Four people were killed and 16 were injured Thursday night after a train struck a Show of Support parade float en route to banquet at the Horseshoe.

Two people were killed at the scene; two died at Midland Memorial Hospital. One victim was transported to Lubbock, and several others were released from Midland Memorial late Thursday evening, said Chief Price Robinson, of the Midland Police Department. Marcy Madrid, a Midland Memorial spokesperson, told the Reporter-Telegram late Thursday that of the 16 injured admitted to Midland Memorial, 10 were treated and released, four were in stable condition, one was in critical condition and the other was transported to Lubbock. The victims' names were not released.

A float carrying veterans and their spouses in the ninth annual Show of Support parade was struck by an eastbound train about 4:36 p.m. near the corner of Garfield Street and Industrial Avenue, Robinson said.

The parade was taking 24 veterans and their spouses from the DoubleTree by Hilton to the Horseshoe in south Midland.

According to officials, the trailer hit was the second of two carrying veterans near the end of the parade route. The first trailer already had crossed the train tracks.

The trailer was carrying 26 passengers — 12 veterans, 12 spouses and two civilian escorts — Robinson said.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said the trailer was almost across the tracks when the train struck it.

"It was pandemonium at the point of impact. Some (of the veterans) tried to jump and protect each other, their girlfriends and their wives," he said.

Authorities at the scene were going through the roster at 6 p.m. to account for everyone involved.

In 2003, the speed limit for trains traveling through Midland increased from 40 to 60 miles per hour.

Officials with Union Pacific at the time said speed increases bring effectiveness to motorists who don't have to wait at railroad crossings as long, while helping trains move along faster and more efficiently.

Union Pacific spokesman Tom Lange said the eastbound train was sounding its horn before it hit the float Thursday as it approached the railroad crossing. He said the crossing gate and lights were working at the time.

Lange didn't know if the train crew saw the float approaching.

Officials would not comment on if the driver will face any charges or what caused the wreck, saying the crash was still under investigation. The Associated Press reported that the National Transportation Safety Board is in charge of the investigation, but Robinson said at a press conference Thursday night that MPD was investigating the wreck.

Painter, a veteran himself, said that Midland suffered a severe tragedy Thursday.

"I am very hurt and very shocked. My emotions are running pretty high," he said. "Our feelings and thoughts are going out to all the people."

Show of Support officials scrambled to find private transportation for wounded individuals and their families who were not from Midland. Directors said they planned to establish an account at Western National Bank to provide for the families' needs.

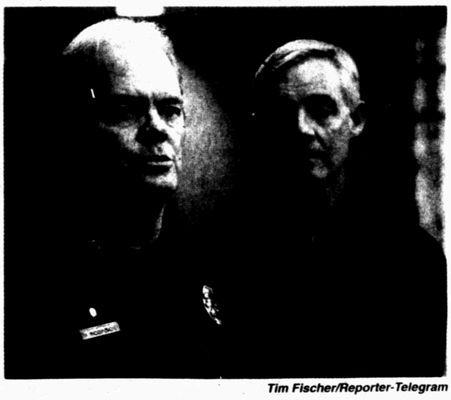

The parade was supposed to lead up to the Hunt for Heroes banquet. Wounded servicemen were supposed to be treated to an all-expenses paid white tail deer hunting trip this weekend, and their spouses would be treated to a variety of activities in Midland.

All Show of Support events have been canceled, said Terry Johnson, the organization's president and founder.

Earlier that day, the servicemen were treated to a luncheon at the Commemorative Air Force. State Sen. Kel Seliger and Mayor Wes Perry spoke at the luncheon.

"I'm just sick; I'm sick to my stomach," said Perry, who gave each man a key to the city at the luncheon. "They're heroes; they're the best of the best. I was honored to be in their presence."

Shared Spaces initiative launches for nonprofits

By Meredith Moriak
mmoriak@mrt.com

In less than a year, more than 12 nonprofit organizations will be housed in the same location, working collaboratively to improve the Midland community.

The creation of Midland Shared Spaces and a floor plan for housing 12 nonprofits under the same roof was unveiled Thursday during a ceremony at Hillcrest School, the future site of Midland Shared Spaces.

The school was purchased by the Abell-Hanger Foundation this summer and extensive building renovations will begin in January after Hillcrest moves into its new school at the site of Midland Bible Church.

MSS will house Agape Ministries, CampFire, Communities in Schools, Family Promise, Keep Midland Beautiful, Make-a-Wish, Midland Area AIDS Support, Midland Opera Theatre, Midland Shared Spaces, Mission Adult Day Services, Nonprofit Management Center and SHARE.

Tenants will pay discounted rents and share in the cost of office supplies and IT services, said Mark Palmer, project manager for Midland Shared Spaces.

The idea for a shared space has been talked about in Midland for more than 20 years, but didn't become a reality until August 2011 when the Abell-Hanger Foundation hired Palmer.

Once Palmer was hired, a 13-member steering committee began working on the project, commissioning feasibility studies, visiting other shared spaces across the country and purchasing the building.

"We wanted this to be a community collaboration and we engaged and recruited a group of community leaders who have served as the steering committee and helped us make decisions along the way," Palmer said.

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Cindy Benson, treasurer for Midland Shared Spaces, talks about the idea and start of Shared Spaces.

The Nonprofit Centers Network was hired in September 2011 to conduct a feasibility study, ensuring there would be a large enough demand for a shared space, Palmer said.

Based on results of an email survey, face-to-face interviews and focus groups with various nonprofit agencies in Midland, Palmer said the Network found there was definite interest in shared spaces.

"They recommended a building with square footage between 30,000 and 40,000 square feet and we were able to purchase the Hillcrest School building, which has more than 41,000 square feet," Palmer said.

With 13 nonprofits on board to lease space in the shared spaces building, Palmer said there is still 2,000 to 3,000 square feet available for two to four additional nonprofits.

After undergoing a comprehensive renovation, Palmer said Midland Shared Spaces will open its doors in October.

"We will be building our tenant spaces to their specifications and have already had meetings with virtually all the tenants, designed their requests and are working on final approval," Palmer said.

Tenants will pay a discounted rent of $8 per square foot and $4 per square foot for shared IT services that include computers, software, shared servers, email, Internet, color copiers, telephones and video conferencing.

"Our goal is to provide a technology platform for tenant partners that will enhance their capacity to do their work efficiently and effectively," said Vicki Jay, MSS secretary.

Meeting and conference rooms will be equipped with appropriate audio and presentation materials and furniture will be included in the price, Jay said.

Though details aren't worked out yet, Palmer said tenants may have the opportunity to package annual audits and pursue group health insurance in the future.

"I believe this is a game-changer for Midland," Palmer said. "We're setting these nonprofits up for two tracks of collaboration, both with the business model and with programming."

While the project is managed by the Abell-Hanger Foundation, Palmer said it's a true community collaboration with 15 entities donating toward capital and operating expenses.

To date, MSS has raised $5.65 million in capital funds, contributed by the Abell-Hanger Foundation, Scharbauer Foundation, Henry Foundation, Concho Resources, Rea Charitable Trust, Wayne and JoAnn Moore Charitable Trust, Warren Equipment, Chaparral Foundation, Pevehouse Family Foundation, Warren Charitable Foundation and Paul and Katherine Morrow Foundation.

An additional $100,000 in operating funds has been provided by the Fasken Foundation, Morrow Family Foundation, United Way of Midland and Yarborough Foundation.

"It's really quite a generous thing that some 15 funders have come together to make this available to nonprofits," Palmer said.

The funding model is unique and when 80 percent occupancy has been achieved, the revenue from earned income alone will comprise at least 70 percent of all the income needed to sustain the organization, said Cindy Benson, MSS treasurer.

It is expected to become self-sustaining with limited operational support within three to four years, Palmer said.

Seliger to support career and technical education

By Sara Higgins
shiggins@mrt.com

State Sen. Kel Seliger pushed transportation improvements, water conservation and career and technical education in his last town hall meeting leading up to the 83rd legislative session in Austin.

Seliger, R-Amarillo, said during the meeting on Thursday at the downtown Midland County Public Library that the majority of his upcoming legislative efforts will be based on public education, which faced about $5 billion in cuts over the last biennium.

"Needless to say there's been a lot of gnashing of teeth and a lot of protests," said Seliger, who was appointed chairman of the Senate higher education committee in October by Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst. "It continued to perform very, very well in the face of those budget cuts."

As population continues to grow in schools across Texas, Seliger said it's important to fund the schools in a way that allows the greatest number of people to go to college as possible.

"If we're going to have seats in classrooms for those people, it implies a certain amount of growth in those institutions," he said. "We want to provide them with that classroom."

Seliger commended a group of Early College High School @ Midland College students at the meeting, saying the program was an inspiration to him.

"It's going to make a difference in more lives of young people than any other single program," he said. "It's one of the great innovations I've seen in college education."

Seliger also will push legislative efforts for voluntary career and technical education that includes math and English classes while also preparing students for college, he said.

"We'll work alongside secondary education with industry," Seliger said. "In my mind, it's important to let the local areas determine and have discretion as to what their career and technical pathway looks like that it meets their needs."

State highways and county roads have seen more deterioration as the oil and gas industry has picked up, and Seliger suggested using rainy day funds that have increased due to the industry to begin fixing the roads.

"Wouldn't it be a good idea to invest the oil and gas industry's own money into transportation that they need?" he said. "When you have an economy that is largely commodity-based ... that commodity is worthless until it's been transported or processed."

Distribution of funding will be the biggest focus of the Legislature this year, Seliger said, especially in regards to developing a statewide water plan. His biggest worry, he added, is the tendency to use bonds to fund various projects.

"We're responsible for the budget impact that 2013 has on 2017, and debt is not a good thing for a state, and as we know, a nation," he said.

Woman pleads guilty to bank fraud and aggravated identity theft

From staff reports

A 51-year-old Midland woman faces a lengthy prison term after pleading guilty Thursday to bank fraud and aggravated identity theft, said U.S. Attorney Robert Pitman.

Dora Thea Arreguy admitted that she engaged in a 16-year-long scheme to defraud her employer and a bank out of $920,316.86, he said in a press release.

Specifically, Arreguy admitted that she, as the office manager for an Odessa business, wrote several checks a month to herself drawn on the company's payroll account.

As office manager, Arreguy had signatory authority, but a second signature was also required, which she repeatedly forged, thereby committing aggravated identity theft, Pitman said.

Arreguy altered the company's accounting records to reflect false time sheets, according to court documents. In recent years, Arreguy manipulated the payroll records of other employees to reflect that the money she paid herself was money that had been earned by the other employees. She said that at least 135 employees were affected by her scheme.

Arreguy remains on bond pending sentencing. She faces up to 30 years in prison for the bank fraud and a mandatory two-year consecutive prison term for the aggravated identity theft violation, Pitman said.

This investigation was conducted by the FBI, and Assistant U.S. Attorney Austin M. Berry prosecuted this case.

Fed speaker: Hydrocarbon production drives Texas' growth

■ Economist says oil prices should remain above $80 next year

By Don Munsch
dmunsch@oaoa.com

Jesse Thompson said the hurdle behind finding people to work in the energy sector lies in finding people who can pass their drug tests.

On the bright side, prospects for the oil and gas industry's health still appear bright.

Thompson, business economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas-Houston Branch, was one of five speakers representing the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas or its branches at "The Economy Today and Tomorrow" symposium Thursday at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. The symposium was co-sponsored by UTPB and the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas-El Paso Branch.

Thompson spoke on the energy sector in "Texas and the Hydrocarbon Hat Trick," while other speakers discussed the global economy, Mexico, the economic recovery and the Federal Reserve itself.

Bill Fannin, UTPB provost and vice president for academic affairs, said the symposium offered a way for the university to expose students and area business representatives to people with expertise in various economic areas.

"What we want do is give an in-depth perspective on our economy, the oil and gas economy," he said. "What's the future (going to bring)? Because that's where the investments are going to be, where the jobs are going to be, in the next five, 10, 15 years. Our students need to hear it in order to be prepared for those jobs. And our industry needs to hear it for their investments in order to be building for new jobs. So (the symposium) should help the entire region."

Thompson said hydrocarbon production continues to drive Texas' growth, but said the global economy is slowing and uncertainty exists with regulations, fiscal issues and the Eurozone. The overall outlook is positive with global demand for oil, as oil prices should remain above $80 a barrel next year, Thompson said.

Roberto A. Coronado, assistant vice president in charge for the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas-El Paso branch, talked about Mexico and its economy.

He examined Mexico in the last 30 years and its progress in macroeconomic policy.

"They now have an independent central bank," Coronado said before his speaking engagement, adding the country has fiscal discipline and a constitution that requires fiscal discipline.

He also discussed current trends in Mexico's economy and its recovery.

But Mexico also has challenges, such as its dependence on oil — a third of the government's revenues come from oil — and the shrinking of oil production, Coronado said.

"So Mexico has to do something about its oil industry," he said.

In addition, the country has to cope with weak competition in telecom and electricity industries and the violence that has occurred because of the drug cartels, he said.

