SIMPLY SPECTACULAR

There's nothing quite like the Fourth of July in Midland. Families gathered beneath the blanket of a perfectly black West Texas sky, alit by the prismatic bursts of booming fireworks overhead. It was, well, the headline says it all.

Star-Spangled Salute lights up downtown

Standing before a sea of Midlanders, cowboy hats over hearts, 10-year-old Mackenzie Walker belted out the our nation's most beloved anthem, "The Star-Spangled Banner."

With a giant American flag draped on the building behind her, the Lubbock singer hit the high notes as fireworks popped and the Commemorative Air Force's High Sky Wing flew World War II airbirds over Centennial Plaza.

Midland celebrated its third annual Star-Spangled Salute all day Friday, ending with a colorful fireworks display over the downtown area.

Evening activities included two concerts and a kid's zone with bounce castles, bubbles, coloring, balloon animals and facepainting at Midland Center.

Demi Dykes, who moved to the Tall City just three days ago, brought her 2-year-old daughter for a day of fun. Dykes later would take her husband to his oil-and-gas-industry job before ending the night with fireworks.

"It's nice because she gets to interact with other kids," Dykes said as a clown painted a pink unicorn with magical stars on her daughter's face. "She doesn't get to do that because we travel a lot."

Midland's free Fourth of July celebration is growing — thanks, in part, to the economic boom, said Nellwyn Barnett, vice president of chamber relations for the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Barnett expected 14,000 people to attend this year — 2,000 more than when it started in its current format three years ago.

Lawn chairs covered Centennial Plaza as people of all ages waited for the fireworks to start. Earlier that day, bicycles, tricycles and wagons lined the streets with colorful streamers, balloons and flags during the 52nd annual Children's Sidewalk Parade.

More than 650 kids circled downtown Midland with their families, including 4-year-old Saydee Gonzalez, who rode a pink tricycle adorned with American flags and shiny red and blue toy pinwheels.

"The wheels are spinning!" said Saydee, as her 10-year-old brother, Julian, raced by on his decorated lowrider bicycle.

Friday morning's parade was a first for the four members of the Gonzalez family, which included parents Chris and Samantha.

"We decided to come and make it about the kids," Samantha said.

Children of all ages wearing sparkler headbands and giant American top hats played in the closed-down streets after the parade.

As the national anthem played at Centennial Plaza that morning, 10-year-old Lindsey Edgar glanced back at her grandfather holding his baseball cap over his heart and removed her promotional paper hat — just like him.

With a little help from her dad, Lindsey rode in what the Edgar family called a "jitney," a small red pedal car with a wooden seat.

"My brother and I rode it in the parade when we were kids," said her father, Mark, calling it a family tradition.

Now decorated with streamers and flags, grandfather Arlen Edgar said the family bought the jitney at a garage sale when Mark was a kid. But his granddaughter, sporting a blue shirt, American flag skirt and blonde pigtails, called it hard to pedal.

"Next year I'm going to ride my bicycle and pull it behind me with all of my Build-A-Bears dressed in colonial outfits," she said.

New regulation targets zebra mussels

Associated Press

CONROE — Monica McGarrity is lying face down at the end of a wood dock at a Lake Conroe marina, dipping a microphone-like device into the water to collect samples and deploying a net that resembles an airfield windsock to gather microscopic particles.

She hopes she doesn't find what she's looking for.

"Wish me bad luck," laughs McGarrity, an aquatic invasive species biologist for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

She's one of two biologists canvassing about three dozen Texas lakes for signs of zebra mussels, an invasive shellfish that's steadily advancing across much of the central and eastern United States and now with a foothold in Texas.

Besides upsetting Mother Nature's balance, the mussels are affecting infrastructure and now changing the way Texans play with their water toys.

Beginning July 1, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission expanded a requirement to all Texas lakes and rivers: People leaving or approaching public water must drain all water from their vessels and on-board receptacles, rinse them and dry them. It applies to all types and sizes of boats, personal watercraft, sailboats, kayaks, canoes or any other vessel.

The zebra mussels — sharp fingernail-size shells with stripes — attach and multiply on nearly everything from old soda cans, the underside of docks and boats to the inside of pipelines carrying fresh water to utilities, power plants or agriculture.

"More or less, once they attach, that's it," McGarrity said. "Then they filter, filter, filter. All of the stuff I'm catching here. They filter away and that's how they make the water more clear. They're eating all the nutrients that the fish eat."

