Concentrating on new computers

Tan Nguyen, a freshman at Hereford High School, works at one of the 12 computer stations installed in the newly-opened Resource Enrichment and Career Center in the HHS library. The center, which is equipped with computers, software and videos, opened last week. A dedication ceremony will be held at 10 a.m. on Wednesday. The center offers students a place to explore career options and do work on a variety of computer programs.

Resource center fills special vision at HHS

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

For Cliff Golden, the construction of the Resource Enrichment and Career Center in the Hereford High School library brought a dramatic change to the school and was the fulfillment of a special vision.

"It's a dream come true. It's going to rival a college resource center. That's my dream," said Golden, vocational placement coordinator for the Hereford Independent School District.

The RECC is a facility designed to meet students' computer, research and career decision needs, said Dianna Drew, district Technology Director.

The goal is to make as many computerized programs available to as many students as possible, Golden added.

"It's been a long wait. We had planned on being open a lot sooner, but construction took a while longer than expected," Drew said.

The RECC is a state-of-the-art computer center with 12 high-speed, fully multimedia computer systems. In addition to a high speed laser printer, Drew said, the center has a full-page color scanner and color ink jet printing.

A dedication ceremony will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the library.

A wide variety of resource software was installed to help students with their projects.

Word Perfect Suite, the center's main software package, provides a word processor, a presentation package, spreadsheet and database software.

COIN, a career decision software package also was installed on the system. "Enter Here," a series of videos on different career opportunities is available for viewing in one of two private areas.

Each station has Word Perfect 6.1, Presentations 3.0, Quattro Pro 6.0, Paradox 5.0, Envoy 1.0 and Info Central 1.1.

Also, each station has SAT Trainer, Reference Library, Great Artists, Profiles of American Colleges, Compton's Encyclopedia and the Face of Life on CD.

"There is at least one encyclopedia on every station. And then some of the other stations have additional (encyclopedias) -- like a World Book and a Grolier," she said.

Some stations are installed with Government Researcher, Time, Shakespeare, Poetry, Totally Baseball Statistics, MAS (Magazine Article Summary) and SIRS (an abstract periodical searcher).

"Since I had some technology money left, I told (Golden) if he could buy the furniture, I could buy the rest of the equipment," Drew said.

"We started working on it the beginning of the school year -- getting the wall built so that it'll keep a little bit of the noise out."

The Hereford Independent School District maintenance department did the construction work.

Total cost of the center, including the walls, furniture and computers and software, was $55,800.

"We opened up for semi-business," she said. "We have a table that is missing out of the corner and the scanner is not here. Other than that and a few other things, we're just about there."

It is open to all HHS students and faculty during school operating hours. Teachers may sign up for their class to use the center, Drew said, so a waiting period is expected.

"Everyone I've talked to has been pretty excited and want to know when they can come in," Drew said.

"They're allowed to come in at anytime. It's a drop in lab. Classes will sign up for it, just like they signed up for the old lab in the past," she said.

"If they're signed up for a class, those people have priority over someone just dropping in. But if they're only using six computers and there's six free, then they can come in and use those while there is a class in here as long as they're quiet," she said.

"The classes right now, there seems to be a lot signed up to do the career investigation studies," Drew said.

The computers are fully Internet ready.

"So as soon as we are able to provide that service to the district, we'll have the machines in place. And this will probably be one of the -- if not the -- first place to have Internet access," she said.

'Rock the Herd with Disneymania' is theme for Homecoming week

Hereford High School students will display their school spirit with Disney movies, characters and songs during the 1996 Homecoming Week Oct. 14-17.

"Rock the Herd with Disneymania" will be the Homecoming theme.

According to an announcement by the HHS student council, activities planned for the week are dress-up days, a door decorating contest, hall decorations, a pep rally and a parade.

The festivities lead up to the Friday night football game, when the Whitefaces wrangle with the Randall Raiders.

The dress up days are "Nerd Day" on Monday, "Krazy Day" on Tuesday, "Twin Day" on Wednesday, "Hippy Day" on Thursday and "Hat Day" on Friday.

Prizes will be awarded to the "best dressed" on each day.

In the door decorating contest, second-period classes will be competing for prizes. The class capturing first place will receive a pizza party, second prize a donut party and third prize "blow pop" party.

Two former employees file suit against HRMC

Two former Hereford EMS employees have filed suit against Hereford Regional Medical Center, alleging their dismissals last spring were improper.

Ricky D. Hargrove and Thomas Jackson, represented by Lubbock attorney Ruben John Garcia II, filed the suit in 222nd District Court here on Wednesday.

Garcia, contacted in his Lubbock office, declined to comment on the matter.

"At this point we're really not ready to make a comment," Garcia said.

Hospital attorney Alan Rhodes of the Amarillo firm Under, Wilson, Berry, Stein and Johnson issued a brief statement about the suit.

"It is unfortunate that the district has to defend this type of claim. We certainly feel we were within our rights to take the employment action we took," Rhodes said.

In their suit, Hargrove and Jackson allege that they were hired "pursuant to an agreement, partly oral and partly written" to work for the hospital "for so long as he performed satisfactorily and obeyed all reasonable and lawful directions, rules and regulations of his employer."

The suit said Hargrove was hired on Jan. 15, 1991, while Jackson was reported to have been hired on Aug. 1, 1992.

They were both dismissed on March 18. The pair claims in their suit that they were dismissed from employment even though "defendant Hereford Regional Medical Center expressly and impliedly promised orally and in writing that defendant Hereford Regional Medical Center would not arbitrarily and without good cause terminate plaintiffs' employment before normal retirement."

The suit does not specify damages sought by the pair, but claims that they "sustained economic losses, including past and future compensation and other economic benefits, attorney's fees and litigation expenses," as well as "loss of financial stability, peace of mind and future security and have suffered embarrassment, humiliation, mental and emotional distress and discomfort, all to their detriment."

"The Sophomore Class Queen Attendant candidates are: Lyndi Carlile, Christine Chavez, Brenda Duran, Mary Lou Enriquez, Audri Gomoalez, Annie Keenan, Tara King, Jessica Mejia, Jennifer Palacios, Raquel Valdivinos and Betty Zepeda.

The Sophomore Class King Attendant candidate is Abram V. Hill.

The nominees for Freshman Class Queen are: Marina Arsola, Nancy De La Cruz, Delilah Guerrero, Christina Lucio, Crystal Luna, Sabrina Mendez, Crystal Mendiaz, Sarah Moll and Leslie Torres.

The nominee for Freshman Class King is Julian Garcia.

Following the pep rally, the Homecoming parade will begin at 3 p.m. The parade will be lead by a parade marshal, who will be announced this week, and the Mighty Maroon Marching Band.

The parade route will be from HHS south on Avenue F to Park Avenue, west to Main Street, then south to downtown.

Floats from each high school class, school and community organizations, local businesses and individuals will be featured.

Prizes will be awarded for the best overall float, best theme float, most creative float, best business float and most school spirit float.

The winning floats will be parked at the south end of the football field immediately after the parade.

Pre-game activities begin at 7 p.m. at Whiteface Stadium.

At that time, the Homecoming King and Queen and their court will be introduced to Herd football fans.

Kick-off for the game against Randall will be at 7:30 p.m.

School board meets Monday

The Hereford Independent School District board of trustees will hold a regular board meeting at 6 p.m. Monday in the Hereford Junior High Library, 704 La Plata Drive.

On the action agenda, technology consultants make presentations to trustees, who will then vote on the matter.

Trustees also will take action on the minimum wage options for support services personnel.

Since the minimum wage law went into effect Oct. 1, 29 employee salaries were raised from $4.25 an hour to $4.75 an hour.

The options, as presented by Assistant Superintendent Don Cumpston at the Aug. 24 meeting are:

-- Move all employees presently under the new minimum wage to the mandated hourly wage.

-- Give all support personnel the 50 cent an hour minimum wage increase.

-- Take the hourly wage raise which has already been given for the 1996-97 school year, and add to it enough to make it a total of 50 cents an hour. This amount would vary for each employee, but it would be a total of 50 cents an hour above the 1995-96 school year.

In other board business, trustees are expected to be presented with a package of policy updates from the Texas Association of School Boards and they will hear regular monthly reports.

The meeting is open to the public.

HHS students achieve higher scores on ACT

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

Hereford High School students recorded the highest scores in three years on the American College Test, according to figures released by the school district.

Merlee McWethy, Director of Student Services, said students have successfully achieved higher scores on several sections of the test.

"I anticipate the scores will come up again this year. I really do," McWethy said.

In the 1995-96 school year, McWethy said, 101 students took the test, of which 52 were males and 49 were females.

In 1995-96, the average composite score of Hereford students was 21.4, up from 20.7 in 1994-95 and 20.5 in 1993-94.

Students scored 20.7 in Math, up from 20 in 1994-95 and 19.6 in 1993-94; 22.2 in Reading, up from 20.9 both in 1994-95 and 1993-94; 20.3 in English, slightly down from 20.5 in 1994-95 and up from 20.1 in 1993-94; and 21.7 in Science Reasoning, up from 20.8 both in 1994-95 and 1993-94.

The state average composite score was 21.2 in 1995-96.

The state averages were 21 in Math; 21.5 in Reading; 20.6 in English, and 21.2 in Science Reasoning.

Not only are the local scores comparable with the state scores, McWethy said, Hereford students actually surpassed the state averages in Reading, Science and Composite.

The national average composite score was 22 in 1995-96.

The national averages were 21.5 in Math, 22.5 in Reading, 21.5 in English and 22.1 in Science Reasoning.

The ACT test is designed for students who plan to attend college. "Our college-bound kids are the ones that usually take the ACT. Of course, we want to try to increase the number that do take it," she said.

Scores reported are based on all students who graduated from high school in the Spring of 1996 and who took the ACT assessment during their junior or senior year in high school.

These students also completed four years of English, and at least three years of Math, Social Sciences and Natural Sciences.

"We were real pleased with that. Our kids are right up there with rest of the rest of the state and nation," she said.

With Math and English being the lowest scores, McWethy said, "We're doing a lot in the district working toward improving Math scores and we're doing the same with English -- taking a look at the data we get."

Each junior college or university determines a minimum composite

National news briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - Thousands of Hispanic-Americans are gathering in the capital to push for a simplified citizenship process and a $7 hourly minimum wage.

Mobilized by new and more stringent welfare and immigration laws and what they see as growing anti-newcomer sentiment, they were setting off today on the first national march for Latino and immigrant rights.

"We have to cut the edge off the xenophobia that is being created in this country," said Juan Jose Bocanegra of Seattle, a member of the coordinating committee, Coordinadora '96. "We're not here to be bashed around like pinatas. We demand respect."

WASHINGTON (AP) - With some top advisers urging Bob Dole to mount an attack on President Clinton over ethical lapses, the Republican challenger is convening a high-level session to map out strategy for the campaign's stretch run.

Dole took a day off from campaigning to preside over the meeting today at his Washington headquarters.

Running mate Jack Kemp remained on the campaign trail today with appearances scheduled in Oregon and California. He also planned to give the Republican response to Clinton's weekly radio address today.

CLARKSBURG, W.Va. (AP) - The federal complex that authorities say a militia group wanted blown up will eventually allow the FBI to keep tabs on people in ways that anti-government crusaders fear.

Seven men with ties to the West Virginia Mountaineer Militia are charged with conspiring to bomb the FBI's Criminal Justice Information Services Division complex in Clarksburg, about 80 miles south of Pittsburgh.

"There was a plot. It was ended before it could be consummated," said John P. O'Connor, agent in charge of the FBI's Pittsburgh-based division.

A salute to Columbus Day

In honor of Columbus Day, students at St. Anthony's Catholic School participated in a Patriotic Prayer Service on Friday. Here, first-graders create a wave of red, white and blue as they show their American spirit. Each student received an American flag donated by Catholic Life Insurance Union Branch 54.

Serving for the United Way

Rodney Ruthart, left, chairman of the board of the United Way of Deaf Smith County, puts a wiener on a hot dog for Rita Bell on Friday while Sally Nolen, right, vice-chairman of the United Way annual fund-raising campaign holds the bun. United Way volunteers stationed themselves at both local banks on Friday for a "Drive-Through Report Luncheon" at which campaign volunteers could stop by for a hot dog and soft drink while dropping off pledge cards and donations. United Way leaders are pushing toward a goal of $132,000 during the campaign, which lasts through Oct. 31.

RESOURCE

"We will have an electronic sign in and sign out program that will track who has come in, how long they stayed so that we can have a real good idea of what kind of use the center is being placed into," she said.

If others are waiting, Drew said, students will be limited to one hour on the computer.

"It's a learning experience for the librarians. Mr. Golden is there to assist them in operating the career investigation portion of it and anything they need technology wise, I'm there for them," Drew said.

"They'll use it mainly for research. They'll use it a lot for typing papers too because the quality is going to be so much better and there is much more they can do," HHS Media Specialist Lois Matchett said.

Whether it's for a research paper or not, Matchett said, "I think they'll want to use it for pure knowledge."

Drew said all the computers in the RECC were previously used in other capacities elsewhere in the school district.

There will be a minimal fee for color printing.

"The ink is very expensive. And the paper, if they choose a little bit better paper, it could cost up to a $1 a sheet," Drew said.

Since the system has been loaded with an Academic Decathlon test bank, Drew said, "Any of those students can come in and quiz themselves to get ready for that."

James Perkins, a chemistry and physics teacher who coaches the Decathlon team, agreed.

"With all the computers here, we can almost put one (student) per station. We already have some software loaded on there for a practice test," Perkins said, adding that he has already had members of the team in the RECC preparing for upcoming Academic Decathlon competitions.

In the future, Golden said, he envisions the center offering community programs.

"We're trying to put out educated students. And if we can put out better students, let's go for it," he said.

Texas pumpkin growers feel Halloween crunch

By the Associated Press

Pumpkin growers in Texas are feeling the Halloween crunch.

This early October, when growers usually ship and sell most of their pumpkins, there are fewer to go around.

Roland Roberts, a vegetable specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Lubbock, says yields are down this year on the Texas pumpkin patch - mostly 3,000 to 4,000 acres in the South Plains counties of Lubbock, Floyd, Bailey, Hale and Lamb.

Cool September weather interfered with the ripening of some pumpkins, most of which were planted in June, Roberts said.

Ben Roming, a pumpkin grower in Muleshoe, Texas, says there isn't much room for error.

"If we don't get them sold in the next week or ten days, we won't get them sold," he said.

Texas is not alone. In Virginia, rainy weather has led to a disastrous pumpkin harvest.

Tennessee, on the other hand, is looking forward to a healthy pumpkin harvest this year.

Some of Roming's pumpkins aren't completely orange yet and he says people won't buy a pumpkin "that's orange on top and green on the bottom."

Still, he and his partners were hoping for a better yield this year.

"We were hoping to get 20,000 pounds or better," Roming said. "If these green pumpkins would turn orange, we would have 20,000."

The pumpkins vary in size, although they average around 20 pounds, Roming said.

Another problem is a shortage of bees. Growers depend on bees to pollinate pumpkin flowers so that they can develop.

"Our best growers rent hives of bees," Roberts said. "Those growers have the highest yields."

JP JOHNNIE TURRENTINE

County officer attends seminar

Deaf Smith County Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine was recently certified at a 20-hour Justice of the Peace seminar held in Lubbock.

The seminar, sponsored by the Texas Justice Court Training Center, was held Sept. 24-27. The center is headquartered at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

The seminar is one of five held for elected Justices of the Peace so they can fulfill their Continuing Judicial Education Requirements required by the Texas Government Code.

A 33-year-old man was arrested in the 500 block of North 25 Mile Avenue for theft and false identification to a peace officer.

A 21-year-old man was arrested in the 600 block of Irving Street for criminal trespass.

A 20-year-old man was arrested in the 500 block of Avenue I for parking in the roadway and for driving without a drivers license.

A car parked in the 600 block of Irving Street sustained an estimated $200 in damage.

A city employee was bitten by a dog in the 400 block of Irving Street. A citation was issued the owner for not vaccinating his dog for rabies.

A patron's purse was stolen at a local pizza parlor. The purse contained $600 in cash as well as various credit cards.

A 28-year-old woman was warned not to return to a residence in the 600 block of Avenue H.

A criminal trespass warning was issued to a 17-year-old man not to return to a residence in the 600 block of Irving Street.

SCORES

score for admission. On the ACT test, the range of composite scores is 1-36.

In a survey taken in the ACT test registration packet, McWethy said more than 30 percent of the Hereford students chose health sciences as a planned educational major, which is in accordance with the national trend.

Approximately 15 percent of the students said they planned to major in business and management, she said.

Using this survey, McWethy said, "We try to prepare and choose curriculum classes that will support our kids four, five and 10 years down the road," she said.

As to their school preferences on the survey, students chose Texas Tech University and West Texas A&M University.

"Most of our students are selecting colleges that are within a radius of 100 to 200 miles from home. We send a lot of kids to Lubbock and Canyon, both," she said.

"We do have a good school system and we're doing everything we can to prepare them."

"It doesn't start when they take the test, it starts in kindergarten," she said.

Not only does the district use data from the ACT test, McWethy said, administrators review scores from the SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) and TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) as well as other tests -- to gauge student performance.

"Of course, we have the site-based decision-making teams and the schools are using TAAS data and other data that they have seen to try to make educational decisions for the students," she said.

HISD has recently received item analysis on the TAAS tests that they took last Spring, McWethy said.

"It's going to give us a lot of good data to judge our curriculum and then we have item analysis on each student so we see which ones they missed and use that to help us determine why they missed it," she said.

In order to improve test scores and prepare students for college, McWethy said, HHS has students enrolled in Advanced Placement classes.

