A.M. BRIEFING

Academy of Television Arts and Sciences President Richard H. Frank and actress/comedienne Tracey Ullman embrace, Thursday, after announcing the nominees in the top categories for the 48th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards.

Emmy nominations

LOS ANGELES — NBC and its explosive hospital drama "ER" loomed as big in Thursday's Emmy nominations as they do in the ratings. But good things come in small packages, too: A&E found that out. Specialized cable channels like A&E received bids in top categories, including best miniseries. Page 9A

Welfare reform

WASHINGTON — The House approved a bill Thursday that would reverse decades of anti-poverty policy, turning the federal guarantee of assistance to the poor into a time-limited, work-oriented program largely run by the states. The measure, approved 256-170, represented the House's third try after two previous bills were vetoed by President Clinton. Page 12A

Real nightmare

PHILADELPHIA — A monster is on the loose — snatching little girls from their homes, usually at night in their sleep, often molesting them, and then dropping them off on sidewalks near their homes. Parents were keeping close watch over their children Thursday after the fourth abduction. Page 8A

Officials search for Alpine man

Manhunt begins after county sheriff tries to serve arrest warrant

■ Alvaro Hernandez takes Sheriff Jack McDaniel's gun, turns it on him, but doesn't shoot.

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

ALPINE — Law enforcement officials are calling the search for Alvaro Hernandez, 44, of Alpine, the biggest manhunt they have ever had.

Brewster County Sheriff Jack McDaniel received a call around 8:30 a.m. Thursday saying that a unit needed assistance in serving a warrant on Hernandez.

Hernandez, who has been on parole for about 1 1/2 years, served 15-18 years for capital murder for killing a man at an Alpine restaurant 18 years ago. A month ago he was charged with aggravated robbery for reportedly taking $70 from an elderly man in Alpine, McDaniel said. He was out on $50,000 bond.

Even though Hernandez was released on bond, a blue warrant had been issued for his arrest, Brewster officials said. A blue warrant is issued in case a suspect flees and it results in bond being revoked.

Hernandez was aware that officials had issued a warrant for his arrest, said McDaniel, who has been Brewster County sheriff for 16 years.

When McDaniel went to the Alpine residence where Hernandez was, he didn't see any other police units.

McDaniel said he saw Hernandez standing outside the residence as he drove by. McDaniel said he stopped and asked Hernandez if one of the deputies was inside, thinking he might be a hostage. Hernandez told him no.

McDaniel told Hernandez that he had a warrant for his arrest. Then Hernandez managed to take McDaniel's .44 magnum out of his holster, the sheriff said.

Hernandez pointed the gun at him for two or three minutes, said McDaniel, who thanks "the good Lord that I'm all right."

Two women at the residence yelled at Hernandez not to shoot and Hernandez then ordered McDaniel to get back in the car and leave, he said.

McDaniel did so, but called for assistance as he drove off.

He was one block away when he noticed a car leaving the residence. He followed, but lost sight of the vehicle.

About an hour later, one of the women at the residence, Demelda Rodriguez, was arrested for aiding and abetting Hernandez, who was considered a fugitive, McDaniel said.

Hernandez got out of the car on a road south of Marathon. Ms. Rodriguez went to Marathon where she bought sandwiches, water and cigarettes, which she

Officials suspect bomb or missile as likely cause of jetliner crash

NEW YORK (NYT) — Federal law enforcement officials said Thursday that the most likely explanation for the fiery crash of TWA Flight 800 was that a bomb or, perhaps, a missile destroyed the airplane, plunging it into the Atlantic Ocean off Long Island on Wednesday night, killing all 230 people on board.

By Thursday evening, the remains of 120 people had been recovered, and investigators had begun examining pieces of the plane that were fished from the crash site and brought to land.

The initial swirl of evidence and speculation on Thursday produced several possible scenarios for the explosion that turned the 747-100 airliner into a blazing shower at 13,700 feet above the Atlantic. Officials said the possibilities under investigation range from a catastrophic mechanical failure that ignited the airplane's 250,000 pounds of fuel, to a brazen act of terrorism, like a bomb secreted on board or a surface-to-air missile fired from below.

Meeting on Medicaid change draws concerned Midlanders

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Plans to convert West Texas' Medicaid services to a tightly managed care system brought about 200 Midlanders — many with horror stories to tell — to a Thursday afternoon meeting with state officials.

A panel of officials with the Texas Department of Health and the Texas Department of Human Services listened as a host of local Medicaid recipients and their representatives expressed reasons for not wanting their health care switched to a health maintenance organization (HMO).

Medicaid is a state-distributed insurance that covers a portion of those citizens who cannot get insurance.

Although adults who lose their jobs are rarely eligible for Medicaid coverage, their children and pregnant spouses are often eligible, even when the family income is as much as 185 percent of the federally recognized poverty line.

Medicaid also covers those who are disabled, including many elderly people in Midland and those who suffer from chronic ailments such as multiple sclerosis, cerebral palsy and mental retardation, officials said.

'Blunt-force trauma to head' killed baby, autopsy shows

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An autopsy revealed that an infant who was found in a trash bin Thursday morning died of "blunt-force trauma to the head," Odessa police said.

An Odessa man picking through trash bins to collect aluminum cans found the newborn boy, whom Odessa's Metro Homicide Unit has named "Baby Doe."

The man had been systematically going from bin to bin in the alley of the 1300 block of Clifford Street when he found the baby at about 7:50 a.m., according to police reports.

"The entire area was canvassed, and so far we have no witnesses (to the crime)," said police Cpl. Robert Hammerman.

Alicia Saenz, who lives across the street from where the baby was found, said she heard "a lot of commotion and dogs barking" about 5 a.m.

"There was a lot of noise, but I didn't look out to see what it was," she said.

Ms. Saenz said a neighbor threw trash into the bin before

U.N. accepts Iraqi food distribution plan

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraq moved one step closer to pumping oil for export Thursday when the United Nations accepted its plan for distributing food and medicine bought with the proceeds.

The United Nations agreed in May to permit Iraq to sell $2 billion worth of oil every 100 days to buy humanitarian supplies. Iraq needed to draw up a distribution plan acceptable to the U.N. before the sales could begin.

"I am happy that the distribution plan has been accepted," U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali told Iraqi chief negotiator Abdel Amir al-Anbari. A U.N. committee still needs to approve separate procedures for the exports, which could be finalized next week. Western diplomats have said Iraqi oil could begin flowing by the end of August.

Egypt broadens it's ban on female genital mutilation

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt has broadened its ban on female circumcisions to bar all health care workers in state-run hospitals or private clinics from performing the controversial procedure.

The action means no health care worker affiliated with the Health Ministry is allowed to perform the operation, also known as genital mutilation, Health Minister Ismail Sallam was quoted as saying in Egyptian newspapers Thursday.

He said medical personnel who continue the practice would face "severe punishment," but he did not say what the penalty would be. Ministry officials said almost all Egyptian doctors are affiliated with the ministry, but they had no statistics on other health care workers.

State hospitals were banned from performing the procedure in October 1995, but until now it was allowed in privately run clinics. Under Egyptian law, anyone without medical training is banned from performing female circumcisions, and any physician or health worker who causes permanent damage to a girl may face three to 10 years of hard labor.

The law is frequently ignored, however, especially in the countryside where village barbers and midwives perform the operations. Mohammed Monieb, secretary-general of the Egyptian Organization for Human Rights, which has campaigned to get the practice outlawed, welcomed Sallam's action.

"But, he added, 'We are not sure he can enforce it.' He urged parliament to pass a law making the practice a crime.

The procedure, which ranges from clipping the tip of a young girl's clitoris to cutting away the outer sexual organs, is seen as a way to prevent promiscuity by stifling sexual desire.

Despite the health dangers, an estimated 70 percent to 90 percent of girls in Egypt are circumcised before puberty.

Japan plagued by E. coli bacteria

TOKYO (AP) — A new rash of food poisoning cases broke out Thursday near Tokyo, again striking children and teachers with an illness being traced to school lunches.

The illness has sickened more than 7,000 people nationwide. Four people have died and nearly 600 have been hospitalized. It is Japan's worst food poisoning outbreak since 1988, when more than 10,000 people were infected by salmonella.

The latest group of cases was reported Thursday in Yokohama, 18 miles south of the capital. More than 300 children and teachers from three public elementary schools have fallen ill since Tuesday with diarrhea, vomiting and stomach pains.

It was unclear whether the bacteria involved in Yokohama is the powerful E. coli O157:H7 bacteria that is blamed for sickening 5,535 people as of Thursday evening in the western city of Sakai.

The bacteria — which can be dangerous even in tiny amounts — is similar to the strain of E. coli that in 1993 caused at least 500 people who ate undercooked hamburgers to fall ill in Washington state.

The outbreaks in Japan have killed three children and an 84-year-old woman. At least 589 people remain hospitalized.

Reports have cited roast pork used in cold noodle dishes as among the possible sources of the bacteria.

The government held an emergency meeting on the outbreak earlier this week. Fumigators have sprayed classrooms with disinfectant, and officials have inspected companies that deliver daily meals to schools.

Parents besieged Sakai city hall with calls, said official Masakazu Noda. Municipal authorities planned a door-to-door leafletting campaign on hygiene measures.

Sales of kitchen bleaches and other household germ killers have more than doubled over the past two weeks.

imposed on Iraq after Baghdad's 1990 invasion of Kuwait. The deal is designed to alleviate civilian suffering caused by the trade embargo.

Security Council diplomats repeatedly have said they will not consider lifting the sanctions until Iraq has destroyed its weapons and fully cooperates with weapons inspectors.

Iraqi authorities barred a U.N. inspection team for a third day Thursday from a site near Baghdad airport suspected of containing banned weapons.

Iraq is required under the 1991 U.N. resolution that ended the Persian Gulf War to destroy all its long-range missiles and dismantle nuclear, biological and chemical weapons programs.

The United States objected to a first draft of the distribution plan, saying it left open the possibility that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein could use food imports to benefit his regime. Washington accepted the final draft after loopholes were tightened.

Netanyahu speaks language of peace in Egypt on first visit to Arab land

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — On his first visit to an Arab country as Israel's prime minister, Benjamin Netanyahu brought words of peace Thursday to a region shaken by his election victory two months ago.

While the Israeli leader took no major steps to push forward the stalled Middle East peace process, he went out of his way to praise his Egyptian hosts, particularly President Hosni Mubarak, and took pains to at least speak the language of peace.

"We agreed that we must intensify our efforts to expand the circle of peace, which of course is important for both Israel and Egypt and the entire region," Netanyahu said after a two-hour meeting with Mubarak. "We believe that the peace should be based on the idea of fulfilling existing commitments."

He hailed Egypt as "the pivot of peace" and said he felt "renewed confidence" that peace could be achieved.

Netanyahu arrived Thursday a wildly unpopular figure, facing deep anger over what many Arabs consider a betrayal of years of difficult negotiations. All week, Egyptian newspapers published bitter attacks, unprecedented before the visit of a foreign leader.

"No to the Rotten Smell in the Land of Egypt," read the headline of the opposition newspaper El-Ahram on Thursday.

It was an oft-repeated play on Netanyahu's name — in Arabic, "neten" means "rotten smell."

Netanyahu's positive remarks were not likely to assuage Arab fears.

Of particular concern to Arab countries has been his stated opposition to trading land — won in the 1967 Mideast war — for peace. That formula has been the basis of talks that began in Madrid, Spain, in 1991.

Netanyahu said there were "different interpretations" of that formula and again stressed that Israel's security was the most important issue in any peace agreement.

Mubarak insisted that peace should be based on U.N. resolutions urging the return of captured land. He said there could be "different thoughts," but not different interpretations, on the agreed basis for negotiations.

Netanyahu said he was ready to renew talks with Syria "right away" — a position he has stated before. But he gave no timetable on a withdrawal from Hebron, the last West Bank city under occupation.

In an attempt to end Palestinian bitterness over his refusal to meet Yasser Arafat, Netanyahu said Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy would meet the Palestinian leader next week.

Netanyahu also said he would allow 10,000 more Palestinian workers to enter Israel. Those workers were barred under a nearly five-month closure of the West Bank and Gaza Strip that followed a series of deadly suicide bombings by Muslim militants.

"Our intention is to make life easier and to make an open relationship rather than a closed one," Netanyahu said. "And this will accompany our talks with the view of creating good will."

Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Mousa, who has sharply criticized Israel, called the talks "a step forward."

"Now we know the situation a little better," he said.

Holbrooke extends mission to usher Karadzic from leadership

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke extended his make-or-break Balkan mission Friday, holding early morning talks without reporting progress in his effort to push Radovan Karadzic from power.

Senior Bosnian Serbs were escorted to Belgrade Thursday by Serbian police to hear Holbrooke's ultimatum: Get rid of their boss or face renewed sanctions.

State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said Holbrooke held "very tough" conversations with Milosevic. The meeting lasted for about six hours, breaking just before midnight and resumed early Friday after Holbrooke consulted with Washington.

A U.S. diplomat who demanded anonymity said talks were at a "critical stage."

It was not clear whether Holbrooke was meeting with the Bosnian Serb leaders, or using Milosevic as an intermediary. The meetings were closed to reporters.

Karadzic, leader of the Bosnian Serbs, has been indicted by an international tribunal on war crimes charges. Bosnia's first post-war elections are scheduled for Sept. 14, and the Dayton peace accord bans war crimes suspects from holding political office.

"President Milosevic understands our position and determination," Holbrooke said Thursday. "He has to decide what he's going to do."

Holbrooke had set Friday as a deadline for Karadzic to resign as head of the main Bosnian Serb party, and the envoy was scheduled to return Friday to Washington.

The United Nations slapped economic sanctions on Yugoslavia in 1992 as punishment for the country's role in the Bosnian war.

Those sanctions were lifted last year following acceptance of the Dayton accord. The United Nations has indicated it may reimpose sanctions if Serbia — the major state in what remains of Yugoslavia — fails to abide by the accord.

Though Karadzic has turned over duties as president of his shadow state to an aide, he has refused demands by the international community that he also give up his leadership of the Bosnian Serbs' main political party, the Serbian Democratic Party.

Burns said Milosevic insists that Serbia has complied with the Dayton accords. U.S. diplomats believe the peace plan compels Serbia to make certain that Karadzic not exercise political power through confederates.

In the event Karadzic hangs on, the elections will be thrown into jeopardy: If his party is banned, Bosnian Serbs say they will boycott the vote, while Bosnian government officials threaten a boycott if he stays on.

Holbrooke characterized the Sept. 14 elections as the acid test of the Dayton peace accord's aim of fusing Bosnia's Muslim-Croat and Serb communities into one recognizable, united state.

WEATHER WATCH

High to be in 90s with sunny skies

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high between 95-100 with winds out of the southwest 10-20 mph, according to a forecast at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low between 70-75 and a slight chance of storms or thunderstorms.

Saturday's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies and a high between 95-100.

After an overnight low of 75, Friday's high reached 98, compared to the record high for that date of 111, set in 1989. The record low was 62, set in 1986.

STATE

It was mostly sunny and breezy across much of Texas on Thursday, although South and East Texas were cloudy and rainy.

Temperatures at 4 p.m. were generally in the lower to upper 90s with extremes of 79 degrees in rain-cooled Lufkin to 100 in Cotulla.

Winds were from the south and southwest and gusty in North Texas. The North Texas forecast is for today to be partly cloudy with a chance of showers and thunderstorms in central and eastern portions; most numerous in the southeast. Highs will be 93 to 99 degrees. Tonight has a slight chance of evening showers and thunderstorms in central and eastern portions. Otherwise partly cloudy. Lows will be 74 to 78.

South Texas is to have clouds and thundershowers. Highs will reach the mid and upper 90s in most areas. Coastal regions and areas which receive rain will have temperatures in the 80s. South to southeast winds at 10 to 15 mph will prevail.

Forecasters expected West Texas will have partly cloudy skies through today. There is a slight chance of afternoon showers and thunderstorms mainly over Southwest Texas. Highs will be mostly in the 90s except 80s over the mountains and 100 to 107 along the Rio Grande. Lows in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Relentless rainstorms across the Ohio Valley swamped basements in Chicago and swelled the Missouri River to near flooding on Thursday while the Plains baked and the Pacific Northwest awoke to record lows.

Heavy thunderstorms sat over western Michigan and south to northern Indiana, drenching the area for the second day.

From Indiana to northern Illinois, up to 15 inches of rain fell over 36 hours. In Rockford, Ill., five inches came down from midnight to early afternoon.

Chicago's Midway Airport was hit with 6.5 inches of rain by early morning, breaking a 24-hour record of 6.24 inches set July 1957. About 1,500 homeowners on the city's Southwest Side had water in their basements and 191 streets were flooded.

Tornado warnings were issued when funnel clouds were spotted in two northern Illinois counties, although none touched down.

Nebraska and Iowa welcomed the rain two days ago, coming at a time when the cornfields could use it, but the showers persisted and pushed streams in northeastern Nebraska and northwestern Iowa over their banks.

The Missouri River, a border between the two states, rose 6 feet in 24 hours and was less than a foot from flooding in Omaha.

Many rivers were expected to crest two to eight feet above flood stage in the next few days.

SEARCH: Officials think Hernandez is heading toward Mexico border took back to Hernandez, McDaniel said.

She took Hernandez farther south on the road, where she left him and returned to Alpine, McDaniel said.

Brewster officials arrested her on her way back to Alpine.

She reportedly called someone in Fort Stockton to pick up Hernandez, McDaniel said.

Hernandez, who is 6 feet tall and wears a goatee, is said to be armed and dangerous. Brewster officials said. They think Hernandez is south of Marathon, perhaps heading toward the border, McDaniel said.

He had not been apprehended as of press time.

Some of the other agencies involved in the manhunt are the Border Patrol, Texas Rangers, U.S. Customs, Drug Enforcement Agency and other West Texas law enforcers. Bloodhounds and a helicopter are being used in the search for Hernandez.

This is not the first time Hernandez has escaped, McDaniel said. While serving in the penitentiary at Pecos for the capital murder conviction, he escaped by locking a jailer in a closet.

He was found along the Rio Grande and was involved in a shootout with law enforcement officers, McDaniel said. He crossed into Mexico, where he was captured and returned to the United States.

a man found the baby.

"He was picking through the Dumpster with a tool, like a long fork, when he poked a black bag. I guess the bag tore or came open. Then he saw the face. He thought it was a doll at first."

Ms. Saenz said the incident was "tragic."

"I've been walking around in a daze all day," she said.

Dr. Jerry Spencer of Lubbock, who performed the autopsy, said the infant had reached "full term" in his development.

"Homicide detectives have seized numerous items at the (crime) scene," said Det. Sgt. Snow Robertson of the Metro Homicide Unit.

The items are to be sent to the Texas Department of Public Safety Crime Laboratory for analysis.

Detectives request that anyone with information on a girl or woman who was "showing signs of being pregnant" and who now "no longer appears to be pregnant and is without a baby" should notify police.

"The mother of the deceased infant may be attempting to get medical attention in connection with the delivery of the child," Robertson said.

Anyone with information should call the Metro Homicide Unit, 1-915-335-4615. Callers who wish to remain anonymous may call Crime Stoppers at 333-TIPS in Odessa and 694-TIPS in Midland.

Ms. Saenz said that no matter how the baby died, she and her neighbors take exception to putting an infant in a trash bin.

"They threw the baby away like it was nothing," she said. "Even animals don't do that."

She said her neighbors have been tying flower bouquets to the trash receptacle and creating a memorial for the infant who people on the block have christened "the morning angel."

CAUSE: Investigators focus on recovered pieces

(From 1A)

But by process of elimination, investigators said they were finding it increasingly difficult to find an explanation for the explosion that ripped the aircraft apart that did not involve an attack on the plane. However, they said they had only just begun to examine physical evidence from the plane.

Law enforcement officials involved in the investigation said they had based their speculation about a missile attack largely on the accounts of some witnesses who reported seeing flaming streaks and flashes of light before the plane exploded, shortly after taking off from Kennedy International Airport for Paris.

Such a missile attack would be a frightening departure from previous terrorist attacks on airlines. Efforts to deter terrorism in this country have focused almost entirely on preventing explosives from being brought aboard aircraft. But officials said there were reasons, too, to be skeptical, including the fact that Flight 800 was flying above the rated ceiling for most shoulder-fired missiles, like the Stinger.

Officials of Trans World Airlines said on Thursday that they had no immediate mechanical explanation for the crash. The plane did not have a history of major mechanical troubles, they said, and the experienced cockpit crew of the 747-100 did not report any problems to air traffic controllers in the 29 minutes the plane was airborne before disappearing from the radar screen at 8:48 p.m.

Although the inquiry officially remained an accident investigation, the FBI was treating it as a criminal investigation, far beyond its usual role in air crashes. Within hours of the crash, the FBI in New York had activated its joint terrorism task force, bringing in other federal law enforcement agencies and the New York City police. By Thursday, there were 100 FBI agents working on the case.

At the White House, President Clinton cautioned against making quick judgments about the cause of the crash. "Do not jump to conclusions," he said. "Let's wait until we get the facts and let's remember the families."

Robert Francis, vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, said that "the issue of an accident versus a criminal act is very much out there" and added that "there is no evidence at this point that this is not an accident."

Meanwhile, the huge rescue effort that began in the dark of Wednesday night continued in daylight on Thursday with hundreds of workers and dozens of boats trawling the placid water in the 200-square-mile crash site nine miles off the Long Island coast.

Throughout the day, there was a steady traffic of helicopters and Coast Guard rescue boats ferrying bodies and pieces of the airplane to the Moriches Bay Coast Guard station, where the operation had its headquarters.

Bodies were brought to a garage at the Coast Guard station, then tagged with numbers and loaded onto refrigerated trucks that took them to the Suffolk County medical examiner's office in Hauppauge.

Rabbi Tuvia Teldon, who had come to the garage to say psalms for the dead, said some of the bodies were fully intact and others were mangled. Some were still in their seat belts. "The vulnerability of the human body becomes very apparent," he noted sadly.

Char. Wetli, the Suffolk County medical examiner, said that many of the bodies he saw were burned but that he believes the passengers died "in literally a heartbeat."

"For all practical purposes," he said, "it was an instantaneous death." He added that out of regard for the relatives of the victims, they would be asked to identify their relatives through photos of their bodies.

Throughout Thursday, relatives of victims continued to arrive at the Ramada Plaza Hotel near Kennedy Airport, where they were counseled while waiting for final word about the list of passengers.

"People were stunned, and they were uncertain, and they were hoping," said Dottie Brier, a clinical social worker. "They would talk about all the reasons why maybe they were or weren't on that plane. Maybe they had reservations but didn't get on, maybe they were on another flight to Paris, Tower Air or some other airline."

The crash reverberated well beyond New York. In the rural central Pennsylvania towns of Montoursville, Pa., the mourning had begun for 16 teen-age members of a French club who were making an eagerly anticipated trip to France.

And at the Charles de Gaulle Airport, people arriving to meet Flight 800 on Thursday were seen burying their faces in their hands when told the news.

The main focus of activity on Thursday was in Suffolk County, on the eastern end of Long Island, where investigators began sorting through the witnesses' accounts of the crash and the physical evidence recovered from the scene.

Officials with the National Transportation Safety Board said there was no physical evidence from the airplane that pointed definitively to foul play. But law enforcement officials involved in the investigation said it was their view that a variety of circumstances point to an explosive device as the most likely culprit.

One possibility was that a bomb had somehow been concealed aboard. But another under investigation, those officials said, is that the airplane was hit by a missile fired from a boat.

The officials say the strongest indications suggesting this possibility are witness reports of a "streak of light" hitting the airplane just before it exploded.

