B. C. D. HEADS ARE TO BE CHOSEN SOON

The City Commission of Lubbock was to have gone into session here this afternoon with City Manager A. B. Davis, when various matters of great importance to the proper functioning of the several departments of the city government, were to have been discussed, including the naming of the Board of Directors consisting of fifteen members who will take the lead in the operation of the Board of City Development.

While no official announcement has been made in connection with the new plan for Chamber of Commerce work, especially in regard to who will be named on the Board of Directors, it was intimated in semi-official quarters that the corps of officials already had been selected, and would be officially designated at the next meeting of the commission. It was said, however, that full attendance of the commission would be required before definite action would be taken.

Both a board would be similar in many ways to the one now in the Chamber of Commerce, but the new board would have an increase of responsibility in that the organization takes on a much wider field of work. The directors, however, will serve without compensation.

Several other matters of more or less routine nature were to have been presented to the commission this afternoon.

INDIAN MYSTERY CASE GONE INTO BY FEDERAL MEN

DEATH RING THOUGHT TO HAVE RESULTED IN 20 DEATHS, IS PROBED

(By Associated Press.)
GUTHRIE, Okla., Jan. 8.—The battered skull of Anna Brown, first victim of an alleged death ring in the Osage country, was taken today before the United States grand jury here.

Simultaneously it was announced by Edwin Brown, assistant United States attorney general, who is in charge of the grand jury, that liquor is being given Indians, brought from the restricted lands to tell what they know of the death shadow that seemingly has hovered over some of their people.

Grand Jury Is Busy.
The grand jury is trying to determine the truth of rumors long forming that a powerful conspiracy to obtain Indian money to the extent of about $2,000,000 was responsible for the series of nearly twenty deaths.

No arrests have been made on charges of intoxication among witnesses, Mr. Brown said, but several Osages have been under the influence of liquor and it is feared their testimony might be affected.

Snow Reported in North Part Of Panhandle; Mountain States Get Relief
(By Associated Press.)
DALLAS, Jan. 8.—General snows throughout northwest and west Texas which made farmers and stockmen jubilant yesterday were driven slowly into north and central Texas last night and today. Milder weather prevailed in the interior, however, the temperatures ranging from 34 degrees at Amarillo to 42 at Galveston. MANY INJURED AS QUAKE SHAKES ITALY

SIENA, Italy, Jan. 8. (AP)—A score of persons suffered minor injuries and several hundred houses were damaged by a strong earthquake shock lasting twelve seconds, which rocked the countryside today. The entire population fled into the open.

A large section of Tuscany was affected, particularly the region around Monte Amiata.

The towns suffering the most severely were Abbadia and San Salvatore, the center of the mercury mining district where three persons were badly injured and all the houses damaged.

Other towns affected were Pian Castagnoli, Radicefani, Castel del Piano and Arcidosimo.

The first shock was felt at 10.15 a. m. After a lull the movement began again but with lessened activity. The prefect here has sent several aides to the district to aid the sufferers.

Apostle Paul Was Up-To-Date; He Had Stenographer, Said

CHICAGO, Jan. 8. (AP)—The apostle Paul had a stenographer who took down his letters in shorthand, Henry D. Lloyd, of the University of Chicago, declared in a thesis today. This fact, he said, was revealed through recent studies of the Greek papyri bearing the original scriptures.

That the writing of shorthand in those days was a definitely established trade is shown in Mr. Lloyd's thesis through a contract of 154 A. D. in which an ex-magistrate of Oxyrhynchus appointed his slave to a short hand writer.

Thalia Postal Head Disappears; Mystery Surrounding Facts

VERNON, Tex., Jan. 8. (AP)—Mystery surrounded the disappearance of Henry L. Fisher, postmaster and merchant of Thalia, who disappeared shortly after cashing a check for $250 at a Vernon bank between 1 and 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. A thorough search of this section of the state by officers has failed to reveal any clue as to his present whereabouts, and friends feel certain that he has been the victim of foul play, advancing robbery as the motive.

J. B. DUNLAP, SENTENCED TO ONE YEAR TERM IN RUM CASE, GIVEN CLEMENCY WITH TWO OTHER MEN

DREW GUN ON DEPUTY FORD AT TIME OF ARREST, IS SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT REPORT; SOLONS AID IN GETTING OTHER PARDONS

J. B. Dunlap, who was sentenced to serve one year in the state penitentiary at Huntsville, for alleged violation of the prohibition laws in Lubbock, was today granted a conditional pardon from Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, Associated-Press dispatches to the Daily Journal, said today. Dunlap has served more than half the time of his sentence, officers estimated here.

According to statements given the Daily Journal by Deputy Sheriff Verne Ford, who made the arrest in the case, Dunlap, together with A. B. Martin, was arrested in the southwest part of the city on February 25th, 1922. When Deputy Ford attempted to make the arrest, Dunlap, he says, drew a pistol and Ford was forced to make him drop the gun before succeeding in arresting the two men.

In addition to the pistol, which was of the "six-gun" variety, between five and six gallons of whiskey and a car was taken in the raid. Martin, Dunlap's companion, drew a two year sentence for his part in the case, while Dunlap, after an appeal, was sent to Huntsville for a one-year term.

Congressman Ask Clemency.
AUSTIN, Jan. 8. (AP)—Texas Congressmen signed a letter to Governor Miriam A. Ferguson asking clemency for R. E. Andrews, who today was granted conditional pardon. He was sentenced to two and a half years from Archer county for manslaughter in connection with slaying of Shep Melugin, his former business partner. The letter was signed by Congressmen Buchanan, Williams, Sanders, Connally, Wurzback, Garner, Hudspeth, Blanton, Garrett, Mansfield, Box and Johnson.

Lubbock Man Pardoned.
Conditions, pardon also was granted J. B. Dunlap, given a year from Lubbock county, for liquor violation; and a sixty day furlough was granted D. R. Calloway, given from 30 to 37 years in Upshur county for murder, to visit his father, who is seriously ill.

The letter from the congressmen recites that Andrews and Melugin were willing with their pocket knives when they became involved in a controversy about partnership property.

Both Men Aroused.
A heated conversation arose between the two men, Andrews struck upon Andrews. Andrews struck with an open knife in his hand in self defense. Melugin fell.

