30, 1980;

November 30, 1983, for oil removed in calendar quarter ending Sept. 30, 1980; and

Feb. 29, 1984, for oil removed in calendar quarter ending Dec. 31, 1980.

The IRS noted that in view of the present uncertainty as to the validity of Code section 6511(h), taxpayers not required to file excise tax retuns but wishing to file a claim for refund of windfall profit tax paid in any calendar quarter should file the claim by the quarterly dates noted above.

INTEGRATED OIL companies and other taxpayers that filed quarterly Form 720 for oil removed in 1980 will have three years from the due date of the quarterly returns to file claims for refund. Producers that filed annual Forms 720 for 1980 have until May 31, 1984 to file a claim.

The IRS urged taxpayers who are filing claims based solely on the constitutionality of the tax to file these claims separately from claims based on reasons other than the constitutionaltiy issue. Claims based solely on the constitutionality issue will be held in abeyance pending the Superme Court's decision. Claims based on other reasons will be processed.

When filing claims based on the constitutionaltiy issue, taxpayers should file Form 843, Claim, and write across the top of the forms "Protective Claim." In the explanation section of the form state; Protective claim based on the constitutionality of the windfall profit tax." If the amount to be claimed is unknown, enter the statement "$1 or more."

Collection provides food for thought

AUSTIN — A collection of papers from one of Texas' largest wholesale grocers in the late 19th Century is providing scholars at The University of Texas with food for thought.

The business papers of the Heidenheimer Brothers of Galveston, covering the period 1868-1890, were given to UT's Barker Texas History Center by Mrs. A.G. Rogers of Chula Vista, Calif.

Dr. Don Carleton, director of the Barker Center, said the archives are valuable because they give many insights into the lives of Texans during this era.

Included in the collection are letters from six full-time traveling salesmen who covered the state for Heidenheimer Brothers, letters from retail grocers in almost every Texas town (including many which no longer exist) and correspondence from attorneys engaged by the Heidenheimers to collect on a large number of overdue bills.

Though many might assume that Texans in the late 19th Century lived a sparton existence with few frills, the Heidenheimer papers indicate that, in some parts of the state at least, citizens were interested in the finer things of life.

A letter from Cerf & Raphael grocers of Corsicana, dated Feb. 16, 1980, reads in part:

"Our Mr. Raphael, when in Galveston, priced some claret wine from you and you asked him $70 for a wine which you said to be first class. It is very high but as it is for our own use we are willing to pay that price if it is as recommended. You can ship us a cask of that wine but don't ship it unless it is first class."

At the time the Heidenheimer Brothers were supplying the retail grocers of Texas, Galveston was in its golden era, Carleton pointed out. It was then the largest city in the state.

"Galveston and Houston were gereat rivals," he said, and Galveston citizens were amused at Houston's plans to build a salt water port.

"A barge sank one day in Buffalo Bayou near downtown Houston," he continued. "It was loaded with salt, and the front page of the Galveston paper ran a headline which said: 'Houston Finally Has Salt Water Port: God Provided the Water; Heidenheimer's Provided the Salt."

Not much has been uncovered about the brothers themselves, Carleton said, though it is known there were three-Sampson, Isaac and Abraham. A mansion in Galveston that was bought by Abraham became known as "Heidenheimer's Castle." Sampson served on the board of directors of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Railroad, which later became the Santa Fe Railroad.

The Heidenheimer papers bound in volumes by month and year and masuring 35 linear feet, apparently survived the Galveston hurricane of 1900 which left about 6,000 persons dead. The Barker Center director speculated that the archives may have been kept in an upper story of one of the many warehouses in the Strand area of Galveston.

The collection is remarkable for its completness, he added, and it is unusual in that it contains letters sent out by the company, as well as the letters received.

Oilman files bankruptcy

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oilman J.D. Allen, a former finance co-chairman of the Republican National Committee, stopped fighting his creditors and made his bankruptcy voluntary, declaring debts of more than $317 million.

An involuntary bankruptcy action, kept secret by law after it was filed against Allen on Feb. 8, was changed to voluntary on Thursday by a federal judge.

Details were not filed by Thursday but court documents showed debts of more than $300 million to Chase Manhattan Bank, Michigan National Bank and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the receiver for Penn Square Bank.

Penn Square was closed July 5 by the comptroller of the currency, who cited the firm's massive investments and losses in the energy industry as a major cause of its failure.

Allen headed J.D. Allen Industries Inc., and was a partner with Penn Bank director Carl Swan in the Longhorn Oil & Gas Co.

President urged to award medal veteran, 104, missed 84 years ago

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The Minnesota Legislature has urged President Reagan to correct an 84-year-old oversight and present a Congressional Medal of Honor to an Army veteran who is 104.

The resolution zipped through the House and Senate on unanimous votes Thursday, urging Congress to authorize that the president present a Medal of Honor to Herman Miller.

Herman Miller

Miller enlisted in the Army from Crookston, Minn., and was serving with Company G, 34th Infantry, U.S. Volunteers, in the Philippines in 1899.

Miller's company was defending the town of Batac on the island of Luzon when it was attacked by 800 insurgents. The resolution said 60 insurgent riflemen used dikes for cover and attacked the plaza before Miller and 12 others charged the enemy lines and drove them off.

Miller's commanding officer recommended him for a Medal of Honor. The resolution said the request was never given full and proper consideration.

State Sen. Don Storm said Miller is now a resident of the State Veterans Home in Minneapolis and is still quite alert.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Big Bird of "Sesame Street" had plenty to squawk about when it came to offering health tips for children.

Big Bird

His unflappable advice: "Always wash your wings before you eat."

Actor Burt Reynolds wrote: "No joke! Don't smoke!"

And advice columnist Abigail Van Buren suggested: "Develop a taste for fruit. It's sweet and loaded with natural nutrients."

The three celebrities were among more than 20 who sent in health tips to schoolchildren participating in the third annual "Week of the Strong Child," sponsored by the University of Rochester Medical Center.

"We tried to choose people whom kids respect," said hospital spokeswoman Dorothy Wardell.

From others:

First Lady Nancy Reagan: "A drug is something that sick people need to make them well, and it is something that makes well people sick."

Bob Keeshan, television's "Captain Kangaroo," composed an eight-line poem beginning, "The captain says drink lots of juice (which is seconded by Mr. Moose)."

"The Week of the Strong Child" has won the MacEachern Award, the nation's highest award for outstanding achievement in hospital public relations, each of the past two years.

Ed Koch

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Ed Koch has finally lined up his travel arrangements, including a helicopter ride, for his visit to Lebanon, but not without some diplomatic jousting with the State Department.

It won't be just any helicopter, either, but the chopper used by Philip Habib, President Reagan's special envoy to the Middle East.

Koch had planned to travel from Israel directly into Lebanon, but the State Department said Lebanon did not control its own border and such an act would be "a derogation of Lebanese sovereignity."

In the compromise announced before Koch's departure Thursday, the mayor will be picked up by helicopter in Tel Aviv, fly to the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz, then travel on to Beirut.

Richard Burton

LONDON (AP) — Actor Richard Burton says he would rather play to an empty house, or a few people who appreciate Shakespeare, than perform before most audiences.

"Have you ever looked at a theater audience?" Burton asked during a television interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. "The women with their tinted hair, their husbands who didn't want to be there in the first place."

The 57-year-old actor also said during the Wednesday program, "Burton, A Portrait of a Superstar," that he is still struggling with alcoholism and "I sometimes fall off the wagon and have one or two bottles of vodka a day."

"It's no laughing matter," he said, "I am an alcoholic."

First artificial heart recipient honored

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Hours after a smiling Barney Clark was wheeled back to a private hospital room, his wife accepted a humanitarian award in his name, saying Clark was grateful for a chance to prove "he is worthy of this artificial heart."

Clark, now in his 86th day with the plastic heart, was taken back to a private room Thursday after spending nine days in surgical intensive care at the University of Utah Medical Center.

He was moved after his kidneys improved and doctors decided his lungs were strong enough to allow him to be without a respirator, hospital spokeswoman Anne Brillinger said.

"When he's needed that in recent days, it's been primarily at night," Ms. Brillinger said. If Clark needs a respirator in the future, it probably will not require a return to intensive care, she said.

Clark told Dr. William DeVries, the surgeon who performed the landmark implant Dec. 2, that it felt "terrific" to go back to a regular hospital room, Ms. Brillinger said.

Clark, 62, a retired dentist from the Seattle suburb of Des Moines, has been "happy and cheerful" the past several days, said Dr. Lyle Joyce, his other attending physician.

Clark, DeVries, Joyce and three other doctors who helped develop the heart received the Brotherhood Award Citation from the Utah Chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Clark was honored at a Thursday night banquet for "risking his life in order to save it, yearning as well to cast light on some great and dark unknowns for the benefit of all mankind."

Interior Secretary James Watt, the banquet's main speaker, praised the courage of Clark and his doctors.

In accepting the award for her husband, Una Loy Clark said, "You are all our friends and you've proved it to us many, many times during the past three months."

"Without these wonderful doctors...he would not have the opportunity of life," Mrs. Clark said. "He would not have the opportunity to be with his family, he would not have the opportunity to prove to himself and to the world that he is worthy of this artificial heart."

Also honored were Dr. Willem Kolff, head of the university's Division of Artificial Organs, Dr. Robert Jarvik, who developed the Jarvik-7 heart used in Clark, and Dr. Donald Olsen, a veterinarian whose animal research was crucial to the heart program.

Clark had been moved out of intensive care and into the private room Valentine's Day, but doctors were forced to return him to the acute care unit the next day when he showed poor kidney and lung functions.

While in intensive care, Clark intermittently was placed back on a respirator. He has suffered for years from emphysema which doctors say has been a major obstacle to his recovery from the heart implant.

Ram matches artificial heart record

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Ted E. Bear, a 220-pound ram, tied the world record today for survival on the Jarvik-7 model of the Utah artificial heart.

The experimental sheep, which has been living on the fist-sized plastic pump since June 2, 1982, matched the 268-day survival mark set by Tennyson, a Jersey cow, University of Utah officials said.

Bear continues in excellent health, eats well and exercises three times a week on a treadmill located in the heart research laboratory at the university's Division of Artificial Organs, doctors said.

Meanwhile, Barney Clark — the first human recipient of the permanent air-driven mechanical pump — entered his 86th day today on the device.

The retired Seattle-area dentist received the heart Dec. 2.

Unlike Clark, who had the left side of his polyurethane heart replaced, the sheep has experienced no operational difficulties with the device, said Dr. Donald Olsen.

Although the animal occassionally experiences a slight fever, the ailment has been successfully treated with antibiotics, he said. There has been no evidence of blood clots, tissue growth or other problems, Olsen added.