Fred Meyer, a major in the Air National Guard, who was flying a C-130 off Long Island on a training mission at the time of the crash, told reporters that he saw an arc of light moving toward the plane. He said it followed "the sort of course and trajectory that you see when a shooting star enters the atmosphere."

He said, "Almost immediately thereafter, I saw in rapid succession a small explosion and then a large explosion."

Paul Angelides, who lives in Westhampton Beach, said he was standing on a deck of a beachfront house when he saw what he described as a "red meteor with a smoke trail" that followed the course like the outline of "a parabola."

He said he first saw "the meteor" and then "the fireball erupts at that other location, then the whole fireball falls to the earth."

The law enforcement officials also said a review of radar tapes from the time of the crash showed what appears to be an errant "blip" falling with the airplane, although some law enforcement officials said a missile fired from a hand-held launcher would likely be too small to be picked up by radar.

The officials said they were reviewing a telephone call placed to a Tampa, Fla., television station on Thursday morning from a man who identified himself as a member of a jihad, or holy war, and claimed responsibility for the crash. They also were examining a letter warning of an attack that was signed by a group calling itself Movement for Islamic Change and faxed to an Arabic newspaper earlier this week.

The airplane's pilot, Capt. Steve Snyder, and the first officer, Capt. Ralph Kevoorkian, both had long experience flying 747's and there is no indication from their communications with the ground that they were aware they ran into trouble Wednesday night.

FACES: Victims' family, friends remember lives

(From 1A)

Mrs. Lychner, a former TWA flight attendant, helped found the group in 1993 after she was the victim of a sexual attack. Her attacker subsequently tried to sue her, citing psychological damage stemming from the arrest.

Kahan said the group "blossomed under her leadership."

"She was just a voice of reason among a system that dealt with insanity."

Amy and Kyle Miller, both 29, gave the Paris trip to each other as a fifth wedding anniversary gift.

In France, the young marrieds from Tamaqua, Pa., planned to see an exchange student who stayed with her family 11 years ago, said her father, Monty Siekerman.

Siekerman said he finds comfort in family, friends and knowing his daughter and son-in-law are in heaven.

"We woke up to a sunrise, but they woke up to a sunrise many more times glorious. We know where they are and we will see them again," he said.

Like millions who watched the disaster unfold before them on television, "Good Morning America" host Joan Lunden hoped for a miracle — in vain.

Lifelong friend Jed Johnson, an interior designer from New York, was on the jetliner bound for Paris.

"This grief added on with the suspense makes it even worse," she said during the show.

Wary from the uncertainty, a few minutes later she announced that Johnson's family in California had learned their son was indeed on the jet.

In St. Louis, Pat Marion said her 42-year-old daughter, Patricia Anderson, and her husband, J. Edward Anderson, 49, were heading to Paris to meet another couple for a vacation in Italy.

"I'm sitting here like a zombie," Mrs. Marion said. "My husband walked down the hall last night and asked me what Patty's flight number was... I said it was 800. He said, 'It just blew up in the air.'"

"I haven't been the same since," she said.

A veteran flier, a doting family

MONTROUSEVILLE, Pa. (AP)

Students slowly approached the old-fashioned stone high school Thursday, greeting one another with tears, sobs and embraces, their thoughts with the 21 classmates and chaperones aboard TWA Flight 800.

The 16 students, along with a teacher, her husband, a school secretary and two parents, were embarking on a 10-day French Club trip, the culmination of more than two years of bake sales, car washes and penny pinching.

By 4 a.m., their slim hopes were dashed — they were sure the whole group had boarded the plane. By Thursday afternoon, the National Transportation Safety Board told Principal Dan Chandler that 20 of 21 bodies had been recovered.

"These kids are among the best and brightest in this community," said Tina Lorton, who knew 10 of the children and coached three on a local swim team. "When you live in a town of 5,000, everybody knows everybody."

Late Wednesday night, as news reports trickled in about the crash, the students' parents gathered at the school, nestled in a residential area which sits on the banks of the Susquehanna River.

Hours later, parents and other family members climbed onto two buses for the 4 1/2-hour trip from central Pennsylvania to New York.

Counselors and clergy met with the parents before they left, and some even accompanied the group to New York.

"They're in terrible shape," New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said after meeting with them at a hotel near Kennedy Airport. "For many of (the children) it was their first time away from home. It's horrible and heartbreaking."

man: TWA Flight Engineer Richard Campbell leaves a wife and two boys, 14 and 16.

Campbell logged 18,527 hours of total flying time with TWA since he was hired in 1966.

Three years ago, the family moved back from California to Ridgefield, Conn., the town that was home to the Campbells for 15 years in all.

Married only a few weeks, Giuseppe Mercurio, 29, and his bride, Anna D'Alessandro, 25, were returning from their honeymoon.

Mercurio worked at his father's produce stand and was part-owner of a jewelry store in a southern town near Bari, the ANSA news agency reported.

They were among at least eight Italians killed in the crash, the Foreign Ministry confirmed.

All eight were among a group of passengers bumped from a New York-Rome flight that TWA canceled at the last minute, with arrangements to put them on alternate Europe-bound flights, for return to Italy.

Another Italian couple, Mirko Buttarini, 26, and Monica Omiccioli, 23, also were leaving behind a honeymoon in the United States.

Constance Coiner's work was teaching English literature at the State University of New York at Binghamton, and she did it well.

Students used words like "dynamic," "passionate" and "enthusiastic" to describe her classes. Her specialty was women's literature.

She joined the staff in 1988. Last year she won tenure — and the college's award for excellence in teaching.

Coiner, 48, was traveling to France with her 12-year-old daughter, Ana Duarte-Coiner, for a vacation, "taking a well-deserved break," said university spokeswoman Katie Ellis.

Coiner, an associate professor, was a "devoted teacher and scholar whose contributions to students and to Binghamton University were outstanding," said Lois DeFleur, the school's president.

Ana was gifted, a sometime actress who took ballet and piano and played tennis and softball.

"She was a dynamite young lady," said Principal Tom Corgel. "She always brightened my day."

Jack O'Hara, a five-time Emmy Award winner, was taking his wife, Janet, and 13-year-old daughter, Caitlin, to Paris on what was to have been his last assignment as executive producer of ABC Sports.

The O'Hara's twin boys, Brian and Matthew, 12, stayed home in Irvington, N.Y., with their grandparents.

"Jack was a great guy who was passionate about his work," said Bob Iger, the chief executive officer and president of Capital Cities/ABC Inc.

"It's a surreal atmosphere at ABC Sports and at the network. No one believes it actually happened. It's been a nightmare," said Mark Mandel, director of media relations for ABC Sports.

O'Hara, 39, was responsible for all aspects of the production of ABC Sports telecasts, including "Monday Night Football" and "ABC's Wide World of Sports."

Heavy thunderstorms kept Eileen Renee of Wisconsin from making her New York connection to Flight 800, en route to a visit with her daughter.

Mrs. Renee, 51, was stuck at Chicago's O'Hare International airport.

On Thursday, the Appleton, Wis., woman awaited another TWA flight to France, despite her family's misgivings.

"She's waiting in New York to take another flight, but we wanted her to come home," said Erica Renee, 17, her daughter. "We really just wanted her to take a different airline or come home, but she wouldn't."

Mrs. Renee's husband had dropped her off in Chicago and was worried during the storm, but remained confident she didn't make the New York connection.

MEDICAID: State officials listen to concerns of residents

(From 1A)

An HMO is a health-care system in which each patient is assigned a physician as a primary care provider. This physician is limited, to a degree, by financial constraints in caring for the patient, and the patient has little or no choice in his or her health care, according to speakers at the meeting at Lee High School auditorium.

One Midland woman with a chronically ill daughter likened medical care through an HMO to "cattle getting ready to be branded."

This woman used to live with her daughter in Dallas, where there is a tightly managed Medicaid delivery system, and she said the quality of care in Midland is greatly superior.

"She was denied treatment in Dallas because her doctor was not available," she said.

"HMOs do not want to know about individual patient needs," another woman said, speaking about a child who died. If the child had not been overlooked in her HMO setting, "I doubt that would have happened," she said.

Others urged state officials not to judge people simply because they have to rely on Medicaid for their medical needs.

"If anybody else had told me 10 years ago that my mother would need the aid of the state, I would not have believed them," a Midland woman said.

"No matter what your current financial situation is... don't ever think you won't need Medicaid," she said.

"I have a cousin who was a victim of a managed care system," said Midlander Ann Williams.

Because HMO managers withheld expensive testing procedures that would have detected a brain tumor, her cousin was crippled in a brain operation to fix a misdiagnosis, Ms. Williams said.

"She was brushed aside — they sent her home because she was poor," she said.

Dr. Mourad Mansour, a Midland physician, spoke strongly against removing patients from their current physicians, which would happen if an HMO is established.

Several area physicians are banding together to form a less constrictive form of managed care for Midland area Medicaid patients. It is on their actions and testimony from this meeting that state officials in Austin will decide the fate of Midland Medicaid patients.

"We understand why managed care is here," Mansour said, offering his services to help the state design a managed care system that will allow people to keep their current physicians.

"It's not fair for the physicians to take patients away from them when they have been taking care of them for years and years," Mansour said.

Many times, doctors cared for patients — who did not have insurance or money to pay their bills — before they received Medicaid.

"We're not in business only for the money," Mansour said.

Some Midlanders told state officials that the current Medicaid system needs more choice and flexibility, not less.

Disabled area resident Pam Ziegler told state officials that they could save Medicaid dollars if she and others like her could live on their own with some assistance rather than being forced into group homes where they receive services they do not need.

Instead, Miss Ziegler is "given only one choice in life and that choice is to live in a totally restrictive environment," she said.

It is unknown what effect Thursday's testimony will have on state plans for the future of West Texas' Medicaid delivery system.

The reason a meeting was called in Midland was because of the efforts of the Midland County Medical Society, according to Dr. J.E. Mendez, president of the society.

Two state panel members who will ultimately be part of the decision-making process for the region were not present because of previous commitments, one state official said. They will receive transcripts of the meeting.

Yeltsin

MOSCOW (AP) — promised ordinary shake if they gave term in office. They are already regret

There were signs the Russian president honeymoon with ever had one — before his second begins.

Yeltsin's second-term honeymoon begins to sour before it officially starts MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin promised ordinary people a better life if they gave him another term in office. They did — but a lot are already regretting it.

There were signs Thursday that the Russian president's post-election honeymoon with voters — if he ever had one — was over even before his second term officially begins.

In Moscow, subway builders picketed the government to demand back pay. Eight time zones away, in the Russian Far East, a vast blackout sparked warnings of a post-election backlash. And in Chechnya, the war raged anew.

One of the Russian president's biggest, most attention-getting promises during his frantic campaign for re-election was a pledge to see that workers nationwide got their overdue wages.

But Moscow subway builders picketing outside government buildings said they haven't been paid since April.

"We believed right up to election day. They fed us promises all the way," union leader Alexander Rodionov told Associated Press Television. "But today our trust in the leadership stops."

The metro workers aren't alone in their disillusionment. Last week, coal miners in Siberia staged a wildcat strike to demand five months' worth of back wages.

Despite Yeltsin's promises, the government admitted this week that it hasn't caught up on back pay. Worse, it said the overdue wage debt was still growing.

People like the metro workers and the coal miners were the backbone of Soviet industry, but they have suffered under Yeltsin's economic reforms. Inflation ate up their savings and dwarfed their wages — when they even got them.

Yeltsin's government and Russia's private enterprises are caught up in a vast, tangled web of unpaid debts, and ordinary people are the first to suffer.

In the Russian Far East, for example, most homes were getting just three hours of electricity a day after the regional power company, owed millions by the government, ran out of fuel this week and began shutting down plants.

"The situation is horrible," Vladimir Chubai, an independent union leader in the Pacific port city of Vladivostok, told the Interfax news agency. "People can't cook or wash themselves or their clothes." He said a lot of people are now sorry they voted for Yeltsin and warned of "explosions of discontent" unless the energy crisis is resolved.

The regional governor, Yevgeny Nazdratenko, criticized Moscow for its indifference and scoffed at its offer of an emergency fuel shipment as too little, too late.

He said Yeltsin administration officials are so busy celebrating the president's election victory that "it's virtually impossible to get anything with the federal government resolved right now."

Back pay and a better life for ordinary Russians aren't the only Yeltsin campaign promises that are looking tattered. Only days after the July 3 election, the Russia army launched a bloody offensive that reignited the war in Chechnya.

"It was a war you promised to end in order to ensure your victory," Sergei Kovalyov, Russia's most prominent human rights campaigner, wrote to Yeltsin this week in an open letter.

"I knew from the very start your promises were a lie. But the country believed you."

Man claims to be Chechen leader reportedly killed in April

MOSCOW (AP) — A man stepped forward Thursday and claimed to be a Chechen guerrilla commander reported dead by the Russian government.

He also said rebel leader Dzhokhar Dudayev — reported killed in April in a rocket attack — is still alive and in hiding.

The man identified himself as Salman Raduyev and told reporters in Chechnya that he had returned to the secessionist republic after undergoing medical treatment in Germany. He said rebels bombed a bus in Moscow last week to celebrate his return.

Russian media reports in March said Raduyev, a field commander, was killed in a shootout with fellow rebels. Though the rebels denied he died, Raduyev has not been seen in public since.

The man claiming to be Raduyev said that Chechen rebels staged two trolley bus blasts that wounded 33 people in Moscow last week — the first explosion, he said, was "in honor of my return." Rebel leaders have vehemently denied involvement in the explosions.

He also claimed Dudayev was still alive, hospitalized in an undisclosed location. Russian officials, rebel leaders and Dudayev's wife all claim Dudayev was killed in an April 21 air raid in Chechnya. Dudayev's burial site, however, has never been identified.

"I swear by Allah that Dzhokhar Dudayev is alive," he said.

Dudayev's ethnic Russian wife, Alla, reportedly has vanished from her home near Moscow, fueling speculation she joined Dudayev and is hiding abroad.

Associated Press Television footage of the news conference outside the eastern Chechen town of Gudermes showed a man who sounded just like Raduyev but looked substantially different from the commander who met with the press earlier this year. It was not possible to make a conclusive identification.

Wearing dark glasses and with a deep scar visible near his eye, he said he had been shot by elite Russian troops, lost an eye and had plastic surgery.

Spokesmen for Russia's Defense Ministry and the Federal Security Service declined comment.

Raduyev, a 28-year-old relative of Dudayev, led a Jan. 9 hostage-taking raid on Kizlyar in the ethnic republic of Dagestan. He seized dozens of hostages before negotiating safe passage back to Chechnya.

A German Foreign Ministry official speaking on condition of anonymity said it was unlikely Raduyev has stayed in Germany, as the authorities there closely follow Chechen movements in and out of the country.

Also Thursday, authorities reported the knife slaying of a Russian family in the western Chechen village of Assinovskaya and the discovery of the bodies of 10 Russian prisoners of war.

The bodies of four officers and six soldiers were found near the village of Khatuni in southeastern Chechnya, where Russian forces are pursuing an offensive against the separatists.

All were killed with shots to the back of their head after torture, said Igor Melnikov, a spokesman for the Russian military command. It was not immediately clear when the 10 were captured, but for a time they had been used as slave labor by the rebels, Melnikov told the ITAR-Tass news agency.

The slayings and a Russian offensive, which began after President Boris Yeltsin's re-election July 3, have shattered hopes for the negotiated peace Yeltsin had promised voters.

Typhoon strikes southern Japan

TOKYO (AP) — A powerful typhoon packing strong winds and dumping heavy rains hit southwestern Japan Thursday, leaving 11 people injured and disrupting sea and air transport.

The weather bureau said typhoon Eve, the sixth of the season, moved over the Satsuma peninsula in Kagoshima on the tip of Japan's southernmost main island of Kyushu around 1:30 p.m. with the maximum wind of 119 miles per hour.

It said Eve was located about 42 miles southwest of the city of Nobeoka, Miyazaki prefecture, as of 7:45 p.m. and winds had weakened to 76 miles per hour.

Eleven people were injured in storm-related incidents, Kyodo news agency reported.

Masaharu Hamaguchi of the Maritime Safety Agency, Japan's coast guards, said it is urging ships in all ports on Kyushu to evacuate.

Mexico's ruling party shuts off congressional investigation of Zedillo

MEXICO CITY (NYT) — Mexico's ruling party, making blunt use of powers it has long wielded, has shut down a congressional investigation that was examining the role of President Ernesto Zedillo in a government payment that had raised suspicions of corruption.

In a closed session of a congressional commission that is investigating official malfeasance, the nine members from the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party closed ranks to cancel the inquiry on Wednesday night, overriding the six opposition members.

It was one of several recent actions suggesting the growing ambivalence of Zedillo's government and party toward efforts to expose the chronic fiscal and electoral corruption and influence peddling of Mexico's political system.

Zedillo was linked to the $7-million payment, made by the government in 1989 to a corn-flour company owned by a wealthy government supporter, by one member of the commission, Adolfo Aguilar Zinser, an independent opposition deputy. After scrutinizing stacks of financial records and other documents, Aguilar Zinser charged that Zedillo, then a cabinet official overseeing the federal budget, cleared the way for the payment even though lower-ranking officials repeatedly recommended against it.

Zedillo strongly disputed Aguilar Zinser's findings. He said Aguilar Zinser had failed to examine other records that showed his decision had been fully supported by the appropriate authorities.

It was the first time that Zedillo was brushed by any of the scandals that have engulfed the former president, Carlos Salinas de Gortari, and his family. Polls show that Zedillo is considered more honest than his predecessor.

Even in Aguilar Zinser's account it was not clear that Zedillo had knowingly taken part in any corrupt dealing. The deputy did not accuse him directly but raised a host of questions to be explored by the commission.

The ruling-party majority on the commission presented an audit of the 1989 payment performed by a private accounting firm, which confirmed Zedillo's position that it was duly approved. Although the opposition deputies had doubts about the audit, the majority drove through the vote to accept it and declare the case closed.

The existence of the maverick investigation by Aguilar Zinser was almost as significant as the doubts he raised about Zedillo. It is the first time that a serious anti-corruption investigation has been undertaken in the Congress, where the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, has enjoyed overwhelming majorities for decades.

Opposition deputies were stunned that the PRI refused to allow any further inquiry into the questionable payment. Three commission members from a right-of-center party, not normally political allies of Aguilar Zinser, marched out of the midnight meeting in protest.

Zedillo has made the battle against government corruption a central tenet of his government. He has continued to back the attorney general's wide-ranging inquiries into the illicit financial dealings of Raul Salinas de Gortari, the brother of his predecessor. But he has had to contend with increasing reluctance from the PRI to support the anti-corruption campaign.

"The PRI in Congress does not want to go very far with the review of past accounts," said Alonso Lujambio, a leading political scientist who teaches at the Autonomous Technological Institute of Mexico. "They're afraid there may be very high price."

Midland Christian Fellowship will present the ministry of Don and Faith Dunlap on Sunday, July 21, at 6:00 p.m. The Dunlaps have been actively involved in a full-time traveling ministry over the past 24 years. From the beginning, they have been instrumental in leading people into a fresh approach to praise and worship, through the singing of Scripture music. The messages in song release people into the power of God's presence.

With their unique presentation of PREACHING, TEACHING, AND SINGING, Don and Faith are truly a powerful combination. They have adopted as their theme, "A Ministry of Life." This couple knows that the singing of Scriptures in ministry to the Lord, prepares the hearts of people for their main emphasis: the preaching and teaching of God's Word. Don's ministry spontaneously mixed with his own natural humor, makes his messages and their practical applications unforgettable!

Faith is a versatile and accomplished vocalist, singing a diversity of styles, giving her the ability to relate to people of various musical preferences. She is actively involved as a guest speaker for women's retreats across the country, as well as Women's Aglow, Flame, and other women's organizations. Her focus is to present practical godly principles, taught in parable form.

The Dunlaps have participated in many church conferences, camp meetings and interdenominational gatherings. They have been guests on TBN, the 700 Club, and other regional TV stations across the States. In addition, they have ministered in such countries as England, Wales, Belgium, Holland, Germany and Belize, Central America.

Guatemalan raspberries linked to cyclospora outbreak

ATLANTA (AP) — Raspberries from Guatemala are the likely suspects for a parasite called cyclospora that has sickened about 1,000 people in the United States and Canada this year, the government said Thursday.

But how and where the single-celled parasite got into the berries still isn't known, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said.

"Whether they got contaminated in Guatemala or on the way here is what we are trying to find out," said Sue Binder of the CDC's National Center for Infectious Diseases.

Cyclospora invades the small intestine and causes diarrhea, vomiting, weight loss, fatigue and muscle aches. It's treatable with antibiotics, but can last several weeks and cause dehydration while symptoms last.

Of 42 events where people got sick, raspberries were served at 12 of them, Binder said. Most of those raspberries were traced back to Guatemala.

"We are working with the Guatemalan government and growers to find out what happened this year," she said. "But their growing season is coming to an end. There are few Guatemalan raspberries in the marketplace right now, and soon there will be none."

In June, Texas health officials blamed a new outbreak of diarrhea on California strawberries. The CDC conducted laboratory tests and couldn't find any strawberries that were contaminated.

But the damage was already done, said Teresa Thorne, a spokeswoman for the California Strawberry Commission. Initial reports cost the industry $15 million to $20 million in the past four weeks.

"We have a lot of extremely frustrated people in California," Thorne said. "We were the victim of a food scare. You can take consumer confidence away in a day and it takes forever to restore."

That's why, Thorne said, consumers should not stop eating raspberries.

"It would be a tragedy if another West Coast commodity was impacted from this food scare," she said. "People can continue to enjoy raspberries. Just remember to read the labels."

And wash them, the CDC said. Washing produce may not entirely remove the parasite, but will cut the risk of getting it.

The FDA has been examining raspberry shipments from Guatemala since late June. CDC investigators will determine where the raspberries were grown, and investigate irrigation systems, harvesting practices, and whether they could have become contaminated while being packaged or shipped.

Conservation groups file lawsuit against EPA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three conservation groups sued the Environmental Protection Agency Thursday, accusing it of failing to develop effective programs to control air pollution that leads to poisoned lakes and rivers.

Such pollution includes some of the chemicals most harmful to people and wildlife — such as mercury, lead and dioxins — and their effects are "many and pernicious," said Mark Van Putten, president of the National Wildlife Federation.

The threat to human health includes cancer, kidney and liver poisoning, respiratory problems, nerve damage and nervous system disorders, reproductive illnesses and developmental difficulties, he said.

"EPA's middle name is 'Protection,' but maybe it should be 'Procrastination,'" said Van Putten. "There is no excuse for bureaucratic inaction when human lives are at stake."

"Industry pollution goes up smokestacks into the sky and comes down in rain and snow, poisoning our lakes, rivers and coastal areas," he said. NWF said the pollutants come from many sources such as auto exhaust, incinerators, steel and chemical manufacturing and paper production.

The lawsuit filed in federal court by NWF, the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund and the Chesapeake Bay Foundation said the EPA was late in filing one report on the link between air and water pollution and failed to file another report required by November 1995. Both reports were required under 1990 Great Waters Program amendments to the federal Clean Air Act.

"EPA's efforts so far have been too little too late and it's unfortunate that (we) ... have had to go to federal court and ask a federal judge to order EPA to comply with the law," said Van Putten.

Congress could make mortgage plan permanent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros asked Congress on Thursday to make permanent a pilot program that has extended more than 16,000 government-backed "reverse" mortgages to elderly homeowners.

Cisneros said legislation submitted to Congress would continue the Federal Housing Administration program beyond its scheduled expiration date in 2000. The bill also removes the 50,000 limit on the number of mortgages that could be issued.

The program permits qualified homeowners who are at least 62 years old to borrow against the value of their home and receive payments month-to-month or in a lump sum. When the home is sold or the owner dies, the private lender recovers the amount of the loan plus interest.