(By Associated Press.)

No information concerning the reported strategy would be given, officials said, until the mystery of the hydroplane had been checked up.

He was pronounced dead nine and a half minutes later.

Before stepping on the trap, Lawrence made a short statement, declaring he was "not guilty," and then asked several people who were present to witness the execution, to kneel with him in a seven minute silent prayer. The warden of the prison said Lawrence was the bravest man he had ever seen on the gallows.

Until a few minutes before going to the death chamber, Lawrence remained in his cell playing a guitar and singing a Spanish love song.

WALSH RECALLS

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—With Attorney General Sargent as the first witness, the senate judiciary committee today began inquiry into the failure of the department of justice to bring contempt proceedings against the Aluminum Company of America, in which Secretary Mellon is a large stockholder.

Besides Mr. Sargent, Assistant Attorney General Donovan and Chairman Vernon W. Van Fleet, Secretary Otis B. Johnson and Chief Examiner Millard Hudson of the federal trade commission, were called as witnesses in the inquiry, which is expected to cover a wide range affecting both the justice department and the trade commission.

Walsh Reads Letter.
At the outset Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, read from a letter written by the then Attorney General Harlan F. Stone to the trade commission in which it was held that the aluminum company had violated provisions of the constant decree of 1912. Among other things this decree forbade shipment of defective materials to competitors. Letters from agents of the company and from competitors charging shipment of defective materials then were read into the record.

Attorney General Sargent said he could not say exactly when he first knew there was an investigation being made of the aluminum case.

"All who work for temperance for the good of future generations. Every bootlegger, however, works and votes for prohibition."

"Compulsory operations have not been demonstrated to be effective. You cannot legislate to make a people good and no law can be enforced which has not the vast majority of the people back of it. Education is a most effective method of developing temperance."

Menus for the Family

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (AP)—Broadway and Fifth Avenue were equally curious today as to the reason for the absence of Mrs. Irving Berlin from the wedding of Consuelo Vanderbilt to Earl E. T. Smith yesterday.

When Mrs. Berlin returned from Atlantic City a few days ago, she said she planned to attend the ceremony and had come to New York for that purpose. All day yesterday she remained with her husband in their West 48th Street apartment guarded by Ivan, a huge Russian valet. Her name did not appear on the list of guests given out at the Vanderbilt home.

Clarence Mackay There
Her father, Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph company, who had not seen her since her marriage to the composer when Monday when he expressed his disapproval, was present with other members of his family.

Although the Berlins had planned a dinner party at Atlantic City tonight they remained in New York last night. They have reserved the presidential suite on the Leviathan leaving tomorrow but doubt as to whether they will go aboard has been expressed by the bride.

FAME

It is the fate of most newspaper men to write their names upon the shifting sands, but there are some, because of genius or some happy circumstance, whose works live after them. One of these latter was Henri Stephen de Blowitz, for thirty years Paris correspondent for the London Times.

Almost a quarter of a century has passed since the death of Blowitz without erasing from the memory of the newspaper world the name of this peculiarly famous reporter. He has become a sort of patron saint among the newspapermen of the world much as is the mythological Paul Bunyan to the woodsman.

That of Blowitz was a unique career. At the time he obtained his first newspaper job, although he stumbled into the profession his success was instantaneous. He was uncannily shrewd in finding hidden avenues to news, and always fortunate in finding first news of first importance. His immortal "beats" on the Spanish revolution and the Berlin treaty are recorded in the history of journalism.

Unlike others this Paris "News hound" won what fame is his because of his work as a reporter and not for some post-reportorial achievement. He was a great reporter, not a great novelist who had once been a reporter nor a great publisher who had his start writing obituaries.

TYRANNY

Much has been heard in this country of the paradise for wage earners which communism has created in Russia. Soviet missionaries to the United States have been singing the praises of this government of, by, and for the workers, with which the Russians are now blessed.

But how do the Reds reconcile this description of sovietism with the verified report of a strike of dock hands in Leningrad? A group of Russian workers, while loading a ship, went on strike for higher wages. The government rushed a detachment of Red soldiers to the wharf and drove the strikers back to their work. Instead of getting their wage increase the workmen were compelled to labor for average-five hours without pay.

In "capitalistic" America labor has established its inalienable right to collective bargaining. The striking wage earner in this country is bound the reach of government or law as long as he resorts to no violence. This is the sort of protection labor enjoys under a government which so-called leaders call "capitalistic". American labor has its grievances, but, at its worst, its lot was better than that of Russian labor under communism. Such tyranny as that in Leningrad was never known in the United States. Than class government there is no greater tyranny.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

PROLONGED RECESS TOUGH ON WASHINGTON BUSINESS MEN

By CHARLES P. STEWART NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8. — Just to illustrate what smash a long congressional recess plays with business in Washington, the last one drove the very old, widely known exclusive and really historic Shoreham Hotel into a receiver's hands.

The establishment was running along in perfect peace and prosperity until Congress adjourned early last March and is making money again since it convened early in December, but it got so far behind during the nine-month interval that it couldn't meet its current bills and a receiver-ship was necessary to avert legal proceedings which would have wrecked the property permanently.

The receiver expects to have the business pulled entirely out of the hole by the beginning of the next long recess, and probably then the management will cut out down on expenses to avoid a repetition of the present unpleasant experience.

I fore the war the capital was accustomed to these long summer recesses and its hotel men and others made due allowance for them.

Dating, however, from the latter part of 1914, congress sat almost continuously until its March, 1925 adjournment. Not that there literally were no breaks in the performance, but they were short—nothing like nine months and a little over.

In those 10 or 11 years Washington rather forgot what it was like to have the capital standing empty for a prolonged stretch and some of them neglected to change their business gearing promptly enough when the lawmakers left for home last spring. The Shoreham isn't the only enterprise which has suffered in consequence, though it's the most conspicuous one.

Journal Jobs

The most disagreeable of all kinds of conversation is an argument.

A person who has nothing to worry about can usually trump up something.

Keep your friends. Without them you will find life to be a very tiresome affair.

It is harder to make friends in these Volstead days when you cannot cultivate acquaintance by irrigation.

