Betsy Robinson wins school board runoff

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Robinson

School board candidate Betsy Robinson narrowly defeated Geoffrey Barnett in Saturday's runoff election for Place 7 on the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees.

A breakdown showed Mrs. Robinson with 1,141 or 53 percent; and Barnett with 993 or 47 percent of the 2,134 total votes cast.

The runoff election resulted when neither candidate could capture 50.1 percent of the total votes cast in the April 6 election.

"I'm very excited," Mrs. Robinson said of the victory. "I appreciate the challenge and responsibility entrusted to me by Midland's voters."

Mrs. Robinson expressed "disappointment" over the low voter turnout. "I was very disappointed that more people did not exercise their right to vote. However, I am delighted with the 2,134 people who took time out of their day to go and vote," she said.

Midland County Elections Administrator Janeice Builta reported a total 54,841 registered voters in Midland County. Votes in the runoff election represented 3.9 percent voter turnout.

Bill Jackson, MISD vice president, reported the runoff election cost the school district more than $3,000.

Mrs. Robinson said of the runoff campaign, "We probably worked just as hard during the runoff as we did in the April 6 election. But it seemed to build momentum."

The April 6 election concluded with Barnett leading the race with 2,111 votes or 45.6 percent, while Mrs. Robinson received 1,515 votes or 32.7 percent. A third candidate, Michael Butler was eliminated from the runoff with 1,001 or 21.6 percent.

A former educator, Mrs. Robinson taught junior high school and high school students in Michigan; adult education to Air Force personnel in Texas; and served as a substitute teacher in Midland for several years.

In addition to her teaching experience, Mrs. Robinson was involved in PTAs and as a classroom volunteer. She also played an active role in promoting change in the high school grading system.

"I promise to represent the Midland schools districtwide. I want to be available to listen to the people I serve while I am on the school board," Mrs. Robinson said.

"My desire is to work together with the other school board members to set broad policies that will represent the viewpoints of teachers, students, parents and citizens," she added.

MISD will have a special meeting at 4 p.m. Monday to canvass results of the election. Mrs. Robinson will take office at 1:30 p.m. May 14 during its regularly-scheduled meeting.

Summit lost in shuffle?

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Controversy over "Star Wars" research and President Reagan's plan to visit a German war cemetery are drowning out preparations for this week's economic summit among Reagan and heads of six other industrial democracies.

The leaders are to meet in the West German capital Thursday. The three days of meetings will be hosted by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

Attending besides Reagan will be Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain; French President Francois Mitterrand; Prime Minister Brian Mulroney of Canada; Italian Premier Bettino Craxi, and Yasuhiro Nakasone, the prime minister of Japan.

Reagan told the Hamburg daily newspaper Die Welt in an interview published Saturday that he would like to discuss research for the Strategic Defense Initiative when he meets with the leaders of the six U.S. allies.

Reagan's plan for a space-based defense system against missiles has met with mixed reactions among Europeans. Kohl has said he supports it in principle, but is not yet sure his nation will take part.

Both British and French officials have voiced skepticism, with the French warning that the scheme could lead to an increase in the arms race.

Kohl wants a joint declaration reaffirming Western ties with Bonn 40 years after the German defeat in World War II.

He would also like to talk about international environmental protection measures, a top concern in West Germany where half the trees have been damaged by acid rain, linked by many scientists to air pollution.

Preparations for the Bonn summit have been affected by Reagan's plans to visit the Bitburg cemetery, which contains the graves of 49 SS troopers, members of Adolf Hitler's special guard responsible for many of the worst Nazi atrocities.

Reagan is due to visit Bitburg on Sunday, the day after the summit ends.

Christmas in April spirit reaches into area prison

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The fellowship seen Saturday spread further than into the homes receiving their annual spring shower of care. It also spread into the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp.

Midland's Christmas in April this year attracted convicts from the minimum security camp, who worked with members of the Petroplex Covenant Church through the international Prison Fellowship.

"One of Prison Fellowship's desires is to show this is an alternative to incarceration," said Texas Assistant Director of Prison Fellowship Nancy Berry of Dallas. "You take him (an inmate) out of the community and away from his family. If he's got a three-year sentence, let him do three years of community work."

Although the program was begun 10 years ago by Charles Colson, former special counsel to President Richard Nixon, who served seven months in two federal prisons for Watergate convictions, the Midland church has been involved for only six months.

"This is the first community service project we've done with the prisoners," said the Rev. John Setzer. Petroplex Covenant Church has participated in the past three Christmas in April projects, he said, with three houses under renovation this year.

"Prison Fellowship helps a lot of people who need encouragement," said Stan Depee of Mountain View, Mo. The 44-year-old former veterinarian, convicted in 1983 of cocaine trafficking, is serving the fourth of his five-year sentence.

"It lets them rub shoulders with people on the outside to let them know they don't have leprosy," said Depee, who admits with a laugh he used to be known as "Dr. Feel Good."

"It shows these guys that they aren't any different than your next-door neighbor," said Ms. Berry, who is responsible for the program in the state's federal institutions.

"Each project is fulfilling a need that hasn't been filled before," said Earl Sampson, 59, of Amarillo. Sampson, who participates in a church choir twice a week outside the camp, said he has about six more months to serve before his transfer to a halfway house in Amarillo.

Released Friday night to the custody of four of the church families, the prisoners participated in several church services as well as the Christmas in April project during the weekend.

Scheduled today was "another church service, more of a dedication service to send them back into prison," Ms. Berry said.

Despite the "country club" atmosphere of the minimum security camp, three of the prisoners said the punishment comes from being away from family and loved ones.

The fellowship received through the program is close to being with one's family, said George Hellwarth of Dallas, who was sentenced for "committing one of those crimes of doing nothing and I did it three times." He was referring to income tax evasion.

"Being away from your family is punishment enough," Sampson said.

Hellwath agreed: "Coming out for something like this is very enjoyable."

Depee, admitting he had "been a mediocre Christian all my life, but I backslided at times," said, "the only rehabilitation in federal prison is Jesus Christ."

Although he supports the purpose of the Christmas in April project, Depee said, with a laugh, "I still don't like to work."

Besides, he added, he has to save some energy for the prison basketball game tonight. "I think it's a tribute to the Lord that someone my age can still even play," the A-Squad member said, grinning.

Midland woman jailed after Saturday night shooting death

From Staff Reports

A 29-year-old Midland woman, Johnnie Mae Saddler, who was shot in the head in an apparent scuffle in northeast Midland late Saturday afternoon, died in Midland Memorial Hospital about an hour later.

Taken into custody at the scene of the shooting at 2100 Butternut Lane and later jailed under a warrant for murder was Billie Jo Jackson McGruder, 35, of 1103 E. Pecan Ave.

"She (Ms. Saddler) was shot one time in the head with a small-caliber pistol," said Midland Detective Sgt. B.G. Johnson.

Ms. Saddler, who lived at 303 S. Webster St., was shot shortly before 5 p.m. Saturday and died at the hospital at 6:10 p.m., Johnson said. She was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Robert H. "Bob" Pine.

Johnson said police, who gleaned conflicting accounts of the shooting, were "still working on details" of the case late Saturday night.

Pine said he read Ms. McGruder her rights and that he would set her bond Monday.

Meanwhile, Midland County Sheriff's deputies were investigating a reported rape in the Permian Motel & Apartments at 3211 W. Wall Ave. Saturday.

Odessa woman's body identifed

ODESSA — The body of a woman found north of Andrews last Tuesday has been positively identified as that of 27-year-old Lois Ann Lloyd, who was last seen alive the night of April 12.

The identification was made by Dallas pathologists after the Ector County sheriff's office picked up Ms. Lloyd's dental records from New Mexico and transported them to Dallas. Ector County authorities were notified late Friday.

Jail options studied as transfer costs mount

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The farming out of Midland County Jail inmates may cause the county to approach deficit spending.

Meanwhile, the unbudgeted cost of transferring inmates has given Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter fuel to campaign for renovation of the jail rather than the building of a new jail away from the courthouse.

In less than a week, the shipping out of 22 prisoners already has cost the county almost $3,000. And within a year, the cost could soar into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, Painter said.

And the movement of inmates already had started a few lighthearted Midland County Jail slogans, akin to this one: "Go to Jail and tour West Texas."

The problem is this: The county has no surplus funds to board inmates elsewhere. Still, the Texas Commission on Jail Standards has mandated that the jail hold no more than 85 inmates. And to keep the population "legal," the sheriff is transferring inmates to other county jails in West Texas.

"I can assure you of one thing," said County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin. "It's not in the budget. We have no option (but to ship out inmates and pay the bills for that). It's not discretionary whether we do it or not. It's mandated."

Still, said Jarnagin, "We haven't got it (the funds). There are no surplus funds in the county till."

"IT'S EXTREMELY costly," said County Commissioner Durward Wright.

ABC-TV reporter says Lucas' claims 'impressive'

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — Sylvia Chase, an investigative reporter with the ABC-TV news program "20/20," said Saturday that murder claims by Henry Lee Lucas were "impressive" when she interviewed him last year.

But Ms. Chase, addressing the annual convention of the Texas Associated Press Broacasters, refused to say if she believed Lucas killed hundreds of people as he had claimed.

"I never believe anything. You've got to prove it to me," Ms. Chase said. "At the time his claims his claims were impressive."

Ms. Chase interviewed Lucas in April 1984 in the Williamson County Jail in Georgetown as part of a program about alleged serial killers and cooperation between law enforcement agencies investigating such murders.

During the interview, Lucas, 48, described techniques he used to trap victims and kill them.

"We already knew that there were some folks who thought their lazy police departments were out of clear their files," Ms. Chase said during an explanation of how she went into the interview with Lucas.

Lucas, who at one time claimed to have murdered as many as 600 people nationwide, recently changed his claim and said that the only person he killed was his mother. He served time in a Michigan prison and a mental hospital for that 1960 slaying.

The Dallas Times Herald recently reported that Lucas said he made the claim of killing hundreds in order to embarass law enforcement officers.

Lucas has been sentenced to die for the 1979 killing of an unidentified hitchhiker near Georgetown and has been convicted or pleaded guilty to eight other killings.

Law officers claim to have cleared about 200 cases following interviews with Lucas.

Ms. Chase urged local radio and television stories to dedicate more time to investigative reporting.

Journalists have an obligation to "print and speak what we must ... to try to clean up the things that are wrong in society. And there's a lot," she said.

Bikers hold rally to end speed limit

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 100 motorcyclists sporting black T-shirts and leather jackets rallied on the Capitol lawn Saturday to protest the 55 mph limit.

"The speed is 55 and no one is doing it," said Ron Hall, whiskered state coordinating council chairman for American Bikers Against Totalitarian Enforcement.

"The selective enforcement often times falls on those who stand out," said Hall. "As you might see I stand out, I get stopped a lot and that's just not fair.

Hall said bikers from as far north as Sherman and as far south as Brownsville are tired of being targeted for the 55 mph enforcement because they have long hair and a beard.

Many of those attending wore a bandana handkerchiefs around their heads. Motors roared and popped as startled tourists stopped to watch the gathering.

The bikers said they had 5,000 signatures to present to Gov. Mark White protesting the 55 mph speed limit, which is a national standard.

Judge orders schools to let student Christian clubs meet

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has ordered two high schools to allow students to conduct Christian club meetings on campus in one of the first tests of a controversial law allowing religious-oriented meetings at public schools.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Norman Black "impliedly upheld" the constitutionality of the Equal Access Act passed by Congress last year, one attorney said Friday.

Tony Amidei, a senior at Westchester High School, sued the Spring Branch School District in November after administrators denied a request for a meeting room for his Christian club.

"The purpose of the club is to allow a small group of students who has a common interest in Christianity and the life and teachings of Jesus Christ to meet once a week for one hour to discuss common experiences," the suit said.

Six other students at Westchester and nearby Spring Woods High School, both in the Houston area, joined the lawsuit and the U.S. Justice Department intervened in the case.

Author does research on intimacy

DALLAS (AP) — In the "Alan Aldaesque" trend toward sensitive, caring men, the true test of whether a man has found intimacy is to ask a simple question.

"Go ask a man how many men he's intimate with," said the author of a new book on the subject. "And watch him run."

Most men think intimacy with other men is confined to homosexual relationships, that a "yes" answer means they are gay. Even intimacy with their wives or children is perceived as weakness.

But intimacy, although very difficult to achieve, is simply opening up and being vulnerable enough to share fears, hopes, dreams, love — one's self, said Michael E. McGill, a Southern Methodist University professor and author of "The McGill Report on Male Intimacy."

McGill, who planned a two-week cross-country trip to promote the book, predicted it will sell because it is "timely" and "written for the right audience."

Based on a three-year study that surveyed almost 2,000 men and women ranging in age from 18 to 73, the book explores men's relationships with spouses, parents, children and friends. The study found:

— Less than 10 percent of men fully disclose their feelings to their wives.

— Women know they are loved by their spouse or "significant other," but they don't actually feel loved because they do not know their husbands.

— Mothers are the "loving link" between fathers and their children, an emotional mediator.

— Fathers often present the image of a "knight in shining armor" to their daughters, setting themselves up as perfect and falsely raising the daughter's expectations about all men.

— Men are not more loving and open because they want to retain power and mystery, and fear a show of feelings makes them weak.

McGill, who holds a doctorate from the University of Southern California and is a professor of organizational behavior and administration at SMU's Edwin Cox School of Business, said he wrote the book because he realized "there is this fundamental difference in the way men and women share emotion and intimacy."

Despite changes in women toward a more liberated and open lifestyle, men haven't made many strides toward intimacy, McGill said.

"I don't think they see anything in it for themselves," he said. "They see being standoffish, being imperious as the right way. If I tell you about my problems, then that's weakness."

Yet that attitude keeps them from an intimacy that leads to true understanding of self and a richer life, McGill said.

"Disclosing is a way to get more powerful. Until men see that, they will not change," he said.

Some wives surveyed said they didn't know how their husbands spent their days at work or how much money they made. Others said they are asked to sign income tax forms before they're filled in, McGill said.

And though the relationships of younger couples could be expected to reflect a more equitable partnership, McGill said the lack of intimacy cuts across all ages.

Women, he said, often just let their men get away with it.

"Men have said, 'I don't want to be Alan Alda. I can just be Clint Eastwood.'"

Even friendships with other men deny males the intimacy that could make them whole, McGill said.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

They're already talking about 1986 campaigning season

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Despite the fact that the 1984 campaign season is barely past, talk already is underway about the 1986 season—particularly the gubernatorial sweepstakes.

Speculation was increased by the announcement of U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, that he's considering "seriously" a race next year.

Loeffler's announcement was something of a surprise, since it appeared the 39-year-old lawyer and rancher was perfectly happy representing his vast congressional district, which runs from San Antonio through much of West and Southwest Texas.

Republicans greeted Loeffler's announcement with enthusiasm, since the GOP is still smarting from the victory by Gov. Mark White over incumbent Bill Clements in 1982.

Clements' victory in 1978 was seen by Republicans as showing that the Texas Republican Party had come into its own and that Texas finally had become a two-party state.

Clements' loss four years later stung party officials, and Clements — and Republicans have made no secret of the fact that removing White from the Governor's Mansion is deeply desired.

There's been speculation that Clements himself wants a rematch with White, but Clements has been insisting that while he's interested in assuring a Republican victory in 1986, it's not something that he wants to do personally.

Clements says he is working on recruiting a candidate — or candidates — for the GOP, but says that doesn't mean that he wants to have the right to annoint the challenger to White.

The bottom line, Clements says, is defeating White.

Clements' associates say that Clements might run, but only if it appeared there was no one else who had the potential of defeating White (always assuming, of course, that White will be seeking a second term).

One of the more interesting pieces of speculation (which has been denied by those concerned) has been that Clements has attempted to get Comptroller Bob Bullock into the Democratic primary against White.

Bullock had announced earlier that he would run for governorbut later removed himself, commenting that he hadn't encountered any overwhelming demand for his candidacy.

There remains, of course, the possibility that Bullock could change his mind again, and re-enter the race — presumably the defeat of White in the Democratic primary wouldn't greatly sadden Clements (or some other Republicans).

But Loeffler's indication that he may be a candidate would appear to give Clements and the GOP a potential challenger to White who could make the race at least interesting, and more likely one which the GOP could win.

Loeffler has the reputation of handling himself well in campaigns, and he has experience in raising the money so necessary for political endeavors.

Moreover, Loeffler has well established ties to the Republican Party.

He has served as a legislative liaison aide in the White House and at the Department of Energy during the Ford Administration, and as chief legislative counsel to Sen. John Tower.

That experience and those ties to the GOP establishment could give Loeffler an edge over other potential GOP candidates who've been the subject of recent speculation.

Several of those mentioned are Democrats, including former Speaker of the House Billy Clayton, and former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock.

Hance has said he's not sure about switching parties — but is interested in a statewide race.

Clayton has reportedly told his confidants that he could end up making a switch, and a statewide race.

Also being mentioned are such folks as former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach, and his fellow Dallas resident, H. Ross Perot, and Amarillo oilman T. Boone Pickens. All have received a lot of attention, but none has indicated that much enthusiasm about making a race.

White, of course, shouldn't be written off before he's even had a chance to make an announcement of his intentions.

White has had some difficulties of late, and Republicans are still anxious to tie him to the tax-and-spend image of Democrats that the GOP lvoes to emphasize.

No one ever ends up in the Governor's Mansion as a result of purely random selection, and White wasn't given that much of a chance the first time he ran.

Loeffler's announcement that he's looking at the governor's race —and indications are that he intends to do more than just look — may put him in the position of being a top choice for a challenge of White.

But there's a long way to go before folks can even pay their filing fees, and longer still before folks will be going to the polls.

Still, the rumor mills for the 1986 races are beginning to grind and Loeffler's announcement is providing some interesting grist.

Bill Kidd writes for the Reporter-Telegram's Austin Bureau.

Murderer ordered executed on May 29

CONROE (AP) — A Texas prison inmate convicted in the November 1976 murder of a Montgomery County juvenile probation officer has been ordered to die by lethal injection before dawn May 29.

State District Judge Judge Lee Alworth on Friday set the execution date for G.W. Green, 48, convicted in the slaying of John C. Denson during a robbery at his home.

Testimony at Green's trial in 1977 showed he and three other men went to Denson's home.

"We still need entrants in food and beverage booths," said Ms. Jackson. "We want different varieties of food and beverages."

"Artists and artwork from Midland are still needed also," she added. "They must be items you make."

Historical display booths are also needed said the commission.

"The booths must pertain to the Centennial or be historical in nature and may not be a commercial display," said Ms. Jackson.

The evening of July 6 will feature a CentennialFest Street Dance, beginning at 8 p.m.

"We are looking for a 'big name' talent," said Ms. Jackson. "There will be dancing in the intersection of Texas and Main with bleachers set up for those who just want to sit and watch and listen.

The highlight of that day will be the "world's largest birthday cake," baked and donated by Albertson's and decorated by "fancy frosters," Nancy Reid, Ginger Sandoval, Connie Basham and Del Main. The cake will measure 50 feet by 50 feet, consisting of 1,662 sheet cakes and will weigh 12,403 lbs.

All Midlanders are invited to the cutting ceremony and to eat the cake at approximately 4 p.m.

The final day of celebrations will be honored by Midland churches, who have been asked to observe the day by having special services, music, outdoor services and joint or community services.

Still needed, said the commission, are sponsors, organizers, prizes donated by merchants (large and small), lumber and supply donations, entertainment, clean-up and set-up.

Call volunteer coordinator, Janet Considine, 694-4446.

BODY

The woman had been the subject of an intensive search after her 1976 Pontiac was found burning about 5 a.m. April 13 in a ditch between Interstate 20 and the north service road about two miles west of Loop 250 in Midland County.

Midland sheriff's deputies found quantities of blood, hair, skull and brain fragments in the trunk of the burned-out car, which was registered to Ms. Lloyd in Ector County.

Ector County authorities were notified and later that same day the sheriff's office received a call from an oil field worker, saying he had found what appeared to be human remains at a pump jack site in far west Ector County.

The area in the vicinity of the car and around the pump jack was thoroughly search by Midland and Ector County sheriff's deputies and a DPS helicopter, equipped with an infra red heat sensing camera, spent about 10 hours searching about a 100 square mile area.

Preliminary tests done by the Midland DPS lab on hair and blood samples found in the car, and at the pump jack site, strongly indicated Ms. Lloyd had been the victim of foul play.

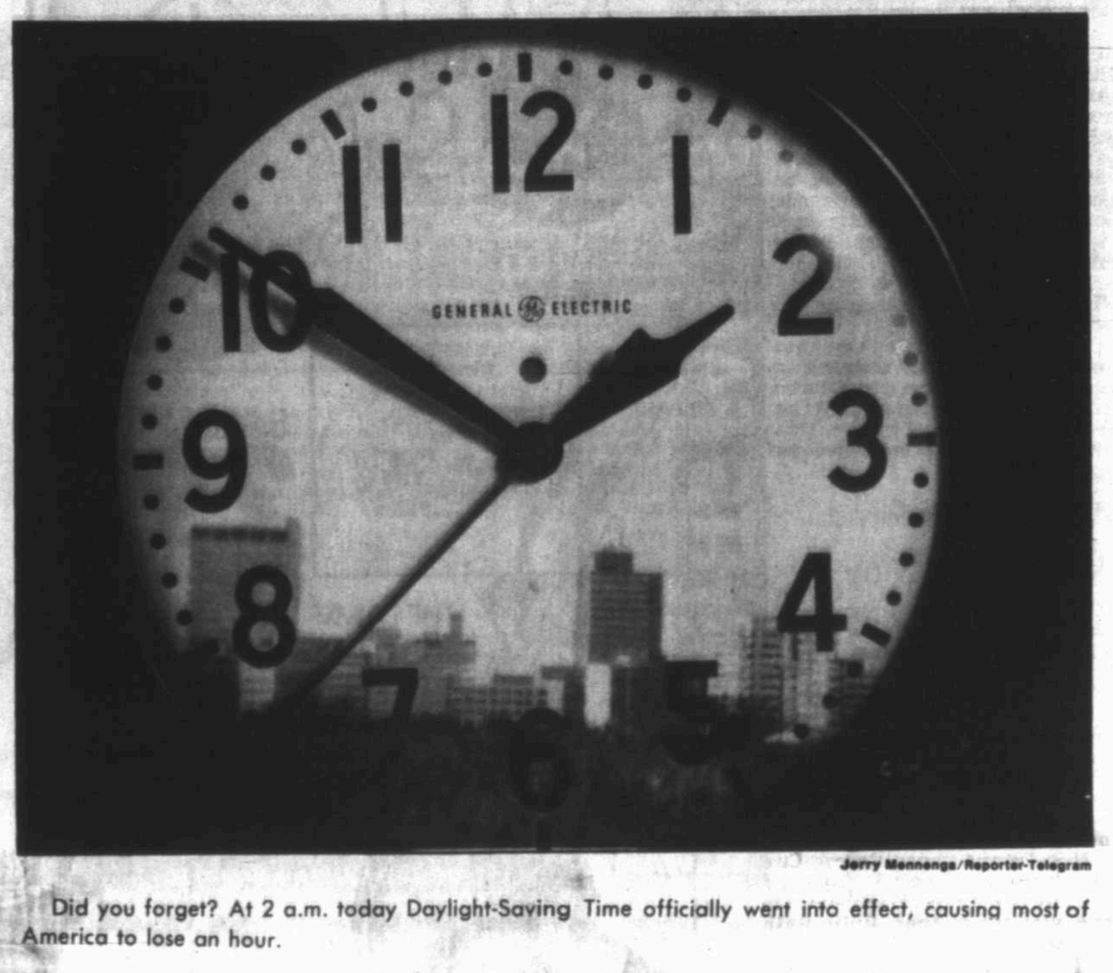

Just before noon last Tuesday, the Ector County sheriff's office was notified oil field workers had found a body about five miles north of Andrews.

The body was found on the east side of a cactus bush in a field west of U.S. 385, according to Ector County sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss. The body, in an advanced state of decomposition, was clothed in a sweat shirt and underpants, he said.

The body was transported to Dallas for autopsy to determine cause of death and identity.

According to sheriff's investigators, the quantity of skull and brain fragments recovered indicated death was probably caused by one or more blows to the head.

Searchers in far west Ector County found a tire iron in a field they suspect may have been the murder weapon.

Did you forget? At 2 a.m. today Daylight-Saving Time officially went into effect, causing most of America to lose an hour.

Once again, it's time to spring forward

WASHINGTON (AP) — Daylight-saving time returns Sunday.

The annual, and sometimes confusing, rite of spring occurs as people in all or part of 48 states set their clocks ahead an hour.

This change steals an hour of daylight from the morning and adds it to the evening, providing more light for outdoor activities such as tennis, barbecues, and even lawn mowing.

While the shift occurred, technically, at 2 a.m. — when it suddenly became 3 a.m. — most people changed their clocks before retiring Saturday night.

Those who forgot are likely to be an hour late for church, work or other activities Sunday.

For those who are confused, the correct time is as handy as the telephone.

Many local telephone companies have services which can be called to obtain the correct time.

And, for the most precision, the U.S. Naval Observatory, the official timekeeper for the United States, also offers a time check service via telephone.

To hear the recorded time message, based on the Observatory's super-accurate atomic clock, call 1-900-410-TIME.

It should be noted, however, that this is not a free call.

INMATES

As did Jarnagin, Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said the commissioners could "amend the budget" in mid-year and siphon funds from other departments. The county's 1985 budget is $12.9 million. But the reduction of county employees "would be the last resort" in collecting those funds.

"I would hope we could find other means other than a reduction of personnel," Dettman said. "I don't think anybody is overstaffed." Unlike the federal government, the county "cannot operate in a deficit...We have to have a balanced budget, in other words, which is the way it should be."

The sheriff has a $2 million budget for operation of his department. But the jail is budget for only $197,600. Of that, $120,000 is for feeding the prisoners, and the balance is for clothing, medication and medical expenses, supplies, and jail repairs and maintenance.

Since Tuesday, the sheriff has farmed out 22 inmates to four West Texas county jails. The initial transfer of prisoners came shortly before the county is to hold a two-part jail bond election on Saturday, May 11.

Proposition No. 1 calls for the issuance of not more than $3 million in bonds to renovate the jail, to expand Culver Youth Home, a juvenile detention center, and to finance a study on long-term county government needs, including the courthouse, jail and library.

Proposition No. 2 calls for the issuance of $9.9 million in bonds to build a new jail east of town and to expand Culver Youth Home. The proposed jail initially would house 225 inmates, would have room for an additional 75 prisoners and could be expanded to house a total of 600 men and women inmates in maximum security.

THE COMMISSIONERS' Court this year had planned to build the new jail east of Midland by issuing $9.9 million in certificates of obligation and thereby bypassing the voters.

Two years ago, when the commissioners submitted an $11.69 million courthouse-jail bond election to the voters, the issue was defeated at the election polls by a 4-to-1 ratio. It had called for expanding the courthouse and jail.

But just as ground-breaking on the proposed jail was to begin this year, the Committee of Concerned Voters intervened and petitioned for a bond election. The upshot of that is the two-pronged bond election set for May 11.

The timing of the transfer of prisoners last week and the May 11 setting of the bond election were coincidental and were not contrived by the Commissioners' Court to emphasize the election or highlight any urgency for a new or revamped jail, commissioners insist.

"It's certainly not a sideshow or part of any advertising gimmick," said Wright. "We've been on the threshold of this situation for four years."

The Jail Commission has been critical of the County Jail's overcrowdedness and other deficiencies, such as inadequate lighting, no emergency locking of single cells, lack of sight and sound separation of men and women prisoners, lack of an exercise area and inadequate sunlight for inmates. The Jail Commission has indicated it might close down the jail if the deficiencies are not corrected. The commissioners and the sheriff are correcting those flaws not yet resolved.

THE OBVIOUS costs of farming out county prisoners through today are $2,891.27, which includes $2,490 for boarding the prisoners, $275 for the deputies' 22 manhours at $12.50 an hour to transport the prisoners, and $126.27 for mileage expenses computed at 23 cents a mile over 549 miles. The prisoners have been shipped to the Martin County Jail in Stanton, Glasscock County Jail in Garden City, Mitchell County Jail in Colorado City and the Scurry County Jail in Snyder. The per-day cost of housing prisoners ranges from $20 at Colorado City and Snyder to $25 at Garden City and $26 a day at Stanton.

Midland County must also bear any medical and dental expenses incurred by its charges while they are jailed elsewhere. In a year's time, expenses could soar into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, Painter said.

"We can't wait for a new jail to be built," Painter said, "because we'll be transporting prisoners for two years" while the jail is under construction. "We have got to have some relief right now." The proposed renovation would include converting an undeveloped quadrant of the jail into cells for lodging additional prisoners.

ALTHOUGH he said he recognizes the need for a new jail, Painter said he favors the 1983 concept of expanding the present jail, built as the fifth floor of the 1929-30 vintage courthouse in 1973, and adding an addition to the courthouse.

"If we were to use this concept, then the taxpayers would not be throwing away their money on this renovation," Painter said. The "old" and new jail, on the courthouse square, would be linked. "The jail is a good solid jail. We do not need a jail away from the courthouse."

In the meantime, the transfer of prisoners could incur hazards.

"While they are in our custody," said Dettman, "he (the sheriff) is liable for the total safety and security of the prisoners. If they have an accident along the way, we would be liable. If they escape along the way, we would be liable."

Fourteen inmates were shipped out on Tuesday, when the Jail Commission's order to limit the jail population to 85 went into effect. Eight prisoners were shipped out on Friday to lower the population to 62 to prepare for the traditional weekend influx of more jailed citizens. The influx includes those who are charged with driving while intoxicated (DWI) and other charges and "weekenders" — citizens who have been court-ordered to spend weekends in jail to fulfill sentences on misdemeanor crimes, such as DWI, theft and assault. The work-release program allows them to work weekdays to support themselves and their families and to pay fines and court costs.

"WE'VE GOT TO have a leeway for the guys (deputies) to pickup and bring in" people charged with offenses over the weekend, said Jail Lt. Bennie Cureton.

On Friday, when eight inmates were "shipped out," another inmate, James Henry Morrison, 47, was returned to Midland from the Mitchell County Jail for a court hearing. He has been charged with violating probation for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

And another, 27-year-old James Bates, complained of sickness — difficulty with breathing — after he was transferred to Garden City. Once back, he told the jail administrator, Lt. Richard Sexton, he was was feeling "fine."

"He wanted to come back here," said Cureton, "so we tricked him." The next day, Bates was transferred to Snyder.

"We're constantly rotating people," he said. "It's hard to keep track of them."

As "costly" as farming out prisoners is, it could become more expensive, Painter said.

"We can go to El Paso," where, noted the sheriff, El Paso County would lease jail space to Midland County for $45 a day per prisoner. "We haven't struck a deal with them yet. That's the last resort. That's the last place we'll go. That's too much out of the way; There's no sense in throwing money away."

Key bills still pending for final month of session

AUSTIN (AP) — There's a month of lawmaking remaining, and bills to regulate the way Texans drink, drive, shop and pay for government still are pending.

Some of the measures are going to pass. Some are going to die. Some are gasping to see the light of a legislative day.

TAXES

The House has wrapped up a $36.4 billion 1986-87 budget that Speaker Gib Lewis says is the fruition of his promise of no new taxes.

But Texans would help balance that budget by paying $106 million in increased state fees. College students are headed for a tuition hike, probably a quadrupling over the next two years.

The Senate appropriations bill is still in committee. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has talked about a larger fee bill than the House version.

Look for a House-Senate conference committee to write a 1986-87 budget that depends on a fee hike bill somewhat larger than the House version.

BLUE LAW

A committee has sent the full House a bill to clear the way for Sunday shopping. But on its way to the floor, the measure got bogged down in the Calendars Committee — the powerful panel that sets the daily House agenda.

Calandars Chairman Bill Messer, D-Belton, says he's sitting on the bill until he's persuaded the Senate wants to do something about the Blue Law.

"The latest word I had from (Senate sponsor Ray) Farabee is that he had 15 votes. I can't see us spending an hour's worth of time over here if he only has 15 votes in the Senate," said Messer.

It takes 21 votes in the 31-member Senate to bring a bill up for floor debate.

"I'm looking for some indication it's got a prayer over there, which I haven't seen," Messer said Thursday.

On Friday, Farabee said he's "very close" to the 21 votes.

"We are certainly within striking distance," he said.

Messer said the Blue Law debate has generated little interest.

"It's not like horse racing or things like that where people actually get emotionally charged. They may send you the little post card somebody gave them at the H.E.B., but this is just not a hot issue," he said.

This could be make-or-break week for the repealers. Messer says he'll move the bill to the floor once he gets an optimistic word from Farabee, who says he's ready to give that word.

Farabee's own committee, state affairs, this week might send the bill to the Senate floor.

PARIMUTUEL GAMBLING

This year's incarnation of the horse race betting bill was defeated by the House, but there have been several revival attempts. A Senate committee recently heard testimony on a horse and dog race bill. But racing lovers shouldn't head for the $2 window just yet.

"Right now, horse racing is presumably dead," said House sponsor Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi. "There's been no movement over in the Senate."

One man can rekindle the hopes of those who like to bet on dogs and ponies running in circles — Comptroller Bob Bullock. If he lowers his state revenue estimate, parimutuel gambling could become tempting revenue raiser for lawmakers loathe to pass a tax hike.

SEAT BELTS

Senators have approved a seat belt law requiring front-seat passengers in cars and pick-up trucks to buckle up. The vote come amid a federal government threat to mandate air bags in cars if states don't require seat belt use.

The bill seems to have support in the 150-member House, according to Messer, House sponsor of the measure. It could hit the floor within two weeks.

"I'm not going to get 100 votes. There are not a lot to spare," he said.

Several lawmakers say the seat belt proposal has drawn the loudest complaints from back home. There could be a move in the House to revive the so-called "Bubba amendment" exempting pick-up trucks.

Prospects for passage of some form of the seat belt law seem good enough that you might want to make sure your seat belts are in working order.

DRINKING AGE

The Senate, again working under a federal threat, has voted to raise the drinking age from 19 to 21. The U.S. Department of Trasportation says states allowing people under 21 to drink will lose highway funds.

The House Liquor Regulation Committee has conducted a hearing on the bill, but not yet voted. Chairman Billy Hall, D-Laredo, says the bill will win approval.

It seems fairly certain the liquor industry will lose two years' worth of legal customers.

OPEN CONTAINER BAN

Senators have voted to ban drivers from drinking alcoholic beverages. Mothers Against Drunk Driving has made the open container bill a key fight this year in the battle against DWI.

Hall's committee has reviewed several open container bans, and sent them to a three-member subcommitee chaired by an ex-policeman who doesn't care much for any of them.

Rep. Kenneth Armbrister, D-Victoria, said it's too easy to disguise a beer can or pour an alcoholic drink into an innocent-looking cup. In addition to his problems with the bill, he's heard complaints from colleagues.

"Everybody I have talked to so far says, 'I don't want to vote on that issue," he said.

So Armbrister is planning a hearing in one of the Texas cities — probably Arlington — that has barred drinking while driving.

Look for the panel to conduct a full, frank and fair hearing, and then put a tight lid on the open container ban.

AP Laserphoto

There's a month of lawmaking remaining, and major bills involving the way Texans drink, drive, shop, and pay for government are still pending. In ever-increasing numbers, lobbyists crowd around the entrance to the House Chamber.

EDUCATION

A Senate-approved omnibus education bill tries to tie up some of the loose ends left by last year's massive school reform package.

The loosest end is the no-pass, no-play provision that has drawn heated opposition. Senators have told the State Board of Education to take another look at no-pass, no-play and revise it if needed.

The rule now says a student who fails a course is ineligible for extra-curricular activities for six weeks. The board could reduce the period of ineligibility.

The House Education Committee is reviewing the Senate bill.

Look for legislators to try to find a way to re-direct some of the heat generated by no-pass, no-play — heat that could increase when football season kicks off.

ABORTION

Even more than open containers, horse racing and the Blue Law, this is an issue lawmakers fear. It is among the most likely to attract a one-issue opponent next election day.

The House State Affairs Committee held a lengthy, sometimes emotional, hearing on Rockdale Rep. L.B. Kubiak's abortion regulation bill. The measure would ban abortions in the final trimester of pregnancy and bar state money for abortions.

The Senate has done nothing on Victoria Sen. John Sharp's abortion regulation bill.

Rep. Pete Laney, state affairs chairman, sent the Kubiak bill to a subcommittee. He has not yet named all the subcommittee members.

"I've got a couple of them appointed and I'm fixing to find another one," he said.

STATE in brief

Judge dismisses civil rights case against city

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has closed an 8-year-old civil rights case brought against the city of Houston by the parents of a teenager who was shot to death by police who planted a "throw down" gun near his body.

U.S. District Judge George Cire dismissed the lawsuit Friday after the city paid a $428,000 settlement to the victim's mother, Billie Ruth Webster, of Shreveport, La.

Her son, Randall Alan Webster, 17, was killed Feb. 8, 1977, by police following a high-speed chase through southwest Houston in a van he allegedly had stolen.

The shooting was the basis for a made-for-television movie,"The Killing of Randy Webster."

Officers claimed the youth had threatened them with a gun.

Spaeth asks for divorce

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin City Council member Mark Spaeth has asked a state district court to end his marriage to television actress Amanda Blake.

Spaeth, 45, has been ill for the past year and announced Feb. 19 that he would not seek re-election to a second term. He leaves office May 15.

He has not attended a City Council meeting since the announcement and reportedly is staying at an apartment in Dallas, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

Ms. Blake, best known as Miss Kitty in the television series "Gunsmoke," is living and working in Hollywood, Calif. She has formed a company to produce television films in which she will appear.

The two were married April 28 after a courtship that began when they met on an airplane.

Water bill goes to Canada

AUSTIN (AP) — Dorothy Harrell of West Austin mailed a water bill to an El Campo water company — and learned two weeks later that the letter had turned up in Toronto.

The envelope contained the correct postal box number of the Boca Chica Water Co. and the correct ZIP code for El Campo.

During the two weeks' travel, the postage stamp never was canceled.

Mrs. Harrell first learned of her wayward water bill Friday when she received it in a letter from J.B. Harrison, Toronto. She had mailed the payment April 12 for the family's fishing cottage in South Texas.

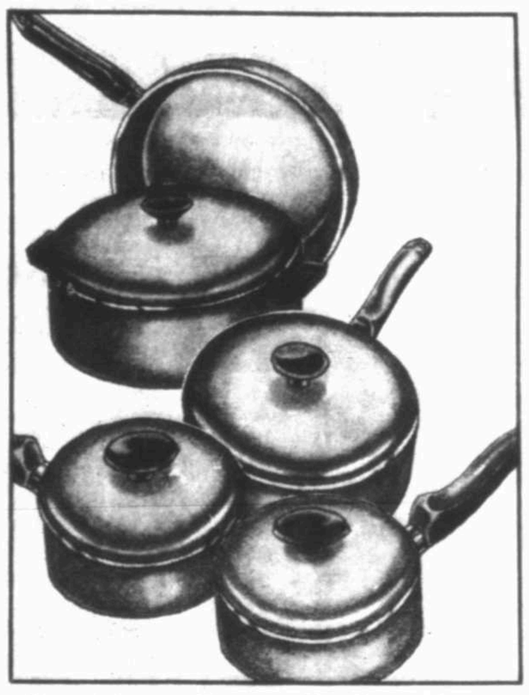

"I'm sure our respective post office departments would each agree that it was absolutely impossible for this to happen," Harrison said in the letter.

Ex-owner sentenced

AUSTIN (AP) — The former owner of a guard dog company has been sentenced to a total of 5½ years in jail and ordered to pay $22,000 in fines after pleading no contest to 11 counts of animal cruelty.

"I can assure you that you will be treated much better in the Travis County Jail than you treated your animals," County Court-at-Law Judge Leslie Taylor told Jerry Hyde at a hearing Friday.

HOW THEY VOTED

Houses take opposing sides on Nicaraguan ... for new Soviet moves

WASHINGTON — Votes of area members of Congress on key issues during the week ending April 26, 1985.

KEY HOUSE VOTES

House rejects Republican alternative for aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

President Reagan's hopes for continued aid to the rebels in Nicaragua were dashed for the time being April 24 when House members narrowly defeated a measure to provide $14 million for food, clothing and medicine by a vote of 213-215.

The plan would have provided money only for "nonlethal" aid — the funds could not be used to purchase weapons. The measure required the U.S. Agency for International Development to distribute the funds, instead of the Central Intelligence Agency, as the president preferred, and authorized the president to impose trade sanctions on Nicaragua if its government refused to meet with rebel leaders.

The vote was one of three taken that day on aiding the rebels — called Contras as liberals and conservatives struggled to hammer out a compromise.

A proposal from the Democratic side was first approved by a vote of 219-206, but later firmly rejected by a vote of 303-123 when the amending process was completed, killing the entire contra aid measure.

Proponents of the Republican plan argued that the people of Nicaragua are living under a totalitarian dictatorship and that the rebels could not continue their fight to bring democracy to their country without continued American aid.

Opponents said that the whole idea of funding insurgents to overthrow a government is contrary to American ideals and that the president's policies have only forced the Nicaraguan government closer to the Soviet Union. In addition, they said, the president's ... direct American ... region.

In the previous Geneva talks which ended in late 1983 the Soviets offered to reduce their 2,250 missiles and heavy bombers to 1,800. Gorbachev's statement indicated the Soviets may be prepared to cut even deeper.

"We are, of course, ready to examine seriously any concrete Soviet proposals for substantial, balanced and stabilizing reductions in strategic forces," said Sonda McCarty, a State Department press officer.

"Contrary to the impression created by press accounts of General Secretary Gorbachev's statement, however, the Soviet Union has made no proposal for reductions in strategic forces" she said.

Third body pulled from rubble

CHICAGO (AP) — Firefighters on Saturday pulled a man's body from the rubble left by an explosion at a tool and die plant, boosting the death toll to three with 15 injured, authorities said.

The Friday night blast and fire at the Tool and Engineering Co. on the South Side could have been caused by a natural gas leak, said Deputy District Fire Chief Daniel Moll.

About 50 workers were at the plant when the explosion occurred.About 125 firefighters were on the scene as flames shot through a 200-foot section of roof on the three-story building. The blaze was visible two miles away in downtown Chicago.

While the explosion is being investigated, Moll said "it appears to have been a natural-gas leak." He said some of the building's occupants reported smelling gas before the blast.

Commissioner announces reshuffling of command

NEW YORK (AP) — Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward, declaring a "crisis in confidence" following allegations by four men that officers tortured them with electric stun guns, announced a reshuffling of his top command Saturday.

"I will not tolerate brutal cops," Ward said as he announced the removal of the commander of police in Queens, where the torture allegedly occurred.

The announcement came after a fourth man said he had been insulted, beaten and tortured at the 106th Precinct by two officers already accused of using stun guns on three drug suspects.

Eighteen officers from the 106th Precinct have been transferred, four have been arrested and another suspended in connection with the torture complaints.

Ward said all allegations of police brutality would be investigated, and those guilty would be punished. He said he was letting police officers know that "only cowards brutalize people. Real men don't have to prove their masculinity" by torturing others.

Ward said officers who do not report misconduct by colleagues will be punished, as will their superiors.

The Queens commander of police, Assistant Chief William F. Fitzpatrick, "indicated his desire to retire and is transferred immediately to the office of the chief of patrol," said Ward. Taking over is Assistant Police Chief Richard P. Dillon, now commander of Manhattan detectives.

Ward said that "effective immediately" the department's Internal Affairs Division would handle all citizen allegations of excessive force and brutality by officers. Such cases were previously handled by the Civilian Complaint Review Board, which now will collect and forward them to Internal Affairs, he said.

American says Soviets did not mistreat her

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — An American observer aboard a Japanese fishing boat seized by the Soviet Union in the Bering Sea says she "was not in any way mistreated" by Soviet seamen before being released.

Becky Kruppenbach, 26, of Lancaster, Texas, made the comments Friday to reporters during a radiotelephone conversation between U.S. Coast Guard headquarters in Juneau and the cutter Munro.

The cutter, about 400 miles northwest of Dutch Harbor when the call was made, was expected to arrive in the Aleutian Islands port late Saturday, Coast Guard spokesman Dan Dewell said.

"The Russians treated me well," Ms. Kruppenbach said. "I was never concerned about my safety.

"I believe there were four other Japanese vessels in the area," she said. "As far as I know, it's just the one I was on that was boarded."

The seizure, carried out early Tuesday by seamen from a Soviet icebreaker, was in an area claimed by both the United States and the Soviet Union. The disputed area, in the Navarin Basin near where the federal government has accepted bids for oil leases, is about 225 miles long and 25 miles wide, officials said.

Ms. Kruppenbach was transferred Thursday from the Japanese fishing vessel Fukoho-Maru No. 18 to the Coast Guard cutter while it as in international waters south of Cape Olyutorsky in Siberia, the Coast Guard said.

Ms. Kruppenbach was aboard the Japanese fishing boat on behalf of the National Marine Fisheries Service to monitor compliance with catch quotas in U.S. territorial waters in the Bering Sea.

Ms. Kruppenbach told reporters the Soviet officers never explained why they had seized the fishing boat.

"Nobody spoke much English and I don't speak any Russian, so the relationship was very businesslike," Ms. Kruppenbach said. "I want to reemphasize I was not in any way mistreated ..."

It was her third voyage as an observer, and probably her last, she said.

"I planned before this trip not to go out anytime soon," she said. "I plan to go to school."

Funeral late, but tears fresh for WWII victim

BEACON, N.Y. (AP) — First Lt. Francis G. Peattie has come home from the Pacific, home from a unmarked grave, to rest beside the mother who never gave up hope.

Before he was buried Saturday, his bride's tears stung nearly as hard and as often as they had 42 years ago, when Peattie's B-17 disappeared in the Pacific.

For two years, there was silence. Later, his relatives learned the bomber had been shot down by Japanese fighters over New Britain, an island near New Guinea. But of Peattie's whereabouts there was no word.

His mother refused to believe he was dead. She died in 1971, still hoping.

"She never gave up hope he was coming back. Never," said Peattie's wife, Helen Peattie Ormsby, who remarried in 1947. "I accepted it, but Francey never did.

"I'm glad he's back, even though it hurts a lot," she said before her high school sweetheart was buried in the same plot with his parents.

"It's like it happened yesterday," said Mrs. Ormsby. She had barely gotten over her second husband's death in 1983, she said, when Peattie's grave was identified. The flood of new emotion was confusing.

"I think people want me to say that I was pining away for these 42 years," she said Friday. "He was not constantly on my mind, no.

"I go to bed at night and wonder, 'Which husband am I crying for?'"

Frank Peattie's return was front-page news in this blue-collar town on the Hudson River north of New York City; so was his disappearance in 1943. The town lost a fireman, the baseball team lost an intimidating fastball, Alps Sweet Shop and Nerrie's soda fountain lost a dependable customer.

He had a funeral in his hometown because of the persistence of Jose Holguin, best man at his wedding and sole survivor of the crash. Holguin, the navigator, saw the B-17 crash as he drifted to earth by parachute, said a prayer by the bodies, and was captured by the Japanese to spend 26 months as a prisoner of war.

Now 64 and a high school vice principal in Los Angeles, Holguin went looking for his buddies. He found the wreckage of the "Naughty but Nice," then ferreted out records that led him to Honolulu, where the remains of five crewmen were taken after the war.

There, in graves marked "unknown," he found Peattie; 2nd Lt. Herman H. Knott of Astoria, N.Y., Staff Sgt. Robert E. Griebel of Riverton, Wyo., and Staff Sgt. Pace P. Payne of Texarkana, Texas, who have since been buried; and Staff Sgt. Henry Garcia of Los Angeles, who will be buried in May.

No trace has been found of four other crewmen.

Peattie was one of about 70,000 Americans listed as missing in action in World War II. Military cemeteries here and abroad have more than 151,000 tombs marked "unknown."

Holguin spent at least $12,000 in his quest, but he remembers his debts to those men.

"I remember one morning ... the Japanese were coming over to bomb and I couldn't get out of bed," because he was sick. "So here comes Frank, grabs me out of bed and takes me to the slit trench. Things like that ..."

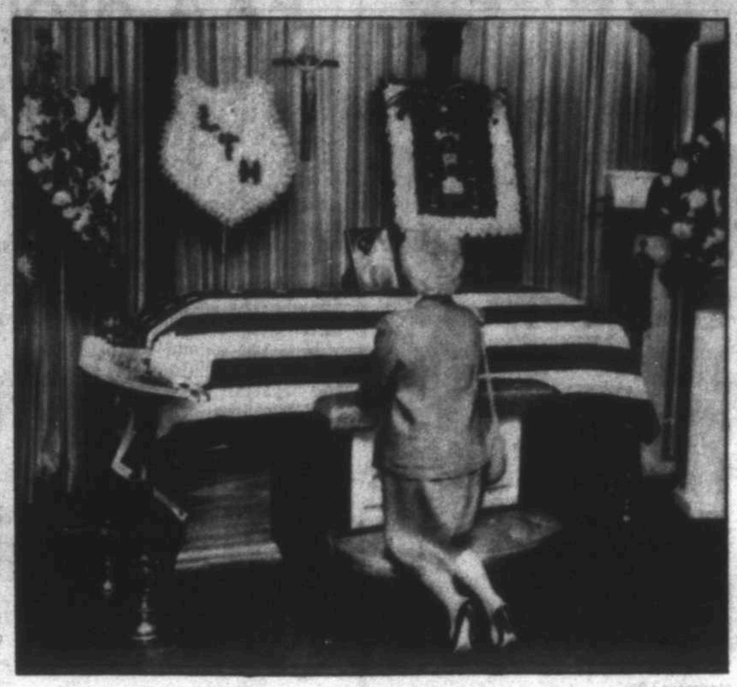

In Beacon, uniformed firefighters kept watch by Peattie's coffin on Thursday and Friday; his medals were on display and the mayor proclaimed it "Lt. Francis G. Peattie week."

Pilot Hal Winfrey came from Atlanta for the funeral. He had an infected elbow and missed the mission on the day his comrades died. When they didn't come back, Winfrey walked out of the hospital, lined up volunteers and got permission to burn scarce fuel in three futile search flights.

"I had a guilt complex for years, wondering, had I been there, could I have done something different? Why wasn't I there?" he said.

"You ask yourself — it's been asked of me — why disturb the dead? Why bring them back after this time span?

"But I think maybe it's a good thing. It fills voids. Look at the Vietnam war, all the MIAs. Thousands of people are really torn up to this day. They don't know whether their relatives are dead or alive. This does close the book, it makes a complete story."

Republicans, Democrats in fierce partisan feud

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats and Republicans have been tearing into each other in some of the fiercest partisan feuding in years, all but paralyzing action in both the House and the Senate.

Cooperation between the parties — needed to proceed on routine matters and crucial legislation — all but disappeared last week as Democrats and Republicans clashed openly in the Senate over the federal budget and in the House over a long-disputed election in Indiana.

House Republicans are incensed over Democratic efforts to seat Democrat Frank McCloskey in Indiana's 8th Congressional District.

A Democratic-controlled task force declared last week that state ballot counts in favor of challenger Rick McIntyre were wrong and McCloskey had won by a mere four votes. The Republicans countered with an all-out parliamentary war, staging an all-night session, walking out of committee meetings, and making time-consuming motions on the House floor.

Unable to proceed with the business at hand because of parliamentary knots tied by the GOP, House Assistant Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., angrily recessed the House for the weekend on Thursday.

"At least for the moment, I think that the business for this day and this week has been ended for any constructive purpose," Foley said, ending debate on a State Department authorization bill.

Later, he groused: "The danger is these tactics can create a kind of tribalism among the parties and can lead to resentment on both sides."

"The Republican party regards this as the House equivalent of Watergate," said Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., one of a group of activist New Right Republicans leading the fight against the Democratic majority.

"I cannot emphasize how outraged the Republican members are," House Republican Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi said. Strong-arm tactics on the part of Democrats in the Indiana situation, he said, would "poison the well in relations between the parties in the House for the next two years."

The Indiana race was just part of the overall shoddy treatment the Republicans have received, and that "could mean long-term acrimony around here," Lott said.

In the Senate, where the two parties have traditionally been more cordial toward each other, partisanship flared last week in the budget debate.

House Republicans negotiated a budget "compromise" with the White House without ever consulting Democrats for support — even though Republicans hold a only a narrow 53-47 lead in the Senate and need some Democratic support.

Group of Vietnamese-Americans give thanks to American GIs

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Old memories were tearfully recalled Saturday, 10 years after the fall of Saigon, as a group of Vietnamese-Americans gave thanks to the American GIs who were not only allies, but friends.

About 800 veterans and refugees gathered for an appreciation ceremony sponsored by the Vietnamese-American Association of America at the Indiana War Memorial.

Nicholas Nguyen, president of the 2,200-member Vietnamese-Americans group, said it was time to let the GIs know their efforts were appreciated. He said the former refugees were grateful for the chance to make America their second homeland, and to the men and women who fought to give them freedom.

"I had mixed feelings about it," said Mike Creager of Indianapolis, who served in the Army's 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam. "It brings back a lot of bad memories. It's hard to reconcile, but you can't carry a grudge forever."

Jesus Quintana of Indianapolis, a Marine who lost both legs during the Vietnam War, said he went to the remembrance out of curiosity, and he liked what he saw.

"There is a burn in us that's never going to heal. Too much time went by before the Americans did anything about the veterans," he said. "The country waited too long to welcome us back. But we have to deal with it individually."

Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., told the group that President Reagan appreciated their efforts and thanked them for honoring the American servicemen.

Burton, a House Foreign Affairs Committee member, added,"Southeast Asia would be free today if our goals were set at the outset. If we are ever involved in another military conflict, our objectives and goals should be well-defined before we send in our troops. We must give them the ability to win or not send them at all," he said.

Loc To, who helped organize the event, said the American Legion and other veterans groups believe the ceremony is the first time Vietnamese refugees have paid tribute to American soldiers.