Cisneros said the program is a boon for seniors who own homes but have insufficient income in their later years. The money helps many seniors to continue living in their homes or to pay for such things as bills, home repairs and travel.

But Cisneros said the cap on mortgages and the temporary nature of the program have made some lenders wary of offering the service.

More than 12 million homeowners age 62 and older would be eligible to participate in the expanded reverse mortgage program, Cisneros said, noting that the numbers will grow with the aging baby boom generation.

"This is not another government grant program," he said at a news conference where the American Association for Retired Persons, the nation's leading seniors' organization, signaled its support for the legislation.

"This is simply giving people access to the money they have invested in their homes," Cisneros said.

Among Americans age 65 and older, 79.1 percent own their homes.

HUD also plans to spend $200,000 to publicize the mortgage program.

The announcement is the latest in HUD's effort to increase the national home ownership rate to an all-time high of 67.5 percent by 2000. HUD has recently announced home ownership efforts targeted toward women, Hispanics and renters.

Pies recalled for egg ingredient

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nestle Frozen Food Co. is recalling about 21,000 packages of a Lean Cuisine turkey and vegetable pie because the labels neglect to say that the product has eggs, to which some people are allergic, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The recall covers all packages of "Lean Cuisine Turkey & Country Vegetable Pie" with the code 6159NH P-695 on the side. The product, made in Solon, Ohio, was sent to stores in 18 states.

Customers with egg allergies should return the product to the store where it was bought.

The department said the pies were made using an old recipe containing egg but in packages for a new version without eggs.

The pies were sold in California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

White House employee refuses to testify

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee will go to court if needed to get documents held by the White House worker who gathered FBI background files on hundreds of Reagan and Bush employees, the panel's chairman said Thursday.

In addition, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, is likely to rule soon on the validity of Anthony Marceca's Fifth Amendment claims, which also could lead to the Senate going to court to compel his testimony. Hatch said Marceca's constitutional right not to testify may not apply because he already gave evidence on the FBI files to a House panel.

With the Clinton administration and Secret Service at odds over the files debacle, Hatch's committee got no answers from Marceca in private questioning Thursday.

Hatch and others said the former temporary White House employee repeatedly refused to answer by asserting his constitutional privilege against incriminating himself. Marceca and his attorneys also refused to surrender documents the panel subpoenaed.

Marceca "refused to answer any questions or produce any documents, in an unconditional manner," Hatch told reporters after the hour-long session. He said Marceca was asked "literally dozens of questions" about his collection of the FBI files and other matters.

Marceca, a civilian Army investigator, amassed the FBI background files while on temporary assignment at the White House early in the Clinton administration. He had twice before invoked the Fifth Amendment before congressional panels.

Some Republican lawmakers have portrayed Marceca as a scapegoat in the affair, fingered by White House to cover for the actions of top Clinton administration officials. They have rejected the White House explanation that the files were collected by mistake caused by Marceca's unwitting use of outdated lists of pass holders provided by the Secret Service.

Secret Service agents have testified that the presidential guard unit could not have provided the lists that Marceca used.

Marceca is the "No. 1 fall guy in this entire caper," Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said after he emerged from the questioning session.

Hatch asserted that Marceca's right to silence — which at any rate might not apply in this case — does not extend to documents and computer discs sought by the committee.

"We will take every step to obtain those documents legally," he said.

Asked later for elaboration, Hatch said "we'll have to go to court" if necessary, but added he believes a solution can be found to avoid that.

Philadelphia police try to apprehend serial child molester

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A monster is on the loose — snatching little girls from their homes, usually at night in their sleep, often molesting them, and then dropping them off on sidewalks near their homes.

Parents were keeping close watch over their children Thursday after the fourth abduction: that of a 5-year-old girl grabbed while she slept in the living room couch at a friend's house.

"She was in shock. She was really in shock," said Liz Reyes, who lives in the house with her own children and fiancé. "She kept saying it was a monster."

Authorities said Thursday that their only lead was the girls' description of a dark-skinned caucasian or light-skinned black man.

Three of the four children were molested. One little girl was blind.

Before dawn Wednesday, police said a man crawled through a window into a house across the street from a neighborhood pool, snatched the 5-year-old, molested her and returned her about an hour later. Other children and adults were sleeping nearby.

Reyes said she and her fiancé realized the child was missing after the kidnapper left through the front door, setting off an alarm that awakened them.

The girl, who suffered some cuts and bruises, was expected to be released from the hospital on Thursday, Reyes said, adding that the child would need counseling.

"As soon as she saw me, she gave me a hug. I told her I loved her, and all her family was around her," she said. "She was talking. She was eating pizza."

The four girls, ages 5 to 8, have been snatched since June 28 from homes in the city's Feltonville and Kensington sections, both close-knit, working-class neighborhoods.

Police warned parents to keep their homes secure at night, a tall order in houses without air conditioning in the hot, humid weather.

On Wednesday, for instance, the attacker removed a window fan before creeping into the house.

In another case, a girl was taken from her parents' bedroom as they slept close by in another bed.

In each case, the assailant returned the child in roughly 60 to 90 minutes.

Adults were present and sleeping each time except once; in that case the adults were awake and in another part of the house.

"It's really scary that someone can walk into your house and get away with your child," said Joanne Maier, who has forbidden her 8-year-old daughter to leave the house alone until police find the culprit.

Parents were wondering why police hadn't notified them before Wednesday's attack.

"This is terrible because we never knew something like this was going on," Reyes said.

Attack squirrel claims streets

WESTERVILLE, Ohio (AP) — This is one squirrelly suspect.

Police have set traps, sent out special patrols, even cornered the perpetrator on a porch and once, under a car. No luck.

They can't catch the elusive predator — a gray squirrel that has attacked at least eight people during the past three weeks.

The furry suspect with beady black eyes has taken over a tree-lined neighborhood in this Columbus suburb, lying in wait on porches and park benches.

"It's just impossible to catch a squirrel," said police Sgt. Mike Hatz, who cornered the critter on a porch and underneath a car with no luck.

Hatz saw the squirrel leap at one victim and bite her leg while he was patrolling the area last week.

The squirrel stays in a two-block area, and appears to be friendly, inching closer and closer before making its move.

"Then he just zooms up your leg like it was a tree," Vicki Albright said, recounting her 13-year-old daughter's description of how the rodent bit her on the leg. Albright says the squirrel has also chased her other children.

None of the injuries has been too serious, but nearly all the victims have taken antibiotics to ward off any diseases the squirrel may carry. Most squirrels don't carry rabies.

Since the squirrel seems so comfortable approaching humans — and didn't make an appearance until school got out — officials think it may have belonged to a student at Otterbein College.

NBC, cable shows dominate Emmy Award nominations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC and its explosive hospital drama "ER" loomed as big in Thursday's Emmy nominations as they do in the ratings. But good things come in small packages, too: A&E found that out.

Specialized cable channels like A&E received bids in top categories, including best miniseries.

"ER" drew a leading 17 nominations, including best drama series and nods for its stars George Clooney, Anthony Edwards, Sherry Stringfield and Noah Wyle.

The Emmys also were good medicine for CBS' "Chicago Hope," in second place with 15 bids, and a breakthrough for the acclaimed Andre Braugher of "Homicide," finally a best-actor nominee after three years with the series.

Garry Shandling, who has been nominated time after time but has never won, figured he might go ambulance chasing himself if he doesn't win this year with 12 nominations for "The Larry Sanders Show."

"I'm going to make sure that we do some shows where Larry has heart surgery next year so maybe we can pick up some extra Emmy nominations. I think we need to do more medical stories," Shandling said.

Nominations for "ER" included the new President's Award for programs of social value, the only network show so honored in an era of increasing concern about sex and violence on TV. Other nominees in the fledgling category were drawn from cable TV — another sign of that medium's increasing significance.

NBC, the most-watched network last season, drew a leading 88 bids for the 48th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards, with multiple-nominees "Frasier," "Seinfeld," the miniseries "Gulliver's Travels" and, of course, "ER" leading the way.

Cable's HBO nearly rammed its way into a second-place finish with 66 total nominations, just one behind CBS' 67 bids and the second consecutive year it surpassed a major network, ABC.

ABC took fourth place with 55 nominations, followed by Fox Broadcasting's 17 and PBS with 12.

"Believe me, you never get weary of these nominations," said Steven Bochco, the Emmy-winning producer whose series "NYPD Blue" and "Murder One" combined for 18 bids.

Specialized cable channels like A&E received bids in top categories, too, including best miniseries.

Emmy-winning comic Tracey Ullman, who got seven nominations for her HBO shows, read several nominee names during the sleepy, predawn announcement ritual at the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences headquarters in North Hollywood. The early hour is designed to accommodate East Coast morning shows.

"I'm honored, especially coming from England. You think, 'Wow! I've become a part of the whole American television scene,'" said Ullman.

The news was not as good for the cast of NBC's "Friends." In the middle of a joint campaign for higher salaries, the stars failed to garner a single nomination, although the show was nominated as best comedy series.

Also conspicuously absent from NBC's "ER" took the lead in nominations for this year's Emmy Award nominations, with several cable network shows placing high.

The nominations were "Home Improvement" star Tim Allen and Roseanne.

Two prominent actors were missing by choice: Candice Bergen, a five-time winner for "Murphy Brown," and John Goodman, a previous nominee for "Roseanne," declined to be considered this year for honors. Bergen wanted to give others a chance; Goodman felt his volume of work on the show didn't warrant recognition.

Actresses from two canceled shows appeared in the best dramatic actress category: Angela Lansbury of CBS' "Murder, She Wrote" and Kathy Baker of "Picket Fences." "This is my last chance, my last hurrah," Lansbury, nominated 11 times before for her series without a win, said by telephone from her Los Angeles-area home.

The Emmy Awards will be broadcast Sept. 8 on ABC from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium, with Paul Reiser as host. A ceremony will be held the day before to present awards in technical categories.

"WOW! What a difference we have seen in our son, Wade. He has only been attending Hillcrest for 3 short months, and already we have seen such a turn-around in him. No longer do we spend 4 to 5 hours each night trying to get the assignments done.

How well we remember the fights and arguments over that problem. When Wade started in public school I began trying to get him to understand that every learner must take responsibility for his education. Since Hillcrest has entered our lives I actually believe that he may be beginning to understand my statement.

Your school and teaching methods have helped Wade become a happy child again. Thank you from the bottom of a mother's heart."

Fears rise after latest disaster

Even though federal safety and anti-terrorism experts were conducting parallel investigations Thursday into the explosion and crash of a TWA jetliner off the coast of New York Wednesday night, President Clinton was warning Americans not to jump to premature conclusions.

"I want to caution the American people we have no evidence," said Clinton, "we have no evidence on this flight that would indicate the cause of the accident."

Despite Clinton's cautionary note, there was ample reason for Americans to jump to the conclusion many were making following the TWA explosion in which all 229 passengers and crew were feared dead. In telephone calls received following the explosion and crash, various individuals were claiming responsibility.

Additionally, during the past year security was tightened at airports around the nation in what federal officials said was a precautionary move. Yet the Wednesday night explosion and crash caused more public concern of a possible terroristic attack than any recent air disaster. One reason was the way witnesses described the airliner as exploding in a big orange fireball.

Comments by former Transportation Department Inspector General Mary Shiao concerning lax security at some airports also raised public concern. Shiao said her staff was able to penetrate airport security in a recent test at some airports she would not name. She said they were able to "get out on the tarmac, get on planes, get in cockpits and witness a number of test devices go through security." She added they were troubled by what seemed to be "just plain lax attitude."

While not jumping to conclusions, it's clear that many Americans are concerned following this latest disaster that the nation's airport security may not be what it should.

Double standard applied in Travelgate

WASHINGTON — A confidential government document reveals that the Justice Department and the FBI launched an intensive investigation of Clinton friend Harry Thomason, but declined to prosecute after failing to uncover evidence that federal conflict of interest laws were violated in connection with Travelgate.

Nothing in the 24-page "prosecution memo," which we have obtained, supports suggestions by Rep. William F. Clinger, R-Pa., chairman of the Government Reform and Oversight Committee, that Thomason's close political ties to the Clintons influenced the career prosecutors who were exploring Travelgate.

Justice Department officials also declined to prosecute Darnell Martens, a Thomason business associate. Seven longtime employees of the White House travel office, who were fired in the early days of the Clinton administration, recently filed a lawsuit against Thomason and Martens, who are accused of planting rumors of corruption and orchestrating the firings.

Former travel office chief Billy Dale was acquitted last year on charges of embezzlement, but has acknowledged innocently depositing travel office funds in his personal bank account, a move his lawyer called a "disastrous decision."

White House memos and other testimony obtained by Clinger's committee indicate that Thomason had urged the firings in conversations with senior White House officials. Attorneys for the fired workers claim in their suit that Thomason and Martens wanted to wrest control of the travel office, which handles press transportation, for their own aviation company.

Clinger spokesman Ed Amorosi charges a double-standard in the way the Justice Department handled the Dale and Thomason investigations.

"(Clinger) would say that the contrast in the pursuit of the Dale indictment versus the Thomason (investigation) was quite different," Amorosi told us. "One was more aggressive than the other."

Thomason's attorney, Robert Bennett, has countered in court papers that Clinger and Dale have joined forces in a partisan effort to discredit President Clinton. Bennett cites their joint appearances at political press conferences and Dale's attendance at a Republican fundraiser.

One of the most potentially explosive allegations leveled by Republicans has dealt with alleged White House or Justice Department stonewalling in the investigation of Thomason and Martens. Although Thomason's exceptional entree to the Clintons was well-documented in the prosecution memo, much of Justice's decision rested on the definitions:

Could Thomason be tagged as a government employee, or "de facto government employee," which are prerequisites for filing such cases?

"Our investigation disclosed that (Thomason) made no decisions concerning how the (1993 White House) inquiry was to be conducted and did not participate in the decision to terminate the (travel office) employees," the prosecution memo reads.

White House aide Rahm Emanuel asked Thomason, who is a Hollywood television producer, to come to the White House to "better use the White House for public relations events and improve the President's image." Thomason's application for a temporary "hard pass" to the White House in March 1993 had "RUSH-ASAP" handwritten at the bottom of the form. It also indicated his status was that of volunteer.

But the prosecution memo underscores there was "insufficient evidence" that he performed any federal function or answered to federal employees — two circumstances that might have compromised his volunteer status and made him more vulnerable to conflict of interest charges. The fact that Thomason had use of a desk, telephone and computer in the East Wing did not alter the department's view, since volunteers are often afforded work space elsewhere in the White House.

"As a close friend of the president and Mrs. Clinton, Thomason on occasion provided informal advice to the president," the memo reads. "He appears to have provided some thoughts concerning the president's first State of the Union address in February 1993 and offered guidance, along with actress Markie Post, about how best to stage presidential events and use the symbols of the presidency. This is the type of advice that presidents routinely seek from friends and informal advisers outside of the government."

WILLIAM MURCHISON

All may have equal rights; not all 'rights' equal

One reason moral problems seem to wind up in Washington, begging solution, is ... people like Gerry Studts.

Studts is congressman from Massachusetts. He's homosexual. Being homosexual, he professes not to fathom his colleagues' vote for the Defense of Marriage Act. The act, which President Bill Clinton says he would sign, disallows states from recognizing homosexual marriage, whether Hawaii recognizes it or not during the next few months.

Finding himself on the losing end of a 342-67 vote — the political equivalent of Hurricane Bertha — Rep. Gerry Studts was mournful but firm. "This is the last unfinished chapter of civil rights in this country," he declared. "We are going to prevail."

The last chapter of civil rights? Excuse me? Same-sex marriage is a right of the same magnitude as freedom to speak, freedom to worship? Studts, exercising his free speech rights, says, yeah, it is. Moral traditionalists, exercising their constitutional right of reply, should make known, volubly, that the congressman is full of beans.

However, the point he makes won't go away. The congressman is not dreaming up this stuff.

Murchison

He plucks it from the cultural atmosphere. It is how we talk, how we think.

Americans are arguing over what matters to them. A couple of centuries ago, what mattered was liberty. What matters today is license. Oh, you think they're the same? Not hardly, as we say in Texas. Liberty, the summum bonum of the American Revolution, exists over the political authorities, who, given a little encouragement, might take it away. This is why we have a written Constitution — to make sure no one takes away our rights as members of the polity.

But not everything is a right. That's what we can't get through our skulls. The '90s offers us a charming definition of a right: It's whatever I want. This you might call the spoiled-brat definition of rights: rights as a big paper bag in which we collect satisfactions of every kind. Economic satisfactions. Personal satisfactions. Sexual satisfactions.

"I can't get no satisfaction," Mick Jagger used to wail. Well, of course not! Old fogies kept denying entitlement on the basis of want. Maybe what you wanted wasn't good for the community. Or for you.

So with the marriage laws — getting back to Studts. The marriage laws, here and everywhere, enshrine the historic conviction that marriage exists only — only — between two people of different sexes. Why? Because that's what's demonstrably good, and nothing else measures up. And among the basic civil rights is the right to live in a society that enshrines and protects the good.

On what grand, sweeping basis is society permitted to put forth such a judgment? On this basis that the moral experience of society — something a trifle older than such propaganda as must get passed around at a Studts rally — maintains that the fierce power of sexual appetite is effectively retained and appeased only within heterosexual marriage. It's OK for Studts to waggle his finger and instruct us otherwise. No doubt it would be equally OK for a columnist to assert that a trained flea would make a better congressman than most of the available talent. That doesn't mean, a la Studts, that to assert a right is to compel recognition of that right.

The larger society doesn't wish to oppress, repress, mess up, choose your favorite word, anyone. What it wishes is to maintain the ancient truth that all "values," as we preciously call moral norms, aren't the same — that some are right and healthy, others wrong and dangerous.

The Defense of Marriage Act signifies this wish, nothing more — though, when you have to hope Congress passes such an act, you know something really is out of kilter. A moral problem that begs solution by politicians is the last thing we want. It's also, thanks to Studts & Co., the kind of problem that confronts us now, this minute.

Dole brought down by reluctant Powell

If Bob Dole were still holding out hope that Colin Powell would agree to be his running mate, the prospect seems to have been dashed to the rocks after an interview ... Powell gave (recently).

The retired Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman not only said he would not run on the GOP ticket, he indicated that he did not intend to campaign or raise money for Republican candidates. The news of that reluctance must have hit ... Dole like a splash of ice water in the face. He had envisioned taking the very popular ... Powell with him on campaign trips. ...

Powell said in the interview ... that he is pleased to be a Republican and that he intends to vote for ... Dole. But that likely will be small comfort to ... Dole, who obviously had hoped for much more.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. needs to declare independence from Israel

What's wrong with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's demand that the Palestinian National Authority prevent terrorism as a condition for continuing the peace process?

Well, let's ask ourselves some questions. Has Israel, at any time during its modern history, been able to prevent terrorism? No. Has the United States with all its massive resources been able to prevent terrorism? No. Has Germany, France or Great Britain? No.

Why then should the Palestinian National Authority, pathetically short of resources, practically broke, be able to do what Israel, the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany cannot do?

It can't, of course. The Palestine Liberation Organization has given up terrorism, denounced terrorism, and tried to prevent terrorists or others from committing acts of terrorism. That's all they can do.

For Netanyahu to hold the PLO and the Palestinian National Authority to a standard that not even Israel and the United States can meet is obviously insane. It is just a ploy so that he can pretend to be for peace while not actually pursuing peace. He is just setting up the Palestinian National Authority to fail so that he can claim he has an excuse not to make peace.

What Americans ought to be ashamed of is how eagerly American politicians and the press are embracing this sophistry. They are doing so because it gives them an excuse to do what they want to do anyway, which is kiss the foot of the Israeli lobby. Justice and a future for a poor Palestinian kid in Gaza doesn't stand much of a chance when Americans have to choose between their conscience and their own cowardice and venality.

Many moderate Palestinians suspect that right-wing Israelis in the security services conveniently turned their heads so that terrorists could set off the bombs in the buses prior to the Israeli election. Having no means of conducting an investigation of Israelis they can't prove it, but apply the old Roman standard: Who benefited from the terrorist bombs that were set off in territory under Israeli control?

Only Netanyahu and his right-wing allies. The Palestinians and Shimon Peres and his allies, who were pursuing peace, lost. The last thing in the world Yasser Arafat wanted prior to the Israeli election was an act of terror that would discredit him and Peres and help Netanyahu.

Don't be so naive this late in the 20th century to think that people won't sacrifice innocent lives for the sake of political objectives. It has happened distressingly often in this, the bloodiest and most evil century in the history of man.

Reese

What Americans ought to be concerned about is why their own government so slavishly serves the interests of a little foreign country seven thousand miles away.

Politicians who cry the need to balance the budget continue to vote for foreign aid. American presidents who say the United Nations is so important their sons and daughters must die to enforce its resolutions routinely tell the United Nations, hands off Israel. There are, in case you didn't know it, existing U.N. Security Council resolutions declaring Israel's annexation of Jerusalem null and void, ordering it to return the Golan Heights, to get out of Lebanon, etc.

The next time some politician tells you that your son or daughter must risk their lives in the service of the United Nations, ask them why they have such a double standard. Ask them why it is wrong for Iraq to seize territory by conquest but OK for Israel? Ask them why they've never given the survivors of the USS Liberty, attacked by Israeli planes and torpedoes, a congressional hearing? Ask them to explain why Israeli intelligence agents blew up the U.S. Information Agency library in Cairo?

I hope one day Americans regain their independence.

Dole speaks to students, parents about new scholarship opportunities

MILWAUKEE (AP) — In the latest election-year bidding on education, Bob Dole offered school children a "G.I. Bill" of their own Thursday — $2.5 billion in federal scholarships to their choice of public, private and religious schools.

The Republican presidential candidate cast President Clinton as a coddler of the rich for his opposition to similar school-choice initiatives.

"The federal government should be giving fewer orders and offering more options," Dole said in announcing his "opportunity scholarships" for some 4 million elementary and high school students.

He likened the scholarships to the military's G.I. Bill, a program whose grants for education Dole took advantage of after World War II. "I want all of our children to have the same opportunities," he said.

Speaking to an approving audience of students and parents in Milwaukee, where a similar state school-choice program is already in place, Dole blamed Clinton for last year's failure of a plan to give District of Columbia students taxpayer help with private school tuitions.

"The president has said, in effect, 'If you're poor, stay in your place ... you should have a choice if you have the money or if you have the power or the position or the prestige,'" Dole said. "That's not the way it ought to work in America and that's why I'm on your side in this issue."

He cast his scholarships as a matter of fairness, putting poor students on equal footing with those who can already afford private schools.

"This is something we can do right now to make the American dream a reality for everyone," Dole said.

His proposal would give low- and middle-income students cash scholarships of at least $1,000 for elementary school, and $1,500 for high school. Last month, Clinton made students an offer of his own: a $1,500 tax credit for the first two years of college.

In recent weeks, the president has also offered schools billions of dollars to make building repairs and design programs to stop truancy and violence.

Clinton supports allowing parents to choose among public schools, but is against using tax money to send children to private or religious schools. Education interest groups, including the powerful teachers' unions, also oppose Dole-like plans, contending they would drain scarce public funds from the public school system.

"The answer is not running away from struggling or failing schools, but rolling up our sleeves to work together to create the best possible public schools," said Keith Geiger, president of the National Education Association.

"Bob Dole wants to tear down public education by pitting teachers against parents and dramatically reducing our investment in public schools," said Joe Lockhart, press secretary to the Clinton campaign.

Critics also fear such "scholarships" would drain talent from the public system if private schools accepted only top students and left under-achievers languishing in the public schools.

