

THE LAST OF THE DUANES

by Zane Grey

Illustrated by Verne C. Christy

WHAT HAPPEND LAST WEEK

Buck Duane, quick on the draw kills Cal Bain in self-defense and finds himself an outlaw. Flying from pursuit, he meets Luke Stevens, another outlaw, and the two become pals. Luke narrowly escapes capture and Duane is shocked to find his brother outlaw severely wounded.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Feller's name was Brown. Me an' him fell out over a hoss I stole from him over in Huntsville. We had a shootin' scrape then. Wal, as I was straddlin' my hoss back there in Mercer I seen this Brown an' seen him before he seen me.

"Could have kelled him, too. But I wasn't breakin' my word to you. I kind of hoped he wouldn't spot me. But he did—an' fust shot he got me here. What do you think of this hole?"

"It's pretty bad," replied Duane, and he could not look the cheerful outlaw in the eyes.

"I reckon it is. Wal, I've had some bad wounds I lived over. Guess mebbe I can stand this one. Now, Buck, get me some place in the brakes—leave me some grub an' water at my hand—an' then you clear out."

"Leave you here alone?" asked Duane sharply.

"Shore. You see, I can't keep up with you. Brown an' his friends will follow us across the river a ways. You've got to think of number one in this game."

"What would you do in my case?" asked Duane curiously.

"Wal, I reckon I'd clear out an' save my hide," replied Stevens.

Duane felt inclined to doubt the outlaw's assertion. For his own part he decided his conduct without further speech.

First, he watered the horses, filled canteens and water-bag, and then tied the pack upon his own horse. That done, he lifted Stevens upon his horse, and holding him in the saddle, turned into the brakes, being careful to pick out hard or grassy ground that left little signs of tracks.

All that night Duane, gloomy and thoughtfully, attentive to the wounded outlaw, walked the trail and never halted till daybreak. He was tired then, and very hungry. Stevens seemed in bad shape, though he was still spirited and cheerful. Duane made camp. The outlaw refused food, but asked for both whisky and water. Then he stretched out.

"Buck, will you take off my boots?" he asked with a faint smile on his pallid face.

Duane removed them, wondering if the outlaw had the thought that he did not want to die with his boots on.

"Pard, you—stuck—to me!" the outlaw whispered.

Duane caught a hint of gladness in the voice—he traced a faint surprise in the haggard face. Stevens seemed like a little child.

To Duane the moment was sad, elemental, big with a burden of mystery he could not understand.

Duane buried him in a shallow arroyo and heaped up a pile of stones to mark the grave. That done he saddled his comrade's horse, hung the weapons over the pommel, and mounting his own steed he rode down the trail in the gathering twilight.

Presently the trail widened into a road, and that into a kind of square lined by a number of adobe and log buildings, of rudest structure. Within sight were horses, dogs, a couple of steers, Mexican women with children, and white men, all of whom appeared to be doing nothing.

His advent created no interest until he rode up to the white men, who were loitering in the shade of a house. This place evidently was a store and saloon, and from the inside came a lazy hum of voices.

As Duane reined to a halt one of the loungers in the shade rose with a loud exclamation.

"Bust me if that ain't Luke's hoss!" The others accorded their interest, if not assent, by rising to advance toward Duane.

"How about it, Euchre? Ain't that Luke's bay?" queried the first man. "Plain as your nose," replied the fellow called Euchre.

"There ain't no doubt about that then," laughed another, "fer Bosomer's nose is shore plain on the landscape."

These men lined up before Duane, and as he coolly regarded them he thought they could have been recognized anywhere as desperadoes.

The man called Bosomer, who struck out in advance of the others, was a hard looking customer, with yellow eyes and an enormous nose. He had sandy hair and a skin the color of dust.

"Stranger, who are you, an' where did you get that bay hoss?" he demanded.

His yellow eyes took in Steven's horse, then the weapons hung on the saddle, and finally turned their glinting, hard light upward to Duane.

"Stranger, who are you?" asked another man, somewhat more civilly.

"My name's Duane," replied Duane curtly.

"An' how'd you come by the hoss?"

Duane answered briefly, and his words were followed by a short silence, during which the men looked at him. Bosomer began to twist his bearded lips.

"Reckon he's dead all right, or nob'd hev his horse an' guns," said Euchre.

"Mr. Duane," began Bosomer, in low, stinging tones, "I happen to be Luke Stevens's side pardner."

Duane looked him over, from dusty, worn-out boots to his slouchy sombrero. That look seemed to inflame Bosomer.

"An' I want the hoss an' them guns," he shouted.

"You or anybody else can have them for all I care. I just fetched them in. But the pack is mine," replied Duane. "And say—I befriend your pard. If you can't use civil tongue you'd better cinch it."

"Civil? Haw! Haw!" rejoined the outlaw. "I don't know you. How do we know you didn't plug Stevens, an' stole his hoss, an' jest happened to stumble down here?"

"You'll have to take my word, that's all," replied Duane sharply.

"Stranger, Bosomer is shore hot-headed," said the man Euchre. He did not appear unfriendly, nor were the others hostile.