"Raising the level of curriculum is going to raise test scores," she said.

AP classes are offered in English, Chemistry, Calculus, Economics, Government and Studio Arts.

"These are actually college level classes that we are teaching in high school so that ties in with this because it supports and hopefully prepares them better to take this test," she said.

"We believe that having those college level courses at the high school level really gives them an opportunity to earn college credit before they ever get there -- if they score a certain amount on that test," she said.

This school year, high school counselors will administer the ACT test on Oct. 26, Dec. 14, Feb. 8, April 12 and June 14 at the high school.

The registration deadline is about a month prior to the test date, McWethy said.

Students can pick up the registration packets in the counselors office at the high school. The packets must be completed and returned to the ACT Testing Center.

Hereford Bull

By Speedy Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says people who are constantly claiming they are nobody's fool probably have their suspicions.

To get back on your feet, just miss two car payments.

Today's paper includes a retail business survey sponsored by Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, Hereford Economic Development Corporation, and the city and county.

The group does not have a "doom-and-gloom" approach to the issue, reported a spokesman. They simply want to get input and ideas for enhancing the retail business sector.

The group realizes that a number of local consumers will probably say: "Let's get a _____ store here. (Fill in the blank with Wal-Mart, K-Mart, Target, or others).

Just wanting a certain chain store here is not enough. The corporation has its own formula, which includes factors like market potential and profit possibility. An invitation from the community is probably way down the list.

This issue has been discussed and studied before, of course, and we--along with others--have preached the message, "Shop at Home!"

Invariably, the consumers say, "We'll shop here if you get a better selection." And the business owner says, "We'll be able to have a better selection if you shop at home."

So, please consider all the advantages and disadvantages, and fill out the form. It could help the group make future decisions to improve the business sector.

An AP news analysis

VP debates have little impact on race

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) - Jack Kemp and Al Gore kept things civil, but their generally gentle debate clearly strained Kemp as he attuned his long-held views to a supporting role on Bob Dole's ticket.

And Gore took full advantage of the opportunity to highlight the tensions in the Republican ticket, sometimes with compliments that pointed out Kemp's shifts on affirmative action and on a tax advantage for the working poor.

Kemp also acknowledged there's no way Republicans can fulfill their disputed platform pledge of a constitutional amendment against abortion.

"The incumbent was on the attack," Republican National Chairman Haley Barbour said. He called Gore almost mean, showing a hard edge that would work to his disadvantage.

But that didn't show in initial reactions to the 90-minute debate Wednesday night. In three instant network polls, about half called Gore the victor, less than a third picked Kemp; one in five called it a draw.

It won't make much difference. The debate between President Clinton and Dole last Sunday night in Hartford did nothing to boost the challenger. And that was one of the main events. Vice presidential debates, in comparison, have minimal impact.

The finale between Clinton and Dole is Wednesday night in San Diego.

In the vice presidential debate, Kemp spent most of his on-camera time arguing for the big tax cut Dole embraced, disputing Gore's contention that the economy is in its best shape in 30 years and arguing that Republicans could deliver a doubled growth rate.

But he was silent when Gore repeatedly raised one facet of the GOP tax plan, the earned income tax credit, which would be undone by Dole. Gore said that would raise taxes on 9 million families - and he noted that before joining the Dole ticket, Kemp had called that unconscionable.

Gore said he'd like to hear Kemp speak about that. Kemp never did.

Then again, neither did Gore,

Some church-goers seem to practice "Football Christianity," according to an article in the Christ's Church Fellowship bulletin last week.

Quarterback Sneak: Church members quietly exiting the sanctuary after communion.

Draft Choice: First pick of the seats on the end pew at the back of the sanctuary.

Draw Play: What many children (and a few older folks) do with the attendance cards and song books during services.

Halftime: The period between Sunday School and worship service when the time together is half-finished, but many choose to depart.

Benchwarmers: Those who do not sing, pray, work or apparently do anything but sit.

Backfield in Motion: The habit of making two or three trips out during a 30-minute sermon.

Staying in the Pocket: What happens to a lot of money that could/should be given to the Lord's work.

Two Minute Warning: The point at which the congregation realizes the sermon is almost over and begins to scramble for the songbooks.

Sudden Death: The preacher goes into "overtime."

Flex Defense: The ability to allow absolutely nothing said during the sermon to affect one's life.

Blitz: Getting out of the building without passing the preacher or an elder.

Halfback Option: The decision of 50 percent of the congregation not to return for the Wednesday evening worship service.

when Kemp said Clinton had promised a middle class tax cut he never delivered.

"We're not planning on attacking Clinton on the character issue, unless it's on taxes," Dole campaign manager Scott Reed said after the debate. "He says one thing and does another."

Gore said one thing over and over again, calling the Dole tax cut a risky scheme that would run up the deficit and impede economic progress.

Kemp repeatedly said the tax cut would spur growth and actually increase revenues. The massive tax cut fits his long held economic so-called supply side theories; Dole had resisted them while he was a senator, embracing the idea just two months ago.

On the other hand, on affirmative action, Kemp shifted his position to fit Dole's. Gore made that point, after saying that affirmative action programs should be continued.

First Gore congratulated Kemp "for being a lonely voice in the Republican Party over the years on this question," then said he was saddened to see him change positions after joining the Dole ticket.

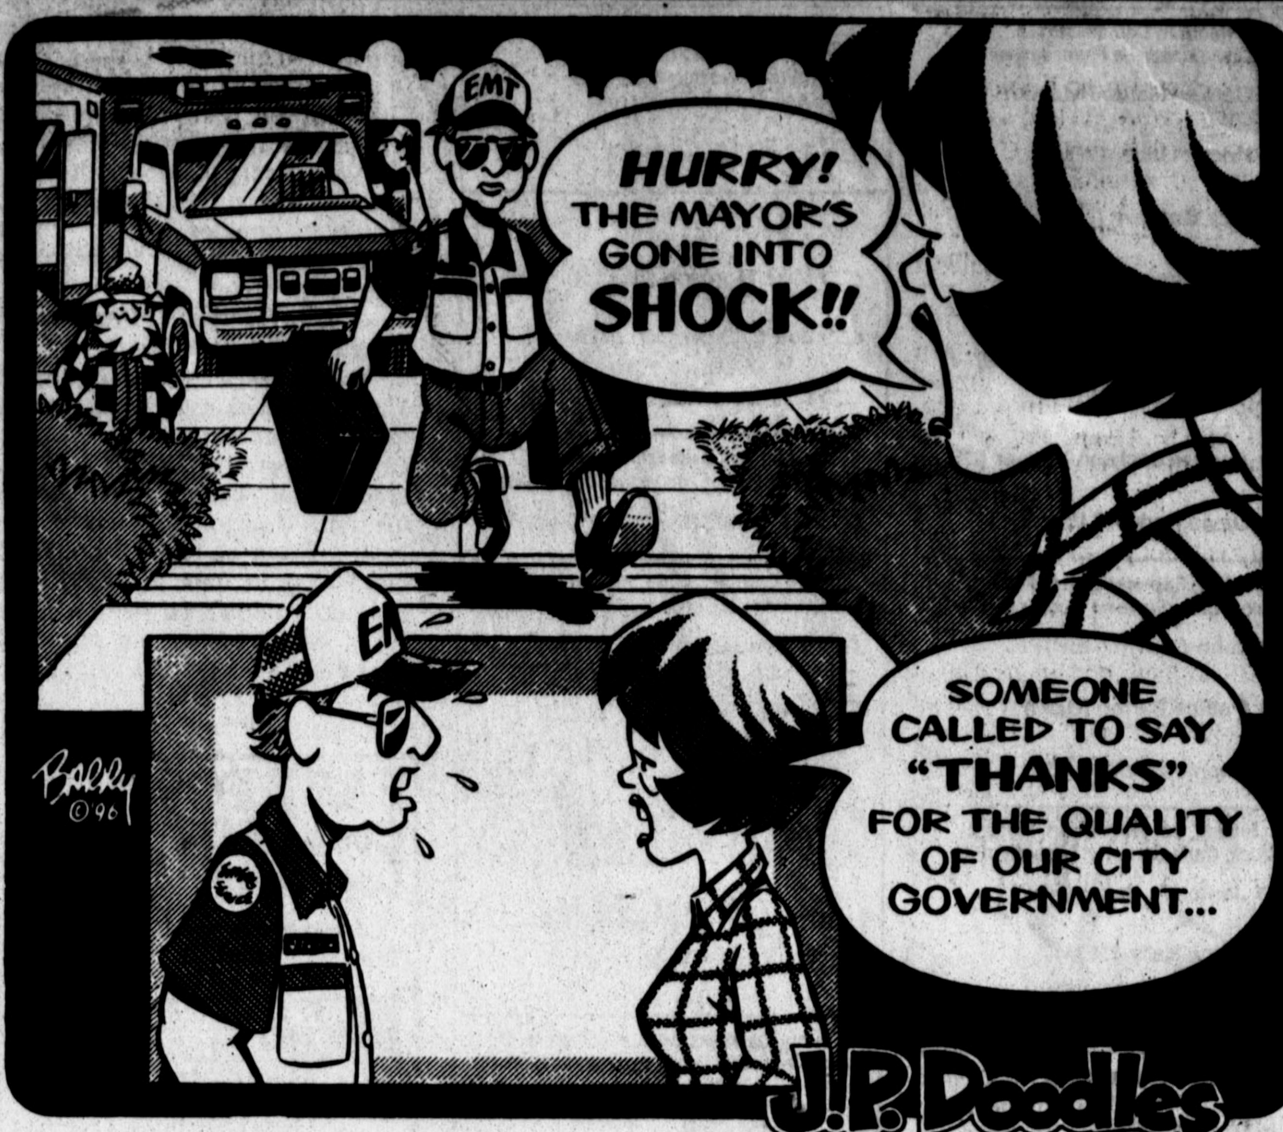

Kemp countered obliquely. He said he stands for equality of opportunity, not equality of outcome. Then he said economic opportunities and educational choice are the way to promote diversity. No further explanation; a red time light went on, and Kemp said that meant stop.

Dole has criticized the family leave law; Gore said the GOP nominee would try to repeal it. Kemp said he'd let it stand. "I wouldn't have voted for it," he said. "It's in place."

While Kemp, like Dole, has endorsed a constitutional amendment to ban abortion, the vice presidential nominee acknowledged that such a measure would not pass. "We must use persuasion, not intimidation," he said.

But that won't play well with the ardent abortion foes of the Christian right.

A few things to get off my chest

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

Well folks, I'm going to gripe about some stuff this week.

There have been several things lately that have really bugged me and so you all get the brunt of it.

1. One of my pet peeves is going into a store (usually a grocery store) and having to wait for help while the employees visit with one another.

The other night I went to a local store and the sacker was so busy visiting with her friends that she forgot to put one sack of my groceries in the basket to carry out! I had to call the store to complain that I hadn't got my crackers.

Other times, the checker is whipping products over the scanner without looking while she babbles to some friend (often someone who is not even an employee).

If I was manager over those employees, they'd be invited to carry their conversations outside -- permanently.

I wish local store managers would remind their employees that customers are more important than who's dating whom or whatever.

There's a time and a place for everything and serving customers should be done with your full attention.

2. I can't tell you the number of times I've been walking to my car in a parking lot only to have somebody in a car following me, trying to find where I'm parked so they can wait for my parking place.

Often times, in the time it takes these people to wait for me to get to my car, get the kids loaded and get pulled out, they could be parked at an empty space three cars away and be in the store!

I guess it's the attitude that "I'm more important than anyone else, so I will inconvenience everyone else so I can get this parking place."

3. Likewise, I get really irritated with these same people who park in areas specifically marked as no-parking areas -- like just ahead of the first parking place in a row, or in the fire lane next to the store, or in handicapped spaces, or even in the middle of the driving lanes.

Again, it is the attitude that this person thinks he is more important than the rest of us and thus can park wherever he wants.

4. Leave our brick streets alone!

One of my favorite things about Hereford is the brick streets and it saddens me to see them broken up by concrete and asphalt where the bricks have been removed for utility work.

In Lubbock, the city council passed an ordinance requiring anyone doing work on brick streets to replace those bricks when they are finished.

The city also has bought a supply of paving bricks and several years ago began a program to replace areas of concrete and asphalt with brick, and to repair places where the underlayer of concrete had collapsed.

Such steps are desperately needed here.

The brick streets are part of our heritage and I couldn't believe it when the city of Hereford tore bricks out of the streets in several locations

Bob, Roger, Carey, Joe, Wayne, Sylvia and Scott, please do the right thing and protect our brick streets while they are still here and relatively intact!

5. Why is it that the national media is glorifying Dr. Jack Kevorkian?

Here is a man who has made it his life's work to commit murder as often as he can and the media is following his every step, jumping to publish each and every murder committed in the name of "relieving suffering."

I don't care what you call it, euthanasia is murder and once our society starts allowing terminally ill patients (or patients with debilitating diseases) to kill themselves with the help of a doctor, we are on the way to a society where our aged, infirm and handicapped are eliminated "for the good of us all."

Euthanasia allows man to act like God, rather than allowing the normal course of disease to occur.

Maniacs like Kevorkian are allowed to continue committing their atrocities because nobody says "that's enough and I'm not going to take it any more."

Editorials from around the State

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Pecos Enterprise on presidential debate:

The first debate between the two major candidates for president is now history. What did we as voters learn from that debate?

We didn't learn a whole lot except that both candidates have more of a sense of humor than they previously exposed. Both men did show for the first time that they didn't hate each other, which was contrary to opinions formed due to accusations thrown back and forth between the two campaigns.

Both candidates tossed figures around like the autumn wind blows leaves. It was difficult at times to figure out just who was more accurate. As we all know, figures can be used to justify just about any argument.

Who won the debate? There didn't appear to be a clear winner although Republican Bob Dole was clearly the aggressor as he should be given his role of challenger. Commentators and spectators said they believe that Dole breathed new life into a campaign that had stalled.

On the other hand, President Bill Clinton stood his ground and defended the record of his first term. He apparently didn't lose any support based on his performance.

Both candidates were after the undecided votes as well as people from the other party not satisfied with their candidate. There was some indication that the debate helped make up a few minds but it remains to be seen just which way those voters swayed.

One of the main concerns of both candidates and their supporters was not to make any major mistakes and apparently both got through the verbal exchanges, some testy while others were more jovial, without any obvious gaffes.

We'll have to see what happens in the second and final debate to see if Dole can close the gap in the campaign that polls show has Clinton comfortably in the lead.

Austin American-Statesman on keeping government open:

The fight to keep government at every level open and accessible in Texas is one that never ends.

From local school boards to congressional committees, those governing us inevitably reach the point of wanting to make their decisions in secret. It is the rare elected official, board or governing body that is willing to have those who elected them and pay them actually be privy to all their deliberations.

Open government in Texas is ever a journey, never a destination. The fight to give citizens, voters and taxpayers access to government deliberations, decisions and records will never end.

In Texas, one small, nonprofit group is dedicated to open government. The Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas comprises newspaper, television and radio journalists, college professors and lawyers who donate their time to the cause of access and openness in Texas government. ...

From the tiniest town council and most remote school board to the University of Texas System Board of Regents, government is always in a struggle with the public's right to know. At every level, those in power prefer to operate privately rather than work through difficult issues in public. ...

Shutting out the public doesn't make for better government, only an ill-informed citizenry. As the Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas knows from its long and deep experience, what you don't know can hurt you.

Valley Morning Star (Harlingen) on fund for immigrants:

Sometimes somebody does something absolutely, quintessentially right, yet doesn't seem to understand just how right it is. Thus the news that George Soros, a billionaire investor and philanthropist, has established an Emma Lazarus Fund with $50 million of his money to help immigrants who might be adversely affected by recent changes in welfare policy that make certain kinds of welfare less readily available to legal immigrants, creates ambivalence.

His decision is eminently admirable, although almost typical for Soros, who already has given millions of dollars to help countries move toward democracy and market-based economies in the wake of the death of communism and financed institutions seeking creative alternatives for some of the United States' most pressing policy questions. Unlike many wealthy people with opinions on policy issues, Soros has a proud record of putting his money where his mouth is.

If his reported statements are accurate, however, Soros seems to see his generous and public-spirited gift more as a stopgap on the road to restoring previous or even higher levels of taxpayer-paid benefits for immigrants rather than as a creative alternative that could eventually displace government assistance with voluntary assistance from private citizens who have a particular interest in helping specific individuals or groups of people. ...

Soros' action is commendable. It would be even more commendable, if he saw it as a catalyst to encourage more voluntary charity to displace the creaky and often unjust system of government welfare.

Houston Chronicle on Bush's jury duty:

Our hats are off to Gov. George W. Bush for reporting for jury duty in Austin last week, just like any average citizen.

Good publicity, sure.

But it was also a sign of good citizenship. The fact that the sitting governor of the great state of Texas shows up for jury duty should be an example to the rest of us, who may think we are too busy, too important or too inconvenienced to serve on juries.

Bush is to report to a Travis County Court at Law this week, when it will be determined by the lawyers whether he will serve as a juror. Bush says that most likely he will not be picked because of potential conflicts of interests, such as the fact that all requests for pardons in criminal cases cross his desk and also his well-known support of tort reform.

That he is willing to serve is what is important.

The jury system, the constitutional right to be tried before one's peers, is the backbone of freedom and justice in this country.

That system has to be supported, even when it is inconvenient for those called to serve. That's the duty of a responsible citizen.

Country singers, fishing buddies on tour together

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) -- When country singers Marty Stuart and Travis Tritt aren't touring together, look for them at the nearest fishing hole.