Dole aides acknowledged that using federal money to subsidize tuition at religious schools raised constitutional questions on the separation of church and state, but said they felt confident his proposal would stand up to any court challenge.

But the proposal also had supporters.

"There is no question that Dole is on the right track," said Jeanne Allen, director of the Center for Education Reform, a nonprofit national school reform advocacy group. School choice is the right choice and low-income students need more school options, she said.

The call for greater parental control and choice in education — and especially the inclusion of sectarian schools in that choice — also promised to win Dole grassroots support from social and religious conservatives.

Education is an issue that mobilizes the grass roots and fuels volunteer phone banks and other get-out-the-vote efforts, said Mike Russell, spokesman for the 1.7 million-member Christian Coalition. The group listed vouchers and school choice among its Top Ten priorities for the year.

"We have found this to be one of the issues that really galvanizes, mobilizes, serves as a real catalyst for people to get involved and work hard," Russell said.

Under Dole's scholarship plan, selected states initially would be awarded grants to design and implement their own school-choice programs within certain federal guidelines.

House approves measure to overhaul welfare after two votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved a bill Thursday that would reverse decades of anti-poverty policy, turning the federal guarantee of assistance to the poor into a time-limited, work-oriented program largely run by the states.

The measure, approved 256-170, represented the House's third try after two previous bills were vetoed by President Clinton. This one was closer to what he has said he can accept, but the food stamp limits and budget savings it included meant a third veto was still possible.

The vote was short of the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override a veto. The Senate, too, was debating the bill.

"It's strong welfare reform, and it's what the American people have wanted for years," Ways and Means Chairman Bill Archer, R-Texas, said as debate opened. "Families on welfare deserve much, much more than the sad status quo."

Key White House criticisms of the Republican bill included the $59 billion in savings it envisions over six years — much of it coming from food stamps and from eliminating benefits to many legal immigrants — and its prohibition on states using federal block grant money to provide vouchers for benefits for children after their parents reach the time limits.

But even the Democratic alternative shared many features with the GOP bill.

Clinton, who vowed during his 1992 presidential campaign to "end welfare as we know it," has urged Congress to send him a bill before recessing in August.

Still, he is not afraid to veto a third measure if it fails to meet his standards, his spokesman and congressional Democratic leaders say.

The Senate, by voice vote, followed the lead of the House and the wishes of Clinton by cutting Medicaid changes out of the welfare bill.

House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio, predicted Clinton would sign this bill, saying: "The third time, they say in lore, is always a charm."

Clinton contended the previous measures provided insufficient protections for the most vulnerable Americans.

But Kasich said, "At some point, people are going to have to learn how to help themselves." There are protections for those who cannot do so, he said.

The bill would end a family's welfare benefits after two years unless the able-bodied family head gets a job. It would limit lifetime welfare benefits to five years per family while letting states grant hardship exemptions for up to 20 percent of recipients. It also would replace four major welfare programs with block grants to states, which would get more freedom in how they spend the money.

The House defeated, 258-168, a bipartisan measure supported by the White House and offered as the Democratic alternative. It would have limited savings to $53 billion, eliminated the option of food stamp block grants, allowed children of legal immigrants to get benefits and let states use block grant money for vouchers after parents' benefits ended.

Despite general agreement between Republicans and Clinton on the need to push welfare recipients toward work, differences remain in the details. Whether they are willing to make the compromises necessary to reconcile them in an election year remains to be seen.

Clinton testifies he never promised jobs for political support

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Summoned for a second time to defend political supporters at a Whitewater trial, President Clinton told jurors in videotaped testimony today he never promised state jobs to two bankers in return for their substantial political support.

"What is not permissible is to promise any official act in return for a contribution," the president, appearing relaxed and confident, testified. "That didn't happen in this case."

The jurors in the federal court trial watched raptly as Clinton's image was projected on a 42-inch monitor during 95 minutes of edited testimony, which was taped at the White House during four hours of questioning July 7.

Clinton acknowledged that the two defendants, Herby Branscum Jr. and Robert M. Hill, raised money for him, and that he owed more than $100,000 to their rural bank after the 1990 election. The loans were repaid in late 1992.

But the president said he had no "specific recollection" of a Dec. 14, 1990 meeting at which Hill and an associate delivered $15,000 in contributions to Clinton and discussed Branscum's appointment to the powerful State Highway Commission.

A earlier witness testified that Clinton thumbed through the checks, then brought up the appointment, which was made five weeks later.

Clinton said "it wouldn't surprise me" that he would meticulously go through each check so that he could later sign thank you letters to the donors.

Branscum and Hill, the owners of Perry County Bank, are charged with concealing from the IRS more than $50,000 in cash withdrawals the Clinton campaign made on the eve of the 1990 primary and general elections for get-out-the-vote activities.

They also are accused of misapplying bank funds by using the bank's money to reimburse themselves and others for political contributions, including checks to Clinton's 1990 campaign and his 1991 presidential exploratory committee.

Prosecutors allege the bankers' motivation was to curry political favor with Clinton.

But Clinton repeatedly insisted Branscum was named to the Highway Commission and Hill reappointed to the state Banking Commission because they were qualified.

"I knew him and trusted him," Clinton said of Branscum. He

Uribe running for commission seat to do away with it

■ Former state senator challenging Carole Rylander for Texas Railroad Commission seat.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Rio Grande Valley attorney and former state Sen. Hector Uribe is running for a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission so he can do away with his own job.

Trying to unseat current Railroad Commissioner Carole Rylander, Uribe said he agrees with her plans to deregulate most independent oil producers, but said her plans "don't go far enough in terms of unchaining the industry."

Uribe thinks that the TRC is a dinosaur and has very little use, since it has little authority now to regulate railroads because the federal government has taken over that duty nationwide.

Throughout its history, the commission has been charged with overseeing a massive oil and gas industry and intrastate transportation. But with a much smaller oil and gas industry statewide and with most of its authority taken over by the national government, there is no reason to keep paying the agency's massive budget for its hundreds of employees, he said.

"Roughnecks do more for Texas oil and gas than railroad commissioners who get paid 79 grand a year to soak the industry for millions of campaign dollars," the Democrat said.

"When a well stops producing, you can cap it — that moment has arrived for the commissioners," Uribe said.

The Texas Department of Public Safety should take over the remaining transportation functions of the agency, then the commissioners and their multi-million dollar staffs would not be needed he said.

The TRC should be renamed the Texas Oil & Gas Agency and should be run by a gubernatorial appointee, who would be confirmed by the Senate, he said.

The only duties retained by this much smaller and less expensive agency should be the support of the oil and gas industry, the conservation of the state's natural resources, and protection of the environment, Uribe said.

"The Texas oil and gas industry has shrunk. Now it's time to shrink the bureaucracy that regulates it," he said.

"... Few Texans realize it, but these days the Railroad Commission has little to do with the railroads. In fact, the main job of this sprawling, $52 million bureaucracy of 850 people is to regulate and promote our state's oil and gas industry," he said.

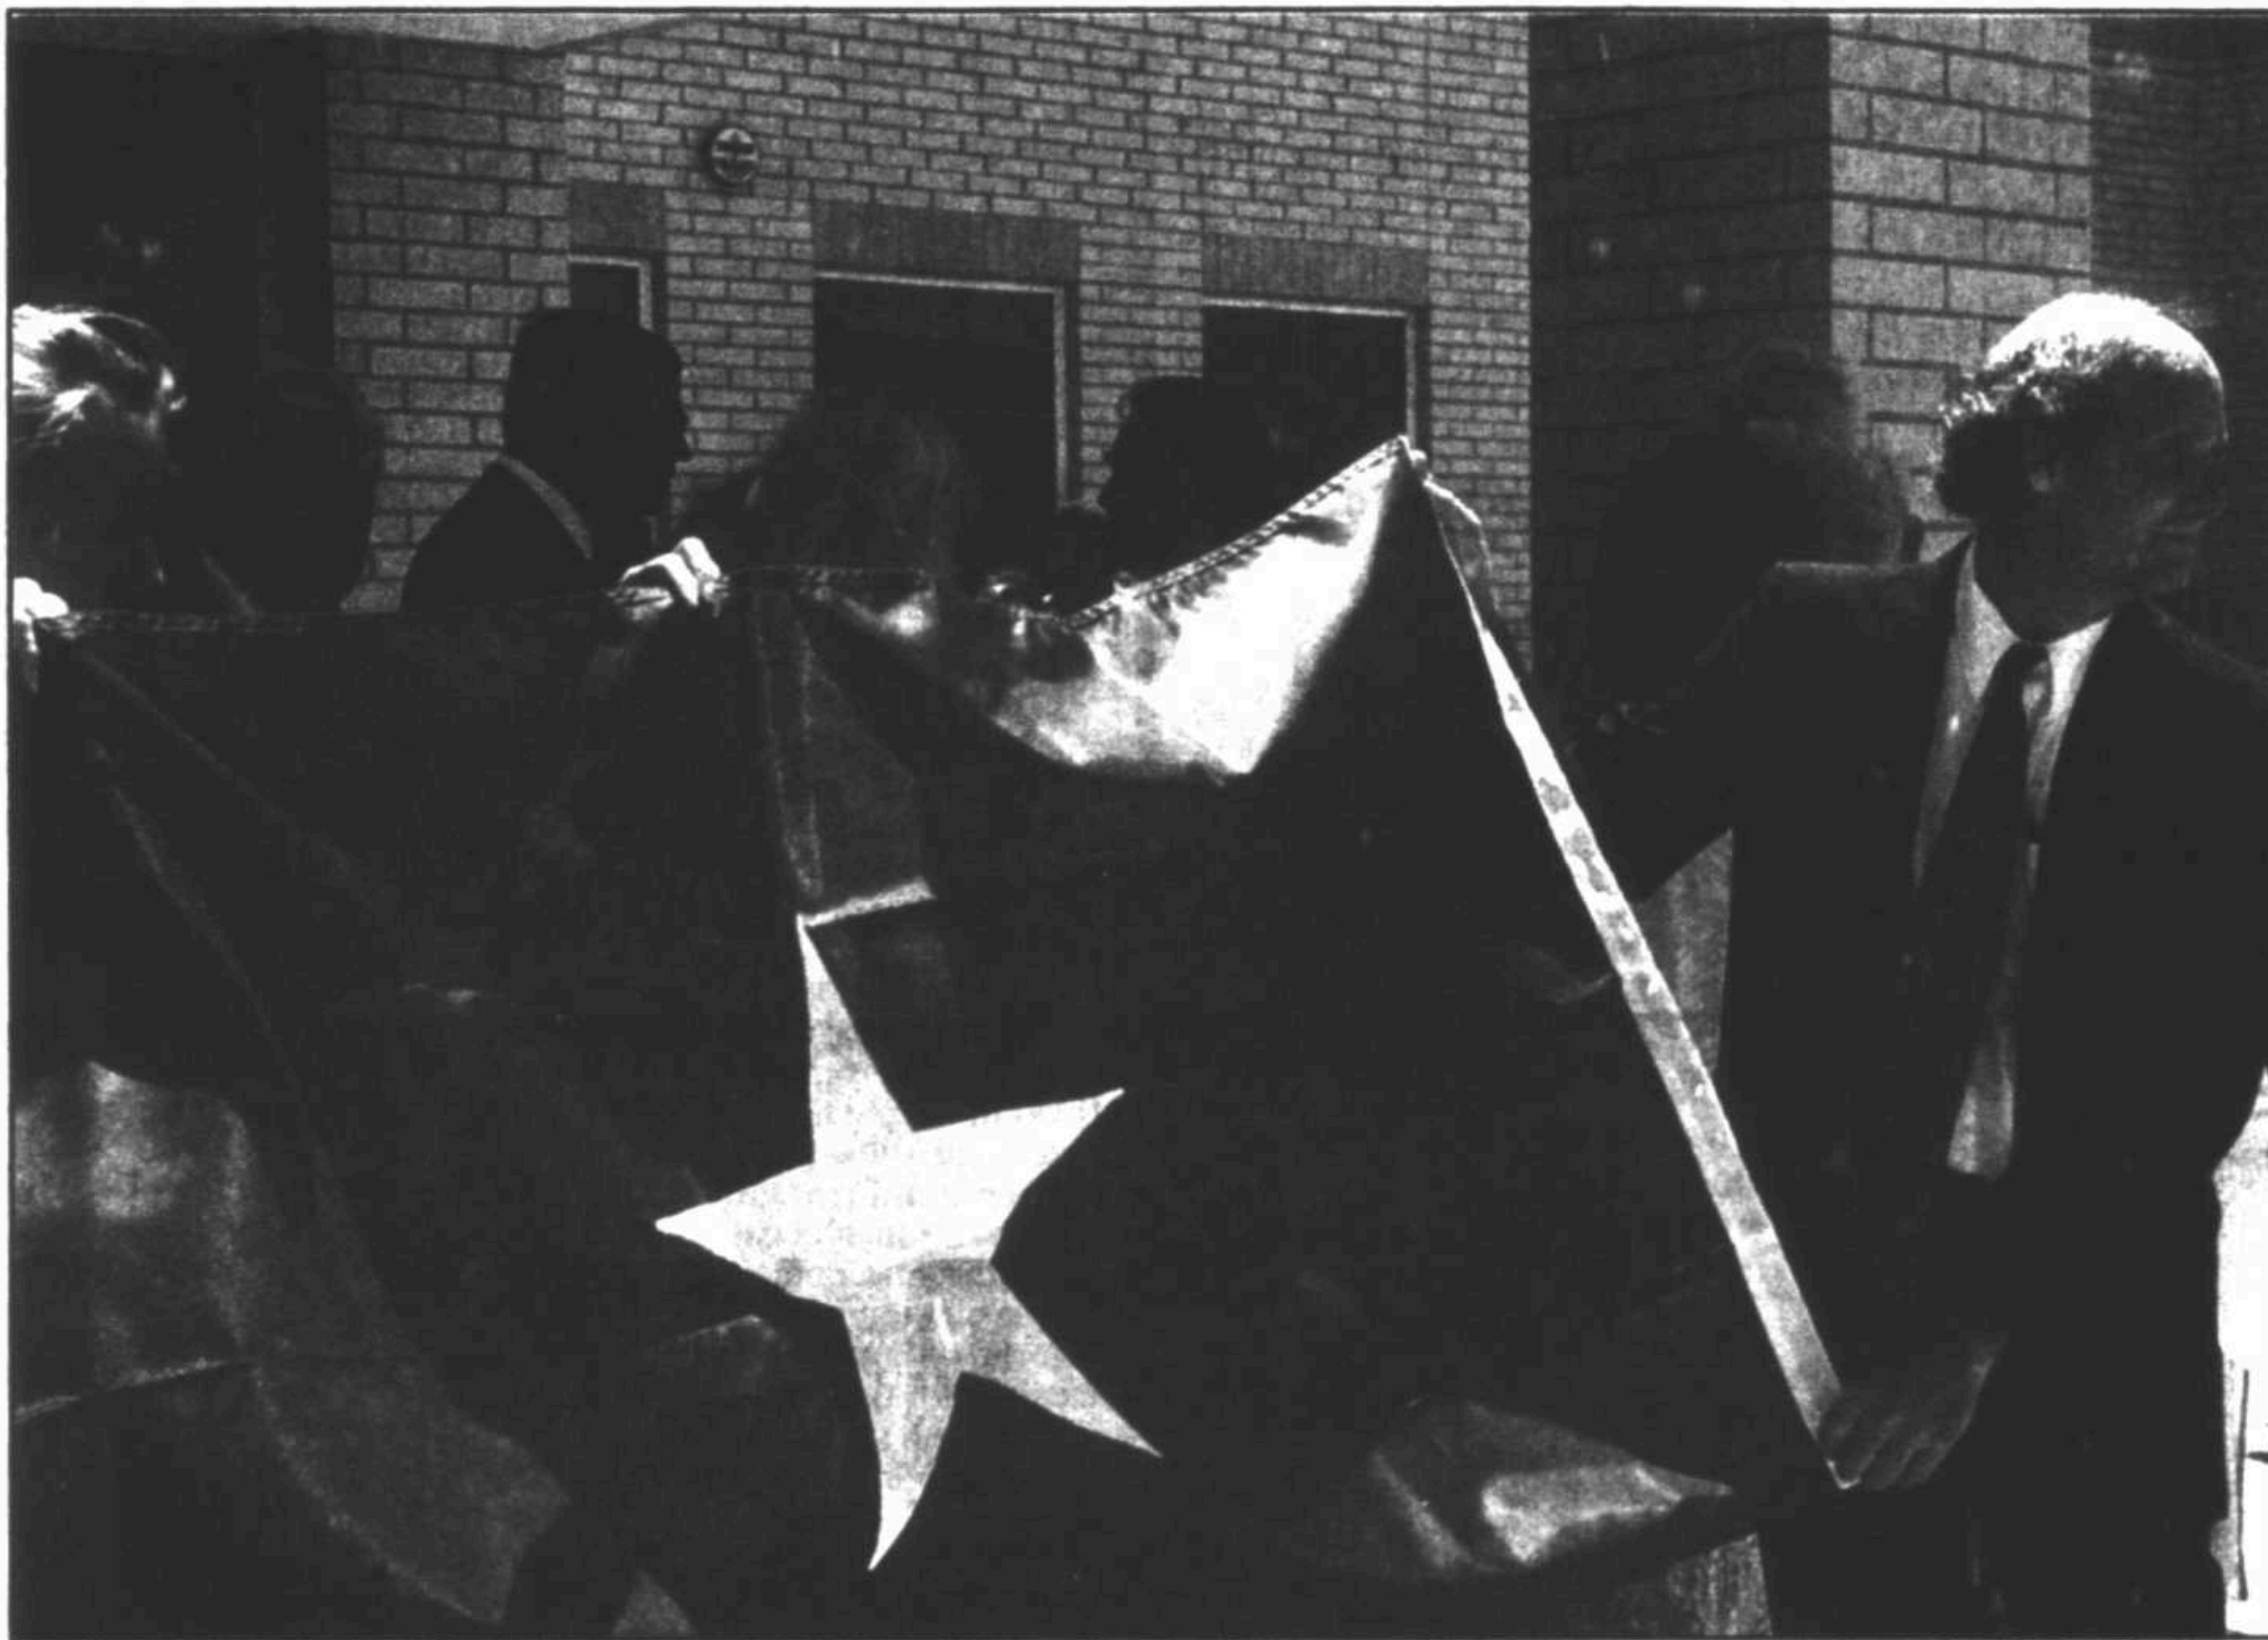

As support for his position, Uribe pointed out that the commissioners recently had a retreat to research "new missions" for the commission, Uribe said.

"You had the ... play, 'Six Characters in Search of an Author' — here we had three politicians in search of a job," Uribe said. "It's looking for new missions when it should be paring down and downsizing."

Uribe is the father of four and has served in the Texas House of Representatives and the Senate.

Republic of Texas meets judge

Bunton warns leader not to use his court for publicity

Richard McLaren and others display a replica of the first official flag of the original Republic of Texas. McLaren, a leader of the modern-day movement calling itself the Republic of Texas, was attending a hearing in federal court in Pecos Thursday.

PECOS — U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton, who has yet to recognize the alleged sovereignty of the purported Republic of Texas, summoned the group's "ambassador" Richard McLaren, on Thursday and instructed McLaren not to use the federal court system for frivolous or non-pertinent cases.

Declaring that he is "very proud" to be a citizen of Texas and of the United States, Bunton told McLaren and a courtroom full of reputed Republic of Texas citizens that he would retain his U.S. citizenship.

"I get tears in my eyes," during singing of "God Bless America" and "Texas Our Texas," Bunton said.

In acknowledging his right to protest, Bunton told McLaren, a Fort Davis farmer and wine-maker, that his filings on behalf of the Republic of Texas didn't have a place in his court.

Bunton told McLaren to stop using his (Bunton's) name for the advancement of his cause.

Midland attorney Mike Morgan, who represented Stewart Title Co. in a civil lawsuit — in which Bunton earlier found McLaren had defamed Stewart Title in a scheme — said following Thursday's hearing that Bunton was not pleased with the "impression that Mr. McLaren had the ability to motivate Judge Bunton to do something."

Midland teen-ager visits White House, hears Clinton speak

By Mary Ellen Moore
Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Randy Chambers, 17, of Midland, Texas, was mightily impressed Thursday when he heard President Clinton speak at the White House, but he came away saying he does not want Clinton's job.

The president addressed Chambers and 95 other delegates to Boys Nation as well as 94 delegates to Girls Nation, who have come to the nation's capital to take part in a program sponsored by the American Legion.

Every summer the nation's largest veterans' organization brings high school seniors to Washington where they become delegates at a mock senate and try to learn what it's like to run the federal government.

During the nine-day program, they visit the FBI headquarters, Arlington National Cemetery, Capitol Hill and the White House.

At the White House ceremony Thursday, Clinton recalled that he shook hands with President John F. Kennedy in 1963 when he was a Boys Nation delegate from Arkansas.

He encouraged the students to ask themselves what kind of a country they want to live in and to make America into that country.

Clinton said, "I want America to be a place where the American Dream is alive for every person who's willing to work for it ... I want America to be a place that is coming together, not being split apart ... And I want this country to continue to be the world's strongest force for peace and freedom and prosperity."

Clinton also predicted that terrorism and racism will be the two biggest problems their generation will face in the 21st century.

Noting the swift technological changes now taking place, Clinton said, "We are changing in ways that are, to some extent, more profound than we changed a hundred years ago. Instead of moving from the agricultural to the industrial age, we're now moving into an information age where every form of human endeavor will be dominated by the computer chip."

Chambers said afterward, "President Clinton is such a charismatic speaker. Everything he said is true, and I hope people will take it to heart."

While he said he found it "inspiring" that Clinton, a graduate of Boys Nation, went on to become president, Chambers said he does not want Clinton's job.

"It is a stressful job that an individual does not get paid very much for," he said, adding that Clinton is always in the public eye, both locally and internationally.

But Chambers, who has been president of the student council at Midland High School, has announced he will run for president of Boys Nation when the delegates hold elections in the next several days. The program ends July 27.

He said he plans to run for the U.S. Senate after he graduates from law school and starts his own law firm.

In the next few days, he said, he will introduce in the Boys Nation senate a bill that would raise the current $4.25-an-hour minimum wage by $1.25 instead of 90 cents, which the U.S. Congress is now considering.

"If we only raise it 90 cents," Chambers said, "seven years from now we'll have to raise it again ... so we want to go ahead and take care of it right now," he said.

Teachers explore secrets of life in program at Creative Schoolhouse

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

With a little sand, pond water and the bottom half of a one-liter plastic soda bottle, area educators created their own science experiments at a summer workshop Thursday.

Midland High School teacher Emily "Emmy" Ulmschneider conducted "Microbial Delights" for interested educators as part of Creative Schoolhouse's summer workshops.

In a few short weeks, workshop participants should see signs of simple organisms and life in their pond containers.

"The message is that life is all around you," Ms. Ulmschneider said.

She said students are often surprised to see life emerge from mud and water. The high school teacher also taught lessons on pickling cabbage into sauerkraut and using the process to lead into a lesson on bacteria and fungi. The demonstration could also result in a history lesson of how the British Navy took sauerkraut on ships in the early 15th century as a source of Vitamin C to prevent scurvy.

Ms. Ulmschneider scooped out krill from her pond container to give to workshop attendees. "Krills are crustaceans, a relative of the shrimp family," she said.

"Isn't that what whales eat?" asked James "Jim" Pogue, a fifth-grade teacher at Bowie Elementary School.

"Right," Ms. Ulmschneider said. She also demonstrated fermentation and growing sulphur-producing bacteria by adding an egg to mud in a container.

One teacher wrinkled her nose at the thought of the smell, but allowed, "My kids will love this stuff."

