Debate Produces No Big Collision

CLEVELAND (AP) — President Carter and Ronald Reagan argued war and peace in a climactic campaign debate Tuesday night, the president accusing his Republican challenger of "dangerous and belligerent" talk, Reagan retorting that the use of force should be "always and only a last resort."

The 90-minute confrontation produced no dramatic collision; rather there was a persistent — sometimes spirited — exchange, marked by frequent disputes over policies and programs. Reagan was especially aggressive in contradicting Carter when the president characterized Reagan proposals. Carter, as usual, was the master of detail.

At one point, Reagan was discussing world troubles and he likened Carter to a "witch doctor," who grows anxious when a real doctor appears with the right prescription. Carter also wielded a tart tongue on several occasions, one time referring to Reagan's tax cut plan as "ridiculous."

With most public opinion polls saying the presidential race is too close to call, Tuesday night's debate was viewed as a potentially decisive event, and each candidate played what he believed were his strongest cards.

Carter lashed out at his Republican challenger as "dangerous and belligerent" on foreign policy. He described Reagan's positions on domestic issues "ridiculous" and "heartless." Reagan, in quieter, but biting language of his own — blamed Carter for inflation and unemployment and said he couldn't describe his differences with the president on the uses of American military power "because I don't know what Mr. Carter's policies are."

Repeatedly, Reagan said his positions on issues were being distorted by the president.

After the 90-minute debate, the two men shook hands briefly and then joined their wives and supporters in pre-midnight rallies.

Carter said he "felt very good," but he cautioned supporters that "we've got another week to go. Next Tuesday the decision will be not in the hands of debate judges or the League of Women Voters or the press. The decision will be in the hands of millions of Americans like you."

At a similar rally a few blocks away, Reagan said, "I seemed to do all right. I've examined myself and I can't find any wounds. It gave me an opportunity to raise some issues about the failures of this administration."

"We had the offensive," Reagan was on the defensive," said Gerald Rafshoon, the advertising chief for the Carter campaign. It was a reversal of the usual relationship between incumbent and challenger.

The debate played to tens of millions of television viewers — pre-debate estimates ranged from 60 million to 85 million — and many others who tuned into radio broadcasts. The candidates answered questions from four journalists and had the opportunity for rebuttal and counter-rebuttal.

The moderator was commentator Howard K. Smith, who played the same part in the first televised presidential debate between Richard Nixon and John F. Kennedy in 1960. The forum was sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

Moments after the debate began, Reagan moved to deal with the war and peace issue that has dogged his campaign.

"I believe with all my heart that our first priority must be world peace and that use of force is always and only a last resort when everything else has failed," said Reagan.

Ford Sets Loss Record

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. lost $595 million in the third quarter of 1980, a loss that took the industry's worst-quarter-ever title from its top competitor. And Ford officials say their economic future depends greatly on the government.

It was the second in the industry's round of third-quarter reports. Chrysler Corp. will announce results soon and American Motors Corp. is to announce its figures in early November.

Ford's report Tuesday eclipsed the industry record loss of $567 million, reported the day before by General Motors Corp. for the same quarter.

As big as Ford's loss was, it was not a record for a U.S. company.

U.S. Steel Corp. holds that record with a $669 million loss for the fourth quarter of 1979. The loss for the quarter was first reported at $562 million, but the steelmaker revised it earlier this year to reflect accounting changes.

To Build Border Bridges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Mexican government has given the go-ahead for two bridges to be built between Mexico and Texas at Los Indios in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and at Presidio.

In announcing Tuesday that the decision had been made, Bob Krueger, U.S. ambassador-at-large for Mexico, hailed it as "kind of a breakthrough."

"It's something I think very important to South Texas," the former Texas congressman said about the two bridges.

Anderson Cables Into Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — From 600 miles away in a performance marred by technical glitches, John B. Anderson did his best to pretend he was in the same presidential debate with President Carter and Ronald Reagan.

The blue curtains behind Anderson in Constitutional Hall matched the backdrop in the hall in Cleveland where Carter and Reagan made not one reference to their independent rival.

In contrast, Anderson spent well over half his time attacking the positions and public records of Reagan and especially Carter.

As Reagan and Carter finished each round of questions, the Cable News Network cut to its telecast to Washington and Anderson answered as if he were in the same room as the major party nominees.

105 Million View Debate

NEW YORK (AP) — Between 105 million and 120 million Americans watched at least some of the presidential debate between President Carter and the Republican challenger, Ronald Reagan, researchers for NBC and ABC estimated today.

Both estimates — ABC's was the higher — were based on overnight audience ratings from the A.C. Nielsen Co. for three large cities — New York, Chicago and Los Angeles — as well as markedly higher-than-normal TV use in the three cities during the debate, 9:30-11 p.m. EST Tuesday night.

There was no immediate audience estimate from CBS.

The audience projections by ABC and NBC included viewers who watched the debate on public television, though ratings for the non-commercial network are not included in the overnight survey.

Callers Say Reagan Won

NEW YORK (AP) — Callers participating in a special ABC News telephone survey were picking Ronald Reagan by more than 2 to 1 over President Carter as having gained the most from the presidential debate Tuesday night.

In the first hour during which calls were accepted, starting when the debate ended at 11 p.m. EST, ABC said 267,032 people picked Reagan and 131,308 picked Carter.

ABC stressed that the experimental viewer call-in survey was not a scientific survey but merely an attempt to gauge quickly the impact of the debate on viewers.

Public Meet On Hostages Planned

By The Associated Press

After failing to agree in a third day of secret debate, Iran's Parliament will meet Thursday in a public session to discuss and vote on proposed terms for the release of the 52 American hostages, sources in Tehran close to the debate reported today.

The Majlis, Iran's 228-member parliament, scheduled the public meeting after a stormy, four-hour debate behind closed doors today, the sources said.

They said the report of the special committee set up weeks ago to propose conditions for freeing the Americans would be debated and a vote would be taken.

Observers in the Iranian capital said it appeared that the public session, decided on after nearly 12 hours of secret debate failed to produce a consensus, would bring the hostage crisis to a head after nearly a year.

Today was the 361st day of captivity for the Americans. Informed sources said the Majlis was still deeply divided over the terms to be proposed to the United States, and the debate today was extremely heated. At one point, several deputies walked out.

The parliament met for its third day of secret debate at 8:10 a.m. after a one-day suspension Tuesday for a religious holiday. It met for a total of eight hours Sunday and Monday, but some of the time Monday was spent on discussion of the war with Iraq.

Says Iranian Communique...

Jet Downed Near Qom

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran said today it shot down a long-range Soviet-built strategic Iraqi bomber near the holy city of Qom, headquarters of Islamic revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The Iranian communique, carried by Tehran Radio, did not say whether the holy city of Iran's Shiite sect was bombed. The communique also claimed another Iraqi Tupolev bomber was shot down near Esfahan, 145 miles south of Qom and deep in central Iran.

"All six crew members of the bombers were burnt in the fire of Allah's punishment," the communique said.

It was the first time that Soviet-made Iraqi warplanes were reported near Qom, 75 miles southwest of Tehran, since the Iran-Iraq war erupted 38 days ago. Khomeini was in a village north of Tehran Tuesday, but his whereabouts today was not known.

Qom is 380 miles east of the nearest Iraqi air base in Baghdad.

Iran said it launched fierce ground and air attacks against Iraq today and claimed its warplanes bombed Iraq's largest oil refineries near Baghdad and the southern port of Basra. Iraq denied that Iran inflicted heavy damage on the Baghdad refinery.

Iraq said fighting continued along its 300-mile invasion front in western and south-western Iran. Earlier, it had said only 15 Iranian troops and eight Iraqi soldiers were killed in 12 hours of combat.

Iran claimed scores of Iraqi troops killed and 15 tanks destroyed in ground action Tuesday and early today and 330 Iraqis killed in the previous 24 hours in Iran's western provinces.

Tehran Radio claimed Iran's planes inflicted heavy damage on the Doura refinery on the southeastern edge of the Iraqi capital, and the Shuaiba refinery near Basra, Iraq's southern port on the Shatt al-Arab waterway.

Banks Hike

Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Major New York banks today raised their prime lending rates to 14.5 percent, the highest level since May.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. announced the increase, from 14 percent, and was joined at the higher rate by Chase Manhattan Bank. Other banks were expected to join in the boost.

Interest rates in the nation's money markets have been rising sharply in recent weeks, and on Tuesday a top official of Citibank, the nation's second-largest bank, predicted an increase in the rate.