Thompson spoke about oil and gas extraction, refining and petrochemicals and showed several charts and graphs that provided information ranging from prominent drilling regions and pipeline locations to various data on the oil and gas industry, such as wages.

He discussed how the energy sector has affected other components of the economy and the emergence of shale and horizontal drilling.

He said the "shale revolution" is real and here to stay and its "cost advantage is going to be long term."

Rob Fields holds up the blood type of his wife, Laura, outside the packed United Blood Services in Midland after a flatbed truck carrying wounded veterans and their families during a parade was struck by a train Thursday. Fields and his wife traveled more than 30 miles from Lenorah after hearing on the television news that the United Blood Services was specifically in need of type O-negative blood.

Hundreds turn out to give blood after accident

From staff reports

Several hundred people turned up at the United Blood Services donation center in north Midland to donate after staff reopened Thursday night in light of the fatal wreck involving the Show of Support parade float, said Lee Hartmann, local director for United Blood Services.

Hartmann said the line of donors during the night stretched throughout the parking lot and wrapped around the building.

Hartmann said United Blood Services will need Midlanders to help replenish the organization's blood supply as a considerable amount of the vital commodity was needed to help the victims of the crash.

"The most important thing is for people to schedule an appointment in the future to replace blood being used by the accident's victims," Hartmann said.

She said the response has been overwhelming and said the Permian Basin always responds in great number when called on.

A blood drive will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today at Midland High School, 906 West Illinois Ave. and Saturday at H-E-B, 3325 W. Wadley Ave.

Visit United Blood Services online at www.unitedbloodservices.org for more information.

Horseshoe goes dark; volunteers remember

By Audrie Palmer
apalmer@mrt.com

It was a surreal sight Thursday evening as members of the Patriot Guard Riders somberly sat in the empty parking lot of the Horseshoe complex.

What should have been a happy and joyous occasion, with laughter and cheering, was marked by silence and darkness.

"Unbelievable," "hard to comprehend," "leaves one's body numb" — those were comments made by many of the riders, who said they wished not to release their names.

The men and women on motorcycles participating in the Patriot Guard Ride were at the front of the motorcade leading the parade across the railroad tracks at Industrial Avenue and Garfield Street. The vehicles were headed south down Garfield to the Horseshoe.

Many said they didn't see a train or hear anything and that they didn't realize that the wreck had occurred until they were several blocks from the crash and watched as law enforcement vehicles in front of them turned around and headed the opposite direction.

Most Patriot Guard Riders are veterans and said they've participated in the event for the past several years. Many had lunch with and shook the hands of the veterans Thursday afternoon before meeting them at the DoubleTree by Hilton in downtown Midland to escort them through the city to the ninth annual banquet where the 24 wounded veterans and their spouses were to be honored.

Landon Petric, who was in the Marine Corps for eight years, was set to volunteer with Apache Corp. on Thursday night at the Show of Support banquet. He recently learned of the event and said that he wanted to come out to honor and show respect to the men who came home injured after serving their country.

When he got to the Horseshoe to volunteer, he heard about the wreck and said that he went down to the scene to help law enforcement direct traffic. When his help was no longer needed, he headed back to the Horseshoe parking lot to be with the Patriot Guard Riders members.

"I just don't feel like I can leave yet," he said late Thursday.

Mayor says accident one of the worst events in Midland's history

By Meredith Moriak
mmoriak@mrt.com

What started as a celebration honoring American heroes and their wives ended in tragedy.

"It's obviously a real sad day for Midland, Texas. This may be one of the most tragic events we've had in our town," said Mayor Wes Perry during a press conference at the Midland Police Department on Thursday night.

"This was a horrific event that started with an evening to honor those heroes, just as we should," said Midland Police Department Chief Price Robinson.

Perry had visited with the 24 wounded veterans and their spouses during Thursday's Show of Support luncheon at the Commemorative Air Force and said he was shocked by what happened.

"I was able to meet these heroes and shake their hands," Perry said. "It was an honor to be in their presence. These guys are true American heroes."

Many Midlanders responded by donating blood Thursday night, and other than that, Perry said all Midlanders can do is pray for these individuals, their families and first responders.

Organizations in Midland are working to provide the families with counseling and services, Robinson said.

"Many of them are from out of town, and in a foreign city. We're just trying to do what we can for those people. They're great people and we want to comfort them at this tragic time," Robinson said.

Reader reactions from Facebook

"People, not to sound heartless, things happen for reasons beyond our control. Be it good or bad. The best we can do at a time like this is comfort those who are greatly affected by this unfortunate tragedy. I'll pray for those who have lost loved ones and hope everyone will be OK."

WRECK

From 1A

Clergy and other volunteers arrived at the DoubleTree, where the families were staying, late into the night to provide support after the accident. Many said they had heard the news and stopped by to see if they could be of assistance.

"I wouldn't expect Midland to act any other way," said Donny McClure, a Show of Support director. "This is a time when the entire community, state and country comes together to pray for families who are in need beyond description."

Accident briefs

What is Show of Support?

Show of Support, which is based in Midland, works to show wounded military men and women they're appreciated.

This year's event was to honor 25 wounded servicemen with a banquet and an all-expenses paid white tail deer hunting trip (the Hunt for Heroes) while their spouses are treated to a variety of events in Midland.

This was the ninth year for the Show of Support events. The president and founder of Show of Support is Terry Johnson.

Red Cross

Personnel of American Red Cross of the Permian Basin were handing water and snacks to emergency responders Thursday evening as they worked the scene of a train crash that killed four and injured 16.

There will be a meeting about establishing a fund to assist the victims of the fatal train accident in the coming days, said Stephanie Murphee, executive director.

Faith-based support

Churches and faith counselors from across Midland reached out to family members of victims by opening their doors and providing spiritual counseling.

First Baptist Church of Midland had rooms, food and water for any family members or visitors here for the event. Hank Henry, associate minister of missions, said veterans from Midland and Odessa came to the church to provide water for anyone who might show up.

Mark Dettman, chaplain for Midland Police Department, Midland Fire Department, and Midland County Sheriff's Office, was available for faith counseling at the DoubleTree by Hilton, where victims and family members were staying.

"We need everyone in the community to pray for these folks," Dettman said.

Dettman was on call at Midland Memorial Hospital earlier Thursday night to speak with family members of victims and those in need of spiritual counseling.

Several pastors from Midland area churches also were available for counseling, Dettman said.

There was "a lot of faith" there, he said.

Texas' budget capped at $77.9B for 2014-15 year

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Texas Legislative Budget Board set a $77.9 billion cap on state spending Thursday for the 2014-15 budget year, a 10 percent increase above the current discretionary spending limit.

But Republican leaders said the actual state budget likely will be less. Gov. Rick Perry and his allies have said they want to limit spending increases to population growth plus inflation. Ursula Parks, the budget board's director, told lawmakers that experts estimate that rate will be 9.85 percent in 2014-15.

The spending cap is based on the economic forecasts of state revenues over the next two years. The final cap, though, will be set by State Comptroller Susan Combs in January when she issues an official revenue estimate for 2014-15.

Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst, who presides over the Senate, said his chamber will produce an appropriations bill where spending increases are limited to that rate, and bragged that Texas ranks 49th in the nation in terms of per capita state spending.

Democratic state Rep. Sylvester Turner, vice chairman of the House finance committee, objected to making commitments before the 2013 legislative session even begins.

"I would urge everyone here — including myself — not to write a budget sitting around this table today and commit ourselves to a position that may not be in the best interests of the state of Texas," Turner said. I don't think we are in the best position right now to place limits on what we are going to do in a session that is yet to start."

The Legislative Budget Board writes the first draft of the state budget every two years, and then lawmakers haggle over an appropriations bill during the session, which begins in January. The Texas House and Senate take turns drafting the initial appropriations bill; in 2013, the Senate will produce the first-draft of the bill.

During the 2011 session, the Republican-led Legislature had to cut $15 billion in state spending, targeting $5.4 billion in school funding and shorting health programs for the poor and disabled by $4.7 billion.

Lawmakers will have to cover that shortfall for Medicaid by March 2013 and will need to deal with at least $7 billion in additional spending for Medicaid over the next two years.

Democrats also want to restore the spending cut from public schools, who have sued the state claiming the state's system for funding public schools is unconstitutional.

Despite the big jump in expected revenue, lawmakers will still have to make tough decisions and cut some programs. Republicans also appear to have adopted the inflation plus population growth limit as an article of conservative values.

State education chief: Rate schools on minority progress

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas' new education commissioner said Thursday that he is considering a new system for rating school success and he thinks it should take into account how well districts are closing the achievement gap between Anglo and minority students.

Michael Williams made his first appearance before the State Board of Education since Gov. Rick Perry appointed him to the job in August. He said he plans to change how schools are rated by March 2013.

Presently, schools and districts are rated and ranked according to student performance on state-mandated standardized tests. School officials complain it's an all-or-nothing program based on 30 different tests. If schools fail in one area, they are labeled "academically unacceptable."

Williams said he is considering a system that would establish a rating index with four indicators: student progress, student achievement, student post-graduation preparedness and progress in closing the gap for minority and economically disadvantaged students.

"In a state that is 60 percent economically disadvantaged and 60 percent black and brown, we've got to be concerned about closing that racial achievement gap because, indeed our demographics are changing," Williams told the board.

He said in calculating the index, he is inclined to give more weight to how well schools improve student performance than the other three indicators.

According to the latest figures available from the Texas Education Agency, 92 percent of white students graduated on time in 2011, compared to 82 percent of Hispanics and 81 percent of African-Americans. Poverty played a role in those results, as only 84 percent of economically disadvantaged children graduated.

Every year, the proportion of minority and economically disadvantaged students increases, and schools say these students require more intensive instruction at a time when the state has cut per-student funding.

Meanwhile, lawmakers have required tougher tests for graduation.

Williams said he is confident Texas schools can meet the growing challenge and better accountability should encourage them to improve.

ICE agent settles harassment lawsuit

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A senior agent for Immigration and Customs Enforcement and the government have agreed to settle a discrimination lawsuit, according a court record filed Thursday.

In a two-sentence notice, a lawyer for ICE Agent James T. Hayes Jr. said the "parties have come to an agreement in principal" to settle the case for $175,000.

Hayes' attorney in Maryland, Morris Fischer, wrote that along with the money, "a formal settlement agreement will be executed within the next several days" that will include other conditions, including Hayes keeping his job.

Petraeus' departure raises interesting questions

■ Certainly, the rules others have followed didn't apply to the former CIA director.

CAL THOMAS
Tribune Media Services

The resignation of CIA Director David Petraeus over an extramarital affair has raised and will continue to raise a number of questions.

First among them (OK, maybe not first, national security being more important, but stay with me) is why should he have resigned? I am always amused when journalists use the words "sex scandal" when writing about such things. Having abandoned most standards for what used to be called "upright behavior," culture now "tsk-tsks" when someone is caught in a compromising position.

Bill Clinton didn't have to resign after the Monica Lewinsky scandal. He lied about their assignations under oath, for which he was later impeached by the House, but not convicted by the Senate. His liaisons in public office were legion, stretching back at least to his time as governor of Arkansas. Petraeus' dalliance appears to have been a one-off. Is there a different standard, and if so, based on what?

The late Sen. Edward Kennedy's sexual liberalism was well-known and he wasn't forced to resign. In fact, he repeatedly won re-election, despite his predilections. The sexual practices of numerous Republican and Democratic members of Congress over many years have forced some to quit. Others lost elections, but some are still in Congress and have survived whatever wrath remains for such things.

In our anything-goes culture, what are the rules for public officials? Avoiding the potential for blackmail is certainly one, which is a crucial issue in the Petraeus matter, as well as whether Paula Broadwell, his biographer and mistress, had access to classified CIA information. In his resignation letter Petraeus cited "poor judgment" as a major reason for quitting. If poor judgment is the standard, rush-hour traffic in Washington would be a lot easier because there would be fewer government officials around clogging up the roads.

Then there is the potential political fallout. Petraeus backed the Obama administration's timeline for the terrorist attack in Benghazi, Libya, which killed four Americans, and he had been summoned to testify before the House Foreign Affairs Committee about the details, a summons he declined following his resignation. He has since reversed his decision and will now testify. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton won't be there, though. She has a "scheduling conflict." Coincidental? Both Clinton and Petraeus should be compelled to tell what they know and when they knew it, or be embarrassed by being forced to plead the Fifth.

Now, back to sex. Culture promotes all sorts of pre- and extramarital activity as exciting, even commonplace. So how is a high-profile public official to know what is tolerable and what is an offense that can lead to resignation, firing, or impeachment? Divorce is another matter, as most spouses don't tolerate adultery well.

Wouldn't it be helpful to have a guidebook? Are there separate guidelines for military and civilian personnel? Should it be tied to one's security clearance? If the secretary of agriculture, say, is engaged in an adulterous relationship, would that be a lesser offense than adultery by the CIA director, or the secretary of defense? Should one stay in office and the others resign?

What would Carrie Bradshaw advise?

WTOP radio in Washington has compiled a partial list of notorious Washington sex scandals (http://wtop.com/862/3111171/A-scandalous-tour-through-DC) for those interested (and you know you are).

