Thailand hotel collapse leaves at least 32 dead

By MICHAEL HADDIGAN
Associated Press Writer

KORAT, Thailand (AP) — A six-story hotel collapsed in northeastern Thailand today, killing at least 32 people and injuring about 350, provincial officials said. Dozens of people were trapped and crews pumped oxygen into the debris.

Rescuers took bodies out of a huge pile of concrete slabs and wreckage where the Royal Plaza Hotel once stood in Korat, a provincial capital and commercial center about 130 miles northeast of Bangkok.

Provincial officials said 276 people suffered serious injuries and 70 others received minor injuries. Hundreds of people — including Americans, Japanese and Europeans — were attending meetings in the hotel when it collapsed.

Hospital personnel said there were two foreign women among the dead, one from England and the other from Japan.

Estimates on the number of missing ranged from 50 to about 200. About 20 people had been found alive.

"I don't know if they are alive but we hope they are," said Deputy Interior Minister Chaowas Sudlabha. "We are pumping oxygen to them now."

Police chief warrant officer Chalong Kingchakaew said the hotel was being renovated when it collapsed. But there was no immediate word on what caused the collapse.

Government-run Radio Thailand said about 200 people were attending a Lions Association meeting while 100 more were participating in a seminar for teachers at the hotel.

The Nation's radio said the top three floors were added to the hotel's original three-story structure in 1990. It said the hotel had a total of 143 rooms.

Other such structures have collapsed in Thailand because additional floors were built in violation of construction and safety regulations.

Fires also have claimed hundreds of lives.

On May 10, a fire in a Bangkok doll factory killed at least 188 workers. The Kader Industrial (Thailand) Co. Ltd. fire was the worst factory blaze in history.

Since then, more than a dozen have died in factory fires in Bangkok, including 10 teenage girls who were killed while sleeping in the garment factory where they worked.

In July, more than 1,000 factory workers demonstrated outside the prime minister's office to protest layoffs, anti-union violence and poor safety conditions.

They displayed a large portrait of Thanong Pho-arn, the former head of the Labor Council of Thailand, who disappeared in June 1991.

Holiday schedule announced for PISD

The holiday schedule for Pampa Independent School District students during the 1993-94 school year will be as follows:

Labor Day holidays will begin on Thursday, Sept. 2, through Monday, Sept. 6, with teacher in-service days on Sept. 2 and 3. Thanksgiving holidays will begin on Thursday, Nov. 25, with classes resuming on Monday, Nov. 29.

Christmas break will begin on Thursday, Dec. 23, with classes resuming on Tuesday, Jan. 4, 1994. Monday, Jan. 31, will be a holiday; and spring break will begin on Monday, March 14, with classes resuming on Monday, March 21. Other holidays will be on Friday, April 1, and Friday, April 15.

Teacher in-service days are scheduled for Friday, Oct. 1, and Feb. 14-15. Jan. 3 will be a teacher-preparation day.

The last day of classes will be Wednesday, May 25.

Barker offers pending retirement as chief juvenile probation officer

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
Lifestyles Editor

Members of the Gray County Juvenile Probation Board met in the Commissioners Courtroom of Gray County Court House in special session Thursday to consider a four-item agenda.

Chief Juvenile Probation Officer Ed Barker began the meeting by offering his retirement effective Feb. 1, 1994. He noted in a letter to board members that he had been on the job nine years and eight months and felt that "there are personal life pursuits that need my attention."

"My cooperation and help is yours in making that transition," Barker said. No action was taken on his retirement request, because it was not an agenda item.

Barker further told board members that he traveled about 2,000 miles since the last juvenile board meeting and that there were no major changes in the status of his office.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy responded to Barker's resignation announcement by exclaiming, "Well, you certainly know how to get a meeting off with a bang, Mr. Barker."

In a telephone interview, Kennedy expressed his surprise over Barker's retirement announcement, noting that it was unexpected.

Members discussed the proposed budget for the juvenile probation office, noting that it would be discussed again by Gray County Commissioners at their Monday meeting.

District Judge Lee Waters suggested to the group that no action be taken on the proposed budget since a new assistant juvenile probation officer had not been hired and a final salary set. Kennedy noted that the final budget for 1994 should be submitted no later than Sept. 12.

The board adjourned to executive session to discuss personnel matters according to Judge Kennedy.

Speaking before about 20 gathered for the meeting, most of whom were prospective candidates for the job of assistant juvenile probation officer, Kennedy said the juvenile probation officer would work in a two-officer, one-clerk office. The base salary is expected to range from $1,400 to $1,800 per month depending on qualifications, with county benefits including retirement, insurance and mileage.

Kennedy noted that the job was not "eight-to-five type job necessarily." It sometimes requires the transport of juveniles to Moore or Randall counties, and occasionally to other juvenile facilities around the state.

Barker told attendees that the officer does preliminary investigations for juvenile courts and writes recommendations for them. Officers serve summonses and cooperate with the district attorney and assistant district attorney.

Training for the position includes 40 hours of education to qualify for certification as a juvenile probation officer at Sam Houston State University. Recertification is required every two years, Barker said, and is paid for by Gray County.

District Judge Kent Sims said that he expects the next legislative session to focus on revision of juvenile laws. Waters agreed and noted that the focus of crime legislation is to return to local efforts as opposed to state efforts for solution.

"Sometimes when we send a child to the Texas Youth Commission, sometimes they come out worse than when they started," Waters said.

Twenty-three educationally qualified applicants have applied for the position of assistant juvenile probation officer. Those traveling the farthest were interviewed Thursday. Others are to be interviewed in a special meeting beginning at 5:30 p.m. Monday in the Commissioners Courtroom of Gray County Courthouse.

The retirement announcement sheds new light on hiring an assistant, Kennedy said, noting that applicants' qualifications will be evaluated differently. It is possible, he said, that an assistant juvenile probation officer hired now might become chief probation officer upon Barker's retirement. Another option, he explained, would be to hire an outside chief officer experienced in another county.

The new assistant officer will be named about Sept. 1, Kennedy said.

The 1994 budget is expected to "be about the same" as the 1993 budget, Kennedy said. Grants from state programs will be used to pay the assistant juvenile probation officer, and provide juvenile detention and residential services for offenders.

Some state funds are used for daily operations. The main source of state funding is the Performance Awards Program, Community Corrections Program fund, and Juvenile Probation Commission. Gray County currently expends about $30,000 per year on juvenile corrections.

Twenty-four young people — 19 boys and five girls — are on juvenile probation. Under state law, children who can be charged with a juvenile offense range in age from 10 through 16. Texas law classifies those who break the law at age 17 or older as adults.

The Juvenile Probation Board meets quarterly and its members are Judges Kennedy, Sims and Waters.

Authorities: Repeated cases of domestic violence common

AUSTIN (AP) — When Barry Lyn Washington fatally shot girlfriend Yvonne Michelle Fields and then himself, it was not the first time their stormy relationship turned violent.

In fact, police records indicate he beat her seven times dating to August 1991. In two recent cases, he was charged with assault.

Sgt. Ron Smith described their relationship as "a prime example of what happens in family violence cases when they are allowed to escalate."

In Texas last year, 132 women were killed by their male partners in cases classified as family violence, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety. Seventy-two men were killed by their female partners in family violence cases.

"Laws aren't enough," said Christina Walsh, spokeswoman for the Texas Council on Family Violence, a membership association made up of representatives from the 62 shelters for battered women statewide.

"We need to change behaviors, and we need to change how people handle anger, disappointment and rejection so that violence isn't the answer," Ms. Walsh said.

Fields, a 24-year-old mother of five, had gone to Washington's house Wednesday to get her purse, said Andrea Brooks, Fields' aunt.

The two began arguing, first at the home of Washington's relatives and then in nearby woods. Several hours later, Washington, 19, made good on his threat to kill Fields. Their bodies were found in his stepfather's house.

Brooks said that in the past, Fields had been hospitalized after Washington broke several of her ribs. Washington also was accused of running over Fields with a car in April, police records indicate. In November 1991, he kidnapped one of their daughters, according to police records.

Police said they filed charges in all of these cases, but Washington was indicted only in the November 1992 case and the April 1993 case, according to court records.

And Fields, authorities said, didn't respond to the Austin Police Department's efforts to help her.

"In most situations, (Fields) didn't follow up with filing charges in incidents where there was a disturbance," said Ray Ramirez, a victim services counselor with the Austin Police Department.

"A lot of victims follow through and get help and a lot don't. We sent her letters to get her to contact us, but she apparently never did."

Her grandmother, Florence Cabin, said the family saw the problems.

"He would still call and come by. This was a thing we went through for a long period of time," she said. "As far as I know, I guess she really never pushed the issue because she was thinking the state would take care of it."

Band of veteran musicians to play for benefit

Five veteran musicians from the Pampa area join forces in a special outdoor benefit Saturday in front of Shepard's Crook Nursing Agency at 2225 Perryton Parkway.

Archie Young, Dennis Neal, Eddie Hastings, Tommy Henson and Doc DeWeese will be on stage to raise funds for Shepard's Helping Hands, a non-profit agency that helps elderly citizens in the Pampa area. The event is a 1960s street dance that starts at 8 p.m. Saturday night.

Shepard's Helping Hands primarily assists the elderly with the cost of prescriptions not covered by Medicare or Medicaid.

The five musicians are collectively known as the Tyme Machine and specialize in hard rock and roll of the Sixties. This year's event is the second time the group has helped raise money for Shepard's Helping Hands.

Most of the members of the group currently work in separate bands of their own and get together annually for the benefit.

Young, currently playing lead guitar for Brush Fire, credits his mother making him take piano lessons as to how he got into music. Young plays more than seven instruments and has worked with such notables as Alvin Crow, Moe Bandy, Johnny Bush, Donovan and Neil Young in a music career that goes back 40 years.

Pampa native Dennis Neal has paid his dues for 28 years and is also a member of Brush Fire. Neal has worked in Southern Knights, Wild Card and the Debonairs. He plays cornet, lead and rhythm guitars and handles much of the back-up vocals on stage. Neal got his first guitar at 13 and says music "is generally what keeps me sane."

Eddie Hastings, a resident of White Deer, says his taste for music grew larger when he nailed first place in his high school's talent contest during his senior year. Hastings has been involved in six bands and plays guitar, drums, keyboards and does lead vocals. Hastings says his favorite song is Van Morrison's "Brown Eyed Girl."

