Despite veto local workers still on the job

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland's United States government employees were on the job this morning and "working as usual," but it is still not known whether they will be told to shut down their offices or if they will get paid for working.

The consensus of federal workers this morning was since no official word has been sent down from the government, "it's work, work, work."

According to The Associated Press, if President Reagan has not received an acceptable spending measure to his desk by late Tuesday, 400,000 of the country's 2.9 million federal workers will be told to stay home.

On Sunday the House of Representatives voted to defy Reagan's veto threat, passing a $427.9 billion stopgap funding bill that is necessary to allow the federal government to continue spending money, according to wire reports. Today the bill was vetoed.

IN PRACTICE, THIS could mean government agencies would be stripped down to only essential services with all others closing.

As of this morning, Midland's federal employees manned their offices, but were unsure about their future.

Some were angry; others were disgusted. Many opted to ignore what was going on nationally and carry on with work as usual; but some were specifically told to put a halt on spending.

"I got called and was told not to spend any money," Burdett Brown, building manager at the U.S. General Services Administration Maintenance Division, said. "Stay open — but don't spend any money. I just got the call before I was getting ready to spend some money — I needed to get a valve stem to fix a leak. Guess we're going to have a leak."

Employees at the Department of Energy also were working, but said they were "unsure of the status this week."

"THEORETICALLY, WE should be preparing to shut down," Lowell Darling, supervisory auditor, said, "but we're here today waiting for further word."

According to AP, on orders from the White House office of Management and Budget, essential services would not be disrupted. This would include the military, Internal Revenue Service, Treasury Department and top government officials, but there is confusion whether the employees will get paid.

Most of Midland's government employees said if they "were in the office working, they had better get paid," but one federal worker, who would not comment on pay, said he "wouldn't mind taking off some extra time with the holiday coming."

Other AP reports stated agencies not considered necessary for national security, health or safety were told to come to work and prepare to shut down.

In Midland, it was vague which departments were considered essential. Most personnel felt their agencies were essential.

"WE'RE CONSIDERED as one of the exceptional agencies — people that have to stay on duty," a spokesman at the Drug Enforcement Administration said.

National Weather Service employees also commented that they were needed.

"This is not an official statement, but we've heard this will only affect non-essential agencies," a NWS spokesperson said. "In my opinion NWS would be considered an essential agency," he said, adding that since the Federal Aviation Administration will continue, the NWS would be needed.

FAA Chief Bill Hill said it was business as usual at the control tower at Midland Regional Airport.

A U.S. Defense Department spokesman said "we're at work and have not had any word yet as to what will happen."

And the IRS, one of the agencies considered "essential," also was working.

"We're here — no official word — we're waiting," said Robert Ray of Midland's IRS, adding that if their agency does not get paid it would "be difficult for any indefinite amount of time."

MOST AGENCIES HAD not received official word, but were going on what they had heard through the media.

"We haven't received anything official. All my staff are on duty," Joyce Tays, supervisory resident representative of the social security administrative office at the Health Education and Welfare Department, said.

"We're working. All we know is what we've heard — nothing official," a spokesman at the Agriculture Department said.

Bill Kirkland, a special agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was definite on his status.

"I'm working, working, working. This is a normal day as far as I'm concerned," he said.

The U.S. Postal Service also was fully staffed. According to Stan Sartain, director of customer service, because the "subsidy is so small from the government, we could operate on our own up until towards the end of the year."

As cars await their owners, the Capital is again lite up as Congress met for the third consecutive night to work out a compromise spending bill. Below, President Reagan tells reporters this morning that he has vetoed the emergency spending bill.

Congress up late as Reagan vetoes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today vetoed an emergency spending resolution to restore funds to federal agencies and told his Cabinet to begin shutting down non-essential government services.

It was his first veto in 10 months of office.

Reagan told reporters minutes after signing the veto that the bill posed "a difficult choice" for him. The rejection sends the measure back to Congress.

"Essentially, the president told us we're going to shut the government down, and we're going to go back to our departments and start the shutdown right now. ... We're going to close our files, turn out the lights and go home," Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said as he emerged from the meeting.

REAGAN TOLD REPORTERS THAT the choice he faced was, "either to sign a budget-busting appropriations bill that would finance the entire government at levels well above my recommendations, and thus set back our efforts to halt the excessive government spending that has fueled inflation and high interest rates and destroyed investments for new jobs; or to hold the line on spending with a veto, but risk interruption of government activities and services.

"I have chosen the latter," Reagan said.

He acknowledged that "the failure to provide a reasonable resolution means that some citizens may be inconvenienced and that there is a possibility of some temporary hardship," but added, "Nevertheless, a far greater threat to all Americans is the sustained hardship they will suffer by continuing the past budget-busting policies of big spending and big deficits."

He assured Americans that "Social Security and most other benefit checks will be paid on schedule; the national security will be protected; government activities essential to the protection of life and property, such as the treatment of patients in veterans' hospitals, air traffic control and the functioning of the nation's banks, will also continue."

The president said, "The practice of loading the budget with unnecessary spending and waiting until the 11th hour ... on assumption of a presidential veto has gone on much too long." He said that "so-called stopgap resolutions are actually budget-busters that can last an entire year."

AP Laserphoto

After reading his five-minute statement, the president, in answer to a reporter's question, said Congress can either extend the continuing resolution that lapsed Friday and work on a real appropriations bill after the Thanksgiving weekend "or they could come in and pass what I said in the first place, that I would split the difference with them, between our request for help and their budget figures."

Asked whether he would take less than that, he said, "I don't think the people should take less than that."

He said the Congress "in the hours ahead has the opportunity to reconsider — and I urgently request that they do so."

The president in September had asked Congress to reduce non-discretionary programs, except defense, by 12 percent, a saving of $8.5 billion.

Prison reform order cause of inmate violence, officials say

By The Associated Press

The Texas Department of Corrections has been shaken by more violence in the last five months than in the past seven years because a federal judge's prison reform order has changed inmates' attitudes, state officials say.

The TDC has had to quell 11 disturbances since June, compared with six such outbreaks between then and 1973.

"We have a very serious and dangerous situation," Attorney General Mark White said. "We have been fortunate that there has been no loss of life.

"I feel this is directly attributable to the actions of the federal court that has given prisoners the mistaken notion that they do not need to obey the rules and regulations of the prison system."

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler last December ordered prison officials to solve immediately problems such as overcrowding, inadequate medical care and understaffing. The state agreed to make some of the changes, but has appealed the others.

But William Bennett Turner of San Francisco, the lawyer for the inmates who filed the class-action lawsuit that led to Justice's order, said state officials are using the court order as a scapegoat for their own failure to improve conditions.

"WHAT CAUSES THE unrest is that the department of corrections will not comply with the order. If the system won't act like a law-abiding citizen, the prisoners don't see why they should," he said.

"The prison system has been thumbing its nose at the order ever since it was handed down."

In the most recent outbreak of violence, 50 inmates at the TDC's Eastham Unit, near Trinity in East Texas, threw rocks and burned the tents where they were housed to meet the judge's order against overcrowding.

The Friday night incident cost the system $100,000 in damages and 15 inmates remained hospitalized Sunday with minor injuries, TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said.

Asked whether the fact the prisoners were not in cells allowed the violence to get out of hand, Hartley replied: "That's certainly true."

The Eastham incident followed by two days a riot in which 500 inmates participated at the Darrington Unit, 150 miles away. Thirteen people were injured and $200,000 worth of property was damaged, TDC officials said.

Gov. Bill Clements, reached in New Orleans where he was attending the Republican Governors Conference, agreed with White that the court order was the root of the unrest.

CLEMENTS COMPLAINED that the court-appointed "special master" assigned to oversee the reforms was "playing father confessor" to the inmates.

"These disturbances are not nearly as serious as those in New York or New Mexico, but when you look at it in terms of our history, they are an indication of restlessness and turmoil we have not had before," he said.

At least two of the recent disturbances have been directly related to the court order.

In October, inmates refused to work or go into their cells at the Retrieve Unit and demanded to see the special master. Meanwhile at the Ramsey Unit, 160 inmates refused to work, complaining that the court order was not being obeyed. Several other work stoppages have been reported.

Clements said the corrections board and TDC Director W. James Estelle agree "that this is due to the special master and his staff circulating in the prisons and making themselves highly visible."

"TOO MANY PEOPLE ARE crying tears for the prisoners and not for the victims. They are not being treated badly. They have clean clothes every day and food better than most people get to eat and they are not abused.

"I'm sick and tired of hearing from the little whining devils."

Paisley challenges Britian with 12-hour strike

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Rev. Ian Paisley challenged the British government today with a 12-hour general strike and demonstrations he said were the start of a Protestant campaign of non-cooperation in Northern Ireland.

Rival Protestant political and military leaders urged the public to ignore him.

In London, meanwhile, a bomb exploded at an army base, seriously injuring two civilian women. No group claimed responsibility for the blast, but a Scotland Yard spokesman said, "We suspect terrorism." The Irish Republican Army has said it was behind a string of recent bombings in England, aimed primarily at military targets.

The London blast coincided with the Protestant protests in Northern Ireland.

Workers at three of the province's four power plants said they would join Paisley's strike. But officials of the government electricity board said senior engineers would keep the plants running.

THE POLICE SAID they issued permits for 40 major rallies and marches across the province, including rival meetings in Belfast by Paisley and his Protestant opponents.

The fiery political-religious leader said he would block traffic in the towns and cities with motorcades of trucks, cars and tractors. He also planned to parade several hundred men from his "Third Force" private army tonight at Newtownards, a Protestant center 10 miles east of Belfast.

Thirty thousand troops and police were put on full alert, and 50 mobile riot squads were standing by. Fears of trouble were heightened by the arrest Sunday of three members of the Ulster Defense Association (UDA), the biggest private Protestant army, with a vanload of explosives outside Newtownards.

Police headquarters said "elements in the Loyalist (Protestant) community are preparing to provoke" sectarian clashes.

Northern Ireland's million Protestants, who outnumber the province's Roman Catholic 2-to-1, are demanding an all-out war on the mostly Catholic Irish Republican Army because of a new wave of IRA assassinations, including the murder nine days ago of the Rev. Robert Bradford, a Protestant member of the British Parliament.

THE PROTESTANTS also oppose negotiations between Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and the Irish government. They fear she is planning to push them into unification with the republic, the goal of the IRA.

"This stoppage is going to show Mrs. Margaret Thatcher that the people of Ulster have had enough, and they cannot take any more," said Paisley. He predicted "the entire Loyalist community" would back his "day of action."

But the Official Unionist Party, the rival of his Democratic Unionist Party, the 15,000-man UDA and Archbishop John Armstrong, the primate of the Church of Ireland, the largest Protestant denomination, all opposed his tactics. Armstrong said the "day of action" would "only send more recruits to the IRA column." The UDA agreed.

Mrs. Thatcher has vowed she will not be pressured into major policy changes. Her cabinet minister for Northern Ireland Secretary, James Prior, said he would respond to the Protestant challenge with "the full force" of the government's power.

A crowd of people gather to greet Pope John Paul II as his open car travels through the hilltop town of Todi, Italy Sunday. Anti-terrorist police fanned out through the throngs of pilgrims in Italy's largest security operation ever for a papal visit as the pontiff made his first pilgrimage since he was shot May 13.

Arabian official warns Europe: Keep away

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

FEZ, Morocco (AP) — The secretary-general of the Arab League warned against European participation in the Sinai peacekeeping force as Arab foreign ministers prepared for a summit meeting Wednesday to consider Saudi Arabia's plan for an Arab-Israeli peace agreement.

Secretary-General Chedli Klibi's warning came amid reports that Britain, Italy, France and the Netherlands would announce today their willingness to join the U.S.-led force. It will replace withdrawing Israeli troops in the Sinai Peninsula under terms of the Camp David accords.

"If the countries of the European Community want to contribute to the efforts for peace in the Middle East, it is necessary for them not to participate in the multilateral force to be established in the Sinai," Klibi said in a speech Sunday to the Arab foreign ministers.

He said it was "high time" West European nations abandoned their "hesitant attitude" and gave full support to the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

The 2,500-man peacekeeping force is to patrol the eastern Sinai after the Israeli withdrawal from Egyptian territory captured during the 1973 Mideast War is completed in April.

Spokesmen for the governments of Britain and France said there would be a joint announcement on the force today but refused to say in advance what it would be. But Egyptian Foreign Minister Butros Ghali said the four nations had agreed to participate in the peacekeeping force.

The Arab summit meeting opens Wednesday, and the Saudi foreign minister, Prince Saud al-Faisal, presented Saudi Crown Prince Fahd's eight-point peace plan to the foreign ministers drawing the an agenda for their chiefs of state and government.

Col. Moammar Khadafy, the Libyan leader, has announced he would boycott the summit because he opposes the Saudi plan, and conference sources said his foreign minister, Abdelaati Obeidi, was the only delegate to speak against the plan Sunday. The sources said he did not comment on the substance of the proposal but said it should not be on the agenda because it is controversial and the chiefs of state should not have to take a stand on it.

Another hard-liner, Syrian Foreign Minister Abdelhalim Khaddam, told reporters "the moment may not yet be ripe" for full discussion of the plan.

The plan calls for a Palestinian state made up of the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip with East Jerusalem as its capital. The plan also implies recognition of Israel by saying "all states" in the Middle East have the right to live in peace.

Most moderate Arab governments and Arafat have endorsed the plan, but the most militant Palestinian groups and Israel have rejected it.

Americans split over rehiring air controllers

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are split on whether the federal government should rehire the fired air traffic controllers, according to the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll.

Forty-seven percent of all respondents said the government should rehire the controllers, 40 percent said they should not be rehired, 6 percent said some of them should be rehired and 7 percent were not sure.

The poll, of 1,602 adults telephoned Nov. 16-17 in a nationwide scientific random sampling, also said only 1 in 4 believes air travel is less safe now than it was before the controllers' strike.

Two-thirds of the respondents in the latest poll said they approve of the way President Reagan handled the strike. Even a majority of the respondents from households with at least one union member said they approved of the way he dealt with the walkout.

The Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization called an illegal strike early in August in a contract dispute with the federal government. Reagan subsequently fired 11,500 controllers — more than half the union's membership — for refusing his order to return to work.

Despite repeated pleas from union leaders to reopen negotiations and expressions of concern about safety in the nation's skies, Reagan and Federal Aviation Administration officials refused to negotiate and vowed not to rehire any of the strikers.

The union has since lost various court battles and been decertified as the collective bargaining unit for the former union members and newly trained controllers who are now working in the nation's control towers.

A majority of the respondents from households with at least one union member said the fired controllers should be rehired, while a majority of those from non-union households said they should not.

Among all respondents, 25 percent said air travel is not as safe now as it was before the strike, compared with 50 percent who said it is as safe and 25 percent who were either not sure or said it is safer now.

Two-thirds of those who think air travel is as safe said the fired controllers should not be rehired, while two-thirds of those who think it is not as safe said the controllers should be rehired.

The number of flights has been cut back, and the FAA says many flights continue to be delayed, but only 12 percent of the poll respondents said their business or vacation travel has been affected.

People who say the nation's skies are as safe favored Reagan's handling of the strike by more than 8-1, while a 56-38 majority of those who said air travel is not as safe disapproved of the president's handling of the strike.

As with all sample surveys, the results of AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,600 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations.

Khadafy plotting murder, Philadelphia paper reports

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy is plotting to assassinate the president of Niger, a nation bordering Libya believed to have huge uranium deposits, according to a newspaper report citing U.S. intelligence documents.

In a copyright story Sunday, The Philadelphia Bulletin said intelligence sources believe Khadafy added the Niger president, Seyni Kountche, to an enemies list because he has restricted uranium sales to Libya.

According to the Bulletin, the documents show a group of Niger officials involved in a plot to kill Kountche defected to Libya two months ago.

Souley has passed detailed information about Niger's defense and security systems to Niger dissidents being trained at a Libyan terrorist school near Tripoli, according to The Bulletin.

Federal intelligence agents said the school was set up and maintained by fugitive ex-CIA agents Edwin Wilson and Frank Terpil, both of whom are believed to work for Khadafy, The Bulletin said.

Khadafy needs uranium for a nuclear reactor being built in Libya, the newspaper said.

Last April, Kountche said he had sold 450 metric tons of unenriched uranium to Khadafy, some of which has been diverted to Arab nations thought to be developing nuclear arms, The Bulletin said.

Concern centers not so much on the uranimum being used in Libya, as on the imports Khadafy has sent elsewhere, the newspaper said.

Khadafy has long advocated the development of an "Islamic" nuclear bomb, The Bulletin said.

Niger produced 4,000 metric tons a year of "yellow cake" atomic reactor fuel at mines about 500 miles from the Libyan border, according to the documents.

The documents said that, although the "yellow cake" fuel could be processed to make nuclear weapons, it would be a difficult process and the explosive power of the weapons produced is unknown, the newspaper said.

Niger, a landlocked desert nation about twice the size of Texas with 4.2 million people, is the world's fourth largest uranium producer.

Kountche, 50, is a French-trained soldier who came to power in April 1974 after leading a successful coup against former president Hamani Diori.

She finds son — in prison

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Dallas woman's two-year search for the son she gave up for adoption in 1959 ended seven months ago when she found Riccardo Hernandez in a North Carolina prison.

Suzanne Raikes' elation was short-lived, as prison walls and her limited funds have kept the 21-year-old Hernandez from meeting his mother, his nearly blind father or his 105-year-old grandmother.

But Hernandez, who is serving a 16- to 25-year sentence for burglary and armed robbery, still savors the memory of their reunion by telephone.

