Rare alien amnesty offer draws to close

Associated Press

The nation's 107 immigration offices closed their doors today to a once-in-a-lifetime offer of amnesty for millions of illegal immigrants after processing tens of thousands on the final day of the yearlong program.

Aliens who beat the deadline today exchanged hugs and kisses and waved American flags in Los Angeles. Immigration and Naturalization Service employees in Houston popped open champagne bottles as the final applicants walked out the door. In Chicago, workers waved a flag and burst a balloon at midnight.

"Thank God, this is a blessing. We have come so far and from so much suffering," said Rosa Pineda, a Guatemalan who applied in Albuquerque, N.M.

In Honolulu, commercial fisherman Sione Feiloakitau partied with native dancers and immigration officials today after becoming the last person in the United States to apply before the deadline.

"No words can express my appreciation and my happiness at this time," he said. "This is something I have hoped for for a long time."

Final Basin family applies for amnesty at last minute

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin Amnesty Center's doors will remain closed to hundreds of illegal immigrants wanting amnesty now that the U.S. government's yearlong program has expired.

Aliens who rushed to meet the midnight deadline waited patiently in the Permian Basin League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) office until their applications had been processed. Workers finally departed at 1:30 a.m. today, once the stacks of papers had been counted.

The last of the applicants — a Kermit family — walked in at 11:59 p.m., according to Edia Hernandez, who runs the local amnesty office.

"They had a flat tire on the way and were afraid they wouldn't make it. The kids were sleeping in the back of the truck," she said.

Sam Juarrieta, 36, of Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico, was among 30 or so applicants who waited as late as Wednesday afternoon to seek legal status.

"I wasn't in any rush, but I didn't want to pass up this chance for my family," he said. "I'm looking for a better future for my kids because this is the best country."

In the past three days, more than 500 Midlanders have sought legal status under the program, which offers illegal aliens eligibility for temporary residency and amnesty from deportation if they have resided in the United States continuously since before Jan. 1, 1982. They must apply for permanent residency within 18 months and can eventually apply for citizenship.

Fires, explosions rock several American communities

From wire reports

Major disasters struck today and Wednesday in Los Angeles; Henderson, Nev.; Norco, La; and Ranger, Texas.

■ In Los Angeles, a fire raged through five floors of a 62-story office tower today, killing a man trapped in an elevator and injuring 33 people as a rescue helicopter plucked 10 people from the roof of the city's tallest building.

The fire broke out late Wednesday on the 12th floor of the First Interstate Bank and was put out 3½ hours later. The cause was under investigation.

■ In Henderson, fire smoldered today at a crater in the ruins of Pacific Engineering and Production Co., a rocket fuel plant destroyed by earthquake-force explosions Wednesday that flattened an industrial park, killing one person and injuring more than 250.

The blasts broke windows 10 miles away in Las Vegas, tweaked seismographs 200 miles away, peeled off roofs, upended cars and rocked a jetliner in flight.

■ In Norco, an explosion in a catalytic cracker ripped through a Shell Oil Co. refinery about 3:30 a.m. today, setting off burglar alarms 20 miles away in New Orleans, triggering a fire visible for miles, killing one person, injuring 33 and leaving 5 missing. About 2,800 people were being evacuated.

■ One man was injured when an explosion sparked a fire at a West Texas natural gas compression plant Wednesday, authorities said.

The explosion happened at about 5 p.m. at the Houston Fluid and Leasing Corp. natural gas plant located about three miles northwest of Ranger, said Bill Johnson, administrator of Ranger General Hospital.

Officials at the plant could not immediately be reached.

The Nevada incident "...could have been much worse.... We may have a miracle on our hands here," Gov. Richard Bryan said late Wednesday after several blasts shook the area.

The detonations destroyed or severely damaged 12 buildings at the site of the Pacific Engineering and Production Co. of Nevada plant and an adjoining marshmallow factory.

The blasts — at least three powerful concussions and a string of lesser explosions — peeled off roofs, upended cars and even rocked a jetliner in flight. More than 250 people were injured, four critically, most from flying glass.

Fire Chief Roy Parrish said investigators couldn't determine if the tattered body found 25 feet inside the plant compound was male or female.

"The logical conclusion is we won't find any more bodies," Parrish said. "Everybody has been accounted for with the one deceased."

Bryan said he was declaring the blast zone and its environs a state disaster area, and would seek federal disaster relief for this southern Nevada desert community of 54,000.

District Four hopefuls favor bond issue

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

The three candidates who will be on the ballot Saturday as the first to seek election under the new single-member plan in the Midland school district from District 4 all favor passage of the $11.8 million bond proposal that also will be on the ballot.

The candidates are Jim Builta, a communications technician; Joe Chavez, a representative for a photographic organization specializing in children's pictures; and Jackie Hamilton, a homemaker who has been involved in various MISD, Greenwood and parochial school programs as a volunteer for about 13 years. All three have children in the school system.

Builta

Chavez

Hamilton

Likewise, all three candidates say "a quality education for our children" should be a top priority for any new school board member.

In addition to supporting the bond issue, Builta and Mrs. Hamilton believe Midland school district sex education programs, especially those dealing with AIDS and other communicable, sexually transmitted diseases, should provide information on prevention as well as advocating students abstain from premarital sex.

Mrs. Hamilton also said there is need to concentrate on the basics of education.

"We're living in a very fast society today," she said. Referring to programs dealing not only with sex edcation, but with drugs and alcohol as well, she said, "I really feel that we've got to go back and start with our little kids.

Gramm addresses drug use, honors school trustee

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Sen. Phil Gramm came to Midland Wednesday to spur student leaders on to a drug-free life and to present a federal award to a school district trustee for whom that goal has been a priority.

Student leaders from both Midland and Lee high schools were gathered at Midland College to hear Gramm's talk.

Gallup Polls the past three years have found drug use among teens — not balancing the deficit or the Soviet threat — is the nation's top problem, the Republican senator told the students.

This "human tragedy," Gramm said, affects schools, families and the work place.

One-half of high school seniors graduating this year have tried drugs, one in eight of that population has tried cocaine and one in 10 adults goes to work each day on drugs, the senator said.

"How are we to be a leader on the world market if one in 10 of our workers is on drugs?" the senator queried.

Diversity of campaign characterizes District 5

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The four candidates gunning for the District 5 school board race are as diverse as the area they represent.

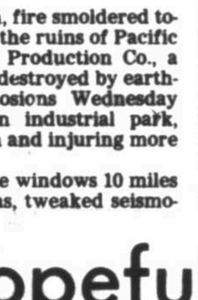

A Midland Independent School District Board of Trustee incumbent and housewife, an oil operator, a small-business woman and a service manager all seek the spot.

Midland oilman-geologist George Staley said this week his top priority if elected is the maintenance of two equal high schools.

Roy Marshall, a service manager at a local office supply store, wants to sit on a board responsive to all factions of the community as well as the teaching staff it oversees and wants night meetings, he said.

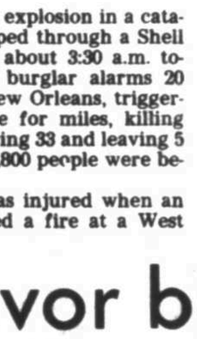

Staley

Marshall

Robinson

Warley

Incumbent Betsy Robinson said her chief concern as a trustee has been and will again be continuing the fight against substance abuse through a comprehensive program.

Robbie Warley, a small-business owner, cites restoring a school board to the helm that will make policy, have public trust and worry less about controversies not related to educational matters, she said this week.

In interviews this week the candidates — whose west central Midland territory represents both high schools — all addressed lowering the dropout rate and upgrading the educational curriculum in the district as one or two of their chief concerns if elected.

Staley couples the maintenance of two equal high schools with a lowered instance of dropouts.

Mayor, two City Council members also on local ballot

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Some Midlanders may not know that Saturday presents an opportunity to elect a mayor in addition to school, hospital and college district races on the ballot.

But "race" doesn't accurately describe the election in which incumbent Mayor Carroll Thomas is running. He, District 4 councilman Robert Rendall and newly appointed District 3 councilman Bob Monaghan all are the only names listed for their respective positions.

Thomas, up for his second term as mayor, said the greatest challenge that faced the City Council the past two years "is the same challenge every person and every business in town faced: to try and keep operating with reduced funds."

He noted that he and the council made a concerted effort to keep taxes down in the face of reduced property valuations across the city.

The council voted no tax rate increase two years ago, he said, adding that the action amounted to a tax decrease for the many Midlanders whose property had been valued at a lower level.

Last year, the council voted an rate increase below the amount that valuations had dropped, he said. "The net effect is that people's taxes today are essentially the same as where they were two years ago," he said.

The mayor, a stockbroker, said that part of the challenge of administering city government in tough economic times is maintaining a base level of services in the face of falling valuations.

Toward that effort, the council is considering presenting a bond issue of about $10 million to voters in September, Thomas said. "I think at that time, when we come to the voters, we'll be showing them some things that are important."

Man who shot himself after robbery may be Dapper Bandit

DALLAS (AP) — A man who shot and critically wounded himself while fleeing a savings and loan robbery may be the infamous Dapper Bandit who has eluded authorities for a decade, police said.

The man, identified as Mark Ervin Reeves, 34, of Dallas, was in critical condition at Humana Hospital Medical City Dallas late Wednesday after more than five hours of surgery, nursing supervisor Carole Morris said.

Reeves allegedly robbed a savings and loan branch using a similar method of operation as the Dapper Bandit, a well-dressed, well-groomed robber who had has heid up 24 Texas banks and thrifts over 10 years.

Police closed in on the suspect at the intersection of an interstate access road. The man shot himself in the neck as police shouted at him to drop the gun, witnesses said.

"The officer with the shotgun told the guy (inside the car) with the pistol — he told him to drop the gun. But the guy just sat there," said Curtis Moore, 38, who witnessed the incident.

"Meanwhile, I'm getting down. All the sudden, I saw (the suspect's) arm go up but without the pistol. Then I heard this loud pow. Meanwhile, the officer is still saying, 'Drop the gun,' and the guy is shaking inside the car."

About 10 people were at the Bright Banc branch on Forest Lane during the robbery, but no one was injured, said police investigator Charlie Royal.

When dispatchers called the thrift to verify a robbery was in progress, a teller told them she believed the robber was the Dapper Bandit.

"I know it's him. I recognized him, and I pushed the button," police said the teller told the dispatcher.

A stolen rental car believed used in the robbery was found near the bank, Royal said.

Police say Reeves likely changed to the Chevrolet El Camino he was driving when they cornered him during a traffic jam on a highway access road. Capt. John Holt said a grenade, two pistols and pair of overalls were found in the car.

An undetermined amount of money was recovered from a vinyl briefcase in the car, and a handheld police monitor, wig and false moustache were also found, Royal said.

The Dapper Bandit is a well-dressed robber who usually sports a wig, mustache and sunglasses to foil bank security cameras. He often leaps over the teller counter on his way in and out.

He also usually brandishes a silver pistol, although he has never injured anyone during a robbery, places the cash in a briefcase, escapes in stolen cars and later switches to a second car to complete his getaway, police said.

"It's a good chance that he is the Dapper Bandit," said police Lt. Al McAllister. "It looks like he is."

However, Holt said an official determination had not been made.

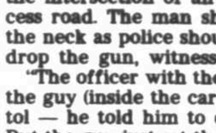

"We are certainly going to look at that very closely, but we have made no definitive statements just yet," Holt said.

McAllister said Reeves had a criminal record, but said he could not disclose any details. However, the Dallas Morning News reported Reeves had a record of arrests for minor crimes dating back to the early 1970s.

Acquaintances said Reeves was a former racecar driver who had not held a steady job for years.

Authorities have connected the Dapper Bandit to 24 robberies since 1978, most of them in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Court rules inmate can't collect $25,000 against radio station

AUSTIN (AP) — An imprisoned murderer who claimed a radio station didn't live up to its promotional promise to play three songs in a row without commercial interruption can't collect $25,000, the Texas Supreme Court ruled.

The Supreme Court Wednesday ruled against Steve Jennings, who is serving a life sentence in a Navasota state prison on a murder conviction. Jennings, after listening to the station in prison, sued country music station KSCS for breach of an oral contract.

The station, as part of a promotional scheme, announced it would play "at least three songs in a row, or we pay you $25,000."

Jennings contended the station did not keep its promise. According to the Supreme Court ruling, Jennings said the station interrupted the playing of three consecutive songs on several occasions by announcing the names of the songs and singers.

State District Judge James Wright ruled in favor of the station without a trial, saying there was no basis for the lawsuit. The 2nd District Court of Appeals in Fort Worth disagreed and sent the case back for a trial.

Wright again granted the radio station a summary judgment. The appeals court partly reversed the ruling, saying at issue was whether interruptions to announce the names of songs and singers qualified as paid commercial interruptions, as defined in the contest rules.

Contest rules defined interruption as only "commercial announcements — paid announcements for products, services or commercial enterprises," according to the Supreme Court ruling.

Jennings, who said in an affidavit he had done some promotional work for musician Ray Wylie Hubbard, told the court the station receives the records it plays on the air from record companies without charge.

The records amount to payment to the company, he said. Therefore, Jennings said, "the defendant makes a paid commercial interruption when it advertises the names of the record company's songs and singers."

The radio station argued the affidavit did not disclose as required how Jennings had personal knowledge of his claims. The Supreme Court agreed, and in a majority opinion reversed the appeals court and affirmed the trial judge's ruling.

Mariachi band, blimp lures amnesty applicants

HOUSTON (AP) — An unlikely combination of Mariachi music, searchlights and the overhead drone of the Goodyear blimp lured the last of thousands of undocumented aliens to the nation's busiest immigration amnesty application center.

But a line of aliens that in the past few weeks had numbered in the thousands dwindled to only a few dozen Wednesday night.

Still, hundreds of people merely wanting to watch the scene gathered in the adjacent parking lot and a steady stream of cars clogged traffic along the street just north of downtown Houston.

With "Los Arrieros," a six-member Mariachi band, playing Hispanic music in the background, Richard Rios, director of the amnesty center, earlier surveyed the line of aliens.

"It may be a 6,000 day," he said simply.

In the 12 months since the amnesty program began, the Houston Immigration and Naturalization Service amnesty center became the nation's busiest single center, with applications expected to top 110,000, officials saiad.

Maria Flores used the trunk of a car to fill out applications for two of her five children. She already has submitted applications for her other children and husband.

"We waited until now because we didn't have the money," she said of the $50 fee for children and $185 for adults. A $420 ceiling was set for families.

She decided to take advantage of the amnesty program for the advantages of being an American citizen.

"Mexico's economy is so bad. It's so expensive and at least here we can make enough money for food and a decent living," said Mrs. Flores, who has been in the country since 1979.

Overhead, the Houston-based Goodyear blimp circled, its lighted sign proclaiming in Spanish and English: "Time Is Growing Short."

A searchlight pierced the dark sky.

Entrepreneurs sold refreshments and portable toilets were set up to accommodate people who had camped out overnight.

"I kept saying tomorrow, tomorrow, tomorrow," said 24-year-old Florentino Montiel, explaining why he waited until the last day.

Some attorneys, conspicuous in their suits, and other volunteers were seated at card tables outside the center, helping applicants fill out the INS forms. A Spanish-language radio station was broadcasting live while an artist sketched pictures of applicants.

Even Houston police officers, directing the steady stream of traffic, helped aliens having problems with the forms.

"I brought my father down here," Officer Joe Garcia Jr. said, pointing to a man working with aliens at a table outside the center.

Many INS workers wore T-shirts saying, "I survived the IRACA crush."

Others caught naps in a small lounge filled with sleeping bags.

"I'd say we are putting in 12- to 16-hour days," Yolanda Arizola, an INS worker, said. "I'm tired, but it's my job."

STATE in brief

Cisneros: Texas needs to change strategy

Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Mayor Henry Cisneros says Texas needs to change its economic development strategy as well as its thinking on political, social justice and ethnic issues if it is to become stronger.

"We think that because we are Texas, things will work out automatically," Cisneros told the Texas Association of Broadcasters meeting here Wednesday.

However, he said that with the federal government "withdrawing from its domestic responsibilities," Texans need to work on an economic development strategy that will work in all corners of the state.

Cisneros compared Texas to California, which he said ranks sixth among all nations in terms of economic strength.

"While we have been depending on the bounty of the earth, California has been depending on the bounty of her human capital," he said.

A key element in the economic development strategy must include investing in education, he said. If not, the mayor said the population will be underproductive and the United States will not be able to compete economically with other nations.

Inmate wins execution stay

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas death row inmate David Allan Gardner, who was scheduled to die by injection next week for the 1980 stabbing death of a Houston man, was granted a stay Wednesday by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Gardner, 33, was set to be executed before dawn next Thursday for the Aug. 26, 1980, slaying of Kandi Kae Reynolds, a 14-year-old runaway who was hitchhiking on an interstate highway near Weatherford.

Two other death row inmates also are scheduled to die by injection next week.

James E. Smith, 35, has said he wants to be executed before dawn next Wednesday for the shooting death of Larry Rohun, an insurance agent, during a 1980 robbery.

Federico Macias, 35, is set to die before dawn next Friday for the 1984 killing of Robert Haney of El Paso. Haney and his wife, Naomi, were killed in their home. Macias once worked for the couple as a gardener.

Southwest Airlines on time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Good weather appeared to help three regional airlines in the Sun Belt post the best on-time records for the second straight month, according to the Transportation Department.

The monthly statistics released Wednesday showed Pacific Southwest Airlines, America West and Dallas-based Southwest Airlines with the fewest number of delayed arrivals during March.

Overall the 14 airlines reporting statistics to the Transportation Department had 78.8 percent of their flights arrive within 15 minutes of schedule, considered on time by the government, during March.

That was a slight improvement over the average 74.7 percent on-time arrival rate in February.

The department, in its monthly consumer scorecard on air travel, said 92.3 percent of Pacific Southwest's flights arrived on time in March. America West had an arrival rate of 89.9 percent and Southwest 86.3 percent.

At the other end of the scale were Northwest Airlines, Trans World Airlines and Houston-based Continental Airlines, all of which the department said were on time 75 percent of the time or less. The same three were also at the bottom in February.

The number of reports of mishandled baggage filed with airlines declined during March, from an average of 8.75 reports for every 1,000 passengers flown in February to 7.48 percent in March.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Slim chance for showers forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of thundershowers are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will reach only into the upper 50s and winds will continue out of the southeast at 5-15 mph.

Friday is expected to be much the same with continued partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of afternoon thundershowers. The high is expected to reach into the upper 80s, with winds increasing to 15-25 mph and shifting from the southeast to the south and gusty.

Wednesday's high of 83 was 20 degrees cooler than the record of 103 set for that date in 1947. The low of 60 was 21 degrees warmer than the record of 39 set for this date in 1933.

STATE

A high-pressure system building across the state brought light breezes and high, thin clouds to many areas of Texas, but most locations were expected to warm into the 80s through the afternooon.

Fog was a problem in many areas of south Texas this morning, especially along the coastal bend. Visibility along the coastline was reduced to a quarter-mile in some places.

Thunderstorms were developing in far West Texas, meanwhile, in the vicinity of Wink, the National Weather Service reported.

Temperatures had cooled this morning, with readings mostly in the 50s and 60s. The 4 a.m. extreme temperatures ranged from 46 degrees at in teh Panhandle at Amarillo to 72 degrees in Del Rio.

The clouds that covered much of the state during the early morning hours were expected to clear through the day. Mostly fair skies were expected throughout the state, although some high clouds were to persist in far West Texas into the evening, forecasters said.

High temperatures were to be in the 80s in most areas, with lows expected in the 50s and 60s tonight, the Weather Service said.

"It looked like Dante's Inferno," fire Capt. Steve Varney said of the Los Angeles skyscraper fire. "Everything that was burnable, burned down. It was just metal and that was red hot."

The fire broke out before 11 p.m. Wednesday on the 12th floor of the First Interstate Bank and was put out shortly after 2 a.m. today, said firefighter Gary Svider. The cause of the fire was under investigation.

Flames visible for miles burned in a red band across the 859-foot building, shooting 20 feet out into the air, and grey and white smoke poured through other floors. Glass from fire-shattered windows sprayed the street.

It was not known how many people were inside when the fire broke out. Some workers climbed stairs to upper stories before they were lifted to safety by a helicopter, but one man trapped in a freight elevator could not get away.

Firefighters continued to search for other possible victims.

"We've got to teach them not only prevention-type programs, we've got to work with them on their academics, their three Rs, because without these type of things they can't make it when they get older."

Saying he believes in teaching abstinence from premarital sex first, coupled with prevention, Builta says, "But you also have to be very realistic. Children are going to succumb to temptation. They're going to experiment. I don't care what you tell them or how much you teach them, there's going to be a certain number who are not going to listen. You've got to teach contraception," he stated. He does not believe teaching abstinence from sex and contraception conveys a double standard to school age children. Builta believes a program that advocates only abstinence "ignores the reality of life."

Saying he believes there has been "a deterioration of moral values" in our youth over that past few years, Chavez said teaching sex education "is a very tough question, but you have to be very realistic about the situation ... it's kinda of like a Catch 22," he stated.

Chavez believes schools should start teaching moral values when children first enter school. As they graduate to higher levels, students should be given materials to take home and go over them with their parents and let the parents take more responsibility on those issues.

If this doesn't work, he suggested these issues probably could be covered "very briefly" in a science course.

Chavez, who has four children, two in Midland schools, believes that with a college degree concentrating on psychology and sociology and the management skills he has acquired in the business world will allow him to make a worthwhile contribution.

"I definitely want my kids to receive the best quality they can get as far as education is concerned and not just for my kids, but for all kids in Midland," he said.

Ms. Hamilton believes her years of experience as a volunteer in various school programs, including drugs, alcohol and suicide prevention, have exposed her to many of the problems that exist in the Midland school system. As a board member, she believes she could help resolve some of these problems.

Builta says he has attended enough school board meetings and, with three children in school, to realize there were problems and "a definite need for a change." He says his parents taught him that you don't just sit back and complain when you see things wrong, you get in and get involved and try to change them for the better.

Two more people were brought down from the 37th floor around 6 a.m. One, a man in his 20s, was reportedly suffering from smoke inhalation. The other person's identity and injuries were not immediately available.

Residents of the Norco, La., neighborhood near the refinery rocked this morning by explosion and fire were among the injured, said Sarah Coletti, a spokeswoman for Shell.

"It looks like there is something on the ground that is burning. It doesn't seem to burn out," said Jimmy Greco, riding in a medical helicopter 1,000 feet over the scene.

The blast occurred at a catalytic cracker, which converts crude oil to gasoline, but no cause was known, Coletti said. The fire continued to burn out of control hours after the 3:30 a.m. explosion.

The blaze cast an eerie glow across the isthmus between the Mississippi River and Lake Pontchartrain 20 miles upriver from New Orleans.

An evacuation center was set up at Destrehan High School.

Wendy Jacobs, another Shell spokeswoman, said 92 of the plant's 1,600 employees were on duty at the time of the explosion.

"There was a big, dark cloud of smoke," said Pamela Pilgrim, an employee at a Ranger conveninence store about five miles from the plant burning there. "I could see it clear from our store windows."

The injured employee, Rodney Pearson of Eastland, was transferred in stable condition to Hendrick Hospital in Abilene with respiratory problems, Johnson said.

A second employee, at first reported missing, was later found to have left the plant earlier, said DPS trooper Charles Rose from Abilene.

Cause of the explosion was not immediately known, officials said.

"All that we are aware of is some welders were working and there was an explosion," said a spokeswoman for the local volunteer fire department who declined to give her name.

The fire was under control by about 6:20 p.m., the spokeswoman said.

The oilman cited statistics that showed the Midland High School Hispanic dropout rate to be nearly 10 times the dropout rate of Lee High School or 56 percent to six percent. The black dropout rate is even worse, according to Staley.

He claimed blacks drop out of MHS at a 16-1 ratio over those who do at LHS or about 50 percent to three percent.

"If we don't maintain a boundary adjustment...with the population moving to the northwest...Midland High School could end up being a 4-A school," Staley maintained.

Staley supported the controversial 1985 boundary change for which current school board trustees caught heat.

Said Mrs. Robinson of the boundary issue: "I voted for the boundary change for two high schools of equal superior quality.

"Boundaries should never be used to achieve an advantage for one school at the expense of another," the incumbent said.

Mrs. Robinson said programs to identify high dropout risk students at the fourth grade can be implemented and used vis-a-vis a "constant mentor relationship" between the teacher, the school volunteer and the administration.

"We need to encourage them to succeed at their own rate," the incumbent added.

While Marshall didn't address the boundary change in his interview, Mrs. Warley said she felt the board ram-rodded the issue through its vote leaving little room for public feedback.

At least two of the candidates — Staley and Marshall — are up for refining the MISD's 24-hour drug policy which prohibits students involved in extracurricular activities from smoking, drinking alcohol or taking drugs.

"It's good to fight drugs and alcohol, but teachers should not be made to be policemen. They should watch the kids at school only," Marshall said.

"Let MISD work with parents and law enforcement personnel" to address the time a child spends out of school, he added.

Marshall further stated it wasn't fair to apply the policy just to students involved in extracurricular activities.

Staley agreed that the 24-hour policy needs to be changed citing the same "teachers aren't policemen" philosophy.

Mrs. Robinson is in support of the 24-hour philosophy and closed high school campuses — a move passed but never enforced by the current MISD trustee board.

"I want to pattern what we do after the 40 drug-free schools U.S. Secretary of Education William Bennett identified (earlier this year) because these schools also have achieved the highest academic rating," Mrs. Robinson said.

Earlier in the spring, Lee Freshman High School was cited by Bennett's department as one of the top 100 drug-free schools in the nation, but didn't make the final cut.

The incumbent maintains that LFHS lost out on the DOE top recognition because of the open campus situation in MISD.

Mrs. Warley, Mrs. Robinson and Marshall said bettering the communication between the board and the community would aid in bringing respect back to the board which oversees the city's largest employee force.

Marshall advocates night meetings to give more teachers and parents the opportunity to come to school board meetings.

Mrs. Robinson wants to develop "town meetings" in her district where she can learn her constituents' educational concerns and take them back to the board, she said.

Teacher morale is low, Mrs. Warley maintained. That population needs to have better policies from the MISD board with which to conduct class, she maintained.

"It boils down to communication with the public, staff and teachers," she said, adding that she would go outside her district to get minority input since few Hispanics or blacks live in District 5.

The three non-incumbents said they are experienced because they are all involved in some facet of the business community and raising children.

The incumbent said MISD hires a superintendent and business manager to handle business and that she is qualified to be a trustee because of her direct experience on the board of trustees.

CITY

As discussed so far among council members, the bond issue would provide money for street drainage and police and fire department communications improvements.

Creation of a new community park in northwest Midland also is under consideration for funding by the bond issue, Thomas said.

With the coming budgeting season at City Hall, Thomas said he and the council will address the issue of rising crime rates with an eye toward investigating police department manpower needs.

The city during this year's first quarter logged an almost 33 percent increase in major crimes — including assualts and burglaries — compared to the first quarter last year. The statistics prompted a call from Police Chief Richard Czech and local crime watch groups for more policemen on the street.

"I'm sure we're going to look real hard at that in July when we're budgeting," said Thomas, who stopped short of assurances that funding for more manpower will materialize.

He noted that nationwide studies of police personnel levels don't "necessarily" show more officers results in less crime. "It's not necessarily a black and white issue," he said. "You can't just throw more policemen at the problem and expect it (the crime rate) to improve."

For the coming two years, Thomas expected that the city budget crunch that came with falling oil prices will continue.

While state officials — including Comptroller Bob Bullock — have noted improvement in the Texas economy, the Permian Basin is lagging behind the rest of the state, Thomas felt.

As a result, "Indications are that our valuations will be reduced at least somewhat for this next period," he said.

Incumbent City Council member Robert Rendall, who represents District 4, echoed Thomas' assessment of the tough economic times that faced the council over the past two years.

In noting that falling city sales tax receipts in the face of stable population counts also have added to the crunch, attorney Rendall praised city administration for coping with the hard times. "The real honors go to the administration," he said. "We have fewer people doing more jobs, and doing them well."