My favorite is the story of Maj. Gen. Daniel Sickles, a colorful antebellum politician and later Union general during the Civil War. In 1859, when he became aware of his wife's affair with Philip Barton Key, U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, Sickles ambushed Key in Lafayette Square, across from the White House, shooting and killing him in broad daylight in front of a dozen witnesses.

Sickles' attorney argued for acquittal based on "temporary aberration of mind." The jury agreed. Sickles was acquitted and went on to serve the Union bravely, winning a Medal of Honor.

Apparently, standards were a lot different then.

Cornyn's rise up the Republican ranks will benefit Texas

Laurels

■ For Jones Elementary School second-grade teachers for getting their students involved in community service. Kudos to April Smith and her Jones colleagues for teaching these youngsters the importance of helping others. The kids also deserve a pat on the back for their desire to help. We hope your community service dinner was a huge success and can become an annual event.

■ For Gene Needham, the first Midlander to be named to the board of directors of Texas CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocates). Needham and his wife, Becky, have volunteered for CASA of West Texas for 13 years. During that time they worked on 17 cases involving 38 children. Thus, Needham "understands firsthand the challenges — and rewards — of speaking up in court and in the child welfare system to make profound differences for children in care," said Vicki Spriggs, CEO of Texas CASA. We applaud the Texas Instruments retiree for his commitment to children who need someone to speak out for them.

■ For the National Philanthropy Day honorees. On Thursday, the Permian Basin chapter of the Association of Fundraising Professionals honored six for outstanding philanthropic endeavors at the 19th annual National Philanthropy Day luncheon.

The were the Saulsbury family (Outstanding Philanthropic Family), Atmos Energy (Outstanding Philanthropic Organization), Kent Cos. (Outstanding Business), Kenye Kay Butts (Outstanding Volunteer Fundraiser), Trinity School senior girls (Outstanding Youth in Philanthropy) and Violet Singh (Outstanding Fundraising Professional).

■ For football coaches Craig Yenzer, of Midland High, and James Morton, of Lee. We want to be on record that Midland High and Lee are fortunate to have their respective football coaches. The playoffs weren't in the cards for the schools this year, but the programs couldn't be in better hands.

■ For Sen. John Cornyn: Being named the deputy leader in the Senate is a boon for Texas in two ways. First, we know our state's interests will be served with a person having such influence sitting at the proverbial table.

Second, Cornyn's values are consistent with what so many in our state. For years, he was worked behind the scenes as a party leader. Now he is front and center, and we expect Cornyn will rise to the occasion.

Mexico won't get help in make-over

■ If officials are expecting Mexican-Americans in the United States to be ambassadors to Mexico, they might want to think twice.

RUBEN NAVARRETTE
Washington Post Writers Group

MEXICO CITY —

In the United States, some on the nativist fringe suspect that Mexican-Americans are reconquistas.

As if we're agents of the Mexican government working quietly to undermine U.S. sovereignty in the Southwest and hasten the day when that real estate reverts to its previous owner. That's loco.

But here in the most populous city in North America, I've just heard a competing argument that is just as far-fetched. Some Mexican politicians and intellectuals now want to bestow another title upon the estimated 35 million Mexican-Americans who live north of the border: ambassador. They want us to represent Mexico, and its people, in the United States.

I've come to Mexico City as part of a delegation of Mexican-American and American Jewish leaders organized by the Latino and Latin American Institute of the American Jewish Committee, a global Jewish advocacy organization, with the goal of strengthening relations between Latinos and Jews in the United States.

Perhaps Mexicans view Jewish people as the model. They see American Jews advocating for Israel and sending millions of dollars to the Holy Land to build schools, museums and hospitals, and they want the same things from Mexican-Americans living in the United States. After all, they say, both groups are part of the diaspora — people forced to live outside their ancestral homeland who have historically been subject to prejudice.

Speaking of ancestral homelands, I've come back to the country where my grandfather was born — at almost the centennial of that destiny-altering moment when a young boy and his family crossed what was at the time little more than a line in the dirt and started a new chapter in the United States.

The hundreds of thousands of Mexicans who fled their country during the Mexican Revolution, from 1910 to 1920, weren't so much immigrants as refugees. Many of them didn't come just for better lives but, literally, to save their lives.

Now, as their children and grandchildren take their place in American society, some Mexicans are calling the new generations to come back — at least in spirit. They want Mexican-Americans to reconnect with Mexico.

"We need a closer relationship with the Mexican-American community in the U.S., because there is a tremendous opportunity there," Luis de la Calle, a scholar and political analyst, told us. "We need to make an effort so that this community sees Mexico as an asset. And Mexico needs to see the Mexican-American community in the U.S. as an asset — in terms of business, of course, but also in terms of representing Mexico in the U.S. We need to see Mexican-Americans as our ambassadors. It's a difficult thing for Mexicans to accept, but that is exactly the way we should see them."

Timeout. How about we take a minute and consider how Mexican-Americans see Mexicans and, for that matter, Mexico? This ambassador thing isn't just difficult for Mexicans to accept. For many Mexican-Americans, it'll be a nonstarter.

One Mexican-American in the delegation pushed back against the idea. If we are ambassadors for Mexico, he told de la Calle, then we are "ambassadors without portfolio." Part of the reason, he said, is that we have a "love-hate relationship" with Mexicans who often consider us to be "not Mexican enough."

That's absolutely right. Those in the Mexican ruling class were indifferent to our parents and grandparents, and now they're insulting to us. Our Spanish will never be good enough, our roots never strong enough.

I'm not alone in my resentment. Show me a Mexican-American, and I'll show you someone with a family tree that includes an expatriate who fled to the north because Mexico had nothing to offer. For many of us, the grudge endures.

Ironically, many of the economic opportunities that Mexico now enjoys come from expatriates living in the north — the dishwashers in Las Vegas, the housekeepers in Phoenix, the gardeners in Dallas. These expatriates send home more than $20 billion in remittances. It's a generous gift that helps sustain the Mexican economy, but many of the Mexican elite are too proud to acknowledge it. They like to think they're the ones keeping Mexico afloat.

Now, Mexican officials want to enlist Mexican-Americans to help give Mexico a makeover. The relationship is still an open wound, and yet they expect us — the children and grandchildren of the throwaways — to open our wallets.

That's not going to happen, amigos. First, acknowledge the wound. And do whatever you can to heal it. Then we'll talk.

Top GOP leaders say Romney didn't offer specifics

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Top Republicans meeting for the first time since Election Day say the party failed to unseat President Barack Obama because nominee Mitt Romney did not respond to criticism strongly enough or outline a specific agenda with a broad appeal.

In conversations at the Republican Governors Association meeting in Las Vegas, a half dozen party leaders predicted the GOP will lose again if it keeps running the same playbook based on platitudes in place of detailed policies. Instead, these leaders asserted, the party needs to learn the lessons from its loss, respect voters' savvy and put forward an agenda that appeals beyond the white, male voters who are its base.

"We need to acknowledge the fact that we got beat," Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal said in an interview. "We clearly got beat and we need to recognize that."

Little more than a week after Romney came up short in his presidential bid, the party elders were looking at his errors and peering ahead to 2016's race. Some of the contenders eying a White House run of their own were on hand and quietly considering their chances. New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie scheduled a private meeting on the sidelines with Haley Barbour, the former Mississippi governor who is widely seen as one of the GOP's sharpest political operatives.

"We need to have a brutal, brutally honest assessment of everything we did," Barbour said. "We need to take everything apart ... and determine what we did that worked and what we did that didn't work."

Other potential White House contenders such as Jindal, Virginia Gov. Bob McDonnell and Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker were outlining a vision for the party in coming elections.

Analysis: Only ritual talk on fiscal cliff so far

By David Epso
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When President Barack Obama greets congressional leaders at the White House on Friday, an elaborate set of postelection rituals will be complete. Yet divided government's ability to attack the nation's economic woes is no clearer now than it has been for months.

Eventually, something's got to give in a country where voters are weary of gridlock and wearier still of high unemployment.

Or does it?

"I'm open to compromise and I'm open to new ideas," Obama said at his White House news conference on Wednesday. He stressed the importance of avoiding the "fiscal cliff," a double whammy of tax increases and spending cuts at the turn of the year.

Up to a point.

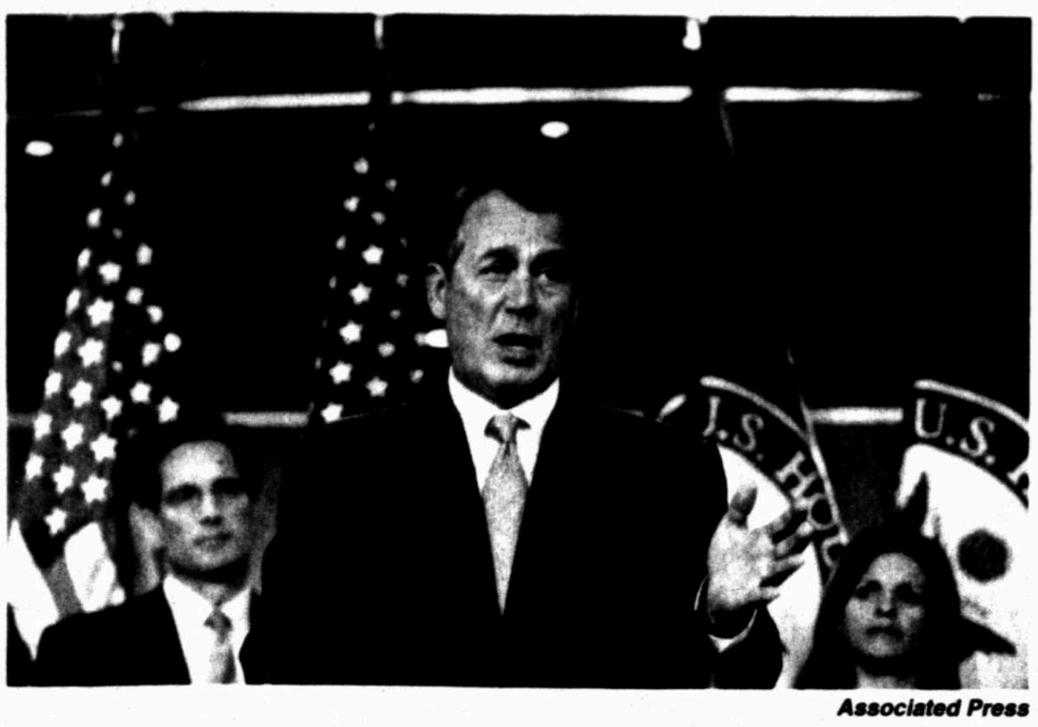

He referred more than once to his defeat of Republican Mitt Romney, saying, "I argued for a balanced, responsible approach, and part of that included making sure that the wealthiest Americans pay a little bit more."

"By the way, more voters agreed with me on this issue than voted for me," he added, a reminder to Republicans that some of their supporters, too, disagree with the party's position.

House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, also regularly stresses a willingness to reach across the aisle, citing the emergence of a "spirit of cooperation" since the election that he said bodes well for an agreement.

Like Obama, he avoids definitive answers to hypothetical questions. "I don't want to box myself in. I don't want to box anyone else in," he said recently.

Yet also like the president, Boehner has laid down a marker for the talks ahead: "Raising tax rates is unacceptable," he said referring to Obama's campaign-long call to allow rates to rise on incomes over $200,000 for individuals and $250,000 for couples.

Associated Press

Speaker of the House John Boehner, R-Ohio, speaks to reporters after the House Republicans voted for their leadership for the next session of Congress at the Capitol in Washington on Wednesday. He is flanked by Majority Leader Eric Cantor, R-Va., left, and Rep. Lynn Jenkins, R-Kan., right.

Both sides take credit for concessions, none of them particularly new.

In talks that came close to a deal in 2011, Obama said he was willing to make significant cuts in the growth of benefit programs like Medicare and Medicaid, infuriating liberals. Boehner spoke of as much as $800 billion in new revenue, angering conservatives.

The talks eventually collapsed.

Now White House Press Secretary Jay Carney said Obama will ask for $1.6 trillion in new taxes over a decade when the talks resume after Friday morning's meeting at the White House.

It's an opening bid, not a demand, part of the standard ritual for such occasions as is the rhetoric from both sides.

Barring legislation, taxes will rise on nearly everyone on Jan. 1, and a series of across-the-board spending cuts will take effect, a combination known as the "fiscal cliff" that many economists say could send the economy back into recession.

That sounds ominous, and if nothing else, neither party wants to bear the responsibility if it happens.

Yet government, particularly divided government, has a curious relationship with deadlines.

On the one hand, they focus compromise efforts, and can result in an agreement.

Yet just as often, they lead to interim half-measures that set a new deadline for the final day of reckoning.

The fiscal cliff itself is an example.

Republicans used the threat of an unprecedented federal default to win about $1 trillion in spending cuts over 10 years from Obama and Democrats in 2011. The same agreement set up a deficit "super committee" to seek more and bigger deficit savings. That effort ignominiously failed a year ago, leaving in place a series of automatic across-the-board spending cuts timed to coincide with the scheduled expiration of tax cuts at the turn of the year.