The Carter administration has been critical of banks for raising their lending rates as the economy emerges from the recession.

The prime rate is the rate banks charge on loans to their best corporate customers, with many business borrowers paying more.

The rate reached a low in late July of 10.75 percent at some banks and 11 percent at others after rising to as high as 20 percent in April, then beginning a sharp plunge as the economy fell into a recession.

The SDN Column

If you haven't had your fill of politics by now, your appetite for it must be enormous.

Yet, as we have noted before in this column, no matter how monotonous, or how distasteful it may become, our system of government cannot exist without politics. We talk about those who make political races, and especially those who are successful and hold political office, but the government cannot function without them. Of course there are those who over-do it and those who come up short of expectations, but there must be someone in office for our government to function.

Fortunately, as vexed as we may become, Americans usually manage to find some humor everywhere, even in politics.

So, bearing in mind that it takes a politician to run government, here are a few observations that have been advanced by seasoned observers over the years:

"A statesman is a politician who has been dead 10 or 15 years. What this country needs is more statesmen."

Herbert Hoover once said, "No public man can be just a little crooked." It's like being a little pregnant.

Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev observed, "Politicians are the same all over. They promise to build a bridge even where there is no river."

Sen. Norris Cotton said, "The boys are in such a mood that if someone introduced the Ten Commandments, they'd cut them down to eight."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, who once ran for president, asked, "Where is the politician who has not promised to fight for lower taxes and who has not proceeded to vote for the very spending projects that make tax cuts impossible?"

And a few more from anonymous sources:

"A pessimist is an optimist who voted for a politician he thought would reduce government spending."

"After an election speech or debate the voters draw their own conclusions."

"Old politicians never die. They just run once too often."

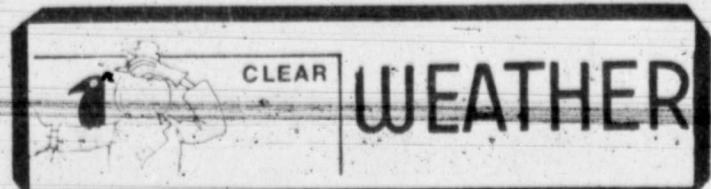

"A politician who sticks to the facts has no respect for tradition."

"An itch for office often settles in the palms."

"A lot of politicians forget that they are appointed instead of elected."

Between the time he attempted to make this a Christian nation by constitutional amendment and his emergence as the fire-and-brimstone pastor of the liberal chic, Congressman John Anderson helped to write the federal campaign law of 1974. The effort was probably a good introduction to his present role, because those much-touted election reforms were born of the spirit that any problem—in this case, big-money influence on politics—can be solved by the right government action. The "Anderson Difference" in 1980 is that he, an independent, is free to take the right actions.

Something has happened to Mr. Anderson's campaign, however. It has run afoul of the 1974 election law. Anderson's drive is not alone in that respect, because the campaign statutes are among the most foul of the legal excesses in which our nation has immersed itself in recent years. There is some justice in what has happened to Anderson, but for the others, and for the cause of open discussion of topical issues, we can only feel grief.

What happened with our attempt at political reform should surprise no one outside of the near-sighted zealots at Common Cause. The Congress, consisting of Republicans and Democrats, got together and cooked up a set of laws designed to perpetuate those two parties and stifle any challengers.

The writer of campaign subsidy provisions the lawmakers dreamed up have already provided millions of dollars for the "legitimate" candidates in the major party primaries, $2 million each for this year's Republican and Democratic conventions (which were further bankrolled by the host city governments) and $29 million apiece for Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter this fall. As well, postal rates have been lowered to permit direct-mail appeals of most use to the major parties.

In order to qualify for their own lesser share of the tax millions, independents like Anderson must get 5 percent or more of the popular vote this November. This threshold has put Anderson in a trap he is finding ever more limiting. In order to broaden the range of his message, he desperately is seeking bank loans, using as collateral the federal dollars he stands to get if one in every 20 voters is attracted to his National Unity Campaign. Jimmy Carter's people, inside the banking industry and out, are spreading rumors about how chancy such loans would be, attempting to discourage them. All the while, Anderson is spending more borrowed money every day, making it increasingly necessary for him to continue what is now a hopeless campaign, just to make sure he ends up with his five percent.

It is one of the supreme ironies of misguided reforms, then, that a law intended to free candidates of influence of wealthy contributors could turn out to compel an also-ran to stick to the campaign trail in order to repay the bankers.

The election acts have an even more debilitating effect, of course, on a hopeful such as Ed Clark, the Libertarian, who has eschewed all taxpayer financing. Along with the subsidy provisions, you see, Congress imposed a $1,000 limit on private contributions to a particular candidacy. Thus, Clark and anyone like him normally will be shut out from all exposure beyond that which their meager donations can buy them.

The independents and third-party movements are relegated by these purported reforms to an even dimmer obscurity than they suffered prior to the 1974 enactment.

With all the efforts of the women's liberation movement, there are still areas where women and men are not equal.

A group of women up north are very concerned about the way women, especially women who are business executives, are treated in a restaurant.

For example, waiters and waitresses always ask "Are you ready to order now, Sir?" "Will there be anything else, Sir?" "Are you ready for your check, Sir?"

For some women, and especially business executives who are buying lunch to make a business deal, this is annoying. So the group of business women up north are trying to do something about it.

They've come up with a "Host" card to add to our plastic card society. The size of a credit card, this small notice is gray with large black letters with "HOST" printed on it. Beneath host are printed the woman's name and company, and on the back are instructions.

The instructions will eliminate confusion about who gets what and include "I am a female executive; I am hosting this party; please instruct all service personnel to address all questions and requests to me; I am to receive the check."

The idea is that as soon as the woman and her party enter the restaurant, she slips the card to the maitre d', hostess, or waiter. This should solve the problem.

It may solve the problem for women executives, but I see potential abuse with the addition of another plastic card.

For instance, men may like the idea and have their own cards printed up with "Dutch Treat, "She's buying" or "She's just my sister" printed on them.

This idea could get so out of hand that soon everyone would be carrying their own cards, pointing at someone else to pay the check.

Now, granted, these little cards could save endless time and energy fighting over who gets the bill. It could eliminate such silly little arguments like "we wanted separate checks," "are you sure that's how much my part of the bill is," or the classic "I'm buying," "No, I'm buying," "No, this is my treat," "No."

Some company looking for a quick trip to the top will capitalize on this idea and make it bigger than "pet rocks." This idea could really change the way Americans fight over checks.

I wonder how one entitled "I paid at the office" would go over?

Where has all the romance gone?

I'm talking about the bits of poetry that were whispered in your ear. The subtle brush of a curl from your forehead. The strains of a melody that captured the moment.

I figured out the other day the last time my husband had his arm around me at the dinner table was in 1969. I had a chicken bone caught in my throat.

When did sentimentality begin to crumble? Was it the first time men peeked under the long skirts and discovered we had legs and not pedicels? Was it the first time we looked over a man's shoulder and said, "You don't have to take the mower in for service, Ralph. All you've got is a clogged carburetor. Give me the wrench." Or was it the first time we slammed our own car door on his outstretched hand?

Romanticism has become so, so practical. Remember when a woman used to wear a gold heart around her neck etched in French, "Je t'aime plus que hier, moins que demain." (I love you more than yesterday, less than tomorrow.) Now she wears a door key or a toothbrush, which is about as subtle as a pickup truck running over your foot!

I saw an ad awhile back for Cosmopolitan in which a girl with tousled hair was saying, "For my birthday, he brought me six boxes of blueberries and a Spanish shawl. On his birthday, he sent me Dom Perignon and his birth certificate with the message, 'I was born to be yours.'"

On the first anniversary of our meeting we went to Bermuda, enjoyed the pink sand, the underwater caves and each other for five straight days and nights. My favorite magazine says there's no thrill on earth like having a man in love with you.

Where did she find this man? In one of the underwater caves?

I tell you we've lost it. We've gone from the prose of Elizabeth Barrett Browning to Burma Shave to quotes from Peanuts and Paul Harvey. Our sentiments are mass-produced by Hallmark. Our innermost secrets are transferred to bumper stickers. Our pet names for one another are shared with the world on license plates.

A friend said the other day, "Cheer up. Traditions are returning. Brides are no longer being married in a free-fall parachute jump or in a forest witnessed by chipmunks. They're returning to antique satin and veils of illusion tulle. The music has gone from 'Days of Wine and Roses' to 'We've Only Just Begun.' There are traditional receptions for the family, honeymoons and the throwing of bird seed."