McAlester, Okla., native Tommy Henson, a longtime local musician, says his mother gave him his first guitar and his dad gave him his first bass. One of the leading bass guitarists in the region, Henson's career in music spans 34 years. He is proficient on drums and piano, sings lead vocals and has worked with one of the founding fathers of rock and roll, Chuck Berry.

"My main inspiration in music and in life is, no question, my wife," he said.

The veteran has worked in such bands as Wells Fargo Express, Backyard Swing, Tyme, Midwest and Wolfcreek Mining Company.

Doc DeWeese, born in Cincinnati, Ohio, has lived most of his life in Texas and has worked in the media and music business all of his life.

A veteran of 31 bands, DeWeese is a drummer and a lead singer and is currently the morning personality on KOMX radio in Pampa. Radio and television advertising play a big part in his life although the music business is "what has always pulled everything together."

DeWeese has played keyboards, clarinet and saxophone in other bands. He also has worked with or opened for such diverse acts as Little Texas, Johnny Rivers, Roy Head (of "Treat Her Right" fame), "Fiddlin'" Frenchie Burke and Jimmy Gilmer and the Fireballs.

DeWeese defines music as "an open window of your soul."

Officials of Shepard's Helping Hands are promising a lot of fun for everyone at the fundraiser Saturday. In addition to the 1960s street dance, hot dogs, watermelon and soft drinks will be for sale at Sixties prices with all proceeds going to Shepard's Helping Hands. Officials also promise special appearances by Sonny and Cher and Elvis.

Concessions will be available after 7 p.m. and the dance will begin at 8 p.m.

Christopher says NATO will meet on attack plan if shelling resumes

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Warren Christopher assured a Muslim delegation today that NATO would take military action if Serbs do not release their hold on Sarajevo and let relief supplies reach the city.

He said he shared their "anguish" over Bosnia and assured them he would confer with the allied foreign ministers by the end of the day "one way or the other." What happens next in the former Yugoslav republic "really is in the hands of the Serbs," Christopher said.

The chairman of the 51-nation Organization of Islamic Conference, Foreign Minister Abdul Sattar of Pakistan, said Muslims around the world felt "anguish and distress" over the situation in Bosnia. The Muslim-dominated government has lost control of virtually all the country except Sarajevo.

Christopher assured him that "we all feel a great deal of anguish about the situation there."

He told The Associated Press Thursday night that if the Serbs resume their shelling of Sarajevo the North Atlantic Council will reconvene to consider taking military action against them.

"We're going to be watching what happens" in the next few days, Christopher said in an interview. "That's a critical time."

Christopher said President Clinton was determined to lift the siege of the Bosnian capital, "preventing the strangulation" of the city.

"If Sarajevo would fall it would give a kind of impetus to the Serbs and embolden them in a way that would make it very hard to contain the conflict," Christopher said.

He agreed that the administration had taken a harder line by declaring the rescue of the city was in the U.S. national interest. He said he was "running up a big telephone bill" talking to European foreign ministers about the next allied move.

"What I'm saying now is that the president is determined to lift the siege of Sarajevo," Christopher said. "That is in the national interest to the extent we would use our air power to try to assure Sarajevo is not strangled. There are various reasons for that, starting with humanitarian reasons."

In the interview, Christopher

'The decision has already been taken. It's been finished. We can do it ... at any time if we want to.'

made clear the United States would not attack the Serbs unilaterally, but act only in concert with the NATO allies.

Whether NATO's governing body, the North Atlantic Council, meets again "all depends on the Serbs," he said. "They have it within their control to ease the siege in a way that could improve conditions there."

"On the other hand," Christopher said, "if they were to go back to shelling that would call for another council meeting."

He said he did not want to "give a particular time line" on when the allies might reconvene in Brussels.

The council on Monday approved a plan of action developed by NATO military commanders. A final decision to implement it was deferred. Administration officials said that

Authorities: Michael Jordan's father shot to death

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The body of the father of basketball star Michael Jordan was found floating in a South Carolina river, and authorities said today he had been shot to death.

James Jordan, 57, was found last week in a river near Bennettsville, S.C., about 60 miles southwest of Fayetteville.

He died of a gunshot wound to the chest, Cumberland County Sheriff Morris Bedsole said.

Dental records and other identification helped to confirm that the body was that of Jordan. The body was found Aug. 3, two days before Jordan's luxury car was found, stripped, in a wooded area near Fayetteville.

Authorities have no suspects and said they have determined no motive in the slaying.

Because Jordan travels on business, it wasn't until the car was found that the family became concerned, authorities said.

Michael Jordan, guard of the three-time National Basketball Association champion Chicago Bulls; his agent; and members of his family have not made any statements about the disappearance.

James Jordan was last seen July 22 after attending the funeral of a friend in Burgaw, 60 miles from Fayetteville, the sheriff said. The Jordan family owns a house outside Charlotte.

The car was found Aug. 5 off a Fayetteville road, its rear window smashed, Bedsole said.

Jordan's wife, Deloris, told authorities she last talked to her husband on July 26. She said she did not know where he was calling from. Authorities said that was the last time they know of that anyone spoke with Jordan.

Rancher offers child killer a job amid protests by Uvalde residents

HOUSTON (AP) — Amid the flurry of protests from Texans across the state refusing to allow child killer Raul Meza in their towns, comes an unusual proposal.

Uvalde County officials confirmed the offer of a job offer and home by an unidentified Del Rio rancher, the Houston Chronicle reported today. Del Rio in Val Verde County is about 72 miles west of Uvalde.

The offer would call for Meza to live on an isolated ranch in the brush land and work as a ranch hand, said Uvalde County Judge William Mitchell.

"If it's remote, it might be the ideal situation," Mitchell said. "But certainly, it would just move the problem to another county. We wouldn't want that to happen to our friends in Val Verde County. I'm not trying to push our problem off on them."

Meanwhile, protesters near Uvalde, which was the first city to demonstrate against Meza's presence, are hoping to get the convicted child killer moved again.

About 35 angry residents protested Thursday in front of Meza's home in Uvalde County, his seventh stop since being released from prison June 21.

Previous attempts to place him in Uvalde, El Paso County, Wichita Falls, San Antonio, Mineral Wells and Sweetwater also were met with local outrage.

Meza has been in Uvalde since his Aug. 3 transfer from Sweetwater. It is the longest time he has spent in one place since his release from a Brazoria County prison, and Uvalde residents worry that this may become his permanent home.

Protesters vowed to demonstrate against the 32-year-old Meza until he is transferred away from Uvalde, which is located about 90 miles west of San Antonio.

"This is our paradise. We don't want him here," said Josie Albrecht, a mother of three children who lives fewer than 500 yards from the home Meza stays in with relatives.

"How can we forget about a killer who lives in our back yard?" asked her 10-year-old son Dereck Albrecht.

Residents of the sparsely populated Nueces River Ranch Estates outside Uvalde carried signs reading, "This used to be Heaven, now it is Hell" during the 90-minute demonstration. Shouts of "Killer" and "We want him out" were also heard.

Meza is under mandatory supervision for the rape-slaying of 8-year-old Kendra Page of Austin in 1982. He has been living at his relative's home since he was transferred from Sweetwater.

He served 11 years of a 34-year prison sentence because he had accumulated enough "good time" to complete his punishment. Now he's required to report to a state parole officer as part of his required supervision, officials said.

Residents of the rural subdivision say the state's supervision of Meza won't be enough to keep him out of trouble.

"He's broken the law a bunch of times and he's going to keep on doing it," said protester Charlie Chapa. "He needs to be somewhere where police can be there in five minutes."

Chapa and other residents also said they were concerned that the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's Division of Pardons and Paroles had slacked off on its plan to relocate Meza out-of-state.

State Rep. Pete Nieto, R-Uvalde, who also protested against the convicted killer, said Uvalde County won't let the state forget its objections.

"I don't think anybody here will get discouraged and quit protesting," Nieto said.

Nieto said he and a small group of residents planned to travel to Austin on Tuesday to demand Meza's transfer and deliver petitions with about 2,200 signatures to parole officials.

Learning Center seeks applicants

The Pampa Learning Center will accept applications from prospective new students and conduct interviews with them from 9 a.m. until noon on Monday.

Students are asked to bring a transcript of their previous schoolwork with them.

The acceptance list and schedule will be posted on the door of PLC at 3 p.m. next Wednesday.

Home ec teachers attend conference

Gaylene Skaggs, Fran Stellman, Karen Skaggs and Katie McDonald, all of whom are vocational home economics teachers at Pampa High School, joined approximately 2,800 teachers at the 1993 State Professional Development Conference for Home Economics Teachers.

The conference, held on Aug. 2-5 in Austin, was planned and coordinated by the Home Economics Division of the Texas Education Agency. The theme of the four-day conference was "Making Connections: Educating for Future Success." Those attending the event were offered training designed to enhance their teaching skills and assist them in developing their program priorities.

Of special importance this year were the presentations and work sessions that focused on implementation of the newly adopted master plan for career and technology (formerly known as vocational education).

Pope challenges U.S. to moral leadership

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Pope John Paul II challenged the United States to exert moral leadership in resolving the Balkan crisis and in opposing abortion — an indirect rebuke of President Clinton just minutes after their first encounter.

"America, you are beautiful and blessed in so many ways," the pope said, quoting from a speech he gave in 1987 in Detroit. "If you want equal justice for all, and true freedom and lasting peace, then, America, defend life!"

The leader of 950 million Roman Catholics arrived in Denver on Thursday for a four-day visit centered around World Youth Day, a jamboree described as a "Catholic Woodstock" for youngsters from 70 nations. It's his third visit to the United States in the nearly 15 years since he became pope.

On Thursday evening, some 85,000 rain-soaked youngsters welcomed the pope at Mile High Stadium, waving white handkerchiefs and stamping their feet until the place shook. He beckoned them to lead the church and society into the next century.

Today, he was to celebrate Mass with bishops in Denver's cathedral and then travel to a retreat in the Rocky Mountains about 50 miles from the city to hike and rest.

The 73-year-old pontiff, making his 60th papal trip, appeared drained by tropical heat at earlier stops in Jamaica and Mexico. But his spokesman, Joaquin Navarro, said he was feeling better.

After being welcomed at Denver's Stapleton International Airport by Clinton, his wife, Hillary, and daughter, Chelsea, the pope spoke for 20 minutes.

John Paul urged the United States to work with the United Nations and other international organizations to resolve conflicts in the Balkans, the Middle East and Africa.

But he didn't say whether military force would be justified. In recent months, the Vatican has accused the United States of using excessive force in Somalia.

"In developed countries, a serious moral crisis is already affecting the lives of many young people, leaving them adrift, often without hope, and conditioned to look only for instant gratification," the pope said.

