Rhodesians elect first black prime minister

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Bishop Abel Muzorewa was elected the first black prime minister of Rhodesia today as his party easily swept 51 out of 72 black seats in parliamentary elections.

The United African National Council, led by the 54-year-old Methodist bishop, captured more than four times as many parliamentary seats as any of his black opponents.

Muzorewa will form the first black-majority government in Rhodesia after nine decades of exclusive rule by the white minority.

With final results in, the 51 seats of Muzorewa's party were followed by 12 seats for the Rev. Ndabaingi Sithole's Zimbabwe African National Union and nine seats for Chief Kayisa Ndiweni's United National Federal Party, which champions the minority Ndebele tribe.

Chief Jeremiah Chirau, the fourth partner with Prime Minister Ian Smith, Muzorewa and Sithole in the year-old bi-racial transitional government, failed to win a single seat.

The uneasy alliance of the three moderate black leaders collapsed under the pressure of election reverses. Sithole charged "gross irregularities" and demanded an investigation.

The other 28 seats in parliament were won by Smith's Rhodesian Front Party in an election two weeks ago. The 28 seats and a quarter of Cabinet posts are reserved for the white minority under a constitution that also leaves the whites in control of the police, military, judiciary and civil service for at least five years.

Smith, who has been prime minister for the last 15 years, will take a parliamentary seat as leader of the white minority.

Sithole on Monday declared that the five-day election last week expressed the "will of 2 million people." But a few hours later, after first unofficial returns put his party in third place in both Salisbury and the second largest city of Bulawayo, Sithole accused the Internal Affairs Ministry of "stage-managing" the voting. He said his party will not consider the results "the verdict of the people" until his charges were investigated.

He said he had reports "from black and white farmers, black teachers and civil servants" that the department "instructed people what party to vote for at polling booths."

"It is high time Mr. Sithole accepted defeat gracefully," said Muzorewa's campaign director, Ayoub Kara.

"The elections are over and that's it," said Chirau.

The returns bore out predictions of observers before and during the election that Muzorewa's party would come in first and he would become prime minister. But Sithole predicted last week that his faction would get 50 of the 72 black seats in the new Parliament, Rhodesia's first with a black majority.

The other 28 seats reserved for whites were won by Prime Minister Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front in an election two weeks ago.

Sithole's charge was certain to be seized on by guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

Tax on residential use of gas, power retained by 3-2 vote

By JAMES WERRELL

Although two councilmen voted against it, a resolution to retain a local tax on residential use of gas and electricity passed anyway during today's regular meeting of the City Council.

This was the second and final reading of the resolution, and, as during the first reading, Councilmen Bill Henkel and Larry Miller voted against it. Members Polly Mays, Ralph McLaughlin and Wade Choate carried the motion with "aye" votes.

As in the past, one percent of local utility bills will be retained by the city as revenue.

The council also sanctioned $784 for the purchase of tools and equipment for local arson investigation. The money will be used to buy a hydrocarbon detector, a phone recorder, advertising flyers and film to be used at the scene of fires by the Big Spring Arson Control Center.

A mobile radio already owned by the city will also be turned over to the center.

In addition, the city will study the amount of color film processing done by the Big Spring Police and Fire Departments. If it is found to be economically feasible, the city will also purchase a color film processor for use by both departments.

As the discussion about arson in the city progressed, Councilman Ralph McLaughlin rallied support among his fellow members for a reward to be provided by the city for the arrest and conviction of arsonists. As proposed by McLaughlin, the city will provide a $2,500 reward to be administered by a committee appointed by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

The committee will include at least one council member.

Following objections from Omar Jones, local contractor, the council decided to revise the proposed ordinance concerning peddlers and solicitors in the city.

"This ordinance seems discriminatory in some respects. I get rent from lots that are used by some of these people, and two of them live here in Big Spring," said Jones. "I wish the council would reconsider."

Council members decided to delay final consideration on the ordinance until it could be reassessed. Fines and daily charges for itinerant merchants may be lowered.

No residents appeared to object to the second reading of a zone change for 21.4 acres of land along Wasson Road, and the change was finalized. The tract runs from the Jet Drive-in Theatre to Parkway Road, and is now zoned Retail.

Councilman Miller voted against the proposal.

The purchase of a carbon monoxide indicator for the Fire Department was also approved.

"A number of firemen in Lubbock died because there was carbon monoxide in their air bottles. We (the city) charge our own bottles, and the same thing could happen here," said Nagel.

The detector will be located permanently between the city's air compressor and the oxygen bottles used by local firefighters. Total cost will be $1,030.

The council also authorized the redrafting of ordinances concerning code enforcement in the city.

"This will permit the staff to rework questionable areas of some ordinances. We will seek some workable solutions to problems especially in the animal code," said Bill Brown, assistant city manager.

The changes in the ordinances will be submitted for approval by the council at a later date.

In other business, council members:

—Approved the second and final reading of a resolution authorizing Mayor Choate to enter into contract with Roy Crim to do engineering defign for street improvements under the 1979 Community Development Program.

—Sold a 10-foot-long portion of an alley at 1706 Austin to Irma Lee Harris Daniel for 25 cents a square foot.

—Authorized the mayor to execute a quit claim deed for another portion of a city alley to the Church of the Nazarene.

—Accepted minutes of meetings of the City Council, the Detox Steering Committee and the Parks and Recreation Board.

—Authorized the sale of scrap lumber owned by the city at an auction to be held near the end of May.

During his City Manager's Report, Nagel announced that the cleanup of the site where golf cart sheds at the Municipal Course burned down would begin early Wednesday morning. The bid opening for construction of new sheds will take place on May 3.

Nagel will travel to Austin, Thursday, to discuss state funding of a school for the deaf here with Rep. Charles Stenholm (D-Texas). Nagel will be accompanied by State Sen. Ray Farabee and State Rep. Mike Ezzell.

'Record high profits' denied

Clements disappoints local savings and loans executives

By EILEEN McGUIRE

Executives of Texas savings and loans institutions who supported Bill Clements in his campaign for governor were dealt a hard blow last week when he rejected legislation calling for an increase in home interest rates and pledged to veto any such legislation that reaches his desk.

The Savings and Loan League has been lobbying to either adjust or do away with a usury law in Texas that imposes a ceiling of 10 percent on the amount of interest that lenders may charge on home mortgages.

Savings and loans executives in Texas say they can't afford to extend home mortgages at the current interest rate because it is unprofitable.

Ray Don Williams, president of the Big Spring Savings Association, expressed disappointment in the governor's decision.

After rejecting the legislation, Clements told a news conference "Savings and loan institutions are reporting record high profits and it takes a certain amount of audacity on their part to come to the Legislature to ask for more money at a time when the average Texan is fighting to keep his head above water financially."

Those "record high profits" that the governor referred to, says Williams, were made in 1977.

"He quoted statistics from 1977 in that statement," Williams said. "He used the figures completely out of text. Profits were high in 1977, but 1978 was different and 1979 is worse.

"The Money Market Certificates (MMC's) didn't even go into effect until June, 1978, and they are what's caused the big concern."

The MMC's are short-term six-month certificates that pay investors a high interest rate of 9.65 percent at the present.

The savings and loans institutions reinvest certificate funds in home mortgages that can, by law, yield no more than a 10 percent interest payback in Texas.

The interest paid out on MMC's, Williams said, is geared to the rate of interest, recently increased, on the U.S. Treasury bill. As the rate of interest paid on MMC's goes up, so must the rate of interest on home mortgage loans, says Williams.

"Any good business man can see that you can't pay an interest rate of 9.65 percent and then loan it at 10 percent and make any kind of a profit," he said.

Charles Beil, president of First Federal Savings and Loan in Big Spring, said he was "disappointed and surprised" at Clement's reaction to the proposed increase. He supported Clements in the 1978 election.

"Many of us did individually," he said, referring to other savings and loan officials. "I thought he was an astute businessman."

Of Clements rejection of the proposed increase in interest rates, Beil said "I think without question that it was strictly a political vote — he was more concerned with his own political aspirations than he was with homebuyers."

Beil pointed out that it was not the lending institutions who will be hurt, but the homebuyers who will not have loans made available to them and the savers whose money is invested in homes by the institutions.

"Savings and loans don't finance homes; the savers finance the homes. All we do is make the loans," said Beil. "We have 8,000 depositors here who should and do demand a higher savings rate."

He said that in order to return a reasonable amount of interest to depositors on their savings, a mortgage interest rate in excess of the current 10 percent had to be charged.

In the Sunday issue of the Herald, First Federal announced that it is now charging homeowners who sell their homes a 4 percent seller discount point at the closing of the sale.

The fee, previously avoided by First Federal, is now necessary, said vice president W.A. "Dub" Moore, "due to the cost of funds to us and the lack of available money for loans."

Beil said that the measure was a result of the imposed 10 percent ceiling rate. He said that the only way to reduce points is to increase the return of interest.

"The government recently increased FHA and VA home loan interest rates from 9.5 to 10 percent in order to reduce points from 7 to 3 percent," he pointed out.

The interest hike on FHA and VA loans was raised to the record 10 percent Friday by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The department said the hike was necessary in order to bring the interest rate into line with other competitive rates in the mortgage and financial markets.

HUD said that the interest charged on FHA- and VA-insured loans is still less than conventional loans which are currently made at 10.5 percent interest. In Texas, however, interest rates charged on FHA and VA-insured mortgages now equal that charged on conventional mortgages.

Clement's refusal to increase conventional interest rates in Texas will most certainly have an impact on the state's real estate market, according to both Beil and Williams.

Since the 10 percent ceiling applies only to mortgage loans on single family dwellings, fewer home mortgages loans are anticipated. Commercial loans can be made at up to 18 percent interest.

Williams said that Big Spring Savings Association is already loaning out 50 percent fewer home mortgages than it did in 1977 and 1978.

He said he believes that since Texas is one of only four or five states who still have a usury law, enough pressure may be put on Clements by savings and loans institutions to call a special session of the Legislature.

Clements had said Friday that he would watch the situation closely and would call a special session if indicators pointed to a crisis in Texas.

Williams says that it's only a matter of time.

"I do see a crisis brewing," he said. "If people can't get financing for homes, thousands of people connected to the real estate market are going to be out of jobs."

Beil maintains that the usury law in Texas is unnecessary as the money market, not savings and loan institutions, determine interest rates.

"The same principal that applied in deregulating oil applies here," he said. "The ceiling is unnecessary and arbitrary.

"He (Clements) was in favor of eliminating it in his business," Beil said of the wealthy Texas oilman.

Clements said Friday that a recent poll, paid for with Texas Republican funds, had revealed that 85 to 90 percent of Texans were against any increase on home interest rates.

Bishop of San Angelo resigns due to illness

SAN ANGELO — Pope John Paul II announced today the acceptance of the resignation of the Most Rev. Stephen A. Leven, bishop of San Angelo, because of ill health.

Bishop Leven has headed the vast 42,000-square mile diocese of San Angelo for nearly ten years. He is the third bishop to head the large West Texas diocese. He succeeded Bishop Thomas Tschoepe, now bishop of Dallas, and Bishop Thomas Drury, who was the first bishop of the San Angelo diocese, formed in October 1961.

Bishop Drury is now head of the Corpus Christi diocese.

Bishop Leven's resignation follows the illness he incurred when he underwent open heart surgery in December of last year at which time six bypasses were placed in his heart. He has been recuperating since that time.

