British May Ask For Surrender...

Decisive Battle Begins For Falklands

By The Associated Press

British marines and paratroopers today were reported fighting Argentine troops for control of a strategic mountain 12 miles west of Stanley in action that could pave the way for the decisive battle of the Falkland Islands.

But government sources in London were quoted as saying the commander of the British task force, Rear Adm. John Woodward, has been given full authority to decide whether to give the Argentines an opportunity to surrender before launching a full-scale assault on Stanley, the Falklands capital.

The sources, quoted by Britain's domestic news agency, Press Association, and Independent Television News, said the British did not want to subject Argentina to a humiliating defeat because of concerns of worsening political instability in Latin America.

The British Defense Ministry reported Monday night that British and Argentine troops were battling for control of 1,500-foot Mount Kent 12 miles west of Stanley.

Press Association reported fighting three miles closer to Stanley on a ridge called Two Sisters, indicating the British marines and paratroopers may have pushed back the Argentine perimeter. But there was no official confirmation of this.

Argentina in a communique issued early today said its forces had "detected" British troops about 15 miles from Stanley. It said Argentine troops were using helicopters to reinforce their defense positions around the town.

Reports from London and Buenos Aires said the Argentine commander, Brig. Gen. Mario Menendez, had heavily fortified Mount Kent and the nearby ridges. If the British captured them, they would provide a vantage point for shelling the inner Argentine defenses.

Press Association also reported without attribution that the British had landed their backup force of 3,500 Scots and Welsh Guardsmen and Nepalese Gurkhas north of Stanley, bringing their total land forces on the island to at least 7,500 and outnumbering the estimated 7,000 Argentines concentrated around Stanley.

The Defense Ministry refused to confirm the landing report.

Two British forces had been advancing on Stanley, Royal Marines and paratroopers moving westward by heliocopter from the San Carlo beachhead, and another paratroop force coming around from the south after capturing the Goose Green airstrip and 1,400 Argentine prisoners.

British press reports said the two forces had linked up for the assault on Stanley.

The ministry said British Harrier fighter-bombers continued to pound the Stanley airstrip 2½ miles east of the town, and "a number" of Argentine light planes were believed damaged.

Press Association reported that British warships moved to within two miles of the Stanley harbor to shell Argentine fortifications.

As the British forces move steadily forward, the tenor of statements from Argentina's ruling junta and from its newspapers changed in an apparent effort to prepare the Argentine public to accept a defeat and convince it at the same time that this constituted a victory in disguise.

American Detained

PEKING (AP) — An American teacher from Denver was handcuffed after a struggle and detained by Chinese police for investigation of alleged theft of state secrets, U.S. Embassy and foreign sources said today.

They said Lisa Wichser, 28, was picked up Friday night at the Friendship Hotel where she lives. She resisted, was handcuffed, and was taken to a police station where she was visited by a U.S. consular officer. A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the embassy has protested the handling of the case on grounds it violated part of the Chinese-U.S.consular agreement.

An embassy statement said her detention — it did not use the term arrest — "relates to the theft of state secrets. We are aware that this has a broader interpretation in Chinese society than it would have in our own."

Copter Crash Kills 2

FAIRFIELD, Texas (AP) — Investigators examined the charred wreckage of a helicopter that crashed near this Central Texas town and exploded on impact, killing two men.

Burned beyond recognition were Clinton Rose, 25, of London, and Harvard Holen, 24, of Oslo, Norway, according to David Wells of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Witnesses told investigators the Bell Jet Ranger aircraft banked sharply and then began losing altitude, crashing about 3:30 p.m. Monday, he said.

Rose and Holen had taken off from Huntsville and planned to land in Gainesville, Wells said.

Both men were taken to the Cappes Funeral Home in Fairfield, he said.

Holiday Death Total

By The Associated Press

More than 300 motorists died this weekend during the long Memorial Day holiday, but the nation's death toll fell far short of the 400 to 500 fatalities predicted by the National Safety Council.

Last year, 378 people died on the streets and highways over the three-day weekend, compared with 308 victims reported by early today. The holiday period extended from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday.

Road Checks Put Up

SURFSIDE, Texas (AP) — Authorities in three coastal communities, trying to keep intoxicated beachgoers off the road, say they put up weekend traffic checkpoints.

Angleton, Richwood Village and Clute police departments worked together to set up road checks along Texas Highway 288. Nearly 100 people have been arrested the past two weekends, police said.

Police Lt. John Carter said Angleton police issued more than 100 traffic citations Sunday, most for failing to present a driver's license or proof of liability insurance.

Clute Police also conducted checks Sunday evening, and Sgt. M.E. Norman said only one person was arrested for public intoxication.

2 Killed In Fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The pro-Iranian Amal Shiite militia waged street battles through the night with a pro-Iraqi group and two other leftist factions, and police said two people were killed and 11 wounded.

Syrian peacekeeping troops moved into three neighborhoods in Moslem West Beirut to try to stop the fighting, which reflected the larger war between Iran and Iraq. But sporadic gunfire continued at midmorning.

A police spokesman said the Amal militiamen were fighting with gunmen from the pro-Iraqi Baath Party and a Kurdish group and with Communists.

U.S. Tag Targets Bombed

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Bombs ripped through three U.S. Army officers' clubs and the headquarters of a U.S. Army corps headquarters a week before President Reagan is scheduled to visit West Germany.

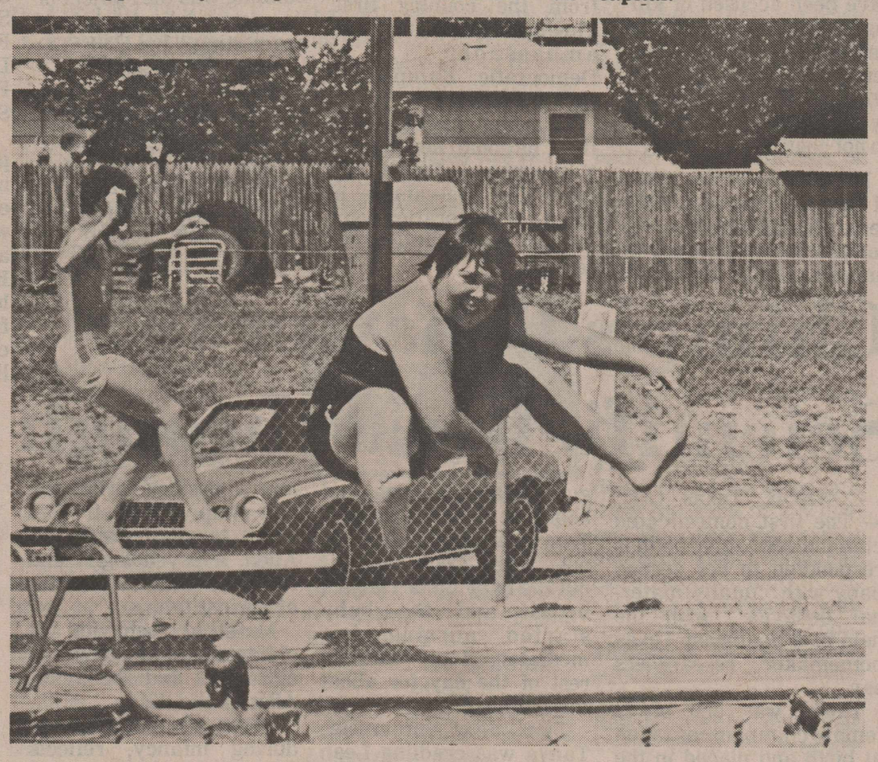

A U.S. Army spokesman said there were no injuries in the blasts, which occured at clubs in Bamberg, Gelnhausen, and Hanau and at the V. Corps headquarters in Frankfurt.

Damage was "moderate," the spokesman added.

West German police said the explosion in Bamberg occurred shortly before midnight Monday, while the others took place about 1:30 a.m. today.

No group claimed responsibility for the attacks.

The Federal Criminal Office, which handles investigations into terrorist attacks, took charge of the case.

Memorial Day Speech...

Reagan Asks For Arms Reduction

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says nuclear arms reduction talks with the Soviets, beginning late this month in Geneva, could diminish the arsenals that threaten "war even more terrible" than those that already have claimed American lives.

In a Memorial Day speech at Arlington National Cemetery, the president also confirmed that the United States will continue to abide by the constraints of the signed, but unratified, SALT II treaty as long as the Soviets do the same.

Reagan's schedule today includes two briefings in advance of his departure Wednesday for meetings with allies in Europe, where he is likely to encounter anti-nuclear demonstrations.

Formal announcement of the June 29 date of the new round of strategic arms reduction talks, which Reagan refers to as START, was made in a joint U.S.-Soviet statement issued at the White House just prior to the president's speech.

"Both sides attach great importance to these negotiations," the statement said.

Standing near rows of graves with white markers, Reagan reiterated his call for reducing nuclear weapons "by negotiating a stable balance at far lower levels of strategic forces."

Addressing about 4,000 people in the cemetery's amphitheater, Reagan said of potential adversaries:

"We must strive to speak of them not belligerently, but firmly and frankly. And that's why we must never fail to note, as frequently as necessary, the wide gulf between our codes of morality.

"And that's why we must never hesitate to acknowledge the irrefutable difference between our view of man as master of the state and their view of man as servant of the state.

"Nor must we ever underestimate the seriousness of their aspirations to global expansion. The risk is the very freedom that has been so dearly won."

He said such "honesty of mind" could "build a foundation upon which treaties between our nations can stand at last, treaties that can someday bring about a reduction in the terrible arms of destruction, arms that threaten us with war even more terrible than those that have taken the lives of the Americans we honor today."

He added: "As for existing strategic arms agreements, we will refrain from actions which undercut them so long as the Soviet Union shows equal restraint. With good will and dedication on both sides I pray that we will achieve a safer world."