"Only by instilling a high moral vision can a society ensure that its young people are given the possibility to mature as free and intelligent human beings, endowed with a robust sense of responsibility to the common good, capable of working with others to create a community and a nation with a strong moral fiber."

The pope's only clearly abortion-related remarks in that speech were repeated from an address he gave during his last U.S. visit, six years ago. And he didn't repeat the sharpest reference he made then to abortion.

"All the great causes that are yours today will have meaning only to the extent that you guarantee the right to life, and protect the human person," he said, dropping the words "from conception until natural death."

Navarro, his spokesman, said the pope's condemnation of abortion remained clear and undiminished.

Clinton, standing behind the pope and next to Raymond Flynn, U.S. ambassador to the Vatican, showed no reaction to the remarks on abortion.

Asked what he thought of the remarks, Clinton gave a thumbs-up and said, "It was a great speech." And White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said of the pope's comments on abortion: "I think he tried to make his point without being confrontational. That's what we expected."

In a private meeting later at Regis University, the president and the pope talked mainly about the bloodshed in Bosnia, and not at all about Clinton's support for abortion rights, Flynn said.

Flynn wouldn't answer directly when asked if they differed on U.S. threats to use force against Serbs to end the siege of Sarajevo.

"The president had to make it very, very clear that the United States cannot turn its back on the suffering and the misery of innocent people and (that) there are tragic human rights violations that are taking place," Flynn said.

Surveys have shown that many American Catholics disagree with a wide range of Vatican teachings, including the opposition to artificial birth control and abortion and its demand for an all-male, celibate clergy.

"Respect life" is the theme of this year's World Youth Day, a biennial international gathering of Catholic youth. The weeklong pilgrimage began Wednesday evening with a Mass attended by up to 150,000 people.

363 schools rated as low performers

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Nearly 6 percent of Texas schools have recorded student performance so low that the schools could be closed in two years unless improvements are made.

The Texas Education Agency on Thursday listed 363 of 6,208 campuses rated as "low-performing."

In addition, TEA said, 10 of the state's 1,048 school districts could lose their accreditation and be merged into other districts if they don't shape up.

Under a new state law, each district and individual school was rated based on results of the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills student achievement exam administered to fourth, eighth and 10th graders.

Those districts and schools listed with "clearly unacceptable performance" are where 20 percent or less of the students passed the TAAS exams.

"We are committed to increasing the number of exemplary and recognized districts and campuses, while at the same time reducing the number that are low-performing," Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno said Thursday.

Under the law, Meno has the power to close low-performing schools that don't improve, while the districts where accreditation is threatened could be annexed into other districts.

However, TEA spokeswoman Della May

Moore said, there are a number of intermediate steps that can be taken first.

"We have high expectations that we're not going to have to exercise that (closing) option. We feel that people will direct financial as well as human resources ... to improving student performance," Ms. Moore said.

Responding to the rankings, the Texas Association of School Boards issued a statement saying it is difficult to judge schools based on a single standardized test.

"We go into the classroom with the assumption that any child can be educated. This data suggests that some children will require more resources, more community support and more parental involvement," said Frank Battle, the group's legislative counsel.

The new system ranks campus performance as exemplary, recognized, acceptable or low performing.

Twenty-two made the top category and 255 were recognized. Among those listed in the top 22 were Darrouzett Elementary, Darrouzett; Hillcrest Elementary, Dumas; and Murfee Elementary, Lubbock.

TEA said 5,568 schools were listed as acceptable, but 593 of those were warned of unacceptable performance in a "specific student population," which the agency defines as blacks, Hispanics, whites or the economically disadvantaged.

Among those listed as having unacceptable performance were: Amarillo — Forest Hill Elementary, Mann Middle School, Rogers Elementary and San Jacinto Elementary; and Lubbock — Alderson Junior High, Harwell Elementary, Parkway Elementary, Wheatley Elementary and Wright Elementary.

TEA said the new accountability system was consistent with Meno's call for more rigorous, real-world standards linked with local flexibility.

"We now have a strong and clear student achievement accountability system," Meno said.

"And we are confident that academic performance will rise for all students and extreme sanctions will not be necessary as we move forward in a spirit of cooperation with local districts and campuses," he said.

Public disclosure of the poor-performing schools' names came more than a week after local school officials were notified.

At least some districts were given the names of their poor-performing schools on Aug. 3. But the TEA refused to make the information public that week.

Ms. Moore said the TEA wanted to make sure all local districts were notified, and to give schools time to appeal low ratings because some initially were listed incorrectly.

Eventual release of the listings came eight days after the information was sought by The Associated Press under the state Open Records Law. Other news organizations also sought the list under the open government statute.

Clinton promotes plan on cutbacks in military bases

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — President Clinton, who approved a recommendation in July to close 35 major U.S. military bases, is trying to reassure those hurt by deep Pentagon cutbacks that they won't be abandoned.

On the second day of his week-long working vacation, Clinton was promoting his five-year, $19.5 billion defense conversion plan at Alameda Naval Air Station, a future victim of military cutbacks.

He also was participating in a roundtable discussion on defense conversion at Oakland Naval Supply Station.

The conversion package is just a fraction of the about $110 billion he plans to slash from the military budget in five years, but Clinton says using federal money to train defense workers, help communities hurt by base closings and put defense technologies to civilian use is the first step toward building "an economy that can compete and win in the post-Cold War era."

The Base Closure Commission recommended closing 35 major bases, nine of which are in California, including Alameda.

Passing the political hot potato to Congress as soon as possible, Clinton OK'd the list the day he got it. Congress must either approve or reject the entire list.

Clinton's trip here was designed "to demonstrate the president's commitment to the people of California during this transition period. It's one of the hardest hit states and he wants to put the full weight of the White House behind helping it," said Nancy Soderberg, staff director of the National Security Council.

Clinton flew here Thursday night after signing a flood relief bill in St. Louis and visiting with Pope John Paul II in Denver. The quick trip signals his commitment to shore up eroding support in California, the electoral-vote rich state he won easily in 1992.

Report: Inflation remains under control

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation remained well under control for the third consecutive month, with prices rising just 0.1 percent in July, the government said today.

Declines in vegetables, meat, gasoline, fuel oil and tobacco helped offset a large increase in airline tickets, lettuce and fresh fruit.

The slight, seasonally adjusted gain in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index followed no change in prices in June and an increase of 0.1 percent in May, offering more confirmation to economists that worrisome price increases earlier this year did not signal an acceleration in inflation.

Economists had assumed inflation wouldn't be a problem in 1993 after it sank to 2.9 percent in 1992, the second-lowest annual rate in 27 years. But department reports showed it running at an unexpectedly brisk annual rate of 4.3 percent during the first four months of the year.

However, during the past three months, the inflation rate has been just 0.8 percent, bringing the rate for the first seven months to 2.8 percent, about the same as during all of last year.

The index has been helped by falling energy prices, caused by weak world demand. But weakness of the U.S. economy also has contributed. Companies trying to raise prices find customers willing to defer purchases or go elsewhere.

"There just isn't any inflation around. The way the economy is going, there isn't going to be much pressure on prices in the near term," said economist Sandra Shaber of the WFEA Group in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

In July, energy costs were unchanged after a 0.2 percent drop in June. Gasoline and fuel oil both fell 0.5 percent but the price of natural gas and electricity rose.

Food costs also were unchanged, after falling 0.4 in June. Beef fell 0.1 percent and poultry, 0.4 percent. Fresh vegetable prices dropped 6.8 percent despite a 15.7 percent jump in lettuce prices, the worst since March. Tomato prices fell 32.1 percent, the biggest drop in 14 months. Fruit prices rose 4.2 percent.

Prices excluding the volatile food and energy categories rose just 0.1 percent in July for the second consecutive month. For the year so far, this so-called core rate of inflation, which most analysts consider a better barometer of underlying inflationary pressures than the overall index, rose at a 3.3 percent annual rate, the same as the increase for all of 1992.

"Inflation is tempered ... (and) prospects are still excellent. ... There's a lot of downward pressure on prices," said economist Robert Brusca of Nikko Securities Co. International Inc.

Airline tickets rose 2.8 percent in July and are up 19.7 percent from a year ago. Clothing was unchanged during the month and is up just 0.2 percent for the year.

Meanwhile, medical care costs, a perennial source of inflation, rose a relatively mild 0.4 percent for the second consecutive month. Over the past year, medical costs are up 6 percent.

The various changes left the Consumer Price Index in July at 144.4, compared with 140.5 a year ago. That means a marketbasket of goods and services costing $100 in the 1982-84 base period would have cost $144.40 in July, up from $140.50 a year ago.

At the wholesale level, prices have been even better behaved. They were unchanged in May, down 0.3 percent in June and down 0.2 percent in July, the department said Thursday in its Producer Price Index.

The consensus of private economists is for 3.2 percent inflation this year and 3.3 percent in 1994, according to Blue Chip Economic Indicators of Sedona, Ariz.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The (McAllen) Monitor, on anti-smoking laws:

While anti-smoking hard-liners nationwide congratulate themselves over a new Los Angeles, Calif., law banning smoking at all restaurants in that city, the rest of the us ought not to overlook the law's fundamental subversion of citizens' rights.

Sure, backers of the measure, which took effect last week, will argue such efforts are needed to shield nonsmokers in their new-found "right" to be free of secondhand tobacco smoke — irrespective of whose property they happen to be on. And to be sure, this vocal lobby will continue to accuse anyone who questions their tack of being an accomplice of the tobacco industry. ...

The bottom line here is that whatever science determines about secondhand smoke, it shouldn't be up to government at any level to enforce. In jeopardy is the timeless right of property owners to do what they deem best with their premises.

Corpus Christi Caller-Times, on IRS snooping:

Here's a bit of news that goes well beyond disconcerting: The Internal Revenue Service disclosed last week that more than 150 of its employees have been disciplined for snooping in confidential tax files and even (in some cases) using tax data to generate fraudulent tax refunds. ...

The notion that some IRS employees have taken it upon themselves to troll casually through utterly confidential files, whether through idle curiosity or avarice, is nothing short of outrageous. ...

The good news, such as it is, is that the IRS has developed a system which will make it possible for supervisors to "profile" the actions of staffers. ...

Even when operating strictly within the confines of legitimate authority, the IRS has enormous power over the lives of individuals Americans. It is absolutely indispensable for agency watchdogs to ensure that that power is used with profound caution — and with decent respect for the rights of American taxpayers.

