Sharp: MISD among districts saving taxpayers $40 million

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — State Comptroller John Sharp Monday delivered to state leaders his second report card on the progress of the Texas School Performance Review in helping 16 public school districts across the state, including Midland Independent School District, save nearly $40 million to date by adopting 87 percent of his 1,400 total recommendations.

Sharp said MISD has implemented 89 percent of his team's proposals, for reported savings to date of nearly $225,000.

"Midland schools have made great progress on our recommendation as to improve their operations and save local taxpayers money," Sharp said.

"As always, our hope is that every school district in Texas will use this report to measure their own programs and find innovative ideas that they can use to boost the efficiency of

Bivens, education official tout local leverage of state's code

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

A state education official said Monday he believes the most significant portion of the new state Education Code lies with allowing local school districts to make their own decisions.

"This leaves the 'how' to educate schoolchildren to the local school districts," said Texas Commissioner on Education Mike Moses. "The state will determine to what level the child is educated, but the school districts will determine how to educate the child."

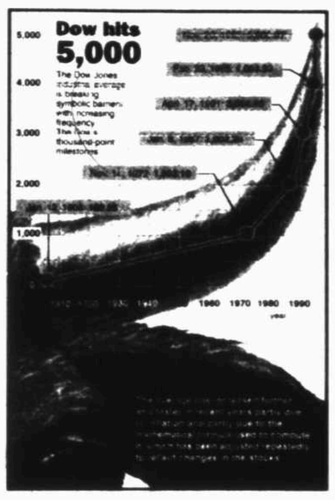

State Sen. Teel Bivins and Moses were in Midland Monday for a day of meetings and discussions with community representatives, school administrators and educators. They met briefly with members of the news media in the afternoon.

Government reopens; big task remains

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With a budget truce revving the government back to life, the White House and congressional Republicans pledged Monday to use December talks to champion divergent spending priorities that have so far been irreconcilable. The GOP signaled possible give on its prized tax cut.

Democrats and Republicans alike seemed relieved that the longest-ever partial federal shutdown was ending, a six-day ordeal that had both parties fearing retribution by disgusted voters. But there was doggedness, too, and White House spokesman Mike McCurry warned, "We'll be right back where we were" unless the two sides strike a budget deal by mid-December.

A day after bipartisan leaders shook hands on a pact reopening government through Dec. 15, the House approved the measure, 421-4, and sent it to President Clinton, who signed it Monday night.

The legislation commits both sides to seeking a balanced budget in seven years using congressional economic calculations, which Republicans had demanded for months, and to protect social programs, as the White House insisted. It was approved Sunday by the Senate.

Before recessing for Thanksgiving, the House also gave final congressional blessing to the GOP plan for balancing

Winners, losers: Both sides rush to claim victory

WASHINGTON — Benefiting from brinksmanship, the Republicans gained substantial ground from the partial government shutdown when President Clinton and the Democrats agreed to negotiate a seven-year balanced budget.

The White House and its allies in Congress came away with important, last-minute language protecting Medicare, Medicaid and other programs they have been defending all year.

But even as both sides rushed to claim victory on Monday, they looked ahead to the difficult talks ahead. "In this time of euphoria, we must remember we've agreed to a temporary cease-fire and not a permanent settlement," said Rep. Bill

Midland's 42nd annual Christmas tree lighting is set for the evening of Dec. 2 following the Midland Children's Christmas Parade.

The tree lighting festivities — organized by the Midland Jaycees and the city of Midland — will begin at 5:30 p.m. with the actual lighting at 6:15 p.m. at Centennial Plaza, Loraine Street and Texas Avenue.

"There's going to be a lot of singing and a lot of Christmas spirit," said Doll Campbell, chairwoman of the Jaycees's tree lighting committee. "This is just a great time for the community to get together and share the warmth of the Christmas season."

The event will begin following the 15th annual Christmas

Beatlemania redux

First airing of group's new song spins new interest

By David Bauder
Associated Press

The first airing of the new Beatles song "Free As a Bird" touched off a second round of Beatlemania — this time minus the screaming fans. The new album arrived at stores Monday under extraordinarily tight security.

Radio stations, even all-news stations, aired the new song incessantly and many music stores across the country planned to stay open past midnight to start selling the album on its official release date, today.

"A lot of Beatles fans have called to say how emotional it is to listen to it," said Andre Gardner, program director at New York City's WXRK-FM, which played the song every hour. "Even if they're not Beatles fans, they're calling to say it's a great song."

"I walked in the door this morning and had three calls before I could put my purse down. The phone hasn't stopped ringing since then," said Karen Aamodt, clerk at the Music Disc store in Denver.

Di says she doesn't want royal divorce

■ Princess shocks Britain with her own adultery confession.

Associated Press

LONDON — Both Princess Diana and Prince Charles were unfaithful during their marriage, but she does not want a divorce, Diana said in an interview broadcast Monday night.

In her first public comments about her private life, Diana told the BBC: "I don't want a divorce." But she said she would be willing to discuss the possibility with Charles if he feels differently.

Princess Diana makes her first public comments about her private life.

"I await my husband's decision on which way we're all going to go," she said. "... To date, neither of us has discussed this subject, though the rest of the world seems to have."

In a candid interview, the 34-year-old Princess of Wales described how her fairy-tale marriage ended because Charles was in love with another woman, Camilla Parker Bowles.

Charles admitted in 1994 to having had an affair after his marriage broke down. Diana's interview was seen as her retort to the confession.

The princess said she was devastated when she found out about the affair in 1986. She said it fueled a sense of failure that led to an eating disorder and self-mutilation.

"There were three of us in this marriage, so it was a bit crowded," she said. "... It was pretty devastating."

Diana said she became bulimic, and "escaped" into a cycle of bingeing and vomiting. She also said she hurt her arms and legs, but did not specify how.

"It was a symptom of what was going on in my marriage. I was crying for help, but I was giving the wrong signals," she said, adding that "I'm free of it now."

By 1987, Diana said she and Charles were effectively leading separate lives in private, but "we were a good, good team in public." She disclosed that Charles asked for the formal separation, which was announced in December 1992 after 11 years of marriage.

Asked if her relationship with Army Maj. James Hewitt, her former riding instructor, had gone beyond a close friendship, Diana said: "Yes it did, yes."

"Were you unfaithful?" asked reporter Martin Bashir.

"Yes, I adored him," Diana said. "Yes, I was in love with him."

She denied having an adulterous relationship with her friend James Gilbey, but confirmed that he was the man who called her "Squidgy" in a secretly taped telephone conversation. She said the release of that tape "was done to hurt me" and was "the first time I knew what it felt to be outside the net" of the royal family.

Rabin's assassin: 'Everything he does, he does perfectly,' classmate says

RAMAT GAN, Israel (AP) — Yigal Amir's world was one of black and white — organized by a moral certainty that extended from his religious studies to the murder of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

At a court hearing Monday, the 25-year-old Amir announced coolly that justice was served when he shot and killed Rabin, whom he blamed for attacks by Islamic militants that have killed dozens of Israelis.

Students at Bar-Ilan University, where Amir studied law, computer science and Torah studies, described their classmate Monday as a dedicated student, self-confident and unshakable in his convictions. They expressed little surprise at reports that Amir was once trained as a guard by Israel's Shin Bet security service, which taught him to fire a pistol and analyze security measures.

"Everything that he does, he does perfectly," said Chaim Michaelis, who took computer classes with Amir. "He killed the prime minister. This, too, he did perfectly."

Amir was ordered held until Nov. 30 while police complete their investigation of him and a half-dozen other suspects in custody. Police believe there was a carefully planned conspiracy to kill the prime minister, although Amir has insisted he acted alone.

Wearing a gray patterned sweater and a skullcap, Amir told reporters Monday that when he re-enacted the assassination for police last week, he thought of Israeli victims of attacks by Islamic militants.

"I said, 'Finally, justice is served,'" he said.

When the judge stopped Amir from lecturing the courtroom on the illegitimacy of Rabin's government, Amir laughed bitterly and blurted: "You just don't want to hear the truth."

Police said Amir will be charged with murder, attempted murder and conspiracy.

He grew up in the Tel Aviv suburb of Herzliya, the second of eight children in a family of religious immigrants from Yemen. His mother ran a nursery school in their home, and his father worked as a scribe. Amir excelled in religious elementary and high schools, then continued his studies while serving in Israel's elite Golani brigade.

In 1992, he spent five months in Latvia, teaching Hebrew to Jewish schoolchildren.

But in an unconfirmed account citing unidentified security sources, the Yediot Ahronot newspaper said Monday that Amir's real job was to protect the Jewish community in Latvia. The Shin Bet trained Amir in marksmanship and protection practices before he was sent abroad, the newspaper said. In one lecture, Amir reportedly learned that security could most easily be penetrated when a target was arriving at an event or leaving one.

Amir shot and killed Rabin Nov. 4 as the prime minister was getting into his car after a peace rally in Tel Aviv.

In 1993, Amir entered Bar-Ilan University, the only religious university in Israel, and enrolled in the Institute for Higher Torah Studies. Once again he proved to be an outstanding student.

After the signing of Israel and the PLO's historic peace agreement in September 1993 and the famous handshake between Rabin and Yasser Arafat, Amir became increasingly involved in anti-government protests. He led student trips to Jewish settlements on weekends, took part in demonstrations and distributed anti-government leaflets.

In June, he helped set up an illegal settlement on the West Bank. In July, he was dragged by soldiers off a hill near the Efrat settlement along with dozens of other protesters.

Classmates said Amir was devastated earlier this year when his girlfriend broke up with him and married one of his friends, and reports say he became even more fervent.

Defeat of Walesa biggest blow yet to East Europe's democratic forces

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Unseated as president by a media-savvy former Communist, Lech Walesa is the best-known casualty of a backlash against free-market reforms sweeping ex-Communists back to power in eastern Europe.

His defeat Sunday by Aleksander Kwasniewski, who tapped a nerve with promises to ease the shock of transition, was the biggest blow yet to the pro-democracy forces that brought down corrupt regimes in 1989.

"For the Communists of central Europe, regardless of where else they have returned to power, this is the ultimate symbolic victory because the Poles have dumped the hero of Solidarity," columnist Konstanty Gebert said in an interview.

Within six years of their overthrow, Communists regrouping under the Social Democrat banner with some fresh, young faces have won back power at the ballot box across the former East bloc.

Appealing to voters yearning for a return of the cradle-to-grave social welfare net and tired of bickering political neophytes, ex-Communists have won parliamentary majorities in Poland, Hungary and Bulgaria since 1993.

They also hold major political offices in Slovakia, Lithuania and Romania. And Russia's Communist Party is expected to be the leading party in parliamentary elections scheduled for Dec. 17.

In outpolling Walesa with 52 percent of the vote Sunday, Kwasniewski did best in the countryside and small towns, where most folks earn barely enough to feed their families and pay the bills.

'Last Nazi' heads to Rome for trial

ROME (AP) — Exactly 50 years after the Nuremberg war crime trials began, an aging SS captain dubbed the "last Nazi" headed for Italy on Monday to be tried for sending 335 people into dark caves that would become their tomb.

"This will be the last of the Nazi war criminal cases," said Shimon Samuels, European director for the Simon Wiesenthal Center, a Los Angeles-based group that tracks Nazis.

Erich Priebke, 82, received confession from a Roman Catholic priest Monday before being ushered by 10 Interpol agents to a special jet in the Andean mountain resort of Bariloche, Argentina.

He was scheduled to arrive Tuesday at an airport south of Rome that is only a few miles from the site of the 1944 massacre, ordered by Hitler in retaliation for an ambush that killed 32 German soldiers.

Italian prosecutors looked forward to finally confronting Priebke after a 17-month extradition struggle. It was only the fourth time Argentina has agreed to return fugitives accused of World War II atrocities.

Expect morning fog, high of 65-70

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for areas of morning fog, otherwise mostly sunny with a high of 65-70 and southeast to south winds at 5-10 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low of 40-45, according to the National Weather Service in Midland. Wednesday should be sunny and breezy with a high in the upper 70s. Thanksgiving Day should be fair with a low near 40 and a high near 70.

After an overnight low of 39, Monday's high reached 67, compared to the record high for that date of 83 set in 1942. The record low was 22 set in 1988.

STATE

A weak cold front moved southward through Texas Monday, bringing clouds and a few sprinkles to eastern half of the state.

Skies behind the front cleared rapidly and winds ahead and behind the front were light. Temperatures remained about 10 degrees above normal across the state's northern tier despite the system.

Dallas stayed in the 70s even after the front had passed well to the south.

The front stretched into New Mexico, but skies in the Panhandle and West Texas remained clear and winds were light. Readings reached the 50s and lows 60s toward the north and near 80 in the Rio Grande Valley.

Clouds replaced morning fog in parts of South Texas.

Conditions across Texas should be fairly uniform today. Sunny skies and highs reaching the 60s and 70s, with 80s in extreme South Texas, are in the forecast.

The cloudless skies should make for cool nights. Temperatures may dip as low as the 30s in the north and to the 40s and 50s elsewhere.

TOUT: 'The teacher can say, "You don't come back" '

(From 1A)

The Texas system of public education was substantially revised when the 74th Legislature adopted the new education code contained in Senate Bill 1.

The bill was signed by Gov. George W. Bush on May 30 and many of its provisions took effect immediately.

"This is a bill of hope and trust," Moses said. "We trust our local school boards ... and this says to our children that we have great hopes for you."

Moses said local school boards are provided with more leverage on how to get things done with the state setting the education level through things like the essential elements and the Texas Academic Assessment Skills tests.

"This has created more freedom and local control than has existed in the last two decades," Bivins said.

Moses said local districts still will be held accountable through student performance. He said the state still will look at the various campuses to make sure students are provided for.

Teachers can be creative, but will still have to "keep their eye on the ball," Moses said. He called the new concept a challenge for local districts to enrich their students.

Another important part of the legislation provides for school safety while allowing students who want to learn the privilege of doing so without disruptive students in class.

It allows teachers to provide a way to prevent disruptive students from returning to class while still providing that student with an education, Moses said.

"This provides much wider latitude ... and has improved teachers' attitudes and spirits," Moses said. "The school district has options now with fewer rules and regulations."

Bivins added that in his hometown of Amarillo the zero tolerance for disruptive students has provided instructors with a "disciplinary tool" they never had before.

"The teacher can say, 'You don't come back' into the classroom," Bivins said.

"It is clear teachers will have authority they never had before ... with the alternate education programs," Moses added. "We want kids to continue to be educated, but class is reserved for those who are responsible."

their own operations," Sharp said.

MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi, Jr., applauded Sharp's original view of the district and the new progress report.

"The performance review outlined a number of recommendations that will not only benefit the taxpayers of Midland but ultimately their children by providing them with more dollars dedicated to instruction," Baressi said. "It may take three to five years to implement all the recommendations, but we feel they will make us a much more productive school district."

Sharp's Texas School Performance Review, working with outside management consultant firms, has studied 19 independent public school districts since 1991 and proposed more than $166 million in savings to local taxpayers without laying off a single classroom teacher. Three of the districts - Beaumont ISD, San Angelo ISD and Waco ISD - were reviewed too recently to measure their progress.

The report details the progress of the give public school districts reviewed by Sharp's team since the Comptroller issued his first report card two years ago. Besides MISD, the districts highlighted in Monday's report included Brownsville ISD, Longview ISD, Paris ISD and San Marcos ISD.

"Parents, students, teachers and school officials in these five districts have embraced 86 percent of our recommendations and already saved local taxpayers more than $5 million," Sharp said. "They're showing their commitment to our common goals of holding the line on costs, streamlining operations and spending every possible education dollar in the classroom, not on bureaucratic waste and red tape."

Sharp's previous report card looked at the progress of the initial 11 districts his team had reviewed to that point. Monday's update showed that those districts continue to act on his proposals and accrue savings. A total of 88 percent of the recommendations have been implemented, and savings have climbed to $35 million.

Before making their recommendations, Sharp's Texas School Performance Review team has met with a wide range of education professionals, parents and community groups, conducted telephone calls, teacher and principal surveys, on-campus inspections and solicited suggestions from front-line school district employees.

A total of 1,400 recommendations have been presented to the 16 districts whose progress has been studied to date, touching virtually all areas of district operations, from administration and personnel matters to per-pupil transportation costs, campus security and community involvement.

cast Sunday night during ABC-TV's airing of a documentary on the band, which split up in 1970. On the basis of overnight ratings, ABC estimated 47 million people watched the show. The Beatles' first appearance on the "Ed Sullivan Show" in 1964 drew 73 million viewers.

The midtempo ballad originally was recorded on a home cassette player in 1977 by the late John Lennon. Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr added their voices, instruments and new lyrics.

With Harrison's slide guitar and production by Jeff Lynne, its sound owes as much to the Traveling Wilburys as the Beatles. The composition is reminiscent of Lennon's 1970 solo song "Love," and Harrison's Beatles elegy, "All Those Years Ago."

Although a number of previously recorded songs have been released over the past 25 years, "Free as a Bird" was the first new Beatles song issued since the group disbanded.

Reaction was mixed among some longtime Beatles fans. Charles Rosenay, publisher of the Beatles fan magazine Good Day Sunshine, said he had hoped for something infectious and bouncy.

"It didn't meet up with what I expected," said Rosenay, of New Haven, Conn. "It wasn't a mop tops song and it was probably naive to think that's what it would be."

Geoffrey Giuliano, author of several Beatles books, said the song was only a fragment of an idea that Lennon probably would never have wanted released.

"I feel betrayed by the Beatles. I think it was a horrible idea," he said.

The song is included on the two-disc "Beatles Anthology I" album. The highly anticipated album also features previously unreleased material from the band's early days, such as the audition tape sent to a record company that turned them down.

Some 31,000 boxes of the album were distributed across the country Monday from the United Parcel Service center at Louisville, Ky., under tight security.

A convoy of trucks carrying the CDs from the Capitol Records factory in Jacksonville, Ill., had been tracked by satellite and radio as it crossed Indiana on Sunday. The record company had an exclusive deal with ABC-TV to air the song first and went to great lengths to prevent leaks.

"Even one of these things getting out would blow it," UPS spokesman Ken Shapero said. A Beatles spokesman said he knew of no security breaches.

Music stores eagerly awaited the album. They hoped it, coupled with other high-profile albums due out today by Garth Brooks and Bruce Springsteen, would improve a slow fall sales season.