Why is it that Christmas is always accompanied by such universal impunctuousness?

The less brains a man has the harder he is to defeat in an argument.

When a man deliberately asks advice he is usually only seeking confirmation of his own opinion.

Chuckle Awhile

The Wildcat's Blunder

From the Washington Star:

A stranger, driving down a lonely Kentucky road, saw a big wildcat dash across the open window of a farmhouse. At the same moment he saw the farmer working in a field a short distance away. Whipping up his horse, he excitedly accosted the farmer.

"Is that your house?" he breathlessly inquired.

"Guess it is," drawled the man of the soil.

"Is your wife in the kitchen?"

"Ought to be," said the farmer.

"Then hurry home man, and see what you can do. I just saw a wildcat leap through the kitchen window."

"That so?" asked the farmer.

"Yes, man, hurry, hurry."

"Tell me, stranger," insisted the farmer, "was any body chasing that wildcat?"

"No."

"He went through the window of his own free will and accord?"

"Yes," replied the now thoroughly puzzled stranger.

"Then let him defend himself," concluded the farmer, as he returned contentedly to his task.

Rome Has Fallen

From the San Francisco Chronicle:

The worst has happened. Yesterday we saw a youngster lift his balloon trousers while crossing a wet spot.

The soda pop man with his basket of bottles made the rounds four times a day and did a roaring business. Frequently some member of the staff sent to the drug store for an ice cream "treat all around."

Barbara came in from a long dusty trip to the fair grounds one afternoon, just as the spoons were being laid down in the empty ice cream slushers. She pulled off her hat and dropped into the first chair at hand. Her hair lay in wet strings across her forehead.

Byers brought her a glass of ice water. "Sorry you came too late for the frozen dainties, Barbara," he said. Miss Hadger turned and left the group.

Barbara sipped the water. "These are the days when I'd like to get a thousand miles away from this career of mine and forget it ever existed."

Byers smiled. "Better get married. The city is full of wives dressed in cool lines, sipping mint lemonade on shaded porches this afternoon. Simplest thing in the world, young lady. Pick a good husky man to do the worrying and be fresh and dainty to meet him on the front porch when he comes home dripping and grimy on a hot summer's night."

"But there are more wives fussing over hot stoves in the kitchen than there are sipping lemonade," argued Barbara. "Don't talk to me about married bliss. I've seen too many married women."

Byers looked at her over his glasses. "Honest to heaven, Barbara you're getting to talk like a spinster of 54. Better cut it out, even if you do feel that way. Folks will think you're a disappointed woman."

Barbara was stung. "You and the rest of the world may think what you like," she snapped. "I'm sick of the imperfections of men, anyhow. From the time a girl is 21 or 22 they begin to ask why she hasn't married."

"The poor dears are so conceited they can't believe that any woman gets along without one of them of her own free will."

Byers retreated in mock terror behind a newspaper, his eyes twinkling at Barbara over the top of it now and then.

Instantly ashamed of her outburst, she walked away to her own desk. As she passed the city desk Wells looked up. "I have a hunch for a great story, Miss Hawley."

"Hear you and Byers fighting the old fight on love versus career. This is the idea. Hunt up some little wail in one of these maternity rescue homes and get her views on whether motherhood is worth the price."

"Then catch Ida Storey, the actress, while she's visiting her mother here, and find out whether she regrets sacrificing marriage for a career. Her name must be about 50 now, and her idea is one of the top five or six on the American stage. She'll tell the truth, too."

"I'll look up Ida this afternoon," answered Barbara. "I'm not equal to the rescue home today. The weather is sticky enough without hunting up any more messes. I hate all this cheap sentiment."

"Don't be too sure you'll find cheap sentiment at the rescue home. Mothers are pretty much alike, in whatever circumstances they may be. You may find some bona-fide emotion out there."

Barbara made the appointment with Ida Storey by telephone. Two hours later she was seated opposite Miss Storey on a wide porch in the residence section.

That's another personal question.

SPINSTERHOOD

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BARBARA HAWLEY is 25, self-willed and talented. Wanting to see life, she breaks with her fiancé, BRUCE REYNOLDS, an architect and gets a job on the Telegraph.

SOB JEFFRIES, police reporter introduces her to JEROME BALL, man about town. The three are at a roadhouse when a prominent man kills himself. Barbara connects LYDIA STACY, wealthy widow with the case by the means of a red scarf dropped by the suicide's unknown woman companion.

Mrs. Stacy likes Bruce, who is with a flimsy firm promoting Vale Acres. He ignores her advances so she refuses to invest in the firm and tells ANDREW McDERMOTT (managing editor of the Telegraph) that the firm is crooked.

Manners, Bruce's party, absconds. Publicity is given the affair, for which Bruce blames Barbara.

McDermott's daughter, Fancy, is in love with Jerome Ball. When Barbara's invalid mother dies, Barbara takes an apartment with Fancy and tries to cure the girl of her infatuation for Ball. Fancy accuses Barbara of wanting Ball herself.

VIOLETTA CRANBY, factory girl, wins Bruce through Barbara's "lovelorn" column. When they are married Barbara plunges into work to try to forget. McDermott sends her to cover a National Federation of Women's Clubs convention.

Manners, Bruce's party, absconds. Publicity is given the affair, for which Bruce blames Barbara.

Mrs. Stacy refuses to help Bruce. Then Barbara confronts her with the red scarf from the roadhouse. Mrs. Stacy does testify in Bruce's defense at his trial and Bruce is acquitted. Bruce and Violetta name Barbara in the street and Bruce ignores Barbara. At her apartment she finds a note from Fancy saying she has married Jerome and gone to Chicago.

Now Go On With The Story

CHAPTER XII

The summer wore on. Asphalt pavements began to soften and children ran barefooted after ice wagons in the streets of the city. September was ushered in with drought.

The Telegraph office became an oven, into which waves of heat swept from the composing room every time the door was opened.

The soda pop man with his basket of bottles made the rounds four times a day and did a roaring business. Frequently some member of the staff sent to the drug store for an ice cream "treat all around."