The 5-year-old ram, donated to the laboratory by a Utah rancher, has maintained a steady weight since the operation, he said.

Bear has shown a fondness for fruits, especially apples and bananas, and has a sweet tooth for cola drinks and sugar cubes, the doctor said.

The team of surgeons who performed the implant included Olsen, Dr. William DeVries — the surgeon who replaced Clark's dying heart with the Utah Heart, and Dr. Yoshi Hamanaka.

AIDS-like disease in monkeys may aid research

NEW YORK (AP) — A disease known in monkeys since 1969 closely resembles AIDS, the mysterious human immune system disease, and might speed the search for a cure, according to a report in a British medical journal.

The report in the current issue of The Lancet describes an outbreak of immune system disease in rhesus monkeys at the California Primate Research Center in Davis, Calif.

AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — was identified less than two years ago, but in that short time some 900 cases have already been reported nationwide.

Until AIDS was discovered, the immune disease in monkeys was of concern only to veterinarians, Dr. Donald Maul, a veterinarian at the California Primate Research Center, said Thursday.

But when AIDS was reported, Maul and his colleagues realized there could be a connection."The more of these articles we read, the more we correlated the signs we were seeing in these monkeys with humans,".Maul said in a telephone interview.

The immune system disease has been known in monkeys since at least 1969, Maul said. In all, four outbreaks of the animal disease have been reported at Davis. Each killed between 30 percent and 45 percent of the infected animals.

In September, the parallels became close enough that Maul and his colleagues decided it was time to notify the National Institutes of Health, which has scheduled a special meeting March 2 to discuss the new development.

"An animal model might make it possible to experiment with it, stick it into an animal — which you can't do to a human with a lethal disease," said Dr. Donald Francis of the federal Centers for Disease Control's hepatitis branch in Phoenix, Ariz.

The discovery "could be very useful in understanding the situation in humans," Francis said.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome was first identified in male homosexuals and later was seen among heroin users, hemophiliacs, Haitian immigrants and infants who received blood transfusions. Forty percent of its victims have died.

AIDS spreads like an infectious disease. Doctors suspect it is caused by a virus, but its cause remains unknown. The disease suppresses the body's immune defenses, leaving victims open to a host of serious diseases — including a cancer known as Kaposi's sarcoma and an unusual form of pneumonia.

State Democratic stars showcased at auction

Democrats turn out to take jabs at GOP

Staff Photos by Ron Jaap

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Democrats were "showcased" here Thursday night as about 600 area residents turned out for a $50 per couple evening of food, drinks and political jabs at Republicans along with an auction of political memorabilia.

Stars for the evening were a team of state elected officials with the spotlight turned on Kent Hance of Lubbock, U.S. congressman for the 19th District which includes Odessa.

The Showcase on Highway 80 near Odessa was packed with most of the people proudly professing their Democratic leanings. The political slashes about Republicans and the president began with the speakers and continued through to the items being auctioned, such as the Reaganomics Survival Kit which was the first item to go. Included in the kit were a Band-Aid, a balloon and a tiny umbrella.

While Texas flags which had flown over the Capitol and a book on Presidents were items which could be expected to show up for a political auction, the collection also included an autographed headband from Willie Nelson, four tickets from author Larry King to the "Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" production in Midland, an autographed album of Waylon Jennings and Ozzy Osbourne's album, "Speak of the Devil."

Money from the event goes to Citizens for Odessa, an organization to promote the Democratic party.

POLITICAL STARS included Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker of the House Gib Lewis, State Treasurer Ann Richards, Agriculture Commissioner Jim "Whole Hog" Hightower, Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent, State Rep. Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring, State Sen. Bill Sims of San Angelo and State Rep. Jay Gibson of Odessa.

It was one of those loosely organized evenings where the people picked out a table, shuffled through the buffet line that consisted of a West Texas-barbecue-American-hors d'oevres-Mexican-tamales-and-dip menu, grabbed a drink and ate.

"I think it'd be best if they didn't touch it (tax cit bill). You shouldn't raise taxes in a recession and that's what it would do."
— Rep. Kent Hance

The announcement said the event started at 7 p.m, but it was after 8:30 p.m. before the auction began. It was Hance who introduced the Democratic officials, poking fun at various ones.

When the auction began, any semblance of a quiet, organized audience vanished and people began walking around the room to meet the politicians, some to ask for "special consideration" on particular legislation.

Talking briefly with The Midland Reporter-Telegram and in-between interruptions of "How ya doin'," "I think you're doing a great job" and "Aren't you gaining weight...your cheeks look fat," Hance predicted President Reagan won't get everything he asked for in the budget. The Senate and House will submit differing versions and a compromise will have to be hammered out in the Conference Committee.

DEFENSE IS ONE area where Reagan will lose, said Hance, who used to represent Midland until redistricting took effect in January. He may vote in favor of freezing military pay but only if there is a freeze on everyone.

Although the Democratic leadership has suggested the third year tax cut of 10 percent which should become effective late this year be delayed to help bring in more money, Hance doesn't agree. As one of the authors of the 5-10-10 tax cut bill which Congress passed and Reagan approved two years ago, Hance said this is not the time to stop it.

"I think it'd be best if they didn't touch it. You shouldn't raise taxes in a recession and that's what it would do," he added.

Although Democrats and Republicans have verbally approved revisions to the Social Security system, "I don't know how I'll vote for it," he added.

For Sims, the state government's biggest headache also is coming in the area of money — too many requests and not enough to go around.

"If everyone's request is honored, there will have to be a tax increase," said the Democrat in his first term as successor to Pete Snelson of Midland. Sims defeated Ernest Angelo Jr., a Republican petroleum engineer of Midland, in November's general election.

A MEMBER OF the Education Committee, Sims said the Legislature will increase teachers salaries and is considering favorably the request for the state to fund teachers' health insurance. Noting that the Senate will begin hearing requests from major institutions and teacher organizations soon, Sims suggested these organizations decide which they want most: higher pay raises and the possiblity of no health insurance or lower pay raises and health insurance funding.

Sims doesn't expect a long-range water bill to be adopted in this session, also because of the declining revenues. Instead, he said, the Legislature probably will concentrate on ways to keep water fresh.

"If everyone's (monetary) request is honored, there will have to be a tax increase."
—Sen. Bill Simms

On Wednesday, he introduced a bill to form a water district in Sterling County that would be identical to the one in Glasscock County, Sims said.

The Democrat said he supports retaining appointed, rather than elected, positions on the Public Utilities Commission, and keeping the Railroad Commission in its present form.

Overall, Sims said the Senate appears to be moving faster than the House in going through its work load.

A new procedure for running the House has been initiated by Gib Lewis, who said he believes it will result in better legislation.

Under his plan, the first 30 days are for organizing, the second 30 days for introducing bills and debating them. "It allows greater debate in committees. I think you'll see a better quality of legislation come out of the House this year."

Midland man's dream soon to become a reality

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The freshly painted white fence surrounding acres of newly-plowed land also encompasses an 11-year-old dream of a Midland man.

At the age of 19, the Rev. Frank Kiker dreamed of a ranch to house troubled and dependent boys. With the help of some 80 Midlanders in attendance Thursday night, the first stages of his goal became a reality during a fund-raising banquet for the Permian Basin Boys' Ranch at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Since July, donations of labor, materials and money have allowed two boys, a small staff and several horses and ducks to call the ranch, located about 10 miles southeast of Midland, their home.

The months of work have been hard, Kiker said, but it is only the beginning, cautioned Dr. Jack Daniel, former director of High Sky Girls' Ranch and present director of the Methodist Children Home in Waco.

"THERE WILL BE many days you will wonder why you ever got the idea," the guest speaker said. "There will be many days you wonder why you ever wanted to help anyone.

"But someday, you'll thank God for the testing and trials that made you survive."

Christian love, compassion and concern added to contemporary scientific knowledge in a changing society make up today's standards of child care, Daniel said.

"The three concepts of child care are a haven for healing, laboratory for living and a foundation for a future."

The first step involves two questions: Is it in the child's best interest to be removed from his family and, if so, what can a child care facility do to meet this need?

Society today, full of "confusion, chaos and clutter," has forced a redefinition of family life, Daniel said. "The disruption of a normal family pattern and the confusion of society" often cause a lack of discipline, aggressive behavior and scholastic problems for youth.

"They need a calm, quiet, dependable routine and a chance to get in control," he said.

A PLACE TO change damaging habits, understand problems, assess needs and establish a new outlook on life are important. More important, however, is the development of motivation.

"We must be alert, more open and examine all we do to prepare children for living in a contemporary world." Emphasis on vocational training is mandatory in the laboratory living stage.

"Learning a trade and developing a skill assumes responsibility for one's own actions.

"Every youngster should be self-sufficient. The days are long gone since we could put a child on the street and expect him to make it."

Continuing contact with students who graduate and leave the ranch is the final important stage, he said. "Maintaining contact with former residents will measure our efforts."

With careful planning, an active board and a vision of the future constantly kept in mind, the ranch will be a success. "It's a great business: the business of making somebodies out of nobodies," he quoted one of his former Waco students.

Construction of the first cottage, which will house 16 boys ages 7 to 17, is expected to begin in March, according to Kiker. The 5,000-square-foot building also will accommodate two sets of houseparents. Presently, there is a waiting list of 12 boys.

FUTURE PLANS call for a food service center, non-denominational chapel, rodeo arena, supply building, laundry, library and administration building.

Skills will be taught through practical experience at the ranch, Kiker said. Carpentry, plowing, planting and caring for livestock will be shared by boys, staff and volunteers as the expansion of the ranch takes place.

A gymnasium, swimming pool and tennis courts also are on the list. "We want to teach boys how to use skills and apply them at the ranch," Kiker said. "We want them learning skills in a home activity."

Certificates of appreciation were presented to Daniel, Frank Elkins and Gayle O'Daniel for their help. Country-western singer Razzy Bailey also was recognized for his planned appearance following an Odessa engagement later in the evening.

Local individuals and companies also were recognized for donations. They included Communications Plus, Curtis Mathes T.V. Center, One Place Printing Co., West Texas Reproductions, Bradley & Cox Ltd., Alton Hill Lawn Service, The Office Furniture Center Inc., Bancroft Paper of Texas Inc., Glenn's Honda Sales, Lone Star Electrical Co., Midland Home Lumber Co., Buchanan & Associates Inc., M-System Food Store, Horse Trader Boot & Tack Co., Leslie D'Allesandro Hill, Frame Korner, Box Auto Salvage, Plants by Evergreen, J.D. Commission to delay decision on MMH's expansion project

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The state decision for Midland Memorial Hospital's $15 million expansion project will be delayed a week, according to the hospital's attorneys.