"We had a conference call — my real father, my real mother and me, and my grandma, and my half brother, and my mother's husband — and it felt real good," Hernandez said in an interview last week at Odom Prison in Northampton County. "It was a feeling I'd never had, because I felt real whole."

Hernandez was a 19-year-old Fort Bragg, N.C., private when he and another soldier burglarized two Fayetteville homes in 1978.

Hernandez was arrested the next day, returned the loot and pleaded guilty in 1979 to two counts each of second-degree burglary, larceny and armed robbery.

Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey gave Hernandez a sentence of 16 years to life, later reduced to 16 to 25 years, which makes him eligible for parole in 1990.

Mrs. Raikes, who earns $4.65 an hour working in a Dallas cafeteria, says her search cost $15,000. Now she is waging a vigorous mail-and-telephone campaign to free her son or reduce his sentence, which she considers harsh and excessive.

"He's had a raw deal since he was born," the 45-year-old woman said. "I'm not ever going to give up trying to get him out."

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Texas, and others have written Gov. Jim Hunt in her behalf. The governor has the statutory authority to pardon an inmate or commute his sentence.

Mrs. Raikes wants to see her son but she also is determined to win an audience with Hunt. Since she can afford only one journey to North Carolina, she has delayed her trip in hope that she can meet Hunt and her son.

Mrs. Raikes was 23 when she eloped with 40-year-old Daniel Zuniga. But when she learned she was pregnant she had lost touch with her husband.

Earthquake hits Japan

TOKYO (AP) — A strong earthquake today shook Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, the national meteorological agency reported. No injuries or damage were reported.

The tremor was centered on the Pacific seabed off the city of Nemuro, on the eastern tip of Hokkaido, an agency spokesman said. Nemuro, a city of about 45,000, was hardest hit.

The quake had an intensity of four on the Japanese scale of seven, the spokesman said. A reading of four is considered powerful enough to shake houses and topple bookshelves.

Japan does not use the Richter scale, the traditional measurement of ground movement as recorded by seismographs. Instead, the Japanese scale measures a quake's intensity.

One wounded in Paris

PARIS (AP) — Shooting erupted today inside the Iranian Consulate in Paris and French police said one person was wounded.

A police spokesman said the shootout came during a quarrel between supporters and opponents of Iranian religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

There was no word on the identity or condition of the person wounded in the shooting and no other details of the incident.

Haig meets with Mexican president

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is visiting Mexico amid new protests about the Reagan administration's refusal rule out the use of military force to halt communist expansion in the Caribbean and Central America.

More than 1,000 Mexicans marched Sunday to the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City to protest the Reagan administration's anti-communist policy in Central America. The four-hour demonstration, organized by the Socialist Workers Party, focused on Haig's scheduled two-day visit to Mexico, beginning today.

The protesters, many bused in from distant provinces, marched a mile and a half from Mexico City's Alameda Park to the embassy behind big red banners that read, "Mr. Haig, you are not welcome" and "Total support for Cuba, Nicaragua and El Salvador."

On Sunday, Haig pointedly refused again to rule out the possibility that American military force might be used in Nicaragua where, he said, there has been a steady increase in the "drift toward totalitarianism."

A coalition of Mexican leftists, including a faction from the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, has called for two weeks of demonstrations starting Tuesday in sympathy with the people of Cuba, Nicaragua and El Salvador.

He was scheduled to meet with President Jose Lopez Portillo and with Foreign Secretary Jorge Castaneda. Haig also will turn over to Mexican authorities a document ratifying U.S. participation in a treaty that bans nuclear weapons from Latin America and makes the region a nuclear free zone.

Specifically, the treaty precludes the United States from testing, using, storing or deploying nuclear weapons in U.S. jurisdictions in the Caribbean. The treaty, which grew out of a conference held in Mexico in 1967, was ratified by the Senate on Nov. 13.

U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said U.S.-Mexican bilateral relations generally have not been affected by the broad disagreements over Central America.

The growing sense of alarm in Washington over the sharp move to the left in Nicaragua and alleged outside communist support for guerrillas in El Salvador is not shared by Mexican authorities.

Mexico, citing its own revolutionary past, believes the current upheaval in Central America is largely the product of historical forces and not of outside agitation. Mexico believes it is a mistake for the United States to attempt to halt this process.

In recent weeks, the Mexican press has given wide coverage to reports from Washington about possible U.S. military action in El Salvador and against Cuba and Nicaragua.

Haig, in an appearance Sunday on ABC TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," expressed concern about the "high influx of sophisticated armaments" to Nicaragua through Cuba "from the Eastern bloc, from the Soviet Union."

"We're not giving up on Nicaragua but the hours are growing rather short," he said, adding that neighboring countries recognize this "huge military structure" being created in Nicaragua is not in their interests.

But once again, he refused to outline U.S. contingency plans because to do so would be "self-defeating in the extreme." Asked specifically about a naval blockade to interdict arms flows in the region, Haig said, "I don't discount any possibility."

Addressing the same subject in on CBS's "Face the Nation," presidential counselor Edwin Meese III said the exercise of that option "would depend on the circumstances." He said it "could be a possible matter for further discussion."

Reagan continues budget battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saying the American public wants the government "back on the road of fiscal sanity," is postponing a Thanksgiving holiday in California to continue his latest budget battle with Congress.

Reagan has threatened to issue his first veto on the stopgap spending resolution that Congress agreed to late Sunday. The measure is needed to restore spending authority for most government agencies.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Sunday that Reagan was ready to order his Cabinet today to tell non-essential employees not to "come to work, cancel meetings, lock the safe, cut out the lights and leave." Eventually, 400,000 government workers could be furloughed, he said.

Reagan, who had intended to leave Sunday for California, told reporters that he would not sign the compromise spending bill passed by Congress.

Earlier, Reagan suggested that Congress continue over the Thanksgiving holidays the spending measure that expired at midnight Friday. Without such authorization most government agencies would have to shut down.

Asked if vetoing the House-Senate compromise and forcing a government shutdown wouldn't be more destructive than signing an imperfect bill, Reagan said necessary services such as Social Security would continue.

"I think the people have made it very clear that they want control of the budget, they want us to get back on the road of fiscal sanity, and I think that's far more important," he said.

Reagan's unscheduled question-and-answer session Sunday at the diplomatic entrance to the White House surprised reporters.

Asked for his thoughts about the congressional budget process, which has forced the government to operate on continuing resolutions rather than formal appropriations bills since fiscal 1981 ended Sept. 30, Reagan said:

"At the beginning of the fiscal year, you should have a budget in place in which you know what the cost for each department is going to be. This continuing resolution is a process whereby the Congress can add to the spending, and the only choice left to a president is to literally close down the government by veto, unlike vetoing a budget figure.

"It's time for us to get legitimate appropriations bills passed and to have a budget," he said.

Earlier Sunday afternoon, Reagan met with Sweden's King Carl XVI Gustaf and Queen Silvia in what was described a social visit in the White House residential quarters.

Before the president decided to delay his departure to California, the Reagan's had been planning an eight-day stay at their 688-acre ranch in California'a Santa Ynez Mountains, overlooking the Pacific Ocean.

As has become tradition with the Reagans in recent years, a family reunion was planned at the ranch on Thanksgiving Day.

Hinckley undergoes more tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., released from an Army hospital, will undergo additional medical tests, apparently to determine if he suffered any permanent brain damage when he tried to hang himself, the Justice Department says.

Hinckley, charged with attempting to assassinate President Reagan, was moved Sunday to a new cell at the nearby Fort Meade, Md., army base, said department spokesman John Russell.

Hinckley spent a week in Kimbrough Army Community Hospital on the base after trying to hang himself on Nov. 15. The Justice Department has said that Hinckley jammed the lock of his cell with cardboard when a U.S. marshal who was watching him from an adjacent room turned away to let another guard in.

The 26-year-old Hinckley has been judged competent to stand trial and assist in his own defense. But his lawyers have said they will use an insanity defense.

A determination of incompetency is separate from a verdict of innocent by reason of insanity, in which a defendant tries to prove that he was unable to appreciate the wrongfulness of his act because of a mental disease or defect.

As a result of his second suicide attempt, the U.S. Marshals Service has put added security around Hinckley's new cell, the Justice Department spokesman said.

Hinckley has been under 24-hour watch since he took an overdose of tranquilizers and aspirin substitute on May 27 while imprisoned at Butner, N.C., for psychiatric tests.

Mobile home, club house lost in fire

Separate fires Sunday and early today destroyed a club house and a mobile home.

Firemen were called to Jerry L. Emerson's mobile home on County Road 115 West, between South Midkiff Road and Cottonflat Road, shortly after midnight this morning.

When they arrived, they found the mobile home engulfed in flames. The nine firemen who responded to the blaze spent a little more than two hours and used 2,100 gallons of water bringing the fire under control.

One firemen was injured when he cut his hand while battling the fire.

Cause of that fire could not be immediately determined, but the mobile home was listed as a total loss by fire department reports.

Another major fire destroyed the new Magnatex Club House at 4901 Lancashire Sunday morning. The fire marshal's office says arson is suspected in that fire.

Nineteen firemen were called to that location at 6:39 a.m. Sunday and battled the blaze in the one-story frame structure until 10:10 a.m.

Firemen used 35,000 gallons of water to bring the fire under control, but fire department reports still listed the structure as a total loss.

Criminal activity over the weekend was relatively light and police were investigating only a few thefts this morning.

James Harrison of Route 4, Box 3, reported the theft of two tires and two wheels from a vehicle parked at 1410 W. Front St. He valued the tires and wheels at a total $430.

The theft apparently occurred between 11:30 a.m. Friday and 2:45 p.m. Sunday, police reports indicated.

Tom Saulters of 600 Liddon Ave., No. 53, reported the theft of a bicycle from his front porch. The bicycle was taken about 10 p.m. Sunday, reports indicated.

The bicycle was valued at $640.

Cold weather returns for Thanksgiving

Summer-like tempertatures have returned to Midland, but will disappear by the time it's time to turn on the oven for Thanksgiving.

Midlanders should continue to see warm afternoons with the high in the low 80s through Tuesday. It is expected to be fair through Tuesday with periods of high cloudiness, However, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it is expected to become partly cloudy and cooler by Thursday. Low tonight should cool down in the low 40s.

The record high temperature for Sunday was 81 set in 1966 which was not too much warmer than Sunday's high of 79, but the overnight low of 43 was quite a bit warmer than the nippy recorded low of 17 degrees set in 1938.

Northerly winds at 5-10 mph tonight should become southwesterly traveling 10-15 mph Tuesday.

Casey's blind trust decision raises eyebrows

By ROBERT PARRY
and
MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William J. Casey's decision not to put his multimillion-dollar stock holdings in a blind trust is raising eyebrows among members of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Casey, who has nearly unparalleled access to the government's data on international economic developments, broke the precedent of the last two CIA directors and kept control over his personal investments.

Many of the firms in which Casey and his wife own stock are involved with oil, natural gas and strategic minerals and operate in nations of deep interest to U.S. intelligence.

"This is one more example of Casey skirting the edge," said one member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, which is investigating Casey's past business practices.

CIA general counsel Stanley Sporkin said Casey asked earlier this year whether he should create a blind trust and was told Feb. 3 by CIA deputy general counsel Ernest Mayerfeld that he did not need one.

Sporkin said Casey's longtime investment adviser has bought and sold stock on Casey's behalf since the 68-year-old former Wall Street lawyer took over at CIA in January.

Sporkin refused to give details on Casey's stock transactions, but noted that the law requires incumbent officials by May 15 of each year to disclose the value, within broad ranges, of each stock transaction during the previous year.

The senator, who asked not to be identified, said he expected that Casey's recent stock dealings would become part of the Intelligence Committee's ongoing review of the CIA director's fitness.

An aide to another Intelligence Committee member said Casey's lack of a blind trust "has been a concern up here for some time."

Casey's two predecessors at the CIA — Stansfield Turner and now-Vice President George Bush — established blind trusts to avoid a possible appearance of conflict of interest.

And in this administration, others with access to closely held economic secrets — including President Reagan, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and Bush — placed their holdings in blind trusts.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, divested his stock in companies that do business with the Pentagon, but he did not create a blind trust.

According to his 1981 financial disclosure statement, Casey and his wife own stock worth at least $1.8 million, and perhaps more than $3.4 million, in 27 corporations with major foreign operations.

The trading prices of many of the companies could rise and fall with international developments. For instance, Casey owns more than $250,000 in Superior Oil Co., which deals with Abu Dhabi on oil in the Persian Gulf. Superior also has been negotiating with Thailand on the sale of natural gas and the company has an interest in a South African platinum subsidiary.

A 1965 presidential order and existing regulations prohibit federal employees from using non-public information obtained through their government work "for the purpose of furthering a private interest."

Existing government-wide regulations on ethical conduct say "an employee shall avoid any action, whether or not specifically prohibited... which might result in or create the appearance of using public office for private gain."

Shortly after becoming CIA director in 1976, Bush sold off nine stock holdings and created a blind trust for his investments.

Turner, whose investments totaled less than $350,000, said, "I knew I wasn't going to misuse any information, but the safest move for me to be sure that I didn't have an appearance of conflict was to put those holdings in a blind trust."

Turner underscored the scope of information available to the CIA director by noting that he could have avoided a blind trust by shifting his investments into stocks "with no conflict with CIA, like Quaker Oats." He immediately corrected himself to say: "Well, not Quaker Oats, because CIA estimates the Russian oat crop."

As CIA director, Casey receives information from CIA agents and analysts, as well as Air Force spy satellites and the National Security Agency's electronic eavesdropping equipment.

Three former intelligence officials, who asked not to be identified, said the NSA monitors a large volume of international communications by U.S. multinational firms, foreign corporations and foreign governments.

One of these officials said: "The CIA director will know almost before anyone else when an oil fire shuts down a major field in the Persian Gulf, whether the Chinese have to buy wheat or have a major oil find and need drilling equipment...or when a foreign government is planning to expropriate a U.S. firm."

"Few people have access to all of this," he added, "but Casey's one of half a dozen people...who have got it all."

Mayerfeld could not be reached about his recommendation that Casey did not need a blind trust, but Sporkin explained: "There's no requirement that I know of to put his holdings in a blind trust. The only reason you would do it is if there is a need and I don't see a need."

He said of Casey, "You're dealing with a very honorable person. ... He wouldn't misuse information. He just wouldn't do that."

Sporkin said Mayerfeld consulted a classified list of CIA contractors in deciding that Casey did not need a trust or divestiture but should disqualify himself in any specific matters which affect his holdings.

Though not required to do so, Casey put his holdings in a blind trust while serving as head of the Securities and Exchange Commission, undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs and head of the Export-Import Bank during the Nixon and Ford administrations.

"I think he got burned on his last blind trust... It (setting up a blind trust) is a very onerous kind of thing to do," Sporkin said.

Sporkin declined to supply a copy of Casey's current agreement with his investment adviser, whom he would not identify. But he said it does not forbid Casey from ordering stock transactions and does not prevent him from knowing what he holds — two prohibitions required in government-approved blind trusts.

J. Jackson Walter, head of the government's ethics office, reviewed Casey's holdings and said he relied on Mayerfeld's judgment that Casey did not need a blind trust.

Stockman forced to cancel fund-raising appearances

By NANCY TRAVER
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Federal budget director David Stockman was forced to cancel two fund-raising appearances because of a wrangle in Washington over government funding, but Colorado Republicans got to hear — if not see — him.

Republicans in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, weren't so lucky.

Late Sunday, President Reagan pledged to veto a Congressional emergency spending bill and summoned Stockman and other cabinet members to an meeting Monday to begin shutting down non-essential government functions.

Presidential adviser Lyn Nofziger was tabbed to appear in Stockman's place at fund-raisers in Denver and in Cedar Rapids.

But Nofziger did not show up here until 10:30 p.m., about three hours after he was scheduled to arrive, and he didn't make it to Cedar Rapids at all.

The 420 Colorado GOP stalwarts who paid $125 apiece for a dinner of roast beef and string beans almost had to settle for canned Stockman.

Faced with a cancellation and a delayed speaker, dinner organizers began looking for a taped speech by Stockman to play to the crowded banquet room in the plush Fairmont Hotel.

But Stockman spoke to the crowd via a last-minute telephone link-up.

"We just want to assure you fine folks that there's nothing to the rumor that David Stockman was called back into the woodshed," said master of ceremonies Grady Franklin Maples.

Maples was referring to Stockman's meeting with the president after an interview appeared earlier this month in the Atlantic Monthly magazine. In that interview, Stockman said Reagan's "supply-side" economic program was a disguised version of "trickle-down" economics that favor the wealthy.

Stockman's telephone speech was interrupted repeatedly by applause.

"I've been fighting one of the most obnoxious devices used by the big spenders on Capitol Hill," he said. "The big spenders like to send a budget-busting bill to the president, which leaves him faced with signing a bill that is way over budget or shutting down the government."

Stockman said some federal agencies may have to be shut down for one or two days this week and federal employees may be told to go home because of the president's refusal to approve a federal spending bill that is more than he had recommended.

Reagan vetoed the emergency funding resolution today.

Nofziger said Reagan believes in "doing things his way, not the way other presidents have done it."

Reagan does not bother himself with endless details, lengthy studies and interviews with so-called experts, according to Nofziger.

"He's not impressed by people who say the decisions of government have to be complicated," Nofziger said. "President Reagan encourages his staff to go home at 5 p.m. He feels that if something can't be done before 5 p.m., don't do it.