Members of the Vietnamese-American Association of Indiana serve native food to veterans Saturday as part of a celebration to thank American servicemen who fought in the Vietnam War.

"Ten years ago we got here because of the generosity of the United States and we're grateful," To said.

"We also have a high regard for the American men and women who served during the conflict. Because of them, we got a democracy and could live in freedom. They understand us and know us best. The Vietnamese people, particularly those who live here, owe a thank you to the Vietnam veterans."

Bob Foster, a spokesman for the Indiana chapter of the American Legion, said he wondered at first why the Vietnamese would organize such an event.

"But they simply want to say thank you, and I sure can't find any fault with that," he said. "I think there are a lot of veterans who have been wanting to hear those two words for several years."

Ron Stamps, state chairman of the Vietnam Veterans Civic Council, says he hoped contact will continue between veterans and Vietnamese-Americans.

"We have to work with them," he said. "They fought beside us and they suffered the same things, and they lost their country."

Meanwhile, in Annville, Pa., about 20 miles from Harrisburg, about 2,000 Vietnamese from all over the East were gathering Saturday at Fort Indiantown Gap for ceremonies marking the 10th anniversary of the arrival of Southeast Asia refugees.

In the months after the collapse of Saigon in 1975, more than 22,000 Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees were housed at the military post, one of a number of locations across the country where refugees stayed until they could be resettled.

FAA grounds Susquehanna Airlines for alleged violations

SIDNEY, N.Y. (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has revoked Susquehanna Airlines' operating certificate for alleged safety violations and, unless the emergency order is upset by an appeal, the grounding is permanent.

It is the second time this year the FAA has halted operations of the upstate New York regional airline. Last year, two of its planes crashed, killing five people.

"They're out of business, as of today," Michael Benson, a spokesman for the FAA's Eastern Region at Kennedy International Airport in Queens, said Friday.

The emergency revocation order cited five violations of FAA regulations, including falsification of records. Two "serious safety violations" occurred after the FAA suspended the operating certificate of the Sidney-based airline on Jan. 17, the agency said.

Susquehanna owner Bernard Ford said he would appeal the FAA order to the National Transportation Safety Board, but Susquehanna cannot operate while an appeal is pending.

"Their two new items (FAA allegations) are their claim that our planes went below the assigned approach paths" into airports "and that we are flying VFR (visually) in IFR (instrument flight required) conditions.

Suit challenges Sears on warranties

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — As the state of Maine gets set to square off against the world's largest retailer in a sweeping consumer action, Attorney General James E. Tierney is challenging Sears, Roebuck & Co. to tell customers up front just how long those big-ticket appliances are supposed to last.

"This isn't an academic exercise," says Tierney, a would-be candidate for governor who describes himself as a longtime Sears patron. "We're going to come out of the case with a more precise definition of what an implied warranty is."

In a six-part consumer complaint scheduled to go to trial on May 13, state prosecutors are charging Sears with illegal bait-and-switch marketing techniques. They allege that shoppers are lured to eight Maine stores by falsely advertised sales offers and then encouraged to buy more expensive products. Sears calls the complaint "preposterous."

Tierney's office also charges that Sears pressures customers to buy maintenance contracts on purchases that merely duplicate warranty rights, both expressly stated and implied, which come with the product. Sears says that isn't so either.

But the most controversial issue in the case, to be tried in Kennebec County Superior Court before Justice Donald G. Alexander, may be the state's effort to win for Sears customers some of the same pledges of product reliability that the retailer obtains from its manufacturers and suppliers.

Sears attorney John J. O'Leary Jr. says the attorney general is seeking to establish that Sears products "ought to last for a specific period of time and the implied warranty ought to cover it.

"What they're after is something I don't think that's ever been done or do-able," he said.

The state wants to argue that "every given appliance is going to last a given period of time," said O'Leary. Because of a variety of factors, including use patterns, "that just isn't so."

The state is asking for court orders to bar what it says are deceptive trade practices, and for Sears to offer to refund the proceeds from service contracts that duplicate existing warranty rights.

Maine filed its complaint against Sears in March 1984. In lengthy pretrial proceedings, prosecutors have obtained tens of thousands of documents, most of which have been guarded from public view by a court protective order. Sears maintains that disclosure would harm its competitive position by breaching trade secrets.

Settlement negotiations broke off last summer. Both sides said this week they expect the trial to proceed.

NATION IN BRIEF

Officials may halt work on controversial bridge

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — State transportation officials say they may hold up work on a controversial bridge to allow archaeologists to determine if relics found nearby are historically valuable.

Jack Fullmer, a resident near the proposed bridge over Crosswicks Creek in west-central New Jersey, says he found the remains of five vessels that he thinks are part of a fleet sunk by the British in 1778.

"We wouldn't want to destroy something that is a valuable piece of history," transportation spokeswoman Debbie Lawler said Friday.

The proposed bridge is a key part of a planned 3.5-mile link of Interstate 295. It has been the subject of a year-long dispute between the Department of Transportation and the Department of Environmental Protection.

Company reports loss

NORTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Co., whose 1,600 workers walked off the job in 1981 in what has become one of the nation's longest strikes, has reported a $1.2 million net loss in the first quarter of 1985.

As union pickets gathered at the gates of the machine-tool company's plant Friday, stockholders inside were told the firm has leased 23 per cent of its manufacturing space as a warehouse because it is no longer needed.

A year earlier, Brown & Sharpe reported a first-quarter loss of $1,616,000.

Members of the International Association of Machinists & Aerospace Workers struck the firm Oct. 19, 1981, in a dispute over employee transfers.

Cable TV to show photos

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Cable television companies in Rhode Island will broadcast photographs of missing children beginning Monday.

Paul A. Cianelli, president of the New England Cable Television Association, said Friday that the idea soon will spread to cable systems in Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

He said the photos were obtained from the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children in Washington. Anyone who knows the whereabouts of any child will be asked to call the center's toll-free number.

Man wins $2.5 million

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An 84-year-old retired handyman who nearly lost his home after a firm lent $41,000 to a stranger who put the house up as collateral has won more than $2.5 million in damages.

The borrower, who has never been caught, absconded with the $41,000 and the company began foreclosure proceedings, attorneys said. But the home owner, Carl Rookhuizen, knew nothing about it.

Rookhuizen was awarded $200,000 for emotional distress and $2.35 million in punitive damages Friday by a Superior Court jury. The judgment was entered against Aames Home Loan, which made the deal.

"This was a guy who always paid cash for everything, never owned a credit car, never took out a loan," said Lawrence P. Grassini, Rookhuizen's attorney. "Talk about emotional distress."

Parade for vets held

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — A belated tribute, called "The Parade That Never Was," is being held here for American's Vietnam veterans on Sunday, a decade after the last of them returned home.

Between 4,000 and 5,000 residents of the western Michigan city were expected to attend the parade, which honors all veterans while singling out those who fought in Southeast Asia, organizer Thomas Emig said.

"Everyone has been helpful, and it should be a very special, touching tribute," said Emig, himself a Vietnam veteran.

'Little tilt' seen in CBS news

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The CBS Evening News displays a slightly liberal viewpoint, but the selection of stories it reports probably would vary very little if conservatives operated the network, conservative columnist James J. Kilpatrick said Saturday.

Kilpatrick, who appeared for nine years in the "Point-Counterpoint" portion of CBS' popular "60 Minutes" program, told reporters he sees "a little discernable tilt" toward liberal views in the network's news coverage.

Syria, Lebanon discuss possibility of ending war

WORLD

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian and Lebanese officials met in the capitals of both countries Saturday as part of Syria's effort to stop the fighting that has forced 17,000 Christian families from their homes in southern Lebanon.

Reporters in Sidon said Palestinian guerrillas and Moslem militiamen, who conquered eight neighboring Christian villages in the two previous days, were regrouping and moving arms and ammunitions to the hills facing the Christian suburb of Majdalioun.

President Hafez Assad of Syria sent his national security adviser, Maj. Gen. Mohammed Kholi to Beirut with a letter for President Amin Gemayel dealing with the fighting around the port city of Sidon, Lebanon's third-largest city.

Kholi conferred for three hours with Gemayel, Prime Minister Rashid Karami, and Assem Kanso, secretary-general of the pro-Syrian Baath Party.

Karami said: "Syria is sparing no effort to help us out of our presence crisis." He did not say if they had agreed on measures to halt the fighting.

Lebanese army commander Gen. Michel Aoun went to Damascus, Syria's capital, for talks on deployment of Lebanese soldiers in Sidon, state radio said.

An army brigade was sent to Sidon after Israeli soldiers pulled out Feb. 16, and two weeks ago 30 Lebanese armored personnel carriers were sent as reinforcements. But the army force has yet to leave its barracks.

Syria has thousands of its soldiers stationed in eastern Lebanon. Syria, which has emerged as the major powerbroker in Lebanon as Israel withdraws, has pledged to help Gemayel's government end 10 years of civil war.

Assad also met Saturday in Damascus with leaders of a new pro-Syrian Palestinian alliance opposed to Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the official Syrian Arab News Agency said.

"The discussions covered the recent developments in Lebanon and in the region, in light of the suspicious moves by (Arafat's) deviationist Palestinian factions," the news agency, apparently referring to Arafat's agreement with Jordan's King Hussein on a joint approach to peace talks with Israel.

Arafat was quoted Saturday as warning of the danger of "imminent atrocities" against Palestinians in refugee camps in southern Lebanon similar to the massacres by Christian militiamen in Beirut's Sabra and Chatilla camps in 1982.

"Our camps are now besieged in Lebanon," Arafat was quoted as saying in an interview with the Abu Dhabi newspaper al-Ittihad. A summary of the interview was distributed in Bahrain by the United Arab Emirates' official WAM news agency. Arafat did not elaborate on the source of the danger.

Police said 17,000 Christian families have been displaced by the Palestinians and Moslem militias, who have set dozens of Christian homes on fire and looting others.

Reporters in Sidon said Christian militiamen in Majdalioun exchanged machine-gun fire with their Moslem foes.

Christian militias also were seen moving truckloads of ammunition around Jezzine, a town 15 miles east of Sidon where many of the displaced Christians have taken refuge. Several days earlier, the Christian Lebanese Forces evacuated 300 militiamen from the Sidon area in an effort to end the fighting that began when the Israelis pulled out.

Walesa calls on workers to keep fighting for Solidarity motives

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa said Saturday there is "still no justice" in Poland and that workers must keep fighting for the ideals of the outlawed Solidarity labor federation.

In a statement issued to mark the May Day workers' holiday this Wednesday, Walesa said Poles are still being arrested for advocating the right to form independent trade unions, barred from having a voice in economic policy, and subjected to continued higher prices.

Solidarity, the first and only free trade union movement in the Soviet bloc, was legalized by the Polish Communist government following worker strikes in 1980. It was suspended under martial law in December 1981 and outlawed in 1982. Martial law was lifted the following year.

May Day symbolizes "the organized struggle of workers for justice, bread and freedom," Walesa said in a taped message played over the telephone to Western correspondents by an aide. "This struggle continues and we cannot this year in Poland celebrate its victorious end."

"There is still no justice and we still have no possiblity to create trade unions freely," Walesa said. "There is still no freedom. The system of repression has been expanded."

Walesa, who was Solidarity charman and who won the Noble Peace Prize in 1983, did not join calls by underground Solidarity organizations for counter-demonstrations to government-sanctioned parades on Wednesday, but he added:

"There is no other solution for us all than to continue with the idea of Solidarity, fight for legalizing our union until we reach our end, fight for the reform of the state."

Underground groups in cities including Warsaw, Krakow and Wroclaw have called for anti-government demonstrations this May Day, which in past years has been mark3xXmprotesters and riot police.

West German government says visit meant to encourage peace

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The West German government, holding firm on its plan to have President Reagan visit a German military cemetery next month, said Saturday the visit is meant to encourage peace, not "to whitewash the Nazis."

"Too many Americans and politicans in Washington still think we are trying to whitewash the Nazis, or detract from their crimes. But this was never our intent," government spokesman Peter Boenisch said in a television interview.

"Our intent was ... to remember the victims of war without considering their nationality, and to pray for peace," he said.

He said the government had not been swayed by a U.S. Senate vote Friday calling on Reagan to cancel the May 5 visit to the Bitburg cemetery where 49 members of the Nazi SS are buried along with about 2,000 other German soldiers.

SS duties included guarding Nazi death camps and carrying out the extermination of millions of Jews and other victims of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich.

Boenisch would not say whether Reagan would lay a wreath at the cemetery. "For my taste there has been too much talk for days over protocol details, and the real sense of the visit has been pushed into forgetfulness," he said.

"The president comes as our friend and he comes to make a gesture of reconciliation. I am sure the Germans will understand it, and that especially the Bitburgers will understand it. They will give the president a friendly and hearty welcome," he said.

Earlier, the Welt am Sonntag (World on Sunday) newspaper quoted a top official of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's political party as saying he did not believe "that we in West Germany need another de-Nazification program including soldiers' graves after 40 years of democratic growth and in the face of the current threat to our freedom from the totalitarian Soviet system."

The official, Heiner Geissler, is general secretary of Kohl's Christian Democratic Union.

After World War II, the victorious allies conducted a "de-Nazification" program in occupied Germany, aimed at removing former Nazis from prominent positions in society.

Excerpts from the interview with the Hamburg newspaper were released Saturday to news organizations in Bonn.

On Friday a spokesman said the government would not be swayed by a bipartisan appeal from 257 members of the U.S. House of Representatives, who asked Kohl to cancel the invitation for Reagan to visit the cemetery.

Government officials and city fathers in Bitburg were irritated by the controversy. Bitburg Mayor Theo Hallet said representatives of the U.S. military have taken part in wreath-laying ceremonies at the cemetery every year since 1959.

Another leader in Kohl's party, parliamentary floor leader Alfred Dregger, also defended the Bitburg visit Saturday.

"The current controversy in West Germany and the United States shows that such ceremonies (as the Bitburg trip), and the discussions that surround them, are necessary," Dregger said in an interview with Hesse Radio.

"When one views the U.S. television films that ridicule German and Japanese soldiers, for example, one must conclude such films do not serve as an accurate historical source," he said. "They serve neither truth, nor reconciliation. (Therefore) we Germans should enter such discussions with directness."

Fire kills 78 people in psychiatric hospital

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A fire that killed 78 people and injured 192 in a private mental hospital trapped many of the patients in their beds and forced others to leap to their deaths from windows, authorities said Saturday.

Investigators said the cause of the Friday night fire was still not known.

A nearby resident told of tales of heroism by young passersby, who broke down doors to carry out patients and stricken employees.

The state-run news agency Telam, quoting unidentified sources, said a kitchen worker told authorities the fire at the six-story Saint Emillon Neuropsychiatric Institute, in suburban Saavedra, was started by a patient with a history of pyromania.

"We have not ruled out the possibility that it (the fire) was started by a patient," said a spokesman at the federal police headquarter's press office.

The spokesman, as is customary, spoke on condition he not be identified.

He said federal police had confirmed 78 people perished and 192 were injured. Other police and judicial officials put the death count at 61. There was no immediate explanation for the discrepancy.

The patients, including many old people, suffered from a variety of mental ailments, ranging from senility to psychotic disorders and drug addiction.

Precinct Police Chief Gaston Pita said 407 patients and dozens of nurses and other workers were in the blue-tiled, brick building when the fire started.

Authorities at the scene said the fire broke out on the first floor about 9 p.m., after most of the patients had gone to bed. It quickly spread to the upper floors, which were the heaviest damaged.

"Some patients leaned out the windows and we could hear them screaming, 'Oh my God!'" said Irene Castro, 24, who lives nearby. "You could hear explosions as windows shattered."

"A nurse, wrapped in a mattress, jumped from the sixth floor and was killed," she said. Police later identified the nurse as Beatriz Bustos, 34.

Jose Almazan, 57, another neighbor, said, "It was all an incredible ball of fire."

He said young passersby braved smoke and flames to rescue patients. "They broke down doors and brought out many patients and employees," he said.

Twelve fire companies were called to the scene and fought for three hours to bring the fire under control. Like nearly all Buenos Aires buildings, the hospital had no outside fire escapes.

Authorities worked for hours to remove bodies from the building. Firemen said many patients were found dead in their beds.

Pita said many victims were charred beyond recognition and that some of the other bodies showed signs of death by asphyxiation.

An estimated 190 patients who survived the blaze were taken to a nearby church, where they spent part of the night on mattresses scattered over the floor. A church worker said they were later taken to other hospitals or institutions.

Kinfolk gathered outside steel police barriers erected around the hospital and pleaded for information.

Candidate for rural elections assasinated

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A candidate for next month's rural subdistrict elections was assassinated in front of his home, police said Saturday.

Gunmen called Mahmudur Rahman, 36, from his home on Thursday and killed him, said police in Jhenidah district, 156 miles northwest of Dhaka.

Rahman was one of six candidates for the office of chairman of Harinakundu subdistrict in Jhenidah. The elections are scheduled for May 16 and May 20.

Police said they were trying to determine the motive, and no arrests have been made.

India wants church out

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indian authorities are trying to keep the Unification Church of America out of India and have alerted intelligence officials against allowing supporters of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon to buy land, The Hindustan Times newspaper reported.

It said that Moonies held a seminar in February in Goa, a beach resort in southwestern India, and offered "fabulous prices" for land there.

Goa, a former Portugese colony, is a territory administered by the federal government of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

The paper said officials in Goa have told the intelligence and district administrators to monitor the growth of the Moon movement. The government's purported objection to the Unification Church was not explained.

Moon, 65, who founded the church in South Korea in 1954, now is serving an 18-month term in the Danbury, Conn. federal prison for income tax fraud.

Journalist dies in plunge

TOKYO (AP) — A 53-year-old French freelance journalist died in a plunge from the top of a nine-story building in Tokyo, police said Saturday.

An officer of the Tokyo police, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Jean Andre Robert Duquesnay plunged Friday from the 102-foot-high Toho Twin Tower building near the Ginza, Japan's bustling shopping district.

He said Duquesnay had been suffering recently from neurosis.

The officer said the Frenchman had visited Japan "several times" to cover mainly engineering-related news.

Nine people imprisoned

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — A Dutch truck driver and eight other people have been sentenced to prison for smuggling Czechoslovaks and Romanians to West Germany through Hungary, the official news agency MTI reported Friday.

It said Hermanus van Bemmel of the Netherlands was sentenced to six years on Friday by a Budapest court, and that a West German charged as an accomplice, Josef Dittrich, drew 3½ years.

The seven others, all Hungarians or Hungarian residents, were sentenced to terms ranging from 10 months to three years.

The agency said the group charged $1,500 to $3,200 a head to smuggle out Romanians and Czechoslovaks in trucks.

The two Westerners also smuggled in "technical articles," MTI said. The sentences are under appeal.

Clash injures 40 people

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Clashes between police and passenger-tricycle pullers in the port city of Chittagong injured at least 40 people, including 10 police, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The English-language daily The New Nation said the trouble began Friday over a purported assault by a traffic patrolman on a tricycle puller who violated traffic rules in Chittagong, 186 miles southeast of Dhaka.

The paper said two police vans and 13 tricycles were damaged in the violence, and police arrested 14 people.

Police were not immediately available for confirmation of the report.

Picasso etching stolen

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — A 1968 Picasso etching valued at $3,000 has been stolen from the Picasso museum here, an official said Saturday.

The etching, measuring 4 inches by 5½ inches, depicts a couple making love.

The official said it was stolen late Friday.

Soviets criticize trip

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin on Saturday criticized Secretary of State George P. Shultz's planned trip to the Middle East, calling it "fresh evidence of Washington's stubborn intention to follow the policy of separate deals" in the region.

The official Soviet news agency Tass also renewed criticism of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak's proposal for peace talks between Israeli representatives and a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation under American and Egyptian auspices.

In a commentary, Tass said Shultz' trip, scheduled to begin May 10 in Israel, "is fresh evidence of Washington's stubborn intention to follow the policy of separate deals, that would enable Israel ... to bring direct pressure to bear on some Arab countries so that they agree to maximum concessions at the expense of their national interests."

Tass again called for an international conference on the Middle East. The Soviet Union has long demanded it be included in any negotiations for a settlement in the region.

U.S. accused of spying

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea charged Saturday that U.S. spy planes violated the communist country's airspace 13 times this month.

In a broadcast monitored in Tokyo, the official (North) Korean Central News Agency said the latest incident occurred Friday when a high-speed, high-altitude SR-71 plane flew off Sonbong, in North Hamkyong province in northeastern Korea, for eight minutes.

The news agency said the purported incident "clearly shows that the U.S. imperialists are persisting in new war preparations even after the end of the aggressive 'Team Spirit '85' joint military exercises, deliberately aggravating the situation on the Korean peninsula."

The exercises, 10th in an annual series, began Feb. 1 and are to end Tuesday.

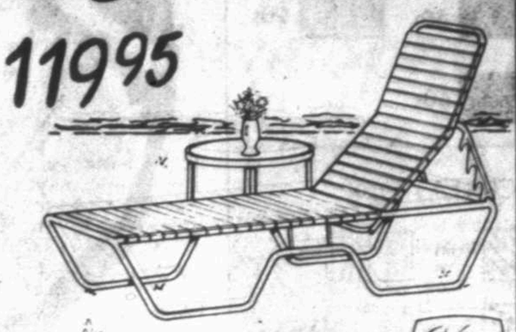

About 200,000 South Korean and U.S. military personnel are involved in the exercises, which South Korea and the United States maintain are defensive in nature.

MMH expands laboratory services

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Decreasing hospital revenues due to Medicare changes over the last year have prompted hospitals nationwide to search for new and innovative ways to raise money.

Midland Memorial Hospital, with its expansion of outpatient surgery and discussion on providing home health care, has recently begun another aggressive money-maker — expansion of its laboratory services to nursing homes, physicians and smaller hospitals.

"Since DRGs (Diagnosis Related Groups) and increased government regulation, the hospital revenues have gone down," said John Stevenson, manager of the MMH laboratory. "The only way the lab will make it is to generate more revenues."

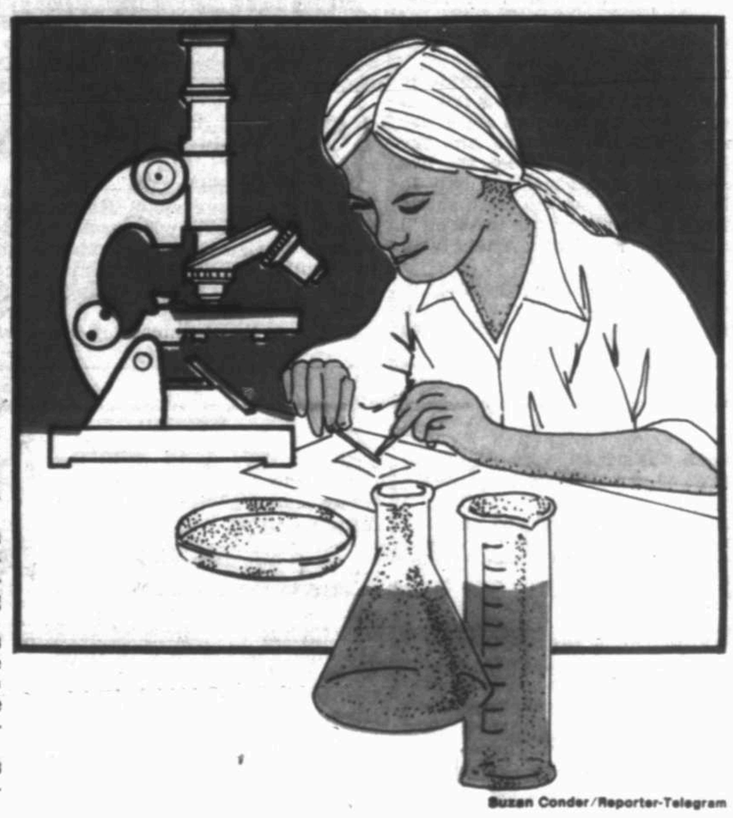

Stevenson admits that MMH has entered an already competitive market with seven large "outside" companies and three local labs operating in Midland.

"I'm sure that the service is affecting the independents a little bit," he said. "We're not trying to run anyone out of business, but the only way we can survive is to compete."

Stevenson explained how changes in Medicare have decreased revenue.

"Medicare used to be like a parent with a kid in college," he said. "The parent gives the kid a credit card and says, 'send me the bill.'"

"But now Medicare only pays a certain amount, which gives us a real incentive to cut costs."

Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

MMH first began pushing for outside customers "about two months ago" and has already shown a profit.

"We have already made $8,000," said Stevenson. "Our projected goal for the first year was $28,000."

Currently, the MMH lab is testing for 10 clients and in the future will include Martin County Hospital in Stanton.

"Martin County Hospital will be the first hospital to use the MMH program," said Stevenson. "MMH personnel will be making a daily courier run to draw blood and pick up specimens for testing."

MCH's director, Larry Elliott, saw the MMH service as beneficial to both hospitals.

"Some may look at the two hospitals as competitors, but we are associates, striving to meet the medical needs of area residents," he said. "Close associations of small rural hospitals such as Midland Memorial Hospital could be the answer for the survival of all."

Reaction to the venture from other Midland laboratories has been mixed.

"I think it's good," said Mike Peterson, owner of Permian Basin Lab. "It increases competition, although it is certainly not going to help me."

Peterson opened his lab six months ago.

"It's a tough market," he said. "I've been marketing pretty heavily and this means that I will have to do even more marketing."

Peterson, a former hospital employee, sees some potential problems with the expanded services.

"From a person who has worked in a hospital, I can tell you that outpatient work gets pushed aside," he said. "My main concern was emergency and in-hospital work. It gets top priority over work that comes from outside the hospital."

Management can also be a problem, he stated.

"When you get county hospital politics involved, there can be a problem," he said. "It must be run like a business."

Stevenson agrees.

Odessa surgeons' lawsuit continued

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A lawsuit filed against Medical Center Hospital, three physicians, insurance companies and adjusters by two Odessa orthopedic surgeons, originally set to be tried in federal court Monday, has been continued by U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton until July.

Dr. Stephen E. Driscoll, 40, and his father, Dr. Edward T. Driscoll, are seeking damages that range from a low of $20 million to a high of $755 million should they be severed from the surgical staff of MCH.

The Driscolls specifically allege competing orthopedic surgeons Dr. Thomas Meek, Dr. Phillip Zeeck and Dr. Ronald Manicom have libeled and slandered them by terming their surgical procedures as "incompetent," "horrible" and "unnecessary."

They further allege the three competing physicians have violated federal and state antitrust laws by trying to "monopolize" the bone-and-joint medical trade in Odessa by consistently "understating the percentage of disability and impairment" of patients and thereby getting kickbacks from workers' compensation insurance carriers.

Additionally, the Driscolls allege their characters have been defamed by insurance carriers and adjusters who have labeled them "knife happy." They claim they have been "blacklisted" by the carriers and adjusters.

Last January, Bunton issued an eight-point order forbidding infringements on the professional rights of the Odessa father-son surgical team by any of the parties to the suit.

Bunton's order specifically enjoined defendants in the suit from:

— "Interfering with plaintiffs' ability to practice orthopedic surgery at Medical Center Hospital; obstructing justice and harassing, intimidating or retaliating in any manner against any witness, potential witness or party to these proceedings.

— "Monitoring the elective surgery in any manner performed by the plaintiffs at Medical Center Hospital or any other clinic."

The MCH surgical committee has charged the Driscolls with such practices as using "unprofessional language and behavior" in the operating room; "inconsistent, inadequate and inappropriate" pre-operative evaluations; "superficial evaluations" which resulted in "early or unnecessary operative intervention;" "episodes of excessive use of medication;" "conflicts with nurses," and "unorthodox use of traditional treatment."

— "Publishing any written statements which might tend to interfere with the plaintiffs' professional practice.

— "Conditioning workers' compensation benefits, payments of medical bills or payment for medication or...treatment upon an agreement by claimants to stop receiving treatment or refraining from receiving treatment from plaintiffs.

— "Reviewing the medical records of plaintiffs' patients and interviewing plaintiffs' patients without plaintiffs' permission."

— "Charging plaintiffs' patients additional fees or deposits not required of other physicians' patients.

— "Instructing employees not to seek the plaintiffs' care.

— "Injuring plaintiffs' business or professional practice by use of extortion or commercial bribery.

CENTENNIAL CHRONICLES

Women's group leads cultural development

By MARY JANE WARREN

Mary Jane Warren is a former executive secretary and has lived in Midland 28 years. She is a member of the Midland Writers Club and the Texas Nightwriters.

The year was 1903 in Midland, a small town in West Texas with a population of less than 1,000 when the Stitch and Chatter Club met in the home of Mrs. O.B. Holt to sew, discuss topics of interest and enjoy tea and desserts. Among those present were Mmes. George D. Elliott, F.F. Gary, W.L. Holmsley, Charles Gibbs, J.E. Taylor and James S. Day. On this day, they decided to project the energies of the club into completely different channels, which would include both cultural and educational activities. Mrs. Holt presided and was elected president. The name of the club was changed to the Woman's Wednesday Club, and their studies would henceforth include classical literature, music, opera, art and current miscellaneous topics. Thus the oldest women's club in Midland emerged from humble origin to become a vital force in the early cultural, educational and civic development of the community.

IN THE FOLLOWING years, the members diligently prepared their assignments according to their current outline of study. Sometimes Mrs. R.D. Shaw would bring her victrola and they would listen to her collection of operatic records. They explored and discussed such subjects as "White Slaves of Vice," "Votes for Women," current fashions, changing ethical values, modern dances, welfare of the children of Midland County and contemporary literature.

The Woman's Wednesday Club joined the Midland Library Association March 18, 1904. The club established a Library Fund within its membership and gave plays, "42" parties, theater box parties and ice cream suppers to raise money. A small building was acquired and sparsely equipped and furnished. To help defray the expense of keeping the library open several days a week, the building was rented occasionally for $5 an evening. Members of the Woman's Wednesday Club voted to withdraw their active interest from the library after Oct. 1, 1925. On Jan. 1, 1929, the Midland Public Library was presented to the county and in November 1934 the club sponsored the establishment of a memorial book shelf with the Midland County Library designated as the receiving agent for the volumes. In January 1949, plans were made for expanding the memorial book effort and at that time February was designated Memorial Book Month. The Woman's Wednesday Club also joined with the Altrusa Club in organizing a citywide Friends of the Library group.

AT THE REQUEST of the Midland Commercial Club in 1911, the club became active in matters concerning the city of Midland. They gave their support to clean-up campaigns, sanitation in the schools and joined with the Ninety-Nine Club in planting trees on the fairgrounds.

The women constantly embarked upon new ventures for the cultural betterment of Midland. They urged theater managers to improve the quality of their movies, established scholarships, bought playground equipment for schools and, at a time when there was less than $2 in their treasury, they confidently voted to present Midland High School with a $45 Century Dictionary. They "borrowed" from their private Library Fund to meet these costs, then held a series of luncheons and teas to replace the money. For a percentage of the proceeds, they sponsored musical evenings in voice and piano, speech recitals and evenings at the opera. In 1914 they compiled a Midland Cook Book and sold it for 35 cents a copy.

In 1917, the beginning of America's participation in World War I, the club voted to suspend their activities and engage in Red Cross work. Every Wednesday they met in the Red Cross sewing room (later changed to members' homes). They decided to allocate the annual dues to their private library fund and to hold a benefit entertainment each month to raise money for yarn, knitting needles and other supplies for the Red Cross. In 1918, they completed a course in surgical dressing at the Red Cross Room.

Each year the members of the Woman's Wednesday Club entertained their husbands, usually during the holiday season. Sometimes they would have a box party at a benefit picture show, followed by a supper at a member's home. At one time, a bird hunt on the Holt Ranch was planned, and another time a beefsteak dinner where all came in costume, and biographical sketches of each husband were read. These events wee gala affairs demonstrating the ingenuity and imagination of the hostesses.

ALTHOUGH THE Woman's Wednesday Club had been affiliated with the State Federation of Women's Clubs since 1903, it wasn't until March 1, 1930, that they became a member of the city federation. With this affiliation, a change in pace became noticeable in the selection and carrying out of their projects. The large scope of the federation required more time and energy spent in cooperation with other affiliates. Nevertheless, the women of the Wednesday Club steadfastly held to their original purpose of organization and maintained their interesting programs.

In April 1953, there was a celebration on the club's 50th anniversary. The Midland Woman's Club was a bower of pink and white carnations (the Wednesday Club flower and color). Twelve hundred invitations were sent and the club members made up the house party on the day of the Anniversary Tea. They wore corsages (made by the committee) of pink and white carnations outlined with simulated leaves made from pipe cleaners dipped in gilt paint. The day of the celebration, the invited guests were greeted by smiling, gilt-fingered hostesses.

As the years passed, the Federation of Women's Clubs kept the women busy supporting bills presented to the State Legislature and donations to many fundraisers to help support the federation. They wrote letters to those in power, seeking to raise the standard of movie and radio programs and the contents of comic books. They wrote to representatives in Washington, D.C., urging them to vote against socialized medicine and endorsed such legislation as punishment for driving while intoxicated in a petition sent to Gov. Preston Smith. In the matter of state legislation, they supported the passage of such bills as property rights of women and appropriation of funds to the Panama Monument.

Simple homecoming celebration just my style

Not being much of a world traveler — I don't think a couple of one-nighters in a Mexican border town qualifies me for membership in the jet set class — I was curious as to what my reaction would be when I returned from three weeks in China.

Would I get down on my hands and knees and kiss the American soil like the students in Grenada did?

Would I, as that 747 touched ground in San Francisco, suddenly break into a rousing rendition of "God Bless America?"

Would I get a lump in my throat, realizing once and for all that while it is fun and educational to see other parts of the world, the good old U.S.A. is still the only place to live?

Would I, after seeing the restrictions placed on individuals in communistic countries, become overwhelmed with guilt feelings for not having served my country during the Vietnam War?

The answers to the four above-mentioned questions, I'm embarrassed to say, are: no, no, no and no.

Don't get me wrong. I did gain a very real appreciation for this country. I don't want to live anywhere else. China is a lovely place to visit, but, all things considered, the little peasants, nattily attired in their drab blue Mao suits, can keep it.

Still, flag waving is not my style. Neither is kissing the ground. That's why I refrained from celebrating on my hands and knees.

No, I did it the way I always thought I would. I found a friendly-looking pub, plopped down on the corner barstool, ordered a Scotch, fired up a Marlboro and delved into some serious people watching. American style. Better yet, San Francisco style.

And, what a grand success it was. Almost immediately I was surrounded by three characters who appeared to have leaped from the pages of a cheap paperback novel.

There was a rather large gentleman, dressed in a three-piece suit and fedora, mumbling something about having just received notice that the IRS was auditing him for the past three years.

"Who keeps their damn records from three years ago?" he asked no one in particular.

I shrugged a sympathetic shrug and offered to buy him a drink.

He accepted. It seemed to perk him up.

"Want to get married and move to Paraguay?" he asked the bartender, who fortunately was female but who didn't strike me as one of your intellectual types.

"Sure," she replied. "What's in Paraguay?"

I smiled, pleased that my initial observation had been so astute.

"Who cares? As long as it's not the IRS."

We all laughed. I bought a round for the four of us, the newest addition being a waitress who was enjoying some slack time since the bar was beginning to empty.

Her story was semi-interesting, though not all that unusual for someone who earns a living waiting on tables in a San Francisco drinking hole.

"I want to move to London and become a rock star," she announced, seemingly unembarrassed by her words. "I've already written a couple of songs. Maybe you'll be buying them someday."

"Sure," I thought. "Right after you purchase my bestseller."

I thought that but I didn't say it. People need dreams and if this particular person, who seemed harmless enough, wanted to fantasize about the bright lights of London, more power to her.

I was listening to her explain, in laborious detail, why it was absolutely essential that an aspiring rock star learn the trade in London, when the bartender suddenly gushed, "Let's drink a toast to my marriage."

"And to Paraguay," added the gentleman, shaking his head in disbelief as he stared at the IRS letter.

"Sounds good to me," I said. "A bottle of your finest champagne. It's on me."

It was at that point, as I look back on the events of the evening, that I should have come to my senses, scribbled the old signature on the tab, wished everyone well and headed back to the hotel.

I emphasize the word "should." Unfortunately, I didn't. Instead, I hung around long enough to buy three more bottles of the bubbly stuff, with which we took turns toasting London, Paraguay and China. As I recall, I also bought a club sandwich for Little Miss Rock-'n-Roll.

My bill soared into triple figures and I'll never see those three people again. But, for some bizarre reason, I didn't care.

I was home and I was happy.

Adults share in Sesame Street joy

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Joining in the search for Big Bird are buddies Bert, left, and Ernie. Sesame Street Live presentations continue today at Chaparral Center in Midland.

The crowd at Friday night's performance of Sesame Street Live in Midland's Chaparral Center proved beyond all doubt that not all Sesame Street fans are 5 years old — the numbers of adults in the audience at least equaled the numbers of children.

OK, so some of the adults were there to please their children or grandchildren; but many were there with babies too young to appreciate either the live performance or the original Sesame Street, public television's most famous children's show.

Maybe that's not too surprising. Many of today's young parents were small children when the series first was broadcast in 1969, and were in the first generation of Sesame Street fans.

While the crowd at the presentation of "Missing Bird Mystery" wasn't as enormous as the audience at a rock concert, what it lacked in numbers it made up in spirit. Audience participation was high as the children — and their parents — clapped and stomped and rubbed their heads during a rousing dance number. And many joined in when the troupe sang old favorites from Sesame Street, such as "The People in Your Neighborhood," "Rubber Ducky" and "Sing, Sing a Song."

The story began with the entire New York City Department of Missing Birds, led by Inspector Fortescu Farquar, arriving in Midland to search for — what else? — a missing bird. It seems they had been given a report of a missing 8-foot-tall yellow canary and had traced the bird's tracks to Midland. The inspector, busily taking down information, asked the audience if they knew the name of the bird.

"BIG BIRD!" screamed thousands of young voices.

Soon the policemen were joined in the search by Sesame Street favorites Ernie, Bert, Cookie Monster, the Count, Prairie Dawn and even resident hero Super Grover, as well as the baker, doctor, student, carpenter and other "people in your neighborhood."

All were puzzled as to why their feathered friend disappeared until Oscar the Grouch announced he had played a joke on Big Bird by telling him that everyone had forgotten the bird's birthday even though the whole gang was planning a surprise party for him. Big Bird was not amused — in fact, he was so hurt he had run away.

Enter Phineas T. Barnswallow, conniver and proprietor of the Barnswallow's Barnstorming Aviary, and his four seedy birds Tangerine, Miranda, Eduardo and Victor. These five shady characters find the sad Big Bird and convince him to join their troupe.

What followed was a tribute to friendship, as Big Bird's friends from home try to figure out a way they can all stay together. And like television's Sesame Street, the live performance managed not only to tell a story but also to teach subtle lessons in numbers with the song "I Just Adore Four" and letters, with "C is for Cookie."

Presented by VEE Corporation in cooperation with Children's Television Workshop, Sesame Street Live gave Sesame Street's residents a new dimension while keeping them as accurate as possible. Colors were bright and costumes were true to the famous television characters'. The pre-recorded dialogue and music not only insured the accuracy of the characters' voices, but let the actors save their breath for their vigorous and enthusiastic dances.

Strobe lights gave a new dimension to a Keystone Kops-type chase and caused an appreciative "Oh, wow!" from at least one adult in the audience. A sparkling, revolving disco light was the right touch for Cookie Monster's up-tempo rendition of "C is for Cookie."

And the highlight of one musical number was Grover Monster breakdancing — on roller skates.

The action was lively, the sets and costumes were colorful and the ending, of course, was happy.

Sesame Street Live will present two more performances of "Missing Bird Mystery," at 1:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. today at Chaparral Center. Tickets are $8 and may be purchased at Chaparral Center box office.

CLUB

In February 1949, they joined in voting to change the name from City-County Federation to Midland Woman's Club, Inc. Soon thereafter, members of the Woman's Wednesday Club were appointed to key positions for the building of the Midland Woman's Club facility. Wednesday Club members pledged $1,000 to become a shareholder of the Midland Woman's Club, to be paid in two $500 installments, and it was paid on time. The building was completed in March 1954.

In November 1975, the Woman's Wednesday Club voted to withdraw from the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs. Thus began a new and more relaxed era for the club although the members continued their activities in much the same pattern.

In the 1960s, the Midland Woman's Club became a popular place for lunch in their tea room, which was served every weekday for $1.50 per plate. To keep pace with this popularity, Fraces Kerr, chairman of the ways and means committee, seized upon every opportunity to raise money. Most of the projects bore the imprint of her blithe spirit by their inviting titles. She sold "Opportunity Tickets" on a fur wrap from Grammer-Murphey. There was the Sugar Plum Tea and a Mexican supper complete with orchestra. A "Garagarama" netted an even bigger profit. There followed a Three-Ring Circus, a Roman Holiday, a May Day Matinee and customers even traveled to the South Sea for "An Evening in Polynesia."

The Woman's Wednesday Club celebrated its 80th anniversary April 6, 1983. Lola Adams and Estelleen Nelson dressed in hats and gloves of the early 1960s and presented the club's history. Frances Kerr spoke about the club's 50th Anniversary Tea. Hostesses were Victoria Chapple and Minnie German.

TODAY, IN Midland's centennial year, the Woman's Wednesday Club is still "alive and well" although there have been times when the flower committee functioned more frequently than others during times of illness and sorrow. As in most groups, the ebb and flow of old and new members has become more pronounced and the roster changed more often with the passing of the years. Some members have dropped out, some moved away and some have died, but the newer members have tried to bridge the interruptions and ease the losses as they go about their club activities. Through the years, the women have held a special regard for one another, and they still enter into their chosen projects wholeheartedly and unswerving in purpose. With this continuing thoughtfulness and devotion, the Woman's Wednesday Club may be pursuing its goals when the next centennial is celebrated.

• • •

Special recognition should be given to Lola Adams, historian of the Woman's Wednesday Club, who provided her albums, and to Estelleen Nelson for her articles in "The Midlander" which appeared in April 1971 and in 1983.

Centennial Chronicles will appear on this page each Sunday through July 7 in observance of Midland's Centennial. The columns were contributed by local writers in cooperation with the Midland Centennial Commission.

LAB

"Lab-wise, we have to think of it as a business," he said.

The idea of running a county hospital as a business, however, has at least one laboratory owner upset.

"They are a county institution whether they act like it or not," said Mark Pace, owner of Pace Clinical Laboratory. "I am opposed to them entering the outpatient market. They are a county organization subsidized by my tax money."

Pace indicated that MMH's entrance into the outpatient market could set a precedent for other organizations.

"Why can't a county garage say, 'gee, why can't we advertise tune-ups for $10,'" he said. "I pay tax money. Why should I fuel a competitor?"

Pace said that still another aspect of MMH's expansion into the private sector included plans for the purchase of West Texas Pathology Laboratory.

A MMH spokeswoman denied the plan.

"We haven't closed any avenues," said Cynthia Brust, public relations director. "But at this point we haven't made any definite decision to purchase anything."

Bud Wakefield, director of Physicians and Surgeons Laboratory, stated he already used MMH for some testing.

"The things I don't do here, I send over to MMH," he said.

Another laboratory, Midland Nuclear Consultants, said that MMH's move would not affect them.

"We have all the business we need," said a spokeswoman. "All of our work is done here."

Midland Nuclear Consultants performs testing primarily for cardiac patients.

People of our community who make a difference.

"Maybe, I'm the conscience of the community," says Midge Erskine. With degrees in geology and biology, this Midlander has a tremendous understanding of the West Texas environment both above and below the surface.

This bird lover's concern for the environment has determined a number of her roles in our community. Her most time-consuming task is taking care of sick, wounded, and young birds which are brought to her by various agencies and private citizens. She also takes care of sick fawns from Texas parks.

Mrs. Erskine says, "People find a critter and think it's abandoned. They think this will make a great pet. Then they don't know how to take care of it."

For ten years she has been taking care of these unfortunate "critters" and encouraging people not to attempt to make pets out of wild animals.

Her husband, Woody, sets their broken bones and Mrs. Erskine spends hours-on-end feeding hundreds of big and small birds of many species. The goal she says is to return them to their natural environment. A West Texas environment of which she says, "has its own beauty."

In the midst of a demanding feeding schedule, Mrs. Erskine takes her pet bird Lokie (the god of mischief) and others to the schools for special presentations. Her goal is to "help people understand the place in the environment for each species."

In addition, Mrs. Erskine gives programs for many Midland organizations like the Scouts and the League of Women Voters. She is also frequently consulted about the protection of our ground water sources.

Mrs. Erskine's acute understanding of our environment and willingness to speak out are why she makes a difference in Midland.

Clean Midland, Inc., honors its corps of volunteers

From Staff Reports

During Keep America Beautiful Week, Clean Midland, Inc., took time to recognize the volunteers who have done more than clean the town.

In keeping with the Keep America Beautiful Clean Community System concept, about 75 people, divided into seven committees, strive throughout the year to modify the attitudes and habits of Midlanders so that litter in town is no longer the accepted norm.

Richard Wigzell, a member of the Business and Industry Committee, works with fellow volunteers to create a corps of responsible business people from whom they can receive support and input toward keeping a clean community.

The committee's largest undertaking has been in preparation for last Friday's National Litterbag Day. They secured 18 local business sponsors for litterbags, and supervised the printing and distribution of them. Sponsors were Albertson's, Atlantic Richfield Company, The Bar, Energas, Exxon Company, U.S.A., First City National Bank, Gulf Oil Corporation, The Iron Press, Leflor-Wigzell Insurance Company, Mannings, Mims and Stephens Insurance Company, Petroplex Savings, RepublicBank First National Midland, Texaco, Texas American Bank, Texas Electric Service Company, Western Specialty Advertising and Western State Bank.

"One of our current goals is to help get the Sesquicentennial Park (proposed to be located at the corner of Big Spring and Marienfeld) underway," Wigzell said. A continuing goal is to improve the appearance of the central business district, he added.

The committee has accomplished this to a degree, by fostering proper waste handling through business sponsorship of an additional eight new permanent trash receptacles. Businesses and organizations who sponsored the new receptacles include Discovery Mud Company, Midland Center, Midland Board of Realtors, Midland Memorial Hospital, Midland Reporter Telegram and Petroplex Savings.

The Civic Committee, headed by Doug Palmer, deals directly with community groups to educate them and to solicit their help for ongoing Clean Midland projects. The committee most recently helped secure the Midland Optimist Club and the West Side Lions Club to aid elderly and handicapped residents move items to their alleyways for the Clean Midland Spring Clean-Up Campaign. Committee members also worked with the Boy Scouts to present the 1985 Scout-O-Rama.

Schools Committee Chairman Larry Wilkinson said that as a Clean Midland Volunteer, he benefits as much through the knowledge and satisfaction he receives as the children benefit from the services he helps provide.

"I think being a volunteer is the only way to get involved in the community," Wilkinson said. "It's a good feeling, and I like it."

The Schools Committee is working to incorporate into Midland schools a structured curriculum from Keep America Beautiful, called "Waste in Place." The committee is also involved in helping children become familiar with Captain Clean, Clean Midland's official mascot.

The Municipal Committee's job is to educate the public via city ordinances. Warren Cloyd, chairman, reviews city policies and actions for reducing litter, and evaluates the Quality health care goes beyond the correct dosage of medication given at the proper time. Health care is compassion, understanding and love, administered in generous proportions. Health care is service that comes from the heart.

We are a locally-owned health care provider that has been caring for Midland and Odessa under the Upjohn name since October, 1973. Our experience and emphasis for the "care" in health care, are traditions of our philosophy and people who live here. We are still the same — nothing has changed but our name.

Our nurses, therapists and health care professionals provide the quality home and private duty care your physicians demand — but, we don't stop there. To us, "Service from the Heart" is more than a slogan; it's a way of life!

effectiveness of these. The committee is currently working on a brochure to outline information on everything from landfill charges to ways to curtail illegal dumping on private property.

The Membership Committee seeks support for Clean Midland from citizens by conducting periodic membership drives. Membership Chairman Gail Brimer reports there are more than 60 Clean Midland members for 1985, with donations to date at $3,450. To help members understand how their funds are used and become more involved in Clean Midland's activities, the membership and Communications Committees plan to publish a quarterly newsletter.

Serving as a common link to all Clean Midland Committees is Communications, headed by Susan Atchison.

"We publicize not just what Clean Midland is doing, but also what people can do to keep Midland clean," Ms. Atchison said. This involves the creation of pre-recorded TV and radio PSA's, an effective slide presentation and clever posters, ads and news articles, as well as the quarterly membership newsletter. Communications works continuously with all other committees in an effort to promote a clean community.

Michael Higgins is chairman of the Park Development Committee. They are in the planning stages of developing a park in conjunction with the Parks and Recreation Department, celebrating Texas' 150th birthday in 1986. The primary focus will be on the "Spirit of Volunteerism" within the state, and especially within Midland.

"I think volunteerism is essential in the operation of a healthy community," Higgins said. "Our intent is to promote volunteerism and, at the same time, to enhance the environment. This park will create a grand entrance into the central business district and add to the showcasing of our skyline."

Clean Midland Chairman Robert C. Leibrock oversees the organization's board of directors, its executive coordinator and all volunteers.

"Midland was recently ranked fourth among Texas cities for overall quality of life," Leibrock said. "This ranking can be largely attributed to the volunteer work contributed to the projects of many organizations. Clean Midland is one of the newer organizations and its program is almost totally dependent upon volunteer efforts. Its goals can be achieved only if the vast majority of Midlanders act as volunteers for Clean Midland by being responsible for proper disposl of their own litter."

Clean Midland Executive Coordinator Jane Leslie works closely with all volunteers to clean up Midland by changing their attitudes and habits that encourage them to litter. During this time especially designated for keeping America beautiful, Ms. Leslie's main goal is to help people develop a sense of pride for Midland, thus alleviating thoughtless actions that may curtail the efforts and accomplishments of Clean Midland.

Board discusses involvement in education

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Community involvement in education was the topic of conversation for company presidents, civic leaders and city government officials who were invited to a dinner meeting with State Board of Education members in Austin.

The State Board of Education began holding the monthly dinner meetings earlier this year to provide opportunities for interested individuals to discuss their ideas and concerns about Texas public education.

The meetings also provide a forum for board members to talk about the current status and future course of education.

One area that the board is particularly interested in receiving comments on is long-range goals for education.

The State Board of Education plans to adopt in September a four-year plan that details goals and objectives for Texas public education. The goals will address such education subjects as student performance, curriculum, personnel and school finance.

Among the guests were State Board of Education members Katherine Pearcy Raines of Cleburne and Billy R. Jackson, vice president of the Midland Independent School District board of trustees.

Real Estate today

By Don Harvey

CREATING REAL ESTATE WEALTH

Creating wealth by owning real estate is simple. Really wealth is created by increasing the property's market value. Although inflation helps increase market value of most real estate, smart property investors do not rely on inflation alone. A real estate wealth creator is a person who improves real estate at a cost that is less than the marketplace will pay for the increased value of those improvements.

"Improvements" mean not only new construction but also renovation of existing structures and creating new use for underutilized buildings or underused land.

For example, if a person spends one dollar to improve his or her home and, as a result, that home's market value goes up by two dollars or more, real estate wealth has been created. The person who spends $10,000 adding a bedroom to his home may be adding $20,000 to its market value if there is a demand in that area for larger homes.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC will honor senior citizens

By H.A. TUCK

Senior Citizens' Appreciation Day is scheduled Wednesday at Midland College...and it's one great party! From 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. there'll be senior citizens from all over the Permian Basin and Eastern New Mexico.

Activities are headquartered at the Student Center, and the students really join in the festivities. The schedule includes quite a number of demonstrations by various Senior Citizens Centers, a free catered luncheon, door prizes, and lots of dancing.

• • •

Final spring musical concert is slated for 3 p.m. Sunday in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium, when three of the Commercial Music ensembles give their spring recitals.

You can hear the well-known Roadrunner Band playing country and bluegrass tunes, the Moondance group playing some Top Forty music, and an unnamed group performing soft rock.

It's all free and open to the public. Instructor Jerry Tubb is in charge of the Commercial Music ensembles this semester, assisted by instructor Ron Franklin.

• • •

While you're in the Allison Building, you also can view the Spring Student Art Show. It's another good exhibition, with a wide assortment of drawings, paintings, watercolors, sculpture, fiberwork (that's today's word for weaving) and photography.

This exhibit closes Friday, so you don't have much time to see it. Hours for McCormick Gallery are 1-5 p.m. Sunday, 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. on Friday.

• • •

This year's Athletic Banquet is set for 7 p.m. Thursday in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center. You may purchase tickets through Tuesday afternoon by contacting the Midland College Athletic Office.

The banquet honors all the 1984-85 MC athletic teams, plus the cheerleaders, trainers, and super boosters. It's been another banner year for the Chaps: conference and regional titles, plus fourth in the nation for the basketball team; conference titles and probably regional crowns for the tennis teams. We hope you'll be able to attend.

• • •

Speaking of athletic teams...the tennis teams and golf team took part in Region V tournaments last weekend in Weatherford (golf) and Waco (tennis), seeking NJCAA tournament berths. Don't know how they came out, but they've done well this year.

Congratulations to the tennis teams, who demolished the fields in winning their conference titles. Each team won 8-1 in the conference tournaments in Levelland and each team was favored to win regional titles and trips to the NJCAA tournaments in Florida next month.

• • •

Many faculty and staff members also are being honored this week during a regular faculty meeting Thursday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building. The college president will present 15-, 10- and five-year service awards.

• • •

Midland College publications also have been pulling in honors recently. The college newspaper, El Paisano, was named the best community college newspaper by two different intercollegiate press groups. The college's magazine, Chaparral, also took a third place. Together, the two publications garnered more than 30 individual honors.

And the colleg's basketball program-athletic brochure was named the best in the nation by the National Junior College Athletic Association.