Arson charges filed against three in Greenwood fires

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Three people were arraigned Thursday on arson charges in connection with several suspicious fires at vacant houses last month.

Felicia Rena Alex, 20, Mark Anthony Young, 18, and Marquis Laquane Jones, 17, were arraigned and held at the Hunt County Jail. Bond for Ms. Alex was set at $100,000, while bond for Young and Jones was $125,000.

A fourth person, 18-year-old Mariah Dawn Bailey, was arrested Wednesday on an arson charge and was expected to be arraigned on Friday, also in connection with a fire at a vacant structure. Authorities said Young, arrested Wednesday, has been linked to a June 10 fire at a vacant house. Ms. Alex and Jones, both arrested late Tuesday, were involved in a June 17 blaze at another structure, officials allege.

A spate of apparent arson fires, including two blazes at predominantly black churches, heightened racial tensions in Greenville. No arrests have been made in the church fires.

Buntun alluded to an indictment for treason and sedition that the republic's court lodged against him. But McLaren said that those accusations were political and were lodged while he was in jail.

McLaren had been jailed for contempt of court for failure to appear in federal court.

Buntun diplomatically "declined the honor," extended by McLaren, to be the transitional judge during the supposed passing of Texas from statehood to its renewed independence.

When McLaren suggested that he wanted to hold the Republic of Texas' "First Diplomatic Conference" in Pecos, Buntun said, "That's fine. But that's not going to be in this courthouse."

He said the Pecos courthouse was "not to be used" by political parties or protest groups.

In a prepared news release before the hearing, the Republic of Texas requested United Nations representation at the conference.

U.N. representation was not evident in the courtroom, outside the courthouse following the hearing, or in a luncheon meeting afterward.

The Republic of Texas refers to itself as a nation and is seeking recognition by foreign powers.

After the hearing, McLaren said that the citizens of the Republic of Texas are "regaining our national independence."

"We have been colonized as a captive nation since 1865. So, we have the right to regain our status as a nation. That's what we are doing. We are exercising our rights."

McLaren said that the Republic of Texas is "pressing for the recog-

He married Dorothy Outlaw on Nov. 19, 1948, in Tucumcari, N.M.

After his discharge he became a letter carrier in McAlister.

He moved from McAlister to Floyd in 1961. He served as Floyd Village Clerk from 1961 until 1978.

Firefighters find two more victims of Dime Box fire

DIME BOX, Texas (AP) — Firefighters have recovered the second of two victims killed in a natural gas explosion and began efforts to cap the burning well on Thursday.

Lee County Sheriff Joe Goodson said the body of J.E. Traweck Jr. was pulled out of the exploded well's fiery wreckage on Wednesday as crews removed debris from the area.

"The body was on the rig floor, which was where all the heat was and nobody could get up there," Goodson said. "When they got ready to move it, the floor tipped and the body fell off. It was very seriously scarred."

Traweck, 39, of Caldwell, Texas, and Steve Patridge of Lafayette, La., were killed when the rig, owned by WCS Oil & Gas Inc. of Dallas, erupted in a series of three explosions on July 13, creating a ball of fire nearly 40 feet in the air.

Patridge's body was recovered from the wreckage on July 14.

The fire continued to burn Thursday while members of Joe Bowden's Wild Well Control, Inc., of Spring, Texas, worked to remove the twisted remains of the rig before taking on the fire with high-powered water jets.

"They have the rig off of the well shaft and they are getting ready to cap it any time now," Goodson said.

Goodson said the blowout specialists would attempt to shoot enough water up under the 40-foot fireball to push it off of the well shaft and allow workers to cap the escaping natural gas.

If that is unsuccessful, members of Wild Well Control were to ignite an explosion over the flame in effort to suck the oxygen out and extinguish the fire.

WCS and state officials say they still don't know what caused the blast.

Nearly a dozen workers were near the rig at the time of the explosion, but they escaped injury. The two victims were the only ones outside on the rig's platform when the blast occurred, WCS officials said.

The fire is in southeast Lee County, just west of Lake Somerville, eight miles southeast of Dime Box. Dime Box is 65 miles east of Austin.

Insurance commissioner thinks lawmakers will act on tax in 1997

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1997 Legislature likely will act to relieve Texans' property tax burden, the head of Gov. George W. Bush's property tax study committee predicted Thursday.

"If this is as much of a problem as I think it is, then I think the Legislature will address it," said Elton Bomer, the state insurance commissioner and man heading up the tax study panel.

"I think it's enough of a problem that the Legislature will address it. Of course, that's entirely up to the Legislature and the leadership — the (House) speaker, the lieutenant governor and the governor."

Bush has asked the committee to conduct hearings around the state to measure public sentiment on local school property taxes, which total nearly $10 billion a year.

Bush has said he hopes to find a way to replace that levy with another tax to avoid what he sees as a growing crisis.

Although the committee has several more hearings scheduled, Bomer said in an interview Thursday that many Texans think property taxes are near the crisis point.

"From what I've perceived from the general public, it's a crisis," Bomer said.

Legislators are hearing that message and likely will respond, he added.

Asked what might push lawmakers to debate property tax relief, Bomer, a former House member, replied: "Listening to constituents. They're real good at that."

HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT THOSE KIDS?

That was the question posed to me, and I answered with a deep feeling of faith and admiration. We have just completed our Summer Mission Trip with teens, and my faith in their leadership for our society and their love for God has been bolstered. So much bad news is read and heard about youth gangs and problems. Don't you think it's time to honor those good kids? This group of 15 spent time in a small Spanish community in Northern New Mexico encouraging people to study God's Word in a door to door campaign. Too, they shared time together in a Christian attitude and environment free from alcohol, drugs, and the filth that our entertainment world often serves. Little or no TV, movies, etc. Just friendship and love for people. And how blessed I was to share this time with them. I feel a deep sense of strength about their leadership for tomorrow.

God says about our kids, "flee the evil desires of youth, and pursue righteousness, faith, love and peace, along with those who call on the Lord out of a pure heart." 2 Timothy 2:22. Perhaps our major investment as adult leaders and churches in days to come should be given to them.

Prosecutors question lawman in death of boy

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors on Thursday chiseled away at a former lawman's story that another man pulled the trigger on the gun that killed a 12-year-old Conroe boy.

Montgomery County investigators testified how they followed up on Hilton Crawford's story that a man named R.L. Remington supposedly shot McKay Everett.

Prosecutors laid out for jurors how investigators conducted an exhaustive search for the man, based on a description Crawford gave while he was being interrogated.

In the confession, Crawford blamed the actual killing on Remington, whom he had met months earlier at a Louisiana racetrack.

Police say Remington is a figment of Crawford's imagination.

Crawford is charged with capital murder and faces life in prison or death by injection if he is convicted. He was a friend of the boy's parents, so close that McKay referred to him as "Uncle Hilly."

Crawford said Remington pitched the abduction plot to him after learning he was having financial troubles.

Just before confessing to police his part in the abduction, Crawford drew a map telling law enforcement officials where they could find the boy's body. Officers found the decomposing remains a short time later in a swampy area off Interstate 10 near Lafayette, La.

Crawford said Remington was with him when the boy was abducted from his home while the parents were attending an Amway meeting. He waited in the car while Remington, dressed in a police uniform, rang the doorbell and then grabbed the boy, Crawford said.

Remington put the boy in the trunk of their car and they drove to Louisiana, planning to put the boy on a bus back for Conroe once a ransom was paid, Crawford said.

But the boy began beating on the lid of the trunk, angering Remington, who finally opened the trunk, pulled the boy out, threw him to the ground and shot him twice, Crawford said.

Austin bluesman Grey Ghost dies at 92

AUSTIN (AP) — Renowned blues musician Roosevelt Thomas Williams, better known as piano master Grey Ghost, has died. He was 92.

Williams, who died Wednesday, achieved national prominence with his contribution to the World War II effort, a patriotic tune titled "Hitler Blues."

He also was a patriarch of the Austin music scene, uniting East

Austin blues veterans and young rockers.

"Grey Ghost was much more than a musician; he was a musical monument to the Texas experience," said Pat Jasper, director of Texas Folklife Resources.

"His life was in his music, and it directly reflected everything he'd been through, much of which modern musicians and fans will never experience otherwise."

Williams, a Bastrop native who spent the last half of his life in Austin, rambled through Texas for decades. His career included decades of work on the "chitlins circuit" of Southern black nightclubs, as well as a later comeback when he found a new audience among white fans at folk festivals and blues clubs.

Fans remember El Paso rocker Bobby Fuller

By Bernadette Self
El Paso Times

EL PASO, Texas — It's been 30 years since Bobby Fuller, El Paso's only rock 'n' roll legend, died in a car on a Hollywood street. Despite the passage of time, his fans and friends still wrestle with the mystery of his death — and wonder what might have been.

Fuller and his band, the Bobby Fuller Four, had several minor hits and one smash — "I Fought the Law," which has since become a rock anthem. But his 23-year-old life was tragically cut short on July 18, 1966.

"Bobby was exceptionally gifted, he was a real talent," said George Reynoso, owner of All That Music in El Paso and a collector of Fuller's albums and memorabilia. "This fellow would've been a great in the industry."

Fuller was remembered Thursday at Jack's Sugar Shack, a hip Hollywood hangout. Among those looking back on his career were disc jockey Kasey Kasem and musicians Johnny Legend and Doug Fieger, and Fuller's brother Randy, 52, who was bass player in the Bobby Fuller Four.

The band's music caught the attention of Beatle George Harrison. In fact, more than once Fuller's talent and popularity was compared to the Beatles. Hence this headline above a 1964 El Paso Times story on Fuller: "England has Beatles but El Paso has Bobby."

The write-up predicted: "If young Fuller's popularity continues to grow, El Paso may have another Elvis Presley on its hands."

Fuller's musical career started in the garage of his family's home at 9509 Alamo in East El Paso. He graduated from Ysleta High School in 1960 but also briefly attended Burges in 1958. Fuller eventually built his own small recording studio in the garage and later opened a teen center on Dyer Street, where his band played.

His local stardom peaked in El Paso in 1964. Outgrowing the local music scene, he headed to Los Angeles.

"It was just great music," said El Pasoan Bob Flamm, 50, who saw Fuller perform in El Paso and in Los Angeles.

After three decades, Fuller's death is still the subject of speculation. The NBC program "Unsolved Mysteries" is planning to feature Fuller's death on one of its September installments.

Most of the people closest to Fuller don't accept the official autopsy report from the Los Angeles medical examiner's office. Apparently, the coroner was leaning toward calling it suicide but then declared it accidental asphyxiation while sniffing gasoline.

But skeptics say that blood on Fuller's shirt and abrasions on his body point to a more sinister end for the budding pop star.

"Oh, I know somebody killed him, there's no doubt in my mind," said Upper Valley resident Dalton Powell, 54, the drummer in the Bobby Fuller Four at the time Fuller died. "I saw his body. His clothes were messed up and there was blood, on him and on the seat."

El Pasoan Rod Crosby, Fuller's contemporary and rival musician who declined an offer from Fuller to join the band in 1965, agreed. "Yes, Bobby's death is a mystery," Crosby said. "I think most people who knew him believe he was killed. The biggest question remaining is why? If he was really a horrible person and lived outside of the law it would be expected. But he wasn't. He wasn't even a superstar yet."

Fuller had made no secret of his plans to leave the band and go solo. In fact, Powell said the band, comprised of himself, Fuller's brother Randy and the late guitarist Jim Reese, knew the upcoming tour was to be the last.

"Strange hand," remarked the kibitzer. "By making a play all the textbooks would say is wrong, declarer can come to one more trick than he scored!"

The hand that caused this enigmatic comment occurred during a rubber bridge game at the club. After a Stayman inquiry had elicited the information that South did not have a four-card major, North went directly to the no-trump game. West led a fourth-best heart,

East rose with the king and, since the combined J 10 provided a second stopper, declarer won with the ace. The queen of diamonds ran to East's ace, the heart return was won by the queen and the return of the nine of hearts forced out the ten. Declarer led a diamond to the ten, but West won with the king and cashed two more heart tricks for a one-trick set.

The hand would have passed into oblivion had it not been for the kibitzer's remark. Subsequent analysis showed this was one of those rare instances when a kibitzer was right!

Suppose South were to let East's king hold the first heart, then wins the continuation perforce. If East, on winning the ace of diamonds, has a heart to return, the suit is splitting 4-3 and declarer has no problem. As the cards lie, East is out of hearts and, as a result, declarer gains a tempo. South can win any return, force out the king of diamonds and, since the ten of hearts is still a stopper, come to nine tricks without the defenders being able to do anything about it.

FAMILY MATTERS

Child's behavior upsetting to whole family

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: We have a 5-year-old son who is driving my husband and me crazy. He fights us over everything that we ask him to do. He doesn't listen to us and lots of times I know that he hears. When he doesn't get his way, he starts screaming and yelling and rolling on the floor. We've tried everything that we know to get him to act differently, but nothing has worked. I've read Dr. Dobson's book about the strong-willed child, but not even paddling him has done any good. We just can't understand why he does this.

In addition to his behavior, we're worried that his sister (aged 2) is going to start acting like him when she gets older. She's always minded and has been such an easy child compared to him. He was never easy. We just thought that he would outgrow the "Terrible 2s" and everything would be better. Now that she's that age and we see how easy it can be, we're really worried.

Both my husband and I have had it, and now we're both losing our tempers and acting just like him. We know that's wrong but we're just getting to the point that it is such a fight to deal with him that we're just avoiding him. His doctor just says that we need to be more firm, but I don't see how we can be. He's to the point that we are afraid to take him anywhere or let him go visit friends because of his temper or what he might do. With kindergarten coming up in the fall, we both think that we have got to do something, but we don't know what. We both feel like big failures as parents. STUMPED AND DEFEATED

DEAR STUMPED: Your son seems to be a challenge, but then he obviously knows what he wants and does not want. Disciplining a child is like breaking a high-spirited horse — you want to break him or her to the saddle (rules) but not break his or her spirit. Establish the principle of discipline based on the idea that discipline is used to change behavior, not to punish.

With that in mind, I like to use Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs' concepts to establish two basic ideas: First, explain to the child that we are going to use the "three strike" rule — from now on we will tell you once, tell you again and then you get a consequence. Second, establish the "Time Out Chair" as the basic logical consequence when he chooses to act out. Select a chair (facing away from the wall) in a room with little activity (for example, the dining room), and place him in the chair for five minutes (one minute for each year of age). Use a timer to ensure that he is only in the chair for five minutes. When the timer rings, ask him why he is in the chair. If he will not tell you, does not know or gives the wrong reason, simply tell him why and let him up. Remember, we are only trying to change a behavior. We will put him in the chair as many times as it takes to change the behavior.

In this process, consistency is most important. Several other components of the approach are more fully explained in a number of child behavior books. A good introductory book is Drs. Don Dinkmeyer and Gary McKay's book, "The Parent's Handbook."

Contact the Centers for Children and Families (699-4262) to consider enrolling in one of their parenting courses. It's a great way to develop new parenting skills and to learn that you are not alone in the process.

Continue with the process that you have started. Your son's behavior is unacceptable and he must learn to conform to appropriate social norms. The home is a child's primary learning laboratory. The lessons he learns and the behaviors he practices he takes to the outside world.

THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES OFFER THE FOLLOWING IDEAS FOR ENCOURAGING A POSITIVE ATTITUDE IN CHILDREN:

■ Children learn a lot from the way parents talk.

■ Positive talk on the parents' part helps children learn to feel good about themselves.

■ Positive talk also helps children develop self-confidence.

■ Use of encouraging talk by parents helps encourage children to see the world that way.

■ Parents should focus on telling children what they want, not what children are doing wrong or what's wrong with the child.

■ It is important to choose helpful supportive words even as the child is improving.

■ Positive communications give parents a chance to show caring and respect for children.

■ Positive communications yields courteous, creative language.

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

DEAR ABBY

Pharmacy intern's experience turns out to be real downer

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently started to work at a pharmacy as an intern, and I go home every night frustrated to tears by what I see in a day's work.

There are medical claims, hundreds of them daily. Many are for preventable sicknesses that could be cured by over-the-counter drugs. Some people abuse the emergency rooms just to get prescriptions necessary for Medicaid. An example is cough syrup. Once again, the system pays a couple of hundred dollars for a child with a common cold whose parents wouldn't spring the $3.99 it would cost for a bottle of cough syrup.

Abby, some people are so uneducated they don't know how to take the medicine. (Have you ever known anyone to eat a suppository?)

I got a call the other day from a girl who asked me whether or not she's pregnant when there are two blue lines on the stick. (She's 12 years old and didn't know how to read a package insert to take the pregnancy test.)

Wait — there's more. The abuse of the system isn't happening only in health care and pharmacy; we had a job available that women applied for via the unemployment office just to get their papers signed so they could keep drawing welfare or unemployment benefits. Some people have even tried to use food stamps to pay for narcotics!

I am so disgusted — maybe I'll move to Canada. —ANGELA IN SAVANNAH

DEAR ANGELA: Please don't move to Canada. We need people like you in the U.S.A.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a soldier currently deployed to Bosnia for Operation Joint Endeavor. I just received an "Any Soldier" box from American Legion Post 1976 in Virginia. I am touched by the goodness of so many of my fellow American citizens who still go out of their way to do a good deed, especially when they do it for strangers. Their mail means so much to those of us who are away from our families and loved ones.

We received shipments of books from the Red Cross, Soldier of Fortune magazine, publishers' warehouses and also from private citizens. All of the special packages, letters, pictures and good will are inspiring during one of the most difficult times in our lives.

With a little faith and luck — and a lot of patience — I will return to my 7-month-old daughter and my "Mr. Mom" nondeployed soldier husband.

I want to thank all who participated in this mail campaign for their generosity and kindness in remembering the military forces behind the mission. I will be leaving here in September, but many of my co-workers will be here for more than a year. I ask that your readers continue to remember them. —IST LT. EMILY C. FELVUS, LUKAVAC, BOSNIA

P.S. We read you daily in "The Stars and Stripes."

DEAR ABBY: There is so much hate and violence in this world, but it can be reduced if we all work together. It would be helpful if we had more examples of kindness after which to pattern our behavior.

A friend of mine performed one of those examples of kindness when she took my 84-year-old mother, who has Alzheimer's disease, fishing. It made Mother laugh and enjoy the outdoors. I have a full-time caretaker for Mom, but my friend gave my mother a special treat.

I think it would be nice if you ask your readers to write to you about kind things done for them and publish a series of these acts of kindness. Goodness knows there is media coverage about plenty of bad things, so if you offset those with good news, it would be very inspiring. Please think about it. —JUANITA BAKER, VERO BEACH, FLA.

DEAR JUANITA: You have done me a kindness with your compassionate suggestion. Readers, please let me hear from you.

Book makes traveling with pet easier

From Staff Reports

Plan to include your pet in the family's vacation?

Now in its sixth printing, "Take Your Pet U.S.A., A Guide of Accommodations for Pets and Their Owners" not only has over 4,000 listings of hotels, motels and bed and breakfasts across the country that welcome pets, but also includes over $20 in money-saving coupons.

There are tips on airline travel, travel cages, hotel etiquette, loss prevention and veterinary information.

The new edition retails for $11.95 (softcover) and is available by mail (add $2.50 for shipping and handling) from Artco Offset, Inc. 12 Channel Street, Boston, Mass., 02210 or by calling 1-800-255-8038.

First published in 1990, "Take Your Pet U.S.A." started when author Arthur Frank "was flabbergasted to learn that it is next to impossible to find a hotel that would accept my recent family member (Buffy)."

"I set out right away to make life easier for me and my fellow pet owners."

Frank and his sidekick and constant canine companion Buffy have researched the new edition to make "Take Your Pet U.S.A." an indispensable guide for travelers and their pets.

After teaching thousands of Midlanders to swim, play tennis, run long distances and even dabble in art (and obedience classes to a few dogs), Em Carnett retired in 1990 from the City of Midland and threw away her appointment book.

She thought her days of attending meetings and teaching classes were over and she would never need to schedule her days again.

Wrong! "I had to go buy another appointment book to keep my schedule straight," she said with a laugh.

Retirement for Mrs. Carnett has been one appointment after another. If she's not teaching classes, playing tennis or swimming, then the 68-year-old is attending board meetings, planning annual events or going to cultural arts productions. That's not counting her part-time job dabbling in antiques.

A twinge of the Midwest echoes in her speech, a reminder of her childhood in Chicago. She graduated from Wright College and worked for a short time at an advertising agency modeling for Sears and Roebuck Catalog — mostly hands and feet," she said with a laugh. She wanted to work as a flight attendant for an airline, but she had met Glen Carnett. They married and he said, "Go West," and the couple landed in Midland 45 years ago.

Her 27-year career with the City of Midland put Mrs. Carnett into the outdoors, her first love. "I love being outside," she said. "I can't stand to be inside more than an hour or two."

It was combined with her other love — teaching. "I taught everything for the city — tennis, swimming, art, even dog obedience classes." Her job titles included recreation superintendent, senior citizens director and, finally, director of employment development and training. The city position allowed her to earn her degree in physical education and a teaching certificate.

That wasn't the only teaching Mrs. Carnett did. For 20 years she worked as a water safety instructor trainer and board member for the American Red Cross. She served as a first aid/CPR instructor and received special training to teach water safety to handicapped children.

Chicago schools fostered her interest in the outdoors. Mrs. Carnett recalled learning to ride five-gaited horses and to ice skate. The schools also developed her interest in the arts. "It was compulsory to go to all the arts — theater and concerts and museums. Not that we had any talent in our family, but we all appreciated talent," she said.

Em Carnett retired after a 27-year career with the City of Midland, which included such duties as teaching thousands of Midlanders to swim, play tennis, run long distances and dabble in art. Mrs. Carnett has refused to let retirement slow her down. Currently she may be found attending board meetings, planning events, attending cultural arts productions, or, as shown at left, still teaching people how to swim.

Not only can Mrs. Carnett be found attending as many of the operas, community concerts, theater productions and symphonies as she can fit into her schedule, but she has served on several boards.

"I was a member of the Midland Arts Assembly when it was being organized. I'm now on the boards of the Midland Opera Theater and the Midland Community Concert series. And I'm a member of the Midland Community Theatre. I've hardly missed a play in years." When Art Cole was executive director, Mrs. Carnett often watched his critiquing of rehearsals. "I learned so much from watching Art Cole. I've learned to recognize talent and what you're supposed to do."

Watching, not performing, is what she likes to do. "I go to everything. When someone calls me on the phone to do something, I drop everything and go," she said with a laugh.

Retired she may be, but Em Carnett hasn't slowed down. Her appointment book shows her teaching swimming classes for adults at Doug Russell Pool, playing tennis or swimming in the mornings, possibly a board meeting during the day and working in the afternoons at Antiques, Etc.

"I was raised with antiques. My mother dragged me to estate sales in Chicago. I have collected too many." The part-time job allows Mrs. Carnett to learn more about antiques while she also does some design work and works the floor. "I'm a people person. No way could I have a job without people."

She's also a high energy person and attributes it to diet and exercise. When Mrs. Carnett gets up, she starts her day with a drink of herb tea, vinegar and honey. "It gives me a lot of energy in the morning," along with her biscuits, milk and juice.

"Health is the most important thing. If you don't have good health, nothing is important," she said.

She needs that energy to keep up with her latest activity: umpiring at tennis tournaments, such as the recent Highway 80 Tournament. "If there is a problem or a dispute, I settle it. There is a code in tennis and the players can't do anything to infringe on it," she explained.

In her spare time, Mrs. Carnett might be found at the family ranch in London (Texas, not England) which her son Lane operates. "I love manual labor," she said, adding that her passion is trimming trees, an art she learned from a city employee.