Over the next two years, "I don't think you're going to see us spending an inordinate amount of money on things that we don't need to," he said.

However, "We have some catching up to do," the incumbent councilman said in preface to logging support for a city bond issue.

He noted that the bond proposal constitutes an example of long-term planning by the council and city administrators. The capital improvements money should last four or five years in "providing the infastructure that necessary for our city to grow," he said.

Rendall noted that most of the bond funds would not directly improve conditions in his district, which roughly is bounded by Wadley Avenue to the north, Loop 250 on the west, and easterly reaches into central Midland.

However, "The way I look at it, what is a benefit for the community also will benefit my district," he said.

District 3 councilman Robert Monaghan represents the newest face on the city's top policy making body. Since Monaghan was the only candidate listed for the District 3 position, the council last month voted to appoint him to the slot vacated when former councilman Kelly Fish resigned.

A independent oil operator and veteran of long service to the Republican Party, Monaghan is the president of Cal-Mon Oil Co. in Midland.

He served as Midland County Republican Chairman from 1970 to 1976 and attended Republican National Conventions in 1972, 1976, 1980 and 1984. Monaghan served as regional chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaigns in 1980 and 1984.

The candidate lists civic experience as a member of the Midland County Criminal Justice Council in 1973 and Planning and Zoning Commission membership in 1973 and 1974.

Monaghan humorously recalls relating his decision to stand for the council position to Midlander Ernest Angelo, the Republican National Committeeman from Texas.

Monaghan said he was not asked to fill the position. "I said, 'Well, Ernie, I'm rather bored with the time I'm spending, and if you don't have somebody...'"

Anglo, who was driving at the time, "almost wrecked the car," Monaghan said. "Everybody I talked to said I was the last one they would have asked."

However, "I need something to do with my time," he explained.

While Monaghan acknowledges "I'm just still feeling my way" into the council position, he has identified at least one area where he would like to place an emphasis.

"One of the reasons I came on here is that I place our law enforcement officials very highly," he said. "I'll do everything I can to assist them."

Addressing Chief Czech's call for more policemen to combat a rising crime rate, "I think we're going to have to," said Monaghan.

DEADLINE

"As they say, better late than never," said Mark Everson, an INS deputy commissioner from Washington who presented Feiloakitau a tiny Statue of Liberty replica.

As of Tuesday, 1.4 million people filed applications nationwide, and 475,000 people were seeking legal status under a separate program for seasonal agricultural workers, the INS said. The deadline for that program is Nov. 30.

"At this time, it appears we will break 2 million" for the combined programs, INS spokesman Greg Leo said in Washington, D.C.

Most of the applications were received in the West, where 1.3 million people have applied for amnesty under the two federal programs. The Western region is comprised of California, Nevada, Arizona, Hawaii and Guam.

Illegal aliens who have lived in the United States continuously since before Jan. 1, 1982, were eligible for temporary residency and amnesty from deportation under the program. They must apply for permanent residency with 18 months and can eventually apply for citizenship.

AMNESTY

Mrs. Hernandez said 110 people filed for amnesty in the twilight hours, including 35 who were seasonal agricultural workers and have until Nov. 30 to apply under a separate program.

The federal government estimated last year that from 1 million to 3.9 million of the nation's estimated 6 million illegal aliens would apply for amnesty, according to the Associated Press.

Now that the amnesty program has ended, the Immigration and Naturalization Service will shift emphasis to employers and impose sanctions against those who knowingly hire undocumented workers.

Starting June 1, the INS has the discretion to issue warning citations or fine employers who violate the law.

A former salesman in Mexico, Juarrieta came to the United States in October 1981. He now works as a cook and moonlights on evenings and weekends as lead guitarist for a local band.

Asked why he left his homeland, Jurarrieta said he knew he could make more money in the United States.

"I just crossed the border," he explained, refusing to divulge how he managed to elude U.S. Border Patrol agents.

Unlike other illegal immigrants who waited until the last minute to apply for legal status because they feared the amnesty offer was a trap, Juarrieta pronounced, "I'm not afraid."

Juarrieta had to submit a four-page application and provide documentation such as utility bills, pay stubs or rent receipts to prove eligibility.

Physical examinations, photographs and fingerprints also were required of the Mexican national, who observed that the "hardest part is remember all of the dates."

If a computer search turns up no history of illegal behavior, Juarrieta will receive his temporary residency card and must later apply for permanent legal residency. He can ultimately apply for citizenship.

"It's not over by any means," he said. "It's just the beginning."

GRAMM

Gramm said high school youths look up to their student leaders and will try drugs if they see the latter group experimenting.

The elementary student magazine, Weekly Reader, polled fourth-, fifth- and sixth-graders recently about the use of drugs. Some respondents from a group that young admitted they had tried drugs to "fit in," Gramm said.

"Who do they want to fit in with?" Gramm asked. Not the Congress, not the president, but the student leaders, of course, the senator said in answer to his own question.

Gramm said nipping that trend could be accomplished by the student leaders' denial of drugs. "If you don't use drugs, it won't be cool and the way to 'fit in' will be to not use drugs."

Midland Independent School District school board member Betsy Robinson has worked toward that goal by helping implement positive peer pressure programs within the district.

Drug Enforcement Administration Agent-in-Charge Ed Mazurak and Gramm presented an award to Mrs. Robinson for her anti-drug endeavors.

"Between Fall 1986 and 1987 Mrs. Betsy Robinson aggressively pursued the adoption of a new drug policy," the agent said.

"She's worked eight to 10 hours a day on her own time" and 90 percent of the district's efforts to battle drug abuse are because of her, Mazurak said.

Her work, the agent claimed, resulted in the MISD's national recognition for its substance abuse program at Lee Freshman High School earlier this year.

Mrs. Robinson described the award for "outstanding contributions in the field of drug law enforcement" as "a fantastic surprise and an honor.

"But our whole community deserves the award," she added. "There are so many systems at work here."

Mrs. Robinson has worked with local agencies to implement drug policies within the district as well as with U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith's office.

Smith's office has been instrumental in getting funding approved for the 17-county drug task force in Midland and for ALL-STAR and other MISD positive peer program endeavors, Mrs. Robinson said.

Koop defends mailing of sexually explicit pamphlet on AIDS

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop today defended the mailing of a sexually explicit pamphlet on AIDS to every American home, saying the brochure is designed to prevent "the greatest threat in the way of an epidemic we've ever had."

But the head of an anti-abortion group called it "a disreputable intrusion into family life."

Koop, appearing on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said, "When you send sexually explicit information into the homes of this country in order to prevent the greatest threat in the way of an epidemic we've ever had, I think that that is defendable."

In another interview on "CBS This Morning," Koop declared, "My position in this government is that of surgeon general. I'm not the chaplain to the conservatives. And I have to be the surgeon general to all of the people of this country, and if there's a health message it has to be delivered."

The eight-page pamphlet, being mailed in sealed envelopes, includes a description of the role of condoms in helping to prevent the spread of the fatal virus.

Judy Brown, president of the American Life League, called the brochure "a disreputable intrusion into family life."

Also interviewed on NBC, she said the pamphlet left out key scientific evidence that would discourage promiscuity. She accused Koop of suggesting that it's all right to have sex with an unmarried partner "if he's willing to discuss his former sex habits with you."

"What this brochure does is degrade, if you will, sexuality to nothing more than a mechanical act that people are subconsciously going to be involved in, that they cannot practice self-control," she said.

The American Life League, which describes itself as a national, Christian organization with 300,000 members, opposed President Reagan's nomination of Supreme Court Justice Anthony M. Kennedy and has called for the Roman Catholic church to excommunicate its members who support abortion rights.

Koop and Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen began a series of appearances to draw attention to the massive mailing aimed at informing every U.S. household about the dangers of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which has killed nearly 33,000 Americans.

Koop told NBC: "There is tremendous misinformation abroad in this land...This will set the record straight. It tells you how you will not get AIDS but tells you very explicitly how you can get the virus."

Koop said his brochure was approved without changes by the White House, although he did not know whether President Reagan had personally gone over it.

Koop was asked on CBS-TV's "This Morning" about conservatives who do not like the publication:

"This went to the White House, it was seen by the domestic policy council, it was seen by the chief of staff. It was also tested on 80 different focus groups, and 288 organizations with an interest in AIDS had a part in this preparation," he said.

"It is still a good idea because we will be able to get material into homes where families can discuss it and add their own moral, religious, ethical values and not be afraid their youngsters are going to learn things they'd rather not have them hear," said Koop.

Bowen told a news conference Wednesday the $17 million project is "the first time the federal government has attempted to contact virtually every resident, directly by mail, regarding a public health crisis."

Koop's photograph appears on the cover, along with a brief message over his signature.

"Some of the issues involved in this brochure may not be things you are used to discussing openly," the surgeon general wrote. "I can easily understand that. But now you must discuss them. We all must know about AIDS. Read this brochure and talk about it with those you love."

There were a few complaints that such a mailer should have gone out a year earlier, but the slick and explicit booklet drew widespread praise for its contents.

"This pamphlet should be required reading for every American citizen," the American Hospital Association said in a statement.

"Everyone who reads this mailer will understand the disease better, and I hope this understanding will lead to urgency and compassion, and replace panic and fear," said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., who blamed unnamed "White House censors" for blocking such a project last year.

Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., criticized the mailing.

"You get the impression that none of us have anything to fear from associating with people who have the virus, ARC (AIDS-related complex) or AIDS," said Dannemeyer, whose district is next to Waxman's. "Nothing could be further from the truth. The report should not go out to the American people."

The first batch of brochures is to be picked up by the U.S. Postal Service in three days in preparation for deliveries starting May 26. Posters have been distributed advertising: "You Asked For Answers About AIDS. They're In The Mail."

The second page of the brochure bears the heading "How Do You Get AIDS From Sex?" and goes on to say it "can enter the body through the vagina, penis, rectum or mouth."

"Anal intercourse, with or without a condom, is risky," it continues. "The rectum is easily injured during anal intercourse."

The fourth page contains a headline asking: "What Is All The Talk About Condoms?"

"For those who are sexually active and not limiting their sexual activity to one partner, condoms have been shown to help prevent the spread of sexually transmitted diseases. That is why the use of condoms is recommended to help reduce the spread of AIDS."

Boy who survived icy plunge in pond now roots for Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — An 8-year-old boy who survived being submerged 20 minutes in a pond in February is hoping to root for the Cincinnati Reds this summer.

James R. Reilly has been at Children's Hospital Medical Center here since Feb. 16, when he fell through the ice while playing at an industrial park near his Cincinnati-area home in northern Kentucky's Boone County.

These days J.R., as he is known to family and friends, spends his time writing, talking with nurses and doctors and playing with a big brown teddy bear near his bed. Doctors aren't saying when he can go home.

He keeps track of the Reds, his favorite baseball team. "Eric Davis and Pete Rose are my favorites," he said.

His youth and vigor are advantages in recovery, and he seems more alert, his mother said. He is active in his hospital ward, and he knows the nurses' and doctors' names.

A physical therapist works on strengthening his legs and improving hand-eye coordination.

The youngster was rescued by his 14-year-old brother, Michael. "I was scared and cold at first," Michael recalled. "But when I thought about J.R., I didn't feel cold at all."

After 20-25 minutes, Michael pulled his brother to shore. Once James was out of the water, Charles Deaton, 17, of Newport, Ky., who was nearby, performed cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

He remained in a coma for about a week, but regained consciousness.

Since then, J.R. has made steady progress. The accident decreased his lung capacity, and he must work to regain his strength and coordination, but there has been no sign of brain damage, doctors say.

NATION IN BRIEF

Republicans grumbling at quick rewrite of trade bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are grumbling that a quick rewrite by House Democrats of the omnibus trade bill aims at winning enough Senate votes to override a veto while retaining a plant-closing provision opposed by President Reagan.

The House voted 253-159 Wednesday to remove curbs on exports of Alaskan oil from the 1,000-page bill, which won final passage last week. The move was contained in a resolution authorizing technical changes in the bill.

The resolution would simply authorize an official known as the enrolling clerk to erase the oil provisions while he is dotting the i's and crossing the t's in the mammoth piece of legislation.

Republicans complained that deleting curbs on Alaska oil exports after the bill was passed violated House rules and was designed to gain the votes of Alaska's two Senators. Democratic leaders, however, said their plan was fashioned as a compromise gesture to Reagan.

Detectives hop on case

KENILWORTH, N.J. (AP) — Tricks may be for kids, but this kidnapping case got the police hopping.

It started when 6-year-old Michelle Rizzo discovered her pet rabbit, Smokey, was missing Sunday morning and a ransom note was left in the animal's place, police said.

"If you ever want to see your stupid rabbit alive again, leave $50 in an envelope under the railroad crossing sign behind your house," said the note, fashioned from newspaper clippings pasted to a piece of paper.

Michelle's parents, Joseph and Vera Rizzo, called Police Chief Charles David, who is their neighbor, and detectives worked the rabbit-napping case on their day off.

Detective William Dowd photocopied $50 worth of currency and placed it in an envelope. He told Michelle, her 8-year-old brother, Joseph, and 10-year-old sister, Antoinette, to follow the rabbit-napper's instructions and deliver the envelope to a specified rock under the sign at 5 p.m. Sunday.

About 40 minutes later, police arrested two boys, ages 14 and 15, after one of them grabbed the envelope. A third boy confessed after questioning from his mother.

Police found Smokey in a cardboard box in a shed behind one of the culprits' homes.

New LaRouche trial likely

LaRouche

BOSTON (AP) — Prosecutors plan to push for a new trial of extremist Lyndon LaRouche and his associates in a federal conspiracy case that continued for four months until a judge declared a mistrial.

"We will press for a new trial and we will get this case to a verdict," Assistant U.S. Attorney John Markham said after District Judge Robert Keeton's decision Wednesday.

LaRouche, six aides and five affiliated organizations are charged with raising money for LaRouche's 1984 presidential campaign through credit card and loan fraud and with conspiring to stymie a grand jury investigation of the alleged fraud.

The slow-moving trial began in December. Among other twists, defense lawyers charged the government with deliberately withholding information, including a memo in which two key figures in the Iran-Contra scandal discussed alleged infiltration of LaRouche groups.

Keeton excused four jurors who complained about the length and conduct of the case, forcing him to call a mistrial.

Man picked for Justice slot

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. attorney who formerly ran the Justice Department's narcotics division has been chosen to head the department's criminal division, an administration source says.

The source said Edward S.G. Dennis Jr., the U.S. attorney for Philadelphia, apparently is the only name Attorney General Edwin Meese III has submitted to the White House for the position. The source spoke on condition of anonymity.

Dennis would fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Assistant Attorney General William Weld, chief of the criminal division.

Weld and Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns resigned March 29 out of concern that Meese's continued tenure at Justice, in the face of a nearly yearlong criminal investigation, was hurting the department's operation.

Lumber concealed cocaine

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Federal agents expect they'll have a record, 4-ton cocaine seizure once they finish inspecting all 9,000 boards in a shipmment of hollowed-out, cocaine-packed Brazilian lumber.

Two Colombians and an American, meanwhile, were in custody on drug conspiracy charges, awaiting bond hearings Friday before a federal magistrate.

The haul from the British-registered Amazon Sky reached 3,500 kilograms, or 7,700 pounds, by late morning, said authorities, who expect the yield to hit 8,800 pounds by the time the inspection is finished later today or Friday.

"If true, it would represent the largest cocaine seizure in U.S. history," U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle said at a news conference Wednesday.

Jackson dunned for funds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina businessman who made a $25,000 loan to Jesse Jackson to help pay for a trip to Syria in 1984 says he's considering taking the Democratic presidential candidate's campaign to court if he's not repaid.

Marion "Rex" Harris, a businessman from Fayetteville, N.C., said Wednesday he has not been reimbursed despite repeated requests. He said he was "mad as hell about it."

In the course of the trip to Syria, Jackson scored a diplomatic coup by securing the release of Navy flyer Robert Goodman.

Remaining illegal aliens more vulnerable to exploitation

By LARRY MARGASAK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of illegal aliens who didn't apply or couldn't qualify for amnesty were left today in a legal twilight zone, more vulnerable than ever to exploitation by employers, according to groups working with the undocumented residents.

"For people who don't have work, it will be tougher to get a job. For those who have jobs, it will be more difficult to quit," said Charles Kamasaki, director of political analysis for the National Council of La Raza, an organization representing Hispanics.

That's because with the end of the amnesty application period at Wednesday midnight, U.S. immigration authorities are free to concentrate on enforcing penalties against employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers.

If employer sanctions work as expected under new immigration law, many jobs will dry up for illegal aliens.

They will find it more difficult to locate other work if their employers decide to lower salaries, drop benefits, violate health and safety standards, parcel out home work at substandard pay, or otherwise take advantage of their plight.

The Rev. Monsignor Nicholas DiMarzio, director of migration and refugee services for the U.S. Catholic Conference, said the remaining illegal aliens "have few, if any, rights or the ability to get out of those situations. For the people who are stuck, it will be a rather miserable existence."

The Immigration and Naturalization Service has estimated there were 6 million illegal aliens in the country before applications were accepted for the general amnesty program that ended Wednesday, and a special agricultural program that ends Nov. 30.

With more than 2 million expected to qualify from both programs, that would leave about 4 million illegal aliens. Nobody knows the precise number and the total fluctuates as some people leave and others cross the border into this country.

Officials of the major groups working with the aliens agreed that most would try to remain in the United States.

Some believe they face political persecution in their native lands. Others have already tried and failed to make ends meet back home, and are now in what one group official called a "last desperate effort" to gain security.

If they're caught and deported, they'll only end up back home anyway.

Beginning June 1, INS will be able to tighten the noose around the necks of employers caught violating the law.

On that date, INS will end a one-year phase-in period during which first offenders only received warnings. Now, if they're caught, they're subject to heavy fines.

Richard E. Norton, INS associate commissioner for examinations, said there were no plans for mass round-ups of illegal aliens but promised "increased enforcement at employment sites."

In addition, he said, INS will watch carefully for fraudulent documents and make heavy use of computer programs designed to identify undocumented aliens through welfare payments.

Norton said INS is "well aware" of employers with a history of hiring illegal aliens, adding, "We've been conducting enforcement operations against them for years."

Kamasaki, the La Raza official, said unscrupulous employers "may be in a better position to reduce wages and lower working conditions and labor standards, because these folks, unlike in the past, are not going to be able to quit and go somewhere else to work."

"It's an open question as to whether they have labor rights," he said.

Linda Wong, immigration director for the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, said many aliens would remain in the country illegally as "a last desperate effort" to find security.

"They have tried to make it on their own in their country of origin, and were not able to support themselves and families," she said.

She predicted that the illegal aliens "will manage to get work" because some employers will take the chance that they won't be caught.

Meese 'go-ahead' led to contract, ex-deputy claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House deputy wrote a note in 1982 to his boss Edwin Meese III that "your personal go-ahead to me" led to a $32 million no-bid federal contract going to Wedtech Corp., a congressional report says.

Wednesday's bipartisan report by the Senate subcommittee on oversight of government management concludes that Meese and the former deputy, James Jenkins, violated White House ethics rules on government contracts, resulting in "improper favoritism" to Wedtech. Meese was counselor to the president at the time.

The subcommittee's conclusion, disputed by Meese's lawyers, is the latest in a series of disclosures and allegations that have harmed Meese's tenure as attorney general.

Meanwhile, Justice Department aides to Meese were busily answering questions about a new controversy surrounding the attorney general: his letter soliciting 30,000 lawyers and businessmen to accompany him to a conference in Japan.

Assistant Attorney General Charles J. Cooper, head of the department's office of legal counsel, concluded the Meese trip and solicitation "meet applicable legal and ethical standards," said department spokesman Terry Eastland.

The matter is under investigation by the Office of Government Ethics, which polices a presidential order forbidding officials from conflicts of interest or actions that have the appearance of conflict or favoritism.

Meese's letter was sent April 26 by the trip sponsors on the attorney general's stationery with the Justice Department seal.

When Meese and other Justice officials approved his letter, they were unaware that the non-profit sponsor, People to People International of Kansas City, was working with its profit-making arm to recruit participants in the trip and a private conference in Japan on international legal and economic issues, said Eastland.

Meese and Jenkins got involved with Wedtech despite at least three warnings at various times by two White House officials not to do so, the Senate subcommittee report found.

Then-Cabinet Secretary Craig Fuller told Jenkins not to get involved, but Jenkins went ahead anyway because Fuller "wasn't my boss, so he couldn't tell me not to," Jenkins told the Senate subcommittee staff.

In addition, the report said, a note to Jenkins initialed by Fuller stated: "Strongly recommend no White House action be taken."

Finally, former White House counsel Fred Fielding told the Senate subcommittee staff that he had advised Jenkins either directly or through Fuller not to intervene on behalf of Wedtech.

Jenkins' efforts culminated with the award of the engine contract to the South Bronx, N.Y., defense contractor, which had long been at odds with Army officials who thought Wedtech's price for building small engines was too high. Jenkins' note to Meese in the fall of 1982 said, "your personal go-ahead to me saved this project," according to the Senate report.

The bipartisan report said E. Robert Wallach sent Meese 16 memos in 1981 and 1982 detailing Wedtech's efforts to get the contract.

Wallach, under indictment in the Wedtech scandal, was paid $1.3 million by the company.

"Former Counselor to the President Edwin Meese III and former Deputy Counselor Jim Jenkins failed to observe the White House policy on contacts with procurement officials, which failure resulted in improper favoritism toward a specific contractor," the report said.

The White House procurement policy in effect since October 1981 says, "obviously, no member of the White House staff should contact any procurement officer about a contract in which he has a personal financial interest or in which a relative, friend or business associate has a financial interest."

"In looking under the Wedtech rock, the subcommittee has uncovered a picture of greed, influence-peddling and corruption," said the panel's chairman, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

Woman driving through nightmare caused by car's stolen license plate

MOUNT KISCO, N.Y. (AP) — Helga Huitt is 83 years old, doesn't do a lot of driving and gets very few parking tickets.

Well, she gets a lot of tickets, actually, but she shouldn't.

Mrs. Huitt, who lives in Manhattan, had a license plate stolen from her 1975 Plymouth Duster in Albany two years ago.

By the end of the next day, she had reported the theft to New York City police and received new plates from the Department of Motor Vehicles.

That was not the end of it.

Mrs. Huitt has gotten notices from the New York City Parking Violations Bureau about 169 unpaid tickets totaling $9,299, including interest and penalties.

She tried to explain, but the notices kept coming. A default judgment had been issued, they said. We can take your property and bank accounts, they said.

"I was living in a nightmare," she said.

Finally through the help of state Sen. Mary Goodhue, Mrs. Huitt was recently given a letter from the parking bureau clearing her of the tickets and saying she didn't owe New York City a cent — for now.

"We solved this, but there is something wrong with the system," Mrs. Goodhue said. She and Gregory Breen, an administrative supervisor for the PVB said that as long as someone is still out there with her license plate, the computers say it's her car violating the parking laws.

And she'll still get dunning notices.

"There is nothing in the system to trip it if someone has reported the car stolen or the plates stolen," said Mrs. Goodhue.

Mrs. Huitt had so much trouble because she had lost the police receipt showing she had reported her car stolen. That infuriates Mrs. Goodhue.

"There should be a system to double check against stolen license plates and stolen cars," she said. "You can have two cars out there with the same plate and the wrong person getting dunned. These things shouldn't be allowed to continue happening. PVB computers should talk to DMV computers."

Breen admitted that there was no mechanical system that would notify PVB that a ticket was given to a stolen car or plate.

The burden of proof was on the victim, as it were, to show that the vehicle on the ticket isn't theirs or wasn't where the ticket said it was, he said.

• EXPERIENCE IN BUSINESS

"There is a major difference in managing a business when you are the owner and your name is on the note. That's a course that is not offered in college" - KEN MARKS

KEN MARKS has owned and operated Commercial Electronic Supply Company in Midland since 1962. He has not only survived, but prospered during the booms and the bust. By making prudent business decisions and treating people fairly and honestly, Ken and his wife Mary Lea have been a credit to the Midland business community. We need this type of experience to manage the budget and personnel of MISD.

• EXPERIENCE IN EDUCATION

"The best experience comes from the mistakes we make and learn not to do again. I hope to give the voters of Midland the benefit of my experience without the cost associated with those mistakes" - KEN MARKS

KEN MARKS has worked as a volunteer in MISD schools for the last 20 years. He has helped his four children through their education by being there. He has been an active supporter of the children, the teachers, the administrators, and the schools through his involvement in PTA, Booster Club and Fellowship of Christian Athletes. He has given 20 years of his time and his money because he loves kids - all kids. The only way to get experience in working with our schools is to have done it. Ken has done it.

• EXPERIENCE IN COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT

"This community has given so much to me over the years and I have made every attempt to return the favor. Every parent can't or won't get involved. It's our job to help make up the difference" - KEN MARKS

KEN MARKS has paid his dues and wants to continue paying. The only way to judge a persons commitment to a cause is their past performance. Ken has performed well. He is on the Midland Chamber of Commerce Education Committee. He sponsors the teacher of the month award. He is past president and vice-president of the Lee High School Booster Club and still spends many hours each year supporting the school with his time and his money. He served on the PTA Advisory Board and is still active in PTA. He sponsors the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, and holds the meetings in his home.

Ken doesn't just say he is concerned - His involvement shows that concern. We need someone with a proven commitment to serve as our trustee.

Twins hope ordination sends message of hope to blacks

CHICAGO (AP) — Identical twins Charles and Chester Smith say they want their journey to the priesthood from a Chicago housing project to be an example of hope for young blacks.

"People look toward us as a sign of hope," the Rev. Charles Smith in a telephone interview Wednesday night. "People see us and see men who didn't have the best things growing up, make some good of their lives and they say, 'Maybe I can do that.'"

The 29-year-old Smiths, believed the first black twins to become Roman Catholic priests in the United States, were ordained together April 16.

They grew up in the Chicago Housing Authority's Altgeld Gardens on the city's Far South Side, but Chester doesn't remember the housing project as a bad experience.

"Everyone knew each other and cared for each other. Oh, sure, there were teen pregnancies and drug problems. But generally it was a good atmosphere," he said.

The family — which also included a younger sister, Marcheta, now 26, and a younger brother, Kermit, now 25 — attended Our Lady of the Gardens, run by the Society of the Divine Word religious order.

Encouraged by their mother May and their parish priest, the late Rev. Edward Delaney, the twins attended the order's high school in East Troy, Wis., and its college near Dubuque, Iowa.

"The father (Delaney), a white man, spoke to us about the need for black men to become leaders in the community," Chester said. "He told us, you should be black priests because your people need you."

The twins said they arrived independently at their decisions to become priests. Chester was working with black youths in the Watts section of Los Angeles, and Charles was working with the poor in Bolivia when they decided on careers in the church.

The Smiths said they both saw a way through the priesthood to help people make a better life for themselves.

"There is racism, but we are determined enough to transform the church and society and make it right," Charles said. "It won't be easy, but we can't let that stop us. We must struggle."

Charles is heading for California in July to serve as associate pastor at St. Anthony's in San Bernardino, in a parish that is predominately black and Hispanic.

"There are whites, too. Maybe I can build a rainbow coalition and show them we can work together," he said.

More than 200 older 737s to get special scrutiny

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 200 older Boeing 737s belonging to U.S. airlines are under special scrutiny for possible cracking and corrosion as a result of last week's terror aboard an Aloha Airlines jet in which the cabin tore open during flight.

The Federal Aviation Administration announced Wednesday that all Boeing 737s with more than 30,000 landings are to be visually inspected for cracks and corrosion in the upper part of the fuselage. Those with at least 50,000 landings must undergo special tests with high-frequency electronic equipment, the agency said.

The wider inspection was ordered in part because "several additional reports of corrosion, delamination and cracks" were discovered in a number of aircraft since the Aloha accident a week ago, the FAA said.

The agency did not say what airlines were involved in the discovery of additional cracks and corrosion. The inspections apply to the top section of the plane from just behind the cockpit to the tail section.