At this juncture several more outlaws crowded out of the door, and the one in the lead was a tall man of stalwart physique. His manner proclaimed him a leader.

He had a long face, a flung red beard, and clear cold blue eyes that fixed in close upon Duane. He was not a Texan; in truth Duane did not recognize one of these outlaws as native to his State.

"I'm Bland," said the tall man authoritatively. "Who're you and what're you doing here?"

Duane looked at Bland as he had at the others. This outlaw chief appeared to be reasonable, if he was not courteous. Duane told his story again, this time a little more in detail.

"I believe you," replied Bland at once. "Think I know when a fellow's lying."

"I reckon you on the right trail," put in Euchre. "That about Luke wantin' his boots took off—that satisfies me. Luke had a mortal dread of dyin' with his boots on."

At this sally the chief and his men laughed.

"You said Duane—Buck Duane!" queried Bland. "Are you a son of that Duane who was a gun-fighter some years back?"

"Yes," replied Duane.

"Never met him, and glad I didn't," said Bland with a grim humor.

Bosomer appeared at the door, pushing men who tried to detain him, and as he jumped clear of a last reaching hand he uttered a snarl like an angry dog.

Manifestly the short while he had spent inside the saloon had been devoted to drinking and talking himself into a frenzy. Bland and the other outlaws quickly moved aside, letting Duane alone. When Bosomer saw Duane standing motionless and watchful, a strange change passed quickly in him. He halted in his tracks, and as he did that the men who had followed him out piled over each other in their hurry to get to one side.

Duane saw all the swift action, felt intuitively the meaning in it, and in Bosomer's sudden change of front. The outlaw was keen, and he had expected a shrinking or at least a frightened antagonist.

But Duane did not speak a word. He had remained motionless for a long moment, his eyes pale and steady, his right hand like a claw. That instant gave birth in Duane a power to read in his enemy's eyes the thought that preceded action. But he did not want to kill an outlaw man; he did not intend to. When Bosomer's hand moved Duane's gun was spouting fire and Bosomer fell with his right arm shattered. He would never be able to draw a gun again.

When Duane went out with Euchre the sun was setting behind a blue range of mountains across the river in Mexico. The valley appeared to open to the southwest.

"The only feller who's goin' to put a close eye on you is Benson," said Euchre. "He runs the place an' sells drinks. The gang calls him Jackrabbit Benson because he's always got his eye peeled an' his ear cocked. Don't notice him if he looks you over, Buck."

"Benson is scared to death of every newcomer who rustles into Bland's camp. An' the reason, I take it, is because he's done somebody dirt. He's hidin' from a sheriff or ranger! Men who hide from them don't act like Jackrabbit Benson."

"He's hidin' from some guy who's huntin' him to kill him. Wal, I'm always expectin' to see some feller ride in here an' throw a gun on Benson. Can't say I'd be grieved."

"What have you against him?" inquired Duane, as he sat down beside Euchre.

"Wal, mebbe I'm cross-grained," replied Euchre apologetically. "Shore an' an outlaw an' rustler such as me can't be touchy. But I never stole nothin but cattle from some rancher who never missed 'em, anyway. That sneak Benson—he was the means of puttin' a little girl in Bland's way."

"Girl?" queried Duane, now with real attention.

"Shore, Bland's great on women. I'll tell you about this girl when we get out of here. Some of the gang are goin' to be sociable, an' I can't talk about the chief."

During the ensuing half hour a number of outlaws passed by Duane and Euchre, halted for a greeting, or sat down for a moment. They were all gruff, loud-voiced, merry, and goodnatured. Duane replied civilly and agreeably when he personally addressed, but he refused all invitations to drink and gamble. Evidently he had been accepted, in a way, as one of their clan. No one made any hint of an allusion to his affair with Bosomer. Duane saw readily that Euchre was well liked. One outlaw borrowed money from him; another asked for tobacco.

Next morning Duane found that a moody and despondent spell had fastened on him. Wishing to be alone, he went out and walked a trail leading around the river bluff. He thought and thought.

When he returned to the shack Euchre was cooking dinner.

"Say, Buck, I've news for you," he said, and his tone conveyed either pride in his possession of such news, or pride in Duane. "Feller named Bradley rode in this mornin'. He'd heard some about you."

"Told about the ace of spades they put over the bullet holes in that cowpuncher Bain you plugged. Then there was a rancher shot at a water hole twenty miles south of Wellston. Reckon you didn't do it?"

"No, I certainly did not," replied Duane.

"Wal, you get the blame. It ain't nothing for a feller to be saddled with gun-play he never made. An' Buck, if you ever get famous, as seems likely, you'll be blamed for many a crime. The border'll make outlaw an' murderer out of you. Wal, that's enough of that. I've more news. You're goin' to be popular."

"I met Bland's wife this mornin'. She seen you the other day when you rode in. She shore wants to meet you an' so do some of the other women in camp. They always want to meet the new fellers who've just come in. It's lonesome for women here an' they like to hear news from the towns."