She also fits in time for the Keen-Agers at Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, the Progressive Study Club, the Planning Committee for CapRock Electric, and cooking.

"I like to experiment with cooking, like the brownies I made that came out like cement. I put the water hose on them in the backyard and it took three days of soaking to get them out," she laughed.

Mrs. Carnett may be as active as when she was working, but her attitude has changed. "I used to be anxious to get through the day. I don't worry about yesterday or about tomorrow. I don't get uptight over things — it's not worth it. I ask to be blessed every day and for the Lord to bless the day."

"I don't see myself slowing down. I'm too young. Someone asked if I wanted to start quilting or knitting. I will when I can't get out of my chair."

Sports fan, 97, finally gets radio working right

By Hank Kurz Jr.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Moving into a retirement home didn't bother Bertha Anderson a bit. The food was good, her room was nice and there were loads of social activities and other fun things to do.

Her problems didn't begin until she went to her room at night and tried to tune in her favorite winter radio program: University of Virginia men's basketball.

"For so long, I couldn't get it," Mrs. Anderson, 97, said of the games broadcast locally on WRVA-AM. She said she's tuned in Cavaliers games for as long as she can remember, but "it didn't come in here."

Mrs. Anderson said she's a sports fan from way back.

"I played on the first girls basketball team at Honaker High School," she boasts, speaking of 1916 as if it were yesterday.

Her family nurtured her sports habit.

"My son, Sattler Anderson, coached basketball at John Marshall and Hill and then was headmaster over at Huguenot Academy for 12 years," she says.

Two grandsons attended Virginia beginning in the mid-1970s. Neither played basketball, but their choice of school only furthered their grandmother's devotion to Wahoo hoops on the radio.

Then this year winter melted into spring and Mrs. Anderson couldn't tune into her other favorite program — Richmond Braves baseball.

The problem begged attention.

"She didn't complain about it, because that's not her way, but she did miss her ballgames," said Pat Thompson, Mrs. Anderson's niece. The maintenance crew at the Elizabeth Adam Crump Manor couldn't figure out the problem, and radios shuttled in by family members didn't work, either.

Braves games are broadcast on WRVH-AM, a sister station of WRVA. The family explained the problem to WRVA morning show host Tim Timberlake and asked him to see what he could do to help.

"She was convinced that Tim Timberlake would get it working because she's such an avid listener," said Mrs. Thompson.

Timberlake consulted with radio engineers at his station and passed on their suggestions, but they didn't work.

He inquired about a special radio that might have been the answer, but it wasn't available in Richmond.

"Everyone thought it was a great story, but nobody could help," said Judy Sutherland, another of Mrs. Anderson's nieces.

Mrs. Anderson's family finally called George Drumwright, deputy county manager for community services in Henrico County, which owns the nursing home.

Drumwright, in turn, got county communication systems manager Grady Knott involved.

Knott finally solved Mrs. Anderson's problem. It was as simple as repositioning the radio and adjusting the antenna to maximize reception.

By leaving the radio and antenna alone, Mrs. Anderson can listen to her games and change the station to hear other programs.

"It worked out a lot better than I anticipated," Knott said.

"I'm just tickled," Mrs. Anderson said. "I can get WRVA now ... (talk show host) Jerry Lund."

"And my ball games, that's the important part."

Despite failing eyesight, Mrs. Anderson admits she has allowed television to cut into her radio time.

But when the Cavs or the Richmond Braves are on the radio, she's listening. "That's my life," she said.

Computer keeps tabs on elderly

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) — When the phone rings at the homes of some elderly people and shut-ins in this community near Boston, it's more than just a friendly hello.

Under a new safety program offered by the Braintree Police Department, a computer-generated phone call goes out at the same time each day to check up on the program participants.

"Are you OK?" the computer asks.

If the person picks up the phone, the computer sends a programmed message of reassurance and moves on to the next name and number.

However, if two or more calls to the same person go unanswered, or if the phone rings busy or is off the hook for an extended period, the computer sounds an alert at police headquarters.

Police then call a neighbor or relative, or send an officer to check on the person.

Medical help is summoned if needed.

Bowe out of open

WASHINGTON — The riot in the Garden has knocked Riddick Bowe off the Olympic stage.

Bowe, a silver medalist at the 1988 Games in Seoul, was tentatively scheduled to lead the parade of athletes in Saturday's opening ceremony at RFK Stadium. The stadium is the site of nine first-round games in the Olympic soccer tournament over six days.

The Washington Soccer Organizing Committee was negotiating with Bowe about his participation in the ceremony, said David Schwab, spokesman for the committee, adding he did not know who would replace Bowe at the ceremony. Schwab gave no reasons for failed discussions.

"They were in negotiations ... It was never settled," said Schwab. But the talks broke down after members of Bowe's camp were involved in a riot following his fight with Andrew Golota last week at Madison Square Garden.

$120 million brings Shaq to L.A.

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal became the first premier free agent to switch teams, abandoning the Orlando Magic on Thursday to sign a seven-year, $120 million deal with the Los Angeles Lakers.

While three other top-of-the-line players in this summer's bumper crop of free agents — Michael Jordan, Gary Payton and Alonzo Mourning — elected to re-sign with their teams, O'Neal opted for a coast-to-coast move and a contract that will pay him an average of $17.4 million per season.

It is the most lucrative total package in team sports history and the second this summer to exceed $100 million. However, Jordan's contract signed last week with the Chicago Bulls is the largest one-year deal — $25 million to $30 million.

'Orlando's a beautiful organization. They helped me become the great player I am today.'
—Shaquille O'Neal

O'Neal, who won the NBA scoring title last season, has averaged 27.2 points and 12.5 rebounds during his four-year pro career. Although he led Orlando to 57-plus wins the last two seasons, the Magic were swept in the 1995 NBA Finals and in this year's conference finals. "I'm a military child, so I'm used to relocating every three or four years," said O'Neal, whose father was a sergeant in the U.S. Army.

Along with his muscular inside game, the 7-footer with the telegenic smile is bringing his rap music and fledgling movie career to Hollywood.

"My final decision was to play for the Los Angeles Lakers. I felt that a change was necessary," O'Neal said. "Change is for the good and change is for the better. This was a dream."

"It was a very, very tough decision, just like choosing where to go to college and whether to get married."

He will be the latest in a long line of superstar Lakers centers that includes George Mikan, Wilt Chamberlain and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, all Hall of Famers who led the Lakers to NBA titles. O'Neal will replace LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England — Fred Couples and Mark O'Meara led an All-American charge at the British Open today.

Or, almost all American, anyway. With the first round nearly over, Englishman Paul Broadhurst led with a 6-under-par 65, but pardon him if he felt a little lonely atop the leaderboard in these unusually balmy conditions.

"Most unusual," Broadhurst said — of the weather, not of his score. "I was a bit concerned looking at the leaderboard with all the Americans there," he said.

At 67, two strokes back, were seven Americans: Fred Couples, Loren Roberts, Mark O'Meara, Mark McCumber, Mark Brooks, Brad Faxon and Tom Lehman.

"This is not Open championship type weather," said O'Meara, echoing the sentiments of many of his compatriots. "It's more like San Diego."

With balmy conditions prevailing on the normally blustery West Coast of England, scores plummeted at the 6,892-yard Royal Lytham and St. Annes links.

"If there is no wind, the finish will be into double figures under par," O'Meara said.

Even defending champion John Daly, given little chance of repeating here after winning at St. Andrews last year, got off to a fine start, with four birdies in the first seven holes. He got to 5-under at one point, but finished with 70.

English weather just refused to rain on America's chances.

The only non-U.S. player in the group at 67 was Hidemichi Tanaka, a two-time winner on the Japan PGA Tour. Three shots back of the leaders were favored Englishman Nick Faldo, this year's Masters winner who turned 39 today, South African Ernie Els, who won the 1994 U.S. Open, and Nick Price of Zimbabwe.

Faldo finished with two birdies in the last four holes, considered the toughest stretch on this course.

"With no breeze and a short golf course, I think the Americans will be very strong this week," Faldo said.

Deion goes to camp

Cowboy star causes fan ruckus at first practice

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Deion Sanders' first day in a Dallas Cowboys training camp Thursday will be remembered as one of the most bizarre in the club's 26-year history.

"Deion, Deion, Deion," fans chanted after the morning practice, when Sanders made his debut as a starting wide receiver.

Sanders, who in previous years was still playing baseball at this time of year, waded into the crowd signing autographs with a big smile on his face. Frantic women shoved their children toward Sanders with bits of paper and pens.

"He's really something," said running back Emmitt Smith, waiting nearby in Sanders' customized black Mercedes golf cart. The deluxe wheels include "Fulltime" vanity license plates, a blaring stereo system and a water-spray system to cool off Sanders' sweaty face. "I think it's great. I love watching Deion do his thing."

Sanders, who should be accustomed to fawning fans by now, appeared a little taken aback by the reception.

"The crowd was just great," he said. "This is why the Cowboys are world champions. They have fans like this. It makes you want to practice harder to please them. I really didn't expect this, though."

Sanders drew applause with several catches as he worked with quarterback Troy Aikman on the first team. He's catching passes in the place of Michael Irvin, who is in Miami getting his personal life in order after the recent drug scandal that landed him a four-year probation sentence. Still yet to be known is whether the NFL will suspend Irvin.

Threat of terrorism in Atlanta moves into forefront after crash of jet in New York

■ Fear that tragedy was caused by bomb dampens mood; opening ceremonies could be revised.

By Mitchell Landsberg
AP National Writer

ATLANTA — The threat of terrorism had lingered in the background for months while Atlanta prepared for the Olympic Games. It moved swiftly into the foreground on Thursday following the crash of a TWA jet in New York.

The fear that the crash was caused by a terrorist's bomb cast a pall over the games one day before the opening ceremonies and set some people in the Olympic city on edge.

"Yes, it has heightened my anxiety a little bit," conceded Don Mischer, executive producer of the opening ceremonies, which President Clinton plans to attend. "But I also have confidence that our security system is going to rise to the task here."

Mischer said he might revise the opening ceremonies Friday night to acknowledge the tragedy. Mayor Bill Campbell said the crash "certainly overshadows the joy that we feel in preparing to host the world for the Olympic Games."

Security surrounding the Olympics has been extraordinarily tight. The games were in the planning stages when terrorists bombed the World Trade Center in New York and the feder-

Former policeman indicted in Irvin plot

By Janine Zuniga
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Former Dallas police officer Johnnie Hernandez was indicted Thursday in connection with an alleged plot to kill Cowboys star Michael Irvin.

Grand jurors indicted Hernandez, 28, on one count of criminal solicitation of capital murder and one count of bribery, a charge unrelated to the alleged Irvin scheme.

Prosecutors say Hernandez, who was released from jail on bond Tuesday, paid an undercover Drug Enforcement Agent a $2,960 down payment on a contract to kill Irvin.

49er Young getting plenty of coaching

ROCKLIN, Calif. (AP) — Steve Young won't lack for coaching — or coaches — this season. "I'll tell you what, I've got some coaching going on," Young said after Thursday's opening session of the San Francisco 49ers training camp.

His audience included Bill Walsh, back with the team as an offensive consultant after coaching the club to three Super Bowl titles in the 1980s, and newly hired quarterback coach Matt Cavanaugh, himself an NFL quarterback for 14 years.

Of course, offensive coordinator Marc Trestman and coach George Seifert were right there as well.

Young, who went without a quarterback coach last season after Gary Kubiak left to become offensive coordinator for the Denver Broncos, said he and backup Elvis Grbac should benefit from the additional instruction, particularly from Walsh.

"I think Marc and I and Matt and Elvis are really enjoying the chance to just kind of hear from Bill," said Young, who has worked with Walsh on his fundamentals twice a week over the last two months. "He's kind of a wealth of knowledge. He's been called the genius for many years and we've gotten used to that, but there's a reality to that."

"Now he's advising Marc and the offense, and you get that isolation and concentration of effort. I really couldn't ask for anything more."

Young said he didn't think there would be a problem with a clash of egos among his instructors.

"It's actually going to be just fine. We've worked through those kinks during the offseason," he said.

"We've talked it through. Bill knows exactly what he wants to do. We all are in a very comfortable area with Bill."

Young is coming off an injury-marred 1995 campaign. The two-time league MVP missed five games due to a left shoulder strain, though Grbac filled in admirably during his absence.

Bill Walsh, center, watches practice with 49er quarterback Steve Young Thursday.

During the offseason, Young included weightlifting in his conditioning regimen for the first time to strengthen his passing arm and the strained shoulder that powers it.

"I'm not going to be a power lifter, but it certainly has become dramatically stronger in just four months because I'd come from nothing," Young said. "It sounds kind of cliché, but it's better than ever."

San Francisco finished last season 11-5 but failed to defend its 1994 championship, losing to Green Bay in a divisional playoff in January. "These frustrating scenarios of ending the season this way tend to grate over the offseason," Young said. "You know, you'll be watching something and start thinking about it and suddenly you kind of grit your teeth and just get (mad)."

"I think last year was kind of a humiliating ending to a very good season in many ways, and I don't want to forget that. I'm not the only one who doesn't want to forget that. I'd rather do anything else than have that happen."

A dropoff in Young's passing efficiency along with the 49ers' over-reliance on the passing game late in the season was part of the reason the team brought Walsh back and added Cavanaugh to the coaching staff.

Young finished with a 92.3 passer rating in 1995, his lowest in five seasons as San Francisco's starter.

TV sports producer on jetliner

NEW YORK (AP) — The executive producer of ABC Sports, his wife and their 13-year-old daughter were aboard the TWA jetliner that exploded off the Long Island coast, ABC said Thursday.

Jack O'Hara, 39, a five-time Emmy Award-winner, was on the Paris-bound flight to supervise coverage of the final weekend of the Tour de France cycling race. It was to be his last assignment for ABC; he had resigned on Wednesday, said Mark Mandel, director of media relations for ABC Sports.

ABC Sports reportedly had dismissed him earlier this week as part of the division's consolidation with ESPN. Mandel said ABC does not comment on personnel matters.

O'Hara spoke to a colleague from the TWA's terminal shortly before boarding Flight 800 with his wife, Janet, and daughter, Caitlin, Mandel said. Their twin boys, Brian and Matthew, 12, did not accompany them.

"Jack was a great guy who was passionate about his work and committed to airing the finest sports television programming possible," Bob Iger, the chief executive officer and president of Capital Cities/ABC Inc., said in a statement Thursday.

Said Mandel: "It's a surreal atmosphere at ABC Sports and at the network. No one believes it actually happened. It's been a nightmare."

O'Hara, who was appointed executive producer of ABC Sports in April 1991, was responsible for all aspects of the production of ABC Sports telecasts, including NFL "Monday Night Football" and "ABC's Wide World of Sports."

He recently received the Byline Award from his alma mater, Marquette University's College of Journalism.

O'Hara joined ABC Sports in 1983 after three years as a producer with Major League Baseball Productions. Mandel said O'Hara had not told ABC of his future plans.

O'Hara, who graduated from Scarsdale High School, received his degree from Marquette in 1979. He and his wife and three children lived in Irvington, N.Y.

GAMES: 1972 Olympics saw terrorist attack

(From 1C)

al building in Oklahoma City, and officials here have created an imposing battery of defenses to ensure that the games remain secure.

Only once before — Munich, 1972 — did terrorism intrude on the games. But that catastrophe, in which Palestinian terrorists killed 11 Israeli athletes and coaches, left scars on the Olympic movement that remain vivid today.

Police and soldiers, 30,000 strong, have been a constant presence in central Atlanta this week. At the offices and hotel used by Olympic officials, soldiers in combat fatigues search every car that pulls into the garage, even using mirrors on poles to scan the underbodies.

At highly secure areas, such as the Olympic Village, an elaborate clearance system has been established that relies on "biometric" scanners to determine people's identity through an optical scan of their hands.

"Realistically, I don't think there's any reason to worry here," Ben Helm, a British rower, said after hearing about the plane crash. "We are probably in the most secure place in the United States."

Still, Olympic officials said they would probably try to ratchet up security another notch.

"We have been informed that security measures have been tightened in connection with everything related to flights, airport procedure and control," said Francois Carrard, director general of the International Olympic Committee. "This is the logical reaction which should be taken."

William Rathburn, the Olympics' director of security, said there wasn't much more he could do. "We have done everything humanly possible to provide the very highest level of security," he told NBC's "Today" show. "Our security has always been designed for the worst-case scenario."

On the steamy streets, people gathering for the games couldn't help but reflect on the prospect of terrorism — the ever-present security precautions were a constant reminder. But most took the latest news in stride.

"There's always that fear," said Sam Curtis of Phoenix, who was waiting in a ticket line, hoping to get into some Olympic shooting events. "But I won't let terrorism keep me indoors. If you do, then they've succeeded."

Jerrie Reeder, a Southern Baptist volunteer from Brookville, Fla., stood on another street passing out religious pamphlets to passers-by. Three security guards stood near her on the sidewalk. Six mounted police passed by on the street.

"It seems like there are police everywhere I look," Reeder said. "I think Atlanta's done all they can do."

"Not everyone was sanguine. 'We are afraid,' said Sylvia Ahas, a tourist from the Philippines who had come to Atlanta for the games. "This is my first Olympics, and my last."

But hers was a minority view.

Terry McHugh of Ireland, competing in his third Olympics in the javelin, may be used to the threat of terrorism — but not to the level of security he has seen in Atlanta.

"We haven't seen anything like this," he said. In past Olympics, "We used to breach security deliberately to let friends in and the like. There's none of that here. What it means is, damn, we can't get our friends in, but from a peace of mind standpoint, it's very comforting."

DEION: Aikman says Sanders still with long way to go

(From 1C)

Kevin Williams worked at Irvin's position and Sanders was at flanker.

"We miss the No. 1 receiver in pro football," Sanders said.

Once, on a lark, Deion worked against Smith, who did a surprising job of staying with the speedy defensive back.

"I jumped in there because I wanted to show him I can play both ways, too," Smith said. "I surprised him with my footwork."

Aikman said Sanders looked good "but still has a long way to go. It will take time, but we'll get it down. I just don't want to see him on offense full-time. He may be the best cover corner, and I know how hard it is for a quarterback to go against him. We still need him on defense, too."

Sanders said, "I love the challenge of being able to play both ways. One of my goals has been to play receiver. I don't have any big personal goals. I want to win for my team. I want another Super Bowl ring." Sanders was wearing jersey No. 2 instead of his usual No. 21.

"I wore No. 2 at Florida State and my father loved that number before he passed," Sanders said. "I'll be No. 21 during the season."

He added, "I guess if I was playing baseball today I'd be in a dugout somewhere eating sunflower seeds."

Instead, Sanders was battling the heat and humidity of Austin. It wasn't 10 minutes into the workout before he had to change a fresh "Do-Rag" for his soaked one.

"I'm gassed, man," Sanders said.

Smith watched from the custom leather seat in Sanders' souped-up golf cart.

"Let's see what's on the stereo," Smith said, pumping up the volume on a rap tune playing on the stereo. "Oh, that must be Tupac Shakur."

About that time, Sanders returned to the cart.

"Boy, I hope I'm not charged for the ride," Smith joked. "I bet I can get by with giving him a quarter."

CAMP NOTES

DUBIOUS HONOR: Rookie running back Jarvis Perry, a free agent from Rowan College, fumbled on consecutive carries during a 10-minute "middle drill" scrimmage. The dubious debut was not well-received by coaches.

CHAD HENNINGS: The Cowboys' 295-pound defensive tackle in his fifth season, had the honor of making the first tackle of training camp.

STEFFRET SIGNS: Third-round draft pick Steffret Williams was participating in the afternoon workout after signing a multiyear contract. The wide receiver from Northeast Louisiana made several nice catches off the arm of quarterback Troy Aikman.

NO EASY LIVING FOR SUMMER CAMPERS: The Super Bowl champions didn't take long to get back to business.

Less than an hour into the first practice of training camp, the team had a quick 10-minute scrimmage in a "middle drill," where runners are supposed to run between the tackles.

"It was a spirited opener," said coach Barry Switzer.

The Cowboys' annual Blue-White scrimmage is at 1 p.m. Sunday at Nelson Field.

Scattered clouds kept the temperature down to 85 degrees in the morning workout.

CASILLAS' BACK PAINS: Defensive lineman Tony Casillas was missing at the morning workout while he let some back spasms go down. The Cowboys signed Casillas as reserve help but were waiting for medical clearance before he begins the camp grind.

KEVIN SMITH WATCHES: Cornerback Kevin Smith was watching from the sidelines while resting his torn achilles tendon, an injury suffered last year in the opener against the New York Giants.

He plans to join full workouts in about two weeks.

"If I had to play tomorrow, I could," Smith said.

PLOT: Hernandez faces up to 99 years in prison

(From 1C)

The bribery charge came to light during the investigation into the alleged plot. A police affidavit said Hernandez sold classified criminal records of an unidentified person to an undercover officer for $300.

Hernandez is set to stand trial Aug. 5. If convicted, he faces up to 99 years in prison. Irvin has been subpoenaed to testify.

Hernandez' attorney Frank Perez said the indictments "came as no surprise" to him or his client and that the defense will be ready to go to trial next month as scheduled.

"(Co-counsel) John Read and I plan on meeting with (Assistant District Attorney Toby Shook) on Monday so that we can get some discovery, look at their evidence and get some copies of the videotapes," Perez said, referring to tapes in which Hernandez is said to discuss the scheme.

Prosecutors on Thursday refused comment, citing a new gag order imposed by state District Judge Jack Hampton.

Hernandez reportedly wanted Irvin killed because his girlfriend, topless dancer Rachelle Marie Smith, said the Cowboys star threatened her. Both Hernandez and Smith were subpoenaed as witnesses in Irvin's cocaine-possession trial.

Smith testified in the case last Friday about drug and sex parties she had attended with Irvin. On Monday, Irvin entered a no-contest plea to the felony charge against him and was sentenced to four years' deferred adjudication, a form of probation. He was also fined $10,000 and ordered to perform 800 hours of community service.

Defense attorneys have said that

Hernandez tried to back out of the alleged murder-for-hire plot, but that the undercover agent coerced him into agreeing to proceed.

During a hearing two weeks ago, Dallas police Sgt. John Coughlin testified about audio and video tapes recorded June 26.

In the tapes, Hernandez is said to discuss the scheme and to pay the undercover DEA agent. About four hours later, Coughlin said, Hernandez "paged the agent and told him he had thought about it and asked if he could call it off."

During a 10-minute telephone conversation, Coughlin said, the DEA agent told Hernandez: "I already made the payment. I paid people. Why are you having reservations?"

The police officer said Hernandez was at times "wishy washy" about the plot but was never coerced by investigators.

Hernandez resigned from the police force the next day, when he was arrested and charged with solicitation of capital murder.

Hampton reduced bail for Hernandez from $252,500 to $22,500 on Tuesday.

Gas prices plunge

Natural gas futures prices plunged 8 percent to a five-week low Thursday, hurt by trader fears that supplies are exceeding demand and prices will continue to fall.

The natural gas drop stemmed partly from Wednesday evening's American Gas Association report, which showed stockpiles had risen 94 billion cubic feet in the latest survey. The number was within expectations, but many traders believed the buildup signaled it was time to unload a resource that has fallen 12 percent this week.

Natural gas also dropped because of disinterest from businesses that store — rather than sell — natural gas for profit, said analyst Brian Manolis at Paribas Futures in New York. He said prices are not high enough for them to fill storage tanks.

Natural gas for August delivery fell 20.8 cents to $2.430 on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Crude and gasoline fell on speculation Iraq is getting closer to the day it will be able to sell oil under a U.N. agreement.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar finished mixed against leading currencies Thursday after falling sharply when Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan, testifying before Congress, implied that an interest rate hike isn't imminent.