Ralph Sellmeyer, Allison Professor of Journalism, supervises the student publications with a lot of assistance from Elise Coombes. Sellmeyer also was named president of the Texas Community College Journalism Association.

The athletic brochure was produced by the athletic department and the public relations department.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

MORE GENERICS

A new piece of legislation called the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act of 1984 has been passed. It permits the FDA to approve applications for the marketing of generic versions of brand-name drugs that have already been found to be safe and effective. What this means for the consumer is that cheaper versions of many popular prescription drugs are now expected to become available. To get generic drugs approved, firms will now have to show that the product is equivalent to an already approved drug in ingredients, route of administration and therapeutic effect. The drug's labeling must also be the same. However, the costly testing that was needed for approval of the original drug will not have to be duplicated.

Whatever your pharmaceutical needs, it's nice to know there is a full-service pharmacy nearby. Here at SERVICE DRUGS OF MIDLAND, we bring 18 years of experience to bear on the service we provide to you. Thanks, volunteers

The principle of voluntarism is intricately woven into American society. After all, it was an army of volunteers who fought the revolutionary war to bring forth a new nation on the American continent in 1776.

Those brave men made a difference in the life of every American today, more than two centuries later. In those 200 years, more volunteers have added their contributions to American life.

Obviously, they had a motivation for being volunteers in the battle for independence and the battles since. But every volunteer has a motivation for serving. Those motivations vary extensively, but the commitment is always present. It is, after all, commitment that makes voluntarism a viable source of American manpower.

Throughout Midland, numerous agencies and institutions rely on volunteers for a large part of their workforce. This week was observed as Volunteer Recognition Week by the United Way of Midland as a means of saying thanks to all the volunteers who devote countless hours of their time and energy to seeing that the vital work of the different agencies does not go wanting for a lack of manpower.

In addition, a photographic display called "A Day in the Life of People Who Care" was unveiled on April 19. The display shows volunteers in action at various United Way agencies. That is a tribute to the many volunteers in the various United Way agencies.

This recognition for the volunteers is certainly well deserved. They have given much of themselves over a period of years to making life better for all Midlanders.

Voluntarism will continue to make a difference in Midland in the years to come because of the people who care — from the United Way agency volunteers to the volunteers at Midland Memorial Hospital, in the Midland Independent School District and in virtually every other aspect of Midland life.

It seems hardly enough to merely say thanks for all their heartfelt efforts. But, perhaps, genuine thanks is the best payment for service given from the heart.

Thanks, volunteers!

ART BUCHWALD
Reagan's war record lacking

President Reagan has had a great deal of difficulty in the past few weeks with the history of World War II. His first gaffe was to believe that German and American soldiers were buried in the same cemeteries in Germany and could presumably be honored at the same time. His second one was to say that very few of today's Germans remember the war and certainly none of the adults now living participated in any way. And finally, he really flunked the course when he said the soldiers buried at Bitburg were just as much victims of the war as people who died in the Holocaust.

What is one to make of the President's blunders?

There may be clues in a book titled "The Films of Ronald Reagan" by Tony Thomas, published by Citadel Press (1980).

Art Buchwald

Despite being under contract to Warner Brothers, Mr. Reagan did not play in as many World War II movies as one might think. Yet his view of the war and the Nazis could easily have been formed by the ones he did appear in.

In 1941 Ronald Reagan went into action for the first time in a film titled "International Squadron." Mr. Reagan played a daredevil American stunt pilot who ferries a bomber to the RAF in England. Once there he witnesses a child killed in an air raid and joins the RAF to get even with the Nazis. But Reagan doesn't take his flying job seriously and while he's messing around with a French pilot's girlfriend he misses a mission. His American best friend substitutes for him and is killed.

This sobers him up as far as World War II is concerned. He decides to atone for his tacky behavior by knocking out the French pilot and taking his mission. After shooting down several German fighter planes in a smashing dogfight, Reagan dies a fiery heroic death. The important thing to remember is, while there was lots of talk of German bad guys, Reagan never got to meet one personally in the film.

To my knowledge the only time Ronald Reagan ever came face-to-face with the Nazis was in "Desperate Journey," made in 1942. He costars with Errol Flynn as part of the crew of an RAF Flying Fortress. In the film Reagan plays a brash, amusing, irreverent but very brave Yank.

After the RAF plane drops its bombs on Germany it is shot down and the crew are rounded up by a German major (Raymond Massey). The German military in "Desperate Journey" are portrayed not so much as villains as they are bumblers and idiots. (The picture was the "Hogan's Heroes" of its time.) In Reagan's big scene he is being debriefed alone by the major, who thinks the Yank will tell him everything he wants to know about the mission. Instead Ronnie knocks out Massey, and then sits down and eats the major's breakfast.

After this hilarious scene Reagan and the crew find it a breeze to escape and make their way across all of Germany, blowing up half the country with violent acts of sabotage. In a slam-bang finish they manage to steal a German bomber and take off for England with Errol Flynn at the controls. Having wiped out Germany, Flynn turns to Reagan and says, "Now for Australia and a crack at the Japs."

That, as far as I know, was Ronald Reagan's only Hollywood action in the European theater during World War II. He did serve honorably in Burma in "The Hasty Heart," and in the Korean theater in an MGM film titled "Prisoner of War," which was so bad that it is said it hastened Mr. Reagan's decision to go into politics. The President's finest hour was "Hellcats of the Navy," in which Reagan was cast as a naval commander on a sub in the Pacific who wreaks havoc on the Japanese fleet. Not only did Mr. Reagan win the war, but he also won the girl, a nurse played by Nancy Davis, who is now our First Lady of the land.

I detail the films that Mr. Reagan played in for only one reason. It appears the President's Hollywood war record, while distinguished, certainly did not prepare him in any way or shape for the 40th anniversary of the end of hostilities with Nazi Germany. It also might explain why Mr. Reagan is so ignorant of World War II history. Even a bit part in "The Battle of the Bulge" would have made him realize that visiting a German military cemetery where SS soldiers are buried is just not the right thing for an American President to do.

JACK ANDERSON
Nazi hunters facing pressure

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department's Nazi-hunting Office of Special Investigations is under increasing attack from critics, with its funding and its very existence at stake. It may be no coincidence that the demands for OSI's extinction come just as its years of painstaking research have begun paying off in the exposure and deportation of suspected war criminals who had taken refuge in the United States after World War II.

Jack Anderson

As long as the OSI sleuths were just digging quietly into the backgrounds of the accused ex-Nazis, little concern was expressed. Even while the years of legal actions and appeals were grinding along, opposition to the OSI drew little publicity.

But when the OSI hit paydirt, emigre organizations found sympathetic listeners in Congress and the media.

It may also be no coincidence that the often shrill cries for OSI's head coincided with the Reagan administration's heated rhetoric about the Soviet Union as the "evil empire" and the KGB as the architect of subversion worldwide.

For the key point made by OSI's critics is that the evidence against Eastern European ethnic refugees often comes primarily from the Soviets, and is therefore suspect.

To a public conditioned by persuasive reports that the Soviet secret police instigated the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II in Rome, no accusation of malignant manipulation by the KGB would be too farfetched to seem plausible.

But in the case of OSI's targets, the charge of KGB fabrication of evidence fails on three important grounds: The documentary evidence supplied by the Soviets has withstood court challenges in this country and abroad, and has been authenticated through exhaustive scientific testing. Furthermore, the paper trail has been buttressed by personal testimony of surviving eyewitnesses, always under cross-examination by defense attorneys.

Finally, there is no plausible reason why the KGB should have expended the massive effort that would have been required to trump up evidence against dozens of suspected war criminals being investigated by the OSI. Plotting the assassination of a Polish Pope who had sown the seeds of rebellion in a Soviet satellite is one thing; forging police records and payrolls in obscure areas of Nazi-occupied Eastern Europe to nail obscure concentration camp guards in the United States is quite another.

Yet the emigre groups' accusations — often couched in blatantly anti-Semitic terms — have somehow managed to gain some credence, not only on Capitol Hill but at the White House itself. So OSI insiders are understandably nervous when they hear emigre leaders call for an end to the Nazi hunt, or at least a congressional hearing into the validity of Soviet-supplied evidence used by OSI.

In fact, on the very day that Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel was receiving a congressional medal from President Reagan, one emigre group held a press conference a block away urging that all of OSI's cases be suspended until Congress could resolve "questions pertaining to the use of Soviet materials."

When OSI investigators first began their arduous search in 1979, they were aware that the evidence they gathered might be challenged as having been tampered with for political motives. Whenever possible, OSI sources told our associate Lucette Lagnado, the Soviets handed over originals of the incriminating documents.

These were then subjected to careful scientific tests — including extraction of ink and paper samples. Handwriting experts authenticated defendants' signatures on the Soviet-supplied documents. Many of the documents were verified by the defendants themselves. The documents included such mundane items as payroll records, housing registration forms and local police reports filed at the actual time of alleged war crimes.

The emigre groups charge that the eyewitness survivors were coached by the KGB to condemn the OSI suspects. Yet in every single case, according to OSI sources, the witnesses were exposed to cross-examination. And while some were consistent and condemnatory, others were not.

As Allan Ryan, the former head of OSI, put it: "They were not uniformly providing evidence that these defendants were all war criminals. They were about as honest and good as witnesses in this country. Sometimes they were helpful, sometimes not. Sometimes they told the truth and sometimes they lied."

Another View:
Filling Neves' shoes

When Tancredo Neves died April 21, a large measure of the hope of Brazilian democracy died with him. Neves, who was elected in January to become Brazil's first civilian president in 21 years, never served. On the eve of his scheduled inauguration March 15, the 75-year-old Neves was hospitalized for emergency abdominal surgery, while his running mate, Vice President Jose Sarney, was sworn in as acting president. Sarney now succeeds him as president.

Neves was himself not merely the beneficiary, but the chief engineer of Brazil's shift back from military to civilian government, and the majority repository of the country's hope for a democratic future. A centrist with wide contacts in all major sectors of Brazilian life, he negotiated the compromises and built the political alliance that eventually led to his election by Brazil's electoral college.

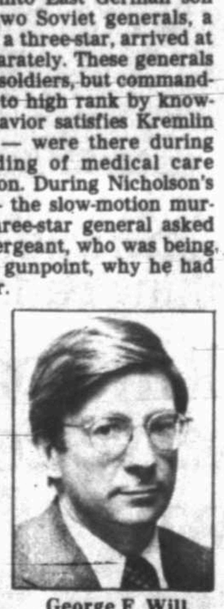

He pledged that Brazil's huge foreign debt would be paid, though not at the expense of "the misery of the poor." At the same time he promised the international financial community that Brazil would not break with the International Monetary Fund or declare a unilateral moratorium on its payments. He also spoke enthusiastically, and to enthusiastic crowds, about land reform, municipal development, broader schooling for the country's illiterate and fair wages for workers. So broad was his support that no one ever questioned the fact that his election by the electoral college was, in fact, the popular will.

What was most significant about Neves' election, however — and what will be most sorely missed — was his political skill and friendship among those many disparate groups, the military, church and business organizations and labor unions, as well as his genuine respect for constitutional government. By contrast, Sarney, until recently a right-winger, and not a strong leader, seems to lack both the skills and the reputation Neves enjoyed as a symbol of Brazil's emerging democracy. It's not certain, therefore, that even if Sarney wants to carry on in the course that Neves had set, he will have the ability to do it. Unfortunately, Brazil's political health may still be as fragile as was Neves' physical health.

GEORGE F. WILL
Contra battle more burlesque

WASHINGTON — As U.S. Army Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson Jr.'s life bled slowly away into East German soil last month, two Soviet generals, a brigadier and a three-star, arrived at the scene separately. These generals — not simple soldiers, but commanders who rose to high rank by knowing what behavior satisfies Kremlin expectations — were there during the withholding of medical care from Nicholson. During Nicholson's long dying — the slow-motion murder — the three-star general asked Nicholson's sergeant, who was being kept away at gunpoint, why he had shot his major.

George F. Will

The Reagan administration's response to this crime has been to treat it like a traffic accident covered by no-fault insurance, but the Soviets are having too much fun to do what the administration wants to do — change the subject. The Soviets now say, with exuberant malice, that the administration wrongly reported that they have agreed not to murder more Americans.

Six days after the murder, the irrepressible State Department exclaimed that it was pleased that there were going to be talks about preventing such "episodes." The talks occurred and the State Department was, of course, pleased: "We obtained agreement from the Soviets that they will not permit use of force or weapons against members of our military liaison mission in the future."

But now the Soviets, who clearly are enjoying this, say:

No, we meant what we said at the time. The United States was to blame for Nicholson's death, Soviet soldiers acted properly, we retain the right to act similarly in the future and, by the way, the State Department statement also "does not correspond to the facts" when it says we are considering compensation for Nicholson's death.

Not even the State Department could say it was pleased about that, so it said something even worse. It called the Soviet statement "unacceptable." In State Department usage, "unacceptable" is an adjective that invariably modifies a noun that denotes Soviet behavior that the United States will respond to only by attaching to it the adjective "unacceptable."

The Washington Post story about this shambles contained the generic paragraph found in all such stories: "State Department sources said they were puzzled and taken aback by the unexpected Soviet blast, and speculated that it arose from differences between military and civilian authorities in Moscow."

What is never unexpected is State Department speculation that Soviet misbehavior is merely a tactical concession by Soviet civilian leaders to military leaders. But in this instance, the Soviet military seems to have been almost reasonable in the talks in Germany, and seems to have been overruled by the civilians — moderate Mikhail Gorbachev and company — in Moscow.

Of course the State Department professes itself "puzzled" by yet another "unexpected" instance of the Soviets saying that they meant what they said in the first place. Were the State Department ever to concede that the Soviets mean what they say (e.g., Nicholson's death was America's fault), we would not need an army of State Department experts to explain what the Soviets "really" mean and why U.S. policy can be more accommodating than Soviet policy "seems" to be.

There is one great presidential power — the power to persuade. That is why any serious diminution of a President's stature subverts him comprehensively. Does Ronald Reagan understand that his non-response to Nicholson's murder has something to do with the fact that, six months after carrying 49 states, he and aides are engaging in eight-hour bargaining sessions with legislators, parceling out presidential authority, negotiating the micro-management of foreign policy, niggling about who might administer "non-lethal" purchases from the micro-sum ($14 million) at issue in the Nicaragua controversy?

There is a civil war on there, the most bitter sort of war, the sort least susceptible to negotiated solution. In England, Russia, Spain, China, Greece and the United States, civil wars were won, not dissolved through negotiations. Yet in a dizzying series of retreats, the freshly inaugurated President has been negotiating about "non-lethal" (shaving cream? cheese spread?) aid to the democratic side in the civil war while a freshman senator leaves the negotiations to appear on the White House lawn to tell a network-news audience that this President is moving his, the senator's, way.

Words, the carriers of ideas, have consequences. When you call the contras the moral equivalents of the Founding Fathers, and call Nicaragua a Soviet "beachhead," and then ask for a trivial sum trivialized by restrictions, and describe the principal alternative plan as "worse than nothing" and a "shameful surrender," and then negotiate in the hope of splitting the difference with this shameful-worse-than-nothing, you are asking for trouble of the most ruinous sort: laughter, in the form of snickering.

Congress, too, is in the burlesque. Before the House voted to destroy Nicaragua's anti-communist resistance, it voted 394-2 to proclaim that the "murder" of Nicholson was "inconsistent" with a 1947 U.S.-Soviet agreement. Have a care, Kremlin: Congress considers such, er, inconsistencies to be, well, unacceptable.

BILL MODISETT

My personal peeves populate Midland's streets

Bill Modisett

Everyone has a personal peeve.

Mine's the jerks who get on one-way streets and drive as though they're the only ones there. It burns me up. What's more, it's nearly frustrating enough to make me launch a one-man campaign to get the Legislature to approve lifting violators' driving licenses.

Of course, they probably don't have driving licenses. If they did, they wouldn't drive like they do.

Really (parts of this column are serious and parts are written with tongue-in-cheek; you are free to decide which is which), I love Midland's one-way streets. They're great. They allow a motorist to zip right on through the traffic — either heading downtown or away from downtown — in record time, traffic jams are virtually unheard of now and it's seldom that a traffic light hangs a driver up for any length of time.

But who turned the turkeys loose? I mean, seriously, I've witnessed some of the stupidest stunts on Texas and Illinois by some really sober-looking individuals lately. I think they may be repeat offenders. Here are a few vintage examples:

— The confused driver: This fellow — or lady — can't make up his mind. He doesn't know whether he can or should turn left...or right...or turn around and return the way he came. So he does what you'd expect. He shuts his car down. Right in the middle of the street.

Well, that's probably better than some choices, but with vehicles whizzing along at 30 or 40 miles an hour it can be a recipe for disaster.

— The turn — HERE! — driver: This surely is a blood relative of the "confused driver." Females, I've noticed, tend to fall into this category, moreso than men. When this driver decides to make a turn, she never is in the left-turn or right-turn lanes. She's nearly always in the center lane, yet turns without any warning, signal or public announcement.

This driver is the one you have to watch out for. I've seen more near accidents caused by this driver than any other.

— Asleep at the wheel: This driver always dozes while driving. Well, that does make the trip to work a little more pleasant, I guess, but it never fails to excite other drivers when "Asleep at the wheel" wanders out of his lane, across three others and then heads back the other way. Fun, fun, fun!

This driver is also known for sleeping through traffic light changes — in multiples!

— What do I do? This one is closely related to the "confused driver," but typically materializes at the intersection of Baird and Texas where Texas becomes one-way or close to the intersection of Texas and Andrews Highway where Texas stops being two-way and begins to flow one-way.

This is the driver (although he's lived in Midland all his life) who's never seen a one-way street before and, all of a sudden, is confronted by a crisis. What do I do? he asks. I can't go on straight, but if I turn I'll get lost.

There are a lot of options for getting out of this predicament, but this driver rarely chooses the correct one.

Well there they are — the reasons for my personal peeve. Now you know why some of us drivers are looking a little nervous all the time.

Crude oil imports national tragedy

A national tragedy is under way. Imports of crude oil hurt the domestic industry, but not nearly so seriously as the import of refined products.

Sure, it's nice saving a nickel or a dime at the gas pump. But what happens when all the domestic refineries shut down their money-losing operations? Do you seriously think that the foreign refiners will maintain these low prices without domestic competition? Sure you do...and you believe in the Easter bunny and the tooth fairy, too, don't you?

As with most of our endangered manufacturing capacity, if the federal government doesn't take some protective action when industry needs protection, soon there'll be no industry to protect.

Refined down, this translates to a matter of national survival, to put it crudely.

JAMES RESTON

Perhaps panel's solutions would work

By JAMES RESTON
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In the present confusion and frustration in Washington over aid to Nicaragua, it may be useful to take another and maybe a different look at the report of President Reagan's Commission on Central America, issued on Jan. 11, 1984, and quickly forgotten.

It was in some ways a remarkable document. First, it put the military, economic and social aspects of the problem in historical perspective.

Second, even during the emotional pressures of the 1984 presidential election campaign, it was approved unanimously by leaders of both political parties and leaders of both business and labor.

Nobody argued much with its analysis and definition of the Central American problem, but its proposals for solution were nibbled to death by opponents who objected to one part or the other rather than grappling with the report as a whole.

Reagan supported the report in principle, which is his way. Some argued that there could be no military peace without economic reform financed by a kind of Marshall Plan for Central America.

Others insisted that there could be no practical economic solution without peace, or at least a reduction in the military violence.

So the plan was shelved, but the dilemma remains, and the president and Congress are now involved in a divisive fight over the narrow issue of sending another $14 million to help the Nicaraguan rebels to overthrow the Nicaraguan government, or bring it to the bargaining table to discuss a negotiated peace on Washington's terms.

Enter now in Washington, by accident, the former chancellor of West Germany, Helmut Schmidt, with another idea.

If I heard him right, he said that maybe the Kissinger report should be reconsidered. It recognized the military threat from Cuba and the Soviet Union, and the urgent need to deal with the region's economic and social problems, but this, he thought, could not be resolved by military means or even by a new Marshall Plan.

The Marshall Plan idea was too narrow. It had the wrong name and smacked of U.S. domination. The hope lay, he said, in widening the economic restoration of the area, using the other Central American nations — the Contadora group — to lead the way to a regional solution, and bring other nations into a deal for peace and the economic reconstruction of Central America.

This was Schmidt's "new idea." He thought, as only retired chancellors can think objectively, that the Central American problem was dividing the NATO allies, and that they would be willing to contribute to an economic aid program for peace, if the Reagan administration thought this might break the deadlock.

I talked to Henry Kissinger about this a couple of days after Schmidt went home, and he agreed that help from the European allies could be useful. He had talked to Chancellor Kohl of West Germany about the possibility of European aid, and Kohl had been helpful.

But Kissinger was cautious. He wasn't sure that the president wanted to look at the Central American report again, or get the Europeans involved in an economic solution. He thought Schmidt had a good idea, but it was up to the president, he thought, to pursue it.

Kohl should let Reagan off hook over cemetery visit

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — The controversy over the scheduled visit next Sunday of President Reagan to a German military cemetery and a Nazi concentration camp has created an embarrassing, no-win situation for the president and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

If the president visits the World War II military cemetery where 47 SS troops who fell in the Ardennes Battle of the Bulge are interred, he will face angry and possibly violent demonstrators. The visit is also likely to intensify criticism of him by Jewish and U.S. veterans groups who have already protested strongly against honoring, even indirectly, members of Hitler's brutal SS force.

If the president calls off the visit to the Bitburg military cemetery, the Bonn government fears it will harm Germany's relations with the U.S. and hurt the chancellor's reputation.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, who was cut down and severely wounded by German machine gun fire in Italy in 1944, said it would be a mistake for the president to visit Bitburg, and urged another place be found. Other Republican strategists voiced similar views. U.S. Information Agency Director Charles Wick, a close personal friend of the president and Mrs. Reagan, said visiting the Bitburg cemetery would be a tragedy that would give the Soviets a propaganda field day.

The White House sent a private message to Chancellor Kohl urging him to seek an alternative to Bitburg, although the president will keep his promise to visit that cemetery if the German leader continues to insist on it.

Since it was Chancellor Kohl who originally and emotionally urged the president to visit the Bitburg military cemetery, I think he should take the president and himself off the hook.

My suggestion is Chancellor Kohl propose that instead of visiting either the military cemetery or the concentration camp, the president visit the home of the late Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who founded the German Democratic Federal Republic. It was under Adenauer's brilliant leadership that West Germany became after World War II a member of the community of civilized nations.

His home is near Bonn, just across the Rhine River. There President Reagan could speak about the spirit of reconciliation that Adenauer symbolized. He could make a compassionate reference to the decent fighting men of all military forces who died in World War II and all the decent civilians and children who lost their lives in that conflict. That would serve to honor the decent military men, of whom there were many, who fought for their countries. It would also honor the victims of the concentration camps. It would serve the original intent of reconciliation that Chancellor Kohl had in asking President Reagan to visit the military cemetery and which the president had in mind in agreeing last November to do so, although he had not been informed that SS troops were buried there.

While we must never honor SS troops who committed barbaric atrocities nor forget the six million Jews — men, women and children — who were so heinously treated and slaughtered in the Nazi horror camps, we must not continue to impose on young generations of Germans a sense of guilt for the sins of their fathers.

We must move toward normalization of relations with a people who form our first line of defense against Soviet aggression in Europe. We must encourage development of the German civilization that gave us such cultural, literary and philosophic masters as Bach, Beethoven, Goethe, Kant, Hegel and Schopenhauer.

We must not make the mistake that was made with the Versailles Treaty after World War I — perpetrating the hatred that led to World War II.

Membership drive set for Nature Center

From Staff Reports

Memberships are being sought for the Midland Nature Center. All interested birdwatchers, flower lovers, animal trackers, photographers, hikers and campers are invited to a meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the Allison Fine Arts Building at Midland College.

Membership dues are $5 and that person will receive a wildflower; supporter dues are $20 a year and the donor will receive a wildflower plus a calendar with 22 drawings of Texas wildflowers; a contributor pays $50 a year and receives the above gifts plus notecards with 12 wildflower drawings.

According to a spokesman with the Soil Conservation District, 343 species of birds have been seen in Midland County and 449 species of flowers have been discovered along the highways.

The Monday meeting will feature a short slide program about what is available in Midland County.

The Midland Nature Center is located at the south end of Hogan Park behind Midland Women's Club on acreage that was donated by the city in 1981. The center consists of a half mile trail through trees, across meadows, by a pond and through the brush.

The Soil Conservation District, Midland Independent School District, scouting groups and Midland Naturalists have contributed to the center, and a fund of $160,000 has been accumulated to construct a building at the center. This building will include an interpretive center, film room, labs and office space.

Judge considers injunction on photographers

ODESSA — State District Judge Gene Ater Monday will determine if a temporary injunction sought by the Texas Attorney General against an Odessa photographic studio should be granted.

The state alleges in its deceptive trade practices suit that Carl R. Barnes and his wife, Janie, individually and doing business as Coulter Studio and Barnes Associates failed to deliver photographs for which consumers paid, advertised photographs they had no intention of delivering and misrepresented those photographs.

The action filed in 70th District Court further alleges the the couple failed to disclose information about their photographic services at the time of transactions and their failure to do so induced customers to enter into transactions to which they would not have otherwise agreed.

The state is asking defendants be required to pay $2,000 for each violation, not to exceed $10,000 per defendant. The state is also seeking refunds of any consumer payments obtained through utilization of alleged deceptive trade practices and compensation for any customers losses.

The attorney general's suit stems from a free photo offer that appeared in a coupon book bearing the name of an Odessa radio station, which was sold by Barnes Associates.

Bill ends up in Canada

AUSTIN (AP) — Dorothy Harrell of West Austin mailed a water bill to an El Campo water company — and learned two weeks later that the letter had turned up in Toronto.

The envelope contained the correct postal box number of the Boca Chica Water Co. and the correct ZIP code for El Campo.

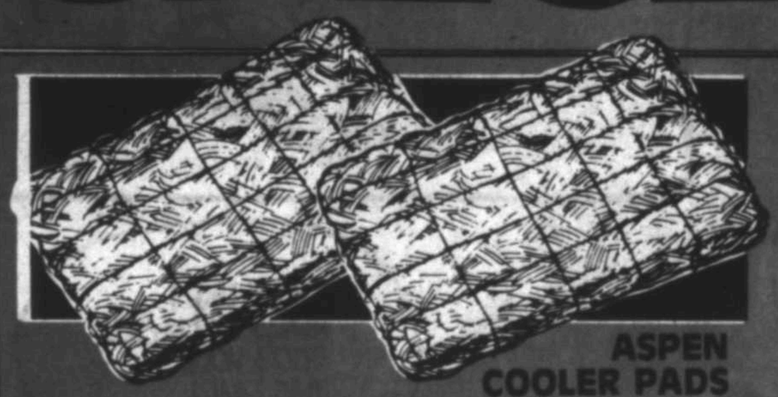

During the two weeks' travel, the postage stamp never was canceled.

Mrs. Harrell first learned of her wayward water bill Friday when she received it in a letter from J.B. Harrison, Toronto.

Rebels wrap up 4-5A play with 6-1 win

Whalen's 'Dogs end season alone in third place

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The way this year has gone, Midland Lee's 6-1 win over Tall City rival Midland High Saturday was a fitting finale for the 1985 District 4-5A season.

Lee, now 12-2 and on its way to a bi-district playoff spot with an undetermined opponent, fell behind early, took advantage of a seemingly minor defensive lapse and coasted to the win behind the strong three-hit pitching of starter Mike Small, now 6-1. The win was Lee's 20th of the season.

"My arm felt good all day, sometimes I thought I was throwing it harder than I have been this season, but I think I was just up for this game because it was against MHS," Small said. "I started to lose control a bit in the late innings but that's when I really started bending (on his follow through) to get the ball in

THE BULLDOGS, who finished 7-7 and all alone in third in the district, were haunted by flashes of brilliance that made the few costly mistakes that much harder to swallow.

With the sky alternating shades of gray and black and the wind whipping straight in from left field, it looked like a day for the pitchers. And for the first three innings, Lee's Mike Small and MHS' Michael Gonzales were, indeed, in control.

But the Bulldogs pushed across a run in the top of the fourth on a contested non-interference call at home plate with Greg Hatcher on third and Jaime Salazar stealing second. The ball ended up in center field and Hatcher was back in the dugout with the game's first run.

"I've learned that any time the wind is blowing straight in like that, you better play for just one run at a time," Lee coach Ernie Johnson said. "I was really surprised to see us get a four-run inning like that. We didn't exactly zap the ball around or anything."

BUT EVEN with the Rebels trailing 1-0 in the bottom of the fourth, it just seemed to be a matter of time before something would go right for Lee and wrong for MHS. It's been that kind of season.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Lee's Tuey Rankin (14) slides head first into third base ahead of the tag by Midland High's Ricky Castaneda (7) Saturday at Lee Field. The Rebels posted a 6-1 victory and are off to the bi-district playoffs.

What went right for Lee was Gonzales' loss of control in the fourth. Cruising along after three frames with some fine defensive help from Kenny De La Garza and Ricky Castaneda, Gonzalez walked leadoff hitter Jimmy Phillips on four pitches.

But Phillips was doubled up at third trying to take the extra base on Cary Brown's sacrifice bunt, and when Small tapped what looked like an inning-ending grounder to second baseman Darren Thorpe, Gonzles seemed to be out of dangerous waters. Instead, he was just starting to get his feet wet.

Thorpe's throw to Matt Sears drew the first baseman off the bag and he was unable to make the tag on the sliding Small. That shouldn't have caused much trouble, but when Gonzales walked the next three hitters to force in one run and was 2-0 on the next hitter, the big righthander was in well over his head.

De La Garza moved to the mound from shortstop and finished the walk to Dirk Bergoon to force in the second Lee run and give the Rebs the lead for good.

IN THE fifth, De La Garza got himself into hot water by yeilding a leadoff single to Greg Shaw. Pinch runner Jason Logi moved to second on Phillip's sacrifice and to third on a walk to Small. In between, third baseman Ricky Castaneda pulled Sears off the bag at first with an errant throw on a slow roller by Cary Brown.

So when Donny Rivas stepped to the plate, the bases were loaded, but not for long.

Rivas lined a single to right-center and Logi and Brown both scored for a 4-1 lead. Paul Colwell brought home Small with a single and Rivas scored on a double steal.

"That's kind of the way things have gone all season," Whalen said. "We'd be sailing right along and then you look off for a second and wham! There's bases loaded and then we walk somebody or somebody gets a hit for a couple of runs.

"But I'll tell you, we've gotten a fine effort from these kids every time out this season and today was no exception. They played over their heads most of the year and did more than anybody thought they would. I'll always have a place in my heart for this bunch."

MHS, Lee have holes to fill during spring football

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

There should be a lot of interest in the spring football training sessions at Midland High and Midland Lee this year because a lot of familiar names will be missing from the rosters. Names that have been prominent in the success each team has known the past couple of years.

Once again, the Rebels have been hit hard by graduation, losing two-year backfield starters Tyrone Thurman and Walter Jones. Add one-year quarterback Dirk Bergoon and one-year fullback Randy Ellis to the list and you have a gaping hole Lee coach Jack Tayrien has to fill.

At Midland High, the loss of stellar players is more downfield with the likes of first team all-district tight end/linebacker Darrell Davis (second team all-state) and wide receivers Allan Foret and Darren Thorpe.

Between the two schools, a total of nine All-District first teamers were lost. Along with Jones and Thurman at Lee, add linebacker Pool Webb, defensive end Mark Webb, defensive safety Earl Davis and offensive tackle Ariel Elliot to the list.

Midland High lost two first teamers other than Davis (and Foret, a first team pick in 1983, honorable mention in 1984), in offensive tackle Brad Edgar and center Greg Hatcher.

Of all the players honored in '84, only two honorable mention selections are back this spring: Midland High quarterback Matt Marcum and Midland Lee defensive guard Jake Young.

THE REBELS are coming off back-to-back seasons that didn't end until they'd covered a long playoff path. In 1983, Lee went 13-3 and earned the school's first-ever berth in the 5A championship game which they lost to Converes Judson.

In '84, the Rebels were knocked out of the playoffs by district rival Odessa Permian in the quarterfinals, 15-14 to finish the season at 12-2. With that kind of success, second-year head coach Jack Tayrien isn't planning many changes when Lee opens spring training on Wednesday.

"We're going to look at some things out of the wishbone that we want to see if we're capable of doing. Some things other teams are doing and having success with," said Tayrien. "We're looking at a lot of films of Arkansas and Wyoming (two noted wishbone teams) to see if we can incorporate some of their ideas into our scheme. Spring is a time to evaluate this stuff, to see what to eliminate and what to add to.

"We're pretty well a wishbone orienated team. We have a good system. The kids believe in it and the coaches believe in it. We're trying to go to the colleges and see what can be utilized. We don't have college kids, of course, but maybe there's something we can look at."

It's also a time to get an idea of what kind of talent is coming up for 1985.

"Basically in spring, we want to find those kids who can block and tackle, those who can do the basic fundamentals of football," said Tayrien. "There are a number of people at every position and at this time we want to give everybody a chance to make the mark.

"Spring training is when you make the football team and I think everybody is excited about it. This is the preperation for fall and those who have a good spring training will have the opportunity to be at the forefront in the fall."

As to numbers, Tayrien is expecting a big crowd of kids fighting for next year's starting roles.

"It looks like we're going to have 90 from the sophomore and junior classes and around 85 coming over from the (Lee) freshman school," said Tayrien.

The only question is, can the talent of a Walter Jones or a Tyrone Thruman be replaced?

"I don't know if we'll be able to fill their shoes but we'll certainly look for replacements," said Tayrien. "We'll try and find the best kids we can. We also need to find a defensive line and linebackers, two of our areas of concern this spring."

Lee will conclude its spring season on Tuesday, May 21 with the annual Maroon and White game at 7 p.m. at Memorial Stadium. The younger squad is scheduled to preceed the varsity game at 5:30 p.m.

Reporter Telegram

LIKE TAYRIEN, Midland High coach Doug McCutchen has a lot of gaps that need filling. A big difference, however, is the return of two backfield starters: Marcum and running back Jake Madrid.

"We're losing 29 seniors this year and we only have seven returning lettermen coming back so we'll be a real inexperienced team," said McCutchen. "It should be a real competitive spring for us because there are a lot of positions open and a lot of people vying for those jobs."

And this year McCutchen and his staff have a bigger group of kids to choose from.

"We're going to be up in numbers," said McCutchen. "Hopefully, we'll have around 110 to 115. That's up about 15 from last year. We would have been up another 15 if grades hadn't gotten to us."

Last year the 'Dogs numbered "100 or a little less," said McCutchen.

A year ago McCutchen, in his first year at the helm, had to divide his spring training time between finding the players for each position and teaching them his new system: The veer offense and 4-3 defense.

Heroes never quit dreaming

If you are trying to figure out how Midland Lee won the District 4-5A track title last weekend in such easy fashion, there are several places you can look. Sometimes, the over-the-hill momentum comes from strange places.

Take Lee's David Almand, for instance. Almand is a tight end in football and his heroics in that area are well chronicled. He is better known for running into trouble than away from it.

Heading into last weekend's 4-5A track meet in Abilene, Almand had never won a varsity race in his life. He was the first to admit the fact. When the day had ended, he was the district's 800-meter champion. You explain it.

"The papers were saying that I had an outside shot at best to finish second. I don't think many people expected me to win," said Almand. "It really feels good when you win that way."

Lee assistant coach Eddie Wolski wasn't surprised — at least that's what he was saying while grinning from one ear to the other. "I knew he had a shot at winning. We got that rain before the night finals and I told David, 'The fates must be shining on you, son. You couldn't ask for better conditions as far as you are concerned.'"

Wolski explained that Almand's size would work to his advantage on a slow track. If David was going to win, this would be the night for him.

"It was hard running on a wet track, but I guess it was to my advantage," said Almand. "This is the first race I've ever won."

Now he is a champion and headed for Friday and Saturday's Region I meet in Lubbock where again the papers will be saying he has no chance to go any farther. Almand has learned to live with that.

AND THEN there is Derek Westbrook, who finished third in the 3200. That was a race where Lee was worried they wouldn't get any points outside of sophomore sensation Mike Garza.

"Derek has won two meets for us this year by just getting his points," said Lee coach Sam Volpe. "We've been in some close meets and needed every point we could get. Derek is really not built for distance running. He's too big, but he does a great job with what he has."

During the running of the Tall City Relays, Midland Lee basketball coach Paul Stueckler was one of Derek's fans.

"You just have to hope Derek does well. That kid has more heart than anyone I've ever seen. In the three years he played basketball for me, he never missed a game or practice that I can remember and you never heard him say a bad word about one of his teammates," said Stueckler. "You just wish you could surround yourself with 12 just like him."

Westbrook didn't qualify for the Region I meet, but he was part of the championship, like many of the other Rebels. He has left his mark at Lee.

With four-event winner Walter Jones aside, one of the biggest reasons for Lee's track domination in 1985 is Quintus Hampton.

HAMPTON ISN'T exactly an unknown quanity in 4-5A track. After all, he won the 300 intermediate hurdle championship as a sophomore with a district record.

But 1985 started off as a letdown for Hampton. The injury-prone Gerry Guster of Odessa Permian returned with nationally ranked times in the event, often leaving Hampton as a second place finisher.

But then Chris Kenney, a big part of Lee's sprint relay team, was injured, forcing Hampton to step in. He also was placed on the 1600 relay so Jones could run both the 100 and 200-meter races. Lee barely noticed the difference.

Still, Hampton thinks about Guster and isn't ready to give up easily. "I'm still going to get him (Guster)," said Hampton. "I'll have another shot at him at the regionals. I know he has beaten me every time, but I think I can run with him."

The papers will say that Hampton is dreaming in that goal, but the fact that he has maintained improvement in the face of adversity is a great mark for a junior. He has now qualified for the Region I test two years in a row and will have another shot next year. This year, he is a three-event qualifier and a relay mainstay. That's something when there were those who thought he might be staying home next weekend.

With eight individuals and two relays qualified for the Region I meet, Lee appears to have enough numbers to make a serious stab at the region title. But more heroes will have to be born if that is to be the case, and this Lee team seems to know how to do that. They never seem to quit dreaming — and that's a big part of sports.

DIAMOND CLIPPINGS: Lee's playoff opponent won't be determined until at least Monday and maybe Tuesday when the District 3-5A champion is decided. Lubbock Monterey holds a two-game edge over Plainview in the loss column with two games to play. Monterey's Saturday game with Amarillo High was rained out and will be made up Monday. The Plainsmen, ranked fifth in the state, then play Plainview on Tuesday. All Monterey must do is win one of its two remaining games to win the championship...

If the Rebels face Lubbock Monterey, it is likely to be a best of three series if the coaches have their way. Johnson has come out in favor of best-of-three format, and Monterey coach Bobby Moegle, via junior varsity coach Mike Crutcher who scouted the MHS-Lee game, has said he prefers the three-game format also. The question remains when and where the games will be played. Johnson likes a Tuesday-Friday schedule while Monterey may ask for a Tuesday-Saturday format. In either case, games won't start until May 7...

It's here somewhere

Midland Lee second baseman Dirk Bergoon has trouble finding the ball in Saturday's District 4-5A finale against Midland High.

After 12 years, Hogan still racquetball's No. 1

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

There was a good crowd on hand Saturday at Courthouse & Spa of Midland for the Big Brothers/Big Sisters benefit racquetball tournament. Some were even watching the tournament matches.

Most, however, were on hand for the tournament's main attraction, an exhibition featuring five-time national champion and current No. 1 ranked Marty Hogan.

To many racquetballers, Hogan is considered a living legend to the sport, a man who has dominated the pro scene like no other. In fact, one former pro, from a few years back, calls him "awesome."

Hogan first stepped on a racquetball court at the age of eight, back in the days when the sport was still developing a following.

"My mom introduced me to the game way back when," said Hogan. "I started at the age of eight and I'm 27 now. I've been playing about 20 years."

And most of that time has been as a professional, the first time at the age of 15 and every year for 12 years since. He won his first national title when he was 17.

"The national championship is pretty well the biggest title in the world," said Hogan, who is now alternating his time between tournaments and Coors sponsored exhibitions like this stop in Midland.

"This is my second year on the Coors Tour," said Hogan. "We do approximately 30 exhibitions."

AS A 27-year-old professional, Hogan realizes his competitive years are slowly nearing an end, beginning to give way to the younger players coming to the tour. Right now he's still the one to beat, as his No. 1 ranking indicates, but he has set a deadline.

"I'd like to play five more years," said Hogan. "I think I'll probably go into business in some way, shape or form after I retire. I like the sporting goods business a whole lot but it's still something for me to make up my mind about over the next few years."

His final five years on the tour could be the toughest he's had to face to date. Not only is he fighting Father Time, but also injuries — like a recent torn cartlidge in his right knee that required arthoscopic surgery — and the psycological factor of the game.

"Every once in awhile it's a little difficlut to keep psyched up and it's going to get tougher every year," said Hogan.

TAKING ON a list of challengers — from news media novice players to advanced players to fellow touring pros — compiled by Courthouse & Spa pro Sheldon Skinner, Hogan displayed his skill though seldomly playing at an all-out pace.

Had he gone all out on every point against every player, it's likely only the pros would have been able to keep up. Hogan's serve has been clocked at 142 miles per hour, well beyond what the average club player is used to seeing.

"During a rally (after the serve), I feel like the ball is traveling upwards of 150 when I hit it," said Hogan.

When he did go all out, the kill shots seemed to barely reach, hitting the wall just an inch or two above the floor, giving opponents little or no time to react.

Hogan also displayed the other side of racquetball, the finese game, using lob shots to drive his opponent deep into the corners. During breaks he answered questions the crowd had about the game like court position on serves.

"On a lob serve you want to stand about a step off center to get a better angle on the wall and drop it into the corner," said Hogan. "If you want to power serve, you want to be in center court because your opponent will try and power it back and by you."

One tip Hogan had for beginning players wasn't the development of over-powering serves or kill shots but to "just learn to hit the ball solid from both sides," he said. "That's essential because when you're playing on a 20 by 40 court it's real esy to isolate one aspect of the game."

Let the rest come with practice. How can you argue with a guy who has been taking on the best for 12 years and winning, and winning, and winning.

MC men, women win Region V tennis

From Staff Reports

WACO — The Midland College tennis teams didn't sweep the finals here at the Region V tennis tournament, but they did the next best thing.

Both the MC men's and women's teams strolled to first-place team finishes and in return received invites to the national JUCO tennis championship party in Ocala, Fla., in May.

To go with the team titles, three men and three women singles players won individual titles and all three men's doubles teams and one women's doubles pair took firsts.

Coach Joe Williams had expected some of his players to get beat, but in some cases the ones that did were surprises. On the other hand, several players turned in better-than-expected outings and brought home titles.

"The biggest surprise was my No. 6 girl Karen Wild beating two players she'd lost to and beating them decisively," Williams said. "Another big surprise as at No. 3 men's doubles (Andy Bruner and Emil Bijleveld). They'd been struggling along and now they've won conference and regional titles."

The disappointment on the day was the upset of both No. 1 singles players — Sean Strickling and Helen Lebeller. Strickling had his man, Bill Howie of McLennan at match point six times and was up five games to two in the third and final set, only to fall 7-5, 3-6, 7-6.

"I really thought we had that one in bag, but the guy played very well and got the right points at the right time," Williams said.

Lebeller, the third-ranked women's player in the nation, fell to Sandra Sigulinski of South Plains in surprisingly easy fashion, 6-0, 6-2. Lebeller had beaten Sigulinski at the Western Junior College Athletic Conference meet last week.

"I think Helen had a little case of the nerves," Williams said. "This will really toughen her up for nationals, though."

The women's national tournament is May 13-17 in Ocala, and the men's begins May 21 and goes through May 26.

SPRING

"This year we can concentrate on working repetition of plays and on people for the positions, people that deserve to be on the first team," said McCutchen. "We're further along this year because we've run the program for a year. Last year we were learning the positions and this year we can concentrate on who is going to be where and work on getting our offense and defense in. We'll do a lot of our position earning in the spring and then finalize it during fall two-a-days."

The Bulldogs, who start their practice session on Monday, will be looking for people to work in the trenches, the positions that were hit hardest by graduation.

"Our defensive and offensive lines and receivers, that's what we have to look for," said McCutchen. "We have a lot of skill people back but the linemen are gone.

"Brad Edgar, Steve Mizzles, Greg Hatcher, John Cox and Todd Smith are gone and they were all good linemen. Edgar and Mizzles were also our defensive tackles. Darrell Davis, Allan Foret and Darren Thorpe were fine receivers and we have to find replacements for them."

Midland High will conclude its spring training with the annual Bill Mims game on May 17 at 7 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

TENNIS

MONROE, La. — Defending champion Northeast Louisiana clinched another SLC men's tennis championship Saturday by advancing players into all but one of Sunday's rain-delayed finals.

Northeast, ranked 15th in the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association poll, carried 77 total points into the finals — 52 in regular season play and 25 in the tournament.

Runnerup McNeese State had a total of 58 points and, even by scoring its maximum possible 12 points in the finals, had no chance to catch the Indians.

Lamar is third with 47 points, followed by Louisiana Tech with 46, NTSU 18, Arkansas State 14, and Texas-Arlington 1.

NLU's Jon Treml, ranked No. 21 nationally in singles, beat Alvardo Amorin of ASU in the semifinals in No. 1 singles, 6-1, 6-2, to gain the finals, where he will play second-seeded Johan Kjellsten of McNesse.

But Treml and partner Kurt Thomas, top-seeded in No. 1 doubles and ranked No. 18 nationally, were upset in the semifinals by Kjellsten and Pontus Lavefak, 6-4, 6-4. Northeast has now won five conference championships in the last six years — three in the Trans-America Athletic Conference and two in the Southland Conference...

ABILENE — Gary Rutherford and Manny Sosa of East Texas State, defeated Wilson Fennely and Dan Olesen, Angelo State, 6-7, 6-1, 6-4, in the final round of men's doubles Saturday to secure ETSU's 36-30 win over ASU in LSC tennis.

MONROE, La. — Lamar University, which won four of Friday's six singles finals, rallied to win the No. 3 doubles Saturday and upset defending champion Northeast Louisiana in the SLC Women's Tennis Championships.

Judy Flook and Gill Oakenfull, down 4-1 in the third set, rallied for a 3-6, 6-2, 7-5 decision over Northeast's Stephanie Burnam and Annabelle Landa to win the tournament for Lamar, which entered the rain-delayed doubles finals needing to win only one match to take the title.

Northeast and Lamar were the only schools with finalists and NLU's teams and players were favored in every match. However, Lamar finished with 42 points to 39 for NLU, which had beaten Lamar, 6-3, in a match last fall at Beaumont, Texas.

Arkansas State was third with seven points, followed by NTSU with four, Southwestern Louisiana three, Texas-Arlington two and McNeese State one...

Connors, Noah to meet in Oklahoma finals

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Jimmy Connors and one-time French Open winner Yannick Noah will meet in Sunday's singles championship match of the $150,000 Bank of Oklahoma Tennis Classic after beating opponents in Saturday's semifinals.

Noah, after stumbling in the first set of a match played Saturday afternoon, came back to defeat 17-year-old Aaron Krickstein 4-6, 6-0, 6-3 to advance to the final.

Connors, the tournament's top seed, overcame a strong challenge to defeat Gene Mayer 7-5, 6-1 in a match played Saturday night.

In another afternoon match, Ben Testerman defeated John Lloyd, 6-4, 6-3. And eighth-seed Mel Purcell, last year's tournament winner, defeated No. 5 Greg Holmes, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

Noah, the tournament's third seed, broke Krickstein's service in the third game of their first set and went on to a 4-2 lead. Krickstein took control of the set from there by staying back and responding well to Noah's serves.

Noah constantly attacked the net, while Krickstein's passive game forced the Frenchman into several errors.

The second set belonged entirely to Noah, as he continued to play his aggressive game. He broke all of Krickstein's services, and fired in two aces.

The third set was nearly a repeat of the second, although Krickstein was able to win three games. Noah overwhelmed Krickstein with his strong serve and volley.

The loss to Noah was the second-seeded Krickstein's first in the tournament. He defeated Mel Purcell and Greg Holmes.

Connors and Mayer alternated in breaking the other's serve during their first set, battling to a 5-5 tie. However, Connors held service in the 11th game and broke Mayer's serve in 12th game to win the set.

Connors took charge in the second set, breaking Mayer's service in the second, fourth and sixth games on his way to victory.

Connors had trouble getting his first serve off in the opening set, which allowed Mayer to stay close. However, Connors' passing shots down the line and cross-court shots were too much for Mayer to handle.

Testerman's win was the sixth-seeded Testerman's first in the tourney. He lost to Connors and fourth-seeded Mayer. Lloyd, seeded seventh in the tourney, also lost matches to Connors and Mayer.

Purcell also won for the first time in the tournament. He lost to Krickstein and Noah, while Holmes was winless.

Making a comeback in Florida

Former major leaguers take one last shot at bigs

MIAMI (AP) — An old ball park in one of Miami's more rundown neighborhoods has been transformed into a haven for the eternally hopeful.

Former Los Angeles Dodgers outfielder Derrel Thomas, 34, is shagging flies next to some bright-eyed prospect who's famous only in his home town.

Behind the batting cage, former Oakland A's catcher Jim Essian, 34, is tutoring another relative youngster on his special craft.

Former major league pitchers Mike Torrez, 34, and Eric Rasmussen, 34, are warming up on the edge of the outfield grass.

Meet the Class A Miami Marlins — the last chance for former major league players who want to remove the "former" from that description.

"All these guys feel they can play at the big-league level," Marlins General Manager Mal Fichman said. "No one else gave them a chance."

Years ago, most minor league teams were peppered with old-timers who shared their wisdom with the young prospects. But as the farm system was streamlined, the veterans disappeared.

Fichman, who didn't have the advantage of a major-league affiliation in filling his roster, decided to revive the old tradition. It didn't take long for word to get around.

Torrez, who pitched for Montreal, Baltimore, Boston and both the New York Yankees and New York Mets, as the first to sign on. Within weeks, Fichman had the Florida State League limit of seven veterans. The others are former San Diego Padres pitcher Juan Eichelberger, 31, former Philadelphia Phillies reliever Ed Farmer, 35, and outfielder Terry Bogener, 29, ho had a short stint with the Texas Rangers.

Former Padres first baseman Broderick Perkins, 30, is on the injured reserve list.

Altogether, they have played more than 3,000 games and more than 60 years in the major leagues.

For various reasons, the major leagues gave up on them. Now, they're waiting — hoping — for one more chance.

"We all want to make it back to the top," Thomas said. "Because that's where we belong.

"It's not so much chasing the dream — I've already got the World Series ring — but it's proving something to yourself and to everybody else."

Thomas has four children back in the Los Angeles area. He's alone in Miami, riding minor league buses for the first time since the late '60s.

"It's like regressing back to the beginning," he said. "I started in the Florida State League with Cocoa. Now I'm back again, but with a different perspective."

Farmer balked at the minor leagues last year when the Oakland A's sent him to their Tacoma farm club. "Halfway through the season I packed my bags and took off," he said.

When spring rolled around again, though, baseball called.

"I'm not doing it because I have to," he said. "I'm doing it because I want to. My wife wanted me to go back and play. She knew how much it meant to me."

Rasmussen, who pitched for the St. Louis Cardinals in their World Series season of 1982, couldn't hook up with a big-league club in spring training. He had given up on baseball and had started a new career in real estate. Then he heard about the Marlins.

"I figured I might as well go for it one more time," he said. "You can always sell real estate, but you've only got so many years of baseball. Anyway, it's a lot more fun playing ball than anything else I've ever done."

The veterans say the competition in Class A is strong enough to test their skills. The statistics back them up.

Even with the veterans, the Marlins ere only 5-9 after 14 games. Farmer was 1-0, but Eichelberger and Rasmussen both were 0-1 and Torrez was 1-1 going into the weekend. Essian, who had played only three games, was batting .125, while Bogener was at .263.

Farmer said the pitchers actually have it tougher than they do in the major leagues because they don't have the luxury of knowing the hitters' tendencies from years of watching them play.

Thomas, whose batting average has been hovering around .300, says the everyday players aren't down here to prove themselves. They just want to stay sharp.

They certainly aren't in Miami to get rich.

"You're paid enough to exist, that's about it," Thomas said. But the emotional benefits make up for the lack of pay. The veterans are pulling for each other. The real celebration will come when one of them is snared by a major league club in need of a fast fix.

"You just have to be in the right place at the right time," Rasmussen said. "It's all timing. If you're 10-0 and nobody needs a pitcher, you're out of luck. You just have to hope somebody needs a pitcher and they don't have anyone at the AAA level they're comfortable with."

The chances are slim, and the desire may begin to wane as the oppressive summer heat turns Florida into a sauna. Thomas already is a little antsy.

"I don't know how much longer my patience can last," he said, swatting at an early mosquito.

But the others talk about sticking it out for the entire summer, if necessary. Even if they don't make it to the big leagues again, they say, this experience might help them land a coaching job.

"There's going to be a time when I have to sit don and say, 'It's time to give the game up to the kids,' " Farmer said. "That could be next week, it could be next year, it could be four years from now. I just know it isn't now."

Question Box

By RAY CORIO
New York Times News Service

QUESTION: Are there any major leaguers who hit more than 500 home runs and stole more than 200 bases in their careers? How about the opposite — 500 stolen bases and 200 homers?

Of the 13 players who hit more than 500 home runs, four also stole bases more than 200 times: Henry Aaron, with 755 home runs and 240 stolen bases; Willie Mays, with 660 and 338; Frank Robinson, with 586 and 204, and Reggie Jackson, who entered this season with 503 home runs and 224 stolen bases.

There are 29 players who stole more than 500 bases in their careers, but only one who also hit more than 200 homers: Joe Morgan. He retired last year with 268 homers and 689 stolen bases.