The FAA reiterated a warning issued in a directive last November that such cracks if close together and allowed to corrode "could result in a structural failure of the fuselage" if not corrected.

Investigators believe such a sequence of events likely occurred aboard the Aloha jet last Thursday when a 20-foot section of the cabin wall and ceiling ripped away 24,000 feet. A flight attendant was swept to her death and 61 people were injured before the plane landed in Hawaii.

The 19-year-old plane was one of the oldest and most heavily used Boeing 737s manufactured, with a history of nearly 89,000 landings.

FAA Administrator Allan McArtor nevertheless said the older Boeing 737s subject to the increased inspections are "just as safe as newer models." He said the aircraft warranted closer scrutiny because in light of the Aloha accident "it is time for an abundance of caution"

David Jimenez, a spokesman for the Boeing Co., said in Seattle that there are 212 Boeing 737s operated by 19 U.S. airlines in domestic service that would be subject to the FAA inspections announced Wednesday.

Another 161 Boeing 737s with more than 30,000 landings are owned by foreign airlines and fly outside the United States, he said. While these planes may be inspected they are not directly subject to the FAA order.

House chairman seeks to shut 'door'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House chairman says he'll move swiftly to fashion a plan to stop former members of Congress and top executive branch officials from becoming instant lobbyists right after they leave government.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., says he plans follow the Senate's footsteps and begin moving "revolving door" legislation "in a very short time" in his Judiciary government relations subcommittee.

"There is broad agreement in the Congress that we should be moving on this," Frank said Wednesday at a subcommittee hearing prompted by Senate passage last month of an ethics bill to put Congress for the first time under post-employment lobbying restrictions.

During Senate debate, supporters referred to the cases of Lyn Nofziger and Michael Deaver, who ran into legal problems in connection with high-priced lobbying after they left top White House posts.

Witnesses gave Frank's subcommittee mixed reviews about the Senate bill, with John Keeney, acting head of the Justice Department's criminal division, saying the Reagan administration favored some parts of it and opposed others.

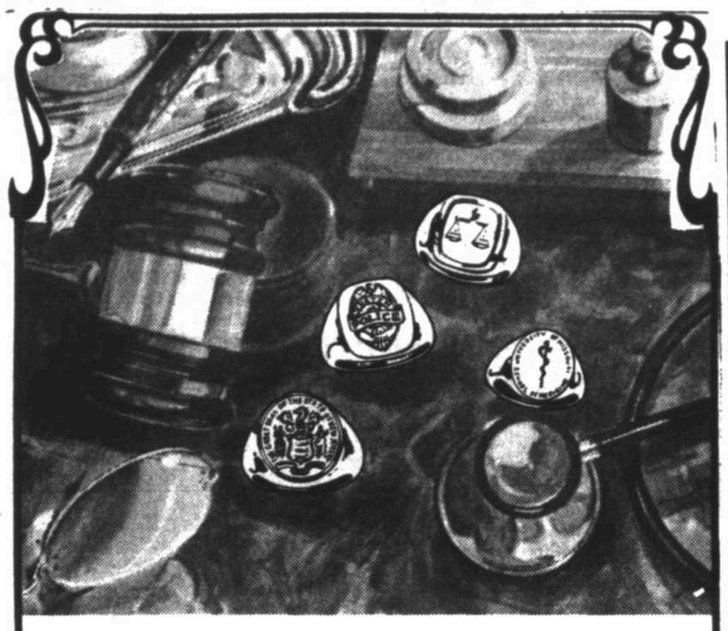

Keeney said the Senate plan is too broad because it would simply ban much for-pay lobbying by former lawmakers and senior political appointees for a year after they leave their jobs.

Instead, Keeney said, prohibitions against cashing in on inside knowledge and connections should have a "nexus" between the lobbying and the official's former position or responsibilities.

A much-criticized 10-year-old ethics law does not cover Congress — which Keeney says the administration feels should be covered — and puts a year's ban on top-drawer executive branch officials lobbying their former agencies.

Critics say the law has been eroded by Office of Government Ethics rulings that compartmentalize agencies, banning a former official's contacts with his or her previous section but leaving them free to lobby elsewhere in the agency.

The Senate bill would prohibit former high officials from lobbying anywhere in the executive branch and trying to influence members of Congress for a year. Former lawmakers could not lobby Congress or top White House aides and Cabinet secretaries for a year.

Uncontested office seekers need votes

Contested races always get the attention in any election. That's understandable because it is in those positions that voters are asked, by the nature of the election process, to make a "choice" — to pick one candidate whose platform, personality, positions and so forth makes him more attractive to the individual voter.

But there are those candidates who because of the nature of the news business and public interest, don't draw much attention but are just as necessary to our form of government. They are the candidates who face no opposition and their "races" are just as important to the final election product as those involving several candidates.

Saturday's election involves a number of uncontested positions on the Midland City Council, Midland County Hospital District board and the Midland Junior College District board.

Specifically those candidates are incumbent Mayor Carroll Thomas, and City Council members Robert Rendall and Bob Monaghan, who was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Kelly Fish; incumbent hospital district directors James Ramsoure, Mrs. Margaret Purvis and Mrs. Pat Estes; and incumbent college district board members Parker Humes, Gloria Hinojosa and Bill Kleine.

These individuals have in the past willingly offered themselves for public service and as a result the entire community of Midland has benefitted from the high quality of governmental services. Midland voters should be particularly proud that these qualified individuals have been willing to serve.

When Midlanders go to the polls, they should be thinking in terms of the contested races, of course, but they should not overlook the uncontested candidates who are on the ballots. Remember, your vote counts just as strongly in those "non-races" because those candidates seek a show of support from the voting public.

Meat inspection plan may have gaps

WASHINGTON — Ask officials at the U.S. Department of Agriculture why they are so sure their new beef inspection plan will put clean beef on your dinner plate. They will answer in two words: quality control.

Jack Anderson

Random quality-control checks by inspectors working for the USDA and for meatpacking companies ensure that the beef is wholesome, according to Ron Prucha, assistant administrator for the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

But records we obtained under the Freedom of Information Act raise questions about the integrity of quality-control checks conducted at one pilot plant participating in the USDA program. The records describe an incident that may flag a weak link in that new system.

As we reported previously, the new streamlined inspection system, or SIS, being tested at four plants in Texas, Nebraska and Colorado, puts meatpacking plants in charge of controlling filth, a task traditionally performed by government inspectors. Company inspectors keep records of their activities, which are reviewed by USDA inspectors. Government inspectors are also supposed to conduct their own surprise inspections.

Prucha told our associate Stewart Harris that if the meatpackers failed to detect contaminated beef, the contamination would be caught in the random checks by quality-control inspectors.

But a memo written by a government inspector on May 21, 1987 describes how company workers at the Monfort plant in Grand Island, Neb., gave a special cleaning to some cattle tongues before they were seen by a quality-control inspector.

"I ask how can this monitoring be a true picture of their product?" USDA inspector Dora Fries says in her official memo about the alleged incident.

Fries' memo says she was working on the slaughtering floor when a quality-control inspector employed by Monfort came along inspecting cattle tongues, which were being prepared for the supermarket. The quality-control inspector took five finished tongues from the assembly line and hung them on inspection hooks. He then walked away to wash his hands.

While the inspector had his back turned, a worker on the Monfort assembly line reportedly took pains to make sure the tongues passed inspection even though they had already been processed. He took one tongue off the inspection hook and washed it. He trimmed the tonsils from another tongue and hide from a third before the inspector returned, according to the memo.

Fries and another government inspector, Marvin Miller, told their supervisor, Franklin Powers Jr., who wrote a memo of his own. Powers quotes a company inspector who said the workers washed tongues that were not destined to be examined by quality control.

Prucha told us incidents like this are few and far between because the government inspectors are there to catch company workers who try to doctor the quality-control checks.

A Monfort official told us that a flurry of memos from government inspectors criticizing SIS is largely "bull." The government inspectors resent the fact that company workers are taking over their jobs, said Dr. Rod Bowling, Monfort vice president for quality control.

Bowling said that Monfort has half a dozen quality-control inspectors on the plant's "kill floor," and it is impossible for workers to know when the next inspection will be.

What do you say about a real loser?

Last week when the President heard that the Baltimore Orioles had broken their losing streak of 21 games, he immediately called Howard Baker in and said, "Let's get these guys to the White House."

Art Buchwald

"But, sir, it wasn't a good record. It was a bad one. The Orioles lost 21 games in a row. No President has ever invited a team to the White House because they lost so many games."

"Nevertheless, Howard, I think I should greet and honor them for their fortitude. That's what the Gipper would have done. When a team drops that many games and then wins one, a president should recognize it. Why don't we hold the ceremony on the White House lawn? While I'm vetoing a trade bill, the Orioles can play fetch with Nancy's dog."

"Mr. President, don't you think it's a mistake for you to be photographed with people who have dropped the ball so many times?"

"I don't see anything wrong with it. We're not honoring a team for losing 21 games, we're recognizing them for winning one. I believe by inviting the Orioles to the White House that we are paying tribute to all Americans who strike out most of their lives."

"Since you put it that way, Mr. President, it does make sense. After all, we have had losers in the White House before."

"Who was that, Howard?"

"I can't remember the names, but many of them worked right here in this building."

"Well, no one ever told me about it. Now what should I say to the Orioles?"

"Why don't you say, 'As always, victory has a hundred fathers, but the Orioles are orphans'?"

"Maybe I ought to say something about what losing to Congress has meant to me."

"How about the reason the Orioles have been able to accomplish what they have so far this season is that they're team players?"

"That doesn't sound right. What about this? 'The Orioles represent the best in America because they lost their 21 games and never asked for federal money.' "

"I think you've hit just the right note, Mr. President. From there you could speak about the difference between Soviet teams and American teams."

"What is the difference?"

"In the Soviet Union you pay for mistakes. In the United States you get paid for them."

"That sounds good. Maybe instead of greeting the team on the White House lawn I should hold a black-tie state dinner in their honor?"

"Mr. President, we're not talking about the World Series winners. Baltimore deserves a reception, but I think a black-tie dinner would be overdoing it."

"But it would give me an opportunity to include all the losers Nancy and I forgot to invite to the White House during my eight years in office."

"Sir, one of the reasons those people are losers is because they have never been invited to the White House. You don't want to change that at this late date, do you?"

"No, I don't. We better go back to the White House lawn. I think I'll declare the day I meet the Orioles a national holiday and give government employees the day off."

"But suppose, sir, the Orioles win a second game? What will you say then?"

"I don't know ... it's times like these when I miss him."

"Who, sir?"

"Larry Speakes."

Cook County politics add twist to Bush race

CHICAGO — It is, as a radio personality here used to say, a beautiful day in Chicago and a great day to be alive. It certainly is for Jim Dvorak, neophyte chairman of the Cook County Republican Party.

George F. Will

He is having a generally grand time being a new boy in the Grand Old Party, and this is a particularly entertaining day. A Democratic officeholder is busy denying charges that jobs were at stake when he was having sexual relations with several women who, according to reports, say they — just the women — were one another's lovers.

Do not, fastidious reader, arch your eyebrow censoriously. I know this is a family newspaper. So is the Chicago paper reporting the story. Anyway, such is the pell-mell pace of life here that no scandal's hold on public attention survives the swift arrival of the next scandal, and it is the following:

An aide to Mayor Eugene Sawyer (both the aide and the mayor are black) has weighed in with the thought that Jews are engaged in an international conspiracy for world control and that Jewish doctors have injected blacks with the AIDS virus. The aide, who dismisses Christopher Columbus as "this Hispanic Jew," says he is not anti-Semitic. The mayor, according to an assistant, wants the rhetoric "tuned down."

Oh, it's a toddling town all right, and Dvorak intends to make it a two-party town. White ethnic voters have been voting for Republican presidential candidates most of their lives. They have helped elect Republican Gov. Jim Thompson four times and the Republican secretary of state twice. Soon, says Dvorak, these voters will "stay on our side, down the ballot." That is, down where it counts, where there are the local offices that control jobs for the boys.

Dvorak, this apostle of trickle-down Republicanism, is a meaty man of Czechoslovakian descent. He is a homicide detective turned politician, which is a pattern here. He says, "I'm not a global thinker," but he theorizes that policemen and politicians have two things in common. When dealing with individuals, they usually are dealing with grievances about the world. And both are "against another person, combating."

Chicago's slumbering, irrelevant old-time Republicans find that what he calls "attack-style politics" sets their teeth on edge. But Dvorak thinks it is the right style for the period that began with the end of what he calls, with a nice choice of words, the "tremendous stability" of Mayor Richard Daley's years.

He and others like him are products of the late 1970s when, he says, "the nonsense started." He is referring to affirmative action in places like the police and fire departments.

Dvorak, a Republican for less than three years, is an example of the upward mobility that is possible in the fluid politics of a city that has many unmelted ethnic blocs and simmering racial tensions. White ethnics still [illegible] he about the slogan the late Mayor Harold Washington used to rally blacks: "It's our turn."

Many of Chicago's white ethnics are turning Republican. Dvorak says his job is to convince others that (in Chicago these things are not taken for granted) they can vote Republican without losing municipal services: "They still collect my garbage. If my garbage catches fire, the fire department will still come."

To former Democrats like Dvorak, joining the Republican Party is a bit like going to a costume party. He is impeccably turned out in snappy loafers, dark suit, blue button-down shirt, yellow tie, yellow suspenders, yellow breast-pocket handkerchief. As he chats, a beeper on his belt summons him to call another Democrat-turned-Republican, Edward R. "Fast Eddie" Vrdolyak, the former alderman and former Cook County Democratic chairman who is a future God-knows-what. Asked how he is enjoying life as a Republican, Vrdolyak, who dresses with more than a dash of flash, replies drolly, "Great. I've bought 12 pairs of wing tips. Threw out all my cufflinks, pin collars. Nothing but button-downs." Ah, the sacrifices one makes for the public weal.

George Bush's candidacy could advance, or trip, in such wing tips. Only once since 1920 (1976) has anyone won the White House while losing Illinois. Illinois, and especially Cook County, will be a test of Bush's ability to hold on to the approximately half the white Chicago vote that Reagan won in 1984.

However, for the real Chicago politician (Dvorak is a beginner but a quick study), what matters are the local offices that dispense all the jobs that are not "under Shakman." (That is Chicago shorthand for a court ruling — pure communism, the politicians agree — that restricted the right to hire and fire on political considerations.) When in 1962 a national reporter congratulated a Chicago boss because Illinois' Democratic Gov. Adlai Stevenson might be elected President, the boss was unimpressed: "That's only national."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, May 5, the 126th day of 1988. There are 240 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 5, 1961, astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr. became America's first space traveler when he made a 15-minute, suborbital flight in a capsule launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

On this date:

In 1494, during his second voyage to the New World, Christopher Columbus first sighted Jamaica.

In 1818, the political philosopher Karl Marx was born in Prussia.

In 1821, Napoleon Bonaparte died in exile on the island of St. Helena.

In 1891, Carnegie Hall (originally named Music Hall) had its opening night in New York, with a concert conducted by Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky and Walter Damrosch.

In 1904, Cy Young pitched the American League's first perfect game as the Boston Red Sox defeated the Philadelphia Athletics, 3-0.

In 1912, the first issue of the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda was published. (In the Soviet Union, where the old-style calendar was still in effect, the date was April 22.)

In 1920, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were arrested and charged with the murders of a shoe factory paymaster and guard in Braintree, Mass.

In 1925, John T. Scopes was arrested in Tennessee for teaching Darwin's theory of evolution.

In 1926, author Sinclair Lewis rejected the Pulitzer Prize for his novel "Arrowsmith," telling the selection committee in a letter that "all prizes, like all titles, are dangerous."

In 1942, sugar rationing began in the United States during World War II.

In 1955, West Germany became a sovereign state.

Parker 'best candidate'

The election of Midland Independent School District trustees Saturday is the most important occurrence for our children and the future of the city of Midland.

Price Parker, candidate for District 3, has conviction, the dedication, knowledge, and interest of our children and community. His background in management, as well as part-time instructor at Midland College, leads me to believe he is the best candidate.

Literature, public forums, and a personal knowledge of Price have further led me to realize that he is the best choice for our district. In comparison with information put out by all three candidates, Price Parker is the only one who has addressed the needs of the district.

I encourage you to vote for an honest, interested, and concerned parent, Price Parker, for District 3 school trustee Saturday.

Gwyn Claybrook
Midland

Builta for District 4

The upcoming school board race is an important one to Midland parents. The voter's guide in Sunday's newspaper is an important tool in evaluating the candidates on major issues.

I urge the voters in District 4 to study the positions of our candidates carefully.

Ms. Hamilton stated she wants the school system to start "just say no" programs as early as the kindergarten level. I have no interest in the school district teaching my upcoming kindergartners any such issues! Moral standards are set in the home and especially at this age! Children should be taught self-discipline, and a generic code of ethics can be used in achieving such.

Furthermore, what represents a clean body and clean mind to Ms. Hamilton? Should the school system take the stand that a child with AIDS, a pregnant teen or a child with homosexual tendencies is unclean or cannot learn? If so, you bet there will be dropouts!

The school board must structure the system in accordance to that for which it was established. That is to give quality education, teach discipline and to control the children's environment while in the school's charge. Educate them in a manner that they can go on and live viable and productive lives through hard work and self-control.

Finally, go back to basics and give the classrooms back to the teachers! Let them do the job they have trained for — teach! The state and local governing bodies have imposed so many rules and regulations on these men and women they can't do their jobs. They're afraid and the students know it — and count on it!

My personal choice is Jim Builta. His goals are plain and simple: He wants good quality education for our children. He wants to make sure Johnny can read.

For those parents who care more about their first grader being able to read about Dick and Jane than coming home confused by sensitive moral issues, then Jim Builta is the right choice.

Think about it....

Give women a chance

I am disappointed in the Reporter-Telegram's recommendations for a new school board.

I attended the forum at Midland College for districts 5, 6, and 7, and apparently got a different opinion from these candidates. There were some very intelligent women candidates there that outshone most of the other candidates. I would like to mention their names: Robbie Warley, Mona Craig, and Diane Anderson.

Your headline states "MISD trustee vote sets new course," but from most of the candidates you chose it should read vote sets same old course.

The paper stresses that the utmost importance this year is choosing a board that can work together in harmony, and do so quickly. This is important, but do we have to have the same type of representation as the previous board to achieve that?

In my opinion we could use some intelligent mothers on our new school board. Let's give the women a chance! The three I mentioned are excellent choices.

Also, there was one candidate from District 7 who I was impressed with, Ken Marks. He seems very intelligent and sensitive to the needs of our children.

Let's vote for a change, not the same old thing. My thanks go to the League of Women Voters for holding the forum at Midland College; it was very informative.

Consider alternatives

Surely the Midland Educators Association president, as well as school board members and aspiring candidates, must know their error in contending that passage of the proposed $11 million-plus bond issue will not increase taxes.

If the current bonded indebtedness is refinanced along with the proposed bonded indebtedness, it is very probable that the annual bond payments (and annual tax payments) may result in no increase in annual payments if the term of such bonded indebtedness is extended sufficiently long enough. But the total amount of payments on such consolidated indebtedness must of necessity be a very huge increase in bond payments, interest and individual taxes. In addition, such bond issue will extend for a long term of years in involuntary lien or mortgage on each property a taxpayer owns.

We all know that the interest on such renewed and extended bonded indebtedness will amount to near the amount of the principal bond issue, and interest does not buy anything in the way of benefits for education.

Why can't our school system do as many others have done — convert to a 12-month system and make proper use of our good teachers who are paid on a full year's basis anyway, even though they only teach for nine months? It would seem that if only every other grade alternated every other year on a 12-month basis that it would easily result in a meeting of the so-called required 22-to-1 teacher-pupil ratio.

Especially at this time of economic adversity in our area shouldn't the electorate be wise to require our school board and teachers to look at alternatives to such proposed bond issue?

Scientists develop new egg to curb cholesterol

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Scientists have developed eggs that don't raise human cholesterol levels like regular eggs, and are trying to prevent heart disease by identifying food chemicals that reduce blood cholesterol.

Both efforts at making diets healthier were outlined Monday at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Suk Y. Oh, an associate professor of nutrition, and colleagues at the University of Utah added fish oil to chicken feed. Hens that ate the oil-enriched feed for eight weeks laid eggs that reduced blood pressure and blood fats in a group of 12 people and, unlike regular eggs, didn't raise cholesterol levels.

The eggs taste and smell like fish, but Oh said that can probably be avoided by feeding hens deodorized fish oil.

If Oh's preliminary findings are confirmed in a larger study, "consumption of such eggs will not increase the risk of developing coronary heart disease" no matter how many are consumed, he said.

Oh said fish oil-enriched eggs could join existing low-cholesterol egg substitutes in markets by summer 1989, but because of the price of fish oil, the eggs would probably cost about 40 percent more than regular eggs.

The American Heart Association recommends people eat no more than 300 milligrams of cholesterol daily because high levels of the fat-like substance in blood are linked to increased risk of hardening of the arteries, heart attacks and strokes. A regular egg averages 274 milligrams of cholesterol.

In the other study, nutritional sciences professor Charles Elson and colleagues at the University of Wisconsin found that daily consumption of 140-milligram capsules of lemongrass oil, a spice common in Thai food, reduced blood cholesterol more than 10 percent in more than one-third of a small group of people with unhealthy high levels.

Elson now is testing other foods containing chemicals called isoprenoids to learn if they also can inhibit the body's formation of cholesterol from simpler fats.

"We're looking in beer, wine, citrus peel and oats," he said. "We've found a compound in barley. Any green plant has similar compounds, and some also are in milk. If we're correct, we could create a diet composed of a variety of foods containing factors that work together to control cholesterol."

Alcohol may boost AIDS vulnerability

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — People who have unsafe sex with AIDS-infected lovers may be more likely to get the deadly disease after drinking a few beers or moderate amounts of other alcoholic beverages, a study suggests.

"Alcohol does affect the immune system. Alcohol makes you more vulnerable to AIDS infection," said Dr. Omar Bagasra, who presented the study Tuesday at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

"I'm not saying not to drink or not to have sex, only to have safe sex if you're going to have sex. Make sure to use condoms," said Bagasra, a microbiologist-immunologist at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey.

Bagasra said the study also suggests moderate drinking may speed the development of full-fledged AIDS in people who have been infected but show no symptoms of the disease.

Previous research suggests that because alcohol reduces inhibitions, drinking makes people more likely to engage in unsafe sexual activity that can spread the AIDS virus, such as anal intercourse without condoms, Bagasra said.

He said his study indicates moderate alcohol consumption also may reduce the body's biological resistance to infection by the virus once it gets in the bloodstream.

Bagasra and Philadelphia researchers Dr. Andrea Kajdacsy-Balla of Hahnemann University and Dr. Harold Lischner of Temple University based their findings on an experiment using blood from six healthy heterosexual volunteers.

The disease-fighting white blood cells were grown with the AIDS virus in laboratory glassware.

The blood cells were tested after the volunteers spent one month without drinking alcohol, then 13 to 17 hours after each drank an average of four beers or the equivalent in other drinks.

The virus grew 25 to 250 times faster in the white blood cells after the volunteers drank, and each cell contained more viruses.

Three to seven hours after the volunteers had no alcohol left in their bodies, their cells still produced smaller amounts of interleukin-2 and soluble immune response suppressor factor, two substances necessary for proper functioning of the disease-fighting immune system.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome cripples the immune system by destroying certain white blood cells and other cells.

"It's a very interesting study and deserves being followed up with (larger) clinical and epidemiological studies," said Dr. John Leedom, head of infectious diseases at the University of Southern California and AIDS service director at Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center.

Leedom cautioned that the drinkers' blood cells were exposed to higher doses of the AIDS virus in laboratory glassware than they would be inside the body.

But he said alcoholics are more prone to infections such as pneumonia and meningitis than other people. And several studies have linked certain cancers to moderate drinking.

Other scientists have suggested that drugs and alcohol may be "co-factors" required for AIDS infection to occur, and it will be interesting to see if Bagasra's study can be repeated in other laboratories, said Janet Nicholson, chief of clinical immunology at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

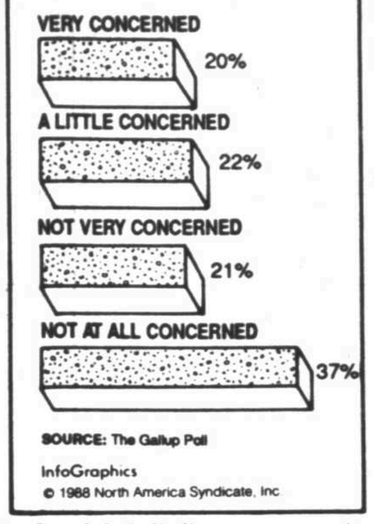

Bagasra said he plans to repeat the study in July with up to 200 volunteers.

"People are infected by this virus for years before they get sick. Something tips the balance," Leedom said. "People who drink even moderate amounts of alcohol might make their (blood cells) more susceptible not only to virus particles that come in from outside during sexual episodes, but they might be rendering them more susceptible to infection from a neighboring."

Public's fear of contracting AIDS

According to a Gallup Poll, less than half of the public are "very" or "a little" concerned about catching the AIDS virus.

Doctor promotes message of wellness in form of game

Copley News Service

Dr. Lance Dale is a man with a message — a message too important for ordinary forms of communication, so he's invented his own. He put it in a game.

What people would tune out if it came in book or lecture form, he theorizes, they will happily absorb in all-out social combat — that is, across a game board.

The message is wellness.

Wellness by Dale's definition is more than just physical fitness or the absence of disease. It's the harmonious integration of a healthy body, mind and spirit.

Western societies are riddled with chronic lifestyle-related health problems: heart disease, cancer, arthritis, ulcers — all stress related, says the 30-year-old doctor currently completing a three-year family practice residency at the University of Utah.

"A lot of those health problems result from a self-induced lethal combination of bad diet, lack of exercise, smoking, drugs and alcohol," he says. "Something has to be done about that."

Dale likes the current trend in health care which emphasizes preventive medicine and lifestyle education. "So, why not treat the lifestyle before the person ends up in the emergency room with a coronary or a bleeding ulcer?" he says.

The philosophy behind the Wellness Game is to show that life has to have balance and harmony.

Dale, whose youthful appearance and wide smile make it hard to believe he ever harbored a serious thought, is very serious about this. He took a year off between his internship and residency to work on the project.

The game, which draws heavily on Trivial Pursuit for format, requires players to move around a board in pursuit of wellness rings earned by answering questions or performing a specified physical feat.

The concept and the questions are the result of eight months of effort by Dale and Dr. Graham D. Simpson, who runs a medical stress unit at Sparks Family Hospital in Reno, Nev.

While Dale was attending the University of Nevada Medical School, he met Simpson and conveyed his passion for holistic medicine. Simpson talked about his need for a way to help his patients see the connection between health and the relationship between the body and the mind.

The result was the Wellness Game.

So far the creators — and their 13 stockholders, most of them doctors — have pumped more than $250,000 into the project.

They recently began marketing the game in the Los Angeles area and they hope to expand the game's availability to the West Coast, and then nationally.

So far 2,000 of the game's 5,000 first-printings have been sold — 500 in Reno to establish a copyright.

Simpson, who's handling most of the business end of the partnership, traveled with Dale to the annual Toy and Game Show in New York in February to introduce the game. Now they'll wait and see what happens.

The game's biggest asset, according to Dale, is the incredible amount of knowledge packed into its 1,500 cards. It's like having a chance to pick the brains of a pair of doctors for hours on end and all for $29.95.

The game's 4,500 questions are divided among Wellness, Conscience,

Wellness cards offer an eclectic mix of questions ranging from how much blood the heart pumps in a minute's time (5.5 quarts) to what state of consciousness is now recognized as a physiologically distinct fourth state (transcendental consciousness).

Self-Help cards question the player's first-aid knowledge, and Conscience cards are designed to make people think.

A lot of people move through life without ever asking themselves whether they're happy, like their jobs; feel like they're a significant part of the universe or are accepted in their communities, Dale says. Those issues have a direct bearing on their state of mind and health.