Ray Branson, MMH president, said Thursday that Kevin Reed, MMH's attorney, has learned the Texas Health Facilities Commission will not hold its regular "open meeting" session March 4. The THFC makes its decision on certificate of need applications during open meetings, usually held on Fridays.

So, the decision for the 77-bed expansion has been delayed until March 11, Branson said in the MMH board of directors' meeting.

Paying bills, accepting equipment bids and setting the April election were other business items at the Midland County Hospital District board of directors meeting.

The directors also considered reports from the district's financial adviser on alternative financing for MMH's expansion.

Although the directors are waiting for more reports from First Southwest Corp., MMH's financial advisers, Dr. Henrie Mast, director, said interest rates for general obligation bonds, requiring a bond election, are less than revenue bonds. Mast said it would cost the taxpayers $3 million more if the district chose to finance the expansion through revenue bonds, which do not require voter approval.

The directors approved retaining Arthur Andersen & Co. as the hospital auditors and paid $5,709 for the district's portion of the audit fees. In indigent care payments, the directors approved $100,212.80 to MMH and $47,634.31 to Lubbock General Hospital.

Dale Miller, MMH vice president of finance, said the indigent care payment to Lubbock was for a premature baby transferred from MMH.

"It was brought before the utilization review committee and the committee's recommendation was that the transfer was necessary," Miller said.

In January's board meeting the directors held back a $22,834.22 indigent care payment to Lubbock. But, after this bill was studied by the utilization committee, it was also found to be a justified transfer.

The directors also paid $4,537.58 in legal fees, $221,880 for the interest portion of the district's 1977 $10 million bond and $390,000 on the principal of the bond.

Equipment bids approved included $3,347.07 for patient exam room furniture and $4,566 for a blood bank refrigerator.

Concerning the April 2 election for three director seats, the directors approved election precincts, polling places and absentee voting for March 14.

In other business, the directors approved the hospital's January financial statements. According to Miller's report, gross patient revenues totaled $2,623,611, exceeding the budget by $101,504. Salaries and benefits exceeded the budget by $34,853. Referrals to collectors totaled $215,531, or 8.2 percent of gross revenues. Fiscal year-to-date bad debts total $1,070,025 with $298,598 recovered.

HRC's community role reaffirmed

By VINCE GIORGI

A single, yellow sheet of legal paper bore the Human Relations Council annual meeting agenda; scrawled, scribbled, in part symbolic of the organization's hectic year.

The HRC lost its executive director in January, amid controversy over the need for the council's continued existence. Shortly afterward, it was forced to vacate its office space and scramble to find quarters at 410 N. Weatherford St. Since January, the HRC churned along with a skeleton staff consisting of the new director, Gloria Ellis, and a secretary.

When President Dan O'Grady reached for the yellow paper Thursday night during the HRC's annual meeting in Midland National Bank, it might just as easily have contained the council's eulogy.

Instead, O'Grady presided over two "firsts" for the organization and reaffirmed the HRC's role as an information and referral agency and a promoter of communication and cooperation among the racial and ethnic groups of Midland County.

Gloria Ellis

Representatives of about a dozen Midland social service agencies attended to participate in the HRC's first annual "Building Midland Together." Each person offered a short description of the services provided by their agency.

O'Grady said the sharing of information would help all agencies determine where there might be duplication of services or a lack of programs to meet Midland's needs.

Mayor G. Thane Akins closed the session by congratulating the representatives for their efforts and encouraging them to continue.

"More and more things that are needed in the community are going to have to be met by the citizens themselves," said Akins, who conceded he was "preaching to the choir" about the need for greater attention to human needs.

"Any organization can certainly find areas in this city to lend help," said Akins. "I'm encouraged because of people like you."

The HRC presented its first annual Human Relations in Action award to Bertha Starks, past council president and board member.

Ms. Ellis said HRC will consider starting several new services during 1983, including a career day for minority young people, a neighborhood block club to combat crime, a tenants' organization and prenatal and high blood pressure seminars.

She said the HRC will continue several projects, including its information and referral service, a neighborhood beautification program, a tenant/landlord relations service and a food bank.

The HRC also will screen applications for the city's Community Development Block Grant housing rehabilitation program beginning March 7.

Ms. Ellis announced the hiring of a social worker, Emma Galindo, and plans for hiring another social worker.

New officers and board members were elected during the meeting. The 1983 officers include Edia Hernandez, president; Carolyn Wallace, vice president and Helen Hudson, secretary. Board members elected for 1983 include Dr. John Martinez, Ron McKenzie, Pat Standley, Ms. Hudson, Isabel Jimenez, Sal Montez, Margie Titus, Ms. Wallace, Ms. Hernandez, Charlie Jackson, Clarence Meekins and Larry North.

Absentee voters may register for April 2 city-school elections

Midlanders who intend to cast ballots in the April 2 city-school elections but who have not yet registered to vote may sign up through March 3, according Janeice Builta, Midland County elections administrator.

To date, approximately 43,500 Midland Countians are registered voters.

"There's a lot of people out there who need to be registered," she said.

And there are many registered voters who have changed their addresses within the county but who have not notified the elections administrator of those changes, Ms. Builta said. They need to correct their voter registration cards, she said.

"We have got to do some tall and fancy screaming at them" to get the unregistered voters on the rolls and to get addresses corrected, Ms. Builta said. The address determines the voting precinct wherein the voter may cast his ballot.

The Texas Election Code requires that a person must be registered to vote at least 30 days prior to an election to be eligible to vote. And a registered voter who moves or who otherwise undergoes an address change is required to notify the elections administrator within 90 days of that address change. Citizens who have been issued new route and mail box numbers by the U.S. Postal Service are to notify the elections administrator by writing or in person of their reclassified routes and boxes, she said. They may make the address corrections on their voter registration cards and mail them to Ms. Builta. "That's all they have to do; we'll take care of the zip codes," she said.

Ms. Builta, whose office is at 709 W. Washington Ave., may be reached at 687-0231 or 687-0232.

Absentee voting in the April 2 elections will be from March 24 through March 29.

On April 23, Midland County will hold a $10.76 million courthouse-jail bond election.

In addition, the Texas Legislature is considering calling a statewide constitutional amendment election on April 30. The proposed amendment would restructure the Permanent University Fund.

MMH board: Emergency room treatment improving

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Although Midland Memorial Hospital's emergency room has had its ups and downs, the board of trustees heard reports Thursday that it is improving.

In other board news, trustees approved four physicians as associate members on the medical staff, discussed expanding MMH to a 400-bed facility, heard updates on the hiring of a director of development and a chaplain and accepted a $250,000 donation.

According to Dr. Walter Parks Jr., patient-returned surveys indicated 32 percent of the emergency room patients were dissatisfied with the service they received before seeing a physician. Apparently, patients reported they were not made to feel comfortable before the physician examined them.

Parks, a trustee and chairman of the quality assurance committee, said reorangization of the ER nursing personnel has made a vast improvement, but it seems that patients are still unhappy with emergency room personnel. He said 15 percent of the ER patients complained that the "ER staff did not explain problems" to the patient.

"We're thinking about re-doing the physician staff in the ER," he said, explaining that the MMH has a contract with a group of physicians in San Antonio. This contract is up for renewal.

"In some instances we felt we weren't getting the quality of doctors (for the emergency room) we thought we should have."

George Veloz, trustee, said "the emergency room is the hot spot in the hospital and it's kind of the pits. I think we have neglected the attitudes Midlanders have about Midland Memorial."

He asked Parks whether the ER's triage system or an ombudsman could help to change these negative attitudes.

Ed Magruder, director, answered "the triage nurse is not there to be a patient advocate or an ombudsman. They're there to assess patients for treatment and assign priority rather than be a patient advocate. We don't have an ombudsman program; we have a triage."

Wanda Mohr, director, said "from a nursing point of view, some of these people (patients at the ER) think their problem should be attended to immediately."

Tom Bruner, trustee, asked "if the non-emergency and emergency instances could be broken down" to determine whether the complaints were valid.

After the discussion among the trustees and directors, Parks said the ER situation is improving from where it used to be. "Things are getting better not worse."

Parks also reported that four doctors — Dr. Meenakshi Patel, psychiatrist; Dr. P.V. Patel, cardiolgist and internist; Dr. Joseph Rhode, family practitioner; and Dr. Ricardo Cecchini, obstetrician and gynecologist — have been accepted as associate members of the MMH medical staff.

Reports from the MMH trustee planning committee included expansion plans. Even though hospital officials are awaiting approval for a $15 million 77-bed expansion, John Dorn, trustee, said the committee is "asking the (MMH) architect for drawings of a 400-bed capacity with parking on this site."

If the 77-bed expansion is approved, this would bring MMH's licensed bed capacity to 272 beds. To bring the hospital up to a 400-bed facility, MMH would need to add 128 beds. Dorn said the architect has been asked to submit the preliminary plans to the planning committee and the drawings will come to the board for recommendation in the near future.

The executive committee reports included an update on the director of development, who will be hired primarily for fund-raising and a chaplain, who will be hospital based for patients and staff. Both these positions are in the interviewing stage at this time.

In other news, the trustees were informed that $250,000 has been anonymously donated to the hospital's radiology department.

Police officer fired for misconduct

A city police officer has been fired for misconduct in connection with a complaint filed against him by a female prisoner.

Chief of Police Wayne Gideon said today that 42-year-old Leroy Sandifer was dismissed Thursday over "a provacative conversation" he allegedly had with an unidentified woman prisoner in the jail Wednesday.

Gideon said Sandifer — a commissioned police officer who had been employed with the department since January 1982 — denied the allegation, but an internal investigation led to his dismissal.

Sandifer, who could not be reached for comment, was employed as a jailer. It is not known if he plans to appeal his dismissal.

Midland band students rate first at UIL contest

The annual University Interscholastic League Band Solo and Ensemble Contest was held recently at Midland College. High school students prepared a solo or ensemble and performed before judges who wrote critiques of performances.

Students receiving first division (superior) rating on solos from Lee High School included the following: Kellie Wetsel, Carol Neal, Allison Milner, Lisa Mason, Janet Graham, Yvonne Kennedy, Maura Carmody, Renae Hadaway and Lori Smith, flute; Karen Eggleston, Melissa Collier, Joe Shuffield and Karen Leung, violin; Brad Crowley, Eddy Najar and Trey Barker, percussion; Traci Ballard, Stacy Hawkins, Tammy Marshall, Kelli Rush, Tammy Adair, Tina Deel and Margaret McCright, clarinet; Robert Rumbelow, Ronnie Rittenberry, Bobby Garcia and Wes Coles, cornet.