The new bishop of the Diocese of San Angelo has not been named. Normally the new bishop of a diocese is not selected immediately.

Until a new bishop is named, the administration of the Diocese of San Angelo will be handled by administrators elected by the Consultors of the Diocese. The Consultors are to meet Wednesday.

Bishop Leven plans for the future are to serve as chaplain at Blackwell General Hospital in Blackwell, Okla. The Blackwell General Hospital is staffed by the Sisters of St. Joseph at Wichita, Kansas. Bishop Levin's sister, Rosa, has been a member of that congregation for the past 53 years.

Blackwell, Okla., is the town of his former parish where he was born, baptized and received his first holy communion and later became pastor. Leven is 74.

Rhodesian refugees finding fewer hosts

EDITOR'S NOTE: AP Special Correspondents Peter Arnett and Eddie Adams, a prizewinning reporter-photographer team, traveled 45,000 miles over four continents to document the plight of the world's 10.5 million refugees. In this series of stories they tell the story of the despairing people of the Fourth World, unwelcome where they are, unwanted where they want to go.

GABERONE, Botswana (AP) — They are camped here by the thousands in thatched kraals and crude wooden shacks, students who slipped out of the Soweto slums to the south or black nationalists who fled from Rhodesia to the north.

These 20,000 refugees, like most of the 10.5 million others on the run around the world, are generally resented by the local tribesmen. hey are greeted by a cold shoulder, if not open hostility, in this small and uneasy country neighboring South Africa.

The stateless. An Associated Press writer-photographer team found them on four continents.

RHODESIAN REFUGEE — The face of a Rhodesian refugee, one of thousands seeking sanctuary from disaster, oppression, famine and war.

These are the obvious losers, barred from settling in a new country for reasons of health, morals or political bent.

But it is not just this type of displaced person who has been unable to find a place to settle. As the number of refugees grows, they are finding fewer hosts.

It rankles the natives here in Botswana that the strangers live in comparatively comfortable camps, eating meat, vegetables and ground corn provided by the United Nations, warming themselves under U.N. blankets at night.

While the U.N. spent $9 million last year to feed and clothe the refugees in the three camps near the northern city of Francistown, only about 80,000 of Botswana's 600,000 inhabitants are employed. Hunger is rampant in a country rich in diamonds and beef.

The United Nations High Commission for Refugees is attempting to protect the rights of refugees at a time when more are on the move than at any time this century, except during the two World Wars.

And the United States, which will spend $570 million this year for refugee assistance, is opening its doors wider as the pressure increases.

The U.N. defines a refugee as "anyone outside his own country unable or unwilling to return because of persecution, or of a well founded fear of it, on account of his race, nationality or political opinion."

That catch-all definition apparently applies to the young men in two of the Botswana camps, mostly black Rhodesians waiting impatiently to join the ZAPU guerrillas forces of Joshua Nkomo in neighboring Zambia.

The U.N. officially regards all the men as refugees, but also tries to move them on to Zambia quickly on irregular chartered flights to protect Botswana's delicate political balance.

Not all of Botswana's refugees are revolutionaries looking for a fight. A third camp, Dukwi, is populated by 4,500 young women and girls and 1,700 boys.

Hundreds are students who slipped out of the black Johannesburg suburb of Soweto because they heard that many scholarships to colleges in the U.S. and other western countries are available.

"Only two or three out of every hundred students would qualify as genuine refugees," commented one U.S. official. "But if they didn't qualify before they arrive, they do afterwards because in the eyes of their government they have seriously violated the law by illegally fleeing."

But for every refugee with a specific college in mind or a revolutionary cause to follow, there are thousands who simply ask sanctuary.

Poul Hartling, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, says, "This office stands for the rights of the refugee, the right above all to humane treatment and dignity."

U.N. refugee officials helped convince other countries in Southeast Asia to allow Vietnamese "boat people" to land on their shores. They rushed to assist those aboard three large refugee ships that pulled into the Philippines, Hong Kong and Malaysia.

Even though the Soviet Bloc was hostile to the organization for years, and still withholds financing, U.N. refugee officials are helping the Vietnamese government support 150,000 Cambodians who fled from the Pol Pot government. On the other hand, the U.N. is also helping followers of the Pol Pot regime who fled into Thailand after Vietnam invaded Cambodia.

With all the work by the U.N. and other organizations, the ideal solution to the refugee problem is for the refugees to return home.

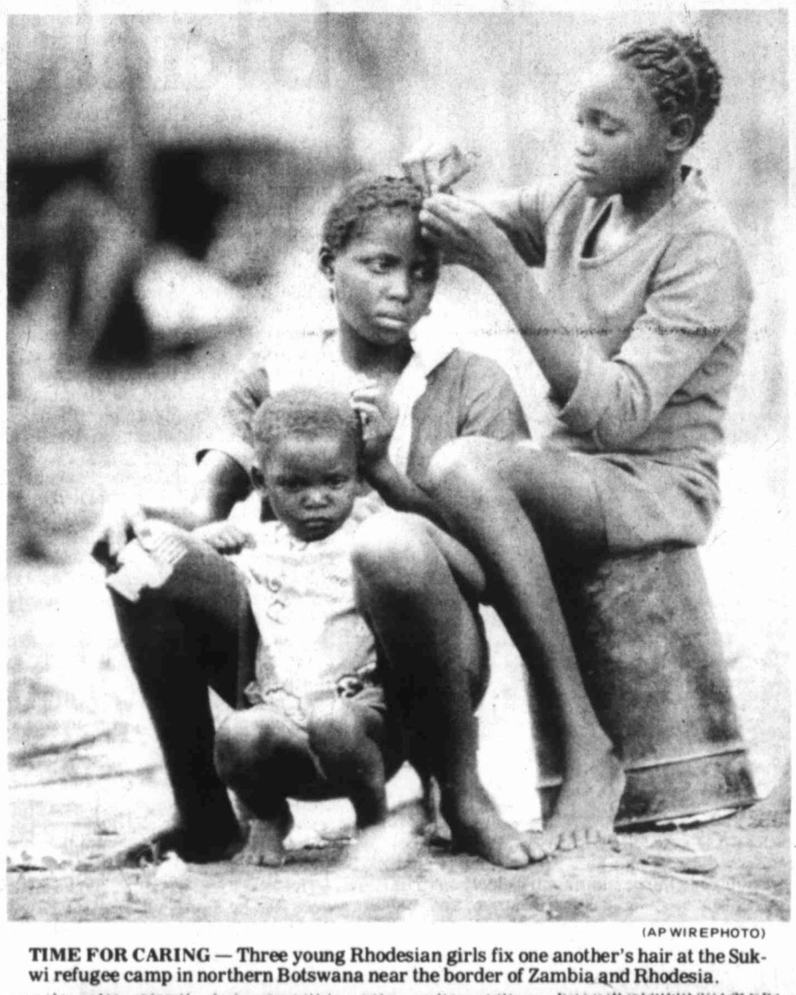

And that is happening in Bangladesh, where 200,000 Moslems who fled from neighboring Burma are going back, largely because of the Bangladesh government's indifference to their plight. At least 10,000 died of disease in the Bangladesh camps in a few months.

But few of the scores of thousands fleeing Indochina ever intend to go back. Their sights are set on the United States.

The hundreds of thousands of exiled black Rhodesians may have to wait years until they can return. So it is with the million who have fled Ethiopia. They are demanding political changes that are unlikely to come soon.

At the same time, some host countries are having second thoughts as the refugee populations grow and problems continue to mount.

'Up with People' viewed as chance to spread joy

Carolyn Merrow, a violinist from Ridgecrest, Calif., has joined two other members of a team doing advance work for the May 8 "Up With People" performance, which will be held in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum here.

Greeting her here were Mark Kenney and Karen Isaak, who arrived here last week.

Carolyn said the performance is a chance for her to spread some joy into people's lives.

"I personally like to do the assemblies in the schools and nursing homes," she said. Carolyn will attempt to setup some assemblies in Big Spring nursing homes.

People in nursing homes especially appreciate the concerts, she said, because they don't have the option of coming out to the paid performances.

"I really saw this at a nursing home in Tucson for terminally ill cancer patients. One lady I talked to just kept saying, 'I wish y'all were here every day.'"

"I guess if you see a lot of happy kids, you'll be happy, too."

Kids in the tour each get a chance to do promotion. Monday was Carolyn's first day as a promoter. "Sometimes you sit in the audience with the sponsor when you are in promotion," she said. "I kind of want to see it from the audience."

From Big Spring the group will go to Argentina for the first "Up With People" performance ever in that country. "We're all pretty excited about it," she said. The performance entails relearning and rehearsing all the music in Spanish. The entourage went to Mexico from mid-September to mid-November.

Carolyn said during their trip to Mexico they were treated more like celebrities than in the United States. "It's hard to get back on to the stage after the intermission. They sort of mob you," she said.

Carolyn joined the tour in July after graduating from high school in California. She had planned to go right into college but her brother encouraged her to interview with the group after a performance in their town.

When she was accepted, she talked to her parents and they advised her to go with the group for a year.

She was impressed with the group because in their interviews they don't audition applicants for singing or dancing. The choices are made solely on personal interviews.

The group spends five weeks in Tucson before the tour starts learning the show.

She said the performers may not do the same roles two performances in a row.

"Everyone changes round. You don't know until the rehearsal the day of the performance which one you do." It keeps the performances from being monotonous for the performers. Carolyn plays violin on three selections.

She is interested in learning more "fiddle" music so she can later play for fun in Blue Grass Festivals. She was excited to learn that a man in Big Spring was a very talented fiddler.

"You meet people who are good contacts for the rest of your life," she said.

The year will make Carolyn's college experience more important, she said. 'Up With People' gave her direction and ideas of what she wants to do the rest of her life. Her college education will provide material to build on the framework she is getting from 'Up With People.'

Fitzgerald is ACG keynoter

Ray V. Fitzgerald, administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Washington, D.C., will keynote the annual meeting of American Cotton Growers (ACG) Thursday, May 3, at 2:30 p.m. in the board room of Farmers Cooperative Compress, 3800 Southeast Drive, Lubbock.

ACG is the farmer cooperative whose 3,000 members own and operate the world reknown denim mill at Littlefield, Texas, that manufactures over 20-million linear yards of heavyweight, indigo-dyed, finished denim annually. The cooperative's principal customer is Levi Strauss & Co.

Fitzgerald is head of the government agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture that administers federal programs covering various commodities including cotton.

L.C. Unfred of New Home, Texas, president of the ACG board of directors, commented, "We are fortunate to have Mr. Fitzgerald as a keynote speaker. Although this is a busy time for our members, we hope they will make a special effort to attend and hear his important comments."

The cooperative is in the midst of its most successful financial year. Members recently received over $3¼-million in cash payouts as progress payments covering the past two seasons. To date, members have already received 9-cents per pound above the CCC loan values on the 1978 crop. Additional cash payments on the 1978 crop are anticipated in the future.

Police chief in Childress calls for 10 p.m. curfew

CHILDRESS — Alvis (Tuffy) Maddox, police chief here, is calling for a 10 p.m., nightly youth curfew in the wake of recent vandalism, which he said was the worst in the history of the city.

Such an edict would have to come from the city council.