"He is half a disciple of Benjamin Franklin — he believes in early to bed," said Nofziger.

Book unmasks KGB agent in British MI-5

By MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A former British spy says he was told in the early 1960s of a KGB agent "at the very highest level of MI-5," the British counter-intelligence service.

The allegations in a book published Monday by Greville Wynne, a retired British intelligence agent, appeared likely to revive the debate over Sir Roger Hollis, who headed the MI-5 counter-intelligence department from 1956 to 1965. Hollis died in 1973.

Though he does not mention Hollis by name, Wynne says he would not be surprised if the department's "acting director at that time" — the early 1960s — was secretly working for Moscow.

Last March, after British journalist Chapman Pincher charged that Hollis may have been spying for the Soviet Union, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher appointed a special committee to investigate the spy agencies. The results of the probe were not disclosed.

But Mrs. Thatcher told Parliament on March 26 that an earlier investigation of "certain leads that suggested" Hollis was a Soviet spy had led British intelligence chiefs to conclude "he had not been an agent of the Russian intelligence service."

Although the probe after Hollis' retirement "did not conclusively prove his innocence," Mrs. Thatcher said, "in our law the burden of proof is placed upon those who seek to establish guilt," and this had not been done.

Wynne, in his book "The Man From Odessa," says a top Soviet agent who passed secrets to the West, Col. Oleg Penkovsky, told him in the early 1960s that the Soviets had "placed one of their agents at the very highest level of MI-5, so they must have no knowledge of who I am and what I am doing."

Wynne was imprisoned by the Soviets along with Penkovsky in 1965 when the latter was unmasked. He was eventually exchanged for a captured Soviet spy, Gordon Lonsdale. Penkovsky died in prison, according to Wynne.

Reporters barred from locker room

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A lawsuit by the Los Angeles Herald Examiner to allow a woman sports columnist into the Rams' locker room has led to orders from a judge barring all reporters from the football team's dressing room.

U.S. District Judge Robert M. Takasugi issued a temporary order that men and women reporters were to have equal access to the National Football League team for interviews after Sunday's contest between the Los Angeles Rams and the San Francisco 49ers — but in a separate interview room.

Just before Takasugi's order Saturday, the Rams' attorney, Terry Christensen, announced in court that the team had just instituted a "change in policy" barring all reporters from the locker room. Christensen told Herald Examiner attorneys and Takasugi that the Rams would set up a separate interview room and bring players in at the reporters' requests. The judge concurred with the proposed solution.

The temporary order was in response to the suit filed by the newspaper Friday to get columnist Diane K. Shah into the locker room for post-game interviews.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Sex not cervical cancer cause

Dear Dr. Solomon: There is a woman I know — and I don't want to say what the relationship is — who has been found to have cervical cancer. Isn't this caused by women having with a lot of different guys? — Joe, N.Y.

Dear Joe: I hope you read this very carefully, because I have the feeling that your question bears out the statement that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing.

First, cervical cancer does occur more often in women who began to have sexual relations at an early age, and who have had a number of different sexual partners. But to say that all women with cervical cancer have been promiscuous is just not so — and, I might add, not very smart.

A patient with cervical cancer has enough to worry about without being accused of behavior that is based on statistics, and which might or might not apply to her.

Unions trying different style recruits

NEW YORK — The autoworkers union is going after Harvard and Yale workers. The federal employees union is going after workers scared of budget cuts. A growing number of unions are recognizing women as a new frontier for membership.

And everyone has an eye on the booming Sun Belt market — but no one has a surefire, proven method to combat the sophisticated anti-union barriers there.

It is a time of unparalleled setbacks for organized labor, both politically and economically. But many unions are moving swiftly to use modern communications, polling and fund-raising techniques to go after new recruits.

The United Autoworkers Union, in worsening straits as the auto industry slides into an unparalleled depression, has taken inside staff members and converted them into organizers — and on new turf, at that, such as college campuses that include Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Columbia and Western Michigan.

Its goal: the many clerical, technical and semi-professional workers who are the mainstays of most universities, such as those at the Harvard Medical School where the UAW narrowly lost an election last spring but may try again.

Increasingly, unions are going after women workers. The operating engineers, for instance, are stepping up recruitment of women apprentices and now have 6 percent women in those slots.

Other unions, especially the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, are pioneering in pay equity lawsuits challenging whether women are getting comparable pay with positions requiring equivalent skills or education.

And then there is the Houston experiment: more than 30 unions joining ranks and funds to try and organize the millions of industrial and white collar workers in one of the nation's most booming labor markets.

This will be a years-long effort, ranging from service employee unions trying to expand their tiny toehold in the many hospitals around Houston to steelworkers and ironworkers trying to expand into the huge petroleum-related industries.

Our impatient society

Ronald Reagan, who still shares a wide base of support among Americans 10 months into his first year as the nation's chief executive, is learning as other presidents have in the past, that you can't please all of the people all of the time.

The president's job rating, as measured in a recent Associated Press-NBC News poll, stood at 46 percent. In other words, 46 percent of the respondents to a nationwide random sampling said Reagan is doing either a good or excellent job guiding the nation.

Reagan's job rating is down, the pollsters say, primarily because the economy is sloshing around in what is being termed by administration officials as an "average" recession. Last month Reagan drew a 51 percent "good or excellent" rating and in April he stood at a high of 66 percent.

That's the way it has gone for virtually all president's in recent years. Their "honeymoon" with the Congress and the American public comes to an end and we all begin to put in our two cents' worth about the kind of job they're doing.

That's not a particularly bad system. On the contrary, it's a healthy system, within limits. As human beings, we are inclined to make tough decisions — like bringing the United States economy back under control — which we automatically reverse our positions on when we become part of the "sacrifice." A few months back everyone was clamoring for action on the economy because the importance of that course was clear to us.

But now reality is settling home. The long, difficult haul back to economic stability won't be painless. It's just that a lot of Americans who were screaming for economic action six months ago are now taking account of what they were really asking for and realizing they, too, may get pinched.

The biggest problem — possibly — is that this push-button world we live in, while convenient and so automatic, has conditioned us to expect instant results. Except, in some cases, results do not come about instantaneously. Like correcting an economic problem that is the result of years of deficit spending and now has virtually reached the point of self-perpetuation.

Mr. Reagan's dropping job performance rating isn't as much an indication he is failing to follow the course we mandated a few months back as it is an extension of our impatience.

Iran's tarnished image

The latest news from Teheran is that the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is worried about his country's image in other lands. He seems to have discovered that the ruthlessness with which he has conducted his revolution has not been universally greeted with cheers throughout the world.

Teheran radio reported the ayatollah cried on the shoulder of his minister of guidance, Abdolmajid Moadikhah. He complained that people in many nations call Iranians "barbarians" and don't understand how Islam leads its believers down the paths of righteousness.

We do not know what kind of guidance Khomeini got from his minister when he worried about his image, but the first response that comes to mind is:

It's about time.

Khomeini should have started worrying about Iran's image when those "students" imprisoned American embassy employees and kept them locked up for months.

Or Khomeini should have started worrying about his image when his gunmen started firing bullets into the bodies of political opponents.

If the ayatollah's concern about his country's image were more serious, he would not have presided over a regime that has inflicted economic chaos on his people.

Something should be done about Iran's image all right, but the Ayatollah Khomeini, who has dragged Iran's reputation through the mud, is hardly the man to do it.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

I have been sitting on this story all year long: The Democrats, desperate for a way to cut their losses, hired a retired CIA agent to sneak truth serum into David Stockman's coffee.

●

Stockman, usually perceived as a robot-like budget slasher, would unknowingly drink the serum and cry out, "What's going on with all of these numbers?"

●

David then asked his bosses, "Hey, what's going on with all of these numbers?" His main boss, the charming one, flashed the old crinkly smile and said, "Never mind the numbers, David, keep cutting."

●

"Very well, David. There was a Trojan horse but we put it out in the stable with Al Haig's gorrilla."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

RFE's Munich staff 'awash in booze'

WASHINGTON — During the past year, I have reported that Radio Free Europe-Radio Liberty, the U.S. government's Munich-based network that broadcasts straight news to the propaganda-drenched people of Eastern Europe, has been spending money like a drunken sailor and making incredible blunders — like beaming the wrong programs to the wrong countries in the wrong language.

Jack Anderson

Now I think I may have discovered at least part of the reason for this rampant inefficiency: The radio stations' Munich headquarters is awash in beer, wine and hard liquor. The employees have apparently decided to make the city's famous Oktoberfest a year-round affair.

"Parties are being conducted constantly," according to one high-level memo. It lists one startling example: "Beer parties are being conducted in the engineering maintenance workshop about two times per month, usually on Thursdays, starting at 12 noon, during which one or two barrels of beer are consumed by technicians, laborers, engineering management representatives, as well as management employees. Whenever the available number of beer barrels happens to be insufficient, additional amounts of beer are picked up from the canteen by the case in bottles to supplement the shortage."

There's little chance that the building's canteen will run dry. An eyes-only memo seen by my associate Indy Badhwar discloses that RFE-RL has a 13-year contract with a local brewery "which guarantees a consumption of beer in the canteen of 35,000 liters per year." That's about 100,000 bottles.

Furthermore, according to the memo, "Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty money must be used to pay for any amount of beer less than that amount consumed." So the American taxpayers lose either way: If the radio station employees don't swill enough beer, Uncle Sam must make good on the brewery contract; and if they do ...

There is "an inherent problem of alcohol abuse" in the organization, a senior manager pointed out in another memo. The subordinate to whom the memo was addressed had this to say in defense:

"I am not surprised that such a problem exists, since hard liquor, wine and beer are sold in the canteen from 0700 hours in the morning until 2100 hours or later in the evening. At the same time, hard liquor, wine and beer are available in the building in coin-vending machines 24 hours per day seven days per week."

Members of the Washington-based Board for International Broadcasting, which is responsible for overseeing the two stations, have been at a loss to explain the embarrassing bloopers that mar the broadcasts to the Soviet Union and its satellites. I've reported some of the more egregious howlers in past columns. They would be funny if RFE-RL's mission were not so important.

A senior staff member of the board, who has seen the memos mentioned above, scribbled this terse note to his colleagues: "I have a feeling ... that we may be getting closer to the real reason for RFE-RL studio inefficiency."

NOBODY LISTENED: The disastrous events in Iran over the last three years demonstrated a serious breakdown in U.S. intelligence. The fault was not in our intelligence agencies' underlings, but in the superstars of foreign policy in Washington, who heard only what they wanted to hear and ignored any reports that suggested their preconceptions might be wrong.

I know this is the case, because for two years before the shah of Iran was unceremoniously given the heave-ho, I was reporting that the Peacock Throne was wobbly. My sources were intelligence reports from the field — the same reports that were studiously shrugged off by the Kissingers and the Brzezinskis.

Some of these suppressed intelligence reports can now be quoted verbatim. In 1975, for example, the Air Force Office of Special Investigations prepared an eerily accurate report titled "Terrorist Movements in Iran." It not only identified the Ayatollah Khomeini as a substantial threat to the shah — at a time when the CIA and the State Department gave no indication they had even heard of the man — but warned that American personnel in Iran were very likely to be targets of the anti-shah forces' wrath.

Khomeini "has come to be a symbol of resistance for Iranian political dissidents of widely varying political persuasions," the Air Force analysts reported, adding that he was getting financial as well as political support from middle- and lower-class Iranians.

The report explained why Americans in Iran would be tempting victims for terrorists: The large number of Americans gave them high visibility; their concentration in a few locations made the terrorists' job easier. And "an attack on them will garner national and international publicity."

The Air Force report was filed and forgotten.

AIR CONTROLLERS: Congressional insiders say the Reagan administration may be ready to soften its hard line against air traffic controllers who went out on strike. The first class of hastily trained recruits has reportedly been performing poorly, so the administration recognizes that it may have to rehire some of the strikers who were fired.

There are two obstacles, though: The administration won't hire any strikers as long as they continue to picket outside the airports. The second problem is the controllers who didn't go out on strike; they're worried about hostility from strikers who are rehired.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Nov. 23, the 327th day of 1981. There are 38 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 23, 1971, communist China took a seat as a permanent member of the United Nations Security Council.

On this date:

In 1943, U.S. forces defeated the Japanese at the Pacific battle of Tarawa in World War II.

In 1967, anti-American demonstrations were held in Ankara, Turkey, as a U.S. envoy arrived to mediate the dispute between Turkey and Greece over Cyprus.

In 1972, Bolivia's right-wing government declared a state of siege, saying there was a conspiracy to overthrow it.

In 1977, Israel paraded tanks on its side of the Lebanese border as a warning to Syrian troops and Palestinian guerrillas to stay away from the frontier.

And in 1979, a planeload of 350 Americans left Pakistan for home on State Department orders following a mob attack on the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad.

Five years ago: French writer and art historian Andre Malraux died at age 75.

One year ago: The search for bodies continued in Las Vegas, Nev. in the aftermath of a fire at the MGM Grand hotel-casino that claimed more than 80 lives.

Today's birthdays: Former Assistant Secretary of State Roger Hilsman is 62.

CHARLEY REESE

Press needs to focus on 'the substance'

The press does a disservice to the public by reporting politics as a sporting event. We do it, I suppose, because it is the easiest way of covering political events.

Charley Reese

Political figures are judged on a won-loss basis, like baseball pitchers. The first win-or-lose game is the election. The winner is successful; the loser is a failure.

While this is literally true, it is a measure only of political campaign skills. Quite frequently, as is evident from the mess this country is in, bad people are good campaigners.

What the outcome of an election tells you is only that one team conducted a more successful campaign than the other team. It says nothing about the intelligence, philosophy and integrity of either candidate.

In the case of presidents, the national press judges them on the basis of whether they win or lose political fights. President Carter was viewed as a failure because he did not often persuade the Congress to adopt his programs. President Reagan is being judged a success because he has been able to persuade Congress to go along on three major requests — (the tax cut, the budget cuts, and the AWACS sale).

Here again this is focusing on the superficial level. A president might be tremendously successful in persuading Congress to adopt a number of bad measures. Lyndon Johnson's Tonkin Gulf Resolution and his Great Society come to mind as do Richard Nixon's wage and price controls.

Where we do the public a disservice is in putting such a heavy emphasis on the contest aspect of a proposal that the substance of the proposal is often obscured. Furthermore there is such an interaction between press and politicians that politicians can, as President Reagan has just done — and as others have done before him — argue that a measure must be approved, not on its merits, but on the basis of avoiding a loss.

President Reagan and President Carter acted in an identical manner on the AWACS and the Panama Canal Treaty. Both decided to do something, agreed to do it, and then told the Senate that it must ratify what they had already decided to do to avoid embarrassing the president.

I know a lot of husbands who wish their wives were as compliant and as gullible as the U.S. Senate.

Incidentally, President Reagan was guilty of a bit of hypocrisy in using this argument for the AWACS sale. He himself had urged the Senate not to ratify the Panama Canal Treaty and the SALT II Treaty. Apparently he was not concerned then about a president's ability to conduct foreign policy being undermined by a Senate defeat.

How this focusing on the won-loss aspect of politics distorts public perception is evident in the president's economic program. The average guy believes President Reagan reduced the federal budget. Actually, the federal budget is larger this year than last year. The average guy thinks he will be paying less taxes this year when in fact he will be paying more.

What President Reagan did was cut the rate of spending and the rate of tax increases. That's why the deficit is now projected at $80 billion.

Ideally, we ought to be focusing on the substance of issues so the public would be debating issues and not thinking in terms of the president's won-loss record. What is important is the rightness or wrongness of a policy. Alas, it is easier to report head counts than to summarize arguments; it is easier to describe a process than to report what the process is about to do.

Politics is not a game; it is the essence of self-government and quite frequently a matter of life and death.

BIBLE VERSE

He that hath an ear, let him hear what the spirit saith to the churches. To him that overcometh, to him will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the Paradise of God. Rev. 2:7

INSIDE REPORT:

If Camp David process fails, Saudis might embrace Soviets

CAIRO, Egypt — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak foresees "rejoicing" in Moscow and the "rejectionist" Arab camp if the long-stalled Egyptian-Israeli West Bank autonomy talks fail.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Articulate and plain-spoken, the heir of Anwar Sadat told us in an exclusive interview: "Failure of the autonomy talks will create more suspicion of America in the whole Arab world but it will bring rejoicing in the Soviet Union and the rejectionist camp (which opposes any deal with Israel). The Russians twice told President Sadat that with America, you will never succeed but with the Soviets you will."

If a Palestinian settlement cannot be reached within the Camp David framework, Mubarak said, "The Arab world will see that the Soviets are correct. We must succeed." Mubarak received us in his presidential house, called Aruba Palace, built 50 years ago by an Egyptian made rich as King Farouk's jeweler. If he is having difficulty establishing himself as the third modern pharoah in post-Farouk Egypt, it does not show. His chief concern today is to make absolutely certain that nothing interferes with the final withdrawal of Israel from the Sinai Peninsula by next April 25. That explains his monotonous refrain that Egypt remains "totally committed" to the Camp David peace process. He means it.

Mubarak's early weeks in office show continuity with Sadat's sensational 11-year rule of the country that has become America's most powerful friend in the Arab world. His first task — internal security following Sadat's assassination — has gone better than some of his own associates expected. Despite dire predictions in Washington, Israel and elsewhere of internal upheaval, Mubarak is believed to have a solid grip on his police, intelligence and armed forces, all essential to domestic order.