"We don't make it up for the press," Tritt said. "If we're not touring together, we're calling each other up, shopping for guitars or fishing."

The two singers met backstage at the 1990 Country Music Association Awards.

"We just pointed to each other and said almost simultaneously, 'I really like your stuff,'" Tritt recalled before a concert Friday at the University of Tennessee.

A few weeks later, Stuart sent over "The Whiskey Ain't Workin'" to Tritt, and they recorded the song for a Stuart album.

Hammer dulcimer player combines ancient instrument, modern music

By DAVE FERMAN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
FORT WORTH, Texas - Until that fateful day in the summer of 1988, Ned Spurlock had zero knowledge of the hammer dulcimer.

Didn't know, didn't care. Had no interest in ye olde Celtic ballads. Didn't own old field recordings of traditional Appalachian music. Wouldn't have known legends of the instrument like Guy Carawan and Walt Michael if he'd bumped into them on the street.

And then, at a festival in Crested Butte, Colo., he saw a man playing the ancient instrument, heard the gentle, pretty music cascading out into the crisp mountain air and was hooked - instantly and for good.

Spurlock was 38 that day, raising two kids by fixing up and selling houses and running a small computer business. Born in Chicago, he'd grown up in Fort Worth and graduated from Texas Wesleyan College in 1977 with a degree in accounting; he'd spent years working as a conductor, switchman and brakeman on the Burlington Northern Railway, from which he'd taken a buyout the year before.

He was not, in other words, looking to dive into a career as a musician.

But, like a man who looks across a crowded room, sees a woman and decides he will marry her, Spurlock fell hard for the dulcimer, whose origins date back at least as far as biblical times. (It's mentioned in the Book of Daniel). It was beautiful. It was amazing to him to watch a person play it. It sounded beautiful.

And that was that. Ka-boom. Spurlock "fell in love," bought a hammer dulcimer, brought it back home, and embarked on a new life.

Eight years later, he's made that moment of discovery into a career. As head of the Traditional Sounds label - which is headquartered in a nondescript office park in a quiet residential area south of TCU - he has released six CDs of hammer dulcimer music. One of them, 1994's "I'll Be Seeing You," was one of the five finalists for String Album of the Year at the 1995 National Association of Independent Record Distributors awards, the independent record industry's equivalent of the Grammys.

In addition, Spurlock currently makes hammer dulcimers (which retail at $800-$900 apiece) and plays and sells his instruments at several festivals, including the North Texas Irish Festival and gatherings in Austin and Virginia.

All in all, Spurlock is a successful hammer dulcimer recording artist and craftsman, but there are others who do as well, if not better, in both categories. And there are probably numerous veteran musicians who grew up with the music who play as well, if not better.

But what sets Spurlock apart is what he plays: Virtually alone among his contemporaries, his repertoire is largely pop tunes from the '40s, Broadway and movie songs; and the best of the Beatles and other '60s pop. "I'll Be Seeing You," for example, includes versions of "Unforgettable," "Sentimental Journey," "Autumn Leaves" and "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes;" "Yesterday" includes "And I Love Her," "Gentle on My Mind" and "The Sound of Silence."

And where most players favor small groups (fiddle, guitar, banjo, etc.) his records include orchestral backing that often gives it a decidedly New Age feel (although Spurlock dislikes the term and doesn't hazard a guess as to how to categorize or what to call his music.)

As a result of its lush gentleness, his material is perfect for gift stores - and as background music on 8 Country Reporter and the on-hold music for Continental Airlines, too.

"What I'm trying to do more than anything is make music that's unique," Spurlock says. "I never record a song I don't like - that's my first criteria. In CD stores, we've been put in the 'folk' section and the 'hammer dulcimer' section and the 'string music' section - they don't know where to put us. I like that. And even a lot of people who are knowledgeable about music don't know much about the dulcimer - which works to my advantage, I think."

Spurlock declines to say how many CDs he sells per year, but his music is distributed all over the country and in Europe and Japan. Its appeal, according to one of about a dozen distributors of Spurlock's music, is its "soothing, elegant" quality.

"We did have one other guy who played Beatles songs on dulcimer, but that was fairly straight-ahead," says John Kolstad, president of Mill City Music. "Ned's unique because of his arrangements and the orchestra is very melodic and dynamic - it cloaks the dulcimer in a different light. His arrangements are really fine and very carefully put together. He's a strong, consistent seller for us."

Spurlock's music is actually a merging of the music he heard as a child and a teen, his familiarity with '60s pop, and traditional dulcimer. Growing up in Fort Worth in the '50s and '60s, his tastes included both the pop his parents Floyd and Eleanor listened to (Glenn Miller, Nat "King" Cole, Frank Sinatra) and the Beatles and the like; his all-time favorite CD, he says, is Natalie's Cole's "Unforgettable."

Spurlock learned clarinet, piano and flute as a kid and, while in high school, played in a garage band - which specialized in blues and Chuck Mangione/Chick Corea-style jazz - just for laughs; by the time he was in college he was working for the railroad at night and music fell by the wayside.

It took seeing and hearing the hammer dulcimer in action in '88 to reawaken his fondness for playing music; within a few months, thanks to his years spent as a child helping his father make furniture, he was making the instruments, too.

By 1990 he'd released his first CD, "Reflections," and was making and selling the instruments full-time.

"It was kind of scary, but I figured I always could go back to being an accountant - I knew I always had that to fall back on," he says. "It's a hand-to-eye coordination instrument - that's the biggest skill and I have good hand-to-eye coordination. Having a musical background helped me a lot. Building them was a learning process - another player, Russell Cook, helped me a lot, but I built a lot of 'em that weren't very good."

In those early days, Spurlock went to festivals just about every weekend - often with daughter Rebecca, now 15, in tow and playing with him - and in 1992 and 1993 made about 40 dulcimers per year.

Since then, though, as his CD sales have increased, he's slacked off on both live appearances (he now only makes about six to eight per year) and number of dulcimers made (15 to 20). Along with one full-time and one part-time employee, he runs Traditional Sounds by himself, and the company does a lot of business filling orders for his CDs. Sixty percent of his sales come from other distributors, and 40 percent come from festivals and orders on the label's 800 number.

At the moment, Spurlock is reading "In the Mood," a follow-up to "I'll Be Seeing You."

"I couldn't be happier," he says. "There are wonderful aspects to this business - nobody tells me what to record or how to record it. And nobody else would pick the same instrumentation I pick. I want people to say, 'That's hammer dulcimer with an orchestra - that's Ned Spurlock's stuff.'"

Nobel laureate dies three days after receiving honor

By KAREN MATTHEWS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - William Vickrey waited 45 years for his economic theories to be recognized with a Nobel Prize. He enjoyed it for only three days before dying Friday, collapsing in his car on the way to an academic conference.

The 82-year-old retired Columbia University professor had been relishing his sudden honor as a Nobel winner since Tuesday, enjoying a champagne party with colleagues and giving interview after interview with the media.

"We were all a bit concerned that maybe this was too much," said Professor Ronald Findlay, chairman of Columbia's economics department. "He said, 'No, no, don't worry. I'm perfectly OK.'"

Findlay described Vickrey as an "absent-minded professor type" who used to park several blocks from Columbia and roller-skate to work. The vigorous, heavy-set man never lost his enthusiasm for his ideas.

"I'm very invigorated," Vickrey told The Star-Ledger of Newark, N.J., on Thursday in one of his last interviews. "I feel that at long last I may have some audience."

"Forty-five years is a long time to wait for your ideas to take hold," he said. "I want to make the most of the good bully pulpit. And I have a couple of books to write."

Vickrey, who had been driving alone to Boston for an academic conference, was found Thursday night, slumped over his steering wheel in a northbound lane of a parkway in Harrison, about 30 miles north of New York City, said Columbia spokeswoman Suzanne Trimel.

He was pronounced dead at St. Agnes Hospital in White Plains. At the family's request, the cause of death was not immediately released.

Bill Bortree, clerk at the Quaker Meeting House in Scarsdale, where Vickrey had been a member for 40 years, said he spoke to the professor's wife, Cecile, early Friday. He quoted her as saying, "He was overdoing it as usual, driving up to Boston."

Vickrey shared the economics Nobel - and a prize of $1.12 million - with James Mirrlees of Britain's Cambridge University for their separate work on "asymmetric information." That field seeks to maximize economic efficiency when two sides have incomplete information about each other.

Vickrey had focused on practical matters like efficient use of public transportation.

Vickrey failed to persuade New York's City's transit authority to use a progressive fare system, charging more for long trips than for short rides and putting a premium fare for rush-hour travel.

Vickrey had greater success at applying his theories on auctions, another example of asymmetric information.

Drought washed away, but memory should remain

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Most of the familiar scenes of the 1990s drought have washed away. Summer rains have quenched the wildfires, parched earth and dusty, sunburned fields of the winter and spring.

Drought watchers disagree whether the dry spell has broken. They do concur that Texans shouldn't allow recent showers to dampen their memories of the crisis past.

"I think it's human nature to react to an immediate situation," said Lloyd Urban, director of the Water Resources Center at Texas Tech University. "My biggest concern regarding the response from here on out is that people are not lulled into false sense of complacency."

The supply of fresh water in Texas is relatively finite because there simply isn't much more room for another reservoir. The number of people using that water, however, is growing.

In a way, the drought came at a good time for those charged with figuring out where the next generations will draw their water, Urban said.

"It certainly has helped our planning effort with the Regional Water Management Plan," said Urban of his effort to examine what the water needs of the High Plains will be for the next 60 years. "I think a lot of the interest and attention at meetings and so forth was spurred on by the drought."

Applications for agricultural disaster relief continue to flow into the state's Division of Emergency Management. Farmers and agribusinesses in the 176 counties that have received disaster designations since Jan. 1 have been eligible for low interest federal loans to tide them over.

Estimates for drought-related agricultural losses are in the $2 billion range, and overall statewide economic losses could near $5 billion, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry has said.

The Drought Task Force, established in May by Gov. George W. Bush, has prepared a draft report analyzing its performance in coordinating efforts among 17 state agencies and the American Red Cross.

The report is mostly positive, detailing many instances where agencies penetrated red tape snarls to help those who needed it, such as the communities of Edgewood, Wortham and Blanco, which nearly ran dry.

At Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock's request, the task force also drafted policy suggestions to strengthen state response during the next drought:

-Establish a framework for drought response in the Texas Water Code.

-Increase the penalty for violation of a surface water right to a maximum of $10,000 per day in administrative fines by the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, up from $1,000 a day in civil fines.

-Allow the TNRCC to issue, suspend or amend water use permits without notice or hearing for a limited time.

-Allow cities or utilities to draw water from other water rights holders for a temporary period without a hearing. Compensation to the water's owner would be settled after the fact, the task force suggests.

"The main thing is to realize that drought is an ever-present possibility," Emergency Management spokeswoman Jo Schwickhard Moss said. "Whether it's short term or long term, if local a jurisdiction issues restrictions or a ban, people need to abide by those requirements."

Water supplies remain tight in some places, especially along the Rio Grande. Lake Amistad near Del Rio remains 41 percent below normal, though that's 10 feet better than the reservoir's historic low on Aug. 22.

Edgewood escapes drought with new pipeline, reservoir

By CHRIS NEWTON
Associated Press Writer

EDGEWOOD, Texas (AP) - The drought that threatened to leave this East Texas town completely without water produced at least one thing - an improved water supply.

Today, Mayor Finis Skinner can enjoy the start of autumn, sipping water on his porch, secure in the knowledge that water shortages in his town about 60 miles east of Dallas are a thing of the past.

"We've pretty much licked the problem," Skinner said.

In May, Skinner's popularity and his town's water supply had all but evaporated under a blazing Texas sun.

Of course Edgewood wasn't the only community to suffer from this summer's drought. But Skinner's town was the only one that came within two weeks of having no source of water at all.

The town had received less than 14 inches of precipitation since August 1995, a period that usually sees more than twice that much.

Residents here said the situation was almost desperate.

So, Skinner staked his political future on Byrstar Contracting Inc., which the town hired to build a pipeline to carry water to Edgewood from Lake Tawakoni, some 10 miles to the northwest.

Byrstar employees worked day and night, racing the depletion of Edgewood's reservoir, which had sank from 15 feet to two feet deep.

The workers narrowly won the race, restoring water to Skinner's parched town days before the water would have run out.

The finished pipeline allows the community greater access to water than ever before and may make the community drought proof.

As a further precaution, Edgewood also enlarged its reservoir. Now it can hold an estimated three months more water.

Filling it was another dilemma.

"At first we just had an even bigger hole in the ground," Skinner said. "But eventually rain filled the reservoir."

But Skinner says the days of his town being bullied by Texas droughts are over.

"We don't expect it to be a problem again," he said.

Corpus water director says drought not over

By PAULINE ARRILAGA
Associated Press Writer

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - Don't tell James Dodson the drought is over. As regional water director here, he is preaching exactly the opposite to the 400,000 people who tap into the city's water supply.

His message is the same exhortation in other towns that depend on drought-depleted reservoirs for water. Just because it has rained, doesn't mean the crisis is over.

"We're battling that misconception," says Dodson. "We are definitely not out of the woods by any stretch of the imagination."

Late summer and early fall showers across the state have led some to declare the disastrous dry spell of the '90s history. But while those rains replenished soil moisture and restored rainfall totals to normal in many regions, water supplies remain low in this and other communities.

Here, the situation is dire. Corpus Christi is the only major metropolitan city in the state with the potential to run out of water - in as little as 18 months.

The crisis has city officials rushing to find alternatives to augment the existing water supply and has prompted tougher conservation measures in the meantime.

Corpus Christi takes its water from two sources: Choke Canyon Reservoir and Lake Corpus Christi, which provide water to seven counties in addition to Nueces County. In three years of drought, the reservoir system has dropped to just 31 percent of its capacity.

As an alternative to that diminished resource, the city has acquired a permit to pump water in from Lake Texana, 100 miles northeast of Corpus Christi in Jackson County. Construction on a pipeline is scheduled to start in March and be completed in one year. The cost of the project is about $130 million, Dodson said.

The city also is negotiating a similar deal to use water from the Lower Colorado River Authority and plans to complete a pipeline in 1999.

City officials are looking at raising water usage fees for both residents and businesses to help pay for the projects, Dodson said. For a family of four, a $20 monthly bill probably would increase to $25, he said.

Congress also has helped out by passing legislation to defer for five years debt payments to the federal government on Choke Canyon Reservoir. The savings will be used to acquire additional water supplies, Dodson said.

In the meantime, residents are being asked to do their part.

Last month, the City Council toughened watering restrictions approved earlier in the year so that residents may water lawns just once every two weeks.

The council this month considered implementing a surcharge for consumers who use more than an allocated amount of water, but voted it down. However, officials said the surcharge could be reconsidered if the water supply decreases further.

"Someone mistakenly indicated that the drought was over in Texas," said City Councilman David McNichols, "but we don't have any real sign that it's going to come to an end any time soon."

Herd stymies Longhorns for 1st district win

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Hereford football team, which gave up 131 points in its last three games, gave up nothing to Caprock Friday night in Amarillo.

The Herd shut out the Longhorns 12-0 at Dick Bivins Stadium to improve to 1-2 in District 1-4A and 2-4 overall. Caprock fell to 0-3 and 2-4.

"It's been a really tough three weeks, starting with Coronado, so it's really nice to have this win," Herd quarterback Joseph Artho said. "The offensive line won the game for us. They won the line of scrimmage - them and Stephen Cloud."

Cloud, the Herd tailback, provided all the Hereford points with two touchdowns - one in the second quarter and the victory-sealer with 41 seconds left in the game.

Cloud entered the game averaging 47 yards rushing per game and 2.9 yards per carry. Against Caprock, he rushed for 175 yards on 26 carries. He deflected credit to the offensive linemen.

"They've been working their tails off," he said.

Cloud also caught three passes for 30 yards, giving him 205 yards of total offense - 15 more than the entire Caprock team.

Caprock was limited to 190 yards of offense, including only 61 rushing. The key, however, wasn't how much the Herd limited the Longhorns, but when.

On its first possession of the game, the Longhorns put together a 14-play, 45-yard drive to the Hereford two-yard line, where they faced a fourth-down-and-one situation. They handed off to fullback Scott Anderson, but Herd tackle Tranquilino Garza met him in the backfield. Anderson fell forward after the hit but not far enough.

The first quarter ended in a scoreless tie.

The Herd defense had to withstand two more challenges before the Herd offense could score. Caprock started its second possession at the Hereford 40 after Arturo Nava's punt went only eight yards, but Caprock couldn't move an inch in three plays.

"We canceled their gaps and did what we were supposed to do," defensive end Trip Robison said. "If everybody does their job, they're not supposed to get any yards."

The 'Horns got to the Herd 33 on their third possession, but they were stopped short on a fourth-and-two run.

"We needed to step up and hold their offense, so our offense could get the ball and capitalize," Herd tackle Josh Alvarado said. "They threw everything they could at us. We took it to 'em and penetrated and held 'em."

The Herd offense took over at its own 33 and finally got moving. In six plays, Cloud ran five times for 27 yards; the other play was a 15-yard pass from Artho to C.J. Kubacak.

Cloud then took a short pass from Artho 24 yards to the Caprock one-yard line. An illegal motion penalty set Hereford back five yards, and two incomplete passes and a four-yard Cloud run brought up a fourth down at the two.

Cloud got the call and fought through several defenders to get the ball over the goal line.

"I was pretty much stuffed," Cloud said. "Three guys hit me, but I got as low as I could and reached across the goal line. I was fortunate enough to have the referee make a good call."