"The world is going to come to a stop. We're planning on that," said Tim Devin, general manager of a Tower Records store in New York City's Greenwich Village, which stocked 4,000 copies of the Beatles release.

"I think this record is going to appeal to everyone across the board," Devin said. "For nostalgia they'll come out for it, for curiosity, just for the love of the music."

VICTORY: Having agreed on truce, they resume war

(From 1A)

Richardson, D-N.M.

Translation: Pass the ammunition.

That's not surprising on an issue that more than any other has divided Republicans from Democrats this year and will have momentous impact on the lives of ordinary Americans.

"The question isn't whether we balance the budget," says Rep. Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., his party's leader in the House. "It's how we balance the budget."

In the dozens of votes that lawmakers have cast in this first year of the Republican revolution, the ones on balancing the budget have hewed most closely to party lines.

When the latest version of the GOP balanced budget bill moved through the House last week, only five Democrats out of 199 voted for it, and only one Republican out of 233 voted against. And when it cleared the Senate, 52 of 53 Republicans voted in favor, while all 46 Democrats were opposed.

That bill called for squeezing hundreds of billions of dollars from Medicare, Medicaid and welfare, while leaving room for a large tax cut.

Short-term, the surest winners of last week's battle are the hundreds of thousands of federal employees, hostages in a game of power politics, who are free now to return to work. Count among the victors, too, the millions of Americans whose applications for government benefits were piling up, and whose vacations to the nation's incomparable parks and museums were threatened.

Longer-term, the winner of the political wars won't be know until next November's elections.

Republicans and Democrats both brought strengths and weaknesses to the table last week as they battled through a six-day shutdown that idled nearly 800,000 federal workers.

Republicans soar in the polls when voters are asked whether they favor balancing the budget. Democrats do well when the question is asked differently: Do you favor cuts in Medicare, Medicaid and other programs.

Thus, when Clinton vetoed legislation that provided an increase in Medicare premiums as a price for keeping government open, that was a winner for him and a loser for the Republicans.

And when Speaker Newt Gingrich pouted in public about having been treated badly aboard Air Force One and said that played a role in the budget impasse, that, too, was a loser for the GOP.

On the other hand, White House officials said they had grown concerned last week at about the time Republicans dropped their insistence on a Medicare premium hike and made reopening the government conditional only on Clinton agreeing to negotiate a seven-year balance budget.

Given the popularity of a balanced budget, the White House and Democratic leaders worried about losing a veto override vote.

"The feeling was, we were stuck in a debate simply over the abstract question of whether the budget should be balanced, and we were not going to be able to hold our troops as long as that was the issue," said one Democratic aide, speaking on condition of anonymity.

In the end, the compromise was classic Washington, a phrase deleted here, a word added there.

At midafternoon on Sunday, according to officials involved in the talks, Democrats submitted a proposal for reopening government. It committed the president and Congress to a seven-year balanced budget "if and only if" it would protect Medicare, Medicaid, education and the environment without raising taxes on working families.

Democrats also wanted restoration of normal government borrowing authority, back pay for furloughed workers and slightly more money for certain federal programs through the Dec. 15 expiration of the measure.

Republicans essentially said no to the debt limit increase, thereby retaining leverage as the budget struggle goes on.

The phrase "if and only if" caused problems, too, and Republicans proposed changing it to say the president and Congress "agree that the balanced budget must ... ensure Medicare solvency (and) reform welfare."

Democrats also wanted to add agriculture to the list of programs to be protected.

Republicans wanted to add veterans.

And having agreed on a truce, they resumed the war.

parade sponsored by the Midland Shrine Club. The parade will begin at 4 p.m. at Dennis the Menace Park and proceed down Wall Avenue to Centennial Plaza. Trophies for the top three participants will be awarded.

The Midland College Jazz Ensemble will perform at 5:30 p.m., pause for the lighting ceremony and continue to play until 6:30 p.m. The Midland-Odessa Symphony will then perform from 6:30 p.m. until 7 p.m.

"Santa Claus should be arriving around 6:20 (p.m.)," Ms. Campbell said. Children will be able visit with Santa and even have their pictures taken with him.

"There will be hot chocolate, hay rides and cookies," Ms. Campbell said.

The same day as the tree lighting and the parade, downtown Midland will begin to light up for the holiday season. A local group, Merry Merry Midland, has approached downtown businesses to line the top of their buildings with white lights.

"I think downtown's going to be good. We've had a good response," said Denise Burns with Merry Merry Midland.

Also, this will be the second year that new decorations will adorn about 125 poles along Texas and Wall avenues and around the Midland County Courthouse. The decorations were made possible though donations solicited by Merry Merry Midland.

DEATH: Police charge Odessa man, 20

(From 1A)

Emergency surgery was deemed necessary to correct damaged organs. Medical personnel at the hospital also determined that Graves had been sexually assaulted.

After the surgery, however, the child's vital functions ceased and medical personnel were unable to revive him. The time of death was recorded as 4:49 a.m., Ms. Sparks said.

The child's mother had left him in the care of her boyfriend, Carlos Cain Hinojos, 20, of Odessa. It was Hinojos who brought the child into the emergency room, Ms. Sparks said.

Hinojos, who resides at the Brady Station Apartments at 4401 E. 52nd. St., was later arrested and charged with aggravated sexual assault of a child — a first-degree felony.

Sgt. Snow Robertson of the Metro Homicide Unit and child abuse investigator Shane Callander are continuing the investigation of this case. Those officers transported Graves' body to Lubbock Monday where an autopsy will be conducted.

To protect their ongoing case against Hinojos, police will not release further information until the autopsy is completed, Ms. Sparks said.

Hinojos remains in the Odessa City Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond.

TASK: Democrats, Republicans alike seem relieved

the budget by 2002 on a mostly party-line 235-192 vote. It would overhaul Medicare, slice scores of programs and trim taxes for millions.

Clinton's long-promised veto of that measure will serve as the starter's flag for bargaining that Republican leaders said they hoped would begin next Monday. With those sessions in mind, the GOP prepared to send a letter to Clinton asking that he provide them with a detailed, seven-year budget-balancing plan of his own next week.

The president had long said that the GOP's seven-year, budget-balancing timetable would force overly harsh spending cuts. Democrats said Monday that to meet that schedule, the key in upcoming negotiations would be to force Republicans to shrink their planned $245 billion tax break for families and businesses.

"Well, I think that has to be on the table," responded House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., on NBC's "Today" program. Trimming the tax cut would make things easier for politicians and bureaucrats, but "harder for parents," he added.

Clinton met with House Democrats in a Capitol basement meeting room to send them home for Thanksgiving on an upbeat note, promising to hang tough for Democratic priorities, participants said.

But he also warned them that "everybody can't have their way," said Rep. Barbara Kennelly, D-Conn., a reference to compromises he said would be inevitable.

Both sides said they were mulling plans for the structure of their negotiations. But for now, each stressed that going in, they had achieved what they wanted.

"If we do what we should do between now and Dec. 15, it won't make any difference who won and who lost," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. But he couldn't resist adding: "I think we won. We didn't blink."

That's not how Democrats saw it.

"The president got what we wanted," boasted White House staff chief Leon Panetta on ABC's "Good Morning America," saying the administration got Republicans to promise to protect Medicare, Medicaid, education, the environment and aid to working families from severe reductions.

Panetta insisted that the administration had surrendered little in accepting the GOP's timetable, saying it was spending levels for important social programs that really counted. On NBC's "Today," he even seemed to hedge a bit on the timetable itself.

"If we can work out an agreement that protects those priorities, we can do it in seven years or eight years," Panetta said. "But the important thing is protecting those priorities, and that's what we got in the agreement last night."

Those remarks infuriated Republicans, who noted that the Sunday agreement called for an elimination of annual deficits "not later than fiscal year 2002."

"Seven years is not going up," said House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, R-La. "He committed to seven years last night, and we're going to hold him to it."

Though the talk was tough from both sides, it was serene compared with the testy mood that had dominated the Capitol for days. In one indicator of easing tensions, Rep. Jim Moran, D-Va., apologized to Rep. Randy "Duke" Cunningham, R-Calif., for shoving him Friday just outside the House chamber, saying the parties' "battle of ideas" should be settled "in a nonviolent way."

Sunday's agreement sent about 700,000 federal workers back to their jobs Monday, following another 100,000 who returned earlier as bills financing several agencies were signed. That meant that the Grand Canyon and Smithsonian museums reopened to tourists, the Commerce Department resumed tracking economic statistics, and overseas embassies could issue visas to travelers.

Budget deadlock can be resolved

While it could be only temporary, the fact that Republican congressional leaders and President Clinton were able to agree Sunday night on measures to reopen the federal government offers hope that the two sides can resolve their fundamental differences over the budget.

Although it looked as though Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole was accurate when in responding to a reporter's query as to "Who blinked?" Dole replied, "Seven years" — alluding to the fact that Clinton had agreed to the Republicans' seven-year plan for balancing the federal budget. However, that left unanswered questions about how the Republicans can assure Clinton's concerns to "protect future generations, provide adequate funding for Medicaid, education, agriculture, national defense, veterans and the environment." Answering those questions will require a large measure of give-and-take, which could put the two sides back in a standoff.

It is significant that over the weekend 20 Republican governors meeting in Nashua, N.H. urged Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich to stand firm and hold out for a balanced budget over a seven-year period, as opposed to Clinton's 10-year plan. That support may have helped sway Clinton to the agreement to balance the budget in seven years.

The standoff between Clinton and the Republican leadership has brought into focus the vital issues surrounding this budget. The economic well-being of all Americans — present as well as future — may depend on what is finally resolved. In that regard, what happens during the first half of December as the budget is hammered out in Washington will be critical.

Both Clinton and the Republican leaders in Congress should look to the well-being of all Americans rather than their own political agendas.

ANOTHER VIEW

Changing crop subsidies could empty shelves

Congress has been wrangling with cutting crop subsidies to balance the federal budget and that's not out of bounds.

For years, farmers have said that if the government would get off their backs, they could do better managing their affairs than the government — and they're probably right. The problem comes in when it's considered who else is involved — other governments and the consumer.

If the federal government cuts out supports, and restrictions on what may be planted and how much, the farmer is freed to make a better profit. That's the theory.

That assumes that other governments don't prop up prices for their farmers or "dump" goods on the market.

The freeing up of the farmer can also have adverse effects on the consumer. Left in free fall, prices can drastically fluctuate. Consumer advocates say that consumers are paying extra for food supplies because the government offers subsidies to farmers.

They call it "welfare" for rich agribusinesses.

Prices on some items may be a few cents higher because of the programs and it does seem wasteful to have surpluses. But, the alternative could be an empty grocery shelf. ...

What Congress is doing is trying to free the farmer from excessive government control (a worthy goal) and save the government money by dropping price supports. The question is how this will affect the consumer.

It is imperative that if Congress is going to change the game of price supports that it not forget that supports, though not economically "pure," produce the surplus that keeps grocery store shelves full and lines short.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Pilgrim ways may shed light on modern life

Thanksgiving, otherwise an occasion for families and feasting, sends us spinning backward in time. We go back, if only for a moment, to our origins — to men and women on the slippery edge of civilization, scrambling for a toehold.

Murchison

It is no bad thing to look back, if only between the grace and the cranberry sauce. We need to see where we began. It helps us appraise where we are now and where we may be headed.

The civilization of the Pilgrim Fathers, as we used to call them — I suppose the politically punctilious today would add "Mothers" — was unimaginably simple by modern standards. Between the settlers and God, there was hardly anything. Certainly not possessions! The Fathers and Mothers had brought few enough of these with them. Material temptations were not what you would call omnipresent in the American wilderness.

Nor was there much government to speak of. It was common, once upon a time, to note in Thanksgiving disquisitions written by patriotic editorialists how the settlers had adopted early on a kind of scheme for economic distribution. This scheme served them poorly. Instead of abundance, it produced dearth — instead of enterprise came sloth. The Pilgrims dropped it quickly. This demonstrated, we were assured, the abiding futility of socialistic fantasies.

The fascination that the Pilgrims have for us today is the fascination of Eden — everything in its original state, man's despoiling hand barely laid upon creation.

Edens never last. Certainly, the first one didn't. Nor could the Pilgrims' own, given its vast size and potentialities. It's helpful, nonetheless, to remember what life was like, stripped down to the essentials. To remember indeed that there were such things as essentials.

What were they? First in priority and power was God — the God in whose name the Pilgrims had voyaged here in the first place. His authority spoke for itself. Indeed, it was written down in a book, with signature phrases such as: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy might." There were explicit commandments. Good Pilgrims hand-stitched them on canvas. The society of which they were a part tried, with varying degrees of earnestness, to live by them. Church, where God was worshipped, was as natural as food and drink.

As for government, it existed for specific ends, as stipulated in the Mayflower Compact: "our better Ordering and Preservation" and the "Advancement of the Christian Faith and the Honour of our King and Country."

It would be silly to say we can recapture the Pilgrim vision. It would be even sillier to say that no effort to recapture it is warranted. The Pilgrim basics were good, and they worked. God at the top, human appetites much lower down on the totem pole, and human relations as matters for private, instead of governmental, adjustment — there was symmetry here.

Such symmetry we do not find in modern life, what with God off to the side, appetite central to daily concerns and government self-selected as the principal arbiter in human affairs.

We are, as I have observed already, a different kind of society: However, we are a society rethinking its assumptions. The turmoil in Washington over welfare and the federal budget is part of that rethinking — likewise the unsteady migration back to the churches and the revival of concern for moral matters.

The backward glance on Thanksgiving Day shows us not just how it was but also how — in spirit at any rate — it could be again. "Could be" isn't "will be." To talk about permeative religious faith and obligation is fine — and handtying. Start talking about powers higher than the human heart and there is no predicting what worldly aims one ends up surrendering.

But at our elbows this day sit the Pilgrims. I would not wonder if we heard them whispering to us, telling of the essentials. Lesson One: How to live as a strong, free people, worshipful of God and respectful of His intentions. Lesson Two: Well ... maybe that can wait till dessert?

CHARLEY REESE

Accept no more rationalizations for bad behavior

Let us stamp out nonsense. We can start with the claim that a law that proscribes a harsher penalty for crack cocaine possession than for powder cocaine is racist.

That's the line being peddled by some demagogues. Their pitiful, fallacious thinking goes like this: More blacks than whites use crack, therefore the law is racist.

Reese

Of course, anyone with the brains God gave a hog knows that the law is colorblind. The penalty is for possession of crack cocaine, and it is identical for everyone caught possessing the stuff — black, white, red, yellow, pink or polka dot.

But, by now, we are all drearily accustomed to false accusations, illogical thinking and immature emotionalism. The more important point is that demagogues would do better to tell youth of all races to stay the heck away from illegal drugs rather than trying to convince them they are victims of a racist plot. You would think, if they cared about the kids, that's what they would do.

But apparently, like most demagogues, they don't care about the kids, so I will give them some advice in regard to the salvation of their own careers, if not skins.

The world, as the Asian sages say, is not straight lines but circles and cycles. Demagogues who make a career out of making excuses for criminal behavior had better watch out for the pendulum because, as the songs says, it does swing. And it's coming. It's coming.

To put the matter in slightly less poetic language, Americans are damned fed up with hearing excuses for criminal behavior. We're tired of apologists for barbarians using the race card, the my-mommy-didn't-love-me card, the I-don't-know-who-my-daddy-was card, the I-was-abused-as-a-child card (probably deserved it), the I-was-poor card, the system-is-racist card, the Columbus-discovered-America-and-everything-went-to-hell card, the my-distant-ancestors-had-a-tough-time card, the police-officer-frowned-at-me card, etc., etc., to the point of nausea.

Guess what, buddy? We don't give a flying (expletive) why you committed the crime. We just want to punish you for it. If it's a heinous crime, we want to kill you. If it's the latest in a long string of crimes, we want to keep your sorry behind in prison until you die of old age or by the actions of your peers. If you're an illegal immigrant committing crimes, we want to fly you back to your country and drop you out without a parachute.

Those of us who love our families, our communities and our country, who accept responsibility, who work hard, who obey the laws and who follow the democratic rules will not much longer tolerate human garbage cluttering up our streets, preying on our children, robbing us of the fruits of our labor and denying us the pleasure of enjoying our communities without having to go armed and on constant alert.

We're tired of wasting huge public resources on human garbage whose response is not gratitude but more demands and more self-serving excuse-making and more barbaric acts.

For their own safety, the human flotsam had better understand how very, very close to rage many of us are. The bar society had better understand it. The social workers had better understand it. The politicians had better understand it.

These dregs of society may think the system will protect them, as it presently does, but we're now at the point that we'll change the system if that's what it takes to rid society of these rats. And we have the votes to change the system.

It's not asking too much of people to simply obey the law. Don't prey on people. Life is hard enough already for all of us. There is only one group of victims in this entire country tnat we care about — victims of crimes.

As for the rest, grow up, shut up, quit sniveling and go to work. Make a life, not excuses. The well of sympathy is dry. The gullible sentimentalists are discredited. The con game is over.

MIKE ROYKO

Forest Gump looks pretty smart next to Sagan, Gingrich

Have you ever done something so foolish and embarrassing that even your friends hooted and laughed behind your back?

Don't feel bad. It can happen to anyone, even those who have reputations for brilliance.

Here are two recent examples:

Royko

First, we have Dr. Carl Sagan, the Ivy League professor who has dazzled TV audiences with his stylish lectures on astronomy.

Dr. Sagan has been involved in a tiff with the Apple Computer company.

He discovered that Apple was working on a new operating system and had given it the code name of "Carl Sagan."

It wasn't going to be marketed under that name. It was strictly for internal use at the computer company.

Apple likes to do that with major projects. They currently call their next operating system "Copland," after composer Aaron Copland.

You might think Sagan would be flattered. I'd be delighted if Apple named a floppy disk after me.

Instead, he filed a lawsuit, demanding that they stop using his name.

At first, they thought he was kidding. It wasn't as if they were putting his name on Kitty Litter, dog food or underarm deodorant.

But when they realized that Sagan was serious, they changed the code name of the project to "BHA."

That would have been the end of the matter, except that someone at Apple had one drink too many and let it slip to an outsider that the new code name "BHA" stood for "Butt-Head Astronomer."

When this reached Sagan, he became even more indignant and filed another lawsuit, accusing Apple of causing him the usual pain, suffering and misery — as defined by lawyers — by making fun of him.

