

Energy Officials Abandon Reactors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a sharp retreat from past emphasis on the atom, federal energy officials today formally abandoned the nuclear breeder reactor as a major power source for this century and raised solar power research to unprecedented prominence.

Delivering a 25-year research blueprint to Congress and President Ford, officials hastened to note that the basic energy costs in the United States are likely to double by the year 2000 no matter what technology is developed for the future.

And Ford also cautioned that energy sufficiency is still a long way off.

The research plan prepared by the Energy Research and Development Administration asked for a $714 million reduction in funding next year for the controversial breeder.

Dr. Robert C. Seamans Jr., head of ERDA, said the funding reduction was requested because the breeder program is being slowed down to allow a management reorganization and a new assessment of environmental impact.

In part, he said, more information is needed about potential medical effect of plutonium — the deadly fuel the breeder uses and produces.

Seamans noted ERDA also was asking for a $63 million increase in its original $1.7 billion budget for fiscal year 1976, with the additional money going to expanded research in solar energy, coal, improved oil production, conservation and advanced energy system.

The new blueprint said the breeder, once targeted for commercial use no later than 1987, now probably will not become a major commercial energy producer until the early 21st century — if ever.

It stressed instead the need for an expanded range of research, including more vigorous efforts to produce synthetic natural gas and crude oil from coal and oil shale by 1985 and to increase emphasis on sunlight as a source of electricity by 2000.

Even the most optimistic of six scenarios presented in the plan showed the United States continuing to import oil until 1995, a decade beyond the goal set by Ford. But officials said that did not necessarily discredit Project Independence because actual import levels would depend on future domestic oil and gas discoveries and possible changes in U.S. lifestyles.

The potential of solar electric power production has been virtually ignored in the past. But the plan said it should rank equally with the breeder and nuclear fusion as one of three unproven but potentially "inexhaustible" sources of energy in the 21st century.

At least one of those three long-range processes appears necessary to guarantee the nation enough energy in the future, the report said, but it is impossible to predict now which can be developed for economic commercial application.

It called for five major changes in U.S. energy research policy:

—New emphasis on technical solutions to reliability and environmental problems that now inhibit greater use of presently available energy sources, primarily coal and water-cooled nuclear reactors.

—An immediate focus on conservation efforts, with initial emphasis on the automobile, building insulation and industrial processing.

—Accelerated work leading to commercial production between 1985 and 2000 of synthetic gas and oil from shale and coal.

—Inclusion for the first time of solar electric power — produced by windmills, solar cells and differences in ocean water temperatures — as a high priority possibility for the year 2000 and beyond.

—Increased attention to presently underused technologies that can be developed rapidly, such as solar heating and cooling of buildings and the use of geothermal power.

Court Rules Defendant May Act as Own Lawyer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, winding up its 1974-75 term, ruled 6 to 3 today that a criminal defendant has a constitutional right to act as his own lawyer.

The Court also indicated in a unanimous opinion that local ordinances barring topless dancing in public places probably are unconstitutional.

Ag Department Tells Buyers To Hold Off

PERRYTON, Tex. (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has allegedly advised foreign nations to delay purchase of American produce for several months, according to Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla.

The Oklahoma Wheat Producers Association tried to arrange a wheat sale in the Philippines but was told by officials there the Agriculture Department advised a delay.

English said the Philippine officials were told the price might go down if they waited.

The congressman said at a soil conservation tour banquet this weekend there have been other similar reports and asked members of the wheat producers group to investigate.

In a 20-minute session, the justices finished up their work for the term and will go their various ways until the new term opens Oct. 6.

The decision on a defendant's right to serve as his own counsel came in the case of Anthony Pasquall Faretta, convicted of grand theft by a jury in Los Angeles County Superior Court.

The judge first decided to let Faretta represent himself, but later changed his mind and appointed the public defender as defense attorney.

Justice Potter Stewart, writing for the Court majority, said: "The question is whether a state may constitutionally hail a person into its criminal courts and there force a lawyer upon him, even when he insists that he wants to conduct his own defense."

"It is one thing to hold that every defendant, rich or poor, has the right to assistance of counsel, and quite another to say that a state may compel a defendant to accept a lawyer he does not want."

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger dissented, along with Justices Harry A. Blackmun and William H. Rehnquist.

In the topless case, the Court did not rule on the merits of a law in North Hempstead, N.Y., banning topless dancing. It held instead that two tavern owners were not barred from seeking to have the law declared unconstitutional in the federal courts so long as state criminal charges were not pending against them.

The unanimous decision merely sustained a preliminary injunction which prevents the town from enforcing the topless ordinance until the lower courts decide whether to strike down the law permanently.

Justice William H. Rehnquist said for the Court that a district court was correct in finding that the North Hempstead law banning topless females from "all public places" probably is unconstitutional.

The Court also:

—Held unanimously that the U.S. Border Patrol may not conduct warrantless auto searches in Texas and California to block entry of illegal immigrants.

—Agreed to decide whether at-large elections in small, predominantly black voting areas are constitutional even though the areas have a history of racial segregation.

—Agreed to rule whether evidence seized during an arrest under a law later ruled unconstitutional can be introduced in a murder trial.

—Agreed to rule on the constitutionality of a New York state law which presumes a welfare applicant quit his job solely to obtain welfare benefits.

Predicts Prices Will Keep Rising

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Congressional Budget Office predicted today that recent declines in the rate of inflation will soon end, with prices resuming their upward swing.

In a projection of the economy's course over the next 18 months, the CBO said it was "moderately less optimistic" than the White House, which has been hailing the end of the recession and a 50 per cent cut in the inflation rate.

It also predicted an unemployment rate of 7.8 to 8.2 per cent by the end of the year — down from the present rate but above the White House predictions.

CBO is a new agency, created to advise Congress on how much spending to permit to keep the economy on an even keel. Its report was the first it has issued.

The rate of inflation had fallen to an annual level of 5 per cent in May — down from an average of 12 per cent in 1974.

But developments on the energy front threaten to refuel inflation, the CBO report said.

It cited the oil excise taxes imposed by President Ford, the widely anticipated price increases this fall by foreign oil nations and the possibility that Congress will accept Ford's proposal that domestic oil prices be freed from controls.

As a consequence, CBO predicted an inflation rate of 6.3 to 8.7 per cent for 1976 — far higher than May's rate or the average annual rate of 3.4 per cent during the era from 1946 through 1974.

Unemployment will also be worse than the White House predicts, though better than May's 9.2 per cent rate, the CBO said.

Rebuilding in Lefors

Jay Franks, owner of Jay's Texaco and Western Auto in Lefors, is rebuilding his station-store that was destroyed in the tornado that struck the town on March 27. He said that much rebuilding is going on in Lefors. "Loans getting through and bad weather held us up some for awhile, but things are going good now," he said. "They are starting to put lights back on the ball park and they started work on the new Civic Center two weeks ago." Franks said that he has had the pumps going and has been fixing flats and servicing company trucks outside since the storm. "The tornado hit on Thursday and we were pumping gas Sunday after they got our electric power restored," he said.

Texas House Drastically Reduces Its Employees

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The leadership of the Texas House has ordered a drastic reduction in the number of employees kept on the payroll while the legislature is not in session in an effort to reduce interim expenditures.

Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, chairman of the House Administration Committee, said he left the decisions about who would be dismissed up to heads of various House departments.

"I told all the department heads to cut down to where they could do what they had to do in the interim efficiently, and then we'd take a look at it," Laney said. "They've been pretty good at it so far."

Biggest cuts have been on the staff of the sergeant-at-arms. Dozens of assistant sergeants were hired during the legislative sessions to run errands for lawmakers, operate photostatic copying machines, and maintain order at committee hearings and House sessions.

Sergeant-at-arms Rusty Kelley said he has dismissed 79 employees from his staff and now has only 17 persons filling fulltime jobs.

"There are some areas I cut way back on," Kelley said. "We moved a lot of Xerox machines out of here and got rid of the operators. I've terminated a lot of porters, and some people in media services (the agency which handles publicity for representatives)."