Barbara came in from a long dusty trip to the fair grounds one afternoon, just as the spoons were being laid down in the empty ice cream slushers. She pulled off her hat and dropped into the first chair at hand. Her hair lay in wet strings across her forehead.

Byers brought her a glass of ice water. "Sorry you came too late for the frozen dainties, Barbara," he said. Miss Hadger turned and left the group.

"Don't be too sure you'll find cheap sentiment at the rescue home. Mothers are pretty much alike, in whatever circumstances they may be. You may find some bona-fide emotion out there."

Barbara made the appointment with Ida Storey by telephone. Two hours later she was seated opposite Miss Storey on a wide porch in the residence section.

That's another personal question.

Isn't it, Miss Hawley?" said the actress when Barbara had made known her mission. "But I've never hesitated to tell the truth yet. Though I'll have to trust you to deal fairly with me in print."

The woman was at least 50. Barbara decided. Her stately figure, in a skillfully draped gown, might have been that of a much younger woman. But there were lines about her eyes and a somber droop at the corners of her mouth that spoke of greater age.

She lay in a wide swing and talked easily, without pause.

"I'll tell you my story, Miss Hawley, in a few words. And you can do what you want with it."

"I deliberately chose public life at the age of 20. I had everything then, youth, beauty and love. But there was one thing I did not have—fame."

"It's always the blessing you do not have that sets your pulses beating hardest. I threw away love and took ambition."

"It was swift sailing for a few years. I had better luck than most beginners, more praise, more money, more admirers. I know now that, while I never took it seriously, my fan mail had not a little to do with keeping me contented."

"You know it isn't only a pacific love affair that keeps a woman satisfied. Admiration from any source whatever helps to fill the needs of her emotional nature."

Barbara wondered if that was true. She thought of the night that Jerome Ball had told her he was to be married, of the unpleasant gap left

"But I grew older. Oh, of course, my professional life is still at its height. But personally, I found myself less attractive to my friends. The glamour of young success had died away."

"Both men and women sought me sprung up. As Barbara walked, large drops of rain began to patter on the sidewalk."

She hastened her steps. The rain became more violent and the wind swept in little eddies up the street. Barbara began to run. It was only a block to the street car line.

She reached the corner and crept close to a store front to avoid the rain. No cars came. She waited in the pelting rain for a long time. Then she left the shelter of the building front and began to walk.

It was quite dark when she reached home. Her shoes were sodden and her clothes dripped water. As she unlocked her door, the rain suddenly ceased and a flood of sunset light filled the sky.

"But a moment later the torrents began again."

Inside the apartment Barbara stood still and looked around her. No article had been moved since she left that morning. The stillness was broken only by the grip of rain along the gutters.

"The years after 40." What would the years after 40 be, if life was like this at 25?

Barbara went out into the kitchen and put the kettle on the fire. Then she laid a plate and silver for her self at the little table.

Suddenly she turned about, removed the kettle from the stove, turned

"Good morning," someone said to Barbara. "Yesterday you were talking like an old maid. This morning you seem to be on the point of buying a cat. Is it that bad?"

in her life by Bob's going to New York, of the sorrowless existence she had been leading the last few months.

Miss Storey went on. "Well, for a long time the game was worth the candle. I prospered in my work, made money, made some friends—as the prosperous always do."

"You understand you must handle this material with discretion?" Barbara nodded.

Miss Storey sat up in the swing. "If I had it to do over again, I'd marry at 26 and take what came. I believe that poverty and responsibilities and heartaches with someone you love are better than material prosperity and independence, alone."

"It's the years after 40 that are the nightmares, my dear. I don't care if you say that in the story. Old age alone is the most horrible fate a woman can meet."

Barbara looked at Miss Storey. Her eyes were burning and her voice was tremulous. She had changed miraculously, from the cool, poised woman of the world that greeted Barbara an hour ago.

Barbara was anxious to get away. The woman was telling her things that she did not wish to hear. She rose to go. "Thank you for giving me so much time, Miss Storey. I'll try to deal fairly with the story."

She was out of the house and walking down the quiet street. The sky had turned cloudy and a breeze had out the gas, and put the plate and the silver carefully back in their places in the cupboard.

Then she turned out the lights in the front rooms and went back to her bedroom. A few moments later she was lying on her face, in the darkness, listening to the dreary rustling of the rain outside her window.

The next morning was gray, overhung with clouds, but the rain had stopped.

Barbara caught the seven o'clock street car to town. Her face was haggard. She had fallen into a heavy sleep toward dawn and had waked too late for breakfast.

At a lunch counter near the Telegraph building she drank a cup of black coffee. Between the lunch room and the office there was a pet store whose windows usually attracted many small boys and girls and some older ones.

The window this morning was full of Persian cats, white, yellow and tiger. Barbara stopped to look at them. She stood looking at the magnificent animals, forgetful that time was passing. They looked like comfortable, domestic creatures. Barbara looked for a price placard.

There it was, "Twenty-five dollars."

She made a half motion toward the door of the shop.

"Someone said in her ear, 'Good morning, Barbara. Yesterday you were talking like an old maid. This morning you seem to be on the point of buying a cat.'"

"Is it that bad?" (To Be Continued)

"SOCIALISTIC"

Under instructions from Governor Donahy, the Ohio state university is to be "cleaned up" by weeding out all faculty members with "socialistic tendencies." If this policy were pursued in all the colleges of the nation it is possible that half the students would be barred. "Socialistic tendencies" is a very indefinite term, particularly in view of the fact that all men and women who think for themselves come under one of the three socialistic classifications—religious, political and economic. Just at present Lloyd George, premier of England, is leading a most pronounced socialistic movement in England by advocating nationalization of all land—and he has succeeded in having the plan adopted in com-

TODAY'S MARKETS

Cotton Markets

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (P)—Distinctly better trade advices from Liverpool and Manchester were followed by a very steady opening in the cotton market today. First prices were six to seventeen points higher on covering and fresh buying. March selling up to 30.88 and July to 18.97. These figures evidently attracted a good deal of realizing by recent buyers, however, while there also was a good deal of selling here to undo old straddles between New York and Liverpool. This checked the advance and caused quick reactions of 15 or 20 points. But the better British trade news steadied prices at the decline and the market was about net unchanged at the end of the first hour. Realizing attracted by the opening advance continued throughout the morning. The unsettled effect of the advance in the New York Federal Reserve rate as reflected by the action of the stock market apparently was responsible for heavy Wall Street selling of cotton in liquidation of long accounts. Commission houses realizing and liquidation also developed on the decline, which carried the price of March contracts off to 19.80 and the general list about 8 to 12 points net lower. Trading was quieter at midday with prices 4 or 5 points up from the lowest.