Pecos Enterprise on term limits:

Freshman Congressman Henry Bonilla, R-Texas, has as very appropriate saying: There are a lot of good candidates to be "poster children" for a campaign for term limits.

How true, how true.

The long fight over the new budget, which includes new taxes — big ones — and spending cuts — little ones — is a prime example.

Almost all of those who supported the budget wanted to be sure to keep any cost cuts or tax increases from affecting those in their district or state so they could get re-elected.

Being in Congress is not an easy job and it isn't supposed to be. Those elected are sent to Washington to make the hard choices for the benefit of the whole country — not just to get re-elected and keep a cushy job.

The whole mess in Washington is disgusting, and those in elected offices apparently didn't get the message in this last election.

It's up to us as citizens to remind them of that message — get government and spending under control and reduce the deficit.

Master of misusing language

William F.
Buckley Jr.

What makes some Americans so mad at Bill Clinton is his glib falsifications. It gets bad when, after hearing a speech from a president, you feel you want to shut your eyes and maybe recite the multiplication tables or say the alphabet or drop an ashtray on the floor to check out gravity. The performance of the president the other night can only be described as fetid.

This was so in matters small and large. Anyone with respect for the least requirements of formal logic should not declare in one paragraph, "No more something for nothing," and in the very next paragraph, "I'm especially proud that this time the federal government has been fighting alongside the people" in mitigating the Mississippi floods.

1) The victims of the flood are getting something for nothing.

2) What does Clinton mean by "this time" the federal government is getting into the relief business? Who was it helped the victims of the hurricane in Florida and the earthquake in San Francisco? Santa Claus?

"We've been given the politics of abandonment." The listener wonders what that is, exactly. Well, he tells you right there and then, and the next morning you see it in print because there is a dash after the word abandonment: "cutting taxes on the well-off and asking nothing of them in return, either, while raising taxes on the middle class to pay more for the same government, instead of investing in our jobs and our future."

That sentence reconstructs history as densely as any one sentence written by Stalin or Goebbels.

The basic 1991 tax (Kemp-Roth) cut taxes not only on the well-off but also uniformly. The 1982 tax (TEFRA) was primarily a tax on corporations. The 1986 act reduced taxes at all levels, but imposed on the wealthy class the forfeiture of a number of traditional shelters. Six million taxpayers were relieved of any tax whatever. In 1985 the tax code was indexed, relieving the middle class of bumping into higher rates of taxation by the legislative authority of the diminished dollar.

The 1981 and 1986 acts were approved by every member of the Senate Finance Committee, with one exception; and the final vote was overwhelmingly in favor, and included Sen. Edward Kennedy. Reconcile these facts with Clinton's paragraph, and you can do Rubik's Cube for a living.

"The second principle of this plan is fairness: Those who have the most contribute the most. As this chart shows, we asked the well-off to pay their fair share, requiring that at least 80 percent of the new tax burden fall on those making more than $200,000 a year."

Does our Rhodes scholar know the difference between "fair" and "expedient"? Would it be fair to take the top 10-seeded golfers and add 10 strokes each to their score? Is it "fair" to impose 80 percent of a proposed $250 billion tax load on fewer than 1 million Americans — who as things stand are already paying 27 percent of all federal taxes?

We are supposed to have equal treatment under the law, the same laws for rich and poor. The invasive practices of the progressive tax violate the basic commitment of the 14th Amendment, but the use of language by Clinton corrupts thought.

He can't stop saying them, the demagogic asides about the rich: "I will not balance the budget on the backs of older Americans while protecting the wealthy." Who asked him to?

The deceptions frame the entire speech. "For the last several years, our economy has failed to generate jobs. ..." Why didn't he have the grace to say that under Reagan our economy produced 18 million jobs?

"They — the Republicans — 'practice partisanship when we need progress. They call for delay when we've been waiting for 12 years.' Waiting for what 12 years? Waiting for a Democratic Senate? But we've had one for 10 of the last 12 years. Waiting for a Democratic House? We've had one for 12 of the last 12 years. Waiting for a 'fair' tax bill? But the four tax bills passed during the last 12 years were overwhelmingly subscribed to by Democratic legislators. What can he be talking about?"

The answer is: His fixation. The current jury by which the federal government continues to extend its powers to regulate our activity, and to commandeer the use and misuse of language.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Aug. 13, the 225th day of 1993. There are 140 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Aug. 13, 1961, Berlin was divided as East Germany sealed off the border between the city's eastern and western sectors in order to halt the flight of refugees. Two days later, work began on the Berlin Wall.

On this date:

In 1521, Spanish conqueror Hernando Cortez captured present-day Mexico City from the Aztec Indians.

In 1624, French King Louis XIII named Cardinal Richelieu his first minister.

In 1846, the American flag was raised for the first time in Los Angeles.

In 1899, movie director Alfred Hitchcock was born in London.

In 1910, Florence Nightingale, the founder of modern nursing, died in London.

Stock market still going up!

Berny Baruch used to say that the way to make money on Wall Street is to "buy when everybody else is selling and sell when everybody else is buying."

But some things have changed in 50 years, and Baruch, were he still with us, would certainly accommodate the changes.

True, the Dow has been hitting record highs — everybody is buying — but "take your money and run."

There's no place to run to!

All other investments are either so risky or yield such little interest that your invested money, allowing for 3 percent inflation, is shrinking.

The stock market is still the only game in town. There are too many self-anointed investment gurus selling newsletters these days.

You are safest relying on one with a track record, though even John Templeton, to me and many a personal hero in his profession, concedes that he is correct only two times out of three. That's enough.

Marketing strategist Charles Clough of Merrill Lynch is predicting Treasury bond yields will dip to 5 percent in three or four years, and Clough has been dead right on interest rates since 1988.

Assuming he's right again, certificates of deposit and T-bonds will yield even less, enhancing the stock market as the last, best option.

But the stock market is so high!

Wall Street's nervous acrophobics are looking down when they should be looking up.

We need help. Embarrassing surveys show that only one in 10 Americans knows the difference between "debt" and "deficit." So we need competent help.

Highly respected Christopher Channer, investment adviser with the Chicago Corp., has a gift for explaining complex economics in shirt-sleeve English.

Channer concedes that the Dow, 3,000 on April 17, 1991, has been an "astounding" 500-point gain to a present 3,500.

No wonder the nervous Nellies want to jump off! Actually, explains Channer, that 500-point advance is only a gain of 16.6 percent over a period of two-and-a-half years — though corporate earnings are growing 15 percent to 20 percent every year.

The Dow is lagging, not leading.

The word Channer prefers is "consolidating."

Unless President Clinton's tax-and-spend philosophy, unchecked, raises investor risk, the stock market remains the best way for investors to own a share of our country's inevitable growth.

As long as warnings abound, cash is plentiful, earnings are growing faster than stock prices and inflation is in check, there is a very low probability of a major stock market correction.

If you lack the stomach for a roller coaster, then sit on your assets. But the Dow still has a long way to grow.

It won't be the last budget crusade

Walter Mears
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — It wasn't the first crusade and it won't be the last. Presidents have been vowing for years to slay budget deficits, or at least corner and cut them.

President Clinton said his quest was different, even revolutionary, with stronger spending restraints, realistic goals and economic prophecies. And it's only the beginning.

He said his Cabinet already is assigned to come up with additional budget cuts to be recommended next year. "There will be more spending cuts in every year I'm here," he said.

But there was a disquieting sense of familiarity, of having been there before, which fed doubts about the claims for this mission. That was the opening for critics, Republicans and dissenting Democrats, some who had a role in prior promises of deficit control.

Now they play to the skeptics, and Clinton acknowledges that's a lot of people.

It shows in the public opinion polls, in the potency of Ross Perot's outside-the-beltway politics, in the majority who say Clinton doesn't keep his promises.

And skepticism heightens into suspicion when the topic is the budget deficit, the problem successive presidents have been promising to curb, or even end.

Both Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan said they'd balance the budget within a four-year term. But deficits rose during Carter's four years and rocketed during Reagan's eight. George Bush reneged on his central campaign promise against new taxes in order to make a deficit-curbing deal with Congress in 1990; that one also was oversold as a route to balanced budgets in this decade.

Clinton's commitment was to restrain deficit spending that will not end in the foreseeable future and is projected to add $1 trillion to the national debt over the next five years even if things go as planned.

Things seldom do.

The budget deal Bush made, and regretted, was supposed to prune deficits by $496 billion over five years, although the estimate of its impact has now been reduced to $482 billion.

New deal, same number, although Clinton said the $496 billion in this one is realistic, based on conservative economic growth and revenue projections, and the 1990 plan wasn't.

"I know full well that Americans are very skeptical of any claim by the government," Clinton said in his televised address to the nation. "You must wonder if these cuts are for real and whether the taxes will really be used to pay down the deficit."

Yes, he said, on both counts.

But spending that can't be avoided can add to the deficit anyhow, without being counted against targets and spending ceilings. The federal price tag for Midwest flood relief is up to $5.8 billion, nearly double what first went to Congress only a couple of weeks ago.

The 1990 plan was overtaken by recession, soaring health care costs, and the emergencies of that era — hurricane relief, the Persian Gulf war, savings and loan bailout costs, all exempted from the spending caps that require offsetting cuts or revenue increases to balance added expenditures.

Clinton said those caps were the best feature of the 1990 plan. "The one thing they did right that we're also doing, except we're doing it even tougher, is they had some pretty stiff caps on domestic spending programs," he said.

For all that, he said the Bush era plan didn't deliver, "didn't produce deficit reduction." True, but deficits would have increased even more without it. Leon Panetta, Clinton's budget director and one of the congressional architects of the 1990 deal, said it is working and things would be a lot worse if it hadn't been done.

Republicans argued that the Clinton program doesn't actually cut spending. True again; it reduces projected spending, just as the last one did.

And nearly $45 billion that was counted as savings under the 1990 deficit reduction agreement is being counted again as part of the new one.

In the end, it will take real numbers to settle the political claims and counterclaims. So there's ample time for argument, perplexing as it is.

"I feel sometimes like I'm talking in Italian ... about some of these budget issues," Panetta said at a White House briefing. "They're hard to follow."

"Italian we can understand," came the joking reply.

Child in hot car steams bystanders

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday afternoon, my husband and I were shopping at a local shopping center. We went back to our car to drop off some packages when we noticed a child about 2 years old, alone in a locked car. We live in a desert town where the temperature sometimes climbs to 110. We stayed by the car and took down the number of the license plate, trying to decide what to do next. The child appeared to be sleeping rather restlessly, but was extremely red and perspiring profusely.