That declaration was viewed as a way to allay concern among European allies that the administration was abandoning the restraints imposed by SALT II. Reagan has denounced the treaty as "fatally flawed," saying it permitted the Soviets to add at least 3,000 nuclear warheads to their inventory while the United States tried to catch up.

Reagan appeared to have tears in his eyes just after he placed a wreath of carnations and chrysanthemums before the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

New Store Planned...

Local Building Ahead Of 1981

Construction work in Snyder during May continued to run well ahead of figures for last year, the city building inspector's monthly report shows.

The city issued 30 permits for projects costing a total of $668,472 in May. This pushed the total for the year to $3,521,384, compared to $3,007,410 at the end of May last year.

Although residential work accounted for most of the activity, one major commercial contract came in toward the end of the month. It is for a new store located in the southeast part of town.

Wadleigh Construction Co. is the contractor for the new building which will house Crockett Warehouse Foods. It is located at the intersection of Crescent St. and U. S. Highway 84, just north of Mal Donelson Chevrolet. Owner of the firm is Margaret Crockett, former local manager for Montgomery Ward, who plans to operate a warehouse-type discount food store.

The $105,000 building will be 124 feet by 80 feet, of which 80 by 80 feet will be devoted to the store and the remainder will be used for storage. The new firm hopes to open for business in July. Work on the building's foundation is now underway.

Residential permits acounted for more than $400,000 of the month's total. These included 11 new single-family dwellings and seven mobile homes, a total of 18 new living units.

The overall building total for the city's fiscal year, which began last Oct. 1, has now reached $4,751,486, compared to $4,301,880 this time last year.

Brain Scan Is Allowed As Evidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in the trial of John W. Hinckley Jr. reversed himself today and ruled that jurors can hear testimony about sophisticated electronic studies of the presidential assailant's brain that purport to show evidence of severe schizophrenia.

Ask Us

Q.—I want to know why the sirens are not sounded until a tornado is already on the ground and it is too late to go out and seek shelter.

A.—The sirens are the last warning. It is assumed that people concerned about storms already know about general "watches" and "warnings" of tornadic conditions. They are advised to keep up with reports via radio and TV to make decisions on whether to go to a public shelter. The purpose of the sirens is to let people know that a tornado is actually on the ground in the immediate area, and Civil Defense officials have warned time after time that it is too late to go to another location when the sirens sound. Instead, people should seek the best protection available where they happen to be at the time.

School Board Studies Budget

Snyder School Trustees have scheduled a special meeting tonight to continue work on the 1982-83 school budget.

The meeting is set for 7:45 p. m. in the board room of the school administration building.

The budget study is the only item on the agenda for the session.

The SDN Column

Self-appointed experts are trying to fix the blame for the Falklands disturbance. If we were going to sum it up in one word it would be "politics."

Not a lot of land is involved, and historically there certainly has not been a lot of natural resources originating there. Rumors persist that valuable oil deposits await drilling in the Falklands, but nobody has been anxious to tap it, even during the energy crises of the past decade.

There are those (plenty of them) who are confident that Uncle Sam precipitated the conflict, although they are short on specifics as to how he accomplished it.

But it was no secret that political turmoil gripped Argentina when it suddenly invaded the Falklands with full knowledge that it was going to stir up a hornet's nest. And what better way to unify a country during a political upheaval than to start a war, especially if it is one in which you have a good chance of attracting "underdog" support. And it was an invasion, pure and simple.

We are reminded of "The Mouse That Roared," in which the tiny nation, or principality, attacked the world super power. The big one could not use its vast striking power to annihilate the little aggressor without bringing down the wrath of those who are willing to concede that weaklings can do no wrong.

The television people and metropolitan press need something to enliven their programs and front pages. We are treated to detailed accounts of battles for such strategic cities as Darwin (population 82).

Meanwhile, it appears to us that the British have been extremely patient during this conflict which they did not initiate, and it is about time for the lion to flick the fly off the tip of its nose. The waiting period for the United Nations to provide some insecticde has gone on long enough.

No matter how efficient home appliances become, there always is room for improvement. How about a washing machine and-or clothes dryer that won't eat socks?

We are convinced that the nation's economy would improve if people suddenly found the mates to all of the unmatched socks that went into washing machines and dryers in pairs, only to come out alone.

In Cambodia...

Try To Save Ancient Angkor Ruins

NEW YORK (AP) — In the jungle of northwestern Cambodia the ancient ruins of the awesome temple city of Angkor have sat abandoned and deteriorating since 1972, silent testimony to the plight of the nation they symbolize.

Since a French archaeological expert and his staff of 800 restorers were chased from the Southeast Asian country by war 10 years ago, the temples have fallen prey to the unchecked forces of nature — wind, rain, creeping jungle and corrosive dung from resident bats — and a series of continuing wars.

Now, the United Nations has launched an effort to resume restoration of Angkor, the capital of a dozen Khmer kings built between the 9th and 13th centuries. It hopes to do so by skirting Cambodia's complicated political situation with a proposal to neutralize the area where the ruins are located.

The chances of the proposal being approved by both the warring Vietnamese-backed government in Phonm Penh and the ousted communist Khmer Rouge appear, for now, to be as remote as the jungle that is slowly choking Angkor.

A 40-square-mile complex with 72 major monuments, it includes the world's largest — and one of its most beautiful — religious buildings, the temple of Angkor Wat.

Once the capital of the ancient Khmer empire, the brick and stone Angkor monuments are renowned not only for their breathtaking configuration and design, but for what they have told historians about the brilliance and power of that empire.

The effort to restore them was mounted jointly by the National Geographic Society — which sent a three-man team to Cambodia in October — and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

In an attempt to win international support for its proposal, UNESCO sponsored, and National Geographic produced, a picture and slide exhibit which was displayed in April at the United Nations.

Juxtaposing photographs taken by National Geographic editor Wilbur Garrett first in 1968 and again in October, the deterioration is evident. But Garrett expresses relief that most of the site is intact, and says it could be saved with proper action.

The current Vietnamese-installed government in Phnom Penh, capital of the country now called Kampuchea, has indicated it would welcome a restoration team.

But its leader, Heng Samrin, cannot formally invite UNESCO, because the United Nations does not recognize the government, and UNESCO can do nothing that would appear to indicate acceptance of the regime, according to UNESCO's New York director Doudou Diene.

The Khmer Rouge, who have been accused of killing an estimated 2 million Cambodians during their reign under Pol Pot from 1975 to 1979, are recognized by the United Nations, but do not control the country.

Installed in border areas of Kampuchea, they and a separate group of non-communist resisters continue to fight the Vietnamese.

Bound by its own rules, UNESCO hopes to get around the obstacles by having both sides agree to the neutral zone. The United Nations could then allow dispatch of a UNESCO-sponsored restoration team.

"We agree with the idea of a neutralized zone," but only on condition that Vietnamese troups withdraw from the country first, Thiounn Prasith, the U.N. ambassador of Democratic Kampuchea, said in a recent interview.

Equating Angkor with the "national heritage of Kampuchea," Prasith accuses the Vietnamese of using the restoration issue to gain credibility for its regime.

He says Angkor will have to wait "until (there is) a political solution."

"We're frustrated by the system," said Joseph Mehan, a spokesman for UNESCO's New York office. The Geneva-based organization has been sponsoring Angkor's restoration since 1967.

The April photo exhibit in the General Assembly building was the subject of "a very delicate bit of negotiating" by UNESCO leaders, Mehan said.

Members of the Kampuchean mission agreed to the exhibit only after they excised all photos that showed Vietnamese soldiers who currently control the region of Angkor.

Nixon Says...

Reagan Defeats Kennedy In '84

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Nixon says Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is a practical man who will "do what is necessary" to seek the presidency in 1984, whether it be losing weight or changing his ideas.

In any event, the Massachusetts Democrat will lose to President Reagan, who will decide to seek a second term, Nixon said in an interview on the CBS Evening News broadcast Monday night. Further excerpts were scheduled to be aired on the CBS Morning News this week.

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale doesn't even have a chance of winning the Democratic nomination, Nixon says. "No way. He's just a warmed-over Carter."

Nixon predicted the Democrats will nominate Kennedy for president in 1984, but said Reagan would win the contest.

"Kennedy will win the Democratic nomination because it's four years past Chappaquiddick, four years more for that in the background," Nixon said. He was referring to the 1969 accident in which Mary Jo Kopechne, 28, drowned after Kennedy's car crashed into the water at Chappaquiddick, an island adjacent to Martha's Vineyard off the Massachusetts coast.

Before running, Kennedy has "got to lose 20 pounds," Nixon said. "He also has got to enter the 80s, rather than the 60s. He's got to get some new ideas. But he is a very practical fellow, and he will get some new ideas. He'll do what is necessary."

But Nixon said Reagan will seek and win re-election.

"He's going to be able say, 'I promised that I was going to cut taxes,' and he has," Nixon said. "He will have cut taxes, he will have cut inflation, he will have cut government spending and he will have cut unemployment, in my view, by that time and will have strengthened the United States so that we have a better base from which to build a world of peace in the future."

Chimp's Behavior Is Scientific Breakthrough

CONROE, Texas (AP) — The first domesticated chimpanzee to give birth is responding to her second baby with "totally maternal behavior" with the help of a Southeast Texas homemaker, researchers say.

Tanya was one of 29 female chimpanzees taken at birth and placed in the care of surrogate mothers to allow researchers to understand the behavior of early man. She is the only one of the 29 still alive today.

The 10-year-old chimp first gave birth to Uriah in March 1981, and researchers at the University of Oklahoma's Institute for Primate Studies hoped to learn how much of Tanya's maternal ability was learned and how much was instinct.