Once again, I don't understand his wounded feelings. Any time Apple wants to call a project "Butt-Headed Columnist," they will have my support and gratitude. I have been called far worse before leaving home in the morning.

The case was finally settled a few days ago. Apparently Apple said or did something to soothe Sagan's delicate ego and the matter was dropped.

So Sagan's dignity has been restored. Of course, I have a big pet tree in my back yard. I call it Dr. Carl. But really, it's a nice tree. My dog's favorite.

Most of us have gone to funerals, signed the book at the funeral home, somberly offered our condolences to the family members, sat quietly in the church, and driven grimly to the cemetery.

One's behavior is expected to be restrained, dignified, and respectful of the dead and the grieving.

So what's with Newt Gingrich, or "Newtie," as his mom always calls him?

Here is a former college teacher, a pudgy giant among Republicans, a possible future presidential candidate. And he doesn't even know how to behave himself.

Newtie has complained that when he flew on Air Force One to and from Israel for the funeral of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, he had to sit in the back of the plane while President Clinton sat way up in the front and ignored him.

He says that was really rude of Clinton. What the president should have done, Newtie says, is use the long flight as an opportunity to sit down with him and Sen. Robert Dole and work out some kind of deal on the budget.

And Newtie now admits that Clinton's snub is one of the reasons why the Republicans have been playing such a mean game of hardball, causing the federal government to be partially shut down and all of that.

What kind of behavior is that? They were going to a funeral, for gosh sakes.

How would you feel if you walked into Parlor A and were about to pay your final respects to the guy in the box when suddenly Newtie popped out from behind the flowers and said: "Hey, let's cut a deal, huh?"

Or if you were getting in a limo to go to the cemetery and Newtie muscled his way into the back seat and said: "C'mon, let's get down to the nitty gritty and talk turkey."

And it wasn't even Newtie's airplane. He was merely a guest on the flight, and if President Clinton had really wanted to be rude, he could have told the Secret Service agents: "Toss him off."

While on the ground, of course. Tossing him while over the Atlantic might have cost Clinton two points in the approval polls.

NATION IN BRIEF

■ FDA approves new AIDS treatment

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration approved the first new therapy for use as an initial AIDS treatment in nearly a decade Monday, authorizing the drug 3TC to be used with AZT.

When the two drugs are paired, 3TC appears to boost immune systems and lower the amount of the HIV virus in the blood for at least six months, says Glaxo Wellcome Inc. of Research Triangle Park, N.C., which makes both drugs.

The combination therapy appears to work best in patients who have never tried AZT alone, prompting an FDA advisory panel to recommend earlier this month that it be offered as an initial therapy. Monday's action makes the 3TC combination patients' first new choice for initial treatment since AZT hit the market in 1987.

■ Diseases linked to cell aging, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have linked cardiovascular disease to an age-related breakdown of cells, according to a study released Monday that provides insight into how people get sick as they age.

The study by the Geron Corp. suggests that identifying aging cells which have lost the ability to divide could predict the build-up of fatty plaque on a person's inner arterial walls, according to scientists.

A related study by the National Institute on Aging found evidence that a cell's decreasing ability to replicate itself is also linked to a weakened immune system in older patients.

"These studies just build on the discovery of a so-called molecular clock that controls how cells age," said Carole Melis, a spokeswoman for Geron, based in Menlo Park, Calif. "The theory is that we die not because we wear out, but because we're programmed to at a certain point."

■ Prosecution rests in Menendez retrial

LOS ANGELES — After 30 witnesses and 300 exhibits, the prosecution rested Monday in trying to prove to a jury that Erik and Lyle Menendez murdered their wealthy parents.

The last witness called in the prosecution's six-week case was Roger McCarthy, an expert who showed a computer-recreation of the Aug. 20, 1989 slayings of Jose and Kitty Menendez in their TV room.

Defense attorney Leslie Abramson, representing Erik, spent the past three days cross-examining McCarthy. She accused the prosecution of taking "artistic license" in creating inaccurate diagrams.

Prosecutors have tried to prove to jurors that the brothers, who have admitted to the killings, planned the killings to inherit the family fortune.

Balkan talks extend into 2nd all-night session

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Balkan negotiators headed into a second all-night session Monday in a desperate effort to settle Europe's bloodiest conflict since World War II. Prospects for an agreement remained uncertain.

"It's really still 50-50," a U.S. official said in declaring a news "lid" shortly after 9 p.m. CST, ruling out further announcements at least until after dawn.

Some Balkan leaders suggested a new round of talks may be needed to resolve the contentious issue of how to divide Bosnia into ethnic republics.

As the talks teetered on a knife's edge beyond a U.S.-imposed deadline, President Clinton intervened from Washington with a last-ditch telephone call to Croatia's President Franjo Tudjman.

Senior members of both the Bosnian and the Serbian delegations confirmed that the talks had run into trouble over territorial issues but stressed that negotiations were continuing into the night.

"I think the people here are determined to continue these negotiations," State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said Monday night. "I think they have a legitimate shot at succeeding."

From the Serb delegation, meanwhile, came late word the negotiations were on the upswing after a gloomy morning and afternoon. It was anyone's guess what the outcome would be.

And from the Croatian delegation later came word than only 1 percent of Bosnian territory was in dispute.

In New York, a U.S. diplomat said the U.N. Security Council was prepared to convene hours after any agreement was initialed to consider suspending the U.N. economic embargo against Serbia.

"We are in extra innings," said a senior U.S. official as Secretary of State Warren Christopher rejoined the talks Monday morning with only two hours' sleep. "Maybe at the end of the day we'll take stock of where we are. We'll take it one step at a time, hour by hour."

Christopher met several times with all three Balkan leaders. "We're still talking, and that's a positive sign," another U.S. official said late Monday afternoon.

Workers began loading baggage onto a Yugoslav airliner after they were checked by bomb-sniffing dogs. The second official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Christopher and all three Balkan presidents were leaving Monday night — agreement or not.

Clinton, however, called Tudjman to urge him to help resolve territorial problems and he received "an encouraging reply," said a senior Clinton administration official, speaking by telephone form Washington.

The Serbs and Muslims Sunday night virtually settled their territorial differences, but Croatia balked at going along, the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Another administration official said a comprehensive pact looked less likely as the day wore on. The parties may put in writing "the progress to date, which has been significant" but which falls short of a full agreement, the official said.

"A lot of progress has been made: just closing it is difficult," the official said.

Last-ditch efforts focused on a territorial dispute and the extent of a U.S. commitment to build up Bosnia's postwar army.

A Balkan delegate said neither the Bosnians nor the Serbs were willing to compromise on control of the Posavina corridor in northern Bosnia. The Serbs, who control the 30-mile-long passage between their eastern and western holdings, are seeking to widen it. But the Bosnians want their territory to cut through the strip of land in order to give them access to the Sava River on the Croatian border.

The Clinton administration has promised to help build up Bosnia's army with equipment and training, but Bosnia is seeking an iron-clad guarantee. Without one, the Balkan official said, the talks would fail.

A comprehensive agreement, resolving territorial and other major differences among rival ethnic factions, remained the goal, said the senior official who briefed reporters earlier, also on condition of anonymity.

Judge strikes down portions of Proposition 187 as unconstitutional

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge Monday struck down portions of voter-approved Proposition 187, saying elements of the California law denying public services to undocumented immigrants are unconstitutional.

"The state is powerless to enact its own scheme to regulate immigration or to devise immigration regulations which run parallel to or purport to supplement the federal immigration law," U.S. District Judge Mariana Pfaelzer wrote in the 71-page ruling.

In November 1994, 59 percent of California voters approved the measure to deny public education, social services and non-emergency health care to illegal immigrants. Supporters of the measure argued that illegal immigrants cost the state billions of dollars in services annually.

Immigrant rights advocates sued and Pfaelzer issued a preliminary injunction in December that barred enforcement of most of the provisions pending trial. A trial date has not yet been set.

Pfaelzer was ruling on a motion for summary judgment by the plaintiffs, including the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund and the American Civil Liberties Union.

In their motion, the plaintiffs argued that Prop 187 was an illegal attempt by the state to regulate immigration, an area regulated exclusively by the federal government.

In granting the motion, Pfaelzer said the state cannot deny federally funded services, though it can refuse to spend its own money on undocumented immigrants.

The only health and welfare programs that are paid for solely by the state, and are available to illegal immigrants, are prenatal care and longterm care for the elderly.

In addition, the judge struck down as unconstitutional requirements that compel teachers, health-care workers and social workers to report information about applicants' immigration status.

She said undocumented immigrants can't be questioned about their immigration status when applying to attend public schools or receive health and welfare benefits.

"The California voters' overwhelming approval of Proposition 187 reflects their justifiable frustration with the federal government's inability to enforce the immigration laws effectively," Pfaelzer wrote.

Authorities blame gruesome murders on woman's desire to have a baby

ADDISON, Ill. (AP) — Jacqueline Williams told friends she was going to have a baby. Authorities say she accomplished that by concocting a plot with her boyfriend and another man to shoot and stab a pregnant woman.

According to police, they killed the former girlfriend of one of the men and stabbed to death her 10-year-old daughter, then sliced open the dead woman's abdomen with scissors and plucked out a healthy boy.

They abducted the infant, who was due to be born Monday, and the slain woman's 8-year-old son, then slashed the older boy's throat and dumped his body in an alley.

Hours later, Williams' boyfriend told a relative that she had given birth to a son.

"This is unimaginable," said Joe Birkett, chief of criminal prosecution for the DuPage County state's attorney. "You could not give a horror writer a better script. This puts 'Natural Born Killers' to shame in terms of violence."

A judge Monday ordered the three held without bond on charges of murder and aggravated kidnapping. They could face the death penalty if convicted.

"I'd just like to know why I'm being charged," a disheveled Williams, 28, said as she appeared in court. Her boyfriend, Fedell Caffey, 22, and Levern Ward, 24, of Wheaton, also were held in the DuPage County Jail.

They are accused of fatally stabbing Deborah Evans, 28, and killing her daughter, Samantha, 10, and son Joshua, 8. Another son, 17-month-old Jordan, was found unharmed early Friday in the bloody apartment; authorities say Ward is his father.

The baby, named Elijah as his mother had intended, was said to be doing well at a hospital.

Birkett described the motive for the killings: "They hatched a plot to take this baby."

After Evans invited the three into her suburban apartment Thursday night, authorities say, Caffey shot her, then joined Ward in stabbing her before the two men went to a bedroom and fatally stabbed Samantha.

Then Caffey cut open Evans' body, and Williams extracted and resuscitated the baby; relatives said she has some training in nursing.

It's unclear how much 8-year-old Joshua saw, but Birkett said, "With what this kid saw, you could call it torture."

Caffey's cousin, Terrence Forest, said Caffey called him at 3 a.m. Friday "and said he just had a son." Prosecutors said Williams, the mother of three children, had been pretending she was pregnant so she could claim the newborn as her own.

'Bid the Basin' raises $22,000

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Permian Basin residents came through in fine style during Saturday's Bid the Basin event to benefit United Way of Midland, raising about $22,000 for the charity.

That brings the overall total raised to about $2,737,000, although all of the proceeds have not yet been received, United Way officials said.

While topping last year's total receipts of $2,733,000 — this year's total fell short of the ambitious goal of $3,200,000.

Last year's receipts just made that campaign's goal of $2,700,000, and this year's collections topped that, said Katy Morrow of United Way of Midland.

United Way Campaign Chairman Bob Irelan expressed gratitude for the hard work in raising funds for 1996 United Way operations.

"The $3 million goal was above where we needed to be ... to move toward program development," Irelan said in a Friday campaign dinner. "Thanks to you we exceeded last year's mark."

"It was a heroic goal and one I'm sure next year's chairman, Linda Basham, can meet," Irelan said.

The campaign is considered a success because of large setbacks which were overcome.

Three large gifts totaling $120,000 which were given last year were non-renewable starting this year's campaign off 4.4 percent in the hole, a United Way spokeswoman said.

Additionally, the United Way's office at 1209 W. Wall St. burned on Aug. 28, setting the agency back by almost three weeks of campaign efforts.

Bid the Basin, however, was a success, bringing in about $22,000 in bids for items donated by area retail merchants. The most expensive gift donated was an $11,500 custom van from Jack Sherman Chevrolet.

This year's donations will fund for another year the 16 human-services agencies served by United Way.

The United Way serves the needs of 35,000 Midlanders each year through the 16 local agencies.

Midland agencies served by the United Way include the American Red Cross, Salvation Army,

Juvenile crime

AUSTIN — More of the state's juveniles are being incarcerated and receiving longer sentences in correctional facilities, according to the Texas Youth Commission.

The commission on Monday reported a 6 percent increase in the number of incarcerated youths from fiscal year 1994 to fiscal year 1995 (2,005 to 2,123).

The number of youth committed for violent offenses increased by 4 percent, from 758 to 792.

Youth Commission Executive Director Steve Robinson said efforts by Gov. George W. Bush and the 1995 Legislature to toughen penalties against juvenile offenders and provide more space to house them will make a difference.

Today's Agenda

Photographer enjoys results of artistic work

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Mickey Gutierrez just looks like a photographer.

The dark 23-year-old exudes all the characteristics of an artist.

Except for one; his temperament.

Gutierrez has an easy smile and is wonderful with children. He uses his artistic talents to help families create treasures through family portraits.

For the last 19 months Gutierrez has been a photographer with the Olan Mills studio in Midland.

"My brother taught me all I know about photography when he was doing glamour portraits," Gutierrez said.

Gutierrez was a hairdresser, but quit doing that full-time because of the "stereotypes" associated with it, he said.

He has started to enjoy the photography more, especially since there are a lot of similarities in the two fields.

Both require an eye for what will look good.

Gutierrez said one of the things he likes best about photography is the fact that he can see how his work has ended up.

"Looking at the results is where I get my satisfaction from my hard work. When I look at them and they are great, that is rewarding," Gutierrez said.

Working in the portrait-studio setting, Gutierrez sees children daily.

"I never was good with kids before, but after about four months I got better," he said.

"I like them a lot and they like me," he added.

He said his work has helped him with children and he enjoys being around them more than he ever has before.

"Now, I'll be at the store and I'll see a child and think 'I'd like to photo-

NationsBank is first contributor toward non-profit exposition center

■ Officials anticipate beginning construction of the facility by spring of 1996.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

NationsBank Midland became the first contributor to the non-profit West Texas Exposition Center Monday, contributing $10,000 towards the project.

"There's no question in my mind that once this is built, it will have tremendous use," said Larry Holden, NationsBank president.

Dr. Bobby Cobb, a Midland veterinarian and president of the non-profit West Texas Exposition Center Inc., said that he has received enthusiastic support from a large majority of the people he has contacted about the project, citing both the center's economic benefit and the benefit to the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center, which would have use of the center in bad weather.

The non-profit organization hopes to raise $2.5 to $3 million for the center, and is looking at a 135-acre location on the north access road of Interstate 20 between Midland and Odessa. The facility itself would take up 55 to 75 acres.

Cobb said that, based on response, "I'm optimistic we can have everything in order and begin construction in the spring of 1996."

Karl Reiter, assistant vice president at NationsBank, said the bank is supporting the center "because of its strong economic potential. Agriculture is a strong part of our environment here and people underestimate the amount of western equine sports that go on in this community."

Reiter added that he felt it was important for NationsBank to be a key leader in this project due to its presence in the community, and that bringing the project to life would require the involvement of many Midlanders as well as the bank.

Cobb said the project has been in the preliminary stages for close to a year, "but as far as dreaming about it and knowing Midland needed a facility like

State's federal offices are open for business again

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press

With an "Open For Business" shingle again swinging figuratively over federal offices, Texans employed at military bases, national parks, Internal Revenue Service offices and other federal installations returned to duty Monday.

"I'm excited to be back. I honestly missed being at work," federal worker Margaret Roberts said outside Dallas' Earle Cabell Federal Building.

The six-day shutdown, which sent tens of thousands of the state's 179,000 federal civilian employees home on forced leave, triggered a shock wave that rippled far beyond the federal work force.

Veterans and their survivors worried that their monthly benefits checks wouldn't be issued on time. Prospective home-buyers seeking federal mortgages were thrown into limbo. Tourists found the gates closed at more than a dozen national parks and reserves. Applicants for Social Security and other federal benefits couldn't find anyone to take their claims. Travelers in need of last-minute passports abruptly saw their travel plans crumble.

Despite the days of inactivity, the federal apparatus cranked back into gear, seemingly without a hitch in some places.

At the passport office in Houston, one of 14 in the nation where applicants can pick up their passport in person, many like Doug Shoaf came early to avoid crowds.

But there was very little waiting.

"I heard it was going to be horrible," said Shoaf. "But my number has come up pretty quick."

There were sighs of relief at Big Bend National Park, where 80 of the park's 100 staffers were furloughed. "The park is open to visitors — and we are very happy about that," said park spokeswoman Valerie Naylor, noting that Thanksgiving week is the second-busiest season for visitors.

It was unclear whether prospective campers and backpackers had changed their plans, fearful that the shutdown would drag on into a second week, Ms. Naylor said.

One thing clear from the budget truce between congressional Republicans and the White House is that the nearly 3.6 million beneficiaries nationwide of veterans disability payments, pensions and survivors benefits will get their checks on time next month.

Candidates attempt to put positive spin on everything

More rambling thoughts ...

— One of my favorite parts of politics is listening to candidates attempt to put a "positive spin" on every action that takes place anywhere in the world, be it the budget standoff in Washington, the Florida presidential straw poll or the Middle East peace process. If you are running for president, every single development "is an absolute victory" for your candidacy.

— I understand the economics of it all, but it is still going to be difficult for me to accept the fact there will be no more Southwest Conference after this year, especially during the football season.

— Speaking of such, it just doesn't seem right that this year's Cotton Bowl will feature, get this, Colorado and Oregon.

— Where are Darrell Royal, James Street and Earl Campbell when you need them?

— Overheard: "I'm an old fool who borrowed the dreams of a young fool."

— It is somewhat naive, of course, but most of us would like to think there was a time in this country's past when the only thing doctors truly cared about was healing the sick, all lawyers really wanted was justice, and every law enforcement officer was so honest he became a true role model for all of the neighborhood kids.

— Like I say, it is a naive concept.

— One of the greatest books of all time that most people never heard of: "Mother Night" by Kurt Vonnegut. I'm serious. Check it out.

Many of the photographs he takes have a theme involved, such as a special occasion or holiday.