The new president's second, more troubling problem is the economy. Runaway food subsidies, combined with reduced income from oil sales, inflation and lack of money for capital investment, are a major threat. The subsidies must be curtailed early next year. No economist, Mubarak has assembled the country's top financial and economic brains and opened the door to a public debate on how to handle the explosive subsidy question. Public debates have not always been welcomed in previous governments.

A third immediate problem for Mubarak is the purely political one of identification: to take some dramatic action, possibly in the economic field, that will give his presidency an identity of its own after the celebrated years of Anwar Sadat.

Mubarak's accession looks like roses compared to the thorns that hemmed in Sadat in 1970. Gamal Abdel Nasser bequeathed him 17,000 Soviet military advisers, a government infiltrated by pro-Soviet activists plotting a coup d'etat and a reeling, socialized economy. Worst of all, the then-great enemy, Israel, held the Sinai and the eastern bank of the blocked Suez Canal.

Both Mubarak and the high command he inherited from Sadat know that one key to his future — and the larger future of the Middle East — is the vital Egyptian-American connection which was created by Sadat. That will greatly depend on the perception of Mubarak by the American public. There is much private talk here at the top about the president's crucial first trip to the U.S., tentatively set for February, and whether he will parade the same skill and finesse before Congress and on television that gave Sadat unprecedented popularity as a foreign — and an Arab — leader.

But for the immediate future Mubarak's mind is single-tracked: Permit nothing that Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin could use as a pretext to delay the April 25 last-stage Sinai withdrawal. "We are not going to slip into such a mistake," Mubarak told us. His decision to retain all Sadat's high-level military, foreign and political advisers is directly hinged to denying Israel the slightest pretext of backing out of its treaty commitment.

After April 25, Mubarak will move Egypt closer to the alienated Arab world and strike harder for American-Egyptian success in persuading Israel to grant full autonomy to the Palestinians. Mubarak wants no rejoicing in Moscow.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, November 24, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Those celebrating this birthday with you include former New York Mayor John V. Lindsay, columnist William F. Buckley Jr. and actor Howard Duff (of TV's hit series "Flamingo Road"). For you, the coming year will hold much promise and great satisfaction. Your keen sense of justice sends you to the rescue of someone who will later help you financially. Romance is happy and filled with many pleasant surprises. You are happiest in the company of those who share your considerable intellectual gifts. If self-employed, be sure to have a "rainy day" fund. You are likely to receive occasional payments from an unusual source.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Postpone making a career or financial decision. Plan to impart a new sense of direction to the young minds under your supervision. If married, do nothing to arouse mate's jealousy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Financial involvement with friends can be tricky. Inventive ideas impress influential people. Respect mate or partner's wishes even if they seem a trifle unusual.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The emphasis today is on protecting your security. Use tact when trying to make points with difficult people. Behind-the-scenes meetings can be very helpful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Personal affairs take up more of your time than you anticipated. Seek mate's cooperation to resolve an emergency situation. Perseverance can pay big dividends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be careful not to offend influential people. Stick to routine tasks and follow standard procedures. Arguments are likely to develop regarding money matters.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The business day is busy and productive. Meditation will extricate you from a delicate situation. Delegate more routine chores. Those in authority have confidence in your abilities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Partnerships are now on a smoother course. New financial gains are possible. Do not sink your funds into speculative ventures. Loved ones will surprise you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): At work, you find that your ideas are appreciated by those in authority. Travel may be part of your formula for success. A change of lifestyle could bring greater self-confidence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A quiet atmosphere at place of employment gives you an opportunity to tackle a project requiring intense concentration. Guard against mistakes in arithmetic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Settlement of a legal matter could affect your finances in a positive way. You may get a great deal of satisfaction out of a confrontation today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Travel plans may have to be put on hold because of a business or family emergency. Accept the inevitable with good grace. You can still have a fun weekend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your discriminating taste serves you well when choosing your wardrobe. You may have to watch your step when meeting with a customer or creditor.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ3 ♡A8762 ◇Q107 ♣J
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—The hand is a trifle too strong for a jump raise to three spades, but not good enough and the wrong texture for a jump shift. We suggest that you temporize with a bid of two hearts, then support spades vigorously at your next turn. If you jump raised instead, you wouldn't know what to do should partner simply bid four spades.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ732 ♡74 ◇K84 ♣A95
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—Not an easy hand to bid. It is a whit too weak for a jump raise, but far too strong for a simple raise or a leap to four spades. The solution is a temporizing bid of two clubs, to be followed by a spade raise on the next round.

Q.3—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ87542 ♡A ◇QJ98
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—While we do not usually like to make a jump shift with a void in partner's suit, this hand is the exception. Your spade suit is self-sustaining, and you can play in the suit even if partner is void. The important thing is to let partner know immediately that you are interested in slam—if you don't, you might never be able to catch up. Bid two spades.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K105 ♡83 ◇J72 ♣Q10952
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner must have a pretty good hand to raise you to the three-level in a non-competitive auction when you might have a bust. In fact, you have a fairly good five-card suit and a solid stopper in the enemy suit. Bid three no trump. If partner's raise was based on distribution more than high cards, he can always run to four clubs.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q10962 ♡K873 ◇853 ♣8
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—The way we play Stayman, your hand is not strong enough to employ the convention, for it is forcing to two no trump or three of a major. Therefore, we would simply bid two spades. However, if you play the non-forcing variation of Stayman, by all means bid two clubs and then, if partner denies a major by bidding two diamonds, sign off in two spades. Naturally, you intend passing two hearts or two spades.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ ♡J7 ◇AK105 ♣KQ76
Partner opens the bidding with four hearts. What action do you take?
A.—You have a very fine hand, but it is not enough for slam. You must be off either two aces or an ace and a trump trick. If partner had something like seven hearts headed by the A-K-Q and an outside ace, he would have opened the auction with one heart rather than a preemptive bid of four hearts.

Services will be at 3 p.m. Tuesday in the New Hope Baptist Church with the Rev. David Henderson officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

Hawkins was born April 5, 1920, in Calvert and had lived in Midland since 1961. He was a veteran of World War II and worked at Parkview Hospital. He was married to Mae Elizza Norman in 1943 in Calvert.

Survivors include his wife of Midland; a daughter, Lissie Jewel Edwards of Midland; two sons, Freddie Lee Hawkins and Jimmie Lee Hawkins, both of Big Spring; three sisters, Annie Pearl Johnson of Midland, Beatrice Perkins of Denison and Lee Anner Poke of Calvert; a brother, Garfield Hawkins Calvert; a foster son, Bruce Brown; and three grandchildren.

Charles McHugh

ELECTRA — Services for Charles H. McHugh, 72, of Temple and formerly of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Totten and Son Funeral Home chapel here. Burial will be in Beaver Creek Cemetery.

He died Sunday in a Temple hospital after an illness.

McHugh was born March 31, 1909, in Electra. He was married Oct. 20, 1926, to Nancy Stone in Davidson, Okla. McHugh was a retired production superintendent for an oil company. He had lived 22 years in Midland and worked for Great Western Drilling Co. He was a member of B.O.E. Lodge in Temple.

Survivors include his wife, Nancy McHugh; a daughter, Bobbie McInterff of Temple; a brother, Bill McHugh of Portland, Ore.; four grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Ray D. Grissett

Ray D. Grissett, 15, of Greenwood, died early Saturday in a Midland hospital.

Services were to be at 2 p.m. today in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Chris Osborne, pastor of Wilshire Park Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Grissett was born Oct. 29, 1966, in Midland. He had lived in Houston for three years before moving to Crane. He returned to the Midland area three months ago. He was a member of the Tool Baptist Church of Tool, Texas.

Survivors include his father, Jay T. Grissett of Midland; his mother, Betty Gaines of Houston; his stepmother, Winona Grissett of Crane; three brothers, Jay T. Grissett Jr. of Midland, R.H. Fincher of North Fork, Va., and Timmy Gaines of Houston; three sisters, Sue White of Midland and Cindy Henthorn and Cathy Meek, both of Houston; grandparents, Dessie Dodds of Daisetta, Mable Mae Grissett of Midland and Harvey Dodds of Valient, Okla.; and several aunts and uncles.

Pallbearers were to be Earl Davis, Clifford Davis, Joe Davis, Boyd Grissett, Dwayne Tarpley and Rudy Carrasco.

Lawyers take to the pulpit

By ED McHALE
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The defense lawyer for two priests whose participation in the Cuban refugee boatlift led to convictions of trading with the enemy took the pulpit of their church Sunday to criticize the government's prosecutors.

Attorney Julian Murray delivered the sermon for morning Mass at Grace Episcopal Church, calling the priests' prosecution "an evil, mean and ignoble act."

It was the first service since the Revs. Joe Doss and Leopold Frade were convicted in U.S. District Court Friday of illegally buying food, fuel and supplies in Cuba before ferrying a load of refugees to Key West aboard a boat named God's Mercy.

"I'm sure most of you rejoice in what they (priests) did," Murray told 320 members of the congregation, twice the usual turnout.

About 40 percent of the church's 550 members are Hispanic, Doss said. The priests testified they launched their voyage last year after many parishioners expressed concern for relatives in Cuba.

Murray took the pulpit after Doss read from the Bible, citing how Jesus fed the hungry and clothed the naked.

Doss did not mention the trial, but Murray, a member of the church, dwelled on it.

"We have seen what has happened to those who have welcomed strangers, fed the hungry and clothed the naked," he said.

"The government said it was just doing its job," said Murray, an assistant U.S. attorney from 1968-72. "How much evil in the world has been excused by the words 'just doing my job?'

Findlay, Ohio, residents display their feelings on recent takeover bids for the Marathon Oil Co. Mobil Oil has offered to buy Marathon for $5.1 billion or more, while U.S. Steel upped the bid to $6.3 billion.

Federal employees will go on furlough

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stripped of their spending authority, dispensers of food stamps, regulators of the television industry and curators of the National Gallery of Art are preparing to close down some operations of the federal government.

President Reagan's running battle with Congress over federal spending is close to bringing about the ultimate government cutback — by late Tuesday, if no acceptable spending measure makes it to the president's desk, it is expected that 400,000 of the 2.9 million federal workers will be told to stay home.

On orders of the White House Office of Management and Budget, however, essential services would not be disrupted.

That means soldiers would continue to serve, tax collectors would still go after tax delinquents and the Border Patrol would continue watching for illegal aliens and contraband.

Among those required to work despite the lack of congressional spending authority would be members of the military services, Internal Revenue Service officials, doctors and nurses, prison guards, Treasury Department officials charged with certain vital financial services, and most of the top officials of government, including the president.

None would be paid, and it was unclear how long they could be required to work without pay.

"No money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law."

In fights over congressional appropriations bills before 1979, government agencies continued to function for short periods even though their legal authority to function had run out.

But during a battle over financing the Federal Trade Commission, then-Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti ruled that the only work which can be done was for the orderly shut down of the agency.

Findlay and Marathon Oil Co. are inseparable

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — When executives of Marathon Oil leave the company's block-long world headquarters building here, they sport baseball caps bearing the company's insignia — a bold red M.

Across the street, the local Elks Club is ablaze with Marathon signs and red ribbons. More ribbons are found along nearly every street of this northwestern Ohio city, now the battleground of a corporate fight between two of the nation's industrial giants — Mobil Corp. and U.S. Steel.

Last month, Mobil, the nation's second-largest oil company, announced it was willing to spend $5 billion to take over Marathon, Findlay's biggest employer and taxpayer.

But it may have a battle from Findlay's 36,000 residents, especially Marathon's 2,400 workers, who fear such a merger would mean moving the oil company out of town.

Marathon, the nation's 17th-largest oil company, means a lot to Findlay, where the local college football team is called the Oilers. The company and the town have been together for 94 years.

"The two are inseparable," says W. Bentley Burr, who worked for Marathon for 38 years as an economist and personnel officer before he was elected mayor.

The takeover battle was joined Thursday by U.S. Steel which said it was willing to spend as much as $6.8 billion in an effort to top Mobil's bid, and, according to Marathon President Harold Hoopman, keep the company's local operations "intact."

"The value of Marathon to this community lies in more than just dollars. How do you calculate the value of the leadership Marathon employees have given the town, to civic organizations, the contributions to the quality of life?" Burr asked.

"Because of Marathon, we haven't had the unemployment and economic problems other areas of the state have had," the mayor said.

"If Marathon left, it would mean a major loss to this city. Essential services would have to be cut," he said. "We would lose the income tax from a $54 million payroll, plus the corporate tax that Marathon pays."

After the steel company's bid was announced and accepted by Marathon, Burr sent a congratulatory telegram to U.S. Steel President David Roderick, in Pittsburgh. He then placed a sign that flashes "Welcome U.S. Steel," in front of City Hall.

"At least we think this is a company that isn't going to turn Marathon's headquarters into a parking lot," said Ward Abbey, a local stockbroker.

"Now, that's not to say that Mobil is going to roll over and play dead," he said. "It wouldn't shock me to see Mobil make a counter offer because it's an aggressive firm."

Mobil officials said they were looking at the U.S. Steel bid and would have no comment until they studied the offer. Mobil lawyers argued Friday in federal court in Cleveland that its acquistion of Marathon would not violate antitrust laws by reducing competition in the oil industry.

Ted Bernhardt, manager of a Cooper Tire Co. office near the oil company's headquarters building, said life here would be shattered if Marathon pulled out.

"In any community of this size, losing a major employer would really be a blow," he said. "That's why the whole town's behind Marathon — to keep it independent and keep it here."

Some 4,000 people turned out Nov. 11 for a five-block parade of support down Main Street from Marathon headquarters to Central Junior High. Participants, wearing "We Love Marathon Buttons" and the popular red caps, paraded to a tune appropriately titled, "We Believe in Marathon."

Business analysts say a major reason Mobil wants Marathon is the company's huge reserves of oil off the Gulf Coast, in the North Sea and the Middle East.

Both city and oil company were born during the Midwest's oil and gas boom of the 1880s, with Marathon being created when the Standard Oil trust was broken up in 1911.

"Those were boom times and Findlay was a boom town for a while," Burr said. "But then economic times settled down. Marathon began its pattern of quiet but consistent growth — and Findlay followed the pattern."

"There's still some uncertainty," says 30-year-old Tom Robinson, who recently joined Marathon. "But the attitude seems to be much better. Everybody expects Mobil to make a counter offer, but the enthusiasm seems to be for the U.S. Steel proposal."

From various sources come these bits of information of interest to homeowners:

Housing starts are running at an annual rate of slightly more than 900,000 units, which is far below the estimated figure of 2 million starts needed to meet demand. It probably will be a long time before starts get anywhere near that figure, but Rollin Barnard, president of the U. S. League of Savings Associations, thinks the starts may range between 1.2 million and 1.3 million during 1982.

Some installations now under way on the east and west coasts utilize a hollow concrete floor-storage and distribution solar system. Either through a greenhouse, sun space or other air or roof collector, warm air is collected during the day and passed through air floor vents for release to all areas. In warm weather, cooling air is collected at night for release through the system the following day. Engineers of the company which makes the system say that, with sufficient solar collection, the hollow concrete floor-storage capacity can provide between 75 percent to 90 percent of the heat.

A group of silicon-based building materials said to offer more flame resistance than asbestos and greater insulation properties than plyurethane was an invention of three scientists at the Catholic University of America's Vitreous State Laboratory. The materials were tested at a so-called torch demonstration and found to be free of the health risks associated with other hydrocarbon-based building materials and to withstand flames up to 1600 degrees Fahrenheit before beginning to melt slowly. They are expected to have a wide range of uses for roofing, siding and insulation.

DEAR ABBY

Woman wants some Christmas rest

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: How do you go about putting a stop to exchanging Christmas gifts with people you hardly ever see? I don't mean relatives, I mean out-of-towners who used to be neighbors and whose children were friendly with our children (all grown now), and folks we are no longer close to.

Shopping, wrapping and mailing Christmas presents have gotten to be a real chore, and I am not as young as I used to be. It's also expensive. I would like to get off a lot of people's lists and take them off mine, too. I'm sure they feel the same way about it, but don't know how to get off OURS.

So how do I get off this merry-go-round, Abby? I would prefer to send Christmas cards to a number of people who are still on my Christmas gift list. Thanks from ... CUTTING CORNERS IN CHICAGO

DEAR CHICAGO: Early in December write a note to those you'd like to take off your gift list and put on your card list, saying you are "thankful" for friends with whom you can be perfectly frank. Explain that this year, along with trimming your Christmas tree, you're trimming your gift list and sending cards instead. I'll wager they'll appreciate your practical approach and will cheerfully reciprocate.

DEAR ABBY: My cousin recently lost her baby daughter. The baby died a few hours after she was born.

It's been only three weeks, and already three women have asked me whether my cousin intends to return the baby gifts she received at her baby shower!

I find it hard to believe anyone could be so small as to be concerned about whether her baby gift will be returned or not.

What do I tell these women? I certainly do not want to approach my cousin with such pettiness. She's having a hard enough time as it is. — CAN'T BELIEVE IT

DEAR CAN'T: I suggest that you tell these petty, insensitive women that you wouldn't consider approaching your cousin with such a painful question.

FOOTPRINTS IN THE SAND

One night a man had a dream. He dreamed he was walking along the beach with the Lord. Across the sky flashed scenes from his life. For each scene, he noticed two sets of footprints in the sand: one belonging to him, and the other to the Lord.

When the last scene flashed before him, he looked back at the footprints and noticed that many times along the path there was only one set of footprints in the sand. He also noticed that this happened during the lowest and saddest times in his life.

This really bothered him, so he questioned the Lord. "Lord, you said that once I decided to follow you, you would walk with me all the way, but I noticed that during the most troublesome times of my life, there was only one set of footprints. I don't understand why, when I needed you the most, you deserted me."

