Economists foresee slower growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. economic growth will slow dramatically next year, reflecting weaker consumer spending and rising inflationary pressures, economists for the country's major corporations predicted today.

Members of the National Association of Business Economists said President-elect George Bush should make reducing the budget deficit his No. 1 priority but their gloomy assessment of the economy, if it comes true, would make that job much more difficult.

Two out of five economists surveyed said the country probably will be in a recession by this time next year and an overwhelming 88 percent predicted that the next downturn will arrive before the end of 1990.

"Our membership has been fairly consistent over the past year in holding to the belief that there will be a recession sometime in the 1989 or 1990 period," said Jay Woodworth, senior economist at Bankers Trust Co. of New York and president of the association.

The NABE economic outlook, based on responses from 200 of the group's members, was far more pessimistic on economic growth, interest rates and inflation than the assumptions the Reagan administration is using to prepare its final budget request to Congress.

Among the group's forecasts:

— The overall economy, as measured by the gross national product, will grow an anemic 2.2 percent next year. This compares to the administration's forecast of 3.5 percent GNP growth next year. Through the first nine months of 1988, the economy has been expanding at an annual rate of 3 percent.

— Consumer prices, which have been rising at a 4.6 percent annual rate so far this year, will climb by 5 percent next year. The administration is looking for inflation to increase just 3.7 percent in 1989.

— Interest rates, which have been rising, will probably peak in the first half of 1989, responding to further credit tightening on the part of the Federal Reserve, as the central bank moves to dampen inflationary pressures. Thirty-year bonds will average 9.5 percent next year, up from 9 percent this year.

Governors Island apt site for meeting

NEW YORK (AP) — Governors Island is an apt setting for a meeting between the leaders of the world's nuclear rivals — it bristles with fortifications never tested.

Two years ago the island was the epicenter of the spectacular Liberty Weekend celebration, and on Wednesday it will be the scene of a meeting between Mikhail Gorbachev, Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

Having survived the Statue of Liberty rededication, Governors Island is one of the few places on the planet that can regard the prospect of a superpower meeting with equanimity.

With its late-night construction and rehearsals, its parking shortages, and its general confusion, "the Statue of Liberty (celebration) was a pain," Heidi Balsamo, an island resident, said last week. "At least this can't be that bad."

Harry Apicos, principal of Pubic School 26 on the island, hoped not: "A lot of people here don't want anything like that again.

"My own school was adversely affected," he added. "The White House press corps was here."

Located just off Manhattan's southern tip in New York Harbor, the 173-acre island is one of the nation's oldest military installations and has been a Coast Guard base since 1966.

Over three centuries, Governors Island also has served as a quarantine station and a recruiting depot, a summer resort and a prison, an air field and a race track, a pheasant preserve and a sheep farm. Until the Coast Guard arrived, it was an Army base.

Purchased from Indians by the Dutch in 1634, the island's name stems from an act of the New York Assembly in 1698 which set it aside "for the benefit and accommodation of His Majesty's Governors."

The 1708 brick manor house where the colonial governors lived is the oldest building on the island, one of five on the National Register of Historic Places.

By the beginning of this century, harbor tides had washed away about 100 of the island's 170 acres. Sand dredged from the harbor's channels and rock excavated from subway construction were used to restore the island to roughly its original size.

Historic buildings include Fort Jay, a star-shaped fortress built in 1798; Castle Williams, which, along with a similar fort on Manhattan's Battery, controlled the approach to the East River and discouraged a British attack on New York in the War of 1812; and the Admiral's House, an imposing brick home with front and rear columned porticos which housed the likes of Gens. Winfield Scott, John J. Pershing and Omar Bradley.

The island has had less successful residents, including hundreds of Confederate prisoners during the Civil War.

Today, Governors Island is the Coast Guard's largest installation, a base from which it conducts operations halfway across the Atlantic.

Despite its location in the midst of the nation's busiest harbor, a seven-minute ferry ride from Wall Street, Governors Island is also a sleepy service town of 4,000 residents, some of whom don't bother to lock their doors.

The island is open to the public for visits only two days a year, so Coast Guard personnel and their families have it all to themselves: the school, the bank and the only golf course with a Manhattan zip code.

The community center is the 16-lane bowling alley, which has its own Burger King — the only one in New York that serves beer.

"You can't have a bowling alley without beer," a base official once explained. "That's un-American."

A tape-recorded rendition of "The Star Spangled Banner" is piped across the island each morning to mark the raising of the colors, and each evening "Retreat" is sounded as the flag is lowered.

Despite the martial atmosphere, the island has never seen combat, and each spring flowers sprout from the ground at the base of Fort Jay's cannons.

Sniper attack fourth on Rio Grande in past 3 years

LAJITAS, Texas (AP) — The shooting attack on a rafting party on the Rio Grande last month brought attention to similar assaults over the past three years.

Little notice was taken, authorities said, of three sniping attacks preceding the shooting of three Rio Grande rafters that left 40-year-old Mike Heffley of Grande Prairie dead.

Heffley's wife, Jamie, and their guide, Jim Burr, were wounded by snipers firing from the Mexican side of the river on Nov. 19.

Visitors to the Big Bend area for rafting trips usually are advised on the etiquette of floating down a river with international banks.

"We tell them that they are guests of the people who live here and they (local residents) should be treated respectfully," said one official with Outward Bound, which operates rafting trips.

But warnings had not been volunteered by law enforcement agencies or the four rafting outfits operating along the border.

"They (the rafting outfits) normally hear about it (the shooting) in Lajitas before we do," said Sherriff Rick Thompson of Persidio County. "We don't make any special effort to notify them."

Authorities held four teen-agers in connection with the Nov. 19 shootings. One was being held in the Presidio County Jail in Marfa on a murder charge; the three other suspects remain in Mexico.

The earlier attacks appear to be isolated incidents, said tourism spokesmen.

Unknown assailants shot at two Odessa couples with eight children last spring and family members said they reported the shootings to police.

Former Ector deputy wants state to investigate judge

ODESSA (AP) — A judge who dismissed a drug case against the son of a top savings and loan executive shortly after receiving a $131,000 low-interest loan from the thrift denies it was a bribe, but a former sheriff's deputy wants a state investigation into the matter.

Samuel T. Cobb, a former Ector County deputy who was one of the officers involved in the 1984 drug arrest of Odessa real estate broker Tim David Baum, claims an earlier investigation into the case was incomplete.

But Judge Joseph Connally of the 224th District denies any impropriety, saying a federal grand jury looked into the allegation in 1985 and found no wrongdoing.

"That case was thoroughly looked into by the FBI," Connally said. "The FBI looked into that and every other aspect of my life."

But Cobb, in a complaint filed last week with the state Commission on Judicial Conduct, said he was told by superiors at the sheriff's office not to cooperate with federal investigators.

Cobb alleged in his complaint that one superior told him the drug case "had been fixed."

The commission, based in Austin, has received Cobb's complaint but has not yet begun an investigation, said Robert C. Flowers, agency director. He declined to comment on the allegation.

The agency is responsible for investigating complaints against judges and can take a variety of public or private disciplinary actions if wrongdoing is found.

Cobb worked at the Ector County Sheriff's Department from 1982 until he resigned last year. He alleges that Connally allowed Baum to get off by throwing out a search warrant deputies used when they arrested Baum on June 30, 1984.

Connally dismissed the case against Baum, then 24.

Ector County deed records show that on Oct. 1, 1984, Connally received a $131,000 home loan from Odessa Savings Association.

"We knew we'd been had, but we didn't know what we could do about it," Cobb said.

"The physical evidence speaks for itself. I think there's enough evidence to go with a case, and I don't think they (federal officials) did a very thorough investigation at all."

Cobb took the case to the Justice Department, which eventually won a federal misdemeanor conviction in a plea agreement with Baum.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., which monitors regional interest rates, said the 30-year mortgage was financed at 13 percent interest, more than a point below the area average mortgage interest rate in the Southwest for October 1984.

Connally said he considered the Baums "close friends" and said they had been next-door neighbors for several years. Although the judge conceded that the timing may make the loan appear improper, he said it wasn't a bribe and there was no wrongdoing.

Midlander accused of killing stepfather

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 17-year-old man who is accused of gunning down his stepfather on a Midland street acted less than two hours after he witnessed the stabbing of his mother, a police spokesman said early today.

Alandas Chambers Sr., 40, 501 S. Carver St., was shot about 11:35 p.m. Saturday as he stood near his car two blocks away at 701 S. Carver St. Witnesses at the scene told police they saw a pickup truck drive down the street, then slow and stop near Chambers' car.

A man then got out of the passenger side, aimed and fired four shots from a .22-caliber rifle at Chambers. Officers at the scene were given a description of the gunman.

Chambers was hit in the chest, leg and shoulder, and was taken to the Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room, where he was pronounced dead on arrival by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

Joseph Bernard Williams, 1322 E. Cuthbert Ave., was arrested at 12:45 p.m. Sunday. He was charged with murder and later released on $10,000 bond, White said.

The rifle has been recovered.

"The stepfather had been involved in a disturbance with the actor's mother earlier that evening," White said of results from a preliminary investigation.

According to a police report of that incident, police were called by Williams about 10:15 p.m. He told officers that Chambers and his wife, Lula Williams Chambers, were in a bedroom at 1322 E. Cuthbert Ave. when an argument erupted.

Williams witnessed part of the argument, the report said.

Ms. Chambers, 42, was stabbed in an arm with a pocket knife, and was treated at MMH and released. Chambers was questioned by police after the incident, but no charges were filed in connection with the stabbing.

After he was questioned, Chambers went to a friend's house on Carver Street, and had just left when the pickup truck turned onto the street, White said.

Ex-preacher calls Bakker bisexual

NEW YORK (AP) — A former television preacher says he told a grand jury he had sex with Jim Bakker three times and arranged the fateful tryst with church secretary Jessica Hahn at Bakker's urging, according to a magazine interview.

John Wesley Fletcher, who appeared on "The PTL Club" television program from the mid-1970s to 1981, described Bakker as a bisexual who openly lusted after the show's young male camera operators.

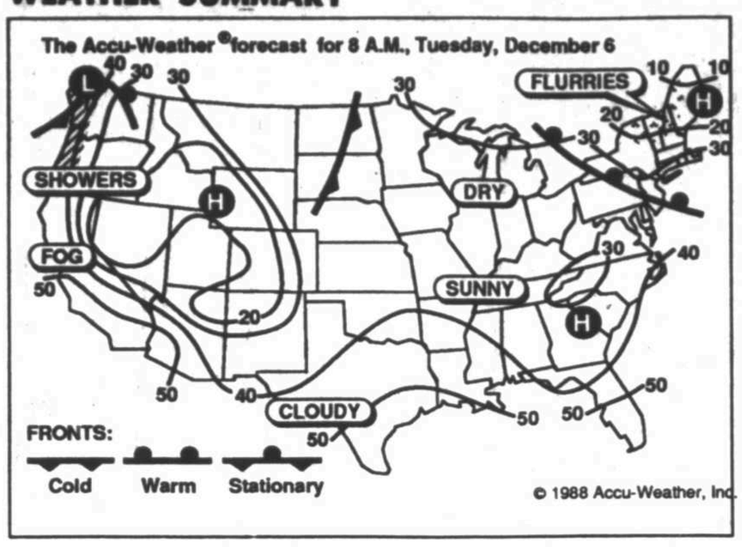

"I was Jim Bakker's male prostitute," he said in the interview for January's Penthouse magazine.

Fletcher is the second man to say publicly that he had sex with Bakker. In September, former PTL official Jay Babcock said he had told the grand jury of a sexual encounter with Bakker.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cloudy skies forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Mostly cloudy skies will dominate the weather for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the upper 30s, winds will be light and southerly.

Tuesday will be partly cloudy with the high in the lower 60s, south-southwesterly winds will blow from 5-15 mph.

Sunday's high of 55 was 30 degrees cooler than the record high of 85 set for that date in 1954. The overnight low of 27 was nine degrees warmer than the record low of 18 set for this date in 1950.

STATE

A high-pressure system over Texas today produced fair conditions across most of the state, with scattered rain in some central sections, and forecasters said a chance of precipitation remained later this week.

Skies were clear in North, East and West Texas, along with the lower Rio Grande Valley. An upper low-pressure in Southwest Texas brought mid- and upper-level clouds across most of South Texas.

The weather service said it should be fair in northern sections and most of the west, with partly cloudy conditions in the south and southwest through Tuesday. A slight chance of showers was forecast through Tuesday.

NATION

Fog blanketed the Pacific Northwest and snow fell in parts of New England, but skies were clear in much of the nation early today as a quiet weather pattern that has dominated the nation the last six days continued.

The main storm track ran northward along western Canada before dipping south across the upper Mississippi Valley and the mid-Atlantic region.

Once again dense fog was covering much of the Pacific Northwest and the central California valleys. The Boise, Idaho, Aiport was closed Sunday afternoon because of dense fog.

Today's forecast called for snow showers in the Great Lakes region. An upper air disturbance moving into the Pacific Northwest was expected to produce rain in western Washington state.

Much of the nation was to have fair skies because of a large area of high pressure over the south-central portion of the nation.

Foggy conditions were expected in valley areas of the northern and central Pacific Coast.

Testimony to begin in Railey suit

By MIKE COCHRAN

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas psychologist Lucy Papillon was expected to testify today in a civil suit stemming from a savage 1987 attack on the wife of former Dallas minister Walker Railey.

"Lucy will be there," vowed an attorney in the damage suit. "She has been ordered by the court to be there."

Ms. Papillon, 46, was identified as Railey's love interest last year after Peggy Railey was choked and left for dead in the garage of the couple's stylish Lake Highlands home.

Mrs. Railey, then 38, survived the April 1987 attack but was unable to identify her assailant. Doctors say she is in a "persistent vegetative state."

No criminal charges have been filed but Railey, 41, former senior minister of the mainstream First United Methodist Church, is the only known suspect in the bizarre case.

Railey denies trying to kill his wife and maintains he was involved in a research project at Southern Methodist University at the time of the attack.

Police and prosecutors say they can prove Railey lied about his activities that night but they concede there is no evidence linking him to the attempted murder.

Railey is believed to be living in California and is not expected to appear at today's proceedings.

"Unless he shows up at the last minute...I don't anticipate his being here," said Bill Arnold, the plaintiff attorney representing Mrs. Railey's family.

By previously refusing to respond to the lawsuit, Railey technically admitted the charges contained in the civil documents.

State District Judge John Whittington ruled last spring that Railey "intentionally, knowingly, maliciously and brutally attempted to strangle his wife" and cover up his actions with a "false alibi."

The judge held Railey financially liable for his wife's injuries and today's testimony is a prelude to a ruling on damages, which could total millions of dollars.

Arnold said he expected to call as many as 10 witnesses to explore past and future medical expenses, lost wages, mental anguish and physical pain, suffering, impairment and disfigurement.

The lawyer also is seeking punitive damages "to punish the defendant for his conduct and...to deter others from similar kinds of conduct."

Whatever the ruling, it will be largely symbolic. Railey claimed in an interview last February he was jobless and running out of money.

Arnold pointed out at the time that Railey found the money to rent a Victorian flat in San Francisco and to rendezvous with Ms. Papillon in Texas and California.

Ms. Papillon has not publicly discussed her relationship with Railey but reportedly told a grand jury last year they had been lovers since 1986.

Railey telephoned her twice the night his wife was attacked and later revealed that he spent perhaps 45 minutes at her home that same evening.

Ms. Papillon demonstrated her reluctance to testify early on, asking Whittington last May to quash a subpoena Arnold served on her at her Highland Park home.

She claimed the "harsh and adverse publicity" was damaging her personal and professional reputation.

Whittington denied the request.

"It is relevant...what the motivation of Walker Railey was when he did the acts he admitted he did," the judge said, referring to Railey's admission by default when he failed to respond to the lawsuit.

"A relationship with another woman would be germane to his motivation, so the inquiry is therefore appropriate."

Airmen participate in rescue of shuttle in simulated landing

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Airmen posing as incapacitated astronauts were rescued from a mock smoke-filled shuttle during a simulated landing for ground crews awaiting Atlantis' return from space.

"Our purpose is to make sure we're ready for the real thing — whenever it is," said Chuck Spern, who directed Sunday's exercise as shuttle recovery convoy commander for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

NASA and the Air Force said they would give 24 hours advance notice before Atlantis and its five-member crew end a secret military mission by touching down at this Mojave Desert base 80 miles north of Los Angeles.

The absence of such an announcement by late Sunday indicated the landing would occur no earlier than Tuesday, four days after the launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla. A list of landing-related tasks displayed during a briefing for Sunday's simulation said the actual landing would be four to seven days after the launch.

Sunday's mock landing was conducted as Atlantis' astronauts continued the classified flight with no word on whether they successfully deployed what is believed to be a $500 million radar satellite that will spy on Soviet bloc nations and guide the new B-2 stealth bomber.

The extra security for the shuttle mission was apparent during the simulation. The Air Force refused to let reporters and photographers accompany the recovery convoy. During a briefing before the exercise, convoy members were warned not to carry personal cameras and to keep radio chatter to a minimum.

About 130 members of the convoy slowly drove some two dozen vehicles onto the hard clay of Rogers Dry Lake as the landing exercise began. They were joined by 50 military police officers, although 250 will be on hand for the real landing, said Col. Rich Tillstrom, the Air Force's site commander.

A mysterious Defense Department vehicle accompanied the usual convoy vehicles: fire trucks, vans to transport astronauts and check for toxic and explosive gases, a trailer with a vapor-dispersing fan, the shuttle tow tug, and trucks to cool the shuttle and purge it of fumes.

Spern said only that the vehicle was unique to Atlantis' classified mission. Lt. Col. Jerry Guess, an Air Force spokesman, declined to identify the type of vehicle or its purpose.

About an hour after the convoy headed onto the lakebed, simulation participants were told the shuttle made a normal landing. A full-scale shuttle nose cone and crew module, hauled atop a truck, carried airmen portraying astronauts.

Then officials controlling the simulation declared a "mode six" emergency in which "there is smoke in the cabin and the crew is incapacitated — they can't see and are having trouble breathing," Spern said.

Air Force teams then rushed to the mock shuttle, extracted the fake astronauts, carried them on stretchers to a triage area 500 feet from the nose cone, pretended to provide emergency medical care and then loaded them on two helicopters for what would be a ride to a hospital.

"It's just practice," Tillstrom said. "We go through the same checklist and sequence of events we do for a landing, plus we take the opportunity to practice emergency procedures."

Weather forecasts in the Mojave appeared favorable for a landing, with Air Force meteorologists predicting high scattered clouds, light and variable wind, clear visibility and high temperatures in the 60s well into the week.

Crew members deploy satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The crew of space shuttle Atlantis successfully deployed a powerful radar satellite over the weekend, reportedly the chief goal of the clandestine military mission, knowledgeable sources said today.

The $500 million Lacrosse satellite reportedly was designed to gather extremely sharp all-weather images of Eastern Bloc military targets and would help American intelligence agencies monitor Soviet compliance with arms control treaties.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said the satellite was operating well as it followed a course that carries it over 80 percent of the Soviet Union.

As word about the satellite was reported, Atlantis' five astronauts were beginning the fourth day of their mission and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Air Force were keeping a tight lid on information about their activities.

SNIPER

But a copy of the report could not be located last week and arrests were not made.

Three years ago, according to rafting operator Steve Harris, co-owner of Far-Flung Adventures, a youth fired a .30-30 carbine at a rafting party.

A report was made to Mexican officials since the shooting occurred there and Harris said Mexican police told him they spoke to a suspect, but no arrests were made.

Eugene and Libby Burr said their son will leave his job on the river to recover from the shooting that left him with a thigh wound.

"Jim couldn't believe it was happening," Eugene Burr told the New Braunfels Herald-Zeitung. "The bullets were whizzing by...and then they hit him."

BAKKER

Fletcher said in the interview released Sunday that he related the sexual encounters to the federal grand jury investigating charges that Bakker, Bakker's wife, Tammy, and PTL aide David Taggart illegally spent contributions to the ministry on their lavish lifestyles.

The grand jury, meeting in Charlotte, N.C., apparently began deliberations today after a 16-month investigation.

Among other things, witnesses have said the jury also is investigating whether ministry funds were used to pay $364,000 in hush money to Ms. Hahn or to entice aides to grant Bakker homosexual favors. The jury has been examining allegations of wire, tax and mail fraud.

Federal prosecutors were in the panel's meeting room for nearly two hours this morning before returning to their offices and leaving the grand jury alone.

Bakker, the PTL founder, has denied in a sworn deposition that he ever had a homosexual relationship with anyone, and has denied charges of financial wrongdoing.

Two attorneys for Bakker, Jim Toms and Ryan Hovis, issued this statement Sunday in response to the Penthouse report:

"Sadly, some so-called journalists continue to exploit human tragedy by stories such as the one we now understand to be in Penthouse about Mr. Fletcher.

"He has lost his ministry and finances and recently has been hospitalized. We would not want to further add to his difficulties by commenting on the story, and simply point to where it is being published."

Toms has said he believes it is only a matter of time before the grand jury indicts Bakker.

Fletcher said he participated in homosexual activity with Bakker only reluctantly.

Fletcher said he related allegations about Bakker's sexual encounters to officials of the Assemblies of God before the Pentecostal denomination defrocked Bakker in May 1987.

Fletcher was removed from the Assemblies of God ministry in 1981 amid accusations of homosexual activity, the magazine said.

Penthouse reported that Fletcher's psychiatrist confirmed he spent a month in a hospital last spring recovering from a suicide attempt.

Fletcher blamed himself in the interview for setting off PTL's sex-and-hush money scandal by introducing Hahn to Bakker, even though he said he did so at Bakker's request. Hahn has charged that Bakker and Fletcher raped her in a Florida hotel room; Fletcher said in the interview that she willingly had sex.

Fletcher also charged that Bakker often threatened suicide to manipulate those around him and was cynical about fund-raising.

"Some of the little old ladies he called 'Grandma Grunts,' like here comes another pocketbook," Fletcher said.

ECONOMY

By contrast, the administration is looking for interest rates to drop by one-half percentage point.

The assumptions on the economy play a major role in determining the size of the federal budget deficit. Growth and inflation estimates affect the size of revenue predictions, and interest rate forecasts suggest how much the government will have to spend to finance the $2.6 trillion national debt.

The Reagan administration, using its far more optimistic assumptions, is projecting a federal deficit of $135 billion in the fiscal year that begins next October. That means the administration is likely to propose just $35 billion in deficit cuts in the budget it sends Congress on Jan. 9 to meet the deficit target of $100 billion called for in the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law.

However, Woodworth said the business economists believe the federal deficit will be much nearer the $155.1 billion run up in the current fiscal year, meaning that the task facing Bush to reduce the deficit without resorting to higher taxes will be more difficult.

In a survey on policy questions, the economists ranked cutting the budget deficit through a combination of lower spending and higher taxes as the most urgent policy action the Bush administration should take.