As always in the run-up to negotiations, the two sides vie for leverage.

Hence, Boehner is fond of pointing out that while the president may have a mandate, so, too, the House Republicans, who renewed their majority in last week's elections.

Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky is more pointed. "Most people may focus on the White House, but the fact is the government is organized no differently today than it was after the Republican wave of 2010," he said earlier in the week.

Not exactly.

In other areas, numerous Republicans have made it clear they are ready to talk compromise — from a position of electoral weakness.

Despite the claim of a dual mandate, Boehner has signaled the end of efforts to repeal Obama's health care legislation, a cause that animated the tea party and united Republicans who swept to power in the House two years ago.

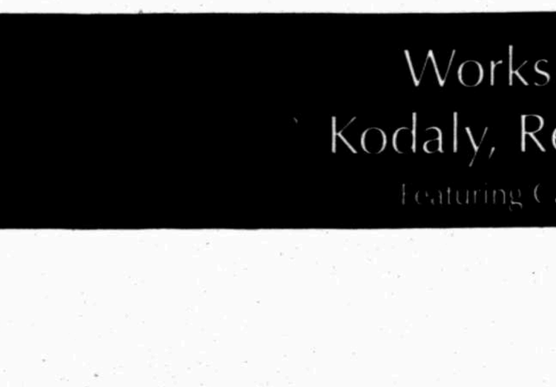

Numerous Republicans in Congress and among the nation's governors say the party must appeal more effectively to Hispanic voters, who account for an ever-increasing share of the electorate and gave Obama more than 70 percent of their votes this fall. Already there are the first stirrings of compromise talks on an overhaul of immigration law, to include a pathway to legal status if not citizenship for millions who are in the country illegally.

The "tone and rhetoric" employed by Republicans in recent debates over immigration have "built a wall between the Republican Party and Hispanic community," Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C. conceded a few days after the election.

So much for Romney's statement in last winter's primaries that illegal immigrants can self-deport.

Immigration legislation will wait until 2013 at least.

By then, Obama and Congress will show whether the election produced a government more inclined to compromise, or to more gridlock.

Post office reports record loss of $15.9B for year

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The struggling U.S. Postal Service on Thursday reported an annual loss of a record $15.9 billion and forecast more red ink in 2013, capping a tumultuous year in which it was forced to default on billions in payments to avert bankruptcy.

The financial losses for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 were more than triple the $5.1 billion loss in the previous year. Having reached its borrowing limit, the mail agency is operating with little cash on hand, putting it at risk in the event of an unexpectedly large downturn in the economy.

"It's critical that Congress do its part and pass comprehensive legislation before they adjourn this year to move the Postal Service further down the path toward financial health," said Postmaster General Patrick Donahoe, calling the situation "our own postal fiscal cliff."

Much of the red ink in 2012 was due to mounting mandatory costs for future retiree health benefits, which made up $11.1 billion of the losses. Without that and other related labor expenses, the mail agency sustained an operating loss of $2.4 billion, lower than the previous year.

Donahoe said the post office has been able to reduce costs significantly by boosting worker productivity. But he said the mail agency has been hampered by congressional inaction on a postal overhaul bill that would allow it to eliminate Saturday mail delivery and reduce its $5 billion annual payment for future health benefits.

"We cannot sustain large losses indefinitely. Major defaults are unsettling," said Donahoe, who made clear that the Postal Service would now be profitable had Congress acted earlier this year.

Earlier this year, the post office defaulted on two of the health prepayments for the first time in its history.

The Postal Service, an independent agency, does not receive tax money for its day-to-day operations but is subject to congressional control.

The Senate passed a postal bill in April that would have provided financial relief in part by reducing the annual health payments and providing a multibillion-dollar cash infusion, basically a refund of overpayments the Postal Service made to a federal pension fund. The House, however, remains stalled over its own legislation that would allow for aggressive cuts, including an immediate end to Saturday delivery.

It remained unclear whether House leadership would take up the postal bill in its current lame-duck session. Rural lawmakers are resisting action, worried about closures of postal facilities in their communities. Congress is focused now on a Jan. 1 deadline to avert across-the-board tax increases and spending cuts known as the "fiscal cliff."

While urging quick congressional action, the Postal Service acknowledged the uncertainty in its legal filings on Thursday, which anticipate that Congress will fail to act. But Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., who chairs the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee and is a sponsor of the House bill, has said he believes postal legislation can be passed this year.

"The U.S. Postal Service is clearly marching toward a financial collapse of its own," said Sen. Tom Carper, D-Del., a sponsor of the Senate bill. "I am hopeful that now that the elections are over, my colleagues and I can come together and pass postal reform legislation so that a final bill can be signed into law by the end of the year."

Overall, the post office had operating revenue of $65.2 billion in fiscal 2012, down $500 million from the previous year. Expenses climbed to $81 billion, up from $70.6 billion, largely due to the health prepayments. The annual payment of roughly $5.6 billion had been deferred for a year in 2011, resulting in a double payment totaling $11.1 billion that became due this year. The Postal Service is the only government agency required to make such payments.

The post office also has been rocked by declining mail volume as people and businesses continue switching to email and other online options in place of letters and paper bills. The number of items mailed in the last year was 159.9 billion pieces, a 5 percent decrease. Much of the decline came in first-class mail.

On the plus side, the mail agency reported that its fast-growing shipping services, which include express and priority mail, grew by 9 percent, helping to offset much of the declining revenue from first-class mail.

Volunteers to hand out free turkeys

■ Teen Flow, Life Church to give away 400 frozen turkeys today at Taylor Park.

By Audrie Palmer
apalmer@mrt.com

He gave first, and this is why they give now.

That will be the message today as Teen Flow Ministries and Life Church volunteers gather at Taylor Park in Midland tonight to pass out 400 free turkeys to those in need of the traditional Thanksgiving meat.

During the month of October, Teen Flow youth have been asking friends and family members for donations and selling cakes in bake sales to raise the money to purchase the frozen turkeys.

The event was started five years ago when 150 to 200 turkeys were given out. Last year, there were 500 turkeys distributed in the city, said Life Church pastor Jay Marquez.

"It was mainly started to share the Gospel in a season that's special like Thanksgiving," he said. "We want to show the community how appreciative we are and, as a ministry, we wanted to give back."

The first year, the group went out to the park and just passed out the turkeys to anyone there. Then two years ago, they started a program with a praise and worship band and registration system in order to get the Gospel message out.

The message follows the Scripture of John 3:16: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son. That whosoever believes in him, will not perish but have everlasting life."

This year, the Teen Flow praise and worship team will perform a few songs before a Mariachi band to entertains the crowd and a dance team takes to the stage.

Following those performances, a 10-minute devotional will be shared before the distribution of the turkeys. Registration for the event begins at 5 p.m. with the turkeys being passed out at 6 p.m.

Marquez said the group had

NO ROOM AT THE INN

Church hosts Nativity display to benefit homeless families

■ More than 400 nativities on display during annual fundraiser for Family Promise.

By Audrie Palmer
apalmer@mrt.com

When Donna Edney watched the movie "The Nativity," she gathered that Mary and Joseph were asked by God to do so many different things and they did them without question.

"They were trusting in him even when they had no home. They were literally homeless when she gave birth," she said.

"It was very, very humbling and trusting and it's an innocence and trust that maybe some of us have lost."

Many people today would never know what would happen if they were homeless, Edney said.

"Would I be able to trust God? Would I be despairing?" she said are questions many probably would ask themselves.

Edney serves as a board member for Family Promise of Midland, a local nonprofit organization that works with homeless families to help them get back on their feet. Currently, the organization is hosting 14 individuals — the maximum for the agency — and with the housing crunch in West Texas, it's getting harder for the families they assist to find affordable housing in the area.

That's why on Saturday the organization will host its third annual "No Room at the Inn" fundraiser to benefit the agency and families.

The event, which will feature more than 400 Nativity sets on display, is 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Grace Presbyterian Church. Cost of admission is $5 for adults and $1 for children.

There also will be punch and snacks, silent auction items and a "Bethlehem" Nativity quilt by Lona Schwab auctioned off at 3:30 p.m. The quilt is the third one Schwab has donated in recent years.

The Nativity scenes come from local collections, including the more than 100 that Edney herself will display. This year, she's added five more to her personal assortment.

"There are a number of people who are sort of like me, who find out that you like something and they give it to you as a gift," she said of how her collection has

Are Christians fighting for our way or God's way?

■ God didn't promise Christians would be political majority.

MIKE GOEKE
associate pastor at Stonegate Fellowship

During election years, we often see Christians speaking of the collective moral fiber of our country as being tied to the religion of political office holders. In a broader sense, it seems many Christians believe laws and ideals that line up with general Christian principals somehow give us, as a country, the label of "Christian."

When politics and culture and Christianity are merged like they have been yet again in this election season, I find myself questioning the general response of Christianity to cultural shifts that go (or seem to go) against biblical values. It seems to me we all have a tendency to get distracted by what might appear to be attacks on our faith. We like to be in the majority. We like culture to validate our faith. We like to be popular. Yet, nothing in the Bible points to a Christian majority or cultural acceptance of our beliefs. And nothing in God's word sets us up to be popular.

Rather than sweeping majorities and popular influence and laws that line up with Scripture, we are promised to be odd, persecuted outcasts who leave all, die to all, endure all and serve all for the cause of Christ. We are not called to lead people to shiny churches designed to meet all their needs. We are called to lead people to the way, and we are told that very few will actually walk through the narrow gate that is the life in Christ.

Western, cultural Christianity has distracted us. We have forgotten our calling. Our calling is not to clean up society. Our calling is not to overthrow government or legislate morality or tie tax and survivor benefits to the biblical truth of marriage. Those things may not be bad in and of themselves, but in many ways, we have become distracted from our true call, to make disciples, and our true job, to be agents of reconciliation. Our job as Christians is to help reconcile a lost and disconnected world back into relationship with God through Christ. And now, as we slip further and further out of cultural acceptance and dominance, we are becoming scattered and unfocused. We are more concerned about sanitizing our world, instead of reaching the world with the amazing love of Jesus Christ. We are jumping through man-made hoops, instead of carefully navigating the narrow way of Christ.

Over the years we have gained power and cultural influence. Instead of standing out from culture, we began to fit comfortably in to culture. We faced little opposition to our bold assertions of our belief system. Our faith cost us nothing. In fact, here in the South, Christianity and church were entries into business and society. As culture began to shift away from Judeo-Christian values, we began to react. In our reaction, we began to look less and less like Jesus. We began to assert our rights instead of under-grown over the years.

Edney started collecting in the 1970s when she was living in Germany and visited a museum in Munich where she saw a huge display with whole villages and dioramas of the Nativities. German artists in the area did a lot of Christmas ornaments and decorations and it was something she purchased for her mother while she was there.

"You just get one and then you see another one and before you know it," she said.

Last year, out of the more than 400 on display, Edney found it interesting that there were only about six duplicates. The majority of the Nativities displayed during the event were unique, including ones that were hand-carved from Ethiopia and Uganda and some made from olive wood that were purchased from the Holy Land.

"It's really a diverse collection. Last year, we had three Nativity sets that were displayed from three different churches. They range from being an inch tall to some over 3 feet," she said.

This year, Edney traveled to Alaska where she purchased a Nativity made by a local artist that features an igloo and a polar bear. While in Alaska, Edney also purchased a Nativity from Russia that is in the shape of a box.

A friend of hers who visited Italy picked one up for her, and last week a friend in Denver sent Edney a nativity from Germany.

Edney said she also bought one locally at the Midland Downtown Farmer's Market earlier this summer made by local woodcarver Robert Carouth.

But her favorite nativity, she said, is one she picked out herself about 18 or 19 years ago while on a trip to Peru.

It features a man's hands that are formed into a crib and the people and figures beneath those hands are made out of unadorned clay. The piece is very rustic but serves as a reminder of what the Nativity scene is all about.

"It looks as if it's the hands of God protecting the holy family," she said.

TURKEYS

looked at other local organizations that provide food around the holidays and realized that while some groups were giving out food boxes to provide a Thanksgiving meal, there were no groups distributing frozen turkeys.

That's when the idea of the service project was birthed.

Tonight's event is one of several that the ministries' youth are involved in. Teenagers at Teen Flow are required to participate in 200 hours of community service. The ministry sends several teams to help with local groups, such as Keep Midland Beautiful, throughout the year.

But Marquez said they still don't want to lose sight of why they're serving the community: To remind Midlanders that Jesus Christ gave first.

"We do it to show Christ's love and give back to the community," he said. "It's also a selfish act because when you see the families upon receiving a simple turkey and having them know that someone cares for them, the reaction on their face is just priceless.

"It keeps us coming back."

For more information, about today's event call Life Church at 686-2525 or visit online at www.lifemidland.com.

GOEKE

standing that Christianity stripped us of rights. We began to demand acceptance instead of graciously enduring rejection. Some of us fought to protect societal acknowledgement of our way of life. Others of us began to redefine our Christianity in the hope that society would accept something new and more palatable.