Kelley estimates a payroll reduction of $33,496 a month based on average monthly salaries of $424.

"That may be a little conservative because some of them got a raise around the middle of the session, but I'd say it's a fair estimate," he said.

Figures were not yet available from other departments, where layoffs were substantially smaller, in some cases only two or three persons per department.

Kelley said his office has problems after each session with young employees who want to remain on the payroll after the legislature adjourns.

"This year we put it in the agreement that they were automatically terminated on the last day of the session, and there hasn't been any problem," he said.

Laney said other employees have been dismissed from the House's text printing and distribution staffs and other departments.

"We managed to find new jobs for most of the people we wanted to keep around until next session," Laney said. "The legislative Council hired some of them, and some found jobs in other places so we won't lose them after spending so much money to train them."

Kelley said he may reduce his staff even further after the House finishes consideration of a resolution for the impeachment of Duval County District Judge O.P. Carrillo.

Chief Warns Of Fines For Fireworks

A number of Pampa citizens have reported that they have received calls in regard to a $150 coupon book for $19.95.

Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills said the campaign is sponsored by some Pampa merchants, and the offer is legitimate.

Other reports on the Pampa Police Department blotter this morning included obscene calls, family disturbances, a cat bite, a possible overdose of drugs and vandalism.

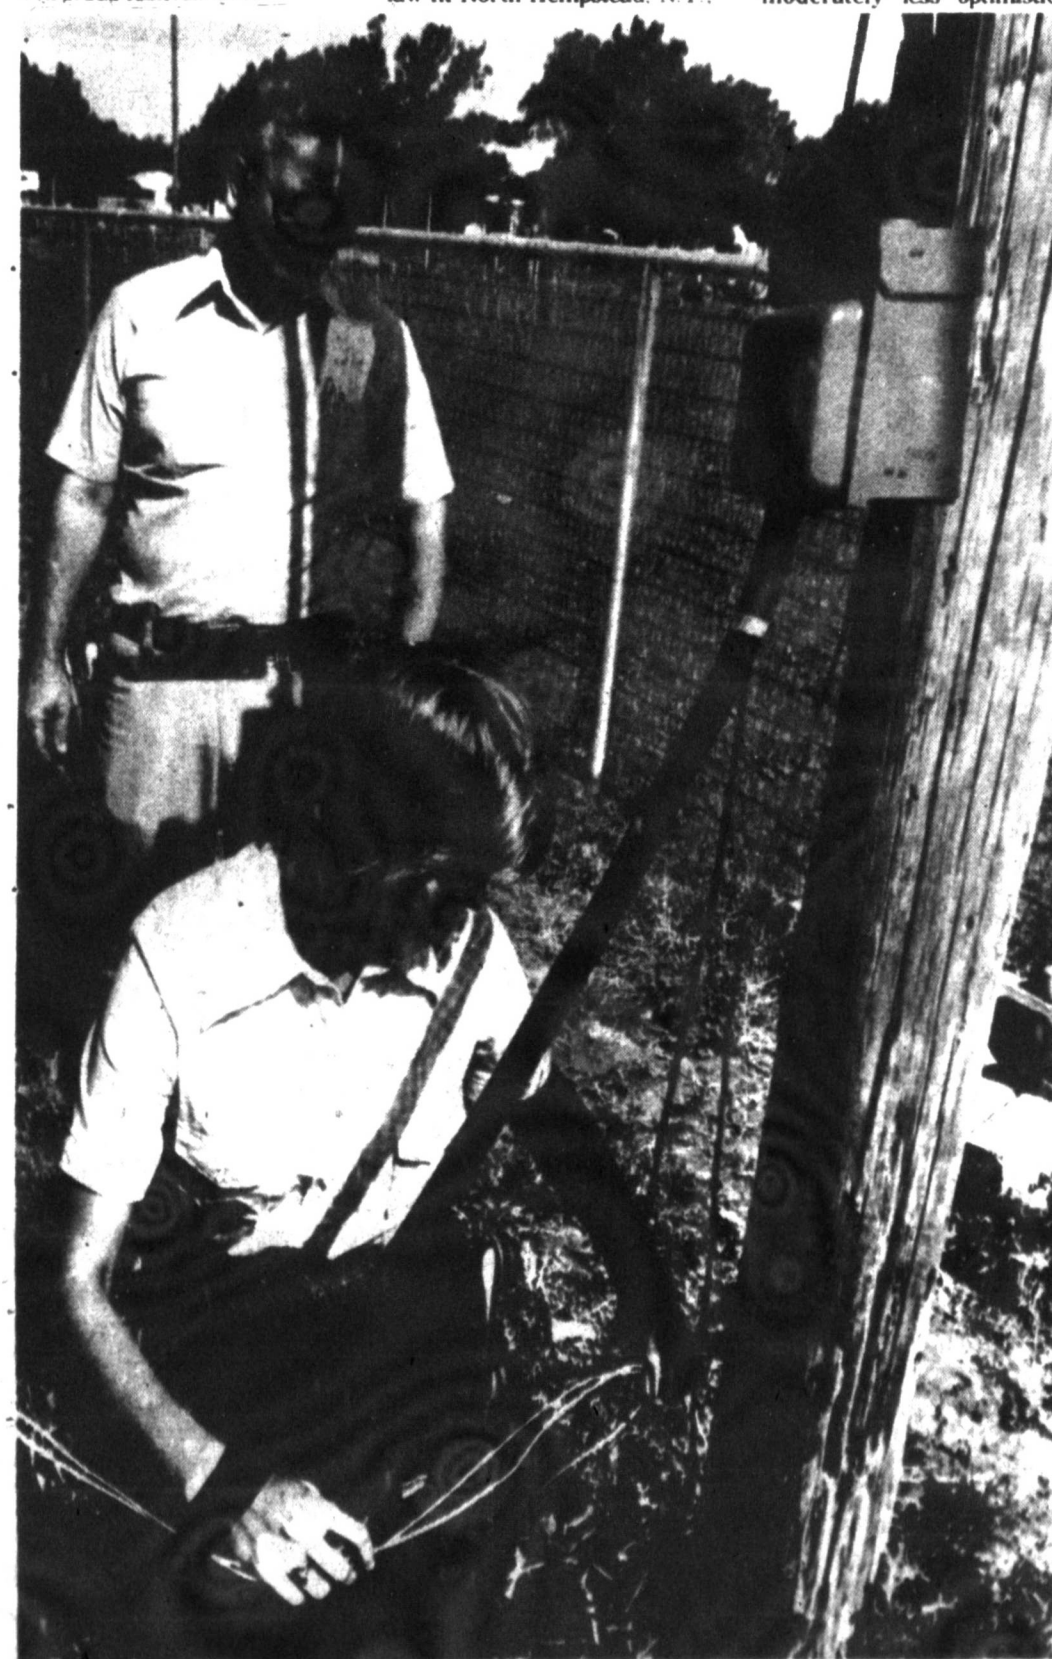

The chief also asked residents to keep fireworks from children since use is prohibited within the city limits. The penalty ranges up to a $200 fine.

Telephone installation, a booming business in Pampa, keeps Clifford Martindale, station installer, busy. He demonstrates techniques to Cathryn Slaton, Pampa's first woman installer. She now is training and will attend a four-week session in San Antonio beginning July 21.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company is expected to set new records this year for recent years in the number of telephones installed in Pampa.

Figures showing an increase over the past 40 years were released this morning by John Clements, district manager for the Panhandle area. Gary Stevens, manager of the Pampa office, is on vacation.

During the first five months of 1975, 148 phones were installed here as compared with the same number during 12 months of 1974.

"This is an indication of city growth," said Clements.

Several residents are having to wait a few days for installation of telephones due to lack of facilities in certain areas, he added.

One may have to wait 60 days in the country where there are no lines, while in the city the service is usually provided much sooner, officials said.

Clements traced the growth of this city in the telephone industry from 1,689 in 1934 to 17,031 today.

The 1974 total was 16,783 as compared with 16,535 telephones in 1973.