We waited by the car for about 10 minutes, afraid to leave, should something happen to this child. Finally, a young woman came out of a shop three doors down, and demanded to know why we had taken down her license plate number. She was extremely hostile.

My husband and I were completely taken off guard, and rather apologetically backed off when she said, "He was sound asleep and I didn't want to wake him."

Abby, please warn your readers that there is no excuse — including a sleeping child — to leave a child in a locked car for even five minutes.

People scream about locking pets in cars in the summer. Let's be aware that a child locked in a hot car is equally at risk, and in my opinion, that constitutes child abuse and neglect.

T.S., CLOVIS, CALIF.

P.S. Is there a better way I could have handled this?

DEAR T.C.: I think you handled it quite well, but you could have also reminded the mother that in the 10 minutes you waited by the car, someone could have easily broken into the car and kidnapped that child. It's a long shot — but stranger things have happened.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who, when asked where he wants to go, what he wants to eat, what he wants to do — always answers, "Whatever you want."

If I didn't care what he wanted and was just concerned with what I wanted, I wouldn't ask! Maybe this is his way of being nice, but he's driving me nuts!

How do I break him of this annoying habit — or should I? By the way, he denies that he does this!

STILL WAITING FOR AN ANSWER IN PASADENA

DEAR STILL WAITING: The next time he tells you that he's willing to go along with "whatever you want," chime in that what you want is for him to make the decision. And try to say it with a smile.

Amy Watson, Jami Henwood and Brandy Chase Dance students advance to finals

Students of Madeline Graves competed in the national level of Dance Masters of America in New Orleans this summer. There were over 700 dancers competing the preliminaries and 300 were chosen to advance to the finals.

Brandy Chase, Jami Henwood and Amy Watson were chosen to compete in the final competition. In the final competition all three students were awarded scores above 85

If they're sitting around at the local cafe drinking a "horn of zeese" (cup of coffee), munching on a few "lowceezies" (soda biscuits) and telling a few "wheelers" (tall tales), some of the older people still speak it — Boontling.

About a hundred years ago, residents of the Boonville area, a tiny community 110 miles north of San Francisco, decided to invent their own language.

Boontling, they say, was dreamed up by adults who wanted to evade sharp little ears and indulge freely in gossipy "nonch harpins" (objectionable talk.) It also meant locals could say what they pleased right in front of visiting "bright-lighters" (strangers, presumably from the big city.)

"In traveling through this remarkable region," David Yeadon writes in the current National Geographic, "I came to realize that ever since the first settlers arrived in the gold-rush days of the mid-1800s, Northern Californians have invariably spoken their own language, though no other town has yet gone as far as Boonville."

Northern California has always been a place apart, combining scenic splendor with the pioneering heritage of its people. There is a stubborn independence linked with a spirit of community and a deep love for the soul of the land.

All of this has widened the gulf between them and their ever-expanding sister, Southern California, whose political power and growing need for resources, many feel, have long overwhelmed the needs and interests of the North, Yeadon reports.

And lately the Northerners have begun expressing themselves very clearly, using words that the rest of California can understand. One of the most forceful words is secession.

In June of last year, 31 of California's 58 counties held an advisory vote on secession, and 27 opted for it. Secession has been an issue more than 100 times since the state's creation in 1850. But this was the largest vote yet, an unmistakable signal that a complex web of problems and concerns has evolved into discernible fear and frustration.

More than a century of logging in the vast mountain forests here has endangered the prospects of the loggers almost as much as those of the spotted owl and the marbled murrelet. Once-rich salmon populations are suffering from dams, silting of streams and damage to their spawning beds upriver. The fishermen are suffering in turn.

Northern California coasts were once home to American Indians. The remoteness helped keep out the Spanish missionaries who were changing Indian life to the south. California's largest reservation, the Hoopa Valley, is located in the northern region.

And there is the ceaseless demand for water from the suburban sprawls of Los Angeles and other southern cities. In California 75 percent of the water originates north of Sacramento, while about 75 percent of the demand occurs south of it.

As Darryl Young, a legislative representative of the Sierra Club California, told Yeadon, "Grass roots is the way to go here. That's what Northern California's all about."

The residents — cattle ranchers, lumbermen, fishermen, alternative lifestyles, Indian groups, newly retired couples, burned-out yuppies and ambitious entrepreneurs — live primarily in small settlements scattered across a varied terrain.

First come the great green patchwork patterns of the Sacramento Valley, embraced by the mountain arms of the Sierra Nevada to the east and the western Coast Ranges of Trinity, Klamath and Siskiyou.

Then the land rises abruptly, ridge upon ridge, to the soaring broken volcanic cones of 14,162-foot-high Mount Shasta, haloed by a strange lenticular cloud. Many religious sects have settled around its base, regarding it as one of the Earth's vital "power centers." Most Northern Californians see Shasta, at the least, as a powerful symbol of the region's identity.

In the sleepy and slightly rundown old railroad town of Gridley (self-proclaimed Kiwi Capital of the United States), Bill Burleson, third-generation publisher of the 112-year-old Gridley Herald (circulation 3,400), proclaims:

"Secession? I'm all for it. The locals are all for it. We've got no voice in state government now. We need less regulations — too many damned regulations. We need to get to keep our own money."

"Damned Southern California," he says of the water situation, "they'll drain us dry! If it wasn't for us, it'd still be desert down there."

The cattlemen don't feel that frustrated gloom, up in the rich, undulating high country of Modoc and Shasta counties. Every week the town of Cottonwood holds the largest cattle auction in the state.

"There's not a lot better places than this cattle country," says Wade McIntosh, an auction assistant. "Maybe in some ways we're 20 years or so behind the times. We don't seem to get all those kinds of headaches like other areas. These guys, they're their own men up here. If there's troubles in the small towns — fires, people out of work, church needing a new roof — everyone helps out. They make it work as a community. What do they need secession for? They've already got it."

With tourism one of the few real growth industries in Northern California, small towns must fight hard to balance the pressure for development with their desire to retain community spirit.

On the coast, Mendocino sits atop its cliffs — a lacy frill of Victorian architecture against lines of dark pines. "We've managed to keep a real community spirit here," Christiane McLees, editor of the Mendocino Beacon, told Yeadon, "despite the tourism, the developers and everything else."

The balance is something all Northern Californians seem to be striving for. The cry for secession is merely one passionate example of that.

No matter how bad things get, people are determined to stay. They keep looking for new ways to make a living. Some of the ideas are typical of Northern California — pragmatic and yet romantic, and somehow always in tune with the land.

Bingham honored with Texaco Foundation Scholarship

Anne E. Bingham, a 1993 graduate of Pampa High School, has been selected as one of the 98 winners of a $10,000 Texaco Foundation Scholarship. Bingham is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Bingham. Mr. Bingham is a lease operator in the Lefors area.

Bingham plans to enter Southwestern University in Georgetown this fall. She was awarded an academic scholarship by the school, also, and plans to major in biology, and become a physician.

While a high school student, Bingham was named a National Merit Commended Scholar, Who's Who Among American High School Students, a Tandy Scholar, Best of the Class, Paschal Society for Academic Success and an All-American Scholar. She was also named to the Panhandle-Plains Academic Hall of Fame. She was a member of National Honor Society and National Forensic League.

Bingham earned the Latin II and Latin III awards and the Ann Brannon Award for Chemistry and the Algebra award. Her classmates voted her Most Scholarly her senior year.

She played varsity tennis, where she was a regional qualifier in doubles.

She was presented by her father as a third generation debutante in May at the Wichita Falls Junior Forum.

Bingham volunteers for the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center.

Jim Barnum, Texaco area manager, presented Bingham with a scholarship certificate.

The Texaco Foundation Scholarship Program was established to help finance the college educations of outstanding sons and daughters of Texaco employees. The awards are made to assist Texaco families in meeting the costs of sending their children to accredited U.S. colleges or universities selected by the recipients.

The Texaco Foundation underwrites the entire cost of the scholarships, but they are granted on the basis of nation wide competitive exams. The College Scholarship Service-Sponsored Scholarship Programs, an independent, nonprofit body, selects the winners.

PAMPA DEVOTIONAL PAGE

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

MENELEK II, EMPEROR OF ABYSSINIA DURING THE LATE 1800'S, ACTUALLY SET OUT TO EAT THE WHOLE BIBLE! THE ANGLICAN BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER SAYS OF HOLY SCRIPTURES "...READ, MARK, LEARN, AND INWARDLY DIGEST THEM." OBVIOUSLY, MENELEK TOOK THE WORD "DIGEST" LITERALLY!

HE HAD BEEN SUFFERING FROM A CHRONIC ILLNESS FOR A LONG TIME AND, CONVINCED THAT THE PRINTED TEXT HAD HEALING POWERS, THE EMPEROR MUNCHED TWO PAGES A DAY! THIS DIET MAY NOT HAVE CURED WHAT AILED HIM, BUT APPARENTLY IT DID HIM NO VISIBLE HARM....

...UNTIL HE REACHED FIRST KINGS! MENELEK NIBBLED NOT ONLY VERSES, BUT UPON REACHING A SECTION OF ILLUSTRATIONS DEPICTING THE MANY KINGS OF ISRAEL, AND BEING A KING HIMSELF, HE DEVoured THEM AS WELL! ALAS, HE COULD EVIDENTLY DIGEST WORDS BUT NOT PICTURES-THE POISON IN THE COLORED INKS FINISHED HIM OFF!

NEXT WEEK: THE BIBLE DIVIDED!

Methodists explore ministries of diversity

By ROY A. JONES II
Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — The Rev. Curtis Hayes wasn't surprised when he became the first black minister appointed to pastor a predominantly white church in the Abilene District of the United Methodist Church.

After all, the appointment was an answer to prayer.

Oh, Hayes wasn't praying to be a first. He had learned — the hard way, he says — "to let God control my life, not Curtis."

"But I've always been praying for a church like this," he said, speaking in his study at Grace United Methodist Church.

"I told the Lord 20 years ago if I ever pastored a church I wanted to pastor a church that has white people and black people and Mexican people and all colors," he added.

Grace doesn't have any black members right now, but promoting inclusiveness and fostering a genuine unity in Christ were two of Bishop Alfred Norris' main goals when he selected Hayes and three Abilene-area pastors to break new ground in the far-flung No. 10th Texas Conference.

Norris, who had been named the conference's first black bishop in July 1992, made the first of what he called "cross-cultural" pastoral appointments in June.

