Lebanese army frees three Finnish soldiers

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The South Lebanon Army freed three of 23 captive Finnish soldiers late Saturday, a U.N. spokesman reported, but the militia commander said his troops would hold the others hostage until Shiite Moslems release 11 of his men.

In Tel Aviv, Israel radio reported earlier that four Finnish soldiers were released, but Timur Goksel, a spokesman for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, UNIFIL, said three Finnish privates were freed. He said they were turned over to the Norwegian battalion in the 10-nation U.N. peacekeeping force at the south Lebanese village of Ibel Saki just before midnight.

The Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army — SLA — had dropped its earlier threat to kill one Finn every hour unless the SLA troopers held by the Shiite Amal militia were freed. One Finn released earlier was reported badly beaten.

Goksel said the three released Saturday night "are OK."

He said the three had been held at the village of Qantara, which is in the area assigned to the Finnish unit. Two Finnish officers are still being detained at Qantara while the other Finns are being held farther east in the village of Adeissi, according to Goksel.

He said the 18 soldiers, who were stopped Friday morning at an SLA roadblock as they were returning from a leave in Israel, had been transfered from their army truck to a nearby house.

"They are allowed to go anywhere in the house and garden and to their vehicle, and we are in touch with them by radio" Goksel said.

He added that an Israeli officer and several Israeli soldiers were at the roadblock, apparently as obsrvers, when the Finns were stopped.

Adeissi is about 700 yards north of the border with Israel and is in clear view of U.N. and Israeli observation posts. Goksel was reached by telephone at his home in the Israeli border town of Nahariya.

About 50 soldiers from the SLA had seized 24 Finnish soldiers shortly after dawn Friday. This followed a purported attack earlier Friday by Finnish soldiers on SLA militiamen in Qantara, 6 miles north of the Israeli border.

Retired army Brig. Gen Antoine Lahd, now head of the SLA, said that about 50 soldiers from UNIFIL's Finland battalion raided a South Lebanon Army post in Qantara and captured 11 SLA militiamen.

He said the SLA men were forced out of the security zone, and were taken capive by Amal fighters.

Enthusiasm 'unflagging' despite loss

For two years, Jewel Boyd, 321 Cloud, flew his American flag outside his east Midland home with pride. With lighting at night, he announced his patriotism 24 hours a day and only stored the banner during foul weather or while he was out of town.

Saturday morning, however, Boyd awoke to an empty flagpole. During the night someone had cut the ropes swinging from the staff and absconded with the flag — a flag that had been dedicated in the Rotunda of the Capitol and sent to Boyd with a plaque signed by President Reagan.

Boyd had received the 3-by-5 foot flag as a gift for his contribution to the Republican Presidential Task Force. As a charter member, he also received a U.S. Senatorial Club "preferred member" card. Today, Boyd has only the box the flag came in.

What will Dallas hold for Baptists?

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

DALLAS — The question facing this week's strife-ridden Southern Baptist Convention, says one of its top educators, is whether it will still have room afterward "for all of us."

That fear hovered over the nation's largest Protestant body as its thousands of voting "messengers" prepared for the start Tuesday of decisive ecclesiastical combat.

It centered on electioneering and power politics, but the question of whether diverse views would remain tolerated rumbled in the tide of accusations, maneuvers and hardening lines of conflict.

Fundamentalists, working to retain the presidency, seek to require a stricter, literal view of all Bible accounts, while moderates uphold a heritage of individual freedom in interpretation.

The rupture is "hemorrhaging the life from our convention," says educator Roy Lee Honeycutt, president of the denomination's oldest, flagship seminary, Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville.

"We need leaders who will embrace our diversity as a blessing, who will sound the call to unity in freedom."

The fundamentalist wing, riding a modern wave of extra conservativism in a denomination that always has been generally conservative in beliefs, charges a "liberal drift" taints its agencies and seminaries.

"That's simply not true," says the Rev. William G. Tanner of Atlanta, head of the home mission board for the denomination of 14.3 million members.

However, the Rev. Paige Patterson of Dallas, a key strategist in the fundamentalist drive, contends there is a "movement to the left" in denominational institutions about the Bible.

Some have tried to "broaden the theological perimeters," charges the Rev. Thomas Hinson of West Memphis, Ark., urging establishment of "effective narrow perimeters of theology and methodology."

Moderates call such demands "creedalism" — requiring conformity to detailed creeds of belief, something Baptists historically have avoided.

Session not 'over' until water bill decided

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Although the 69th State Legislature officially closed shop at the end of May, the work won't be over until November when voters give a yea or nay to a water package that had dominated the work of the legislators.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, on Saturday said he will be on a committee that will work to inform voters about the water bill. He talked about the accomplishments and failures of the session and briefly judged the work of the govenor, lieutenant governor and speaker of the House.

"It's a good plan with something in it for all areas of this state," Craddick said of the water package. As a member of the committee appointed to sell it to the voters for their approval, he will be traveling throughout the state this fall. The ad campaign, he said, will be designed by George Christian of Austin.

The water package is divided into two constitutional amendments: the first is the general water bonds while the second is the agricultural loan program.

Other than the weeks of work on the water bill, Craddick said the next most important piece of legislation was the appropriations bill that was approved and tied in with a fee package.

"WE BALANCED the budget with the fee bill," said the legislator who completed his ninth session. "This is the first time we've seen a fee package. Without that, we couldn't have balanced the budget."

Craddick voted against the fee bill, calling it another tax bill. He said he would have preferred a different proposal that called for all agencies to cut their budget 10 percent across the board.

However, he favored the idea of setting up a commission to study colleges and universities. "A vast area of the money we spend in this state is for higher education, something like 40 percent. If the commission is run right, it will be beneficial to the state. It will study all the colleges to see if they will stay in existence," he said.

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin was threatened with being eliminated when one appropriations bill cut out funding for that school. The money later was restored for the next two years. Craddick said UTPB has a future and the commission should be able to justify it.

The indigent health care bill ranked among the more controversial issues of this session and Craddick voted against it in the special session. His negative vote came not because he thinks there is no need for indigent health care, but because no one could estimate what the programs would be costing in the future.

HIS ALTERNATE proposal, which was rejected, had suggested funding the pre-natal care program and then studying how much the others would cost over the long term.

The bill that passed by House Speaker Gib Lewis' tie-breaking vote "has some great programs," Craddick said, and it passed with the understanding it could be funded fully. But it could turn into a funding monster in the future. "We may be passing a huge tax bill to fund it in the future."

One item the legislators eliminated was the Texas Health Facilities Commission, whose purpose was to review large dollar items proposed by hospitals and try to avoid duplication of services in an area. But it fell under review by the Sunset Commission this year.

"There were so many people across the state that expressed concern with the commission. They said they had spent so many dollars to get their programs approved. A lot of things the THFC was doing could be done through the Health Department," Craddick said.

A change in the public's attitudes also brought change in the legislators' votes on several issues. Repealing the Blue Law has been brought up in every session he's attended, but this was the first time it passed. Additional sales tax expected from Sunday sales should amount to $45-47 million and "it's already been spent. The comptroller (Bob Bullock) estimated the amount and we used that figure in the budget."

The drinking age was raised to 21 under what Craddick termed a "public mandate." Adding to that was pressure from the federal government which had ruled that unless the state raised the drinking age, Texas would lose $100 million in federal highway funds.

Crowning of Miss June Teen marks celebration's beginning

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Juneteenth: A day to rejoice.

While no one alive recalls the Emancipation almost 120 years ago, thousands of Texans will celebrate the event, which marks the end of slavery for Texas blacks and the beginning of their freedom.

On June 19, 1865, Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger arrived at Galveston to re-establish federal authority and immediately issue an order declaring "in accordance with a proclamation from the Executive of the United States, all slaves are free."

That day, Galveston blacks held the first Juneteenth celebration. From there, the holiday spread throughout Texas, the South and the rest of the nation.

This week Midlanders will gather in observance of the historic event; preparing for its own Juneteenth celebration Monday through Saturday. The event is sponsored by the Tall City Lions Club and the Black Advisory Council.

Juneteenth organizer Roosevelt Campbell, said, "We'd like to have everyone come out and celebrate. It's a day to dance and eat. We want and welcome everyone."

The celebration kicked off locally Saturday with the Miss June Teen Pageant at the Yucca Theatre and the crowning of Yolanda Harrison, Miss June Teen 1985.

Also placing were Monica McLaughlin, first runner-up; Tamala Davis, second runner-up; Angela Colvin, third runner-up; and Lisa Dunn, fourth runner-up.

Other scheduled activities will begin Monday with a tennis tournament at 6 p.m. at Lee Freshman High School, Oak and Jackson streets; and a basketball tournament at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday at Booker T. Washington Park in Southeast Midland.

At 6:30 p.m. Friday, the official announcement for the Juneteenth celebration will be made and food and music will be served until Sunday. Booths will open at 6 p.m.

Fires follow bombings in Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A car bomb exploded with a deafening roar near the presidential palace where Argentina's president, Raul Alfonsin, was attending a ceremony with President Fernando Beluande Terry.

Officials said soon after the explosion late Friday, another car bomb exploded near the palace of justice, 12 blocks away. The capital also was engulfed in a power blackout and five fires blazed.

No one was reported injured in any of the incidents. One of the fires still was burning out of control early today.

Brig. Gen. Waldo Olivos, Lima's top fire official, blamed the fires on leftist guerrillas. He said the fire department recovered four unexploded bombs, and he said the cost of the damage probably would be in the millions of dollars.

There was no claim of responsibility for the fires, the blackout or the car bombs. Officials did not say who they thought was responsible for the car bombs or the blackout.

Carlos Rubio, of the state electrical company Electroperu, said the power failure was caused by damage to the national power grid in the Mantaro area, 300 miles southeast of the capital. He did not elaborate.

Guerrillas of the Maoist Shining Path movement have claimed responsibility for bombs disrupting power service in the capital and other Peruvian cities during the past five years.

Minutes after blackout, a man parked a Mercedes-Benz among the cars that had brought dignitaries to ceremonies at the presidential palace, police said. Police opened fire as the man ran away, but he escaped. The car then exploded with a deafening roar.

A Lima radio station quoted police officials, who it did not identify, as saying two people were arrested near the scene of the second blast.

Fires broke out in three branches of the Scala department store and two Lima supermarkets.

Olivos told a reporter all the fires had been caused by leftist guerrillas. He did not specifically mention the Shining Path, who are waging a campaign to overthrow the government.

Olivos said the fires were caused by incendiary bombs set off by timers. Police dismantled four similar bombs at a four-story shopping center in the upper-class suburb of San Isidro, he said.

The first fire broke out in a 5-story department store across from the presidential palace shortly after the car bomb explosion. It burned through three floors before being brought under control, fire officials said.

Fires were reported in two other Scala stores in San Isidro and in the Arenales shopping center near downtown Lima. Fires later broke out at supermarkets belonging to a chain called Todos in central Lima. One of those fires continued burning early today.

Olivos said 12 of the city's 15 fire coompanies been called out and eight additional companies had been summoned from the nearby port city of Callao.

Radio Programa quoted unnamed fire department officials as saying the firemen were running short of water.

Alfonsin, in Lima for a 24-hour visit, addressed a session of Congress Friday afternoon and told legislators there was a need for a joint effort by Latin American countries to deal with their staggering foreign debts.

Among the leaders attending the ceremony at the palace was President-elect Alan Garcia who is to be inaugurated July 20.

BAPTISTS

With all the sound-and-fury about doctrinal purity or impurity, the fight actually hinges on election of the denomination's president, who wields immense power over picking trustees who control church institutions.

Backed by fundamentalists, the incumbent Rev. Charles F. Stanley, an Atlanta pastor and television preacher, is expected to be opposed by the Rev. Winfred Moore of Amarillo, head of the Baptist convention of Texas.

Almost double the usual number of "messengers" — between 25,000 and 30,000 — were expected from across the country for the annual meeting from Tuesday through Thursday at the Dallas Convention Center.

A number of preliminary activities preceded the main event, with hundreds of out-of-town Baptists already thronging this predominantly Baptist, southwestern city.

For the last six years, the fundamentalist wing has held the denomination's presidency, gaining increasing strength on trustee boards, but still not majorities since only some trustees are rotated annually.

A key planner of the fundamentalist drive, Houston appeals court judge Paul Pressler, once explained that its tactics were "going for the jugular" — replacing trustees who control the denomination's agencies and seminaries.

There has "been some progress" in that objective, says Patterson, an associate pastor of the Rev. W. A. Criswell's huge Dallas congregation. Criswell has urged the denomination's 36,000 ministers to support Stanley.

Some leaders on the fundamentalist side have indicated their churches may withhold contributions from the denominational budget if Stanley is defeated.

"Blackmail," the threat was called by the Rev. John Hewett of Kirkwood, Mo.

Such rough rivalry, strange in church protocol, has broken out repeatedly in the struggle, with some fundmentalist backers secretly recording telephone calls, seminary lectures and conversations.

Liberals "are in the seminaries," says Stanley, a one-time leader in the Rev. Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority. Falwell, an independent Baptist outside the denomination, has backed Stanley, predicting a split if he doesn't win.

On the Baptist-run Baylor University campus, president Herbert Reynols says even some students have formed a "religious KGB" funnelling reports to the fundamenatalist camp.

Both sides have held rallies around the country to push their causes.

JUNETEENTH

Also slated will be a two-mile marathon race and a softball tournament beginning at 7 p.m. in the park.

At 10 a.m. Saturday, the Juneteenth parade will travel from the Northgate Shopping Center at Nobles Avenue to Lamesa Road, Front Street, Lee Street, Indiana Avenue and Washington Park.

Booths featuring barbecued meats, chicken, fried catfish, beer and soft drinks also will be available.

In addition, live and recorded music will entertain guests throughout the celebration.

On Sunday a gospel musical will be presented at Mount Rose Baptist Church beginning at 2:30 p.m. Featured speaker will be Frederick Douglas Haynes III.

Of the religious ceremonies scheduled during the Juneteenth celebration, Campbell said, "We must have religion. The basis for all our movement has been through the religious medium."

A quasi-scholar on black history, Campbell noted that not all blacks observe Juneteenth. "Some would rather celebrate on July 4. I can respect that," he said. "Had there not been a 'Freedom Day,' there'd be no need for an Independence Day either."

Persons wishing for more information on the celebration or who wish to enter the parade may call Charlie Jackson at 699-1627, Gloria Robinson at 685-6600, Tony Lightfoot at 682-6030, Gloria Ellis at 683-7463 or Campbell at 683-2334.

CRADDICK

AN OPEN container bill, which would have prohibited open containers of alcoholic beverages in vehicles, didn't pass but Craddick said it probably will in the next legislative session in two years. "DWI and fatalities from drinking are on the upswing. People are more aware of the problem," he said.

A law calling for all drivers and passengers in the front seat of vehicles to wear seat belts was passed but has yet to be signed by Gov. Mark White.

White, said Craddick, "offered no leadership during the session. There was a lot of question during the session as to whether he would support various issues," such as the Blue Law repeal or seat belt requirement.

The opinion isn't partisan, he contended. "It's a general consensus. He had very little input into the session. I'd heard a lot of that comment from the Democrats and Republicans."

With some Republican names being mentioned as an opponent to White in the 1986 election, Craddick predicted that the governor can be beat. "He is a good campaigner," Craddick admitted, "but there are a lot of negatives behind him. He's vulnerable."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, a Democrat, was a "very strong leader and exercised a lot of leadership in the Senate," he said.

FLAG

"My wife and I always like looking out the window and seeing 'Old Glory' flying," he said. "It was real special to us."

Although Boyd joked about how the thief must have thought he was doing a patriotic deed, he has little hope in recovering the flag.

"Whoever took it, took it out of meanness," said his wife, Lela. "Just plain meanness."

The theft is not the first time the Boyds have had trouble.

"We had our home broken into about three years ago," said Boyd. "And there was a house down the street that was broken into also."

Still, the 50-year resident of the Permian Basin maintains a healthy attitude.

"I've lived in Wickett, Goldsmith and Odessa and there's just no place like Midland," he said. "Towns have character just like people do and Midland has a real good character."

The grave of Wolfgang Gerhard is in Graz, Austria's, St. Peter cemetery. Gerhard is suspected of having helped shelter Josef Mengele and other Nazi war criminals.

Woman indicates man may have been Mengele

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Police questioned a woman Saturday who said she harbored Nazi war criminal Dr. Josef Mengele for nearly 18 years, strenthening suspicions that a body unearthed near here is that of the notorious "Angel of Death."

Romeu Tuma, the federal police chief in Sao Paulo, said the statement by Gita Stammer, a Hungarian immigrant, "was the most important evidence so far" indicating the body was that of Mengele.

Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal said his original skepticism about Mengele being dead was lessened when he learned that West German police had targeted the grave after finding letters Mengele may have written to a family attorney.

"I am less skeptical than I was at the beginning," Wiesenthal told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from his New York City hotel. "I changed my opinion when I heard from what source this is coming."

Mengele became known as the "Angel of Death" because of his sadistic medical experiments on inmates at the Auschwitz concentration camp. He also is accused of sending hundreds of thousands of Jews, Poles, Gypsies and other prisoners to their deaths during World War II.

He would be 74 if alive.

Sao Paulo coroners began studying the exhumed body Friday, one day after removing it from a grave in Embu, 17 miles from Sao Paulo. The man buried there used the name Wolfgang Gerhard and drowned while swimming in the sea at a Sao Paulo resort in February 1979. Tuma said identification could take "a few hours or a few weeks."

Mrs. Stammer's statement indicated the real Gerhard, an Austrian who served in the German army during World War II, "was apparently responsible for Mengele's security in Brazil" and could be "part of an international network to protect Nazis," Tuma said.

He said federal police had asked Mrs. Stammer to go to their headquarters for questioning Friday, and she returned home after giving investigators a statement.

Mrs. Stammer told police that in 1961 she hired a man called Peter Hocheichlep, a Swiss citizen, to administer her farm in Araquarara, 172 miles from Sao Paulo. Hocheichlep was introduced to her by Gerhard, she said.

According to Tuma, Mrs. Stammer said she soon became suspicious of Hocheichlep's "strange behavior" and his refusal to accept payment for his work.

"Whenever people came to visit, Peter would always rush over to ask who they were. He avoided being photographed," her statement said.

In 1962, Mrs. Stammer said she saw a newspaper photograph of a man who was identified as Mengele and resembled Hocheichlep.

"I confronted him with it and he admitted he was Mengele," she told police. "Wolfgang (Gerhard) tried to calm us down, saying no one would ever discover the presence of the Nazi in our home."

She said Gerhard promised to move Mengele from the Stammer home but never did. She said she did not denounce Mengele to authorities because Gerhard "made veiled threats that something could happen to our children."

Mengele lived at the Stammers' farm until 1975, when he moved into a house bought by the family on the outskirts of Sao Paulo, Mrs. Stammer's statement said.

She described the man she believed to be Mengele as "a very authoritarian person."

Foundation calls for more park funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Park Service needs more money to protect and maintain historical sites and wilderness as well as to acquire more parkland, the Conservation Foundation said Saturday.

A foundation report, "National Parks for a New Generation," advocates spending an additional $50 million a year for 10 years for such protective measures as wild animal control, renovation of historic sites, research and training of staff specialists.

While the Reagan administration has proposed a three-year moratorium on parkland acquisition, the foundation's report recommends earmarking $200 million a year to buy land for new parks.

William K. Reilly, the foundation's president, told reporters at a briefing on the report last week that since land prices were certain to rise, "I never thought acquisition moratoriums made any sense at all."

Though the fast land-buying pace of the 1970s cannot be renewed, national parks are particularly needed in the Florida Keys, the Tallgrass Prairie area of Kansas, Big Sur on the California coast and Lake Tahoe on the California-Nevada border, the report said.

"These places belong in the national park system. The longer the nation delays in putting them there, the greater the cost and the larger the risk of degradation."

In addition, "protective acquisitions, to defend existing parks, are increasingly needed."

Congress should give the National Park Service a stronger voice in decisions about federal land adjacent to parks, perhaps through a formal consensus-seeking mechanism such as is found in the Endangered Species Act, the report said.

"In a country that relies on internal combustion engines and coal-fired power plants, for example, the haze at some of the western parks is unlikely to disappear soon. Thus, despite the nation's best efforts, continuing pressures will produce some resource degradation — gradual, barely perceptible in many places, but degradation all the same."

Drug dealers found using lottery, banks, to launder money

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — This island has long been a favorite of American corporations, its kindly tax laws a lure to the profit-minded.

But now Puerto Rico seems to have become a haven for another type of businessman as well. Drug traffickers, searching for ways to launder millions of dollars, apparently have been welcomed by obliging bankers at several friendly savings and loan institutions.

On Friday, affidavits were filed here in federal court relating to the Thursday arrests of 17 men, including 13 current or former bank officials. The documents not only describe a network of allegedly corrupt bankers, but also tell of chicanery involving the common man's favorite way to invest: the lottery.

"You simply state, 'I hit the lottery,' " Hector Rey Balaguer is quoted as coaching an undercover IRS agent, who was pretending to be a drug dealer.

Rey is described as ringleader of several "acaparadores," persons who seek out lottery winners and repurchase their winning tickets at a price higher than the prize. The acaparadores then earn a 10 percent to 13 percent commission reselling the tickets to drug traffickers, or other tax evaders, who need a good explanation for acquiring a large sum of money.

U.S. law, which applies to the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, requires financial institutions to report currency transactions over $10,000. Drug dealers need a "cover" for their illicit profits.

On this island, where the lottery has been a mania since 1814, the weekly game offers a first prize of $125,000. Special holiday lotteries award a $1,000,000 prize.

The more conventional way to launder drug money, however, is through a cooperative banker who neglects to file Form 4789, the currency transaction report.

Suspicions that bank laws were being ignored prompted a federal task force known as Operation Greenback to begin an investigation here. During the past 18 months, undercover agents have approached bankers about laundering schemes. Thursday, more than 200 federal officers made a coordinated raid on 10 banks.

Among those arrested was Guillermo Rivera Guerrero, a branch manager for Western Federal Savings Bank. According to one affidavit, he blithely advised an undercover agent about the best way to choose a phony name and Social Security number to place on certificates of deposit.

Officials say Contras hurt, but regrouping

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A Nicaraguan army offensive launched at the beginning of the year has dealt a crippling blow, but not a mortal one, to the rebels fighting the leftist Sandinista government, Western observers say.

The military assault has been growing in strength and is apparently aimed at sweeping the rebels out of the country, or at least sharply reducing their effectiveness, the sources say.

"I don't think they (the army) will reach their goal," one military analyst said. "As long as there are safe havens, the Contras (the anti-Sandinista guerrillas) can always retreat, regroup and come back.

"But it does look like the army is having some success, at least for now," in moving the rebels back across the borders of Honduras and Costa Rica, he said.

The military and Western sources spoke on condition they not be identified.

The offensive began in January in Jinotega and Nuevo Segovia provinces, both on the border with Honduras, where the largest of several rebel armies maintains its base camps.

But in recent weeks the heaviest fighting has shifted south toward Nicaragua's border with Costa Rica, where a smaller rebel force, the Democratic Revolutionary Alliance, or ARDE, had been operating with little opposition. The group is headed by Eden Pastora, the rebel leader known as Commander Zero.

Pastora was a Sandinista hero during the revolution that ousted President Anastasio Somoza in 1979, but he broke with the revolutionary government over its close ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union.

"It looks like the army is giving Pastora a pretty good pounding and driving him back across the (San Juan) river" into Costa Rica, said the Western analyst.

The Sandinista air force said it heavily bombed three ARDE camps this week on the Nicaraguan side of the San Juan River, which forms part of the border with Costa Rica.

On Friday, the military high command in Managua said its troops had overrun several ARDE camps and were preparing to assault another, known as La Penca.

La Penca long has been a command post for Pastora, who in more than three years of fighting along Nicaragua's southern border has been unable to make major territorial gains.

"The question is why they (the army) are putting so much effort into dislodging ARDE," said a Western diplomat. "Pastora has been fairly ineffective and they never seemed to worry much about him before."

But another Western source, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said Pastora managed recently to reinforce his troops with new men and equipment, apparently with funds acquired from private donors in Miami and elsewhere.

"It looks to me like a pre-emptive strike," that source said.

It is not known how many men Pastora commands. He claims more than 5,000, but other estimates put the figure at about 1,500 to 2,000.

Six months ago, the army began moving about 40,000 peasants out of border areas in Jinotega, Nuevo Segovia and three other northern provinces. It said it wanted to create unpopulated free fire zones for its campaign against the Nicaraguan Democratic Force.

Latin American governments to probe violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four Latin American governments will form a committee to investigate what Costa Rica claims was Nicaraguan aggression last week when two Costa Rican civil guardsmen were killed and seven others wounded in a border incident.

The Organization of American States approved a resolution Friday night asking the governments of Venezuela, Mexico, Colombia and Panama to set up a fact-finding committee to investigate the May 31 incident and to report its findings to the OAS.

The action followed a day of diplomatic maneuvering that began with Nicaragua voicing opposition to the request only to join later in the unanimous approval of the resolution by the 31-member body.

Nicaragua had expressed concern that OAS involvement in the dispute would undercut the Contadora peace mediation process. But the drafters of the resolution sidestepped that issue by giving the same four governments that make up the Contadora group the responsibility of naming the fact-finding committee

Soviets crush Afghan guerrillas

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A Soviet armored column smashed through the last guerrilla defenses and relieved the besieged Afghan border town of Barikot after two weeks of fierce fighting, rebel officials said Saturday.

They said that elite Soviet commandos were battling anti-communist resistance fighters on nearby mountain tops Saturday.

Barikot stands at the head of the Kunar Valley close to the border with Pakistan. Guerrillas forces have besieged it for months at a time for the past four years and it has had to be resupplied by air for the past year.

A senior official of the anti-communist Ittehad-i-Afghan guerrilla alliance said Soviet tanks and armored personnel carriers reached Barikot late Friday night. The armor, he reported, spearheaded a force of Soviet troops about 10,000 strong which was unleashed in a major offensive three weeks ago to seize the Kunar and lift the siege at Barikot.

"But we are not finished. The mujahedeen (Moslem guerrillas) are still strong," said the official, who spoke on condition he not be named.

Soviet troops entered Afghanistan at the end of 1979, and presided over the ouster of one Marxist government and its replacement by another. The Kabul government now is supported by an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops. The rebels operate from bases in Pakistan, bringing arms and supplies across the border.

One guerrilla official said of Saturday's news from the Kunar, "It looks like a big victory for the Russians."

Thousands of villagers were fleeing the valley, trying to get across the mountains into Pakistan, the guerrillas said.

Vietnam denies holding American POWs

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam's official radio said Saturday that any U.S. hostility toward the communist country "would only do harm to efforts seeking Americans missing in action" in the Vietnam War.

The Radio Hanoi broadcast said allegations that Vietnam had tortured American captives and forced them to work in labor camps were groundless.

U.S. authorities say 2,441 servicemen and 42 civilians are listed as missing in Indochina. Hanoi has repeatedly said that it holds no more U.S. prisoners of war.

President Reagan said Thursday that Vietnam must give the "fullest possible accounting" of American missing in action before normalization of U.S.-Vietnamese relations can be considered.

WORLD in brief

Polish dissident ousted from trial for sixth time

WARSAW, Poland (NYT) — One of three Polish dissidents on trial charged with fomenting unrest was ousted from a Gdansk courtroom Friday for the sixth time in the last five days.

The incident began when the court played what was said to be a surreptitiously made tape recording of a conversation last Jan. 25 that the Polish police had with one of the other defendants, Bogdan Lis.

At one point another defendant, Adam Michnik, who, with Lis and Wladyslaw Frasyniuk, stands accused of plotting an aborted 15-minute general strike, leaned forward to hear the tape better.

The gesture drew a warning from the judge, Krzysztof Zieniuk. When the tape had ended, Michnik, a 38-year-old historian, said the judge's remarks were "motivated by personal animosity."

Michnik was then ordered removed from the court.

According to relatives of the defendants, who, unlike foreign reporters, were allowed into the courtroom, the tape recording was practically unintelligible. One defense lawyer said he was able to note down only six words while listening to the 55-minute recording.

Earthquake kills miners

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A wall of rock collapsed in a gold mine passage two miles underground, killing at least eight miners, operators of the Western Deep Levels Gold Mine said Saturday.

They said one man was still missing and two injured workers were rescued.

The collapse Friday was caused by a tremor that measured 2.8 on the Richter scale, a company spokesman said. He said emergency crews rescued the pair of workers during the night and recovered eight bodies.

All the victims were about 10,500 feet below the mine's entrance at the time of the accident, said the spokesman, who spoke on condition he not be identified. The mine is located near Carltonville, 66 miles west of Johannesburg.

An earthquake magnitude of 2.0 is about the smallest that can be felt by humans, and a quake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in populated areas.

Hungary holds election

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The people of Communist Hungary voted Saturday for representatives to Parliament and local councils in the first election under a law that requires at least two candidates to run for almost all seats.

The 1983 law is unique in a Soviet bloc country.

Final figures were not expected before late Sunday, but officials predicted nearly 100 percent of the 7.5 million voters would take part.

State-run television reported about an hour before polls closed at 6 p.m. that 80 percent already had voted.

Although a record 71 candidates ran for Parliament's 387 seats without backing of the Patriotic People's Front, an official, Communist-dominated mass organization, several voters showed little enthusiasm.

"The whole thing doesn't interest me a bit," said a woman in her 50s. "My pension will not be increased, and my rents won't go down either."

"I don't care at all who is on the list" of candidates, she said. Like others who spoke to The Associated Press, she insisted that her name not be used.

Members of Hungary's small dissident community, who failed to get on the ballot, said the meetings at which candidates were nominated were manipulated. They withdrew their call for a voter boycott, saying it was unrealistic because most people feared to stay away, although voting is not mandatory.

Ambassador leaves

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte has been able to make great progress in many areas of El Salvador's public life, but judicial reform has been too slow, said departing U.S. Ambassador Thomas F. Pickering.

Pickering left his post in El Salvador after 22 months on Friday for reassignment as the new ambassador to Israel. The United States has not named his replacement.

Meanwhile Friday, a military spokesman said leftist guerrillas blasted a key microwave antenna near Santa Ana, cutting most communications to countries to the north.

Lebanese militia vows, 'We're staying'

JEZZINE, Lebanon (AP) — Entrenched atop hills surrounding this strategic town, militiamen of the South Lebanon Army vowed Saturday never to surrender, despite pressure from President Amin Gemayel and threats by Moslem forces.

"We are strong, we have guns and we're staying," said a young tank commander in Kfar Falous, six miles east of Jezzine.

"If we go, Jezzine falls," said the commander, who called himself Abu Rsas — Arabic for "father of the bullets."

Jezzine, the main Christian town in south Lebanon, has been ringed on three sides by Moslem militias since the Israelis withdrew in April.

The town and its environs, swollen by some 40,000 Christian refugees, has become war-torn Lebanon's latest flashpoint because of its strategic position.

The Israelis want to retain control, through the SLA, of the salient that juts northward from their border into Lebanon and that opens into the Syrian-controlled Bekaa valley.

Moslem warlords want the SLA out to deny Israel a springboard for any future strikes into Lebanon and to widen their own territory.

The stalemate over Jezzine has heightened fears of a major showdown between the mainly Christian SLA and fighters from Moslem militias.

Justice Minister Nabih Berri, leader of the main Shiite Moslem militia, Amal, stepped up pressure on Saturday to force the SLA garrison holding Jezzine and its hills.

He said Amal would free 11 SLA men if Israel released Moslem guerrillas it was holding and ordered the SLA's commander, retired Lebanese army Brig. Gen. Antoine Lahd, to withdraw from Jezzine.

Berri has refused to free the 11 SLA men in return for the release of 23 Finnish U.N. soldiers kidnapped by the SLA on Friday and still held on Saturday.

Abu Rsas, a thin, bearded fighter in his early 20s, said his men did not expect any surprise attack by Moslem and leftist militiamen entrenched less than a mile down the hills.

"If they try to advance, we're ready for them with a surprise," he said.

Peacekeepers' doubts grow

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Countries that have contributed soldiers to a U.N. peacekeeping force say the kidnapping of 24 Finnish soldiers and other incidents in southern Lebanon are increasing their doubts about the force's effectiveness.

Similar frustrations and weariness led to a United States to peacekeeping pull-out in 1984 andan Israeli pull-out this week.

"We are increasingly concerned and increasingly question the continued usefulness of the force," said Norwegian Ambassador Tom Vraalsen, whose country provides a 650-man battalion to the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon known as UNIFIL.

Britons detained on East German mission

New York Times News Service

BONN — Soviet troops rammed a parked car carrying three British officers on a reconnaissance mission in East Germany, then detained them for five hours after searching the vehicle, the British military command said Friday.

No injuries were reported in the incident, which occurred on Tuesday.

British officials said that during the incident a Soviet officer took from the car a bag containing binoculars, a camera, a tape recorder, maps and personal effects of one of the officers.

The Soviet soldiers also threatened the British officers with rifles before releasing them, according to Hugh Babington-Smith, a spokesman at the British military headquarters in Rheindahlen, West Germany.

"We do not know why this happened," a British spokesman said. "We did nothing unusual or provocative."

Britain retaliated by withdrawing an invitation to senior Soviet officers to attend a military parade and reception in West Berlin marking the birthday of Queen Elizabeth II.

The three British soldiers are members of a military liaison mission in Potsdam, East Germany, which is similar to the unit of Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson Jr., the U.S. Army officer who was shot and killed by a Soviet sentry March 24 while taking photographs through the window of a Soviet tank shed near the town of Ludwigslust.

The Soviet Union said the major was in a restricted area; the United States said he was not. The incident led to a strong protest by Washington, including a demand for compensation, and led to a further cooling in American-Soviet relations.

The British, American and French teams carry out regular intelligence-gathering patrols around East Germany, often using cars and jeeps crammed with electronic equipment. Three similar missions from the Soviet Union are accredited to the erstwhile American, French and British occupied zones in what is now West Germany. The missions' activities, which date from a 1947 arrangement, amount to legally sanctioned espionage.

The liaison units are known for their occasionally dangerous adventures, which in East Germany have included temporary detentions, car rammings and scuffles with Soviet and East German soldiers.

A year ago, a French soldier was killed near Halle in East Germany when his car was rammed head-on by a heavy-duty East German military vehicle in what some members of the liaison teams regarded as a thinly disguised homicide.

Western diplomats in Bonn said that the incident this week was the first case of a hostile Soviet action against an allied liaison mission in East Germany since Nicholson's death.

According to British military spokesmen, the British patrol car had been parked on a country side road leading into a main road at least three miles from the nearest restricted military area. A Soviet military convoy was approaching on the side road when two Soviet jeeps broke away and rammed the car so hard that the tires came off two of the wheels. Soviet soldiers also threw bricks and shovels at the car, the spokesmen said.

The British car managed to reach a nearby village and stopped to make repairs, officials said.

Castro urges general strike on debt payment

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HAVANA, Cuba (AFP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro has urged Latin American countries to organize a "general strike" on payment of their debts.

In am impromptu speech lasting 2 1/2 hours to the Congress of Latin American Women this week,, he also warned of "social revolutionary explosions" if industrialized countries did not agree to a new economic order.

Affirming that industrialized countries and the International Monetary Fund were refusing to negotiate with indebted countries, Castro said: "As they don't want a club of indebted countries, and refuse discussions, they will have a strike."

He added that the best way of staging such a strike would be to reach a "consensus" and said that to stall debt payments "is not a radical formula, it is a realistic formula."

Castro also asserted that "payment of the debt is impossible from economic, political and moral standoints." Stating that this was not a "declaration of war," he said there was a need to negotiate and resolve the problems, but that cancellation of debts was not enough — a new international economic order was required.

Reagan plans tactics for tax battle

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Fearing that tax reform may hurt rather than help many middle class taxpayers, opponents of President Reagan's massive plan to overhaul the nation's tax code will this week launch new assaults to stop federal tax deductions for state and local taxes.

Meanwhile, Reagan and his top aides gave their clearest signal yet that they see repeal of deductions for state and local taxes as a way to prompt a tax revolt in states where taxes are high to support large local or state governments.

"Perhaps, if the high-tax states didn't have this crutch they might have to cut their taxes," Reagan said.

He added—in a veiled reference to New York Gov. Mario Cuomo—that officials from high-tax states refuse to say they'll do this "but perhaps they should take a poll of their constituents to see if they would like a tax cut."

Since the income tax system itself was adopted in 1913, taxpayers who itemize have been able to deduct their payments for state and local changes. Critics argue that this cushions the tax burden for the upper-income taxpayers who itemize.

A central part of Reagan's tax reform plan is to prohibit further deductions, a $40 billion revenue-raising item. Until Friday, his argument has been on equity grounds; that it is unfair for taxpayers in states with local taxes (or, as in the case of Texas and Florida, with no state income tax at all), to "subsidize" taxpayers in high-tax states.

When asked directly if this goal of fomenting a local tax revolt did not run counter to his promotion of "federalism," of transferring decisions from the federal to governments back home that he says are closer to the people, Reagan indicated he still favored that premise, too, and didn't seem disturbed by the apparent inconsistency.

His new communications chief, Patrick Buchanan, said that while raising revenue was the primary goal of repealing local and state tax deductions, spurring a tax revolt was a laudable "ancillary consequence."

Buchanan said repealing the state-local tax deductions would hurt what he called "neo-socialist" governments that levy high taxes to "redistribute wealth" and said it will cause taxpayers "to be taking a long look at what they're getting for their taxes."

Buchanan, who said another goal of the Reagan tax reform was to tilt the tax system in favor of "traditional" families where the husband works outside the home and the wife takes care of the children, quipped that with repeal of deductions for local taxes "we're not going to shore up Mario Cuomo's family."

After the first full week of tax reform hearings, qualms were being expressed from influential Republicans that for all the rhetoric about helping Main Street Americans, the impact might be a tax hike for many taxpayers.

In addition, Republican Reps. Bill Frenzel of Minnesota and Carroll Campbell of South Carolina said that the proposed tax reform plan gives at least the appearance of inequity, when multi-millionaires would be paying the same tax rate of 35 percent as couples making $70,000 or more.

Republican as well as Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee began working privately on proposals to put in a higher top rate for the wealthy, something which Chairman Dan Rostenkowski unexpectedly revealed in a breakfast meeting with reporters on Thursday, much to the consternation of his staff.

Reagan has proposed consolidating the current 15 tax rates into three, with the top rate dropping from the current 50 percent to 35 percent. A fourth rate would be set 10 percent or more above that, presumably for persons making well above $70,000.

Reagan didn't think much of the idea, nor did his current chief of staff Donald Regan, who supervised preparation of the original Treasury tax reform plan as Treasury secretary.

But the current Treasury chief, James Baker, while not commiting himself to a fourth rate, said all aspects of the tax reform package were on the table in negotiations with tax-writing committees of Congress.

All three men contested the view that the Reagan plan could hurt the middle class.

Academic purists, such as John Makin of the American Enterprise Institute, object that "this is stupid," and will make matters worse when the tax reform plan already seems destined for choppy waters. A fourth rate for the wealthy would send them a message to "not let loose of their tax advisors yet," and to expect to keep pursuing tax shelters in the future.

Economic purity is the last concern of Republican politicians, however, who know that Reagan is selling tax reform on "equity" grounds in the hope that this will be a vehicle to realign the country politically and make the GOP the majority party.

If tax reform turns out to be a tax hike for the top fifth of the nation's taxpayers, Republicans know they may face retribution, not realignment, especially in a time when the economy already seems headed for unpredicted lows.

Weakest septuplet has 'slim chance of survival'

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — The weakest of the four surviving Frustaci septuplets "has a very slim chance of survival," and her parents kept a vigil beside the infant girl Saturday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

"Baby D, Bonnie Marie, continues to be in very critical condition in the newborn intensive care unit," added Telma Ulmer, a communications operator at Childrens Hospital of Orange County.

"Babies A, C and E — Patricia Ann, Stephen Earl and Richard Charles — continue to show daily improvement and are stable," Ms. Ulmer said.

All the children were listed in critical condition.

Hospital spokesman Doug Wood earliertold reporters that Bonnie Marie wasn't expected to survive the weekend.

Samuel and Patti Frustaci of Riverside took turns by their daughter's hospital crib. They and other relatives have kept vigil on the infants since Thursday morning.

The babies have hyaline membrane disease, an illness common in premature infants in which the lungs lack a substance called surfactant, and tend to collapse with each breath.

None of the infants weighs more than two pounds, and all remain on life-support systems, Wood said.

Andrea Reynolds, the companion of Claus von Bulow, arrives at Providence, R.I., Superior Court Saturday morning as the jury enters its second day of deliberations in von Bulow's retrial.

Jury deliberating Von Bulow case

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The jury deliberating the attempted-murder retrial of Claus von Bulow Saturday began reviewing medical testimony offered by both sides, a move interpreted by the defense as an "encouraging" sign for an acquittal.

There was a 75-minute delay in the start of the review as the transcripts and documents were gathered.

The jury asked Superior Court Judge Corinne P. Grande Friday to go over testimony of three doctors — two for the state and one for the defense — on the cause of Martha "Sunny" von Bulow's first coma.

Dr. Ralph DeFronzo, a Yale University endocrinologist and defense witness, had rebutted the testimony of Drs. George Cahill and Robert Bradley, who agreed that insulin injections triggered the temporary coma.

DeFronzo said the coma was caused by a lack of oxygen to the brain and that his study of hospital records showed there could not have been an excess of the sugar-regulating hormone in her body.

"Don't announce when you go to the jury room that you've already made up your mind," she said. "Never hesitate to change your opinion if it's wrong. Don't let pride stand in your way."

— Superior Court Judge Corinne P. Grande

Von Bulow, 58, is charged with causing that coma in 1979 as well as a permanent one a year later by injecting his heiress wife with insulin.

The jury deliberated for three hours Friday after receiving instructions from Grande.

"Don't announce when you go to the jury room that you've already made up your mind," she said. "Never hesitate to change your opinion if it's wrong. Don't let pride stand in your way."

Chief defense attorney Thomas P. Puccio said the request for the medical testimony was a "pretty good" sign for the defense since von Bulow's lawyers relied exclusively on a medical argument in its four-day presentation.

The testimony of DeFronzo and other medical experts called by the defense was designed to cast "reasonable doubt" on whether insulin caused the comas.

But Assistant Attorney General Henry Gemma said "it's impossible to tell" what the request for the testimony means.

"I can't infer anything from that question," Gemma said. "That's all it is is speculation."

Gemma said the longer it takes the jury to decide on a verdict, the more likely the chances for a guilty decision.

It took a Newport County Superior Court jury six days to find the Danish-born aristocrat guilty of both attempted-murder counts in 1982.

Von Bulow was sentenced to 30 years in prison, but the convictions were overturned by the Rhode Island Supreme Court last year on state constitutional grounds.

The retrial has lasted nine weeks. The sequestered jury was expected to work today, since a verdict was not expectedSaturday.

Von Bulow declined comment on the jury's request for testimony, but earlier said he felt "very confident" about the pending verdict.

In her 50-minute address to the jurors, Grande urged them to keep flexible minds while debating the testimony and evidence presented by 42 witnesses during the six weeks of testimony.

Von Bulow faces up to 40 years in prison if convicted on both counts.

Von Bulow jurors are 'like a family'

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Claus von Bulow's attempted-murder retrial has turned 14 strangers on his sequestered jury into "Trivial Pursuit" junkies, restaurant connoisseurs and an extended family.

They've also become tourists at state expense as authorities have tried to entertain them during the six weeks they have been housed at a motel to shield them from from any outside discussion of the trial.

"Of course they miss their families," said Providence County Deputy Sheriff Walter Vincent. "But they've become just like a family themselves."

Thomas P. McGann, the court's public contact officer, played social director during the trial, keeping the 10 women and four men occupied while they weren't hearing testimony on the Danish-born socialite accused of twice trying to kill his wife with insulin injections.

On Friday, two of the jurors were named alternates and dismissed as the remaining 12 set to work on trying to reach a verdict.

The jurors and their sheriff's department "chaperones" have visited more than a dozen Rhode Island restaurants — from steakhouses to all-you-can-eat chicken shops and pizza parlors — and taken walking tours around Providence and Newport, McGann said.

They were taken to Boston's Fenway Park, where they saw the Red Sox beat the Texas Rangers 6-0, and to Providence's Trinity Square Repertory Theatre to see Noel Coward's "Present Laughter."

They also got to see the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus and bowled four games each at a Johnston bowling alley.

"We try to make it as homey as possible, to get them away from the hotel," McGann said, adding that they didn't go too far away. "We like to spend state money within the state."

The cost of sequestering the jury has added up to $2,000 to $2,500 a day, or roughly $16,000 a week, including Providence Holiday Inn rooms at the government rate, transportation, meals and entertainment, said Court Administrator John J. Hogan. It also includes the sequestered juror pay of $30 a day, including weekends.

When not playing tourist, the jurors have been able to use the motel swimming pool and look through newspapers — literally, because there were large holes where von Bulow trial stories were excised. They also read books that Superior Court Judge Corinne P. Grande brought from the library.

And they played cards and "Trivial Pursuit," pitting "the men against the women," Vincent said.

They also had visits from their real families, including one on Mother's Day, and spoke to them by phone — with a deputy listening to make sure the trial wasn't discussed.

'Billie Jean' heroin ring cracked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Authorities have broken up a $9 million heroin ring that featured commissions on sales and benefits for families if a dealer got arrested.

Joseph diGenova, the U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, on Friday released a federal indictment charging 13 members of the "Billie Jean" heroin ring with conspiracy to distribute the drug.

"Billie Jean" was the name given to a particular brand of heroin and the organization that distributed it, the indictment said.

Police identified the head of the organization as Willie Lee Clark of Washington. Five of those indicted, including Clark, were arrested over the past two days and another four were already held on other charges, said Police Chief Maurice Turner, noting it was the second drug organization in the city broken up this week.

DiGenova said the group, which had been operating since October 1982, grossed between $4 million and $9 million a year and limited its distribution to the city.

Policy expected on 'basic compliance' with SALT II

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration plans to announce Monday that it will remain in "basic compliance" with the unratified SALT II treaty limiting nuclear arms, according to published reports.

Unidentified sources quoted in The Washington Post and The New York Times said the president also was likely to agree to some deviations from the treaty in response to purported Soviet violations.

The Post quoted an official as saying there would be "appropriate responses" to any violations. The Times said officials described the policy as involving "proportionate responses" — the phrase used this week in a Senate resolution calling for general adherence to the treaty.

Reagan is at his Camp David, Md., mountain retreat this weekend. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said a report to Congress and a public announcement of the SALT decision would be made Monday.

The report to Congress, required under a military spending bill approved by Congress last year, was due by June 1, but the president told Congress he wanted a few more days to decide.

Meanwhile, 29 members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Friday asked Reagan to abide by the treaty as long as the Soviets do. On Thursday, the Senate passed a resolution urging continued but modified compliance with the treaty — a move that Speakes said Reagan welcomed.

Speakes said Reagan had asked cabinet members who wished to do so to give him their advice in writing, and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger had done so. Weinberger is reported to favor abandoning the treaty on grounds it is unverifiable and the Soviets already have violated it.

The United States should "continue to take steps that will not undercut the SALT II agreement provided the Soviet Union does likewise."

— House Foreign Affairs Committee

Speakes also said Reagan had received a long cable from Secretary of State George Shultz, who has been conferring with NATO allies in Lisbon, Portugal. Shultz and the allies generally have supported continued observance of the treaty's limits while talks continue in Geneva in search of a new arms agreement.

Reagan denounced the 1979 treaty, which was never ratified by the Senate, as "fatally flawed" during the 1980 presidential campaign, but said after taking office that the United States would abide by its limits as long as they were observed by the Soviets.

The president has accused the Soviets of violating SALT II by testing more than one new intercontinental ballistic missile. America's newest Trident nuclear submarine, the Alaska, scheduled to begin sea trials in September, would push the United States' active nuclear-weapons arsenal above the treaty's 1,200-missile limit.

Reagan could decide to ignore the treaty provision or pull an older missile sub out of service.

U.S. officials, speaking on condition they not be identified, have said Reagan also is considering whether to go ahead with preparations for testing of the Midgetman missile. The relatively small, single-warhead weapon is recommended by a presidential commission as an eventual successor to the MX missile.

The MX is now in production and was tested as the United States' single new long-range missile permitted under the terms of the treaty.

In their letter, the majority of the House committee said the United States should "continue to take steps that will not undercut the SALT II agreement provided the Soviet Union does likewise." It said Reagan should consult with the committee before any changes are made in the policy.

Chairman Dante B. Fascell of Florida led all 25 Democrats on the committee in signing the letter.

