Goal Of $20,103

United Fund Campaign Off

By Pat Blair

Launched by a personal contribution from Elsie Hawes and donations from three area businesses, The Aransas County United Fund will kick off its 1980 campaign on Wednesday, October 1.

Goal for this year is $20,103, a nine percent increase over last year's $18,500 — and more money than ever before will stay in Aransas County to help local United Fund agencies, according to Budget Chairman Cam Leonard.

The announcement was made and the 1980 budget officially adopted during a meeting of United Fund officers and directors at noon Thursday, September 25, at Corky's Restaurant. Some 44 percent of the 1980 goal is earmarked for local agencies.

In addition to the contribution from Mrs. Hawes,

United Fund board members were also presented with three checks by Leonard on behalf of Live Oak State Bank.

The checks, presented during the luncheon, represented a corporation contribution from the bank, a donation of $10 on behalf of each of the bank's employees and a check from a local artist from proceeds of an exhibit at the bank.

Also presented during the luncheon was a donation by Sail Printing Company of $117 in services to the United Fund.

A third business contribution came from First National Bank following the luncheon.

Permit Needed To Rebuild Piers In City

Anyone planning to rebuild a pier inside Rockport city limits must get a building permit from City Hall, says City Secretary Herman Johnson.

Johnson said the permit application must include plans that show the width and length of the proposed structure.

He added that this includes all piers which will be inside city limits, including any pier rebuilt in Little Bay.

Couple Set Adrift In Mishap

A Dallas couple was picked up by the Aransas County Emergency Medical Service Wednesday about noon after spending nearly 19 hours adrift in the bay after their 14-foot skiff was destroyed in a collision with a sunken piling.

Mr. and Mrs. John Marcia of Dallas, had put in the water at Goose Island State Park at 3 p.m. Tuesday and apparently hit the piling in Copano Bay near the causeway.

There were three life jackets on the skiff, but the couple managed to recover only one of them and an empty gas tank and rope. They tied themselves to the objects — and to each other — and floated throughout the afternoon and night before being spotted near the Racquet Club.

The sheriff's department was asked by someone walking near the Racquet Club to call an ambulance for a man suffering a heart attack, but when the paramedics arrived they discovered Mr. and Mrs. Marcia and learned of their experience.

The Marcias were taken to Enterprise Medical Center and treated for exhaustion, exposure, dehydration, lacerations, jellyfish stings and bruises before being released.

WELL, I JOINED ALL THOSE MILLIONS AMONG you who watched the telly version of the book "Shogun." Truth to tell, I didn't expect to see it through. About an hour to see, get an idea of how it is handled and that will be enough, I thought. Early reviews which I read prior to the showing weren't too enthusiastic. In every one, there were long laments about too much Japanese being spoken.

Now, after 12 hours of the film, I am not about to give forth with raves. There were times when the play dragged a bit, but all-in-all better than average telly programming, by long odds. The Japanese spoken didn't disturb me in the least, and I don't think that that is because I read the book, all of a year ago. I suppose the only way to dub in for the Japanese would have been for the Japanese to speak pidgeon English, and when you think of it that would have made the film sheer corn.

Ever been in a foreign country and no one around who spoke a word of English? Anyone who has will be appreciative and understanding of the producers' wise decision to use so much of the foreign language. The viewer was able to place himself in a fair degree in the position of Blackthorne.

The failing point of the film was in not being able to contrast the difference between European and Japanese philosophies and concepts in general. In the book, Blackthorne in his musings does this very well, and while other readers may disagree with me, I feel obliged to say that the Japanese came out the better, certainly on an equal footing.

In that assessment I, of course, must point out that the time was the 16th century. Blackthorne and his men were horrified and disgusted with the manner in which the Asiatics, seemingly so casually, lopped off heads, also with methods of torture.

I must suppose that it seemed natural to them not to compare Japanese methods with hanging, beheading (British style), and the rack and other means of torture on the other side of the world. Even so, it is evident that they were well aware of the Portuguese and Spanish adeptness at novel means of torture.

I MUST NOT ALLOW MYSELF TO DEVOTE THIS entire column to the tube, but I feel obliged to comment on three segments of a Dick Cavett show last week in which Gordon Liddy was interviewed.

Like most of the public, I've been inclined to put Liddy down as something of a nut, at best a super sort of patriot — in his own way. Listening to the interview I changed my mind. Liddy is forthright, intelligent, articulate and possessed of no small amount of humor.

On Jimmy Carter (and quoting from memory without presuming to use Liddy's exact words): "If the Born-again Carter is really getting his orders from on high, you'll have to assume that Jesus tells him one thing on Monday and the opposite on Tuesday."

THE CITY OF BALTIMORE, MARYLAND, recently marked the date of the 100th birthday of H.L. Mencken. The event was featured one evening on the CBS NEWS AND, AS AN OLD Mencken fan, I lapped it up.

However, the report erred on two important counts. In the 1930s when the Sage's popularity began to wane because he was not able to keep abreast of changing times, he began work on his "American language." Not true, The "Language" was first published in 1919, to the anguish of purists. The "Supplements" were however, published in the 30s and 40s.

Next Mencken was pronounced to have been an atheist. Nothing new about that. Much to his amusement the charge was made during his lifetime. Still, it was untrue. He was an agnostic, a vast difference to intelligent and educated people, even though no difference could be seen by those of lesser degree — "boobus Americanus," they were dubbed by the Sage of Baltimore.

NEXT TIME YOU SEE YOUR CONGRESSMAN, BE sure to congratulate him on the fact that members are rejecting a $5,520 pay hike, holding salaries at $60,663. But don't embarrass him by noting that the representatives added an additional $7,000 on to each of their expense accounts.

Ah, the cute little games one learns to play on the banks of the Potomac! I'd sort of like to hear some comments on this from the Vice-Presidential candidates. Remember? I've written off Jimmy, Ronnie and John.

OH YES, I DID WATCH THE PRESIDENTIAL debates. Sort of civic duty or whatever you may choose to call it. But debates? What debates? Straight, direct answers were not forthcoming from either candidate. Those of you who are wiser, better informed since listening and watching have better heads on your shoulders than I.

Even so, I'm inclined to say that in the last minutes of the performance Anderson gained an edge on Reagan. But no matter.

STILL WITH THE BOOB TUBE. SUNDAY EVENING I tuned in for "60 Minutes." A football game underway. At 6:02 it was announced that 1:43 was left on the clock. At 6:14 the game was over. Twelve minutes to run through 1:43 minutes of action. I shall not comment. It would be un-American — treason!

NOW THERE ARE THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE IN South Texas who are sailing fans and deeply interested in the America's Cup. Isn't our international prestige on the line? Yet I neither ask nor expect each race to be shown on the tube in its entirety.

I think it was sports commentator Bob Tucker who once so aptly said that watching a sailboat race is sort of like watching the grass grow. And football, I might add.

Meanwhile, I must confess to some disappointment at the skimpy coverage given the races in area daily newspapers. —cmhenkeljr.

Constitutional Amendments

AMENDMENT NO. 5
House Joint Resolution 86, proposing a constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to grant budget execution powers to the governor, subject to approval by a budget execution committee.

The proposed amendment would empower the legislature to authorize or direct the governor to exercise fiscal control over the expenditure of appropriated state funds (excluding constitutionally dedicated funds). This power, commonly called "budget execution authority," would exist only to the extent granted by law and would be subject to procedures, conditions, and limitations provided by law. Further, any action of the governor would be subject to approval of a budget execution committee composed of the governor, the lieutenant governor, the speaker of the house, and the chairmen and vice-chairmen of the house appropriations committee and of the senate finance committee.