In one photo, he took a unique spin on the old photo idea of children in a wash basin and personalized the powder bottle with the child's name. Other times the child alone is enough to evoke emotion.

He said about one-half of his photo ideas are borrowed and the other half are original.

A big plus for Gutierrez is that his supervisor not only allows him creative freedom, but allows him to be himself.

He doesn't have to wear a tie or keep his hair short, which makes him more relaxed.

"At work I'm family-oriented and around kids a lot and I'm more of a rebel away from work," he said.

Co-worker Carla Cook has seen Gutierrez in both situations.

At work, she said, Gutierrez is very responsible and dependable and "really good with babies, especially for a guy his age."

"Away from work he is quiet. Brooding artist is a good description, but he loosens up once he's around people," she said.

His boss, Lillian Smith, said Gutierrez was "born to take pictures."

"He is very talented and good with customers. Plus, he has been an award winner for family photos the past two years," Ms. Smith added.

Gutierrez won first place in the print exhibit for Olan Mills studios across Texas for the past two years.

OPEN: 2,100 NASA employees return to work

(From 1B)

Nearly 250,000 Texans share in the $1.4 billion in benefits mailed out nationally at the first of each month by the Department of Veterans Affairs. Department officials had said they wouldn't be able to get the checks out on time unless the budget stalemate was resolved by today.

At the Johnson Space Center near Houston, where 2,100 of the center's nearly 3,000 civil servants were furloughed, workers were eager to get back to business.

"We'll be behind some," said Regan Edmiston, a returning NASA employee. "But we can catch up on that. It won't take us long to recover from that."

Despite the fact that active-duty military personnel were deemed essential, military bases also took big hits when civilian workers were furloughed.

Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio saw an estimated 3,400 of its 11,400 civilian employees furloughed. Another 1,800 civilians at Fort Hood near Killeen also were deemed "nonessential."

Under the deal worked out Sunday by the White House and congressional Republicans, furloughed workers will receive back pay.

Police evacuate Capitol building

AUSTIN (AP) — Capitol police evacuated the building Monday afternoon after Austin police were told a bomb was planted there, a Department of Public Safety spokeswoman said.

"There was a bomb threat at the Capitol at about 5 p.m. and so naturally they have blocked off the Capitol and evacuated it," Laureen Chernow said.

About 20 officers from the DPS capitol police and Commission on Fire Protection searched the building and the Capitol extension, but found no bomb, devise or suspicious person, she said.

The search had ended as of 8:15 p.m., but the Capitol was not reopened, she said. It usually remains open until 10 p.m.

Authorities take offensive against Mexican gangs

EL PASO (AP) — Federal and municipal authorities have joined forces to take the offensive against Mexican gangs that have been slipping across the Rio Grande to assault and rob U.S. citizens.

The combined efforts, which include sting operations using decoys, yielded only one arrest during a weekend rife with criminal activity. But authorities said Monday their assault will continue.

"We need to stop this," El Paso Police Chief Russ Leach said. "We can't have this."

The bandits are thought to be associated with gangs from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, across the border from El Paso, that have been looting trains in nearby Sunland Park, N.M.

More recently, they have begun waylaying and assaulting motorists and pedestrians along Paisano Drive, a well-traveled El Paso road that parallels the Rio Grande.

Border Patrol agents have long complained of attacks in the area, which is just across the river from a large Mexican neighborhood. But they now are reporting increasingly violent incidents, including attempts by well-armed bandits to stop cars by shooting out tires or erecting roadblocks.

Authorities are responding on several fronts, including construction of a 7-foot-tall, chain-link fence along the mile-long stretch where most of the attacks have occurred. They also are forming partnerships with Mexican authorities.

As an example of the problems, officials showed videotapes at a news conference of two assaults and a successful sting, recorded during the weekend by a Border Patrol night-vision camera.

In one segment, three men waded across the Rio Grande early Saturday morning and attacked a pedestrian, who was struck at least once with a rock and then beaten.

On the tape, the men are shown dragging their victim toward the river, presumably in an attempt to take him into Mexico. They also strip him of his pants before fleeing an approaching Border Patrol vehicle.

Authorities said the victim, who was not identified, was treated at a hospital and released.

The other attack occurred on the Mexican side of the river, where several bandits pounced on a man, stripped him to his underwear and kicked him before fleeing.

"They clearly have no respect for human life," said Border Patrol Chief Silvestre Reyes. "They're a very violence-prone gang."

A third videotape illustrated the authorities' reaction. The camera focused on an undercover officer posing as a motorist whose vehicle has stalled on Paisano Drive.

As the officer is approached by two men who had just recently crossed the river, he draws his weapon and several other officers spill out the vehicle.

They tackle one of the men and the camera follows as at least 10 other suspected bandits who were hiding in the brush on the riverbank begin fleeing across the Rio Grande.

Reyes said only one person was arrested, a 17-year-old Mexican who was not identified. The juvenile was still in custody Monday and was being questioned regarding gang activity. He will eventually be deported, officials said.

Jury hands down 75-count indictment for doctor accused of mail fraud, illegal drug sales

HOUSTON (AP) — A doctor's unconventional treatment of cancer patients landed him a 75-count indictment Monday, charging both him and his clinic with mail fraud, selling an unapproved drug across state lines and ignoring previous court orders.

The indictment against Dr. Stanislaw Burzynski and his Burzynski Research Institute revolves around his patented "antineoplastons" treatment, which some patients claim has saved their lives.

"Today's announcement ... demonstrates a strong commitment by the agents who appear here today to the investigation and prosecution of health care fraud and health care-related offenses," said U.S. Attorney Gaynelle Griffin-Jones. "Dr. Burzynski's conduct in violating the law has continued over too long a period of time and affected thousands of persons across the nation."

The treatment involves synthetic drugs based on the same properties found in a group of substances in the body called antineoplastons. Burzynski claims the substances are produced in people as part of a biochemical defense system that inhibits cancer cell growth.

Since he set up shop in Houston in 1983, he's been targeted for state and Federal Drug Administration investigations. Three previous grand juries have refused to indict him.

Burzynski's office referred calls for comment to his attorney and a spokesman.

Burzynski has claimed he has the right to produce the treatment and sell it in Texas. Last February, a state judge sided with him.

The doctor's attorney denied Monday that Burzynski has sold the treatment outside of Texas and insisted he has FDA approval to experiment with the drug in clinical trials.

"The FDA does not regulate the practice of medicine," said Richard Jaffe, Burzynski's attorney. "Why are they (FDA) doing this?"

The FDA concedes Burzynski has the right to use the drug in trials, but claim he has breached that contract by selling the drug treatment outside of Texas. The FDA also claims that Burzynski had treated only six patients in clinical trials as of April 1995.

"I think the indictment speaks for itself," said Jim O'Hara, an FDA spokesman.

Jaffe responded that the doctor is not obligated to enroll every patient in a clinical trial. In other words, Jaffe said, Burzynski legally can treat patients with an unapproved drug as long as some clinical trials are being done.

Federal prosecutors charge in the indictment that Burzynski willfully disobeyed federal court orders handed down in 1983 and 1984. The orders, Ms. Griffin-Jones said, barred the doctor and his institute from introducing or delivering antineoplastons into interstate commerce without FDA approval.

The mail fraud charges involve filing false information about treatment to 15 health insurers for reimbursement.

In past interviews with The Associated Press, Burzynski has stressed that all patients understand that the treatment is experimental.

However, Burzynski has never revealed an exact success rate for his treatment.

Town's after-flood cleanup continues

RAYMONDVILLE (AP) — Residents in this low-lying town north of Harlingen continued to clean up Monday after flooding caused by heavy rains, and some blamed city officials for the damage.

"They're not doing anything to help us," said resident Aurora Cavazos. "This is not the first time this has happened."

Ms. Cavazos said water rises around her house every time it rains and blamed city officials for not cleaning out the drains in her neighborhood.

But Police Chief Rene Martin said low ground level, elevated fields close to the city and heavy rains caused the problems. Water from heavy rains drain off from the agricultural land and into the city, he said.

About 800 homes were damaged by the flooding, which began Friday morning during heavy rains, said Jackie Kyger of the U.S. Coast Guard in Port Mansfield. Seventy-two residents evacuated their homes.

The sun broke through the clouds Sunday as many residents stepped out to survey the damage. Residents waded down streets with water up past their knees. Some paddled boats while children splashed each other and dived under the water.

Health officials warned parents to keep their children from playing in the water, which is filled with bacteria and dangerous debris.

"People really need to help themselves," said Abigail Gonzalez of the Red Cross. "If they have water in their homes they need to clean it out, and they should keep children out of the water."

Just 4 Kidz: It's like having your own personal shopper

How many times have you asked a clothing store clerk for the location of the girls' party dresses and heard, "I think they're on aisle five...or is it aisle twelve...if we have any left." You discover there aren't any either place, and the sales clerk has mysteriously disappeared.

At Just 4 Kidz, it's just the opposite. You and your child will get special attention from the moment you walk in the door. Owner Dorothy Davis said, "We try to treat every child as someone special."

Browse as long as you wish. When you're ready for help, someone will be at your service.

That means they'll personally help you find just the right look for your child. There's no three-item limit in these dressing rooms. Kids can try on whatever clothes catch their fancy.

Look through the lively array of clothing from Eagle Eye, Monday's Child, Hartstrings, Kitestrings, Little Me, Uh Oh, Sahara Club, Maggie Breen and Frog Pond. Ms Davis said, "Kids are very particular about what they wear these days. They also grow out of clothes quickly. We want to carry clothes that let the kids feel good about themselves while letting Mom feel good about her clothing budget."

The 30 percent off sale on selected items now in progress will help Mom's budget even more. And this Friday and Saturday, the 24th and 25th, everything else in the store will be 20 percent off.

Mom can sit down and make those final choices in peace and quiet while the kids entertain themselves in the play area.

Just 4 Kidz has a shower registry to help with those kids that are still on the way. They will set up an in-store display featuring the expecting mom's selections. Gift wrapping and delivery are free.

Have you seen the pewter initial blocks? They're becoming popular for bracelets and necklaces. There are also ceramic ones.

Just 4 Kidz has colorful hair bows by Loxy's Accessories, which are made here in town, as well as by Wee Ones.

Just 4 Kidz carries a wide selection of moderately priced clothes such as these, for girls up to age 14 and boys to age 7.

You'll also find an assortment of bedding, socks and sleepwear.

Monogramming is available for almost everything, with a two-to-three day turnaround.

Just 4 Kidz has clothing for girls from infants to 14 years, and boys up to seven years.

If you don't find what you want in the right size, ask. If possible, they will order it for you. That's part of the personal service at Just 4 Kidz.

Just 4 Kidz is located in the Imperial Shopping Center at Wadley and Midland Drive. They are open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. They accept all major credit cards. Their phone number is 694-1363.

Ken's Rent It Center furnishes solutions for meetings and gatherings

Parties, banquets and meetings, both formal and casual, flourish this time of year. Whether the gathering is large or small, somebody has to decide where to get tables, chairs and accessories, how many to get, and what size room will handle the group.

Every year, Ken's Rent It Center helps many people with solutions to these questions. Given the number expected to attend, they can estimate how many tables and chairs will be needed. Since they have hundreds of folding tables and thousands of folding chairs, they are not likely to hear a number they can't handle. They do recommend making reservations several weeks in advance for large orders.

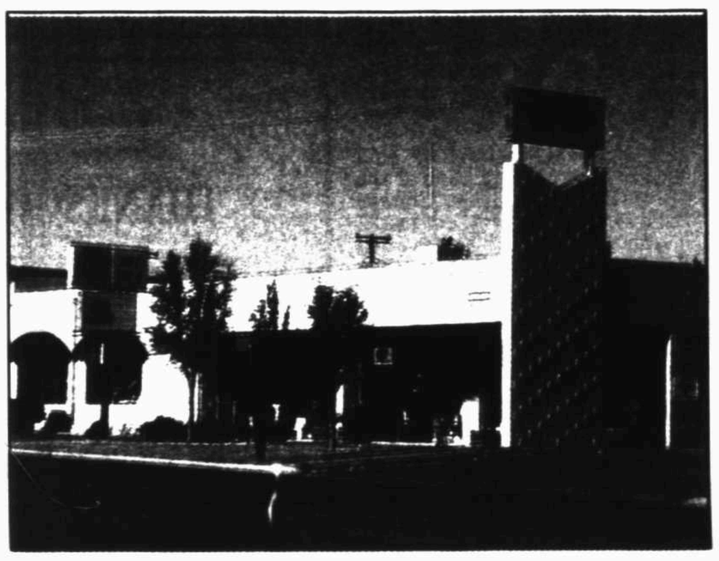

The count may be too high for the chosen facility, however. Ken's Rent It can provide information on how many people most facilities in town will accommodate.

Ken's has eight foot rectangular banquet tables and 60 inch round tables for dinner functions. Tablecloths also run the gamut from fine linen to plastic disposables.

Pick up and delivery is available on banquet items for a nominal fee.

Another part of the holidays involves visits from family and friends who may need special items. Ken's has rollaway beds, baby beds, high chairs, strollers and car seats. They rent these items by the day or by the week.

Ken's Rent It Center is located at 2900 West Wall. The company rents not only tables, chairs, dishes and servers, but a wide variety of home and garden items. Their phone number is 694-2561.

Ken's Rent It Center is located at 2900 West Wall. They rent a wide selection of items for parties and weddings.

Scientist revolutionizes public's prehistoric perception of dinosaurs, many say

By David L. Chandler
N.Y. Times News Service

With his controversial theories, his unconventional style and his sometimes confrontational manner, Bakker is about as welcome among some paleontologists as a raptor in the kitchen.

BOSTON — Robert T. Bakker is building to the climax of his talk before a rapt crowd of children and adults at a Chestnut Hill bookstore. Suddenly, he whips out a knife-sharp claw, as long as his hand, brandishes it in the air, then swipes playfully with it toward a kid in the front row. Everyone gasps.

The claw is a replica cast from the talon of one of the fiercest creatures of all Earth's history, the 20-foot Utahraptor — the real-life counterpart of the terrifying veloci-raptors in the final scene of Steven Spielberg's "Jurassic Park."

Bakker identifies with Utahraptor and its kin — so much so that he recently wrote a novel that is told from the raptor's point of view. He thinks predatory dinosaurs have been maligned too long and need a more sympathetic public image.

There is probably no one better equipped to pull that off.

Bakker is considered by many paleontologists to be one of the most brilliant minds in the field, and he has probably done more than any other scientist to increase public awareness of dinosaurs and revolutionize the image of the creatures and those who study them. He was the only real scientist mentioned by name in "Jurassic Park," was the star of the videogame based on the movie and has appeared on countless television programs.

With his controversial theories, his unconventional style and his sometimes confrontational manner, Bakker is about as welcome among some paleontologists as a raptor in the kitchen. But others credit him with revitalizing a field that had been almost moribund.

The breadth of his appeal can be measured in part by the range of people who are fascinated by his ideas. House Speaker Newt Gingrich, for example, recently called Bakker, gushing effusively about his new book as well as his first one, "The Dinosaur Heresies." And at a recent book-signing, Joe Perry (lead guitarist of Aerosmith) and Scott Richard Weiland (lead singer of the Stone Temple Pilots), patiently stood in line for more than a half-hour to get Bakker's autograph. (In the spellbound crowd of dinosaur fans who had listened to Bakker's talk and watched him brandish the Utahraptor claw, noboby even noticed the rock stars).

Among other paleontologists, opinions are more mixed.

"I think he's one of the brightest paleontologists alive," said Steven Stanley, professor of paleobiology at the Johns Hopkins University. "He has transformed people's view of dinosaurs."

Stanley was a graduate student at Yale while Bakker was doing his undergraduate studies there. "He was a brilliant guy," he said. "He just stood out." Even as an undergraduate, Bakker was beginning to work on the revolutionary theory that was to cement his reputation: that, contrary to the conventional view of dinosaurs as sluggish, stupid and cold-blooded, they were actually fast-moving, alert, smart, warm-blooded and nurturing.

That view has now taken hold, and museum exhibits around the country have been rebuilt to reflect the new understanding — which has been developed and expanded by a number of researchers, including Jack Horner, whose research has revealed the social behavior and parenting style of some dinosaurs.

But, Stanley added, Bakker "can put people off. He is quite brash — he will meet someone who is a specialist in some area, and start to tell them all about that area."

In addition, Stanley said, "people are threatened by someone like Bakker, who can be overwhelming with his intelligence and can be assertive and daring. People will jump on one mistake, not looking at the positive things he's done."

Some in the field are put off by Bakker's refusal to follow the expected course. Instead of holding an academic appointment, he has preferred museum curatorships that allow him to spend more time in the field digging up new fossils. And he seldom publishes his work in peer-reviewed journals, instead laying out ideas in books or popular articles.

"I think he started out with a lot of promise, and he hasn't realized it," said Nicholas Hotton, a research paleontologist emeritus with the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. "I like Bob, but he's not as big a wheel as he thinks he is."

But few dispute Bakker's originality and insight. Even Hotton agreed that "he's very stimulating. Even when he comes up with some half-baked ideas, he gets people thinking and doing work themselves. A lot of work he's generated is better than the work he's done himself."

One early controversy came close to derailing Bakker's career almost before it began. In 1975, while he was a graduate student at Harvard, he published an article in Scientific American in which he mentioned the view that dinosaurs are the direct ancestors of today's birds — now widely-accepted. Although Bakker clearly credited Yale paleontologist John Ostrom for the idea, Ostrom was upset because he had not yet published his own detailed paper on the theory.

In a trade newsletter, two Harvard paleontologists virtually accused Bakker of stealing the idea. Stephen Jay Gould, famed author and paleontologist and one of Bakker's Harvard faculty advisers at the time, rose to his student's defense, speaking out on his behalf at a Harvard meeting on the charges. Afterward, the newsletter published a full retraction and apology.

Plane crashes into apartment building, kills 3

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — A light plane trying to land in fog slammed into an apartment building as people were waking for work Monday, killing the two people in the aircraft and a woman in her bed.

Fire swept through the four-unit building, forcing eight to 10 people into the streets, some in towels and blankets. One firefighter was injured.

"My mom didn't make it," said Jeremy Ernst, 20, standing on the sidewalk with his father, Ron, as emergency crews worked inside. Sharan Ernst was still asleep when the plane hit about 6:35 a.m., they said.

Ed Borgelt, whose apartment is next to the Ernsts, was getting out of the shower when he felt the building shake.