The clearer water lets in additional sunlight, allowing undesirable plants to thrive and alter the food chain. That depletes the native fish population.

Their razor-like shells also can make beaches treacherous and less attractive for visitors, hurting local economies.

Recreational water users say the new regulations are likely to be an inconvenience but worth it to protect the lakes.

"People may just have to accept it and take on the responsibility," Terry Finley, 64, of Montgomery, said as he filled his WaveRunner with gasoline for a day on Lake Conroe.

The cleaning is intended to remove traces of zebra mussels and keep them from being transferred to another body of water.

"Once they're in, it doesn't take long," said Robert McMahon, a University of Texas at Arlington biology professor who's studied the critters for years. "I don't want to be saying it's doomsday. It's just they're economic and ecological pests. They plug up water works, and that can cost millions."

Source: UT President's resignation demanded

Associated Press

AUSTIN — University of Texas System Chancellor Francisco Cigarroa told University of Texas at Austin President Bill Powers that he must resign or he will be fired, a person with direct knowledge of the conversation told The Associated Press on Friday.

The person who confirmed the ultimatum spoke on the condition of anonymity because the person was not authorized to speak publicly on the matter.

Cigarroa told Powers he must either resign ahead of the Board of Regents July 10 meeting or he will be fired at it, the person said. The person said Powers told Cigarroa that he would not resign but is willing to discuss a timeline for leaving.

A message left with the University of Texas Systems spokeswoman requesting an interview with Cigarroa was not immediately returned. Powers could not be reached for comment Friday.

Powers has led UT since 2006 and is popular among faculty and students. But his vision for higher education has clashed with some regents — sometimes dramatically — whose ideas are supported by Republican Gov. Rick Perry.

Cigarroa has acknowledged a "strained" relationship with Powers, whose job has been rumored to be in jeopardy since 2011. At a December regents meeting, Cigarroa gave Powers a cautious endorsement.

"There are problems. I've addressed these problems. And it is my full expectation that President Powers and I will work toward resolving them and moving ahead," Cigarroa said at the time.

It's been a bruising two years for Powers in leading the 50,000-student campus. The tension began in 2011 when Perry began pushing a series of higher education reforms that called for more accountability on state campuses and lower costs. Academics on the state's largest campuses bristled at the proposals.

Signs of discord continued into 2012, when Perry backed UT regents who rejected a tuition hike plan endorsed by Powers.

Cigarroa said in December that his frustration with Powers stemmed from a lack of communication. He also suggested that he and Powers would agree on a course of action for the university, only to watch Powers give a public impression that the two were misaligned.

Powers has also clashed with board members over a myriad of issues, including tuition and graduation rates and the role of teaching and research in education. Board member Wallace Hall's aggressive and relentless pursuit of records and questions over Powers' leadership led to a vote in May by the Select Committee on Transparency in State Agency Operations that grounds exists to impeach Hall over his efforts to force out Powers. A Texas House panel is drafting articles of impeachment against Hall.

Ex-El Paso school chief to be freed from prison

Associated Press

EL PASO — The former El Paso School District superintendent sentenced to 42 months in prison for his role as mastermind of a test-cheating scandal has been moved to a halfway house as the end of his prison term approaches.

Lorenzo Garcia received a sentence reduction for completing a Bureau of Prisons drug rehabilitation program while incarcerated and is set to be released in November, U.S. Bureau of Prisons spokesman Chris Burke told the El Paso Times. His original release date was October 2015.

Garcia was moved from the Lewisburg penitentiary, a high-security federal prison located about 170 miles north of Philadelphia, to a halfway house Thursday. It isn't clear exactly where it is located, but it could be Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma or Texas.

At the sentencing in October 2012, U.S. District Judge David Briones ordered Garcia to take part in a drug rehabilitation program and said that the defendant could not benefit from the sentence reduction due to the seriousness of his offenses. But while incarcerated, Garcia took part in a Bureau of Prisons drug program and had his sentence reduced because BOP officials said he did not fit the profile of violent offenders.

Garcia was hired in 2006 and served as superintendent until his arrest in 2012.