BACKGROUND
Under the constitution and the statutes of Texas, the governor presently has various powers and duties with respect to the preparation, enactment, and execution of the state budget. Article IV, Section 9, of the constitution requires him to account to the legislature for all public funds received and paid out by him, and requires him at the beginning of each regular session to present "estimates of the amount of money required to be raised by taxation for all purposes."

Under Article IV, Section 24, all officers in the executive department are required to report semi-annually to the governor with respect to all funds received and disbursed by them; the governor is empowered to require an accounting from them at any time; and the governor is authorized to inspect their books and accounts. Much more important, however, is the veto power (Article IV, Section 14). He can veto the entire appropriations bill or any one or more items of appropriation within it. However, he cannot reduce an appropriation for a particular purpose; nor, according to rulings of the courts and of the attorney general, may he veto provisions (riders) that place qualifications, limitations, or conditions on the expenditure of appropriated funds. It has also been ruled that the legislature may not grant the governor prior-approval power over particular expenditures from appropriated funds.

By statute (Article 689a-1 et seq., Vernon's Texas Civil Statutes), the governor is "the chief budget officer of the State." He is responsible for compilation and submission of a proposed state budget to the legislature every two years. Customarily, however, the legislature works from a budget recommended by one of its own agencies, the Legislature Budget Board.

These powers under the current constitution and laws, while substantial, fall far short of the power of control over spending of appropriated state funds. This power, if granted, might include:

—Power to order that all or part of the funds appropriated to an agency for one purpose be spent for another authorized purpose;

—Power to order an agency to limit total expenditures to a specified amount or to limit expenditures for one or more specific programs;

—Power to order that all or part of the funds appropriated for a particular purpose be expended for that purpose; and —Power to take funds appropriated to one agency and transfer them to another agency.

Under the proposed constitutional amendment, the legislature could grant some or all of the above powers to the governor. Any specific exercise of these powers would be subject to approval of the budget execution committee.

It is noted that budget execution authority was recommended by the Constitutional Revision Commission in 1973, by the legislature in its proposed constitutional revision in 1975, and by the Joint Advisory Committee on Government Operations (the Hobby Commission) in 1977.

ARGUMENTS

FOR:

1. With no central direction or control, the State of Texas spends over $10 billion a year of the taxpayers' money. The time has come to put someone in charge, and this amendment provides a good way to do so.

2. The amendment would be a long-range solution to the spiraling cost of state government by enabling the governor to cut unnecessary spending and to bring increased efficiency and effectiveness to programs for which money is needed.

3. Although appropriation of funds is a legislative function, budget execution is properly an executive function that should be in the hands of the chief executive, who is elected by the people, rather than largely in the hands of numerous appointees who spend billions of dollars a year without having to answer to the people.

4. As chief executive, the governor has a unique vantage point from which to study and improve the cost-effectiveness of government operations. This perspective should be fully utilized to the advantage of the taxpayers of the state.

5. Without meaningful budget execution powers, the chief executive is deprived of one of the essential tools of executive leadership — control of state spending.

AGAINST:

1. Under our present system, which has been in effect for more than 100 years, state spending has been kept under reasonable control while our citizens' tax burden has continued to be among the lowest in the country. Additional controls on spending are much less needed in Texas than in most other states.

2. With the item veto, the governor already has an enormous amount of power over state spending. Under the proposed amendment, he and the budget execution committee would have a "continuing veto."

3. Both the legislature and the governor already have — and use — adequate means for checking on how state agencies spend their money and for calling to account those who are responsible for executing agency budgets.

4. Under the amendments, every attempt of the governor to exercise fiscal control will be subject to approval of a committee composed of the very legislative leadership that steered passage of the appropriations bill. This committee is likely to thwart any substantial tampering with its own work.

1980 Political Platforms: A Comparison

A political party platform is the official statement, written by a committee of party leaders and approved by the delegates to its convention, of the party's principles and the policies it will follow if elected.

This chart provides you with a comparison of where the Republicans and the Democrats stand on some but not all key issues. All statements are direct quotations from the actual party platforms.

Republican

The intent of the Founders...was that the central government should do for people only those things which they cannot do for themselves. Government must ever be the servant of the nation, not its master...

Democratic

The Democratic Party has long stood for an active, responsive, vigorous government.

Family

The family is the foundation of our social order. It is the school of democracy. Its daily lessons — cooperation, tolerance, mutual concern, responsibility, industry — are fundamental to the order and progress of our Republic. For the first time in our history, there is real concern that the family may not survive.

Government may be strong enough to destroy families, but it can never replace them.

We protest the Supreme Court's intrusion into the family structure through its denial of the parent's obligation and right to guide their minor children.

In view of the continuing efforts of the present Administration to define and influence the family through such federally funded conferences as the White House Conference on Families, we express our support for legislation protecting and defending the traditional American family against the ongoing erosion of its base in our society.

The Democratic Party supports efforts to make federal programs more sensitive to the needs of the family, in all its diverse forms.

...the American family structure has changed radically in recent years...

It is not only morally right, but far less expensive, for government to assist children in growing up whole, strong and able.. The Democratic Party shall seek vigorously to enact an adequately funded, comprehensive, quality child-care program based upon a national commitment...

Right-To-Life [Abortion]

We affirm our support of a constitutional amendment to restore protection of the right to life for unborn children. We also support the Congressional efforts to restrict the use of taxpayers' dollars for abortion.

The Democratic party supports the 1973 Supreme Court decision on abortion rights as the law of the land and opposes any constitutional amendment to restrict or overturn that decision.

Equal Rights

No individual should be victimized by unfair discrimination because of race, sex, advanced age, physical handicap, difference of national origin or religion, or economic circumstance.

All groups must be protected from discrimination based on race, color, religion, national origin, language, age, sex or sexual orientation.

Women's Rights and E.R.A.

We reaffirm our Party's historic commitment to equal rights and equality for women. We support equal rights and equal opportunities for women, without taking away traditional rights of women such as exemption from the military draft...Ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment is now in the hands of state legislatures...without federal interference or pressure.

A Democratic Congress...first enacted E.R.A. in Congress and later extended the deadline for ratification. Now the Democratic Party must ensure that E.R.A. at last becomes the 27th Amendment to the Constitution. We oppose efforts to rescind E.R.A. in states which have already ratified the amendment, and we shall insist that past rescissions are invalid.

The Democratic party shall withhold financial support and technical campaign assistance from candidates who do not support the E.R.A.

Live Oak Peninsula Philosopher

Editor's note: The Live Oak Peninsula Philosopher on his grassburr ranch turns slightly serious this week.

Dear editor:

I heard a man say the other day he didn't mind paying taxes. What he objected to was what happens to the money after the government gets hold of it.

This led me to think up a vote-getting plank for a Presidential candidate, if it's not too late and any of the three has room for it.

As everybody knows, it's far too dangerous for the United States to depend on foreign oil. Those sheiks could slowly strangle us and get rich doing it.

The road to escape from this intolerable situation in the long run is not through conservation, not through finding more oil over here, not through turning coal into gas. Coal is going to play out eventually the same as oil. In the short run, these are important and necessary, but only stop-gaps. After all, our great grandchildren will want to drive cars and have wrecks the same as we and they can't when all the oil and coal are used up.

Unless...unless we switch to alcohol, which burns like gasoline and can be produced endlessly if all the farmers don't go broke before high-priced oil plays out. It's no trouble to build a car or tractor that runs on alcohol and it's no trouble to make alcohol, if we had the capital to build the plants.