"We used to just sit there and watch the planes go by," he said. Residents said the planes flew so low you could read their tail numbers.

"We figured it could happen ... but we never really thought it would happen to us," Borgelt said.

Flames gutted the upper floor of the building, which had two living floors above garage spaces.

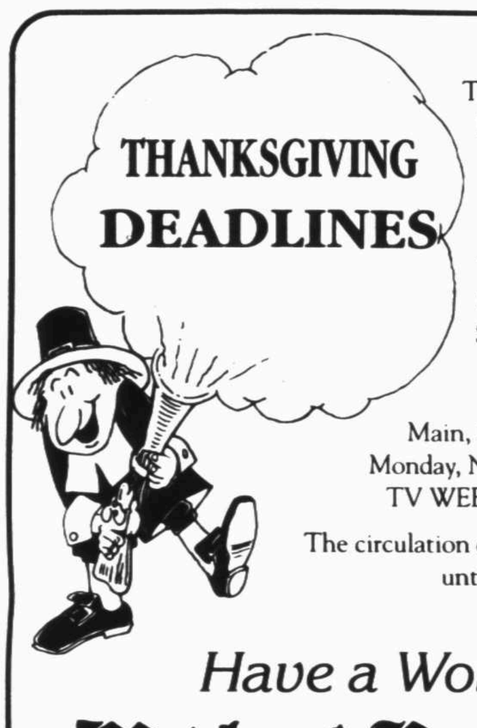

The airport tower is closed from 9 p.m. to 7 a.m., but after-hours landings are legal and there are usually about a half-dozen every night, airport director Roland Elder said.

Patchy fog Monday cut visibility to less than 100 yards in places.

Elder said the pilot may have been trying to land using instruments.

DEAR ABBY

Wife rebels against repetition of being maid during holiday get-togethers

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband told me yesterday that last Thanksgiving was the best ever! He had a great time and thinks the whole extended family should get together more often than just at holiday time.

Van Buren

Of course he does! He played cards and football, went golfing, watched TV, read the paper and drank beer with the other men in the family.

I, on the other hand, cooked, cleaned, planned, cooked some more, and did hundreds of dishes with the women in the family. Not one male offered to help with anything. None of the women said anything openly, but privately I think we've all had it.

I am tired of being the maid, and I'm dreading the family holiday gatherings this year. Are we the only women in the country who go through this? I'm sure we are not alone in feeling this way. (My husband thinks we are.) — MAID NO MORE

DEAR MAID NO MORE: I'm sure you have plenty of company. However, not all men have been raised to be sensitive to the fact they are needed or wanted in holiday preparation or its aftermath. Don't blame people of either sex for not helping out if they haven't been asked. An excellent method of galvanizing someone to action is to say, "Honey, I'm overwhelmed. Would you please come and help me with (blank), or would you rather (blank)?"

DEAR ABBY: May I comment on the letter from the woman who wrote to say that she and her husband had moved, voluntarily, about 60 times in their 24-year marriage? According to my calculations, that means they got a new apartment on the average of every five months.

As incredible as this must seem to someone born and bred in Iowa, where people sometimes stay on one farm for three or four generations, moving is more common among city-dwellers than one would imagine. Here are the advantages:

1. No housecleaning — after five months, when the rug needs vacuuming and the toilet needs scrubbing, just move to a fresh, clean apartment.
2. Less time to accumulate junk, and nonessentials get discarded.
3. Bill collectors tire of tracking you down and give up.
4. Junk mail doesn't fill your mailbox; you're long gone before they get your new address.
5. You need never tell the truth about anything — by the time people have seen through your lies, you're outta there!

It takes a certain type of spouse to live this way. To be safe from marrying one of these charming "rolling stones" and being taken for a ride yourself, look carefully before you marry. Does he or she look like a person who can be packed and out the door in an hour? Well, then — use your head and ask why. — HERE TO STAY IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR HERE TO STAY: Your letter is a hoot — and you can include me among the "settled." However, in all fairness, those who said they loved to move did not indicate any ulterior motives. They just enjoyed the challenge, or the change of scenery.

DEAR READERS: I've discovered a marvelous book for children suffering from chronic or life-threatening illness.

"The Jester Has Lost His Jingle" was written by David Saltzman — an extraordinary 22-year-old Yale graduate who died of Hodgkin's disease. David's family has published his full-color, hardcover, 64-page volume (with an afterword by Maurice Sendak), which conveys David's love for life and laughter.

For Dear Abby readers, 50 percent of the $20 price will go to Parents Against Cancer (a not-for-profit organization) so "The Jester" can be given to chronically ill children at no cost to them.

To order, send check or money order (no cash, please — U.S. funds only) payable to: The David Saltzman Fund/Parents Against Cancer, c/o The Jester Co. Inc. (Dept. A), P.O. Box 817, Palos Verdes, Calif. 90274. For more information, call 1-800-9-JESTER.

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Hemlines continue to shorten

By Erma Bombeck

You would have to be out of it not to notice that the more mindless TV becomes, the shorter the dresses.

Bombeck

Hemlines have gone from ankle to mid-calf to the knees to slip-a-glycerine-tablet-under-my-tongue-she's-crossing-her-legs. Few women are endowed with two dangling appendages they can call attention to. Just because legs are thin does not mean they are shapely.

Take Murphy Brown and Corky Sherwood (whom I love). They are in the right profession — one where their knees are hidden under a news desk on TV. When they walk across the floor, I am reminded of the Eiffel Tower in Paris.

I think everyone remembers where he was and what he was doing the day Kathie Lee Gifford appeared not only in a skirt the size of an oven mitt, but sat on a stool and crossed her legs! I prayed she didn't drop her interview cards.

My philosophy of skirts has always been: Never wear anything so short it will leave visible wicker marks on the back of your thighs.

I know it's the current style, but before you buy a skirt that hangs two inches longer than your jacket, ask yourself these questions:

1. When does a skirt stop being a skirt and start to look like your underwear?
2. Bleacher seats, bus-stop benches and metal chairs are cold. Do you need a flu shot or do you plan on never sitting down?
3. Does your place of employment cater to women who wear short skirts and provide ramps in place of steps?
4. Do you have the physical strength to control a skirt that starts to curl from the bottom and won't stop?
5. Do your legs go straight all the way up or do they tend to go their own way at the knees?

A reader wrote me the other day and asked, "Whatever became of polyester pantsuits?" I can tell you what happened. Hard bodies that ran on treadmills to nowhere, climbed stairs to oblivion and had NordicTracks at the foot of their beds wanted the world to see what all their hard work produced.

For my generation, who were cautioned by their mothers to keep their knees together or they'd go blind, it takes a bit of getting used to.

Television has revealed every part of the human body there is to see. Where does it go from here? How about a plot or a story line?

Archaeological looting is rampant in U.S., officials say

N.Y. Times News Service

CANYONLANDS NATIONAL PARK, Utah — For nearly 20 years, Earl Shumway robbed graves and broke into long-sealed Indian homes, all the while boasting that the chances of his ever getting caught were one in a million.

To archaeologists of the American Southwest, accustomed to sifting through desert sand for fine distinctions, the very mention of Shumway's name prompts sweeping denunciation. To them he is the worst kind of burglar — someone who steals from people's heritage.

"He is a moki poacher," said Larry Davis, an archaeologist and chief ranger for Anasazi State Park, just west of the Canyonlands park, using a term with which the Hopi Indians describe someone who robs from the dead.

"He is the No.1 looter in the United States," said David Tarler, who tracks archaeological crimes for the National Park Service in Washington.

Today, Shumway, 38, sits in jail in Salt Lake City, awaiting sentencing for what the Justice Department calls perhaps the most extensive list of federal archaeological crimes ever committed by one person.

The man who says he learned how to loot from his father, who used helicopters and radio-carrying lookouts to dodge detection, faces up to 30 years in prison after being convicted on seven felony counts of stealing Anasazi artifacts.

But while the convictions have heartened the handful of people who patrol more than 50 million acres of public land rich in remnants from long-dead communities, the problem of archaeological looting, they say, has never been worse.

Last month, four men were indicted in this state on charges of plundering a site near the town of Moab that contained some of the oldest artifacts ever found in North America, dating from the Paleo-Indian period of 8,000 years ago.

"This was an incredible archaeological resource that was just devastated beyond belief," said Wayne Dance, an assistant U.S. attorney for Utah who is the leading prosecutor of these kinds of cases.

The problem for law enforcement is that the area is so big, the officers are so few, and the rewards of plundering are so rich. Among the red rock canyons, the sandstone walls and the forested mesas of the Southwest are remnants of life from a population that today could nearly fill a major city.

"All the reports indicate that the sites are getting hit hard," said Bart Fitzgerald, a special agent in Utah for the federal Bureau of Land Management. "It's never been worse."

Only four special agents patrol the 22 million acres of BLM land in Utah, and Congress, in cutting the federal budget, is considering elimination of even those positions. Further, a general anti-government attitude in the West has emboldened looters, say people whose job it is to track culture thieves.

According to David Madsen, Utah's state archaeologist, there may be up to five million archaeological sites in the Southwest — everything from day camps where young Indian boys once left behind broken knives to abandoned cliff-side apartments of the Anasazi.

Five hundred years before the arrival of Columbus, up to 100,000 people flourished here in the area known as Four Corners — far more than the area's current population. The Anasazi lived from the time of Christ until about 1250 in this part of the Southwest.

White golden

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Toronto outfielder Devon White, a former Midland Angel, and California Angels pitcher Mark Langston won their seventh Gold Glove awards Monday and Seattle outfielder Ken Griffey Jr. won his sixth straight.

Angels first baseman J.T. Snow was the only first-time winner among the AL selections.

Roberto Alomar, who played for Toronto last season and became a free agent, won his fifth consecutive Gold Glove and Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez won his fourth straight.

Two Cleveland Indians won for the third straight year: outfielder Kenny Lofton and shortstop Omar Vizquel.

New York Yankees third baseman Wade Boggs won for the second consecutive year.

The awards are voted on by major league managers and coaches and presented by Rawlings.

By winning the awards, Alomar, Boggs, Griffey, Vizquel and White earned contract bonuses of $50,000 each. Lofton and Rodriguez earned $25,000 apiece.

NL awards will be announced today.

Bowness fired

OTTAWA — The Ottawa Senators, losers of eight straight games, today fired coach Rick Bowness, the only coach they've ever had.

General manager Randy Sexton said there could be further changes if players don't respond.

"We needed to provide a spark or a lifting symbol to our team," Sexton said at a news conference. "We still have an opportunity to put the team back on track."

Bowness had been the Senators coach since the team's first season in 1992-93. He had a 39-178-18 record.

Assistant Alain Vigneault also was fired, while former New York Islanders goaltender Chico Resch was retained as an assistant.

The Senators are 6-13 overall. In their fourth season, the Senators have not compared well with other expansion teams which joined the league about the same time they did.

Team officials said they would hire a coach in time for the next game, against the Winnipeg Jets Wednesday.

Playoff pairings

Midland Christian's next Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools (TAPPS) playoff game, as the Mustangs (10-1) go for a fifth-straight Class 1A Six-man state title, will be at a familiar site.

The Mustangs return to Hawley, the site of last Friday's 58-8 win over Granbury Happy Hill Farm, for a 7:30 p.m. game against Waxahachie Cornerstone Christian (10-1) on Friday. Cornerstone defeated Quinlan Boles Home 88-41 in its first-round game.

Socorro Bulldogs have used up one playoff miracle

■ Midland Lee's second playoff opponent erased a 24-7 deficit in the fourth quarter to advance to the Class 5A Small School area playoff round.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

El Paso Socorro is a living playoff miracle.

El Paso miracles don't necessarily translate into victories against the mega-powers of District 4-5A, but the very fact that the Bulldogs will be playing Midland Lee at Memorial Stadium Friday night in a Class 5A Small School area playoff is miracle enough.

In an all-El Paso bi-district matchup with Coronado Friday, Socorro looked up at the clock with just eight minutes left in the game, trailing 24-7. The Bulldogs last looked at the clock with a 28-24 victory.

Socorro scored three times in the space of eight minutes. And they did it with a gimpy quarterback.

Socorro quarterback Nick Alvarez suffered a sprained left foot midway through the second quarter and was sent to the locker room before the half ended.

Alvarez came back to engineer three fourth quarter touchdowns that featured recovering two on-side kicks to maintain possessions for three scoring drives. Running back Tony Munoz scored two touchdowns on short runs and Raul Salas added the game winner with about one minute left in the game.

"I had to beg the coach to let me come back into the game," Alvarez said. "I thought we could still win it."

No one was more surprised with the victory than Socorro coach Jim Carson.

"There was a lot of doubt on that sideline, but you have to put that stuff behind you when you're in a situation like that," Carson said.

The three touchdown comeback quickly built confidence for the Bulldogs.

"We heard the crowd cheering after that first touchdown and I knew we were going to pull it out," defensive end Chris Mossman told the El Paso Times. "We don't back down to any challenge and Coronado put one in front of us."

Socorro started the season with a meager 2-2 record, but went undefeated in District 2-5A to win its first ever district title and make a rare playoff appearance. Socorro was in the state playoffs in 1991.

Alvarez has been the glue for the Bulldogs. He has hit on 31 of 84 passes for 582 yards and eight touchdowns and has six more touchdowns rushing this season.

Running back Munoz is on the verge of breaking the 1,000-yard barrier. He has 928 yards and nine touchdowns and needs 72 yards against Lee to accomplish that mark. Munoz had only 42 yards rushing against Coronado Friday.

Salas, who had 82 yards rushing Friday, is also a threat catching the ball. He has 10 catches for 85 yards. Wide receiver Larry Aguirre has 10 catches for 144 yards and three touchdowns. Aguirre caught a pass for a two-point conversion against Coronado.

Defensive tackle Omar Flores, a 258-pound junior, is one of the best defensive players while defensive ends Paul Carrillo, 180-pound senior; and Dale Petrosky, a 177-pound junior, are both active, slashing type of players.

Lee, 9-0-1 and No. 8 in the state, is still a heavy favorite over 9-2 Socorro, but if any lesson was learned from Socorro's showing against Coronado, it was not to sit on the ball when you think the score is safe. The Bulldogs bite you when you sleep.

Lady Chaps open loop play

■ Midland College's women face Western Texas, a team they lost to once last season.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

When the Midland College Lady Chaparrals say they are starting the Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball wars, they aren't kidding.

The battle ground scenario may be a cliche, but that's exactly what WJCAC play will be like this year as the Lady Chaps host Western Texas College tonight at 7:30 at Chaparral Center.

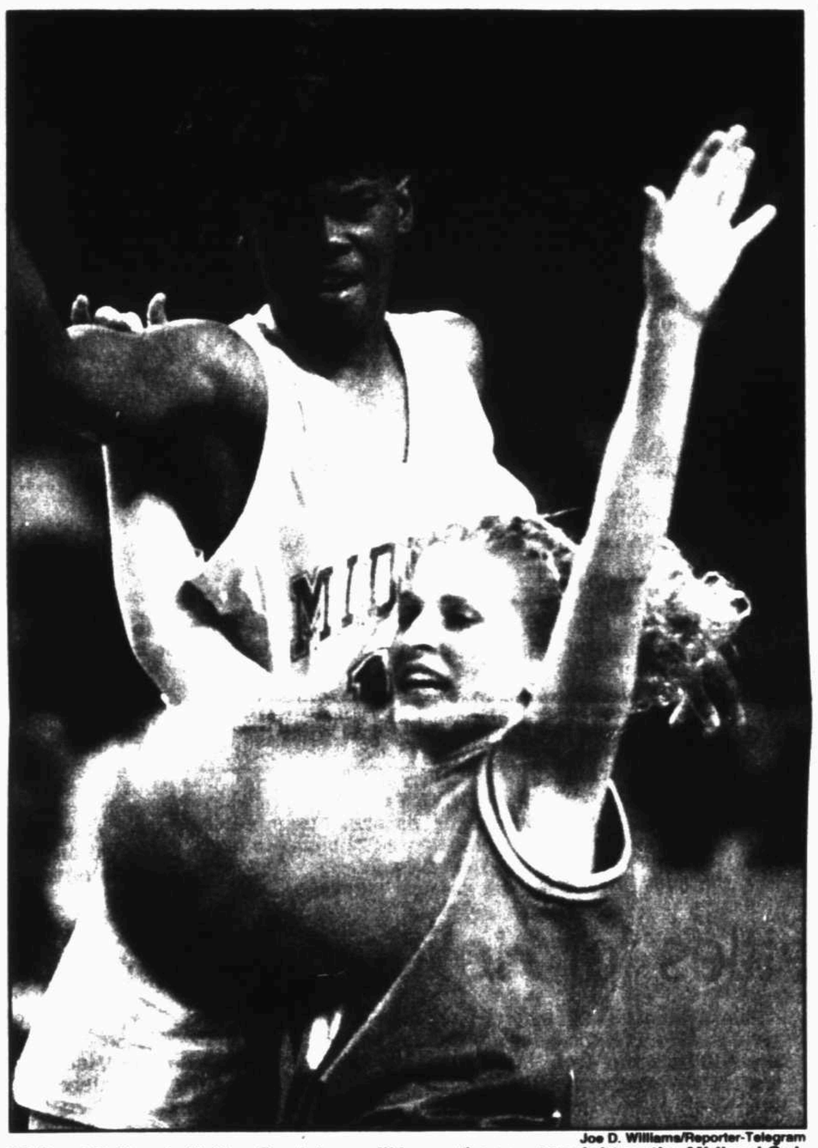

A quick glance at the composite WJCAC schedule will easily show that the four teams that make it out of this conference and earn a berth to the Region V tournament definitely will be battle-worn and probably will be one of the strongest contingencies any one conference will send to the regional tournament.

Two of the teams, including Midland College at 7-0, are undefeated. Howard College, the coaches' pick to defend its conference title, is 9-0. The Lady Hawks are coming off a regional championship and national tournament berth last season. Just one game back is South Plains College (7-1), whose only loss came at the hands of Howard.

"Overall, I can see several teams being better than they were last year, including us," said MC coach Ron Jones at the beginning of the season. "We voted to play an 18-game conference schedule and that ought to be interesting. I would say it favors the teams who are not the early favorites simply because it's going to keep teams in contention for a playoff spot longer."