"Well, Euchre, I don't want to be impolite, but I'd rather not meet any women," rejoined Duane.

"I was afraid you wouldn't. Don't blame you much. I was hopin' to though, you might talk a little thet poor lonesome kid."

"What kid!" inquired Duane, surprised.

"Didn't I tell you about Jenn the girl Bland's holdin' here—one Jackrabbit Benson had a h in stealin'!"

"You mentioned a girl. That's Tell me now," replied Duane abruptly.

Established Credit

Hoarding money, being secretive about business affairs is not necessarily good business. Establishing good banking connection, letting one's record speak for itself over a period of months or years—may be the means to far greater advancement and success—as many men have learned.

When all your business dealings are above board, all transactions a matter of record and verification, then you often have an established credit which makes it possible to carry through plans which would be impossible if you were unknown and your assets only what you were able to produce in cold cash.

Young men—and young women too, should know these facts and start early in their business career to build and establish such credit.

Does Paint Freeze?

Paint in the Fall! Because Summer heat has dried out wood surfaces—paint penetrates better; flowers, grass and shrubbery are dead—no damage done; no insects or bugs to stick to the paint; painters have more time—they do better work for less money. Winter will do more damage to surface—it will cost you more to paint in the Spring. PAINT NOW—

MRS. A. B. CRAWFORD

Mrs. A. B. Crawford, mother of Mrs. Frank Shockley, passed away in this city on last Friday and was buried at Balke on Sunday afternoon. Rev. Hutson pastor of the Balke Baptist church had charge of the services. The deceased was born at Ashville North Carolina on January 27, 1862 and at the time of death was 66 years, 9 months and 13 days of age. She came to Beaver County with her husband and family about 23 years ago, homesteading on a claim near Balke, where they lived until about five years ago, when they moved to the northeastern part of Washington. Mrs. Crawford came to Perryton about nine months ago in the hopes that the change in climate would be beneficial to her failing health.

Besides the husband, Mrs. Crawford leaves 12 children, 39 grandchildren and 3 great-grandchildren to mourn her death. Three daughters were with her at time of death. They were Mrs. Walter Moore, Logan, Okla.; Mrs. Sam Crist, New Mexico and Mrs. Shockley of this city. Three of the other children live in North Carolina and the other six reside in Washington. The deceased had been a life long member of the Baptist Church.

The active pall bearers were former Beaver County neighbors as follows: J. W. Caylor, Fred Ginter, Harry Beatty, L. E. Beckwith, C. E. Nicholson and H. M. Hight.

Perryton High School News

The material in this column is written and edited by the high school staff composed of members of the Journalism Club.

FOR RADIO CLUB

Evening, November 10th, at 8:00, about twenty boys accompanied by Mr. Bush, left Perryton in motor cars for Horse Shoe Club, which is in charge of the boys. They were on their way to a picnic. They were played upon arriving at the destination. Since they were there until the early hour everyone will know without doubt, what an enjoyable time was spent.

LIGHTNING KID

Tucker, Perryton's right half, is the flashiest ball carrier the most outstanding back on the team. He has shown the same courage and fight in both offense and defense. Tucker has a good color and has gained the home eleven. He is a good passer, and a good runner, and off tackle. Tucker is a lightning star in the Pampa game. He has two long end runs which resulted in touchdowns. He is proud of all our football team and what they have done to bring our school well known in the football world.

THEATRE PARTY

Friday night, the Journalism Club entertained themselves with a party. They met in front of the theatre and filled into their seats. Jesse James became the star of the show, the name of the boys who were in the show, they paraded to the drug store for a prize. At the departure, they had a wonderful time and a feeling.

A TRIBUTE

Our confidence was not in vain, we have honored you, undefeated, a better game! Triumph or defeat, you, who wear a white—be proud of you!

WITH THE PIRATES

The club of the Perryton met, November 9, 1928. It was called and several because of the "Pep" House was called to order. Pauline Fallis, the minutes of the meeting were read and accepted. The club with a few changes. The program was then given by the Cross Bones. Gertrude McLarty as the Pirates—Itasca Massey, Hazel McBride, written by Bess Crum and the club voted to accept the club poem. The position being given to the club. The minutes of the club filled in the time and we adjourned.

"HOLD THAT LINE"

"Hold that line!" is the slogan of the Ranger football team and the pep squad is the loyal gang that helps 'em hold it.

A whole football gridiron is ours to hold and there are only 11 of us to cover it, so we have to "spread" ourselves around. Ever hear of Santa Claus who works one nite of the year and is all over the earth at one time? Well, "The Rangers" are every place at once it seems, but we don't have any such a soft proposition as having just one night marked on the calendar. It's every Friday, and sometimes more often, of the football season for us. At an instant's notice we are away with the ball at break-neck speed to reach the touch down line, regardless of the death-dealing opponents, who try to down us. That line must be held and the Rangers are there "at your service."

CHAPEL PROGRAM

Chapel exercises were held last Friday, November 9, instead of Wednesday. "America" was sung by the student body, after which Brother Raney, Pastor of the Methodist Church, talked on a fitting subject, "Armistice of the World."

