Aid heads for Rwanda

U.S. military begins round-the-clock airlift

■ Some refugees try to leave camps because of intolerable conditions.

Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — A wave of U.S. food and medical help for anguished Rwanda refugees was on the way Saturday, but aid workers say filth and famine will give death the upper hand in the refugee camps for at least another week.

Cholera is spreading quickly and ferociously through the camps, killing at least 3,000 refugees since Wednesday, according to the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees. Others are dying of other diseases and malnutrition.

The camps — where the air reeks of excrement, decomposing corpses and the smoke from cooking fires — are so miserable that thousands of refugees massed at the Rwandan border, hoping to return home. But Zairian troops stopped them, apparently until the border area can be cleared of abandoned weapons.

The United States sent a big C-141 cargo plane to Goma and another to a staging base at Entebbe, Uganda, to launch an around-the-clock airlift mission expected to last months and involve as many as 2,000 American troops.

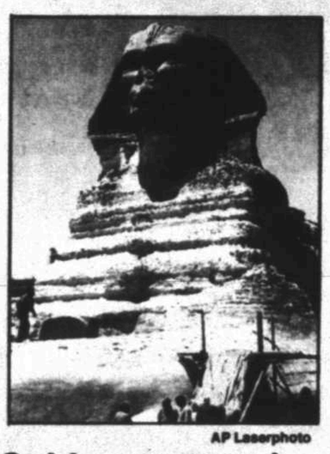

By today, 300 airlift specialists were to be at a staging base in Uganda to unload incoming aircraft, said Gen. George Joulwan, who is in charge of the operation.

After eight years of work, Egyptian crews are almost done with the restoration work on the Sphinx at Giza. They reshaped the statue, returned its curves and replaced its tail.

Zappa honored

PHOENIX — Many thought Frank Zappa's music was from another planet. Now one's been picked out for him. Besieged by letters and e-mail, a Cambridge, Mass., astronomy organization has named an asteroid that orbits between Mars and Jupiter "Zappafrank" after the late musician, who died in December from prostrate cancer. The asteroid-naming was appropriate, Zappa fans thought, because the planet was discovered in 1980 by a Czech astronomer and Zappa symbolized artistic freedom to youngsters growing up in Communist Eastern Europe. He became friends with Vaclav Havel, the dissident playwright who became Czech president. Zappa fan John Scialli suggested in April that an asteroid be named after his idol. Brian G. Marsden, director of the International Astronomical Union's Minor Planets Center, said he'd thought of it, too, but had dropped the idea when Zappa died.

Seeking solutions

Panel to use survey to assess city needs

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Recently released results of Midland Introspective 1993 — a countywide survey assessing current human-service needs — will eventually be used to seek solutions to the targeted community problems.

"We want people to read this (the findings) and digest it some first," said Joan Baskin, a member of the study's steering committee.

This August or September, the committee — which will welcome suggestions — will begin considering what action to pursue.

"The next step for this group is to see what strategy, what method to use to solve what's been found in the survey," Ms. Baskin said.

Community leaders may or may not implement the approach used following a similar survey done in 1988. Those findings resulted in the

Mandela hosts open house for anti-apartheid activists

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — The last time Ike Maphoto wandered near the home of the South African president, he was thrown out of a nearby park because he didn't have permission to be in the "whites-only" part of the capital.

Nondwe Mankahla had only gotten as far as the prison across town.

And Notuthuzelo Mbabala, a soft-spoken former political prisoner, had never been to Pretoria before Saturday, when President Nelson Mandela threw an open house for nearly 1,000 veterans of the anti-apartheid struggle.

"At last, after all the sacrifices and the pains through which we have gone, we are now here, we are now in power," Mandela told the cheering, ululating former guerrillas, ex-prisoners and grassroots organizers.

The invitations read "informal," but guests sported finery in the green, gold and black colors of Mandela's African National Congress, bright robes of Nigerian

Newspaper enlists mystery writers to pen 'end' to O.J. story

By Ted Anthony
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA — The final chapter of the O.J. Simpson murder case has already been written — no less than four times — all in an effort to show that fiction can be stranger than fact.

Hard to believe?

In a series called "O.J.: The Final Chapter," the Philadelphia Daily News has printed endings to the case written by four mystery novelists.

"The story is a stay-up-all-night page-turner. Except, of course, it's real," said the paper, which clearly labeled each story as fiction. "But what if it weren't?"

"If someone wrote this case as fiction, no one would believe it," said Sandra Shea, an assistant managing editor at the paper, winner of two Pulitzer Prizes in the last 10 years. "We were looking for another direction, to provide some transcendence to the reality."

The writers produced these twists:

■ Simpson and Al Cowlings plotted the murders, then coordinated their alibis in the white Bronco during their televised 60-mile freeway odyssey. By Neil Albert of Lancaster County, Pa.

■ The culprit was the brother of a disgruntled transsexual thwarted in an attempt to sue the former Buffalo Bills star for stepping on her toe while filming a commercial.

"I wanted mine to be funny. That was the only way I could do it," said Seymour Shubin, a suspense-thriller writer

Desperate Haitian grave robbers turn cemetery into horror zone

■ Ghoulish robbers operating at night open coffins, scatter bones in search of jewelry, casket fittings.

By Andrew Selsky
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — A stroll through this capital city's main cemetery is a walk of horror.

Since an international trade embargo was clamped on Haiti, grave robbers have looted corpses and stolen fittings from caskets, turning this once beautiful landmark overlooking Port-au-Prince's bay into a ghoulish scene, with skeletons lying half out of caskets and grinning skulls tossed about.

The thieves, trying to get at jewelry on the corpses and at the coffins' iron and bronze handles, have bashed holes into the above-ground tombs, pulled out caskets and dumped the bones on the ground.

"This shocks me," Jacques Beloni, who owns a funeral home adjacent to the cemetery, said Saturday. "When someone dies he is supposed to be in eternal peace. What's being done to the bodies is something terrible."

Beloni, director of the Cemetery of Port-au-Prince for 25 years until 1986, said the thieves try to sell the casket handles to funeral homes. They're scarce because quality ones made abroad can't be imported under the embargo.

The sprawling 227-year-old cemetery was once a place where people would stroll, paying their respects and admiring the mausoleums. Some look like fancy cottages, with tiled steps, ornate columns and sliding glass doors. There has always been some vandalism, but it was minor compared to the latest bout.

"I was proud of it," Beloni said in an interview in his Voice of God Funeral Home, standing next to a row of wooden coffins leaning against a wall. "It used to be a clean and nice place. People used to come and just sit."

Like much of Haiti, the Western hemisphere's poorest country and the target of a crippling embargo aimed at ousting its military rulers, the cemetery is now a wreck.

Inside the invaded tombs lie caskets half-pulled out with the lids smashed and lying ajar, the ripped silk linings riffling in the breeze.

A cobweb is stretched across a hole bashed into one tomb. Beyond lies a wooden coffin, its lid destroyed. Leg and hip bones, grey and riddled with holes from age, are scattered inside.

Police patrols have been stepped up to curtail the grave robbing, which happens at night, officials say.

Quest for peace snowballs among war-weary Arabs

By Youssef M. Ibrahim
N.Y. Times News Service

AMMAN, Jordan — When Jordanians refused to heed calls by Muslim militants to observe "a day of mourning" in protest over last week's meeting between the Israeli foreign minister and the Jordanian prime minister, it signaled a general reluctance among Arabs throughout the region to continue working against peace with Israel.

"It's snowballing. There is no way to stop it anymore or to reverse it," Bassam Abu Sharif, a former senior aide to Yasser Arafat and an early advocate of peace with Israel, said as he watched Jordanian Prime Minister Abdel Salam Majali publicly welcome Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres on Jordanian soil for the first time.

The militant Muslim Brotherhood had inveighed against the historic event as well as against King Hussein's plans to meet Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in Washington on Monday.

Hamza Mansour, a senior official of the brotherhood's bloc in Jordan's Parliament, acknowledged that the coalition of opponents to peace with Israel might have to shoulder "responsibility for its failure to mobilize the people."

Assessing the reaction among people in Jordan and elsewhere in the Arab world, Fahd al-Fanek, a Jordanian economist and newspaper columnist, said:

"Those who reject peace must offer an alternative, which can only be war. Otherwise they seem to advocate further delays and paralysis for a few more decades with no obvious benefit. Paralysis only means that we would be negotiating tomorrow for gains we could have taken for granted decades ago. Wars have proven catastrophic for the Arab world. Call it a new mind-set; call it realism. These are the new facts of life."

Indeed, since the Madrid conference in October 1991, the efforts toward peace in the region have moved forward despite incidents like the deadly Israeli-Palestinian clashes in Gaza earlier this month, the slaying of an Israeli army officer by Palestinian militants last week, and even a Jewish settler's killing of at least 29 Palestinians in February in the West Bank town of Hebron.

In Cairo last week, Palestinians and Israelis held more peace talks. And in Gaza on Thursday, Maj. Gen. Nasr Youssef, the commander of the Palestinian police forces in Gaza and Jericho, declared that "the peace process will continue and we will deal firmly with whomever tampers with it."

Youssef had just held a luncheon for his Israeli counterpart, Maj. Gen. Yom Tov Samian, who collaborated with Palestinians in the joint security committees that were set up two months ago.

Cuba blames thieves for tug's sinking, deaths

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Cuba has blamed those who stole a leaky old tugboat to flee the island for an accidental collision that sunk the tug, causing 32 of the 61 passengers to drown.

The reconstruction of the event, published in Friday's edition of the Communist Party daily Granma, was the most detailed Cuban description of the July 13 disaster.

The story reverses an initial Cuban report that the craft was damaged while leaving port and confirms survivors' claims they were sprayed with water hoses.

But it said the collision that sank the craft was accidental and laid blame on "the irresponsibility, the adventurism" of those who organized the flight.

According to the report, Granma said the 300-horsepower stolen tugboat was a wooden craft built in 1879 which had been restricted to the Havana harbor because safety inspections had found leaks.

The 56-foot tug was designed for four crew members, carried only four life preservers and had a nonfunctioning emergency pump, the newspaper said.

The vice-director of the port, Fidencio Ramel Prieto Hernandez, Dariel's father, used a drug to sedate the night watchman and unlocked the chains holding the boat to the dock, it said.

He and the captain of another tug, Raul Munoz Garcia, loaded on family and friends, and the boat slipped away from the dock at 3:30 a.m. without lights.

Crewmembers on another ship alerted port officials. Three metal tugs gave chase, spraying the escaping boat with water from fire-fighting hoses, Granma said.

After a seven-mile chase, one of the chasing tugs accidentally hit the fleeing tug from the rear, "and in a few minutes it sank," it said.

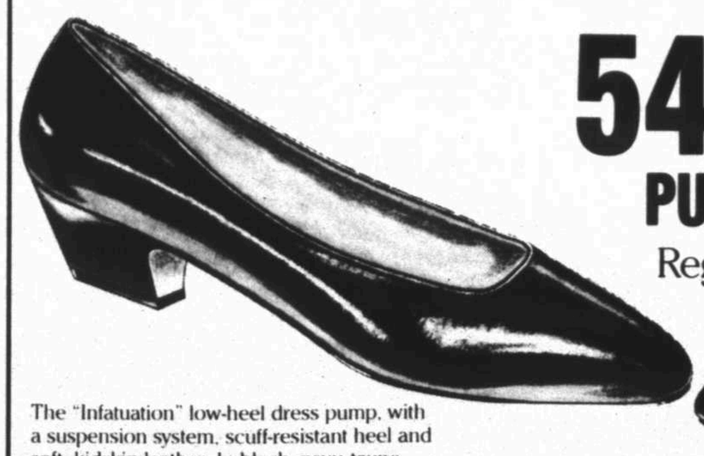

It said two coast guard craft alterted by port authorities arrived and began to rescue the survivors.

WEATHER WATCH

Via Associated Press

Today's high to be near 100

Staff Report

Today should partly cloudy with a high near 100 and south winds 10-20 mph, according to a National Weather Service spokesman in Midland.

Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low near 70.

Monday's temperatures should be between 95-100 and the skies should be partly cloudy.

After a low of 72, compared to the record low of 62 set in 1947, the temperatures rose to 100. The record high for the day was 103 set in 1981.

STATE

Most of Texas was hot and dry Saturday, although there were a few scattered showers and thunderstorms, according to the National Weather Service.

South Texas was hot and dry with isolated showers in southeast Texas. Temperatures were mostly in the 90s, ranging from 82 at Port Aransas to 102 at McAllen and Alice. Winds were from the south and southeast between 10 and 15 mph, with gusts of more than 20 mph along the coast.

Today should be about the same, with clear to partly cloudy skies, lows in the 70s and highs in the 90s.

In North Texas, skies were partly cloudy and temperatures were mostly in the 90s and 100s. Paris had the low of 93, and Fort Worth had the high at 104. The region should be fair to partly cloudy today, with lows in the 70s and highs in the 90s and low 100s.

Parts of the panhandle had showers and thunderstorms, but most of West Texas was sunny. Marfa had the region's low at 88, while Childress had the high at 104. West Texas should be partly cloudy today, with highs in the 90s and 100s and lows in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Thunderstorms scattered lightning and heavy rain across parts of the Northeast and the mid-Atlantic states Saturday, and rainy weather threatened parts of the Plains and Midwest.

Showers and thunderstorms developed along two frontal systems across the central and eastern sections of the nation, the National Weather Service said. Rain was also scattered over parts of the West.

Heavy rain caused street flooding in parts of the New York City metropolitan area.

A flash flood watch was posted for western and central Massachusetts and western and central Connecticut. And an urban and small stream flood watch was issued for the Philadelphia area.

Lightning along the coast of Maine critically injured four kayakers who had taken shelter from a thunderstorm in a concrete artillery bunker built during World War II. All four were knocked unconscious, said Kittery Police Chief Edward Strong.

Heavy clouds gathered during the afternoon across sections of the upper Mississippi Valley, the northern Plains, and parts of the Red River Valley of Oklahoma and Texas.

A severe thunderstorm watch was posted for much of Wisconsin, Upper Michigan, northern sections of Lake Michigan and parts of southern Lake Superior.

A thunderstorm in southwestern Oklahoma dumped 2.37 inches of rain at Lawton during the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CITY: Committee to study survey

formation of nine task forces: information and referral, income and employment, education, housing, transportation, adolescent issues, child care, health care and substance abuse.

Some of the highlights of the 1993 survey were also concerns five years ago; others are new.

The design of the studies differed, which makes tracking issues difficult. For example, the 1993 survey used mailed questionnaires rather than telephone interviews and surveyed people based on census tracks rather than ZIP code areas.

The new survey also included youngsters as respondents and there were some differences in the questions asked.

Nevertheless, some comparisons can be made:

■ Where to seek help.

"The biggest need (in the 1988 study) was that people didn't know where to go or call for help," Ms. Baskin said. "That seemed to be the most pressing problem five years ago."

As a result, a 24-hour information hot line was set up to fill those needs. The ignorance about where to seek help has since declined and is so reflected in the new survey, Ms. Baskin said.

■ Economic conditions.

People expressed a high level of concern about unemployment and underemployment, and maintaining a budget in both 1988 and 1993.

The respondents were concerned with "economic issues in general," said Doug Heck, director of planning and funds distribution for the United Way.

But human-service providers admit there's little they can do to affect economic conditions.

Nevertheless, social concerns many times relate to financial problems. "Depending on an individual's situation, a lack of resources can translate into a shortage somewhere," Heck said.

A task force did lead to the development of a universal employment application, and a booklet on how to maintain a budget.

■ Health care.

"Everything related to medicine and health care" has remained a concern, said Jane Wolf, executive director of the United Way.

That's due in part to the continuing growth of households that need affordable health care, she said.

And media attention on the national health-care proposal may have influenced respondents, Ms. Baskin said.

Since the first survey, clinics have opened in east Midland to help accommodate some health-care needs. The help provided may not be reflected in the 1993 survey due to the fairly recent implementation.

■ Child day care.

Need for child care was high among concerns in 1988 and has dropped substantially since.

"I would like to think the child-care issue was not a flaming one (in 1993) because of the job we did in the first one," Ms. Wolf said.

Task-force work led to the formation of affordable site-based after-school day care at 13 campuses.

■ Housing.

"We have not yet made a substantial dent in low-cost affordable safe housing," Ms. Wolf said.

As with health care, housing needs have simply grown since 1988, she said.

Since the first survey, some strides have been made including the publication of a housing information brochure, plans for a housing hot line, and the creation of the Midland Affordable Housing Roundtable, a public-private partnership.

■ Alcohol and substance abuse.

The problem among adults and youngsters was reflected five years ago and again recently, Ms. Wolf said.

■ Education.

Although education doesn't come up specifically in the recent survey, other problems cited are indicative of education concerns, Ms. Wolf said.

■ Adolescent issues.

Adolescent issues are not measured the same in the two surveys but remain a concern, Ms. Wolf said.

■ New issues found in the recent survey include crime — especially juvenile crime — teen pregnancy, AIDS, sexual assault awareness education and racial discrimination.

This may be a reflection of more national media attention on the issues, or because of a change in the format of the surveys, cautioned those involved.

The issues that topped the list of concerns in 1993 were stress and the inability to pay for medical needs.

"I don't think there were any surprises in it," Ms. Baskin said. "I think the importance of the survey is to confirm your instincts."

The findings help fill in a "perception gap" about the extent of social conditions in Midland, Ms. Wolf said.

Although Midland doesn't have the social problems of a metropolitan city, such problems exist and have increased in the last decade, she said.

Now that the issues have been identified, the community must take action, said those involved in the survey.

Task forces — whether similar or different to those used after the first survey — are likely to be established. Some individuals involved in the survey are already looking at different ways that task forces can implement solutions.

"Community-capacity building" — which makes assets more available to specific areas for long-term rather than short-term solutions — and preventative approaches are being examined.

Organizers agree that the efforts can only be accomplished by the community — not any one agency or person.

"The days of the kid putting his finger in the dike are gone," Ms. Baskin said.

"It's the community's document, not just the steering committee's," she said.

YOUTH: Midland family to attend month when he returns for the 25th anniversary of Woodstock.

"It's amazing how life changes. They are my life," Hummel said of his children.

Hummel credits his years in Midland as giving him his love of family. "If you stay in this town long enough — that's one thing it will teach you," he said.

In 1969, however, Hummel was a 16-year-old musician who never pictured himself as doing anything other than playing his music. Locked tightly into the flower-child revolution, Hummel's home was only 20 miles away from Kent State University where National Guard troops fired on protesting college students and killed four. The event came to be known as the Kent State Massacre and was a rallying cry for those seeking change.

"My friends said, 'We're going to a concert — you're going,'" Hummel said. At the time, however, none knew that this concert would turn into an event that would confound the world.

As a musician, Hummel's band was teetering on success. They played with many that would later become famous, including Rush, Heart, Ted Nugent and Bob Seger.

After driving to within 10 miles of where the concert stages were set up, Hummel and his friends realized they could drive no further. They parked the car and continued on foot. "It was like ants attacking food," Hummel said of the hordes of people converging on Woodstock.

Although nowadays Hummel has his hair cut short and works long hours to cultivate and maintain his reputation for quality work, in 1969, his hair cascaded over his shoulders and he was clearly separate from main-stream society.

"Society was scared to death of us, because they didn't know what we were," Hummel said.

But at Woodstock, people like the young Hummel were definitely the majority. There was goodwill among those in attendance, even though most were very frightened because it was apparent that the throng was much greater than facilities could handle, he said. By its sheer mass, the crowd was essentially beyond the powers of society in that rural land.

But peace, love and rock 'n' roll reined supreme and there was no appreciable violence in the crowd.

There were a lot of drugs and sex was a favored pastime for those in attendance, but Hummel believes there has been too much bad press over these two facets of Woodstock.

The sex and drugs were part of a great experiment gone out of control in the late '60s, Hummel explained. The people at Woodstock were not, however, the kind of people one associates with this behavior today.

"There were children everywhere," Hummel said. Total strangers would pitch in to help look after the children. There was trust and goodwill in abundance, he said.

People with food would share with those who were hungry, he said. If someone was in need of something, strangers would pitch in to see they were cared for.

The youth movement of that era was responsible for much positive change in the country, he said. "We wanted a freer country. We wanted more freedom of speech," he said.

The women's equality movement also is a product of those times, he said.

Hummel is one of several people who are to be interviewed by CBS News correspondent Charles Osgood about returning to Woodstock.

Coordinators of the anniversary event should be more prepared than were coordinators 25 years ago, Hummel said. There will be food and beverages aplenty and there will be two concert stages so there will be no lag time between performances.

The anniversary site will actually be a few miles from the original site, but will offer better amenities and access to lakes, he said.

Woodstock was a time of hope for the future, drawing people of like mind and concience, while the anniversary is something of the opposite — allowing an introspective look at the past and a chance to savor the dreams of youth.

When asked if he would fly to New York, Hummel said no, he would be driving his family across the country, just as he and his friends did 25 years ago.

A pilgrimage has its traditions,, after all.

damask, and even brighter saris.

Author Nadine Gordimer, poet-activist Dennis Brutus, lawmaker Helen Suzman and Communist Party leader Joe Slovo mingled under a banquet tent with less well-known activists.

Mandela sat at the head table beside Nokuthula Luthuli, widow of early ANC president Albert Luthuli. Luthuli won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1960 for leading a nonviolent campaign against apartheid. Mandela won the same prize last year for helping to guide South Africa from white rule to democracy.

After a lunch of traditional African fare — tripe, chicken and a hominy-and-beans mixture known as samp — South Africa's first black president invited a multiracial, multiparty group of guests to stroll the lawns of his new home and tour his offices in the Union Buildings next door.

Until "the cream of veteran fighters for human rights" had set foot inside, Mandela said, the sites "would not be worthy symbols of the new democratic order."

Mbabala's thoughts were with one of the many who were unable to accept Mandela's invitation. Her husband Sipho was killed, possibly by South African agents, in 1977 while in exile in Tanzania.

"It's sad for me now without my husband," Mbabala, 67, said. "He should be here now. But he died fighting for freedom."

Both Mbabala and her husband had been active in the so-called defiance campaigns against discriminatory laws. Sipho Mbabala fled the country after his wife's arrest in 1963; she spent the next five years in prison.

Mankahla, who like Mbabala is from New Brighton on the country's southeastern coast, went to prison for two years in 1964 for distributing an underground newspaper.

"In those days, the local papers wouldn't tell what was going on," the 59-year-old Mankahla said. "I really enjoyed selling papers, because I knew that my people would know more."

> 'At last, after all the sacrifices and the pains, we are now here, we are now in power.'
> — President Nelson Mandela

Mankahla's mother Nellie, 83, who went door-to-door advising her neighbors to resist apartheid laws, was also arrested in 1964. The two served together in a number of prisons. Both attended the banquet.

"Although I am sick and old, I like to know what's going on," said Nellie Mankahla. "I am Mandela's follower, because I am a member of the ANC."

Maphoto, 63, now working in a provincial premier's office, considers Pretoria his hometown. But his apartheid-era identification book was stamped with the name of a nearby black township — reason enough for a policeman to evict him from the public gardens surrounding the Union Buildings in 1961.

He left the country that same year to help organize Spear of the Nation, the ANC guerrilla force now being incorporated into a new South African army. He was captured in 1968 while fighting South African troops who had crossed into what was then Rhodesia, and spent the next 13 years in prison.

He returned to South Africa in 1992 to work in the ANC's campaign for South Africa's first all-race election in April. The ANC overwhelmingly won.

"So much has changed," Maphoto said, indicating the manicured lawns of the presidential residence. "This place was not for Africans — even the people who mowed the lawn were white. This is our country now."

FINAL: Novelist hopes she isn't prophetic who devised the transsexual ending. "Otherwise, it's too new and too painful and there's too much at stake there for me to add my serious thinking to it."

■ Simpson is acquitted and drops from sight after 100,000 people walk the streets of Los Angeles chanting his name. A man described as "his friend" leads a private eye to a remote cabin in the desert, where Simpson is hiding out — and quite insane. By Eric Sauter of suburban Bucks County.

■ The fourth solution, which ran Friday, was: The media did it.

That storyline, by California writer Judith Greber, a former Philadelphia teacher, depicts the crime as a contract killing orchestrated by a tabloid baron to create an irresistible story.

"Whenever I'm plotting a mystery murder, I think, who benefits? This is an everybody-loses-kind-of-case, except for the media," said Ms. Greber, who writes novels under the pseudonym Gillian Roberts.

"It was supposed to be semi-tongue in cheek. . . . What's horrible is how logical it sounds," she said.

One media observer said the Daily News' series amounts to an understandable backlash from a print media besieged by "tabloid TV."

"They're responding to the instantaneous sensationalization that you see on television," said Roger A. Soenksen, a professor of mass communications at James Madison University.

"The tabloidism kind of approach is so popular and getting such large ratings on TV that the print media is interpreting that they have to respond in kind," Soenksen said. "It's unheard of."

Ms. Greber hopes her media-did-it piece doesn't prove prophetic.

"I think to some extent, with true tabloid TV, you're paying people to come up with what you want," she said. "And I hope this isn't the next logical step. I really hope it's fiction."

Strapped Israeli arms suppliers try to switch from tanks to toasters

By Dan Perry
Associated Press

Peace shrinks weapons markets, forces industry to adapt fighter planes into corporate jets, radars into cancer detectors.

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel's most famous export has long been the Uzi, symbol of a nation that not only lived by the sword, but perfected and sold it.

The compact, folding submachine gun became a weapon of choice for secret services, and terrorists, around the world.

But now the global arms business is in a slump and Israel is pursuing peace with the Arabs, so what to do with an industry that was a leader in earning foreign currency?

A Finance Ministry report released last week showed record losses of almost $1 billion for state-run arms companies in 1993, despite efforts to streamline and find new markets.

Many Israelis see the answer in converting military technology to civilian applications, the same challenge facing the United States, Russia and other countries with large military industries.

Reuven Krupik, an economist dedicated to conversion, said Israel can show the way.

"We have this huge defense sector and we have a great need to convert it," he said. "Other countries haven't encountered the problem to this extent."

Computerized systems developed for military use are being adapted for products ranging from walkie-talkies and toasters to an anti-tailgating device that measures the distance between cars.

Lee Iacocca, the former Chrysler chairman, tested the device here last month and the maker, Silicon Heights, has installed it on a test car sent to the United States.

Such innovations were on Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's mind when he told the graduating class at the Israeli engineering university Technion: "We must find ways to shift more and more to entirely different fields in research and development. (Otherwise) tens of thousands of jobs will be lost."

In the United States, 1995 orders for military aircraft are down 86 percent from a decade ago and the market for tanks has vanished, the U.S. publication Defense News reported. The American aerospace industry has laid off 10 percent of its workers.

Among Israeli companies, the largest 1993 loss — $450 million — was recorded by Israel Aircraft Industries.

Moshe Ortasse, head of the electronics division, said it hoped to bounce back by selling business jets instead of fighters. The company developed an executive jet in the early 1980s and has sold several hundred.

"We hope civilian projects will constitute 40 percent of our revenue in a few years," Ortasse said.

Aircraft Industries also is developing a civilian satellite, Ofeq, and a blood-cell scanner that uses radar technology for early cancer detection.

Ortasse sees the greatest potential in using Israel's experience with small military air bases to sell developing countries "radars, air traffic management and everything they need" for small airports.

Such plans come too late for the 3,000 Aircraft Industries employees, nearly one-fifth of the total, being laid off this year. The other state-owned military giant, Israel Military Industries, has cut its staff from 11,000 to just over 4,000 in three years.

These are humbling developments for an industry that, by some estimates, accounted for 40 percent of industrial production several years ago.

Israel still sells $2 billion worth of military hardware abroad every year, but the share of the total exports of $15 billion is declining, said Gad Levin, deputy director of the Israel Export Institute.

"Israel is breaking free of its dependence on the defense industries, but it is a process and not a revolution," Levin said.

Israel's effort to become self-sufficient in arms began after France, then its main arms supplier, embargoed shipments during the 1967 Middle East war.

Farmer finds mass grave in Guatemala

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — A farmer in remote northern Guatemala stumbled across a mass grave that officials say could contain as many as 1,000 victims of Guatemala's civil war, police said Saturday.

Six officers have been sent to investigate the find, which also has been visited by a local justice of the peace and human rights officials, said National Police spokesman Mario Lizardo Ramos.

Human rights workers and forensic teams have begun to uncover a series of mass grave sites in northern Guatemala believed to hold victims of peasants killed in the early 1980s, during the army's scorched-earth campaign against rebels.

Poor communication with the remote village of Cuarto Pueblo, which can't be reached by car, led to some confusion.

Initial reports Friday located the village in the municipality of Playa Grande, near a major military base, and indicated police had already begun to excavate.

EU takes over administration of split Mostar

MOSTAR, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The European Union took over administration of divided Mostar on Saturday as part of international efforts to cement a Muslim-Croat alliance and pressure Serbs to accept a peace plan.

But reports of cease-fire violations in Sarajevo and renewed fighting in other parts of Bosnia raised fears that continued Serb refusal to accept the plan may intensify the two-year-old civil war.

Heavy sniper, small arms and machine-gun fire forced police on Saturday to stop traffic and street cars in the center of Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, for the first time in months.

German Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel, presiding at a ceremony in Mostar marking the transfer of control to the EU, urged residents of the city to work together for peace.

Demilitarization of the city was completed Friday night, paving the way for the EU administrator, Hans Koschnick, the mayor of Bremen, Germany, to take control, said Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, the U.N. commander in Bosnia.

Muslim-led government forces and rival Croats fought bitterly for control of the southwestern Bosnian city before they signed a U.S.-sponsored federation agreement in March. As part of the agreement, Mostar was placed under EU administration.

But the city remains divided with the Croats on the western side of the Neretva River and the Bosnian Muslims on the eastern side.

"Tear down the invisible wall between the two parts of the city and instead build bridges — not only across the Neretva, but in your minds and hearts as well," Kinkel said at the ceremony at the Ero Hotel on the western side of the city.

Kinkel, the presidents of Bosnia, Croatia, and other dignitaries then crossed a makeshift suspension bridge over the Neretva to visit a 17th century mosque heavily damaged by shelling.

The bridge was erected after Croat shelling last November destroyed the 16th century "Stari Most" bridge that gave the town its name and symbolized Bosnia's cultural diversity.

On the eastern side, people thronged the streets and hung out of windows and balconies, cheering some members of the delegation.

Clinton admits being high school 'nerd'

By Lawrence L. Knutson
Associated Press

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — President Clinton, reliving high school 30 years out, said Saturday that although he played in the school band and enjoyed his friends, many people probably considered him "a nerd."

At Hot Springs High School, Clinton also was active in the math and Latin clubs, played a part in the play Arsenic and Old Lace, got good grades and met President Kennedy when he went to Washington as a delegate to Boys Nation.

Many of his classmates remember him as fun, popular and considerate.

Clinton, attending the 30th reunion of the class of 1964, talked about it as he stood outside the current Hot Springs High School. The building is new since his high school days but carries an inscription proclaiming it: "Alma Mater of President Bill Clinton."

"What kind of person were you like in high school?" someone asked.

"Well I wasn't a jock," Clinton replied. "A lot of people probably would have said I was a nerd. But I liked my friends, I liked music, I liked the activities, but I liked to study too."

Clinton said he hoped having the presidential entourage around did not spoil the reunion for his friends. They didn't seem to mind.

"It's wonderful. He's just Bill to us," said classmate Carolyn Echols of Hot Springs. "We don't really think of him as president of the most powerful nation on Earth. To us, he's just our friend Bill. He's always been that way."

At the reunion, Clinton joined other members of the band on stage, following the cheerleaders and the basketball and football teams, all circa 1964.

He helped the others sing pop songs of the era, including "Stand By Me" and "Why Do Fools Fall in Love."

At the airport as he arrived from Washington, Clinton said he misses the state that repeatedly elected him governor.

He said he especially misses "the ability to communicate directly with people."

In Washington, he said, "it's hard to avoid being isolated."

"And it's hard to avoid just kind of a distance and almost a miscommunication because of the nature of the presidency where so many things are cascading in on people and so much information is flying back and forth."

Clinton's conclusion?

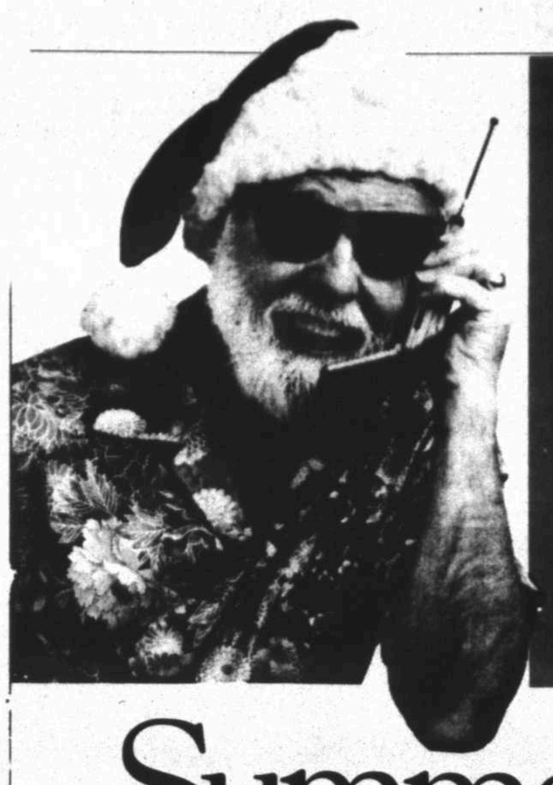

"I miss the whole lifestyle that Hillary and Chelsea and I had down here."

DNA test may go on trial with O.J.

■ Some scientists claim DNA testing is best thing since fingerprinting; others argue its subject to lab error, evidence contamination, can't be trusted.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — After all the out-of-court hoopla over a reward, a hot line and accusations of planted evidence, the O.J. Simpson case is moving into the more staid realm of forensic science.

The trial could turn into a showcase for the reliability of genetic fingerprinting, with attention focused on a few test tubes of blood in a laboratory, and on the letters DNA.

Can such tests really prove whether a defendant is innocent or guilty? Should science send someone to the gas chamber?

Some scientists call DNA testing the greatest forensic evidence breakthrough since fingerprinting.

Others say it is subject to laboratory errors and evidence contamination and cannot be trusted.

"This (case) will have a tremendous impact on people's perception of DNA evidence," said Simon Ford, a molecular biologist and professor at the University of California at Irvine.

Studies Ford has conducted are quoted in a defense motion arguing for strict controls on DNA testing of blood, hair and tissue gathered at the scene of the slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, and from Simpson, who's charged with their murders.

Specifically, the Simpson camp wants prosecutors to split the samples to allow separate testing by defense experts.

The issue will be argued Monday in full view of a national television audience. The prosecution's testing was expected to begin Tuesday at Cellmark Diagnostics, a private laboratory in Germantown, Md., used by law enforcement nationwide.

"There's absolutely no legal authority in California for forcing a split of samples," said Rock Harmon, senior deputy district attorney in Alameda County who has used DNA evidence in numerous cases.

He said prosecutors will oppose the split because they risk losing too much of the samples before the tests are even begun.

But Ford and another authority in the field, William Thompson, said sample splitting and duplicate testing are the only guarantee of reliable results.

So-called DNA fingerprinting looks for unique characteristics that constitute each person's genetic makeup. Laboratories extract DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) from such things as skin, blood or hair found at a crime scene and compare it with samples from suspects and victims.

Ford and Thompson are part of a growing group of experts who advocate rigorous testing controls in criminal cases, including requirements for duplicate tests.

"Errors can be caught or prevented when you do duplicate testing," said Thompson, also a professor at University of California-Irvine.

■ Related story/1B

He noted that double-checking of tests is routine in other areas of science.

"Right now, we use more stringent scientific methods to diagnose strep throat than we do to send someone to the gas chamber," Thompson said.

The first person executed in the United States on the basis of genetic fingerprinting was Timothy W. Spencer, a serial killer dubbed the "Southside Strangler" who was put to death in Virginia in April.

Leftist environmentalists field third-party slate in New Mexico

By Dirk Johnson
N.Y. Times News Service

SANTA FE, N.M. — The politics of environmentalism is once again provoking outrage in the West, where anger among farmers and ranchers crystallized a generation ago in the so-called Sagebrush Rebellion.

But this time it is environmentalists who are rebelling, fielding a third-party slate in New Mexico.

Political analysts here say that the Green Party, often referred to as the Greens, is not to be taken lightly in a state swelling with newcomers drawn largely by the natural splendors of soaring mountain peaks and lush valleys. As voters, such newcomers are far more likely to join the Sierra Club than the Cattleman's Association.

Even the state's Democratic Party leaders, while discounting the chances of a Green victory, have expressed fears that the third party could help Republicans wrest the governor's office from Bruce King, a Democrat seeking his fourth term.

"I wouldn't count the Greens out by any means," said Roger Morris, a political analyst and writer here who served in the administrations of Richard M. Nixon and Lyndon B. Johnson. "There are a lot of people who have come to New Mexico looking for an alternative way. And they're going to give support and money to the Greens."

Analysts: Green Party, or the Greens, is not to be taken lightly in state swelling with newcomers drawn largely by natural splendors.

While third-party candidates generally face daunting odds, two governors were elected as independents in 1990: Lowell P. Weicker Jr. in Connecticut and Walter J. Hickel in Alaska.

The Green Party here achieved instant credibility by virtue of its candidate for governor: Roberto Mondragon, a former Democratic lieutenant-governor and Spanish-language radio broadcaster.

With his political background, Mondragon has helped to dispel the image of the Greens as pie-in-the-sky idealists without any practical experience in government. And as a native of Guadalupe County, who grew up tending goats and chickens near the banks of the Pecos River, he lends ethnic diversity to a movement sometimes dismissed as a fashionable hobby for well-to-do whites.

"The Green Party stands for what the state Democratic Party ought to stand for," Mondragon said as he sat in the shade of a cottonwood tree in the plaza of downtown Santa Fe.

"There used to be room for liberals in the Democratic Party here," he said. "But there isn't room anymore. If you look at the contributors for the Democratic Party today, it's the same people that you'll find on the list of contributors for the Republican Party."

On environmental issues, he said, the Green Party would take "a more realistic approach" than some environmentalists might favor. He said, for example, that he "wouldn't want to sacrifice the job of a local person for the sake of a tree."

New Mexico, while culturally distinctive, is a traditional bellwether in national politics.

Ship goes down south of Guantanamo, Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — Sixteen people were missing at sea after a cargo ship capsized early Saturday in rough waters south of Cuba, the Coast Guard said.

The Palawan Island capsized about 250 miles south of Guantanamo, Cuba. Seas with waves up to 10 feet hampered rescue efforts, Petty Officer Alex Worden said.

"It's kind of hard for our helicopters to get down close," he said. "We're hoping any survivors may be clinging to the wooden debris that's floating all around."

The vessel was en route from Mobil, Ala., to Aruba carrying 5,000 tons of wood. The Coast Guard received a distress signal from a beacon about 5 a.m. EDT, Worden said.

Demonstrators in South Carolina rally against Confederate flag

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Civil rights leaders gave South Carolina a deadline on Saturday: stop flying the Confederate flag atop the Statehouse by Labor Day or face a nationwide economic boycott.

Several thousand protesters marched through the streets of this tourist town demanding that the flag be pulled down from the state capitol in Columbia. They were met by hundreds of Confederate flag supporters who waved the banners as they marched by.

"The Confederate flag represents the worst of racism, the worst of exploitation," NAACP executive director Benjamin Chavis told a crowd at a church before the march.

"It's not just an insult to African-Americans, it's an insult to all Americans, to all people of good will all across the world," Chavis said to thunderous applause and a cry of "Take the red rag down."

"Just as sure as we changed South Africa, we're going to change South Carolina," Chavis said.

As the marchers strode past pizza parlors and video arcades, flag supporters lined the route and defiantly displayed row upon row of the Southern banner. Scores of local, state and federal law enforcement officers kept taunts from turning to violence

Later in the day, about 1,000 flag supporters marched in a steady drizzle, chanting, "Never take it down."

The group's leaders criticized the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, claiming the group was practicing reverse racism.

"They want to eliminate everything that makes our culture what it is," said William Carter, who was state chairman for the unsuccessful presidential campaign of David Dukes. a former member of the Klan.

Police said there were about 2,000 anti-flag marchers; organizers said there were as many as 8,000.

Patti Smith, a 16-year-old white teen-ager from Greensboro, N.C., said the fight over the flag is about racial divisions that will never be healed.

"It's been there forever and it's going to stay there," she said.

Demonstrators in Myrtle Beach, S.C. march against the Confederate flag that flies over the Statehouse in Columbia Saturday. Civil rights leaders gave South Carolina a deadline: stop flying the flag over the Statehouse by Labor Day or face a nationwide economic boycott. Hundreds of flag supporters, however, defiantly displayed the Southern banner on pick-up trucks, motorcycles, hats and T-shirts. Supporters also planned a counter-protest.

Urban league chief minimizes significance of white racism

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In a marked departure from the long-time stance of many other civil rights leaders, the new head of the National Urban League is minimizing the significance of white racism as a factor in the poverty of inner-city blacks.

In a speech that he is to deliver today, Hugh P. Price, the league's president and chief executive officer, says that although racism is "still a well-documented and undeniable reality," intensified economic competition and employers' resulting demand for better-educated, better-skilled workers are larger contributors to urban poverty.

"We must not let ourselves, and especially children, fall into the paranoid trap of thinking that racism accounts for all that plagues us," says the text of the speech, a copy of which was provided by the league. "The global realignment of work and wealth is, if anything, the bigger culprit."

The speech, the keynote address of the National Urban League's convention in Indianapolis, Ind., is the first policy statement by Price, a 52-year-old former vice president of the Rockefeller Foundation, since he assumed the leadership of the league July 5.

In tone and content, it reflects a sharp distinction from other civil rights leaders, most notably the Rev. Benjamin F. Chavis Jr., executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

For instance, while in recent months Chavis has publicly embraced black figures like Louis Farrakhan who have long advocated keeping political distance from whites, Price's speech emphasizes "racial inclusion."

"For all our suffering," the speech says, "we cannot become so fixated on our problems that we ignore our commonality of interests with others. All the problems I've addressed this evening — inadequate schooling, idle and alienated youngsters, and chronic unemployment — cut across racial lines. If we're ever to deal with them on a scale remotely equal to their size, we must coalesce with people of other complexions who feel the same pain, even if it isn't as acute."

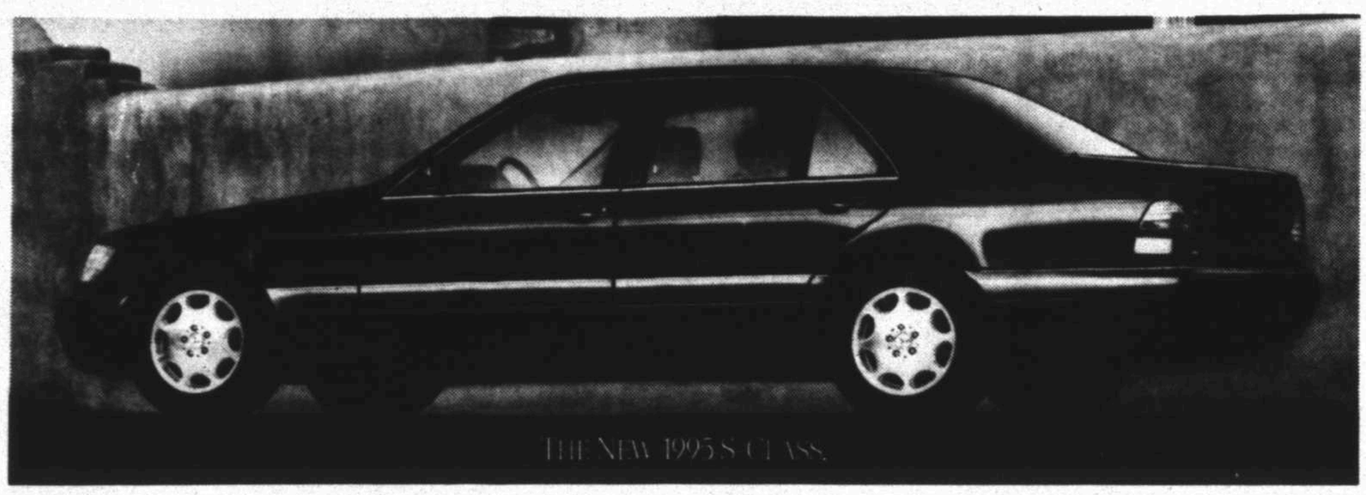

'We must not let ourselves, and especially children, fall into the paranoid trap of thinking that racism accounts for all that plagues us...The global realignment of work and wealth is, if anything, the bigger culprit.'