Multiple incidents of rock-throwing have occurred in recent days in Childress. Police estimate that damage resulting from rocks thrown last Friday night could run as high as $4,000.

Every section of the city reported vandalism, according to Maddox. Police were busiest answering calls between the hours of 11 a.m., Friday and 1 a.m., Saturday.

The curfew would apply for persons under 21 years of age.

Winners often turn out as losers

There's no way of knowing what Uganda's ultimate fate will be. The only thing that is certain is that Idi Amin is gone and, from all indications, won't be back.

The Amin forces may drag out the skirmishing with guerrilla action but Idi has lost the war he provoked last October. So much for the self-styled "Conqueror of the British Empire."

AN INVADING force from neighboring Tanzania proved to be too much for the Ugandans. One might have suspected the Ugandans had more bluster than fire power several years ago when an Israeli commando force swept down upon Entebbe to rescue a stranded group of Israelis, doing it with such dispatch that Amin was left stuttering, vowing vengeance which the whole world knew he couldn't deliver.

What befell Amin couldn't have happened to a more deserving tyrant. It's understandable why the free world is savoring the turn of events.

The world, however, has some cause for shivering over what might happen to Uganda. That part of Africa is ripe for exploitation and before the nation can establish a sense of stability again the opportunists can move in. The Communists, for instance, know a good thing when they see it and quite likely have dispatched some of their best agents into the area.

It would have been better for Uganda to fall to forces from within its borders. The invasion by the Tanzanians, executed so well, sets a precedent for others to follow on a continent where change has become the rule rather than the exception.

Those nations with weak bases have great cause for concern.

UGANDA'S FUTURE could also become as much of a problem as its recent past. The return of former President Milton Obote, who hit the road when Amin pulled his successful coup in 1971, would not meet with universal approval. For one, the nation of Kenya has made it clear that, given the unfortunate choice, it would prefer Amin to Obote.

Uganda's economy has long been hurting. Many buyers refuse to buy its coffee, with the result that it is forced to barter. Tanzania, let it be added, isn't much better off.

The price of arms doesn't come cheap and Tanzania reportedly has been spending close to a million dollars a day to keep its troops in Uganda — and this is a country heavily dependent upon foreign aid for economic necessities.

The situation is another case where a nation could emerge as a conqueror in battle, yet wind up as a loser in the peace that follows. It has happened before.

What am I thinking?

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, voting 6-3, ruled last week that public figures suing for libel may inquire into a journalist's "state of mind," and the editorial process behind the allegedly libelous statement. In other words, from now on a reporter will not only be responsible for what appears in print or on the airwaves but also for what he was thinking at the time. Justice Byron White wrote the majority decision, and was joined by Chief Justice Warren Burger, and Justices Harry Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell, William Rehnquist, and John Paul Stevens.

Opposed were Justices William Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall and Potter Stewart.

I NATURALLY WILL go along with the law of the land. As a matter of fact I might as well start practicing now by revealing what my thoughts are as I write this article.

My first thought is that as far as the press is concerned the score of this Supreme Court opinion should read, "Chilling Effect 6, First Amendment 0."

The second thought I have is the decision doesn't surprise me. Ever since the Nixon Court came into being, the First Amendment has been clobbered by the anti-press majority.

Now I am thinking if I can get this piece finished by 12:30 I can get a good lunch and a nice bottle of wine. I wonder if I can find some lady to join me?

My thoughts have just gone back to the Supreme Court. I am thinking that Byron White was the worst appointment John F. Kennedy ever made while he was President. Everyone had great faith in White, mainly because as a college All-American he had played football with a helmet.

I AM NOW thinking anything Justice Rehnquist rules doesn't surprise me. I don't even like his haircut.

Chief Justice Burger is another problem. We know he has a phobia about cameras and recording devices. He also hasn't hidden his feelings about how much he dislikes the press. If Burger had his way we wouldn't even be allowed in the Supreme Court.

Obviously I would never say these things about the most distinguished members of the bench in this land, but since their ruling I have to tell the truth about exactly what is on my mind or face a contempt citation.

I am now thinking about having a chocolate souffle for lunch. The thought just came to me as I wrote that last sentence. If this decision is for real, and obviously it is, why should I try to lose weight? The fact that most Americans will probably agree with the decision depresses me more than the Supreme Court ruling itself.

I just had another thought. Justices Brennan, Marshall and Stewart have the best legal minds on the court and are great Americans. If my daughter gets appointed to the Supreme Court, I hope she will use the three of them as her role models.

I HAVE BEEN interrupted by another thought. It came to me because the justices wear black robes. My wife asked me to stop by the dry cleaners and pick up her black evening dress.

Where am I? Oh, yes. What is my state of mind at this moment? It isn't bad considering the latest threat to a free press. I certainly bear no malice toward anyone on the court. As a matter of fact, it's amazing how not one malicious thought has gone through my head during the past hour. Maybe it's because if I had any bad thoughts I would be sued.

Big Spring Herald — Mailbag

Dear Editor:

I think it is important that voters of Big Spring stop and think about some of the pure political comments made by Candidate Massey which imply things that have no basis of fact. Mr. Massey is a realtive newcomer to Big Spring since he said at the Open Forum at Howard College that he had only resided here between three and four years.

When called upon by the Moderator to relate what he thought was the most important thing facing the City Council he said, "Deficit Spending." The facts are that the Constitution of the State of Texas prohibits deficit spending. In the auditors' report to the City Council delivered by an independent firm of C.P.A.'s the record clearly showed the City not in debt but had cash in the bank. It did reveal, which is quite common in any budget, that budgeted funds had been transferred from one department to another at various times. One who has any knowledge of budget operations knows it is impossible to project accurately the exact expenditures a year in advance for each department; this is true in all segments of government, be it City, County, or State, and therefore funds are permissibly transferred from one department to another.

Further lack of knowledge showed when Massey made the positive statement that "Other cities are providing facilities to give good tasting water with problems such as ours and some are experimenting." The truth is there has been found no solution to treat water such as we have and make it good tasting. Odessa is experimenting but at a great expense. The U.S. Government built pilot desalinization plants at various points at a cost of millions of dollars and abandoned them as cost prohibitive; one was located in nearby eastern New Mexico.

In a news release a few weeks ago Mr. Massey accused the City Administration of withholding information from property owners as to where the new proposed I-27 would be built. He demanded that information be released so property owners could secure adequate compensation for right of way needed for the hi-way. Mr. Massey admitted this at the Forum and said that Lubbock knew where it was to be built. The truth of the matter is that all that is known is that it will originate at Lubbock and intersect IS 10 at some point. No one yet knows the route.

Mr. Massey raised the question in a news release a few weeks ago about the former Webb AFB Hospital. He said, "Why has something not been done about utilizing this valuable facility?" Again Mr. Massey, even though relatively new to Big Spring, has not even been alert as to what has been done about this facility. Any fair minded person knows how hard the City tried to get the Texas Tech extension of their Medical School located here, but, in spite of the hard work and effort, the regents of Tech voted to locate it in Odessa. Further, in that regard, Dr. P.W. Malone and the Industrial Foundation tried to get M.D. Anderson Cancer Foundation to locate an extension at the Webb Hospital, but to date they have met with no success.

When all City Candidates were asked as to what their opinion was about the Industrial Park, Mr. Massey said he thought it was a liability to the City. Does Mr. Massey want to close this facility and do away with the 350 plus jobs that have been provided by new industry locating there?

When the Moderator at the Forum asked what the candidates thought about property tax reevaluation, Mr. Massey had no comment. He had earlier said that the City had a number of E.M.S. qualified employees in the police and fire departments and they should staff and operate the ambulance service. He did not have enough forethought to consider the facts that purchase of vehicles would be required and additional employees added to the departments from which he would take those to operte the ambulances. It has been 21 years since property taxes have been reevaluated and every appraiser hired to appraise property since then has had to use 1958 values. They all tell us that some parts of the City are depressed and overvalued in today's market while other areas are under-appraised and are in neighborhoods enhanced since 1958. Where elsé are you able to purchase services at 1958 values except Big Spring? Mr. Massey says city employees are underpaid, which is true, but based on a 1958 tax evaluation, what can be expected?

All in all the City Council and Administration have done miracles with the funds they have with which to operate. The City has been asked to advice from other communities as to how they were able to accomplish the great conversion of Webb to a productive facility in such a short time and has been recognized as having done a great job by people everywhere except a few disgruntled would-be politicians here in our own City. We do not need Mr. Massey or his kind in office. He has indictated by this action he is definitely not qualified for the job and knows very little about what has been happening.

In passing, the laws of Texas at one time prohibited people employed by a tax supported institution such as that employing Mr. Massey to hold public office. I am advised by competent judicial authority that such law has since been modified to the extent that they can hold office providing they receive no pay. Since Mr. Massey is in this category and compensation of $25 per meeting is provided and other monies for attending municipal functions, what does Mr. Massey plan on doing to comply with the law if elected?

To resolve these problems and preserve the growth at the Industrial Park we need to elect a long time resident who is knowledgeable about the needs of our City and elect Polly Mays Saturday, April 28.

D. A. Brazel
2617 Crestline

Dear Editor:

Friday's edition of the Herald carried a paid political advertisement by Polly Mays, incumbent candidate for City Council in the upcoming runoff election next Saturday, April 28, which set out assets and liabilities of the City as of the year ending September 30, 1978, under the heading "The City of Big Spring is Not Broke," which figures were not only misleading but totally incorrect.

After such paid ad appeared, Mr. John Massey, the challening candidate for such seat on the City Council, made statements which appeared in the Sunday edition of the Herald. He stated in effect that Mrs. Mays must have gotten her figures from someone other than the auditors or the official audit, and that the City Secretary had advised him the figures used in such ad were actually figures concerning the city's financial status as of the early part of April, 1979 — and not those of the audit for the year ending 9-30-78.

Pursuant to Mr. Massey's statement, Mrs. Mays issued a public statement, aired by atl east one local radio station, that Mr. Massey was merely stating the same thing I, Jack Watkins, had been talking about for two weeks, and that the same was not correct.

I take issue with Mrs. Mays' statement, and can only assume she has still not looked at the official audit, because if she had merely looked on pages 11, 12, 13, 14, 26, and 28, she would have been able to determine that none of the figures she quoted were correct.

As an example, she stated we had cash assets of $205,340 and investments of $703,959. A look at pages 26-28 of the audit shows such figures were actually $237,910 and $498,043 — of which only $47,286 are actually expendable funds. The balance of such cash and investments are restricted funds, such as customer water deposit funds, cemetery permanent care fund, trust agency accounts, debt service, and restricted revenue sharing funds.

Mrs. Mays was correct in her statement that I had been talking about the City's financial condition. But apparently no one has yet heard what I was saying, nor bothered to check the audit for themselves. I stated, and still state, that the City has more liabilities that must be paid now, than money to pay them with, and is in serious financial trouble.

Other than the fact that the City is a governmental body, and can put the bite on the citizens and taxpayers in various ways for more money, the city's financial condition could be compared to an individual who had $47,280.00 and had current accounts payable of $293,035.

A copy of the city audit is on file with the City Secretary, and anyone interested can go down and look over the aduit and easily ascertain Mrs. Mays' figures did not come from such audit, and do not tell the true story of the city's financial condition. I would strongly encourage interested citizens to go to City Hall and look for themselves.

