Boycott imposed on importation of Libyan oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is stepping up its campaign against Col. Moammar Khadafy, the Libyan leader, by imposing a boycott of oil imports from the militant Arab country and halting sales of American oil and gas equipment to the Libyans, informed sources say.

The decision was taken by the National Security Council Thursday and is expected to take effect in two weeks, after consultation with the West European allies, Congress and oil company executives.

While the United States has long accused Khadafy of promoting terrorism, there was no apparent specific provocation for the move, which was under consideration for several months. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is understood to have played a leading role within administration councils in urging a boycott of Libya.

First word of the decision came from the Middle East Policy Survey, a newsletter published here. Informed sources confirmed the action, but insisted that they not be identified.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes refused today to comment on the matter, except to say the president is reviewing "a number of options" and that "no final decisions have been made."

The export controls would place Libya in the same category as the Soviet Union, the Survey reported today. In addition to a ban on U.S. oil and gas equipment, Libya would be unable to buy computers, air traffic control gear or other items having a potential military use.

Despite official U.S. disapproval of the Libyan government, documents obtained last month by The Associated Press showed American firms had supplied Libya with $53 million in weapons and material.

The equipment, exported to Libya since Khadafy seized power in 1969, ranged from military cargo planes to weapon-sighting devices and guided missile components.

Facing off at forum

County Commissoner Charlie Welch, second from right, and Mayor G. Thane Akins, right, squared off against each other and also faced the public during Thursday night's 2½-hour seminar on clean water sponsored by the League of Women Voters. One of the citizens attending the session was Vernon Chandler, left, who complained about effluent from Odessa's sewage treatment plant.

Water forum looks more like debate

The Midland Draw dilemma came no closer to an amicable solution Thursday night in a commissioner-mayoral airing on the issue of clean water versus the disposal of effluent waters from Midland's sewage-treatment plant.

"There's no panacea for this," Mayor G. Thane Akins said in rounding out the 2½-hour session sponsored by the League of Women Voters in Midland National Bank's Midland Room. "The economics (for purifying the effluent) are not there."

In a measure designed to abate the effluent problem until the year 2040, the city is proposing a $20 million plan to pipe the water 15-plus miles southeast of Midland to Johnson's Draw and near the Midland-Glassock County line.

Midland County Commissioner Charlie Welch, the mayor's adversary in the debate-like session, pooh-poohed the city's plans, saying it's only a temporary measure and won't begin to solve the problems of primary-treated effluent seeping into underground water zones and spoiling otherwise potable water.

"I RESPECT the man," Mayor G. Thane Akins said of his adversary, Welch. "I can't go with him. I have to go with the people (hydrologists Ed and Joe Reed) we hired." Akins said the hydrologists maintain that the primary-treated effluent, which the city proposes to pipe to Timber Floyd's land and dig out a 320-acre holding pond, is of better quality than any underground water in the area and, particularly, in Johnson Draw. Tentative proposals by some enterprising landowners are to use the effluent in irrigating crops and gardens in the area southeast of town.

Welch, who advocates cleaning the water and lightly sprinkling it over agricultural land, says the effluent eventually will drain into aquifers and further pollute the potable waters. But he also complimented the City Council for confronting the effluent problems.

"I commend you (the mayor) and the council for taking steps to remedy the situation," Welch said. About 30 people attended the Akins-Welch discussion.

HOWEVER, WELCH still was critical of the city's Dec. 22 "dumping" of effluent from holding ponds, which were threatening to overrun dikes due

Water regulations discussed

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Few regulations exist to control use of ground water in Texas, but that situation could change in the next few years through the public's involvement, according to an environmental attorney from Austin.

Richard W. Lowerre, who has a private practice and represents only citizens groups, talked on the regulations of surface and ground water Thursday morning during a public water forum at Commercial Bank & Trust Co. The session, attended by about 20 persons, was sponsored by the Midland League of Women Voters.

For many years, common law was used to govern surface and ground water use. Primarily, said Lowerre, this meant that "my use comes first" and little thought was given to what that use would mean to an adjacent landowner.

Today, use of surface water is regulated by numerous pieces of legislation, specifically the Clean Water Act, said Lowerre.

But the problem has arisen in enforcing this laws in relation to the oil and gas industry.

"THERE IS NOT supposed to be any surface discharge from oil and gas drilling sites. But this law is basically being ignored," he said.

The Department of Water Resources handles the permitting part while the Railroad Commission is to take care of enforcing the laws. "But nothing has been done about oil and gas discharges," Lowerre noted. "This tells you where some of the political power is in Texas."

Turning to ground water, Lowerre noted the state is "still basically back at English common law, which is 'use as much as you can take.'"

Explaining common law, the attorney who has worked with the National Academy of Sciences and Environmental Protection Agency said a judge uses social values to determine how an argument should be settled.

Back in 1904, related Lowerre, the Texas Supreme Court said ground water was secret and that setting rules to govern its use would be practically impossible. Or, he said in his own interpretation, "We don't know what it is and we can't regulate it."

By the time 1954 rolled around and there was another case, the Supreme Court said the same thing that had been ruled in 1904, according to Lowerre.

"The common law for ground water is basically the same as for oil and gas: Take as much as you can get."

Congressional debate on decontrol discouraged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, facing angry consumer groups and an election-year Congress, apparently has given up seeking faster decontrol of natural gas prices in Congress this year.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker and House Republican Leader Robert Michel said they told President Reagan Thursday that Congress was in no mood to face a divisive debate on natural gas.

"We've got enough problems at the moment without dealing with that one," Michel, R-Ill., told reporters after the meeting.

After hearing the objections of Baker, R-Tenn., and Michel, Reagan met late Thursday with his Cabinet on the natural gas issue.

Energy Secretary James Edwards made an impassioned plea for the administration to go forward with its decontrol bill, according to DOE spokeswoman Constance Stuart, but the president announced no decision.

However, an administration source who asked not to be identified, said it was "highly unlikely" that Reagan would push for decontrol this year.

This assessment was confirmed by sources at the Energy Department, who said official announcement of that decision could come as early as today.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said, however, today, "The president has not made a decision on natural gas deregulation — whether to accelerate it or not — and I would assume that it would be next week before he does make a decision."

Midland youngsters burned

By RICHARD ORR

Two Midland youngsters were burned when a container thrown from a passing car exploded in their faces near the driveway of Jane Long Elementary School late Thursday afternoon.

Released following emergency treatment at Midland Memorial Hospital were 14-year-old Glenn Farmer and his 10-year-old brother Dirk of 603 Beckley. The older boy is a student at Lee Freshman High School and his brother is a fifth-grader at Sam Houston Elementary School.

According to their mother, Bettye Farmer, the children had gotten off a school bus at Jane Long about 4:30 p.m. when a passenger in an older model car threw what appeared to be a small plastic package at them.

The package contained a liquid that

The West Texas winter weather will continue through tonight, but Midlanders can expect slightly warmer temperatures on Saturday.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it will be partly cloudy with the mercury expected to climb into the upper 50s Saturday. The low tonight will be near 30.

Thursday's rain, sleet and snow resulted in .09 of an inch of precipitation, raising the month's total to .16 of an inch and the year's total to just over a half-inch.

Neill seeks re-election to MMH board

Martin Neill has announced that he will seek re-election to the Midland Memorial Hospital's board of directors.

The board has two seats which are open for the April 3 election. The directors serve a two-year term.

Martin Neill

"After having served one two-year term, I can see that there are still accomplished improvements needed in services and operations of Midland Memorial Hospital," Neill said.

"I believe I can contribute to that end. There have been some very healthy improvements this last year, and I believe there are more to come soon. The employee turnover has been drastically reduced, a program of securing and retaining nurses has been effective and the hospital has been given a two-year accreditation for the first time in many years," he added.

"Two vital studies have been completed regarding the accounting procedures and regarding the organizational and operational structure. It is imperative that the recommended changes be instituted and monitored during the next year or so. It is for this reason that I would like to serve another term."

Neill, president of the Martin Neill Co., lives with his wife, Genell, and their three children in Midland.

Estes seeks re-election to MMH board

Pat Estes has announced she will seek re-election to Midland Memorial Hospital's board of directors.

The board has two seats up for re-election in the April 3 election. Directors serve two-year terms.

Mrs. Estes, who was appointed to the board in September 1979, was elected to the position in April 1980.

"I think the district should have a very strong leadership with an emphasis on sound management for the hospital," she said, adding that because of her two-year term, she "understands the medical needs of the people in the Midland County Hospital District."

"We must strive to guide Midland through this rapid growth period with solid leadership and quality," Mrs. Estes said.

"Quality is great," she added, "but our basic foundation for health care must be established on solid strong needs and in-depth planning for the hospital of Midland county."

Mrs. Estes and her husband have two children and have lived in Midland for 37 years.

Mantissa Band's equipment stolen

Equipment owned by the Mantissa Band of Midland was reported taken in a burglary of a mini-storage building at 2900 W. Kentucky. Band member Bruce Deramus of 4509 Falcon Place told officers the equipment was valued at $9,662. Entry was gained by cutting a padlock off the door.

In another burglary complaint to city police, O.C. Collins of 4105 Boulder said his home had been broken into Thursday. Taken were a TV set, a video game and five videotapes. The loss was placed at $1050. It includes $300 damage to a window that was broken to gain entry.

to rising waters and gusting winds, and into Midland Draw. On that very day, the Texas Water Commission permitted the dumping down Midland Draw but issued strict guidelines in the 14-dumping days, which the city cut short when city officials determined that the city could not abide by the guidelines.

"Unfortunately," said Welch, " the mayor's advice was wrong, and the dumping was bad medicine. It wasn't necessary to dump the waters in the first place."

Welch said that the treated waste water has infiltrated formerly good drinking water in underground formations in the Greenwood area.

"I don't think he ought to drink anything that smells, like sewage water," the commissioner said of a rural resident in the Midland Draw area.

Akins said Midland effluent problems started becoming acute in 1978-79, when a "gradual increase of waste water that corresponds with the growth of Midland" began and was an omen of the city's building boom that brought with it an influx of people. Welch, however, said that the holding ponds were overflowing in 1970.

In a 90-day period last year, said the mayor, the city's waste water flow increased from 170 million gallons a month to 270 million monthly for a daily-average increase of 5.6 million to 9 million galllons. The increase was 60 percent.

"You don't predict that," Akins said of the hiked water use. "If it happens, you try to live with it."

The current waste water flow is at "rates we had projected for 1991," Akins said.

"I TAKE A GREAT DEAL of pride in our city waterworks people" who try to plan "five, 10, 20 years ahead," said the mayor, but the city's rapid (about 100 families a month) population growth "simply put us out of business in being able to handle it."

In a question-and-answer session, Akins and Welch responded to poignant questions and statements from the audience.

Akins noted that the sewage-treatment plant is on the city's southeast side, as the lay of the city's landsite naturally slopes downward in that direction. Contrary to contentions by his critics, the mayor said the waste waters are not flowing upstream.

"If my third- and fourth-grade teachers were right," said Akins,"water doesn't run uphill."

"Yes, it does," interjected Midge Erskine, an environmental geologist who has been monitoring the city's inflow and outflow of water since 1976. "Don't box yourself in," she cautioned Akins.

"I've been an engineer a quarter of a century," the mayor retorted, "and I believe I can hold myself with you."

BACK ON THE issues, Akins said he is aware that "there are people who have been damaged" by the effluent.

"Whichever plan the city adopts," he said, "it's going to be wrong for somebody (who may be) damaged, hurt or in opposition to it." He noted that the city has expended $300,000 in the past several years in seeking studies by and advice from hydrologists and engineers.

On the question of primary treatment versus secondary treatment of effluent, the mayor said that primary-treated water is preferred by agriculturalists, since primary-treated water "has more nutrients that are good for plant growth." Though additional solids drop out in the aerated secondary-treatment process, the effluent has the same count of inorganic matter as does primary-treated effluent.

MIDKIFF RANCHER DAVID Harris, who is critical of the city's plan, said the waste water should be tertiary-treated and clean enough to return to the freshwater formations for further cleansing by natural processes and then reused. But the mayor said that such treatment is four-times as costly as primary treatment proposal — $1 per 1,000 gallons; the tertiary process would cost $4 per 1,000 gallons.

Harris's spouse, Cathy, said she would have no objections to the city's plan "if it's done properly."

"But we have concerns about that after seeing what happened to Midland Draw," she said."

Mrs. Harris submitted to the mayor a copy of letter which she and her husband mailed to the Texas Department of Water Resources.

"There is a possibility that such a project (piping water to the Timber Floyd land) could contaminate our house water and the tanks where our cattle water, since this water is supposed to contain arsenic, lead and a high amount of nitrates, in addition to an unhealthy amount of E. Coli (coliform).

"We have friends that live near Midland Draw where the contaminated water has been released earlier," she said in reading the letter, "and were dismayed when our friends had to watch helplessly while their pecan crop was washed away because the city decided to let the water go down the draw again. Now, these same people (city officials) are shifting the water our direction instead."

Mrs. Harris, who is a nurse, said that cattle and pecans are her and her husband's "major source of income" and that that income source and their health are "being threatened by contaminated water."

"The saddest part of the entire proposal is that the county needs water for agricultural purposes, and if the water was purified properly, people in Midland County would be begging for the water instead of fighting about whose land it is going to destroy."

THE MAYOR SAID he could empathize with Mrs. Harris.

"If I were there, I'd have the same concerns, no doubt about it," Akins said.

Vernon Chandler, a Warfield cotton farmer who is chairman of the Midland County Soil and Water Conservation District, is "on that other (Monahans) Draw" and is concerned about the city's proposals.

The city of Odessa holds a state permit to drain its secondary-treated effluent down Monahans Draw, which meanders south of Midland and eventually merges with Midland Draw in the Greenwood area and then become Mustang Draw. The draws' waters flow into the Colorado River and then into the E.V. Spence Reservoir, which supplies Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Stanton and other municipalities with water.

In response, Akins suggested that Midland likely could get a permit from the Texas Department of Water Resources to dump water down Midland Draw, which he speculated could be deemed a "navigable stream," as is Monahans Draw.

"I WOULD THINK the Water Board would have a tough time of saying (to Midland), 'Hey, you can't do it, but Odessa can.'" At any rate, said the mayor, "We're not going to do it."

In a related matter — the city's "drinking water" processed at the filtration plant — citizen Patrick T. Lee voiced concern over the high-salt content of Midland's municipal water. "It's a killer," he said of the sodium chloride content, which particularly can be a detriment to people on salt-free diet, including those with high-blood pressure and heart problems.

Use of ground water not well regulated: Lowerre

In 1975, the Supreme Court began to change, said the attorney. In a case dealing with subsidence in Houston, the court ruled that a landowner can pump water out of the ground. But if it is done negligently, the adjacent landowner can sue you.

THE QUESTION that still arises here is "What is negligent?" he said.

At the same time, the court noted the State Legislature needed to pass some laws to straighten it out "and the Legislature hasn't done it yet," said Lowerre.

However, the attorney contended there is a law on the books which allows regulation by the Department of Water Resources of ground water. Listed under Chapter 28, it reads "The department shall make and enforce rules and regulations for conserving, protecting, preserving and distributing underground, subterranean and percolating water located in this state and shall do all other things necessary for those purposes."

"There is not supposed to be any surface discharge from oil and gas drilling sites. But this law is basically being ignored. ...This tells you where some of the political power is in Texas."

But when a situation has arisen of ground water allegedly being polluted by oil and gas wells, the DWR claims it doesn't have jurisdiction while the RRC says it can't control use of ground water for oil and gas operations.

"It's back to the common law of if you use the water, you can use it any way you want," he said.

"The RRC had first said you can use it, but you can't waste it (ground water). Now they say they can't regulate how the ground water is used for oil and gas wells."

Lowerre added that he believes the RRC has legal authority to regulate the use of fresh water in oil and gas operations. "But it's a political issue. There are two agencies not wanting to step on each other's toes," he said.

BUT ONE PROBLEM arises even if the agencies try to enforce the laws and that is they rely on voluntary compliance by the violator.

Lowerre noted the RRC "has never had much enforcement money and they had never asked for more money until last year when they asked for additional funds for programs. It's a slow process, but the RRC is getting more responsive."

June Naylor with the Odessa League of Women Voters questioned if the RRC knew what was going on in the field.

"Oil and gas are finite and so is water. In my opinion, water is more precious than oil and gas," she said. "If (Gov. Bill) Clements is so interested in helping our budget, why doesn't he cut out the RRC and give the water people the power to do what we need done."

Lowerre replied that the State Legislature would have to change those agencies. "The oil and gas industry wouldn't support that," he said.

Questioned by the audience about the effect of sewage effluent on ground water, Lowerre said that most Texas cities have a stream or river where treated sewage is discharged.

He acknowledged there can be some seepage from that body of water into the ground water. Holding ponds also result in some leakage, he said.

But proving that the holding pond has contaminated someone's water well is difficult, he noted. And to prove that it would happen in the future is even harder.

HE URGED participation by citizens in the permitting process to allow the water commission a chance to hear their side.

Lowerre said that DWR has difficulty enforcing sewage facility standards in a city. And if a city is forced to pay a high penalty, the payment comes from the taxpayers' pockets, he noted.

Cities that are struggling to keep up with sewage treatment needs because of growth are in that position because "a lot of cities have trouble passing bond issues to enlarge the plant. And some cities were waiting for federal funds and those are being cut."

If the public begins to get more involved in permit hearings and regulation of ground water, Lowerre said he foresees the agencies becoming more responsive and taking a more active role in enforcing the laws.

Glasscock seeks nomination for Land Office commissioner

Woody Glasscock

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Saying he is "uniquely qualified," former Hondo mayor Woody Glasscock stopped over briefly at Midland Regional Airport Thursday morning to announce his candidacy for the Republican nomination for commissioner of the Texas General Land Office.

"I'm going to come in and apply modern business techniques," said Glasscock, 42, a rancher and farmer involved in oil and gas operations. "I am the only one in this race that would know how to negotiate oil and gas leases."

While Glasscock's political background consists only of serving as mayor six years and serving on the Texas Historical Commission, he told reporters he did not believe he would suffer from a lack of experience if elected.

"This particular office is one of the least poltical offices in Austin," he said. "It's more of a management office than a political office." He said his major priority would be "getting the most net profit...from the land...for the benefit of our school children."

Glasscock said he became a Republican only four years ago, but that he grew up as a conservative Democrat. "It's kind of hard to be a Republican in Medina County when the first Republican primary was held in 1980," he said wryly.

In a prepared statement, Glasscock noted that the General Land Office is the only non-taxing entity in the state which generates more revenues than it receives in appropriations. "Currently the Land Office generates over $784 million inoil and gas bonuses, rental and royalties, mineral rights leases and other operations, compared to an operating appropriations this year of approximately $7.2 million," he said. "While that's a fairly healthy return, I assure you I'll be bringing all my business background to bear on seeking ways to improve that ratio of return."

Glasscock resigned as mayor of Hondo Wednesday to devote his full time to the campaign. The Midland stopover was part of a three-day swing through the state that also include visits to Austin, Corpus Christi, Harlingen, San Angelo, El Paso, Lubbock, Amarillo, Wichita Falls, Tyler and Fort Worth.

Excavation yields surprising NYC landfill

Archeologist uncovers part of a ship found underneath the future site of an office building in lower Manhattan. The construction site became an archeological dig after the builder agreed artifacts might be found in the area, which was part of early New York City.

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Archaeologists digging through 300-year-old buried trash have found a ship that someone threw out before the Declaration of Independence was signed, back in the days when the Big Apple was just a town at the tip of Manhattan.

It is a fine ship that had sailed the Caribbean, but the ever-building city can't wait around forever for the painstaking work of pulling the whole thing out of the ground. Part of the old vessel will stay buried as a 30-story office tower rises above it.

"It was probably, for its time, a very ordinary vessel," Warren Reiss, co-director of the archaeological dig, said Thursday, "and yet it's the only one we've got."

The 18th century merchant ship, 80 feet long by 26 feet wide, was discovered 15 feet underground at Water Street in the financial district, where British developer Howard Ronson plans to construct an office building.

When the ship was found, Ronson postponed construction of his building by more than a month — at a cost of $500,000, according to his spokesman, Eamon Brennan — to allow the dig to continue.

But workers say that month won't be enough to raise the whole ship, so one side of the ship is being unearthed in numbered pieces, which are being kept temporarily in a pit filled with water so the wood won't deteriorate.

In addition, Mary Ellen Hern, a spokeswoman for the city Landmarks Commission, said the forward part of the ship — the first 20 feet — would be raised, restored and placed in a museum or institution.

The vessel apparently was buried some time around 1750 as landfill when Manhattan expanded eastward, archeologists say.

Experts say little is known about how merchant ships were built between 1660 and 1770. Historians hope to learn more about the technology of the time by studying the vessel.

"This is a rare opportunity to study the shipbuilding methods of the 18th century," says Norman Brouwer, curator of ships at Manhattan's South Street Seaport museum. "It's just too bad they don't have the opportunity to unearth the entire ship."

Reiss and his co-director and wife, Sheli Smith, will take the pieces and draw the ship as it was when it was built around 1740.

In addition to the forward part of the ship, other pieces — including a winch used to pull up the anchor — will be preserved.

The ship might have remained a buried treasure, under thousands of tons of concrete, steel and glass. But when Ronson proposed the new building, the Landmarks Commission noted that lower Manhattan was the center of colonial New York, and the site could yield artifacts.

Cuban dealings result in indictments

MIAMI (AP) — Eight people and four companies have been indicted on federal charges of "trading with the enemy," accused of transferring funds, office equipment and spare parts for airplanes and automobiles to Cuba.