— Hugh Price, NUL

And in a clear rebuff to Farrakhan, Price singles out Jews for praise, calling them "longstanding allies" for civil rights.

"Many whites of good will have accompanied us on our long journey for racial, social and economic justice," Price says. "None has matched the Jewish community as long-distance runners in the civil rights movement."

The speech is also noteworthy for its dearth of references to goals that have been of primary interest to the black middle class: the setting aside of some government contracts for black-owned businesses and some scholarships for black students.

Hundreds of Western firefighters battle blazes in California, Oregon

Associated Press

Hundreds of firefighters from throughout the West battled blazes Saturday in the dry forests of northern California and Oregon, including one that forced the evacuation of campers.

A checkerboard of 75 lightning-sparked fires started during the week still burned across the Klamath National Forest of northern California on Saturday as some 2,000 firefighters sought to prevent them from merging into a firestorm.

"It's a race against time, a race against nature," to get a handle on the fires, said Pat Kaunert of the U.S. Forest Service.

An estimated 5,000 acres of forest had burned in the Klamath near the California-Oregon border. The fires did not threaten any inhabited areas but the Forest Service said they could endanger old-growth forest and habitat of some endangered animals.

Lightning also started fires during the week on the Deschutes and Siskiyou national forests in Oregon.

Still burning was the largest Oregon blaze, the Four Corners Fire south of Bend.

State lawmakers ponder dilemma of teen crime

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — State legislators from around the nation gathered Saturday to share problems and find remedies, but soon realized that quick fixes are hard to come by.

"Unfortunately, we haven't heard any real solutions today," said state Sen. Jerry Howard of Missouri, following a two-hour workshop on violence that focused on juveniles.

The workshop, chaired by state Rep. Ronald Cowell of Pennsylvania, was one of the first for the six-day convention of the National Conference of State Legislatures, attracting 6,000 legislators and guests.

Howard's frustration "underscores the reality that we're not likely to find any single program to solve a problem," said Cowell, a Democrat.

The roughly 100 legislators who attended the workshop appeared to listen most intently to C. Hearn Taylor, a juvenile court judge from New Orleans.

"We've got to have swifter, more certain, and longer punishment for the predator class," said Taylor, referring to what he called the 5 to 7 percent of juvenile offenders who must be taught that "the stove is hot so they won't touch it again."

At Taylor's urging, Louisiana recently increased the age until which juveniles can be kept locked up for violent crimes — from 21 to 31.

"We have been dealing with antiquated juvenile laws that are meant for a time when you were punished for joy riding in a car," Taylor said. "I've recently had three cases of murder by 13-year-olds."

While locked up, juveniles must be given concentrated school work, vocational training, "anything that will help rehabilitate them," he said.

Jerry McAfee, a minister from Minneapolis, argued that long sentences do not help ease crime.

"I guarantee it won't work if you make the age 41," the pastor said. "Kids are not afraid of time. And they're worse when they come out."

Part of the initiation in some gangs is to do jail time, he said.

Howard, a Democrat, agreed with McAfee that no one is afraid of prison "because nothing happens to them there.

"What ever happened to prison work gangs? Why can't we do something so they don't want to go to jail?" Howard asked.

Indianapolis Police Chief James Toler said his department is using computers to fight crime by pinpointing areas of the city with the highest concentrations of gun-related violence.

Those areas are then targeted by groups of officers with additional training in search and seizure. "The recovery of guns has gone up," he said.

Hillary has to shout to be heard above unhappy hecklers

SEATTLE (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton turned up the volume on her health-care pitch Saturday as she tried to drown out shouting protesters at an outdoor rally.

Mrs. Clinton had to turn her microphone on full blast to be heard over the chants and taunts of several hundred protesters galvanized by the passage last year of a state health-care plan similar to the Clinton plan.

"If you don't have the facts on your side, yell," she shouted over the distant roar of boos from opponents, who were kept behind waist-high crowd control fences near the rear of the Westlake Mall park in downtown.

Mrs. Clinton spoke to rally support for the health-care-for-all Clinton plan. The protesters exchanged shouts with a smaller number of supporters and then heckled the first lady.

One of the protesters' signs read: "If you like how they deliver the mail, you'll love how they deliver your baby." An opposing sign read: "Give them Health, Hillary."

A man carrying two guns at the rally was arrested by Seattle police. However, the man had a concealed weapons permit and no charges were filed. Assistant Special Agent Patrick Sullivan of the Secret Service said only that an investigation was continuing.

AID: Airlift could involve as many as 2,000 U.S. troops

(From 1A)

$100 million for airlifts of medicine, food and water, bringing total U.S. aid for the Rwandan crisis to $250 million since April.

"One hopes if the U.S. puts in all its muscle, things will start to change fairly dramatically by the end of next week," said Rupert Colville, a spokesman for the UNHCR in Geneva.

Much more help was needed with sanitation, Colville said.

Cholera spreads through contact with contaminated feces and the refugee camps need at least 60,000 latrines for adequate sanitation, Colville said. But no government has offered to provide or maintain latrines.

"It's no good purifying the water if there's feces lying all over the place," he said.

The refugees, members of the Hutu ethnic group, have crammed into sprawling, pestilential camps in Zaire to escape feared reprisals from the Tutsi-led Rwandan Patriotic Front, which last week defeated the government army after three months of battle.

The rebels launched their offensive in April after extremist Hutu militias started slaughtering Tutsis and others believed to oppose the Hutu regime.

The militias killed more than 500,000 Rwandans — some estimates say as many as 1 million — with axes, guns and machetes before they were driven into hiding by the RPF.

The refugees, mostly Hutus and numbering as many as 1.7 million in the past 10 days, were scared into flight by radio broadcasts from the former government saying the RPF planned to kill them.

'One hopes if the U.S. puts in all its muscle, things will start to change fairly dramatically by the end of next week.'

— Rupert Colville, a spokesman
U.N. High Commissioner on Refugees

U.N. special envoy Shaharyar Khan said there have been no reports of civilian abuse at the hands of the RPF.

Radio Rwanda, once the propaganda weapon of the Hutu government and now the voice of the RPF, has been airing hourly broadcasts promising the refugees security and urging them to return home.

But those who tried met a baffling roadblock.

Thousands of refugees walked back to the border Friday, but were stopped by Zairian authorities who closed the border for an unknown reason, UNHCR spokesman Ray Wilkinson told reporters in Goma.

French troops manning the humanitarian protection zone were believed to have ordered the border closed while they cleaned the area of hundreds of hand grenades and small weapons scattered along the road.

Two hand grenades exploded among the trapped refugees early Saturday, killing two men and a woman. Refugees said Zairian soldiers threw the grenades, but border guards blamed the explosion on children playing with munitions scattered along the border.

One U.S. C-141 transport plane left Rhein-Main Air Base in Germany for Goma, and another headed to Entebbe, Uganda. The planes carried water purification equipment and forklifts to handle relief cargoes in coming days.

At least 10 transport planes were dispatched from the United States for Rhein-Main to refuel and go on to Africa, said U.S. Navy Commander Ron Morse, spokesman for the U.S. European Command in Stuttgart, Germany.

A U.S. assessment team met with U.N. and French officials in Goma on Saturday, and a U.S. Navy P-3C reconnaissance aircraft began an aerial survey of the refugee zone to help plan relief efforts, Morse said.

Morse explained that sending some flights to Uganda would allow the flexibility to send aid wherever it was needed, in case large numbers of refugees return to Rwanda.

Going to Uganda also will avoid the local officials in Goma who are demanding cash payoffs to allow planes to land. The officials demanded $1,000 to allow a Red Cross plane to land Wednesday.

Germany added two transport planes to the one already shuttling relief supplies from Nairobi, Kenya, to Goma. It also promised 17 water-purification plants.

GRANT: MISD to get more than $160,000

received a $161,750 federal Inclusion Grant, primarily to educate teachers on how to include special education students into the regular classrooms.

"MISD was notified that we were selected as a project site for inclusion of the disabled in general education," said Ruby Morris, Ed.D., MISD's special education coordinator.

"Most of the grant will go toward educating teachers about inclusion; about $60,000 will (be used to) construct an elevator at Midland High School, and the rest of the money will pay for computers and supplies."

The Midland High School elevator will be built on the outside of the building and won't interfere with present classroom space, according to MISD architect and plant services director James Riggen. It will be built in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

"The elevator will cost about $30,000," Riggen said. "The additional $30,000 will build the outside building to house the elevator shaft."

Ms. Morris said the elevator has been sorely needed for many disabled students who live in the MHS district, but have not attended the two-story high school because of access problems.

She said the grant will also fund three positions: a part-time facilitator to assist teachers, principals and parents with inclusion; a content master teacher; and a teacher aid.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said the facilitator will act as an ombudsman, independent of the special education department "to work with parents, teachers and anyone else involved in the mainstreaming process."

"There is a lot of advance planning and preparation involved, so that the teacher will feel prepared and so the special education student wouldn't be a disruption and wouldn't be put into an unacceptable situation," Baressi said.

He noted that the district worked in collaboration with the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens to research district needs.

"So, this really involved a broader-based situation," he said.

He said the inclusion inservice training is already under way.

Ms. Morris, who applied for the grant, said it "means a lot to teachers and special education students."

The special education coordinator said the district was judged on a 100-point system.

"The staff development was something we really needed. And I think being chosen as an inclusion site is probably unique to West Texas," she said.

Businessman adds to reward in Simpson case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A New Jersey businessman said Saturday he's putting up $250,000 to try to prove O.J. Simpson didn't kill his ex-wife and her friend.

Bernard Gimbel, a real estate magnate, traveled to Los Angeles to offer the reward for information that clears Simpson in the slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman — and helps catch the killer.

"It's a travesty of justice what they're doing to O.J.," Gimbel said. "If it was anyone other than a high-profile person they never would have arrested him."

Simpson has offered his own $500,000 reward for information leading to "the real killer." Gimbel, 54, said he hoped others will add enough money to bring the total reward to as much as $3 million.

O.J. case puts DNA in spotlight

■ In DNA testing, scientists use a person's unique genetic makeup to match him to or eliminate him from a set of circumstances.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

DNA used to be just an obscure topic you promptly forgot about after studying it for six weeks in a high school or college science course.

However, the arrest of O.J. Simpson in connection with the murder of his ex-wife and her friend has changed that.

While the prosecution may not have much hard evidence — such as witnesses or a murder weapon — to tie Simpson to the deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, they have those 10 hairs, bloody gloves and DNA.

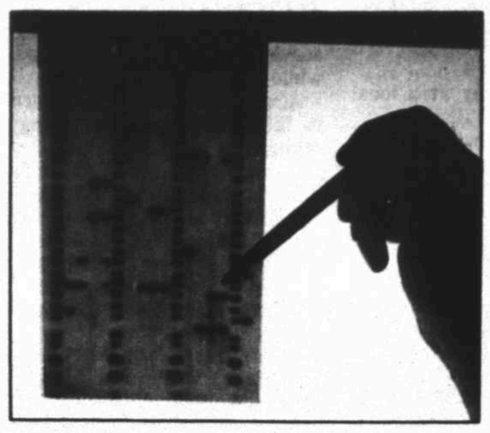

And, it's that forensic evidence that has been argued over and talked about by a parade of experts and just about everyone else in the country.

However, unless you are a forensics scientist or a biology teacher, DNA may still be a fuzzy concept.

So, what is DNA and why are those tests so important to this and other cases?

DNA is a way of either matching a person or eliminating them from a set of circumstances

Police arrest three

KILGORE — Three suspects were held Saturday in the deaths of four people gunned down as they played pool in a neighborhood bar, police said. Ray Don Mosley, 31, and his nephew, Daroyce Lamont Mosley, 19, were arrested on capital murder charges and were being held in the Gregg County Jail, Kilgore police spokesman Jerdy Wolverton said in a statement. Both men are from Kilgore. A juvenile also was apprehended and was being held at the Gregg County Juvenile Center, Wolverton said./3B

Cotton crops thirst for rain

Associated Press

LAMESA — Day by scorching day on cotton farms across the South Plains, about the only thing growing is gloom.

The cotton — after enduring hail, 116-degree heat, high winds and the burns of blowing sand — faces yet another menace: Lack of rain.

Non-irrigated cotton across the region looks scrawny and wilted. Experts speculate at least half a million dryland acres already have failed.

Sometimes it rains in August, farmer Dave Nix pointed out.

"I don't know how much it's going to help," said Nix, who planted about 2,000 acres of cotton in Dawson and Gaines counties this spring. "I think a lot of this cotton is already through."

But Nix said folks around Lamesa, about 60 miles south of Lubbock, aren't abandoning their crops yet.

"You talk about it. You mention it, then you talk about something else. You can't just dwell on bad news."

Lack of rain also has hurt corn, sorghum, oats and peanuts in various parts of the state.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports very short moisture levels in parts of the South Plains, far West Texas, West Central Texas and Southeast Texas. Moisture conditions are short from the Panhandle to North Texas, East Texas, Central Texas and the coastal bend.

Around Lubbock, the world's largest cotton patch, with 3.5 million acres sown, fields were drier than normal at planting. Besides some spotty thunderstorms, it hasn't rained significantly since May.

"We're hurting," acknowledged Cochran County extension agent Sam Field.

Field said the areas near Morton, about 60 miles west of Lubbock, finally received almost 1 inch of rain last week.

"This little drink might help it survive, but I don't know how it's going to help out the yield," he said.

Thirsty cotton starts shedding bolls to survive.

Town battles back after loss of super collider

By Linda Leavell
Associated Press Writer

WAXAHACHIE — T.M. Harper can talk about land.

He remembers who held parcels of it decades ago. He knows where farms bustled before their owners lost interest. He also can point out the acres other families owned before the super collider came to town.

"I'm too emotional about land, I guess," he sighs.

Still living in the white frame house where he was born 68 years ago, Harper has farmed cotton and corn all his life. His land in Palmer, a rural community near Waxahachie, has been in the family since 1885.

Some of his friends lost their property and their homes to the super collider. Harper and his wife, Wynell, consider themselves lucky to have surrendered only 47 of their 759 acres.

The $11 billion physics project was killed by Congress in October, but the Harpers' legal troubles linger. Since the state insisted upon taking the land, the Harpers have been in litigation concerning their compensation.

The Harpers insist that they didn't oppose the project. The collider improved sales at their turn-of-the-century hardware store, and other businesses were profiting as well.

They just hated losing their beautiful land.

"So they scrapped (the project) and we're still fighting," Mrs. Harper said. "It's the principle of the thing."

Buck Jordan says he knows the Harpers' loss. The Waxahachie Chamber of Lake Ivie pipeline nears fall completion

Water is the essence of life.

It is the most common of Earth's substances and is among the most treasured and most wasted. And water particularly is valued and coveted in times of drought and thirst.

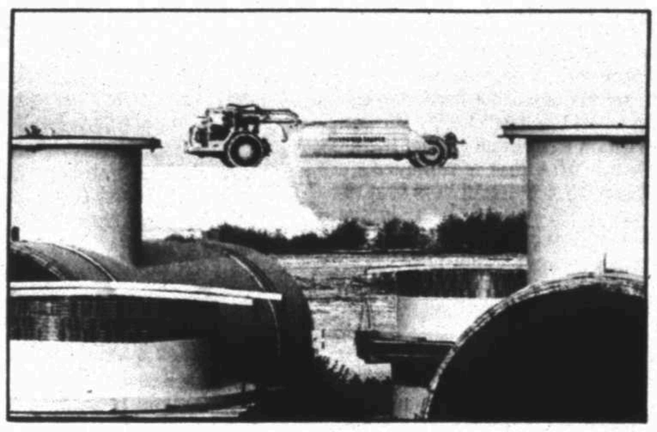

Water is a limited but recycled and recyclable resource, mainly through evaporation and rainfall. There is no more water on Earth than there was eons ago.

"Some of the water that you and I are drinking today, Julius Caesar drank back when he was alive" more than 2,000 years ago, said Ken Jones, utilities director for the city.

Only about 3 percent of the world's water supply is fresh water. The rest, 97 percent, is saltwater or sea water. And most of the fresh water is tied up in icecaps and glaciers.

In its early years, dating back to the town's founding in 1885, Midland satisfied its thirst for water through wind-

Study's findings on Mexican food didn't surprise anyone

Ott

OK, everyone together now: Are you going to give up your cheese enchiladas now that a new study has informed you that — surprise! — Mexican food contains a whole bunch of fat?

NOOOOOO.

That's what I thought.

And, while we're on the subject, here's another question.

Was anyone out there really surprised to learn that tacos and burritos are not exactly the choice foods of health freaks?

I mean, really. Who in their right mind says, "Gee, I feel like having something light and healthy today. And, a big plate of chili rellenos might be just the answer."

Hey, research people, wake up! We know Mexican food is fattening, but we don't care. We eat it because it tastes good. That's a weird concept, I know, but it is one you might want to try some time.

Perhaps Julie Sherrier, a spokeswoman for the Texas Restaurant Association, summed it up best when she said, "People go out to eat to have fun. They go out to eat to indulge themselves."

That's right, Julie. There's already enough stress in life. Occasionally, a person needs to cut loose and have some fun. And if that involves eating three cheese enchiladas with refried beans on the side, so be it. The world's not going to end. The person in question is just going to gain a couple of pounds. If he will go back to salads for a few days, everything will even out.

Is that so difficult to understand?

Why do people spend good money to learn the obvious, anyway? If these researchers really wanted to find out if Mexican food was fattening, all they had to do was ask me. I would have provided them with the exact same answer that their own study did, and, better yet, my services would have come a whole lot cheaper.

And, it would have been a far simpler study, too. In fact, it would have gone something like this:

Step 1: I position the eggheads — who obviously don't have enough sense to come in out of the rain — directly in front of a giant plate of my world-famous cheese enchiladas and say, "Now eat."

Step 2: Once concluded, I look them straight in the eye and say, "Do you have a sudden desire to wallow around in the mud like a big fat pig?"

Step 3: They lean back in their chairs, groan loudly, belch a couple of times and say, "Yes, as a matter of fact, we do."

Step 4: (And this is the crucial part.) I arch an eyebrow and in my most scholarly tone say, "That's because Mexican food contains an unhealthy amount of fat and grease and cheese and salt."

Step 5: They look at me in awe and say, "Why, that's brilliant."

Step 6: I say, "Yeah, I know. Now, that'll be $50. For another $100 I'll prove that eating greasy french fries will sometimes give teen-agers acne."

Ahh, the life of a mad scientist can be so rewarding.

DEATHS

Allyne Harrell

Services for Allyne Dewitt Harrell are to be at 2 p.m. Monday at Greater St. Luke's AME Church with the Rev. I.C. Cooper officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Bill C. Thomas Funeral Home.

Harrell

She died Wednesday at a local hospital after a short illness.

Survivors include two sons, Sylvester Harrell Jr. and David Harrell, both of Midland; three daughters, Velma J. Brooks of Austin, Tenna M. Harrell and Sheilia B. Anders, both of Midland; five sisters, Luby M. Whiteside, Elaine Banks, Elvera Bryant and Thelma Smith, all of Midland, and Annie Lowe of Port Arthur; a brother, Wesley Dewitt Jr. of Midland; seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers are to be Sylvester Harrell Jr., Gorden Norris, Michael Wallace, Audrey Mayfield, Ricky Jackson and Michael Johnson.

Honorary pallbearers are to be Terrance Anders, Montrey Anders, Jorden Golden, Craig Harrell, Garon Patterson, Ike Terrell, Daniel Washington, Ikie Anders, M.C. Johnson and Tellas Lampley.

Lois Crow

Services for Lois Crow, 68, are pending with Bill C. Thomas Funeral Home.

She died Saturday in Kenedy after an illness.

Survivors include her husband, Harlan Crow of Kenedy; two sons, Kennith Crow and Jerald Crow, both of Kenedy; one brother, Bobby F. Adams of Odessa; three sisters, Pat Morris of Midland, Inez Miller of Odessa and Juanita Fisher of San Angelo; and five grandchildren.

Frank Thompson

Services for Frank L. Thompson, 73, are to be at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Friday.

He was born Aug. 2, 1920, in Oxford, Miss. He was reared and educated in Oxford and Marks, Miss.

He moved to Houston when he was 19 and returned to Marks before joining the U.S. Army. He served in Hawaii and Okinawa while in the service.

After his discharge, he returned to Mississippi before moving to Midland in 1950.

He was the owner of Acme Auto Service in Midland for 35 years.

Survivors include his wife, Dorothy Thompson of Midland; a daughter, Frankie McCafferty of Huntsville; two stepdaughters, Janet Pena of El Paso and Ludene Reeves of Fort Stockton; three stepsons, Terry Walters of Arlington, Maxey Walters of Alvia and Robbie Walters of Odessa; three grandchildren; nine stepgrandchildren and four great-stepgrandchildren.

Virginia Bowers

AUSTIN — Virginia W. Bowers, 80, of Austin, mother of Midlander Katherine B. Arrell, died Friday. No services are planned. Arrangements are under the direction of Weed-Corley Funeral Home in Austin.

Other survivors include her husband, Raymond V. Bowers of Austin; another daughter, Sally B. Witliff of Austin; a brother, Allen Wallis of Washington, D.C., and four grandchildren.

ODESSA — Services for Arch Wood, 85, are pending with Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

He died Saturday at an Odessa hospital.

IVIE: Midland awaits completion of fresh-water pipeline mill-drawn well water.

In the 1920s, the city developed the Cole Park Water Field for the city's water supply. Later water sources were the Rosedale, Hogan Park and McMillen fields.

Today, the community of 90,000 people draws most of its water from the Paul Davis Water Field north of town in Martin County and from man-made reservoirs — Lake Thomas near Snyder and Lake Spence near Robert Lee.

By 1995, the city's 430 miles of fresh-water lines will be taking on a fourth water source: Lake Ivie, near Ballinger in west Central Texas about 150 miles east of Midland.

"We have plenty of water," Jones said. But he cautioned people to "use it wisely and don't waste it. It costs money. And you don't waste money. Well . . . some people do."

Midland's households pay $2.15 per thousand gallons of tap water and get a 10 percent discount if they pay their water bills early.

In turn, the city pays the Big Spring-based Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD) — which owns lakes Thomas, Spence and Ivie — $1.03 per thousand gallons for the raw lake water from Thomas, created in the 1950s, and Spence, developed in the 1960s. The city spends an additional 48 cents per thousand gallons to treat the water in the its water-purification plant in northwest Midland.

Other costs are incurred in distributing the water through the 430 miles of water lines.

The city pays University Lands 24 cents per thousand gallons for Paul Davis Field water and spends another 24 cents per thousand gallons to pump it to Midland.

Built into the water bills is Midland's share of the cost of constructing the $70 million Lake Ivie and its Freese Dam. Midland's share of the cost of the Ivie pipeline has not yet been figured into water bills.

Midland owns about 16 percent of Lake Ivie water and about one-third of the pipeline.

The 157 miles of 60-inch- and 53-inch-diameter pipeline from Lake Ivie to Midland by way of San Angelo is nearing completion, said Joe Pickle, CRMWD spokesman.

The laying of the pipeline — started in mid-1992 by John D. Stephens Inc. of Georgia — is to be completed in the fall.

Overall cost of the project, originally estimated at $115 million, will be about $124 million, Pickle said. Cost of the pipe and laying of the pipeline is about $76 million.

Other costs are in building the eight electric-powered pump stations to lift the water the 1,400 feet in elevation from Lake Ivie to Midland and in buying the right-of-ways for the pipeline.

By Tuesday, Stephens' 200-ton crawling ditcher, which digs 12-foot-deep trenches, is to be at a point near State Highway 349, about eight miles south of Midland.

Pipe will be fitted into a tunnel beneath the highway. Pipe is also being laid in tunnels beneath Interstate 20 and Business 80 south of Midland International Airport by a caterpillar-like ditcher trudging its way to the 100-million gallon reservoir under contruction just west of the airport near Farm-to-Market Road 1788.

D.E. Rice Construction Co. of Borger is building the reservoir's 24-foot high dike and lining the basin with a plastic lining overlaid with soil cement, Pickle said.

The $2.26 million project — which is at the site of a post-World War II feedlot — will be 0.7 miles in its perimeter.

"It appears now that the project will be functionally complete by the year's end, which will put it ahead of schedule by two or three months," Pickle said.

By 1995, both Midland and Odessa will be taking Lake Ivie water from the CRMWD reservoir. Midland will be blending Ivie water with water from lakes Thomas and Spence by piping Ivie water in a 36-inch pipeline to the city's Lake Peggy Sue, which holds water from lakes Thomas and Spence.

The blend will make for more potable water.

"If you drink the tap water, you will think this new water is wonderful," Jones said. " If you already are drinking bottled water, you probably will still have to drink bottled water."

About 2½ years ago, Midland built Lake Peggy Sue — a 94-million-gallon reservoir — west of Green Tree to hold water in reserve.

Lake Spence water is stored in Moss Creek Lake east of Big Spring before it is mixed with Lake Thomas water at Big Spring and then piped to the Midland-Odessa area.

Additional water from the Paul Davis Field, about 25 miles north of Midland and developed in 1955, is piped directly to the city's water-purification plant.

In addition to the Paul Davis Field, Midland owns water rights below the T-Bar Ranch in Winkler County. That field is not yet developed.

"The wells, after you pump that water out, it (the water) is gone," Jones said. "Lake Ivie is a renewable resource. We pump it, drink it, and it rains. And we've got it back.

"It keeps coming back. So it's much more valuable to us than the wells."

In the year-round average, Midland uses about 20 million gallons of water a day. The current summer usage is about 32 million gallons daily, although the peak one-day high consumption in Midland's sizzling 110-plus-degree weather was 42 million gallons.

"We pull water out of that (Peggy Sue) reservoir to meet the demand," Jones said. "Without that reservoir, this summer we would have been in trouble."

Midland is taking about 10 million gallons a day from Lake Spence and 5 million gallons from Lake Thomas, which has better-quality water.

When water starts flowing from Lake Ivie next year, Midland will have the option of taking 20 million gallons of Ivie water a day.

The first 48 miles of the 60-inch Ivie pipeline to San Angelo is to carry up to 90 million gallons a day. San Angelo is to take 25 million gallons.

From San Angelo to Midland-Odessa, the 109 miles of 53-inch pipe would carry up to 65 million gallons to the Midland-Odessa CRMWD reservoir west of the airport. Midland may take 20 million gallons. The remaining 45 million gallons would go to Odessa and other water customers.

Since Midland owns its quota of Ivie water, Midland's cost of Ivie water will be in power and maintenance expenses to pump the water uphill to Midland.

"The district will probably give us more Lake Ivie water than what we're contractually obligated to get so that they can improve the quality," Jones said.

"Before we got Lake Ivie water, Paul Davis would have run out of water in 2005," Jones said.

But now with projected cutbacks in well-water use, the Paul Davis Field has an expected flow life through 2030.

In the T-Bar Ranch Field, Midland has an estimated 50-year supply of water.

While the Lake Ivie pipeline is being completed, the Midland City Council will be considering the tertiary treatment of wastewater in an effort to recycle water.

Treated wastewater is pumped through a 16-mile pipeline to eight farm-related irrigation lagoons southeast of Midland near the Spraberry community.

"We've got a plan under consideration right now" to reclaim and purify much of that wastewater through a "combination of reverse osmosis, evaporation, and pasteurization," Jones said.

The reclamation would be in concert with a proposed gas-fired electrical generator. The economy would be in the use of inexpensive "dirty" gas not used in interstate commerce.

A "lot of water" would be needed to cool down the generator, Jones explained.

Meanwhile, throughout the nation and world, "Most people flush it (water) down the stool," Jones said. "It goes in the river, and the next city down river recycles it. That's been happening all through mankind."

DNA: Testing allows scientists to match or eliminate person by their unique genetic makeup, according to Mark Pace, clinical laboratory manager at Harrison and Associates Forensics Laboratories.

The laboratory works with local law enforcement in getting DNA samples for testing and helping analyze the results.

"Very simply, you take a person's DNA and compare it to DNA taken from a crime scene or from a child, if it is a paternity test," Pace said. "You look for a match in different characteristics of the DNA."

DNA is a double-stranded molecule that contains the genetic information of an individual. It determines the different patterns found in each person's genetic makeup. It can be extracted from bodily fluids, hair follicles, skin, fingernails, bone marrow and the pulp of the tooth.

"Bone marrow and dental pulp are especially good if someone has been dead awhile, because both are protected from contamination," Pace said.

There are two DNA tests. The first is the basic DNA test done on a specimen. If technicians cannot extract enough DNA from a specimen, a test called PCR (Polymerace Chain Reaction) is used to amplify the DNA that is removed.

When DNA is tested, it is first removed from cells present in the specimen taken and then cut into smaller pieces. The DNA fragments are then separated and loaded into a gel medium. An electric field is applied to the gel, and the fragments arrange themselves according to size and are transferred to a nylon membrane.

Probes — or tests — of the different DNA fragments are then taken. Each probe analyzes different characteristics of the DNA — called Restriction Fragment Length Polymorphisms (RFLPs).

Every person has defining RFLPs that are inherited biologically.

"What these probes do is find the RFLPs and compare them to those in DNA taken, say, from a rape victim," Pace said.

RFLPs show up as dots on an X-ray. Each dot represents a different person.

In a paternity case, for example, dots representing the mother, child and male being tested for paternity are shown. If in three probes, the male's RFLPs match that of the child's, he is determined to be the father.

"In Texas, three probes are usually judged to be enough to effectively eliminate anyone else or prove the person is not who we are looking for," Pace said. "Some states require more."

Unlike fingerprints, which are unique to each person, similar DNA patterns can be shared by more than one person. However, each probe that is taken narrows the number.

"When you get to, say, seven probes and this person shares seven different RFLPs with a sample taken from a murder scene or a rape victim, you can eliminate anyone else," Pace said. "DNA testing results can go above 99 percent certainty."

And, what of that other 1 percent?

"If you have someone who has the DNA of 1 in 2 million people and you have matched other things, such as blood type, that 1 percent is a really slim number," Pace said.

TOWN: Some residents lost property, homes to collider

(From 1B)

Commerce's president and chief executive officer had to tell families to leave their homes for the good of the collider. It was one of many obstacles in attracting the project to this town of 18,000 people.

Now the project is gone. Jordan and City Manager Bob Sokoll are disappointed, but they aren't predicting Waxahachie's demise.

"They wanted us to say this is the worst thing that's ever happened to Waxahachie and it's now going to be a ghost town. It's never going to be a ghost town. We're always going to have a good economy here," Sokoll said.

Manufacturing and agriculture retain a strong presence in Waxahachie. More than 20 movies, including "Places in the Heart" and "Tender Mercies," have been filmed here. The city also generates tourism with its antique shops and Gingerbread Trail of old homes.

James Utsey, a member of the Ellis County Association of Realtors, said the scientists and other super collider workers enriched — but didn't define — the community.

"It wasn't like (the collider) changed the whole philosophy or role of the city," he said.

Few collider families actually lived in Waxahachie, preferring the south Dallas communities of DeSoto and Lancaster. So the city hasn't endured a mass exodus since October.

"We didn't experience that tremendous amount of growth in residential homes that DeSoto did," Jordan said. "At this point in time, we're probably kind of glad we didn't see a great influx of people into our town."

George Singleton, chairman and chief executive officer of Citizens National Bank, said most collider workers did their banking and other business outside Waxahachie, but "a lot of people were scared to death" about the project's cancellation.

"I thought that we would really suffer as a result of that. But it hasn't happened," Singleton said.

Ironically, the local economy got a little kick as the state ultimately ended up paying $3,000 to $4,000 per acre of land — about twice its value — and the families were forced to buy new homes and property, Singleton said.

While the state and the Department of Energy work on dividing the assets of the defunct collider, Waxahachie officials are looking toward the new projects that might be developed.

Officials are discussing whether the collider's partially completed linear accelerator could become a cancer hospital. It would be only the second such proton-beam treatment facility in the country, with the first in Loma Linda, Calif.

Other possibilities include converting the central facility into an educational center, continuing the study of superconductivity or expanding cryogenics research.

POLICE REPORTS

Arrest

Officers arrested a man Saturday morning in connection with a Thursday shooting that left a man hospitalized with a head wound.

Melvin Jerome Hill, 18, was arrested at 11:46 a.m. Saturday at his mother's house in the 100 block of North Lamesa Road, according to a police report.

Hill's mother called police to tell them her son wanted to turn himself in, according to the report. Officers said he and his mother were cooperative with police efforts.

Hill was wanted in connection with the shooting of Nickolus Hinojos, 21. Police said Hill and Hinojos got into an argument over a car-door dent.

The shooting allegedly occurred when Hinojos' car door hit Hill's car door about 11:30 p.m. in the parking lot of Garden Court Apartments, 2301 N. Pecos St.

Hinojos was shot in the right temple with a small caliber handgun and underwent surgery Thursday night.

His condition was upgraded Saturday from serious to satisfactory.

Hill was charged with attempted murder and remains in the Midland County Detention Center. He was held without bond.

gy at Texas Tech University, expects an average harvest of 100-150 pounds per acre on non-irrigated fields this year. Average is 250-280 pounds, Krieg said.

Irrigated cotton, meanwhile, should remain in good shape as long as water wells hold out through the summer, he said.

"If we don't get a rain real soon," Krieg said, "we won't have enough water to keep up."

Police hold three suspects in quadruple killing at Kilgore bar

KILGORE (AP) — Three suspects were held Saturday in the deaths of four people gunned down as they played pool in a neighborhood bar, police said.

Ray Don Mosley, 31, and his nephew, Daroyce Lamont Mosley, 19, were arrested on capital murder charges and were being held in the Gregg County Jail, Kilgore police spokesman Jerdy Wolverton said in a statement.

Both men are from Kilgore.

A juvenile also was apprehended and was being held at the Gregg County Juvenile Center, Wolverton said.

The adults, suspected of committing the East Texas town's second multiple murder in a little more than a decade, were arraigned and bond was set at $1 million each, Wolverton said.

In Thursday night's killings, gunmen burst into Katie's Lounge, killing four people and critically injuring a fifth.

A waitress who had been shot five times alerted police when she crawled to a telephone to call 911, according to a former bar employee and family friend.

The dead were identified as Luva Stevens Congleton, 68; Patricia Slack Colter, 53; her husband Duane Ray Colter, 44, all of Kilgore; and Alvin Lewis "Buddy" Waller, 54, of nearby Henderson.

Sandra Kay Cash of Kilgore was in critical condition at a Longview hospital Saturday. Wolverton said Ms. Cash was doing "as good as can be expected," but that the hospital wasn't revealing her name.

The victims were frequent patrons of Katie's, a quiet bar beside State Highway 135 in the oilpatch town of 11,000.

The bar had reported only minor disturbances in the past, but on Thursday night, police were called to Katie's a few hours before the robbery "on a suspicious-person call," Wolverton said.

"They talked with him, and that was it," he said.

Wolverton said police have not determined whether that incident had any link to the shooting and robbery, in which an undetermined amount of cash was taken from the bar.

Mary Jane Albritton, a former employee of Katie's and friend of Mrs. Cash's family, said she visited the wounded woman Friday in the Longview hospital.

"She was hit five times, so she was in pretty bad shape. She managed to crawl to the phone and called police," Ms. Albritton told The Dallas Morning News.

Katie Moore, who has owned the bar for seven years, could hardly speak about the tragedy.

"I'm just devastated," she said in a brief telephone interview. "I am just tore up all to pieces. I lost four of my best friends, and my waitress is not expected to live."

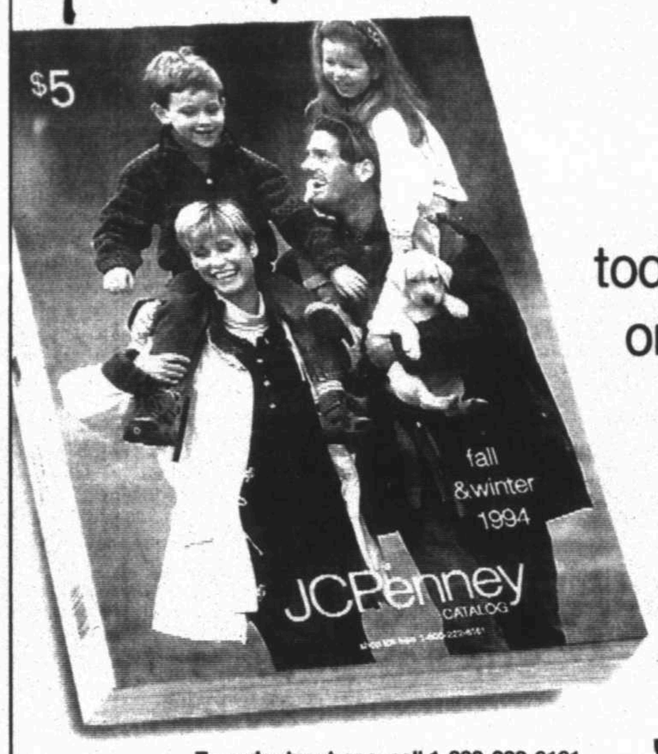

"These folks are like the rest of the crowd that went to Katie's, mainly older people that's been around Kilgore for years and years and years. Most of them watched me grow up," Ms. Albritton said.

"This happening in Katie's beer joint, it's just a shock. She's got a nice quiet place. Older people go there, and everybody minds their own business," she said.

Kilgore residents are uneasy.

Woman's attorneys hope ex-spa tycoon's arrest leads to criminal charges in her attack

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for a woman left paralyzed in a 1980 shooting hope the recent arrest of her former lover will lead to criminal charges accusing him of masterminding the sensational attack.

Richard Minns was arrested on passport fraud charges last week at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport when he got off briefly from a plane that was flying from Mexico to Canada.

Minns, founder of the President & First Lady Health Club chain, left the country more than 12 years ago after his ex-girlfriend, Barbra Piotrowski, was shot outside a Houston doughnut shop by two hired gunmen.

Four people were convicted and sent to prison for the shooting. Minns, 64, was never charged in the attack, but he was sued by Ms. Piotrowski.

A jury ruled he was responsible for the attack and a judge ordered him to pay her $32 million. That judgment is still under appeal.

Houston attorney Dick DeGuerin, who won the judgment for her, said Minns' arrest brings new life to attempts to collect the money. His client, now 41, has changed her name to Janni Smith and lives with her husband in California.

DeGuerin said he understands that when Minns was arrested he was carrying information that could help determine the size and location of his financial assets. If the judgment is upheld, that information could prove to be crucial in making Minns pay up.

But DeGuerin and Dallas attorney Steve Sumner, a newcomer to the longstanding legal fight, also hope that criminal charges will be brought against Minns.

"With Minns in custody now, there are opportunities to hold him accountable and bring him to justice both civilly and criminally," Sumner said. "He has skirted our judicial system for all these years and it's quite a relief that he is now going to have be held accountable in both arenas."

Minns' attorney, Michael Ware of Fort Worth, has declined to comment about the case. But he has emphasized that the passport fraud charges do not relate to the shooting.

Federal prosecutors handling the passport fraud case have declined to say if any other charges against Minns are being pursued. Yet Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes told the Houston Chronicle his office will not prosecute Minns in the attack.

"We don't have a prayer of getting anything," he said last week.

DeGuerin and Sumner believe otherwise.

"Anybody that has followed this case would have to conclude that the only person that was behind the shooting of Barbra Piotrowski was Richard Minns," said Sumner, who represents Ms. Piotrowski in a $50 million lawsuit filed last year alleging the Houston Police Department could have prevented the shooting.

"I've seen many cases brought by the Harris County District Attorney's Office with far less evidence than this," DeGuerin said. "My belief is that there is ample corroborating evidence. There's no doubt that he's guilty. There's no other person with a motive — and he fled the country when he realized we were going to pursue him like a dog on a bone.

"Richard Minns doesn't deserve anything better than spending the rest of his life in prison," DeGuerin said.

A federal judge ruled the statute of limitations expired on the lawsuit, but Sumner has appealed that decision.

The shooting occurred Oct. 20, 1980, several months after Ms. Piotrowski had walked out on Minns. Minns later sold his business interests and left the country.

When he was arrested, Minns was returning to Vancouver after attending a family reunion in Cancun, Mexico, DeGuerin said, adding that authorities knew he would be on the flight.

Minns had been charged in an eight-count federal indictment in Houston in March 1993.

Friends, relatives remember bar slaying victims

KILGORE (AP) — Curtis Waller watched tearfully as his younger brother's body was wheeled out of Katie's Lounge and loaded into a hearse.

His brother, Alvin Lewis "Buddy" Waller, was one of four people playing pool in the quiet Kilgore bar late Thursday night when gunmen opened fire, killing them all.

Alvin Waller, a self-employed oilfield worker, was, "the best, one in a million. He was never in no trouble, not ever. He never did anyone no harm," his crying brother said Friday.

Although he had been divorced from Patricia Colter for more than a year, Alvin Waller and Mrs. Colter remained friends.

Thursday night, he went out with Mrs. Colter and her current husband, Duane Colter. They were with a friend, Luva "Glynn" Congleton. All of them died.

Sandra Cash, a waitress at the bar, remained hospitalized Saturday with multiple gunshot wounds.

Mary Jane Albritton, a former employee of Katie's and friend of Mrs. Cash's family, said she visited the wounded woman Friday in the Longview hospital.

"She was hit five times, so she was in pretty bad shape. She managed to crawl to the phone and called police," Ms. Albritton said.

Duane Colter's brother, Kenneth Thompson, said the couple was happier than ever been just before Thursday night.

"They were just getting their lives together," Thompson said, adding that Duane Colter worked at Kilgore Ceramics and "never did nothing to no one."

A woman who worked with Ms. Cash previously at a Kilgore convenience store recalled her former co-worker.

"That girl was real straight even though she worked at a club. She was just there to make money. There was no motive to shoot her that I can think of," said the woman, who refused to give her name to the Tyler Telegraph.

The woman said she knew all the victims, except Ms. Congleton.

"I had known them since they were teen-agers. They were just real hard working people," she said. "They didn't even go to clubs. They weren't a bar crowd. They just wanted to go out that night and have a few beers and they must have gotten caught in the crossfire."

The woman said Katie's is a respectable nightspot, but sits in a crime-ridden neighborhood.

"That little bar over there is right in the middle of crack (cocaine) city," she said. "Whoever did it was probably hyped up on something."

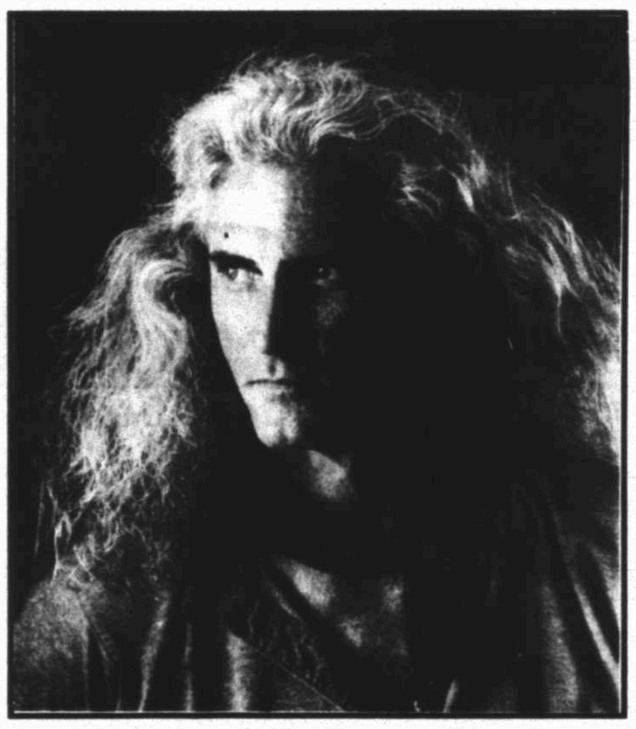

Ray Don Mosley, 31, and Daroyce Lamont Mosley, 19, were arrested on capital murder charges and were being held in the Gregg County Jail, Kilgore police spokesman Jerdy Wolverton said in a statement.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Freshman Orientation begins this week at MC

By Elise Coombes

In his last column, H.A. Tuck, a 19-year veteran of column writing at Midland College, said that he had written "come register at Midland College" as many ways as possible over the years.