Bush has continued to reject calls for higher taxes, saying the deficit can be reduced through a flexible freeze, by which overall government growth would be held to the rate of inflation.

While the flexible freeze received support among some economists, it was also dismissed by a large number of analysts with 46 percent ranking it as their lowest priority.

Another pressing problem the economists said the Bush administration must quickly deal with will be how to handle bankrupt savings and loan institutions. Estimated costs of a government bailout range from $50 billion to $100 billion.

"Every month that the insolvent institutions are allowed to remain open generates another $1.5 billion in net losses that sooner or later will have to be funded by Washington," Woodworth said.

On other economic questions, the business economists predicted that consumer spending will grow by just 2 percent next year, after adjusting for inflation, the slowest increase since the current recovery began in late 1982.

Business investment, which shot up by an estimated 10.1 percent this year, will slow considerably next year as well to around 4.3 percent, they said.

The U.S. trade deficit, which is expected to narrow to $135 billion this year after hitting a record $170.1 billion last year, will improve by another $20 billion in 1989, the economists forecast.

The unemployment rate, which edged up to 5.4 percent in November, could creep up a bit further next year because of the expected sluggish growth. The economists forecast a jobless rate averaging 5.6 percent in 1989.

Ortega cancels trip to U.N. because limits placed on visit

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua said today he would not go to the United Nations this week because the United States failed to issue enough visas for his party and imposed unacceptable restrictions on his stay.

"I cannot accept these rules because the United States cannot decide when, how and with whom a chief of state can visit an international organization like the United Nations," Ortega said.

He complained that the United States should not require 15 days notice to approve the trip of a chief of state and his party to the United Nations.

Ortega said the Reagan administration refused to issue visas for half his party and also refused to issue visas for Nicaraguan journalists who wished to accompany him.

He also said the United States limited his travels to four boroughs of New York City. Ortega said this would prevent him from visiting the home of the Nicaraguan ambassador to the United Nations, who lives outside that area.

"The United States has violated international norms and its promises to the United Nations and has broken the principles of the United Nations," Ortega said.

He said that at the United Nations he had hoped to describe the extensive damage done in Nicaragua by Hurricane Joan and plead for international help.

Ortega said he also wanted to confer with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar about a new proposal for the United Nations to participate in verifiying a Central American peace accord.

Group offers foreign students different view of New York

By BETH J. HARPAZ

NEW YORK (AP) — There are plenty of people who are eager to show foreign students the Statue of Liberty, the Empire State Building and the Bronx Zoo. Metro-International offers another side of New York:

A shift working in a shelter for the homeless. A walking tour of Harlem. A ride on the subway with a transit police officer who offers advice on how to avoid muggers.

"Our approach is to help the students understand our society and all the things they're seeing," says executive director Stacey Klein. "We want them to understand how our society works — and also how it struggles."

Since 1977, when Metro-International was formed by foreign student advisers from seven schools, it has expanded to serve students from 60 colleges and universities in the New York area.

Not all activities involve New York's seamy side. Each week, 15 to 100 students sign up to do things such as tour the Pennsylvania Dutch country during Thanksgiving weekend or man water stations at the New York Marathon.

Metro-International also publishes a "Guide to Living in New York." According to this booklet, the subway can be "a very unpleasant and frightening experience." Driving a car in the city is "costly and exhausting." Manhattan residents are "without question the most smug city dwellers."

"My life in New York would have been completely different without this organization," says Dinyar Master, an architect who came from India six years ago to study at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn.

"Certain things one can do — one can go to the movies or an opera," he says, "But it's not the same as when somebody takes you around the back streets."

At a recent weekend workshop on the homeless, students worked in a soup kitchen, distributed sandwiches to the homeless in Grand Central Station, spent the night in a Quaker-run shelter on the Lower East Side and learned about the causes of homelessness.

Students such as Yvonne Kwong of Hong Kong, who is studying marketing at Pace University in Manhattan, say they are shocked to see people sleeping on the street in such a rich country. The workshop helped them understand "how come there's homelessness, because of the housing problem, and maybe they are alcoholics or mentally ill," says Kwong.

The workshop on the homeless is one of several that enlist the students as volunteers. In other such programs, students work as farmhands in upstate New York and speak about their native lands at public high schools.

Metro-International has a staff of just two: Klein and Andrea Nemetz. Its $150,000 annual budget is funded by corporations, foundations, the United States Information Agency and the council that supports Fulbright Scholars. Students are charged $3 to $5, plus transportation, for each event.

One of its most popular programs sends students into the homes of suburban families for a day or weekend visit.

"They help us get to know the American lifestyle, they take us to their homes, and I think that's important for foreigners," says Firdaus Djailani, an Indonesian pursuing a master's degree in business administration at St. John's University in Queens.

In a city that can be intensely lonely for a newcomer, Metro-International also gives foreign students an opportunity to socialize with each other.

"I think most Americans are friendly, but they don't have time to talk to us. They have their own lives and their own schedules," says Djailani.

In contrast, says Master, foreign students "all have a common background, so whatever problems we do have, we have a chance to share them."

Americans do play an important role in one program — a trip to Yankee Stadium. American "baseball buddies" sit next to the foreign students and explain the innings and outs.

Sweden toughens requirements for Soviet defectors

By ARTHUR MAX

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Sweden has toughened its requirements for granting asylum to Soviet defectors, acting on the Kremlin's word that the human rights' climate is improving.

So far as is known, the Swedes are the first in Western Europe to modify their refugee policy to adjust for glasnost, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of openness.

The Swedish Immigration Board has issued deportation orders against 10 Soviets asking to stay. The board held that they did not qualify as political refugees and that the risk has diminished they will be punished if they return home.

Until last spring, asylum requests were routinely granted, on the assumption that anyone who was sent back could be prosecuted for anti-Soviet behavior.

But now "the legal environment has changed" in the Soviet Union, said Bjorn Westin, an Immigration Board official, and Sweden now will judge each case on its merits.

All 10 of the Soviets ordered deported have appealed and are still in Sweden. While the 10 were turned down the Immigration Board approved about 80 other applications, officials said.

Westin said those who were refused "are not refugees. We don't turn away refugees."

He added that the board, after checking each case with the Swedish embassy in Moscow, was convinced that none would face reprisals.

"If that had been the case, we wouldn't turn them back."

Sweden, which has one of the most liberal refugee policies in Europe, gets more requests for asylum from Soviets than any other country on the continent.

Defectors often leave the Soviet Union with legal visas, then refuse to go back when their visas expire. Others reach the West after dramatic escapes. Last year a farm hand flew a crop duster airplane across the Baltic Sea and crashed near Sweden's Gotland island.

Among 18,000 or so people granted asylum in Sweden last year, 73 came from the Soviet Union, while other countries in Western Europe accepted fewer than 10 Soviets each.

The number of Soviets asking to stay in Sweden was expected to reach 120 by the end of this year, partly because Soviet authorities were allowing more people to travel abroad and were less careful to make sure they intended to come back, officials said.

Officials questioned in Spain, Greece, Italy, Denmark and Switzerland said the rules for Soviet citizens are no different from for any other country and have not changed in view of glasnost.

"Of course overall developments in the Soviet Union play a role, but we wouldn't go so far as to say that due to glasnost and perestroika (restructuring) the problem has been solved," said Heinz Schoeni, spokesman for Switzerland's refugee commissioner in Geneva.

Finland, which is the only non-communist country to share a long land border with the Soviet Union and has a "friendship pact" with the Kremlin, has handled the question of Soviet defectors delicately and usually in secret. Many reportedly have been turned away or quietly told to take the next ferry to Sweden.

Sweden's decision to scrutinize Soviet asylum seekers more carefully has caused consternation among Soviet emigres, who say they have less faith than the Swedish government in Soviet pledges of human rights reforms.

Ulo Ignatz, editor of an Estonian-language newspaper published in Stockholm, said those who return to the Soviet Union may not be imprisoned as before but may find their careers blocked or face other forms of harassment.

"The legislation has not been changed," Juris Kaza, a Stockholm-based freelance journalist specializing in the Baltic States, said of the Soviet pledges on human rights.

"The statute against anti-Soviet activity is still on the books. It's an arbitrary decision not to prosecute," he said.

Sweden's move also caught human rights groups by surprise.

"It's quite a new problem for us," said Jan Bolling, of the Swedish branch of the London-based Amnesty International.

"We can't say that from our point of view asylum seekers face less of a risk today. We have no such information."

Witness testifies Hamadi told him 'We kill Marines'

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Mohammed Ali Hamadi pointed a gun at the head of a U.S. serviceman during the 1985 TWA hijacking and said "We kill Marines," according to testimony at the confessed hijacker's trial today.

Kenneth Bowen, 26, a civil engineering student who was a hostage on the TWA jet, testified that Hamadi dragged him to the first-class section of the hijacked airliner to question him.

"Hamadi grabbed me by my hair and pulled me to the first-class section," Bowen testified. "He had a gun in his hand and asked me if I was a Marine.

"I said I was a sailor," Bowen said. "He said 'We kill Marines.' "

He said Hamadi spoke to him in broken English.

During the exchange, Bowen said, he and Hamadi "were face to face and he had the pistol pointed at my face saying 'you Marine, we kill Marine.' "

"He (Hamadi) indicated that if I didn't cooperate, he would shoot me," Bowen said.

Bowen told the court he was a member of a team of U.S. Navy divers traveling aboard the Athens-to-Rome flight when it was hijacked in June 1985. He said he had been a close friend of Robert Stethem, the Navy diver who was shot and killed by one of the hijackers.

Previous witnesses have testified that the hijackers apparently mistook the divers for U.S. Marines.

Stethem was the only fatality during the ordeal, during which 39 Americans were held hostage for 17 days.

Hamadi has admitted taking part in the hijacking, but has denied shooting Stethem. He is being tried on murder and air piracy charges in a heavily guarded Frankfurt courtroom.

Choking back tears, Bowen described the events surrounding Stethem's murder.

"I heard some commotion in the front of the plane. I thought I heard a door open. There was a muffled shot and sounds of a person moaning," Bowen said. He said he did not see who shot Stethem.

Bowen, who was discharged from active Navy service in 1985, also told the court he believed Hamadi was the leader of the hijackers.

"Hamadi had the gun most of the time and he made most of the decisions," Bowen said.

Under court guidelines to protect witnesses, Bowen was not asked to give his current residence. Court records indicate that at the time of the hijacking, his address was listed as St. Petersburg, Fla.

Hamadi was arrested at Frankfurt Airport in January 1987 after customs officials found liquid explosives in his luggage.

His older brother, Abbas Ali Hamadi, is serving a 13-year prison sentence in West Germany after being convicted of helping to kidnap two West Germans in Beirut in an effort to win release of his brother.

The West German hostages have since been released.

Argentine government claims victory

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The government claimed victory in a four-day military revolt after hundreds of civilians pelted rebel troops with rocks and bottles and the renegade leader surrendered. Four people were reported killed.

Despite the arrest of their leader, Col. Mohamed Ali Seineldin, the rebels refused to concede defeat Sunday after the melee at their headquarters, the huge Campo de Mayo army base outside the capital.

"We don't use the word 'surrender;' we use the term 'negotiation,' " said one of Seineldin's followers, Maj. Luis Alberto Brun, in an interview with the independent news agency Noticias Argentinas.

President Raul Alfonsin insisted that no rebel demands had been met in obtaining an end to the third such insurrection in 18 months.

"This has been a really important success," he told reporters. "There were no concessions of any kind."

More than 40 civilians and police were hospitalized with wounds from rubber and real bullets fired by rebels on Sunday after loyalist troops withdrew from Camp de Mayo and rock- and bottle-throwing demonstrators surged forward.

Rebels fired from inside the arsenal and from two cars that sped from the scene, the government news agency Telam reported.

The army announced later that Seineldin had given himself up for arrest and that his 500 followers agreed to put down their weapons and explosives.

The rebels had demanded an end to the prosecution of officers for human rights abuses during the military dictatorships from 1976 to 1983; amnesty for officers already convicted; and better military pay and equipment.

Some of them stayed at Campo de Mayo and at another military installation at Mercedes, 60 miles west of Buenos Aires, through the night. Brun said they were being allowed to return to their regiments.

"We are going to return to absolute normality," he said. "Absolute normality means reintegration" back into the ranks.

One government military officer, Gen. Adolfo Patricio Etcheun, said he and his men agreed with Seineldin's demands that loyalist troops not take up arms against the rebels.

The reason for the surrender was unclear.

Seineldin gave himself up after meeting with army chief Lt. Gen. Jose Dante Caridi, and the Noticias Argentinas and Diarios y Noticias news agencies said Caridi had agreed to a rebel demand that he resign.

Alfonsin denied this.

Noticias Argentinas quoted a military source it did not identify as saying the uprising was broken because rebels "lacked the will to fire on their comrades, and that lack of willpower existed on the part of Gen. Caridi, too."

Three civilians and a policeman were killed in Sunday's clash, Radio Rivadavia reported.

On Friday, four soldiers and a 19-year-old woman walking near Campo de Mayo were wounded in exchanges of gunfire between loyal troops and rebels.

Seineldin was being held at army headquarters in downtown Buenos Aires.

The rebels' demands spurred similar military uprisings in April 1987 and January 1988.

Etcheun, commander of the 4th Infantry Paratroop Brigade, said the demands "are like mine and most of the army." From his base in Cordoba, Argentina's third-largest city, Etcheun stressed he did not endorse the rebellion. But when his troops were needed by the government, his response was: "No element of the 4th Brigade will take part in the repression" of the insurrection.

Most Argentines were happy that what they perceived to be a threat to their five-year-old democracy had been overcome.

"Democracy Triumphed," said a message flashed across the screen by the five TV stations that had been broadcasting simultaneous news of the revolt for nearly 24 hours.

Tens of thousands of people had gathered in plazas throughout the country to demonstrate their opposition to the insurrection, if not their support for Alfonsin.

The leader of the opposition Peronist Party in the Senate, Eduardo Menem, requested that Defense Minister Horacio Jaunarena brief legislators on exactly how the revolt was overcome.

"We should congratulate ourselves on how things turned out," presidential candidate Alvaro Alsogaray of the third-party Union of the Democratic Center. "It could have been a tragic blood-letting."

The insurrection was reported to have been triggered by the planned resumption of trials of military officers implicated in a wave of officially sanctioned terror during the grim years of junta-run military dictatorships.

A commission appointed by Alfonsin said nearly 9,000 Argentines were arrested by security forces and presumed killed.

Commuter train driver misses signal to stop, slams into another train

TOKYO (AP) — A commuter train whose driver apparently missed a stop signal slammed into the back of another train in Tokyo today, killing two people and injuring 92, police and railway authorities said.

Shuichiro Yamanouchi, vice president of Japan Railways, apologized for the crash in an emergency press conference shortly after the accident.

Yamanouchi said 28-year-old Teruki Hirano, who was driving the commuter train, might have missed a signal before plowing into the back of a train stopped at a station, said a Japan Railways official.

Hirano and Yoji Abo, 31, a resident of Tokyo, were killed in the collision which occurred at about 9:40 a.m., police said. They said two of the 92 injured were in critical condition.

The accident occurred at the Higashi-Nakano Station on the Sobu Line in western Tokyo.

The impact crushed parts of two cars and derailed several cars. About 10 fire department rescue teams worked to free people from the crushed cars. News reports said at least 600 people were on the two trains.

Surviving passengers said there was a huge crash and they were thrown to the floor.

"The train was lifted up quite a bit and seats were broken and thrown all over in the train," said an unidentified man in a television interview.

The railway official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said traffic signals on the train line are controlled automatically to signal approaching trains to stop when passengers are boarding and disembarking trains ahead.

He said all JR trains are connected to the system, which can also sound a buzzer to warn drivers that a train is blocking the line ahead.

The buzzer, however, can be switched off by the driver so it doesn't sound. In metropolitan Tokyo, drivers usually turn off the buzzer system for smoother service during rush hours, the JR official said.

It was possible that Hirano either missed the red light or had his buzzer system off, the official said.

News reports said westbound trains were running about 10 minutes behind schedule when the approaching train rammed into the rear of the other westbound train.

Keiko Uehara, who runs a bookstore near Higashi-Nakano station, said the crash made such a noise that "I thought a building had fallen down."

Tokyo police launched an investigation of the accident and began questioning the driver of the rammed train as well as conductors of both trains, police said.

The accident was the first involving injuries on Tokyo commuter trains since March 1986, when about 60 people were hurt in a two-train collision.

The last previous accident involving fatalities was in December 1984 when a train driver was killed and at least 120 people were injured in a head-on collision.

Elephants seem to mourn death

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — For two days, a herd of elephants nursed a wounded elephant calf after nudging him along the road to the nearest human protection in the forests of eastern India, United News of India reported Sunday.

It took the elephants six hours to cover the two miles to a forest rangers' office. The staff administered first aid to the 2-year-old calf, but he later succumbed to head wounds inflicted by a tiger.

Tears rolled out of the mother elephant's eyes as the rest of the herd formed a circle, raised their trunks and trumpeted over the body.

UNI said the talerelated by S.G. Ochi, project manager of forest development in Simlipal National Park, 140 miles west of Calcutta.

Ochi said the herd of about 25 elephants apparently was grazing in a grasslands about two 2 miles from the rangers' office when a tiger tried to seize the calf.

The elephants apparently thought the proximity of people would keep the tiger from returning for the kill, UNI said.

According to the report, as the midday sun shone down and the heat grew intense, most of the herd sought shelter under some trees 300 feet away. The mother left her calf in search of water.

The rangers took advantage of the herd's temporary absence to wash the calf's wound and apply ointment.

Then the mother returned, chasing away the rangers. She sprayed water on the calf to cool him and kept vigil, with the rest of the herd, until he died the following day.

The herd again disappeared, and the staff buried the calf.

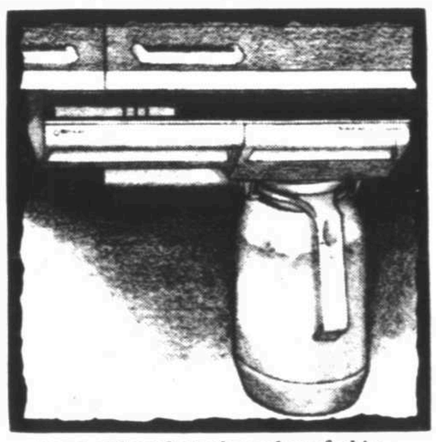

For the next two nights the herd returned and thumped the loose earth covering the calf's body.

The British Charge D'Affaires, Gordon Andrew Pirie, raises the British flag during ceremonies Sunday marking the reopening of the British embassy in Tehran, Iran.

British diplomats return to Tehran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The Union Jack flew over the British Embassy in Tehran on Sunday after an eight-year absence, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

The British flag was raised in a ceremony marking the return of British diplomats to the building after full diplomatic relations between Iran and Britain were restored last month.

Swedish diplomats had looked after British interests in Iran since the embassy was closed after the Iranian takeover of the U.S. Embassy in 1979.

Relations were all but ruptured ... year when an Iranian diplomat was arrested in Britain on shoplifting charges and a British envoy in Tehran was detained.

IRNA, monitored in Nicosia, quoted Charge d'Affairs Gordon Pirie as saying the two countries will exchange ambassadors next year.

Orwell script to be sold

LONDON (AP) — A 13-year-old boy who tucked away the script of a school play written by his teacher unwittingly preserved the only known copy of a drama by author George Orwell, the Sunday Times reported.

The short historical drama, titled "King Charles II," about the king's flight to France after his father's execution will be auctioned by Sotheby's in London on Dec. 15, the weekly said. Sotheby's estimates the play will fetch between $2,775 and $3,700.

Orwell wrote the play while teaching at the private Hawthorns high school in Hayes outside London in 1932, the year before he changed his name from Eric Blair with the publication of his first book, "Down and Out in Paris and London."

Geoffrey Stevens, a retired construction merchant, told the newspaper it was not until many years later that he realized his teacher at Hawthorns was the famous author of "Animal Farm" and "1984" and that he had pocketed a literary treasure.

"He was Mr. Blair and that was how we knew him," Stevens was quoted as saying. "Of course, I had heard of George Orwell much later. I just never realized they were one and the same until I was reading an article about him and saw his photograph.

The school play idea was used in Orwell's second novel, "A Clergyman's Daughter," the newspaper said.

Boat capsizes; 2 men lost

DOVER, England (AP) — A dredger capsized and sank in stormy seas off the Belgian coast early today, and two of the 10 crew members were killed and another two were missing, the coast guard said.

Six crew members were rescued and taken to hospitals in Belgium, a Dover coast guard spokesman said. It was not immediately known if any of them was injured.

The Cardiff, Wales-registered Bowsprite turned back in rough weather from a trip to the Belgian port of Nieuwpoort and was heading for the English coast when it capsized about 25 miles west of Zeebrugge, Belgium, the spokesman said.

The spokesman, speaking on condition he not be identified, said a Mayday call was received shortly after midnight saying the vessel was breaking in half and that its crew was taking to life rafts.

The British minesweeper Upton, carrying out routine duties off the Belgian coast, took charge of a rescue operation involving a British military Sea King helicopter, two Belgian helicopters and a North Sea ferry, Pride of Bruges.

Rescuers picked up six survivors and the bodies of two men, the coast guard said.

Duarte still hospitalized

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador, who has liver cancer, was improving but still unable to eat after three days in the hospital to treat an intestinal infection, his doctor said.

Duarte, 63, was hospitalized Thursday night. He had just attended the inauguration of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and met with Salinas and several other Latin American leaders.

Stomach X-rays taken Sunday "are very encouraging," said Dr. Jose Luis Saca, who accompanied Duarte on the trip. He said doctors might soon be able to give Duarte solid food if more tests show continued improvement.

Duarte, who in 1984 became his central American country's first democratically elected president in 50 years, was diagnosed in June with cancer in his stomach and liver. Most of his stomach was removed.

At the time, he was given between six and 18 months to live, but doctors said recently that his condition had improved remarkably in the past two months.

Chinese seize Bible books

HONG KONG (AP) — The head of an American missionary agency said Sunday that Chinese customs officials had confiscated thousands of Bible booklets he had planned to distribute in communist China.

Rev. Eddie Karnes, general director of World Harvesters, Inc., said the Bible booklets were seized Saturday when he and an American friend tried to enter China from Hong Kong as tourists.

Karnes said the officials threw the 2,500 leaflets into burlap bags, but later returned them when he decided not to enter China.

He said he had planned to go to the southern Chinese city of Canton, where he had distributed Bible booklets last week.

Karnes said he has sent a telegram to President Reagan and President-elect George Bush protesting what he called "Chinese religious apartheid."

The missionary said he would call for Christians worldwide to boycott Chinese goods.

World Harvesters, Inc. is a missionary agency based in Yelm, Wash.

Mine hit by explosion

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — An underground explosion ripped through a coal mine near Budapest on Sunday, killing 11 miners and injuring 28, Hungarian radio reported.