The 23-page indictment handed down by a federal grand jury Wednesday alleges the transfers occurred between April 1979 and June 1980, and centered around the Freedom Flotilla boatlift which saw 125,000 Cuban refugees from the port of Mariel, Cuba, come to the United States.

Indicted companies are Havantur, S.A., American Airways Charter, Inc., Canaveral Travel, Inc. and Cuban-American Enterprises, Inc.

The concerns are charged under the same law with which federal prosecutors obtained the convictions of two New Orleans Episcopal priests in a trial in Miami last Nov. 20.

During that trial, the court ruled that Cuba — with whom the United States has no direct diplomatic relations — qualifies as an "enemy" under the provisions of the decades-old law.

The Wednesday indictment has no connection to the priests.

Individuals named in the indictment are Carlos Alfonso Gonzales, also known as Joel Max Maranbio, Charles Romeo, Hernando Fuentes Coba, head of American Air Charters, Roger Dooley, also known as Roger Montanes Caballero, a vice president of American Air Charters, Jorge DeBasa, Maria Contreras Ropert, Lourdes Rey Dopico Gonzalez and Orestes Aleman.

The indictment names some of the defendants as part of a conspiracy to transport undocumented aliens to the United States. It also charges that Gonzalez, Romeo, DeBasa and Havantur would purchase goods and equipment in the United States to be used in the Havana offices of Havantur.

The indictment claims Gonzalez, Romeo, Fuentes, Dooley, DeBasa, Ropert, Havantur and American Airways Charter conspired to engage in unlicensed transactions involving property in which the Cuban government and Cuban nationals had an interest.

According to the indictment, the goods and equipment transported to Havana included photocopiers, radios, teletype machines, "as well as spare parts for automobiles and airplanes."

VA's closed mouth worrying scientists

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration says it won't share with its own scientific advisers a key element of a planned study into the effect of Agent Orange on Americans who served in Vietnam.

The agency says it fears the results would be biased if veterans found out in advance what symptoms are to be looked for in the study.

So to prevent leaks, the VA's Advisory Committee on Health-Related Effects of Herbicides is being denied the list of questions to be put to thousands of former Vietnam servicemen. But the panel has been charged with evaluating plans for the study.

The study represents the government's chief activity in trying to determine whether the health of veterans is likely to suffer as a result of exposure to the herbicide, sprayed over the jungles and crops in Vietnam from 1962 to 1971.

The project will take five years to conduct and cost millions of dollars.

The VA awarded the University of California at Los Angeles a $133,951 contract to design the study. UCLA's first submission, in November, was rejected as flawed. The school has revised it, and now the revision is to be evaluated.

At a meeting of the advisory committee Thursday, some members questioned the decision to deny them access to the questionnaire.

"It's sort of an ostrich-like syndrome you're exhibiting here," Dr. Thomas J. FitzGerald, a medical consultant to the American Legion and a member of the committee, told Dr. Barclay Shepard, the VA official who chairs the panel.

FitzGerald said "the secrecy route" would cause veterans to doubt the validity of the study "and handicap the confidence in your study."

Another official, Maurice LeVois, suggested the decision may have to be reversed.

LeVois asked the panel to weigh "the danger that could be done by biasing the study against the danger that could be done by the bad will that could be generated by the apparent air of secrecy."

He added: "I don't want to jeopardize the study on the basis of good science but bad politics."

Declarer's line of play at his three no trump contract was well chosen. But he was foiled at the last minute by a brilliant discard.

The auction was routine. With a balanced 10 points and no major suit, North knew where he wanted to play the hand, whether his partner held a maximum or minimum no trump opening.

West led his fourth-best spade, East won the queen as declarer held up, and continued with the ten. Declarer ducked again, West overtook and persisted with spades. Declarer held off until the fourth round of the suit and East had to find two discards. He chose to let go of a card in each red suit. Dummy parted with two diamonds.

Declarer cashed the king-ace of clubs, noting the fall of West's jack. Next came three rounds of hearts, ending on the board, and East had to find another discard. Since he could not afford to let go of a club, it would seem that East had to sluff a low diamond. But East looked deeper into the position.

It seemed certain that West's distribution was 5-4-2-2. If declarer had started with the king-queen of diamonds, the contract could not be defeated. East also worked out that his ace of diamonds was a distinct liability.

If East sluffed a low diamond, declarer would lead a diamond from dummy. Whether East rose with the ace or not, the contract would be safe. If he ducked, declarer's king would win and a diamond return would end play East forcing a club lead into dummy's Q-9 tenace. But rising with the ace and getting off play with a diamond was no better, for that would give declarer two diamond tricks whether or not he held the queen. So East decided to rid himself of his liability by discarding the diamond ace on the third heart!

That set up the king in declarer's hand, but that was only his eighth trick. No matter how declarer tried, he could not prevent the defense from coming to two more tricks before he had nine.

'Colorful' Texas politician dies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Jerry Sadler, praised by the man who defeated him for land commissioner as one who stuck by his beliefs and called "colorful" by two men who were matched against him this year, is dead at the age of 74.

Sadler, former railroad commissioner, land commissioner, legislator and two-time unsuccessful candidate for governor, died Thursday at his home near the East Texas community of Grapeland.

A funeral is scheduled at the First United Methodist Church in Elkhart, near Grapeland, on Saturday morning with burial that afternoon in the state cemetery here.

Sadler is survived by his wife, Laura, and two sons, Bill and Sam Sadler, both of Houston.

Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson of Midland, Democratic candidate for land commissioner, called Sadler a "colorful personality who added zest to the political arena."

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong on Thursday described Sadler as "a hard and unyielding fighter for what he believed in."

Armstrong, who chose to run for governor rather than seek re-election as land commissioner, defeated Sadler for the position in 1970, ending Sadler's 10 years on the job.

Sadler, a snuff-dipping lawyer, was railroad commissioner from 1939 to May 1942, when he resigned to enlist in the Army. He served six years in the Texas House of Representatives starting in 1955.

Sadler ran unsuccessful races for governor in 1940 and 1946 and also lost attempts to regain his seat on the Railroad Commission in 1976 and 1978.

He had again filed for land commissioner in the May 1 Democratic primary, and his death leaves four Democrats and four Republicans in the race.

The State Democratic Party, however, announced that because of Sadler's death, the filing deadline for land commissioner would be extended to March 12.

Record low measles

ATLANTA (AP) — Measles cases in the United States continued to decline in January, with a record low 36 patients stricken by the highly contagious viral disease, public health officials said today.

The 36 cases reported Jan. 3 to Jan 30 was 71 percent below the 126 cases reported during the similar period last year and was the lowest for any four-week period since record-keeping began in 1925, the national Centers for Disease Control reported.

Public health officials hope to eradicate indigenous — or home-grown — measles in the United States by October through an intensive immunization program for school-age children.

CDC epidemiologist Dr. Alan Bloch said the statistics released today in the CDC's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report indicate the eradication effort is "on schedule."

California woman dies in accident near Odessa

From staff and wire reports

ODESSA — A 20-year-old California woman was killed and nine people injured when a church bus carrying 17 people ran off an icy highway west of here and overturned, authorities said.

The bus wrecked about 10:55 a.m. Thursday after slowing down in a construction zone because of an accident ahead of it on Interstate 20 about 18 miles west of Odessa, said Jerry Warren of the Department of Public Safety.

The bus was returning to the College Church of Christ in Fresno, Calif., after church members attended a seminar at Abilene Christian University.

The woman killed in the crash was identified as Jannell Viduarri of Fresno, Calif.

Warren, a DPS radio operator in Midland, said the injured, all residents of California, were taken to Odessa Medical Center and each was listed in good condition.

He said the nine, along with their ages, hometowns and injuries, were:

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, February 27, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Elizabeth Taylor was born on this date and is again the toast of two coasts following her success in "The Little Foxes." In private life, she is the wife of U.S. Sen. John Warner (R-Va.). Also sharing your birthday: Joanne Woodward, Ralph Nader. Long-term gambles will pay off handsomely if you are willing to bet on yourself and your loved ones. Romance enters a very exciting period. Be careful not to become too self-absorbed or a wonderful business opportunity could pass by unnoticed. The financial outlook brightens as a changing economy treats your investments better. Partnerships bring excellent results.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An easy going approach may work for others, but it is not for you. Line up appointments before going out. A new perspective on finances is highly profitable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Trust your hunches about seeking favors from influential people. Mate may act in a reserved manner; treat him or her tenderly. Bring together old friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance takes on serious overtones. Avoid fantasizing or you could overlook threats to your relationship. Friends may fail you, but brothers and sisters will not!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A hitch in plans could upset you. Remain calm. Change is necessary and will probably work in your favor. Reassess your attitude.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Share some special knowledge with younger person. You will enjoy being in the spotlight this evening. Member of opposite sex now sees you in a new light.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Curb your appetite if trying to lose weight. Look your best and you attract some interesting new friends. Show greater patience, understanding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An uplifting book gives you new insights. Your ESP is right on target. Record your ideas for future reference. A message from afar proves prophetic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Show that you can adapt to a sudden change of plans. Your personal relationships improve if you employ greater tact. Catch up on professional reading.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Some new decorative touches brighten your home and lift your spirits. Your bank account may be somewhat depleted, but the results make the expense worthwhile.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Anything that you accomplish while meeting with a family member today will have a positive influence on your future. Money is easier to obtain.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Not many people are as giving as you are. Helping loved ones who need you may detract from your love life. Do not despair! More romantic times lie just ahead.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A friend is able to give you a giant boost up the ladder of success. Make a wish and it could come true! You are more in love than you ever anticipated.

Declarer's line of play at his three no trump contract was well chosen. But he was foiled at the last minute by a brilliant discard.

The auction was routine. With a balanced 10 points and no major suit, North knew where he wanted to play the hand, whether his partner held a maximum or minimum no trump opening.

West led his fourth-best spade, East won the queen as declarer held up, and continued with the ten. Declarer ducked again, West overtook and persisted with spades. Declarer held off until the fourth round of the suit and East had to find two discards. He chose to let go of a card in each red suit. Dummy parted with two diamonds.

Declarer cashed the king-ace of clubs, noting the fall of West's jack. Next came three rounds of hearts, ending on the board, and East had to find another discard. Since he could not afford to let go of a club, it would seem that East had to sluff a low diamond. But East looked deeper into the position.

It seemed certain that West's distribution was 5-4-2-2. If declarer had started with the king-queen of diamonds, the contract could not be defeated. East also worked out that his ace of diamonds was a distinct liability.

If East sluffed a low diamond, declarer would lead a diamond from dummy. Whether East rose with the ace or not, the contract would be safe. If he ducked, declarer's king would win and a diamond return would end play East forcing a club lead into dummy's Q-9 tenace. But rising with the ace and getting off play with a diamond was no better, for that would give declarer two diamond tricks whether or not he held the queen. So East decided to rid himself of his liability by discarding the diamond ace on the third heart!

That set up the king in declarer's hand, but that was only his eighth trick. No matter how declarer tried, he could not prevent the defense from coming to two more tricks before he had nine.

'Colorful' Texas politician dies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Jerry Sadler, praised by the man who defeated him for land commissioner as one who stuck by his beliefs and called "colorful" by two men who were matched against him this year, is dead at the age of 74.

Sadler, former railroad commissioner, land commissioner, legislator and two-time unsuccessful candidate for governor, died Thursday at his home near the East Texas community of Grapeland.

A funeral is scheduled at the First United Methodist Church in Elkhart, near Grapeland, on Saturday morning with burial that afternoon in the state cemetery here.

Sadler is survived by his wife, Laura, and two sons, Bill and Sam Sadler, both of Houston.

Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson of Midland, Democratic candidate for land commissioner, called Sadler a "colorful personality who added zest to the political arena."

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong on Thursday described Sadler as "a hard and unyielding fighter for what he believed in."

Armstrong, who chose to run for governor rather than seek re-election as land commissioner, defeated Sadler for the position in 1970, ending Sadler's 10 years on the job.

Sadler, a snuff-dipping lawyer, was railroad commissioner from 1939 to May 1942, when he resigned to enlist in the Army. He served six years in the Texas House of Representatives starting in 1955.

Sadler ran unsuccessful races for governor in 1940 and 1946 and also lost attempts to regain his seat on the Railroad Commission in 1976 and 1978.

He had again filed for land commissioner in the May 1 Democratic primary, and his death leaves four Democrats and four Republicans in the race.

The State Democratic Party, however, announced that because of Sadler's death, the filing deadline for land commissioner would be extended to March 12.

Record low measles

ATLANTA (AP) — Measles cases in the United States continued to decline in January, with a record low 36 patients stricken by the highly contagious viral disease, public health officials said today.

The 36 cases reported Jan. 3 to Jan 30 was 71 percent below the 126 cases reported during the similar period last year and was the lowest for any four-week period since record-keeping began in 1925, the national Centers for Disease Control reported.

Public health officials hope to eradicate indigenous — or home-grown — measles in the United States by October through an intensive immunization program for school-age children.

CDC epidemiologist Dr. Alan Bloch said the statistics released today in the CDC's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report indicate the eradication effort is "on schedule."

Committee cites Watt for contempt

By WILLIAM CHAPMAN
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The House Energy and Commerce Committee voted 23-19 Thursday to cite Interior Secretary James G. Watt for contempt of Congress for refusing to turn over subpoenaed documents.

The vote, which could lead to a major constitutional confrontation between the House and the Reagan administration, came after Democratic critics accused Watt of a pattern of obstructionism in an investigation that began last July.

If the contempt citation goes to the House floor and the House concurs in it, Watt could be brought to trial in a U.S. District Court or, in a seldom-used alternative, arrested and tried by the House itself. The penalty on conviction would be a fine of up to $1,000 and a jail sentence of up to 12 months.

Researchers said Thursday they could find no modern example in which a Cabinet officer was cited for contempt by a house of Congress. The House Intelligence Committee voted to cite former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in 1975, but the case was settled before it reached the House floor. In two more recent cases, citations voted by subcommittees never reached the full committees.

The Watt vote was along party lines except for one Democrat who voted against the citation and one Republican voting for it.

Committee Democrats charged Watt withheld many documents for weeks and has still refused to turn over between seven and 11 documents related to an administration study of Canada's oil policy.

Republicans retorted that Watt was being assailed for strictly partisan reasons because of his controversial policies at Interior or pilloried by foes who dislike his manner.

In a statement later, Interior spokesman Douglas Baldwin said only seven documents are still in dispute, all of them protected on orders of President Reagan. The case of executive privilege probably will be resolved by the Supreme Court, he said.

Last-minute efforts to settle the Watt case failed. Committee Chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., said that early this week a conference with White House counsel Fred Fielding ended unsuccessfully when Fielding agreed only to brief committee members on the documents, not to turn them over to all the members.

Dingell said he refused the deal. But he said the committee would remain open to further offers of compromise with the executive branch.

The administration contends the remaining documents fall under executive privilege because of foreign policy considerations or because they represent internal discussions at the Cabinet level.

Gas war prices dip to 88 cents a gallon

NEWCASTLE, Okla. (AP) — Saying it was a fight for the survival of his business, a Newcastle service station owner gave the town a taste of war — a gasoline price war many motorists hoped would continue.

Jack Patterson, who owns the Newcastle Texaco station, said the Oklahoma City suburb's APCO station located across the street had been hurting his business by lowering its prices.

Patterson declared a gas war Thursday, and the stations steadily reduced gas prices until the battle ended shortly before 5 p.m. with regular gasoline being sold at 88 cents a gallon at the APCO station. Patterson went as low as 89 cents for a gallon of regular.

It was reported that as many as 25 cars at a time were lined up at the stations to take advantage of the prices. Patterson estimated he lost between $400 and $600 Thursday.

The self-service APCO station may have won the battle, but Patterson said he has won the war, in the long run. "I can offer mechanical service and fix flats and make money other ways," Patterson said. "They can't."

Patterson said he would consider extending the gas war, but APCO employees, who declined to discuss the issue further, said the battle had ended Thursday.

Crude production up, imports down

WASHINGTON — Domestic crude oil production increased and imports of crude continued to decline in January 1982, the American Petroleum Institute has reported.

According to the API's Monthly Statistical Report, domestic crude production was 1.9 percent greater this year than in January 1981. Production in January 1982 rose 162,000 barrels per day (bpd) over January of the previous year, with almost 100,000 bpd of that contributed by increased production in Alaska. The Kuparuk field in Alaska, which began production in mid December, accounted for 80,000 bpd.

Production in the lower 48 states was up some 60,000 bpd as compared to January a year ago. Had the trend of the 70s continued, the report notes, crude production in the lower 48 states would have been about 650,000 bpd lower.

Total oil imports (crude oil plus products) amounted to 5,372,000 bpd - a decline of 22.1 percent in January from the year-earlier level. The current level of oil imports is about the same as it was in the early 70s.

The amount of gasoline supplied continued to decline in January 1982 as compared with January 1981. During the month, 6,139,000 bpd were supplied - 3.9 percent less than last year.

Despite the cold weather, the level of distillate fuel oil (home heating oil and diesel fuel) supplied was 10.9 percent lower than a year ago.

The Monthly Report also noted that retail gasoline prices, when adjusted for inflation, have declined 11 percent, or about 15 cents per gallon, since March 1981.

Other January 1982 highlights:

Unleaded gasoline now accounts for 52.3 percent of the market versus 48.9 percent a year ago.

Compared with last January, residual fuel demand was off 16.2 percent and crude oil runs at refineries were down 12 percent.

The Strategic Petroleum Reserve contained 235 million barrels as of January 31, 1982.

'Dollies' fight Vietnam syndrome

By STEPHEN C. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — Their tools were large urns of Kool-Aid and "clubmobile kits" filled with construction paper signs, props reminiscent of grade school show-and-tell exercises and games such as "Concentration" and "Go."

They were the "Doughnut Dollies" of the Vietnam War, sent overseas by the Red Cross to help boost the morale of American troops fighting in Southeast Asia.

And they came home with some of the same problems and anxieties that have afflicted the men who served there.

Between 1965 and 1972, 627 women worked for the Red Cross' Supplemental Recreation Activities Overseas program. They logged thousands of miles visiting soldiers in the field and conducting simple audience participation programs for lonely and frightened GIs.

"I remember one instance where on one side of me they were throwing body bags off a truck while on the other side there was a ward of freshly wounded soldiers," says Jeanne Marie Christie, who was in Vietnam in 1967 and 1968. "It was a rude awakening... body bags on one side, freshly wounded on the other and we were in the middle and supposed to be effervescent."

Mrs. Christie served in Nha Trang, Da Nang and later at Phan Rang Air Base, witnessing the brutality of a war that claimed the lives of more than 55,000 American soldiers.

She left Southeast Asia in 1968 and returned to the United States, where she married and settled into the routine of wife, mother of two children and teacher.

Over 15 years, her memories of Vietnam faded. But last December as she talked with a group of friends who had served in Vietnam and viewed slides one of the men had taken, dark memories came crashing down around her.

"We were talking and discussing (the war) and all of the feelings I had suppressed really came back," Mrs. Christie recalled.

For two weeks, her life was in shambles.

"I was thinking a lot about Vietnam...but my mind was a void in many areas. My kids were scaring the devil out of me.

"I kept seeing this kid in Vietnam rushing down the street with a grenade and they shot him," Mrs. Christie said. "My kids would run up to me and put their arms around me and I would go right up the wall."

She was displaying the symptoms of delayed post-traumatic stress syndrome.

After being turned away at a Veterans Administration outreach center in New Haven beause she was not a veteran, Mrs. Christie contacted Claude Thomas, a counselor at the Veteran's Outreach Center in Boston, who helped talk her through the crisis.

Jeanne Marie Christie goes over a file at her home in Milford, Conn., recently as her 6-year-old daughter Sarah watches. Mrs. Christie, who served in Vietnam as a Red Cross worker, has learned the hard way that women, too, can suffer delayed, post-tramatic stress syndrome.

Mrs. Christie says she felt guilty for surviving the war while so many men she knew had been wounded or killed.

"We did a lot of talking abou the feelings.... I had of a sense of abandonment. I felt we somewhat betrayed the fellows who really trusted and believed in us," she said. "Sometimes we had moved without saying goodbye. The guys counted on us coming back and we couldn't get back. We talked these (feelings) through for a long time and I eventually came to grips with them."

Thomas, a helicopter crew chief who suffered a severe shoulder injury in Vietnam, said although there likely are thousands of women suffering post-traumatic stress, few seem willing to step forward.

Thomas added that when women veterans approach the VA for help they're usually made to feel unwanted.

But Mrs. Christie has been able to cope. Mrs. Christie is attempting to reach out to other "Doughnut Dollies" and about 33,000 other women who served in a variety of roles in Vietnam and who have been virtually ignored by those concerned with treating post-traumatic stress.

"I'm not a psychologist and cannot solve their problems," says Mrs. Christie. "What we can do is give them support and tell them where they can go to get help and information.

Veterans group to discuss Agent Orange

Dan Jordan, president of the Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans, will be in Midland tonight to hold a special seminar concerning implementation of the Texas State Agent Orange Program.

The meeting will be at the Commercial Bank beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Jordan, featured in the December issue of Life magazine, was recently elected national commander of the United Vietnam Veterans, a new nationwide group that will encompass the Brotherhood. He will be answering questions veterans have concerning Agent Orange, Delayed Stress and other problems unique to the veterans.

Rep. Larry Shaw of Big Spring also will be present. Shaw was very instrumental in getting this precedent-setting Agent Orange legislation passed last year in the Texas legislature.