Normally, chimpanzees hold their offspring almost constantly to keep them warm, but Tayna showed no interest in her son.

Researchers, fearing he would catch pneumonia and die, asked June Cook, Tanya's surrogate mother, to raise Uriah.

After giving birth to Leah, a three-pound female, on May 11, Tanya showed similar signs of neglect. So Mrs. Cook decided to teach Tanya how to care for her baby.

"I got a little frightened. But she didn't walk off and leave the baby like she did with Uriah. She kept the baby in her arms all the time. Tanya was examining it and everything, but she didn't know what to do," said Mrs. Cook, a 58-year-old mother of seven children.

"I thought, 'I'm going to go in Tanya's cage and help her.' I didn't know if Tanya would let me or not," Mrs. Cook said. "I put the baby up to Tanya's breast and the baby started nursing immediately. I did that the rest of the day for about three times."

The next morning, Tanya was cradling Leah in her arms and breastfeeding the baby.

"For the fist time, a species isolated chimpanzee is exhibiting totally maternal behavior," William Lemmon, the institute's director.

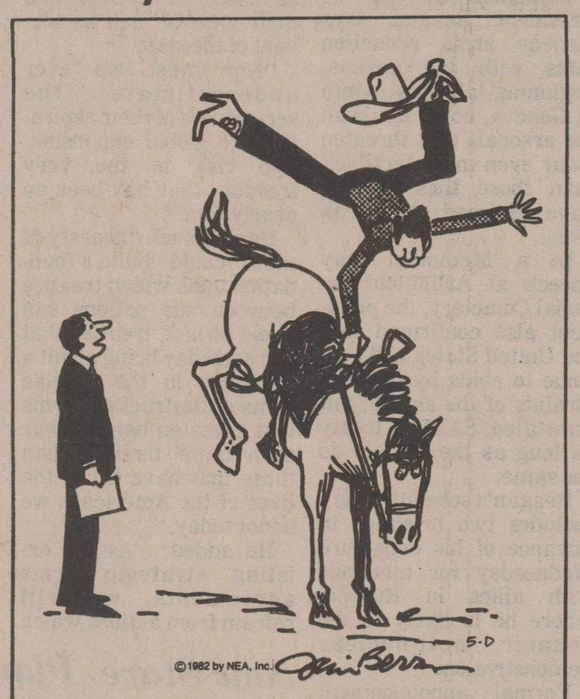

This is a "minor miracle" because the odds were against such conduct. "It indicates that even if the mother does not show appropriate maternal behavior at first, if she has a positive drive she can simply be instructed what to do," said Mel Allen, a psychologist and former research director at the institute.

Maternal behavior of chimpanzees is composed of drive and behavior, Allen said.

Drive, which is acquired during infancy, reflects how the chimp was regarded by its mother. Behavior — acquired from play, observation, trial and error or instruction — comprises activities performed on the infant by the mother chimp.

"Tanya's unique situation shows that drive and behavior are separate," Allen said. "If there is positive drive, an appropriate maternal behavior can be learned."

"Ol' 'Budget' seems frisky today!"

at wits end

by erma bombeck

While standing in the checkout line last week, I noted that everything in my basket had a stalk of wheat on the package and was stamped "100 percent natural."

Every box, every can, every package contained a disclaimer: NO SALT! SUGAR-FREE! LOW FAT! NO ADDITIVES! LITE! POSITIVELY NO PRESERVATIVES! NO SUBSTITUTES!

Never have I been so paranoid about what goes into my body. Was it only eight or ten years ago when we used to kid around about the late Euell Gibbons coming for lunch and grazing on the front lawn? Now I don't care what cereal tastes like just as long as it has a log cabin with smoke coming out of the chimney on the package and the words, "CONTAIN NATURAL FIBER." It makes me feel virtuous even though I haven't the slightest idea what natural fiber is.

Something very weird has happened to my buying habits. When the kids were growing up I threatened to buy a trough with an entry starting at the stove. It would snake around the kitchen table and return at the kitchen sink. It was my plan to pour the spaghetti, baked beans and chili from the stove to the table and what they didn't eat, hose into the sink. They were meals of convenience. I never squeezed a tomato, looked for brown spots on bananas or put a cantaloupe to my ear to see what month of development it was in.

I bought anything that was stamped 100 percent sugar, vitamin enriched, made with pure cream, real butter, no skimping, artificial coloring added. It was the American dream to eat natural foods that had been improved upon.

Then everyone got on a health kick and word began to trickle down that all the research rats were living longer eating natural. (Or it seemed longer.) The first time I discovered apples didn't grow in cans swimming in heavy syrup was a big day in my life.

The kids don't want to come home anymore. They complain there's nothing to eat.

I told them, "Of course there are things to eat. It's all just natural."

They said, "You call blue milk, ice cream without sugar, peanuts without salt and bread so thin you can read a newspaper through it natural?"

Maybe it's just the shock of seeing all of them in that trough side by side.

Foreign Cars Invade Detroit For Auto Race

DETROIT (AP) — Foreign cars, object of much scorn in this capital of the reeling American auto industry, invade Detroit this week for what is being billed as the first Grand Prix auto race among skyscrapers.

The invaders are not the latest high-mileage offerings from Japan but about 30 high-performance automobiles which will compete June 6 in an event that officials hope will bring glamour and dollars to a city where one in five of its 1.2 million citizens is unemployed.

The idea for a Grand Prix was started two years ago by the directors of Detroit Renaissance Inc., a local non-profit business group. With some help from retired auto magnate Henry Ford II, whose cars experienced great success in international racing in the 1960s, the idea was sold to Grand Prix officials in London and Paris.

The group put up about $3.5 million to support the race and need about 65,000 fans, who will be paying between $15 and $75 a ticket, to break even.

The Detroit City Council spent $800,000 to repave the streets that comprise the 2.5-mile race course in the downtown area.

The construction caused traffic snarls and grumbling from motorists who had to dodge hundreds of unrepaired potholes elsewhere around the city. City council members, who were caught in the traffic jams, angrily summoned race organizers to explain. Some critics labeled the race the Grand Mistake.

"God knows times are tough," Mayor Coleman A. Young said in turning aside complaints. "But, it doesn't hurt us to have a little fun once in a while, too. The Grand Prix comes at a time when Detroit can use an emotional lift."

Grand Prix racing, with its roots in Europe, already is an established success in two other American cities — Long Beach, Calif. and Las Vegas. In all, 15 races are scheduled this year in such places as Monaco, France and Belgium.

If the Detroit Grand Prix does attract 65,000 fans, and if they spend about $4 million in restaurants, hotels and shops during their stay downtown, the city would realize $200,000 in sales tax alone, according to Robert E. McCabe, president of Detroit Renaissance.

"The message we wanted to get out through the Grand Prix is already getting out, every single day, in a variety of little ways," McCabe said. "I saw where a reporter asked a carpenter, putting up bleachers near Cobo Hall, how he liked the Grand Prix coming to town. The carpenter said, 'I like it fine. This is the first work I've had in 18 months.'"

It will cost $15 just to stand and watch the June 6 race. A reserved seat costs $35. A better seat is $65. A seat for the race and qualifying trials June 4-5 goes for $75.

"It's a major sporting event," says Jackie Stewart, a three-time World Driving Champion and winner of 27 Grand Prix races. "You have to pay for the premier prestige event of the calendar year."

Advance ticket sales are "right on target," says Paul Klapproth, a spokesman for the race, but had no specific figures.

Detroit Renaissance is asking owners of buildings which ring the course to close Saturday and Sunday so no one can watch the event for free. People who need to work at their regular jobs within the course area will be given special passes, officials said. To ensure that restaurants and bars cash in, race fans won't be allowed to bring food- and drink-filled coolers with them.

The course itself has the city's Renaissance Center as its centerpiece, with the Formula One racing cars streaking along the Detroit River, navigating about 16 turns, including two hairpins, through the downtown area, and averaging 100 mph. Top speeds are expected to reach about 150 mph.

Rules call for the race to conclude at 175 miles or after two hours, whichever comes first. The total amount of prize money is not made public.

"You're going to hear motor and sound like you've never heard before, open exhaust pipes with canyons of buildings bouncing off," says Stewart, who will be pro ABC.

The race will be televised in 40 countries and sponsors estimate a portion of it will be seen by about 100 million viewers.

Police Probe Major Mishap

Snyder police investigated a major traffic mishap at the intersection of 35th St and Austin Place around 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Involved in the collision were a 1981 Mercury driven by Ben Brock of 2907 Denison and a 1978 Ford driven by Billy Ray Cox of Rt. 3, Snyder. Cox was taken to the emergency room at Cogdell Memorial Hospital by units of Scurry County EMS. He was treated for minor injuries sustained in the accident and released.

Extensive damages were reported to both the Brock and Cox vehicles.

Local police are also investigating the theft of three purses from the Scurry County Senior Citizen's Center. According to reports, someone took the purses, belonging to Verdi Kimbro, Margaret Stubblefield and Vera Foree, sometime between 10 and 10:10 p.m. Monday.

Police also logged two minor traffic mishaps Monday.

The first minor accident occurred in the 3400 block of Avenue L around 11:02 a.m. A 1971 GMC pickup driven by Bennie Hellums of 1000 33rd St. is reported to have struck a utility pole owned by the Texas Electric Service Company.

Moderate damages were reported to the Hellums vehicle while damages to the pole were listed as minor.

The intersection of College Ave. and Huffman Avenue was the scene of Monday's second minor mishap around 5:30 p.m. Involved in the accident were a 1974 Dodge driven by John Michael Stephens of Rt. 3, Snyder and a 1976 Buick driven by Wesley Carl Ball, also of Snyder.

Moderate to extensive damages were reported to both the Ball and Stephens vehicles but both drivers escaped injury in the accident.