"Bird seed?" I said. "What happened to rice?" "It was impractical!" "See what I mean?" Copyright 1980 Field Enterprises, Inc.

remember normality?

NEW YORK (AP) — Commentators and political candidates have often wondered whether the public might lose sight of small variations when economic measurements become extreme as those of today. The reason: So saturated have people become with extremes in economic numbers that they forget what used to be normal, both in base figures and in the rates by which they rise or fall. Abnormality, that is, may have become the norm.

It is partially for this reason that if prime interest fell from 14 percent to 12 percent you could expect some people to observe that it is low, forgetting that on November 3, 1976, it was only 6.5 percent.

Prices too may have lost their tie to a base people can understand. There is no longer such a thing as a semi-permanent price. Prices float today, sometimes changing by the week. Because of this, it is argued, many buyers no longer know what constitutes a fair price.

Consumer price inflation so far this year has ranged at an annual rate of 12.7 percent. In 1979 it was 13.3 percent. But in the early 1960s single digit inflation — around 1 to 3 percent — was the rule. Joblessness of 7.5 percent has become so persistent that a reduction of two tenths of a percent is considered an achievement. But as recently as 1973 the jobless rate was no higher than 5 percent.

The difference between a 5 percent rate and a 7.5 percent rate, based on the labor force of 105 million workers, is 2.1 million, or more than the total jobless in 1953, when the rate was 2.9 percent.

The savings rate — saving as a percent of disposable income — was just 4.5 percent last year, lowest in about 30 years. It rose to 4.9, and appears now to be under 4 percent. In 1975 it was 7.7 percent.

Federal financing bears little relation to what was. The public debt on Oct. 22 was $906.7 billion, and interest on it in the fiscal year through August (one month short of a full year) was $69.2 billion.

In 1959 the public debt was $294.7 billion, or less than a third that of 1979. It has grown by about 50 percent from fiscal 1976, when the debt was $620.4 billion and the financing cost was $37.1 billion.

If you go back into history you will find that the public debt in 1939, near the end of the Great Depression, was only $40.4 billion. And that in 1940 federal interest payments were only $1 billion.

So persistent have federal budget deficits become (12 straight years) and so large (the fiscal 1980 deficit is $65 billion) that many might reject promises to balance the budget as political ploys.

There is a danger in some such financial comparisons because, as almost everyone knows, inflation has distorted the relationships. A dollar today is a different measuring stick than yesterday's dollar. Based on the consumer price index — the popular but not always correct measure of inflation — the purchasing power of the dollar has steadily diminished. Today's dollar is sort of a 6-inch foot.

The 1977 dollar, for example, bought half that of a 1957 dollar.

NASHVILLE (NEA-Quick) — Who is running for vice president? You can be forgiven for not remembering, because Walter Mondale.

George Bush and Patrick Lucey have become the forgotten participants in Campaign '80.

The network news and the major newspapers chronicle the daily activities of Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and John Anderson. But it is rare indeed when one of the vice-presidential candidates receives such coverage.

This is not for lack of trying on their part. Every day they are out on the hustling all those things that candidates and their staffs hope will merit national attention.

Neither is it for lack of trying on the part of the reporters traveling with the vice-presidential aspirants. Every day they prepare stories on their candidate's doings — only to hear more often than not that their candidate's doings — only to hear more often than not that their editors are not interested.

This disinterest by the major news organizations is to be expected, of course. Accordingly, the vice-presidential candidates have tailored their efforts toward a different end. They are campaigning for the attention not of the national media but of the local media.

Typical was the recent half-day visit to Nashville by Republican George Bush.

Tennessee is considered vital by both political parties. Despite a recent Democratic poll putting Carter about seven points ahead of Reagan, the state's 10 electoral votes are still rated a toss-up.

Bush's trip was intended in part to counter the favorable publicity the president had received from visiting Nashville the week before. While Carter's trip had garnered national headlines, Bush's was designed to generate local and regional coverage.

Bush flew into town in the early afternoon after a morning of campaigning in Spartanburg, S.C. The airport press conference was almost exclusively for the benefit of the local media. The national press traveling with the candidate had heard every question and answer a dozen times before. But for the local reporters, it was all new and newsworthy.

Then it was of to Vanderbilt University — and to something of a surprise, as Bush was greeted by one of his best crowds of the campaign. He responded to the cheering, chanting students who filled the campus auditorium to overflowing with one of his most enthusiastic recent performances. The scene guaranteed more time on local television.

From Vanderbilt, Bush sped to his hotel for a series of "exclusive" one-on-one interviews with local reporters. He gave each a little nugget of news aimed at producing even more coverage.

After the interviews, Bush and his aides tuned in the evening news. They were pleased to see that each local station gave the visit from five to 10 minutes of favorable coverage. It had been a successful afternoon!

The evening was no less successful. First came a packed fund-raiser for Mike Adams, a Republican who is running a cozy race for Congress against one-term incumbent Bill Boner. The 400 people who paid $100 each to have cocktails with Bush provided money that will be crucial for the final days of Adams' campaign. And Bush picked up a political IOU from Adams that can be cashed in at some future date.

The final venture of the day was the requisite visit to the Grand Ole Opry. After being introduced by Tennessee's Republican governor, Lamar Alexander, Bush settled back for what his staff said was an evening of a chance to relax and hear some good down-home music. But the staffers had not lost sight of the fact that the performance, part of a week-long birthday celebration for the Opry, was being telecast throughout the region.

It was early to bed because Bush had to fly to Chicago the next morning for another day of small events.

Does it bother Bush not to have a minute on Walter Cronkite or a front-page story in the New York Times to show for such efforts? "Nope," he says. "What I am doing is bringing the Reagan-Bush message to all parts of the country. I am very pleased with my visit to Nashville. It was well worth it."

"The visit got us considerable local coverage, all favorable, and helped us raise some needed money," agrees Tom Reasley, Tennessee chairman for the Reagan-Bush campaign. "By any criteria it was a very successful visit."

So while most Americans were unaware of Bush's whereabouts, those in central Tennessee read and heard a lot about the Republican vice-presidential candidate during his visit to their region. In Campaign '80, that is what running for vice president is all about.

Delta Kappa Gamma Society Learns About Reality Theory

Members of Zeta Lambda Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma met in the home of Margie McNair, 2802 37th, Monday night.

Serving as hostess with Mrs. McNair were Ruby Anderson, Mary Blackmon and Evelyn Boone.

The meditation was led by Marge Mathis who gave a collection of thoughts on beauty and self discipline, quoting from the Bible and Helen Stierner Rice.

Gerri Parker, chairman of the Research Committee, introduced the program on "Beauty," stating that beauty is that which catches the heart's eye, causing it to pause.

She read from a survey made among Zeta Lambda's members concerning the beauty which highlights their lives.

Guest speaker Hermonda Merkle, counselor at Mann Junior High School in Abilene, spoke to the group on the Reality Approach Therapy in dealing with students.

Quoting Dr. Glasner, author of the Reality Theory, Mrs. Merkle emphasized four points which included "be involved, make a plan, don't accept excuses and give encouragement."

A filmstrip, The Educational Foundation of Delta Kappa Gamma, was viewed at the conclusion of the meeting.

Baxter and Dallas Hendrip. Hub Evans with Gandy's gave the ice cream, Hiland Bakery made the cake, while the flowers were from Friendly Flowers. (SDN Staff Photo)

HOLIDAY FASHIONS FEATURED—Models will be showing men's, women's, teen's and children's fall and winter fashions, emphasizing "holiday fashions" during the Martha Ann Woman's Club style show and luncheon at 11:30 a.m. Saturday. Above, Neomi Harlin wears a party dress from Special Moments. Other fashions will be from Anthony's, Fentons, Glövers N-J's, Mildred's, Mode O'Day, Penneys, Margaret's, Grays, Bea Owens, Lad and Lassie, and Mens II. Tickets selling for $6 may be purchased from any MAWC club member or at the door. A number of door prizes will be given by local merchants. The public is invited.

In old-fashioned standard American, South would have to rebid two spades. An immediate raise to three clubs would guarantee a much better hand than his 14 HCP 5-3-3-2.

Today, the three-club rebid merely shows that he wants to support clubs. It may show a much better hand but in that case he will take strong action later.