The Lord replied, "My precious, precious child, I love you and would never leave you. During your times of trial and suffering, when you see only one set of footprints, it was then that I carried you." — AUTHOR UNKNOWN (submitted by T.O. Runsvold, Sioux City, Iowa)

Trained for safety.

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — More than 40 percent of the motorcyclists polled in a national survey of rider-education course graduates believe many accidents are caused by lack of rider training.

Results of the survey by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation indicate another 31 percent of riders think mishaps are more often caused by rider carelessness. Most respondents believe riders must be trained in defensive riding and accident-avoidance techniques to overcome problems caused by unmindful automobile drivers.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Turkey-buying tips

DEAR FOLKS:

Today, let's talk turkey! Since the big day is just around the corner, you probably will soon be heading for the supermarket to purchase that big bird.

You may have some preconceived notions that a turkey is a turkey but, as that popular phrase suggests, they "have come a long way," especially since Grandma's day. So, here are a few tips to consider before making your selection.

Grades are important. Most turkeys in the stores are Grade A, but that doesn't mean other grades are not as edible should you find them on sale. The USDA gives a Grade A rating to a turkey based on appearance, such as the absence of bruises and fat under the skin, the shape of the breast, and the proportion of meat to bone. But, as good as these ratings are, they won't tell you if the turkey is tender or juicy.

Sometimes a Grade B bird is just as juicy and tender. the only thing wrong with it may be a broken wing, etc. If this defect makes no difference to you, it could be a much better buy.

If you are in doubt as to whether or not to buy a self-basting turkey, consider this: You are paying the same price per pound for the basting ingredients injected under the skin during processing as you are for the meat itself.

Not only that but saturated fats are sometimes used so, if you are trying to watch your fat consumption or mind your diet by eating low-fat turkey meat, you are more or less defeating your purpose. What you should look for is a turkey which is not self-basting as its calorie content will be lower. Most turkeys these days are raised more scientifically and mature faster, hence are more tender, even without "self-basting."

Cook your turkey according to the directions on the wrapping — don't overcook! In other words, don't use Grandma's cookbook when it comes to preparing the turkey. Her dressing? Yes! Hers was hard to beat!

And, speaking of dressing, we have had so many requests for the cornbread dressing which we printed in the column last Thanksgiving that we are going to print it again tomorrow for those folks who missed it the first time around or have misplaced their copy.

So, watch for it and have your scissors handy. — Hugs, Heloise

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise: As soon as my two sons showed the least curiosity to help Mommy I let them. Now, as older teen-agers, doing any household chore, from cooking to cleaning, seems natural. (They also know how to do outside chores, I might add.)

My reward? Two appreciative future daughters-in-law who will someday marry these knowledgeable, willing househusbands. I abhor martyrdom! — Donna Jones

PEN POINT FOR ARTHRITICS

Dear Heloise: If you have arthritis, insert your pen or pencil into the hollow part of a foam rubber hair roller and you'll make writing very much easier. — Mrs. Carl May

STORING UTENSILS

Dear Heloise: I use a decorative coffee can to store long-handled spoons, spatulas, ladles, etc.

These items are then more visible and much easier to get to than when jumbled up in a drawer. — Esther Witsman

PLACE MAT MAKEOVER

Dear Heloise: Several pink place mats were given to me as a gift but I had no use for this color. So, I thought of covering them with adhesive-backed plastic, trimmed to fit.

Made very attractive mats which match my existing color scheme. They're easy to care for too. — Mrs. Earl Thomas

Have a homemaking question that stumps you? Send it to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, Texas 78216. She can't answer your query personally but she will respond to questions of general interest in her column whenever possible.

Aly Abrams' dreams come true

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Why waste time wishing on a star when your dreams can come true, reasons Aly Abrams, who has turned one of her own fantasies into a lucrative reality.

Ms. Abrams works at making others' dreams happen, charging from $250 to $5,000 and sometimes more, per request. She started her business, called Dreams Come True, about a year ago in Pittsburgh.

"It's the details in life that make life interesting," she said. "That's what Dreams Come True is all about, the little niceties, the icing on the cake."

Ms. Abrams, 33, a former corporate public relations consultant, works primarily with companies seeking new ways to honor top retirees, surprise employees during holidays or entertain visiting dignitaries.

One of her most popular requests from corporate clients involves producing videotapes of retiring executives' lives. For up to 20 minutes after a retirement dinner, the retiree's personal and business life is displayed on the screen. And he, or she, gets to keep both the tape and the videotape machine.

"It's so much more exciting (for retirees) instead of the usual watch, shake your hand. And they love it," she said.

Ms. Abrams depends on about 50 free-lancers and an extensive file to fill her orders, which usually take anywhere from a day to a few months to complete.

"When I need a magician, I know where I can get a magician. When I need the best chocolate in the United States, I have a file on chocolate," she said.

She's granted about 40 dreams during the past year, primarily to such Pittsburgh corporations as Westinghouse Electric Corp., PPG Industries Inc. and Rockwell International Corp.

Other clients have included either creative individuals without enough time, or well-to-do folks lacking creativity of their own.

Either way, it makes for some interesting dreams, which nearly always are surprises, Ms. Abrams said.

She once arranged a surprise reunion for two women who hadn't seen each other for 15 years. She rented a Porsche for a day for a sports car buff and located a hot air balloon as a wife's birthday present to her husband.

Her clients "want to have more fun with their lives, they're tired of giving the same gifts," Ms. Abrams said. "There's no reason why a gift can't be something intangible."

What about her own fantasies? Is playing fairy godmother to others her own idea of a dream come true?

"I don't know if I would say this is my dream come true," she said. "But the thing that I love is that it's creative, organizing and pulling a lot of details together, and the end result always makes me happy."

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev is welcomed by West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt at Cologne-Bonn airport Sunday night for a four-day official visit. Brzhnev is staying at the Gymnich Castle during his visit.

Brezhnev arrives for talks with Schmidt viewed a West German honor guard in a nationally televised ceremony welcoming him to Bonn. The weather was unseasonably mild and Brezhnev wore only a suit as he walked slowed, but steadily along the reviewing line between rows of troops.

Brezhnev arrived at the Bonn-Cologne airport Sunday evening and Schmidt accompanied him to Schloss Gymnich.

SCHMIDT LATER TOLD a West German television interviewer he had a 20 minute impromptu talk with Brezhnev at Gymnich that touched on "the central themes" of the visit including arms control.

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who takes credit for persuading President Reagan to propose a European missile ban, sat down today in Bonn with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev to urge Soviet acceptance of the nuclear arms reduction plan.

The West German and Soviet delegations got down to business at the chancellor's office beside the Rhine River. Later today, Schmidt and Brezhnev, accompanied only by translators, will meet at Schloss Gymnich, the ancient castle where Brezhnev is staying 20 miles northwest of the capital.

Before today's talks, the Soviet leader received a letter from Reagan. He gave no other details.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the two leaders had a brief talk in a "friendly atmosphere."

Schmidt has made it clear he will press Brezhnev to accept the Reagan proposal to forego the NATO deployment of U.S. cruise and Pershing II nuclear missiles in return for dismantling Soviet medium-range rockets aimed at Western Europe from bases in Western Russia.

Schmidt was said to doubt the Soviets would accept it without compromise. But he reportedly hoped for some sign that Brezhnev would not reject it.

Reagan's proposal, which he made in a speech last Wednesday, will be the opening American gambit in the Soviet-American arms reduction talks beginning next Monday in Geneva, Switzerland.

Moscow contends its missiles in Western Russia only put it on a par with North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces in Europe.

The Kremlin insists the United States must limit its missile systems aboard submarines operating off European coasts, curb British and French nuclear missile capability and negotiate reductions in the number of Western European bases from which bombers and missiles could be launched against the Soviet Union.

DESPITE THE SOVIET arguments, the Reagan formula has been well received by the West German public, which has grown increasingly wary of the possibility that Western Europe would become a nuclear battleground in any new East-West confrontation.

Brezhnev will meet on Tuesday with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher; Helmut Kohl and Franz-Josef Straus, the leaders of the conservative Christian Democrats; former Chancellor Willy Brandt and West German President Karl Carstens.

The Soviet president is scheduled to fly back to Moscow on Wednesday.

Brezhnev is making his first trip to the West since June 1979 when he and President Carter signed the SALT II strategic arms limitation agreement in Vienna. The U.S. administration shelved the agreement after the Soviets sent troops into Afghanistan in December 1979.

Brezhnev, who will be 75 next month, almost lost his balance as he came down the steps from the Aeroflot jetliner that brought him to Germany. A Soviet officer grabbed him. The Soviet president appeared tired and walked carefully, taking short steps.

About 50,000 people demonstrated in Bonn hours before Brezhnev arrived. The bulk of the protests were aimed at Moscow's military and human rights policies, but some 10,000 of the demonstrators protested the nuclear polices of both the United States and the Soviet Union.

The Bonn government mobilized 5,000 police to protect the Kremlin leader, but it rejected the Soviet Embassy's request for a ban on all protests during his visit.

A public opinion survey published by the news magazine Der Spiegel said only 17 percent of the West Germans questioned liked the Kremlin leader, but 56 percent thought his visit would be "good and useful."

FBI arrests suspect in Brink's robbery

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An ex-Brink's guard charged with taking $1.85 million from his own armored van in the second-largest Brink's theft ever was quietly arrested by FBI agents near a busy San Francisco supermarket.

George Manuel Bosque, 36, the object of an intensive, international manhunt, was unarmed and offered no resistance Sunday night as he was arrested in the parking lot of one of the city's busiest markets, crowded with people doing their Thanksgiving shopping, the FBI said.

No further details of the arrest were given. Bosque was scheduled for arraignment today.

Bosque, on the run since Aug. 15, 1980, when he and the money disappeared, is charged in a federal grand jury indictment with larceny of bank funds and theft from interstate shipment. At the time of his indictment bail was set at $3 million.

The largest Brink's heist was a $2 million robbery at the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York City in 1979.

The nation's biggest robbery was in New York in 1978 when five masked men bound and manacled 10 employees and made off with $5 million in cash and some $800,000 in jewels from the Lufthansa cargo area at Kennedy International Airport.

BOSQUE HAD BEEN employed by Brink's for 2½ years at the time of the theft, which occurred at San Franciso International Airport. The money had arrived from Honolulu, property of that city's First Hawaiian and Central Pacific banks, and was headed for the Federal Reserve Bank.

The FBI is known to have recovered only $30,000 of the loot, which was mailed to two parties within a few days after the theft.

The first package, with $20,000, went to a business associate of Bosque as payment of a debt, authorities reported. Another $10,000 was sent through the mail a couple of days later as a donation to the San Francisco Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals — from which Bosque was fired in 1977.

"Please use this humble amount to benefit our animals," said a note that was signed "Mr. Anonymous."

Because of his Cuban descent and fluency in Spanish, the search for Bosque spread to Central America and Cuba.

Harris still cries for Tarnower

NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Harris cries privately in her cell for Dr. Herman Tarnower, the millionaire diet author she was convicted of murdering, and reminisces about the good times they shared, a fellow prisoner says.

"She plays the music she used to listen to with him, like 'Hello Dolly,' on a little stereo she has, and she goes back and back over the fun they had together," said Adela Holzer, a former Broadway producer convicted of investment fraud.

Harris

Mrs. Harris, a former headmistress of a girls' school, is serving 15 years to life for murdering Tarnower in March 1980. She is appealing the conviction.

During her incarceration, Mrs. Harris has become an "inmates' champion," Ms. Holzer said, and has been elected to the prisoners' grievance committee at the prison.

Mrs. Harris also cleans her cell constantly and has pasted olive-green and rust-brown paper over the cell furniture.

TODI, Italy (AP) — "The weather's not very good for an itinerant pope," Pope John Paul II said as his helicopter, delayed by fog at the Vatican, arrived an hour late for his first pilgrimage since he was shot May 13.

Hundreds of paramilitary oficers were brought in from as far away as Naples to protect the 61-year-old pontiff during his visit Sunday to the ancient hilltop town of Todi and the nearby shrine of Merciful Love in Collallenza, where 10,000 people had gathered.

Anti-terrorist police fanned out through the crowd as the pope chatted with children, mingled with the sick and at one point unexpectedly walked toward waving crowds.

A Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Pierfranco Pastore, said it was the largest security operation during a papal visit in Italy and that similar measures would be taken on future trips.

Mehmet Ali Agca, a 22-year-old Turk, was convicted of shooting the pope and two American tourists and is serving a life term in an Italian prison.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bryant Gumbel is expected to become the host of NBC's "Today" show, replacing Tom Brokaw on Jan. 4.

Gumbel, 33, a sportscaster for NBC since 1975, said Sunday he agreed to a contract and expects to sign it "in the next day or two."

Gumbel

Under the three-year agreement, Gumbel will work in New York with co-host Jane Pauley. Sources at NBC expect Chris Wallace to join the "Today" team, providing news reports and interviews from Washington.

Brokaw will leave NBC's longtime morning program Dec. 18 for a co-anchor spot on the "NBC Nightly News" with Roger Mudd. The current anchor, John Chancellor, will be stepping down to provide commmentary on the evening program.

Gumbel, interviewed on the set of NBC's "NFL '81" program, said he will begin his "Today" assignment "the first Monday of the new year."

LONDON (AP) — A British newspaper said today that Prince Charles, bowing to pressure from Princess Diana and his mother, Queen Elizabeth II, has given up steeplechasing even though it was one of his favorite hobbies.

The 33-year-old heir to the British throne has sold his regular mount, Good Prospect, and has no plans to buy any more race horses, the tabloid Daily Express reports.

VIENNA (AP) — Conductor Zubin Mehta says the renowned Austrian orchestra leader Karl Boehm told him two years ago, in a New York hotel room, that he planned to bequeath Mehta a ring honoring another eminent conductor.

And on Sunday, in a ceremony at Vienna's Musikverein concert hall, the request that Boehm made in his will was granted — the Arthur Nikisch ring changed hands. Boehm, considered among the world's foremost conductors, died Aug. 14 in Salzburg, Austria, at age 86.

Mehta

Boehm's son, Karl Heinz, presented the ring to Mehta during a brief festive event organized by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, which Boehm led for more than 40 years and which has frequently worked with Mehta, the conductor of the New York and the Israeli philharmonic orchestras.

The ring bears the name of Arthur Nikisch, a German conductor who died in 1923. Nikisch's family reportedly gave the ring to Boehm in the 1960s.

Rapist's mother arraigned today

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A 61-year-old woman accused of trying to hire a hit man to kill the judge and prosecutor who put her son behind bars for rape was the victim of a "police ploy," her husband says.

Ruth Coe, mother of convicted rapist Frederick Coe, was jailed Friday on two charges of soliciting murder. She remained in the Spokane County-City Jail over the weekend — unable to post $500,000 bond.

During a scheduled arraignment today, attorneys planned to seek substantial reduction of that bond.

Gordon Coe, former managing editor of the Spokane Daily Chronicle, said Sunday the high bail was "propaganda to make it look like a terribly serious matter, that some such thing could happen."

"There was no hit man, none of that stuff. It was a police ploy to get her to commit a crime," he said. "She was a very distressed person."

Jorgenson said bail "was set by the judge. The judge normally sets bail based on his perception of the severity of the crime. Apparently the judge perceived this to be a serious crime."

Spokane attorney Carl Maxey said he would ask the court to reduce bond to "somewhere in the vicinity of what Fred's was."

Bond for the younger Coe was originally set at $100,000, but was later reduced to $35,000.

Mrs. Coe is accused of trying to hire a man to kill Spokane County Prosecutor Donald Brockett and Spokane County Superior Court Judge George Shields. Brockett prosecuted Frederick Coe and Shields sentenced him to life plus 75 years in prison.

"The whole thing is like a grieving process when you lose a child to death. I've seen people that have grieved for 35 years or longer. It preoccupies their life. It ruins their life, and this is probably where Mrs. Coe has been since this whole thing began," he said.

Dennie said he would be working with Mrs. Coe "on a long-term basis."

Frederick Coe, 34, a former real estate salesman, was convicted of four counts of first-degree rape and sent to the Washington Corrections Center in Shelton three weeks ago for medical, educational and psychological testing.

Blind youth arrives in Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Twelve-year-old Todd Cantrell begins a "last-hope" treatment today for a rare eye disease that his doctors in the United States say cannot be cured.

The fifth-grader and his parents from Dalton, Ga., arrived Sunday on a trip made possible by a hometown radio station that raise $12,000. Cantrell has suffered since birth from retinitis pigmentosa, which impairs his eyesight and could lead to total blindness.

Todd's mother Betty Cantrell said he will be treated until mid-December at the Hemholtz Institute by Soviet eye specialist using a technique that U.S. doctors consider valueless.

"This is the last hope, the last chance," she said.

Greeks set timetable for pullout

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greece's first Socialist premier told Parliament he will set a timetable early next year for the withdrawal of all U.S. military bases from Greek territory, one of his chief campaign promises.

Outlining his program in a policy speech Sunday, Premier Andreas Papandreou also called for withdrawal of NATO nuclear weapons from Greece and revocation of the 1980 agreement that returned Greece to participation in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's military activities.

"There is no meaning in belonging to the military wing which does not guarantee our eastern frontiers from every possible threat," he declared, referring to Turkey, Greece's traditional enemy and a fellow NATO member.

He said NATO's supply of weapons to Turkey "is tending toward upsetting the balance of power in the Aegean."

Papandreou, who has pledged he would try to make the Balkans a nuclear-free zone, is the first Greek premier to acknowledge the presence of nuclear weapons on Greek soil.