QUESTION: On an unusually windy day for baseball, Team A has runners on first and second with one out. When the batter hits a pop-up to the second baseman, the umpire invokes the infield fly rule, meaning the batter is automatically out whether the ball is caught or not. But the swirling wind makes for a difficult play on the ball, and the runner from second, sensing that the ball might not be caught by the Team B second baseman, begins moving toward third base. If the second baseman drops the infield fly and the Team A runner from second reaches third base safely, what is the ruling if the ball is quickly picked up by the infielder and he steps on second base? Is the runner from second doubled up or is the runner on first forced out?

Neither one. Only the batter is out, and Team A now has runners on first and third with two out. There is no force play in effect at second base because with the batter already called out, there is no reason for the runner on first to be forced to go to second. In an infield fly rule situation, runners can choose to proceed at their own risk. In this case, the runner from second gambled that the ball would fall safely or would be dropped, and when it was, he advanced. Had the ball been caught, though, and the play made at second, the runner would have been out, retiring the side.

QUESTION: Last month, during the week before college basketball's Final Four, many newspapers published a list of annual all-tournament Division I teams selected from 1952-84. In the years 1961, 1971 and 1980, one or more spots on the team were listed as "vacated." Why were they vacant?

Under NCAA rules, whenever a team or player is declared ineligible subsequent to the tournament, all team and player records and achievements are deleted and the team's final standing in the tournament is vacated. This happened

Tigers call on minor leaguer to beat Brewers, 3-2

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Alex Sanchez, called up from the minors earlier in the week, slammed a triple and home run and drove in all three Detroit runs, powering the Tigers to a 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday.

Dan Petry, 4-1, scattered six hits and struck out five in 8⅓ innings. Willie Hernandez got the final two outs for his fourth save after Robin Yount singled with one out in the Brewers' ninth.

Chet Lemon started a Detroit rally in the seventh inning with a fly ball that was dropped by left fielder Yount. Sanchez, who was acquired in a minor-league with San Francisco earlier this month and was appearing in his fourth game with Detroit, followed with his first home run of the season, tagging a 2-2 pitch off Danny Darwin.

Darwin, 2-1, who pitched a two-hit shutout against the Tigers on April 17, gave up five hits, one walk and had three strikeouts.

White Sox 5, Yankees 4

CHICAGO — Carlton Fisk looped a single over a drawn-in infield with the bases loaded, capping a two-run rally on five consecutive singles in the bottom of the 11th inning to give the Chicago White Sox a victory over the New York Yankees.

Singles by Tim Hulett, former Midland Cub Scott Fletcher — his fourth consecutive hit — and Harold Baines loaded the bases against Bob Shirley, 0-1, the third New York pitcher. Tom Paciorek blooped a single to right, scoring Hulett and chasing Shirley.

Fisk poked a 1-1 pitch from Dale Murray just over third baseman Mike Pagliarulo to score pinch runner Rudy Law, the ball barely reaching the outfield grass.

Gene Nelson, 1-1, Chicago's fourth pitcher, went the final 3⅓ innings and got the win although he walked Rickey Henderson with the bases loaded in the top of the 11th to give the Yankees a 4-3 lead.

The White Sox also rallied in the ninth, tying the score against New York relief ace Dave Righetti with two out on Fletcher's RBI single and a run-scoring double by Baines.

Luis Salazar singled with one out and pinch hitter Jerry Hairston walked. After pinch hitter Ron Kittle struck out, Fletcher, who drove in Chicago's first run with a seventh-inning single, singled to score Salazar. Baines then doubled down the third-base line, scoring pinch runner Daryl Boston with the tying run.

Don Baylor opened the top of the 11th with a single and advanced on a wild pitch. With two out, Butch Wynegar was intentionally walked and pinch hitter Ken Griffey and Henderson also walked before Willie Randolph struck out.

Twins 8, Athletics 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Mickey Hatcher went 5-for-5, the first five-hit game of his career, as the streaking Minnesota Twins won their seventh straight game with a win over the Oakland A's.

Winner Frank Viola, 3-2, scattered 13 hits in 8⅓ innings before Ron Davis came on for his third save. The Twins scored all their runs off Don Sutton, 2-2.

Minnesota sent nine batters to the plate in the second inning and took a 3-0 lead. Doubles by Gary Gaetti and Greg Gagne produced the first run. After Kirby Puckett walked with two out, Hatcher and Kent Hrbek delivered RBI singles.

Oakland nicked Viola for a run in the fourth on Dusty Baker's sacrifice fly but Minnesota battered Sutton for four runs in the bottom of the fourth. Rookie Mark Salas started it with his first major-league homer. Hatcher doubled with one out and scored on Tom Brunansky's single. After Roy Smalley walked, Gaetti double two runs across and the Twins led 7-1.

Royals 5, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — Jim Sundberg led off the ninth inning with his third hit, a bloop single, and scored on consecutive errors by Boston first baseman Bill Buckner and second baseman Marty Barrett, giving the Kansas City Royals a victory over the Red Sox.

The Royals won the game after the Red Sox tied it 4-4 on Rick Miller's pinch single with two out in the eighth.

Kansas City needed only four pitches to score the winning run against Boston relief ace Bob Stanley, 0-2. Sundberg, who had two earlier doubles, poked his opposite-field single to right, took third as Buckner fielded Onix Concepcion's bunt and threw wildly to second and scored when Willie Wilson's grounder caromed off Barrett's glove.

Dan Quisenberry, 2-2, the third of four Kansas City pitchers, was the winner. He gave up an unearned run in the eighth as a result of his wild pickoff attempt.

Indians 10, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Tony Bernazard doubled in the tying run and scored on a single by former Midland Cub Joe Carter as the Cleveland Indians scored eight runs in the eighth inning to defeat the Baltimore Orioles.

Held to one hit through seven innings, the Indians tied the score 3-3 against Baltimore starter Scott McGregor, 1-2, on a walk to Carmen Castillo and consecutive RBI doubles by Butch Benton and Bernazard.

Reliever Don Asse walked Julio Franco on four pitches before yielding the game-winning hit to Carter, who also drove in Cleveland's first run with a sacrifice fly in the first.

After Andre Thornton fanned for the second out, Pat Tabler and Brook Jacoby rapped RBI singles. Tabler's hit extended his hitting streak to 14 games.

The last three runs scored on infield singles by pinch-hitter George Vukovich, Benton and Bernazard. All three hits were off reliever Tippy Martinez. Benton and Bernazard each had a single and double and an RBI in the inning.

The Indians added a run in the ninth on Jacoby's RBI single before the Orioles came back with a run in the bottom of the inning on a run-scoring single by Rick Dempsey.

McGregor yielded an unearned run in the first when Brett Butler reached on an error by third baseman Wayne Gross, stole second, advanced on an infield out, and scored on Carter's sacrifice fly.

The Orioles tied the score with an unearned run in the second off Don Schultze. Eddie Murray singled, moved around to third on a passed ball and an infield out, and scored when Larry Sheets singled off the glove of shortstop Franco.

Cal Ripken's double, an infield out, and Fred Lynn's sacrifice fly made it 2-1 Baltimore in the fourth, and Jim Dwyer rapped an RBI single in the Orioles' fifth after Mike Young walked and was sacrificed to second.

Angels 6, Mariners 1

SEATTLE — Brian Downing drove in four runs with a single and a homer to back the seven-hit pitching of Jim Slaton and lead the California Angels to a victory over the slumping Seattle Mariners.

After a 6-0 start, the Mariners dropped their seventh straight game and 11 in the last 12.

Downing singled home Gary Pettis in the third inning and then greeted reliever Ed Nunez with a three-run homer in the seventh. Slaton, 3-0, walked two and struck out three in going the distance for the first time this year.

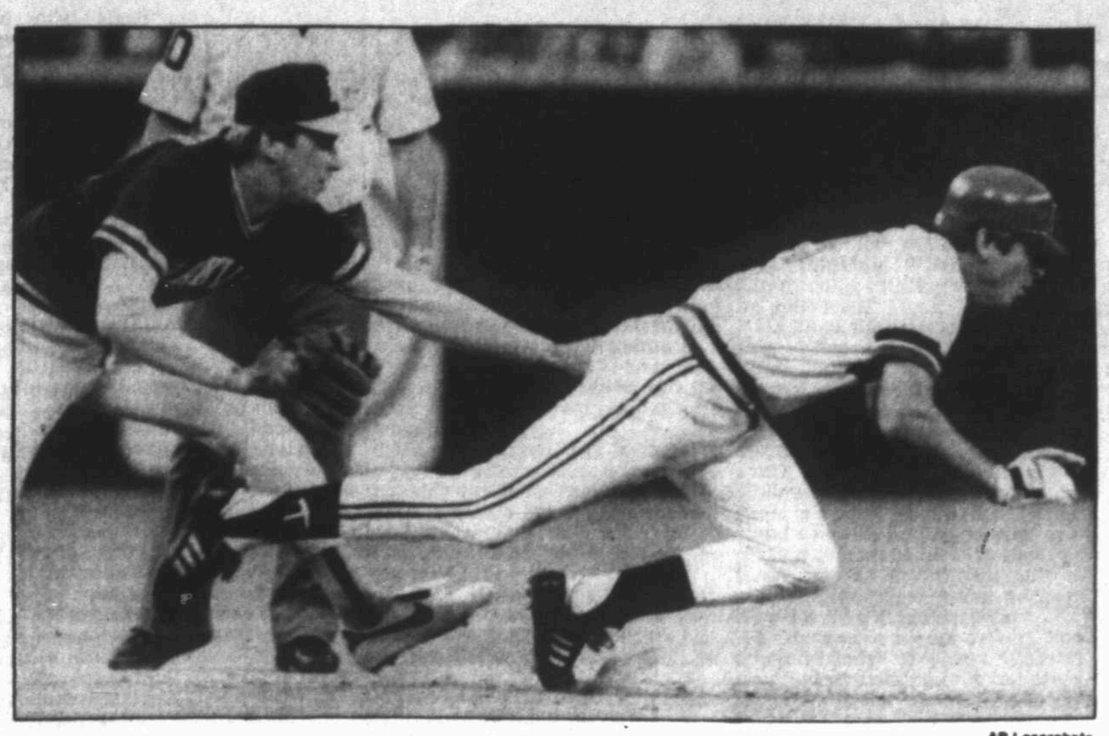

Mariners starter Matt Young, 1-3, had to leave the game with one out in the fifth inning when he felt something pop in his left elbow. Initial examination revealed nothing, but Young will be re-examined Sunday, the club said.

Pettis doubled to lead off the first inning. Rod Carew bunted for a hit, moving Pettis to third. Downing grounded into a double play for a 1-0 Angel lead.

In the third, Pettis drew a leadoff walk, took second on a sacrifice by Carew. Second baseman Harold Reynolds tried to sneak in behind Pettis for an attempted pickoff, and Downing punched a single through the vacant right side for a 2-0 lead.

Seattle scored its run in the third when Domingo Ramos singled and scored on a two-out double by Phil Bradley. Dick Schofield belted a two-out solo homer in the fourth, his fourth of the year, to give the Angels a 3-1 advantage.

Pettis doubled off reliever Dave Geisel with one out in the sixth. Carew walked, and Nunez came on to pitch. Downing drove his three-run homer for a 6-1 lead, his first homer.

Minnesota's Mickey Hatcher dives back to second base but not before being tagged by Oakland pitcher Jeff Kaiser Saturday. Hatcher went 5-for-5 for as the Twins posted their seventh straight victory, 8-6.

Rainbow Warriors claim two WAC wins from Minors

EL PASO (AP) — Todd Crosby had six RBIs to lead Hawaii to an 11-6 victory over the University of Texas at El Paso in the second game of a Western Athletic Conference doubleheader Saturday.

Hawaii won the first game 12-4 and ran its winning streak to three games and pushed its WAC Southern division record to 11-9 while UTEP fell to 8-12. The Rainbows have four games remaining, all at home against San Diego State. UTEP has four games remaining, all on the road against New Mexico.

The Miners played the first game all even (2-2) through three frames. But the hard-hitting Rainbows picked up three runs in the fourth, four more in the fifth and three more in the sixth to pull away.

The Miners appeared somewhat drained when they took the field for Game Two. And Hawaii took advantage. It got one in the first, three in the third, three more in the fourth and another two in the top of the fifth to take a commanding 9-0 lead.

Mark Stathas homered for the Miners in the sixth and eighth for three runs.

When you offer a three-year, unlimited mileage limited warranty, your car has to be prepared for anything.

So you can't simply electrogalvanize the body against rust. You have to dip it in hot zinc.

You can't build an engine that wears out too quickly. We reduced internal friction to help increase our engine's life expectancy.

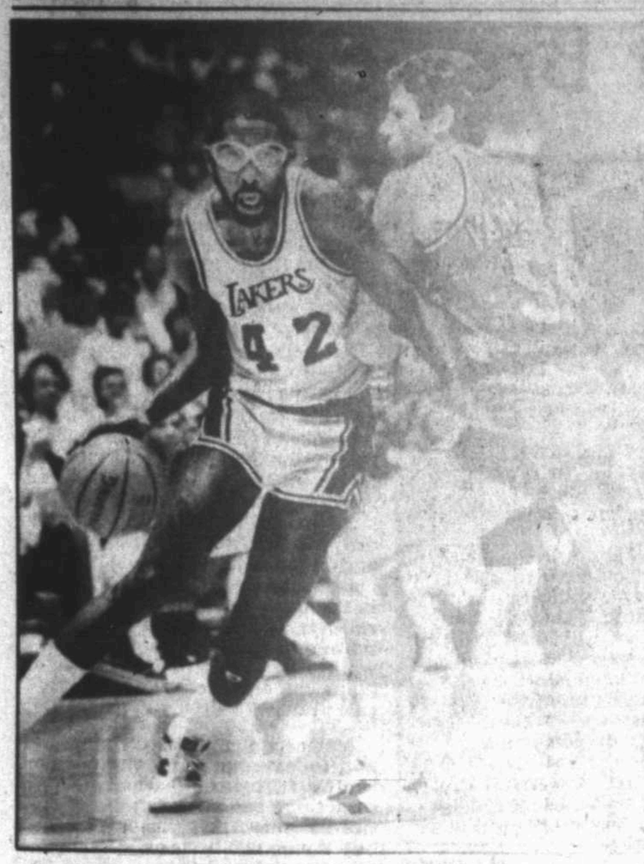

You can't overlook the smallest detail. Inevitably, that will be the one part that fails.

You see, the best thing about getting a warranty this good is that you get a car this good to go with it. VOLVO

The Lakers, who swept their best-of-five opening playoff series against the Phoenix Suns with three lopsided victories, hadn't played since Tuesday and appeared well-rested.

The Trail Blazers had just one day off, locking up their series against the Dallas Mavericks in four games with a victory Thursday night.

The Lakers played a superlative first half to take control of the series opener against the Trail Blazers.

Worthy scored 14 points, Scott and Abdul-Jabbar 12 each, and Kurt Rambis 10 in the opening two quarters as Los Angeles rolled up a 73-45 halftime lead.

Playing strong defense and getting their running game in high gear, the Lakers reeled off a 21-6 string early in the first quarter to take a 23-8 lead.

They held a 33-24 edge at the end of the opening period, then took command by outscoring the Trail Blazers 40-21 in the second quarter.

Portland never threatened in the second half.

The 76ers won three of the first four decisions, all decided by four points or less, but the Bucks took the last two head-to-head contests by 19-point margins.

"Milwaukee is very consistent, and they execute well," said Philadelphia forward Bobby Jones. "We'll have to have a lot of patience."

Old pro Julius Erving, in his ninth straight playoff with the 76ers, said: "This is a new season. We were expected to go this far. Now, we have to prove ourselves."

It was Erving who dispelled any notions the Bullets may have had of becoming only the second team in NBA history to overcome a 2-0 deficit and win a best-of-five series.

Washington made a gallant comeback in Friday night's game, reducing a 61-43 deficit to 72-68 just before the end of the third period. But Erving took charge as the fourth quarter began.

Isiah Thomas ...eat even when he's off

Associated Press

There's much more to Isiah Thomas than a baby face and a pretty pass.

A fourth-year pro at the age of 23, the former All-America guard at Indiana is leading the Detroit Pistons into the second round of the National Basketball Association with a combination of scoring, defense and record-breaking assists.

"He is great in a multitude of ways," Pistons Coach Chuck Daly says. "He's a great offensive player, a great passer, and a great competitor. There's not much he can't do. Forget his size. His heart's bigger than most players."

At 6-foot-1, Thomas could be called the NBA's "Little Big Man." And he is one of those ... usually manages ... great even when ... night. Take his ... for instance.

...Thomas' success is his ...inside the opponent's defense. He reduces a relatively simple game to its simplest terms: Going where the defense is weakest and reacting away from where it reacts.

"Isiah is so quick and he puts so much pressure on your defense," Williams said. "You've got to stop him from penetrating. When Isiah comes inside, it gives your defense trouble. Even if you keep him from shooting, the rest of the team knows to look for a pass and get off the open shot."

In NBA history, only Archibald and Oscar Robertson rival Thomas in combining scoring and playmaking in the same season.

Archibald is the only player to win both the assist and scoring titles in the same season, averaging 34.9 points and 11.4 assists for Kansas City-Omaha in 1972-73. True to Daly's theory, the Kings finished 36-46.

In Robertson's best season, 1965-66, he averaged 31.3 points and 11.1 assists for Cincinnati, which never came close to a championship.

The Pistons have yet to come close to title caliber with Thomas in the backcourt.

He was bitterly disappointed a year ago when Detroit lost to New York 3-2 in a best-of-5 series, losing one game by one point and the fifth game in overtime. Consequently, the Thomas trademark — his smile — has been missing lately, because of the intensity of the playoffs.

"You only see me 40 minutes a day," Thomas said, smiling. "I still laugh and joke. But it's like anything else. There's a time for it and a time to be serious."

DENVER (AP) — The Nuggets returned to Denver in a stormy mood Saturday after failing to nail down their best-of-five National Basketball Association series against the Spurs in San Antonio.

"It's an angry feeling we got now," said Denver guard Mike Evans. "I wish we could have done it the easy way. But we just always seem to put that extra pressure on ourselves."

The troublesome Spurs tied up the series 2-2 with a 116-111 victory Friday. The final game of the first round is set for 8 p.m. Sunday.

"It's good to be going to Denver Sunday. We're not ready to wash our socks ... yet," said Spurs point guard Johnny Moore, who scored 17 points in the victory.

Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons also was looking past the Nuggets.

"We go back there to play and we're going to give it our best shot ... And I told everybody to take enough clothes to go somewhere else," Fitzsimmons said.

Sunday's winner will take on either Houston or Utah in the second round of the NBA playoffs.

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics, battered but unbowed, move on to Round 2 in quest of another National Basketball Association championship Sunday in the opener of a best-of-seven series with the Detroit Pistons.

"We're going to have to play better than we did against Cleveland," said ailing Boston superstar Larry Bird. "I'd describe the Cleveland series as very disgusting."

The Celtics survived a whopping scare as they weathered the Cavaliers' sneak punches to capture the best-of-5 series 3-1, winning three games by a total of seven points.

That enabled them to advance to the Eastern Conference semifinals in their bid to become the first NBA team in 16 years to repeat as champion.

Rockets have last chance at Jazz

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets survived a nightmarish final two minutes Friday against Utah and earned the right to host the Jazz Sunday in the final game of their first-round National Basketball Association playoff series.

The Rockets held on for a 96-94 in the Salt Dome Friday night despite three three-point goals in 27 seconds by Utah's Darrell Griffith to knot the best of five series at two games each.

The winner of Sunday's noon tipoff in The Summit will advance to the second round against either Denver or San Antonio, who also are tied 2-2 going into their final clash Sunday night.

"Those last two minutes were a nightmare," Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said. "I tell everyone who says they want to go into coaching to just lie down until the urge passes."

"It's a one-game series. I don't like playing at noon even if it's for national television. I like to see both teams rest more," Fitch said.

The Rockets held a comfortable 94-83 lead in the final minute before Griffith's long range assault that brought the Rockets back to the brink of elimination. Houston led by only 94-92 with 51 seconds to play.

The victory wasn't assured until Akeem Olajuwon, who scored 18 points, rejected a desparation shot by John Stockton.

Houston's comeback climaxed a second half surge after the Rockets trailed 49-38 at the half. Olajuwon's fourth quarter jump hook put the Rockets ahead for good at 69-68.

"The last time out, we called and got what we wanted," Jazz Coach Frank Layden said. "We wanted to rush the ball up the court (on final shot) and take it to the basket. John Stockton did the right thing. Akeem made a great play in blocking the shot."

Layden doesn't see any favorites in Sunday's final game.

"We have to be ready to play," Layden said. "We go there humbly. It's a one game series. One team goes on vacation, the other goes to San Antonio or Denver."

The surprising Jazz, which finished the regular season 41-41, beat Houston 115-101 in the series opener. The Rockets evened the series in the second game play in Houston with a 122-96 blowout before shifting to the Salt Palace in Salt Lake City.

The Jazz swatted the Rockets 112-104 Wednesday to put the Rockets in jeopardy of elimination prior to Friday night's comeback.

Fitch called Friday's first half the worst he'd seen his young team play.

"At the half, I said 'I've known you guys for a long time and I never saw you play a poorer half — but it's not too late, let's turn it around,'" Fitch said. "Then we got ourselves regrouped and we did it. We didn't change the defense we just got the offense going."

Olajuwon says the Rockets now have the advantage.

Harrison or Rathbone could play Hobbs' part

The first impression you get about David Hobbs, the race driver, is that his story would make a nice part for Rex Harrison. Basil Rathbone, even.

There's a little bit of Professor 'iggins about David, a dash of Sherlock Holmes. There's a faint hint of disdain, a generous overlay of impatience, irascibility and a leavening of the debonair. In short, veddy British, old boy. It's not hard to picture him in a bowler hat and carrying a brolly, on his way to Whitehall to see about shoring up the empire for another day.

There's cynicism, realism, and an absolute refusal to be surprised by anything that ever happens — all the things that made England great.

If you didn't know what he did for a living you might take him to be Inspector Hobbs of Scotland Yard, or even Hobbs of British Intelligence. He looks too urbane to be what he is — an automobile racer, one of the best.

Hobbs is a Brit by birth and training, but Dad, Howard Hobbs, was an Aussie inventor who came up with one of the first automatic transmission patents and migrated to England in the 1930s to market it.

Son, David, much preferred speeding cars to modifying them and, as soon as he could, was tooling Mum's Morris Oxford runabout in local races near his home-town of Leamington, not necessarily with Mum's permission.

IT WAS a heyday of British racing, with Stirling Moss, Jimmy Clark and Jackie Stewart burning up Europe's road courses. Young David Hobbs couldn't wait to join them. He "borrowed" Dad's Jaguar, an XK-140 in mint condition, to move up in class. When last seen, the Jag was upside down in a turn. Young David wasn't hurt, but the car was.

"Let's just say we were not able to return it to its pristine condition again," Hobbs says now. "Let's just say it was complicated scrap."

His father was intrigued. He didn't think it was possible to turn a Jaguar upside down. Young Hobbs knew better. "You can if you concentrate," he reported.

Far from discouraging young Master Hobbs, the crash increased the appeal of racing. "Look at it this way," he said. "The way I drove, it was hardly boring."

Hobbs was brought up during the Blitz and, even though his home was not far from Coventry, which was leveled by German bombers, he doesn't remember Leamington being bombed much. "We hid under the kitchen table when we heard the Jerries come over," he said, "but my recollection is, only the odd jettisoned bomb ever fell nearby."

After he had returned Dad's Jag, in a bag, Hobbs migrated to a Lotus Elite and club racing on a grand scale. When he won 14 of 18 starts, sponsors began to notice.

Hobbs hit the international scene with the reputation of a guy who would drive anything that moved under its own power, from a Dixie stock car to a London beer lorry.

He drove McLarens in Tasmania, Lolas at Watkins Glen. He had a certain elegance of driving style that prompted Roger Penske to team him with the late Mark Donohue in a Ferrari in the Daytona 24-hour race. If you had the car, Hobbs had the foot. Have flameproof coverall, will travel.

He even braved Indy in the days when the international drivers were phasing out. In his first start in 1971, he qualified a Penske product 16th at 169.571 m.p.h. and was running 12th when his engine quit on the main straight.

"Rick Muther was coming up behind and had no place to go," Hobbs recalled. "He decided his best choice was to go over or through me."

The cars were totalled, but the drivers escaped.

"Foyt was coming down the main straight like a bullet," Hobbs said, "and I started to climb the fence to get out of there and I could just see Foyt thinking, 'What's that crazy Limey doing climbing the walls? Has he gone mad?'"

As usual, the crash did not disturb the unflappable Brit, and Hobbs came back for more. In 1974, he started ninth and finished fifth.

AS AN athlete who has driven in enduros in South Africa, sprints in south England, stocks south of the Mason-Dixon line, and in sports car races all over, Hobbs finds it tiresome when he notices peoples' eyes glazing over while he talks about Le Mans or the Nurburgring, only to suddenly pop open when he mentions his rides at Indianapolis.

"'Oh, you're a real driver! You drove at Indy!' they say. 'Right!' I say. 'Bloody nothing to it compared to a trick in the rain at night in the south of France.'"

This weekend at Riverside, Calif., D. Hobbs, Esq., will climb into something called the Bayside Disposal-Bridgestone Tires Porsche 962. As Hobbs pointed out, this is probably the first car to be associated with a rubbish business before a race. The event is the Los Angeles Times/Nissan Grand Prix of Endurance, a 600-kilometer test of rubber, steel and nerves. If the rubber and steel make it, Hobbs will take care of the rest.

Hobbs explained his link-up with a trash disposal sponsor by opining that a man gets a ride anywhere he can in these days of highly competitive and highly expensive motor racing.

After all, he's always done that. In the old days, he did it by sneaking into the garage and sneaking the family sedan out, liberating it from its humdrum existence.

Hillin giving racing good return

From Staff Reports

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — With less than 40 NASCAR Grand National races to his credit, Midland's 20-year-old Bobby Hillin Jr. understands why some track programs and newspapers are still misspelling his name.

Today's Sovran Bank 500 at the Martinsville Speedway will be his next on-track opportunity to become better known, but Hillin isn't content to just wait for weekend exposure.

"All professional athletes have a responsibility to do more than just play the sport they're in," says Hillin. "In Winston Cup racing, a driver is expected to represent his sport to the general public and to take care of the fans who support it so well. I work hard to do that part of my job and I realize that it will also help me become recognized by more fans."

Hillin had little trouble with the recognition factor when he was honorable mention All-District as a 170-pound defensive tackle at Midland High a couple of years back in the small world of District 4-5A. But things are a little tougher on the national level, despite a couple of Top 10 finishes this year on the NASCAR circuit.

Now in his fourth Grand National season, Stavola Bros. Racing's young driver has already been called upon to participate in a wide range of extra-cirricular activities.

"I've been in a tractor race that involved the mayor of Charlotte (N.C.), visited local elementary schools, judged dance and pretty legs contests, been a gust disc jockey, been the guest speaker at a YMCA banquet and appeared on television talk shows."

Even when he's at home, Hillin works to help his sport. "Living in a condo at Charlotte Motor Speedway, I've sort of become the 'designated driver' to take businessmen and fans for rides around the track."

Recently, Hillin and his teammates completed work on a series of radio and television commercials for a lending institution and he's one of 21 Grand National drivers who lent their vocal talents to a record album of songs about their careers.

While Hillin admits that some of the off-track activities are fun, and a few do pay, he says he would do them anyway.

"Some of the time I may not feel like going to another shopping center or stopping to talk, but this sport and the people who support it deserve my time and they're going to get it."

The Sovran Bank 500 will be Hillin's first race at the .526-mile Martinsville Speedway. In two prevous short track events of 1985, Hillin started 20th and stayed clear of trouble to finish 11th in his first race at Richmond. Three weeks ago, Hillin ran as high as fourth before finishing ninth in his first race at Bristol.

At this pace, it won't take long for the media and fans to learn the correct spelling of 'Hitlin', 'Hillum', 'Hillen'....Hillin.

First black driver at Indy withdraws after practice

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Willy T. Ribbs, the first black driver to enter the Indianapolis 500, withdrew on Saturday, hours after taking his first practice laps at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

He cited a lack of time to prepare his new March-Cosworth race car and his own unfamiliarity with the car and his new racing team. On Wednesday, Ribbs signed a two-race deal to drive for longtime Indy car owner Sherman Armstrong and boxing promoter Don King.

"We felt it was best for everyone if I made my Indy-car debut at the Meadowlands (U.S. Grand Prix) race" on June 30, Ribbs said.

"Of course, I am disappointed, but for everyone involved, I need more time to familiarize myself with the car and this team," he said. "Expecting me to come in here and do as well as we want to do is like getting me a pair of boxing gloves one morning and telling me I'm supposed to fight Muhammad Ali that night."

Ribbs, 29, of San Jose, Calif., arrived at the track for his first practice run late Friday afternoon, but the car wasn't ready at that time. He finally got onto the track Saturday morning, becoming the first black driver — as far as anyone knows — ever to take a practice lap at the Speedway.

He said he hoped to return to Indianapolis and drive next year.

"It is something I feel I will be ready for soon," said Ribbs, a veteran road racer on the Trans-Am circuit.

Chief's Crown ready for Derby

LOUISVILLE (AP) — It looks like the Kentucky Derby will have the winner of a 2-year-old championship this year for the first time since 1980.

That would be Chief's Crown ... and that colt has served notice that he is ready for a big effort in the 1¼-mile Derby next Saturday at Churchill Downs.

Chief's Crown, unbeaten in three starts this year, prepped for the Derby with a fast and easy performance that overwhelmed three rivals Thursday in the 1⅛-mile Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland.

Leading almost all the way, Chief's Crown, ridden by Don MacBeth, won in 1:47 3-5, just one-fifth of a second off the track record set in 1957 by Round Table and equaled by two others.

Chief's Crown sizzled the final eighth-mile in 11:4-5 in beating Floating Reserve by 5½ lengths.

"I don't care who he's going to go against, he's going to whip them," Jerome J. "Bud" Sarner, trainer of Banner Bob, third in the Blue Grass, said of Chief's Crown.

Chief's Crown's other wins this year were in the seven-furlong Swale and the 1⅛-mile Flamingo.

Among those who will challenge Chief's Crown in the Derby are front-runners Spend A Buck, Eternal Prince and Rhoman Rule and stretch-running Proud Truth and Tank's Prospect.

It is possible that this year's Derby could be the smallest since 1980. The last four Derby fields numbered 21 in 1981, 19 in 1982, and 20 each in 1983 and 1984.

This year's field could be 15. However, if it appears the 20-horse limit is going to be reached and earnings are no criteria to get into the race, then several owners could make last-minute decisions to run and swell the field to the limit. The race would be worth a Derby record $721,600 with 20 starters.

There were 13 three-year-olds in the 1980 Derby, which was won by the filly Genuine Risk. There were 10 in 1979 when Spectacular Bid won. He was the last 2-year-old champion to win the Derby the following year.

The last winner of a 2-year-old title to run in the Derby was Rockhill Native, who finished sixth in 1980. The next four juvenile champions — Lord Avie, Deputy Minister, Roving Boy and Devil's Bag — failed to make the Derby because of injuries.

It appeared last January that Chief's Crown might miss the Derby when his raining was interrupted by a virus. But he rebounded under the patient handling of trainer Roger Laurin.

Laurin is the son of trainer Lucien Laurin, who won the Derby in 1972 with Riva Ridge and in 1973 with Secretariat.

Another, who came back from injury is Spend A Buck. After finishing third to Chief's Crown and Tank's Prospect in the $1 million Breeders' Cup Juvenile last Nov. 10, Spend A Buck underwent arthroscopic surgery for a bone chip in his right knee.

In his first start this year, Spend a Buck, finished third in the seven-furlong Bay Shore March 23. Then he won the Cherry Hill Mile by 10 lengths in a Garden State track record of 1:35 2-5 and followed with a 9½-length victory in the 1⅛-mile Garden State Stakes in 1:45 4-5 April 20.

The Garden State time was just two fifths of a second over the world record set by Secretariat in 1973. It should be noted that $20,000 claimers ran six furlongs in 1:09 on the new Garden State track that night. Nonetheless, Spend A Buck's performance was dazzling.

"He ran so powerfully, I think he'll have no problem getting the (Derby) distance," said Angel Cordero, who rides the Cam Gambolati-trained Spend A Buc. "A lot depends on who wants to run with him, but it will have to be a pretty fast one."

Tank's Prospect also overcame a physical problem. After finishing last in the 1⅛-mile Santa Anita Derby April 6, the colt has minor surgery to correct a problem that was restricting air to the trachea.

On April 20, Tank's Prospect won the 1⅛-mile Arkansas Derby by 6½ lengths in 1:48 3-5.

Eternal Prince earned his Derby berth with wire-to-wire victories in the one-mile Gotham and the 1⅛-mile Wood Memorial April 20. The colt was bred by George M. Steinbrenner III and sold as a 2-year-old to Brian J. Hurst for $17,500. After the Gotham, Steinbrenner, the principal owner of the New York Yankees, bought a 37.5 percent interest in Eternal Prince, reportedly for about $1 million.

Rhoman Rule, a Pennsylvania-bred bought for $310,000 by Kentucky breeder Brownell Combs, won his first two starts of the year on the lead — a seven-furlong allowance and the 1⅛-mile Everglades March 16. He finished third in the Wood run on a muddy track rated as good, but trainer Angel Penna Jr. said: "My horse ran really well for being off all that time. I also think he hated the track."

Three tied for Legends lead

AUSTIN (AP) - Dramatics on the 18th hole locked the $500,000 Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf into a three-way tie Saturday at the 54-hole mark.

Defending champions Billy Casper and Gay Brewer bogied the final hole, Don January and Gene Littler parred it, and Miller Barber and Bob Goalby birdied the 590-yard toughie.

The three teams posted a three-day total of 17-under par 193 over the tight-and-tricky 6,584-yard Par 70 course.

Casper and Brewer shot a 4-under par 66 and both got into trouble on the lengthy final hole. Brewer had the best chance to salvage par but couldn't hole a downhill, sidewinding four-footer.

Brewer said his second shot bounced off a television camera man behind a tree.

"Spectators told me the ball hit the guy," Brewer said. "Then it landed in the worst place it could-behind the tree."

Brewer finally reached the green in four but missed a treacherous downhill 4-footer. Casper missed a 10-footer for par.

Barber chipped in from off the 18th green for birdie much to the delight of partner Goalby for a 6-under par 64.

The usually placid "Mr. X" danced a jig after he made his sixth birdie of the day.

January and Littler, paired together for the first time, shot the day's best round, 7-under par 63.

"It will take another 63 or less for us to win it tomorrow," said January. "We've got a pretty good team and we haven't shot our best round yet. Maybe this was the start of something good."

Barber countered that he and Goalby planned to shoot 62.

"That's what our plan is right now," said Barber.

"Keep it up," said Goalby. "You can shoot 62 by yourself."

Barber has now made 13 birdies in 54 holes of the tournament.

Casper said "I think a 63 will win it. That would certainly give a team a good shot at winning it."

At 15-under par were the teams of Sam Snead-Lee Elder (65) and Art Wall-Doug Sanders (66).

First prize in this $500,000 tournament is $100,000.

Kathy Whitworth and Mickey Wright, taking on the men for the first time in PGA sanctioned competition, bounced back with a respectable 1-under par 69 for a 4-under par 206. They soared to a 2-over par 72 on Friday.

Don January moves from trouble in a sand trap to the No. 1 green during Saturday's third round of the Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf Tournament at Austin. January and Gene Littler moved into a three-way tie with the teams of Billy Casper-Gay Brewer and Miller Barber-Bob Goalby with a score of 17-under-par.

Clark's S&H advantage shrinks with 75

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Judy Clark, who started the day with a seven-stroke lead, struggled to a 75 Saturday but managed to cling to a one-shot advantage over surging Colleen Walker after three rounds of the $175,000 LPGA S&H Classic.

Clark, whose 36-hole total of 15-under-par 129 set a tour record Friday, finished the day with a 54-hole score of 12-under-par 204. Walker fired a career-low 66 to move into contention for her first professional victory. She stands at 205 going into Sunday's final round.

Meanwhile, Alice Miller — the circuit's leading money winner — carded a 67 to go 10-under-par for the tournament, two strokes behind the leader on the par-72, 6,013-yard Pasadena Yacht and Country Club course.

Mindy Moore was in fourth place at 207, followed by Cindy Hill, Deedee Lasker and Kay Kennedy at 209. JoAnne Carner and Hollis Stacy, both two-time S&H winners, were among a group at 210.

It was a tough day for Clark, who dominated the 72-hole event during the first two rounds. She fired a tournament-record 64 Thursday and came back with a 65 on Friday to break the LPGA's 36-hole record by two strokes.

On Saturday, however, she managed only three birdies, bogeyed four other holes and took a double-bogey on the par 5, 443-yard 18th to fall back to the field chasing the $26,250 winner's check.

Clark's advantage slipped to just two shots over Walker after the leader bogeyed the 13th, 14th and 16th holes. She regained a stroke by dropping a 20-foot putt for birdie on No. 17.

Fergus, Floyd, Stewart share Houston lead

THE WOODLANDS (AP) — Keith Fergus from the University of Houston, first day leader Payne Stewart and Masters runnerup Ray Floyd edged away from a tight field to share a one-stroke lead Saturday after three rounds of the $500,000 Houston Open.

Fergus and Floyd each carded three under par 69s and Stewart had a 70 for a 208 total, eight under par, over the par 72, 7,042-yard Tournament Players Course at The Woodlands.

They held a one-stroke lead over five other golfers who finished the day at 209 that included Ralph Landrum, with a second round 68, Bobby Wadkins, 70, Gary Koch, 70, Phil Blackmar, 69 and Russ Cochran, 69.

Masters champion Bernhard Langer, trying to win three consecutive tournaments, finished the day at three over par 75 for an even par 216 total.

Floyd struggled on the front nine making the turn at one over par 37 for the round with three bogeys but he said he didn't worry about losing out in the tight race.

"I didn't see anyone running away with the tournament," Floyd said. "I thought I could have birdied every hole except the 18th."

Stewart, a former Southern Methodist golfer and a two-time tour winner, started the day at six under par for the tournament and shot par golf until he birdied the par 5 No. 6 hold. He went nine under, the lowest of any player in the tournament so far, with another birdie on No. 14.

Stewart's bogie on No. 16 cut him back to eight under par.

Blackmar, 6-7, 260, used his size to battle his way out of several roughs.

"There are a few guys out there who can get out of the rough better than others and I guess I'm one of them," Blackmar, a club pro at Corpus Christi last year before returning to the tour this year.

Blackmar made the turn at one under par for the round. He birdied No. 10 and three-putted for a bogie on No. 11.

"After that, I started playing better," he said.

Blackmar had four more birdies, including a 60-foot birdie putt on No. 16 and finished off with a bogey on the final hole.

Landrum started his round with a 20-foot birdie putt but missed several makeable birdie putts.

"To tell the truth, I didn't play as well today as I did in shooting a 68 yesterday," Landrum said.

Philip Parkin, who started the day at even par, had one of the most bizarre rounds of the day with a third round 69 for a 213 total, three under par.

Parkin had eight birdies, three bogies and one double bogey in his roller-coaster round. He started his round birdie-birdie-bogey-birdie over the first round holes.

Nordiques down Canadiens, 5-1

MONTREAL (AP) — Dale Hunter scored the go-ahead goal early in the second period and also handed out two assists Saturday night to lead the Quebec Nordiques to a 5-1 victory over Montreal and a 3-2 lead over the Canadiens in the National Hockey League's Adams Division playoff series.

The Nordiques could clinch the best-of-seven-game series, and a spot in the Wales Conference playoffs, with a victory Tuesday night at Quebec. A seventh game, if necessary, would be played Thursday at Montreal.

Hunter's second playoff goal, an unassisted score at 2:25 of the second period, gave the Nordiques a 2-1 lead and started a string of four unanswered goals by Quebec. Montreal defenseman Larry Robinson's errant pass from deep in his own zone went directly to Hunter, who jammed the puck past Canadiens goaltender Steve Penney.

Hunter and Bruce Bell assisted at 16:19 on a power-play goal by Alain Lemieux and Brent Ashton connected at 18:37 to make it 4-1.

Wilf Paiement's goal at 2:06 of the third period beat substitute goalie Doug Soetaert and gave Quebec a four-goal cushion.

Montreal, with a man advantage, took a 1-0 lead on Robinson's third playoff goal at 2:51 of the first. Montreal had three other power-play opportunities, but Quebec netminder Mario Gosselin was often spectacular in preventing further scoring.

Quebec finally got its offense untracked midway in the period when Brad Maxwell, off assists from Peter Stastny and Hunter, evened the score at 11:14.

Cooper claims baseball crown

From Staff Reports

Second-ranked Abilene Cooper clinched the District 4-5A championship Saturday with a 5-3 win over Abilene High.

The Cougars, 13-1, stayed one step ahead of runner-up Midland Lee. Cooper will now face the District 3-5A champion, either Lubbock Monterey or Plainview, when bi-district playoffs begin May 7.

Cooper's Terry Suggs (13-1) held the Eagles to four hits on the night, while striking out 10. First baseman Mickey Russell blasted his third home run of the season for AHS with one man aboard in the sixth, but the Eagles could do little else.

Cooper opened the scoring with a solo homer by Tommy Hollowell in the third. After that two runs scored, one on a single by Tom OPeierce. The Cougars added two in the fifth to ice it. Nathan Jones opened with a hit and Doug Hadley knocked a two-out double for one run than Dave Tollison singled him home.

IN OTHER district games, San Angelo finally put together some of the promise that was expected of them in a 14-0 whitewashing of Big Spring. The Bobcats sent 16 men to the plate and scored 13 times in the second inning. Pitcher Greg Lisewsky, who had one hit in district play all season, doubled and tripled to drive in four runs in San Angelo's big inning. He also went the distance for the win.

Brad Goodwin continued his hot hitting with a 4-4 performance with a pair of RBI. Second baseman Larry Montolongo clubbed his third homer of the year, with one man on to add to the big inning. The game was called after five innings of play.

In Odessa, basement dweller Odessa High kicked up its heels with a 9-6 win over crosstown rival Odessa Permian. Leftfielder Tanner Drake's first district home run of the year accounted for three of the Broncho runs. Alton Holloway hit a solo shot for Permian.

Joe Ray Jacques went the distance for his first only win of the year against two defeats.

In a make-up game played Friday in Big Spring, the Steers nipped Odessa High 4-3. Big Spring held a 2-1 advantage when the game was postponed because of rain. Mike Dodd of Big Spring evened his record at 4-4 for year with the win.

The loss assured the Bronchos of a last-place finish despite Saturday's win over Permian.

Longhorns defeat Aggies in doubleheader

Associated Press

SWC Baseball

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M's Mike Scanlin hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning to break a 4-4 tie, but Texas utilized an error in the infield to come back and win, 8-7, and sweep a Southwest Conference baseball doubleheader from Texas A&M Saturday.

The Longhorns won the first game, 9-2.

Texas maintained its SWC lead, upping its record to 49-10 overall and 13-5 in the conference. Texas A&M fell to 37-14 and 10-8.

In the first game A&M starter Tom Arrington gave up seven hits and six runs before he was relieved in the fourth by Russ Greene. But Greene gave up two more hits and three more runs.

After taking a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Doug Hondo's single, Texas stretched its lead to 5-0 in the third when Dodd Johnson hit his first of two homeruns. The second homerun came in the fifth, a solo shot that made the score 7-2.

Texas padded its 7-2 lead with two more points in the seventh, one on David Wrzesinski's RBI and the other on an A&M fielding error.

In the second game, A&M held the lead over Texas most of the way, but the Longhorns used an Aggie error in the top of the ninth to tie the game 7-7. The Longhorns went ahead on a base hit by Chuck Oertali. Texas brought in top starter Greg Swindell, who put down A&M in order in the bottom of the ninth to take the win.

Houston 6-3, Rice 5-2

HOUSTON — Ed Clark pitched a three-hitter to lead the 14th-ranked University of Houston to a 3-2 victory over Rice Saturday in the first game of a Southwest Conference doubleheader.

Houston won the second game, 6-5, breaking a 3-3 tie in the eighth inning on a squeeze bunt by Guy Garibay, a throwing error by Rice reliever Ed Holub and a double by Mark Grimes.

The Cougars are 40-10 overall and 12-6 in the SWC, while the Owls dipped to 27-21 and 5-15 in the conference.

In the first game, Rice led 2-0 after a pair of unearned runs in the top of fourth. But Houston tied it in the bottom of the inning and won it in the fifth when Mike Basso led off the inning with a single, moved to third on a single by Mike Ingle and then scored on a grounder by Bene Mota.

The Owls led 3-1 going to the bottom of the seventh inning of the second game but couldn't hang on. Rice starter Todd Ogden walked John Altobelli with two outs in the seventh and then gave up back-to-back doubles to Basso and Ingle to make it 3-3.

Arkansas 5-8, Baylor 4-11

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Arkansas clinched its ninth straight appearance in the Southwest Conference baseball tournament Saturday by edging Baylor 5-4 in the first game of a doubleheader.

In the second game, Baylor jumped out to an 11-0 lead and cut short a furious Razorback rally late in the game to win 11-8.

Arkansas, ranked No. 8 in the nation, is now 13-7 in the Southwest Conference and 33-12 for the year. Baylor, 18th-ranked, went to 14-7 in conference and 42-11 for the season.

Express does in Breakers, 17-12

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tailback Kevin Nelson carried the ball 20 times for 85 yards to lead the Los Angeles Express to a 17-12 win over the Portland Breakers Saturday in a United States Football League game.

Los Angeles marched 79 yards in 14 plays on its first possession to open the game's scoring. Quarterback Steve Young hit tight end Mike Sherrod with a 2-yard pass for the touchdown with 3:31 remaining in the first quarter.

Portland cut the deficit to 7-3 with 14:55 to play in the second quarter when place-kicker Tim Mazzetti booted a 50-yard field goal.

The Express struck next as quarterback Frank Seurer found wide receiver Jojo Townsell in the end zone for an 8-yard scoring strike with 5:28 remaining in the half.

Seurer, who entered the game after Young hobbled off the field, passed to wide receiver Duane Gunn for 71 yards — the big play of the 83-yard drive.

In the third quarter, Portland quarterback Doug Woodward tossed a 2-yard pass to fullback Louis Jackson with 13:07 left, making the score 14-9.

The TD was set up after a punt by Express kicker Jeff Patridge was blocked and rolled out of bounds on the 4-yard line.

Mazzetti's field goal from 41 yards out with 2:39 remaining in the period concluded Portland's scoring.

Dodgers shutout M-Angels, 4-0

From Staff Reports

The Midland Angels fell victim to the hot hand of Dodger pitcher Scott May Saturday night as the righthander tossed a five-hit shutout to earn a 4-0 victory.

The win gives San Antonio a three games to one edge over Midland in the five game series. The Angels (7-12) fell four games behind the West Division leading Dodgers (10-7). The Dodgers jumped on Angel starter Doug McKenzie (0-1) for two runs in the opening inning on a pair of walks to Ken Harvey and Reggie Williams and an RBI ground out by Larry See and a single by Jon DeBus.

San Antonio added two runs in the sixth on solo home runs by See, his third, and Jose Gonzalez, his second.

The closest the Angels came to scoring was in the fourth inning when rightfielder Tito Nanni singled with one out. Reggie Montgomery doubled Nanni to third base, but Bill Merrifield bounced back to the pitcher May who threw Nanni out at the plate.

May (1-0) had some control problems in the early innings walking five batters, but settled down to retire the last nine Angels without a baserunner.

Houston Astro Bill Doran leaps to avoid a hard slide by Atlanta's Rafael Ramirez (16), who broke up the double play attempt on batter Brad Komminsk Saturday.

Braves post 8-2 win over Astros

Mahler claims fifth victory; Murphy hits ninth homer

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Undefeated Rick Mahler won his fifth game to take the National League lead in victories and Dale Murphy belted his league-leading eighth and ninth homers as the Atlanta Braves defeated the Houston Astros 8-2 Saturday night.

Mahler allowed eight hits, struck out one and walked one in eight innings. Mike Scott, 1-1, was the loser, going 4 13 and giving up six runs on six hits.

Houston took a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Bill Doran led off with a single, moved to third on a single by Kevin Bass and scored on Denny Walling's base hit. Bass then scored from third when Jose Cruz hit into a double play.

The Braves moved ahead 3-2 in the second. Consecutive singles by Bob Horner, Chris Chambliss and Rick Cerone scored one run. An error by Walling at first allowed another to come home, and Mahler then drove in the third run of the inning with a fielder's-choice grounder.

Atlanta added two runs in the third when a single by Rafael Ramirez and walks to Brad Komminsk and Bob Horner loaded the bases with one out. Walling's throwing error on a ground ball by Chambliss allowed Ramirez and Komminsk to score.

Murphy's solo homer in the fifth made it 6-2, and he added a two-run shot in the ninth to give the Braves their final runs.

Phillies 6, Cubs 1

PHILADELPHIA — Shane Rawley checked Chicago on four hits in 7⅓ innings and Glenn Wilson drove in three runs with a two-run triple and a sacrifice fly as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Cubs 6-1, snapping a three-game losing streak.

Rawley, who is undefeated, now has three of the Phillies' five victories. He struck out one and walked four before giving way in the eighth to Larry Andersen, who gave up a run-scoring groundout to Gary Matthews. Kent Tekulve pitched the ninth for the Phillies.

The Phillies scored their first run in the fourth off loser Scott Sanderson, 1-1. Von Hayes, who had three hits, opened with a single and moved to third on Mike Schmidt's single. After Ozzie Virgil struck out, Wilson lined his sacrifice fly to left. The Phillies knocked out Sanderson with three runs in the sixth.

Reds 2, Giants 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Cincinnati's John Stuper pitched a two-hitter, his first complete game in the majors since 1983, as the Reds defeated the San Francisco Giants.

The Reds snapped a 1-1 tie off Dave LaPoint, 0-4, in the sixth inning on Dave Concepcion's leadoff double and a one-out single by Dann Bilardello.

Stuper, 3-1, faced only 28 batters, walking two and striking out six. The only San Francisco hits were a double by Chili Davis in the first inning and Scot Thompson's bunt single in the eighth.

The Reds opened the scoring in the first inning on a leadoff homer by Eric Davis, his third of the season. The Giants tied it in the bottom of the first when Dan Gladden led off with a walk and scored one out later on Davis' double.

Pirates 3, Mets 2

NEW YORK — The Pittsburgh Pirates rallied for three runs in the eighth inning, one on an error by New York relief ace Jesse Orosco and two on singles by Sixto Lezcano and Tony Pena, and stopped a three-game losing streak by beating the Mets.

Mets starter Ed Lynch pitched a three-hit shutout through seven innings when he was lifted for a pinch hitter. Orosco, 1-1, started the eighth by yielding a double to pinch hitter George Hendrick. Pinch hitter Jim Morrison walked and Bill Almon, Pittsburgh's third consecutive pinch hitter, bunted toward third. Orosco fielded the ball and threw it into left field as Hendrick scored.

Morrison wound up on third and Almon took second on the play. Lezcano, the fourth straight pinch hitter, and Pena rapped consecutive singles to score the tying and lead runs.

Pittsburgh's Larry McWilliams, 2-1, worked seven innings, giving up both Met runs on eight hits before he left for a pinch-hitter during the winning rally. John Candelaria pitched the final two innings, retiring all six batters, for his fourth save.

Expos 8, Cardinals 3

MONTREAL — Tim Wallach's two-run single capped a four-run seventh inning and Andre Dawson homered and drove in five runs, powering Montreal to a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals that extended the Expos' winning streak to five games.

St. Louis starter John Tudor, 0-3, carried a 3-1 lead into the seventh, which started with a pinch single by Mike Fitzgerald and did not end until Montreal sent 10 batters to the plate.

Consecutive singles by Tim Raines and U.L. Washington cut the lead to one run and Dawson followed with an RBI single off reliever Jeff Lahti. After Hubie Brooks beat out an infield hit to load the bases, Wallach lined a single to right field that gave the Expos a 5-3 lead.

Padres 4, Dodgers 3

LOS ANGELES — Kurt Bevacqua smashed a two-run pinch double and right-hander Andy Hawkins won his fourth straight game as the San Diego Padres defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Bevacqua's double broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning, and came after Graig Nettles had walked and Garry Templeton had been intentionally walked with two outs.

Hawkins, 4-0, had pitched six strong innings, allowing a pair of runs on seven hits before bowing out for Bevacqua.

Padres' Wiggins to enter drug treatment center

LOS ANGELES (AP) — San Diego Padres second baseman Alan Wiggins, who failed to show for two games, will enter a drug treatment center and his fate with the club will be decided later, the team reported Saturday.

"The mystery is pretty much over with," said Padres spokesman Mike Swanson. He said Wiggins has not been in contact with the club directly, but the Padres were told of his wishes through Wiggins' agent, Tony Attanasio.

"We have made arrangements for him to enter a drug treatement center. His status with the ballclub will be determined at a future date," said club president Ballard Smith in a prepared statement.

Swanson said the name and location of the drug treatment center would not be disclosed and that no word was relayed as to whether Wiggins' absence was due to substance abuse.

"We don't know the circumstances of why he didn't show up," Swanson said. "Nobody has contacted Alan. This has all been through other people. Until someone actually talks to Alan, we're really alone on this."

Attanasio could not be reached for comment.

Swanson said the Padres would bring up an infielder, probably from its Las Vegas farm club, during the weekend to replace Wiggins.

Wiggins, 27, who hit .258 for the Padres last season, is hitting only .054 with two hits in 37 at-bats this year. He was to play second base Thursday night. When he didn't show up, he was replaced by Tim Flannery.

Wiggins, who signed a four-year, $2 million contract during the winter, has been bothered by a strained ligament in his right knee, an injury he suffered when Cleveland's Brook Jacoby collided with him while breaking up a double play in an exhibition game on March 30.