The sixth grade gave a short play, entitled "Uncle Sam."

Irvin (hitting his thumb with a hammer): Where can I find sympathy?

Key (dryly): Look in the dictionary.

While on the way to the Pampa game, Monday, a car turned over. No one was seriously hurt, but Clyde Yearry was sufficiently disabled, so as to keep him out of the game, then and possibly for the rest of the season.

Ruby: What did the dentist say about your teeth?

Lois Belle (brightly): Oh, he said I had an academy in on of them, but I might outgrow it.

RANGERS WIN OVER PAMPA HARVESTERS

November 12, the Rangers visited the Harvesters to try out for the championship of the northern district. The Rangers went to Pampa Sunday and rested until Monday.

The game was called at two-thirty. The Harvesters outweighed the Rangers, on an average. The whistle blew, and the ball was kicked by the Rangers. A hard struggle followed. The ball went over to the Rangers, then back to the Harvesters. This time, they made a touchdown, which was prompted by carelessness on the part of the Rangers. Pampa succeeded in kicking the goal making the Harvesters seven ahead thus far. The Rangers kicked again and after a hard time the ball went over. This time they tried a fake play and Marion Tucker made a touchdown. This made the boys feel better, and gave them courage. After the half, the Rangers kicked. The Harvesters did their best, but the Rangers outplayed them. Perryton's boys got within a yard of the line on the last down. They tried a field goal and made it. The whistle blew for the third quarter. The Rangers kicked off and again the Harvesters had to let the ball go over. Marion succeeded in making another touchdown, and when the whistle blew, the score was 17 to 7, in favor of the Rangers.

RANGERS AND FOLLETT WARRIORS PLAY OFF TIE

November 7, the warriors came to Perryton to play off a scoreless draw, which was played at Follett, Saturday.

The Rangers kicked off, and the Warriors tried to go through with it, but it seemed impossible. Both teams fought, struggled and clashed up until the half, staying in the middle of the field most of the time. The whistle blew for the half, and both teams lay down to rest.

The whistle blew and they started at it again, knowing that this was the fatal time. Ed Peery of the Rangers made the first touchdown by a break through a center smash. This set the Warriors' hearts afire and both teams played hard. The goal was missed, because of a warrior, offside, so that it was counted nevertheless. The Rangers kicked off. The Warriors let the ball go over, and Marion Tucker made a long end run, and a touchdown.

Both teams fought the rest of the few minutes left to play. The final score was 14 to 0. In Perryton's favor.

THE RAMBLER

Don't you like football? It is my favorite fruit. I usually ramble to all of the games of course some of you people do not understand it very well, but I have decided to explain the game to you, so that you will understand it better.

Football is played in the fall. Except for 22 individuals it only takes a football, two coaches and a couple of referees.

Well, when they get ready to begin to commence to start, the 2 teams oh, yes! I forgot to say they have 2 teams. The idea is competition, you see. Well, they line up and then the ball is placed in the middle of the field, and one captain, oh gosh—I didn't say each team has a captain. He is usually big and looks mean, so as to scare the other team to continue, one captain says "lets start," and someone blows a cute whistle, someone else boots the ball another player grabs it and runs to the other end of the field. The other gentlemen of the field should let him by, but lots of the time they get right in the way, and then they both fall. Sometimes, a whole lot of them come and jump down on the other one, and then they just wiggle around and try to tickle the other one. Well, then they line up again, and one of them bends over the ball and someone says a lot of numbers. You would think they would learn to count before they got so big. Someone says "move over you big egg." That is,

I guess that's what he says, because they all move.

That is about all there is to the game except you can make a touchdown by holding the ball and the falling down on the grass, or else you can make a point by kicking the ball over a stick.

And a word about the bleacher athlete. I mean the one who stands on the side and tells the others how to play. Beware of him!

Mrs. D. Hunt's New Beauty Parlor

---Opens December 1st---

Carrying out plans which have long been entertained, Mrs. D. Hunt of Liberal, Kansas, is opening up a new modern Beauty Shop in Perryton. This will enable us to give better service to our constantly growing trade from Perryton and vicinity.

Just as soon as the room can be prepared for occupancy we will locate in the Roger and Stump new brick building on Main Street. We will have the southwest corner room upstairs and we hope to meet here, all of our former friends and a host of new ones.

BEATEN MAN ORIGINATES
PHRASE "UP SALT CREEK"

The origin of the expression, "He's gone up salt creek," prevalent today wherever reference is made to a defeated candidate for a political office, is attributed to stories connected with the stream of that name which empties into the Mississippi near Louisiana, Mo.

"Tradition has connected Salt River with politics and politicians of Missouri and the word on account of the saying, 'He's gone up salt creek,' be applied to defeated candidates for office," says the president of the Missouri Historical Society.

The story goes that in the 1840's a man lived in the town of Louisiana, Mo., by the name of Fred Jackson, who had very little of this world's goods, but a deep desire to serve his neighbors in some political office. He ran for a local office and made a strenuous campaign. He had the promise of the support of many friends, but the support did not pan out well enough to elect him.