Quilting, microwave cooking among courses offered by MC

Five more courses will be offered by the Midland College Department of Community Services beginning the week of March 7. Included will be Appraisal of Oil and Gas Properties, Quilting II, Interior Decorating II, Microwave Cooking I and Concrete Masonry.

Troy Sloan will teach Appraisal of Oil and Gas Properties from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 7-8 and from 8 a.m. to noon March 9. The course will include the general procedures and problems encountered in appraising oil and gas properties. Also, the characteristics of reservoirs and ownership arrangements will be covered. The course is approved by the State Property Tax Board for credit toward the Registered Professional Assessor designation. The class is limited to 30 students and the fee is $42.

Quilting II, taught by Jean Roberts, will meet from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesdays for four weeks. The class is limited to students who have completed Quilting I and has openings for 15 students, who will learn more intricate pieced and curved seams while working on Drunkard's Path, Grandmother's Flowergarden and Dresden Plate designs. Students should bring scissors and a thimble to class. Other supplies will be available the first night for $10. Fee for the class is $15.

Michael Wortman will teach Interior Decorating II from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursdays for six weeks. The class is a continuation of Interior Decorating I and will include in more detail the use of color, furniture and accessories. Class is limited to 25 students who have completed Interior Decorating I and the fee is $18.

Microwave Cooking I, taught by Rita Nell Diffie, will meet from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m. March 10. Fee for the class is $8.

James Thomas will teach Concrete Masonry from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. for five weeks. The class will include the designing of concrete masonry walls, construction details, properties and mixing of mortar, workmanship and masonry practice. Students will participate in actual laying of concrete masonry units. The class is open to both men and women and is limited to 14 students. Fee for the class is $50.

Further information may be obtained by contacting the Midland College Department of Community Services at 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

United Way of Midland hires new executive director

United Way of Midland President Harrell Feldt today announced the hiring of a new executive director for the organization.

Feldt said Robert A. Cornelius, associate executive director for the United Way of theFnds in Columbia, S.C., will take over the position effective April 1.

Cornelius replaces Sarah E. Smith, former executive director, who resigned earlier this year to direct the United Way of Berks County in Reading, Pa.

Cornelius began his United Way career in 1972 as planning director and later allocations director for the United Way of Central New York. He also worked as executive director for the Central New York Community Foundation.

In 1978, he began work as campaign director for the United Way of the Midlands. He was later promoted to associate executive director.

Choose plant variety when planning for spring garden

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Spring or pre-spring is the right time to think, for a change. I shall say how the gardening year works and shall warn against greed, and shall urge moderation (within limits, of course, since total moderation is deadly in the garden) so we don't dazzle our eyes in April and have nothing left for the rest of the year.

It may work best to think of the garden as a succession of climaxes, and for most gardeners it makes sense to plan to enjoy all of them in due order. Naturally, there are gardeners so far gone in wild gingers, say (I knew a man who had almost 400 kinds of them) that there is no energy left for anything else. And we have all run into gardeners who love only the iris, only the rose, only the peony, and such nuts properly devote all their space and energy to their particular darling.

But I am thinking of more normal gardeners, the ones who are not fanatical in some narrow sphere, but who have catholic aptitudes for enjoyment.

The first great burst of the year, then, is the late-winter burgeoning of flowers from bulbs. Everybody likes crocuses, and the earliest ones are best. Forms of C. sieberii, in luminous pure lavender with orange stigmas, are reliable for January or early February. Sometimes you can see a lavender glow from the blooms beneath frozen snow, and when it melts they seem in as good shape as ever. Another early one is the saturated-gold C. ancyrensis. There are many forms and hybrids of C. chrysanthus, all of which wind up their display by early or mid-March.

EVERY GARDEN should if possible give space — maybe only 10 feet square — to these early-blooming bulbs, in a sun trap, against a wall facing south, the sort of place cats like to doze. There should be an evergreen backing, and if there is space this might consist of mahonias, nandinas, box, yew, hollies, etc., but if space is very limited, it might be against a wall of ivy or even a wall of a shed painted black. The point is that these early fragile flowers show up much better against a dark foil to their brilliance.

Do not neglect early scillas, anemones, chionodoxas, daffodils (such as Narcissus asturiensis), Hyacinthus azureus, wild Roman hyacinths, the earliest wild tulips and so forth. Plant them thick, so the effect is a carpet of luminous colors.

The next big season (April) brings on the huge garden tulips of the Darwin Hybrids, which every gardener will wish to grow. They are poorly named, since the critical genes of the parentage were not the Darwins but the wild Tulipa fosteriana. A typical variety is "Jewel of Spring," in soft ivory-primrose, enormous, and exceptionally well-behaved in the garden, lasting for a good five years without being lifted. Most tulips of garden sorts (such as the Cottage, the Breeders, the Darwins) peter out after a year.

AT THE SAME season you have daffodils. Late March to mid-April is their great season. It is worth spending some time at a daffodil show or reading a few books to learn about daffodils in some detail. No other bulb of the entire year is so well worth the gardener's attention, and an effort should be made to plant early kinds (such as "February Gold," which opens in Washington on March 15) through the many late varieties (such as the old "Thalia," which may last into May).

Azaleas begin April 15 and with them you have dogwoods. We are lucky in having splendid conditions for the Kurume and Glenn Dale and many other azaleas, and since many city gardens are overhung with trees, azaleas are a logical and superb choice as chief ornaments. In summer there will be too much shade for flowers, except maybe hydrangeas, but the azalea garden can be exciting even out of bloom with plenty of hostas, epimediums, ferns and so on.

Then come the irises in dazzling variety, not merely the great tall bearded garden irises, but the many other sorts, some of them wild. It is worthwhile, in the very beginning, to explore the spurias, the kaempferis, the evansias (including the modest but irresistible I. cristata, a native wildling, as well as the white I. tectorum alba) and the great yellow water flag, I. pseudacorus, preferably in the variegated form with leaves striped soft yellow-hard to find, for some dumb reason. The Siberians should not be neglected, especially the more recent forms that have come along since "White Swirl," a superb variety.

AS THE IRISES PASS, their mid-season the peonies come on. Some of them bloom even before the irises or with the earliest ones. Such a gorgeous peony as "Red Charm" is among the very early sorts. While peonies take a good bit of space, their blooms are more gorgeous than anything else all year, and their foliage remains handsome until fall, generally.

Roses come as the peonies give out. They overlap. Some roses (such as the grand once-blooming pink climber "Mme. Gregoire Staechelin") bloom with the irises and are finished before the main rose display begins. Apart from hybrid teas and floribundas, the gardener will want to investigate shrub roses, such as the rugosa varieties, which are relatively foolproof.

By mid-June the day lilies begin, lasting until early August. Some varieties are even earlier and even later, but I speak of the main season which has hit a peak around July 4. No gardener should deny himself the pleasure of these elegant and tough plants, a grand assortment of which may be seen at the National Arboretum (and the same is true of peonies which are well grown there).

The true lilies bloom at various times, but late June and early July are peak times. The tedious warnings about good drainage are to be heeded when you plant lilies. I think many lilies, especially the auratum varieties and hybrids, need far less sun than they are usually given, by the way.

LATE SPRING and summer and early fall are the water-lily season. I could not overemphasize the importance of a goldfish pool with water lilies, provided there is a spot with at least four hours of direct sunlight a day. The hardy sorts start blooming the end of May; the tropical sorts start blooming in July.

Do not undertake the building of a lily pool lightly. On the other hand, provided the gardener reads two or three books and reflects on pool construction a bit, any fool can do the work himself. And most of us poor fools do. In any case, the rewards of a lily pool, larger than seems reasonable rather than smaller, are greater than the rewards of any other gardening venture.

TOWARDS LABOR DAY the great surge of dahlias comes in, to destroy any nagging reservations the gardener may have that they are somewhat gross. Magnificent, rather than gross. They do insist on sun and good deep soil, which they can easily be given in our favored region. And then, to wind up the major floral events, the chrysanthemums brighten October and November.

While nobody can manage everything, still my observation over the decades shows me that most gardeners need at least all these flowery climaxes if they are to be good, sturdy, happy, healthy citizens. It is better to have two peonies (a reasonable selection would come to 147 varieties at a minimum, but life is hard) and three roses and four irises and so on, than to devote all the space to one flower. For life goes on, oddly enough, even when the irises are done.

The art show will be displayed Saturday from 10 a.m. — 6 p.m. and Sunday from 1 p.m. — 6 p.m. The spaghetti luncheon will be held Saturday from 11 a.m. — 2 p.m. Proceeds will benefit Midland Christian School. Shown here preparing for the event are Linda Dove, left, and Sue Rose.

Screws often more efficient than nails in woodworking

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

There are two major advantages to using a screw rather than a nail to hold together two pieces of wood. It provides greater holding power, and it can be removed with very little trouble.

The assets of this fastener get added value if the proper types and sizes are used in the proper manner. All of us are familiar with the flathead screw that has a straight-across slot, and the Phillips screw that has crossed slots in the head. The latter requires a Phillips screwdriver, the head of which fits neatly into the crossed slots.

There are many varieties of the flathead and Phillips screws. Each can be obtained with several different kinds of heads, the most common of which are oval and round. All types come in many lengths and diameters, known as gauges. It is well to know the length because you often want the screw to be driven into the second piece of wood as far as it will go without coming out the other side. The gauge or diameter determines the toughness of the fastener. A screw with a gauge of 8, for instance, is tougher or stronger than one with a gauge of 3 and weaker than one with a gauge of 12.

To get the best results, a pilot hole should be made in the wood to receive the screw.

This can be done with an awl in softwood or when using a small screw. The hole should be drilled when using a large screw in softwood and always when working with hardwood. When using a large screw in hardwood, professionals drill a clearance hole for the shank, the fat part under the head and a pilot hole for the threaded portion.

If the screwhead is to be driven slightly below the surface or even with it, a countersink bit will perform this operation and make the holes as well.

When starting a screw in a hole, place the tip of the screwdriver bit in the slot, then hold the blade with one hand while you turn it with the other. Two things can cause difficulties. One is not holding the screwdriver straight. The other is if the tip of the blade is too small or too large for the slot. In either case, you may wind up damaging the surface of the wood.

Besides being used when stronger holding power is needed or because they are easy to remove, screws sometimes are utilized for decorative purposes. Most hardware stores, lumber yards and home center establishments carry many different types of screws with special heads designed to look well on certain pieces of furniture. They cost more, but are well worth it if appearance is important.

Sometimes, when a dealer does not stock the kind of decorative screw you need, he can order it for you. This might be the case, for instance, if you are trying to match the screw heads on furniture you already own. In that event, you should bring one of the screws with you so the proper match can be made.

Inflation making times tough for cupid?