Arab States Offer Funds To Iranians

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Arab states on the Persian Gulf have offered Iran $25 billion to halt its war with Iraq, diplomatic sources say.

The Arab nations apparently are afraid that victorious Iranian armies will invade Iraq to oust President Saddam Hussein, the sources said Monday. The offer for war reparations from the oil-rich nations came as Iranian and Iraqi gunners shelled civilian areas in each other's territory for the third straight day.

Gulf nations have given Iraq millions of dollars in aid to win the war because they fear an Iranian victory will spread Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Moslem revolution to their lands.

In Jerusalem, Prime Menachem Begin's office said today that Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan was expected Wednesday with a letter from Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. Israeli newspapers said the message was expected to deal with the Iran-Iraq war.

Requests Aid

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang, on the second day of an official state visit, asked Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki today for more Japanese financial assistance and participation in Chinese offshore oil exploration. Suzuki said he would give the request "positive consideration."

Zhao said China needs Japanese cooperation in agriculture, transportation, plant modernization, technology and development of tourism.

Pope Meets Protestants

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — Pope John Paul II made an impassioned plea to Scottish Protestant leaders today for reconciliation of the Christian faiths, a day after he faced the noisiest, most hostile demonstration against his British tour.

Later, on the next to last day of the first papal visit to Britain, he was to travel to Glasgow, Scotland's largest city 38 miles west of Edinburgh, where many of the 815,000 Scottish Catholics were expected to attend an open-air Mass in Bellahouston Park.

Glasgow's police were set for hostile Protestant demonstrations and retaliatory Catholic attacks. Police said they were investigating an overnight fire at a rail station less than a mile from the park. Anti-papal slogans were found painted on the station walls. There were no injuries.

In a separate incident, four children returning from a youth rally for the pope in nearby Murrayfield received minor injuries from broken glass Monday when their bus was stoned in Glasgow, police said.

In Edinburgh, the pope rose early to meet with the Rt. Rev. John McIntyre, the Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, and other Protestant leaders at the residence of Cardinal Gordon Gray, the Catholic archbishop of Edinburgh.

John Paul lauded recent Scottish efforts to resolve interfaith differences, adding, "In following this road, we have still to overcome many obstacles occasioned by the sad history of past enmities. We have to resolve important doctrinal issues.

"Yet already, mutual love, our will for unity, can be a sign of hope to a divided world — not least in these days in which peace is so sorely imperiled."

After the morning meeting, McIntyre said John Paul must be given personal credit for the ecumenical progress being made.

"Without him, I don't think the new openness in the ecumenical movement would have occurred," he said.

Protestant extremists have failed to mar the papal tour, but the Rev. Ian Paisley, the bitterly anti-Catholic leader of Northern Ireland's militant Protestants, continued to turn out demonstrators at the pope's stops.

Paisley and some 200 supporters threw eggs, coins and crumpled bits of papal posters and shouted abusive slogans when John Paul arrived Monday evening for a meeting in Edinburgh.

Mason Automotive Features Rebuilt Aaron Transmissions

Save money on those transmission repairs. Mason's Automotive features rebuilt Aaron transmissions for General Motors cars. They have a transmission in stock to fit most any GM car and if they do not have one to fit your car they can order any kind you might need.

Now that summer is here, "vacation" is on everyone's mind. The best place to start planning a vacation is Mason's Automotive. Mason's can get your car in tip-top shape for those hot miles ahead.

For the best air conditioning service in town go by and let Mason take a look and see what your car needs to keep you cool on your trip or just for town driving. They'll assure you of a cool, comfortable vacation, wherever you go.

You'll feel better about going out of town knowing you've made sure of your automobile maintenance before hand. Let Mason's Automotive tune up your car so you'll know that some "unknown" won't be working on your car in a strange town.

Wadleigh Co. Specializes In Energy Efficient Residences

The above home was constructed through the direction of Tom Wadleigh and is designed to be an energy efficient, durable, low maintenance residence.

Metal homes have been constructed on many occasions in the past and their popularity is destined to increase rapidly due to the lack of quality and quantity of lumber. Homes constructed of metal buildings can save the owners thousands of dollars on maintenance and insurance costs throughout their life. Besides being cost effective and competive with conventional construction, metal homes are so fire resistent that there is little danger of them burning while unoccupied, making them ideal not only for homes, but for cabins, summerhomes, or shelters for periodic residency.

In view of the size of the recent hail stones, a metal house does not succomb to the traditional damage found in conventional roofs. Also, contrary to popular belief, a metal roof does not create additional noise during adverse weather.

BUILDING NEEDS? Wadleigh Construction will be glad to help you with your commercial, residential, or any in-between building needs. The above building is one of Tom Wadleigh's latest projects.

A metal home can be as elaborate or as simple as the owner wishes. The metal structure can be quickly dried in from the weather and, at that point, if an owner wishes to take over the finish work, he can, though Wadleigh Construction prefers to be in on projects from the planning stages to completion. Turn-Key construction has been a standard of Wadleigh Construction for years.

Wadleigh Construction, Inc., located at College Avenue and Hwy. 84 in Snyder has 27 years experience in the metal building industry with capable, qualified personnel to man and quickly complete building projects. The home office is in Snyder with a branch office in Odessa. Current local projects include Texas Electric, Contiental Emsco, Centrilift Hughs, Sweetwater Production Credit Union, and Patterson Drilling. It's far ranged building projects have been in Lamesa, McCamey, Marfa, Fairfield, Midland, Odessa and Goldwaithe.

Insurance Rates To Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Insurance Administration has announced that average rates for some types of federally sponsored flood insurance will increase 35 percent to 50 percent on Tuesday.

FIA administrator Jeffrey S. Bragg said the increases are needed "to make the programs more actuarially sound and to lessen the burden now being carried by taxpayers."

It Is No Longer Easy To Classify Furniture

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Once upon a time, there was living room furniture, bedroom furniture and dining-room furniture. Everybody knew which was which and there was no confusion about what went where.

Oh, perhaps there were also desks and bookcases to go in the library or "den" as some called it, and some comfortable pieces for the porch. But anything too outre which couldn't be quickly classified was probably something you didn't need anyway.

Try walking into a furniture store today and dividing up the merchandise by the old classifications. You'll soon give up the task as a hopeless case. Where would you place the etageres? The bars? The armoires that can be used for clothing storage or home-entertainment components? What about the sleep sofa that flips into a kingsize bed.

Life at home is both simpler and more complicated then it used to be. For many — perhaps a majority soon — the old idea of a single-family home in the suburbs is an irrelevant solution to a problem they don't think they have.

The new American consumer is a career girl in Dallas; a childless couple in Seattle; a bachelor in his first "pad" in New York; a houseful of roommates who work in the same office in Los Angeles, or a couple of seniors in an adult community in New Jersey.

These home furnishings consumers are represented in many attributes and attitudes. But one thing about most of them is that their lives are nontraditional. They may share the same holidays and associations as the rest of the country. But when they go shopping for home furnishings, they are a different breed. These new consumers with different needs are giving rise to new categories of furniture, according to some retailers and manufacturers.

If a single descriptive word could be chosen to characterize the new market, that word would probably be informal. The concept contains the idea of rooms that are used interchangeably for all the activities of living, of furniture that is in no particular style, but instead is geared to function as seating or storage or surface in any room where the need for the function exists.

The new informal furniture is unlikely to be authentic anything. Instead, it may "borrow" design elements from one or more cultural traditions.

Some companies have switched their product lines to cater to the new consumers. Other firms have been set up just to cater to them. The furniture they are producing to meet the new needs includes multi-use storage pieces such as armoires and wall systems, combination game and dining tables, chairs on casters for easy mobility, sofas that convert to beds and rolling carts for a variety of uses, including meal serving wherever convenient.

An example of a company formed to cater to the market is Stavoak. The 2½-year-old firm is a subsidiary of Jack Daniels Distilleries.

Say Women Victims Of Pension Law Inequities

WASHINGTON (AP) — A great many American women are being forced to live their later years in poverty because of the inequities in the nation's pension laws and corporate pension policies, the nation's largest organization of working women asserts.

"The feminization of poverty among older women is about to become an American trademark," says Phyllis Harrison, president of the 165,000-member National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs (BPW). "Currently two out of every three older Americans living in poverty are women, and the inequities in our pension laws and programs are a major factor behind this travesty."

In an attempt to reverse the situation, BPW members around the country are now working for the passage of legislation to eliminate discrimination against women in pension coverage.

"Pension discrimination against American women is rampant, affecting not only the working woman, but also the homemaker," Ms. Harrison declares.

One of the worst problems, she points out, is that federal law does not require pension coverage for individuals under the age of 25.

"The greatest percentage of women in the American work force are between the ages of 20 and 24," says Ms. Harrison. "When you realize that most of these women are not covered by pension plans, and add to that the fact that women in their mid-to late-20s often quit work to have children, you realize the magnitude of American women who are unable to gain pension credits."

On a broader scale, women are clustered in jobs where no pension plans are provided, she notes, citing recent data which shows that while women constitute 43 percent of the U.S. labor force, only 31 percent of all women workers were covered by a pension plan.

Many of these covered workers will never actually receive any retirement benefits. In 1972, only 21 percent of retiring women workers received pension benefits compared to 47 percent for men.

Because of the efforts of women's groups such as BPW, Ms. Harrison says, working women are becoming more aware of the inequities they face in gaining adequate pension coverage.

"Unfortunately," she adds, "the same is not true for the non-working homemaker. Too often these women incorrectly assume that their husbands' pension programs will provide them with adequate income during retirment."