WOOL REPORTS

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 8. (P)—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say: A broadening interest in wool is apparent on the part of the manufacturers, who evidently have still some orders against which they must cover and who also very patiently think well of wool on its present price level. While there is no general advance in values the local market this week, there is some improvement in the price situation and in the foreign markets there is very evident hardening tendency in values.

The New Zealand sales resumed on Wednesday with prices up about five per cent in the grease. Mohair is full but steady. Quotations: Scoured basis: Texas fine 12 months (selected) $1.25@1.35; fine 4 months $1.12@1.17.

Stocks And Money

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (P)—Today's stock market reflected the unexpected increase in the New York Federal Reserve Bank rediscount rate after the close of the market yesterday. General Motors broke 3 points on the first sale and initial losses of one to nearly two points were recorded by U. S. Steel common, Bethlehem Steel, Williams-Overland, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Studebaker, Cerro de Pasco, American Car and Foundry, and Baltimore and Ohio.

Prices were carried down one to four points in the first wave of selling, but strong buying support soon appeared and a moderate rally from the low levels was under way before the end of the first half hour. Hudson opened 4 1/2 points lower at 113, but soon climbed back to 121 1/2. Early losses of 2 or more points also were recorded by Huntington Typewriter, American Smelting, United Clear Stores, Sears-Roebuck, Chesapeake and Ohio, and Allied Chemical. Norfolk and Western opened a point lower and then bounded upward to a new record high at 148 1/2. Peoria and Eastern touched 22, the highest quotation in over a year and Pacific Oil rose 1 1/2 points to within a fraction of its record high on the announcement of a distribution of its oil holdings. General Electric sold 5-5/8 points above last night's close, American Can 2 1/4 and Mack Trucks 2.

Speculative interest in the foreign exchanges was divided between a drop of nearly 5 points to $3.84 1/2 in French francs, and 10 point rally in Danish kroner to 24.88 cents on the establishment of a new $40,000,000 Danish credit. Demand sterling held firm at $4.84 1/2.

Grain Markets

CHICAGO WHEAT

CHICAGO, Jan. 8. (By the Associated Press.)—Wheat scored an early upward trend in price today here influenced by the strength of Liverpool quotations and by reports that forty per cent of wheat yield in northern Argentina is unfit for milling. The opening 1/4 to 2 cents higher, new style, May $1.77 1/2 to 1.77 3/8, and July $1.53 3/8 to $1.53 1/2, was succeeded by a downturn that in some cases went below yesterday's finish and then by a fresh upturn. Corn developed independent strength owing largely to offers to exchange merchandise for corn on the basis of a dollar a bushel corn within six months. After opening 1/4 to 1-3/8 cents higher, May $7 to $7 1/8, corn made additional gains and July delivery touched 90 cents. Oats sympathized a little with the strength of other grain. Starting at a shade to 1/2 cent up, May 45 5/8 to 45 1/2, oats continued firm. Provisions were upheld by the action of corn values and of hogs.

Potato Farmers Are Talking In Terms Of Millions In U. S. Now

HOULTON, Me., Jan. 8. (P)—Aroostook County potato farmers are talking in terms of millions today for the first time in five years. It is the central market price of $8.50 a barrel holds the value of last year's crop of 12,570,000 bushels from the world's potato center will exceed $40,000,000. The Aroostook farmer will not get rich but he will pay a good part of his fertilizer and bank indebtedness. In 1915, when potatoes sold for $10 a barrel, and again in 1920 when good prices prevailed—luxury buying was general. But not so this year. Hard times taught the farmer this lesson. He is paying his old bills. Did you forget anyone during the holidays. Read Eastman ad page 3.

MANY HUNGARIAN REBELS READY FOR COUP

INVESTIGATION OF PLOT TO PLACE KING ON THRONE BEGUN

(By Associated Press.) BUDAPEST, Jan. 8. — More than 100,000 men are said by investigators to have been available for the coup de etat which was to have placed Arch-Duke Albrecht on the Hungarian throne. Regulars of the national army to the number of 37,000 controlled by Admiral Horthy, the regent, 25,000 police, gendarmes, and customs officers and about 40,000 fascisti comprised the body. It is claimed that Horthy was fully in sympathy with the movement and willing to relinquish the regency in order that Albrecht might ascend the throne without hindrance. The latest facts in the situation seem to tend to show that Prince Ludwig Windisch-Graetz, at least, among the conspirators in the 30,000,000 French franc counterfeiting plot did not act entirely from political motives. It has been stated that the money obtained from floating the spurious notes was to have been used in furthering the ambitions of Arch-Duke Albrecht to secure the crown of Hungary. The semi-official Hungarian Telegraph Agency points out in this connection that these arrested for participation in the counterfeiting belong to different political parties and that this fact does not tend to bear out the charge that they were acting with political ends in view. Arch Duke Albrecht has issued a disclaimer, declaring that he had no relations, direct or indirect, with Windisch-Graetz for several years past.

TURK PAPERS RAP U. S. FOR ITS ATTITUDE

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 8. (P)—An explanation of the status of the Lausanne treaty in the United States Senate, issued by the American High Commissioner, Admiral Mark L. Bristol, draws a cartoon and editorial today from the newspaper, "Republic." Picturing Uncle Sam in an attitude of self-satisfaction with thumbs in vest and feet on the table, the paper prints a lengthy criticism of America's failure to ratify the treaty, which was signed in July 1923. "Admiral Bristol's explanation contains nothing positive," the writer says. "It merely confirms that Uncle Sam has a full stomach and plenty of money and is therefore in no hurry to make peace with us. England, who was our greatest enemy, has ratified Lausanne, but America against whom we did not even declare war, refuses. "We do not believe Uncle Sam's protestation of democracy and pacificism. If he rejects us and thinks we will make another against our interests it shows that he still misunderstands Turkey. "America's ignorance of eastern affairs is proverbial, but Uncle Sam's attitude toward us in this is the limit."