The rapid growth of Pampa is reflected in 1956 and 1957 totals which soared from 10,183 to 11,059.

"Since that time, the growth shows an additional 500 or 600 phones each year," Clements said.

"The area is 'really booming telephone wise,'" he commented.

Virginia Green, plant foreman for the Pampa telephone company office, said the work in special equipment and installation has doubled since Jan. 1.

"It is difficult to meet the work load," she added.

Southwestern Bell had 3,690 phones in Pampa at the end of 1944. Ten years later the number climbed to a record high of 8,547 and in 1964, there were 13,637 phones here.

Ms. Green said the forthcoming work load includes a new PBX switchboard for Packerland Packing Co. of Texas Inc. and new installations as a result of the remodeling of the Hughes Building, recently purchased by Cabot.

Clements said directory assistance operators were moved to Amarillo in 1974, but 41 persons are employed as long distance operators and supervisors in Pampa.

"We did not cut back on the number of employees in Pampa when the directory assistance service was moved to Amarillo," he said.

In regard to the three-member commission to be appointed soon by Gov. Dolph Briscoe which will regulate telephone rates, Clements said Bell officials are accustomed to working with commissions in other states.

"We anticipate no problems," he added.

Destruction Bent

Were the Administration in Washington, D.C. and both houses of Congress made up of foreign agents deliberately trying to wreck the economy of this country, they could not be more effective in that respect than the present incumbents just doing what comes naturally to bureaucrats and politicians: taxing, inflating, spending, meddling, and regulating; constantly amassing ever more power.

And nowhere does this destructive tendency show up more sharply than in the field of energy. Instead of drastically reducing crippling taxes, giving us an honest currency, peeling away the layers of stifling regulations, and letting the energy industry, which knows how, begin to solve the energy crisis, the government levies higher taxes, pours more fiat money into the economy, and burdens the energy producers with further regulations and threats of nationalization.

This excerpt from the June, 1975, Standard Oil Company (Indiana) report to its shareholders speaks volumes: "Prior to these developments we had announced plans for a further increase in our capital and exploration spending in 1975 — to a level of approximately $2.1 billion — with the largest single portion to be devoted to efforts to find and develop oil and natural gas within the United States. However, in light of the sharp increase in our tax burden, we are now forced to review these plans to determine whether some programs will have to be reduced, deferred, or eliminated to make up for the increased tax liability. This review is now under way."

The "developments" the report had reference to were the recently withdrawn depletion allowance tax credits, the withdrawal of which amounts to a huge tax increase to the oil companies concerned, and government voiced threats to either nationalize the oil industry or break up the major oil companies, coupled with further threats to roll back domestic crude oil prices and extend federal controls over natural gas prices to intrastate as well as interstate supplies.

With actions and threats like those, is it any wonder that the energy picture gets progressively worse.

As the Standard report to its shareholders went on to point out:

"Even in the best of times, measures to choke off capital funds needed for expansion in a vital domestic industry and force U.S. consumers to turn instead to high-priced imports would be clearly unwise. To do so in the midst of a recession, when we need more jobs and economic growth at home, displays a complete disregard for economic realities."

Aid to Vietnam?

The Vietnam War was fought over conflicting ideologies. One claimed that Saigon — Washington politics could rule the South Vietnamese better. The other said Hanoi politics could rule them better. The latter won control, but it has not yet proven its case.

Two years ago, in the Paris Accords, Hanoi agreed to release American prisoners of war and search for Americans missing in action. It complied to a large extent with regard to the POWs. It has done almost nothing with regard to the MIAs. A few days ago Hanoi demanded that the United States provide postwar financial aid to rebuild South and North Vietnam. Either that, said the Communists, or they stop the search for the MIAs. That is of course called blackmail, but unfortunately there are American politicians as eager to fudge definitions as they are eager to appease even postwar Hanoi.

Consider the implicit concession — a concession Hanoi will never admit — carried in the demand. The Communists have said, in effect, they do not expect to rule South Vietnam without Washington's aid. In other words, Hanoi did not exactly win the ideological conflict. But then ideological conflicts are never won anyway. What was won is power.

Beware Power-Seeker

The benevolent ruler is more to be feared than the murdering tyrant.

Why? Because, as history teaches over and over again, the power delegated to the benevolent ruler in the belief that he will use it wisely or not at all will be used with devastating effect — if not by the "benevolent ruler," himself, then by the tyrant who later disposes him.

Power sought and gained is power that will ultimately be used.

A "good man" (or woman), with power over your life or other property, is a contradiction in terms.

WHAT'S UP, DOC?

Secret Bilderberger Meetings

By William Rusher

In or about 1956, when I was working for the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee in Washington, a curious report reached us concerning a secret meeting that had just been held on a posh resort island off the coast of Georgia. What was most intriguing was the fact that, although dozens of high-ranking participants (including major government officials) from the United States and various West European nations had attended, strenuous efforts were apparently made to conceal the fact that the meeting was being held at all, and not a single reference to it appeared in our theoretically untrammeled press.

Slowly over the next few years, however, the basic facts dribbled out. The Georgia conclave was merely the 1957 get-together of a group that had been meeting annually since 1954 under sponsorship of Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, consort Queen Juliana and a familiar figure of amiably liberal inclinations on the fringes of international politics and finance. Since the first gathering had taken place at the Hotel de Bilderberg in Oosterbeek in the Netherlands, the group was generally referred to (when it had to be mentioned at all) as "the Bilderberg society."

In the ensuing years Prince Bernhard's little hobby became a plush sort of permanent floating crap game, meeting on an average of once a year in exclusive resort hotels and similar hideaways all over the Atlantic and Mediterranean worlds — most recently (in April this year) at the Golden Dolphin Hotel in Cesme, Turkey, about 40 miles west of Izmir.

The names of those attending are grudgingly published nowadays (and continue to be of impressively high caliber — government ministers, top bankers, major journalists, superstars like Henry Kissinger, David Rockefeller, Baron Edmond de Rothschild, etc.), but press coverage of the three-day sessions themselves is still forbidden and no public report on what has taken place is issued. Our journalistic bloodhounds have cooperated by being relentlessly incurious — probably because so many of their own pals and employers attend and observe the rule of silence.

Despite the secrecy, enough has trickled out of these sessions over two decades to establish that at least there are no orgies going on, and that the meetings consist primarily of solemn, not to say tedious discussions of the usual political and financial topics. No doubt the rigorous confidentiality encourages the attending potentates to speak more freely than they would to (say) an Elks convention, and one also suspects that Prince Bernhard shrewdly uses the gimmick to lure participants of high rank and then baits his hook with them to attract others.

Still, it is time to ask whether all this hush-hush stuff isn't becoming a bit counterproductive. Just for one thing, it feeds the paranoia of the nut right, which has been convinced for fifteen years that the world's destiny is being privately and arbitrarily determined, for private profit or even Communist purposes, at Prince Bernhard's annual tea parties. As the "Financial Times" of London remarked recently, "What cannot be denied is that, if Bilderberg is not a conspiracy, it is conducted in such a way as to give remarkably good imitation of one." To which one might conjoin the advice of the Apostle Paul: Not only avoid evil, but "Avoid all appearance of evil." The right of privacy is an important one, to be sure, but the Bilderbergers are public figures discussing public topics. If they have that "decent respect to the opinions of mankind" affirmed by our Declaration of Independence, they will let a little more air blow through their sessions.

In a recent column, I allowed my irritation at the idea of a National Economic Planning Office to boil over and result in a gratuitous personal crack at one of its sponsors, my good friend Betty Furness. This act of rudeness has been gnawing away at my vitals ever since, and I have concluded that the only proper way to make amends is by a forthright public apology, which I herewith extend to Betty. We may (and do) disagree profoundly about many things, but she is a gracious and lovely lady, whose friendship I have prized and hope always to deserve.

MAYBE A COVER-UP?

National Drug Scandal Looms

By C. MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Still secret reports by Senate committee investigators on widespread and systematic bribery of federal drug enforcement officials may awaken the public to the enormity of the national drug enforcement scandal.