By INA BRADLEY
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

GREENWICH, Conn — Gone is the 5-cent cigar, the 10-word telegram, the Saratoga trunk, the Salvation Army tambourine — and soon to follow will be the Campbell's Soup kid, that chubby round-cheeked lad we have known and loved so long. The soup company is going to give him a new image, more modern, slimmed down, because they will be a sponsor of the U.S. National Figure Skating Team. (Fat boys and girls do not get to compete in sports.)

But that's not the worst of it. On its way out, also, is romantic love — or the romance of romancing, if I can put it that way. The art of courting, the ages-old boy-meeets-girl pastime as generations have known it, has been steadily deteriorating for some time.

A recent study has revealed distressful indications that the oldfashioned hearts-and-flowers-June-moon traditional version of romance is dying — of malnutrition. Before you can say "Love and romance," one more casualty of the malaise may be Dan Cupid himself.

And inflation is the villain.

Would-be suitors are complaining that the cost of dating (even the word "dating" is in a strugglee to keep a place in today's world and may well end up in the dark ages with "spooning") is becoming so prohibitive it is causing them to drag their feet.

Grumbled one interviewee, "Take a girl to dinner and a show and a nightcap afterward and you've shot two hundred bucks." Said another, apparently with his sights set somewhat lower, "A few years ago you could buy a girl a Valentine for 50 cents. Now it costs a dollar or more." (And 20 cents postage, fellow.)

On the other hand, there have always been the disgruntled among us fussing about one thing or another in matters of the heart and the strain on the pocketbook. In an article published in 1925 a disillusioned young man complained that "girls are gold diggers" and cited his own troubles in pursuing the girl of his dreams: it had cost him an average of $18 per week over a period of three years to woo her. Alas, in spite of his generosity he lost her to a rival. (Perhaps the rival spent $20 per week?)

Even the term "love affair" has lost its fundamental romantic essence as we now refer to such liaisons as "meaningful relationships," which clinical appellative, in itself, might very well be a contributing factor in the decline and fall of poetic illusions of love ("Such stuff as dreams are made on"). Some men have been known, I hear, to calculate by computer the cost of meeting the demands of 20th century love. As one said, "Get married? I figure I can hardly afford to date."

Rare-wine auction to expand Heublein California collection

By NATHAN CHROMAN
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Heublein's Premiere National Auction of Rare Wine, the "granddaddy" of American wine auctions, is celebrating its 15th year. It is expanding its California collection, previously limited to its own estates of Beaulieu and Inglenook vineyards. The auction is set for May 26 at the Beverly Wilshire hotel in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Fans of older California Chardonnay will be pleased to find Stony Hill 1967 and 1972 as part of a lot of 12 including Heitz 1969, Freemark Abbey 1974, Mayacamas 1974, Chateau Montelena 1974 and Inglenook 1975. Do not worry about the age of the Stony Hill Chardonnays because the wines improve with age. This will be a marvelous opportunity to taste older California Chardonnays at their best.

California reds will not be undone. Offered in various lots are such California Cabernet Sauvignons as Louis Martini 1962 (Special Selection), Mayacamas 1968 and Heitz 1968, 1966 and 1965. Zinfandels to be sold are Mirassou (First Harvest) 1966, Limited Mirassou Bottling of 1966, Fetzer (First Harvest) 1968, Mayacamas 1968 and Inglenook 1968. Mirassou bottlings were superb for the vintage, while Fetzer made a considerable splash with its initial "Zin" production in 1968.

Also of keen interest are the 1955 and 1960 Pinot Noirs of the heralded but controversial modern-day wine pioneer Martin Ray. Both are truly collector's items and give a remarkably accurate taste picture of Ray's dedication to Pinot Noir and California wine-making.

In earlier years, criticism was directed at Heublein for its reluctance to include more California wines in its auction. Critics claimed that the firm did not want any competition for its own vineyard estates. Heublein contended that there are many fine California wineries, but it preferred to sell genuine "showpiece" wines as in the current California collection.

Continuing the theme of showpiece rarities is the offering of Beaulieu, Private Reserve, Cabernet Sauvignon beginning with the first edition 1936, plus every single vintage up to and including 1978.

Consider for a moment the golden opportunity to collect such a wide range of Cabernets beginning in the '30s and moving on through the '70s. All of Beaulieu's vintage gems will be offered: 1940, 1941, 1947, 1948, 1951, 1958, 1968, 1970, 1974 and 1978. No other California winery can reach back as far with the possible exception of Heublein's other estate, Inglenook.

Older Inglenook Cabernets also worth considering are the 1897, 1933, 1941, 1943, 1946, 1955, 1965 and 1968. Cask bottlings are offered too: 1963 (C-3), 1969 (G-22), 1970 (Cask Reserve F-31) and 1974 (Cask Reserve).

Bordeaux lovers will have a field day at the auction. Lafite, always well represented, will begin with the vintage of 1806, which sold at the 1976 auction for $14,200 and again in 1979 for $28,000. Apparently the bottles offered are the last two in existence and probably will fetch an even larger tab. Other early Lafites are 1844, 1868, 1874 and 1893. Later vintages are 1904, 1905, 1918, 1919, 1929, 1945, 1947 and 1949.

A personal favorite, Chateau d'Yquem Sauternes, will be featured with 1924, 1928, 1939, 1953, 1955, 1959, 1961, 1966, 1970 and 1971.

Preoccupation with time rules many lives

By BRYAN WOOLLEY
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

The other day, a guy I know received a wristwatch as a gift. It's the first watch he has owned in his 34 years. He had never worn one before as a matter of principle. He refused to become the slave of a little machine strapped to his arm. A bare wrist made him feel freer than the people around him, always glancing nervously at their Seikos and Bulovas and Timexes and Rolexes.

This was a delusion, of course. He's a modern man, an urban man, an executive in a business governed by deadlines. He has meetings to go to, appointments to keep, planes to catch. Before he received his wristwatch, he glanced at wall clocks, phoned the time-and-temperature number, asked a watch-wearer to tell him what time it was.

He was no less ruled by timepieces than they. Yet, he feels diminished somehow by his new watch. The watch also has made him philosophical. "How fast life is!" he said. "We're always rushing through life — to do what?"

So many conversations these days are full of regretful references to time. "I don't have time to..." "I wish I could find the time to..." "When I get the time, I'll..." We amass libraries of books we don't have time to read, gather travel brochures for trips we don't have time to take, buy dogs we don't have time to train, skip meals we don't have time to eat, neglect spouses and kids that we don't have time to love.

SOME OF US don't even have time to think straight. Several months ago, I put my kids on a plane and stood at the gate, awaiting its departure. The luggage and all the passengers were aboard, but nothing happened. The plane just sat there. In 15 or 20 minutes, the passengers came trooping back up the ramp. The airplane door was broken and wouldn't latch. The passengers were told to wait in the terminal until the airline could bring up another plane.

While I was rejoicing that my children hadn't been taken away in a defective plane, a half dozen passengers swarmed around the flight attendant at the gate, complaining loudly and bitterly that they were going to be late to their destinations. "I don't give a damn about the door!" one of them shouted. "I want to get on that plane and get out of here!" He was willing to risk a hundred lives, including his own, to save an hour. For what?

When we pause to catch our breath, some of us long for the old days when, in our imagination at least, life moved more slowly and sensibly and there was time for everything.

"To every thing there is a season," said the Preacher in Ecclesiastes, "and a time to every purpose under the heaven: a time to be born and a time to die; a time to plant and a time to pluck up that which is planted; a time to kill and a time to heal; a time to break down and a time to build up; a time to weep and a time to laugh; a time to mourn and a time to dance..."

IT SOUNDS SO idyllic, so leisurely. But students of history know that until recently nearly all the world's people had to spend nearly all their time trying to find the means to survive another day. Most of the world's people still do. The time for planting and plucking up — or wishing they had something to plant and pluck up — is a lot more plentiful for them than the time for laughing and dancing. It's only in lands with lots of wristwatches that people have time to worry about time.

Most of the mechanical and electronic inventions during the past century have been intended to help us get our work done faster and with less strain on our muscles. The tractor plows the field faster than the mule. The telephone carries messages faster than the mails. The chain saw cuts faster than the ax. The jet plane moves travelers faster than the locomotive and the steamboat. The typewriter wrote faster than the pen, and the computer writes faster than the typewriter. The electric range and the microwave oven prepare meals faster than the old wood stove. So much human ingenuity has gone into freeing us from as much labor as possible, so that we might have time for more enjoyable, more rewarding pursuits.

We all know the classic images of leisure. Sitting before the fireplace on a cold winter night, your faithful Irish setter at your knee, reading some long, great book that you've intended to read for years. "War and Peace." Or "Moby Dick" or "The History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Or sitting at the chess board with some dear, calm friend, sipping brandy or coffee between unhurried moves. Or snoozing on the river bank while waiting for the fish to bite. Or sitting under an oak on a mountaintop and watching a hawk in the bright sky. Or just thinking. Ruminating. Wool-gathering. Letting the mind wander where it will.

BUT IT HASN'T worked out that way for most of us. As the machines have speeded up work, they've also increased the number of tasks that the people who use them must do. Instead of spending a day doing one task well, we spend it doing 20 tasks efficiently. And we've been robbed of some of the pleasure that labor — even hard, physical labor — used to provide the laborer.

When a furniture-maker spent a whole week or longer making a single chair very well — the grain of its wood, the snugness of its joints, the beauty of its design — and could take a personal pride in it when he made it well. But when a man spends 40 hours a week with a power saw, cutting hundreds of identical parts for hundreds of identical chairs that are assembled by somebody else, he doesn't give a damn about chairs, or about his work, either.

Plowing a field behind a mule was brutal work, but the plowman observed the land that he was trudging, knew it and loved it, and talked to his mule, a living being who listened. The tractor driver sees the land from on high and spends his days washed in the noise and poisonous fumes of his engine.

THE TRAVELER GETS from coast to coast in a few hours, but sees nothing, talks to no one, learns nothing, has no adventures along the way — unless he's on a plane with a broken door. The writer of former days would learn the personality of his typewriter and its eccentricities, sometimes grow to love it and spend his career with a single machine that he thought of as a partner in his enterprise. But every plastic computer terminal is like every other plastic computer terminal.

And our frantic, noisy work has made our pastimes frantic and noisy, too. The book has yielded to the TV set, with its hysterical din of situation comedies and cop shows and commercials. The chess board has yielded to the video game, with its frantic movements and rackets. We usually play them alone. Even our dance is to frantic, noisy music now, and the dancers almost never touch each other or whisper in each other's ears.