Other Democrats who signed were Lee H. Hamilton, Ind.; Gus Yatron, Pa.; Stephen J. Solarz, N.Y.; Don Bonker, Wash.; Gerry E. Studds, Mass.; Dan Mica, Fla.; Michael D. Barnes, Md.; Howard Wolpe, Mich.; George W. Crockett, Jr., Mich.; Sam Gejdenson, Conn.; Mervyn M. Dymally, Calif.; Tom Lantos, Calif.; Peter H. Kostmayer, Pa.; Robert G. Torricelli, N.J.; Lawrence J. Udall, Ariz.; and Robert Garcia, N.Y.

Of the 17 Republican members of the committee, the four signing the letter were Benjamin A. Gilman, N.Y.; Jim Leach, Iowa; Olympia J. Snowe, Maine; and Ed Zschau, Calif.

'Smoking' paper shot down Devine

By Gene Grabowski

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donald J. Devine might have narrowly won Senate confirmation to head the civil service system for another term if a single sheet of paper had stayed buried in the government bureaucracy.

Throughout his stormy four-year tenure as director of the Office of Personnel Management, Devine warred with federal employee unions and congressional Democrats who opposed his job cutbacks and campaign trips for Republican political candidates.

But despite the controversy, most Senate Republicans backed him until they learned about what is being called "the smoking document" — the executive order Devine signed while still OPM director. It was intended to empower him to run the agency from a subordinate post after his term expired and while he awaited a confirmation vote.

When that document surfaced last week, the 48-year-old former political science professor withdrew from the nomination process.

"It looked like a very down-the-line partisan thing until the incident," said one Senate aide who spoke on condition he remain anonymous. "The smoking document did it. The Republican votes were there for him until then."

Devine's reconfirmation chances effectively ended Wednesday, when acting OPM Director Loretta Cornelius told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee about the order Devine signed in March while still OPM director that gave him power to run the agency as her executive assistant.

Cornelius recalled that she noticed agency orders bearing Devine's signature in late April and eventually found the document in an assistant director's safe.

When she confronted Devine, Cornelius said he asked her to lie about the matter. "Couldn't you say you knew about it?" she quoted him as saying. The next day, she forced Devine to leave OPM.

Republicans control the Governmental Affairs Committee, 7-6, but aides said that after the Cornelius testimony, probably no GOP members would have voted to recommend Devine's reconfirmation by the full Senate.

"You might have gotten away with it if we hadn't come up with the smoking document," panel member Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., told OPM general counsel and longtime Devine friend Joseph Morris at Wednesday's hearing. "You and your boss, the dictator Devine, cooked up your plan and hid the order deep in the filing system where you thought nobody would find it."

But before he withdrew, Devine told the committee his maneuvering was routine and that he never intended to deceive anyone.

"I assure you it was a simple housekeeping matter," he told the committee. "That piece of paper wasn't all that important. It was of a technical nature...Government executives routinely step down but still run their agencies while awaiting reconfirmation."

But government executives rarely stir the kind of bitter opposition Devine faced from federal employees.

"For four years, federal workers have been harassed by Devine," said George King, public relations director for the National Treasury Employees Union. "It was harassment, and a lot of arrogance. It was his style, in addition to substance. He was the antithesis of what we're looking for in this country in terms of modern managerial technique."

Said Sandra Arnold of the National Federation of Federal Employees after Devine withdrew: "A weight has been lifted off the shoulders of federal employees everywhere."

Conservatives, however, said Devine was victimized by those who oppose his political views and his attempt to institute government pay raises based on performance, not cost-of-living factors.

"It's a tragedy! He was lynched!" said Thomas Winter, editor of the conservative weekly "Human Events." "This is frivolous nonsense about his delegation of authority. These lawyers can't see the forest from the trees."

Before the turmoil over his attempt to retain control of OPM, Democratic opponents had stalled Devine's reconfirmation by focusing

NOW protests pope's abortion stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1,000 people, mostly women, marched through the streets of the nation's capital Saturday to protest the Roman Catholic Church's opposition to abortion and contraception.

"Abortion is a woman's right. When will the pope see the light?" chanted the crowd as it walked slowly from a grassy downtown park to the National Conference of Catholic Bishops headquarters several blocks away.

Judy Goldsmith, the National Organization for Women's president, placed a hand-written placard in front of the locked building in memory of the women "who have suffered or died because of the Catholic hierarchy's callous opposition to safe, legal abortion and birth control."

Many of marchers carried signs such as one reading: "Stop the pope's opposition to birth control."

Police Sgt. E. L. Drescher estimated the crowd at between 1,000 and 1,500. There were no arrests or unlawful incidents, he said.

At one point, however, the marchers and a lone anti-abortion protester, standing on a street corner with a sign, yelled at each other.

Besides Washington, NOW planned similiar rallies and marches — dubbed "Witness for Women's Lives" — in 13 other states Saturday.

"We are gathered here today...to reaffirm that the moral, compassionate, just position is pro-choice," said Mrs. Goldsmith in a speech prepared for delivery at a rally.

She said NOW has moved to challenge the Catholic Church's positions with marches and rallies because the church hierarchy is lobbying against abortion and contraceptives.

"When the hierarchy lobbies Congress and state legislatures...it is trying to impose the beliefs of an all-male hierarchy of one religion on Catholic and non-Catholic women," she said.

"The hierarchy has a right to be politically active, but they cannot do it cloaked in a religious immunity," she said.

The church hierarchy's "escalated political activity in 1984 was not simply in legitimate support of candidates who shared their views," she said. "Catholic leaders launched a hateful and vitriolic attack on the first woman vice presidential candidate in this nation's history — Geraldine Ferraro."

One of the marchers, 22-year-old

Judy Goldsmith, center, president of the National Organization for Women, leads marchers in Washington Saturday protesting the Roman Catholic Church's birth control stand.

Second death penalty possible for convicted murderer Coleman

CINCINNATI (AP) — A man already sentenced to die for one murder and facing other charges in a six-state crime spree was found guilty again Saturday, of aggravated murder, and could face another death sentence.

Jurors deliberated for 16 hours over three days before returning their verdict against Alton Coleman, 29, in the July 11 strangulation of 15-year-old Tonnie Storey, of Cincinnati. The jury found him innocent of an additional charge of aggravated murder to hide Miss Storey's rape and robbery.

When asked if he was concerned by the verdict, Coleman replied: "Why should I be?"

The jury was to decide today whether to recommend the death penalty or a prison term, following a mitigation hearing.

His girlfriend, Debra Brown, 22, was convicted Friday of the same crime, also with death penalty option.

Judge William Morrissey said Ms. Brown's jury will decide her sentence Monday.

Judge Simon Leis Jr. scheduled the sentencing hearing for noon today, in order to give Coleman time to prepare a statement to present to the jury.

Coleman declined when Leis offered a free psychiatric examination before the hearing.

The Waukegan, Ill., couple, who have declared they are common-law husband and wife, were convicted last month in the beating death of Marlene Walters, 44, of suburban Norwood and the beating of her husband Harry, 46. Coleman was sentenced to die in that case. Ms. Brown was sentenced to life.

Miss Storey's decomposing body was found in a vacant Cincinnati apartment building July 19, eight days after she disappeared.

Authorities in Toledo and in Lake County, Ind., also are waiting to try the couple on murder charges following the crime spree through Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin and Kentucky.

Defense lawyers said it was likely that the pair next will face the Toledo charges, for the stranglings of Virginia Temple and her daughter Rachelle, whose bodies were found in a crawlspace in the their home last July.

The couple also has been sentenced to 20 years in federal prison after they pleaded guilty in Dayton to the kidnapping and robbery of a Kentucky college professor.

Klansmen ordered to pay

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A federal jury Saturday ordered eight Ku Klux Klansmen, Nazis and police to pay $355,100 to the widow of one of five Communists shot to death in a 1979 anti-Klan rally in Greensboro.

The panel, ruling at the end of a 13-week trial of a $48 million civil suit, on Friday had found the eight liable in the wrongful death of Michael Nathan. The panel rejected charges of conspiracy in the deaths.

"No dollar amount can measure the significance of what happened — what it meant to reach a major justice coming from a major injustice," said Marty Nathan, Nathan's widow.

The six-member jury Saturday also ordered four of the defendants to pay $38,360 to one wounded demonstrator and two of them to pay $1,500 to another wounded marcher. On Friday, it had found four Klan and Nazi defendants liable in the assault and battery of Nathan and the two wounded demonstrators.

Lawyers for the defendants said they probably would contest the judgments.

U.S. District Judge Robert Merhige said he hoped the wounds were healed and the litigation over from the Nov. 3, 1979 rally. Two criminal trials in the shootings resulted in no convictions. Some Klansmen and Nazis have filed countersuits against some of the plaintiffs in this suit, alleging their rights were violated.

"Everyone I think would agree it was a tragedy without regard to responsibility," said Merhige. "I don't know of anyone, including the defendants, who doesn't have great sympathy for the situation. But there ought to be an end to this litigation."

The jury Friday cleared all 45 defendants, who included Klan and Nazi members, police and federal agents, of a conspiracy to violate the anti-Klan demonstrators' civil rights by disrupting the rally or failing to stop the violence.

The jury, after hearing 101 witnesses in a the trial that began March 11, deliberated 11½ hours Thursday and Friday before reaching a verdict, and two hours Saturday on the damages.

The 16 plaintiffs in the suit — including four widows, one widower and seven people wounded at the rally — claimed the defendants conspired to deprive them of their civil rights by disrupting the rally or failing to prevent the confrontation, then covering up their involvement.

NATION in brief

Salmonella outbreak still haunts its victims

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Ten weeks after the nation's worst salmonella outbreak struck the Midwest, Michael Maty is haunted by fears that his young son again will be made violently ill by tainted food.

"I feel terribly betrayed and now feel suspect of many foods," said Maty, whose 8-year-old son was one of tens of thousands of people in Illinois and five other states sickened by milk-borne salmonella bacteria traced to a dairy in the Chicago suburb of Melrose Park.

Maty, of suburban Chicago, spoke of his fears at a legislative hearing last week into the state's handling of the outbreak, which also set off a barrage of lawsuits.

Nearly 18,000 people, most in the Chicago area and in central Illinois, reported the diarrhea, vomiting and other salmonella symptoms that made the Matys' son so sick. Two deaths have been blamed on salmonella and four others linked to the outbreak, which health officials say is over.

The Matys' testimony came at the last of six hearings by the Illinois House Committee on State Government Administration, which plans to report results of its two-month probe this week.

All-male club stays male

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Cosmos Club, an all-male bastion of the capital's elite, is trying to end a 13-year-old debate over admitting women by asking prospective members to promise they won't seek to change its single-sex policy.

Over the objection of nearly a third of the club's 3,100 members, its board of management now requires a signed statement from all nominees "in order to recover a tranquil and sociable atmosphere...and maintain the Cosmos Club as a social club for men of accomplishment."

The new policy was distributed in the club's June bulletin.

Under the new rules, a prospective member must be interviewed by the admissions committee and sign a statement that "he has no present intention to work actively to change the club's membership policy."

The club, founded in 1878, is under no legal obligation to accept women, but it has been facing growing internal pressure and outside criticism over its policy of accepting only "men interested in science or literature."

Quadrillion dollars denied

FRANKLIN, Pa. (AP) — A lawsuit by a man seeking more than $5.7 quadrillion from the state for suspending his driver's license has been dismissed by a local judge.

Venango County President Judge William E. Breene, in a four-page opinion issued Thursday, agreed with the state's contention that the lawsuit by Frank A. Messina was groundless and violated court procedures.

Breene also said Messina had ignored legal remedies available at the time his license was revoked.

Messina, of Centerville in Crawford County, had sought the damages from the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation; Transportation Secretary Thomas A. Larson; John A. Pachuta, director of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles and Douglas K. Tobin, director of driver licensing.

Messina, whose license was suspended in 1973 following a traffic accident in Venango County, charged the suspension was illegal, had cost him his job and subjected him to public ridicule.

Bowling-ball murder tried

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — A woman accused of beating her boyfriend to death with a bowling ball was convicted Saturday of voluntary manslaughter.

The Monroe Superior Court jury deliberated 10 hours before finding Glendon Wininger, 41, guilty. She had been charged with murder in repeatedly dropping a 14-pound bowling ball on the head of Stephen Detmer, 37, as he lay on the floor in front of a television set Jan. 4 in the Bloomington apartment they shared.

Judge John G. Baker scheduled a bond hearing Monday and said he would sentence Ms. Wininger within 30 days.

Drug battle intensifies

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Cameron County Sheriff Alex Perez began pulling the cellophane wrapper from the quarter-pound of marijuana, which was rolled like two giant cigars.

"This is the way they do it now," Perez said. "They wrap it over and over again. That way it's harder to detect. Even some dogs have trouble smelling it when smugglers come to the (international) bridge."

Smoke from burning marijuana rose behind Perez as deputies opened the door of an outdoor incinerator and threw in more boxes of the illegal drug.

Authorities were able to keep this $1 million payload from making its way to San Antonio, Houston or Dallas. But Perez said more is on the way.

"When I was running for office, I said I would clean up the county if I was elected," Perez said. "I don't think you can control it 100 percent, but we can control it to a minimum if we have more monies funded to the law enforcement system."

Perez is not alone in his request for more funds to combat the narcotics business.

For years drug traffickers from the United States, Mexico, Central and South America have smuggled their narcotics across the Rio Grande, from Brownsville to El Paso and all the way to California.

But authorities say that successful anti-smuggling task forces in California and Florida have forced some kingpins to shift their smuggling efforts to deep South Texas.

"Because of the efforts in the Florida area, we have been given information by our intelligence that Columbians and Cubans have relocated here," said Ken Miley of the McAllen district office of the Drug Enforcement Administration.

And favorable conditions for drug production in Mexico only add to the problem, authorities said. The warm climate in the fertile Mexican state of Tamaulipas, which borders South Texas, improved irrigation systems for illicit crops throughout Mexico and corruption among Mexican officials all make the enforcement job in Texas tougher, they said.

On Thursday, federal authorities confiscated 846 pounds of cocaine with a wholesale value of $43 million after stopping a gasoline tanker truck at a border checkpoint.

Drug traffickers are becoming more sophisticated, using jets, high-speed boats, gasoline tanker trucks and buses to peddle their wares.

Small dope farms sprouting in East Texas

STATE

CROCKETT (AP) — Despite the recent discovery of a large-scale marijuana operation in East Texas, the majority of dope farming in the area occurs on small farms that spring up under the pine trees, state officials say.

"The highest percentage of seizures continue to be small, independent operators who are growing for profit but not in large quantities," said Bill Pruitt, assistant commander of the Department of Public Safety narcotics division.

Exact figures on the abundance of marijuana farming or the growth in the number of farms in Texas haven't been collected because it hasn't been a priority for state narcotics agents, said W.C. McFarland, commander of the narcotics division.

"We've got an international border and hundreds of miles of coastline to patrol," he said. "But since we've seen domestic marijuana production increase in other states, we figured it had to be going on in Texas."

Since a five-man task force trained in spotting and seizing obscure marijuana fields was assigned to East Texas this year, 37 farming operations have been uncovered, Pruitt said.

The largest confiscation so far has resulted in charges against prominent Crockett rancher and businessman Oscar Owen Brown.

Brown, 63, is charged with aggravated possession of marijuana. His wife, Darlene, 38, and son, Harrel Dean Brown, 39, also were charged with aggravated possession of marijuana last week. All are free on bond.

An aerial search of 5,000 acres of land in Leon and Houston counties uncovered six patches of marijuna with an estimated 59,000 plants, police said.

The plants were located in patches spread out across various fields. Most were shielded from passing roads by weeds that were allowed to grow high, investigators said.

McFarland said marijuana growers have effectively used the foilage that covers 11 million acres of 43 East Texas counties, much of which is uninhabited forest.

The task force, headquartered in Lufkin, uses planes and helicopters to search the forests. The small patches, however, are hard to find because marijuana has the same color as pine trees, McFarland said.

DPS analysts will review arrest and seizure information at the end of the year to see how prevalent dope growing in East Texas is, McFarland said.

STATE IN BRIEF

State test scores rose between 1980, 1985

AUSTIN (AP) — Test scores for third, fifth and ninth graders in Texas public schools rose from 1980 to 1985, Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said.

Hispanic and black students continue to improve at a faster rate than white students — but minority scores were still significantly lower than those of white students, he told the State Board of Education Friday.

Kirby made a preliminary report on the statewide averages of the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills tests given in February to 225,000 third graders, 221,000 fifth graders and 235,000 ninth graders.

A full report on the reading, writing and mathemathics tests will be made next fall.

Kirby said statewide scores dropped slightly from 1984 to 1985 but the Texas Education Agency believed it was because the latest test was longer than earlier ones, particulary the reading portion.

Police chief sues paper

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — The former police chief of McAllen has filed suit against the McAllen Monitor and two reporters, alleging a 1984 article libeled him by implying that he was dishonest and corrupt.

Lee Spradlin, who now is police chief in Texarkana, filed suit in state district court earlier this week against Monitor Publisher Larry Wingert and reporters Marcia Caltabiano and Bill Cuellar.

Spradlin's attorneys claim he was libeled by the June 5, 1984, article, which the suit contends "did impute dishonesty and corruption to, and on the part of, the management and administration of the McAllen Police Department, including particularly Plaintiff L.W. Spradlin."

The article dealt with charges being dropped against Jose Martinez, a polygraph examiner accused of stealing a Rolex watch.

Martinez had claimed the charges were brought as retaliation for reporting police misconduct.

FBI arrests suspected thief

ELMWOOD PARK, N.J. (AP) — A 33-year-old man wanted in connection with a robbery of a Houston bank and attempted murder of a guard was arrested by FBI agents Friday, said Special Agent Michael McDonnell.

Larry Lee Wells, 33, who had been living in Paterson, was arrested at the Marino Construction Co. here at 3:20 p.m., McDonnell said. He was unarmed and offered no resistance, the FBI said in a release.

A federal warrant was issued for the arrest of Wells and Sylvester J. Brown on July 31, 1984 for the July 27 robbery of the Texas Commerce Bank in Houston. In that holdup, a Harris County, Texas, sheriff working as a guard was shot and wounded, the FBI said.

Brown was arrested Aug. 10, 1984 n Louisiana and was extradited to Texas on March 11, 1985, Louisiana state officials said.

Wells was being held at the Bergen County jail in Hackensack pending a bail hearing Monday in federal court.

Slain prison guard honored

TRINITY (AP) — Minnie Houston, a prison guard who came from a family of prison guards, was remembered as a dedicated, loyal mother and worker during her funeral service Saturday.

"Her professional service and helping attitude could not be surpassed," said Jerry Peterson, warden at the Texas Department of Corrections' Ellis I unit in Huntsville. "The TDC has suffered an extreme loss."

Ms. Houston, 41, was supervising a seven-member crew of inmate trusties when she was found stabbed outside an employee dining area at the Ellis I unit Monday. An inmate who said he stabbed Ms. Houston because he loved her and couldn't go on without her has been charged in the death.

More than 500 people, many of them TDC guards, mobbed the memorial ceremony inside the Trinity High School auditorium Saturday, and at least 50 more stood outside, sweating in 95-degree heat.

Gov. Mark White, who attended the 45-minute service but made no remarks, signed a resolution recognizing Ms. Houston for her outstanding services in the community and at the TDC.

Ms. Houston, who lived in Trinity and was the first Texas prison system employee killed since April 4, 1981, was buried in Trinity Community Cemetery.

VA auctions 175 Houston homes

HOUSTON (AP) — Homebuyers in Houston have been too few and far between lately to satisfy sellers — but an auction of foreclosed residences had no problem turning up enough potential buyers.

It took auctioners only 60 seconds Friday to sell the first pair of 175 homes on the auction block before 2,000 prospective buyers.

The Veterans Administration, which became the owner of the homes following foreclosures, sold the homes to Houston-area residents. Prices on the first two were $40,000 and $33,000.

Efraim Campos and his wife, Sue, arrived at Friday's auction an hour early to get a good seat. The couple, who live in southeast Houston, said they already have a home but are looking for another that will better fit their needs.

"We've got a home we like now but the house I'm interested in is in an area without deed restrictions and is located on a large piece of property," Campos said. "I want the house mostly for the land so I can build my own machine business there."

Ted W. Myatt, director of the VA's Houston regional office, said a similar home auction in Detroit sold all available homes.

"This is an unusual method for disposing of homes especially for the VA but we have such a large inventory and the market for homes being what it is we decided to try it," Myatt said.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Dissatisfied Texas teachers would put legislators in 'remedial summer sessions'

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Schools are out for the summer, and so is the Texas Legislature — two things which undoubtedly gladden the hearts of Texas teachers.

But if many of those teachers had their way, legislators might be undergoing some remedial summer sessions.

There was much talk during the regular session about changing some of the provisions of HB 72, the public education reform bill passed during last summer's special session.

But despite the talk, not much was done on public education—and Texas State Teachers Association says lawmakers did not come "even close" to a passing grade.

"The Senate saw the light, but the House leadership turned it off," TSTA President Becky Brooks commented as the session ended.

TSTA's unhappiness was for a number of reasons.

Brooks cited House inaction on a bill to reduce paperwork for teachers, stronger disciplinary authority for teachers, and changes in the career ladder.

Brooks did have some kind words for the Senate — including Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Senate Education Committee Chairman Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

The Senate, she said, resisted "strong pressure" to "gut" funding for full-day kindergarten, to delay or abolish requirements for class limitations in primary grades, and to "water down" the no-pass, no-play requirements on participation in extracurricular activities.

And Brooks praised lawmakers for approving legislation for a duty-free lunch period for teachers, and for establishing a health insurance program for retired teachers.

But that wasn't enough to earn legislators a "C," much less an "A," as far as TSTA is concerned.

And probably the thing that resulted in that low rating, as far as TSTA and other teacher groups (and some other folks) are concerned, was the failure to change career ladder provisions.

"Our worst fears have come true," Brooks said. "The career ladder is a nightmare."

Brooks says that lack of adequate funding is resulting in teachers with "equal or superior abilities" not receiving the additional career ladder compensation "as a minority of their colleagues are receiving."

"It is not fair," she says, "and it has plummeted teacher morale to an all-time low."

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, echoed some of those concerns as the Senate completed its work in the special session immediately following the regular session.

Jones noted the Legislature hadn't dealt with the career ladder issue, and in remarks as the Senate completed its work, cited the experience of a friend of his in Austin whose wife wasn't placed on the career ladder.

She had, he noted, received a computer-generated letter informing her that she did not qualify, despite the fact that she had received high ratings for her teaching performance.

That teacher, Jones noted, was left disappointed, confused and probably angry.

And that wasn't the legislator's intent, Jones said — expressing hopes that the State Board of Education would look at the career ladder question, and how the plan is being implemented by school districts.

Austin teachers are being evaluated by a five-member committee, which is to look at the performance of the district's 3,000-plus teachers.

Since the district has only enough State and local funds to award bonuses to about half the teachers believed to have qualified, the standards being used for the career ladder are stricter than those set by the State Board of Education.

Some Austin teachers — including some who received placement on the career ladder — are leaving in frustration over the career ladder and other problems in education.

Problems with the career ladder may be just beginning, however.

In Austin, local teachers groups are providing appeals forms for teachers who weren't selected, and given the availability of attorneys and inclination for filing of lawsuits, it's likely to be only a matter of time before Austin, and other school districts, are in court.

It may be too soon to know how well the plan will work and it's certainly too soon to say that it should be abandoned.

But it doesn't seem at all premature to say that the Legislature needs to look at how the program is working.

HL&P may have begun nuclear suit in advance

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials of Brown & Root Inc. and its parent company, Halliburton Co., say Houston Lighting & Power Co. began preparing a lawsuit over the South Texas Nuclear Project two years before the suit was actually filed, court records show.

But John P. Harbin, then chairman of Halliburton, said HL&P chairman Don D. Jordan assured him at a Dallas meeting on Sept. 18, 1981, that HL&P "had no intention to sue Brown & Root," according to documents.

Jordan had flown to Dallas to tell Harbin personally that the project partners had decided to fire Brown & Root as designer-engineer of the generating project because of extensive construction delays and huge cost overruns, a 1983 deposition by Harbin said.

The project owners filed suit against Brown & Root and Halliburton three months later in December 1981 after Brown & Root decided to withdraw as builder of the plant, located near Bay City.

Jordan denied through a spokesman on Friday that he told Harbin there would be no suit.

Harbin, now retired, said in 1983 that he and Thomas J. Feehan, then president of Brown & Root, saw a lawsuit developing in December 1979 when HL&P got Halliburton and Brown & Root to sign a so-called "tolling agreement."

The agreement extended for two years a four-year statute of limitations, which expired in December 1979, on any damage claims involving the project. Construction on the project began in late 1975.

A $750 million settlement offer by Brown & Root was accepted last week by three of the four project partners.

Gramm's bill regulates Mexican truckers

By Peggy Roberson
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, has introduced a bill that would spell out assurances that Mexican truckers coming into the U.S. will meet safety and insurance standards while giving them the right to haul to "twin plants" and processing centers.

Gramm, at a Thursday press conference, said he headed off a border crisis by persuading the Department of Transportation to back off an interpretation of a 1984 safety law that could have cost hundreds of thousands of jobs on both sides of the border.

In drafting regulations to implement the new law, the DOT interpreted it to mean that because contract carriers of non-exempt goods — mostly non-agricultural — were not specifically mentioned in regard to licensing they should be precluded from entering the U.S.

After two meetings between Gramm and representatives of DOT and the Interstate Commerce Commission, as well as a series of meetings between agency officials and concerned citizens in border cities, DOT reversed its ruling.

"You can drive anything across the border that doesn't break down on the bridge...(we must) be sure we don't set standards that prevent trade, and...be sure we don't have bald tires and faulty brakes coming across the border, endangering American lives and property."

— Senator Phil Gramm

"The DOT agreed their first interpretation was wrong and, in fact, because contract carriers were not mentioned, they were not affected," Gramm said. "That averted a crisis."

Other problems remained, however, which Gramm said could not be dealt with "by a regulatory point of view."

"While we had this secretary (Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole) and her department persuaded, we had no guarantee for the future."

His aim, Gramm says, is to set out in law:

— That all carriers coming into the U.S. should be licensed — "in a simple, straightforward licensing procedure;"

— That they be required to have insurance for the time they are in the U.S., perhaps purchased on a daily policy basis;

— That "commercial zones," areas of various widths adjacent to the border, originally defined so narrowly as to exlude many truckers from delivering materials to processing sheds and malaquadora plants (twin plants), be changed to ports of entry.

"In essence, that would give Mexican trucks the right to come into border counties of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California," Gramm said.

With regard to the problem of insuring Mexican vehicles, Gramm said that under the present intracity exemption, "You can drive anything across the border that doesn't break down on the bridge."

To impose American safety standards would exclude many Mexican trucks, Gramm said. What he intends to do in the bill is "be sure we don't set standards that prevent trade, and...be sure we don't have bald tires and faulty brakes coming across the border, endangering American lives and property."

Gramm emphasized that the law is not intended to regulate "automobiles used to carry across stuff in the trunks, or pickup trucks." He set a threshold weight of 10,000 pounds for enforcement. Gramm said, he would send a note on Saturday to each member of the Texas delegation explaining the bill and asking for support. Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, chairman the subcommittee on transportation, has agreed to cosponsor the bill.

Senate drops Mexico 'travel advisory' from bill

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The Senate Friday voted to strip from the foreign aid bill a directive to the secretary of state to issue a "travel advisory" for Mexico that would have kept U.S. tourists out of that country.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., co-sponsored the amendment that removed the travel advisory language.

Biden had inserted the directive in the bill when it was being debated earlier this year in the Foreign Affairs Committee as a way to spur Mexican authorities to speed up the investigation into the murder of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar.

Gramm, at a press conference, said the travel advisory would have virtually wiped out American tourist traffic and further crippled the already-troubled Mexican economy.

Gramm and Biden noted that Mexico has captured and indicted suspects in Camerena's murder and are actively investigating the disappearance of several other Americans in Mexico. Also, Mexican authorites have increased their cooperation with Drug Enforcement Administration agents in Mexico, they said.

As amended, the foreign aid bill — which includes the State Department's authorization — directs the secretary of state to report to Congress at 90 day intervals on progress in the Camarena case, the investigations of the disappearance of U.S. citizens and the general safety of U.S. tourists.

"If it becomes clear that American tourists are in danger, I will call on the secretary (of state) to impose a travel advisory. But at this time, I think this is the right action."

Gramm said Mexico "was in a sheer panic concerning the resolution in the Senate bill...despite the fact there is no clear evidence at this point there is a general problem concering tourism."

The Mexican minister of tourism, Enrique Sauvignac, recently stated that Mexican tourists in the U.S. are at greater risk from criminals than are American tourists in Mexico, but he gave no details to back up his claim.

A U.S. travel advisory remains in effect for the state of Jalisco where six Americans have disappeared in recent months.

On Thursday, Rafael Caro Quintero, described by prosecutors as a "drug lord," was indicted in Jalisco for the murders of two Americans.

Mexican newspapers have reported the two Americans were strolling in Guadalajara when they reportedly "crashed" a party in progress at Caro's home. News accounts quoted sources who speculated the two tourists may have been suspected of being U.S. drug agents.

Also, two couples who were missionaries for the Jehovah's Witnesses Church disappeared in Guadalahara, also in Jalisco.

SEPTIC TANK MAINTENANCE

If you are fortunate enough to have city water and sewer pipes reaching out to your property, you don't have to worry about septic tank maintenance. However, a large number of our population live in areas that DO have to worry about septic tanks. If you are one of them, you may ask: "If my septic system is working properly, is it still necessary to have it pumped?" The answer is resounding YES. The time to pump it is before you have problems - not after.

A property working system traps the digesting solids in the septic tank so that only rather clean water drains off into the drain field, gradually plugging the pores in the soil under the drain field, and eventually, causing system failure. How often should it be pumped? It depends upon the size of the tank and usage, of course. Generally, once every 1 to 3 years is suggested. Even if septic systems do not apply to your present home, they may be a serious consideration if you decide to purchase a vacation or second home in the country, or even in the outskirts of the city.

100 degree heat again anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Temperatures across the Permian Basin could reach the century mark today as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal predicts sunny skies and hot with a high near 100. Winds will be from the southeast at 5-15 mph.

The forecast for tonight and Monday calls for mostly fair with the low tonight in the upper 60s. The high Monday will be in the mid-90s.

The high Saturday of 99 was 5 degrees below the record set in 1964. The low of 68 was 7 degrees above the record set in 1955.

STATE

Hot, dry weather prevailed across the state Saturday, giving Texans some relief from heavy downpours that prompted flash flooding in some regions and left at least three people dead.

Only a few scattered clouds were reported in South and coastal Texas Saturday, the National Weather Service said. High pressure produced mostly sunny skies across the rest of the state.

Temperatures were in the middle to upper 90s statewide, except along the upper coast where a few middle 80s were reported.

In the forecast for North Texas, skies should be fair through Monday with a chance of widely scattered thunderstorms late Sunday. Highs should be in the 90s with lows in the 70s.

NATION

A new heat wave carried record high temperatures across the central Plains on Saturday, after thunderstorms broke a heat wave blamed for several deaths in the Southeast, and a few thunderstorms were scattered over Minnesota and the Gulf Coast.

A high of 107 degrees was posted at Dodge City, Kan., breaking a record of 104 set in 1981. At the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport the temperature hit 102 in mid-afternoon, shattering the record of 93 set in 1976.

Records that had stood since 1911 were broken at Sioux City, Iowa, which warmed to 102 degrees, and Des Moines, Iowa, which reached 100. Both cities were one degree above the former record. The high of 100 at Norfolk, Neb., tied its record, also set in 1911.

Newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wehrhan, left, and Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Webb, were married within one day of each other. Both couples met at the Midland Senior Citizens' Center.

Senior center harbors romance

Two couples wed after meeting at facility

BY RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Ask Loyd Webb what he remembers about his life shortly before he got married and he'll tell you, "the walls."

"I laid around at my son's house and looked at those four walls long enough," he said. "They got to looking awful after awhile."

Webb had moved in with his son after a 54-year marriage ended with the death of his wife.

Today, Webb is no longer staring at the walls. He's a newlywed.

"I had to get married," he joked. "I was burning up too much gasoline driving back and forth between my son's house and Linnie's house," he chuckled.

"Linnie," at 69, is still very much a blushing bride.

Modeling the pink dress she sewed for the wedding, Linnie proudly points to the flower arrangement she designed for the ceremony and pulls out several envelopes of wedding pictures. They are still-fresh momentos of her December-Decemeber wedding.

But the new Mrs. Webb remembers another wedding more than 50 years ago to her first husband, now deceased. And like Webb, she remembers the walls.

"'They' were the reason I started getting out of the house and going to the Senior Citizens' Center," she said.

Midland Senior Citizens' Center has proven to be not only a place for the 55-plus crowd to socialize, but also a place for them to re-enter the world of dating and courtship following the loss of a spouse through death or divorce.

The Webbs met there. And so did the Wehrhans.

Both couples were married two weeks ago.

"We met at the Friday night dance," said Ola Wehrhan, whose 47-year marriage ended when her first husband, D.O. "Hadacol" Dardis, died in 1981.

"We didn't start going out for quite awhile. We were just dance partners." The other half of the "we" is Cecil, a retired mechanic and avid fisherman.

The two couples, while married within one day of each other, chose vastly different wedding ceremonies.

The Webbs had an elaborate church wedding.

"We had about 120 people and the whole family was there," said Mrs. Webb. The wedding, complete with silver punch bowl, reception line and plenty of rice, was held at Tall City Baptist Church, where the couple are members.

Awaiting the newlyweds was Webb's car, complete with post-nuptial graffiti. Typical "congratulations" scrawled on the windows in soap, as well as more appropriate messages such as "65 years old and still young enough" greeted the couple as they drove off in their tissue-covered carriage.

The Wehrhans had a simpler wedding. Just the two of them.

"I called up my daughter on Mother's Day in the morning to tell her I was getting married that night," said Mrs. Wehrhan.

They were married by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry at the courthouse.

The two couples have similarities.

Both like to dance and belong to the 55 Plus club. Both enjoyed long previous marriages. And both are involved with activities at the Midland Senior Citizens' Center.

There are other similarities.

Both Webb and Wehrhan worked a variety of jobs in different locations. Wehrhan worked "everywhere north, west, south and east of here" as a heavy equipment operator. He also worked on the Hoover Dam project and the All-American Canal. Webb worked for the City Water Department in Hobbs, N.M., and later helped his wife open a gift shop in Andrews.

Mrs. Webb and Mrs. Wehrhan both have artistic talent. Mrs. Wehrhan paints pictures and plays piano at the senior center, while Mrs. Webb dabbles in floral decoration. She has been a professional seamstress for "more than 50 years."

The two couples have yet another similarity. The wives took longer to decide about the marriage than the husbands.

It has rarely been easy to earn a living on the land in our part of West Texas. In "Rough Times Tough Fiber," J. Evetts Haley wrote eloquently of the efforts of his family to cope with "the elemental challenge of this arid land, where Nature's God alone, it seems, was meant to win."

So it has been for most of the farmers and ranchers in the Permian Basin. Droughts, blizzards and sharp fluctuations in prices have been recurrent facts of life in agribusiness. During the early decades of Midland's history, they accounted for two early booms and busts.

During the 1880s and 1890s, Midland emerged as the main farm-market center between Big Spring and Pecos. Schools, churches and a few stores were built to serve the local residents.

High prices for cattle from 1881 to 1884 prompted an expansion of cattle-raising in the Southwest. In Midland County, the townsite company and the Texas and Pacific Railroad promoted settlement by farmers and ranchers. By 1885 it was estimated that as many as 50,000 head of cattle were grazing within easy reach of Midland. Ranchers built fine homes in town and their hands came to Midland to spend their earnings. The town enjoyed its first boom.

Hard on the heels of it came the first bust. A succession of hard winters and a two-year drought in 1886 and 1887 led to hardship sales of stock in large quantities. As a result, the price of beef fell more than one-quarter from its high point at the beginning of the decade.

Some ranchers weathered the crisis because they had credit or money in the bank; improvements in the plains windmill helped them water stock more efficiently. Of greater importance, the price of beef rose at the end of the decade because herds had been reduced during the earlier sales.

The 1890s were relatively flush times. Midland grew and prospered through the first decade of the 20th century. During a series of years of above-average rainfall, increasing numbers of farmers settled in the county, boosting the population and diversifying the economy beyond its narrow reliance on the cattle industry. Between 1900 and 1910, more than 100 new farms were established in Midland County alone and the whole central Permian Basin was the scene of widespread promotion of farmland.

Many of the new farmers soon learned that rainfall was barely adequate, even during relatively wet years. During the years of normal rainfall — 16 inches at the time — they did well to survive. "I've spent half of my life praying for rain" became a common local saying.

Drier years followed. During the second decade of the 20th century rainfall was 50 percent below average for half the years and only average for the remainder. The whole of the Permian Basin lost people. Midland County lost about one-third of its inhabitants during the drought. Many of the same farmers who had left Ohio, Tennessee and Mississippi, East and Central Texas, and other parts of the country, sold out to get traveling money and went home to whatever kin would help them start again.

Other parts of Midland's marketing area were even harder hit than Midland County. The population of Winkler County, for example, fell by 95 percent as the farmers pulled out. Few of the remaining ranchers made much of a living. The story was told of a stray salesman who happened on a rundown Winkler County ranch during this period. He noticed that everybody was pretty threadbare, but that the rancher actually had a hired hand. The curious salesman asked the rancher, "How in the world can you afford to keep a hand?" The rancher looked at the salesman and said, "Well, it's this way: he works for me until I owe him so much money that he owns the ranch. Then I go to work for him and earn it back."

The retail and financial center of this region, Midland was badly hurt by the drought. By 1920, Midland's population had reached the limit of a town that depended on agribusiness in an arid region. Without a broader economic base, it had few prospects.

But as agribusiness faltered, Midland's principal asset, an optimistic commitment to build for the future, reappeared. During Midland's second major downturn, its leaders continued to improve the quality of Midland life. City water and sewer systems were built. New school buildings went up. Even as farmers left and plowed fields reverted to grasslands, Midlanders continued to invest in the future of the town. By the middle of the 1920s, Midland was stable; it was a pleasant, safe, secure place to do business and raise a family. Its future growth would depend on the skill of newcomers who developed the sub-surface resources of the Permain Basin. Midland's future would be written in oil.

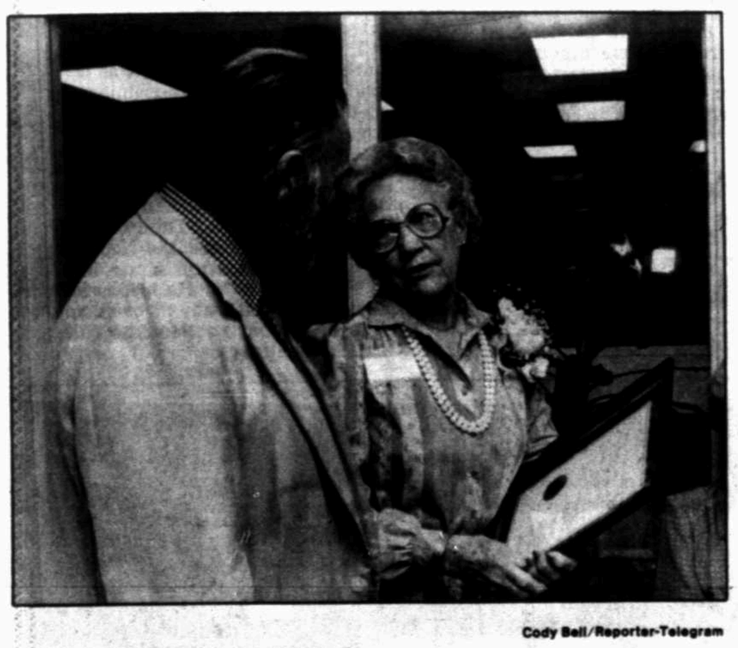
Deputy clerk honored after 33 years



Cody Bell/Reporter-Telegram

Mary Gregory, who retired Friday after 33 years as a deputy county clerk, receives a plaque from County Judge William B. Ahders at her farewell party in the courthouse lobby.

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

People who ventured into the Midland County Courthouse Friday afternoon to conduct business found most of the building's inhabitants down in the lobby having a party.

A few former inhabitants of the courthouse were also there: former Sheriff Ed Darnell, former County Auditor Erma White, former County Attorney Leonard Howell, former District Judge Perry D. Pickett and Lucille Johnson Bezoni, former county and district clerk.

They'd all gathered to honor a courthouse institution: Mary Gregory, who retired Friday after 33 years as a deputy county clerk.

A third of a century is a long time to stay in any one place. Ms. Gregory had tried to retire several times before, but County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry always managed to talk her out of it. This time, however, she's determined to go through with it, and Friday her former and current co-workers, courthouse neighbors and County Clerk's Office clients gathered to send her off in style.

"I'm sure (everybody) is sorry to lose her," said County Judge William B. Ahders as he presented Ms. Gregory with a copy of a resolution passed by the County Commissioners honoring her "outstanding service" as a "loyal, dedicated employee" for 33 years.

"She's been an exceptionally fine employee of the county," Ahders said.

"She's been with me through a lot of hard times and a lot of good times," said Ms. Cherry, who hired Ms. Gregory in 1952, the year after she became county clerk.

"Most of all, I want to thank Rosie for hiring me," said Ms. Gregory, who noted that things have changed a bit in the county clerk's office since 1952.

"The work is the same, but the volume of work has changed," she said. "We have about 16 deputy clerks now — we had five when we started."

Though she's determined not to be talked out of retiring this time, Ms. Gregory admits she feels sad about leaving the courthouse after all these years.

"I'm going to miss it terribly," she said. "Most of all I'm going to miss the people."

Ms. Cherry herself is going on 34 years as county clerk, but said Friday's festivities hadn't given her any ideas:

"I'm not ready for a party like this. I'm going to stay here until the people send me home."

Continental want to fly into Dallas' Love Field

DALLAS (AP) — Continental Airlines has filed an application to begin service from Love Field, an close-in airport now used by Southwest Airlines and Muse Air to attract frequent business travelers, city and airport officials say.

The Houston-based carrier made the application in mid-May to the city's Aviation Division for permission to use one boarding gate, Assistant City Manager Victor Suhm said Friday.

Continental has said it intends to make seven daily flights to Houston, where its main hub operates from Intercontinental Airport, Suhm said.

A spokesman for Continental declined to outline plans the airline may have for Love Field.

"On a regular basis, we look at airports we think would fit into our marketing and scheduling systems," said spokesman Michael Cinelli.

Continental now has five flights daily to Houston from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. The airline also has been seeking permission to operate from Houston's Hobby Airport.

GARY OTT

Great expectations: 'This girl would fit right in'

"I haven't introduced her to the family, yet. They don't even know about her. For some reason, I don't think they would approve."

I was engaged in one of those free-wheeling, post-midnight, long-distance phone calls with an old friend and he was telling me about his new girlfriend.

"What's the big deal?" I demanded to know. "Is she a prostitute?"

"No, no, it's nothing like that," he said, giggling at the mere thought.

"What then?" My mind was racing with anticipation. "She's a druggie, right? A little space cadet who spends the bulk of her time staring into outer space and rendering powerful insights such as, 'Oh, wow,' and 'Golly, that's neat.'"

"Gimme a break," he said with disgust, halting my tacky song-and-dance before I could get to the part about purple hair and safety pins in her ears.

"She's normal. It's just that she doesn't fit the image my parents have for me," he said, maintaining his somewhat vague stance on exactly what it was she was like or, for that matter, what it was his parents would find so disappointing about her.

But I was insistent. One gets that way when one is awakened at 12:30 a.m. with a bizarre phone call.

He finally relented and exposed the details.

They weren't all that exciting. In fact, they were downright boring. She was your basic lower-income 23-year-old from Fort Worth who lacked any formal education beyond high school. She usually dressed in jeans, T-shirt and tennis shoes, said "ain't" a lot and further butchered the English language by possessing a grating habit of putting a plural verb with a singular subject. She was attractive enough, he admitted, but not in the classical sort of way. She was more cute than anything, is the way he put it.

There was a pause.

"That's it?" I said, unable to disguise my disappointment. I then reminded him that he wasn't exactly a product of the Amy Vanderbilt school of charm himself.

"I know," he said. "But, you know my parents."

"Yeah," I said. "Your dad licks the spoon after serving mashed pototoes and your mother works in a feed store. I doubt seriously they will find someone who says 'ain't' offensive."

There was another pause so I added a clincher. "Good Lord, your parents are yellow-dog Democrats. Sounds to me like this girl would fit right in."

He still wasn't sure. He rambled on about the high expectations his parents had for him, how they had worked long hours so he could get a college education and how his brothers and sisters had become huge successes with their big houses and loving families.

I thought I was going to gag. So I lectured him. "What's your problem, anyway?" I said. "You like her. She likes you. She says 'ain't.' You say 'isn't.' She says 'he don't.' You say 'he doesn't.' Sounds like the Great American Romance to me. Besides, maybe you can learn her to talk good."

He laughed and said, "Yeah, but it ain't going to be easy."

Food-stamp files back Lucas recantations

DALLAS (AP) — Self-professed murderer Henry Lee Lucas was signing out food stamps and selling scrap metal in Florida the same days he allegedly killed people in Texas, Arkansas, Colorado and Louisiana, the Dallas Times Herald reported in its Sunday editions.

During a one-year period from 1980 to 1981, Lucas occasionally obtained food stamps in Jacksonville, Fla., and records of those transactions cast new doubt on the validity of his confessions to numerous slayings across the country, the Times Herald said in its copyright story.

Those food stamp documents also lend credence to previously disclosed evidence that Lucas was in Jacksonville during much of the time some lawmen say he was roaming the country on aimless and unexplained killing sprees.

Lucas has variously claimed to have killed as many as 600 people and as few as one.

The Times Herald said its evidence puts Lucas more than 800 miles away at the time of one Texas slaying and suggests that for him to have committed additional killings "cleared" via his confessions, Lucas would have had to drive more than 5,500 miles in a four-day period in March 1981, and more than 4,900 miles in an eight-day span in April of that year.

Together with previously disclosed evidence of Lucas' scrap-metal sales in Jacksonville, the food stamp documents may invalidate some previously questionable Lucas confessions that authorities accepted, the Times Herald reported.

Some examples:

— Texas Department of Public Safety records say Lucas was responsible for killing three Texas women on March 3, 4 and 5, 1981, in Odessa, Fort Bend County and Corpus Christi.

But the Times Herald said Lucas signed for food stamps in Jacksonville on March 2 and sold scrap metal there on March 3 and March 5.

To have been in Florida on those dates and still have been in Texas to kill all three women, Lucas would have had to drive 5,500 miles in less than four days. Or he would have had to spend a lot of time on an airplane.

— Between April 1 and April 8, 1981, Lucas is alleged to have killed five people in Texas, Louisiana and

Law enforcement authorities have turned up no evidence — indeed, have never even suggested — that Lucas resorted to air travel during his alleged killing sprees.

A DPS spokesman said, "At this time, we prefer not to comment on issues involving Lucas."

Arkansas, although he signed documents relating to food stamps in Jacksonville on three days of that week and sold scrap metal on a fourth day, the Times Herald said.

The slayings "cleared" by Lucas' confessions, which are contradicted by Florida records, were two in Baytown, Texas, on April 2 and 8; and two teen-agers in Texarkana, Ark., also on April 8.

Couple held on charges of felony drug possession

Police Roundup

An unidentified man and woman remained in Midland City Jail late Saturday following their arrest that morning on felony charges of possession of a controlled substance.

Police said the couple were arrested about 2:40 a.m. at Stop & Go Convenience Store, N. Loop 250 and Thomason Drive, following a report of a disturbance.

In addition to the possession charge, the man also was arrested on charges of felony possession of stolen property, unlawfully carrying a weapon and evading arrest.

A police department spokesman said when he arrived at the store, the man told officers that he and the woman had been arguing and that the two were enroute to an undisclosed Midland apartment complex when police arrived at the scene.

In questioning the man, police noticed the "butt" of a rifle lying underneath the seat of the man's green Ford pickup. A search of the pickup also produced a stainless steel revolver, .22-caliber pistol and a plastic bag containing a white powder substance believed to be methanphetamine, according to the police report.

A computer check of the weapons revealed the 30-30-caliber rifle located in the pickup reportedly was listed on the department's list of stolen property, according to the report.

The two are expected to be arraigned Monday.

Troy Messer, West Highway 80, reported an automobile transmission and two tires stolen between May 10-23 during the burglary of a storage unit at Abbott Storage, 5 Industrial Loop. The total loss is estimated at $950.

Colorado man killed near Lamesa

From Staff Reports

LAMESA — A 31-year-old Northglenn, Colo., man was killed late Friday in a one-vehicle accident less than one mile south of Lamesa on U.S. Highway 87, a Texas Department of Public Safety spokeswoman reported.

Edwin Leroy Brown was pronounced dead at the scene about 10:48 p.m. by Dawson County Justice of the Peace Denise Dyss. The accident occurred shortly after 10 p.m. when the 1979 Kenworth tractor-trailer rig he was driving failed to negotiate a turn, jumped a curb and overturned, according to the report.