He said he would initiate negotiations with the United States early next year to fix a timetable for U.S. withdrawal from the four bases it maintains on Greek territory.

He did not announce a deadline for the pullout. But he said in the interim his government would supervise the U.S. bases and would halt any activities deemed harmful to Greece's relations with countries in the area. This appeared aimed at any U.S. action from the bases in support of Israel against the Arab states, with whom Greece is establishing close ties.

HOW TO EARN UP TO $2,000 INTEREST AT THE DROP OF A HAT.

★ Introducing a financial first. From First Savings & Loan Association of Midland. The All Saver's Certificate, a fully insured savings plan that earns up to $1,000 tax-free interest on individual returns or $2,000 tax-free interest if you file a joint return.

★ Now for the first time, Uncle Sam will not only fully insure your savings plan, he'll give you a tax break on it as well. Here's how it works: to equal an assumed tax-exempt yield of 12½%, a taxable investment would have to earn 17.86% if your family income is $25,000 and your tax bracket is 30%.

IF YOUR FAMILY INCOME IS:	YOUR TAX BRACKET PROBABLY IS:	THE INTEREST RATE YOU'D HAVE TO RECEIVE TO NET 12.5% AFTER FEDERAL INCOME TAX IS:
$50,000	50%	25%
$35,000	40%	20.83%
$25,000	30%	17.86%
$20,000	25%	16.67%

Figures above are approximate and based on 1981 tax tables. Interest rate on 12.5% is an assumed average investment yield on the All Saver's Certificate. Actual rate is 70% of the average investment yield on one-year treasury bills at date of purchase.

★ You can see why the All Saver's Certificate is a savings break-through. But you may not see it for long. The program begins October 1, 1981 and ends December 31, 1982. So hurry to First Savings and Loan Association of Midland and purchase your All Saver's Certificates.

Republican governors behind Reagan

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Most of the Republican governors here for their annual convention admit to serious economic problems back home, but they are united in their support of President Reagan.

The consensus emerging Sunday from the opening sessions of the Republican Governors' Association was that Republicans had better stick together as the economic crunch comes and Reagan's economic programs come under fire.

"I think the great majority of the American people are behind this program and they recognize that in the states there will be some cutbacks and it's a necessary element for balancing the federal budget and getting our national fiscal house in order," said Gov. Dave Treen of Louisiana.

GOV. LEE DREYFUS OF WISCONSIN was somewhat less optimistic but said some Republican governors are willing to render themselves "unelectable" if necessary to help Reagan accomplish what's best for the country.

But Dreyfus also told his colleagues that when he met with Reagan at the White House last week, he tried to let Reagan know "the depth of the pain" that states are feeling.

"We're not just getting our teeth capped," Drefus said. "This is root canal work and we've run out of anesthetic."

"Missouri is up against it in terms of cash flow," said Gov. Christopher Bond of Missouri.

Gov. James Thompson of Illinois said his state is losing $500 million in revenues because of the recession the country is going through and $50 million as a by-product of Reagan's tax cuts.

GOV. ROBERT ORR OF INDIANA said, "We truly are in a serious plight." Gov. John Dalton of Virginia called it "a very difficult situation."

States are having to get by on less money from Washington as part of Reagan's efforts to hold down federal spending and shift programs and bills back to state and local governments.

"If the federal budget is cut more rapidly than the states' ability to recapture the means to provide the services, we will have broken a promise to the people," said Gov. Richard Snelling of Vermont.

Snelling said this problem is caused by Democrats in Congress who passed Reagan's budget cuts but failed to follow through by cutting the strings on federal grants. Without greater flexibility in spending the money, states can't manage the reduced funds well enough to cover their needs, Snelling said.

Treen, the host governor, and Dalton, outgoing chairman of the GOP governors, both said at a news conference, however, that federal spending must be cut and more programs shifted from Washington to the states.

"I don't find it difficult to support that philosophy," Treen declared. "I don't find it difficult to support it with the people in the state of Louisiana. I think they're going to support it, but whether they do or not, this is the direction we have to take."

Pinch-hitting Nofziger late for Stockman fund-raisers

DENVER (AP) — Federal Budget Director David Stockman, delayed in Washington by the Congressional budget struggle, could not make two Republican fund-raising appearances Sunday, so White House political adviser Lyn Nofziger was sent instead.

Nofziger himself failed to appear at the first fund-raiser in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, but showed up late in the evening at a second affair in Denver.

Republicans in Cedar Rapids had paid $25 apiece to attend Stockman's first public appearance since the publication of a magazine article in which he questioned President Reagan's economic plan.

But Stockman had to stay in Washington on Sunday because Reagan said he would veto a stopgap spending measure worked out by House-Senate negotiators earlier Sunday.

So Nofziger was sent and was due to arrive in Cedar Rapids at 6:15 p.m., soon after the fund-raiser for Rep. Tom Tauke was to have ended. An hour later, he still had not shown up, and the gathering broke up.

Nofziger showed up later in Denver, where he arrived via chartered jet with Rep. Ken Kramer, R-Colo., and spoke at a fund-raiser for Kramer at about 10:30 p.m. MDT. Nofziger said he and Kramer were delayed in Washington because of work on the federal budget, and although they went to Iowa, they arrived too late to make an appearance.

Stockman's appearance in Cedar Rapids was to have been the first of a dozen stops scheduled in Iowa, Colorado, Oregon, Washington and California this week.

The tour would have been the first by Stockman since an embarrassing story appeared in the Atlantic Monthly magazine, in which Stockman questioned key parts of the economic program he has been advocating strenuously in public. Stockman offered to resign his post after the article appeared, but Reagan refused to accept his resignation.

The trip was planned before the magazine article was released Nov. 10.

Bomb injures two

LONDON (AP) — An early morning bomb blast today seriously injured two civilian women at an army base in southeast London, police said.

At first it was feared that one of the women was killed in the explosion at Royal Artillery headquarters in Woolwich, but Scotland Yard said later that no one died in the blast.

No group claimed responsibility, but the Scotland Yard spokesman said, "We suspect terrorism."

One woman, 35, believed to be an army officer's wife, had part of her right foot and hand blown off in the blast, ambulance attendants said. The other victim, aged 36, sustained cuts and was suffering from shock, they said.

A labrador that the women were walking lost a leg in the explosion, police said. The dog was sniffing at the gate of Government House, the garrison headquarters, seconds before the bomb exploded, witnesses said.

"It seems the two women were taking the dog for an early morning walk. When it got to the gate, it triggered the bomb," a fireman at the scene said. "There is hardly any sign of an explosion. There is a small hole in the ground by the gate."

An army spokesman said: "It was not a large bomb. There was no damage to the building — not even a window broken."

Police from the anti-terrorist branch rushed to the scene and sealed off the area, disrupting traffic at the morning rush hour.

The Irish Republican Army, which is fighting a guerrilla war to end British rule in Northern Ireland and unite the province with the Irish Republic, exploded several bombs in London last month that killed three people and injured 38. The injured included 22 troops of the Irish Guards who were wounded by a bomb outside the army's Chelsea Barracks in the West End.

Taunters stab man

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After four hours of taunting passers-by with racial and anti-homosexual epithets, two men who "wanted to fight" stabbed one young man to death and wounded two others, police said.

Richard Weston, 29, and Henry Luna, 26, were arrested an hour after the attacks Saturday morning and were booked for investigation of murder and attempted murder, police said.

The dead man, stabbed in the heart, had no identification and remained unidentified Sunday, coroner's investigator Alan Pringle said.

Homicide Inspector Napoleon Hendricks said the incident began when two men "who wanted to fight and ... provoke people" began yelling at pedestrians at an intersection near Polk Street, a strip of bars and shops popular with homosexuals.

Witnesses said the men shouted derogatory names, police Inspector Marvin Dean said. The two "bought more beer and booze, and the more they drank, the more macho they became, picking fights," Dean said.

One passer-by who exchanged words with the two men ran into a restaurant coffeeshop to tell a friend, Gayle Stone, 38, that he was being taunted.

Stone, interviewed at the University of California Medical Center, said he and his unidentified friend went outside, where the two men stabbed Stone in the abdomen and his companion just below the eye.

A few minutes later, the unidentified victim was stabbed, but the exact circumstances of the stabbing were not immediately clear, police said. Hendricks said he "happened to be at the right spot at the wrong time."

Idea of conscientious objectors is 'treasonous'

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Six months after inviting young men to register their status as conscientious objectors in case of a military draft, Roman Catholic Church officials here report response has been small.

And they have been confronted with complaints that the idea is treasonous.

"There just is not massive concern on the issue among draft-age people," says John Moynihan, director of the program.

Last May the Catholic Archdiocese of Boston announced that it would keep files of letters from young men who intend to claim conscientious objector status if the draft was reinstated. There are about 2 million Roman Catholics in the archdiocese.

So far, about 100 people have written these letters to the archdiocese's Justice and Peace Commission, which is keeping the files. But about 40 others have written to complain about the program.

"There are some people who identify their faith totally with patriotism, and patriotism is serving your country," Moynihan said.

"They see it as being treason and being immoral to even suggest that they wouldn't serve, and they see the existence of the CO file as encouraging people not to serve. That's not the intent at all."

The purpose, he said, is to put young Catholics on record as opposing military service if that is their moral belief.

During the Vietnam War, Moynihan said, Catholics had trouble being accepted as conscientious objectors, because Catholic members of draft boards said pacifism was not part of their religious training.

"If the case is being made that the Catholic cannot claim it's part of his training, then the registration with the archdiocese at least shows that the church supports his position," he said.

Moynihan added, "We're not certifying the validity of the claim. We're just saying that this individual wrote us a letter on this date and said he was a CO."

He said that writing to the archdiocese is just the first step for a conscientious objector. He should also get help from a draft counseling group to prepare backup documentation.

The draft ended during the Vietnam War.

At the urging of President Carter, registration for the draft was revived for young men following a vote by Congress in 1980. The draft, however, has not resumed.

On Nov. 3, Selective Service Director Thomas K. Turnage said almost one-fourth of 18-year-olds required to register for the draft in 1981 had failed to do so.

Turner said then that figures compiled up to Sept. 1 showed 1,336,000 men born in 1963 were supposed to have registered for possible military service, but 307,000 — or 23 percent — did not.

That was the highest number since Selective Service began keeping detailed records, surpassing the approximately 225,000 who failed to register in 1973 and 1974, in the wake of the Vietnam war.

Woman indicted for murder granted doctor's license

ATLANTA (AP) — A decision to license a doctor while she is under indictment on murder charges in Tennessee was "one of the most irresponsible things I had ever seen," a county prosecutor said.

But the head of the state Composite Board of Medical Examiners says the licensing was based solely on Dr. Rose Horne Leaphart's qualifications as a doctor.

"She was not convicted of the charge," said board President Bernard Bridges. "Isn't that what this country is all about?"

The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal reported in their combined Sunday editions that the state board issued Mrs. Leaphart a license to practice medicine in her hometown of Quitman, about 200 miles south of Atlanta.

The board's decision came in June, just one month after she was indicted in Nashville on murder charges in the January death of her husband, Bobby. She is free on $50,000 bond.

Her trial is scheduled for Nov. 30 in Nashville, and her attorneys have filed notice that they intend to raise an insanity defense.

Assistant district attorney Doug Johnston, who will prosecute the 31-year-old doctor, called the board's decision "one of the most irresponsible I had ever seen."

But Bridges said Mrs. Leaphart appeared before the board on June 17 and asked the 13-member panel to leave the criminal matter to the courts and judge her strictly on her competence as a physician.

If presented with the same situation again, Bridges said, "I think we'd do the same thing."

Mrs. Leaphart, a Georgia native who practiced briefly in Nashville, was charged by a Tennessee grand jury with hiring two men to beat her husband to death with a baseball bat. She was also accused of helping them stuff his body into the trunk of his car, which was abandoned in Atlanta.

Mrs. Leaphart received her degree in internal medicine from Meharry Medical College in Nashville in 1976, interned at Atlanta's Georgia Baptist Medical Center, married Bobby Leaphart in 1978 and set up a practice in Nashville.

According to the newspaper report, Mrs. Leaphart in August 1979 swore out warrants for her husband's arrest, alleging that he beat her and was on drugs. The warrants later were dismissed.

When her husband disappeared in January, Mrs. Leaphart told police he often went away for long periods and she was not worried, the newspaper said.

Hospital halts experiments on children

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts General Hospital, which claims the largest research budget of any independent hospital in the nation, has ordered its doctors to leave children out of experiments unless possible benefits greatly outweigh risks.

"We are a group of people who are committed to helping others and not making life more difficult for them or potentially risky, and perhaps that's why we have tended to be so conversative," said Dr. Edgar Taft, secretary for the hospital's Subcommittee on Human Studies.

The first update of Massachusetts General's guidelines on human experimentation in 11 years says "concern for the individual takes precedence over the interests of science and society."

The new code, released Sunday, was written by the subcommittee, which reviews all human experiments at the institution.

Taft said Massachusetts General's $37.7 million research budget is the largest of any independent hospital in the United States, and half the money is spent on human studies.

When children under age 18 or people who cannot give consent for themselves are sought for an experiment, the rules say, "there should be essentially no identifiable risk associated with participation in the study. If there is any risk, it must be decisively outweighed by potential benefits to the subjects."

In all other experiments, the expected benefit to the patient must be at least as great as the risk.

Over the past decade the committee has grown more cautious in its view of how much risk patients should undergo to benefit science, Taft said.

A heathful experience begins at Midland Fitness Center

Midlanders interested in muscle-toning, cardio-vascular training and increased body flexibility will want to check out Midland Fitness Center in the Northland Shopping Center, North "A" Street and Scharbauer Drive. The center offers the opportunity to achieve a high level of fitness, inch loss, body toning and weight loss, plus the fun of group dance movement.

It is suggested that any fitness program begin with an orientation lesson covering body positioning, class composition, pulse rate monitoring, measurements, exercises and general facts about aerobic conditioning. There is no charge for this service.

Midland Fitness Center instructors, well-trained and experienced, teach classes as follows: Beginners, Body Toning, Aerobic Workout, Fit for All, Pre-Natal. Post Partumn and Men's Aerobic Calisthenics. Country Western Dance classes are scheduled from time to time. Call the Midland Fitness Center, 682-6134, for more information about these classes and their starting times.

To sign up, go by the center 15 minutes before class time, register and receive a punch card good for either 12 classes for $24 or 20 classes for $38. The card may be used at your discretion, any day, any time; there is no penalty for missing a class.

Appropriate clothing includes leotard and tights, T-shirts and shorts; anything comfortable and loose. Tennis or running shoes are required. The center's shop sells leotards, tights, Midland Fitness Center shirts, shorts, warn-up clothing, beautiful velour-type shirts and pants, good-looking hooded parkas, and miscellaneous sportswear.

The handy Northland Shopping Center location coupled with an impressive variety of classes and service make Midland Fitness Center the place to begin your new approach to good health. Contact manager Ginger Lankford or any of the qualified instructors at the center for information and advice about which class is right for you. Start your fitness experience now.

Winterize your car at Robert's Auto Supply and Machine Shop

Now is the time to have your car or truck winterized for the cold months ahead. Take your vehicle to Robert's Auto Supply and Machine Shop, 1003 E. Florida, for knowledgeable, experienced service and a complete stock of car-care products.

Winter's approach, as far as your car is concerned, means tune-up time and some attention to the cooling system — flushing the radiator, adding anti-freeze and checking the pressure cap.

Let the experts at Robert's Auto Supply and Machine Shop take over this important service operation. They have the know-how to winterize your vehicle and they have parts in stock to replace that broken belt, hose or thermostat. Robert's even carries heater control valves.

They recommend changing windshield wiper blades to give your car windows a clean, close "shave" in snowy, misty driving weather and changing spark plugs for smoother starts.

Robert's Auto Supply and Machine Shop carries all major brands of automotive chemical products such as fluids, gas treatments and oil treatments.

A big assortment of hand tools for both the weekend mechanic and the professional are available at Robert's. The business welcomes those who want to purchase supplies and do their own work. Their sales people have 10 to 12 years' experience and are happy to assist the do-it-yourselfer with selecting parts and giving advice pertaining to automotive repair.

Robert's Auto Supply and Machine Shop is open from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. five days a week and 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday.

Remember the location, 1003 E. Florida, for whatever automotive needs you may have especially for winterizing your car at this time.

Surrounded by marvelous Christmas gift ideas, Marilyn Johnson invites you to visit Personally Yours at 3205 W. Cuthbert and see the many other "giftables" in the shop — absolutely every one of which can be personalized.

Shop at Personally Yours for that extra-special Christmas gift

Christmas shopping is a joy at Personally Yours. There are so many unique and interesting gift categories for all ages and tastes. The shop is owned and operated by Florence Borkon and Marilyn Johnson, mother and daughter, and conveniently located at 3205 W. Cuthbert, in the Tierra del Sol Plaza.

Little ones will look warm and chic in tiny monogrammed jump suits with matching hats. Designer bibs make delightful gifts, as do the original T-shirts for babies, customized with designs and names. You may end up buying one of the many beautifully-detailed Happenings cotton-stuffed dolls from storyland for yourself, as they are irresistible. Doll collectors will want to see the "Darlins of the Month," too.

Specially purchased for Midland from San Francisco are the new "clown mobiles," hanging stuffed figures for the children's rooms. Choose from acrobatic clowns, superman on the moon, the cowboy and the airplane.