This lonely new way of life began somwhere else. It is only recently that it came to Texas and the South. A few years ago, a transaction at a sales counter or a bank window in Dallas normally took several minutes, for the clerk or the teller exchanged a few words with each customer. Drawled words about the weather, or how the day was going at work, or how the kids were getting along. Nothing important. Newcomers from other places considered it a phony kind of friendliness and a waste of time. It wasn't phony, but it was old-fashioned — a holdover from the days when our towns were small and all the clerks and our hours and days seemed longer. A thing that was done "in a New York minute," as we used to say, was done faster than was normal. To Texans, a New York minuted was unnaturally short and passed unnaturally quickly.

BUT WE'EW CATCHING up with our times. Our store clerks are becoming curt and impersonal. Our banks have installed electronic machines that do our business marvelously fast and without a word. A minute lasts no longer in Dallas than in New York now.

DEAR ABBY

Baby's place uncertain at couple's wedding

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am going to be maid of honor at the wedding of my best friend. (I'll call her Karen.) It will be held in a church and Karen is wearing a gown and veil. She's having bridesmaids and everything a bride dreams of. The wedding had to be postponed for 5 1/2 months because Karen's fiance, who's in the Navy, had his leave cancelled due to a mixup. Meanwhile Karen found out she was pregnant.

Well, to make a long story short, Karen's baby came early and will be seven weeks old at the time of the wedding. Karen wants to walk down the aisle with her baby cradled in her arms. My mother thinks it's a dumb idea and she's nagging me to talk Karen out of it. Some think it's a wonderful idea. It's never been done before as far as I know, and I don't think it's my place to take sides either way.

What do you think? — AND BABY MAKES THREE

DEAR AND: Since it's going to be a church wedding, I think Karen and her fiance should confer with the clergyman who will perform the ceremony and abide by his (or her) decision.

DEAR ABBY: Just this last December, I lost my best friend — my mother. Her death was really unexpected. Since it was the holiday season, I had already bought her Christmas presents and had them wrapped, ready to give to her. Among the gifts was your book, "The Best of Dear Abby."

After she died, I donated her gifts to the church, which I'm sure she would have wanted. I don't know why, but I kept your book for myself. I must say that reading it made the holidays without my mother a little easier to bear.

My mother would have loved it. Just wanted you to know. And thank you, Abby. — FAITHFUL READER

DEAR READER: My condolences on the loss of your beloved mother. Knowing that my book helped in some small way to comfort you in your time of grief warms my heart. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ABBY: The "Redhead" has been discussed in several of your columns. Permit me to remind you and some of your readers that it's the hair — not the head — that is red.

However, the most apt descriptive term may be "Red" — the commonly used nickname for the PERSON rather than just the part. — OLD ENGLISH MAJOR IN LONG BEACH.

DEAR MAJOR: A minor correction: My Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary defines "redhead" as "a person having red hair," so let us not split hairs of any color.

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Aching Heart," who wants to tell "Tammy" that she is her natural mother, is a situation familiar to me.

I was a happy, well-adjusted young lady in college when I received a birthday card from my "aunt" notifying me that she was really my natural mother! I knew I had been adopted, but I had never asked for, nor did I want, this information.

I was so shocked and upset that without the help of a dear friend, I would have been a mental case. I no longer hate my "aunt" for divulging this information, but I would be happy never to see her again. She did a very selfish thing to tell me.

I hope "Aching Heart" takes your advice and goes through a third party to find out first if her natural daughter WANTS to know her natural mother.

Please don't use my town or state, because I never told my mom. I consider the mom who raised me my "real" mom, and I wouldn't hurt her for the world. — ONE MOM AND I LOVE HER

Collectors exhibit spirit of capitalism

LONDON (AP) — The author might have frowned on such free-enterprise investment, but two collectors have paid a total of more than $12,100 for the last two known letters written by Karl Marx, the father of communism.

The first of the two letters was sold for $5,670 Wednesday by Christie's auction house to Tony Ryan, who owns a restaurant near Portsmouth on England's south coast.

The second letter was sold for $6,480 to an unidentified West German collector.

Both letters were written in January 1883, two months before Marx died in London, to Dr. James M. Williamson of Ventnor on the Isle of Wight. Williamson tended Marx when the philosopher visited the island off the English coast in hopes of recovering his failing health in the decade of his life.

Greek car ferry capsizes, sinks; Twenty-three feared drowned

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A Greek car ferry capsized and sank in high seas, and 23 people were feared drowned, authorities said.

The ship's third engineer, Antonis Kokkinis, said the ferry started listing after an explosion and then tipped over when heavy tanker trucks on board skidded free from their moorings.

A spokesman for Piraeus Port Authority said 10 truck drivers and four crew members were rescued by Russian, Greek and Romanian ships and two bodies were recovered after the 736-ton Chrysi Avgi sank off the Aegean island of Euboea.

Twenty-one of the 37 passengers and crew were feared drowned.

Gale force winds in the Aegean and icy temperatures, including flurries of snow would "make it almost impossible for anyone still in the water to hold out more than a few hours," the spokesman said.

German Social Democratic candidate makes U.S. missiles election issue

Hearst Feature Service

BONN — To wild applause and an oompah-pah band playing "When the Saints Go Marching In," tall, bespectled Hans-Jochen Vogel is introduced to the crowd. "I now give you the man who defends German interests in Washington even if the gentlemen in the White House don't like it."

There is more cheering in the Staathalle (city hall) of Bad Godesburg, a wealthy suburb of the West German capital, as Horst Ehmke, introducing the opposition Social Democratic candidate, adds: "We cannot say the same for the CDU or (Chancellor) Helmut Kohl who dances to Reagan's conservative tune."

Ehmke, deputy SPD leader, is astonished at the turnout because the soap opera "Dallas" is on television the same night. "It's not an election campaign," he boasts. "We call it a 'feltgottesdienst,' a revival meeting to bid farewell to the troops and say 'praise the Lord and pass the ammunition.'"

The enemy, of course, is not just Russia. It is the United States, or at least, American nuclear weapons. But the two superpowers for the first time are equated in the campaign rhetoric.

Above and behind Vogel are literally hundreds of posters depicting the steely, ex-mayor of Munich in a kind of Kennedyesque pose with open collar, shirtsleeves and his tie loosened. The posters carry the unabashedly nationalistic slogan: "Elect Hans-Jochen Vogel — In German Interests."

IF THAT SOUNDS openly anti-American and even reminiscent of the strongly nationalistic German sentiment of earlier decades, it's meant to. The difference is that the new wave of German nationalism today comes from the left, not the right.

"Peace is not self-evident," Vogel declares. "The further development of nuclear weapons will inevitably lead to the destruction of the world. We must demand progress in the Geneva talks so that (NATO) deployments on our territory will never take place." More cheers.

Vogel is playing to a new strain in German public opinion that he says is "tired of interference from abroad, tired of being told what to do by the big neighbor (America), tired of being told what's in our best interest. There is this feeling that it cannot go on like it has for the last 30 years."

And if Vogel is elected the next leader of West Germany on March 6, it won't. Make no mistake about it. "It would be absolutely disastrous," a U.S. embassy source here predicted because it would mean that Moscow would get the message that West Germany doesn't want America's nuclear umbrella anymore.

"The Soviets would have demonstrated by a combination of threats and promises that they can vitiate a clear policy of the alliance. I don't see how the alliance could ever be the same." Hanging in the balance, he said, is not only the NATO decision to deploy a new generation of U.S. nuclear weapons.

IF THE NATO plan to deploy cruise and Pershing II missiles begins to unravel, he added, the Soviet Union will have little incentive to negotiate an agreement to reduce or eliminate their own medium-range weapons at the Geneva talks.

That in turn would prove the Russians can divide the West against itself; undermine a four-year-old NATO decision and spur the advent of a new era of neutralism in Western Europe. Meanwhile the Kremlin would retain an outright monopoly in nuclear weapons which it can use to blackmail other nations. If this sounds somewhat hysterical, it is. But the hysteria is real. It is being voiced by people such as Manfred Worner, West Germany defense minister and a member of Kohl's ruling Christian Democratic cabinet, who charges Vogel already has adopted the vocabulary of neutralism.

"He was the first to speak of Soviet weapons directed against us and American weapons 'threatening' the Russians," Worner said in an interview. That, he added, cuts right to the heart of 30-year-old NATO strategy which is that U.S. weapons are weapons of deterrence that don't threaten anyone.

"We renounced the nuclear option," Worner explained. "The only power able to compensate for Soviet strength is America. The British and French (indepedent nuclear forces) are not available.

"SO NOW IF YOU get a written document (saying you'll never put more modern nuclear weapons in West Germany) by the only power that can deter the Russians; namely the United States, that means you are second-class not only with regard to the Soviet Union but compared to the other nuclear powers."

"You get a double split," the defense chief warned, "within the alliance and vis-a-vis the Soviet Union. Let me tell it to you straight. I have the same right of security as you do. Or do you think that because I'm only a middle class power, I lost the right of equal security?"

"Why the hell," Worner went on, "can't the West for once stick to an official position for a fixed period of time, demonstrate the necessary flexibility behind closed doors and really affect the other guy's position? Why can't we go along this line for once in our history?"

"Why is it necessary to create confusion in our own ranks, to put pressure on each other instead of on the one who is on the other side of the table? Why the hell are we not capable of this?" The answer, according to Vogel, is more complex.

FIRST OF ALL, he explained in an interview, his SPD party has not disavowed the 1979 NATO decision at all. Vogel says that it clearly was intended as a warning to the Russians that if they don't negotiate in good faith, the 108 Pershing IIs and 96 cruise missiles will be installed on German soil.

But Vogel contends that the Reagan administration has misunderstood the so-called double-track NATO decision. "I will not exclude that these weapons will be deployed but only under extreme circumstances" if the Russians are the ones dragging their heels.

Egyptians release Moslem extremists

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egyptian authorities have approved the release of 34 detained Moslem extremists, the Middle East News Agency reports.

The official news agency said the detainees had been held "in connection with investigations involving extremist religious organizations."

'Coup-makers' impetuous young men just out of school

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

In half a hundred capitals around the world, the "brass" are now the ruling class. Military governments, a tradition in Latin America, today predominate in black Africa and are commonplace in much of the Middle East and Asia.

More and more, the coup-makers — from sergeants to self-proclaimed "field marshals" — are impetuous young men barely out of military school. In Africa, 20 governments are led by soldiers whose average age was 36 when they grabbed power from their elders.

For millions of youths in the Third World, the army has become what the professions, business or elective politics have been in the industrialized West: the pathway to power.

"The major way to personal advancement in Third World countries is through government service, and the military is a very rapid avenue to government service," says political scientist Claude E. Welch Jr.

WELCH, OF the State University of New York at Buffalo, has closely studied military coups d'etat for almost 20 years. He says they occur in cycles, often tied to economic hard times, and he expects a new upsurge soon unless the world recession eases.