Rescue workers pulled out the victims from the Lencsehegy pit of the Orosziany mine near the town of Dorog, located between Budapest and Komarom, the broadcast said.

Laszlo Paszternak, a delegate at a trade union congress in Budapest, said 50 workers were in the shaft at the time of the explosion.

The injured miners were taken to nearby hospitals and four were reported in serious condition from burn wounds.

The accident occurred after dynamite blasting at the mine, the report said. The cause of the accident was not known.

Nicaragua theater reopens

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, (AP) — The nation's leading theater reopened, thanks to a $1.5 million donation from the Swedish government, with a performance by a Swedish troupe directed by the daughter of filmmaker Ingmar Bergman.

The Ruben Dario Theater, named for the country's most famous poet and inaugurated in 1969, had been closed for two years because of problems with its sound and air-conditioning systems.

Admision was free to Sunday's opening night show, which featured the collective Backa Theater, directed by Eva Bergman. In addition to the theater group, the program included a concert of Scandinavian music.

Ex-Venezuelan president wins election

Perez

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Carlos Andres Perez, who led a wealthy Venezuela during the oil boom of the 1970s, was re-elected president after 10 years out of office on a promise to return his debt-ridden country to prosperity.

Voters on Sunday remembered the good times rather than the scandal that almost had Perez impeached in his first administration.

The latest returns showed Perez, of the left-of-center Democratic Action Party, with 51.4 percent of the vote and Eduardo Fernandez of the Social Christian Party with 38.6 percent. The rest of the vote was shared by 20 minor party candidates.

The results did not represent all the votes cast, but the Electoral Council declared Perez the winner after early returns.

Perez campaigned with almost messianic fervor on his ability to revive the economy of this oil-producing nation despite a volatile oil market. A charismatic figure popular with the working class, Perez favors tighter state control over the economy, while Fernandez favors a freer market.

"This is the point of departure for building a bigger Venezuela. The next government must take advantage of our situation to form the bases for future growth," the president-elect said on national television.

Fernandez, 48, conceded defeat minutes after the first returns were announced.

Perez, 66, succeeds Jaime Lusinchi, also of the Democratic Action Party, as Venezuela's leader for the next five years.

The constitution limits presidents to a single five-year term, after which they must wait a decade before seeking re-election.

No official tallies were given on the outcome of voting for the all-new National Congress of 182 deputies and 44 senators, but private television networks projected the governing party would win 48.6 percent and the Social Christians 26.3 percent in both houses.

Perez first took office in 1974, the year after the Arab oil embargo sent oil prices soaring, and nationalized the country's oil industry.

Imports were cheap, Venezuelans spent millions of dollars traveling abroad, and employment figures increased as the government invested in steel, aluminum and hydroelectric projects.

But Perez was nearly impeached for his alleged involvement in receiving kickbacks in the public purchase of a refrigerator ship, the Sierra Nevada, and left office in disgrace despite his acquittal.

Perez admitted that this time around he faces hard times and possibly disapointing a population that believes in his power to reap prosperity.

Venezuela depends on oil for 90 percent of its export earnings and has seen those earnings slump dramatically in the last few years with the fall in oil prices.

Perez set as his first task renegotiating with reluctant foreign banks — mostly U.S. — the nation's $33 billion debt, the fourth-largest in Latin America after Brazil, Mexico and Argentina.

Perez believes he is the man to lead a Latin American drive to set new terms on the regional debt crisis, and he promised to meet other leaders on the continent to work out negotiations.

Some of Perez's aides say the president-elect wants to double Venezuela's repayment schedule from 14 to 30 years, at a fixed interest rate.

In addition, his aides say, he will look for new loans to paper over a balance of payments deficit estimated this year at more than $3 billion.

Venezuela paid out more than 60 percent of its foreign earnings for its debt this year. Perez said repayment of the debt under present circumstances is "obscene."

Getting new terms from creditors is crucial to Perez's plans to deal with poverty levels that have soared in the wake of the fall of oil prices at the beginning of the decade.

Half of Venezuelan workers earn less than 5,000 bolivars (a little more than $300) a month, according to the the Venezuelan Workers Confederation, one of Perez's political strongholds. The confederation says a family of five needs at least 6,000 bolivars monthly for food alone.

Almost half the population lives in sub-standard housing, mostly neighborhoods of cardboard and plywood shacks ringing major cities.

Officially, unemployment stands at 7 percent, although along with the underemployed, the figure rises to about 50 percent, according to the Workers Confederation.

Voting is mandatory in Venezuela, but private projections estimated that 15 percent of the 9 million eligible voters did not cast ballots. A high abstention rate was widely predicted because of general voter dissatisfaction with both major candidates.

Carlucci praises carrier crew for firefighting efforts

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci visited the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz and praised its crew for keeping last week's fire on the flight deck from turning into a major disaster, officials said.

Carlucci, on the second of a four-day swing through the Persian Gulf region, flew by helicopter Sunday from Oman to the nuclear-powered carrier off the coast in the Arabian Sea.

Earlier in the day, he visited two Omani military installations.

During several hours aboard the 90,944-ton carrier, Carlucci was shown the location of Wednesday's pre-dawn fire that killed two sailors and damaged seven aircraft.

In a videotaped message broadcast on the ship's closed-circuit system, he "praised the entire ship's efforts" in dealing with an emergency that could have been much worse, one official said.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, quoted Carlucci as saying safety drills and intensive training for emergencies enabled firefighters to contain the blaze within 20 minutes on a flight deck where many other aircraft were parked.

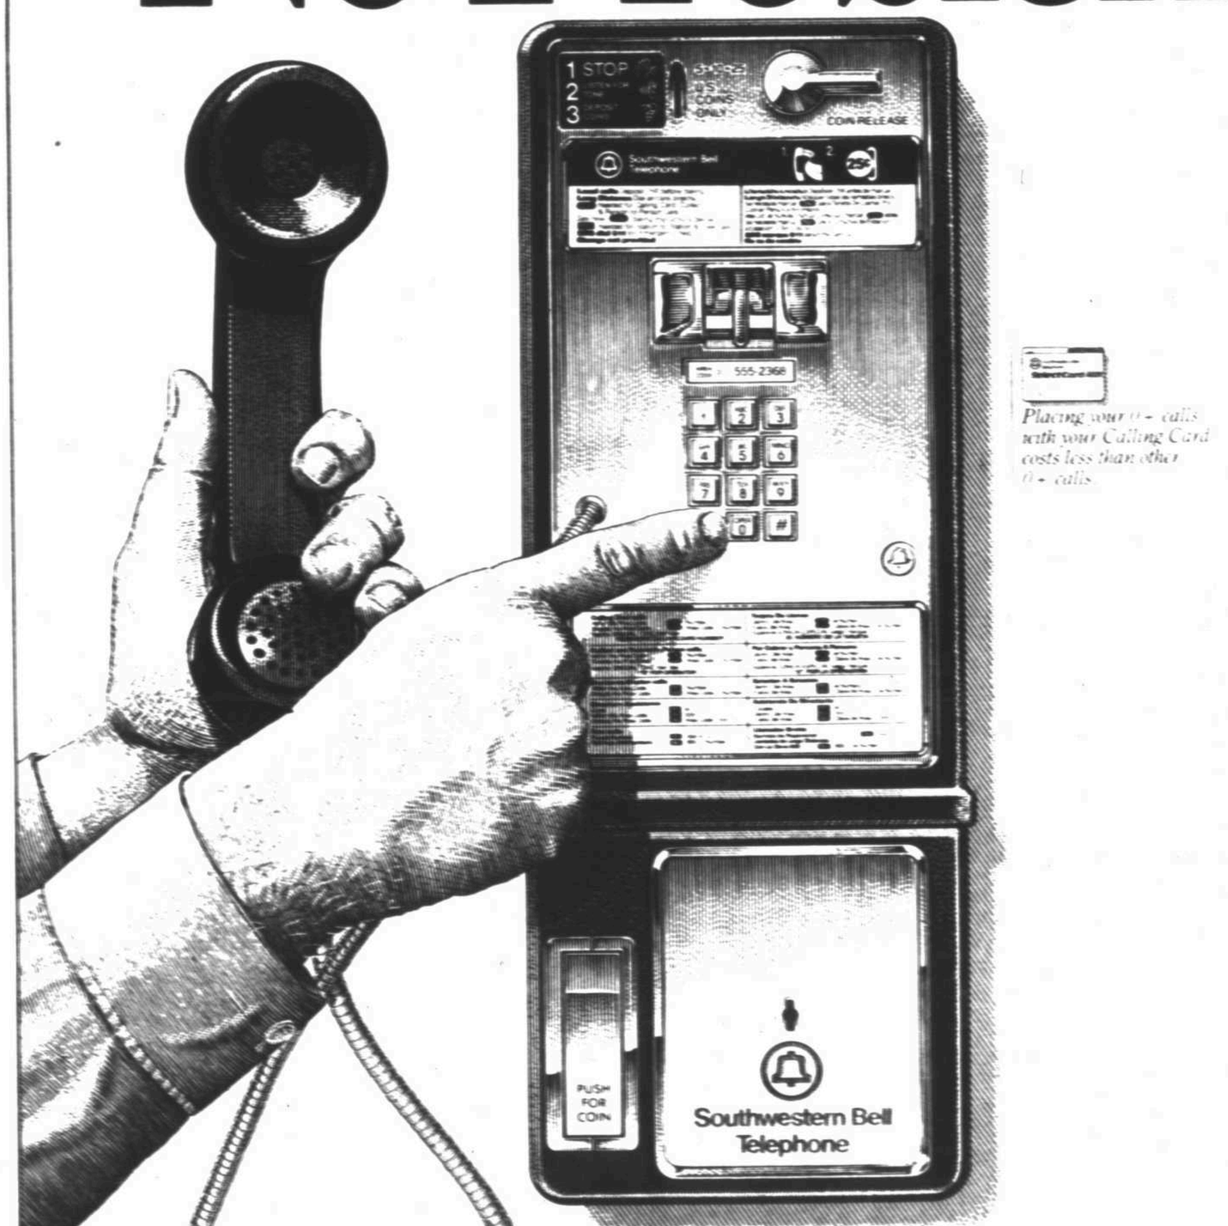

Investigators are still trying to determine why a 20mm gun on an A-7E Corsair fighter-bomber accidentally fired a burst during an overhaul, igniting a parked A-6D tanker plane.

One sailor was killed in the fire and a second died of burns on Friday in a U.S. military hospital in West Germany.

Carlucci's gulf itinerary also includes stops in Bahrain, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

U.S. officials say his tour is probably the last by a top Reagan administration official to the gulf, where the United States has over the past 18 months conducted its biggest naval operation since Vietnam.

Christmas spirit alive in Midland

The Christmas season is in full bloom in Midland — even if snow-covered fields and the sound of sleigh bells are nowhere to be found.

What's more, if that's the old-fashioned style of Christmas you long for, you may be disappointed, according to personnel at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Daytime temperatures have been climbing into the 70s recently and although the month-long forecast calls for colder temperatures closer to Christmas, that still may not mean that a white Christmas is in the offing.

But even if the weather isn't cooperating thus far in putting Midlanders in a proper Christmas spirit, residents are working at it themselves. The city Christmas tree lighting ceremony officially ushered in the holiday season Friday evening and Saturday's crowds at local shopping establishments attested that the giving spirit is still alive and well here. No doubt merchants hope this Christmas shopping splurge puts their books in better form. Without a doubt, the shoppers' efforts will bring smiles to those around Christmas trees this Christmas morning.

Other evidence of the Christmas spirit also is on display. Local fund-raising efforts, such as the Reporter-Telegram's own Midland Cheer Fund, are getting under way in hopes of making the holidays brighter for those in the Tall City who are in need of assistance. And, commendably, those Midlanders who can give are doing so, reaffirming that Midland's heart remains strong and caring.

The Salvation Army's bell-wringers are in place outside local retail establishments, greeting shoppers with a smile and a holiday greeting.

Even if you haven't heard Christmas music yet, it won't be long before you do and, no doubt, any number of Midlanders are wanting to say "Merry Christmas!" when they meet you.

The Christmas spirit is all around us, and the day when the jolly old elf makes his annual trip to all the points on the globe, to bring smiles and joy to young and old alike, will be here before many are ready.

The weather doesn't bring the Christmas spirit to life. People do.

Pot production has gone high-tech

WASHINGTON — There is one technological race that the United States isn't losing. But the only people who take pride in the victory are those who get rich preying on others.

Jack Anderson

The United States is on the "leading edge" of the horticultural revolution when it comes to marijuana growing, according to a secret report by the Drug Enforcement Administration.

That means that marijuana growers in this country are using high technology to improve the potency and yield of their crops. It also means the growers are moving indoors to greenhouses, barns, caves and chicken coops, where they can operate year-round without worrying about the weather or the prying eyes of the law.

These aren't little plants growing in the kitchen window of a hippie holdover. In Truckee, Calif., the DEA found a greenhouse that had been producing up to 5,000 pounds of marijuana a year for probably two years with an annual sales value of more than $17 million. It was powered by a diesel generator with a timer to flood the plants with radon grow lights. The lights were on tracks so they could be moved around the plants for maximum effect. Thousands of feet of pipe carried fertilizer to the plants on an automatic drip system.

The techniques are no secret. At least seven "how-to" books for growing marijuana indoors have been published, and one has sold more than a million copies.

Growers in Oregon, Washington and Northern California have caught on to the new technology in a big way, but growers in other states aren't far behind.

Pennsylvania growers are moving indoors, according to the DEA — a shift that would enable them to keep production up during the long winters there. But even in Georgia, where the outdoor growing season is long, the DEA has found some elaborate indoor crops, including a few produced underground. The growers are bringing their crops inside to hide them from aerial surveillance.

Oregon pioneered the greenhouse technique. In Josephine County, at least one-third of the marijuana growers have moved inside. In southern Oregon, most growers start their plants in greenhouses, then move outside after the last frost.

In the state of Washington, about 85 percent of the marijuana is grown indoors, the secret report says. The growers prefer rental property because the law allows the state to seize the land where marijuana is found growing, and no smart farmer would risk losing his own land to the state.

Alabama and Mississippi growers favor chicken houses, because those are a familiar site on the landscape. If growers put pot in every chicken coop in Alabama, there would be more than 1 million greenhouses in that state.

These indoor gardeners are catching on to hydroponics, the science of growing plants in soil-free, mineral-rich solutions. It is most commonly used for cucumbers and tomatoes. But pot growers were borrowing the technique by 1981. That was the year the first hydroponic greenhouse was seized in a drug raid in Novato, Calif. Police found 200 "lush, bushy and potent" plants that "appeared to be growing faster than normal," the secret report says.

The rest is history. Word spread that California marijuana grown hydroponically could beat "Colombian gold" for quality and speed of growth. The DEA says the growers are recruiting hydroponics experts as consultants.

This is mini-gardening at its best. One marijuana plant uses only a square foot of space, so a compact, 400-square-foot greenhouse turning out marijuana year round could generate from $4 million to $5 million in sales a year. That's not bad for a job you can do out of your garage.

HEROES OR NOT? — When the United States bungled a hostage rescue mission to Iran in 1980, Jimmy Carter's chances for re-election died, and the White House blushed red with embarrassment. Apparently, the wound is still raw at the Pentagon. Three Special Operations Force members received the Airman's Medal for their life-saving work in that operation. Soldiers who get that medal are entitled to a 10 percent increase in their retirement pay. But the three soldiers have not seen the increase on their checks. When they complained, they were told that their performance on the mission did not qualify as extraordinary heroism. They have appealed the decision. Maybe it was their bad luck to be Carter's heroes in Iran instead of Reagan's heroes in Grenada.

MINI-EDITORIAL — It's a rare flight attendant who will dare alter the droning airlinespeak about seat belts, emergency exits, oxygen masks and smoking. But one attendant who pulled Thanksgiving Day duty was feeling feisty: "If you try to sneak a cigarette in the bathroom, guess what? We'll know about it and you won't get your nice turkey dinner with grandma because you'll be sitting in a little room with bars. We don't want that to happen, do we?"

That speaks volumes more than, "Please extinguish all smoking materials."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's Highlight in History:

On Dec. 5, 1933, at 5:32 p.m. EST, national Prohibition came to an end in the United States as Utah became the 36th state to ratify the 21st Amendment to the Constitution, repealing the 18th.

On this date:

In 1776, the first scholastic fraternity in America, Phi Beta Kappa, was organized at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va.

In 1782, the first president who was a native citizen of the United States, Martin Van Buren, was born in Kinderhook, N.Y.

In 1791, composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart died in Vienna, Austria, at the age of 35.

In 1831, former President John Quincy Adams took his seat as a member of the House of Representatives.

In 1848, President James Polk triggered the Gold Rush of '49 by confirming that gold had been discovered in California.

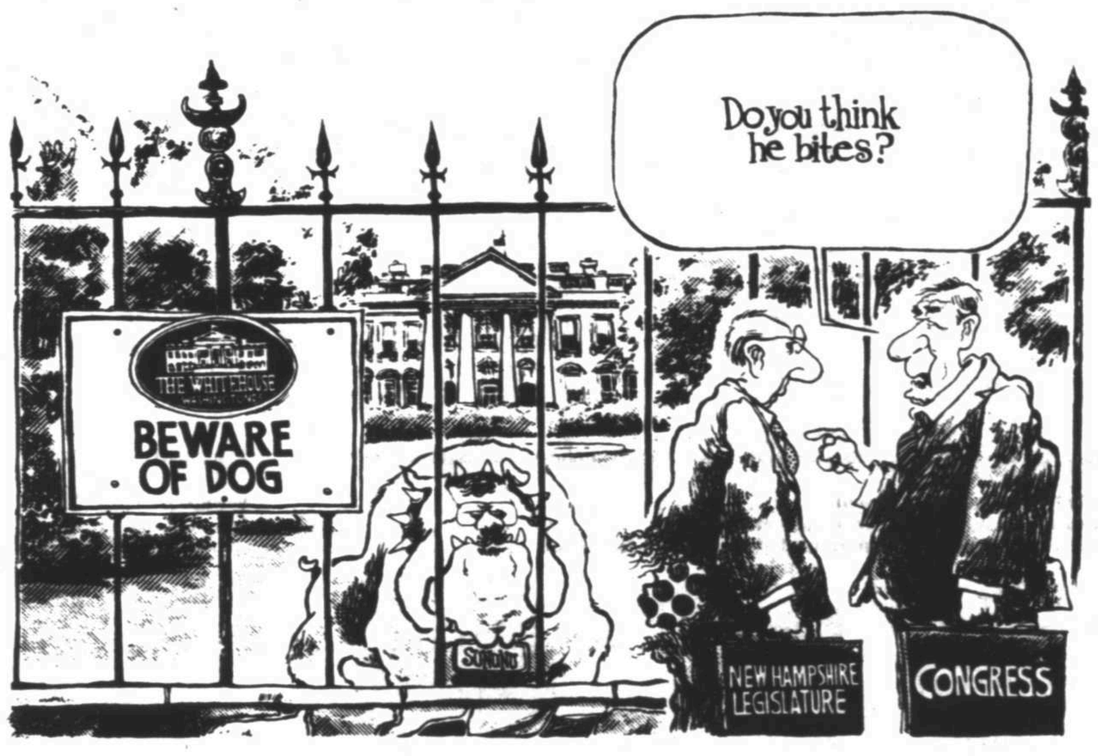

In 1901, movie producer Walt Disney was born in Chicago.

In 1932, German physicist Albert Einstein was granted a visa making it possible for him to travel to the United States.

In 1937, during the Spanish civil war, Loyalist forces began a counter-offensive in the Teruel region.

In 1955, the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations merged to form the AFL-CIO under its first president, George Meany.

In 1977, Egypt broke diplomatic relations with Syria, Libya, Algeria, Iraq and South Yemen in the wake of criticism that followed President Anwar Sadat's peace overtures to Israel.

LETTERS

Bentsen troubling

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen was quoted as saying, "If Reagan lacked cooperation from the Democratic Congress, George Bush hasn't seen anything yet." If this is a true quotation and intent, and if he does work to defeat any measure that Bush might like, Texas is in big trouble. Unfortunately, this is not a new concept. We've seen it before with two senators voting party-line instead of Texas-line, canceling each other's votes, and leaving us with no voice at all in the Senate. Bentsen is not there for vengeance; he is there to represent Texas.

He should be reminded that he is not a spoiled child who trashes the playground because someone beat him to the swings. You see, little Lloyd staked out two swings for himself. With help from friends, George Bush acquired the swing Bentsen wanted most; so now Lloyd won't play fair with the swing he has. He is twirling it over everyone's head like a weapon and threatening to sabotage everthing in the playground and all future improvements, regardless who gets hurt.

A foolish analogy, perhaps, to a ludicrous statement, but vesting so much power in the "party" is serious business in the real world. What has happened so far? We have the dollar falling, the market down, the media having a field day with the possibility of an impotent government, and political analysts and cartoonists worldwide poking fun at us.

How long will we endure this madness? We as Americans and Texans are the only ones who can stop it. Flood his mail. Ring his telephone. Send wires. Use every avenue of communication to tell this man to grow up and shape up. Remind him that he works for us. And if all else fails, throw him out of the park.

Midlanders gave food

On Nov. 19, the good people of the Permian Basin donated over 38,000 pounds of canned goods to the Boy Scouts of America Scouting for Food Good Turn. This food was collected by Cubs, delivered primarily to the Permian Basin Food Bank and its member agencies. Over 20,000 pounds of this food was collected in Midland County.

The Buffalo Trail Council, B.S.A., wishes to express appreciation to the donors of the food and many others who helped the Scouts make this Good Turn a real success for those needing help in our area. The Midland Reporter-Telegram helped pay for the bags that were used in the collection and distributed them through the Sunday edition on Nov. 5th. Thank you!

Others who helped pay for the bags included Energas, Kent Oil, KMID-TV, Southwestern Bell, 55-KCRS/FM103-KWMJ Radio and IBM. The National Guard and Central Freight Lines helped with transportation and storage. We do not have the names of all who helped, but wish to express appreciation to those people and firms also.

Don't like results?

I have a brief comment to make on your news coverage of the national election returns. Not wishing to stay up until 3 a.m. to get the final results, I made a bad decision and assumed your paper would give the count. As Ted Battles would say, "And quick now, name the 10 states that Dukakis carried, and by what majority did he win them?"

If we have to rely on TV for the news, we really don't need the paper, now do we? A colored map in the Wednesday edition following the election showed which states had elected a Democrat or a Republican governor, but nothing about the presidential preference of the states. Does someone down there not like the results?

When does man treat woman like a lady?

I was entering a building recently and a lady walked up behind me.

I opened the door, stood back and allowed the lady to go first. She smiled and said, "Thank you."

Grizzard

I followed behind her and we came upon another door. I waited for her to go ahead.

But she just stood there. For a moment, I was puzzled at her delay. Then, it occurred to me. She was waiting for me to open the door for her again, which I promptly did. Again, she smiled and said, "Thank you."