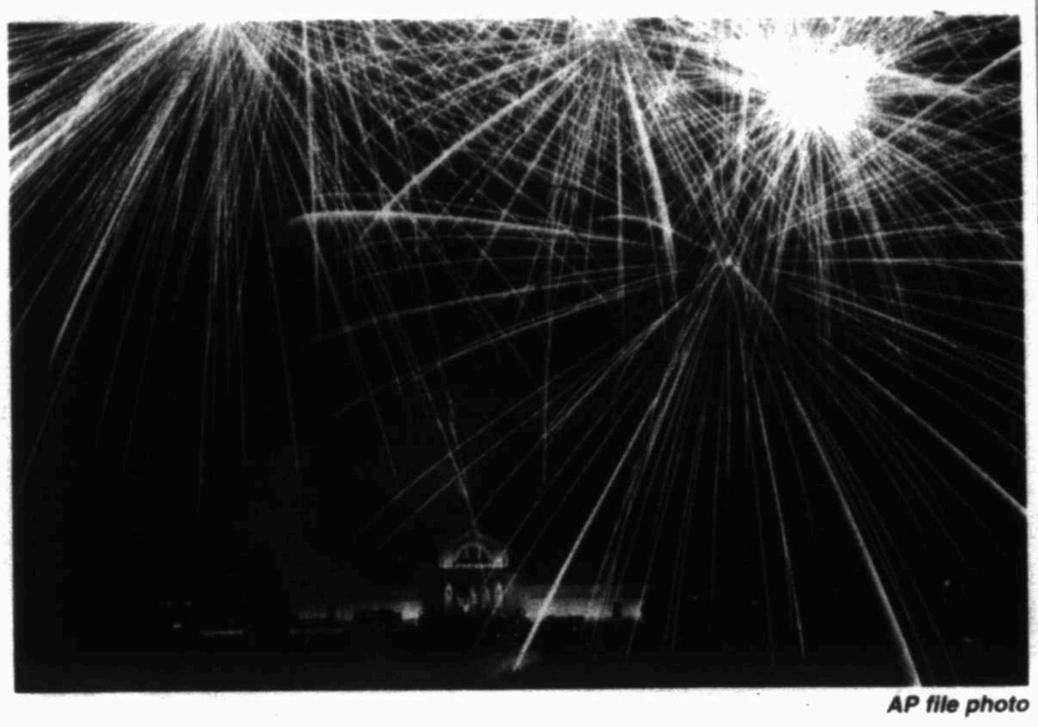

He organized a cheating scheme in which El Paso school district officials encouraged low-performing students to drop out or held them back in the ninth grade so they would not take the Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills tests in the 10th grade. The cheating ensured that the district's high-stakes test results went up and Garcia secured bonuses for himself and his accomplices. Garcia personally received at least $56,000 in bonuses.

In 2012, he pleaded guilty to two counts of conspiracy to commit mail fraud in the test rigging and to steering a $450,000 no-bid contract for school materials to a mistress.

Fireworks, hot dogs, weather helped mark Fourth of July

The Associated Press

The United States marks 238 years as an independent nation as it celebrated the Fourth of July with fireworks, food and music. Nature and politics also played a role this year, with Hurricane Arthur crashing holiday parties along the East Coast and with subdued festivities in Moscow amid growing anti-American sentiment over the crisis in Ukraine. Here are some highlights of Independence Day celebrations across the globe:

Fair St. Louis fireworks illuminate the sky in front of the St. Louis Art Museum on Wednesday in St Louis, Missouri. Americans celebrated the nation's 238th birthday on Friday.

Fire in the sky

The Macy's Fourth of July fireworks show in New York City is the nation's largest. Macy's said more than 1,600 shells were launched per minute during the 25-minute display over the East River. Among the celebrities who performed at the event were the Zac Brown Band, Enrique Iglesias and Ariana Grande. Other major fireworks shows were held in Chicago on Lake Michigan and in San Francisco over the bay.

Weather worries

The first hurricane of the season, Arthur, forced many East Coast cities to switch the dates of their Fourth of July celebrations. Boston officials moved the annual Boston Pops July 4 concert and fireworks from Friday to Thursday. Then they cut short the concerts so the fireworks could begin. Shortly after the dazzling display thundered to a close, a drenching rain began falling. Meanwhile, several cities in Maine, New Hampshire and New Jersey moved their fireworks shows to either today or Sunday. Augusta, Maine, moved its fireworks to Aug. 2.

When it crossed North Carolina's Outer Banks late Thursday, Arthur narrowly missed becoming the first hurricane to make landfall on July Fourth, according to National Hurricane Center research that dates to the 1850s.