Here's my idea for some candidate's platform plank. He could squeeze it in there somewhere between a forthright stand for honesty and the need to whip inflation and balance an unbalanceable budget and make the U.S. great once again in the eyes of Chad and Outer Mongolia.

The plank should propose a 10-cent-a-gallon tax on gasoline. Don't shudder. Hear me out. The money should go into a fund absolutely untouchable for any purpose other than building alcohol manufacturing plants. It couldn't be used to pay on the national debt, or build a new office building for Congress, or reduce the Social Security tax in an election year, or build new highways, or patch the old ones, or bail out mis-managed railroads and car companies, or protect endangered minnows.

In a couple of years or so the fund would be big enough to start lending money to people interested in and capable of erecting massive alcohol plants. We've already got the land and the farmers capable of producing the crops to produce the alcohol. Once the oil companies found out we mean business they might even convert some of their refineries to alcohol, as a hedge against a drop in their department store business.

Wouldn't it be better having a bunch of farmers getting together to decide the price of fuel instead of a bunch of sheiks over in the Mid-East?

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Thanks to you
it works...

I wanted to understand how they each felt about our armed services equipment, and which one of them felt we should be better armed. I also wanted to know how they felt about the draft. More people are living long enough to retire.

Those who do are finding out that retirement can be the most exhilarating or depressing of times. Which it is often depends on pre-retirement planning, whether or not it was done, and how well it was done.

Jo Ann Luckie, an instructor and consultant in pre-retirement planning, was asked when such planning should begin. In her opinion, mid-life is a good time, about 40 or 45 years old.

But if you really go all the way, the best time might be when you are beginning your career. Then, all your options are open.

The pitfalls of retirement are usually money, health and communication. Some people retire with the belief they can live on Social Security.

If their health has been marginal, retirement is about the time of life when medical problems intensify.

If husbands and wives have failed to establish good lines of communication, the proximity in which they live, both at home, every day, makes the discrepancy more damaging.

Pre-retirement planning is being accepted as a routine element of life by many individuals who enroll in classes, workshops and seminars to get the benefit of studies which have been made and to share ideas.

Companies and agencies are more frequently making pre-retirement planning a benefit for employees. The company arranges for consultants to put on workshops periodically for employees and their husbands and wives.

Ms. Luckie says that those attending workshops will range in age from 30 to 70. The content of the course varies with the age and interests of those enrolled.

One essential element is setting of life goals. What do you want to have accomplished by the time you are 65 or 70? What do you want to be doing? Where do you want to do it?

Obviously, the earlier those goals are set, the better chance you have to reach them.

One woman of 31 enrolled in a pre-retirement class, explaining that her parents had such tragic experiences in retirement that she was going to avoid their mistakes.

As she looked at life goals for the first time, she was surprised to find that she could not arrive at a point where she wanted to be the way she was going. So she changed careers and moved to another part of the country to reorient her life.

In another class, Ms. Luckie says, a man and his wife were startled to learn that their dreams of retirement, which they had never discussed, were diametrically opposite.

His dream was to live on a pig farm and hers was to take advantage of what a city has to offer in its museums, libraries and concerts. Finding out in time, they were able to acquire a farm on the outskirts of a city, so that neither one totally capitulated.

Financial planning requires a realistic analysis of how much money it is going to take to pay for the lifestyle you are contemplating. You may have such options as spending now or saving now and spending later or of preparing yourself for a second career and part-time work to supplement pensions.

One way that more people are trying to assure a longer span of good health is by taking part in a sport or activity that is not limited to the most vigorous. Swimming, dancing and yoga are all popular.

There is every indication that exercise improves mental as well as physical health.

Satisfactory retirement is something you have to work at.

Sheriff's Report

William Johnson III reported theft of his pickup truck from the parking lot of Marion Packing Company in Fulton Monday night, September 22.

Johnson reported the theft about 10:15 p.m. Monday. He told investigating officers he left the vehicle unlocked and the keys in the ignition and the truck had a full tank of gas.

Gulf Coast Cycles was burglarized Sunday night, September 21.

David Davis, owner of the building, told sheriff's officials that he saw someone inside the shop, located on Highway 35 South by Palm Harbor, about 11:36 p.m. but the person got away.

Nothing was reported taken and the burglary is under investigation.

Andy Huffmeyer of 1909 Shore Lane reported an incident of assault with a deadly weapon on Monday, September 13.

Huffmeyer said he was duck hunting on a lake that branches off from Port Bay when he was fired upon with a high powered rifle.

A drill bit valued at $785 was taken from a truck belonging to Rick Wilson sometime between 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. Wednesday, September 10.

Wilson was delivering the bit to the owners, Reed Rock Bit Company of Corpus Christi, and said he stopped at the Baroid Docks in Cove Harbor for an hour while he went out on a boat for a crew change.

When he returned, the bit was missing.

SOIL PREPARATION AND FERTILIZATION

If you made a mistake by not properly preparing your garden soil last spring, now is the time to correct it. This should be done before establishing the fall garden, because soil problems encountered during the spring growing season can be expected in the fall also.

Adding liberal amounts of organic matter to all types of garden soils is a highly recommended practice. Hay, compost, rotted grass clippings, or leaves applied to the garden surface two to three inches deep and tilled or worked into the soil greatly improves sands or clays.

Heavy clay soils, which are sticky when wet and hard as a brick when dry, are much easier to cultivate if a washed, coarse sand is added.

Use a washer-type sand to insure calcium carbonate removal, which makes alkaline soils even more alkaline. Add three inches of sand to the garden surface if the soil is to be tilled to a 10-inch depth.

Gypsum (Calcium Sulfate) added to a "sticky" soil makes it more workable. Gypsum is a neutral product which does not increase or decrease the soil's alkalinity. Not only is it a good soil conditioner but it also furnishes certain amounts of calcium, which may prevent such minor element disorders as blossom-end rot of tomatoes and cabbage leaf tip burn.

In many areas acid soils are common and often can be a problem. Add lime to these soils to bring the soil pH up to a satisfactory range.

Generally, about 1/2 to one pound of lime per 100 square feet of garden area worked into the soil along with fertilizer will correct most acidity problems. Use the lower rate if your soil is sandy.

Wood ashes also are alkaline and can be used in small amounts to raise the soil pH.

Never add lime or wood ashes to alkaline soils. Add five pounds of sulfur per 100 square feet annually to provide a temporary pH reduction. Use iron sulfate or a chelated iron product in the soil to prevent plant yellowing (iron chlorosis) caused by lack of iron.

Also add fertilizer for the fall crop because spring fertilization has washed out of the soil or been used for plant growth. Use a balanced fertilizer such as 10-10-5, 15-10-10 or 16-20-0 at a rate of two pounds per 100 square feet. If manures are used, 20 to 50 pounds per 100 square feet should be adequate. Incorporate fresh manure into the soil several weeks before planting.

Thoroughly pulverize soils at least 10 inches deep. Mix the above ingredients into the garden area and add nematicide if necessary. A properly prepared soil insures a successful fall flower and vegetable garden rather than a disappointing failure.

Additional amounts of fertilizer are needed later in the season to insure optimum plant growth and production. Add 1 1/2 ounces (three tablespoons) of ammonium sulfate per 10 feet of row to cucumbers, cantaloupes, eggplants, okra, peas and beans, peppers, squash and tomatoes after the first fruits are set, after the first harvest and every three to four weeks thereafter.

Broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, collards, kale, lettuce, mustard, spinach and turnip greens require 1 1/2 to two ounces (four tablespoons) of ammonium sulfate per 10 feet of row two weeks after transplanting or four weeks after sowing seed.

Flowering annuals require two ounces (four tablespoons) of ammonium sulfate every four to eight weeks for the life of the plants. Sandy soils need more frequent fertilization than heavy clay soil.

Crops such as beets, carrots, potatoes, radishes, turnips and watermelons usually do not need additional fertilization. Excessive amounts of nitrogen reduce yields or lower quality or both.

The County Extension Agent-Agriculture will be in the County Extension Marine Agent's office in Rockport on Thursday, September 18 from 1 to 5 p.m.

Blair's Corner

By Pat Blair

"A tidal wave of great magnitude swept into Rockport from the Gulf of Mexico Sunday and completely inundated the entire city."

That was how the account started of the storm people still talk about — even though it's been 61 years (almost to the day)

The date was September 15, 1919, and there are old-timers around who still recall — vividly — the storm and its aftermath.

According to Rockport native Simon Lee Sorenson there was seven and a half feet of water on Austin Street. It was "a hurricane and tidal wave all at the same time," Sorenson once commented.

Sorenson's grandfather had three warehouses and a pier before the storm. The hurricane took it all.

Bee and Mabel Bracht, descendants of another pioneer family in the area, recalled their family's store — located in downtown Rockport — was washed away. Some of the merchandise was found in Fulton.

"The water was accompanied by wind which reached an estimated 100 miles an hour," according to the account published in the Rockport Pilot printed immediately after the storm. Tom W. Lillie was editor in those days, and he took the paper to San Antonio to be printed.

In the best newspaper tradition, Lillie had his Pilot out and available five days after the catastrophe. All that remained of the Pilot office, he reported, was a press and gasoline engine.

His account continued, "The barometer stood at 29.45 at 11 o'clock Sunday morning when the first wind swept over the city. At this hour, the tide was higher than ever before. Eight bodies have been found in the wreckage."

Nor were those all the casualties. Bodies were said to "line the shore" in front of Rockport and Fulton. Animals too died: 2,000 head of herefords from the Lucas Ranch on St. Joseph's Island were swept away and drowned.

Eleven persons, braver — or more foolhardy — than some other perhaps, spent the day and night in Rockport's LaPlaya Hotel. Damage totalled an estimated $30,000 to that building — and it was by no means the worst.

"Every once in a while (during the storm)," the Pilot reported, "the (hotel) would shudder and another room or two would slip into the water."

At the height of the storm, water was dashing against the hotel's third-floor windows — and against the third floor windows of First National Bank, located on Austin Street in those days.

The bank and the real estate building located behind it were "practically demolished" . . . Heldenfels Shipyard lay in ruins . . . Hooper Brothers Store collapsed . . . the list went on and on.

On Monday, September 16, while area residents were still reeling from the storm, a vigilance committee was appointed: guards with loaded shotguns patrolled the area. All food-stuffs were commandeered, no drugs were available except a few in the medicine case of a local doctor.

One of the heroes of the day was D.M. Pictou who went to Gregory and Travis McDavid, who is not yet three years old, may not know much about art, but he knows what he likes — and he obviously liked this bronze by Laredo artist Armando Hinojosa. The scene was at Rockport's Live Oak State Bank Sunday afternoon during the informal reception that launched a two-week showing of the artist's works. Some 60 people attended the reception to meet the artist and view his works — original watercolors, prints and some bronze sculpture like this piece that attracted Travis' attention. By Monday, approximately half of the watercolors and prints in the exhibit had already been sold. Armando's works will be on show to the public during banking hours at Live Oak on Mondays through Fridays through October 2.

Brown Charges

Schwartz Would Make 'Ghost Town'

"Galveston Island may well become a ghost town if Babe Schwartz has his way," charged Buster Brown here Wednesday. In an address to a meeting of local supporters held at noon, Buster Brown, who is challenging Schwartz for the Senate Seat he has held 20 years, stated that the incumbent has adopted a policy that is disastrous to The Island's future. "On June 12 of this year, my opponent went to Washington D.C. and testified in support of SB 2686, a bill which includes elimination of flood insurance for barrier islands like Galveston Island," said

Brown. Schwartz told The Committee " . . . You ain't suppose to live on no island." Schwartz explained that he lives on an island only because he was born there. "Not because people have any business building houses on unstable spits of sand."

Brown concluded by saying, "Denial of floor insurance would mean an end to construction on the island period. And that directly affects banks, savings and loans, builders, realtors, furniture stores, and anyone else who earns a living here. You take away this activity and the economy of the Island would be in serious trouble." Brown, a conservative former schoolteacher and Brazoria County prosecutor, is challenging liberal Democratic Senator A.R. Schwartz for the District 1 State Senate Seat.

Taxes, Misunderstanding Problems

"It's definitely a mess," comments Richard Hughes. "It's something we have to face as property owners," says Byron (Barney) Murray. "It's the tax situation in Goose Island Lake Estates where a series of problems threaten to culminate in very high taxes for property owners there this year. And in the meantime, a misunderstanding has some residents of Lamar and Holiday Beach upset with the Aransas County Water District No. 1 which provides water service to the Estates."

Goose Island Lake Estates

was developed by Joe Conlan, back in 1973-74. The Water District was formed in 1973 "because," says Mrs. Cook, a resident of the Estates, "the county said they couldn't serve this area." The water district is set up to serve only Goose Island Lake Estates. It has no power to annex any other area and no intention of trying to annex or serve any other area, says Murray. Murray is a member of the district board of directors — a new board that inherited the problem when it stepped in about four months ago.

The present problem, he says, stems from the fact that Conlan sold the development to another company, the South Coastal Development Corporation. The Corporation failed to pay its taxes to the water district in 1978 and 1979 and now owes some $80,000 in outstanding taxes to the district. To make up for those missing taxes, Murray continued, the water district had to borrow some $110,000 which now must be paid back . . .

And in the meantime, South Coastal Development Corporation has filed for bankruptcy and is scheduled to appear in court — in Houston, Murray said — on September 30. The water district is in the process of getting an attorney to represent it at the bankruptcy hearings and so far has not set the new tax rates. The district is going to try to collect the back taxes from the developer; if it can't, says Murray, the money will have to come from property owners.

problem: some residents in Lamar and Holiday Beach have confused the water district with the Aransas County Conservation and Reclamation District, Murray said. Some residents in the area thus believe it is the Water District No. 1 that is trying to extend sanitary sewer service to other parts of the county, Murray continued. He emphasized that these are two different boards, that the Reclamation District is the one with the sanitary sewer service plan and that the water board that serves Goose Island Lake Estates "has no intentions of taking in any more land."

Trip To Washington Helped

Bill To Aid Shrimpers Gets House Okay

A trip to Washington last spring by a group of area shrimpers is paying off as the House earlier this week passed a bill that will aid Texas Gulf shrimpers through loan money and curtailment of foreign fishing in American waters. The American Fisheries Promotion Act passed the U.S. House of Representatives by a vote of 283-91, according to an aide to Rep. Joe Wyatt of Bloomington.

Last spring, a delegation of shrimpers from the Coastal Bend area, including Johnny Jackson and Al Silchenstedt from Rockport, and Sydney Herndon of Aransas Pass appeared before the Congressional Fisheries, Wildlife Conservation and the Environment Subcommittee to express their support of the bill.