How refreshing. It had been a long time since I have run across a woman — and a fairly young one at that — who seemed to want and expect a bit of chivalry from the opposite sex.

I think I can speak for most American men and say we are terribly confused in this day of the liberated woman. We're not sure if women want us to treat them in the old mannerly way, or not.

If I open a door for a woman, will she take it to mean I think she's not strong enough to open it herself and knee me in the groin?

Judging from the incident I described above, there may be, in fact, a number of women out there who still do appreciate a bit of gallantry now and then.

I realize I might be a bit rusty in this area, so what I did was ask around among my female acquaintances until I found one from the old school who could reprogram me a bit on how to treat a lady.

"Do you know," she began, "how to handle it when you approach a revolving door with a woman by your side?"

I had no clue.

"You go first," she explained, "and push the door so the lady can simply walk behind you without having to put out any effort of her own."

There were others:

Walking on the sidewalk. "A man should always walk nearest the curb, in case a car might come along and splash water."

Lighting a cigarette. "Not that many people smoke anymore, but in case you meet a lady who does, it is quite appropriate to light her cigarette. If you both are smoking, light hers first if you have a lighter. If you are using a match, it is appropriate for the man to light his first, so as to take the noxious fumes that erupt when a match is first struck."

Standing when a lady enters the room. "I still appreciate that. It makes me feel special."

Helping a lady out of a car. "Offer her one hand and then put the other gently behind her back. Never put both hands on her."

On elevators. "When leaving an elevator, if it is not crowded, stand aside and allow the woman to walk out first."

I had just one more question:

"What if I follow all those rules, but run into a woman who is offended by them, and she knees me in the groin?"

"Once you catch your breath," said my friend, "tip your hat and offer her a cigar."

CHARLEY REESE

Doctor's life should be inspiration to others

Every time I'm around Dr. Kenneth Wells, I feel like going to confession. Trouble is, I'm not Catholic.

But if I were, my confession would go something like this: Forgive me for the times I've been lazy. Forgive me for not having more faith in my fellow man. Forgive me for so often not acting to help people who need it.

Charley Reese

Forgive me for everytime I ever gave myself a pat on the back because each and every one was entirely undeserved.

Doc Wells doesn't intend to make me feel inferior. If ever there was a postive-thinking man with a ready and eager thank-you to others, it's Doc. It's just what he is and what he has done is so magnificent that it's humbling to all but blockheads.

When I first met Doc, he was retired with enough of a successful career behind him to rationalize spending the rest of his days on the golf course. Instead, he went to Honduras and at 70 or so, bummed a ride on an old cargo plane out to where the refugees were. He saw human needs. He came back and started doing something about them.

Now he's 80 years old and he's made more trips to Central America than any 10 correspondents. And he doesn't sit around the bar in San Salvador. He's out on trucks and in Salvadoran army helicopters conducting his own civic action program.

He and his wife, with their Family Foundation of America volunteers, which are in a warehouse in Edgewater, Fla., the small town where he retired, have collected, packed, and shipped 94 truckloads of food, clothes, and medicines to the people of El Salvador and to refugees in Honduras. They have provided Christmas toys to more than 200,000 children in El Salvador. They have started a leg bank where artificial limbs are collected, re-conditioned, and provided to the children who've lost arms or legs to communist mines. They have started a program of providing garden seeds to the people of El Salvador to help fight the hunger the civil war has caused. They brought children back for surgery. They've helped rebuild villages.

Doc Wells, who didn't speak a word of Spanish when he first started, is now much a loved and familiar figure in El Salvador with friends who range from President Napolean Duarte's wife to Salvadoran soldiers and American military advisors who look out for him when he's out in the field in the forward combat areas.

He's exhausted his personal savings, but he has inspired a group of people who volunteer their time and talents. And he just keeps on keeping on, non-stop, aches and pains be damned, who has time to count the birthdays, what difference does it make if there is a vicious war on.

He begs and pleads for help. The need is too great for him to be embarrassed. So someone calls him a nuisance. A child is hungry. A child is legless. He'll take the turndowns and the putdowns to get to that person who will help.

And he talks to anybody who will listen about what a vicious thing it is for the communist to lay mines in fields and around villages to kill and maim children and farmers. He is unabashedly patriotic. He's emotional. He hugs a hurting child in some seemingly God-forsaken village and he cries.

But most of all, he acts. He's more man at 80 than most of us ever were or will be.

I rarely ask but if you want to help, you can send a check to Family Foundation of America, 702 West Park Ave., Edgewater, Fla.

Steinberg seeks insanity defense in murder trial

NEW YORK (AP) — A man on trial for beating to death his illegally adopted daughter today asked the court for permission to enter an insanity plea following the testimony of the man's former lover.

The lawyer for Joel Steinberg, accused of murdering 6-year-old Lisa Steinberg, told state Supreme Court Justice Harold Rothwax that new information derived from the testimony of Steinberg's longtime live-in companion, Hedda Nussbaum, prompted the change in strategy.

Attorney Ira London said psychiatrists who examined Steinberg earlier this year had initially not believed Steinberg was mentally incapacitated, but that Ms. Nussbaum's testimony, coupled with their interviews with the defendant, would now allow them to testify that Steinberg lacked criminal responsibility in the girl's death.

Ms. Nussbaum, 46, testified last week that Steinberg admitted to her that he had "knocked Lisa down" because she was staring at him.

Lisa was taken unconscious from Steinberg's apartment the morning of Nov. 2, 1987, to St. Vincent's Hospital, where she died of head injuries three days later.

Rothwax, the trial judge, pointed out that an application to present an insanity defense normally must be filed before trial begins and within 30 days after a defendant pleads guilty to the indictment.

But the judge noted that "for good cause shown and in the interests of justice," the court has discretion to permit an insanity defense to be presented at any time after an indictment.

Rothwax then asked London to explain why Steinberg should be allowed to plead "not guilty by reason of mental disease or defect."

London said that in the past year, Steinberg had been examined by psychiatrists on two separate occasions. After each of those examinations, the psychiatrists had said they did not believe Steinberg, a lawyer who was disbarred after the killing, was suffering from any mental incapacity the night that Lisa was fatally injured.

But after hearing Ms. Nussbaum's testimony, London said, the psychiatrists indicated that they could testify that Steinberg lacked criminal responsibility.

Ms. Nussbaum testified last week that Steinberg beat, starved and humiliated her.

In slow cadences punctuated by sighs, gulps and sobs, Ms. Nussbaum said Steinberg fed her cocaine, cut her off from her family, brainwashed her into believing she was a cultist who hypnotized people and got her fired from her job as a children's book editor at Random House.

She also testified that she "worshipped" Steinberg, believed he had "godlike" powers and was a healer.

Ms. Nussbaum initially was charged in Lisa's death, but the charges were dropped after prosecutors said they found she was incapable physically and emotionally of hurting or protecting the child.

Historic port haven for heroin abusers

GLOUCESTER, Mass. (AP) — This historic fishing port with its trawlers and luxury yachts, fish processing plants and cliffside mansions has spent the last decade in a frustrating battle against a rising tide of heroin addiction.

A modest force of 51 patrolmen covers this city of 28,000 people and 32 square miles with no more than an average share of violent crime, break-ins and drunken driving.

But up to six times a year police are called to the scene of a drug overdose death, far more often than in other Massachusetts cities of similar size. "It appears it's never going to end," said Police Chief Earland Worthley.

A man found dead in November of an apparent overdose "came down here from Malden to do it," Worthley said. The drug is easy to find here, he said.

In 11 years as chief, Worthley said there have been 20 to 25 heroin overdose deaths. Drug counselor Ron Morin said there have been more than 30 in the past five years.

Gloucester is a working-class community of large, close-knit families of French-Canadian, Portuguese, Yankee, Irish and Italian backgrounds. The community saw a lot of friction years ago when followers of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon became a major force in the local fishing industry.

Why did heroin come to Gloucester and stay?

"It defies an easy, simple explanation," said Essex County District Attorney Kevin Burke.

The obvious assumption that heroin comes in by boat is incorrect, he said; it comes by car from New York City, Providence, R.I., and Chelsea, a blue-collar city near Boston.

Morin estimated there are 300 heroin addicts in Gloucester, or roughly one resident in 100, a rate 62 percent higher than the statewide average. As recently as 1982 there were only about 50 Gloucester addicts, authorities said.

In the 1960s and 1970s, heroin was prevalent among young people all over eastern Massachusetts, Burke said. Heroin fell out of favor elsewhere, but in Gloucester "it never lost its appeal."

The two-weeks-on, two-weeks-off schedule of many fishermen is conducive to alcohol and drug abuse, Morin said. A more important factor, he said, is Gloucester's isolation as a working-class community surrounded by wealthy seacoast communities like Manchester, Ipswich and Rockport.

"Gloucester, because of its position in the middle, tends to attract the losers from other communities," Morin said. "Gloucester's the place where you can live in a $50-a-week room."

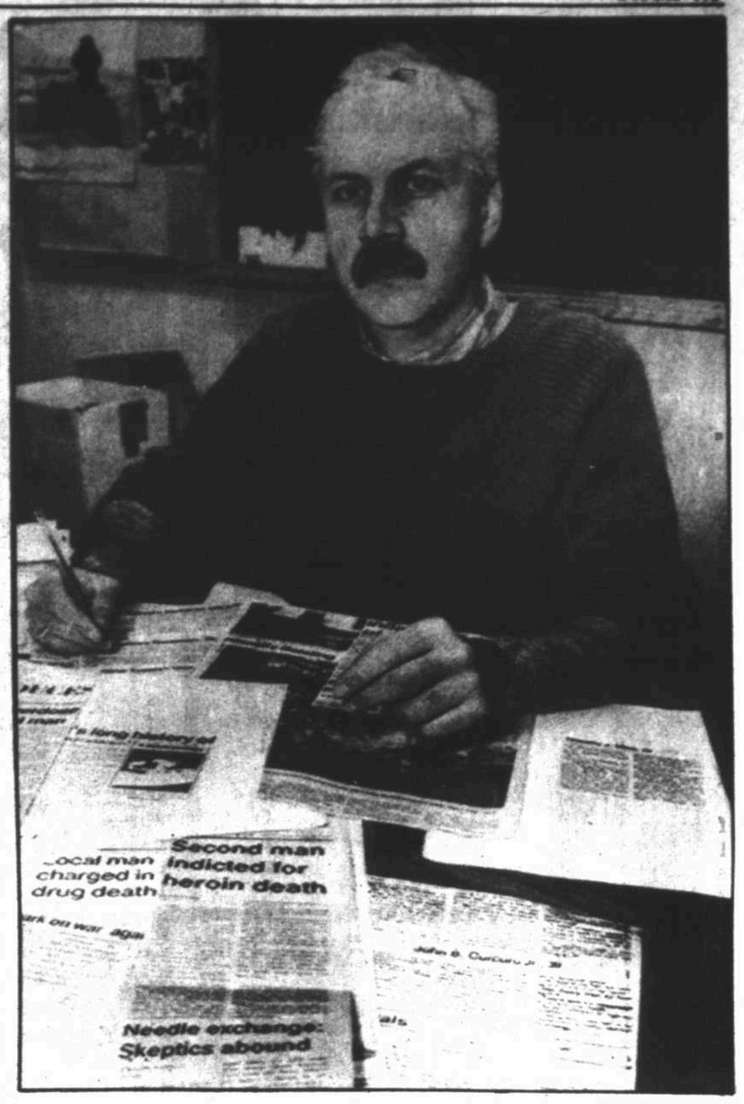

Last week, Burke assigned two state troopers to Gloucester's four-member drug task force.

"We're going to arrest as many people as we can who are using and abusing drugs. Maybe we can drive some folks into treatment," he said.

Earlier this year, Burke's office, in what he said was a first in the state, indicted two heroin dealers on manslaughter charges in the deaths of two addicts.

Possibily because Gloucester's heroin users are a part of a stable, family-oriented community, addiction has not brought with it the crime that besets other cities.

"It's still this little town surrounded by natural beauty and everybody knows everybody and nobody's living in fear and homes aren't being broken into," said Phil Salzman, a high school teacher who keeps a file of drug overdose obituaries to help him dramatize the problem in his classes.

Phil Salzman, a Gloucester, Mass., high school teacher, displays part of a file he keeps to document the number of drug deaths in the town of 28,000. He also uses them in his peer education class to dramatize the town's heroin problem.

Goggles blamed for military copter crashes

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Manufacturers of night-vision goggles and pilots who used them contend military officials knew the goggles were unsafe for flight, according to a published report.

The goggles, designed for ground troops and not for flight, were used by 62 military pilots whose helicopters crashed during the last decade, killing 134 servicemen, The Orange County Register reported Sunday.

One instructor said he quit partly because of the goggles.

Recent crashes blamed on alleged goggle inadequacies prompted calls for a congressional investigation of night-vision goggle safety by Rep. Frank McCloskey, D-Ind., of the House Armed Services Committee.

The night-vision goggles electronically amplify moonlight and starlight, displaying images on two tiny video screens.

Military records show that qualified Air Force, Marine and Army pilots blindly flew into mountains, power lines, trees and other aircraft while using the goggles, usually on high-speed, low-level flights, the newspaper reported.

The goggles are heavy, become overpowered by sudden bright lights, fail to warn pilots of looming clouds that render them useless and severely limit peripheral vision, the newspaper said.

"Scotch tape the tube from an empty toilet paper roll on each eye, and you'll know what flying with goggles is like," said George Small, an instructor pilot for the Army at Fort Campbell, Ky., who retired in November after 20 years of flying in the military.

Pentagon officials defended use of the goggles for helicopter flights, telling the newspaper that combat night missions are essential and that use of the devices is often the only way to get the job done.

"While they have limitations, they give us more capabilities than we had without them," said Lt. Gen. Charles H. Pitman, deputy chief of staff for Marine aviation. "We believe we have to keep doing this so we can be ready when the time comes."

Pitman said investigators were justified in blaming the 62 night-vision-related crashes that resulted in the 134 deaths on pilot error.

"If they (pilots) had followed procedures with each of the accidents we've had...and used common sense, the accidents wouldn't have occurred," he said.

Officials at ITT Electro-Optical Products in Roanoke, Va., Varian Image Tube Division in Palo Alto, and other manufacturers of the goggles said they have never considered the infantry models suitable for flight.

"ITT's position is that we don't endorse Generation II (infantry goggles) for flight applications," said Jim Eder, an ITT night-vision program manager.

"I kept saying, use these for the mission they were designed for — driving," said former Army engineer Edward Firth, who headed development of the infantry goggles before retiring in 1978.

Children donate gift funds to pay medical expenses for burned Santa

MOUNTAIN LAKE, Minn. (AP) — Santa will be getting gifts this Christmas instead of giving them.

Rather than spending money to exchange presents among themselves, pupils at Mountain Lake Elementary School are making donations to help pay Elmer Buller's medical expenses.

Buller, who has played Santa in the community 100 miles southwest of Minneapolis for at least 20 years, was burned over 25 percent of his body on Nov. 21 when he slipped into a pit of burning coals at Balzer Manufacturing, a farm implement plant where he is a custodian.

Buller, 60, is in intensive care in the burn unit at St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center in St. Paul and is expected to be hospitalized for a month. The burns are mostly on his legs and hands.

Every year, Buller donned his red Santa suit for an annual visit to the city park, arriving in a sleigh or behind a team of horses. But he didn't stop there. He would pop up all over town in costume, greeting travelers and distributing candy.

"He was such a natural," said Ardelle Neufeld, office secretary for the Chamber of Commerce.

Black medical school's head on 'short list' for HHS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the only predominantly black medical school founded in the United States this century has emerged as a candidate to head the Department of Health and Human Services in President-elect George Bush's administration.

Although there is no indication Bush is prepared to move quickly on the HHS post, the selection of Dr. Louis W. Sullivan of the Morehouse School of Medicine would be in line with Bush's stated desire to find qualified blacks for his Cabinet.

Bush's wife, Barbara, serves on the Morehouse board of trustees and the vice president himself stood beside Sullivan in 1982 when the new medical school moved into its first permanent home.

Mrs. Bush delivered congratulations from President Reagan at ceremonies in 1985 when the Atlanta school graduated its first full-fledged class of medical students.

Another HHS secretary candidate also said to be under active consideration is Dr. Monroe Trout, a doctor and lawyer who serves on the Morehouse board with Mrs. Bush and was active in Republican politics in Connecticut before moving to California to head a chain of non-profit hospitals.

Trout, who is white, has declined to talk to reporters but has acknowledged to friends that he is interested in the job and was in Washington recently to discuss the possibility with individuals and groups with a keen interest in the HHS post, although not necessarily directly with Bush operatives.

For his part, Sullivan said last week that he has had no contact with Bush or his transition staff about any job, but added that he was aware a number of Republicans have recommended to Bush that he be named to the top job at HHS.

The same sources who said Sullivan and Trout are under active consideration said Rep. Willis Gradison of Ohio, ranking Republican on the Ways and Means health subcommittee that oversees Medicare and many other HHS programs, remains on the "short list."

Gradison has declined to discuss his prospects with reporters, but sources familiar with the congressman's thinking said he is not pushing for the job even though he was frequently mentioned for it long before Bush's election.

Gradison was in Bush's graduating class at Yale, but the two were not particularly close at the time. Gradison entered the school when he was 16 years old, the same year Bush enrolled after returning from service in World War II.

While Gradison has more detailed knowledge of the workings of HHS, a huge agency with more than 100,000 employees and a budget larger than the Pentagon, there is widespread speculation that Bush might want to follow the precedent set by Reagan with the appointment of Dr. Otis R. Bowen and name another physician to succeed him.

Bowen, a former two-time Republican governor of Indiana with close ties to Bush, has made clear he wants to return home to tend his garden in retirement.

However, Bush is known to value the country doctor's counsel and sent his personnel chief to confer privately with Bowen last week, about the same time sources learned that Sullivan's name had been put in play.

Another new name that surfaced last week was that of retired Navy Adm. James Watkins, who enhanced his national reputation as chairman of the White House AIDS commission.

Watkins was the major force in pushing the commission to recommend adoption of federal legislation to ban discrimination against people infected with the AIDS virus — a position Bush made a point of embracing during his campaign even though Reagan had stopped short of that stance in referring the anti-discrimination question to the Justice Department for study.

Indian tribal leaders sue Utah over prison sweat lodge

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A simple dome-like structure used by Plains Indians for ancient worship rites is the focus of a long-running battle over religion and rehabilitation between tribal leaders and Utah State Prison officials.

Tribal officials are suing on behalf of six Indian inmates for the right to build sweat lodges at the state's only maximum security prison, 25 miles south of Salt Lake City.

"It's a form of worship and I think prison officials really ought to be more cognizant of it as a rehabilitative tool," said Travis Parashonts, a Paiute Indian who is director of the Utah Office of Indian Affairs. "It's a very uplifting and spiritual experience."

But prison officials say the lodges represent a security risk, and call the Indians' demand unreasonable.

Permitting a sweat lodge would be akin to allowing "a mosque and minaret for the Moslems, a shrine for the Buddhists, a temple for the Latter-day Saints, and a cathedral for the Catholics," said Corrections Executive Director Gary DeLand, a defendant in the 20-month-old federal lawsuit that is scheduled for trial next month.

The sweat lodge is a small structure made of willow poles covered with blankets or dirt. They are often circular resembling tepees but can be square, hutlike structures.

Inside, usually about eight to 10 people sing and pray around a pit of heated stones in a quest for purification, forgiveness and spiritual renewal. Some Indians pray to a Great Spirit, who is the father of all things and a life force; others pray to spirits associated with various aspects of nature like rocks or animals.

Tribal leaders have been frustrated by the prison ban on lodges, particularly because nine other western states allow them in their prisons.

Rejection of SSA staff proposal cheers opponents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers and advocates for the disabled are cheering the Social Security commissioner's decision to reject a staff proposal to restrict people's right to appeal benefit denials.

The decision by Social Security Commissioner Dorcas R. Hardy was likely to take the steam out of a hearing scheduled today by the House Ways and Means Committee on the proposal.

But advocates for the elderly and disabled were still planning to press their concerns about Social Security's often torturous disability claims process.

Most of the 300,000 people who request hearings each year before administrative law judges are seeking disability benefits, and most who appeal denials eventually win.

"It's great that they decided not to go forward with the proposal," said Eileen P. Sweeney of the National Senior Citizens Law Center. But she called it "basically a political decision" and said it was "fairly disingenuous" of Social Security officials to claim that the proposal had emanated from low levels of the agency without the knowledge of Hardy or other top officials.

Hardy said in a four-page statement released Saturday that the draft had "generated inaccurate information and caused undue alarm to the American public."

She said she remains convinced that the agency's hearings and appeals process needs reform, but that the staff-suggested proposal would not have made the system "more equitable, compassionate and efficient."

The furor erupted last month when The New York Times reported the Reagan administration was considering restricting the right of Social Security applicants to introduce new evidence upon appeal.

Thirty-five senators, including one Republican, Dave Durenberger of Minnesota, sent a letter to President-elect George Bush last week urging him to repudiate the policy change.

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said he was pleased with Hardy's decision, and hopes to work with the commissioner on improving the system.

It takes an average of nearly two years to appeal a claim through the administrative process to the federal courts.

Hardy said 80 percent of Social Security beneficiaries now are represented by lawyers at hearings before administrative law judges, and the agency each year "pays almost $100 million in fees to attorneys out of the past due benefits of claimants who win benefits on appeal."

The proposal drafted by the agency's Office of Hearings and Appeals would have required claimants to submit all evidence at least seven days prior to a hearing before an administrative law judge.

The controversy hit at a time when Hardy is under consideration for the post of secretary of health and human services in the Bush administration.

Wielding bamboo poles like giant chopsticks, above, honey hunter Mani Lal — dangling over a 395-foot cliff on a rope ladder — carves thick slabs of honeycomb into a goatskin-lined basket. Villagers, left, hold out pots and pans to catch the overflow, shouting "It's raining honey." The honey harvest in central Nepal is steeped in tradition.

Master of the Honey

Associated Press

Silently, like a spider on a frail strand of web, Mani Lal starts down the swaying rope ladder.

With only a cord around his waist to secure him, he dangles over a 395-foot cliff. The slightest error of judgment would mean death.

His quest: honey from the world's largest honeybee.

Like his father and forefathers in central Nepal, Mani Lal is a master honey hunter.

Thousands of angry bees fill the air as he plunges a bamboo pole into a nest nearly as large as he is. Yet the only extra protection he wears is a loose cape draped over his head, and a pair of long pants.

Wielding his poles like giant chopsticks, he carves thick slabs of honeycomb into a bamboo basket lined with goatskin. When full, the basket will be lowered to companions at the cliff base.

"The sound of the giant bees is terrifying," report Eric Valli and Diane Summers in a recent National Geographic. But Mani Lal's movements are swift and calm. He has done this many times. He is 64.