Those secret reports coupled with a belated Justice Department investigation also may jar Attorney General Edward Levi on the importance of giving full cooperation to Senator Henry Jackson's Permanent Investigating Subcommittee in its pursuit of the causes of the rot that has permeated the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA).

When the full story of bribery and corruption is told it will demonstrate why there has been such a studied effort to obstruct justice by ignoring or deliberately hiding evidence that some of the highest officials in the super drug enforcement agency were corrupt or compromised.

Even without details of the payoffs to DEA border agents, the documented public record is shocking in a two-year-old drug enforcement agency that was supposed to bring new power and coordination to the nation's war against drug traffic.

In 1973, then President Nixon used his authority to reorganize the executive branch to create the DEA within the Justice Department in an effort to stop the disputes between the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs (BNDD) and the Customs Service which shared responsibilities and authority at the U.S. borders and in foreign activities.

Drug law enforcement at the borders had reached a highly effective point in 1971 and 1972 in the hands of the Customs Service. But the Nixon plan went into operation despite skepticism in Congress and some opposition from the Customs Service, which lost 500 agents to the new DEA.

Critics contend that the creation of DEA was largely public relations gimmick by Nixon, who was under heavy political fire in the early stages of the Watergate investigations.

Whatever the motivation, the DEA drug war has been a bust, and indications are that a questionable group from BNDD, known by Senate investigators as "the Purple Mob," assumed control of most of the key positions in the new agency.

The first administrator of the DEA was John Bartels Jr., a young lawyer with an excellent record as head of a Justice Department organized crime strike force in New Jersey, but he was careless or corrupted by his authority and position.

The Jackson subcommittee already has heard evidence that Bartels issued orders to limit an investigation of his good friend, Vincent Promuto, the former Washington Redskins lineman who was serving as a public relations man in DEA's Washington office.

Washington metropolitan police had reported to DEA's inspection division that the former professional football player was associating with gamblers, ex-convicts, prostitutes and drug law violators.

One of the alleged drug law violators was Diane Devito (alias Diane Barger or Diane Lyon), who has taken the Fifth Amendment before the Jackson subcommittee in an executive session. The questions dealt with her recent arrest and her relations with what subcommittee investigators called a "Class I violator" — an importer-wholesaler of hard drugs.

The Promuto report was filed last August and about a month later, when the Promuto investigation was just getting underway, police reported that Bartels was associating with the same woman in San Francisco.

A number of DEA inspection investigators — including acting Chief Inspector George Brosan and former Deputy Administrator Andrew C. Tartaglino — have testified on the details of the limitations on the Promuto and Bartels investigations that they said amounted to a "cover-up."

Chairman Jackson said the evidence might constitute criminal obstruction of justice by Bartels, who was forced to resign by Attorney General Levi only a few days before the Jackson subcommittee hearings started.

Although the significance of the full complaint against Bartels and Promuto is not public since the report was "sealed" by Chairman Jackson, the indications are that whatever problems of compromise or corruption they have it is of minor moment.

More crippling to the political image of the Ford administration is the fact that there is evidence that former deputy Attorney General Laurence Silberman — the number two man in the Justice Department — misused the FBI in a superficial and limited investigation of the charges against Bartels.

Silberman, now U.S. Ambassador to Yugoslavia, did not turn the investigation over to the FBI as is normally done, but had two FBI agents, Edward Hegarty and William D. Williams, assigned to his office for a sharply limited eight-day probe. As a result of that investigation, Silberman made a public statement last January clearing Bartels and characterizing the limited effort as a thorough FBI investigation lasting several months.

It was a clear example of a political whitewash investigation that used the good name of the FBI. To the credit of Attorney General Levi, he established a new investigation panel to investigate Bartels and forced his resignation.

However, since forcing Bartels' resignation, Attorney General Levi has tried to limit the Jackson subcommittee's probe in refusing them documents and in barring testimony from the FBI agents as to what they reported to Silberman.

In the face of testimony that there are unresolved investigations of corruption involving at least 25 DEA officials, it is difficult for investigators to see why at this date Levi is not giving full cooperation.

Six of those unresolved charges of corruption and mismanagement are regarded most seriously by Jackson and his investigators, because they involve members of "the Purple Mob" who remain in key posts at DEA in spite of the hearings showing the deterioration of border control of illicit drugs and a sharp increase in the availability of hard drugs under DEA.

The attorney general's defenders say he has his own internal investigation underway and does not want to jeopardize that probe by premature actions against key DEA personnel or premature disclosures of evidence.

In the wake of Watergate, the Attorney General shouldn't have to be reminded of the thin line between proper restraint and the appearance of a cover-up.

Eligible Widower Uses Sister as Watchdog

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 59-year-old widow. My husband died four years ago. I am very much attracted to a 62-year-old bachelor who attends my church. He dated women up until his mother's death (two years ago), but so far as I know, the only person he ever goes out with now is his widowed sister. They don't live together, but they might as well because they are inseparable.

I know he likes me because he gives me gifts on my birthday and Christmas, and he even sent me a valentine. When he goes on vacation (with his sister), he sends me postcards.

I've invited him to my home for dinner, but he always asks if he can bring his sister. (What can I say?) When he invites me out, his sister is always along.

What do you make of this? Don't tell me to forget him. I can't, and I have tried.

LA JOLLA LADY

DEAR LADY: Some men have bodyguards for protection; others have large dogs. Your friend has a sister. He doesn't want you to get any closer to him than you are, and he's making sure that you don't.

You'll never land him — unless you outlive his sister.

DEAR ABBY: I was born Jewish, but three years ago I converted to the Baptist religion. Last week my cousin, a devout young Jewish woman, died a slow, agonizing death. Everyone remembered her as a person who had never said an unkind word about anyone.

I discussed her death with my minister, hoping to get some consolation and assurance that she was now in heaven. He said, "She is not in heaven because she didn't believe in Jesus Christ."

Abby, is this true? I was speechless.

PHILADELPHIA

DEAR PHIL: I'll leave it to other Baptist ministers to evaluate the fundamentalist comment by their brother quoted above.

DEAR ABBY: John (not his real name) and I have been going steady for two years. We're both 17.

One day, I was afraid I might be pregnant. I was scared to death and felt I couldn't tell my mother because she'd have been shattered.

By chance, John heard about a program at Planned Parenthood. I hated to go because I thought there would be a lot of little old ladies who would lecture and condemn me, but I went anyway.

I was wrong. Everyone was very kind and understanding. I was examined by a woman doctor and given a pregnancy test. Everything was kept strictly confidential. They had a counseling session for teens. I panicked when I saw a girl I knew there, but John, who was with me all the time, pointed out that we all had the same problem.

The counseling was far better than what I had had in my high school health class. (Not only was the information I had learned in school outdated, much of it was just plain wrong.) Planned Parenthood helps with birth control, if desired. They also will arrange an abortion if you want it. Nobody tries to talk you into anything.

Please let girls know that Planned Parenthood practically saved my life. And all I had to do was call them up (they are listed in the telephone book) and ask for an appointment. GRATEFUL IN NEW JERSEY

Mystic Believed Dead Of Excessive Meditation

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Yoga instructor Robert Antoszyk had told friends he was deliberately going to try to project his soul from his body. He was found dead in his room — on his back, his thumbs between his index and middle fingers.

Antoszyk, 29, apparently died in a position a yogi uses only in deep meditation.

Just why he died has authorities baffled. A pathologist says Antoszyk, in a self-induced trance, somehow may have managed to slow his heart to the point where his brain received too little blood — in essence, death from excessive meditation.

A spokesman for the Integral Yoga Institute says he may indeed have projected his soul from his body — "astral projection" — but that because of his inexperience in the ancient Hindu practice he did not know how to get back.

The answers just seemed to raise more questions.

It was early this month that Antoszyk, whose mother said he was in "perfect health," told friends he wanted to be left alone, to try astral projection — in which the soul supposedly journeys from the body through the "astral plane."