Fraud suit filed over coupon book

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox filed suit Friday against two individuals and their company for allegedly defrauding consumers in the sale of coupon books.

Mattox's lawsuit alleged that Richard Fix of Houston and Nile Johnson of Corpus Christi, doing business as Consumers Plus, falsely represented that a "gift" will be sent to consumers who purchase coupon books when the "gift" costs $69.95.

"We were at a monthly birthday celebration that the senior center holds and we sat down on a bench, side by side," said Mrs. Webb. "Before I got up, he asked me for a date."

She declined.

"I said that I had other plans," remembered Mrs. Webb.

But Webb persisted and soon the couple was dining at the center every evening. "We went out every night for dinner until we got married," she said.

Mrs. Wehrhan recalled her hesitancy.

"It took me awhile before I decided to marry again," she said.

Her husband, however, knew that he wanted to remarry.

"When you get to be our age, everybody needs somebody," said Wehrhan. "It sure gets rough looking at those four walls."

Berle hospitalized for cardiac testing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Milton Berle has checked into Cedars-Sinai Medical Center for cardiac tests after suffering from fatigue, his wife said Saturday.

"He's been very tired lately, so the doctor decided to run some tests in the hospital, where he'll be away from the telephones and everything," said Ruth Berle.

"Other than feeling tired, he seems to be generally in good conditon," said Cedars-Sinai public relations director Ron Wise.

Berle, 76, checked into the hospital Thursday, Wise said.

"The tests run early this week will determine what kind of treatment, if any, is required," Wise said. "They've scheduled up some tests on him for Monday."

Doctors will study Berle's "cardiac efficiency, meaning the general condition of his vessesls, things like that," Wise said.

Berle's 77th birthday is July 12.

ST. PAUL (AP) — Rock star Prince and several hundred of his friends held a purple masquerade to celebrate his 27th birthday.

Prince flew in people from all over the United States for the party Friday, but the arrangements were kept secret from the public, said Harry Given, owner of the Prom Center, where the bash was held.

About 800 attended, Given said. "It's great. It's a masquerade and the ballroom's never been decorated like this in my 30 years."

Inside were giant spiral purple staircases, two big brass beds, glittery booths, candles everywhere, mirrors, mannequins, international food stations, pinball machines and a "carnival atmosphere," according to one guest.

The theme was Around the World in a Day, in celebration of Prince's new album, and about $20,000 was spent on the decorations and preparations, Given said.

Prince, whose full name is Prince Roger Nelson, was born on June 7, 1958.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — A company owned by entertainer Wayne Newton has contracted to buy historic Castle Hill plantation, which the Virginia native plans to use as a retreat, a local real estate company says.

Carl Bagby, a real estate agent with Frank Hardy Inc., said Friday that Newton "essentially wants (Castle Hill) to be a place to stay from time to time to relax." Newton's main residence is in Las Vegas, Nev.

Wayne Newton International Resorts has contracted to buy the 221-year-old property, about 13 miles from here, Bagby said. The purchase price of the 1,181-acre property was not disclosed. The asking price was $2.55 million.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — University of Colorado officials have pulled the plug on a two-day appearance by rock superstar Bruce Springsteen, saying the concerts would disturb the CU football team's practice routine.

J.C. Ancell of the CU Program Council said athletic department officials would not give up Folsom Field for Sept. 4-5 because those dates would prevent the Buffaloes from using the field to practice for their Sept. 7 season opener with Colorado State University.

Ancell said losing the Springsteen concerts will cost the athletic department about $240,000 and the program council about $90,000.

Ancell said Springsteen has agreed to a one-day appearance in Denver on Sept. 5, although spokesmen for Feyline Presents Inc. wouldn't confirm it Friday.

Springsteen's last appearance in Colorado, in November, sold out the day the $17.50 tickets went on sale. The Buffaloes finished 1-10 last season.

SALISBURY, Md. (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon reserved most of a small Eastern Shore hotel for a weekend visit which included a scheduled speech at an Aspen Institute conference.

The Baltimore Sun reported Saturday that Nixon was staying at the recently restored Imperial Hotel in Chestertown.

Hotel staff members would not comment on Nixon's visit and the institute's formal statement on the conference didn't mention him. Chestertown Mayor Elmer E. Horsey said Friday that he had known about Nixon's visit for six weeks, but kept it quiet.

The institute's conferences, which are closed to the public, provide an opportunity for discussion on contemporary issues, and participants include past and present government leaders and scholars. The institute was started 36 years ago in Aspen, Colo. It moved to Maryland about five years ago when it was given an estate.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A television movie is planned portraying Erica Bouza, the wife of the Minneapolis police chief who has been arrested three times in antiwar protests, according to television executives.

"It's the story of a woman who at one point in her life was known only as a housewife who was married to a police chief and how she comes to take responsibility for her own actions," said Susan Sands, an executive producer of motion pictures at ABC.

Sands said the script for "Love, Honor and Arrest" is still being developed. Producer Stan Marguiles' credits include the made-for-TV movies "Roots," "Roots: The Next Generation" and "The Thorn Birds."

Mrs. Bouza, 54, has been arrested and charged with trespassing three times, most recently last month, after antiwar demonstrations at the headquarters of Honeywell Inc. in Minneapolis. In November 1983 she served 10 days in jail.

ATLANTA (AP) — Lester Maddox doesn't miss politics, but the one-time segregationist firebrand still enjoys the notoriety he achieved in Georgia's governor's office.

"It's good to go up to the Capitol and have people walk up to me and say, 'I wish you were still governor,'" Maddox said. It's been nearly 15 years since he left the governor's office and 11 years since he was lieutenant governor and he now sells real estate and insurance from his home.

But the restaurateur-turned-politician said not everyone remembers.

"There were so many business, bank and industrial leaders who were so friendly when I was in office, but not one has called upon me since I left public life," said Maddox during an interview.

"But I still hear from my true friends," he said.

NEW YORK (HNS) — Henry Lee Moon, retired public relations director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, died Friday at Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York after a long illness. He was 84 years old and lived in Queens.

Moon, a soft-spoken, bespectacled man, spoke for the NAACP to journalists from 1948 to 1974, in its most turbulent years, when it was campaigning to rid the country of discriminatory laws. He had helped strengthen the organization's effectiveness with the press.

Moon was a scholar on W.E.B. DuBois, the black educator and activist, and edited a collection of DuBois's writing called "The Emerging Thought of W.E.B. DuBois." The two knew each other when DuBois edited the NAACP's magazine, Crisis, a publication Moon later edited, from 1965 until 1974. He also wrote "Balance of Power," a 1948 study of black voting patterns after Reconstruction and their effect on American politics.

People of our community who make a difference.

Dr. Viola Coleman

"One's lifetime is so short and yet when you look back at all the changes that have happened in our lifetime it's hard to imagine," says Midland family physician Viola Coleman.

In 1951 Dr. Coleman completed her internship and became the second black physician to practice medicine in Midland, a community still under the segregation laws yet willing to allow black physicians to practice at Midland Memorial Hospital's new facilities. The hospital still had separate dining facilities for blacks; however, "Midland broke the tradition of having beds in the basement for black patients," says Dr. Coleman. "You have to look at it in terms of what they (the community) had experienced up to that point in time... The churches were preaching it- separate, separate, separate, separate!"

Tolerant of slow changes in segregation laws, Dr. Coleman did have some particular concerns beyond legislation. Older black patients were called "auntie" and "uncle." "I found that objectionable. No laws said you had to call blacks 'auntie' and 'uncle,'" says Dr. Coleman, who was often called "Dr. Vi" by nurses who had difficulty relating to a black, woman physician. She slowly plugged away at the barriers. "You survive and go on to do those things that you have the ability to do and the willingness to pay the price for."

Her work, she explains, was made easier by a black dentist who had already established his practice in Midland. "You have to remember that you are where you are because of what someone else has already done. It's all interrelated- everything you do," she explains.

In the 1960's the Texas Medical Association dropped its racial barriers, and Dr. Coleman joined the organization. In 1975 this respected physician was president of the Midland County Medical Society.

"That's only important in so far as when I first came I couldn't join the organization. It shows the distance that all of us came- whites and blacks," says Dr. Coleman.

While Dr. Coleman was president of the organization she set some very important objectives for the community: 24 hour emergency medical staffing at Midland Memorial Hospital and emergency medical technician training. This conscientious physician and her colleagues kept pushing and finally 24 hour care became a reality, along with EMT training. Dr. Coleman sums it up, "The practice of medicine has changed so much in these 30 years."

Other things have also changed in Midland because of the efforts of this compassionate citizen. This former member of the League of Women Voters helped establish Midland Planned Parenthood and was a key figure in starting the Midland Housing Program for lower income and disabled citizens. She was active in the establishment of the Washington branch Y.M.C.A. In addition, she is a member of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the chairperson for the Board of Trustees of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Certainly, our community has seen many changes in the past thirty years because of citizens like Dr. Viola Coleman who make a difference.

Musical event ahead

By H.A. TUCK

A delightful evening of music awaits those who attend the Houston Pops Orchestra presentation of "From the Alamo to Broadway" at the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Tickets for this event may be purchased only at the Chap Center box office. They are priced at $7 and $13.

During the summer, one session at Midland College follows another so quickly they almost run together.

Immediately following graduation, the college had its annual two-week spring interim session. There was one week with no students on campus before the first summer session began last Monday.

Pre-registration for the second summer session starts on Monday, June 17, and continues until July 8. The first summer session concludes on July 9 and registration for the second summer session is set for the following day. That session ends August 15, which provides one more week without students before registration for the fall term August 28 and 29.

• • •

Other events continue to keep the campus facilities busy. One of the regular ACT (American College Testing) days was yesterday. Coming up this week is a meeting regarding the High Sky Girls Ranch, a regular meeting of the Need to Read Adult Literacy Council, and a Small Business seminar. A two-week Ballet Midland Workshop starts next week.

Speaking of the later, Anthony Ferro came to MC and Ballet Midland last fall and has done a super job of creating a lost of interest in dance locally. He's had excellent college classes and has been a driving force to make dance, and especially ballet, a much stronger part of the Midland fine arts scene.

Some remodeling has started in the Administration Building. A new Testing Center is being constructed, some offices are being changed, and the mailroom is being moved to the Learning Resource Center.

Summer also is the time for routine maintenance that can't be scheduled during the regular academic year, such as classroom painting.

The remainder of the stabilization work at Chap Center also is planned later this summer. Part of this was done during the Christmas holidays.

But before that takes place, the Chap Center is going to be the site for four performances by Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus on June 25 and 26. Shows start at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. both days. Tickets are on sale at Sears stores in Midland and Odessa, plus the Chaparral Center box office. It's the first time Ringling Bros. has been to Midland in six years and they're bringing an even larger show this year. The circus advance people have been taking a close look at the building, since they really had to squeeze to get all three rings and the other equipment inside the last time they were here.

Now that the legislature has determined funding for community colleges for the next two years (97.5 percent of the funding received for the past two years), the college administragtors have been busily working on the 1985-86 budget. It's due to be presented to the Board of Trustees on June 18 for preliminary approval. Final budget adoption comes during the board's August meeting.

Instructional departments turned in their budget requests several months ago. These went to the seven division heads, then to the two deans. The budgeting process began about three months ago, mostly based on a "worst case scenario" of what the state funding cuts would be. Since appropriations for community colleges weren't cut as much as had been feared, it's been relatively easy to finalize the college budget.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

EDUCATION

Board puts controversial issues off

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education agreed Saturday on an unprecedented reading and writing test for all Texas teachers, but sidestepped touchy votes on school discipline and social promotions.

Both controversial issues were put off until at least July.

"This was one of the greatest disappointments of the Legislature this year," said board member Williaam McBride in reference to the recent legislative failure to agree on strict discipline in schools.

"We've got to do everything we can to help local school officials on this discipline problem," said McBride.

Separate bills to clamp down on misbehavior and crime in public schools passed the Senate and House, with approval of legislative leaders, but the two houses were never able to reach final agreement.

"We are disappointed the legislature did not act," said Jack Strong, chairman of the board's Committee for Students, "and we will try at the July meeting to incorporate some the changes sought in our board rules. We cannot expel students but we can add strength at the local level to take care of some problems."

The major school reform bill passed last summer took away the power of local school officials to expel students except for assault on a teacher or pupil and limited their right to suspend misbehaving students.

The approved House and Senate bills would have restored the strict discipline rights, particularly for students caught with guns, drugs or alcohol.

About social promotions, Strong said, "There is still a lot of controversy on that." The issue has been before the board for the last three months.

The school reform bill outlawed promotions from one grade to another for students who do not make at least a grade of 70 in every subject. Much of the controversy has been over what to do with students who cannot be promoted — including tutorial sessions and remedial classes.

One question put off until July was whether students in remedial classes can take part in school athletics or extracurricular activities.

Board Chairman Jon Brumley, of Fort Worth, warned members to be prepared for a three-day session in July because of the long agenda.

The historic teacher testing examination, ordered by the public school reform bill, will be the week of March 10, 1986. There has been nothing like it in Texas before.

"We want to ensure that every teacher has the basic skills to see that every child in Texas gets the best education possible," said Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby.

Kirby said it would take at least 250 to 300 people just to give the test, which will be given under a contract with a private firm. None of the test administrators can be students or relatives of any teacher or school administrator.

Any teacher or school administrator who fails the test in March will be able to take it over the last week in June.

The test plan calls for teachers to identify main ideas and details in reading, to distinguish between facts and opinion, to use reference sources, to "draw inference" from reading and to understand job-related words.

On writing skills, teachers must show they can capitalize, punctuate and spell, "recognize the English usage," identify errors in sentence formation and write a brief story or essay.

Teachers and administrators must pass the examination next spring if they want to retain their teaching certificates.

Resolution of civil suit should allow bondsman to resume business

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The resolution of a civil lawsuit in 244th District Court is expected to clear the way for an Odessa bail bondsman to start writing bonds as soon as his license in renewed.

District Judge Joe Connally said Friday he entered a final judgment in a lawsuit filed against Theodore Avila, doing business as Brothers Masonry, by Permian Bank & Trust to collect a $65,000 loan. With attorneys fees and interest, Connally estimated, the total amount due will be about $90,000.

The 244th District Court judge said the final judgment he entered for Permian Bank against Avila cleared the way for the bank to begin inventorying and appraising Avila's equipment and property. Connally said it appeared there would be more than sufficient equipment and property to satisfy the $90,000 judgment, which would mean Barker's ASA Bonding Service would be freed from the supersedeas (appeal) bond posted for Avila and cost Barker's company nothing.

The supersedeas bond, had Barker been required to make good on it, had placed him close to the limits of collateral he had posted with Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire to cover criminal bonds he writes.

When the Ector County Bail Bond Board met in regular session Tuesday, consideration of applications for new bonding licenses and renewal of old ones, as well as the hearing of complaints, were agenda items.

Attorney Bill Bowden for Anita Jones, owner of Anita's Bonding, protested the renewal of Barker's license, claiming that Barker in his renewal application had failed to make the bond board aware of the existence of pending lawsuits in which he had posted bonds. Ms. Jones further contended Barker's posting of the supersedeas bond was illegal because he did not have the backing of an insurance company or recording agency.

Bowden argued that if Barker was forced to make good on the supersedeas bonds it would leave him with insufficient collateral to write criminal bonds. If this were the case, Bowden suggested, the board should not renew Barker's bonding license until the lawsuits were resolved.

Connally, presiding over the bail bond board, recessed the board meeting until noon last Thursday to give Royal Caswell, Barker's attorney, time to obtain a new appraisal of the property Barker had put up under a deed of trust to Brookshire to cover criminal bonds written.

When the board resumed its session Thursday, Caswell informed members there hadn't been sufficient time to have a complete appraisal, but a preliminary appraisal indicated the value of Barker's collateral had increased from $100,000 to about $153,000.

The board still declined to renew Barker's bonding license until the civil lawsuit he was involved in was resolved.

In other bail bond board action last week, a license was granted to Robert C. Smith to operate A-Bob's Bail Bonds. Smith operates similarly named bonding companies in Big Spring, Colorado City and Midland.

Together we make it happen.

THE "NEW" PILL

The Pill has changed. Today's version is made with only a fraction of the estrogen and progestin found in the original. That dosage drop is crucial to safety. Studies show that high hormone levels caused a large increase in cardiovascular problems. Reports so far on the low-dose combination Pill used since 1979 indicate that it does not duplicate the former problems. Low-dose Pills contain 50 micrograms or less of estrogen and one milligram or less of progestin. Research continues and, in the last year, two new types have become available. They are biphasic and triphasic Pills. They differ from the standard combination Pill by varying hormone dose once or twice within each monthly cycle. The idea is to adjust the estrogen and progestin to normal hormonal fluctuations.

Legislative continuance granted in Garcias' pretrial hearing

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — District Judge Gene Ater said Thursday he had granted a legislative continuance of the pretrial hearing of Leonard and Andrea Garcia requested May 13 by their attorney, Houston Sen. Craig Washington.

Garcia had been returned to Odessa for the originally scheduled June 10 pretrial hearing on charges of capital solicitation of murder and Ater had issued a bench warrant to return Mrs. Garcia also, but the continuance was granted before she was returned.

The Garcias were convicted in June 1983 for the October 1982 killing of 36-year-old William T. "Teddy" Dowd. Leonard was sentenced to 99 years in prison and Andrea drew a 40-year prison sentence.

The murder-for-hire charges allegedly grew out of the Dowd killing. The Garcias are alleged to have hired Charlie Garrett to kill two witnesses against them in the Dowd case.

Garcia is alleged to have given Garrett a .38-caliber revolver to use to kill Tommacene Dowd, the widow of Teddy Dowd, and Brandy Williams. Garrett was purportedly living with the two women in Minneapolis at the time he was allegedly hired to kill them. His pay for killing the women purportedly was to be $3,000 in cash and "an ounce of pure heroin." Garrett reportedly took photographs that depicted the women dead and sent them to Garcia, who allegedly wired him $3,000.

The Ector County District Attorney's Office ordered the Garcias returned to Odessa for the hearing Monday when a secretary in Washington's office indicated he might send another attorney rather than postpone the hearing until 30 days after adjournment of the regular legislative session. But Ater granted the continuance and ordered Garcia returned to Huntsville and cancelled the bench warrant for Mrs. Garcia.

Trial to begin on child sex charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 47-year-old Odessa man, indicted on eight counts of aggravated sexual assault or indecency with a child, will face trial on one of those counts in 70th District Court Tuesday.

Donald LeClair was first indicted by an Ector County grand jury in August 1984 on eight counts of indecency with a child, with five of the counts alleging aggravated sexual assault. He was reindicted Jan. 23 of this year when it was learned that in 1963 and 1979 he had been convicted on charges of larcency in New Mexico and burglary in Colorado. The prior convictions were used to enhance the charges against him so he would spend more time in prison if convicted.

LeClair was reindicted April 11 on four of the eight charges so the dates the incidents allegedly occurred could be changed to conform to evidence in the cases.

LeClair's first trial March 22 ended in a mistrial when it was discovered a juror had been improperly impaneled.

On April 10, LeClair's attorney, Bill Alexander, sought to have charges against LeClair dismissed because, he contended, the state had failed to comply with the Speedy Trial Act, which requires a person be brought to trial within 120 days of the commencement of criminal action. Judge Gene Ater denied Alexander's motions.

Retired District Judge C.V. Milburn will be presiding over LeClair's trial this week.

Feeling 'old'

By now, a large number of Midland residents are starting to feel a little old — with good cause! And they're kicking up their heels! After all, Midland County is only four weeks away from celebrating its first 100 years of existence and that is no small occurrence.

The official celebration of Midland's Centennial will be observed during the period stretching from June 29 through July 7th, but excitement already is building throughout the community, verified by the many floats under construction for the Centennial Parade, Midland men sporting beards and many Midlanders observing Centennial days on Friday of each week by wearing Western garb. It's obvious that a festive occasion is approaching — rapidly.

Workers at the Midland Centennial-Sesquicentennial office confirm that excitement by noting that the phone is constantly ringing and that everyone is talking about the observance.

That's great because a Centennial celebration should capture the minds and hearts of a community. It is a look at the past 100 years. The trials, the tribulations, the successes. It is a look at the historical make-up of the community which, necessarily, points the direction of the future. Midlanders, if they don't already recognize it, will have the opportunity over the next four weeks to explore their heritage, their roots, their struggles, their achievements and, in so doing, learn something about the special quality of these people called Midlanders.

The Centennial celebration, of course, will be the highlight of 100 years, complete with a giant parade, speeches, proclamations, games, activities, food booths, arts and crafts exhibits, a cowboy carnival, baseball game and much more.

On July Fourth, a special Centennial Edition of the Reporter-Telegram will feature hundreds of stories detailing this community's history plus guest columns written by numerous individuals from throughout the city and the 30 winning essays in the Reporter-Telegram's Centennial Essay Contest.

All-in-all, the next four weeks promise a lot of fun and excitement for Midland residents, culminating with the celebration itself on July Fourth. It will be a grand celebration — designed to make us all feel young again!

Execute traitors

If it hasn't done so already, the Walker family spy case ought to shock every patriotic American into questioning recent U.S. counterintelligence policy. This is no minor spy ring, but yet another case of military personnel accused of selling out the country they swore to defend against all enemies. Although details provided by the FBI are sketchy in order not to further aid Kremlin spy efforts, those arrested are believed to have turned over to the Soviet Union information that could seriously jeopardize naval warfare tactics and place at risk the entire U.S. nuclear deterrent force of bombers, missiles and submarines.

The accused include John A. Walker Jr., a retired warrant officer; his son, Michael, an enlisted man on the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Nimitz; his brother Arthur, a retired lieutenant commander employed by a naval contractor in Virginia; and friend Jerry Alfred Whitworth, a retired Navy radio man at Alameda (Calif.) Naval Air Station. All have pleaded innocent to the charges.

But according to the FBI, the two retired Walkers may have passed anti-submarine warfare secrets to the Soviets for as long as 20 years. Mr. Whitworth had access to extremely sensitive crypto material that could be particularly devastating to national security. Naval investigators reportedly found stolen documents weighing several pounds near the young Walker's bunk on the Nimitz.

Cold cash, not ideology, is apparently the reason for this alleged betrayal. The Walker and Whitworth actions also, unfortunately, help confirm a Soviet KGB belief that Americans can easily be bought. Only a year ago, an ex-Marine was convicted of selling for $250,000 more than 100 documents on the MX and Minuteman missiles and U.S. nuclear defense capabilities. Last December, an engineer for a military contractor was arrested and accused of trying to sell information about the super-secret "stealth bomber" to the Soviets for $25,000.

As the Soviets wage a relentless campaign to buy U.S. secrets, U.S. intelligence and counterintelligence capabilities have been weakened by surveillance restrictions that date back to the Ford administration, when Congress rewrote the rule books in reaction to Nixon administration excesses. The Walker arrests really do little credit to recent Reagan administration efforts to get our counterintelligence capability back on track; U.S. agents only began investigating the case six months ago after a tip from John Walker's ex-wife.

We may never know how many military secrets the Soviets have picked up for a few pieces of silver. Instead of worrying so much about possible covert U.S. aid to Nicraguan freedom fighters, Congress ought to step up the fight against U.S. traitors. One way to begin deterring potential Judases would be to change the maximum sentence for espionage.

Surely, someone who puts the entire security of the nation in jeopardy deserves worse than a life sentence in prison.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, June 9, the 160th day of 1985. There are 205 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 9, 1954, during the Senate Army-McCarthy hearings, Sen. Joseph N. Welch assailed Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy for saying a member of Welch's law firm belonged to a Communist-front group. Said Welch to McCarthy: "Have you left no sense of decency?"

On this date:

In A.D. 68, the Roman Emperor Nero committed suicide.

In 1860, the first dime novel — titled "Malaeska: The Indian Wife of the White Hunter" — was published.

In 1870, author Charles Dickens died.

In 1940, Norway surrendered to the Nazis during World War II.

Today's birthdays: Former World Bank president Robert S. McNamara is 69. NBC news correspondent Marvin Kalb is 55. Baseball player Dave Parker is 34. Actor Michael J. Fox is 24.

JAMES RESTON

Reagan's attacks killing support

WASHINGTON — Just one day before appealing to the Democrats on national television to support his tax reform bill — probably the most important and innovative proposal of his second term — President Reagan accused them of being soft on communism abroad, and "pitting white against black, women against men and young against old" at home.

James Reston

These are fighting words, not likely to encourage the unity he needs and wants for tax reform in the Congress. It was an odd introduction to his latest act and chance on the stage.

He has been his own worst enemy lately. Why infuriate Tip O'Neill, who has the votes to beat him? Why, in the name of "reconciliation" did he misunderstand the history of the two world wars in his recent stroll through the cemeteries of Germany? Why, on the eve of the second phase of nuclear arms talks with the Russians at Geneva, did he mock them for their failures as a declining force in the world?

The answer, I think, is that he sees no relationship between one thing and another, between the words his immediate audience wants to hear and his policies.

His performance on Memorial Day illustrates the point. He went to the Arlington National Cemetery early in the morning, and with his usual grace, celebrated the sacrifices and tragedies of human conflict and wiped the tears from his eyes.

Then, in a totally different mood, he flew immediately to Disneyland in Florida and hugged the clowns, and went from there to Miami for a political rally and praised the "freedom fighters" of Nicaragua, condemned the Democrats for acting as if "a weaker America was a safer America," seeing no difference between his tears in the morning and his provocations in the evening.

It would probably be wrong to conclude from this that he meant to pick a fight with the Democrats or the new guy in Moscow. It's just that he loves to make speeches but forgets that he is president of the United States. He thinks he can say anything he likes, even if he doesn't think at all about the consequences.

His personal performances have worked fairly well. Even when he loses a vote here and there on the budget, as he has been doing lately, he is still left with more money than he knows how to spend under military contractors that he cannot control.

He juggles his reverses with remarkable agility. Before the vote, he says cutting the defense budget by a dime would threaten the security of the Republic. After the vote, when he loses by tens of millions of dollars, he proclaims it as a victory for austerity and demonstrates his gift for compromise.

But things are changing now. Even with agreed cuts in the budget and all Reagan's promises that his supply-siders would grow the budget into balance, the outlook today is that his contribution to history would be not a first or second "revolution" as he calls it, but a minor economic correction and the largest budget deficit in the history of the nation.

So the Congress is beginning to take a new look at him, particularly the new leaders of the Republican-controlled Senate, led by Bob Dole of Kansas. In last year's election,

Reagan

Reagan was their buddy. This year, they have a problem, and they're beginning to think Reagan is part of it.

Twenty-two Republican senators are up for re-election in 1986, most of them in dicey races. They are not sure they can win by supporting Reagan's budget, or his public attacks on the Democrats, the Russians, the farmers and the cutbacks in the old folks' Social Security benefits.

For the time being, the Republicans are riding high, against a leaderless Democratic Party, but they have a problem: If Reagan in the next year cannot come to terms with the Democrats over tax reform and make some progress with the Soviet Union on the control of nuclear weapons, chances are that the Democrats will control both the House and the Senate in the last two years of Reagan's second term.

This is why Dole and other Republican leaders are wondering if it is in the president's own interest, or in the interest of the Republican Party or the nation, to attack the Democrats when the president needs their votes to put over the most important, necessary and long-delayed tax reform.

They are telling him, or at least telling Donald Regan in the White House, James Baker III at Treasury and George P. Shultz at State, to cool it at home and abroad while they're ahead, and try to get tax reform and arms control before it's too late.

GEORGE F. WILL

Court busily pursuing a fast 'whale'

WASHINGTON — Melville's "Moby Dick" is either — readers differ — a great novel about God or a boring treatise about whaling. But Chapter 89 is about law and is relevant to the question of why today's Supreme Court, which does not suffer in silence, suffers from an onerous work load.

George F. Will

Last week the Court chewed yet again on the First Amendment's Establishment Clause, that simple injunction ("Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion...") which the Court has contrived to make absurdly complicated.

Melville praised the terseness of the whalers' code, which could be engraved in a harpoon's barb: "A fast-fish belongs to the party fast to it." And: "A loose-fish is fair game for anybody who can soonest catch it." But such concision left room for ample contention. Was a whale "fast" (attached) when just bearing a symbol of possession? Was a whale "loose" if dragging an empty boat?

The generalness of many of the Constitution's provisions guarantees for the Court a constant flow of work. The Constitution's open-textured language has allowed it to suit both a simple agrarian and a complex industrial nation. But the Court has kept busy deciding, for example, what constitutes "interstate commerce," or how the phrase "unreasonable searches" relates to electronic surveillance. The Establishment Clause, reasonably read, is devoid of complexity. It means government must not be partial to a particular religion or sect.

But last week a litigious Alabaman persuaded six justices (Stevens, Brennan, Marshall, Blackmun, Powell and — et tu? — O'Connor) to rule that Alabama ravished the Constitution with a law authorizing a minute of silence in public schools "for meditation or voluntary prayer."

A moral, although not a constitutional, objection to "voluntary spoken prayer" in schools is that it can be neither really prayer nor truly voluntary. It must be thin liturgical gruel to give no offense to any sect, and children will feel coercive peer pressure to participate. But what injury does a moment of silence do, even if the legislature hopes children will use it for prayer. The only "injury" is to a few litigious adults —self-appointed thought police —, whose injury is the annoyance they feel about what might be in a child's mind, or a legislature's hopes.

Had Alabama deleted the last three words in the phrase "meditation or voluntary prayer," the Court probably would have said the law passed constitutional muster. Indeed, the man who brought this frivolous suit (call him Ishmael, because that is his name) said he only did so because he detected a suggestion that prayer is the "preferred activity" during the silent minute.

The Justices could devote even more time to complaining about their case load if they would just use Will's Generic Opinion. It is a one-sentence opinion applicable in 99.99 percent of all contemporary cases arising from government action touching religion: "The practice in question does not do what the Establishment Clause was intended to prevent — impose an official creed, or significantly enhance or hinder a sect — so the practice is constitutional and the complaining parties should buzz off."

ART BUCHWALD

Preaching from a born-again nonsmoker

When someone gives up smoking he or she wants the whole world to hear about it. I know you weren't ready for this, dear reader, but I have given up cigars. I am a born-again nonsmoker — a confessed sinner who can now walk into any crowded room without stinking up the joint.

Art Buchwald

Don't go away. I want to tell you the story of my conversion. It doesn't do any good to stop smoking if no one will listen to how you did it.

First, I have to give credit where credit is due. I couldn't have done it alone. I got some help from that Big Nonsmoker in the sky.

It all began six months ago when, after lighting up one of the six or seven cigars I smoked every day, I suddenly heard loud coughing in the heavens. Then a thundering voice boomed, 'PUT OUT THAT DAMNED CIGAR.'

I didn't pay any attention because I was sure He wasn't talking to me. After all, I had been smoking for over 40 years and He never raised any objections before. So I continued for another week. Then my chest started to feel lousy and I became hoarse.

I looked up and said, "What's going on?"

The voice came down and said, 'I THOUGHT I MADE MYSELF CLEAR. WHAT KIND OF MESSAGE DO I HAVE TO SEND YOU?'

"Okay," I said. "I'm willing to deal. Let's just say I cut down to two or three a day?"

He would have none of it. 'THE NUMBER IS NON-NEGOTIABLE.'

"How about one petit corona after dinner?"

'DON'T YOU UNDERSTAND ENGLISH?' the voice said. To make His point He shoved a hot coal down my throat and I started to gasp for air.

Yes, He was responsible for my quitting, but He didn't give me that much help once I gave it up.

After I went cold turkey I had to face the prospect of earning a living. I could smoke a cigar without writing, but I couldn't write without smoking a cigar. In the beginning I just stared at the paper. To get going I tried typing exercises such as "Now is the time for all good men ... for all good men ... for all good men ... for all good men to light up a Monte Cristo Havana No. 3."

My mind would work in curious ways. I would want to write about the MX missile system, and the only thing that came out was "Puff the Magic Dragon." The song "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes" droned in my head, and the Marlboro Man kept riding across my computer screen.

Finally, in desperation, I looked up to the heavens and said, "How long do you expect me to keep this up?"

The voice came down, 'TRY CHEWING GUM.'

I was skeptical, but the first time I shoved a stick of gum in my mouth it worked. I found out if you have to keep moving your jaws all the time, you don't miss having a wet stogie between your lips.

Well, it's been all uphill since then. After my decompression period I discovered the beautiful world of nonsmoking. My lungs are now getting all the oxygen they so richly deserve and my brain cells seem to be relieved they don't have to absorb soot from morning until night.

What is even better is I am now a member of that band of brothers and sisters who can walk into a restaurant or get on an airplane and say loudly to the hostess, "No smoking section, please!"

I have to admit that like all born-again nonsmokers I look down on those who are still hooked. I don't get angry with them but I do something worse. I bore them. I tell them my story from beginning to end — how I was once a seven-a-day Dunhill man, but through the intervention of a higher spirit became a six-pack Doublemint gum fan. Then I warn them that we nonsmokers not only consider ourselves holier than they, but believe we have a mission to either convert all smokers, or persecute them until we drive the tobacco demons from their souls.

BILL MODISETT

Humans tend to look at things but fail to 'see' them

Bill Modisett

A vast amount of beauty in the world is overlooked simply because human beings exhibit an astounding tendency to look right at something but fail to "see" it.

Photographers — good ones, such as the late master Ansel Adams — realized that what a person with a camera sees in his mind's eye as the final photograph and what actually is shown to him through the viewfinder are two totally different pictures. That's why a lot of photographers are disappointed with their results.

The difference, I believe, is that people too often confuse their personal interpretations of life with reality. Those visualizations are not reality; only reality is reality.

Ironically, all too many people are falling into the modern-day dilemma of being unable to distinguish reality from what they are imagining. That's a dangerous dilemma.

It's dangerous because if a person faces a threat but does not perceive it as a threat, that person cannot react to the threat in order to protect himself. A good example is Communist aggression. Anyone who can read surely should be able to read The Communist Manifesto to ascertain the steps that are being taken today in the Western Hemisphere — even in the United States — to eventually gain control of free people.

Yet while many educated Americans see these occurrences, they do not "see" them. They're overwhelmed by the "public relations" job, more appropriately termed propaganda.

The same principle applies to the beauty of life around us. A lot of everyday pressures and distractions blind us to the beauty of nature, the beauty of people, the beauty that is all around.

That's a shame because we all have only one shot at this life and we should make the most of it.

Midland's Centennial is just around the corner and it seems as though there's a float in every building big enough to hold one in town.

The Centennial Parade certainly won't be the only part of Midland's 100th birthday celebration, but it will be an interesting part.

A lot of time and talent is being devoted to the floats, just as a lot of time and talent has gone into every phase of the Centennnial observance. That's commendable and it says a lot about the pride of Midlanders, which is one of the city's big drawing cards. People here care about their community and it shows — from the buildings they construct, to the lawns at their homes, to the vehicles they drive and the charities they support.

Midland is an unusual city. Midlanders are unusual — extraordinary — people and this Centennial will be unforgettable.

Don't miss it!

Blacks must remember hardships, struggles forefathers endured

By BARBARA HARRIS

Should we decide to take a trip back in time, we as a people must remember where we came from, meaning slavery.

We must remember the many hardships and struggles our forefathers encountered in order to survive. Had it not been for them we might not have been around today to celebrate Juneteenth U.S.A. It is hard for me to understand how, we as a people, who came from the "cotton fields" have made certain gains and yet are afraid to speak out and help our own people.

I believe in progress, yet I hope that I never become so big that I cannot give back to my people the principles and morals handed down to me by my foreparents. We want to be free.

Have we forgotten what it is like to be poor, downtrodden, locked out and stuck at the bottom of the boat of life? Have we forgotten that we as a people have a responsibility to our little black girls and our little black boys? We have the responsibility to teach them to become law-abiding citizens. We have the responsibility of teaching them to become productive citizens. We have the responsibility of teaching them to love one another. We have the responsibility of teaching them that the welfare role is only a crippler.

For generations our people have been crippled by handouts from the federal government. We do not need handouts. What we need are the tools which are the lifeline of survival. We need capital; we need earning power. We laid the foundation for this country. We fought the wars alongside the white man to gain freedom for this country. Why then should we not be allowed to be a free people?

The Emancipation Proclamation did not free us. It only saved the Union, meaning whites from the north and south. A people without capital cannot suffice. Our minds must be freed. The question is how we as a people who suffered from generation to generation, who suffered from damages caused by our great "white" fathers, are expected to be more than imbeciles?

We as a people are the smartest people on earth for, had we not been, we could not have survived. It is our brain power (meaning inventions the white man stole from us), our back power (meaning our manual labor which helped to build this country), and our strength and faith in God which helped to make America "the great society." We must help ourselves. Why do we as a people suffer these indifferences? Is it because our skins are black?

This brings to mind the question: Are all peoples with black skins really black, meaning their philosophy of the black concept? It seems that we, the educated (especially classroom teachers), are the most ignorant of all. No longer do we serve as role models for our youth but have become so acculturated that we live in glass houses and can no longer identify and deal with the problems our youth are struggling with. We now see them as "discipline problems." We now see them as "you people." We don't identify with the grassroots people to whom we turn in times of need. It is at this time the grassroots people reveal to us just where we stand.

We as a people enjoyed Juneteenth before desegregation. We drank red soda pop, ate barbecue and had fun and games, but, as soon as we were allowed to celebrate 4th of July we disassociated ourselves from Juneteenth and the black culture. We are at war with ourselves because for too long we were taught by the white man to lash at each other. Fifty stripes. It is an internal war, for whenever we think we are making progress both economically and socially the forces of evil and injustice cause us to slide backward.

It is time that we as a nation heed the warning that God is not pleased with the examples we are setting for our children. It is time that we backtrack and possibly try to find out who we really are.

My concern is not for me but for future generations. My concern is for a people who have lost their roots. Desegregation has not worked because it was viewed by the white man as a social tool. We socialize with whom we please but when it comes to our children our main concern must be for economic and educational change.

Traditionally Juneteenth was a day of celebration for our so-called "freedom." It's that time of the year again. So let us as a people enjoy "our" holiday by laying aside our guns, rudeness and indifferences.

In Houston, State Rep. Al Edwards is launching a project, which will become nationwide, called Juneteenth U.S.A. It is designed to bring the black culture together again. If anyone is interested or would like to know more about the project you may call the representative at (713) 797-6800. It is time that we be about our fathers' business and do what is right for our people. We must rid ourselves of the psychological chains which have bound us for so many years. We must continue to praise God from whom all blessings flow, but we must have jobs, resources and other tools to get us off the welfare rolls.

Parents shouldn't buy 'guilt trip' from MISD

Ms. Phyllis Slough and her daughter should not accept such a "guilt trip" from the instructors of the speech and drama department for "causing the whole group not to participate because of a low grade." This is apparently a ploy used by instructors of the Midland Independent School District to bring pressure on our legislators by the parents to modify the new school "no pass-no play" regulations.

I would like to say that I am in absolute agreement with the "no pass-no play" rule. In fact, my son was totally in the "pass" situation but had dropped 13 points in one course during the second six weeks. The report was received at home on a Tuesday before the band and orchestra was to go to Dallas for a national contest. I wrote a letter to Mr. Storie explaining that my son was not going on the trip. I received a message through my answering service that Mr. Storie wanted to talk to me immediately. I called him and was told that "unless my son went, I wasn't just punishing my son but the whole group." I don't buy guilt trips but to keep peace in the ranks, my son made the trip. He also brought his grade up to my standards of passing and not just the 70 required by law after the trip!

In discussing this matter later with Mr. Hines of the MISD, he stated that teachers were hired to see that their students bring back the "First Divisions" at all costs, even above student-teacher and parent-teacher relationships. This seems rather selfish on the district's part — to win a trophy in one field at the expense of developing a well-rounded individual. That's a problem that can be dealt with locally in future elections!

The real blame should not be borne by any one person, the student, the teacher who gave the below-standard grade, the teacher who obeyed the rules or the parent who may have been too busy to lend a helping hand that night before the test. We, the citizens of Midland, all share in the blame for we expect the best for and from our children. We are the ones who have set the stage for excellence.

There is no reason for guilt if we have given our best and then fall slightly shy of the goal. Learning is picking up the pieces and making a fresh start with the determination to be a winner!

Thanks for highlighting problem of illiteracy

Thank you for your editorial of Tuesday, June 4, which referred to Jonathon Kozol's book "Illiterate America" and the growing problem of adult illiteracy in this country. The problem exists locally as well, with 15 percent of the adult population in Midland County being functionally illiterate.

Adult illiterates suffer in many ways. Their employment opportunities are severely limited, frequently forcing them to rely on public assistance. They are unable to assist in their children's education, thus perpetuating the problem of illiteracy into the next generation. They are dependent on others and therefore are not in control of many choices in life. They cannot participate responsibly in our democratic form of government, which requires an informed, literate citizenry.

As your editorial mentioned, a solution to the problem does exist in our community. Midland Need to Read Inc. is an organization dedicated to alleviating illiteracy in Midland County. Volunteer tutors are paired one-to-one with non-reading adults. Each pair meets weekly at a mutually convenient time and place. The program is seeking both volunteers who want to tutor and adult students who do not know how to read or who have difficulty reading. People wishing more information may call Need to Read, which is located at Midland College, 684-7851 extension 243.

Through your informative editorials in the Reporter-Telegram the public gains valuable awareness of the illiteracy problem and of our community's concerted effort to alleviate illiteracy here.

Article about elderly left wrong impression

I would like to address an article printed in your paper last week, by William C. Collins and titled "Elderly Deserve Good Care." I feel there are several issues that should be addressed and corrected.

His statement that most of these patients are old and in their "second childhood" and are scared, frightened and lonely is totally incorrect. Our residents are like any generation. We have kind and loving residents. We have unkind and rude residents. We have alert and active residents. We have confused and inactive residents. No different from any other age group.

As for the amount of money you pay, in reality it is not very much. Most of our residents are Medicaid recipients. The state rate is $31.12 per patient per day. Just a few weeks ago, the county jail issue made front page and this county said they would pay up to $45 per prisoner per day for transfer and housing to another jail. Does that put it into perspective for you?

Yes, I'm sure it was a difficult decision to place your loved one in a nursing home. But, in reality you made that decision because you were no longer able to care for them at home. The job was too tough. So now we not only have this difficult job but we also have to address your guilt feelings and complaints daily.

You say criminal charges wouldn't hurt. Why don't you take those attorney fees and do something nice for a nursing home?

Yes, Midland should be proud of its nursing facilities. Give us the support you give your prisoners and you can be proud.

Midland has again proven caring nature

I am writing as a friend of Mary Gradwohl and her 13-year-old daughter, Jennifer. I've thought before that Midland was a special place — a caring community — and I recently found how caring it can be just as the Gradwohl's have.

On Memorial Day, I accompanied Mary and Jenny to Lima, Ohio, their hometown. Mary moved to Midland in November 1982, and is employed at Midland Memorial Hospital as Director of In-service Education. In January 1984, Mary was diagnosed with cancer. Through the extensive process of surgery, chemotherapy and radiation, and finally into the terminal stage of her illness, Mary received unconditional love and support by so many it is impossible to name everyone.

There were those she worked with at MMH who gave so much — from cleaning her house and doing yardwork to arranging her trip back to Ohio; there is the staff of Allison Cancer Center; the Hospice organization; the congregation of St. Steven's Church and her faithful neighbors who have all given so much; and finally, Petro Jet Aviation.

To all of you, you blessed Mary, Jenny and her family with warm, loving memories of Midland. I personally witnessed these displays of love and caring and would like to thank each and every one of you for the support you offered Mary in her stay in Midland.

City streets pave way for Centennial spirit

I have recently read with interest that the Jaycees have assured the Midland Centennial Committee that the Plaza that they are sponsoring will be completed by the anniversary date. They are certainly to be commended for taking on this worthwhile project.

I have also learned that the same committee has been assured by the city of Midland that they will have the streets of Midland in the same condition that they were in 1885 by the anniversary.

Democrats go after Reagan's point man — Weinberger

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Some Senate Democrats were calling this week for the resignation of Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. The latest tactic was to try to blame him for scandals involving defense contracts, most of which were concluded under previous administrations.

The real reason for the efforts to get rid of Weinberger is no secret. He has been the point man for President Reagan's program to restore American military strength which a Democratically-controlled Congress allowed to become so weak the Soviets now have the capacity to knock out our land based Minuteman missiles in a first strike.

This patriotic man has maintained year after year that the only way to secure a nuclear arms reduction agreement that will not leave the Soviets with superiority is to regain strategic balance.

By indefatigable perseverance despite a divided administration and hostile media, he has succeeded, with the president's strong support, in getting a recalcitrant Congress to provide, even during the recession, funds for the greatest peacetime military buildup in U.S. history.

NOW HE IS deeply concerned that congressional cuts in the defense budget will sap the negotiating strength the military buildup was intended to give us in the arms talks with the Soviets. He is particularly concerned about the move in Congress to slash, by $1 billion, funds for the president's research program to defend America against nuclear attack.

Initial efforts to do so were defeated in the Senate Tuesday, but other attempts will be made, especially in the House, to block increased spending on the program. Sen. John Warner (R.-Va.), said a freeze "would jerk the chairs from beneath" our negotiators in Geneva.

It was a week ago this past Sunday that my report to you was devoted to this subject. Under the heading "Defense or Defeat," I wrote about the danger of letting the Soviets be the first to develop a strategic defense system. It was therefore gratifying to have my views confirmed this week by the greatest authority on the military status of our country and the Soviet Union. In an exclusive interview with Joe Kingsbury-Smith, our National Editor, Secretary Weinberger expressed fear cuts the Senate has already made in the defense budget and others being proposed in the House could so weaken our negotiating position in Geneva that the arms talks with the Soviets would fail.

"ESSENTIALLY, IT comes down to the way the Soviets perceive the reductions," he said. "I am afraid it will add to their hopes that they can secure their objectives outside the negotiating table simply by waiting us out. Knowing how unpopular defense spending is in our country at present, they may feel they can secure reductions in our defense program unilaterally simply by our refusal to continue with necessary re-armament programs.

"I am worried about voluntary reductions in our defense systems, and in investments we need to make, not only because of the effect it has on our own military but because it makes it very much more difficult, if not impossible, to get the decent arms reduction agreements we need."

Q. Since no progress has been made in the Geneva talks, do you believe the Soviets are stalling to see to what extent Congress cuts the defense budget?

A. "It's consistent with that. First of all, they want to stop our strategic defense program. That is the thing the Soviets want more than anything else. I really worry about the proposed reductions in that program. It is a vital program and we are making major progress in the research. Strategic defense is something the Soviets have been working on for 16 or 17 years. They are ahead of us, especially in laser research. They want to keep a monopoly. If they should get such a system, we would be living in a much more dangerous world."

Q. What would happen if they were the first to develop and deploy such a system?

A. "We would all be subject to nuclear blackmail. We would be told by them, on this hypothesis, that they had a defense against our missiles and therefore they could launch a first strike with impunity and we could make no adequate response. If you feel as I do that their continuing overall objective is world domination, then you have to worry very much."

Q. In the 1960s, the Soviets favored defensive missiles over offensive ones. Then Soviet Premier Kosygin declared at the Glassboro conference with President Johnson that "defensive weapons are moral, offensive weapons are immoral." On two separate occasions at the U.N. in the '60s, Foreign Minister Gromyko argued that strategic defense could be the key to agreements on offensive nuclear weapons. What changed their minds?

A. "I suppose one of the reasons is that they have been making progress on strategic defense and they don't want anyone else to have such a system. They accuse us of planning to develop a new offensive system, which is totally misleading. What we are trying to do is develop a system that could destroy Soviet missiles outside the atmosphere by non-nuclear means in a way to render them impotent. The president has said that if we developed such a system, we would offer to share the knowledge with the Soviets on condition they join with us in eliminating offensive nuclear weapons. But we don't want them to pursue and achieve it unilaterally because we don't believe they would share it with anybody."

This is the kind of realistic thinking we need in Washington. We should all hope, and write our Washington representatives if you feel as I do, that Weinberger must continue to serve as Secretary of Defense for at least the rest of President Reagan's term.

THIS WEEK IN GOVERNMENT

City Council

Ideas for revitalizing East Midland will be presented to the Midland City Council when it meets at 10 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers. Giving the presentation will be the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce representatives. Roger Robles is president of that organization.

The council also will look at proposals to amend four ordinances. One change would allow the possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages within Centennial Plaza Park under certain conditions, the second would change the hours of use of public parks and the third would address restricted areas and large gatherings in parks. The fourth would add a regulation of circuses, carnivals and menageries to the City Code.

At 1:35 p.m. a public hearing will be held on a request by Charles Rothwell for a zone change from 1F-1, single family district, to 1F-3, single family district, on the northeast corner of Crockett Avenue and Alamo Drive.

A 1:45 p.m. hearing will consider a request on appeal by Subaru of Midland North for a zone change from LR-3, local retail district, and 1F-2, single family district, to PD, planned district, for a transition district on the northeast corner of Big Spring Street and Shandon Avenue.