Defeat was distasteful to the ambitious Jackson. Besides, he thought some of his friends had double crossed him when they went to the polls, so, to get away from them, he packed up his household goods and moved to the mouth of salt river, some two or three miles north.

"After he left some of the people wondered what had become of him and asked his friends, 'Oh, Jackson?' they would reply, 'He's gone up on Salt River.'"

Jackson's thirst for public service was not quenched by his first defeat. In 1845 he enlisted the support of his old friends and new neighbors in a campaign for the legislature. Again he was defeated, and again he became angry at the failure of his neighbors to give him proper support. So he packed up his belongings and moved further up Salt River. Again the people asked, "Where's Jackson?" and again his friends answered, "Oh he's gone up Salt River."

But the resolute Jackson still was not convinced his services were not needed in the legislature, and in 1847 he ran again, with the same result. Once more he became incensed at his neighbors, and moved still further up the river.

By this measure Jackson's habit of moving up Salt River after each defeat had appealed to the people's sense of humor, and even the newspapers began to ridicule him. It became the standing joke in Pike county, "Where's Jackson?" the Pikers would ask, and "He's gone up Salt River," would be the answer.

When the gold rush to California was made in 1849, many people from that section of Missouri were included. And they took with them the expression, "He's gone up Salt River."

The gold settlements had their town elections, and naturally their defeated candidates, and so many were the people from Pike county that the Salt River expression came into common use. When a candidate was defeated they formed the habit of saying, "He's gone up Salt Creek," though few others than those from Missouri knew exactly what the term meant.

When the gold fever subsided the miners returned to their homes all over the world. Many of them didn't take any gold back, but they did take back the expression, "He's gone up Salt Creek."

BENEFITS FROM PASTURING
WHEAT QUESTIONABLE

"There are times when it pays to pasture wheat, but usually the benefits are more than offset by the damages," says H. M. Bainer, Director, the Southwestern Wheat Improvement Association. Going on, he says, "As a result of pasturing wheat, records from some of the leading experiment stations show no gains in yield or other benefits and in most cases they show a loss of from one to four bushels per acre. Of course there are conditions where judicious pasturing pays, but good judgement must be used as to when to do it and to what extent."

"For the farmer who has plenty of feed there is no excuse for pasturing his wheat, and he would be not doing so, unless it shows excessive growth. On the other hand, the farmer who has a good growth of wheat and is short of feed, especially if he has dairy cows, can often make a profit by pasturing his wheat, providing he does it judiciously. Many wheat growers who handle cattle, especially those from the drier parts of the Southwest, consider wheat pasturing secured in the fall as just that much clear gain. This, of course, is not true unless the wheat shows an early rank growth and needs a trimming. Early sown wheat that makes a rank growth in the fall removes an excessive amount of moisture and draws heavier on the soil than an ordinary growth and judicious pasturing of this kind of wheat will often be beneficial."

"Much of this fall's winter wheat of the Southwest is smaller than usual and will need all of its growth for winter protection. Some of it is large enough so a reasonable amount of pasturing may not be harmful, but the danger lies in overdoing it, turning livestock on it before the plants are properly started, or grazing too closely, thereby protection and the ground in a condition that is likely to blow. Grazing when the ground is wet will cause more injury than the value of the pasturing. Too much pasturing is sure to cause winter-killing, late maturity and low yields."

Beef cattle purchased in the fall for grass-grain fattening should be "roughed" through the winter so as to gain from 50 to 75 pounds. Cattle handled in this way will generally make greater gains in the following summer than cattle making larger gains in the winter.

The most profitable pig is one that never stops growing and makes good gains from the time it is farrowed until it is ready for market.

Hints

Have you seen the new toilet accessories that are developed in colors as fresh and dainty as those of the fabrics that drape the modern bedroom?

There are mirrors and brushes, beauty boxes and manicure tools in soft tints and patterns. Some reproduce the Chinese motifs of old Ming porcelains and lacquers; others show Empire designs and colorings, and again others have floral designs.

Imagine the charm of accessories of Napoleon blue in a French pattern on a dressing table flounced in changeable taffeta. Or picture the Chintz-hung room with toilet articles in soft blue or buff, green or mauve, according to the color of the draperies! These are just a few of the decorative effects that may be obtained with the new toilet ware which, relatively speaking, is far from expensive.

For cream fig pudding, dissolve a package lemon-flavored gelatin in pint boiling water. When cold and beginning to thicken, whip to consistency of whipped cream. Add one cup whipped cream and one cup chopped figs cooked to a jam. Mold or pour into sherbert glasses.

Delicious Corn Entree
Chop fine one green pepper and two slices onion; saute in butter. Heat two-thirds cup canned corn and 1 cup stewed tomatoes, add pepper, onion, 2 tablespoons butter, 1½ cups diced cheese, 2 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca and seasoning. Cook 15 minutes; serve on toast or crackers.

Save Fruit Juice
Juices left over at canning time can always be turned into jellies at a latter date. Use one or two cups of syrup, according to strength of flavor desired, add two cups water and five level cups sugar and bring to a boil. Add a again to full rolling boil for a half minute. Remove, let stand a minute, pour and seal.