In August 1982, Wiggins was suspended for 30 days by former baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn following the player's arrest on cocaine charges.

Invaders rip Outlaws, 27-11

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Quarterback Bobby Hebert threw two touchdown passes and Novo Bojovic kicked a pair of field goals to lead the Oakland Invaders to a 27-11 victory over the Arizona Outlaws in a United States Football League game Saturday night.

Hebert, who completed 18 passes in 29 attempts for 167 yards, threw touchdown passes of 14 yards to Derek Holloway and 22 yards to Albert Bentley to help Oakland improve its record to 6-3-1. Arizona dropped to 4-6.

Bojovic converted a 51-yard field goal in the fourth quarter and a 25 yarder in the first half.

Arizona, which lost is fourth straight game, scored on a 40-yard pass from quarterback Doug Williams to Reggie Brown and a 41-yard field goal by Louis Zendejas.

Each team scored on its opening drive, but after Arizona's touchdown, Zendejas' extra point attempt was wide left, putting them behind 7-6. Oakland's Eric Jordan scored on a 1-yard run and Bojovic kicked his first field goal to put the invaders on top 17-9 at halftime.

Your Home.

Home is where your heart is, but more than that it's a source of pride, of a feeling of permanence and security. Home brings a new spirit of caring, about yourself, family, neighbors, your community, your country. It's a place to dream in, laugh in, feel free in, safe in, teach in and set good examples in. Home, an investment in the truest sense, making possible the seemingly impossible, your stake in America's future. Home is where your heart is, and more, much more.

sharing a best kept secret

As a child, she was victim of sexual abuse. As an adult, she wants to educate parents about the tragedy so today's children will be free of the threats, fear and isolation that haunted her childhood.

Text by Georgia Temple

Former Midlander Laura Huchton has written a book on child abuse.

EDITOR'S NOTE: A statewide campaign for the prevention of child abuse, recently launched by Linda Gale White, wife of Gov. Mark White, has focused attention on education and public awareness of child abuse. The following story is from one victim who hopes others will learn from the problems she endured.

Spurred by faith in God, former Midlander Laura Huchton was able to turn the personal tragedy of her childhood into hope for others. Her book, "Protect Your Child: A Parent's Safeguard Against Child Abduction and Sexual Abuse," has brought her story out of the shadows into the healing light.

From the time Ms. Huchton was three until she was 12, she was sexually molested, fondled, "well over 100 times" by a Midlander who was not a relative. Today, she looks back on those years with a sense of longing for the childhood she never had; the childhood free of threats, fear and isolation which she believes every child deserves.

"I feel like my life was really stolen from me," Ms. Huchton said in a recent interview. "The most important and the most wonderful part of my life, what potentially could have given me the type of qualities that I needed throughout school and throughout those formative years, were taken from me.

"And I think that any victim of any type of major crime during childhood feels the same way exactly, that something was stolen, that something was taken away that cannot ever be replaced by anyone."

Ms. Huchton's life changed dramatically in 1975 when she was 23. She joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and "began to trust men again.

"Now I feel so good about the world around me basically because of my church and the faith it's given me in myself as well as Jesus Christ. The direction that it's given me and the purpose I've found in life have really changed my life completely."

She is able to do things which she never did as a child.

"I go for walks, and I see things like I would have seen them when I was a child. I still seem to have that insight I had as a child, but now I'm getting the experience to go with it to make up for some of the times that were lost."

As a child, fear made her a recluse. She was afraid to leave her house or go for walks because of the unsafe world which bordered hers.

"The worst thing about it was that it was over such a prolonged period, and the threats that occurred over that prolonged period were very significant as far as changing my lifestyle and changing the lifestyle probably of his other victims as well."

She remembers her tormentor vividly, and his threats, those spoken as well as those implied. Those memories have kept her from feeling comfortable visiting the town she grew up in because he still walks its streets.

"The gun is the thing that I probably remember the very most of the different types of threats," she said. "His gun was always there.

"He never took it out and pointed it at us and said, 'I'll kill you' or anything like that, but the threat was very present. It was constantly implied and that gun was there; it was laying in the right places at the right time.

"There were times I was very frightened to go to school because I was afraid when I came home that my family would have been killed or something would have happened to them. That threat was always present, it was an implied threat as well.

"The other thing that I remember most vividly was the uniform and the fact that that uniform represented authority and that I might be threatened in the fact that maybe I would be taken to jail or prison or something, if I told my parents or told anyone else.

"Those were the two primary things, both the gun and the uniform, that were most deceiving to most people. Certainly other people trusted him as well. And that trust was greatly misused."

During those nine years of terror, Ms. Huchton reached out on three separate occasions by telling three adults in her world what was happening to her. No legal action was taken as a result of her attempts to get help.

Given the mores and attitudes which were prevalant during the 1950s, Ms. Huchton says that when she looks at it from their perspective, she understands why that was the case.

"It was really such an unbelievable crime that anyone would put their hands on a child and do this kind of thing to a child and not just do it once, but do it many, many times and actually destroy a life."

When adults don't listen to children, don't clearly understand what they are saying or don't believe their stories of sexual abuse, Ms. Huchton said, "There's no one to intervene in the child's behalf whatsoever so the child is constantly victimized until he's old enough to care for himself.

"My victimization ended physically at least when I became old enough to take care of myself and turn around and run and say, 'No.'

Book gives safeguard steps

Laura Huchton's book "Protect Your Child: A Parent's Safeguard Against Child Abduction and Sexual Abuse" presents parents and other adults with specific steps to take in safeguarding children's welfare.

Sexually abused (fondled) herself "well over 100 times" between the ages of three and 12, Ms. Huchton spent several years researching and writing this handbook for concerned adults.

In it, she has compiled information from the many organizations concerned with missing or abused children and offers plans for community intervention, such as fingerprinting and school absentee reporting.

She gives parents, among other tips, a plan for maintaining a personal file folder on each child for identification and has devised a test to help parents ascertain what the child understands about safety and how the child would react in different situations.

Some people are not clear as to what constitutes child molestation; however, Ms. Huchton is.

"It would include fondling, rape, incest, any type of sexual activity with a child is a molestation," she said in a recent interview.

"That doesn't mean that the law really sees it quite in that fashion because many children are treated as though they're not capable of telling whether someone was touching them in a bad way or a good way."

BOOK

It is vital that parents respect children's rights and teach their children what those rights are, Ms. Huchton said. She has a list of children's rights which she encourages parents to add to.

Her list includes:

—"I have a right to say no if someone touches or wants to touch the private parts of my body.

—"I have a right to scream for help even if I am told by a molester to be quiet and to behave. I can obey my parents but I don't have to obey someone who hurts me or wants to hurt me.

—"I have the right to tell my parents everything that happens to me. They will always love me no matter what happens. If someone touches or hurts me or tells me to keep it a secret, I will still tell my parents because I have a right to their help.

—"I have the right to use the phone to call home at any time when I want to talk to my parents because I'm afraid.

—"I have the right to have food, shelter and clothing and medical care.

—"I have the right to be loved and cared for and to be educated."

Ms. Huchton feels that teaching children what the private parts of their bodies are is crucial for their well being and may be lifesaving. She defines private parts as any part of their body that is covered by a bathing suit.

"No one really has a right to touch the private part of their body unless it's someone like a doctor or a parent whose touching that part of the body for a reasonable purpose such as to heal the child or to bath the child."

Ms. Huchton has designed a safety training program in her book which gives parents an idea of the danger lines and helps children learn what to expect from people.

Giving children a mandate of never saying "No" and always saying "Yes Sir" and "No Sir" to adults can often times be harmful to the young. Ms. Huchton said both of these teachings were contributing factors in the nine years of sexual abuse she endured.

"Parents need to be educated as well. It's not just the children. Parents need to realize that their children do have rights that should be respected within their home.

"We do want encourage politeness, but at the same time there's so many very small destructive things that we do as parents that create an aura of disrespect for the child and an idea within children that they're not as important as adults."

The example she used is a typical scenario in many homes.

"Someone walks through the room and wants a child's chair, the parent says 'Johnny, Get up. Get out of that chair and let Uncle John sit there.'

"Now, how does that make the child really feel? It makes the child feel as though he's basically not as worth while or not as important as the adult."

Yet, it's important to achieve a balance.

"But, certainly children shouldn't take advantage of this right," Ms. Huchton said. "We can go too far and stretch too far with our children and we can actually destroy a lot of the benefit of good safety teaching."

In teaching children that they are as important as adults, Ms. Huchton says, we teach them that they're worthy of respect and that no one has the right to take away their personal rights.

Another contributing factor to child molestation is availability. Children are so very available to a child molester, whether it's within the family or outside the family, Ms. Huchton said. If the problem exists within the family, it makes it even more difficult to get help to the child.

"We can't very well reach into a home where a child is a victim of incest and expect a family to train the child in safety because it would be destroying some of the culture that's within the home.

"I had a mother approach me after I gave a talk one time and she came to me and she seemed really a little bit upset and she said, 'As a child, I was sexually abused. Every male in the family sexually abused the little girls that were within the family.' It had gone on for generations."

Children untrained in how to protect their personal safety are easier targets for another type of abuse, child abduction, which occurs in the United States and throughout the world. Child abduction is a greater problem in this country than many suspect, Ms. Huchton says.

"We would like to close our eyes to this problem as well and pretend it's not there, but it can happen anywhere because now we're talking about a multi-million dollar business where a blonde-headed child of any age and sex can be sold for at least $50,000 on the open market and can be transported across even country lines as a sex gift to (someone in) another country.

"So we're talking about anybody's little kid. It can happen to any child. We have black children who are abducted, Spanish children, white children. They're used for the same purposes — for the pornography rings and for the prostitution rings."

The statistics on how many children are missing each year who are believed to have been abducted vary from 28,000 to close to a million.

Ms. Huchton credited the discrepancy to several factors, including the low percentage of police departments that list missing persons with the National Crime Information Center and the lack of communication between organizations dealing with the same problems.

"One of the things that I heard, when I was first researching the book, was that any expert that I talked to said there are 2 million vanished children a year in this country," Ms. Huchton said.

The number sounded very high to her so she decided to find out exactly how many children were abducted only to discover "we actually don't know how many there are.

"After my research was done, I came to realize just from my own personal opinion, that there probably are as many as 1 to 2 million missing children who circulate in this country a year. That means that they are constantly being moved from one area to another because they're either in a sex slave ring or a pornography prostitution ring."

Since police departments don't have to report missing persons to the NCIC computer in Washington, D.C., Ms. Huchton urges parents of missing children to contact the FBI and get their child listed.

As opposed to the estimates for abducted children, those for molested children are probably more accurate, said Ms. Huchton. "We estimate a year that there are probably 500,000 children who are victims of sexual abuse.

"One out of every four girls and one out of every 10 little boys will be a molestation victim by the time they reach adulthood and this can include anywhere from fondling to incest."

There really is no specific danger age, Ms. Huchton said.

"Right now what we're finding is that children who are anywhere from 2 weeks old have been used in pornography, in prostitution rings, on up through teenagers. If you have a 23 year old that looks very young, then they can be just as susceptible as a 17 or 18 year old."

Ms. Huchton has designed specific guidelines for parents so that their children will learn to be cautions and not paranoid.

"Probably the most important thing that I can teach parents are four very special words — safety training is fun."

She advises a parent to approach the training with a positive, matter of fact attitude which "will create a very good environment for his child to learn in and to grow in and that's the child that won't grow up to be paranoid of the world around him."

When parents say to her, "I don't want my child to be paranoid so I'm not going to teach him any of this stuff," her response is simple.

"Before you ever open your mouth, your children know what an abductor is, they know what a kidnapper is, they know what they do, they know what a molester is, they know what they do, they've heard it from TV, they've heard it from friends, they've heard it from you; it's a part of their world.

"What you're going to be doing when you safety train a child is to give them the facts, and when you give a child facts in a positive way, you're going to be alleviating a lot of the fear that he feels and giving him the control over his own life and action that will help him if the situation ever arises."

Game warns of dangers

Copley News Service

Every parent has a nightmare that involves strangers and dangers to their children. Now there is a new board game called "Strangers and Dangers."

Pat Barry is a former Will County, Ill., sheriff's deputy. Jeff Chudwin is a former Will County prosecutor. Michael Dooley is a police officer.

They've all run into those tragic cases involving small children. Children molested by strangers. Children hurt in accidents on the way home from school.

That's the problem the three friends tackled as they talked about their new game. They wanted something that was fun for youngsters, and something that taught the kids.

"Strangers and Dangers," which isn't on the market yet, is a board game with blocks starting at school. The object of the game is to get home safely.

The game has been field-tested with several youngsters and in preschools. The response from parents and teachers has been positive.

"The game is a fictional experience where the player can suffer the dangers of real life, but not really get hurt," Jeff said.

VICTIM

And I finally had to train myself in ways to know what to do for myself for my own survival."

Children in this type of a situation are survivors. They have to find ways to survive because when adults are unable to believe a child, it sets into motion the repetitive pattern so common in this type of offense, she said.

In researching her book, Ms. Huchton talked with "a great many" adult victims and parents of victims not only of molestation but of children who were murdered and children who were abducted.

"The pattern of repetitiveness on the part of the offender is always there unless someone intervenes in the child's behalf."

This pattern is practiced by molesters on more than one victim. In her book, Ms. Huchton refers to the Cracked Gavel Award given by the Adam Walsh Foundation to judges who let molesters go without punishment. Part of the inscription reads: "A national study shows that each child molester is responsible for molesting an average of 68 children."

She suspects that a person she was close to, her brother, who was two years older, was also molested by the same offender. Although she saw her tormentor fondle other children, she never saw her brother abused.

However, she will never know for certain whether he was or not. They never discussed it, and he was killed in a car-train wreck in Midland when he was 20.

"He really showed the signs of sexual abuse as I know and understand the signs today."

A normal child who has been under no type of abusive domination is a child that really perceives his world as a whole and is really charged by his environment and wants to learn and grow from everything, Ms. Huchton said.

"But, a child that's been an abused child is very different, and he sort of focuses his world in and refocuses his entire life on survival. And so nothing is important unless he perceives it as important to his survival.

"For instance, when I was a child one of the very vivid signs of my sexual-abuse experience was that I didn't eat. That was a shut-down area. I might have eaten, as my parents said, maybe a tablespoon of food a day.

"I really looked like a child that might have come from an underprivileged country. I did not perceive food to be important to my survival.

"I did not perceive school to be important to my survival and so those two areas were very critical areas. I didn't do well in school.

"I didn't have any friends until I came to the point where I was out of the abusive situation, and when I came to that point also I began to eat and began to gain health and strength."

There are many other signs, such as depression, bad dreams and bed wetting which can mean the child is being sexually abused, and Ms. Huchton categorizes these by age groups in her book.

She gained the strength to talk about her childhood as a direct result of her faith, and, since that time she has talked in a direct and open manner with her parents and other members of her family about what happened to her as a child.

"They feel negative in that they would rather that perhaps I didn't really tell my story, and they feel positive because they know that the book will probably save lives. In fact, it already has saved one little boy's life, and this is quite a thrill to me."

When Ms. Huchton looks back over her childhood, she has fond memories of her family. "They were a wonderful family, and we did have times of togetherness."

Those happy memories are delicately balanced against the nightmare she lived through for nine years.

"Certainly the most vivid recollections of my childhood were of being sexually abused. Those were the things that I can close my eyes and see as though they happened this morning."

Now 33, she tries to focus her attention, and that of other victims, in the direction of today and the future. When the past comes into her mind, she thinks of the happy times and not the terrifying, destructive memories.

She encourages other victims when she talks with them to "try to pick out the things that were really good and were really positive. And then we learn from the bad and take enjoyment in the good."

Program treats adolescents

Hearst News Service

Adults convicted of child molestation often admit that they began their deviant behavior when they were adolescents, and that has lead some psychologists to theorize that the "addiction" to performing sexual acts with young children stems from adolescence.

At the University of Washington's Adolescent Clinic, there's a program based on the hope that early treatment of adolescent offenders can prevent them from growing up to become adult offenders.

In its seven years, the program has treated 600 youths with an average age of 14. The average age of their victims was 6. About 36 percent of the offenders had committed rape.

Perfume's history studied

Associated Press

A Parisian writer, armed with a computer and a library of literature, has become the first historian of the perfume industry.

Marlene Delbourg-Delphis has pored through 20,000 magazines dating back to 1880, according to the May issue of Connoisseur, in order to build a memory bank of perfume advertisements.

In her handsome office near the Champs-Elysees, Delbourg-Delphis has cross-referenced data on 6,000 perfumes, cataloguing styles in scent and bottles. For 4,000 fragrances, she can display photos of all the ads she could find.

She notes each perfume's family — floral, cypress, fern, amber or leather — and its subfamilies. She also has created categories and themes of her own. One of her 11 themes, love, has such subthemes as thrilling, naive, sinful, crazy, pure and platonic.

Delbourg-Delphis's work was proposed and financed by Saint Gobain Desjonqueres, the world's leading perfume bottle maker, and at first it seemed she might be able to map cyclic trends that would prove valuable to perfume marketers.

"In the '20s, for example," she said, "more than 50 percent of the fragrances evoked dreams of movement and travel; more than 50 percent of them were aimed at providing a psychological lift.

Jewelry requires insurance

Associated Press

If you own any high-priced jewelry, you may need a professional appraisal of its value, according to Changing Times. Merely having sales receipts won't always suffice to back up claims for insurance or tax losses, the magazine says.

Many insurance companies require an appraisal before they will insure jewelry over a certain limit, generally $500 in a standard homeowners and renters policy.

To insure more costly jewelry, you'll probably need a personal articles floater (the coverage floats, or travels, with the property wherever it goes).

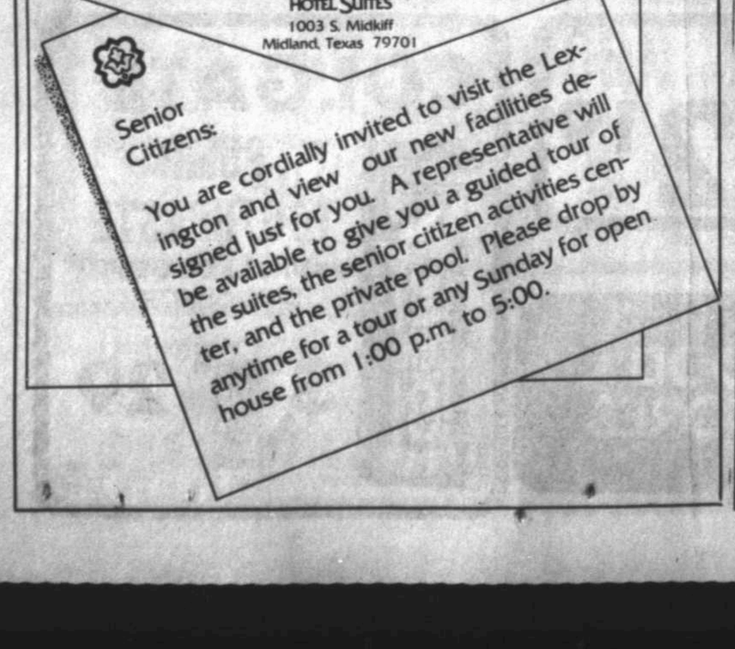

Most floaters are written as riders or supplements to homeowner policies. Every item is listed on an attached schedule, along with a brief description and estimate of its value. Again, a receipt or appraisal usually must be furnished to get this coverage.

Even if an insurer doesn't require an appraisal, you may want one as a basis for deciding how much insurance to buy if the jewelry was purchased some time ago or inherited or received as a gift. You also may need an appraisal if you sell or make a gift of jewelry or claim a tax loss.

You want an appraiser who will provide you with both realistic estimates and a detailed report backing them up. The closer to the mark, the better.

An inflated estimate could bring you a windfall from the insurance company if you have a loss, but the odds are you won't have a loss. In the meanwhile you'll pay for more insurance than you need.

Sikh wedding elaborate

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW DELHI, India — The neighbors haven't stopped talking about it. The groom arrived at the wedding atop the traditional white horse and escorted by an Indian version of a ragtime band. He was late, but nobody cared. He wore a pink turban, garlands of flowers, rupee notes pinned to his suit, a long, curved sword and a slightly embarrassed smile. The bride wore a shimmering sari and a jewel in her nose.

Afterward, her dowry was loaded up on top of a bus, which then lumbered off to her new home. Everybody cried — and not least the bride herself, who until that day "had never exchanged a single word with the man she was marrying. Her happiness was now in the hands of God."

"In India," said one wedding guest, Seraj Fatima, "one can only hope."

The Sikh wedding of Swarnjit Singh, an auto rickshaw driver, and Harvinder Kaur, a former social worker, took place one recent Sunday under mild, sunny skies in the alley behind the embassies and big bungalows on Prithvi Raj Road, one of the nicest streets in New Delhi. The bride's father, Pritam Singh, is the driver for the Vietnamese Embassy and lives in a small house behind it. He has seven daughters and no sons, and can only think that God must have meant it that way.

"He has given me all daughters," said Pritam Singh. "I have to accept."

His youngest is not yet 2. His oldest, Harvinder, is 23. Hers was the first of seven weddings — and dowries — that he would have to pay for over the next 20 years.

A wedding is the single biggest event in the life of an Indian family, but this particular wedding represented even more. After the riots following Indira Gandhi's assassination last November that left perhaps 2,000 Sikhs dead and 50,000 more homeless, this was a return to what passes for normalcy. These are bad times for Sikhs. They are still bitter and fearful, and many continue to live in refugee camps. This wedding, like others over the centuries, marked the beginning of a bride's difficult new life, the loss of a daughter to her mother-in-law and the culmination of the dowry negotiations.

A wedding is also one of the best Indian pageants around — and the largest expense that a family must bear. The father of the bride makes the equivalent of $800 a year, a good working-class salary by local standards, but the wedding and the dowry cost him $3,200. He got friends, relatives and the Vietnamese Embassy to help him out, but he was loaned money, too.

And there are still six more to go.

"We have to pay back the money we've borrowed," said the bride's mother, Harvinder Kaur, speaking through an interpreter, the son of a cook at one of the big houses nearby. "And then we have to start paying for the next."

The wedding began at noon when the band, improbably named the Disco Band, and advertising itself with a sign that said "located near bus stop 228," played an odd mix of marching music and ragtime as it led the groom from Prithvi Raj Road back to the alley.

The groom wore a traditional headpiece, a hat with sparkling streamers that covered his face and fell to his waist. After a slow half-hour processional, he dismounted and was surrounded by relatives who sang a Punjabi devotional prayer. Then he and the bride faced and put garlands over each other's neck as a granthi, or priest, read from the Guru Granth Sahib, the sacred book of the Sikhs. That was it for the ceremony. The party lasted five hours.

"I'm so happy," said the bride.

"She's happy now," said her mother, speaking more philosophically about the realities of arranged marriages. "Later, we can't tell."

The bride says she plans to see her family once a week. "She's a very good lady," she said of her mother-in-law. "She loves me."

The wedding ended at 5 p.m. as sadly as it had joyously begun. The Disco Band was playing another number and guests were shouting as they helped load the bus. But the bride was sobbing. She hung on to her mother, who was clutching her daughter as the tears streamed down her face. The bride's sisters were hugging her and crying, too, as was her father, whose face was red in the afternoon sun. "Everybody's sad," he said. "She's gone and so far away."

Premarital counseling rises

NEW YORK (AP) — More engaged couples are seeking premarital counseling — not for problems, but to make sure they have covered all the bases in their desire to succeed at marriage, says Dr. Joyce Brothers.

Her travels around the country have convinced her that many people are determined to succeed at marriage, despite the fact that their parents' marriages may have ended in divorce.

They also seek advice from a counselor because parents and family may be far away. For these engaged couples, a counselor serves as a kind of "rent-a-friend," she adds.

The author of "What Every Woman Should Know About Love and Marriage," she advises couples to discuss important issues before they marry, either together with a counselor or by themselves. Subjects she thinks are important to air include attitudes toward having and caring for children, financial goals and aspirations, relations with in-laws and, if appropriate, with former spouses and children.

The psychologist finds the current seriousness about marriage a good thing and advises couples to use their engagement as a time to discuss the future and come to agreement.

"There is a tremendous amount of good will at this time, which helps to resolve problems," she points out. "If a problem is not solvable at this time, then it will never be resolved. Couples should realize that you're not going to redecorate your spouse, so it's better not to try."

One bar to open communication is fear of saying something your future spouse will regard as unforgivable, counselors agree. However, learning to communicate in a non-threatening way can minimize this fear.

Non-threatening communication techniques can be learned, according to Sherod Miller, a Minneapolis psychologist. Miller has developed a book, "Talking Together," and a series of cassette tapes and other materials which are being used by counselors and couples all over the country to help build communications skills.

The book and the four-class group sessions are meant to accomplish several goals.

"They introduce ideas about communications in general; they teach practical principles of listening and speaking to others; and they provide an opportunity for couples to pick an issue and discuss it in the group setting, getting group feedback on their use of communications skills," says Miller.

Another program, known as "Prepare," is also available for couples. "The program is designed to get couples to look in a systematic way at important issues in a marriage," says Dr. David Olson, a clinical psychologist who developed the program at the University of Minnesota, where he is a professor in the Family and Social Science Department.

The 125-item questionnaire identifies strengths and problem areas for couples who fill it out and return it to a counselor (often a clergyman) who has been trained by Olson and his colleagues in administering the test. The counselor returns the questionnaire to Minneapolis for scoring and receives the results. (There is a $15 fee for the test.) The counselor then reviews the results with the couple.

According to Olson, the questionnaire was developed over 10 years as a research tool. He says that while taking the test alone does not improve a couple's chances for a happy marriage, it can identify those who are at risk. If the couple were to work on the issues that divide them, presumably they would have a better chance for a satisfying marriage.

Smokers may harm wives

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Non-smoking women who inhale passive smoke from their husband's cigarettes may run an increased risk of death from heart disease, a new study conducted by University of California, San Diego, researchers has found.

The study, which the researchers believe to be the first of its kind, found that the wives of smokers had a 2½ times greater risk of dying from heart disease than women whose husbands did not smoke.

In all, the study — published in the May edition of the American Journal of Epidemiology — involved 695 married women from Rancho Bernardo, Calif., who were 50 to 79 years old when it began.

The authors cautioned that because of the limited number of participants, the study should be considered "provocative rather than definitive."

Nevertheless, the results suggest a need for new laws to prevent smoking in public places, according to Dr. Cedric Garland, assistant professor of community medicine at the UCSD School of Medicine and principal author of the study.

"I think we ought to err on the side of caution," Garland said. "There is enough evidence about the hazards of passive smoke to enact anti-smoking ordinances for enclosed spaces on public health grounds."

Garland added that he hoped the UCSD study would spur additional work with larger numbers of people. He said a multi-year study involving around 10,000 people would provide definitive results.

"By studying our 695 people for longer we hope to improve the strength of our findings," Garland added. "That should take another three or four years, just to see if the effects persist over a longer period of time."

Women in the study were originally evaluated between 1972 and 1974. At that time, the entire adult population of Rancho Bernardo was asked to participate in a survey to determine the prevalence of heart-disease risk factors. Eighty-two percent of the adults in the community responded.

All participants were asked questions about their cigarette smoking; history of past heart disease, the duration of their marriage, and the smoking habits of their spouses. Besides answering questions, their blood pressure and cholesterol were monitored and recorded.

Records were updated annually for 10 years, with death certificates categorized according to cause of death.

Of 203 wives of non-smokers, only two died of heart disease; of the 492 wives of current or former smokers, 17 died of heart disease.

Other research indicates that children with smoking parents suffer higher rates of lung impairment and respiratory disease than children of non-smoking parents.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

One of the most delightful parties of the spring season was the coffee hosted recently at Midland Country Club by longtime friends Nell (Mrs. W.C.) Kimball, Tess (Mrs. Lindley) Latham and Elva (Mrs. H.W.) Stoltenberg.

A towering arrangement of spring flowers in beautiful pastel hues, designed to carry out the color scheme of the club's ballroom, decorated the serving table.

Guests enjoyed visiting while partaking of luscious fresh fruits, delicious sausage biscuits and an assortment of sweet rolls, along with coffee and champagne punch.

Serving in the house party were Nell's daughters, Patsy (Mrs. Bobby) Elliott of El Paso and Karen (Mrs. Jeffrey) Edwards of Houston; Tess's daughter, Linda (Mrs. Rodney) Satterwhite, and daughter-in-law, Angela (Mrs. Paul) Latham, and Elva's daughters, Sue Ann (Mrs. Dick) Campbell and Lynne (Mrs. Charles) Ray.

Among those seen at the party were Fredda (Mrs. Lynn) Durham, Lou (Mrs. Decker) Dawson, Louise (Mrs. Loyd) Whitley, Penny (Mrs. Jerry) Hudgeons, Sallie (Mrs. Don) Kidwell, Margaret (Mrs. Fred) Cassidy, Alice (Mrs. Bill) Collyns and Anita (Mrs. Carl) Perry.

TO HONOR THEIR daughter, Kaki O'Shaughnessy, and her fiance, Jim Hodge, Barbara and Don O'Shaughnessy entertained with a cocktail party last weekend at their Bedford Drive residence.

Special guests incided Jim's mother, Gerry (Mrs. Victor) Zoller; Kaki's brother, Michael O'Shaughnessy of Denver, and close friends Lynne and Les Ming of Oklahoma City, who are both in the wedding party.

Decorating the buffet table was a majestic arrangement of exotic African flowers in burgundies, deep pinks and white.

Kaki, who has managed a ladies' shoe shop in Oklahoma City, returns to the city this Tuesday to tie up some loose ends before coming back to Midind in early May to continue with wedding plans and festivities. Jim is land manager for Old Dominion Exploration Co. in Oklahoma City. They have set July 20 for their wedding date.

MEMBERS OF THE COTERIE Club had a fun time at their spring dance and Mexican party recently at Ranchland Hills Country Club. They enjoyed a fabulous Mexican buffet, Sangrias, Margaritas and dancing to the music of "Cimarron" of Odessa.

Tables were decorated with strings of red chili peppers surrounding red candles in terra cotta holders.

New officers of the club are Tevis Herd, president; Joe Liberty, vice president; Linnie (Mrs. Art) Donnelly, secretary, and Sandra (Mrs. Smith) Ray, treasurer.

PRIOR TO THEIR recent move to Pecan Plantation at Granbury, Dorothy (Perky) and Jack Campbell were feted at several farewell events.

Elizabeth and Lloyd Haseltine and Dottie and Norm Barker entertained for them with a lovely party, which included wine, a delicious buffet and a dessert table, at the Haseltine home.

In addition, Thelma and Bill Bolch and Moira and Leonard Attwell hosted an open house and cocktail party at the latter's patio home. A poster size replica of the unique invitation, which featured a moving van and a Campbell's soup can, was signed by the guests as a memento for the couple, and they also were presented a clever red and white flag, emblazoned with their names and made by Moira.

The Phi Mu sorority alumnae honored Dorothy with a wine and cheese party at Helen (Mrs. Ray L.) McKim's home. Paula (Mrs. Jack) Beshears was the co-hostess. Dorothy was presented a Santa Fe memory bead necklace, combining beads in her favorite shades of mauves, purples and pinks with charms and other treasures.

The couple also was honored by the congregation of Grace Presbyterian Church at a reception following Sunday services.

Jack, who is retired from Exxon, and Dorothy, long active in Midland's club and church circles, are looking forward to a leisurely lifestyle at their new home and particularly to visits from their children and grandchildren in their more central location.

SOME 110 SORORITY women attended the Midland Panhellenic Association's annual brunch recently in the Saddle Club North home of Sarilyn (Mrs. Bill) Black.

The guests were treated to such delicacies as crystallized bacon, cucumber sandwiches, cocktail meatballs, olive quiche, sausage rolls and marinated broccoli.

A few of those dropping by for the camaraderie and delicious food were Betsy (Mrs. Jim) Kiehne, Margaret (Mrs. Gordon) Marcum, Susan (Mrs. Gary) Askins, Patti (Mrs. Charles) Wallace, Ellen (Mrs. Bruce) Robinson, Susan (Mrs. Jan) South, and Patricia Wettstein and her daughter, Laura, who recently moved back to Midland. After spending the past year in Austin working for two lobby groups for natural resources, Laura has returned here to join her mother in the land development/management business.

The local Panhellenic Association is composed of 16 college srority alumnae groups. Phyllis (Mrs. Robert) Stine is the current president.

DEAR ABBY

Having ex-boyfriend as priest difficult

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Your advice is usually good, but you were dead wrong when you advised "A Sinner in My Heart" to switch to another parish when her ex-boyfriend ("John") returned after 16 years to become her parish priest. Although "Sinner" says she's happily married, she admits to having strong feelings for John, and suspects the feeling is mutual because he cannot look her in the eye. Meanwhile she is consumed with guilt because she can't bring herself to confess to him that she is lusting after him in her heart.

Abby, we do not solve our problems by running away from them. If "Sinner" switches to another parish, she would create more problems than she would solve. How would she explain the sudden switch to her family?

Better for her to stay where she is and face the music. Her "strong feelings" will pass with time if she will pray for strength and diligently practice the art of self-control.

Both she and the priest should be able to engender sufficient faith and determination to bring them victoriously through this crisis. — THE REV. C.W. KIRKPATRICK, HATFIELD, MASS.

DEAR REV. K.: And what if they aren't victorious? All right, instead of switching to another parish, "Sinner" should have another priest take her confession. Imagine what could ensue should she confess to her priest that she is lusting (in her heart) for him while he possibly is lusting (in his heart) for her? Priests are human, too. Why tax an already difficult situation by making it more difficult?

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter on the cowboy hat issue?

After my husband started teaching at a junior college in eastern Wyoming, he asked one of the instructors native to the area what the custom was concerning the wearing of cowboy hats.

"They never take them off in class," said the teacher.

"You're kidding," said my husband. "Do they take them off in church?"

"They never go to church."

"What about funerals?"

"They never die." — CARLA KELLY, SPRINGFIELD, MO.

DEAR CARLA: Right! Old cowboys never die (they just lose their range). And now that we've uncorked the issue of the 10-gallon hat again, hear this from a reader in Texas who wants to set the record straight:

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the statement credited to Bum Phillips when he was asked why he removed his cowboy hat at Houston's Astrodome: "My mama taught me that a gentleman always removed his hat when he enters a home, and the Astrodome is home to me." Your reader was wrong on all three counts.

The hat wasn't a 10-gallon cowboy hat, it was a houndstooth sports fedora; the man wasn't Bum Phillips, he was Bear Bryant; and the place wasn't the Astrodome, it was the Superdome.

DEAR ABBY: I have decided not to pay the $200 insurance bill on my house. I'm letting others pay it for me, so please send me a $20 contribution to help pay this bill. I am sending this request to nine others, but I'm sure only you will respond, as the nine others will probably tell me that if I don't care enough about my $150,000 house to spend $20 a month to protect it, I can go whistle Dixie.

And while you have your checkbook out and are in a generous mood, please send another $20 to public TV, as I have decided to join the 90 percent of those who enjoy this service and let others support it for me. — HARRY HOWE, ST. PAUL, MINN.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Study: Americans liberal on family issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — A growing majority of Americans support liberal positions on sexual morality, birth control and other family issues, a Chicago pollster says, rejecting talk of a "conservative tide" in the other direction.

It seems to make no difference that such a liberal trend is still fought by religious figures, such as top leaders of the Roman Catholic Church, by far the nation's largest denomination with 52 million members, Tom Smith of the National Opinion Research Center said.

"While the pope and the Moral Majority take very traditional stances on these matters, their positions are overwhelmingly rejected by the majority of Catholics and Protestants, respectively," he said.

Smith took part in a briefing Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., put together for fellow members of Congress on the subject of international population and birth control issues — and the impact of U.S. voters' views.

Scheuer is a strong supporter of family-planning programs to limit what he calls a "population explosion" threatening developing nations that are already mired in poverty. He said most Americans share his views, and thus legislators could be hurt politically if they instead heed talk of a conservative trend and vote accordingly.

He also criticized Reagan administration efforts to halt or limit U.S. contributions to international family-planning bodies that do not forbid member agencies to be involved with abortion.

Such a stand makes no sense because "family planning is the antidote to abortion," he said. And he predicted "strong and effective" family-planning provisions would be included in the next foreign aid bill.

About a dozen lawmakers — and reporters who were briefed after the private meeting — were given copies of a thick book described as a "religious perspective" on U.S. population and development policy. A Scheuer aide said the book was furnished by Catholics for a Free Choice. That is a private group opposed to an outright church ban on abortion.

Smith, a research associate at the Cultural Pluralism Center of the National Opinion Research Center of the University of Chicago, said afterward, "I'm trying to debunk the idea of a great conservative tide."

Providing few further details, he said in the book that various polls had indicated:

—The percentage of Americans who believe premarital sex is appropriate, at least in some instances, rose through the 1970s and reached 63 percent in 1983.

—Most people favored wide dissemination of birth-control information by 1983, including 87 percent who thought teen-agers should have such access.

—Support for legal abortion rose sharply between the mid-1960s and mid-1970s, then leveled off, with 80 percent to 90 percent supporting abortion when a woman's health is endangered, there is a chance of serious fetal damage or the pregnancy resulted from rape or incest. Support for abortion for social reasons, such as poverty or simply not wanting more children, rose to the 40 percent to 50 percent range.

In all, he said, "There has been no reversal of liberal positions on sexual and reproductive practices; indeed, support is higher for those positions than it was in the early seventies or sixties, and in most cases a large majority of the public backs the liberal position."

Girls may prefer fathers

Associated Press

Little girls often shock their mothers by showing an open preference for their fathers — and even trying to replace mommy in daddy's affections.

It may be natural, says an article in the May issue of Redbook, but it also is hard on mothers, who find themselves jealous and resentful of their own daughters.

Shared parenting turned sour for New York City magazine editor and freelance writer Ellen Sweet when her 5-year-old daughter showed a clear preference for her father.

"I tried to tell myself that girls always prefer their fathers," she wrote. "Then I tried to tell myself she'd grow out of this stage. But the more she seemed to favor her daddy, the more jealous I felt."

The experts have advice for parents on how to deal with the mother-father-daughter triangle.

"Think of her behavior as a normal phase, like the 'terrible twos,' which may seem endless but will pass," said Dr. Froma Walsh, family therapist and researcher at the University of Chicago and the Family Institute of Chicago.

Walsh advised setting aside special mother-daughter time, saying, "Remember that you offer her your unique qualities as well; don't forget how important they are."

Allow her to favor her father, said Dr. Susan Bogas, psychologist and therapist in Princeton, N.J.

"Try to avoid reacting negatively to what she says and does," Bogas said. "Give her time alone with her father."

Bogas said if her behavior troubles you too much, talk to her — but not when you are angry — and "let her know it is all right for her to feel as she does."

"Your feelings are normal, too," Walsh said. "It's natural to want to be no. 1 in your child's feelings, but keep in mind the family benefits of having your husband actively involved with her."

Walsh told mothers to remember their special place in their husband's affections.

"Remind yourself, I come first, and I'm loved too," she said. "The more self-confident you feel, the less likely you are to view your daughter's rejections as your own failure."

Bogas advised seeking husbandly support.

"The more he understands what you're going through, the less chance there is for competition between you," she said, adding:

"Try to remember that your daughter's behavior is not directed at you but is her way of developing closeness with her father."

Walsh added: "This brief fling with her father is crucial to her development. It is her first attempt to become less dependent on you, and to establish her own relationship with her father."

Shield allegations to be studied

DALLAS (AP) — The Centers for Disease Control will conduct studies to find out if women in foreign countries are still using the Dalkon Shield birth control device, the Dallas Times Herald said this week.

The controversial device was taken off the market in the United States in 1974. Since then, more than 12,000 women have filed lawsuits against the manufacturer, A. H. Robins Co. of Richmond, Va., alleging the device is dangerous and defective.

Robins has denied all liability, but has paid more than $314.6 million to settle 8,300 claims.

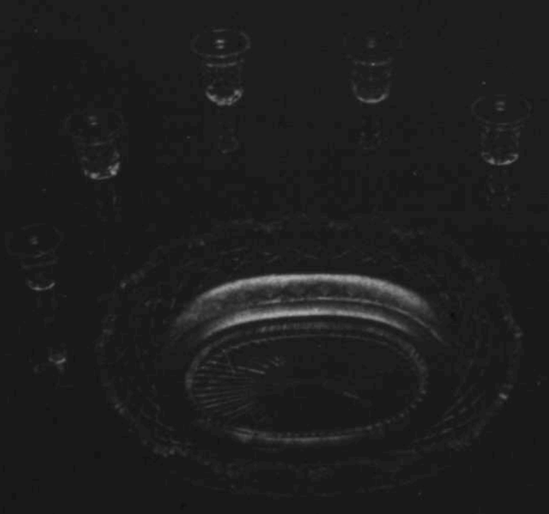

The besieged company has repeatedly denied long-standing allegations that it "dumped" the Dalkon Shields in foreign countries after it was taken off the market in the U.S.

But the U.S. Agency for International Development, an arm of the State Department, commissioned the CDC study this week after Austin, Texas, lawyer Martina Langely challenged an AID report that said few foreign women still wear it

The CDC study will focus on four countries were the device was widely distributed.

CHANGING TIMES

Midland's Thouvenel String Quartet recently returned from a three-week tour of The People's Republic of China. Accompanying them were 21 Midland residents including Reporter-Telegram City Editor Gary Ott. This is the first of a four-Sunday series reporting on that trip.

With approximately one-fourth of world's population, even China's rural areas are filled with people. As the state has loosened its hold on the economy, more and more Chinese citizens are operating shops along the busy city streets, as shown above. Chinese children make friends with Midlander Pete Renick, one of 21 local residents who accompanied the Thouvenel String Quartet, far right photo.

A TRIP TO CHINA

PART ONE

China has been called many things. A sleeping giant. The longest-running show on earth. A country the people never owned.

But for the past five years it has become a land undergoing massive changes, a country trying to catch up with the rest of the world.

In an attempt to alter its primitive image abroad, Chinese leaders in the past five years have instituted an extensive modernization drive, in the process allowing certain capitalistic trends to exist that are not normally associated with a communistic country.

Some of the changes are more obvious than others, especially to visiting westerners who only have been allowed to enter as tourists since 1979.

Examples are everywhere. Many of the young people, particularly those in the urban centers, dress much like their American counterparts — designer jeans, sweaters and high-heeled boots. Likewise, their taste in music is similar, though understandably a bit behind U.S. times.

It is common to hear the disco sound blaring from a portable radio as teen-agers dance in a city park.

But the seeds of westernization can be spotted in other areas, as well.

An advertisement in the China Daily, the country's only English-language newspaper, informs readers that an American film festival is under way in Shanghai, featuring among others, "Kramer vs. Kramer," "The Turning Point," and "Star Wars."

Billboards, advertising a wide assortment of foreign- and locally-produced consumer goods, are springing up in most cities.

High-rise luxury hotels, including such American features as a revolving bar on the top floor, are becoming increasingly common.

Coca-cola can be purchased from street vendors.

Downtown Peking even has a Maxim's restaurant and bar.

Until five years ago, not only would the above developments have been impossible they would have been unthinkable, almost to the point of being ludicrous.

But in today's China, things are happening. Rapidly. Indeed, it would appear the song title "The Times They Are A-changin'" was written specifically with China in mind.

Still, the sudden availability of Coca-Cola, American movies and even a Scotch on the rocks are merely the tangible byproducts of a much more important change, one that cuts at the heart of economic policy.

In short, there is a subtle yet unmistakable shift from philisophical idealism to political realism.

Chinese leaders today are taking a pragmatic approach to solving problems — both domestic and international — and in many cases it has involved implementing a decidedly capitalistic approach to dealing with the economy.

It can be seen in the rural areas where farmers are allowed to produce extra crops for their own profit. They still grow and sell to the government a predetermined amount of crops at a fixed price. But they now are able to work extra hours to grow additional products which they in turn can sell at small markets for profit.

The Chinese call it incentive.

And it is spreading to other parts of the country. In the cities, individuals are allowed to open small shops they operate for profit. Many have taken advantage of the opportunity. Small stores, many consisting of nothing more than a table filled with packs of cigarettes and a few arts and crafts, line the streets.

But more importantly the changes are continuing. Excerpts from two news stories appearing on the front page of The China Daily earlier this month indicate this shift in thinking.

The first appeared April 1 under the headline, "New wage system will relate pay to responsibility." It read, in part: "China is aiming to break the 'big pot' system, under which workers' salaries are mainly decided on seniority, and replace it with a new wage system which will better embody the principle of distribution according to work.

"The emphasis of this wage reform will be on eliminating the irrationalities of the current system which is now regarded as one of the major hinderances in the nation's modernization drive.

"In State departments and institutions, a wage system in which wages are mainly related to work posts will be introduced, linking wages of staff more closely with their specific responsibilities and contributions.

"In State enterprises, where conditions permit, a method allowing the total payroll to fluctuate according to the enterprise's economic performance will be introduced. Workers' wages also will be closely linked to their personal contributions.

First week in China leads to thoughts of friendship

EDITOR'S NOTE: During his three-week stay in China, Reporter-Telegram City Editor Gary Ott kept a journal of daily activities. What follows are excerpts from that dairy, tentatively entitled "Rambling thoughts from a half-crazed stranger in a strange land, part 1." The second part will be published next Sunday.

MONDAY or Tuesday, March 18 or 19:

It is now 12:45 a.m. and I honestly don't know if it is Monday or Tuesday or, for that matter, a week from Thursday. Our group left San Francisco at 2:30 p.m. Sunday (American time) and I feel as though I've been strapped to that 747 for 14 days. We finally landed in Shanghai after God knows how many hours and then took a short flight to Peking, where I now have a room at the Youhad Guest House, former home of Chiang Kai Shek. It is a charming place.

One problem has arisen, however. I managed to be assigned the only accomodations without a private bath. Quite naturally, this made me very angry and I started to create an international confrontation, but decided against it when a tiny Chinese man, dressed in an oversized black suit and wearing thick glasses, apologized profusely and insisted on carrying my four pieces of luggage up a spiraling stairway to my room.

Once there, he offered me a beer and promised there would be more where that came from. I reluctantly accepted and am now, as I write these words, working on my second bottle of something called "Beijing Beer."

It is not bad, but all things considered, I'd rather have my own bathroom. By the way, the one I was told to use is down the hall and to the right. I assume I'm sharing it with the hired help. Things are not off to a good start.

TUESDAY, March 19, late night:

We have just returned to the guest house from a banquet thrown in our honor by some group called the Chinese Friendship Committee. It was a delightful experience. Each Chinese host was introduced and a bit of background information on him was given. It was done first in Chinese and then translated into English. Once this was completed everyone would applaud, including the person who had been introduced. According to Chinese custom, applauding while others applaud you is a way of saying, "thank you."

Later, each member of our group was introduced and, true to form, we applauded while the Chinese applauded us. To be honest, I felt rather foolish.

Once that formality was out of the way, we went to the dining area of the Beijing Duck Restaurant for a magnificent feast. There were several tables set up, each seating approximately eight persons. They had arranged a nice mixture of Americans and Chinese at each table, including at least one translator so we could all communicate.

Gary Ott

Before the food was brought out several toasts were made, all initiated by the Chinese hosts. Finally, as the drinks were taking hold, I turned to our translator, who was seated to my right, and asked if it would be appropriate if I proposed a toast. He translated my words and all the Chinese at our table grinned and nodded in the affirmative.

I then held up my glass and said, "To the continued friendship between our two countries." Not a particularly original thought, I admit, but one that worked.

The words were translated and well-received. Everyone drank up.

Buoyed by this reception, I then proceeded to make 15 more toasts, the last of which was, "To Willie Nelson and all the honky tonk beer joints in West Texas."

I rate the evening a smashing success. New ground has been broken between our two great countries.

WEDNESDAY, March 20, 2:45 p.m.:

The rest of the group has gone to see the Temple of Heaven. I have stayed behind since I am now waiting to be taken to the China Daily, the only English-language newspaper in the country, for a visit with the editors. I took advantage of this free time to take a walk down one of the busier streets in Peking.

It was truly fascinating. I was alone; one American among thousands of Chinese. It was an eerie feeling, especially at first. The people would stop and stare at me. I would smile in return, hoping they would view the gesture as an act of goodwill.

Not being able to communicate is terribly frustrating. There are so many questions I would like to ask. Mostly, I think the Chinese are curious about Westerners. At least that is the feeling I got while walking the streets. I never felt threatened or intimidated, just that I was an island unto myself.

Perhaps my beard enhanced their curiousity. I have yet to see one on a Chinese man. Also, the fact I had a camera slung over my shoulder seemed to arouse their interest. When I would stop and prepare to shoot a photograph, they would all stand back and stare. If I pointed the camera at them they would appear startled but never offered any objections.

The one thing that seemed to heighten their curiosity more than anything else was to see me write. Often during my walk I would stop and jot down some notes. When I did, a group would gather around and watch.

After I had finished I would hold up the notepad and let them see the words. Invariably, they would have a look of amazement and eventually would point and laugh, which made me feel good since I wasn't even trying to be funny at the time.

FRIDAY, March 22, 5:30 p.m.:

We have just arrived in Chongqing from Peking. It is a two-hour flight. All went well. The Chinese people continue to go out of their way to make us comfortable. One small problem did emerge, however, when we were told no smoking would be allowed on the airplane.

Since only five or six of our group of 25 smoke, the announcement created only a ripple of protest. Still, dedicated smokers can be a resourceful lot and, as if to prove that point, our tiny band of outlaws managed to suck down three or four Marlboros apiece by ducking behind the back row of seats and posting a guard to issue warnings when a stewardess approached.

It was a bit like being back in high school. Silly but fun.

Later, a touching scene took place in the parking lot of the Remnin Hotel, where we are staying while here in Chongqing. When we arrived, our bus stopped so we could get off and shoot pictures. Within minutes a rather large group of small children had gathered around us. Mary Neelley, a Houston woman who put together this trip, sang a Christmas carol to them. The children, with bright smiles on their faces, then sang a song to us in Chinese.

For those few fleeting moments language was no barrier. Friendship filled the air. It reminded me that children are indeed the hope of the future. They know no prejudice.

Next Sunday: More from the journal.

CHINA

"Under the current wage system, workers and State employees' salaries are mainly based on seniority instead of their contribution or performance."

Two days later, on April 3, the newspaper had the following news item under the heading, "Changing economy to be backed with new legislation."

It read, in part: "Various new laws to smooth China's move to a more market-oriented economy and curb problems that have come with the economic reform are to be approved this year, according to a senior official of the State Council.

"And, to further improve the laws relating to the economy, experts from capitalist nations will be invited to China as advisors, said Gu Ming, head of the Economic Legislation Research Centre under the State Council.

"China is developing a commodity economy related closely to market demand and in doing so the country has 'met some problems similar to those troubling the capitalist countries.'

"The problems include profiteering through arbitrary price rises, abusing power in reselling scarce goods, producing fake brands, using false trade marks, offering and taking bribes and making black market currency deals.

"Gu said China could learn a lot from Western countries which have rich experience in dealing with these problems."

It is China's deep-rooted fear of corruption that has led even today's more moderate leaders to take a cautious position on loosening the government's hold on the economy.

Whether it be because the state controls the day-to-day lives of its people or not, the fact remains there is very little crime apparent in China. Drug abuse doesn't seem to exist. Prostitution is not apparent. Violence is not visible on the crowded city streets.

And theft is so uncommon, it is said a person could place a $100 bill on a table in a busy restaurant, leave for several hours and upon his return the money would still be there.

Likewise, it is not unusual for a store clerk to chase down customers if he short-changed them following a purchase.

For whatever reason the Chinese people, at least in the eyes of visiting Westerners, are painfully honest.

Another reason today's leaders insist on moving slowly when making changes appears to be well-founded.

Any shift in policy, particularly in regard to the economy, runs the risk of offending — or, in some cases — outraging the more radical members of the communist regime. Some have already expressed the opinion that the country is losing its ideological purity.

There is fear of a backlash.

To a degree, it has happened before. Following the revolution in 1949, a few progressive steps were being realized in China. But as the changes took place, a subtle establishment of social classes began to develop simultaneously.

The intellectuals began to rise to the top. The radicals in the party, labeled the Gang of Four, seized control of the leadership roles and the Cultural Revolution resulted. It was a 10-year period, 1966-1976, when repressive policies were implemented and anything Western or, specificially, American, was condemned.

Intellectuals lost their positions of authority.

Valuable pieces of art were destroyed.

The arts ceased to be taught.

Present leaders acknowledge the 10-year period brought calamity to the Chinese people and harmed the population. The Chinese press has now admitted about 100 million people were persecuted during that period.

To guard against any similar backlashes, Chinese leaders are intentionally conservative in forging new ground.

But new ground or not, to suggest China has suddenly become a garden spot for democracy is not only downright erroneous, it borders on the absurd.

Life is still closely monitored by the authorities. It is a closed society and even with recent advances it is a place where most Americans would be uncomfortable.

Travel is limited. In most cases, a person's occupation is dictated by the state. Gifts, at least any with significant value, cannot be given to the people by foreigners. A military presence, while not overbearing, is apparent.

Perhaps the following comment best sums up freedom in China.

The editors of the China Daily, when asked if news copy was censored by the authorities, replied. "No, there is no censorship. Of course, we always support the government's policy."

Insurance can cover vacations

Associated Press

If you want to protect your investment in your travel plans, especially if you've signed up for a tour or a trip with heavy prepayments, you might want to consider purchasing travel insurance.

However, Changing Times magazine suggests you review your existing coverage; you may discover that it already covers you for at least some big losses.

If you want travel insurance, you have a choice of comprehensive package policies with broad coverage, or airport flight insurance and travel accident policies that usually only cover injuries or death while on a common carrier, such as a plane, train or boat.