The public is invited.

Forty years later, woman buries 'missing' brother

ALTA LOMA, Texas (AP) — For the first time in four decades, Barbara Scurlock can stop worrying about her brother.

Funeral services were scheduled today at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific, near Honolulu, for Marine Pvt. Thomas L. Scurlock, who disappeared during a three-day battle on Betio Island in the Phillippines — nearly 40 years ago.

Miss Scurlock, 73, says she thought of her brother "every single day" since he was reported missing in action Nov. 23, 1943.

"It was a shock when they came," Miss Scurlock said Wednesday. "It had worried the devil out of me for 30, 40 years."

"Developers like a cooperative city government and so far our dealings with the city have been excellent. Midland's an exciting place to do business."
— Ronald Harris

Developer sees 'limits'

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

San Francisco developer Ronald Harris, in Midland Thursday to conduct a seminar at Permian Basin Graduate Center, sees the Tall City as a site of vast potential investment return for commercial development but one marred by two limiting factors — lack of available housing and overreliance on the oil and gas industry.

Harris, who has investments in the Vaughn Building and the as-yet-unnamed highrise project on the site of the old Petroleum Club, said whenever a single industry accounts for more than 50 percent of a city's revenue a potential problem exists. "There are not enough other businesses other than the oil industry to bring in enough support services," he said. "But the biggest holdup in Midland in the present day is that there is no available housing to stimulate growth."

However, said Harris, 50, Midland holds considerable advantages for commercial development compared to other areas. "I think it's head and shoulders above any other city its size," he said. "I have yet to run into anybody in the commercial development field who hasn't heard of Midland."

One advantage Midland has over larger cities is the ease with which a developer can work with the city government, he said. "They are anxious to encourage growth rather than stifle it as we have in California," he noted. "Developers like a cooperative city government and so far our dealings with the city have been excellent. Midland's an exciting place to do business."

Harris first heard of commercial development possibilities in Midland from a stock broker friend, and his interest in purchasing part of the Vaughn building led to his first exposure to the city in December 1979. The new high-rise project will consist of a luxury, business-class hotel and additional office space, he said.

"We don't want to just build another office building or another hotel — we want to create a project for Midland that will be really super," said Harris.

At least one dead in oil barge mishap

NEW YORK (AP) — A fiery explosion erupted in an oil barge plying the East River off Brooklyn today, killing at least one man as it blew several people into the water and tossed metal into the air "like artillery shells," officials and witnesses said.

Arthur Manfredi, a fire spokesman, said one member of the barge crew was found dead in the wheelhouse of the vessel, which sank about an hour after the blast as it drifted downdriver.

At the scene, police Chief of Operations Patrick Murphy confirmed that one man had died and the other seven men aboard the barge had been rescued.

The Fire Department said the vessel's skipper and one crewman were taken to Bellevue Hospital. Their conditions were not known immediately.

The blast occurred at about 9:40 a.m. near the Williamsburg Bridge between Manhattan and Brooklyn.

Murphy discounted an early report that workmen on the bridge may have been blown into the water by the blast, saying a check with construction companies found no one missing.

Lt. Frank Martinez, a spokesman for the Fire Department, said, "The cargo was gasoline, but we were told the barge was riding high in the water, so it probably was empty. In any event, the explosion was in the diesel area of the barge, so it may be connected to the engine room."

Oil from the barge burned furiously and secondary explosions went off as the vessel drifted down the river along the Brooklyn side, across from the Wall Street area.

Auctions great pastime

By MARK ZANGER
Hearst Feature Service

Auctions are overrated as a source of bargains. But for entertainment, auctions are the sports world of capitalism, with the shrewdest buyers competing for the most challenging variety of goods offered in the world of free enterprise.

The auction is probably as old as the marketplace itself. The word comes from the Latin "auctio," meaning "increase," and the tendency for prices to increase with competitive bidding is an ancient and reliable one.

In America, the auction is associated with estates, foreclosures and bankruptcies. One man's tragedy is another's opportunity and, where there are goods coming onto the market, there are dealers organized to distribute them and specialists come to buy them.

The specialists are no obstacle to the ordinary bidder, because their profession allows them to bid no more than wholesale prices. But the dealers often provide a floor below which few "steals" can be made by the non-specialists.

People-watching is probably the greatest bargain at any auction. The dealers are easy to spot — a clique of men (all men) standing at the right rear (always the right rear) of the hall. Most of them have their backs to the auctioneer, and only turn to bid at the last minute. Do you dare to bid against such experts?

To get the best prices, the auctioneers need to keep a crowd interested while only a few bid on each lot. They are knowledgeable appraisers in their field, but it won't do to talk too much about the piece because an auctioneer's description is legally an advertisement. If he says the clock runs, and the buyer finds that the clock doesn't run, refunds are in order. If he says it's antique, it better be more than 100 years old.

If one must go to auctions to bid, a few simple rules will avoid tragedy:

Use the preview period well; don't get caught up in bidding on something you haven't examined carefully.

Don't look for bargains at highly specialized auctions, which are often organized only to dump mediocre goods.

Take notes on lots that interest you, and try to write down your top prices before the bidding starts.

Take along measurements and a tape measure; it's no bargain if the rug or table doesn't fit

Horoscope, weather equally chancy

By ERIC WHITE
Copley News Service

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — It's not likely that any newspaper feature calls for more faith from its readers than the horoscope and the weather forecast.

I read them both every day — every night, rather. Working for a newspaper as I do, I see them before I leave work, while most readers are asleep. I check them out, go to bed and forget about them.

The horoscope and the weather forecast — both are attempts to read the future in the skies.

The weather forecast is the more reliable, I believe. As a rule, I'll take it over the horoscope. It deals only with the weather, it's true, but the horoscope overlooks that important detail altogether.

I don't think I've ever seen a horoscope that told Libras to expect rain or Scorpios to watch out for snow.

A horoscope may say something like this to Geminis: "Cycle high. Differences with mate can be settled on favorable terms. Good day for travel. Lost object is found. Watch Aries, Capricorn."

Now I'm a Gemini, and I don't have a mate to help fulfill the first part of the prophecy. The rest of it looks pretty good, but I'd want to check the weather forecast before I decided if it is really a good day for travel.

Life changed for laid-off autoworker

PEARL, Miss. (AP) — Eddie Fisher doesn't have much to do these days except wait for someone to buy a General Motors car — lots of somebodies, buying lots of cars.

He is one of the thousands of auto workers across the nation who have been laid off because of slumping auto sales. And right now, Fisher sees little hope of getting back to work soon at the Packard Electric Division of GM at Clinton.

"There's nobody buying," he said, "and they're not talking about cutting prices enough to help."

Meantime, boredom is the main problem for Fisher, as it is for many of his fellow workers, he said.

"I try to find things to do, mostly play more with my boys," he said. There are two of them, Charlie, 3, and Tony, 1.

Both Fisher and his wife Judy see some problems ahead with the boys when he returns to work from his layoff, which began two days before last Christmas.

His wife said the children have become accustomed to having dad home.

"Now, he helps with their baths and getting them to bed, and if he goes out for the night, they are looking for him," Judy said.

Fisher said, "They don't understand what's going on, of course. But they do know I am home a lot more and they are going to wonder where I have gone."

But, said Fisher, it's a problem he looks forward to, since it will mean he is back at work.

When he was laid off from the assembly line making electrical wiring harnesses for J-cars and Cadillacs, his income dropped 25 per cent. Now, all he gets is unemployment insurance of $90 per week, plus $216 a week from the union. He figures he has about 12 weeks of unemployment left. The union benefits will depend on whether there are more layoffs, which could deplete the fund that much sooner.

"Developers like a cooperative city government and so far our dealings with the city have been excellent. Midland's an exciting place to do business."
— Ronald Harris

Developer sees 'limits'

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

San Francisco developer Ronald Harris, in Midland Thursday to conduct a seminar at Permian Basin Graduate Center, sees the Tall City as a site of vast potential investment return for commercial development but one marred by two limiting factors — lack of available housing and overreliance on the oil and gas industry.

Harris, who has investments in the Vaughn Building and the as-yet-unnamed highrise project on the site of the old Petroleum Club, said whenever a single industry accounts for more than 50 percent of a city's revenue a potential problem exists. "There are not enough other businesses other than the oil industry to bring in enough support services," he said. "But the biggest holdup in Midland in the present day is that there is no available housing to stimulate growth."

However, said Harris, 50, Midland holds considerable advantages for commercial development compared to other areas. "I think it's head and shoulders above any other city its size," he said. "I have yet to run into anybody in the commercial development field who hasn't heard of Midland."

One advantage Midland has over larger cities is the ease with which a developer can work with the city government, he said. "They are anxious to encourage growth rather than stifle it as we have in California," he noted. "Developers like a cooperative city government and so far our dealings with the city have been excellent. Midland's an exciting place to do business."

Harris first heard of commercial development possibilities in Midland from a stock broker friend, and his interest in purchasing part of the Vaughn building led to his first exposure to the city in December 1979. The new high-rise project will consist of a luxury, business-class hotel and additional office space, he said.

"We don't want to just build another office building or another hotel — we want to create a project for Midland that will be really super," said Harris.

At least one dead in oil barge mishap

NEW YORK (AP) — A fiery explosion erupted in an oil barge plying the East River off Brooklyn today, killing at least one man as it blew several people into the water and tossed metal into the air "like artillery shells," officials and witnesses said.

Arthur Manfredi, a fire spokesman, said one member of the barge crew was found dead in the wheelhouse of the vessel, which sank about an hour after the blast as it drifted downdriver.

At the scene, police Chief of Operations Patrick Murphy confirmed that one man had died and the other seven men aboard the barge had been rescued.

The Fire Department said the vessel's skipper and one crewman were taken to Bellevue Hospital. Their conditions were not known immediately.

The blast occurred at about 9:40 a.m. near the Williamsburg Bridge between Manhattan and Brooklyn.

Murphy discounted an early report that workmen on the bridge may have been blown into the water by the blast, saying a check with construction companies found no one missing.

Lt. Frank Martinez, a spokesman for the Fire Department, said, "The cargo was gasoline, but we were told the barge was riding high in the water, so it probably was empty. In any event, the explosion was in the diesel area of the barge, so it may be connected to the engine room."

Oil from the barge burned furiously and secondary explosions went off as the vessel drifted down the river along the Brooklyn side, across from the Wall Street area.

Auctions great pastime

By MARK ZANGER
Hearst Feature Service

Auctions are overrated as a source of bargains. But for entertainment, auctions are the sports world of capitalism, with the shrewdest buyers competing for the most challenging variety of goods offered in the world of free enterprise.

The auction is probably as old as the marketplace itself. The word comes from the Latin "auctio," meaning "increase," and the tendency for prices to increase with competitive bidding is an ancient and reliable one.

In America, the auction is associated with estates, foreclosures and bankruptcies. One man's tragedy is another's opportunity and, where there are goods coming onto the market, there are dealers organized to distribute them and specialists come to buy them.

The specialists are no obstacle to the ordinary bidder, because their profession allows them to bid no more than wholesale prices. But the dealers often provide a floor below which few "steals" can be made by the non-specialists.

People-watching is probably the greatest bargain at any auction. The dealers are easy to spot — a clique of men (all men) standing at the right rear (always the right rear) of the hall. Most of them have their backs to the auctioneer, and only turn to bid at the last minute. Do you dare to bid against such experts?

To get the best prices, the auctioneers need to keep a crowd interested while only a few bid on each lot. They are knowledgeable appraisers in their field, but it won't do to talk too much about the piece because an auctioneer's description is legally an advertisement. If he says the clock runs, and the buyer finds that the clock doesn't run, refunds are in order. If he says it's antique, it better be more than 100 years old.

If one must go to auctions to bid, a few simple rules will avoid tragedy:

Use the preview period well; don't get caught up in bidding on something you haven't examined carefully.

Don't look for bargains at highly specialized auctions, which are often organized only to dump mediocre goods.

Take notes on lots that interest you, and try to write down your top prices before the bidding starts.

Take along measurements and a tape measure; it's no bargain if the rug or table doesn't fit

Horoscope, weather equally chancy

By ERIC WHITE
Copley News Service

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — It's not likely that any newspaper feature calls for more faith from its readers than the horoscope and the weather forecast.

I read them both every day — every night, rather. Working for a newspaper as I do, I see them before I leave work, while most readers are asleep. I check them out, go to bed and forget about them.

The horoscope and the weather forecast — both are attempts to read the future in the skies.

The weather forecast is the more reliable, I believe. As a rule, I'll take it over the horoscope. It deals only with the weather, it's true, but the horoscope often looks that important detail altogether.

I don't think I've ever seen a horoscope that told Libras to expect rain or Scorpios to watch out for snow.

A horoscope may say something like this to Gemini: "Cycle high. Differences with mate can be settled on favorable terms. Good day for travel. Watch Aries, Capricorn."

Now I'm a Gemini, and I don't have a mate to help fulfill the first part of the prophecy. The rest of it looks pretty good, but I'd want to check the weather forecast before I decided if it is really a good day for travel.

Life changed for laid-off autoworker

PEARL, Miss. (AP) — Eddie Fisher doesn't have much to do these days except wait for someone to buy a General Motors car — lots of somebodies, buying lots of cars.

He is one of the thousands of auto workers across the nation who have been laid off because of slumping auto sales. And right now, Fisher sees little hope of getting back to work soon at the Packard Electric Division of GM at Clinton.

"There's nobody buying," he said, "and they're not talking about cutting prices enough to help."

Meantime, boredom is the main problem for Fisher, as it is for many of his fellow workers, he said.

"I try to find things to do, mostly play more with my boys," he said. There are two of them, Charlie, 3, and Tony, 1.

Both Fisher and his wife Judy see some problems ahead with the boys when he returns to work from his layoff, which began two days before last Christmas.

His wife said the children have become accustomed to having dad home.

"Now, he helps with their baths and getting them to bed, and if he goes out for the night, they are looking for him," Judy said.

Fisher said, "They don't understand what's going on, of course. But they do know I am home a lot more and they are going to wonder where I have gone."

But, said Fisher, it's a problem he looks forward to, since it will mean he is back at work.

When he was laid off from the assembly line making electrical wiring harnesses for J cars and Cadillacs, his income dropped 25 per cent. Now, all he gets is unemployment insurance of $90 per week, plus $216 a week from the union. He figures he has about 12 weeks of unemployment left. The union benefits will depend on whether there are more layoffs, which could deplete the fund that much sooner.

Meeting the challenge

All the haggling and horse-trading has already begun in anticipation of President Ronald Reagan's proposed "new federalism." And while the final form of the proposal remains to be defined, a few general observations can and should be offered up at this time.

First — and foremost — it should be noted that stripping the federal bureaucracy of a large amount of the power it had usurped in the past couple of decades is simply the embodiment of the fiscal and social responsibility sought by the states in recent years. All the screaming is coming from those who have hollered so long about so little that they've forgotten how to do anything else.

A second observation, noted in an editorial in this space earlier, is that financing the changeover on the back of the oil industry is grossly unfair and completely unacceptable. As we said earlier, no one segment of the American population should bear more of the cost of bringing about this change than any other, within limits.

A final observation — one that must be made — is that this change is essential to place the nation back on the path toward serving the American people rather than merely growing less and less responsive and more and more wasteful. Government should walk at the side of the people it serves.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby already has announced formation of a special committee of the Senate to determine how Texas can respond to the federalism change. "Texas is in better shape than most states to absorb this shift in federal effort," he noted. "We have not succumbed to the federal carrot to the degree of others. And our economy is strong."

The committee, comprised of Sens. Roy Blake of Nacogdoches, Chet Brooks of Pasadena, Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls, O.H. "Ike" Harris of Dallas, Grant Jones of Abilene, Oscar Mauzy of Dallas, H. Tati Santiesteban of El Paso, John Traeger of Seguin and Midland's own W.E. "Pete" Snelson, is to re-examine state and local government responsibilities for providing essential government services. The job will not be an easy one just as providing the services will not necessarily be simple.

States haven't actually been overjoyed at the prospect of getting back from the fedral bureaucracy the authority and the responsibility for providing these essential government services. But the ball's back in the states' court now and, as history has shown, responding to the challenge is far superior to relinquishing authority to others.

Texas is meeting the challenge headon, even before the plan is finalized. And, frankly, that's the only position to be in.

A big test for Spain

Spain's democratic government has rested on a somewhat shaky foundation for the past seven years. Although it is a far cry from the dictatorial days of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the new rulers have had to fight for the survival of their regime.

Among the enemies of a government of, by, and for, the Spanish people are a group of generals and senior officers of the civil guards. Openly, as well as stealthily, they have been plotting to wrest control of the government. One reason they have failed is that the people have been ably supported by the courage and political sagacity of their monarch, King Juan Carlos. He came to their defense a year ago when a gang of militarists invaded the halls of parliament and tried to pull off a coup.

The coup failed, but the attempt again demonstrated the shakiness of Spanish democracy.

Spain is now facing one of its biggest tests of the post-Franco era. This month it put on trial 32 officers charged with conspiring to overthrow the government and replace it with a military junta.

The free world will be watching, and hoping that justice is swift and fair. One of the goals of Spain's democratic leaders is to make Madrid a closer partner with Paris, London, Rome and Bonn in working to shore up Western Europe's economy and defenses.

Obviously Spain, a poor country, has more to gain than its wealthier neighbors from such a partnership, but in the end it will be a two-way street. The significance of the trial of the military men is that it shows Spain is trying to put its own house in order, the better to be a worthy member of the European community.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Some charitable organizations aren't

WASHINGTON — The charitable foundations that solicit our contributions to battle this or that disease all start off as noble enterprises designed to ease human suffering. But sometimes these organizations lose sight of their original goals. They become more interested in guarding their causes and in perpetuating the bureaucratic structures that have grown up around them.

Jack Anderson

Consider the case of Dvera Berson and the Arthritis Foundation: Eight years ago, at the age of 61, Berson was in almost constant pain from arthritis, a disease that afflicts 31 million Americans.

Then, on a Florida vacation, she eased into a swimming pool and began trying some slow and gentle exercises. Her pain subsided. Suspecting she had hit on something, Berson continued her water exercises over a nine-month period. The excruciating pain she had suffered for six-and-a-half years disappeared.

Overjoyed at her own experience, Berson was eager to share her discovery with other arthritics. With Sander Roy, she wrote a book, "Pain-Free Arthritis." It described 35 simple, slow water exercises Berson had developed, stressing the frequency and discipline that brought the best results from her program.

The Arthritis Foundation, instead of welcoming her discovery, jumped all over her. It lumped her in with arthritis quacks who peddle everything from worthless "miracle drugs" to copper bracelets as cures for the disease. Foundation press releases attacked her and her book. Foundation officials pursued their campaign against her on talk shows.

Eventually, they brought pressure to bear on the book's publisher, Simon & Schuster. The company stopped promoting the book, and it is now out of print in this country.

Peter Mathon, a vice president of the Arthritis Foundation, told my reporter Sharon Spivak that his main concern was with "exaggerations" and "implications" both in the book and in the promotional advertising. He also claimed that 7 or 8 million arthritics have rheumatoid arthritis or deformities that prevent them from doing the Berson exercises. Berson replies that she herself suffers from rheumatoid arthritis.

Berson suspects the real reason for the foundation's vehement criticism is its connection with its offshoot, the American Rheumatism Association. Many professional rheumatologists are members of the Arthritis Foundation, and the foundation recommends that arthritis victims first consult rheumatologists for treatment.

Another charitable group that seems to have developed bureaucratic astigmatism is the prestigious American Cancer Society. It raises $180 million a year for its highly publicized campaign to find a cure for cancer.

Much of the society's contributions come from corporations. And this, critics told my reporter Monica McKenna, is why the ACS restricts its publicity activities to generalized exhortations to donate money and to an anti-smoking campaign.

The cancer society, critics suspect, doesn't want to endanger its corporate contributions by pointing the finger at industries that pollute the workplace and the environment with carcinogens. So it doesn't use its tremendous clout to publicize such hazards as formaldehyde, to which thousands of shoemakers, pathologists and textile workers are exposed daily.

Health experts working on a union-backed screening program to detect bladder cancer in a Georgia chemical plant were stunned when the local cancer society chapter not only didn't support the program, but tried to discourage participation in it.

When the National Coalition Against the Misuse of Pesticides wrote the ACS for help in lobbying against proposed federal regulations that would weaken controls over the deadly chemicals, the society never even answered the letter.

And when Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Rep. Thomas E. Petri, R-Wis., asked the American Cancer Society to support legislation that would eliminate tobacco price supports, all they got in reply was a form letter signed by a former society president.

• • •

WATCH ON WASTE: Sometimes the federal government's attempts to cut down on waste would be laughable if they didn't cost the taxpayers so much. Take the Inter-Agency Committee on Overseas Allowances. It was set up in 1975 to study ways to cut down on the $22 million loss of productivity among government employees who enjoy not only American holidays but those of the countries they're working in. For instance, State Department personnel in Spain got 23 paid holidays a year — nine American and 14 Spanish. After seven years of study, the committee has failed to find a solution. It blames the failure on the State Department's domination of the supposedly independent task force. So U.S. employees in Spain still get 23 paid holidays a year. Next highest is the Philippines, with 20 holidays, followed by India with 18.

— The Energy Department's inspector general has concluded that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has been undercharging power companies under its hydropower licensing program by $5.9 million a year. The law requires the FERC to pay for its licensing program with annual assessments on the companies it regulates. But the commission has been letting the utilities off with bargain rates. In particular, the I.G. report notes, "charges for the use of federal lands are substantially less than justified."