T.J. Danley's extra point kick was blocked, but Hereford led 6-0. John Marty Galan, the Herd's regular kicker and punter, was held out of the game after skipping one-and-a-half days of practice, coach Craig Yenzer said.

The touchdown drive was a result of Hereford adjusting to what Caprock was doing defensively.

"Caprock did an excellent job of covering our short passing game," Yenzer said. "What we noticed was that they were playing soft in the middle to take care of our trap and some other things on the perimeter. When we attacked up the middle, they struggled with it. Turn (the credit) over to the offensive line. They did the job."

Caprock nearly erased the lead immediately. Gary Captain took the ensuing kickoff at his own 15 and broke loose into Hereford territory. Danley, the kicker and the last man to beat, caught him and tackled him at the Herd 38.

In six plays, the Longhorns moved the ball to the Herd 10 with 23 seconds left in the first half. Quarterback Michael Soria was tackled for no gain, then a pass into the end zone resulted in a costly offensive interference call on Caprock. The ball was moved back to the 25-yard line, and Anderson missed badly on a 42-yard field goal with 10 seconds left.

Hereford led 6-0 at halftime and at the end of the third quarter. Defense ruled the third, as both teams went three-and-out on their first two possessions.

The fourth quarter began with Hereford driving. A 15-play drive ended at the Longhorn 11-yard line, where Caprock's Trent Teague tackled Cloud on fourth down.

Caprock got 18 percent of its total offense on one trick play in the fourth quarter. Jonnie Lomas lined up at receiver, took a reverse handoff and made a fine pass downfield to Jerry Wolfe. The 34-yard gain put Caprock at the Herd 42, but two incomplete passes and a sack by Alvarado forced a punt.

On the Herd's next play, Cloud took an option pitch left and raced 59 yards

Cayuga takes 3 OT win against Scurry-Rosser

By CHARLES RICHARDS

Associated Press Writer

It seemed like a game without end. Cayuga and Scurry-Rosser went one, two and finally three overtimes before Cayuga escaped with a 28-26 victory in their Class 10-2A district opener Friday night.

The game was tied 20-20 at the end of regulation, and under last year's rules referees would have turned to penetrations and then to first downs and yardage to determine a winner.

But under this season's new overtime rule, they played 3 hours and 45 minutes Friday night, going scoreless through two overtimes before Cayuga's Nick Brown scored on a 3-yard run to give his team the lead. Quarterback Charles Starr then threw to Gary Turner for a two-point conversion and a 28-20 lead.

Like Cayuga, Scurry-Rosser then got the ball 25 yards from the goal. Quarterback Charles Story, a freshman who just moved into the Scurry-Rosser district from Mesquite, threw a 13-yard pass to Mike Chambers to make it 26-20. But he was sacked on the two-point conversion try and the game finally ended.

Cayuga (4-1-1) led 20-0 before Story brought Scurry-Rosser back, completing 13 of 25 passes for 187 yards.

Elsewhere Friday night, Class 5A's top-ranked North Mesquite vanquished Plano East 40-7, but the No. 2 and 3 teams both lost.

In a matchup of last year's Class 5A Division I and II champions, second-ranked Converse Judson was beaten by San Antonio Roosevelt 28-16.

And third-ranked Tyler John Tyler, which hadn't lost a game in district play since 1993, fell to sixth-ranked Marshall 24-17.

In other games involving the 5A top 10, No. 4 Aldine beat Humble Kingwood 33-13, No. 5 Houston Yates beat Houston Austin 57-14, No. 7 Odessa Permian beat San Angelo Central 31-10, No. 8 Austin Westlake beat Austin High 42-21, No. 9 Midland Lee beat Abilene Cooper 27-22, and No. 10 Galena Park North Shore beat Beaumont West Brook, 31-13.

Grapevine, ranked No. 1 in 4A, plays Southlake Carroll Saturday night. The No. 1 teams of the three other classes all won. Vernon of 3A beat Jacksboro 45-13, Alto of 2A beat Beckville 78-13, and Windthorst beat Saint Jo, 59-6.

Marshall used a couple of big plays to beat Tyler John Tyler in the battle of 5A ranked teams. The Mavericks handed the Lions their first regular-season loss in 26 games.

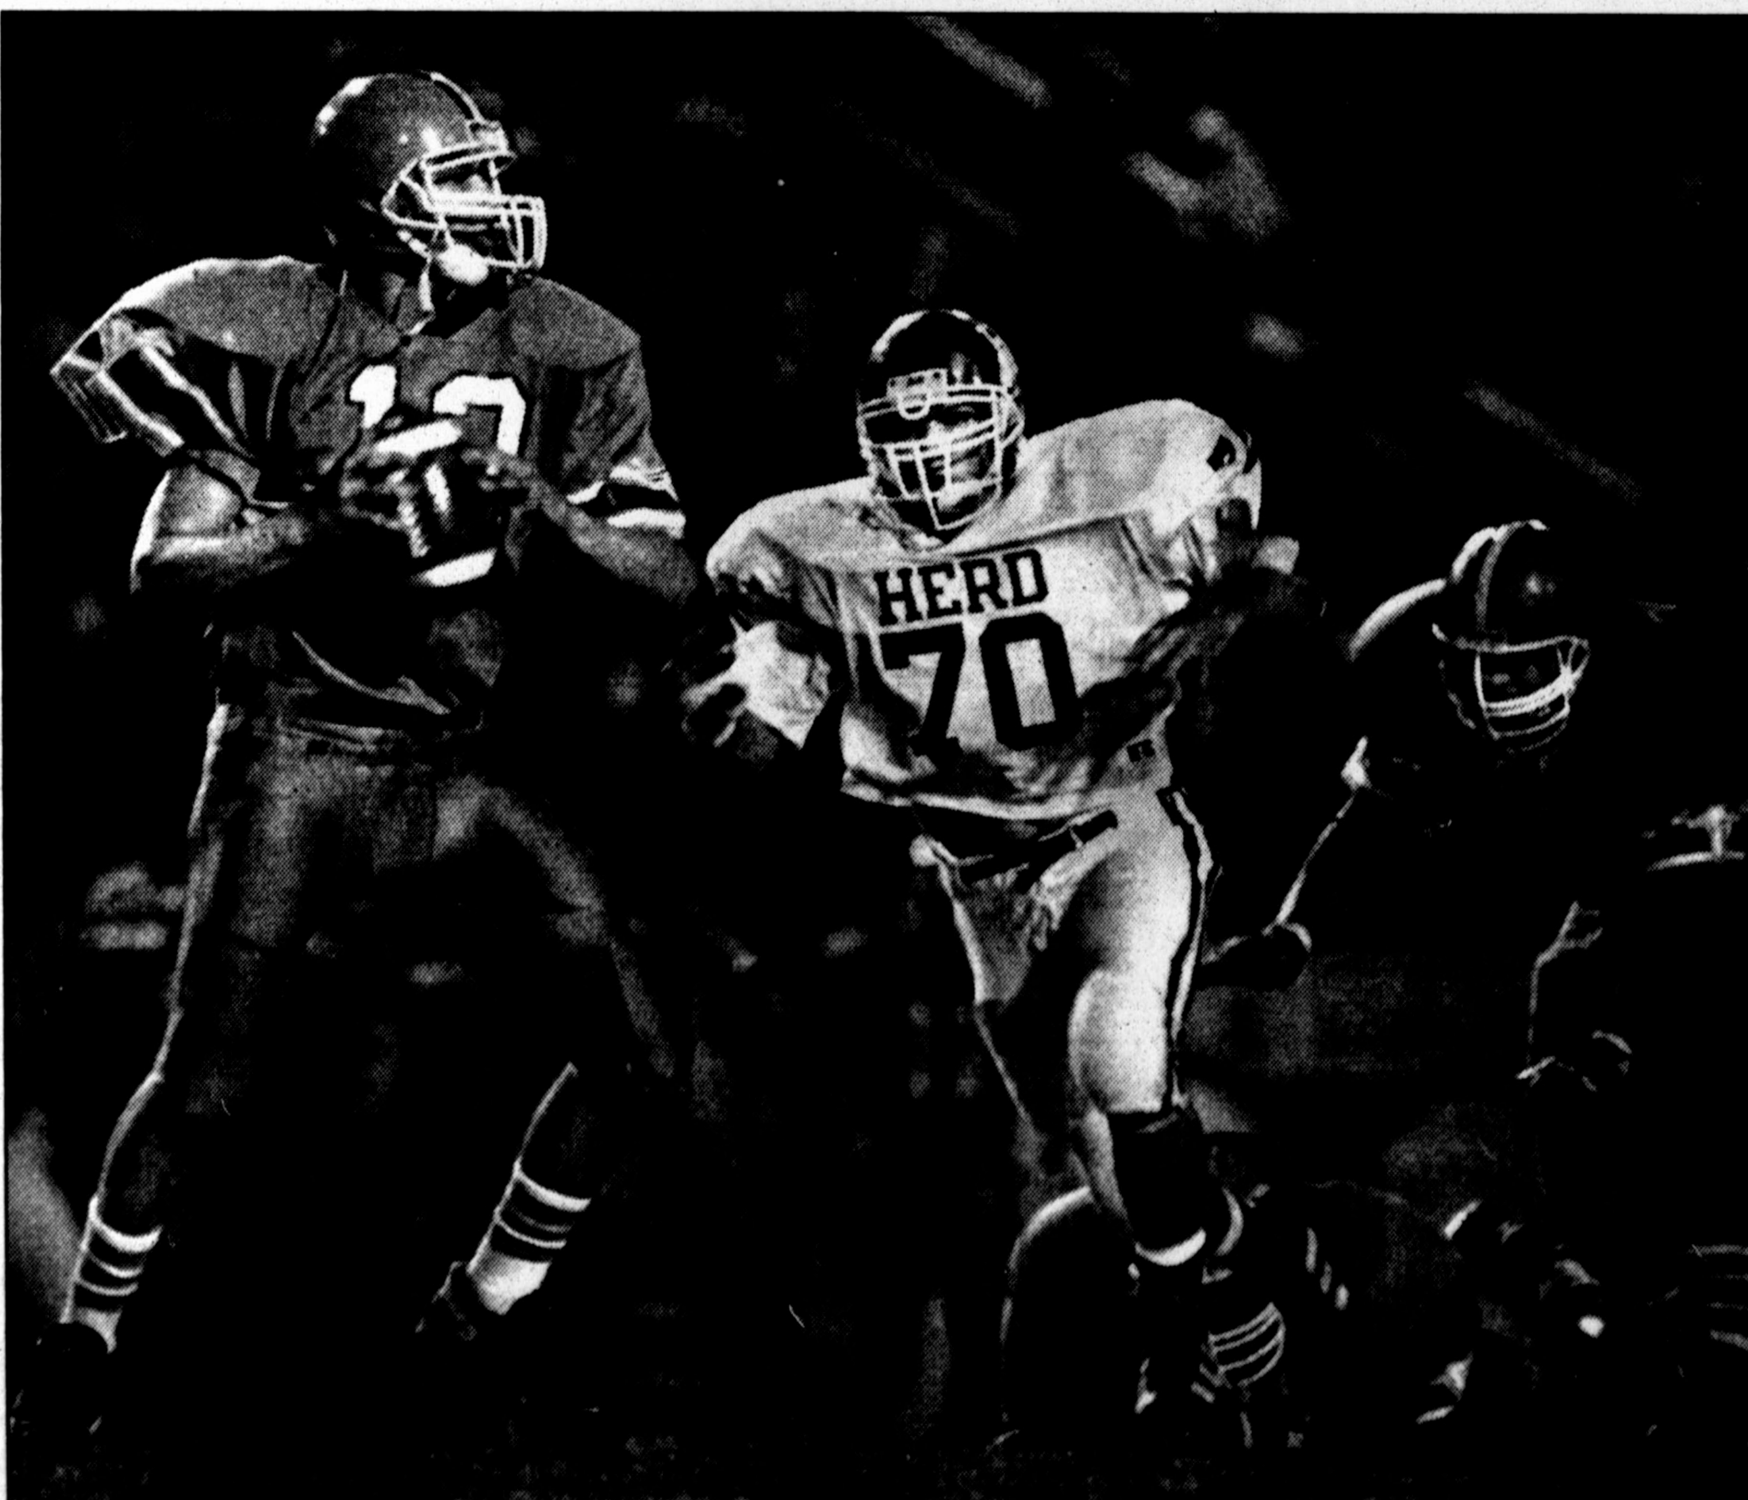

Marshall defensive end Kevin Smith returned a fumble by John Tyler's Torrey McMiller for an 80-yard touchdown in the second quarter, giving the Mavericks a 10-0 lead.

"You can't just give up a touchdown," John Tyler head coach Allen Wilson said. "You can't play big games and do that because they are going to make a play sooner or later."

The Lions battled back for a 14-10 lead, but Clifford Bell's 54-yard touchdown run regained the lead for Marshall. Tyler's Mario Guzman then hit a 30-yard field goal for a tie.

Marshall quarterback Scott Furrh completed only three passes all night, all to wide receiver David Aaron. And with 5:12 left in the game, on third-and-14 from the John Tyler 49, Furrh found Aaron open downfield.

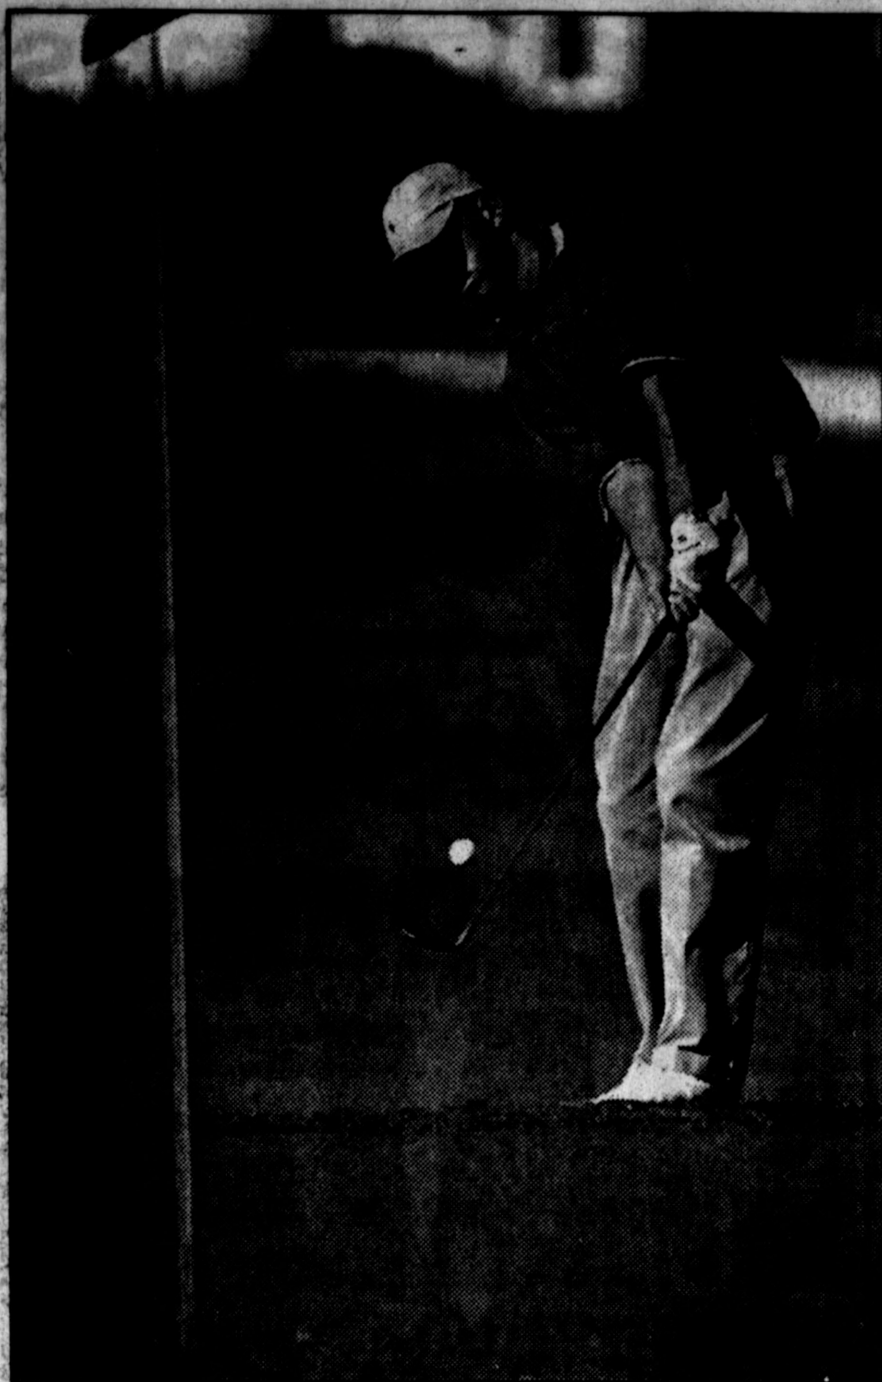

In Vernon's victory over Jacksboro, Brenton Gabbert rushed for 130 yards on just four carries.

Zack attack

Herd defensive end Zack Wall (70) puts pressure on Caprock quarterback Michael Soria (12). The Herd sacked Soria four times - twice by Wall - and held the Longhorns to 190 yards of total offense in the game.

Irvin's return to game brings up questions

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Will they boo or will they applaud? Will he be double-teamed? Can he still run a route and does he still have the hands?

The Dallas Cowboys will be playing the Arizona Cardinals on Sunday, when all eyes will be on wide receiver Michael Irvin, who missed the first five games of the season because of a birthday bust at a hotel where drugs were found.