We, essentially, began to panic. And in our panic, we began to manipulate. We became legalistic and behavior-focused in order to scare people to our side. Or we became licentious and vague in an attempt to lure people to our side. In our manipulation, we lost our true message. We forgot that God is not concerned about whether a country looks or acts Christian any more than he is concerned about whether a person looks or acts Christian. He is concerned about the hearts and souls of people. And Jesus imparted to us his mission — his mission to connect lost and desperate and hurting people with God through himself.

To be an agent of reconciliation we have to see value in our own reconciled relationship with God. We have to know the magnitude of what it means that we, fallen and broken and born through the sin of Adam, have the opportunity to be in relationship with the holy, pure, sovereign creator and God of the universe. And we have to know the joy and peace and fulfillment that come as a result of that relationship. We have to delight in our present relationship with God and we have to see at least a glimpse of the hope of what it promises to become. We have to know Jesus, too — not just know what he tells us to do and what not to do.

There is a very real possibility many who claim to follow Christ will fall away as Christianity becomes less and less culturally acceptable. But as the ranks of professing Christians become smaller, my prayer is our smaller numbers would become more focused on truly being salt and light to a crumbling and very dark world. What if instead of fighting against culture for our own rights, we began to fight for culture for culture's better good? What if instead of fighting for the world to validate us, we did what Jesus told us to do and turned the other cheek, gave them our shirt and loved those who hate and persecute us? What if we, with no strings attached, began to use our God-given gifts of leadership and creativity and finances and time to better public education, influence the arts and care for the poor?

What if the world saw Christians really living differently? We have perhaps claimed a different moral standard, but have we really lived differently? Have we forgiven when the world says to seek revenge? Have we loved sacrificially and unconditionally when others have hated us? Have we honored and served our leaders even when they do not honor our beliefs? Have we shown mercy to those both deserving and undeserving of mercy? Have we fought for all people, even those whose lives are in great contrast to biblical principles, to be treated with respect and dignity?

The body of Christ stands before an open door of opportunity as the world moves further away from cultural Christianity. The door is open for amazing growth and amazing hope and amazing testimony. We don't follow Christ because we get tax benefits or because the 10 Commandments hang on the courthouse walls. We follow Christ because Christ is worthy of our following and because we desire to be part of the work he is doing all over the world. And, just maybe, we will see lives changed, rather than just the surfaces of lives. And all these issues that distract us will assume their proper place. And we, fully reconciled to the living God of the universe, will succeed as God's agents to this world — walking others into the beauty that is the life reconciled to God through Christ.

Albert Jackson Norwood

Albert Jackson Norwood, know to many as "Jay" was called home with our Heavenly Father at the age of 76 on November 9, 2012 in Hamilton, Texas.

He moved to Marble Falls, Texas in 1981 where he continued his passion for building houses, re-models, electrical and plumbing work. Since his enlistment in the United States Navy from 1956-1959, stationed in Istanbul, Turkey is where he started his love for playing the fiddle. His love for Blue Grass music carried him to many "jam sessions" with his companion, JoAnn Herring.

He is survived by a son, Michael Andrew Norwood, of Midland, Texas; a daughter, Glenna Jean Box of Midland, Texas; two sisters, Sandra Kay Duncan of Port Neches, Texas and Leila Evelyn Hall of Llano, Texas; one granddaughter, Porsche Lyn Shelden, of Winston, Oregon; and two great-grandsons, Andrew Kyle Simmons of Midland, Texas and Mason Riley Evans of Winston, Oregon.

As a child, I'd gaze out the window and wait for Daddy to come home. He made our lives complete, and gave us strength and security. Now Daddy's gone with Jesus. His love remains a memory. He waits at Jesus' side, saying, "Come on in my child, your Daddy's home." A crown he's been given, cause he stood great and strong, hand in hand with Jesus around the throne. I long for that land so free. Now Heaven is sweeter to me. I know he can't come back, but I can to him, cause Daddy's home, round God's throne, Daddy's Home.

10 Commandments monument in place at Okla. Capitol

Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — A 6-foot tall granite monument inscribed with the Ten Commandments was installed Thursday on the state Capitol grounds, drawing a harsh reaction from opponents and a legal scholar who question whether the display is constitutional.

The Republican-controlled Legislature authorized the privately funded monument in 2009, and former Democratic Gov. Brad Henry signed the bill into law.

The bill's author, Rep. Mike Ritze, and his family paid about $10,000 for the monument's construction.

"I think it's a beautiful work of art, and it's identical to ones in Texas, Utah and 200 other monuments that have been in place for years," said Ritze, R-Broken Arrow.

A private contractor put the monument in place Thursday morning on the north side of the Capitol building, near an entrance that has been closed for years.

Three years ago, the U.S. 10th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled a similar Ten Commandments monument erected on the Haskell County Courthouse lawn in Stigler was unconstitutional, but the U.S. Supreme Court has authorized a similar monument at the Texas Capitol.

Furious Lady Chap rally falls short vs. Cloud County

Midland College's Achiri Ade shoots a jumper against Cloud County (Kan.) Community College during the WNIT at Chaparral Center. The Lady Chaps lost, 72-71.

Forrest Allen/MC Athletics

By Oscar LeRoy

Meghan Breauer said if her Midland College women's basketball team played the first half like it did the second half, the Lady Chaparrals would have had no problem with Cloud County Community College on Thursday night.

But because No. 20 MC has such an ugly first half and the Lady T-birds made just enough plays down the stretch, Cloud County escaped with a 72-71 victory during first-round action of the Women's National Invitational Tournament at Chaparral Center.

With the loss, the Lady Chaps (3-3) fall into the losers bracket of the tournament and will play Angelina College, an 87-67 loser to No. 2 Central Arizona, at 8 p.m. today. Cloud County (5-1) moves to the winners bracket and will play Central Arizona at 4 p.m. today.

| Lady Chaparrals | 71 |

The Lady Chaps fell into a 40-18 hole at halftime as they shot just 16.7 percent from the floor turned the ball over 14 times and allowed the Lady T-birds to shoot 43 percent.

The nightmarish first-half had head coach Ron Jones dumbfounded and what he was seeing.

"That first half looked exactly what we did in Kansas for three games (earlier in the season)," Jones said. "It was just standing around, it was confusion and not understanding how to play. Every year is different and every team is different and I know that what I saw in the second half, if we can learn to clean that up as far as mistakes and can compete that way then we can, we can compete with almost anybody we play."

Jones said Cloud County's man-to-man half-court defense wasn't the biggest problem for his team. He said a lack of competing hard was the problem and he challenged the Lady Chaps to step up their play.

"I tried to make them understand that they were embarrassing themselves, they were embarrassing our program and it wasn't going to be that way," Jones said. "They responded and they played much harder."

The difference in the team in the second half was evident and eventually the Lady Chaps started crawling back into the game by hitting shots and forcing turnovers. Then a 17-3 run, capped off by a layup by Achiri Ade off a steal, midway through the period helped MC take a 57-53 lead.

Manziel has Aggies riding high in SEC

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — In his Hill Country hometown of Kerrville, Johnny Football never would have been known by such a specific nickname.

Johnny Manziel could also have been Johnny Baseball, maybe Johnny Golf. After all, his high school coach, Mark Smith, says "he could have been anything he wanted to be."

Well, at the moment, the dynamic quarterback for No. 9 Texas A&M is the toast of college football after leading his team to a road upset of then-No. 1 Alabama, the defending national champion that many expected to make another trip to the BCS title game.

All Manziel has done this season is pass for 2,780 yards and 18 touchdowns and run for 1,014 yards and 15 more scores. His team is 8-2 in its first SEC season and, oh yes, Manziel is a freshman — just the second in Bowl Subdivision history with 1,000 yards rushing and 2,000 passing in a season, and he's got all that even before Saturday's game against Sam Houston State.

Manziel

It's been quite a whirlwind few months for the 19-year-old Manziel, who had to compete for the job in camp and wasn't named Texas A&M's starter until Aug. 15.

His work at A&M is reminiscent of his performance at Kerrville Tivy high school. As a senior there, he threw for 3,609 yards and 45 touchdowns, and added 30 more touchdowns on 1,674 yards rushing.

"It's like watching him back in high school, to be quite honest with you," Smith said, calling Manziel a once-in-a-lifetime player. "The things he's doing, they don't amaze me. Maybe a little surprising it's happening this fast against the SEC competition, but it's some of the same things I've seen from him in his high school years."

Smith and Texas A&M coach Kevin Sumlin both say that one of the best things about Manziel is that he's unflappable. A perfect example of his poise came in the first quarter Saturday against Alabama. Manziel nearly fumbled the ball behind the line and the defense was all over him. He evaded the pressure and found Ryan Swope uncovered in the back of the end zone with a 10-yard touchdown pass.

"He's always in control," Smith said. "He doesn't panic and he doesn't get frustrated. He just continues to play."

Sumlin recruited Manziel while he was the coach at Houston, sending current A&M offensive coordinator Kliff Kingsbury out to watch him play. When Kingsbury, a former standout QB at Texas Tech, brought Sumlin video of the game, he wondered why he even bothered.

"I saw the video and it was just a highlight tape," Sumlin said. "I didn't have to watch very much of it. There's

LADY CHAPS

From 1C

"We went on a run and that helped us to get our energy up," said Braeuer, a sophomore transfer from Lon Morris College. "We deserved to win even though we didn't play all that great. I don't know what happened in the first half. ...I guess the jitters from the first home game. I don't really know why we played like we did."

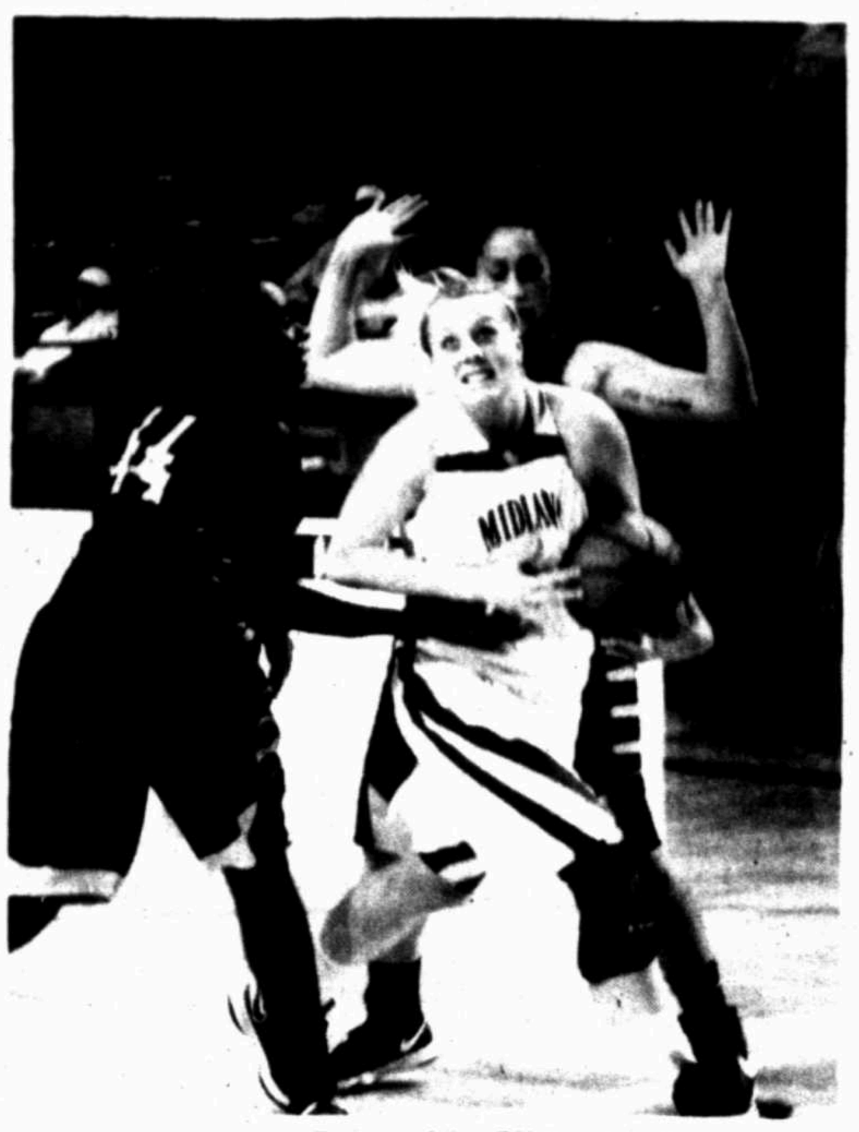

But the Lady T-birds had one last answer as they used a 9-2 run — keyed by a 3-pointer by Raneisha Duncan — to retake control of the game with a 70-66 advantage.

MC had an opportunity to either take the lead or tie it at 70 with 13 seconds left but Braeuer missed a 3-pointer from the top of the key and then Ade missed a pair of free throws.

Ade finished with a double-double with 17 points and 14 rebounds with 15 of her points coming in the second half. Braeuer added 17 points, Tia Dixon had 13 Catherine Kruschke chipped in with 10 points.