Stevenson remains political mystery

Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, (D-Ill.), tried to clarify his plans recently but only added to his aura of mystery.

He announced he would not seek re-election in 1980. Then he added he would deliberate a long time about his political plans for the future.

One who cared

Around the rim

Marie Homever

The day her husband died from crippling arthritis her life became centered around her young son and her work.

Her work was teaching journalism to students at Navasota High School. Her name is Mrs. Peggy Crittenden — P. Crit to her friends — and she is the reason that I am a journalist today.

P. Crit had become almost a permanent fixture at the high school by the time I arrived on the scene, having taught there for 13 years.

In addition to teaching two journalism classes, she taught health, was a physical education teacher for a time, was the advisor to the school paper and yearbook, was the coach for the debate team, and, for a while, the tennis coach.

INSPITE OF HER busy schedule, she always had time to help her students with their work and sometimes with their problems. Her students were individuals with individual problems, not just another face in a crowded room of students that had to be taught. She really cared about her students. She became so involved with her work that she drove herself into a hospital bed the summer before my senior year.

P. Crit offended some of the students because of her quick temper. But her temper flared only when she realized that one of her students was not doing the work she knew they were capable of doing. "I only get mad at you because I want you to do better, not because I don't like you," she once told me after one of her tirades was directed at me.

I knew she meant what she said. Ten minutes later she would calm down and be the same understanding, helpful person she always was. And, she was always as quick with a word of encouragement and praise. She let you know when you lived up to your potential.

When I was a junior and just starting in her class, she realized the need for coverage of the freshmen and junior varsity football teams in the community paper. Instead of just complaining about it, she went to the publisher of the paper and offered a suggestion that he accepted — a couple of her students would write up the games for the paper and, since the publisher could not afford to pay them, they would get their bylines on every story.

I was one of those students. I rode with P. Crit to every game that was played that season. It was during those trips that I came to respect her as the person she was.

IT WAS DURING my senior year in high school that I made the decision to major in journalism in college. P. Crit was the reason. She never said a word to me about pursuing my interest in the field, never pushed me in either direction when I was making my decision. She would never do that. (She let one of her best editors become a mortician rather than push him into becoming a journalist.) But the time that she spent with me, instructing me and advising me as the editor of the school yearbook and as the sports editor of the school paper, was the influence that steered me toward journalism as a career.

When I told her about my decision, she was very pleased and helped me in every way that she could.

The year that I entered college, P. Crit left the halls of Navasota High School to become the journalism instructor at A&M Consolidated High School in College Station. One year later, she was the public relations director for the A&M Consolidated Independent School District, the title which she still holds.

Even in college she was still helping me. I had to do a story on the crowded conditions in the athletic facilities at the high school there and she was there to supply me with the additional information and pictures that I needed to complete my article.

And, when I was home at Christmas, she had instructed my older brother to tell me to get in touch with her. After five years, she still was interested in me as a person and in my new career in "the real world."

Facing ruin

WASHINGTON — Gross mismanagement and negligence by the National Archives brass are destroying vital parts of our American heritage. Priceless documents and films that record the history of the United States back to George Washington's time are slowly crumbling into dust or otherwise deteriorating beyond repair in the Archives' vaults.

Sources within the Archives tell us that even the expenditure of millions of dollars cannot retrieve hundreds of thousands of treaties, letters, public documents and one-of-a-kind film negatives.

The gradual destruction of our written and graphic history is one of the most closely hushed-up secrets in Washington. We discovered the situation while investigating last year's disastrous fire at the Archives' storage facility in Suitland, Md.

HALF THE ARCHIVES' film collection — 26 million feet — went up in flames. Lost forever were such documentaries as the "March of Time" films of the 1930s and a unique filmed history of the Japanese invasion of Manchuria.

The problems at Archives have a common cause: refusal of the agency's management to heed repeated warnings from experts that poor storage and negligent supervision will inevitably destroy much of the material entrusted to the Archives' care.

Here are some of the shocking conditions we discovered:

Colonial papers, including about 250,000 pages of Continental Congress documents and original letters of Washington, John Adams and Benjamin Franklin, have never been treated to neutralize the acid in the paper that is slowly eating them away. Many of these historic documents lie scattered on the floor, unbound; others have been stored improperly for so long that archivists fear they'll crumble to dust if the files are opened.

All the Indian treaties remain rolled up, instead of being flattened out as official preservation procedures dictate. Most of the treaties have not been microfilmed against the day when they will eventually disintegrate.

Records of the General Accounting Office, tied together with string, are in such deplorable condition that they're barely usable anymore. The Interstate Commerce Commission's records are in a similarly pitiable state of decay.

Priceless documents have been mutilated, stolen or simply have disappeared. For example, what may be the only original document in this country bearing Karl Marx's signature is missing. This was a manifesto from the Communist International, congratulating Abraham Lincoln on his re-election in 1864. Numerous wartime telegrams of Lincoln's also have been lost or stolen.

Spontaneously combustile nitrate film continues to be stored in corridors, despite repeated warnings by experts in fire prevention. Some of the nitrate film, in fact, was being stored in a fifth-floor vault at the main Archives building in downtown Washington, directly behind the projection booth of the 300-seat movie theater, endangering the lives of audiences at the regular film showings.

"At one time that film was cooking," an insider told us. "The temperature in the corridor was in the 90s." Nitrate film, we were told, can blow up in adverse humidity conditions when temperatures reach the 80s.

The fire hazard of nitrate film has been known for years in the movie industry, but Archives was curiously indifferent to the danger posed by its vast accumulation of old films. In 1969 an internal report warned of the self-igniting potential of the material and urged management to undertake a crash program to copy the nitrate film on a safer chemical base.

The warning was ignored, and in 1977 and 1978 spontaneous combustion caused millions of feet of historic films to be destroyed.

Following the 1977 fire, an internal safety committee made numerous suggestions for preventing another explosion. These recommendations were basic fire-prevention measures, such as installation of thermometers outside each storage vault, modification of air handlers inside the vaults, storage of decomposed nitrate film in metal containers under water, pending disposal, and prohibition of film storage on vault floors or building corridors.

These ABCs of safety were also ignored by Archives management.

EVEN THE preservation devices that are in place often don't do the job they're supposed to do. An internal study six months ago showed that 60 percent of the hydrothermographs, which measure humidity and temperature, were not working and that temperatures were rising to dangerous levels in the vaults.

The National Archives employs some of the top preservation specialists in the world, and it is not their fault that so many of our most valuable historic documents are deteriorating. For years these specialists have been calling their bosses' attention to the rot that has set in among bound volumes, letters, manuscripts, treaties and maps. Their warnings have simply been shrugged off.

Footnote: Archivist James Rhoads did not respond to our request for an interview. A spokesman, however, said that Archives management considers the conditions under which treaties and documents are stored to be "acceptable and climatically controlled."

In other words, they don't even concede that there's a problem.

Clements continues fight for more financial power

AUSTIN, Texas (AP — Gov. Bill Clements says one rebuff in the Senate will not make him give up his right to give Texas governors more financial control over state agencies.

By a three-vote margin, senators took Clements' budget execution plans off the Senate debate calendar Monday. The vote was 18-13, with 21 votes needed for continued debate.

"I'm terribly disappointed," Clements said a few minutes later. "I had anticipated it would come out in good order. But I assure you I am not going to let it drop."

Sen. Ike Harris, R-Dallas, author of the proposed constitutional amendment that would let governors reduce, as well as veto, separate appropriations made by the legislature, said he would try again before the end of the session, May 28.

"Of course, it's obvious I've got to talk with some people and chance some minds," he said.

Harris said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby laid the measure out for the debate vote Monday after Hobby and Clements talked last week about the governor's program.

"It's obvious the governor wanted the Senate to take a run at it at this time," Harris said.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said Clements' demand for more control of the budget was "probably the most insidious proposal we will have so far as constitutional amendments are concerned." He said the governor could totally undermine the Legislature's intent, for example taking away money set aside for community based correction facilities.

Brooks said he decided budget execution by a chief executive was not a good idea after former President Richard Nixon impounded funds that Congress had appropriated.

"This merely allows the governor to reduce line items in the general appropriation bill," said Harris, R-Dallas. "He already has the power to veto such separate items."

Harris said his proposed constitutional amendment also would allow the governor to veto riders or special provisions in the state spending bill, which already are questioned by many legal sources.

"This just means the governor can just go in there with a pencil and rewrite the whole bill," protested Sen. Bill Patman, D-Ganado.

Sen. Bob Vales, D-San Antonio, said the measure made no provision for the Legislature to be called back into session to consider overriding the governor's veto if the veto was made after the Legislature adjourned.

Another portion of Harris's measure would authorize the Legislature to let either the governor or a committee headed by the governor exercise fiscal control over agency appropriations according to conditions and limitations laid down by the Legislature.

If approved by two-thirds of the legislature, the proposed constitution change by Harris would be put to voters on Nov. 4, 1980.

The Senate refused for the second time this session to debate Sen. Roy Blake's bill denying unemployent benefits for certain persons who quit their jobs or who are discharged for reasons such as embezzling or gross misconduct.

Blake needed 21 votes and got only 18. The first time Blake tried to bring the bill up he got only 13.

Since January 1978, Blake said, the state, counties, cities and school districts have been covered by the unemployment compensation law and pay dollar-for-dollar for benefits awarded unemployed workers.

"I have been told by an official of the Dallas Independent School District that their estimated loss in 1979 will exceed $650,000 and will result in an increase in their tax rate of 2 cents per $100 valuation," said Blake, D-Nacogdoches. "My bill does not impose any hardship on those who are unemployed through no fault of their own but would simply eliminate some of the abuse."

In other action, the Senate approved and sent to the House bills that would:

—Extend for 30 days the time a defendant must be brought to trial in Class B and C misdemeanor cases under the 1977 "Speedy Trial Act."

—Increase the membership of the State Commission for the Blind from six to nine and transfer to the commission the duties of the Governor's Coordinating Office for the Visually Handicapped.

On the light side

Color him caught

ERLANGER, Ky. (AP) — Police have arrested a robbery suspect who was not quite redhanded but certainly was blue in the face.

Patrolman Tom Sharp said a customer in a convenience store thrust his hand into his pocket and demanded $50 Monday from a woman clerk. But the clerk squirted a stream of blue ink into the bandit's face and he fled without the money.

Minutes later, Sharp arrested the man, who has been charged with criminal intent to commit armed robbery.

"It wasn't hard to identify him," Sharp said. "He had ink all over his face and in his hair."

Insufficient funds

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Is the world's biggest bank — Bank of America — having trouble balancing its checkbook?

A $50 check given April 9 by the bank's legal department on its revolving account as a filing fee to the state Court of Appeal bounced.

The check went through Bank of America branches in Sacramento and San Francisco and was returned to the court marked "Not sufficient funds."

When the bank's legal department was called, the court clerk was told to send the check through again.

But, he told the woman, he couldn't do that.

The check had been stamped "Do not resubmit."

Flushed with pride

ONTARIO, Ohio (AP) — Larry Burson claims he's both an assembly line worker and an artisan and proud of his job — putting finishing touches on toilet bowls.

"It's satisfying," the 30-yearold Burson said of his job here at Artesian Industries. "It's one of the higher-skilled" jobs at the plant, as well as one of the few "hands-on" jobs left.