American women must begin to question corporations more thoroughly on their pension plans, advises Ms. Harrison. "Many homemakers are shocked to discover that their husband's pension payments are reduced significantly or eliminated upon his death. And too, many pension programs state that if a person dies before retirement, the accrued pension benefits are forfeited, leaving the widow high and dry."

To eliminate some of these inequities, the BPW is calling for a lowering of the number of years required for full vesting, for liberalizing the current "breaks-in-service" rules, for lowering age-participation requirements, and for instituting career portability of pension credit.

Aquarobics Class Slated For Women

A new aquarobics class for women has been added to the summer schedule at Western Texas College.

The class is to meet from 6 p. m. to 7:15 p. m. on Mondays, Wednesdays with Patricia McKinney as instructor. Fees are $41 per person.

There are also openings for additional students in an aquarobics class meeting from 1:30 p. m. to 2:30 p. m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The Tuesday-Thursday night class has reached capacity enrollment.

Registration for summer classes at WTC will continue through Thursday. Physical education classes being offered in addition to aquarobices are racquetball, aerobic exercise for men and women, judo and aikido.

Women Veterans Are Increasing

The number of female veterans had climbed to 742,000 by last Sept. 30, an increase of 26 percent during the last five years, according to the Veterans Administration.

Women now total 2.5 percent of all living veterans.

A total of 9,766 women veterans had trained in Texas intitutions of higher learning or other residence schools by Sept. 30, 1978, E. H. (Dan) Dever Jr., Scurry County Veterans Service Officer, said. This is the latest figure available. Nearly 62 percent of these female veterans were full-time students.

The ratio of male veterans to female veterans stood at just over 50 to 1 during the first half of the 70s, but it dropped to 39.5 to 1 by the end of last September. At that time, the median age for female veterans was 46.2 years, compared to 50.3 years for male veterans.

The VA will be giving special consideration to the problems of female veterans with the administration of various types of veterans' programs as the number of female veterans increases, Dever said.

Veterans who need information about benefits or educational programs are invited to contact Dever's office in the Western Texas College Adminitration Building.

When a boxer is knocked out by an uppercut he usually lands flat on his face and is unlikely to know what has happened to him for some time. In bridge the uppercut is equally as effective, but the unfortunate victim knows what has happened to him as soon as the blow has been delivered.

East took his diamond ace at trick one and led back the nine. West ruffed with the six. Since he had read the nine as a suit preference signal, West returned a spade. East was in with the ace and had three tricks in.

Now he made a key play and led back a low diamond. He wanted to make sure that his partner did stick in the eight to force dummy to overruff with the jack.

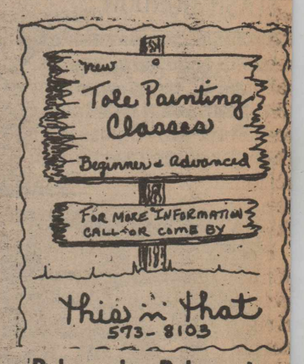

The uppercut had now done its deadly work. East's five of spades had become the setting trick. The king covered the queen and the nine forced the 10, to leave that five the master trump.

Four spades would probably have made, but could be beaten if East opened his singleton club and grabbed the first spade trick to give West a diamond ruff and get in a club ruff of his own.

The only unbeatable contract would be three no-trump with declarer getting five hearts, one diamond and three clubs.

Flat-Chested Woman Is Tops in Man's Eyes

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Depressed," who was miserable because she was flat-chested: The woman I love has no more on top than I have, but she's the sexiest girl I have ever known.

A woman's breasts have nothing to do with her sexiness. Would she consider her husband inadequate and unappealing just because he wasn't built like Arnold Schwarzenegger?

I've talked to other men, and you'd be amazed at the number of men who find smaller-breasted women more attractive.

FLATTIES PREFERRED

DEAR FLATTIES: Stay tuned for a letter from a woman who had too much of a good thing:

DEAR ABBY: I hope I've read my last letter from flat-chested women who envy their full-bosomed sisters. Believe me, there's nothing spectacular about having big breasts. I know. The last time I bought separates, the skirt was a size 12 and the blouse was size 18!

In high school I can remember being told to quit "showing off" when I stretched. I started to wear loose-fitting tops to hide my size but gave up because everybody thought I was pregnant.

I suppose I could have breast reduction surgery, but I have finally learned to accept myself as I am. I've discovered that the people who are worth knowing don't judge a woman by the size of her bra.

LIVING WITH IT

DEAR ABBY: Recently at a small wedding ceremony, I exchanged rings and vows with the man I love. We plan to spend the rest of our lives together.

I have been to all my relatives' weddings and have always brought gifts and/or done the flowers. Would it be flaunting my homosexuality if I sent wedding announcements to my 50 relatives? Not all of them know that I am gay.

BURSTING WITH HAPPINESS

DEAR BURSTING: Send wedding announcements only to those relatives who know you are gay. Those who don't know obviously don't know you well enough to care whether you are "married" or not.

DEAR ABBY: Everywhere I go I'm laughed at because I have two different-colored eyes. One is blue and the other one is brownish-green. It's not terribly noticeable from a distance, but when people get up close to me they notice it and think it's weird.

A friend of mine said she once saw a cat with two different-colored eyes, but never a person. Well, I've never seen another person with this problem.

Please don't tell me I ought to be glad that I have two eyes and can see. I am glad, but I'm only 13 and I hate to think of going through the rest of my life being a freak. Can anything be done to change the color of one of my eyes?

FEELS LIKE A FREAK

DEAR FEELS: Eye doctors who fit patients with contact lenses can prescribe lenses for you that will give your eyes the appearance of having the same color — or close to it. They are not inexpensive, so if your parents can't afford it now, perhaps you can earn and save money and get contacts yourself when you are older.

In the meantime, it's not as weird as you think. In your grandparents' time there was a beautiful Irish movie star named Colleen Moore who had two different-colored eyes, and everything turned out rosy for her!

Minister Says Cancer Cured

HOUSTON (AP) — The pastor of the world's largest Methodist church says he is "100 percent cured" of cancer and has no plans to retire early from the post he has held for 21 years.

The Rev. Charles Allen, 69, assured the 12,600-member First United Methodist Church here Sunday that he is cured of the disease and released a pamphlet of sermons he will preach during the next year.

The United Methodist Church has set mandatory retirement at age 70.

"I have never looked forward to any year in my life like I look forward to the one begiinning next Sunday. I feel that this year, from June 1 to May 31, 1983, is going to be the best year I have lived," he said.

Allen learned during an April 12 examination he had cancer of the lower intestine and underwent surgery at Methodist Hospital. Doctors said he is cured and will not need additional treatment, Allen said.

The average person takes about 18,000 steps a day. Most people walk more than 65,000 miles during their lifetime.

In Defeat...

Junta Preparing For Victory

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina's military rulers are preparing their people for defeat in the Falkland Islands. But they insist any setback will be temporary, that Argentina has done itself proud in the fight with Britain and that it will eventually own the archipelago.

President Leopoldo Galtieri set the new line in an Army Day speech Saturday after British paratroops had overrun key Argentine positions.

"May god grant that, beyond the fortunes of the unequal battle against the extra-continental aggressor and those who support her, that the torch we have lighted to illuminate the awakening of our America not be extinguished," he said.

One of the president's top advisers, who asked that his name not be used, spelled out the government position to The Associated Press.

"We have already won," he said. "We could not have been expected to defeat militarily the third and first most powerful nations in the world.

"When we lose, you will hear Galtieri, who is now a Latin American hero, say, 'Our islands have been occupied by means of vastly superior military force. I negotiate nothing nor do I cede any of our legitimate demands. I believe in the retaliatory power of my people, and we will again recover the islands.'"

Argentines who for weeks have been served a heavy dose of encouraging news — "Victory" headlines and "We're winning!" magazine covers — are beginning to read worst-case scenarios.

The Buenos Aires newspaper Conviccion said Monday: "The adult Argentina should get ready to assimilate, with virile sadness but not with desperation and much less with shame, the possibility that Great Britain, with the aid of the United States, temporarily re-establishes by force a colonial usurpation."

The paper, which has close ties to the navy, pointed out positive effects of the conflict: "With just what we've done up till now, leaving aside the surprises we've yet to give, we have acquired a dignified and gravitating presence in international society."

It added that Argentina has also learned the hard way who its friends are and that the world is run according to vested interests and force.

"We see now we can only depend on ourselves," said Demetria Garcia, a grocery store worker. "We don't need North America and Europe, and we are going to start concentrating on building up the nation from within."

"People have matured with this," said office messenger Omar Moreno. "The national unity is incredible. I don't know a single person who is not doing something to contribute to the war effort."

Moreno, father of two, said he and other volunteers spent the weekend crating C-rations for the troops.

"We're fighting for something much greater than our islands," says the latest radio spot in the government's Argentines to Victory propaganda campaign.

The announcer, backed by a slow crescendo from strings and horns, doesn't say what that something is but asserts, "And we are 28 million soldiers ready to defend it."

Fighting Is Less Visible, But War In El Salvador Continues

USULUTAN, El Salvador (AP) — Two months after guerrillas failed in their election-day offensive, the Salvadoran civil war has moved away from the cities and become less visible.

Though it is reported less frequently, the bloodshed persists in the 31-month-old battle.

The 26,000-man armed forces, bolstered by 1,500 soldiers just back from training in the United States, are trying new counterinsurgency tactics in attempts to destroy the rural hideouts of 4,000 to 6,000 leftist guerrillas while encouraging defections from their ranks.

Since the March 28 assembly elections, the conflict has centered on remote volcano slopes and the Pacific coastal lowland of this Central American country of five million people.

Gone are the white flags of neutrality that flew from homes here during a six-day guerrilla occupation that halted polling.

Gone, too, are the wrecks of buses and trucks that were sacked and burned at the time by rebels approaching Usulutan on the important Coastal Highway.