Mani Lal will not start down the ladder to get the honey before chanting the sacred mantras. As he sprinkles grains of rice in the air, he recites the different names of Pholo, god of the forest. His people, the Gurungs, practice a mixture of Hinduism, Buddhism and animism.

Mani Lal will not harvest the honey when the god is not pleased. When his father, whose belief had not been as strong, descended the ladder one day, the bees attacked him by the thousands. He was blinded by a sting.

Mani Lal decides the appropriate time for every honey hunt, one in spring, another in fall. Among all the hunters in his village, only the nine in his group may hunt honey. Each inherited this right from his father.

"Together we can go where one man alone could not travel," Mani Lal says. There are no roads in these foothills of the Himalayas. Decades of porters have worn paths through emerald tiers of young corn. Most of the forest has been cleared. Only the steepest slopes are still wooded.

As the trees have dwindled, so have the bees. Mani Lal's grandfather took 600 nests a year. Last year Mani Lal took 80.

Mani Lal guides his hunters along invisible woodland trails and directs each of their tasks. He alone speaks with the gods. He alone descends the ladder.

To unveil the bee-covered golden comb, he pushes a flaming bundle of leaves under the bees with a bamboo pole. They furiously depart in the smoke.

To capture Mani Lal on film, Valli rappels down the precipice on a nylon rope — the first Westerner to join the hunter in his dangerous spot.

Bees surround Mani Lal. Their nest has two parts: the honeycomb, attached to the cliff, and the brood comb, the lower crescent containing pupae, eggs and larvae. He uses a pole to push two short sticks, tied to a cord dropped from the cliff top, into the brood comb.

When the comb is free, it is lowered to the ground. A valuable source of wax, it is so large it has to be folded in two to be carried to the hunters' camp.

"It's raining honey," shout villagers at the base of the cliff, as they thrust pots and pans to catch the sticky liquid that Mani Lal frees from the honeycomb.

By the time Mani Lal finishes filling the first basket, it's brimming with almost 4 gallons of honeycomb. As it reaches the ground, villagers swoop upon it, dipping in bowls and breaking off small chunks of comb to chew. It is a honey feast.

In less than an hour, Mani Lal has harvested perhaps 10 gallons of honey and 20 pounds of wax. He is satisfied with the yield from this nest, as he has been with most of the 40 others he cut during the campaign.

His group's success, however, carries a hidden price, report Valli and Summers. Although the hunters leave some nests untouched as "seeds" for the future, their destruction of brood combs has contributed to the insects' decline. But the extensive loss of forest habitat is an even worse threat.

Mani Lal says the next season will be his last. His sons have no interest in harvesting the sweet treasure. With him, the timeless honey quest will end.

Farmer may be on cutting edge of trend

By RAY WESTBROOK

Zach Payton, owner of the Starbrite Christmas Tree Farm in Woodrow, invested in 1,100 eight-inch trees three years ago and now is ready to test a "cut your own tree" concept to see if such a business is viable in West Texas.

WOODROW (AP) — Zack and Barbara Payton will soon know if their 3-year-old investment in a West Texas pine forest has the commercial aspect which they envision.

It's Christmas tree season, and the former cotton-farming couple devoted five acres of their land south of Woodrow to nurture 1,100 trees just for that purpose.

Their clientele at Starbrite Christmas Tree Farm will be those who like the idea of choosing and cutting their own trees for the holidays. That hasn't always been an easy option in the semi-arid region around Lubbock.

But Payton points to the viable Christmas tree farms in East Texas, and contends that with irrigation it can be done in West Texas, too.

The trees, which are now five to seven feet tall, will sell for $35 each. For those who would like to perpetuate the tree, a bagged version is available for $60.

Payton will provide the bowsaw and allow his customers to cut the tree on their own.

He picked a Mondale — or Afghanistan — pine for the Christmas tree stock. That particular version of pine grows rapidly and easily survives the rigors of the area's climate.

According to Payton, the tree grows in comparison to the amount of water it receives. It remains alive but stunted with little water, and can grow to an 18-inch diameter size in 15 years with an abundance of irrigation.

"I enjoy growing them," Payton said, "and I am going to enjoy selling them."

The trees are actually ready to cut now, and Payton had already sold a few before Thanksgiving. He said he is making a lay-away plan available in which the customer puts down a deposit, then comes back to cut the tree when he wants to take it home.

Payton prefers a noon-til-dark business day, but notes that the business is operated from his home. He has logged sales as late as 10:30 p.m. Some Texas Tech University students called at that hour after a recent snow, and came to cut a tree, Payton said.

The tree farm is located eight miles south of Loop 289 on U.S. Highway 87. Payton plans to set up a small office near the highway to handle most of the sales.

Although the particular market which Payton plans to serve is considered unproven in the Lubbock area, he already has another 3,000 trees in various stages of growth for subsequent years.

An eight-inch tree grows to as much as seven feet in three years, he reported. The seedlings are purchased from a California nursery for 75 cents each.

Payton said of the concept, "It's like our forefathers did. It's kind of cutting a new trail out here.

"I didn't know what they were going to do. I did have the theory in mind that if they didn't grow and didn't sell, then I would have the only pine forest in West Texas.

Texans taking over leadership spots in nation's capital

By JENNIFER DIXON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas is about to conquer Washington the way Sam Houston claimed San Jacinto. And how.

Texans are rising in Congress to run some of its most influential committees, an adopted Texan becomes president Jan. 20 and is bringing with him at least two and as many as five Cabinet secretaries from the Lone Star State, and the man third in line to the presidency, House Speaker Jim Wright, is from Fort Worth.

"When you're in power you're in style, and Texas is back in style," says Democratic consultant George Shipley in Austin, who predicts the "Yellow Rose of Texas" will be in vogue during the inaugural balls for former oilman Bush.

In a city were power is ephemeral, the Texas clout in Washington is now waxing and some predict it will eclipse those potent days when Sam Rayburn was speaker of the House and Lyndon B. Johnson was Senate majority leader.

"This is the first time in our history that we've had a Texan as president and as speaker of the House. And we have a number of Texans as chairmen of committees now," says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, himself the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, the Senate's most powerful panel.

Texas is also getting its first secretary of state in Houstonian James A. Baker III; the first Hispanic member of a president's Cabinet is Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos, former president of Texas Tech University and son of a King Ranch cowhand.

The list goes on: Rep. Kika de la Garza is chairman of the Agriculture Committee and Reps. Jack Brooks and Henry B. Gonzalez are in line to take over the House Judiciary and Banking committees, respectively.

"Things are looking good for us," says Brooks, dean of the delegation. "You've got Democrats taking over Congress and Republicans taking over the administration from Texas."

On the Republican side, former Sen. John Tower is under serious consideration for secretary of defense, Houston businessman Robert Mosbacher is rumored a contender for secretary of commerce, and former congressman Tom Loeffer is said to be a candidate for secretary of energy.

"I've never seen that many Texans holding that many positions. We'll certainly get some attention to our (state's) concerns," says Bentsen, who was the Democratic nominee for vice president. Although he lost that race, his national stature rose. Last week, his Democratic colleagues in the Senate gave him a standing ovation at a caucus meeting.

"Historically, Texans have had strong leadership in Washington, but the difference is today it has a bipartisan tinge to it that it didn't have before," says George Christian, press secretary to Lyndon Johnson from 1966 to 1969. "We have feet in both camps, and that's an improvement."

Although Johnson brought in Texans from as far away as Paris, there may be more in Washington under Bush.

Republican Sen. Phil Gramm says the real story is in how many Texans will end up "in positions where real decisions are made, at the subcabinet level, so certainly Texas and Texas interests will be very well represented come January 20."

Bush would break the record for Texans in the Cabinet if he appoints at least four, as Christian said he believes the most at any one time in Johnson's tenure was three.

"This part of the country will have the most potent representation in the Bush administration and the new Congress than they have had in a long, long time," Christian said.

"It's really a Texas brigade in the North," says Bob Mansker, press secretary to Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas.

Christian believes the Texas representation may be even stouter than it was through the 1970s, when it lost House committee chairman Bob Poage on Agriculture, Tiger Teague on Science and Technology, George Mahon on Appropriations, and Wright Patman on Banking.

"You're (now) seeking a waxing after the waning. We're reclaiming ground we lost in the last decade," said one Democratic staffer, who credits Texas' rise to power in Congress to loyalty within the delegation unrivaled by other large states. "It's not to aggrandize ourselves or our members, it's to take care of Texas."

Shopping center used to send loans to S&Ls, Houston paper reports

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston shopping center property was reportedly used to funnel more than $30 million from several Texas savings and loans and banks to offshore companies linked to drug laundering, the Houston Post reported.

Business leaders operating in the Meyerland Shopping Center say the dealings harmed innocent merchants, but the ultimate cost may be passed on to taxpayers since most of the financial institutions involved are now insolvent and under government control or merged with others, according to the copyright report.

Although it is not clear exactly how much money went offshore or where it went, federal officials and a source close to the case say the money may have been used to buy weapons or planes and boats used in drug smuggling operations, the Post said Sunday.

According to the report:

■ The price of the Meyerland property was inflated to more than twice its worth by selling its stock twice in one day.

■ Bogus promissory notes on the property and nearby acreage were issued to the companies incorporated outside the United States, making it appear that legitimate debts were owed an offshore company.

■ Some of the banks and thrifts involved in the Meyerland transaction have ties to Mario Renda and Herman K. Beebe Sr., both convicted felons and reputed organized crime figures. Some also have ties to individuals connected to the arms-dealing community, leading to speculation among federal officials that the money went offshore as part of a guns and drugs scheme.

In January 1984, all the stock in the Meyerland Co. was sold to Vorvados Investments, one of the offshore companies, for $35 million, according to Meyer family matriarch Leota Hess.

The same day, Vorvados Investments sold the stock to a company controlled by Michael Adkinson for $70 million, Ms. Hess said.

The cash for the transaction came from Lamar Savings in Austin, which issued a $68 million promissory note secured by only the east 40 acres of the Meyerland Shopping Center property. By the end of the day the property's value had grown fom $35 million to more than $100 million.

The deal was the first in a series spanning several years and involving a number of Texas banks and savings and loans.

In the following two years, more than $150 million in debt was issued against the property, including $42.7 million in promissory notes to offshore companies, county property records show. If the notes are bogus, as sources told the Post, it would mean the federally insured money from the Texas savings and loan was being secreted offshore.

Walter Pye Jr., whose company has its biggest store at the Meyerland center, said Adkinson had never run a shopping center before.

AIDS-related blood screening OK'd

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has approved a screening process for an AIDS-related virus which could force blood banks to spend millions of dollars, according to a former health official.

HTLV-1, a rarer form of AIDS virus, is not thought to affect as many Americans and is less likely to develop into the leukemia associated with the virus, said Edwin Steane, medical director of the blood bank at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

One pilot screening performed by the American Red Cross revealed only one in 5,000 persons in test U.S. cities was infected with HTLV-1.

"Given the AIDS virus and the response of the public to it, it's sort of difficult not to take a new test and use it," Steane said Saturday. "Otherwise, you never know whether you're going to be sued 10 years from now."

The test, produced by three companies, costs $3. With 14 million Americans giving blood annually, the new screening program could cost blood banks at least $42 million a year, Steane said. That's in addition to the five other screening tests blood banks use on all donations.

HTLV-1 is transmitted in the same ways as the AIDS virus: through sexual contact, sharing of contaminated needles and blood transfusions.

The FDA and the major blood bank organizations are recommending that screening tests be used to protect transfusion recipients. Steane said Parkland's blood bank will begin screening donations for HTLV-1 on Monday.

The Blood Center at Wadley supplies blood to all Dallas hospitals except Parkland. That hospital has been screening donations for HTLV-1 since May 1987 as part of a study of one manufacturer's test.

Alpine man killed in rollover

From Staff Reports

A 22-year-old Alpine man was killed early Sunday in a one-vehicle rollover east of Redford in Presidio County, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Alfredo Pena died in route from the accident scene, and was pronounced dead at 5:30 a.m. by Presidio County Justice of the Peace Ronald Willard of Terlingua, DPS reports said.

The accident occurred on FM 170, 20 miles east of Redford. Pena was a passenger in a 1981 Chevrolet pickup truck driven by Mario Marquez of Odessa.

The truck was descending a steep, curved hill with a 20 mph speed limit when Marquez lost control of the vehicle, overcorrected several times and ran off the road. The truck overturned several times, and Pena was thrown from the wreckage. He was not wearing a safety belt at the time of the accident, DPS reports said.

The truck came to rest more than 120 feet below the roadway, according to reports.

Soldier from Andrews dies in Kansas

ALTA VISTA, Kan. (AP) — A Fort Riley soldier was killed and three others were injured over the weekend in a one-vehicle accident, the Highway Patrol said.

Army Pfc. William Stout, 19, of Andrews, Texas, was killed shortly before 1 a.m. Saturday when a vehicle left Kansas 177 about 21 miles south of Manhattan.

Three other soldiers were injured — two of them were flown to Stormont-Vail Regional Medical Center in Topeka and the other was transferred there after first being taken to Morris County Hospital in Council Grove.

Pfc. Martin Klein, 20, of Allis, Wis. and Pfc. David W. Herrmann, 20, of Aurora, Colo., were listed in serious condition today. Pfc. Thomas Schlehuber, 20, of Baraga, Mich., was reported in fair condition.

The patrol said the vehicle plunged down a ditch, struck a culvert and overturned several times.

Holidays sometimes stressful season

Taking care of self is precious gift

By ORLANDO RAMIREZ
Copley News Service

A light snow is falling as you and your family drive up to the house. Through the fog-shrouded windows the Christmas tree glows brightly.

As you approach the holly-bedecked door, the aroma of baked turkey and the happy voices of your relatives rise in a symphony of pleasure and greetings.

That's not your scenario? No, you've got a new baby, that balloon payment due Dec. 15 and your sister is mad because you spent Thanksgiving with your husband's family.

Don't feel alone. No holidays create as much stress as Christmas or Hanukkah. Somewhere between our childhood (some would say childish) expectations and the commercial assault that seems to begin in August, the joy is squeezed out of the holidays, leaving us feeling like a pouch of freeze-dried astronaut food.

What to do? Well, you can let the holiday blues drive you into a deep, dank depression or you can act like an adult. Sure, sitting around and pouting may be more fun, but being an adult is more rewarding.

TOO OFTEN exchanging Christmas gifts has moved from ritual to commodity trading. I know of a couple (unmarried) where she sets a dollar limit he must spend and then drops broad hints about what and from what stores would be acceptable.

Greedy? Maybe so, but it takes the guesswork out of giving, at least for that individual.

But there are those of us who believe that gifts should come from the heart — you know, that shriveled receptacle of our emotions. But it gets more and more difficult as the holiday approaches, the budget shrinks and the stores come to resemble stockyards.

Yet there is something more insidious lingering behind all this stress — the psychology of gift giving and receiving, experts agree, goes to the core of your self-worth.

First you must find out what you like more — giving or receiving.

If you are one of those who keeps a running total of who gave you what and was it equal to what you gave them, then you are heading for a Christmas crash.

On the other extreme, if you're the type who buys and buys and buys expensive one-of-a-kind gifts to impress those you love, like, abhor or merely tolerate, then you, too, are asking to be an unhappy Christmas elf.

True, these are extremes, and you may recognize some of those traits in your personality, but they are indicative of what you feel about yourself. The best way to avoid the holiday blues is not to set traps for yourself.

HERE ARE some ways to maintain your sanity:

■ Gifts are meant to impart delight. Knowing what you want and ordering your spouse to get it for you denies him the pleasure of giving and denies you the surprise.

■ Give in proportion. Buying a diamond pin to impress your boss when he makes 10 times your salary is just plain foolish.

■ Obligation gifts. These you can't avoid. Your cousin twice removed. People who give your gifts for no apparent reason. Service people who keep appliances functioning. Generic presents such as fruitcakes, sausage-and-cheese gift packs or a bottle of whatever will do just fine.

■ Be gracious when accepting gifts. If you don't get what you want, remember that's what after-Christmas sales are for.

Most people accept the fallacy that if Christmas isn't exactly like it was when they were kids, then something is wrong.

Nothing could be farther from the truth.

The last 20 years have wrought an economic and cultural change in the family. Mom no longer stays home and bakes cookies for Wally and the Beav while Dad commutes to his office. Now Mom and Dad — sometimes just Mom — pile the kids in the car for the hop to day care before heading off to their respective offices.

The old traditions, and the work involved to maintain them, are sometimes just not feasible. What to do? Keep those that work, then make up new ones that fit your way of life.

AS ALWAYS, Christmas and Hanukkah are for kids. Their memories should be special. That means Santa Claus, Christmas cookies, presents and a sense of wonder.

Children delight in rituals. They find the religious aspects of the celebration as well as the preparations for Christmas Day itself intriguing. And by focusing your attention, and as a result theirs, on the purely commercial parts of the celebration you deny them a special pleasure.

Think back to the Christmas memories that are most special to you. Most likely they were the times when your family did things together. The same holds true for your children.

Trimming the tree, baking cookies and wrapping presents may be the obvious rituals, but don't overlook watching the "Peanuts" Christmas special together or a simple drive in town where the houses are decked out with holiday displays. The emphasis is on doing and being together, no matter what the task.

Be sure to include youngsters in the task. It may seem easier to string the outdoor lights without help from the 6-year-old, but this is what he'll remember.

This is also a good time to bring the generations together. And not just the grandparents visiting from Arizona, but uncles and aunts and friends as well to work together and talk about old times. The kids may be disinterested at first, but something sooner or later is sure to capture their interest.

OF COURSE, the primary traditions are centered around meals. This a good time to include everyone in the preparation, but it's also an opportunity to baby yourself.

If there is a particular dish that means Christmas to you, then make it, even if you are the only person who enjoys it. Although it is a simple pleasure, it's one that goes a long way.

Maintain those traditions peculiar to your family. Do you open presents on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day? Do you light candles on the menorah and play dreidel every night, or just the first two? Read the nativity story from the Bible?

Each of these events gives meaning to the celebration.

If you are single or have no children, be sure to hook up with those of your same situation or include yourself in family gatherings.

If no invitations are forthcoming, then do the inviting yourself. Create your own traditions for you and your friends, even if it's renting a copy of "It's a Wonderful Life" and serving some eggnog.

Sometimes events preclude a happy holiday. A death in the family or a divorce or some other event may rob you of good cheer.

If you are not in the mood, then don't force a ritual that will remind you of who is missing.

If it means doing things differently or celebrating the holiday in a low-key manner or even going away for a few days, then do it.

The holidays are also a time of healing. Do whatever it takes to help you cope with grief.

SO FAR all this has been theoretical. Here are some things you can do to settle your neurotic self down and enjoy the holidays:

■ Schedule early. This is especially important for step-families. Figure out who is spending what holiday where and with whom at least a month in advance.

This precludes any hurt feelings or fouled-up travel arrangements. Also this gives you an idea how many guests you might have and allows you to make the necessary preparations.

■ Reserve. If you are traveling, make reservations in advance. The airlines are always booked, and the perfect flight at the most convenient time might just not be available Dec. 22.

■ Shop alone. True, it's fun to shop with your pals, but realistically it's better to shop at your pace at the stores you like. Christmas season is the World Series of shopping. The pros go it alone.

■ Safety first. Christmas and its accompanying adornments can spell danger, especially for children. Make sure your tree and other decorations are flame resistant.

Keep poisonous plants — holly and mistletoe — out of reach of children.

Take the time to clean your fireplace and, most of all, don't use it to burn wrapping paper. The sudden burst of flame has ruined more than one celebration.

■ You first. It may seem foolish given all that needs be done, but take the time to relax. Have a leisurely lunch between shopping expeditions. Go to the movies while the rest of mankind is mall-walking. Decorate alone, just the way you like. If all else fails, take a bubble bath.

■ Indulge, but not too much. Face it, it's useless to maintain a strict diet during the holidays. Too many temptations and why make yourself miserable?

MODERATION IS the key, especially when it comes to drinking. A sensible plan is to maintain a balanced diet during the non-festive meals and don't splurge during the feasts.

Also designate a non-drinking driver if you are making the rounds of parties. Too much cheer can make you a statistic.

■ Shop early. Yes, it is a tad late to mention this, but when you get your new calendar, mark Oct. 15 as the day to start, then forget about it until then.

It doesn't mean you'll do it, but it doesn't mean you won't, either.

Housework: Men do more, women do most

WASHINGTON (AP) — Men are wielding the mop and tending the stove more often than ever before yet still doing only half as much housework as women, a new study shows.

Women toil about two hours at home for every one hour of housework done by men, reports sociologist John P. Robinson in the December edition of American Demographics magazine.

Yet this represents significant progress in just 20 years, according to the study by Robinson, director of the Survey Research Center at the University of Maryland.

By comparison, in 1975 women spent three times as long as men on housework, and in 1965 the ratio was nearly six hours of housework for women for every hour worked by a man.

"Several important trends account for shifts in who does how much housework," Robinson reported in his study. These include declines in the share of households with children, a smaller share of married-couple households and increasing number of women in the paid work force.

Robinson compared the housework by analyzing studies of how people spend their time, done in 1965 and 1975 by the University of Michigan and in 1985 by his center.

THE SHIFT in the housework burden, he found, results from both an increase in the time spent on housework by men, and a decline in the time spent by women.

In 1985, Robinson found, men averaged 9.8 hours of housework weekly, while women put in 19.5 hours.

The 1975 study found men working 7.0 hours a week on home tasks compared with 21.7 hours for women.

And a decade earlier men spent 4.6 hours a week on housework, compared with 27.0 hours for women.

But despite the increasing male share of the load, men and women still tended to observe a traditional separation of tasks.

Women dominated in such areas as cooking, washing dishes, housecleaning, laundry and ironing. Men, on the other hand, were more likely to concentrate on household repairs and outdoor chores, while the burden of pet care, gardening and bill paying was shared.

Things have evened out somewhat, though, Robinson said.

For example, in 1965 some 98 percent of laundry and ironing was done by women, while by 1985 that was down to 88 percent. Women did 87 percent of cooking in 1965, and 77 percent in 1985.

On the other hand, men did only 32 percent of bill paying in 1965 but increased their share of 52 percent by 1985.

And men did 53 percent of the gardening and pet care in 1985, up from 33 percent two decades earlier.

Among the reasons for the change is the decline in the number of households with children, Robinson pointed out.

As any parent knows, children mean more cooking and cleaning and other housework, and the majority of that falls to mother.

WOMEN WITH children under age 5 averaged 22.5 hours of housework weekly in 1985, compared with 19.9 hours for women with children over age 5 and 17.9 hours for childless women. All three figures are down from prior years.

Married women do more housework than single ones.