SPECIAL DELIVERY

Some drugs are now being delivered into patients' bodies in such a way as to minimize side effects, target specific organs, and control their release. For instance, sustained-release tablets have a coating which slows the release of the active ingredient and controls the rate at which it is absorbed. Other active ingredients are delivered by way of transdermal patches. Worn on the skin like an adhesive bandage, a medicine-saturated patch releases controlled amounts of active ingredients over an extended period. There are also tablets that have coatings which resist absorption in the stomach. In this way, the medicine reaches its intended site, the small intestine, with all its medicinal power intact. These are but a few techniques used to make medicine-taking more specific.

We're easy to reach. Just call 689-9999 or stop by at ALLEN'S PHARMACY, 2101 Midland Dr. For your convenience we hare one hour in house photo service. Slides and custom enlargements are also handled. Be sure you have enough film for taking pictures on Mother's Day, May 8th. A nice choice of candy and greeting cards are still available. Open: Mon thru Sat. 8-7, Sundays 6-10.

HINT:
A drug taken with a full glass of water will be bsorbed into the system at twice the rate of one taken with a small swallow of liquid.

Federal agency says deaths of infants down

ATLANTA (AP) — Deaths among U.S. infants appear to be decreasing, according to a statistical analysis this week from the federal Centers for Disease Control.

For every 1,000 live births in the United States in 1984-85, deaths robbed those infants under age 1 of 694 years of life they would have had if they had lived to be age 65, the CDC said in its weekly report. That was down 7 percent from the average of 749 years for 1980-83.

The CDC measures "years of potential life lost" — by people dying before 65 — as a way to gauge the killers of younger people. Sixty-five is used as a statistical benchmark; most Americans' life expectancy is higher.

Since the number of infant deaths depends in part on the number of infant births, CDC looked at the "years of potential life lost" averages to gauge trends in infant mortality.

The deaths of infants between birth and age 1, of course, take the greatest amount of "potential life" per person; in 1985, the United States recorded 40,000 such deaths.

The CDC found that between its 1980-83 analysis and the period 1984-85, the "years of potential life lost" due to such factors as prematurity and low birthweight, respiratory distress and birth trauma went down for both black and white infants.

"Although there were fewer years of potential life lost for (both) whites and blacks, there's still a big gap between those two groups," said Dr. Dianne Rowley of the CDC.

In recent years, she noted, "there have been programs and strategies initiated to try and diminish the excess numbers of deaths among blacks and other minorities."

The Atlanta-based CDC, in its weekly report, particularly noted a sharp drop in potential life lost to birth trauma and asphyxia — down 33 percent for whites and 31 percent for blacks.

HEALTH BEAT

by Kanti Patel, M.D.

THE SPREAD OF DISEASE

Although people frequently use the terms "infections" and "contagious", many are not sure of their meanings. It is important, however, that a patient knows what the doctor means by "infectious" or "contagious". That way, accurate information can be relayed to friends and family. "Infectious" is the more all-inclusive term. It refers to diseases that can be transmitted either by people, animals, food, water, or contaminated objects. "Contagious", on the other hand, refers to the person-to-person spread of disease. Both forms of disease are spread by microorganisms. A person with an infectious disease poses no threat to other people. A disease such as the flu, however, is both infectious (transmittable) and contagious (spread by personal contact).

The body can fight infections by preventing microorganisms from entering the body, by attacking those that do enter, and by inactivating those it can't kill. Immunization and antibiotics are used to help the body's natural defenses fight off infectious diseases. Contact MEDI-HELP at 805 W. Wadley @ A for your family's medical concerns and preventive health care. We use the MAST Immunosystems multiple allergy test which allows us a full range of vaccines for a complete treatment program. Office hours: 8-8, 7 days a week. Tel. 687-2704.

HINT:
Malaria, spread by mosquitos, is an example of an infectious (not contagious) disease.

Study shows CVS test for new fetal abnormalities to be safe

BOSTON (AP) — A new method of determining chromosome abnormalities in a fetus as early as the eighth week of pregnancy may soon become much more widely available, following a government study that shows it is safe and accurate, a researcher says.

The technique is called chorionic villus sampling, or CVS, and can make an early identification of Down's syndrome and other birth defects. It is now restricted by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to use by researchers on an experimental basis, because the device used to obtain the sample is not approved for routine use.

Because of the success of the nationwide study, however, the FDA may decide to revise its restrictions and CVS may soon become much more widely available, said one of the study's principal investigators, Dr. Laird Jackson of Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia. Jackson presented the findings in Boston at the annual meeting of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

He predicted that CVS might one day largely replace amniocentesis, the current method of obtaining genetic information on a fetus.

CVS has been performed in the United States since 1983, but the government study is the first to carefully assess its safety and accuracy, said Dr. George Rhoads of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, which coordinated the research.

"We're encouraged," Rhoads said Wednesday in an interview. "This was a diagnostic technique which is being used in the community, and we wanted to assess its safety and accuracy so women could make more informed decisions."

Police seize crack valued at $9,200, $8,000 in cash

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland narcotics detectives made their biggest seizure yet of "crack" cocaine in a mid-afternoon raid Wednesday, finding a stash of the drug valued at more than $9,200 in a can of corn chips rigged with a false bottom.

Three persons who investigators say recently moved to Midland from the Los Angeles area were arrested in the north Midland apartment raid which also yielded white powder cocaine valued at $2,700 and more than $8,000 cash.

Investigators said the men, aged 19, 20 and 22, had been selling crack — a pure cocaine derivative formed by cooking the powder — from the apartment for at least two months.

A local Crime Stoppers tip and information from the Drug Enforcement Administration office in Midland led officers to the apartment, Det. Sgt. Larry Bledsoe said.

Officers were surprised to find the crack cooked and pressed into a cake-like form — about the size and texture of a giant oatmeal cookie — in a false corn chip can bottom found in the apartment kitchen.

The 92-gram crack cake was to be chipped into gram-size rocks by the alleged dealers, who would have gotten "outrageous" prices for the powerful drug, Det. Sgt. David Garcia said.

The rocks would have sold for about $100 each, Garcia said.

Police say they are not sure where the cocaine came from, but one officer pointed out one of the men had been questioned by Las Vegas, Nev., police six weeks ago. The Las Vegas authorities were investigating reports of crack dealing when the man was questioned, Bledsoe said.

The 92-gram cake was the largest quantity of crack found in the Midland area since the derivative began appearing in early 1987, the detective added.

No weapons were found at the apartment, officers said.

Curiously, the $8,071 cash — in $100, $50 and $20 bills — was found wrapped in colorful paper, as if it was a gift.

A pharmacist's scale also was found at the apartment and seized.

Officers said the money represented profits from crack sales. They pointed out it probably did not belong to the men arrested, but instead was destined for larger suppliers.

"They (men in custody)...are probably not that worried about us, but whoever they owe this money to," Garcia said.

The men will be charged late today with possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute, Bledsoe said.

Police will ask that the seized cash be forfeited to lawmen for future use in narcotics operations, he added.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

A 92-gram crack cake with a street value of $9,200 sits near a bag of 27 grams of powder cocaine valued at $2,700 and a rock-like substance police have yet to identify. Midland police also seized more than $8,000 cash in a raid Wednesday which resulted in the arrests of three men.

Wildlife officials charge UTPB in nest destruction

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A charge of violating Texas laws governing destruction of active migratory bird's nests have been filed against the University of Texas of the Permian Basin by the state Parks and Wildlife Department.

During a news conference at UTPB late Wednesday afternoon, Game Warden Gary Mitchell said he filed the charge in Precinct 2 Peace Justice E.H. Hendrick's court following an investigation he and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Special Agent Robert Lee of Lubbock made earlier in the day.

Mitchell said the penalty for destroying the active nests of migratory birds is a Class C misdemeanor that carries a fine ranging from $25 to $500.

He said the penalty can be imposed on a per nest basis but it would be up to the judge to determine the extent of the penalty based on evidence submitted.

"We found evidence of quite a few active nests that were destroyed...also evidence that there were quite a few eggs that broke when the nests fell," said Lee.

He estimated that "upward of 200" cliff swallow nests had been destroyed but he didn't know exactly how many of the nestn contained eggs. "But I'd say lots" of them did, he said.

Bruce Revell, UTPB chief business officer, said the initial decision to get rid of the nests was made "because of the complaints" from a number of people concerning defacement of cars and buildings caused by bird droppings. Revell also said there was concern about the potential health hazard.

Following the complaints, he said, the university contacted local SPCA officials and were told "you could try to discourage the swallows from nesting. We followed that," Revell stated, but later found out the information was wrong.

Asked how many active nests were destroyed by UTPB personnel, Revell said, "To my knowledge only one."

He said nests were knocked down last year also, but only "after the active season."

According to Lee, the actions of the university represented violation of the federal Migratory Bird Treaty Act (1937), which protects all migratory birds in North America.

Boulter: Bentsen one of Senate's most ineffective lawmakers

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, explaining why he is challenging Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, said the Democratic senator "cultivates the image of a powerful Washington insider," but is really "one of the Senate's most ineffective lawmakers."

Boulter, an attorney who practiced law before being elected to Congress in 1985, brought his campaign to Big Spring Wednesday.

He told the approximately 75 people present that he "understands and appreciates West Texas values" and it is those values that guide him and the decisions he makes as a legislator. The lawmaker was born in El Paso and grew up in Levelland.

Boulter termed Sen. Phil Gramm, Republican candidate Troy Fraser — who is seeking to unseat Deomcratic State Rep. Larry Don Shaw — and himself as part of "the new leadership" in Texas.

Boulter said Bentsen, as a Democrat, adheres to "the failed wisdom of the past that does not work."

He criticized Bentsen for voting to approve the "Panama Canal giveaway," which gained U.S. Senate approval by only two votes. The state's senior senator "votes with Ted Kennedy about 80 percent of the time," stated Boulter.

Instead, he said Texas "needs someone in the U.S. Senate to support, rather than cancel, the work of Sen. Phil Gramm."

He termed Bentsen's support of the 60-day plant closing worker notification amendment to the U.S. Trade Bill now before Congress an act of "holding Texas hostage to organized labor."

It is organized labor, he said, that is providing the strongest support for the 60-day amendment that would require companies planning to shut down to notify their employees 60 days prior to the actual closing.

Saying that the United States has "a tremendous drug problem today," Boulter said the demand could be shut off if we "raise the standard of human conduct."

Predicting that Vice President George Bush, as the Republican Party's presidential candidate this year, will carry Texas by 600,000-900,000 votes, Boulter said Texas Republicans will have their best chance to unseat Bentsen and send someone to the U.S. Senate who "will truly represent the interests of the state."

Police hunting for suspect in armed robbery

From Staff Reports

Midland police are searching for a man who robbed a local store at knifepoint Wednesday afternoon.

According to reports, the man walked into the Kountry Kollectibles, 1509 N. Big Spring St., about 2:30 p.m., and began browsing in the store. The man — who remained calm throughout the robbery — asked a clerk for an item, then looked at other items in the store for 15 to 20 minutes.

He then showed the two store employees, ages 38 and 40, a steak knife and demanded money, reports said. After he took $65 cash from the store register, he cut a telephone line, then ran from the store and cut an outside telephone line.

The clerks were not injured in the incident, police said.

The suspect in the robbery was described as a brown-haired white man, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing about 200 pounds.

ED TODD

Helter-skelter, compulsive buying style changing

Todd

Money eludes me.

Occasionally, I sock money away only to find that it has a ready escape route. Often in an impulsive sort of way, I discover something "worthwhile" to buy either by cash, check or credit card. So, I close my eyes and buy.

And after the cash is gone, the bank account is lean, and the credit-card account is building to national-debt proportions, I scan my little kingdom and wonder, "Where are, what are, these treasures that have taken all of my gold?"

Pity.

Time and time again, I buy compulsively and later know not why. I forget "why" having such-and-such was so important and crucial to my peace of mind and very existence.

Let me tell you, friends, that helter-skelter style is changing. I am watching that change and holding on to bits of silver and gold. Mind you, I do not go around shop-lifting to make up for this frugal streak. No, sir. That is not kosher.

For the last four months, at least since the 1987 great Santa Claus hold-up, I have been on an austere, self-denial, non-spending mode. I have been Scrooge-like and reveled in my "suffering" for which I am rewarded: less of that grimy debt buildup.

It has been a good lessen, a worthwhile pursuit.

I recall, when I was but a country boy, Dad would give each of us sons a quarter a week allowance. It was sufficient — all that we needed for those times. Today, I am trying to save a nickel of that quarter.

Of course, you must know that today I do spend money on what I deem essentials and, get this, those things seen and unseen which I truly and deeply want or want to do. But none of this impulse spending.

Just the other day, a couple of fellows, the most likeable and persuasive types, cornered me and tried what seemed to be their dead-level best to sell me a car — new or barely used. Did not really matter, it seemed. Just a car.

Their cry was, "Buy now. Buy now." (But, what you want, of course.)

No, sir. Not today.

I will admit that I could feel a tug on my impulsiveness. But I kept my eyes and mind open and said, at least to myself, "Nope. Ed Todd is not going to let Ed Todd tie him further up in debt. Not today."

Well, in a flash of honesty spoken freely, I told them that a car certainly is not the priority in my life. Actually, beyond a reliable means of moving from one place to another, what kind of vehicle it is hardly matters. Hold it. There is a footnote to that statement. I do imagine myself "roughing it" in the back country in a old, sturdy four-wheel drive Jeep-like vehicle, similar to my dear old friend, the 1966 International Harvester Scout. Scout is waiting for The Doctor to drop by and fix him up.

For the imagined rough-and-tumble me, you can forget about any of those fancy, fat-wheeled, "all-terrain" impressed-with-themselves stuff you see parading the streets. Looks like most of those pampered vehicles would be alarmed at a rough day on the farm, ranch or back country.

Leave the shiny pussy-cat vehicles on the pavement. Let others be impressed by their colors, lines, the "red line," rpm-limits and hog-killing screams in their revved-up modes.

Back to bits and dollars.

It is I, not "they," who may cause any of my debt-based problems. That makes sense today. This blaming-others for debts is a bunch of hogwash at the individual and national levels.

That is sort of like blaming your racing or betting competitor for your losing a race or a game.

No, sir. Look into thyself, Ed Todd, for who is the blame.

Look and examine but do not spend. Not today.

DEATHS

Muckleroy McDonald

Graveside services for Muckleroy McDonald of Midland will be at 1:15 p.m. Friday at Fort Sam Houston Cemetery in San Antonio. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

McDonald died at a Midland hospital Wednesday.

He was born Dec. 31, 1895 in Kaufman County. He was reared in Kaufman and Denton counties. He volunteered for the U.S. Army in 1917 and while serving with the 2nd Division, 9th Infantry, he was wounded in France in 1918. He received the Purple Heart. Following World War I, he returned to Texas and moved to San Antonio and lived there until December of 1986 when he moved to Midland. In the late 1920s and early 1930s he worked for the Federal Bureau of Internal Revenue. He was a self-educated attorney and certified public accountant. He specialized in tax law and retired in 1975.

He met Merle Brown in Corpus Christi and they were married July 4, 1931 in Matamoros, Mexico. She died Jan. 3, 1977.

He was a member of the Methodist church, a 50-year member of the Masonic Lodge #1079 in San Antonio and a 32nd degree Scottish Rite.

Survivors include his son, M. McDonald Jr., of Midland; three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to a favorite charity.

Roy Ward

Honorary pallbearers were to be Nhi Nygen and Jim Newman.

Susan Carey

Susan Mae Carey, 64, of Midland died Saturday at her home following a brief illness.

Graveside services were to be at 2:30 p.m. today at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Gerald Badger officiating. Thomas Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

She was born March 26, 1924 in Marlin and had a resident of Midland since 1966.

Officer gives reward money to department

FRIENDSWOOD (AP) — The police lieutenant credited with cracking a $1.1 million embezzlement case was presented with a $25,000 reward, but the officer turned the money over to his department.

Cumis Insurance Society Inc. supervior Ann Davidson presented the reward Wednesday to Police Lt. Gary Edwards "for his leading role in providing the information that led to the arrest" of Steven Hadley in connection with the embezzlement.

The check was made out to the police department at Edwards' behest.

Edwards said if he'd kept the reward, he "most likely" would have paid off his 1986 Camaro and put the rest in his 6-year-old son's savings account.

"But that's all water under the bridge," said Edwards, who spent half the time devoted to the case in his unpaid off-hours because it was so "intriguing."

"We'll probably buy some equipment and, hopefully, put it into another position in our investigation division," Edwards said.

The officer said he had his eye on Hadley ever since the suspect moved to Friendswood, south of Houston, four years ago under the name Richard Glen Finley and began making huge cash expenditures without any "visible means of support."

Hadley, 40, reportedly paid cash for a $70,000 home and $60,000 for two sports cars.

Hadley remains in the Harris County Jail without bond on indictments from Iowa alleging interstate transportation of stolen money, theft of money and embezzlement from a federally insured institution. He faces 20 years in prison and $30,000 in fines, if convicted.

He also is charged under the name Richard Glen Finley with using a false name to get a passport, a Social Security number and a pilot's license. Those charges could mean an additional 15 years in prison and $250,000 fine.

Hadley is accused of taking the money four years ago from the John Deere Credit Union in Waterloo, Iowa, where he worked.

U.S. Magistrate George Kelt in Houston last Friday denied bond for Hadley because he had access to a $900,000 stock and bond account at a local brokerage firm.

But Hadley's attorney, Robert Sussman, got the account frozen and Kelt is expected to reconsider the bond issue during a hearing this afternoon.

Hadley was arrested when Edwards spotted his picture in an FBI flier issued in connection with the television series "Unsolved Mysteries."

House panel approves $100 million for SSC

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee has approved $100 million for the $4.4 billion super conducting supercollider physics project but barred use of the money for construction and equipment.

"We feel like the $100 million is adequate to hold the team together, the scientists, and also to go ahead with the necessary research and all the preliminaries...getting ready for construction," said Tom Bevill, D-Ala. and chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee on energy. "But we do not intend to start construction on that and put this project on the credit card."

The subcommittee's decision on Wednesday raised the proposed spending from the $60 million it had initially approved for fiscal 1989, which begins Oct. 1. The higher appropriations level had the backing of Democratic and Republican leaders in the House, Bevill said.

President Reagan had asked Congress to approve $363 million for the project, which would use a 53-mile-round particle accelerator to smash subatomic particles into each other. Physicists hope the research will give insight into the basic structure of matter, but also say the project will have practical spinoffs as well.

Supporters argue the super collider is needed to keep the United States competitive in the next century. Opponents say the project would siphon much needed money from other scientific research.

Seven states have been selected as potential sites for the project: Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, North Carolina, Tennessee and Texas.

"Once we're down to a single site, it is going to be even harder to find support for the funding," said Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Mich. and the only subcommittee member from a super collider state.

Bevill said, "This money is not to be used for purchasing equipment or starting construction."

But Pursell disputed Bevill's contention, saying the use of the money will depend on the legal language adopted by the full Appropriations Committee.

Lubbock schools declared free of segregation

LUBBOCK (AP) — A federal desegregation lawsuit that has dragged on 18 years made the final step toward dismissal as U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward declared Lubbock's public schools to be free from segregation.

Woodward Tuesday granted an order declaring the Lubbock school system unitary, meaning that separate systems for whites and minorities don't exist in the city's schools.

The order previously had been signed by school system attorneys and attorneys for the U.S. Department of Justice, which filed the desegregation suit in 1970.

The school system has been under court supervision ever since.

"No one said it was going to be easy," said school board president Gary Boren, who will leave the board following Saturday's school board elections. "This is a great day, a landmark day in the city of Lubbock, that our local citizens have local control, not the Department of Justice and not some lawyers in Washington D.C."

But Woodward's order does not immediately reinstate local control or allow desegregation measures like busing to cease. The court retains jurisdiction for the next three years.

School officials must report to Woodward and the Justice Department semi-annually on the racial composition of each school, busing, magnet programs and school boundaries, said school district attorney Tom Johnson.

If compliance with existing orders is maintained and no new violations occur, the case can be dismissed in 1991 if the government shows no objections.

"There would be the freedom to make changes, but (the school board) must be careful not to create situations which would resegregate or violate someone's civil rights," said Johnson.

Woodward's ruling had been anticipated since a consent decree with the government last fall and was made possible by a settlement in March with four women granted intervenor status in the case.

Juvenile Diabetes Foundation chapter to hold benefit

From Staff Reports

The Midland chapter of the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation will hold a benefit dinner and dance Friday at the Greentree Country Club.

The benefit is being held in conjunction with a JDF golf tournament,a "four person scramble."

The dinner and dance will feature the band Checkpoint.

For information on tickets, which are $50 a couple, contact J. Weston's at 694-1900 or the JDF office at 684-0902.

Recently, the JDF sponsored its second world conference on diabetes research in Europe. Some 150 of the world's leading scientists from 20 countries gathered to discuss the latest developments in diabetes research.

During the three-day conference, subjects were reviewed under four broad research-headings: immunobiology, complications of diabetes, hormone action and research resources.

Reports on the final day of the conference highlighted the need for the further study of subjects such as the extent, frequency and distribution of diabetes on a global scale; the precise nature of the genetic component of the disease; the biochemical basis of insulin production, action and function; development of a method of islet cell or pancreas transplantation without harmful side effects that will replace lost insulin-producing ability; continued and increase support for the maintenance and development of vital animal models for research and introduction of drug therapies that will reverse or prevent the devastating complications of diabetes.

JDF was founded in 1970 in Philadelphia, Pa., by parents of diabetic children who were convinced that through research diabetes could be cured.

Today there are 135 JDF chapters and affiliates throughout the world that have provided a cumulative total of more than $46 millionfor diabetes research since the foundation's inception.

UTPB

"It protects them, their feathers, nest eggs, or any derivatives. The law is very simple," Lee said. "It is a violation to possess, kill, take, sell, barter, harass, and you don't have to have knowledge that it's illegal. So it's a tough law."

The investigation by federal and state wildlife officials began after complaints from several UTPB students and others.

Dr. Edwin Kurtz, UTPB professor of engineering, said he had been approached by students about the destruction of nests and several students had complained to administrators "over the past 10 or 12 days."

Kurtz also said poisoned feed had been put out to kill the birds that flock around the administration building but, apparently, only pigeons have eaten the feed. Cliff swallows don't seem to eat it, he said.

Midlander Midge Erskine said UTPB students also had contacted her about the destruction of nests. One student had collected a significant number of broken eggs, she said.

During the Wednesday news conference, Lee said federal, as well as state, laws had been violated.

However, he said, because of cooperation of university administrators in the investigation, it was decided charges would be filed by Mitchell under state law, which carries lesser penalties than federal laws prescribe.

Under federal law a fine of $10,000 could be levied for each violation, he stated. He will not file federal charges, he said. "We're not in the habit of double-barreling anyone."

Lee said he was satisfied with the way the matter has been handled and that university administrators have agreed to take no further action against the birds until they abandon their nests.

He said he and Mitchell will try to help school officials develop the most effective method of discouraging the birds from nesting around the adminstration building next year.

Saying that "we have discontinued all activities" relating to destruction of nests, Revell said he expected to appear in court to answer the state wildlife department charge on behalf of the university within the 10 days allowed by law.

Agent shoots kidnapping suspect

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A man wanted in Texas for kidnapping was shot by an FBI agent while trying to elude officers, authorities reported.

Milton Dwight Seals, 35, was listed in stable condition late Wednesday at the University of New Mexico Hospital.

The FBI said the shooting occurred when Seals attempted to run his vehicle into an agent.

FBI agents went to the Albuquerque suburb of Corrales to serve an arrest warrant on Seals that was issued in Lubbock Tuesday.

The warrant charged Seals with kidnapping his estranged wife, Teresa Ann Seals, on April 29 in Lubbock. The FBI said the woman was transported to Clovis, N.M.

The FBI declined to identify the agent involved in the shooting of Seals. Authorities did say Seals was in his vehicle at the time and was shot more than once.

The FBI said it also arrested without incident Chris R. Gutierrez, 36, of Albuquerque, in connection with the abduction of Ms. Seals. A warrant for his arrest also was issued in Lubbock.

Jackson's ego hurt most by man in mirror

NEW YORK (AP) — It wasn't screaming fans or the intrusive media that were the greatest threat to Michael Jackson. It was something more insidious, more heinous, more vicious.

Zits.

"I became subconsciously scarred by this experience with my skin," he writes in his new autobiography "Moonwalk," published by Doubleday

"I got very shy and became embarrassed to meet people because my complexion was so bad. It really seemed that the more I looked in a mirror, the worse the pimples got. My appearance began to depress me...The effect on me was so bad that it messed up my whole personality."

The 29-year-old rock megastar was about 14 when the vicissitudes of adolescence assaulted him. He had been vigorously performing with his older brothers — Marlon, Tito, Jackie and Jermaine as the Jackson 5 — since he was 5.

"In those days, the biggest struggle was right there in my mirror. To a great degree, my identity as a person was tied to my identity as a celebrity."

In more recent years, what the reclusive performer has seen in the mirror bears little resemblance to the brown-skinned kid with the wide nose and airy afro.

In his autobiography, Jackson admits to having two nose jobs and a chin cleft made. However, he said he has not had his cheeks or eyes altered or a skin peel or dermabrasion to lighten his complexion.

"All of these charges are ridiculous," he writes. "I don't care what anyone else says — it's my face and I know it.

"What does my face have to do with my music or my dancing?"

Jackson wrote his book with an assist from Doubleday editor Shaye Areheart.

"He was wonderful, very enthusiastic," she said in an interview. "He's just a lot of fun to be around. He loves life and is very enthusiastic about projects he gets involved with. He doesn't do anything he doesn't feel good about. He's a very hard worker."

Michael Jackson is the seventh of nine children born to Joseph and Katherine Jackson in Gary, Ind. He began performing as lead singer with the Jackson 5, which released 26 albums for Motown and Epic.

Their father, a steel-mill worker who played with a rhythm and blues band, was extremely strict with the young performers.

"I wasn't forced into this business," Jackson writes. "I did it because I enjoyed it and because it was as natural to me as drawing a breath and exhaling it. I did it because I was compelled to do it, not by parents or family, but by my own inner life in the world of music."

He hated the CBS-TV variety series the Jacksons had in 1976-77 because they had to dress "in ridiculous outfits and perform stupid comedy routines to canned laughter. It was all so fake."

He didn't want to do the 1984 "Victory" tour with his brothers at a time when his solo career was soaring.

He was reluctant to do the "Motown 25" TV special because of his negative feelings about television, but reconsidered once he was allowed to perform "Billie Jean" — a non-Motown hit.

"When I feel that something is not right, I have to speak up," Jackson says. "I know most people don't think of me as tough or strong-willed, but that's just because they don't know me."

The late Fred Astaire, to whom "Moonwalk" is dedicated," called Jackson after the show and said:

"'You're a hell of a mover. Man, you really put them on their asses last night.

ENTERTAINMENT

ATLANTA (AP) — Margaret Mitchell called it "The Dump." And in its current state, the apartment where she wrote much of "Gone With The Wind" shows the effects of care by those who, frankly, couldn't give a damn.

The three-story brick and stucco building sits in the middle of a muddy lot in midtown Atlanta. Its windows are broken or boarded, its roof is sunken and torn, its walls are sooty.

But a group with $850,000 in financial backing wants to save the 74-year-old building, saying it represents possibly the last chance for Atlanta to properly honor one of its most celebrated residents.

Developers, on the other hand, say "The Dump" can't be restored and should be razed to create a park to complement a recent flurry of construction in the neighborhood.

Miss Mitchell and her husband, John Marsh, rented a first-floor apartment at what was then called Windsor House Apartments from 1926 to 1932. She was killed in a 1949 automobile accident 13 years after her epic novel of the Old South and Reconstruction was published.

The fate of the building is in federal court. Trammell Crow Co., which purchased the property in 1965, sued the city in January after Mayor Andrew Young refused to sign a demolition permit for the apartment building. Young had said he would support demolition as a last resort, but the preservationist group came along and Young agreed to try to save the building.