Coombes

For the last several weeks I have been trying to think of something profound and witty to say in my first column. But, the truth is, it is time to come register at Midland College. What follows may not be profound, but the information should be useful to every first-time college student getting ready to register at Midland College this fall.

Attending this week's Freshmen Orientation sessions may not guarantee an A in your first college class, but the information you get from the sessions may get you to the right class at the right time on your first day of college, and that can be a real accomplishment.

For many students, the hardest part of the journey to a college education is taking the first step on campus. To ease the transition from high school to college, Midland College Student Services' personnel will devote Monday through Thursday to four sessions of Freshmen Orientation designed to help new college students learn all they need to know about putting their best foot forward at Midland College. Sessions cover everything from the registration process to understanding the terminology (for instance, "R" in the schedule stands for Thursday).

All new students are encouraged to attend orientation even if they still are not sure about their plans for the fall. These are academic advising sessions only and not registration days. Counselor Ricardo Saldana said the message at these sessions is universal in higher education. Discussion will include information about getting a bachelor's degree and which colleges have certain majors for students planning to transfer to a four-year school.

Students are asked, but not required, to bring high school transcripts with them to orientation sessions, Saldana said.

He also encourages students, unsure about what they want to study in college, to think about their answer to this question: "What job would you like to have 10 years from now?" The answer to that question will help Midland College counselors advise students about programs offered at Midland College and the basic courses they need to take.

Students should also be prepared to ask questions of the more than 15 Midland College employees who will present information at the sessions. Information about every area of the college will be provided, including how to apply for financial aid, scheduling classes, finding a job on and off campus and when and how to buy books.

One of the main topics will cover the Texas Academic Skills Test (TASP).

Saldana called the test one of the state's most misunderstood programs. Although the state does, in most circumstances, require students to take the test before acquiring a certain number of semester hours, Saldana stressed that TASP is not an entrance exam. Learning when the TASP test can be waived, what TASP scores mean and when remediation is required can save students a lot of headaches next semester.

Besides ending the uncertainty many students have about college, attending an orientation session has other advantages. Students can have more time to visit with counselors and instructors to decide which classes fit both their career goals and their schedule. Also, at the end of each session, students will be issued a time permit to register for fall classes on August 24 — a day set aside for freshmen registration.

For students interested in student life at Midland College, information about playing intramural sports, joining the Student Senate or becoming a member of one of the college's many clubs also will be provided. For students looking for a job, information about the college's Job Placement Office will be available.

Although the sessions run from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. each day, students need attend only one session. Students are assigned a day to attend based on the first initial of their last name. S-Z attend the Monday session; A-E, the Tuesday session; M-R, the Wednesday session; and F-L, the Thursday session. However, Saldana encouraged students to attend a session even if it is not their assigned day.

For more information about Freshmen Orientation, call the Student Services Office at 685-4501. Students may attend a session by coming to the Midland College Student Center at 8 a.m. Monday, July 25, through Thursday, July 28.

Midland College's annual Cheerleader Camp begins Monday at the P.E. Building. The award-winning Chaparral Cheerleading squad will direct the camp, teaching cheers, stunts, chants, tumbling and dance routines.

The camp is open to both boys and girls in grades 1-12. Cost is $55. Those who wish to attend the camp, but did not pre-register, can register Monday in the P.E. Building. Tommy Ramos, Midland College intramurals coordinator, is the sponsor/coach.

Elise Coombes is public relations director for Midland College.

Midlander participates in AARP teleconference on health care

Staff Report

EL PASO — Naomi Norton of Midland was one of 5,000 American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) volunteers who last week participated in an 80-city teleconference that focused on the future of the nation's health-care system.

"All of us working for the enactment of health-care reform are tired of the misinformation that is confusing the American people," Ms. Norton said, following the teleconference. "We need to make sure that the truth is heard above the clamor for the status quo.

"The fact is, the current health-care system is broken, and the status quo will be more expensive than comprehensive health-care reform," she added. "Many American families will simply not be able to pay health-care premiums, and business will provide less coverage for workers."

AARP has not endorsed any health-care reform plan currently before Congress but supports affordable, high quality health care that includes long-term care and prescription drug coverage for all Americans.

"Health-care reform is not just a senior issue," Ms. Norton said. "It affects Americans of all ages by providing preventive and long-term care for the baby born with disabilities, the 20-year-old accident victim and the elderly person with Alzheimers.

"Congress must help all Americans and their families by enacting true health-care reform in 1994," she added. "That was the message of the teleconference and the message that AARP volunteers have been carrying for more than a decade."

AARP is the nation's leading organization for people age 50 and over. It serves their needs and interests through legislative advocacy, research, informative programs and community services provided by a network of local chapters and experienced volunteers throughout the country.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

The Alamo Advanced Band will begin its summer band practices on Monday, August 1. The practices will run from August 1-5 and 8-12.

The daily scheduled will be as follows:

8-9 a.m. — Percussion section

9-11 a.m. — Full band meets

11 a.m.-noon — Trombones, baritons and tubas

Noon-1 p.m. — Cornets only

1-2 p.m. — Clarinets, saxes, flutes and French horns only

There will be buses running to and from Alamo each day of summer band. The schedule at the pick-up sights will be as follows:

Dezavala Elementary — leave at 7:55 a.m.

Crockett Elementary — leave at 8:05 a.m.

Parker Elementary — leave at 8:20 a.m.

Rusk Elementary — leave at 8:30 a.m.

Jones Elementary — leave at 8:40 a.m.

Students who are riding the bus are advised to be at these sights 10 minutes prior to leaving time. The bus will leave Alamo at 2:10 and return to the same elementary schools at the end of the day.

New students to Alamo who have had band before are encouraged to participate in the summer band program. For more information, contact Rick Villarreal at Alamo Junior High, 689-1725.

Beginning band students will begin when school starts. There are two meetings scheduled for beginners to be informed and placed on instruments before school begins. These will be held on Thursday and Friday, July 28-29, at 6:30 p.m. in the Alamo Band Hall. You may attend either one of these meetings.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the Alamo Scout Band and have not had the opportunity to do so, there will be a Big Swimming Party at Doug Russell Pool on Friday, August 5, from 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Films and other audio-visual materials available to public schools through Region 18 Education Service Center may be requested for preview by parents and other interested adults during a one-day review session set for Thursday. The session is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the center, which is located at 2811 LaForce Boulevard, Midland International Airport.

Parents and other citizens interested in requesting a preview of particular films from the collection maintained at the service center should notify the center at least five days in advance so the staff will have time to check on the availability of the films and set up preview rooms. In the event a film is not available on the date requested, the person making the request will be given a date on which it may be seen.

Persons wishing to request a preview of the films may call Mrs. Pam Winn, media supervisor of the Education Service Center, at 563-2380. The name of the films desired and the approximate time the person will arrive at the center should be given to Mrs. Winn.

Captive-bred prairie chicks hatch at center

GLEN ROSE (AP) — Fossil Rim is crowing over its recent success in hatching captive-bred Attwater's prairie chicks, nine of which have survived.

"We are happy with our survival rate at this point," said Bob Smith, avian coordinator for Fossil Rim Wildlife Center, about 45 miles southwest of Fort Worth. "When a species is this close to extinction, every new life is priceless. And to prove that this species can be bred successfully in captivity gives us hope for the future of this bird."

Couple's no-kill shelter illustrates problem of stray, dumped animals in rural areas

By Justin Bachman
N.Y. Times News Service

GODLEY — Just west of town, along a gravel road that runs around a small lake full of bass, the dog days of summer are in full effect at Norm and Joy Yadon's house, which they call "Home at Last Animal Haven."

Their rolling 20 acres, purchased as a good place to build a house and retire, has become the largest no-kill animal shelter in Johnson County, housing 170 dogs, 35 cats, five rabbits and two Arabian horses.

According to officials and residents in the county's unincorporated areas, the Yadons' shelter is currently the most effective way to manage a stray animal population that has grown increasingly bothersome to people living outside the county's cities.

"It is a problem out there, no question about it," County Judge Joe Durham said of stray pets that roam the countryside.

Durham said the county budget provides $15,000 this year to control stray livestock, but no county tax dollars are allocated for the unwanted dogs, cats and rabbits that often end up dumped along the county's rural roads.

"My problems is, when you live in the county there is no one to call to pick up these animals," said Jackie McCaslin, who lives six miles south of Alvarado with 40 dogs, 32 cats and two horses (only four of which are her pets.)

The rest were dumped there, she said.

McCaslin said she and other rural Johnson County residents have talked about circulating a petition to present to commissioners in hope of addressing the problem.

Part of that problem may lie with the county's rural population makeup, which in recent years has drawn more former Metroplex residents, according to James Bias, executive director of the Humane Society of North Texas, and to Johnson County Sheriff Martin Griffith.

Those residents, accustomed to city services, have not yet demanded and funded animal control similar to that found in the cities.

"It's going to take the voters in these unincorporated areas to bring this up to their county commissioners," Bias said. "I would imagine that if there were an animal control agency in place in Johnson County, they could easily go out and pick up 100 animals in one day, no problem."

As in many rural Texas counties, Johnson County commissioners look to their sheriff to control livestock in unincorporated areas.

Honorary society to induct 11 MC students

Staff Report

Eleven Midland College students are scheduled to be inducted into the local chapter of Alpha Beta Gamma honorary society at noon Tuesday during a luncheon at the Health Sciences Building.

Two other persons are to become honorary members.

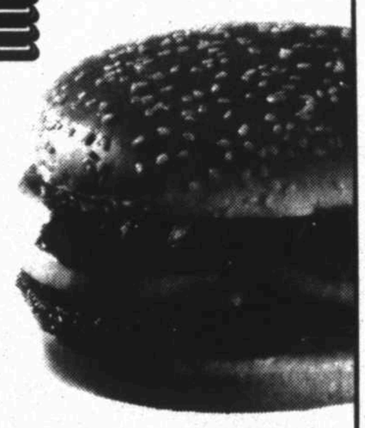

Students who are becoming active members have completed a minimum of 12 credit hours of college level courses at Midland College with an overall grade point average of 3.0 and a minimum of six credit hours of radiology courses with a grade point average of 3.4 or higher. Honorary memberships are granted to persons who have made outstanding contributions in the field of radiology or have demonstrated a keen interest in radiologic technology education.

Accepted as new active members are: Nanette Nunez, Jeff Kennedy, Michele Evans, Kim Bender, Loraine Hall, Linda Hartley, Veronica Chavez, Renee Brasuell, Marlene Mobley, Laura Curnutte, and Scott Vanlandingham.

New honorary members are Bernie Ramirez, R.T., Physicians and Surgeons Hospital and Patrick Quist, Southwest Radiographics, which is sponsoring this year's luncheon.

Alpha Beta Gamma honor society was formed in 1976 at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas to recognize academic and professional excellence in the field of radiology. Midland College received its charter in 1990, naming its chapter in honor of Brett Reavis.

Tragedy is stalking callous motorists

It was evident to those on Texas highways over the recent July Fourth holiday that motorists have adopted several bad habits while traveling — and the staggering death toll of 65 that weekend underscored the "cost" of those habits.

Lest you think that our observation is flippant, watch closely the next time you're traveling to other cities. Here's what you're likely to see:

■ Almost no driver observing the speed limit. In fact, most motorists are exceeding the speed limit regularly by 10 miles per hour or more.

■ Motorists following other vehicles much too closely. The rule of thumb is to allow at least one car length between your vehicle and the one you are following for each 10 miles per hour you are traveling, but motorists typically "tailgate" other vehicles at speeds well above 55 miles per hour — almost guaranteeing a domino-effect crash in the event of an accident.

■ Drivers taking unnecessary risks, such as passing on a hill. Such situations are extremely dangerous since the driver passing another vehicle cannot see whether another vehicle may be approaching from over the hill.

These factors and others are creating a deadly situation on the roads and highways of this country, and there's little doubt that expanded efforts by law enforcement will make much of a change. It takes individual responsibility to obey the law. The push in recent years to get drunk drivers or drinking drivers off the road and to get all motorists to wear their seat belts have had a positive impact, but even with those campaigns there is an obvious change under way on the part of motorists to throw caution to the winds.

Said Mike Cox, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, following the deadly July Fourth weekend: "It's incredible to me to think there are still that many people out there who for some reason think they're bullet-proof and don't have to wear safety belts."

Cox is right in his observation, as far as it goes. Yet there is an underlying sociological factor at play that appears to relate to how drivers regard others on the highways. As we speed on our way to our destinations, are we callously disregarding those other compartmentalized beings hurtling toward us? Do we care about them? Or are we so wrapped up in our own world that we fail to even recognize them as human beings?

We'd better start recognizing them as people. We're rapidly turning our highways into killing fields.

ANOTHER VIEW

French may be able to turn the bloody tide in Rwanda

The heart constricts and the mind swirls in trying to grasp the enormity of the tragedy now gripping Rwanda.

In the greatest mass flight of people in modern times, more than a million Rwandans surged within 48 hours into neighboring Zaire.

The town of Goma is now encircled by the world's largest refugee settlement, a distinction held only recently by the town of Ngara in Tanzania, where 250,000 Rwandans, most of them Hutus, fled in terror some weeks ago, fearing massacres by an advancing Tutsi-led rebel army.

The human flood in Goma is four times greater. Furthermore, unlike in Tanzania, few aid agencies operate in Zaire. Simply providing subsistence rations to the million Rwandans is a colossal task.

President Clinton has taken the right first step in sending Brian Atwood, the U.S. official in charge of humanitarian relief, to Goma.

The White House has approved 80 airlift missions and $31 million in emergency funds for food and medicine; this is in addition to $118 million in aid already airlifted to Rwanda. But nobody has ever dealt with so many uprooted people, driven by panic across frontiers to a remote, wholly unprepared provincial city.

Nor does the cease-fire announced by the victorious Patriotic Front signal an end to Rwanda's agony. The present fighting erupted in April when the country's president, a Hutu, was killed in a suspicious air crash. This was followed by massacres, evidently planned in advance, of minority Tutsis and moderate Hutus by rampaging government militias.

But in a remarkable turnabout, the insurgents routed the army and now control most of the country, provoking a tidal exodus of Hutus, their panic heightened by the same fanatic broadcasters who had earlier clamored for Tutsi blood.

Now the task of remaking a nation falls on a new provisional regime in which Hutus serve as president and prime minister. But the ousted government and its scattered armed forces may now regroup and re-invade Rwanda. If this war is to be ended, and if refugees are to return, the French role may well be crucial.

France needs to dispel suspicions that the 2,500 troops it sent to Rwanda were to prop up the Hutu-led government whose army it had trained. More than 250,000 Hutus, including soldiers responsible for mass slaughters, have sought refuge in a safe area established by French forces.

The French can now demonstrate their neutrality by preventing their former allies from violating the cease-fire, and by detaining suspected war criminals who have sought asylum in the "safe" zone.

Still, even if fighting ceases and refugees return, the outlook is bleak for this Vermont-sized country of 8 million, of whom about 15 percent are Tutsis.

— The New York Times

JACK ANDERSON

Democrats sell access, just like GOP

WASHINGTON — Guess who's coming to dinner Tuesday night at Vice President Al Gore's residence on the grounds of the Naval Observatory?

To paraphrase Gore and President Clinton, it's more than 100 of those access-buying, influence-peddling fatcats who are fighting "change" and feeding public "cynicism" toward Washington. Despite Clinton's warnings, maybe one of those "80,000 lobbyists in Washington making sure I can't take care of your interests" will even slip in.

Anderson

But no such attacks will be made during Tuesday's "barbecue." When the guests show up for the affair, which is conspicuously absent from Gore's official schedule, what matters is that they've paid the $5,000 "membership" dues to the National Finance Council of the Democratic National Committee.

"The purpose is to get together some folks who have been supportive of the Democratic party and (to) have an enjoyable evening," explains DNC Spokesman Jim Whitney. "This is not an event to raise money."

You could have fooled hundreds of Democrats who thought access du jour was being served up based on the way DNC officials have been hawking "memberships." Consider this recollection by a big contributor of a recent conversation with a DNC finance official.

DNC official: "We'd like to invite you to a barbecue at Vice President Al Gore's place next week?"

Contributor: "How much will it cost?"

DNC official: "$5,000."

Contributor: "I'm not the kind of person who can pony up $5,000 to come to a barbecue. This is very unfair. I contributed when they were running for office. Vice President Gore should be inviting me to his home to thank me rather than saying the entrance fee is $5,000."

DNC official: "We have other activities you'll get for the $5,000. We're going to have a breakfast with Secretary of Commerce (Ron) Brown, and skiing with Deputy Treasury Secretary Roger Altman. (A treasury spokesman says Altman is not aware of the offer.) If you have a business, this will be very good for your business."

Contributor: "I remember this was going on when Republicans were in office. All the Democrats were saying how outrageous it was to buy access."

Democrats certainly do not own a monopoly on political shake-downs, but they do think they own the franchise on political morality.

After hurling epithets at the entrenched special interests, Democrats are increasingly playing the perfect hosts at a growing number of affairs ranging from star-studded galas to barbecues with Gore. Democrats are enjoying the bottom-line benefits of occupying the White House, just as Republicans did for 12 years. It might also be called the "last supper syndrome": a frenzy of fund raising in case Congress passes campaign finance reform.

As Clinton completes the 19th month of his presidency, political reform is facing a crucial test. Members of Congress feel they can't face voters empty-handed.

During a closed-door House leadership meeting last week, Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., issued an Aug. 12 deadline for action on campaign finance reform, lobbying restrictions and making all laws apply to Congress. Emerging from that meeting, a second Democratic leadership source doubts there will be much action: "I think it's (campaign finance reform) moved to the back burner."

Today's TV weather people blow hot air

Louie Allen is dead now, the man who used to do the TV weather on Channel 9, Washington, with nothing but a crayon and a big sheet of drawing paper.

That was back in the 1950s, or maybe 60s, and it's been downhill ever since for TV weather, as well as for men called Louie, which is to say they don't make 'em anymore. Nowadays instead they make guys who are called Chad and Joel, Sean and Kevin, even Lu-ees.

Baker

Louie Allen actually spelled himself Louis, just like the kings of France, but though he may have spelled with kings he walked with the common man when doing the TV weather.

To push around fronts and air masses with his drop-dead indifference to the melodrama of the skies — using nothing but a crayon! — you had to be a genuine Louie for that.

Progress hasn't been good for TV weather watchers. All the new electronic gadgets, photos from deep space, radar-imaging machines, multi-colored technically enhanced simultaneously recalibrated dew-point readings from that worrisome low-pressure area off Samoa — come on, guys, just give it to us straight from the shoulder about tomorrow, the way Louie did.

What's it mean for people who have to live with the stuff? Umbrellas? Air-conditioning? Earmuffs?

With a few crayon strokes, Louie showed where the fronts were preparing to do their foul or maybe blissful work. Then he gave a 20-second meteorology lesson: "Air moves clockwise around a high-pressure area, counterclockwise around a low."

A few more crayon strokes produced a stick man in a straw boater, and Louie said, "A good day for outdoor activity." A stick child reading — yes, reading, not watching the tube — meant you'd better plan for "indoor activity."

Good day or bad, Louie brought cheery prospects for "activity." There was no apologetic whining such as you get from the TV nowadays when rain promises a damp weekend.

Louie made you want to tell the children: "What a great opportunity for indoor activity. Dad's going to spend the whole weekend reading Henry James and you-all can finally get started on 'The Education of Henry Adams' or try a few experiments in quantum physics if you'd rather."

This is not a lament for an unrecoverable past, but a warning to today's overequipped, state-of-the-art TV weather people. They are losing their way in jungles of new technology. They are yielding to shabby theatrical impulses to pervert good, upright, honest weather into corny daily melodrama.

The great philosophical truth about weather was enunciated some 40 years ago by a newspaper reporter named John Carr. For the fifth consecutive day, on reporting for work at the city desk, Carr was assigned to write a weather story.

Three minutes later he turned in a story which said, in its entirety, "Every day we have some weather, and today was no exception."

Nowadays we have hundreds of TV weather people who come to work every day apparently under the illusion that this is the first day there has ever been any weather anywhere.

You see them out of doors bending under wind or flinching from downpours, mopping steamy brows or chipping ice from thermometers.

Why do they want to make us feel bad? Don't they want us to be happy about having this wonderful wind and rain and heat and ice giving us an endless supply of days for outdoor activity interspersed with plenty of days for delightful indoor activity?

Some are televised sitting in rooms packed with scientific instruments, such rooms as we have seen Dr. Frankenstein use during heavy showers to make a botch of poor old Boris Karloff. How can it fail to alarm the viewer?

Cable's Weather Channel of course can be useful if you live in one of those Texas counties it's always watching for thunderstorms. Most people don't, so they have to hold a wet finger in the wind when they want to know whether the next activity will be outdoor or indoor.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Congress has 'trigger' concept backwards

Roy Rogers's horse seemed to come thundering down the halls of Congress last month: the word on all lips was trigger, not so famously used in politics since Nelson Rockefeller called Barry Goldwater trigger-happy.

Safire

When you pull a trigger, a gun goes off. From the Middle Dutch trecken, "to pull" (same root as trek, as in "Star Trek"), the English word began in 1621 as tricker, meaning "the lever that springs a trap"; it soon became the name for the small steel catch that releases the hammer or firing pin of a gun when drawn, pressed, pulled or — to use the verb my sergeant preferred — squeezed.

Metaphorically, triggers became heavily involved in Congress with the onset of health-care legislation. What to call a device in the law that would measure future fulfillment of a certain level of coverage — and then, if coverage failed to reach that goal, spring a little legislative lever that would bring new pressure to bear? A time bomb is pejorative; a trigger is not.

But what sort of trigger? From the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, comes this plaintive letter: "Could you access your 'Somewhere a Roscoe . . . ' file? The press just now abounds with references to hard and soft triggers in a health-care bill. To what must surely be the distress of handgun aficionados everywhere, we seem to be getting it wrong.

"A hard trigger goes off automatically," observes Chairman Pat. "Whereas a soft trigger has to be squeezed hard. There is enough confusion about health care. Nor is S.J. Perelman on hand to set us straight."

Dutifully, Moynihan attaches a glossary prepared by the Finance Committee staff. It defines a hard trigger as "a mandate (on employers and/or individuals) automatically imposed if a commission determines that the percentage of persons covered by health insurance has not reached a target specified in statute."

A soft trigger is a kinder, gentler form of coercion: "Under a soft trigger, Congress reviews recommendations of a commission for increasing coverage rates, if the commission determines that the percentage of persons covered by health insurance has not reached a target specified in statute. There is no requirement for Congress to act." On the CBS program "Face the Nation," Bob Schieffer defined soft trigger more simply as "if you don't have universal health care several years down the road, then Congress will revisit the issue and decide what to do about it."

But wait — there is a refinement known as the fast-track trigger, which fits somewhere between hard and soft. Congressional Quarterly defines that eventuality this way: "Congress would be presented with legislation designed to achieve universal coverage or control costs. The bills could not be amended or subjected to a filibuster."

Thus, in current political usage, triggers are means to commit future Congresses to actions that the present Congress is unwilling to take now. When an idea like this becomes popular, the operative word takes on a glow, and policy wonks come up with a series of modifiers.

"These words hard trigger and soft trigger are both irregular and misnomer terms not used in the gun business," I am informed by John Armand Caudron, president of Firearms Research and Identification Association, in Rowland Heights, Calif. "What you describe as a hard trigger that kicks in automatically may be akin to that of a double-action firearm. It will have a tougher or harder trigger pull because it takes more force to pull than a regular trigger of a cocked firearm. Soft trigger could refer to a hair trigger, which has a reduced force to drop the hammer or drop the sear, discharging the gun."

Thus, Moynihan is metaphorically right: the political hard trigger, which goes off at the slightest touch of failed goals, is really akin to the hair trigger, which fires at the gentlest squeeze, whilst the political soft trigger takes the kind of hard pulling required in double-action firearms. Congress, as the Chairman of Senate Finances vainly insists, has the whole thing backward.

LETTERS

Statement in letter can be read two ways

I refer to the Most Rev. Pfeifer's letter on the subject of health reform in your July 3 edition. It was a very thoughtful piece, and I might agree with everything he said — except for one statement that could be taken two very different ways.

He said "the basic principle should be that we receive according to our need, and pay according to our ability." This is a chillingly close paraphrase of the dictum enunciated by Karl Marx. It was a catchword that played a large part in the concept of a utopian socialist state.

In application, it was a disaster for 75 years in the former Union of Soviet Socialist Republics until it fell of its own weight.

If the bishop is speaking of pure altruism, as I hope he is, it is clearly in the Judeo-Christian tradition. But if he is speaking of federally mandated altruism (an oxymoron, of course), it is pure socialism, like the Clinton health plan.

I may be alone in finding his use of the Marxist slogan ambiguous. But with all due respect, it would be useful to clarify the intent.

Many in community have special needs

In regard to the special section "Include Me In" published on Sunday, June 26, we would like to publicly thank Elizabeth Edwin and Joe Williams for such a fine job in depicting our family through their words and pictures. We would also like to express our thanks to Charles Spence for having the insight to publish a section on special children.

By allowing our story to be told, it was our hope that there might be increased public awareness for a growing population here in our own community.

Our daughter, Jennifer, is a very special girl with many special needs; yet, she is not alone. There are many adults and children with special needs in Midland who deserve to be recognized and respected as the individuals that they are.

With the 1993 passing of the American with Disabilities Act, combined with support from our special educators and concerned citizens, our special children's future will hopefully be a brighter one.

Call for panel on 'oil bust cycle' is on mark

Your call for a "Task Force Needed On Oil Bust Cycle," July 17, was needed and excellent. Many of us, who are old enough and fortunate enough to have worked in a more stable oil industry, grieve at the loss of the presence and service of so many well-educated, experienced, motivated and civic-minded individuals.

Should a committee or panel be formed to "brainstorm" a possible solution, it is suggested that those of us who have enjoyed working in a better "oil climate" should generously contribute to the cost of seminars, "brainstorms" or other organized activity — whatever is necessary.

I will contribute to the "cause."

'Megagroup' could provide health care

Reasonable health-care insurance reform can be done without crippling the world's best health-care system and without further surrender to federal dependency and national bankruptcy.

Congress and the president could provide all citizens access to good health-care insurance by consolidating congressional and White House health-care coverage with all other civilian federal employee medical-insurance plans into one megagroup in which every citizen may elect to participate on the same basis as our employees.

For us all to focus on costs, all participants in the proposed megaplan need to pay the full cost of their insurance coverage. (Any savings from government employees joining private participants in paying their entire premiums would make a good start toward funding the deficit reduction trust created by Congress and the White House in the last budget deal.)

The availability of such a megagroup to all citizens could, in a short time, separate so-called skimmers and free-loaders from authentic charity cases, which most citizens would feel good about helping receive a basic level of care.

Every U.S. senator and representative has received a more complete outline of the above proposal. Readers are encouraged to urge their members of Congress to resolve health-care issues in favor of less government involvement in our personal and financial lives. The Capitol switchboard number is (202) 225-3121.

Midland team proves good guys do win

Not in the many years of supporting my children — and now my grandchildren — in baseball have I more admired the small-in-stature-but-big-in-heart Midland Eastern team as they battled back to win against the physically and superbly talented Odessa Sherwood in keeping the championship flag in Midland for the sixth straight year.

It became startingly clear in their first game against each other Thursday night (July 14) the difference in the true character of these young men and their coaches. Each inning was riddled by obscene gestures and foul language from the black-and-white, answered by quiet determination and spectacular play by the gold-and-purple jerseys. A close call at home in the 10th gave Odessa the win, but rather than go out in a blaze of glory, they not only embarassed parents and fans, but made themselves farcical in a bawdry dance.

All suffered through and gloried with the valiant Midland team the next two nights as they unleashed their bats and masterfully whipped Odessa, proving "Good Guys Do Win First!" No matter that they were smaller in size, they proved giants in pride and hard work.

Health-care reform will end good plans

We have all seen the television horror stories concerning people who have lost their jobs and/or health care after suffering a serious illness. We have not seen any stories about the good companies with good health-care plans. This is one of those "good" stories.

Our son, Richard, age 34, who lives in Dallas, became ill in November 1993. A cardiac specialist advised him that he had a viral heart disease that was slowly destroying the heart muscle. By mid-April 1994, he was in congestive heart failure and was admitted to the Critical Care Unit of Medical City Hospital, Dallas. Forty-six agonizing days later, a donor heart became available, and after a 3½-hour surgery, his new heart was in place and beating. Following 10 days in intensive care, he was home to begin three months of recuperation and physical therapy.

The company he works for has a self-insured health-care plan that will pay for most of the large doctor and hospital bills and the expensive anti-rejection medications, which he will have to take for the rest of his life. In addition, this "good" company has kept him on full salary until he returns to work in September.

I shudder to think what might have happened to him had the proposed Clinton health-care plan been in effect at this time. I envision a government-appointed hospital gatekeeper advising him as to his eligibility for a transplant, how long he could stay in the hospital and how much the plan would pay for the procedure. I'm afraid he would not have made it.

I realize there are problems with the health-care and insurance industries. I believe that Congress should pass legislation that would cure these problems and make health care more affordable for most people. This could be accomplished without the massive takeover of our health-care system by the federal government.

I think the proposed health-care plan will not only eliminate good health-care plans such as this but will destroy "health care as we know it."

I would urge everyone to contact their senators and representatives and ask them to oppose any plan that would give the government direct control of our fine health-care system. Time is short!

Readers' views on: Benson cartoon

Cartoon jeopardizes paper's credibility

While freedom of the press is something that I wholeheartedly defend, the accuracy and credibility of the contemporary American media leaves a great deal to be desired. The Reporter-Telegram's publication of the Benson cartoon attacking radio and television personality Rush Limbaugh (July 15) raises some question as to the credibility of our own local media.

Limbaugh, like the rest of us, is a human being. While I enjoy listening to him on the radio and watching him on television, I will also say that Limbaugh says a good deal that is worthy of substantive intellectual criticism. In my opinion, however, what truly empowers Limbaugh is not his own ideological utterances, but the blatant arrogance and ineptitude of his opponents.

The cartoon published in your newspaper makes the cliched accusation that Limbaugh reviles all women simply because he is openly critical of the radical feminist dogma. This, of course, is the standard response of the National Organization for Women toward all of its critics. In publishing the cartoon, your publication has, wittingly or unwittingly, allied itself with a discredited, radical fringe organization of no more than 200,000 members. At the same time, you all too often ignore the doings of the larger, more mainstream groups, such as the National Rifle Association with several million members (though, to be fair, you do publish their letters).

In conclusion, I would recommend that you and your staff deign to listen to Limbaugh before you allow yourselves to become accessories in attacking him. In doing so, you will find that although you may not agree with all that he says, he is not a fascist, racist, anti-Christ, etc. However your continuing to condone or publish intellectually vacuous attacks such as the Benson cartoon will only further the downward spiral of your newspaper's credibility.

Attack on Limbaugh lacks shred of truth

Midlanders expect, and usually receive reasonably fair, accurate, true and objective news and editorial information from our local newspaper.

Unfortunately, you failed to deliver fair, accurate, true and objective information when you chose to run the cartoon on today's (July 15) editorial page, which does not reflect any degree of fairness, accuracy, truth or objectivity. Rather, it is striking in its total failure to even present a "caricature" (that which contains an element of truth) of Rush Limbaugh's publicly demonstrated character. The cartoon is not only absent of any shred of truth, it viciously and outrageously portrays Limbaugh as a murderer. It is obvious to anyone who has listened to Limbaugh over time that the cartoonist has not heard him or does not understand what he has heard, or more simply, deliberately chose to lie about him.

Which of these alternatives may we conclude is the reason you decided to print this cartoon?

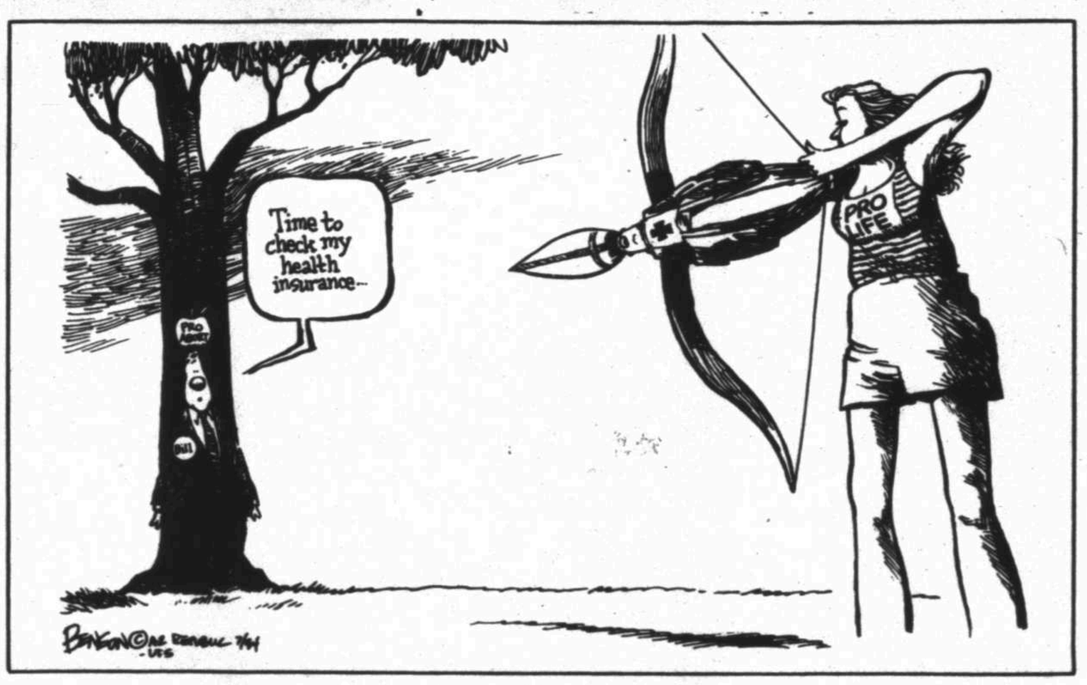

Perhaps I might have been less inclined to comment upon your editorial decision to run the Limbaugh cartoon had you not also recently carried an equally false, vicious and outrageous depiction of Oliver North, a genuine hero and Marine veteran, comparing him to Adolf Hitler and other vile and notorious historical figures.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.
- We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

DAVE BARRY

Life on book tour road can be real torture

It's early in June, and I'm sitting in a small, brightly lit room in New York City, facing a TV camera, grinning enthusiastically and having a conversation with perky voices in my ear.

Barry

I'm doing what's called a "satellite media tour" to promote a book. For three straight hours I've been talking to perky TV News Teams all over the country, one after another, for about five minutes apiece. The only person in the room with me is Gary, the cameraman. I can't see the News Teams; I can only hear them via an earpiece. They all tend to ask the same questions, so I've been saying the same things over and over and over.

"So Dave!" a perky news voice is saying. "Tell us about the squirrel in the woman's toilet!" The News Teams love this story.

Gary the cameraman winces. He has heard the toilet-squirrel story about 29 times today.

"Ha ha!" I say to the camera, as though I am delighted to be telling this story yet again, whereas in fact I would rather be undergoing a vasectomy via tire iron. But I plunge ahead, because it is my job, as an author, to get my book mentioned on the TV news. It's not easy. I'm getting stiff competition for air time from the Flesh-Eating Bacteria, which is the big story this week. The News Teams are crazy about this story, and are showing horrible scary color pictures of it every two minutes. ("Here's a satellite weather photograph, and speaking of photographs, here's the Flesh-Eating Bacteria again!") I am appalled by the amount of attention they're giving this. I mean, it's not as though the Flesh-Eating Bacteria wrote a BOOK.

I finish talking to the current News Team, and immediately I hear a new one in my ear.

"Dave!" a perky voice says. "What's the deal with these toilet squirrels?"

Gary the cameraman slumps. I think even the camera is slumping.

"Ha ha!" I say, and plunge ahead.

It's several days, and several cities, later, and I'm in Milwaukee, being interviewed on a TV show about books. The host is trying to ask me a question that begins "When did you first start," but he messes up and combines the beginning of "first" and the end of "start" into one word, so that his question comes out: "When did you (comical bathroom word)." He says this very clearly. He tries to be cool and act as though nothing has happened. I help him out by shouting, "WHAT? WHAT DID YOU SAY?" He's still trying to gloss over it and get on with the interview, but now he's starting to giggle, a problem that only gets worse when his wristwatch, suddenly and mysteriously, as though possessed by demons, springs off of his wrist and clatters noisily across the table. Now we're laughing so hard that juice is running out of our noses.

Literature: It's my life.

At the same TV station, in Milwaukee, I see a stage set for a show called "Beer Time." Nobody I talk to at the station knows what the format of this show is. I like to think it's something like this:

HOST: Bob, how about a nice cold one?

CO-HOST: Sounds good, Chuck.

(They drink beer for five minutes.)

HOST: Hey, I could go for another one of those.

CO-HOST: (Burp)

Now I'm in Denver, and I'm on a TV talk show with a country-and-western band from — get ready — Singapore. They're promoting their new record, "You Caned the Buttocks of My Heart."

No, I'm kidding about the song title, but I swear the band is real. They're called "Matthew and the Mandarins," and they've just arrived in the United States on a tour to promote goodwill for Singapore. They do a pretty good version of "Margaritaville," but publicity-wise I'm wondering how well they'll do here, going head-to-head with big names such as Barbra Streisand and the Flesh-Eating Bacteria.

Now I'm sitting in a TV studio in Portland, Ore., waiting to go on a TV talk show. The other guests are Allen Ginsberg, the famous poet; and Charlotte, a dog employed by the local fire department to sniff out gasoline and other chemicals used in arson.

"Where's Allen Ginsberg?" I ask somebody.

"Here," says a little old man who has been sitting right next to me for 10 minutes.

"Ha ha!" I remark, suavely. Mr. Dorkhead.

Ginsberg, who is on a book tour, announces that he is very tired, then lies down on the studio floor and goes to sleep. Charlotte the Arson Dog, on the other hand, is energetic, bounding around the studio, deliriously happy to meet people. She is not on a book tour.

At this point, the show's hostess, her hair and makeup perfect, walks up to meet the guests.

"Hi!" she says.

Charlotte bounds over and, without hesitation, sticks her snout WAY up under the hostess' skirt, as though looking for an important arson clue.

Now I'm home, all done with the book tour. I don't talk much these days. Mainly I sleep. I've been having these dreams, but I'm sure they're normal. You've had them, too, right? The ones with the flesh-eating toilet squirrels?

Father kills himself after drowning of his 18-month-old son

ANGLETON (AP) — Services are scheduled Tuesday for a toddler who drowned and his father, who killed himself in anguish.

Timothy Eric McKnight, 35, shot himself with a .22-caliber rifle Thursday after finding the body of his 18-month-old son, Zachariah Paul, floating in a pond, Brazoria County authorities said.

"I can't stand it. I killed our baby," he told his wife, authorities said.

McKnight, an unemployed heavy equipment operator, had been watching the child Thursday evening while his wife slept.

Zachariah got through a chain link fence around his back yard and wandered about 25 feet to the pond, sheriff's investigator Stephen Ricks said Friday.

> 'Anytime you have a small child or a baby die it's a tragedy. But then to have something like this happen on top of that is just unbelievable.'
> — Stephen Ricks, investigator

McKnight lost sight of the boy and awakened his wife, Jolee, Ricks said. The couple found the child in the pond and McKnight called 911 for help.

As Mrs. McKnight was giving the emergency operator instructions how to reach their rural home, McKnight walked by her with a rifle, Ricks said.

"He said, 'I can't stand it. I killed our baby.' Then he pulled the trigger," said Justice of the Peace Wayne DuBose, who had performed the marriage ceremony for the couple two years before.

Mrs. McKnight, 34, can be heard on the dispatcher's tape screaming "Don't, Don't," said Ricks.

"She ran out there, but it was too late," said Ricks. "He was extremely distraught."

McKnight was pronounced dead at the scene.

His son was declared dead a short time later at an Angleton hospital.

"Anytime you have a small child or a baby die it's a tragedy," said Ricks. "But then to have something like this happen on top of that is just unbelievable."

Mrs. McKnight's other child, Janay Morton, 12, had ridden her horse to a nearby rodeo arena.

Person to Spurs?

SAN ANTONIO — Free agent forward Chuck Person, released by the Minnesota Timberwolves after last season, has agreed to contract terms with the San Antonio Spurs, according to a published report. The Spurs are expected to announce the signing of Person early next week, the San Antonio Express-News reported in today's editions. Person, a 6-foot-8 small forward, will fill the $1.1 million salary slot left by Dale Ellis, meaning Ellis will not return to the Spurs, the newspaper reported.

WAC gets TV deal

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — The Western Athletic Conference on Saturday announced a five-year agreement with ESPN and ABC to telecast football games beginning in 1996. WAC commissioner Karl Benson said the agreement calls for the telecast of 11 games in each year of the contract by ESPN and ESPN2 and for the live telecast of 11 more games over the term of the contract by ABC. In addition, should the conference adopt a championship playoff game, it also will be televised live by one of the networks. Financial terms of the agreement were not announced.

The WAC had 10 games televised — its all-time high — in 1991. Last year, six conference games were televised. Benson said the new TV deal is based on the WAC's current membership of 10 schools and is not contingent on whether the league goes forward with its proposal to add six new members and become a 16-team super-conference. "The only provision was that if we expand, they would televise the playoff game," said Benson, who officially became commissioner on July 1, succeeding Dr. Joe Kearney.

The prospective new members are Texas Christian, Southern Methodist, Rice, Tulsa, UNLV and San Jose State.

Alfredsson collapse opens Sheehan's door

■ Helen Alfredsson's U.S. Women's Open ride takes roller coaster turn as Patty Sheehan takes the lead.

Associated Press

LAKE ORION, Mich. — The pain was almost too much for Helen Alfredsson. This was the worst kind of hurt, an ache of the soul.

"Right now, it's hard to see any light at the end of the tunnel, actually," the native of Sweden said. "Hopefully, I can relax tonight and find out what happened and find some strength for tomorrow."

She'll need it.

Alfredsson's unexpected and total collapse Saturday left gritty veteran Patty Sheehan with a one-stroke lead over Tammie Green after the third round of the U.S. Women's Open.

Alfredsson, who shattered Open records for the first two rounds, lost eight strokes to par over the final 10 holes. She finished with a 5-over-par 76 and dropped to third place with a 208 total.

"It hurts right now," said Alfredsson, who was given 15 minutes to compose herself before meeting the media. "To be 13 under and lose eight shots coming in. I'm still really not that far out of it, even though it feels like I lost everything today."

The steady and unflappable Sheehan, seeking her fifth major title and second Open championship in three years, curled in a 10-foot birdie putt on 18 for a 69 and the lead at 206 for three trips around the Old Course at Indianwood Golf and Country Club.

"I think I'm a little surprised at this point," said Sheehan, who broke Alfredsson's year-old 54-hole Open record. "But I should know better than anyone that anything can happen in an Open. There are 18 holes left and there is a lot of golf left to play."

Sheehan twice experienced late disappointments before finally winning an Open. She battled Betsy King for three rounds in 1989, the last time the Open was held at Indianwood. But Sheehan's collapse in the final round gave King an easy four-stroke victory over Nancy Lopez.

In 1990, at the Atlanta Athletic Club in Duluth, Ga., Sheehan lost the Open by one stroke to King after leading the field by eight strokes and King by 11 early in the third round. She

Emmitt shoulders memories

Dallas running back Emmitt Smith, who is coming off one of his most memorable seasons, said the Cowboys will have to be "fortunate and blessed" to win three straight Super Bowls.

■ Memorable game against Giants separates Dallas' Emmitt Smith from rest of NFL running backs.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — It was one of the most memorable games in the career of Emmitt Smith and the history of the Dallas Cowboys.

Playing despite a separated right shoulder, Smith rushed for 168 yards and caught 10 passes for another 62 yards against the New York Giants on Jan. 2 to carry the Cowboys to the NFC East title with a 16-13 overtime victory.

"My shoulder will never be the way it used to be because of that game," Smith said.

But, he quickly adds, his shoulder is "close to being 100 percent.

"I've taken some hits in training camp and I know I can play with it this year," he said. "I'm not worried."

Smith will be shooting for a fourth consecutive NFL rushing title. Jim Brown has a record five in a row from 1957 to 1961.

At the same time. the Cowboys will be playing for a record third consecutive Super Bowl title.