How about a T-shirt (personalized, of course,) in a can? Or any small gift in a can? Personally Yours now brings you this service. Don't forget your personalized Christmas stocking; Personally Yours has some that are just right, in bright green and red felt.

For the more mature gift recipient, shop the "lucite area." There you will find vanity mirrors, fingertip towel holders and fancy wastebaskets; desk accessories, including calenders, address books, phone number caddies; kitchen and dining room items such as recipe holders, large serving platters, coffee and dessert plate sets, cookie jars, wine bottle holders; and such miscellanious items as picture frames in all sizes and the acrylic yo-yo!

The piece-de-resistance of this collection is a large party wagon of Plexiglas, (the material for today's lifestyle.) This wagon will definitely be the hit of the party with it's dome; three compartment inserts for all types of food; insulator base to keep the food hot or cold; the "wagon" base which can be used alone, also, as a decorative piece; and, locking pins for secure assembly, plus the wagon handle.

All of these lucite products become even more attractive when custom decorated with initials, names, flowers or whatever you prefer.

Court upholds Ortega conviction

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday upheld the conviction of Arturo Langoria Ortega, convicted by an Ector County jury of delivery of heroin and sentenced to 99 years in prison.

Ortega appealed on grounds the trial court erred in not granting him a mistrial because of questioning by the prosecutor regarding Ortega's knowledge of "how many 'nickle packages' a gram of heroin will make."

The appeals court noted that Ortega's two prior convictions had been entered into evidence.

LANDMEN
San Francisco

Sohio Petroleum Company is the largest domestic oil producer in the U.S. We are using our strong financial position as the basis for a burgeoning exploration and lease acquisition effort. Our growth has created a need for several Landmen to work in our San Francisco headquarters office. We would like to consider you if:

- You have a degree in PLM, Law or Business
- You have at least 1 year of experience in either oil and gas lease administration or in the field with an oil and gas broker
- You find San Francisco an attractive work location.

Your initial assignment will be in the areas of lease and property administration in our lease records office. After an initial training period, you will have excellent promotional opportunities either up the ladder in lease records or into staff Landman positions.

Our compensation and benefits are competitive and our housing assistance policy is sensitive to today's housing market. If you'd like to join the Sohio adventure, send your resume to Frank Wood, Sohio Petroleum Company, #94196, 100 Pine Street, San Francisco, CA 94111.

'Peaceful' survivalists stockpile guns

AP Laserphoto

Jim Ellison, 41, takes a break from work on an obstacle course to train survivalists at the settlement called Zaraphath-Horeb he founded in 1976. A group of 90-odd men, women and children live at the remote enclave, where guns and food are stockpiled, on 220 acres near Bull Shoals Lake, south of the Arkansas-Missouri border.

By TERRI COLBY
Associated Press Writer

ZARAPHATH-HOREB, Ark. (AP) — Bivouaced in an Ozark encampment that bears a name borrowed from the Bible, a band of scripture-quoting, gun-toting Christian soldier-survivalists has set its sights on doomsday.

In the mountain hollows, cedar barrens and underbrush, they're drilling for the anarchic hour when society collapses and the woods are alive with looters looking for food.

THEY ARE A company of 90 men, women and children in a score of trailers and homes built by hand on 220 acres near Bull Shoals Lake in northern Arkansas. And with faith in God and guns, they're prepared to save their way of life from the chaos they think will accompany the unavoidable disintegration of the economy.

On the shoulder of a southern Missouri country road, the battered mailbox identifies them as "The Covenant, the Sword, the Arm of the Lord." An arrow points south down two winding miles of rocks and ruts past the trees, a dry riverbed and the Arkansas border.

Jim Ellison, 41, who traded his clerical collar and Texas congregation for army fatigues and an obstacle course, waits at the other end to welcome visitors and survival school recruits to the settlement he founded in 1976.

"GOD, IN THE beginning, told us to come here and establish a place of refuge," said Ellison during a break on the tree stump-studded course.

The only power most Zaraphath-Horebeans have comes from the pistols they pack and their faith in God. Most homes have no electricity — or plumbing. Heat comes from wood-burning stoves and light from kerosene lanterns. Outhouses ring the clusters of wooden dwellings.

Youngsters, many delivered by their fathers, romp in the dried leaves on the forest floor. Older siblings take lessons in two rooms furnished with old-fashioned wooden desks. Nearby stands a facade simulation of a ravaged urban block used to teach street fighting.

Taxes behind higher costs

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Federal spending and taxes have been in the spotlight for most of this year, but recently published reports show there also have been sharp increases in finances closer to home.

THE TAX Foundation, Inc., a non-profit group in Washington, D.C., says, for example, that its research shows:

— State tax collections nearly tripled from 1970 to 1980, rising from $48 billion to $137.1 billion. During the same period, federal tax collections rose by about 2½ times.

— The number of workers employed by state and local governments increased 29 percent in the past decade; the payroll for those workers jumped 149 percent.

— Per-capita expenditures at all levels of government have been rising. Per-capita federal spending went up fastest, increasing 172 percent between 1970 and 1980. Per-capita state spending was close behind, however, with a jump of 165 percent during the decade. Per-capita local spending rose the least — 108 percent.

— TAX ACTION by lawmakers in 30 states this year will raise state tax revenues by $2.5 billion, the highest annual statutory increase in state levies in 10 years. More than one-third of the money will come from higher sales taxes.

The foundation, a nonpartisan research organization set up in 1937 to monitor the fiscal aspects of government, said state tax collections in 1980 totaled $607 for every man, woman and child in the country. Ten years ago, per-capita collections were only $237.

Growth in income eased some of the pain of higher taxes, however. When the researchers compared taxes and personal income, they found that state taxes claimed $71 for every $1,000 in personal income in 1980, up only about 9 percent from the $65 claimed in 1970.

GENERAL SALES taxes are the single biggest source of tax money for the states. In 1980, such levies brought in $43.2 billion — almost one-third of the total. Selective sales taxes — on things like alcoholic beverages and motor vehicles — accounted for a little less than one-fifth of state tax revenues.

The take from the sales taxes will get even bigger as a result of 1981 legislative action. The foundation said there were statewide sales tax increases approved this year in four states — West Virginia, Ohio, Minnesota and Nevada.

Twenty-four states and the District of Columbia approved increases in motor fuel tax rates which are expected to bring in $750 million a year, according to foundation researchers. The money will go for highway funds, which have been pinched by inflation combined with declining gasoline usages.

Dallas regains share of first

IRVING—Dallas' Cowboys cooled off the Washington Redskins, who came into Texas Stadium Sunday winners in five of their last six games, 24-10, with a superb defensive effort, moving into a tie for first place with the Philadelphia Eagles, who were upset by the New York Giants.

The Cowboys don't have much time to revel over their return to first. They host the Chicago Bears Thanksgiving Day, and if they win, will be in sole possession of first place, at least until Sunday.

Quarterback Danny White threw two touchdown passes, but it was a new computer study by Coach Tom Landry, who dissected the Redskins offense, that keyed the defensive effort that muffled Washington's Joe Theismann and company, although a late first half injury to running back Joe Washinton helped.

STRONG SAFETY Charlie Waters said Landry's computer made the defense's job easeier. "He gave us new keys on how to handle it and everything he told us held up."

"We've played excellent defense for four weeks now against top competition. The story of this game was good defense and a big-play offense by Danny," Landry said. Of the tie with the Eagles, Landry said: "I really don't think much about the Eagles. It's the time of year where you have to play solid every week or you are out of it. We get the Eagles in good time (Dec. 13) and we'll try to be ready."

White's 10-yard scoring pass to tight end Doug Cosbie late in the third quarter broke up a 10-10 tie. In the first period he hit Butch Johnson with a 28-yard TD strike. But Washington kept it close until the closing moments. Trailing 10-7 at half, the Skins tied it on a 26-yard Mike Moseley field goal after Mike Nelms returned the second half kickoff 51 yards.

DALLAS regained the lead when White's third and 18 pass to Drew Pearson for 34 yards set up the payoff toss to Cosbie.

The Redskins were handicapped by the loss of halfback Joe Washington, who rushed 12 times for 84 yards and caught three passes for 47 yards in the first half. He suffered a torn rib cartilage near the end of the second period and never returned.

The victory assured the Cowboys of their 16th consecutive winning season. It was Dallas' 16th straight victory in Texas Stadium.

Dallas built a 10-0 lead in the first half on the touchdown pass to Johnson and Rafael Septien's 25-yard field goal. Washington scored a touchdown in the second quarter when recently acquired Nick Giaquinto caught a 7-yard touchdown pass from Joe Theismann.

The Cowboys iced the game in the final period when Pearson rambled 25 yards on a double reverse to the Washington one. Halfback Ron Springs then scored on a 1-yard run with 52 seconds to play.

Dorsett rushed 23 times for 115 yards to lead the Cowboy ground game, while White completed 13 of 27 passes for 222 yards.

THE COWBOYS drove 78 yards in 9 plays for a touchdown after Mark Moseley missed a 27-yard field goal try.

White scrambled 11 yards for a first down then hit Tony Hill with a 20-yard pass to the Redskins 26. Three plays later on third and 12, Johnson worked free to take the 28-yard scoring pass.

Strong safety Charlie Waters' interception in the Dallas end zone — which tied the club record of 29 established in 1969 — setup a second-quarter Dallas field goal.

Dallas got the ball to the Washington one but an illegal procedure penalty against guard Kurt Petersen set the Cowboys back. They settled for Septien's 25-yard field goal — his 22nd of the season tying Toni Fritsch's 1975 record.

Washington narrowed the deficit to 10-7 in the final two minutes of the first half. Pass completions of 15 and 25 yards to Joe Washington, and a 9-yard run by Washington positioned the 'Skins for Theismann's 7-yard touchdown pass to Giaquinto.

It was the first pass reception of the year for Giaquinto, who was acquired this week from Miami.

Bum's return triumphant

HOUSTON (AP) — It was an emotional and confusing afternoon for Houston Oiler fans. They tried to cheer for both sides.

They cheered when the opposing coach, New Orleans' Bum Phillips, led his team onto the field before the game. They cheered Phillips again as he left, after the Saints had embarrassed the Oilers 27-24 Sunday.

What happened between Phillips' two standing ovations was not very pleasant for the Houston team. The fans tried to cheer for the hometown Oilers, but aside from a brief fourth quarter rally, there was little to admire about the struggling former Super Bowl contender.

SO PHILLIPS, the man who led the Oilers to three straight playoff appearances before he was fired last December, was his wise-cracking old self following the game. But this time, there was a twinge of regret.

"It's the biggest victory I've ever had in this building," Phillips said of the Astrodome. "I wish there was some way both teams could have won. But when the whistle blows, you've got to root for one side or the other, and I just worried about the Saints."

Phillips strode into the Astrodome wearing an Oiler blue shirt and acknowledged the scores of banners and cheers welcoming him back to the city.

"My wife mentioned this morning my choice of shirt colors," Phillips said. "Heck, I just wake up in the morning and put on what's clean."

WHILE PHILLIPS dominated the attention, the Saints players took control on the field. Saints rookie George Rogers outgained fellow Heisman trophy winner Earl Campbell 142 yards to 96 yards, and the Saints allowed Houston only two sustained drives in the game.

New Orleans took a 10-3 halftime lead on the first of two touchdown runs by Jack Holmes and Denny Ricardo's 46-yard field goal. Houston's Toni Fritsch booted a 49-yard field goal.

A mishandled punt by New Orleans' Russell Erxleben gave Houston possession at the Saint 2-yard line in the third quarter. Campbell scored on a 1-yard plunge to tie the game.

THE SAINTS then drove 74 yards with the aid of 57 yards on two pass interference calls and took the lead for good on Holmes' 2-yard touchdown run. New Orleans made it 24-10 on quarterback Archie Manning's 22-yard touchdown pass to Wayne Wilson, a former Oiler.

Houston scored twice in the fourth quarter on a 50-yard pass from Ken Stabler to rookie Mike Holston and Campbell's 1-yard run, but Ricardo's 42-yard field goal proved to be the difference.

"I wanted to prove to all those players that I brought to Houston that I was still a good coach," Phillips said. "I almost proved to be too good a selector of personnel the way they almost came back."

The Oilers dropped their fifth game in six starts for a 5-7 record while the Saints marched home with a 4-8 record, already a drastic improvement from last season's 1-15 finish.

Akers not apologizing for trip to Cotton Bowl

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas Coach Fred Akers has an immediate retort for anyone who says the Longhorns backed into the Cotton Bowl because champion Southern Methodist is on probation.

"We beat 'em (the Mustangs)," said Akers in the press box at Memorial Stadium after the Longhorns had clinched the host role in the Cotton Bowl with a 34-12 victory over Baylor. "I'd say we have nothing to be ashamed of."

Texas handed the sixth-ranked Mustangs their only loss — 9-7 — last month in Texas Stadium.

SMU earned its first Southwest Conference title since 1966 with a 32-18 victory over Arkansas in Fayetteville.

"Let's not talk about maybes," said SMU Coach Ron Meyer. "This was our bowl game. The conference title is ours."

SMU running back Eric Dickerson added, "This is fantastic ... this makes up for the probation 100 percent. You can't get any better than this."

AKERS thinks so.

"Any time you get to the Cotton Bowl you've got to be proud," he said. "It's a chore to get there with the competition in this league."

SMU finished with a 10-1 season and a 7-1 SWC record while Texas is 8-1-1 and 5-1-1 with a regular season game remaining against Texas A&M Thanksgiving Day.

The Longhorns' opponent will be Alabama. The Crimson Tide was the choice all the way of the Cotton Bowl although Southern California was given some consideration. Akers was called in the pressbox before the end of the USC-UCLA game to be told his opponent was Alabama.

The SWC landed four teams in bowls.

Arkansas, 8-3 and 5-2, will play North Carolina in the Gator Bowl Monday Dec. 28.

Houston, which outlasted Texas Tech 15-7 Saturday and still must play Rice, meets Oklahoma Dec. 26 in the Sun Bowl.

THE TEXAS Aggies, who blasted Texas Christian 37-7, play Oklahoma State Dec. 12 in the Independence Bowl at Shreveport.

Alabama Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant said his squad was "very happy over the Cotton Bowl invitation. They had expressed a desire to return to Dallas. You can check the record, though. We don't have a very good record against Texas.

Eskimos win Grey, 26-23

MONTREAL (AP) - The "General" and his top aides got the job done when it appeared the upstart Ottawa Rough Riders might pull off the impossible.

"Tom Wilkinson is as good or better than anyone," Edmonton running back Neil Lumsden said after the Eskimos pulled out a 26-23 victory in the final three seconds Sunday and give Edmonton an unprecedented fourth consecutive Grey Cup championship. "Wilkie is the only general. He sits back there and commands respect from the defense and from the offense which he's leading."

When Edmonton, an overwhelming 22½-point favorite, was close to being routed in the first half of the Canadian Football League's title game, Wilkinson, a former University of Wyoming star playing in his 15th and final CFL season, came to the rescue.

Wilkinson led Edmonton to its first point — its only point in the first half — as Ottawa took a 20-1 lead into intermission.

Giants' 10-point fourth quarter stuns Philadephia, 20-10

By The Associated Press

The New York Giants scored 10 points in the fourth quarter on a field goal and a pass interception by Terry Jackson to upset Philadelphia 20-10 Sunday, dropping the Eagles into a tie with Dallas in the National Football Conference East.

The Giants, who had lost 12 straight to Philadelphia and were 9½-point underdogs, were tied with the Eagles at 10-10 with 12:55 to play. Eagles punter Max Runager then shanked a kick that covered 9 yards to the Philadelphia 32.

Shortly afterward, Joe Danelo put the Giants ahead 13-0 withhis second field goal of the day, a 30-yarder. On Philadelphia's following possession, Jackson stepped in front of Eagles wide receiver Charlie Smith and intercepted a pass from Ron Jaworski. Jackson returned it 32 yards for a touchdown with 8:04 left in the game.

The loss dropped the Eagles to 9-3 in the NFC Eastern Division, tied for first with Dallas, which defeated Washington 24-10.

ELSEWHERE in the NFL, Cincinnati downed Denver 38-21; the New York Jets edged Miami 16-15; New Orleans defeated Houston 27-24; Kansas City drubbed Seattle 48-13, Pittsburgh walloped Cleveland 32-10; Detroit clobbered Chicago 23-7; Tampa Bay rolled over Green Bay 37-3; Buffalo edged New England 20-17; St. Louis beat Baltimore 35-24; San Diego downed Oakland 55-21, and San Francisco trimmed Los Angeles, 33-31. Minnesota plays at Atlanta Monday night.

Ken Anderson of Cincinnati threw for three touchdowns and ran for another, victimizing the NFL's best pass defense for 396 yards in the air. Anderson completed 25 of 37 passes to boost the Bengals to the their fourth straight victory and an AFC Central Division-leading 9-3 mark. Denver dropped into a tie with Kansas City for the AFC West lead at 8-4.

Richard Todd threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Jerome Barkum with 16 seconds left, boosting the Jets over Miami and lifting New York into a tie with the Dolphins for first place in the AFC East, both with records of 7-4-1.

BILLY JACKSON scored two touchdowns, and Bill Kenney passed for two more as the Chiefs romped over the Seahawks.

Donnie Shell intercepted three passes, Anthony Washington came up with two more interceptions and Franco Harris scored a record-tying 83rd career touchdown as the Steelers rolled over Cleveland. Harris' touchdown tied him with Jim Taylor for career rushing touchdowns and kept the Steelers, 7-5, within two games of Cincinnati in the AFC Central while Cleveland dropped four back at 5-7.