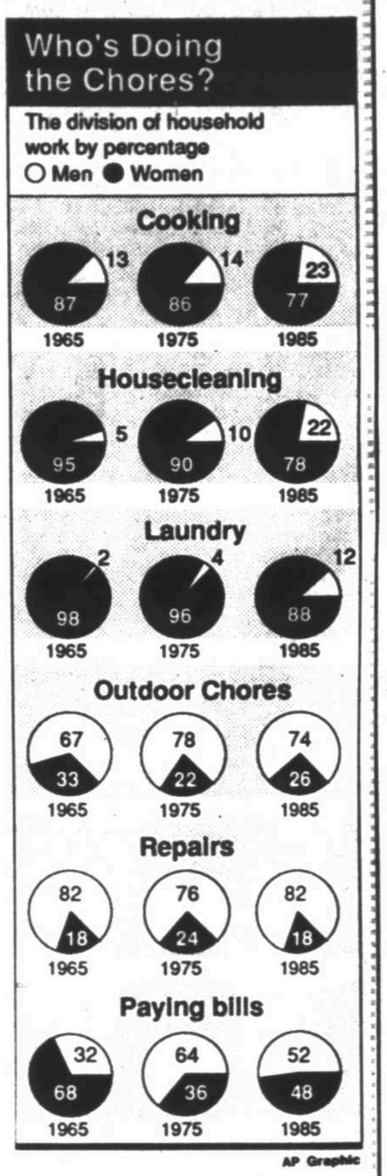

"Twenty years ago, getting married meant that women doubled the time they spent on housework while men did about as much housework as before they married," Robinson reported. "Today, both married men and married women do about 40 percent more housework than unmarried men and women."

The studies show that getting married in 1965 increased a woman's housework time from 15.5 hours weekly to 31.6 hours. Men, on the other hand, eased their burden a bit, averaging 4.7 hours when single and only 4.5 hours after getting married.

By 1985, marriage increased the housework for women from 14.9 hours to 22.4 hours, while men worked 7.9 hours on housework when single and 11.1 hours after getting married.

PAID EMPLOYMENT was also a major factor with more and more women entering the work force. However, in a finding Robinson termed surprising, women remaining at home cut their housework more than working ones over 20 years.

In 1965 a housewife averaged 34 hours of housework a week, compared to 17.8 hours for women with paid jobs. By 1985 that had declined to 23.6 hours for the women at home and 14.7 hours for those with jobs.

DEAR ABBY

Man's excess weight matter of life and death

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in response to your answer to "Anti-Fat." Abby, fat is a killer! Behind it lie medical problems that the mind simply cannot comprehend. I speak from experience.

I had a happy marriage to a wonderful man. We had love, laughter and four beautiful children. Never was a word said about the extra inches that crept onto his waist. Never was a word said as I altered his clothes, or bought the next size bigger because the old ones simply could no longer be buttoned.

When I met him in 1977, he was 20 years old, gorgeous and weighed 160 pounds. It was love at first words. We took our time and were married in 1981.

On March 25, 1988, I came home from the grocery store and found my husband leaning over the kitchen sink trying to breathe. His arms, shoulders and feet were numb. His skin was an awful shade of yellow. He refused to go to the hospital and would not permit me to call an ambulance. I begged and pleaded, so he finally let me drive him to the hospital, which was 13 miles from our home.

I drove the first 10 miles sanely, but three miles from the hospital he turned to me and said, "I love you, Babe. Forever. Take care." Then his body stiffened, he started to turn purple and make choking sounds. Then he fell toward me and his body relaxed.

My foot hit the floorboard of the car and I drove like a madwoman, knowing that help was near, and the faster I got him there, the better his chances were. I took the off ramp of the freeway at 90 miles an hour and drove into the emergency room entrance at Burlington Medical Center screaming for help.

The doctors and nurses were beautiful — they worked valiantly for what seemed like hours. I stood back, watching and praying the same words over and over, "Please, Lord, if it be your will — he's only 31." The heart monitor showed only the compressions for CPR and jolts of electricity from the shock paddles. Nothing could save him. I stood there and prayed as I became a widow at the age of 29.

How do you explain to four young children that the daddy they loved would never again roll on the floor with them and play tickle, or read them their storybooks? How can you look at a 3-year-old girl and tell her that her daddy loves her but cannot hug and kiss her again because he is an angel now? Or his 5-year-old son, C.J., that he will not be able to teach him how to catch a baseball or shoot baskets? These are now all my jobs.

The children and I have memories of a beautiful, but short life of a caring man. I now have a pillow that will never again cradle the head of the man I loved. Why? Because he ate too much. I never saw him on the scale, but I'm sure he weighed more than 250 pounds when he died. He was 5 feet 7 inches tall.

On his certificate of death it reads: Cause of death: arteriosclerotic cardiovascular disease caused by overweight.

Abby, if you think this will help someone else, you may publish this. You may use my name. — KATHERINE KERR, DES MOINES

HL&P customers turn up heat on utility firm

HOUSTON (AP) — The first of two scheduled hearings on a proposed $432 million Houston Lighting & Power rate increase drew hundreds of ratepayers to a downtown convention center to complain of mismanagement, insensitivity and greed.

One by one, more than 60 people stepped up to the microphone inside a vast conference room at the George R. Brown Convention Center. Each was allowed three minutes to address city and utility representatives, and most used every second to torpedo HL&P.

Elderly Houston residents accused the electric company of making electricity a "luxury," and a single mother with two children and a part-time job at a laundry also pleaded for relief.

"I had to borrow and beg," Mary Sanford said of her expensive summer electric bills. "Is my salary going to increase to meet the increases next year, and the next year, and the next? I don't think so."

The Saturday hearing was the first opportunity for the public to voice dissent since HL&P requested the 1990 rate increase, designed in part to pay construction costs for the jointly owned South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City.

The second of two public hearings in Houston was scheduled for Tuesday night at the convention center.

If approved by the city of Houston and the state Public Utility Commission, rates will increase 16.3 percent for most residential customers and 14.6 percent for commercial users.

Many of those who spoke during the hearing objected to the rate request because of the depressed Houston economy, while others claimed HL&P is a monopoly trying to recoup the cost of faulty, delayed construction of the nuclear plant.

"The emotions are very strong on the part of the people with low incomes," said Houston City Councilman Jim Greenwood.

HL&P spokesman R.L. Waldrop denied ratepayer claims that customers were being asked to bear cost overruns associated with Brown & Root, the former South Texas Project contractor.

"Not one dollar of wasted money is eligible for inclusion in HL&P's electric rates," Waldrop told the crowd.

The 17-year-old nuclear project was supposed to cost $1 billion, but management and other problems pushed the cost to $5.8 billion. A portion of the rate increase would also recoup costs associated with the utility's lignite-fueled plant near Fairfield.

HL&P has said it will request additional rate increases in 1991 and 1992.

Lighting the way

A young girl lights a menorah candle as part of a Hanukkah ceremony in San Angelo during the annual Christmas at Old Fort Concho festivities. The celebrations, which take place in an 1880s U.S. Army fort, include a number of religious ceremonies in the rebuilt chapel. Hanukkah, the Jewish "Festival of Lights," began Saturday at sundown and continues through Sunday.

U.S. agents bribed Colombians in drug deal, paper reports

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal undercover operatives paid bribes to Colombian officials and later sold drugs to parties unrelated to an investigation that allowed tons of illegal drugs to reach the streets of the United States, the Houston Chronicle reported.

Sources told the newspaper that drugs supposedly under the control of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration sometimes get into circulation in Houston and elsewhere through "reverse stings," in which federal operatives sell drugs in hopes of busting the buyers or gaining favor among dealers.

The tactics exposed during "Operation Camelback," an unsuccessful effort to invade the organization of reputed drug lord Bernardo-Londono Quintero, are cited as an example of how "reverse stings" sometimes backfire.

DEA officials refused to comment on the practice, but records from the operation show that between 5,000 and 7,000 pounds of a 13-ton marijuana shipment escaped the hands of federal agents and operatives near Flint, Mich. in 1984, the Chroncle reported Sunday.

The shipment crossed the U.S. border after a DEA-backed operative paid Colombian officials $60,000 to allow the drugs out of the country, the newspaper said.

After the DEA flew the marijuana to Phoenix, the target of their sting apparently became suspicious, refusing to send his U.S. contacts to pick up the drugs. To regain the Colombians' confidence, the DEA began trying to find other buyers for the pot with plans to turn over the proceeds to the Colombians.

They succeeded in finding buyers from Detroit, then lost track of a large portion of the drugs, court records show.

The failed "reverse sting" is among those brought under scrutiny since the Chronicle reported fake drug seizures set up by the DEA in Houston and throughout the country.

The Chronicle reported Nov. 27 that the DEA had directed local law enforcement agencies to stage the phony seizures and generate false news reports as a cover for DEA agents.

Such bogus seizures allow the DEA to maintain an undercover operation that involves bringing drugs into the country, while keeping the drugs off the street.

But, as the Camelback incident indicates, DEA-imported drugs sometimes hit the streets anyway, often as a result of the so-called "reverse stings."

"The idea moves from focusing on drug dealers to generating the idea at some college dorm that there is a super-fine deal on pot down at the docks," said Houston defense lawyer Ed Mallett said.

Truck-driving school targeted by Justice

HOUSTON (AP) — When 37-year-old Chester Howard saw a television ad for a truck driving school, the father of two who served prison time for manslaughter thought he had found a way to help put his life back together.

But after attending a three-week course at Superior Training Services, he was unable to find a high-paying trucking job and was left with a student loan to repay.

Howard is one of some 100,000 students nationwide who have enrolled at Superior Training Services since 1980 with help from federal financial aid programs, according to the U.S. Department of Justice.

The agency contends that Howard and many others were used by the schools to generate profits through student loans, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

In September, the U.S. Department of Justice sued Superior's Indiana-based parent company, Continental Training Services Inc., and its principal owner, Gary L. Eyler, alleging they defrauded the U.S. Department of Education out of more than $131 million in Guaranteed Student Loans and Pell Grants in the last eight years.

Tim Black, assistant general counsel for Superior, said the Justice Department allegations are "without foundation."

The company operates schools in Houston, Dallas and seven other locations where students receive actual truck driving experience.

The Justice Department says that about 95 percent of the school's students get federal student financial assistance and that more than 57 percent of the students default on Guaranteed Student Loans.

Company employees, the Justice Department says, have changed wrong answers on course examinations to make them correct, enrolled students unable to read and write, enrolled people who had physical disabilities that would prevent them from driving a truck, and enrolled students whose driving or criminal records would prevent them from becoming legally licensed.

Tracie Mozie, a young, unmarried welfare recipient with three children, said she was lured by prospects of a high-paying job, but instead got a bill for a $3,695 student loan.

Ms. Mozie, who was born with only one foot, says she was duped by a recruiter into enrolling with Superior.

"He guaranteed me they would find me a job," said Ms. Mozie, of Dickinson.

Black said the company was not given sufficient time to respond to the government charges, adding that he is certain Superior will prevail in the lawsuit.

Black said company figures show that only 11 percent of its student loans nationwide are in default, although the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corp. reports that 55.17 percent of the loans through the Houston campus were in default as of Sept. 30.

Company statistics show that approximately 25-30 percent of its students drop out, Black said.

An anonymous source told Chronicle that some students obtain a type of federal assistance, called Supplemental Student Loans, and then drop out of the school program as soon they get a check.

Legislature likely to decide inmate-condom issue

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A legislative task force recommendation that condoms be made available to state prison inmates threatens to throw a normally taboo subject into the public forum.

State leaders begin wrestling next month with containing the spread of the AIDS virus. Distribution of condoms to prisons would force prison officials to acknowledge that illegal activity is taking place in prison, says Walter Quijano, chief psychologist for the Texas Department of Corrections.

"It just shows you don't run a tight ship," Quijano told the Houston Chronicle. "But no matter how tight a ship you run, it (homosexual activity) is going to occur."

In one of 150 recommendations on the subject, members of the Legislative Task Force on AIDS said when data suggest the disease is being transmitted, officials should consider providing protection.

The panel also suggests that condoms be sold in prison commissaries for 5 cents apiece — a move that some task force members said might be more acceptable than giving them away.

So far, only Vermont, Mississippi and the New York City Jail provide condoms to inmates.

However, to do so in Texas would be against Texas law and state prison rules, which both bar homosexual activity.

But sexual activity does occur and no matter what is done, the activity will continue, officials acknowledge.

Those who favor distribution of condoms, like task force member Dr. Charles Alexander, do so from the obvious health standpoint.

Alexander, a TDC deputy director of health services who previously headed the AIDS and sexually transmitted disease control division of the Texas Department of Health, says distributing condoms is one way to prevent disease.

Critics claim it would create a host of other problems, including increased victimization of convicts by other convicts.

Quijano also sees problems from a prison management standpoint and the potential for increased suicide attempts if condoms are distributed to prisoners. Quijano, who has studied prison suicides and self-mutilations, said many of those incidents occur after homosexual attacks and that if sexual assaults were to increase, the number of suicide attempts could also increase.

Distribution of condoms could be taken as a sign of condoning gay activities and "if you tolerate it, victimization could increase," Quijano said.

"It may also lull people into believing that because there's a degree of protection, it's OK to have multiple sex partners," Quijano said. "With a gadget like that, people may lose the perspective that this is a dangerous virus."

Charles Terrell, chairman of the Texas Board of Corrections, shies away from commenting on the possibility on condoms for prisons, deferring to the expertise of Alexander and other health professionals. He said the board would discuss it "if and when (Alexander) wants to make a recommendation" to the board.

Alexander thinks the issue should be debated in the Legislature.

With the legislative session just a month away, he says prison administrators' thinking is to let elected officials tackle the issue.

"Why stick your neck out at this time?" he said.

DEA claims 7 men arrested in alleged cocaine bust

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven men were arrested and 1,700 pounds of pure cocaine were seized in New York and Houston after authorities here tracked an 850-pound shipment of the drug from the airport to a house in Queens.

Five people were arrested Saturday and Sunday in the New York area in connection with the drugs; another two were arrested early Sunday in Houston, where authorities seized another 850 pounds of pure cocaine, also destined for New York.

Robert Strang, a special agent with the Drug Enforcement Administration, said those arrested were identified as members of a Colombian drug organization, the Cali cartel, which controls cocaine trafficking in the New York area.

Officials armed with a search warrant also seized $15,000 in cash and records of cocaine shipments at a house in Flushing, Queens, Strang said.

The cocaine arrived at LaGuardia Airport on a Delta Airlines flight from Houston at about 1:45 p.m. Saturday, Strang said. Agents had watched the cocaine, which was packed in tin containers wrapped in foam, loaded onto the plane in Houston and unloaded in New York. Strang said an agent from Houston flew to New York on the flight with the cocaine. He said the airline was not liable for the shipment.

In New York, agents followed the van into which the cocaine had been loaded to a house at 57-07 146th St. in Flushing. The cocaine was transferred to another van about 9:30 p.m. Saturday, and two men drove the van to Nassau County to begin distributing it, Strang said.

Agents moved in to make the arrests and seize the drugs after one of the suspects apparently discovered that he was being watched.

Strang identified those arrested in New York between 11 p.m. Saturday and 2 a.m. Sunday as: Thomas Silengo, 36, for whom no hometown was available; Jesus Lopez, 26, of 255 Powers St., Brooklyn; Efraim Vega, 51, of Miami; Raul Rincon, 24, for whom no hometown was available, and Ricardo Fuentes, of 87-16 Britton Ave., Queens.

Strang identified the men arrested in Houston as: Jorge Enrique Castro-Vegara, 31, of Miami, and Duvan Leon-Sanchez, 26, of 51-51 Simonson St., Elmhurst, Queens.

Strang said Silengo was arrested at the Royce Hotel near LaGuardia Airport after he told a doorman he was a New York City police officer looking for his partners. When the doorman pointed out two police officers tailing Silengo, other agents nearby took Silengo into custody.

Lopez and Vega were arrested on the street in Queens. Rincon and Fuentes were arrested after they stopped the van with the cocaine at Highwood Road and Roosevelt Avenue in East Norwich, Strang said. He added that officials were certain that all the cocaine in the shipment had been recovered.

New York agents also seized two 1988 Ford vans, a 1989 Grand Prix and a loaded .357-caliber Magnum, Strang said.

Strang said prosecutors would ask a federal magistrate today for an arrest warrant for Hugo Bustos, who Strang said rented the house where the records and cash were found. Strang said Bustos was not home at the time of the other arrests.

Fort Worth woman to join truck convoy to Nicaragua

DALLAS (AP) — A Fort Worth woman will join a convoy that is expected to present supplies over the Christmas holiday to the needy in Central American areas devastated by a hurricane.

Ina Nell Wood said she had planned to travel to Nicaragua on Oct. 25. But three days before she wanted to leave, Hurricane Joan ripped apart the Central American country's Caribbean coast and Ms. Wood stayed home.

More than one month later, Ms. Wood is planning another trip to Nicaragua. This time, she will help.

The retired registered nurse is the only person from the Dallas-Fort Worth area to participate in the convoy, she said Sunday. Ms. Wood will accompany about 40 others as a driver.

Called the "Pastors for Peace Material Aid Convoy to Nicaragua", the caravan will arrive in Dallas Tuesday, then travel to Fort Worth and converge in San Antonio Friday.

Organizers planned the convoy before the hurricane struck Oct. 22. But they said supplies are needed more urgently now.

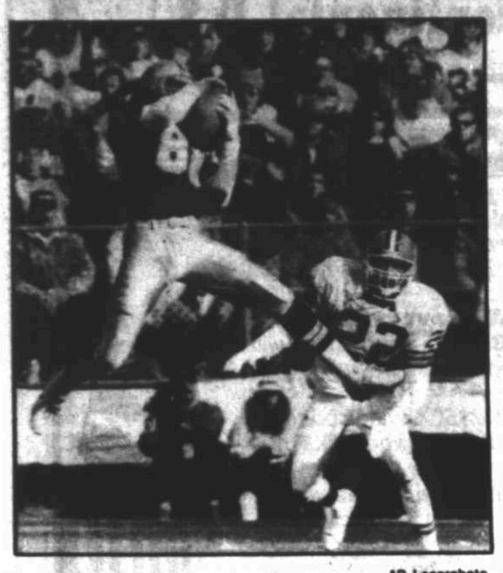

"I would like to help the people," said Ms. Wood, 66. "I would like to see what's going on down there firsthand, so that I can pass that on to others. I'm retired now and I have time to help others. And that's really what I have dedicated the remainder of my life to...And I'm adventuresome."

Cowboys lose: this time it's penalties

By CHUCK MELVIN

CLEVELAND (AP) — Steve Pelleur was brilliant. He completed 20 of 32 passes for 247 yards and didn't have a pass intercepted, but the Cowboys still lost.

This time it was penalties on field goals that had already been made that wiped six points off the board for Dallas in the 24-21 loss to the Cleveland Browns. The second came in the game's final seconds as tackle Randy White was caught tripping.

Roger Ruzek had his 40-yard game-tying field goal wiped out and then came up short, leaving the Cowoys 2-12. Dallas was stymied by 17 penalties for 142 yards.

Still, Bernie Kosar passed for 308 yards, three touchdowns. "The wideouts did a tremendous job for us today," the Cleveland quarterback said.

"He called it so I guess it was a legitimate call," White said of his fatal penalty. "I took a step in and took a step out. My leg came off the ground and their guy ran into it. If that's tripping, it's tripping. It screwed up our chance of going into overtime and winning."

Kosar's touchdowns went to three different receivers, and each of the three needed extra effort to get to the end zone.

Reggie Langhorne broke two tackles on his 73-yard catch-and-run in the first quarter, and Herman Fontenot shook off a defender on his 14-yard score early in the fourth quarter.

Clarence Weathers, however, put on the best show of all, racing down the left sideline and reaching out with his left hand to haul in a 36-yard touchdown pass with his fingertips with 13 minutes to go. It was his first touchdown since September 1987.

Despite the victory, the Browns lost any chance of a fourth straight AFC Central Division title, because division-leading Cincinnati, 11-3, defeated San Diego 27-10. Cleveland remains in good shape for a wild-card playoff bid.

Dallas matched a team record with its 10th straight loss. The Cowboys lost their first 10 games in 1960, their inaugural year, when they also had their worst record ever at 0-11-1.

Fontenot scored on the second play of the fourth period, taking a Kosar pass at the 8 and pulling away from defender Michael Downs for a 17-14 Cleveland lead. Dallas' Everett Gay then fumbled the ball following a reception near midfield to set up Kosar's 36-yarder to Weathers.

Kosar completed 19 of 27 passes without an interception, offsetting Herschel Walker's 134 yards on 25 carries. Walker's 4-yard touchdown run, set up partly by his own 20-yard run, got the Cowboys within three points with 7:20 to play, but they could not score again.

Kosar opened the scoring late in the first quarter with the 73-yard touchdown pass to Langhorne, who sliced across the middle for the reception, shook off two tacklers and then got key downfield blocks from Ozzie Newsome and Brian Brennan.

Dallas tied it on its next possession when Steve Pelluer threw a 7-yard touchdown pass to Darryl Clack.

Matt Bahr, hobbling because of bruised ribs suffered on a fake field goal in the first quarter, hit a 25-yard field goal with five minutes left in the half for a 10-7 Cleveland lead.

But Pelluer completed a 41-yard pass to Cornell Burbage to the Cleveland 5 on third down and, one play later, hit Steve Folsom with a 5-yard score for a 14-10 Dallas lead at the half.

Pelluer completed 20 of 32 passes for 247 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions.

Pelluer was not sacked, but Dallas sacked Kosar five times.

Angry Lendl advances to finals today

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Defending champion Ivan Lendl, angered and distracted by picture-taking fans, beat Stefan Edberg 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) Sunday to reach his ninth straight Masters tennis final. Lendl plays Boris Becker for the championship of the season-ending tournament tonight. Becker, playing his best on crucial points, ended the title hopes of upstart Jakob Hlasek 7-6 (7-2), 7-6 (7-3) in the second semifinal.

Lendl, seeking a record fourth consecutive Masters title, complained repeatedly about fans taking flash photographs during his match. Two people were ejected after ignoring warnings by chair umpire Paulo Pereira.

"When you toss up the ball and somebody flashes, you see the flash instead of the ball," Lendl said. "It's very, very distracting."

Penney Classic

LARGO, Fla. - John Huston and Amy Benz birdied the 18th hole to end a tense shootout down the stretch and win the $200,000 J.C. Penney Golf Classic by two strokes. Huston and Benz, former high school teammates in Dunedin, Fla., where Benz played on the boys' golf team, continued a steady shot production with a 37-34-67 over the par 36-36-72 North course in Largo and had a four-day score of 69-68-65-67-269, 19 under par.

Larry Mize, the 1987 Masters champion, and Martha Nause, who have tried six straight years to win the event, cut a three-stroke deficit to one with one hole left by shooting birdies at the 14th and 16th holes. The event pairs a men's and women's pro for combined and alternate shot competition.

They finished a frustrating day at 35-35-70 and had a four-round 68-66-67-70-271, or 17 under par, to earn $50,000 apiece.