Today the city and the road seem safe.

"It's been very calm, too calm," said an Usulutan hotel owner. "There's something funny going on. I'm afraid of what's coming."

Anyone who thinks the guerrilla retreat is permanent soon learns otherwise.

"The war is just about over," a truck driver asserted as he waited last week to cross the Coastal Highway bridge over the Lempa River into Usulutan province.

Minutes later, on the other side, he watched soldiers carry the bodies of five national guardsmen to the highway from a muddy cornfield after a battle with 100 or more insurgents who had dynamited a freight train.

All but a few of the 300,000 peasant refugees crowded into cities and towns across the country are ignoring government appeals to return home for spring planting.

One cautious 25-year-old farmer has decided to stay in a refugee camp at Puerto Parada, just south of here, six days a week. On the seventh day, he travels 12 miles by boat to work his corn and rice plots on a volcanic bluff near El Espino, an ocean resort that has changed hands several times in recent fighting.

In the northeast province of Morazan, thousands of new refugees are wading south across the rising Torola River before they are isolated by the spring rains. Red Cross workers said those peasants feared that guerrillas who blew up the only bridge would keep the army from repairing it.

The army chose Morazan for its only batallion-sized offensive since the election. In 10 days of fighting that ended May 3, the army claimed to have killed 122 guerrillas and destroyed 13 mountain hideouts while losing 22 soldiers. Residents who saw two truckloads of dead soldiers said government losses were much higher.

The announced aim of the operation was to head off an expected rebel attack on the provincial capital, but most rebel units escaped the dragnet.

At the urging of U.S. strategists, the army is waging most of its search-and-destroy missions with smaller, platoon-sized units. The new, more aggressive tactic has apparently exposed its troops to greater risk.

In April, the government reported 202 of its troops killed compared with 143 in March when the guerrillas attacked major cities. The figure for January was 148.

The rebel Radio Venceremos reported 18 battles in April, down from 81 in March. Guerrilla casualties reported by the radio and the Army fell from 269 in March to 73 in April.

To military analysts, the numbers mean the battles are getting nastier as each side obtains more sophisticated weapons. Late in April, guerrillas captured several 90mm and 150mm cannons, an armored personnel carrier and eight M79 grenade launchers from the army, according to Salvadoran newspapers and the rebel radio

The country's new president, Alvaro Magana, and its senior Roman Catholic leader, Monsignor Arturo Rivera y Damas, have publicly suggested a "dialogue" with insurgent leaders.

But the defense minister, Gen. Jose Guillermo Garcia, considered the most powerful government figure, favors a military solution.

The U.S.-trained soldiers and officers will help the army expand the number of small counterinsurgency units and coordinate them with night reconnnaisance planes to be provided by the United States under this year's $81 million military aid package.

The army is also instructing troops to take prisoners in rebel hideouts and to encourage them to desert in exchange for freedom.

A sophisticated advertising campaign tells guerrillas, "The people you say you are fighting for rejected you." It is a reference to the large voter turnout March 28 interpreted as a call for peace.

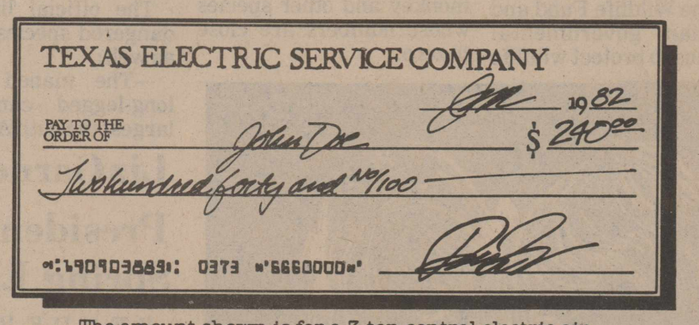

The guerrillas have continued to flex their muscles with sporadic attacks, but the rebel radio has made no mention of any large offensive or the failure of the announced May offensive to materialize. Instead, it said on May 18 that "a period of grassroots labor organizing would be the most effective and revolutionary reply" to the new rightist-dominated government.

Save energy
with high-efficiency a/c and get a bonus
from Texas Electric

The amount shown is for a 3-ton central electric air conditioner with an SEER of 8.5.

If you replace your central electric air conditioner with one that's more efficient, Texas Electric will pay you a bonus of $80 per ton.

Not only that, you'll save on your electric bill as well. For example, a high-efficiency 3-ton unit will save you about $160 a year.

This equipment costs more initially, but the bonus from Texas Electric plus the savings on your electric bill will make up the difference in just a few years.

If enough people buy high-efficiency equipment, summer peak load growth will be slowed — and so will the need to build new generating plants. In the long run, this will help hold down everyone's electric bill.

Before you replace your old air conditioner, ask your dealer about central air conditioners, heat pumps, and window units that qualify for this program.

Ancient Swiss Dialects Are Still Surviving

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — To Franz Kafka, the often guttural idiom seemed "filled up with lead." To Swiss playwrights-novelists Friedrich Durrenmatt and Max Frisch, it is a language which they speak but do not write.

A dictionary started a century ago has grown to 14 volumes and more than 100,000 entries, with only an off-chance that it might be completed before the year 2000.

The entries are in Swiss German or "Schwyzerduutsch," which is only one way to spell the collective label for the scores of dialects in Switzerland where German, or rather Swiss-German, speakers make up three-fourths of the population.

They developed in the Middle Ages and are still closer to the medieval idioms than the "High German" spoken in neighboring West Germany. They can differ from valley to valley, from town to town, in a unique linguistic fragmentation.

Most are incomprehensible to West German visitors and some dialects of remote regions in the Valais pose problems even to many Swiss.

And they have brilliantly survived against the challenge of High German's domination in the media, films, theater, church sermons and the multilingual federal parliament — because French and Italian speaking members normally would not understand the German dialects.

Most Swiss Germans readily admit they feel ill at ease in speaking what they call "written German." Some even prefer switching to French in talking to West Germans. Max Frisch says "written German" is a "semi-foreign language" but adds that he is happy about this discrepancy because it helps him in his writing.

George Mikes, the Hungarian-born British author of the best-selling "How To Be an Alien," was among the first to point to another advantage:

"It may not be beautiful as a language but it is brilliant as a conspiracy," he noted in his "Switzerland for Beginners." "It is a splendidly secret language."

Recently, Swiss newspapers triumphantly published new evidence backing up this attribute. Evgeny Chernevski, an engineer of the Moscow Institute of Sciences who is described as "linguistic world champion," reported his encounter with what seemed to him first an "Asian or African language unknown to me."

Chernevski, who claims fluency in 32 languages, including High German, told an interviewer of the newspaper "Sovietskaya Rossiya" that the "strangely articulated language" was used by "two white men" whom he met in an Irkutsk restaurant. "I asked them in English what language they were speaking and they told me they were businessmen from Switzerland."

"German was the first foreign language I learned," said Chernevski, who claims he can simultaneously translate eight. "Each additional language becomes easier to learn because there are so many similar words. But Swiss German is an exception."

Economy-minded Swiss diplomats are known to prefer the dialect to costly anti-bugging equipment. Insiders say deciphering tapes is assumed to be virtually impossible for foreign intelligence services.

Swiss newspapers said use of the dialect was also a popular weapon in sales talks, especially with state-controlled East European import agencies.

The representative of a Swiss machinery concern said that in countering last-minute efforts to bring the price down, "Schwyzerduutsch allows us to discuss our reaction even in the presence of German-speakers although some may consider this impolite."

Writing Compulsion For Man

COLLEGEVILLE, Minn. (AP) — One September day in 1970, Jon Hassler and a fellow teacher at Brainerd Community College made a bet.

They would each write a short story every two weeks. If one of them didn't write a story he would pay the other one 50 cents.

After eight weeks Hassler's friend dropped out, but Hassler continued through to the spring, writing 14 stories.

Hassler has since written five novels. His latest book, "The Love Hunter," has been optioned by Robert Redford's film production company.

"Half my life was gone, and I thought if I was ever going to write I'd better get started," Hassler said in recalling the friendly bet.

"It is a wonder to me how far I've come," said Hassler, the son of a grocer, born in Minneapolis and reared in Staples and Plainview.

"I was so completely occupied with a wife and three kids and a house and a job that I was never sure I would be a writer. I never had any encouragement along those lines," Hassler said.

"I grew up in a place where artistic pursuits were thought to be somewhat suspect. It was something a woman could do, but a guy had to go out and make a salary."

So after he graduated from St. John's University in Collegeville in 1955 with a degree in English, Hassler began teaching — the first 10 years in high schools and the next 15 years in community colleges.

"It wasn't something I really planned on," he said, "but now I see it as a good thing. I remember having a really strong urge to write in my 20s, and yet not having the time or what I considered to be the subject matter."

Hassler, whose five novels are all set in Minnesota, draws heavily on his teaching experience, especially in his novels "Staggerford" and "Simon's Night," both of which received high critical acclaim.

His other two books, "Four Miles to Pine Cone" and "Jemmy," were written for young adults and are based on children he met in the classroom.

In "The Love Hunter," teachers are the two central characters, but Hassler has for the first time moved away from the classroom.

Hassler says he thinks of novelist John Cheever as his teacher.

"I've never met the guy, and I've never had a writing teacher. But I've read him very, very closely," Hassler said.

Hassler said.

Hassler, who now teaches one class a quarter at St. John's University and spends most of the rest of his time at the typewriter, says writing has become a compulsion for him.

"It seems sometimes like I'm making up for lost time. The funny thing is I want to also keep teaching. I taught all those years, wondering if the day would come when I could quit. Well, that day came last year, and I found I missed teaching," Hassler said.

"It does things for my writing, but I'm not sure what. I like that flow of people through my life. I like the way quarters begin and end and begin again."