Irvin got a four-year probated sentence on a plea of no contest to cocaine possession and is in the process of serving 800 community hours. He's also had the agony of watching while his Super Bowl champion teammates fight for their very existence.

There's no doubt the Cowboys missed Irvin, who caught 111 passes for 1,603 yards last year. Sputtering offensively, the Cowboys struggled with three losses before their bye week. It would have been worse if the defense hadn't stepped up to be the best in the NFL.

Quarterback Troy Aikman hopes Irvin can regain his old form against the Vince Tobin-coached Cardinals, who are struggling like the Cowboys with a 2-3 record. There is a little bit of a lingering doubt in Aikman's mind.

"I don't think he'll have any problems, but my concern is that he hasn't been going against an NFL cornerback," Aikman said. "Running routes all day against Doug Switzer isn't like going against an NFL corner."

Zeile's error opens door for Yanks' win

BALTIMORE (AP) - What's the best way for the Baltimore Orioles to beat the Yankees? Get out of town and get out of the Yards.

"We feel fortunate to be 7-0 here," Jimmy Key said Friday night after New York rallied with four runs in the eighth inning to beat Baltimore 5-2 and take a 2-1 lead in the AL championship series.

Todd Zeile's bizarre error allowed Bernie Williams to score the go-ahead run and Cecil Fielder followed with a two-run homer, just his seventh hit in 40 career at-bats against Mike Mussina.

"We're thinking we have runners on second and third," Key said, "and all of a sudden Bernie's running home."

Mussina, who hasn't beaten the Yankees in more than three years, had a four-hitter with two outs in the eighth and had retired 10 consecutive batters. Derek Jeter then doubled and scored the tying run on Williams' single, and Tino Martinez sliced a drive down the left-field line.

Williams slid into third ahead of left fielder B.J. Surhoff's throw, and Zeile caught the ball and turned toward second. Zeile's arm already was moving when he saw he didn't have a chance to throw out Martinez at second, so he faked a throw in an attempt to get Williams to stray off the bag.

"I made a lot of pump-fakes as a catcher, but I usually held on to it," Zeile said. "Bernie read it right away and took off."

But the ball rolled up his fingers and bounced toward shortstop, letting Williams sprint home with the go-ahead run.

"I was going no matter what," Williams said.

Baltimore, which nearly swept the first two games of this series at Yankee Stadium, hasn't beaten the Yankees at home since 1995.

HERD

before Lomas made a touchdown-saving tackle at the 'Horn 32. The Herd was halted at the 20-yard line when middle linebacker Jerry Hall sacked Artho on fourth down.

Hereford returned the favor when end Zack Wall sacked Soria - it was Wall's second of the game - forcing a punt with less than four minutes left in the game.

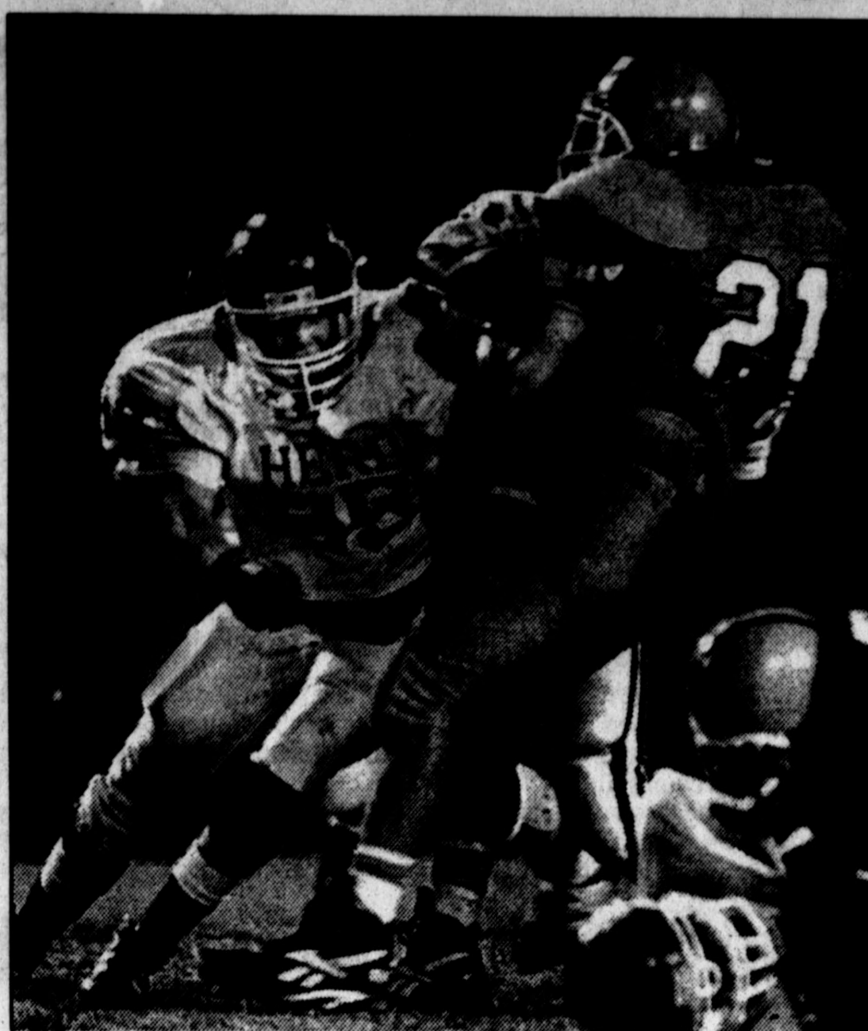

Hereford responded with a six-play, 41-yard touchdown drive. The Herd kept it on the ground, alternating Cloud and fullback Jeremy Scott. Cloud scored from four yards out with 41 seconds left.

Danley's kick hit the right upright, but a 12-0 lead was enough for the Herd. Time ran out on the Longhorns at the Herd 47-yard line.

In a rarity, neither team committed a turnover in the game. That was a key to the Herd victory: now, in its two wins, Hereford has committed one turnover; in its four losses, Hereford has committed 13.

"We finally played an error-free game," Yenser said. "That shows what we could have done all year. But I told the kids, 'We don't want to look back; we want to look forward' - and that's what we did."

"The bottom line is that the character of this crew is immeasurable," he said. "They've had a tough three weeks, but they've continued to battle back. I'm tickled for the kids that this happened the way it did tonight."

Few events match OU-UT football games

"I have never felt anything quite like it at any level of athletics. It is unique in all of sports. You are standing there, right with the guys you are to go to battle with. ... You get there at the same time and you go down together. I have stood at home plate in the World Series, and still have never felt anything like The Tunnel." -- Keith Moreland, former Texas defensive back and major league baseball player.

By DAVID LIVINGSTON
The Daily Texan

AUSTIN - Few moments can match it. The game is huge; the Texas-Oklahoma rivalry is one of the rare games in college football that can determine the success of a coach, no matter what he does in the other games. It's a contest in which all the records can be thrown out, and both teams have a chance to win.

The spectacle in Dallas is a strong recruiting tool for both schools, the type of game big-time players thrive in. But just as big as the game, just as heart-stopping as the last-play heroics that have been prevalent in so many Texas-OU games is The Tunnel.

It's the culmination of all the game's hype. The players stroll out of their locker rooms in Fair Park's Cotton Bowl and head for the playing field. But before they get there, players from both teams wait in the tunnel, waiting to charge into the stadium. One half is stained Oklahoma's crimson and cream, the other side burnt orange and white.

But it is that one moment, the short pause in the Cotton Bowl's tunnel that sticks in the memory of every player who has experienced it. "I talked to (former Texas offensive lineman) John Elmore before I came here," Texas offensive lineman Ryan Fiebigler said. "And when he was recruiting me, that's one of the first things he said. 'If you come here, there's nothing in college football like walking out of The Tunnel before the Texas-OU game. If you want to be a part of that, you might as well come to Texas.' I really agree with that."

Since 1929, the Texas-Oklahoma game has been held at the Cotton Bowl at the Texas State Fair in Dallas. And every year, The Tunnel has been a fixture of the contest, another aspect of a game in which the hype reaches enormous heights. The Tunnel spills out on to the Oklahoma side of the field, giving Sooners fans a chance to taunt and cheer at the Longhorn players. Then at the sound of the band and behind the school flag, the players charge the field. A chorus of mixed boos and cheers cascades down to the field. Few games stir the kind of emotion that Texas-OU offers.

"You're standing there right by the guys you're getting ready to go out there and battle with," Texas receiver Matt Davis said. "I get nervous, kind of that sick feeling to my stomach. You just think, 'Wow, this is exciting.' The fans are so loud when you're down in that tunnel."

The Horns have lost to the Sooners only once in the last seven years. This season, Oklahoma has been one of the worst teams in the Big 12, starting off the season 0-4. Texas is ranked No. 25 in the nation, having dropped two spots last weekend despite a 71-14 win over conference foe Oklahoma State.

But despite the lack of national exposure this year's game will receive, it easily will still be a sellout for the 51st straight year, and the game will once again be broadcast on television. The decline of Oklahoma will cause few fans to stray from the State Fair. The two teams and their fans love to hate each other, and that alone will keep the stadium packed with crazed spectators.

"The OU fans are throwing stuff at you and booing you, they got their horns pointed down," Texas linebacker Tyson King said. "Then you get to the 50-yard line where the Texas fans are, and everybody starts cheering and throwing babies up in the air."

Texas coach John Mackovic, who has participated in big games at Texas and Illinois, and as a coach in the National Football League with the Dallas Cowboys and the Kansas City Chiefs, admits that the walk down The Tunnel is a special moment in college football.

"The tunnel gets a little longer every year," Mackovic said. "My first year, I walked down that thing and didn't think much of it. But now, every year it gets a little longer. There's nothing like walking into the Cotton Bowl."

This will be Fiebigler's third time to walk through The Tunnel. He can still remember how it felt his first time wandering through the base of the old Cotton Bowl. He still enjoys the minutes before the game when the Longhorn players stand next to the Oklahoma players. The teams exchange trash talk, and Fiebigler remembers how excited he became as a freshman.

"It's kind of neat because this year, I'll get to see some of the freshmen for the first time walking down The Tunnel," Fiebigler said.

"It makes me relive some of my memories. You can see the wide-eyed look on their face, and they're totally getting pumped up. It's great to see that." But as King is quick to admit, the experience in The Tunnel can be quickly ruined by what happens on the field.

"You always want to beat Oklahoma," King said. "You want to beat everyone, but Oklahoma ... we really don't like them too much."

Which makes for an interesting time in The Tunnel.

Rangers learn what to do for next year

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - A weary John Blake, shirttail out and tie unraveled, was on the press elevator late Saturday after the Texas Rangers had been knocked out of the AL playoffs.

He had just seen the New York Yankees rally from four runs to beat the Rangers 6-4. This came on the heels of a 3-2 loss and a 5-4 defeat in 12 innings to the Bronx Bombers.

"The quality of the game steps up a level in the playoffs doesn't it?" Blake said. "Any weakness is exposed. Now, we know for sure what we have to do."

The public relations director for the Rangers pretty well summed it up for the Rangers first foray into the postseason.

They made it through a 162-game regular season with average pitching, particularly from the bullpen, piling up 90 wins for the club's first Western Division title.

While New York manager Joe Torre eagerly went to his bullpen Texas manager Johnny Oates got around it every way he could. The Rangers ended up with two blown saves and a loss by their bullpen, while the Yankee relievers were just the opposite.

"We didn't have the luxury of automatically going to the bullpen like some teams can do in the late innings," Oates said.

General manager Doug Melvin acknowledges that the Rangers will be hunting for a solid closer although they may have a homegrown one in Danny Patterson, who has a nasty splitter pitch. Mike Henneman isn't likely to be signed again by the Rangers.

Texas needs to look again at the pitching rotation which is solid with John Burkett, Darren Oliver and Ken Hill but falls off into the infinity of undependability with Bobby Witt and Roger Pavlik.

The Rangers so-so bullpen didn't kill Texas off by itself. Clutch hitting took a holiday for the Rangers except for Senor Octubre Juan Gonzalez, a one-man gang with five homers against the Yankees, and catcher Ivan Rodriguez.

Time may have passed Will Clark by. Clark, who still fields a major league first base, failed time after time in clutch situations. His power has eroded into an occasional warning track flyball.

Clark will have surgery in the offseason for wrist problems and the Rangers are hoping he can bounce back and become an offensive force. Clark is already signed for the next two years.

Centerfielder Darryl Hamilton, who didn't make an error, will be a free agent and the Rangers are expected to go after him hard. So is shortstop Kevin Elster, who had a career-year with 99 RBIs and 24 homers. Benji Gil waits in the wings to replace Elster and it will be interesting to see what the Rangers do.

Of course, another big deal for Texas is signing arbitration eligible Rodriguez, the Gold Glove who hit an even .300 this year.

Remember when the Rangers signed Gonzalez to a megabucks, multiyear deal? They need to do the same thing for Rodriguez, the best catcher in baseball since Cincinnati's Johnny Bench.

Club president Tom Schieffer needs to stack the money as high as Rodriguez wants it.

The Rangers drew over 2.8 million fans this year and the 1997 season is sure to be a bonanza with all the fans jumping on the wagon at The Ballpark in Arlington. Texas won't be able to claim poverty. So it needs to do the right thing with Rodriguez.

The team showed this year what happens with a strong middle: catcher, second baseman, shortstop and center fielder. The Rangers led the major leagues in defense and committed only 87 errors, the fewest in baseball.

Those who saw the two close losses to the Yankees in the first playoffs in Arlington history now know the electricity of postseason baseball where the outcome hangs on every pitch.

Gonzalez provided his share of goosebumps. What a moment when he hit a ball just foul down the leftfield line, triggering a premature fireworks celebration, then came right back two pitches later and drilled a ball fair into the rightfield seats for a legitimate homer and another fireworks show.

It was a long time coming. And the excitement was almost worth the wait.

Inherited ledger brings history to life

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

My own feeling of insignificance in the overall scheme of things is over-powered as I hold history in my hands and turn pages which contain entries made 150 years ago.

I can almost feel the presence of those whose names are recorded there.

History comes alive as I read through the ledger entries and find that Elias came to work for J.P. Morrison on Oct. 11, 1852, for $23 per month.

Mr. Fisher worked for 37 days at 50 cents per day.

Other names recorded in the ledger include Factory Brown, Sho Man and Big Stoa Man.

Did the list of supplies purchased on June 2 fill the needs of a family or of an individual for a month or a year? The entry records 100 pounds of sugar at 10 cents a pound, 171 pounds of coffee at 15 cents, 2 bundles of flour at $5 and one quart of turpentine at 30 cents.

The ledger which records so much history is a record of finances of the Morrison and Blair families, of Tennessee, from 1847 to 1882. It gives minute details of incomplete stories in lives that were interwoven through the years.

Inside the front cover is written

"J.P. Morrison, book March 1847," in such fine calligraphy that it is hard for my untrained eyes to read.

The "book" in which Mr. Morrison made those notations almost a century and a half ago is now in the possession of his great-grandson, Robert Blair (Bob) Crooks of Hereford.

Crooks also has in his possession the family Bible which traces the generations from his great-great-grandfather, J.P. Morrison, to his great-grandmother, Mary W. Morrison Blair, to his grandmother, Mable Adair Blair Luna, to his mother, Mary Elizabeth Luna Crooks.

Numerous pages detail the dollar value of work performed by various individuals, the expenses of feeding and clothing them and the dates that each individual "account" was settled.

One individual listed in the ledger must have been a fine craftsman. Several pages list entries such as a large walnut bedstead for $10, a breakfast table for $2 and a mahogany bureau for $9.

I can't help but wonder as I read these entries -- What happened to these pieces of furniture? Do they still exist? What stories could they tell if they could talk?

Tragedy frequently touched these lives and was recorded as well. There are repeated listings for coffins and cases, some of which specify "infant" coffin.

One such entry made in 1852, prior to the Civil War, records a flat lid coffin at $1.50.

An entry made on Nov. 20, 1872, following the Civil War, states that a coffin and case for child cost $65.

Could this be an accurate record of the economy of that time?

An entire page in the ledger is devoted to "Expenses upon the F. Bridge" with entries made in 1851. The final entry lists total expenses at $606.43. This must have been an extensive venture since individual entries listed current prices such as 6 pounds of nails at 10 cents a pound, one sledge at $1.65 and 51 pounds of iron at 5-1/2 cents a pound.

Although the ledger does not record the emotions and feelings that a daily journal might have contained, the detailed entries not only relate finances, but help paint a picture of another way of life in another time.

150-year-old record

These pages from a ledger dated 1847 record financial entries made by J.P. Morrison, great-great-grandfather of Bob Crooks of Hereford.

A vaccine for chickenpox (varicella) is now available at most public health clinics and from providers who receive publicly purchased vaccine, according to the Texas Department of Health (TDH).

The vaccine is currently available in Hereford at the TDH Women's and Children's Clinic at 205 W. Fourth, said Jan Salazar, R.N., clinic supervisor for TDH.

"The chickenpox vaccine is highly effective," said Dr. David R. Smith, Texas Commissioner of Health. "In one chickenpox vaccine trial, 97 percent of the 7,000 children inoculated were protected against the disease," he said.

Initially, TDH recommends use of the chickenpox vaccine for children who have not had the disease and are ages 12 months through 23 months, and 11-year-olds.

For the past decade, Texas has reported about 20,000 cases of chickenpox annually. Although highly contagious, illness from chickenpox is generally mild and usually not life-threatening. But about 9,300 hospitalizations and 50 to 100 deaths are related to chickenpox annually, mostly in young children. From 1985 to 1994, Texas recorded 69 deaths associated with chickenpox.