North's next bid of three diamonds is just a forcing bid. It may be the start of a slam sequence; meanwhile, all it does is tell South that North can stop diamonds.

It also is just the bid South wanted to hear. He doesn't have much of a hand, but he does have a heart stopper and bids three notrump.

This bid cools all North's slam interest. North is happy to pass at three notrump.

The diamond lead holds South to three notrump, but he has no trouble collecting five clubs, three spades, the ace of diamonds, game and rubber.

There are lots of bidding sequences that would also lead to three notrump, but even more that would land the partnership at a spade contract. A diamond lead will hold any spade declarer to nine tricks.

Spaghetti Is Tasty Meal

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Convenience foods help fill the urge for a spaghetti binge. Italian sausage and ground beef round out sauces from a can to top a platter of heaping spaghetti.

You add your own personal touch to the sauce and may want to adjust seasonings to your taste. Keep ingredients on hand and you'll only need to pick up the meat on the way home from work.

Serve with salad, bread and fresh fruit.

EASY SPAGHETTI AND MEAT SAUCE

- 1/2 pound hot Italian sausage, cut in 1/2-inch pieces
- 1/2 pound ground beef
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 large clove garlic, minced
- 2 teaspoons Italian seasoning, crushed
- 2 cups vegetable juice
- 1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
- 1 can (about 16 ounces) tomatoes, cup grated
- 1/4 cup Parmesan cheese
- 1 Cooked spaghetti

In saucepan, brown sausage and ground beef and cook onion with garlic and Italian seasoning until tender (use shortening if necessary); stir to separate meat. Add remaining ingredients except spaghetti. Bring to boil; reduce heat. Simmer 30 minutes; stir occasionally. Serve over cooked spaghetti with additional Parmesan cheese. This kitchen-tested recipe makes about 5 cups, 4 servings.

Pamper Your Feet For Soft Beauty

For feet as lovely as the rest of you, pamper yourself with a professional-style pedicure twice a month. First soak your feet in warm, soapy water. Scrub with a soft brush, then rub a pumice stone over calluses. Next, file toenails straight across. Massage warm oil into feet and nails, put on heavy socks and sit for 10 minutes. Swish feet in the water again and pat dry. Use cotton ball to separate toes while applying a base coat, then two coats of your favorite color and a sealer.

Clean living
Actress Nancy Addison told Beauty Digest magazine her routine for keeping slim and fit: "When I have to lose weight, I join a gym or jog a mile a day. I'll drink juice and liquids during the day, with a 'healthful' protein dinner at night. But even when I'm not dieting, I believe in fasting one day every two weeks—I think it cleans out the system."

Change Of Season Requires Change In Beauty Regime

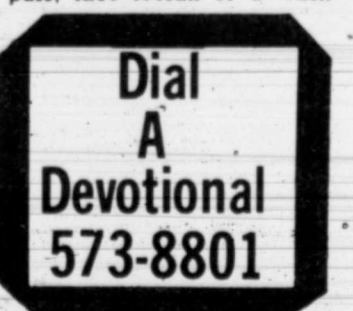

As your skin changes with the seasons, so should your makeup routine. Cooler weather, winds and indoor heat mean drier skin. Now's the time to start using more moisturizer. When washing your face, gently rub off dry, dull top layers with a Buff-puff, face loofah or a wash-cloth. Apply gloss before lipstick to protect lips from chapping.

If the top part of your out-locks is flabby try this shape-up. Lie on your back. Raise upper body to rest on elbows. Now, bend legs into your chest, then roll to the right and straighten legs. Keeping them straight, circle legs up and over to the left, bending only as you bring them back to center. Reverse. The flabby areas should press against the floor when your straight legs move across. Do eight times.

Bed rest can be harmful

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am concerned about my mother. She is in a nursing home. She isn't sick but she can't stay alone and I have to work. When I do get to see her she is always in bed. If she were sick I could understand that. But she is not. Isn't sitting around and being in bed a lot of the time really bad for older people? I'd feel better if she were up moving around or at least sitting up to read. Am I worrying needlessly?

DEAR READER — You should be concerned. Bed rest and inactivity can be harmful. Lying around in bed all the time can increase the loss of calcium from the bones. When you get older there is a tendency to lose bone tissue anyway and inactivity, particularly bed rest, makes it worse. Bed rest causes people to lose water from the legs and lower part of the body. As a result, when they do stand up they are more prone to be dizzy or feel faint. Too much blood pools in the legs.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-6, Effects of Inactivity, Including Bed Rest. It will tell you the large number of things that inactivity really does to your body. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

This can happen to young people, too. It is similar to the changes that occurred in the astronauts during space flight because of weightlessness.

I'm really concerned about the tendency of some older people to lie around. Sitting is better than being in bed but walking and mild activity helps maintain useful function and health.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you give me some information on the spleen? My doctor thought I had an enlarged spleen so he had X-rays taken. The results came back that the spleen was borderline. What is the function of the spleen and could a person live without a spleen?

DEAR READER — In many ways the spleen is a large specialized lymph gland. It is under the diaphragm, just behind your stomach under the left rib margin. It has a red-brown to purple color.

One function is to strain out the old red blood cells. These are destroyed and the iron-containing hemoglobin is processed by specialized cells to be recycled for the formation of new red blood cells. In fetal life the spleen actually manufactures red blood cells. After birth this function is taken over normally by your red bone marrow.

It also strains the blood of bacteria and foreign matter. It frequently enlarges because of an infection, just as the lymph glands in your neck enlarge if you have a sore throat. That is why a small enlargement of the spleen is often of no real medical importance.

The spleen can become overactive and destroy too many blood cells. It can be involved in some forms of leukemia and lymphomas (lymph gland cancer).

The spleen can usually be removed easily and the absence of a spleen itself is not a major medical problem. The difficulty usually comes from the underlying problem that caused the spleen to be enlarged or overactive in the first place.

If your only finding was a slight enlargement of the spleen, you probably won't need to have anything done.

NBC Scores Big With World Series

NEW YORK (AP)—The thousands of Americans who sat glued to their TV sets for the final game of baseball's World Series helped make NBC the winner of the networks' prime-time ratings race for the week ending Oct. 26, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

NBC, which has now led the Nielsen ratings for four of the past six weeks, claims a lead of nearly four ratings points over runnerup ABC for the season to date.

However, NBC maintains the 1980-81 season began with "Shogun" week, Sept. 15-21, while ABC and CBS argue that the season, delayed by the recently resolved actors' strike, began Monday.

Indisputable is NBC's dominance since mid-September, and the most recent Nielsen survey yielded figures to continue that trend. NBC won the week with an average rating of 19.6, to 17.6 for CBS and 17.1 for ABC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.6 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to NBC.

Key to NBC's latest triumph was the deciding game in the World Series, won by Philadelphia over Kansas City. The rating for the baseball game was 40, and Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 40 percent saw at least part of the game.

The pre-game show was runnerup in the ratings, with two CBS programs, "60 Minutes" and "Dallas," third and fourth and "Love Boat" on ABC in fifth.

Two other Top 10 shows were from NBC, "Real People" in sixth place and "Sophia Loren: Her Own Story" in seventh.

A good deal of prime-time in the most recent week surveyed was consumed by specials and movie, and 16 of the 73 programs broadcast were paid political spots for the presidential candidates.

The highest-rated of the political ads was a Ronald Reagan commercial on CBS on Friday—18th for the week, perhaps a result more of its place in the schedule than of viewer preference. ABC alone does not include political spots in its calculation of weekly averages.

Of the movies and specials, "The Last Song" on CBS finished 10th for the week, trailed by two animated shows, "Life's a Circus, Charlie Brown," 11th, and "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown," in 12th place, both on CBS.

Four of the week's six lowest-rated shows were political spots, with "NBC Magazine" with David Brinkley, 72nd and a "CBS Reports" production, "The Saudis," 73rd—last.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

World Series, Game 6, with a rating of 40 representing 31.1 million homes, and World Series Pre-Game, Game 6, 27.4 or 21.3 million; both NBC; "60 Minutes," 26.4 or 20.5 million, and "Dallas," 25.8 or 20.1 million, both CBS; "Love Boat," 24.7 or 19.2 million, ABC; "Real People," 24 or 18.7 million, and Movie: "Sophia Loren: Her Own Story," 22.8 or 17.7 million, both NBC; "NFL Monday Night Football versus Pittsburgh," 22.7 or 17.6 million, ABC; "Dukes of Hazzard," 21.7 or 16.9 million, and "The Last Song," 21.6 or 16.8 million, both CBS.