His lifeless body was found June 3.

"His death is a mystery to me," Antoszyk's mother, Lillian, said. "It's a mystery to the undertaker, to the doctor, everybody."

Dr. Paul Gikas, a University of Michigan pathology professor attempting to explain the death, suggested it was possible Antoszyk went into such a deep, trance-like state he slowed down his heart beat to the point where his brain no longer received enough blood.

The pathologist said it would be a medical first if the Yoga instructor, who taught at a local YMCA, did die from excessive meditation.

But Dhamapali M., a spokesman for the Integral Yoga Institute, said Sunday Antoszyk's death could be explained by his inexperience in Yoga — only two years.

"He must have been very inexperienced in astral projection," Dhamapali M. said of Antoszyk, a vegetarian, who did not smoke, drink or use drugs, according to his mother.

"If you can go, you can come back," Dhamapali M. said. "He obviously did not know how to come back."

Astral projection has been spoken of for centuries by Hindus. It is regarded as having "no practical purpose," or simply as a "magic trick" with no spiritual benefit.

The participant's soul or consciousness is attached to the material world with a symbolic mechanism called a "silver cord," yoga experts say. The soul also must be aware of the location of the body in order to return. If it is not, the body dies.

Another yoga expert said she knew of no cases where a person died in attempting astral projection. She added that few yogis were capable of teaching it, let alone of trying the form.

Unknown Man Dies; Crash Called Worst in Plane History

NEW YORK (UPI) — He was about 20 years old with dark brown hair, but no one even knew his name. He died in a coma Sunday, pushing the death toll in last week's Eastern Airlines crash to 112 — now the worst single-plane disaster in U.S. history.

"John Doe," the only unidentified survivor of Tuesday's Flight 66 from New Orleans, was the last hope for relatives and friends that their loved one might have survived the crash.

He died at 6 p.m. Sunday in Jamaica Hospital from respiratory failure.

The death toll exceeds the previous high of 111 recorded in the 1971 crash of an Alaska Airlines Boeing 727 into a mountainside near Juneau, Alaska.

A spokesman at Jamaica Hospital said tentative identification of the latest victim was made shortly after his death by a man from Canada, who said a scar on the dead man's foot was similar to one born by his first cousin.

"He couldn't tell by looking at the man's face because it was all black," the spokesman said.

The death left 2 crash survivors, all hospitalized — eight of them in critical condition. The 11th victim, 7-year-old Tina Deispenza of Baton Rouge, La., died Saturday.

Federal authorities today planned to listen to tapes of the last minutes of the jetliner's descent in an effort to determine why the plane slammed to the ground yards short of Kennedy Airport during a late afternoon thunderstorm.

Members of the National Transportation Safety Board also planned to make public the tapes of conversations between the tower and pilot of the Boeing 727 and other pilots landing before it.

Included in the transmissions was a conversation with the pilot of a Flying Tiger DC8 cargo plane who reported severe turbulence on the same runway shortly before the crash and suggested the runway be closed.

Also included is a dialogue with an Eastern pilot who diverted his Tri-Star jet to Newark Airport because of bad weather.

Deadline Nears For Pageant

Tuesday is the deadline for entries in the Top O' Texas Beauty Pageant set for Friday, Aug. 8, in the M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium.

Officials of the Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the event, said 31 contestants had been entered to date. Limit for entries in the pageant was set at 35.

54 May Die on Holiday

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Department of Public Safety predicts 54 persons will die on Texas' highways during the three-day Fourth of July holiday period.

DPS Director Wilson E. Speir said Sunday travel will be heaviest around recreational areas, lakes and beaches.

The death estimate covers a 78-hour period beginning at 6 p.m. Thursday and ending at midnight Sunday. Last year during a 102-hour Independence Day holiday period, 46 persons died in traffic accidents in Texas.

Speir said the death estimate is higher this year because highway traffic deaths have increased 25 per cent this year over last year.

"This is due to increased travel and somewhat higher speeds," he said.

Speir said DPS and local law enforcement agencies will be cooperating in an effort to make streets and highways as safe as possible. All available DPS troopers will be on duty and will be especially watchful for drinking drivers, speeders and wreckless drivers.

Reagan Claims US Quit in Vietnam

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — The United States should increase its military spending so that the next time the country goes to war it can win a victory as quickly as possible, according to former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Reagan said during the weekend the Congress should appropriate more money for B1 bombers and Trident submarines to instill confidence in allies which have "lost faith in our ability or desire to save them from the despotism of uncrushing communism."

"Our friends and adversaries must be convinced that American treaties and other commitments are not only binding but are backed by hardware and hard nosed determination," Reagan said Saturday.

"Never again will we ask our young men to fight and die for their country unless our goal is victory. And we will dedicate our full resources of this nation and our people to winning that victory as quickly as possible."

Reagan said Vietnam was America's blackest hour because it backed out of a commitment.

"It (the United States) gave up, walked out for the first time in our history, not on a war alone, but on an ally, on a commitment and on the cause of freedom. It is the shame of our nation, more than any other single event in our history."

Reagan also said the United States should not bow to Panama's wishes for control of the Panama Canal and should not tolerate Ecuador's seizure of American fishing boats within that nation's 200 mile territorial limit.

"There are those who say a great nation such as the United States must show great restraint when little nations tweak our nose and kick our shins," he said. "I suspect these are the same people who raised their children by Dr. Spock and would have us treat the unruly child nations of the world in similarly irresponsible fashion."

COMPUTER RECYCLING
COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — Recycling of cards and papers from computer operations has brought $26,500 back to the budget of the University of Missouri.

Too much Vitamin D can cause calcification of the soft tissues, resulting in kidney damage. Nutrition specialists say healthy children and adults can get needed Vitamin D from sunlight, fortified milk and egg yolks.

STAR OUTLOOK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Newbold Noyes, former editor and now board member of the financially troubled Washington Star, has denied a report the families that used to run the newspaper are trying to close it down.

Noyes described as "grossly false and unfair" a New York Times story Saturday saying the three families — including his — that operated the Star for more than 100 years were trying to force it out of business.

The Star, which subscribes to the New York Times news service, printed the story in its Saturday editions. Noyes' reply was in Sunday's letters to the editor section.

The Washington Post, in its own story, said Star reporters believed the Star would not have printed the Times report unless it were essentially true.

Thursday Is Vote Deadline

Only four days remain to cast absentee ballots in Pampa's July bond issue election.

City voters will decide on a $300,000 bond issue to help pay the city's share of constructing the proposed $1.4 million sewage treatment plant.

A total of ten absentee ballots had been cast at mid-forenoon at the city secretary's office in City Hall.

Chittenden said the deadline has been set for 5 p.m. Thursday because City Hall will be closed Friday for the July 4 holiday.

MANDATORY TERMS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A survey sponsored by the American Bar Association has found prison administrators generally oppose mandatory prison sentences for those proposed by President Ford to deter crime.

Seventy-two per cent of corrections chiefs interviewed in all 50 states oppose sentencing offenders to mandatory terms without chance of parole, according to Corrections Magazine, which is backed by the American Bar Association. The poll was taken before Ford's crime program was unveiled two weeks ago.

FORD vs. REAGAN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Ripon Society survey shows President Ford would defeat Ronald Reagan by almost two to one if the GOP national convention were held today.

The liberal Republican group said Ford has gained widespread acceptance in the party, but that Vice President Nelson Rockefeller is highly vulnerable to a conservative challenge.

The survey of Republican leaders across the country indicated that even if Reagan were given all the undecided delegates, he still would lose the nomination to Ford by a margin of 1,429 to 811.

PRICE INCREASE

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Aluminum Co. of America has announced price raises by an average of 2.3 per cent on about 60 per cent of its aluminum products, effective July 7.

The announcement this weekend of the increase by Alcoa raises the possibility of higher prices for automobiles, housing and other consumer products.

AGENTS KILLED

PARIS (UPI) — Two counter-espionage agents were shot to death and a chief inspector was wounded in a raid on a suspect foreign terrorist group in Paris' Latin Quarter.