The Lady Chaps come into the game with Western (2-4) having outscored their opponents by an average of almost 30 points a game. They have used their depth and balanced scoring attack to simply wear down teams. Freshman post Ndaisse Ndaiye is the leading scor-

Lady Rebels win in 2OT

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

Suffering from their first loss of the season — to none other than their cross town rival — and coming off less than an hour of workout in athletic period on Monday, the Midland Lee girls gave their most gutsy and well-played performance to date with a 93-92 double overtime victory over Lubbock Coronado at the Lee gym.

Sophomore post Tamika Thurman got a huge offensive rebound off a Lady Rebel miss and scored with eight seconds to play in the second overtime to tie the game at 92-92. But Thurman also drew the foul on the shot and just as calmly as you please, the sophomore found the bottom of the basket on the ensuing free throw to ensure the Lady Rebels would win after rallying twice — once in each overtime.

"It was intense pressure for a sophomore," said Thurman, who came off the bench to shoot 9-of-11 from the field for a total of 19 points and pull down a game-high 12 rebounds. "It felt like state championship material. But I wasn't nervous. I had confidence I could make it because Coach (Elise Kail) said to just go up there and shoot with confidence."

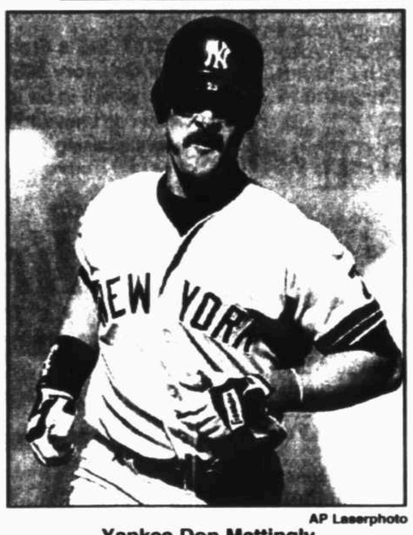

The emotional and thrilling win was a shot in the arm for the Lady Rebels (4-1), who admitted they did not play well in a loss on Saturday to Midland High. But with only a 50-minute athletic period to prepare for the then-undefeated Lady Mustangs (5-1), who were victims to Lee in a Class 5A bi-district playoff last year, Kail's Kids came up with their most well-executed game of the season.

"You're not supposed to have games like this five games into the season," said an exausted Kail after the game. "But even though we didn't have much time to prepare, everybody knew exactly what they were supposed to do.

"We played tonight like we should have played the first four games," said Kail. "I guess Saturday night was an eye-opener."

Yankee Don Mattingly ... ready to retire

Mattingly may hang up spikes

By Ronald Blum

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly's baseball career is over — at least for now. All that remains is his final announcement.

A person who has been in contact with Mattingly's advisers said Monday the free agent first baseman will issue a statement saying he won't be playing at the start of next season. He said the announcement could come as early as today.

The source, who spoke on the condition he not be identified, confirmed the account first reported Saturday by The New York Times. Mattingly's agent, Jim Krivacs, did not return telephone messages.

New York Yankees manager Joe Torre said during a conference call he had no idea of the team captain's plans.

Lee boys to play first home cage game

Staff Report

The Midland Lee boys basketball team will make its home debut at 7:30 p.m. today against El Paso Hanks in the Lee gym, and in the process, will be searching for its first win of the season.

The Rebels (0-2) opened the season with losses to Class 4A powers Pampa (ranked No. 2 in the state), 56-51, and Levelland, 49-47, in the South Plains Shootout Friday and Saturday.

"We played two pretty good teams over the weekend," noted Lee coach Jon House. "The thing we haven't been able to do is to get point production from our offense. Surprisingly, as small as we are, we won the battle of the boards in both of those losses."

Lee's showing against Pampa may say something of the Rebels this season. The Harvesters defeated District 4-5A's Abilene High 101-66 on Saturday afternoon after just escaping the Rebels.

Senior Mark Holly is the only Rebel averaging in double figures after two games, scoring at an 18-point per game average. It's more scoring punch that House would like to see.

"We just haven't gotten our scoring eye yet. We have to improve in that area, but otherwise, the team is playing pretty well."

The Midland High girls (4-0) are fresh off of winning the Tall City Invitational with three straight victories and jump back into action with at 8 p.m. today on the road against Lubbock Coronado.

Ogonna Merritt is leading the Lady Dawgs with a 13.5 points per game average while Laura Childress is hitting at a 10.3 clip.

The Midland High Bulldogs are idle until Friday when they hit the road again for the Pepsi Cola Super 10 tournament in Fort Worth. The Bulldogs play Fort Worth Keller at 11 a.m. and that winner will meet Fort Worth Dunbar later that day.

The Bulldogs (2-0) won two games Friday and Saturday in Del Rio, beating Del Rio on Friday and Victoria on Saturday, averaging 81.5 points per outing.

Kirby Lemons is hitting at a 20.5 points per game average, and is followed by James Whitfield, 18; and Terry Johnson at 13.5.

49ers continue on hot pace with Elvis

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Elvis Grbac and the San Francisco 49ers upstaged Dan Marino.

Grbac threw for 382 yards and four scores, negating two touchdown passes by Marino that tied Fran Tarkenton's career NFL record, and San Francisco produced another blowout at Joe Robbie Stadium by beating Miami 44-20 Monday night.

Even more lopsided than the 49ers' 49-26 rout of San Diego in last season's Super Bowl at Miami, the victory was especially impressive on the heels of their 38-20 romp past Dallas eight days earlier.

San Francisco (7-4) again won without injured quarterback Steve Young, who warmed up before the game but watched from the sideline while Grbac completed 31 of 41 passes. He improved to 3-2 as a starter this season.

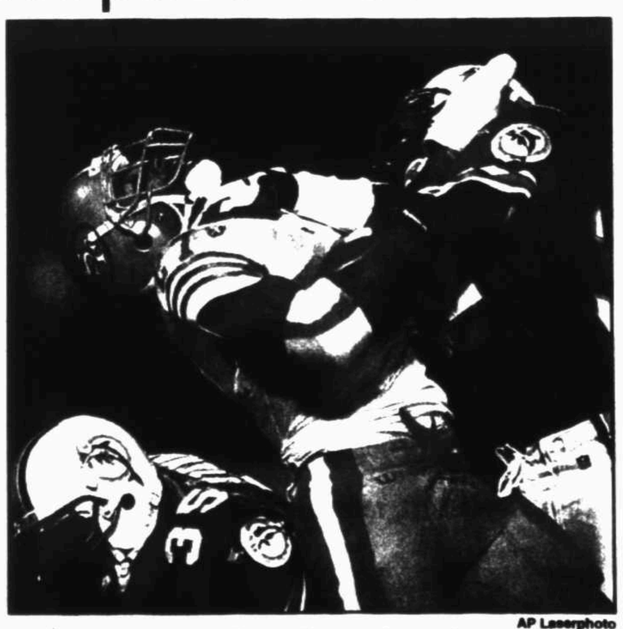

The 49ers sacked Marino on the first three plays, and then it got worse for the Dolphins (6-5). Before Marino could match the career record he coveted most — Tarkenton's 342 touchdown passes — San Francisco led 38-13.

Marino, who broke Tarkenton's records for passing yardage and completions earlier this year in games Miami lost, completed 23 of 38 passes for 255 yards.

The reeling Dolphins, who have lost five of their past seven games, fell two games behind AFC East leader Buffalo.

"To go out and play like that is such a downer," Miami coach Don Shula said. "We thought this was pivotal tonight. Now we've got to try to salvage the season."

The 49ers pulled into a first-place tie with Atlanta.

Can Cotton Bowl be a hit without a Texas team playing?

DALLAS (AP) — Will the Cotton Bowl be a hit without a Texas team?

After landing No. 8 Colorado and No. 12 Oregon for their marquee, organizers of the Jan. 1 classic are more hopeful than optimistic.

Without a Texas team in the 60th annual classic, it remains to be seen if enough fans of the Ducks and Buffaloes will migrate south to fill the 68,252 Cotton Bowl seats.

A Texas team has played in all but nine of the 59 Cotton Bowls. And former Southwest Conference-member Arkansas, a close neighbor, played in eight of the nine non-Texas games.

The only game between schools from outside the region pitted Clemson and Boston College in 1940. The game drew just 15,000 fans.

"We're going to have to have some sales effort here in the Dallas area in order to fill it up, but we all know what kind of football fans we have here," said John Crawford, president of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association.

"The fact that we don't have a Texas team — I don't know if we're troubled by that. We've got higher-ranked teams than we've had in a good while."

The Cotton Bowl had featured the SWC champ since 1941, but with the SWC dissolving after this season, that association ended after last season's game between Southern California and Texas Tech.

Under the new Tier 1 Bowl Alliance, the national championship game was awarded to the Fiesta, Orange and Sugar bowls on a rotating basis for three years.

That left the Cotton Bowl to scramble without a corporate sponsor since Mobil Corp. dropped its affiliation in March.

Without Mobil's support, Oregon and Colorado each will receive between $2 million and $2.5 million, depending on ticket sales, said Charlie Fiss, media director for the Cotton Bowl. With Mobil's support, Tech and USC each got $3 million.

Each school is responsible for selling at least 12,500 tickets at $45 each, Fiss said.

"Oregon is planning on taking more tickets," Fiss said. "The Oregon people are fired up. They were selling cotton candy in the stand of the Oregon State game the other night."

Colorado expects many of its 3,600 alumni in Texas to buy tickets.

"Our fans, when it comes New Year's Day games, have usually gone ape," said Dave Plati, Colorado's sports information director.

He said Colorado has sold its ticket allotment or more for all four of its New Year's bowl appearances since 1989.

Colorado has been to 19 bowl games since 1938, most recently defeating Notre Dame 41-24 in the 1995 Fiesta Bowl.

The Buffs have 14 players from Texas on their roster, which also should help Texas ticket sales, Plati said.

That list includes Mission product Koy Detmer, who injured his right knee in a 29-21 victory over Texas A&M. The junior quarterback later had season-ending surgery.

Oregon is a different matter.

The Ducks have played in 10 bowls, losing last season's Rose Bowl 38-20 to Penn State. The Ducks took 40,000 fans to Pasadena.

However, Oregon lists just 1,200 Texas alums and no Texas players.

"But we'll probably sell 18,000 to 20,000 tickets," said Paul Ihander, an assistant in Oregon's sports information office.

One thing that might work against ticket sales to Colorado and Oregon fans is the weather.

Warm weather helps lure fans to some bowl games, such as the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., and the Orange Bowl in Miami. In Dallas, the average Jan. 1 high temperature is just 54 degrees, according to the National Weather Service. Not exactly bikini weather compared to the average Jan. 1 high of 45 degrees in Eugene, Ore., and 42 degrees in Boulder, Colo.

But there is a little history. Each school has appeared once in the Cotton Bowl and plans reunions of those squads, Crawford said.

"If that happens, it will add a lot to the atmosphere. It will be the topping on the cake," Crawford said.

Colorado lost to Rice 28-14 in the 1938 Cotton Bowl, when the Buffaloes were lead by Byron "Whizzer" White, future justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, who finished second in that season's Heisman Trophy voting.

Oregon last appeared in 1949 with future NFL great Norm Van Brocklin at quarterback and lost 21-13 to Southern Methodist and Heisman winner Doak Walker.

Greg Elam, of the Dallas Convention and Visitors Bureau, said last season's Cotton Bowl had a total economic impact of $78 million on the Dallas area economy.

"In theory, not having a Texas school in this game will help because there will be more out-of-town people coming here and making it an adventure," Elam said. "But in reality, it will be dependant on how many of those people will travel to Dallas."

Rockets capture fifth straight win

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

BOSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 24 points, and Houston capitalized on poor foul shooting by the Boston Celtics as the Rockets won their fifth straight game, 98-93 Monday night.

Boston made just 2-of-11 free throws in the fourth quarter and 9-of-22 for the game as its winning streak ended at two games. Houston was 28-for-33 for the game and 7-for-11 in the final period.

The Rockets took the lead for good, 75-74, on Clyde Drexler's driving layup with 22 seconds left in the third quarter and led by as many as seven points in the fourth.

Drexler scored 18 points, and Robert Horry had 16 points and 15 rebounds for the Rockets. Boston was led by Greg Minor with 21 points and Dino Radja with 13 points and 17 rebounds.

With the score 91-87, Boston's Sherman Douglas missed two free throws and Houston got the next three points on Drexler's foul shot and Olajuwon's jump hook with 2:42 to go.

The Rockets led 96-89 before Douglas sank a basket and was fouled. But he missed the free throw. Minor then hit a short jumper, closing the gap to 96-93 with 44 seconds remaining.

Olajuwon then missed a shot, but Drexler rebounded with 24 seconds to go. Sam Cassell made a foul shot with 15 seconds remaining and Horry hit another with eight seconds to go.

Boston never trailed in the third quarter until Drexler's layup with 22 seconds left capped a 7-1 run.

Houston had outscored Boston 31-21 in the first quarter, then Boston outscored Houston 31-21 in the second for a 52-52 halftime tie.

Magic 101, Warriors 95

ORLANDO, Fla. — Anfernee Hardaway scored 29 points and Dennis Scott added 27 as Orlando remained unbeaten at home with a victory over Golden State.

Nick Anderson had 20 points and the Magic, which played without Horace Grant, got its first meaningful contribution off the bench from rookie forward David Vaughn to improve its record at Orlando Arena to 7-0.

Chris Mullin led the Warriors with 23 points and Jon Barry scored 14 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter to keep Golden State in the game. Rony Seikaly had 19 points and 11 rebounds, but Tim Hardaway was held to 6 on 3-for-15 shooting.

Trail Blazers 113, Clippers 94

PORTLAND, Ore. — Rod Strickland scored 27 points and Cliff Robinson added 25 as Portland beat the Los Angeles Clippers.

Strickland and Robinson broke open a close game by scoring 11 points each during the third quarter, when the Blazers took advantage of a five-minute scoring drought by the Clippers to go ahead by 20 points.

Strickland made 11 of 15 shots and added seven rebounds and six assists. He did not play in the fourth quarter.

Portland has won six straight over the Clippers — all by 10 points or more.

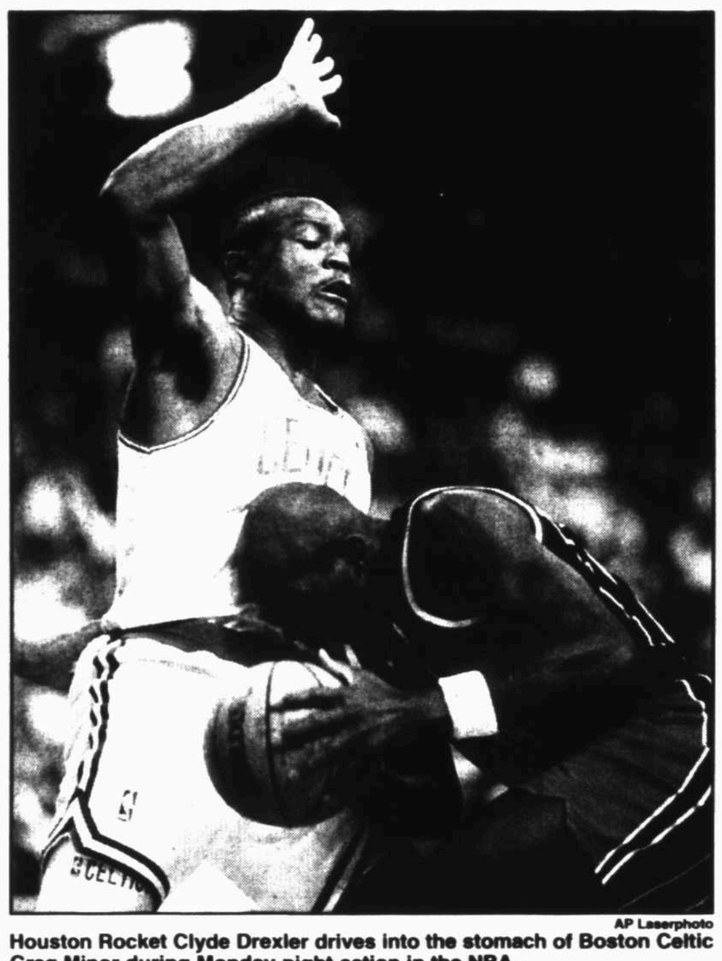

Jazz 105, Nets 79

SALT LAKE CITY — Chris Morris, cutting his former teammates no slack, scored 22 points to lead Utah over New Jersey.

Morris was signed as a free agent during training camp after seven years with the Nets.

The Jazz led 77-40 on Antoine Carr's basket with 3:31 left in the third quarter.

But, the Nets, who shot just 32.5 percent from the floor for the game, closed to 81-62 as Yinka Dare led an 11-2 run to open the fourth quarter.

Skater dies while practicing

The 28-year-old Russian was lifting his 5-foot-1 wife, Ekaterina Gordeeva, above his head when he suffered an apparent heart attack and fell to the ice at the Olympic Center.

A coach, Marina Zueva, was the first to reach him. Paramedics called to the rink shortly after 11 a.m. transported him to Adirondack Medical Center in Saranac Lake. Grinkov was pronounced dead at 12:28 p.m., according to his publicist, Linda Dozoretz.

The apparent cause of death was cardiac arrest, but there was no official diagnosis, Dozoretz said. Over the objections of Gordeeva, an autopsy was planned for Tuesday morning, said Essex County coroner Robert Huestis Jr.

Grinkov and Gordeeva were on tour with an ice show that had a scheduled performance in Lake Placid on Monday night. They also had skated last week in a made-for-television show in Albany.

However, Grinkov's chronic back problems kept the couple out of several skating shows this fall and limited the kind of tricks they could do on the ice.

"It's a very sad day for figure skating," said John Nicks, a longtime American pairs coach who watched Gordeeva and Grinkov develop into one of skating's most successful duos. "We're all shocked. I thought they were the finest exponents of figure skating."

Grinkov

Grinkov's death was a sudden and tragic end to the era of "G&G," an era that started while they were children skating in Moscow club and culminated in two Olympic gold medals and four world championships.

"We are deeply saddened by the untimely loss of Sergei Grinkov," said Morry Stillwell, president of the U.S. Figure Skating Association. "As one of the greatest pair skaters in the history of figure skating, his tremendous contributions to the sport will never be forgotten."

Gordeeva and Grinkov burst onto the international scene in 1986, winning the first of four world championships. He was 19, she was 15, and their routine was spectacular, if limited — a well-muscled 5-11 man throwing a ponytailed girl through the air, while both glided on skates at dizzying speeds.