CHARLEY REESE

McCarthy era used to cover Soviet moves

One of the most successful disinformation programs in history has been the effort to use "McCarthyism" to erase from public memory Soviet penetration of the United States government.

Charley Reese

Younger people have been so conditioned today that when you mention the 1950s, they automatically associate that with the "McCarthy Era" and they define that as a period of time when an unscrupulous U.S. Senator went about the country accusing innocent people of being communists.

For the sake of brevity, I will not redefend Sen. Joe McCarthy except to say that I have yet to see even one single case of a person he faisely accused of being a communist.

The point is that what made McCarthy so believable were the shocking events which preceded his rise to prominence and these are events of which most people under 30 today are totally unaware.

You see, Virginia, there actually were communists in high places and they actually were exposed. Whittaker Chambers, Elizabeth Bentley and Hedda Massing, three confessed Soviet agents, testified before Congress and as a result of a long series of hearings, a number of high-ranking U.S. officials were revealed to be agents of the Soviet Union.

Among the people identified were Alger Hiss, who had sered as advisor to the president at the now-infamous Yalta meeting, where Eastern Europe was handed over to the Soviet Union. Hiss, who had been in charge of the International Organizations Office of the Department of State, was also a key architect of the United Nations. Others identified as Soviet agents were Harry Dexter White, who had served as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Frank Coe, White's assistant, who later became head of the International Monetary Fund; Lauchlin Currie, executive secretary to President Roosevelt; Lawrence Duggan, head of the State Department's Latin American Division; and over 30 others. That's a total of 35. Virginia.

In addition, 27 Americans employed at the United Nations — all of whom were recommended through the office of Hiss — invoked the Fifth Amendment before a Senate subcommittee and were dismissed. That makes a total of 62.

Currie and Coe fled the country, Coe to Red China where he served that government until his death last year. Duggan died from a mysterious fall from a skyscraper window just prior to his scheduled appearance before the Subcommittee on Internal Security. White died of a heart attack. Hiss did not invoke the Fifth and denied he was a Soviet spy. He was convicted of perjury after Chambers produced evidence of his having turned over classified documents to the espionage ring.

All of that occurred prior to the "McCarthy Era," but after McCarthy was used to discredit anti-communism, there has never been any serious attempt to re-probe Soviet penetration of the U.S. government. During that time, of course, evidence of Soviet penetration of other Western governments has been plentiful. You would have to be extremely optimistic to believe the U.S. government, alone among the non-communist nations, is now free of traitors.

Also during that time when the history of treason has been virtually erased from public memory, the United States has suffered a series of stunning defeats by communism all around the globe.

So effective, however, has been fear of being accused of "McCarthyism" that no serious attempt, to my knowledge, is even made by the government to determine the loyalty of its employees.

INSIDE REPORT:

March maneuvers in Poland planned to con United States

WASHINGTON — Secret preparations for Warsaw Pact maneuvers in and around Poland tentatively set for mid-March are being made in Moscow not with the aim of intimidating Poland, but as part of this overriding communist strategy: Frighten the West out of applying economic pressures against Warsaw's military dictatorship.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The maneuvers are designed to carry one step further the con job against the U.S. and its Western allies. The disinformative message warns the West that if it fails to send economic help, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's "moderate" communist regime will be taken over by pro-Soviet "hard-liners."

Herein lies the last great hope of Jaruzelski and the Kremlin to persuade the West that Prime Minister Jaruzelski's declaration of martial law last Dec. 13 was strictly a Polish decision to avoid outright Soviet military intervention. Another round of Warsaw Pact maneuvers will send a new shock of fear throughout Western Europe, building sentiment to save Jaruzelski with massive economic aid.

The con job on the West is reaching extravagant proportions. The "moderate" faction in the Polish Politburo has secretly given Western reporters in Poland the "manifesto" of the hard-line faction of the Politburo. The message of the "moderates": If the West abandons us, a return to Stalinism is certain.

As usual, the tone was set by Warsaw's "moderate" front man facing westward: Deputy Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski, who protested emotionally in his interview with Oriana Fallaci. "It isn't true that we had been preparing the martial law operations for months," Rakowski exclaimed. His perfervid protests to Fallaci ("Believe me, please believe me, on the internal matters we are more free than you think.") had one purpose: Convince the West that Jaruzelski is truly a Polish patriot, not a Soviet stooge.

Yet documents now available here tell a different story. One such document, decisively giving the lie to Rakowski's denial of long preparation, is an unpublished account of an incident last Sept. 30, witnessed by a clandestine Solidarity leader who held an official position in the Communist Party.

He reported that a secret six-man committee of "national salvation" headed by Jaruzelski and Czeslaw Kiszczak, who runs the internal security forces, had been formed to suppress "popular resistance." The undercover Solidarity man reported that "the leadership of the party and government would wait another two months before using special units of the army and militia" to impose martial law. That pinpointed precisely the Dec. 13 declaration of martial law.

The imposition of martial law has failed to bring the revival of Poland's economy that Jaruzelski promised. Despite the running commentary from Jaruzelski that strikes have virtually ended and production is reaching new heights, only coal production is on or ahead of schedule. The reason is twofold: industrial sabotage and lack of credit to buy spare parts, raw materials and energy sources. The first large shipment of Polish-built tractors since Dec. 13 recently arrived in Sweden. Although Sweden has said nothing publicly, none of the tractors worked right.

Polish agriculture is similarily in a state of acute emergency. If Jaruzelski orders farmers to make compulsory deliveries of their products to the state, a rural uprising against martial law is certain. With or without an uprising, Poland faces a drastic shortage of seed grain and seed potatoes that only Western credits can overcome. Intelligence specialists here believe that 50,000 tractors needed in the fields will soon be idled for lack of tires, batteries, or spare parts.

All this makes the case for Western credits to do a job neither the Soviet Union nor any of its Eastern European allies can come close to doing. It also makes the case for the con job against the West that Jaruzelski and Poland can in fact be saved from harsher Soviet intervention only by Western sympathy and assistance.

The appeal to the West is reaching a peak as the U.S. and its European allies are at a nadir of unity over handling the Soviet Union in the Polish crisis. Disagreements divide not only the alliance but policy-makers in the Reagan administration, suggesting that the con game from Moscow and Warsaw has a good chance to succeed.

If that happens, Moscow will be rescued from a grave crisis of Soviet communism, perhaps the gravest it has ever faced. But if the West, led by the U.S., insists on true internal reforms in Poland before giving help, Moscow can refuse the reforms only at the cost of famine in Poland. But as the Soviets make ready another round of military maneuvers, that will require steely nerves — a quality not abundant in the West today.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Feb. 26, the 57th day of 1982. There are 308 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 26, 1952, Winston Churchill announced that Britain had produced its own atomic bomb.

On this date:

In 1521, an earthquake in Portugal killed tens of thousands of people and flattened much of Lisbon and other cities.

In 1918, German planes bombed Venice, Italy, during World War I.

In 1962, the Saigon palace of South Vietnam's President Ngo Dinh Diem was bombed by two dissident pilots of South Vietnam's Air Force.

And in 1974, the Ethiopian city of Amsara was seized by army units demanding better pay and living conditions.

Ten years ago: More than 30 people were killed near the mining town of Logan, W.Va., when a huge coal slag heap serving as a dam burst under the pressure of torrential rains.

Five years ago: Ugandan President Idi Amin gave assurances that his government would not harm the more than 200 Americans in that African nation.

One year ago: British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher met with President Reagan at the White House and praised his economic policies.

Benefits to vets' families would resume under bill

Copley News Service

The fight by military widows to win restoration of benefits cut last year gained momentum with the introduction of a bill in Congress by Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif.

"I think it's terrific," said Susan Hall of Coronado, Calif., a member of Survivors of Sacrifice, the military widows' group formed to seek reinstatement of the Social Security benefits eliminated for them and their children as part of federal cutbacks approved last year by Congress.

Largely affected are families of Vietnam veterans, who enlisted in the military with the understanding that in the event of their death, their children would receive monthly Social Security payments until they were 18, and until age 22 if they were enrolled in college.

Under the changes approved last year, scheduled to take effect this summer, those benefits would be paid to mothers until their children reach 16, and then to children until they turn 18.

Hunter's bill, submitted to the House veterans affairs and armed services committees, would establish Veterans Administration benefits to offset the loss of widows' benefits and Social Security benefits that have been cut.

Micro-surgery saves time, pain

By MAUREEN McTAGUE DANA
Hearst Feature Service

ALBANY — Following surgery five years ago to repair her damaged right kneecap, Edwina Jensen was fitted with a cast from hip to toes and laid up for five months.

Jensen had her left kneecap surgically repaired the week before last Christmas. This time, she was out of bed two hours after the operation, discharged from the hospital in three days, and back to work two weeks later.

She describes the scar from the first operation as "huge" and "ugly." Of the scar from the second she says, "I do worse when I shave my legs."

The difference? Arthroscopy, a technique that's become increasingly popular with orthopedists since the late '70s. It enables them to combine the use of a miniature telescope known as an arthroscope with equally tiny surgical instruments to perform an operation they can view through the scope.

According to Dr. Bryan Bilfield, an orthopedic surgeon affiliated with St. Peter's Hospital and Childs Hospital here, the benefits to the patient are many.

Cosmetically, the one-quarter inch incisions required for arthroscopy leave smaller scars than the cuts required for traditional surgery.

The recovery time is much shorter, ranging from a week to 10 days, compared to four to six weeks with traditional surgery, and hospitalizations are briefer. In some cases, surgical arthroscopy can be done as an outpatient procedure, Bilfield said.

And post-operative pain tends to be less severe than with traditional surgery.

Used primarily on the knee, the technique has also been used on the shoulder, ankle, wrist and elbow. Though Bilfield uses arthroscopy for all diagnostic procedures and about 50 percent of surgical ones, he estimates only 15 percent of orthopedists have adopted it.

The operation is based only on what the surgeon can see through the scope, which magnifies the image 10 times. "It's just like trying to put a ship together inside a bottle, except you can't see the bottle," Bilfield explained.

According to Bilfield, an arthroscopic procedure on the knee, which would typically combine diagnosis and surgery, works like this:

The patient is given either a general or spinal anesthetic which insures total relaxation of the joint.

A special knife is used to punch two one-quarter inch holes through the skin and into the knee joint — one hole for the arthroscope and the other for a "feeling instrument" the surgeon uses to pinpoint problem areas.

After a diagnosis is made, the surgeon will determine whether to procede with arthroscopic surgery, traditional surgery instead, or not to operate at all.

If he opts for arthroscopy, the surgeon may need to make up to two more one-quarter inch incisions to enable him to use the tiny surgical scissors, using a miniature forceps or suctioning instrument to remove bits of damaged cartilage.

Bilfield says he has used the technique on patients of all ages, from youths who have suffered sports injuries to senior citizens with arthritis. For the latter patients, surgical arthroscopy can often delay the need for joint replacement surgery for several years, althought it will probably not allow them to postpone it indefinitely, he added.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Cancer research taking many forms

Dear Dr. Solomon: I keep reading about advances in the treatment of cancer. What are all these advances? Are they new drugs that have been discovered? — Hal, Topeka, Kan.

Dear Hal: The search for new drugs is an important area of investigation in the fight against cancer, but sometimes finding a new method of using existing drugs can be equally important. For example, physicians at the John Hopkins Medical Institutions in Baltimore have changed the standard approach to the treatment of acute myelocytic leukemia and have achieved gratifying results.

They continue to use two drugs that have been around a number of years, arabinosyl cytosine and daunorubicin; however, they administer the drugs in a different time sequence and in different doses. According to Dr. Phillip Burke, of more than 100 patients who were treated with this new approach, 60 percent have achieved complete remission and 20 percent have survived at least five years.

You can see from this example that a change in method may produce beneficial results even when the same drugs are being used. The same may be said of radiation therapy and surgery in the treatment of cancer.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I think I would be able to follow almost any kind of diet if it meant that I could stop taking insulin. Is this possible? — Hank, Newark, N.J.

Dear Hank: Dr. James W. Anderson, of the University of Kentucky College of Medicine in Lexington, reports that a diet high in complex carbohydrates and low in fats can reduce the insulin requirements of some diabetic patients. In some cases, it may be possible to discontinue insulin completely. The diet is easy to maintain since it consists of such foods as whole grain cereals and garden vegetables.

The diet provides 70 percent carbohydrate, 19 percent protein, and 11 percent fat, with 65 grams of plant fiber each day. An added benefit of the diet is that it tends to lower serum cholesterol levels.

It should go without saying that no one with diabetes should embark on this or any other diet without his physician's knowledge and approval. Any diet may be suitable for some people but not for others.

For quick lesson on lifestyles, peruse goverment press kits

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

ONITSHA, Nigeria (AP) — The prevailing orthodoxy among pilgrims of the press seeking truth in strange lands is to shun the apocrypha found in the official press kits and to avoid government handouts with cries of "unclean."

I must confess to creeping close to apostasy here.

I often find the press releases prepared by nameless drone hacks in the honeycombs of bureaucracy dripping with juicy nectar.

How else would one learn that in the cool of the evening of the Nigeria city of Onitsha, once the capital of the breakaway Republic of Biafra, people "stroll to the fine bridge over the River Niger to rid themselves of boredom..."?

In Enugu, another town in eastern Nigeria, the press kit informs "there are a number of love gardens where people can relax at weekends playing and reducing tension."

One honors one's mother in these parts by giving her a horse. "This could be performed after the mother is dead," as we are told by the same anonymous flack, "but the honor would be for the children alone. If done in the mother's lifetime, she shares in the honor."

Mulligan's Stew

If father is given a horse on Father's Day or his birthday, "he gives more love to his children too; above all he will no longer take any meal without meat." The author is a bit vague above whether the last phrase means the gift horse will eventually end up in the mouth.

Youths burned as 'package' explodes

exploded in mid-air with a popping sound and a white flash of light, the boys reported. Both youths lost their eyebrows and eyelashes, but apparently will not suffer any permanent eye damage.

Mrs. Farmer said there were no witnesses to the incident because other children had congregated at the back of the school to witness a fight. Extensive investigation and questioning by police and the parents, however, support the boys' account of what happened.

The mother also said the car — described as a long, dirty, older model vehicle with part of the chrome strip missing from the passenger side — has been seen following the bus several times in the past.

However, school officials today said if the bus has been followed, its driver was not aware of it.

While police and the FBI are at a loss to explain the nature of a device that could explode with the characteristics described by the boys, Assistant Fire Marshal Bob Williams said there are homemade "state of the art" chemical fire bombs that can disintegrate and explode when thrown.

"They're used by some of the militant organizations," he said, adding that his office will conduct an investigation of the incident. Police have filed the case as an aggravated assault and are looking for two men in their late teens or early 20s, one of whom was said to have dirty, shoulder-length hair.

Restaurant serves a specialty of snake

By ROBERT WIELAARD
Associated Press Writer

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — Slipping a coiled, skinless rattlesnake into a hot frying pan, James Forsyth opined that Belgians are culinary adventurers.

"They'll try damn near anything," he said through the steam and sizzle rising from the pan.

For that matter, so will Forsyth, 36, a former machinist from Buffalo, N.Y. His restaurant here serves South African ostrich, Texas rattlesnake and alligator, Arizona antelope and other curious dishes.

Forsyth's, a cozy corner eatery off a busy shopping street in Antwerp's south end, opened in 1975, offering common Belgian favorites such as steak and frites (french fries).

Three years later, said Forsyth, he was watching a show on television about a rattlesnake hunt in Arizona.

It then took another two years to find U.S. suppliers who could deliver 110 pounds of snake at a time, he said.

"Rattlesnake," said Forsyth's Belgian wife, Simone, "tastes, well, like snake. It doesn't have a strong flavor. You give it character in the preparation. I love it!"

So do customers at Forsyth's who munch through 110 pounds of rattlesnake in about a fortnight.

"I always have at least two different things," said Forsyth, opening a refrigerator revealing the week's specialties, several rattlesnakes and an entire Texas alligator.

"Tastes like pork and smells like fish," he said, lifting the gator somewhat.

Forsyth's serves ostrich and rattlesnake lightly sauteed. "I always have ostrich," he said.

And what does it taste like?

"Well, if you didn't know what you were eating, you'd say it was the best beefsteak you'd ever had."

Ostrich meat is red. Forsyth serves it several ways, including smothered in barbecue sauce and accompanied by either hearts of palm, apple fritters, salad, vegetables or corn bread.

His restaurant serves alligator roasted, while medalllions of antelope are flambeed.

Prices range from about $9 for ostrich steak to double that for harder-to-get alligator.

Forsyth's wife tests all dishes. "Snake is very good," she said. "You can still see it is a snake, of course. You know, the ribs, backbone and all that. It's difficult to eat unless you use your hands. If you're in a hurry, don't eat snake."

Forsyth gets his snakes headless and without the venom glands and serves them whole.

"I've been cooking since I was a kid," said Forsyth, who retains his clipped upstate New York accent. He plans to extend his menu soon with such delicacies as monkey, crocodile and boa constrictor, all from South America, and bear and buffalo from North Dakota.

"Boa is supposed to be between red and white meat," said Forsyth over a cup of coffee in his turn-of-the-century-style restaurant.

He has tried cobra, "but it tastes like horsemeat." It is hard to sell to Belgians, who love horsemeat and can get it for less money than cobra, he added.

Zoo begins adoption program

KANSAS CITY (AP) — It's an adoption program a parent could love: unlimited visitation, expenses as low as $15 a year, a trained staff to handle feeding and clean-up, and year-round babysitting.

Of course, the "child" might be a giant fruit bat, crested porcupine, or a river otter.

But Kansas City has some broad-minded "parents," and they are responding to an "Adopt a Wild Child" campaign recently launched by the Kansas City Zoo.

For as little as $15 a year a zoo parent can feed a tarantula (10 crickets a week), while $5,500 feeds Casey, the bull elephant, who needs 25 pounds of cabbage and carrots and 70 pounds of hay a day.

No sports TV

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A small-appliance store chain unofficially bans sporting events from display on television sets in its stores.

"The potential buyer tends to become interested in the game and forgets why he came into the store in the first place," said store manager Jerry Leibert, explaining the policy.

"Also, I'm likely to be watching games, rather than working," he added.

Device may clear up common cold symptoms

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli scientists say they have developed a device which generates a stream of moist, hot air that is breathed in by a cold sufferer and has shown a success rate of 85 percent in tests in clearing up headaches, runny noses, muscular aches and other common cold symptoms.

Developed from an idea at the Weizmann Institute, it has also demonstrated effectiveness against allergies for up to two weeks with no harmful side effects.

Called rhinotherms, it is being developed at Kibbutz Netzer Sereni in northern Israel and is expected to cost about $200.

Children are counseled after death of parents

CHICAGO (AP) — Ten-year-old Matthew lost his father three years ago. Yet he still has imaginary conversations with him every night. David, who is 4, looks for his mother, who has just died. "Where is the lady?" he asks. "I miss her." Melanie, at 5, speaks of her father two years after his death: "I wish we could buy one. There has to be a dad at home."

Matthew, David and Melanie are among the more than 4 million U.S. children each year who lose a parent.

Because they live in Chicago, they and their surviving parent are comparatively fortunate. They receive counseling and support at one of the few psychoanalytic centers in the country to help children cope with the death of a parent: the Barr-Harris Center for the Study of Separation and Loss during Childhood.

According to Dr. Arnold Samuels, director of the center at the Institute for Psychoanalysis in Chicago, "A trauma like the death of a parent can have profound consequences for children. We have observed children failing in school, fearful of illness, feeling no confidence — indeed, displaying a range of symptoms which endanger their normal development."

Problems can also arise later in life. Individuals whose parents died when they were children are highly susceptible to periods of depression, anti-social behavior, arrested emotional development, physical illness and even suicide, says Samuels.

The families who come to the center have, more often than not, had little time to prepare for their tragedies. More than two-thirds of the deaths were caused by murder, suicide, accident or sudden illness, more than half of the deceased parents were under 40.

The surviving parents are "not pathological," Samuels observe. "They are people deeply concernd with the effect of the trauma of death on an otherwise normally functioning family."

Work with these families has verified a hypothesis of many analysts that children must be permitted to mourn and grieve when a parent dies if a new balance is to be attained, he says.

"There are no simple ways to deal with this," Samuels says. "Euphemisms designed to spare pain may not be very helpful." He points out that an abstraction such as "heaven" may be perceived by very young children as a place to which the dead parent has gone; the child will wonder why he can't visit. Youngsters who are told their parent has "gone to sleep" are very likely to fear they will not be able to wake up from their own sleep.

"A direct and realistic response is best," says Samuels. He stresses the importance of concrete examples which illustrate that all living things die, such as falling leaves or pets that have died.

To prevent children from becoming fearful the surviving parent may die, it is important, Samuels adds, for a parent to tell a child that most people live long lives and that the parent takes care of his or her own health, and so is likely to be there to take care of the child.

Typically, the parent and child are seen an average of seven hours during an initial evaluation. Each child has at least two interviews, and the surviving parent three or four. Follow-up sessions are held every three to six months.

A usual fee of $40 per session can be reduced or waived depending on the family's circumstances. "We turn no one away," says Samuels.

Singer gets early start on country music stardom

By SHARON LITTLE
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — His walk is country. His drawl is country. His hat and neckerchief are definitely country. Put 'em all together, add a few guitars and a lot of vocalization, and you've got a country star in the making.

His name: Rocky Marciano Shroyer. His game: country music.