First speaker of the House of Representatives was Frederick A.C. Muhlenberg, a Federalist from Pennsylvania, who served from 1789 to 1791.

Coffee Marketers Cut Prices By 15¢

The nation's big coffee marketers have cut their prices by up to 15 cents a pound.

Hills Bros. Inc., in San Francisco, and the Folger's coffee division of Procter & Gamble Co., in Cincinnati, announced identical and immediate reductions Tuesday on wholesale list prices of ground, instant and high-yield coffee.

The companies cut 15 cents off wholesale prices for a pound of ground coffee, to $2.73 per one-pound can, a reduction of about 5.2 percent.

Prices on instant coffee fell 2 cents an ounce, or about 4.25 percent, to $4.50 per 10-ounce jar. The roasters posted wholesale list prices of $2.24 per 13-ounce can of concentrated coffee, down 12 cents, or about 5 percent.

Hills Bros., ranked third in the nation behind Procter & Gamble, also said it was cutting the price of its decaffeinated coffee by 2.5 cents per ounce, to $4.31 per eight-ounce jar.

The companies cited lower prices for imported green coffee beans as the reason for the reductions. They previously cut prices in September and July. A one-pound can of ground coffee cost $3.23 last July 2.

In Houston, Coca-Cola Co.'s food unit posted the same reductions in wholesale prices for its ground and instant coffee brands: Maryland Club and Butter Nut.

Industry leader General Foods Corp., based in White Plains, N.Y., said it had not changed prices.

Efforts Of CowBelles Praised In Resolution

The Texas CowBelles, who met this week in conjunction with the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, were presented a resolution signed by Gov. Bill Clements recognizing the importance of the beef industry in Texas and the work of the CowBelles in promoting factual information concerning the beef industry.

Governors from several other states have signed similar resolutions.

Beef promotion, better legislation and consumer education were the focus of the CowBelle committee reports and business meeting. Connie Townsend, American National CowBelle President, was the luncheon speaker.

TCFA President Bob Bliss, noting that consumer demand for beef has declined, said the amount of disposable income spent on beef in the last 27 years usually ranged from 2.5 to 2.7 percent. This declined to 2.4 percent in 1979 and was 2.5 percent the second quarter of 1980. A decline of 0.1 percent, he said, results in a decrease of $3 per hundredweight for the price of beef.

Consumer fears, not rising prices, are the main reason for declining U. S. Beef consumption, nutritionist Cortez Enloe told the cattle feeders and CowBelles. Consumption will not increase just because cattle supplies increase and prices decrease, he said. In 1976, U. S. beef consumption was 56 pounds per person and it is likely to be less than 76 pounds per person in 1980.

Enloe attributed the decline primarily to an anti-beef campaign intended to convince consumers that beef consumption is unsafe and that the manner in which cattle are raised withholds food from the world's starving people.

Vegetarianism is gaining popularity because 78 percent of the American public believes a vegetarian diet is more healthful than a diet including meat.

This is simply not so, said Enloe, but the prevailing attitude is guiding the nutritionists of the future. This, he said, could create a long-term anti-meat trend.

In addition, the diet of 28 million people fed daily by the federal government is influenced by what Enloe called anti-meat U. S. Department of Agriculture guidelines.

People who do not eat beef because they believe rangeland could be put to better use growing vegetables for the starving world do not realize that beef raising is the most efficient use of that land, Enloe said, noting that it cannot feasibly be made into cropland.

Enloe praised the CowBelles' work in combatting the dietary guidelines put out by USDA.

Konis Exhibit Closing Here

The Ben Konis exhibit at the Scurry County Museum will close Thursday night when the artist is honored at a coffee from 6:30 p. m. to 8:30 p. m.

The public is invited to attend the reception and meet Mr. and Mrs. Konis.

Konis, a native of New Jersey, has lived in Amarillo since 1969. He has an established reputation as an artist of the Southwest and one of his pastels took a first place in the Texas Cowboy Artist show currently underway in Amarillo.

The museum is on the campus of Western Texas College and visitors may park in the west parking lot on the south side of the museum.

'Nobody' Stirs Campus Into Political Frenzy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It was the strangest political rally anybody could remember seeing in the past four years — but then, the candidate was a bit on the odd side, too.

It was the Nobody rally for President campaign rally Monday on the University of Texas' Austin campus. Campaign coordinator Wavy Gravy tried to whip the crowd of 500 students into a frenzy over his candidate — Nobody — with rhetoric and demagoguery of the lowest sort.

It worked. "Who was president before George Washington?" Gravy asked.

"Nobody!" the crowd chorused.

"Who honored the treaties with the Indians?" he continued.

"Nobody!" answered the crowd.

"Who will lower our taxes?"

"Nobody!"

"Who will free the hostages?"

"Nobody!"

"Who do you want to run your life?"

"Nobody!"

"Who bakes chocolate pie better than your mom?"

"Nobody!"

By now the crowd was pretty excited and Gravy began seeking testimonials.

"Anybody want to testify that Nobody has changed their life?" he asked, and a young man stepped forward to give witness.

"I've never voted for anybody," he confessed, but immediately repented: "This year I'm going to vote for Nobody."

Then Texas-country musician Steve Fromholz took the stage to pick and sing one of Nobody's campaign tunes, "Nobody Knows You When You're Down and Out."

"Just remember," Gravy reminded the students, "if Nobody wins, nobody loses."

He then officially opened the candidates' debate and self-styled independent "Aggie" contender, Col. Clay Cannon, stepped forward to conduct a head-to-head debate with Nobody.

During a lull, Gravy admitted his real name is Hugh Romney and the campaign parody was organized by a San Francisco-area commune that calls itself the Hog Farm. The members run a telephone answering service, children's camps and an organic grape farm — and organize street theater presentations, such as the Nobody for President campaign.

This is Nobody's second try for the presidency, Romney said. He was put forward as a candidate in 1976 and is the candidate again this year because there is potential for a landslide, he added.

Surrounded by evidence that his candidate was gaining popularity, Romney pointed to signs saying "Nobody Cares," "Nobody Is Qualified" and "Nobody Should Have That Much Power," listened to supporters chanting, "Nobody's gonna send me to war and I'm going to war for Nobody," and a choral rendition of "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen."

Nobody, Romney said, was stirred such political excitement.

Texas Baptists Meet Begins

HOUSTON (AP) — The Baptist General Convention of Texas is underway amid speculation of a fundamentalist campaign to bring two of the denomination's most cherished institutions in line with its theological perspectives.

The three-day meeting, which opened Tuesday night at Sam Houston Coliseum here, is considered a crucial barometer to gauge the future of the state convention and the mood of the national organization.

"This is the Texas part of a nationwide struggle to take over institution control of Southern Baptist schools and agencies," said the Rev. Kenneth Chafin, of Houston, an outspoken critic of the fundamentalist movement seeking to gain control of the state and national conventions.

"Controlling Texas (Baptists) would be a giant step toward controlling the Southern Baptist Convention," said Chafin.

His remarks centered around a lingering dispute involving Baylor University's religion department and the editorial policies of the convention's weekly newspaper, The Baptist Standard.

Fundamentalist leaders expressed disapproval at the recent appointment of the Rev. H. J. Flanders as chairman of Baylor's religion department. They contend a textbook Flanders co-authored, "People and the Covenant," espouses a liberal theology and a less than literal interpretation of the Bible.

Reacting to the criticism, Baylor's Board of Trustees authorized a study of the publication. The report, completed last summer, said the textbook should be used only as a reference for the Bible.

The report also stated that Baylor in the future should hire only those professors who believe in the inerrancy of the Bible — or that the Bible is the exact word of God.

Conservative leaders also hope to change the policies that Paige Patterson of Dallas and Paul Pressler, a Houston appeals judge, contend allowed The Standard to mishandle news stories and editorials about the fundamentalist movement within the convention.

The paper is controlled by a 15-member board of directors.

But Carlos McLeod, state convention president, vowed to rule out of order any motion or resolution to fire either the newspaper editor or the department chairman, saying any attack on an employee of a Baptist agency or school "would be in violation of our constitution and by-laws."

"There is no way we can deal with individuals," McLeod said. "The policy of the convention is that we have a board and these boards are the governing bodies of the institutions. This is the way we work. The people are employees of the boards and the boards are the ones who have to act."