THE "PULL" IN OUR SCHOOL

School enrollment has been skyrocketing in recent years. During the fifteen-year period ending 1925 public school enrollment has increased 38 per cent while in the high school department the increase has been 300 per cent.

Several agencies might be mentioned as influencing this increase, such as the modernized courses of study as organized by school officials, the modern school plants with their pleasing environment, the advisory or personal organization of the teaching force who hold intimate contact with each school child. But the greatest factor has been the "pulling" power of the teacher and superintendent.

This latter is the test that accurately gauges the talent of the school executive and the teaching force. This is the proving ground for the magnetism whose persistent pull brings back the youth year after year, following the cooling process of the Summer vacation. This is what is meant by "The 'pull' in our Schools," the teacher who fascinates the pupils into eager response, inspires in them the zeal of accomplishment and holds and controls them through force of personality; the administrator who knows how to treasure teaching talent and give it effective guidance and support.

There is more to a teacher than a mere background of educational training. An examination of application blanks used by superintendents will show concern for character, tact, patience, optimism, enthusiasm, professional attitude and personality. These must be as marked as the ability to impart knowledge.

Teachers meeting these qualications are happy in the school atmosphere and themselves radiate cheer, buoyancy and inspiration. They promote the child's individuality, encourage initiative and self-expression. They do not impart dead facts but living ideals; they unfold life for the child's sake, spread courage, happiness, companionship. They know no sarcasm, show no partiality, play no favorites and are quick to recognize pupil effort as well as accomplishment. They think less of their present task than of the future outcome; they look upon their labor not for self but as a community service.

Pupils are thus led to participate through interest and not compulsion. They are stimulated through an enthusiasm that is contagious. They become bound to the teacher's engaging personality. They reach the closing of the school day not with a feeling of relief, but with a zest for the opening of tomorrow.

This is the "pull" that has been a prime factor in creating a new school interest. It is the quality in the teaching force that the superintendent looks for and develops; it is the only "pull" a superintendent desires.

TIME TO TURN ON THE LIGHT

Artificial lights in the poultry house will increase egg production from November to March, if good care in feeding, management, and housing is given. Lights lengthen the hen's working day, giving her more time to feed. Consequently when the short days of winter are made longer and she eats more egg-making feeds, her production is increased and also the farmer's profits. Ten eggs laid in December are worth twenty laid in April or May. Where lights are used, the hens should have additional feed. As a rule, it is more profitable to use artificial lights with well-matured pullets.

METHODIST CHURCH

The Methodist people have all their services next Sunday at the same hours, except the preaching services at the evening hour which we are dismissing for the meeting at the Christian church.

All the evening services of the week will be omitted except the league study class. But the Juniors and women will have their usual meetings thru the week. The Senior league is having an interesting course this week under a conference man. It was not our plan that this man be here at this time but he has a schedule for his work and we had to take him at this time or not at all.

Next Sunday will be the last for the year and it is hoped that we may have a good service for the closing day of the year.

We must get the work of the church closed up for this year this week for we must get off for conference Monday November 19th.

The pastor and family have had a pleasant and agreeable year with the church and town. We have been received in the great Western way everywhere we have gone. We regret that we have not been able to do more for the church and the town. We feel very kindly toward all the people and wish for them and theirs the best. There are a few homes that we have not been in yet but we have seen most of them and some of them we have been in several times.

We have made about 700 calls and interviews with the people of the town and country about the church and their individual relation to God. Some days we have not made any calls while others we have made a large number. We have been to some homes four or five times before we were able to see the people. One day while collecting the conference collections we left home before 8:00 a. m. and drove until 7:30 that night and we raised $6.00. But the work needs to carry on and we have tried to do our best.

Really we have tried to do the work of twelve months in eight months. We arrived here on February 26th. So the pastor nor the church neither one has had a fair chance. But with it all we are going to have a good report at conference and the church will have a record that she may be proud of this year. From the conference records, though, this has been the history of this church.

Carter Pens at the Herald Office.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH SERVICES

Rev. Billman and his family are making good in revival services and the attendance at all the services is appreciated by the pastor and the church.

Rev. Billman is presenting the gospel in a very plain and simple manner, and is preaching on subjects that the people enjoy.

Mrs. Billman's pictures are quite an attractive feature, and all who have seen her work pronounce her a crayon artist of rare ability. Her drawings illustrate familiar and famous hymns, and are indeed very impressive.

The banquet for the vested choir will be given one evening next week. The song service is unusually good. Mr. Billman is leading in this service, and is doing a fine job of it.

Come to the services and bring your friends and your neighbors with you.

The usual services will be held next Sunday, and every evening at 7:30.

WHY NOT UNIFORMS FOR P. H. S. STUDENTS?

The writer of this article has been thinking on this subject for some time and waiting and listening for some one to introduce it. It would be a fine thing for a school with the prestige of P. H. S. to institute. The writer knows of no high school in the Panhandle where a uniform is worn. We never know how far reaching may be the influence of any act, be that act good or evil, but if a school so widely known and of such rank as P. H. S. should adopt uniforms, it would most certainly be followed by other high schools of the Panhandle.