A French interior ministry spokesman said one terrorist was shot in the gunfight late Friday, in an attempt to dismantle a foreign terrorist organization.

PRINCESS MARRIES

BAARN, The Netherlands (UPI) — Princess Christina of the Netherlands married American Jorge Guillermo in private weekend services at Queen Juliana's palace. The queen and her husband, Prince Bernhard, were in attendance at what was described as primarily a family affair.

QUEEN TO VISIT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth will visit the United States next year to join in bicentennial celebrations.

The White House said this weekend President Ford invited the Queen and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, to visit the country from July 7-11, 1976, and that the invitation has been accepted.

It will be the monarch's first visit to the United States since 1957.

HOLIDAY TOLL

CHICAGO (UPI) — The National Safety Council says more Americans will die during the Fourth of July in traffic accidents than were killed in the first three months of the Revolutionary War.

The council said this weekend between 480 to 500 persons may be killed in traffic accidents during the three-day period.

State GOP Elects Head

Rep. Ray Hutchison of Dallas was elected state chairman of the Republican Party in Texas at a meeting of the G.O.P. Sunday, according to Joe Curtis, Pampa, district committeeman. Hutchison succeeds Jack Warren of Dallas who resigned for business reasons. Warren had served as state chairman for two years.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Citizens of mainland China who are not covered by health plans pay only $4 for an appendectomy, according to an article in The National Enquirer.

The Peking government pays for all the health care needed by its employees, the military, students and factory hands. Farmers receive free medical care by contributing 50 cents a year for maintenance of their medical facilities.

Astronauts, Cosmonauts Practice Joint Flight

HOUSTON (UPI) — American astronauts and Russian cosmonauts, working in teams, are practicing their joint space flight.

Two American crews and four Russian crews are taking part in the 72-hour simulation which began Sunday. The Americans used a mockup space capsule at the Johnson Space Center near Houston and the Russians conducted their exercises in Star City, near Moscow.

Sunday's simulation was a rehearsal of what they two crews will do July 17 when they join their two capsules in space.

Brig. Gen. Thomas Stafford, Donald K. Slayton and Vance Brand, the prime Apollo crewmembers, began their simulation at 6:30 a.m. Sunday's Soviet simulation team consisted of the backup crew of Maj. Yuri Romanenko and flight engineer Alexander Ivanchev.

The crews remain inside their respective spacecrafts during the day and spend the nights in their quarters. The Americans are using two three man crews for the simulations and the Russians are alternating four two man crews.

The astronauts are scheduled to fly to Cape Canaveral later this week to simulate a liftoff in the real Apollo capsule. That simulation is scheduled to take place Thursday.

Glynn Lunney, the American technical director for the joint mission, announced Sunday he has been assured by Russian space officials the current flight of a Soviet space station will not interfere with the July 15 joint Apollo-Soyuz mission. Lunney said Russian technicians told him the flight controllers assigned the space station flight are not the ones who will be working next month's mission.

Lunney said professor K.D. Bushuyev said Soviet Union has not decided whether to keep the space station manned during the joint flight. Lunney said Bushuyev told him if the space station is still flying, it will be monitored by different flight controllers.

Cosmonaut Alexei Leonov, who will command the Soyuz space ship that will link with the Apollo for 44 hours, said last week the Soviet Union planned to keep both projects going at the same time and that he planned to talk to the Salyut crew from space.

Should both missions be going on simultaneously, that will put seven men in space at one time, three more than ever before.

Bushuyev and Lunney discussed the upcoming venture during Sunday's simulated exercises.

Judge Cain To PRPC Meet

Dear Folks:

This is one day that I want to give thanks to all menfolk who write to us. Especially one widower named John.

And he wrote to us about olives and the scum (or "mother") that gathers on top after opening a bottle. (He never said where "father" went!)

John told me that if I set the bottle of olives aside at room temperature and removed the top, that the scum would leave after a few days. Sounds kinda nuts, doesn't it? (So did the nylon net when a woman wrote years ago.)

Anyhow, I bought a jar of salad olives — they are less than half price because they are broken pieces etc. — and sure enough, after a few weeks in the refrigerator, "mother" visited 'em, and that scum made them look bad.

I removed the top (but I left them in the refrigerator) and a week later, so help me Hanna, if all that scum wasn't gone!

I know you are not going to believe this. I didn't either. But John is right, folks.

So when you can't find "father," and "mother" comes to visit your olives, just take the top off the bottle and she will leave too.

Wasn't it great of John to pass along this hint?

So welcome all you men to this column. If you have more short cuts, just write 'em in to Heloise in care of this column. We gals all love you!

LETTER OF LOVE

Dear Heloise:

Probably most of your letters start off with a "thank you" and this is no exception.

In so many ways, ideas in your column have helped me in simplifying my work, plus giving me a chuckle from time to time.

Thank you for making housework easier so that I have more time to spend on other aspects of creating a loving home.

My husband tells me never to call myself a "housewife." He says, "You are a homemaker. Creating a loving home is one of the most difficult jobs in the world."

Isn't it nice to be appreciated?

Marcella N. Jones

You're a luv, Marcella, for writing. Give hubby a big hug from all of us gals for realizing that supervising a household is a 24-hour job.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

The most recurring type of play in bridge is the finesse. When finessing positions arise, the experienced declarer has no problem about how to take the finesse (or how to avoid it). But the inexperienced declarer goes wrong in many standard - type situations.

In today's deal, there is featured a recurring type of finesse that is often mishandled by the inexperienced player. The deal arose in a rubber - bridge game with a novice being at the helm.

East - West vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♦	Pass
1 ♦	Pass	4 ♦	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♥.

South's opening bid was marginal, and the final contract of four spades was not a good one. However, as the cards were distributed, ten tricks were there for the taking.

Dummy's nine of hearts was played on the opening lead, and East's jack won the trick. A low heart to West's king was led next, after which a third heart was played, South ruffing.

Dummy was then entered via the diamond king in order to take the trump finesse. The queen of spades was led. East covered with the king, and South won the trick with his ace. The loss of a trump trick to West's ten was now inevitable, as was the loss of a trick to West's ace of clubs.

Having lost the first two heart tricks, the only chance declarer had of fulfilling his contract rested in avoiding the loss of a trump trick. There was just one possible distribution whereby this could be accomplished: East had to have been dealt, specifically, the doubleton K-x of trumps.

After entering dummy via the diamond king, declarer should not have let dummy's queen of spades in taking the trump finesse. This could never be the winning play, for whenever East possessed the trump king he would cover the queen, and the defenders would automatically make a trump trick with either the seven, eight, nine, or ten.

A low trump should have been led off the board instead, declarer taking the finesse by inserting the jack. Next would come the trump ace, felling East's king. A low trump to dummy's queen would then pick up West's last trump. West's ace of clubs would now be driven out, and declarer's only losers would be two hearts and one club.

Supermarket Shopping

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new study of supermarket shopping habits contradicts old stereotypes about black customers.

For one thing, all black consumers are not pretty much the same. Their attitudes and range of life styles, including shopping habits, are just as diverse as their white counterparts, says Robert F. Dietrich in the June issue of "Progressive Grocer." Dietrich is research director for the trade magazine.

He said age, income, education and geography often make blacks resemble neighboring whites far more than other blacks with dissimilar backgrounds.

Dietrich describes the black shopper as increasingly mobile, and willing to go out of her way for a good selection of merchandise, fair prices and friendly service. In New Orleans, for example, one supermarket popular with blacks is 10 miles from downtown.

Those who are impressed by a chain market in the suburbs often pass along word of it to inner-city friends, Dietrich said.

They also demand quality merchandise and show above-average loyalty to national brands.

J. Bruce Lewellyn, black president of a 14-store chain here, told the magazine that shoppers are insulted by the division of a store into ethnic sections.

"If we're selling meat we must have things that appeal to all," he said. "The same with varieties of olives or beans. That way our customers may find something that they didn't even know they wanted."