The illness is transmitted by coughing and sneezing and through fluid from broken blisters. A person is contagious with chickenpox from one to two days before blisters or bumps appear until lesions have dried, which usually takes four to five days.

Those who have had chickenpox do not need the vaccine.

"Most children will have few if any problems with the vaccine," said Smith. "For those who do, the injection site may be somewhat swollen and red. A child may be slightly sick at the stomach and tired and uncomfortable."

A routine chickenpox vaccination program in the United States would save $384 million annually or $5.40 for every dollar invested in the program, according to an article in the February 1994 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. Immunizations against childhood diseases, including chickenpox, are given Thursday of each week at the Women's and Children's Clinic from 7 a.m.-11:30 a.m. and from 1 p.m.-5:45 p.m.

Adult inoculations, including flu and pneumonia shots, tetanus and TB testing, are also available during these same hours.

For further information about the chickenpox vaccine or other immunizations available, call Salazar at 364-2401.

MRS. BRADLEY SCOTT CUNNINGHAM
...nee Tracee Ann Davis

The Rev. Scott Greer officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Richard Davis of Osage City, Kan. and Edye Cunningham of Amarillo.

The groom is the son of Tom and Willa Cunningham of San Angelo, formerly of Hereford.

He is the grandson of Ozelle Kilgore of Benjamin, the late Willard Kilgore and the late Mr. and Mrs. H.T. Cunningham.

Matron of honor was the bride's mother. Bridal attendants were Jodee Rowe of Costa Mesa, Calif. and Jodi Roland of Garden City, Kan.

Red Cross Update

Your local chapter is still involved in the United Way fund raiser drive this month, and we urge all residents to support all of the United Way agencies by sending contributions to the United Way office.

If you have never heard about or seen the good things that are being done by the agencies which receive their funding from the United Way, you should take the time to hear a short presentation and explanation. All the agencies that we support through United Way are definitely a continuation of our culture and our heritage of providing opportunity for those who need it and of compassion for our fellow Americans.

Red Cross shelters are open and operating again on the East Coast. Hurricane Josephine has come and gone taking yet another bite out of our disaster fund. The national appeal for funds, to maintain the disaster account, is underway even now. Though the Red Cross does not usually ask for contributions during the United Way fund raising campaign, Red Cross and United Way have an agreement that, during times like this, when public welfare is threatened, disaster fund raising will be concurrent with the United Way drive.

Money isn't the only contribution you can make. Classes for volunteers are continually available through our local chapter. Or, if you are already trained in CPR/First Aid, you might consider becoming an instructor and thereby make the CPR/First Aid course more easily available to your friends, co-workers and family.

A First Aid and CPR instructor class will begin at the Aquatic Center Oct. 15. Please call or go by the center for more information.

We are also collecting aluminum cans as part of our disaster fund raising drive. So please bring them by, and if you know any young volunteers who might be interested in trading cans for tickets to the Aquatic Center, please let us hear from you so that we can set up the program. We are also looking for someone who is interested in repairing bicycles for the Christmas giveaway.

Special thanks to Doris Johnson, Dorothy Perry, Sally Walker and Betty and Dale Henson for their help as office staff. Thanks also to Jim and Kerrie Steiert for the great PR help and for typing up our personnel plan, and to Lupe Chavez for his work on the State Service Council.

Anchor Club officers

Officers for the Anchor Club were installed during a candlelight ceremony as keys were issued symbolizing love, respect, honor, integrity, diligence and inspiration. Installed were Tyson Foerster, president; Trisha Spain, vice president; Amanda Andrews, secretary; Chris Star, treasurer and Michelle Denning, Isabell Sanchez and April Mason, directors. Advisor for the new co-ed club at Hereford High School is Dianna Kimmel. The club, which is sponsored by the Pilot Club of Hereford, focuses on health and safety issues and brain related disorders. They are currently selling Hereford Pride beach towels as a fund raising project.

The first curtain opens at 8 p.m. Oct. 24. Performances also are scheduled for 8 p.m. on Oct. 25, 26 and Oct. 28, with a 2:30 p.m. matinee set for Oct. 27.

— YOUR EYES —

Are Your Eyes Middle Aged?

Exercise and a good diet may help you look and feel younger than your parents did at your age, but, as you approach the 40s, you still may have difficulty reading the small print. This condition has a name — presbyopia — and almost everyone gets it.

Key to the problem is the small lens within the eye that changes shape automatically as we focus on objects near and far. The lens is soft and flexible at first, but it hardens with age; in time, it's not flexible enough to focus on small-print matter held at the usual distance. That's when the reader starts holding the newspaper or book further and further away until — the old joke goes — "the eyes are fine, but the arms are too short."

Presbyopia is a normal and expected condition at middle age. Ignoring it usually results in headaches, blurring vision or tiredness when you try to read. Better: see the optometrist for reading glasses prescribed for your special vision needs.

By MARTHA RUSSELL

The latest thing that Sue and Becky have dreamed up is a beginning sewing class. Becky Walls, woman of many talents, will be teaching the very basics of sewing. If you have never sewn a stitch in your life, but would like to, this is the class for you.

It is scheduled for Monday night, Oct. 21, from 6 p.m.-8 p.m. in the Story Room of the library. You don't have to bring any supplies, just show up for this first meeting. Think about the kind of sewing you would like to do -- clothing for yourself or your children, crafts, home decoration, or whatever.

With Christmas coming, newly acquired sewing skills could come in handy for that special hand-made gift.

If you don't feel like you need to come to this basic class, but need a little help with technique or creative ideas, we have many books on the shelves about sewing that might help you. Come check them out.

New books are arriving. Hooray!! One of the most interesting titles, I think, is How to Make Use of a Useless Degree by Andrew Frothingham. The cover has this interesting statement, "Some people pick a major, get a degree, find a job in their chosen field, and settle down. This book is for the other 97% of us."

This book is, of course, a guide to finding the perfect job for you. It does take a little different approach, however. Very down-to-earth, but light-hearted, it includes frank interviews with people with a wide variety of situations, sharing their success stories, failure stories, and somewhere-in-between stories, along with practical tips about looking for jobs in places other than the "Help Wanted" ads. Even though I now have a job I love and am not looking for another, I still found this book entertaining and informative.

My favorite cover among the new books is Cowgirls by Candace Savage. I'll not tell you what's on the cover. You have to come in and see it for yourself. It would lose its impact if I tried to describe it to you. If you're missing the Cowgirl Hall of Fame, this will help you with withdrawal. With over 100 photographs and other types of pictures, it traces the cowgirl back to her origins, from real working ranch hands to wild west show stars and daring bronc riders of the rodeo circuits. And Savage didn't forget the glittering cowgirls of the Hollywood westerns.

the most important computer tip of all -- NEVER READ THE INSTRUCTIONS. (Note to any former computer literacy students of mine -- This is Dave Barry's advice, not mine!!) This is typically Dave Barry and will leave you ROTL (Internet emoticon for "rolling on the floor laughing").

By the way, for those of us who are new to the terminology, cyberspace is a new word which refers to the internet and emoticons are typed characters that tell the reader what your emotions are at the time of writing. They are like the little happy faces that you draw in hand written letters to let your reader know that you are not serious about what you just wrote. Got all that??

There are several new fiction books this week. Stephen King's latest, Desperation; Dinotopia by Alan Dean Foster, a new science fiction; Brendan Prairie by Dan O'Brien, a novel of western South Dakota; and Dead To Rights: A Joanna Brady Mystery by J.A. Jance are now available.

In Legal Tender by Lisa Scottoline, Benedetta "Bennie" Rosato is a maverick lawyer who prosecutes police misconduct and excessive-force cases, and business at her firm, Rosato and Biscardi, has never been better. Bennie's latest client, Bill Kleeb, is an activist who was allegedly roughed up by police during a demonstration at a pharmaceutical company, Furman Dunn. It's an open and shut case until her client confesses to Bennie that Kleeb's group has a more violent agenda for the company president.

Then, a brutal murder tears her firm apart when all the evidence points to Bennie herself, who has motive, opportunity, and an unconfirmable alibi.

Now the lawyer becomes the client and the cops she once prosecuted are after her with a vengeance.

As Bennie probes deeply into the murder, her only ally is her lawyer, Grady Well, until she discovers secret meetings that make her suspect even him.

As if this is not enough, another murder occurs, and Bennie finds herself indicted for a double homicide, punishable by death. The only thing left for her to do is run for her life, armed with only her wits and her courage. She will find the murderer - or die trying.

Ann Landers

Dear Readers: Do you believe in fate? Or is it just dumb luck -- a matter of being in the right place at the right time? When I asked my readers how they met their mates, I was struck by how frequently Cupid had arranged for them to be sitting next to one another. I then said, "I'd love to hear from readers who married a seatmate. Please send the details." An incredible number of men and women told me they just happened to be seated next to one another on a plane, train, bus, roller coaster, streetcar or camel ride. Here is a sampling of what the mail has been like:

From Aiken, S.C.: While representing the U.S. Embassy as a judge at a "Miss World Peace" contest in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, in 1973, I was seated next to a distinguished-looking Englishman who was also a judge. His name was Alan Wood. It was love at first sight. I felt that I was the winner of the grand prize when Alan asked me to marry him several weeks later. What a lucky seat that was! -- Marjorie Bennett Wood Lincoln, Neb.: We met in a football stadium. It was the Iowa-Nebraska football game, and "Jimmy" was seated next to me. We started to talk. Now, 12 years later, we have three little Cornhuskers.

Scotts Valley, Calif.: I was seated next to a handsome young man one Sunday in church. When hymn time came, his voice fascinated me. I said, "You have a beautiful voice. How come you aren't singing in the choir?" He replied, "I would rather be here sitting next to you." You guessed it. We were married six months later and have had 46 happy years together.

Silver Spring, Md.: I met my true love on a hiking club outing. It was 1969. We sat next to each other around the campfire. She went nuts over my Southern accent and gave me her extra butterfly net. We married the following year.

Oneonta, N.Y.: We met in a courtroom -- both of us were attorneys, and we sat at opposite tables. He represented the other side. It was a bitterly fought case, and I won. I thought he would never speak to me again, but I was wrong. After the verdict was read, he congratulated me and said, "Let's have lunch." We have been married for 11 years, and he has yet to win an argument.

Cleveland: We were seated next to one another in the dentist's waiting room. I pretended to be reading, but it was hard to keep my eyes off him. He was so handsome. When he asked, "Don't I know you from somewhere?" I replied, "I don't think so. If we had met, I certainly would not have forgotten it." That was 16 years ago, and we are now taking our four kids to the same dentist.

Indianapolis: I sat next to him at the Red Cross cookie counter after donating blood. He quipped, "You're just my type -- how about lunch?" That was 20 years ago. We've gone to every Indy 500 since as Mr. and Mrs.

San Marcus, Texas: The year was 1927. I enrolled in a teachers college in Commerce, Texas. The math classroom was equipped with double desks. (I had never seen them before.) On the very first day, a beautiful girl walked into the room and was looking for a place to sit. Almost all the seats had been taken. The instructor told her to hurry up and sit down "anyplace." Not one to miss an opportunity, I immediately sprang to my feet and led the beautiful girl to my double seat. In a few days, we were both coming to class early so we could compare notes. Within a week, I knew we belonged side by side forever. We just celebrated our 66th wedding anniversary.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.55.)

Keeping journal can give people insights

By LYNN BULMAHN
Waco Tribune-Herald
WACO, Texas -- An uncle told Joan R. Neubauer of the boxes of notebooks he'd found years ago.

The notebooks were filled with the life stories of Rose, the daughter of Italian immigrants. Rose began writing journals when she was 12 and continued throughout her life, through the birth of her 10 children and up until her death at an old age.

But Neubauer's uncle didn't see any value in the notebooks. He'd thrown them away.

Hearing about it, "I just wanted to cry," admits Neubauer, who was Rose's granddaughter. Neubauer would have cherished the chance to read her grandmother's journals.

Neubauer is the author of "Dear Diary: The Art and Craft of Writing

A Creative Diary" and "From Memories to Manuscripts: The Five-Step Method of Writing Your Life Story."

Dr. Marylea Henderson of McLennan Community College was luckier. She had no idea that her mother kept a journal -- until her parent died, and Henderson found it.

Now she has something very personal by which to remember her mother. The journal details her mother's thoughts, feelings and actions.

An author and free-lance writer, Neubauer is on a crusade to popularize keeping diaries and journals.

The Georgetown resident complains that most Americans don't write about their experiences. Therefore part of who they are, their reflections about the life they live and their innermost thoughts, aren't being preserved, she said.

After they die, their essence will be lost. Their survivors, and descendants yet to be born, will never know their stories at all, Neubauer said.

But Neubauer should take heart. The "lost" art of journal writing is now being revived. Around the nation, many established authors and entertainers are publishing their memoirs.

So are celebrities of every stripe -- especially if they were involved in politics, or the O.J. Simpson trial. Their first-person accounts, many compiled after years of keeping journals or diaries, often reach best-seller lists.

But you don't have to be famous to be fascinating, Neubauer said.

Ordinary Americans are working at computer keyboards or writing in notebooks to compose their own life stories.

people how to write their own journals, be it a personal diary, a tool in counseling or journal of one's spiritual development.

Helen Harris counsels terminally ill patients and their families as part of her job at Community Hospice of Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center. She's kept a journal for years.

Although Harris frequently writes about her own family or what she's seen that day, many journal entries center on the clients, though she changes the people's names and identifying circumstances to protect their privacy.

Harris says she cherishes the chance "to be able to memorialize them and say what was special about them" in her journal. She says her clients teach her about courage and love. Writing about them helps her come to closure.

Henderson said she's taken up her mother's habit and has kept a journal for the past decade. At MCC, she also advises her counseling clients, usually single mothers, displaced homemakers and college students, to do likewise.

"I went to a conference and the speakers were mentioning (journaling) as one of the areas to help you balance your life," Henderson said.

"You can work through things until you solve the problem."

Neubauer agrees it's healthy. "It's been clinically proven that writing journals is good for you," the author said. "Patients who keep journals have a higher self-esteem and a more positive attitude on life and everything else."

This, in turn, leads to a positive change in the body, she added. "Your immune system kicks up a notch or two and you'll remain healthier for a longer period of time."

Henderson said keeping a journal "really gives you a perspective, really gives you insights" on what is going on in your life. She said this can be therapeutic for most.

"When a difficult time comes and you're in a mess, you think 'What can come of this mess?'" Henderson said. "Writing brings some real truth and clarity to it all."

Often it prompts people to change their attitude, she said, even if they can't change anything else about the situation they're in.

Also, Neubauer said, diaries allow people to set down the most secret goals, then assess whether they're keeping on track toward achieving these goals.

Henderson said she's noticed that among her counseling clients, those people who journal seem to make more progress than those who do not. Perhaps this is because journal-writing makes them think about their goals.

"People who journal tend to do better at whatever they're doing," Henderson said. "You just have to do it, you just have to experience it" to understand the value of keeping journals.

Harris said she likewise advises the people she counsels to keep a journal. It helps with the stress and grief they're feeling.

Sensory descriptions make writing more vivid. Describe the setting or person. If there was music, tell what was playing. If your husband gave you a gardenia, tell what it smelled like. If you work under the hood of your car, what did the grease smell like and what did you learn was wrong with the vehicle?

Things you can include in your diary include a comic in the newspaper, a vivid dream you had or even the news of the day. You could even speculate about what the future will hold, Neubauer said.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: We have an oval-shaped dining table, which has a central pedestal support with four feet coming from the pedestal. Under our dining table we have a "crumb catcher" woven-backed rug to protect the good-quality carpet we have throughout the house.

Our rug is continually in waves and wrinkles. We do change the rug around often, but within a day or two we're right back to where we started. Any help you can give us would indeed be appreciated. — Jan Hammett, Indianola, Miss.

A friend of mine had the same problem with a very heavy marble pedestal coffee table. The padding and rug flattened out under the weight of the marble.

She solved the problem by using a large, heavy piece of plywood under the throw rug. The "support" was larger than the dimensions of the pedestal by about 12 inches.

After the area rug was placed over the plywood, she centered the pedestal. The plywood helped keep the pedestal from sinking into the carpeting and the area rug stayed wrinkle-free.

Hopefully, this can also solve your problem. If anyone has any other ideas that work, we'd love to hear from you. — Heloise

PET PALS

Dear Readers: One of our little cockatiels who resides in our office loves his wooden rings with a bell attached. He has become very, very attached to the bell.

We watch him putting his head under it and moving it back and forth. I guess it feels like someone is petting him.

He's adorable, but he won't let his little cagemate near it. If we remove the rings, he yells, runs and flies around his cage until we hang it back up.

It's awfully cute to watch. — The Heloise Office

TV CABINET

Dear Heloise: Here is a hint for recycling a console TV cabinet when the TV no longer works.

Take all the insides out of the cabinet and put a full piece of glass in front, then put a door on the back side on hinges. This makes a good display cabinet for dolls, bells, whatever your prize possessions may be.

My husband added a small 6-inch fluorescent light on top (inside). It's a beautiful attraction in any room. — Sue Veland, Santa Rosa, Texas

CELL PHONE CASE

Dear Heloise: Instead of buying an expensive carrying case for your cellular phone, try a large, soft eyeglass case instead. — Donna Mustillo, N. Caldwell, N.J.

We had a couple of eyeglass cases around here and tried it. The larger cellular phone did not fit in it, but the small one did.

It's worth a try since those phone carrying cases can be expensive. Thanks for writing. — Heloise

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have had bipolar illness for some time. I am taking two psychoactive drugs. I exercise regularly, eat right and take vitamins. But I tire a lot during the day, even though I sleep 10 to 12 hours at night. I am 36. Why the tiredness? — G.B.