Trammell Crow had begun landscaping work around the building. Meanwhile, the group, Mitchell House Inc., is drumming up support for a Mitchell memorial project.

John Taylor, president of the group, says most of the other Atlanta sites where Miss Mitchell lived have been destroyed, leaving few physical reminders of the writer.

"This is one of our last opportunities," he said.

Taylor said wants to restore the building to the way it was in Miss Mitchell's time, display the apartment where she did her writing and establish a writer-in-residence program.

While previous attempts at "Gone With The Wind" attractions focused on the popular 1939 movie, Taylor said the apartment project would emphasize Miss Mitchell's book.

"We'd like to keep the literary aspect in the forefront," he said.

The literary emphasis also would keep the project from becoming merely a tourist attraction, he said, though the lack of a major "Gone With The Wind" center in Atlanta is a major impetus for the effort.

Taylor said the restoration effort has raised about $850,000 in cash, pledges and pledged services. He said it also has the endorsement from Miss Mitchell's only remaining heirs — two nephews.

Among the opponents are those who were acquainted with Miss Mitchell and say she would be against the memorial.

"I'm opposed to saving what she called 'The Dump' because Margaret Mitchell herself told me on several occasions that she wanted no museums or landmarks preserved in her memory," columnist Celestine Sibley wrote recently in The Atlanta Constitution.

But Taylor said there are many misconceptions about Miss Mitchell, and the project would offer a chance to clarify her background. And the recent announcement that a "Gone With The Wind" sequel is being written by a Virginia author will generate even more interest, he added.

Writers strike leaves biggest cliffhanger — next year's shows

LOS ANGELES (AP) — We take you to our cliffhanger desk for these late bulletins: Sonny Crockett flips out on NBC's "Miami Vice," Valene Ewing Gibson does herself in on CBS' "Knots Landing" and J.R. Ewing declares war on the entire world in "Dallas" on CBS.

It's that time of the year when television gives series viewers something to chew on over the summer.

The biggest cliffhanger of all, however, is whether these shows will be back in the fall to save their heroes and heroines. The strike by the Writers Guild of America has the television and film industry in a quandary. Since the writers walked out March 7, not a word has been written. In some cases, the writers didn't even wrap up this season's action, much less get to next season's cliffhanger resolutions.

Here are the details:

ABC's "Moonlighting" was forced to cancel its big season-ender, which would have featured a sequence in 3-D. The Coca-Cola Co., which owns the new 3-D process and had planned special commercials for the final show, was left holding 40 million 3-D glasses.

NBC's "L.A. Law" couldn't do its two final episodes because of the strike. But in the final show tonight, Leland McKenzie (Richard Dysart) is approached by a young female attorney with designs on him.

"Miami Vice" ends Friday with Sonny Crockett (Don Johnson) suffering amnesia from a blow on the head and believes he is his undercover alter ego, drug dealer Sonny Burnett. He goes on a rampage and not even his partner, Ricardo Tubbs (Philip Michael Thomas), can pull him out of it.

His wife, played by singer Sheena Easton, was killed by a bad guy last week. The season ends with Sonny speeding away from his friends in his boat.

On "Knots Landing," Valene (Joan Van Ark) is forced to commit suicide in a "Fatal Attraction" kind of ending May 12. Her ex-husband's girlfriend, Jill Bennett (Teri Austin), has become crazed by his continuing interest in Valene and schemes to make her kill herself.

"The final 20-25 minutes of the show is just Jill and Valene, and it's all filmed in sequence," said Sheryl Feuerstein, a spokeswoman for Lorimar-Telepictures. "For all intents and purposes, Valene Gibson will be dead. We have no idea how this is going to be resolved because the writers can't work on it."

In "Dallas," J.R. Ewing (Larry Hagman) declares war on everybody in his effort to re-establish Ewing Oil. He puts brother Bobby (Patrick Duffy) at the top of his enemies list when he learns Bobby owns the rights to the family title. The Justice Department had disbanded Ewing Oil and turned its assets over to Weststar.

J.R. takes his son, John Ross, and hides him in a boarding school to hurt his wife, Sue Ellen (Linda Gray), and her boyfriend, Nicholas Pearce (Jack Scalia). J.R. also feuds with his mother, Ellie (Barbara Bel Geddes), because she has given half of the Southfork ranch to her second husband, Clayton Farlow (Howard Keel).

But there's more: Cliff Barnes (Ken Kercheval) receives some startling news about his sister, Pam. Pam Ewing left the show with the departure of actress Victoria Principal, although she was seen briefly, swathed in bandages after a disfiguring car crash, at the beginning of the season.

On CBS' "Falcon Crest," Angela (Jane Wyman) meets a mysterious person in a church. It could be Chase Gioberti (Robert Foxworth). Chase disappeared when his car plunged into San Francisco Bay last season and Foxworth left the show. The final show will be shown Friday, May 13.

NBC's "St. Elsewhere" will not have a cliffhanger, but plenty happens in the final shows as the medical drama wraps up its final season.

Truth in movie trailers, previews not always a hot concept

By CARYN JAMES
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — It is the coldest fact of a film critic's life: movies may be art or escapism, but they are always consumer products.

If you forget that for a moment — put on your auteur-colored glasses, dismiss the schlock with a wave of your hand — some deceptive trailer, or preview, will knock you to your senses. It will remind you that films depend on marketing and that truth in advertising is not exactly a hot movie-biz concept.

The trailer for "My Life as a Dog" is a blatant reminder of how deceptive film promotions have become. In this sad, funny Swedish film, a 10-year-old boy is sent to relatives while his mother is dying. The preview shows endearing scenes from the movie — the young hero hugs his mom or splashes milk in his own face — while a voice-over intones as if inviting you to church: "It was a year of innocence," a time of "major heartbreaks" and "minor miracles."

Now, "My Life as a Dog" is not that grandiose or false. But while I was scoffing at the trailer-makers' sentimental distortion, the clue to their deception suddenly appeared. "Woof!" said the little boy, on all fours. I realized that this international dog sound was the only word heard from the film. An unsuspecting viewer would never guess the movie is in Swedish with English subtitles.

And if anyone thinks the trailer-makers are even now slapping their heads and saying, "Whoops! We forgot it was in Swedish!" or "Everyone knows it's in Swedish!," consider what care it took to eliminate all sounds except "Woof!"

On a second viewing — I didn't believe my ears the first time — I strained to hear any other authentic word from the film, and caught only one: "Ingemar." I assure you, this dangerously Swedish-sounding name was much fainter than "Woof!" Voice levels are no accident in films; and it is no coincidence that foreign-language films draw smaller audiences than English-language movies.

Mainstream commercial films are also resorting to sneaky suggestions. The frenetic television ads for the short-lived "Switching Channels" — Kathleen Turner in a rage in a television newsroom, facing off against Burt Reynolds and Christopher Reeve — looked suspiciously like ads for the hit "Broadcast News," in which Holly Hunter, William Hurt and Albert Brooks race around a television newsroom. "Switching Channels," a lackluster remake of "The Front Page," bears only the slightest resemblance — a love triangle and a newsroom setting — to the more sophisticated "Broadcast News."

It is disturbing to see fanciful marketing applied to mainstream movies, for such exaggerations have usually been reserved for cheap horror films like the recent "Prison." In its ads, inmates seem to run from some off-screen monster. But as it turns out, the blue light that seems to portend the ghost is the ghost.

Film advertisers have little to fear from disgruntled consumers. No one will boycott the next Lasse Hallstrom film because of the trailer for "My Life as a Dog," and no one should stay away from the film because of it. Few directors have control over how their films are sold. But moviegoers can be forewarned: don't believe anything you see.

Frozen cheesecake on stick passes taste-test

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

If someone asked me to name my favorite desserts, ice cream and cheesecakewould be high up on the list (after chocolate, of course, and peanut M&Ms don't count as dessert — they are breakfast.)

Recently, some frozen food manufacturers have fulfilled one of my wildest dreams and combined ice cream and cheesecake, together in frozen-confections-on-a-stick.

Carnation, the famous milk people, produce Cheesecake Bars, a line of frozen "cheesecake ice cream in a graham cracker coating." Another product, appropriately named WunderBar — "Gourmet Cheesecake on a Stick" — is the product of Ultimate Foods Inc.

We, of course, had to try both of them — it's a tough job, but somebody's got to do it. The taste-testers and some other experts checked out both products for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Cheesecake Bars are available in several flavors, but for our test we checked out the original flavor (which is to cheesecake what vanilla is to ice cream). Each 13.8-ounce package of the bars contains six bars of 2.3-ounces each and costs $2.89, or about 28 cents each. WunderBars come in 8-ounce boxes containing two (!) bars of 4 ounces each and cost $2.59 — or $1.30 each. Quite a bit of difference in both price and size. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Carnation boasts that "Only quality ingredients go into Carnation ice cream. So no matter which of our ice cream treats you treat yourself to, it's sure to taste absolutely delicious." The company also invited consumers to send any questions or comments they might have about Cheesecake Bars — along with "the production numbers and letters located on the side" of the box — to Office of Consumer Affairs, CHK P.O. Box 92965, Los Angeles, Calif. 90009.

WunderBars, since they are marketed by a company that is not as well known as Carnation, have more label advertising, such as "Ready to enjoy right from the freezer!" and my personal favorite: "One bite and you'll discover why every WunderBar is a distinctive work of art." Imagine, edible art! It's available in original (what we tried) and chocolate chip art, too.

Label advertising goes on: "...award-winning cheesecake recipe made from the finest natural ingredients, like dairy-fresh cream cheese, pure vanilla, smooth sour cream and delicious graham cracker crumbs. ... incredibly indulgent dark chocolate ... every bite is an unforgettable smooth, creamy delight."

Don't let the stickiness of the label advertising prevent you from tasting one of these frozen goodies. Both brands proved to be quite tasty and worth a try. There was some difference of opinion about which one was best — one taste-tester liked the lighter texture and chocolate-lessness of the Cheesecake Bars, while another preferred the more cheesecake-like firmness and chocolate coating of the WunderBar.

Both had a cheesecake flavor, but the Carnation product is advertised as "cheesecake ice cream," while WunderBar doesn't claim to be anything but cheesecake — frozen, yes, but still cheesecake.

And it shows, too, in the price. I mean, $1.30 for a slice of chocolate-coated cheesecake is a lot more expensive than 28 cents for an ice cream bar.

But we're talking cheesecake here — and for a dessert lover, the price is worth it. Once in a while, anyway. Maybe on payday ...

Advertising for food processor is deceptive

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

Yes, a "Robot Culinaire Food Processor" can be yours for only $12.79! Lucky you!

If you were one of the lucky thousands to receive this postcard notice locally, you may want to know more about the offer before ordering. What the notice doesn't tell you is the "food processor" is not motorized, but a handheld food chopper like the "vegematic" of years gone by.

The company making the offer is the New York Appliance Warehouse in New York City.

According to the New York City Better Business Bureau, the company has an unsatisfactory business performance record. Specifically, BBB files show a record of complaints alleging nondelivery of merchandise and non-receipt of refunds. The company also has not cooperated with the NYC bureau in eliminating deceptive advertising.

Although the bureau will order one of the food processors to add to our mail order "show and tell" collection, we remind you of our No. 1 mail order buying tip: Beware of exaggerated claims or unrealistically low prices for products.

Proper diet can help prevent osteoporosis

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Women, especially those over 40, are most likely to have osteoporosis, a crippling bone disease. So it's only fitting that Osteoporosis Prevention Week is to begin on Mothers' Day.

Preventing osteoporosis begins, but doesn't end, with a good diet. Exercise, genetics and estrogen also have been shown to affect the occurance of this disease.

For the past several years, prevention efforts have focused on getting people to consume enough calcium-rich foods beginning in childhood, to slow down the rate at which bones lose calcium as a natural part of aging.

Research studies show that most adult women are consuming less than two servings, and teenagers are getting less than the four servings of dairy products they need each day.

Calcium supplements have grown in popularity because women are concerned about inadequate diets, but supplements may not be the best solution. Calcium doesn't work alone in the body. Since other nutrients are needed to help absorb the mineral, eating a wide variety of foods is recommended.

For example, research conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Research Center has documented the influence of the element boron in calcium absorption and in regulating the nutrients and hormones involved in bone building.

After switching from a very low boron intake to an ample intake of 3 milligrams per day, the women participating in the studies lost 40 percent less calcium. The average daily intake of boron is estimated to be 1.5 milligrams. Yet 3 milligrams can be easily obtained by eating lots of fruits, especially apples, pears and grapes, and eating leafty vegetables, nuts and legumes.

A balanced diet each day, which includes dairy products, protein foods, fruits, vegetables and grain products, can supply adequate amounts of nutrients.

While good nutrition and adequate calcium intake is the key to osteoporosis prevention, women also can take other steps to help avoid the disease.

Regular exercise is important for keeping bones healthy. Weight-bearing exercises, such as walking, will lead to denser, stronger bones.

Giving up smoking also is important. Smokers risk heart disease and lung cancer, and also are at greater risk for developing osteoporosis.

Post-menopausal women may want to consult with their physicians regarding estrogen therapy, since loss of the hormone can lead to increased risk of osteoporosis.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's pet peeves declared

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Will you please publish two of my pet peeves? One is people who say, "I could care less." Abby, don't they know that they are saying exactly the opposite of what they mean? If they really do NOT care, they should say, "I couldn't care less."

The other is people who say, "Do you mind if I ask you something?" How do I know if I mind or not before I know what they are going to ask me? I always say, "Go ahead and ask me; then I'll decide whether or not I'll answer it."

I have a few more pet peeves, but I'll settle for these two. Twenty cents is such a small amount to get this across the miles to you. — ALICE J. DUTTON, LYNN, MASS.

DEAR ALICE: Your letter, dated Oct. 5, 1984, reached me just a few days ago, and it cost me 5 cents to retrieve it. I realize that the Postal Service is having its problems, but this is ridiculous!

DEAR ABBY: Every time I see my husband talking, joking or holding another woman while dancing, it brings back some very painful memories, even though at this point in our lives it is innocent. I know I'm foolish for feeling this way, but this was a pattern of his behavior for quite a while when it was not innocent. He has the ability to forget, but I cannot, even though I have tried. It brings back all my old insecurities and feelings of low self-esteem that his womanizing caused me to have for years.

How do I overcome these feelings and forget the past? It made me ill once and I don't want that to happen again. — PAINFUL MEMORIES IN THE BRONX

DEAR MEMORIES: Painful memories can survive only if they are nurtured. The moment they appear, chase them out of your mind!

Forgiving is easy — it's the forgetting that is sometimes difficult. Seek professional counseling if necessary, and learn how to control your thoughts, for they control your emotions.

Most people are as happy (or miserable) as they make up their minds to be.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to comment on the letter from a young woman who was whining because her parents believed that since she was living in their house, she should follow their rules. She thought that they owed her an education and a place to live.

How about getting a job? When I was 15, I worked to pay for my extras. My parents took care of my "needs" — but I took care of my "wants."

When I was 18, I moved out of their house to live closer to the university I attended. I paid all of my tuition, rent, books, living expenses, bills, car, you name it. I worked full-time, went to school full-time, lived on my own and was able to graduate with a 3.5 GPA. I've added up my expenses over that five-year period, and they came to more than $25,000.

My parents are proud of me, and I'm proud of me. I could have stayed out all night if I wanted to — if I wanted to fall asleep in the class I was paying my own money to attend. I became responsible out of necessity, and it paid off. Thanks for giving me the opportunity to gloat. — "BARB" IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR BARB: Go ahead and gloat. You earned it.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest your response to "Good Citizen" in the Great Falls Tribune. The question concerned the power of law enforcement officers to arrest drunk drivers.

In your answer, you gave an example of a Los Angeles officer investigating a driver who is slumped over the steering wheel (presumably drunk and passed out) while the car is stationary. Apparently, in L.A., this person could be arrested only for being drunk in public, but not for drunken driving.

In Montana and some other states, such as Missouri, Indiana, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Utah, Ohio and Arizona, the drunk person slumped over the steering wheel of the car would be considered in actual physical control of the vehicle and would, therefore, be arrested for drunk driving. The law courts in the above states came to this conclusion because the person had not relinquished authority or control of the vehicle to another person. — ALBERT E. COKE, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, TRAFFIC HIGHWAY SAFETY, HELENA, MONT.

Sniffing for clues in home may prevent fatal poisonings

Copley News Service

Carbon monoxide accounts for one-half of the fatal poisonings in the United States each year.

Even though carbon monoxide itself can't be detected by your senses, there sometimes are other clues to its presence, such as:

Persistently stuffy, stale or smelly air that never clears.

Very high humidity, often showing up as moisture on the windows.

Accumulations of soot around the fireplace, furnace or chimney.

No draft in the chimney, or a hot draft from the chimney into the house.

If you suspect a carbon monoxide leak in your home, call your city's hazardous materials management division.

Waiting tables education in meaning of life

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Parents are always trying to come up with new ways for their kids to learn about life. Some think that going to college prepares them. Others believe travel will provide the answers. A few recommend their offspring join the Army, while some even push for Outward Bound programs to develop survival instincts.

I say, if you want your kids to experience life, have them get a job as a waiter or waitress. They will learn more about the human condition by wearing an apron for six months than they will by sitting on a mountaintop devouring grapes and Aristotle for 10 years.

All of our kids at one time or another have scraped plates, slipped in grease, served drinks with little umbrellas in them, balanced three plates of hot spaghetti on one arm, and explained what a chimichanga is to a couple from Iowa.

The first basic fact of life is that people are not at their best when they are hungry, thirsty, wearing tight clothes, have never eaten so late in their lives before and are seated next to a public restroom. When the credit card statement comes due, they won't even remember what they ate.

Another discovery is that man does not live by bread alone. Eventually, he wants a salad and an entree and a dessert to go with it ... preferably the same evening.

The kids learned that life is not lived by minutes, but sometimes long years that seem like minutes. Especially if you're like one of our sons who was having a frantic night and finally bopped over to a table of eight and said, "You folks ready for your check?" and the man answered, "No, the menu!"

One of the lessons that become apparent is that the world does not owe you a living. The clown in booth 3 who stiffed you on a $35 check owes you.

By waiting tables, they discovered the differences between eternity and infinity. Eternity is the time it takes to clear a table while hungry diners have been waiting at the bar for 85 minutes. Infinity is the time it takes to explain the dessert menu to a woman who considers chocolate one of the major religions of the world.

They discovered by waiting tables that there really is a supreme being. The God who left them standing at the table for 10 minutes trying to get the diner's attention to order is the same God who, a couple of hours later, lets the diner struggle to get their attention for the check.

In retrospect, they learned a lot about humility, rejection, logic, truth, and the crumbling of the human spirit. Not to mention what a trip the pursuit of happiness is.

There was only one philosophical question that remained unanswered: "Why are we here?" They had a lot trouble with that one.

Tax-exempt bonds being offered for college savings

Associated Press

Jan. 11, Illinois offered for sale $90 million in tax-exempt college savings bonds. By Jan. 12, it had orders for three times that many bonds. The zero-coupon bonds, which cost as little as $1,000 and mature at $5,000, are exempt from both Illinois and federal tax. And if used to pay for education at an Illinois institution, there's a bonus payment of $100 to $400.

Illinois plans another bond issue later this year; North Carolina has already authorized a similar plan, and lots of other states are interested.

Figuring out ways to let families build up tax-free college savings will become a national pastime in years ahead. At the federal level there already are several proposals supported by key senators to make the interest on U.S. savings bonds tax-free if the bonds are used to pay for college.

Spoiled MC holds annual 'ho-hum' banquet

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland College honored its athletes at the annual Chaparral Athletic Awards Banquet at the Holiday Inn Center Wednesday, and in the words of MC President Dr. Jess Parrish, it was another exercise in "Ho-Hum" excellence.

Midland fans, Parrish intimated, have been spoiled by the success of Chaparral teams. And this year they continued in the same old, bless it, rut.

Reggie Franklin in his first year as head basketball, had to agree, "We are spoiled. That's the reason I hurried up and got back here fast." Franklin who spent a season as an assistant coach at a four year college in Louisiana, added, "I wanted to be spoiled."

Right now, Franklin is just glad to be here. "It's good to be here," he said in his introductory remarks, "and I mean that from the bottom of my lungs."

Franklin recently spent two weeks in the hospital.

The MC basketball team reached the finals of the Region V tournament last season, despite a topsy-turvy year in which the Chaps lost their top scorer in mid-season.

Coach Joe Williams' tennis team last weekend won the Region V men's and women's titles and isn't through yet. "This is our best opportunity to win nationals in both men's and women's events," says Williams, whose men went 21-3 and whose women were 144.

Coach Delnor Poss' golf team missed out making the nationals by one stroke in the Region V tournament, but a No. 10 ranking and victories over NCAA Division I teams such as Kansas State, Texas Tech, Rice, SMU, UT-Arlington and Hardin-Simmons may earn the Chaps an at-large invitational to the June nationals in Scottsdale, Ariz.

And Betty Murrah's cheerleading squad has established itself competitively as one of the best and most innovative teams in the land.

Success brings recognition to MC and scholarships to its sophomores.

Herman Henry named Best Defensive player and called "our most versatile player ever" by Franklin is headed for the University of Oklahoma. Billy Ray Smith, the team's MVP, has signed with Kansas State while Fighting Chap Award winner Stewart Barnett is Wyoming-bound; Clifton Jones will be at Idaho State next year and David Martin is expected to sign with Jackson State, Miss.

Sydney Rice was named the Chaps Most Improved Player and he'll be back next season and bring his brother.

Williams' netters also weren't overlooked when it came to scholarships. Rebeca Nevarez Ayon is being courted by Texas Tech and the University of Houston. Sara Hancock, MVP, is heading for Kansas State and her doubles partner Raquel Col-

Pilots' Mike DeButch beats Jim Thomas' tag to the base in Angel Stadium action Wednesday.

Angels rally to beat Pilots

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Like most competitive athletes, a few days on the bench left Midland Angel slugger Jim McCollom chomping at the proverbial bit.

Never mind that his arm was nearly separated from his body by a double play relay against El Paso Saturday, McCollom was ready to play.

The New Yorker showed just how ready he was by slamming a three-run home run and singling in the tying run in the Angels' come-from-behind 6-5 win over the Wichita Pilots in Texas League action at Angels Stadium Wednesday.

McCollom grounded out in his first three appearances Wednesday, but put the Angels back in the game with a line drive homer that bounced off the left-center field scoreboard in the eighth inning.

In the ninth, McCollom drove in C.L. Penigar with a sharp single to center. Cutoff man Jim Lester then tried to trap Angel runner Jim Thomas off third base, but his throw sailed into the third base dugout and Thomas was waved home with the winning run.

MCCOLLOM was seventh in TL hitting with a .354 average going into Wednesday's game, but he said anxiety got the best of him early.

"It took a little while. It's day-to-day on my arm, but I wanted to get back," he said.

McCollom struck paydirt on the last pitch of the evening for Wichita starter Greg Harris. "It was a fastball down and in.

"It was the same pitch I grounded to second on (in the sixth inning)," he said.

Things were different in the eighth, though.

"I went back to where I usually am in the box and got good extension. I wasn't trying to hit it out, just hard up the middle."

Thomas and Bill Geivett had led off the eighth with singles to set the table for McCollom's fourth homer of the season. Then in the ninth, C.L. Penigar and Thomas singled to put runners on first and third with one out off Wichita relief ace Mike Mills.

Pinch-hitter Craig Gerber struck out, but McCollom rapped a 1-0 pitch up the middle to score Penigar easily and Thomas soon followed on Lester's wild throw.

MIDLAND MANAGER Max Oliveras said McCollom has done a splendid job of adjusting to Class AA pitching after spending last year at Class A Quad City.

"I think he's got a big league bat right now," he said. "He's been adjusting to this type of pitching really well.

"Our main concern tonight was his arm, but he was so insistent."

The late-inning heroics again made a winner of reliever Colby Ward, whose five wins tie him for the TL lead. Ward threw 1⅓ innings of scoreless relief after Sherm Corbett turned in another outstanding performance.

Corbett threw 5⅓ innings of five-hit relief after starter Tim Burcham was rocked for three home runs in the second inning.

"We got good pitching from Sherm, and Colby has the hot hand," Oliveras said.

So hot that the Angel skipper left Ward in to pitch to lefty hitter Bill Stevenson with two runners on and two out in the top of the ninth - even though Midland lefty Shane Young was ready to go out of the bullpen.

"It was just a hunch," Oliveras said. "This kid had been hitting Shane pretty good and Colby had the hot hand."

Ward just wanted to give his hitters a chance to win the game.

"The less time I'm out there, the better," he said. "When you're that many runs down, you have to go in and throw strikes."

BIG-WINNER status is an unusual role for Ward, who has won 11 games and saved 27 more in one-and-a-half pro seasons.

"Last year, I was a short relief man and pretty much just got saves," said. "Now they throw me more in the middle and I get more chances to win."

Ward finished Wednesday's game with a team-low earned run average of 3.00. He has allowed 17 hits in 18 innings, walked 10 and struck out 11 in his team-high 12 appearances.

Oh yes, Ward still picks up a save now and then. His two saves are second on the team to Kurt Walker's three, and he has figured in more than half Midland's 11 wins.

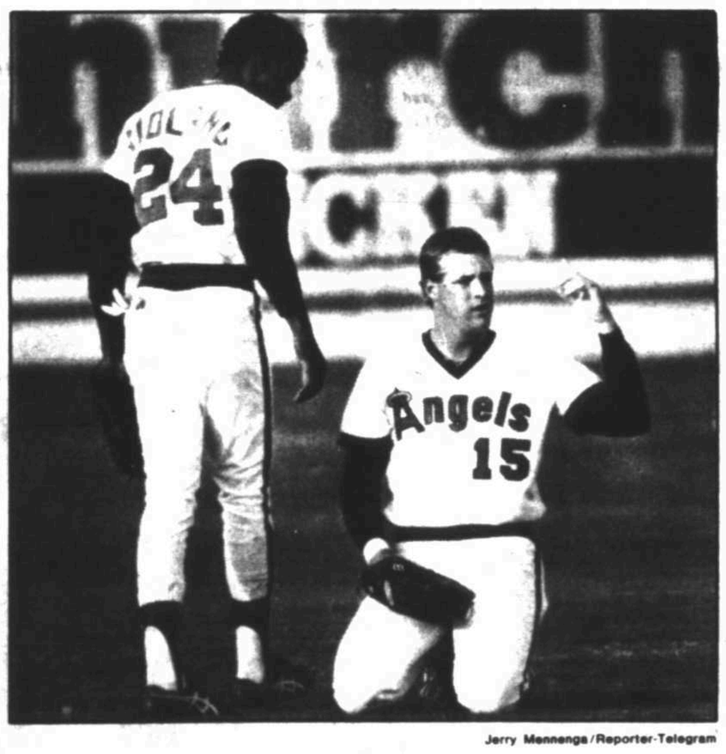

Wichita starter Harris went into Wednesday's game with a 10.07 ERA. But the lefty faced the minimum amount of Angel batters through five innings, allowing only one hit, walking two and getting help from three Pilot double plays.

Meanwhile, Burcham was getting rocked. After Wichita touched the Angel prospect for a single run in the first, Jim Tatum and Mike Basso touched him for solo homers in the second before Chris Knabenshue capped the rally with a two-run shot to give the Pilots a five-run lead.

Oliveras has been leaving his starters in longer after similarly slow starts, but not Wednesday.

"He was struggling so bad, we decided to pull him out," pitching coach Tim Kelly said. "He had some mechanical problems he had to work out."

Hershiser 6-0... after letdown

Associated Press

Orel Hershiser, 6-0, was bound to have a letdown. Thanks to the Dodgers' sizzling bats, it was just a minor one.

The unbeaten Hershiser won his sixth game, tying him for the National League lead with New York's Dwight Gooden, as Los Angeles beat Pittsburgh 8-5 Wednesday night.

Setting the pace were Pedro Guerrero's four hits and three each by Danny Heep and Steve Sax, who also had three stolen bases. Kirk Gibson had a two-run homer to get the Dodgers going in the opening inning.