A 2:15 p.m. public hearing will be held to consider a request by Nicholson Courter Joint Venture for a zone change from 1F-1, single family, to PD, planned district for an office development on the southwest corner of Garfield and West Golf Course Road.

In other action, the council will consider a request by Bill Saxton for a clarification on the sidewalk requirement adjacent to Trinity Manor Park on Loop 250, Sinclair and Sunshine Parkway; a taxicab franchise to B.G. Lee doing business as Yellow Checker Cab Co.; and a request by Centennial Commission to close Texas Avenue between Colorado and Main streets on July 5.

Commissioners' Court

Midland architect Walter Pate will discuss renovation of the Midland County Jail in the 8:30 a.m. Monday meeting of the Commissioners' Court in the Midland County Courthouse.

The jail is to be repaired, upgraded and expanded under a $3 million bond program in order to correct jail deficiencies and to bring the jail up to standards set by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

Of the $3 million, approximately $2.4 million is to be allocated toward renovating the 12-year-old jail on fifth floor of the 1930-vintage courthouse. The balance is to be spent on expanding Culver Youth Home and funding a study of courthouse and jail needs into the 21th Century.

In other business, the commissioners are to:

— Meet with 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin in discussing computer systems for the county.

— Discuss office space in District Attorney Al Schorre's Office.

— Record certification of juvenile facilities in Midland County.

— Consider rescinding plat of Greenview Acres.

— Discuss a sprinkler system at Fairview Cemetery.

Wal-Mart to build facility at Plainview

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. will start building a distribution center here this fall that eventually will employ 400 local residents, company officials said Saturday.

Wal-Mart had taken the Plainview site out of consideration in February, but after more contacts from Plainview Industrial Foundation representatives and others, the Bentonville, Ark.-based firm put the city back in the running.

The 700,000-square-foot distribution center is the 10th to be built in the discounter's 20-state trade territory. States to be serviced by the distribution center include Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Wal-Mart operates 768 stores and recorded $4.6 billion in sales last year.

PROMISE NUMBER 6

Tom Wageman, President, RepublicBank First National Midland.

"Over the past few months, I've been telling you about a new and improved RepublicBank First National Midland.

"New and improved because of all of our personal commitments to give you faster, more personal, more effective service than ever.

"Many of you have seen results. Many of you have given us suggestions on how we can better help you, your business and the community. And those suggestions are being acted upon.

"But the one thing that we want you to know is that we're not stopping now. Simply because we're determined to be your bank. And we know the only way we can achieve that goal is through continued efficient service to you.

All That Remains

You'd never know it now, but 30 years ago Midland Country Club was located on the outskirts of the city, nine holes at the corner of A Street and Cuthbert. Today the view from the sixth tee over the water, left, and the weed strewn foundation of the old club house and parking lot on Cuthbert are all that's left of the old MCC.

Down Memory Lane

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The original intention was a piece recalling the time the Golf Hall of Fame came to Midland in 1955 for the "christening" of the Midland Country Club located way out on the FM road to Lamesa, the one which only recently had been paved all the way.

It soon became a trip down memory lane as Jake Bechtold, an assistant at MCC back then, began going through his file of clippings and pictures.

Jake is now the golf pro at Odessa Country Club, but he remembers well when the U.S. Ryder Cup team stopped in Midland on the way to Palm Springs, Calif., to face the British.

As opposition for the Ryder team, a Challenge team had been picked to oppose the 10 players who would face the British.

The combined teams indeed were a future Golf Hall of Fame.

"I remember Ben Hogan, Dizzy Dean, Jimmy Demaret and Boyd Huff (the MCC pro) were playing a match the day before the Ryder-Challenge," recalls Bechtold, "On the snakelike 15th hole, Hogan smacked a drive that landed plop on the green. He was playing from the back tees, so it was a 600-yard drive."

MCC WAS then in the process of moving from its "downtown" home to its new "out-of-town" location. Bechtold, who came to MCC in the fall of 1953, recalls, "They had been playing on the new course for two or three years. I remember you had to be careful of the rattlesnakes then. When the Ryder-Challenge matches were played here, the clubhouse hadn't been finished. We were using temporary buildings and a tent was set up for the match."

The old course was closed at the end of 1954. It was located at A and Cuthbert. The only vestige of the old nine hole course is Grafa Park at the corner. The gazebo is located on the old sixth green. A couple of blocks to the west a concrete foundation, beyond the traces of a parking lot, can be found hidden in the weeds. It is all that remains of the old clubhouse.

The nine hole course ran, roughly between A and D streets to Golf Course Road. Anything north of that was "country."

Angels pound Gators, 12-3

By TED BATTLES

Midland continued to beat out a steady tattoo of base hits only this time Reggie Montgomery and Dave Heath made sure base runners didn't wither on the vine as the Angels defeated Beaumont, 12-3, before a bumper crowd of 2,151 at Angels Stadium Saturday night.

That evens the Texas League series at one each going into tonight's 7:30 p.m. game, the first Sunday night game of the season.

Montgomery and Heath accounted for seven ribbies between them as Midland, which left 29 runners stranded in its last two games, both losses, showed some production for a night in which 13-hits, nine-walks and one error put 22 runners on base.

SPIRO Psaltis, the lefthander from Southern Cal, making his first start of the season, picked up his second win with relief help from another lefty, Eddie Delzer, who a year ago at this time was pitching Fullerton State to the College World Series championship at Omaha.

"Psaltis really picked us up," said Manager Joe Maddon. "He made 111 pitches" in going 5 1/3 innings. It was only his third start in two years.

After a shakey start in which he battled his control in surrendering a first inning run, Psaltis settled down until Midland scored seven runs in the fourth inning. Beaumont pitchers issued five walks in a row, four forcing home runs, as Midland sent 12 batters to the plate. The inning was so long that Psaltis went to the bullpen to loosen up. However, he wasn't as effective after the long layoff.

Heath put Midland ahead to stay in the second with a home run, behind a walk to Montgomery, that cleared the fence in center.

He later singled home a third run in the sixth.

MONTGOMERY raised his team-leading rbi total to 53, driving home two runs with singles in the fourth and plating another with a sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Newcomer James Randall opened the big fourth with a double off lefthander Ed Vosberg and Montgomery singled him home. Heath grounded into a force out and then was picked off first base and the rally seemed to be over. However, Kevin Davis beat out an infield hit, Greg Key singled and then came the five straight walks, all with two out, before Montgomery drilled a hit up the middle for two more runs.

Key shared most hit honors with Montgomery at three, turned in an outstanding catch in the outfield and stole a base.

"That stolen base was a good piece of base running. He got a good jump off Vosberg, who is a hard pitcher to read," praised Maddon. "Greg hasn't played that much, but when he does play, he plays hard."

Texas to meet Miami for title

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Billy Bates led off the bottom of the tenth inning with a triple and scored on Doug Hodo's third single of the game to give Texas an 8-7 victory over Arkansas in the NCAA College World Series Saturday night.

The victory sends the Longhorns, now 64-12, to a Sunday championship game with Miami, a 6-5 winner over Mississippi State earlier Saturday. Should Miami, 62-16, win Sunday's 7:10 p.m. contest, a second championship game would be held at 7:10 p.m. Monday in the double-elimination tournament.

Arkansas staked starter Howard Hilton to a 7-0 lead through the first six innings. Dave Patterson singled home one run and scored on Mike Loggins' two-run homer in the third.

Loggins and Jeff King singled with one down in the fifth. Loggins scored on Norm Roberts' sacrifice fly and King came home on a throwing error — Texas' third error of the game. Ralph Kraus doubled home another run in the sixth.

Bates spoiled the Razorback shutout bid in the sixth when he singled, moved up on a walk, a fly out and scored on Hodo's ground out.

Texas scored five in the seventh. David Wrzesinski led off with a misjudged double and scored on an RBI single by Coby Kerlin. Bates walked to oust Hilton and Dennis Cook walked off reliever Pat Rice to load the bases. Arkansas relief ace Tim Deitz came on to walk David Denny for one run, Hodo's infield single scored another, Cook scored on an infield error and Denny came home on a ground out by Rusty Richards.

Denny opened the bottom of the ninth with a walk and moved up on Hodo's single and a sacrifice by Dodd Johnson. He scored on a Richards groundout to tie the game. Deitz then struck out pinch hitter Bobby Behnsch and worked out of trouble with Kerlin's ground out.

Cook, 5-1, shut the door on Arkansas in five innings of relief, while Deitz, now 5-2 for the 51-15 Razorbacks, took the loss.

Arkansas won four of five regular-season encounters with Texas and was the only team to beat Texas in the Longhorns' last 30 games.

Miami 6, Miss State 5

Greg Ellena lined a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth to keep sixth-ranked Miami alive with a 6-5 victory over Mississippi State in the NCAA College World Series semifinals Saturday.

Ellena's homer, his 14th of the season and third of the tournament, gave Miami a boost after a grand slam homer by Mississippi State's Bobby Thigpen in the sixth inning.

Ironically, Ellena hit his game-winner off 1-4 Thigpen, who had just relieved Bulldog starter Jeff Brantley.

Miami tagged Mississippi State's Brantley for two runs in the first inning on two errors and a two-run single by Chris Magno.

The Hurricanes added another on Jon Leake's ninth homer of the year with nobody on in the fifth.

Thigpen's blast in the sixth followed a one-out error, a ground out and walks to Will Clark and Rafael Palmeiro. Miami relief ace Ric Raether then came on and Thigpen took a two-one pitch 400 feet to left-center field.

After Palmeiro singled home Gator Thiesen for a 5-3 lead in the eighth, Miami's Chris Hart tripled off the right-field fence and made it 5-4 when he scored on a throwing error.

Leake walked to lead off the bottom of the ninth and Thigpen came on in relief of Brantley. Ellena drilled a two-strike pitch deep to left-center to pull out the Hurricane win.

Verplank gains Texas Amateur lead

LAKEWAY (AP) — Defending champion Scott Verplank shot his second straight two-under-par 70 Saturday to take a three-stroke lead into the final round of the Texas State Amateur Championship.

Verplank, an all-American from Oklahoma State and the reigning U.S. Amateur champ, carded four birdies and two bogies in Saturday's round.

The Dallas native's 36-hole total of 140 keeps him ahead of Houston's Mike Booker, the first day leader, and Mike Board of Austin, who has just completed his senior season with the Texas Longhorns.

Booker and Board shot 74 and 73 respectively for 143 totals at the Hills of Lakeway tournament.

A's slip by Rangers, 6-5

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bruce Bochte's two-run single triggered a four-run sixth inning and the Oakland A's went on to a 6-5 victory over the Texas Rangers Saturday.

Bochte, foiled badly by knuckleballs from Texas starter Charlie Hough, 5-5, his first two times up, came to bat in the sixth after a single by Dave Collins and a double by Carney Lansford. The A's first baseman broke a 2-2 tie b hitting a Hough knuckler into right field, scoring both runners.

After Mike Davis singled, Dwayne Murphy singled to scored Bochte and Mike Heath collected his third RBI of the game with a sacrifice fly.

A's starter Chris Codiroli, 7-3, gave up solo homers to Don Slaught and Larry Parrish before getting relief help with two out in the seventh from Keith Atherton. The reliever went on to gain his first save despite giving up a two-run homer to Oddibe McDowell in the ninth.

Codiroli allowed only six hits in 6⅔ innings.

After Slaught homered for the Rangers in the fifth, Heath gave Oakland a temporary lead with a two-run homer in the bottom of the inning. Parrish's 10th homer with two out in the sixth tied the game briefly.

Tigers 10, Blue Jays 1

TORONTO — Kirk Gibson drove in five runs with a three-run homer and two doubles and Chet Lemon also hit a three-run shot as the Detroit Tigers buried the Toronto Blue Jays.

Rookie right-hander Randy O'Neal, making his second start since being recalled June 2 from Nashville of the Triple-A American Association, gave up four hits, struck out four and walked two in seven innings in snapping Toronto's winning streak at five games.

Gibson's third hit of the game, a run-scoring double in the seventh inning against Ron Musselman, the third Toronto pitcher, gave the Tigers a 9-1 lead. The Detroit left fielder then scored his third run of the game one out later on Darrell Evans' double to cap the Tigers' run production.

Yankees 2, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Dale Berra hit a one-out single to score Dave Winfield from second base in the 13th inning and lead the New York Yankees to a victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Winfield opened the 13th with a single off losing pitcher Bob Gibson, 5-3. One out later, Winfield stole second. Berra then followed with a single to right and Winfield scored when the throw from right fielder Bobby Clark was down the line.

Dave Righetti, 4-5, who retired the only batter he faced in the 12th, was the winning pitcher. Rich Bordi pitched the 13th inning to gain his first save.

Cecil Cooper's two-out single in the eighth inning gave the Brewers a 1-0 lead but the Yankees came back to tie in the top of the ninth on Dan Pasqua's one-out sacrifice fly with the bases loaded.

White Sox 3, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Britt Burns celebrated his 26th birthday by checking Minnesota on three hits over 6⅔ innings and Greg Walker and Ron Kittle homered as the Chicago White Sox beat the Twins.

Burns, 7-5, retired 13 straight batters after Roy Smalley's RBI single in the first inning. Bob James relieved with two outs in the seventh and earned his 12th save. James, who gave up two hits, has 12 of Chicago's 13 saves this season.

Walker hit his eighth home run of the season in the first inning after Harold Baines doubled with two outs off John Butcher, 4-5. Kittle hit his eighth homer, and third in the last three games, in the fourth inning.

Minnesota, which has lost 13 of its last 15 games, scored in the first when Tim Teufel singled, Mickey Hatcher walked and Smalley lined his single to center.

Red Sox 2, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — Bruce Kison scattered seven hits over 7⅔ innings and the Boston Red Sox extended their winning streak to six games by beating the Baltimore Orioles.

Kison, 3-1, who struck out eight, left after allowing a two-out single to Eddie Murray in the eighth inning. Bob Stanley relieved Kison and struck out four in recording his seventh save. The victory was Boston's ninth in the last 10 games.

The Red Sox scored two unearned runs in the fourth inning to overcome a 1-0 deficit and pin the loss on Scott McGregor, 4-5. Dwight Evans led off by reaching safely on first baseman Eddie Murray's error. Evans was sacrificed to second and stole third. It was Evans' first stolen base since April 24, 1982.

Glenn Hoffman singled home Evans and Dave Sax followed with his first major league hit, a single to center, to send Hoffman to third. Reid Nichols then hit a sacrifice fly.

Indians 12, Mariners 8

CLEVELAND — Pat Tabler drove in six runs with a grand-slam homer and a pair of run-scoring singles, giving the Cleveland Indians a victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Tabler, who singled home the go-ahead run during a five-run rally in the eighth inning, helped the Indians overshadow a brilliant performance by Seattle's Phil Bradley, who went 5-for-5 and drove in three runs.

Bradley had given the Mariners a 8-7 lead in the top of the eighth with an RBI triple. His five hits, including four singles, marked the first time a Seattle player had accomplished that feat in a nine-inning game in the team's nine-year history.

Brett Butler led off the Cleveland eighth with a double, moved to third on a flyout and scored the tying run when second baseman Jack Perconte made an error on Mike Hargrove's grounder. Brook Jacoby singled pinch-runner Otis Nixon to third, and Tabler followed with an infield single that drove in Nixon and put the Indians ahead 9-8.

Joe Carter squeezed home another run and Jerry Willard capped the rally with a two-run double.

Shortstop-Kevin Davis

SHORTSTOP

DEFENSIVE KEY

The shortstop is the key to the defense. Often he is the team captain. And whether he is or not, he is generally the "holler guy" in the infield, the man the club depends on to keep the defense on its toes.

He acts as relay man on most throws from center or left-center field. He has to "go back" often for short fly balls and chase pop flies to the third baseline and beyond. He fields everything he can reach, from the balls hit over the pitcher's mound, to those that may get by third baseman.

Obviously the shortstop needs a strong arm, for he often has to fire the ball from deep in the hole near third base or relay it home from the outfield. He should be in the habit of making his throws overhand, with lots of power.

GROUND BALLS

Most ground balls are hit through the shortstop's position and many of them come through with a lot of sizzle. A shortstop therefore must play his position fairly deep, so he has time to get the range on ground balls and not let them handcuff him before he can move.

A shortstop charges every ground ball. There will be rare onces that will be on top of you before you can move and on these you may have to fall back a step to get your hands on the ball. But you should plan to charge every ball and tell yourself that every ball is coming to you. Slow hit balls especially need to be charged hard, to shorten the throw and beat the runner.

DOUBLE PLAY

Shortstop and second basement must practice together constantly to become familiar with each other's moves on the double play When the shortstop throws to the second basement on this play, he must try to get the throw chest-high to the man. You should deliver the ball to him before he reaches the base.

Whenever you throw to first base, you should make it a habit to step toward the target. This makes your throws more accurate, provides more power, and takes a lot of strain off your arm.

Rivalry gets new life — Lloyd wins

A jubilant Chris Evert-Lloyd jumps into the air after clinching her victory over Martina Navratilova at the French Open Saturday.

By SAM ABT
N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — Chris Evert Lloyd had not beaten Martina Navratilova in a Grand Slam tennis tournament since 1982, but she got some compensation Saturday by defeating her archrival in the French Open final, 6-3, 6-7, 7-5.

It was "one of the toughest matches of my life,"said Lloyd after capturing theclay-court tournament for a record sixth time.

The 30-year-old American from 0-40 down on serve at 5-5, then broke Navratilova to win the last set.

"There are so many places I could point at and say, 'If I had won this, if I had won that'" Navratilova said ruefully.

THE MOST prominent was the game that gave Lloyd a 6-5 lead. As the match neared its third hour of play, Lloyd started by double-faulting, flubbing the return of a passing shot and hitting into the net.

At that stage, Navratilova had won 11 of the last 13 points and seemed on the verge of the comeback that let her win the second set in a 7-4 tiebreaker after she had trailed in games, 3-1 and 6-5.

But Lloyd pulled up to deuce with a reflex return at the net that Navratilova just missed hitting back. Next Lloyd drove a backhand into a corner that Navratilova failed to reach in a sprawl, and finally Navratilova put a forehand into the net.

THEY BATTLED to deuce in the next game, then Navratilova hit long and Lloyd put a passing shot down the line for the championship.

"This was the closest, most suspenseful final we've played," Navratilova, 28, said of the long rivalry. They have met 65 times, with Navratilova having won 33 times, including 17 of the 19 matches before Saturday. Earlier this year, Lloyd beat her, 6-2, 6-4, in the Virginia Slims of Florida.

"It's one of those great rivalries," Navratilova said, admitting that only Lloyd was able to give her competition on the circuit. Lloyd said that "having Martina around has given me new goals."

"My two goals for this year were beating her and winning a Grand Slam tournament," she said. "Now I've achieved that."

ON SUNDAY, Ivan Lendl, the defending champion, meets Mats Wilander for the men's singles title.

Lloyd won another Grand Slam event, the Australian Open, last December. If she wins the Wimbledon title next month and the U.S. Open in September, she will earn a $1 million bonus from the International Tennis Federation. She last beat Navratilova in a Grand Slam event in the 1982 Australian Open. Last year she lost to Navratilova in the French final, 6-3, 6-1.

"She blew me off the court last year," Lloyd recalled.

Neither player did that Saturday. The match was erratic, even sloppy in spots, as service was lost 17 times, including 9 times by Navratilova. "We had game points all over the place," she said. "Either one of us could have won, or we could have played forever, but you don't have draws in tennis."

NAVRATILOVA said she had not played her best before the capacity crowd of 16,000 at Roland Garros Stadium. "I played on heart mostly, because I didn't play as well as I hoped for or as well as I can," she said. "I had so many shots on my racquet that if I had made them, it would have been a different story. But Chris played a great match.

"I always knew that if I didn't have a good day and Chris had a great day, she would beat me. I wasn't sharp, but she's playing better tennis now than she ever has. It's nice to know you can improve at 30."

ON A crisp, windy day, neither player chafed to much about conditions on the red-clay court. McEnroe complained bitterly about the wind after his loss in the men's semifinals to Wilander Friday.

"I couldn't go too close to the line because of the wind," said Navratilova, who plays the same sort of attacking game as McEnroe. "The wind was an equalizer."

She said her serve had failed her. "I don't know where my serve is," she said, "but it's not here, it's not in France. I can't lose my serve nine times and win a match. It's encouraging to have broken her seven times, though."

Navratilova said she would concentrate on her serve in preparation for Wimbledon, which starts June 24. Lloyd said she, too, was looking forward to Wimbledon.

French Open

Lendl-Wilander match wits

PARIS (AP) — When Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and Mats Wilander of Sweden meet in Sunday's French Open men's singles final, it will be the third time in four years that the Lendl-Wilander winner will capture this Grand Slam tennis tournament.

In 1982, Wilander stopped Lendl in the fourth round before going on to become the youngest player in history to capture the men's singles at Roland Garros Stadium. Last year, Lendl defeated Wilander in the semifinals before he outlasted John McEnroe in a dramatic five-set final.

Sunday's battle will match clay court players who rarely make mistakes, and the winner will need the right combination of physical skill and strategic cunning.

THE CLASH is likely to be something of a chess game, with long baseline exchanges, careful approach shots and little close-quarter combat at the net.

For people who like "thinking man's tennis," it could be a classic.

"I think it's really going to be a long mental battle," said American Stan Smith, a former U.S. Open and Wimbledon champion.

Lendl is favored. He's in the best shape of his career and playing the best tennis of his life. He holds a 7-5 career edge over Wilander, including four wins in their last five meetings on clay.

But Wilander has, as McEnroe said after losing to the Swede in the semifinals Friday, "the ability to pull it together for the big tournaments."

Wilander, who has not won a tournament since successfully defending his Australian Open crown in December, admits the lesser events sometimes bore him. But the French Open, the only one of the four Grand Slam events on clay, is not one of those.

"I'VE BEEN looking forward to this tournament for several months," the 20-year-old Swede said.

At 17 years, 9 months, Wilander became the youngest player to win this tournament when he beat Guillermo Vilas of Argentina in a four-set, 4-hour, 22-minute marathon — the longest final since organizers began keeping track of match times 12 years ago.

But it was one of those seemingly endless baseline rallies that put most fans to sleep. Since then, Wilander's game has evolved. He still tends to hug the far end of the court, but he's more aggressive now at the net, and he says he probably will try and force the play.

"My basic game is still at the baseline," Wilander said. "But my strategy will be to work my way to the net and make him (Lendl) make the passing shot off his backhand."

"I EXPECT a very long, tough match," Lendl said. "But I'm in good enough physical condition to stay out there as long as I have to."

Smith, who is here as a broadcast commentator, predicted that "they're going to be staying back a good deal at the baseline. But Mats will have to be more aggressive."

"Lendl only came to the net three times against (Jimmy) Connors (in the semifinals), and one of those times was to shake Connors' hand" at the end of the match, Smith said.

Creme Fraiche makes Stephens winner again

Belmont Stakes

NEW YORK (AP) — Trainer Woody Stephens did Saturday what is becoming old hat to him — won the Belmont Stakes.

The 72-year-old Hall of Fame trainer won an uprecendented fourth straight Belmont and this time he did it with a twist. He won what is known as a breeder's race with a gelding — Creme Fraiche, the first gelding ever to win a Belmont.

And for good measure, Stephens finished second with Stephen's Odyssey, the Kentucky Derby runner-up 1½ lengths back. Favored Chief's Crown finished third, 4 ½ lengths further behind.

THE TIME for the 1½ miles on a muddy but fast track was 2:27, which made the 117th Belmont the fastest since Affirmed clinched the Triple Crown in 2:26 4-5 in 1978.

"I doubt if anyone will break this record," said Stephens, who had been one of three trainers to win three straight, and the only one in this century. Stephens, who has won more than 200 stakes in his career, had never won a Belmont until his streak started.

BEFORE THE race, Stephens had said he felt the horse he had to beat in the $512,900 race was favored Chief's Crown, who also was the beaten favorite in the Derby, when he finished third and the Preakness when he finished second. But Stephens indicated the horse he felt he would win with was Stephan's Odyssey.

It was big day for the 36-year-old jockey Eddie Maple. He had missed the ride on Conquistador Cielo when he was hurt in a spill before the 1982 Belmont. He didn't ride Caveat or Swale, because he elected to ride two hotter Triple Crown prospects trained by Stephens — Chumming in 1983 and Devil's Bag last year.

"I'm very happy. I've had some unfortunate things happen," Maple said. "But Mr. Stephens throws me a bone once in a while."

WHILE IT was a big day for Stephens, Maple and owner Elizabeth Moran, it was a day of disappointment for Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Klein, trainer D. Wayne Lukas and jockey Pat Day.

Tank's Prospect, the Preakness winner, ridden by Day, pulled right front suspensory ligaments during the stretch run, according to Dr. Ted Hill. He finished last in the field of 11 3-year-olds.

Hill said x-rays would be taken Sunday, but Klein said the colt, who also had won the Arkansas Derby and was seventh in the Kentucky Derby, would be retired from racing.

Creme Fraiche, who had won the Kentucky Derby Trial on a sloppy track, was making his debut in Triple Crown competition. Until Saturday, his 3-year-old campaign had been marked by five seconds in top competition, including a runner-up finish to Kentucky Derby winner Spend a Buck in the Jersey Derby on May 27.

SPEND A Buck was missing Saturday, just as he was missing May 18 when they ran the Preakness. He is the first Derby winner to miss the final two races of the Triple Crown since Tomy Lee in 1959.

Chief's Crown, ridden by Angel Cordero, who had won the Derby with Spend a Buck, broke on top, but he didn't keep the lead for long and he regained it with a quarter of a mile to go.

But he couldn't hold it as he couldn't hold it in the Preakness and became the third horse to be the beaten favorite in all three Triple Crown races.

Harvard crew renews winning tradition

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Harvard broke a four-year winless streak Saturday in the 120th Yale-Harvard Regatta, outstroking the Elis from the half-mile mark to the finish in steady rain on the Thames River.

The Crimson won the four-mile upstream crew race in 19 minutes and 41.1 seconds, finishing 16 seconds ahead of Yale, which had taken the past four renewals of America's oldest intercollegiate sporting event.

"I think it's a safe conclusion to say we're the stronger crew," Harvard Coach Harry Parker said just before his happy team tossed him into the chilly river water.

PARKER'S CREWS had won 18 straight regattas over Yale until 1981, when Yale finally won the Sexton Cup. After recapturing the trophy Saturday, the coach would make no predictions about new winning streaks.

"We'll take them one at a time," he said.

Harvard now has won 69 times since the first Yale-Harvard crew race on New Hampshire's Lake Winnipesaukee in 1852. Yale has won 51 times.

Panhandle's Meredith tops in walleyes, smallmouth

Some of the nation's best fishing for walleye and smallmouth bass now can be found far from the the native range of these particular fish.

Lake Meredith, largest reservoir in the Texas Panhandle, has developed a strong fishery for the two species after stocking programs that were inaugurated back in the 1960s for walleyes and mid-1970s for the smallmouth.

Biologist Joe Kraai claims anglers caught more than 18,000 Walleyes during spring through June 1984, and this year's production appears to be equally as good. During the same period in 1984, anglers harvested more than 6,000 smallmouth and the 1985 pace is even better, according to Kraai.

Kraai says Meredith is typical of many West Texas reservoirs whose clear water and rocky habitat is generally not favorable for largemouth bass, but is excellent for walleyes and smallmouths.

Most smallmouths at Meredith are in the 10-14 inch range, but several in the five-pound class have been taken this year. Meredith walleye fishermen do best fishing along rocky points and around submerged islands with live bait or jigs fished near the bottom. Smallmouth are caught most frequently with live bait along the rocky shorelines...

. THE ARID Permian Basin would seem to be an odd place to catch a saltwater red drum, commonly called redfish. That's why Lawrence Hicks, Seminole, was surprised to land an 11-pound red while fishing for white bass at Lake Colorado City in April. The fish was one of 200,000 small red drums stocked during 1981-82 by the TWPD.

Redfish in the six to eight pound class were fairly common during spring and early summer in 1984 and a few 10 and 11 pounders have been caught so far in 1985. Redfish have been stocked at Colorado City and several other power plant lakes across in the state to provide an additional sport fish and to control populations of tilapia and other forage species....

SUMMER weather has stimulated fishing at Lake Thomas and Lake Spence as rains offered the prospect of two-feet inflow at Thomas and a more modest increase at Spence.

Catfishing dominated the Thomas action with Sid Brooks, Snyder, landing a 19-pound yellow and Dwain Hoffman, Rowena, taking a trio at eight, 15 and 20 pounds.

Black Bass fishing was good along the weedy shoreline areas with artificial bait, but crappie fishing was poor.

At Spence, stripers were in the small to intermediate range, catfish ranged up to 34½ pounds for one blue and a 6½ black bass was reported. Area anglers reporting: Mrs. W.J. Mashburn, Abilene, 19½ pound striper; Jamie Evans, Midland, 6-pound yellow; David Copelanad, Midland, five-pound striper; O.C.Estes, Big Spring, 34½ pound blue cat on trotline; R.A. Tidwell, San Angelo, 21½ pound yellow; Don Manley, Midland, five stripers to 8½ pounds.

For the angler who asked, the bass club hasn't checked in yet, so there is no report on the monthly tournament.

TROTLINE angler Raymond Sutton puled a 39-pound white amur, or grass carp, from the Colorado River above Lake Buchanan May 10. The fish was so full of eggs, according to the TPWD's Jack Reynolds, they ran out when the fish was picked up. The fish was estimated to be eight years old.

Grass carp are a prohibited fish in Texas because of the potential threat for removing vegetation vital to production of game fish species. Although grass carp are supposed to be primarily vegetarian, this was one was taken on a hook baited with a live crawfish...

PUBLIC school teachers and administrators who wish to include wildlife and environment in their curricula now may receive assistance through a new program administered by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept.

The WILD project is an education program designed by and for teachers and includes a six hour workshop and printed activity guides. Wild, directed at elementary and secondary schools, is an international network of educators, wildlife professionals, youth leaders, community representatives and 32 state wildlife and resource agencies....

AN 81½ pound smallmouth buffalo caught from the Sabine River in April by Wayne Willoughby and Crook Parker of Center has been certified as a new state record. The old record, also from the Sabine, was 80 pounds...

How can anyone lose 200 whales a year?

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

"How can you lose 200 whales?" Scott Kraus asked.

But each fall, about 200 whales disappear from their summer feeding and breeding grounds in the Bay of Fundy, off the coast of Maine.

Since it is believed that less than 300 of the 35-to 50-foot animals survive, Kraus and other investigators from Boston's New England Aquarium, along with a team of five Delta Air Lines pilots who volunteered their personal aircraft, have been searching the Southeast coast for the whales.

Their first survey, in 1984, proved at least some of the animals, called right whales, migrate from the Bay of Fundy to the Southeast. Photo identification proved 14 of 15 whales sighted in Southeastern waters had been in the bay during the past five years. Four cows had new calves, obviously born off the Southeast.

The whales can be identified because each of them has a patch of white callosities, wart-like growths, on its head. The patterns of these callosities appear to be as individual as human fingerprints.

Weather conditions made the searchers' jobs nearly impossible for most of this year's one-seek survey.There were high winds, rough seas and whitecaps — making it difficult for even an experienced observer to spot the V-shaped cloud of mist which marks a right whale breathing on the surface.

Seven whales were spotted, including two new calves, all off Georgia and north Florida.

Kraus had hoped to thoroughly explore two theories during the search. One was that the whales migrate along the coast in water about 600 feet deep. The other is they headed south until they ran into the Gulf Stream, which formed a sufficient barrier to prevent them from migrating into the gulf.

"In the bay of Fundy the whales are always hanging around the 100-fathom line," Kraus said. "It could be there's something about that water depth they like."

That theory was particularly difficult to check because only one of the five aircraft was a twin-engine plane, and taking a small, single-engine plane 70 miles out to the 100-fathom line is risky in case of engine failure.

The survey flight drew a blank.

"The Gulf Stream could be a severe barrier," Kraus said. "It varies from 20 to 35 miles wide as it flows around Florida up the Southeast coast. Where it is narrow, the current flows at more than three knots. Where it is wider it slows to two knots or more.

"For a whale whose cruising speed is about four knots, that's quite an obstacle to plow into. They simply might not want to try it," Kraus said, "trying to think like a whale."

Pacific gray whales migrate south to breed and bear their young. It is believed the grays do not feed during their southern migration, gorging on tiny sea creatures during time spent in Arctic waters.

Picking right nature book is made easier

By NELSON BRYANT
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Many who are truly interested in the natural world have an insatiable hunger for books that can range from huge volumes devoted exclusively to trees, plants, fish, mammals or birds to general-purpose guides.

No single text can have all the answers, of course, and this poses a problem when one is visiting a new area and wishes to bring along only one or two reference books.

One's choices are always a compromise, but that decision has been made easier by The Audubon Society Nature Guides, a seven-volume set that will be published by Alfred A. Knopf the 13th of this month: Atlantic & Gulf Coasts, Western Forests, Grasslands, Wetlands, Deserts, Pacific Coast and Eastern Forests.

The innovative idea behind these guides — each of which has more than 600 pages and 600 color photographs — was to gather together in separate volumes the most common plants and animals one might encounter in each of the aforementioned regions or habitats. As an example, the subtitle of the Atlantic & Gulf Coasts volume reads: "A comprehensive field guide, fully illustrated with color photographs, to the birds, plants, seashore creatures, fishes, whales, and other natural wonders of North America's Eastern shores, from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico."

ONE IS always tempted to test any such guide against one's own knowledge of a specific creature. I, for one, had to see if the volume on the Atlantic coast included the tiny commensal crabs that dwell in the mantle cavity of various bivalve mollusks, crabs I first encountered more than 40 years ago while dining on blue mussels that I had gathered. It did.

These guides also include excellent essays on the forces that create, sustain and change a beach, forest, grassland or wetland, and the creatures that use certain portions of such habitat, whether the Cape May warblers that nest and forage for insects in the treetops, or the Atlantic mole crabs that live in the intertidal zone and uses its feathery antennae to filter food from a wave's backwash.

Published in soft cover at $14.95 each, these Audubon Society guides would prove immensely valuable to any amateur naturalist with a special interest in the North American continent.

LEONARD Wright Jr. is passionately devoted to fly fishing for trout, but what separates him from many of his kind is a penchant for keeping track of what he has observed, and a delightful disregard for conventional theories about the behavior of the fish he holds in such high esteem.

His recently published "The Ways of Trout" (Nick Lyons Books — Winchester Press, $13.95) is based on nearly a quarter of a century of catching and observing trout in a famous New York State trout stream.

More than 20 years ago, Wright began feeding the trout in a 1-mile stretch of the stream with trout pellets used by hatchery operators. He discovered that while newly stocked fish relished such fare, the wild fish did not.

Recalling that Edward R. Hewitt, a legendary Catskill fly fisherman, had offered ground-up lungs, or lights, to his wild fish, Wright did the same and "was rewarded by trout splashing as far as I could see downstream."

His basic intent in this continuing endeavor, one should add, is to increase the growth and winter survival rate of the fish, and he carefully points out — lest some reader might believe he was engaging in the dreadful act of chumming — that he fishes a stretch of water before the lights are tossed in.

"I have learned more about trout — where they live and when they eat — from feeding than I have from over 40 years of intensive angling," he writes. "When you can create a super-hatch at will, observe fish behavior from a chosen vantage point, chose excellent light conditions and have no ulterior or piscidal motives — it is surprising how fast folklore and faddist theories crumble."

One theory Wright believes that he has toppled is the widely held notion that one can count on trout feeding most actively at dawn and dusk. While conceding that this often happens in midsummer, Wright adds, "But alter the season, the barometer, or the water temperature and this pat schedule is useless."

TED BATTLES

Join us on a fun-filled, romantic idyll overseas

This is the year the colonies are supposed to reoccupy Europe. The freshly-scrubbed masses are queuing at DFW, O'Hare, Kennedy, Logan, Hartsfield and even Pyote International for the migration back to the old countries...for a visit.

It's nothing spontaneous. Even Ike might have envied the efficient mobilization of the operation.

Everyone's going. They say you can't afford not to. The evidence is everywhere. You've seen the huge ads in which a highly-visible couple invites you to join them in a Highland fling; a night in Paris and a day in Nice; a game of hide-n-seek among fjords of Norway or maybe an Aegean cruise or an Agatha Christie venture up the Nile.

It almost makes a trip to Colorado seem like treason or, at least, the act of a slacker, if you'll pardon a WWI expression.

ONE READER called to inquire if I had a tour planned. He'd read about some of my past trips "and those other trips seem so unimaginative. With you, I'm sure a trip would be an adventure to remember, if you survived the usual calamity."

He sounded like someone who had been talking to the Mrs. But it just so happened, there is a tour shaping up, a budget excursion for the working stiff. Yes, we'll be going to the emerald isle of Greenland.

The Mrs., apparently weary of Durango, Telluride, Silverton, picked this one out. Her distorted reasoning is that, with my track record, if we start out for Greenland, there's no telling where we might wind up.

A reader in Hunstville upon hearing of our destination called for a reservation, "Hey, any place sounds good to me. If I can break way, count me in."

Actually, Greenland has a certain appeal and it's one of the best bargains, in this year of bargains, around.

During WW II, an uncle signed on as a carpenter for the Navy in Greenland, although the letters arriving a half world away made it sound like he spent much of his time taking the brass hunting or fishing. Even since, Greenland has held mystic appeal for me.

FOR WHAT amounts to pocket change, you get 14 delight filled days and two invigorating nights in this fantasy land. The imbalance of days and nights is because for a five to seven week period, in most parts of Greenland, the sun doesn't rise, primarily because it never sets.

Your holiday idyll will begin by rail, Midland to Pyote, where you will be herded aboard a bomber from the old mothball armada which stretched as far as the eye could see after WWII. You will leave at day break on Chitwood Airlines (the Airlines for the Poor Devils Who Dare). Lunch will be served in a brown bag, which will come in handy later. There will be refueling stops at Ira, Broken Bow, Broken Arrow, Joplin, Peoria, Vandalia, Donora and Mauch Chunk before arriving in Maine.

The overseas flight will depart from Caribou, where even now a field is being chopped down for take off. Caribou is the last refueling stop, providing there's a tail wind, before touch down in lovely, romantic Godthaab.

In Godthaab, you will be whisked away to your sod hut suite, since the igloos by this time will have succumbed to the long summer days. The first day you will take a get-acquainted tour of Godthaab, whose history dates back to 1721. Your welcome dinner will be a fresh fish feast of cod liver, tasty white lemmings, sauteed whale blubber and diced walrus. The next three days are free to brouse the shops and explore at liesure both blocks of this fascinating city.

On the two-week trip, which costs just half as much as the one-week trip, your free time is six days before embarking for the wonder-filled journey by musk oxen and kayak to Thul, the world's northernmost city, ah er, town, well a, settlement.

Of course, there is skiing in the summer atop the 12,200 foot Watkins Mountains. There is one hitch and that is there is no hitch, or lift up the iceflow that blankets the range.

You will see Humboldt Glacier, no relation to the Humboldt Sink in Nevada. The glacier stretches 50 miles wide along its sea front. Of course, at this time of the year, the fog along the coast is pea soup thick, so you may have to take the word of your tour guide, who speaks fluent Greenland, although Danish is the official language.

The guide is very experienced and the oxen sure-footed, so there is no need to worry about calving. Calving is how icebergs come into the world, and is the term used to describe how the berg drops from the parent glacial mass into the deep water fjords along the lone shorelines with the precipitous, often sheer, sides at times as high as 4,000 feet.

YOU will pass magnificent laurel, fig and magnolia forests on the journey. Of course, the forests are waiting their turn to sprout forth again once the 7,000 feet of glacier under which they hibernate melts. You will board a romantic kayak at Cape Farewell and the final leg of the trip to Thul. Food fare will be raw fish, walrus and creamed whale blubber, just as it has been since arrival in this wonderful land.

The return trip will be via Godhavn, complete with get acquainted dinner and the free time for liesurely exploration.

And, no trip to Greenland would be complete without a relaxing stop at the Riviera of the North, where you can swim, splash and sun to your heart's content. Thank God Harbor boasts a summer temperature of 82, thank God.

Arrival back in Godthaab will be featured by the departure dinner, walrus etc... before the return trip to the States, which begins as soons as there is a tailwind.

Astros increase winning streak over Giants to eight

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Nolan Ryan allowed three hits over seven innings and Denny Walling drove in two runs Saturday night as the Houston Astros defeated the San Francisco Giants 4-1.

Ryan, 6-3, struck out seven and walked one for his fourth victory in his last five starts. He increased his all-time major league leading strikeout total to 3,961, 56 ahead of Steve Carlton.

Frank DiPino took over to start the eighth and gave up three hits, including an RBI single by Bob Brenly. Dave Smith relieved with the bases loaded and two outs and retired Jeff Leonard on a long fly ball to end the inning, and then pitched a hitless ninth for his 10th save.

Bill Laskey, 1-6, took the loss as Houston beat San Francisco for the eighth straight time.

Cubs 7, Pirates 3

CHICAGO — Chris Speier drove in four runs with a homer and a single and Jody Davis cracked a pair of doubles and drove in two runs to lead Steve Trout and the Chicago Cubs to a victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The triumph was the Cubs' third straight and fifth in the last seven games and gave them sole possession of first place in the National League East as the New York Mets dropped a 1-0 decision to St. Louis.

The loss was the fifth straight for the Pirates.

Trout, 6-1, was making his first appearance since May 17 because of a nerve injury in his left pitching elbow and was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning. Larry McWilliams, 3-4, took the loss after coming off the disabled list because of a strained left shoulder.

Cardinals 1, Mets 0

NEW YORK — Tommy Herr hit a two-out home run in the ninth inning to give the St. Louis Cardinals a victory over the New York Mets behind John Tudor's three-hitter.

The home run, Herr's second of the season but first batting right-handed, came on a 3-1 pitch from Mets' left hander Tom Gorman, 3-2. It was only the third hit of the game for the Cardinals.

Gorman took over in the ninth for Mets' right-hander Ed Lynch, who had pitched eight scoreless innings but left for a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning.

Herr's home run, only the second given up by Gorman in 24 innings, gave the Cardinals' second baseman the National League lead in RBIs with 50.

Braves 7, Dodgers 3

ATLANTA — Right-hander Rick Mahler hurled a seven-hitter and batted in two runs in eight innings and Rafael Ramirez keyed a four-run second inning with a three-run homer, leading the Atlanta Braves to victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Mahler, 9-5, who won his first seven games before losing five of the next six, again fell behind early when he yielded a two-run homer to Pedro Guerrero in the first inning.

But after the Braves tied the score 2-2 on Terry Harper's two-run single in their half of the first, Mahler singled home the run that put the Braves ahead in the second. He also hit a sacrifice fly in the third.

The victory was only the seventh in 16 games for the Braves, who enjoyed one of their best offensive showings of the season.

Reds 7, Padres 4

CINCINNATI — Cesar Cedeno hit a three-run homer and Dave Parker drove in two runs as the Cincinnati Reds beat the San Diego Padres.

Cedeno's homer, his first of the year, came in the fourth inning after Parker walked and Tony Perez singled off Dave Dravecky, 4-4.

The Reds took a 2-0 lead in the first. Gary Redus singled, stole second and after Dave Concepcion walked, scored on Parker's single. A sacrifice fly by Perez drove in the second run.

Joe Price, 2-0, making only his second start of the season, worked five innings for the victory. The Padres scored three times in the fifth on an RBI single by Jerry Royster, a sacrifice fly by Steve Garvey and Alan Knicely's passed ball to pull within 5-3.

Expos 4, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Andre Dawson homered and drove in three runs to lead the Montreal Expos over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Bryn Smith, 6-2, gave up eight hits in 6⅔ innings for the victory. Gary Lucas got the final out of the seventh inning and Jeff Reardon pitched two scoreless innings for his major league leading 17th save.

Gunslingers get paid

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Gunslingers, who had threatened to walk out unless management came up with back pay, received cashier checks Saturday — just five hours before a deadline imposed by the United States Football League Players Association.

Les Singleton, the team's public relations director, said the players were paid in full about noon CDT.

Players Association director Doug Allen had given Gunslingers owner Clinton Manges until 5 p.m. CDT to produce funds to cover at least one of two missed pay periods.

THE PLAYERS received checks due them for both pay periods, Singleton said.

The checks averted the possibility that the Gunslingers would have been declared free agents and Sunday's game against the Los Angeles Express would be canceled.

All features great and small.

Angels kick off 65 Roses drive

From Staff Reports

The Midland Angels will kick off the "65 Roses" Sports Club to benefit Cystic Fibrosis Foundation at a pregame party for club members and guests Thursday at Angels Stadium.

The Angels management and fans joined forces to form the club, which will be part of a nationwide fund-raising effort to fight cystic fibrosis, the nation's No. 1 genetic killer of children and adolescents.

CF is an inherited disease which attacks the respiratory and digestive systems. Only half the children born with CF now are expected to live to be 21. For a CF child, each day of life requires constant medical and therapy.

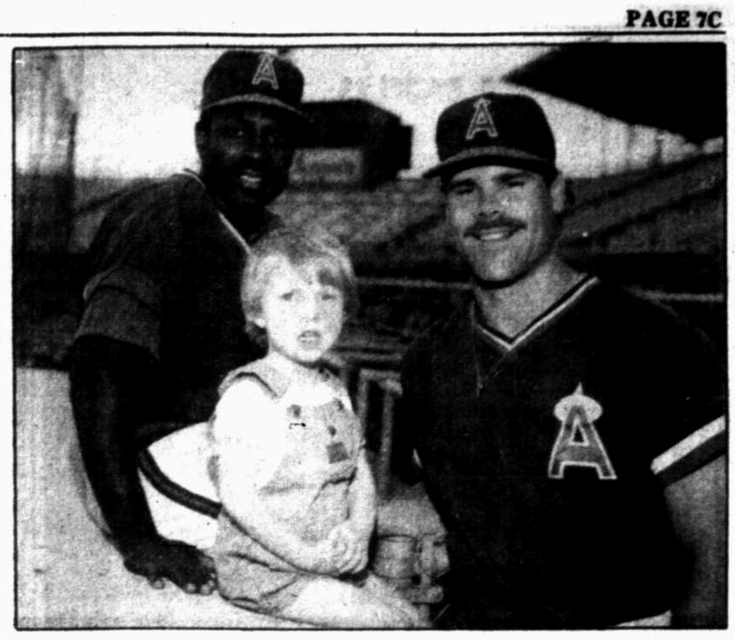
Contributions made by the Angels 65 Roses Club are tax deductible and will go for research education and treatment programs.

Club members will receive tickets to selected home games when 65 Roses parties are planned. They will meet players, management and media personalties before the games.

Cost of membership is $65 annually. The "65 Roses" name chosen for the club was the result of a young patient's mispronunciation of his disease. In addition club members pledge $3 per home run hit by Angels players in 1985.

Thursday's party will be hosted by the CF foundation and the Midland Angels. This year's steering committee is chaired by Barry Williamson. Committee members include Robert E. Burns, Alan Douglas, Mrs. Robert B. Holt, Bill Howard and Joe A. Achilles.

Inquiries should be addressed to the Midland Angels' 65 Roses Sports Club, P.O. Box 80302, Midland or 699 4484.



Midland Angels player representatives Greg Key, left, and Tito Nanni with young fan Tyler Burns. Tyler, son of Bobby and Denise Burns of Midland, has cystic fibrosis.

Newspaper seeks UGA's records

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Superior Court Judge Franklin H. Pierce will hear a newspaper's lawsuit seeking financial records of the University of Georgia's athletic department.

Pierce, of the Augusta Judicial Circuit, was assigned to the case after two judges in Athens disqualified themselves.

The Macon News and Telegraph is suing the University of Georgia Athletic Association Inc. Pierce will hear arguments from both parties at 10 a.m. June 11 in his chambers in the Richmond County Court House.

The suit was filed in Athens May 9 and assigned to Superior Court Judge James Barrow, who filed an order later that day disqualifying himself from hearing the case. Superior Court Judge Joseph Gaines also disqualified himself on that date.

Barrow and Gaines cited personal and professional relationships with the University of Georgia Athletic Association as reason for their disqualification.

In his order, Barrow said he "is not impartial in this matter and hereby disqualifies himself from participation in the trial ... because of personal and professional relationships with the university's athletic association for a period of 35 years."

The Macon newspapers will be represented at Tuesday's hearing by attorney Walter Bush of Macon. Georgia Assistant Attorney General Patrick McKee and Atlanta lawyer Nickolas P. Chilivis will represent the University of Georgia Athletic Association Inc. in the case.

Syracuse shaken by court ruling

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Officials say it will be difficult to gauge the impact of a state Supreme Court ruling that Syracuse University must pay some property taxes on its Carrier Dome because it uses the arena for events unrelated to its educational mission.

Syracuse Mayor Lee Alexander hailed Friday's decision as a precedent for other municipalities that are trying to collect property taxes.