Greenspan's appearance sent the dollar into a steep dive shortly before midday. The dollar slowly recovered during the afternoon and finished higher against the German mark, but couldn't make up its lost ground against the Japanese yen.

In New York, the dollar traded at 1.4920 marks, up from 1.4857 on Wednesday. The dollar also traded at 108.46 yen, just down from 108.68.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday: 1.2196 Swiss francs, up from 1.2121; 5.0335 French francs, up from 5.0325; 1,518 Italian lire, down from 1,520; and 1.3654 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3619.

Trade deficit

WASHINGTON — The United States suffered its worst trade imbalance in eight years in May as its deficit with China almost surpassed that of Japan, which historically has the biggest surplus with America.

The data reported by the government Thursday raised questions about whether the economy is growing as fast as previously thought.

Baby Bell profits

Three regional phone carriers reported solid profit growth, driven in part by growing demand for more than one phone line in the home. SBC Communications Corp.'s profits rose 13 percent, Pacific Teles Group's rose 8 percent and Bell Atlantic Corp.'s rose 11 percent, they said Thursday.

McDonald's earnings

OAK BROOK, Ill. — McDonald's Corp. reported second-quarter profits rose 11 percent, helped by continued strong overseas sales and rapid domestic expansion. The results exceeded expectations and the fast-food giant's stock shot up $1.12 1/2 to $45.37 1/2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Markets rally on upbeat Fed report

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Alan Greenspan was typically vague, but it was enough to hold out hope for steady interest rates and stocks rallied Thursday as the market continued a rebound from the precipitous slide as the week began.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 87.30 to 5,464.18, about 9 points shy of its high for the day.

The blue-chip barometer and broader stock measures had given back some opening gains before jumping higher with bonds following a semiannual economic report by Greenspan, the ever-cautious Federal Reserve chairman.

Greenspan confirmed expectations Fed policy-makers are ready to nudge short-term interest rates up should inflationary pressures rise. But he also took pains to leave his options open, predicting a moderation in economic growth that would restrain inflation.

"It was a tone of 'wait-and-see,' and a 'wait-and-see' tone is better than 'we expect to raise rates now because we see a runaway economy,'" said Peter Anderson, chief investment officer at IDS Advisory Group in Minneapolis.

Bonds rallied after a transcript of Greenspan's comments was released. The yield on the 30-year Treasury bond — a key determinant of corporate and consumer borrowing costs — dropped below 7 percent for the first time in two weeks, heartening stock investors concerned about higher corporate borrowing costs and slower consumer spending.

The long-bond yield had soared to 7.19 percent on July 5 after the latest in a series of strong readings on employment and wage levels. The report reignited worries that rising corporate wage costs and consumer spending power would accelerate inflation, which reduces the value of such fixed-income investments as bonds.

Stocks also drew a boost from the second straight day of encouraging earnings reports by industrial bellwethers. The market had suffered earlier on disappointing profit news, particularly from computer-related businesses such as Hewlett-Packard and Motorola.

"Everybody is heaving a deep sigh of relief and saying the bad news is behind us in earnings and that maybe this sell-off was not justified," Anderson said.

The second straight day or relative calm came as welcome relief after the Dow industrials tumbled 161 points on Monday and another 167 points Tuesday afternoon before staging a stunning rebound, ending with a 9-point gain. On Wednesday, the Dow finished with an 18-point gain in calm trading.

Thursday's advance was more pronounced, with the battered Nasdaq Stock Market and American Stock Exchange, both dominated by depressed technology and smaller company issues, rallying back for the second straight session.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by nearly a 3-to-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume was heavy at 469.65 million shares, but trailed Wednesday's hectic pace.

The NYSE's composite index rose 5.00 to 345.10, and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 9.49 to 643.56.

The Nasdaq composite index added to Wednesday's record-setting 33-point gain, rising 23.17 to 1,109.82, and the Amex market value index rose 11.64 to 551.63.

The upbeat tone set Wednesday by Intel's strong earnings report was reinforced by news of a smaller-than-expected loss for Apple Computer. Apple shares jumped 4 to 20 7/8 in active Nasdaq trading, and Intel rose 7/8 to 72 1/2. Sun Microsystems, up 37-16 at 58 7/16, rallied into the close in advance of the company's earnings report, which met estimates.

The stream of strong earnings news from mainstream companies also continued. Among the Dow industrials, Merck and McDonald's beat analyst estimates with their second-quarter profit reports. Merck rose 1 5/8 to 64 3/8, and McDonald's rose 1 1/8 to 45 3/8.

But the Dow was weighed down by AT&T, down 2 1/4 to 54 1/8 after reporting profits that were in line with expectations, but raised concerns about the telecommunications company's consumer business.

Post Office testing fund transfers

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service is hitting the wires with an international electronic money transfer operation that will position it in direct competition with the industry's age-old leader.

The service — dubbed "Dinero Seguro," or in English, Sure Money — allows customers to send amounts less than $3,000 from a postal counter to any branch of Mexican banking giant Bancomer. The bank has about 900 locations throughout the country.

"Lots of folks come in and send money orders, and they don't always arrive," said Judy Phillips, customer service supervisor for San Angelo's downtown post office, where a Dinero Seguro computer terminal went on-line last week as part of a two-state test phase. "We're trying to eliminate those problems."

The service also is up and running in the South Texas cities of Laredo and Edinburg. Post offices in Houston, Lubbock, Corpus Christi, Midland, Odessa, Fort Worth and San Antonio are among those gaining the program later this year, many as early as July 29.

Many California postal stations also are participating in the test, said Dinero Seguro field coordinator Adalia Deluna from her McAllen, Texas, office. Only Huron, Calif., currently is on-line.

Lubbock Postmaster John Frisby said the electronic service, with rates varying from $15 for a $100 transfer to $132 to send $299.99, is the Postal Service's next logical step in service.

"More than 130 years ago we invented the money order so Civil War soldiers could send money home to their families," he said. Thousands of dollars are sent each day from U.S. workers back home to their families.

The service stands in direct competition to Western Union, which has been in the money-wiring business since 1871.

"They clearly see an opportunity to get into what's become a very high-growth part of the market," said Pete Zivert, spokesman for Western Union's Colorado-based parent company, First Data Corp. "The real question is whether they have the elements required by the money-transfer business that completely meets needs of customers."

The price variance between the services is minimal.

30-year mortgage rates dip to 8.23 percent

McLean, Va. — Thirty-year mortgage rates fell to 8.23 percent from 8.42 percent a week ago, Freddie Mac reported.

Although mortgage rates have declined, they're still close to last week's 71-week high. Rates have been rising since mid-February as expectations for a pick-up in economic growth drive U.S. bond yields higher.

The average rate on 30-year mortgages at lenders around the country reached this year's high of 8.42 percent last week, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., informally known as Freddie Mac. The average 30-year mortgage rate was 7.41 a year ago.

While many economists expect higher rates to translate into a slowdown in the housing market, Federal Reserve Gov. Lawrence Lindsey said yesterday the housing market is less vulnerable to slow-downs associated with rising interest rates, due to changes in the mortgage lending market.

In fact, the government reported this month that starts of new housing rose 1.3 percent in June, following a 7.5 percent surge in sales of new homes in May.

The average adjustable mortgage rate fell to 5.97 percent from 6.01 percent a week earlier. Fifteen-year mortgage rates averaged 7.76 percent, down from 7.93 percent the prior week.

Although, the housing market is still growing, many economists and homebuilders say rising rates will begin to discourage buyers later in the summer. In fact some builders are already seeing hints of a slowdown.

A: Private pension plans are basically cash value life insurance policies, not true retirement savings plans. Such policies combine term life insurance with a savings account.

While a Keogh or SEP-IRA retirement savings plan would offer you immediate federal and state income tax deductions on your contributions, a cash value life policy does not.

If you don't need life insurance, buying such a policy is a waste, because a good portion of your annual premium goes to pay for that. If you do need life insurance, you can buy term insurance at far lower cost.

The person who is trying to sell you the policy must be an insurance broker who would derive a big commission if he makes the sale.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

U.S. savings bonds should be one of many options

By Eric Tyson

Q: Through my company's payroll savings plan, I buy U.S. savings bonds both for myself and for my children's college education. I also am putting money into my 401(k) plan. Am I smart in doing both?

A: Please reassure this "Star Spangled Banner Boy" that savings bonds are more than just a "flag waving" savings tool.

First, keep in mind that the money you save and invest outside your 401(k) plan produces no tax deductions for you.

Thus, unless you have some compelling short-term savings goal, you should first maximize your contributions to your 401(k) plan before investing elsewhere.

If you are investing outside your 401(k) plan, U.S. savings bonds are one of many options. Generally speaking, the interest on U.S. bonds is federally taxable. Savings bond interest escapes state and local taxes, however.

If Series EE bonds purchased after 1989 are used to pay for college costs for your children, federal tax is not owed on the interest so long as you're not a high income earner (single filers with adjusted gross incomes below $42,300 and marrieds filing jointly with adjusted gross incomes below $63,450) when it comes time to cash the bonds in.

Thus, if you're in a high federal tax bracket, such bonds don't make sense, because the interest will be federally taxable, and at your high rate to boot.

You also should know that buying investments of any type, including EE bonds, in a child's name can hurt the child's ability to qualify for college financial aid. Save in a child's name only if you are sure that you will be paying for 100 percent of your child's college costs.

Finally, know that like other low-risk bonds, your annual returns probably will be in the 5 to 6 percent range, a good deal below the historic 10 percent returns stocks have produced.

Q: Should my husband and I contribute to an individual retirement account or a variable annuity after he maximizes his contributions to his 401(k) plan? As we understand that any contributions to an IRA will not be deductible for tax purposes, is the annuity the way to go?

A: You should first contribute to your IRAs.

Annuities carry extra operating fees because of the small amount of insurance that they carry. It's not really life insurance, but if you as the annuity holder pass away and your investment declined in value since it was purchased, your beneficiaries get back your initial investment amount.

If your income is high enough, your IRA contributions will not be tax-deductible. However, like money contributed into an annuity, which is also not tax-deductible, your IRA contributions grow without taxation until withdrawn.

Consider funding an annuity only after you have exhausted your ability to contribute to your 401(k) type plans and your IRAs, and then only if you have at least 15 years to allow the money to compound in the annuity.

Q: As a self-employed professional, I would like to save money through a retirement plan to reduce my taxes. What do you think of a private pension plan, which a financial planner has ARLINGTON — Rafael Bournival's single with one out in the top of the 11th inning drove in Terry Steinbach from second base to rally the Oakland Athletics past the Texas Rangers 5-4 Thursday night.

AL Roundup

Steinbach led off with a double just over the head of first baseman Rene Gonzales off Mark Brandenburg (1-2) and went to third on Jose Herrera's sacrifice bunt. Bournival, who singled in the go-ahead run for the Athletics in the ninth, then hit a soft liner to right to put Oakland ahead.

Carlos Reyes (5-10) pitched a scoreless 10th. Buddy Groom got two outs in the 11th and Todd Van Popel got Juan Gonzalez to ground out to second with a runner on first for his first major-league save.

Oakland won its third straight and 10th in 15 games. The Athletics reached .500 (48-48) for the first time since May 18 (20-20).

The Athletics trailed by one against Texas starter Roger Pavlik heading into the ninth, but scored twice to take a one-run lead. Steinbach hit a pinch-double to tie it, and Bournival hit an infield single with one out to give Oakland a short-lived 4-3 lead.

Indians 5, Twins 4

CLEVELAND — Manny Ramirez and Eddie Murray led off the bottom of the ninth with consecutive homers, leading Cleveland over Minnesota.

With Minnesota leading 4-3, Ramirez connected against Dave Stevens for his 24th homer of the season. Murray, pinch hitting for Jeromy Burnitz, then homered off Eddie Guardado (5-4), his 12th this season and the 491st of his career.

Royals 7, White Sox 1

CHICAGO — Kevin Appier pitched six strong innings in his first start in two weeks and Craig Paquette drove in four runs as Kansas City Royals beat Chicago.

Appier (8-7), sidelined since July 3 because of inflammation in his right biceps, was sharp. He allowed one run and three hits, walked two and struck out seven. Hipolito Pichardo pitched three innings of hitless relief for his second save.

Orioles 6, Red Sox 3

BOSTON — David Wells won on the road for just the second time this season, and B.J. Surhoff and Chris Hoiles homered to lead Baltimore over Boston.

Wells (6-9) had been just 1-5 with a 7.04 ERA in seven road starts. He allowed three runs — two earned — and six hits in 6 2-3 innings, sending the Red Sox to just their second loss in eight games since the All-Star break.

Randy Myers got five outs for his 19th save. Aaron Sele (4-6) gave up five runs — four earned — and eight hits in 6 1-3 innings. He struck out a season-high seven and walked one.

Blue Jays 8, Tigers 4

TORONTO — Joe Carter's two-run homer sparked a seven-run fourth inning and Pat Hentgen pitched eight strong innings to lead Toronto over Detroit.

Robert Perez had three hits and two RBIs as the Tigers lost their third straight and eighth of 11.

Smoltz leads majors with 16 wins after Astros fall

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Fred McGriff hit a tie-breaking home run leading off the eighth inning to give John Smoltz his major league-leading 16th victory and the Atlanta Braves a 3-2 win over Houston on Thursday night.

McGriff's 21st home run on the second pitch from Todd Jones (6-3) sent the Braves to their sixth straight win and the Astros to their fifth consecutive loss.

Smoltz (16-4) allowed seven hits, struck out seven and walked two as he came within two outs of his fifth complete game.

Mark Wohlers relieved Smoltz in the ninth with one out and runners on first and second. Orlando Miller hit into a fielder's choice and Rick Wilkins struck out as Wohlers earned his 21st save.

Houston starter Mike Hampton gave up two runs and 10 hits in seven innings for the Astros, who have lost six of their last eight.

Sullivan leads Guaranty golf

Associated Press

MADISON, Miss. — Mike Sullivan capped a 7-under-par 65 with three straight birdies Thursday and took a one-shot lead after the opening round of the Deposit Guaranty Golf Classic.

Golf Roundup

Sullivan, who hasn't won on the PGA Tour since the B.C. Open last year, leads Kirk Triplett, Robert Gamez, Dudley Hart, Bryan Gorman and Hisayuki Sasaki by one after the first round over the Annandale Golf Club.

Six golfers, including Tommy Armour III and Dave Stockton, Jr., were two shots back after 67s, and native Mississippian Jim Gallagher, Jr., of Greenwood, shot a 3-under 69 to be among 15 in a tie for 15th place.

Recent rains that softened the fairways made the course play longer while the soft greens allowed players to take aim at the pins. In all, 76 players shot better than par, and another 20 matched it on the 7,157-yard layout.

Gamez carded seven birdies, including four on the back nine. Triplett played a bogey-free round and made six birdies, three on each side.

Sullivan, ranked 136th on the tour's money list, made an eagle, six birdies and one bogey to register his lowest round on tour this year.

LPGA Friendly's

AGAWAM, Mass. — Brandie Burton did it with her putter, Mardi Lunn with her driver, and both ended up in the same place.

Burton and Lunn shot 5-under-par 67s to share the first-round lead in the LPGA Friendly's Classic.

Burton, who got a share of the lead with a 30-foot birdie putt on No. 18, credited a week of fishing and family for her round.

"Never took the clubs out of the bag," she said. "I just needed a big rest."

Margaret Platt, Marianne Morris and Dottie Pepper were at 68. Two-time U.S. Women's Open champion Annika Sorenstam of Sweden paced a group at 69 that included Shelley Hamlin and Sherin Smeyers.

Burton overcame three bogeys with precise putting.

"The putter was the key to the round today," she said. "I made some good putts when I needed to."

LUBBOCK — Tickets for the Sept. 7 Texas Tech-Oklahoma State game in Irving will go on sale Friday at 10 a.m. at all TicketMaster locations in Dallas/Fort Worth and the Red Raider Athletic Ticket office in Lubbock.

The contest will be the first-ever Big 12 game in the Metroplex, slated for an 11:30 a.m. kickoff at Texas Stadium.

Tickets can be purchased by calling TicketMaster at (214) 373-8000, the Texas Tech ticket office at (806) 742-4412 or toll-free at 1-tu-go-Big-12 (1-888-402-4412).

Texas Tech holds a 12-8-3 lead in the all-time series. The Red Raiders won the last meeting between the two schools 31-15 in 1989. The Cowboys' last win came in 1988, a 45-42 decision in the Coca-Cola Bowl in Tokyo.

Voskamp Wins 18th Stage, Riis Retains Overall Lead

HENDAYE, France (AP) — Dutch rider Bart Voskamp won today's stage of the Tour de France over the Pyrenees Mountains as Bjarne Riis of Denmark maintained his virtually unbeatable lead with three days left.

With only a flat stage Friday and the Tour's second time trial Saturday remaining before the ceremonial finale through Paris on Sunday, Riis appeared to secure his lock on his first Tour victory.

The 32-year-old Riis finished with the main pack of riders 16 minutes, 56 seconds behind Voskamp in the 97-mile stage from Pamplona, Spain to Hendaye, France.

Riis took command after winning Tuesday's stage and finishing second Wednesday in two grueling climbing stages in the Pyrenees that shook up the overall standings.

Five-time defending champion Miguel Indurain, who was going for his record sixth straight Tour win, finished with the main pack of riders today and remains 15:36 behind Riis.

About 15 riders pulled ahead of the main group halfway through the course and Voskamp outsprinted Germany's Christian Henn to win.

KEATON: Death-row murderer next role decisions and the universe kinda shifting around a little bit, you don't end up selling auto parts in some small town in Arkansas instead of some allegedly hip, sophisticated, powerful person's place or ski resort? ... You know what I mean? You know what I'm saying?"

The 44-year-old actor is responding to an oft-asked question: How does a big movie star like him come off being such a regular guy?

"It makes me self-conscious talking about this, because it sounds like a thing I'm pushing, and I'm not pushing it. It's just me," says Keaton, the youngest of seven children from a working-class family outside of Pittsburgh. "I'm not saying, 'Oh, what a swell guy I am.'"

The bat wings relax and Keaton's steely blue-gray eyes shine with that mischievous, wise-guy look of "Johnny Dangerously" or the fast-talker in "Gung Ho."

"Hey," he says, chortling. "By the way, did I tell you how swell I am?"

Keaton isn't here to talk about his personality; he's peddling "Multiplicity."

It's a comedy about a construction foreman named Doug Kinney who has himself cloned three times to make more time for his duties as employee, husband, father and house-fixer-upper.

Portraying four characters who frequently appear on screen together was irresistible for an actor who has developed a reputation for trying different things.

His work includes the wildly divergent roles of the hyperactive "idea man" who turns the city morgue into a brothel in the comedy "Night Shift," the whacked-out ghost in "Beetlejuice," a drug addict in "Clean and Sober," and, of course, "Batman."

To pull off the illusion of different versions of himself interacting, Keaton first performed the part of one character then used a videotape of the performance to time his movements while playing another.

"The technical aspect was so tedious and so hard that ... if you really wanted to be good in it as an actor, it just made it that much more difficult," Keaton says.

"It's not like saying, 'OK, here's my character, here's another person I'm playing and I know the person in this movie is going to go from A to B to C to D. I had four guys going from A to B to C to D."

Keaton gnaws on a tuna fish sandwich, jumps up to grab some Italian chocolates, and later plants his teeth in a Snicker's bar while answering questions.

He crosses and uncrosses his legs, flops his feet over the side of the armchair, scrunches himself sideways with his head in his hand, then pops up again and faces forward.

You almost expect him to leap up and do back flips or start singing "Jumping Jack Flash" while dancing in a pair of red Keds a la Billy Blaze in "Night Shift" — any excuse to not have to sit still.

The phone rings and he's got his chance. "Excuse me, I think this is President Clinton," he says, darting out of his chair and grabbing the receiver.

Yeah, he's trying to see if he can get any suggestions on this whole Whitewater thing. I don't know what to tell him. I said, 'Let it blow over,' but maybe I'm wrong."

His eyebrows dance and his mouth puckers up into the sarcastic expression of pathological liar Billy Caulfield in "The Dream Team" when he weaves a fictitious tale about winning car races at Daytona.

"Ahhh, to be young and insane," you can almost hear Caulfield say as Keaton hangs up the phone and plops back down in his chair.

And what about those eyebrows, anyway?

"I use them to clean out the corners of my garage," Keaton quips. "Eugene Levy (who plays a cement contractor in 'Multiplicity') says they have their own agent. HIS eyebrows have their own apartment, I think."

Perhaps it's the eyebrows, or his characters' nervous and sometimes violent bursts of energy (like when Caulfield shoves a man's face in his plate at a restaurant then calmly reassures other customers he's a security guard just taking care of a "minor utensil violation") that continually hint at a darker side of Keaton.

It's a side fans have glimpsed in the detective who goes over the edge and robs a drug dealer in "One Good Cop," in Keaton's depressed, brooding "Batman," and in the tenant from hell in "Pacific Heights."

His next movie is "Desperate Measures," about a man trying to find a bone marrow donor for his son who's dying of cancer. The only suitable match is a prisoner serving a life sentence for murder, played by Keaton.

"There were two roles and I like the bad guy in this particular one," he says.

When it comes to choosing scripts, Keaton says he doesn't necessarily look for dark or comic roles, but likes to "respond to the role that speaks to me the loudest."

"There are times that ... boy I just feel like playing me, something light and easy and fun, and then there are times ... I need to be someone in a movie that lets me feel like I can say something," he says.

Keaton says there's a lot he still hasn't said — "about the human condition, about what people really feel inside."

Then again, he still insists, as he did 10 years ago, that he doesn't really need acting to make his life complete.

"I obviously have a need to express myself in some way, and I think what I'm going to start looking for at some point is another way, in the movie industry or not in the movie industry. ... For now this is what it is."

John Chancellor's legacy: What's right with TV news

By Frazier Moore
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — As the interview ended, one last question popped into my head.

"How would you like to be remembered?" I asked John Chancellor.

We both let out an uneasy chuckle — whoops, sounds a little final, doesn't it? — but he knew I just wanted him to sum up his four decades at NBC News, his distinguished tour of duty that was coming to a close.

Here is how he replied that morning three years ago: "I guess I would like to be remembered as the fellow who never tried to sell the audience any rugs."

It was vintage Chancellor: direct, droll, self-effacing, self-assured.

It typified his thrice-weekly commentaries on "The NBC Nightly News" since 1982, and his decade as "Nightly News" anchor before that, and his groundbreaking years as a correspondent for years before that, beginning when he first showed up for work in 1950 as one of a quartet of NBC News reporters. Worldwide.

On July 9, 1993, Chancellor gave his farewell commentary, the last of some 1,500. "It was an honor to be a guest in your home," he told viewers.

Almost three years later to the day, cancer took his life.

Now, however unexpectedly by either of us, Chancellor's impromptu self-appraisal — he never tried to sell the audience any rugs — stands as a fitting eulogy.

His glorious hitch at NBC has been itemized by others since his death a week ago.

But as a viewer, what I know apart from the particulars is this: Chancellor was there, reliably, as far back as I can remember.

As a kid, I gravitated to NBC

Appreciation

News' coverage of politics and the space race. Those were formative years for me as a TV-news junkie, and also, as it happened, a golden age for the network then deploying heavyweights like Chet Huntley, David Brinkley, Frank McGee, Sander Vanocur, Edwin Newman and, of course, Chancellor.

Covering the 1964 Republican Convention, for instance, NBC won more viewers than ABC and CBS combined.

Including me. Indeed, I happened to be among the millions tuned to NBC during what became, somewhat to Chancellor's chagrin, his best-remembered dispatch.

Even to my young ear, his signoff — "This is John Chancellor, somewhere in custody" — was an instant classic. It was unexcited and straight to the point, with a trace of the seriocomic as he got the bum's rush by security guards arresting him for blocking an aisle.