Rancher Feels UFOs Cause Of Mutilation

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Rancher Bill Heath says there is only one explanation for the recent bizarre mutilation and death of his Charolais bull — UFOs.

"That's what I believe," the South Texas cattle man said after finding the bull with its tongue and heart cut out. "Some people have said it was persons from the occult, devil worshippers, but they would have had to be using a helicopter to get around out there."

Heath said he is baffled by the desecration, which resembles a rash of similar mutilations two years ago in eastern Cameron County.

"It's very strange," he said Tuesday, after finding the body of his best bull Sunday afternoon. "There were no tracks around the animal. It was like he was hit and just fell over on his side."

There was some blood coming out of its nose, but in the other carcasses, there was no blood at all.

The typical 1978 attacks involved clean incisions to remove some or all of the animals' tongue, lips, reproductive organs, heart and eyes.

Texas Ranger Bruce Casteel of Harlingen was one of several state and local officers who investigated the wave of mutilations in 1978.

"Most of the cattle I looked at I would say had been mutilated; if that's what you want to call it, by varmints, like coyotes," he said.

"I didn't go out and look at all of them. I didn't see the ones Heath is talking about," Casteel said.

Heath said he is convinced scavengers did not kill the animals.

"You don't walk up to a bull like that one. He was wild," he said of the 1,100-pound animal. "And there were no puncture marks where a tranquilizer gun had shot him," he said.

"This time, they cut a perfectly round hole above the left shoulder, cut through a muscle to get to the heart. I have a degree in animal science and I've had to do animal dissections. There's no way a person could do that with a scalpel," he insisted.

His theory is that the wound was burned with a laser-like instrument.

"Nothing would touch that carcass. Usually you know a dog will run up to anything and sniff it. The dogs ran up to this and just turned tail and ran in the other direction," he said.

Heath said he has dragged the carcass to the middle of the pasture to decompose. "It's too muddy out there to do much else and it's too wet to burn it," he said.

Other ranchers might want to keep an eye on their herds to see if other deaths occur, he said.

"Somebody ought to call 'That's Incredible' or one of those shows because no one has been able to explain this thing," he said.

Tigers Spike Lamesa 15-11 And 15-13...

Snyder Clinches Volleyball Title

by the SDN Sports Staff

It is a statement that covers not only the 1980 team, but all the varsity volleyball squads for the past five years.

"They've got that determination, that discipline. They just won't lose. They never give up," said Coach Joyce Elrod after her Snyder High School Tigers chalked a 15-11, 15-13 victory over Lamesa last night to capture a fifth straight district championship.

"I never look back and compare teams. All of them have been a great bunch of girls. They've given their all, and that's what it takes. That's the only way they can do it."

Snyder has one more regular-season game left on the schedule, but for all intents and purposes, the District 2-AAAA race is sacked and bagged. The Tigers will play in the Regional Tournament on Nov. 15, presumably in Lubbock, though the actual site has yet to be determined.

The victory gives the girls a 27-0 record on the season and extends their second-round district mark to 6-0. Also improved upon was the Tigers' at-home win string, which bulges to 53, and their consecutive district victories record, which stands at 43.

"We've still got Pecos left Saturday and I just hope we're not down when we play them. We played them the first district game of the season before, and I'm sure they've improved. I really don't think the girls will let up though. It's been their goal since the first of the season to go undefeated," Elrod added.

"Lamesa gave us one of the toughest defensive matches we've had all year. The first game was nip and tuck. At one time we were down 10-11. We came from behind, with some serves by Shana (Koonsman) to put us in front 13-11, and led from that point. (Sherry) Mayes served 14 and (Kathy) Northcott served the 15th point," Elrod recalled.

"The second match was a lot like our third one against Lamesa when we played them over there (in Lamesa). We were behind 6-11 and (Lisa) Cobb served two and they got one to make it 8-12. Then Koon-smen came back in and (her serves) got us to 10-12. Toni (Elrod) served us to 11-12, and Mayes served 12, 13 and 14 to put us in front, 14-12. All of this was happening with a minute or so left on the clock."

Northcott ended up serving the final point once again. Snyder captured the victory when Lamesa "put too much" on a pass. The ball carried over to Snyder's side, and Cobb leaped up and slammed it back over for the "kill."

"Lisa had a very strong game offensively. She put away 10 kills for the night (spiked balls which were not returned)," noted the coach. "Sherry Rich also had an outstanding first game; probably the best I'd seen her play. Mayes really didn't have one of her best nights, but she had four kills, and came through with some important blocks on the backline. She came through when we had to have it," said Elrod. "Koonsman also came through for us on the backline, and Kathy had a good night again. Kathy has had strong offensive matches the last three games we've played, really."

Elrod went on to praise all of the team, including setter Toni Elrod, and added, "I'm proud of them. They don't know how to quit. They are not what you'd call a standout team, but they are very consistent, very smart...and they give everything they've got."

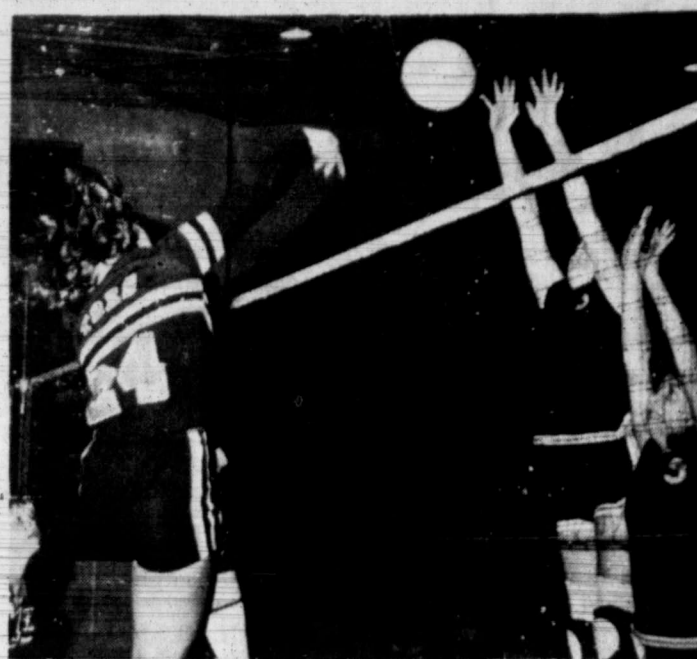

"I have to commend Lamesa for playing defense they way they played, too. They were very tough. We were hitting every shot in our arsenal and they were sending it back."

Serving for points last evening here were Northcott 8, Mayes and Koonsman 6 each, Cobb 5, Toni Elrod 4 and Rich 1. The coach

Another group of Cats extended their record to a fine 22-3 mark last night, as the local junior varsity ripped Lamesa 15-7 and 15-4.

Serving for points in that contest were Becky Harrell 8, Sabrina Robinson and Lisa Loyola 6 each, Susie Lee 5, Becky Pylant and Lisa Waller 2 each, and Susan Brim 1.

CHAMPS—Snyder High School volleyball squad clinched a District 2-AAAA title last evening by exiting Lamesa here, 15-11 and 15-13. At top, Sherry Mayes and Kathy Northcott block a Lamesa spike attempt, while in the middle photo, Lisa Cobb makes a diving block. The victory was an emotional one for the entire Tiger team, as the lower photo reveals. Snyder has won five straight district championships now, and will head into the Regional Tournament, to be played Nov. 15. First, however, the team has another conference game to play, Saturday at Pecos. Snyder JV also won last evening. See related article at left. (SDN Staff Photos)

Aggie Linebacker Lost For Season

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Senior linebacker Doug Carr, one of the Texas A&M football team captains, underwent knee surgery for torn ligaments and his football career is ended, school athletic officials said Tuesday.

Carr was hurt in Saturday's game against Rice.

His injury makes a total of six starters lost to the team through injury or disciplinary action since the football he won the event on a Yamaha YZ 465.

Dennis plans to race in the highly-regarded Post Enduro next month, and in the well-known Pikes Peak Race in July.

'Expect To Win East,' Says Cowboys' Landry

DALLAS (AP) — In Thousand Oaks, Calif., during the dog days of their July training camp, a 6-2 start for his Dallas Cowboys was more than Coach Tom Landry could wish.

Featuring a new starting quarterback and a green secondary, Landry could see some hard times until the two units jelled. He was so worried about his defense he spent most of training camp working with that side of the line of scrimmage.

"Our team is where I hoped it would be," said Landry. "I felt our offense could do a lot of things it has done."