The Texas delegation told subcommittee members that rising fuel prices and competition from foreign fishermen — many operating on subsidized fuels — were jeopardizing the U.S. fishing industry.

The industry has been especially troubled by competition from Mexico where subsidized fuel for boats costs 17 cents per gallon, compared to almost $1 per gallon paid by U.S. fishermen.

In addition, shrimp catches along the Texas coast have declined as a result of Mexico's phasing out of foreign fishing within the 200-mile limit off its shores — and of bad weather, according to a House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee report.

At midyear, the total Texas coast catch was off two million pounds from last year. In the Aransas Pass-Rockport-Fulton port system, total landings for the first seven months —

January through July — totaled just under 4.17 million pounds, a drop of not quite one million pounds from last year's 5.11 million.

The proposed American Fisheries Promotion Act, if adopted by the Senate, will provide low-interest loans to fishermen nearing default and will phase out foreign fishing from U.S. waters for 200 miles from shore.

The bill passed in similar form in the U.S. Senate in December, 1979. If it is not accepted by the Senate this time around it will go into a conference committee.

Dear Editor, I was grocery shopping in HEB today when I inadvertently layed down or dropped my wallet at the counter. I did not miss it until I arrived home, put away the groceries and then went to check on that popular bingo card!

I immediately returned to the store and at the manager's booth my wallet had been turned in by a store customer.

How very grateful I am to this honest and upright person, and I do not even know her name! Everything was intact and not a penny missing.

This is another fine plus for our city of Rockport. Sincerely,

Pet Talks

By Dr. Hap Lutz
Dr. Lutz is a graduate of Baltimore City College and Texas A&M University. He specializes in small and exotic animal practice. He was an instructor of small animal diseases and surgery in the Veterinary School at Texas A&M and was in private practice in Waco for 25 years.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Dear Dr. Lutz: I have a registered Siamese cat and a mixed border collie dog. I have noticed my dog will not eat cat food I buy for the cat.

Is it permissible and advisable to feed just dog food to both my dog and cat as they seem to both eat it well?—James Dear James,

Your question is a very timely one. Recent research has proven that many cats receiving a continuous diet of dog food developed retinal degeneration or blindness.

This research has just been published by Dr. Gus Aguirre, veterinary ophthalmologist at the University of Pennsylvania. Cats require higher levels of amino acid taurine than is available in dry and canned dog foods.

Seafood, milk and meat are good sources of this amino acid.

The lesion in the retina of the eye is progressive in nature. If taurine deficiency is not corrected, blindness is likely to result. If the diet is corrected, the lesion remains static.

This disease emphasizes the need to place animals on diets specifically formulated to meet their requirements. I certainly do not recommend dog food products for cats, or vice versa.

If necessary, feed your cat in one room and the dog in another so that they do not eat each other's food.

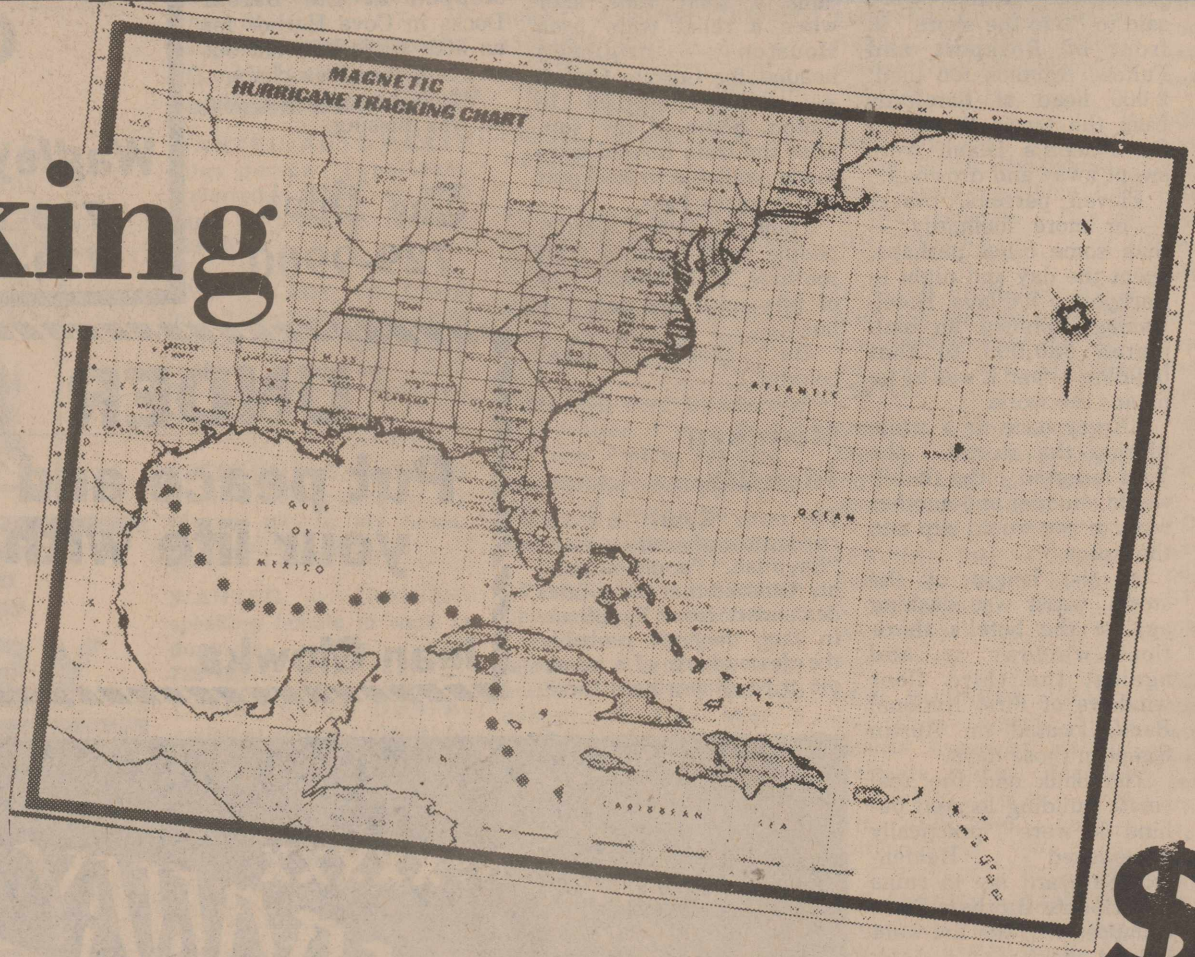

NEWS Of Education

A happier, more independent life can begin with getting a good job—particularly for disabled young people. Fortunately, laws now provide for education that offers proper job preparation.

The laws guarantee disabled students in the public schools the right to an opportunity to obtain vocational education that will permit them to obtain employment and lead a more fulfilling work life after graduation.

According to the Education for All the Handicapped Children Act, an individualized education program must be provided for all handicapped students who need special education services at the secondary level.

Christmas, Allen Topics At ACMSI Luncheon

Hurricane Allen and the upcoming Christmas Bazaar were among the major topics at a meeting of the Women's Committee of Aransas County Medical Services Inc. on Friday, September 19.

The meeting got underway at 11 a.m. at the Sandollar restaurant.

"Allen" came under discussion during the talk on "Hurricane Awareness" presented by Jeff Messenger, Aransas County Marine Extension Agent.

Showing slides to illustrate his points, Messenger told those at the meeting that Allen did not live up to expectations as "one of the worst storms ever to hit the Texas coast" because of a freak occurrence.