GOLF

The nine hole course ran, roughly between A and D streets to Golf Course Road. Anything north of that was "country."

"The first two holes from the clubhouse along D were par four dogleg lefts," details Bechtold. The course worked its way back to A street with a par three and dogleg right and five and six led back to Cuthbert. "There was a short par three back to the clubhouse and eight went out over where the water is located today before nine returned to the clubhouse.

"The old course was shorter, tighter and had smaller greens than the new course," appraises Bechtold.

John and Bernadine Carrigan were the club managers before and after the shift. Boyd Huff was the golf pro during the transition period and until the 1960s. Jimmie Gamewell, who was to become first golf pro at Hogan Park Golf Course, which opened in 1958, was the greenskeeper and Frank Essex, who died in 1984, was the course superintendent.

THE RYDER Cup team stopped in Midland for its Challenge match, "because it was a convenient place to stop. The previous stop on the tour had been in the east and Midland was on the way to Palm Springs" site of the match with the British.

Although such names as Byron Nelson, Hogan, Demaret, Sam Snead, Dr. Cary Middlecoff were in the field, Bechtold, then a 20-year-old assistant pro, was most thrilled by Lloyd Mangrum's presence. "He was my hero. He looked like a professional gambler."

It was Middlecoff who set the original MCC record of 65, later broken by an assistant pro at MCC in 1959 who was to become Bobby Nichols.

Well, he was Nichols all along, but he hadn't yet been introduced to the golf world. Bobby had been a standout high school football player in Kentucky, and was high on Bear Bryant's list. However, an auto accident injury ended Nichols' football career, but Bryant recruited him anyway for the Texas A&M golf team.

Nichols, after graduation came to MCC as an assistant, and received his ticket to the pro tour from members, who bought stock the produced an $8,000 grubstake for the young golfer. Nichols rewarded the confidence by winning the PGA title a few years later.

The Cup team that year was captained by Chick Harbert and members were Middlecoff, Snead, Ted Kroll, Jerry Barber, Tommy Bolt, Doug Ford, Chandler Harper and Jackie Burke.

The bunch rounded up to provide the "challenge" was equally impressive—Demaret, Vic Ghezzi, Al Besselink, Fred Hawkins, Don Cherry, Mike Souchak, Bob Monbrief, Bo Wininger, Byron Nelson and Bob Rosburg.

All in all, the teams read like a future Hall of Fame.

IN REMINISCING, Bechtold really stirred the memory glands with names like Pat Stapler, Gloria Ezell, the Jastrow boys (Kenny and Terry), Graham Mackey, Raymond Leggett, Ted Kerr, Wendy Green, Jimmy Smith and Van Ligon, outstanding amateurs of the day.

"I was at Waverly in 1952 when Pat lost to Jackie Pung in the National Amateur because her approach shot on 18 hit the leg of a scorer's table. She lost the hole and the match one up."

Gloria Ezell was a contender not only in club competition, but in the annual Women's West Texas until stricken by polio. It ended her days as a top amateur, "but she wouldn't give up. We fixed up a golf cart so that she could lean back against it for support when she swung and she continued to play."

Bechtold, talking like someone who might have lost a little money, sounded like he was issuing a warning, "Jimmy Smith and Van Ligon were tougher than wood haulers to beat. They were a good pair to stay away from."

"The Jastrows were two of the best young golfers around in those days. I loaned Terry an old wood for that movie Waltz Across Texas and every time I see it I say to the screen, 'Terry, don't hit off that hardpan.'"

Terry was good enough to receive a golf scholarship to the University of Houston, one of the premiere golfing schools in the nation, and that led to a career in TV, and eventually the movies, although he still is active in TV. In fact, he orchestrated for TV the opening ceremonies of the Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

"Wendy Green was a fine amateur and when he went on the pro tour actually won more money than Nichols did in his first 12 tournaments. Wendy didn't have the backing Bobby had, though."

BECHTOLD, doing a little theorizing, said the Midland-Odessa area abounded with good young golf talent in those days—the Jastrows, Bill Franklin, Ted Kerr, Graham Mackey and Raymond Leggett made Midland strong in the 1950s and 1960s and Odessa Permian was strong in the 1970s.

"I think when we abandoned the West Texas Pro-Am, it hurt golf development. We used to hire 250 caddies, sign carriers and clean up crews here (Odessa CC) and they got to watch the top touring pros and best amateurs in Texas," Bechtold said. "You'll notice that the golf power in District 4-5A has shifted east to Abilene, where Cooper has been a powerhouse and I really think the fact that they host the LaJet Classic each year has been part of the reason."

Alice Miller, a five-stroke leader in the McDonald's Championship after three rounds, acknowledges applause from the crowd after sinking a birdie putt on the 9th hole.

Nervous Maltbie has 'butterflies'

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) - Roger Maltbie, tied for the lead with George Burns, knows what to expect in Sunday's final round of the $500,000 Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic.

"Anybody who is tied for the lead going into the last round and doesn't have butterflies is not human," said Maltbie, who won three titles in his first two years on the PGA Tour but now has gone eight full seasons without a victory.

PGA

Maltbie, who bogeyed three of four holes in one stretch over the front, needed only a round of one-over-par 72 in the occasionally drizzling rain to overtake the front-running Burns, who has led or shared the lead all the way.

"I'm playing pretty good golf," Maltbie said Saturday. "I think this was my bad round. I look forward to tomorrow with expectations and great optimism."

BURNS, ONE shot in front when the day's play started and one in front when the national television cameras completed their coverage for the day; did not make a birdie in his round of 73.

"It was a good day for scoring—but not in my case," he said. "I didn't putt well and I hit only 11 greens. I'll have to be more aggressive tomorrow."

Burns and Maltbie completed three trips over the rain-slickened hills of the Westchester Country Club golf course in 205, eight under par.

"What we did, basically, was let a lot of other guys back in the golf tournament," Maltbie said. "Some people who weren't very close now are in pretty good position and that's mobody's fault but George and me."

CLARENCE ROSE, playing with Burns and Maltbie in the final threesome, was one shot off the lead at 206 after a 70.

Joey Sindelar, winner of the Greensboro Open this season, pitched in from about 90 yards for an eagle on his way to a 66 that lifted him to 207, two back going into Sunday's final round in the chase for the $90,000 first prize.

"I'd like to get in the habit of winning the week before the majors," said Sindelar, whose Greensboro triumph came the week prior to the Masters. The U.S. Open will be played next week.

Wayne Levi, who played more than half his round in a chilly, steady rain, managed a six-under-par 65, the best score of the day, and was at 208.

WILLIE WOOD and Mike Donald were next at 209, four off the pace. Wood, the smallest player on the tour, matched par 71. Donald shot a 72.

Fuzzy Zoeller, who will defend the U.S. Open championship next week, had a 73 that left him at 216.

"You just can't play the way I did and win here," said Burns, whose last victory came in the 1980 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

Miller coasts in front with third-round 68

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Alice Miller scored five birdies on the front nine and coasted to a 68 Saturday to take a five-stroke lead after three rounds of the $400,000 LPGA McDonald's Championship.

Miller, 29, equaled a tournament record by finishing the first nine holes in 31 shots but slipped to 37 on the back nine for a 54-hole total of 204, a dozen strokes below par.

LPGA

Her five-stroke lead was the largest after three rounds in the five-year history of the 72-hole tournament at White Manor Country Club near Philadelphia. Amy Alcott led by three strokes after 54 holes in 1981.

Tied at 7-under-par 209 are Beth Daniel, who won here in 1983, Nancy Lopez and Myra Blackwelder, who has yet to win in six years on the tour.

DANIEL, 28, shot a 71 in the third round over the 6,283-yard, par-72 course, after scoring 68 and 70 in the first two rounds.

Lopez, also 28, had Saturday's best round, making six birdies and only one bogey for a 67. She rallied from 10 strokes behind Miller after the third hole Saturday.

Blackwelder, 1980 rookie of the year, fired a 3-under-par 69 in the third round to go with a first-round 67 and a 73 on Friday.

Anne-Marie Palli scored a 2-under-par 70 in the third round and was seven strokes off the pace at 211, five shots below par.

Alcott, Betsy King, Judy Clark and Chris Johnson at 212 were eight shots behind Miller, the leading money winner this year with earnings of $217,125.

ALCOTT SHOT a 72, King and Clark 71 and Johnson 70 on Saturday as they competed for the $60,000 first prize.

Defending champion Patty Sheehan had a par 72 Saturday for a total of 214, 10 strokes back. Veteran JoAnne Carner had a third-round 69 but was at par 216 for the 54 holes. Pat Bradley shot 74 and was at 219.

Miller, who led Daniel by two strokes going into the third round, birdied the first three holes with putts of 8, 12 and 1½ feet. She matched par on the next four holes, but rolled in a 10-footer on the eighth and a four-footer at No. 9 to go 5-under at the turn.

AFTER A par at No. 10, Miller hit behind a tree, had to punch the ball out and took a bogey at the 11th. She also bogeyed the 13th when she chipped past the hole and missed a 10-footer coming back. She regained one stroke with a 15-footer at the 16th.

Daniel, behind six strokes after the front nine, cut the margin to three at the 13th hole. But Miller picked up two strokes with her birdie at No. 16 and Daniel's bogey on the final hole.

Miller's 31 on the front nine equaled a tournament record also held by Sheehan, Bradley, Debbie Skinner and Dianne Dailey.

Ireland cheers as McGuigan halts Pedroza

LONDON (AP) — All Ireland, north and south, Protestant and Roman Catholic, was celebrating Saturday night as Barry McGuigan dethroned Panama's legendary Eusebio Pedroza to capture the World Boxing Association featherweight title.

McGuigan won a unanimous points decision after flooring the Panamanian in the seventh round of the 15-round bout.

McGuigan attacked Pedroza from the opening bell and gradually wore down his grim-faced opponent with relentless body and head punches.

It was the 29-year-old Pedroza's first loss in 20 title defenses stretching back to April 1978.

"I'm sure delighted," said McGuigan, in tears as he was joined by his wife Sandra, a Protestant, and 18-month-old son in the ring afterward. "I'm so glad to have beaten such a renowned champion."

"Pedroza has been one of the best champions of all time."

MCGUIGAN DISCLOSED after the fight he had pulled an elbow ligament, which made him unable to train for four days.

When the decision was announced, pandemonium broke out among the staunchly pro-McGuigan throng. Some 13,000 of his fans had traveled from the republic and from Northern Ireland — where his fanatical following includes both Roman Catholics and Protestants — to cheer on their hero.

Saturday's title fight nearly came to an end in the seventh round when McGuigan, after missing with several left jabs, suddenly unleashed a roundhouse right cross to Pedroza's chin, followed by a left hook.

The Panamanian bounced against the ropes and hit the canvas. He stood up almost immediately, took a mandatory eight count and went on to recover well in the following round.

BUT IN the ninth, he again was rocked with the right-cross, left-hook combination. He reeled backwards, his legs folding underneath him, as McGuigan continued to land a series of lefts. The champion was saved by the bell, but so great was the crowd's roar that the gong was drowned out and Pedroza took several more seconds of pounding before the fighters were separated.

The 32-year-old Panamanian slipped twice on the canvas before he was sent reeling for a third time in the 13th round, again with a left-right combination from the Irishman.

Course record falls on calm day

SPARKS, Nev. (AP) — Winds quieted over the Wildcreek Golf Course Saturday, allowing Jim Ferree to fire a course-record 66 and forge a two-shot lead after 36 holes of the $200,000 PGA Seniors Champions Classic in Sparks, Nev.

Ferree, in search of his first Seniors golf title, was at 6-under-par 138 after his opening-round 72 over the 7,892-yard, par 72 course, two shots better than Peter Thomson.

Thomson, one of the senior tour's most dominating players in 1985, shot a 72 to go along with an opening round 68 and stood at 4-under 140 in the 54-hole event that concludes Sunday.

Ferree, 53, who has missed only three greens in 36 holes of play, said he finally got his putter to cooperate with the rest of his game Saturday. "I was putting very well out there today," said Ferree, noting he had four 3-putts greens during the opening round.

Ferree explained a lack of wind that swept this desert golf course on Friday made the difference.

In contrast, Thomson said his inability to make any putts made for a "dull day. I didn't get any putts in today. That was it," Thomson added.

Thomson said as many as seven players are in good position to take the $30,000 first prize. "I feel if I can play well I can win it. That's the way it should be, isn't it?"

Moving into contention with a 4-under 68 was Gay Brewer, who had a 3-under 141 after an opening-round 73. Brewer said his chipping game saved several keys pars, an aspect of his game that had been of concern in recent weeks.

Three golfers were at 2-under 142, including former U.S. Open winner Gene Little and opening-round leader Ken Towns, who ballooned to a 75 after a 67 Friday. Towns said he hit a "couple of gooney shots" and never got any rhythm going.

Cowboys' Springs surrenders to sheriff's department

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboy Ron Springs turned himself to the Dallas County Sheriff's Department Saturday, where he posted a $200 bond on a misdemeanor assault charge.

A warrant charging the 28-year-old fullback with Class A misdemeanor assault had been issued in magistrate court last Tuesday, said Cpl. B.W. Little.

Springs turned himself in to the jail Saturday and was allowed to leave after posting bond and being fingerprinted, Little said.

The assault charge stems from a complaint filed by Mesa Julian Jr., who claims the National Football League player knocked him down during an argument May 25, said sheriff's department spokesman Jim Ewell.

A court date will be set for the case, Little said.

Buses Excalibur and Senator were snugly parked next to one another and between Winnebagos on the north side of the stage. Although the West Texas wind was blowing, the sun beat down relentlessly. Working in the outside heat, with no swimming pool in sight, on a ranch west of Midland was not what most would pick as top on their preference list of how to spend the first Saturday in June.

The sky to the west of the ranch was patched with clouds, the kind which hold rain. However, no one working at the Faudree Ranch June 1 was praying for rain.

Crystal Gayle was to perform that evening during the second annual Round Up '85, a benefit for the American Cancer Society in Midland. This year's Round Up was expected to surpass last year's figure of $89,000. It did by at least $44,000.

When the doors opened at 7:30 p.m., a crowd of at least 1,400 was expected on the grounds for an evening of games, which included a dunking booth, a horse shoe toss, cow chip throwing, watermelon seed spitting and mechanical calf roping; entertainment provided by Ms. Gayle and the Hill City Cowboy Band of Fort Worth; dancing in front of the decorated barn on the concrete slab dance floor; and dining under the stars on a meal catered by the Perini Brothers of Buffalo Gap.

Shortly after 5 p.m., Senator's door swung open. The silver bus did not have an elaborate design as did the burgundy one parked next door which was used by band members. Down the side of Excalibur was a custom designed scene of a red-caped warrior mounted on a black steed, his sword, held high over the shore of a dark lake, pointed toward a castle on the opposite side while a multi-colored striped moon shone over all.

When the door opened across from this painted scene, out stepped a tiny, fragile-looking young woman. The trademark was clearly evident; her hair hung down to the backs of her ankles.

She climbed onto the stage, belted out part of "Our Love is on the Faultline," was joined by her sister, Peggy Sue Wright, for a sound check on their voices and then by Duncan Mullins for yet another one.

Most of the volunteers within hearing range took a break to listen.

Some might have been concerned that rain might halt the show and this would be their only chance to hear her. By 8:30 p.m., the area was under a tornado watch. Then, Mother Nature claimed dominion. The rains came and doused most of the 1,700 party goers in less than 10 minutes.

A Midland resentative waded to the bus to find out the verdict.

Ms. Gayle's manager, who is her husband, said, "If she has to sing through a megaphone, the show will go on." To that, Ms. Gayle added, "I'm going to sing no matter what."

With well over two dozen hit records to her credit, Ms. Gayle has come a long way from her family's roots in the Appalachian coal mining town of Paintsville, Ky. The youngest of eight children, her family produced a country music legend, Loretta Lynn. But, Ms. Gayle wasn't born or raised in Kentucky.

"I was born in Indiana and most people don't realize that I did grow up in a different place than my sister Loretta," Ms. Gayle said, sitting on the sofa in the Faudree Ranch House prior to showtime. "That's mainly one of the reasons that we're so different. My background is totally different from hers. Wabash was a good place; I'm glad that I had that background."

Ms. Gayle has happy memories of growing up with four brothers and three sisters. Being the youngest, "you're called the baby a lot. We were very close and still are. Even though we don't get together that often, we have a lot of love in the family. That helps."

Although, Ms. Gayle does a "lot of work for charities within the community" where she has lived for the past 10 years, Nashville, Tenn., the Cancer Society is "special" for her since her mother died of lung cancer.

As a child, Ms. Gayle listened to all kinds of music and sang along with Leslie Gore, Brenda Lee and Patsy Cline on the radio.

"My sister Loretta was in the business, and I'm sure that was a big part of myself getting into the business. During the week, I would sing in all the choirs, all the different things that you do in school and then on the weekends I played the clubs (joining her brothers in their country band)."

However, she began singing folk songs before she was in high school, when she was still in junior high. It was at that time that she also learned how to play the acoustic guitar.

"Actually I had a lot of help; the house was full of music. But then I really don't play that much either. I have a very tiny guitar and that's as much as I know about guitars." She laughed and when she did, her blue eyes became even brighter.

She had no hestitation about what was the major turning point in her career.

"I'd have to say 'Brown Eyes ('Don't it Make My Brown Eyes Blue')' was a big turning point because that was the song that opened every door. I was doing well, and that song was just like a song that doesn't come around that often. And I'm glad that I was one of the artists that had a chance at it."

A round of parties in Midland last weekend honored Linda Ewan, daughter of Betty and Don Ewan, and her fiance, Jerry Roudebush. Both residents of Houston, they will be married in Midland's First United Methodist Church on Sept. 14.

To celebrate the couple's engagement, Martha (Mrs. Ben) Black entertained with a beautifully appointed coffee in her home. A gorgeous arrangement of peonies, snapdragons and roses in shades of mauves and pinks and accented with baby's breath was a conversation piece on the serving table.

Special guests included Jerry's mother, Barbara (Mrs. Gene) Riggle of Humble; Linda's sister, Brenda (Mrs. Jim) Shute, and her SMU Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority sister Barbie Mann, both of Dallas, as well as SMU classmates of her mother, Nancy (Mrs. Tom) Thornhill of Dallas and Peggy (Mrs. Norman) Phillips of Waco.

That evening the home of Betty Jo and George Moberly was the setting for a Mexican Fiesta dinner party. Co-hosting the fun affair were Patti and Watson LaForce, Shirley and Budge McDonnold, Myna and Jack Young, Ann and Don Wambaugh and Doris and John Redfern.

Guests were seated in the backyard at round tables covered with brightly colored floral print cloths and centered with hurricane lamps, surrounded by strings of red chili peppers.

Bedford, Jody (Mrs. Jack) Blake, Susan (Mrs. Verne) Griffith, Gloria (Mrs. LaDoyce) Lambert of Odessa, Karen (Mrs. Roy) Williamson and Mrs. Thornhill.

To conclude the weekend's events, Judy and Jim Devenport entertained the couple with an elegant brunch at the Pinnacle Club which afforded guests a breathtaking view of the city from atop RepublicBank First National. Among the guests were the bride's grandfather, George W. Scott, amd longtime family friend Dorothy (Mrs. Arthur) Teed, both of Pampa, and former Midlanders Betty and Dan Montgomery of Houston.

Held at the home of longtime family friends Harriet and Gene Motter, the surprise party was hosted by their three sons, Kevin, Jamie and Shawn, and Kevin's wife, Palmer, who masterminded the event. The honorees were further surprised and thrilled to receive a silver tea service and silver punch bowl and cups as an anniversary gift from the children.

An Italian buffet was served, and guests were seated in the backyard at tables covered with red and white checked cloths and decorated with the national flag of Italy.

Out-of-town guests sharing in the festive occasion were Dale's father, E.D. McCarter, and his wife, Loreen of Arlington; the Motters' daughter, Mary, and her husband, Frank Sims of Shawnee, Okla., and Pam Durkin of Natchez, Miss., who is the fiancee of Midlander Tom Clifton.

Elbert plans to attend Midland College this fall.

THE PERMIAN BASIN HIGH School Class of '85 was honored with an all-night party following recent graduation ceremonies at Midland Country Club.

Held in the home of Peggy and Red Rogers, the party featured the school's oil patch theme in decorations.

Her awards include, among others, Outstanding Female Vocalist of the Year in 1977 and 1978 by both the County Music Association and the Academy of Country Music; a Grammy in 1978 for Country Female Vocalist of the Year; and in 1980, the ACM again awarded her the Outstanding Vocalist of the Year.

"They all make you feel really good. One of my favorites was the Grammy that I won."

Her feeling when she won it was excitement "beyond words. You dream of winning awards when you're getting into the business or as a child when you want to be in the music business, but to actually be able to win them and be up on the stage, that's really special."

Another even more special event in Ms. Gayle's life was the birth of her daughter, Catherine Claire, who at 21 months of age travels with her.

"It's something that I'm glad that I didn't miss out on. I put it off for a long time, then I said that I wished I had had her sooner. I was really ready."

The timing was rather unique. When she was pregnant, Ms. Gayle was working on her 10th album, "Cage the Songbird," which includes such hits as "Sound of Goodbye," "I Don't Wanna Lose Your Love," "Turning Away" and "Me Against the Night."

"She actually came first. I was in the process of mixing the last song on the album and I went into labor pains. The song was 'I Don't Want to Lose Your Love.' I didn't know I was in labor, I thought it was false labor," Ms. Gayle said. She laughed and then added, "But no, she decided that she was tired of hearing that song, she was coming on out. She was probably tired of that whole album."

Prior to having a child, Ms. Gayle enjoyed cooking and reading.

"She's my hobby now. I've found myself now giving her the extra time that I have from my career. She wants it."

The relationship is not problem free, and Ms. Gayle has almost been inspired by her daughter to do something her fans would find a drastic measure. Almost.

"If she wants to," Ms. Gayle said when asked if she would keep her daughter's hair long. "I'm not sure how mine is going to survive her." She paused, then added, "I've been tempted."

As she left the Faudree Ranch House, Ms. Gayle paused, made a couple of quick twists with her hair and then rolled it neatly over her shoulder and across her arm before she made her way around the dinner tables set up between the house and her bus.

Study: Canadian nursing homes more humane

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Canada's nursing home system, which guarantees government-paid care to all citizens, is more humane than the U.S. system at about the same cost, a long-term study concludes.

"The Canadian approach, exemplified somewhat differently in each province, has obvious benefits for the consumer," Dr. Robert L. Kane and Rosalie A. Kane, two Rand Corp. analysts, write in the New England Journal of Medicine. "Residents do not need to impoverish themselves and their ... spouses for nursing-home care."

Canada established a universal long-term care system in 1978. Before then, their system was similar to that of the United States — a two-tiered system, with some people covered by private insurance or personal wealth, and others covered by government subsidy.

U.S. patients usually must exhaust personal funds before federal medical assistance helps with nursing home bills, the Kanes write.

In British Columbia, the most expensive of Canada's provinces, the average annual cost of a nusring home bed in 1982 was $15,400 in U.S. dollars, compared with $18,200 in the United States.

Yet the Canadian system offers more home care, more vacations and more assurance of a bed than the U.S. system, the researchers write.

One in four Americans who survive to age 65 will at some point be in a nursing home, the researchers predict.

Marrow transplants seen as lymphatic cancer aids

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Bone-marrow transplants show promise in helping certain lymphoma patients whose tumors don't respond to standard cancer-killing therapy, said Dr. James O. Armitage of the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

The medical center and Houston's M.D. Anderson Hospital have jointly studied using intensive chemotherapy and radiation with bone-marrow transplants in the treatment of 29 patients infected with large-cell lymphoma.

About one-third to one-half of the 6,000 to 7,000 cases reported annually can be cured with standard treatment, Armitage said. The treatment tried in Omaha and Houston is directed to try to help cases which don't respond to standard doses of chemotherapy and radiation.

Of the 29 patients treated at the two institutions, 11 had complete tumor remissions, 13 had partial tumor responses and five didn't improve.

Hearst Feature Service

It certainly makes you humble. After years of fighting with one's significant other, you discover that there's a couple who have discovered how to fight for fun and profit.

Margaret and Jordan Paul have been married to one another for 20 years. They started in other fields (Margaret in art; Jordan in education). As Jordan explains, he "failed at five careers" before discovering a talent for counseling. He returned to school, got a Ph.D. and became a marriage and family therapist. Margaret, who had always had an interest in the field, then completed a Ph.D. and went into business with him.

The Pauls have been counseling, writing, lecturing — and sometimes fighting — ever since. Their latest project is their second book, "Do I Have to Give Up ME to Be Loved by YOU?"

The book points out that during the '60s and '70s people often left marriages to "find" themselves. Jill Clayburgh became "An Unmarried Woman" and Alice decided not to live there any more. But as their freedom increased, these "me generation" individuals found their love relationships falling apart.

Is life a choice between freedom and intimacy? The Pauls think they've found an alternative which combines the best of the "me generation" with the "we generation." Key to this evolving relationship is "intention therapy." Instead of power struggles, partners work through their conflicts in a step-by-step process aimed at discovering why each acts in a certain way.

Suppose a man — let's call him Frank — is often late getting home from work. He promises to call, but never does. When he finally gets home, he finds his wife — call her Jane — spoiling for a fight. What's happening here?

The Pauls say that instead of having the same old row, both Frank and Jane need to explore their intent. Is Jane afraid she will be deserted? Does Frank avoid coming home because of Jane's hostility?

Margaret adds, "You may have to be in pain, you may have to inflict pain, in order to resolve the problem."

In their work, the Pauls don't hesitate to use their own fights as examples.

"We wanted to dispel the myth that there's anything wrong with fighting," Jordan adds. "Rather than seeing conflict as bad, people should see conflict as an opportunity."

Wedding attire relaxes

Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — What to wear to a wedding? The time of day often is a guide to what styles, fabrics and colors guests choose, but there's still a lot of confusion over appropriate attire.

Even the most seasoned wedding consultant might have been puzzled about what to wear to the midnight nuptials of rock star Bruce Springsteen and Julianne Phillips. Mary Park, who has arranged weddings for the past 15 years, says, "For Springsteen's wedding I would have recommended that guests wear something a little more trendy because his bride is a model and actress and he's a rock star." More specifically, Park suggests a colorful kimono-style jacket over a short skirt for women and a white or bright-colored dinner jacket and slacks for men. "A bow tie could be fun," she adds.

Some bridal consultants, such as Lori Chapman, suggest black for women for evening weddings, particularly when the invitation calls for black tie.

"THERE WAS a time when black just wasn't worn to weddings," Chapman says. "But now it's considered very elegant. The outfit doesn't have to look somber. For instance, a colorful or metallic jacket can be worn over a black dress or gown."

More style options are available this season than ever before. In addition to the familiar solid colors, there's an array of prints — from florals to abstract art — from which to choose. Hemlines are not an absolute this summer.

A woman can feel perfectly at ease with an intermission (midcalf) hemlength at a noon wedding. Even though a beaded above-the-knee dress might raise a few eyebrows at a black-tie evening ceremony, it's still acceptable attire.

Some wedding consultants refuse to break with tradition.

"You should never wear white unless you're the bride. And save black for funerals," says Joanne Wallace, who has been in the business for 20 years. "There has been a relaxing of wedding dress codes, particularly on the West Coast. That has a lot to do with the changing attitudes toward marriage. But I sense a return to more traditional values and attire."

PAT GIBSON, a 10-year veteran on the wedding consultant circuit, says, "No matter what time of day, you can't go wrong with pastels in the spring and summer, and deeper tones in the fall and winter."

White is the only color that fashion and wedding experts agree is off-limits for everyone except the bride and groom.

"Would you want some guest to upstage you at your wedding?" asks L.A. designer Kevan Hall. "Guests can wear practically any color. But leave white to the bride."

Based on the opinions of fashion experts and wedding consultants, here are some guidelines for 1985:

MORNING: For women, this year's silhouettes are longer, typically drop-waist or shirred at the midriff. Hemlines are generally to the knee or just below the knee. You'll find a variety of floral prints in silk and cotton, and pastel colors are always correct. Lace can be used liberally as trim. Hats and gloves are optional, and shoes generally should have 2-inch heels.

For men, light wool gabardine or linen suits are the best choices (double or single-breasted are fine). Neckties may be patterned or solid, and the same goes for shirts.

AFTERNOON GARDEN: Here there's more latitude with dress. Women can top off their silk dresses with wide-brim straw hats. Linen jackets can be worn over sleeveless blouses and long, calf-length skirts. Florals and other prints are particularly attractive for garden weddings. Shoes may vary from pancake flats to 3-inch strippy heels.

Men should wear light-colored suits. Linen works best at this type of wedding because there tends to be more standing and mingling.

EVENING: This is dressier than an afternoon wedding. If it is black tie (semiformal), women may wear long or cocktail-length dresses in silk, organdy, organza or taffeta. Colors this season range from pale rose to bright blue. Black is appropriate, but plunging necklines should be avoided.

OFFBEAT WEDDING: It may be a midnight affair a la Springsteen or a last-minute wedding of a friend or relative, but there are almost no restrictions. If the wedding is at a home or restaurant, women may wear a floral silk tunic over matching pants. A dress would be more appropriate for a church ceremony.

For men, choices include a suit, a short-cropped or waiter's style jacket and slacks, or a sport coat, slacks and tie.

Japanese say it with melons

TOKYO (AP) — In Japan they say it with melons when a friend is ill.

The fruit, which is native to Asia but is very rare and expensive in Japan, is used to show respect and love, according to Masao Yuri, president of Suntory International which makes a melon liqueur.

"The more melons the friend who is sick receives, the more respected he is," said Yuri. "Melons are used much as flowers are used in America. Because of the Japanese climate and soil, melons are grown in hothouses. This makes them extremely expensive."

Engaged couples more likely to discuss sex than money

Associated Press

Surveys suggest that before getting married, couples are more likely to discuss their feelings about sex than about money, according to Changing Times Magazine.

After the marriage, they are more likely to argue about money.

Whether your wedding is pending or mellowing, June might prompt you and your other half to reconsider the financial assumptions on which your marriage operates, given your current situation.

One problem every couple must face is how to handle the money that flows through their hands on a day-to-day basis.

Some dual-income households pool their money in a joint account and set aside an allowance for each spouse to spend as he or she wants.

Other couples maintain separate accounting systems, but they calculate common expenses and each spouse contributes to a pot to pay them, either equally or in proportion to their incomes.

Either way, the better organized spouse is the logical choice to actually pay the bills, though you could rotate responsibility to stay informed.

Another option is to eliminate the joint account and instead allocate your joint expenses equitably between you.

Say the mortgage and child-care expenses just about equal all your other joint expenses, one of you could pay those costs and the other could handle the rest of the bills. For a large expense, such as remodelling, you could set up a separate project fund.

One approach that can lessen money management conflicts for spouses in second marriages, say a number of counselors and financial advisers, is for the biological parent to segregate the major expenses of the children they bring to a second marriage and, if possible, pay those expenses themselves.

Pooled accounts call for good communication and work best when you and your spouse have a similar outlook on money matters.

Elizabeth Lewin, a financial planner and author of "Financial Fitness for Newlyweds" (Facts on File; $8.95, paperback), told Changing Times that she thinks everyone, including nonworking spouses, should maintain some financial independence by having some kind of separate account, even if it is funded by an allowance from the household account.

Both partners also should maintain separate credit histories. Eliminate accounts that you feel are no longer necessary, but keep some, too.

A woman taking her husband's surname should change that name but retain her first name on the accounts she's keeping. Joint accounts opened in both spouses' names will create credit histories for each.

Also decide whether to have one or two automatic teller machine cards. Unless you're careful to keep each other informed about transactions, you're probably better off having one card or two accounts.

Whatever system you use for money management, try to maintain between you at least three to six months' living expenses in savings for emergencies.

Job benefits are another area of concern. If both of you work, both of your employers probably provide you with group health insurance. You shouldn't necessarily drop one spouse's coverage, especially if the coverage is free or the cost is minimal.

By submitting your claims to both insurers, a move that's usually allowed, you can recover up to 100 percent of your medical expenses. People covered by only one plan usually get only 80 percent.

For dependent coverage, an employer might charge an extra $50 to $80 a month. The extra cost may be worth it if you have a large family or have reason to anticipate high medical bills. Or, maybe you can save money by dropping one spouse's plan and concentrating your coverage in the other.

Investigate the provisions of each plan carefully before you decide which one to keep. Check whether either offers routine dental and vision care, and compare deductibles and the percentage of the medical bills you have to pay.

A growing number of companies offer what are called flexible benefit, or cafeteria, plans, that let employees select from a menu of several different benefits. If this is an option, you may be able to customize your coverage by coordinating your choices with your spouse's plan.

Recent changes in the laws governing employee pension plans could cause married couples some surprises if they haven't kept up with them.

Unlike past years, companies now must offer preretirement survivor benefits for all vested workers. Many don't charge for the coverage, but some reduce your pension when you retire to offset the added cost of the coverage.

Vested workers in their 30s or early 40s should check with their company's pension plan officers before deciding to accept survivors' benefits that they'll pay for out of their pension benefits. Buying additional life insurance probably would be more economical.

It can also be a good idea to waive preretirement coverage if your employer charges for it and your spouse has a pension plan as well.

Collector researches 'sound' history of bells

NEW YORK (AP) — Bells not only have a pleasant sound, but they have a long history of usefulness in relation to animals, according to Terry Mayer, who as a collector, head of the metropolitan chapter of the American Bell Association and designer of jewelry incorporating bells, has researched bell lore.

Belling animals served to scare off predators and keep herds and caravans together, she notes, as well as having a decorative function.

"In desert lands, it was a safety measure to bell the camels, but the bells also protected the people in the caravan," Miss Mayer explains. "The last camel would be decked out in bells. As the caravan filed into the camp at night, the leader knew everyone was safe when the final camel with the bells arrived.

"Elephants wore bells to frighten away the Bengal tiger, the natural enemy of the elephant," she says. "Sometimes these bells were attached to a blanket thrown across the elephant. The bells also alerted drivers of horses to get out of the way when a procession of elephants — carrying silks and spices from the Orient — was heading their way."

Some turkeys have been belled to frighten off hawks, vultures and other birds of prey, and also in order to locate the turkey when it went tree-hopping, Miss Mayer adds.

"Ancient African shepherds believed that sheep would gain more weight merely by having a bell attached," she says. "The sound was probably more useful in scaring off wild animals than in putting on added poundage.

Watch is proof of changing times

By ERMA BOMBECK

Erma Bombeck

This is a tale of two generations.

Twenty-five years ago my husband bought our son his first watch. The kid snapped it out of the box, slid it on his wrist and said, "Gee, Dad, it's 5 o'clock already."

My husband smiled his coat-sweater-pipe smile and said, "It's on upside down, son. Let Daddy tell you a thing or two about watches."

For the next three weeks, they hovered together over the kitchen table as they surgically dissected the watch. To set it, you had to carefully pull the stem out until you got it to the time you wanted, then push it in. If you wanted the watch to last, it was advisable to wind it the same way, being careful not to wind it too tightly. Your instincts would develop with experience.

After the preliminary walk-through of all the parts, my husband finally got down to the basics: how to tell time. When the big hand pointed toward the refrigerator and the small hand was toward the stove, it was 6 o'clock and time to eat. When the big hand was toward the mixer and the little hand toward the portable TV, it was time to go to bed.

Last March, our son bought my husband his first Triathlon watch. My husband snapped it out of the box, slid it on his wrist and said, "Gee, kid, it's 4:04. I better get cracking."

My son smiled his Yuppie-three-piece-suit smile and said, "No, Dad, that's not the time, that's your Memory/Recall Lap 4, total time. Here, let me show you how to use your watch."

He spread the instructions for the watch out on the kitchen table. It took less paper to paper the bathroom. By the end of March, there was progress. He knew how to insert the batteries and set the alarm. (Unfortunately, it went off at 3 a.m., but he was on to something.)

By the first of April, he had mastered the 12/24-hour time system, which allowed him to view European and military time. He still didn't know how to focus in on night viewing, but at least he knew what day it was.

There was a setback in his watch program the first of May as April has 30 days. This meant he had to go through the calendar adjustment instructions to compensate for a month less than 30 days.

This month he is up to the multi-model chronograph and multi-mode countdown timer with 1/10-second accuracy. Our son says by the end of July he should master the watch. It doesn't seem to be important anymore.

My husband hasn't had time to run since March. He's been at the kitchen table with his watch.

Brooklyn accents not just found in New York City

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Think you can recognize a Brooklyn accent when you hear it? Maybe, maybe not.

In addition to the famed New York City borough, the 1985 Rand McNally "Road Atlas" reports there are actually 37 other communities in the United States with the name of Brooklyn.

Several of these are in the states of the "deep South," such as Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and South Carolina. In fact, Alabama has three Brooklyns. One is in the north central region of the state.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a 19-year-old college student and I do not have a regular menstrual period. Otherwise, I believe that I am in excellent health. Is there any reason to be concerned about the irregularity? Some of my friends seem to have the same problem. — Vicky, NYC.

Dear Vicky: Irregular menstrual periods are not necessarily a cause for concern. It is possible, however, that they may be symptomatic of a more serious underlying condition.

I do not believe that there is any cause for alarm, but I would suggest that you see a gynecologist to rule out any pathologic condition. The peace of mind you will gain from this will be well worth it.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I went to an ophthalmologist to have my eyes tested for glaucoma, and he asked me to come back for another test later the same day. I don't understand this because I can't see why my eyes would be any different after a few hours. Do you see any purpose for checking for glaucoma twice in the same day? — Mr. B.G., Bakersfield, Calif.

Dear Mr. G.: Ophthalmologists detect glaucoma by measuring the pressure of the fluid in the patient's eye. This pressure may be different at different times, even during the same day. If the pressure is high, treatment can best be individualized if the particular pattern is known.

In some cases, it may be necessary to check a patient's pressure several times a day for a number of days.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Over the years, a friend of mine has started keeping more and more to herself, until now she hardly evers leaves the house. Her husband mentioned to me that she has seen a psychiatrist and that she has agoraphobia. Would you please explain what this is and what causes a person to get it? — Ms. M.Q., Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Ms. Q.: In general, agoraphobia refers to the fear of being alone in public places. As you can well imagine, this greatly restricts the individual's ability to function in any way that would approximate a normal fashion. These patients often are unable to go shopping by themselves, to go to restuarants, to use public transportation, and in the more severe cases, even to leave their homes.

Dr. James Selby, of the University of North Carolina, says that stress is the cause of the first panic attack a patient experiences. This first episode may follow the illness or death of a close friend or relative, or may occur after surgery, relocation or some other change.

Regardless of the cause, there are many more women than men who suffer from the disorder. The good news is that the condition is treatable.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have heard about a child who had a missing testicle, and he was given an implant. Is this mostly done for cosmetic reasons? Also, would the same kind of operation be available for a man who had to have a testicle removed because of a tumor or because of cancer of the prostate? — Mr. W.W., Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Dear Mr. W.: Testicular implants are availble for both children and adults. Dr. Michael P. Small, of the University of Miami School of Medicine says that the absence of a testicle in an adult is primarily a cosmetic problem, although there may be psychological factors as well. In a child, however, the absence of a testicle may have a serious effect on his psychosexual development.

For Lawrence, Columbia, Md.: The larynx is commonly referred to as the voice box, but it is more than that. The larynx serves as a valve that closes the windpipe to food and liquid so that they pass through the esophagus to the stomach.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicte. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomom at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

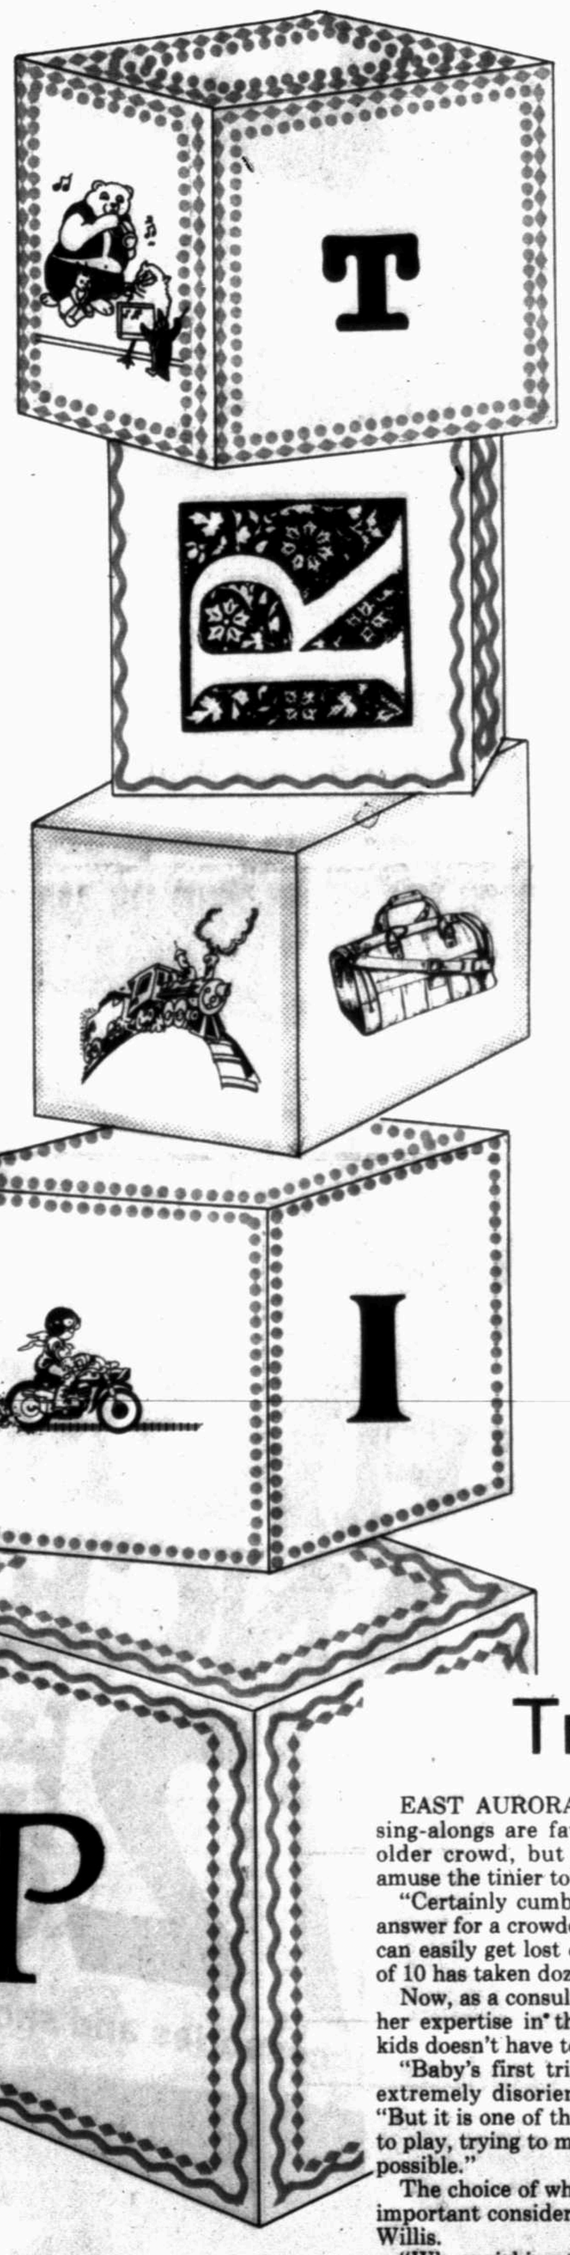
KID-TESTED TRIPS



BY LINDA ANDERSON

Any adult who has traveled with children knows the eternal question is not "What is the meaning of life?" — it is "When are we going to get there?" usually followed by "What are we going to do when we're there?"

Six Midland writers are attempting to answer these travel questions, and more, with their new book, "The Child's Guide to the Permian Basin." Marilyn Bassinger, Jheri Fleet, June Hunt, Carol Rivera, Cynthia Savage and Marti Vermillion wrote about 47 towns in West Texas and Southeastern New Mexico which are within a three-hour radius of Midland.

"We put a pin on Midland" on the map, said Mrs. Vermillion, "and drew a three-hour circle" around the city.

But if a town or other interesting location was located "a little bit outside the circle, we included it," said Mrs. Fleet, adding the circle's three-hour dimension insured that each location included in the book is a good choice for a one-day trip.

Some of the places listed in the 100-plus page, soft-covered book are Midland, Odessa, Alpine, Big Lake, Fort Davis, Kermit, Marfa, Monahans, Pecos, Andrews, Lamesa, Lubbock, Plainview, Abilene, Big Spring, San Angelo, Sweetwater and the New Mexico towns of Carlsbad and Hobbs, as well as smaller towns such as Comstock, Sheffield, Gail, Hurlwood, Jayton and New Home.

Listings include information about the towns and their points of interest.

"We found out what was really the best about each town," Mrs. Fleet said. "We put in a little bit of history, not schoolbook history, but the fun, gossipy kind."

In listing the towns' major attractions, "we started out to include the cost — whether it was free or not — and how much, times they are open, days they are closed, what you would see, name, address and phone number of contact person and appropriate ages" of visitors, said Mrs. Bassinger.

The guide also includes sections on "Getting Started," "Essentials," "For Parents Only," "Tempting Trips," "Tidbits of Trivia" and a recommended reading list.

"We added the radio stations so if you are driving through you can check for the weather, check and see what is going on in town," said Mrs. Fleet. "They are listed by call letters, place on the dial and whether they are AM or FM."

The book was written to be useful to the entire family, said Mrs. Bassinger, and especially for non-custodial parents, grandparents, tourists and newcomers who may be new to the area or who are not used to traveling with children. "There's nothing in there you can't take children to, and there's a lot of things adults can enjoy, too."

Another feature of the guide is a calendar of events for the Permain Basin, which lists festivals and celebrations in many area towns.

"In San Angelo, Fort Concho Days are in June," Ms. Savage said. "If there's a lot of water in the river, they float the floats down the river." If the weather has been dry, the floats are paraded down the streets instead.

Information was compiled from Chambers of Commerce in the towns featured in the book, and from the writers' personal experiences.

Several of the places listed "have been 'kid-tested'," said Mrs. Vermillion, the mother of pre-schoolers. The children involved in the testing "were very pleased."

The six authors plan to publish the book annually. "We're already updating it for next year," said Mrs. Fleet. The 1986 edition should be "two or three times" as large as this year's, she said. "People are already telling us things we hadn't heard of" to include in the next edition.

Illustrations in the guide were contributed by students from Hillander and Trinity schools. "We're hoping to open the art contest next year," Mrs. Fleet said.

The Child's Guide is available for sale in many local bookstores, at the Museum of the Southwest and the Petroleum Museum.

Travel tips for families on the go

EAST AURORA, N.Y. (AP) — Car bingo, license games and sing-alongs are favorite travel pastimes with the preschool and older crowd, but what do you do on an extended journey to amuse the tinier tot?

"Certainly cumbersome blocks and large stuffed toys aren't the answer for a crowded car, bus or plane, nor are toys with pieces that can easily get lost or misplaced," says Kay Willis, who as a mother of 10 has taken dozens of family trips with several kids in tow.

Now, as a consultant for Fisher-Price Toys, Mrs. Willis is sharing her expertise in these matters to tell parents that traveling with kids doesn't have to be an ordeal.

"Baby's first trip, whether by car, train, bus or plane, can be extremely disorienting and sometimes disconcerting," she says. "But it is one of the best times for parents to take a fresh approach to play, trying to make it as versatile, stimulating and comforting as possible."

The choice of which toys to take along to entertain the baby is an important consideration that is often overlooked, according to Mrs. Willis.

"When picking toys for a trip, choose multifunctional ones that perform in a variety of ways to keep your baby more actively involved and to cut down on what to carry," advises Mrs. Willis, adding that the mode of travel will determine what toys to bring.

"Toys that engage the baby by making noise or stimulating action are useful during long trips," she says. "However, when traveling in close confines with strangers, quiet toys that can't be thrown or dropped are best — such as ones that can be affixed by a suction cup to a pull-down tray, or hand puppets.

"It might be a good idea to bring along a few new toys and picture story books, or toys that your baby hasn't played with often. They'll be fresh and are likely to be interesting and stimulating."

She warns against buying travel souvenirs as playthings for babies. "Souvenir items are not necessarily made with an infant's special needs and could prove to be unsafe," she says.

Mrs. Willis says it's also good to bring along some familiar objects and favorite toys to assist in the transition to new places and unfamiliar faces.

"Because a parent's voice is one of the most familiar sounds to a baby, talk about and explain the different things your child is experiencing," she advises. "Your child may not understand what you're saying, but the sound of your voice can be very comforting."

The possibility of lost luggage looms large in every vacationer's mind, but when traveling with children it's an even bigger concern. The way to avoid any difficulties with baby's personal items is to pack the things in carry-on baggage separate from your own, Mrs. Willis suggests.

"Since a baby's personal items are usually more specialized than yours (harder to replace on short notice), if luggage gets lost or misplaced, having the items with you will assure that you're at least able to keep the baby comfortable," she says.