This would lift a burden from the shoulders of many parents who are financially unable to provide finery for every day wear, but whose girls insist on having fine clothes like their class-mates wear. However, relieving parents of burdens is neither the only nor the greatest good accomplished by the wearing of uniforms to school. The greatest good would be to the pupils themselves. Any one who has taught high school pupils (or grade pupils either) will agree that the rule is, the less thought given to clothes, the more thought given to school work and advancement. Youth always shrinks from being different to his fellows and when fine clothes are worn by some it is only natural for others to long to wear them. Pupils have been known to complain that teachers show favor to the better dressed pupils. That is only the imagination of the one who feels shabby dressed or of the drone who is too indolent and ambitionless to make any effort. Teachers almost invariably rate character and brains above everything.

Young people who are forced to dress shabbily or even more plainly than their classmates get very little solace from the oft-repeated statement that clothes do not make the man or woman. They must be older and wiser before they can fully appreciate that maxim.

A few years ago a wise and kindly gentleman on the school board of a town not so very far from Perryton introduced the question of uniforms for the high school pupils of that town. He did not succeed in getting a regular uniform adopted, but through his efforts along that line, silks, satins, silk hose and high heels were prohibited in school apparel. There was no selfish motive in this man's act as he had no daughter of his own in school. Many a mother in that town rose up and called him blessed and many of the students felt that they owed him a debt of gratitude.

A short time ago the girls of a certain college in this state decided and made public their decision to wear cotton hose to school. This was done as a matter of patriotism for living in a leading cotton state. They felt it to be a patriotic duty to help advance the price of cotton. They were lauded by the press of the whole country for their act. In adopting uniforms for any school of Texas it would be well to remember that the wool industry is also a big industry in our state.

Why not the P. T. A. add another good work to its many already accomplished and try for uniforms for P. H. S. Students? Why not the school board bring it to pass and call down on its head showers of blessings?

If some other Panhandle high school has already adopted uniforms why not P. H. S. follow. If one can not lead there is never any disgrace in following a good leader. We can only regret that we didn't beat them to it.—A Reader.

"Lest We Forget"

Flags and music and applause—nothing was to good for our young marching men those stirring war-time days.

Our young men came back—most of them—and most of those who came back are living in peace and comfort today. But nearly 30,000 of them are sick and disabled—in hospitals under the care of Veterans' Bureau. They need many things that our laws won't allow our government to give them.

And those things are furnished by the American Red Cross. For the Red Cross never forgets. It cares for the wounded or ill veteran as "The Greatest Mother in the World."

The Red Cross never forgets—let us not forget the Red Cross. Let us respond to the Red Cross Roll Call NOW—"lest we forget."

No score, rubber game. Z deals and is obliged to choose between a club and a heart bid.

The general rule or convention is that with a choice between a major and minor suit, bid the major, but this rule holds true only when both suits are of equal length. If the minor suit happens to be the longer, it should be bid first and the major suit on the second round. Such bidding should indicate to partner that the minor suit is longer or stronger and not to support the major in preference, unless he has much better holding in the major suit than in the minor.

Z's proper opening bid, therefore, with the above hand is one club. A bids one spade and Y, with a double stopper in the spade suit, should bid one no trump. B passes.

Z should now bid two hearts to show his partner his other suit and to indicate a two-suit holding. A passes and Y is up again. The rule that a "two-suit" always should be played at a suit, his hand, however, is not strong in either of his partner's suits and yet is very strong in spades and diamonds. For that reason he should figure that he has a better chance for game in no trump than at clubs or hearts. Y therefore should bid two no trump.

At no trump Y Z will score three odd, game and rubber. At clubs, four odd is possible and at hearts, three odd. Thus it is apparent that Y's departure from the rule proves a winning venture. Stick by your conventions but also learn when to break them. When you do, however, always have a reason, and a good one, for doing so.

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one no trump and all passed. A opened the five of spades, Y played the four, B the nine and Z won the trick with the ten of spades. How should Z plan the play of the hand?

Solution: Z should take four rounds of diamonds, winning the third diamond trick in Y's hand with the king so that he can play the last diamond and thus force discards. The important suit to find out about is the heart suit, for if Z takes the wrong finesse, he not only will lose game but also may not even make his bid.

A and B now have two set-up suits, clubs and spades, so Z cannot permit either A or B to get the lead. On the ten of diamonds, B discards a spade and A a heart so Z decides that B must have the queen of hearts. If he also has the ten, Z cannot go game but, if A has the ten, then Z can go game as he can catch B's queen.

As a matter of fact, A held the ten and B the queen, so Z's fine play enabled him to make game on a hand that most players would lose because they would finesse the heart toward the ace jack rather than first coax discards and thus locate the queen. Be on the lookout for such opportunities.

INCREASING PALATABILITY OF HOME GROWN FEEDS

One reason why ruminants—cud chewing animals—are of such great economic value on stock farms is their ability to handle coarse roughage feeds. This ability to convert such coarse feed crops into valuable livestock products is of great importance to farmers in all sections.