In Phoenix, the first dust storm of the summer arrived with blinding winds that forced the cancellation of holiday plans, knocked out power and grounded flights.

Inspiring music

In Washington, composer John Williams debuted a new arrangement of "The Star-Spangled Banner" featuring choirs, trumpets, an orchestra and cannons on the National Mall.

This year marks the 200th anniversary of the national anthem. Francis Scott Key was inspired by the sight of the flag over Baltimore's Fort McHenry in September 1814 after a 25-hour British bombardment.

Thousands of people celebrated the Fourth in the nation's capital under clear skies, despite initial fears rain could ruin their fun. Visitors to the Mall gazed at the White House and the Washington Monument and strolled through the Smithsonian Folklife Festival, which featured food, music and cultural demonstrations.

Gluttony on the fourth

High-ranking chowhound Joey "Jaws" Chestnut dropped to one knee and proposed to his longtime girlfriend before Friday's annual Coney Island hot dog eating contest, then packed away 61 franks and buns to hold onto his coveted mustard yellow winner's belt. The San Jose, California, man fell far short of his record last year of 69 dogs and buns, but he still easily beat second-place finisher Matt Stonie, also of San Jose, who downed just 56.

Independence hall

Vice President Joe Biden, addressing the annual "Celebration of Freedom" ceremony at Independence Hall, said the lessons of the civil rights movement show that the struggle for freedom that began in Philadelphia more than two centuries ago is not over.

Ex-pats in Canada

Julie Buchanan, treasurer of Democrats Abroad, celebrated at a Toronto bar with red, white and blue sparklers, about 125 of her American ex-pat friends, and life-size cut-outs of President Barack Obama and the first lady.

"We really miss the patriotism of America; so many of us crave that sense of pride and camaraderie from back home," said Buchanan, an Alabama native who moved to Toronto from Memphis, Tennessee, in 2000.

Moscow parties

The national anthems of both Russia and the United States played at the traditional July Fourth garden party held at the stately residence of the American ambassador in Moscow. But far fewer Russians than usual came, either because they were unwilling to be seen associating with American diplomats or because their anti-American statements had gotten them scratched off of the guest list.

The other big Independence Day party in Moscow, organized by the American Chamber of Commerce, takes place Sunday and, in a break from tradition, is being held at a private golf and polo club instead of a city park. Security appears to have been a concern for the change.

Fourth of July attracts crowds to National Mall

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Thousands of revelers celebrated the Fourth of July in the nation's capital under clear skies Friday, despite initial fears that rain from Hurricane Arthur could ruin their fun.

Visitors to the National Mall gazed at the White House and the Washington Monument and strolled through the Smithsonian Folklife Festival, which featured food, music and cultural demonstrations from China and Kenya.

Revelers spread out on the lawn with picnics and cold drinks on Friday afternoon to await the fireworks display, which began around 9:15 p.m. Before that, a concert was held with performances by Patti LaBelle, Jordin Sparks and John Williams, who played a new arrangement of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Cedric and Sharon Stallworth spent 11 sweaty hours in the car on Thursday, driving all the way from Atlanta to Washington to celebrate Independence Day among the monuments on the National Mall. On Friday afternoon, the Stallworths and their 7-year-old daughter Carrington, dressed in a red-white-and-blue jumper and clutching an American flag, strolled along the Mall under a near-cloudless sky.

"When you see the monuments and the marble, you're soaking that up, that sense of pride and hope," Cedric Stallworth said. "Being here today reminds me that we've come so far — there's cultural diversity, and people here can live in peace — and there's still so far to go. We're a young country that's growing, and we all do our part."

Steve Souvannasot, 49, traveled from Chicago with his wife and two sons on Friday morning to visit Washington for the first time. Souvannasot arrived in the United States when he was seven, after his family fled violence in Laos following the civil war, and said he wanted to bring his children to the capital to help them put their history and identities in context.

"I'm trying to teach my children about the freedom they have in America," Souvannasot said. "We had to give up everything in Laos, all was lost. To see different ethnicities and diversity in Washington, the center of politics and culture and the law that gives people that freedom, I'm grateful."

Angela and Sergio Lopez, immigrants from Venezuela and El Salvador respectively, and now living in Syracuse, bobbed their heads to Kenyan music emanating from a tent set up at the Smithsonian Folklife Festival on Friday as they walked along the Mall in matching American Flag T-shirts. Sergio Lopez, who served in the Air Force for five years, calls America his "adopted home."