He made it clear this retirement wasn't really a retirement for a man who, with his wife, Barbara, was picking up from Manhattan, N.J., where he looked forward to many more productive years.

He was going to write books, he said, "and live a different sort of life."

enough time to do everything he wants, so he gets another clone. Three is sensitive and nurturing and a lot more patient with the kids. But then Two and Three get antsy and clone Four off of Two; being a copy of a copy, he doesn't come out so clearly, and seems arrested at the developmental stage of a slow 6-year-old.

Naturally, Doug's exponentially problematic little secret causes escalating confusion, both on the job and, especially, for Laura, who can't understand her husband's wildly shifting moods and failure to remember recent conversations. Yes, all the clones end up in bed with her (the movie's comic high point, which also makes you wish for a little less sentimentality and an extra wacky set piece or two), which leads Doug to seriously question the marvels of technology.

Even though it's the technical genius of Richard Edlund's special effects crew that makes "Multiplicity" possible, it is Keaton's heartfelt characterizations that make it matter. He carefully calibrates each Doug's personality and development, then mixes them up with the other selves without ever losing track of who's who. As astonishing as it is to see three Keatons shaving — in the same shot with two sets of mirror reflections! — or Doug pouring Coke into a glass held by Four, the most impressive miracle here is how Keaton highlights the many sides of modern man.

Bravo to MacDowell, too, who brings her own convincing shades of multiple personality traits to the most demanding of straight roles.

Any man who's ever felt guilty about not doing all he should, or felt cheated out of doing so much he'd like to, will make a soul connection to Doug. Often while laughing their heads off, like many others who'll be watching "Multiplicity."

crack the case at any cost? And what's really going on with that creepy mother-and-daughter team?

All in good time, for Jackson is the type to let his stories unfold at a leisurely pace, however frenzied the action. His actors likewise allow things to simmer until an explosive boiling point is reached. Fox's transition from affability to anguish is almost undetectably subtle. And Stone's appearance seems calculated to make the viewer wonder whether she might be a deranged menace, and to hope she is not; great to see the star of "The Howling" (1980) and

"Cujo" (1983) back in a role of such unnerving intensity.

Characterizations drive "The Frighteners" to such an extent that the elaborate special effects have no choice but to serve the story. Even the ghosts are brightly realized personalities — especially John Astin's wild-West gunslinger, sadly nearing the end of a long trail but determined not to go out quietly.

RADIO: Lyrical pessimism precedes recession, analyst says native rock of the Smashing Pumpkins and the staccato rap of Bone Thugs-n-Harmony.

And though it is unlikely that anyone can come up with a theory into which every piece of music in the top 40 fits neatly (or not so neatly), some theories go a long way toward doing so.

A good metaphor for 20th-century popular music is the banyan tree. As it grows, its branches send shoots to the ground, and each branch takes root and forms a new trunk. Eventually, an intricate network of trees is created, with the trees having two things in common: all are rooted in the same ground and all are linked, either directly or remotely.

And as the banyan tree sprouts new branches, even its oldest, most obscure ones remain alive. The banyan tree is popular music, its branches are different musical styles, and the earth that nourishes it is traditional African, European and Asian music.

Guy Zapoleon, one of radio's top consultants, has been studying the way the banyan tree of popular music has been growing from the dawn of top-40 radio in the mid-1950s to the present. He has been trying to figure out why, after a branch like acid rock has taken root, it has been followed by a contrary style like soft rock.

His theory, one of the more plausible ones out there, is that the music on pop radio is cyclical. Every 10 years, it moves through the same three phases. It begins with "birth" (or "rebirth"), when an exciting musical trend appears, moves to "extremes," when the music loses its freshness and its audience gravitates to excessive, specialized polarities, then ends with "doldrums," when radio overcompensates for trendy indulgence and plays it safe with traditional, middle-of-the-road music.

Zapoleon believes that radio has been through four such cycles. The first began in 1956, with the emergence of Elvis Presley, Chuck Berry and rock-and-roll, and the fourth ended in 1991, with old-school rockers like the Beatles and the mid-mannered country of Garth Brooks and Billy Ray Cyrus.

Here's an example of a complete cycle (the second): the rise of Motown and the beginning of the British invasion in the mid-60s triggered a rebirth, followed by the extremes of acid rock and hard-edged psychedelic soul in the late 60s, then the doldrums of James Taylor, John Denver and Anne Murray in the early 70s.

According to this theory, radio is in the early stages of a fifth cycle. The rebirth began brewing with the success of Seattle grunge bands like Nirvana and Pearl Jam in 1992, which led to the rise of modern, or alternative, rock as the country's most popular new radio format.

In Manhattan alone, there are four stations playing Pearl Jam, Nirvana and their many clones. But this excessive attention to one style and the growing homogeneity of the alternative rock played on the radio are sure signs that the freshness is fast becoming stale.

Top 40 is now not far from the "extremes" phase, and if Zapoleon's predictions are right, a hard, pessimistic variant of alternative rock will begin to dominate pop radio.

To anyone who listens to rock radio today and hears what sounds like Pearl Jam being played over and over again, the word rebirth may not come to mind as quickly as the word redundancy. So it may be useful to posit another theory on top of Zapoleon's: that top-40 radio is two to four years late in getting to the music that revitalizes it.

Consider, for example, radio's current "rebirth" bands, Nirvana and Pearl Jam. From 1988 to 1990, two years before either's first top-40 single, college radio stations were on top of this style, playing albums by Nirvana and Mother Love Bone (with members of Pearl Jam), as underground rock fans eagerly sought out any band from Seattle.

If this period seems like an exception, consider the year 1956, when Presley, Berry and others burst into the limelight. By then, Presley had already recorded what was arguably his best music, his singles on the Sun label: "That's All Right," "Good Rockin' Tonight" and "Mystery Train," which came out in 1954 and 1955.

And the Chess label, on which Berry appeared, had for a couple of years been putting out blues and rhythm-and-blues songs by Little Walter, Bo Diddley and the Moonglows that appealed to the nascent (primarily white) rock audience.

So what is brewing in the underground today that may lead to the rebirth of top-40 radio in 2000?

It's hard to tell. The exciting underground music of 1969, by bands like the Stooges and the Velvet Underground, was never picked up by top-40 radio. Nor, to any great extent, was the music of Parliament-Funkadelic or the Meters. But all these bands proved to be among the most influential of rock and rhythm-and-blues.

So it remains to be seen whether non-

Western music by performers like Nasir Fateh Ali Khan and Cesaria Evora or the soundtrack-meets-dance music of Tricky and Portishead or a variant of techno will lead to radio's next rebirth.

Though top-40 radio may be slow to pick up new styles of music, it may be ahead on one front: economic recession. Harold Zullo, a clinical psychologist who has analyzed the lyrics of every top-40 song from 1955 to the present, believes that increases in pessimistic song content precede recessions by one to two years.

This theory makes sense: when the public isn't feeling good or optimistic, it isn't spending and investing a lot of money. The downcast hits of 1956 — from Presley's "Heartbreak Hotel" and "Hound Dog" to Guy Mitchell's "Singing the Blues" — preceded the recession of 1958. The big songs of 1979 — Donna Summer's "Bad Girls" and the Eagles' "Heartache Tonight" — preceded the downturn of the early 1980s.

So, look once more at Mariah Carey, the Smashing Pumpkins and Bone Thugs-n-Harmony, and you might find a link. Ms. Carey's "One Sweet Day" is about the death of a friend, and most of her new album, "Daydream," is about lost or unattainable love.

Bone Thugs-n-Harmony's hit "Tha Crossroads" and almost all of its album "E. 1999 Eternal" are about the AIDS-related death of other friends. And on most of their album "Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness," the Smashing Pumpkins sing of depression and death.

If these theories have any validity, prepare to close this century with years of bad radio and a bad economy.

CHANCELLOR: What is right about TV news

(From 8C)

Life as someone other than "John Chancellor-o-or." That was the stretch-limo treatment of his name by staff announcers after, somewhere along the line, one of them noticed that the newsmen called himself "Chancel-lore," not the more usual "Chancel-lurr."

"They took my name and gave it a kind of rhetorical, operative 'o,'" he recalled with a laugh. "I didn't say 'Chancel-o-or,' but THEY sure did."

He tried to make them understand, but "Chancel-o-or" it stayed.

"Finally, I said, screw it," Chancellor grinned.

It might have been the only time he settled for less than the truth.

band of bullies, unhappy with a home where his harried, hard-working mother (Ally Walker) is planning to finalize her divorce and establish a new life with her fireman boyfriend (John Costelloe). Max takes refuge from the bullies one day in an abandoned lamp factory.

And there, when he plunges through several levels of rotting floors, he comes to rest on a boombox and releases the the 5,000-year-old Kazaam.

Before long, the unhappy Max's search for the father who hasn't seen him in 10 years leads him and Kazaam to a club where they become involved with a villain named Malik (Marshall Manesh), assorted thugs, pirated recordings and other distractions that imperil the boy, his father and Kazaam's magical boombox.

In the end, of course, Max manages to do some good and Kazaam is promoted to the rank of jinn, which frees him from the slave status of genies.

As fairy tale, buddy comedy, family drama, thriller or rap revue, "Kazaam" is simply uninspired and unconvincing, and O'Neal, who can carry a basketball team, lacks the charisma to rescue this misguided effort.

"Kazaam" is rated PG. It contains one fairly mild four-letter word. Most of the violence is more audible than visible, but a child tossed down an elevator shaft may unsettle some youngsters. The real trauma inflicted by "Kazaam," though, is on the intellect.

'The Frighteners' will scare your socks off

■ Originally promoted as a grisly comedy, Michael J. Fox's new film is more a chilling murder story.

By Michael H. Price
N.Y. Times News Service

"Heavenly Creatures" (New Zealand: 1994) is the delicate gem that landed Peter Jackson his new Hollywood assignment. They could have called the follow-through movie "Hellish Creatures" and not fallen far from the mark.

Actually, the title is "The Frighteners," and despite Universal Pictures' best efforts to pitch the film as a grisly comedy, it emerges as a chilling exercise in murder, madness and mayhem from beyond the grave. The element of humor is generously deployed — but it is throughout at the service of the picture's essence of terror and sorrow.

The screenplay, by Fran Walsh and director Jackson, is an orchestrated collision of stories: Dee Wallace Stone, resurgent in the genre that made her famous almost a generation ago, plays a reclusive flake who seems to live in terror of her irritable mother (Julianne McCarthy). Michael J. Fox, whose dramatic range runs deeper than anyone seems willing to acknowledge, plays a breezy "ghostbuster" scam artist whose witty banter with three spectral assistants (John Astin, Chi McBride and Jim Fyfe) covers up a profound melancholy.

The link is Trini Alvarado, playing a physician whose own unhappy brushes with the supernatural seem to relate to a string of unexplained deaths in a placid seacoast town. The shooting locale is New Zealand, Jackson's turf, standing in convincingly for Northern California.

Fox's Frank Bannister, who has been seeing spooks since the violent death of his wife, has abandoned a promising career in architecture to run "ghost-extermination" scams. Stone's Patricia Bradley hasn't been the same since that day many years ago when her hoodlum boyfriend (Jake Busey, son of Gary) dragged her along on a serial-murder rampage.

It seems the very Angel of Death is stalking the town, but subtle clues suggest other possibilities. Why would someone or something bother framing Fox for a new string of killings? Why would an obsessive FBI man (Jeffrey Combs) be so determined to

Talented comic actor gung ho about latest film role

By Lisa J. Adams
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Michael Keaton's face is stretched in disbelief. The middle of his forehead creases, and those arching eyebrows merge into what looks like the wings of a bat ready to fly off his head.

"Look, you know what," he says emphatically, leaning forward in his chair. "Here's what no one realizes and I'm amazed. Sometimes ... you hear people make statements in Los Angeles or what is considered a very sophisticated circle and you honestly feel just like smacking 'em."

Keaton: Marvelous, marvelous, marvelous

'Multiplicity' outrageously funny, heartwarming at the same time

By Bob Strauss
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — "Multiplicity" makes you wonder who the fifth Best Actor Oscar nominee is going to be.

OK, the other four slots probably won't all go to Michael Keaton. But his astounding performance as this emotional comedy's harried householder and his three clones is so technically adroit — not to mention hilarious, moving and, in the most honest sense, self-centered — it deserves at least some kind of special award. Maybe four.

"Multiplicity" is another clever contraption from director Harold Ramis, who also gave us the marvelous time loop fantasy "Groundhog Day." Like that film, "Multiplicity" sucks a troubled man into a weird gimmick, which causes him no end of frustration but, finally, turns him into a better person.

Keaton's Doug Kinney, however, is not half the creep Bill Murray started out as in the earlier picture. He's just so overextended, and so self-pitying about it, that he can't do justice to his ever more demanding job, his wife and two kids or long-suppressed personal needs.

A supervisor for a thriving but understaffed Los Angeles construction company, Doug has to deal with inept subcontractors on job sites and workaholic careerists at the office. His wife, Laura (Andie MacDowell), has stayed at home with their two raucous children long enough and would like to return to her old real estate sales job — if only Doug could dependably share the parenting load. Meanwhile, half their rambling house is decorated in plastic sheeting and exposed lumber, a monument to the home improvements

Doug never has the time to finish. All of this, quite understandably, leads to angry outbursts. When Dr. Leeds (Harris Yulin), the head of a Malibu research center, observes Doug's stress, he offers the perfect solution: a clone with all of Doug's memories, who can share the workload and provide the original with more personal time.

Doug installs Two in the apartment above the garage, and things indeed get better for a little while. But there are two glitches in the scientific program: Two's pronounced testosterone level makes him a great worker but also aggressive and difficult, and Doug doesn't share any of Two's post-cloning knowledge.

There's also a major human imperfection that comes into play. Doug still feels he doesn't have Memo to Shaquille O'Neal: Don't give up your night job.

Memo to Walt Disney Studios: If "Kazaam" is the sort of movie you intend to eliminate in your plans to cut back on production and distribution, thanks.

"Kazaam," from Touchstone Pictures, an arm of Disney, stars O'Neal as a genie. As genies go — and the Disney people, who gave the world the animated "Aladdin" of 1992, ought to know — O'Neal can't hold a flickering lamp to Robin Williams.

O'Neal, of course, is a major star, but only if we're talking basketball, where he happens to excel for the Orlando Magic of the National Basketball Association.

As a result of his athletic fame and a warm smile, he has been marketed with success as a spokesman for athletic footwear, soft drinks and fast food and as a rap artist.

In "Kazaam," O'Neal (who is also credited as an executive producer) has plenty of help, beginning with an idea from Paul Glaser, the director and co-producer, who first achieved his own fame as Starsky of the television series "Starsky and Hutch."

O'Neal should have slam-dunked the script into the nearest wastebasket. Unfortunately, Christian Ford and Roger Soffer translated Glaser's idea into a screenplay that seems to have missed the central point about fairy tales involving genies or fairy godmothers: The people they help ought to seem worthy of magical intervention by first capturing our sympathy.

But as the genie's beneficiary, "Kazaam" serves up an obnoxious 12-year-old punk named Max (played by Francis Capra), who seems not so much an obnoxious Huck Finn of the 1990s as a candidate for serious therapy, juvenile detention or both.

Shaquille O'Neal's performance in "Kazaam" proves one thing: He should keep his real job.

Birth and rebirth on the airwaves

By Neil Strauss
N.Y. Times News Service

For some time now, the concept behind top-40 radio has been dead. Take a look at the charts. The music in the top 40 — hard-core rap, bedroom rhythm-and-blues, Latin pop, alternative rock, techno dance, country ballads, classic rock, ska reggae, children's songs, gospel, novelty tunes — is so varied that no commercial radio station could ever play it all and hold on to an audience.

Yet the artists performing this mix have plenty in common. They're all making music in and about the same period in history, living under the same government, recording for the same record labels, using the same technology, touring the same cities.

Trying to make sense of the wide range of popular and underground music is like being a character in a Kafka novel; one struggles to detect within a maze of petty rules and divisions a higher order that is completely inaccessible if it exists at all.

Nonetheless, some people try to squeeze this music into a unified theory, to find a bridge that will link the pop ballads of Mariah Carey with the alter-

SHAQ: Lakers increase original offer of $95 million after trades

(From 1C)

Vlade Divac, dealt to Charlotte, and start alongside Cedric Ceballos, Eddie Jones and Nick Van Exel.

Power forward Elden Campbell is still unsigned, but the Lakers hope to retain him. High school phenom Kobe Bryant, acquired for Divac, and center Sean Rooks, another free-agent acquisition, will give the Lakers, 53-29 last season, some bench strength.

"There's no question this is a rebirth," said Lakers general manager Jerry West, whose team last won an NBA title in 1988. "Our oldest player is only 28, and the only starter we've lost from last year is Divac."

The Lakers took a sizable risk waiting for O'Neal to decide whether to relocate. Every other marquee free agent, with the exception of Reggie Miller, found a new deal in the days since free agent signings began July 10.

Miller is expected to remain with the Indiana Pacers. Juwan Howard has been the only other hotly pursued free agent to switch teams, moving from the Washington Bullets to the Miami Heat for a reported $98 million over seven years.

For Orlando, the loss of its franchise player was devastating. O'Neal helped lead the Magic to the NBA Finals in 1995 on a team with a core of young, talented players that figured to remain an Eastern Conference powerhouse.

Now, however, O'Neal is gone, and Orlando has no money available under the salary cap to find a replacement for him. Dream Teamer Anfernee Hardaway acknowledged that Orlando may be unable to sustain its winning ways in the immediate years ahead.

"What happened early last season when Shaquille had an injury was just us having a little luck and winning early," Hardaway said. "I really don't think we can win for an entire season without a guy like Shaquille or a big center. You might be able to do it for a while, but not for a whole season."

O'Neal said he'd miss Orlando's fans, especially the younger ones, and emphasized that he was not involved in a feud with coach Brian Hill.

If O'Neal had decided to stay with the Magic, Los Angeles would have had more than $10 million in salary cap room to spend on players it really didn't want.

The crucial move in acquiring O'Neal was Tuesday's trade of Anthony Peeler and George Lynch to Vancouver for a second-round draft pick, freeing an additional $1.5 million under the salary cap that was used to sweeten the offer to O'Neal.

"Over the last few days, I can't say how many highs and lows I've been through," West said. "And to be candid, there were a couple of things we did that we really didn't want to do. We made that last trade to show the seriousness of our intention to acquire Shaquille."

The deal was brokered by agent Leonard Armato, who convinced both Orlando and Los Angeles to substantially increase their initial offers.

"I came in (to Atlanta with the Dream Team) last night and told Leonard to lay out all the offers, and the Lakers gave me the best offer," O'Neal said.

The deal was finalized at 2:15 a.m. Thursday, West said.

"I can't tell you how excited Southern California is right now," West said. "The response has been unprecedented in our history."

And the Lakers' ticket prices may be, too. The price of the cheapest ticket has risen from $9.50 to a whopping $21.

West brought a uniform No. 34 along to a news conference Thursday and O'Neal posed for pictures holding it up. His first two choices, Nos. 32 and 33, were worn by Magic Johnson and Abdul-Jabbar before the Lakers retired them.

Although they now have O'Neal, the Lakers will be without Johnson, who retired once again after his January-May comeback. Or will they?

"If he wants to come back again, I won't mind," O'Neal said.

Shaq continues big man tradition

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Mikan, Wilt, Kareem and now Kazaam.

The NBA's original big man in the middle, George Mikan, wore a Laker uniform 40 years ago when they were in Minnesota. Later, in Los Angeles, the Lakers suited up Wilt Chamberlain and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Now they again have the league's dominant center.

With the coming of Shaquille O'Neal, aka "Kazaam" in the movie of the same name, the Lakers are thinking championship rings again.

They won five NBA titles with the 6-foot-10 Mikan in the late 1940s and early 1950s, won their first league championship in Los Angeles with the powerful Chamberlain, 7-foot-plus, in 1972, then added five more titles in the 1980s with the 7-2 Abdul-Jabbar, tossing in skyhooks.

O'Neal, who commanded a behemoth $120 million, seven-year deal with the Lakers, also happens to be the heaviest of their distinguished line of big men, carrying 320 pounds on his 7-1 frame.

Although O'Neal wasn't able to bring an NBA title to Orlando, the Lakers obviously believe he can make them champions again.

Lakers executive Jerry West said at a news conference Wednesday in Atlanta he thought the word "superstar" was used too loosely, and there were many stars but few real superstars.

West paused and added, "The Los Angeles Lakers have acquired a 24-year-old superstar, who we feel is going to bring us back to that incredible level that this franchise has enjoyed in Los Angeles."

OPEN: Couples birdies 3 on front 9

(From 1C)

1988 by Seve Ballesteros.

"It's tremendous. Everyone thinks of leading the British Open, and I am no exception to that," Broadhurst said.

Couples, the 1992 Masters winner, birdied the fourth, fifth and seventh holes en route to a 3-under 32 on the front nine. He birdied the 10th to go 4-under, and birdied the par-5 11th out of a bunker to go 5-under. He gave that shot back with a bogey on the 13th, and saved par on No. 18 with a 20-foot putt.

"I think it'll be interesting Saturday and Sunday," Couples said. "A lot of people are going to be log-jammed around the lead."

Couples said the key was to stay out of the bunkers.

"On a course like this, it's safety first," he said.

Faldo, who won the Masters this year, made the turn at even par. He got to 1-under with a birdie at 11, sank a 25-foot par saver on the 13th hole, went to 2-under with a birdie on 15, then polished off the round with a 15-foot birdie putt on the 18th.

With later tee times were Ernie Els of South Africa, Corey Pavin and Welshman Ian Woosnam, winner of last week's Scottish Open.

Jack Nicklaus also had a later tee time, starting in the afternoon despite earlier reports that he would withdraw because of a bad back. The British Open is his 139th consecutive start in a major tournament, dating back to 1962. He shot 2-under 69 in an uneven round that saw his score go as low as 4-under par.

Some other early finishers included Payne Stewart at 70, Greg Norman at par 71, Ballesteros at 74, Bernhard Langer at 75 and Tom Kite at 77. Ballesteros won the British Open the last two times it was at Royal Lytham and St. Annes, in 1979 and '88.

As 67 proves, Couples' health, golf better

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — Fred Couples had only one complaint after shooting a 4-under-par 67 in Thursday's first round of the 125th British Open.

The weather was too good.

"I still think it would be more fun to play in 30 mph winds. That's why we come over," said Couples. "That's what the British Open is all about — not 80 degrees and no wind. ... I like it rough. It's a lot more fun to play."

Sorry, The London Weather Center predicts the warm sun, light winds and clear skies will hold throughout the tournament. And Couples figures his golf will, too.

After missing the Open the last two years with a bad back, Couples played Thursday like he was glad to return. He was up at 5 a.m., off the first tee at 7:55, and by noon he and playing partner Mark McCumber had shot 67s for a share of the early lead.

By the finish of the round, he was one of eight players — seven Americans — two shots behind little-known leader, Englishman Paul Broadhurst.

Couples beat a strong field three months ago in winning The Players Championship. It was his first win since the Buick Open two years ago, and he said it showed that his back is better — and so is his game.

"I have no problem with my back as long as I'm playing," he said. "I got a little anxious teeing off, but I hit the ball solid. ... But that's the way I've been playing most of the year."

Couples, 36, is treating his back with a daily routine that includes stretching and resistance exercises — and a half-hour walk to start the day. That ritual had him out on the sidewalks at dawn to get a quiet look at this 19th century English seaside town.

"I'm not usually one who's up at that hour walking — I'm not usually doing anything at that hour," he joked. "It kind of loosens everything up, and that's my routine the last seven or eight weeks."