In addition to Hayes, the Rev. Darrell Boone, a black minister who pastored the predominantly black Plum Street UMC here, was appointed to pastor a predominantly white church in Levelland; the Rev. Steve Boney, who is white, was appointed to follow Boone at Plum Street; and the Rev. Todd Raspberry, who is white, moved from Aspermont's First UMC to pastor the predominantly black Mount Vernon UMC which Hayes had pastored in Lubbock for four years.

Hayes said he has already found the Grace congregation to be more demonstrative in its worship than the Lubbock church. When he describes his former congregation as "cold," he's talking about the lack of "feedback" during a sermon, not the members' spirituality. An occasional "amen" was about the closest he came to the participatory encouragement commonly associated with black churches.

Gospel rocks to sign language beat

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — There's nothing like a gospel tune to really get the choir at St. Gerard Parish rocking.

"We do everything from monks' music to traditional hymns," said choir director Arthine Vicks. "But they really get into gospel. I try to get a real upbeat old song in our selections regularly."

St. Gerard's doesn't make music

Religious education begins at St. Vincent's

Religious education classes are set to reconvene at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church from 10:45 to 11:45 a.m. Aug. 29.

Registration is planned for Aug. 15 and Aug. 22 after the weekend liturgies, or at the church office during the week.

The Rev. Curtis Hayes, the first black pastor of a predominantly white congregation at the United Methodist Church in Abilene, is shown in late July in Abilene. Previously, Hayes had been a high school speech teacher, a Baptist, and a non-denominational missionary in Africa.

"It's the Methodist in those folks," he said with a laugh, explaining that he'd been a Baptist for most of his life and had grown accustomed to more audience participation.

"But that's okay, I get my amens anyhow. The Lord gives me his amens," he added.

Hayes said at Grace he can see "a lot of people shaking their heads and smiling," so he knows "the Lord's getting through to 'em...He's the one doing the preachin' anyway; I'm just his mouthpiece."

That's a far cry from the attitude Hayes had for the first 50 or so years of his life. He wanted Curtis Hayes, not God, to be No. 1.

Hayes, now 62, has always been driven to be the best at whatever he does.

Growing up in an integrated American Baptist church in an integrated community, Sioux City, Iowa, he excelled at speech in high school. He said he recognizes now "it was a God-given talent," but using that gift for the Lord was not a priority.

After a year in all-black Lincoln University, as a pre-law major, he was drafted into the Army in 1951. He wound up toting a rifle in Korea for a year.

After the war, he earned a bachelor's degree in speech from Morningside College. He taught high school speech in Sioux City for five years, then in California for 15 years.

In California his integrated speech teams won state titles nearly every year and he was recognized as the state's most outstanding speech teacher.

"I had rooms full of trophies. That was my goal then, being No. 1. But when I finally made it I wasn't satisfied," he said.

Meanwhile, he felt the Lord leading him to attend seminary. He got a scare, though, when he was recommended to Dallas Theological Seminary. He'd never even visited the South before.

"I didn't want to go to Dallas. I'd heard they used to hang black folks in Dallas," he said.

Nevertheless, he stepped out on faith. After he had sold his two homes and furnishings and prepared to move to Dallas, he got a letter informing him he'd been accepted to study at the seminary — and on full, four-year scholarship!

"The Lord provides," he beamed.

"Three years of Greek and two years of Hebrew nearly killed me though," he said. "It had been a long time since I'd gone to school."

He received his master's degree in theology in 1980.

"I told the Lord I'd like to be a chaplain in a prison or a hospital, or teach Bible at a Bible college," he said. "I told him, 'I don't want to be a missionary.'"

"Well, it wasn't long before I was in Africa," he laughed. "The Lord still had to keep me down."

With God's help he raised his own $30,000 support for the three-year, inter-denominational mission to Liberia. His main support came from the "store-front churches" of pastor friends he had met in seminary.

He'd planned to return to Liberia in 1985, but when the support was slow in coming in, he returned to teaching school in Dallas. Through a friend's insistence, the Baptist wound up attending the 3,000-member St. Luke's United Methodist Church and "fell in love with it."

Eventually, after taking some Methodist doctrine courses, he became one of its associate ministers. He jokes that he was allowed to preach only on Sunday nights and Wednesday nights "because I'd been a Baptist."

Another step of faith took him to Lubbock for his first pastorate in 1988 and he's "still growing in the Lord every day," he said. He's already scheduled some joint activities with other predominantly white Abilene churches to help break down racial barriers.

Hayes and his wife of 42 years, Opal, have three grown children and eight grandchildren.

Religion roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Directors of Religious Heritage of America have chosen the Rev. O.S. Hawkins, pastor of First Baptist Church in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., as the clergyman of the year.

Named lay churchman and lay churchwoman of the year, respectively, were Donald G. Soderquist of Bentonville, Ark., chief executive officer of Wal-Mart Stores Inc., and Joni Eareckson Tada of Agoura Hills, Calif., president-founder of Joni and Friends.

The religious heritage organization, which works to emphasize the religious influences in development of the nation, also authorized a special gold medal to evangelical theologian Carl F. H. Henry of Watertown, Wis., for his more than 50 years service to Christian scholarship. The awards are to be presented at an annual awards program Oct. 11 in Minneapolis.

NEW YORK (AP) — Church World Service says protracted conflict in former communist areas and in Mozambique, Burma and Somalia has boosted the worldwide refugee population by 3 million to a total of about 17.5 million.

The figures were compiled by the United States Committee for Refugees of which CWS, relief arm of the National Council of Churches, is a sponsor.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Donella Clements of Souderton, Pa., installed as moderator for 1993-95 of the Mennonite Church at its general assembly here, is the first woman to serve as the denomination's top elected official.

Hymn and History

Ken grew up and in fact graduated from Oxford University in England. He was ordained in the ministry and served what has been called a stormy and colorful career. Seventeen years later he was appointed chaplain of one of Europe's Royal Courts. But, after exposing sin in the lives of the royalty, he was "run out of town on a rail ..." as the saying goes.

Later, the King of England had Ken appointed as one of his chaplains. But Ken, outspoken as he was, began decrying the sin of the Monarch. The King liked it and he promoted Ken to Bishop. Twelve days later the king died and his successor had Ken and six others locked up in the Tower of London. Eventually he was released.

After thirty years of faithful service to the Christ's Church, Ken lived out the rest of his life in relative peace. In the process of this service, filled with anguish, pain, and frustration, Ken always encouraged students and parishioners to follow each song with four simple lines set to music. They begin with the familiar words;

"PRAISE GOD FROM WHOM ALL BLESSINGS FLOW."

PHS athletic program has numerous coaching changes

Almost every sport will have new faces

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Many new faces join the Pampa coaching staff for the 1992-93 school year, bringing changes in almost every sport.

The new coaches won't outnumber the students, even though it may seem that way at first. Other coaches already in the school system move up the promotional ladder.

As the head football coach, PHS athletic director Dennis Cavalier will be breaking in several new assistants and revamping his staff, but the process hasn't been unpleasant.

"It's an interesting time. Personally, I've enjoyed these new people," Cavalier said. "They've provided a new slant on things and have brought in new ideas. It's a real invigorating experience."

The new additions have brought about the reorganization of the coaching staff with Cavalier promoting Tad Smith, Steve Kuhn and Scott Lewis to the varsity level. Kuhn will be in charge of the defensive tackles and Smith, the defensive ends. Scott will serve as offensive coordinator and offensive line coach. They will also work with the junior varsity program. Kent Allison, Wade Wesley and Rod Davis are the newcomers. Allison is a Lubbock native and coached at Spur last season. Wesley coached at Meridian last year and was raised in Abilene. Davis hails from Chickasha, Okla. and coached at Belts last season. Allison and Wesley will also coach boys' track and Davis will be a baseball assistant.

"The last seven or eight days I feel like I've really grown close to these coaches. I appreciate the work they've been doing with our student-athletes," Cavalier said.

Three head coaching positions also had to be filled before school starts on Aug. 19.

Dennis Doughty, a Pampa Middle School teacher and an assistant with the high school baseball team, will take over as head baseball coach. Rod Porter, who coached the Harvesters for six years, requested reassignment. Porter will be the ninth-grade head football coach and will also help coach the PHS wrestling team.

Cody Huckaby, a Texas Tech graduate, comes in as the new swim coach and Brad Borden replaces Denise Reed as volleyball coach. Borden is a Texas A&M graduate and has spent the past seven years as an assistant coach for the Aggies. He also played volleyball internationally with Athletes in Action.

In boys' basketball, John Darnell and Troy Bell are new assistants under Harvesters' head coach Robert Hale.

Darnell, a Houghton, La. native, has been head coach at Class 5A Round Rock near Austin for the past five years. Darnell and Hale coached together during an international high school basketball tour in Honduras two summers ago.

The 6-6 Bell went to an NBA tryout camp after graduating from Creighton University and later played in the Continental Basketball Association and Global Basketball Association. The Fort Worth native roomed with Larry Johnson of the NBA Charlotte Hornets when they were teammates at Odessa Junior College.

Darnell and Bell replace Scott Flynn and Mike Carroll.

"We're real excited and pleased to have these two on our staff. They are both tremendous young men. John has been a Class 5A head coach, but he expressed an interest in becoming part of our program. Troy is a guy that almost made it to the NBA," Hale pointed out. He's been working with underprivileged children in the Fort Worth area. He's a big man with a big heart."

Another newcomer is Billie Osborne, girls' basketball and girls' track assistant who comes to Pampa from Friona where she has coached the past seven years.

Tammy Walker, who coached at Pampa Middle School last year, will also help with girls' basketball and girls' track.

"Most of the people who have left went to head jobs or a promotional-type position," Cavalier added.

Pampa's Palmer returns to National Masters meet

Pampa Middle School teacher Wendell Palmer is competing in the TAC National Masters track and field meet this week in Provo, Utah.

Palmer, who competes in the 60-64 age division, threw the hammer in his first event Wednesday and finished second with a 138-0 toss. Stewart Thompson won with a throw of 159-9.

On Thursday, Palmer placed second in the shot put. Today, he's entered in his specialty, the discus, and he also plans to throw the javelin before the meet wraps up.

"This is his big day," his wife,

Barbara, reported. "He was tired after competing yesterday, but he's anxious to go again."

Palmer has broken his own world record several times in the discus. Three years ago, he won the discus throw in the 55-59 age division at the World Games in Eugene, Ore. That same year he captured both the discus and shot at the Masters meet in San Diego, Calif.

Palmer started competing in the Masters when he was coaching at East Texas in 1975.

Masters track and field is open to athletes 35 years of age and over.