Thousands pray for peace at Rainbow Family fest

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — About 8,000 members of counterculture group the Rainbow Family arrived in eastern Utah for the annual gathering's final celebration, officials from the U.S. Forest Service said Friday.

Members joined hands in prayer for world peace, releasing one big "Om." The ritual takes place every year on July 4th.

"It's just so beautiful," said Karena Gore, who travelled from Montana. It's her fourth time participating in the gathering, she said earlier this week as she listened to friends strum a guitar and sing along to a Cee-Lo Green song. The prayer is one of her favorite parts of the gathering, she said.

Authorities said it's not all peace and quiet on the mountain: On the eve of the celebration, they arrested 18 people suspected of crimes ranging from drug possession to grabbing the reigns and bridle of an officer's horse. Others were arrested in connection with shoplifting, drunken driving and public urination, Wasatch County Sheriff's Chief Dep. Jared Rigby said in an email statement.

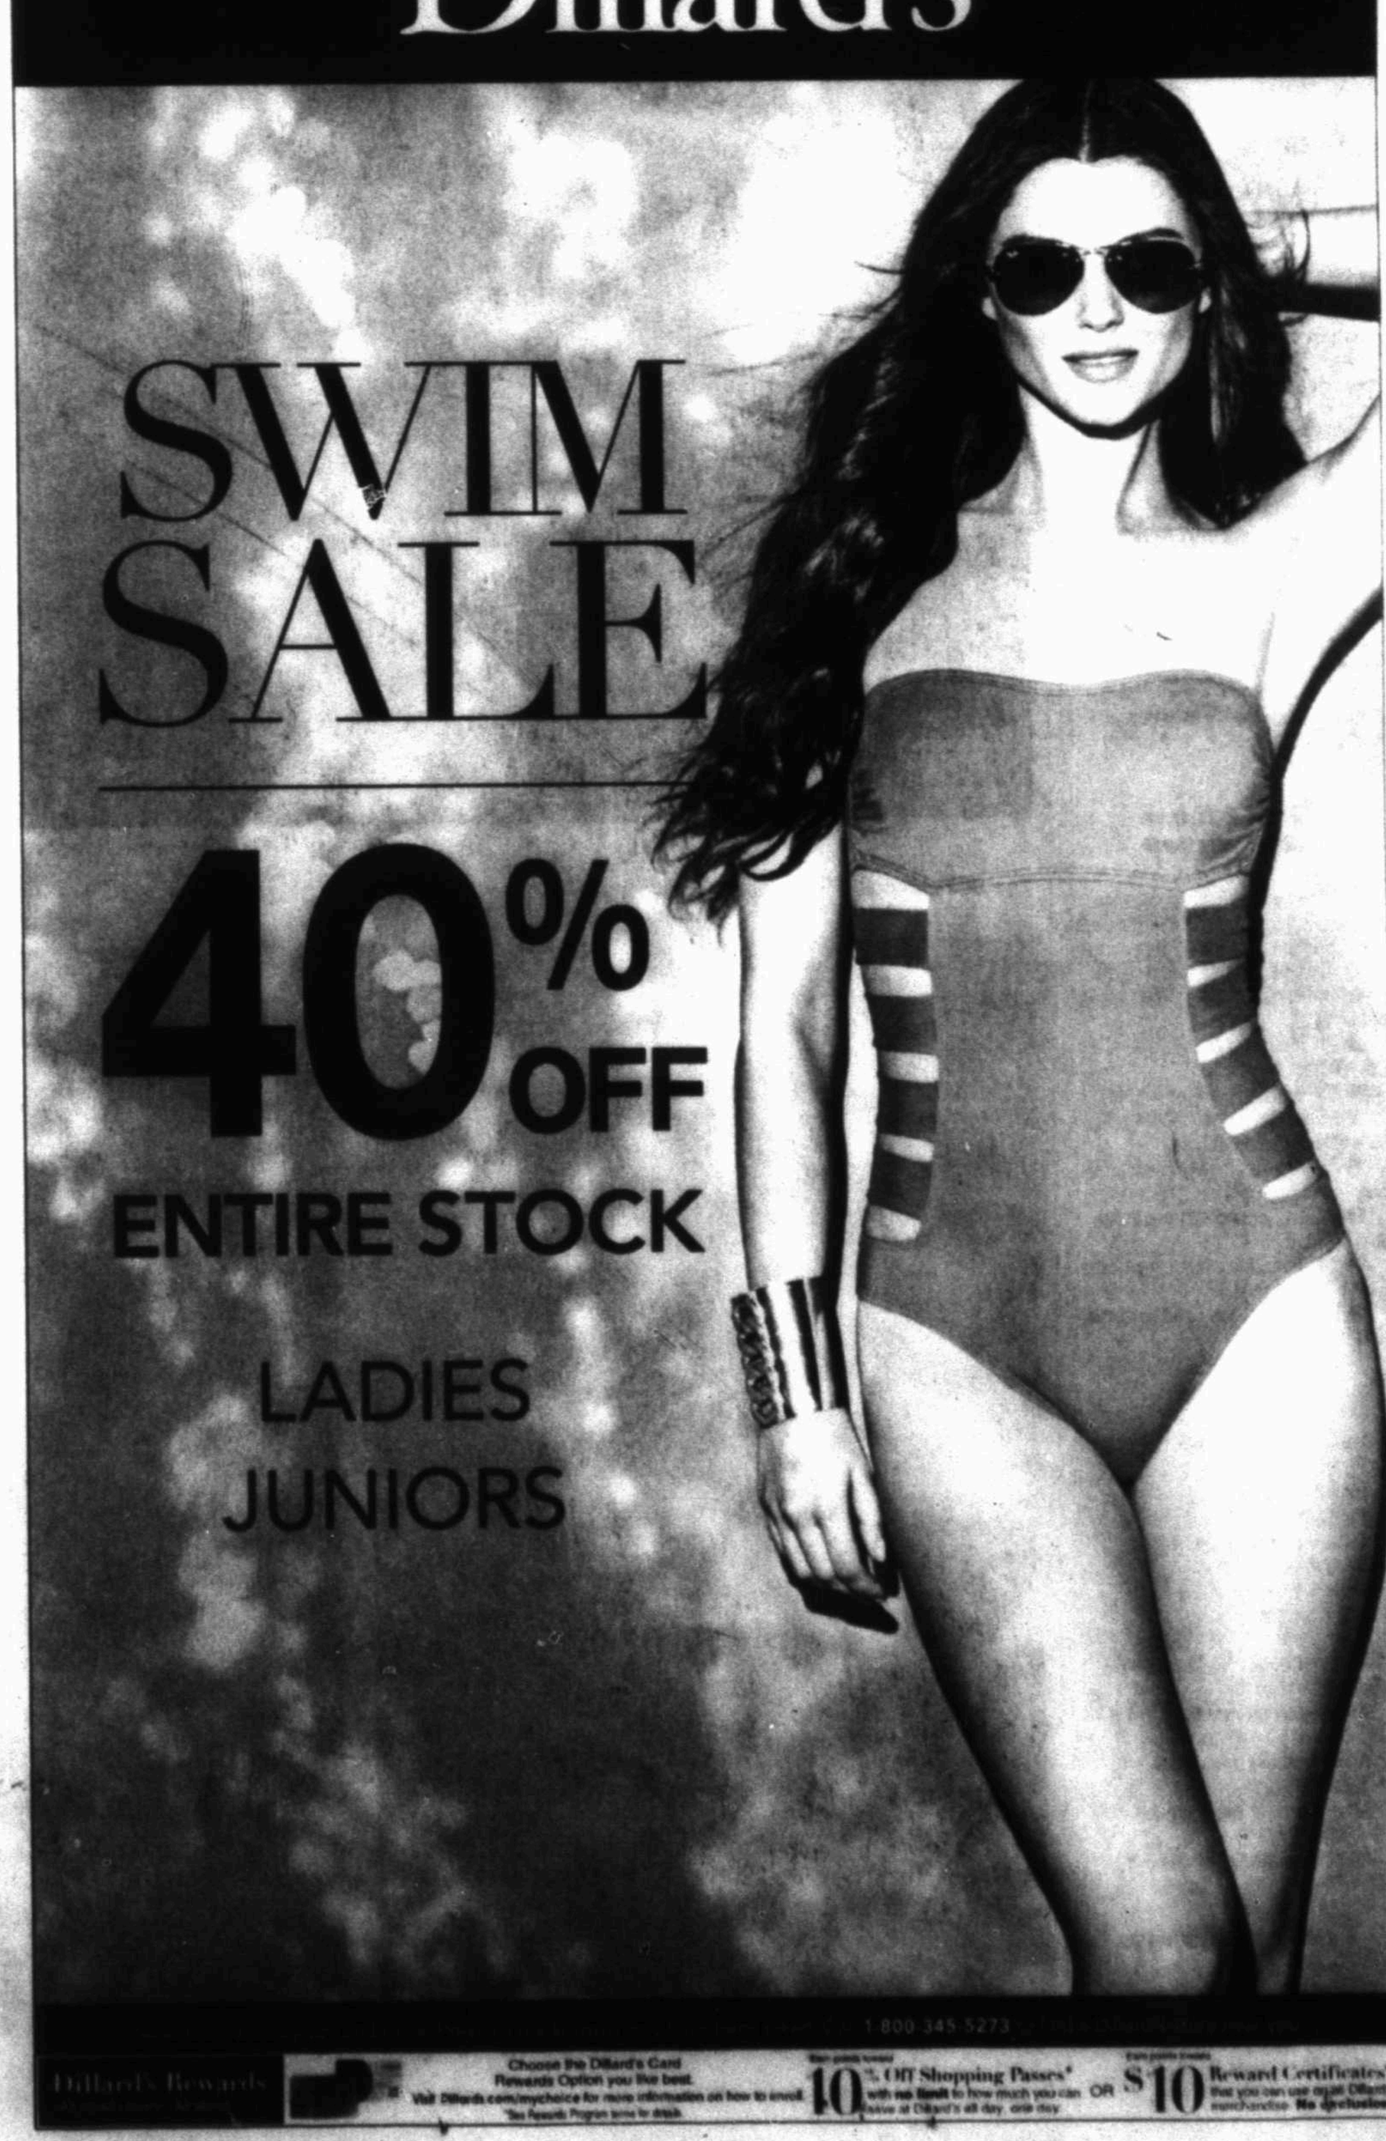

The gathering has rankled nerves this month in neighboring Heber City, overloading the local jail with people charged with misdemeanors, officials said. A roving federal court room also rolled up to a meadow about a mile away from the expansive campsite. A judge processed the charges that included drug possession and having a dog off a leash.