He takes the three pieces — top, bowl and base — from molds, fits them together and hand-finishes each before the assembled product gets a ceramic spray.

He can tell at a touch if the surfaces are smooth, if a bowl needs a little buildup here, a bit of rubbing there, or whether it needs a wet sponge and perhaps more rubbing.

After he checks the bowls, they go to a spraying and firing kiln for their final ceramic finish.

New long-range missile

Defense offers solutions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-level Pentagon group assessing the best way to deploy a new long-range missile to survive a Soviet surprise attack has suggested two or three "acceptable" solutions, defense sources say.

The option eventually chosen by the Carter administration will play a critical role in the ratification debate on the proposed SALT II treaty to limit nuclear missiles and bombers.

The theoretical vulnerability of existing missiles to Soviet surprise attack was cited Monday by SALT critic Paul Nitze as "the main defect" in an arms agreement with the Soviets.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown has said it is essential to build a system more immune to attack than the present landbased U.S. Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missiles, which are expected to become vulnerable to increasingly accurate Soviet missiles in the early 1980s.

But there has been considerable controversy over how the missiles should be based.

Defense Department officials, who asked not to be named, said the preferred options forwarded to Brown by a high-level Pentagon study council include a "shell game" deployment favored by the Air Force; a system in which airplanes would carry the missiles; or a combination of air and land basing.

Each option would make it difficult for Soviet targeters to plan an attack.

Brown will make his recommendation to President Carter after studying the report of the Defense Systems Acquisition Review Council, which studied the problem for nearly a month. Carter will make the final decision.

The sources said the proposed options range in estimated cost from about $20 billion to some $29 billion. They would be combat-ready by about 1986, if full-scale development begins this year.

Idaho court battle

ERA to be doomed?

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Idaho officials are girding for a court battle that legal scholars say could reshape the Constitutional amendment process and doom the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

Idaho's legislature approved the ERA in 1972 but rescinded that approval in 1977.

With bipartisan support from Gov. John Evans, congressmen and senators, Attorney General David Leroy says he will challenge federal contentions that a state cannot rescind approval of an amendment. He says he also will challenge Congress' right to extend the ERA's ratification period from the original cutoff date of March 22, 1979, to 1982.

"Our objective is to better define the rights, authorities and processes for state legislatures concerning the processes of amending the Constitution," Leroy said. "This will be a landmark case. It has monumental consequences concerning the federal relationship between the states and Congress."

Leroy said he planned to file his suit in U.S. District Court in Boise within the next few weeks.

Some national legal authorities said the case, if ultimately decided by the U.S. Supreme Court, could provide the basis for sweeping reforms of the constitutional amending process.

But others argue that the issues of rescission and ratification periods are up to Congress, not the courts.

The General Services Administration has refused to recognize rescission resolutions from Idaho and four other states: South Dakota, Tennessee, Kentucky and Nebraska.

Californians give up fight against 'hot rocks'

PORT HUENEME, Calif. (AP) — Three times in three years the cargo ship Schuler Otis Brand has docked at this U.S. Navy base and emptied its hold of dirt and gravel scooped from the barren coast of Antarctica.

And each trip brought complaints and protests that radioactive rocks, contaminated by a nuclear power plant near the South Pole, were being dumped in Southern California and there was next to nothing Californians could do about it.

But by the third and final trip in March, the state had withdrawn its once-vehement objections, which last year had included a threat of legal action.

State officials said this week they now agree with the Navy that the 14,200 tons of debris, stored under a blanket of asphalt, are only slightly radioactive and aren't dangerous.

The Navy wants to spread the rock and dirt as landfill and cover it with asphalt for use as heavy-equipment parking lots and storage areas at the base, a plan that needs the approval of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

"This material poses absolutely no hazard to man or the environment," said Lt. Cmdr. Frederick Gorrell, the Navy's Los Angeles spokesman. "You would have to lie on it 24 hours a day for six months to receive the same exposure you would receive from a chest X-ray."

The Ventura County Safe Energy Council, an anti-nuclear group, is not convinced.

"It is dangerous. There is no safe level of radioactivity," said the group's spokesman, Eric Schwartz.

"One thing the public learned from Harrisburg, Pa., is that you can't believe these statistics they're handing out — they hand out whatever makes their job easier," he said, referring to the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant last month.

The crushed rock and soil was contaminated by cooling water that leaked from the Navy's small PM-3A nuclear power plant at McMurdo Sound.

For about a decade, before being shut down in 1972, the plant had supplied heat and power to civilian scientists at the Navy-supported outpost on the Antarctic coast.

Gorrell said the reactor was replaced with a petroleumburning plant after its insulation was soaked by a water leak and inspection and repairs were deemed too costly.

He said the reactor's parts and fuel were buried at licensed disposal sites in other states. The contaminated rock was dug up and removed, the Navy says, to comply with Article V of the 11-nation Antarctic Treaty, which prohibits storing radioactive materials on the frozen continent.

The debris was removed by the Schuler Otis Brand, which makes one round-trip each year between Port Hueneme, 50 miles northwest of Los Angeles, and McMurdo Sound to deliver supplies to the scientific station.

The first load of radioactive rocks arrived here in March 1977, and the second followed a year later.

By that time, state officials were publicly complaining that the debris could pose a longterm hazard.

"If it is a threat to life at the South Pole, as far as we're concerned it is a threat to California," Health Department spokesman Bob Nance told reporters in March 1978.

He said California wanted the rocks removed and "if we don't get relief shortly ... we will seek ways and means of getting into the federal courts."

Now, however, George Hersh of the state's Solid Waste Management Board, talks of "some early excited responses" by state officials.

"It was one of those situations where you expect the worst until proved otherwise. What has happened is that, to our satisfaction, it has been proved otherwise."

Hersh said the solid waste board and the Health Services Department jointly studied the material and also hired an outside consultant to investigate.

"We all agreed on the answers," said Joe Ward, the department's chief of radiologic health. "The bottom line of the thing was that it would be reasonable to allow on-site disposal if it was done properly."

He said the Navy plan to use the debris in asphalt-covered parking areas was "an acceptable disposal system."

Hersh said the outside consultant was hired because "we were concerned some anti-nuclear people might have reservations about a study done by a state agency, so we wanted this independent study as a back-up."

The "anti-nuclear people" have reservations, nonetheless.

But, Schwartz said, "We're not saying they should put it in somebody else's backyard. A minimum recommendation would be to contain it much better" than currently planned.

The Antarctic rocks, meanwhile, have become another symbol for the anti-nuclear movement.

The contaminated material "represents how bad nuclear power can be," Schwartz said. "We just don't want it at all, and we don't want any more of it produced."

It's what you eat that adds padding

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I need your advice badly. I'm a girl, 15, and not bad looking. In fact, lots of people think I'm cute.

My problem is that I think I'm too fat. I'm 5 foot 4 and weigh 127 pounds. Last summer I went on a diet and weighed 110 pounds, felt great and had a boyfriend.

Now I don't have a boyfriend and I feel like I've lost my willpower.

I'm nervous and have started smoking. Actually, I don't eat much but I still haven't lost any weight. That is what frustrates me. Can you help? — Neva, Santa Rosa, Calif.

Neva: Many times it's not how much you eat, but what you eat that counts. It's a simple matter of substituting your normal fare with similar foods that are just as delicious but lower in calories.

For instance, choose high-protein fish or chicken instead of breaded pork chops, and save calories by browning in a pan coated with no-stick cooking spray.

Go easy on high-calorie corn, lima beans and peas, and serve broccoli, string beans or spinach instead. Top your salads with diet dressing and crunchy cucumbers rather than bread croutons.

And by the way, stop smoking!

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 15-year-old girl who met this popular, good-looking basketball player who goes to a different school.

I have never dated him but I'd really like to. I obtained his phone number and I have called him several times and he sounds as though he likes me.

The problem is, he has never called me. Do you think I should continue chasing him or give him up as a lost cause? — Sharon, Valparaiso, Ind.

Sharon: Give it one more chance. Call him for the last time and tell him you would like to see him.

Give him your phone number and tell him to call you. If he doesn't call — forget the guy. If he does call, your "chase" was worth it!

Dr. Wallace: I've always dreamed about dating a certain boy at my high school. I have been a secret admirer of his for a long time.

About a month ago he asked me out and we have been dating regularly ever since, but now I'm confused. It seems that when I'm with him, I feel uncomfortable and now I'm not really looking forward to seeing him.

Why has this happened? — Mona, Athens, Tenn.

Mona: It appears that you considered this boy your "knight in shining armor" but found him human with his share of faults. Look for his good qualities and keep an open mind. Give the relationship a chance to grow.

If you feel the same way a month from now, keep dating him but not steadily. When the time comes to end the relationship, if it ever does, you will know it.

Key to physical fitness revealed

The Woman's Forum members learned the key to physical fitness when they met April 20 in the home of Mrs. G.K. Chadd.

Nadine Teague, associate director of the Y.M.C.A., revealed that diet and exercise were two main factors involved in complete physical fitness.

She showed members how to check their pulse and how much it should increase after exercise.

"Each individual should experiment with different kinds of exercise and find the one best suited for them," explained Miss Teague.

Mrs. Helen Stewart, president, presided over the business meeting in which the club voted to make a free will donation to Mountain View Lodge and to the Westside Community Daycare Center each month for the club year 1979-1980.

Mrs. E.P. Driver and Mrs. Clyde Thomas gave a report on the Well Baby Clinic which is held the first Wednesday of each month.

Beginning in May, Dr. Harold G. Smith, optometrist, will be testing children's eyes 4 months old through school age. All children are welcome from 1 - 3 p.m.

Mrs. W.N. Norred, Big Spring State Hospital representative, invited all members to the dedication ceremonies for the therapeutic swimming pool Sunday at 2 p.m.

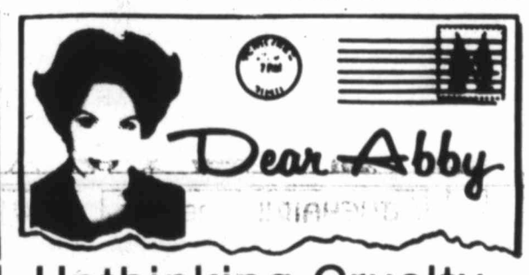

Serving refreshments to those attending were Mrs. Chadd, hostess, and Mrs. E.B. Compton, co-hostess.

The last meeting of the year will be a luncheon May 18 with the place to be announced at a later date.

Unthinking Cruelty Is Cruelest of All

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for applauding the teacher who refuses to allow her students to pass out party invitations unless the entire class is invited. (You wisely said, "The pain of having been left out will remain with those few uninvited children long after the fun has been forgotten by those who attended.") How true!

That letter revived some painful memories for me. I once had a gym teacher who made a practice of appointing two "captains" — her pets, who in turn would choose up teams. Of course, the most popular kids and the best athletes were always chosen first. Being neither popular nor a good athlete, I was always the last to be chosen. I was so humiliated I wanted to die. No wonder I grew up with an inferiority complex, convinced that I was unwanted, hopelessly inept and a born loser.

Please print this, Abby, in case some gym teachers are still using this cruel system.

PAINFUL MEMORIES

DEAR PAINFUL: Consider it done. Your letter jarred some painful memories of my own school days. Gym teachers, are you listening?

DEAR ABBY: Re HAIRLESS IN HILO, who bemoans the lack of hair on his chest, arms and legs.