This idea makes sense for any mode of transportation, she points out, as easy access to baby's things, from diapers to playthings, is a must while traveling.

"As most parents are well aware, a baby's attention span is relatively short," Mrs. Willis says. "Consequently, variety is the name of the game where traveling is concerned. Try not to stay in the same position too long. If you're traveling by car, make occasional stops to give baby a change of pace and a chance to exercise. Also, I always made sure my tots were elevated in their car seat so they had good visibility."

Of course, when traveling by car you don't have to worry about the discomfort of strangers caused by too much noise or activity, she notes. In this case, she suggests bringing along a tape recorder so that you can record and play back your songs and stories. Then you can play the radio or favorite tapes when your voice tires.

Structural problems are homeowners' least worries

Associated Press

Most houses are structurally sound — but they have a lot of other problems.

Whether you are buying a new home or upgrading your old one, checking out the common problems listed by engineer and columnist Norman Becker in the June issue of Popular Mechanics can mean smarter house shopping and safer, more comfortable living.

— Damaged exterior paths and steps, found in 90 percent of homes Becker has inspected over 14 years. This requires resealing cracks, replacing broken, settled and uneven sections and correcting the heaving walkway caused by growing tree roots.

— Inadequate attic insulation and ventilation, found in 60 percent of homes inspected. In an unfinished attic, insulation belongs between the floor joists, not between the roof rafters. Check finished or partially finished attics for insulation on the unfinished side of partition walls. Attics can be ventilated by gable, soffit roof and-or ridge vents.

— Inadequate crawl space insulation and ventilation, found in 55 percent of homes with crawl spaces. Water seepage also can be a problem. Dirt floors in crawl spaces should be covered with polyethylene plastic sheeting.

— Wet basement, found in 50 percent of homes with basements. Water seepage can be caused by faulty gutters and downspouts, poor grading of adjacent ground, leaking basement walls and-or high ground water.

— Electrical problems, found in 48 percent of homes inspected. Some homes built between 1965 and 1973 have aluminum wiring, labeled a fire hazard by the Consumer Product Safety Commission. It should be replaced.

— Heating system problems, found in 42 percent of homes. Check for malfunctioning or missing boiler or furnace controls such as low-water cutoff, high pressure or temperature limit switch, fan control, relief valve, oil burner, gas valve, zone valves or circulating pumps.

— Deteriorated roof shingles, found in 40 percent of homes. As a roof covering ages, it may be necessary to replace shingles. It usually is not necessary to re-roof a structure because of missing or defective shingles.

— Missing or damaged gutters and downspouts, found in 34 percent of homes. The lower section of the downspout must be set outside the upper section so that water will not leak through the joint, and bases must always be extended so water flows away from the structure.

— Fire safety hazards, found in 30 percent of homes. All homes should have a smoke detector in the hallway by the bedrooms. Cover exposed wood framing members that are near the heating system boiler or furnace, using fire-rated gypsum board.

— Deteriorated or improperly vented plumbing, found in 28 percent of homes. Problems involve coupling when iron pipes are replaced with copper, dissolving of the zinc in brass pipes, and S-type drain traps that lose their seal.

— Termites, found in 23 percent of homes. You can often tell if a house has been chemically treated for termites by the patched holes in the foundation wall.

— Hazardous steps and stairs, found in 21 percent of homes. A handrail is recommended for steps with more than two risers.

— Hot water heater, missing controls and improper installation, in 21 percent of homes. When hot water is supplied through the heating system, a temperature and pressure sensitive relief valve adds safety.

— Windows with damaged sash cords, in 20 percent of homes. Cords can be replaced, or the counterweight system can be replaced with a pressure-balance system.

— Garage problems, found in 18 percent of homes. Common problems in detached garages, according to Popular Mechanics, include termites, rot and a concave rear wall.

Hospitals' DNR policies may be failing their goals

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Orders not to resuscitate very sick patients are failing to achieve their two major goals — decision-making before a crisis and allowing patients to make life-or-death decisions — a study suggests.

In the past 10 years, many hospitals have adopted so-called "do-not-resuscitate" (DNR) policies, designed to allow families and terminally ill patients themselves to choose death rather than life-saving efforts in the event of a heart attack or other emergency.

But use of DNR orders is not consistent, Dr. Andrew L. Evans and Baruch A. Brody write in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Some DNR patients "are still receiving such measures as chemotherapy, surgery, and admission to the intensive care unit," they write.

"House officers and nurses are often confused about what sort of care is to be provided" for DNR patients.

DEAR ABBY

Date is blinded by smoke

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I had a blind dinner date with a man I'd been hearing about for ages. We clicked immediately. I liked his looks, personality and everything about him. After we talked for 15 minutes, it was as though we had known each other all our lives.

During cocktails, I took a cigarette out of my purse and instead of offering me a light, he said, "You may as well know up front, I hate cigarette smoke."

I told him that I enjoyed smoking, but if it bothered him, I'd go to the powder room to smoke, which is what I did. After I returned, we had a wonderful dinner, then I took out another cigarette, excused myself and went to the powder room for a smoke. I was back in less than five minutes.

When he took me home, he said, "Thanks for a wonderful evening. I think you're a terrific woman and I'm very much attracted to you." Then he hugged me affectionately. (I was on cloud nine!)

"Not even a goodnight kiss?" I teased, whereupon he replied, "I don't think I'd enjoy kissing a woman who smokes as much as you do." (Abby, two cigarettes in four hours?)

It's been 10 days and I can't get that man off my mind; we seemed so right for each other. I'd really like to see him again. Any advice? — J. IN JERSEY

DEAR J: Where there's smoke there's not necessarily fire. You blew it. If you really want to see him again, quit smoking. Then call him and tell him you don't smoke anymore.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you printed a true-false quiz titled "How Much Do You Know About Homosexuality?" You said all the statements in the quiz were false.

I believe one statement is true: "If a person is gay, no amount of therapy or motivation can change him."

My own study of bisexual or homosexual husbands (to be published soon) is the only study of married gays with a six-year follow-up. Not one of the married men in our sample, despite years of "normal" married sex, has overcome the desire to be with men.

If you have information with which I am not familiar, I would like to see it. If not, please eliminate that question, as it encourages homosexuals to seek useless therapy from counselors who have not carefully reviewed the research, and perhaps because of their own homophobia, or just from ignorance, try to "help" the homosexual. The effect is (besides loss of time and money) to delay accepting (hopefully affirming) a gay identity. — DAVID MATTESON, PH.D.

DEAR DR. MATTESON: You are correct. The statement in the quiz SHOULD HAVE read: "If a person is gay, with the proper therapy and motivation, he can be changed."

Scandinavian cruise provides luxurious way of travel

Copley News Service

"Please, Alan," the bemused passenger stopped the Royal Odyssey's charming cruise director, "can you tell me how many fjords to the dollar?"

Alan Lloyd looked at her for a startled moment, regained his aplomb and replied coolly: "Madame, if you have to ask, you can't possibly af-fjord them."

She was taken aback for a bit, then, realizing what she had said, she burst into laughter.

"You'll have to forgive me, Alan, my mind is spinning with money, history, shopping, sight-seeing — I'm a little confused."

Lloyd smiled and patted her shoulder. "Naturally, Madame. Everyone is on this trip. There's so much to see and do, so much to think about, that adding the job of juggling pounds, krone, guilders, rubles and dollars all on one voyage is confusing for everyone.

"But we only allow one fjord to a passenger, so you don't have to count them." Lloyd's bright blue eyes twinkled. "Just relax and enjoy this beautiful scenery." He swept his arm wide, indicating the magnificent Norwegian countryside visible on all sides.

THE ENCOUNTER brought smiles to those who overheard and even more in the retelling later, though Lloyd was tactful enough not to mention the passenger's name.

After all, his job is to try to keep confusion to a minimum while overseeing one of the more complicated and exciting itineraries afloat. Royal Cruise Lines has planned its Scandinavian cruises to give passengers something more than just the usual Royal treatment that has made them a longtime favorite.

This particular itinerary, starting and ending in London, offers not only a chance to visit the outstanding Scandinavian ports — Copenhagen, Helsinki, Stockholm, Gotenburg and Bergen — it includes an unparalleled day in Leningrad, with a special tour of The Hermitage.

Just contemplating the destinations, reading up on them, studying their history, their art and literature, their customs and their influence on our own lives could take you a year or more of serious preparation for the cruise.

It's certainly worth whatever you choose to put into it — for there are few itineraries that are more rewarding in terms of personal enrichment. When you add to that the ease of travel on a ship as comfortable and luxurious as the Royal Odyssey, where your every need is instantly gratified by an astonishingly capable and cheerful crew, well, it's a holiday dream come true.

CNS Photo

A cruise on the Royal Odyssey gives passengers a chance to view Scandinavian cities from the sea.

AND SO WE found it. British Airways put us smoothly into London for a few days beforehand — enough time to overcome jet lag, enjoy the always fascinating city, catch a few plays and practically buy out Foyle's bookstores.

(Royal Cruises offers a couple superb London packages to be taken either before or after the cruise itself — highly recommended.)

Then off we went to Tilbury and the nearly deserted Port of London. It's an amazing trip through the very old East End of the city which was once the Jewish quarter and now is mainly a light manufacturing and industrial center. The bus wandered on through the marshlands of Essex toward a countryside filled with tiny patches of vegetable gardens and on into real farmland. A bright guide from the cruise line filled us in on history and added sharp comments on the economy in general, so the long ride passed quickly.

We found the guides, the staff and the port lecturer amazingly knowledgeable and always helpful — a decided asset after some cruises where staff know little more than that lady wanting fjords for her dollars.

Once aboard, it doesn't take long to settle into the comfortable cabins and explore the ship and check the upcoming activities. There's a wonderful, contagious sense of excitement at such a time, and passengers are soon smiling and chatting with each other like old friends.

Royal Cruise Lines has, in addition to regular cruise staff dedicated to making the trip a happy time, a special group of hosts to assist anyone needing a little extra attention. Charming, affable and gracious, they are a great asset to the trip — especially to the single ladies aboard.

HEADING FOR THE open sea is always a thrill and, staring at the lights of the now-distant city and the channel that leads north, it's easy to think about the early explorers, traders and sailors who made their way here for centuries in craft far less comfortable than the Royal Odyssey.

Time enough for history and contemplation — the routines of shipboard demand attention. The Royal Odyssey is sister to the Golden Odyssey which Royal Cruise Line has run so successfully for the last 10 years. Her Greek owners are pleased with 90 percent occupancy rates — and obviously her passengers are pleased with the way things are run.

The Greek crew is amiable, affable and experienced. The dining room runs smoothly, offering a varied and beautifully prepared menu that includes Greek dishes and lots of fresh fish and seafood. The wine list is excellent, the desserts absolutely sinful and the whole dining experience rates high with even the most jaded travelers.

There is so much to do every day, the list of daily activities keeps the printer up all night getting it together. Games, lectures, sports, conferences, movies and, in the evenings, outstanding show times put wings on time. And, of course, there are the ports.

COPENHAGEN — ITS color and history spill forth on every street, every flowered square and park, and all of it culminates in an all too short visit to the magical fairyland of Tivoli Gardens. Denmark is so energetic, so vital, it's hard to absorb it all at once. Where else would people heat a lake for the birds in winter? And flowers be as essential a part of the housewives' market as bread? A day or two is not enough — a week or two would barely suffice, but passengers see just enough to promise themselves a return visit at another time.

After all, that's what cruises are designed to do. They give you a sample of the best a city has to offer — perhaps an excellent guided tour through the historical highlights, a chance to wander through the parks and gardens, an opportunity to visit the marketplaces, shops and restaurants, a little while to talk with local people (in most of Scandinavia, English is the common second language). Port calls are a tantalizing kaleidoscope of life — and a marvelous opportunity to decide to return to the places that intrigue you most.

And the aspect of coming into these cities from the sea — the way they were first founded, and later developed, the way they were known to each other for centuries — adds a special dimension to even a short visit.

STOCKHOLM, WITH its myriad islands, is a special enchantment from aboard ship.

Sight of the long, constantly dredged channel that limits the possible number of ships going in or out of Leningrad gives you a sudden glimpse of the importance of this port that Peter the Great created.

The coastline here is tricky, marshy and full of scalloped bays. Suddenly, the history of the area comes into focus. The port was essential to the enormous landmass of Russia — and worth fighting the world to create it.

We walked among acres of huge packing cases of goods headed for Soviet-friendly countries and thrilled to be there. The Soviets we encountered were polite, enjoying the beautiful day and not at all interested in the Americans. We visited the Hermitage — it would take months to explore its glories. At the Moscow Hotel we ate a classic Russian meal, listened to standard Russian music and watched some highly stylized folk dancers. Then we persuaded the guide to take us for a ride on the subway — clean, swift, cheap — and to stop at a bakery to buy some pirosky, the fabled Russian meat and cabbage-filled dumplings.

The guide, a charming young woman from a nearby university, chatted easily in English — she even offered to buy the pirosky — and talked of her life and ambitions. Looking at the young woman from the ship who escorted us, she asked, "You're 30?" "Yes, and not married." She grinned. "Me, too, don't your parents object?" "They sure do!" We all laughed. The Russian guide continued, "But I lead a good life, I have my studies, my friends, I like it this way."

THAT EVENING passengers had the choice of a visit to the ballet or a lecture on life in Leningrad. Those who went to the ballet came back late, raving about the enthusiasm of the troupe — some of the singers and dancers from the ship had gone along and were welcomed as fellow workers. Once again a meeting of interests made friendship possible.

The lecturer, an obviously well-educated and well-spoken man, fielded questions from the floor with ease and grace and drew pictures of everyday life in the beautiful city that were a revelation.

We are more alike than most of us have the opportunity to realize.

Life in the long, cold climates does not draw most people, but seeing it this way, from the solid comfort of the Royal Odyssey, adds a new depth and dimension to understanding not only the land, but the strong and beautiful people who inhabit it and find strength and happiness there.

Polish restaurant has medieval setting

By ROBERT E. DALLOS and RONALD L. SOBLE
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

KRAKOW, Poland — When it's time to feast like a king, or at least where kings have dined, Wierzynek is the place. And be sure to set aside at least a few hours to soak in the history.

In this old Polish city, the fascinating Wierzynek restaurant dates to the mid-14th Century and the tenement-type building that houses it probably goes back another hundred or so before that.

Named after the original owner of the building, the restaurant is conveniently near the city's bustling medieval marketplace and can trace its roots to a feast thrown by its owner in 1364.

That was when Mikolaj Wierzynek, a wealthy investor, decided to put his eatery on the map by hosting a bash that included the likes of several European monarchs. Since then, both heads of state and gourmets have found their way to one of Wierzynek's elegant rooms, including then-President Gerald R. Ford, members of the Kennedy family and Fidel Castro.

Menu favorites include trout, venison and a variety of Polish specialties of the house which, for example, may be planned around tenderloin of beef or scallops of veal.

Interestingly, visitors to other restaurants might encounter shortages, such as in finding certain cuts of beef. But we were assured by Wierzynek's impeccable waiters, most of whom understand either some English, French or German, that this was not the case in Krakow's premier restaurant. At least as far as our experience went, they were right.

While dining on rolades au Wierzynek (meat rolled around thin strips of ham and topped with a whole boiled egg) and salmon in aspic, we enjoyed the atmosphere of one of the many dining rooms.

There is, to name a few, the Portrait Room, with appropriate royal personages gracing the walls; the Knight's Hall, whose armor recalls another age, and the Clock Room, housing a collection of antique clocks. Each room, plus a mead cellar with its ancient walls, recalls the nation's rich history.

Following several courses that included a bottle of wine came the inevitable check. But certainly there must have been some mistake! How could we have had such an elegant multicourse dinner for the U.S. equivalent of $3 a head? But given the vagaries of Poland's economy, that was the right amount, the waiter assured us.

On a pleasant summer night, what greater after-dinner pleasure is there in all of Krakow than to stroll out of Wierzynek and into historic Market Square? Through this massive square, in 1241, ran the wild Tartar hordes, quickly reducing Krakow to ashes and rubble. From these ruins was rebuilt the largest marketplace in medieval Europe.

And it is here, from the towers of the Church of Our Lady, that a solitary, haunting trumpet call is still sounded on the hour, harking back to a centuries-old warning that the city was under attack.

But unfortunately, it wasn't a pleasant summer night. In fact, it was a bitter cold evening.

Still, it was worth the bone-chilling wait. For in the words of the current management, "There has never been an occasion when we have been unable to satisfy the demands of our guests ... our place is their place...."

U.S. Southwest has eerie, rugged beauty

By JOHN ENGSTROM
Hearst News Service

A tour through the canyons and valleys of Arizona and Utah rivals a trip to the planetary fantasies of Star Trek. Each canyon or nearby vista seems plucked from the imagination of a hallucinating geologist.

Last summer, I traveled through this area on an eight-day Maupintour bus trip. Here's what our group encountered:

DAY ONE

This was arrival day at Marriott's Mountain Shadows Resort in Scottsdale, near Phoenix. After a get-acquainted steak barbeque, our tour manager set down some simple rules for the trip, told us a little of what to expect and suggested that we spend part of the evening repacking so we could store at the resort whatever we might not need on the tour.

DAY TWO

Our 39 travelers, plus driver and tour manager, set out at 8 a.m. Within two hours, we were encountering a fascinating display of geological formations. Periodic stops for stretching also served to introduce us to flora such as saguaro cactus, creosote and jojoba plants and Indian petroglyphs.

We spent part of the afternoon wandering in extremely strong winds through a small section of the Petrified Forest National Park, marveling at huge stone logs which mark the site of an ancient forest that has become a desert.

Later, we drove through a portion of the Painted Desert, our first other-worldly collection of land formations. A stop allowed time for a dramatic half-mile walk down into a valley between strange white hills marked with horizontal, dark-colored lines. The shift was like stepping from familiar grasslands into a valley of the moon. We spent the night at the Arizonian Inn in Holbrook, a former cowtown.

DAY THREE

We entered the huge Navajo Indian Reservation, passing shepherds, their flocks and numerous hogans — the traditional Navajo home — before arriving at the Hubbell trading post, a working store where Indian families loaded their pickups with supplies while we stopped for turquoise-and-silver jewelry and Navajo rugs.

The early afternoon was spent exploring the south rim of Canyon De Chelly. We peered from the tops of red sandstone cliffs deep into the scenic canyon where Indian farmers cultivate summer crops alongside ancient ruins.

In the late afternoon, we crossed into Utah and watched in fascination as huge natural towers loomed on the horizon, announcing the approach to Monument Valley. We spent the night at Goulding's Lodge. Near our hotel were small cabins used by John Wayne and John Ford when they filmed the landmark western "Stagecoach" in 1938. From the balconies of our rooms we had a terrific view of the mesas, sculptured buttes, towers and spires that give the valley its name and make it such a spectacular movie set.

DAY FOUR

Many of us rose early to watch the sun rise over the striking "monuments" that spiked the horizon. The photographers among us were rewarded with once-in-a-lifetime shots.

Later that morning, we rode four-wheel-drive, open-air vehicles on a three-hour tour into the heart of the valley. Each twist and turn of the rough, dusty, windy drive brought a new vista filled with some gargantuan rock formation looming in the distance or towering close at hand over our insignificant little party.

That afternoon, we drove back into Arizona to the town of Page at the southern tip of Lake Powell. After a self-guided tour of Glen Canyon Dam, we rode a chartered boat on a relaxing trip up one of the many narrow, red-colored canyons that spread like squiggley fingers off the dam-formed lake.

DAY FIVE

A morning drive took us back into Utah, past the immense Vermillon Cliffs, then into Dixie National Forest and Brice Canyon National Park. This canyon is a stunner — a vast expanse of knobby, angular pinnacles formed by erosion. The breadth of the area, the orange colors and the huge number of tall, spiky formations will leave you breathless. Many of us drank in every possible minute of the 270-degree view from Sunrise Point and the narrower but closer vista from Sunset Point. Hikes and horseback rides were available — and very tempting — but we did not have time to sample them.

An afternoon drive took us into nearby Zion National Park, my favorite of the tour. The combination of evergreens and cottonwoods edging vast, curved earth-tone-colored formations of peaks and walls such as Court of the Patriarchs, Mountain of the Sun and Angel's Landing produced a marvelous feeling of tranquility.

DAY SIX

We crossed back into Arizona and made a mid-morning stop at Lee's Ferry on the Colorado River, where many rafting companies put in for their trips through the Grand Canyon. Several groups were readying their equipment and pushing off toward great adventures.

A drive past the Echo Cliffs, more Painted Desert scenes and through Kahib National Forest brought us to the south rim of the Grand Canyon. After stops at several scenic outlooks, some of us spent the remainder of the afternoon taking in the stunning vistas as we sidestepped mule droppings on a walk part way down the path leading to the canyon floor.

DAY SEVEN

About half our group rose before dawn and bused to a lookout point to watch the sun rise over the canyon. It was chilly but not seriously cold, and the change of canyon colors as the sunrise progressed had camera buffs clicking madly and the rest of the folks ohhhing and ahhhing.

A late morning drive through the Kaibab National Forest and the town of Flagstaff brought us to Oak Creek Canyon. Some say it's the most beautiful in Arizona. I enjoyed the scenery, but found it an anticlimax compared to the monumental sights of the previous two days.

After a massive gourmet buffet luncheon at Poco Diablo Resort in Sedona, primarily an artists' and writers' colony, we spent time touring and buying in a nearby Spanish-architecture shopping complex. The rest of the afternoon was used to drive back to Mountain Shadows Resort in Scottsdale, where we gathered for a farewell dinner.

DAY EIGHT

This was departure day, with members of our group catching flights back to homes spread across the country.

Journey to follow routes of well-known explorers

New York Times News Service

In the spirit of such adventurous explorers as Theodore Roosevelt, Margaret Mead, Carl Akeley, Osa and Martin Johnson and Roy Chapman Andrews, a chartered DC-8 will lift off next fall from New York on the day after a candlelight dinner party in the Akeley Hall of African Mammals at the American Museum of Natural History.

Ahead will lie a 35-day journey that will take its participants around the world as they retrace the paths followed by some of the most famous of American Museum of Natural History explorers.

In the course of this trip, the travelers will move from Manaus in the Amazon basin of Brazil, to Easter Island, Fiji, Papua New Guinea, Hong Kong, China, Nepal, Thailand, Kenya and Morocco.

Accompanying the expedition will be a team of lecturers: Robert L. Carneiro, curator in the American Museum's department of anthropology; Guy D. Musser, chairman of the department of mammalogy; and Nina J. Root, chairwoman of the museum's department of library services and a specialist in museum and expedition history. Thomas D. Nicholson, director of the American Museum will also be on hand at several stops during the tour.

Titled "Rediscover the Great Expeditions II" (the first such trip took place in 1982), the tour will depart Oct. 31 and return Dec. 6. Based on double occupancy, it is priced at $28,000 a person.

More information and a brochure are available from "Rediscover the Great Expeditions II," American Museum of Natural History (79th Street and Central Park West, New York, N.Y. 10024; 212-595-3169 or 212-873-1440).

INTERIOR MOTIVES

by Ray and Austella Berry

The following suggestions are general in nature but can perhaps be of some assistance in making decisions concerning individual window treatments. Valences should not be used in rooms with extremely low ceilings. A valence with curved lines makes a window appear wider, while one with square lines makes it seem narrower. For a livingroom window composed of two framed panes of glass (double-hung), straight, hanging curtains are preferable to those that are looped-back. Looping back the over-draperies tends to soften a room's servity. A pair of looped-back curtains can make a window seem more narrow than one with a single curtain tied back to give a diagonal line.

We'll be happy to make suggestions on the best way to handle your window treatments at WINDOW DECOR, 30 West Industrial Loop, 685-0875. Someone can come to your office or home and put your ideas into a design suited to your needs. Custom window treatments can be done from our fabric or yours and we also have woven woods, mini and vertical blinds and shades, Top treatments can be designed. Open: 8am-4:30pm Mon thru Fri. and by appointment.

HINT:

Champagne: Wine business bubbles in French city

By FRANK J. PRIAL
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Autoroute de l'Est, which begins in Paris and slices across the flat, windswept landscape of eastern France, is lightly traveled. Parisians, after all, are Latins; like flowers and cats, they turn their faces instinctively to the sun. They have never been overly enamored of the cities of Metz and Strasbourg, to which the autoroute leads, or of the rest of Alsace and Lorraine.

There is one trip on the Autoroute of the East, though, that no one, Parisian or visitor, should miss. The road is a gateway to the Champagne country, a region steeped in history, in great art, in food and wine — and only 90 miles from the Eiffel Tower. Champagne is the perfect one-day trip from Paris.

Depending on traffic, Rheims, the unofficial capital of Champagne, is an hour to an hour-and-a-half by car from the city. The ideal day would include a visit to one or two Champagne cellars, lunch at a great restaurant and a visit to the cathedral, one of the most beautiful in France. Or it could include a drive through the handsome little vineyard towns to Epernay, the second city of Champagne and the home of the biggest Champagne company, Moet & Chandon.

THE CHAMPAGNE countryside is not the lush countryside of Burgundy, 70 miles to the south; rather, it has an austere, hesitant charm that is at once subtle and endearing. In spring, fields of colzas, a cousin of mustard, explode in a riot of golden yellow. By summer, the little villages have decked themselves in flowers; every window has at least a pot of geraniums. The narrow roads, winding among the vines, have a timeless quality that makes Paris, which is really just over the horizon, seem a thousand miles and a couple of centuries away.

Among the well-known Champagne houses in Rheims are Krug, Pommery, Roederer, Taittinger, Veuve Clicquot, Henriot, Ruinart, Lanson and the three Heidsiecks, Piper-Heidsieck, Charles Heidsieck and Heidsieck Monopole. In or near Epernay, Moet & Chandon, Bollinger, Pol Roger, and Perrier-Jouet are among the famous labels.

Most of the larger firms in both Rheims and Epernay offer regular tours of their cellars on weekdays.

Working with Chagall's designs, Marq etched laminated glass to obtain the correct colors. When the glass was finished, Chagall painted the figures and outlines onto the surface in grisaille, a technique that employs only gray tints to give the effect of sculpture. The windows were installed in 1974 and have been called the apotheosis of Chagall's work in glass.

PARTISANS OF Epernay Champagnes might prefer to visit the cathedral in the morning, then lunch at the Royal Champagne, an attractive inn and restaurant at Champillon, on the south slope of the Montagne de Rheims. It is about 30 minutes south of Rheims and about five minutes north of Epernay. The Royal Champagne offers one of the best views to be found of Champagne vineyards. And, like all restaurants in the area, it has a huge list of Champagnes and specializes in dishes to complement them.

Epernay has been destroyed by invaders 22 times since A.D. 533. The citizenry must have tired of rebuilding because today, while Epernay is a bustling, affluent little city, it hasn't much charm. It is all business and the business is Champagne. Moet, Mercier, Mumm, Perrier-Jouet and Pol Roger are in Epernay, while Bollinger, Deutz & Gildermann, and Ayala are in Ay, a small city across the Marne River where the first vines in the region may have grown more than 2,000 years ago. Laurent-Perrier is at Tours-sur-Marne, a few miles to the east.

The major Champagne firms, the names Americans recognize, are the largest but by no means the only Champagne makers. By recent count, there are some 145 producers of Champagne — and about 17,000 growers of Champagne grapes. Typical of the smaller producers is Albert Ricciuti of Avenay-Val-d'Or, an attractive village on the north bank of the Marne, about five miles east of Epernay. Ricciuti produces about 50,000 bottles of Champagne a year, half of which he sells to one of the larger firms and half of which he sells himself. Like most small producers, he has a list of loyal clients who buy by mail order or on weekend trips out from Paris.

AL RICCIUTI is atypical in that he was born and reared in Baltimore. When he retired from the Army in the early 1960s, he moved to France and married the girl he'd been corresponding with since he rolled through Champagne with the American Third Army in 1944. His wife's family, the Revoltes, already were in the Champagne business. He moved in and eventually took it over. In fact, the name on his label is Ricciuti-Revolte.

The difference between the smaller producers and the large ones is a question of style as much as size. Champagne has always been associated with luxury, with festivity, with success. The large firms work hard to preserve this image. They sponsor high-stake horse races and exclusive charity balls and practice any subterfuge to have their bottle in the winner's circle at grand prix auto races and polo matches. Many of the principals of the large firms are socialites who convey, by choice and by design, the proper Champagne image. The Chandons, the de Vogues, and the Taittingers are as prominent socially in France as they are in the business world.

The smaller champagne houses, the ones who rarely export, are much like modest wineries all over France. They may make 3,000 cases or 30,000 cases a year; their business is both by mail order within France and the Common Market and through direct sales to customers who drive out from Paris (and, before they buy, sample a few bottles over the winemaker's kitchen table). Quality at these smaller houses can range from execrable to superb. Much depends on the grapes which, in Champagne, are rated on a basis of 100. The great firms, such as Krug and Bollinger, use only grapes rated in the high 90s. The smaller houses will use grapes ranging in quality from the high 70s to the low 90s. Their prices are usually half of what the so-called grandes marques charge.

ABOUT TWO MINUTES' drive northeast of Epernay is the village of Hautvillers, the home of the Benedictine monk Dom Perignon, who is generally credited with inventing Champagne. Wine had been produced in the Champagne region since Roman times but it was a still vintage and, as late as the Middle Ages, basically red. Dom Perignon, who lived from 1638 to 1715 and was the cellarmaster of the Hautvillers Abbey, is supposed to have perfected the process of bottle fermentation that creates the bubbles. As an old man and blind, the monk is said to have sipped a bit of Champagne and exclaimed: "I am tasting stars."

What he really did, according to Gerald Asher, a wine merchant and writer, was come up with the idea of blending wines from different communities to achieve balance and consistency in the wine. The idea of bottling Champagne under pressure, the so-called methode champenoise, did not come into wide use until the middle of the 18th century. One of the principal innovators of the methode champenoise was the Veuve — widow — Clicquot, whose name still graces her family's wine.

Moet & Chandon, which honored the monk's name by putting it on their most prestigious wine, keeps a museum at Hautvillers where a life-size statue of the monk is on display along with ancient winemaking equipment.

Runners can compete in Reykjavik, Moscow races

New York Times News Service

For the footloose globetrotter who has already shuffled over marathon courses from New York and Boston to London, Paris and Athens, there are always new routes to conquer. This summer there is a choice of two: Moscow on Aug. 10 and Reykjavik on Aug. 25.

The Fourth Annual Moscow Peace Marathon, to give the event its full name, is expected to draw more than 9,000 runners, 1,000 of them foreign entrants. The race covers the 1980 Olympic marathon route — a flat, out-and-back course along the Moscow River, beginning near Red Square, passing St. Basil's, crossing the river into Gorky Park, turning around the Kiev Railroad Station and finishing inside the Central Lenin Olympic Stadium.

A chance for 50 Americans to run in this event, sponsored by the Moscow Sport Committee, is part of a tour sponsored by Athletes for Peace, a nonprofit organization devoted to peace and sports exchanges. The former Olympic long jumper Phil Shinnick, executive director of the organization, will lead the United States delegation.

For runners who would prefer to skip the Moscow marathon, there is an accompanying 10,000-meter race. The tour also offers a banquet hosted by the Soviet Athletic Federation and a visit to the Soviet Sports Complex in Moscow. Based on double occupancy, the trip is priced at $1,795 a person, including round-trip international air fare, accommodations, all meals, tips, taxes and a commemorative T-shirt.

Further information is available from Athletes United for Peace, Anniversary Tours (250 West 57th Street, New York, N.Y. 10019; 212-245-7501 or, from outside New York State, 800-223-1336).

In Reykjavik, runners can choose the marathon or a half marathon over a course ranging from the small lake at the edge of the business district, across the old Viking capital, along the edge of the North Atlantic and back again.

Based on double occupancy, the land portion of this tour, including four nights' accommodations, daily Continental breakfast, taxes and transfers, a pasta party, post-race awards banquet and commemorative jersey, is $203 a person. Entry fees are an additional $11 for the half marathon and $15 for the main event. Estimated round-trip air fare via Icelandair from New York is $568.

More information and a brochure are available from Marathon Tours (1430 Massachusetts Avenue, Harvard Square, Cambridge, Mass. 02138; 617-492-3088).

Homes more affordable

Lower interest reducing costs

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business-Oil Writer

Midland real estate brokers say the city's housing is more affordable than it has been in six months to a year because of declines in mortgage interest rates and a good selection of single-family homes.

The Midland market is keeping in step with the National Association of Realtor's Housing Affordability Index for resale homes, which rose to 90.3 percent in April, the first time in more than five years that the index has been in the 90s.

The April index meant that a family earning the median income had 90.3 percent of the income needed to qualify for a mortgage covering 80 percent of the median resale-home price. The qualification guidelines used for the index are those set by the Federal National Mortgage Association, which requires that annual mortgage principal and interest payments total no more than 25 percent of a borrower's yearly income.

Although there is not an affordability index for Midland, the local housing market is as strong as it has been in six months to a year, said Patsy Bohannon, owner of Bohannon Realtors and vice president of the Texas Association of Realtors.

"Continual decline in mortgage interest rates, rising family income and only modest single-family home prices contribute to the affordability picture," she said.

"Because interest rates on institutional financing are lower than they have been in several years, buyers are able to qualify for a higher loan with less payments," said added. "Also, we have a good selection of homes on the market right now."

"Buyers are receiving good returns on their housing investment because home values have not been increasing and the availability is better," she said.

About 1,600 single-family homes are listed now with the Midland Board of Realtors. Of these, most are 3-bedroom homes with an average price of $88,500, said Joan Noel, broker for Langston-Monarch Realtors and president of the Midland Board of Realtors.

"It's a buyer's market right now," said Don Harvey, owner of Don Harvey Realtors. "There's a good selection and more sellers than buyers. This makes for more negotiating power for the buyer."

"Things are looking positive," said Bohannon. "With the likelihood that interest rates will rise at the end of the year, families would be wise to make their housing purchase now."

Texas millionaire longs for return to quiet, obscurity

PROFILE

By DOUG CRICHTON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — From atop his superstitiously numbered office building, H.R. "Bum" Bright watches other fabled Texas fortunes crumble under the gathering weight of time, sour investments and ill fate.

If he squints, he can even see the estates of the Hunts and the Murchisons off in the distance, reminders of their financial woes and his own once-cashless status.

So every morning he slips on his right (resoled) shoe first, skirts black cats, recites a lucky number or two and settles into his deep-paneled office with a sigh of relief, secure, at least for now, in the knowledge that his is one of Texas' fastest-growing fortunes.

For a long time, it was one of the quietest: Several of his associates describe him as "private" and "publicity-shy," and few outside Texas had even heard of him.

But after three decades of dealing unobtrusively in private companies, the Texas tycoon came onto the public scene last year with a last-minute, $85 million bid that netted him the Dallas Cowboys football franchise and its lease on Texas Stadium.

AND IN THE PAST year, he has acquired two public savings and loan associations that are building the $15 million investment he made in an S&L in 1972 to a financial Titan worth nearly $4.5 billion.

"Most people in his position and his age would have other people doing his dealing for him," says Frank Anderson, a financial analyst with Dallas-based Weber, Hall, Sale & Associates. "But not him."

You betcha, says the 64-year-old Bright, now estimated to have corporate assets of more than $500 million and personal assets beyond $125 million.

"I'd rather come down to this office and formulate business plans instead of going to Europe or something like that," he said. "This is invigorating to me. I have no plans of slowing down."

Indeed, with brow knit behind Clark Kent-type glasses, he seems to be speeding up.

His goal is to build a multi-state thrift empire poised for explosive growth once the federal government approves banking across state lines. "That ought to take three to seven years, hopefully within my lifetime," he says.

Dallas businessman, H.R. "Bum" Bright, leaning against a chair with a Texas A&M logo, wants to recede back into comfortable obscurity. Bright owns the Dallas Cowboys.

BUT IN THE MEANTIME, the graciously eccentric businessman says he is bewildered by all the public fuss over him and adds quite clearly that he wants to recede back into his comfortable obscurity.

Bright has already taken Texas Federal Savings and Loan Association of Dallas, which he acquired for $71 million, into the private domain, and he plans to do the same with Dallas Federal Savings and Loan Association, which he just bought for $100 million, once the acquisition is approved federally.

"We're not trying to sell stock to the public, so it never served a purpose for me to be in the public eye," he says. "I'm quite content to stay private."

That's tough to do when you're the owner of the Dallas Cowboys, says club general Manager Tex Schramm.

"Your role changes when you go from being prominent in business to being prominent in the sports world," Schramm says. "That puts him where all of a sudden a lot of people are interested in him.. People are emotionally involved with the Dallas Cowboys."

SCHRAMM ADDS that "you don't have a heckuva lot of control over being public. You don't see him quoted anymore as 'Bum Bright, Dallas financier.' It's as 'Bum Bright, Dallas Cowboys owner.'"

Bright is still blinking from the Cowboys spotlight — "I didn't think there would be as much focus on me when I bought the team. I thought the emphasis would be on the manager, the coaches and the ball players."

But as he lit another "Vantage" cigarette and ran his fingers through his pepper-gray crewcut, he said, "I'm holding up."

Several of his associates, and even Bright himself, say his real goal, one that keeps him in his office chair at least 11 hours daily, is to avoid being poor.

"You always have a fear of going broke," Bright says. No matter how fat his coffers grow, he insists that he'll hold onto his chunks of land that are scattered around Dallas.

Petroleum Museum honors black gold

By CANDICE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Oil made this city of flat planes and sharp angles that juts out of a vast pancake landscape. And it made rich men out of wildcatters like the late George T. Abell.

Men like him abound in Midland, where it is said the poor are easy to spot because they wash their own Cadillacs.

Abell wasn't content to bask in his wealth. He wanted a monument to the black gold that made it possible and to the special breed of men that wrenched it out of the harsh West Texas earth.

"The oil business has been good to him and he wanted to pay it back," said petroleum historian Berte Haigh.

Abell's vision crystallized as a museum dedicated to oil, oilmen and the oil patch.

He got together a group of like-minded oilmen, charted a non-profit corporation and started raising money. In 1975, their unabashed valentine to the oil business opened.

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum now attracts about 50,000 visitors a year. They include everyone from school kids to roughnecks to visiting delegations from behind the Iron Curtain, said director Ed Rowland.

Permian Basin Petroleum Museum is dream of oilman George T. Abell, who wanted a monument to the oil business.

Unlike most museums, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum is not devoted to acquiring valuable artifacts, he said.

"We collect very little," Rowland said. "We rely heavily on exhibits, slide shows, things like that."

The museum is dedicated wholeheartedly to educating visitors about oil, the petroleum industry and the 115,000-square-mile Permian Basin.

"Everybody thinks an area like this has no history, that it's just dry flat terrain," said Rowland, who worked his way through college roughnecking in the oilfields.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Remembering the memorable class of 1960

Along with having to move to Houston, getting fired, divorced or watching your dog get run over, going to a class reunion may rank right up there as one of life's more traumatic experiences.

Because it is such a momentous and memorable experience, nearly everybody over 40 has a class reunion story he loves to inflict upon others. Now I have mine.

I journeyed to San Diego, California this week for my class reunion — the class of 1960 of Point Loma Nazarene College, one of eight four-year liberal arts colleges administered by the Church of the Nazarene.

Imagine going to college on a verdant, tropical cliff overlooking the blue Pacific ocean — a school where every class room faces the ocean and much of the school recreation centers on its own private beach. Without a doubt, PLNC is probably the most beautiful college campus in the nation. Unfortunately I didn't go there.

When I was attending Point Loma College, it was called Pasadena College and it was snuggled in a blanket of smog against the foothills of Pasadena, California. No ocean, but on a good day we could see from the dorm window the administration building a block away.

Seven years ago, in all its wisdom, the Church of the Nazarene saw fit to sell the Pasadena campus and move to San Diego, purchasing the campus of Cal Western College, which had outgrown its oceanside location. The move also involved a name change, (Pasadena College wouldn't have sounded right in San Diego.) and the issueing of new degrees to former graduates.

My anticipation and anxiety of the reunion began to build well in advance of the event. In my normal masochistic way of looking at things, I envisioned a gathering of all my classmates with me being the fattest, baldest, poorest, least-successful and oldest-looking one of the bunch. I was right on a couple of counts, but overall I was a bit too unkind to myself. I assure you 25 years of living does not spare anyone. Crows feet, liver spots, gray hairs, and pot bellies (no beer bellies in a Nazarene school), were definitely in season.

We all looked older — 25 years older — and while some were easy to recognize others were not.

Barbara was easy to recognize: "Of course you recognized me, fool! I'm the only six-foot-two girl in the class. Did you think I would shrink?"

Others were not so easy to recognize. A short, stocky gray-haired lady, whom I had mistaken for a hotel employee, challenged me: "You'll never guess who I am." I didn't have the foggiest notion. But then, she smiled and I knew immediately. Some things never change.

"LaDonna!" I exclaimed. The first time I saw that smile it was worn by a cute, petite redhead in World History, and when she flashed it at me, this Texas boy got his first but not last dose of California "candy legs."

Eddy was the class clown. I insisted that Eddy, who now sported more hair than I had ever seen on that head before, was wearing a toupee — even bet $5 on it and lost. We learned it was real hair in a most diplomatic fashion. Tommy, who won the bet, walked up and yanked on it. I had forgotten Eddy had worn a crew cut all through college.

One girl who was not the most attractive in college, was now. Trim, no wrinkles, no gray. Still, she was the same age as the rest of us. Wasn't she?

I thought it would be interesting to observe how a group of people who had been the best of friends would behave upon being brought together 25 years later, after almost no contact. I was not disappointed.

Surprisingly there was no running and hugging and kissing as individuals came through the door and were recognized, instead there was a pattern of cautious hesitation, with polite hellos and formal handshakes as we each sized up the situation. "Do they recognize me? Do they still like me? Have they changed?" The anxiety was printed on each face.

But then the ice was broken with some farcical games and awards, and we were behaving as we did 25 years ago, laughing, joking, teasing. I thought it was senior retreat all over again.

It was also interesting to learn that there was not a loser in the bunch. All, with the exception of a few of us average Joes, were outstanding in their profession. None had been in jail (since graduation.) Only three had been divorced and nearly all had children in Christian colleges. I credit the system.

Someone said if we received professional awards we could deduct the cost of the trip to the reunion. So, just in case they were right, we handed out awards.

Wanda got the award for her outstanding studies in fertility and genetic engineering. She had made seven babies. I received the distinguished literary award. Not because I am distinguished nor literary, but because I was a newspaper editor and had come the longest distance. One of our schoolmates, Dr. James Dobson, who has had books on the best-seller list for almost a decade, and whose wife Shirley was our class president, did not receive the award, because he only had to drive down from Arcadia. I had more expenses to write off.

All-in-all it was one of the highlights of my life. I am not one given to much hugging, but as we all held hands at the closing of the reunion and sang Bless Be The Tie That Binds, I really wanted to hug people.

BRIGHT

"While I've got that land, I'm sure I won't go absolutely broke," he said. "If nothing else, I can go out there and raise tomatoes and radishes and slaughter enough hogs to keep myself alive."

IT IS THAT miserly self-reliance, coupled with his old-fashioned face-to-face dickering, that Bright credits for his booming good fortune — the fortune that allowed him to buy the Cowboys from an ailing and financially strapped Clint Murchison Jr.

"Clint's daddy gave him $300 million when he was 30 years old," he said. "My daddy didn't. All I had was the $6,500 I'd saved up in the Army. I've never been to Acapulco. I've never been to Las Vegas. It's not my style."

What is Bright's "style" has raised a few eyebrows and sparked some chuckles for years.

His friends say he is an affable, pleasant fellow until the relationship turns to business, and then friendship goes out the window. He has been known to chase people into bathrooms and even talk wives into locking their husbands out of bedrooms to seal deals.

"I think he's two different people," Schramm says. "He's a strong, dominant, maybe even domineering, business personality, yet he's a very private, sensitive, family-oriented man."

DESPITE HIS WEALTH, Bright is notoriously cheap. He recently had his shoes resoled only because his wife, Peggy, was embarrassed by the holes in them. And he once bailed out of a cafeteria line when he learned a small cup of coffee cost 85 cents.

He's superstitious — his twin office buildings are numbered 2355 and 2377 Stemmons Freeway because 55 and 77 are among his cadre of lucky numbers. "I'd sooner be horsewhipped than put my left shoe on first." And he won't close any business deals on Friday the 13th.

Bright is also a dedicated, or maybe even fanatic, Texas A&M University alumnus and former chairman of the A&M Board of Regents. He charts every play the Aggie football team ever runs, and once even refused to take off his Aggie ring before going into gall-bladder surgery.

"You always know he's an Aggie," says James D. Berry, chairman of Republicbank Corp.

Another tic is his system of naming his companies.

BRIGHT OWNS so many firms — "I file 120 tax returns from this floor," he says, and that doesn't include his scores of subsidiaries — that he began running out of names. So he went through "spaghetti" names for them (Lasagna, Fettucine), "minerals" (Dolomite, Granite) and "South Seas" (Sulu, Java).

Not bad for a kid nicknamed "Bum" (so dubbed by his father because he looked like a railroad-yard hobo when bundled up in blankets) from Muskogee, Okla., who had $12.76 in his bank account on his 27th birthday.

MUSEUM

Visitors can see what the basin looked like 230 million years ago, when it was a warm, shallow sea teeming with the marine life which eventually metamorphized into oil.

They can view a simulated well blow-out.

"It's one of the few exhibits I've ever seen that's guaranteed to get the attention of eighth graders," Rowland said, as the soundtrack roared and the artificial flames flickered wildly.

The museum also tries to communicate a sense of how limited a resource petroleum is.

"We have a 20 to 40 year window to decide what to base our society on instead of petroleum," Rowland said, gesturing to the five-screen theater devoted to the future of the energy industry.

Although the museum puts a low priority on acquisitions, it owns a collection of antique drilling rigs that it claims is the world's largest.

Midland has weathered 60 years of boom and bust to become a glossy little city. It boasts skyscrapers and symphony music and restaurants that serve nouvelle cuisine under the watchful eye of a French maitre'd.

But out on Interstate 20, on the scrubby museum grounds, the old wooden derricks and the cable tool rigs that pounded their way through the porous, oil-soaked rock give silent, gritty testimony what made it possible.

Shell awards $500 million contract in construction of tallest offshore platform

NEW ORLEANS, LA. (SWN) — Shell Offshore Inc., a subsidiary of Shell Oil Co., has announced that it has awarded a contract for the jacket section of the world's tallest offshore oil platform to Bullwinkle Constructors, a joint venture of Gulf Marine Fabricators (a Peter Kiewit Sons subsidiary) and Kaiser Steel Corp. Site clearing and upgrading will begin immediately at Ingleside Point near Corpus Christi, Texas.

The Bullwinkle platform will surpass the height of the tallest existing offshore structure, SOI's Cognac platform, installed in 1,025 feet of water in 1978, about 100 miles southeast of New Orleans in the Gulf of Mexico. Bullwinkle was the prospect name chosen prior to purchase of the lease.

"Bullwinkle extends the technological capabilities that Cognac established in the deep water frontier," said Billy S. Flowers, president of SOI. "It reflects the commitment of Shell and the industry to meet the deep water ter challenges necessary to tap the potential of the U.S. Outer Continental Shelf."

SOI awarded the contract for fabrication, transportation and installation of the one-piece steel jacket, which is secured to the seabed and extends above the water surface to support the deck section. The contract represents a significant expenditure in the Bullwinkle project. Additional items needed to complete the platform, such as piling, conductors and deck section, will be bid during the next several months.

The entire Bullwinkle project will cost about $500 million, excluding lease bonus costs. About 50 percent of the total costs will be spent to install and equip the platform in preparation for drilling. The remaining 50 percent will be spent for development drilling, permanent production facilities and a pipe- line system.

Dollar amounts of the individual contracts associated with the Bullwinkle project will not be released.

Installation of the platform jacket is scheduled for mid-1988 in 1,350 feet of water on SOI's Bullwinkle prospect, officially known as the Green Canyon Block 65 Field. The prospect encompasses Green Canyon Blocks 64, 65 and 109, located about 150 miles southwest of New Orleans in the Gulf of Mexico.

With drilling rigs in place, the entire structure will stand about 1,615 feet, which is 161 feet taller than the world's tallest building, Sears Tower in Chicago. The jacket section alone will stand 1,365 feet and weigh about 50,000 tons.

The installed platform will weigh a record 78,000 tons, and will have a base 400 feet by 480 feet. It will be equipped with 60 well slots. Two drilling rigs will operate simul- taneously on the platform deck.

The platform jacket will be transported to the site and launched from a specially built barge to be provided by the contractor. The launch barge will be a record 853 feet long, 207 feet wide and 49 feet deep.

Enhanced oil project topic for D&D meet

The Midland Desk and Derrick Club has scheduled a regular monthly meeting Thursday, June 13, beginning at 6:30 p.m. at the Petroleum Club.