SEEK TO TRANSMIT PICTURES BY WIRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (P)—The chief difficulty in the transmission of motion pictures by wire, says V. K. Zworykin of the Westinghouse Research Laboratories, is that of subdividing the field into small enough units for transmission, so that when they are enlarged upon a screen they present a definite image of the object. Zworykin is the inventor of the light cell by which light impulses are translated into mechanical operations. He finds the problem of motion picture transmission theoretically possible, but the mechanical difficulties are by no means overcome. Another year may result in a solution. The light cell, which is a combination of the principle in the radio tube and a photo-electric phenomena discovered years ago by Halwach, is now used successfully by the All-American Cables for printing cable dispatches sent across the Atlantic. The electric impulse coming across the cable is so slight that hitherto it has been impossible to use mechanical printers to record the dispatches. The light cell catching the ray of light reflected from a mirror galvanometer, sensitive to the smallest electrical impulses, translates the light rays into electrical impulses strong enough to operate printing devices, which record the dots and dashes. Halwach discovered that the impact of light upon certain alkaline metals produced an electrical effect. Later experimenters showed that the light rays caused electrons to be discharged from the metal. In the Zworykin light cell a thin coating of the metal upon which the light acts is placed in a position such that the discharged electrons will add their impulse to the current in the radio bulb and permit current to flow. The process of amplification intensifies the current to a point capable of operating mechanical devices. The light cell also is used now in sub-station transformers on lines upon which heavy electrical currents are carried to detect smoke in case of fire, mechanically set off fire extinguishing devices and notify the nearest station from which employees can be sent to remedy the trouble. Mr. Zworykin said that the light cell was beginning to find wide application in industry. Among other things it is used mechanically to test the filaments of radio tubes. It enables them to be manufactured with uniformity which no other method of testing makes possible. The inventor has an apparatus in his home by which the electric lights are automatically turned on at dusk by employing the light cell. He said that the draughts in the furnace might be automatically opened as easily with the rising of the sun.

Explanation Made Concerning Rates Is Made In Texas

AUSTIN, Jan. 8. (P)—Lengthy explanation of the extension of the fifty per cent reduced freight rates on food-stuffs to the drought stricken area in central Texas to February 10 was made today in an opinion rendered by the Texas Railroad commission, accompanying the order. The commission held that an emergency continues in the area; commended the railroads for voluntarily entering into the pact, but extended the reduced rates from January 3 to February 10; over the protest of the carriers. Applicants urged that the rates be extended to March 1. The reduction was made in August.

BUFFALOES HAVE MOST OF GAMES AT HOME

CANTON, Texas, Jan. 3.—The West Texas State Teachers college Buffalo basketball team will play more games at home during the coming season than ever before. Fully two-thirds of the games will be played on the new gymnasium floor at the Teachers college. The new gymnasium is the culmination of the "dreams" efforts and money of the business men of Canton, the student body, and of President Hill, all of whom have been underlining their efforts in behalf of an adequate gymnasium for the accommodation of the great basketball teams which Coach Burton has never failed to develop. Mention should also be made of the assistance of the faculty, which contributed nearly $1,500 to the construction of the gym.

The gymnasium has a seating capacity of 1,000, and could be made to accommodate nearly two thousand. It is built of tile and is fireproof. As soon as enough money has been raised the interior will be plastered and the exterior will be pebble-dashed. The gym is heated at the present by four great stoves and is most comfortable even in the coldest weather.

For the accommodation of the student body the entire east section, seating about 650, has been reserved. The west section has been reserved for visitors, and has a seating capacity of 400 with room for enlargement.

No games will be called before eight o'clock in order that all people wishing to attend will be given ample time to secure seats and see the start of every game. This arrangement will allow out of town visitors who wish to arrive in for the games, plenty of time.

Buffalo Gym is the largest gymnasium in Texas, has a regulation playing floor, the highest ceiling, 28 feet, and is well lighted.

Cobb Set New Record Each Time He Entered Game

CHICAGO, Jan. 3. (AP)—Every time Ty Cobb participated in a ball game during the 1925 season, he established a new record.

He began by besting his own record of the greatest number of games played in by a major leaguer, and, as he went along, added others for times of bat, runs scored, and highest lifetime batting average.

When the season started Cobb held the record for highest lifetime batting average in the American League, with his percentage of .361 for nineteen years. At the end of his twentieth year he had gained a trifle by hitting .374.

Cobb did not maintain the average he had set for himself in runs scored, bases stolen, etc., per season. But if not adding to totals, he has tied Cap Anson's record for batting .300 or better for twenty seasons, but he has this on Anson—Anson hit his three hundreds for twenty years all told, missing two seasons, while Ty Cobb's twenty seasons have been consecutive.

Cobb began his .300 hitting in 1906. Anson began in 1876 and for fourteen years hit .300 or better, dropped out of the .300 class in '91 and '92 resumed in 1893 and ended his string in 1897.

Other records held by Cobb when the last season opened included total runs scored and total hits made. He held the record for 200 hits per season for nine straight years. He did not add to that, nor to his record of 100 runs a season for nine consecutive years. He did not break the base-stealing records during 1925, but he managed to add to his all-time total.

FISTIC SPORT TURNS TO GOLDEN STATE

By BILLY EVANS
California, noted in sport for years for the many great tennis players it has turned out, is now giving considerable attention to the boxing game.

Within the past six months California has completely upset the boxing status by overthrowing two champions, in each instance by comparatively unknown as far as a national reputation.

The first upset was the defeat of Frankie Genaro by Fidel La Barba. The flyweight title went with the decision in that contest. La Barba is now in the East to show his wares.

The second surprise was the defeat of Mike Ballerino, junior lightweight champion by Tod McKan. While not a class champion, Ballerino was a mighty tough one. Morgan knocked him out in nine rounds. That makes the new junior titleholder look pretty good.

Winning two major boxing titles within a year is going some. Another championship prospect is Jimmy McLarnin, who is fast growing into the lightweight class.