My husband also was hairless in those areas — and that's what attracted me to him in the first place. Men who deliberately expose their hairy chests by unbuttoning their shirts down to their navels turn me off.

Also, consider the statue of Michelangelo's David, the epitome of male magnificence. He didn't have a hair on his beautiful body!

OFF MY CHEST IN WICHITA

DEAR OFF: Maybe so. But in some cultures hairy males are thought to be extremely masculine and virile. And here's a hair-raising fact: At one time in Spain, moustached women were considered rare beauties!

ERA discussion held

Members of the 1948 Hyperion Club heard a two-part discussion of the Equal Rights Amendment, which, if passed, would give women the same rights as men.

Women have been crusading to end discrimination against them since 1923. Thirty-five states have already signified ratification of which three are attempting to rescind their approval.

Mrs. Jerry Dudley presented the affirmative side of the question and Mrs. Jack Irons gave the negative side.

Mrs. Dudley contended that women should receive the same consideration as men in job situations where they have proved themselves capable.

Mrs. Irons pointed out that the exalted position accorded to woman by the creator far transcends any economic factor.

Sixteen members attended the meeting at the home of Mrs. Merle Stewart, 504 Washington. Mrs. John Hodges served as co-hostess.

Son born to Blairs

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Blair, Big Spring, announce the birth of a son, Michael Heath on April 6 at 8:20 a.m. in Malone-Hogan Hospital.

He weighed 7 pounds and 11 ounces and was 19½ inches long at birth.

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. J.M. Self, Big Spring and paternal grandparents are Mrs. Harold Wayland, also of Big Spring and James V. Blair, California.

Great-grandparents of Michael are Mrs. Blake Bledsoe and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wright, all of Big Spring, and Mrs. Donnie Self of Gorman. Mrs Guy Richardson of California is also a great-grandmother.

The infant also has great-great-grandparents including Mrs. Birdie Self and Mrs. Dora Grice, both of Gorman.

Police beat

Big Spring man stabbed

A local man was stabbed early this morning while walking in the vicinity of the 400 or 500 block of N.W. 4th, he told police.

Police were contacted around 1 a.m. by Cowper Hospital officials after Ernest E. Maestas, 25, 1003 Main, was admitted.

Maestas said that an unknown man approached him around 12:15 a.m. and stabbed him in the lower left side. Police have suspects, but no arrest has yet been made.

Maestas is in fair condition at Cowper Hospital, according to the attending physician, Dr. Bob Richardson. Richardson said that the wound appears to be superficial, but the victim is under close observation.

Police arrested a patient at the Big Spring State Hospital Monday afternoon after he allegedly threatened an employee with a knife.

Mary Butler told police that the patient threatened to stab her unless she unlocked the door and released him.

The patient was transported to the city jail following the 1:45 p.m. incident.

Burglars didn't wait for dark to help themselves to $990 worth of merchandise at a local home Monday afternoon.

Gwendall Jayce White reported to police that a vehicle was seen being driven off with his mother's goods, a $595 television and a $359 sewing machine, around 1:45 p.m.

An open door at the Fallout Lounge, 411 N.W. 7th, aroused suspicion in an officer patrolling that area at 12:45 a.m. today.

After being contacted by police, the owner reported that six cases of beer were missing along with an undetermined amount of cigarettes from a machine that had been damaged in the robbery.

Shoeprints discovered at the scene have led police to suspect two persons found in the vicinity of the crime.

South West Auto., 1101 W. 4th, has not yet determined what may have been stolen from that location after burglars gained entry through an air conditioner vent between 10 and 10:25 p.m. Monday.

Three minor traffic accidents were reported Monday. Two occurred at the same intersection, 4th and Runnels.

Helen Creath Earley, 1704 State, and Melvin Leo Gibbs of Dinero collided cars at that location at 11:03 a.m.

The second incident took place at 2:14 p.m. between Toni Choate, 2707 Crestline, and Timothy Taylor, 800 Marcy Dr.

A third mishap Monday involved a meeting of vehicles driven by Stanford Shults, 3718 Hatch, and Betty Earl, 2801 Lawrence, at 18th and Gregg, 5:53 p.m.

CONNALLY CONTEMPLATES — Republican presidential candidate John Connally listens to a reporter's question at a news conference in Tuscon, Ariz., Monday. Connally later spoke at a GOP money-raising dinner, criticizing President Carter's proposed excess profits tax for the oil industry and saying the industry is putting its profits into more exploration.

Bread truck drivers strike

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Four large bakeries have been struck by bread truck drivers who have been working without a contract since March 1 in a dispute over wages.

Teamsters Local 688 in St. Louis, Local 525 in Alton, Ill., and Local 50 in Belleville, Ill., are striking American Bakeries Co., Colonial Baking Co., ITT Continental Baking Co. and Dolly Madison Cake Co. A spokesman for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said negotiations were scheduled for today. Local 688 official Ronald Gamache said the union rejected a proposal to boost the $169 weekly base pay by $37.50 over a three-year contract.

Homosexual may keep job

CINCINNATI (AP) — A woman who says she is a homosexual may keep her job as field representative of the Women's Division of the United Methodist Board of Global Ministries, the division has decided.

At its spring meeting here, the 75-member body rejected a request from its own personnel committee that Joan Clark of Dallas be asked to resign. "Like racism and sexism, it takes years to struggle with this issue," Ms. Clark, 32, said of the decision Monday. As a member of the group's field staff, she interprets programs and helps district and conference units of the United Methodist Women in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, a spokesman said.

Fund started at two local banks to help pay medical expenses

A fund has been started at two local banks, First National and State National, to help pay the mounting medical expenses of Mrs. Doyle Vaughn of Big Spring.

Mrs. Vaughn, together with her husband, returned to the M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston the past weekend where her treatment for a malignancy will be resumed.

Local Red Cross chapter asked to raise $1,883

The local Red Cross chapter has been asked by North Texas Headquarters to raise $1,883 in disaster relief for Wichita Falls, Vernon and Lawton, Okla. Goal for the North Texas area is $292,847.

Nat Roll, chapter director, said only $120 has been donated locally. The Red Cross expects to send $1.5 million to the tornado damaged area.

Red Cross survey teams and health service reports show 57 persons dead, 191 hospitalized and over 1,600 injured. A total of 2,882 dwellings are destroyed and 1,018 are reported as heavily damaged.

Explorer Post involved in police activities

The Big Spring Police Department Explorer Post formed four years ago to involve high school boys and girls in police activities.

The eight boys and girls now in the post help the police department in search and rescue of lost children and by protecting cars parked in lots during concerts at the coliseum.

They are hired by Coliseum Director Carol McMillan to help park the cars and prevent vandalism, theft and accidents. The group makes $25 per concert. The money goes into a treasury used to buy equipment for the post.

The post is run like a police department with captains and sergeants and a review board to assure the group's integrity.

The group is involved in a ride-along program with city police to acquaint them with police methods.

This summer several camping trips will be taken.

There is also a .22 caliber rifle range program for post members to teach gun safety.

Undue criticism is sometimes leveled at the group by other high school students, said Hogue. Other students think the Explorers inform on high school drug violators.

The post was begun by John Massey four years ago. Dave Spillman is this year's sponsor.

Post advisors are Dusty Choate, Troy Hogue and Berry Smith.

Students interested in getting into the post may contact Smith at the police department.

Four involved in income tax scheme sentenced

Three Big Spring residents and an Abilene man involved in a fraudulent income tax refund scheme operating out of here during 1975 and 1978 have been sentenced in the U.S. District Court in San Angelo.

J.C. Woodard, Calvin Lee Camp and Nathan Baker of Big Spring and Howard McCormick, Abilene, bring to 12 the number of persons who have been sentenced in connection with the scheme.

Baker was sentenced to serve up to six years in prison under the Federal Youth Correction Act.

Woodard drew a three-year term in the penitiary for perjury. McCormick received a two-year sentence for filing a fraudulent 1977 income tax return.

Camp was sentenced to two three-year terms to run concurrently for conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government and for aiding others in filing false claims against the government.

Twenty-six persons were indicted in connection with the scheme last Jan. 19 by a Lubbock grand jury. Of that number, 24 have pleaded guilty.

One defendant is still at large. A May 14 trial date has been set for the others.

Grease fire excitement

A grease fire Monday evening resulted in some light damage to a kitchen stove at a property owned by J.V. Anderson.

The Big Spring Fire Department dispatched two trucks and five men to 411 Lancaster after being alerted by the occupant, Jack Dozier, of the blaze.

The fire began, according to the fire department, when some grease on the stove ignited. It was quickly extinguished by the fire fighters.

Weather monitoring station confirmed

Big Spring has been designated by the State Legislature as the site of a solar-powered weather monitoring station.

Mayor Wade Choate received a letter Monday from State Sen. Ray Farabee advising him that Big Spring will be one of only a few sites in the county for such a station. The mayor also received a copy of the Senate's resolution signed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, stating that the firm of Electronics Techniques, Inc. would construct the station here.

The solar-powered facility will transmit weather information through a satellite to a centralized computer. Researchers here and at the central station will study weather developments relating to wind, temperature, relative humidity, barometric pressure and precipitation.

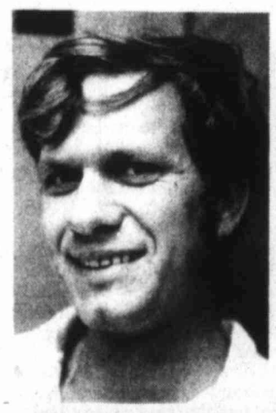

BoBar Rope Applicator distributor selected

Richard Hoelscher, owner of Hoelscher Equipment Company here, is now the distributor for the BoBar Rope Applicator, which is a direct contact chemical application for control of certain annual and perennial weeds and grasses.

The portion of the machine making contact with the weed is the rope which is saturated with chemical and water. This saturation is maintained by means of a tank and manifold system using the force of gravity to supply the ropes.

Costly pumps and jets are not needed in the operation. The ropes and tanks are supported by tubular frame and non-corrosive manifolds. These are available in different machine widths and row spacings.

Cleaning of the Rope Applicator is simple, according to Hoelscher. When the rig becomes dirty or treatment is complete, one simply washes off the rig with a water hose. There is nothing to disassemble. There are no nozzles to clean, no traps to remove weeds, seeds or trash from and no polluted chemicals to dump.

RICHARD HOELSCHER

The BoBar's home office is in Hale Center, Tex. The Rope Applicator is manufactured at Abernathy.

Hoelscher's Equipment Co., also stocks the Caldwell line of blades, shredders and chisel plows, the Dunham-Lear line of discs and tillage tools and Brown Brothers cultivators.

The Hoelscher firm is family-operated. Richard's brother, Frank, is a parts man and handles the concern's accounts. The two are the sons of Jerome Hoelscher, who still farms in the Midkiff area.

Highway route issue discussed by candidate

Polly Mays, incumbent candidate for the city council in Saturday's runoff election, raised the issue of the location of the future route of Highway 27 in a news release issued Monday.

Her opponent, John Massey, informed the Herald that he did not wish to comment on the issue at this time.

In the release, Mrs. Mays stated: "Among the issues raised by my opponent is that the proposed route of Highway 27 through Big Spring should be publicized. We don't have a designation on this route.