The Lions held Chicago, which dropped to 3-8, to only 24 net yards in total offense, and Ed Murray kicked three field goals for Detroit. Lions quarterback Eric Hipple scored from 5 yards out in the third quarter to give Detroit, 6-6, a 16-7 lead. Murray's longest field goal was 49 yards.

JOE FERGUSON lobbed a 36-yard touchdown pass to Roland Hooks with five seconds left to lift Buffalo, 7-5, over New England, 2-10. The Bills got the ball on their own 28 with no timeouts left and 35 seconds to play. Ferguson hit Hooks for 37 yards, and two plays later, Ferguson tossed his TD pass, which tipped into Hooks' hands in the end zone.

Ottis Anderson went over the 1,000-yard plateau for the third straight year with 130 yards as St. Louis handed the Colts their 11th straight loss. Anderson also ran for a pair of touchdowns, running his season total to 1,049 yards. St. Louis, 5-7, snapped a 7-7 tie on a 14-yard return of a pass interception by Dave Andrews.

Dan Fouts threw a club-record six touchdown passes, five of them to tight end Kellen Winslow, as San Diego routed Oakland. Winslow's TD receptions tied an NFL single-game record set in 1950 by Bob Shaw of the Chicago Cardinals. The victory ended a two-game Chargers losing streak and virtually eliminated the defending Super Bowl champion Raiders, now 5-7, from this season's race.

Ray Wersching kicked a 37-yard field goal as time expired to give the 49ers a victory over Los Angeles and a 9-3 NFC West-leading record. The field goal was Wersching's fourth of the game. Wendell Tyler ran 1 yard for a touchdown with 1:51 to play, putting Los Angeles ahead 31-30, but quarterback Joe Montana moved San Francisco into field goal position by completing six of 10 passes for 54 yards on the winning drive.

Kangaroos face William Jewell

SHERMAN—Austin College, 10-1, will play William Jewell College of Missouri, 11-0, here Saturday in the semifinals of the NAIA Division II football playoffs.

William Jewell eliminated defending national champion Pacific Lutheran, 19-14, Saturday while the TIAA champion Kangaroos defeated Panhandle A&M, 27-16.

In other first round games, Westminster, Pa., defeated Anderson, Ind., 21-6, and Concordia, Minn., expelled Dickinson, N.D., State, 13-9.

Quarterback Larry Shillings, who had three first half scoring passes, hit to Rory Dukes for two AC touchdowns against William Jewell while Gene Branum kicked third and fourth period field goals.

Royals win tour finale

HEIWADAI, Japan (AP) — The Kansas City Royals scored four runs in each of the last two innings Monday and blanked the Yomiuri Giants en route to an 8-0 victory in the final game of the American League baseball team's 3½-week Japanese exhibition tour.

The victory enabled the Royals to finish with a 9-7-1 record. They won all three games of the final series with the Giants to avoid becoming the first American team ever to compile a losing record on a Japanese tour.

Oil and gas finds finaled in New Mexico, wildcat staked

Four gas discoveries have been finaled in the New Mexico counties of Chaves and Lea. Also a Wolfcamp oil discovery has been finaled in a workover project in Lea County.

A wildcat has been staked in Lea County.

CHAVES GASSERS

Sanders Petroleum Corp., Albuquerque, has completed an Abo gas discovery, 14 miles west of Elkins.

The No. 1 Isler Fee, originally filed by Boyd Operating Co., flowed 1,803,000 cubic fet of gas per day through an unreported size choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 847 pounds per square inch.

The calculated absolute open flow was 7,726,000 cubic feet per day through perforations between 4,493 to 4,523 feet.

The well is bottomed at 5,348 feet with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,567 feet.

The well is in section 15, township 7 south, range 26 east, and is 2 1/2 miles east of Abo gas production in an unnamed field.

****

Aikman Petroleum Inc., Midland, has finaled its No. 1 Sanders, eight miles southeast of Boaz.

Flowing through Montoya perforations between 7,903 and 7,911 feet, the well produced 1,149,000 cubic feet of gas per day. The flowing tubing pressure was 1,385 pounds per square inch.

The calculated open flow is 2,001,000 cubic feet per day with gas to oil ratio of 6278 to 1.

The total depth is 7,954 feet with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 7,951 feet.

The discovery is 1/2 mile southeast of Devonian oil production in the Lightcap field and is 1/2 mile southeast of San Andres oil production in the Cato field.

There is no nearby Montoya production.

The well is in section 8, township 8 south, range 30 east.

LEA GAS FINDS

Florida Exploration Co., Midland, has completed the No. 1 Reno Com, as a Morrow gas discovery, nine miles west of Jal.

The well flowed 3,299,000 cubic feet of gas through an unreported size choke, with flowing tubing pressure of 2,375 pounds per square inch.

Calculated absolute open flow was 3,942,000 cubic feet per day. Gas to oil ratio was 86,574 to 1 and a shut in wellhead pressure of 7,462 pounds per square inch.

Total depth is 19,170 feet, with five-inch liner set at 19,160 feet.

The well is in section 11, township 25 south, range 35 east, and is five miles southeast of 14,164-foot Morrow gas production in the Cinta Roja field.

Collier Energy Inc., Artesia, has completed its No. 1 Mesa State, five miles southeast of Buckeye, as a Queen gas discovery from perforations between 4,436 to 4,443 feet.

The well flowed 968,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 14/64 inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 572 pounds per square inch.

Calculated absolute open flow was 1,054,000 cubic feet per day, with shut in wellhead pressure of 1,421 pounds per square inch.

The project was originally filed in the Vacuum field and is 1 1/2 miles south of 8,882-foot Abo and 11,807-foot Devonian production in that field.

It is in section 20, townhship 18 south, range 35 east.

LEA OIL FIND

Amoco Production Co., Odessa, has recompleted the No. 1 Federal "H", a workover project, 22 miles southeast of Halfway, as a Wolfcamp oil discovery in the Bell Lake, West (Atoka gas) field.

Producing from perforations between 13,571 and 13,579 feet, the well flowed 28 barrels of oil (gravity not reported), plus five barrels of water in 24 hours though an 18/64 inch choke. The gas to oil ratio was 4,678 to 1.

The well was originally completed in 1979 as the discovery well in the Bell Lake, West (Atoka gas) field. It produced from perforations between 14,725 and 14,742 feet.

The location is six miles northeast of 13,236-foot Wolfcamp oil production in the Triste Draw, East field.

LEA WILDCAT

Hanson will deepen the hole to 9,750 feet.

Panels told merger could increase gasoline prices

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mobil's attempt to take over Marathon Oil could increase prices at gasoline pumps by eliminating suppliers committed to the independent, non-branded discount market, two congressional committees were told today.

"The non-branded independent station is at the cutting edge of price competition," Jack A. Blum of the Independent Gasoline Marketers Council told a joint hearing of the Senate and House Commerce Committees.

"Because low prices attract customers and build volume, non-branded independents constantly test the price-volume relationship by selling at the lowest price at which they can operate profitably.

"If they can find low-priced gasoline at the refinery level, their low street prices will force the branded station prices down," he said.

Blum predicted that if Mobil succeeds in the takeover "there will be a wave of other mergers in the industry." He noted that Mobil refuses to deal with independent companies, whose prices average two to eight cents less per gallon than gasoline sold by the major companies.

The Federal Trade Commission is investigating Mobil Oil Corp.'s attempt to acquire Marathon Oil Co. for $5.1 billion. U.S. Steel Corp., in a move welcomed by Marathon, offered last week to buy 51 percent of Marathon's stock.

The FTC's antitrust chief was scheduled to testify but did not appear because of the lack of appropriations for the FTC and other government agencies.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate committee, said Mobil officials declined to testify. Packwood, who said he opposes the merger, said in exasperation, "Mobil has 212,000 employees, one of whom surely could be here."

Ohio Attorney General William J. Brown, who has opposed the merger in court, said the takeover would drive up prices in areas where Marathon sells gasoline to small retailers.

"Off-brand gasoline serves as an important check against the major oil companies," Brown said. He predicted Mobil's takeover of Marathon would end gasoline price wars in Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois, where independent companies resell Marathon products.

But Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House committee, said if Mobil is thwarted in the takeover attempt "it will simply look for another company to prey upon. The result, no matter what, will be one less independent competitor."

In a statement to be delivered later, a Marathon official said the Mobil takeover would hurt competition in its market area and violate antitrust laws.

Charles H. Barre, Marathon vice president, said, "Mobil's hostile offer drove us up the wall," but that U.S. Steel's offer was "fair and resasonable."

Brown said acquisition by U.S. Steel would allow Marathon to remain a separate entity and would avoid antitrust problems. In addition, employees of the Ohio-based Marathon company could be secure in their careers, he said.

DOE nails Navajo Refining

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — Navajo Refining Co. in Artesia has agreed to a proposal to refund $600,000 after allegations it might have overcharged its customers for gasoline and other refined petroleum products since 1973.

Navajo, a wholly owned subsidiary of the Holly Corp. of Dallas, refines crude oil and was subject to the mandatory petroleum price and allocation regulations of the U.S. Department of Energy.

Under terms of the proposed consent order, the DOE said Navajo "did not apply in a manner acceptable to the DOE provisions ... when determining the price to be charged for its motor gasoline and other refined petroleum products; and, as a consequence, may have charged prices in excess of the maximum lawful sales prices resulting in overcharges to its customers."

Navajo contends it has calculated all its costs, determined all its prices, and conformed in all other respects with applicable regulations.

But Navajo has agreed to enter into the consent order to avoid the expense of long, complex litigation and disruption of its business, the DOE said.

The order, which was executed Oct. 8, stems from Navajo's transactions involving refined petroleum products from September 1973 through December 1981, officials said.

Navajo is to refund $600,000, including interest to be paid in one amount, within 30 days after the effective date of the order, officials said.

When the terms and conditions of the order are satisfied by Navajo, the DOE will release Navajo from any civil claims the agency might have arising out of the settlement period, officials said.

The southwest district manager of the Economic Regulatory Administration in Dallas, a part of the DOE, said in the proposed order Nov. 5 that written and public comments on the proposal will be considered by the agency through Dec. 7.

The administration has signed and tentatively accepted the proposed order with Navajo.

But the administration may, after consideration of public comments, withdraw its acceptance and if appropriate, attempt to negotiate an alternative consent order, an agency notice said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Investing for retirement

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My husband will be 65 in a few months. I am 60. We are comfortably situated financially. Most of our money is in 182-day and 30-month savings certificates. But we do have about $4,000 worth of stocks. We own our modest home. Social Security and my husband's small pension will not be enough to support us after retirement. We will have to depend on our savings and investments for extra income.

Would it be wise to invest more of our savings in the stock market now, while stock prices are low? Or should we leave things as they are, so that most of our savings are insured?

Doyle

A. There's no getting around the fact that, by historic standards, the market prices of most stocks are low. As I put this through the typewriter, the average price-earnings ratio of the 30 blue chip stocks in the Dow Jones Industrial Average is 6.6. That's down from 7.9 a year ago and way below the levels reached many times in the past.

Many market observers and analysts feel that stocks are now at bargain prices and will move higher in the years ahead. I happen to agree. But neither this column nor any other source can tell you, for sure, when the stock market in general or individual stocks will move — up or down.

Anyone who can afford to take on the risk that goes with the ownership of stocks should consider putting money into the market.

But, as you outline your family financial situation, it's obvious you can't afford much risk. My vote would be to keep things as they are. The money you have in savings certificates is providing high interest and, because of federal agency insurance, is risk free.

The $4,000 you have in stocks will give you moderate participation in what we all hope will be a stock market recovery. But you really can't afford to put any more than that $4,000 out at risk.

Q. I have approximately $15,000 in a money market mutual fund. The yield on that fund had been above 17 percent and is now below 15 percent. The same mutual fund organization manages an income fund, which invests in bonds. I understand that bond values increase when interest rates decline. At what point should I transfer my investment from the money market fund to the income fund?

A. When you're convinced that the downward trend in interest rates we have seen recently will continue and that those rates won't turn around and head back up again — as happened a number of times in the past few years.

Trying to outguess the future direction of interest rates is no easy chore. Some of this country's biggest brokerage firms got egg on their faces by making predictions that interest rates were headed in permanent downward directions last spring, or even a year earlier. Each time, interest rates dipped and then headed up again.

When interest rates go up, the market values of bonds already issued and shares of mutual funds holding those bonds do down. Just the opposite happens when interest rates fall.

Just about everyone agrees that interest rates will go down and stay down, sooner or later. But no one can say, with certainty, when that will happen.

Q. I have $10,000 which I usually invest in 182-day savings certificates and use the income for myself. I am not employed. My husband earns around $37,000 a year. Would I be better off putting the $10,000 in an All Savers Certificate, which pays tax-free interest, so my husband wouldn't have to pay as much income tax?

A. Of course you would. You would save "family" tax dollars, not just "husband" tax dollars by having an All Savers Certificate. The "his" and "her" arrangement you now have is costing you money at tax time.

U.S. money often in counterfeiting

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — On a cool October day, French police acting on a tip from the U.S. Secret Service swooped down on two men at a Paris hotel shortly after their arrival from Geneva, Switzerland. Result — $500,000 in counterfeit $20 bills and two arrests.

Routine, says Harold G. Thomas, special agent in charge of the five-man U.S. Secret Service office in Paris, the only foreign-based facility of its kind in the world.

U.S. counterfeiting specialists, though lacking any arrest or judicial powers outside the United States, work closely with police from many nations in the struggle against what authorities call one of the most difficult crimes of all to solve.

According to Juan Luis Garcia-Llovera, the Spaniard who heads the anti-counterfeiting section at Interpol, the Paris-based international criminal police agency, 85 percent of all counterfeit money in the world is fake American dollars, and Europe is the favorite playground of manufacturers and distributors.

"In most countries, the problem of false dollars is bigger than the problem with their own currencies," Garcia said.

Why the dollar?

"People are less familiar with the money," says Thomas. "It is in effect almost an international medium of exchange, highly acceptable throughout the world. Regrettably also, in the opinion of many police agencies, it is an easier item to counterfeit than some European currencies."

Jean-Paul Coffre, deputy head of the French police's anti-counterfeiting force, agreed that the dollar is the biggest problem.

"That's because it is an international money and is relatively easy to counterfeit because there are only two colors, there is no watermark and the format has never changed," Coffre said.

According to Interpol, $16,931,780 in counterfeit American currency was seized outside the United States in 1980, compared to the nearly $65 million seized inside the country.

Moreover, there are nearly 8,200 different types of counterfeit U.S. currency, including 389 new ones that appeared in 1980 alone. The figures for types of counterfeits never decline simply because, under the U.S. system, all dollar issues are good forever, Garcia said.

Interpol still picks up phony U.S. currency made as far back as 40 and 50 years ago, he said.

The business of counterfeiting is changing with the times, both from a technical point of view and in organization.

Gone are the artists with the green eyeshades and magnifying glasses who spent long days etching plates by hand. Today's counterfeiters, like legitimate printers, prefer working with offset equipment and, like the police chasing them, are keeping a close eye on the development of color copier technology.

As always, however, paper remains the single biggest trip-up for the counterfeiters. Paper quality, texture and thickness is difficult to imitate and, with American currency, the red and blue fibers in the paper are a formidable obstacle.

The best work is what police call "bleached" counterfeits, where the crooks take real one dollar bills, bleach off the printing and reprint them with a higher denomination. But that is harder to do and requires printing the bills one at a time.

The problems for police are numerous. For one thing, printing plants are never in continuous operation. Typically, a printing operation starts up, prints a large quantity, and then shuts down again until all the money has been distributed, or a new order comes along.

"Organized groups are becoming more and more involved in counterfeiting," says Interpol's latest report on the subject. "Because of the activities of these groups, currency counterfeiting is now frequently connected with other kinds of crime, such as drug trafficking, exploitation of prostitution, arms and diamond trafficking."

"It's the same as in the drug trade," says Coffre. "It's not the chemist who directs the operation. And the networks are very compartmentalized, very closed. They are very difficult to follow because the people don't know one another. The printer makes the notes and that's all. It's not even he who is even going to hide the stock."

Some police successes are spectacular, however.

Earlier this year, a Danish yacht was seized in the Canary Islands. Investigators boarded the boat as part of a drug investigation. They found no drugs, but instead they stumbled onto $2 million in counterfeit dollars.

"Further investigation resulted in an additional $4 million being uncovered in Denmark," said Thomas.

Distribution is a labyrinth of wholesalers, semi-wholesalers, down to the small criminal in the street who tries to pass a few bills. The product is cut into smaller and smaller lots, and gets more expensive, as it goes down.

PATIO SALE

Check your attic, basement, garage and closets for good, but no-longer-used items — furniture, tools, . . . the list goes on and on. Every item should be priced, of course. You may want to combine your sale with a friend or neighbor. Choose your days, get your signs ready and place your ad in the Classified section. Your ad should list a few key items, give the date, time, and good directions.

A friendly Classified Ad-Visor will help you word your Garage Sale ad for maximum results.

FRESH CHRISTMAS TREES AND WREATHS SHIPPED DIRECT FROM THE VIRGINIA PLANTATION
You can have (or send to your friends) a Christmas Tree so fresh that it caresses your face with its soft foliage. The fresh needles will stay on the tree. We have shipped trees and wreaths to Texas friends for years.
The tree will be a groomed white pine just under six foot tall. It will be cut, wrapped in a net sleeve to protect it and shipped by UPS on the date you specify. The beautiful wreaths are pine, with cones and a big red bow—approximately 19" in diameter.
Delivered prices: Trees $29.95 Wreaths $17.50