Simpson ties course record of 64 in first round of PGA Championship

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Scott Simpson found out Byron Nelson is a good tipper.

Simpson used a piece of advice from the 81-year-old golf legend, a former working pro at the Inverness Club, to tie the course record of 64 in the first round of the PGA Championship on Thursday.

Fifty-seven players broke par, making it the lowest scoring first round in 75 years of PGA Championships. None of them, however, did it as well as the soft-spoken, graying Simpson.

"The majors set up for my kind of game," Simpson said. "I play well on these kind of courses where the premium is on accuracy, control, patience and a good short game."

And then there was the tip from Nelson, which Simpson got Wednesday while speaking about Inverness' tiny greens with Nelson and his wife, Peggy.

"Byron always said shoot for the middle of the greens and you'll have a birdie putt," Mrs. Nelson said.

Simpson followed that advice in a 7-under-par round that tied the course record set by Bob Tway in the 1986 PGA.

The bogey-free effort was the highlight of the scoring explosion that included a field scoring average of 71.99, more than a full stroke lower than the previous mark set in 1985 at Cherry Hills.

The round also featured the first double eagle in PGA history, a 220-yard 5-wood shot by club pro Darrell Kestner of Manhasset, N.Y., that found the cup on the par-5 13th hole.

There was very little wind and the course was vulnerable to scoring, Simpson explained.

"The fairways are really good, so you have a chance with the irons to get 'em close. The greens are soft enough to hold a shot. And they're medium speed so you can take a pretty good run at your putts," he said.

He did just that, one-putting half the holes he played. But he was not alone.

Veteran Lanny Wadkins, needing a victory here to help his chances for a spot on the American Ryder Cup team, scored an eagle-2 on a 139-yard 9-iron shot as the highlight of 65, one shot behind Simpson.

Dudley Hart and Canadian Richard Zokol were another back at 66, while lefty Phil Mickelson, who finished birdie-birdie, led an international gathering at 67.

Also at four under par were Barry Lane of England, Eduardo Romero of Argentina, Steve Elkington of Australia and Americans Dan Forsman, Mark McCumber, Mike Hulbert, Robert Gamez and Loren Roberts.

British Open champ Greg Norman of Australia and England's Nick Faldo were in another large group at 68, while Tom Watson and Paul Azinger shot 69.

Defending champion Nick Price of Zimbabwe, a winner of his last three American starts, was shaking his head after a 74.

Simpson, on the other hand, was simply concerned with keeping his name atop the leaderboard. And he knew it would not be easy.

"This was one of those days where everything went my way," he said.

Cowboys go looking for 'Emmitt insurance'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, whose rushing attack this preseason has been abysmal without holdout Emmitt Smith, have offered receiver Jimmy Smith and a high draft pick to the Los Angeles Rams for running back Cleveland Gary.

"It's not Emmitt insurance, but it's Emmitt insurance," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said of Gary, the Rams' leading rusher and receiver a year ago.

"It would help us in a lot of ways and only affect us (negatively) in an area where we already have good depth," Jones said.

Gary is a former No. 1 draft pick who starred for Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson at the University of Miami. Like Smith with the Cowboys, Gary has been involved in a contract dispute with the Rams.

Last season, Gary rushed for 1,125 yards and 10 touchdowns. He is unsigned and would have to agree to a contract for a deal to be completed. If he is not signed by Friday, he must sit out the first regular season game because he was placed on the Rams' roster exempt list.

"If it's going to happen, it's going to happen fast," agent Jordan Woy told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "Because Cleveland will not sign with the Rams this week, next week or the week after. He has no interest in being an L.A. Ram."

Gary said: "The Cowboys are an attractive team, so I hope we can work something out."

However, The Dallas Morning News quoted a Rams source as saying Gary is unlikely to be traded, especially because first-round pick Jerome Bettis of Notre Dame suffered an ankle injury Wednesday and was examined Thursday after missing both workouts.

Even if Bettis is not seriously hurt, the Rams source said, "I think we need Cleveland here for one more year."

Smith won the NFL rushing championship the past two seasons but remains unsigned and reportedly millions of dollars apart in contract negotiations with the club.

Southwest Outdoors

As summer ends, hunting begins

The dog days of summer are the harbinger of hunting season. September 1 is the opening day dove season. The autumn parade of hunting seasons continues with archery-only season in October and the gun seasons for quail, duck and goose, deer and pheasant.

Just as the anglers develop cabin fever during the winter, hunters are eager to sit around the campfire and share stories about past hunts during the good old days.

HUNT '93 Local hunters will find a vast array of how to's, where to's, and all the newest hunting products at HUNT '93 on August 28 and 29 at the Tri-State Fairgrounds in Amarillo.

RICK McDOWELL OF TOP HAND OUTFITTERS in Canadian will display some trophies from his outstanding hunting service. As a special treat, Rick has agreed to conduct two game management seminars on Saturday and Sunday.

One of the great names in the deer stand and deer feeder business is CHAS-MAC, INC. This show will mark their first visit to the Texas Panhandle. Landowners and hunters can take a close look at their ground stand, the special 20 foot tall Super Stand, and learn first hand about their Big Mac Deluxe Feeders.

Our neighbors from the Oklahoma panhandle, MELVIN AND LYNN CHALOUPEK with Panhandle Pheasant Hunts will present their hunting opportunities. Looking for an early pheasant hunt, complete with guides and trained dogs? Bring some money and talk to Melvin.

Famous western artist, KENNETH WYATT of Tulsa has reserved two booths and will display his award winning artwork. Follow the crowds to his booth and enjoy the works of one of my favorite artists.

Members of the Amarillo Birddog Club will conduct a raffle, with the lucky winner taking home an outstanding birddog puppy. Club members will give daily seminars on training a birddog. If you appreciate well-trained birddogs and want to learn some training secrets, their seminars will be a highlight of the show.

If you enjoy the great outdoors, HUNT '93 sponsored by Budweiser is a five shows in one—hunting, archery, RV's, camping, and outdoor travel.

Save a dollar—Present a copy of this column at the front door during HUNT '93 and you will save $1 off the admission price. Limit one coupon per adult, okay? Stop by our Southwest Outdoors booth, we look forward to meeting you.

Next Lake Meredith Fun Fishing Tournament is Thursday evening, August 19, 1993 at Cedar Canyon. Registration opens at 4:30 p.m. and this three bass limit tournament runs from 6:00 till 9:00 p.m.

Montana's appearance doesn't help as Chiefs lose exhibition

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Buffalo Bills were more worried about shaking off last Saturday's miserable performance than they were about Joe Montana.

Montana made his first appearance in Arrowhead Stadium before a huge crowd, but the Bills capitalized on seven Chiefs' turnovers to take a 30-7 victory Thursday night, only the second time in 12 years that they have scored 30 points in a preseason.

"I got a rush when they introduced him," said Gale Gilbert after handling most of the quarterbacking for the Bills and completing 12 of 19 passes for 112 yards as Buffalo recovered from a 20-6 loss to Minnesota.

"But I think we were more concerned about the showing we made last week. We were pretty embarrassed last week. We weren't mentally prepared last week. We just wanted to do better."

Montana played the first quarter in his first appearance at Arrowhead and drove the Chiefs to the 1 on the opening drive, but came away empty before a crowd of 73,550. It was the largest preseason crowd for Kansas City since 75,231 saw a game against Green Bay in 1973.

"I thought I played just okay," he said. "I got the bugs out. I told (Chiefs coach) Marty (Schottenheimer) that the toughest part about today was that I wanted to play absolutely perfectly and that's no way to play the game. I'm glad it's over with."

Gilbert relieved Jim Kelly late in the first quarter. Kelly threw just one pass, but it was good for 74 yards and set up the Bills' first score.

"We wanted to look at players just like the Chiefs did," Bills coach Marv Levy said.

SF Giants lead NL West

By MICHAEL FLAM
Associated Press Writer

If the Atlanta Braves don't start forgetting about the San Francisco Giants, they may as well forget about winning the National League West for the third straight year.

A four-game winning streak has the Braves only one game closer to first place than they were when it started. With less than two months remaining in the season, Atlanta is 8 1/2 games behind the front-running Giants.

John Smoltz (11-9) earned the victory that gave the Braves a 14-3 record in their last 17 road games. He carried a one-hitter into the eighth inning before Ryan Thompson hit a three-run homer.

In other NL games, it was Colorado 4, Los Angeles 1; Houston 5, San Diego 3; Chicago 5, Florida 1; Pittsburgh 5, St. Louis 4 in 11 innings; and Philadelphia 7, Montreal 4.

Deion Sanders opened the game with a single, took third on Blauser's single and scored on Ron Gant's single. Two outs later, Terry Pendleton singled to score Blauser. Bobby Bonilla's 24th home run in the second inning cut the deficit to 2-1, but the Braves scored twice in the fourth on a walk, a hit, two errors and Mark Lemke's sacrifice fly.

David Justice's 28th homer, which tied his career high, came after Gant singled with one out in the fifth inning. It gave the Braves a 6-1 lead.

Sanders doubled to open the seventh and, one out later, Gant hit the first pitch off reliever Dave Telgheder for his 28th homer.

Dwight Gooden (11-12) allowed five earned runs and seven hits in five innings. Rockies 4, Dodgers 1.

The longest current winning streak in the major leagues belongs to ... the Colorado Rockies!

Colorado extended its winning streak to a club-record five games by completing its first-ever four-game sweep.

Willie Blair (5-9) pitched a seven-hitter at Dodger Stadium for his first complete game in 35 career starts. Vinny Castilla led off the second inning with his seventh homer after Gerald Clark doubled in a pair of first-inning runs off Orel Hershisier (8-12).

Astros 5, Padres 3

Luis Gonzalez tripled and scored the tie-breaking run on Andujar Cedeño's sacrifice fly in the sixth inning to lift visiting Houston to its fifth win in six games.

Greg Swindell (8-9) gave up 10 hits in five innings but held San Diego to three runs. Doug Jones finished for his 23rd save, including all three Astros' victories in the four-game series.

Casey Candaele doubled twice and had three RBIs, including two in the Astros' three-run fifth and another in the ninth.

Cubs 5, Marlins 1

The Chicago Cubs sent a struggling pitcher against a hot team, and the result, surprisingly, was Mike Harkey's first complete game in three years.

Harkey threw a seven-hitter and Dwight Smith hit a pair of solo homers to help Chicago snap the Florida's season-high four-game winning streak.

The Cubs had dropped the previous three games to the Marlins by one run.