"But our defense was almost an impossible question. But we kept working and hustling and doing the things we had to do."

Would he take another 6-2 down the National Football League's back stretch?

"I'd take another 6-2 and not suit up," Landry quickly answered.

He added "the toughest part of our schedule is coming up."

Landry refused to concede the National Conference East to the Philadelphia Eagles, who own a one game lead. He also pointed out the Cowboys and Eagles are in good shape for a wild card berth which goes to runnerup teams with superior records.

"We expect to win the East and won't give it up," said Landry. "Of course, if we're not the champions I'd like to be in the playoffs anyway we can get there."

Landry can even see a possible Super Bowl for his team.

"We have the ingredients...we have a chance to be in the Super Bowl," said Landry. "We definitely have a chance for the East (division) and if we keep improving and playing at the level we have been we could get to the Super Bowl with a few breaks."

The Cowboys play in St. Louis Sunday, travel to the New York Giants, host St. Louis, Washington and Seattle, go to Oakland and Los Angeles, then entertain

Legal Action Possible Over Firing Of Smith

HOUSTON (AP) — The firing of Tai Smith as president and general manager of the Houston Astros and his replacement by Al Rosen has brought the threat of possible legal action by some of the National League team's limited partners.

David LeFevre, one of 25 limited partners and who holds the second largest share of stock in the club, suggested that action may be taken to reverse Smith's firing by General Partner John McMullen Monday.

LeFevre, a New York attorney, said he was speaking on behalf of the limited partners, adding: "I think we feel strong enough that we are going to take specific action. As a lawyer and a person very deeply concerned, I feel we are getting into an area of strategy, and I don't want to tip anyone's hands as to what it is we might do and what it is our main concerns are."

McMullen shrugged off the possibility of court action aimed at reversing his firing of Smith. It was under Smith's reign that the Astros had climbed from the cellar to the title in the National League West and came within one run of winning the 1980 NL Championship Playoff series with the Philadelphia Phillies.

In discussing the firing, McMullen said: "Every man has a time limit on his effectiveness. If a man can't do it in five years, he can't do it in 10."

He also indicated that Smith's contract, which he inherited from previous ownership, was a problem. The pact contained a bonus stipulation based on the Astros attendance.

Rosen, a former general manager of the New York Yankees, obviously was aware that he was stepping into a hornet's nest of fans anger created by the firing.

Smith, interviewed as he was cleaning out his desk, said part of the reason for his dismissal was McMullen's ego.

"He (McMullen) wants this to be his team," Smith said.

He doesn't want it to be (Manager) Bill Virdon's team or Tai Smith's team. It's a matter of ego."

Smith also said he thought McMullen's decision to fire him was made in the emotion following the loss to Philadelphia in the playoffs.

Webb Claims PBA Victory

GREENWOOD, Ind. (AP) — A wobbling 2-pin in the 10th frame of the championship match left by challenger Jim Winklepleck gave top-seeded Wayne Webb his third Professional Bowlers Association victory of the year in the $100,000 Kessler Classic.

Webb scored 193 and forced Winklepleck to throw a strike in the last frame for the win. Winklepleck's shot went light on the headpin and the 2-pin, although nudged, refused to fall. He finished with 191.

Debaters Cautious; No Major Mistakes

CLEVELAND (AP) — President Carter and Ronald Reagan pursued predictable strategies in their long-awaited debate Tuesday night, making no apparent major slips while saying little that hasn't been heard throughout the campaign.

The big difference was they said it this time while standing just a few feet apart.

They differed sharply on the issues, as well as what they emphasized the most. For Carter, it was war and peace; for Reagan, it was bread and butter. Carter's handling of the economy.

Carter kept up his effort to portray Reagan as too ready to resort to military force, at one point describing his rival's position on the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union as "dangerous and belligerent."

Reagan's opening words demonstrated his approach: "I believe with all my heart that my first priority is peace." The use of force, he said, should be "always and only a last resort."

Carter kept on the offensive

Wood Rites

Funeral service has been set for 2 p. m. Thursday in the Bell-Seale Chapel for Billy Wayne Wood, 22, of Thorndale, formerly of Snyder. He died at 11:50 p. m. Monday at Richard Memorial Hospital in Rockdale.

Burial will be in Hillside Memorial Gardens, under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

He was married on July 16, 1976, in Snyder to Susanna Johnston. They had moved to Thorndale about two-and-a-half months ago.

Surviving are his wife; a daughter, Billie Sue of the home; a son, Jeffery Michael of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Billy G. Wood of Snyder; a sister, Cindy Wood of Snyder; a brother, Jimmy Wood of Snyder; and a grandmother, Edna Sharp of Snyder.

Deliberations Begin In Ax Murder Trial Today

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Jurors began deliberations today in the sensational ax murder trial of housewife Candace Montgomery, 30, charged with killing a friend by hacking her 41 times with a 3-foot ax.

In closing arguments today, Mrs. Montgomery's lead defense attorney tried to convince the jury that she was obeying "natural law" when she killed Betty Gore in the ax attack June 13, at the Gore home in nearby Wylie.

Defense lawyer Don Crowder argued that the jury should acquit the defendant of the murder charge. Crowder made reference to Mrs. Montgomery's claim that she killed Betty Gore in self-defense after Mrs. Gore initiated the attack.

"There won't be a day in the life of Candace Montgomery that she won't remember she committed this act," Crowder told jurors.

"Don't rob this woman," he pleaded. "Don't rob this husband and wife."

"When Betty Gore came at Candy Montgomery, she was no longer a human being — she was an animal," he continued, arguing that if the jurors acquitted Mrs. Montgomery, they would be "acknowledging natural law... confirming and recognizing that deadly force must be met with deadly force."

Attorney Tom O'Connell based his case largely on the affair and circumstantial evidence linking her to the Gore's Wylie home.

O'Connell has pointed out that Mrs. Montgomery did not leave the Gore home after knocking out Mrs. Gore and that she admitted the slaying only after a bloody fingerprint was identified as hers.

He also produced witnesses who portrayed the victim as a calm, quiet woman who had no violent tendencies. Defense witnesses characterized Mrs. Gore as stand-offish, difficult to get along with and subject to depression.

Defense attorneys attribute the savagery of the slaying — in which the 5-foot-6 former schoolteacher was struck 41 times — to a "disassociative reaction" that caused Mrs. Montgomery to become detached from reality.

Crowder maintains his client could not have planned the assault on Mrs. Gore because she told friends where she was going before she went to the Gore home the day of the slaying.

3rd Suspect Arrested In Theft Case

Another person has been arrested in connection with the $60 theft reported last week by Jean Long, bringing to three the number of persons taken into custody.

The latest person arrested was a 26-year-old man. He was arrested about 5:30 p. m. yesterday in the 3200 block of Ave. L. Previously, two women had been arrested.

A theft and minor traffic accident were also among the items investigated yesterday.

The theft was reported at the post office and involved a newspaper rack that had been stolen. Value of the rack, plus the coins it contained, was pegged at $76. Working it was Sgt. Jerry Parker.

BIRTHS

June and Chad Rains, Key Trailer Park, are the parents of a 6 lb. 10 oz. baby girl, Chassity April, born at 6:57 p. m. Oct. 27 at Malone-Hogan Hospital in Big Spring.

Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Rains, 2806 36th, while maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. C. Z. Lankford, 116 Canyon.

Charges Filed

In K-Bob Case

Burglary charges have been filed against Freddy Lee Harris, 1105 33rd St., and Charles Arthur McClain, 1101 34th St.

The two are alleged to have burglarized K-Bob's Steakhouse Oct. 7.

Texas Politicians Say Debate's Effect Small

DALLAS (AP) — President Jimmy Carter and Republican challenger Ronald Reagan offered a clear choice, but their televised debate will not sway many voters in next week's general election, according to three prominent Texas politicians.

"I would venture to say that about 99 percent of those who watched the debate have already made up their minds, and those who haven't by now probably won't vote," former Gov. John B. Connally told The Associated Press in Houston.

"I don't think that there is that many (undecided voters).... at least not in Texas. I think a lot of people in Texas just don't think it is anybody's business how they are going to vote. That's always been a tradition in this state," Democratic National Chairman John White said in an interview televised by WFAA-TV in Dallas.

Gov. Bill Clements, Reagan's Texas campaign chairman, also doubted Tuesday's face-to-face confrontation would sway the course of the election.