But over the years, their skating — and their relationship — matured.

Between 1988, when they won the Olympic gold medal in Calgary, and 1994, when they returned from a stint as professionals to take Olympic gold again, G&G fell in love, got married and had a daughter.

And their skating evolved as well, from an athletic show of muscle and speed to husband-and-wife togetherness that was edged with tenderness.

Kansas State settles for Holiday Bowl after loss

SAN DIEGO (AP) — After coming within 2 minutes, 24 seconds of their first-ever New Year's Day bowl game, the Kansas State Wildcats will have to settle for the Holiday Bowl.

The No. 10 Wildcats on Monday accepted an invitation to play the Western Athletic Conference champion on Dec. 29 at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Still in the running for the WAC title and bowl berth are Colorado State, last year's Holiday Bowl loser to Michigan; San Diego State, which has made it to the hometown bowl only once in 17 years; Brigham Young; and Utah.

The Wildcats (9-2), who were chosen over rival and No. 11 Kansas for the Holiday berth, are still smarting from last Saturday's 27-17 loss to Colorado that cost them a spot in the Cotton Bowl. It was considered by many the biggest game in Kansas State's 100 seasons of football.

"We're certainly quite disappointed in the outcome of the ballgame on Saturday, but we couldn't have a finer reward for losing as we do," Kansas State coach Bill Snyder said Monday.

"Our players are mature," Snyder added. "They will handle it appropriately and will bounce back. They've done that before, and will do it again."

Holiday Bowl president Vince Benstead told Snyder during a conference call that the game has "a record of high-scoring, exciting games, and it looks like Kansas State will fit that mold."

To which Snyder responded, "I appreciate that, but we also play defense. I hope it's not high-scoring in that sense."

Even the No. 1 defense in the country couldn't save the Wildcats on Saturday. After Kansas State went ahead 17-13 with 2:24 left, Colorado moved 80 yards to win the game.

CHAPS: WJCAC to play 18-game format

(From 1C)

er at 20 points a game but freshman forward Fatou Cisse' (12.1) and sophomore post Malyssa Thorngren (10.6) are taking up some of the scoring slack.

Since they've had only one close contest this year, the Lady Chaps are ready for the tougher competition the start of conference play brings.

"I think we're learning to play with each other a lot better now," said Thorngren. "Plus, we just had a whole week of practice (last week) with no games in the middle and that was good. At the beginning of the season we had so many games in a row and now we were finally able to go back and correct those errors in practice."

The Lady Chaps finished with an 8-4 record in conference last year for a second-place finish — one they would like to improve on.

It will start tonight as they face one of the teams they lost to last year. Western defeated Midland 86-72 giving the Lady Chaps their third conference loss. And they should be tough again this year as they showed by taking Howard into an overtime game before losing 76-70.

The Lady Westerners are led by guard Stacy Henson, a 5-foot-7 freshman from Brownfield who is averaging about 22 points a game. Other top players are 6-1 freshman post Jo Smith, from Hobbs, N.M., and Katrina Turner, a 6-2 sophomore transfer from Atlanta, Ga.

"More than anything, we need to play with intensity and energy and make good decisions," said Jones. "We've got to move our feet so our defense is playing well and causing problems for the other teams."

It will be important for Midland to start off the league schedule strong.

Frank Phillips, which finished fourth with a 6-6 record, surprised Midland last year with an 87-74 conference-opening victory at Chap Center. It was only the fourth loss for the Lady Chaps at the time.

"We don't want to do what we did last year and get blown out," said returning sophomore Amber Follis.

"That was our first home loss," added returning sophomore Roslynn Dunn.

And this year, any loss from here on out will not only spoil a perfect home record but a perfect season as well.

No. 3 Villanova wins

LAHAINA, Hawaii (AP) — For a season opener, Steve Lappas likes what he sees.

"Our level of intensity was the key," the Villanova coach said. "I thought we played hard. That's why we were able to respond when we got down by a point."

With Eric Eberz scoring 23 points and Kerry Kittles adding 11 of his 16 in the second half, the No. 3 Wildcats beat Wisconsin 66-58 Monday in the Maui Invitational.

Villanova led 34-25 lead at the half, but the Badgers responded with a 12-2 run at the outset of the second half for its only lead of the game.

"We did a great job," Lappas said. "We stayed within our game and did the job."

After Wisconsin inched ahead, Kittles and Eberz brought the Wildcats back, with each hitting a pair of 3-pointers over the next four minutes to restore control.

Wisconsin drew to 53-49 but Villanova put the game away on baskets by Jason Lawson and Zeffy Penn, followed by a technical foul on the Badgers' bench. That resulted in five additional points on three free throws and a basket on the ensuing possession.

No. 20 N. Carolina 71, Vandy 63

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Sergé Zwikker converted on consecutive follow-up shots with 3:02 left to rally No. 20 North Carolina over Vanderbilt in a first round game of the Maui Invitational.

The Tar Heels struggled throughout the game as the Commodores scored on 3-pointers by Drew Maddux, Frank Seckar and Howard Pride. Vanderbilt held an 11-point lead with 11:48 left, but North Carolina got surprisingly strong play from freshman Ademola Okulaja and the steady scoring of Jeff McInnis, who finished with 20 points.

Okulaja fueled a 16-2 run by scoring six points.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A new reserve helps you win greater respect at work. Others see you as someone who possesses a special inner strength. A personnel or scheduling change could work to your advantage next spring. Seek the cooperation of your peers and subordinates. June of '96 will find you poised to make a romantic commitment. Give grown-up offspring plenty of notice if planning to remarry. A windfall or legacy could change your entire life.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actress Goldie Hawn, baseball slugger Ken Griffey Jr., ballerina Natalia Makarova, New Yorker editor Tina Brown.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look to a more experienced individual for advice and inspiration. Tie up any loose ends related to an old project before starting a new one. You have fewer limitations than you think. Be creative!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An excellent day to enjoy some of your job's fringe benefits. A phone call or letter could change the direction of your career. Make new investments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What looks like a grand opportunity to fill your wallet could empty it instead. Do not press your luck. Domestic chores should come before pleasure. Get busy!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Opposing elements could make this day a veritable tug-of-war. Let partner take the lead while you adopt a wait-and-see approach. Romance is best postponed. Stay home tonight and read a good book.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Pouring extra effort into your work could put you over the top. Time-honored virtues once again prove their worth. Refuse to be taken in by a clever manipulator. Spend more time on your own.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You benefit from favorable influences. Set a good example by putting your best foot forward. News from those at a distance keeps you on your toes. You are capable of dealing with any situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be wary of people who talk big but have little to offer. Their empty promises could lead you far afield. Go ahead with a household project. Family members will lend a helping hand if asked nicely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Postpone an announcement if you have any doubts. Privacy will help you collect your thoughts. Proceed along customary lines when handling other people's money. Show good judgment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance enjoys beneficial influences. Refrain from making impulsive changes in your lifestyle. Exaggerating or boasting could saddle you with new and unwanted problems.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An inspired idea comes to you from out of the blue. Haste could cause unwise decisions. Slow down. Love could appear in an unusual guise. Follow the dictates of your generous heart.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stick to the straight and narrow. Traffic and highway conditions require extra caution. Some exciting developments could brighten your outlook.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Look into moving to better quarters or buying your own home. Those who wield authority wisely will make valuable new friends. Some good financial news is featured this afternoon.

For readers who like bridge-column hands, Phillip Alder has culled an excellent selection of hands from his NEA column "Get Smarter at Bridge," 232 pp., paperback. Available from The Bridge World, 39 W. 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10024, $12.95 plus $3 postage and handling.) An extra bonus are two chapters, one a takeoff on P.G. Wodehouse, the other of the TV program "Get Smart." This deal is based on a theme we stress regularly, 'Take Time at Trick One.'

"Being a founding father of the Ailurophile Society, the cliche I dislike the most is, 'There's more than one way to skin a cat.' But the concept — and the concept alone — may be applied to many bridge deals.

"North is right to respond 3 NT. Five clubs is a long way off. The responder should just hope that the clubs will generate enough tricks for three notrump to make. It is true that here five clubs makes easily, but three notrump is still the percentage action...

"Three declarers played the contract. The first won trick one with the heart king and immediately finessed the club queen. However, East won with the king and returned his last heart: down two.

"The second declarer saw that if the club finesse was working, he didn't need to take it. He led the club queen but put up dummy's ace when West played low. The king didn't drop ... the same down two.

"The third declarer used the Rule of 11. ... He knew there were four cards higher than the seven in the other three hands. After East played the ten, he could see all of them. Therefore, West had several heart tricks ready to run if East got on play. To try to stop this from happening, South played his heart four at trick one. With the hearts 6-2, he could no longer go down.

"The moral is: Paws (sic!) at trick one."

Despite the puns, it will keep you interested.

Women of childbearing years need folic acid every day. Because you never know who'll be stopping by.

That's why the March of Dimes recommends getting .4 milligrams of folic acid every day before you become pregnant. This helps reduce the risk of certain birth defects. March of Dimes

One radical who can stand the heat, Katharine Power to write cookbook

Katharine Ann Power, a member of the Weather Underground who was a fugitive for 23 years before turning herself in, has hired a literary agent to help sell a book proposal.

Power is in prison, for eight to 12 years, for the killing of a police officer in 1970, and the persnickety old judge who sentenced her specified that she could not write a book to profit from her crime for 20 years. But the literary venture she has proposed has nothing to do with the crime; it's a cookbook.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Musicians, prepare your resumes. Garth Brooks is looking for two band members who aren't obsessed with job security.

Garth Brooks is looking for two band members.

Brooks has a new album out next week and is booked for a U.S. tour, but he lost two musicians to solo careers — guitarist Ty England and the country star's own sister, bassist Betsy Brooks.

"The two faces that are probably most known to people, Ty and Betsy, are lost," Brooks said. "So it'll be tough."

NEW YORK — Sean Penn actually has something nice to say about ex-wife Madonna.

"I thinks she's an untapped actress," Penn said in the Nov. 24 issue of Entertainment Weekly. "Given the right material, I'd work with Madonna. She's a very specific presence in the world and in my life."

The couple divorced in 1989 after a stormy three-year marriage. Asked if the two keep in touch, Penn smirked and said, "Not exactly."

Penn directed another former flame, girlfriend Robin Wright, in the new movie "The Crossing Guard." Wright is the mother of his two children.

BARABOO, Wis. — Japan's Princess Sayako had them eating out of her hands at the International Crane Foundation.

The 26-year-old princess, an ornithologist, took a look at the foundation's birds Saturday.

"Would you like to pretend to be a mother bird?" director George Archibald asked her.

She put a crane-shaped puppet on her right hand to feed grain to two 6-month-old black-necked cranes and beamed with delight as the birds accepted the offering from the wooden beak.

In Japan, cranes are symbols of good luck and long life.

LOS ANGELES — Frank Sinatra joined a stage crowded with entertainers for a chorus of "New York, New York" during taping of an 80th birthday tribute for the blue-eyed one.

Sinatra's birthday isn't until Dec. 12, but a throng of celebrities running the gamut from rap to opera turned out Sunday to appear in the two-hour ABC special that will air in December. The date hasn't been announced.

Frank Sinatra joins a stage crowded with entertainers.

The taping delighted the Shrine Auditorium crowd of 6,000, some of whom paid $1,000 a ticket. The gala benefited AIDS Project Los Angeles and the Barbara Sinatra Children's Center at Eisenhower Medical Center near Palm Springs.

Tony Bennett, Bob Dylan, Bruce Springsteen, Little Richard and Hootie and the Blowfish sang tributes to Sinatra as he sat at a table with his wife, Barbara, and daughters Christina and Nancy.

A movie screen displayed a clip of Sinatra singing "Old Man River" in the 1946 MGM musical "Till the Clouds Roll By."

Referring to the movie, Ray Charles cracked: "I didn't see the picture. But I understand you were in a white suit, with a white band, on a white set singing a black song. Now I'm going to do it — my way."

Figure skater Tonya Harding, icon of the Nice Guys Finish Last movement, has announced plans to marry a Portland machinist in December.

Harding, 25, met 29-year-old Michael Smith "through mutual friends." She told "Inside Edition" that they are both interested in horses.

Harding's first husband, Jeff Gillooly, wound up in jail for masterminding the attack on Harding's skating rival, Nancy Kerrigan; Harding paid a $150,000 fine and was sentenced to 500 hours of community service for conspiracy to hinder the prosecution.

Gas prices zoom

Natural gas futures prices shot to an 16-month high Monday as utility companies scrambled for supplies amid forecasts for more cold weather in the Midwest and Northern Plains.

Speculators who had bet on lower prices had to buy back contracts to stem their losses in panicky, high-volume trading.

Natural gas for December delivery soared 13.3 cents to $2.157 per 1,000 cubic feet, the highest daily settlement for near-term deliveries since July 1, 1994.

Analysts attributed some of the sharp advance to expiration-related volatility in the December contract, which goes off the board Tuesday afternoon. January deliveries climbed 2.8 cents to $2.063 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Natural gas prices have risen more than 25 percent in the past month as persistent cold weather in the Midwest and Northeast has driven dealers and users of the fuel into the marketplace to bolster inventories.

The full extent of the weather's effect on demand didn't hit traders until last Wednesday, when the American Gas Association reported a 3 percent drop in natural gas reserves from a week earlier.

West Texas Intermediate for January delivery fell 7 cents to $18.06 a barrel. Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $16.50.

Southwest fares

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines Co. on Monday announced a extension of discounts on 21-day advance purchase tickets throughout most of its system.

The ticket purchase deadline has been extended to Nov. 30 for an April 5 travel deadline. The nonrefundable tickets must be purchased within one day of making reservations.

Prices start as low as $19 for one-way travel on Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday. Sale fares will be slightly higher on the remaining four days of the week and don't include airport charges of up to $6 each way.

Seats are limited and won't be available on some flights during very busy travel times and holidays. Samples of the $19 "Gotta Go Fares" include Chicago to Cleveland, which has an unrestricted $77 fare, and Phoenix to Las Vegas.

The fares aren't available for travel into and out of Orange County, Calif.

Dollar weakens

NEW YORK — The dollar ended mostly lower against other key currencies Monday as traders took a second look at the budget agreement and decided Republicans and Democrats are still far apart on key issues.

In late New York trading, the dollar fetched 101.35 yen, down from 102.05 Friday. The dollar also traded at 1.4067 German marks, up from 1.4060. The British pound was quoted at $1.5539, up from $1.5445.

Traders also said the dollar was adversely impacted by technical factors in a thin market.

A rebound in the pound and in other European currencies also weakened the dollar.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.1375 Swiss francs, down from 1.1387; 4.8500 French francs, down from 4.8540; 1.593 Italian lire, up from 1.591; and 1.3509 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3520.

Wall Street has brief brush with 5000

■ Dow ends day lower, weighed by concerns about federal budget.

By Rachel Beck
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrials tumbled in a late-day selloff Monday, unable to hold on to an early drive that sent the blue-chip index past the milestone 5,000 mark. Broader market indexes were also lower.

The Dow average hit 5,000.43 at 10:03 a.m. and later surged to over 5,003 in midafternoon trading before turning downward to close at 4,983.09, a 6.86 slide from Friday's record-breaking levels.

"We had big run ups for the last three days, and now the market is trying to get back to normal," said Arnold Owen, managing director of trading at SoundView Financial Corp. "The market was able to get to 5,000, but traders were a little more cautious as the day went on."

Declining issues led advancers by nearly 6 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange, with volume totaling 333.12 million shares vs. 437.20 million on Friday.

The NYSE's composite index dropped 1.20 to 318.92, the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was down 3.22 to 596.85 and the American Stock Exchange's market value index slipped 0.37 to 531.59.

A selloff of technology stocks pulled down the Nasdaq composite index 15.56 to 1,029.47.

The market's push toward 5,000 started early on, fueled by the partial budget accord reached late Sunday between President Clinton and Congress.

The sides agreed to reopen the government and start negotiations for a balanced budget by 2002, but they also said talks would continue over taxes, Medicare, education and the environment.

The agreement finances the government until Dec. 15, giving administration and congressional negotiators until then to work out a balanced-budget deal.

The initial surge on the accord tapered off as investors became somewhat wary that budget process was complete.

"Certainly an agreement to talk is positive," said William LeFevre, senior market analyst at Ehrenkrantz King Nussbaum in New York. "But many people are wondering what's going to happen if the attempt to balance the budget" doesn't work.

Such concerns began to weigh down stocks and and kept the bond market little changed. The price of the Treasury's main 30-year bond slipped 3-16 point, or about $1.87 per $1,000 invested, while its yield rose 0.01 point to 6.24 percent.

Helping support the Dow industrial index were Walt Disney, gaining 1 at 60 1/4, Eastman Kodak, ahead 1 3/8 at 70 1/4, and Texaco, up 1 at 72.

But those gains were outweighed as more selling interest entered the market late in the day. Technology issues were hardest hit on considerable profit taking.

"Technology (stocks) has been for sale in recent weeks and this is a continuation of that selloff," said Owen of SoundView. "People are afraid of a slowdown in technology and that's hurting the market."

In overseas trading, the Nikkei index in Tokyo rose 1.3 percent, the DAX index in Frankfurt gained 0.8 percent and the FT-SE 100 in London up 0.5 percent.

Oil production to dominate OPEC meeting

By N.Y.Times News Service

Vienna — As OPEC oil ministers gather for their year-end meeting, rising production outside the group is forcing them to abandon hopes of boosting OPEC's own oil production targets before the second half of 1996.

While few ministers would discuss plans for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' Tuesday meeting, some acknowledged the 12-nation group has little choice but to maintain its targets if it hopes to keep oil prices from falling as supplies continue to rise.

"What we are looking for is how to support the price," said Abdullah bin Hamad al-Attiyah, Qatar's minister of energy and industry. "We believe it is an unfair price now."

Kuwait's oil minister, Abdulmohsen al-Madej, said the Persian Gulf emirate is willing to stick to its current oil production limit for awhile. "We are happy ... we stick with our quota," he said, adding that prices are "not yet" high enough.

In recent London trading, the futures contract for Brent blend crude oil was down 9 cents a barrel at $16.84, or well below OPEC's 1993 target of $21 a barrel.

OPEC is expected to leave its output cap unchanged at 24.52 million barrels a day in the hope that oil prices will rise with increased demand, although some analysts believe it's the only way to avoid a drop in prices.