Cattle and sheep consume annually thousands of tons of home-grown roughage but additional thousands of tons of such forage feeds grown on these farms are wasted. Such feeds may be so unpalatable that when offered to livestock they are eaten only in small quantities, if at all. A great waste results from the loss of such large quantities of home-grown feeds. Much of such feeds wasted by livestock is refused not because of their lack of feeding value but because they are unpalatable, and livestock will not eat them in large enough quantities to make good gains or milk production.

An experiment recently carried on at a dairy farm near Valparaiso, Porter County, Indiana, illustrated this. The roughage feed was made up of equal parts of medium quality alfalfa hay and corn stover. A grain ration and silage was also fed. To one lot of cows, the roughage was fed whole; to the other, the roughage was chopped or ground and fed mixed with the grain ration. The following figures show the difference in the way the cows consumed these feeds.

Refused Roughage Fed Whole

Alfalfa Hay 13.6%
Corn Stover 55.5%

Refused Roughage Fed Chopped Or Ground and Mixed with Grain

Alfalfa Hay 13.6%
Corn Stover 55.5%

Alfalfa Hay 2.2%
Corn Stover 2.2%
These results show that a large amount of valuable home-grown feeds can be saved if these feed crops are chopped or ground and fed mixed with the grain. Coarse alfalfa or clover hay, sweet clover hay, soybean hay, corn fodder and sheaf grains may be fed with large savings if chopped or ground in this way.

DAIRY CATTLE RATIONS

The preparation of feeds for dairy cattle is today receiving considerable attention from men interested in the improvement of feeding methods.

It is now recognized that for most classes of stock, grain should be ground before it is fed. Since farm stock such as dairy cattle, steers and sheep make up their rations largely of roughage feeds, the question has arisen as to whether the feeding value of such roughage crops could not be improved if they were chopped, recut or ground before feeding.

At the Pennsylvania Experiment Station, Dr. S. L. Bechdel found through digestion trials with dairy cows, that when alfalfa hay was ground and fed mixed with the grain, the whole ration was digested more completely than when the hay was fed whole and separately from the grain.

The results of this experiment are valuable. They show that home-grown feeds may be increased in value by chopping or grinding and mixing before they are fed. They indicate also that with the better digestion of these feeds greater economy of feeding will be the result.

To the first half-million new Ford owners

To THE half-million men and women who have received new Fords in the last eleven months, there is no need to dwell on the performance of the car.

You have tested its speed on the open road. In traffic you have noted its quick acceleration and the safety of its brakes. You know how it climbs the hills. On long trips and over rough stretches you have come to appreciate its easy-riding comfort. Continuous driving has proved its economy of operation and low cost of up-keep.

This is an invitation to you to take full advantage of the service facilities of the Ford dealer organization so that you may continue to enjoy many thousands of miles of carefree, economical motoring.

The point is this. You have a great car in the new Ford. It is simple in design, constructed of the best materials and machined with unusual accuracy. It is so well-made, in fact, that it requires surprisingly little attention. Yet that doesn't mean it should be neglected. Like every other fine piece of machinery, it will serve you better and longer if given proper care.

One of the best ways to do this is to take your car to the Ford dealer every 500 miles for oiling and greasing and a checking-up of the little things that have such a great bearing on long life and continuously good performance.

Such an inspection may mean a great deal to your car. To you it means thousands upon thousands of miles of motoring without a care—without ever lifting the hood.

Ford dealers everywhere have been specially trained and equipped to service the new Ford. You will find them prompt and reliable in their work, fair in their charges, and sincerely eager to help you get the greatest possible use from your car for the longest period at a minimum of trouble and expense. That is the true meaning of Ford Service.

THE GAME FROM THE SIDELINES

Three cheers for Coach E. E. Shupe and his Rangers.

The Rangers showed that brain and skill are more important on the gridiron than "beef".

No doubt Pampa was a little surprised to find out that they didn't have the fastest backfield in the state as they believed before the game.

And without doubt, Perryton was a little surprised to find they had a team that could beat Pampa.

But even that Perryton was certainly back of the Rangers, win or lose. There was no less than 175 Perryton cars that made the 120 mile trip to see the Rangers play.

The best score of the game was the three points made by Peery when he place kicked in the third quarter. And by the way, that Peery boy did some real kicking all the way through.

Pampa had several speedy men but it took Tucker to show them up when he side-stepped, stiff-armed, and twisted through their whole team on two occasions to score for the Rangers.

It doesn't seem possible that the Ranger line could hold a team that outweighed them fifteen pounds to the man, but they did hold—and how!

Pampa tried seventeen passes in the final period in an attempt to get away and score, but they couldn't do it.

Witt got back in form in the third quarter and showed up several holes in the Pampa line where he plunged.

Every single man on the Ranger team played his best. They played against every odd but they played with a spirit that couldn't be broken. They weren't playing for individual honors, they were playing for the team and its teamwork that wins in any athletic sport.