The Dodgers swept Pittsburgh, outscoring the Pirates 28-14. It was the first time in eight years Pittsburgh lost all three games of a series at Dodger Stadium.

Mets 8, Astros 0

Both Sid Fernandez and Terry Leach gave up a hit and that was all Houston got as the Mets registered their seventh shutout of the year. They had seven all of last season.

Fernandez gave up a double to Billy Hatcher, who also singled off Leach leading off the sixth inning. Leach got the next 12 hitters.

Reds 3, Phillies 1

Two nights after Ron Robinson nearly threw a perfect game and wound up with a two-hitter, Danny Jackson allowed two hits for Cincinnati. Jackson, 4-1, yielded an RBI single to Lance Parrish in the fourth inning and Juan Samuel's double in the ninth.

Chris Sabo, who had three hits and three steals, singled and stole second. He went to third on a single by Kal Daniels, who also stole second. Eric Davis doubled in two runs, stole third and scored on catcher Parrish's throwing error.

Cubs 6, Padres 3

Mark Grace, who went to college at San Diego State, had two dozen friends in the stands when he hit his first major-league homer for the Cubs, who extended San Diego's losing streak to five. Grace is 5-for-11 since being called up from the minors.

Andy Hawkins, 3-2, saw his three-game winning streak snapped.

Braves 7, Expos 5

Bruce Sutter got his first save in nearly two years with two hitless innings of relief. Kevin Coffman got his first win of the season and contributed a two-run single to an offense that also included home runs by Dale Murphy and Ozzie Virgil.

Cardinals 5, Giants 3

Tom Brunansky's bat stayed hot, while the Giants' hitters stayed cool.

Brunansky's three-run homer, his fourth in 11 games with St. Louis since being acquired from Minnesota, sparked a five-run fifth inning.

The Giants are hitting just .235 after hitting .260 during their division title season in 1987.

"I was just starting to come out of my slump in Minnesota" when he was traded on April 22 for Tommy Herr.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

A's 3, Blue Jays 2

The Athletics won their 10th straight game Wednesday night, beating the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2 on six-hit pitching by Bob Welch, 4-2, Rick Honeycutt and Dennis Eckersley.

Oakland, which finished a 10-1 road trip that included a three-game sweep in Toronto, returned home and increased its lead to 5½ games over second-place Kansas City. Minnesota, which won the division last year, never led by more than six games.

Orioles 4, Twins 3

Larry Sheets doubled home Cal Ripken from first base with two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning as Baltimore beat Minnesota for the Orioles' third victory in 27 games this season.

Ripken, who went 3-for-4 with an RBI single, ia 26-for-49 in his last 15 games.

White Sox 6, Red Sox 2

Greg Walker and Ivan Calderon homered as Chicago defeated Boston's Roger Clemens, 4-1, for the fifth straight time. Rookie Jack McDowell, 2-2, won it.

Clemens, 4-1, has not beaten the White Sox since 1986, when he lost to them twice during a 24-4 season. Clemens lost both starts against Chicago last year while going 20-9.

It's Kentucky Derby time again, but it's not quite the same

Battles

It's Kentucky Derby time again, but somehow something's missing. Last year's magic isn't there this time for some Midlanders.

A year ago Midland had two entries in the field, and that was enough to make it something special.

And when Alysheba came out of the pack, twice survived what could have been disastrous stumbles on the back stretch to beat Bet Twice at the wire, an economically struggling community in West Texas turned a hand spring.

Alysheba's courage and determination made it one of the most memorable Derbys.

FOR DOROTHY and Pam Scharbauer, the mother and daughter owners of the three-year-old, there was a touch of bitter sweet nostalgia. In 1969, Tomy Lee, owned by Dorothy's father, Fred Turner, had won the Kentucky Derby.

A few weeks later, Alysheba added the second leg of the Triple Crown to its laurels with another dramatic victory over Bet Twice.

It's the Triple Crown and the accompanying hoopla that make the three-year-old the glamour age for Thoroughbreds.

At least, that's the way it has been in the past. But Alysheba and Ferdinand, the 1986 Kentucky Derby winner, are stealing some of the three-year-olds' thunder for the older horses.

Alysheba has already beaten Ferdinand twice this year in exciting finishes and the popularity of this act has led to the revival of the Pimlico Special on May 14, a race that hasn't been held since 1958.

And now others want to get in on the act.

THE FIELD isn't set yet and a lot can happen to effect the roster before "They're Off," but the possibilities are enough to whet the appetite of any Thoroughbred fancier.

Ferdinand is entered and so is Lost Code, a horse that has been running exceptionally well lately. But that's just the beginning. Crypto Clearance is entered and Bet Twice and Demon's Begone. Java Gold is ready.

You remember Demon's Begone, last year's Kentucky Derby favorite, who pulled up bleeding out of the first turn at Churchill Downs. Now he's back in attempt to recoup escaped glory.

HOWEVER, WHEN it comes to four-year-olds, it's a different game.

The races aren't necessarily what they seem. They handicap these horses.

Good Taste gave Alysheba and Ferdinand a good run for their money in finishing third out on the west coast. But Good Taste was carrying 113 pounds and the front runners were toting 127 pounds.

Final entries in races sometimes depend on how much weight a horse may be required to carry.

For the owners of Alysheba and Ferdinand, if they are saddled with 127 pounds and a Bet Twice or Crypto Clearance is carrying only 113 pounds, it's cause for pause, unless you don't mind getting beat. Put 120 pounds on Java Gold and it's something to think about.

By the same token if Bet Twice is carrying 124 pounds to 127, it might not want to run against a Ferdinand or Alysheba.

As a result, the Pimlico Special looks like it could be a dream race on the basis of the roster of horses entered, but it's the horses that nose into the starting gate that will determine the stature of the race.

A lot of folks figure that all it will take to make the Pimlico Special a great race is a dry track and Alysheba and Ferdinand in the field.

So the three-year-olds may be ready to make their glamor run, but you'll excuse Dorothy and Pam Scharbauer if their attention is turned elsewhere.

Lee begins putting grid parts together

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The most potent offense in the state and District 4-5A's top defensive unit has been disassembled by graduation and Midland Lee head football coach Earl Miller begins the task Friday of trying to put the Rebel football parts back together with the beginning of spring training.

Lee, which has been to the state playoffs five consecutive years, has only two returning starters to work with in tight end Quincy White and linebacker Michael Pearson.

"You might say outside of White, Pearson and possibly (running back David) Whiteside, we have a wide open race for positions," said Miller. "Spring training is going to have to be a time to see who can play and who can't and we have to do a good job of getting the kids in the right positions."

Miller and his staff are also undergoing a philosophy change this spring. The pure two-platoon system will probably undergo an overhaul.

"We're beginning to see effects of the boundary change and the downturn of the economy on our program," notes Miller. "We have some good athletes, but we don't have the numbers we've had in the past and I don't see it being possible to be a complete two-platoon team the next couple of years.

"We're going to have to teach both sides of the football. We don't have to get ready for a game, so we're going to see who can play both ways."

Two major areas of concern this spring will be at quarterback and fullback. "We'll be looking at six or seven kids at each of those positions," said Miller.

Jason Fletcher, Benny Jones and Alandas Chambers are among the prospects at fullback while Ty Chambers, Vince Henderson and Greg Rich are all underclassmen at quarterback. Kyle Greeley is a senior, but has had knee problems.

"It looks like we have a chance of having a junior quarterback for the first time since Gary Butler did it in 1978," said Miller.

Miller does feel his team can be competitive.

"We'd love to go to the playoffs for a sixth straight time, but it's going to be tough. I see both Abilene High and Odessa Permian being better than last year," said Miller. "The one thing we have going for us is the fact that we scored so many points last year, a lot of our youngsters got to play."

Defensive players Brad Hanlan, Blaine McAnally, Todd Overend and Marcus Strambler all had a lot of playing time. Whiteside scored five touchdowns in only 33 carries while Farris Strambler gained 77 yards in only two carries. Michael Barbee and Chad Haney have some experience in the offensive line.

"The lack of overall depth and our schedule will be our major problems next fall," says Miller. "We have only four home games and have two long trips to Killeen and El Paso. We also have a pre-season scrimmage in Plainview before the Killeen game. The schedule alone is enough to start thinking about another line of work."

Spring training ends for Lee on May 26 with the Maroon-White game at Memorial Stadium. That event will be open to the public.

vin, the Fighting Chap Award winner, passed up Syracuse last year and will stay at MC for a second season, although TCU has offered a scholarship.

The MC men weren't supposed to do this well after losing four sophomores from last year's national champions, but Gilles Ameline will play next year at Wake Forest and Johan Dysholm, the Most Outstanding and MVP, goes to the University of Arkansas, this year SWC round-robin winner.

"He's the best No. 1 player Midland College has ever had," says Williams.

Poss' "best team ever" will see Rob Anderson, the spring MVP, go to Washington State and Gordon Wessels, last fall's MVP, ineligible this spring, will play at UT-San Antonio.

Marty Scoles, Most Outstanding, was the WJCAC medalist and averaged 35.1 strokes for each nine holes. He's only a freshman, but he's so good he will turn pro.

Most Improved honors when to sophomore Gordon McGarva while Steve Alexander was all-region and won the coaches award.

The academic awards went to Wessels and Jan Vallandigham.

Tigers 1, Angels 0

Jack Morris, 3-3, pitched a two-hitter for his first shutout since 1986 and 20th career as Detroit beat ex-Tiger Dan Petry on Alan Trammell's home run.

Yankees 4, Royals 3

Rickey Henderson's sacrifice fly broke a 3-3 tie in the eighth inning as New York won in Kansas City. John Candelaria, 3-2, got the victory despite being ejected after the seventh inning in an argument with home plate umpire Durwood Merrill about balls and strikes.

Gary Ward hit a three-run homer in the New York sixth. He drove in his first runs of the season.

Mariners 5, Indians 4

Mark Langston, 2-3, struck out 10 in eight innings and host Seattle sent Cleveland to its fifth loss in six games. Jim Presley tied the game with an RBI groundout and Dave Valle followed with his third home run of the season.

Brewers 6, Rangers 5

Glenn Braggs drove in three runs with two singles and Milwaukee held off Texas. The Brewers led 6-1 after five innings. Mike Birkbeck, 1-2, won his first game since April 26, 1987, and Dan Plesac got his sixth save.

Charlie Hough, 3-4, took the loss. He has lost his last five decisions at County Stadium and has dropped eight of nine overall against the Brewers.

Braggs' two-run single keyed a four-run second. Hough hit a batter, walked another, balked and threw a wild pitch in the inning.

Rockets need more than Akeem

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets realize they can't beat the Dallas Mavericks with a one-man performance by Akeem Olajuwon.

Olajuwon scored 35 points and grabbed 12 rebounds and had three blocked shots Tuesday night in the third game of their NBA first round NBA playoff series.

All it netted the Rockets was a 93-92 loss and one game from being eliminated from the playoffs if they lose to the Mavericks again in The Summit tonight.

"Everybody's going to have to start producing right now. We're not ready to roll over," Rockets guard Robert Reid said.

"I've seen us win big games on the road before. Right now it goes to five games, that's the only way to look at it."

A fifth game, if necessary, would be played in Dallas on Saturday.

While Olajuwon carried the load on Tuesday, Houston's top three outside shooters, Reid, Sleepy Floyd and Purvis Short, shot a combined 9 for 31 shots from the field.

Floyd scored 42 points in Houston's 119-108 victory Saturday in Dallas. He had 10 points on Tuesday.

"We didn't want him doing what he did in Dallas," Mavericks forward Roy Tarpley said. "We all helped out as a team. I'm sure he got a little discouraged."

Tarpley scored 17 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, leading the Mavericks' big lineup in the closing minutes of the game.

Mark Aguirre, the team's leading scorer in the regular season with a 25.1 average, was on the sidelines in the crucial closing minutes.

"This is not the beginning of the Tarpley era and the end of the Aguirre era," MacLeod said. "I just hope it means the beginning of a solid basketball team."

Knicks escape early elimination

Associated Press

The New York Knicks, getting 34 points from Johnny Newman in his first start of the NBA playoffs and 31 from Patrick Ewing, avoided elimination Wednesday night with a 109-100 opening-round victory over the Boston Celtics.

NBA

The win kept the Knicks alive in the best-of-five series, but they still trail Boston 2-1. Game 4 also is scheduled for Madison Square Garden on Friday night, with Game 5, if necessary, at Boston Garden on Sunday.

Put in the starting lineup to break a 118-24 scoring deficit among the teams' starting forwards over the first two games, Newman gave the Knicks their best inside-outside threat of the series.

Bullets 106, Pistons 103

A 12-foot jumper by Moses Malone with 22 seconds left and a free throw by Jeff Malone with two seconds remaining allowed Washington to even the series at 2-2. Game 5 is scheduled Sunday at Pontiac, Mich.

Moses Malone, who scored 22 points, made the decisive basket by shooting over a double team of Rick Mahorn and Isiah Thomas.

Bucks 123, Hawks 115

Milwaukee avoided a sweep with Terry Cummings scoring 30 points and Paul Pressey and Sidney Moncrief 25 each.

Mouse Davis named St. Louis WIFL coach

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Darrell "Mouse" Davis, who formerly filled similar posts at Portland State and with three pro franchises, will coach St. Louis in the newly formed World Indoor Football League, the team says.

The WIFL plans regional tryouts May 24, with each team to be comprised of 22 players, it was announced at a news conference Tuesday. St. Louis' entrant will be the Lightning. Other franchises are located at Indianapolis, San Diego, San Antonio, Washington and Las Vegas.

Stump Mitchell, a Phoenix Cardinals running back, is one of the St. Louis team's owners. Harold Davis, another co-owner, said St. Louis has eight players under contract.

ANGELS—

Thus, Burcham threw the remainder of his pitch allotment in the bullpen under the watchful eye of Angels roving pitching coach Frank Reberger, a former big leaguer with the Cubs, Padres and Giants.

The Angels touched Harris for a run in the sixth when the lefty balked home Jeff Manto, who got his batting average back around .300 with three hits in four trips to the plate.

Todd Eggersten, 0-4, goes for his first win of the season in the third game of the series at 7 p.m. today. His mound opponent will be Jeff Childers, 1-2.

ANGEL NOTES: Penigar extended his hitting streak to eight games with a two-for-four night, while Thomas and McCollom also finished with two hits.

Wichita's Mike DeButch broke out of a batting slump with three-for-four and three stolen bases to increase his league-leading total to 13. Tatum and Basso also had two hits for the Pilots.

Despite clear skies and pleasant temperatures, the Angels drew only 487 fans Wednesday. But general manager Bill Davidson isn't worried, because it was the first time in 12 home dates that the Haloes drew less than 1,000.

"I'd like to see more folks, but I can't say it's expected," he said. "There's too many other conflicts at this time of the year.

"This was a typical April-May weeknight crowd."

The Angels have still drawn almost 26,000 through 12 home games.

BASKETBALL— Auburn coach Sonny Smith, who nearly quit in 1985, has a new four-year contract with a financial package reportedly worth more than $200,000 a year. Smith, 51, was coach at East Tennessee State when he took the Auburn job in 1978. He said he never anticipated the financial rewards he would enjoy with Auburn.

JAZZIN' UP THE SALT PALACE?— The Utah Jazz, complaining the Salt Palace Arena is too small for the NBA franchise, is seeking a multi-million-dollar expansion of the facility from its current 12,400 seats to 18,000. The Jazz made a profit this year and probably would do it again next year, said team Vice President for Public Relations David Allred. "Down the road, it will be harder for us to compete," he added, noting the NBA's new collective bargaining agreement that is expected to raise salaries.

MILLER RETIRES— Harry Miller, who has more than 500 career basketball wins over 36 years, retired as S.F. Austin State coach after 10 years, during which the Lumberjacks won two Lone Star and a Gulf Star title...

BONILLA, HERSHISER NAMED— Pittsburgh 3b Bobby Bonilla and Dodger right-hander Orel Hershiser were been named player and pitcher of the month for April in the National League. Bonilla hit .341 (30-for-88), with seven home runs and 18 runs batted in during the first month of the season. Hershiser compiled a 5-0 record with a 1.56 earned run average during April. He pitched two complete games, including one shutout.

HARMON IN TROUBLE— Seattle Seahawks draftee Kevin Harmon, who faces an assault charge for allegedly punching an Iowa City man, must ask a judge for permission to attend the team's mini-camp next week. Johnson County District Court Judge John Sladek restricted Harmon's travel to within the state pending a May 17 preliminary hearing. The former Iowa running back, the Seahawks' fourth-round pick in last month's draft, is to report to Seattle on Sunday.

CHRIS WINS— Top-seeded Chris Evert, aiming for a sixth Italian Open title, downed Nicole Provis 7-6 (7-5), 6-2 in a second round match. No. 2 Gabriela Sabatini won 6-4, 6-2 over Amy Schwartz. In the only upset, fourth-seeded Katherina Maleeva lost to Bettina Fulco 7-5, 6-2.

A tournament where you steal the money

Murray

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — How would you like to play Jack Nicklaus' tee shot for 18 holes?

How would you like to have Lee Trevino putt for you?

Think you could win the money? Have a shot at the course record?

They had a tournament down here called a Desert Scramble, an illegitimate offspring of Golf the Father in which you can win $125,000 having Nicklaus drive for you and Trevino putt for you. That's like stealing the money.

My notion is, these guys should have my tee shot to play, try to make birdie from where I would put the second shots. A better idea would be to make them play with my swing and have to smother-hook and top-shot their way to the hole and arrive there with this ball with a little cut in it.

YOU WOULD think a Nicklaus-Trevino duo would be like having Dempsey to punch for you and Ali to jab, Babe Ruth to hit and Willie Mays to field, Nick the Greek to deal and Pittsburgh Phil to bet.

I mean, if you had to have one man to putt for you to save you from the gallows, Lee Trevino would be your man. If you had to have one man to put you in play off the tee, Jack Nicklaus, the longest straight driver who ever lived, would be the one. Nicklaus will be able to reach par-5s in two on his deathbed, and Trevino is the man who said pressure isn't putting to win the U.S. Open, pressure is putting for a $20 Nassau against a man with a scar on his cheek when you only have $2 in your pocket.

They matched these two against Golf's Odd Couple. If you saw Greg Norman and Ian Woosnam and you didn't know who they were, you'd be reaching for your wallet and dreaming of closing out the press by the 15th hole. This is the original Mutt-and-Jeff-on-the links act.

YOU'D BE very careful about giving the tall one strokes. Don't let the bleached-blond hair and the sunburned good looks fool you. Greg Norman didn't arrive by surfboard. Check the 48-long shoulders and the 32-inch waist first and adjust the bet accordingly.

But his playing partner at first glance looks like something that arrived by tricycle. Ian Woosnam is just bigger than his 7-iron. He has this cherubic face of the guy who would play the angel at the Christmas pageant. You don't know whether to hand him his putter or a lollipop. You don't know whether Greg Norman brought him along to play with or to mark his ball with. Put him in a mouse hat and you'd think he just got lost from his parents at Disneyland.

But Ian Woosnam is, inch-for-inch, the best golf player in the world today. You may have to be big to play basketball, football. Golf mocks the lanky types.

Anyone can play impeccable golf on the manicured, watered, raked and mowed million-dollar acreages of Palm Beach and Palm Springs. Ian Woosnam grew up on the Welsh-English border, where they had to chase the sheep before teeing off. He learned the game hitting out of hay fields not the pool-table fairways of the Sun Belt resorts or the nursery fields of the Masters.

HE HAD to take the game to Africa, not to the universities of Wake Forest and Houston. He had to learn to putt fighting mosquitoes and checking the water hazards for crocodiles before wading in to hit out. His edge is that, no matter how difficult the shot is today, it's still easier than aiming it through a cloud of tsetse flies or under an elephant.

He won $1.8 million last year with a golf club. They love him in England where he's "Wee Woozy" and can hit the ball farther than anyone his size has any right to. He earned his way in this one-day tournament, he wasn't invited for the novelty or Tom Thumb effect.

The purpose of a scramble is to ensure you will never have to play your bad shots. As Nicklaus put it, "For a change we don't have to go out and play our foul balls." Its origins are lost in the mists of golf, but not antiquity. Its original purpose was to close the gap in a foursome between the best and worst players and speed up play, but it has proliferated. Not apt to be embraced by the Royal & Ancient, it is the most popular form of outing golf in the United States.

The best recollection of Jerry Pate and Lee Trevino is that a form of it was invented by Ben Hogan in Texas, a sporting version where Ben would spot his opponent in a game in which he and opponent would each hit two balls at a time and the opponent would get to play the best of his two shots and Hogan the worst of his two.

It was expertly believed the first Scramble would be made to order for the internationalists of Norman and Woosnam, who had youth on their side. "We'll be waiting for the old fellows on every fairway," laughingly predicted Norman.

BE THAT as it may, it took youth 17 holes to catch age. It took them 19 to close them out.

The Desert Mountain course, where this novelty event was held, is a nice place, if you're a rattlesnake. The kind of a place where, if they saw smoke signals 90 years ago, they'd circle the wagons. They write songs about country like this and sing them around the campfire.

Birdieing it is something else again. The over-and-under betting on this event settled at 63. The "overs" won the bets but the unders (Norman and Woosnam) won the match.

Wade Boggs....one of the Red Socks who makes Rick Cerone happy to be a Red Sox.

Cerone loves his new Sox

...Clemens, Boggs, Smith, Burks...

By MURRAY CHASS
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Not only do the Boston Red Sox have Roger Clemens and Lee Smith and Ellis Burks and Mike Greenwell, but they also have history on their side.

"In 1967," Rick Cerone said, recalling a childhood memory, "there was a guy name of Elston Howard who came over to the Red Sox from the Yankees and the Red Sox won the pennant."

Cerone's memory, of course, is as sound as his recent play has been for his new team, the Red Sox. On Aug. 3, 1967, the Yankees sent Howard, their longtime star, to Boston for two minor league pitchers of little note, Ron Klimkowski and Pete Magrini, and the Red Sox won the American League pennant.

IN THE early weeks of this season, the Red Sox have indicated they will be legitimate contenders for the A.L. East championship. Cerone, whom the Red Sox signed after the Yankees released him just before the season, will be part of the team's effort, but Boston's chances will depend more on the pitchers Cerone catches.

"We felt our pitching was stronger than people thought," general manager Lou Gorman said. "Clemens, Hurst and Boyd are as good a one-two-three as anyone has in the league."

Clemens, Bruce Hurst and Dennis (Oil Can) Boyd started 15 of the club's first 20 games; Jeff Sellers and Steve Ellsworth, a rookie, started the other 5. As a unit, they have failed to pitch at least six innings only once, and, averaging seven and one-third innings per start, they have compiled a 2.73 earned run average. By comparison, the Yankees' starting pitchers have averaged five and two-thirds innings per start and have compiled a 4.20 ERA.

CREDIT for Boston's strong start belongs primarily to the pitching staff, which now includes Smith, the late-inning specialist, because the hitters, especially the veterans, haven't begun hitting. Wade Boggs, the four-time batting champion with a .354 career average, entered Saturday hitting .299. Jim Rice had no home runs and was hitting .272, and Dwight Evans had no home runs and was hitting .243.

Marty Barrett, the second baseman, led in runs batted in with 16, and Spike Owen, the shortstop, was tied for the team lead in home runs with two. The most impressive hitters have been two of the corps of good young players, Burks (.385) and Greenwell (.333). Then there is Cerone with his .424 average (down from over .500).

"CERONE has helped us a lot," Gorman said. "We know he's hitting over his head, but he's stepped in and handled the pitching very well in the absence of Gedman."

John Marzano, who played in 52 games with Boston last year, became the starting catcher after Gedman broke a bone in his right foot, but then the Red Sox signed Cerone, a free agent, and he soon became No. 1. "Two weeks ago," Cerone said, "I was changing diapers every two and a half hours. Now I'm catching every day. I grew up hating these guys and now I'm playing for them."

Roger Clemens has been named the best pitcher in the American League the past two seasons, and it may be time to proclaim him the best pitcher in baseball.

"He's in a class by himself," Cerone said. "He's something special. He gets better as the game goes on. The other day, he was throwing 94 in the ninth inning. You don't see that often."

Clemens, who has a 4-0 record, is one of those pitchers who seems to have a chance to win every time he pitches.

This season Clemens has struck out a major league-leading 60 in 51//Y innings and compiled a 1.75 earned run average (2 of the 10 earned runs he has given up came on Gary Gaetti's ninth-inning home run against Smith on Friday night that deprived Clemens of a fifth victory).

BARRING injury, Clemens should surpass his 1987 victory total of 20, which he achieved despite a slow start after missing much of spring training in a contract dispute. After six starts last season, he had a 2-2 record, a 3.00 ERA and 38 strikeouts in 42 innings. He has that many victories against Milwaukee this season, both by shutout. Harry Dalton, the Brewers' general manager, came away from those games with no doubt who is the best pitcher in the majors.

"I haven't seen the National League," Dalton said, "but after seeing Clemens, I don't have to."

Jeff Moses earns qualifying medalist

From Staff Reports

Jeff Moses of Midland earned medalist honors in the Texas Men's Amateur Qualifying round Wednesday at Mission Country Club.

Moses and Steve Whiteside, Midland, both shot regulation 18-hole rounds of 74, but Moses won the first hole of the sudden death playoff.

Harry Bettis of Midland was the first alternate.

The state tournament will be held June 2-5 at Lochinvar Country Club in Houston.

Jackson Mets knock off Oilers

Angelo Cuevas' solo homer in the 10th broke a four-inning deadlock and gave the Jackson Mets a 5-4 Texas League baseball victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

In other Texas League action Wednesday night, San Antonio blasted El Paso Diablos 6-1, and Arkansas beat Shreveport 5-3.

Jackson had a 4-2 lead until the Drillers tied the game in the sixth on RBI singles from Kevin Bootay and George Threadgill.

Other runs for Tulsa, 13-11, came in the first inning on a sacrifice fly by Kevin Reimer and on an error in the fourth. Darrell Whitaker took the loss in his first game of the season for Jackson, 12-14.

In El Paso, Diablo pitcher Jim Hunter held San Antonio scoreless for four innings, but the Missions got to him in the fifth when Mike Huff smacked a two-run double to right center field.

Slow going for the endangered Ridley sea turtle

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

IN THE WILD

The turtle watchers on Texas' North Padre Island are taking late walks on the beach this spring, hoping to see some of their nursery-raised sea turtles return home to nest.

The first of the nursery-reared turtles, "the Headstart Ridleys," were released into the Gulf of Mexico in 1980. Most biologists believe it takes seven years for the females to reach sexual maturity, mate and return to lay their eggs.

"If you put them in an incubator" as babies, "I think it takes a little longer," said Ila Loetscher, who began the effort that turned Padre Island into a turtle sanctuary.

"The Headstart Ridleys haven't yet started to return. Everybody has their fingers crossed for this year," she said. "April through August is the time the Ridleys start to come in."

THE RIDLEY is the most endangered species of sea turtle. All species of sea turtles are on the endangered species list because of overharvesting of adults for meat, taking of eggs and development on the beaches where they once nested.

Mrs. Loetscher, 83, began her personal effort to help bring the animals back with a trip to their last nesting ground in Mexico in 1965. At her own expense, she brought eggs back to Padre Island, off Galveston, and buried them in the ground to hatch.

Since then she built a facility to care for ill or injured turtles and an amphitheater to show off the turtles and tell their story to anyone who will listen.

For her efforts, she was presented a special achievement award at the National Wildlife Federation's annual meeting in March in New Orleans.

At first, her efforts started and ended with a question mark. Sea turtles return to the beach where they were hatched to lay their eggs. Would it make any difference if the eggs were laid and hatched on different beaches?

"We didn't even know for sure that they would hatch on our island, but they did, and they went to sea, and seven years later, some of them returned," Mrs. Loetscher said in an interview in New Orleans.

SOME, HOWEVER, were confused by television lights and never made it to sea. Mrs. Loetscher decided to raise them.

"We built a little tank, or crawl, on one of the streams, and that's how we got started," she said.

"The little schoolchildren came running every morning when I would go to feed them," she said. It was suggested she "start an awareness program. 'It's up to you to aware everybody in the country that these little turtles need help.' That is where we started."