Reese gains tie

LA QUINTA, Calif. — Robert Thompson of Huntsville, Texas, faltered with five birdies Sunday and was tied by Don Reese of Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., in the fifth round of the PGA Qualifying Tournament.

Thompson shot a 5-over-par 77. Reese pulled even with a 74—348.

Steelers shock Oilers

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — Merril Hoge caught a 16-yard pass from Bubby Brister with 20 seconds to play, his second score of the fourth quarter, rallying the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 37-34 victory over Houston Sunday in a game filled with big plays.

Brister's game-winning pass was his third TD throw of the game and came after the Oilers had taken a 34-31 lead with 1:30 to play on a 3-yard run by Warren Moon.

But Brister passed 32 yards to Rodney Carter to the Houston 48, and then hit Carter for 15 more yards to the Houston 21. A holding penalty against linebacker Robert Lyles put the ball at the Oilers' 16 and Hoge got free over the middle for the game-winner.

Earlier in the quarter, Moon had been intercepted three times.

HOGE scored on a 2-yard run with 7:36 to play, giving the Steelers a 31-27 lead. Larry Griffin returned an interception 34 yards to set up the TD. It was the second of the interceptions of Moon in the final period — Dwayne Woodruff made the other two.

The Oilers then drove 80 yards in eight plays, with Moon scoring on an option play. He rolled left and cut inside to score after he brought his team downfield on passes of 15 yards to Leonard Harris and 26 to Ernest Givins. The drive was aided by a 15-yard quarterback roughing penalty against Greg Lloyd.

The loss snapped Houston's 10-game home winning streak and dropped the Oilers to 9-5, two games behind first-place Cincinnati in the AFC Central and tied with Cleveland for second place. Pittsburgh, 4-10, won its second straight.

ROOKIE Lorenzo White had given the Oilers life with a 90-yard kickoff return for a touchdown, rallying them within 27-24. White scored his first NFL touchdown in the third quarter after the Steelers had taken a 24-13 lead on TD passes of 80 and 65 yards from Brister to Louis Lipps and a 92-yard kickoff return by Dwight Stone.

Stone cut inside a block and raced down the sideline, brushing past kicker Tony Zendejas, the only Houston player to touch him; for a 10-3 lead. It was the first kickoff return for a touchdown against Houston since Oct. 28, 1973 when Chicago's Ike Hill ran 95 yards.

White took the kickoff after Lipps' 65-yarder and ran untouched into the end zone after scooping up a bouncing kickoff. Then Moon put the Oilers ahead with 2:18 left in the third quarter when he rolled out and scored on a 2-yard run.

MOON had hit Mike Rozier with a 6-yard touchdown pass and Zendejas kicked a 41-yard field goal, giving the Oilers a 13-10 lead. But Brister hit Lipps with an 80-yard scoring pass on the first play of the next series and the Steelers led 17-13.

A 40-yard halfback pass play from Carter to Hoge set up a 45-yard field goal by Gary Anderson, giving the Steelers a 3-0 first-quarter lead.

The Oilers' demise started with 13:47 left in the game when Woodruff returned his first interception 10 yards from deep in his territory. Pittsburgh was unable to capitalize on that turnover but, moments later, Griffin picked off another pass to set up Hoge's first touchdown with 11:33 to play.

Brister completed a 10-yard pass to Preston Gothard and seven yards to Hoge. That gave Pittsburgh a first down at Houston's 11 and, two plays later, Hoge ran up the middle for the score.

Moon had thrown only four interceptions this season until the fourth quarter. He finished with 19 completions on 38 attempts for 269 yards, with three interceptions.

White's touchdown was the first Oilers kickoff return for a score since Steve Brown's 93-yard return in 1983.

Mojo 'tests' Carter next

Associated Press

There are several ways to get to the show and Dallas Carter apparently knows the backroads.

Carter, a team that has been squeaking through the courtroom over a player's math grade but streaking through the football field in the Class 5A football playoffs, pulled a different kind of play out of some coach's hat Saturday to make it to the semifinals slated for this weekend.

With three seconds showing on the clock in Waco's Floyd Casey Stadium, quarterback Robert Hall hit Jessie Armstead, a linebacker lined up at tight end, for a touchdown and Carter beat Marshall 22-18.

The linebacker had not caught a pass since his freshman year but talked his coach into the play nevertheless.

"I just told them to throw it to me because I could catch it no matter who hit me," he said.

IN OTHER Class 5A quarterfinal games during the weekend, Houston Stratford beat Willowridge 10-7, while Odessa Permian beat Arlington Lamar 21-7 and Converse Judson Beat Corpus Christi Carroll 30-0.

This weekend, Carter, 13-0-1, will play Permian, 12-2, at Austin in the semifinals while Stratford, 12-1, plays Judson, 13-1.

Stratford got revenge for an early-season loss to Willowridge with the win over the Eagles.

Spartan quarterback Jimmy Klinger hit Eric Weir on a 33-yard touchdown pass late in the fourth quarter for the victory.

Willowridge had defeated Stratford in the second week of the regular season, 15-2.

Judson had an easier time in its game against Corpus Christi Carroll. The Rockets' offense piled up 407 yards enroute to the win.

Running back Chris Comer scored two touchdowns, including a 14-yard dash in the fourth quarter to pace Permian.

IN CLASS 4A quarterfinal action, Cleburne, 12-2, beat Monahans 22-14 in San Angelo and will take on Paris, 11-3, which defeated Denison 30-17.

The other 4A semifinal game will match West Orange-Stark against Kerrville Tivy. Stark, 11-2, beat Tomball, 24-22 and Tivy beat Uvalde 43-14.

Class 3A will have Decatur, 10-2-2, and Southlake Carroll, 14-0, in one semifinal. Navasota, 11-3, will play Sweeny, 7-5-1, in the other.

Quanah, 13-1, beat Eastland 41-21 to advance in Class 2A and will play Celina, 13-1, which defeated McGregor 29-25.

Corrigan-Camden, 13-0-1, topped Hughes Springs, 34-20 for another semifinal spot and will play Refugio,

TED BATTLES

Changing face of WJCAC much in evidence tonight

Battles

The changing face of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference is graphically illustrated by what's going on in Midland and Odessa tonight.

How many times in the past can anyone remember the caliber of action offered Permian Basin WJCAC fans tonight?

What you have is four contenders in action....Odessa College against Howard College and South Plains College against Midland College.

And somewhere else New Mexico Junior College is taking out its frustration on some poor soul.

HOW LONG has it been since the WJCAC had this many viable contenders, teams to whom a possible championship is more than just a pipe dream?

The WJCAC has a past in which a Mike Mitchell, Nolan Richardson or Jerry Stone has coached a team that has terrorized the rest of the league for three months and then disappeared to Kansas. Oh, maybe there might be one semi legitimate challenger, but the result was the same... Western Texas College or Midland College.

Unless you were WTC or MC, it tended to become monotonous.

TONIGHT fans are offered a couple of rare treats. At Odessa Student Events Center, it's the Wranglers against the Hawks...Larry Johnson vs. Terence Lewis. That should be a beauty.

And at the Chap Center, it's South Plains' experience against Midland's youth, enthusiasm and, let's face it, at this stage of the season, freshmen mistakes.

The WJCAC transition began to take place a couple of years ago when NMJC, led by Richard Hollis, now helping rejuvenate the University of Houston program, upset Midland College for the title.

Apparently it was so unexpected that the Thunderbirds went out and got knocked off by a nobody in the first game of the Regional and Midland went on to the NJCAA finals.

THEN, LAST year, Odessa College won conference and regional.

If the 30-30 rule has transformed college football, supposedly in the direction of parity, Proposition 48 has revolutionized things in juco ball and particularly in the WJCAC.

The league has always been far above average. Just look at the national champions it has produced and the players who have gone on to major colleges and, yes, the NBA.

But Proposition 48 has resulted in a surfeit of talent in the league. Everybody has good players. Before Proposition 48, WJCAC fans never would have been watching players like Larry Johnson and Terence Lewis live. They'd have gone directly to network and ESPN TV.

MIDLAND has long had good talent. Check the college rosters. And now it's even better. Up in Norman, they refer to MC as the University of Oklahoma, Midland branch.

In the last two years, the Chaps have sent talent to such powers as Kansas, Oklahoma, Wyoming and, if you want to count Pookie Wigginton, Seton Hall.

Wigginton played at MC as a freshman, and spent most of his time on the bench. He went to a junior college in California in his sophomore year and had a great year, good enough to be plucked by the Pirates from the Big East.

It was suggested to MC Coach Reggie Franklin that even the kids who couldn't make it here, are making it at the major college level. Wigginton was a prime mover in Seton's Great Alaskan Shootout victory recently.

"I wouldn't say he didn't make it," corrected Reggie. "He would have played more his second year, but with Ricky Grace, Mookie Blaylock, Lincoln Minor and Todd Duncan around, he would have had a lot of competition for playing time."

The end result of the upgrading of so many one-time also-rans to class of contender means that showdown games, instead of coming up two or three times a season, may become habit forming.

For example, tonight there are two of 'em within 20 miles of one another. It may be tough on the coaches, but it's great for fan interest.

SCOREBOARD

Chicago, 11-2, at Los Angeles Rams, 7-6 (8 p.m.). The Bears have clinched a playoff spot in the NFC Central. If the Rams win, they would be a game behind San Francisco and New Orleans, the NFC West leaders.

STATS

The Vikings, 10-4, have reached double figures in victories for the first time since 1976, when they made their fourth Super Bowl appearance. ... Detroit's Devon Mitchell returned an interception 90 yards for a touchdown, the NFL's longest interception return of the season, in the Lions' 30-14 victory over the Green Bay Packers. ... Vinny Testaverde didn't make a turnover for the first time this season in Tampa Bay's 10-5 victory over the Buffalo Bills. He completed 12 of 29 passes for 156 yards. ... Dan Marino tied Bob Griese's Dolphins record of 192 career touchdown passes, set from 1967 to 1980. ... Seattle and New England combined for 109 passing yards in the Patriots' 13-7 victory. Seattle had 62, New England had 47.

STREAKS

Luis Zendejas of the Eagles missed the first extra point of his NFL career in the second quarter Sunday after making 38 straight. ... Minnesota has not allowed a touchdown in 17 consecutive quarters. ... Green Bay has lost four straight, the Packers' longest losing streak since 1984. ... Ozzie Newsome of Cleveland has handled the ball 500 consecutive times without fumbling. He has now caught at least 30 passes in each of his 11 NFL seasons.

STREAKING DOWNWARD

Dallas' 24-21 loss to Cleveland was a record 12th for the Cowboys, who have two victories. Dallas tied a team record with its 10th consecutive loss. The Cowboys lost their first 10 games in 1960, their inaugural year, when they also had their worst record ever at 0-11-1. ... Miami is 5-9, the most defeats in Don Shula's 26 seasons as coach of the Dolphins. Miami has lost five straight for the first time since 1967.

SWEEPS

The Los Angeles Raiders beat the Denver Bronocs to sweep the season series. Los Angeles also won 30-27 in overtime at Denver. It was the 11th straight season one team has swept the Raiders-Broncos series.

SCORING

Minnesota has outscored its last four opponents 123-9 and its last five 167-26. The Vikins have outscored the Saints by 122-30 in their last three games, including 93-13 in the first halves. ... Keith Byars of Philadelphia ran for a touchdown and caught a touchdown pass in the first two-touchdown game of his NFL career, but the Eagles lost to the Washington Redskins 20-19.

STINGY

The Seattle Seahawks had two first downs and 65 yards of offense in a 13-7 loss to the New England Patriots. Both were records for New England's defense, breaking the 66 yards by Baltimore in 1977 and the five first downs by Chicago in 1979.

SUCCESS

Cincinnati' 27-10 victory over the San Diego Chargers clinched the Bengals' first playoff berth in six years.

SEATING

A crowd of 26,124 showed up in the 80,638-seat Silverdome for the Detroit Lions' 30-14 victory over the Green Bay Packers. There were 9,826 no-shows. A banner hanging from the upper deck proclaimed: "We couldn't get Pistons tickets."

Dexter Manley played only six plays for Washington, leaving with a sprained knee.

Sanders eclipses mark

Cowboys lasso Raiders, 45-42

TOKYO (AP) — Just hours after collecting the Heisman Trophy, Barry Sanders showed why, leading 12th-ranked Oklahoma State to a 45-42 victory over Texas Tech Sunday.

The tailback rewrote a few more all-time college football records as he eclipsed the seasonal rushing mark and scored four touchdowns to bring his total this season to 39 — 10 more than any player previously in NCAA history.

Sanders dashed 15 yards with 2:33 remaining in the first quarter to sweep past the 1981 NCAA mark of 2,342 yards set by Marcus Allen of Southern California. Sanders carried 42 times for 257 yards to windup with a record 2,553 yards.

The Cowboys, 9-2, intercepted a pass by quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver on the game's first play, setting up a one-yard touchdown leap by Sanders for a 7-0 lead.

Tolliver led Texas Tech, 5-6, on an 80-yard drive to tie the score on a one-yard run by Gray, who scored four touchdowns in the game for the Red Raiders.

A SIX-yard Gray run with 6:32 left in the second quarter gave Texas Tech a 14-7 lead. But Sanders tied the score at 14 with a 56-yard run with 4:28 left in the second quarter.

After Gray swept in five yards for a touchdown with 1:47 remaining in the half for the Red Raiders, Cary Blanchard kicked a 43-yard field goal for the Cowboys to reduce Texas Tech's lead to 21-17 at the half.

Oklahoma State went ahead 24-21, never to trail again, 2:25 into the second half on an 11-yard pass from Mike Gundy to Hart Lee Dykes. The Cowboys made it 31-21 four minutes later on a 6-yard Gundy-to-Dykes pass.

Texas Tech pulled to 31-28 with 2:45 left in the third quarter when Gray scored from the 1.

Sanders then sprinted 65 yards to ending the scoring.

Texas Tech moved from its own 15 to Oklahoma State's 47 on short passes to Travis Price and Ervin Farris, plus a 30-yard toss to Price. But Lamar McGriggs intercepted Tolliver at the Oklahoma State 46 to halt that drive.

The Red Raiders lost two turnovers in the final two minutes as they took to the air in last-ditch attempts to take the lead.

Tolliver completed 28 of 41 passes for a school-record 446 yards.

Oklahoma State's Blanchard increased his own NCAA mark for consecutive extra points to 67, breaking the NCAA season record for most extra points kicked in a season.

The Cowboys play 15th-ranked Wyoming on Dec. 30 in the Holiday Bowl. Texas Tech finished its worst season since going 4-7 in 1985.

Bengals on way into NFL playoffs

Associated Press

The Cincinnati Bengals moved into the playoffs and closer to the home-field edge throughout the AFC playoffs with a 27-10 victory over the San Diego Chargers on Sunday.

While the Bengals were clinching their first playoff spot in six years, the Buffalo Bills, the only other conference team already into the playoffs, were upset 10-5 by Tampa Bay. That left both the Bills and Bengals with 11-3 records.

If the teams finish tied for the best record in the AFC, Cincinnati gets the advantage because it beat Buffalo last week.

A victory next Sunday at Houston would give the Bengals the AFC Central title in Sam Wyche's fifth year as head coach.

Elbert "Ickey" Woods ran for a career-high 141 yards and two touchdowns for the Bengals, setting a team record with 15 rushing touchdowns.

"It's nice just to come in and help the Bengals get to the playoffs, to see the change around from 4-11 (last season) to an 11-3 team," Woods said. "I'm not the reason for the change, but I have had some input into the team."

Boomer Esiason, the NFL's top-ranked passer, completed 10 of 19 passes for 178 yards and two touchdowns to complement Woods' running. San Diego, 4-10, self-destructed with 97 yards in penalties in the first half, including two calls that negated touchdowns.

BRIEFS

Tied at 350 were John Adams (69) of Scottsdale, Ariz.; Robin Freeman of Indio, Calif; Jack Kay Jr. of Ocala, Fla.; Clark Burroughs of Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla.; and Billy Andrade of Bristol, R.I.

Bies prevails

KAANAPALI, Hawaii — Rookie Don Bies sank a 25-foot birdie putt on the final hole Sunday to win the Kaanapali Classic seniors by one stroke over Don January. Bies completed the 54-hole tournament, final stop on the Senior PGA Tour, at 12-under-par 204.

January, the all-time winner of the Senior Tour, was second place after parring the 18th. Dave Hill took third, two strokes behind Bies.

IU boots Howard

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Sean Shapert's penalty-kick goal with 10:06 to play in the first half gave Indiana (19-3-3) a 1-0 victory over Howard University in the NCAA Division I soccer championship game Sunday. Shapert's ninth goal of the season gave the No.9-ranked Hoosiers their third national title while snapping a 24-game unbeaten streak for 19-1-1 Bisons....

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your close personal relationships will require more of your time. You will find out how much you really mean to the main people in your life. Travel may be too expensive to benefit a partnership or small business now. Concentrate on word-of-mouth advertising and direct mail to improve the bottom line. Do not ignore advanced technologies. Your best bet is to open new lines of communication.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Padres manager Larry Bowa, actor Tom Hulce, jazzman Dave Brubeck, funnyman Wally Cox, lyricist Ira Gershwin, actresses Lynn Fontanne and Agnes Moorhead, poet Joyce Kilmer, Yankees great Tony Lazzeri.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Reconciliations are possible now. New career trends develop, but you may not be able to take full advantage of them for several months. Special sales help you find good Christmas buys.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The best of all worlds may be offered to you soon. Looking together in the same direction makes a good relationship even better. Home life is more settled. Affection grows.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make an independent check on someone's claims. He may be trying to hoodwink you. Your social life goes full tilt as the holiday season approaches. Settle a difficult problem once and for all.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are always "on stage" around certain friends. Conversations that are candid and far-ranging suit you best. Family ties give you the strength to make some tough but necessary decisions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): People are talking favorably about what you are doing. Get more variety into your life. The last few weeks of this year should be great both financially and socially.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An exciting day awaits you. An unexpected visit with someone from your past brightens your outlook. A letter or telephone call brings good news about offspring. Show your affection openly. Celebrate tonight!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Beware of smooth-talking salespeople today. You are more vulnerable than usual to their patter. A so-called "bargain" could turn out to be a white elephant. You enjoy a discussion with a lively teen-ager.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not get upset if others do not share your enthusiasm for an important decision. Rely on facts, not your intuition, when it comes to handling a sensitive financial issue. Be objective.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pay more attention to details. Read the fine print in contracts before signing. Refuse to be rushed. Major decisions are best postponed. Give loved ones the benefit of the doubt.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Meet deadlines on time. You need to do some serious thinking about the direction you want to go in now. Consult experts and read books; you will be surprised at what you learn.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Complete routine tasks quickly, freeing up time for more creative work. A great day for free-lance writers and musicians. Make some holiday purchases in your own neighborhood to save time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Patience and steady effort will help you realize your goals. Take someone's tale of woe with a grain of salt. Romance cools.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ Void ♡ AJ93 ◇ QJ9 ♣ AJ10643
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Why flog a dead horse? When partner opened the bidding, slam was a possibility, but the hands appear to be a complete misfit. There doesn't seem to be any point to looking for an alternative contract, so we would pass. Just hope he makes it.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ AJ94 ♡ AQ72 ◇ AK876 ♣ Void
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—You have a very fine hand, and slam is a distinct possibility—if you have a fit! Don't crowd the auction by jumping to two diamonds. You might need all the bidding room you can muster to probe for your best spot. Bid one diamond.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ 93 ♡ K7 ◇ A108 ♣ AKJ984
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	1 ♠	1 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Throw away your textbooks! Partner has made a positive bid—he would have passed with 6–7 points—and you have a hand that rates to produce seven or eight tricks. Jump to three no trump.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ K9 ♡ 8 ◇ KQ8732 ♣ AJ65

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

A.—There's no reason why you should not complete the picture of your hand by bidding three clubs. That shows six diamonds and four clubs—with 5–4, your first rebid would have been two clubs.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ 83 ♡ K954 ◇ K82 ♣ Q1076
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Dbl	?

What action do you take?
A.—Since East's double is directed toward the majors, there is little to recommend a one heart response—the possibility of your side having a 4–4 heart fit is slight. Bid one no trump, the textbook way to show 8–9 points. That also prevents the opponents from finding the spade suit at the one level.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ 952 ♡ 84 ◇ AKQJ95 ♣ 76
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—Had your suit been a major, we could find some justification for bidding it. But since it's a minor, your best bet is to pass and hope the opponents land in a no trump contract. As long as you lead fourth-best from your longest and strongest, their chances of making it are slight.

Busey in critical condition after motorcycle accident

Busey

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gary Busey, whose portrayal of Buddy Holly earned him an Oscar nomination, was in critical condition today with brain injuries sustained when he was hurled from his motorcycle headfirst without a helmet into a curb.

Neurosurgeons at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center completed a two-hour emergency operation Sunday night, but there were no details about the extent of the 44-year-old actor's injuries or the prognosis.

"He's still in critical condition. He has extensive head trauma," hospital spokesman Ron Wise said after the surgery.

Busey was riding alone when he inexplicably lost control of his motorcycle at an intersection in Culver City, about 10 miles west of downtown, said Culver City police Sgt. Karin Reagan.

"He hit the curb with his head and wasn't wearing a helmet at the time of the crash," she said.

There were no obstructions in the road, and no other vehicles were involved in Sunday's crash, which occurred shortly before noon on a sunny day, police said.

The actor opposed mandatory helmet laws for motorcyclists. He appeared last month at North Hollywood's Palomino Club to raise money to hire lobbyists in Sacramento to fight such a bill.

The toothy, scratchy-voiced actor, who lives in Malibu with his wife, Judy, and 17-year-old son, Jake earned the Academy Award nomination with his first feature film portraying the ill-fated 1950s rock 'n' roll star in the 1978 movie "The Buddy Holly Story."

Busey, a one-time aspiring rock musician himself and like Holly a native of Texas, performed his own renditions of Holly's hit songs in the film.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Myrna Loy, the saucy Nora Charles of the "Thin Man" movies, walked into the East Room with the aid of a cane.

George Burns, whose wisecracks have delighted audiences from the '30s to the '80s, walked with a White House aide holding each arm.

They may not be as spry as they were in what President Reagan called "the glory days" of Hollywood, but Ms. Loy, 83, and Burns, 92, were the toast of Washington Sunday night.

Along with violinist Alexander Schneider, 80, producer Roger Stevens, 78, and choreographer Alvin Ailey, 57, they were honored as the 1988 recipients of Kennedy Center honors in the performing arts.

"As a performer, the lovely and mysterious Myrna Loy always conveyed a sense of great ease and comfort, as though she were possessed of answers to questions you never even knew you had asked," Reagan said.

The 77-year-old president matched wisecracks with Burns, saying, "One thing I can't figure out is how George manages to appear with Johnny Carson so often. I'm always in bed when he's on."

From the White House the celebration moved to the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, where President-elect George Bush joined those on the stage and in the audience in singing "Auld Lang Syne" in honor of Reagan.