Messenger said a typhoon in the Pacific, named Howard, made landfall in California. The typhoon was not strong enough to cause severe destruction but it was strong enough, Messenger said, to cross four states and meet Allen head-on just before Allen made landfall.

Much of Messenger's talk dealt with statistics on property damage, the severity with which storms can hit this area and a recommendation that, when a hurricane threatens, the person should listen to disaster officials.

Other tips he offered included having a full tank of gas in the car and the car in good running condition and "leave as soon as possible."

Before leaving, he added, fill the bathtub with water and pull the main breaker switches. The house that burned on Water Street, he said, caught fire because it had been left with the breaker switches on so there was still current into the structure.

Some 87 members and guests — including seven new members — attended the luncheon Friday. Several tables were set up displaying items that have been — or will be — made for the organization's Christmas Bazaar in November.

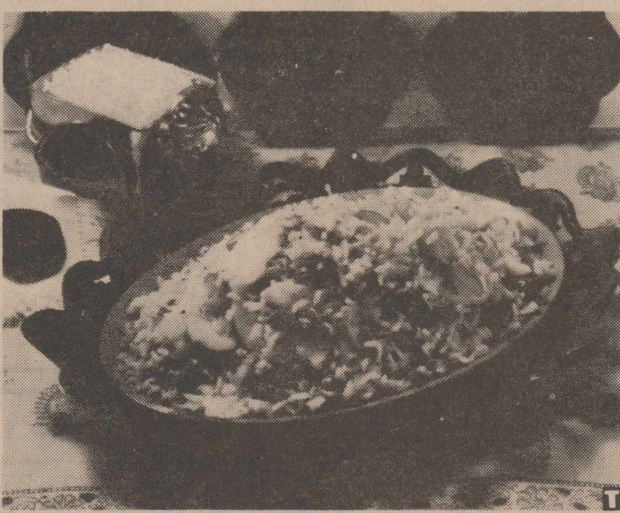

Members were told that volunteers are needed to help make craft items for the Bazaar. Also needed are items for the "White Elephant" booth at the Bazaar. Volunteers are needed to help out with the shrimp booth during this year's Seafair, October 11 and 12.

The group learned the ACMSI is considering a machine called "the thumper" which can be slipped under a person's back and automatically keeps the victim's heart beating during mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

During the months of July and August, workshop sales raised $1632 and memorial contributions amounted to $911.50. Money raised by the various Women's Committee projects helps maintain the county's two ambulances.

* INFLATION-FIGHTING FOOD IDEAS *

CALCUTTA RICE — Easy, Thrifty, Tasty

Rice is the staple food for about half of the world's population. How does it appeal to so many, of differing backgrounds, in varying climates? Probably because it adapts to so many flavors and textures. Calcutta Rice is a perfect example. Rice mingled with the hot curry flavor so typical of India and at the same time mixes well with the crisp texture of celery, and the sweet crunch of apple slices. It's easy to make, not expensive, and will dress up any entree with which it is served.

CALCUTTA RICE

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 to 2 teaspoons curry powder
1 teaspoon seasoned pepper
1 cup sliced celery
2 medium apples, peeled, cored, and sliced
1/4 cup sliced almonds
3 cups cooked rice

Melt butter; stir in curry powder and pepper. Add celery, apples, and almonds; saute until tender crisp. Stir in rice and heat thoroughly. Makes 6 servings. Good with leg of lamb, Bombay Duck, or Tandoori Chicken.

Get "Knee Deep" In Carpet Care

COLLEGE STATION — Get "knee deep" in carpet care, a home economist urges homeowners.

Many savings are the reward of learning how to clean your own carpet — significantly longer carpet life and aesthetic "face-saving" too, says Jane Berry, a housing and home furnishings specialist.

Dr. Berry is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Carpet needs shampooing, she stresses.

Shampoo rugs every year or two to get rid of heavy dirt and grime.

Vacuum or sweep the rug, of course, before shampooing.

Furniture should pose no problem, as you can do half the rug one day and half the next.

TEST FIRST

Before shampooing, though, check to see if the rug fades. Simply "test" a spot using the shampoo. Use clear, warm water to rinse the suds by rubbing the spot with a clean damp sponge.

Be sure the test spot is a place usually not seen — such as a spot under a piece of furniture or in a closet.

Rinse the sponge and rub the patch again. Do this several times to make sure all dirt and detergent are out — but don't use too much water.

Let the spot dry. If the color looks the same, but cleaner, after it's dry, go ahead and shampoo the rest of the rug.

Any fiber with fast color should withstand shampooing.

Some twists and weaves are more difficult to shampoo since rubbing and agitation of the pile may affect appearance, and, again, that's the reason for testing a spot: to answer all of those kinds of questions.

ITEMS YOU'LL NEED

For the job you'll need the vacuum cleaner, a special rug shampoo or a light-duty synthetic detergent and a mixing bowl.

For the mechanical method, you'll need a shampoo applicator or an electric polisher-scrubber with a rug-cleaning accessory.

For the hand method, you'll need a soft brush, spatula, sponges and cloths.

HOW TO DO THE JOB

Thoroughly vacuum the rug.

Either use the special rug shampoo or whip one-fourth cup light-duty detergent with one pint warm water until a stiff foam is formed.

Apply the foam with the shampoo applicator or the polisher-scrubber.

Be sure to follow the manufacturer's directions for use of equipment.

If you don't have devices, apply the foam with a soft brush to a small area at a time. Remove soiled lather with a spatula and rinse with a clean wet cloth.

Repeat this using overlapping circles.

Use an electric fan or reverse warm air blast from the vacuum cleaner to speed the drying. If the carpet is loosely laid, drying time can be lessened by directing the air underneath the carpet.

When the rug is thoroughly dry, vacuum to remove any residue and suspended soil.

Put brown paper down if you must walk on the rug before it dries.

Jottings By Johnnie

By Johnnie Littleton

Last week my husband asked me what I wrote about in my first column to introduce myself to Rockport folk. I said "Oh, just general things about you and me and the exciting life we lead. About our glamorous parties, exciting weekends and charming children."

I got an icy look. Then I said, "You know, they don't know you over there and since you make pretty good copy, I just think I'll introduce you." My only warning was that it was the truth.

Truth number one is that he has the most total lack of fondness of travel of any person I know. As I write this he is looking for someone who might be driving to Corpus Christi this week and will pick up a part for my dryer for us.

This made me think of an adventure we had about 15 years ago. The aunt I spoke of last week had invited every family member she could think of over here for the weekend. That meant food, laughter and talk until late into the night. My husband doesn't like talking late into the night. He rarely laughs after 8:30 p.m.

Anyway, the kids, my mother and I came over on a Friday. It rained so hard we had to pull into a service station for about three minutes before we could head on to Fulton. Then we pulled out into gorgeous sunshine and went our way.

By Saturday afternoon auntie was insistent that I call hubby to come over at least for supper with everyone. I knew he wouldn't, but she prevailed.

When I extended her cordial invitation, he belatedly, "Do you expect me to travel anywhere in this weather? Anywhere? Have you looked outside? It's raining." I told him it was not raining here, the road was good, it wasn't far and he would soon drive out of the shower. He replied, "There's no way I am getting on a dangerous highway in a rain. For heaven's sake, woman, have you gone nuts? It's r-a-i-n-i-n-g."

"Okay," I said, "stay and eat peanut butter. See you tomorrow."

He stayed here and we stayed here and it would all have been forgotten and forgiven, but...