Guest speaker at the meeting will be Michael A. Roberts, vice president of HNG Fossil Fuels Co., who will speak on "CO2 Enhanced Oil Recovery - The Twofreds Field Project."

Roberts received a bachelor's degree in geology from Duke University, a master's degree in geology from the University of South Carolina, and a master's degree in petroleum engineering from the University of Houston. He began his career with Pan American Production Co., now Amoco, in 1969.

He took a job as a reservoir engineer with Houston Pipeline Co., a subsidiary of Houston Natural Gas, in September of 1975, and has worked for various subsidiaries of HNG since.

Purchasing managers will meet Tuesday

The monthly meeting of the Permian Basin Purchasing Management Association is scheduled for Tuesday, June 11 at the Executel at Air Terminal. Guest speaker for the 6:30 p.m. meeting will be Frank Martin, manager of joint operations for Gulf Oil Corp. He will speak on the material management considerations in joint interest operations.

TRC lists May oil discoveries

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission said Thursday oil operators reported 69 discoveries in May, and gas operators reported 105 discovery wells.

A discovery well is one completed in a previously untapped reservoir.

Oil discoveries in May included eight in the Refugio area; six in Southeast Texas; nine in South Texas; one in East Central Texas; five in East Texas; 20 in West Central Texas; three in the San Angelo area; six in the Lubbock area; nine in North Texas; and two in the Panhandle.

Gas discoveries included 22 in the Refugio area; 24 in Southeast Texas; 34 in South Texas; two in East Central Texas; four in East Texas.

Caustic steam flood initiated in Louisiana

PETROLEUM TECHNOLOGY

PLAQUEMINE, La. — Steam and lye, two industrial-strength cleaners, are now being pumped into the ground here to rejuvenate an aging, marginally productive oil formation.

The project is the first caustic steamflooding experiment ever attempted in Louisiana.

Two researchers from the University of Southwestern Louisiana, Dr. Asadollah Hayatdavoudi and Dr. Christian Okoye, are working with Stan Badger and Mohammed Yousaf of Mobil Oil in the experiment, in the Bayou Bleu field.

"It's called the 'huff and puff' method," Hayatdavoudi says of the enhanced oil recovery process. "We push into the formation for several months with high pressure steam, then back off and let the oil flow. When you heat something, you lower its viscosity, making it more flowable."

Discovered in 1929, the Bayou Bleu field is a shallow formation full of thick - 16.5 API - oil. Without enhanced oil recovery measures, much of this oil would remain in the ground.

Steam injection is fairly common in California, which has many shallow formations of thick oil. Lye (caustic soda) has been injected into wells before in a water mix. But never have steam and lye been mixed in such a project.

The Bayou Bleu field experiment actually compares two wells, one injected with pure steam and one with caustic steam.

"Caustic improves the 'sweep efficiency' of steam injection," Okoye says. "That is, a greater volume of the formation will be permeated with the injected fluids."

"Used by itself, steam tends to override the formation, heating only the upper portion of the oil deposit. But caustic condensates react with the acid in oil, generating a soapy condensate which makes the oil mix with water condensed from the steam. This causes oil in the lower portion of the formation to be displaced. In other words, with caustic you get a chemical reaction as well as a thermal reaction, to make the oil more 'flowable' and easier to recover."

Mobil has given Hayatdavoudi and Okoye a research contract of $27,300 for their work.

Southland sues in gas gathering dispute

FORT WORTH — (SWN)—The Permian Basin Royalty Trust announced that it has been advised that Southland Royalty Company has filed suit against HT Gathering company, Houston Natural Gas corporation and Intratex Gas Company as a result of the previously announced cessation by HT Gathering of the purchase of certain gas produced from the Waddell Ranch properties in Crane County, Texas. The lawsuit, in which Southland is joined by other Waddell Ranch interest owners affected by HT Gathering's cessation of gas purchase, was filed in State District court in Crane County, Texas on June 6, 1985.

The suit seeks to enforce the contract under which HT Gathering has been purchasing the gas since 1975, seeks monetary damages as yet unspecified and sought to have HT Gathering ordered to resume purchasing the gas immediately. At Southland's request, the Court has issued a temporary restraining order under which HT is ordered to temporarily resume purchasing gas.

Union Texas announces major Pakistan discovery

HOUSTON — Union Texas Petroleum has announced a discovery in the Badin area of southeast Pakistan.

Located about 85 miles east of Karachi, the Turk No. 1 well flowed 41.5 API oil at an average rate of 1,700 barrels with 10 Mmcf of natural gas daily through a 48/64 inch choke with 1,250 psi flowing tubing pressure. The well produced oil and gas from below 6,424 feet.

Union Texas, as operator, has a 30 percent interest in the discovery.

Unions say 50-year-old labor law needs new teeth in it

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

Organized labor will note, but certainly not celebrate, the 50th anniversary of the National Labor Relations Act on July 5.

At the time of its passage, the law was seen as labor's Magna Carta, giving workers the right to band together to combat the overwhelming power that management had over individual employees.

Many unions and companies are working cooperatively these days and don't urgently need the law as a referee. However, as evidenced by bitter disputes such as those at United Airlines and Phelps-Dodge, there are cases where the law is not helping.

While there is no uniform pattern to labor relations in the United States these days, there is growing agreement on many fronts that drastic changes are needed in federal labor law.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said recently that, as the law is now administered, "I frankly would prefer no law.... It has become an instrument in the hands of employers to frustrate trade union organizations."

After lengthy hearings last year, a Democratic-controlled House subcommittee on labor-management relations issued a report contending that the "labor law has failed."

"Workers and unions who rely on the protections and promises of federal labor law are being badly betrayed, and, as a result, labor-management relations are facing a serious crisis," the report said.

"...Perhaps the most striking evidence of the law's failure is that ... virtually every labor union leader testifying (before the subcommittee) called for (its) repeal."

Interestingly, management is almost as critical of the law, even though most decisions by the National Labor Relations Board under the Reagan administration have been pro-management.

Joseph E. Herman, a prominent Los Angeles management attorney with Seyfarth, Shaw, Fairweather & Geraldson, one of the nation's largest law firms representing management in labor cases, says that "the anniversary of the law provides the occasion for an urgently needed reevaluation."

Not unexpectedly, Herman says that, while the law declares that the nation's policy is to encourage collective bargaining beteween management and unions, "this rationale is no longer viable." Herman argues that the law assumes a "fundamental and ineradicable conflict of interest between employer and employee" when, in fact, "they have much more in common than they do dividing them."

Unions are no longer needed to play the role of primary protector of workers, he said, and labor relations should be "deregulated" to, among other things, "remove the government from involvement in determining who should represent the interest of employees and what occurs after a labor contract has been negotiated."

In other words, Herman sees little use for the section of the law requiring secret-ballot elections to determine which union, if any, a majority of a company's workers want to represent them or the section requiring that both sides bargain "in good faith" to reach a contract.

In sum, he would revise the law by further weakening unions and putting more responsibility on individual workers to deal with their employers.

This clearly conflicts with the stated purpose of the law, which says in its preamble that there is an "inequality of bargaining power between (individual) employees and employers" and that this inequality "tends to aggravate recurrent business depressions by depressing wage rates and the purchasing power of wage earners."

Since 1935, the basic law, known as the Wagner Act, has been amended twice: first, in 1947 with passage of the Taft-Hartley Act, and then in 1959 by the Landrum-Griffin Act, both of which diminished the strength of unions.

Organized labor tried to make some gains in 1977 by lobbying Congress for reforms that, while relatively mild, would have made it easier for unions to organize workers and negotiate contracts and would have speeded the decision-making process of the National Labor Relations Board. The board in many cases takes three years or longer to make rulings, which are then subject to appeal in the courts.

That reform effort was killed by one vote after a five-week filibuster in the Senate by conservatives.

Today, many experts are proposing changes aimed at improving relations between workers and their employers by encouraging cooperation and providing incentives for management to share profits and decision making with workers.

Daniel J.B. Mitchell, director of the University of California, Los Angeles, Institute of Industrial Relations, would revise the law to further encourage profit sharing and give workers and their unions more of a voice in decisions and more information about their companies' financial situations. As it stands now, a union can legally demand to see a company's financial records only if the company "pleads poverty" when the union seeks a raise.

Mitchell would, however, leave intact the part of the law's preamble that says its objective is the equalization of bargaining power.

Instead of letting the historic Wagner Act continue to erode in effectiveness, Congress should put some teeth into it by accepting suggestions such as those made by UCLA's Mitchell and others who would require employers to share corporate financial information and decision making; to give notice of plant closures; to put worker representatives on corporate boards. Such measures would make workers feel more of an integral part of the companies for which they work.

American to open hub in Nashville

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — American Airlines has said that it will open a southeastern hub in Nashville, Tenn., by late 1987.

The Fort Worth-based airline, which already has major hubs at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and Chicago's O'Hare International, may schedule as many as 135 daily flights from Nashville Metropolitan Airport to 60 destinations, the company said.

The creation of a hub operation in Nashville is expected to create at least 1,350 jobs for the area, American said.

American has been stepping up its service to the Southeast, and there has been speculation for months that the airline would open a new hub, possibly in Charlotte, N.C., where Piedmont Airlines is based.

American already is Nashville's largest carrier with almost a 20 percent market share.

Permian Basin rig count adds two

For a second week, the rig counts were mixed as the Permian Basin rig count rose and the U.S. rig count slipped.

Midland County added rigs for a second week. This week two were added, for a total of 15 in Midland County. Ector County dropped a rig, slipped to 15 rigs this week. Andrews County held steady at 19 rigs a second week. One rig moved out of Glasscock County, leaving six at work.

Lea County, the most active in the area, held steady a second week with 30 rigs at work. Pecos, the second most active, also held steady a second week with 23 rigs. Coke County saw some activity after five weeks, adding one rig to the count.

For the week, the count is 281. A week ago the count was 279. A year ago it stood at 335.

The state of Texas continued to slip, falling from 642 to 640 rigs this week. New Mexico added four rigs, jumping to 72. Oklahoma fell from 251 rigs last week to 239 this week. Louisiana added a rig, putting 274 rigs to work this week.

Kansas continues to be busy, going from 91 rigs to 93 during the week. California held steady at 65 rigs while Alaska held steady at 15. Canada leaped from 241 rigs last week to 278 this week.

For the week, the rig count is 1,821. A week ago the count was 1,848. A year ago the count was 2,328.

Coca-Cola reports sales up after new formula introduced

Cox News Service

ATLANTA — The Coca-Cola Co. said Wednesday that about half of America has tried the recently reformulated Coke, and that 75 percent of them plan to buy it again.

The Atlanta-based soft drink maker indicated that its shipments of Coca-Cola concentrate to bottlers were up 8 percent in May from a year ago, or nearly double the growth rate of brand Coke before the reformulation.

"We've experienced the largest increase on a monthly basis in my memory," said Donald Keough, Coca-Cola's president and chief operating officer, in an interview Wednesday. "In the month just completed, you can be sure that Coca-Cola was the No. 1 soft drink in every form of outlet-fountain, vending and food stores."

The company said 110 million people have tasted the new Coke.

Keough added, "The strategy we set forth with the new taste of Coke is being realized beyond our expectations at this point. We never doubted its success, and this data confirms it."

However, Roger Enrico, president of Pepsi-Cola USA in Purchase, N.Y., said in a telephone interview that his company is greatly benefitting from the decision to change Coke's flavor.

"Our actual case volume was up 14 percent in May compared with the previous May. That's the largest one-month gain in the 87-year history of our company," Enrico said.

Case volume represents the amount of soft drink shipped out by bottlers.

He said that Pepsi research shows that 46 percent of the people who've tried the new Coke say they will switch brands or drink less Coke.

"Coke's numbers don't mean a thing when you listen to the guy on the street, and he's telling you that he doesn't like new Coke," Enrico said.

At the time of the announcement in April, brand Coca-Cola was credited by industry analysts with having about a 22 percent share of the market.

Coke said that its internal research reveals that 84 percent of those who buy Coke most often and 62 percent of those who buy Pepsi most often plan to buy new Coke.

According to Beverage Digest, brand Coke was the leading soft drink in 1984, with a 21.7 percent share of the market, but that represented nearly a one-percentage-point decline. The brand grew at about 3 percent, which was below the industry's over-all growth of about 5 percent.

Pepsi was the No. 2, soft drink with an 18.8 percent market share, which was up slightly from 1983 on the strength of 7 percent volume growth. Beverage Digest said a percentage point is worth about $250 million in sales at the retail level.

Coca-Cola said it won't be sure of volume trends of the new Coke until later this summer, but company executive expect the flagship product to maintain its May growth rate throughout the summer.

Keough was adamant in arguing that the volume growth in brand Coke is not coming at the expense of other company brands.

Keough said that the company has received about 40,000 calls and letters concerning the Coca-Cola flavor-change.

Official warns of hazardous waste

HOUSTON (SWN) — Hazardous waste is not just an industry problem or a government problem, but it is a national problem that will take the cooperation of all of us to solve, says Gary Dillard, vice president of manufacturing and technical, Shell Oil Co.

Dillard made these remarks at the General Federation of Women's Clubs' 94th Annual International Convention held here this week.

"Hazardous waste is simply the leftovers of the good life we all enjoy," Dillard said. "Half of the some 250 million tons that is created each year comes from the chemical industry and the other half comes from just about every industry in America such as the automobile, iron, steel and even the electronic and computer industries. The public--including small businessess and households–also is a significant contributor of hazardous waste."

In order to aid industry and government in solving the nation's hazardous waste problem, Dillard told the audience that the public should do three things: become better educated on the hazardous waste situation; learn how to responsibly manage household waste -- such as cleaning solvents, disinfectants, medicine, paint and batteries; and become involved with national and local governements to ensure they develop responsible waste management programs.

Dillard emphasized that cooperation among all segments of society especially is needed in cleaning up abandoned hazardous waste disposal sites and selecting new disposal sites.

"The reluctance of communities to have waste sites nearby is understandable," he said, "but is part of the problem." Dillard stressed that without new waste sites, three things will happen: safe disposal will not be possible; needed industries ultimately will not be able to operate; and illegal dumping thus will be encouraged.

Dillard said that Shell deals with its hazardous waste by responsibly managing it. "We expect Shell to be operating many years from now, so we don't want to send our waste off, let someone else take care of it, and possibly mismanage it."

Dillard explained that Shell's waste management program has several steps to it, depending on the stage at which the waste is being handled. "The first step calls for minimizing our production of waste through process modification," he said. "If we make less waste, then we'll have less waste to dispose of."

Dillard said the next step in Shell's program is to detoxify as much of the waste as possible prior to disposal. He said the company does this through chemical treatment, incineration and biodegradation.

Dillard pointed out that when Shell does have to send waste out for disposal, the company uses only those firms that meet Shell's standards and run their waste management operations within government regulations.

Transco enters $180 million agreement

HOUSTON (SWN) — Transco Energy Co. has announced that it has entered into an agreement in principle with Georgia-Pacific Leasing Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of Georgia-Pacific Corporation, to acquire all of the stock of Exchange Oil & Gas Corp. (EOG), for approximately $180 million, subject to certain adjustments.

The transaction is subject to the execution of a definitive agreement and the approvals of the companies' boards of directors. It is anticipated that Transco Exploration Partners, Ltd. (TXP), Transco's oil and gas exploration and production affiliate, will acquire the assets of EOG following the closing, expected on August 1, 1985.

W.J. Bowen, chairman and chief executive officer of Transco said, "This acquisition is evidence of Transco's ongoing commitment to the oil and gas business. It represents an opportunity to acquire significant proven onshore reserves of more than 100 billion cubic feet of gas equivalent, as well as probable and possible reserves and a substantial amount of other assets, including working capital and undeveloped oil and gas properties."

Bowen explained that the EOG producing properties and exploratory acreage are located primarily onshore in southern Louisiana and will complement TXP's established offshore Gulf of Mexico activities as well as its own expanding onshore exploration effort.

Hughes hopes to operate Japan's first satellite telecommunications network

WASHINGTON — Hughes Communications Inc. took off like a rocket April 1, when Japan opened its telecommunications monopoly to outsiders, giving a foreign company its first chance to sell a modern satellite system to the Japanese.

The California-based firm raced with its Japanese partners — Itoh & Co. and Mitsui & Co., two powerful trading companies — to be at the head of the line for permission to operate Japan's first satellite communications network.

If its proposal is approved, Hughes would sell two satellites capable of transmitting telephone traffic, video and data. Together with the ground stations and other technology, the package would cost about $350 million — the biggest of the big ticket items the Reagan administration pressed Japan to buy during negotiations in March and April to open the Japanese telecommunications market wider to foreign products.

"Only a year ago there was no thought of selling U.S.-made satellites for domestic use in Japan," said Donald H. White, president of Hughes Aircraft Co., the parent of Hughes Communications. Nippon Telephone and Telegraph (NTT), the government telecommunications giant, had no competitors until April 1, when its monopoly status was ended.

THE SATELLITE ISSUE has ranked high on the list of U.S.-Japanese trade problems. Japan's refusal to buy commercial American-made communications satellites has had the effect of preserving its market for future development of homemade satellites, U.S. officials say. In time, a protected Japanese satellite market could be a launching pad to lift Japanese firms into competition with U.S. companies in international satellite sales, the U.S. officials said.

Now the window has been opened, far enough, apparently, for Hughes and its partners, who make up the Japan Communications Satellite Co.

Their fast start appears to have given Hughes the lead over two American competitors, RCA Corp and Ford Aerospace, for a piece of the largely undeveloped Japanese telecommunications satellite market.

Ford, with its Japanese partner, Mitsubishi Corp. has built experimental satellites for Japan and says it is in the running. Susan Fradkin of Ford Aerospace expressed scepticism about claims that Hughes has the inside track to run Japan's first major satellite network.

"They say that. It doesn't necessarily hold water. We think basically that Japan will find it in their interest to order a satellite system from us," she said. RCA teamed up with Sony Corp and two Japanese trading companies in December, but is not as far along as Hughes or Ford.

THE U.S. SATELLITE makers were all forced to take Japanese partners by Japanese law, which restricts foreign ownership of telecommunications transmission facilities to a one-third share. Hughes, owns 30 percent of JCS, C. Itoh 40 percent and Mitsui 30 percent.

While no one will say so publicly, the word is out among U.S. trade officials and industry sources that Hughes will get a license to operate a satellite network. For its part, the Hughes group is confident enough to sink $6 million in start up costs without getting official approval in an effort to make a December 1987 launch date aboard a space shuttle.

"The indications were suffeciently positive to risk that amount of money," said John Koehler, the Hughes executive vice president who conducted most of the negotiations with the Japanese.

"Work is proceeding and money is being spent, but the decision is not yet final," he added.

The total project would provide about 1,000 jobs for Hughes employees.

While it appears certain that Japan will license the purchase of at least one satellite system, American trade specialists said they are unsure how many other systems will be approved. U.S. negotiators want Japan to open its market all the way by granting satellite licenses for any applicant who can meet the government's standards, and this question will keep satellites on the trade agenda.

ONE HIGH-RANKING Japanese diplomat indicated that competing satallite networks will be restricted to the number of systems it appears the Japanese market can support. Japan, another diplomat said, is unlikely to allow a satellite system that might go broke.

A Japanese decision to license only one system would reinforce the view of some American officials that Japan will buy only what it is obliged to under pressure and that new systems will be licensed only when Japan has developed its own own satellite and launch capability.

Clyde Prestowitz, the Commerce Department's leading expert on Japan and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige's special counselor on Japan, said Tokyo's program to build its own satellite remains in effect.

"I think it's still going to be a sticky wicket," he said.

U.S. trade officials are looking to see what Nippon Telephone and Telegraph will do since it lost its status as the government telecommunications monopoly and now faces competition from private ventures. A decision by NTT to buy an American satellite system would effectively spell the end to Japan's program to develop its own space communication capability, officials said. Conversely, if NTT stays away from satellite purchases, the Japanese government is expected to continuing pushing its own development program and place limits on the number of foreign-made systems it allows.

HUGHES AND OTHER satellite makers, however, see lots of room for competitors in an expanding Japanese satellite transmission market carrying computer data and cable television as well as telephone traffic and broadcast television. "There's an enormous pent-up demand for communications satellites in Japan," said Albert Wheelon, president of the Hughes Aircraft Co. space and communications group.

No one is sure how big that demand will be. The history of communications satellites elsewhere has shown that new markets are created merely by the availablity of the technology although that may be less true in a nation as compact as Japan.

Prestowitz said telecommunication ministry bureaucrats assume satellites would be used only for transmitting telephone calls around the island and have not focused on other applications.

Hughes Communications President Steven D. Dorfman, though, is betting on a large growth in the cable television programing in Japan as well as the more effecient distribution of broadcast television with the satellite system.

JAPAN ALSO LAGS behind the United States in the use of new technology for speedy data transmission-a field that is also expected to provide a market for satellite transmission. And private company-wide communications systems are seen as yet another growth market.

The first battle Hughes had to fight was to make sure Japan allowed it to build satellites that broadcast in the "Ku" band of frequencies, which Dorfman said is more reliable than the "Ka" frequency band used for the Japanese experimental satellites.

"We would have supplied the satellite (if Japan had decided on a Ka band), but ... it wouldn't be commercially viable," Dorfman said.

Prestowitz said there was a major debate within Japan's telecommunications ministry over which band to pick. "The MPT bureaucrats felt it would be a great loss of face to pick a Ku band because for years they had been pushing the Ka band as a unique Japaese idea," said Prestowitz. "Finally political pressure forced them to go with the Ku band," Prestowitz added.

That pressure reportedly came directly from Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, who had promised President Reagan in January he would make sure Japan's telecommunications market, among other sectors, was open to competitive U.S. products.

THE REAGAN administration had made satellite sales a major point of its market opening initiative, especially since learning in 1983 that Japan was not planning to buy any from the United States. U.S. officials had understood that satellites would be included under a prior marketing agreement involving NTT, although they were not specifically mentioned.

The administration learned that Japan didn't consider satellites part of the earlier purchasing agreement when NTT executives tried to buy plans, specifications and computer software from Hughes so NTT could build it's own satellite.

Hughes officials complained to Washington and the satellite question became a test of trade policy. "U.S. satellite technology is vastly superior to that which the Japanese have already developed. If Japan won't buy something where clearly they get the benefit of the trade (in improved technology), then what will they buy?" asked Wheelon.

Fort Worth to get bank-at-home service

InterFirst Bank Fort Worth and the Fort Worth Star-Telegram have announced an agreement to market a bank-at-home service for users of personal computers. "Home Banking," as the service is called, will be marketed by both the bank and newspaper as an added feature of the Star-Telegram's existing Startext data base for personal computer users.

With the new service, InterFirst Bank Fort Worth customers will be able to pay bills to pre-selected merchants, transfer funds between checking and savings accounts, make balance inquiries on those accounts, and send electronic messages to the bank.

GHome Banking will be available in the fall of 1985. It is the first such service available in the South and Southwest, officials of InterFirst and the Star-Telegram said. Home banking services are offered by some large banks on the East and West coasts, though the Interfirst/Startext project is the first in this region.

Currently, Startext subscribers can send and receive electronic mail as well as receive a variety of information, including updated news, airline flight schedules, closing stock prices and the Star-Telegram's classified advertising.

Any type of home computer operating a 300-baud or 1,200-baud modem can receive Startext or InterFirst's Home Banking in the Fort Worth and Dallas local telephone area. Startext services are offered at a flat rate of $9.95 per month, with no charge for connect time. Currently, there are more than 1,600 Startext subscribers.

When Home Banking becomes available next fall, customers will have the option of subscribing to Startext and receiving its full range of services or simply subscribing to the Home Banking feature. Startext plus Home Banking will cost $10.95 per month; Home Banking only will cost $6 per month.

For that fee, customers will be permitted 30 inquiries to the bank or financial transactions, such as payments, per month. Additional transactions will cost $.15 each.

The development of bank-at-home systems is seen as the newest in a line of convenience-oriented electronic banking productions, such as automated teller machines, bank-by-phone payment services, and point-of-sale terminals for retail businesses. Earlier this month, InterFirst announced an agreement with TeleCheck Southwest for the marketing and installation of point-of-sale terminals in retail outlets.

The terminals make it easier for consumers to use checks, credit cards and eventually PULSE ATM cards to pay for retail purchases. At the same time, the terminals reduce merchants' risk of errors and losses due to fraud.

"Home Banking represents a significant step in the delivery of automated financial services to a large and growing segment of our customer base - the personal computer user," said James R. Perry, chairman and chief executive officer of InterFirst Bank Fort Worth.

Banking board, finance commission oppose proposition

By Bill Kidd

AUSTIN — Members of the State Banking Board and the Banking Section, State Finance Commission, have approved a joint statement regarding last year's constitutional amendment on banking powers — saying it doesn't negate state regulation.

Proposition One was adopted Nov. 6, 1984, and provides that state-chartered banks have "the same rights and privileges that are or may be granted to national banks of the United States domiciled in this State."

The statement approved by the board and section says the purpose of the amendment was to "maintain competitive parity between state banks and national banks," and to treat all banks — whether state, national or private — in the same fashion regarding banking powers.

"Competitive equality in the dual banking system is best achieved by giving state and national banks the opportunity to offer the same financial products at the same geographic locations," the statement comments.

"If national banks acquire the legal authority to offer new financial products in new geographic locations, then Proposition One and the Texas Banking Code work to make this product and geographic authority available to state-chartered banks."

The board and section rejected arguments that the change removes some or possibly all of the regulatory authority by the Department of Banking, saying the state constitution also state that the legislature is to provide "a system of state supervision, regulation and control" of state-chartered banks.

"Proposition One was not intended to handcuff Texas banks and meekly surrender them to federal law, as interpreted by federal regulators and federal judges," the statement says.

Rather, the change "effectively levels the playing field so that state and national banks may compete on an equal basis" — and permits "different regulatory treatment for state banks ... when that treatment does not significantly diminish the bank's ability or opportunity to compete in product or geographical markets available to national banks."

The sectiin and board stated as their intent implementing Proposition One "in a manner consistent with the Texas Banking Code and in a manner that will preserve product and geographic equilibrium in the respective and national banking systems."

Legislators have directed state-supported higher education institutions to develop written "intellectual property policies" on research efforts carried out at the schools.

SCR 92 by Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, calls for such policies to deal with ownership, patenting, copywriting, control, licensing and use of inventions and discoveries by researchers.

An analysis of the resolution notes that research at college and universities "often yields results which have practical, marketable applications," and that such research sometimes is funded by private sources, including corporations.

"Transfer of the knowledge gained at the research facility into the markeplace often requires application for a patent for the product or products developed through the research," the analysis notes.

The resolution calls for development of procedures to be followed when making institutional decisions regarding control of inventions, ownership, patent control and licensing matters — including the institution's position on royalties and defining the types of inventions to be covered under the policy.

The resolution calls on the schools to submit their policies to the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, by next January 1.

Small businessman-author revels in search of 'excellence'

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

SOMEWHERE OVER NEW JERSEY — Settling in at 20,000 feet, Tom Peters looks totally at home in the Lear Jet he's chartered to fly him from Washington to New Jersey where he will catch a helicopter to whisk him to a noontime reception and speech in mid-Manhattan.

"Hey," says the co-author of the monstrously bestselling "In Search of Excellence" and its newly released sequel "A Passion for Excellence", "I know I'm lucky."

The limousine that greets Peters at the heliport snails crosstown to the hotel reception where he is guest of honor and featured speaker at a Sales Executive Club of New York luncheon. Mary Kay Ash of Mary Kay Cosmetics introduces Peters to the 900-person throng that paid $35 a head to eat roast chicken and hear him speak.

Stoutly built and immaculately dressed, Peters strolls up to the lectern to deliver The Speech.

It is the foundation of his rapidly growing fortune and reputation — the same pitch he's been giving to business audiences since just before "Search" was published in 1982. Rich with anecdotes and homiles, it stresses the value of people and customers and common sense.

"I'm a small businessman, you know. So I like to go back to the accounting department every four or five days and look at the checks coming in. I like to touch them and feel them and hold them up to the light, you know.

"AND I'VE DONE THIS scientific survey, you know. And not one of those checks has ever been signed by a market. They're all signed by people. By customers."

Working the crowd like an old-time Baptist preacher, Peters pounds the pulpit, jumps around on the stage and yells to the audience until his voice turns hoarse.

"The rich get richer and the poor get poorer. The companies that worry the most about doing it right are usually the ones that are already doing it right. It turns out that my biggest customer is IBM. ...

"The customer perceives service on his or her own sweet, idiosyncratic, irrational and unpredictable terms. ..."

One woman at the next table keeps nodding and murmuring "He's right; he's right; he's absolutely right" as Peters stridently extolls the importance of customer service.

When the perspiring Peters finishes, this crowd of New Yorkers rises to its feet to give him a spontaneous standing ovation.

Yes, Tom Peters certainly is lucky. Through a crazily serendipitous mix of corporate adulation, media acclamation, self-promotion and timing, he has become the management guru of the 1980s.

He has cleverly and deliberately parlayed his "In Search of Excellence" from an outrageously successful book (more than 5 million copies in print worldwide) into an outrageously profitable corporation modestly called The Tom Peters Group.

Fueled by his relentless energy, the Group is a multimillion dollar miniconglomerate dedicated to spreading the Peters management gospel to whoever will listen and pay for the privilege. It leaves no medium unturned.

AND IN—THE—FLESH Peters can command up to $20,000 a crack for his hellfire and brimstone speeches. Last year, he criss-crossed the country dozens of times to deliver some 300 talks to the tune of more than $1.5 million plus expenses. (Roughly a third of his talks are delivered for free.)

He runs the Center for Management Excellence, which conducts four-day California seminarretreats for top corporate managers who pay $3,800 each to attend.

On paper, Peters does famously as well. The newly published "A Passion for Excellence," which Peters co-authored with Nancy Austin, was featured as a Fortune magazine cover story and now rests comfortably on the New York Times best-seller list. (It was a best seller before its official publication date).

Random House publisher Robert Bernstein estimates "at least" half a million copies of the book will be sold. With royalties estimated at $3 per book, Peters and Austin stand to split a cool $1.5 million. Warner Books recently purchased the paperback rights to "Passion" for $1.3 million. Another book is in the works.

The truly passionate searcher for excellence could also catch Peters on his Public Broadcasting System special last year; purchase Peters' "Excellence" videotapes; hear him on "Excellence" audio cassettes; and, yes, soon even interact with him on "Excellence" IBM Personal Computer compatible software. He is a millionaire several times over.

The commercialization of Tom Peters transcends his torrents of cash flow. In the finest new tradition of pop iconography, Peters will soon tape a television ad for American Express — "Do you know me ... ?"

DESPITE THE HYPE, Peters is light years away from being the Elmer Gantry of management evangelism. He's too smart and self-aware to be either a zealot or a huckster. He's more the sort of guy who takes pride in the fact that he got himself fired from his $250,000 a year position as a McKinsey & Co. consultant where "In Search of ... " was written. (Among other shortcomings, he had the unfortunate — and definitively unMcKinseyesque — habit of wearing shorts to the office.)

"McKinsey was a totally repressive environment," he allows.

Peters is also the sort of guy who can't quite decide whether he wants to be seen as provocative or iconoclastic — he says he has "nothing but contempt" for most of the Fortune 500 managers he's come across — but he's having much too much fun to care.

In addition to his Palo Alto home, Peters and a lady friend (he is once-divorced) share a farm in Vermont where they plan to launch a small maple syrup business.

RIGHT NOW, though, Peters' itinerary is his long-term strategic plan, and he takes a perverse pleasure in having a cult following.

"It has evolved into a semiconscious choice to be doing all this," he says, "I just want to go faster."

Peters' peripatetic style and self-promotional zest doesn't obscure a stiletto intellect more than equal to the task of handling the slings and arrows of outraged academics and business critics. His own academic and consulting background — spiced with a smooth "aw shucks" sincerity — blunts most accusations that he is little more than a managerial "Dr. Feelgood" with the latest recipe for corporate success.

At 42, the Baltimore-bred Peters is a Cornell-trained engineer who served with the Seabees in Vietnam before going on to study organizational development at Stanford University. After a brief stint in the White House as a drug abuse policy adviser, Peters went to McKinsey where, he says, he quickly grew bored "doing the same analyses every three months for different clients. ... Consultants are basically parasites."

"Search" was a spin-off of a project Peters and partner Robert Waterman were doing for Siemens AG, the giant German electronics company. Almost as soon as it was published, the book shot to the top of the charts and stayed there.

"It was a backlash to all the Japanese management stuff and the rise of the MBAs," says Peters. "It also came out the same week the White House announced 10 percent unemployment."

U.S. BUSINESS WAS on the ropes, the Japanese had suddenly emerged as super-managers, and there was an unsuspected market for an optimistic look at the secrets of success within America's best-run companies.

Their book, stressing the simple human values of listening to customers and employees, answered a yearning for a uniquely American style of management that could give U.S. companies a badly needed edge in global competition. The time was ripe for managers to look and see if there was more to the bottom line than red or black ink.

"It's very much the 'Nixon to China' syndrome," says Peters, "Here were a couple of guys from McKinsey — the Mecca of quant(atative) jockery — putting humanistic values in the context of profit making."

Indeed, there's almost a biblical flavor to "Excellence". The book is divided into related chapters, each with its own little allegories and heroes and legends that all pay homage to how caring, compassion and focus can lift ordinary people into corporate greatness. Where the Old Testament has a solid core of Ten Commandments, "Search" has eight.

Peters' principles don't stress nuts-and-bolts questions of organizational structures and processes; they emphasize personal values like enthusiasm and pride and commitment. Quality doesn't just mean having the finest product, it also means answering the phone on the first ring.

Experts step in with money-saving advice in equity sharing

Washington Post News Service

It's in mute testimony to the dictum that "the family that pays together, stays together" that thousands of intrafamily real estate deals are struck every year — parents helping children buy their first home and children helping parents get some liquidity out of their paid-for home.

Until relatively recently, however, such cross-pollination of funds was almost exclusively in the form of outright gifts and loans with their limited, if not nonexistent, tax advantages for either party.

Today, the shared-equity pros are moving into the field to let Uncle Sam pick up a part of the tab — packaging the contractual arrangements between family members to satisfy stringent Internal Revenue Service requirements (the pitfalls, otherwise, can be sticky) and prearranging lines of credit between lenders, insurance companies (where applicable) and participants.

FEW, IF ANY, however, have gone into it as ambitiously as the Oakland, Calif.-based Family Backed Mortgage Association — into all 50 states and "working both sides of the street," (parents helping children-children helping parents). On the basis of a monthly loan volume that has doubled in recent weeks, the association is projecting $1 billion in closings this year.

For senior citizens with a hefty equity in their home, but with a pressing need for more spendable income, the association's Kenneth T. Rosen has put together a sale-leaseback-annuity program (generically known as the "reverse annuity") involving parents, children and insurance carriers called Grannie Mae. And, for children needing parental support in the purchase of their first home, he has designed a shared-equity procedure called Daddy Mac.

Real estate economist Rosen is chairman of the Center for Real Estate and Urban Economics at the University of California, Berkeley, and, 10 years ago, was the developer of the Graduated-Payment Mortgage (the GPM, or "jeep") program. Radical at the time ("it was four years before anyone took me seriously"), the GPM was devised for the first-time home buyer who couldn't otherwise qualify for conventional financing, and is a mortgage with below-market monthly payments during the early years, but increasing annually as the young buyer's income also rises until they level off in about the seventh year.

Under Rosen's new venture, FBMA, the company's remuneration is exactly the same for both the Grannie Mae and Daddy Mac program: a one-time $250 fee for, essentially, the package and a seven-year analysis of before-tax and after-tax cash flow for each participant, plus 1 1-2 percent of the 3 percent origination fee levied by the lender.

UNDER ROSEN's Grannie Mae program, the children buy the parents' home in which the parents have at least an 80 percent equity. The parents immediately use the proceeds from the sale to buy a life annuity (guaranteed for the lifetime of both parents) providing them with a monthly annuity and, simultaneously, lease back their own home at a fair market rental price. The monthly annuity, plus the property tax and insurance savings — two responsibilities taken over by the child-buyer — less the monthly rental, give the parent(s) a net spendable income they would otherwise not have.

For the child-buyer, of course, the home that he has bought and leased back to his parents immediately becomes a piece of income-producing real estate with all of the attendant advantages — depreciation and the tax deductibility of mortgage interest, taxes, insurance and maintenance and, ultimately, any appreciation in the value of the home. Rental income received from the parents, of course, is taxable.

(The parent-child arrangement could be impacted, of course, if President Reagan's proposal to eliminate the deductibility of local and state property taxes becomes law. And, accountants are still divided on whether the proposed cap on interest deductibilty applies to such real estate investments.)

The example cited by Rosen envisions a 76-year-old widow who owns a home appraised at $100,000, free and clear. Selling the home to her child and applying the proceeds to the purchase of an annuity the widow would receive about $12,600 a year from the annuity, and save $2,000 a year in property tax and insurance payments. She would pay roughly $6,000 a year in rent (based, depending on local conditions, on 4 percent to 9 percent of the market value of the house) which would leave her, net, $8,600 a year, or $715 a month, as spendable income.

TO SATISFY IRS requirements, Rosen adds, the rent must increase at the rate of 3 percent a year. At the same time, however, the annuity pay-out also increases (from 1 percent to 3 percent a year) for the actual life of the seller, or surviving spouse, whichever comes last.

While this presumes that the widow applies the entire sales price of the home ($100,000) to the annuity, Rosen continues, "there can be instances where the seller may need, or want, to spend part of the down payment for other things — a vacation, needed repairs, or what-have-you. In this example, for instance, she might take $15,000 of the down payment in cash for other expenses, leaving $5,000 of it to apply to the annuity (with the $80,000 balance of the sales price, of course). This would reduce her monthly annuity about 15 percent — from $715 a month to about $608. The only Grannie Mae requirement is that at least 80 percent of the sales price of the house must go toward the annuity."

TO DATE, HE adds, "we're using John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. for our annuities east of the Mississippi and Transamerica Occidental for those in the West — although the annuitant, of course, is free to choose his own life insurance company. The rates are pretty comparable and these two were picked simply because they're both licensed to write policies in all 50 states."

Family Backed Mortgage Association, Rosen continues, also has correspondent lenders on tap in all 50 states, such as United Jersey Bank (New Jersey's largest), First Chicago National Bank (Chicago's largest) and Phoenix's First Federal Savings and Loan Association (Arizona's largest S&L).

"We felt," the economist says, "that you can't really conduct programs like this on a state-by-state basis."

In this respect, and another important one, FBMA differs sharply from Prudential-Bache Securities' recently announced entry into the reverse annuity field: instead of using the FBMA approach through conventional lenders and life insurance companies, Prudential-Bache, with assets of $76 billion, is financing its entire program itself and is going national with it state-by-state, a process, so far, that has kept it unavailable except in a handful of states.

Additionally, Rosen adds, both of FBMA's Grannie Mae and Daddy Mac programs have been approved by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Association (Freddie Mac). While this is unimportant to Prudential-Bache's reverse-annuity plan, since it has no intention of selling off the mortgages it acquires, it gives FBMA's conventional lenders an essential ingredient: assurance that the mortgages they have underwritten can be sold easily in the secondary market.

OF THE TWO FBMA programs, however, it is Daddy Mac, the shared-equity package, that brings realtors into the picture in a critical role. As Jack Grigsby, president of Coldwell Banker Residential Marketing Services in Irvine, Calif., puts it: "Brokers aren't really involved in the Grannie Mae program, but we're quite enthusiastic about Daddy Mac — it makes for extremely solid paper. If the son (or daughter) can't make it, there are always the parents to pick it up."

For years — and especially since soaring house prices and high interest rates have left more and more first-time home buyers on the outside looking in — realtors have sensed the existence of a potentially rich market in shared-equities, particularly among family members. The big-bugaboo: the complexity of setting up such an arrangement to satisfy IRS conditions and the expense of hiring tax and legal experts.

What FBMA's Daddy Mac program provides, essentially, is such an arrangement, prepackaged, but with the added plus of at least two nationwide realty companies — Century 21 and Coldwell Banker Residential Marketing Services — actively promoting it.

To an even greater extent than in FBMA's Grannie Mae, the Daddy Mac program is as stylized as a Chinese fertility dance because of the IRS's no-nonsense insistence that — since Uncle Sam is picking up an appreciable part of the tab — all shared-equity arrangements between parents and children must be strictly business: no looking the other way if the child-occupant misses his rent ... no unrealistically low rentals to favor the child ... no inequitable division of expenses.

HERE ARE THE highlights:

—Parents (the owner-investor) and the child (the owner-occupant) split the down payment between them, normally 50-50.

—Ownership costs including closing costs, mortgage payments, property taxes and insurance are divided equally between the co-owners (if it's a 50-50 arrangement).

—The owner-occupant pays fair-market rent on the parent's interest in the home. (If the fair-market rent for the home, for instance, is $800 a month, the child would pay a rental of $400, reflecting his parent's 50 percent interest in the house. The rent is non-deductible to the child and reportable income to the parent).

—The owner-occupant is responsible for the first $3,000 a year in necessary maintenance and improvements and half of any amount over $3,000 in a 50-50 arrangement.

—The owner-investor gets 100 percent of the depreciation on his share of the property (50 percent of the allowable depreciation if, again, it's a 50-50 shared-equity). The owner-occupant claims none.

—When the home is liquidated, both the owner-occupant and the owner-investor get their down payment back in the same proportion in which it was made in the first place and any additional gain is, again, split proportionately.

Under the Daddy Mac program, according to FBMA's Rosen, not only is the child able to qualify for a mortgage far more easily (since his parents are, in effect, co-applicants for the mortgage), but, in the average case, the child enjoys an average savings of 27 percent over the cost of full ownership.

Occidental sells half huge oil field

Washington Post News Service

Occidental Petroleum agreed Wednesday to sell half its interest in a huge oil field in eastern Colombia to Royal Dutch-Shell Group for about $1 billion cash.

The sale surprised most analysts, who said there was no indication that Occidental was considering such a move. But analysts said the sale was clearly beneficial to both companies, as Occidental receives a giant cash infusion and Royal Dutch-Shell gets valuable crude oil reserves for about $5 a barrel.

Occidental did not say why it decided to sell. But analysts speculated that the Los Angeles-based oil company would use a good portion of the proceeds to reduce its debt or buy back preferred stock. "They certainly chose their most saleable asset," said Alan Edgar, an oil industry analyst with Schneider, Bernet & Hickman in Dallas.

Royal Dutch-Shell agreed to pay Occidental $750 million when the deal closes July 1. It also agreed to pay a further $200 million when production reaches certain levels that were not disclosed. In addition, Royal Dutch-Shell will pay about $50 million to cover about half of Occidental's exploration and production costs between Jan. 1 and July 1.

The agreement was reached Wednesday in Bogota, after meetings with Colombian President Belisario Betancur. Occidental had developed the region in partnership with Colombia's national oil company, Ecopetrol. Occidental's share of the Colombian project was 40 percent, after royalties to the Colombian government. The agreement with Royal Dutch-Shell gives Occidental and Royal Dutch-Shell each a 20 percent share.

Occidental Chairman Armand Hammer called the deal a "confirmation of the value of our discovery," which the company has estimated at 1 billion barrels in the Cano Limon field alone.

Wall Street reacted favorably to the announcement Wednesday. Occidental's stock closed at $33.625, up $2.75 a share as 1,099,100 shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Andrew Gray III, an oil analyst with Pershing & Co. in New York, said that until Wednesday the stock market had not given Occidental enough credit for its Colombian discovery, though Occidental had projected that its Colombian oil would contribute between $1.50 and $2 per share to earnings next year. The Royal Dutch-Shell deal is worth about $10 a share.

Analysts speculated that the size of Royal Dutch-Shell's investment indicated that the Colombian reserves might be larger than 1 billion barrels. Analysts also viewed the purchase as a sign that the price of crude oil, which has slid steadily downward since last October, may have hit bottom.

"The fact that Royal Dutch is willing to spend $1 billion in a foreign country for reserves that won't come on stream for almost a year and (about which) there's some uncertainty, says they must think that crude has hit bottom," Edgar said.

Analysts said they had expected Occidental to sell some additional assets this year. The company had made debt reduction a priority and has reduced its senior debt by about $2 billion since 1982, partly through asset sales. The Colombian sale, however, came as a surprise.

At the company's annual meeting in Santa Monica, Calif., two weeks ago, the Colombian discoveries were hailed by Hammer as a "major contribution to Occidental earnings in 1986 and in years to come." In a speech to shareholders, he emphasized that Occidental had "only one partner, the state oil company" and that Occidental's share was "a full 50 percent after a 20 percent royalty."

Japanese engineers propose train

DALLAS (AP) — A high-speed, high-cost train has been proposed by a group of Japanese engineers as a way to quickly move travelers between Dallas and Fort Worth.

The system would cost about $334 million to build, but would only cost passengers $5 to ride, according to the group recommending the train.

It would offer commuters a 30-minute alternative to heavy interstate traffic.

The Japanese Railway Technology Corp., which conducted the free study for local officials, said Tuesday that an electrified, double-track rail system along the Rock Island Railroad track between Dallas and Fort Worth could reach a top speed of 70 mph.

The proposed system would have 12 stops between the two cities, including Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The proposal was received enthusiastically by officials serving on Railtran, a group formed to develop passenger service along the 33-mile stretch of track bought jointly by the cities of Dallas and Fort Worth in 1983.

Railtran Chairman Sid Stahl said the study is "a major first step forward" in looking at the feasibility of a high-speed rail service between Dallas and Fort Worth.

"What we learned today is that a mass-transit rail system is viable in this corridor," Stahl said.

Former analyst publishes magazine for 'affluent achievers'

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Publications often take on the preoccupations of their publishers but Avenue — a lavish, controlled-circulation magazine aimed primarily at the affluent Upper East Side — really is Judith Price. "It's my vision of the world," she said.

What Mrs. Price sees are charity benefits for wildflower research and little cocktail parties at Park Avenue duplexes and summer shares in the Hamptons for "people like us." A recent article about the grouper phenomenon observed, "One is tempted to dismiss the whole gobbling group of them as so many outer-borough legal secretaries and accountants. But this would be wrong. Nice girls and boys do it too."

It was 10 years ago, at a time when new magazines were targeting desirable demographic groups or geographical areas, that Mrs. Price, a former business and economics researcher, decided to impose her particular vision on publishing. She put together a magazine that would be sent free to all the best addresses in what she calls Avenue-land: the stretch between Fifth and Third from 57th Street to 86th Street, with forays farther north on Fifth to 96th Street and farther east to enclaves on Sutton Place, Beekman Place and Gracie Square. It would also be more cost-effective to deliver by limousine than by the U.S. Postal Service.

TODAY AVENUE, which appears nine times a year, has a circulation of about 75,000, including 42,000 in Manhattan. The other copies — which travel more conventionally, by mail — go to the right side of the tracks in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Dallas, Houston and Chicago as well as suburban New York. In September, the best neighborhoods of Washington will be added. And, since 1983 Mrs. Price has also printed some 60,000 copies of On the Avenue, a supplement aimed at the younger and upwardly mobile — she does not flinch at the word Yuppie — denizens of more marginal avenues such as York. "They're still expensive apartments," she said.

The publications together will generate advertising revenue of between $7 million and $8 million this year, Mrs. Price said. Avenue glitters with advertisements from Cartier, Sotheby Parke Bernet, Harry Winston and a variety of financial services firms.

On the Avenue, whose advertising rates are about half those of Avenue, is more egalitarian. If Tiffany's advertises diamonds in Avenue, in On the Avenue it casts pearls and Elsa Peretti belt buckles before subscribers. "These people are trying very hard," said Mrs. Price, leafing through a copy of On the Avenue. "They're visiting the great chefs of Europe, they're buying lingerie at Samantha Jones, they're shopping at Gristede's."

THOSE ARE ALL activities endorsed by Mrs. Price, who was born in Philadelphia, studied at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School and Columbia University, and worked as a researcher at the Chase Manhattan Bank and Time Inc. before starting the magazine with money from her husband, a wealthy, non-practicing lawyer. "I had almost no fear," she said. "I knew it would be successful." Avenue readers are people who are affluent but also "achievers, doers," she said. "They're like me!"

It is true that Mrs. Price, 42 years old, fits neatly into Avenue's demographics. She lives in the heart of Avenue-land, where the average market value of a subscriber's residence was $861,000 in 1982, according to the last readership survey. "It would be higher now," she said, noting that her own co-op was recently valued at $1.5 million. The last readership survey also reported an average household income of $197,795, although that was in 1980; as for her own income, Mrs. Price wasn't saying.

But in an hour last week, she said that one of her heroes was H. Ross Perot, the flamboyant Dallas entrepreneur; that she was taking private French lessons twice a week ("j'etude deux fois chaque semaine"); that she hated the word affluent because "it sounds so intellectual." Avenue's readership may be rich, but it is the "richness of New York" that the magazine celebrates. "In Avenue-land, there are certain shortcuts," she said. "If you write 'Pablo Picasso,' you don't have to write 'Pablo Picasso, the artist.'"