Lewellyn said the black consumer's brand loyalty is built on experience. "Every time a black shopper switches from national brands she gets burned," he said. "She prefers to go top shelf, not second best."

However, Dietrich sees a trend toward brand-switching among more sophisticated, higher income blacks.

The Black Consumer Index, published by a market research firm, found that shoppers are receptive to new products if they are presented in a way that makes sense to them, that is believable in terms of helping them live better, save time or gain status.

The index also showed blacks are especially impressed with proof advertising. Dietrich speculated that this attitude reflects their above-average belief that many products are rip-offs.

David said black mothers are particularly discerning about prices and purchasing because their families, and consequently their grocery bills, are larger.

The separates look takes a new turn for fall and winter. The idea now is to mix textures and patterns, as well as to combine parts of costumes into the whole.

Skirt shapes for fall have slimmed down, but the soft look continues. There still are plenty of dirndls, wraps and half circles.

The jumper is a classic that goes into the new season. Pair it with a bulky turtleneck top and you're the essence of chic.

The newest suit look is the long tunic worn over pants and a shirt. The quilted jacket is the new pantsuit partner.

Layered Look Revised In Men's Fall Fashions

United Press International
The newest item in fall sportswear is called the Big Look, a direction influenced by European designers. It is akin to a revised version of the layered Look of some years back, and the emphasis is on comfortable-but-top-heavy bulk.

Some of its components are an A-line outer coat which flares out wide at the bottom, the belted smock shirt, the loose pullover shirt, the blouse, the ultra long scarf, the deep V-neck sweater, cardigan sweaters with Mandarin or bell sleeves, loose-fitting pants and some special items like cape coats, caftans, etc.

That is some of the trends reported for fall by the National Association of Men's Sportswear Buyers, an organization formed to guide buyers from the hundreds of stores throughout the United States as they try to buy items that will sell six months hence.

Some of the NAMS findings: Prices — Prices in most lines are about the same as last year, and changes are more on the down side rather than the up.

Europe — The so-called European look was brought to the United States by such designers as Pierre Cardin and Yves St. Laurent and was taken over to such an extent by American manufacturers it is now referred to as the "Contemporary" look — an extremely slim cut, wearable only by very slim young men.

Belts — The luxury lines are moving to a one and a quarter inch belt, and European pants suppliers are making only that size belt loop. There is a move toward jewelry looks in buckles, with some cashing in on Bicentennial buckles enameled with historic scenes.

Footwear — There is a move away from the funky and back toward a classical, dressed-up, subdued look. Heels are lower, and there are more suedes, and there is a return to the modified wingtip and square toe. New idea: matching belt and shoes in calf.

Headwear — Caps are becoming more popular, especially in a full cut called an eightquarter model. The popular tennis hat is being produced for fall in the Big Look fabrics — Loden, melton, tweed, etc. The floppy look popular in summer straws also shows up in fall lines.

Jeans, pants and slacks — The European or slim, straight French cut shows up in more and more lines of dress slacks. In blue jeans there are big bells up to 26 inches. New is a military look that combines fatigues-type pants with a fitted safari top in khaki.

Jumpsuits — There are two completely different versions. The volume jumpsuit is still the comfort item in a roomy polyester-cotton blend. The new young men's jumpsuit is usually in denim or corduroy, in washed and faded looks, and form-fitting.

Leather and suede — Fall leather lines show a trend toward smooth skins, related to the mood of elegance. The No. 1 look is the shirt look in slim young men's models. Short jackets are important, including the short fitted jacket.

Neckwear — Neckwear has borrowed heavily from sports shirt makers, and there are a lot of the scenic and conversational prints that show up on shirts.

Outerwear — The newest thing is the A-line from Europe in a short length with a big inverted back pleat. This is in trench coats, storm coats, raglans, dressy coats, belted wraps.

Rainwear — The gabardine raincoat is back in fall lines, and the A-line is being adapted to rainwear, often in rubberized cotton.

Dress shirts — The most important trend is a swing back to fancies, and a shirt that can be worn as a dress shirt or a sports shirt is another important fall entry. The very snug European fitted dress shirt shows up in all lines.

Dusty shades of slate blue, tan, rose and green are new for fall.

Bugner Fights Ali

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — The severe heat conditions under which they will be fighting was much on the minds of World Heavyweight Champion Muhammad Ali and challenger Joe Bugner as the two fighters went into the final hours before their 15-round title match here tonight.

"The heat is going to tell tomorrow," said Ali's longtime ring doctor, Ferdie Pacheco. "This is going to be a survival of the fittest with stamina under the heat being a vital factor."

Bugner's trainer-manager, Andy Smith, agreed. "I doubt if there ever has been a major title fight ever held under more intolerable heat conditions than we are likely to encounter," Smith said.

Both Ali and Bugner said they were prepared for the heat, expected to be over 100 degrees in the ring, and the humidity, which will cause them to lose a pound or more a round each.

"I'm African and I have fought under severe heat conditions in Africa," Ali said. "It won't bother me. Europeans can't stand heat. I'll get to Bugner."

The 25-year-old Hungarian-born Briton, who holds the European-heavyweight crown, went through a special training program set up by the Royal Air Force in Great Britain before he came here to wind up his training for his second match with Ali.

"That was more severe than I have found it here," Bugner said. "So I'm well acclimated to conditions here. I can stand it. I can go the distance at whatever pace Ali wants."

In addition to the heat and the other normal pre-fight pressures, the 33-year-old Ali also was under other pressures connected with his announced intention to retire after the Bugner fight.

He said he was being plagued by people pressing him to continue fighting, at least for a third fight with Joe Frazier in Manila, which could earn Ali $10 million or more.

Frazier arrived for the fight Sunday and began taunting Ali, accusing him of trying to run out on the rubber match in their personal fight series which stands at one win each.

Frazier showed up at Bugner's final workout Monday morning and told the British boxer, whom he defeated in a 12-round decision, he was "looking good."

"You look fit, good, real good," Frazier said.

The ex-champion also talked about the heat and the problems it is going to cause.

"It's hot out here, man," Frazier said, although there had been a cooling pre-dawn rain and the sky was overcast at the time. "That heat's going to really take something outta you guys."

Repeating his prediction that the heat was a key factor in Tuesday's "battle for survival," Dr. Pacheco said, "There's nothing more they can do about it at this stage. If a fighter hasn't done his proper conditioning and training nothing is going to help him. No amount of artificial physical stimulus is going to help him. This is going to be a battle of survival as far as physical fitness is concerned."

"I think Ali's strength, boxing experience and knowledge will tell in the early part of the fight and I think that possibly by the middle of the fight, Bugner will be pretty well through," added Pacheco, who has been Ali's doctor for 15 years.

Ali's trainer, Angelo Dundee, predicted that his fighter would wear down Bugner in the early rounds and then knock him out. He predicted a ninth round knockout.

Bugner predicted a fast pace but he said he wasn't going to let Ali set it.

"I'm not going to be fooled by any of Ali's tactics. I'm going to fight my fight, not his. I think it'll go the distance and I'm going to win it."

Randy Edmondson of the Pampa Babe Ruth All-Stars swings the bat in Friday night's All-Star vs. Spoilers Game. The all-stars won, 13-6, despite a surprising effort by the Spoilers, which consisted mostly of 14-year-old all-stars. The regular Babe

Ruth all-stars will play tournament favorite Borger starting at 4 p.m. Monday in the district tournament at Elkhart, Kan. Should Pampa win the district tournament, it will advance to the state tourney. (Staff Photo by Mike Higgins)

Western Resumes

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — The role of pace setter midway through a top tournament on the pro golf tour is one George Johnson never has experienced. But today he'll be there, facing the pressure and the heat of competition from both 74 challengers and 90-degree temperatures in a 36-hole double round to decide the winner of the $40,000 top prize in the $200,000 Western Open.

Johnson, though victor in three second-round events, never has been this close in one of the big time tournaments. "I was second at Philadelphia after the second round," he said. "I didn't do too good the last two rounds." Sunday Johnson did well. Playing in one of the last threeholes in the second round at Butler National golf club, he had plenty of opportunity to fold, and he didn't.