Harkey (8-6), who had an ERA of 10.61 in his past four starts, struck out three while allowing seven hits and one walk. His last complete game came Aug. 17, 1990, in a 7-0 victory over Atlanta.

Jack Armstrong (7-12) gave up nine hits and five earned runs in 7 1/3 innings. Pirates 5, Cardinals 4

Jeff King's single over a drawn-in outfield in the 11th inning scored Carlos Garcia, who had tripled, with the winning run.

Todd Burns (0-4) lost in relief for the second straight night as the visiting Cardinals fell eight games behind the Philadelphia Phillies in the NL East.

Burns got pinch-hitter Tom Foley to fly out starting the 11th, but Garcia—who was 4-for-6—hit a sinking liner that got past right fielder Mark Whiten as he tried to make a sliding catch.

Joel Johnston (1-2) pitched two perfect relief innings for his first NL victory.

Phillies 7, Expos 4

Host Philadelphia completed a three-game sweep as rookie Kevin Stocker broke an 0-for-14 slump with a tiebreaking single in the seventh inning.

Montreal reliever Tim Scott (4-2) retired the first batter in the seventh and then gave up a single to Wes Chamberlain. Chamberlain advanced to second on a passed ball and scored the go-ahead run on Stocker's two-out single to break a 4-4 tie.

Reliever Roger Mason (4-8) pitched two scoreless innings and Mitch Williams worked the ninth for his 31st save.

Briefs

NEW YORK (AP)—Every phase of pro football seems to grow in popularity. The television coverage of the NFL draft, carried by ESPN on April 25, got a 4.2 cable rating, which adds up to 2.6 million homes. It was a new high for the draft on TV and at one time in the afternoon it peaked at 3.6 million homes.

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP)—There are thousands of stories about golfers who got rid of clubs after a bad shot. The veteran star, Raymond Floyd, did it in a unique way. Floyd was fed up with a bulky putter. He and his wife, Maria, took the club to a restaurant and left it at their table with a note attached.

The note read: "If anyone wishes to steal this putter, let him."

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP)—For almost two decades Lee Trevino has had a 300-pound caddie named Herman Mitchell. When not competing, Mitchell refuses to stay as a house guest at Trevino's home on Jupiter Island, Fla.

"He refuses to stay in my guest house," Trevino said. "I think he's afraid I'll starve him to death. I even volunteered to get him his own refrigerator and let him stock it as he pleases."

Rangers down California in AL action

By The Associated Press

All the attention focused on the AL East race this week overshadowed the fact that a big weekend series loomed in the AL West.

It got underway Thursday at Comiskey Park as Kevin Appier outpitched Jack McDowell and Kansas City closed within 2 1/2 games of first-place Chicago by beating the White Sox 4-2 Thursday night in the opener of a four-game set.

The White Sox have lost six of nine. Texas took advantage of the latest loss, beating California 4-2 to move within three games of Chicago.

In the AL East chase, first-place Toronto fell to Minnesota 9-2. New York beat Boston and cut its deficit to one game, while Detroit defeated Baltimore 17-11. In another game, Cleveland beat Milwaukee 8-6 in 11 innings.

Appier (13-6) gave up a home run to Tim Lincecum to start the game. It was Raines' 2,000th career hit.

Appier gave up seven hits, six of them leading off innings. He walked two and struck out one in his fourth complete game of the season.

McDowell (18-7), tied with San Francisco's John Burkett for the major league lead in victories, had his six-game winning streak stopped. He gave up four runs, three of them earned, and 10 singles in eight innings. He walked two and struck out five.

"I felt like I threw the ball fine," McDowell said. "I just think we got outplayed on the field tonight. If we could have executed better, it might be a different game."

Rangers 4, Angels 2

Rafael Palmeiro hit a two-run homer in the first inning and Dean Palmer connected in the second inning, sending Texas past visiting California.

Palmeiro's 30th home run and Palmer's 22nd came off John Farrell (2-10). Farrell had allowed 15 homers in 66 innings entering the game.

Kenny Rogers (10-7) gave up six hits in six innings, and Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 26th save.

Rangers right fielder Dan Peltier preserved the two-run deficit in the sixth inning, throwing out Eduardo Perez at the plate after he tagged up on a fly ball.

Yankees 4, Red Sox 1

Melido Perez solidified his spot in the starting rotation, pitching two-hit ball for 7 2/3 innings and helping New York win the series at Fenway Park.

Perez (6-10) stopped his four-game losing streak with his first win since June 27. He missed his previous start because of a sore shoulder. Steve Farr worked the ninth for his 22nd save.

Aaron Sele (6-1) lost for the first time in the majors. Boston won the first game of the series, but lost the last two and remained two games behind Toronto.

Dion James, Mike Gallego, Don Mattingly and Paul O'Neill hit RBI singles for the Yankees. Tigers 17, Orioles 11

Detroit hit a grand slam for the third straight game, winning 17-11 this time after victories of 15-1 and 15-5. The Orioles, who won the series opener 4-1 at Tiger Stadium, are 2 1/2 games behind Toronto.

Of the 48 runs the Tigers scored in the series, major league RBI leader Cecil Fielder drove in only one.

After getting grand slams in the second and third games from Dan Gladden, Chad Kreuter hit one in the series finale. Gladden had to settle for a two-run homer this time.

Mike Henneman (3-2), the fifth Detroit pitcher, survived the last 2 1/3 innings for the win. Todd Frohwirth (6-5), the fourth of five Baltimore pitchers, took the loss.

Twins 9, Blue Jays 2

Kirby Puckett hit two homers and scored three runs to lead Minnesota over Toronto and Jack Morris at SkyDome.

Morris (6-11) lasted only 1 1/3 innings, giving up five runs on seven hits while walking two and striking out two. The right-hander, who helped Minnesota win the World Series title in 1991, now has a 7.24 ERA.

Puckett's 13th home run of the season gave the Twins a 2-0 lead in the third. In his next at-bat, he homered off the facing of the third deck in left during Minnesota's four-run fourth.

Winner Kevin Tapani (7-11) allowed two runs on six hits in eight innings. Rick Aguilera got the final three outs.

Indians 8, Brewers 6

Carlos Baerga hit a three-run homer with one out in the 11th inning off Carlos Maldonado (1-2) to lift Cleveland over Milwaukee at County Stadium. It was the Indians' first extra-inning victory this season after six straight losses.

Jerry Dipoto (3-2) pitched two innings for the victory and Eric Plunk pitched the 11th for his 12th save, giving up a home run to Dave Nilsson.

NAFTA compromise resolves impasse on trade agreement

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's stock market dropped on word that Canada had rejected a compromise considered crucial to approval of the North American Free Trade Agreement. But later, the three countries reportedly reached agreement.

The Washington Post said today that the United States, Mexico and Canada resolved the impasse over U.S. demands that violations of environmental and labor standards be punishable by trade sanctions.

The disagreement had cast doubt on the agreement's future, worrying the Mexican government, which has the most to lose. The country is relying on the pact to lift its economy to first-world standards.

The negotiations revolved around the enforcement of important side deals on environmental and labor issues. Those deals are considered crucial to winning U.S. congressional approval for the agreement.

The talks apparently had hit an impasse when Canadian Prime Minister Kim Campbell said her country would not accept sanctions as an enforcement tool. She said NAFTA disputes should be resolved in each country's courts.

Mexico rejected that, saying it would open the door to Mexico being sued in its own courts by another country, violating Mexican sovereignty.

It was not immediately clear what compromise the three countries reached. The Clinton administration declined to give details, the Post said.

NAFTA, which is due to take effect Jan. 1, would create the world's largest trading bloc with 360 million consumers and annual production worth $6.4 trillion.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari has cast the agreement as the centerpiece of sweeping economic reforms he has carried out since he took office in 1988.

He wants the accord to enshrine those reforms, which have opened Mexico to a deluge of U.S. imports by slashing tariffs. The reforms have also included selling off poorly run state companies and measures to cut inflation.

He leaves office in December 1994.

Experts had feared the stalled talks might scare foreign investors away from Mexico and slow growth. That worried the Mexican government, "but they're not letting it show," said economic writer and political commentator Sergio Sarmiento.

Lubbock voters could repeal tax

LUBBOCK (AP) — Residents will head to the polls Saturday to decide whether to keep the half-cent sales tax they voted in just seven months ago.

The levy passed in January as an effort to lure a Pentagon accounting center to West Texas.

The tax, which went into effect July 1, raised city sales taxes from 7.75 cents on the dollar to 8.25 cents. Supporters promoted it as the city's way to pay for an $88 million public-private incentive package to the Pentagon.

But the tax seems doomed now because many residents are bitter that federal officials snubbed Lubbock late in the selection process.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin announced new criteria in March that knocked out the lone Texas entry from a short list of 20 cities.

"Obviously it was very disappointing," said city councilman Randy Neugebauer, who wants to keep the tax. "But the whole community learned. We are more sophisticated about the arena of economic development."

Mayor David Langston carried through on his January promise to lead the rollback petition if Lubbock didn't win one of the four new accounting centers.

Langston said he considers the levy as a tool that should be returned to Lubbock's "arsenal to try to attract businesses."

"I do not favor retention of the tax," Langston said. "I feel like the tax, unless you have a specific purpose for it, there's always the temptation to find a worthy cause."

Regardless of Saturday's vote, the sales tax will remain in place until Dec. 31. By then, about $4 million will have been collected.

That money cannot be spent without a public hearing and council vote, Langston said.

But Neugebauer and other council members want to retain the sales tax as a way to reduce property taxes.

Two citizens' groups are campaigning against keeping the sales tax.

Fritch to have Howdy Neighbor Day

FRITCH — Residents of Fritch are making plans for Saturday, Aug. 21, to be Howdy Neighbor Day.

The day will start off with a parade down main street at 11 a.m., and then all the activities will start at the Fritch City Park at noon. There will be games and food for everyone to enjoy, organizers said.

The turtle decorating contest will take place at 12:30 p.m. and the turtle race will follow that event.

Entertainment will start around 12:30 p.m., lasting until 2:30 p.m. The talent contest will begin at 3 p.m. Anyone wanting to take part in the talent contest can contact Sarah Ledford at 857-3015 or the Chamber office at 857-2458. The deadline to enter will be Sunday, Aug. 15.

There will be a booth set up by the Chamber to start collecting donations for the fireworks for July 4, 1994. Everyone that would like to see the fireworks again out at Lake Meredith is encouraged to contribute now so that the fireworks can take place next year, organizers said.

Booth spaces are still available at a cost of $20. There is no charge to enter the parade. Please contact the Chamber office at 857-2458 to register.