"We'll have to be fortunate and blessed to win another Super Bowl and for me to win another rushing title," said Smith, who spotted the league two games last season and still won the crown with that gutsy

Peete carries Cowboys 'O' in scrimmage win

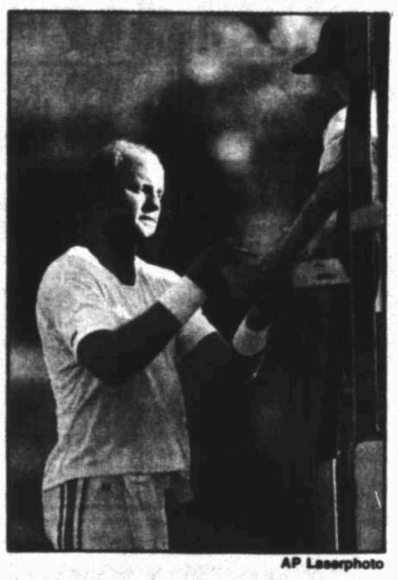

AUSTIN (AP) — Rodney Peete was sensational in his debut with the Dallas Cowboys.

Peete, picked up as a free agent from Detroit to back up Troy Aikman, hit 11 of 15 passes for 173 yards to carry the Cowboys to a 12-6 scrimmage victory over the Houston Oilers Saturday night.

Peete's 16-yard pass to rookie tight end Greg Schorp of Texas A&M positioned the Cowboys for Auburn rookie Tony Richardson's 2-yard scrimmage-winning touchdown run.

Starting quarterbacks Cody Carlson of the Oilers and Aikman of the Cowboys directed their teams to touchdowns.

QB Carlson hopes this year played on field, not sidelines

■ Houston's Cody Carlson is finding out how hard it is to play in the NFL spotlight.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Cody Carlson wants his first season as the Houston Oilers starting quarterback to place heavy emphasis of what's happening on the field.

In seven years as the Oilers backup quarterback, Carlson has had no problem protecting his privacy, which he cherishes.

Until he stepped into the spotlight when Warren Moon was traded to the Minnesota Vikings, his parents could come to Oiler preseason practice sessions at Trinity University and sit unnoticed in the stands.

Now his mom gets autograph requests and Carlson is realizing some of the less pleasant aspects he'll have to endure to be the quarterback of an NFL team.

"It would be nice if we could do everything on the field and not worry about the past," Carlson said. "People say distractions aren't distractions but it's easier to go perform as a team. We're looking forward to playing this season on the field."

Returning to the Oilers training camp in his hometown as the starting quarterback has made it more difficult for Carlson to remain a private person.

"It's something that everyone has to learn to deal with," Carlson said.

Russia's Yeltsin kicks off smooth start to Goodwill

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — After several days of embarrassing logistical and organizational snafus, the Goodwill Games got off to a smooth start Saturday with Russian President Boris Yeltsin kicking off the show.

The opening ceremony even started on time.

On the first full day of competition in the 16-day event, the U.S. basketball team cruised past Argentina 83-71, two Russian weightlifters combined for five world records and U.S. volleyballers were kings of the beach.

Crowds were scarce at all events, except for Saturday night's opening ceremony at Kirov Stadium, where a near-capacity 70,000 people watched an extravaganza rivaling the dazzling shows put on at the Olympics.

Two fireballs sped toward each other along an invisible wire, colliding over a cauldron to light the flame for the biggest sports event in Russia since the collapse of the Soviet Union.

The two-hour ceremony, held on a sun-lit summer evening, was an eclectic mix of Russian poems by Alexander Pushkin, classical music by Tchaikovsky, rock tunes, circus acrobats, martial arts experts, ballet dancers, jump-rope champions and fireworks.

Among those enjoying the festivities were Yeltsin, games founder Ted Turner and International Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samaranch.

Yeltsin officially opened the games,

Seven-run third inning gives Angels 11-5 win

Staff Report

TULSA — Julian Heredia pitched well in relief and the Midland Angels grabbed an early 7-0 lead here Saturday for their second Texas League win in a row, topping Tulsa 11-5.

The Angels move to 13-19 while Tulsa falls to 14-18.

Heredia spelled starter and winner Korey Keling (8-7) in the sixth. He struck out six of the eight men he faced, including striking out the side in the seventh and eighth frames. Heredia got the Drillers Desi Wilson to hit into a double play with the bases loaded in the sixth with Midland up 7-3.

Keling got his first win since June 21 to even the five-game series with the Drillers at 2-2.

The Angels seventh-run third proved to be all the offense they needed. In it Bo Ortiz broke an 0-for-10 streak with a two-run double after a Chris Pritchett RBI single to make it 3-0. J.D. Ramirez capped the frame with a two-run homer.

The Drillers cut into Midland's lead with two runs in the third and one in the fifth. Keling walked two men who both scored on singles. Sergio Cairo's solo homer in the fifth made it 7-3.

But the Angels got insurance with three more runs in the eighth. Chris Smith singled and Ramirez walked. Marquis Riley drove in Smith with a single, Ty Boykin walked with the bases loaded and Pritchett had an RBI groundout.

Mike Wolff then hit his 11th homer in the ninth for a 11-3 Angel lead.

Ryan Hancock, just promoted from Single A Lake Elsinore to replace Omar Bencomo, will start tonight for the Angels in the series finale at 6:05 p.m. Chris Curtis (3-11, 5.32 ERA) will pitch for the Drillers.

PEETE: New QB shines

(From 1C)

Carlson, a former star at Baylor who took over from Warren Moon, who went to Minnesota, was 8-of-13 for 75 yards.

Carlson worked the tight end into the Oilers' offense, hitting John Mills on passes of 27 and 8 yards.

The payoff came on the last play of the series when Pat Coleman worked free in the corner of the end zone behind Larry Brown, making a diving catch of a 9-yard touchdown pass from Carlson.

Carlson's only slip came when cornerback Kevin Smith, formerly of Texas A&M, intercepted a pass and returned it 27 yards.

Houston, strictly a run-and-shoot team in the past, worked the tight end into the offense for the first time in the Jack Pardee era.

Aikman, working without his top receivers, hit tight end Jay Novacek and his running backs then turned it over to 256-pound Lincoln Coleman, who scored on a 3-yard run.

Coleman carried six times for 18 yards in the series as the Cowboys tied the game 6-6.

There were no extra point attempts.

Wide receivers Michael Irvin and Alvin Harper, both nursing shoulder injuries, and running back Emmitt Smith didn't play for the Cowboys.

Houston wide receiver Gary Wellman suffered an ankle injury during the game.

Chad Hennings, the third-year defensive tackle, had four sacks during the scrimmage. The Cowboys hope he will be an adequate replacement for Tony Casillas, who took the free agent road to Kansas City.

SMITH: Emmitt likes Barry

(From 1C)

performance in New York.

"I'd just like to duplicate the season we had last year. We've got to want it in our heads and in our hearts."

Smith, the Super Bowl MVP with 132 yards rushing and two touchdowns, said he doesn't believe the coaching switch from Jimmy Johnson to Barry Switzer complicates the season.

"Barry has a more laid back approach than Jimmy," Smith said. "Jimmy would really jump on your butt no matter if you were on the first string or the second string. It didn't matter who you were.

"I've got a lot of respect for my ex-coach and it's unfortunate he can't be here. But I've also got a great deal of respect for coach Switzer.

"Barry Switzer didn't cause coach Johnson to lose his job. He just inherited the team. You can't fault him for that. You have to give the man a chance. Besides, football games are won by the players. A coach doesn't play."

Smith said drawing comparisons between the two coaches is unfair.

"We don't analyze or compare the two coaches," Smith said. "We just don't want to lose no matter who is the head coach. The players have to play."

The third one will be the toughest Super Bowl for the Cowboys to win, he said.

"Nobody has ever done it and for that reason alone you know it's going to be tough," Smith said. "I think you can say we're a little tired after winning back-to-back Super Bowls.

"We've played more games than anybody in the league except Buffalo for the last two years. It takes its toll. Last year was hard. This year will be even harder."

Smith won't use the word "lucky" because coach Johnson hated it. But he said the Cowboys must be "fortunate."

"Because of free agency we don't have much depth and an injury here or there can just knock you off the tracks," he said. "Health is a major factor for this team.

"We can handle everybody gunning for us if we can just keep all of our players on the field."

This will be Smith's fifth NFL season. He has no idea how many more he will play.

"Injuries will probably decide how long I play," Smith said. "I'm enjoying the game and I've been lucky to play for the team I'm playing for. I'm curious how long I'll play myself."

CODY: Carlson takes charge

(From 1C)

"There are some things we all have to do that we don't feel comfortable with but you deal with them."

Carlson's desire for privacy should not be construed as shyness, especially when taking charge on the football field is required.

"He picked up on something that I said during the minicamp and repeated it back to the team," assistant head coach Kevin Gilbride said. "I don't see any problem with Cody taking charge of this team.

"I think they have respect for him as the quarterback. I think it's natural that they look to him as a leader."

Carlson has been able to take charge of the Oilers at crucial times when Moon was injured. He's 10-4 as a starter. He completed 51 of 90 passes for 605 yards, two touchdowns and four interceptions.

In a backup role, he's acquired 762 yards and moved ahead of Dan Pastorini into sixth place on the Oilers' all-time list.

Despite a groin pull, Carlson replaced Moon in the final regular season game and completed 23 of 38 passes for 247 yards and two touchdowns, extending the Oilers' win streak to 11.

Now he's back for another season, but this time he's the guy in charge and he's hearing new praise from his fans.

"It's kind of embarrassing to hear some of the things but it's nice to come home and be here," Carlson said.

"I'm the same as a person, but the responsibilities are different and it's more continuous than in the past. I don't think my attitude has changed because I'm a starter."

Carlson is easy-going and friendly off the field and doesn't expect any different treatment now that he's the starter.

"I think in the past, I've always had a relationship with these guys anyway," he said. "We've had respect for one another, we're working toward the same goal. I really don't see a change within my mind, maybe in other people's minds, but not mine."

Simms criticizes salary cap

Associated Press

■ NFL Roundup

Phil Simms believes the only reason he won't be quarterbacking the New York Giants this season is the NFL salary cap, regardless of what commissioner Paul Tagliabue says.

"I was coming off a Pro Bowl year, I had a great season, but I had a high salary and then I was let go suddenly," Simms told the New York Times. "How can you say that it had nothing to do with the salary cap when it had everything to do with it?"

In a telephone news conference Thursday, Tagliabue said he doesn't believe the salary cap would cause teams to be cutthroat or cold.

"In Phil Simms' case," Tagliabue said in answering a direct question about the former Giant, "the fact he ended up with ESPN rather than seeking to continue his career with another team suggests rather strongly he concluded it was time to retire and start a good second career in television. It wasn't only the effect of the cap on the Giants that produced Phil Simms' retirement.

AP Laserphoto

Phil Simms ...angry about salary cap.

Simms' reaction was strong.

"He has no idea what the hell he's talking about," Simms told The Times for a story in Saturday's editions. "He should be tested for drugs."

Tagliabue would not discuss the matter further.

The Giants, when they cut Simms and his $2.25 million salary, admitted the salary cap was a key factor in view of Simms age — he's 38 — and the fact he is coming off shoulder surgery.

Raiders

Vince Evans, Los Angeles' second-string quarterback and, at 39, the third-oldest player in the NFL, completed seven of eight passes for 63 yards against the Raiders' No. 1 defense in a controlled scrimmage Saturday.

Starter Jeff Hostetler and third-stringer Billy Joe Hobert each threw a TD pass as the Raiders' passing game looked in mid-season form.

Bears

Steve Walsh connected on all 14 of his passes for 122 yards and fellow newcomer Erik Kramer was 8-for-10 for 72 yards in Chicago's annual camp game.

Merril Hoge and Tim Worley scored on one-yard runs as the Bears' almost all-new offense showed it's making progress learning coach Dave Wannstedt's sytem.

Patriots

Rookie center Joe Burch, who was too out of shape to complete drills when he reported to camp, finally got on the practice field Friday, but coach Bill Parcells said it's getting late for the third-round draft choice.

"He's missed a lot," Parcells said. "It's first-hand stuff. When you have to go out and do it, that's a lot different than watching.

Colts

Third-round draft choice Jason Mathews, an offensive tackle from Texas A&M, signed Saturday, and defensive lineman Tim Rother was released.

Midland captures three of four titles

Midland ended up winning three of a possible four titles in the United Girls Softball Association's All-Star Tournament, which concluded Saturday at the MUGS Fields in Ulmer Park.

Midland Black defeated Midland Red, 4-2, Saturday in the finals of the Class 3A Division III (ages 12-15) competition. Earlier in the week, Midland won the Division I (7-9) and Division II (10-12) titles.

In fact, it was an all-Midland final in all three divisions, meaning six of Midland's seven All-Star squads had a shot at the title on the final day of competition. Midland Division IV (16-19) squad was the only Midland team that didn't make the finals in Class 3A. Odessa Red, 6-0, won that crown undefeated by beating Odessa Maroon (4-2) in the finals by a 10-7 margin.

Midland Black skipped through the tournament with a perfect 9-0 mark while Red ended with a 7-2 reading.

Hawley won two Class A titles on Saturday. Hawley posted a perfect 6-0 record in Division IV, beating 4-2 Kermit by an 8-0 margin in the finals. Hawley also won the Class A Division III crown with a 9-6 upset over Coahoma. Hawley had a 5-2 overall tournament mark while Coahoma (6-1) only lost in the finals to Hawley.

In Class 2A play, Andrews kept Big Spring from sweeping the field with a 7-1 win over Big Spring in Division III in the final game of the tournament. Andrews posted a 5-1 tournament mark while Big Spring was 3-3.

Big Spring won the Division IV title in 2A with a 12-4 win over Pampa. Big Spring posted a 6-1 overall record while Pampa was 4-3.

Tower wins LL loser's bracket

Facing elimination from the Little League sectional tournament, Midland Tower came up with three consecutive solo home runs to start the bottom of the last inning beating San Angelo Western 3-2 Saturday.

Cory Simmons, Omar Urquidez and T.J. Chandler hit homers for Tower in the loser's bracket final at Bluebird Park to gain the right to face Lubbock Western today at 7 p.m. in the championship round.

Tower, which lost to Lubbock Western in its first tournament game 3-2, must beat Lubbock twice to win the championship. If Tower wins today the teams play again Monday at 7 p.m., also at Bluebird. Lubbock Western won the winner's bracket Friday by beating San Angelo 9-1.

Simmons threw a one-hitter in going the distance for Tower. But his team trailed 2-0 after San Angelo's Robert Snyder hit an inside the park home run in the second with Tony Aranbula on base. Aranbula had reached on an error.

The Tower threesome then hit their long balls in the bottom of the sixth before San Angelo could record an out.

Also getting hits for Tower in the game were Tim Keller and Tyler Webb, both with singles.

Tower is now 2-1 in the tournament. The winner of the championship round goes to Waco to play in the state tournament.

Tucker team takes Blowout lead

The team of George Tucker, Steve Whiteside, Bill Dunn and A.R. Perez shot 128 Saturday to grab the lead in the championship flight of the Ranchland Hills Country Club Blowout four-man golf tournament championship flight. The team surged ahead of the first-round leading teams headed up by Steve Lovett and Steve Hammel. The Tucker team has a two-round total of 261.

The team of Lovett, Jeff Moses, Reece Boudreaux and Travis Deibert are tied for second at 263 with Ron and Dub Huckabee, Doug Noah and Larry Snyder. The Hammel team (Hammel, John Gatlin, Richard Choate and James T. Kirk) dropped to fifth place by shooting 137 Saturday.

Dan Pender, Scott Peterson, Lon Kile and Mark Stoltz lead the first flight with a two-round total of 282. The tournament's final round is today.

Seconds don't fill Irvan anymore

■ After holding loose cannon status on the NASCAR circuit, Ernie Irvan wants more than his string of second places.

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. — It wasn't that long ago that Ernie Irvan was considered something of a loose cannon who showed the potential to reach stardom on NASCAR's Winston Cup circuit.

■ Diehard 500

He was as likely to crash himself or somebody else as he was to finish. But those days are gone.

In fact, it's a measure of his newfound status as a series star that second-place finishes just aren't good enough for Irvan any more.

Going into Sunday's DieHard 500 at Talladega Superspeedway, Irvan's Robert Yates Racing Fords have finished second in four consecutive races at NASCAR's two biggest tracks — Talladega and Daytona — starting with this race a year ago.

He was runner-up to Dale Earnhardt last July on the 2.66-mile Talladega oval, finished just behind Sterling Marlin in the Daytona 500 in February, lost to Earnhardt at Talladega in May in the Winston Select 500 and finished less than three feet behind Jimmy Spencer earlier this month in the Pepsi 400 at Daytona.

"Whew, that's some stretch," Irvan said after being reminded about his string of runner-up finishes. "To be able to run second in all of them is something.

"We had the dominant car in the Daytona 500 and led the most laps but finished second to Sterling. We led the most laps here in May and then Earnhardt won the race. And, at Daytona (in July), I led the most laps again and finished second to Spencer.

"You keep finishing second and you think, 'Man, what am I doing wrong here?' Maybe I need to do something different. You really can't complain about second-place finishes, but winning is what it's all about."

With 12 career victories, including three this season, Irvan has shown he knows how to win. But the last of those victories came back in May on the road course at Sonoma, Calif.

In the first 13 races of this season, Irvan, in his first full season driving for Yates and in his first real shot at the championship, finished lower than seventh only once.

In his last four outings, he has finished 18th, second at Daytona, 30th and 37th and has fallen out of the series lead. Irvan is 93 points behind Earnhardt, who is aiming to equal Richard Petty's record seven series titles.

"I'd rather be 90 ahead, like we were, instead of 90 behind, like we are," Irvan said. "But it's just like having a bad pit stop during a race and having to come back from that. That's basically where we are right now. You saw how easy Earnhardt could catch up. That's how easy it could happen for us."

Earnhardt, the all-time winningest driver at Talladega with seven victories in Winston Cup races — five in the July event — one in IROC and one in Busch Grand National, is trying not to worry about the Winston Cup title with 14 of 31 races still to run.

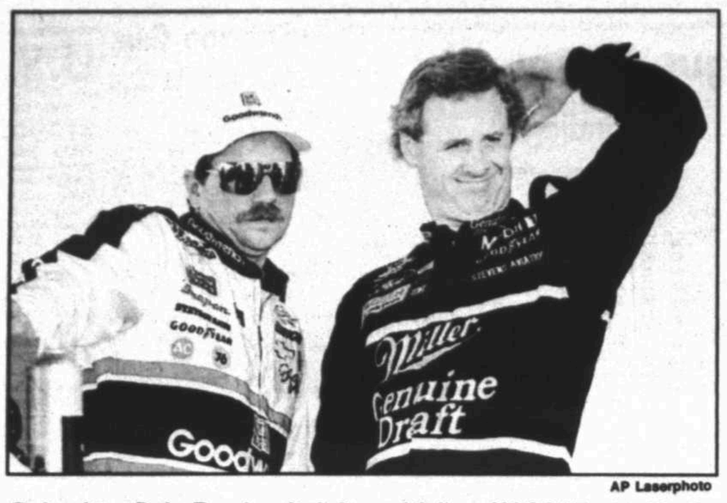

"It's way too early to be worrying about that," Earnhardt said. "If we keep our car headed in the right direction, I think we can hold them off, but it's not close to over. We don't have a big enough lead to coast or be conservative. We've still got to go for it."

As for Sunday's race, which Earnhardt will start from the pole, he said, "It's going to be real competitive with a lot of cars, and it'll probably come down to the same kind of exciting finish it was last time."

Actually, nearly every Winston Cup race at Talladega winds up with a great finish. The July race has developed a reputation for just that, with 20 winners in 25 races. Only Earnhardt and Darrell Waltrip, with two, have won the event more than once.

Irvan will start fifth in the 42-car field, with third-place Rusty Wallace, trailing Irvan by just 151 points, starting 26th on a track where he never has finished better than sixth.

"We just have to avoid disaster and get away from here with points," Wallace said. "It would mean a lot to our team to get a good finish here. I think we've got the car to do it. I just have to keep from attracting the kind of trouble I have in the past."

GOODWILL: Swimming events postponed

(From 1C)

declaring, "I'm sure four years from now our hearts will be moved when we recall these sports events on the banks of the river Neva.

"This is a joyous meeting of old friends. The links between politicians and athletes are very close and we understand each other through them."

Earlier, Yeltsin said he was proud that Russia was staging such a large event — with more than 2,000 athletes from around the world. The first two Goodwill Games were held in Moscow, in 1986, and Seattle, in 1990.

"The very fact that the games are taking place in Russia signifies that the world sports movement trusts our country," he said.

Yeltsin's presence probably had a lot to do with the smooth, punctual and highly professional running of the ceremony.

A day earlier, organizers had been forced to postpone the swimming competition because the water in the SKK indoor pool was a swampy green due to a faulty filtration system.

The water was still a light green Saturday. But after an inspection, officials declared the water safe and gave the go-ahead for all 20 swim races to be held Sunday. The highlight will be the 50-meter duel between world record-holder Tom Jager and Olympic champion Alexander Popov.

While Dream Team II prepares for the World Championships in Toronto next month, a team of lesser-known U.S. collegians got off to a good start Saturday with a convincing win over Argentina.

The Americans never were seriously threatened in the second half, leading 81-60 with about three minutes left, before Argentina scored 11 of the final 13 points.

Michael Finley of Wisconsin came off the bench to lead the team with 16 points. Lou Roe of Massachusetts contributed 13 points, Damon Stoudamire of Arizona had 12 and Shawn Respert of Michigan State 10.

Head coach George Raveling wasn't completely satisfied with the performance.

"We played well offensively in spots," he said. "We played well defensively in spots. But we're not going to win the gold medal with a spotty performance."

On Sunday night, the Americans will face Russia.

"I think there will be a more enthusiastic crowd when we play the Russians," Stoudamire said. "They will have a lot of crowd support. It will be a big game for us. We're in their country. We're playing in front of their people."

In other games in the eight-team round-robin event, Russia edged China 95-93, Italy defeated Brazil 72-67 and Puerto Rico beat Croatia 93-74.

World records fell fast in weightlifting.

Sergei Syrztsov broke three of his own world records in the snatch, clean-and-jerk and overall total in the 218-pound class. He lifted 421 pounds in the snatch and 501.5 pounds in the clean-and-jerk and and had a total of 920.4 pounds.

Andrei Chemerkin, a 325-pound giant known as the world's strongest man, broke two world records and equaled another in the over-238-pound class.

Chemerkin lifted 443.12 in the snatch and 552.2 pounds in the clean and jerk. His total of 992.06 pounds matched his previous record.

The flurry of records was not surprising because the International Weightlifting Federation established new weight classes at the end of 1992.

In beach volleyball, played along the banks of the Neva in front of the Peter and Paul Fortress, U.S. pairs won all five matches — three by the women, two by the men.

The women's winners were Karolyn Kirby and Liz Masakayan, considered the best team in the world, and Barbra Fontana and Lori Forsythe. The men's teams were beach volleyball ace Sinjin Smith and Bruk Vandeweghe, and Carlos Briceno and Jeff Williams.

U.S. coach says basketball spotty in Goodwill opener

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — To head coach George Raveling, the U.S. basketball team's opening performance at the Goodwill Games was "spotty." To others, like former NBA coach Hubie Brown, it was impressive.

The Americans, led by reserve Michael Finley's 16 points, Damon Stoudamire's floor leadership and rebounding by Tim Duncan, Andrew LeClercq and Cherokee Parks, beat Argentina 83-71 on Saturday in a game played before only a few hundred fans.

"We played well in spots," Raveling said. "We played well offensively in spots. We played well defensively in spots. But we're not going to win the gold medal with a spotty performance."

In other games in the eight-team round-robin event, Russia edged China 95-93, Italy defeated Brazil 72-67, and Puerto Rico beat Croatia 93-74.

The U.S. team is comprised strictly of collegians. There are no pros, like those who combined to form Dream Team I and won the 1992 Olympic gold medal, and those who comprise Dream Team II who will compete in next month's World Championships in Canada.

"For our first game, we were a little anxious and nervous," Raveling said. "I was pleased with the physical effort, but not the mental effort. For us to win the gold medal, we need a combination of both. There were too many fluctuations in our mental effort."

Brown, who is doing television commentary on the basketball tournament for TBS, liked what he saw of the U.S. team.

"The U.S. has 12 players and they can all play," he said. "The key is their athletic quickness."

Brown noted that DeClercq, from Florida, and Duncan, from Wake Forest, combined for 12 rebounds in the first half — six off the offensive boards — and several blocked shots, "which allows the other players on the team to get into their transition game."

"And their small forwards, (Lou) Roe (from Massachusetts) and Finley (from Wisconsin), will cause problems for the other teams," Brown said. "Plus, the U.S. has good guard pressure at the defensive end of the floor."

The Americans' defensive pressure forced the Argentinians into only 12 official turnovers, but the number appeared considerably higher.

The U.S. team took control early, scoring 10 straight points after Argentina had scored the first three. A 16-5 run later in the first half, sparked by Finley's 10 points, gave the Americans a commanding 41-27 halftime lead.

Goodwill Capsules

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — A capsule look at Saturday's competition at the Goodwill Games:

WEIGHTLIFTING: Five world records were broken, three by Sergei Syrztsov of Russia in the 218-pound class and two by Andrei Chemerkin of Russia in the over 238-pound class, and one was equaled by Chemerkin. Syrtsov smashed three of his world records, in the snatch with 412 pounds, the clean-and-jerk with 501.5 pounds and total lift, with 920.4 pounds. The 325-pound Chemerkin, known as the world's strongest man, broke his world records in the snatch, lifting 443.12 pounds, and in the clean and jerk, with 552.2 pounds. His total of 992.06 pounds, equaled the world record.

BASKETBALL: The favored United States team, led by 16 points by reserve Michael Finley of Wisconsin, and the all-around play of Damon Stoudamire of Arizona, beat Argentina 83-71 in its opening-game in the eight-team round-robin tournament. In other games, Russia edged China 95-93, Italy surprised Brazil 72-67 and Puerto Rico beat Croatia 93-74.

BOXING: Americans split their four opening-day bouts, with both victories coming in the light flyweight division. Eric Morel of Madison, Wis., outpointed Karmine Molaro of Italy 13-7 and Albert Guardado of Topkas, Kan., beat Jori Turunen of Finland 13-0. The U.S. losers were welterweight David Reid of Philadelphia, 11-7 to Juan Hernandez of Cuba, and bantamweight Jorge Munoz of El Paso, Texas, 9-0 to Enrique Carrion of Cuba.

BEACH VOLLEYBALL: The U.S. teams helped introduce the sport into international competition by winning five opening-day matches — three by the women, two by the men. In the women's competition, Karolyn Kirby and Liz Masakayan, both of San Diego, considered the best team in the world, beat Natalya Bekousova and Mariya Kopylova of Russia 15-3, and Monica Rodrigues and Adriana Samuel of Brazil 15-7, while Barbra Fontana of Laguna Beach, Calif., and Lori Forsythe of Encinitas, Calif., defeated Simone Kooy and Claire Peterson of the Netherlands 15-9. Among the men, Carlos Briceno of Fountain Valley, Calif., and Jeff Williams of Santa Monica, Calif., beat Aloizio Claudino and Emanuel Rego of Brazil 15-9, and Sinjin Smith of Pacific Palisades, Calif., and Bruk Vandeweghe of Beverly Hills, Calif., beat Andrew Burdin and Julien Prosser of Australia 15-10.

Krone's hands idle after spill

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Julie Krone doesn't have a whole heck of a lot to do these days. Not yet, at least.

Nearly a year after she took the spill of her life here, thoroughbred racing's best female jockey is attempting to regain her stride.

"I'm just sitting back and waking up in the morning, and appreciating riding races more than I ever have in my whole life," Krone said after riding here for the first time since accident last August. "I was forced to kind of sit back and start all over again. It took me nine months to heal. It might take me nine months to get all that business back that I had, and the firepower of those horses that get you into that little lime (winner's) circle out there."

Krone was nearly killed on the final day of last year's Saratoga meet. She fell off her mount during a race on the inner turf course and shattered an ankle. Fortunately, she was wearing a flak jacket, which helped her survive the hooves of the trailing horses as they sped past.

When she went down, Krone was at the top of her profession. She had won the 1993 Belmont Stakes aboard Colonial Affair — the only woman to win a Triple Crown race — and for the second straight year she was challenging Mike Smith for the riding title here. She finished second.

Her work load has been limited. She rode only once on opening day here Friday.

"Now, when you're in the winner's circle, you just look up and you're grateful a hundred times more than you ever have been," said Krone, who turned 31 last week. "Winning means so much more. I might sit back and enjoy it a little more on the ride home instead of being critical about a horse that I was second or third on. It makes you appreciate things and think about how hard it really is to win. It makes you want it a hundred million times more."

Krone was greeted with an ovation in the paddock by her fans when she rode through the paddock Friday prior to her first race. She was touched.

"It was very flattering, it made me feel very special," she said. "The fans were saying extra things, speaking words of encouragement, clapping. It really makes a big difference when you have to start all over again."

Take Note Of This

Summer's end is just around the corner and it's time to start making arrangements for education and care of Midland's children. To assist you with information on where education and care is available, the Midland Reporter-Telegram is publishing it's annual Children's Education and Child Care Directory on Sunday, August 7th.

This Directory is a vehicle used to reach parents with information about the services that are available in the Midland area and who provides them. The parents of children in the Midland area have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality education and care. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality education and care in our area.

As a provider of these services in the Midland area, you will want your facility represented in this special Directory with an ad, as well as a story, photo and a dot on the map showing where you are located.

Special ad packages ranging from 8" to 65" are available, as well as rates for ads running without a story, photo, etc.

Deadline for Children's Education and Child Care Directory is Thursday, July 28th. To reserve your ad space, please call

Once enemies, Will and Jose boosting Rangers to playoffs

By Barry Horn
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — "The Jerk" and the "Three-Toed Sloth" appear to be getting along famously now that they live on opposite sides of the same clubhouse.

For Jose Canseco and Will Clark, fierce rivals for seven seasons when they lived on opposite sides of San Francisco Bay, familiarity has bred contentment.

Manager Kevin Kennedy speculates that Clark's first season with Texas may even have nudged the No. 3 and No. 4 hitters in the Rangers' lineup toward what each believes has been the best first half of his career.

For whatever success the Rangers enjoyed during the season's first three months, they can thank the two Bay Area refugees who carried the team to first place in the American League West with their bats.

Never before has a Ranger hit 24 home runs by July 12, as Canseco had when the team retired for the All-Star break. Never before has a Ranger hit as high as .353, as clean-up hitter Clark did before going off to play in the All-Star game.

To be sure, reason No. 1 for Canseco and Clark bouncing back from disappointing 1993 seasons has been good health.

Clark's knees are fine. Canseco's right elbow is healed.

Clark already has driven in more runs (78) than he did in his final season with the San Francisco Giants (73). One more home run and he will equal last season's total of 14. Canseco had more home runs (24) and RBI (75) in 85 games than he produced in an injury-shortened 1993, during which he produced 10 home runs and 46 RBI in 60 games.

"Among other things, what we have here is a positive rivalry between two guys who thrive on competition," Kennedy said. "Each guy is pushing just a little to show the other what he's got."

Like on the first Sunday in June, when Canseco went 3-for-5, hit a home run and drove in three runs in a 10-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Clark went 3-for-4 with four RBIs.

"It's like Sandy Koufax told me when he was pitching for the Dodgers and Don Drysdale was on the same staff," Kennedy said. "One guy would pitch a two-hit shutout and the other would want to go out and throw a one-hitter."

Back on that Sunday in June in the steamy, cramped visitor's Fenway Park clubhouse, Canseco, aka "The Jerk," shouted above the media swarm, "Not bad for a three-toed sloth."

And then he laughed.

From the other side of the room, Clark, aka "The Three-Toed Sloth," replied with a wide grin.

More than a month later, Canseco and Clark smile when reminded of the moment. It was, after all, Canseco who referred to Clark as a slow-moving, tree-dwelling edentate mammal during the 1990 season. And it was Clark, who responded by referring to Canseco as a contemptible sort, motivated by foolish behavior.

From their lockers on opposite sides of the Rangers' clubhouse, separated only by a red sea of carpet, each expresses nothing but professional admiration for the other.

"He's concentrating on baseball, keeping his life simple and basic, coming to the ballpark and showing what a great player he is," says Clark about a player he once knew only through box scores and newspaper stories.

"He seems to be a nice guy," is the Canseco assessment of Clark.

The clubhouse view is all that each can offer about the other. They seldom see each other out of uniform.

Though each is 30 years old, each played his first full season in 1986, each has a baseball resume filled with highlights, they have little in common outside the game.

"You know how it is," says Canseco, who makes pit stops in the clubhouse while Clark makes it a second home, "once players leave the ballpark, they have families and business to attend to."

Their mere places in the batting order affect each other's performances and statistics. Canseco hits third, Clark fourth.

"He has a great on-base percentage," said Clark. "He's there on base quite a bit for me."

"Give Will Clark a lot of credit," said Canseco. "His performance dictates what pitches I see. I'm third in the league in runs scored because someone behind me is driving me in."

To hear Canseco and Clark tell their story today, their name-calling was just good clean fun from the start. Only the media, which often doesn't know a good joke when it hears one, has blown it out of proportion, they claim.

Some background:

Before Canseco and Clark arrived in Texas amid whispers that each already had entered the twilight of his career, they had been considered among the best in baseball.

In 1988, Canseco batted .307, hit 42 home runs and drove in 124 runs for the Oakland A's.

The next year, Clark batted .333 with 23 home runs and 111 RBIs.

By 1990, Giants management rewarded Clark with a contract that paid him $3.7 million a season. For a fleeting moment, Clark was the highest-paid player in baseball. In baseball, highest paid often translates into best player.

A reporter asked Canseco about who deserved to be recognized as baseball's best and Clark's contract. The right fielder paused, sought the right words, remembered back to a favorite show he saw on the Discovery Channel and mentioned that he thought Clark, a first baseman who had not stolen 40 bases in his career was, "an overrated, slow, three-toed sloth with no arm."

Soon after the A's gave Canseco a new $4.7 million contract. Someone asked Clark for a comment. "I don't care," he said. "Let that jerk have all the fun over there he wants."

The media in the San Francisco-Oakland area had field days with the quotes. Reporters dutifully traveled from one side of the Bay to the other looking for reaction.

Rangers general manager Tom Grieve, who traded for Canseco on Aug. 31, 1992, had heard stories about the Canseco-Clark non-relationship.

When it became evident after last season that the Rangers would not re-sign free-agent first baseman Rafael Palmeiro, the team's attention turned to Clark. Grieve remembered the stories.

"There is friction between a lot of players when they don't know each other well," said Grieve. "Put them on the same team, and perceptions change when they see each other a daily basis."

Said Canseco, "To tell the truth, I just wanted to see what he looked like up close. It's been awhile since I've seen a three-toed sloth in person."

Mariners split with Red Sox

Associated Press

BOSTON — Ken Griffey Jr. led off the 11th inning with his 36th homer and the Seattle Mariners beat the Boston Red Sox 6-3 for a doubleheader split on a rainy Saturday.

■ AL Roundup

The Red Sox won the opener 6-5 as Joe Hesketh gave Boston a rare victory by a staring pitcher. The second game was delayed by rain for more than two hours.

The four-game series was moved from Seattle to Fenway Park after ceiling panels fell at the Kingdome earlier in the week. A crowd of 17,168 — 5,392 more than Friday night — paid $10 for general admission seating on a first-come, first-served basis.

Griffey, tied with Matt Williams for the major-league homer lead, connected against Jose Melendez (0-1) for an opposite-field drive into the screen in left.

The Mariners added two more runs in the 11th on an RBI single by Reggie Jefferson and a squeeze bunt by Chris Howard.

In the opener, Nixon had four hits, two on bunts. Luis Sojo tied a Seattle record with three doubles, and set up Felix Fermin's two-run single in the ninth inning.

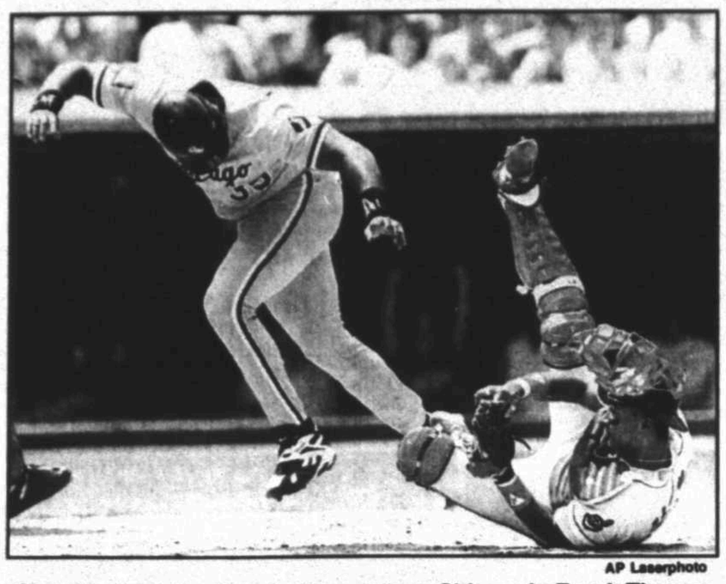

Blue Jays 9, Rangers 1

TORONTO — Randy Knorr homered twice and drove in four runs and Toronto beat Texas for its season-high seventh straight win.

Knorr had a two-run single during a six-run first inning. He added two solo home runs, giving him his first multi-homer game in the majors and a single-game high for RBIs.

Al Leiter (5-5) struck out 11 and scattered four hits in seven innings. He had not pitched more than 6⅓ innings in nine previous starts.

Texas lost its third in a row. The Rangers still lead the AL West with a 46-51 record, while Toronto (46-50) remained fourth in the AL East.

CLEVELAND — Paul Sorrento homered for the fifth time in five games and Jason Grimsley came within one out of his first career shutout as Cleveland beat Chicago.

Albert Belle drove in four runs as the Indians pulled within one game of the AL Central-leading White Sox. Chicago holds a 6-5 edge in the season series, which concludes Sunday.

Belle has remained in Cleveland's lineup while he appeals his 10-day suspension for using a corked bat in Chicago last weekend. The appeal will be heard Friday.

Athletics 6, Orioles 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Todd Van Poppel pitched seven strong innings and Ruben Sierra and Scott Brosius homered, leading Oakland over Baltimore.

Van Poppel (6-9) gave up one run and three hits for his first victory since beating the Orioles in Baltimore on July 7. He walked four and struck out five.

The Orioles scored twice in the ninth off Bob Welch, capped by Mark McLemore's RBI double.

Royals 4, Tigers 1

DETROIT — David Cone pitched two-hit ball over eight innings and struck out a season-high 12 batters as Kansas City snapped a three-game losing streak with a victory over Detroit.

Cone (14-4), who won his fourth straight decision, allowed a leadoff single to Tony Phillips and walked Lou Whitaker, then retired 16 consecutive batters before Phillips drew a one-out walk in the sixth inning.

Yankees 7, Angels 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Don Mattingly collected his 2,000th career hit and Paul O'Neill and Mike Stanley each homered as New York won for the ninth time in 10 games.

Mattingly became the sixth Yankee to reach 2,000 hits when he singled in the seventh, his second hit of the game.

Twins 5, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Pedro Munoz homered and had an RBI single and Dave Stevens pitched one-hit ball over 5⅓ innings of relief as Minnesota beat Milwaukee.

Stevens (3-2) started the fourth inning in relief of Pat Mahomes and finished with three strikeouts and two walks. Mahomes and Dave Winfield were activated from the 15-day disabled list by the Twins before the game.

Reynolds, Astros shut out Pirates

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell hit his 30th home run and Shane Reynolds struck out 11 in his first major-league shutout, leading the Houston Astros past the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-0 Saturday night.

■ NL Roundup

Bagwell had four hits, drove in four runs and scored three times. He became only the third player in franchise history to hit 30 home runs in a season.

Bagwell hit a two-run homer in the first inning. His 18th home run in the Astrodome this season tied a team record set by Lee May in 1974.

Reynolds (8-4) pitched a four-hitter in his first complete game in the majors. He walked none and his 11 strikeouts were the most by an Astros pitcher this season.

Braves 8, Cardinals 5, (12)

ST. LOUIS — Jeff Blauser singled home the go-ahead run and David Justice followed with a two-run homer in the 12th inning as Atlanta defeated St. Louis.

The Cardinals tied it in the ninth when Luis Alicea hit a rare home run off Greg McMichael. The Braves reliever had not allowed a homer in 51 innings this season, and only one home run in his last 128 innings, before Alicea connected for a solo shot with one out.

But the Braves broke through in the 12th against Bryan Eversgerd (2-2).

Padres 7, Phillies 1

PHILADELPHIA — Bill Krueger pitched 6⅓ strong innings and San Diego spoiled the return of three Philadelphia players from the disabled list.

Lenny Dykstra, Dave Hollins and Ben Rivera all were back in action, but they could not stop San Diego. Hollins, in fact, re-injured the same hand that had sidelined him for two months .

Reds 3, Cubs 1, (13)

CHICAGO — Jacob Brumfield singled home the go-ahead run in the 13th inning and Cincinnati defeated Chicago.

Cubs starter Kevin Foster took a three-hitter and a 1-0 lead into the ninth, but the Reds tied it on consecutive doubles by Brumfield and Barry Larkin. That finished Foster, who struck out 10 and walked one.

Eddie Taubensee singled off Chuck Crim (4-4) to start the 13th, advanced on Thomas Howard's sacrifice and scored on Brumfield's single.

After a walk, Brumfield stole third and scored on Jerome Walton's single.

Giants 4, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Matt Williams and Barry Bonds continued to benefit from Darryl Strawberry's presence in the lineup, as both homered, sending San Francisco to a victory over New York in a game delayed more than four hours by rain.

Williams took over the major-league home run lead with his 36th, a two-run shot in the first inning and Bonds led off the ninth with his 31st homer for the Giants, who improved to 11-2 since Strawberry joined them July 7.

Expos 2, Dodgers 0

MONTREAL — Jeff Fassero outdueled Tom Candiotti before leaving with a shoulder injury as Montreal won its fifth straight game.

Fassero (8-6) allowed just five singles, struck out four and walked none before straining a muscle beneath his right shoulder blade with two outs in the seventh while making a 2-2 delivery to Tim Wallach.

Rockies 5, Marlins 4

DENVER — Andres Galarraga drove in four runs with a pair of home runs and Charlie Hayes added a solo shot as Colorado held off Florida.

Galarraga's 29th and 30th home runs of the year helped snap Colorado's four-game losing streak. It also backed Marvin Freeman, who limited Florida to two runs and eight hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Freeman (9-2) didn't strike out or walk a batter, but induced 15 groundball outs and was aided by two double plays.

Bruce Ruffin allowed Kurt Abbott's two-run homer with two outs in the ninth. He then struck out pinch-hitter Robb Natal for his 15th save as the Rockies moved within two games of the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West.

Fiori holds on at New England

Associated Press

■ Golf

SUTTON, Mass. — Ed Fiori ended the third day of the New England Classic the way he began it, only a little wetter.

He was still clinging to the one-stroke lead over Kenny Perry that he took into Saturday's third round when rain forced its suspension with 12 golfers on the course.

"I wasn't nervous" in the unusual position as a leader, said Fiori, winless since his third PGA Tour victory in 1982. "I only missed a couple of shots out there."

There was little change among the leaders as four of the top five scorers through Friday's second round shot par on an easy course made tougher by strong winds.

Fiori, who was at 10-under, was one of them. Perry, at 9-under, and Guy Boros and Fred Funk, both at 8-under, were the others. Fiori and Perry finished 12 holes and Boros and Funk 13.