It was November, a scant three months later, and the weather was such as we have not seen in south Texas for several years. It was very cold and raining hard. In fact, it was sleeting and the wind was howling. The television and radio announcers kept repeating that driving conditions were extremely hazardous.

After work, hubby came home, happy and grinning. He started undressing, then dressing again, donning layer after layer of clothing. Beginning with long johns, then thermal underwear, then heavy pants, shirt, two pair of socks, jacket, gloves, cap (with ear flaps) and ending with insulated boots.

Naturally I watched in fascination and finally asked "Where are you going?" He answered, looking at me as if my senses had taken their leave, "Hunting, of course. First day of the season and those big buck are just waiting for us in that thicket."

I pleaded with him, "Do you have to go tonight? Look at the weather. It's more than miserable, it's downright dangerous and you have me and three kids to think about. The newscasts are even urging people to stay off the icy highways."

He answered, "Aw, it's just a little rain and besides we only have to drive to Freer."

My reaction, after I found a sturdy chair was "If I hadn't watched you dress this way, get your gear, call Buddy, then grab your gun, I would think you were teasing me. ('Putting me on') hadn't been invented yet."

"YOU WOULDN'T DRIVE TO ROCKPORT IN A SUMMER RAIN TO VISIT MY FAMILY. BUT HERE YOU GO TO FREER IN THIS WEATHER, WITH BUDDY, TO SLEEP IN A STINKING BUNKHOUSE AND WAIT IN A TREE FOR A DEER. I REFUSE TO BELIEVE YOU ARE DOING THIS AND I'LL NEVER LET YOU FORGET IT."

And I haven't. And I won't. Besides he and I both can laugh about it now. If not, I couldn't tell it.

FOOD FACTS & FANCIES

The largest single dish in the world is probably roast camel, a specialty at Bedouin wedding feasts. Its stuffing consists of cooked eggs stuffed in fish, the fish stuffed in cooked chickens, the chickens stuffed in a roasted sheep, and the sheep stuffed in a whole camel.

Properly cooked vegetables keep many more nutrients, says the Professional Nutritionist, a publication of Foremost-McKesson Foods. Sugar, fat and protein remain relatively stable during preparation, but vitamins and minerals may be lost more easily. The most liable to loss are the water-soluble vitamins C and B₁ (thiamine). To retain these and generally assure better retention of most other nutrients as well, cook potatoes in their skins and steam frozen vegetables in a covered pot.

Freezing meat at minus 20° C (or 0° F) or below is recommended for ideal storage. Wrapping meats properly will reduce freezer burn and nutrient loss. A good rule-of-thumb is to store foods no longer than three months in the refrigerator freezer compartment.

Instead of thawing, you should cook foods from the frozen state.

Fishing Report

Kleine's Camp - Good, mostly trout, but a few small reds and drum.

Causeway - No good right now, but it changes all the time.

Bea's Bait Stand - Fair. They're catching a few and no complaints are being heard.

Palm Harbor Marina - Real good, mostly trout, but a few reds are being taken.

Sea Gun Marina - Slow during the week but really good on weekends. Catching mostly reds.

Key Allegro Marina - Ever changing, but several reports of catches of speckled trout on reefs and in the flats. Some offshore fishing in 40 fathom range is bringing sailfish, king and dolphin.

Cross country season began last weekend for the Rockport-Fulton runners in Beeville, and the Pirates came away with some of the top honors.

The boys varsity team placed second overall behind the Beeville team. Because of the size of the field, the second place finish represents quite an accomplishment. Beeville, RFHS, Roma, Robstown, Laredo United, Kennedy, San Diego, Tuloso-Midway, Gregory-Portland, and Vaquero all took part. A total of 51 runners ran the course.

David Ramirez was the highest finisher for the Pirates with a 6th place run, followed closely by Raul Castro (7th), Damaso Galvan (9th), and Peter Booth (11th).

Finishing further back in the field were Ernie Lara and Clyde Barre. The finishing position of the top five are added together, and the lowest score is the winning team. Beeville was first by only eight points.

The Varsity Girls placed an overall third place behind Tuloso and GP. Running the fifth best time was Lory Broadhurst. Behind her came Jana Brown, Tammy Walker, Delfina Walker, Tammy Barlass, and Amy Barlass.

In the JV Boys' Division, Mike Zlock ran the second best time in the division. Kelly Pultz and Robert Garcia followed Zlock further down the way.

Those runners which placed in the top ten finishers received medals.

This weekend, the Pirates are competing at Gregory-Portland.

A LONG WAY

They've come a long way. They were married in this same church fifty years ago, when she was just twenty and he was twenty-two. Youth seemed eternal. Life promised a succession of sunny days.

But it wasn't to go on that way forever. Their first child died at birth. Then financial troubles, a business failure, the loss of a home when they couldn't meet the mortgage payments. Sometimes it seemed as if the clouds outweighed the sunshine.

But there were good times, too. Times of joy and laughter, success, wonderful children, wonderful grandchildren. Through it all, their faith and love for each other never faltered.

Throughout our own life, can we all say as much?

Real spirituality is a beautiful thing to behold. I speak of REAL spirituality, the 24-hour-a-day kind, not the "Sunday kind" of spirituality that we see so much of. All of us know some folks who are REALLY spiritual. Not very many, I'm afraid, but we do know some.

These spiritual people have a sort of aura about them that literally exudes kindness. Everything they do is linked to love — love of neighbor. They are people who never seem to have extreme highs or lows in their lives.

They almost seem to respond the same to adverse things as they respond to joyful things.

Selflessness is another mark of the really spiritual person. They never seem to worry about their own welfare. Rather they seem to concentrate on assuming other people's burdens.

Holy scripture cites us many passages for guidelines to spirituality. One of the most familiar to us is the story of the good Samaritan.

When we find a truly spiritual person we can very easily imagine that person actually being the good Samaritan. The character of the good Samaritan fits ANY spiritual person.

Everyone should strive with all their God-given strength to be a REALLY spiritual person, because this is the only true happiness a person can find in this vale of tears.

All other achievements of all types amount to little, when compared to spirituality.

Let our common prayer be that each of us may increase our spirituality so that the Lord's light may shine through us.

Amen!

Plans Taking Shape For Seafair

With the Big Days only two weeks away, plans are finalizing for Seafair VI. A really exciting land parade will kick off the event on Saturday, October 11, according to Land Parade Chairman Larry Boone. Anticipated parade entries include the current Mrs. America as well as the always-popular children's Bike Decorating Contest.

Patty and Murray McMillan are chairmen of this features. First, second and third place ribbons will be awarded in boys' and girls' categories, and each entrant will receive a ticket for a free treat, courtesy of Dairy Queen.

Anyone desiring information on the Bicycle Decorating Contest can call the McMillans at 729-5960.

Boy Scouts will walk with the bikers and parents may pick up their children at the Navigation Building immediately after the parade.

Plans are also set for the crab "beauty contest" and races, according to Chairman Pete Sanders.

Best-Decorated Crab contest will be on Saturday afternoon and crab races will be Sunday afternoon.

Trophies will be awarded for first place in the beauty contest and race and second and third place winners will receive a ribbon.

All entries will receive a Participation Certificate. Entry fee for both events is $7.50.

More information on these events can be obtained from Sanders at 729-2610.

More Teams Join Gumbo Competition

Two more teams, one from Corpus Christi and the other from Rockport, have joined the roster of entries in this year's Seafair VI Gumbo Cook-off.

Latest entries in the World Championship Gumbo Cook-off set for Saturday and Sunday, October 11 and 12, are the Happy Ho-Bos of Rockport and an unnamed team from Corpus.