BOXING CHAMPS

California by the way is famous for the many sterling champions it has given to the ring.

Perhaps the most famous of all was Jim Cobbett. In winning the title from Sullivan, he provided one of the greatest fistic upsets of all time. The great John L. was considered invincible. Corbett wasn't conceded a chance.

Abe Attell ranked next to Corbett. Abe was a remarkable fighter. He so outclassed the featherweight field that most of the time he was conceding from 10 to 15 pounds to his opponents.

Attell was a pastmaster in nursing his challengers. He usually permitted his rival to have a slight edge in the first meeting, if the bout was a no-decision affair and Abe usually saw that it was. A return bout would be demanded.

In the second meeting Attell would hold his man even. As a rule there would be many disputes as to who really won. In the third clash Attell would outclass his opponent and then cast him aside in favor of some other contender.

In other words Attell was a business man. He was so good he had to figure his bouts out in advance.

GREAT PROSPECT

Others to win fame for California in the boxing game were Frankie Neil, bantam champion; Joe Thomas, middleweight title holder; Willie Ritchie, lightweight champion, and Jimmy Britt, so-called white lightweight champ.

Britt was a great little fighter but he lived in the days of Joe Gans, the colored phantom.

For a time boxing was dead in California due to legislation against the fight game. Later four-round affairs were permitted.

ANDY SMITH DIES AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3. (AP)—Andrew L. Smith, head coach of the University of California football team and one of the greatest players ever produced at the University of Pennsylvania, died today at the university hospital.

Smith, who was 45 years old, had been in the hospital since December 19, suffering from pneumonia. Recently pulmonary ulcers developed.

The all-American fullback of 1904 came here from California to attend the Pennsylvania-Cornell game on Thanksgiving Day. Two days later he went to New York to see the Navy-Army battle and exposure brought on a cold, which developed into pneumonia.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3. (AP)—Andy Smith, coach of the University of California football team, died today at the University of Pennsylvania hospital of pulmonary abscess, following bronchial pneumonia.

SLATON C. C. WILL GET BACK OF CAMPAIGN

(Special to The Journal)
SLATON, Tex., Jan. 3.—Slaton's Commercial Club being directed by its manager, J. J. Stone, together with the newspapers will foster and put on a local publicity and educational campaign for a general program of diversification. After the very acute disaster caused by the early freeze every body is coming to the concrete conclusion that the more feed, the more hogs and poultry is the solution that will unlock the farming interest the great secret and show the possibilities that await the farming interests of our country.

It will be upmost in the minds of both commercial and productive interests to safeguard and destroy the one-crop system as in this section of the world it is generally admitted that we have not, two, three and sometimes four or even six climatic conditions within a single year. Then we will plant the various products that will in all probability meet the general or adverse condition.

HIGH TRIBUTE IS PAID TO SOUTH BY NAVY MAN

AUSTIN, Jan. 3. (AP)—High tribute is paid to the navy of the Confederate States by Admiral A. O. Wright, ranking officer among the survivors of the South's naval forces, Captain W. H. McElroy, who is conducting research work in Texas on the vanished navy, said.

McElroy is studying data on the gray navy; the records of which were destroyed when the Confederate evacuated Richmond, Va.

Quoting Admiral Wright, Captain McElroy said: "When we consider the short time the Confederate navy lived and the difficulties it met with, we can easily realize that the organization was without parallel in history. It had 1,500 officers and 5,000 men. One hundred and fifty vessels were used for battle. It revolutionized naval warfare of that day, invented the first iron-clad ram, the first torpedo boat and the first successful submarine which did deadly work in Charleston harbor in 1864. It introduced rifled ordnance into naval warfare through what is known as the Brooke gun."

Some 300 officers of the United States navy were from the south and when the Civil war broke out, it was explained, they joined the South's naval forces.

"The cruises of the Alabama, the Sumter, Shenandoah, Florida and others read like romance," Captain McElroy said. "The individual daring of such men as Lieutenants Charles W. Reed, Dan Carroll and scores of others is entitled to memory. Admiral Raphael Semmes will go down in history as the greatest captain of a cruiser that ever walked a quarterdeck."

"Sfinney Smith Lee, Franklin Buchanan, Matthew F. Maury, James Dunwoody Bullock, Josiah Tattnall, John McIntosh Bell, Cateby R. Jones, Duncan N. Ingram, Pembroke Jones and many others will be remembered when the lesser lights of romantic history have been forgotten."

"The gallant defense of Mobile Bay, under Franklin Buchanan, the dash of the ram Arkansas down the Mississippi river to the relief of Vicksburg, the fight between the Virginia (also called the Merrimac) and the Monitor and the gallant work of Captain Cook off the coast of North Carolina are some of the outstanding events of Confederate naval history."

"We have mementos from some of these officers, but the history of the Confederate navy is closed. Each state took care to remember its Confederate soldiers, but no state made adequate record of the naval men, as they came from many states. We are making this effort to rescue from oblivion the records of enlistment, service and discharge of the Confederate sailors."

Admiral Wright, McElroy said, is trying to remove the stigma of desertion from 135 of his shipmates, midshipmen from the United States Naval Academy, who returned to fight for the South when the war broke out. After much bitter fighting in the naval forces, the admiral applied the torch to his own boat, the "Hampton" when Richmond was evacuated and General Robert E. Lee surrendered to General U. S. Grant.

For more than half a century no effort was made to find the records

HINT COMPROMISE ON FUSS OVER MOSUL

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 3. (AP)—Utterances in official circles and the tone of the newspaper comment on the London pourparlers indicates that the Turkish government is preparing public opinion for a compromise arrangement with Great Britain regarding the disposition of Mosul, in upper Mesopotamia.

"Turkey desires peace and tranquility," a high government official said to the Associated Press. "Under no circumstances does she want to launch on perilous adventures."

"Turkey is preoccupied with reforms. She wants to put her house in order. Her modernization schemes are extensive and she does not want to be diverted from them at present. It is for this reason that she is disposed to negotiate with England."

(Continued From First Page) Only one official expression was forthcoming during the day. That was the statement of Ray Lewis, United States district attorney, who declared that the unexpected developments had buoyed the hopes of federal authorities that the long list of crimes would be fully solved. Thursday's witnesses were those who found the body of Anna Brown, wealthy Osage woman, whose death early in 1925 was the first of seventeen which have been shrouded in mystery.