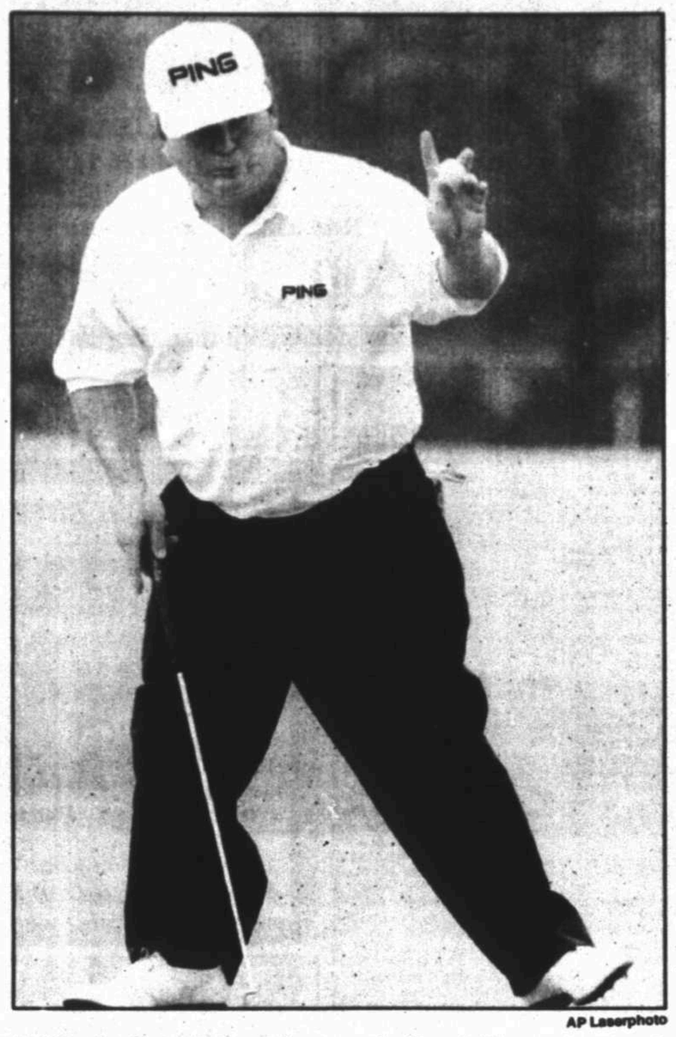

David Feherty was the only one of the five to gain ground, shooting 1-under before play was stopped for the second and last time with his ball on the soggy 15th fairway. He moved into a tie with Perry.

Fran Quinn, who completed his round with a 5-under 66, was at 8-under.

Play first was halted for 1 hour, 55 minutes before resuming at 5 p.m. EDT. It was suspended again at 5: 19 and called off for the day at 6: 17.

The 12 golfers were to complete their third round this morning before the beginning of the final round.

Quinn, of nearby Northboro, plays on the 7,110-yard, par-71 Pleasant Valley Country Club course 10 to 15 times a year. He had a 205 for 54 holes.

Ed Fiori acknowledges the crowd after sinking a spectacular putt to lead the New England Classic with a 10-under.

The 74 golfers who made the cut had to shoot 1-under-par 141 through two rounds to do it. But only 24 of the 62 who completed their rounds broke par Saturday.

"Even par (Saturday) was a good score," Fiori said. "The greens were pretty bumpy out there. All the putts I thought I made I just missed."

He thinks the rain should smooth out the greens in time for him to stand over the 9-foot birdie putt he left sitting on the squishy 13th green.

"The rain will do the course good," Fiori said. "There will be a lot of low scores."

Fiori held or shared the lead all day. He dropped into a tie with Boros at 10-under when he bogeyed the 467-yard 10th hole.

Southwestern Bell

BELTON, Mo. — Crowd favorite Jim Colbert took advantage of perfect weather to shoot a 7-under-par 63, one under the course record, and seized a 2-stroke lead after 36 holes.

Colbert's 63 gave him a 9-under 131, but it was crowded at the top of the leader board after sunny, windless conditions led to some of the lowest scores in the tournament's five-year history.

Isao Aoki shot a 6-under 64 and was tied with Larry Gilbert and first-round leader Graham Marsh at 7-under 133. Marsh, who had a 66 Friday, came in with a 67 Saturday while Gilbert had a 66.

Four strokes back at 5-under 135 were Calvin Peete, Larry Laoretti, J.C. Snead and defending champion Dave Stockton, who took three hours of treatment for a sore back after Friday's 70 and shot a 65 Saturday that put him four strokes off Colbert's pace.

Bob Reith reeled off six straight birdies on the tough back nine and chopped 10 strokes off his opening-round 73. His string started at No. 12 with a 12-footer, his longest birdie putt in what he termed "an incredible" stretch.

Colbert, who won the 1991 tournament with a 9-under 201, had five birdies on the front side and as usual was a crowd favorite.

Colbert's round started poorly when he missed a 4-foot birdie putt on the first hole.

"But putting is what got me a 30 on the front nine," Colbert said. "I was not really sharp on my woods or irons all day."

Davenport boosts U.S. to Federation Cup finals

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Lindsay Davenport outlasted French Open finalist Mary Pierce on Saturday to help lead the United States into the Federation Cup tennis tournament final.

The Americans will meet defending champion Spain, which had to win the doubles against Germany in order to reach Sunday's championship.

Mary Joe Fernandez began the United States' 3-0 victory over France by defeating Julie Halard 6-1, 6-3 in 65 minutes. Then came Davenport's struggle with Pierce, which the American won 5-7, 6-2, 6-2.

"The first match was really the key. Mary Joe got us one up," Davenport said. "In my first set, I made too many errors."

Davenport was called for four foot faults in the opening set.

"It's a bad habit. It was going away but it started coming back today," she laughed. "My foot turns. I just have to stand further back."

The U.S. doubles team also needed three sets before Gigi Fernandez and Zina Garrison Jackson toppled Halard and Nathalie Tauziat 3-6, 6-1, 6-2.

"The team is much better that we thought at first," U.S. Captain Marty Riessen said of the Americans. "It helped that Mary Joe is playing well again."

He also praised Davenport.

"Lindsay has a match temperament, a champion's temperament," Riessen said. Davenport is ranked sixth in the world, while Fernandez has dropped to No. 11.

The United States, which last won the Federation Cup in 1990, has won the coveted prize 14 times since the tournament was first played in 1963.

Spain lost its opening singles in a surprise three-set match when Wimbledon champion Conchita Martinez, ranked third in the world, fell to Germany's Sabine Hack 6-2, 5-7, 4-6.

AP Laserphoto

Lindsay Davenport hugs coach Marty Riesen after she defeated France's Mary Pierce.

But Arantxa Sanchez Victory, the reigning French Open winner, leveled the score at one point each by downing Germany's Anke Huber 4-6, 6-0, 7-5.

The came the decisive doubles, where Sanchez Vicario and Martinez, one of the top doubles teams in the world, beat Germany's Barbara Rittner and Christine Singer 7-5, 6-1. Spain was in the final once again.

This is the last year the Federation Cup will be played under the best-of-3 points system of two singles and a doubles.

Starting next year, the eight highest ranked women's national teams will play a format similar to the men's Davis Cup, requiring a best-of-5 points for two singles played one day, and two singles and a doubles played the second day.

The Davis Cup is different in that it plays two singles the first day, a doubles the second, and two "reverse" singles on the third day, with each match counting one point as in the Federation Cup.

WOMEN: Sheehan leads

finished 75-76.

"By no means is this tournament over," Sheehan said. "There are a lot of people left in it, now. Helen let a lot of people back in this tournament."

Green, who started the day at four under, six shots behind Alfredsson, made a late run and got to seven under with a birdie at 16. But she gave a stroke back with bogey at 17 and shot a 69.

"I'm really surprised where I'm at, after being nine shots back after seven holes," Green said. "Saturday is the day where you do your moving and try and get into position to win. I feel like I'm playing well and I have a lot of confidence right now."

Donna Andrews had a third-round 70 and was alone at 209. Pamela Wright, 71, and Alicia Dibos, 73, were at 210, while Pat Bradley, 70, and Laura Davies, 75, were another stroke back.

There was never any real charge in the third round. The story of this day was the collapse of Alfredsson, whose only victory since joining the LPGA Tour in 1991 came last year in the Dinah Shore.

She started the round at 10 under and with a four-shot lead over England's long-hitting Davies. That cushion was courtesy of an opening-round 63, which matched the lowest round by a male or female in a major tournament, and a 69 on Friday that gave her the women's Open 36-hole scoring record.

And it appeared that Alfredsson would turn the 49th Open into a route when she ran off birdies at Nos. 5, 6 and 7 to go 13 under for the championship — a score unheard of in Open play.

The most strokes under par at any point in a men's U.S. Open was 12 under by Gil Morgan during the third round at Pebble Beach in 1992. The USGA media information guide doesn't provide the same statistic for the women's Open, but USGA officials believe it had never been done before.

But that was the last one-putt green for Alfredsson.

She bogeyed three of the next four holes to slip to 10 under. Alfredsson continued to struggle, but managed to make par at 12 and 13, then she lost it completely. The gory details:

— Her tee shot on 14 landed in Indianwood's disctinctive brown fescue and her second shot went sideways, across the green onto some trampled rough behind the spectator ropes. Bogey, nine under.

— On 16, her second shot from short rough didn't reach the green. A 10-foot putt to save par slid by on the right side. Bogey, eight under.

— At 17, a 188-yard par-3, her tee shot went left onto hard, packed-down grass. Her second shot plugged in thick greenside rough. The next took a wicked hop and rolled about 40 feet past the hole. Double-bogey, six under.

— Her tee shot at 18 went right into a swale at the knee of the dogleg right. Her approach was too hot and rolled into the second cut of grass on the back of the 24,000 square-foot putting surface, one of the largest in the United States. Using her putter, she rolled the ball four feet past and below the hole. It took her two more putts to finish. Bogey, five under.

Mrs. Lillie M. Henderson
Aug. 11, 1911 July 17, 1993

It's been a year now since you've been gone, yet we feel in our hearts you've never left us.
Physically, we know you're gone because we miss you so much; but our love & thoughts are with you everyday. We remember, little over a year ago, We, begged you to fight to beat the illness that was trying to take you away from us. In our selfishness and the love we had for you we didn't think of the pain we were asking you to endure for our sakes. We knew you were strong, and if anybody could have beat that sickness it would have been you.
But we realized that we were asking you to live with pain and we loved you too much to ask that of you. So we released you to your maker our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.
As you layed quietly we held your hand & kissed you and told you how much we loved you.
We thank God for the years he loaned you to us, your smiling face and those wonderful times we shall never forget. We love you, we miss you and we live to see you again.

Take Note Of This

Summer's end is just around the corner and it's time to start making arrangements for education and care of Midland's children. To assist you with information on where education and care is available, the Midland Reporter-Telegram is publishing it's annual Children's Education and Child Care Directory on Sunday, August 7th.

This Directory is a vehicle used to reach parents with information about the services that are available in the Midland area and who provides them. The parents of children in the Midland area have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality education and care. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality education and care in our area.

As a provider of these services in the Midland area, you will want your facility represented in this special Directory with an ad, as well as a story, photo and a dot on the map showing where you are located.

Special ad packages ranging from 8" to 65" are available, as well as rates for ads running without a story, photo, etc.

Deadline for Children's Education and Child Care Directory is Thursday, July 28th. To reserve your ad space, please call

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

This 3-bedroom, 2-bathroom house is one of the charming family homes tucked away on Shell Avenue, a block south of Scharbauer Drive.

Conveniently situated near many local amenities, including several schools it is located in a very quiet and pleasant part of old Midland.

At $67,500, this attractive family home is a real bargain because it is packed full of features and is set in landscaped grounds.

One of the first things you notice when you drive up to the house is the half-moon driveway.

This is an unusual feature no matter where the house is, but for a house in this price range it is an indication of just how much time and energy has been spent developing this property to its highest potential.

At the rear of the house is a lovely, private garden and patio.

Flanked by overhanging trees and high hedges which ensure plenty of shade and privacy, this garden is graced by a beautifully maintained lawn (which doubles as a croquet lawn).

Once inside the property, one immediately notices all of the features that one would expect to find in a house in a higher price bracket: features such as ceiling fans throughout, spacious rooms, a security system with floodlights, Birch paneling and cabinets and a brass/brick fireplace in the family room.

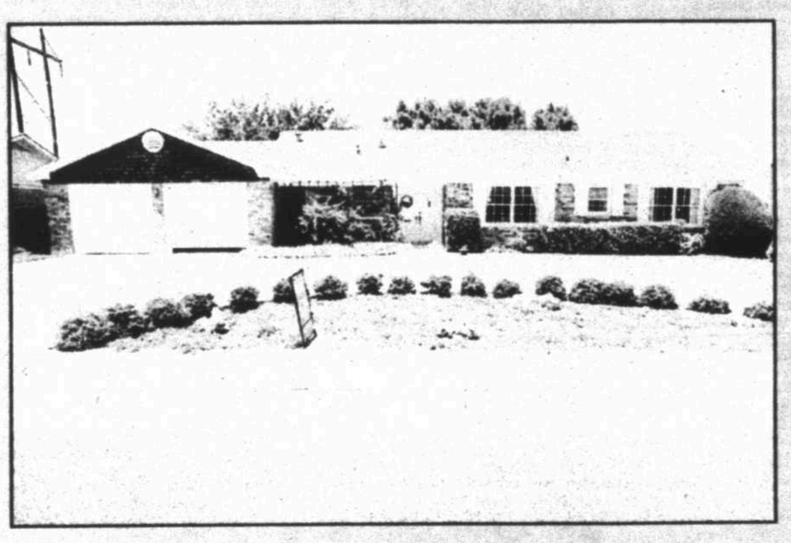

Overall there is a lot to see in this house, which is why Kay Pederson of Chaparral Realtors is holding an open house between 2 and 4 o'clock this afternoon.

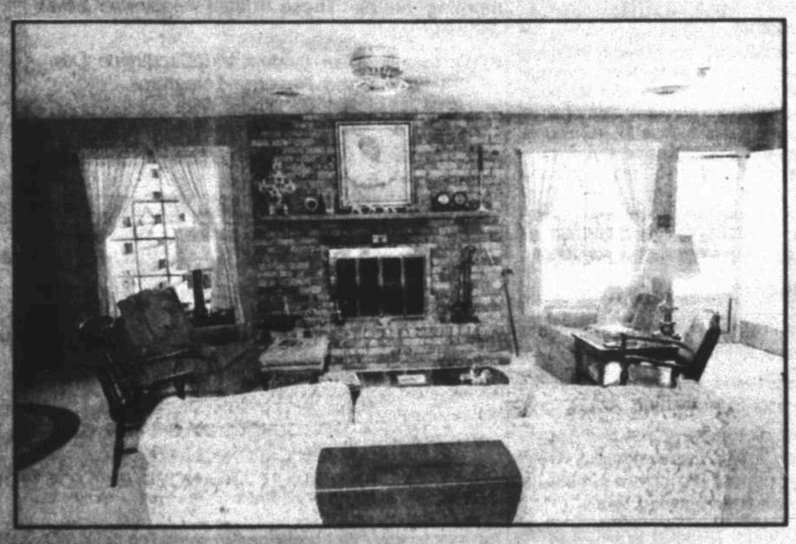

For more information about this house, or arrange an appointment to view, stop by the house at 1002 Shell this afternoon, or call Kay at 686-7000.

Improvements to FHA will make a good thing better

Pat Orseth
President/Midland
Association of Realtors

Can you name a federal government program that generates its own income and helps low-moderate-and middle-income people achieve the dream of home ownership? If you're one of the millions of Americans who have used the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) mortgage program, you know how valuable this government program can be in assisting those first-time buyers who are unable to qualify for privately insured financing.

But did you know that proposals now under consideration by Congress can expand the program's reach and make it easier to use?

"The Federal Housing Administration represents an excellent route first-time buyers can take to achieve home ownership. FHA's single-family mortgage insurance program typically serves borrowers who have lower incomes, make smaller down payments and purchase less expensive homes than buyers using private mortgage insurance," explains Pat Orseth, president of the Midland Association of realtors. FHA is a key financing tool for entry-level buyers, because it has lower down payment requirements and more lenient loan qualification requirements than most forms of conventional financing, she explains.

According to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), FHA insured more than one million mortgages in 1993, including those for 400,000 first-time buyers. "The program is solid, viable and necessary. But it could be made even better," says Orseth.

The Midland Association of Realtors, along with the National Association of Realtors, is urging that reasonable and responsible changes be made to FHA to expand the program's reach and make it easier to use. Among the proposals being advocated are:

- An increase in the current FHA base insurance limit, which currently is $67,500; and an increase in the maximum mortgage limit, which is currently $151,725. Raising the base and the maximum limit would enable more buyers to FHA in more areas. These adjustments would allow the program's insurance coverage to more accurately reflect increases in home prices that have occurred in markets across the nation.
- Simplification of the down payment process and streamlining the mortgage premium structure. These important changes will make qualification for FHA financing less cumbersome and more "user-friendly" for both buyers and lenders.
- Establishment of a program for risk-sharing of insured mortgages between FHA and other entities, such as state housing finance agencies. FHA credit enhancement would be made available through the risk-sharing arrangements in connection with loans that qualify under he state program guidelines, but which exceed FHA mortgage insurance limits.
- Creation of a no-down payment program targeted to low-income buyers in urban renewal areas. This program would help boost home ownership in underserved.

"As Congress considers housing legislation this year, it is important that FHA's role as a crucial source of mortgage finance be continually strengthened. Potential home buyers deserve nothing less, says Orseth. "FHA's good service can be improved, and Realtors are committed to making that happen.":

The Midland Association of Realtors is one of more than 1,800 local boards and associations that comprise the National Association of Realtors. As the nation's largest trade association, NAR is "The Voice for Real Estate," representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry."

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

A small deposit is required.

AVIS LUBE

SIGNING BONUS

How does your current job stack up against AVIS LUBE?

SALARY

Our minimum starting salary is $5/hr. Manager trainees can start at $300 a week or more (depending on experience). We also give you a week's salary as a SIGNING BONUS — PART-TIMERS TOO!

SECURITY

AVIS LUBE offers stable employment year-round. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) with your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to tailor-make a schedule to fit your needs. Our locations are open from 8 A.M. - 6 P.M. Monday through Saturday, and on Sunday from noon to 5. Full-timers work a five day week!

BENEFITS

We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We also have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement, and a profit sharing plan!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

95% of our managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. We offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you walk into one of our Avis Lubes or Kent Kwiks!

SO HOW DO WE MEASURE UP?

Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With Avis, the chances are very high that you could be running one of our locations, making in the mid to upper $20's, plus bonuses! The first step is to take several tests and questionnaires which assist us in determining if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. You can come by our Midland office (3314 No. Loop 250) Monday through Friday from 9 to 3. If you live in Odessa, our office is on 809 So. Crane, and gives the tests on Tuesdays only at 9 A.M. For more information, please call Andy Salcedo at 520-4000.

Mahogany double doors give entry to this custom built contemporary home. A wide foyer leads to gracious and "well appointed" rooms inviting guests to enjoy the exquisite craftsmanship and design of this 3 bedroom, 6 1/2 bath home. High beamed ceilings, a formal dining room, a large gourmet kitchen optimizes space. The Ultimate master suite overlooks a landscaped patio area. The suite contains his and her separate baths, dressing rooms, and room sized closets, plus sitting area and a private office. This home is very secure, "self contained" and easy to maintain. You must see it in it's entirety to fully appreciate it.

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, July 24, 1994 — SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

COMING AUGUST 7...

AN UPDATE ON THE EASTERN SHELF

BRIEFING

Rig count

Drilling activity held steady for the week ended July 15, according to Baker Hughes.

The Permian Basin rig count inched down one to 108 for the week, below the 115 seen last year.

Lea County, N.M. was the most active in the Basin with 15 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 12 rigs and Midland County with nine rigs.

Nationwide, the rig count rose five to 773, well above the year-ago count of 720.

Among major producing states, Texas gained the most rigs, five, while the sharpest decrease was seen in New Mexico, four rigs.

Please see RIGS/4

Pumpjacks near Majamar pump New Mexico Intermediate, now reflected in Oil Report price data.

Oil price

Oil prices eased this past week as the Nigerian oil strike did not affect imports.

Meanwhile domestic production this half hit its lowest six-month level in 36 years as production averaged only 6,653,000 b/d — 3.6 percent lower than last year. Meanwhile, imports averaged 8,733,000 b/d up 4.1 percent from the previous six-month period. API says U.S. import needs are growing at 9-10 percent per year.

Moving on

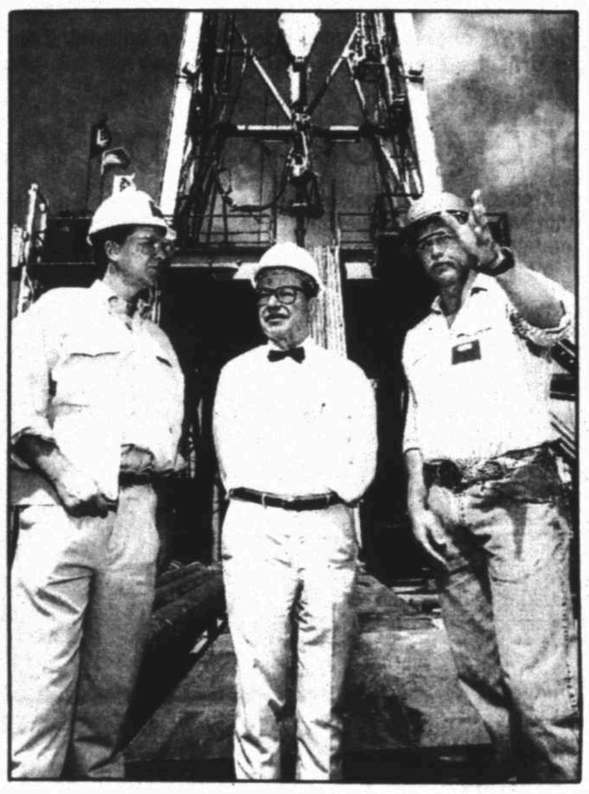

Things can't be that bad in the oilpatch, because according to a survey by Ryder Truck Rentals, Odessa is one of the most popular destinations for Americans relocating to small cities under 100,000.

The Ryder Relocation Survey reports that over the past 12 months 117 household moved into Odessa for every 100 that moved out, making Odessa 16th out of the top 20 destinations in the U.S.

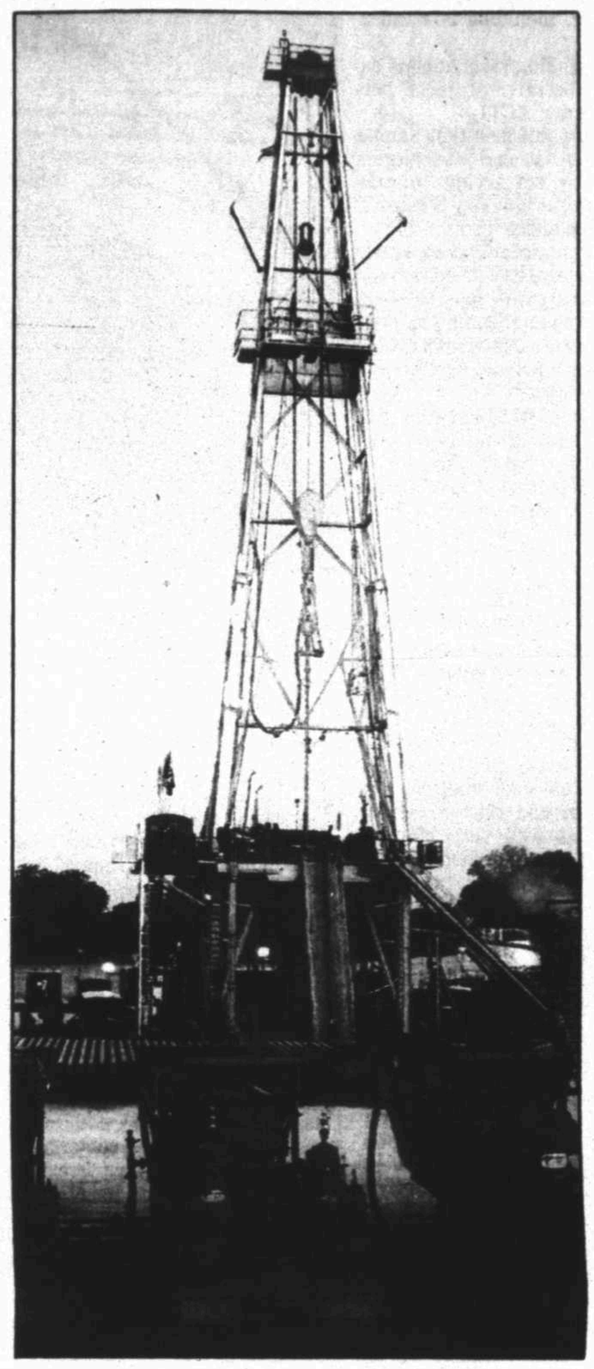

Grand Junction Colorado was number one on the list with 120-100 moves.

The survey noted that Dallas was the largest source for people moving into Odessa, and also the largest destination for those moving out.

Conoco spuds key well

■ Deep Illinois wildcat may unlock significant new U.S. gas reserves.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A Midland-based Conoco team is drilling a deep gas wildcat in Illinois that could be the key to unlocking major new gas reserves in the U.S.

The deepest wildcat ever for Illinois, the Einar Dyhrkopp No.4-1, is located three miles south of Shawneetown in Gallatin County, Illinois and has a projected total depth of 17,500 feet — 3,000 feet deeper than a previous test. It is set to test a geological concept that, if successful, could have profound rewards for Conoco, the Permian Basin and the oil and gas industry.

"This is a very rank, very high risk well, with only one in 30 chances of being commercial," said Mark Wheeler, Midland Division Exploration Manager, "but if it hits it could be a very big opportunity for Conoco — and the industry." Wheeler said a commercial natural gas discovery in the Illinois Basin would put Conoco in the enviable position of owning large gas reserves close to the Chicago market.

While the Illinois Basin has extensive shallow production above 4,000 feet, the Einar Dyhrkopp No. 4-1 will be the first time, says Dave Brewster Conoco's project geophysicists based in Midland, that anyone has ever looked at the deep sand formations of the Basin.

OIL SHOW TECHNOLOGY

National lab spreads word about oil industry projects

■ Sandia National Labs will visit the Oil Show in October to talk about its work with the oil and gas industry.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

A first-time exhibitor at the Permian Basin Oil Show, 1994 edition, will be Sandia National Laboratories, which has facilities in Albuquerque and in Livermore, Calif.

Sandia, designated a national laboratory in 1979, was established over 40 years ago by the Atomic Energy Commission and Department of Defense to perform nuclear weapons research.

Today, Sandia is a participant in the Department of Energy's "Natural Gas and Oil Technology Partnership," offering its expertise and facilities to the oil and gas industry for research and development.

"We're trying to provide some capabilities with regard to our expertise and equipment that aren't readily available to private industry, and support oil industry research and development," explained Kathy Gaither with Sandia's geophysical technology department.

She said projects originate with the oil and gas industry, who bring technological problems before a panel

NationsBank top lender for energy

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

NationsBank was the number one energy lender in the world in 1993, according to information recently released by the Petroleum Economist.

It marks the third straight year that NationsBank — which counts Midland as one of its prime energy lending centers — has been number one in three major categories: number of energy loans, dollars loaned and number of energy loans arranged.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Oil import problems not a new issue

Pitts

While researching a story recently, Ellen Hopkins, one of our freelance writers, was digging through old copies of the Big Spring Herald when she came across an item from 1928 and sent it to me with this notation: "Is this funny or scary?"

She was talking about how little oil industry issues and rhetoric have changed over the past 67 tears.

The item in question was a reprint of an editorial published 5-18-28 in Western World, an industry magazine. Whether or not the magazine was the forerunner of World Oil we don't know, but the opinion piece, which talked about the new concept of oil proration and setting a tariff (import fee) on cheap imported oil to protect the domestic oil worker and producer, sounded like World Oil's straight forward style. Here's what it said:

"About a year ago Western World suggested that a vigorous and determined drive be started to obtain tariff protection for the domestic oil producer. That topic would seem at least as timely now as then — perhaps in view of such steps as proration, it is even more timely.

So far as the price of oil is concerned, if there be anything in this talk of over-production, proration's effect might easily be negatived by increased importations of cheap foreign oil. And thus the American industry would be doubly burdened — limited in its production without any sort of compensation in price. Common fairness on the part of those who demand limitation of the home output would seem to dictate that they demand, at the same time, protection of the home market.

We have protected such colossal enterprises as the steel industry and in recent years have extended the same principle to various classes of agriculture products. The argument for a tariff is certainly as sound as that for protective duties on manufactures in which we lead the world or on raw materials of which we are important exporters.

This argument, however, need not be expected from the big (oil) companies or from those primarily interested in foreign fields. It must come from the independent domestic producer.

And it can be made under present conditions with telling force."

Does this sound vaguely similar to recent arguments submitted by independent producers at Department of Commerce hearings to determine if imported crude oil were injurious to the domestic oil industry.

Keep in mind that production in the new oil industry was on a sharp incline. America was awash in oil in 1928. But the country was learning a new word — "conservation."

That was the year the Texas Railroad Commission issued its first prora-

LAB: Assists industry

comprised of members of the industry. The panel recommends projects to the Department of Energy for funding.

Projects the lab is assisting include developing an automatic casing swab and help improve the ability and reliability of identifying wells for which automatic casing swabbing would be suitable. Another project is analyzing pin failures and working with a private company to improve sucker rods.

Sandia and Harvey E. Yates Co. have completed a collaboration that sought to improve oil recovery from low permeability, possibly naturally fractured reservoirs.

Another national laboratory, Los Alamos National Laboratory, worked with Murphy Operating Corp. to make waterflooding operations in the Chaveroo and Tomahawk fields more efficient by using microseismic mapping techniques to locate major fractures and guide the location of injection wells for more effective sweeping of the reservoir oil.

Sandia and 16 oil companies and eight service companies have formed a Crosswell Seismic Forum to review, evaluate and prioritize proposed projects and topics related to crosswell seismic surveying.

A major new program launched under the partnership initiative is the Advanced Computational Technology Initiative Program, which is designed to transfer technologies developed at the national laboratories to the industry. It is designed to develop, improve and apply advanced exploration, production and processing technologies and help producers find and develop energy reserves at lower costs, mostly utilizing computer technology.

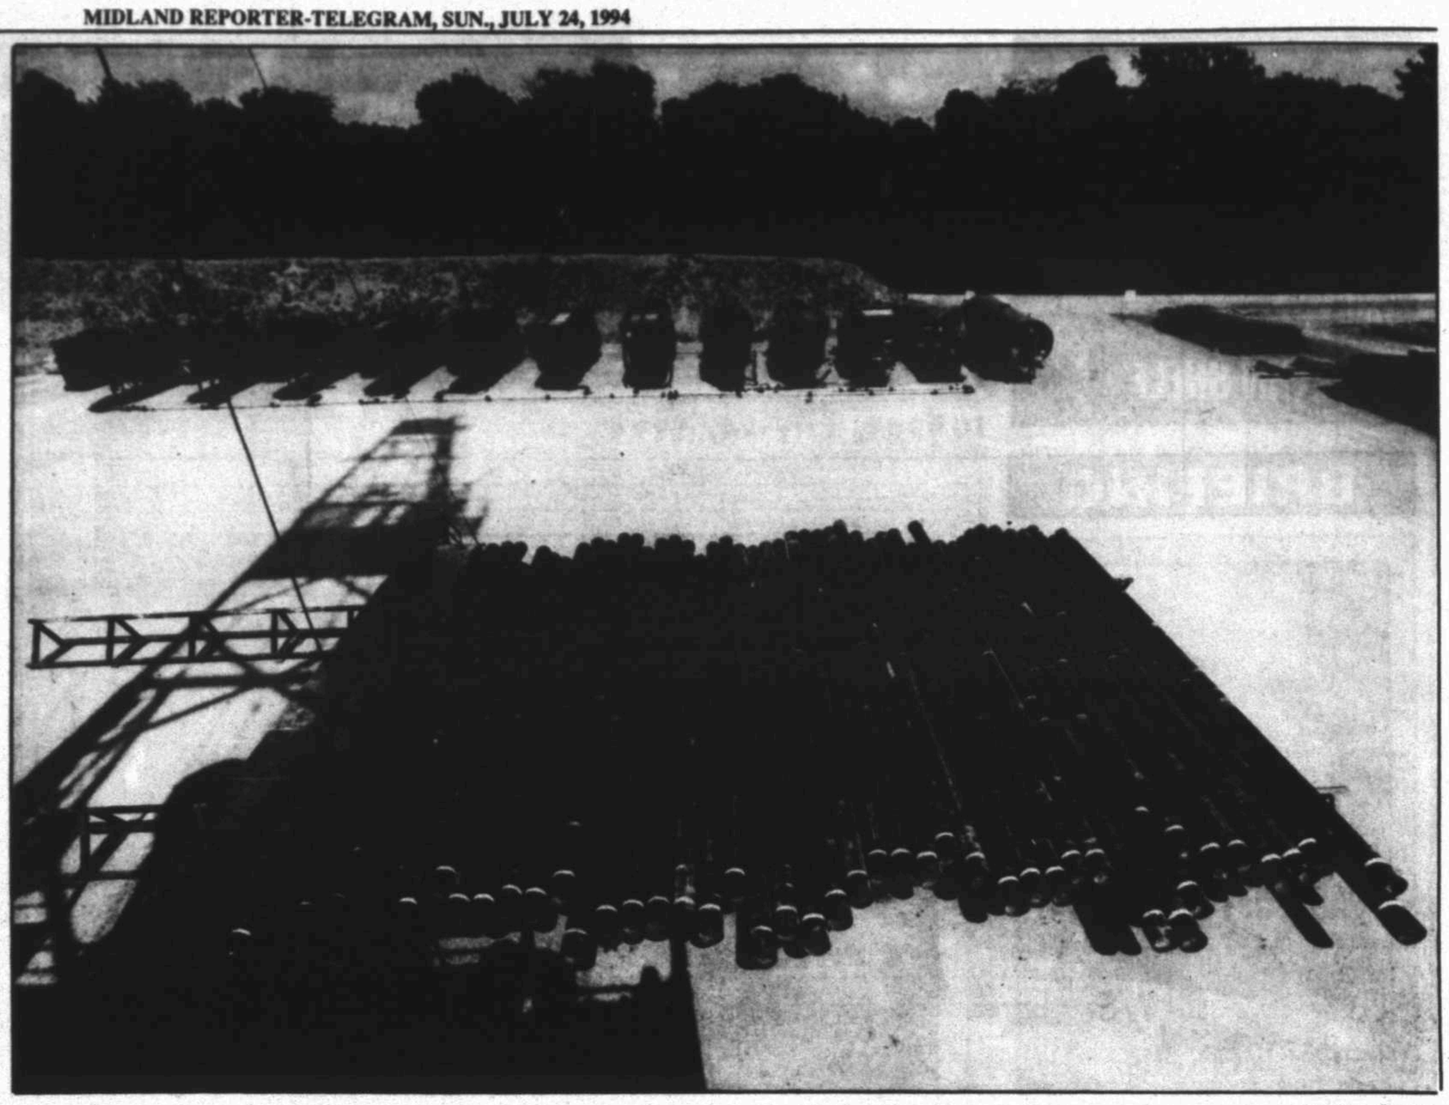

To date this program has built a foundation that includes computational technology — data storage and manipulation; reservoir and geologic modeling; and geophysical imaging, including 2-D and 3-D.

Various funding mechanisms exist for collaborative projects, particularly under ACTI

Gaither emphasized that Sandia and the other national laboratories involved are not trying to take over oil and gas industry research, merely to enhance it.

"We don't claim to have a better grasp of the industry's needs," she said. "What we offer may be along the lines of specialized equipment or personnel that it would not be practical for a private company to have on its own."

Sandia is participating in this year's Oil Show to inform the industry about what capabilities it has to offer and what is available to the industry in terms of technology research.

Helmerich & Payne drilling rig No.76 casts a long shadow across pipe that will be used to drill the Einar Dyhrkopp deep wildcat. Ten compressor (background) will supply air for the air drilling program.

CONOCO: Drills key well

What the Conoco team is hoping to find is gas reserves of as much as a quarter trillion cubic feet for the Illinois well and multi-Tcf across the entire Illinois Basin. "Across the Illinois Basin, we are looking for major gas reserves comparable to those in the Delaware Basin," said Gary Smith, drilling manager for the project.

The Illinois Basin project was originated in Conoco's Oklahoma City office before it was merged into Midland, and is now being handled by a team of 8-10 from the Midland office. The team includes: Mark Wheeler, Midland Division Exploration Manager; Dave Brewster, Project Geologist; Gary Smith, Drilling Manager, and Warren Richardson, landman for the project.

Helmerich & Payne of Tulsa is the drilling contractor for the project. Drilling Manager Gary Smith said Conoco would apply air drilling to the extent it could, and that drilling techniques were almost a carbon copy of its Val Verde Basin drilling programs, where Conoco is actively engaged in the search for deep gas.

Conoco spudded the well the first week of June, and is now at 6,000 feet, well below the shallow oil zones and headed into the deep, geological unknown of the Basin. "We will be looking very closely for commercial shows all the way down," said Wheeler.

He said the Illinois project was predicated on seismic across the area. Noting that the Rough Creek graben runs through the area, he called it a geological situation similar to the Anadarko Basin. "We will be looking for cambrian and precambrian rift sands in the deep Illinois Basin which is very underexplored," Wheeler said.

Two previous attempts to find gas in the deeper formations of the Basin in Kentucky turned out to be dry holes. One was, the 14,202-foot, Turner No.1, drilled in McClean Co. The Shane No.1, drilled to 12,600-foot, in Grayson Co. was abandoned early because of mechanical problems.

Conoco officials say they are not necessarily discouraged by the Kentucky wells, but the $5 million Dhyrkopp well could be critical to the project — that it will have to show them a very good reason for going on.

Said Brewster: "After extensive study of the geological and seismic data we gathered while drilling the two Kentucky exploratory wells, we remain convinced that deep reserves of commercial recoverable natural gas are possible in the Illinois Basin."

Conoco has backed its geological faith with the purchase of over 200 square miles of leases across Southern Illinois and Western Kentucky, according to Warren Richardson, project landman, and is thus far the major player in the geological play. A few independents have leased in the trend area, but so far no other major oil companies have initiated an extensive lease play in the area. Conoco says Arco has expressed some interest in the project, but has not yet taken a position.

The Conoco project has created quiet a stir in Illinois, bringing out scads of press and even such notables as Senator Paul Simon, who showed up for a first hand tour of the rig site. That's because there is great hope that deep gas will do for the Illinois Basin what shallow oil did decades ago, and revive a sagging midwestern economy. In its heyday nearly every major oil company in America had extensive production in the Basin, but now it is mostly a region of stripper oil wells, owned by mom & pop independent operators. Only Texaco, Marathon and Unocal still have a few leases in the area.

"This is an economically depressed area and the locals are watching this well very closely. They would like to see something happen," said Wheeler.

While the 30-1 odds of success are outrageously high, so are the rewards: Conoco's Illinois Basin project if successful, could create a long chain of benefits.

For Conoco 200 square miles of leases, and the potential to develop multi-trillion cubic feet of reserves, would give it a very strong reserve position in the growing natural gas market. The location of major reserves in the Midwest makes it even more appealing.

At the same time, it would significantly increase the responsibility of Conoco's Midland Divison, which now essentially handles all of Conoco's onshore exploration, producing in turn job additions and job security in Midland.

Additionally, the Illinois Basin could become another area of interest for Midland-based Basin independents, providing new opportunities to increase reserves and gas flow. And, there would also be some spill over benefits for some Permian Basin service companies.

Finally, discovery of another major gas producing province will also have a very positive effect on the natural gas industry, giving it the security of supply that will be needed to develop expanding markets, and it could also become the catalyst for more serious domestic exploration.

"It would be nice if we could demonstrate that there are still big hydrocarbon prospects to be found in the U.S.," said Wheeler.

According to the ranking survey, NationsBank provided 174 energy loans for more than $7.3 billion, a 77 percent increase compared to its 1992 total of $4.1 billion. The bank also arranged more energy loans in 1993 than any other financial institution in the world, and provided more oil and gas loans, and arranged more oil and gas funding for U.S. companies.

NationsBank lists London, Dallas, Houston, Midland, and Denver as its prime lending centers.

Frank Stowers, Vice President of Energy Lending in Midland, said that based on size would he would assume that NationsBank is the largest energy lender in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico. "We are not constrained by low lending limits."

Stowers said: "Probably the bulk of loans made today, are for acquisitions. But we do make some loans for development and even 3-D exloration."

Dale Wilson, Vice President of Energy Lending, noted that the Midland branch of NationsBank had increased its energy lending by a factor of four over the past five years.

Besides the fact that NationsBank has assets of $165 billion, and energy clients are not restricted by lending limits, Wilson said the fact that clients have access to a bank of professional petroleum engineers in the loan process has helped account for the increase. The bank has one engineer (Russ Hall) in Midland, one in Denver, two in Houston and five in Dallas.

Among the international banks that NationsBank outperformed in energy lending, in order of number of loans were: Chemical Bank, Bank of Nova Scotia, CIBC, Citicorp, Fuji Bank, National Westminister, Societe Generale, ABN-Ambro Bank, Credit Lyonnais, Bank of America, Bank of Tokyo, Chase Manhattan, Sumitomo Bank and Union Bank of Switerland.

PITTS: No change in oil issues

tion order to limit production in the prolific Hendricks field in Winkler County. And only the year before, the Ohio Co. (Marathon) had executed the first ever MER (maximum efficiency rate) for production in order to conserve reserves in the prolific Yates field.

America may have been the Saudia Arabia of the twenties, but the industry still felt threatened by cheap foreign imports, and sought about the same solutions sought today.

I don't know if it is scary or funny, but it is indeed ironic that, in 1994, a time when U.S. production is declining at the rate of 3 percent per year and is at its lowest level in 36 years, the threat is still cheap foreign oil and government actions.

MEETINGS

UT chancellor to speak at PBPA luncheon

Cunningham

Dr. William H. Cunningham, chancellor of the University of Texas System, will be the guest spekaer at Thursday's general membership luncheon of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. The meeting will be at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

He joined the University of Texas at Austin faculty in January 1971 after receiving bachelor and masters degrees and his doctorate from Michigan State University. He is a nationally know marketing scholar and has won numerous teaching honors from UT.

Cunningham became the seventh chancellor of the UT system on September 1, 1992, previously serving as president of the University of Texas at Austin.

Cost is $15. Reservations are required and can be made by calling the PBPA office at 684-6345.

Nuevo Energy buys California properties

HOUSTON — Nuevo Energy Co. has announced the purchase of a 12 percent working interest in certain onshore and offshore California oil and gas properties in Santa Barbara County, from various sellers including Unocal, for a purchase price of approximately $8.6 million before adjustments for interim net cash flows and exclusive of any contingent considerations based on the future price of oil.

Nuevo's purchase includes a 12 percent working interest in several Unocal-operated properties. The primary asset in the purchase is the Point Pedernales field, which is located approximately 36 miles off the coast of Santa Barbara in 240 feet of water, and all associated production facilities including a 72-slot platform with 12 producing wells.

Other assets include the Point Pedernales Pipeline Co. and its assets, including a common carrier facility for heating, separating and pumping near Lompoc, Ca., and 26 miles of pipeline from the production platform to the HS&P facility.

Nuevo is also acquiring a 12 percent interest in Unocal's onshore Lompoc, Northwest Lompoc and Jesus Maria fields, along with approximately 3,700 gross surface acres and 14,560 gross mineral fee acres.

Current Nuevo net daily production from the properties is approximately 1,140 barrels of 16 degree API crude oil and 500,000 cubic feet of natural gas. Net reserves to Nuevo are 4 million barrels of oil, of which approximately 90 percent is proved developed. Significant exploitation work will take place over the next few years to increase production, including several workovers and the drilling of a number of proved undeveloped locations.

Unocal will continue to operate the properties during a transition period until Torch Operating Co., a subsidiary of Torch Energy Advisors Inc., becomes operator later this year. Torch Operating Co. plans to have a district office in the Santa Barbara/Ventura area. Torch Energy Advisors Inc. performs certain financial and operating functions for Nuevo through a management agreement.

The produced crude oil will be sold to Unocal and transported through its pipeline to the Santa Maria refinery.