Some policies offer preselected combinations of coverage for a single premium, and others offer each type of coverage for separate premiums. The most comprehensive packages cover losses caused by accident; illness or death; lost, stolen or damaged baggage; and cancellation or interruption of your trip.

They may also include emergency medical evacuation, personal liability insurance (such as for skiing), flight insurance, a daily living allowance if you're delayed en route by circumstances beyond your control, and reimbursement to replace necessities if your baggage is delayed 24 hours.

Most policies' exclusions won't affect a leisure traveler.

Following are explanations of some specific coverages.

— Cancellation and interruption. For about $5 per $100 of coverage, this is good coverage if you're making large advance deposits or if your trip arrangements, such as an APEX fare, require you to keep to specified dates.

The policy typically reimburses you for nonrefundable payments you've made if you have to cancel, delay or interrupt your trip. You may also get back any added fee for changing from double to single accommodations because your travel companion is injured or becomes ill.

You're covered if you have to leave the prearranged schedule and forfeit lodging and transportation deposits. The insurance will ordinarily pay for you to catch up, or if that's not possible, for an economy airfare back home.

Usually, the company will pay only if you change plans because you, your companion, a family member or a business partner gets sick, is injured or dies.

The policies generally don't cover defaults by travel agents, but most cover losses if an airline, tour operator or cruise line goes bankrupt.

— Baggage insurance. You can sometimes buy this separately. The cost depends on the dollar limit and length of time. A 14-day trip with a $1,000 limit for a family would run $42 from Travel Insurance Pak and $35.25 from Mutual of Omaha.

The policies exclude items — often contact lenses, artificial teeth and limbs, money, securities, tickets, business property and bicycles (unless checked as luggage).

Your homeowners or renters insurance, and any special floaters for jewelry, furs, camera equipment and other valuables, may already somewhat cover your baggage against named perils like fire and theft.

However, baggage insurance covers your bag if you simply lose it. Most baggage insurance policies have no deductible or a very small one — say $25.

— Medical expenses. A year-round medical insurance plan may already cover you. On foreign trips, however, you will probably have to pay any costs yourself and file for reimbursement when you get home.

Medicare provides no benefits outside the U.S., except for limited amounts in Canada and Mexico.

Hong Kong now in busy season

New York Times News Service

Hong Kong's two peak travel seasons are April-May, and October-November. Travelers planning to visit the colony during these months should lose no time in arranging for flights and hotel rooms.

The United States Department of State advises travelers bound for Hong Kong during those seasons to have confirmed hotel rooms and confirmed reservations for flights leaving the colony.

According to an advisory issued by the department, delays of up to a week in obtaining a flight from Hong Kong can occur, and many people have had trouble finding suitable hotel rooms during the peak times.

To help visitors flying into Hong Kong, representatives from the Hong Kong Tourist Association are stationed in the airport terminal, offering free packets of information.

Visitors to Hong Kong should also remember that starting April 1, all people leaving the colony by air have to pay an airport tax of 120 Hong Kong dollars (about $15.50).

The tax is collected by the airlines during the airport check-in process.

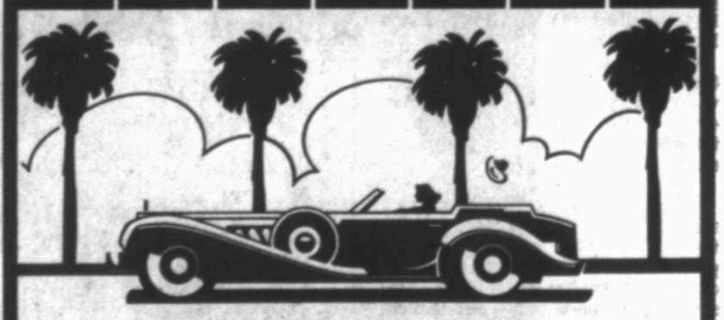

There is no departure tax for people leaving by land or water.

World's fairs economic gambles

By LYNN LUDLOW
Hearst News Service

VANCOUVER, B.C. — World fairs produced the McCormick reaper, a song about St. Louis, the sewing machine, the ice cream cone and a generally uncritical view of progress. The one thing they don't produce today is a profit; the species, accordingly, may be endangered.

The 1986 World Exposition wil cost the British Columbian and Canadian governments an estimated $800 million up front — maybe more.

"You have to be prepared to lose serious money," said Jim Pattison, chairman of Expo 86, which begins here a year from now. "We are budgeted," he said, "to lose about $300 million."

Ceremonies were held here this week for the opening of Expo Centre, a giant geodesic golf ball that will be the fair's centerpiece. Strobe lights on the open-beam frame work illuminated triangular panels of stainless steel, a monument rising 17 stories above a once-polluted inlet. Inside is an $18 million theater that seats 500 for "the world's largest Omnimax screen, offering the ultimate in cinematic sensations."

The dome also stands for a billion-dollar gamble, which is why world expositions may disappear in the United States, where financing is packaged from local government bonds and loans from booster-minded businesses.

EARLIER FAIRS left an impressive heritage, such as the revitalized downtown area around the Space Needle in Seattle (1962). Fairs paid for urban cleanups that brought prosperity to grimy riverfronts of San Antonio (1968) and Spokane (1974).

Also bequeathed were a $24 million loss for New York (1964), an empty 266-foot Sunsphere to mark a taxpayer debt of $57 million in Knoxville, Tenn. (1982) and a federal grand jury investigation of the $100 million deficit in New Orleans (1984). These disasters persuaded boosters in Oklahoma City to cancel plans for a 1989 centennial and prompted an anxious debate in Chicago, site of a 1992 exposition that is expected to cost $1 billion.

Louis Masotti, a professor at Northwestern University who heads a committee studying the Chicago fair, has said the New Orleans exposition "may go down in history as the world's fair that killed the possibility of ever having another one."

Nothing else is quite like a world's fair, an institution born 134 years ago from a wedding of the industrial revolution and the country fairs of England. The first great celebration of technology, sponsored by the London Society of Arts as an "Exposition for the Industry of All Nations," was enclosed in the 19-acre Crystal Palace.

THE NEW YORK Crystal Palace Exhibition followed in 1853 and 1854. The first workable passenger elevators were demonstrated there. Then came the Paris Exposition of 1855, the Philadelphia Centennial of 1876, Chicago's World Columbian Exposition in 1893 and more than 30 others.

Expo 67 in Montreal wound up with a debt of about $900 million in Canadian dollars. But attendance was 51 million, twice the projections. That was more than the number of visitors to all the U.S. expositions in the past 20 years. Vancouver officials hope for at least 14 million visitors in 1986 to what they call "the celebration of the century," planned around themes of communication and transportation.

The fair, situated on a waterfront strip of 173 acres, exists today as a tabletop model. The attractions are expected to include 80 pavilions, 55 restaurants, a dozen plazas and theaters for more than 250 scheduled concerts. Pavilions were ordered by more than 35 nations, including the United States, the Soviet Union and China. Other major exhibits are to be sponsored by Canadian provinces, several U.S. states and more than 15 big corporations.

OTHER PLANNED legacies:

— The Canada Pavilion, is under construction several blocks from the rest of Expo 86, will become Canada Place. It will include the Vancouver Trade and Convention Centre and a $140 million hotel, the Pan Pacific. Passenger liners will tie up alongside. The convention hall is roofed by five giant tents of Teflon-coated fiberglass fabric; they resemble sails and invite comparison to the unique roof of the Sydney Opera House.

— The Roundhouse, an $8 million reconstruction of the original railroad facility. It will be an art museum.

— The $60 million British Columbia Pavilion, to become a theater complex.

— An $8 million seawall, 3,000 trees, the monorail system and other improvements in the land, which will be sold or leased to hotels, office buildings and other businesses. Related facilities include the $100 million B.C. Place, a domed stadium that seats 60,000 for an as-yet unsecured major league baseball franchise.

The sponsoring corporation is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Canadian government. Pattison, the corporation's chairman, said the fair will create about $4 billion in new economic activity at a time when the unemployment rate has reached about 15 percent.

THE SPIRIT isn't entirely endorsed by a group of University of British Columbia economists. The fair will cost $300 million more than expected, they said in a report last September. They also disagreed with official predictions of indirect benefits from money to be spent at the fair. The economists said the estimate was about $3 billion too high.

DENTAL HEALTH UPDATE
Philip O. Warlick D.D.S.
CROWNING A TOOTH
QUESTION: Is it painful to have a tooth crowned?
ANSWER: Crowning a tooth is not a painful procedure. Probably the only discomfort you will feel is the initial pin-prick when the anesthetic is administered. There have been so many improvements in dental care, in fact, that it is virtually free of pain and discomfort, even in long procedures. New anesthetics and analgesic techniques and high-speed, water-cooled handpieces have taken care of that. If your dentist recommends that one of your teeth be crowned, don't put it off. You may lose the tooth if you neglect to get the treatment that is needed to save it. Properly fitted, a crown can serve for a long time with only minor repairs to keep it working efficiently.

San Angelo's Fiesta del Concho, scheduled for June 14-16, features Concho River boat rides.

Fiesta del Concho scheduled

San Angelo's Fiesta del Concho, June 14-16, will be set on the banks of the Concho River amidst bubbling fountains and magnificent pecan trees. The festival's activities will incorporate Old Fort Concho just four blocks from the river area were visitors relive the past at "Frontier Days."

A family event, the fiesta will feature a fiddlers' contest, fajitas and kolaches, an arts and crafts fair, boat rides, entertainment such as "The Shoppe," Billie Jo Spears, Gary P. Nunn and Miss Texas, armadillo races, the free stage featuring music groups and a children's area where Camelot comes alive and "Dune Buggy" the clown is the resident host. The family can experience life on the frontier at Old Fort Concho where the Fort Concho Infantry and Cavalry show how the soldier lived in the 1870s. Or they might watch the Texas State Sheep Shearing Contest and the Sheep Dog Trials.

A parade, themed "Musical Magic," will be Saturday night.

DR. KURIANSKY

Caring parents allow children room to become adults

By DR. JUDITH KURIANSKY

Q: My 20-year-old daughter and I are very close. This was her first year away at college, and this weekend she insisted on coming home because she was miserable. She said she's upset about recurrent dreams about her singing teacher on whom she has a crush. She dreams that he's in a big fire and can't escape.

I have always been able to calm her, but nothing I say now seems to help. I think this man means a lot to her. She might have had sex with him because of certain things she's insinuated, but I don't know for sure. Does this have something to do with her dream? Should I ask her about it? What can I tell her to stop the nightmares?

A: The time has come to stop taking over for your daughter. Notice it's you who writes to me, not your daughter. I'm glad you care, but she has to start solving her own problems instead of expecting that Mother will save the day.

Cutting the umbilical cord is not easy for mothers like you. You take pride in your ability to help your child. You love her. You want to be a good mother. And you have been rewarded for being attentive and protective.

But the stickiest glue that keeps mothers like you from letting their daughters grow up is the fact that they are vicariously living through their children. You might not have had a close relationship with your own mother. But you wanted to. Having closeness with your daughter is a way to undo that early pain and disappointment. Or maybe your own life, especially with regard to sex and relationships with men, is not as exciting as you would like; so you get excitement from your daughter's adventures.

RECOGNIZE THESE needs of yours. They may be what is keeping you directing her life. Although it seems she is the one dependent on you, you may be the one dependent on her.

Mothers can be good advisers for their daughters about dating, love and sex. I am all in favor of family discussions about values regarding sex. And I support mothers — and fathers too — who can talk to their daughters and sons about sex. With younger children it is important for parents to occasionally initiate such discussions. But once your "child" is 20, let her take the lead.

I would hope you have laid the groundwork through her growing years for being an "askable parent," that is, she can trust you and come to you with her questions. Reiterate that message. Tell her, "You know I'm always open to talking with you about anything that happens, good or bad, at school or in dating." You can also share some experience with her that you had while growing up. But don't pry into her life, asking her to "fess up" to her extra-curricular activities.

Be a friend to your maturing daughter, yes. But don't be a giggling teen-ager insisting she tell all and gossiping about who did what when. That invades her privacy as a woman and keeps her from growing up.

Ordinarily I wouldn't analyze your daughter's dream without her requesting it herself. That would be an important step in her maturation. But hoping she will read this, and fearing she would not ask on her own yet, I will venture some important points.

Your daughter may be attracted to her singing teacher for several reasons. He may indeed be an attractive man. He may be the first man who has taken an interest in her. But the act of singing itself may also turn her on: the sense of being free, perhaps for the first time. Her freedom, which may manifest itself in sexual desire, may be translated in the dream into fire. Fire is often symbolic of danger, but also flaming sexuality and passion.

BEING THE GOOD little girl she has always been, your daughter fears being punished for these sexual feelings. She risks being a "bad girl," eliciting her parents' disapproval. That shakes her feeling of security.

On a deeper level, being turned on to a man means "leaving" mother. Strange as this may seem, "good little girls" often feel psychically "married" to their mother. Fearing this separation and loss, your daughter rushes back to you, back to the dependent position that is safest.

If you want to help her make sense of the dream, tell her to use the Freudian technique of free association. Ask her to make associations to different people and parts of the dream and say what they mean to her. What is the fire? Whom does the singing teacher remind her of? What does she lose — or gain— from his being destroyed?

Recurrent dreams are a way of working through feelings that are too frightful to face. Discuss my above hypothesis. Talk about how scary it is for both of you to separate. Empathize with how hard it must be for her to make decisions about her own life and sexuality now.

It is not only the mother's job to let the daughter grow up and make decisions about sex. It is up to the daughter too. As one 27-year-old "girl" wrote to me:

Q: 'For the first time I have a steady boyfriend. He says he loves me and wants to marry me. He's divorced and in his early 40s. If my mother knew that, she'd be very upset. But if she knew I was sleeping with him, she'd kill me. I live at home and my mother usually waits up for me when I come home from a date. I want her to stop.

When I stay at his house, once in a blue moon, I tell her I'm staying at a girlfriend's. The other day he sent me a sexy card and she opened it and called me at work saying she has to have a talk with me. I was petrified. My first problem is: What do I do about her? My second problem is that I haven't been feeling very physically uninhibited with him. What can I do about that?

A: Stop being so defensive with your mother. You are feeding into her control over you. You regress into being a 16-year-old, worrying she'll "kill" you when she disapproves.

You are living under your mother's roof. So you do owe her consideration. Discuss more reasonable "house rules" and parietals. Tell her you don't feel it's appropriate at your age to account for your every move. But do check in to let her know you are safe and generally what your plans are. You would do that in living situations with friends.

Why do you continue to live at home? Isn't it time you supported yourself and paid rent? Or moved out on your own? To deserve and take on the responsibility of sexuality, you need to take control of all of your life.

Face your fears of growing up and taking care of yourself. You cannot have it both ways: mother caring for you and you acting like you're on your own when it suits you.

Don't let your mother rule you with guilt. You're holding on to each other for dear life. Discuss together what it means that you are grown up. How do you both feel about you no longer being 16? What does your being sexual mean to her?

Don't lie to your mother. When you lie, you rob yourself of self-esteem. And you end up resenting the person you have deceived.

Beware of going from the cradle of your parents' home to the cradle of a husband caring for you. Marriages are in for trouble when the woman thinks of herself as a young girl needing protection and provision because she often then turns her man into a substitute parent. Then sex goes out the window.

YOUR PROBLEM in sexual functioning with this man may be related to your guilt over being sexual. You may have strong messages from religious teachings, or your mother, that you should be married first.

Or, as in the case of the daughter above, this relationship means breaking with the comfort of your relationshjip with your mother. That conflict causes you to approach him, yet also withdraw.

Sex therapists know that some women who have sexual problems have deep-seated problems in their relationship with their mother. Many of these women are overly attached to their mothers and overly afraid of their disapproval.

Mothers' views about sexuality and love often have a tremendous impact on a girl. Some youngsters go through periods of rebelling against mother's mores in order to prove their independence. That can lead to too-early sex and even pregnancy. Or they may get married unwisely, just to get out from under mother's wing.

Other young girls become compliant with mother's way, to ensure her continued love. When mothers of these girls have taught that sex is wrong (even if they add that it's OK after marriage), the message often sticks long after marriage. They end up feeling guilty about being sexual, even with their husband. Or they turn off sexually, especially after having children, when there is an easy excuse of being too tired or too busy. Or they may not have orgasms consistently. In the back of their mind, they are still complying with the rule, "be a good girl."

MANY OF THESE women can improve their sexual relationship once they separate from their mother. In therapy, professionals use these techniques to help. In one, the woman asks her mother what her mother told her about sex. This helps the woman see the chain of values passed through the generations and frees her to choose differently.

The second technique involves allowing the woman to express her anger toward her mother — about something in the present or past. Women who withhold their anger become "stopped up" in their sexual response. Unleashing the anger — in a safe place like with a therapist, not to the real person, helps the woman feel more independent.

When women face this anger toward their mothers in therapy, they can become strained with their mothers in real life. But in the long run, they gain more respect for their mother and themselves and the relationship improves.

Some teens susceptible to rubella

ATLANTA (AP) — Between 5 percent and 20 percent of adolescents and young adults in the United States, especially those in colleges and universities, remain susceptible to rubella, researchers say.

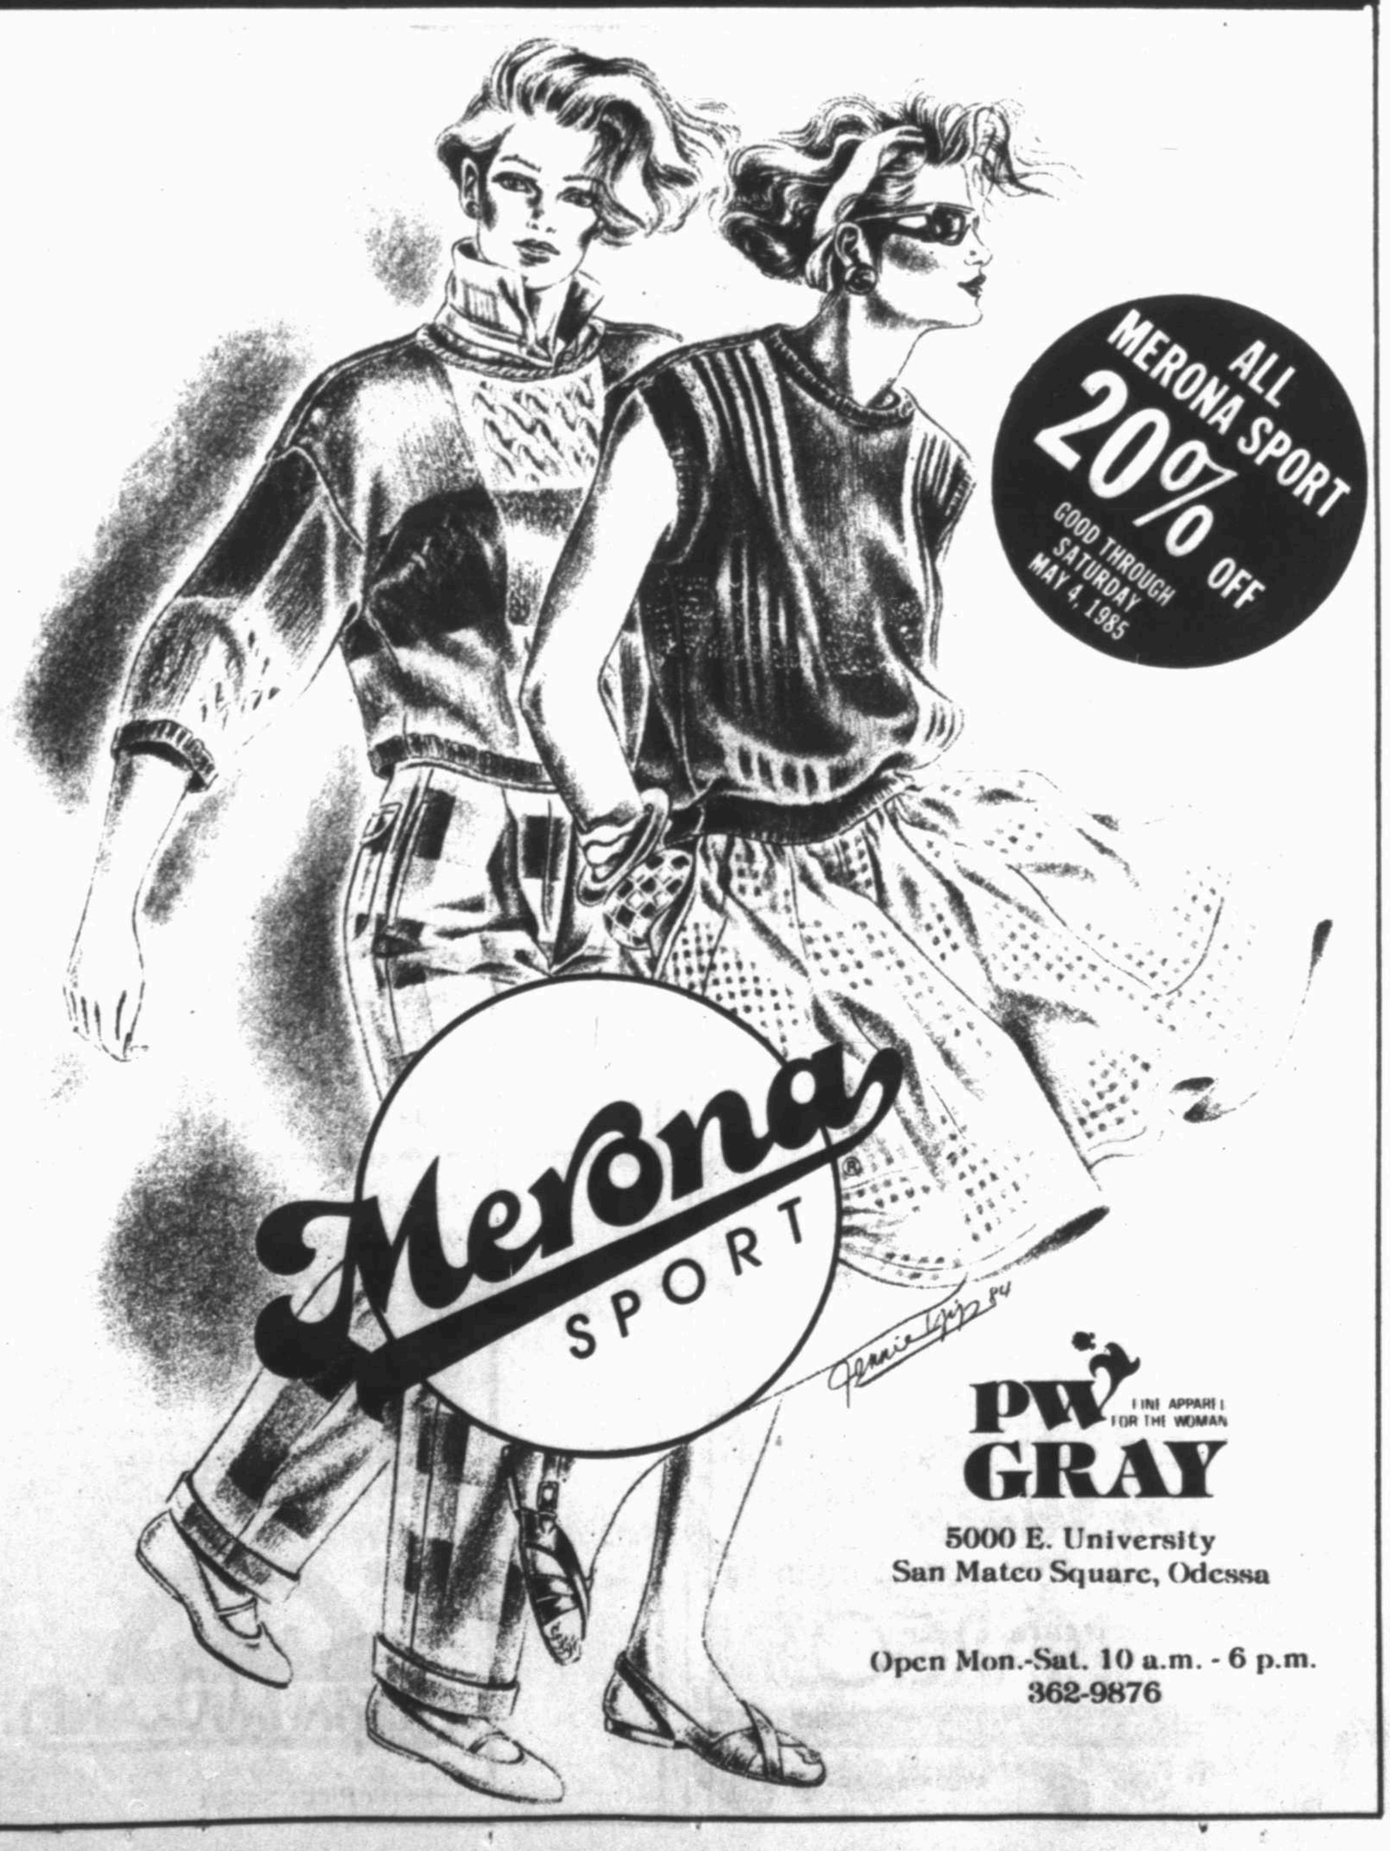

The national Centers for Disease Control said of 125 people who had the disease in outbreaks on six campuses in 1983 and 1984, 74 percent could not show proof of immunization for rubella, often called German measles.

Whooping cough shots available

ATLANTA (AP) — Dwindling supplies of whooping cough vaccine have been restored, and doctors should resume giving children all five doses of the shot, the national Centers for Disease control says.

When a vaccine shortage developed in December, the CDC urged doctors to postpone giving the fourth and fifth booster shots, normally given to children at ages 18 months and between 4 and 6 years.

Childhood illnesses not just kid stuff

Dear Dr. Solomon: Many of the illnessess that children usually get, such as measles, are called childhood diseases. This seems to suggest that the diseases are not very important, and I think that that is misleading. When I registered my youngster for school, I was asked about his childhood diseases, but the school nurse and teacher didn't seem to pay much attention to them. I wonder if I might have your opinion on this. — Mrs. L.S., Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Mrs. S.: Many childhood diseases cause only temporary discomfort; however, others, such as polio, can have devastating consequences. The same is true of diphtheria, whooping cough, and other illnesses that are commonly associated with childhood. A "childhood" disease is not necessarily a "minor" disease, and I believe that school personnel are generally aware of this. That is why vaccination is often a requirement before children are permitted to enroll in school.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I get up in the morning, I'm so stiff that I can hardly bend over the sink in order to brush my teeth. But the more I move around, the better I feel. Is it possible for a person with arthritis to feel the way I describe? — Mrs. R.D., Dover, Del.

Dear Mrs. D.: From your question, I would assume that you are not now under a physician's care; I suggest you see your doctor to discuss your symptoms. The fact is that patients with rheumatoid arthritis generally experience more pain and stiffness in the morning, but these decrease as the patients become more active.

Dear Dr. Solomon: From the letters you receive, I would have to say that men seem to be more concerned about their sexual performance than women are. In the interest of equal opportunity, I would like to know if cocaine affects a woman's sexual interest. — Ms. D.E. Washington, D.C.

Dear Ms. E.: If a survey of women who have called a cocaine hot line is any criterion, 50 percent report a complete loss of sexual interest associated with cocaine use. Apparently, cocaine's harmful effects are also characterized by equal opportunity in that they do not discriminate between men and women.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Whenever I hear about someone who drinks a lot, I think that he may be having problems with his liver. One of my brothers has high blood pressure and I think he hits the bottle pretty good. Can drinking cause high blood pressure? — Mr. D.Y., Dallas.

Dear Mr. Y.: There does appear to be some association between the excessive consumption of alcohol and high blood pressure. Moderate use of alcohol, however, does not appear to have this same effect.

For Deborah, Montpelier, Vt.: Your mother may neither need nor be able to use intensive insight-oriented psychotherapy. Many people your mother's age can benefit from treatment that provides support and understanding.

Hotel space limited during Guangzhou trade fair

By 'GENE BURKE
Copley News Service

TRAVEL ADVISORY: CHINA — The State Department advises that the Guangzhou Spring Trade Fair runs through May 5. Hotel space in Guangzhou during this period will be extremely limited. All transportation in and out of Guangzhou will also be heavily booked. Any traveler who is not absolutely assured of confirmed hotel reservtions is advised against going to Guangzhou during the trade fair.

Q. My daughter, 19, has a U.S. passport that needs renewing. Can she do this by mail?

A. Your daughter may not be eligible to use the mail-in procedure, since an expired passport submitted with a mail-in application must have been issued since the bearer was 18 years of age. She will, therefore, have to file for a new passport in person at a post office authorized to accept applications or at a county clerk's office accepting them.

Q. I had a passport issued in 1979 but cannot find it. How do I go about getting another passport?

A. You must file an application in person at a post office authorized to accept applications or a county clerk's office. You should submit your birth certificate, two passport photographs 2x2-inches, an identity document and the $42 fee. In other words, you have to start all over again. If you had your 1979 passport to submit, you would not need your birth certificate or a document of identity.

If you wish personalized information about passport requirements, send your questions to 'Gene Burke, c/o Passport Agency, 11000 Wilshire Blvd., Room 13100, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024.

Gordonstoun: Scottish school has royal alumni

New York Times News Service

The Scottish school Gordonstoun occupies a special niche in the history of the current royal family. Prince Philip and his sons, including Prince Charles, attended the school, which was founded in 1934 by Dr. Kurt Hahn, the originator of the Outward Bound philosophy, whose principal elements, according to James Douglas Thomas, the summer school's director, are education, variety and balance in circumstances that foster self-discipline.

This year, the school — situated on 150 acres of woodland near Moray Firth, about 40 miles from Inverness — is offering its 10th annual international summer school.

The session, open to boys and girls between the ages of 11 and 16, begins July 19 and ends Aug. 12. The program consists of studies in English; a choice among French, computer studies or English skills and humanities; sports, including instruction in sailing; and recreation, including craftsmanship and visits to historical and scenic areas.

A special feature of the program is adventure training, an introduction to initiative built around an obstacle course, map reading and compass work and a six-day expedition to Scotland's west coast that involves hill walking, mountaineering and canoeing.

Last year, 141 boys and girls from 20 countries were enrolled in the Gordonstoun International Summer School, where this year's program is expected to cost about $1,375, not including fare to and from the school.

More information and an application are available from the Gordonstoun School (Elgin, Moray IV30 2RF, Scotland; Hopeman 830267 during normal working hours or Hopeman 830259 at other times).

Local authors write children's guide

From Staff Reports

Six members of Texas Nightwriters, a club for amateur and professional writers, have combined talents and interests to bring West Texas a new guide book, "The Children's Guide to the Permian Basin." The colorful book includes fun things to see and do within a three-hour drive of Midland/Odessa.

The 110-page book divides the Permian Basin into sections, and subdivides the sections by towns. Readers may stop and check out each place mentioned or use the book to catch the highlights as they drive through the area. The "Highlights," "Must See" and "Look For As You Drive By" suggestions include free places to visit, almost free and those with an admission charge or reservation requirements.

Helpful sections in the book include getting started, what to expect, essentials, for parents only, food, preparation, car activities, tempting trips, general activities, wildflower/fall leaf, idle hands, tidbits of trivia, Permian Basin, windmills, ropin', recommended reading list, radio stations, listings by section of the 46 towns included in this edition and the 1985 calendar of events in the Permian Basin. The book also contains a letter to the readers and a humorous section about the authors.

The writers are Marilyn Bassinger, Jheri Fleet, June Hunt, Carol Rivera, Cynthia Savage and Marti Vermillion. Cover and inside illustrations were done by kindergarten through fourth grade students at Hillander and Trinity Schools in Midland.

The books will be available May 6 in the Permian Basin. For more information call 685-3568.

WATER BEDS

Many improvements have been made to water beds since they were first introduced. They are becoming an increasingly popular alternative to spring mattresses. Water bed owners say that the flotation system more evenly distributes body weight. As a result, they toss and turn less. They also enjoy the warmth of the heated mattress. A standard water bed consists of a water mattress, a heater, a frame with a safety liner of supportive deck and pedestal. When comparing water mattresses, check the quality of the materials and construction. All mattresses are made of vinyl. (polyvinyl chloride) but the guage of the vinyl differs among brands. Also, look for double-stitched lap seams which are more durable than butt seams.

Self-delusion limits job hunt

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

The following letter came to my office:

Dear: Project Director
I'm seeking submission as anthologist. I would wish a interview.
If you would like to contact me. My mailing address is... No phone. Please Reply. My resume is enclosed.
Career Objective: Seeking opportunity as anthologist with manuscripts available.
Qualification STATEMENT: Received 9 cr. hour at — JR. College in English Affairs.
EDUCATION: Attained 9 cr. hours or units in English Affairs. Did not receive a B.A. Received G.E.O. at — S.H. 1978.
Employment Experience: Unpublished author anthologist New field of study.
Interests: Jogging, Writing, Health foods, wits.
References: Available upon Request.

There was no signature, no name, only a return address. I have two simultaneous reactions: compassion and anger. My heart breaks for everyone who hopes for so much so unrealistically. And my fist clenches for the promises that can never be met by the formal system. There are two fallacies — the system's and the individual's. Let me explain.

First, many people have been led to believe that resumes are an end in themselves, not the means to an end. The act of writing one can make us feel important, and following its form can make us believe that we actually can fit into whatever we want. And mailing out the resume feels like we are really doing something, yet it is a passive act. But we delude ourselves badly.

Schooling can also perpetuate our delusion. Listing credits and majors alone makes us feel as if we can compete in the job game. And this is not solely at our own insistence; schools do play up to this notion. Witness the colleges who enroll students who are nearly illiterate, like the man who wrote this resume, and pass them in some newly created course, probably remedial and well-intentioned. English Affairs, indeed. What can we make of such a fraudulent promise?

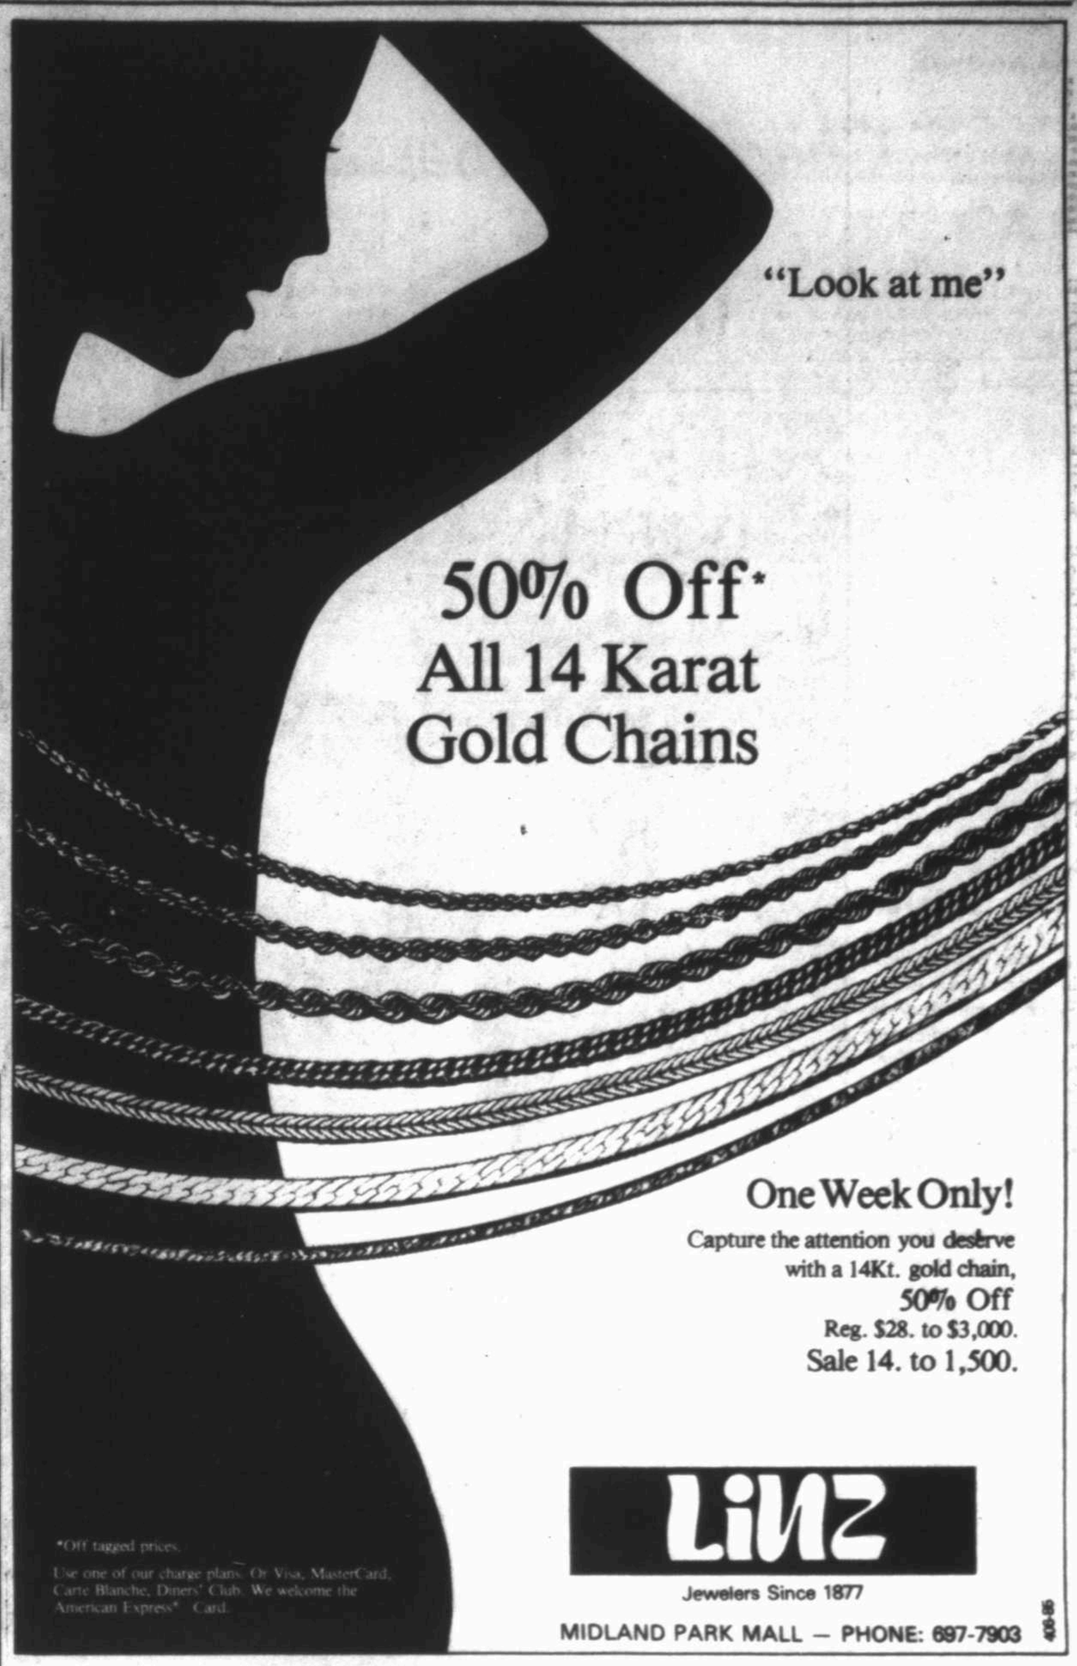

The second part of the fallacy lies in what we each aspire to do versus what we can offer. The pity of the above resume is that the writer doesn't know that he doesn't know. He's fooling himself in the most profound way and becomes so unacceptable to a prospective employer. It's not that he is unacceptable. His request to be an anthologist (whatever that means to him) plus his willingness to supply manuscripts becomes ridiculous in the face of his illiteracy.

So he is dreaming the wrong dream, at least now. If, for instance, he ultimately wants to write, then he must enroll in night courses with a writing teacher who will be honest and straightforward.

But that is for later in life. For now, he needs a job. Why not apply for any entry-level job — as delivery person, clerk, cleaning crew, anything — on a newspaper or in a publishing company. That way he will be nearer to opportunity while learning what he wants to do the most.

Finding ourselves through any job means first asking ourselves what we want to do and being honest enough to think how we can acquire the skills to do it. That takes courage, real courage — not instant heroics, but a kind of bravery in meeting ourselves face-to-face and taking care of what and who we see.

CHINA

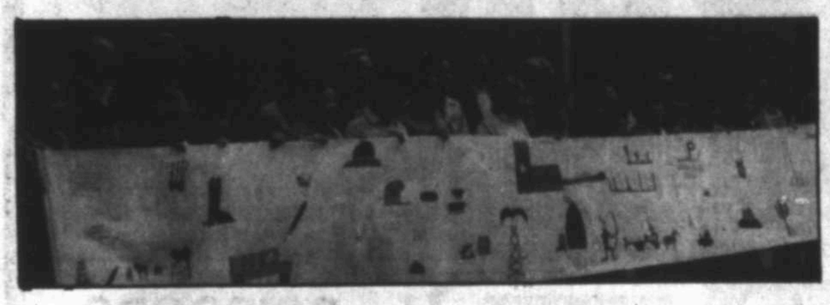

CHANGING TIMES

Text and photos by Gary Ott

Signs of free enterprise in China can be seen more and more, like this ice cream vendor in a park. Midlanders traveling in China join with Chinese students in displaying a 30-foot mural made by a group of Trinity School six-graders for their Chinese counterparts, shown in the photo below. It was presented to the Chinese by Midlanders traveling in that country with the Thouvenel String Quartet. Although many advances have been realized in today's China, in rural areas primitive habits are practiced. In small mountain towns, the natives still do their wash in the river, far right photo. Construction is obvious throughout China, especially in major cities such as Chongqing, top right photo.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following observations are based on the opinions expressed by the limited number of English-speaking Chinese citizens who were interviewed by Reporter-Telegram city editor Gary Ott during his three-week visit in China. They do not necessarily represent the views of all, or even a majority, of Chinese people.

Presidents Nixon, Carter and Reagan: The Chinese continue to have tremendous respect for Nixon. He is considered a hero. The people speak repeatedly of "his courage" for having begun the normalization process between the two countries. They have a difficult time understanding why he was forced to leave office in disgrace.

To a lesser extent, they feel the same about Carter since it was during his administration that relations were formalized. But the outpouring of support, almost to the point of being emotional, is not as evident in regard to Carter as with Nixon.

This seems to be because Nixon's action came first and was done in such dramatic fashion. His historic visit to the country in the early 1970s apparently left a deep and lasting impression on the Chinese people.

As for Reagan, the people were basically non-committal. They seemed reluctant to say anything critical about him when speaking with Americans but, at the same time, they didn't go out of their way to heap praise on him, either.

When asked their opinion of him, most shrugged and said, "He's OK."

Attitude toward America: The Chinese people were constantly seeking the Americans' views of China and the direction the country appears headed. They talked of America's strength and influence. "We can learn much from your country," they said repeatedly.

There doesn't seem to be a resentfulness toward the U.S., despite past clashes over such issues as our support of the Chiang Kai-Shek forces during the revolution and our continued friendship with Taiwan.

They see these as minor differences that should have no effect on current relations.

Attitude toward the Soviet Union: Immediately following the '49 Revolution Russia provided machinery and technology to China, helping it to make significant progress during the 1950s while also giving it an opportunity to recover from the destruction resulting from the fighting. The Chinese people acknowledge this role and say it was crucial during those early years.

However, by the early 1960s many Chinese felt the Soviets were attempting to dictate policy within China and relations became strained and eventually broke off altogether. Only within the past year have formal communications resumed.

The people believe relations with Russia are needed, but they make a point of emphasizing their disapproval of the Soviets' "aggressive policies in Afghanistan, Poland and other Eastern Bloc countries."

Again, it was difficult to determine if they were making those comments because they felt that's what the Americans wanted to hear.

They were sophisticated enough politically to know that the U.S., Russia and China are the three major world powers and each attempts to use the others to its advantage.

Views toward Taiwan: Surprisingly, there doesn't seem to be the hostility directed toward Taiwan as one might expect, although the Chinese do resent it if Americans refer to the island as a republic. To the Chinese people, mainland China is the republic and Taiwan is merely "an unliberated province."

Opinions on Chairman Mao: The following quote probably best sums up the opinion of many Chinese on this subject: "Today, Mao is no longer considered immortal. Instead, we see him as a great leader who made mistakes."

The Cultural Revolution, a 10-year period from 1966-1976 when Revolutionary leaders banned most cultural activities and discouraged any westernization in China, probably did more to tarnish his image than any other single event.

In retrospect, most Chinese, even today's leaders, acknowledge this was wrong and led to a giant void in the country's modernization drive.

According to the Chinese, during that 10-year period students spent half the school day reciting revolutionary slogans and the other half studying Mao's teachings.

Intellectuals were condemned and most were forced to give up their jobs. They were sent to rural areas where they did manual labor on the farms.

While the Chinese refused to blame Mao exclusively for the Cultural Revolution, they did indicate his teachings were responsible for the actions of others — specifically, the Gang of Four — that pushed through the changes.

They consider the 10-year period a black mark on the country's history.

Convenience concept makes Midland debut

By MELLA McEWEN
Business-Oil Writer

There are the burger wars. There are the cola wars. Now there's the store wars, as convenience stores vie with one another with bold and innovative changes to increase market share and compete with supermarkets.

Bill Kent, owner of Kent Oil Inc. which operates Kent Kwik stores, said that the convenience store industry once had a reputation for being high-priced, but the image was probably not true any more. Said Kent: "We are feeling a pressure to be more competitive in price with the supermarkets."

He said that while convenience stores do no enjoy the luxury volume of customers and product sales, they do enjoy the luxury of parking convenience for the customer who wants to get in and out quickly.

Joining Town & Country, Kent Oil Co., Seven-Eleven and others, which have introduced recent design and marketing concepts, Stop N Go, is now aggressively making its bid for a larger take of the convenience market with a colorful new concept that is attracting wide attention.

According to Stop N Go District Manager Glenn Boenisch, supermarkets are adding fast food service and express lines, and are becoming almost as convenient as convenient stores. "We couldn't rely on convenience alone anymore, we had to look at other concepts."

The new attention-getting concept recently introduced by the Houston chain includes a new hexagonal designed store, with a colorful and brightly lighted decor that dominates the night. Called "The Hex", the first store using the design was opened in San Antonio in October of 1984. Since then three stores have been added in Odessa and two are planned for Midland.

Boenish said the stores were attacting attention and compliments wherever they are built.

The first Midland store with the hexagonal design opened last week at the corner of Illinois and Midkiff. A second store is under construction at the corner of Wadley and Big Spring streets.

An integral part of the new convenience concept is the large canopy and bright lighting at the gas pumps. "Our main draw is the gas installation," Boenisch noted. "We're trying to add to security in the evening because the female shopper shops where she feels safe, and we're trying to attract the female shopper." To this end, the health and cosmetics line has been increased dramatically.

Boenish said that in addition to expanding the health and cosmetic line, other product lines would be extended as well, in hopes of drawing some of the supermarket convenience shoppers.

March homes sales increase

Home sales for March are up in most categories over the same period last year, according to the Midland Board of Realtors monthly sales activity report.

The total number of homes sold in March of this year were 110, with a total sales value of $9.3 compared to 98 sales with a dollar value of $9.2. Average sales prices, however, were almost $9,000 lower in March 1985 than the March 1984 average of $93,763.

All of the sales increase was achieved with the sale of existing homes, with new home sales showing a drop from 22 to 12. Existing home sales numbered 98 this year, while 1984 March sales were numbered at 76. Total dollar value of existing home sales this were were slightly over $8.2 million, with 1984 total sales at about $7.3 million. New home dollar sales suffered considerably falling from slightly over $2 million in 1984 to $1.1 million in 1985.

A noticable change was also seen in the type of listings between March of this year and March of last year. Four and five bedroom homes for sale increased, while the number of two and three bedroom homes dropped. This fact probably accounts for the increase in the average listing price, from $96,700 in March 1984 to $98,700 in March 1985, and for the slight increase in total dollar value of listings. The total value of listings in March of last year was $153.7 million and was up to $154 this year.

Total active listings decreased slightly from 1590 last year to 1561 this year. "Inventories are remaining fairly stable, and activity normal," said Joan Noel, president Midland Board of Realtors. "We don't seem to be in any kind of sales slump, we just have a high inventory." Noel said it would take another month or two to forecast whether or not 1985 would be better than 1984.

Henry announces subscription of firm's Spraberry Nordic project

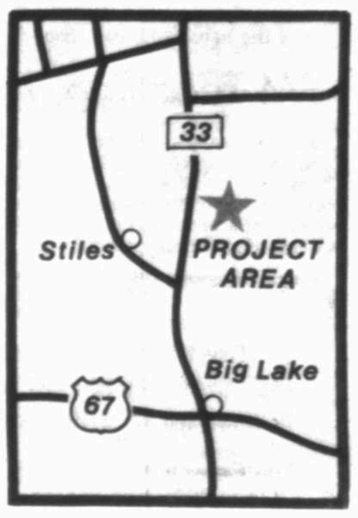

From Staff Reports

Henry Petroleum Corp., Midland, has announced the subscription of its 25-well "Nordic Package," a Spraberry drilling venture in Reagan County. Drilling is underway in the project, and two producers have resulted.

Concentrated in the Spraberry-Dean and Wolfcamp formations, the Nordic drilling program is being drilled as an 80-acre infill program, with a projected cost of $13 million.

In addition to the Nordic Package, Henry Petroleum has announced that it intends to drill approximately 25 additional wells at a cost of $25 million, bringing total wells to be drilled by the firm in 1985 to 50. Henry Petroleum drilled 47 wells in 1984.

"We believe 1985 will be a good year for the petroleum industry in West Texas," said Jim Henry, president, "and we are projecting that our 1986 drilling budget will be approximately double the 1985 budget."

Midland economy featured in Family Weekly campaign

From Staff Reports

In recognition of Midland's growth and strong economy the city has been selected as one of four subjects for a special advertising campaign being launched by "Family Weekly" magazine which is included in the Reporter-Telegram's Sunday editions.

Other cities are Flint, Michigan; Casper, Wyoming and Palo Alto, California, all of which have unusually high retail sales, personal income levels and general prosperity.

The ads will appear in trade publications only, including Adweek, Advertising Age, Marketing and Media Decisions, Magazine Age, Madison Avenue and Ad Forum and will be directed to advertising and marketing professionals.

"Today, the effective buying income of Flint, Michigan is higher than that of New York, San Francisco Denver, and Phoenix." This is a sampling of copy from one of the four information-rich ads for "Family Weekly" recently published by Rumrill-Hoyt of New York.

"The point of this campaign is to make media buyers, planners, and advertisers aware of "Family Weekly's" huge reach, 363 markets, as well as the type of markets reached," said Harvey Kahn, senior vice president and management

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Getting old is not the same as getting older

When my Centennial beard grew out this month, I was 100 percent, "shore nuff" for certain, but I think I had suspected it long before that. I am finally getting old.

The last time I had grown a beard it was characterized by a big blond patch in the middle of my chin. Now, the blond is a bigger patch of gray. Not-noticing the occassional gray hair that slips in around the temples is easy enough, but not noticing a big blotch of gray hair that pops up overnight in the middle of ones face is not so easy and was cause for some reflection on my part.

Also cause for reflection is the fact that I turned 48 Saturday. A simple exercise in math at this point, tells me that more of life is now behind me than in front of me. If I am fortunate enough to live to the average age of 75 for men, I calculate that life is about two-thirds over for me. That is definitely better than being 95 percent over, but still, when first realized, it becomes a sobering thought.

I suppose there is a time in everyone's life when they finally realize they are getting old — not just older. The experts and their books say its one of those stages. For the past 48 years I never thought of myself as getting old — just older. Somehow in my twisted view of life I thought I would just keep getting older — not old. But now, circumstances have convinced me that I am getting old, if you can follow my thinking.

Friends and family are quick to toss out encouragement to us nouveau elderly. "You're only as old as you think," they say. Well, I feel 48, and I feel like 48 is the start of old.

For me it has all been all too soon. I was just getting used to the idea of being grown up, now I turn around and I am getting old.

I don't remember exactly when it was that I noticed I was getting old.

I should have suspected it when people in their twenties started calling me "mister."

But, it was probably last year, when I looked down and was startled to see my father's hand — wrinkles, liver spots and all — hanging out of my sleeve.

I recognized it immediately as the hand that used to hand me a dollar once or twice a week for gasoline to go to Kermit to see my girl friend, and I couldn't believe it was hanging on the end of my arm. Funny isn't it how we can suddenly notice things we have been looking at for years.

Now that I think back there were other things that should have made me suspicion that I was getting old, not just older.

I probably should have suspicioned something with my first bouts of senility — like when I would drive the car to work and walk home...drive the car to town and forget where I parked it, or, rush out of the Reporter-Telegram on my way to an interview and remember that I don't have a car.

I also recall the perplexion of finding myself in front of an open refrigerator, trying to remember what it was I came for, or if I had just put something up. Of course, being the lard bucket I am, If I can't remember I just take something to eat anyway.

Speaking of lard, I have found the bathroom scales to be another indicator of old age, not so much because of the weight reading, but because I can't read the numbers without glasses. Neither can I sit at my desk and read the newspaper, anymore. While the bottom is readable, the top is totally out of focus.

The eye doctor tells me I need bifocals, but I have resisted. You know what kind of people wear bifocals don't you?

Probably the most disturbing evidence of old age, however, has been the death of my pet Spot — Damned Spot, that is, my pet blackhead. He came to me when I was in college, and through thick and thin (skin) he has remained with me, right there in the middle of my forehead. I named him for a character in Shakespear's McBeth.

I thought Damned Spot and I would be together til the end, but time and dry skin are taking their toll. Spot is dying, and I suspect old age. Do you suppose...somewhere up there...? Nah, forget it.

Consumer groups say banking too expensive

NEW YORK (AP) — When the Consumer Federation of America searched for the highest banking fees in America, they discovered a bank where a checking account cost $15 a month, and another where checks cost 50 cents each.