Hassler, who is separated from his wife, says he finds the sprawling, monastic community of St. John's, surrounded by rolling farm land, woods and water, "a wonderful atmosphere to write novels in."

He prefers to write in the morning, beginning about 8 a.m. Then shortly after noon, "I can feel it go," he said.

"It was hard for me to start writing, but I made myself do it so thoroughly that now there is something wrong with my day if I don't write," Hassler said.

The author has the five framed jacket covers of his novels, arranged in the order in which they were published, left to right, along one wall of his office.

Protect Endangered Wildlife

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The New World's largest monkey and 100 other animal species found in Brazil may be dying out, and only a final concerned effort can save them, conservationists here say.

Besides the 35-pound woolly spider monkey, the list of animals threatened with extinction includes the freshwater manatee, the giant anteater, the swamp deer and four species of hummingbirds.

"Brazil has many creatures that need to be saved. But we're fighting against time," said Ibsen de Gusmao Camara, the president of the Brazilian Foundation for the Conservation of Nature (FBCN).

The U.S.-based World Wildlife Fund recently donated $100,000 to Brazilian conservationists because of its concern about the looming threat to animals here. It has promised to give this South American nation a high priority for future fundraising.

The FBCN is working with the Wildlife Fund and Brazilian governmental agencies to protect wildlife reserves in this country, but the distinguished looking Gusmao Camara, a retired admiral, admits the struggle is not easy.

"It's that old conflict between development and conservation," he said. In the past three years Brazil has quadrupled the acreage set aside for parks and refuges. But budget cuts have left these reserves all but unprotected against poachers and encroaching development.

The immediate focus for the Brazilian conservation group's concern is not the Amazon jungle but rather what remains of the once-vast Brazilian Atlantic Coastal Forest. Creatures in this habitat have been displaced by the explosion of giant urban metropolises such as Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo.

"This seasonal tropical forest has been almost entirely destroyed," says Gusmao Camara. "We're trying to save what's left." All that remains is a string of small reserves along the coast which are the last home of the woolly spider monkey and other species whose numbers are close to zero.

"We don't know how many of these monkeys still exist," said the FBCN president. "The biggest colony has 50 members."

The big monkey is known for its coal-black face and its surprising resemblance to Old World monkeys such as the chimpanzee. The habits of the woolly spider monkey have never been studied, and conservationists simply do not know if it can be bred in captivity.

The conservationist leader added that of 17 other species of monkeys native to Brazil's Atlantic Coastal Forest, "15 are in danger of extinction."

All told, the government here officially lists 45 animal species as "in the process of extinction" or "endangered."

Another example is the golden lion marmoset, of which only 200 are known to exist in all of Brazil, all of them in the federal Poco d'Anta Reserve in Rio de Janeiro state. Another species of golden marmoset can be found only in reserves in the northeastern state of Bahia.

The official list of endangered species includes as well:

—The maned wolf, a long-legged canine, the largest in South America.

—Four species of hummingbirds. "We believe two of them already may be extinct," says Gusmao Camara.

—The swamp deer, South America's largest deer. The species has proven susceptible to cattle disease spread by ranchers. It also was hunted almost into extinction for its meat and stately antlers.

—The giant otter. It once roamed almost all of Brazil and was hunted for its luxurious pelt.

—The Leary's macaw, a small blue relative of the parrot which was thought to be extinct but was found in a forested area of Bahia that, by sheer luck, had been set aside as a reserve.

—The giant anteater. It is as large as a desk top and has claws 8 to 10 inches long with which it carves gaping holes in the ground in search of edible insects.

—The mulum, a large, ugly black bird believed to have disappeared from its natural habitat. It has been kept free from extinction through breeding in captivity.

—The freshwater manatee. Once found in abundance in the Amazon, it is now threatened by hunters and boat accidents because of its tendency to float quietly on the surface of the water.

Not on the official list yet but considered endangered is the jaguar, Brazil's version of the North American mountain lion. Its spotted hide is a favorite of poachers and smugglers.

Also believed to be endangered is the black cayman, whose alligator-like hide has made it also a target for poachers who export the skins to the United States and Europe.

Tensions Hit Think Tank

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The chill in East-West relations has struck sharply at a major international think tank that was born in the age of detente, promising cooperation among scientists from both major power blocs.

Tarnished by a spy scandal, hit with a cutoff in U.S. support and facing possible withdrawals, the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis is retrenching and rethinking its priorities.

Institute officials privately say that many of their problems stem from the current political climate.

There is an apparent suspicion in Washington that joint East-West ventures pass on Western technological knowhow to the Soviet Union, they say.

Founded 10 years ago in a spirit of cooperation, the 17-nation center became a major East-West data-exchange venture.

But the Reagan administration announced recently a cutoff in the U.S. $2.3 million contribution to the institute, which amounts to nearly 25 percent of the organization's budget.

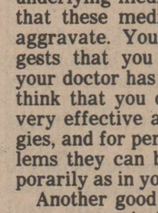

Officials say they expect the institute's U.S. member agency, the National Academy of Sciences, to withdraw, and perhaps others may also do so.

In addition, complaints about the quality of scientific research have been registered by Great Britain and West Germany.

But officials says the institute will survive its current troubles, and become a stronger and more focused center in the process.

"There is a rather rigorous screening process going on now," said spokesman Peter Schlifke. "But the institute will not cease to exist."

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Effective for allergies

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Most of my life I have suffered from hay fever and have tried many different remedies with very little success.

These past few years I have taken two Kenalog shots each year, with good results. I have recently been told that these two shots will shorten my life as much as 10 years. Is this true? Will Cayenne pepper capsules help relieve the effects of hay fever?

DEAR READER — Hay fever is an allergy and it is that time of year again for those who are allergic to certain trees and grass. The ragweed season comes in the fall.

Kenalog has essentially the same actions as corticosterone. Two shots a year are not going to shorten your life if you do not have some underlying medical problem that these medicines would aggravate. Your story suggests that you do not and your doctor has no reason to think that you do. They are very effective against allergies, and for persistent problems they can be used temporarily as in your case.

Another good approach in many cases is to determine exactly what a person is allergic to and then desensitize him to that substance. This must bedone well in advance of the season for the allergy if it is to be effective.

Of course, if the cause of the allergy is known and can be avoided, that is the most effective method of treatment. That is sometimes easier said than done. People with ragweed sensitivity may find a trip to Europe helpful during the ragweed season but that isn't practical for most people.

It is difficult to avoid grass and trees. But I have outlined the steps used to limit your exposure to the common allergic products in The Health Letter number 8-4, Hay Fever (Allergic Rhinitis) which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

No, you need something more than cayenne pepper.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is it true that peanut butter causes a fungus and this fungus can cause cancer? I also read something about raw nuts, are they harmful? I do eat peanut butter and nuts.

DEAR READER — That is a half, distorted truth. There is a mold that produces aflatoxins. These molds are widespread in the air and soil. And in sufficient quantities over a period of time aflatoxins can cause cancer. This has been demonstrated in many animals, including monkeys. The peanut butter does not cause the mold (fungus). The mold is in the ground. It can affect other ground nuts as well.

Moldy peanuts are a likely source of a large amount of aflatoxins. In 1969 a locally produced product of the Philippines was loaded with them. But in the United States the traces of aflatoxin in commercially available peanut butter is too small to cause illnesses. Nevertheless, about 25 percent of peanut butter does contain traces of it. The problem is controlled by inspection of peanut products.

I think the likelihood of your getting cancer from peanut butter is extremely remote, unless you get some locally produced item from uninspected peanuts as you might get from "natural" food sources.

Off-Duty Cop Spots Escapee

MASON, Mich. (AP) — A man who broke out of jail made the mistake of stopping to read the morning paper in the front yard of an off-duty law officer's home, Ingham County authorities say.

Ralph Bosse, 18, in custody for a parole violation, broke out of the Ingham County Jail in Mason Monday by smashing his cell window with a shelf, said Ingham County sheriff's Sgt. David Doolittle. The facility had security glass on the windows, instead of bars, he added.

Later, an off-duty sheriff's deputy saw a man lying in the yard of his Wheatfield Township home, 12 miles northeast of Mason, reading the morning paper, Doolittle said.

The unidentified deputy called department headquarters after he confronted the man.

Five Teams Return To College World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - Five teams from last year's College World Series are back, but defending champion Arizona State will be on the sidelines when play begins Friday for the 1982 NCAA baseball title.

Wichita State and Texas Monday night won their regionals to complete the eight-team field for the two-week, double-elimination tournament.

Earlier in the weekend, Maine, Miami, Cal State-Fullerton, Oklahoma State, South Carolina and Stanford each won regionals to advance to the national series.

The big shock came Sunday when Cal State-Fullerton, ranked No. 3 by Collegiate Baseball, upset No. 2 ranked Arizona State to win the West II Regional in Tempe, Ariz.

Coaches say that development makes the tournament a wide open event, but many are eyeing Oklahoma State, the team that finished second to the Sun Devils last year.

The Cowboys, who beat Oral Roberts to win the Midwest Regional, will face Texas, one of the five teams from last year's Series, at 5:10 p.m. Saturday. The Longhorns swept the Central Regional in Austin Monday, beating Eastern Michigan 9-1 in the finals.

The late game Saturday, pits repeater South Carolina against Stanford at 8:10 p.m.

Wichita State won the South Regional Monday, beating host New Orleans 8-1, the only run they allowed in the regional. The Shockers will face Cal-State Fullerton Friday at 8:10 p.m.

Longhorns Win Central Meet

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Eastern Michigan coach Ron Oestrike was somewhat philosophical about his team's lopsided loss to the University of Texas in the championship game of the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament.

"We took a gamble and it didn't work," he said.