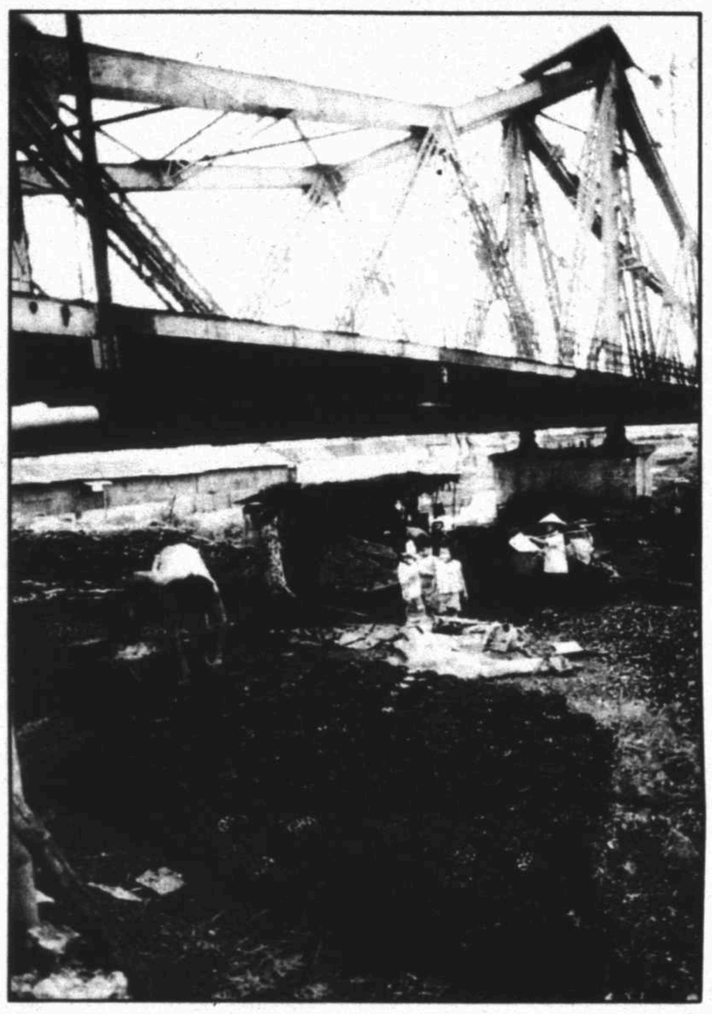

Abraxas buys West Texas properties

SAN ANTONIO — Abraxas Petroleum Corp. has announced that its wholly-owned subsidiary, Abraxas Petroleum Corp., has entered into a purchase and sale agreement to acquire, from a group of sellers, oil and gas properties that Abraxas expects would more than double the company's year-end proved oil and gas reserves. The acquisition consists of producing properties and development projects in eight fields located in various West Texas counties.

Robert Watson, chief executive officer of Abraxas, indicated that the properties would be acquired for a total consideration of $28 million in cash. The purchase price is expected to be financed through a new credit facility recently negotiated with First Union National Bank of North Carolina.

Watson also announced that the proposed transaction would be the largest in the company's history, following the $20 million acquisition of Texas Gulf Coast properties in April of 1993.

Abraxas estimates total proved reserves — 92 percent proved developed — attributable to the acquisition of 51.3 BCFE, an increase of 125 percent over year-end reserves of 41.1 BCFE. Additionally, the acquired reserves are 94 percent natural gas, which would boost the company's total reserve mix to 70 percent natural gas and 30 percent oil. The acquired properties are currently producing at a rate of 7.5 Mmcfd and Abraxas believes opportunities exist to increase reserves and production rates through additional development drilling activity.

Vietnam gas

A Vietnamese man makes cylinders of coal and dried mud mixture used to heat crude cooking stoves in Hanoi. Millions of Vietnamese use these cylinders to cook on in the lack of gas stoves. Vietnam plans to start exploiting natural gas this year as a major new source of energy and as an export product.

Partners make Deep-water discovery in Gulf

HOUSTON (AP) — A partnership of energy companies that has made a deep-water discovery of oil and gas in the Gulf of Mexico says it's uncertain of commercial prospects with the venture.

The discovery lies 12 miles southeast of the Bullwinkle platform, where Shell Offshore is pumping 41,000 barrels of oil and 57-million-cubic feet of gas daily.

Shell, along with Marathon Oil Co. and BP Exploration, drilled the well to a depth of 16,212 feet and found between 300 and 400 feet of oil- and gas-bearing sands.

Shamrock profits climb

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Profits at Diamond Shamrock Inc. climbed 67 percent in the second quarter as the company refined and sold crude oil inventory and prices rose sharply, the company said Wednesday.

For the three months ended June 30, profits were $27.5 million, or 91 cents per share, on revenue of $646.5 million. During the same period of 1993, Diamond Shamrock earned $16.5 million, or 56 cents per share, on revenue of $656.9 million.

The company said the earnings were helped an estimated $10.9 million as it refined and sold crude oil inventory into a market with sharply rising prices.

In addition, "The company benefited from recently completed capital projects that increased refinery throughput and sales," company chairman Roger Hemminghaus said in a news release.

The company plans to build 25 new retail Corner Stores this year. It also plans to buy 18 stores in Colorado, plus eight stores and five undeveloped retail sites in El Paso, during the third quarter, Hemminghaus said.

Hemminghaus said he was optimistic margins would continue to improve in the third quarter as prices for petroleum products continue to rise, demand for gasoline remains strong and refineries run at near capacity.

For the first six months of this year, the company had profits of $39.7 million, or $1.29 per share, on revenue of $1.23 billion. The company earned $7.3 million, or 24 cents per share, on revenue of $1.28 billion in the first half of last year. The 1993 results were lowered $14.2 million by the cumulative effect of accounting changes.

Rig activity fell for the week ended July 15, according to the Smith Tool Activity Tracking System from Smith International Inc. There were 829 rotary rigs available, down 28 for the week and 7.8 percent below the 899 seen a year ago. There were 739 rigs drilling, down 13 from a week earlier and 7.9 percent from 802 drilling last year. There were 90 rigs rigging up, down 15 from a week earlier but up 3.4 percent from 87 last year.

Gas brokering EBB goes on-line

TULSA — The industry's first electronic system to offer consolidated electronic bulletin board (EBB) information was brought on-line by Capacity Central, the real-time brokering network for released firm natural gas pipeline capacity. Subscribers now have instant access to consolidated capacity EBB information for multiple pipelines.

Developed by Williams Energy Ventures, Inc., a subsidiary of The Williams Companies, Inc., Capacity Central matches buyers and sellers of released firm gas pipeline capacity.

"The EBB portion of the system is operational for 17 pipelines today, and we expect live trading to begin very soon," said Bob Furgason, director of information services for Williams Energy Ventures.

"The ultimate benefit of Capacity Central is that it functions as an electronic marketplace where firm contract holders gain immediate exposure to an expanded audience of excess release buyers," he said.

The EBB facet of the Capacity Central system provides key information from multiple pipeline EBBs to a standard format on one screen. The screen displays basic capacity release information, special policies and other related information.

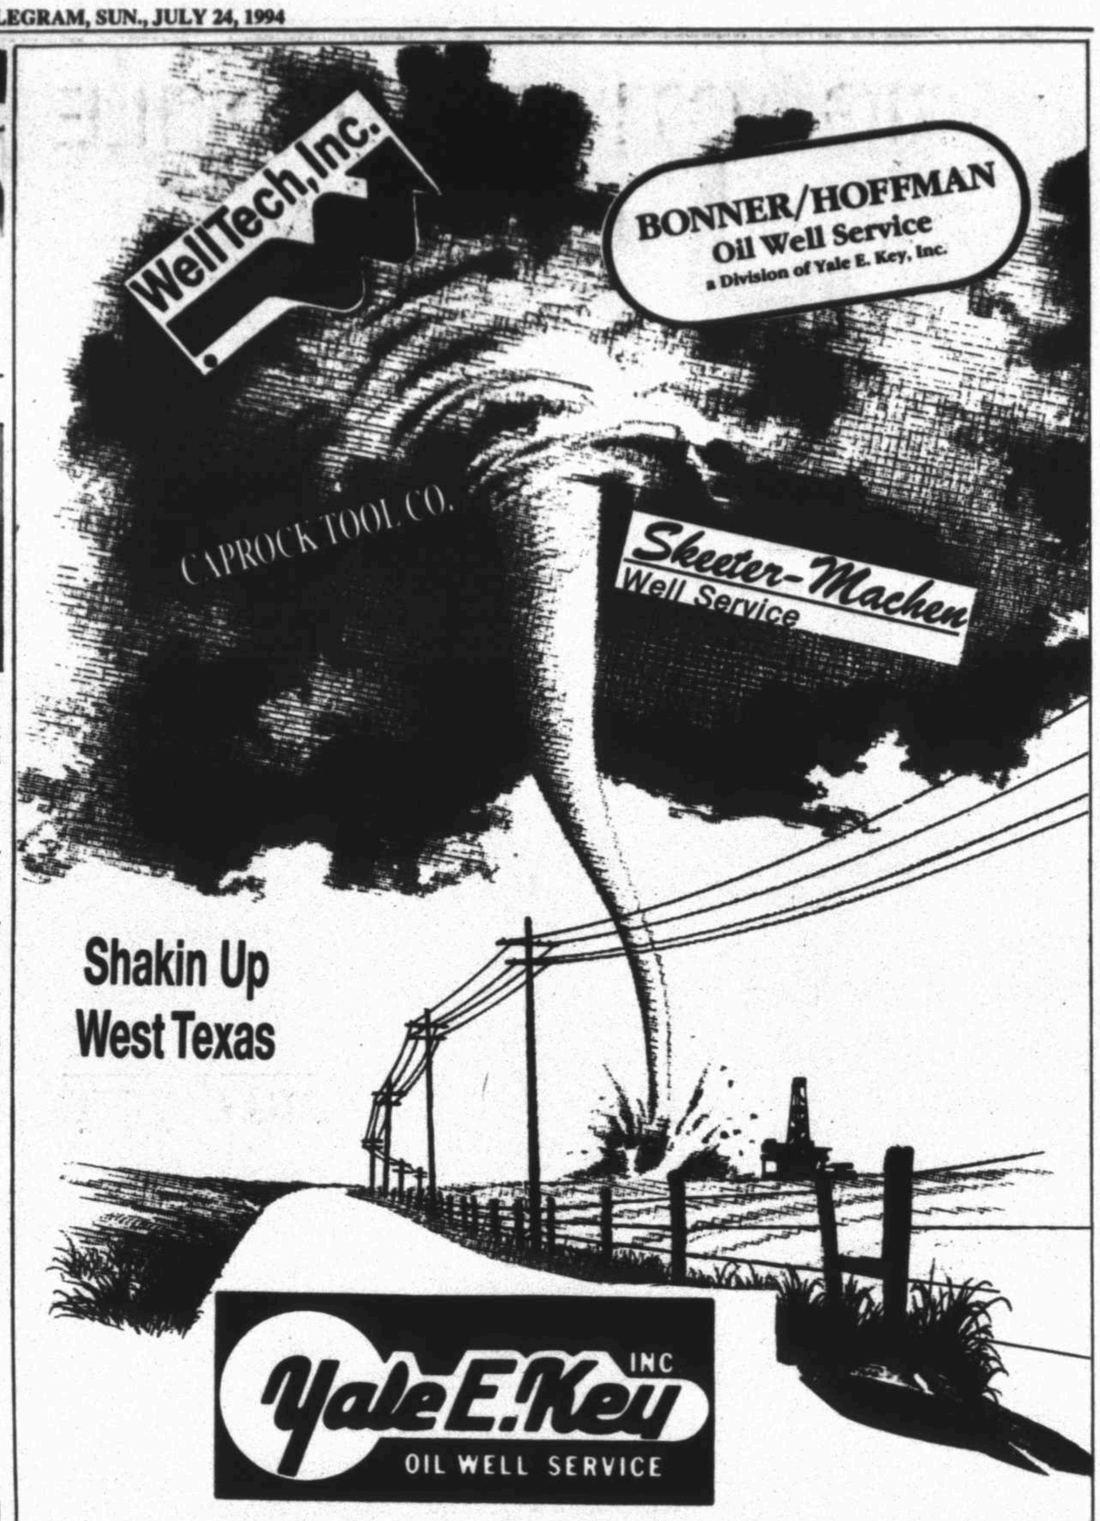

Information can be filtered and sorted by pipeline path, volume and date to fit individual needs. Subscribers can instantly view the firm capacity market, have access to completed released transactions, and can find discounted interruptible transportation rates.

Subscribers have complete control of acceptable trading partners, desired transportation points, delivery dates and volumes.

"Before Capacity Central, traders have had to go through a time-consuming process of logging in and out of several EBBs to get necessary capacity release information," Purgason said. "Capacity Central puts all of the key capacity information from the participating pipeline EBBs at the traders' fingertips."

Capacity Central offers consolidated EBB information and hourly updates for the following pipelines, with more expected within the month: Columbia Gas-/Columbia Gulf; Koch Gateway; NGPL; Sonat; Tennessee; Texas Eastern Transmission Corp.; Texas Gas Transmission; and TRANSCO.

Daily updates are available on the following pipelines: Arkla (Noram), ANR, MRT, Northern, Panhandle Easter, Trunkline, Viking and Williams Natural Gas.

Coastal forms electric power unit

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp. has formed a new subsidiary in the emerging electric power marketing business, Coastal Electric Services Co.

Coastal Electric Services Co. filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to market and broker electric power in wholesale transactions.

"The electric power industry is becoming a more open and more competitive as it goes through a regulatory restructuring similar to that just completed in the natural gas industry," said James F. Cordes, executive vice president of The Coastal Corp. and president of Coastal's Natural Gas Group. "This realignment of the electric power industry will create opportunities for combined electric power and fuel marketers like Coastal who understand the fundamentals of both markets."

Coastal Electric Services Co. will offer energy management services including the wholesale purchase and sale of electric power, development of transmission and distribution access capabilities, new approaches to sourcing and managing electric generation assets and related fuel options, and the creation of innovative financial products to hedge electric ricing risks.

Cordes said he expects Coastal Electric to mirror the performance of Coastal's highly successful Coastal Gas Marketing Co. in the North American natural gas market. Coastal Gas, another Coastal subsidiary, managed natural gas volumes reaching 1.8 trillion cubic feet per year in 1993.

Obstacles remain to Azerbaijan oil deal

LONDON (AP) — Western oil companies have made progress on a proposed $9 billion production deal with the former Soviet republic of Azerbaijan, but some issues remain unresolved executives said

Last week, Azerbaijan's Turan news agency quoted Azerbaijani President Geidar Aliyev as saying that virtually all problems in the three-year-long discussions had been resolved in sessions in Baku, Azerbaijan, and Istanbul, Turkey.

But more talks will be held in Houston over the next few weeks as the parties seek a firm deal.

"If it continues going in good faith, an agreement could be resolved in the near future," said a spokesman for British Petroleum PLC, which has the biggest single stake in the deal.

The companies' hopes of producing crude oil from two big fields in the Caspian Sea had been stymied by political troubles in Azerbaijan.

Western companies stand to get 75 percent of the project. Of that share, British Petroleum has a two-thirds interest in a 36.7 percent stake jointly held with Norway's Statoil AS.

The Azerbaijanis and the oil company consortium, which also includes Amoco Corp. with 24.3 percent of the Western share, recently signed a non-binding protocol that spells out principles for a future agreement.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Martin County gains Silurian discovery

Staff Report

A horizonal project in Martin County has resulted in a Silurian discovery, 19 miles north of Stanton.

COLLINS & WARE INC. potentialed the No. 1 Argonaut to pump 159 barrels of 41 gravity crude and 12 barrels of water from open hole interval 11,176 to 11,240 ft. No treatment was reported.

Permitted as a 12,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,770 ft. and plugged back to 11,418 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,176 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,632 ft., include the Yates at 2,243 ft., Wolfcamp at 8,710, Mississippian at 10,369, Woodford at 11,065, Silurian at 11,173, and Montoya at 11,357 ft.

Surface location is 1,455 ft. from north and 727 ft. from west lines of Section 41, Block 35, T-3-N, T&P survey, Abst. 104. Bottom hole location is 5,769 ft.from south and 5,287 ft. from east lines of the surface location. Kickoff point was 11,176 ft.

Marathon opens pay in Crockett field

MARATHON OIL CO. has apparently opened a new Yates pool in the Olson field of Crockett County, 32 miles northwest of Ozona.

Marathon plugged back the No. 14 Noelke Livestock "OO" and tested it for a calculated absolute open flow of 943 Mcfd from perforations 1,274 to 1,282 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Originally drilled to 2,415 ft., the well was plugged back to 2,030 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 2,382 ft.

On kelly bushing elevation of 2,743 ft., formation tops include the Yates at 1,265 ft., Seven Rivers at 1,380, Soma at 1,424, Queen at 1,843 and San Andres at 2,146 ft.

Location is 330 ft. from south and 2,310 ft. from east lines of Section 10, Block GG, T&NO survey.

The well was drilled as the No. 613 Olson Unit and completed in December 1985 as a San Andres producer in the field, pumping 200 barrels fo 29.1 gravity crude, 1 Mcfd and six barrels of water from perforations 2,188 to 2,330 ft.

King field gains new pool opener

Twin Peaks 4B pay has apparently been opened in the Twin Peaks field of King County, 16 miles southeast of Guthrie.

HUNT OIL CO. completed the No. Y90A S.B. Burnett Estate "4B Sand" to pump 45 barrels of 36 gravity crude and 255 barrels of water from perforations 5,201 to 5,229 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,250 gallons of 7.5 percent HCL acid and fractured with 13,000 gallons of gel and 23,500 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Permitted as a 6,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 5,950 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,942 ft.

Location is 2,556 ft. from north and 563 ft. from west lines of Section 45, Block T, J.L. Parsons survey, Abst. 1186.

Wolfcamp pool find pumps 22 barrels

A plugback operation in Glasscock County has opened a new Wolfcamp pool in the Conger field, 17 miles southwest of Sterling City.

WAGNER & BROWN plugged back the No. 131 Edmondson "A", testing it to pump 22 barrels of 37.8 gravity crude, 149 Mcfd and six barrels of water from perforations 6,141 to 6,195 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,500 gallons of HCL acid.

Originally drilled to 8,700 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 7,576 ft.

The well topped the San Andres at 2,260 ft., Cisco at 8,160 and Canyon at 8,408 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,688 ft.

Location is 752 ft. from north and 731 ft. from east lines of Section 31, Block 32, T-5-S, T&P survey, Abst. 96.

The well was originally completed as a Pennsylvanian producer in the field, finaled in December 1993 to pump 22 barrels of 47.6 gravity crude and 288 Mcfd from perforations 8,210 to 8,517 ft.

Lea recompletion opens Grayburg pool

A new Grayburg/San Andres pool has been opened in the Vacuum (Drinkard) field of Lea County, N.M.

PENROC OIL CORP. recompleted the No. 1 George McGonagill to pump two barrels of crude, 71 Mcfd and a trace of load water from perforations 4,235 to 4,270 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid and fractured with 15,000 gallons of gel and 30,000 lbs. sand.

Original depth is 9,259 ft.

Location is 330 ft. from north and 990 ft. from east lines of Section 2, T18s, R35e.

Oil Show lines up oilfield technology

Staff Report

Should a company be having any kind of problem in the inland oil and gas industry, the Permian Basin Oil Show is the place to be, come october 19,20,21 in Odessa, Texas.

The Permian Basin Oil Show has a well earned reputation as being the largest and most complete inland oil show in the world. That reputation has been earned by experience over the past 50 years.

This year's oil show is going a step further in promoting new innovations for the industry. There will be heavy emphasis this year on the environmental end of the industry with companies from throughout the nation offering their services and equipment.

The following are some of the exhibitors, their products and services, along with their oil show booth locations.

Bergstein Oilfield of Lubbock, OS-92, was founded in April 1981 to serve the oilfields of West Texas and New Mexico. Bergstein Oilfield Services was designed from the beginning to meet the growing demand for experiences, quality trained personnel to respond to any problem. It's services include hazard waste transportation, steam cleaning, hot oiling down hole, hazardous material containment and recovery, acidizing and numerous other services.

Daniel Industries Inc., of Midland and Houston, G-94,95,96 has been serving the industry for more than half a century through Daniel Orifice Fitting without interrupting line flow. The company helps protect the environment with the use of the most secure inner chamber seal available today. The company will be displaying it's new soft seat during the Odessa Oil Show.

Stren Company of Houston, C-119, has recently patented and introduced to the petroleum industry a new technology that reduces the lifting cost per barrel of fluid by containing the abrasive particles that damage the rod pump. This technology incorporates a line of precision down hole membrane tools known as the Pump Guard which is a stainless steel tool with specific micron openings.

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Odessa, C-90, says it all when it comes to tires in the rugged oil fields of West Texas. Goodyear will be showing companies how to reduce their expensive down time in the Permian Basin oilfields. Flatproofing is the simple solution to the problem of tire-related down time. Flatproofed Goodyear tires keep going no matter what you run over.

Bortech Corporation of Alstead, NH, 1-67,68 will have a live demo of the 306-P MIG bore buildup machine during the Odessa Oil Show. The machine has a diameter rangeof .5 to 27 inches without part rotation. It is designed for both shop and field use. The 306-P is a light and versatile tool, easily set up to use in any position.

Hydrocarbon Production Data, Inc., of Austin, E-51, is a professional corporation providing the oil, gas and salt water disposal industry with user friendly information databases. These databases were designed for oil and gas marketers, purchasers, transporters and lease operators. Databases currently available for Texas include oil production data, condensate production, gas production, casinghead gas production, disposal water production, and disposal well data. The databases are updated monthly.

Zwick Energy Research of Huntington Beach, CA, with offices in Pearland, TX, H-7, was organized in 1971 to research and develop low emission combustion systems. The company produced its first direct-fired nitrogen vaporizers in 1975. Now hundreds operate worldwide. Zwick's durable non-fired skid with reliable delivery of gaseous nitrogen is designed for enhanced oil recovery and protection of the environment.

John E. Chance and Associates - (JECA) of Lafayette, LA, B-114, is one of the world's leading offshore survey and positioning companies. Established in 1957, the company also offers land and hydrographic surveys, geophysical surveys, and regulatory and environmental services. The company recently developed "on-the-fly" kinematic GPS, a highly productive and reliable method of surveying a large area.

Electric Submersible Pumps, Inc., of Midland, B-122,123,124, has been the innovative leader in the application of oilfield electric submersible pumps. The company is one of the world-wide leaders in submersible pumps with headquarters in Midland and service facilities in something like 25 foreign countries. The company facilities include sales, service in both new and used equipment on a 24 hour basis.

Matarah Industries, Inc., of Milwaukee, WI, D-55, manufactures sorbents designed to pick up oil and chemical spills on water, on land and in-plant. MATASORB will pick up oil-based liquids only. Ideal for getting spills off water or used where separation is required. SORBX picks up oil and water-based liquids. High absorbency ratio makes the products ideal for industrial spills.

Diamond S Safety Services, Inc. of Midland, D-42, is primarily a service company dedicated to quality service, maintenance and inspection in the areas of monitoring equipment, breathing equipment and fire extinguishers. The company recently expanded into the area of sales of various safety-oriented products such as monitoring and breathing equipment products, fire extinguishers, safety glasses, and numerous other personal items.

Turbine Specialties, Inc., of Salina, KS, J-122, is a complete turbocharging center for overhauling and repairing large bore engine turbochargers. In addition to manufacturing new components to replace parts that can't be repaired to meet O.E.M. tolerances. The firm has the capabilities of testingand retrofiting turbocharger equipment for maximum efficiency. Turbine is part of the Elliott Turbocharging Co.

Hoerbiger Service, Inc., of Odessa and Houston, C-93, offers solutions for valve operations problems by supplying valve repair service. In addition, a complete line of valve parts is part of the company's service. For valve upgrading a complete line of double damping, minimum flow loss, and with steel and non-metallic sealing elements is featured. Hoerbiger can supply custom manufactured check valves for constant or pulsating flow applications.

BJ Services of Midland, OS-3 and OS-203, will feature a Family of Frac Fluids during the Odessa Oil Show. The fluids include Spectra G - A, Medallion Frac-A CMHPD, and Spartan Frac -A. Products and literature regarding advances in the prevention of acid/iron induced sludge will be available. Hardware will include the BJ Services state of the art STV 2500 treatment monitoring van.

NAO Inc. of Philadelphia, PA, E-83 thru 87 and E-110 thru 114, is coming a long way to be represented in the Permian Basil Oil Show. NAO is a unique innovator for quality (ISO 9000 Certified) combustion, conservation, pollution control and safety equipment since 1912. NAO provides complete design, manufacture, installation and service.

Truck Tech LTD, of Bellevue, WA, D-113,114, is big truck country. The company will be showing the oil industry something new in the trucking industry, such as sturdy, durable structure, rigid connection of the rims to the wheel spider, perfect alignment of the rim, three undivided rim section, adaptable wheel designs, better cooling of the brake drums and tires, and many other features.

Enron signs pipeline deal

HOUSTON (AP) — Enron Development Corp. has signed a joint project to construct a $1.5 billion pipeline for exporting Bolivian natural gas to Brazil.

The Enron Corp. subsidiary has signed a memorandum of understanding with the state-owned Bolivian oil company, Yacimientos Petroliferos Fiscales Bolivianos (YPFB), to jointly develop, finance, construct and operate the pipeline.

The 1,120-mile pipeline will stretch from Santa Cruz, Bolivia, to Sao Paulo, Brazil, with a follow-on pipeline south to Curitiba and eventually to Porto Alegre in Brazil, Enron said Wednesday.

The estimated cost of the Bolivian portion of the pipeline is about $400 million.

"This project will be the largest gas pipeline construction project in South America in terms of size and cost," said Rebecca Mark, chairman and CEO of Enron Development. "We're heavily investing and interested in developing new gas markets in Latin America."

Occidental reports loss

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Occidental Petroleum Corp. reported a $19 million second-quarter loss, saying it slipped on lower crude oil prices and higher international exploration costs.

The $19 million loss, 12 cents per share, compared with a profit of $75 million, 21 cents per share, in the 1993 second quarter. Quarterly sales rose from $2 billion in 1993 to $2.2 billion this year.

For the first six months, Occidental lost $59 million, or 31 cents per share, on sales of $4.3 billion, compared with a $155 million profit, 46 cents per share, on sales of $4.2 billion during the first six months of 1993.

Occidental had $144 million in operating earnings from its three divisions: oil and gas, natural gas transmission and chemical. But $142 million in interest expenses plus $21 million in taxes and other corporate costs put it under water for the second straight quarter.

Oil and gas operating earnings fell sharply, from $130 million in the second quarter of 1993 to $25 million. Noting that oil prices improved in the middle of the quarter, Occidental said recent price hikes in several of its chemical businesses should increase profits.

Coastal unit names executives

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp.'s Coastal Refining and Marketing Inc. has elected Steven C. Boyd and David C. Rippy senior vice presidents.

Boyd has been named senior vice president at Coastal Refining and Marketing and will take on the additional responsibilities of executive vice president and chief operating officer for wholesale marketing activity within the 22 states that make up the central region.

Rippy, currently president and chief executive officer of Coastal Unilube Inc., has been promoted to senior vice president of Coastal Refining and Marketing.

Just a Bunch of Bull

Text by Linda Anderson Design by Elizabeth Edwin Photos by Brian Adamcik

Climbing on the back of several thousand pounds of angry bull, grabbing hold with one hand and hanging on for eight seconds might not be everyone's idea of a good time, but rodeo bullriders wouldn't have it any other way.

"It's the excitement, the adrenalin!" said Mike Rogers of Midland, who has been dreaming of being a bullrider for a long time.

Two months ago he got his chance to try bullriding for the first time. Now, every Friday night he joins several other bullriders — both professional and not quite professional — at J&B Arena south of Midland to practice their sport.

Donny Clair, who is not quite 20, has been riding bulls since he was 14. His 27-year-old brother, Herman started riding even younger, when he was 12.

A competitor hits the ground after being tossed by his bull, but he hangs onto his hat.

"It's just something I wanted to do," Donny said. "Mom don't like it too much — she's afraid we're going to get hurt — but she can't stop us."

Donny's ambition is to become a professional bullrider. His brother's reasons for riding bulls is a little more down to earth. "It's a hobby now," he said. "I'm too old for any goals."

Both men have experienced their share of injuries, thanks to their "hobby." Between them, they have

GOP faithful meet for 'Goldwater rally'

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Picture this! It is July 16, 1964. Sen. Barry Goldwater has just received the nomination for the U.S. presidency at the Republican National Convention in San Francisco. A small band of dedicated workers back in Midland are thrilled with the party's choice. There is much celebrating as the results come in.

Now back to the future. It is July 16, 1994, in Midland, and at the invitation of Doris and Van Howbert, those same GOP faithfuls, who campaigned so hard for the senator, have gathered for one more Goldwater Rally.

Doris's clever poem of invitation read in part:

"It's been 30 long leairs
So we oughta
Celebrate the nomination of Barry Goldwata.
Our youth and our vigor we'll try to remember
While forgetting what happened that fateful November!"

As guests arrived at the Howberts' home, they were greeted by Goldwater yard signs and a large banner across the front of the house, which read "Goldwater for President." Inside, there was a display of Goldwater memorabilia, including bumper stickers, posters and other items taken from Van's old files. (He was a precinct chairman at the time.)

Van posed the question to the group: "Have you ever been to a political rally without music and speeches?" He then proceeded to play a tape featuring music by "The Goldwaters," a group of young collegians who banded together during the campaign and traveled nationwide to entertain the crowds waiting to see the candidate. The tape also included a portion of Senator Goldwater's acceptance speech.

The group reminisced that only two Republican non-incumbents won in Texas that fall, and they were both Midlanders, Bill Heck, who became county commissioner and Frank Cahoon, elected state representative.

Bill Adam, Eddie Mee and Van all served on the Texas Goldwater for President Committee, while Bill also chaired the Midland County Goldwater campaign, and Eddie, who resided in Odessa at that time, headed up Ector County's campaign.

Among others sallying forth for the rally, in addition to those already mentioned, were Marilyn (Mrs. Bruno) Hanson, Lee and George Harley, Jere and Bus Hubbard, Evelyn and Payton Anderson, Carolyn and John Kirwan, Barbara Culver and Ann and Erd Johnson.

CONGRATULATIONS AND BEST WISHES to Liz Prein and Hunter Isbell, who are planning to be married on Sept. 17 at First Christian Church.

The first party to be given in their honor was a picnic hosted by Hunter's grandparents, June and Frank Cowden, on the lawn of the Racquet Club last weekend.

A buffet supper was served to the guests, who sat at large round tables, covered with teal cloths and centered with arrangements of sunflowers and fern. Balloons at the entry way added a festive touch.

Country and western music was provided by The Spur Band of Stanton.

Special guests included Liz's parents, Margaret Prein and Jim Prein; Hunter's parents, Linda (Mrs. Jay) Jerman and Rocky Isbell; his grandmother, Jo Jo Isbell, and his great-grandmother, Mildred Wilkinson.

THE RED CARPET was rolled out recently for a first-time visitor to West Texas. Susan Applegate Wilson came out from Charleston, S.C., to visit her mother, Dot Pennebaker, and Dot's husband, Bill Pennebaker.

While here, she was entertained at a round of social events, beginning with a dinner party hosted by Douthea and Bill Shaner at their home. Family members presented included the Pennebakers and Bill's daughter and son-in-law, Mary and Jim Truitt.

Sue Houghton's home was the setting for a lovely luncheon. Hostesses with Sue were Chan Driscoll, Hazel (Mrs. Keith) Somerville and Mary Louise (Mrs. Oliver) Wood.

Among the guests were Roxanne (Mrs. Bill) Thams, Jean Allen, Donnie Weiner, Ruth Cole, Jean (Mrs. Buzz) Banks and Harriet (Mrs. Harvey) Herd.

Last Sunday evening, Hazel and Keith Somerville entertained with a buffet dinner. Guests included a group of friends known as the Pennebaker Paddlers. They traditionally raft down the Rio Grande in Big Bend National Park over Easter Weekend and make their headquarters at Lajitas.

Among those seen at the party were Doris and Dave Watson, Mary Lou Cassidy, Bill Browder, Pat and David Weaver, Cordy and David Ritchie, Diane McElligott and Ivan Ard.

Vina and John Rahlfs were the wine hosts, and the Pennebakers were the beer hosts for the party.

THE MIDLAND and Lee High Schools' Classes of 1984 gathered here last weekend for their 10-year reunions.

Festivities for both classes began on Friday evening with separate events.

MHS graduates met at The Club of Mission Dorado to play catch-up on the intervening years. Music from the '80s to the present was provided by Deejay J. Pat of Foxy Power 106. Hors d'oeuvres and beverages were served throughout the evening. On Saturday, a picnic was held on the grounds of the Museum of the Southwest for the grads and their spouses and children.

Saturday evening found the MHS contingent at the Midland Center. A seated dinner was catered by Murray's. MISD athletic director Tim Whalen, who was head baseball coach at Midland High during their school years, was the guest speaker. He also handed out humorous awards to class members.

Lee High grads began the weekend with a Friday night party at the Petroleum Club. Deejay Spencer Bennett of radio station KODM-FM provided the music. On Saturday, they met at Ulmer Park for a picnic with their families. Their Saturday night dinner was held at the Midland Hilton. Spike Dykes, now head football coach at Texas Tech and former head football coach at Lee High, was their speaker and award presenter.

After dinner, the two classes converged at Midland Center for dancing, with music provided by Prime Time.

Approximately 500 persons were in attendance, according to Tracy Lewis (Mrs. Coby) Farrow, who spearheaded the MHS arrangements.

BULL: Riders ride for the thrill had broken legs, arms, ribs, collar bones, fingers, toes, knees and cheek bones. And Donny recently had his head stepped on.

But, he added, "I don't have any false teeth. I'm proud of that."

Travis Coker is fulfilling his lifelong dream of being a bullrider. "I've been a cowboy all my life," he said. "I love it. You just get out there and want to do it. You've got to be ready to get hurt and take pain."

Although Coker currently doesn't call himself a professional, he said, "I have been a pro bullrider. I'm not right now but I was before and hope to be (professional) next year."

The key, he said, to riding raging bulls is "just start practicing and want to do it.

"If you set your mind to it, you can do anything."

Riding bulls, Coker added, is "just something you've got to do."

In fact, Coker was the one who encouraged Rogers to give bullriding a try.

Rogers said he started riding "at first, just to see if I have what it takes to ride a bull. It's kind of like skydiving — it's the excitement."

The Clair brothers agreed. "It's the rush," Donny said. "Some people do drugs, some people drink. I ride bulls. It's a natural high."

Herman said. "There's no drug that can match this (bullriding). If they say he (the bull) can't be rode, I try to ride him."

THE RIDERS MAY love the rush, but their loved ones don't always appreciate the sport as much as they do. A quick look around the arena at the bullriders and their families reveals that riders often wear casts, bandages and scars, have missing teeth and broken noses, while their loved ones often wear worried looks.

In fact, most of Rogers' family thinks he's crazy for riding bulls. However, his young son seems to think it's cool.

"It is crazy," Herman Clair said. "You've got to be crazy, you've got to be scared. The day you get on (a bull) and you are not scared is the day you'd better not ride."

"A bull can hurt you on any given day," agreed his brother. "A bull can kill you on any given day."

"It's just something you've got to do," Coker added. "Everybody is scared. If you're not scared you'd be crazy."

In spite of all the danger and the possibility of injuries, bullriders keep following their dream. "It's the No. 1 sport in America," Herman said. "Everyone wants to be a bullrider."

Climbing on the back of a bull and riding for eight seconds is not something just anyone can do. First comes ambition, desire, stamina and opportunity; then comes the equipment. Like any other sport, bullriding requires the right gear.

THE BULLRIDERS said that to get outfitted — including spurs, bull rope, chaps, glove and bell for the bull rope — a prospective rider will spend around $300 to $350. Or more, depending on how fancy he wants to get.

They also said that locally, the best place to find all this equipment is Scooter's Farm and Ranch Pro-Rodeo Equipment store.

"And," laughed Rogers, "you need lots of shirts," since they tend to get ripped and torn when riders tangle with bulls.

Bullriders also often wrap their arms with ace bandages "to keep from pulling your muscles," said Rogers.

As with many sports, concentration is important too. Coker said the eight seconds of a bull ride can be the longest eight seconds in the world, or the shortest.

"Sometimes it don't seem like its been that long because I'm concentrating so hard," he said. "Sometimes I don't hear the buzzer (signaling the end of the ride) because I'm concentrating so hard on just staying on."

While most bullriders are young men, some are men in their 30s, some are children and some are women.

The Clair brothers said they have friends and relatives — one is only 4 years old — who also want to be bullriders. "If you've got a friend who comes out and sees it (bullriding), they want to do it," Donny said. "They don't want to stop."

Locally, some women are into bullriding too, and an all-female rodeo is scheduled to be presented in August at Ector County Coliseum in Odessa, Herman added.

The adventure and excitement of bullriding is hard to explain to someone who isn't into the sport, but Herman came close: "We've raced cars, we've raced motorcycles.

"They ain't nothing compared to this."

Pop-culture icons not old, but gold

By Bruce Westbrook
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — Little boys take joy in destroying this toy.

They hurl it from windows, bury it in mud and flatten it with bikes.

They smash it, bash it and mash it. They tie firecrackers to it, light the fuses and run.

But it's all in fun, since they're playing with G.I. Joe, the universal soldier, that's been warring with other toys for little boys' affections since 1964.

Warning! Warning! Boomer alert!

Pop-culture icons from the '60s aren't old — they're gold. And little boys, now grown, have grown passionate about the G.I. Joes they once pummeled, pitched and pounded.

They are G.I. Joe collectors — dedicated men who now take old play toys seriously.

In recent years, they've given this pioneering boys' doll an artistic cachet. And their mania has boosted values so high that some Joes will be sold at auction Aug. 19 at Christie's in New York.

A day later, thousands of Joe junkies will attend The International G.I. Joe Collectors Convention, based on the aircraft carrier Intrepid at New York's Pier 86. Among them will be one of the most in-the-know Joe fans, Roddy Garcia.

"Sure, I'll be there," Garcia said, surveying Joe figures and uniforms arranged neatly behind a glass case in his Houston living room.

MOST OF his others he keeps locked away in an air-conditioned storage facility — all 350-plus of them.

But Garcia, 38, is careful to stress that he's no Joe jerk. He's not what he calls a "geekazoid" or a "fan nerd" who has failed to get a life and look beyond his obsession.

Rather, he and wife Terri (they're both pipeline engineers) play tennis, ride bikes, run, work out, listen to music and care for their three cats.

Joe, Joe and mo' Joe is just a diversion — albeit an important one.

Terri is no Joe fanatic, but she appreciates the toys' rarity and value.

Garcia loves the treasure-hunt challenge of collecting, which for him extends to old comic books that he keeps in a safe-deposit box. So he understands why others are equally possessive about Star Wars, KISS, Barbies or The Brady Bunch.

But his own collecting days are almost done. Garcia already has one of the largest lots of mint-condition Joes in their original boxes from the '60s, produced by Hasbro of Pawtucket, R.I.

"I'm not hungry like some collectors," he said. "I'm comfortable — sitting back, enjoying what I have and helping other people."

Indeed, he's becoming a spokesman for Joes, writing articles, speaking at conventions and helping new fans get started.

Joes that first sold for $4 can cost $400 today. If Garcia had to reassemble his collection, he said, "I couldn't afford it."

HE LAUNCHED his efforts a decade ago, back when Joes were just junk. "In 1983, I bought a couple of Joes at a flea market," Garcia said.

Few Joe collectors were foraging at the time. Unlike today, there were no price guides, fanzines, newsletters or conventions.

Yet many old Joes aren't valuable.

"A lot of Joes are awfully beat up, because boys liked to bash them when they played war with them," Garcia said.

In fact, collectors want their Joes as jewels, preserved behind plastic shrink-wraps in the original display boxes.

The first G.I. Joes were sold on Aug. 1, 1964.

"They were the first dolls for boys," said Kirk Bozigian, vice president of Hasbro. "They were sold as 'America's movable fighting man.'"

Hasbro sold 2 million Joes the first year.

At first there were only four "G.I. Joe Fighting Men," toting tiny rifles and sporting scars on their right cheeks.

A GI Nurse, a black Joe and a talking Joe had small runs later in the '60s, making them rare and costly today. And soldiers from many eras and nationalities also arose under G.I. Joe's banner.

Garcia owned three Joes as a boy. They are long gone. "We moved a lot, and they got tossed," said Garcia, who was born in Cuba and raised in New Jersey.

Yet he still fondly remembers why he enjoyed them.

"Most toys are fantasy-based," Garcia said. "But Joes are reality-based. The manufacturer stressed authenticity in the uniforms and the accessories."

HASBRO DID this for a shrewd reason: to involve the fathers or uncles who bought toys for boys.

Many such men had served in World War II or the Korean War and appreciated the attention to detail.

Garcia only collects what he calls "golden age" Joes, from 1964 to '69.

By the end of that period, Vietnam had scarred the military — and military toys. "G.I. Joe was a victim of Vietnam too," Garcia said.

Sales plummeted, and Joes became dormant in 1978. Then in '82, Hasbro turned its line of military toys into an "Avenger Team" — pseudo-superheroes fit for far-fetched spying missions.

These Joes are larger plastic action figures, much like those marketed today for Star Trek or the X-Men.

Boosted by popular TV cartoons and comics from Marvel, the new Joes have sold well. But Garcia doesn't like them.

"The toys got cheaper and cheaper, and authenticity wasn't important anymore," he said. To him, the new Joes lacked the gritty character of the originals, with their cloth uniforms and brass buttons.

But there's joy in Joeville. Hasbro has reintroduced the 12-inch Joes, in part due to collectors' demands.

"They'd been bugging us to do it," Bozigian said. "But this also enables the first generation of Joe kids to give their kind of Joes to their own kids. It's a link."

Bozigian estimates that 35 million Joes have been sold worldwide.

Persons wishing to contact Roddy Garcia about G.I. Joes may write him at P.O. Box 572411, Houston 77057-2411.

Tips help keep summer garden color bright

By Deborah A. Benge

In the heat of summer it's difficult at best to keep landscape color going. All but the hardiest of plants tend to play out when the going gets tough. Here's a few tips to keep summer color going even when it isn't color weather.

Benge

Mulching beds of color will help tremendously. A four- to six-inch layer of organic mulch will help keep soils moist, reduce weed growth, insulate the soil, reduce soil splashing and erosion. With the tremendous heat and dry winds we've been experiencing, all beds need to be mulched. This layer of mulch will reduce evaporation of water from the soil, reduce the amount of salts that accumulate at the soil surface and promote better plant growth. Annual weeds can almost be eliminated from beds with a mulch. Perennial weeds like bermuda and nutsedge won't be eliminated by they can be suppressed. In the summer soil temperatures can become so high root growth is impaired, but a soil covered with a four- to six-inch layer of mulch will be much cooler and roots will continue to function properly. And mulches reduce soil splashing and erosion, which means better, deeper more even watering. Reduced soil splashing can reduce the spread of soil borne diseases that some bedding plants are plagued with. So there's no excuse — beds need mulch.

Dead heading will keep your plants blooming longer. When a flower is pollinated, it will begin to form seed. This process requires lots of energy from the plant, so the plant shifts from blooming to making seed. When this happens, blooming falls off. To stop this seed production, fading flowers should be clipped off the plant. This will encourage more blooming and keep your plants looking neater. Plants that are covered in a mass of faded blooms could have the tops sheared just enough to remove fading flower heads.

Zinnias, cosmos, salvias, coreopsis and roses are just a few examples of blooming pants that will benefit from dead heading. There a few plants that are self-cleaning or sterile. These don't form a seed so you don't need to worry about clipping these. Other plants bloom only for a brief time. Many perennials are this way and dead heading is not a practice you need to be concerned with.

Fertilizing can keep plants vigorous and blooming. Plants that tend to bloom continuously (most annuals) need supplemental fertilizer to stay in the bloom mode. Petunias, periwinkle, geraniums, begonias, firebush, marigold and globe amaranth are examples of plants that need supplemental fertilizer to keep them looking their best.

Without a soil test, anyone's guess will do when deciding which fertilizer to use on color beds. If a bed has had complete fertilizers used on it in the past, it probably will only need nitrogen or high nitrogen fertilizer. A complete fertilizer is one that contains all three major nutrients N-P-K. Some nitrogen only or high nitrogen fertilizers you can use include 21-0-0, 33-0-0, 16-0-0, 28-4-4, cottonseed meal or blood meal.