For Cloud County, Alessha Coulter had 17 points, including 5 of 8 from 3-point range, Pearlrae Thomas added 16 and Duncan finished with 14.

NO. 1 INDIANA 99
SAM HOUSTON STATE 45

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Christian Watford scored 24 points to help No. 1 Indiana defeat Sam Houston State 99-45 on Thursday night in the Progressive Legends Classic.

Will Sheehey scored 18 points, Victor Oladipo had 14 and Jordan Hulls 10 for the Hoosiers (3-0), who shot 57 percent from the field and made 9 of 21 3-pointers.

Paul Baxter scored nine points and Marquel McKinney had eight for Sam Houston State (1-2). The Bearkats pushed Arkansas before losing their opener 73-68 on the road.

Indiana beat the Bearkats in every possible way. About the only thing Indiana coach Tom Crean could complain about was that the Hoosiers made just 30 of 44 free throws.

The only drama remaining at the end was whether Indiana would score 100 points. The home crowd booed as the Bearkats basically ran out the clock in the final seconds.

NO. 12 ARIZONA 72
TEXAS-EL PASO 51

TUCSON, Ariz. — Mark Lyons scored 17 points, Solomon Hill added 10 and No. 12 Arizona overcame some sloppy ball-handling to beat Texas-El Paso 72-51 Thursday night.

After taking care of the ball in its opener, Arizona (2-0) had some careless moments against UTEP, turning it over 19 times. The Wildcats also fouled a little too much, particularly in the second half, which let the Miners keep it close for a while.

Arizona made up for it by shooting 9 of 18 from 3-point range and dominating the glass, outrebounding the Miners 35-15.

NO. 16 BAYLOR 84
BOSTON COLLEGE 74

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Pierre Jackson had a season-high 31 points, Isaiah Austin had 16 and the Bears rallied in the second half to beat the Eagles in the Charleston Classic.

The Bears (3-0) will face Colorado, the team they beat in last season's NCAA run to the final eight, on Friday for a spot in Sunday night's championship final. Jackson led the way for Baylor with six of his team's 12 3-pointers.

Still, the Bears trailed 52-47 with about 15 minutes to go when Jackson and Austin fueled a 10-0 run to gain control. Austin had two inside baskets, and Jackson two 3-pointers to put Baylor ahead for good.

Boston College (1-1) got 25 points from sophomore Ryan Anderson. The Eagles will play Dayton on Friday.

TEXAS A&M 81
PRAIRIE VIEW 59

COLLEGE STATION — Five Texas A&M players scored in double digits as the Aggies defeated Prairie View A&M 81-59 on Thursday night.

Fabyon Harris scored a game-high 18 points, including making 4 of 6 3-pointers, and he was followed by Ray Turner (17), J'Mychal Reese (15) and Elston Turner and Jordan Green (10 each). Ray Turner led A&M (3-0) with nine rebounds, but the Panthers (2-2) had a 41-34 advantage on the glass.

Jules Montgomery led Prairie View with 12 points. Both teams struggled from the field, as the Aggies shot 44.4 percent (24 of 54) and the Panthers shot 32.8 percent (20 of 61). While the turnover battle was fairly close (Prairie View with 14 and A&M 11) the Aggies outscored the Panthers 21-10 on points off of turnovers.

SMU 64,
TCU 61

FORT WORTH — Jalen Jones scored 21 points, including four 3-pointers, and SMU improved to 2-0 under coach Larry Brown with a 64-61 victory at TCU on Thursday night.

Ryan Manuel added 16 points and Nick Russell 12 for the Mustangs, who held on despite missing five free throws in the last 15 seconds.

Women

NO. 24 TENNESSEE 101
RICE 48

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Meighan Simmons scored 22 points to lead four Lady Vols in double figures as No. 24 Tennessee trounced Rice in the first home game of the post-Pat Summitt era.

Bashaara Graves added 18 points for Tennessee. Isabelle Harrison scored 16 points with 12 rebounds, and Kamiko Williams added 12 points.

Jessica Kuster scored 16 points and Megan Palmer had 15 for Rice (1-1).

Hope fading for deal to save NHL season

Associated Press

TORONTO — Negotiations had already hit a wall in the ongoing hockey labor fight, and now the NHL has suggested the sides take an official two-week break before getting back to the bargaining table.

NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman floated the idea of a break to players' association executive director Donald Fehr. The union hasn't responded to the league yet, but the players maintained their position on Thursday night that they are ready and willing to meet at any time, and the only way to reach a deal to end the long lockout is to keep talking and negotiating.

"Gary suggested the possibility of a two-week moratorium," NHL deputy commissioner Bill Daly wrote in an email to The Associated Press on Thursday night. "I'm disappointed because we don't have a negotiating partner that has any genuine interest in reaching an agreement. Zero interest."

The suggestion of a break was first reported by The Canadian Press on Thursday night.

With no new negotiations scheduled, and communication in general shutting down, the NHL appears to be getting closer to calling off more games, putting the entire hockey season in jeopardy.

"I hope not, but I'm more discouraged now than I have been at any point in the process," Daly said. "I responded to Don saying he did not know how to proceed from here."

The sides put on a push to make an agreement last week when they met over six consecutive days in New York. However, Friday's session ended with a heated exchange, and talks lasted only about an hour on Sunday.

The 61-day lockout has already claimed 327 regular-season games, including the New Year's Day outdoor Winter Classic, and more could be wiped out within a week. It is believed that an agreement would need to be in place by the end of next week for the season to get under way on Dec. 1.

Miguel Cabrera, Buster Posey win MVP awards

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Miguel Cabrera has a Most Valuable Player award to go with his Triple Crown. And Buster Posey has an MVP prize to put alongside his second World Series ring.

The pair of batting champions won baseball's top individual honors Thursday by large margins.

Cabrera, the first Triple Crown winner in 45 years, won the AL MVP by receiving 22 of 28 first-place votes and 362 points from a panel of Baseball Writers' Association of America.

The Detroit third baseman easily beat Los Angeles Angels rookie center fielder Mike Trout, who had six firsts and 281 points.

Cabrera hit .330 with 44 homers and 139 RBIs to become the first Triple Crown winner since Boston's Carl Yastrzemski in 1967. Cabrera also led the league with a .606 slugging percentage for the AL champion Tigers.

Some of the more sabermetric-focused fans supported Trout, who hit .326 with 30 homers and 83 RBIs, and he led the majors with 129 runs and 49 steals and topped all players in WAR — Wins Above Replacement. Trout won AL Rookie of the Year earlier in the week.

"I was a little concerned. I thought the new thing about computer stuff, I thought Trout's going to win because they put his numbers over me," Cabrera said. "I was like relax. ... if he wins, it's going to be fair because he had a great season."

His victory is a win for the traditional statistics.

"At the end of the game, it's going to be the same baseball played back in the day," Cabrera said.

Posey, at a charity event at his mother's school in Leesburg, Va., followed the AL debate and Googled to find out the winner.

"I think it intrigued everybody," he said. "As a fan of the game, it was a fun race to watch."

With three fewer hits or two less homers, Cabrera would have fallen short of the Triple Crown. The last four Triple Crown winners have been voted MVP, including Mickey Mantle in 1956 and Frank Robinson in 1966.

"I think winning the Triple Crown had a lot to do with me winning this honor," he said.

Cabrera became the second straight Detroit player voted MVP, following pitcher Justin Verlander in 2011, and was the first Venezuelan to earn the honor. Countryman Pablo Sandoval took home World Series MVP honors last month.

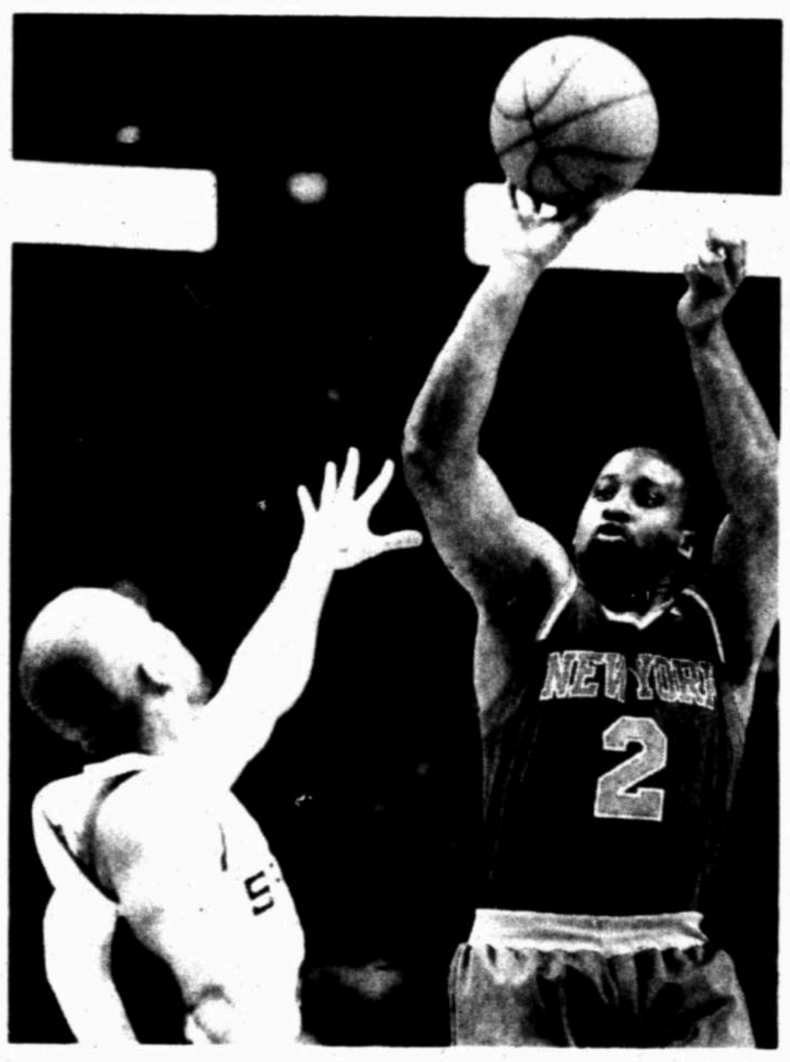

Before the season, Cabrera switched from first base to third to make way for Prince Fielder, who signed with Detroit as a free agent.

"I focused too much in spring training about defense, defense, defense," Cabrera said. "I forgot a little bit about hitting, about getting in the cage like I normally do."

In spring training, Posey's focus was just to get back on the field. His 2011 season was cut short by a collision with the Marlins' Scott Cousins on May 25 that resulted in a fractured bone in Posey's lower left leg and three torn ankle ligaments.

Posey not only returned, he became the first catcher in 70 years to win the NL batting title and helped San Francisco win its second World Series championship in three seasons.

"I definitely have a deeper appreciation for being able to play baseball," he said. "I've seen that it can be taken away quick."

Missing A&M football player found safe

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M freshman wide receiver Thomas Johnson has been found safe in Dallas after he disappeared from campus days ago.

Johnson's mother, Linda Hanks, says A&M University police told her Thursday the 18-year-old is unharmed.

Police said Wednesday that Johnson was last seen leaving his College Station residence around 5 p.m. Monday.

Hanks told WFAA-TV she traveled from Dallas to College Station as authorities searched for her son. Meanwhile, Johnson turned up 180 miles to the north, in Dallas.

Hanks says Johnson didn't contact her and that she has no other information.

Coach Kevin Sumlin says he's relieved Johnson has been found and that his foremost concern is for Johnson's health and well-being.

Johnson played in 10 games this season, with 30 catches for 339 yards and a touchdown.

STERLING CITY — Garden City scored first, but simply couldn't keep pace with No. 1 Water Valley as the Bearkats fell, 64-18, in the bi-district round of the Six-man Division I playoffs at Eagle Stadium on Thursday.

Austin Odom hit Shawn Walker on 42-yard TD pass to put the Bearkats up 6-0 with 7:48 to play in the opening quarter. It was the only time the Bearkats would lead in the game.

Water Valley took a 24-12 advantage by the end of the first quarter and was up 40-12 at halftime. The Wildcats ended the game with the 45-point mercy rule on a 51-yard TD pass from Kellan Kirkland to Connor Copley with 2:01 left in the third quarter.

Austin Odom led Garden City with 214 passing yards and two TDs, while rushing for a team-high 46 yards. Corbin Davis was Odom's favorite target, catching five passes for 125 yards, including a 34-yard TD in the first quarter.

Garden City finishes the season with a 3-8 record, while Water Valley (11-0) remains undefeated and advance to play the winner between Throckmorton and Rotan in the next round.

Buffalo defense stuffs Miami in 19-14 win

By John Wawrow
Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Leodis McKelvin scored on a 79-yard punt return and the Mario Williams-led Buffalo Bills oft-maligned defense finally flexed its muscles in a 19-14 victory over the Miami Dolphins on Thursday night.

Safety Jairus Byrd recovered a fumble and made a diving interception, and Bryan Scott sealed the win with an interception to end the Dolphins' final drive.

Williams had one of three sacks for a Buffalo defense that limited the Ryan Tannehill-led Dolphins to 184 yards.