"i wish we were in a position to be so sure that we would be told of a route through or around the city for this highway — a highway, incidentally, which state and federal road officials have insisted will not have an interstate standing. Yet, few things could be more important for Big Spring than to be placed on the route.

"Until then, where it might go within the city is something that so far we don't have the opportunity to worry about. Our biggest job is first of all to be selected on the route — and believe me, the competition for this is fierce. Don't be deceived that there is a secret route along which a select few are permitted to purchase property at the appraised value or less, with the intent to sell the same property for a large profit for right-of-way.

"This simply is not true. We don't have a designation or promise of designation.

"As your council member, however, I'll keep doing all I can to help the city be a part of the drive to get the route to Big Spring."

The rise and Fall of Bob Hayes

By the Associated Press

Herald : This is the second in a two-part story by Denne Freeman of the Associated Press dealing with the life of former Dallas Cowboy Bob Hayes.

In his 11 years with the Cowboys, Hayes caught 365 passes for 7,295 yards. He scored 76 touchdowns and returned 104 punts for 1,158 yards including a 90-yard dash to the goal.

Ironically, he is still in the NFL record book for the most fair catches in National Conference championship games — five.

Hayes played out his career in a season at San Francisco after the Cowboys felt his skills had diminished and relegated him to bench-sitting status.

Hayes was a free spirit and dollars were so much paper.

"I did not manage my money well," he would later admit.

To their credit, the Cowboys tried.

Club President Tex Schramm, testifying as as character witness, said he was proud that the club had Hayes on a deferred payment schedule.

But Schramm later told the Washington Post:

"Bob achieved his greatest heights at a very young age — and it was doubly difficult for him because he didn't have the intelligence to handle it...so his return to reality would be doubly difficult. The tragedy for him is that people tried to use him as an entree, or a front. And he did not have the ability to select the good from the others.

"He was one of the first players who took a lot of deferred salary which I thought was good for him. But I guess even that evaporated."

Hayes flitted from one mismanaged business venture to another, trying to recapture the the winning magic he had known as an athlete.

He was divorced then remarried.

In the spring of 1978, Hayes ran into what he considered an old friend. They were later to talk drugs. Hayes paints a picture of just doing a friend a favor.

"I never got a penny and I've never taken drugs, not so much as an aspirin, in my life," he said.

"But I have a weakness — I like to satisfy everybody."

But the way he talked on that tape he knew right where to go to get the drugs.

"I'm guilty, I was wrong, I've paid the price," said Hayes. "My image, my self-respect is gone."

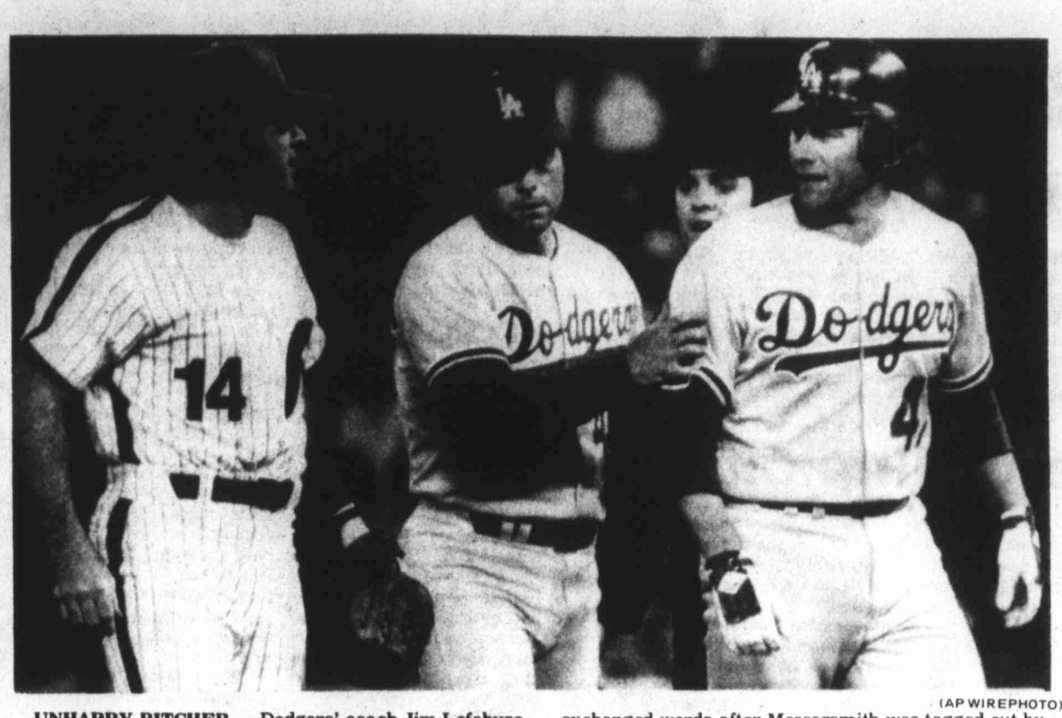

Hayes added: "I'm dead broke. I was just on the verge of doing commercials for a credit card company and a beer company."

Dr. John T. Holbrook, a psychiatrist, examined Hayes for hours and came up with this explanation of his behavior in open court before the sentencing in March:

"Bob Hayes is a victim of his own existence as a celebrity...he is emotionally incapacitated...he has a difficult time sustaining himself as a person of value...he has a need to be liked...he lived a life as a person under discipline, controlled and managed...he didn't learn any social skills."

Holbrook added, "He has a long way to fall from where he stands now."

This week he went through the final humiliation. They took his fingerprints. Then they sprayed him for lice.

UNHAPPY PITCHER — Dodgers' coach Jim Lefebvre directs pitcher Andy Messersmith, right, away from Phillies' first baseman Pete Rose as the two players exchanged words after Messersmith was tagged out by Rose in Monday night's game in Philadelphia. Phillies won 4-3 in 10 innings.

Alexander, Kern blank Blue Jays

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers, who had an iron-glove infield in 1978, turned a club record tying five double plays Monday night and it was like Christmas to struggling right-hander Doyle Alexander.

Alexander, who had been shelled in three previous starts but bailed out by Ranger bats, handcuffed Toronto on three hits in seven and one-third innings as Texas blanked the Blue Jays 5-0.

While Alexander was earning his first victory of the year, Jim Kern collected his second save by mopping up the last inning and two-thirds.

There was no comment from the Ranger players who barred the media from the dressing room because of the presence of woman sportswriter Alison Garden of the Toronto Star.

Al Oliver slashed two singles as he extended his batting streak to 13 consectutive games for the Rangers.

Toronto manager Roy Hartsfield bemoaned the silent Blue Jay bats, saying "The way we are going right now we have to reach up to touch the bottom. I'm not taking anything away from Alexander but we are just not hitting.

"Of course, it helps when you get five double plays."

The Rangers were 11th in the American League in double plays last year.

Four of the double plays were started by second baseman Bump Wills, who ironically had two errors.

Texas jumped on Toronto starter Jim Clancy (1-3) for three runs in the first inning.

Billy Sample walked and sped to third base on Oliver's hit and run single. Sample scored when second baseman Dave McKay booted Buddy Bell's grounder.

Officials check Olympic funds

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — State officials are checking two firms hired to raise funds for the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee, hoping to determine how much money the fundraisers are keeping for themselves.

Capital Sports, Inc., hired to market the February 1980 Games' official logo, has been ordered to register with New York's secretary of state as a fundraiser, according to officials here.

And the organizing committee's contract with Creative Mailing Consultants of America Inc., to solicit funds from the public by mail, has been referred to the Attorney General's Charities Fraud Bureau for review, officials in the State and Law departments said.

"The question of how much compensation is being provided to the professional fundraisers — that's the question we're focussing on," said Timothy Gilles, a spokesman for the attorney general's office.

While declining to detail their current inquiries, state officials privately admit that past troubles with the LPOOC's fundraising efforts encouraged the current review.

The contract with Creative Mailing, of Capitol Heights, Md., was signed this year after two previously designated companies sued the LPOOC for alleged contract violations.

The companies and the LPOOC, which had hoped to raise as much as $10 million, settled out of court.

The new contract is being reviewed to see how much of the funds raised will be kept by the mailing company, according to Gilles.

From NHL Playoffs

Flyers face extinction

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Flyers, two games down in their best-of-seven National Hockey League playoff quarterfinals against the New York Rangers and shamed by a shutout Sunday, have come down a bit from their hopes of a strong darkhorse showing.

Another loss tonight will finish them for the year, and they know it.

"We're back with our rumps against the wall again," said a rueful Coach Pat Quinn.

Only 11 days before Sunday's 6-0 whitewash, Quinn watched his team make a comeback from the brink of elimination with two straight triumphs over the Vancouver Canucks.

"For us, this next one is an elimination game," Quinn said. "Hopefully, we'll do the things we do right, but I thought we were doing things right."

Things look brighter on the New York side.

"Win the (Stanley) Cup? Well, I don't see why we can't," said Ranger Eddie Johnstone.

If the Rangers win tonight, they will begin their semifinal round against the New York Islanders Thursday night, with the Montreal Canadiens opening at home against the Boston Bruins the same night. If the Rangers lose to Philadelphia, the Montreal-Boston series will not start until Saturday.

New York's Pat Hickey said his team is "getting the big saves from John Davidson, killing the big penalties and scoring the big goals."

That could be why the Flyers have been outscored 18-2 in the last three humfliating games and haven't scored in the last 118 minutes, 22 seconds of action.

Baseball Roundup

By the Associated Press

Phillies 4, Dodgers 3

When you need a spark, how about Greg Luzinski for starters?

"Greg is our key — no doubt about it," says Philadelphia Phillies teammate Mike Schmidt. "He gets us going."

Like Monday night, when the Philadelphia outfielder slugged a two-run homer in the sixth to trigger the Phillies' offense against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Schmidt later applied the finishing touches with an RBI single in the 10th inning that brought the Phillies a 4-3 victory over the Dodgers.

Luzinksi also had a role in the Phillies' game-winning rally.

"Greg was the key there, too," Schmidt said. "His fly ball got (Larry) Bowa to third and it was a lot different going up to hit knowing you only need a fly ball to win a game, than needing a base hit. That's why Greg hits fourth for the Phillies and fourth in the All-Star game."

Cardinals 3, Braves 2

Jerry Mumphrey's two-out single drove in the winning run in the 10th inning as St. Louis edged Atlanta. Tony Scott beat out a two-out infield single, then stole second and went to third when catcher Dale Murphy's throw sailed into center field.

Mumphrey then lined his single just over the outstretched glove of shortstop Pepe Frias as the Cardinals defeated Phil Niekro, who had carried a six-hit shutout into the ninth before giving up two runs.

Royals 4, White Sox 3

Frank White smacked a pair of doubles, drove in two runs and scored one to help Kansas City beat Chicago. Left-hander Paul Splittorff evened his record at 2-2 with relief help from Al Hrabosky. Chicago starter Rich Wortham lost his first game in four decisions.

"Hungo came in and did a heck of a job," Kansas City outfielder Willie Wilson said of Hrabosky, who put out the Chicago fire in the eighth. "I wanted to kiss him."

'I oughta write a book, but nobody would believe it'

Mantle still dreams of Yankee glory days

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Mickey Mantle, 11 years after belting his last baseball out of Yankee Stadium, still goes back frequently — in his dreams.