He's so nonchalant about life on stage that those in the country-music business say he's got, or is getting, what it takes to make it big.

But the freckle-nosed, Huckleberry Finn look-alike, who won Fort Wayne Parks' highest overall amateur country-music talent award last summer over a field of adults and children, is taking his accolades and growing number of trophies in stride.

With a wide-eyed gaze and a quicksilver smile, Rocky says, "I just like to sing, it feels pretty good."

When his fourth-grade classmates ask if he's afraid to sing in front of crowds, he says, "Nah, it's fun, it doesn't bother me."

By this time, at age 10, it shouldn't bother him. Rocky has been at the country music business since he was 3, when he sang "I Got Ran Over by a Damned Old Train" in a local tavern's family room.

He also sang in country-music events at the Fort Wayne Coliseum, in a radio rodeo competition where he took third place, and with bands at local music hangouts where he jams with other musicians.

The parks' talent show last summer at Foellinger Theater was a big feather in his cowboy hat. He took home two trophies.

Rocky, whose father chose the name to honor the former heavyweight boxer, recently sang for the Lindley School in Fort Wayne with backup from a local band.

Pigtails and ponytails in the audience bounced and swayed, hands clapped in time to some of Rocky's songs, delivered in a half-talking, half-singing style in his low, husky voice.

There are shades of the Oak Ridge Boys and Kenny Rogers in the Shroyer style. He says Rogers is his favorite country-Western singer "'cause I like all his songs. I'd like to sing like him some day."

He first started singing because his father, Steve Shroyer, also sang around the house a lot and did some entertaining. Rocky learns the songs by listening to them on the radio, recording them for his own use, says his mother, Donna Shroyer.

He has developed his own low-key dance steps, using a heel tap here, a kind of swinging swagger there to punctuate certain words or phrases.

Rocky says he'd like to pursue a country-music career. The family will go to Nashville this summer to get a feel for whether Rocky might have a chance to sing for or meet any country greats.

Meanwhile, he says he just wants to keep singing those "pretty good" Western songs that "have a good beat."

Instructor uses karate skills to spread Christian word

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Karate instructor Samuel Doyle smashes boards with missionary zeal as he talks to his students about Christ and the virtues of resisting temptation.

"That way I show people that the word of God is quick and powerful and sharper than any two-edged sword," Doyle says. "With his help, you can slice through any temptation."

This is Karate for Christ, Doyle's new martial-arts school in Grand Rapids, and he says teaching people to defend themselves is the best way for him "to continue my walk with Jesus."

"Karate does not hinder your life as a Christian," Doyle says. "I think it only enhances it. I believe the Lord works through you, and that karate helps build your confidence.

"Karate cultivates self-control and self-confidence, as well as respect for others — all very Christian values."

Doyle says he hopes to expand and convert the entire third floor of a Grand Rapids warehouse into a training center complete with dressing rooms, weight machines, punching bags and boxing rings.

But that expansion will be determined by the success of the school, and Doyle only charges what the students think they can pay.

"It's all being done on a free-will, donation basis," he says. "I'm doing it all in the belief that you should give and it shall be given back to you."

For students who are interested in religion, Doyle gives Bible-based karate lessons. He sometimes sets up five boards and talks about resisting temptation before smashing the wood with his calloused hand.

But religion is not a condition of entry into the school.

"You don't have to be a devout Christian to come in here," he says. "Anyone can come in and work out. I'm not going to preach to them."

Doyle says he decided last year that opening the school was his destiny after spending three weeks in a county jail in Kentucky for passing bad checks. He says he had followed his girlfriend to Kentucky and had strayed from his Christian values after they broke up.

"I've decided that I'm not going to blow it this time," he says.

'Man in gray flannel suit' still exists, author finds

SEATTLE (AP) — Many of America's successful young executives may talk in the buzzwords of 1970s' social consciousness, but don't you believe they're really spending more time with their families or tying on an apron to help their wives, says author Jane Adams.

"They talk a lot more about 'quality time' and 'shared parenting' but what it really comes down to is a trade-off," she said.

"They'll decide to spend weekends with the families, then they'll work until midnight every night of the week — and the 'quality' time on weekends often becomes errand-running."

In her latest book, "Making Good," Ms. Adams surveyed 200 top executives nationally and conducted in-depth interviews with 50 of them, mostly in Seattle and New York.

The Seattle author, who is living in New York for a year "as a sabbatical" was interviewed on a recent visit home.

She was trying to find out, she said, if the hard-driving workaholic career climber described in Sloan Wilson's 1955 novel, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit," had survived the social changes since then. She decided he had.

"The media have really been telling us that men have changed — they're turning down promotions when jobs interfere with their families or lifestyles...there are pictures of men in aprons," she said.

But she concluded 30-year-old super-achievers "are not substantially different" from the older ones.

"There's been a lot of lip service to change, but there's really been no change," she says.

About the only difference between generations, she says, "is that the younger ones are not as willing to delay gratification — so they give money to their families instead of time."

While many executives in their 40s and 50s said they occasionally resented their stay-at-home wives who were fresh and talkative at the end of the day, Ms. Adams found successful younger men who'd used women's careers to solve that problem.

"One of the 30-year-olds openly said, 'I want a wife who's as tired as I am at the end of the hard day.'"

Ms. Adams, who has observed how people adapt to social change in her earlier books, "Sex and the Single Parent" and "Women on Top — Success Patterns and Personal Growth," says she's observed a number of behavioral differences between top male and female executives.

They include:

—Successful women are more interested in talking about their successes than men. "I think the women want the validation (of being identified as a success) but the men are very leery."

—Women tend to think more about the balance between the personal and professional parts of their lives.

—Men who get to the top have usually decided that is the most important part of their lives and seldom question the decision. Older women who do it have made a conscious choice to place career ahead of family; younger women "feel they can have both."

—Successful men are inclined to have more stable marriages than successful women. "They look at the wives as emotional caretakers...the wife at home is supposed to maintain a solid base, a stable place from which to take risks," Ms. Adams said.

She found the men in her research "essentially emotionally inarticulate. They weren't trying to hide anything, but when you asked them how they felt about something they'd respond with 'and then we bought...' or 'and then we merged.'"

Epilepsy common in canines

NEW YORK (AP) — Epilepsy is more common in dogs than in humans, according to the Epilepsy Institute.

Epileptic dogs are often purebred and have a family history of the illness. Epilepsy has been reported to be inherited among certain breeds including Irish setters, German shepherds, beagles and poodles.

As with humans, epilepsy in dogs is generally treatable and seizures can be kept under control through use of drugs.

Prevent mildew from forming on fabrics, wood, etc.

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Moisture, so necessary in our lives, also is necessary in the lives of the simple plants belonging to the group known as fungi. Without moisture, these plants, called molds, cannot grow. And when the particular molds that cause mildew cannot grow, they will not discolor or destroy fabrics, wood, paper and anything from which they can derive nourishment.

Rule No. 1 for the prevention of mildew, therefore, is to get rid of the dampness that, in conjunction with certain other conditions, enables mold to flourish. These other conditions include warmth, lack of ventilation and little or no light.

Where do all these conditions exist? Very often, in basements, crawl spaces, closets, draperies, rugs and on shower curtains. They exist, also, in many other places, among them damp clothes rolled up for ironing. If you have a hamper for soiled clothes, as most houses do, don't put damp articles into it. The combination of dirt, dampness, lack of light and little ventilation almost insures mildew.

Not to be overlooked in the effort to control dampness is condensation. This occurs when warm, moist air settles on a cold surface, which can be a window, a wall, a pipe or anything else in and around a house. That is why the excessive moisture caused by cooking, laundering and bathing will condense on something cold in a house where there is inadequate ventilation.

When this happens, the warm, moist air must be permitted to escape or it must be trapped. It can be pushed outside via an exhaust fan, vents or even an open window or it can be captured via a dehumidifier.

Outside drainage must be sufficient to keep water from leaking into basements through openings or porous materials. In houses without basements, the trouble is caused when moisture arises from the ground in crawl spaces. The remedy usually is to spread a layer of polyethylene plastic film or heavy roofing paper on the ground in the crawl space, keeping the edges airtight by overlapping them and keeping them in place with sand.

Inside the house, air circulation is important in clothes closets and other confined areas susceptible to dampness. Hang the clothes loosely so air can go around them. Be sure all clothing is dry before it is hung in the closet. Air out the closet frequently by opening the doors, especially during continued wet weather. Get a bag of one of the dehumidifying agents that absorb moisture, among them silica gel, activated alumina and calcium chloride.

Most department and hardware stores and home centers carry them. Some persons burn a small electric light continuously inside a closet to prevent mildew, but if this is done, you must be especially careful that the bulb is a sufficient distance from the clothing to avoid the danger of a fire. If you use one of the chemicals, read the instructions carefully to determine whether the bags can be dried and used again and the manner in which they should be dried.

Sometimes, despite all your efforts, there are musty odors on cement floors or tiled walls and floors in bathrooms

Chlorine bleach, the kind sold in grocery stores, is effective. Use one-half to one cup of the bleach to a gallon of water. Rub, then rinse with clear water and wipe dry as quickly as possible. Keep windows and doors open until everything is thoroughly dry to the touch. Work quickly on plastic and asphalt surfaces to avoid spotting the surfaces. There are also some products made just for removing mildew, but read the label first to be certain a product can be used on the particular material you are cleaning.

A country store in the basement

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The basement of their suburban home is fitted out like an old-time country store.

The library is done in Egyptian revival. The room where she writes is furnished with mission oak and their daughter's bedroom in country antiques. Their own room has Victorian style furniture.

The house has accommodated all the "finds" that Ralph and Terry Kovel have bought over the years. In the process, Ralph likes to joke, it has sunk three inches.

If he enjoys a joke about his antique buying career, who could be surprised? The Kovels — Ralph and Terry — by a happy coincidence of good luck and history have become everyman's antiques authorities.

Their 32 books, regular newspaper and magazine columns, newsletters and television programs are designed to guide the millions of Americans who see them. The Kovels — who started with no special expertise 30 years ago — might almost be considered stand-ins for their public.

The growth of their knowledge, interest and expertise has its counterpart in the outpouring of interest in old things over the past three decades among millions of Americans.

Recently, Terry Kovel reflected a bit on the changes that have occurred since she and her husband wrote their first book in 1953 — a dictionary of pottery and porcelain marks.

"Our friends thought we were eccentric to buy used stuff when we started in the 1950s. It just wasn't done in those days. Today, the wealthiest of the wealthy buy used clothing. In those days, it would have been a scandal."

The Kovels have seen the attitude toward collecting old things change radically over the years. Terry credits the opening of a number of great collections to the public in the 1930s and 1940s with stimulating an appreciation for antiques. It wasn't until the 1950s, however, that average people began buying antiques for themselves.

At first "nobody but little old ladies went into antique shops and they were just checking on how much their family heirlooms were worth," she said.

Today, young people are among the most avid collectors. Often the dealers are young, too. Antique hunting has become a family activity, she said, and museums and societies that put on programs have learned to offer something for everyone in the family, including the children.

In their travels, the Kovels have found that there are both the expected differences and some surprising similarities in market demand across the country.

"There have always been more Oriental things on the West Coast and more heavy oak furniture in the Midwest and East. Some things were made locally and so are in good supply in some areas and almost unknown in others. Ohio, for example, has sewer tile figures. Maine has spruce gum boxes.

But some things are popular in many parts of the country. Geisha girl porcelain figurines from the early 1900s are starting to be collected all over the United States. Blue willow pattern dishes are popular all over, according to Terry.

Coming onto the collecting horizon now is dinnerware that was sold new in the 1930s. Already popular in many parts of the country, but still less expensive in the Midwest, are more art deco style objects.

As married, working partners of long standing, the Kovels share many ideas. But the couple admit to some differences of opinion.

Men spend more on antiques, insists Ralph. That's why items that men collect — such as mechanical banks and toys, swords and guns — stand to sell for high prices.

Terry is not so sure that men spend more. She's keeping an open mind on the subject.

(The Kovels' most recent books are "Know Your Antiques," and "Know Your Collectibles," both published by Crown.)

Replace old soap dish in shower

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have a combined soap dish-grab bar in the shower stall in our bathroom. It is in bad shape and I want to replace it. Can you tell me how to do it?

A. — Use a cold chisel and hammer to take out the old dish-bar. Chisel away carefully at the edges so as not to break any of the surrounding tile. Be sure the replacement is of the same size. The color need not be a match, since a contrasting color can be attractive. Scrape off all the old adhesive. Apply new adhesive, filling the space between the joints with grout. Hold the new dish-bar in place until the adhesive dries, using masking tape or something similar. While it may be safe to use the dish a few hours later, don't take any chances with the grab bar parts of it. Try not to use it for a couple of days, longer if possible.

Q. — Our fireplace has been smoking a little. It seems to occur only when we have an exhaust fan on in the kitchen, which is a considerable distance from the fireplace, which is in the living room. How can this be making the fireplace smoke?

A. — Because the fan is drawing air out of the house and, when the fireplace is operating, this brings air down the chimney. That air, in turn, pushes smoke out of the fireplace opening. It's what is known as as reverse air flow and can take place for any number of reasons. You are fortunate in knowing what the reason is. Just be sure that, before you start a fire, the exhaust fan is off.

Q. — I read somewhere about rubbing a newly varnished surface with pumice in powder form. While I have never used pumice powder, it seems to me that it might cause scratches in the varnish. Isn't it an abrasive?

A. — Yes, it is an abrasive, but it smooths a surface rather than scratches it — if it is used properly. It must be used with either oil or water as a lubricant, although water should not be used if the finish is shellac. When a scratch occurs in a surface while using powdered pumice, it is because a tiny object, perhaps a sliver of wood that is almost invisible or a piece of hardened dirt, has found its way into the powder. Before using the pumice, check it carefully. Some woodfinishers even sift the powder to be certain it has nothing foreign in it.

Q. — Can you tell me what is put into some kinds of shellac to make it orange in color? I have some white shellac left over and would like to make it orange.

A. — Sorry, you have it backwards. Shellac is naturally orange in color. It is the so-called white shellac that has been changed to make it white, which actually is a misnomer, since it is more clear than white. Orange shellac that has been bleached makes the white shellac.

(The techniques of using shellac, lacquer, varnish, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," aailable by sending 50 cents AND a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743.)

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Don't make this mistake on no-wax floors

DEAR HELOISE:

Help! I'm afraid I have ruined our almost new no-wax vinyl kitchen floor. I put down rubber mats in front of the sink and stove and, under them, the vinyl has changed color.

What can I do to bring the color back? Like I said, I need your help! — Ruth Hernden

+ + +

I'm told by major manufacturers of no-wax vinyl that rubber mats should not be used on these floors because they could cause them to discolor. The damage, I'm sorry to say, is irreversible. About the only thing you can do at this point is to keep discolored areas covered or replace the floor covering.

Those of you who may be planning to install one of these no-wax vinyl floors, take a lesson from Ruth and don't put down rubber mats or throw rugs with rubber or latex backing. Avoid throw rugs that aren't colorfast too. Many times, the dye from these rugs can leach off onto the vinyl or be tracked off, causing unsightly discolorations on your expensive floor.

It's not worth taking a chance, is it? — Heloise

ZIPPER PULL

Dear Heloise: Last night, when undressing for bed after a dinner party, I found I couldn't get out of my tight evening gown. I could move the zipper up but not down.

So, I pulled it up to the neck, then attached a large safety. I ran a length of yarn through the pin and used it to easily pull my zipper all the way down.

Surely got me out of a difficulty and thought perhaps it might help others in the same situation. — Eleanor Oliveria

NO LOST MITTENS

Dear Heloise: Here's a little remedy for those who have toddlers (as I do) who love playing outdoors even when it's freezing, and can't seem to keep their mittens on.

Use a long-sleeved knit shirt that is a size or two larger than the child normally wears. Tuck the cuff of the shirt into the mitten and hand-stitch the top of the mitten to the shirt.

You can then just slip the shirt on over whatever they're wearing and put their coat on over it.

I've found this method works better than safety pins or mitten clips so thought I'd pass it on to other mothers who are still making several trips a day into the cold to search for and replace mittens. — Shirley Conover

STAY PUT SLIP

Dear Heloise: I'm sure others have the same problem, so will you please suggest a way to remedy the way slips crawl up when worn over panty-hose?

The only answer I've discovered is to wear slips wrong side out. — J.M.B.

+ + +

As long as it works, why not! No one but you will ever be the wiser...

But, just in case this is not the answer for some of you, be sure to use a liquid fabric softener in the rinse water and let slip and hose drip-dry. You should then be cling-free!

Don't put these nylon garments in a clothes dryer — this only contributes to the static problem. — Heloise

NO STICKING TRAYS

Dear Heloise: Coat the insides of sticking icetrays with a very thin film of petroleum jelly. Wipe off excess.

The ice will slide out much faster and easier. — Judy Davies

HAND CLEANER

Dear Heloise: My husband is a real grease-monkey. When he comes in to clean up, he's really a mess!

When I've run out of a powdered hand cleaner, I've found if he will sprinkle a little salt or sugar on his hands after lathering up with soap, the granules help scrub off that grease and grime.

Now, if I could just get the sink clean so easily... — Loves 'em!

+ + +

BREAD BAGGIN'

Dear Heloise: I enjoy different kinds of bread but am not able to use a loaf up before it dries out, so here's what I do:

After purchasing loaves of rye, wheat and white bread, I take a few slices out of each loaf and put them into a plastic bag. I continue doing this until the loaves are empty.

Into the freezer they go. When I'm ready for another bag of my mixed-up bread, I just remove it from the freezer and allow it to thaw.

Fresh as the day I bought it!. — Thelma

Elam dedicates Graduate Center

The Permian Basin Graduate Center, 105 W. Illinois Ave., dedicated its building in ceremonies held Thursday.

Representing the numerous donors who helped make the building a reality was Gladys Abell of the Abell-Hanger Foundation. Guests included Mayor G. Thane Akins; County Judge Bill Ahders; Doug Henson, vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce; and Judge Barbara Culver.

Presiding at the dedication was Dr. Jack G. Elam, chairman of the board and one of the founders of the Graduate Center.

The Graduate Center moved to its present facility in 1978 and retired the building's mortgage in 1981, thanks to the contributions of local individuals and organizations, according to Paul Kirtley with the PBGC staff.

The Center, chartered in 1967, offers adult continuing education courses with emphasis on oil industry management and technical courses in engineering, geology and geophysics. Other Graduate Center courses include business, management and general interest topics. All courses are non-credit.

PBGC is a non-profit, tax-exempt organization and has operated for 15 years without tax support. Operating funds are generated through tuition and contributions from business and private concerns.

Purpose of the dedication was to recognize the Permian Basin professionals, individuals and companies who provide financial and professional support, as well as the students who attend the courses. "With the continued cooperation of these people, the Graduate Center will continue to bridge the information gap between the work force and the objectives of the oil and gas industry."

U.S. Coast Guard investigates collision

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — It could be three months before the U.S. Coast Guard publishes results of its current investigation into a Feb. 19 collision between a Liberian freight and a U.S.-registered barge carrier, according to the chief investigating officer.

Coast Guard Lt. Jack Hardin and an investigator from the National Transportation Safety Board convened the hearing Thursday to determine the cause of last Friday's collision between the African Pioneer and the barge carrier Delta Norte.

Hardin said crews on each ship were aware, through radar, of the other vessel's presence before the accident, and that subsequent testimony would elaborate on that.

Two crewmen suffered serious injuries and the vessels sustained an estimated $500,000 damage from the collision.

African Pioneer crewmen abandoned ship and the Delta Norte took them to Houston. The freighter was towed in Saturday, but not before pirates had ransacked it.

Captains of the two vessels were the only witnesses at the opening session.

The captain of the African Pioneer testified he refused to order the foghorns sounded, even though a watch officer had awakened him to say the fog had thickened since the captain went to bed.

And the captain of the Delta Norte told the hearing his vessel was not sailing in established sea lanes when it rammed the Liberian freighter.

Jesse Gunn, master of the Delta Norte, testified he was on the bridge at the time of the collision and that his ship was sounding its fog-warning devices, after spotting the African Pioneer on radar.

The Delta Norte was traveling from New Orleans to Houston but was not in established sea lanes because it could make better time outside them, he said. Vessels are not required by law to stay within established sea lanes.

Gunn said the watch officer had roused him about 10:30 p.m. because of thickening fog.

He went to the bridge and ordered the foghorns sounded, he said, then his radar operator spotted another vessel about 4½ miles away. Attempts to raise the other ship by radio were unsuccessful, said Gunn.

Ten minutes later, Gunn said, he looked out the window and saw the African Pioneer only 300 feet away. He ordered evasive action but could not avoid the collision.

Nediljko Cubric, Yugoslavian master of the African Pioneer, said he was awakened two hours before the collision and warned of the fog. He said he did not go to the bridge or order the sounding of fog-warning devices, leaving that decision to the officer on duty.

"He (the watch officer) told me the visibility was worse than after I left the bridge, but there was no traffic and the situation was clear," Cubric said.

Tower: Revolt in El Salvador U.S. threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The revolt of Social Democrats in El Salvador is a threat to U.S. security because it represents the presence in the western hemisphere of a Marxist group allied with the Soviet Union, Sen. John Tower said.

Tower said Thursday he will support "all means short of intrusion of American military forces" to resolve the political crisis in El Salvador.

The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, during his monthly news conference with Texas reporters, sidestepped questions about whether he ever would support sending U.S. fighting troops to Central America.

"I do not foresse use of American military forces at this point," the Texas Republican said.