Since 1958, an estimated 190 military coups have been mounted in the less-developed nations, two-thirds of them successfully. Nine were reported last year.

An Associated Press survey shows that 38 governments worldwide are now formally headed by military men, and at least a dozen others came to power through the military or are under its effective control.

AP Laserphoto

Military governments, a tradition in Latin America, are commonplace in black Africa, the Middle East and Asia. Recent coups have produced these young military strongmen: from left, Lt. Jerry Rawlings, a 35-year-old air force pilot, who took power in Ghana 13 months ago for the second time; Samuel K. Doe, a 29-year-old master sergeant when he brought down Liberia's civilian political establishment in 1980; Mobuto Sese Seko, a 29-year-old paratroop colonel when he first seized power in 1960; Col. Desi Bouterse, 36, a sergeant-major when he overthrew the civilian government in Surinam three years ago; and Col. Moammar Khadafy, a 29-year-old captain when he seized power in Libya 13 years ago.

Recent coups have produced these young military strongmen:

— Capt. Thomas Sankara, 35, most powerful figure in a new military regime that took charge last Nov. 7 in the impoverished West African land of Upper Volta.

— LT. JERRY Rawlings, 35, the half-Scottish, half-Ghanaian air force pilot who tossed out a civilian president in Ghana 13 months ago, thereby seizing power for the second time in three years.

— Col. Desi Bouterse, 36, who as a sergeant-major led 300 non-commissioned officers three years ago in overthrowing the civilian government in the South American nation of Surinam.

— Samuel K. Doe, who was a 29-year-old master sergeant when he led an uprising of 17 enlisted men that brought down Liberia's civilian political establishment in 1980. He has since given himself the rank of general.

Others in the "young Turk" category include Zaire's President Mobutu Sese Seko, who was a 29-year-old paratroop colonel when he first seized power in 1960, and Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy, a 27-year-old captain when he mounted the coup that toppled Libya's monarchy 13 years ago.

The military's appeal in the Third World was evident from the early days of independence.

IN THE 1960S in Ghana, as many as 1,500 young men flocked to the Kumasi training center to apply for only 40 openings for enlisted recruits, University of Chicago sociologist Morris Janowitz has written.

"Many people join the military hoping to get a profession, hoping to leave it and go on to something else afterward," he said.

Welch noted that the military itself is a "growth" profession.

"Right now, a university graduate in most Third World countries cannot automatically step into a good job in other occupations," he said. "The military is an alternative. It is expanding in many places."

Janowitz says the Third World officer corps generally is recruited from rural families, often those of schoolteachers, other civil servants, or small landholders. This means they owe little allegiance to the urban elite and upper classes, and are more prone to intervene politically in defiance of the traditional powers.

BUT BOTH Welch and Janowitz also report a trend toward keeping the military a family affair, filling the officer ranks with the sons of soldiers. In effect, a military class is emerging in some countries.

Turks plan to make Mesopotamia lush again

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — By the next decade, the Turkish government hopes to bring the green back to the arid steppes of northern Mesopotamia where one of the world's earliest civilizations once flourished.

Some experts say the plan that calls for the harnessing of the historic Euphrates River through a series of dams and irrigation canals could result in Turkey producing $5 billion worth of surplus food in the region and serving as a breadbasket for the entire Middle East.

At the same time, it will mean more electricity for Turkey's power-starved industry.

The generally parched and impoverished area lies between the Euphrates and the equally historic Tigris River in northeast Turkey. Known as Mesopotamia, it was the flourishing home of the ancient Sumerians, Babylonians, Assyrians and Hittites.

THE PROJECT has already begun in bits and pieces.

In 1974, Turkey completed the Keban Dam on the northern reaches of the Euphrates and its 6.2 billion kilowatt hours of electricity have been a boon to Turkish industry.

But without the Southeast Anatolia Project, as the reclamation plan is called, Turkey can expect no further industrial growth without the construction of the Karakaya and Ataturk dams and several smaller ones south of the Keban on the Euphrates, officials say.

Sabahattin Sayin, director of state water works, maintains that the Southeast Anatolia Project could double Turkey's energy production and increase by five-fold the agricultural output of the region.

The project has existed on paper since the early 1960s but the government lacked funds and the political stability to go ahead with it.

CONSTRUCTION is already started on the Karakaya Dam, about 100 miles downstream from the Keban. Karakaya, a concrete arch gravity type dam expected to cost $1.9 billion, would generate 7.5 billion kilowatts of electricity annually when it goes into operation by 1988.

But the star of the project is the Ataturk Dam, named after the founder of the Turkish republic, Kemal Ataturk. It is to be the largest dam ever built in Turkey and the fourth largest rock-fill dam in the world. It will serve purposes of both power generation, at 8.1 billion kilowatts, and irrigation.

A Turkish company is already building the diversion tunnels, changing the course of the Euphrates to prepare for the construction of a 375-square-mile reservoir.

CONSTRUCTION has been under way since 1977 on irrigation tunnels which would draw water from the Ataturk Dam reservoir. The system would be the world's longest with a 16-mile tunnel and 175 miles of main canal. Also planned are 95 miles of secondary and 125 miles of tertiary distribution canals.

The canals would be ready by the time the Ataturk Dam is completed in 1992, officials say. The tunnels would irrigate 1.6 million acres of land in the Harran and Siverek Plains north of the Syrian border.

For the 4 million residents of the region this would mean an abrupt change from dry farming to irrigation farming, requiring different skills.

Experts predict a reverse migration, with people who left the land for greener pastures returning, as well as a flood of newcomers.

THE YIELD of such crops as cotton, rice, sugar beets and vegetable oil producing plants would be double.

A North Korean Air Force MiG-19 stands outside a hangar at an unnamed South Korean air base.

North Korean fighter pilot defects to South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A North Korean pilot flew his MiG-19 jet fighter into South Korea today and asked for political asylum, the Defense Ministry said.

Brig. Gen. Park Jong-sik, spokesman for the ministry, said the MiG was intercepted after it crossed the border between the two countries. An air raid siren was sounded as a precaution a few minutes later and South Korean fighter jets escorted it to an undisclosed air base.

The Defense Ministry later identified the pilot as Lee Wung-pyong, 29, a junior captain in the North Korean air force, but there was no comment on why he defected. The ministry said the MiG-19 was manufactured in China.

The incident came at a time when North Korea's military forces are on a partial alert because of an ongoing U.S.-South Korean military exercise called "Team Spirit '83." The North Korean government has denounced the maneuvers as an attempt to provoke conflict on the Korean peninsula.

South Korean officials said the jet fighter was the fifth North Korean military plane to land in the South since the end of the Korean War in 1953, and the first MiG-19 to be flown here by a North Korean. A Chinese pilot flew a MiG-19 from mainland China to South Korea last October.

Park said the North Korean plane was first sighted about 32 miles north of the demilitarized zone dividing the two Koreas.

One minute later, the plane was seen heading toward South Korea's Yonpyong Island off the west coast and at this point South Korean air force planes in patrol scrambled, Park said.

A U.S. military spokesman in Seoul declined to say if any U.S. planes helped intercept the jet. He and Park both said the incident was under investigation.

Lebanon peacekeeping force may grow

Security needed during withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon may have to be enlarged to provide "a degree of confidence" to Israelis, Syrians, and Palestine liberation fighters as they withdraw from the war-torn country, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says.

Weinberger, speaking at a news conference Thursday, said the three groups all fear they would be subject to attack during any pullout.

He said "there is no specific number and no specific time" for an expansion of the peacekeeping force, now totaling about 4,000 U.S., French, Italian, and British troops concentrated in the Beirut area. The U.S. contingent consists of about 1,200 Marines.

The focus of recent withdrawal discussions has focused on extending the multinational force's area of operations into the southern Lebanese region which the Israelis are concerned about securing to protect their settlements in northern Israel.

On another subject, Weinberger also said the United States believes it can assure Canada and Australia that the price of F-18 fighter planes they've ordered won't rise if the United States buys fewer of the planes than planned.

Canada has agreed to buy 137 F-18s for about $2.4 billion. Australia has ordered 75 for $2.5 billion.

Israeli general denies exchange

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli general today denied a Palestine Liberation Organization claim that Israel had offered to exchange 800 captured Palestinians for eight Israeli war prisoners.

The claim was made by PLO deputy military commander Khalil Wazir, also known as Abu Jihad, in an Austrian Television interview Thursday, but Israeli Maj. Gen. Nativ told Army Radio that it was "not true."

Nativ, who heads the army's manpower division, had said in an Israel Radio interview Thursday that "the PLO has asked for the return of its people, as well as hundreds of its members in prison in Israel. We are examining the demands of the PLO."

He said that the two sides had established contact with the help of Austria.

Palestinian forces are holding eight Israeli soldiers, and three other Israelis are held by Syria.

Nativ said Thursday that Israel's offer to exchange prisoners with Syria was "not accepted," and he claimed that Syria was not interested in the fate of its 293 soldiers being held in Israel.

The military command said Israel also is holding 5,199 Palestinians captured during the war which followed its June 6 invasion of Lebanon.

Israel has demanded the return of its soldiers and the bodies of its troops killed in the war as a precondition for withdrawing its troops from Lebanon.

Rescuers pull 12 victims from chalets

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rescuers dug out twelve survivors, including two women in labor, from an avalanche that buried a ski resort and chalets in the Cedars of Lebanon mountains, police said today.

It was not known whether the avalanche had buried any other people, police said.

But 10 frostbitten Syrian soldiers said Thursday that 135 of their comrades, who disappeared a week ago when the blizzard struck, had perished in snow 19 feet deep, police reported.

The missing soldiers were presumed dead, said police, after hearing accounts survivors told inhabitants of the village of Ainata, 50 miles north of Beirut. Lebanese army helicopters and civil defense rescuers found no trace of the missing Syrians after a week's search.

India's violent Assam state patroled

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Army units searched remote parts of Assam state today for bodies while other soldiers patrolled its cities in an effort to deter more of the grisly ethnic and political violence that has left about 1,300 dead.

Authorities say about 100,000 people are homeless because of arson, and as many as 30,000 of them line up at exit points today waiting to flee to safety in neighboring Indian states. About 10,000 or more refugees already have fled to the states of West Bengal, Arunachal Pradesh and Meghalaya, officials said.

Jyoti Basu, the Marxist chief minister of West Bengal, appealed to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's central government to stop the killings in Assam and the influx of Bengali-speaking people into his state.

Police said clashes continued in central Nowgong and northern Darrang districts, but gave no details.

Relief supplies were said to be slow in reaching some of Assam's worst hit areas such as the central Nellie district, where thousands of Hindu tribespeople massacred an estimated 600 to 1,000 Moslem immigrants the night of Feb. 18.