"I think most people pretty much had their minds made up.... I don't think this is going to change a lot of people's minds here in Texas," Clements said in the televised interview Tuesday night.

highlights

CLEVELAND (AP) — Here are the highlights of the debate between President Carter and Ronald Reagan:

WAR AND PEACE

REAGAN: "To maintain... peace requires strength. America has never gotten into a war because we were too strong. We can get into a war by letting events get out of hand as they have in the last 3½ years."

CARTER: "Habitually, Governor Reagan has advocated the injection of military forces into troubled areas when I and my predecessors... have advocated resolving those troubles peacefully and diplomatically."

ENERGY

CARTER: "He (Reagan) wants to put all our eggs into one basket and give that basket to the oil companies."

REAGAN: "I just believe private enterprise can do a better job" of spurring energy development. "I'm suggesting there are literally thousands of unnecessary regulations.... I would like to see us a little more free, as we once were."

SALT TREATY

CARTER: "When a man who hopes to be president says, 'Take this treaty, discard it... do not finally capitalize on this long negotiation,' that is a very dangerous and disturbing thing."

REAGAN: "We have been out-negotiated for some time." He said his call for reopening negotiations with the Soviet Union was "hardly throwing away a treaty and being opposed to arms control."

SOCIAL SECURITY

CARTER: "As long as there is a Democratic president in the White House, we will have a strong and viable Social Security system free of the threat of bankruptcy."

REAGAN: "The Social Security system was based on a false premise with regard to how fast... the number of retirees would increase. It is actuarially out of balance... trillions of dollars out of balance."

THE FUTURE

CARTER: "Our nation, to stay strong, to stay at peace, to raise high the banner of human rights, to set an example for the rest of the world... is my plan for the future."

REAGAN: "This country doesn't have to be in the shape that it is in... I would like to have a crusade today... to take government off the backs of the great people of this country."

Amarillo Man

Hurt In Mishap

Charles Hassell of Amarillo, injured in an auto accident about five miles north of town on Highway 84 yesterday, has been transferred to Methodist Hospital in Lubbock.

Making the transfer was Palmer EMS, which reported the call on the wreck was received about 2:15 p. m.

Hassell sustained head injuries in the accident.

Adolf Hitler wrote "Mein Kampf" in Landsberg prison in 1923 after he was imprisoned for leading the Munich Beer Hall Putsch.

I SHOULD'VE VOTED.

You know that's what you're going to say if your candidate doesn't win.

Dear Abby

Good Loving a Matter Of Interest, Not Age

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You have stated repeatedly that men can be sexually active at 80, and I wish you would cut it out! You are wrong, but you seem to have an obsession about this subject.

I am an honest 60-year-old man who begs to differ with you. A man is no stud at 60. In fact, most men are on the decline starting at about 40. Some even before that. I suppose there are a few exceptions, but very darned few. The men who write to you saying they are just as good at 70 as they were at 30 are either lying or kidding themselves.

The next time you consult a gerontologist, please pick an honest one and make sure he's informed on sexology.

The cemeteries are full of men who tried to prove they were just as good lovers at 60 as they were at 30. Thank you.

SIXTY AND NO STUD

DEAR SIXTY: I did say that men can be sexually active at 80, which is true. Much depends on their attitude, the state of their general health, and whether they have an interesting and interested partner.

I did not say that all men are just as good lovers at 60 as they were at 30. All are not. Some are better!

DEAR ABBY: The letter asking whether marriage between a Republican and Democrat could ever work interested me because my marriage was also "mixed." My husband was a devout Republican and I a dedicated Democrat.

Every election day we'd both go off to the polls and cancel out each other's vote. We talked about it, argued about it and even laughed about it. In spite of our political differences, we had a wonderful 40-year marriage.

He's been dead for three years, and I'm certainly going to miss him this November.

VOTING FOR CARTER

DEAR VOTING: So will Mr. Reagan!

...

DEAR ABBY: After a miserable marriage and traumatic divorce, I married a woman so wonderful that it made everything that had occurred previously seem like a bad dream from which I had finally awakened. She has given me faith in myself, joy beyond description, inspiration, and the kind of love I thought existed only in romantic novels. My two little ones (I have custody) adore her as she does them.

Paradise, right? Wrong! She has one habit that drives me up a wall. She is NEVER on time for anything. If she says "a few minutes," it can mean an hour. An hour can mean three.

Abby, I cannot count on her to be on time for anything. Nor can anyone else. She is always behind and running late. It is an exasperating fly-in-the-ointment of what would otherwise be a union made in heaven. Can you, or any of your experts, suggest a cure?

BEWILDERED IN BUCKS COUNTY

DEAR BEWILDERED: Not unless the lady wants to be cured. By your own account, she has five virtues and only one fault — exasperating as it may be. Many "unions made in heaven" have worse tradeoffs. Nag her — but count your blessings instead of the minutes.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ARIES IN ASHTABULA, OHIO: It may sound shocking, but I believe it's possible to love several individuals at the same time with nearly equal tenderness, and we need not lie to assure each of our passion.

Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Man Arrested In Jordan Shooting

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A man wanted for questioning in the shooting of Urban league President Vernon Jordan Jr. and the killings of two black men in Salt Lake City was arrested in a blood bank in Lakeland, Fla., the FBI said Tuesday night.

In a statement released in Washington, the FBI said Joseph Paul Franklin, 30, was arrested on the basis of a warrant involving the Salt Lake City slayings.

FBI spokesman Otis Cox, in disclosing the arrest, said Franklin was also wanted for questioning in the wounding May 29 of Jordan in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Franklin is suspected of writing a threatening letter to President Carter and the arrest came three days before Carter was to appear in Lakeland.

Jack Warner, a spokesman for the Secret Service in Washington, said a threatening letter received in 1976 by then-candidate Jimmy Carter was signed James Clayton Vaughn, one of the aliases Franklin used.

Warner said the Secret Service recently went to Salt Lake and determined the letter was from the same man being sought in the current case.

1st Phase Announced Today...

Bergland Explains Crop Insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland announced the first phase today of the expanded federal crop insurance program.

The law, signed a month ago by President Carter, will cover 250 counties in 31 states for the 1981 crop year, Bergland said. The areas were selected primarily on the basis of total acreage in wheat, feed grains, upland cotton and rice.

Bergland called a news conference in Kansas City to explain the program.

The program expands the number of crops and commodities which may be covered by federal crop insurance and makes crop insurance available for 75 percent of the farmer's average yield. The coverage will be extended to all major agricultural areas in the nation within five years.

"It marks a significant step toward providing farmers the opportunity to protect their large investments in crop production against uncontrollable risks," Bergland said. "It does what our ad hoc federal disaster programs have not done."

Bergland has said the disaster relief program is inadequate because it delivers too little money to too few farmers and often too late to be of maximum help.

"This year farmers suffered crop losses from drought, not unlike other years," Bergland said. "But the difference is that today a single total loss can be devastating."

He emphasized that the government will have to educate farmers on the advantages of the new program. In the meantime, the disaster payments will remain available throughout the nation for the 1981 growing season for wheat, feed grains, upland cotton and rice.

"Our job has only begun," Bergland said. "The task before us is to reach farmers with factual information on the substantial benefits of federal all-risk crop insurance."

The new program will permit farmers to select the price level used to determine payments on lost production. It will also allow them to buy hail and fire coverage from private companies and receive a premium reduction or subsidy from the government.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation in the Agriculture Department will reinsure policies issued by private insurers and will allow the sale of federal crop insurance through private agents and brokers. Private brokers would be reimbursed for their expenses in administering the policies.

The new program also authorizes federal subsidies of the first 30 percent of a farmer's premium for coverage up to 65 percent of the farmer's average yield.

Bergland said the expanded insurance program will lead to a greater number of locations to permit the farmer to select either a federal or private insurance agent to service the policy.

For the first time, he said, there will be a local delivery system for federal crop insurance.

Events For Sr. Citizens

Senior citizens can visit Dracula's Den and Gypsy Rose Fortune Teller Thursday night at the Senior Center's Halloween party.

"We would like for everyone to come in costume," Gloria Shaw, center director, said. "We'll be giving a total of six prizes for the best costumes, three for women and three for men, so we want everyone to get in the spirit of the evening and put together some really unusual costumes."

The party will begin at 6:30 p. m. There will be a variety of games, including a candy corn relay, and some surprise attractions. Refreshments will be served in keeping with the Halloween theme.

The Senior Center is located at 2603 Ave. M and all county residents 60 years of age and older are invited to participate in the activities there.