That was enough to make up for an offense that settled for Rian Lindell's four field goals on four drives into the red zone.

Buffalo (4-6) snapped a three-game skid and won for only the second time in seven games.

Marcus Thigpen scored on a 96-yard kickoff return and Davone Bess had a 2-yard touchdown catch for Miami (4-6), which has lost three straight.

MANZIEL

a couple of guys that when coaches come back and say, 'Coach, you need to see this, can we offer this guy?' You watch a few plays and ask, 'Why did you even show that to me? Why didn't we offer the guy when you were there?'"

Manziel passed on Houston and several other schools and verbally committed to Oregon. He'd always loved the school and was a big fan of coach Chip Kelly. But as Manziel thought more about playing there, he realized he couldn't be more than 2,000 miles away from his family, Smith said.

Smith helped him navigate that situation, and was impressed by the way he handled it. Manziel agonized over the decision to sign with A&M instead of Oregon, and Smith sat with him when he called Kelly to break the news.

"In the end, the young man made a decision on the things that he valued most and that was his family," Smith said. "That says more about him than any play he could ever make on the football field."

Permian coach Gary Gaines on the game: "Both teams, we had just practiced for two weeks and just one week in pads (in our pre-season scrimmage). Both teams scored some. Both teams had some long runs and passes. It was just a practice."

Notes: Permian enters this game having won two straight and four of its last five. The Panthers were 1-4 before their late-season rally, and coach Gary Gaines said he feels like his team is clicking better than it did in the first half of the season. ... Permian meets an El Dorado team that it faced in a preseason scrimmage the past two seasons, and while Gaines said the Panthers are certainly familiar with the Aztecs, it doesn't necessarily provide an advantage. "I think it's the same on both ends," Gaines said. "They've got the same advantage or disadvantage that we have." ... El Dorado quarterback Cade Terrazas leads the Aztec offense and his favorite target is fellow senior Quinton Childs. Gaines praised junior running back LeDerrick Wilson as well. .... For Permian, the game plan won't change with the Aztecs. "We're looking to do the same things that we do week in and week out and that's have a good running game and mix in some good passes," Gaines said. "We want to have some balance and then defensively we've got to bring it." ... Permian will be without offensive lineman Shawn Pierce, out for the year after knee surgery, and tight end Sammy Johnson, who is dealing with an ankle injury.

SAN ANGELO CENTRAL

When/where: 7 p.m. today, Grande Communications Stadium

Records: Central 6-4; Franklin 9-1

Last game: Franklin 48, El Paso El Dorado 34; Central 28, Lee 21

Players to watch: Franklin, QB Cameron Candelaria (6-2, 190, Sr.), WR John Paul Quinn (6-3, 200, Sr.), WR Marcos Hernandez (5-8, 170, Sr.), RB Vince Garcia (5-7, 175, Sr.), DE Devin Houx (6-3, 230, Sr.); Central, QB Mickey Scott (5-11, 166, Jr.), WR Sterling Smith (6-4, 180, Sr.), RB Jordan Charles (5-9, 172, Sr.), WR Landon Sawyer (6-0, 170, Soph.), WR Keyland Taylor (6-1, 140, Sr.), DE Jake Williamson (6-0, 172, Sr.).

Central coach Brent Davis on the game: "This will be our fifth game with them in three years. Does it help us to know them? Yes. But they've got the same advantage we do."

Notes: Central is familiar with Franklin and not just from playing the Cougars earlier this season in both team's season openers. Central played Franklin in the regular season last year and in the regular season and the playoffs the year before. The teams split their previous four meetings, three of which were decided by a combined eight points. The last meeting was a 41-40 come-from-behind win by Franklin in which the Cougars erased a 14-point first-half lead on the road. But Central coach Brent Davis said he believes his team is much-improved since that game. "We didn't know much about our defense at the time, we were so young -- we had four sophomores starting at the time," Davis said. "We didn't play well defensively in that game to be honest. We feel like we're way ahead of where we were defensively at that time." ... Davis said the progression of quarterback Mickey Scott will help as well, as the junior was starting his first varsity game in the last meeting with Franklin. Scott will be depended on again in this one after leading District 2-5A in pass attempts, and Davis said he hopes that and a better defensive effort will be the difference. "Offensively, we're going to do what we do. We're not going to change anything we're doing," Davis said. "Defensively, hopefully we play better than we did the first game." ... Franklin quarterback Cameron Candelaria has an abundance of weapons at his disposal as receiver Marcos Hernandez factors in the passing game and running game as does running back Vince Garcia. Receiver John Paul Quinn is a reliable target also. ... After come-from-behind road wins against Lee and Midland High this season, Davis said he and his players are excited to play in Grande Communications Stadium for a third time this year. "We really love playing there," Davis said. "It's a great stadium. It's probably the best stadium in West Texas as far as atmosphere."

Forsan head coach Jason Phillips on the game: "They are a spread team, and they are real similar to Stamford and Anson. They have some good skill kids, but they don't seem to have the amount of skill kids that Stamford and Anson has. We have faced some good spread teams in the past month, and that will be a plus for us."

Notes: The Buffaloes return to the postseason for the second straight year but are looking to advance past the first round. Forsan lost its opening-round playoff game in 2011 to Sanford-Fritch, 33-26, in the Class 2A Division II playoffs. ... Forsan is coming off an impressive victory against Winters to qualify for the playoffs. The Buffaloes held the Blizzards to 80 total yards, and the Buffaloes racked up 232 yards on the ground as Marcus Cervantes led the team with six carries for 104 yards. ... Phillips said the Indians are a good spread team that is really "potent" at the quarterback position. Robertson led the Wichita Falls area with 2,532 passing yards this season with 28 touchdowns, and his top target Brandon Heard had 827 yards with 11 touchdowns. ... Rankin head coach Shannon Williams on the game: "We are facing a team that is about like us. They are big and physical, and we ought to match up very well together."

Notes: Rankin returns to the playoffs on a six-game winning streak and coming off a dominating victory against rival Garden City. Rankin's Dalton Michum rushed for 284 yards on 30 carries last week against the Bearkats and will likely see plenty of carries tonight. ... Williams said the Eagles have a similar offense to the Red Devils in that they like to run the ball. Cooper Hinderliter rushed for 178 yards on 18 carries in last week's 52-44 loss to top-ranked Water Valley. "They do the same thing offensively that we do," Williams said. "They try to run the ball at you and they also do a little bit of spread stuff." ... Rankin owns a 13-6 record against Sterling City and the two teams have been playing off-and-on since 1947. Since the two teams have been six-man schools, Rankin is 2-0, with a 58-8 win in 2009 and 80-56 victory in 2008.

Grady head coach Chris Kuykendall on the game: "They are year in and year out a playoff team in that district, and they are going to be solid at what they do. They don't do anything fancy that we didn't see in Week 0."

Notes: This is the second meeting between these two teams this season as the two squads met Aug. 31 in Week 0 and Ropes won, 56-45. Kuykendall, though, said his team is much different and went on a five-game winning streak before losing to Borden County on Nov. 3. "We are not near the same team that we were in that week," Kuykendall said. "We are more polished now." ... The Wildcats rebounded after that loss to Borden County to beat Klondike thanks to another big performance from E.J. Rodriguez, who rushed for more than 150 yards and returned a fumble for a touchdown. ... Ropes won Six-Man Division I District 3 this season and has used a balanced attack. The Eagles have rushed 1,626 yards as a team this year and thrown for 2,127. Grady is 6-5 against Ropes all-time with Ropes winning the last two meetings. This week's game will be the first meeting between the two teams in the playoffs. ... # MUSTANGS-GUARD NOTEBOOK

BULLARD BROOK HILL
AT MIDLAND CHRISTIAN

When/where: 7 p.m. today, Mustang Field

On the web: www.midland-christianschool.org

Records: Midland Christian 9-1, Bullard Brook Hill 6-4

Last game: Midland Christian 46, Waco Reicher 21; Bullard Brook Hill 66, Carrollton Prince of Peace 44

Last meeting/series: This is the first meeting between the two teams

Weather forecast: Partly cloudy with no chance of rain, and a temperature of 58 degrees expected at game time.

Notes

■ The Mustangs clinched the outright district title with a convincing 46-21 victory against Waco Reicher last week. Midland Christian rolled up 618 yards of offense, including a season high 387 yards on the ground. Sophomore running back Justin Fender rushed for 263 yards on 29 carries and four touchdowns.

■ Midland Christian's defense allowed 263 yards last week against the Cougars, and it marked the first time since the Sept. 21 game against Seminole where the Mustangs allowed 200 or more yards passing.

■ Brook Hill won the TAPPS Division III state championship in 2011, defeating Austin Regents in the final. The Guard were realigned into the tough TAPPS Division II District 2 last December and their three district losses were to all three teams ahead of them in the standings, Dallas Christian, Dallas Parish Episcopal and Tyler Grace Community.

"This isn't a lay down in the first round, they are a good football team," MCS coach Greg McClendon said. "They got beat by three good football teams in district, and the top three teams in its district are three of the better teams in the state."

■ Brook Hill coach Terry Pirtle said his squad is young this year as they are starting as many as six freshman and sophomores on offense and defense at times. Senior quarterback Will Weathers is the trigger man for the Guard's offense as he has 1,000 yards rushing this season with 10 touchdowns and has thrown for 1,420 yards and 17 touchdowns this season.

■ Pirtle said a key for his team will be slowing down Midland Christian's offense and being able to force some turnovers.

"Even without (running back Christian Whigham), they still have a potent offense," Pirtle said. "They have a down-hill-come-get-you offense, and we didn't handle that very well in the three games we played against Parish, Tyler Grace and Dallas Christian. We know we are going to have to change some stuff up and hopefully create some turnovers."

■ Brook Hill is located in Bullard, which is a suburb of Tyler, and has had an athletic program for eight years. The school is 12 years old.

of showed our resiliency."

Showing resiliency is something this particular group of offensive lineman have had to do this season for a number of reasons.

There was one returning starter -- senior center Caleb Thomas -- off last year's state championship team, but rebuilding offensive lines is something the Mustangs coaching staff is used to.

It's been done in previous years, but this year was unique in the fact that the offensive line had a pair of new coaches -- former MCS player Jared Hudgins and Lee grad and NFL veteran lineman Ryan Tucker -- and so many new players.

Along with Thomas at center, senior Will Cooke and junior Dustin Galindo are the guards, senior Bryson Taylor and sophomore Johnny Wilson are the tackles and senior Dakota Jones is the tight end. Only Thomas had significant experience on the varsity last year, and he's a three-year starter.

There was some movement on the line earlier this season, but those six have held those positions through much of the season, and Hudgins said the group did have some hills to climb but never changed their attitude in always working hard and being aggressive.

"Some of them have come a long ways, and some of them didn't really see that much playing time on the varsity," said Hudgins, who played at Midland Christian in the mid-2000s. "They have found their legs a little bit, and they started hammering and they are aggressive. When you get aggressive against teams that aren't wanting that it turns out like (it did last Friday)."

Thomas said one big thing that has helped this group gel is the preparation it does during the week and the coaching the group receives. Thomas said they do feel the pressure and responsibility to perform well but he added without that pressure every day in practice they wouldn't be as good as they are.

"We have one of the best coaching staffs in the state, public or private, and they really put together a good game plan (last week)," Thomas said. "We felt more pressure to do better, and we are working harder. The coaches are putting more pressure on us and demanding more out of us. We are working harder, and it is making us better in the long run."

Notes

■ Greenwood qualified for the playoffs for the second straight year under head coach Shad Hanna with a victory over Snyder, which gave the Rangers the No. 2 seed in the Division II playoffs out of District 4-3A.

The Rangers were led by QB Kam Williams (6-3, 200, Sr.) who had 200-plus yards passing, 200-plus yards rushing and accounted for six touchdowns (five rushing). For the season, Williams now has 2,077 yards passing with 20 touchdowns, and 1,050 yards rushing with 18 touchdowns.

RB Dustin Rea (6-0, 185, Jr.) added 81 yards rushing and two TDs on 17 carries, while filling in for the injured Braydin Moreland. Hanna said Moreland (back) will be a game-time decision.

■ Hanna said the key for his team against Clint, which runs the wishbone offense, is to play well.

"We have got to play our game and do the things we know how to do," Hanna said. "Our best defense is going to be our offense to keep them off the field."

■ The Lions won the District 3-3A title last week with a late 22-yard field goal by junior kicker Jaime Navarrette.

■ Clint is led by senior quarterback Isreal Chavez and junior running back Daniel Vasquez, who has rushed for more than 1,000 yards this season.

■ Eighth-year Clint coach Rosvel Martinez said he's impressed with Greenwood.

"They're playing like a top 10 team," he said. "We're definitely going to have to play mistake-free football to have a chance. I know that whole district was pretty tough, and whoever we would have ended up playing would have been a challenge."

■ Clint started the year with a blowout loss to El Paso Burges but then went on a six-game winning streak. The Lions' only loss in district came against Mountain View (21-12) when the team was going through some injuries, according to Martinez.