Authorities blamed transportation problems and manpower shortages for the slow-paced relief effort, news reports said. Anti-election violence, which broke out Feb. 2, included the burning of bridges and the disruption of transportation and communications.

Army troops continued to patrol the Khairabari region of Darrang where hundreds of Assamese burned down 29 villages on Thursday, leaving 15,000 immigrants homeless, officials said.

Assam is about is 350 miles northeast of Calcutta — one of a group of states almost completely separated from the rest of India by Bangladesh.

The exact death toll since Feb. 2 is not known. However, Home Minister P.C. Sethi reported Monday to Parliament that 1,127 people had been killed. Since then, official and news reports have added about 200 deaths to the toll.

Some estimates have put the toll much higher.

The trouble began as native Assamese tried to block elections called by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to pick a new state assembly and fill 12 vacancies in Parliament.

For three years, the Assamese have pressured Mrs. Gandhi to evict hundreds of thousands of immigrants, mostly Bengali-speaking Moslems from Bangladesh, who they say are overwhelming them culturally and economically.

Assamese attacks against the immigrants escalated in an attempt to intimidate them and prevent them from voting.

Some of the immigrants retaliated, and Assamese tribespeople also got sucked into the swirling violence as the agitation became, in some cases, open warfare.

West German 'Greens' favor forests, oppose nuclear arms

By KENNETH JAUTZ
Associated Press Writer

NUREMBERG, West Germany — They are against nuclear missiles and for preserving forests. Some call them naive and dangerous. Others say they are the hope of the future.

They are the Greens, a loose-knit group of political mavericks who, for the first time since they organized as a party in 1979, have a shot at making it into West Germany's Parliament in elections March 6.

To get any parliamentary seats under this country's proportional representation system, the Greens party must collect at least 5 percent of the votes nationwide. If they do, they could be the swing vote in a new government coalition.

Political professionals are somewhat baffled by the Greens.

"I've read numerous Greens statements and talked to many of their leaders, but I still don't know what they stand for," said Egon Bahr, a prominent member of the out-of-power Social Democrat Party.

The Greens' published program calls for policies that are "democratic and violence-free" and urges creation of a society "that will do away with the suppression of man by man, and the use of violence by man against man."

"We are experimenting with our ideas," Manon Maren-Grisebach, a member of the party's ruling triumvirate, told The Associated Press in an interview here.

"We may be a risk for voters, but it is a smaller risk than the one presented by the destructive policies of established parties," she said.

Miss Maren-Grisebach was in Nuremberg, where Nazi war criminals were tried, for a Greens-sponsored mock trial of the United States and Soviet Union for "threatening mankind with nuclear weapons."

The Greens demand that West Germany rid itself of all U.S. nuclear arms.

"We believe in unilateral steps," said Petra Kelly, 35, a prominent Greens leader running for a Parliament seat from Nuremberg. "As different peoples we have to become loyal to each other, not to military complexes."

The Greens condemn the U.S.-backed NATO plan to put 108 Pershing 2 and 96 cruise missiles in West Germany by year's end unless the Soviet Union agrees to scrap its own medium-range missiles aimed at Western Europe.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservative Christian Democrats support the NATO plan. The Social Democrats, the left-of-center opposition led by chancellor candidate Hans-Jochen Vogel, say the U.S. and Soviet governments should make new proposals at their Geneva arms talks so the missiles won't be put in place.

Leaders of the two major political parties worry that the Greens' inflexibility could paralyze the Bonn government, if the mavericks win places in the Bundestag, or parliament. The heads of the two main parties have said they will not enter a coalition with the Greens.

But if neither major party wins a majority in the upcoming election, and the Greens gain a share of Bundestag seats, the Social Democrats might be drawn into a deal with the environmentalist-peace group.

Greens' organizers have urged supporters to demonstrate at local U.S. Army munition dumps.

Britain's centrist alliance gains parliamentary seat

LONDON (AP) — Britain's new centrist alliance today easily captured a longtime Labor Party stronghold in a special parliamentary election and claimed to have replaced Labor as the country's most viable opposition party.

The victory by a candidate of the 16-month-old Social Democratic-Liberal Party coalition came in Bermondsey, a London working-class district represented in the House of Commons by the Labor Party for 60 years.

The outcome increased speculation that the strife-torn Laborites will oust leader Michael Foot, 69, before the next general election, expected in the fall.

Liberal Party member Simon Hughes' 2-1 victory over left-wing Labor candidate Peter Tatchell was the first triumph over Labor by the alliance, which has taken two districts from the Conservatives.

"It's not a victory, it's a rout!" said delighted Liberal leader David Steel, claiming the alliance had replaced Labor as the best alternative to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's ruling Conservatives.

"This is the end of the Labor Party as a party of government," said SDP leader Roy Jenkins, a former deputy Labor leader. "The government offers no hope and the Labor Party offers no sense. The alliance offers both."

Hughes, 31, a lawyer, overcame one of Labor's largest registration edges in the country to defeat Tatchell, also 31, by a vote of 17,017 to 7,698.

Conservative and independent candidates trailed far behind, with the Conservative, Robert Hughes, receiving only 5 percent of the vote in the rundown dockland district.

Foot blamed the Bermondsey loss on a smear campaign against Tatchell, a gay rights campaigner who emigrated from Australia 12 years ago to avoid the draft. Anonymous pamphlets had depicted Tatchell as a homosexual and a "traitor."

"Bermondsey is a setback for the Labor Party. No one can deny that," said Foot, who has failed to quell the party's infighting in two years as leader.

But he insisted he would not resign and would lead Labor into the next election.

Newspapers again today predicted Foot's departure. The Times of London, quoting "key parliamentary sources," said most of Labor's 239 members in the 635-seat Commons believed he would be replaced by deputy leader Denis Healey within a month.

Labor spokesman Gerald Kaufman countered: "Mr. Foot has our loyalty as long as he chooses to continue as leader."

The Conservatives, with 334 seats, have a 35-seat overall majority in the Commons. The Bermondsey vote boosted the centrist alliance's total to 43 seats, including 13 Liberals, while regional parties hold other seats.

Yugoslavian students put words in Marx's mouth

By NESHA STARCEVIC
Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Karl Marx, what would you say if you came back to life 100 years after you died and visited Yugoslavia, a country whose unorthodox, independent brand of communism is a lot different than the one you espoused?

"Down with the Red Bourgeoisie!" "Down with bureaucracy!" "Workers of the world, forgive me!" Yugoslav youths replied.

The youths scribbled their comments on posters plastered at universities and libraries in this capital city to help mark the 100th anniversary of the death of Marx, whose writings are the foundation of modern socialism and communism.

The Communist-led Belgrade Youth group put up the posters, which had lots of blank space for people to write in what they thought Marx would have said if he took a stroll down the road to socialism that non-aligned Yugoslavia followed.

One respondent used the posters to take a jab at the country's chronic food shortages, predicting that Marx would ask: "Anyone got any coupons for coffee?"

Another poked fun at Yugoslavia's efforts to stem capital flight by requiring all citizens to leave an $80 deposit before traveling outside the country.

"Dear Jenny," the poster said in an imaginary letter from Marx to his wife: "I would like to come to you, but I cannot afford to pay the deposit."

This Balkan Peninsula country toed the orthodox Communist line until 1948, when its refusal to follow Soviet directives led to its expulsion from the Communist bloc and an economic blockade by the Soviet Union and its East European allies.

For a communist nation, Yugoslavia is relatively open to outsiders. Its coastal resorts and ski centers lure European, and, increasingly, American tourists.

This week's issue of Ilustrovana Politika, a popular weekly here, analyzed some of the responses to the youth group's poster poll.

Shultz feels Third World aid needed

ATLANTA (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says increased U.S. financial aid to Third World countries is essential to America's own economic recovery and to offset Soviet military expansionism around the world.

Shultz strongly advocated increasing U.S. economic and military aid to individual Third World countries, such as Turkey and the Caribbean nations, in a luncheon address Thursday before the Southern Center for International Studies in Atlanta.

Shultz also advocated increasing U.S. pledges to the International Monetary Fund by $8.4 billion, which the Reagan administration asked Congress to approve last week. Reagan has also requested $14 billion for foreign economic aid and $9 billion for military aid.

Panama blasts U.S. ambassador

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panama's Foreign Ministry has accused U.S. Ambassador Everett Ellis Briggs of improper diplomatic conduct, reinforcing an earlier allegation by the national guard commander that Briggs may be a spy.

A brief ministry statement issued Thursday said Briggs' activities could affect Panama's national security.

250 names off South Korea blacklist

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan today removed 250 people from a blacklist that barred them from participating in political activities, but several prominent political figures remained under the ban.

The list, issued in November 1980, affected 567 people, 12 of whom have since died.

The ban has been cited by critics of Chun as evidence that the government was hindering the democratization of South Korea.

'Nuclear relationship' acknowledged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has acknowledged that China and Pakistan, allies on the rim of Soviet power in Asia, have reached a "nuclear relationship."

At the same time, Howard B. Schaffer, deputy assistant secretary of state for South Asia and the Middle East, confirmed that India is separating and collecting plutonium from the radioactive material produced at its Tarapur nuclear power facility. India is making no secret of the operation in reports to the International Atomic Energy Agency, he added.

Hundreds arrested in Saudi coup

LONDON (AP) — Saudi Arabian security forces in recent weeks have arrested hundreds of persons suspected of trying to organize an Iranian-backed coup against King Fahd, the Daily Telegraph reported today.

The respected London newspaper, quoting diplomatic sources in the Saudi capital of Riyadh, also said Saudi security men are searching for a group of Iranians who have infiltrated the country to carry out sabotage.

It said the immediate target of the Iranian infiltrators was believed to be a convoy of Chinese-built T69 tanks due to be sent through Saudi Arabia to Iraq.

THE East Loop Mobile Home Park has been notified by the Texas Department of Health that the water being supplied by our system exceeds the maximum constituted level for flouride established by the Departments (drinking water standards) which were promulgated as required by the Safe Drinking Water Act, public law 93-523 U.S.
The limit for this area has been set at 1.6 miligrams of flouride per liter of water. The samples of water from our system contain 4.8 miligrams of flouride per liter. There is no immediate health hazard for drinking water containing flouride at this level.
The excessive flouride content of the water may cause mottling in the teeth of children under 14 years of age.
All dentists in the area are aware of the flouride level.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated to a rate of 9 7/8% for a 9.5% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 12% for the first year of the loan. After the first year interest will be charged at the average Treasury Bill rate plus 2.5%. Payments on this mortgage are the next 4 years. After the first 5 years of the loan, the actual balance of the loan will be amortized over the remaining 25 years of the term left at the payment corresponding to rate of 2½% more than the annual average of T-Bills adjusted annually.