One bank charged customers $1 for each deposit they made, and another charged 60 cents each time a customer used an automated teller.

Consumer groups say routine banking has become too expensive for many Americans, especially the poor, and some banks have responded by offering discount or "lifeline" checking. But groups like the CFA say it isn't enough, and some lawmakers are looking at legislation that would force more banks to provide discount services.

The problem, according to Alan Fox, legislative representative for the Consumer Federation, lies with banks "which say small accounts aren't profitable and you should do everything you can to run them out of the bank by raising fees."

When interest rates were deregulated several years ago and banks were allowed to set competitive rates to attract customers, service fees began to rise to cover the additional expenses. To upper- and middle- income families, rising bank fees can be an inconvenience, but to lower income families they may mean having no banking services at all.

"Our position is generally, every consumer ought to be able to have access to basic banking services — a basic checking account with no fees or very low fees and also access to small savings accounts," said Fox.

"How that is done is somewhat open to question," he said. While banks should be encouraged to offer such accounts on their own, "we'll probably need legislation to require institutions to offer those services," he said.

The banking industry, of course, doesn't want the government setting service fees and says voluntary compliance is enough.

In October, Citicorp Chairman John Reed said legislation was unnecesary because the industry was "sensitized" to the issue and "perfectly capable of meeting its responsibility to various segments of our society."

At a news conference, Reed said the industry recognized the need for low- cost accounts because "we actually are decent people" and "because we're fully aware that it's in our own best interest" to meet society's needs.

Citicorp customers, however, must have $2,000 on deposit to receive free checking. Customers without such surplus cash can maintain accounts by paying $6 a month, which entitles them to four free checks.

Dozens of banks nationwide began discount checking services on their own in the last half of 1984, said Kirk Willison, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association, the largest industry trade group.

According to a bankers association survey, 60 percent of 2,000 small banks offer basic or economy checking, which requires minimum balances of $300 or less and small or non-existent maintenence fees.

Among the nation's 137 largest banks, about 19 percent offered "no-frills" accounts, and 25 percent said they intended to offer such accounts in the future. Such accounts have limitations on the number of checks that can be written, but they can be used by people who write a few checks a month or just need an account for check cashing privileges.

Fox said most discount accounts are available from rural and suburban banks, and city people might have a hard time finding a good deal.

Ken McEldowney, director of Consumer Action in San Francisco, said, "The reality is, only a small portion of the population has access to these accounts at the present time. What we're asking for is an environment in which not just a few institutions offer such accounts, but that it is widespread."

Despite the banking industry's opposition to legislation, discount banking is an issue under consideration by state legislatures and Congress.

In Congress, Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Ill., has introduced legislation that would require banks to give depositors written statements on fees; other representatives are considering measures to force banks to provide free accounts for the poor.

The State of Massachusetts has required banks to offer free checking to customers under 18 or over 65. Legislators in Virginia, Washington, Tennessee, Rhode Island, New York, Connecticut, and California are looking at similar proposals.

Even if no federal legislation is passed, the effort may succeed, said Julie Black, a staff member of the House Banking Committee. The financial community pays attention, she said, and so do state legislatures. "They often pass their own laws on the state level," she said.

Some banks offer discount checking

NEW YORK (AP) — Some banks are already offering discount checking accounts for poor people, reacting to consumer pressure and proposed state and federal legislation.

Up to two-thirds of U.S. banks offer senior citizens discounts, but few advertise these accounts. For those over 65, it's worth asking.

In the last half of 1984, dozens of banks introduced "no-frills" accounts, most of which have severe limitations on the number of checks that can be written. But for people who write few checks a month, or just need an account for check cashing privileges, they can be worthwhile. Some examples:

— Security Pacific National Bank, California's second largest, offers an account permitting an unlimited number of automated teller transactions. Customers must keep at least $100 in the account and can write only 10 free checks a month.

— Hutchinson National Bank in Hutchinson, Kan., offers free accounts that limit transactions to automated teller machines, where utility payments can also be made. There is a 50-cent charge for written checks or human teller transactions.

— First Tennessee Bank in Memphis offers a $3-a-month account that allows free automated teller transactions. There is a 25-cent charge per written check.

— Citizens and Southern Bank of Georgia offers a $3.75-a-month account limited to 15 free checks or automated teller transactions per month.

— Firstar Bank of Appleton, Wis., offers 15 free checks for a $2 monthly fee.

— Wilmington Trust Co. of Wilmington, Del., offers a checking account with no service charge and no minimum balance for customers who use automated teller machines instead of human tellers.

Consumer groups have recently focused on bank charges because fees have been rising rapidly. While the banking industry hopes its own efforts will prevent lawmakers from forcing the issue, consumer groups believe the industry effort may not be enough.

Midlanders found buying homes more difficult this year

COLLEGE STATION — It was more difficult to buy a house in Midland in 1984 than in 1983.

Less than 50 percent of the households could afford the monthly payment on an average house sold in the Midland area in 1984, according to a housing affordability index created by the Texas Real Estate Research Center at Texas A&M University.

The average price of homes sold in the area in 1984 was $90,800. Statewide, the average price in 1984 was $89,900.

According to the index, housing in an area is affordable when 50 percent of the households can theoretically afford the required mortgage payments associated with the financial requirements and the average priced home sold. At this level, the affordability index is 1.0. The higher the index, the more affordable the housing.

The Midland area had an affordability index value of .97 in 1984 compared to 1.22 in 1983. Statewide, the index value was .83 in 1984 and .85 in 1983.

The index for 1984 showed conditions deteriorated from the 1983 level meaning the Texas index has not been in the affordable range since 1980.

The index indicates that housing historically has tended to be less affordable nationwide than in Texas, but the strong national economic recovery reversed this relationship for 1983 and 1984. The state and nation indexes werer similar in1973, but by 1978 the TRERC index for Texas was 20% higher than the nationwide index of 1.15.

While the entire nation experienced substantial interest rate increases between 1973 and 1984, rapidly rising prices of housing in Texas caused comparable mortgage payments to rise 419% to $783 while nationwide payments rose only 271% percent to $718. Housing was less affordable in Texas (.83) than in the United States (9.1) in 1984.

Several data sources were used to develop this index. The average price of homes sold in major Texas cities was compiled from data supplied by cooperating Multiple Listing Services. Mortgage data for each local area were obtained from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Estimates of income and population were obtained from the Annual Survey of Buying Power of Sales and Marketing Management magazine.

Chrysler profits fall 28 percent in first quarter

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has announced that its first-quarter profit fell 28 percent from the same period a year ago.

The company said it earned $507.6 million in the first quarter compared with $705.8 million in the opening quarter of last year.

Its pre-tax earnings for the quarter were $725.1 million, an increase over last year's $706.2 million.

But net earnings declined because of a $217.5 million tax bill.

Chrysler became a corporate taxpayer again in the fourth quarter of 1984. Before that, the company was able to use tax credits earned during its close brush with bankruptcy.

The first quarter earnings amounted to $4.18 a share, compared with $5.64 a common share a year earlier.

General Motors Corp. announced earlier this week that its net earnings also declined by about one-third, to $1.07 billion. American Motors Corp. last week announced a $29 million loss for the quarter.

Ford Motor Co. said its earnings statement would be released Friday.

Chrysler net sales for the quarter rose to $5.4 billion, compared with $4.9 billion a year earlier.

In the first quarter, Chrysler and Ford, which were offering sales incentives to customers and dealers and special financing, gained market share at GM's expense.

Meanwhile, analysts said a 22.5 percent jump in mid-April domestic car sales raises doubts about whether the economy is slowing.

The six major U.S. carmakers reported Wednesday their best April 11-20 sales in seven years.

The seasonally adjusted annual rate of sales — the industry's main yardstick — was 9.3 million, which is more than the industry could produce with current factory space.

"This goes against the grain of some forecasts of a slowing economy," said industry analyst Harvey Heinbach of Merrill Lynch in New York.

"Some of this is attributable to the sales incentives that are scheduled to expire," Heinbach said. "Some people are rushing to go out and buy."

Ford sales were up 49.6 percent in the April 11-20 period compared with last year. Chrysler sales were up 30 percent.

GM, the industry leader, posted a gain of 14.1 percent and moved somewhat closer to reclaiming its traditional market share of nearly 60 percent. GM's share for the period was 57.7 percent.

Ford had 26.2 percent of the domestic car market and Chrysler had 12.9 percent, both above the traditional percentages.

Among the smaller producers, No. 4 American Honda Motor Co. Inc. sales were up 14.3 percent, No. 5 AMC sales continued down, at 35 percent, and Volkswagen of America Inc. sales were up 11.4 percent.

Market share was 1.2 percent each for Honda and AMC and 0.7 percent for VW.

Sohio plans to develop offshore discovery

Three exploratory wells completed

HOUSTON (SWN) — Sohio Petroleum Co. has announced plans to develop an oil and natural gas discovery on its East Breaks Block 165 lease in the Gulf of Mexico, about 100 miles south of Galveston.

"Three exploration wells have been completed to date, and the third exploration well confirmed the discovery to be commercial," said Sohio Petroleum Company President David D. Lybarger.

Lybarger said a 40-well drilling and production platform, designed for installation in about 860 feet of water, has been ordered from McDermott Inc. "The platform is scheduled for installation in 1986, and production should begin in early 1987." Lybarger said.

Initial production facilities are designed for up to 20,000 barrels of oil per day and 50 million cubic feet of gas per day.

Sohio plans future exploration drilling from the platform to test addtional fault segments.

The discovery well, in 960 feet of water, was drilled in mid-1984 to a total depth of 12,386 feet. It recovered oil and gas from wireline formation tests of several intervals.

A second well, located southeast of the first well in 996 feet of water, reached a total depth of 11,828 feet and was successful in finding oil and gas in zones similar to those encountered in the discovery well.

A drillstem test of an interval at about 11,400 feet in the second well flowed at a rate of 3,500 barrels of oil per day and 4.5 million cubic feet of gas per day on a 22/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,850 psi. The oil has a gravity of 33.7-degrees API.

The third well, drilled at a location northeast of the discovery in about 870 feet of water, was recently completed. It was not production tested, but logs and wireline tests confirmed the productive zones.

East Breaks Block 165, a 100 percent Sohio-owned block, was purchased in the August 1983 federal Outer Continental Shelf lease sale for a high bid of $14,125,000.

Sohio currently has working interest in five offshore production platforms in the Gulf of Mexico.

Investors: Telphone firms working 'beautifully' despite paperwork

AT&T reports 55 percent increase in first quarter

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Since February an investor in the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and A.T.&T.'s seven regional spinoffs has had to wade through eight annual reports, eight proxy statements, a blizzard of promotional literature, and, just last week, the companies' first-quarter earnings reports.

"If you watched these stocks carefully, comparing the earnings and reading all the material sent to you, it would take one full day a week," said Ruth M. Buck, a Chicago-based editor and writer who owns AT&T shares as well as stock in five regionals.

That's the bad news. The good news for investors is that the telephone companies are performing beautifully.

AT&T, which at this time last year was laying off thousands of employees and suffering from chaotic marketing, produced a 55.9 percent increase in first-quarter earnings, to $354 million, or 31 cents a share, from $227 million, or 20 cents a share, in 1984. The company had cut costs and was better organized, analysts said. And while few analysts expected the regional phone companies to stage an encore of their stellar 1984 performance — all beat earnings forecasts — their first-quarter results suggested that all the regional companies continued to be in fine shape.

The BellSouth Corp., for instance, aided by the Southeast's growing economy, reported a 22.4 percent jump in earnings, to $330.9 million, from $270.3 million in 1984. The Nynex Corp., enjoying a burst in demand for communications services in New York, particularly in Manhattan, reported a 16.1 percent rise in earnings, to $257.4 million, from $221.7 million.

In fact, the only regional phone company to report poorer results was the U S West Corp., whose profits dropped 2.6 percent, to $197.4 million, from $202.7 million. And those results reflected an estimated $60 million one-time payment to the MCI Communications Corp. to settle an antitrust suit.

According to analysts, the improved results, which resulted in further jumps in stock prices, reflected a number of factors in addition to the installation of more local phone lines.

The companies were cutting labor costs — almost all of them continued to lay off employees — and were introducing cost-saving technology, such as computerized call-switching equipment and thin glass cable over which thousands of calls can be routed at a fraction of the cost required to route calls over copper wire.

The companies were also adding new features to promote old products such as Centrex, which allows a company to switch calls internally without having switching equipment in the office. Most analysts expect other new products this year and additional productivity gains, which would likely translate into higher earnings and stock prices.

"We like the group," said Neil D. Yelsey, a telecommunications analyst at Salomon Brothers. "The regionals should have another strong year."

Edward M. Greenberg, a telecommunications analyst at Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., another Wall Street firm, said: "We think these stocks remain somewhat undervalued. Given our view that there will be positive earnings surprises and that interest rates will come down, we think they will continue to outperform the market.

Indeed, while most of the stock market was in the doldrums last year, the price of the average Bell company stock rose about 25 percent, according to Birr, Wilson & Co., a San Francisco brokerage. And in the first quarter, the Bell companies chalked up sizeable profits, such as American Information Technologies Corp., for instance, rose 10.3 percent, while Bell Atlantic rose 5.7 percent, BellSouth 9.9 percent, and AT&T rose 10.8 percent.

For the rest of 1985, analysts expect further price gains based on additional earnings growth. A common view on Wall Street is that the regional companies' profits will grow around 9 percent in 1985 from 1984 levels and 6.6 percent more in 1986.

If that happens, it will provide further weight to the emerging consensus that telephone company earnings can be improved through aggressive marketing and a hard line on costs. This is in contrast to a belief held for years that a phone company's earnings — indeed, its very health — depended on rate increases granted by state regulatory commissions. Fewer and fewer people believe that.

"By breaking up the industry, making it more competitive, and bringing accountability closer to shareholders, the companies are doing more to improve returns," Yelsey of Salomon Brothers said. "They have an incentive to appear stronger than and different from the other companies."

Still, the companies remain more alike than dissimilar, industry experts say. All, for example, still derive roughly 90 percent of their revenues from basic local phone service. The remaining 10 percent comes from new ventures such as sales of business equipment, from real estate dealings, from cellular mobile telephones, and from machinery leasing.

For that reason, some analysts are telling investors there is not yet any need to single out one individual regional company for long-term investment. Many, instead, are advising clients to become traders in the Bell stocks.

On-the-air programs generate more than $2 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nationally coordinated on-the-air tamborine thumping to raise money for public radio stations has brought pledges of more than $2 million in the first three days of a week-long effort.

Some 44,000 donors have called the 207 radio stations participating in "Public Radio Campaign '85" to pledge support, National Public Radio reported Wednesday.

The donors have ranged from a North Carolina man who said he likes to use classical music from his public station to soothe the ewes in his lambing barns to Sharon Percy Rockefeller, a board member of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting who pledged $675 to WETA-FM in Washington and challenged listeners to match it. They did.

"It was really great, because it was absolutely spontaneous," said Kim Hodgson, WETA general manager. "It gave us a great lift."

The National Public Radio network is coordinating the campaign for the first time as a way of helping stations pay off $5.4 million in loans they took on to keep the financially troubled NPR solvent. The fund-raising revenues will revert to the local stations.

The NPR effort features some inventive twists on the standard money-raising tactics of the noncommercial stations. KPLU in Tacoma, Wash., and KJZZ in Phoenix are competing to be the first to meet a $70,000 goal. In the interim, they're giving their listeners a running account of the race.

In Reno, Nev., Wednesday's local portion of NPR's "Morning Edition" program was broadcast from a hot-air balloon floating over the city. The listener support was scribed as "enthusiastic."

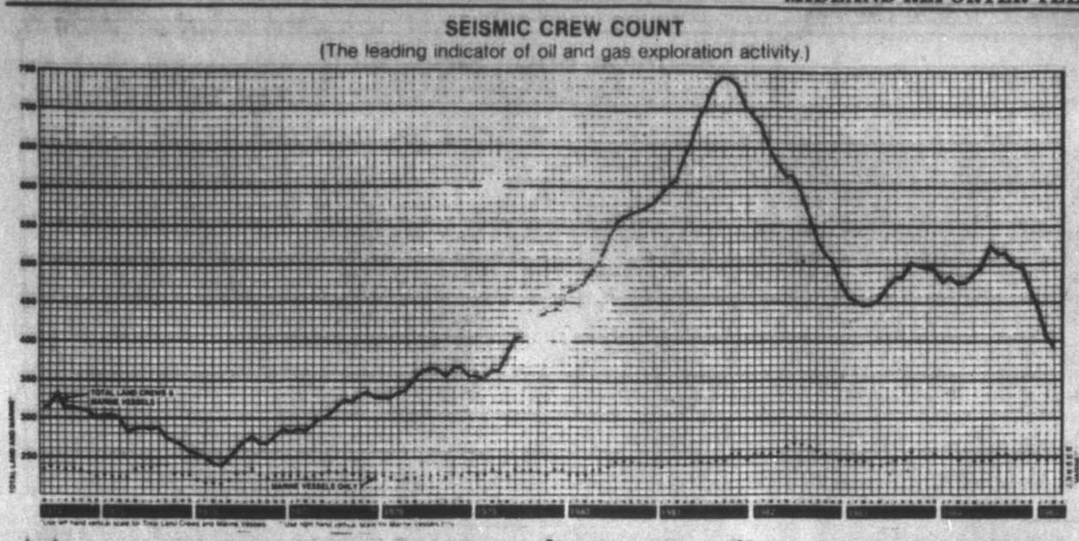

Before the effort is over, the likes of former President Gerald R. Ford and singer Pearl Bailey are expected to be among more than 100 personalities broadcasting pledge appeals.

The effort comes at a time when the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the conduit for federal funds to NPR, is considering a proposal to direct its funding to the local stations so they can decide what programming to buy.

Monsanto earnings plunge 50 percent in first quarter

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Monsanto Co., hurt by the strong dollar and a loss of business to foreign competitors, reported this week that earnings in the first quarter plunged 50.3 percent. Sales were off 6.4 percent.

Monsanto, which is based in St. Louis, said net income fell to $87 million, or $1.12 a share, from $175 million, or $2.13 a share, earned in the 1984 quarter. Sales declined to $1.62 billion, from $1.73 billion.

Richard J. Mahoney, president and chief executive of Monsanto said import competition increased dramatically.

"Direct competition in the U.S. from foreign chemical producers had a negative impact on profitability because selling prices in our major markets were increasingly dictated by the weaker currencies in Europe," Mahoney said. "In addition, demand in a variety of products remained slow in the first quarter as our customers continued to lose business to foreign competitors."

The SmithKline Beckman Corp., which makes, develops and sells health products, was hurt by the strength of the dollar. The company said first-quarter earnings slipped 1.5 percent.

Net income dipped to $131.8 million, or $1.66 a share, from $133.8 million, or $1.61 a share. There were 79.2 million shares outstanding in the latest quarter, down from 82.9 million in the 1984 period. Sales advanced 7.1 percent, to $770 million, from $718.8 million.

Results for the latest quarter included a gain of $3.3 million, or 4 cents a share, from the sale of SmithKline's industrial products group to the Emerson Electric Co..

"After several years of very rapid growth — 1978 to 1982 — SmithKline has reached a maturation period," said David Saks, pharmaceuticals analyst at Morgan, Olmstead, Kennedy & Gardner. "Tagamet, an ulcer drug, has shown no growth in 1984 and in early 1985 and Dyazide, a diuretic for high blood pressure, also is facing new stiff competition. The outlook for 1985 is for dull earnings."

Alcan Aluminium Ltd., the world's largest primary aluminum producer, said net income in the first quarter plunged 63.9 percent as revenues slipped 1.4 percent.

Alcan, which is based in Montreal, said that net income fell to $30 million, or 30 cents a share, from $83 million, or 85 cents a share, earned a year earlier. Revenues dipped to $1.41 billion, from $1.43 billion.

David Culver, president and chief executive said that earnings were hurt by "significantly lower sales realizations compared with the year-ago period, particularly on ingot." He said, however, that demand for aluminum products continued at good levels.

Culver said that the cost of a restructuring program to reduce overhead, including an early retirement incentive plan, will result in a charge against earnings in a later quarter.

Shipments of aluminum in all forms amounted to 545,200 metric tons in the latest quarter, up from 441,500 metric tons a year earlier.

Youths arrested in extortion case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two teenage computer hackers were arrested for investigation of threatening a record company executive and trying to extort $350 from him via his home computer, officers said Thursday.

The youths were arrested Wednesday for investigation of computer theft and extortion, and were released to their parents' custody, said Los Angeles police Lt. Fred Reno. He confirmed that they were teen-agers but refused to release the youths' names, ages or hometowns.

The alleged victim was John Sands, chief electronics engineer of Capitol Records, he said.

Three days in a row in March, Sands came home from work and discovered that 100 of his home computer files were lost, Reno said.

"On the fourth day, he came home and it (the computer) said in essence, 'If you want your files back and don't want any more destroyed, leave $350,'" Reno said, noting that the message was signed, "Modem Maniac."

Other messages left for Sand in the computer said, "I will destroy your family life and I will do things to you," and "Dear John, how did you like coming home and finding your files missing?," the lieutenant said.

"He was being extorted via his computer," he said.

The computer message instructed Sands to leave the money at a drop sight in San Jose. Los Angeles police officer prepared a phony drop but never carried it out because an investigation led them to the youths, Reno said.

The drink bar has been expanded to include tea and hot chocolate.

Officials open MacSteel Plant

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The president of a division of Quanex Corp. says the firm's new 300,000-square-foot MacSteel plant proves his company is fighting for survival in the world market.

"This company has a survivor philosophy," Bob Kelly Jr., president of Quanex Bar Group said at the plant's formal dedication Thursday. "We had the confidence to build a brand new greenfield mill because we knew the market was there for our high quality, specialty bars."

Unfinished Business

Many of the problems of the oilpatch can be blamed on politics. As long as tax credits are given to importers of foreign oil, or anyone proposes to eliminate the percentage depletion allowance, or decides to disallow intangible drilling costs—or hikes the drilling fees—there's a lot of unfinished business in the Permian Basin. Directly or indirectly, we all depend on the economic health of the oil industry.

And so we invite you to join the Permian Basin Petroleum Association to help wage the fight to clear up the conflicts and restore the oilpatch economy. Yes, you, too. Oil is everybody's business.

Coors announces sharp decline in net first quarter income

Net sales, barrel sales increase for same period

GOLDEN, Colo. (SWN) — Adolph Coors Co. has announced a sharp decline in net income for the fiscal first quarter of 1985, despite increases in net sales and barrel sales.

Net sales for the 12-week first quarter ended March 24 were a record $244,530,000, a 12.9 percent increase over net sales of $216,652,000, during the like quarter in 1984. Net income was $644,000, or 2 cents per share, in the first quarter compared to $7,258,000, or 21 cents per share, a year earlier.

"Net sales increased in the first quarter due primarily to the strength of beer shipments and higher non-beer business sales," said William K. Coors, chairman and chief executive officer. "However, net income was adversely affected by costs related to the company's aggressive marketing and expansion efforts, particularly advertising, and continued high start-up expenses at the Aluminum Recycling Center and grain processing facility."

Coors Porcelain Co., which experienced a record year in 1984, continued its s4rong performance in the first quarter of 1985. In addition, Coors noted, "Income from our beer business is expected to show significant improvement for the remainder of 1985 due to increased sales volume, higher selling prices and cost-cutting measures implemented this year."

Beer shipments for the first quarter increased 8.2 percent to 2,666,000 barrels compared to 2,465,000 barrels sold during the like quarter in 1984.

"Our barrels sales volume reflects the increased shipments of our products to the western United States, and the impact of sales in the 1984 and 1985 expansion areas," Coors explained.

A new advertising campaign for the Coors brand has drawn the largest consumer response of any company advertising in recent years, according to Brand Director Gary Naifeh. Featuring television star Mark Harmon, the ad series explains the unique attributes of Coors and carries the tag line "Coors is the One."

"We've received thousands of complimentary letters and phone calls from the public," said Naifeh. "Consumers appreciate the campaign's intelligent and thoughtful advertising which emphasizes our product's quality."

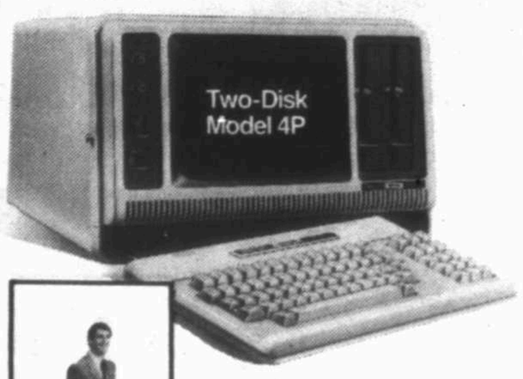

Coors Light continues to be one of the fastest-growing products in the industry and the tenth largest selling brand of beer nationally. In the low-calorie segment, Coors Light is the number two selling beer and is available in 44 states.

During the first quarter, initial shipments of Coors and Coors Light were made to Illinois and the six New England states of Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont. Consumer response has been excellent.

The premium beer is a full-bodied product that will give the company a new entry into this important segment. According to Coors the new beer has been researched more thoroughly than any other Coors product. Test marketing will be in selected California, Florida, Idaho and Texas markets, and will be supported by an aggressive advertising campaign.

Xerox sued for not hiring 'seriously' overweight woman

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Catherine McDermott is being a bit facetious when she calls herself "the Rosa Parks of fat people." But there is nothing frivolous about her lawsuit against the Xerox Corp., which declined to hire her 11 years ago because she was seriously overweight.

In 1974, Xerox approached Mrs. McDermott, then 56 years old, about a position as a systems analyst in its Rochester headquarters. The offer was contingent, however, upon passing a physical examination, and Mrs. McDermott had problems. She stood 5 feet 6 inches and weighed 249 pounds.

The company's chief of health services, pointing to what he said was the link between obesity and emotional disturbance and the danger it posed to Xerox's disability and life insurance programs, said she should not be hired unless she lost 90 pounds. This is something Mrs. McDermott, who says she has a thyroid condition, was never able to do.

Normally, she said in a recent interview, "fat people just walk away" from such experiences.

But like Rosa Parks, whose refusal to sit at the back of a Montgomery, Ala., bus in 1955 helped spark the civil-rights movement, Mrs. McDermott chafed at what she perceived to be unfair.

For the last 10 years, she has been fighting Xerox in court, contending that the company's action violated state antidiscrimination laws.

Up to now, the parties have fought to a standoff, with each winning three times before administrative agencies and in the lower courts. Twice, Mrs. McDermott, who is acting as her own attorney, has defeated Xerox's lawyers on their home turf, winning unanimous decisions from a state appellate court in Rochester.

The seventh and deciding confrontation is now before the New York court of appeals, the state's highest court. According to Mrs. McDermott, the case reached the high court only after she turned down a series of escalating settlement offers — starting with $1,000 and reaching $100,000 last month, two days before her case was argued. The company would not comment on the case.

When the court of appeals issues its ruling shortly, it must decide whether to add obesity to the list of disabilities, ranging from paraplegia to poor eyesight, for which employers cannot discriminate unless they can be shown to impair a person's job performance.

Or the court could agree with Xerox that obesity is merely a deviation from the norm that employers are free to consider in making hiring decisions.

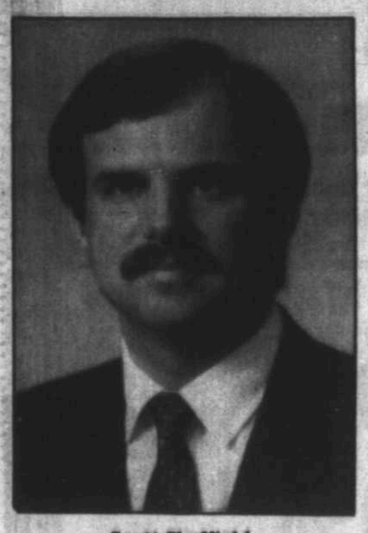

"If they were available, would Golda Meir, Margaret Mead, Orson Welles and Queen Juliana be turned from Xerox's door?" Mrs. McDermott, who is now 67 and lives on Staten Island, asked in her court papers. "I think the same way as Itzhak Perlman, the handicapped violinist, who says, 'All I want is to do what I do well.' "

Along the way Mrs. McDermott has enlisted the support of the New York State Division of Human Rights. "Obese people should have the same chance as anyone else with a disability to get a job or to work in an atmosphere free from discrimination," said Rosamond Prosterman, the staff attorney with the division who argued the case in Albany.

Mrs. McDermott, who says her grandfather was an engineer in the construction of the Statue of Liberty, is devoting the kind of energy to the case that she had to marshall 35 years ago, when she was the newly widowed mother of five young children. She has written and typed her own court briefs and borne all of her expenses, which have consisted, for the most part, she said, of "Xeroxing costs."

"They can throw any amount of money at me they want, and it wouldn't have been the right amount," she said recently from her daughter's home in West Springfield, Va., where she is recuperating from shoulder surgery. "The whole thing was so unconscionable."

Lawyers for Xerox are arguing, in essence, that though Mrs. McDermott was unacceptable to them, there was really nothing wrong with her, at least at the time they rejected her.

Kim Novak...

...happy, healthy, in love

Kim Novak, who now makes films only occasionally, is happily married and has finally "come out of my shell."

By JANE ARDMORE
King Features Syndicate

The life she leads is far more fantasy than any of the roles she played as reigning queen at Columbia Studios. Kim Novak was exquisite then — silvery hair touched with lavender, alluring classic face, tense moods that often hid an invisible shell.

Today Kim Novak is beautiful, healthy and happy, something she never was when she was the No. 1 box-office star in the country. She's lost her shell. Today Ms. Novak is outgoing, vital, enthusiastic. When in Hollywood to film, she comes for the fun of it, a change of pace from the fulsome lifestyle of her ranch near Carmel where she lives with her husband, veterinarian Dr. Robert Malloy, a handsome, witty, red-headed Irishman. Both love animals.

They live in a rustic home Ms. Novak built from scratch on 20 acres of forest that has a view of the sea — and six horses, 20 llamas, two goats, three dogs, 13 chickens and a donkey names Marry True (her last anniversary present).

The llamas they breed and raise are well-trained pets; one of them, Uno, is free to come into the house. When they celebrated their anniversary in March, they traveled into the hills on horseback to the spot where they spent their honeymoon, with a llama and a donkey carrying their camping equipment.

Malloy is a true outdoorsman, and with him Ms. Novak has found the very special life of which she once dreamed. They cook over open fires, revel in fresh air and sleep under the stars.

As a little girl, Ms. Novak's first goal was to be a vet. "My sister, Arlene, and I both adored animals," she says. "That was my father's influence. He taught us to be familiar with earthworms and moths, to love nature. In our backyard in Chicago, we had a dog, chickens, rabbits, birds and in our window, a little sign that said: Leave Pets Here. Neighbors brought stray animals to us, and if they were hurt, we'd try to mend them."

Later, in high school, when her grandmother implored her to be confirmed, Ms. Novak, who had made her communion, found herself attending classes, dreaming of being a nun, "to achieve peace and to help others achieve it." That need for giving and having peace never left her. In Hollywood, though, that was hard to find.

She had never dreamed of acting. It happened quite by accident, when, after her freshman year at Wright Junior College, Ms. Novak traveled across country modeling for Thor refrigerators, and, with her girlfriend, decided to spend a couple of weeks enjoying California sun.

She was spotted by a talent scout and put under contract. Without dramatic training or acting experience, Ms. Novak didn't know what was expected of her. In the first four years, she didn't have a day off, and during the making of "Picnic," "The Eddie Duchin Story" and "The Man with the Golden Arm," found herself rehearsing one picture at night and shooting another picture all day.

"That was pressure," she said, "especially for a girl who was new, not only to this business but to any business. Nineteen years old. And I'm an extremist in my feelings. I'm either way high up or low down. Do you know why? I'm not basically an actress. I'm interested in seeing life, everything that's going on. I want to participate in everything; I don't want to detach myself, stand off and watch myself as an actress should.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. What nationality is Derek Jacobi? That is an unusual name for an Englishman.

Eileen Pantrozi
Hoboken, N.J.

A. He's 46, the only child of a department-store manager who left his native Germany and settled in London's Cockney East End. At 6, Jacobi saw a pantomime of "Cinderella" and decided then and there to become an actor. Encouraged by his teachers to pursue it, he acted in school productions.

At 17, he performed "Hamlet" so successfully at the Edinburgh Festival that he received offers from professional companies, but he decided instead to go to Cambridge, where he studied history.

After graduation, however, he joined the Birmingham Repertory Company. In 1963, when Laurence Olivier was casting about for the original members of the National Theater, Jacobi at 24, the youngest and least known, was chosen.

Derek Jacobi

He made his movie debut in 1966 in the film of "Othello." Other roles followed in the films "The Day of the Jackal" and "The Odessa File."

He is probably best known for his role in the British series "I, Claudius" and "Richard II." Also on TV: roles in "The Pallisers," "Philby, Burgess, and MacLean" and somewhat more dubiously, a portrayal of Hitler in the TV movie "Inside the Third Reich."

Not long ago he was on Broadway with the Royal Shakespeare Company in "Much Ado About Nothing" and "Cyrano." During that appearance, he was visited by the "Jacobi Cadets," a troupe of devoted fans who follow him around the world. They, and he, are now back in England.

Q. Please tell me what's new with Neil Diamond — films, tours?

Barbara Reiland
Davenport, Iowa
Linda Aden
Cucamonga, Calif.
H. Evans
Pensacola, Fla.

A. Various films have been in development for a while — one for CBS based on his "Brother Love Traveling Salvation Show" has just been shelved, though; another, based on his album "Beautiful Noise," is still in the script revision process.

Regarding tours: "Neil tours all the time; he goes on the road for four to six weeks and then lays over for five to six months," explains an associate. He has just returned from a swing through the West and Canada. He'll probably go out to another part of the country later this year but hasn't decided where yet.

Neil Diamond

Q. Could you give me some information on Sheila E.? I think she's cute.

Gilbert Lopez
Fresno, Calif.

A. She's 26, from Oakland, Calif., and can be said to have followed her father into his business — her father is Pete Escovedo, a percussionist once associated with the group Santana.

She started experimenting on drums at the age of 5 and by 15 was drumming with local Latin bands. One night a member of her father's band was too sick to perform, so she went on in his place — and decided to make music her career.

She dropped out of high school after her sophomore year, recorded two albums with her father and toured with Herbie Hancock and Diana Ross, among others. Her old friend and mentor Prince, however, convinced her that it was time to go out on her own last year — which she did with the very successful album "The Glamorous Life." She's now on his tour, as the opening act.

Q. Could you please tell me something about actress Season Hubley? What are her previous TV and movie credits? Does she have anything in the works?

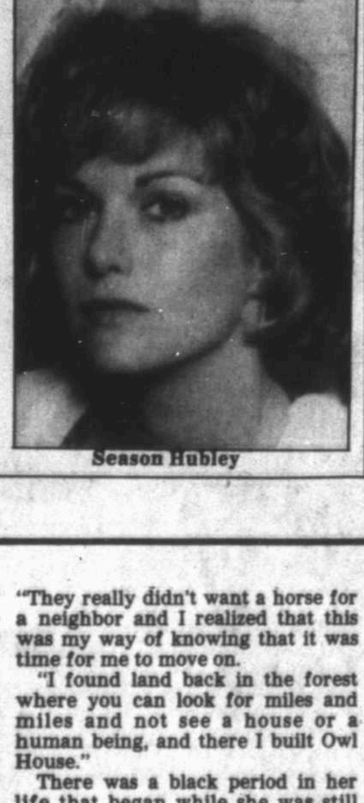

S. Fletcher
Chattanooga, Tenn.

A. During a recent chat from her California farm, she explained that she was just back from Cairo, Tunisia and London, where she shot an Operation Prime Time miniseries, "The Key to Rebecca," based on Ken Follett's novel. It's set in 1942, she plays "a woman of mystery who helps to entrap a German spy" and it's tentatively set to air on independent stations in late May.

Her film and TV credits include the films "Hardcore," "Escape From New York" and "Elvis," the TV movie of a few seasons ago. In "Elvis" she played Priscilla Presley to Kurt Russell's Elvis. They were later married, have a son, Boston, now 5, and were divorced in 1983.

She hasn't been too visible the last couple of years because she decided to spend time raising her son instead of acting. It has been reported that the boy was born with multiple birth defects; but she insists that isn't true. "He's a fabulous, completely normal little boy," and he travels with her on location.

"I was offered many camels for him in Egypt," she explains. Now that he's old enough to go with her, she's intent on working more often and has begun, as they say, reading scripts.

Season Hubley

Q. I recently saw the TV movie "Surviving" and I thought that Molly Ringwald was great. Where is she from, how did she get started in the business, how old is she and what will she be doing after "The Breakfast Club."?

Cyndi Cassidy
Saint John, N.B., Canada

A. She's 17, grew up in Sacramento, Calif., and got started in show business as a singer — at 4, remarkably, singing with her father Bob Ringwald's band, the Fulton Street Jazz Band. At 5, she was onstage in Truman Capote's play "The Glass Harp," and by 10, she was in the West Coast production of "Annie."

Then, briefly, she was in the cast of the series "The Facts of Life." Her first major role was in Paul Mazursky's film "Tempest"; her second was the lead in "Sixteen Candles."

"She's not sure what she's doing next," according to an associate. One project that has been under discussion for a while is "Edie," a film based on the life of '60s socialite and Warhol superstar Edie Sedgwick. Warren Beatty wants to produce it; she would like to star.

KIM

"That makes me self-conscious and inhibited. I don't like being on display. I don't like fame. My difficulty has always been in sharing myself. It's kind of like being a public park when you want to be a private person."

Looking back now, she says, "In the early part of my career I had some wonderful roles, but I wish I had been more prepared. I had these great opportunities but I felt at a standstill. I could see no means of growth or progression. When you start at the top, where are you going? It all had happened so fast I didn't have a chance to say, 'I want this in my life or I want that.'

"I needed to find my own lifestyle, something that was right for me, the simplicity, the love I have now. I never did have a meaningful relationship. I don't think I would ever have found the man I was looking for in Hollywood."

Her rumored romances were legion, but had no substance, and Ms. Novak was sensitive and bright enough to know that. She kept on making pictures which were top box office, but was longing to breathe.

Ms. Novak kept a little hideaway at Malibu. She began discovering northern California when she made "Vertigo" in 1958. The actress loved the smell of the sea and the feeling of freedom. In 1962 while filming "The Notorious Landlady," Ms. Novak found Gull House.

"My mother and sister were with me at this time. One day, my sister came running in, breathless. She had found a house she wanted me to see. I couldn't imagine what she was so excited about. She led me down this path toward the sea. Heavy fog was flowing over everything; the surf was pounding, but you couldn't see it.

"And then suddenly the clouds cleared and there stood this house standing on the sea's edge, and as I watched, a seagull which had been perched on the turret flew off into the sky. I didn't even see the inside of the house, but it was just magically me. It was empty, we found. A year before, a tidal wave had washed through it and washed away one turret, washed away all the furniture, and everyone was afraid to live there.

"I found out the date of the tidal wave. It was on my birthday, February 13. It was just meant to be. I bought the house and it became my sanctuary, my little castle, to which I fled between films.

She said she decided to move when a mud slide hit her house in Bel Air. "First we had the Bel Air fire, then the mudslide, and my house slid down the cliffs. I had wanted to move before, but (I dreaded) the thought of moving all those belongings and possessions. Now most of them were in the mud and I realized how unimportant material things are.

"It was the perfect time. I had saved the few things that mattered most — my paintings, some sculptures, my poetry, my Great Dane and my cat. These I loaded in my van and took off for Carmel. I was no longer under contract. I'd done 'Moll Flanders' in England and 'Of Human Bondage.' I was ready for change.

"Living at Gull House was like being reborn. There on the edge of the sea was where I learned my lessons. I had a terrific relationship with the sea, it was so beautiful; but the time came to move on (again.)

"I had the goat and the llama — and I must tell you how I found the llama. First, I'd fallen in love with a camel I met in Carmel one day. It was being used for a commercial. The camel was spitting and wouldn't do anything because they were laughing at it and hitting it with sticks, when what it wanted was respect. I asked them to let me help and that camel responded beautifully.

"I would go there at night and get on its back. I went to the owner of the camel and asked to buy him, but that was not possible. So the man said, 'If you like camels, the llama is also a cameloid and has the same disposition. It just doesn't have the hump.' That's how I got my first llama, Uno."

She said she wanted a horse too, but the neighbors complained. "They really didn't want a horse for a neighbor and I realized that this was my way of knowing that it was time for me to move on.

"I found land back in the forest where you can look for miles and miles and not see a house or a human being, and there I built Owl House."

There was a black period in her life that began while she was still living in Bel Air. It had started with a film, "Thirteen." A horse had fallen on Ms. Novak and had broken her back and she was hospitalized for several months.

Then, three years to the day after that accident, she had just completed filming "The Legend of Lylah Clare" and one of the stuntmen asked her to come out and see his horse. The horse bolted from the barn while she was there and Ms. Novak went chasing it in her car. It went on the freeway; so did she. Finally, she cornered it in a park and the horse jumped toward the car and came through the sunroof. It died right in her arms.

That ended the black period, but there had been other things in between. A 15-month marriage to actor Richard Johnson, which was tragic for a woman who had longed to find love and a long-term relationship.

"The tragic things were all means of growth, tests of one's strength," she says, her face bright with life. "I'm stronger for the survival; I have greater appreciation for living. Bob, my husband, has taught me so much about how to share that feeling of love. I had never really shared love before and it means everything to me."

Their meeting was a wonder. She called him when one of her fillies got sick. Malloy came out around midnight and afterwards they went to the house and had a cup of coffee. They talked. He is a warm, caring, jovial man. "I'll see you in the spring," she said, "when it's time for shots."

So springtime came and the doctor arrived to give the animals their shots. Ms. Novak had a big pot of chili on the stove. She explains, "It's one of the only things I know how to make. I invited him in and he loved my chili. We got to know each other a little better."

He lives in a different world. And he didn't invite her out to dinner or any of the usual things. He asked her if she'd like to join him on a couple of calls.

She explains, "I felt a tremendous kinship. Suddenly, we had a rapport, the same feelings about life and animals. He had a ranch and a hospital...he covers the area from San Francisco to Big Sur. I went with him on calls and we got along so well. It just grew.

"The one animal he didn't really dig was the llama. Now (he's grown to love) them."

Ms. Novak's day starts with feeding the animals. Then, at 9 a.m. she's in Carmel, teaching her aerobic dancing class at Kim's Gym — every weekday, an hour and a half of really strenuous exercise.

She says, "It's beautiful. We sing and dance and jump up and down to music by Mitch Miller. I told you that my husband had taught me to share love. Here is the proof of it. You should see the class. I have come completely out of any shell that is left. There's something about sharing, in this case with a group of women all sweating together to music. No secrets. Pure enjoyment. I sing along with the music..."

She still goes along with Malloy to deliver "cows and things." "It's wonderful to feel you're needed. And he's on call all through the night. It's wonderful to go out like that together and watch birth."

Every now and then, a picture of hers shows up on television, but her husband doesn't watch. "It's difficult for him to think that's the same person. It's not me to him."

The first film she made after their marriage was "The Mirror Cracked." "This beautiful man was feeling very insecure about that. It was the first break in our routine, but I was only away two weeks and when I decided to do a TV film, 'Malibu,' he wasn't insecure at all. Every year he is more and more sure, seeing how solid we are, how important our life together is."

She continues, "He has it all in perspective now that he knows I have. And I'd never do a part that would embarrass him in any way. I'm now able to film and not feel any of the pain I felt earlier in my career."

Painting acquired

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Kimbell Art Museum has acquired a painting by the influential 17th-century French artist Nicolas Poussin.

Museum officials paid about $1 million for "Venus and Adonis," a major composition executed early in the Baroque painter's career, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram quoted sources as saying.

The canvas, which measures 39 by 53 inches, depicts a rare mythological scene of Venus and her young lover, the huntsman Adonis, reclining beneath a tree during an interlude from the hunt.

Kimbell officials bought "Venus and Adonis" privately in New York from dealers who had acquired it at auction in London.

The museum was able "to take advantage of a situation where a painting was sold at auction for way below its marked value," said museum Director Edumnd P. Pillsbury.

'Wolves' heavy on atmosphere, light on plot

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

"The Company of Wolves" is a puzzling, weirdly disconcerting film.

The movie — which is very heavy on visual atmosphere but dizzingly light in plot — is such a convulted series of dream sequences and stories-within-stories that it is virtually impossible to describe.

"Wolves" starts off with scenes of a young girl, played by Sarah Patterson, sleeping fitfully.

Apparently, the rest of the film, set in some surreal medieval village, is a dream she is having. This rather lengthy, disjointed dream is a macabre melange of half-remembered folktales about werewolves.

There is even a scene in which Ms. Patterson, wearing a red hood, meets a werewolf while carrying a basket of goodies to her grandmother's house in the woods. She, of course, ends up reciting that famous line, "What big teeth you have."

This is most definitely not a children's film, however. The type of gross-out werewolf transformation scenes pioneered in 1981's "An American Werewolf in London" and "The Howling" figure prominently in this film. These scenes are probably intended to hold the attention of gore groupies. There's very little else in the meandering, gauzy "Wolves" to satisfy horror movie fans.

The film has no traditional villains, heroes or other horror movie trappings, except for considerable violence, swirling supernaturalism and an undercurrent of sexuality.

Director Neil Jordan doesn't make the film any easier to take when he throws in some heavy-handed bits of symbolism. In one outrageous scene, for example, he has Satan come tooling through the medieval forest in a huge, white Rolls-Royce.

On the other hand, Jordan does an admirable job in giving his film a dream-like appearance. His settings somehow manage to look both completely unreal and very familiar at the same time.

While the extremely dense visual atmosphere does make "The Company of Wolves" fascinating to look at, it's so frustratingly aimless that one wants to come up for air long before the film ends.

"The Company of Wolves," rated R for considerable violence, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

'Violations' has slow-moving plot, flat humor

Most people who have had to spend several hours in a defensive driving course probably have found the class educational, but very few — if any — considered it zany, madcap fun.

Despite the fact that defensive driving school is a stolidly unfunny topic, the two men responsible for "Bachelor Party" and "Police Academy" decided, for some obscure reason, to make a comedy about it.

This alleged comedy, "Moving Violations," focuses on a band of misfits and utterly incompetent motorists whose licenses have been revoked and cars impounded to keep them off the streets. To win their right to drive back, they all have to pass a tough defensive driving class taught by two sadistic cops.

This isn't really much of a premise for a film, so director-writer Neal Israel and co-writer Pat Proft try to stretch it as far as they can.

The result has all the tastelessness of Israel's and Proft's "Bachelor Party" and "Police Academy" but completely lacks those earlier films' nimbleness. The two earlier comedies threw such a wealth of jokes at the audience so fast that it didn't matter too much if as many as half the gags weren't really funny.

In contrast, "Moving Violations" plods along so montonously there should be a slow-moving vehicle sign slapped on it.

The majority of the verbal humor is as flat as a punctured tubeless tire. The film does show some nice flashes of visual humor. For example, there is an absolutely hilarious and all-too-short satire on driver safety scare films (the parody in the movie is called "Blood Flows Red").

Unfortunately, there simply aren't enough sight gags to keep the movie rolling along. It's obvious that Israel and Proft just didn't have enough ideas to fuel the film.

The star of "Moving Violations" is John Murray, brother of well-known performer Bill Murray. He bears an eerie resemblence to Bill but is not nearly as talented.

John mugs unmercifully and his entire performance seems like a very poor imitation of his brother's casual style. In his defense, however, it must be noted that the script gives him very little to work with. He is also one of the few performers in the movie who looks like he's at least trying to have fun.

Actually, taking a defensive driving class would be almost as much fun as having to watch "Moving Violations" again.

"Moving Violations," rated PG-13 for strong language and sexual innuendo, is now showing at North Park Cinema.

Bass-baritone Matthews featured in 'Carmina'

Matthews

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale closes its 1984-85 Subscription Season in grand style with Carl Orff's joyous masterpiece, "Carmina Burana." Performances are at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Midland's Lee High School and 8 p.m. Thursday at Odessa's Bonham Jr. High School Auditorium.

Featured bass-baritone, John Matthews is one of the West Coast's most talented young singers.

Raised in Southern California, he began his professional career performing more than thirty major operatic roles in productions of the Hollywood Opera Theater, the Lyric Opera of Orange County, the Riverside Opera Company and the Los Angeles Opera Ensemble. While on tour of duty with the United States Air Force in the Republic of China, he received its Classical Vocalist of the Year Award.

In 1980, he participated in the Taipei International Music and Dance Festival singing Germont in Verdi's "La Traviata" as well as appearing in recitals and giving master classes at the Soochow University. He was a finalist in the Metropolitan Opera Auditions and in 1982 began a lasting affiliation with the San Francisco Opera.

In the fall of 1983, Matthews was brought into the international season of the San Francisco Opera in four roles including Baron Puck in "La Grand Duchesse de Geroistein." He has appeared frequently with symphony orchestras in the West and comes to Midland-Odessa from a string of operatic performances: Marcello in "La Boheme" with the Seattle Opera and his first appearance with Anchorage Civic Opera in "La Cenerentola."

Matthews has been re-engaged for the next two seasons with the Seattle Opera where he will appear in upcoming productions of "Manon," "Lucia di Lammermoor" and "Othello."

Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana" has been firmly established as part of the symphonic/choral standard repertory.

It's beautiful and melodic lines and immense range of humor has endeared it to millions. Calling for an 80-member orchestra, a large chorus and children's choir, "Carmina" presents itself with an overpowering force.

The children's choir for the Midland performance will be the Fannin Elementary Choir prepared by Mrs. Walter Osadchuk. The Odessa performance will include the Milam Magnet School Choir prepared by Julie Osborn.

Also on the program will be Beethoven's Symphony No. 8 and Kabalevsky's "Colas Breugnon Overture."

Tickets are available at Texas Commerce Bank in Midland and Odessa. For more information, call the Symphony offices at 563-5269.

Mathers still Beaver, he's proud of it

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — Jerry Mathers is still the Beaver, and proud of it. The star of the updated "Leave It to Beaver," now seen on the Disney Channel, says he'll never tire of the role.

"The Beaver is an everyman type of person and he constantly changes. He was one facet as a child; now I've moved on to another facet." Mathers says that his role is now similar to the late Hugh Beaumont's role — that of Beaver's father.

The '80s have made a lot of changes in the show from its beginnings in 1957. The Beaver is now divorced and has brought his two sons back to live in the old Cleaver household with the widowed June Cleaver, now the perfect grandmother.

Says Mathers: "We wanted to give something to all those kids out there with only one parent, something they can relate to — show them there are people in those situations who are making it."

Two-parent families aren't neglected. The ever-perfect Wally lives with his own family in the house next door.

When the original series folded in 1963, Mathers was glad.

"I was just entering high school and I got to do something I'd always wanted to do — play team sports." He stayed away from acting, got a B.A. in philosophy and worked at jobs in banking and real estate after he graduated.

"I liked acting. It was fun and there was never any pressure on me as a child to work. My father was a principal and went on to be superintendant of schools, so I was never the breadwinner for the family. But there were other things I wanted to do."

He went back into show business in 1979, appearing in a play with Tony Dow, the Beaver's older brother, Wally. Other acting roles followed, but the fans never forgot the Beaver.

"I always enjoyed being recognized as the Beaver," Mathers says. "He was like every kid, and I can walk into almost any city in the United States and find out the best places to go and what to see because people know me. I make a lot of friends that way."

He took the role of the grown-up Beaver because "I'm not the kind of person who can sit around the house and veg out. People wanted to see the Beaver again, and it was crazy to fight it. I like doing other roles, but I feel there's a real need for this type of television at this time. We need good quality family entertainment shows with no violence."

Mathers always was very close with the cast and crew of the original show and kept in contact with them over the years.

"They were like a surrogate family, closer than classmates, but they never replaced my own family."

Today, Mathers is married and has three children of his own, whom he says probably will never go into show business.

"It's taken the glamour out of it when they see me getting up at 5 a.m. and coming home exhausted at 10 at night."

Spending time with his family is important to Mathers.

Theatre Institute to offer classes in Albuquerque

SANTA FE, N.M. — The British American Theatre Institute announces its fourth summer of theater training classes.

The Institute is currently accepting applications for the upcoming series of courses which will be taught by members of the Albion Theatre Company of London together with actors from other English theatre companies.

The classes will be held in Albuquerque at the University of New Mexico in June, and in Santa Fe at the Greer Garson Theatre Center at the College of Santa Fe in July. In addition to their teaching roles, all of these actor/instructors will be performing in the Institute's summer theatre program of Gardner McKay's "Sea Marks," Dylan Thomas's "Under Milk Wood," and Anthony Naylor's "Taylor's Tickler."

At the University of New Mexico from June 10 to July 5 students of acting, directing, playwrighting and stage management will concentrate on the development and performance of a new play, "The Albuquerque Kid," commissioned by the Institute, as part of the University's "Summerfest '85."

The instructors will be Anthony Naylor and Andrew Killian. Naylor, formerly with the Royal Shakespeare Company, is the author of "The Albuquerque Kid" and "Taylor's Tickler," and will direct "Under Milk Wood."

Killian, formerly stage controller with the English National Opera and the National Theatre, is the Institute's production manager and instructor in stage management and theatre history. Students may receive three credits from the University for each course taken.

There will also be a special workshop for teachers, called "Drama For Teachers," at the University of New Mexico from June 17 to June 28. This course, for which students may receive 3 UNM credits, aims to give a grounding and backup in the many ways that drama in general, and British drama in particular, can be used effectively in the classroom.

While this class will specially benefit teachers of drama and English, any classroom teacher will benefit from this creative experience. This course will be taught by Roger Fox and Patricia Doyle.