"I still dream almost every night that I'm trying to make a comeback ... If I get a hit, I can't run to first base. They always just nick me," he said.

Or, "I'm riding in a cab dressed in my uniform, and as we pull up by the park, I can hear on the loud speaker, 'Now batting, No. 7, Mickey Mantle.' When I get out of the cab, every gate to the stadium is locked, and I've got to crawl under a fence to get in."

Mantle finds it impossible to get his New York Yankee superstar days out of his system.

"I don't think I'll ever get over it," said Mantle, who retired with aching legs in 1968. "You get so used to being pampered and applauded all your life, and all of the sudden you're in your own living room watching somebody else get all that.

"Once you've had it, it's hard to forget. It's tough to realize you're through. I don't think anybody ever gets over it, and I can see how it can kill somebody," Mantle said.

"I can imagine a beautiful actress when she finally gets old, and nobody wants her."

During his 18-year career Mantle won the American League's Most Valuable Player award three times and a Triple Crown, hit 536 homers and drove in 1,509 runs. He probably was the most idolized player of the 1950s and 60s.

"It's harder than hell," he reflected to a Times-Union and Journal of Jacksonville reporter. "I'm fairly recognizable, and it's not been totally taken away from me. You really get spoiled. I can see how a guy can commit suicide."

But he says he feels healthier now than he has in years, after surgery for a bleeding ulcer last summer. He has several business interests in Dallas and spends a lot of time relaxing by playing golf.

He and his old running mate, Whitey Ford, have a book out called "Whitey and Mickey," but Mantle said, "It was too timid."

"I oughta write a book, but nobody would believe it, some of the wild stuff we did."

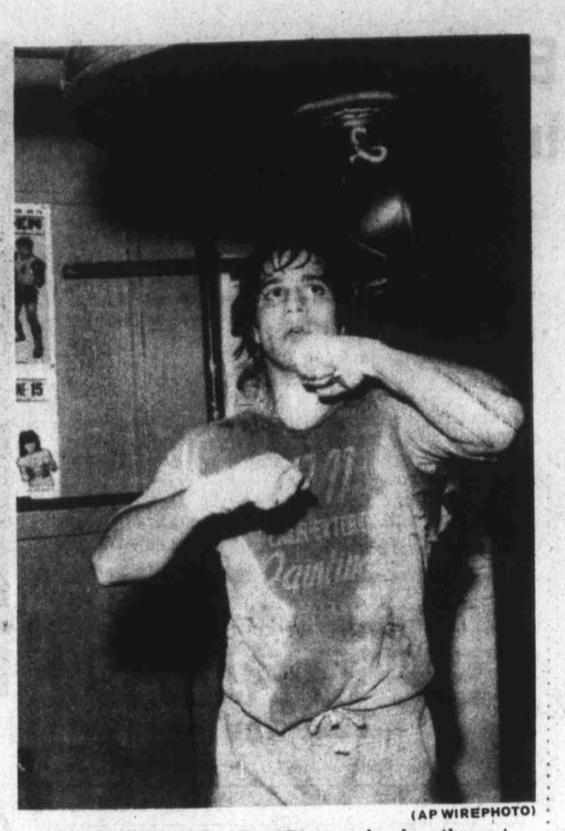

Not unlike the current edition, the old Yankees had their feuds, Mantle said, adding, "but we'd close the door and didn't have a press conference for every one of them."

He said he doesn't think the team camaraderie is the same now.

"There was more of a brotherhood then.n Players don't seem as close now," Mantle said.

He misses those days.

"I played with people I enjoyed playing with and I wouldn't trade that for anything. Half the fun of the games was talking it over afterwards. Now the clubhouse is empty in 15 minutes. We'd ice two cases of beer and sit around and talk about all the funny things that happened until it was all gone."

LIVING THE ROLE — Tony Danza, who plays the part of a club fighter who drives a cab while waiting for a big break in the fight game in the television series "Taxi", works out in a New York City gym recently. The Brooklyn-born actor won eight professional bouts by knock-outs before beginning his acting career. He returns to the ring April 27 when he meets Max "Sonny" Hord in New York's Felt Forum in a middleweight fight.

Bullets playing like champions

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The Washington Bullets seem to be getting their annual postseason tuneup from the Atlanta Hawks.

After sweeping two games from the Hawks in last year's preliminary playoff series, the Bullets said the competition sharpened their execution for the march to the National Basketball Association title.

The matchup is just as intense in the quarter-finals this year, and it seems to be reaching the same conclusion: the Bullets will try to close out the best-of-seven series with a victory at home tonight.

After splitting the first two games in Washington, the Bullets went to Atlanta — where the Hawks had won 17 in a row — and took two straight over the weekend to assume a commanding 3-1 lead in the series.

"In our last two games," said Washington Coach Dick Motta, "we played about as good as we can play."

The other Eastern Conference semifinal resumes Thursday with the San Antonio Spurs, leading 3-1, hoping to oust the Philadelphia 76ers.

The Western semifinals continue Wednesday when the Seattle SuperSonics carry a 3-1 lead into their contest against the Los Angeles Lakers while the Phoenix Suns carry a 2-1 lead into their game at Kansas City against the Kings.

Bullets forward Bob Dandridge, who scored 19 of his 31 points in the final 17 minutes of Washington's 120-118 overtime victory on Sunday, has been superb. He leads the Bullets with 112 points and 20 assists.

Forward Elvin Hayes, with 89 points and 54 rebounds, and center Wes Unseld, with 50 rebounds and 16 assists, completes a veteran Washington front line which has 31 years of NBA experience.

That experience, Motta said, can make a difference in the playoffs.

"We found out last season what it took to win on the road in the playoffs, and how to overcome crowd noise and the rest," Motta said.

"Shots start getting harder in the fourth period," he said. "Things tighten up. Suddenly they mean a lot more. That's when it's nice to have veterans like Elvin, Bobby and Wes."

Down the stretch Sunday, Dandridge scored 13 of Washington's final 20 points and assisted on two other baskets.

By contrast, although both teams are shooting a below-par 44 percent, the Hawks dipped to 21 and 31 percent in the fourth quarters of two of their losses.

Forward John Drew, one of only two Atlanta players with five years' NBA experience, has been held to 55 points or an average of 13.7 per game — nine points below his 22.7-point average which led the Hawks in regular season play.

HOUSTON (AP) — Larry Turville, a former touring pro, was named Monday as the new tennis coach at Rice University, replacing retiring Coach Chip Travis.

Turville already is on campus and is actively recruiting tennis prospects for next year although Travis will direct the Owl team until the end of the school year.

North Texas club pros take Texas Pro lead

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Two North Texas club professionals lead a field of 37 teams after first-day play Monday in the third annual Northern Texas Professional Golfers Association Pro-Pro Tournament.

Buster Cragh of Sherrill Park Golf Course in Richardson, and John Neese, Eastern Hills Country Club in Garland, lead by one stroke at 65, six under par 71.

The second place team of Jim Smith, Grapevine Municipal Golf Course, and Burt Baine of Ridglea Country Club in Fort Worth, had a 66.

Defending champions Rives McBee of Los Colinas Country Club in Irving, and Larry Fryer of Lakewood Country Club in Dallas, are tied with six teams for third place at 67.

Red Sox whip Abilene

ABILENE — Pete Amaro scored on an error in the 14th inning to lead the Big Spring Red Sox to a 6-5 victory over Abilene here Sunday afternoon. The victory was the Red Sox fourth in five games.

Jimmy Lujan pitched the entire 14 innings for the Big Spring team, and allowed only five hits in posting the runs in the first three innings, then blanked Abilene the remainder of the game.

John Morelion led the Rex Sox hitters with four bingles, with Adam Yanez adding three. Others with one hit included Ernie Garcia, Fernie Paradez, Amaro and Bill Diaz.

The Red Sox will host Abilene in Steer Park this

Brynner sues restaurant

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Yul Brynner, perennial star of "The King and I" was brought to his knees by a foul order of spareribs, says his lawyer.

"Worms. Parasitic worms and infected pork is what brings us here," attorney Harry Lipsig told a jury of three men and three women Monday in the actor's $3 million civil suit against Trador Vic's, a posh restaurant located in the Plaza Hotel in mid-Manhattan.

Brynner's gastronomic woe allegedly stemmed from trichinosis.

Lipsig, in his opening salvo, said Brynner, his wife, Jacqueline, and another show business couple — actress Joan Diener Marre and her director-husband Albert Marre — also partook of the dinner on Nov. 3, 1974.

Heiress fights for tenants

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Heiress Louise Vanderbilt says her eviction from an apartment she rented at a Newport mansion has hardened her resolve to fight for the rights of tenants everywhere.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's struggle to stay in one of the two apartments she rented in the Mainlands ended Monday when sheriffs evicted her and moving men took many of her possessions to storage.

"It's been the worst day of my life," Mrs. Vanderbilt said. "I've never been evicted in my life and I've never known anyone who was evicted."

GERALD RAFSHOON

JOHN HENRY FAULK

Carter's advertiser sells

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta advertising business owned by Gerald Rafshoon, President Carter's media adviser, has been sold to a group of investors, according to Howard Rothchild, head of the group.

Rafshoon's firm gained prominence in 1976 when it created a series of television commercials for Carter's presidential campaign.

His 90 percent share of the agency has been in a blind trust since he joined the president's staff 10 months ago.

Rothchild, who has been running the agency since Rafshoon left for Washington, said there will be no changes in personnel or clients as a result of the sale.

The names of the other investors and the purchase price were not disclosed.

Faulk to sue FBI

HOUSTON (AP) — John Henry Faulk, a popular 1950s radio commentator before he was accused of being a communist, has filed suit in federal court, accusing the FBI of withholding full access to his file.

The 65-year-old Faulk, active in the civil right movement in the 1940s, said he learned recently he had been under FBI surveillance for 30 years beginning in 1943.

"I was shocked and dumbfounded when I heard I had been under surveillance," Faulk said. "But it is consistent with J. Edgar Hoover — a vicious, sick man."

Although he has received 233 pages of his FBI file during the past year, Faulk said there is an undetermined amount he has not seen, including a 1964 memo from the FBI office in St. Louis to Hoover.

NRC considers shut down of eight plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is considering a suggestion to order temporary shutdown of eight nuclear power plants sharing design features with the stricken reactor at Three Mile Island.

NRC Chairman Joseph M. Hendrie said he anticipates a decision today or Wednesday after further consultation with industry officials.

Only four of the eight plants now are operating — Rancho Seco in California and three Oconee units in South Carolina. But such an order could mean continued shutdown of four other units now out of service for refueling or safety checks — Three Mile Island Unit 1 in Pennsylvania, sister reactor to the one stricken; Arkansas Unit 1 in Arkansas; Davis-Besse in Ohavis-Besse in Ohio; and Crystal River in Florida.

If the commission follows the recommendations of some staff members, the plants could be out of service up to a month and reduce electric-generating capacity in the East to an uncomfortably thin reserve margin, NRC officials said.

Babcock & Wilcox, designers of the Three Mile Island facility and the other eight plants that would be covered by a shutdown order, declined comment on NRC staff criticisms of the reactor design.

Key staff officials told the five-member NRC Monday that the Three Mile Island accident, which almost forced a full-scale evacuation of the Harrisburg, Pa. area, revealed equipment failures, operator errors, basic design problems, and the NRC's own inability to recognize potential safety hazards.