(Continued From First Page) knife struck a vital spot and no doubt the intention to kill never existed in the minds of either the defendant or deceased. Andrews Large Man. The deceased was a large man, weighing about 150 pounds. The defendant is tall and slim, weighing about 140 pounds. Both men had always been exemplary citizens, and this affair constitutes one of those unfortunate incidents which sometimes occur in the lives of good citizens and constitutes proper cause of intervention of the pardon power. "The defendant is not physically strong, is not blessed with a strong constitution. Close confinement will wreck his life. He has an invalid wife and four small children, ranging from 5 to 11 years old.

Request is Made. "We respectfully request your grace Mr. Andrews a pardon, first that justice may be done; second, from humanitarian principles, applicable to an invalid and small children; third, to save two honorable families and their children from the stain and humiliate that will unjustly follow execution of sentence.

"The penitentiary was not built for the incarceration of good citizens like Mr. Andrews or the deceased Mr. Helgins. Neither was it built to humiliate honored and honorable names, when no crime was committed, or when, as in this case, there was no intention to kill."

(Continued From First Page) greatest confidence," the attorney general said, adding that for that reason he did not give it his personal attention.

Papers Have Facts. Newspaper stories first called his attention to the case. At that time he understood it was before the federal trade commission for investigation.

"And, it is my understanding that it is still before that commission," he added.

The attorney general said he had not seen the letter of former Attorney General Stone until very recently.

"Didn't the newspaper stories suggest to you that Colonel Donovan was not doing his duty?" demanded Senator King, Democrat, Utah.

"They did not."

King Directs Probe. Senator King asked if the justice department had taken the view recently expressed by the chief executive in his New York speech that business has purged itself and there is no longer need to invoke the anti-trust and Clayton acts.

Onion Raising Is Very Profitable To School Teacher

Pneumonia Fatal To Mrs. W. L. Stith Thursday Night

Mrs. W. L. Smith, wife of a prominent Lubbock county farmer, died Thursday night shortly after midnight at the family home about six miles northwest of this city, from an attack of pneumonia. Deceased was nearing her 66th birthday. Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at Brownfield in charge of the Rix Undertaking company here. Burial will be made in the cemetery at Brownfield. Mrs. Smith is survived by her husband and several children; Miss Anna, formerly with the West Texas hospital here, but now in Amarillo; H. C. Stith, of Los Cruces, New Mexico; two other sons at Tulsa and a daughter who lives in Amarillo.

RAYMONDVILLE, Texas, Jan. 8. (AP)—This is a story of a school teacher who turned onion farmer and reaped a school teacher's salary into a $7,750 income from 50 acres of onion land. W. T. Holder came to Raymondville in 1916 as superintendent of the local high school. He supervised the school work for three years. All accounts agree that he did it well, but the urge to till the soil, plant the seed and harvest crops had gripped him as it has many a teacher, editor and follower of other sedentary occupations; but with this practical difference—superintendent Holder became farmer. Holder in name and in fact and made it pay.

He resigned as a pedagogue, after he had kept in touch with agricultural progress in the Raymondville area, and hopefully planted two acres in onions. The financial return was so satisfactory that he increased the acreage until last fall he had 50 acres planted in onions. The records show that last year he shipped 6,250 crates which brought $11,850. The cost of seed, planting, and cultivation was estimated at $4,100, while crates and harvesting cost $3,000, leaving a net balance of $4,750 or an average of approximately $141 an acre above expense. "It can be done, if one is not afraid of a little hard work and is willing to mix a liberal amount of science with his method of handling the crop," Mr. Holder said. This year Mr. Holder plans to increase his onion acreage to 65.

him in the face with a custard pie. That ought to get a good laugh." Since that distant era of film humor the gag man has had to think up several new ones. He was ignored by the producers of feature films, however, until comedy stars like Harold Lloyd and Charlie Chaplin began making feature-length comedies. Then some one called in a gag man to try his hand on a dull drama which everything else had failed to save from despondency. He injected several comic sequences and the result was miraculous. The staking story was re-floated and made port as a hilarious comedy-drama. Now that he has been accepted in the best of film company, the gag man is something more than a doctor called in to save pictures expiring from an over dose of gloom. He is assigned to the picture while it is yet a scenario and watches its growth carefully. Whenever possible he encourages the development of subtly humorous situations, striving for touches of human interest as well as for the frankly comic turn.

BRYAN MAN DIES. BRYAN, Texas, Jan. 8. (AP)—Roger Q. Austin, 33, wealthy land owner and cattleman of this section, died last night after a long illness. Yes, boys, the stakes are here.—Eastmans.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 8. (AP)—The movie industry is coming into its own. From a position of humble usefulness in the slap-stick comedy factory he has risen to a position of dignity and power in the field of the serious film drama. The man now used to be the fellow who, during the filming of a funny scene, jumped to his feet with sudden inspiration and exclaimed: "I have it. While the Sheriff is making love to the girl, Charlie hits south as southern Missouri. Snow in North Panhandle. The weather had cleared, however, in the Rocky Mountain region as the storm moved southward to north Texas. Snow fell virtually all night in the north Panhandle section and early today had reached nearly as far south as Dallas.

Snow, sleet and rain also had converted sunny Dixie into a land of juicy slush.

Rain and Sleet, Too. From the Ohio and Potomac rivers extending into middle Georgia and Alabama, the section was experiencing a steady chilling rain, generously intermingled with snow and sleet.

In the mountainous regions of Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, Virginia, Georgia and Alabama snow predominated, rain and sleet entering into the combination in the foothills and lowlands. Sporadic flurries of snow were reported from nearly all portions of the south yesterday increasing in volume as nightfall descended.

Transportation and communication facilities were affected and in virtually all southern cities street cars and tram schedules being thrown into the discard. Rainy overcast weather was predominant in Florida except the Miami region, where fair skies and balmy breezes prevailed.

Wichita Falls reported this morning that more than an inch of snow covered the ground in that section. It also was snowing today at Dallas, Waco, and Fort Worth.