When asked about the nation's "deepening role" in El Salvador, Tower replied, "I'd rather call it commitment than our deepening role."

Tower returned Tuesday from a 12-day trip to six Western Europe nations and said questions about El Salvador were raised several times.

But he said he does not believe the United States' involvement with El Salvador would cause a division with European nations.

"They're concerned, but they seem to regard it more of an irritant. They told me there are more things of importance to unite us to let something like this divide us," Tower said.

There is some sympathy in Western Europe for the rebelling social Democrats in El Salvador, he added.

"They regard it as Social Democrats rebelling against a right wing government. They don't perceive of it the same way we do," Tower said.

An unuly crowd shouting insults closes in on Ku Klux Klan leader Bill Wilkinson and his followers outside the Duval County Courthouse in Jacksonville, Fla., Thursday. The Klan was forced to take refuge inside the building.

Leader says policemen avoid Klan

By WALTER PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A Ku Klux Klan leader charges that police deliberately avoided him and five other robed Klan members who began a demonstration but were chased away by a hostile crowd.

Imperial Wizard Bill Wilkinson's small group was routed Thursday by a mostly black crowd of 200 people as the six robed Klansmen and about a half-dozen supporters began a protest of the firing of a civilian employee of the Duval County sheriff's office.

Wilkinson, of Denham Springs, La., said the police "wanted that crowd to stomp us to get us out of Jacksonville. I know the old scenario. I saw uniformed police and we'd go toward them and they kept moving away. They purposely avoided us. And there's no doubt in my mind that they were under orders to do that, to stay away from me."

Wilkinson said he would ask for a U.S. Justice Department investigation of the lack of police protection.

The crowd had chased Wilkinson and his followers into the Duval County Courthouse.

Surrounded by a shouting mob, the Klansmen fled into the building.

Wilkinson and his robed supporters were immediately ordered out by Chief Judge Clifford Shepard who told them, "I didn't tell you to come here." The Klansmen left through one door and returned through another. They were followed by the fist-shaking crowd, which shouted, "Get out of Jacksonville" and "You're sick."

Wilkinson and two other Klansmen were taken into protective custody and released, and one anti-Klan demonstrator was arrested for throwing a rock, sheriff said. No injuries were reported.

Court delays Hinckley trial

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An appeals court has delayed indefinitely the trial of John W. Hinckley Jr., the man accused of shooting President Reagan, so prosecutors can have more time to decide whether to challenge a pre-trial ruling.

The three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals made its decision only six hours after a lower court judge set a March 9 trial date.

Hinckley, accused of shooting Reagan and three others outside a Washington hotel last March 30, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. That defense, if successful, could result in him being placed in a mental institution.

Prosecutors asked for the trial postponement, saying the March 9 date could have prevented them from seeking review of the ruling suppressing key government evidence.

Under court rules, the government has 45 days to ask the full 11-member appellate court to review a decision by one of its three-judge panels.

The same panel that postponed the trial ruled last Tuesday that the government could not use a 25-minute oral statement Hinckley gave on the day of the shooting, or handwritten notes taken from his cell last July.

The panel said both pieces of evidence were obtained in violation of Hinckley's constitutional rights.

Hinckley had appeared in U.S. District Court Thursday morning when Judge Barrington D. Parker originally set the March 9 trial date. He appeared relaxed with his hands in his suit pockets.

Hinckley is charged in a 13-count indictment that accuses him of attempting to kill the president; assault on a federal officer; using a firearm during commission of a federal offense; assault with intent to kill while armed; assault with a dangerous weapon; assault on a police officer and carrying a pistol without a license.

Five counts in the indictment carry maximum terms of life imprisonment.

von Bulow's stepdaughter testifies mother wonderful

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — As the last prosecution witness in Claus C. von Bulow's attempted murder trial, Martha von Bulow's daughter testified that her heiress mother was "wonderful," drank little and once considered divorce.

Princess Annie Laurie Kneissl, 23, also testified Thursday that after insulin was found on a hypodermic needle in von Bulow's closet, "everything put together made us believe we had to go to police."

Judge Thomas H. Needham recessed the trial until Tuesday, when the defense will begin presenting its case.

"Sunny" von Bulow, heiress to a utilities fortune, has lain in a coma at a New York City hospital while the prosecution called 44 witnesses in an effort to prove the Danish-born financial consultant twice tried to kill his wife with insulin injections.

Mrs. von Bulow, 50, is not expected to recover from the coma, which she lapsed into on Dec. 21, 1980, at the couple's Millionaires' Row mansion in Newport. She also had fallen into a coma there on Dec. 27, 1979, but recovered quickly.

Mrs. Kneissl, bearing a striking resemblance to early photographs of her mother, said von Bulow told her his love affair with former soap opera actress Alexandra Isles had cooled after Mrs. von Bulow fell into her second coma. Mrs. Isles testified she and von Bulow were still lovers a year after the episode.

Mrs. Kneissl, Mrs. von Bulow's daughter by a previous marriage to an impoverished Austrian prince, added that her mother contemplated divorce from von Bulow a few months before the first coma because he was on the verge of a nervous breakdown and blamed Mrs. von Bulow for his inability to find a good job.

Prosecutor Stephen R. Famiglietti has produced medical experts who said the two comas were caused by insulin injections.

The state contends von Bulow tried to murder his wife so he could marry Mrs. Isles, 36, and inherit half his wife's $28 million estate.

Annie Kneissl

Mrs. Kneissl acknowledged to defense lawyer Herald P. Fahringer that she admired von Bulow, who became her stepfather when she was 8.

But she refused to agree that a private investigation after the second coma produced insufficient evidence to justify calling police.

"All you had at that point was washings from the needle (showing traces of insulin and barbiturates) and a black pouch found in (von Bulow's) closet next to his study," Fahringer said.

The needle is one of 68 exhibits the state has introduced in four weeks of testimony. Private laboratory tests revealed traces of insulin and barbiturates on it.

Mrs. Kneissl's brother, Prince Alexander G. von Auersperg, said earlier he found the needle and drugs in a black bag inside von Bulow's closet at their Newport mansion, Clarendon Court.

Famiglietti asked Mrs. Kneissl what sort of relationship she had with her mother.

Hospital board approves room rate increases

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The Midland Memorial Hospital District Board of Directors approved the Board of Trustees' "recommendation in principle" for a bank note to reimburse the hospital's operating funds and approved additional adjustments to hospital charges at its regular monthly board meeting Thursday.

Other action included signatory approval for the president and vice president to close and consolidate old bank accounts and approval to purchase $37,342 for equipment, turning over $381,462 of bad debts to a collection agency, paying $76,709.29 for January's indigent care, $91,420 for construction costs to Area Builders and approving the hospital's board of directors election April 3.

Roy Campbell, trustee chairman, asked the directors for approval to take out a bank loan to provide funds for capital expenditures which exceeded the hospital's budget for such expenses in the 1977 $10 million bond issue.

THE HOSPITAL'S governing boards decided that it could no longer spend money from the operational fund to pay bills that should be coming from the capital expenditure fund.

Campbell explained to the directors the renovations and remodeling of numerous departments such as the laboratory, medical records, physicians' lounge, linen room and physical therapy have exceeded the hospital's capital expenditure budget. He added that funds were taken from the operation funds to cover these change orders and it is necessary to reimburse the fund.

Director Pat Estes said she would like to see a written recommendation with figures, but Campbell explained that the figures were not tallied yet.

"This is a recommendation in principle only," he said, adding that the trustees are asking the directors for approval to get the note started and figures would be ready at next month's meeting.

While the boards are attempting to balance the hospital's funds, patients will have to dig a little deeper beginning March 1.

IN ANOTHER trustee recommendation, the directors approved additional hospital charges for the use of same-day-surgery, emergency, treatment and delivery rooms.

MMH President Ray Branson said he met with Blue Cross Wednesday and the "hospital adjustments are in accordance to Blue Cross approval."

Additionally, Branson said the charges are also "in accordance with our source of funds policy."

"We are looking at charges in the hospital and will be periodically bringing additional action items to the board," he said.

The charge increases are: same-day surgery from $60 to $66, emergency room from $20 to $22, treatment room from $20 to $22 and delivery room from $175 to $195.

These charges can be implemented March 1 with the additional room rate hikes from $104 to $114 for a semi-private room and from $114 to $130 for a private room.

IN THE PRESIDENT'S report, Branson said two major priorities are to continue improving the financial management and to open additional beds.

"Bill Gaston, personnel director, personally made a recruiting trip to Fargo, North Dakota," Branson said. "While there, he interviewed nine employees, including five LVNs, one RN and one graduate nurse who had responded to ads placed in various newpapers and professional journals."

Branson added that four of the nine interviewed would like to come to Midland "if suitable housing can be located."

Branson asked board members for help in locating housing.

The hospital has three apartments which it keeps on reserve for recruiting staff, but Branson said housing is needed immediately.

"This is one of the clever things we do to staff beds," he said, referring to ten beds on one of the hospital wings that cannot be open for acute care until two nurses are recruited.

THE HOSPITAL lost two of its second shift nurses to a minor medical emergency center which opened across the street from the hospital's emergency room Feb. 22.

However, Branson noted that hospital-wide personnel turnover has continued to improve.

"Through the first four months of 1982, turnover is 18.8 percent, or 56.4 annualized. This compares to 72 percent in 1981, which was a reduction from 92 percent in 1980," Branson said.

The board passed a resolution for joint authorization for Branson and Dale Miller, MMH vice president of finance, to close bank accounts in Midland which are in the name of the district or Midland Memorial Foundation.

Miller said the nine old bank accounts, totaling to $72,206.49, will be transferred into the hospital's account at Midland National Bank.

In other financial matters, the directors approved bids for $37,342 of equipment.

The equipment includes a $6,952 bid from Lanier for dictation/transcription equipment and a $16,500 bid from American Monitor Corporation for a micro update for chemistry analyzer.

BRANSON ALSO asked the board for approval of a $13,490 film processor for the radiology department.

He noted that the current film processor, which is 10 years old, had broken down.

Director Dr. Henrie Mast asked what the estimated life is on this type of equipment.

"If you get 10 years on any radiographic equipment, you've done very well," Branson replied.

Concerning the radiology department, Branson also asked the board to start thinking about renovating the special procedures room, which will cost about $600,000.

"The room is 10 years old," Branson said. "It is completely safe for the patient, but it is in bad shape. We need a certificate of need for $600,000 for renovation and we need to get it in the next fiscal year."

"I appreciate the way you sneaked this in with the description of the other equipment," Mrs. Estes said.

The board also approved the turnover o $381,462 of bad debts to a collection agency. This figure includes bad debts for January and some other "clean up accounts which are over 180 days old," according to Miller.

He added that collections have gone from $6,000 to $14,000 "since we have changed collection agencies."

"Year-to-date referrals to collectors total 9.7 percent compared to a budgeted 8 percent," Miller said. "This percentage should decline over the remainder of the year and be at or below budget on Sept. 30, 1982."

The directors also approved the payment of $76,709.29 for January indigent care. In addition the board approved $91,420 to Area Builders for construction costs.

In other action, the directors approved calling the election for two Midland County Hospital Directors, establishing election precincts and polling places, providing for absentee voting and appointing election officials for the election.

Mrs. Estes' and Martin Neill's seats are both up for election.

Guerrillas arrested

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A guerrilla rocket attack on a military barracks in Kampala this week prompted a roundup by Ugandan soldiers in which 200 people were arrested, local residents and opposition sources said.

Relatives said Thursday that those arrested, most of them young men, have not been heard from since they were picked up.

Electricity may aid scoliosis

By BRENDA COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — For years, young victims of scoliosis, a potentially disfiguring curvature of the spine, have resorted to major surgery or braces. They soon might rely on a new treatment — painless electrical impulses.

Two teams of orthopedic researchers limited the progress of the condition and sometimes reduced curvatures with the impulses, according to findings reported in this week's Journal of the American Medical Association.

Electric impulses applied to muscles on one side of the back cause contractions that keep the spine from curving farther, researhers said. With very young children, the contractions can reverse curvature, they said.

MILLIONS of Americans are afflicted with the disease.

In the study, two techniques were used to apply the impulses. The researchers reported a greater than 80 percent success rate in stopping the progress of scoliosis for all age patients. In the very young, the techniques also had a high rate of reducing curvature, the researchers said.

In one method, a small batteryless receiver was implanted into the skin of the back, with electrical leads touching the spinal muscles. The device was activated by a bedside radio transmitter, only when the child was asleep.

In the other method, impulses were applied with two external electrodes attached to a portable, battery-operated stimulator. The electrodes were placed about 4 inches apart on the skin before the child went to bed and removed when the child got up.

Dr. Walter Bobechko, chief of orthopedic surgery at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, pioneered the findings. He said he first thought of treating scoliosis with electricity while he was watching children with cerebral palsy.

"Fifty percent of the (CP) kids with muscular imbalance develop scoliosis," he said. "So it's a very sensible principle. If muscle imbalance can create scoliosis, then why can't you correct scoliosis by producing a muscle imbalance?"

Biomedical engineer Jens Axelgaard and orthopedic surgeon John C. Brown, both of the Rancho Los Amigos Center in Downey, Calif., started with Bobechko's technique and then developed the idea of external stimulation.

ELECTRICAL impulses cause a visible muscle twitch, but Bobechko says it's not painful and becomes unnoticeable after a short time.

'Miscue' kept producer off stage, academy says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences has apologized for a miscue that kept the co-producer of the John Lennon-Yoko Ono "Double Fantasy" album from going on stage to accept a Grammy award and share his thoughts on the slain ex-Beatle.

"There was a technical problem," the co-producer, Jack Douglas, said Thursday, explaining a mistake in music cues apparently caused the orchestra to start playing again as Miss Ono left the stage with her 6-year-old son Sean.

"I never got to make the statement that I thought was kind of important to make," Douglas said. "I spent the last four months of John's life with him, and there were a few things I thought people should understand about John and about the record.

"John would have been thrilled with receiving a Grammy. He was proud of every gold record he acquired. He never took anything for granted."

"Double Fantasy," performed and co-produced by Miss Ono and Lennon, headed a diverse awards list at Wednesday night's ceremony.

Douglas said he was called by Ken Erlich, the producer of the show, who apologized for the mistake, calling it "purely accidental."

Proximity to Highgrove could make cottage's price higher

WESTONBIRT, England (AP) — Ask realtor Ernest Panes how much good neighbors are worth and he'll tell you $18,300 — that is if they are the Prince and Princess of Wales.

Panes is selling a rundown 300-year-old stone cottage that is only 200 yards away from Highgrove mansion, home of Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, and Princess Diana.

The cottage, known as The Retreat, has been empty for three years, Panes said Thursday.

Originally, he said, he expected the two-story, three-bedroom cottage and its less than half-an-acre of land to sell for $36,000. Now he thinks its clear view of the royal mansion will raise the price at least to $54,300.

"I was staggered by the interest when the cottage was placed on the market," Panes said.

"We only advertised it locally but all the 200 leaflets giving details went within a week and we are having to print hundreds more. We have had inquiries from all over the country.

"I think overseas buyers would be interested. It would be quite a status symbol for an American, for instance," Panes said.

The cottage will be auctioned off on March 22. It was owned by a retired nurse who died last Christmas. Her will stipulated that proceeds from the sale should go to local hospitals.

MOST UNFORGETTABLE CHARACTER

In the eyes of Margaret Bourke-White

By CARL MYDANS
Author, longtime Life magazine photographer
Special from Reader's Digest

My memory of the first time I saw Margaret Bourke-White is as sharp and evocative as one of her photographs. It was more than 40 years ago. She stood, back to me, hunched under a black cloth that covered her camera.

"Put it on the table," she called out, and an arm appeared and pointed. She came out from under her cloth and reached for her pocketbook. Then she saw me and, laughing away her mistake, exclaimed, "I thought you were the sandwich man. Come and look! My caterpillar eggs are turning into caterpillars. It's so exciting, isn't it?"

Later, after we became friends and colleagues, I found how revealing our first meeting was. It did not matter that day that she didn't even know who I was. What mattered was the opportunity to share with me — with anyone, with everyone — the excitement she saw and felt in the world around her.

Maggie was strikingly handsome; her smile was dazzling. Our longtime friend and fellow photographer, Alfred Eisenstaedt, has said, "Generals rushed to carry her cameras, and even Stalin insisted on carrying her bags." But to us, her masculine colleagues, she was Maggie, a veteran comrade in arms. We accepted her as one of us.

Maggie rose to preeminence in that remarkable decade — 1925-1935 — when camera development, editorial imagination and a breakthrough in printing processes combined to bring about a revolution in the still picture.

She was the first photographer for Fortune and one of the original four staff photographers for Life. As a result of her essays in Life, her monumental work became known throughout the world — beyond that of any other photographer.

I came to Life just after Maggie. She was already a luminary and I an unknown; she already the creator of her own school of photography and I among the tiny vanguard of photographers who were to use the small 35-mm. camera with its new fast lenses and make a fetish of taking pictures in available light to retain the mood and reality of the scene.

Together, in parallel efforts and techniques, Bourke-White and the 35-mm. school ushered in an epoch of photography that still permeates our culture.

An emotional woman, Maggie often wept when moved or frustrated. Once exterminators came to our office to fumigate an area where someone had had an infectious disease. A young and jealous photographer — Maggie's outstanding success sometimes made her the target of jealousy — sent them instead into Maggie's office. There they blindly sent forth their fumes, killing the whole lot of praying mantises she had been raising and photographing. "How careless of them to think so little of life," she wept. "Whoever did it could not have been a photographer — not a true one anyway."

Married twice, both times briefly, Maggie finally concluded that "mine is a life into which marriage doesn't fit very well." She was one of the first women to compete and excel in her male-dominated field. And, in the process, she fought spiritedly for rights of women to match those of men.

In her early years, her interests ranged from insects to industry, agriculture to architecture — but, gradually, she became more and more absorbed in the tragedies of human conflict.

Maggie did not cringe from any scene or action she thought should be photographed. During World War II, she was torpedoed off North Africa and saved one of her cameras to photograph her rescue. The Germans bombed her in Moscow. She rode in American bombers over Tunis and artillery-spotting planes over Italy. She was ambushed in Korea and was in the vortex of rioting in Japan. Her photographs of stacks of naked dead bodies in the Nazi concentration camp at Buchenwald stirred world revulsion.

In 1952, near the end of her coverage of the Korean war, Maggie learned she had Parkinson's disease — and asked for more assignments, especially those that demanded hard physical activity.

Well-meaning people, she said, frequently advised her to learn to accept her illness: "My conviction was just the opposite. Laying down my weapons in the middle of the fight was unthinkable."

It took 19 years for the disease to stop her. Twice she went into surgery, each time gaining short remissions and renewed hope. And each time, the disease returned to attack her mobility.

By the time the end came, in Aug. 1971, when she was 67, only her clear mind and eyes — still alert and ranging — moved. It was these that made Margaret Bourke-White the great photographer and person she was. And they were the last to go.

Tony Bennett's paintings getting rave reviews

LONDON (AP) — His bowls may be wonky, but singer Tony Bennett is winning praise for his oil paintings and having recorded 89 albums and nearly 1,000 songs, his ambition is to paint full time.

Bennett, here for a 10-city British concert tour, revealed his second talent Thursday under his real name Anthony Benedetto.

"He's obviously been influenced by Matisse and has a feeling for paint and color," said the Blackman Harvey Gallery's artistic adviser, Marjorie Allthorpe-Guyton, who decided that Benedetto deserved a showing here.

"After his career as a singer, he may well find a second career in painting," she said.

The gallery is showing 10 Benedettos — still lifes and London scenes in broad brush strokes — priced from $3,020 to $5,033.

"I've been painting my whole life and for the last seven years people have been nice enough to buy my paintings," said Bennett, who told The Associated Press that painting full time is his ambition. "It brings me great joy."

But gallery director Derek Wootton-Woolley confided to a reporter that "he's not very good at drawing and his bowls are wonky (twisted)."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — All those early afternoon news programs on local television are putting the squeeze on afternoon syndicated variety shows, and "The John Davidson Show" is being squeezed out altogether, says Group W Productions President Edwin Vane.

Vane said Thursday that marketing conditions have undergone a "dramatic change" and Group W Productions won't be renewing the Davidson show at the end of the current season.

Vane said the Davidson show would leave the air Aug. 27.

He said a trend of TV stations to expand news and information programs into the afternoon slots, "coupled with increased production costs, has made it economically impossible to continue."

Major survivors still in the field are Merv Griffin and Phil Donahue. Griffin is believed in a strong position because he is telecast in prime time in some markets, particularly New York and Los Angeles. Donahue's program, "Donahue," has created a large following.

LONDON (AP) — Inflation saw to it that last year's British coins aren't worth quite as much this year, but Queen Elizabeth II saw to it that at least they're the proper size and weight.

The queen presided Thursday at the 700th Trial of the Pyx, the yearly test of the size, weight and quality of the coins of the realm conducted in Britain since the time of Edward I.

Elizabeth thereby became the first monarch in more than 300 years to supervise the count personally. It was conducted at Goldsmith's Hall in the City of London, the capital's financial district.

The ceremony, in which a jury of 24 freemen of the Goldsmith's Company pass judgment on the previous year's work of the Royal Mint, was first conducted in 1282 under a warrant issued by King Edward I. The name "Pyx" derived from the word for the box in which the samples were displayed.

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Financial troubles are facing the Oral Roberts Ministries, and the evangelist has announced a fund-raising drive for $120 million a year.

At a news conference Thursday, the Tulsa evangelist cited "another financial crisis" resulting from a decline in contributions after his City of Faith Hospital opened in November.