Members of the Ho-Bos are Monica Clark, Judi Pippet and Mary McGaven.

The Corpus team consists of Clarence Miksch and Eddie G. Setterbo.

Both of these teams will cook on Sunday, October 12.

Also competing in the two-day Gumbo Cook-off are such new entries as Le Gran Charles from Corpus Christi, who claim their Lone Star team of six will protect their "Armadillo Snout Gumbo" from the Giant Armadillo.

Other entries include the champion team of the National Gumbo Cook-Off recently held in Galveston, and last year's gumbo winner, the B.O.I. Team from Galveston; Baytown's own "Crazy Cajun's Team"; plus Austin's "Pepe L'Okra"; Rockport's "Bull Riders"; and "Hey Bear Leroux".

Holding the 1978 World Championship Gumbo Cook-Off title, Ed Setterbo of Rockport—who cooks under the name of "Kajun Kassel"—will coordinate the cook-off this year again as Gumbo Boss.

The winning gumbo of each day is to be auctioned off with the proceeds going to the volunteer fire departments of Aransas County.

Entries are coming in fast and furious, says Ed, adding that there's still time—and room—for more contestants. Anyone who wants to enter can contact him at 729-6827 after 6 p.m.

For November Elections

October 3 Deadline To Register

Persons who plan to vote in the November 4 general elections in Aransas County must be registered by October 3, says County Clerk Ruby Hart.

That's to satisfy state election requirements that a voter be registered at least 30 days prior to the election in which he or she wishes to cast a ballot.

Anyone who is not registered to vote in Aransas County by October 3 will not be permitted to do so in the November elections.

Absentee balloting for the general elections will begin Wednesday, October 15, and will continue through Friday, October 31.

Mrs. Hart emphasized that anyone who is age 65 or older can vote absentee regardless of whether he or she will be in the county on election day.

For persons under age 65, absentee balloting is limited to those who will not be in the county on election day or who are physically unable to go to the polls.

Contested races on the Aransas County ballots this November include those for County Commissioners of Precincts 1 and 3.

In Pct. 1, Republican Bill Wilson is running against Democrat John M. Lee. Incumbent Commissioner Eric Eller did not seek re-election.

In Pct. 3, the commissioner's race is between incumbent Democratic incumbent Raymond Owens and Republican challenger W.B. "Pete" Sanders.

Other contested races of area interest in November include:

U.S. Representative, District 14: Republican C.L. Concklin versus Democrat William N. (Bill) Patman.

State Senate, District 17: Democratic incumbent A.R. "Babe" Schwartz versus Republican challenger James E. "Buster" Brown.

State Representative, District 41: Republican Gene Matthews of Rockport versus Democratic incumbent Leroy J. Wieting.

While in Geraldton, Swank and his fellow crewmembers were involved in a variety of local activities including sporting events, tours and sightseeing.

During the remainder of its cruise, the Marvin Shields will be participating in training exercises with other 7th Fleet units and those of allied nations. Additional port visits are scheduled in various Western Pacific countries.

WATCH OUT BELOW!

Performing at Seafair this year will be parachute experts, Richard J. Castillo, Charles D. Council and Robert J.R. Collins, all of San Antonio. They will be led by team captain Paul Ross of Rockport. Jumps will be north of the Seafair grounds Saturday, October 11 and Sunday, October 12, wind and weather permitting.

If They Can Find A Plane

These Four Have 'Chutes, Will Jump

Wanted: a Cessna or Piper Comanche suitable for jumping out of.

Object: to allow four parachutists to put on a show during Rockport's Seafair VI on Saturday, October 11, and Sunday, October 12.

Paul Ross of Rockport, team captain and organizer of the event, said the group is ready to go except . . . They need a plane.

The plane must be a Cessna 180, 182, 206 or 207 with STC doors or a Piper Comanche 280 or 300 with cargo doors.

Anyone who has a plane of one of these types is asked to please call the Chamber of Commerce office, 729-6445.

The parachutists will jump from a plane on the north side of the celebration site both Saturday and Sunday afternoon, wind and weather permitting.

Ross has close to 1,000 jumps to his credit.

Also jumping will be Richard J. Castillo of San Antonio. He began his career in the military service in 1969 and has made over 1,000 jumps. Castillo has a U.S.P.A. license and is employed as a flight line mechanic by an aircraft company in San Antonio where he is responsible for airborne check-out of new aircraft coming off the assembly line.

The third jumper is Charles D. Council, also of San Antonio, who began jumping while still in high school in Abilene. He has made over 500 jumps and holds an expert U.S.P.A. license. Council is a carpenter by trade. He is a pioneer in canopy relative work and the holder of several day and night Texas skydiving records.

The fourth team member, Robert J.R. Collins, also a San Antonio resident, began jumping while attending Southwest Texas University in San Marcos in 1969. He has made over 1,300 jumps and holds an expert U.S.P.A. license. He has accumulated over 13 hours of free-fall time.

Collins is employed as an accountant by an oil and gas operator, and as a free-fall photographer, has done work for "PM Magazine" on KIII TV. He is the holder of many day and night Texas skydiving records.

Everyone is invited to watch this foursome in action during Seafair, keeping in mind that for the safety of onlookers and jumpers alike, they should stay well back from the action.

Commissioners Hear Complaints On Compactor

John Dzerk and Paul Murphree told the commissioners at Wednesday, September 24, morning's meeting that the Aransas County Compactor Station had turned them down for having the "wrong" kind of trash.

In other action during the meeting, Drozd Construction Company submitted the low bid of $135,911.45 for construction of the new tax office building.

Jack N. Bohm's application to cross Fulton Beach Road, in front of Dobkins Cottages, with 45 feet of steel casing for water and sewer lines was approved. The line will run to a bait stand because no septic systems are allowed on the beach side of the road.

A letter was read from the attorney of John Heard and James Heard asking for the closing of a private road running east and west across the Fannie V.W. Heard Subdivision in Lamar. The shell road does not lead to the water, but drivers have been parking there and walking to the beach.

Girl Scout Registration

Girl Scout Brownie registration day will be Monday, September 29, from 3:30 until 5 p.m. at the Girl Scout Little House.

Democratic Women

The Aransas County Democratic Women will meet Thursday, October 2, at the Aransas County Democratic Headquarters Building at 7:30 p.m. This date and location are in lieu of the regular meeting time and place.

GOP Style Show

The Republican Women's Committee of Aransas County is sponsoring a champagne brunch and fashion show at the Sandollar Restaurant at 11 a.m. Monday, October 6. Fall fashions — "from casual to cocktail wear" — from The Summer Place will be modelled by members of the committee. Donna Price is coordinator of the fund-raising event. Tickets, $10 per person, may be purchased at the Republican Headquarters, 310 Concho, or reservations may be made by calling the local campaign headquarters at 729-3661.

Social Security Help

A representative of the Social Security Administration will be at the Courthouse in rockport Thursday, October 2, at 9 a.m. The representative will answer questions and help claimants file applications for the regular Social Security and Supplemental Security Income benefits.

Rockport PTA

The Rockport Parent-Teacher Association (PTA) is looking for volunteers to help out at the Association's "water balloon toss" booth at Seafair. Anyone who wants to help fill balloons or man the booth come Seafair — or help in any way — is asked to please contact Fund-Raising Chairwoman Margie Lewis. The PTA is also holding a membership drive through October 15. The class that gains the largest percentage of new members will be rewarded with a "Coke Party."