■ If Greenwood wins, next week's playoff venues are set. If the Rangers play Perryton, the game would be at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 23 in Plainview. If Greenwood faces Lubbock Estacado, the game will be at 2 p.m. Nov. 24 in Sweetwater.

Next: Winner plays Perryton or Lubbock Estacado in Class 3A Division II area round, TBA for Greenwood, became a huge question mark and inexperienced because the unit was loaded with underclassmen.

But as it turns out, those young players got better and did a lot of growing up along the way. The Rangers also got healthy and some key veterans returned to the rotation, which now makes the offensive line one of the deeper units on the team as Greenwood (7-3) heads into its Class 3A bi-district game against Clint (8-2) tonight at Alpine's Buck Stadium.

Lately, the Rangers have been playing senior Blain Latham at center, sophomore Sean Strickland at right guard, freshman Jesus Rodriguez at left guard, senior J.T. Aldridge at right guard and either junior David Sanchez or junior Zach Grafe on right tackle.

"We've got a bunch of kids who are just stepping up," Hanna said. "Kids are filling spots that have kind of been questionable throughout the season, and I think they're just starting to find their niche and kind of gel together. They are still making some mistakes and still learning but I think they're coming together at the right time."

An example Hanna pointed out about the gained experience is that a position like right tackle now has as many as three kids that could play there and all do just as well.

"We've got some good quality backups going right now and I'm pleased about our depth on the offensive line," Hanna said.

At one point the Rangers were starting only one senior on the line -- Latham. Even before the season started, tackle Call Carmichael made the move to a receiver position and Jody Lively had to sit out a big chunk of the season because of a low platelet count in his blood.

"I think we've done pretty good considering what we've been presented with," Latham said. "We have a lot of youg guys and they have stepped up. We didn't expect after last year for Call to move (positions) and he did, and then the whole deal with Jody kind of forced things for others guys to step up and fill their spots and do a good job."

One of the pleasant surprises for Hanna and the offensive line is the play of Rodriguez at left guard. Rodriguez was thrown into the fire against Monahans in the District 4-3A opener and really held his own, according to the head coach.

"I never would have thought he would step up the way he has," Hanna said. "He has done a phenomenal job learning in the heat of the moment."

Added Rodriguez, recalling his first start, "I was very nervous when Coach Hanna came and talked to me, and I was very nervous playing that first district game against Monahans. It was a tough loss but it really helped me. It was great experience for me and I'm enjoying my teammates.

"Coach Hanna and (offensive line) Coach (Travis) Willard are teaching me to get better every week and I'm trying my hardest not to let the team down."

Even with young players stepping up to fill critical roles on the line, Latham said it still took a little time for the unit to gel. But then it all came together in the second half of a key 34-20 victory at Big Spring. After leading only 14-7 and getting some motivational speeches from both Hanna and Williams at the break, the offensive line stepped up and the Rangers pulled away. They also paved the way for Williams to rush for 245 yards and five touchdowns and for Greenwood to have a 327-yard rushing night.

"I felt the first couple of games we did OK, but then the second half of the Big Spring game we did really well," Latham said. "We definitely help our team a lot knowing we can run and pass the ball. It makes a really big challenge for the other team when they have to stop the run and the pass."

Added Rodriguez, "I feel good about our protection and run game. I feel we've gotten better. We've gotten more yards in our running game and that's really good for our team."

Last week, in a playoff-clinching 53-39 victory over Snyder, the Rangers rushed for 349 yards and passed for another 228, proving once again that they are not a one-dimensional offensive team.

With the way the offensive line has stepped up, the Rangers are confident heading into the playoffs.

"We feel pretty good about it," Latham said. "If we keep doing what we've doing and get a good push from the defensive line (against Clint's wishbone offense), we'll do all right."

Added Rodriguez, "I'm excited and nervous and I think we'll do very good as a team."

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, "Richard," and I are a mature couple who have been seeing each other for three years. I love him. My dog is the issue.

"Princess" is a 2-year-old rat terrier/mini-pinscher mix. She weighs 9 pounds and is spoiled. (I admit I'm a softy when it comes to discipline.) She barks at anyone and anything she sees. Her barks are shrill and can be annoying. But I live alone and feel she is protecting me.

Richard can no longer tolerate Princess' barking and has curbed his visits considerably. Except for this issue, he is my dream guy, and I feel lucky to have found him. I was married for more than 20 years to a controlling man, and I had to defer or compromise on everything. I will not compromise on this. I feel Richard should understand my attachment to Princess, especially when he's not around.

I miss him. Our dates are now only occasional. He thinks I prefer the dog over him, and that's not the case. Am I being selfish? Why can't I have them both? Is there a future for us, or have we reached an impasse? — WON'T GIVE UP THE PUP, LAFAYETTE, LA.

DEAR WON'T GIVE UP: Loving one's dog is not being selfish. You COULD have them both if you would contact a dog trainer and start giving Princess a doggy education that includes boundaries. Incessant barking should not be allowed.

Perhaps once Richard sees that Princess no longer regards him as a hostile intruder, he will feel more welcome. But that could take some work on the part of all three of you, if he's still willing.

DEAR ABBY: My grandpa remarried when I was a child. He and Grandma "Ella" each have five children. She is a wonderful woman.

When the holidays roll around, especially Thanksgiving and Christmas, my grandparents always host at their home. They spend all day fixing up the house and preparing the food. When it's time to eat, Grandma Ella's children think they should be first in the line. If someone else tries (some of us on my grandfather's side of the family have small children), they grumble and complain.

When the dinner is over, it's always my mom, one of my two aunts and me doing the dishes and cleaning up. Grandma Ella's family never help. They just stroll back into the living room and watch TV or leave to go somewhere else. It would be nice to get some help once in a while so Mom, my aunts and I could also relax after the meal. Just leaving the mess is not an option. We tried it once, and Grandma and Grandpa ended up doing it. Any advice? — STRESSED IN ADVANCE IN IOWA

DEAR STRESSED: Gladly! This Thanksgiving when everyone arrives, Grandma and Grandpa should cheerfully inform the happy revelers that small children will be fed first, regardless of whose side of the family they come from. At the same time, each of the adults should be ASSIGNED a cleanup chore so one side of the family isn't stuck with the entire burden. Unless your grandparents assert themselves, nothing will change, so please suggest this to them in advance.

The bidding:

| SOUTH | WEST | NORTH | EAST |
|---|---|---|---|

Opening lead: Ten of ♢

Here's another deal from Eddie Kantar's award-winning series for players eager to improve their game.

An opening bid of four of a major with a strong eight-card suit and fewer than 10 high-card points is more or less automatic. Pre-emptive opening bids in first or second seat are supposed to be weak bids and seldom, if ever have two aces. In third seat, facing a passed partner, all bets are off. The pre-emptor might have almost anything, particularly at favorable vulnerability. A wise partner seldom messes with a third-seat pre-empt. Fourth-seat pre-empts, however, are a horse of a different color. These pre-empts show good hands, more often than not with opening bid strength. After all, fourth hand can pass with garbage. In any case, North should have no qualms about passing four spades because at least two aces figure to be missing.

After winning the ace of diamonds, it should be clear to East that a club shift is necessary. Besides, East can be near certain that West has the ace of clubs, assuming that South has a normal first-seat pre-empt.

Actually, the idea is not whether to shift to a club — that's a given. The question is which club? We are back to our old friend the surrounding play. When 10 x (x) (x) is in dummy and the player on lead has K J 9 x or A J 9 x, the proper card to lead is the jack.

BP agrees to pay $4.5B; 3 employees charged

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — A day of reckoning arrived for BP on Thursday as the oil giant agreed to plead guilty to a raft of charges in the deadly Gulf of Mexico spill and pay a record $4.5 billion, including the biggest criminal fine in U.S. history. Three BP employees were also charged, two of them with manslaughter.

The settlement with the federal government came 2 1/2 years after the fiery drilling-rig explosion that killed 11 workers and set off the nation's largest offshore oil spill.

In announcing the deal, Assistant Attorney General Lanny Breuer said the tragedy "resulted from BP's culture of privileging profit over prudence."

BP will plead guilty to charges involving the 11 deaths and lying to Congress about how much oil was spewing from the blown-out well.

"We believe this resolution is in the best interest of BP and its shareholders," said Carl-Henric Svanberg, BP chairman. "It removes two significant legal risks and allows us to vigorously defend the company against the remaining civil claims."

The settlement appears to be easily affordable for BP, which made a record $25.8 billion in profits last year. And it will have five years to pay. But the oil giant still faces several billion dollars in additional claims for damage to people's livelihoods and the environment.

Separately, BP rig workers Robert Kaluza and Donald Vidrine were indicted on federal charges of manslaughter and involuntary manslaughter, accused of repeatedly disregarding abnormal high-pressure readings that should have been glaring indications of trouble just before the blowout.

In addition, David Rainey, BP's former vice president of exploration for the Gulf of Mexico, was charged with obstruction of Congress and making false statements. Prosecutors said he withheld information that more oil was gushing from the well than he let on.

Rainey's lawyers said he did "absolutely nothing wrong." And attorneys for the two rig workers accused the Justice Department of making scapegoats out of them. Both men are still with BP.

"Bob was not an executive or high-level BP official. He was a dedicated rig worker who mourns his fallen co-workers every day," Kaluza attorneys Shaun Clarke and David Gerger said in a statement. "No one should take any satisfaction in this indictment of an innocent man. This is not justice."

The settlement, which is subject to approval by a federal judge, includes payments of nearly $2.4 billion to the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation, $350 million to the National Academy of Sciences and about $500 million to the Securities and Exchange Commission, which accused BP of misleading investors by lowballing the amount of crude that was spilling.

It also includes nearly $1.3 billion in fines.

"This marks the largest single criminal fine and the largest total criminal resolution in the history of the United States," Attorney General Eric Holder said at a news conference in New Orleans. He said much of the money will be used to restore the Gulf.

Holder said the criminal investigation is still going on. Before Thursday, the only person charged in the disaster was a former BP engineer who was arrested in April on obstruction of justice charges, accused of deleting text messages about the company's handling of the spill.

The largest previous corporate criminal penalty assessed by the Justice Department was a $1.2 billion fine against drug maker Pfizer in 2009.

Greenpeace blasted the settlement as a slap on the wrist.

"This fine amounts to a rounding error for a corporation the size of BP," the environmental group said.

Nick McGregor, an oil analyst at Redmayne-Bentley Stockbrokers, said the settlement would be seen as "an expensive positive."

"This scale of bill is unpleasant," he said. But "the worst-case scenario for BP would be an Exxon Valdez-style decade of litigation. I think that is the outcome they are trying to avoid."

Still, for BP, the cost of the tragedy could climb much higher.

For one thing, the U.S. government and the Gulf states are still seeking billions of dollars in civil penalties against BP over the environmental damage.

Also, a federal judge in New Orleans is deciding whether to approve an estimated $7.8 billion settlement between BP and more than 100,000 businesses and individuals who say they were harmed by the spill. They include fishermen, charter boat captains, restaurants, hotels and property owners.

The Deepwater Horizon rig blew up 50 miles off Louisiana on April 20, 2010, in an explosion that investigators blamed on time-saving, cost-cutting decisions by BP and its drilling partners in cementing the well shaft.

Following several failed attempts that introduced the American public to such industry terms as "top kill" and "junk shot," BP finally capped the well on the sea floor after more than 85 days.

By then, the well had spewed an estimated 172 million gallons of crude into the Gulf, fouling marshes and beaches, killing wildlife and closing vast areas to fishing.

BP will plead guilty to 11 felony counts of misconduct or neglect of a vessel's officers, one felony count of obstruction of Congress and one misdemeanor count each under the Migratory Bird Treaty Act and the Clean Water Act. The workers' deaths were prosecuted under a federal law that protects seamen.

Oil prices drop

Oil prices fell below $86 a barrel Thursday as investors focused on global economic issues, including the so-called "fiscal cliff" in the U.S.

Benchmark U.S. crude dropped by 87 cents to finish at $85.45 per barrel in New York. Brent crude, used to price many kinds of international oil, fell 47 cents to end at $108.01 per barrel on the ICE Futures exchange in London.

Expiring tax cuts and broad spending cuts will take effect in January unless the White House and Congress make a deal. Economists worry that that would have a serious impact on the economy. Slower economic growth means less demand for fuels such as gasoline, heating oil and natural gas.

On Thursday the U.S. Energy Information Administration said crude oil supplies grew by 1.1 million barrels last week to 375.9 million barrels. That's 11.6 percent above year-ago levels, but it's also less than the 1.5 million barrels expected by analysts surveyed by Platts, the energy information arm of McGraw-Hill Cos. Meanwhile, gasoline supplies shrank. Analysts had expected gasoline supplies to be unchanged from the previous week.

Dollar dips

The dollar fell against the euro Thursday after manufacturing in Philadelphia and New York fell this month.

The euro rose to $1.2778 in afternoon trading from $1.2745 late Wednesday.

The British pound fell to $1.5850 from $1.5854.

Gold for December delivery dropped $16.30 Thursday to finish at $1,713.80 per ounce.