Last year, the gathering drew 10,000 to Montana, where officials put together a list of advice for other forest service workers policing the gathering in future years. In the last two weeks, police have made about 65 arrests at the Utah gathering.

"Usually on the 4th, they're really quiet," forest service Spokeswoman Kathy Jo Pollock said in a Thursday telephone interview. Officials expect little commotion in the area until the group begins moving out on today or Sunday, she said.

The group was originally formed in the wake of the Vietnam War. Its creed revolves around nonviolence, and it has convened every year since 1972.

No official leaders head the group, but members refer to organizers as "focalizers." Most defer to a council of elders, who set guidelines and urge members to avoid drinking alcohol on the vast campsite.

annual children's parade.

"We started out with 30 kids in a neighborhood, and now it's close to 700," said Midlander Gayle Dodson, who has served as the parade's chairwoman for the past 40 years.

That could be because of the boom, she said. Parade officials worried Midlanders would leave town with Independence Day falling on a Friday this year.

Still, Dodson said 100 more kids participated this year over last.

"This parade is all about being patriotic and honoring our country, our flag and our nation," she said. "It's a lovely day because everyone has the same feeling."

A former second-grade school teacher, Dodson said she occasionally has former students come out of the crowd to greet her — now with their own kids.

"The parents have to want to come for the children to get here," she said. "We have a lot of wonderful parents in this town, and we feel they are teaching their children to be good Americans."

Oil slips below $104 as supplies set to increase

Associated Press

The price of crude oil slipped below $104 a barrel Friday, extending its drop to seven straight days, as expectations of increased supply offset strong U.S. employment growth.

By early afternoon in Europe, the benchmark U.S. crude contract for August delivery was down 74 cents to $103.74 a barrel in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Brent crude, a benchmark for international oils, was down 63 cents to $110.61 a barrel on the ICE Futures exchange in London.

U.S. markets are closed Friday for the Fourth of July holiday and trading volumes in other markets were thinner than usual.

Crude fell despite signs the U.S. economy is steadily improving, which typically would increase demand for oil. The U.S. government reported that employers added a strong 288,000 workers to their payrolls in June and the unemployment rate fell to 6.1 percent.