Today she has 17 turtles at the facility, including a pair of adult Ridleys that weigh 75 to 100 pounds each and a pair of rapidly growing Atlantic green turtles that weigh about 130 pounds each.

At full-size, the greens will be 3½ feet long and weigh up to 700 pounds.

They feed the green turtles catfish food.

"The Ridley's won't eat it. They have to have squid," Mrs. Loetscher said. "What they really like is crabs and shrimp. But shrimp is a little expensive. We give them a handfull once in a while to keep them happy."

A decade after she started, the National Marine Fisheries Service joined her and she founded Sea Turtle Inc., a nonprofit organization dedicated to preserving and protecting sea turtles.

"Now the little babies walk to the sea, and then they catch them in nets," she said of the federal Headstart program. "Then they fly them to Galveston. They are taken care of there until they are a year old (and about a foot long). Then they are taken out to sea by the Coast Guard" and released.

"They feel they have a much better chance of survival than when they are just half of an ounce".

Devils win in overtime

NHL

BOSTON (AP) — Ten minutes after nearly costing the New Jersey Devils the game, rookie Doug Brown won it for them.

His only shot on goal Wednesday night was a 45-foot slapper from the left side that beat Boston goalie Reggie Lemelin 17:46 into overtime, giving the Devils a 3-2 victory over Boston and evening the Wales Conference finals at one win each.

"I felt like I owed the team a little bit," Brown said.

Earlier in overtime, Brown's pass in the Devils' end was stolen by Cam Neely, the Bruins' top regular-season goal scorer. Neely went in alone, but rookie goaltender Sean Burke made an outstanding pad save on a five-footer at 7:33.

On the winning play, Claude Loiselle won a faceoff from Craig Janney and got the puck to defenseman Randy Velischek deep in Boston's end. Brown, a right wing, raced back to the left point to cover for Velischek, who circled the net and passed the puck to defenseman Joe Cirella at the right point.

"I called for the puck. He (Cirella) saw me," Brown said. "I picked my head up once to make sure nobody would block it and I saw some confusion in front so I tried to keep the puck low. It found its way in.

"It's a little bit of a dream," said Brown, a local product who played at Boston College. "It couldn't be any better."

THE SERIES returns to New Jersey for Games 3 and 4 Friday and Sunday night.

"We're very pleased to come out of here with a split because we feel we split against a great hockey team," Devils' coach Jim Schoenfeld said. "Hopefully, we'll have momentum going into our building."

For the third consecutive series, New Jersey won the second game on the road after losing the first. In the 12 previous series this season, the team that won the second game advanced to the next round.

"I just hope the same scenario continues," Schoenfeld said.

Boston Coach Terry O'Reilly would like to see a change in the Bruins' offensive scenario. They outshot New Jersey 41-33, but Burke made 39 saves.

"The difference was Burke," O'Reilly said. "If they get goaltending like that, it's going to be a tough series.

"But I thought we had the lion's share of opportunities in the third period and overtime," he added. "We had 41 shots on net. We should have come up with more than a couple of goals."

Imports siphon off higher spending

Overseas capital goods fueling growth

By LOUIS UCHITELLE
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — A surge in business spending is under way in the United States. But just as the American economy has failed to reap the full benefit of the consumer buying boom of the 1980s, it is missing out on many of the rewards of this new growth.

The reason is the same: Much of the spending is on imports.

As a result, the economy will not grow as rapidly as it would if all the money were spent at home. In addition, the trade deficit could remain stubbornly high, economists say, because of the persistently high level of imported capital goods — the factory machinery, computers, aircraft, engines, trucks, photocopiers and the like that companies use.

In days gone by, such a capital-spending increase — expected to be 8 percent this year, one of the highest gains of the decade — would have been a bonanza for the economy, because American companies would have supplied most of the new equipment.

But American industry, which once dominated the world market for capital goods, has ceded large portions of the business to foreign competitors in the past decade.

"The United States had a real domination in capital goods, and the damage to it seems irreversible," said Barry Bosworth, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution.

In the early 1980s, the strong dollar helped make American-manufactured capital goods more expensive than those of foreign competitors. Some American companies were driven out of business. Others turned to foreign components to bring down costs, and some have moved production overseas.

Foreign manufacturers, for example, have driven American companies out of textile machinery, many types of machine tools, and equipment to make ceramic products.

And while the Boeing Co. remains a power in the world market for commercial jetliners, imported parts account for up to 28 percent of its planes.

Tail cones come from Canada, aluminum skin panels from Japan, Rolls-Royce engines from Britain and various tail sections from China, Italy and Ireland. Until 1980, foreign parts made up only 2 or 3 percent of a Boeing.

"All of our sourcing is competitively driven," said Paul Osborne, Boeing's manager of trade issues. "We have to keep it that way to stay in business."

The new patterns in manufacturing have also dramatically affected the tractor business.

Japanese companies now produce most of the world's small farm tractors, those with 40 horsepower or less. Three big American manufacturers, Deere & Co., the Ford Motor Co. and Case IH, have transferred production of mid-size tractors — those in the 40-to-100-horsepower range — to their European factories. But they continue to produce large tractors, over 100 horsepower, in the United States.

Indonesian officials visit TRC

AUSTIN (AP) — The need to stabilize oil prices was touted by an Indonesian representative who visited the Texas Railroad Commission Wednesday at Commissioner Kent Hance's invitation.

"A stable price, whatever it is, is definitely very useful for everyone," said Wijarso, special assistant to the Indonesian oil minister, after welcoming remarks by commissioners Hance and James Nugent.

Wijarso was one of four of the country's representatives in Austin to meet with the commission.

Hance invited a number of members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to visit the state when he attended the OPEC meeting in Vienna last week.

He has said his visit conveyed to the cartel that Texas wants stable prices.

"We've seen in the last few years that the wild swings in oil prices from being sky-high to rock-bottom has not been good for Texas, the United States or Indonesia," said Hance.

The Indonesian representatives were to talk with the commission in a private meeting about the commission's history and the state's oil well monitoring system.

"This is something I talked to the OPEC countries about in the hopes it would be beneficial to them to have some type of system that would enable them to know who was actually living up to their quotas, and who might be exceeding their quotas," Hance said.

"Not everyone has been like Indonesia and stayed within their quotas and shown leadership."

Wagner, Brown up USG bid

NEW YORK (AP) — Desert Partners presented USG Corp. with new takeover proposals valued at about $2.6 billion Wednesday, seeking to head off a reorganization plan being pursued by the building materials company.

In a letter to USG's board, Midland oilman Cyril Wagner Jr. of Desert Partners stressed that "the time has come for you to stop spending time and money in an effort to avoid discussing an acquisition of USG with us."

Wagner, who heads Desert Partners with Jack E. Brown, said the partnership's latest proposal was superior to the $2.2 billion recapitalization plan USG unveiled on Monday.

Lorenzo: Losses continue to 'ravage' Texas Air

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frank Lorenzo, chairman of Texas Air Corp., said Wednesday the turmoil surrounding Eastern Airlines "continues to ravage" the financial performance of the air carrier, with losses expected through the first half of this year.

Lorenzo in remarks to the International Aviation Club said Eastern, a Texas Air subsidiary, will post continuing losses during the second quarter.

He blamed it in part on the airline unions' campaign against Eastern, the refusal by the Machinists union to agree to concessions and the series of government investigations of the Miami-based airline, which has been in the center of labor turmoil for years.

Lorenzo

"The present environment is having a serious impact on Eastern. It continues to ravage the financial results and the future of this great airline," Lorenzo said.

"Currently we are looking at very sizable and continuing losses in the second quarter because of all the activities that are taking place and their impact on travelers."

Eastern has not made public its financial results for the first quarter of 1988, although Texas Air officials have made clear that the carrier lost money. Last year Eastern lost $181.6 million, including a staggering $143 million in losses during the fourth quarter.

Eastern's president, Philip Bakes, several weeks ago acknowledged that the airline was losing some bookings because of the recently announced Federal Aviation Administration investigations into the carrier's safety procedures and its labor battles.

Lorenzo said Wednesday that he welcomed the FAA investigation and said he anticipates it "will put into perspective the misinformation and nonsense that's been peddled to the media, the FAA and Congress" by Eastern's unions.

Last month, the FAA announced it was seeking $823,000 in penalties from Eastern for past safety violations and that it was beginning a plane-by-plane inspection of the carrier.

FAA Administrator Allan McArtor told reporters Wednesday that the Eastern inspections are expected to be complete in about a week. He said inspectors continue to uncover some infractions requiring corrective action in 7 percent to 8 percent of the planes checked.

LTV reveals bankruptcy reorganization plans

DALLAS (AP) — LTV Corp. proposes emerging from Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings reorganized around its core businesses of steel, defense and energy, but the plan hinges on resolving a dispute with its largest creditor.

Key to the reorganization are three LTV Steel pension plans, terminated by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. in early 1987. The agency, LTV's largest creditor, took over the plans but then turned them back to LTV, arguing that the company should fund them.

LTV Chairman Raymond Hay, announcing the reorganization plan Wednesday, said he is confident LTV will prevail in the dispute, now before a New York court.

Principal components of the reorganization would be a down-sized steel company concentrating on flat-rolled products, two aerospace and defense operating groups and a streamlined energy products division sized for today's market, Hay said.

"It has been our commitment from the beginning to emerge from Chapter 11 as quickly as possible with a strong, reorganized company that will be competitive in each of the industries we serve," he said.

But an official with the PBGC, which has a $2 billion claim on LTV, said the reorganization plan was unacceptable.

Kathleen P. Utgoff, executive director of the PBGC, issued a statement Wednesday strongly opposing any reorganization plan offered by LTV that treats the plans as terminated or within the responsibility of the federal agency.

Oil prices still seek direction

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices continued to show no clear direction following OPEC's failure to reach agreement on additional production cuts. At midmorning, contrcts for June delivery of West Texas Intermediate stood at $17.41, a gain of 21 cents from Wednesday's close.

Futures prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange tumbled Wednesday in the wake of a report showing domestic inventories of gasoline and crude were at higher-than-expected levels. June contracts fell 17 cents to close at $17.20 per barrel.

The American Petroleum Institute, a Washington-based trade organization, reported late Tuesday that domestic gasoline supplies grew by 5.9 million barrels in the week ended April 29, while crude stocks shrunk by 700,000 barrels.

Those figures in particular sent prices lower in London and New York, because they left more inventory than was expected, said Mary L. Haskins, an analyst at the Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

When inventories rise faster than demand, prices tend to fall.

Wednesday's declines also reflected continuing market perceptions that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would be unable to agree on a way tighten up its production, even when it meets next month in Vienna, Ms. Haskins said.

One British pound cost 1.8650 in London this morning, unchanged from late Wednesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $444.50 a troy ounce, little changed from late Wednesday's $444. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $445.35.

In Zurich, the bid price was $445.20, up from $443.50 late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $2.36 to close at a bid $447.07.

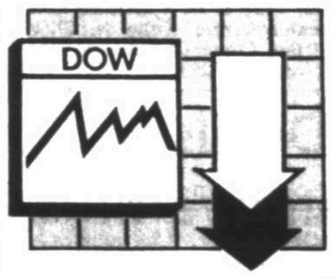

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.35 a troy ounce, unchanged from Wednesday.

Stocks tumble in light trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took a tumble in light trading Wednesday as traders looked ahead to Friday's report on employment.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen 26.03 points in the week's first two sessions, fell back 22.05 to 2,036.31.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 5 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 561 up, 923 down and 514 unchanged.

Big Board volume slowed to 141.32 million shares from 176.92 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index lost 1.27 to 147.30.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 3.17 to 303.53, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 2.68 at 260.32.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market dropped .61 to 381.62. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 302.54, down .68.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Culver: Court should have heard case

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court last year should have accepted the $10.5 billion Texaco-Pennzoil case and heard oral arguments on it, Justice Barbara Culver says.

"I do think that was a mistake, not to let it be argued," said the Republican appointed to the Supreme Court this year by Gov. Bill Clements.

After the Supreme Court refused to hear the case, it was settled when Texaco paid Pennzoil $3 billion. Pennzoil had accused Texaco of interfering with a contract it had to purchase Getty Oil Co.

Ms. Culver, in a speech Wednesday night to the Austin Young Republicans, wasn't on the court when the Texaco case was appealed.

"I feel like if I was there I would have certainly let the biggest civil lawsuit in the history of the United States of America at that time at least be argued," she said.

"I don't know how I would have ruled. I haven't read the briefs, I haven't read any of the legal record. I've read what's been in the newspapers and magazines," she said.

The Supreme Court's refusal to hear that case prompted a wave of criticism that the high court was influenced by campaign contributions.

MHCC to host women's conference

From Staff Reports

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Women's Department is sponsoring the first annual women's conference May 20-21 at the Holiday Inn T-Dome, 3904 W. Wall.

Topic of the conference will be "Women: Working and Winning." There will be workshops on awareness, business, legal rights, career and family, dress for success, and politics.

Registration and a welcoming reception will be Friday, May 20, with additional registration and the conference Saturday May 21.

Further information can be obtained from the MHCC, 682-2960.

Chrysler, UAW reach tentative accord

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — The United Auto Workers union and Chrysler Corp. have reached a tentative agreement on a two-year national labor contract, following about 40 hours of non-stop bargaining.

"We achieved the full pattern settlement we set out to achieve, and we accepted no deviations from what we have in effect today at GM and Ford," the union said Wednesday in a statement attributed to UAW President Owen Bieber and Vice President Marc Stepp.

The proposed contract, which would replace a three-year pact covering 66,000 UAW workers in 15 states that expires in September, still must be approved by Chrysler's national labor council and the rank and file.

Valley businesses seek to cap STNP recovery

AUSTIN (AP) — A coalition of South Texas businesses says a cap should be placed on the amount of South Texas Nuclear Project costs partners in the project can recover from ratepayers.

The Valley Industrial Council, which includes 85 South Texas businesses, told a Wednesday news conference it has called for a $2.678 billion ceiling on the amount of plant costs STNP partners can pass on to consumers.

Industrial council members are customers of Central Power and Light Co., based in Corpus Christi. CP&L and San Antonio co-own the project with managing partner Houston Lighting & Power.

It all depends on where you stand

Howland

In business, as in most areas of life, perspective is the great un-equalizer.

National trade deficits, unemployment figures and cost of living indices are all newsworthy and deserving of our attention and consideration. However, they all fade in relation to what any one person is currently experiencing.

State unemployment may be running 7.5 percent, but if I lose my job, local joblessness at my house is 50 percent, regardless of the headlines.

Likewise, while there are great challenges facing our city, state and nation, there are many smaller — some would say less significant — problems that are less pressing, but no less important to those who have the problems.

Some might call them "pet peeves." I reject that nomenclature, preferring to reserve the word "pet" for something I like. I also like to think such annoyances are not limited to my life but are somewhat more generalized.

For instance, I hope I am not the only person in the world who receptionists around the world put on hold before I can utter a word. It would be very discouraging to think they can tell it's me calling and reserve the "Hold, please." supersonic send-off to Muzak land just for me.

In any event, this is one of those problems that needs to be addressed. Something has to be done.

Another "big" phone problem is the disappearing secretary. This troublesome personality says "I'll connect you," at which point the phone resumes ringing for 10 minutes. Even if you'd settle for leaving a message, the chances of getting her back on the line are about the same as winning the Publishers' Clearinghouse Sweepstakes or Larry Speakes being reappointed to the president's staff.

If you've ever tried to call someone at a hotel, I'm sure you can identify.

Another "peeve" that needs attention is the apparent lack of knowledge of simple traffic flow controls. The intersection of Loop 250 and North Big Spring Street leaps to mind as an example of two such control devices:

1) The merge lane: It is not necessary to come to an abrupt stop in the middle of the right turn from the Loop to south-bound Big Spring. The extra lane is provided to allow traffic to maintain some speed in order to blend with traffic already on the road.

2) The double turn lane: As a matter of course, drivers should not cross solid white lines between lanes of traffic.

For example, when turning left onto the Loop to go west, drivers in the far left lane of Big Spring should turn into only the left lane of the Loop. Not to straddle the lane markers, nor to take the right lane.

From the middle of the three lanes of Big Spring (also known as the double turn lane) drivers have a right to expect free and unimpeded passage into the right lane of the Loop, without unexplained visitors cutting them off from the left.

The same goes for the corner of Illinois and Andrews Highway, where those making a right turn in the curb lane should remain in the curb lane, to allow drivers in the second lane to make their perfectly legal right turn as well, without being herded off into oncoming traffic by a wide-turning maniac drifting in from the right.

Another annoying development that should be attacked is the propensity of the national media to make to large an issue out of White House doings that really don't make that much difference. This week's preoccupation with whether or not the First Couple checks the horoscope on a daily basis is just the latest in a long string of Reagan-related non-news and overkill.

I already know more about Ronnie's colon, Nancy's china and First Dog Rex's bathroom habits than I really care to.

To devote full half-hour shows of Nightline, Crossfire and others to discussing the Age of Aquarius at the Western White House strikes me as absurd.

Maxus Energy loses $9.6 million

DALLAS (AP) — Despite a first-quarter loss of $9.6 million, or 24 cents per share, the chief executive officer of Maxus Energy Corp. said Wednesday the company's prospects continue to improve.

The Dallas-based company lost $49.6 million, or 54 cents a share, for the same quarter a year ago, noted C.L. Blackburn, Maxus chairman and CEO.

Maxus is one of the largest independent crude oil and natural gas explorer and producer in the United States. The company encompasses the former Diamond Shamrock Corp.'s exploration and production operations.

"Although we have not returned to profitability, the company is steadily making strides in that direction," Blackburn said.

"We benefitted from price improvements in both crude oil and natural gas, compared to last year's first quarter," he said. "However, we don't see prices overall for 1988 being that different from 1987."

ASK BOB BULLOCK

Fair taxes not always simple, and vice versa

Bullock

Q. I understand there have been some recent changes in the way food sales are taxed. Could you explain what those are?

A. It's pretty simple. Restaurants should collect sales tax on usual food sales.

For grocery stores, bakers and delicatessens, taxable food sales depends on whether the business provides eating facilities for customers. If it does, you should collect tax on these items:

- Food maintained in a heated state;
- Food sold in individual portions;
- Food sold with utensils;
- Ready-made, ready-to-eat sandwiches;
- Individual ice cream sundries; and
- Five or less doughnuts, cookies and other baked goods.

If you don't have eating facilities for your customers, you should tax these items:

- Food maintained in a heated state;
- Food sold with utensils;
- Ready-made, ready-to-eat sandwiches; and
- Individual ice cream sundries.

The law and the rule are a little complicated, but I've found that simple rules aren't always fair, and fair rules aren't always simple. If you have any questions or you'd like a copy of the new rule, just call or write my office.

Q. My company provides management services for several commercial real estate properties. Should we collect tax on these services.

A. That depends on the services you're providing that are included in the fee.

If you're charging for any of these services: landscaping and lawn maintenance, garbage pick-up, janitorial-custodial services, pest control services, security services, newsletters, parking and/or telecommunications services, then yes, you should be collecting tax. There are other services that might be taxable, so call or write my office if you aren't sure.

If you are providing a taxable service, you should separate the charges for it from charges for non-taxable services. If you don't separate the charges, then the entire fee is taxable.

Q. Please explain how the local sales tax on telecommunications applies to calls made from mobile phones.

A. In most cases, the local sales tax on telecommunications is imposed based on where the call originates. Calls made from mobile phones can present a problem since you can't always tell where the call was placed from. In those cases, the tax rate is determined by where the bill is sent.

Remember, there isn't a local sales tax on interstate long distance calls.

Q. We provide electrical service to a county that recently adopted the new half-percent tax. Should we apply this tax to all electrical sales to home and business accounts in the county?

A. The county tax applies to electrical sales the same way as state sales tax, so you should collect sales tax only on commercial uses of electricity. Businesses that are exempt from state tax are also exempt from county tax.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Brokerages not entitled to 'float' balance

By BILL DOYLE

Q. How much "float" are brokerage firms entitled to? I ask because of two recent experiences.

A $50,000 certificate of deposit I had purchased through a broker came due and the brokerage didn't even mail the check to me until three days after the CD's maturity date.

The monthly payment from a GNMA certificate I bought through the same broker is nine days overdue already.

Doyle

A. A brokerage isn't "entitled" to any float — the use of a customer's money past the date that money is received by the brokerage firm. However, as has been pointed out in this space often, all too many brokerages are notoriously slow making cash available to customers.

Most complaints such as yours come after an investor has sold stock and hasn't been paid. Unless something has been fouled up, the proceeds from the sale reach the brokerage on the "settlement date" — the fifth business day after the "trade date" on which the stock was sold.

In your case, the brokerage should have received the CD's $50,000 face amount and accrued interest on the due date; the monthly Government National Mortgage Association interest and principal on the payment date.

Like a person who has sold stock, you could have gone to the brokerage office and collected your money on the appropriate date. If you didn't want to make that trip and had given specific instructions — "ordered it out," as the expression goes — a check should have been mailed to you the very next business day.

When you don't get your money promptly, it is credited to your brokerage account, where it can vegetate as a "free credit balance" — earning nothing for you. While your cash sits in your account, the brokerage can use it to earn money.

Other than telling your broker to send you a check as soon as your money is available, you can lick this problem by opening a money market mutual fund with the brokerage and having your money put there where it will earn dividends.

Many brokerages have "asset management account" arrangements and automatically put customers' free credit balances into money market funds.

Q. Nearly two months elapsed after I sold stock and I hadn't received the money. When I telephoned the broker, he said the money was in my account, as he "assumed" that was what I wanted. I told him to send me a check, which he did.

I wrote a letter asking for the interest I lost on the money. I have heard nothing. Was this a legitimate procedure? Was it unethical or what?

A. It's what, in my youth, we called "dirty pool." But your chances of collecting interest are slim to nonexistent. Lots of brokerage firms do what yours did.

Every so often, the Securities and Exchange Commission makes noises about cracking down on brokerages that keep customers' money too long. From all indications, however, that practice remains quite common.

Q. I bought 500 shares of stock and it went up $1.50 the same day. I called the broker the next day and told him to sell all 500 shares. He said that could not be done, because I had not paid for the stock yet. I said I always pay within the five-business-day settlement period. He said, "We can't sell, because you are at a profit and, on the settlement day, you might say, 'Send me a check just for the profit.'"

Well, the stock went down. I lost my $750 profit and more. I have been doing business with that brokerage firm for a long time. My commissions run several thousand dollars per year. Was the broker correct?

A. You must have run up against a "house" rule set by that particular brokerage firm. You owned the stock as of the minute your buy order was executed. You should have been able to sell.

Securities regulations do mandate that you pay for the purchase before receiving the proceeds of the sale. There's no legitimate way you could have asked for and received a check just for the profit.

Senators set energy forum for Roswell

From Staff Reports

U.S. Sens. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., will hold an energy forum focusing on natural gas issues Friday in Roswell, N.M.

The senators will hear testimony from New Mexico producers and regulators, including: New Mexico Oil & Gas Conservation Division director Bill LeMay; former president of Southern Union Refining Fred Hanson; Fred Schlicher, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of New Mexico; Joe Kelly, president of Elk Oil Co. in Roswell; and other witnesses.

Johnston, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, was a primary architect of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978.

Friday's forum will convene at 1:30 p.m. in the Mabee Lecture Hall of the Penrod Towles Learning Center on the Campus of the New Mexico Military Institute in Roswell.

USG

Under one of its proposals, Desert Partners would pay $39 in cash, $9 in bonds and stock in a new company for each of Chicago-based USG's outstanding shares. Wall Street analysts estimated the offer would be worth about $50 a share, giving the deal a value of $2.6 billion.

Under a variation, Desert Partners offered to pay $50 a share in cash for 37.1 million, or 72 percent of USG's outstanding shares. The remaining shares would be exchanged for bonds and stock in the new company valued at "the same aggregate amount," Desert Partners said in a statement.

USG Chairman Robert J. Day said the "proposals are not credible." He said in a statement that his firm already has received commitments to provide financing for its reorganization plan.

Desert Partners had offered to buy USG for $45 a share on Monday if the company's management would back the $2.3 billion bid. USG unveiled its recapitalization plan a few hours later.

Desert Partners also has a $42-a-share tender offer outstanding. That bid, including cash for up to 39 million shares and debt securities and warrants valued at $42 each for the remainder, has a value of about $2.2 billion.

Analysts had labeled Desert Partners' earlier offers conservative, saying $50 a share would be far more attractive to USG.

But Cornelius Sewell, an analyst at Argus Research Corp., noted that the latest offer was complicated and hard to value. "It's really difficult to put a value on the stock" in the resulting company, he said.

Under its recapitalization plan, USG would borrow $2.2 billion to pay its shareholders $37 in cash, debentures with a face value of $5 and a share of stock in the recapitalized corporation for each common share.

Sewell said he was surprised that Desert Partners would want to assume all the debt USG would incur under the recapitalization.

In his letter to the USG board, Wagner criticized the recapitalization maneuver, charging it was "designed to lock up control of the company with management, rather than to achieve the highest possible control premium for shareholders."

The two sides are building up to a showdown at USG's annual meeting on May 11. Desert Partners has nominated a slate of six candidates to USG's 15-member board.

IMPORT

"What you did was distribute production where each size tractor has its strongest market base and export from there," said Eli Lustgarten, an analyst at Paine Webber.

Similarly, Cincinnati Milacron Inc. and other American manufacturers of machine tools have ceded chunks of the business to the Japanese and the Europeans, particularly the West Germans.

Machine tools are the lathes and other machines that cut and shape metal parts on the factory floor. They were the archetypal capital good when smokestack industries flourished, and Milacron was a world leader in machine tool production.

But hand-operated machinery gave way to computer-controlled equipment, and German and Japanese manufacturers were strong in this technology. As a result, orders to domestic machine tool makers shrunk to $2 billion last year, from $6 billion in 1979. Cincinnati Milacron's exports dropped to $78 million, from $191 million, in the same period. Imports from Japan and Germany have doubled since 1980.

Under such pressures, Milacron is diversifying. To be sure, it is still a big manufacturer of machine tools, as well as robots and equipment to process plastics.But it sees its growth coming from other areas.

"We're selling software and we are consulting on how to network machines in the factory," said John Reading, a company spokesman. "This will be an increasingly important part of the business for us."

Given the changes that have taken root at American producers of capital goods, the nation's much-heralded export boom may turn out to be less than meets the eye.

FRIDAY, MAY 6, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You can expect something major to occur in a close relationship. Your life will improve as a direct result. You still have to watch your spending, but there will be more cash on hand. Important gains are possible in a parent-child relationship. Pursue those goals that you know you can accomplish. Running a small family business holds special appeal. This year can be a turning point for you if you follow your intuition.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Sigmund Freud, movie idol Rudolph Valentino, Orson Welles, actor Stewart Granger, baseball great Willie Mays, singer Marguerite Piazza, journalist Theodore White.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take advantage of every opportunity that comes your way. Follow up on introductions. Creative projects yield extra income. If your ears are burning, it is because someone is talking about you!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Review your personal finances to find out exactly where you stand. Something you read or hear today strikes a responsive chord; follow up. Simplifying your lifestyle proves beneficial. Romance may elude you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be careful not to spread yourself too thin today. Take one project at a time. Share your hopes and plans. A romantic encounter leaves you wanting an encore. Take things nice and easy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Welcome constructive suggestions from your co-workers. Team effort improves the bottom line. Pay more attention to small-fry's needs. High-tech skills put you in line for a promotion. Be flexible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A friend's suggestion regarding your career could trigger a big decision. A domestic conference nips a problem in the bud. Encourage teen-agers to air their views. You learn some hard truths.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The answers you have been seeking suddenly come from unusual sources. Guard valuables. A child's intensity could be part of his personality. Do not despair. Romance looks promising.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Defeat can be turned into victory if you plot your moves carefully. Look for ways to recycle old ideas. A wheeler-dealer comes to you with a great idea. Go for it!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Friends may not live up to their promises. Understand and be forgiving. A flexible approach to money-making is the best strategy now. Circulate your innovative ideas.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial deals are easier to negotiate. Short business trips prove useful. Use extra care when operating machinery or electrical appliances. Home life is more appealing than in the recent past.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Go to the top if you have legitimate complaints. A change of residence contributes to a more comfortable lifestyle. Develop your artistic talents. A special project benefits from your input.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A real estate deal should show a profit. Influential person displays renewed interest in your pet project. Catering to loved one's desires strengthens your relationship. Make some requests of your own.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Influential person could be unreasonable today. Keep your distance. A cash shortage could lead to arguments. Look for constructive ways to handle the situation.