Apply fertilizer by broadcasting or side dressing. Highly water soluble fertilizers can be broadcast over the bed. Try to make your application as even as possible by taking one half the recommended amount of fertilizer and spread it over the bed and do the same with the second half in another direction. Side dressing can be used as well. This is where the fertilizer is worked into the soil at each plant. Work the fertilizer into the dripline area of the plant rather than next to the stem. This is useful for slow release, complete and organic fertilizers.

Fertilizers formulated to be mixed with water are OK to use, but bear in mind they need to be used often because they are such small doses of fertilizer. One thing that should be kept in mind with the continual use of phosphorus and potassium containing fertilizers is the danger of P and K accumulating to high amounts in the soil. These two nutrients can cause problems later on.

Water soil deep and infrequently if possible. Daily irrigations are rarely needed and can do lots of harm. Take a hand tool, dig into the soil a little way and feel the soil moisture. If it's wet or moist, don't water. Use this method to determine when watering is necessary.

Control pests when necessary. Sometimes an insect problem will only need treatment if a little time, hand picking or cultural practices don't take care of it. Some pests can be taken care of with strong sprays of water, soapy water, insecticidal soaps (bear in mind soaps can burn leaves). If you have worms like budworms, loopers, etc., try a very safe natural pesticide called Bt (Bacillus thuringensis). With the recent heat we've had, spidermites are very bad and on many plants. Since they are so small and difficult to see, look for the symptoms, such as light colored, drying and stippled appearing leaves, drying lower leaves and dusty appearance. These can be controlled with strong sprays of water, soaps or recommended insecticides.

Don't let the heat beat you out of your summer color. Be persistent in using good plant care practices, such as mulch, deadhead, fertilize, water and control pests when needed. For more information contact your local county extension office.

Aromatic crayons make scents

By Kelly P. Kissel

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — Color a lime, smell a lime. Color a tree, smell pine. Color the sky, and Crayola says you can even smell fresh air.

Starting last Monday, the nation's premier crayon maker is offering a set of 16 new sensations: Scented crayons.

The secret is tiny, aroma-filled capsules mixed into the wax. The capsules — smaller than the tiny pellets in cold capsules — burst as the crayon rubs the paper.

The smells are lime, pine, fresh air, cherry, grape, lemon, orange, strawberry, chocolate, licorice, rose, blueberry, coconut, peach, banana and bubble gum. Scents correspond to colors, more or less.

The crayons are still nontoxic, and they still have that waxy flavor — at least the bubble gum crayon does.

The scent is slight when the crayons aren't being used, but a smell not unlike fruit salad wafts from a freshly opened box. The scents can be reactivated by scratching the completed artwork.

"This idea smelled like a winner from day one because it brought a whole new dimension to the coloring experience," said Brad Drexler, a spokesman for Crayola owner Binney & Smith Co.

Parents, have no fear.

"It was a concern kids would eat these, but we talked to moms, talked to kids, and based on that feedback we realized there wasn't an increased concern with kids wanting to put them in their mouths," Drexler said.

Binney & Smith expects to sell about 20 million Magic Scent crayons this year, or about 1 percent of its annual production of 2 billion crayons.

The smellies, which went on sale on Monday, cost slightly more than regular Crayola crayons.

Smells that didn't make the cut included blue cheese, leather, coffee, new car, skunk, garlic and hamburger.

A 1986 Yale University study listed crayons as the 18th most recognizable smell in the United States. Coffee was No. 1.

"The scents that we picked were basically the favorite scents of kids," Drexler said. "And skunk didn't make their top picks. But it does have potential for future picks."

Six-year-old Amanda Sorrell, from Phoenixville, Pa., reacts after sniffing scented Crayola crayons after touring Binney & Smith's manufacturing plant in Easton, Pa. The company has introduced 16 crayons containing miniature capsules that burst with the smells of fruit, flowers and fresh air when rubbed on paper or other surfaces.

DEAR ABBY

Injured man may walk again with right attitude and support

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: "Sitting" wrote from his hospital bed to say his doctors had told him he would never walk again. In an effort to encourage him, I replied: "'You will never walk again' is indeed a devastating verdict. However, I would like to hear from readers who were told they would never walk again, but with determination, therapy and the grace of God, they did."

Van Buren

Did I get letters! Among them were several surprises. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Sitting," who was told he would never walk again: My father was also given that bad news.

Dad worked on the shipping docks, and nine years ago, he suffered a near-fatal accident when a load of steel fell off the skids. It bounced onto both his feet, crushing them so badly that they had to be reconstructed with pins.

The doctors said he'd never walk again, but he didn't buy that hopeless verdict. With determination, therapy, and the support of his family and friends, he was up and walking at the end of three months!

Please don't give up. Ever! I am rooting for you! — SOMEONE IN TORONTO, CANADA

DEAR ABBY: In March 1968, en route to my job at Northwest Airlines, I was hit head-on by a drunk driver. I suffered a fractured skull, a broken jaw, and both arms and legs were also broken.

The doctors said I'd never walk again. I said I would. With therapy, hard work and prayer, I not only walked again — I danced. — LUCKY IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR ABBY: Please pass this on to the person who was told that he would never walk again.

I had a friend who was in a plane crash, and when he regained consciousness, his physician told him he would never walk again.

Several years later, he was attending a charity ball, and he bumped into that physician. "Hello, doctor," he said. "Do you remember me?"

The doctor looked at him, and gasped, "Why, you're WALKING!"

My friend replied, "No, Doctor. I'm DANCING!"

My best regards to you, Abby. — B.J. PETERSON, LOS ANGELES

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in regard to "Sitting." My grandpa was in World War II. After the war, he returned to marry the girl who became my grandma.

After five kids and taking over his father's construction business, Grandpa was stricken with polio. His doctors told him he would never be able to walk again — or have children.

Well, it wasn't long before he was walking, working in his father's construction business, and chasing seven kids around.

This November, we will celebrate his 75th birthday. I'm lucky that my grandpa is the stubborn, hardworking, determined man he is, or I wouldn't be here — considering that my mom was born after the doctors had told Grandpa that he could never father another child. — PROUD GRANDDAUGHTER

TOMORROW: Letters from readers who didn't walk again, but nevertheless went on to lead productive lives.

DEAR ABBY: Why all the commotion about how to stop a rooster from crowing?

Roosters instinctively crow for a reason. Their biological clock is set by their hormones. A rooster crows to wake up the hens early in the morning to let them know that it's time to get off their perches and get with it if they want chicks to hatch from their eggs.

A rooster will crow if he is upset, or to let us know that there is going to be a change in the weather. (Roosters sense rain, storms and violent weather, and it's their way of sending out an alarm.)

Abby, this is not a scientific explanation; it's just my observation from many years of having lived on a farm. — PORTLAND, ORE., FARMER

Self-defense boosts self-esteem

By Marina Pisano
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANTONIO — She was beaten, raped, nearly suffocated by a man she didn't know and left with permanent spinal damage.

The woman named Deborah was so traumatized she could not leave her house and so fearful she could not stay home alone.

All that changed with a self-defense course, says survival instructor Ed Burgos, who recounted Deborah's story Wednesday during a demonstration of self-esteem- and confidence-boosting defense techniques at the Bexar County Women's Center.

Almost three years after the attack, Deborah still fears going out at times, but she also runs her own business, meets clients and leads an active life, he said.

Burgos, 39, a former New York City police officer and karate black belt who moved here three years ago, said the first line of defense in street and campus crime is to limit opportunities to be victimized.

"The biggest mistake women make is they don't prepare to be able to defend themselves in case something would happen. I mean mentally prepare. The physical aspect is maybe 35 percent. The rest is mental — that attitude of surviving.

"Women should be aware of the situation around them, not ignore their instincts that something doesn't look right or feel right, and prevent (exposure) as much as possible," he explained.

Walking to the car, "look around it and in it and make sure all the doors are locked and trunk is locked. Have your car key ready," continued Burgos, who believes people should carry keys, tear gas, flashlights that double as weapons, stun guns and other defensive tools.

"The most dangerous places are poorly lit or places the woman is unfamiliar with. It's also dangerous if nobody knows where the woman is. If you have a car phone, call home and say, 'I'm about to leave,' so they know to expect you."

If the worst happens and someone makes menacing moves or attacks, then a few basic maneuvers can throw an assailant off and put a woman in control long enough to escape, Burgos said.

Joined on the mat by his wife, Lori Jenks, 22, and sister-in-law Julie Jenks, 10, Burgos — who wears padding during classes — demonstrated techniques to break arm holds, use leverage, redirect energy and hit at vulnerable body parts.

"Grab his ears. Poke him in the eye. Punch him in the lower abdomen, not the stomach," he suggested.

"The knee is a beautiful spot to kick. And, the throat is beautiful. A guy can weigh 700 pounds, and it doesn't matter. You hit him in the throat, and he's going to react."

Burgos noted that while men generally have superior upper-body strength, women can counter that with the power in their legs and hips.

Pushing Julie down on her back, he placed his knees on her upper arms, pinning her to the mat. But by simply reaching down and lifting his feet while raising her legs, the slightly built girl was able to roll him to the side and scramble to her feet.

The instructor's ongoing group and private "Survival" self-defense courses — one runs $50 — are designed not to turn the average woman into a martial-arts demon but to help her overcome the shock, panic and fear associated with unexpected attacks.

Cheryl Mooty, who teaches a six-week, $45 course in personal safety, at the Sexual Assault Crisis & Resource Center, said that about half her female students already have been raped or attacked.

"They don't want it to happen again," Mooty remarked. "What we teach are assertiveness, confidence, body language and some basic moves for rear or frontal attack."

Burgos, who has lectured at the Battered Women's Shelter of Bexar County, said some women fear violence and rape at home as much as on the street.

"I try to get them to realize first this person that is attacking is no longer your husband, no longer your boyfriend. He is an attacker. You don't want to say, 'I can't fight him because I love him.' There's no love and honor there."

Burgos told of a student who threw her abusive ex-husband off her during an attack just long enough to grab the baseball bat she kept in the bedroom.

"She stood there with that bat and said, 'Never again; never again.' And the guy ran. That's what it takes — being able to say, 'Never again.'"

Dandelions are tough kind of weed

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The perennial dandelion is a common weed in the United States, and its roots often grow several feet deep.

Mowing the plant or pulling the stems out of the ground is not effective in preventing or eliminating the weed, since the deep roots will sprout again.

Dandelions should be attacked with weed killer at the first sign of growth, which usually is in the spring.

Telephone lines are now life lines

By Erma Bombeck

The phone companies and Candice Bergen are staying awake at nights trying to think of ways for me to part with my money.

Bombeck

Have you ever seen an industry that has more gimmicks and advertises more? They beg me to save money on all my overseas calls. I don't know anyone overseas.

One of our local TV stations said I could register a vote on whether or not I thought President Clinton should hold a bake sale/celebrity auction to pay for his legal charges. I can press 1030 if I vote yes and 1031 if I vote no. Fifty cents would be added to my phone bill for each vote.

I asked, "What will happen to the results?" The station said, "Nothing." So why would I want to do that?

The other day when I dialed an operator for a phone number I couldn't find in the book, she said if I stayed on the line, she would dial the number for me and add 50 cents to my bill. I should have a job that pays 50 cents every three seconds.

One company vows to save me money if I give it a list of all my friends. I don't have that many friends. It would be as embarrassing as my son's graduation where we ordered pictures for the entire family and close acquaintances. We signed up for three 8-by-10's, seven 5-by-7's and 200 friendship pictures.

He had only five friends, so I had to use the leftover photos as coasters and scratch pads. I used a strip of them to insulate the door to the garage. I passed them out at airports to people waiting for planes. I still keep 50 or 60 of them in the car to wrap my gum in.

The 900 numbers were a stroke of genius. For people who can't get enough of radio and TV talk marathons, they can dial a joke, Dr. Ruth, Dr. Brothers, get an inspirational message, or a sexy voice that will engage in heavy breathing. There is a price for this, depending on how long you stay on the line.

We pay a lot to talk on the phone at 34,000 feet, talk to shopping networks about how excited we are to own an Annette Funicello teddy bear, and make business deals on the phone in hotel bathrooms.

The phone has become an umbilical cord that sustains life. We cannot be parted from it or we'll die. We buy dedicated fax lines, and now have an option of a service where we don't even have to dial the number.

One of my best friends is a talk-show host. He drops by occasionally to visit. My phone rings and he says, "I'm dropping by, but I don't like to just pop in without some advance notice."

"Great!" I say. "When are you coming?"

"I'm on a car phone at the bottom of your driveway!"

Boost child's creativity

Associated Press

Of course you want your child to be creative. But what can you do to nurture creativity at home? Here's some advice from the experts at Crayola Kids magazine to point you toward success:

■ Help your child discover his or her passion. "Try to foster an atmosphere in which children can discover their strongest interest — what most excites them," says Dr. Teresa Amabile, author of "Growing Up Creative."

Don Treffinger, president of the Center for Creative Learning in Sarasota, Fla., agrees. "Help your child recognize strengths, celebrate them and find opportunities to use them," he urges. "That means not just going places and doing things. It means talking about what you're doing and listening to what the kid is getting excited about."

■ Promote fluency — your child's ability to generate ideas. "On a trip to the grocery store," Treffinger suggests, "tell your child, 'Name all the green things you can think of in the grocery store. Name all the round or square things you can eat.'"

■ Foster flexibility — your child's ability to look at problems from several angles. "Be playful," says Treffinger. "Ask questions like, 'What if we turned it upside down — or looked at it backward?' Creative people are able to step outside their immediate perspective and take a fresh look at things."

■ Encourage originality — your child's ability to produce new, unusual ideas. "At dinner-time," Treffinger says, "pick up a spoon and say, 'What else can we do with a spoon besides eat with it?'"

■ Swallow the automatic no. "Instead of, 'You can't, because,' say, 'How might we?'" Treffinger advises.

Protect your child from creativity's enemies — grades, competition and narrow choices, to name a few. Beth Hennessey, a psychologist at Wellesley College, has studied ways to do this.

"Simply by talking to kids," she says, "parents can help them put grades in perspective and cope with stress from competition. Parents can get kids to understand that even if it weren't for the expected reward — the grades or, God forbid, the dollar for each A — maybe they'd still want to do what teachers ask them to, just because it's fun."

Sauces to make summer foods sizzle

By Carol Deegan

NEW YORK (AP) — Jump Up and Kiss Me. D.L. Jardine's Blazin' Saddle. Uncle Billy's Voo Doo Jerk Slather. Titles of hot new tunes? Summer movies? The latest dances? Guess again. They're bottled brands of Caribbean-style hot sauces, and among the ingredients in a new book on cooking with hot sauces.

Jennifer Trainer Thompson, co-author of "The Yachting Cookbook," offers 19 recipes for hot sauces and 43 recipes for cocktails, appetizers, main courses, side dishes and salads in her new book, "Hot Licks: Great Recipes for Making and Cooking with Hot Sauces" (Chronicle Books, $14.95).

"You don't have to be a macho chilehead to fall in love with hot sauces," Thompson writes in the book's introduction. " ... I urge you to incorporate them — as well as many fine bottled hot sauces on the market — into myriad dishes, to make the flavors sing."

Among her offerings: Tangy Skirt Steak Tampiqueno Tacos, "Hot Potato" Potato Salad and Spicy Grilled Shiitakes with Ginger and Garlic.

The 134-page hardcover cookbook, with witty, colorful illustrations by Mercedes McDonald, includes a guide to bottled hot sauces, mail-order sources, a chile glossary and wine suggestions.

Written with a light touch, Thompson describes F-16 Afterburner as a sauce for chileheads whose predictable reaction to all hot sauce is "oh, it wasn't that hot" because F-16 "takes no prisoners" (the recipe calls for 16 chile peppers). As for her recipe for Grilled Hot Thighs (grilled chicken), Thompson writes: "The flavor of the habaneros in the hot sauce will survive the rigors of the grill, as will the other ingredients, all chosen for their strength and robustness."

GRILLED HOT THIGHS

8 chicken thighs
5 tablespoons Spicy Island Hot Sauce (recipe below) or a bottled Caribbean-style sauce such as Dat'l-Do-It Hot Sauce
2 medium garlic cloves, minced
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
¼ cup rum
½-inch piece gingerroot, finely chopped
½ tablespoon coarse mustard
1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
1 tablespoon olive oil

Rinse chicken and dry with a paper towel. Place in a nonmetallic bowl. Combine remaining ingredients. Pour over chicken. Marinate in the refrigerator for three hours.

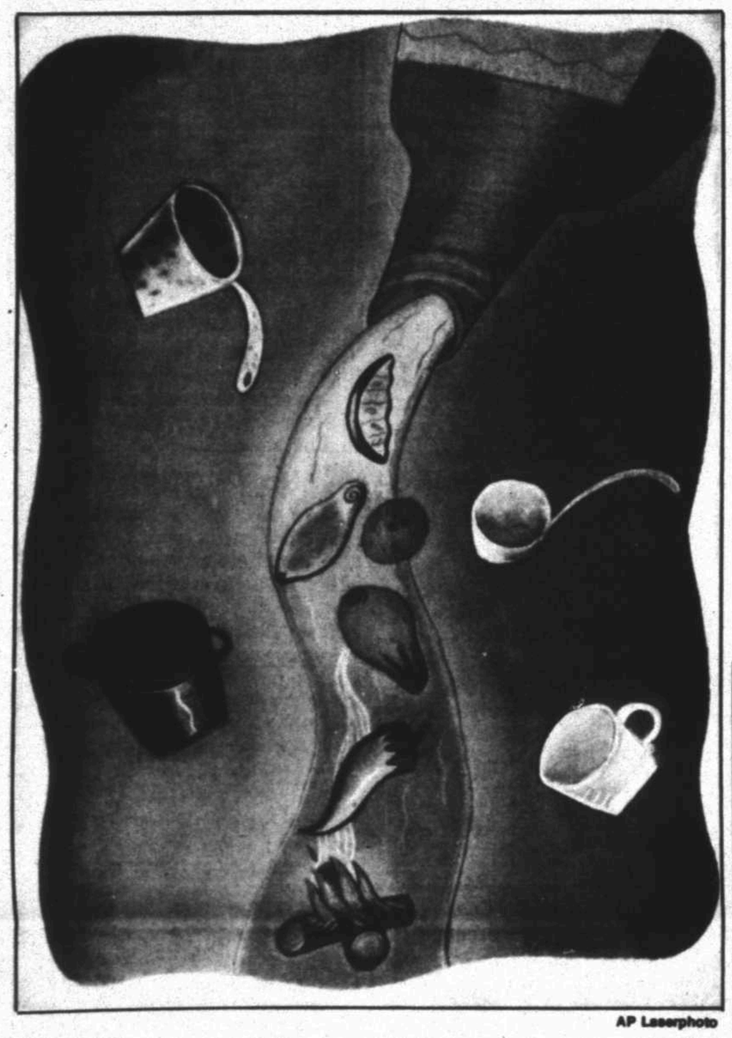

Prepare grill. Return chicken to room temperature. Grill chicken over medium coals for about 30 minutes, turning the pieces after 15 minutes and basting them frequently. The chicken should have a nice, browned surface. The thighs are done when the juices flow clear. Serve immediately or cold as picnic fare. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

SPICY ISLAND HOT SAUCE

1 ripe papaya, peeled, seeded and coarsely chopped
1 medium yellow onion, coarsely chopped
2 medium garlic cloves, minced
4 Scotch bonnet or habanero peppers, stemmed and seeded
1-inch length fresh ginger, peeled and coarsely chopped
⅓ cup dark rum
⅓ cup fresh lime juice
½ teaspoon salt
2½ teaspoons honey
⅛ teaspoon caradamom
⅛ teaspoon anise
⅛ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon turmeric
Pinch nutmeg
Pinch cinnamon
Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Combine all ingredients in blender and puree until just smooth, or about 1 minute (taking care not to overblend and aerate). Pour into a saucepan and bring to a boil, then simmer gently, uncovered, for 10 minutes. Remove from heat and allow to cool before bottling. Refrigerated, the sauce will keep for about 6 weeks. Makes 2 cups.

Urban dwellers declare war on graffiti

By Elaine Louie
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Some people consider it urban artistry. Homeowners and the New York Landmarks Conservancy, a nonprofit group in Manhattan devoted to landmarks preservation, do not.

So the conservancy asked itself, "What is the best way for homeowners to remove graffiti without harming the building material or harming themselves?" said Ken Lustbader, a program manager there.

On Tuesday, the conservancy took action against graffiti by publishing a free six-page booklet on tips and products for the removal of graffiti on homes in Strivers' Row in Harlem. The group will also refer people to professional companies that remove graffiti for a fee, starting at about $500 a day.

On Tuesday at 11 a.m., Lustbader stood in front of an 1891 brownstone designed by McKim, Mead & White on Strivers' Row. Graffiti defaced a column.

When you see graffiti, determine what surface it is on, Lustbader said. "Polished granite is easier to clean than brownstone, because brownstone is porous," he added.

Next, examine the graffiti. In this case, it was black spray paint, and it was "old graffiti" — more than a year old and harder to remove.

Lustbader donned rubber gloves, and masks for his eyes and nose. You shouldn't wear shorts, he said, or work on gusty days or when children are around.

WHEELER-DARROW

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wheeler of Midland announce the engagement of their daughter, Amy Lynn, to Russell Clarence Darrow Jr., son of Russell and Sarah Darrow of Houston. The wedding is planned for Aug. 20 at Briarcrest Country Club in Bryan.

Miss Wheeler is a 1990 graduate of Kilgore High School. She earned a bachelor of arts degree in marketing from Texas A&M University in May. She is employed with MVA Marketing Research of Houston. Her fiance graduated from Pearland High School in 1990. He is scheduled to graduate from Texas A&M on Aug. 13 with a degree in math. He plans to be a secondary education teacher in the Houston area.

Maginot Line was built during 1930s

METZ, France (AP) — The Maginot Line, a complex system of military fortifications built in the 1930s, was named after Andre Maginot, France's war minister at the time.

Although intended to protect France's borders against invasion, German troops in May 1940 circumvented the Maginot Line and attacked through the Ardennes in the north.

Simple preparation is best for scallops

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

To my mind, sweet and tender scallops taste best when simply prepared. For a special-occasion evening, simmer scallops in the creamy tomato sauce below, accented with sweet peppers and arugula or spinach. Better yet, this impressive combination goes together in less than 30 minutes.

You can use either sea scallops or bay scallops, the two most common varieties. The main difference between the two is their size. Sea scallops can be as large as 2 inches across; bay scallops usually measure half an inch. The bay scallops may be slightly more tender.

SCALLOPS WITH ARUGULA

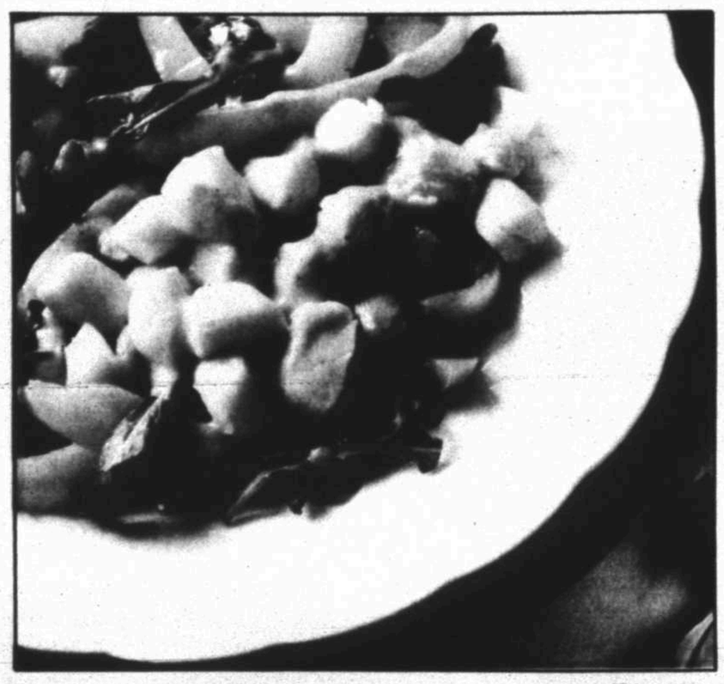

1 pound fresh or frozen bay or sea scallops
3 large yellow and-or red sweet peppers
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
1 clove garlic, minced
4 cups loosely packed arugula or spinach, stems removed and torn (2 ounces)
½ cup whipping cream
2 tablespoons tomato paste
2 tablespoons lime juice
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Thaw scallops, if frozen. Rinse scallops and pat dry; halve large ones. Halve peppers lengthwise; remove and discard seeds and membranes. Slice peppers lengthwise into ½-inch-wide strips.

In a large skillet melt margarine or butter over medium-high heat. Stir-fry peppers and garlic for 4 to 5 minutes or until tender. Add arugula or spinach; stir-fry for 30 seconds or just until wilted. Spoon atop 4 plates. Cover; keep warm.

To the same skillet add cream and tomato paste. Bring to boiling; add scallops. Simmer, uncovered, for 3 to 4 minutes or until scallops are opaque. With a slotted spoon, arrange scallops atop vegetables. Bring cream mixture to boiling. Whisk briskly for 1 minute or until slightly thickened. Add lime juice, salt and pepper. Spoon over scallops. Makes 4 servings.

East Texas dive site like 'chunk of Caribbean'

By Toni K. Laxson
Associated Press

'You could see them go under water and swim way down, you know, 15, 20 feet down. It was gorgeous. I couldn't believe it. And I left, I literally left that minute and went to the courthouse, found out who owned the place and purchased it.'

— Calvin Wilcher
dive instructor

ATHENS, Texas — Calvin Wilcher is in deep water. He landed there in 1988 after changing his life on the toss of a dime. But the water's a lovely aqua blue, and Wilcher seems a happy guy.

"It's pretty nice ... and we have some good times out here in the summer," said Wilcher, six-year owner and operator of the Athens Scuba Park, a 50-acre site hidden two blocks from downtown Athens.

Following an impulse, the West Texas native gave up two Tyler business ventures in 1988 and bought an abandoned brick factory that was nothing more than a dump ground surrounding a flooded clay pit, he said.

It was the pit, now an 8-acre lake, that sold him. The first thing one notices is its turquoise color — as if a chunk of the Caribbean had accidentally broken off in East Texas. The color comes from the light hue of the clay silt. The silt, however, occasionally interfers with the pit's second feature — a clarity of water unusual in lakes. Rain and weather stir up the silt, reducing underwater visibility. During placid summer months, Wilcher said visibility can reach as much as 50 feet.

WILCHER, A MASTER scuba diving instructor, had been donning flippers for about 15 years when he first saw the clay pit. He had already been underwater in a global way — traveling to Australia, Guam, Belize, Hawaii, the Netherlands, Bahamas, British West Indies, Cayman Islands ... He has close to 100 T-shirts as verification.

But in the fall of 1987, when he ran both a cellular telephone company and a heavy equipment sales business in Tyler, his only diving opportunities were East Texas's mostly murky lakes. A few employees told him about an old clay pit that was "real clear, just baby blue," and Wilcher drove out. Two boys were swimming in the water when he got there.

"You could see them go under water and swim way down, you know, 15, 20 feet down. It was gorgeous. I couldn't believe it." Wilcher said he took out a dime, flipped it into the water and watched as it glittered all the way to the bottom. "And I left, I literally left that minute and went to the courthouse, found out who owned the place and purchased it," he said, then paused and laughed.

"Cause I knew this would be a gold mine. Turn it into a scuba training facility. Of course, it was a piece of junk land, then." Only the foundations of the brick factory, built in the early 1930s and closed in 1964, remained at the site. For more than two decades the site had been a graveyard for unwanted refuse: broken stoves, old sofas, refrigerators and discarded loads of concrete. "You couldn't even walk across it," he said. "It took me two years to clean it up."

HE BULLDOZED high dirt walls surrounding the clay pit, built seven docks, several barbeque pits, picnic tables, a sand volleyball court, a basketball court and the Athens Scuba Park's dive shop/training center. There's even showers for the divers.

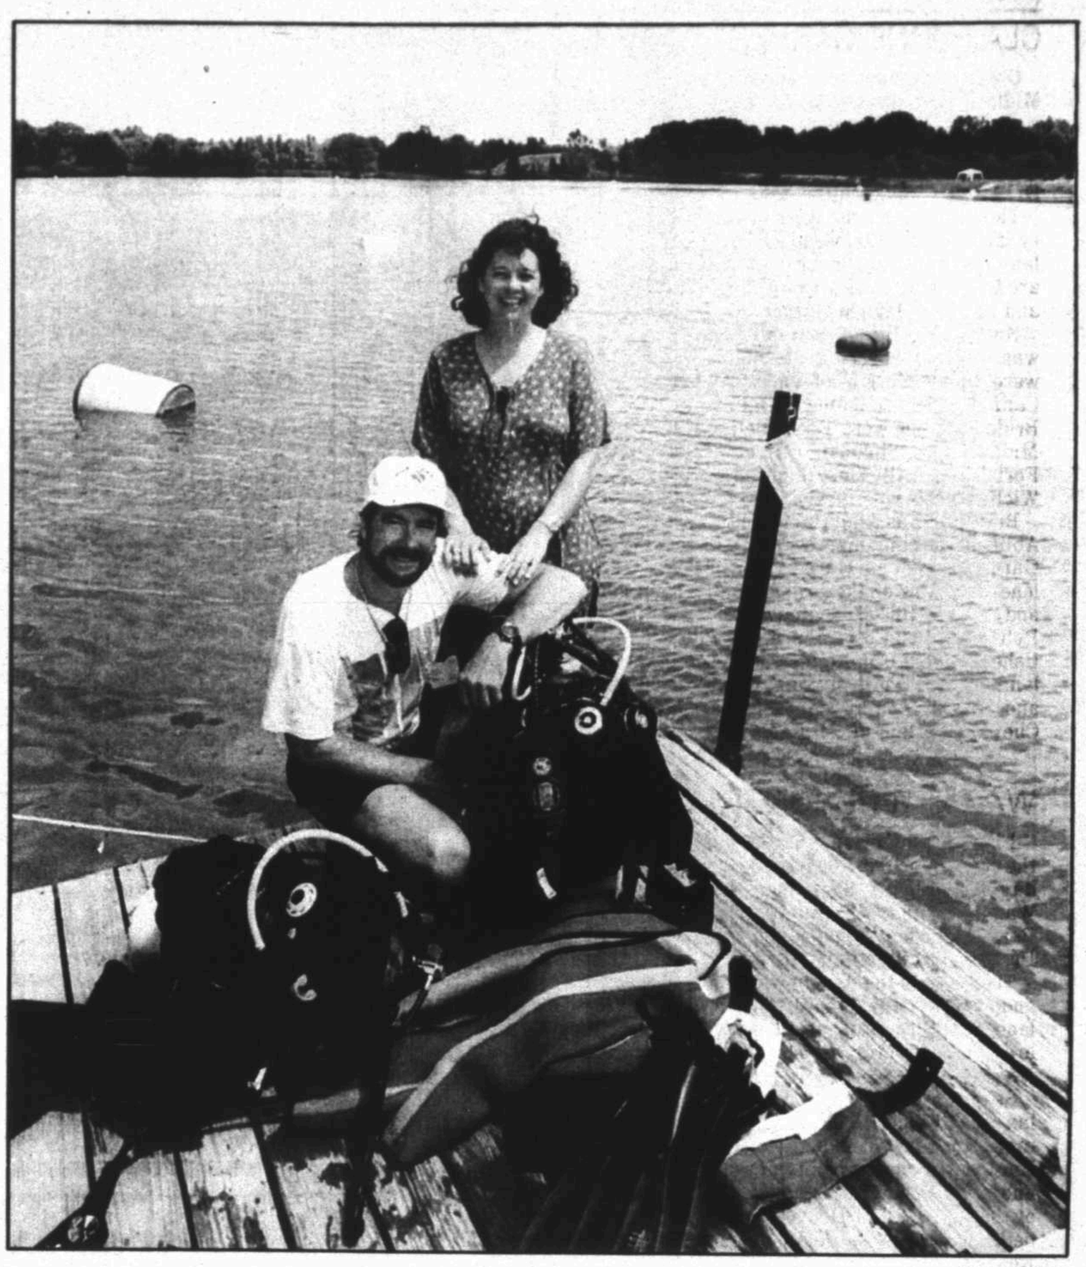

Certified with the Professional Association of Diving Instructors, Wilcher also began teaching classes at night.

"The whole time I was building, I was diving. I had to have some income because I just closed up my businesses," Wilcher said. It was in one of those classes that Wilcher met his wife. "My boyfriend (of the time) told me I should come out her and get scuba trained," said Shannon Wilcher, 34.

"And she liked it so much she married the instructor," her husband said, again laughing. The park, now listed as one of Athens' top attractions, brings in more people every year, with Wilcher expecting 7,000 visitors in 1994. He doesn't advertise — divers learn about the place mostly by word-of-mouth, he said. It's a popular destination for diving classes from the Metroplex.

Wilcher said a total of 54 Dallas-area dive shops use the park for their underwater instruction. Wilcher continues teaching classes — including wreck diving, night diving, underwater hunting, etc. And he works on the park constantly, sending water samples in for testing, feeding the pet fish that follow divers around, or adding to the numerous "wrecks" he's planted for divers to explore.

UNTIL THIS year, his wife, who is now a certified instructor too, taught scuba classes at the park. Now, however, Mrs. Wilcher runs things in the scuba shop. She said doctors aren't certain what effects the air from scuba tanks may have on unborn children, and the couple is expecting their first child. When asked whether it's a boy or a girl, Mrs. Wilcher responded with the only logical answer. "It's a scuba diver."

Unspoiled bay islands of Honduras promise adventure

By Marty Racine
N.Y. Times News Service

GUANAJA, Honduras — Half the allure of scuba diving is fleeing civilization's gridlock. But many Caribbean destinations are jammed to the gills, above and below the water.

Head instead to the relatively unspoiled Bay Islands of Honduras, 35 miles off the mainland, where you'll feel more like an adventurer than a tourist.

The largest of the three islands, Roatan, has four all-inclusive dive resorts: Coco View, Fantasy Island, Romeo's and Anthony's Key.

Even more rustic and remote is Guanaja, population 10,800, home of La Posada del Sol and Bayman Bay Club.

Here there are no roads or cars; only hiking trails span the mountainous Garden of Eden, which was settled by Spanish colonists, African slaves and Dutch pirates. The main village, Banaca Town, is a mile offshore on stilts and billed as the Venice of Honduras.

A RECENT week's stay at Bayman Bay revealed the most picturesque setting seen in four years of visiting Caribbean resorts. There is also a first-rate diving operation. Both minimized a few management snafus.

Situated on the leeward side (La Posada is windward), Bayman Bay resort climbs steep, lush hills thick with mango, coconut and banana trees.

Fifteen shaded cabins jutting out on stilts are linked by a charming maze of boardwalks and stairs. The shower stalls in these quarters drain through wooden-floor slats 20 feet above ground, but toilets have their own septic system.

The main floor of Bayman Bay's clubhouse, called the Treehouse, includes a dining area, bar, reading lounge and deck with a panoramic view of the jade green cove and sapphire blue sea. Upstairs are large sofas, a used-book library, poker table, pool table, chessboard, backgammon board and TV lounge. On the third level, a hammock is strung near the tree line.

The resort's secluded cove is unparalleled for swimming and deep enough for daredevil jumps off a sun deck over the pier.

But go kayaking. There is no fee for the two-person vessels, and 15 minutes up the coast and beyond view are deserted beaches for the taking.

Scheduled group activities include a beach barbecue, waterfall hike and sunset cruise.

ADJACENT TO the pier are two dive boats, a dive shop and storage room for scuba gear.

Boat dives are twice daily, at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m., and are well-staffed. Instead of 14 to a boat, groups of six and eight are accommodated, a luxurious arrangement.

Diving on the windward side is considerably rougher at the surface, and sites there can take 45 minutes to reach. Leeward sites are accessible in as little as five minutes.

While not as dramatic as the 130-foot Blue Hole of Belize or as rich in marine life as Belize's Lighthouse Reef, Bayman Bay's diving utilizes spectacular reef formations built of volcanic lava deposits.

The most awesome site we dived is called Black Rock Canyon. Some liken it to a Grand Canyon nether world. At 60 feet, it offers a breathtaking glide through a Hobbit Hole of tunnels and caves carved into majestic spires.

Black Rock's dark, narrow canyons lead to a clearing where sunbeams danced through the 100-foot-visibility water, inducing a reverie that could be described as spiritual.

Bayman's dives were creative. One site, Jado Trader, was a shipwreck at 110 feet. Another, Jim's Silverlode, attracted eight friendly groupers when our dive master took down a cache of tasty minnows. Even reclusive moray eels are sociable beggars here.

IN ADDITION, there is unlimited shore diving. Six people dove one night in 15-foot shallows about 100 yards out. This proved less eventful; the experience is in floating on your back shoreward under a bejeweled sky.

These transcendent moments had a price. The dreaded mosquitolike sand flies, dubbed throughout the Caribbean as no-see-ums, were particularly voracious (if harmless).

The food was below par, but in fairness, timing was a factor. The week before, one cook had broken her ankle and required treatment off the island; the other had suffered a stroke. That left the meals, so guests were informed, to the dishwashers and potato peelers.

Our arrival lacked the personal touch one appreciates far from home. No resort representative was present when guests arrived at Guanaja's airstrip from the Honduran mainland — while La Posada reps in marked T-shirts greeted their arrivals.

After a 20-minute water-taxi ride, the group was met by a woman who advised guests to keep valuables — cash isn't exchanged until checkout day — in the house safe, a disconcerting notion in paradise. (Most cabins, thankfully, had no locks.)

Departure was by water taxi early Saturday after a 6 a.m. wake-up. At the airstrip, it was hurry up and wait. One Islena Airline plane left with native passengers, another with a group from La Posada — which had priority, guests were told, because their manager reconfirmed first.

GUESTS WERE left to rot in the sun for nearly four hours — cutting severely into a planned sightseeing layover in the mainland city of San Pedro Sula before transferring to afternoon U.S.-bound flights.

Such a delay, said one longtime Bayman visitor, was a first for her. Just bad luck. And cooks don't break an ankle every week. Go for the constants, like the postcard setting and Black Rock Canyon. Even the no-see-ums are worth it.

RITTHALER-GILMOUR

The Mission San Jose Church in San Antonio was the setting for the wedding of Amy Elizabeth Ritthaler and Dr. Douglas Anthony Gilmour. The Rev. Louis Zbinden of First Presbyterian Church officiated.

The bride is the daugher of Marilyn Morris of San Antonio and Walter Ritthaler of New Braunfels. The parents of the groom are Hugh and Jesse Gilmour of Midland.

Attendants for the bride were Shana Avery, Michelle Friedeck, and Jan Pickett. Best man was Mayor Denny Pickett of Granger. Also attending the groom were Dr. Marvin Bellzer and Dr. John Brineman. Carlie Gilmour of Lubbock was flower girl. The groom was honored to have as ushers his brother Chip Gilmour, Scott Gilmour, and Bruce Gilmour, along with the bride's brother Jason Ritthaler. The groom's sister Judy Windecker flew in from Florida for the event.

The bride is a graduate of Incarnate Word College and is currently working on her Master's Degree at St. Mary's University. The groom is a graduate of University of Texas at Austin and Duke University. He is an associate professor of philosophy at Incarnate Word College, and is also serving as chairman of the Philosophy department.

For a spoonful of supper, served with your favorite bread and tea, make a batch of rosy Cherry-Apricot Freezer Jam and save some for the fall and winter.

Savor summer's fruits in jam

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Biting into the season's juicy sweet cherries and golden apricots is hard to beat. Unless, of course, you put them together in this freezer jam. Stash a jar of this rosy spread in the refrigerator for your family to enjoy right now, then freeze the rest. Months from today, you can still savor sweet spoonfuls of summer.

CHERRY-APRICOT FREEZER JAM

1 pound fully ripe apricots, halved and pitted (2 cups)
½ pound dark sweet cherries, pitted (1¼ cups)
4 cups sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon almond extract
¾ cup water
1 1¾-ounce package regular powdered fruit pectin

Wash apricot halves and cherries; drain thoroughly in a colander. Finely chop the fruit. (You should have a total of about 2½ cups chopped fruit.) In a medium mixing bowl stir together the chopped fruit, sugar, lemon juice and almond extract. Cover loosely; let the mixture stand for 10 minutes.

In a small saucepan stir together the water and powdered fruit pectin. Heat and stir over high heat until the mixture reaches a full rolling boil. Boil, uncovered, for 1 minute. Immediately pour the hot pectin mixture over the fruit; stir constantly for 3 minutes.

Ladle the fruit mixture into hot, clean half-pint jars or freezer containers, leaving a half-inch headspace at the top of each container. Seal the containers tightly. Wipe the containers and the lids. Label each with the recipe name and the date. Let the containers stand at room temperature about 24 hours or until the jam is set. Store for up to 3 weeks in the refrigerator or for up to 1 year in the freezer. Makes 6 half-pints.

Loaf combines blueberries, cheese

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

This recipe from the North American Blueberry Council combines the summer berry with the sharpness of Cheddar cheese.