The ministries are "not broke, but at the rate we're going it might not be that far away," Roberts said.

The drive will include letters next week to his "partners," a television program March 7 when he will "lay it on the line" and a suggestion that Tulsans contribute 10 percent — or $12 million — during the next year.

Roberts' ministeries includes operation of Oral Roberts University, City of Faith and the Oral Roberts Evangelistic Association.

Tim Whalen
...third year at MHS

Baseball season just around month

Lee, Midland eye openers

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

The 1982 schoolboy baseball season opens for the Midland High Bulldogs Monday against Pecos while the Lee Rebels open their season Tuesday against Lubbock Coronado.

Midland, starting its third year under Tim Whalen's tutelage, will entertain the Pecos Eagles at 4 p.m. at Memorial Stadium field, while Ernie Johnson's nine battle Coronado at 4 p.m. in Lubbock.

Whalen enters the year 30-26 at MHS while Johnson is starting his 21st season at Lee and has complied a record of 351-205 including a District 5-5A title last season.

JOHNSON welcomes back four ettermen while Whalen has seven monogram winners back.

Lee should have a solid infield with Chris Parker returning at third, Barry Blackwell at second, and Randy Pepper, who saw action at shortstop, forming the nuceleus which Johnson will build around. Scott Carroll, who played very little last season, is expected to open the season at first base.

Johnson said, "Our infield should be our strength. We have no experience at catcher or pitching and our outfield experience is zero."

"It will be rough for a while but we have a chance to be respectable with these guys. We have looked better in early practices than I expected. We will just try to play up to our abilities and let the chips fall as they will," Johnson added.

ONE OF the keys to Lee's success will be developing a pitching staff. Johnson is looking to junior Kerry Robertson as a cornerstone to build his pitching around. Robertson pitched on the junior varsity team last year and Johnson said, "He has a good arm and threw real well in summer ball. He has been looking good in practices, too."

Pepper is expected to challenge for a place in the pitching rotation also while righthander Bryan Willis and lefty Craig Ray, two sophomores, are expected to battle for berths on the varsity. Johnson said, "They are both good big kids with good arms. I will probably use them on the varsity and junior varsity."

Johnson is taking a long hard look at Lane Marks and Scott Ullom in an effort to rebuild his depleted outfield.

Senior Scott Page in line to do the catching for the Rebs and Johnson said, "He's just about all I have for catching duties."

RAY LONGORIA will see playing time at first base while senior Bart Ryan, out for baseball for the first time after running track, is looking good according to Johnson, who added, "I just don't knew where he will play."

Another sophomore that Johnson plans to use liberally is Dennis Matta. In the early practices, Matta has been working out at second base.

Lee hit .385 as a team in district and Johnson noted that Lee's team batting average had been going up each year. He said, "We are a contact type hitting club. We don't have any power hitters so we won't be playing for the big inning. It might be difficult for us to improve on last year's team batting average."

Johnson said, "I try to run a low-pressure program here. We don't recruit players like they do at other schools." He added, "Our numbers are down this year but we do have some quality kids. We have seven juniors playing on the junior varsity this year and hoping we can find 10-14 decent sophomores to work with."

THE REST of the varsity squad includes Darrell Holmes, John Bostwick, Joe Williamson, Michael Mercurio, John Denton and Monty Chastain.

David Browning is coaching the Rebel junior varsity again this season.

Besides Coronado, Lee faces Lubbock Monterey and Pecos in non-district games along with Monterey, Carrollton Newman-Smith, Amarillo Tascosa and Midland In the Tournament of Champions at Cub Stadium March 12-12.

The Rebels also will play in a District 5-5A pre-district tournament March 5-6 in Odessa. Johnson said, "The pre-district tournament is our district's way of meeting the UIL's requirements starting in 1983. Currently, high school baseball teams can play 12 non-district games and in two tournament plus district games. Starting in 1983, teams will be allowed to play only 20 total games and two tournaments (two games can be substituted for a tournament). Since its is difficult for many district schools to get into tournaments we just decided to play a pre-district tournament. It's strictly a one-shot deal right now."

Johnson added, "Lee hasn't played district teams in pre-district very often. The only time we have played one would have been in a tournament. I think the tournament is a good idea. It will give us a chance to scout the other district teams."

ACROSS TOWN, Whalen has his hands full as he tries to mold a squad around multi-talented junior Tim Davis. Davis, who hit .413 in district last year with three homeruns and 12 RBIs while playing in centerfield, is counted upon for leadership for the Bulldogs and some spot pitching.

Whalen said, "This is a strange year for us. We have so many players that have to prove themselves. We don't have a proven catcher and our pitching staff is green."

Joining Davis as Bulldog pitching prospects are letter winners Jim Gunnels, Joe Delagraza, Peter Galindo and Jose Carrasco. Whalen is looking for pitching depth to be provided by Billy Mills, Jay Motter and Wes Davis.

When not on the mound, Motter will be battling Davis, Galindo, Delagraza and speedy Hipolito Zarate for a spot alongside Tim Davis in the outfield.

Whalen said, "We need someone to come forward and provide team leadership. I look for Pete (Galindo) to provide some leadership. He could possibly be the sleeper of the year at the plate and in the outfield. If we have someone develop into a leader we should be a competitive club. If nobody does, it could be a long year."

ON THE infield, Whalen is counting on lettermen Wayne Sims and Faustino Garnado to solidify an infield that led the district in errors last year. Garnado is expected to see considerable playing time at second while Sims, who played at third and shortstop last year, is working out behind the plate in early practices.

Whalen feels Carrasco's range and capable hands will turn shortstop, a weak spot last year, into a strength in 1982. Also battling for a starting infield berth are David Nini and Mills.

Curt Holcomb, out for baseball for the first time, is bidding for the starting catching spot and Whalen feels he is going to be a valuable asset.

Whalen said, "We should be much better defensively and have better team speed this year. We don't have the hitters we had last year but I still think our hitting will come around."

He added, "If all it takes is hard work these kids will be successful. They take their baseball very seriously."

MIDLAND'S preseason schedule includes Pecos, Lubbock Coronado and Dallas Thomas Jefferson in addition to the pre-district tournament and the Tournament of Champions.

Whalen said, "I love the pre-district tournament. It gives us another tournament without having to travel to El Paso or Dallas."

Eddie McHugh is the Bullpup junior varsity coach this spring.

Both coaches tabbed Abilene schools as the teams to beat in district. Johnson said, "AHS has the best people back outside of pitching while Cooper returns a bunch of people."

Whalen noted that Odessa returns a lot of experience including their top pitcher while San Angelo should be much improved.

Both mentioned that Odessa Permian is an unknown because of a coaching change and that Big Spring lost heavily.

Girls Regional

Sandies favored as Chap Center play begins

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Amarillo High Sandies, carrying a gaudy 28-0 record, have already beaten the state champions in the 5A girls state basketball playoffs and now set their sights on the Region I crown. The only problem is that the region hurdles seem formidable to say the least.

The unbeaten Sandies, coached by Rosemary Jackson, are favored to win the Region I girls playoff tournament, which begins at 6 p.m. today at Chaparral Center. Tonight's winners will square off Saturday at 2:30 p.m. at the Chap for the Region I championship.

The Sandies will face the powerful Lewisville Farmerettes at 8:30 p.m. today in the feature attraction. Lewisville is 32-3 on the season, but Amarillo High is no stranger to stiff competition. The Sandies defeated defending state champion Lubbock Monterey in bi-district action, 64-63, to get here. Lewisville blasted District 5-5A's Abilene High from the playoffs, 66-45, Tuesday to earn the trip here.

In the 6 p.m. game, the Fort Worth Dunbar Wildcats, 25-4 on the year and owning the most potent scoring attack, will take on the 16-11 El Paso Bel Air Highlanders. Dunbar won the region berth with a 46-43 win over Arlington while the Highlanders downed El Paso Coronado 45-37.

Amarillo High's 5-11 junior Carmen Wynn carries the most impressive scoring credentials. She is averaging 22 points per game from her post position and she gets help from 5-6 senior forward Tracy Adams, who is averaging 10 points per outing.

Lewisville, coached by Peggy Tate, has the weapons to counter with three players scoring in double figures. Stacey Davis, a 6-2 post, is averaging 13.5 points per outing while forward Michelle Van Dyke averages 12.2 and post Carla Houston 11.4.

Dunbar, coached by Savoy Terral, is the highest scoring team in the tournament, having busted 90 points three times this year and 80 points another four times. Five players are averaging in double figures and one isn't even a starter. Forward Rosa Benson averages 18 points a game while guard Deborah Jackson averages 16.

Coach Jeanette Sutton's Bel Air squad has the worse record of the four entrants, but is a young team with four juniors and a sophomore composing the starting lineup. Post LaTanya Thompson leads the attack at 5-11, but no scoring averages were available.

Midland finishes with 82-73 win

CLARENDON—Midland College set a new team record for Western Junior College Athletic Conference wins by closing the regular season with an 82-73 victory over Clarendon College here Thursday night.

The Chaparrals finished with a 17-1 WJCC mark, which surpassed last year's 16-2 record by the conference champs. For the season, Midland College is 27-4 going into next week's Region V tournament at Big Spring.

Lance McCain and Chester Smith led the way with 20 points each as the Chaparrals extended their winning streak to 17 games. Clarendon, which lost to Midland 90-88 at Midland earlier, couldn't stay with the Chaparrals this time.

Although the score was tied at 42 at the break, MC sprinted to an early 10 point lead in the second half, leading by 10-12 most of the way. The closest the Bulldogs' were able to inch in the stretch was four points before MC again opened a gap.

Puntus Wilson, who finished with 12 points, fouled out with two minutes left and Spud Webb, 14 points, played the final 12 minutes with four fouls.

The field for the Region V play, beginning with two playoff games between fourth and fifth place finishers in the Northern Conference and WJCC, will be announced this weekend.

MC will play the 7 p.m. game Thursday, and if it wins, will play the 9 p.m. game Friday at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Midland College—Spud Webb 7-0-4-14; Puntus Wilson 4-4-5-12, Lance McCain 10-0-3-20; Rodney McChriston 1-0-1-2; Jerome Crowe 3-0-2-6; Chester Smith 8-4-1-20; Justin Morrett 3-2-2-8. Totals 36-10-19-82.

Clarendon College—Bobby Denson 9-1-3-19; Jerry Isler 2-6-3-10; George Milhouse 4-5-3-13; Kenneth Morning 6-4-1-16; Pickney 2-3-3-7; Simples 0-0-1-0; Thomas 3-2-0-8. Totals 26-21-14-73.

Cowboys sign Wright

Former Midland Lee High and New Mexico quarterback Brad Wright, the school's all-time single-season total offense leader, has signed a contract with the Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League.

"He talked to about nine NFL teams and had firm offers from several of them," said Wright's father, Durward.

"I don't know about the financial terms, but the Dallas offer was as good as, if not better than, any of them. They apparently wanted him pretty bad," Durward Wright said.

Dallas has three veteran quarterbacks — starter Danny White and backups Glenn Carano and Gary Hogeboom. It has been reported that Carano, after five years on the bench in Dallas, will ask to be traded.

"They didn't give Brad any assurance that Carano will be traded," Durward Wright said. "But he felt it was a pretty good situation."

Brad Wright ran and passed for 2,403 yards as a sophomore in 1978. He is second to Rocky Long in career total offense, despite missing much of his junior and senior years because of injuries.

Brad Wright was selected by Miami in the 1981 NFL draft, but he later was cut from the Dolphins.

He returned to Albuquerque to attend New Mexico and was a graduate assistant coach for the Lobos this past season.

It's new game for City netters

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Tennis at Midland High and Midland Lee is making a change this weekend. Instead of playing dual matches against teams in the District 5-5A like they have since early January, they are competing in tournaments in preperation for the District meet on April 5-6.

This weekend the Bulldogs and Rebels are scheduled to compete in two separate tournaments, MHS in Abilene and Lee in San Angelo.

"What we're going to do now is play in tournaments to get ready for the UIL District in April," said MHS tennis coach Pete Barizon. "Our players will be playing singles or doubles, but not both. What our emphasis is on now is individual players, trying to get our best singles and best doubles players ready for the District Tournament."

IN ABILENE, MHS will be going up against some tough competition with host Abilene Cooper being one of the toughest in the 11-team field. The Cougar tennis team won the Fall State Tennis Title and is seeking the same honor this spring.

"The reason we're going to Abilene is because it's a much stronger tournament than the San Angelo tournament which is going on at the same time," said Barizon.

The Abilene tournament is set up for six boys and six girls with two players in singles events and four in doubles from each gender and is under a single elimination format.

Coach Barizon has picked the boys doubles and girls singles as his team's best bet in the tournament with Duncan Fraser-Miles Boldrick teaming up in doubles play and Vee Ann Atnipp leading the girl's singles charge.

"I expect outstanding performances on their parts," said Barizon, "and I'm optimistic that the whole team will do well."

LEE COACH Bobby Connell is taking his team to San Angelo this weekend to compete in the West Texas High School Tennis Championships where the Rebels will compete in A Division in the three-division tournament.

"This type of tournament has got an A, B and C Divisions," said Connell. "The A Division is for all seniors in District 5-5A. The seniors have to play in A. B is similiar to junior varsity with juniors and sophomores playing in it along with 4-A seniors. C is for the 4-A juniors and sophomores and all other class schools that are in the tournament. Of course, any player or team can play in any higher division, but not in a lower one."

The Rebels have Mike McFadden as the top boy's singles player and Carol Mann as the No. 1 girl, but, according to Coach Connell, the rest of the team isn't far behind in talent.

"Mike McFadden is our top singles player but he's only just enough ahead of the two players below him that he won't lose to them that often," said Connell. "We have two or three boys below him who are about the same.

"Carol Mann, once again, is just enough better than the one's below her that she doesn'e lose to them, but the five players below her are about equal, he said.

And does he feel that his team has gotten better since the start of the season?

"I think they've improved," said Connell. "The part that really impresses me more though is McFadden-(Richard) Banks have only lost two doubles matches all season and Doug Scott-Mark Miller have done reasonably well. They haven't won may matches, but they are playing well."

BOTH COACHES agreed about Abilene Cooper being the team to beat when April's District Tournament rolls around, but behind the Cougars it could be anybody else's game depending on who gets hot.

"Cooper is No. 1 without a doubt," said Connell. "The problem is with who's second. The San Angelo team is pretty decent and so is (Odessa) Permian and Abilene High. It just depends on whose day it is to play well. I'd put my money on Permian though."

5-5A swim meet prelims today

Midland High is favored to win the District 5-5A girls swimming title, but the boys title, the exclusive province of Midland Lee, is expected to evolve into a four-way splashathon between Odessa Permian, Abilene Cooper, San Angelo and Midland High.

Action begins in the 5-5A meet with preliminaries at 1 p.m. at Mabee Pool, home of the City of Midland swim team.

Diving finals will be held today, two hours after the completion of the prelims while finals start at 2 p.m. Saturday.

The top eight swimmers in the prelims advance to Saturday's finals and before the two-day spray has settled more meet records will have been established than survive intact.

No spring break for Dulin's Chaparrals

MC netters face busy week

While Midland College students take a spring break beginning today, for Midland College's tennis teams it will be work, work, work.

Dr. Leon Dulin has slated a tough bunch of matches to tune up his racquet wielding charges for the WJCC season. The run includes a tournament and four dual matches plus an extra tournament for good measure.

MC opens the grand tour at McLennan County Community College in Waco today and Friday. McLennan is a perennial power and the tournament field will include the best in state junior college circles.

Monday, MC will face the North Texas State No. 1 and No. 2 teams while Tuesday the Chaps will be in Fort Worth to play Texas Wesleyan College. Wednesday the team returns to Waco for matches against Baylor.

After Baylor, the women take a breather, but the men's team travels to Las Cruces, N.M., for the Aggie Classic, hosted by New Mexico State. The women's team will get one more tuneup, March 9, against UTPB at MC.

Conference play begins March 11 at Levelland against South Plains.

"This is a tough schedule, but it's necessary to get ready for conference play," Dulin said. "We've had only one small tournament and we need the competition. I need to look at some of the new players a little more, since they weren't here in the fall."

Nine men and six women will make the tour.

Bren Macken, Somerville and Wertenberger joined the MC tennis team at midterm.

Baseball's back, Martin already involved in feud

(Compiled from R-T wires)

BASEBALL —A feud that had been simmering between Oakland Manager Billy Martin and the White Sox' Tony LaRussa, boiled to the surface when the latter lashed out at the former in a spring-training talk to his players. Upset that Martin "didn't even mention the White Sox" in a story in which the A's manager had predicted a pennant for his own team, LaRussa said, "Billy Martin popped off last year, too. He said we wouldn't win another game against them all year and when we played them, we stuffed them. Every time he says something like that, he's wrong."...Martin, meanwhile, said the A's plan a fund-raising dinner for Ken Boyer, former major leaguer undergoing lung-cancer treatment in Juarez... Fernando Valenzuela was still in Los Angeles as the Dodgers opening spring training at Vero Beach, Fla., but manager Tom Lasorda is calm. 'He isn't a holdout until March 1. I'll worry about it then."... Brad Gulden, who signed a one-year pact, is expected to battle Barry Foote for the Yankees' backup catcher's job behind Rick Cerone...Ron Davis suffered mild sprain of his right thumb after hitting his hand on a clubhouse door... Right-hander Phil Niekro of the Atlanta Braves said Thursday that a leg injury he suffered in workouts has been diagnosed as a slight hamstring pull and would sideline him for a week to 10 days... Only Eddie Murray failed to show as the Baltimore Orioles greeted 41 players for workouts at Miami. Murray had received permission to attend a family reunion and report one day late... Glenn Hoffman admits that his sophomore season had its difficult moments. The switch from third base to shortstop was rocky. His hitting suffered. But, he figures, it wasn't a total loss. Some of his gains, he hopes, will pay off in the 1982 baseball season. "Last year was tough at certain times, but, also, it was good because you go through tough times and you learn. I feel I've learned a lot."... Righthander Andy Rincon, 23, began his comeback as St. Louis opened spring training at St. Petersburg, Fla. Rincon, former Arkansas (Texas) pitcher, suffered a hairline fracture of his right forearm last May when struck by a line drive against Pittsburgh. "I tried to pitch too much too soon when my arm was weak and hurt my shoulder. This year I want to be the stopper of our staff. I usually have been whereever I pitched."...

Second baseman Davey Lopes reiterated that the "gamble on me will be rewarded" with a world championship. "It's not a matter of owing. It's the fact that when one organization rejects you and another wants you and accepts you, you just feel a debt to that particular organization — in this case, Oakland."...

TRACK—The name of former Olympic track and field Coach Bill Bowerman will be dropped at his request from the credits of the motion picture "Personal Best," a picture, starring Mariel Hemmingway, deals with a lesbian affair between two athletes.

After viewing the track film at a special showing in Eugene last week, the former track and field coach called it "a discredit to sports in general and a sorry presentation of track and field."...

HOCKEY—What does Wayne Gretzky do for an encore? "I'm only worrying about No. 80, then going from there," said the 21-year-old Edmonton Oilers' super scorer. "One hundred is still 21 away so there's no use thinking about it." But at his current pace — he scored the 79 goals in 64 games, 14 fewer than it took Phil Esposito to set the old mark of 76 in 1970-71 — he would get 98 goals. And, with 176 points, 12 more than the NHL mark he established last season, Gretzky appears headed for a 220-point campaign...

POTPOURRI—Former middleweight champion Alan Minter, 30, retired to concentrate on his business interests...Cal Jones was named defensive coordinator at Eastern Illinois by football Coach Darrell Mudra...Defending champion Western New Mexico joined the NAIA District 7 cage field with College of Santa Fe, Eastern New Mexico, Grand Canyon, Western State, Southern Utah, Colorado Mines and Denver...

Coles, Stroney, Okamoto share Copper golf lead

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Janet Coles battled her nerves, Lynn Stroney was leery of the greens and Ayako Okamoto was confused with the whole course.

But all three pro women golfers somehow managed for fire identical 2-under-par rounds of 70 Thursday to share the first-round lead in the $125,000 LPGA Arizona Copper Classic.

"I was quite nervous at the first tee," said Coles, a Carmel, Calif., native who was making her first start of the year. "I didn't settle down until about the 10th hole."

"You can hit it to the pin in Florida," said Storney of Gerard, Ohio. "Here, you have to lay it up quite a bit. My caddy helped me know which greens to go for."

Okamoto, a Tokyo resident, said it took her a while to get accustomed to the par-72, 6,206-yard Randolph North municipal course.

Beth Daniel, winner of last week's LPGA event at Sarasota, Fla., also overcame an erratic start and birdied three of the last four holes to finish at 71 — one stroke off the pace.

Daniel was joined by Amy Alcott, tour rookie Patti Rizzo, Barbara Moxness and amateur Nancy Tomich — a junior at the University of Arizona — plus Japanese golfers Tatsuko Ohsako and Yuko Moriguchi.

New York Islanders fight slump despite win streak

By The Associated Press

Despite victories in both games since a loss ended their record 15-game winning streak, the New York Islanders insist they're in a bit of a slump — and one of them says it couldn't come at a better time.

"I realize the team is on a downer since the streak. It's more like they're in the Twilight Zone," Coach Al Arbour said following Thursday night's 4-2 National Hockey League victory over Pittsburgh. "But you expect it after what happened (the streak). It's not a serious problem."

Canadiens 4, Nordiques 4

Keith Acton scored with 3:27 to play as the Canadiens, beaten 4-3 in Quebec two nights ago, salvaged a tie with the Nordiques.