THE RICHNESS OF New York, and the very rich, are both covered by Avenue. Real estate developers, lawyers, designers and restaurateurs are popular subjects, but wealth is not the only prerequisite. The article also has to have "power things in it," Mrs. Price said, meaning that the individual ought to be the first or the best or the most at whatever he or she does.

Avenue also publishes the Upper East Side equivalents of small-town social notes: which hostess rotates ladies two places around the table after each course; which Wall Streeter forgot his wife when he left a dinner party; which famous writer has been looking for an East Side co-op for three years; which tables have become most popular at which restaurants. ("Meanwhile, at Le Cirque ...")

Avenue looks as glossy as its readers, with heavy paper, award-winning design and top photographers such as Bill Hayward, whose work appears in the magazine only in black-and-white. On the Avenue, like its market, is more down scale. The magazines are edited by Michael Shnayerson, a former Time writer, and have about 50 employees. Apart from casting a vote on story ideas at the conferences held twice a year, Mrs. Price takes a hands-off approach to the editorial process.

Because she has no desire to take Avenue any farther west in Manhattan, Mrs. Price's goal is to add more cities — she projects a circulation of 100,000 in 10 years — and to take in more advertisements.

First Black woman millionaire wins PepsiCo's Presence Series

INDIANAPOLIS (SWN) — At a reception at the Madame Walker Urban Life Center, executives from PepsiCo, Inc. unveiled the original artwork of artist Charles Lilly used to create a poster honoring Madame C. J. Walker.

Madame Walker, the first Black woman millionaire, was selected at the 10th subject of PepsiCo's award-winning Black Presence Series, which honors Black achievers. The posters are available free of charge to community groups and organizations.

"We are proud to recognize Madame Walker's tremendous achievements, one that symbolizes the talent and undying energy of many black entrepreneurs," said Jacqui B. Gates, Manager of Corporate Relations for PepsiCo.

Walker, who rose from the plight of slavery to become a true pioneer among American women entrepreneurs, gained her fame and fortune from developing hair care products for Black women. Today, the Black hair care market represents the fastest growing segment of the $10 billion health and beauty aids industry.

The poster, to be on permanent display in the center's Madame C. J. Walker Memorial Room, headquarters for the Walker Company as it is known today, was given to Lance Bundles, great, great grandson of the late Madame Walker.

In addition to PepsiCo dedicating a poster, noted author and historian Alex Haley, plans to publish a biography on Madame Walker scheduled for release in the fall.

"Madame Walker made her dream into a reality and paved the way for many to follow," sai' Gates.

Gates' remarks were made at a reception during the 21st convention of the Opportunities Industrialization Centers, where the senior executive presented a check for $10,000 as a contribution in support of OIC's national efforts in minority economic development. The contribution doubles PepsiCo's previous donation.

"This is just our way of reaffirming our support of OIC's mission, and PepsiCo's continuing commitment to minority economic development. Only a healty minority business community can create jobs and opportunity," she said.

PepsiCo is a multi-billion dollar consumer products and services company. Its divisions include Pepsi-Cola, Frito-Lay, Pizza Hut, Taco Bell and La Petite Boulangerie.

GM announces talks to build cars in Egypt

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. soon will begin talks with the Egyptian government on plans for the giant automaker's second production venture in the African country, GM officials say.

GM received a letter of intent from Egyptian officials to "initiate negotiations for production of passenger cars of two-liter or less displacement for the local Egyptian market," the company said Wednesday in a statement.

GM and Isuzu Motors Ltd. of Japan currently are completing a plant near Cairo, Egypt, that will produce small trucks. GM owns 31 percent of that operation, Isuzu 21 percent and private Egyptian investors the rest, GM spokesman Jack Harned said.

Harned said the new plant, at a site not yet determined, probably would be a joint venture between GM, private Egyptian investors and perhaps that country's government, although that, too, has not been determined.

The plan also calls for the development of a new component industry supported by several major U.S. and European corporations, the statement said.

The Egyptian market currently imports some 70,000 to 90,000 small and medium-sized vehicles annually, primarily from Europe, Harned said.

He said the new car probably would be an Opel-type car similar to those produced by GM in Europe.

"While details of the program must still be negotiated, there is little doubt the Egyptian economy and its industrial infrastructure will be its major beneficiaries," said William C. Mott, GM's executive director for African operations.

Gymnist Julianne McNamara cartwheeled her way into America's hearts during the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

Gold-medal girl

By LINDA-MARIE SINGER
King Features Syndicate

"Here I go!" squeals the actress from TV's "Charles in Charge," as she leaps, spins and cartwheels between two astonished but delighted young men. That shouldn't be anything new for Olympian Julianne McNamara, who also cartwheeled herself into America's hearts, becoming the first American woman ever to win a gold medal on the uneven parallel bars and a silver for floor exercises. To top it, she picked up another silver for team competition.

Julianne McNamara pushes the "rewind" button on the VCR and turns away from the screen to emphasize in a sweet but firm tone, " 'Charles in Charge' was my first cameo." She continues in a raspy, sensual voice, "It was odd to play that aggressive a role, for I'm not at all like that girl. I mean, I'm really not forward...Still, it was fun!"

Fun has been a steady ingredient in the life of this golden-haired Californian's life, starting from age 9 when she tagged along with her older sister, Elizabeth, to the local recreation department. That was 10 years ago.

"Please make a note of this," booms an Australian-accented voice from the kitchen. "We never thought of our daughter as an Olympic champion," says Dorothy "Jean" McNamara.

The years have been good to the former Melbourne, Australia, track star who also received medals in rhythmic gymnastics. Somewhere along the line Mrs. McNamara also obtained a knack for free-flowing conversation.

"So many people want to know if my husband and I mapped out Julianne's career the way some parents do." Before she can finish her thought, Kevin McNamara wanders through to join the party. Now in his 60s, he is semi-retired after serving 35 years with the British Consulate's Trade Development Office. McNamara's jovial personality blends with soft blue eyes that communicate instant security.

A one-time Melbourne State titlist in track, McNamara opted for a career in England, after he met his wife-to-be in Australia.

"I didn't follow him!" Mrs. McNamara underlines, as she swirls her index finger through the air. "We've been married 30 years and...wait, you haven't seen a picture of our oldest girl, Elizabeth. She's 21 and a senior at the University of Oregon, majoring in communications."

> "Gymnastics always will be something I'll want to do at the highest level possible. But without the emotional support of my family — no way. They always emphasized that if I wanted to come home from Oregon, if I chose to return from L.A., even if I wanted to quit Houston, it was fine with them. And I know they suffered without me all those years, as I suffered without them..."
> — Julianne McNamara

"They don't look alike, do they?" asks McNamara as the photograph reveals yet another beauty — only this one has black hair and is 5-foot, 7. "Would you believe that?" he says, shrugging his shoulders.

Meanwhile, Ms. McNamara, the one who can barely tiptoe to the five-foot mark, rearranges the cartons that are stacked against the livingroom wall. The 19-year-old starts her first semester at UCLA where she will major either in communications or in pre-med.

"So my parents are helping me relocate in L.A. while I go to college. They haven't decided whether to sell this house... It will be a treat if we could all be together," Miss McNamara says. "I mean, I've lived away from them for so long. First Oregon, then Huntington Beach, Calif., finally Houston."

The inexperienced 13-year-old made headlines when she finished sixth all-around in the Junior National Gymnastics. "Hey, that was pretty darn good coming in second in bars and fourth in valuting. Right then and there I decided to get myself into 'elite gymnastics' — world class gymnastics, that is." That decision meant a move to Eugene, Ore., in order to study with Don Mulvihill at the best facility in the country.

"She was only going there for three months," her mother cuts in. "Three months."

"I stayed nine months and became a U.S. champion," says Ms. McNamara.

That isn't all. In 1980 Ms.McNamara made the U.S. Olympic Team.

"Naturally, you get a little homesick, but that first year in Oregon was the easiest. I was 13 and it was kind of like going off to camp. I was extremely busy. Everything was so new. Then, gradually, when the novelty wore off, I realized — boom — I'm not home anymore."

"Mental strength. That's what our Julianne's about," her mother insists.

"Listen, I had some pretty hard times during those next five years away from my parents. I discovered that when you're on your own, people try to take advantage of you. Well, maybe that's how life is, anyway."

"Our daughter was a bit of an outsider in Oregon. Some of the other girls were already established..."

"So I tried to get accepted into their clique," says Ms. McNamara.

"The one thing you had was talent and ability," her father adds. "Still you had to pay your dues."

"So I forgot about politics and cliques, 'cause it all boils down to what you're doing in the gym. Everything else has to be put aside..."

"The funny thing is that while the others were well-established already, Julianne won the championship!" exclaims her mother.

Realizing she's being stared at, the teen-ager responds with her warm gray eyes and waits for someone to initiate the conversation. Ms. McNamara is not withdrawn, only shy. But one thing is unmistakable: Here's a huggable bundle of joy.

Just ask the premier gymnastics instructor, Bela Karolyi, who picked up the pieces after Ms. McNamara's disappointing season with Olympic coach Don Peters in Huntington Beach.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. Could you tell me about Valerie Harper and whether she has any plans to do more TV?

Angie P.
South Bend, Ind.

A. She is a self-described "Spanish-English-Scotch-Irish-Welsh French Canadian" born in Suffern, N.Y., and raised in Oregon, Michigan and, primarily, Jersey City, N.J.

At 9, she decided to become a dancer and studied dance throughout her teens in New York City. At 16, she was in the corps de ballet at Radio City Music Hall. At 18, she switched her focus to acting, studied at John Cassavetes' workshop and went off to work in summer stock. She returned on Broadway in such musicals as "Take Me Along," "Wildcat" and "Subways Are for Sleeping."

The turning point of her career was, obviously, getting the role of Rhoda in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" in 1970. (She had to overcome initial resistance on the part of the producers because she wasn't Jewish and didn't have a New York accent, two prominent features of the character; but she ultimately won three Emmys for her performances.) Rhoda, as you probably remember, spun off to her own show in 1974.

Valerie Harper

In recent years, Ms. Harper has concentrated on movies, such as "Chapter Two," and TV movies such as "Farrell for the People" and "The Execution."

As we go to press, she's shooting a pilot for NBC called, simply, "The Valerie Harper Show" in which she plays a woman raising three sons mostly on her own due to the frequent absences of her pilot husband. If NBC likes the results, the show could be on in the fall. Regardless, you'll see her in the fall on a "Love Boat" cruise to Egypt.

She's been involved with former fitness expert/now producer (of her planned series) Tony Cacciotti since 1979. They met when he was hired to supervise her 30-pound weight loss for "Chapter Two." She was previously married to actor Richard Schaal; they were divorced in 1978.

Q. I absolutely adore Robert De Niro, but I never hear anything about him.

K.W.
Milton, Fla.

A. You never hear anything about him because he is obsessively private. He rarely talks to the press, and if he does, he refuses to discuss his private life. This much is known: He's the son of a renowned painter, also named Robert De Niro, his parents split up when he was 2 and he was raised in New York's Little Italy and Greenwich Village.

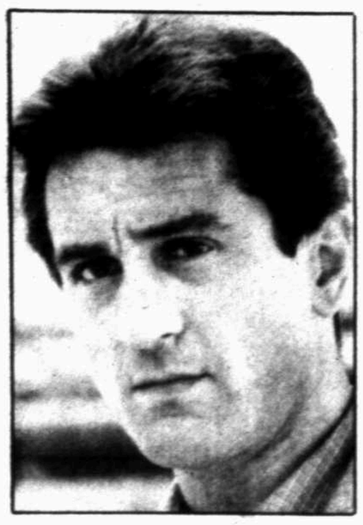
He quit school at 16, studied acting with coach Stella Adler and took to the stage — and then the screen in Brian de Palma's early films "The Wedding Party," "Greetings" and "Hi, Mom!"

His first really visible role was in "Bang the Drum Slowly," leading to "Mean Streets" (the first of several collaborations with director Martin Scorcese), "Taxi Driver," "Raging Bull," "New York, New York" and "King of Comedy."

He is known to be an absolute perfectionist in his preparation for roles — gaining 60 pounds for "Raging Bull," learning to speak Sicilian-accented Italian for "The Godfather — Part II," learning the saxophone for "New York, New York." The same is true for his performances — he did a 30-foot jump into a muddy river in "The Deer Hunter."

He becomes the characters he plays, according to his co-stars, and as a result, he decided to try something he hadn't done, play an average, normal guy in the recent "Falling in Love." Currently, he's in Colombia filming "The Mission," a story about the conflict in South America following the Spanish conquests in the 1750s. Jeremy Irons co-stars.

Regarding his personal life: He and ex-wife Diahane Abbott have an 8-year-old son, Raphael; he also has a 4-year-old daughter with singer Helena Springs.

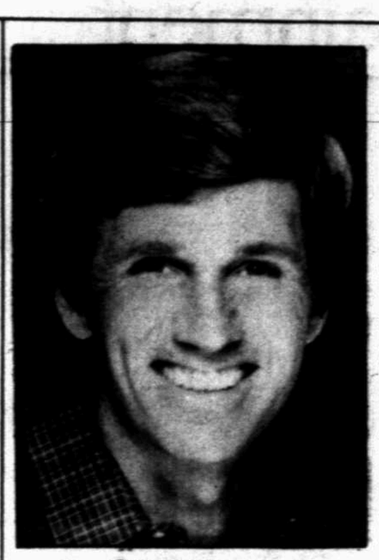


Robert de Niro

Q. Can you tell me if the person impersonating Charlie Chaplin in the IBM ads is a woman or a man? I heard it was a woman.

Mrs. J.C. Farina
Tunkhannock, Pa.

A. The actor, Billy Scudder, is, from all reports, not a woman.



Gary Collins

Q. Could you tell me how many times Gary Collins has been married and how many children he has?

Margaret S. Sharp
Ocean City, N.J.

A. He's been married twice: to his former high-school sweetheart, with whom he had two children, Guy, now 20, and Melissa, 19; and to former Miss America Mary Ann Mobley. They've been married for 18 years and have a daughter, Mary Clancy, 16. They also have, as he explains it, a close marriage and stable home life which he needs — his parents separated when he was very young and he didn't see his father again until he was 20. His mother moved the family around a lot, working to support him and his sister.

Pamela Sue Martin

Q. Is Pamela Sue Martin married? Also, what has she been doing since leaving "Dynasty"?

J.A. Howell
Fresno, Calif.

A. She is married to Chilean businessman Manuel Rojas, who produced her recent unsuccessful film "Torchlight." Since leaving "Dynasty" and writing and acting in that film, she's been looking around for other projects to do.

Q. Could you give us some information on Betty Buckley and tell us what she's doing now?

Dee Bradford
Modesto, Calif.

A. She's 37, from Ft. Worth, Texas, the daughter of an Air Force officer and a former singer/dancer who gave her daughter dancing lessons starting at the age of 3.

At 11, Betty Lynn saw her first musical and decided that singing was the way to go. At 21, after finishing Texas Christian University, she moved to New York. Almost immediately, she got a featured role in the musical "1776," followed by a starring role in the London production of "Promises, Promises" and the Broadway production of "Pippin."

That brought her to the attention of Brian de Palma, who cast her as the kindly gym teacher in "Carrie." That role led to her stint as the stepmother Abby Bradford in the series "Eight Is Enough."

Recently, as you probably know, she won a Tony award for "Cats" and has been artist-in-residence at New York's St. Bartholomew's church. As we go to press, she's preparing to take to the boards in "Juno's Swan," co-starring Mary Kay Place and Daniel Hugh-Kelly.

JULIANNE

As always, he is eager to talk about one of his most prized students who came to him in a panic only six months before the 1984 Olympics.

"The towering Transylvanian" speaks. "Julianne — oh, so disappointed mentally. No excitement." Karolyi hangs languidly on every phrase he emphasizes.

"But I was ready to accept without a doubt that Julianne McNamara was the best known name internationally. So, what to do? Goals, yes, to make her confident. Yes, she can do it!" His voice rises. There's fire now.

"Yes," I tell her. "You're going to make it! One more time! Let's go! Good! No, great! You understand — that's permanent reinforcement."

Which is exactly what Ms. McNamara needed. "Deep down I knew I wasn't training the way I should have with more repetitions and routines," she says of her time spent in Huntington Beach. "Physically, I was in horrible condition. In fact, after six years and 24 events in international competition (grabbing first or second almost every time), I found that I had lost 30 percent of my strength on my right side.

"So it took real courage to change gyms and teachers a half year before the Olympics. I mean, you just don't do that."

"The truth was that our daughter was dying in front of us. She was desperate," her mother recalls. "'Mom, I won't make the 1984 Olympic Team the way I'm going,' she told me. I answered, 'It's going to be a hard road up.'"

So what exactly did Karolyi accomplish? With an easy flick of a smile, the Olympian explains: "He brought me back to the best shape I've ever been in. He made me strong again, and if you're strong, you're confident. And what dedication! Bela puts in such an incredible amount of time and is such a motivating force — so gung ho that it really carries over."

Mrs. McNamara concurs. "Do you know that within three weeks with Bela in Houston, that Julianne competed in the American Cup and came in second? What impressed me about the man wasn't only that he coached Nadia Comaneci, but that he's someone who doesn't make idle promises. He said he would do his best, and Julianne would do her best."

But Karolyi acknowledged something else apart from his student's natural ability: "The sacrifices Mrs. McNamara made were fantastic. She came to Houston and had to leave her husband for all that time. I quickly understood that these nice people needed and deserved my full support.

"And Julianne? How can I make a picture for you? This is a very well-balanced person who digests everything with her mental system before acting. She's well-educated, polite and sweet. But at the same time she's a little too inside. Never expresses herself 100 percent. You have to watch for little signs. Yes, they can mean a lot.

"Obviously, she's the opposite of Mary Lou Retton (his most touted American star), but I have this admiration for Julianne, especially at the Olympics. She didn't crack. She knew this was the biggest chance of her life.

"It's as if she said, 'I want to show the world that I wasn't wasting my time for nothing.' And look — night after night getting those perfect scores. Everything going fast." He lowers his voice to a whisper. "I get excited for her. Oh, I can't explain, but it's a feeling like you fly!"

Ms. McNamara knows this feeling well. Especially at the Olympics when a fan held up the sign, "Julianne's one little red-headed engine that could."

"...Now, about Julianne truly can. I think diving gold medalist Greg Lougainis described it best when he told the press that the Olympics was just another meet. People probably thought: 'Gee, that's a strange thing to say.' But if you look at it this way — every gymnastics meet has bars, vaults, beams, floor and judges — all except the title of Olympic Games. If you were conscious of that title every second, you'd sure get rattled.

"That's where Bela Karolyi came in, for he treated even the exhibitions and little competitions like a big deal. See how the Olympics became (psychologically) another meet? Now the trials — they were something else. You have everything to lose. One slip and you're off the team. Yet once you've made the Olympics, you have everything to gain.

"So now I bet you're going to ask how well I did in the trials, right?" She pauses and flashes an impish grin. "I did well enough."

Her parents differ. In unison: "She was fantastic!"

Since August 1984 Julianne McNamara's entire life has been fantastic. "Even crowds are more receptive. Before, fans who came out were involved somehow in the sport. Now it's more the general public who enjoyed watching gymnastics.

"You'll hear a lot of little girls screaming for Mitch (Gaylord), Bart (Conner) and Peter (Vidmar). We get the dinner proposals." She blushes. "We have such a tight schedule that we can't say yes."

Ms. McNamara did say yes to friend Mark Harmon ("St. Elsewhere") who squires her around Los Angeles from time to time. There's an 8-by-10 souvenir in the bedroom of the two of them attending the Emmy Awards.

The peppy athlete taps her feet to an inaudible rhythm while her mother fetches a sample of her daughter's daily fan mail. Ms. McNamara's freckles seem to wiggle across her face as she scans a rainbow of requests from pre-schoolers "who have to dictate to their parents," to invalids and even convicts who write, "Your photograph would cheer me up so much."

The gold-medal winner reaches for one of her brightly colored postcards that she autographs and adds a special message. "Here's this week's mailing," says her father, as he enters with a pile of postcards that resembles a stack of 40 buttermilk pancakes.

Julianne hops up and reaches the mantelpiece for her one gold and two silver medals. She unravels them from carefully wrapped tissue paper. They wink back at her as she places them around her neck. Lost in reverie, she says, "I can still picture myself on the medal stand." Her eyelashes close.

"We're in awe of her," the McNamaras say.

"Gymnastics always will be something I'll want to do at the highest level possible," she maintains. "But without the emotional support of my family — no way. They always emphasized that if I wanted to come home from Oregon, if I chose to return from L.A., even if I wanted to quit Houston, it was fine with them. And I know they suffered without me all those years, as I suffered without them..."

"Well, what's it all about, anyway?" Mrs. McNamara wonders aloud. "I mean, what's that saying? 'Love and let go.'"

McNamara says, "I always reminded her, 'You call your father and I'll come straight away to get you. No questions asked.'"

'Return of the Jedi' has held up well

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

"Return of the Jedi" has returned. The third film of George Lucas' "Star Wars" trilogy, originally shown in Midland in May of 1983, is now back in town on a return engagement.

Nationally, the movie broke a variety of box office records during its first release, earning well over $252 million. On one amazing day alone — Sunday, May 30, 1983 — it made more than $8.4 million.

Within the past year, "Return" has also gained the odd distinction of belonging to what must be the only Hollywood film series to have a entire national military strategy named after it.

In most respects "Return" has held up well. Two years later, even after repeated viewings, parts of the movie — about a band of space-age warriors trying to destroy a huge military space station — can still quicken the pulse.

The high-speed chase through the heavily wooded world of Endor — actually a giant redwood forest near Crescent City, Calif. — still amazes. For sheer visceral special-effects thrills, it has only been surpassed in recent films by the incredible mining car chase from last summer's "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom."

The climatic space battle with its large armada of spaceships whizzing wildly about is an impressive reminder of how much the "Star Wars" movies helped advance film technology. Only about a decade ago, it wasn't possible for science fiction movies to feature a large number of realistic-looking spaceships flying in a variety of directions at different speeds in a single frame.

"Return," however, absolutely flaunts its ability to stage immense, convincing space battles.

Not all of the film has aged so well. Quite a few of "Return's" alien beings look disappointingly plastic. Even the furry little Ewoks that were such a pleasant surprise when the film was first released aren't all that terribly believable on closer inspection.

A battle between these little creatures and an Imperial army which wasn't that convincing the first time around also seems even less realistic this time around.

At least some "Star Wars" fans think that, in retrospect, it may have been a mistake for "Return" to take the mask off villianous Darth Vader the way it does. The character certainly loses much of his supercharged mystique when unmasked.

"Return" lacks the freshness and isn't nearly as witty as the original 1977 "Star Wars." It also doesn't have the depth or the strong character development that marked the darker 1980 sequel, "The Empire Strikes Back."

Despite its flaws, "Return" still packs a powerful punch.

The trilogy was originally conceived by producer Lucas as the middle section of an epic nine-part series, but in interviews after "Return of the Jedi" was released Lucas seemed to have lost much of his momentum for making future chapters.

To a great many enthusiastic movie buffs out there, however, a strong "Star Wars" defense — fighting in favor of another film sequel — may seem to be at least as pressing a matter as building an anti-missile system.

"Return of the Jedi," rated PG for violence, is now showing at the Ritz Theatre.

Independent director says he's doing OK in Hollywood

LONDON (AP) — After making his name as one of Australia's most independent-minded film directors, Peter Weir is happy to report that his initial dealings with mainstream Hollywood haven't been that bad.

"I've not had trouble with studio or corporate executives," said the 40-year-old director, whose first American film, "Witness," opened the Cannes Film Festival.

Weir said his rapport with Harrison Ford, the star of "Witness," made his work pleasurable. "That trust between director and actor is so important. We were confident enough to ad-lib things."

He compared Ford, who plays a big city policeman drawn into Pennsylvania's tranquil Amish community, to Sean Connery in the James Bond films.

"When Harrison was in trouble, he really sweated it out. That's a skill," said Weir.

"I generally like to make a film in a spirit of joy and pleasure at practicing a craft," said Weir, who will next film an adaptation of Paul Theroux's novel "The Mosquito Coast."

Rivers' future might not be with NBC

By MICHAEL DOUGAN
Hearst News Service

"I'm from the generation where you just didn't. And if you did you felt guilt for the rest of your life. I'm just killing myself that I wasn't single in the '70s."
— Comedian Joan Rivers

Joan Rivers knows she has a future in network television, but not at NBC. The tip-off came in the form of an inter-office memo written by an unnamed NBC vice president and anonymously mailed to Ms. Rivers.

She said the memo listed 10 possible replacements for Johnny Carson when he retires from "The Tonight Show." Even though Ms. Rivers is now Carson's regular fill-in host, her name was absent from the list. Neither were any other women listed. Among the men listed were David Letterman, whose own wacky talk show follows Carson's on NBC, and comic David Brenner.

"My name wasn't on it and that's fine, now we know where we stand," said the outspoken comic. "It's a very corporate thing and it hurt me very much. I learned I was not the golden girl and I was the one whom they found in a trash can. Obviously, some vice president at NBC hates me."

Ms. Rivers said she had not discussed the problem publicly before because she doesn't believe it's a matter of widespread concern.

"Does America care? Do you think someone in Louisiana gives a damn that I got hurt by a memo?"

She added that Carson had nothing to do with the memo.

"Johnny is wonderful," she said. "Johnny has been my supporter and my mentor for 20 years."

Meanwhile, NBC officials were denying that the memo existed.

"I have never seen such a list," Brandon Tartikoff, NBC entertainment chief, told the press. "If there were such a list, Joan Rivers' name would be the first one on it."

Either way, Ms. Rivers is not suffering a lack of opportunities.

"I've gotten calls from both other networks," she revealed. The calls were followed by "secret meetings in hotel rooms."

Ms. Rivers said both CBS and ABC were interested in using her in a similar format, hosting a talk show to compete head-to-head with Carson's. But she hinted that she might not be interested in working that regularly on television.

"I can see where it's a tremendous amount of work, so I don't really know if I'd take it. As long as NBC wants me for eight weeks a year I'm very happy, but it was a joy to get two phone calls."

Ms. Rivers takes her often outrageous form of comedy to cable with "Joan Rivers and Friends Salute Heidi Abramowitz," a one-hour special soon to debut on the pay channel Showtime. Abramowitz is a key figure in all of Rivers' acts these days, a woman she claims to have known in high school who was, in Ms. Rivers' words, "a tramp." Ms. Rivers insists Abramowitz is based on a real person, but refutes speculation that it is herself. Despite the raunchy nature of her routines, Ms. Rivers says she is sexually repressed.

"I'm from the generation where you just didn't. And if you did you felt guilt for the rest of your life. I'm just killing myself that I wasn't single in the '70s."

Nor does she know for sure that the inspiration for Abramowitz actually did all the things she was suspected of.

"I don't know if she went all the way, because back then even your parents didn't," said Ms. Rivers.

Another essential ingredient to her act is the phrase, "Can we talk?" That line has become so associated with the pert comic she has had it copyrighted. The reason, she said, was that a major greeting card company began using the line without her permission.

"We were putting out a line of greeting cards and all of a sudden Hallmark was also putting out a line of greeting cards that said 'Can we talk?' on them — and we said that's not fair. We're stopping them right now. I have a great dress for court."

Houston conductor: Pop music only priority

"Pop music is our only priority," said Ned Battista, creator and conductor of the Houston Pops Orchestra, the nation's only year-round independent pops orchestra.

"We play this music because we believe in it and want to do it properly; this organization provides the rare opportunity to do popular music well," Battista said.

Area residents will have a chance to hear this highly acclaimed pops orchestra present "From the Alamo to Broadway," 150 years of music related to the State of Texas, at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Chaparral Center, located on the Midland College campus.

The program includes, among others, "The Yellow Rose of Texas," "Green Leaves of Summer," "Deep in the Heart of Texas," "San Antonio Rose," "You Were Always on My Mind," "Dueling Banjos," "Galveston" as well as a number of medleys, such as those featuring Mexican songs, Texas college songs, a Texas historical medley and a polka medley.

Ned Battista

In addition to using original scores written, for the most part, by Battista or the staff arranger Don Elam, the orchestra uses freelance musicians.

"When I rehearse my Houston Pops, I let the players know that I take what we are doing very seriously. They can't just coast. A freelancer has to hit a home run every time or he won't be rehired," Battista said.

"If I sense that somebody feels condescending toward this music, I just get somebody else the next time."

Battista trained at the Juilliard School in New York and at the University of Houston, then joined the Houston Symphony in 1965 as a trumpet player. Backed by the city, he organized his first pops concert in the Miller Outdoor Theatre in 1971.

Today, in addition to its seven regular subscription programs a year, the orchestra gives 20 to 25 concerts, many of them free, in parks and schools and civic centers. Although most of the performances are in Houston, the pops orchestra does perform in other Texas cities and has toured to New York and went to Washington D.C. to play at the Smithsonian during the Reagan inaugural gala.

Tickets, priced at $7 to $13, for Friday's performance may be purchased at Chaparral Center.

Arts Forum '85 to deal with arts in Texas

Arts Forum '85, a public meeting on the state-of-the-arts in Texas and the Permian Basin, will be coordinated by Texas Non-Profit Theatres Inc. in Odessa and hosted by Midland Community Theatre, from 9-11:30 a.m. Wednesday. Publicity is being coordinated by U.T. Permian Basin.

A major topic of discussion will be the economic impact of the arts.

According to a study commissioned by the Texas Commission on the Arts and released in October of last year by Peat Marwick Mitchell & Company, the arts in Texas has at least a $1.7 billion impact each year. The study indicated the statewide direct impact of the arts at approximately $510 million.

This impact is felt in rural as well as urban areas of Texas. For example, special studies of selected non-urban counties showed the impact of non-profit arts organizations to be $7.5 million in East Texas and $7.6 million in West Texas.

"Our goal for Arts Forum '85 is to get information to the people who really are the life of the Permian Basin's cultural organizations — volunteers who fundraise, serve on boards, stuff envelopes and attend performances," said Enid Holm, executive director of Texas Non-Profit Theatres Inc., and coordinator of Arts Forum '85.

"These people really need to know how important they are to not just the arts in their community, but to the growth and development of the arts throughout Texas," Ms. Holm said. "They also need to know how important their efforts are to insure an improved quality of life in Texas."

Other information that will be shared includes the current state appropriations for the arts, grants that have been awarded to the Permian Basin, the new state arts plan of the Texas Commission on the Arts and the statewide networking for the Arts.

Notices of the Forum have been mailed to 6,000 Permian Basin residents; however, the public is cordially invited to attend.

The $15 registration fee includes breakfast. For further information, contact the Midland Community Theatre at 682-2544, Texas Non-Profit Theatres Inc., at 1-335-5044, or U.T. Permian Basin at 563-2400, extension 2342.

Designer responsible for dressing stars on 'Dynasty'

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Designer Nolan Miller is the man who sees to it that the women on "Dynasty" are dressed to the teeth.

He also sees to it that Joan Collins, who plays Alexis Carrington Colby, Linda Evans, who is Krystle Carrington, and all the cast members on ABC's hit prime-time soap opera are dressed to fit their characters.

"Joan Collins has a very studied look," he said. "She always has gloves, handbags, shoes and all the accessories that match. It's an ensemble outfit. It's a Joan Crawford kind of look. I dressed her for 20 years and to the day she died everything was a set.

"I do that with Alexis visually. We know this is a woman obsessed with money and power. It gives her a more intimidating look. It's a sharp-lined look. For another actress it probably wouldn't work, but like Joan Crawford, she has strength and flair. She makes it work. Her look is bordering on the theatrical. It's very dramatic."

Krystle Carrington, on the other hand, is much more subtle and low key.

"She's soft and kind," said Miller. "We try to do her things soft. Softer colors, softer fabrics."

Miller said, "I'm also responsible for the look of the men. Thank God they're all good-looking. I'd hate to have to dress some of the actors I've dressed in the past."

In the past, Miller has been responsible for the wardrobe on all of Aaron Spelling's shows, such as "Hotel," "The Love Boat," and "T.J. Hooker," but in the coming season he will devote most of his time to "Dynasty" and its spinoff, "Dynasty II: The Colbys." He is also the fashion consultant for the Dynasty Collection of clothes, jewelry and accessories.

"I probably design 70 percent of the women's clothes on 'Dynasty,'" he said. "There are so many women on the show it becomes very difficult. We spent $100,000 on wardrobe for the last two episodes."

Miller also dresses Elizabeth Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck, Jane Wyman, Suzanne Pleshette and a number of other stars. He designed Miss Taylor's wardrobe for "Malice in Wonderland" and "North and South."

Miller, 50, is tall, slim and as handsome as a television star.

"I've wanted to design clothes for movies ever since I was in the sixth grade," he said.

That was a risky ambition for a kid whose dad worked in the oil fields of Burkburnett, Texas, and Lake Charles, La. "When my father found out, he asked my mother, 'Do you know what your son wants to do?'" he said. "My father was half Indian and very rural."

Miller worked in a women's wear store in Lake Charles before moving to Beverly Hills to take a job in a florist shop, and to enroll in the Chouinard Art Institute.

It was while working at the florist shop that he got his first professional design job, a dress for an heiress who invited him to a party.

At the party he met a Sandra Gray Stream, who turned out to be from an oil family in Lake Charles. They married shortly afterward.

And at the florist shop he met a young writer and sometime actor named Aaron Spelling.

"Aaron always understood from day one the importance of wardrobe," he said. "He did a pilot called 'Burke's Law' with 10 stars and I designed all the clothes, including the cowboy costume for Ronald Reagan. He played a cowboy movie star in a white outfit."

'Hurrah' fictionalized account of last man to die in WWI

"Hurrah for the Mext Man Who Dies," by Mark Goodman. Atheneum. 274 Pages. $14.95.

By CAROL DEEGAN
Associated Press

Hobey Baker was a golden youth on the autumn fields and winter ice. He led Princeton to a football championship in 1911, and he was the last man to die in World War I, one month after the Armistice had been signed by the Germans and the Allies.

Mark Goodman has written a fictionalized account of Baker's life in his first novel, "Hurrah for the Next Man Who Dies." The story is narrated by Baker's fictional friend, Jeb Runcible.

Baker was an athlete aristocrat who spent his winter evenings at prep school skating across the ice, hockey stick in hand, looking neither right nor left, learning not to watch the puck. He later applied that same determination during his college football days at Princeton, where he fielded punt after punt.

A Review

During his senior year, Baker was named All-American in both football and hockey. He was also voted an unprecedented series of "bests" and "mosts" including "the man who has done most for Princeton." However, the days after college were not so golden for Baker. Although he played for a semiprofessional hockey league, a good deal of his time was spent at the Morgan bank in New York City, where he was a trainee. "Think of all the things I could do today if I didn't have to go to work," he wrote to his friend, Jeb.

In 1917, Baker became a soldier in France. And an excellent pilot. But as his friend Jeb noted with a growing uneasiness, Baker seemed unable to grasp totally the reality of the war. He talked about aerial combat in football and hockey analogies. He took unnecessary risks.

A month after the war ended, and Baker had his orders to go home, he decided to go up for one more flight. The plane was not his own. It had mechanical problems. He decided to fly it anyway. The plane crashed, and Baker was dead.

Goodman has written an excellent novel, skillfully telling of Baker's struggle to keep alive his golden days as a college football hero, long after those days had ended. He has also skillfully recreated those early decades of the 20th century prior to the start of World War I.

Book recounts baseball's heroes, effect on nation

"Baseball America," by Donald Honig. Macmillan. 342 Pages. $19.95.

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
Associated Press

A Review

Donald Honig has built a reputation as an eminent baseball historian in recent years through a series of oral histories and pictorial tributes.

His 14th book on the sport, "Baseball America," calls upon Honig's narrative talents — he also has written 11 novels — to recount the sport's heroes and their effect on the game and on society. Honig does not dwell on the statistical impact of baseball's legends; rather, he looks at their heroic feats as well as their personal foibles through anecdotes and reminiscences.

In writing about Ty Cobb and Honus Wagner, Honig makes a statement that could apply to most of the players in his book: They "were transcendent enough figures to have myths tailor-made for them."

Among the legendary figures he cites are Cobb, Wagner, Babe Ruth, Walter Johnson, Christy Matthewson, Rogers Hornsby, Jackie Robinson, Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams. It even takes in today's luminaries, including Reggie Jackson and Pete Rose.

Throughout the book, Honig is faithful to its title, bringing into focus the sport and the nation.

If there is a flaw in the book, it is its occasional excessive use of old-fashioned flowery sports writing. But that is offset by Honig's candor and humor — he never shies from recounting the prickly aspects of the stars' personalities.

Ants in novel about good vs. evil

"A Rustle in the Grass, by Robin Hawdon," Dodd, Mead. 244 Pages. $13.95.

By PHIL THOMAS

A Review

Readers who enjoyed Richard Adams' "Watership Down" most likely will be taken with "A Rustle in the Grass."

There are many similarities between the two novels. Each concerns itself with such matters as the never-to-be-ended struggle between good and evil, and the unceasing efforts of the totalitarian state to overwhelm and crush the democratic society.

And, each is an anthropomorphic novel, with the difference here being that Adams' heroes were rabbits while those who populate the pages of Robin Hawdon's book are ants.

While there are many well-drawn characters in this book, the story centers on one young soldier ant named Dreamer — so-called because of the strange, often unsettling, visions he has as he sleeps.

Dreamer, the resident of a peaceable ant colony, is on patrol one day when he encounters the sole survivor of another colony that was wiped out by a band of huge, red ants. When told of what happened the naive Dreamer loses his innocence. "It was as if he had had a revelation; as if the disclosure that there was naked, apparently purposeless Evil in the universe had come as a new realization to his innocent, hitherto trusting self."

It goes without saying that the warlike red ants are going to collide with the peace-loving ants in Dreamer's colony, and they do. But not before Dreamer and his associates have a lot of adventures, some of them quite perilous.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—We play five-card major opening bids with a forcing no trump response. My partner and I have been having some disagreement on how we should handle weak hands with trump support. For instance, suppose partner opens one spade and you hold:

♠Q763 ♡85 ◇K954 ♣652

Should you raise to two spades or should you first bid one no trump?—R.O., Houston, Texas.

A.—There are different schools of thought about this. We prefer splitting the range of our major-suit single raise when playing the forcing no trump response. All minimum hands, i.e., those in the 6-7 point range, start by first bidding one no trump and then correcting to partner's major at the next turn, regardless of the quality of trump support. On hands with 8-9 points and three or more trumps, we raise partner's suit immediately.

This method seems to have an obvious advantage. Any time that you first respond one no trump and then support partner's suit, he should realize that he needs a very strong hand indeed to make game. After an immediate single raise, however, opener needs only slightly more than a minimum to search for game.

Q.—It seems that bridge is becoming a more and more complicated game, thanks to the ever-spawning number of conventions and systems. I think we are driving people from the game. What's the solution?—L.V., Portland, Oregon.

A.—We are inclined to agree with you, but we don't have an easy solution. You can't stop people from trying to develop more exact methods—the goal of perfection is part of human nature. It is true that some of these systems and gadgets reduce the game to a mere memory contest rather than a test of bridge ability, and we can understand why the average player is less than enchanted with them.

However, the beauty of bridge is that it can appeal to you at whatever level you care to play the game. Thus, the game is no less enjoyable if you elect to play it with just a few conventions or with a system that requires a book to explain it to your partner.

Those who haven't learned the game are missing a lot. Through bridge, we have developed friendships all over the world. And we know that the game is a wonderful pastime in one's golden years. We only hope that we have succeeded in passing along some of the enjoyment we have derived from the game over the past half century.

Send any questions for this column to "Goren Bridge," c/o this newspaper. Neither Charles Goren, Omar Sharif or their staffs can undertake to answer all questions personally. However, they will try to answer all questions that include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

It's summer and that means going to pool

By RACHEL COPE GOLDFARB
King Features Syndicate

Children splashing merrily, shallow blue ripples, warm summer breezes caressing honey-colored skin, and a feeling of well-being as the sun delivers vitamins directly to healthy flesh. These are a few of the memories I wish I had of going to the pool!

Bute, here are some actual memories that pop into my head as the prospect of schlepping to the pool each day presents itself.

I remember the times I informed my children it was time to leave; I had dinner in the oven, Daddy was bringing a client home to eat with us and we had been there five hours already anyway.

Wails escaped their throats, tears flowed onto their rosy cheeks and their bodies became dead weight. When they could finally be convinced to leave the pool, they were simply too tired to carry any of the goggles, flippers, kickboards, cards, books or towels they had carried in. I left each day feeling like a pack-camel.

I remember how I worried so about going to the pool at the beginning of each season. I looked nothing like the models in the ads for bathing suits, tanning lotions or even lounge chairs. My 20-pound winter warmth layer of cellulite had not yet been shed. My legs were the color of a raw, plucked chicken. My hair always looked synthetic when wet.

I purchased waterproof mascara that ran off of my lashes and onto my cheeks where it stayed for good. I purchased creams and ointments to give my skin a healthy glow which promoted sunburn the color of raspberries.

I purchased a full-length terry cloth coverall that was to be my uniform for the rest of the summer. Those who asked if I was hot didn't want to know what I was sparing them.

I remember seeing friends and neighbors who, September through May, buttoned the top blouse button and zipped jackets up to their chins. At the pool, their bathing suits would not have been large enough to wrap a leftover tuna salad sandwich. Dressing for success takes on a whole new meaning at the pool.

The snack bar brings a rush of memories. I smell the torpedoes and pork barbecue sandwiches microwaving into lunch for some poor kid with an iron stomach. I hear the tinkling of change, lots of change, my change, into the soda machine.

I feel the sticky, rubbery gum that someone left to melt on the picnic bench pulling the little hairs on the back of my legs when I get up leave the snack area. I feel my heart break as my sad-eyed children watch "all the other kids" get ice cream and they aren't allowed.

I remember the days I set aside to spend at the pool rearranging some plans and canceling others. We packed a day's worth of lotions, magazines, water toys and money into the car.

We arrived early to claim the best spot with the new lounge chairs (the ones with no broken plastic strip). We settled into position only to feel the plop-plop of teaspoon-sized raindrops on our suddenly shivering bodies. Rain hadn't been forecast, but the bruise-colored sky told us that the rain was there to stay.

I remember trying to exercise in the pool, swimming repeatedly into groups of teen-agers throwing bodies about or toddlers' mothers discussing toilet training. (I always made special note of these moms and was alert when their children entered the pool.)

I remember trying to relax against the ceramic wall of the pool in water up to my shoulders amidst squirt gun attacks, mistaken thigh pinches and the splashes of nearby hot-dog divers.

I remember trying to sleep or read or just think, when someone cheerily appeared, in the mood to discuss, in depth, next year's teachers, Jane Doe's stained-glass party or their newest diet (always my least favorite topic.)

I remember looking for a towel after a shower in my own bathroom, only to discover that they were all in the trunk of the car probably growing an impressive microscopic zoo.

Memories are made like this. I only hope I remembered to pay my family's pool dues this year — I'd hate to miss a minute of the fun!

Nutritious meals easy with planning, right recipes

By SANDRA SCOTT KLINK
King Features Syndicate

Working mothers, single parents, students, hard-working couples: attention! You're all supposed to be miracle workers, right? Work hard, come home, haul out the pots and pans and create a fabulous, nutritious, economical meal. It's not always easy.

Fast food is no answer. It gets expensive, boring, fattening, and certainly can't be called nutritious. Frozen dinners won't do for daily fare either. There's hope for all of you. All it takes is planning and a supply of appropriate recipes.

Planning is the key word here. Assuming that about a half an hour will be the maximum any of you want to spend in the kitchen, certain types of foods simply have to be eliminated from the working-day dinner: roasts, casseroles or other elaborate dishes.

So what's left? More than you might think: veal, turkey or chicken cutlets; broiled meat, fish or poultry; stir-fried dishes; anything microwavable.

Another help is the freezer. When you're in the mood, make extra portions of dishes.

Some of the new cookbooks are created especially for busy folks who want to eat well but can't work miracles. Perhaps the best of all of them is Quick, Thrifty Cooking by Reader's Digest Association ($21.95), 450 varied, simple recipes that could be the backbone volume for all.

CHICKEN BREASTS GENEVA

4 tablespoons (⅛ stick) butter or margarine
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 stalk celery, cut into strips
2 small carrots, peeled and cut into strips
1 medium-size yellow onion, chopped
4 slices boiled ham, cut into strips
⅛ teaspoon salt ¼ teaspoon black pepper
¼ cup all-purpose flour
2 whole chicken breasts, skinned and boned
4 thin slices Swiss cheese

Preheat the broiler. Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter with 2 tablespoons of the oil in a heavy 9- or 10-inch skillet over moderate heat. Add the celery, carrots, onion and ham. Lower the heat, cover, and cook for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Meanwhile, blend the salt, pepper and flour in a small bowl.

Remove the contents of the skillet to a plate, set aside, and in the same skillet, heat the remaining butter and oil over moderately high heat. Coat the chicken breasts with the flour mixture and shake off any excess. Place the breasts in the skillet and brown for 3 minutes on each side, lowering the heat to moderate, if necessary, to prevent burning.

Arrange the chicken pieces on an aluminum-foil-lined 15⅛-inch by 10⅛-inch by 1-inch baking pan. Top each piece with some of the vegetable-ham mixture, then with a slice of cheese. Broil just until the cheese melts.

BROILED FISH FILLETS

1½ pounds flounder, sole, halibut, cod or haddock fillets
¼ cup tomato juice
4 or more drops liquid hot red pepper seasoning
4 teaspoons vegetable oil
4 teaspoons Dijon or prepared spicy brown mustard
4 teaspoons prepared horseradish
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

Preheat the broiler. Butter the rack of the broiler pan and place the fish fillets on it. Combine the tomato juice, red pepper seasoning, oil, mustard, horseradish and Worcestershire sauce. Spread the mixture evenly over the fish.

Broil 3 to 4 inches from the heat, without turning, for 5 minutes or longer, depending on the thickness of the fish. When the fish flakes with a fork, it is done.

Earle Sieveling's New York Cuisine (McGraw Hill, $19.95) is an interesting agglomeration of trendy recipes, not all of which are easy — or quick. However, this one is easy.

SEAFOOD LINGUINE

¼ cup oil, half fine olive oil and half soy oil
12 shrimp, cleaned and deveined (leave on tail shells)
2 teaspoons garlic puree or 1 teaspoon minced fresh garlic
1 tablespoon shallot, chopped
⅓ cup dry white wine
½ pound bay scallops
¾ cup unsalted butter, cut into 8 pieces
1 teaspoon kosher salt
Freshly ground black pepper
Parsley
1 pound linguine, cooked al dente

Both the shrimp and scallops are rinsed and dried so as not to lower the heat with residual water when placed in the skillet.

Put the oil in a skillet, and heat until almost smoking. Add the shrimp and stir for about 30 seconds to pink them. Push the shrimp to one side and add the garlic and shallots. Stir for about 20 seconds, then toss with the shrimp. Add the white wine and toss. Add the scallops, and continue to cook until some of the wine evaporates, approximately 20 seconds.

Add two pieces of butter and stir constantly. As the contents continue to heat and bubble, add each consecutive piece of butter and stir quickly until 7 pieces of butter have been combined into the sauce.

Sprinkle with parsley and serve on linguine.

In One-Dish Meals of Asia (Times Books, $17.95) author Jennifer Brennan describes this hurry-up entree as one she remembers from her childhood (spent all over Asia). The book has plenty of other suggestions that can be hastily prepared.

MU HSU JOU

(Chinese Stir-Fry Eggs with Pork and Vegetables)
3 loin pork chops, trimmed of fat and bone, the meat sliced and resliced into thin strips (as if shredded)
⅛ teaspoon low-salt soy sauce
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon corn oil
3 green onions, cleaned and cut into 1-inch lengths
¼ pound fresh spinach, trimmed and washed and sliced
¼ pound bean sprouts with tails removed, washed and drained
1 teaspoon low-salt soy sauce
1 teaspoon Chinese rice wine or pale dry sherry
2 eggs, beaten

Put the meat, ⅛ teaspoon of soy sauce and cornstarch into a medium-sized mixing bowl. Mix and toss all the ingredients together to coat the meat and dissolve the cornstarch.

Place a wok over high heat and coat the bottom with the oil by lifting and rotating the utensil. Add the green onions and quickly stir-fry them until they are limp and wilted.

Add the pork mixture to the wok and continue to stir and fry until the meat just changes color, about 1 minute.

Drop in the spinach, stir, and toss until the vegetable is just cooked, about 30 seconds. Now add the bean sprouts and continue to stir-fry for 1 minute more.

Season the mixture again with the 1 teaspoon of soy sauce and add the rice wine. Reduce the heat to medium while stirring and make a well in the center of the mixture.

Pour the eggs into the well and stir them with a fork until they just begin to set. Then toss all the ingredients vigorously to mix and continue cooking the eggs. Remove and serve at once.