BLUEBERRY ORANGE CHEESE BREAD

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar
1 cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
1½ teaspoons each baking powder and baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
1 cup fresh or frozen blueberries

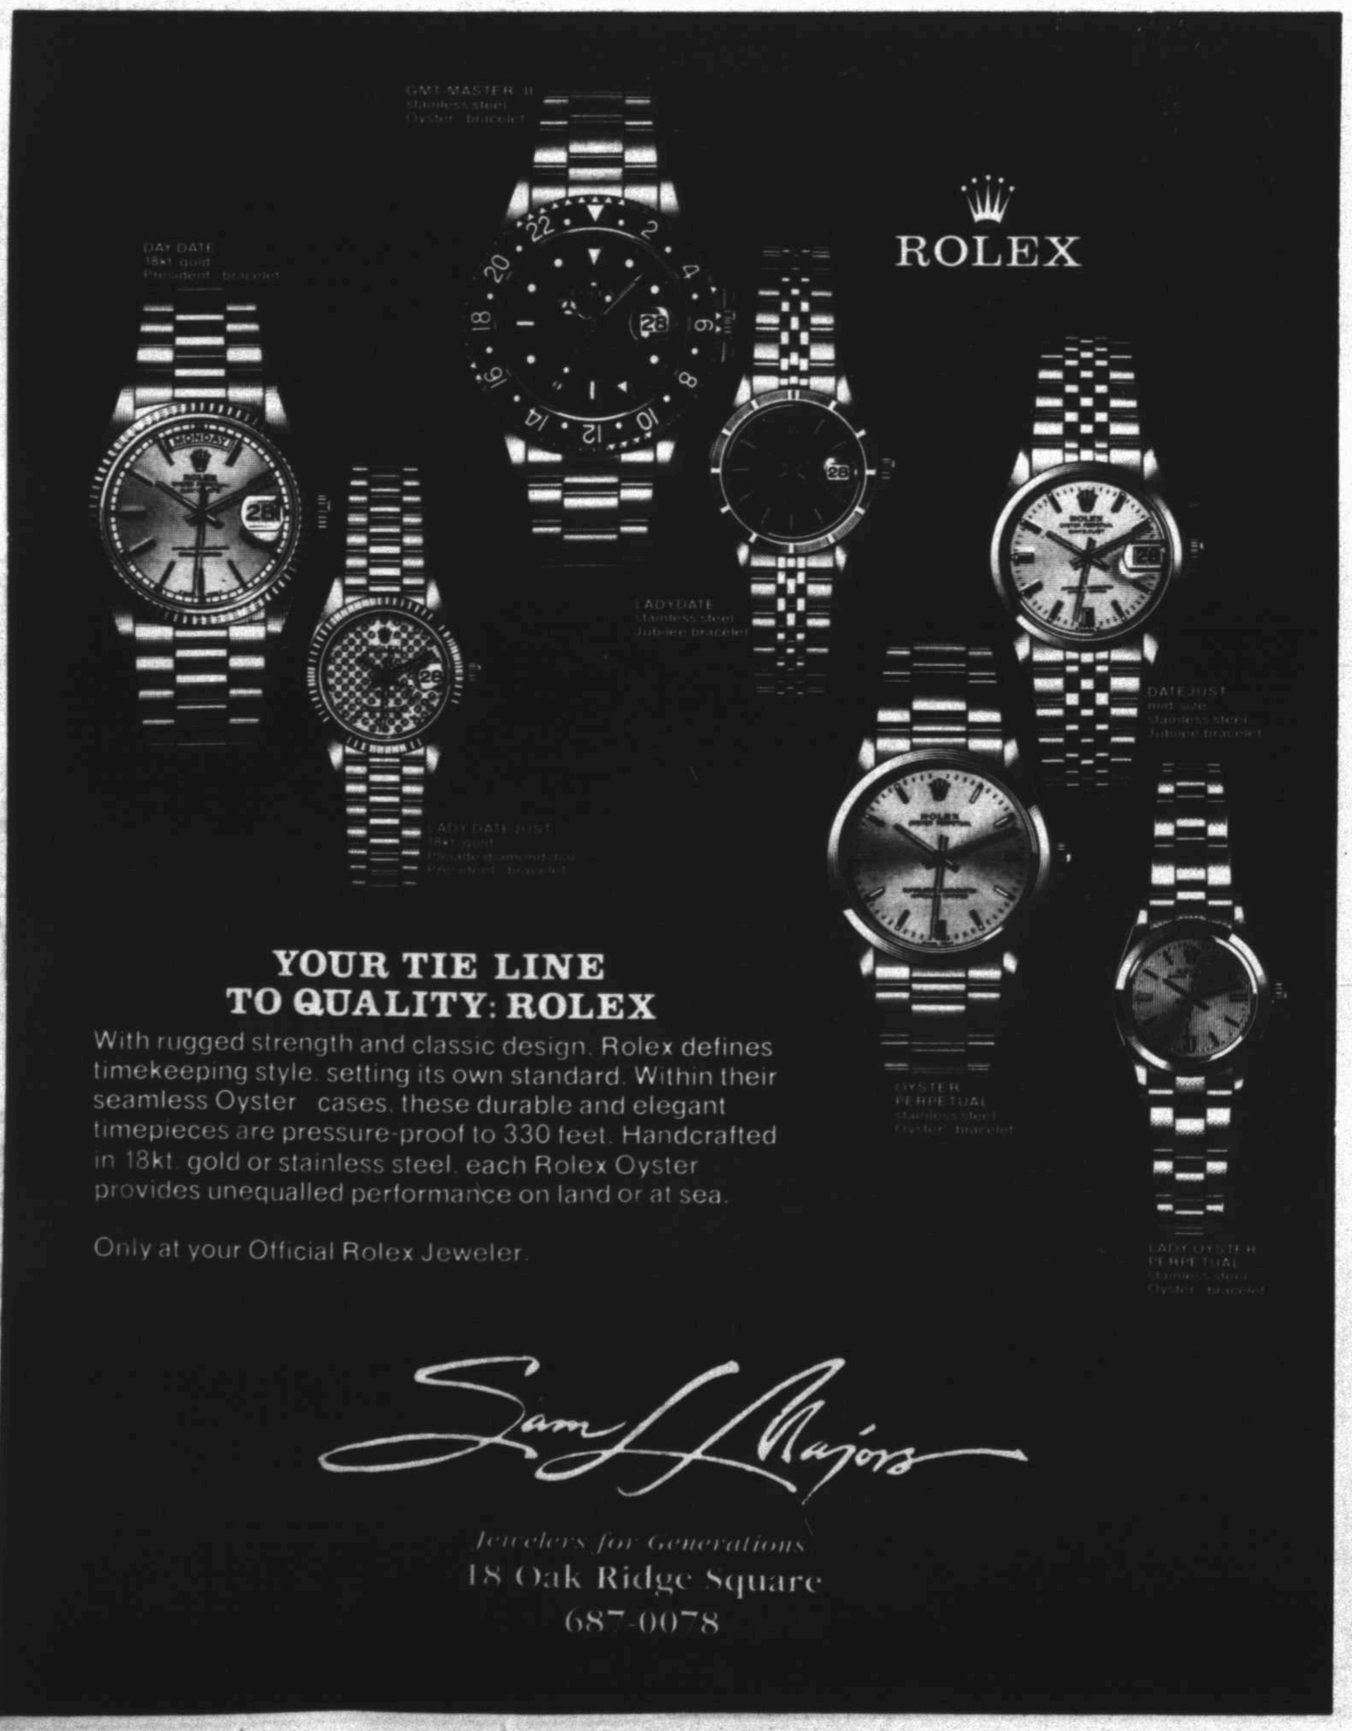

Mix first seven ingredients. In separate bowl, combine next three ingredients. Combine wet with dry ingredients. Fold in blueberries. Pour into well-greased 8½x4½x2½-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 55 to 65 minutes or until bread feels firm.

Is living to 150 worth the price?

By Marian Burros
N.Y. Times News Service

"She said it looks like Fido food. Ask her."

"I'd never say a thing like that. You said it."

"I did not. You did."

Faced with telling the truth to a reporter about an anti-aging buffet served at Betty Friedan's house in Sag Harbor, N.Y., earlier this month, most of the guests took the Fifth.

Those few who spoke too soon begged to withdraw their remarks later.

A conversation between a reporter and Rona Jaffe, the novelist, went like this:

"What do you think of the food?" the reporter asked.

"It has no taste." Pause. "Are you interviewing me?"

"Yes."

"It's wonderful."

Or: "I'm a kosher boy. What would I know about this food?" And: "I can't tell you or I'll never be invited back to Betty's again."

What caused so much weaseling was a buffet based on a book written by Ms. Friedan's guest of honor, Dr. Roy L. Walford, a professor of pathology at the UCLA School of Medicine. His daughter, Lisa, created the recipes for "The Anti-Aging Plan," (Four Walls, Eight Windows, $19.95) and supervised their preparation for the buffet.

WALFORD, WHO has been studying the effects of diet on aging for almost 30 years, believes that a nutrient-rich diet with limited calories will extend life to between 110 and 150 years and reduce the risk of chronic diseases. Many animal studies have confirmed this theory.

And now there is some good evidence in humans that such a diet does reduce weight, blood pressure and cholesterol. But the findings about extended life spans in animals have not been replicated in humans, and no one alive today will live long enough to know the answer.

Here's part of the problem: If most of the people at the Sunday evening buffet had to eat that kind of food every day, they'd rather die at 80.

Walford's remarks to the crowd were not reassuring. "This diet has had remarkable effects in mice and rats," he said. The audience laughed nervously.

Then it was Ms. Walford's turn to talk up the food. She makes the waif model Kate Moss look fat. "The crusts for the pizza are made with wheat germ and sweet potatoes," she said.

Yum.

"You must have a piece of chocolate cake. It has oat flour, oat bran, cocoa and egg whites. But I'll let the food speak for itself."

And so it did.

Everything that has ever given healthful food a bad name was summed up in the meal, which harked back to the 1960s hippie cooks who thought appearance and taste counted for nothing and virtuousness was all. There was cold, soggy "pizza," mushy, cold "lasagna," salad dressed with vinegar and "chocolate" cake that stuck to the roof of your mouth. Sweet potatoes turned up in everything, giving a pasty quality to the food.

LOOKING AT the cookbook, the recipes don't seem so unpalatable, although seasonings, with the exception of garlic, are used sparingly if at all. But much of the food at the buffet seemed to be garlic-free. And salt-free. And taste-free. One guest kept walking around the table muttering: "It needs garlic. It needs garlic."

"It's a treatment, not a treat," said one of the guests who immediately followed up her observation with the caveat of the day: "I'd prefer not to be quoted, or I'll lose a friend." She was referring to Ms. Friedan.

In presenting Walford to her friends — writers and artists who live in New York and the Hamptons including Linda Wolfe, Daniel Stern, Richard Reeves, Cathy O'Neill, Sherrye Henry and Irwin Bazelon — she called him a friend who has "introduced me to performance art and to feminist porn art."

"He has enriched my life a lot," she added.

Walford looks as if he has lived an abstemious life: there is not an ounce of fat on his body. His age was a subject of interest to the other guests.

"He's only 70?"

"He looks 10 years older."

"He's 70? I'm 72 and I look better than he does."

During the party, Ms. Friedan got in a plug for Walford's book, as well as for her own most recent one, "The Fountain of Age." "You needed to read my book to appreciate how you could live to be 120," she said.

LATER, SHE added that when she goes out to dinner with Walford, he doesn't eat the kind of food served at the party. "He just does it for one meal a day and then he is discreet," she said.

More than once, Ms. Friedan assured her guests that even though Walford was the physician for the Biosphere 2 team, he was legitimate. Biosphere, the enclosed ecosystem in the Arizona desert, was criticized as being more show than science.

In an interview earlier in the day, Walford acknowledged that many criticisms of the project were fair. "I know Biosphere does not have a good reputation, and it shouldn't," he said. "It was not managed incompetently, just not in a good scientific manner."

There is nothing to indicate that Walford's nutritional experiments with the Biospherians were anything but sound science. This work was reported in the December 1992 issue of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

There were eight Biosphere subjects, whose diet averaged 1,780 calories a day, with 10 percent of the calories from fat. The diet was largely vegetarian and was dense with nutrients. All the food was grown in the Biosphere: six varieties of fruits, five cereal grains, four varieties of beans and peas, 19 vegetables and greens, white and sweet potatoes and small quantities of goat milk and yogurt, goat meat, pork, chicken, fish and eggs. During this six-month period, the subjects worked the equivalent of three to four hours at manual farming each day.

THERE WAS significant weight loss; about 22 pounds. Average blood pressure dropped from 110/70 to 85/55, and average total cholesterol dropped from 198 to 123.

Walford thinks these changes were entirely diet related. He said a person could sit in an armchair all day and achieve the same results. "I don't want to come out as an anti-exercise person," he said, "but you can't drop your cholesterol like this by exercise."

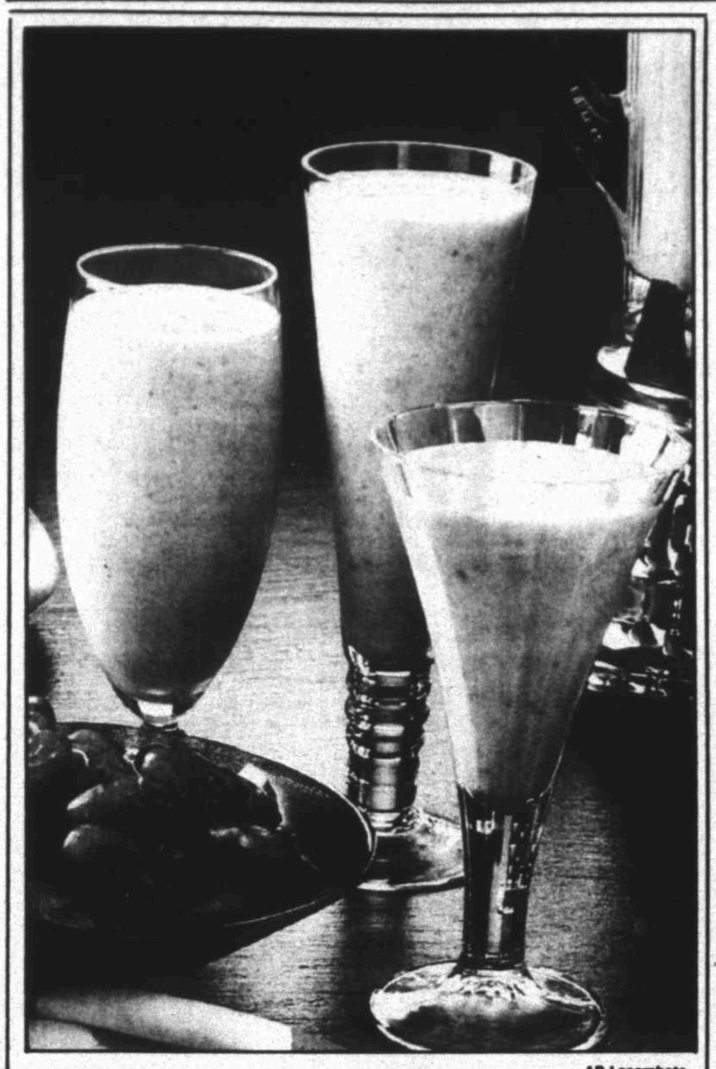

Because the same changes seen in animals were seen in the Biospherians, Walford thinks that on the diet, humans, like animals, can live much longer than they do now.

The doctor might have made a convert or two at Ms. Friedan's party.

"I've been eating Dean Ornish stuff moderately for a year," said Christopher Cary, director of college relations at Connecticut College. He was referring to a vegetarian diet named for a doctor who has written about ways to reverse atherosclerosis. The Ornish diet is frequently criticized because taste was not a primary consideration when it was developed. But compared with the buffet at Ms. Friedan's, the Ornish food is ambrosial.

Cary continued: "Because of the Ornish diet, I'm prepared to like this food more than I might have before. Your taste buds change. The payoff was going to the doctor who said, 'You've lost 10 pounds, your cholesterol is down, your blood pressure is down — you've done a good job with yourself.' I walked out of there feeling 10 feet tall."

But Daniel Stern, a writer, spoke for most of his fellow guests when he said, "I'll convert when there are more old doctors than old drunks."

'Having it all' may mean giving it up

By Jane Holleman
N.Y. Times News Service

He's taken guff from those who say he's crazy, that a man doesn't trash a career even if it sucks his life dry. He knows the gloom. He's scared. But now when he drops to his knees, it's to talk with God instead of to look for a stupid lost file last seen under the boss's desk.

What would you guess — besides a mint-condition 1966 Pontiac GTO — is the dream of today's middle-age man? We could say 1) to be loved, 2) to be younger or 3) to never have seen Vanna White pregnant.

The wish of a man in midlife whom I know may prove that in reality men dream most of ditching their jobs. My friend walked out on a six-figure income recently with nothing down the pike, giving up free travel, fancy clubs, medical benefits and a company car. Most of us can't imagine getting those kinds of goodies, much less giving them up.

The good news is that my friend, nearly 50 and raising kids, made a clean kill on the executive treadmill. The bad news is, now that he can hang out with me, he'll know I bought all those banana bread loaves that I said I baked while he was at work.

Points of his saga are funny. After returning his company credit cards, all that was left in his wallet was a Blockbuster video card. And, after almost 20 years with a company, on his last swing out of the parking garage the attendant made him pay. Seems he'd given up his parking card.

Some of it is sad. He recently was passed over for promotion in favor of a younger man. If you can rely on the gallows wisdom among some who work now for the younger man, he's ill-fated because he confuses his ambition with tyranny and uses his outward rage to motivate folks. But for my friend the tedium had already turned dreams to nightmares. He said: "Long before I was passed over, I wished each day for something to keep me from getting to work — a flat tire or a sniper. I was drowning in disappointment."

And swimming in privilege? He scoffed: "The misery was taking my health." I asked him if shucking the perks is scary. He said: "The tightrope is worse than the fall. I woke up one day dreading that I had quit my job. But it's better than the days I woke up with chest pains, dreading the job I had."

On a weekday I took him fishing. He drank wine while I told him the plot of "All My Children" so he can keep up. He said that he'd like to make a living as a writer. I told him with a smile: "You'll need two things, a pen that drips your own honest blood and patient creditors."

He's taken guff from those who say he's crazy, that a man doesn't trash a career even if it sucks his life dry. He knows the gloom. He's scared. But now when he drops to his knees, it's to talk with God instead of to look for a stupid lost file last seen under the boss's desk.

You know, it's not easy for us women to love you men when you suddenly have time to clean out our refrigerators. You all just don't understand the female household domain; the place is a wreck till time for company to arrive. But we do love people who measure risk by what can be gained rather than lost.

'Bicycle built for two' comes full circle

By Stephanie Griest
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — They have been used for recreation and relaxation, hard-core racing and romantic, moonlit rendezvous.

Their history stretches back to 1890, when they became every woman's savior. After all, long hoop skirts didn't make for easy straddling over ordinary bicycles.

They even got a theme song in 1892, when composer Harry Dacre had to pay outrageous customs on his own cycle on his trip into America. A friend joked he was lucky it wasn't a bicycle built for two, or he'd have to pay double. The result was "Daisy Bell," a tune commonly called "Bicycle Built for Two."

A century later, the makers, sellers and devotees of tandem bicycles say they're making a comeback.

"It used to be, I'd be on my tandem, or even on my single bike, and I'd see a tandem go by and I would always wave because I figured I would know who they were. It used to be a pretty small circle of riders," said Karen Wolf, chairwoman of the Seattle Bicycling Advisory Board, which advises the city government on bike-related issues. "But now it has grown so much!"

Indeed, the merry art of tandeming has grown from the tandem-only Burley race each year in Eugene, Ore., to an up-and-coming tandem magazine, to a tandem vocabulary.

"Tandem sluts," for instance, are riders who always sit in the backseat stoker's position for free rides — and switch partners frequently. "Tandemony" has been committed when captains and stokers fall in love.

"WE MET at a bakery when I stopped for a latte," Bill Schliiter began as he recapped his tandem love story. "I realized, 'Here's a girl that's not afraid to sweat.' So we started a relationship. But it was very frustrating for her, especially on hills because she couldn't keep up. ... If we had not gotten the tandem, my wife would have quit bicycling a long time ago."

Some couples started their love lives on the tandem; others strengthened them. Wolf rode from Athens to London on her six-month "tandemmoon" — the cyclist's version of a honeymoon. "My friend called it 'riding the wedding ring.'" Wolf said. "Instead of an engagement ring, we bought our tandem. It cost about the same."

Neither is cheap.

"You'll spend $4,000 for a good racing tandem. .... $4,000 to $5,000," said Schliiter, a longtime cyclist who recently placed third in one division of the Burley race with his wife. "It's quite a commitment. That's why I'm surprised there are so many."

Brian Wilson, assistant manager of Gregg's Greenlake Cycle Inc. in Bellevue, Wash., said his tandems start at $1,000 and go to $2,300 in either a road style or rugged mountain-bike configuration.

"Tandems are kind of a niche market. The couples we see — generally one of them is heavily into cycling and the other one gets left behind all the time, but they want to ride together," Wilson said. "Now they can go pretty fast and stay together and communicate."

DESPITE THE price, Bicycles Etc. owner Robbin Goldfoos said, more people are buying tandems than ever before. He has sold 107 so far this year, compared to 91 for all of last year.

"Tandems really bring the family together — you can ride with your wife or your son or your daughter," Goldfoos said. "It's lots of fun."

After parting with the money, however, the rest is a relative ride in the park. Tandems are very fast, said Leif Clarke.

"If you can go 20 mph on a single bike, you can go 25 mph on a tandem," said Clarke, a future freshman at Washington State University. "They are just rocket ships."

Hills are the single pitfall noted by cyclists.

"Going uphill is the only time you aren't at an advantage (over single cyclists); you just have moral support," Wilson said. "But they are remittance hills: for every uphill, there is a reward on the other side."

Of course, problems do arise when the captain and stoker don't get along.

"There are the 'Bickersons' that you see on races. They yell and scream at each other like they are going to take a hacksaw and saw the bike in two," Schliiter said. "The couple that won the Burley race this year argued the whole time. ... They almost didn't go home in the same car."

Indeed, different riding styles can make or break a tandem relationship. Since the front pedal, or crank, is connected to the back, both riders must stay on the same gear and pedal at the same rate.

JAMES WEAVER, designer and builder of the alternative Counterpoint Opus IV tandem, likened the relationship to the U.S. Army.

"Pedaling a traditional tandem is like marching in the army; the captain is the drill sergeant and the stoker is the obedient private," he wrote in his Opus IV brochure.

His bike elevates the stoker from second- to first-class seating so both riders have an unobstructed view. The pedals are not connected, so the captain and stoker may ride at different paces.

Biker finds life after vision loss

By Stephanie Griest
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — In 1979, Sheri Amundson was told she had a brain tumor. Intense rounds of chemotherapy, radiation and surgery followed, and doctors thought they had removed it.

But in 1990, Amundson slowly began to lose her vision. The doctors realized the tumor had only been dormant all those years. It had become the size of a golf ball.

"It's a wonder I'm still alive, my brain was so contorted," said Amundson.

After another round of chemotherapy, radiation and surgeries, the tumor is gone again — along with much of her eyesight. And Amundson — a vibrant, athletic young woman — thought her life was over.

Then she discovered the tandem.

"My whole life has changed — reading, riding my own bike. I used to be very active in team sports," Amundson said. "The only area that hasn't been impaired is the tandem."

She had enjoyed terrorizing bike trails on her new mountain bike just a year before she began to lose her vision. Of all her favorite outdoor activities, bicycling would be the most difficult one to let go of — so she didn't.

Two months ago, Amundson placed an ad in the Cascade Bicycle Club's newspaper, the Cascade Courier, that read: "Tandem Captain Wanted — Visually impaired stoker with nice tandem seeks captain for STP (Seattle-to-Portland bike ride) training."

Bob Schroder, a retired software engineer at Boeing, responded. "The fact she was impaired was pretty impressive to me. I thought, 'She's got something; she'll really get in there and work.' It was attractive to me."

Schroder visited Amundson, and within weeks the two were on the trails, vigorously training for the STP ride in June.

"I first looked at STP as a goal. But after I did it, I realized it was a pivotal point," Amundson said.

Ten thousand cyclists participate in the STP ride every year. About 8,000 complete the event in two days; 2,000 do it in one.

Amundson identified herself on the Seattle-to-Portland ride by wearing a bib that said 'Blind Skier.'

"I wore the bib so everyone would know there is life after vision loss," she said. "That's exactly why I wore it ... as well as to identify myself as not a great assistance to my captain — you know, just for safety reasons, because my eyes do look clear."

Two recreational programs designed for people with disabilities sponsored Amundson in the Seattle-to-Portland ride — Skiforall and Ski for Light.

Skiforall operates year-round, with three different programs: alpine for downhill skiing; Nordic for cross-country skiing; and an all-encompassing summer program that includes water skiing, hiking, river rafting and fishing. More than 400 students participate with the help of 500 volunteers.

It also has a biking program. The Boeing Employees Good Neighbor Fund and several other organizations helped finance 16 specially adapted bikes.

Ski for Light is a cross-country skiing program for people who are visually impaired. It was started in Norway by a man who was impassioned about skiing. When he lost his vision, he did not want to give up his beloved sport, so he developed a safe technique that would allow visually impaired people to ski behind a sighted person. The idea quickly spread to Seattle.

Ski for Light now hosts six ski outings every winter for about 18 people with vision loss and 25 to 30 guides. Ski for Light gave Amundson the 'Blind Skier' bib.

"(These programs) saved my life. It would have ended. I would have sat around and walked Hootz (her dog) everyday," Amundson said. "I need the thrill of adventure — well, everyone needs it — but I am dependent on it."

Now Amundson and Schroder ride three nights a week on a 15-speed bike they borrowed from a friend. They always do "two shorts and a long" — 30 miles for short nights; 100 miles for long ones.

Although they've only been riding together for a short time, they have grown accustomed to each other's riding styles. They are a strong couple, and each credits the other.

"Bob is a very sensitive man. ... He tries to alter his actions to accommodate other people," Amundson said.

As captain, Schroder cannot underestimate the importance of coordination and balance on a tandem. Although the stoker — the back-seat rider — generally has the easier job, he or she must pedal up to par with the front rider.

"With Sheri, I hardly have a sense of someone back there. She has really good balance," Schroder said.

Amundson also rides with another friend, Ken, two nights a week and just recently found a third captain. Her daily planner is filled with cycling events, and she loves it.

"I tandem for social riding, racing, hard-core preracing. It's something where I can really get out there, really get my heart rate up — and get out and see the world," Amundson said.

Frozen Chocolate Latte quenches summer thirst

Associated Press

It's hot. Your throat is parched. How to quench that summer thirst? Try a frosty cold milk shake. Frozen chocolate latte is a mixture of chocolate milk, espresso powder, vanilla and a touch of sugar. The mixture is frozen in ice-cube trays to be popped out and blended whenever needed.

FROZEN CHOCOLATE LATTE

4 cups chocolate milk
2 tablespoons instant espresso powder
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla extract

In a small saucepan, heat 1 cup of the chocolate milk and the espresso powder until the milk is warm and powder dissolves. Stir in sugar and vanilla. Pour into an ice-cube tray. Cover with foil, freeze until firm, about 4 hours. For each serving: In a container of an electric blender place 2 or 3 ice cubes (cover remaining ice cubes with foil, return to freezer, use as needed). Add ¾ cup of the remaining chocolate milk. Cover, blend until smooth and thick. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition facts per serving: 227 cal., 8 g pro., 30 g carbo., 8 g fat, 151 mg sodium, 30 mg chol.

Videos come into kitchen

Associated Press

It is widely believed that the best way to learn is by hands-on experience, and yet many would-be chefs sit in their living rooms, watching videos on how to perfectly poach salmon or concoct a marvelous meringue.

Since manufacturers recognize that cooking requires equipment other than a remote control, and senses of taste and smell as well as sight, they are bringing food preparation videos and VCRs into the kitchen, according to Video Magazine.

Amateur gourmets can now chop and saute along with all their television role models using a product such as General Electric's new KitchenVision TVCR, which combines a television and two-head videocassette recorder. With a list price of $499, the 13-inch unit rests on a 180-degree swiveling base for versatile viewing, and comes complete with a recipe tape and an exclusive catalog of 200 cooking videos. It is marketed in one very appropriate color, "kitchen white."

As 20 million Americans regularly watch TV in the kitchen anyway, a TVCR could easily become another commonplace kitchen appliance.

Viewers are able to whip up a sinful souffle with the guidance of the Frugal Gourmet, then step into the family room to exercise away extra calories.

Doran Ingrham divides his time between Los Angeles, Orlando, Fla., and Texas as he pursues an acting career that includes producing low-budget films.

For more than three decades, former Midlander Doran W. Ingrham starred in a movie others directed. Now, he plays bit parts, but directs his own life.

"I was first interested in acting when I was in elementary school, but I suppressed the desire to do anything about it because I felt I should do what I was told to do by parents and society, which was go to college, get your education," said Ingrham, who is staging a Western shoot-out in downtown Midland for Thursday's free "Summer in the City" series.

But his education was interrupted by the Vietnam War.

"I ended up going to Vietnam, which was part of the family heritage — to support our country in time of need," said Ingrham, who was born in Del Rio but grew up in Midland where he attended San Jacinto Junior High School and graduated from Lee High School in 1964.

"I came back, continued my education, got married and started my own business — tree farming.

"And I woke up 40 years old reading in the newspaper about the sesquicentennial activity in Texas, and they were doing two films about Texas.

"And I realized that I was going to wake up 60 years old still dreaming about it. And I decided to go out and do something about it."

He tracked down the locations of the films, and went to the locations.

"I presented myself to the casting people and said, 'I'm a Texan. I'm related to the people who died at the Alamo. I ride horses, and I'd like to be in your movie.' "

Ingrham remembers their response.

"Have you ever been in a movie?"

"No."

"Do you have an agent?"

"No."

"You can't be in this movie."

The experience taught him that acting was a business and he was going to have to play by its rules if he

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JULY 24, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Career progress is linked to your leadership abilities. Joining a civic group or political campaign will keep you in the spotlight. The financial outlook brightens in late fall.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: legendary aviator Amelia Earhart, actress Lynda Carter, basketball player Karl Malone, comedian Ruth Buzzi, jockey Julie Krone, jazz musician Billy Taylor.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Family members rally to your side today. Stand up for your beliefs when you know that you are right. Let almost-grown offspring fight their own battles; they are stronger than you think.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If your social life is less exciting than you would like, take the initiative. Invite several people you met recently to join you on a special outing. Be yourself. Keep things casual and fun.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those looking for romance should get out and socialize with people of all ages. The more friends you have, the greater your chances of being introduced to someone special! Avoid discussing your previous relationships.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If your loved ones are wrapped up in their own activities today, seek pleasurable solo pursuits. A TV program could give you ideas for a fun family vacation. Discuss your plans before making reservations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An unusual situation could put extra money into your pockets. Stay on the sidelines if family members squabble; taking sides will only prolong the conflict. Roll out the red carpet for an unexpected visitor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Creative endeavors enjoy highly favorable influences. Find a quiet spot where you can meditate or give your imagination free rein. Research will help you find a way around a current limitation. Do some professional reading.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The lines of communication are wide open this morning, Use a positive approach when asking household members for assistance. Differences of opinion will be more pronounced in the afternoon. Diplomacy saves the day!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Home life and property matters should go well today. Let the power of suggestion work in your favor. Invite a friend to join you for lunch or window-shopping. Enjoy family time tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Use your imagination to solve a conflict between domestic harmony and outside activities. Once a loved one is convinced of your good intentions, cooperation will follow. Do something generous for a very special friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Speak cautiously when in public. Although your comments to a friend may be right on the mark, they are unlikely to be appreciated by other listeners. In this instance, silence could be golden.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A combination of factors makes this a wonderful day. Get more exercise and eat nutritionally balanced meals. Your loyalty to a family friend will bring rich rewards. Stop fretting over mistakes made long ago!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The smoke begins to clear; you see your choices more clearly. A wise decision you make today will pay dividends for weeks to come. Friends of the family lend a helping hand. Seek extra cash.

Opening lead: Six of ♠ Hercule Poirot summed it up beautifully in his advice to his assistant, Capt. Hastings: "Use the little gray cells." Logical reasoning will often point the way to the winning play.

North-South reached their second-best contract—six no trump would have been unbeatable and South might have considered bidding the no-trump slam rather than six diamonds once North had shown slam interest by cue-bidding hearts, confirming good diamond support. There was even the possibility that 12 tricks could be made at no trump when at diamonds there were two trump losers!

Let's consider the situation from West's point of view. With 10 high-card points in the West hand, it was obvious East held nothing. One possibility was to hope East held the ten of hearts and attack that suit, but even if that were the case East would have no entry to cash the heart.

The club suit looked as unpromising. It was too much to hope that East held the queen, so there was nothing to gain from that lead.

By a process of elimination that left spades. The low spade lead was taken by dummy's ten as East followed with the four and declarer played the eight. When a diamond was led to the ace, East produced the eight.

The three of spades was missing. Who held it and was there any clue to how West should proceed?

The answer lay in the play to the first trump trick. East almost certainly held more than one trump, so the eight could hardly be the lowest card in that suit. A trump echo by a defender shows the ability to ruff some suit and that could only be spades. So West led another spade—down one!

INGRHAM: Ex-Midlander makes low-budget films

wanted to play at all. That was in 1986.

"I started tracking down how to get an agent in Dallas, which is where I was living. Once I convinced an agent to take me on as a new, raw, off-the-street talent, I began going to training courses in Dallas, one of which is the Film Actors Lab, where I studied with another actor, Lou Diamond Phillips."

Within three months, Ingrham — whose parents are Midlanders Wade and Irmalee Ingrham and brother is David Ingrham, owner of Copy Service and Supplies — had his first audition for a national television commercial.

"And I got the role over 350 other actors in Texas, so within three months I had gotten a national television commercial and was union eligible, which is a big hurdle in this business.

"It's kind of a Catch 22. You can't join the union until you do a union job. Fortunately, Texas is a right-to-work state so you can work on union jobs without being in the union."

He continued as a non-union actor for three years so he could work on other projects and build his resume.

That was in 1989. Today his resume includes more than nine commercials, six of which are national ones; industrial film credits; and mostly "bad guy" parts in eight U.S. films including the HBO movies "Dead Solid Perfect" and "All American Murders." His television credits include NBC's "Trial: Price of Passion" and "Yesterday, Today & Tomorrow," CBS's "Dangerous Curves," and "Dallas."

In 1989, Ingrham began studying acting in Los Angeles.

"I was very fortunate that a casting director in L.A. — Ross Brown — liked my work and introduced me to a private acting coach David Lehman."

Ingrham said he spent a year studying with Lehman before "anything really happened for me.

"What I found was his training stretched and improved my work and I was getting more jobs in Texas and building my network in L.A.

"Through the course of the training, I found that I was beginning to improve my standings — rather than being cast as 20th or 15th in the project, I started moving up to 10th and fifth billing."

Billing often depends upon how strong an actor's performance is, how easy it is to get along with the actor and what kind of character an actor has on set, Ingrham said.

"In '91 I was cast in 'Steele's Law' and in the beginning I was cast in the top six. By the third week of the film, they had changed my credits to third based on my performance," Ingrham said.

The strength of an actor's performance and name and face identification within the business enhances his prospects of reading for larger parts, Ingrham said.

"It's not very often they will change the position in the credits during the course of the film. It's pretty much set in stone when it starts. So I was blessed with the opportunity to move up in the credits. And that pretty much changed how the other people in the industry looked at my work.

"Because of that, I've had opportunities to read for major films and roles in the top seven in the last two years. Though I haven't gotten one of them yet, I'm not concerned about it. I'm finally in the league of having the opportunity to read for these roles. Eventually, somebody's going to realize they can make money with me as an actor, and that's when I'm going to get my opportunity to do one of these roles.

"A lot of my acquaintances in the business have asked, 'Aren't you depressed about not getting this role (Virgil Earp played by San Elliot) in 'Tombstone?' (or the old scout played by Robert Duvall in) 'Geronimo?' I'm not depressed about getting a chance to go to plate in the big leagues and read for roles in competition with the stars. One of these days I'm going to take the role, and it's going to change again my position in the game."

While he's waiting, he's found another avenue in the business that can occupy his time and attention.

"I've realized I can make a very good living producing low-budget films," Ingrham said. He said that "low-budget" means less than Hollywood standards.

"Hollywood considers $8 million low budget and yet 'The Crying Game' was shot for $1.2 million and it made it into the Academy Awards selection, and it was an incredibly high-quality film."

Ingrham, who has directed some short films and industrial projects, has worked with a producer in Dallas. Bret McCormick shoots film projects that he sends directly to video release in the United States and in Europe and Asia distributes on the big screen and on video.

"I associated myself with him on an upcoming project, and I'm going to utilize his talents and experience to help eliminate the mistakes I would make as a novice producer," said Ingrham, referring to the film, "Spear Head." He plans to shoot it in the Big Bend area with some locations in Midland and Dallas under the Trans Pecos Productions umbrella.

"It's action adventure — bang, bang, shoot'em up, good guys and bad guys — one of the genre of films that sells strongly in low-budget films like that," Ingrham said.

He hopes that by producing some of his own films he will alter his image within the film industry.

"I'm hired to play villains, and I'm not opposed to that," Ingrham said. "My basic philosophy is hire me, pay me. I'm capable of playing other roles, and I'm going to do that through the use of low-budget films and utilize the projects themselves to create an escape and entertainment for society.

"I think most of us go to films for entertainment and the opportunity to escape from our everyday life. That's one of the reasons feature films like 'Indiana Jones' are so successful. They're absolutely unbelievable but so much fun to watch you can get caught up in them."

His special skills include training horses and mules for riding, packing, ploughing and pulling wagons and he has participated in professional cross-country horse racing; firearms instructor in Black Powder to Class III; a licensed private investigator for Hal Campbell and Associates; a second degree black belt in karate; and a musician who earned his living playing the guitar and singing in a band based out of Atlanta from 1970 to 1974.

Ingrham, who has taught classes locally at PS Images, has been studying acting with Lehman since 1989.

"There's a false thought that a lot of people are natural actors, and there are very few that are. Most of us study very hard and spend most of our lives studying acting. Some actors have private coaches that even go on a film set with them to help them interpret their roles.

"Most of the good actors I admire like Dustin Hoffman, (Al) Pacino, Julia Roberts and (Robert) De Niro, still study to continue strengthening their talent," Ingrham said.

Those who do not continue to study "often become static," he said. "They become more of a personality in their work than a real, true actor."

The coaching he's had has taught him how to reach into himself and call up potential personalities — villainous behavior — that society dictates that people keep under control.

"You play the role as yourself, and we're all capable of anything. Within each one of us is the ability to be evil, if we so choose to turn that way. By opening the doors to that particular character in our life, we can portray and show the camera who we are in those circumstances. The good thing about it is when they say 'cut,' we get to return to the person we aspire to be."

For Ingrham, that person, the one he aspires to be, is someone who appreciates life.

"I feel like life is incredible, and we have opportunities that only we can take advantage of, and no one else can do it for us. If we don't go out there and go for the brass ring ourselves, no one else is going to hand it to us. I'm very thankful I'm an American, and even more thankful I'm a Texan.

"If I had any one piece of advice for anyone else, it would be to believe in yourself — recognize your inner value and be considerate and compassionate to those who are less fortunate. That's pretty much how I try to live my life."

Williams proves she didn't need Miss America crown to be successful

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK — What a difference a decade makes.

Ten years after nude pictures of her showed up in Penthouse magazine and she was forced to give up the title of Miss America, Vanessa Williams keeps reaffirming the notion that she didn't need that crown to be a success.

There has been her hot recording career, of course, accomplished at the same time she and her husband-manager, Ramon Hervey, started a family that now includes three children.

And for the next three months, you can find Williams on Broadway, too. She currently is starring in the musical "Kiss of the Spider Woman," having replaced the formidable Chita Rivera in the role of the mythical, yet deadly screen goddess Aurora. It's a change of pace that might confuse record fans who only remember such hits as "Save the Best for Last" and "Love Is."

"The people that know me as a singer will probably be surprised that I dance as well as I do and the people that have been in shows with me won't be surprised at all," she said the other day in a dressing-room interview.

Yet theater always has been her first love. Back in suburban Westchester County, north of New York, she was immersed in the performing arts. Her parents, after all, were piano teachers.

"I started theater during middle school and high school," Williams says, referring to her days growing up in Chappaqua, N.Y. "I had studied dance, mostly modern, jazz and ballet, from first grade on. And at Syracuse University, I was a musical theater major."

'The people that know me as a singer will probably be surprised that I dance as well as I do, and the people that have been in shows with me won't be surprised at all.'

— Vanessa Williams

Her role in "Spider Woman" was born when she auditioned for the role of Julie in a revival of "Show Boat" that arrives on Broadway this fall from Toronto. The shows have the same producer, Garth Drabinsky.

"After the audition, Garth said, 'That's great but I want to talk to you about something else,'" Williams recalls. The something else was the role of Aurora, the movie queen who mesmerizes a star-struck inmate in a Latin American jail.

It's a part that has been closely identified with Rivera, a legendary Broadway dancer who is three decades older than her 31-year-old successor. Williams' biggest New York stage appearace to date has been an off-Broadway musical, "One-Man Band," that had a modest run several years ago. Yet Williams exudes a cool confidence about propelling a big Broadway show for the first time.

"The key is to not try to duplicate anyone's performance but to be true to yourself and make the role your own," she says. "You find your own nuances and your own strengths and weaknesses and then you learn to adjust and adapt."

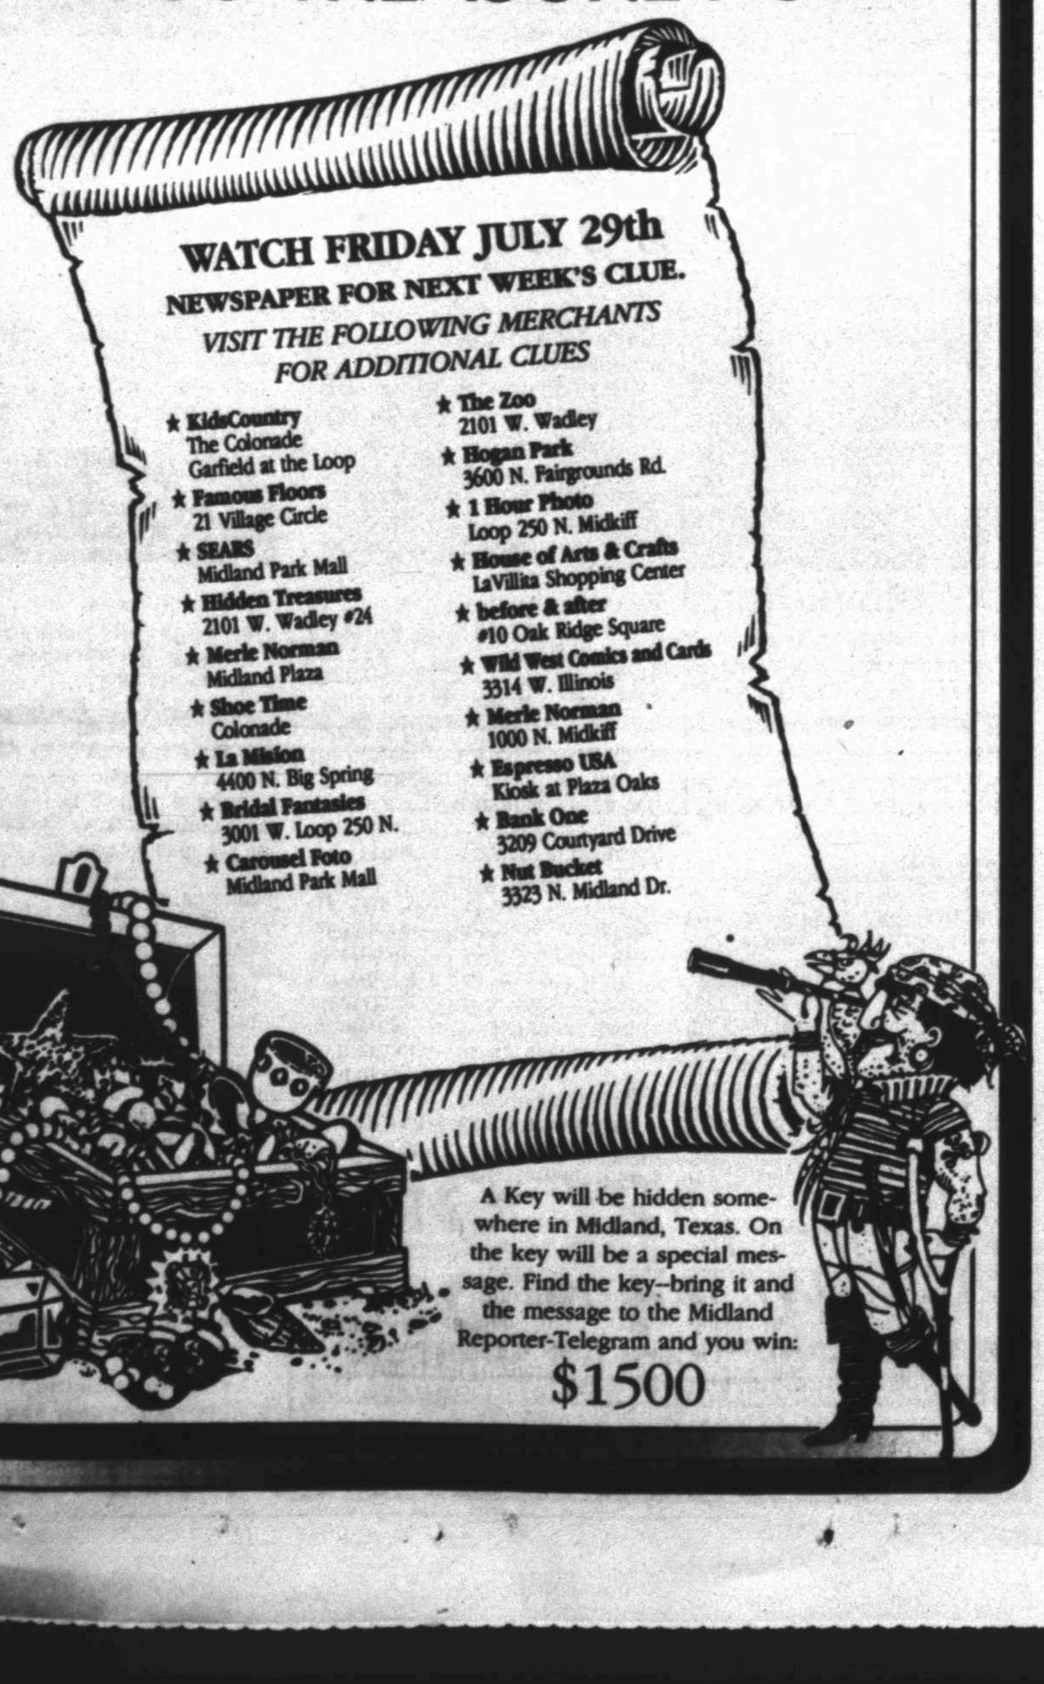

Adapting — and juggling — her career to coincide with and compliment her family life has been important to Williams. Right now, her priorities are her two daughters, 7-year-old Melanie and 5-year-old Jillian, and her son Devin, born last October. Williams took a year's sabbatical from show business when he was born.

"They have free license to come whenever they want to," she laughs, "to come and hang out during a show or whatever. My girls are of an age now where I can trust them in a dressing room alone.

"I brought them to the show when I initially saw it and I said, 'Do you think Mom should do this?' They loved the costumes and the music — we had lived with the recording for a couple of weeks, so they knew all the songs and were very excited."