ANSWER: I wish you had mentioned the names of your medicines. It's possible that one is causing your fatigue. Your doctor can identify which one. Don't under any circumstances stop taking the medicines or even tinker with dosages without consulting your doctor.

Bipolar disorder is a serious illness, with periods of bleak depression interspersed with periods of uncontrollable energy and grandiose thoughts.

You have taken an important step toward a better life by being diagnosed. Modern psychoactive drugs have freed many to regularize their lives by dampening the disease's destructive ups and downs.

Today, few authorities reject the notion of chemical imbalance or the effectiveness of the drugs.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please tell me what can be done for nails. Mine split and peel and get thin. Is there a vitamin for nails? What benefit is biotin for nails? What about gelatin? I really hope for some answers, but any suggestion would be appreciated. — Mrs. D.M.

ANSWER: One in five adults has nail complaints. Nails get brittle. They split. They soften. They thin and they crack.

Often, the most obvious source of all the trouble is too close to recognize. It is immersion in water or in harsh cleansing chemicals.

Brittleness especially can be traced to repeated immersion. I have seen many a nail problem cured with the simple expedient of wearing two pairs of gloves — rubber over cotton — during immersion chores.

My next bit of advice might not make sense, considering the fact that water appears to be behind cracking nails, but it works: Just before retiring each evening, soak the nails in warm water for five to 10 minutes. Immediately afterward, apply Lubriderm Moisture Recovery, ointment or lotion, or some similar product, such as Lac Hydrin. Then don a pair of white cotton gloves. That will retain moisture in the nail through the night.

Gelatin has no effect on nails. Biotin, a B vitamin, might. One respected dermatology text advises taking 2.5 milligrams of biotin daily until the nails heal. That's far in excess of the recommended daily allowance for the vitamin, so you might want to check it out with your doctor. That much biotin should not get you into any trouble, but your doctor might want to monitor your progress, looking toward other patients with similar nail complaints.

For more information on nail troubles, see my report on the subject. Readers can order the report by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 22, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Throw Me A Roll, Please

I like to eat. It's an old family tradition. Anytime our family gets together, you can count on one thing: There will be more food than you can eat.

I was pleasantly surprised a few weeks ago to learn that a Lambert's Cafe is now open near Springfield, MO. The rumor mill told me they serve generous portions at reasonable prices. That's music to this old fat boy's ears.

Since we were on vacation and had worked up an appetite touring the Bass Pro Shop in Springfield, we headed for Lambert's. We weren't disappointed.

In fact, the whole experience was so positive that I knew as we walked out the door that I'd write this column.

However, I didn't start on it right away. I needed a nap first.

Some business lessons

Some of the best business lessons are right in front of us every day. I learned a lot in the two-hour visit to Lambert's Cafe. You can indeed see a lot just by looking around.

The first thing I noticed was the location. The restaurant is easy to find. It is located next to U.S. Highway 65 between Springfield and Branson, MO. This location brings lots of traffic and tourists. The parking lot is huge and flat and access to the building is easy with no steps.

The next element we noticed was the speed of the service. It was mid afternoon when we arrived, but there was still a crowd. We were seated quickly and served immediately. Our food arrived in no more than seven or eight minutes. Hardly enough time to enjoy the rolls we caught.

The "threw rolls" are the trademark of Lambert's. They are piping hot, five-inch buns, and the only way you can get one is to catch it! Last year, Lambert's threw 2,246,400 rolls (not all were caught).

The third business lesson was about quality. Every item the smiling wait staff served to us was of highest quality. The Reader's Digest version: The food was great.

We found good food and plenty of it, fast, friendly service, reasonable prices and a good location. These are the basic elements of running a profitable restaurant business. However, this description would also fit several national chain operations like Cracker Barrel, The Black Eyed Pea and Chili's.

What is it that sets Lambert's location apart from all others? Why is this cafe the subject of this column instead of one of the other solid operations? In two words: market positioning.

Lambert's does a good job with all elements of the marketing mix. Their prices equate to value. Their products are of top quality. Their promotion is adequate, but not extravagant. The place (location) is good and their people are fast, friendly and fun.

It is the market positioning that separates them from all other restaurants I've seen. My definition of positioning is: The benefit or advantage you offer your customers that no one else can. Your position is what makes you unique and memorable.

Lambert's market position is fun and showmanship. While we were eating our late lunch, I watched more than a hundred folks at nearby tables. All were having a great time. Even sleepy little children got bright-eyed and excited as the hot rolls flew across the room.

The conversations at tables were animated. Folks were smiling and laughing and alert to see what would happen next. It was an experience worth savoring. More importantly, you can bet that everyone there will tell someone else. I just told more than a million. Now that you know, catch and eat a roll for me.

Customized wheelchairs have left mark on many lives

By JESSICA STUMP
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

LUBBOCK, Texas -- As Mike Pitifer takes a step into the orthotics shop at the Lubbock State School, his stride quickens, he talks faster and he moves speedily through the building. The work he and his staff of five have undertaken gives Pitifer an unmatched energy and excitement.

He has become known as the "wheelchair man" throughout the campus for the creations he has designed and built for many severely disabled students.

His job as supervisor of the orthotics department is developing and fitting devices designed to supplement functions. In this capacity, the shop has turned out items such as special spoons and high-back plates to make mealtimes easier for students. But it is the wheelchairs he has taken and customized that have left a mark on so many lives.

"When I first got into this I didn't know how to handle it," Pitifer said. "I had never worked with handicapped people before. I learned these people are smart, they just happen to be physically handicapped."

While working with the students at the Lubbock State School, Pitifer saw there needed to be a way to make those in wheelchairs more comfortable. He knew there must be a way other than straps to help hold a person in a chair safely and comfortably -- with this in mind he invented the tilt-and-space wheelchair.

"They (those in wheelchairs) had a hard time with positioning," he said. "Once they get in a position, there's not enough muscle tone to stay in that position."

While relaxing at home, the answer dawned on Pitifer.

"I fell asleep lying back in the Barca-lounger," he said. "When I woke up I was still in the same position. That's when I thought, let gravity help in the positioning."

When the chair is tilted back gravity helps support the body's position. With the tilting frame, the chair also allows the person to change positions to keep from getting bedsores.

"They can redistribute the pressure and get the blood to circulate," he said. "When you tilt them back they can see the world."

Pitifer began working at the state school 15 years ago. The school wanted to start an orthotics department to work primarily on wheelchairs.

"I started with a little garage shop with a couple of tools, and they gave me the tools to make it grow," he said.

With this time and support, the first tilt-and-space chair was built in 1983. Pitifer dubbed it the low-rider.

"I just chopped the back down and set it at an angle," he said.

Pitifer began with a tilted chair that stayed in a fixed position, but he has advanced the design to allow for changing positions with micro-switches.

Each chair that comes out of the shop is custom built.

"Each one is individualized," he explained. "No one can use the system -- except the person it's designed for. These are severely handicapped people. We need to fit their exact needs, and you can't fit their exact needs with something off the shelf."

Physical therapists and occupational therapists decide who needs the equipment and describe what the requirements are to the orthotics department.

The person who needs the equipment is then measured for an exact fit. The entire chair will be assembled in the shop.

"Everything you see on these chairs we build except for the wheels and brakes," Pitifer said.

In the working area, an assembly line-like arrangement is set up. Areas for welding and bending the metal into shape are on one side of the building and areas for upholstering and painting are on the other side. Pitifer has even designed a special jig to hold the apparatus during the welding process.

"It's a complex machine," he said. "Instead of taking two or three people (welding), it only takes one. It's designed for efficiency."

Another innovation the crew at orthotics uses to customize the chairs is using a body molding process for the seat. A chemical process, which produces a foam, form fits the body of the chair around the person.

Custom building the chairs at the school not only help the individuals who must use them, but also saves the state some money.

In the public sector, chairs comparable to those built in the orthotics department list for between $6,000 and $8,000.

"We can build it for about $800," Pitifer said.

The work gives Pitifer a feeling of accomplishment.

"The people who really matter in this case can't say thanks, but you can see how you have helped someone," he said.

G-18 STATISTICS
Design G-18 has a columned foyer, dining room, living room, family room, kitchen, breakfast nook, four bedrooms, two full baths and a utility room, totaling 2,041 square feet of living space. The plan is available with 2x4 or 8-inch-concrete block exterior wall framing and a slab foundation. A two-car garage provides 452 square feet of space.

THE COLUMNED FOYER is flanked by the living and dining rooms. The family room has sliding-glass-door access to a covered patio. The left side of the home has three secondary bedrooms and a full bath. To the right of the family room, the breakfast nook flows into the island kitchen. The master bedroom is a step away, and features a private bath and patio access. A utility room at the other end of the kitchen leads to the two-car garage.

Consumer advice for home electrical work

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Special Features

Much of the dread of making an electrical upgrade is based on the need for cutting into finished walls and ceilings. Fishing wire through closed spaces is always a gamble as hidden structural components can foil the entire effort. Then, of course, there's the problem of wiring along brick or masonry walls.

One solution to these problems is decorative surface wiring. While not the most desirable option under ideal conditions, the system can be a real problem solver in the right places.

Surface wiring is not a new concept. We've seen it in old schools and commercial buildings. The difference today is that modern surface wiring components are not only attractive, but also come in a range of colors and profiles. Some are also made of plastic, which eliminates the need for redundant grounding.

A typical installation of one new receptacle and a switched ceiling light requires enough channel to reach the new box locations, three box extensions, a T-connector to branch to the switch, an inside-corner connector to carry the channel across the ceiling and a round ceiling fixture box. You also need a few accessory packets that include an assortment of wire clips, track connectors, screws and plastic anchors.

Several electrical code requirements will rule your installation. To determine whether your circuit has enough capacity for the new components, assign 1.5 amps to each existing outlet. At this rate, a 15-amp circuit will handle 10 outlets, and a 20-amp circuit will handle 13 outlets. Shut off your circuit and use a lamp to verify which outlets are without power. Then, add up the number of dead outlets to determine how many new fixtures or boxes can be added.

Each receptacle and fixture also needs to be grounded, as does any metallic box you use as a starting point. All ground connections should be made with insulated wire, and all wires should be the same size as those used in the existing circuit.

Also, check with local codes for the number of wires allowed per box. You are allowed to count all ground wires as one and each device as one.

Decorator suggests thrift and savvy in rental fix-ups

Many people hesitate to invest in changes that they can't take along when they move from a rental apartment.

Not only would it mean spending money they won't recoup, but in most cases tenants are expected to put things back the way they were when they leave. That means additional expense in removing any improvements. Furthermore, most landlords will balk if any structural changes are made.

What's a frustrated home decorator to do? Fix things up anyway, but be savvy about what you do, suggests decorator Gillian Drummond.

When she moved into her rental apartment, Drummond took her own advice. She repainted at her own expense, bought new window treatments and shades even though they may not fit a future home, built in a table in the breakfast nook, and covered the washer and dryer with a counter to gain more working surface.

"I can't take most of these improvements with me, but they weren't all prohibitively expensive and my surroundings are very important to me," says Drummond, who recently relocated to Greenwich, Conn., from Wilmington, N.C.

Drummond has been a decorator for about 30 years, so her expertise is much greater than average. However, what she did can be duplicated by those with less experience.

"Someone in a rental should look at how long they are planning to stay and how important their surroundings are to them," the decorator says.

Especially if you do it yourself, painting is the most effective inexpensive way to give a room or a whole apartment some life, color and character.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the word, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

--Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Truck Drivers needed for 1996 Beet Harvest. Must have Class A CDL, be at least 25 years old, two years verifiable driving experience, clean driving record. Also need serviceman. Please apply in person to Cutrell Trucking, 2900 Arnot Rd. 1-806-359-7184.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, You who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my idea. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me, and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with You and my loved ones in Your perpetual glory. Amen, Thank You for Your love towards me and my loved ones. (Grace obtained).

Farm and Ranch

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent-AG
Corn harvest has moved along very rapidly this past week with most producers reporting above average yields.

Many of the farmers that I had the opportunity to visit with this week have said that their yields are some of the best that they have had.

Who in their right mind would have predicted these type of yields in the spring when it was so dry that the weeds would not even grow.

Just this last week I was visiting with Roy Carter, a Pioneer Seed Dealer at Milo Center. As we talked the subject of corn varieties came up.

Both of us really were amazed at how much the corn varieties have improved in the last ten years, not only in yield potential, but also in standability, disease resistance, in the ability to handle limited irrigation and in insect resistance.

When looking at the past ten years, just try to imagine the changes that will occur in the next ten years with biotechnology and the genetic manipulations that will be occurring.

We are already looking at Roundup resistance, IR corn that allows for the use of new herbicides and BT corn that will aid in resisting cornborers and other larvae. We are in for an exciting time in agriculture.

As with all good things, there is usually a darker side. The good corn yields in our area and reports of prospects for good crops throughout the corn belt and the Southeast United States have driven the price of corn down.

This year, it is clear that producers need to look at forward pricing and risk protection. It is not at a critical level, but situations like this in the future could cause severe losses in income to a lot of producers.

We have planted three wheat variety demonstrations on the Donald Meyer, Raymond Schlabs and Jim Cavin farms.

This year we are again participating in the uniform variety test being conducted in cooperation with Dr. Brent Bean, agronomist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Wheat Producers Board.

Several new varieties of wheat have been released this year including a Kansas release called Jagger and a Texas release called TAM 110.

Several new wheats from AgriPro are also being compared in these demonstrations with the newest being AP Coronado. These are being compared to a number of standard varieties that are currently being used.

We will be watching these demonstration plots during the year and taking forage yields and will take grain yields next spring.

As harvest continues, please remember that this time of year is probably one of the most dangerous times for agriculture. With the machinery, long hours and hurried conditions as all try to get their crops out, safety is often the last thing on a person's mind.

Please try to make sure that safety is at the forefront as you harvest your crops.

Here are some suggestions:
-- Keep all equipment in good working condition and include frequent checks on those areas that present the greatest potential for accidents.

-- Train your employees and family members in the safe operation of all equipment.

-- Don't over extend yourself or your employees. Take an occasional break from the routine of harvest.

-- Don't let small children near the harvest equipment.

Let's make this a safe and injury-free harvest season.

Environmental stewardship symposium set for Dec. 13

Agricultural producers and landowners must make key decisions every year about conservation and protection practices for their farming and ranching operations.

A conference, to be held in December, will aid area producers in making sound choices, organizers of the Ag Producer's Role in Environmental Stewardship Symposium, set for Dec. 13, on the campus of West Texas A&M University said.

"Some of this country's best stewards of land and water quality are our farmers and ranchers," said Robert Buckley, executive director of the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board (TSSWCB), one of the agencies sponsoring the event.

"The conference has been designed to offer factual and up-to-date information on land and water quality issues important to today's agricultural operator," said Brent Auvermann, assistant professor of agricultural engineering and extension service specialist for environmental systems with the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center in Amarillo, who heads the program planning committee.

Questions most often asked by the producer have formed the agenda. Agency officials and university scientists will help address key issues, such as nonpoint source water pollution and the need for certified water quality management plans as specified in recent actions by the 73rd Texas Legislature.

State Rep. David Swinford of Dumas will present keynote briefing on S.B. 503, its history and the provisions allowing producers to develop site-specific management plans to meet state water quality standards.

Presentations by TSSWCB officials, including Buckley, will cover the benefits of a Water Quality Management Plan (WQMP), including the management practices that will best serve the needs of the Texas High Plains producer.

Participants also will learn about the alternative best management practices (BMPs) being demonstrated in the region that are funded by Section 319 (h) under the Clean Water Act. Pesticide management strategies will be featured, and why such measure should be part of a good water quality plan.

Several Texas High Plains producer will participate as panelists for discussions on the practical issues and economic benefits associated with water quality management plans, and take questions posed by members of the audience.

Conference planners are also seeking approval from the Texas Department of Agriculture to offer continuing education units (CEUs) for commercial and non-commercial pesticide applicator recertification credit.

The registration cost is $15, which includes a noon meal and breaktime refreshments, and the deadline to sign-up is Dec. 5. Registration forms are available through TSSWCB Regional Manager, Charley Rodgers at (806) 839-1030; or Brent Auvermann, Texas A&M Center at (806) 359-5401.

Conference sponsors include: TSSWCB, U.S. Department of Agriculture Natural Resources Conservation Service, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Section 319 (h) Program, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas Agricultural Extension Service and West Texas A&M University, representing the Texas A&M University System, Texas Department of Agriculture, USDA-ARS Conservation and Production Research Laboratory (Bushland), Texas Cattle Feeders Association, North Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 2 and West Texas Agricultural Chemical Institute.

Commodity Classic to host top growers

ST. LOUIS -- More than 4,500 of the nation's top growers and industry leaders are expected to be "Together in Tampa" Feb. 27-March 1 for the 1997 Commodity Classic. The combined convention and trade show of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and the American Soybean Association (ASA) will be held at the Tampa Convention Center in Tampa, Fla.

"This successful combined convention format is proving to be a value to our industry by enhancing the information flow within agriculture to keep us up-to-date on the latest cutting-edge information and technology," said Kent Kleinschmidt, NCGA board member and convention co-chairman.

The inaugural Commodity Classic made history last February with a sold-out attendance and trade show, said Gordon Wassenaar, ASA grower and convention co-chairman.

"With 1997's Florida location and increased meeting and trade show space, we're anticipating this year's event will be the largest gathering ever of the nation's top farming commodity leaders."