The Kennedy Center honorees join 52 others who have received similar recognition since the awards were instituted in 1978.

The audience saw clips of Ms. Loy in films with Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Frederic March and other leading men as well as the "Thin Man" series in which she played the brittle, witty spouse of detective Nick Charles with William Powell.

Ms. Turner pointed out that not only did President Roosevelt say Ms. Loy was his favorite actress, but gangster John Dillinger was watching one of her films, "Manhattan Melodrama," when he was tracked down and killed by G-men in the Biograph Theater in Chicago.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., delivered the salute to Stevens, who was chairman of the board of trustees of the Kennedy Center from 1961 to 1988. Ushers, stagehands and ticket sellers trooped to the stage to join such luminaries as actress Faye Dunaway and playwright Edward Albee in paying tribute to the veteran theatrical producer.

NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin Costner got rave reviews in his bomber jacket, Joan Collins's bare-shoulder look was "fabulous, elegant, lovely," and Britain's Prince William got a nod of approval for the little pleats on his pants.

The three were among the celebrities listed by People magazine as the year's best-dressed.

This week's People also gave worst-dressed citations. George Bush was among them because his suit and tie were "boring." Elton John was cited for a ladylike hat, and William's mother, Princess Diana, for her blue jean and T-shirt combo.

Talk show host Morton Downey Jr., one of seven judges, said he is "sick of royalty that tries to look like common folk."

Also judging the fashion coups and boo-boos of 1988 were Olympic track star Florence Griffith Joyner, TV's extraterrestrial ALF, country singer Tanya Tucker and designers Vivienne Westwood, Victor Costa and Kenneth Cole.

Mary Tyler Moore, wrapped in a floor-length gown, was declared "terribly pretty" by Westwood. Cole called Barbra Steisand "a beautiful woman with a lot of style."

Costa said of Corbin Bernsen, "You couldn't look any better than that," and cooed that Audrey Hepburn was "impeccable, fantastic" in a draped number of polka dots and stripes.

Joyner, however, said, "I would only buy something like this if I could get my money back after I wore it."

The track star herself was among those judged, and her stretch-lace racing tights did not win a gold medal. "Is this the Olympics or the Folies-Bergeres?" Downey wondered. Costa said the tights made her look like a Playboy bunny.

Lauren Hutton, too, didn't fare well. Her floral mini by French designer Christian Lacroix inspired Cole to say, "She is a remarkable woman wearing a remarkable dress that should be worn by someone else."

Madonna, Cybill Shepherd, Raquel Welch and tennis star Andre Agassi also joined Bush as the year's worst dressed. Of the president-elect, Tucker said, "What can you do with this guy?"

ALF said of the navel-baring get-up Cher wore at the Academy Awards, "She has finally found a way to stay off the worst-dressed lists: not wearing clothes."

Survey finds economy still robust

By KURT EICHENWALD
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The growth rate of the nation's economy remained robust in November, though slightly lower than in October, the National Association of Purchasing Management says in its monthly report, to be released Monday.

A mild decline was posted in the rate of production growth, but employment grew at the greatest rate in 11 months, with some purchasers indicating difficulty in hiring new employees, according to the report.

New export orders, which have been a key element of recent economic growth, continued to slow for the fourth consecutive month.

Prices and inventories were reported up, but vendor deliveries were down.

The report is based on surveys of purchasing managers at more than 250 companies representing 21 industries. Economists consider its findings to be a preliminary indicator of the previous month's economic performance.

The association's composite index dropped slightly to 56.6 percent in November from 56.8 percent in October.

November was the 28th consecutive month that the index, which is seasonally adjusted, exceeded 50 percent.

An index above 50 percent indicates that the economy is expanding; less than 50 percent implies a contraction.

Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the association's business survey committee and director of materials management at Pitney Bowes Inc., said the November results were positive in spite of the slight decrease in the growth rate.

"November's robust showing underscores the strength remaining in the economy," Bretz said. "Although showing some signs of softening, particularly in the export order growth rate, the continued healthy level of new orders, combined with a solid downtrend in the inflation rate, virtually assures a strong fourth quarter."

New orders rose in November for the 42d consecutive month, after normal seasonal variations were taken into account.

The index for new orders fell to 58 percent from October's 58.9 percent. The rate for new orders has been sliding for several months.

Thirty percent of the purchasers reported a jump in new orders, and 18 percent reported a decline. The rest reported no change.

New export orders were down significantly. Among exporters, 22 percent reported higher orders, down from 26 percent in October and far below the average of 37.8 percent in the first seven months of the year.

Oil futures prices hold steady

From Staff and Wire Reports

Energy futures opened a new week near the high note where it ended Friday as investors remain optimistic that OPEC can stick to its latest production agreement.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the January contract for West Texas Intermediate opened a penny lowere than its Friday close of $15.64. Friday the near-month contract settled 3 cents higher after trading as high as $15.74. Other contract months also advanced slightly.

Refined petroleum products traded on the exchange were mostly lower in what analysts said were technical factors.

Analysts said the optimism begun after last Monday's decision by OPEC to drastically reduce production managed to carry through the week despite skepticism that the agreement would last.

"Two weeks ago you couldn't find a bull; now you can't find a bear," said Jim Fiedler, vice president in charge of energy brokering for ED&F Man International Futures Inc.

Analysts and brokers remained mixed in their assessment of where prices would head in coming weeks.

Mike Hiley, a broker for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., said the market is unlikely to make further headway until it receives confirmation of whether OPEC will stick to its agreement. Until then, he believes prices will drift in the $15 range of this week.

"OPEC has milked the agreement for all it's worth and now the market is waiting until January to what's going to happen," Hiley said.

Dollar begins quiet week lower

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was lower in early European trading today and currency dealers said they expect little movement during a week in which no economic indicators are scheduled to be released. Gold prices rose as much as $6.45 an ounce.

Traders said volume has already fallen to its traditional slim year-end levels.

"The general market view is bearish, but if you talk to people in the dealing rooms, you can hear many different opinions," said one dealer at a West German bank in Frankfurt.

"The situation is fairly confused, and since we don't expect any figures this week, we'll probably stay in a (narrow trading) range."

In Tokyo, the dollar slipped 0.11 yen to close at 121.53 yen on reports that Emperor Hirohito's condition had worsened, dealers said. Later, in London, it was quoted at 121.15 yen.

In London, one British pound cost $1.8713, more than 1 cent more expensive for buyers than late Friday's $1.8597.

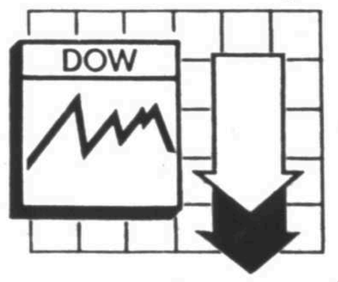

Gold prices were sharply higher in Europe. Gold surged in New York on Friday in the wake of another surge in platinum prices.

The metal opened in London at a bid price of $429.80 a troy ounce, up from $425.50 bid late Friday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $430.40.

In Zurich, the bid price was $430.75, up from $424.30 bid late Friday. Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 86 cents to close at a bid $429.94.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.20 a troy ounce, up from Friday's $6.13.

Stocks lower but resilient Friday

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell Friday but still displayed signs of resilience after the Labor Department issued an employment report that deepened investor concerns about inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 9.60 to 2,092.28 after having been down about 17 points in early trading. The index closed out the week with a 17.60-point gain.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by about 4-to-3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 822 issues down, 616 up and 504 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE came to a sluggish 124.61 million shares, down from 129.38 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trading at regional exchanges and on the over-the-counter market, totaled 150.79 million shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market fell $3.696 billion, or 0.14 percent, in value.

The NYSE composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 0.35 to 153.02.

Standard & Poor's industrial index slipped 0.62 to 313.16, and S&P's 500-stock composite index fell 0.68 to 271.81.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 0.04 to 373.91.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 0.02 to 295.27.

Food export dispute clouds trade talks

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH
New York Times News Service

MONTREAL — A dispute over the extent to which the governments of the world's leading food exporters should cut aid to farmers is clouding a global effort here this week to reduce obstacles to trade.

The chief antagonists are the United States, with about 2.5 million farmers, and the European Community, with nearly 12 million.

Washington wants an agreement in which the exporters, over an undefined period of years, would abolish all subsidies that distort trade. The leading exporters have subsidies estimated to be worth $220 billion a year.

The community says it cannot accept the social and political consequences of abandoning its large farm population.

Although the conflict between the Atlantic allies covers only one sector of the trade talks, it threatens the progress of the entire endeavor, the broadest and most ambitious step in the trade liberalization that began after World War II and served as an underpinning for postwar prosperity.

The meeting this week, which has drawn trade ministers from 96 countries, is billed as a mid-session review of the two-year-old Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The governments hope to work out so-called framework agreements, or guidelines, covering 15 separate trade categories from subsidies to intellectual property rights. These agreements would then govern the negotiations over the next two years.

Attesting to the importance that Washington attaches to the conference, the U.S. trade representative, Clayton K. Yeutter, led a delegation of 150 people, including two other Cabinet members, Commerce Secretary C. William Verity Jr. and Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng, the chairmen of both House and Senate agriculture committees, other lawmakers, private-sector advisers and observers.

Begun two years ago at the windswept Uruguayan resort of Punta del Este, the negotiations are an attempt to rework the creaky world trading system by strengthening GATT.

Besides cutting farm subsidies, these are the main objectives:

Please see DISPUTE, Page 7C

Freeze domestic and export agricultural subsidies and roll back restrictions on market access.

SUPPORTERS: U.S. and 13-member Cairns Group, including Canada, Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Philippines.
(European Community says some subsidies are necessary to protect its farmers and save the rural way of life.)

Liberalize trade in services such as banking, insurance, advertising, legal services and tourism.

SUPPORTERS: U.S., Japan, European Community.
(India, Brazil, Nigeria, Egypt and others, fearing harm to their own service sectors, say services should not be made part of the GATT talks.)

Protect intellectual property by harmonizing and enforcing copyright, trademark and patent laws.

SUPPORTERS: U.S., European Community.
(Brazil, India and others fear that stringent laws would restrict their technological development.)

Streamline methods for GATT to resolve disputes between member nations.

SUPPORTERS: U.S., Japan, European Community, others.
(Agreement on some kind of streamlining considered highly likely.)

Cut tariffs on textiles in the United States and other developed countries.

SUPPORTERS: Developing nations.
(U.S., concerned about protecting its domestic textile industry, does not favor changes in the existing Multi-Fiber Agreement, which is separate from GATT.)

Better access in developed countries for tropical products such as citrus, coffee, cocoa.

SUPPORTERS: Brazil, Colombia, Malaysia, Thailand.
(U.S. says its market is already the most open and says marketing openings for tropical products should be linked to progress on agriculture in general.)

Fed expected to raise key interest rate soon

By KENNETH N. GILPIN
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Federal Reserve Board is virtually certain to raise a key interest rate soon, credit market analysts said. The major question confronting market participants is: when will the central bank choose to make such a move?

Pressure on the Fed to increase its discount rate, the rate it charges on loans to financial institutions, intensified late last week when November employment data showed that the economy continues to grow at a vigorous pace. The central bank last raised the rate on Aug. 9, when it pushed it up to 6.5 percent.

Always the subject of close scrutiny, the Fed will be watched even more closely this week, as traders are confronted with a very light economic calendar that offers few significant trading opportunities.

As reported by the Labor Department, non-farm payroll employment rose by 463,000 last month, the third-largest increase of the year. As worrying as the overall increase, was the fact that 71,000 of the new jobs were created in the manufacturing sector, suggesting that capacity will be strained further in coming months.

The figures were far above market expectations and, combined with economic data released earlier in the week, dimmed hopes that the rate of growth may be moderating.

"Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan and Gerald Corrigan, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, have stated emphatically that the gross national product cannot expand at more than a 2.5 percent rate without pushing up inflation," said Paul L. Kasriel, a vice president and monetary economist at the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

"The data we have so far for the fourth quarter suggest that real growth, excluding the effects of the drought, is in excess of that."

A move by the Fed to raise the discount rate to 7 percent from its current level would carry more symbolic than practical weight for market participants. For that reason, a number of market analysts said that the Fed may put off raising the rate until a particularly critical time.

Auto makers set to move inventory

Substantial year-end discounts in the works

From Staff and Wire Reports

The nation's swelling inventory of 2.3 million unsold new cars may be put on sale at substantial discounts in the next few weeks, industry analysts say.

If the domestic automakers take this step, it will clear the way for ambitious first-quarter production schedules, particularly at the General Motors Corp.

The discounts would probably come in the form of cash rebates, experts said, because research has shown them to be more effective than low-interest financing in spurring sales.

"More incentives are coming," said David Healy, automotive analyst for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. "It's an unsustainable situation out there. G.M. could have a 100-day supply of cars at year's end. The numbers at Ford and Chrysler aren't as scary."

"The incentives are already in place," said Jack Sherman, owner Jack Sherman Chevrolet and president Midland Automobile Dealers Assoc., "General Motors incentives were set to expire December 7, but they extended them to the end of the year and increased them."

Sherman said auto manufacturers normally track one another in incentives and he expected sales incentives to be industry-wide through the end of the year.

For the last three years, the Big Three auto prducers and some importers have offered cash rebates on some car and truck models. They've also experimented with gimmicks like optional equipment at no charge, airplane tickets with the purchase of a car and free gasoline. On a few occasions, the companies have resorted to deep discounts on a wide variety of models to clear inventories of unsold cars and trucks.

As a result of such programs, companies and dealers believe, car buyers have grown to expect incentives regardless of market conditions.

GM, the nation's biggest car maker, has the biggest inventory proportionately. It also has the most aggressive production plans and thus may feel the most pressure to offer rebates.

GM, which has dramatically lost market share since 1984, is trying to halt the decline by forcing more vehicles into the marketplace. In the first quarter of 1989, the company is planning to build 931,000 cars in North America, compared with 781,000 a year earlier, a 19.1 percent increase.

That comes on the heels of aggressive production in the current quarter, a time when GM is expected to build about 950,000 cars, 12.6 percent more than a year earlier.

"As far as production plans are concerned, they are appropriate at this point in time," said James C. Smidebush, a GM spokesman. In spite of a lower market share in 1988, the company's profits have strongly rebounded from the previous two years, in part because of lower costs.

GM's market share has declined for three consecutive years. Its share of the American new-car market was 36.8 percent in 1987, compared with 44.5 percent in 1984.

So far this year GM has had a 36.1 percent share, according to Ward's Automotive Reports, and a strong finish could keep the company even with last year. But there are indications that GM dealers are having trouble keeping up with the pace of production.

Any action by GM will have profound ramifications for Ford and Chrysler, the second- and third-largest producers. Although the smaller companies are not saddled with a heavy inventory, both concede that they would have little choice but to imitate any extensive GM rebate program, rather than risk the loss of market share.

Auto makers measure retail sales by car dealers against their inventory to figure how many days of supply they have at the current sales rate. A 65-day supply is considered comfortable, although a slightly higher supply is tolerable at year-end.

A marketing analyst with a Big Three car company estimated that the Ford Motor Co. had a 73-day supply as of Nov. 21; the Chrysler Corp. had an 80-day supply, and GM had an 89-day supply. The Japanese car makers, including those with factories in the United States, had a combined figure of 60 days' supply.

Benno Hurwitz, owner of Fox Chevrolet in Baltimore, said he has experienced a sharp sales drop in the last 60 days.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Unocal, Venezuela enter refinery accord

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Unocal Corp. has signed a joint venture agreement with Venezuela's state oil company under which Unocal's Chicago refinery and other assets will be transferred to the new enterprise.

Under the "heads of agreement," similar to a letter of intent, Unocal and Petroleos de Venezuela SA will each hold a 50 percent share in the new venture, officials said Friday.

Military goods bolster factory orders

WASHINGTON (AP) — A big increase in military orders helped lift overall orders to U.S. factories for manufactured goods by 1.6 percent in October, the government says.

The Commerce Department said Friday orders for durable and nondurable goods climbed to a seasonally adjusted $226.2 billion, following a 1.9 percent decline in September.

Unions seek to block shuttle sale to Trump

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unions at Eastern Airlines asked a federal judge to block the sale of the airline's Northeast shuttle system to real estate mogul Donald Trump on the ground that the deal violated labor laws.

Lawyers for Eastern said that isn't so, and told the U.S. District Court on Friday the sale is no different from other recent actions Eastern has taken to slim down.

Bidder asks West Point shareholders to meet

CHICAGO (AP) — Farley Inc. says it will ask shareholders of textile giant West Point-Pepperell Inc. to hold a special meeting to consider Farley's $1.4 billion tender offer to acquire Pepperell.

Spokesman David Kronfeld of West Point, Ga.-based Pepperell said Friday the company would have no comment on Farley's request.

NATION IN BRIEF

Selenium levels too high for many, paper says

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Selenium at levels high enough to poison millions of high-risk Americans has been found in food from supermarkets across the country, according to a newspaper's seven-month investigation.

Toxic concentrations of selenium also taint the home-grown food and drinking water of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of farm and ranch families in several Western states, The Sacramento Bee reported Sunday.

Selenium is a naturally occurring gray, non-metallic chemical element of the sulphur group. Its levels in commercial foods are high enough to expose even healthy adults to levels above federal guidelines, the newspaper said.

The potential effects for healthy adults may be nothing worse than slight declines in overall health or resistance to disease and infection.

But for those living in the rural West and high-risk groups across the nation — the very young, old and the chronically ill — the effects can be much more serious, including severe digestive problems, kidney or liver damage, paralysis, even death, the newspaper said.

Mayor returns with body

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Jersey City Mayor Anthony Cucci says he's ready to get on with his work despite grief over his wife's death in a Peruvian train accident blamed on sabotage.

"I suffered a loss, a great, great loss. I loved her very much," Cucci said of his wife, whom he married in 1985, 11 days after his election.

The mayor, who was also injured, arrived with Anna Cucci's body at Newark International Airport Sunday evening. Mrs. Cucci, 62, will be buried Wednesday.

Cucci, 66, said he would be back at City Hall today.

"I still have my job to complete," he said.

He also said he thought his wife would have liked him to run for reelection, but he would decide that later.

Mrs. Cucci died Thursday when the train she was riding with her husband and Cuzco city officials derailed on its way to the Inca ruins of Machupicchu and plunged into a ravine.

3-year-old girl doing well

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Exploratory surgery Sunday confirmed a 3-year-old New Mexico girl is progressing well less than a week after undergoing a rare, five-organ transplant, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Rolandrea Dodge of Fruitland, N.M., was in critical condition Sunday night in the intensive care unit of Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh.

Rolandrea, who's known as Rolly, received a new liver, pancreas, stomach, small intestine and part of a large intestine during 16½ hours of surgery that ended Tuesday.

She was breathing with the help of a respirator following the exploratory surgery, which lasted less than three hours Sunday morning, said the spokeswoman, Sue Cardillo. The child's parents, Cyndi and Branden Dodge, were at her bedside.

Chief Inspector Anatoly Samakin, second from right, talks with members of the press Sunday at the Pueblo Memorial Airport, in Colorado. Samakin heads a delegation of 10 Soviet inspectors who have come to Pueblo to see the destruction of 18 Pershing missile motors.

Soviet praises 'real disarmament'

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Soviet inspectors' presence at today's scheduled destruction of Pershing missiles shows "real disarmament" in action, a Soviet official said.

The 10 inspectors arrived Sunday to oversee the destruction of 18 Pershing missile motors at the Pueblo military depot. The first two were to be destroyed today, weather permitting.

"People can now face the future with optimism," Anatoly Samakin, the Soviets' chief inspector, said Sunday.

"The Soviet-American treaty marks the beginning of real disarmament."

The Pershing missiles were the delivery systems for European-based nuclear warheads aimed at the Soviet Union. Under terms of the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty that took effect June 1, the United States has two years to destroy 450 missiles; in turn, the Soviet Union will destroy a larger number of their intermediate-range missiles as U.S. inspection teams watch.

This is the first missile destruction under Soviet inspection to occur at the depot here. Pershing missiles have been destroyed at the Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant near Marshall, Texas, since Sept 8. Cruise missiles were destroyed in October at an Air Force base in Arizona.

Navy Cmdr. Kendell Pease, one of the Soviet delegation's escort officers, said the Soviets were expected to remain in Pueblo for two weeks. He said they will be permitted to dine in restaurants and go shopping, but with an escort.

The Soviet inspectors' visit is their third to Pueblo since the INF treaty was ratified, but the first time they are staying at a hotel instead of at the depot.

The Colorado Health Department, after a lengthy environmental review, gave the Army permission to conduct the burns for three years. Because of air pollution problems, no more than six missiles can be burned per day. The burns can only take place during the day and when the wind is at least 4 mph from the west.

Critic calls NRC security measures 'inadequate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is imposing new regulations to strengthen protection against possible terrorist attacks at facilities handling weapons-grade nuclear material.

A leading congressional critic, however, calls the security precautions "totally inadequate" because they apply to only a handful of fuel facilities and not to the nation's 110 nuclear power plants.

In a rule set to take effect Dec. 12, the NRC said it is amending its regulations to "strengthen security requirements designed to prevent the theft of nuclear material from certain nuclear fuel facilities."

The new requirements include:

- Bolstered security measures to guard against possible use of vehicles to break into facilities or cause damage with car or truck bombs.
- "Tactical response team exercises" to evaluate performance of security systems.
- Night firing practice for guards "using all assigned weapons."
- Thorough searches of personnel and packages entering the facilities.
- Posting of armed guards at nuclear material access control points.
- An additional "physical personnel barrier" around a protected area.

The requirements initially will affect four NRC-licensed facilities, operated by GA Technologies at La Jolla, Calif.; Nuclear Fuel Systems at Erwin, Tenn.; Bacock & Wilcox at Lynchburg, Va.; and United Nuclear Corp. at Uncasville, Conn.

One or two additional facilities may also be affected in the near future, the NRC said.

An NRC news release said the decision to require enhanced protective measures at the fuel facilities "is based on a recent study that compared NRC's security requirements for strategic special nuclear material with the Department of Energy's recently upgraded security system for comparable facilities."

Governor tells feds 'to get off their duff'

DENVER (AP) — Gov. Roy Romer said storage sites for radioactive wastes at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant are secure, but he renewed his threat to close the plant if the federal government fails to find other storage sites.

"I'm saying to the federal government, 'Get off your duff — let's go, let's get a solution,' " the Colorado governor said Sunday after touring the plant.

Waste has been collecting in boxcars and in enclosed facilities at the plant since October when Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus barred them from entering his state for disposal.

Romer said he did not want to have to carry out his threat to force the closure of the plant.

She's got everything but enough time

Today's woman can have it all—career, husband, family, independence. But she's got only 24 hours a day. The daily newspaper helps her make the most of every minute, with information about shopping... money... vacations... health and nutrition... jobs... fun. That's why 67% of working women find time to read a newspaper in their busy day.*

If you have to reach her, it's time to think about the newspaper.