He started the day one over par, gained one stroke on his first nine and then carved out fire pars and four birdies to come from behind and pass leader Hale Irwin. In the stretch he hit birdie putts of eight, 30 and 12 feet, and he salvaged a par on one hole when he used a nine iron out of a trap, a sand wedge to the green, and sank a 12 footer.

But the stroke which gave him the lead came on the last hole.

"I drove in the left rough," he said, "and I started to chip out to the fairway. But the ball was sitting up high and I had a little opening. It was about 170 yards to the green, so I took a six iron and let fly."

The ball sailed like I expected, hit in front of the green and rolled up 35 feet from the hole. I wasn't really trying to make birdie. I just wanted to reach the front of the green. Then I hit it and when it was 10 feet from the hole, I knew it was going in. It took a little curve and went on in the hole."

Johnson wound up with the second 66 ever shot on the par 71, 7,002-yard course and a 36 hole total of 138, four under par and one stroke ahead of Irwin, the 1974 U.S. Open winner who ranks third in earnings this year with a tournament win at Atlanta four weeks ago.

Irwin also came from behind. He had a first-round 71 and then shot a 74 Friday before rain washed out all scores. "I got a tremendous break," he said of the 68 when the round finally was played, putting him into the lead until Johnson took it away.

Irwin could have had a better score but for a double bogey on the 18th hole, the same which Johnson birdied to end his round. A tree blocked Irwin's second shot, and he hit a four iron "a little thin." It went into the water and with the resulting penalty, he had to sink a three-foot putt for a six.

Heard, one of five lightning victims Friday, played after he was released from two nights in the hospital together with Lee Trevino and Bobby Nichols. He came to play, and said "I made quite a few short putts because honestly I didn't give a damn." Trevino and Nichols went home to rest before resuming competition later.

After Lightning-Struck

Trevino, 2 Others Released

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Lee Trevino, usually the happy-go-lucky Mexican on the pro golf tour, thinks he probably should have been buried this morning about 10:30.

Instead, Trevino, Bobby Nichols and Jerry Heard were released from Hinsdale Hospital Sunday after two days recovering from the effects of lightning bolts which struck near the three golfers Friday.

Trevino and Nichols withdrew from the tournament but Heard was back on the course Sunday. He shot a 74 and wound up in a tie for fourth at 143 going into today's final 36 holes.

The three golfers appeared at a news conference at the hospital in nearby Hinsdale, after which Trevino withdrew and left for his home in El Paso, Tex., where he plans to rest a few days. If given the okay by his doctor, he plans to leave Saturday to play in the British Open.

Wood Teams With Branham For PTC Win

Terry Wood and Mike Branham edged Byron Kibby and Joe Davis, 7-5, in the first set and it took a tie breaker in the second before Wood and Branham won the finals match in the Men's Championship Division of the Pampa Tennis Club Men and Women's Doubles Tournament Sunday at the high school courts.

Saturday, Lynn Robinson and June Gilbert tripped Cathey Carpenter and Anne Henderson, 6-3, 6-0, for the Women's Championship title.

In Sunday's Men's Open finals, Bob Adcock and Al Drinsky downed Gene Eads and Roy Milliron, 6-2, 6-4.

Eugene Laycock and Jerry Allen, Jr., won the Championship Consolation crown with a 6-2, 6-4 win over Gil Salvano and Rick Brazile. Dick Stowers and Wade Gilbert stopped W.A. Morgan and Howard O'Neal, 6-1, 6-4, in the Open Consolation finals.

In Women's Consolation, Dorothy Stowers and Dixie Douglass came from behind to nudge Betty Blake and Carol Blake, 1-6, 6-4, 6-2, for first place.

13's To Open Against Okies

Pampa will take on the Panhandle Okies League at 6:30 p.m. today in Perryton in the first round of the Babe Ruth 13-year-old Tournament.

Borger and the High Plains League will meet in the tourney's opening game at 4 p.m. today, while the host Top O' Texas League will play Dumas at 9 p.m. Canyon, the only other entry in the tourney, drew a bye in the first round.

Should Pampa win in the opening round, it will play the winner of the Dumas-Perryton game at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday. Should it lose, Pampa will play the loser of that game at 9 p.m. Tuesday.

The finals are set for 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

Starting pitcher for Pampa tonight will be Terry Woods. Other starters will include catcher Mark Jennings, third baseman Keith Stone, shortstop Greg Quarles, second baseman Bret Atchley, first baseman Keenan Henderson, rightfielder Chris Dixon, centerfielder Lance Clark and leftfielder Clyde Coffee.

Jeff McDougall was originally slated to start at catcher but he sustained a broken wrist in a motorcycle accident.

Other players who will likely see action are Mark Hutchison, Kevin Langley, Kenny Waller, Lloyd Remy, Barry Terrill, Dwayne Dunn and Billy Willingham.

According to manager Darrell Woods, the Pampa 13's have performed well in recent workouts.

"We're doing pretty good," Woods said. "We've made some mistakes but we're gonna correct those. Just little mental errors."

"You've got to expect a lot out of them. They're supposed to be the best."

Wake Forest Champ In College Golf Meet

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — There may be no end in sight to Wake Forest's string of NCAA golf championships.

The Deacons locked up No. 2 in a row Saturday with a record 33-stroke margin over runnerup Oklahoma State and also won the individual title for the second straight year.

Jay Haas, a 21-year-old junior from Belleville, Ill., playing four rounds of par or better golf, nipped Alabama's Jerry Pate by one stroke, 282-283, and finished two ahead of teammate Curtis Strange, who won the individual title last year as a freshman.

Haas, a nephew of former Masters champion Bob Goaly, is the old man on the Wake Forest team, which returns all five players next year, assuming none turn pro.

The Deacons will be further bolstered by the addition of Mark Tinker of Pebble Beach, Calif., another in a long line of prized recruits plucked by Coach Jesse Haddock. Tinker is considered the most sought-after high school golfer in the country.

Pele Connects Twice In Win

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A crowd of 35,620 — the largest ever to view a professional soccer match in the United States — turned out Sunday to see Brazilian superstar Pele and the New York Cosmos battle the Washington Diplomats.

Most obviously came to see Pele, and he didn't disappoint them, scoring two goals and assisting on two others as the Cosmos set a club scoring record in routing the Diplomats, 9-2, in a North American Soccer League contest.

Pele, who came out of retirement to join the Cosmos, scored unassisted in the 39th minute of the first half and in the 17th minute of the second half on a pass from former Brazilian teammate Manoel Maria.

Trailing 1-0, the Cosmos tied the game when Mordchai Spigler put a pass from Julio Correa in the net for the first of his two goals. They scored three more times during the half and twice in the first six minutes of the second half to take control of the game.

Pele said he thinks his club is improving. "Even though we were down

1-0 we didn't change. It was a very tough game out there," he said. "We had some luck in the first half. After the second goal we really started controlling most of the game."

Gibson Nips Celanese In Men's League Game

Gibson fought off a late-inning Celanese rally and held on for a 13-12 win Friday night at Lions Club Park in Pampa Men's Softball League action.

Both teams collected 10 hits in the thriller.

In the late game Friday, Lincoln Mercury blanked Wings Antenna, 5-0, in the first shutout of the season for the Pampa League.

Delbert Daniels was the winning pitcher, allowing just three hits and one walk while striking out two.

Gibson scored six runs in the bottom of the first and four in the second. Gibson led 13-1 after four innings before Celanese came back.

The losers scored three runs in the fifth, four in the sixth and four in the seventh. Tom Burns of Celanese led all hitters, going five for five with a homerun and a triple.

Rick Musgrave tripled twice for Gibson, while Bobby Hendricks and Benny Wyant added doubles.

Winning pitcher was Wyant. Loser was Buddy Epperson. Both went the distance.

Lincoln Mercury had one run in the first and four in the top of the fifth, collecting 10 hits off Wings' pitcher Jackie Graham.

Tommy Downs tripled to lead Lincoln Mercury.