"It's discouraging to get just one point out of four, but we're in a situation where we have some injuries — although I know good teams are supposed to play well when they're hurting," said Montreal Coach Bob Berry. "But I thought we had a heck of a good effort from everybody.

Mark Napier scored twice for the Canadiens. Real Cloutier, whose goal with 2:17 to play beat the Canadiens in Quebec, scored twice for the Nordiques.

Flames 11, Canucks 4

Up in Calgary, Vancouver Coach Harry Neale saw things a little differently.

"Simply losing isn't the end of the world — but tonight was as close to that as possible," he said after Gary McAdam scored three goals, Willi Plett scored twice and Guy Chouinard had two goals and three assists in the Flames' victory that halted the Canucks' seven-game unbeaten streak.

Capitals 9, Blues 1

Rookie Bobby Carpenter scored four goals, two of them just 25 seconds apart in the third period, as the Capitals buried the Blues.

Fight for Young is escalating

NEW YORK (AP) — The legal fight between the Daily News and the New York Post over the services of sports columnist Dick Young escalated Thursday as a state appeals judge temporarily blocked the Post from publishing Young's work.

Appellate Justice Joseph Sullivan enjoined the Post from using Young's columns until a five-judge panel of the Appellate Division decides whether to continue barring the Post from publishing the columns.

Koufax suggests Fernando solution

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hall of Famer Sandy Koufax has a suggestion for the Los Angeles Dodgers and Fernando Valenzuela aimed at ending the salary dispute between the defending world champions and their left-handed pitching ace.

"Without numbers, it's my thinking that Fernando deserves to be protected for what he has done. The club (could) give him three signed contracts for 1982, 1983 and 1984 for what it's offering now (thought to be in the $300,000-plus range) or slightly more. The club would say 'We'll sign all three contracts.' If you have a good year, then you can go to arbitration (and tear up the other two contracts). If you have a bad year, you're protected (since Valenzuela could then simply sign his 1982 contract). If you hurt yourself, you're protected."

Dodgers' Vice President Al Campanis said he wouldn't rule out giving Valenzuela some kind of performance clause. In the past, the Dodgers have avoided giving contracts with performance clauses.

Billy good for business

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. (AP) — California Angels' Executive Vice President Buzzie Bavasi said Thursday that he was amused by inflammatory statments made about his ballclub by Oakland A's Manager Billy Martin and they "were good for business." Martin, apparently still seething from two bench clearing incidents in one game last season with California, told reporters in Phoenix on Tuesday that "I'm putting the Angels on notice. We're not going to start a fight (but) we won't tolerate any petty intimidation. If they start something, I'll tell my players to go and punch everybody's lights out. They'll be no wrestling anymore.

Marathon to pay?

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Marathon, one of the premier bastions of amateur sports in the world, might start paying runners or their expenses by as early as next year, say the Boston Globe. And the race, which was traditionally run on Patriots' Day in April, and lately, on the Monday designated as Patriots Day in Massachusetts, could be moved to a Sunday after 1983 in an effort to attract a national television audience. It said the Prudential Insurance Co., outside whose Back Bay tower the race has ended in recent years, may end its association and monetary support of the race "if it goes commercial and professional."

Rockies eye offer

DENVER (AP) — A group including St. Louis investors is "very close" to striking a deal for the purchase of the Colorado Rockies, one of its members says. Robert Hutchings, president and chairman of the board of the major corporate investor in the potential new ownership, said Thursday night that negotiations would continue today with Buffalo businessman Peter Gilbert.

Bird eyes challenge

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Pitcher Mark Fidrych says it will be a challenge trying to make his comeback with the Boston Red Sox, the team closest to his Northboro, Mass., home. "I had some offers from two teams and letters from two others," the 27-year-old Fidrych said Thursday in his first appearance with the Red Sox. "But I began thinking about it, and I said, if it's going to be your last 'Whatever,' why not in your hometown."

The Red Sox have signed the former Detroit Tiger right-hander to a contract with their AAA Pawtucket club of the Intenational League.

Kuhn boosts baseball

CLEVELAND (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn thinks professional baseball has been a better entertainment value than any other sport. Kuhn says baseball's relatively low ticket prices have kept it in reach of the average American. He says its accessibility will hasten forgiveness of the same people outraged by last year's 50-day players' strike.

"The public wants a good, honest game at a fair price, and I think they're getting it. The average ticket price to a baseball game is $5.27, the lowest in professional sports," Kuhn said Thursday.

Westhead still wonders

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Three months after his sudden dismissal as head coach of the Los Angeles Lakers, Paul Westhead is still asking himself why. "I still can't piece together any significant evidence that I made serious mistakes," said Westhead, dumped Nov. 19 when Lakers' star Earvin "Magic" Johnson said he was unhappy with the coach.

"If I have any choice, I'll stay with the pros. The only job I have now is picking up the kids at 3:15."...

Warriors' Free sinks Mavericks

By The Associated Press

When the Golden State Warriors need a crucial basket, they look for the free man — World Free.

He was there Thursday night, sinking an 18-foot jump shot at the buzzer that beat the tenacious Mavericks in Dallas.

With the score tied, and about 30 seconds to play, the Warriors ran the clock down to the final legal tick — the Mavericks claimed it was one tick too many — before Mike Gale took a hurried turnaround jumper.

Spurs 119, Pistons 116

Forty points by the Iceman, George Gervin, and Mark Olberding's 18 — including his jumper and two foul shots that gave the Spurs a four-point lead in the final minute — paced San Antonio past the Pistons.

San Antonio trailed 100-91 with 10 minutes left before turning it on. "We should have put this one away a lot earlier and shouldn't have had to come down to the final minute of play," said Pistons Coach Scotty Robertson. John Long led the Pistons with 31 points. Kelly Tripucka added 30.

Lakers 104, Sonics 98

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 23 of his 31 points in the second half as the Lakers chalked up their fifth consecutive victory and opened a 2½-game lead over Seattle in the Pacific Division.

The SuperSonics led 92-85 with 4½ minutes to play before Los Angeles outscored them 14-4.

A volunteer fireman runs away from a burning house in Middlesex, N.J., on Thursday as debris from an explosion can be seen on top of car at left and on the right of other car. Richard A. Puskas called the police to report he had received a bomb in a package. He died along with his wife, Patricia, as the explosion ripped apart their house. Their three sons, Andrew Jr., 9; Scott, 7; and Brian, 5, were leaving for school at the time of the explosion and recieved minor injuries in the blast.

Defense: No hard evidence, just speculation

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Wayne B. Williams' lawyer told the jury that has heard 34 days of testimony from almost 200 witnesses in his murder trial that there is no hard evidence, only "speculation," that Williams killed two young blacks.

The jury was to hear closing arguments today before beginning deliberations on murder charges against the 23-year-old black man.

Williams is charged with the murders of Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, and Nathaniel Cater, 27, the 26th and 28th victims in a 22-month string of 28 slayings of young blacks that began in July 1979.

A special police task force created to investigate the killings has made no arrests in the 26 other deaths, but prosecutors contend the deaths of Cater and Payne are part of a pattern of slayings, and presented evidence linking Williams to 10 other slayings.

Judge Clarence Cooper, who denied a defense motion for a directed verdict of acquittal, recessed the trial Thursday morning after Williams' mother told the jury of eight blacks and four whites that the state has not "produced evidence that my son is a killer."

Court spokesman Ken Boswell said each side would be allowed two hours to complete its closing arguments and the case could go to the jury as early as this evening.

He said jurors would deliberate in the courtroom rather than in a jury room because of the large number of bulky exhibits, including a bridge model and dozens of charts and maps.

The prosecution has said it would ask for a sentence of life imprisonment if Williams is convicted.

Faye Williams, who had testified earlier in the trial, was one of three rebuttal witnesses called by defense lawyers after prosecutors produced 13 witnesses to dispute testimony presented by the defense.

"Wayne's character has been drug through the mud, my husband's character has been drug through the mud...the Williams family has been ruined," Mrs. Williams said. "They continue to lie and lie and lie, but they have not produced evidence that my son is a killer."

Mrs. Williams was called to the witness stand to dispute the testimony of two prosecution witnesses who said they saw Williams beat or choke his father in two separate incidents.

The defendant and his father, Homer Williams, denied earlier that either incident took place, and Mrs. Williams corroborated their testimony Thursday.

Defense attorney Alan Binder said in asking for acquittal Thursday that "the most we've got in this murder case is speculation."

The prosecution called 130 witnesses, building a circumstantial case against the free-lance photographer and aspiring talent scout. None of those witnesses, however, provided any direct testimony that Williams had committed any of the murders.

Each of 12 prosecution witnesses testified they saw Williams with one of seven of the victims, including Cater and Payne. And fiber identification experts testified that is different types of fibers found on the bodies of the 12 victims were matched to 18 different sources in Williams' home and car, including the hair from his head.

The centerpiece of the prosecution's case was an incident before dawn May 22, when Williams was stopped near a Chattahoochee River bridge by a police stakeout team after an officer under the bridge reported hearing a loud splash in the river.

Two days after that incident, Cater's body was found in the river 1¼ miles downstream from the bridge, the same area where Payne's body had been found a month earlier. Prosecutors contend Williams had just dumped Cater's body in the river when he was spotted by police.

Defense lawyers called 67 witnesses, including Williams, his parents and two pathologists who testified that the autopsy findings on Cater and Payne would not support a conclusion either had been murdered.

Bomb rips apart house

MIDDLESEX, N.J. (AP) — After a day of sifting through rubble, investigators were uncertain whether a pipe bomb had caused a mammoth blast that destroyed a house, killing the couple inside and injuring their three sons.

"We're still not 100 percent sure," Lt. Edward Meyer, commander of the Middlesex Police Department's detective bureau, said late Thursday. "Our top agents are putting their heads together now, and we still have nothing."

Earlier in the day, William Diedrich of the U.S. Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said, "We know there's some sort of device." The explosion was not touched off by gas, he said.

Andrew Richard Puskas and his wife, Patricia, were killed in the Thursday morning blast, said Middlesex County Prosecutor Richard Rebeck.

Their three sons, Andrew Jr., 9; Scott, 7, and Brian, 5, were leaving the house on their way to school when the explosion occured, Rebeck said. The boys were treated for minor injuries at EmergiCenter in Green Brook, according to Dale Heffler, spokeswoman for the center's parent hospital.

One of the children told an investigator that his parents had opened a package Thursday morning that contained several bottles and a pipe bomb with a 45-second timer, Diedrich said.

Investigators had searched through the debris until 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Meyer said, and planned to search again today.

One investigator, who asked that his name not be used, told the Courier-News of Bridgewater that Puskas called police Thursday morning to report a bomb at his home. A police officer had just arrived at the house and was getting out of his car when the house blew up, the newspaper said.

Lt. Harold Knelle of the prosecutor's office said county arson squad investigators were looking into reports that a package had been delivered at the house shortly before the explosion.

A Courier-News reporter at the EmergiCenter heard one of the Puskas children tell Ralph Walter, their principal at Green Brook Christian Academy: "He told me just go out. There was a bomb inside. Kaboom."

The explosion blew the front door of the one-story house into the front yard. Public Service Electric & Gas Co. spokesman Gene Murphy said utility crews checked for gas leaks but found none.

"The screaming kind of made my blood run cold," said Harriet Carpenter, a neighbor. She said Puskas was taking his children to school when the house blew and the children ran screaming to another neighbor's house.

Guards, inmates injured in melee

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP) — San Quentin prison authorities say they don't know why seven prisoners started to fight, but when the melee was over, eight guards and five inmates were injured.

One of the inmates was hospitalized after the brawl Thursday morning in an exercise yard.

Guards fired four blanks to warn the inmates of a maximum-security section to stop fighting, said Lt. Jim McCullough. After a brief respite, however, the prisoners started another fight.

The guards fired birdshot on the ground to stop the second battle.

Western Union satellite launched

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Lighting up the night with a blue plume of flame, a 116-foot-tall Delta rocket carried a giant $28 million communications satellite into space.

The 2,425-pound Westar IV is twice the size of three other Western Union satellites now functioning in space. It was launched into orbit at 7:04 p.m. EST Thursday after strong winds in the upper stratosphere forced a 15-minute delay.

Boosted into the sky at 1,500 mph by nine rockets, the satellite was at the edge of the Earth's atmosphere in less than four minutes.

Among other duties, the 2,425-pound Westar IV spacecraft will transmit regional editions of Time magazine, the Wall Street Journal and Sports Illustrated from its orbital station 22,640 miles above San Antonio, Texas.

"It's a big bird," said Charles Gay, Kennedy Space Center's director of expendable rockets.

Westar IV joins three other Western Union spacecraft handling voice, data, video and print facsimile communications. It replaces aging Westar I, which was launched in 1974 and reaches the end of its design life in 1983.

It has a 10-year lifespan and carries 24 transponder channels, each capable of carrying 2,400 voice transmissions or one color television transmission.

It will cover the 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Western Union's satellite network relays programs for Public Broadcasting Service radio and TV stations, Mutual Broadcasting System, some commercial TV networks, the Hughes Television Network, Cable Network News, Westinghouse Broadcasting and others.

Another satellite, Westar V, is scheduled for launch in 1982, taking over traffic now carried on Westar II.

Westinghouse's fourth satellite, Westar IV, is launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla. late Thursday. The $28 million communications satellite, which will be in geosynchronous orbit 22,640 miles above San Antonio, will transmit regional editions of The Wall Street Journal, Time magazine and Sports Illustrated to the fifty states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. Another Westinghouse satellite, Westar V, is scheduled for launch later this year.

Study says pot may not cause serious damage

By WARREN E. LEARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is no conclusive evidence marijuana causes permanent, long-term health effects in humans, but a variety of shorter term reactions to the drug "justifies serious national concern," concludes a major study released today.

The National Academy of Sciences study, one of the most comprehensive ever attempted on the health effects of marijuana, said the lack of information about the most widely used illicit drug in America is astonishing.

The studying committee said the country must give a higher priority to research on marijuana and related drugs, including a greater investment of research dollars.

"The committee considers the research particularly inadequate when viewed in light of the extent of marijuana use in this country, especially by young people," said the report.

"Our major conclusion is that what little we know for certain about the effects of marijuana on human health — and all that we have reason to suspect — justifies serious national concern," it continued.

The academy, an independent but federally chartered organization of distinguished scientists, conducted the 15-month study for the National Institutes of Health.

The committee from the academy's Institute of Medicine said marijuana had worrisome, and sometimes harmful, short-term effects on reflexes, behavior, vision, learning, memory and the body's heart and lung systems.

But it said there is no conclusive evidence the drug is addictive, leads to the use of "harder" drugs, affects the structure of the brain or causes birth defects.

Among the study's medical findings:

—Marijuana significantly impairs motor coordination, ability to follow a moving object and ability to detect a flash of light, factors that "may suggest a substantial risk" to driving or operating machines.

—The drug hampers short-term memory, oral communication, learning and may trigger temporary confusion and delirium, all factors of special concern with adolescents who use the drug during school hours.

—There is so far no convincing evidence of behavioral effects persisting after drug use stops.

—Long-term effects of marijuana smoking on the lungs probably are similar to those of tobacco smoke, including a "strong possibility" prolonged, heavy use will lead to cancer or serious lung impairment.

—Chronic use temporarily decreases sperm number and movement with unknown effects on male fertility, and animal studies indicate effects on ovulation and hormone levels in females but without known adverse effects.

The committee said it was particularly concerned about the chronic, heavy use of marijuana, especially by young people. Marijuana's components and breakdown products remain in the body for a long time and can accumulate while using the drug.

Yet, no study has followed marijuana smokers comprehensively for more than five years and long-term effects on those who started using the drug early in life are unknown, said the report.

Marijuana smoking increased rapidly during the past decade, particularly among adolescents and young adults. But the group noted that use among high school seniors leveled off and began declining in the past three years.

A University of Michigan study released earlier this week said 7 percent of high school seniors reported using marijuana almost daily, compared with 9 percent in 1980 and 11 percent in 1978, the peak year.

That study of 17,000 seniors from across the country said use was apparently declining because of concern about health risks and peer pressure, indicating anti-marijuana campaigns were working.

The academy report concludes that there are definite risks to marijuana use, although lack of information keeps society from knowing how serious they may be.

"The scientific evidence published to date indicates that marijuana has a broad range of psychological and biological effects, some of which, at least under certain conditions, are harmful to human health," it said.

Drug policy questions result of cocaine study

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Two researchers who have found that moderate use of cocaine is relatively harmless say their findings cast doubt on the usefulness of the federal government's huge effort to block cocaine trade.

Writing in the current issue of Scientific American, the researchers say that deaths from "recreational" cocaine use are rare and there is little evidence that such use causes physical harm.

"Cocaine policy and regulations take little account of these conclusions, just as drug regulations in the past have been based neither on science nor on sense," they wrote.

Moderate use of cocaine may be no more harmful than similar use of alcohol or tobacco, say Dr. Robert Byck of Yale University and Dr. Craig Van Dyke, who recently left Yale for the University of California at San Francisco.

However, the smoking or injection of cocaine can "lead to almost continual consumption and drug-seeking behavior, destructive to personal competence and productivity," according to the researchers.

In six years of studying the effects of cocaine on people and animals, the researchers, both psychiatrists, found that "snorting" cocaine through the nose is generally not addictive.

They also question the euphoric effects described by cocaine users. Experienced cocaine users were reportedly unable to distinguish between doses of cocaine and lidocaine, a synthetic local anesthetic.

The implication is that the euphoric effects may be partly psychological. Other researchers have found that some cocaine users are unable to distinguish between the effects of the drug and the effects of similar doses of sugar or talcum powder.

The Yale scientists warned that heavy cocaine use can lead to sleeplessness, loss of appetite and possibly hallucinations and paranoia.

There is a difference, they say, between snorting cocaine and injecting it into the bloodstream or smoking a potent concoction called "free base."

People who snort cocaine, the researchers say, tend to use the drug when it's available, and are not compelled to maintain their supply.

"The pattern of behavior is comparable to that experienced by many people with peanuts or potato chips," they write. "It may interfere with other activities of the individual, but it may be a source of enjoyment as well."

Walkway design didn't meet construction codes

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A seven-month study which showed that the Hyatt Regency Hotel's skywalks were too weak to hold required loads supports the view that the design was "naive" and "unfeasible," an engineering expert says.

The suspended walkways at the Kansas City hotel came crashing down July 17, killing 113 people and injuring nearly 200 others. The 349-page National Bureau of Standards study was released Thursday.

"Had anyone known how weak they were, they wouldn't have let a janitor sweep on them," Edward O. Pfrang, chief investigator for the NBS, said of the skywalks.

At a news conference in Washington, the NBS announced that neither the original nor final design of the walkways met city building code requirements. A design change made before construction was primarily responsible for the collapse, the study concluded. Both plans were approved by Kansas City building inspectors.

None of the companies that built the walkways have acknowledged initiating the design change, and some have blamed each other in court documents.

As originally designed, one set of rods would have been used to suspend the skywalks from the hotel's roof. However, the plans were changed to hang the fourth-floor walkway from the ceiling and the second-floor walkway from the fourth-story walkway.

The report concluded that because of that alteration, the walkways could hold only 31 percent of the required load capacity stipulated by Kansas City building codes. Even so, as originally designed the walkways could have supported only 56.5 percent of the load limit, Pfrang said.

At the time of the collapse, a lot of people were on the walkways watching people at a dance in the lobby below.

"The original design was naive," said Neal FitzSimons, chairman of the American Society of Structural Engineers' committee on building failures. "It wasn't unbuildable, but it was unfeasible...And the building codes people, where is their responsibility? None of this was answered in this report."

FitzSimons said a lack of regulation in the construction industry — from architects to engineers to inspectors — played a major role in the disaster.

"Somewhere along the line it should have been discovered that this (the skywalks) was not in compliance," said Mayor Richard Berkley. He added that changes must be made in the city's building code, which he said is under review.

Spokesmen for Havens Steel Co., the Kansas City steel fabricator that built the walkways, and Eldridge & Son Construction Co., the hotel's general contractor, said they believed their firms had been exonerated. Gillum-Colaco, a St. Louis structural engineering firm that worked on the walkways, said it also was cleared by the findings.

The architectural firm for the project, Patty Berkebile Nelson Duncan Monroe & Lefebvre Architects Planners Inc. of Kansas City, had no immediate comment on the report.

"Crown Center is pleased that this important investigation has been completed," said William Johnson, spokesman for Crown Center Redevelopment Corp., which owns the hotel. "It should have never happened, except for the gross indifference and disregard for known danger signs."

Squids may help clean up chemical warfare agents

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deadly chemical nerve gas apparently is no match for the squid, scientists say.

Researchers reported today that they have discovered a method using an enzyme from squids to destroy chemical warfare nerve gases in a cleaner way than previously possible.

The method may provide a way to neutralize unwanted stockpiles, said Illinois Institute of Technology scientists in a report published in Science magazine.

The scientists said they have succeeded in binding the squid substance to resin beads and making a system that will detoxify principal nerve gases when passed through the beads.

But the researchers said the laboratory-scale system they developed would only be practical if a way were found to produce large quantities of the squid chemical.

They speculated this might be possible through chemical synthesis or genetic engineering techniques that possibly could develop microbes to produce the substance.

Drs. Francis C. G. Hoskin and Allan H. Roush said their test results "suggest a means for detoxifying unwanted chemical warfare agents."

Hoskin said in a telephone interview that he earlier discovered an enzyme in the nerve cells of squid that broke down organophosphorus compounds used as nerve gas.