Texas put the game away Monday with an explosive seven-run second inning. Oestrike subbed out starter Ken Spratke in the middle of the early rally and ended up using four pitchers in all.

It didn't work. The Hurons lost 9-1.

"I guess it was a poor decision on the starter," Oestrike said. "Pitching was the factor in the game. We had two bad innings and they capitalized on our mistakes."

Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson agreed the game hinged on pitching.

"The key to the whole tournament was our pitching. They were outstanding. It's really encouraging to see that kind of pitching," he said.

Calvin Shiraldi picked up the win for Texas, and Mike Konderla relieved him in the seventh.

The Longhorns advanced to their 21st NCAA World Series in Omaha, Neb., and Saturday will face Oklahoma State, winner of the NCAA Midwest Regional.

"Oklahoma State will be a tough opponent," Gustafson said. "They have some people back from last year's team and they were tough. But I think with our pitching, we should be representative."

Eastern Michigan lost to Texas 7-2 Sunday night in a third-round winners' bracket game, and then took a 30-minute break before returning to the field for an elimination game against Oklahoma. The Hurons qualified for the second game with Texas by beating the Sooners 9-2.

Texas, which accounted for seven of the 11 members of the all-tournament team, finished the tournament undefeated and improved its record to 57-4.

ACS Sponsors Golfing Event

June 3 is the deadline to enter an American Cancer Society sponsored partnership golf tournament, to be held June 5 at Western Texas College.

Format will be a two-person partnership, low ball. Entry fee for the 18-hole tourney is $20 per person, or $40 per team. The fee is tax deductable.

Prizes will be golf balls for first and second low net and for first low gross in each of the three flights. Prizes will also be given for men's and women's longest drive and closest to the pin.

In addition, a number of door prizes will be given away. Among these is a special drawing for a quilt, donated by First National Bank and purchased from the Senior Citizen Auction.

Co-chairpersons of the tournament are Kaye Cypert and Jo Sterling, members of the local American Cancer Society board. Phil Guerry is president of the local organization.

The tournament is open to the first 32 teams to enter. Entry information may be obtained by contacting the WTC Pro Shop at (915) 573-9291.

LCC Drops 6-0 Lead To Azusa

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Azusa-Pacific had to use some ninth inning heroics to beat host Lubbock Christian, 9-8, and advance to the second round of the 26th annual NAIA World Series baseball tournament.

Mark Schlesinger slugged a two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth to cap off a furious Azusa-Pacific comeback victory after falling behind 6-0 in the first inning.

In other games Monday, Liberty Baptist of Virginia beat St. Xavier of Illinois, 7-5; Lewis and Clark State of Idaho downed Southeastern Oklahoma, 2-0 and Coastal Carolina edged Birmingham Southern, 5-4.

Azusa-Pacific faces Grand Canyon State in a second round winner's bracket game today.

Second round competition opened at 1 p.m. today with a loser's bracket game between St. Xavier of Illinois and Lubbock Christian. Games to follow that featured a loser's bracket between Southeastern Oklahoma and Birmingham Southern. Winner's bracket games matched Lewis & Clark against Bemidji and the finale between Azusa-Pacific and Grand Canyon.

Lubbock Christian jumped off to a 6-0 lead in the first inning with three singles, a double, two walks and two errors by the Cougars.

The California team bounced back to cut the margin to 6-4 in the fourth inning on a four-run outburst highlighted by a three-run homer by Jon Larson. Lubbock Christian added single runs in the fifth and eighth innings to hold an 8-4 edge going into the bottom of the eighth.

Mark Schenazi had a two-run homer and John Catlett singled home a run to cut the margin to 8-7. Pitcher Duane Cresse retired the side to set the stage for Schlesinger's game winning homer in the ninth.

Connors Makes Quarterfinals

PARIS (AP) - Jimmy Connors and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina advanced to the quarterfinals of the French Open Tennis Championships.

Connors eliminated Chip Hooper 6-1, 6-0, 6-4, while Vilas ousted Andreas Maurer of West Germany 6-2, 6-3, 6-1.

Sixth-seeded Eliot Teltscher was the day's only upset victim as 14th-seeded Jose Higueras of Spain, beat Teltscher 6-4, 6-2, 6-0.

In women's play, Chris Evert Lloyd and Andea Jaeger moved into the semifinals of the women's singles.

Lloyd defeated Lucia Romanov of Romania 6-2, 6-4, while Jaeger beat Virginia Ruzici of Romania 6-0, 6-1.

The league will start Wednesday evening at 7:30 and will extend for 10 weeks.

Orioles Defeat Rangers, 8-7

BALTIMORE (AP) - The Baltimore Orioles improved their atrocious record in one-run games the hard way.

Withstanding a four-run Texas rally in the ninth inning, on homers by Leon Roberts and Larry Parrish, the Orioles held on for an 8-7 victory over the Rangers Monday night.

That gave the Orioles a 3-9 mark in one-run decisions, a mark which has disturbed Earl Weaver, the statistically-minded manager. But he found no fault with the squeaker.

"It's beautiful any time you can walk in with enough runs to put one in the win column," Weaver said.

Baltimore went ahead 5-3 in the sixth on rookie Cal Ripken's disputed steal of home and Al Bumbry's RBI single, and made it 8-3 in the eighth when Ken Singleton's two-run homer capped a three-run rally.

But Texas had five hits in the ninth off Dennis Martinez, 5-4, and Tim Stoddard, before Tippy Martinez retired the last two batters and notched his fourth save.

Dave Hostetler, who had an RBI triple in the second, opened the ninth with a double and pinch hitter Bill Stein singled. That finished Dennis Martinez, whose 7-year-old daughter Erica was struck by a car earlier in the day.

Roberts hit the first pitch from Stoddard for a three-run homer and Parrish connected out out later.

Buddy Bell singled after just missing another homer, before Tippy Martinez came in to retire Randy Bass, who homered in the second, and John Grubb. Billy Sample also homered for Texas in the third, his third in two games.

Ripken rapped an RBI double in the Baltimore second off Jon Matlack, 1-3, and scored on Rick Dempsey's single to tie the score 2-2. Dempsey's bases-loaded sacrifice fly forged a 3-3 tie in the fourth.

In the sixth, Ripken singled and took third on a single by Lenn Sakata

Wallach Keys Expos' Rout Of Houston, 10-0

MONTREAL (AP) - At a time when most people are looking for shorter work hours, Tim Wallach of the Montreal Expos is an exception to the rule.

Lately, he's been arriving at the ball park about 4 p.m. each day, hitting about 50 baseballs off a batting tee, swinging at 50 more thrown by batting coach Billy DeMars and then taking regular batting practice.

The old-fashioned work ethic got a boost Monday night as Wallach slammed a pair of two-run home runs to lead a 15-hit Montreal attack that buried the Houston Astros, 10-0.

The first of Wallach's homers came in a five-run first inning, enabling right-hander Charlie Lea, 4-2, to coast on a four-hit shutout.

"I've been more consistent lately than I've ever been before," said Wallach, who finished the month of May with a .367 batting average, six homers and 23 runs-batted-in.

Wallach belted his first homer off starter Don Sutton, 7-2, who failed to get out of the second inning. The second blast, Wallach's sixth of the year, came against reliever Randy Moffitt in the fifth.

Wallach's teammates hit the ball with authority against Sutton. It was a marked contrast to last Wednesday, when the veteran shut the Expos out on five hits through nine innings in a game won by Montreal, 4-0 in 10 frames.

Lea, Sutton's mound opponent last week, was every bit as effective in the rematch. He had retired 26 straight batters entering the game, but Terry Puhl's single leading off the first quickly broke the string.

Lea allowed only a third-inning double by Alan Ashby before yielding a pair of singles in the ninth. The shutout stretched his string of scoreless innings to 26.

Andre Dawson also had a two-run homer for the Expos in the first inning, his seventh of the season.

GIRL'S SOFTBALL

Dynamites 5, Blue Bandits 2

Jackie Parham pitched one-hit ball and had a shutout going in the seventh inning as the Dynamites defeated the Blue Bandits yesterday. Cherisse Reeves got the Bandits' only hit, a single in the second inning.

Parham also led the Dynamites offensively, turning in three singles in an eight-hit attack. Dawn Farmer added two singles and Tobi Stephens, Terese Beuerlein and Tonya Neblett knocked one apiece.

Mavericks 18, Blue Angels 3

Jill Roemisch powered a home run and two singles and winning pitcher Pam Casias rapped a double and two singles as the Mavericks beat the Blue Angels in a Division II game Monday.

Also getting singles for the Mavericks were Melissa Elam and Becky Davila with two each and Karen McAnally, Barbara Zamora and Kristi Winger with one apiece.

The Angels came up with four singles, one each from Pam Hardy, Holly Page, Chennelle Reeves and pitcher Sandra Powell.

FARM LEAGUE

Indians 11, White Sox 9

Tony Hernandez clouted a home run and Walter Meetze, Jimmy Rankin, Jr. Mauldin, Dan Ramey and winning pitcher Carl McClurg added a single apiece as the Indians scalped the Sox yesterday.

Cory Pace and Perry Greathouse hit a double each for the White Sox and Marc McQueen and Wes Dixon added a single apiece.

LITTLE LEAGUE

Athletics 7, Cardinals 5

Skip Jones and Joe Felan slapped a double and a single each and Danny Gambol knocked a triple to aid the A's past the Cardinals yesterday evening. Gambol carded eight strikeouts in picking up the win. Felan got a save for his efforts.

Also getting a single each for the Athletics were Jason West and Michael Ward.

The Cards collected four singles, one each from Harvey Guerrero, Lee Fletcher, Jerry McNew and Dewey Coy.

The A's are 4-1 on the season; the Cards are 3-3.