"If they're smart, they'll have a one-day meeting and go home," said William Brown, president of W.H. Brown & Co., a New York oil consulting firm.

"They have very few options other than to cut quotas or extend their production ceiling," said Michael Rothman, an oil analyst at Merrill Lynch. "They don't have the wherewithal to cut, so if they extend the ceiling, the question will be: For how long?"

OPEC has been frustrated in its quest for higher oil prices by an unexpected rise in oil production from outside OPEC that has outstripped this year's 2 percent gain in world oil demand.

Non-OPEC production has risen 7 percent to 43.2 million barrels a day since OPEC adopted its current output limit in September 1993. The International Energy Agency forecasts daily demand for OPEC oil next year will fall by 400,000 barrels.

"For OPEC, this is not a healthy picture," said Ann-Louise Hittle, a director at Cambridge Energy Research Associates in Boston, Massachusetts. "On a global basis, supply is more than adequate."

New technology has made it cheaper to find and produce oil in even the harshest places. In the North Sea, development costs have fallen to about $12 a barrel from $22 before the oil-price crash in 1985, according to Price Waterhouse.

That's made it easier for Norway and the U.K. to make the North Sea one of the world's biggest oil-producing regions and one of the biggest contributors to rising world production that isn't expected to start declining anytime soon.

Battle for California bank group heats up

■ Either bid would become nation's largest bank deal.

By E. Scott Reckard
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — First Interstate spurned Wells Fargo's takeover bid for a second time while the suitor it prefers, First Bank System of Minneapolis, said Wells' plan to purchase more First Interstate stock would break the law.

The developments escalated a nasty takeover brawl — unusual in the staid banking world — that began a month ago with Wells Fargo's first bid. First Bank stepped in and crafted a merger deal with First Interstate's board on Nov. 6.

Los Angeles-based First Interstate had been expected to reject the offer that Wells, its San Francisco rival, had sweetened last week.

In a sharply-worded statement, First Interstate said its board is determined to move ahead with an agreement to combine with First Bank.

"We believe it is unfortunate that a respected institution like Wells Fargo would jeopardize its reputation by ignoring our board of directors' carefully considered decision and choosing instead to recklessly pursue its hostile takeover proposal," said First Interstate chairman and chief executive William E.B. Siart.

"We will not be deterred or distracted from completing our pending merger with First Bank on (shareholders') behalf," Siart said.

Meanwhile, First Bank said Wells Fargo's plan to purchase up to 5 percent of First Interstate's stock on the open market would violate federal securities laws. Buying up First Interstate's stock would give Wells Fargo more leverage for a takeover.

First Bank lawyer Vic Lewkow said Wells, having made a tender offer to First Interstate shareholders, may now buy shares only as part of that offer under federal securities rules. That will make it impossible for Wells to buy First Interstate shares for at least two months, he said.

"FBS does not believe that Wells Fargo can expect to be in a position to purchase stock pursuant to its exchange offer for some months," First Bank said in a statement.

Wells officials didn't return phone calls seeking comment. They said last week that the bank, having made its offer for First Interstate, is in a "quiet period" mandated by securities regulators.

Both banks are offering stock, not cash, for First Interstate; last week Wells increased its bid from five-eighths to two-thirds of a share for every share of First Interstate stock.

At Monday's prices, First Bank's offer was worth $10.28 billion, compared with Wells' $10.67 billion. Either would edge out the $10 billion merger of New York's Chemical Banking Corp. and Chase Manhattan Corp. as the largest bank deal in U.S. history.

First Interstate maintains that First Bank is a better strategic fit, with long-term gains outweighing the lesser initial value to shareholders.

Ultimately, large institutional shareholders that hold most of First Interstate's stock will decide which bid to accept. The company said Monday the date of the special meeting of shareholders to consider the proposed merger with First Bank has not yet been set.

First Bank officials said they are hoping for regulatory approval and a shareholder vote by March 1996.

Some experts said Wells could increase its bid again, pushing the price up high enough to knock out a better offer from First Bank.

Executive stock options don't guarantee fat profits

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q: It doesn't seem fair to me that it always is the vice presidents, directors, chief executives and such who get options to buy their companies' stock at low prices and sell the same day at double the price.

I'd like to get in on this deal too!

A: Wouldn't we all.

But you should be aware that, although executive stock options can be very lucrative, they do not guarantee fat profits.

A stock option that qualifies for tax purposes normally is granted at the market price of the stock. If XYZ Corp. stock is trading at $20 on the day Francis X. Zecutive gets an option on 10,000 shares, he has to pay $20 a share for stock he purchases.

Of course, that option might not expire for years. If, during that time span, the stock's price rises to, say, $40, F.X. Zecutive likely would exercise his option. He'd buy the 10,000 shares for $200,000 and be able to sell them for $400,000.

That's a fat profit, but not really a fast profit. We'll assume he and the rest of the company's top brass worked hard to make XYZ Corp. grow and increase its earnings, thus benefiting all stockholders. If the company had not prospered, its stock price would not have risen.

Granted, stock options can be abused. But corporate managements are generally correct in their contention that options are necessary to attract and retain top executives.

Q: I purchased the same stock at four separate times — at $15, $12, $9 and $7 — and now own 1,000 shares. Unfortunately, the stock has nosedived and has been bouncing around between $4 and $5 for the past year.

If I sell the 1,000 shares for $4 or $5, my loss will be somewhat more than $6,300. How do I claim that loss on my income tax return?

A: As a capital loss on Schedule D of your Form 1040.

Let's say you unload the 1,000 shares at $4 per share and the broker who handles that sale charges $100 commission, making your net proceeds $3,900.

The difference between $3,900 and your total cost of purchasing the 1,000 shares would be a realized loss. In this example, the total cost includes all four purchase prices and commissions you paid.

You don't specify how many shares you bought at each price, and commissions vary widely among different brokerage firms. So I can't come up with an accurate total cost basis. You will have to do your own calculation on that. But let's say it all adds up to $11,000.

That would give you a $7,100 loss on the sale. Because you owned the stock for more than a year, you would list it as a long-term capital loss.

If you have any capital gains from the sale of securities or other capital assets in the same year, you can use the capital loss to offset all or part of those gains.

If you have no capital gains or if the capital loss exceeds your capital gains, $3,000 of the capital loss can be used to offset your ordinary income, and the balance of the capital loss can be carried over and used in future years — first to offset capital gains and then to offset ordinary income.

Either way, the capital loss reduces your tax obligation. Of course, that's small consolation for the fat loss you realized, as the result of chasing that stock's price downhill.

Q: Where can I obtain additional information about the "transfer on death" form of registering ownership of securities?

A: An excellent booklet on that subject is available from the Securities Transfer Association, P.O. Box 5067, Hazlet, NJ 07730-5067. It's priced at $10 per copy, or three for $25.

Louisiana Tech takes over women's No. 1 spot

Associated Press

A victory over the old No. 1 team made Louisiana Tech the new No. 1 in The Associated Press women's basketball poll Monday.

Louisiana Tech, fourth in the preseason poll last week, shot to the top after beating defending national champion Connecticut 83-81 in overtime in Sunday's Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic at Knoxville, Tenn.

It's the first No. 1 ranking for the Lady Techsters since the final poll of the 1989-90 season. Connecticut, which lost for the first time since the 1994 NCAA tournament, dropped from first to third.

Georgia, which hasn't played yet, remained second and Tennessee climbed two spots to fourth after beating Virginia in the second half of the Tip-Off Classic twinbill. Virginia slipped three places to sixth and Vanderbilt stayed at No. 5.

Louisiana Tech received 26 first-place votes from a national media panel. Georgia was voted No. 1 on seven ballots, Vanderbilt got four votes for first and Connecticut and Tennessee each had one.

In total points, it was Louisiana Tech with 953 and Georgia with 899. Connecticut had 875 points — three more than Tennessee — and Vanderbilt had 860.

Louisiana Tech's climb to No. 1 means there already have been as many changes at the top of the poll — one — as there were all last season. Tennessee was No. 1 in the 1994-95 preseason poll and held that position until losing to Connecticut in mid-January. Connecticut was No. 1 the rest of the way.

At No. 4, Tennessee can try to start a new streak of top five placings. The Lady Vols' No. 6 ranking in the preseason voting ended their string of 80 polls in the top five.

The first three rounds of the Preseason NIT caused some shuffling elsewhere in the poll. Arkansas and Colorado have won three times and will meet in Tuesday night's championship game. Arkansas climbed one spot to ninth and Colorado moved up three places to 11th.

Duke split two NIT games and slipped from 17th to 22nd. Texas A&M, unranked in the preseason, went 2-1 in the tournament and moved into the poll at No. 23. Washington, 25th in the preseason poll, dropped out.

Penn State, the preseason favorite in the Big Ten, was seventh and was followed by Stanford, Arkansas and Purdue.

After Colorado at No. 11 it was Texas Tech, North Carolina State, Kansas, DePaul, Southern Cal, Western Kentucky, Oregon State, Iowa and Mississippi. Completing the Top 25 were Wisconsin, Duke, Texas A&M, North Carolina and Alabama.

Northwestern gives Big Ten trophy plenty of company

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Gary Barnett posed with it, carried it into the lobby and peered around it as it rested beside him on a table. The Big Ten championship trophy was a constant companion Monday.

It's not far-fetched to liken Northwestern's football team — coaches and players alike — to kids with a new toy. They have a championship at last, a title to savor and embrace.

"The only knock on Northwestern was that we weren't winners," injured defensive star Pat Fitzgerald said. "Everybody knew about the academics and that we were near Chicago, and now I think we've proven we've turned the program around.

"It doesn't mean we've started a tradition. You've got to put four or five years together successfully. But I think we've turned the corner."

Now the Wildcats will turn their eyes to television. Many of them will huddle again Saturday to watch Ohio State play at Michigan.

If Ohio State wins, the Buckeyes share the conference title and go to the Rose Bowl, while Northwestern will probably play Tennessee in the Citrus Bowl in Orlando, Fla.

A Michigan upset and the Wildcats head to Pasadena, Calif., to play Southern Cal in the Rose Bowl.

"It's out of our hands, out of our control," Barnett said. "We want to go to the bowl that represents the standard in the Big Ten, the highest accomplishment or achievement and, of course, that is the Rose Bowl. But in no way we do we want to take anything away from the fact that we may get an opportunity to go the Citrus Bowl as well."

Wherever, it will be Northwestern's second-ever bowl appearance and first since the 1949 Rose Bowl.

"I don't think it will be a letdown at all," center Rob Johnson said of not playing in the Rose Bowl should favored Ohio State win. "We stunk before, and it's better to get some attention than no attention. That's what I've been saying all along. We'll be happy to go anywhere that will have us."

There is an even remote possibility that No. 4 Northwestern (10-1) could capture a national championship if it wins a bowl game and No. 1 Nebraska, No. 2 Ohio State and No. 3 Florida lose.

In a recent interview with the Los Angeles Times, Barnett said he was struck by a scene in the film "City Slickers," which he innocently referred to as a dumb movie.

In the overnight mail a short time later came the screenplay of the movie, autographed by its star Billy Crystal.

When Barnett's secretary saw the return address from a motion picture studio, she asked the coach if he was already going Hollywood.

"She said, 'Maybe they are going to do a movie on you,'" Barnett said with a laugh.0

Gator Bowl takes Tigers

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — The Gator Bowl selected Clemson on Monday, choosing the Tigers after getting an OK from college football's bowl alliance.

Bowl chairman Carl Cannon said his group would wait until next week to pick the Tigers' Big East opponent.

The game will be played on New Year's Day in Jacksonville, Fla., and has a minimum payoff of $1.3 million for its participants.

Cannon said the bowl is looking at three Big East teams — co-champions Virginia Tech and Syracuse, and Miami. The Orangemen and Hurricanes play Saturday to end the season and Cannon said the bowl will pick from the three. Even a Miami loss, dropping the Hurricanes to 7-4, would not rule them out despite stronger records from Virginia (9-2) and Syracuse (9-2).

The Tigers, meanwhile, are one of the most successful teams in Gator history. They are 4-2 and have won their last three appearances. Plus, there are all sorts of strange connections swirling around Clemson and the Gator Bowl.

In 1978, Clemson beat Ohio State 17-15, the infamous game where Buckeyes coach Woody Hayes swung a punch at Tigers linebacker Charlie Bauman. It was the last game Hayes coached and the first game coached by Clemson's Danny Ford.

Ford took the Tigers to the national championship in 1981.

Clemson coach Tommy West was an assistant under Ford and coached his last game on that staff in the 1989 Gator Bowl.

West, like Ford, found himself in a bowl game in his first time as Clemson head coach at the 1993 Peach Bowl. But West acknowledged that was just window dressing compared with this selection.

"It's really hard to say how special it is, just going to a bowl game and to play on New Year's Day," West said. "That's it's the Gator makes it more special."

Clemson has won five straight games this season after starting 3-3. Cannon said the Tigers sparkling 24-3 win at Georgia Tech on Oct. 28 was when the selection committee first took the Tigers seriously.

"That game meant the most to us," Cannon said.

The Tigers closed their season with a come-from-behind 38-17 victory against archenemy South Carolina this past Saturday.

The holiday season came early Sunday when Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts from Troop 231 delivered 150 Thanksgiving dinners to needy families in the Midland area.

Part of the third annual 'Food from Friends' campaign, the distribution provided all of the Thanksgiving staples, including a turkey, pumpkin pie and fresh fruits and vegetables.

The food was supplied by Furr's Supermarkets in conjunction with co-sponsors; The Midland Reporter-Telegram, KGEE radio and KWES-TV. Each year Casa de Amigos, The Salvation Army and the United Way provide names and addresses of needy families in the Midland area so that the scouts can deliver the meals.

LEE: Rhoads has game high 29 points

senior point guard Claire Wright hit one of two three-point goals on the night with 12 seconds remaining in the first overtime to tie the score at 83-83 and send it into an incredible second overtime.

Wright said she was a little worried at that point in the game.

"When they jumped out to that big lead I thought, 'Why can't we get some points on the board and win this game,'" Wright said.

Down 43-32 at halftime, the revenge-minded Lady Mustangs outscored the Lady Rebels 19-12 in the third quarter and tied it up for the first time at 62-62 with 3:49 to play in regulation.

But Lee junior Jamie Rhoads, who only scored five points in the first half, took matters into her own hands by scoring 16 points in the second half of regulation as she finished with a game-high 29 points.

"Coach said I needed to start driving and that's what I did," said Rhoads. "But we lost to Midland because of me. I didn't do too much in that game and I felt bad for letting down the team."

Rhoads had eight points in the two overtime periods.

Lee travels to San Angelo Lake View today for a 7:30 p.m. game.

Coronado defeated the Lee junior varsity 61-51 to hand the Lady Rebels (4-1) their first defeat. Ritha Belizaire led Lee with 13 points while Allison Bradshaw and Sarah Luehring put in 12 and 10 respectively. Cassandra Love was the high scorer for the Lee sophomores, who fell 56-21 to Coronado for a 1-3 season record.

MATTINGLY: Yankee to announce retirement

(From 1C)

Mattingly, who will be 35 on April 20, wants to see how he likes retirement. He hit .288 last season with just seven homers and 49 RBIs in 458 at-bats, getting a $4.02 million salary in the final season of a $19.3 million, five-year contract he agreed to in April 1990, about three months before severe back pain struck. He filed for free agency following the World Series.

Mattingly, who came up to the Yankees for good in 1983, has been at times outwardly unhappy about the team and owner George Steinbrenner. Mattingly was an All-Star for six straight years through 1989, but the back pain took much of his power away and he hasn't broken 20 homers or 90 RBIs this decade.

He has a .307 career average, 2,153 hits, 222 homers and 1,099 RBIs.

Strange ending for Big Eight finale

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The Big Eight Conference surely wasn't supposed to end like this.

Nebraska vs. Oklahoma is one of the great rivalries in college football, one that has produced a "Game of the Century" and twice a matchup of the top two teams in the country. The teams have won or shared 32 of the Big Eight's 36 titles.

But few people are expecting a close game when they play Friday in the Big Eight finale. No. 1 Nebraska is rolling toward a third consecutive national championship game, while Oklahoma is simply reeling.

The Sooners (5-4-1, 2-4 Big Eight) have lost three of their last four games and will post their first losing league record in 30 years. Two weeks ago, following a 12-0 home loss to Oklahoma State, Sooner linebacker Broderick Simpson and offensive coordinator Gary Nord reportedly got into a shoving match.

No wonder Nebraska (10-0, 6-0) is favored by 33 1/2 points to stretch its winning streak against Oklahoma to five games, which would be the longest since a six-game run from 1931-36.

The two play again next season when the Big Eight becomes the Big 12. But the annual meetings will end after that, with Oklahoma in the new league's South Division and Nebraska in the North Division.

"I'm a little sad to see it go," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said. "There's been a lot of good games in the conference, and quite a few of them have been with Oklahoma and Nebraska."

Osborne lost his first five games against Oklahoma as a head coach and eight of his first nine. He is 10-13 against Oklahoma, the only Big Eight team with a winning record against the 23-year head coach.

Oklahoma has upset a top-ranked Nebraska team twice before, but has beaten the Huskers only once in the last seven meetings. In its last six games, Oklahoma has scored 39, 24, 17, 13, 10 and zero points.

"What makes it so frustrating is that we had high hopes at the beginning of the season," Sooner tailback Jerald Moore said.

Spurrier loves the subject to turn to Chris Doering

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Steve Spurrier was hemming and hawing his way through another news conference when the subject turned to Chris Doering.

Suddenly, the Florida coach could hardly contain himself, his voice rising into the high-pitched twang that reveals his passionate side.

"He's one of my favorite players to talk about," Spurrier said.

It's not hard to figure out why. Doering has matured from a skinny walk-on who supposedly would never be good enough to play major-college football into one of the top receivers in Florida history.

Saturday, when the third-ranked Gators (10-0) host sixth-ranked Florida State (9-1), Doering will have a chance to take his place as the most proficient touchdown-making receiver in Southeastern Conference history. He has 15 scoring catches this season, equaling the school and conference record held by Jack Jackson, and his 29 career TDs are tied with the mark shared by Jackson and former Auburn star Terry Beasley.

"I was remembering just the other day about the time when his high school coach came over here with a tape of Doering he wanted us to look at," Spurrier recalled. " 'This guy can't play at Florida. He can't play Division I football anywhere."