Fox, writing a dramatic adaptation of "Under Milk Wood" for the Institute, was formerly with BBC-TV and the Redgrave Theatre. Ms. Doyle, formerly with the National Theatre and the Geva Theatre, Rochester, NY, will also perform "Sea Marks" and "Under Milk Wood" with Fox.

The Institute's fourth annual summer theatre training conservatory, for which students may receive 9 college credits, will take place at the College of Santa Fe from July 8 to August 9. Students will receive a sense of discipline, a breadth of training, and a range of technique to augment their American theatre studies.

The courses include acting for the stage and camera, leading roles in the British repertoire, Shakespeare, stage management, modern British playwrights, and others. Supplementary classes include stage combat, scene analysis, theatre history, movement, and voice studies.

Also teaching and performing in "Under Milk Wood" are Melanie Hill of the Redgrave Theatre, Richard Derrington of the Old Vic Company, and Richard Borthwick of BBC-TV. Altogether, students will spend more than 120 hours in class studying, rehearsing, demonstrating techniques and performing.

There will also be a special workshop for grade school and high school students from June 24 to June 29 in Albuquerque, and from July 1 to July 6 in Santa Fe.

For further information on the British American Theatre Institute's upcoming educational programs and related performances, please contact: Cary Renfro, Education Director, The British American Theatre Institute, 80 East San Francisco St., Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501, or call 1-505-983-6713.

Musical 'Sesame Street Live' closes at Chap Center

"Lonesome day, why did I run away, stop and say to the first friend I meet, can you tell me, how to get, how to get to (sigh) home, home, home. I want to go home."

Such is the mournful message of Big Bird, a Muppet misplaced, in "Missing Bird Mystery," Sesame Street Live's stage spectacular, closing today at Chaparral Center.

Throughout the 90 minute musical, Bert, Ernie, Prairie Dawn and the rest of the yellow canary's cohorts set out in search of their feathered friend.

Inspector Fortescu Farguar and rascally P.T. Barnswallow, two Muppets created especially for Sesame Street Live by Jim Henson, head up the hunt.

Written by Jon Stone, director and creative consultant for the Emmy award-winning "Sesame Street" television series, Sesame Street Live is presented by VEE Corporation in cooperation with Children's Television Workshop.

Original director and choreographer is Anita Mann, who has been choreographer for the TV series, "Solid Gold," for the past two years. Performance Director Shelby La Branche is choreographer of "Missing Bird Mystery's" current version.

"Missing Bird Mystery" is produced by Bob Shipstad, who for 14 years, produced Shipstads & Johnson Ice Follies.

Original arrangements of such Sesame Street standards as "Sunny Day," "C is for Cookie," "Doin' the Pigeon," " I Just Adore Four" and "What's the Name of that Song" were supplied by composer-arranger Paul Walberg, whose credits include similar work for Disneyland and Ice Follies. Walberg also wrote special music for the production.

Showcasing the talents of the 19 young actors, actresses and dancers who make up the company are stage settings by Jim Waters, Minneapolis, Minn., art director for the show.

Tickets for the Midland/Odessa engagement are available at the Chaparral Center.

Songwriting contest slated

NASHVILLE — The Music City Song Festival, the world's largest international songwriting contest, announces the kickoff of its sixth annual competition.

The 1985 Music City Song Festival will award over $28,000 in cash and prizes.

Moreover, the MCSF gives each and every entrant the opportunity to be heard by the music industry professionals who judge the competition.

"Through the MCSF, entrants get their material in doors that would normally be closed to an unknown or unestablished singer or songwriter, and this exposure can and does lead to our entrants establishing or furthering their music careers," said Roy Sinkovich, festival director.

For example, in the judging process of the 1984 MCSF, a song caught the attention of a Nashville producer who was looking for material for Melissa Prewitt of Dave Rowland and Sugar. Not only did the song win first place in the Pop/Top 40 category of the Amateur Song division, but Prewitt plans to record the song for her debut solo album.

Dave and Sugar's number four hit, "Fool By Your Side," was recorded after winning second place in a previous MCSF.

A new feature of the Music City Song Festival this year is its free, informative newspaper, which is being distributed to over one million readers. The premiere edition of this tabloid-size publication contains articles written by professionls from all areas of the music industry, informative reports on various music organizations, the complete 1984 MCSF Winners List and entry information for the 1985 MCSF.

The Music City Song Festival competition have five divisions: Amateur Song, Professional Song, Vocal Performance, Lyric and Lyric Poem. With the exception of Lyric Poem, these divisions are further broken down into Rock/RB, Gospel, Pop/Top 40, Country and MOR/Easy Listening categories.

Stephen King 'cute spookery' gives stylish fun

By DAVID ELLIOT
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Hollywood studios must pay maids to go through Stephen King's waste cans. They save every scrap, for future disposal on screens.

King's trade is cute spookery — the Gothic giggle. At times there's enough invention in his plots that talented film directors give it their best, and we get some stylish fun: "Carrie," "Christine," "The Dead Zone" and much of "The Shining." On the other hand, there was "Cujo," "Firestarter," "Children of the Corn" and the lampoonish "Creepshow" — pulpy movies that soil the mulch of King's reputation as the patented provider of macabre comedy.

"Cat's Eye" falls in the middle. It's handsomely shot, with pretty good effects and workmanlike acting. Yet there's no zest or daring to gild King's adolescent artistry. (His talent is made for this Era of the Eternal Teen.) King's three "original" stories are as weakly imagined as the linking device, a gray tabby cat who witnesses the various human follies that in each case appeal to a toying spirit of sadism.

In the first story, James Woods plays a man who wants to stop smoking, goes to a clinic and sees the frantic cat tortured in an electrified room by the devilish director (Alan King, whose tan looks baked in hell). He's told that the same will happen to his wife if he takes another puff. Sure enough, after he's gone through the tortures of denial, he succumbs once and the wife (Mary D'Arcy) cutely hops and screams in the hot box while King snickers — we can almost hear Stephen King joining in.

In the second yarn, Robert Hays is blackmailed into a crazy wager by a gambling gangster (Kenneth McMillan) in Atlantic City. He has to crawl around a high-rise penthouse on a ledge, battered by winds, sprayed by water and pecked by a fiendish pigeon. Inevitably, as the tabby looks on, he gets to enact an ugly revenge. In one of the expensively authentic effects, we follow McMillan as he falls, howling, from the ledge — he goes splat near the tabby.

The topping trifle is set in a Steven Spielberg town and has a "Gremlins" mini-monster designed by Carlo Rambaldi. Drew Barrymore takes the kitty into her home, and though the mother (Candy Clark) tries to get rid of it, the feline returns to save darling Drew from the gremlin (who wears jester's bells and snarls in a cute way). This episode is close enough to childhood nightmares that squeamish children probably shouldn't watch it.

Should anyone? There's an amazingly solid audience for King's stuff, and probably his fans are no more indulgent than those who camped through Vincent Price's Poe spoofs in the '60s. His tales have more verve, and bring out more craft skills in the tellers, than wretched slasher jobs like "Friday the 13th."

But they're creakingly mechanical, and the blend of sadism and mushy sentiment — the last is personified by Drew Barrymore, for whom King was "inspired" to write this job — has very little to do with real creativity. (Creativity in this film, which Lewis Teague directed by-the-numbers, consists of cheeky references to previous King films and to his current bestselling book, "Pet Sematary.")

King is an assembly line, and I dutifully gird my critical loins. The "Cat's Eye" press kit avows future films will be made of "The Stand," "Pet Sematary," "The Talisman" and "The Dark Tower." The last is a "limited edition work", but I'm sure the movie won't be.

Baby Lit gives babies head start on reading

By DIANE MASON
King Features Syndicate

The stock scenario of the proud new father standing in the doorway of the hospital room with an armful of gifts for his newborn son or daughter hasn't changed that much over the years. Except that today, instead of a baseball bat and mitt or a Madame Alexander doll, he is more likely to be holding a stack of books.

We know that babies start to learn from the instant they are born, and today's new parents aren't wasting one precious moment.

If there is one thing that characterizes contemporary parents, it is the desire to have the best baby possible. The 1960s baby boomers, now educated and often affluent members of the Establishment, believe that preparation for reading begins at birth, not only by singing and talking to the child, as has long been the view held by experts, but by introducing books as well.

In response to this swelling market, publishers have jumped on the bandwagon, creating books for the tiniest readers-to-be.

It's called Baby Lit, and while publishers and booksellers might be reaping monetary rewards, the real winners are the babies, who are getting a delicious taste of the printed word and a head start on what it is hoped will be a lifetime friendship with books.

Baby Lit can be described as the first books category, titles for children from birth to preschool age. They are small, with simple, colorful drawings and little or no text. They are practically indestructible, designed to be held, tugged at, chewed and even bathed.

THE NAMES publishers initially used to dub certain series have now become generic, so we have "tubbies," "pudgies," "chunkies," "huskies" and "squishies." Baby Lit books are, for the most part, priced in the $3 range. And most of them are delightful.

"In the past two years we have seen a tremendous increase in these books," says Elizabeth Haslam, owner of Haslam's Bookstore in St. Petersburg, Fla., which carries a large selection of baby's first books. "Now parents have books they can read to the child and ones they can hand to the child." This, in Ms. Haslam's view, will make the child's experience with reading that much richer and exciting.

Librarians also report an avid interest in books for babies, in part because many parents simply can't afford to buy all the books they might want for their child. Also, the durability of the popular board books makes them perfectly suited to withstand the wear and tear of library lending.

New parents of a decade ago remember the all-time classics such as Dorothy Kunhardt's "Pat the Bunny" and the lovingly illustrated books by Gyo Fujikawa ("Babies"). Those are still around, popular as ever, the predecessors of the new Baby Lit, which captivates via the same simple appealing themes and sturdy formats.

Cloth and vinyl books are also still available but rather uninspiring alongside the other choices lining the shelves. While it's convenient to be able to toss cloth books into the washer or scrub the cereal off the vinyl ones, they are limp and "more like rags than real books," say both parents and retailers.

One answer to the waterproof book is the tubby, which consists of three or four puffy plastic pages stuffed with some kind of fiberfill, for the baby who likes to read in the bath.

Tubbies can develop little holes and become moldy inside, but still, many of the stories and illustrations are well-done and engaging.

THE MOST exciting additions to the shelves are board books. These are constructed with heavy cardboard into wood-like pages with rounded corners and shiny or laminated surfaces.

They are super sturdy, easy to clean, and the thick pages are easy for tiny hands to turn but virtually impossible for them to rip. Within the board book category is an unending variety of types, sizes, shapes and subjects.

Most child-development experts stress simplicity as a primary concern in laying a foundation for later reading comprehension.

"The more fussy the illustration, the less the child enjoys it," says Ms. Haslam, who believes that the best illustrations are those that relate to the child's own experience. In this regard, she particularly favors books that use color photographs.

However, photographs can be visually distracting to little ones because of the three-dimensional quality, and for this reason many parents prefer flat representations. Whether drawings or photos are used, the "ABC" books are popular and effective because they usually have only one item on each page.

IF YOU are using Baby Lit to teach your baby to read before he or she is out of diapers, however, you could be making a mistake.

When a child actually learns to read is largely a result of developmental readiness, according to some experts, and like walking, will occur at different times for different youngsters — and only when the child is ready. Pushing a child beyond his or her natural stage can be counterproductive.

William Ellis, headmaster of St. Paul's School in Clearwater, Fla., and an expert in child development, says, "A great number of children come into kindergarten knowing how to decode symbols but not attaching any meaning to that relationship."

In other words, a child knows what words go with what pictures but has not gone beyond this to any understanding of what they are doing. This, Ellis says, requires a "conceptual leap" that the child will take when he or she has developed a language base ready for that leap.

Forcing a child to go through the motions of reading before he or she is developmentally ready can cause problems later on, in about the fourth grade, with reading comprehension.

Early books for babies are best considered a complement to the parents' reading out loud to the child, not a substitute. "We want to teach children how to handle and respect books," says bookstore owner Sally Soenen-Wilmoth.

MS. SOENEN-WILMOTH, who conducts regular story hours for toddlers in her store, observes that "it is the early contact with books that's most important, more than the text."

Holding books and talking about the pictures for the purpose of fosterng a love of reading is what it's all about, she says, noting that you can tell which children have had an early pleasant encounter with books. "Their attention span is greater, and they have fun and are responsive to books," she says. "It's easy to capture their interest."

The biggest mistake, Ms. Soenen-Wilmoth points out, is to buy books that are beyond the level of the child. Grandparents, more often than parents, she observes, are the ones who overestimate the child's readiness for certain concepts.

When parents themselves love to read, it is thrilling to be able to share this world with their newborns, and to spark an early bond with the printed word.

What follows is a review of some of the books that might appeal to your baby or toddler. Where they are listed by author's name, the author in most cases has several books in a series. Other titles will be referred to by series or book title. Publishers' names are in parentheses.

Board Books
(listed by author, $2.95-$3.95)

Helen Oxenbury, series including Friends, Family, Dressing, Playing (Dial). The simple format and bright colors of these engaging picture stories typify the best of Baby Lit.

Rosemary Wells, MAX books (Dial). The adventures of Max and Ruby, lovable brother and sister rabbits.

Kenneth Lilly, series including Animal Climbers, Animal Jumpers, Animal Builders (Random). Gorgeous illustrations that look almost like photographs. Classics.

Jill Bailey, Animals of Course! series (Putnam). Perhaps the best illustrations to be found in a Baby Lit book. Features animal eyes, mouths, feet and noses, asking the question "Who has these eyes?" and the answer on the next page, "An owl, of course."

Earl Carle, Catch the Ball (Philomel). A hole appears on every page, with a string running through to the end of the book. A snake, a deer, a bear and others all try to catch the ball but miss it. The string leads to the ball in a kangaroo's pouch.

Stephen Cosgrove and Charles Reasoner, Bunny series (Price/Stern/Sloan). Absolutely enchanting eyes on these adorable bunnies.

Dick Bruna, Miffy series (Methuen). Simple pictures in bright primary colors about a girl rabbit who has adventures.

Harriet Ziefert, Zippity Zip! Munchety Munch! Diggity Dig! (Viking). Actual glossy photos of children doing these things. Very well done.

Leo Lionni, Who? What? Where? When? (Pantheon). "Pictures to talk about and to engage the eye and the mind of the young child," says the cover. Beautiful illustrations.

Peggy Parish, I Can — Can You? series (Greenwillow). Simple illustrations of children doing things. To help parents, the books are arranged in four skill-readiness levels.

(listed by title or series)

Mouse's Train Ride (Price/Stern/Sloan). Double-thickness pages have one train car on each, with one object in each car. The book unfolds into a train.

Bialosky series, including Bialosky Goes Out and Bialosky Stays Home (Golden). Actual photos of a teddy bear putting on overalls, getting toys out of toybox, up to its ears in cookie dough. Charming.

One Green Frog and others, a series of large, sturdy spiral-bound books featuring owls, caterpillars, wheels (Grosset). All the pages have holes that get smaller and smaller. Priced at $5.95 but worth it.

Baby Animals (Grosset). Bright colorful cartoon illustrations.

Real Mother Goose (Rand McNally). A beautiful big book and a great job of trimming down rhymes to a baby's level — one verse per page.

Chunky series (Random). Fist-sized, 3-by-3 books with animal pictures, simple Snoopy or Smurf stories and numbers. More toy-like and not as popular as larger board books.

"Little Toy Board Books," including Little Dolls, Little Wheels, Little Circus (Viking). One object or scene per page.

Pudgy series (Grosset). Hard, small, sturdy 5-by-5 books. Colorful, simple.

You Can Pilot a Submarine (Golden). Cute gimmick of handle cut into top of book, but illustrations are too "busy."

Things to do Books
($2.95-$4.95)

Pat the Bunny and Telephone Book, old favorites by Dorothy Kunhardt (Golden). Child feels textures or pulls out a drawer to find the clothes.

Touch Me Book (Golden). Baby rubs sandpaper, feels fur, squeezes a sponge. Like the Kunhardt books, these have less-sturdy pages than board books and must be treated more kindly.

What's Inside? part of "I Can Do It" series (Bowmar-Noble). Baby can open an oven, a tool chest, a suit of armor.

Zip It, Snap It, Tie It (Simon & Schuster). Bathtub books that also teach the child to dress.

Scratch & Sniff (Random). Scratch a special area and get a whiff of the object (flowers, food). Kids are crazy about these.

Fantastic Funny Finger Book (Price/Stern/Sloan). Has a cutout part for a finger puppet to go through.

'Small World' has detailed plot, witty dialogue

"Small World: An Academic Romance," by David Lodge. Macmillan, 339 pp. $15.95.

A Review

By Dan Cryer
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

"Small World" is a three-ring circus of academic drollery. All the fun comes at the expense of professors of English who, in this devilishly sophisticated entertainment, never teach but are forever fleeing the campus for conferences and symposia all over the globe.

"The modern conference," notes David Lodge, "resembles the pilgrimage of medieval Christendom in that it allows the participants to indulge themselves in all the pleasures and diversions of travel while appearing to be austerely bent on self-improvement."

Lodge, himself a professor of English at the University of Birmingham in England and the author of other novels, has created an endearing cast of zanies continually bumping into each other as they trek from the English Midlands to Amsterdam to Jerusalem to Ankara to New York. Lectures are given but rarely heard, gossip fills the cocktail parties, and sex is the universal language.

Forget the Higher Learning; we are dealing here with the Higher Flying. As one go-getter says, "The American Express card has replaced the library pass."

Welcome to the literary scene as it might be envisioned by Monty Python. Michel Tardieu of the Sorbonne "sits at his desk and resumes work on a complex equation representing in algebraic terms the plot of War and Peace." Morris Zapp of Euphoric State (in California?) has no more noble aim than to be the highest paid Engish prof in the world. And only so batty a leftist as Fulvia Morgana of the University of Padua would dare explain away her mansion, servants and original Chagalls in the language of Marxism itself:

"Since in terms of dialectical materialism it makes no difference to the historical process whether Ernesto and I, as individuals, are rich or poor, we might as well be rich, because it is a role that we know 'ow to perform with a certain dignity."

At the center of these antics stands an undignified junior scholar, Persse McGarrigle, lecturer in poetry at Limerick. As provincial as his college, Persse confesses that he's "never been in what you might call the swim, intellectually speaking."

Nor had he ever been to a literary party before, but he quickly learns that "the main object seemed to be to drink as much as possible as fast as possible, while talking at the top of your voice and at the same time looking over the shoulder of the person you were talking to and smiling and waving to other people who were also drinking and talking and smiling and waving."

Persse's innocence doesn't prevent him from pursuing the elusive Angelica Pabst, a beautiful and brainy American student of the literary romance. But no matter what conference he attends, she seems to have taken the most recent plane out of town.

The other major spin of the plot comes from the rumor that UNESCO is about to award a $100,000-a-year fellowship, requiring absolutely no responsibilities, to a big-name literary scholar. Thus the lust for power, money and leisure has Lodge's characters scrambling just as fast as the desire to hop into bed.

Lodge pokes fun at nearly all the idiocies available to scholarly man: professional rivalries, impenetrable jargon, sterile critical theories, literary prizes, boring speeches, computer analysis of novels, plagiarism, limousine Marxism and shallow Freudianism.

But the reader need not be a professor of English to get the jokes. The only requirements are an appreciation of witty dialogue and plot with more twists and turns than a Grand Prix race — and a genuine sympathy for the foolish creatures called human beings.

"Real romance," says one character, "is a pre-novelistic kind of narrative. It's full of adventure and coincidence and surprises and marvels, and has lots of characters who are lost or enchanted or wandering about looking for each other, or for the Grail, or something like that. Of course, they're often in love, too."

A delightful romance, that's what David Lodge has given us.

Book testament to woman's will to live

A Review

"I'll Take Tomorrow," by Mary Gohlke with Max Jennings, M. Evans, $12.95.

This moving book is a testament to the indomitable will to live. Choosing to be a human guinea pig as an alternative to certain death from a rare heart and lung disease, Ms. Gohlke became the first survivor of a double transplantation at the Stanford University Medical Center.

A highly articulate, vital advertising executive, wife and mother, she forcefully conveys the fear, loneliness and pain of the terminally ill and the desperate nature of her struggle for survival. Most excruciating was the wait — first for FDA approval of an essential anti-rejection drug (Jennings, her newspaper editor employer and co-author, expedited it), then for a suitable organ donor. Long months of physical recovery were accompanied by bouts of depression, lethargy and anxiety, coupled with sometimes overwhelming media attention.

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we considered to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Both vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ◇.

They had found the Seven of Spades among the derelicts who made Grand Central Station their home. His threadbare clothes and matted hair was eloquent testimony to the depths to which he had sunk.

"I am a paraiah," he whined, "through no fault of my own. For mine was a sin of omission, not commission. It happened 20 years ago, almost to the day, in the final session of the Women's Team Championship. I had developed a crush on the lady who held me. As you will see from the play, my feelings seem to have been reciprocated, for she proved reluctant to part from me.

"The heart slam was not the most elegant contract. North intended her five heart bid to show a good hand with no first-round control. South was not sure what the bid meant so she bid one more for the road.

"Against six hearts West led a low diamond. Declarer won in hand, cashed the ace of trumps and crossed to the queen. On this trick East sluffed a low spade. Declarer returned to hand with the king of diamonds and led the jack of spades. West won and, not knowing the position, she understandably made the safe return of a trump. A cascade of trumps followed, and West steadfastly held me close to her breast. The hand was reduced to this position:

♠ K Q 8

◇ Q
♣ 9 8 3

"Declarer led the queen of diamonds and discarded the king of clubs from the table. East was in a quandary. She knew I had not yet been played, so she consigned me to declarer's hand. In that case if she held the ace of clubs, dummy's spades would take the last three tricks. It seemed that the one chance was to hope that her partner held the nine of clubs, so she reluctantly discarded the ace of clubs. Now declarer scored three club tricks for a highly satisfactory result for North-South.

"I leave you to judge: Have I been fairly treated?"

Send any questions for this column to Charles H. Goren and Omar Sharif, in care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Complete Bridge," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged to be the best received.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone with a jovial manner may be trying to deceive you. Trust your instincts. A golden business opportunity comes along at the right time. Romance has its usual ups and downs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Maneuvering behind the scenes could create problems. Be upfront with those you want to impress. Contact with people at a distance could prove highly profitable. A platonic relationship intensifies.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your business relationships are in the spotlight today. A jealous co-worker could try to cause trouble; keep out of his or her way. Share your special knowledge with family, friends.

Women's Institute helps improve women's position in Canada

By MARY ANN SIMPKINS
King Features Syndicate

Women's Institute may not always capture media attention, but that doesn't mean the 48,000-member organization isn't hard at work. "We're very much in the limelight here," institute president Bernice Noblitt of Ottawa says. "The government recognizes us because we've stood the test of time in handling issues."

Indeed, institute branches across Canada have done much over the years to improve the position of women, particularly those in rural areas.

The institute's national body — Federated Women's Institutes of Canada — began in 1919, passing its first resolution, which called for equal pay for equal work. Since then, the group has continued to stay tuned in to women's rights.

By 1921, institute members were studying the legal position of married women. In 1959 they applied pressure to change divorce laws. And by 1983 resolutions from the national body covered subjects as diverse as capital gains tax applied to farmland, arms control and wife battering.

Each member — some in branches with as few as eight members — pay $1 a year to support the national office in Ottawa.

There, the two-member staff provides branches with information. It also polls members on upcoming government legislation — for example, pension reform — and often reports the response to parliamentary committees.

Provincial branches usually work independently. And local projects are as varied as the groups themselves.

The Ontario branch was instrumental in passing seat belt legislation covering children. Members in British Columbia founded the Crippled Children's Hospital in Vancouver, and the New Brunswick branch maintains a residence for elderly women.

Other groups have sponsored farm-safety workshops, and hired young people to provide day care for farm children while their mothers work outside.

Although its motto is "Home and Country," the institute's influence reaches into many countries. The need for clean water in Kenya spurred the Alberta branch into funding the construction of wells there.

Much of this international work is done through membership in the institute's umbrella organization, Associated Country Women of the World (ACWW). This 9.5 million-member organization aims to promote friendship and understanding and to raise the standard of living of rural women and homemakers.

Life isn't always easy for those who have it all

By ELAINE RYAN
King Features Syndicate

Last week was one of those weeks. In addition to going to the office every day, I attended three meetings, phoned and convinced 75 people to canvass for a questionable cause and housed and fed two visiting nephews with insatiable appetites for food and loud music. On Friday evening, I received delivery of 1,000 dozen cinnamon buns for the annual Boy Scout fund-raising project at the precise moment our clothes dryer died, leaving one week's wet laundry staring me in the face.

I was debating whether to hang the buns on the clothesline and distribute my wet laundry among the Boy Scouts, when my friend Carol dropped by. She wanted me to sign up for tennis lessons with her.

I explained that in order to have time for such leisure pastimes, I must hire either a chauffeur or a housekeeper. This would cut into my budget so severely that my children and I would be able to eat only on Tuesdays.

When I commented how lucky she was to have time for fun things like tennis, Carol quickly set the record straight. Life was not easy for her. She needs her tennis, sculpting, yoga class, gourmet luncheon club, summers at the lake and winter holidays to maintain her sanity.

She does not have the freedom which I, as a unattached career woman, have. I was on the edge of my washing machine, dying to hear about my liberation.

Carol pointed out that she does not have her own money to spend. She is stuck with the money her husband gives her. Nor does she have the privilege of balancing her household budget. She may spend as much as she likes, but her husband's secretary does the bookkeeping.

She was right! The money I spend is my own. All I have to do is go out to work every day to receive it. I also have the honor of budgeting my money, otherwise known as keeping the wolf from the door. If I curtail my expenditures, I should be able to afford tennis lessons 11 years from next March.

Carol's husband expects dinner at 6:30 daily, whether or not she feels like cooking. The only time she does not prepare the evening meal is once a week, when the two of them slip away to one of the better restaurants for dinner by candlelight.

Right again! Dinner hour in our home is more flexible. It slides up and down the priority list in direct relation to music lessons, soccer games, meetings and general mass confusion. Upon arriving home from work, if my children and I have less than 13 minutes to reach our destination, I may elect not to drag out the pots and pans to prepare dinner. We then slip away, after the game, lesson or whatever, to one of the better hamburger joints.

Carol emphasized that she cannot make a decision without consulting her husband. If she decides to buy new furniture, she must consider her spouse's preferences. She said that I could not imagine the difficulty they encounter in agreeing upon color schemes and styles.

Who can argue that issue?

Nutritious, versatile eggs elegant dishes

By JANET LORIMER
King Features Syndicate

"It's very provoking," Humpty Dumpty said after a long silence, looking away from Alice as he spoke, "to be called an egg — very!"

"I said you looked like an egg, sir," Alice gently explained. "And some eggs are very pretty, you know," she added, hoping to turn her remark into a sort of compliment.

Alice was on the right track. Egg dishes can be very attractive. They are highly nutritious and, because of their versatility, make a bright beginning to your day as well as an elegant ending. To start, here are egg recipes that make stunning breakfast or brunch dishes.

• • •

FRUIT-FILLED OMELETS

4 eggs
2 tablespoons milk
Dash salt
1 to 2 tablespoons butter
Fruit filling (recipe follows)

Beat eggs lightly and add milk and salt. Melt butter in omelet pan or skillet with rounded sides, tilting to coat the sides. When butter begins to bubble, add egg mixture. Lift edges and tilt pan to permit uncooked egg to run to the bottom. Continue to cook until omelet is set.

Spoon filling on one half of the omelet. Fold over the other side and gently slide filled omelet onto a warmed platter. Serve immediately.

Fruit Filling:

1 apple, finely chopped
1 banana, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon cinnamon or nutmeg

Melt butter in small skillet. Add seasoning and fruit and saute gently until fruit is well-coated with seasoned butter.

• • •

EGGS IN BREAD CUPS

6 slices whole-wheat bread
4 tablespoons melted butter
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
6 eggs
Salt, pepper
⅓ cup grated Cheddar cheese
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon finely minced chives

Trim crusts from bread and press bread slices into the cups of a muffin pan. Melt butter and garlic powder in small saucepan. Brush bread slices with garlic butter and bake in 400F oven for about 20 minutes or until toasty.

While bread slices bake, beat eggs and add seasonings, cheese and chives. Pour into a lightly greased skillet and cook until done, stirring frequently. Spoon cooked egg mixture into toast cups and serve immediately.

• • •

The next four recipes could be served as hearty luncheon dishes or light dinner dishes. They are good any time of year.

POORMAN'S SOUFFLE

12 slices whole-wheat bread
2 cups grated Cheddar cheese
4 eggs, well beaten
2 cups milk
Dash salt, pepper
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Arrange bread slices and grated cheese in alternate layers in oven casserole dish, beginning and ending with bread slices. Combine eggs, milk and seasonings, and beat in blender on high speed for about 30 seconds. Pour egg mixture over bread and cheese layers and bake in 350F oven for about 1 hour or until no particles cling to a knife.

• • •

PUFFED OMELET WITH SPANISH SAUCE

This dish, topped with the brightly colored sauce, always impresses my family. Try it for a special occasion as well as everyday events.

Prepare the sauce first and have it simmering on a back burner while you make the omelet. For excellent results, cook the omelet in a good old cast-iron skillet. The moment the omelet is cooked, pour the sauce over it and rush it to the table.

Sauce:

2 cups chopped ripe tomatoes
⅛ clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon sweet basil
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 tablespoon green onion, chopped
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1 teaspoon olive oil

Heat oil in skillet or saucepan over medium heat. Add onion and garlic and saute for about a minute. Add tomatoes, green pepper, green onion, basil and parsley. Cook, stirring frequently, for another minute or two. Turn heat to low, cover pan and allow mixture to simmer while omelet is being prepared.

Omelet:

4 eggs, separated
¼ cup milk
1 teaspoon whole-wheat pastry Flour
Salt, pepper
2 tablespoons butter

Preheat oven to 400F. Beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Beat yolks with milk, flour and seasonings. Fold in egg whites. Melt butter in large skillet. (Use cast iron if possible). Add egg mixture. Cover pan and cook over low heat till bottom is set, about 5 minutes.

Remove cover and put skillet in preheated oven. Bake for 8 to 10 minutes or until top is golden brown. Fold and turn omelet onto hot platter. Quickly spoon hot sauce over omelet and serve immediately.

• • •

EGG FOO YONG

A delicious and delicate egg dish from the Orient. It's easy to make and looks elegant. A word of warning. Make lots. There will be a demand for second helpings.

Egg Foo Yong:

4 to 5 eggs
1 cup shrimp, cooked, cleaned and cut into little pieces
1 cup bean sprouts
¼ cup sliced fresh mushrooms
3 tablespoons water chestnuts, sliced
2 tablespoons finely chopped celery
2 to 3 tablespoons cooking oil

Beat eggs well. Add shrimp and vegetables and mix thoroughly. Heat oil in heavy skillet. For each serving, place about ¼ cup egg mixture in skillet. Brown lightly on each side and serve with Sweet-Sour Sauce.

Sweet-Sour Sauce:

⅓ cup chicken broth
⅓ cup pineapple juice (unsweetened)
2 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce
1 to 2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 teaspoons honey
Dash ginger

Measure all ingredients into saucepan. Heat slowly over medium heat until mixture is smooth and thickened. Stir constantly to prevent sauce from getting lumpy.

• • •

CHICKEN CHEESE FRITTATA

Here's an Italian frittata which is simply a flat, open-faced omelet. Like the Puffed Omelet, it begins cooking on top of the stove and finishes up in the oven, in this case under the broiler. Use a cast-iron skillet, if possible.

8 eggs
1 cup Monterey Jack cheese, grated
1 cup cooked chicken, shredded or finely chopped
2 tablespoons finely minced green onion
Salt, pepper
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
1 to 2 tablespoons butter
⅓ cup garlic-flavored croutons

Beat eggs, then add chicken, onion and seasonings. Add ¾ cup of the cheese, reserving the final ¼ cup for later. In skillet, melt butter over medium heat. Add egg mixture.

Cook without stirring over low to medium heat, until eggs are set, about 7 to 9 minutes. Sprinkle with remaining cheese and croutons and place under broiler about 5 to 6 inches from heat until cheese topping melts and croutons are toasty. Cut into wedges and serve at once.

Serves 6 to 8.

Poor Humpty Dumpty! With recipes like these, no wonder he didn't like being called an egg.

Texan travels from stagecoach to shuttle

By MAGGIE KENNEDY

HOUSTON (AP) — Smokey Cameron, a former deputy sheriff who rode shotgun on stagecoaches in Arizona when it was still a territory, the great-grandson of the famous Chiracahua Apache chief Cochise, the man who demonstrated his mule-skinning skills at 12 to a skeptical Teddy Roosevelt — may have been born in the horse 'n' buggy days but he's hooked on new frontiers in space.

Cameron has been a big fan of the space program since it began in the '60s. Whenever the Mercury, Gemini, Apollo or Saturn rockets blasted into space, the former World War I fighter pilot was glued to his televison set. It's the same now with the space shuttle takeoffs and landings.

Cameron has been talking about space and the space program for so long that his friends in Dallas decided to do something about it, like give him a surprise trip to NASA's Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center in Houston for his birthday.

Smokey's not exactly a spring chicken. He celebrated his 99th this year with friends at the Kensington Manor nursing home in Pleasant Grove. As soon as the cake and ice cream disappeared, he was anxiously heading south on Interstate 45.

"Where do I sign up for a space shuttle trip," he quipped as Carolyn Huntoon, associate director of the Johnson Space Center, officially greeted Smokey and his VIP tour party.

Accompanying Smokey on his all-day tour were Richard Herman, nursing home administrator, his wife, Marie; Dorothy Schmude, a longtime friend representing the Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Audie L. Murphy Memorial Post 1837 (Smokey's a life member of the post); Stella Luna, a protocol assistant in NASA's public affairs office; and Jerry Elliott, NASA's project engineer for astronaut crew equipment.

Before starting his behind-the-scenes look at the space center, Smokey presented Huntoon with an American flag he hoped astronauts would someday plant on the moon for him.

Confined to a wheelchair during the daylong tour because of phlebitis in his legs, Smokey's guide in the exhibits area of the Visitor Center was shuttle astronaut Michael Coats.

"That's a space-age version of a stagecoach," Coats said, pointing to a duplicate of the lunar rover. "You know we've left a lot of junk up there on the moon."

Smokey looked at the lunar rover, the rusted space capsule and the gallery of old spacesuits. "Wish I could go up with you sometime," he said.

"I wish you could, too," the Navy commander replied, "but I bet those World War I planes were probably more fun to fly that the space shuttle is. The planes you flew were the ones I dreamed about when I was growing up."

Born in 1886 in the Arizona Territory, Smokey (that's not a nickname) was the son of a full-blooded Chiracahua who married Edith Travis, a missionary school teacher.

At 12 and with only three years of school, Smokey was driving freight wagons. Later he was a deputy to John Slaughter, the U.S. marshal at Tombstone. As a young man, Smokey, a trick rider and rodeo performer, and his wife, trick shooter, joined a wild west show-rodeo and traveled throughout Europe and England.

The show happened to be in England when World War I started. Never one to shirk a fight, Smokey enlisted in the British air corps, then transferred to the American unit when the United States entered the war. One day while Capt. Cameron was flying his Spad biplane over France, he was shot down.

"In those days, you knew who you were shooting at," Smokey told four-time space shuttle astronaut Robert Crippen as the two traded tales sitting at the consoles in Mission Control. "I knew it was Ernst Udet who show me down and he knew who I was."

A year or so after the war, Smokey said, he and Udet met face-to-face again in France. "I'd gone over with the American Legion to decorate some World War I graves. Udet was there doing the same thing. We recognized each other and talked for a while. We even played pinochle together."

Astronaut still awaits first flight

New York Times News Service

HOUSTON — Astronaut Karl Henize sat on the computer console between the two pilot seats of the space shuttle simulator in a building at the Johnson Space Center here.

Henize sat because when he stood up, his graying hair brushed the rows of toggle switches on the ceiling of the cramped flight deck. Henize is only 5 feet 6 inches tall.

"This is 99 percent fidelity to the real thing," he said of the simulator and smiled. "Sometimes it pays to be short."

Even so, it has taken the adjunct professor of astronomy at the University of Texas in Austin 18 years to get off the Earth.

When the 58-year-old Henize (pronounced HEN-eyes), finally flies aboard the shuttle Challenger later this year, he will become the oldest astronaut to fly into space. There have been times when he wondered if he would ever get there.

"I'm now the oldest active astronaut," he said. "I'm just a civilian on an ordinary government service basis. I've pretty well worked myself to the top since I've been here so long."

Henize grew up in Plainville, Ohio, near Cincinnati. He was an astronomy professor at Northwestern University when his application to be a scientist-astronaut was accepted in 1967. He anticipated getting into space aboard one of the Skylab flights in the early 1970s.

The late 1960s were the glory years of big budgets for the space agency. It was thought that Skylab would be flown in three versions and turn into a sort of permanent space station.

"Then the budget was slashed," he said. "Only one Skylab version was flown and my opportunity vanished."

Since then, he has worked on one or another aspect of the shuttle's equipment while waiting for another chance to fly in space. Along the way, he picked up a new title: Mission specialist.

"That means career astronaut," he said.

Behind him, Craig Urban, 8, settled into the simulator's right-side pilot seat, glanced at the three computer video screens on the dashboard and immediately complained. "There's no gas pedal," said the son of Henize's in-laws whom he was showing around the remarkably small cabin.

"No," Henize replied. "That's not the way it works."

Henize's own three children, a son and two daughters, grew into adulthood waiting for their daddy to fly in space. His son and one daughter are graduates of the University of Texas; the second daughter is enrolled at UT-Austin as a geophysics major.

Henize and the Urbans, from Bay City, Mich., side-stepped around each other in the cabin of the simulator used to train for real space missions. Their contortions demonstrated how incredibly cramped the shuttle must be when as many as seven astronauts fly at one time.

"There's not much room for weightless acrobatics," Henize said.

He stays in good physical shape by thrice-weekly workouts and by watching his diet but he's hardly the superjock test-pilot image of an astronaut.

"He was one of the first scientist-astronauts when scientists still were considered wimps," said Harlan Smith. "He's a fine example of how you don't have to be a test pilot to fly in space."

Whale habits studied in Mexican lagoon

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

LAGUNA OJO DE LIEBRE, Mexico — In the pale early morning light, spouts of vapor come and go against the far shore, the first sign that below the rippled surface the sea is alive with gray whales come home to their breeding ground.

'Because they mostly hug the coast during their annual trek to Baja California from feeding grounds off Alaska — one of the longest migrations among mammals — and gather in lagoons, the grays have been among the best-known whales to scientists, the curious and whalers.

But there are still as many scientific questions as answers.

For example, do they travel as elephants do, in family groups?

Twice hunted close to extinction, the gray whales — Eschrichtius robustus — have come back to an estimated 18,000 to 20,000 under international protection begun in 1946. They are no longer hunted, except for 180 a year for Soviet and American Eskimos, but another question now is how well they can survive man's modern threats — pollution and coastal development.

From January through March this boot-shaped Pacific Ocean lagoon and others along the Baja California peninsula become mammoth nurseries and laboratories for scientists studying the mysteries of the whales' 5,580- to 8,680-mile migration to give birth and then mate.

Luis Fleischer, chief of Mexico's National Marine Mammal Program at the National Fishing Institute's center in La Paz, and about a dozen students, working out of a desert camp at the lagoon's edge, count whales from boats and record their locations, using a system he has developed over several years.

"We have to know how many we are protecting, the numbers that are using the refuges, the types — whether they are females, newborns, males, how many births there are," Fleischer said.

"One thing I would like to prove is that they travel like elephants in family groups. They're related to elephants in the evolutionary spectrum."

Gray whales are most often seen in groups of one to three, sometimes up to 16. Fleischer also wants to learn if calves continue to travel with their mothers after they stop nursing.

Mothers have one calf. Sometimes it rides on her tail or under a fin, using currents along her body. While they usually appear gentle, whalers nicknamed gray whales "devilfish" for their aggressive defense of calves.

Under Mexican law, Ojo de Liebre, adjacent Guerrero Negro and San Ignacio to the south are gray whale refuges and access is restricted. Larger Magdalena Bay remains under study to determine what areas the whales use.

At this season's peak, Ojo de Liebre, the most populous lagoon, had 900 adults and about 585 calves. It is not known how much they move between lagoons and the open sea or among lagoons. Some apparently remain in open water.

"If in the future humanity needs the gray whale as a resource they are going to need an exploitation plan and will have the years of research in Mexico on reproduction for future management," Fletcher said.

Grant R. Bartlett, director of a biological research laboratory in San Diego, Calif., obtained blood samples from a stranded calf at the lagoon for studies on how whales hold their breath without developing hypoxia, an abnormal condition that results from a decrease in oxygen in the body.

The whales spend from about May to November feeding off Alaska, moving northward with the melting ice. When the ice builds up as winter approaches, they head south.

They are believed to eat little during the migration.

Scientists say they don't know the effects upon whales of the sewage, trash, pleasure boats and swimming that follow condominium development along the California coast; oil exploitation, shipping and other industrial development.

"They're in competition with people," Steven Swartz, a scientist at Cetacean Research Associates in San Diego, said by telephone. "Already whales that used to come close to the Los Angeles coastline stay farther away."

"They could reach a point where human activities affect them," he said. "The question is would it adversely affect them? Would it interrupt the migration or the breeding or the feeding?"

"It's possible if we know enough about the gray whale to know how far we could go without pushing it over the edge, we could coexist," he said.

One study found gray whales avoided sounds of killer whales, which attack them, and certain industrial noise, he added.

Pollution from oil exploitation in the whales' northern feeding areas "I believe is one of the most immediate threats," Fleischer says.

Food dye questions continue

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The debate over the safety of a unique food dye used to dye maraschino cherries red is no closer to being resolved than when it began 25 years ago.

Food processors say there is "no substitute" for Red No. 3, but public health activists are calling for an immediate ban because of a link between the dye, when ingested in large quantities, and thyroid cancer in rats and mice.

On April 2, for the 27th time, the Federal Drug Administration extended the deadline for a decision on the safety of food dyes. The agency said it needed more time to study the issue.

AT ISSUE is the safety of 10 dyes, most used for drugs and cosmetics. But the debate has focused on Red No. 3.

"By failing to immediately ban these dyes, the Reagan administration is making a mockery out of its alleged cancer reduction goals and is completely demoralizing dozens of FDA employees who know these dyes are too dangerous for continued use by the public," says Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the Public Citizen Health Research Group.

Wolfe cites a March 30, 1984, memo from Mark Novitch, then the acting FDA commissioner, to Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler, saying that test results "clearly demonstrate that each of these color additives induces cancer in properly conducted animal feeding studies."

Public Citizen says FDA studies have concluded that more than 95 percent of children eat some foods containing petroleum-based food dyes, with some consuming as much as three pounds of dyes by age 12.

Wolfe's organization has sued FDA in federal court, seeking an immediate ban on the dyes.

THE FOOD INDUSTRY, however, says any link between Red No. 3 and cancer is indirect. At any rate, the industry says, it would take at least 10,000 times the maximum ordinary human consumption to trigger a problem.

The National Food Processors Association submitted new animal testing data to FDA in November arguing that the dye does not directly cause cancer.

The study suggests that Red No. 3, in huge quantities, may cause the thyroid to produce more of a hormone called thyrotropin. Thyrotropin, in turn, may stimulate the growth of tumors in the thyroid.

The intermediate step puts Red No. 3 in the same position as beverage alcohol, the processors argue. Alcohol, in huge quantities, can cause cirrhosis of the liver, which in turn has been linked with an increased risk of liver cancer.

The processors, in a legal brief filed with the FDA, say such a "secondary carcinogen" need not be banned under the strict standards of the Delaney amendment to federal food laws, which requires any substance that causes cancer to be banned.

INSTEAD, THE processors argue, the risk of use of a "secondary carcinogen" can be weighed against the value. And with Red No. 3, the association says, the tiny quantity of dye a person might eat is nowhere near the amount that might cause a problem, making the risk virtually nonexistent.

"If there were a public health threat, believe me, the industry just would not use it," argued Dr. Harry Mussman of the National Food Processors Association.

The industry used about 464,000 pounds of Red No. 3 in 1983, coloring some 2,000 products ranging from cereal and pet foods to ice cream and vitamins.

But its most famous role is coloring the cherry in fruit cocktail. In its natural state, the maraschino cherry is rather pale, yellowish-ivory in color. Red No. 3 turns it bright red without allowing the color to "bleed" into the other fruits in the mix.

"There is no substitute for Red No. 3," says Mussman. "It's the only red color which will fix to the tissue properly in the cherry. If it were any other red, all the rest of the product would turn pink."

The debate over Red No. 3 and the nine other food and drug dyes began in July 1960, when Congress passed the Color Additives Amendment to the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act.

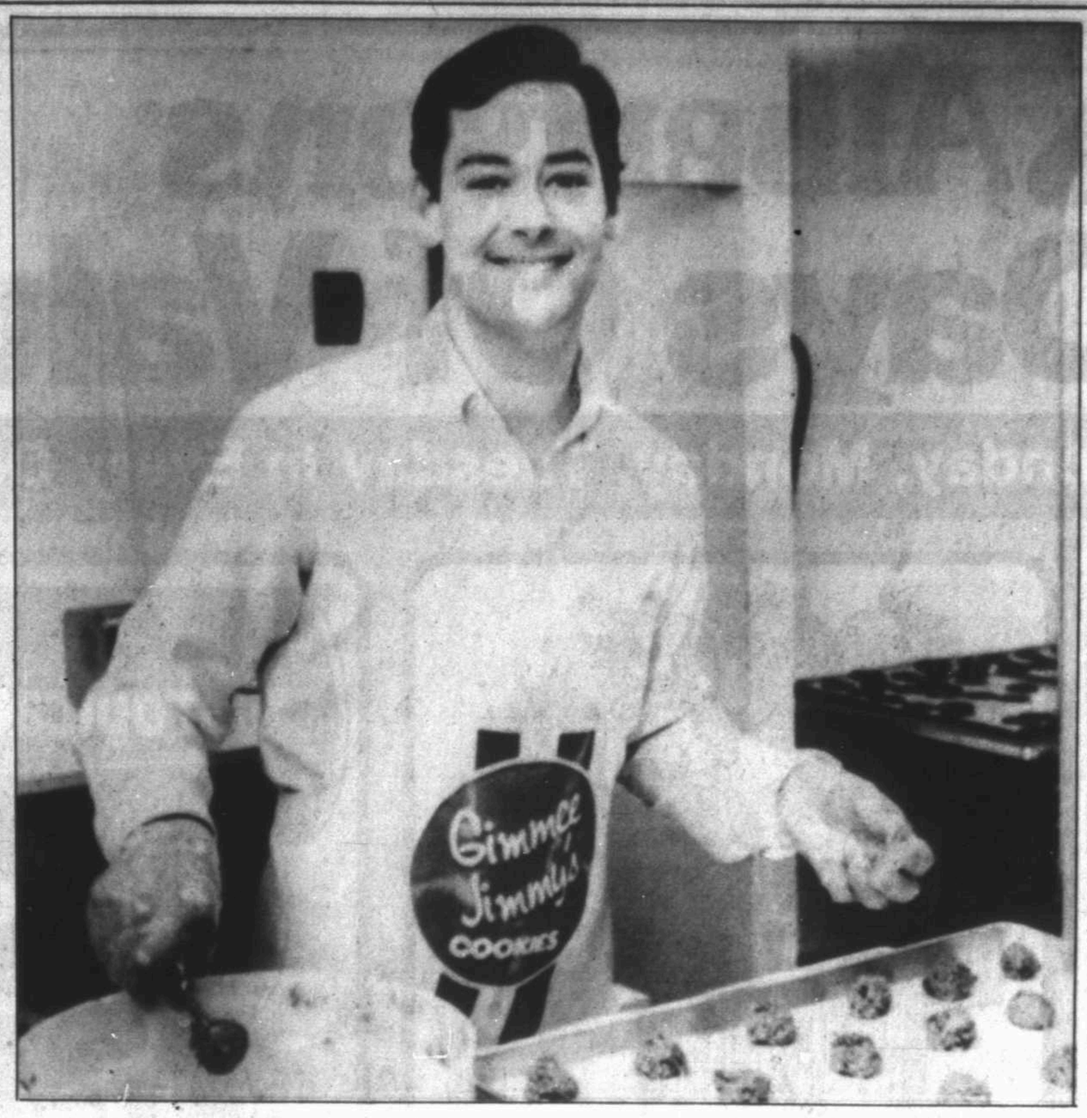

THE FDA WAS directed to determine by 1963 if all color additives then on the market were safe for human use. Dyes being studied could continue to be sold if they were on a so-called "provisional list." Dyes found to be safe went on a permanent list.

In the 25 years since the act passed, 17 of the 24 food dyes once used in the United States have been banned or no longer are produced, says Public Citizen. Of the seven remaining, three are involved in the current dispute — Red No. 3, Yellow No. 5 and Yellow No. 6.

Those three dyes accounted for 53 percent of all food dyes used in the United States last year. Yellow No. 5 is used in pet food, beverages and baked goods; Yellow No. 6 is used in beverages, candy and desserts.

The remaining seven dyes are used in drugs and cosmetics — Red Nos. 8, 9, 19, 33, 36 and 37 and Orange No. 17.

However, notes Public Citizen, even after the status of these 10 dyes is resolved, the issue may go on, because the four remaining food dyes — Red No. 40, Blue No. 1, Blue No. 2 and Green No. 3 — have been questioned.

Dipping out a tray of Gimme Jimmy's Cookies is Jimmy Libman, 28, founder of the West Orange, N.J., bakery. Libman, who is deaf, designed his bakery with a system of lights to aid him and his deaf workers in production of his tasty treats.

Cookie creation puts Jimmy's in spotlight

By PAMELA BROWNSTEIN
AP Business Writer

WEST ORANGE, N.J. — As competitors in the national gourmet cookie race, the bakers at Gimmee Jimmy's Cookies mix their chunky batter and slide trays in and out of ovens with precision. But the bakery runs in silence, cues coming from flashing lights on a wall.

Most of the bakers can't hear.

"We call it high-tech deaf," said Ellen Libman, whose brother, Jimmy, founded the bakery about two years ago.

Deaf since birth, 28-year-old Libman also designed the strobe light system to aid his 12 employees, nine of whom are deaf.

A blue master light under a counter flashes briefly, catching the attention of the workers as the light reflects off equipment in the room.

The workers know then to look up at a row of lights: Green means a customer is at the door, orange means the cookies need to be removed from the oven, white means Libman's special telephone for the hearing-impaired is ringing, and red means something is on fire.

The system has worked well so far and certainly is an improvement over the company's humble beginnings in the Libman family's kitchen.

"My dining room table was the assembly line," recalled Libman's mother, Dody, who provided the recipes for the chocolate chip, walnut chocolate chip, peanut chocolate chip, coconut pecan and oatmeal raisin cookies.

It was Libman's mother who suggested that her son open the business. Friends urged her for years to sell her cookies but she never took the idea seriously until her son, who was working as an optical technician, said he wanted to try a new field.

As soon as the plan was hatched, Mrs. Libman went to a nearby produce outlet and got a commitment to buy 30 boxes of cookies.

Libman and his sister soon were working from 7 a.m. to 1 a.m., and the Libmans decided to make the operation more professional, ordering a confectioner's oven for their family room. When it would not fit through the door, Libman and his 33-year-old sister set up shop in the living room for six months.

Then, with a $70,000 Small Business Administration loan at 3 percent interest and $18,000 of his own money, Libman opened the small but spotless bakery here.

He interviewed potential workers recommended by the New Jersey Department of Vocational Rehabilitation which, along with Goodwill Industries, trains and helps place hearing-impaired people.

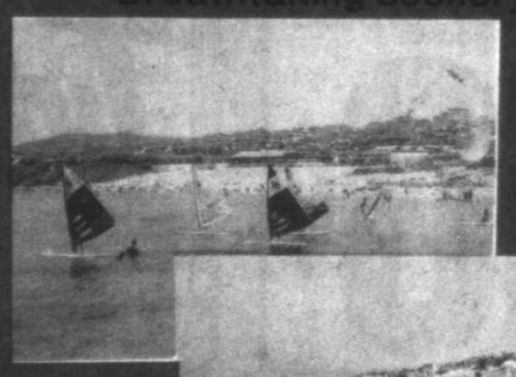

"Everything here is my responsibility," Libman said through Lou Ann Walker, a sign language interpreter.

Libman, who bought a computer to handle the paperwork, does the inventory, ordering and other day-to-day duties while his sister is in charge of marketing and promoting.

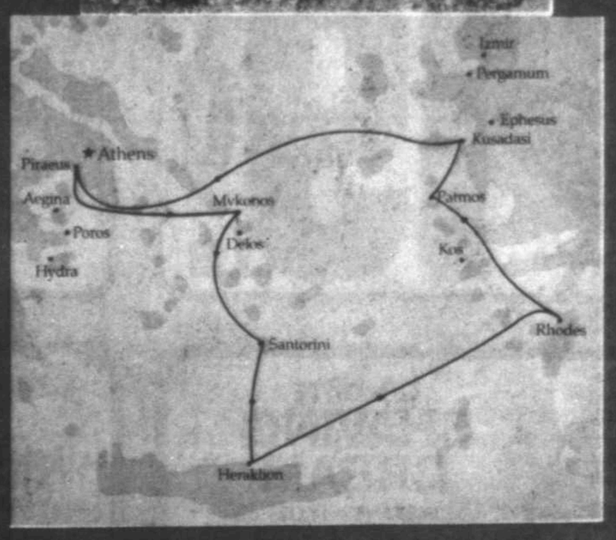

Gimmee Jimmy's now has 50 accounts in New York and New Jersey, mostly in upscale supermarkets and gourmet shops. A pound of cookies sells for $6.90 to $7.50.

Jimmy's sister, who is the vice president, said the operation grossed $100,000 for the 12 months that ended in February and had a profit which she declined to disclose. This year, Gimmee Jimmy's hopes to double its sales.