The joint convention program will feature profit-impacting educational sessions on a variety of topics including marketing, biotechnology, financial management, emerging technology, freedom to farm policy and other key "need to know" information. The successful format also emphasizes fellowship among farmers to share ideas while enjoying sunny Florida in February.

Special events featured as a part of the registration package include Friday general session keynote speaker Jane Bryant Quinn, NCGA's and ASA's award banquets to be held separately Friday evening and Saturday evening of entertainment headlining Pam Tillis and opening act "The Patsy Cline Tribute," featuring the legendary Jordanaires.

Registration also includes admission to the trade show featuring the latest technology at more than 475 booths. The trade show serves as the convention's hub of activity with sponsored meals and special events throughout the convention.

The 1997 Commodity Classic registration and housing packets will be mailed directly to all ASA and NCGA members in October. The registration and housing information will be available after Oct. 15 by calling (417) 232-4999 or the association's web sites: NCGA, www.ncga.com or ASA, www.oil-seeds.org/asa. Tampa Hillsborough area visitor information is available by calling 1-800-448-2672.

Wheat seed fungus-free

DALLAS--A wheat fungus that caused USDA to quarantine two wheat fields in West Texas was not found in screening tests conducted at the Texas A&M laboratory in Dallas. This means Texas-produced wheat seed is free of the smelly fungus. The pathogen, Tilletia indica, presents no health hazard but affects the odor, color and palatability of flour and foods from it.

"All pre-harvest, post-harvest and seed holdbacks from the two quarantine areas in Texas tested negative, according to George Nash, state operational officer for USDA-APHIS in Austin. "And more than 700 samples from elevators and seed from around the state also showed no sign of the fungus."

El Paso and Hudspeth Counties were placed under quarantine in April when the fungus was confirmed in 500 acres owned by two producers and traced to infected seed from the original Arizona supply.

According to David Marshall, Texas A&M wheat researcher and director for the Dallas screening lab which handled all the Texas samples, "This confirms it -- no Texas-produced wheat has been found to have the fungus."

Several New Mexico counties and large portions of Arizona also were placed under quarantine last spring because of this fungus.

Soybean board chair announces elections

DALLAS -- Weldon Melton, chairman of the Texas Soybean Producers Board and a farmer from Plainview, announced "the date of their upcoming election for board members. The election will be held by mail on Nov. 29."

Three farmer directors will be elected -- one from the High Plains, one from the Gulf Coast and one from Northeast Texas. These positions are currently held by Melton, Richard Raun, El Campo; and Carl Weets, Cooper. Anyone wishing to run for a position on the board should apply to the TSPB by Oct. 31 by calling 1-800-247-8691. A nomination form with 10 producer signatures is required.

The Texas Soybean Producers Board was organized Oct. 6, 1970, in Lubbock and is responsible for the disbursement of the federal soybean checkoff. Half of all funds remain in Texas and are used to fund research and promotion to the benefit of Texas soybean producers. The state is divided into four districts with board members being elected on a rotating basis every two years for terms of six years.

Current officer are Melton, chairman; Raun, vice chairman; and T.P. Rotello, Navasota, Secretary/Treasurer. Other board members are Worth Matteson, II, DeKalb; W.B. Tilson, Plainview; Louis Pyle, Floydada; Wesley Schumacher, Plainview; R.D. Burnside, III, Baytown; and Weets.

Please contact the Texas Soybean Producers Board at 1-800-247-8691 for more information.

Agriculture Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Landowners now may enroll eligible acres in the Wetlands Reserve Program without waiting for a set sign-up period.

The voluntary program offers financial incentives to enhance wetlands in exchange for retiring marginal farmland. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said 325,000 acres of high-quality wetlands have been restored, and another 650,000 acres are targeted over the next six years.

The chance to sign up acreage at any time was offered for an indefinite period, starting Oct. 1.

ABC skates on thin moral ice with Sudden Terror movie

By John Crook
©TVData Features Syndicate

ABC's Sudden Terror: The Hijacking of School Bus No. 17, which premieres Sunday, Oct. 13, is almost certain to divide viewers.

Maria Conchita Alonso (Texas), Marcy Walker (All My Children), Bruce Weitz (Hill Street Blues) and Michael Paul Chan (The Joy Luck Club) star in the drama, which is a fictionalized adaptation of an actual incident.

What begins as a routine morning run for school bus driver Marta Caldwell (Alonso) soon turns into a genuine nightmare, as Harry Kee (Chan) commandeers her bus.

Kee is taking desperate action in response to what he claims is an unjust demand from the Internal Revenue Service for unpaid taxes (which, we learn, total $16,000).

Carrying a bag he says is filled with plastic explosives, the detonator strapped to his chest, Kee informs Caldwell that unless she carefully follows his instructions and drives to the front door of the IRS office in Miami, he will blow up the bus and its passengers — mostly children with developmental and learning disabilities.

While Caldwell attempts to placate the increasingly unstable Kee, Lt. Kathy Leone (Walker) faces a crisis of her own: Her chief is on vacation, leaving her — along with Lt. Dominick Caroselli (Weitz) and their SWAT team — to follow Kee's erratic course around Miami's expressway system, trying to negotiate with him and find a way to rescue the hostages.

As Kee, running out of time, decides to make a last stand at a restaurant where he once worked, Leone faces the agonizing decision of when to make a decisive move.

Sudden Terror is a slick piece of work, yet it's virtually impossible to watch it without ambivalence.

Perhaps there's a (thin) case to be made that this TV movie is simply depicting ordinary humans behaving heroically under extraordinary circumstances, and certainly no one would argue that the real "Marta Caldwell" did anything less than that, nor did the police officers trying to help her.

Alonso performs a sensitive job in her role, capably portraying a woman trying to stifle her own mounting fears to protect the fragile psyches of her charges.

Walker and Weitz also are fine, as is Dennis Boutsikaris (The Jackie Thomas Show) in the underwritten role of Caldwell's husband.

Still, two thoughts may keep nagging at the back of some viewers' minds.

First, isn't it sad that one of the few Asian-American actors on network TV this season is reduced to playing a scenery-chewing madman?

Even more troubling, underneath all the cosmetic let's-hear-it-for-the-driver trappings of Sudden Terror, there remains the ugly fact that this TV movie was made for one primary reason: to deliver viewers in return for advertiser dollars.

The real "Harry Kee" put a busload of disabled children through a nightmarish ordeal because he was a self-absorbed lunatic with a persecution complex and a conviction that he had a direct line to God.

Now other people are rehashing the nightmares of those kids in a bid to make some big bucks.

Who's the real villain of this piece, anyway?

HOROSCOPES

October 13-19

ARIES - March 21/April 20
What seems complicated on Monday will become crystal clear by Friday. Patience is the key to keeping your cool. Something you say to a work associate could cause problems for you later on. Think twice before divulging your secrets to those you don't totally trust.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
Tempers may flare at home early in the week. Try to keep a low profile or you could end up in the middle of a battle zone. Midweek, you'll be given a second chance at an opportunity you passed up weeks ago. Maybe it's time to go for it. A change in a Virgo friend provides food for thought.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
Concentration is the name of the game at work on Monday. Keep a close watch on details or you could miss something important. Your need to have fun and your limited cash flow aren't a good combination this weekend. Creative thinking is key to peace of mind.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
Feeling crabby than usual, Cancer? It could be that you're in need of some rest and relaxation. If you've been burning the candle at both ends, it's probably time to take a break. Romantic moments await if you're willing to let your guard down. A "catch 22" situation arises.

LEO - July 23/August 23
Even though you tend to be a team player, this week you'll be better off working solo. Difficulties may arise at home, but a little patience is all you'll need to make things right. Think twice before making a big financial investment. Be sure to read all the fine print before signing.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
Don't lose sight of your priorities this week. Giving in to distractions will only make things tougher for you later on. At work, don't be afraid to express your ideas. Now is a good time to take on bold new adventures. A love relationship needs some special attention. Leo needs your help.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
Watch your spending this week, especially if you're saving for something big. Only buy what you really need. A family member's news will have a big effect on you. You may be headed for change. Being in the right place at the right time could help you figure out a long-term problem. An in-law shows you a different side of him/herself.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
A loved one who is in an irritable mood could add a rough texture to the week. Be patient and try to stay out of his/her way. A new adventure later in the week will be a reminder of your past. A desire for more free time may mean giving up some work responsibility.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Lose the lax attitude and assert yourself, Sagittarius. If you continually go with the flow, you'll never gain the respect you deserve. Think about it. An upcoming trip gives you a lot to be excited about. If finances are looking good, it may be time to make an investment.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
It's time to bury the hatchet in a broken friendship. If you let pride stand in the way, you may live to regret it. A new work associate may call on your guidance and expertise. On Friday, a little kindness goes a long way. A Cancer plays a major role at a social event this weekend.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
Instead of getting stressed out about all you have to do, just go ahead and do it. Focus your energies in a constructive way. An unexpected social invitation adds spice to the week. You'll find yourself doing something you don't normally do. An old friend pays a surprise visit.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
Watch what you say during moments of anger or you could end up hurting someone. On Tuesday, something will happen that will make you grate-

Q: My boyfriend, Greg, and I have a bet. I say Peter Scolari (Newhart) was on Bosom Buddies with Tom Hanks. He says that wasn't Scolari on Buddies. A dinner out is riding on this. —Linda via the Internet.

A: Bon appetit! Yes, that was Scolari playing Henry Desmond, a k a Hildegarde, to Hanks' Kip Wilson (Buffy) in the ABC sitcom from the early '80s that has become a cult favorite. They are still friends and Scolari has a role in That Thing You Do!, Hanks' feature directorial debut.

Q: Is Nicholas Turturro of NYPD Blue related to John Turturro (Quiz Show)? There definitely is a resemblance. —David Loehr, Charlotte, N.C.

A: They are brothers.

Q: Many years ago, I used to enjoy watching cartoons featuring two gopher twins. I think their names were Mac and Tosh. What company produced them? Are there any videos available? —Wayne Hickman, Salisbury, Md.

A: The hilariously polite pair were the creations of the same Warner Bros. artists who created Daffy Duck, Bugs Bunny, Tweety, et al.

As always, call Movies Unlimited at 1-800-4MOVIES for video information.

Ask for a copy of their catalog, which has a huge selection of Warner Bros. cartoon collections (you may be on your own as far as determining which tapes have the "Goofy Gophers" on them).

Q: So what does ESPN stand for anyway? —"Wahooman" via the Internet.

A: Entertainment and Sports Programming Network.

Q: Please settle this. I have been told former Miss America Vanessa

Peter Scolari

Williams was once a regular on Melrose Place. I don't recall ever seeing her. —Frank Pape, Rome, N.Y.

A: It's no wonder people are confused. In a rare exception to the well-known Screen Actors Guild rule, there are, in fact, two actresses named Vanessa Williams.

The "other" Vanessa is the actress who played Melrose Place resident Rhonda Blair during the first season of the prime-time soap. That actress also was a regular on Murder One last season.

Q: Several weeks ago you mentioned a Due South soundtrack that was due in stores in June or July. I still can't find it. Can you help? —Janet Lord, Wellington, New Zealand.

A: I can't get many details, since South has been canceled. A former publicist for the show reports the recording is "in the can," but producers have had problems getting legal clearance for some of the selections.

HIGHLIGHTS

Stand-up comic Ray Romano stars as a sportswriter with a wife, children and too-close-for-comfort relatives, in Everybody Loves Raymond, a new comedy airing Fridays on CBS.

Everybody Loves Raymond - those who watch it, that is Sitcom magic is elusive; just ask Bill Cosby.

So it's a shame CBS is staking its fall season on the success of the as-yet-unfunny Cosby while Everybody Loves Raymond languishes in the Friday lineup.

Raymond stars mild-mannered stand-up comic Ray Romano, who so impressed David Letterman in one Late Show appearance that Letterman was eager to develop a series around Romano.

As to that magic formula, its ingredients are as well-known as they are hard to come by.

"It's basically just the writing and the casting and the sense of humor," Romano says.

As with Home Improvement, Seinfeld and other comedies spun from stand-up acts, Romano's sense of humor sets the tone for Raymond. Twelve years of work in comedy clubs have produced a soft-spoken schtick based on Romano's real family: a father with a dry, maniacal sense of humor and a police sergeant brother with a Tommy Smothers complex.

In the show, Ray plays a sportswriter with a wife and children, living a little too close to his parents and grown brother.

Patricia Heaton (Room for Two, Beethoven), a classy and underappreciated comic actress, plays Ray's wife, Debra, who needles him without whining. Brad Garrett, as Ray's brother, is the show's big lug savant, slow without missing a trick. Peter Boyle and Doris Roberts co-star as Ray's boisterous, meddlesome parents, who wouldn't know a subtle hint if it hit them between the eyes.

The writing for Everybody Loves Raymond started strong, and should only continue to get stronger as the characters come into sharper focus. As Heaton puts it, "Anybody who has a couple of kids and has parents will get this show."

Anybody who has kids and parents and sees it, that is. For there's nothing wrong with Everybody Loves Raymond that moving the show to a better time slot wouldn't fix.

The Young and the Restless reaches a major milestone Oct. 22.

The show will tape its 6,000th episode and celebrate with a party on the set. The episode will air in early November.

In other news: Donna Mills (Abby, Knots Landing) has a temporary new address this fall - Melrose Place. Mills plays Sherri Larson, a woman from Jane's past. Sherri will be doing what Mills' other characters have done best, creating turmoil for those around them.

Also, Mills' Abby character will take center stage when CBS begins taping a four-hour Knots Landing reunion film this month.

All of the favorites from the famous cul-de-sac are returning. In the film, Abby owes the IRS $1 million in taxes. Mack (Kevin Dobson) tries to help some factory workers laid off by Greg Sumner (William Devane). Val (Joan Van Ark) is excited when her book is optioned for a movie. Of course, Val will be having man trouble.

Fans of Sarah Michelle Gellar (ex-Kendall, All My Children) may soon see her on the WB Network. She is set to play Buffy in the TV version of Buffy the Vampire Slayer, slated as a midseason replacement show.

Gellar left AMC more than a year ago to pursue other interests. Perhaps this will put to rest the rumor Kendall might return to Pine Valley.

Congratulations go out to Fiona

Hutchison (formerly of One Life to Live and Guiding Light) and her husband, John Viscardi (formerly of OLTL). The couple welcomed their first child, John Hutch, into the world Sept. 3. Hutchison says she plans to hit the pavement looking for work soon.

Dear Candace: Can you tell me the name of the actress who plays the clinic receptionist on The Young and the Restless? She looks so familiar, but I can't place her. -Jean, Oklahoma City.

Dear Reader: Jill Whelan plays the role. You may remember her as Vicki, Capt. Stubing's (Gavin MacLeod) daughter, on The Love Boat.

CHITTER CHATTER

NEW YORK (AP) - NBC has made sure "Friends" will be there for you through the 1999 TV season at least.

After months of robust negotiations, the six stars of the hit sitcom have agreed to a new contract that will pay them $75,000 each episode this season - up from $30-35,000 last year.

Next year, their salaries will increase to $85,000 and then move to $100,000 in 1998. By the sixth year of the sitcom in 1999, each will make $120,000 per episode, TV Guide reports.

Series creators Marta Kauffman and David Crane were increasingly concerned about the drawn-out negotiations involving Jennifer Aniston, Courteney Cox, Lisa Kudrow, Matt LeBlanc, Matthew Perry and David Schwimmer.

Kauffman and Crane felt the talks were hurting the quality of the show and pushed both the cast and Warner Bros., the show's production company, to make a deal, the magazine reports.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - When Shania Twain showed up for last week's Country Music Association awards show in Nashville, husband Mutt Lange wasn't along to escort the popular Canadian hitmaker.

Chances are that her husband-producer-songwriting partner won't be holding hands with Twain at other public functions either.

"He never comes with me," Twain tells Country Weekly magazine. "I don't think he ever will, and I totally understand where he comes from."

"He's a very humble guy and basically doesn't want to be a star. He just wants to be a person who makes the music."

Lange has made music for Def Leppard and Bryan Adams, and he was behind Twain's multiplatinum "The Woman in Me," which produced four No. 1 singles, including "Any Man of Mine."

NEW YORK (AP) - The 20-somethings who play devoted fans of the Wonders in Tom Hanks' directorial debut, "That Thing You Do," had to be coached in the fine art of '60s dancing and decorum: Mashed potato in, head-banging out.

"It's really a matter of explaining to them what they cannot do," Hanks told Entertainment Weekly in its Oct. 11 issue. "It's hard when you're talking to an audience of 300 people and one of the first things you have to say is, 'Look, please do not high-five each other. High-fiving did not exist in 1964.'"

Only later, he added, when the scene is done and the bouffant wigs come off, "do I actually get to see all their tattoos."

NEW YORK (AP) - Kelsey Grammer's stay at the Betty Ford Center could cost his network more than just a little bad press.

TV Guide reports in the Oct. 19 issue that NBC may have to air reruns of his show "Frasier" for part of the fall season. The network could lose as much as $500,000 in advertising revenue each time it shows a repeat.

The loss of new "Frasier" episodes could also hurt ratings for "Caroline in the City," which follows Grammer's Emmy-winning sitcom Tuesday nights.

Grammer was arrested for alleged drunken driving Sept. 21 after he flipped his Dodge Viper near his home in suburban Los Angeles.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - Add acting to the list of things Bo knows.

Bo Jackson - the star of football, baseball and Nike's "Bo Knows" commercials - makes his big screen debut Friday as a Mississippi prison guard in the new John Grisham film "The Chamber."

Jackson says the acting was easy. "I'm not easily intimidated, even though there are some people with big egos in this business. That really doesn't bother me."

A hip injury cut short Jackson's football career, and he retired from baseball last year.