When you know that a play cannot gain, curb your instinctive reaction and let logic be your guide. You cannot expect us to commiserate with your own folly. Declarer paid no heed to the auction on this hand from rubber bridge, and he paid the price.

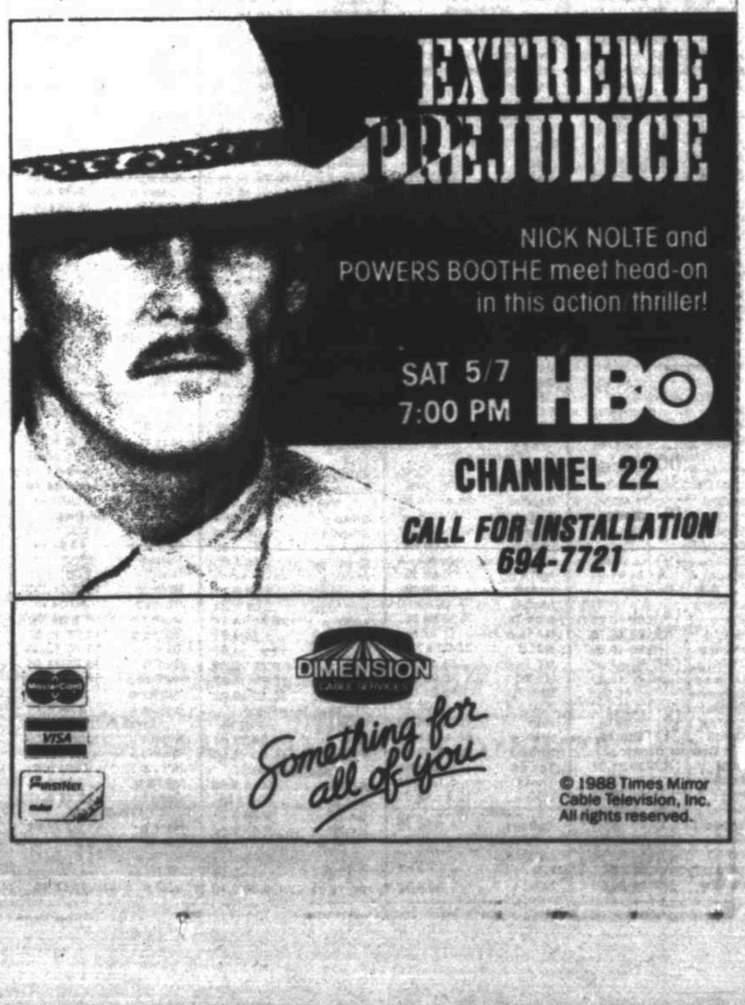

North's double of four diamonds does not show a trump stack; rather, it is predicated on sufficient high cards to defeat the contract. South decided that, with his 100 honors, he would rather try to close out the rubber at four hearts than defend.

West led the ace of diamonds and continued with the queen. Declarer covered with dummy's king, East ruffed and shifted to a spade. Declarer tried the finesse—in vain. Later, he still had to concede a club trick for down one.

Declarer had no one but himself to blame for his defeat. Trick two was not the time to follow the old saw: "Cover an honor with an honor." For his four-level preempt, West surely held at least a seven-card suit, so East could not have more than one diamond. Covering with the king of diamonds was a case of double jeopardy—not only was his majesty going to be ruffed away, but the danger hand would gain the lead by trumping.

Watch what happens if declarer plays a low diamond from dummy instead. If East ruffs to gain the lead for a spade shift, declarer simply rises with the ace, draws trumps and then discards his queen of spades on the king of diamonds

If East does not ruff, he will never gain the lead in time to hurt declarer. Declarer simply over ruffs East on the third diamond, draws trumps and then takes the club finesse. That loses, but the spade shift is too late. Declarer rises with the ace and discards his spade loser on the long club to make his game.

Hundreds attend 'The Duke's' birthplace for street dedication

WINTERSET, Iowa (AP) — Bedecked in cowboy hats, boots and bandanas, young and old devotees of "The Duke" turned out by the hundreds as Winterset's busiest street was renamed John Wayne Drive for its most famous native son.

"This is great. It's bigger than I expected," said Marisa Wayne, the 22-year-old daughter of one of Hollywood's most famous tough guys. "It's very flattering. I think he would've loved this."

Wednesday's ceremony created another draw for tourism here, where local and state officials for the past several years have touted Wayne's one-story, four-room white house as a national attraction.

"Tourism in Winterset has doubled because of the interest in the John Wayne birthplace," said Gov. Terry Branstad, who presided over the ceremony.

Most of the attention focused on Wayne's widow, Pilar Wayne, and Marisa, who were mobbed by dozens of people thrusting paper and pens at them for autographs.

"I'm thrilled, flabbergasted. I think it's one of the most wonderful things to have this done," said Mrs. Wayne. "Truly, he had Iowa stock in him — and that's a great stock to come from."

Some brought Mrs. Wayne's new book, "John Wayne, My Life with the Duke," for her to sign, while others wanted her to sign pictures and sketches of her late husband.

"I'm a great fan of his. He was my favorite star, he always has been," said George Henry Blades, 68, of Winterset, who carried a 4-foot high picture showing himself standing in front of a huge statue of the Duke, taken at the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma.

After the ceremony, Mrs. Wayne and her daughter toured the restored Wayne house perched on a corner one block away from the newly named street.

Wayne was born Marion Robert Morrison on May 26, 1907, and spent the first three years of his life in Winterset before his family moved to Earlham.

He died of lung cancer in 1979.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Jean Stapleton will play a wealthy, clever woman studying Italian in a one-woman show Friday at Wilson College to raise money for a scholarship in her name.

Jean Stapleton

Ms. Stapleton, best known as Edith Bunker in the television series "All in the Family," will play in "The Italian Lesson." Tickets will cost $35.

"I've had a long association with Wilson," Ms. Stapleton said Wednesday.

In 1985, Ms. Stapleton gave the women's college her papers and memorabilia and those of the nearby Totem Pole Playhouse, which was run by her late husband, William Putch.

"The Totem Pole Playhouse is a very big jewel in the community, as is Wilson College," Ms. Stapleton said.

Putch received an honorary doctorate in May 1983 from Wilson, which has 500 full-time students. He died that November.

"Wilson is honored to be able to establish a scholarship in Ms. Stapleton's name in recognition of her accomplishments and her dedication to the advancement of women," said Mary-Linda Merriam, president of the 118-year-old college.

Ms. Stapleton, 65, won three Emmy awards for her work on the 1970s' series "All in the Family." She has appeared in 81 shows in the Totem Pole Playhouse.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Huey Lewis and The News will be trotting the globe after they release "Small World" and "Perfect World."

The band will celebrate its 10th anniversary with its fifth album and a world tour.

The new LP, "Small World" will be released in July with nine original songs, publicist Toby Lubov said Wednesday. It features guest appearances by singer-pianist Bruce Hornsby, jazz saxophonist Stan Getz and the Tower of Power horn section.

The first single, "Perfect World," is scheduled for a June release along with a video, Ms. Lubov said.

A six-week U.S. tour starts Aug. 3 in Paso Robles, with a European tour and a second American leg to follow, she said.

NEW YORK (AP) — New York has often played a role in the films of directors Woody Allen, Francis Ford Coppola and Martin Scorsese, and now they're getting together to tell "New York Stories."

Production work has started on the trilogy on life in modern Manhattan for Disney's Touchstone Pictures. Since the project was led by Allen, it carries its usual Allenesque cloak of secrecy.

All a Disney spokesman would say was that Allen will write, direct and star in his segment but that no other casting has been confirmed. Coppola is writing his segment with his daughter, Sofia. Richard Price ("The Color of Money") is writing Scorsese's segment.

Coppola shot "The Godfather" and "The Cotton Club" in New York. Scorsese did "Raging Bull," "Mean Streets," "Taxi Driver" and "King of Comedy" here. And just about all of Allen's work is Manhattan-based.

Disney said the movie, tentatively called "New York Stories," will be released early next year.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sam Elliott plays an undercover cop in his new film, but the point is to get out from the shadows, he says.

"Shakedown," which opens Friday, is a conscious effort "to elevate myself in this business," Elliott said recently.

"I'm trying to ally myself with commercially oriented movies so that I can become bankable and therefore get better roles," he said. "I've turned stuff down because I didn't believe in it, and I don't want to do anything I can't believe in.

"If it isn't real for me, it won't be real up on the screen."

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Actor-director Robert Redford is leaving for the Soviet Union on Saturday for a 10-day trip to discuss two of his favorite subjects, films and the environment.

Robert Redford

Redford was invited last December by Elem Klimov, president of the Soviet Filmmakers Union. Seven of his films will be shown in Leningrad, Moscow and Tbilisi.

While in Moscow, the actor will co-host discussions on global environment with the Soviet Academy of Sciences, the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research, Boulder, Colo., and the Natural Resources Defense Council, N.Y.

The two-day meeting was initiated by the Institute for Resource Management, an organization created by Redford in 1981 that attempts to find resolutions to environmental conflicts and controversies.

Artifacts may be linked to ancient Viking royal dynasty

By FRANK POWLEY

ROSKILDE, Denmark (AP) — Archaeologists have unearthed artifacts in a Danish hamlet which may be connected to the royal dynasty celebrated in Viking sagas and the Old English epic "Beowulf."

The scientific team, led by Tom Christensen of the Roskilde Museum, uncovered evidence of the biggest, and possibly the oldest, Viking longhouses ever found. One was a hall 165 feet long and 34 feet wide, dating from the ninth to 11th centuries.

The digs began last spring at the Zealand island village of Lejre, five miles south of Roskilde and 20 miles west of Copenhagen. Previously excavated burial mounds and monuments from the Viking age dot the surrounding landscape.

"There are at least two princely halls with associated smithies, stalls and other outbuildings in Lejre," Christensen said in an interview.

The Vikings were seafaring Norsemen who plundered the coasts of Europe 1,000 years ago, building trading and farming settlements in conquered areas.

Christensen said the archaeologists found a mid-ninth- to mid-10th-century buckle in Borre design and a Jelling-period bronze stud decoration for a sword or sheath. Borre and Jelling are names for two of the oldest Viking ornamental styles.

These and other finds, he said, raised the possibility that remains of the royal seat of the legendary Scylding Dynasty may some day be found in Lejre.

"We're being careful not to read too much into our findings, but the written sources linking Lejre with the Scyldings perhaps should be reviewed," Christensen said.

The oldest known reference to the Scyldings is in the eighth-century Anglo-Saxon epic poem Beowulf, often called the first major work of English literature.

Set in the period of the Germanic migrations in the fourth to seventh centuries, the poem places the Scylding King Hrothgar's hall, Heorot, in central Zealand.

Saxo Grammaticus, a 13th-century chronicler who compiled a history of both legendary and historical Danish kings, also identified Lejre as an ancient royal seat.

Many modern Beowulf scholars identify Heorot with Lejre.

Christensen, however, stressed it was still impossible to firmly link any figure in history or legend with the excavations in Lejre.

"I'm convinced that a royal residence dating from the time of the sagas will be uncovered. But that will be up to a future generation of archaeologists, for much lies buried and inaccessible beneath existing farmhouses," said Christensen.

He said the longhouse where some ornaments were found had a floor area of 1,800 square feet and were roughly 33 feet high, making the boat-shaped wooden structure about twice the size of any other found so far.

The dimensions of the building were calculated from the signs of hundreds of holes in the ground for the huge oak beams that supported the walls and roof.

No physical remains were found of the dwelling, which in typical Viking fashion would have housed a royal chieftain, his family and thanes, Christensen said.

Before the ground froze last winter, the archaeologists covered the site with insulating materials to preserve it until excavations could resume in the spring.

Based on pottery shards and metal ornaments dating back as far as the seventh century, Christensen believes even older Viking residences can come to light in Lejre. Large tracts of the rolling countryside around Lejre have been designated as an archaeological site.

Polish police end 10-day strike at steel mill

Walesa

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Plainclothes police surprised sleeping workers with percussion grenades today in a predawn raid that ended a 10-day strike at the huge Nowa Huta steel mill outside Krakow, official and church sources said.

At the Gdansk shipyard, site another other major work stoppage, communist authorities ordered a lockout today and police in full riot gear ringed the yard.

In Warsaw, Solidarity's national spokesman was reported arrested and the government accused strike leaders of trying to provoke a crisis.

The government reported new work stoppages today among transit workers in the northwestern port of Szczecin and the nearby municipality of Police. Students also began a strike at Warsaw University.

"The moment of the solution similar to that at Nowa Huta is approaching," Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said in a taped interview smuggled out of the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk. In a tense-sounding voice, he vowed to be "the last to leave."

In a communique, the shipyard strike committee had called on workers to come to the yard: "We continue the strike with a feeling of responsiblity for the shipyard and for the country."

Hundreds of workers inside loudly chanted "Solidarity, Solidarity," and sang religous songs and the national anthem.

Riot police turned away a crowd that gathered outside the yard, birthplace of the outlawed Solidarity trade union movement.

At the Nowa Huta steelworks, police entered strike headquarters, detonated the grenades and arrested most strike committee members, said Krzystof Koziowski, a senior Roman Catholic journalist in Krakow.

Later riot police entered and ordered all strikers to leave. Half the plant's 32,000-worker force had been on strike.

"Nobody suffered any harm or injury," government spokesman Jerzy Urban said in a telephone interview.

State-run radio said at least 38 people were arrested.

The state-run news agency PAP said "actions were undertaken this morning" to reopen the Nowa Huta plant. It gave no more specific information.

On Wednesday, Urban had accused strike leaders of "terrorist" tactics and threatened to use force if the "anarchy" continued. Today, he said Walesa and his followers want to "evoke crisis" and he reiterated the government's refusal to negotiate with Solidarity activists.

Walesa said authorities were "sinking our country into ruin...I'm still convinced our strivings are right, and I can't behave in any different way."

Dissident intellectual Adam Michnik, just released from two days' detention, told reporters in Gdansk today that breaking the Nowa Huta strike was "the most foolish thing these authorities could do.

"This is the last nail in (Polish leader) General (Wojciech) Jaruzelski's political coffin," he said.

PAP said today that the Nowa Huta strike had threatened "the fundamental interests of the society and national economy."

WORLD

It also quoted Gdansk shipyard management as saying workers not joining the strike would be given paid leaves of absence.

About 7,000 workers at the 12,000-worker shipyard in the Baltic port went on strike Monday, the fourth stoppage since April 25 in Poland's worst wave of labor unrest since the 1981 military crackdown on Solidarity.

The two other strikes were settled when the government agreed to increase wages to offset price increase of 42 percent so far this year.

At Nowa Huta and Gdansk, strikers also demanded independent local unions, reinstatement of fired union activists and the release of political prisoners.

Phones of opposition activists in the Krakow area appeared cut off today, said Barbara Labuda, a Solidarity spokeswoman in Wroclaw. Joanna Onyszkiewicz, wife of Solidarity national spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz, said her husband was taken away by police from his Warsaw home this morning.

Just after midnight, strike leaders at Nowa Huta announced that Roman Catholic Church mediators had persuaded management to negotiate with strikers there later today. Strike leaders in Gdansk said management there had refused to negotiate with them.

The mediators were acting at the request of the country's Catholic bishops, who on Wednesday broke their silence on the unrest and calling on authorities to seek common ground with aggrieved citizens.

Urban indicated on Wednesday that authorities might crack down.

"We shall not allow any anarchy," he said on national radio and television. "The two wildcat strikes have degenerated, and I am warning, they may result in serious consequences."

Urban accused strikers of coercing workers into honoring the strikes at both plants and impeding deliveries of materials.

"We are talking here about terrorist actions," he said.

Three times in postwar Poland, labor trouble has toppled governments.

In a statement issued in Warsaw on Wednesday, the nation's bishops said the unrest was causing "anxiety."

"The only means which lead to overcoming the crisis is dialogue of state authorities with representative groups of the society," the statement said, without specifically mentioning Solidarity.

French hostages return home

PARIS (AP) — Three freed French hostages returned to France today after three years of captivity in Lebanon, and Premier Jacques Chirac thanked Iran for intervening to free the Frenchmen.

He said normal relations with Iran, broken July 17, "could be envisaged."

Interior Minister Charles Pasqua told reporters that no money was paid to free the hostages and that France did not negotiate with the captors. But a Syrian mediator said France repaid $670 million in borrowed money to Iran and made other compensation to the kidnappers.

Diplomats Marcel Carton, 62, Marcel Fontaine, 45, and journalist Jean-Paul Kauffmann, 44, arrived at the military airport of Villacoublay in a special government jet. They were freed Wednesday evening in Beirut.

"It's an incredible day," Kauffmann said, looking thin but healthy. "But it's also a day which remains overshadowed because we are just three."

Kauffmann then spoke at length about Michel Seurat, the French researcher captured with him who is believed dead. Kauffmann said earlier that Seurat, said to have been executed by his kidnappers, probably died of cancer.

"I'm a little ashamed to be here today," Kauffmann said. He then recalled Western hostages still being held in Beirut "leading that nightmare life."

Carton said the three saw other hostages, but did not know who they were.

Chirac, in a short address, also thanked Syrian President Hafez Assad and Lebanese military authorities for their help in gaining freedom for the hostages, who were held by pro-Iranian extremists.

"As we all know, the liberation of our hostages falls into the framework of our relations with Iran," Chirac said. "It's the authorities in Tehran who intervened with the captors so that they free our countrymen." He said that France had been awaiting the releases "for weeks and for months."

Chirac, evoking questions about the means by which the hostages were freed, said the government "never ceased to act with dignity and honor."

Commentators immediately raised the issue of a deal and began speculating about what transpired. Ten French hostages have been freed since Chirac's government took office in March 1986.

In response to questions from reporters, Pasqua said: "We have not accorded any funds of any sort to anyone, not a franc, not a dollar, not a deutschmark, not a yen."

"There were no negotiations with the captors," he continued. "I think that would have been completely useless."

There were reports in Beirut that France agreed to repay Iran's fundamentalist rulers the outstanding two-thirds of a $1 billion loan made by the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

A Syrian mediator said in Geneva today that France finished repaying the loan as part of the deal.

"It was paid back in three installments, the last one just very recently," Omran Adham told The Associated Press. "This is my information from the French, Syrians and Iranians."

Adham, a 41-year-old Syrian businessman, undertook several mediation missions over the past two years in which he asked Assad to intervene with Iran for the freeing of the hostages.

He said he was certain the French government offered other "compensation for the kidnappers," though he had no proof. The government expelled Adham from France Tuesday.

Israeli soldiers kill two Palestinians

West Bank shops forced to close

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops shut Palestinian shops throughout the West Bank today in punishment for a strike, and schoolchildren set tires ablaze in the Gaza Strip to protest the army's closing of Arab schools.

The army said a 52-year-old Palestinian man from Gaza's Shati refugee camp died after reportedly inhaling tear gas Wednesday, but said it had ordered an autopsy to determine the cause of death.

Two Arab protesters were reported shot to death by Israeli soldiers Wednesday, raising to 183 the number of Arabs who have died since unrest began in the occupied territories Dec. 8. Two Israelis also have been killed.

Today, Israeli troops forced Arab shops to close on the West bank, announcing on megaphones the closure would remain in effect for three days to punish merchants for adhering to a PLO-ordered general strike a day earlier.

In Jericho, soldiers shut down the West Bank's largest vegetable market, along with other shops and bakeries. An order from the military governor said stores that do not reopen on Sunday will be sealed shut by troops.

Near the village of Beita, hundreds of Jewish settlers began a five-hour march along the route taken by a group of teen-age hikers last month when a bloody clash erupted at the Arab village and left an Israeli teen-ager and two Palestinians dead.

Many of the marchers had guns slung over their shoulders. Last month's clash caused an uproar in Israel and prompted the army to demolish 14 Arab homes, arrest dozens of Arab villagers and seal off Beita for weeks.

In Gaza City, about 120 children chanting "PLO yes, Israel no!" hoisted the outlawed Palestinian flag onto a flagpole at a school run by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency, an Arab reporter said.

Troops fired tear gas to disperse the children, who erected barricades of boulders and set tires ablaze in front of the school, the reporter said.

The Arab protest was in response to a leaflet distributed by underground leaders of the 5-month-old Arab uprising and signed by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The leaflet ordered protests today against Israel's shutdown of Arab schools and told schoolchildren to force the schools open for three hours. All schools in the occupied West Bank have been closed since Feb. 6, affecting 300,000 Arab children.

In Nablus, troops erected roadblocks and prevented Arab taxis from leaving the city to punish residents for adhering to a general strike Wednesday that shuttered shops and stopped all public transit.

Ahmed Sarawi, a Nablus merchant whose shop was forced closed by troops, said the action would not break the back of Arab resistance. "The army has killed, deported, jailed and beaten us. But we are not going to give up," he told The Associated Press.

The army clamped curfews on the Gaza Strip refugee camps of Shati and Jabaliya after violent protests erupted Wednesday in response to a "day of confrontation" ordered in the leaflets.

In a rare armed attack, an assailant hurled a grenade at an Israeli car near the West Bank's Jewish settlement of Maale Adumim on Wednesday, Israel radio and the Itim news agency said. No injuries or damage were reported.

But most of Wednesday's violence centered in the crowded Palestinian refugee camps in the Gaza Strip.

Spring causes 'acid shock' in Canada's lakes

LAKE LAFLAMME, Quebec (AP) — The snow lies nearly two feet deep under the fir trees around Lake Laflamme in the Laurentian Mountains. But the pastoral scene masks one of Canada's worst environmental hazards: acid shock.

Each spring as the snow melts, airborne pollutants that accumulated over the winter in the boreal forest are flushed into the lakes of eastern Canada, causing up to 100 times the normal level of acidity and killing the fish.

"Lakes in Quebec and elsewhere in Canada are under siege," federal Environment Minister Tom McMillan told reporters who traveled an hour north of Quebec City to Montmorency Forest this week to observe the acid shock phenomenon at Lake Laflamme.

McMillan said half the acid rain and snow falling there originates from U.S. smokestack emissions and vehicle exhausts, and he repeated Canada's demand for U.S. legislation to slash those emissions under a fixed timetable.

The offending sulfates and nitrates have killed all fish life in 14,000 Canadian lakes and another 150,000 lakes are being acidified, he said.

"It's the North American continent's No. 1 environmental problem. Together, we must act to defeat it. If we don't, it will defeat us," the minister said.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney made the same plea last month to President Reagan and Congress, but won only a promise for more talks.

"We didn't think it was going to be easy to convince a president who had attributed acid rain to trees and ducks and volcanoes," said McMillan.

The Reagan administration argues that more cause-and-effect research is needed before billions of dollars are spent on smokestack filters and scrubbers and other measures to curb the 3.2 million metric tons a year of sulfur dioxide flowing across the border from the United States.

Since 1980, a team of 40 Canadian scientists has used Lake Laflamme as an acid shock laboratory to develop the world's first computer model on the amount of acid pollution that can be anticipated during spring run-off.

But ironically, the government-organized visit to the tiny, remote lake underlined U.S. reservations over Canada's tough stand on acid rain.

For one thing, the United States plans to spend far more money on acid rain research than Canada.

Reagan agreed in 1986 to ask Congress for $2.5 billion U.S. over five years to develop clean-coal technology, with an equal amount coming from industry. Little has been appropriated thus far, but it was a commitment.

In Canada, seven federal departments spend a total of just $18 million ($14.5 million U.S.) a year on acid rain.

McMillan said this did not take provincial spending into account but added: "One of the problems in the United States is that research has become a buzzword for, 'We're not going to do anything about the problem itself.'"

Mulroney and McMillan often assert that acid rain is damaging Canada's forests. But Claude Godbout, research director at the Quebec Ministry of Energy and Resources, said there is "no scientific proof" of such damage.

Thousands of dead trees along the road to Lake Laflamme fell prey to spruce budworm, not acid rain, Godbout said. "There's been an epidemic since 1970. But there is some suspicion that acid rain weakened the trees."

McMillan claimed the Canadian maple syrup industry may collapse within 10 years because of maple die back in which acid rain is a "major factor." But Godbout said high concentrations of ozone may cause more damage.

Godbout nevertheless favored reductions in acid rain emissions. He quoted the French philosopher Pascal's aphorism on the existence of God: "If heaven exists and I am a Christian, I win. If I am not a Christian, I lose. I can't take the gamble. It's the same with acid rain."

Despite its high acidity, Lake Laflamme still supports 2,000 brook trout.

WORLD IN BRIEF

French hostage deal draws criticism

PARIS (AP) — Even before three freed French hostages made it home, Premier Jacques Chirac was peppered with reproach for dealing secretly with terrorists, likely worsening chances for remaining — and future — hostages.

Nine Americans, three Britons and six others were still believed to be captive in Lebanon.

After a morning of scattered sharp reaction, Interior Minister Charles Pasqua today retorted to reporters:

"We have not accorded any funds of any sort to anyone, not a franc, not a dollar, not a deutschmark, not a yen."

Most French politicians publicly hailed the release, calling it above politics even though it came four days before Chirac faces incumbent Francois Mitterrand in presidential elections.

But Jean-Marie Le Pen, of the extreme right National Front, who polled 14.4 percent in first-round voting, said he was struck that everyone cried victory over a "defeat" for France.

"There is the other side of this, a death and the price that I would like to know," he said. "There is only one way to deal with terrorists, that used in Ouvea."

U.S., Britain investigate reports of mines

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Shipping executives said Wednesday that U.S. and British warships were investigating reports of Iranian vessels sowing mines off the United Arab Emirates, but there was no confirmation any were found.

Adm. William J. Crowe Jr., chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, met with senior Bahrain government officials on the second day of a visit to the Persian Gulf, where Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980.

Iran claimed its anti-aircraft batteries shot down three Iraqi warplanes during air raids, the first reported since an informal truce halted attacks on cities two weeks ago.

Shipping executives said a civilian helicopter pilot reported Tuesday seeing two ships thought to be Iranian between Das island, an oil terminal off the Emirates, and the Iran-owned Sassan platform that U.S. forces destroyed April 18.

His report raised fears the ships were sowing mines.

South Africa, Cuba, Angola take peace 'step'

LONDON (AP) — South Africa, Cuba and Angola made progress in U.S.-sponsored negotiations on ending the civil war in Angola and will meet again in Africa within weeks, the United States announced Wednesday.

Chester Crocker, U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, said the agreement to meet again was "an important step" toward getting Cuban and South African troops to withdraw from Angola and securing independence for South African-controlled Namibia, or South-West Africa.

"We were impressed by the tone of the discussions, by the absence of polemics and the iterations of seriousness," Crocker said of the unprecedented meeting between South Africa's white generals and the Cuban and Angolan leaders.

"But it is fair to be skeptical," Crocker told a news conference at the U.S. Embassy at the end of the two-day talks. "There are big, tough issues that lie ahead. Gaps need to be bridged. We do not think they should be unbridgeable."

The place and date for the talks in Africa has not been decided, Crocker said.

Uprising leaves Israel with 5,000 prisoners

JERUSALEM (AP) — Widespread arrests in the Palestinian uprising have crowded Israel's prisons with nearly 5,000 new inmates and raised accusations that suspects are held unlawfully, humiliated and sometimes beaten.

At least 1,700 of the inmates have been sentenced to up to six months in jail without specific charges or an appearance before a judge. This is done under emergency laws still in use 43 years after they were imposed by Britain during its mandate over Palestine.

Israel has opened or converted five prison camps to house the burgeoning inmate population, nearly double the 5,000 Palestinians jailed before the protests began Dec. 8 against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.