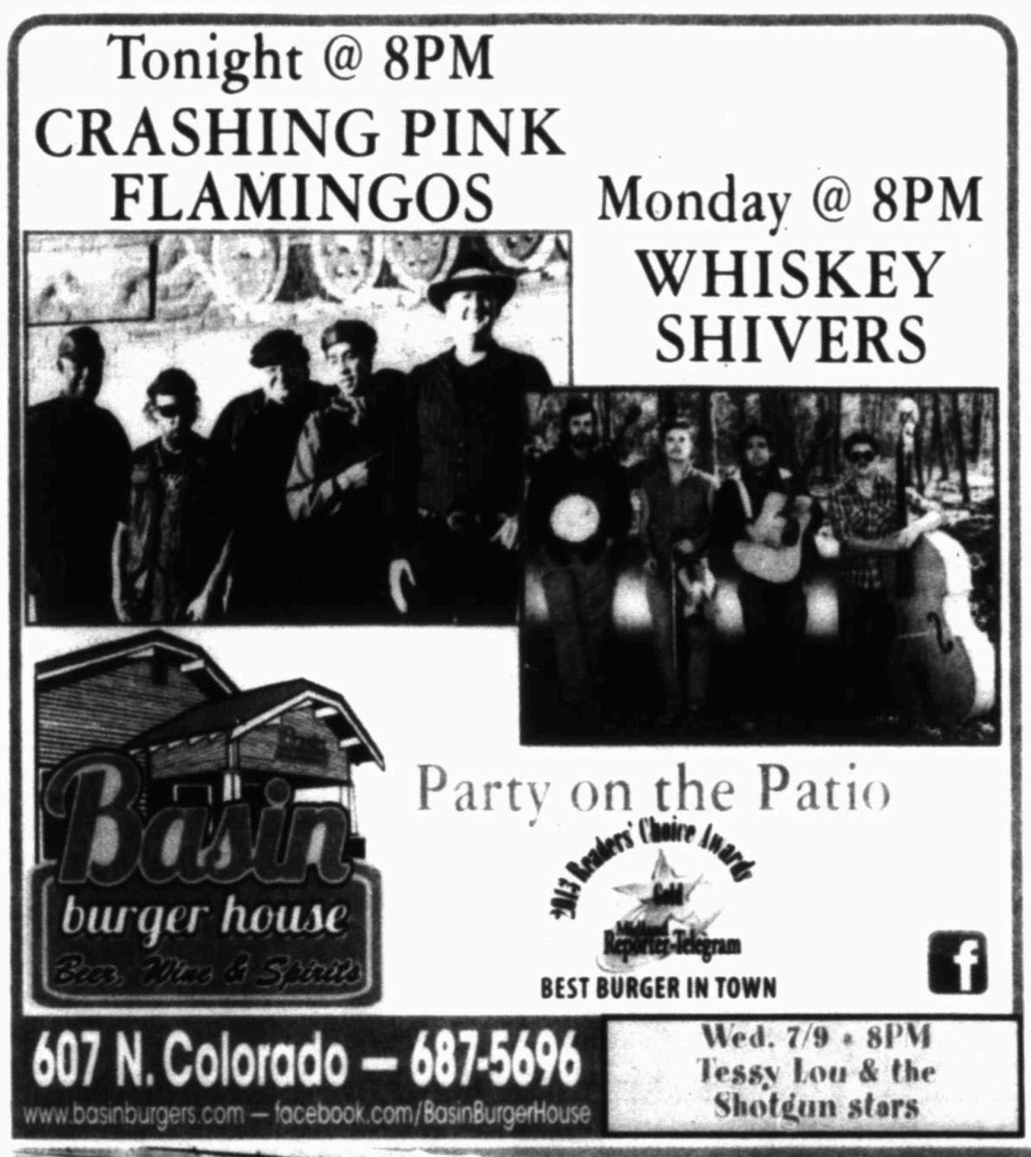

The positive economic news, however, also strengthened the dollar, a factor that weighed on oil prices by making crude more expensive — and a less attractive investment — for traders using other currencies.

Oil has been sliding since it reached a 10-month closing high of $107.26 on June 20, when concerns had grown over the stunning advance by Islamic militants in controlling Iraqi territory. Since then, it has become clear that there are no imminent disruptions to supplies from Iraq, OPEC's second biggest producer.

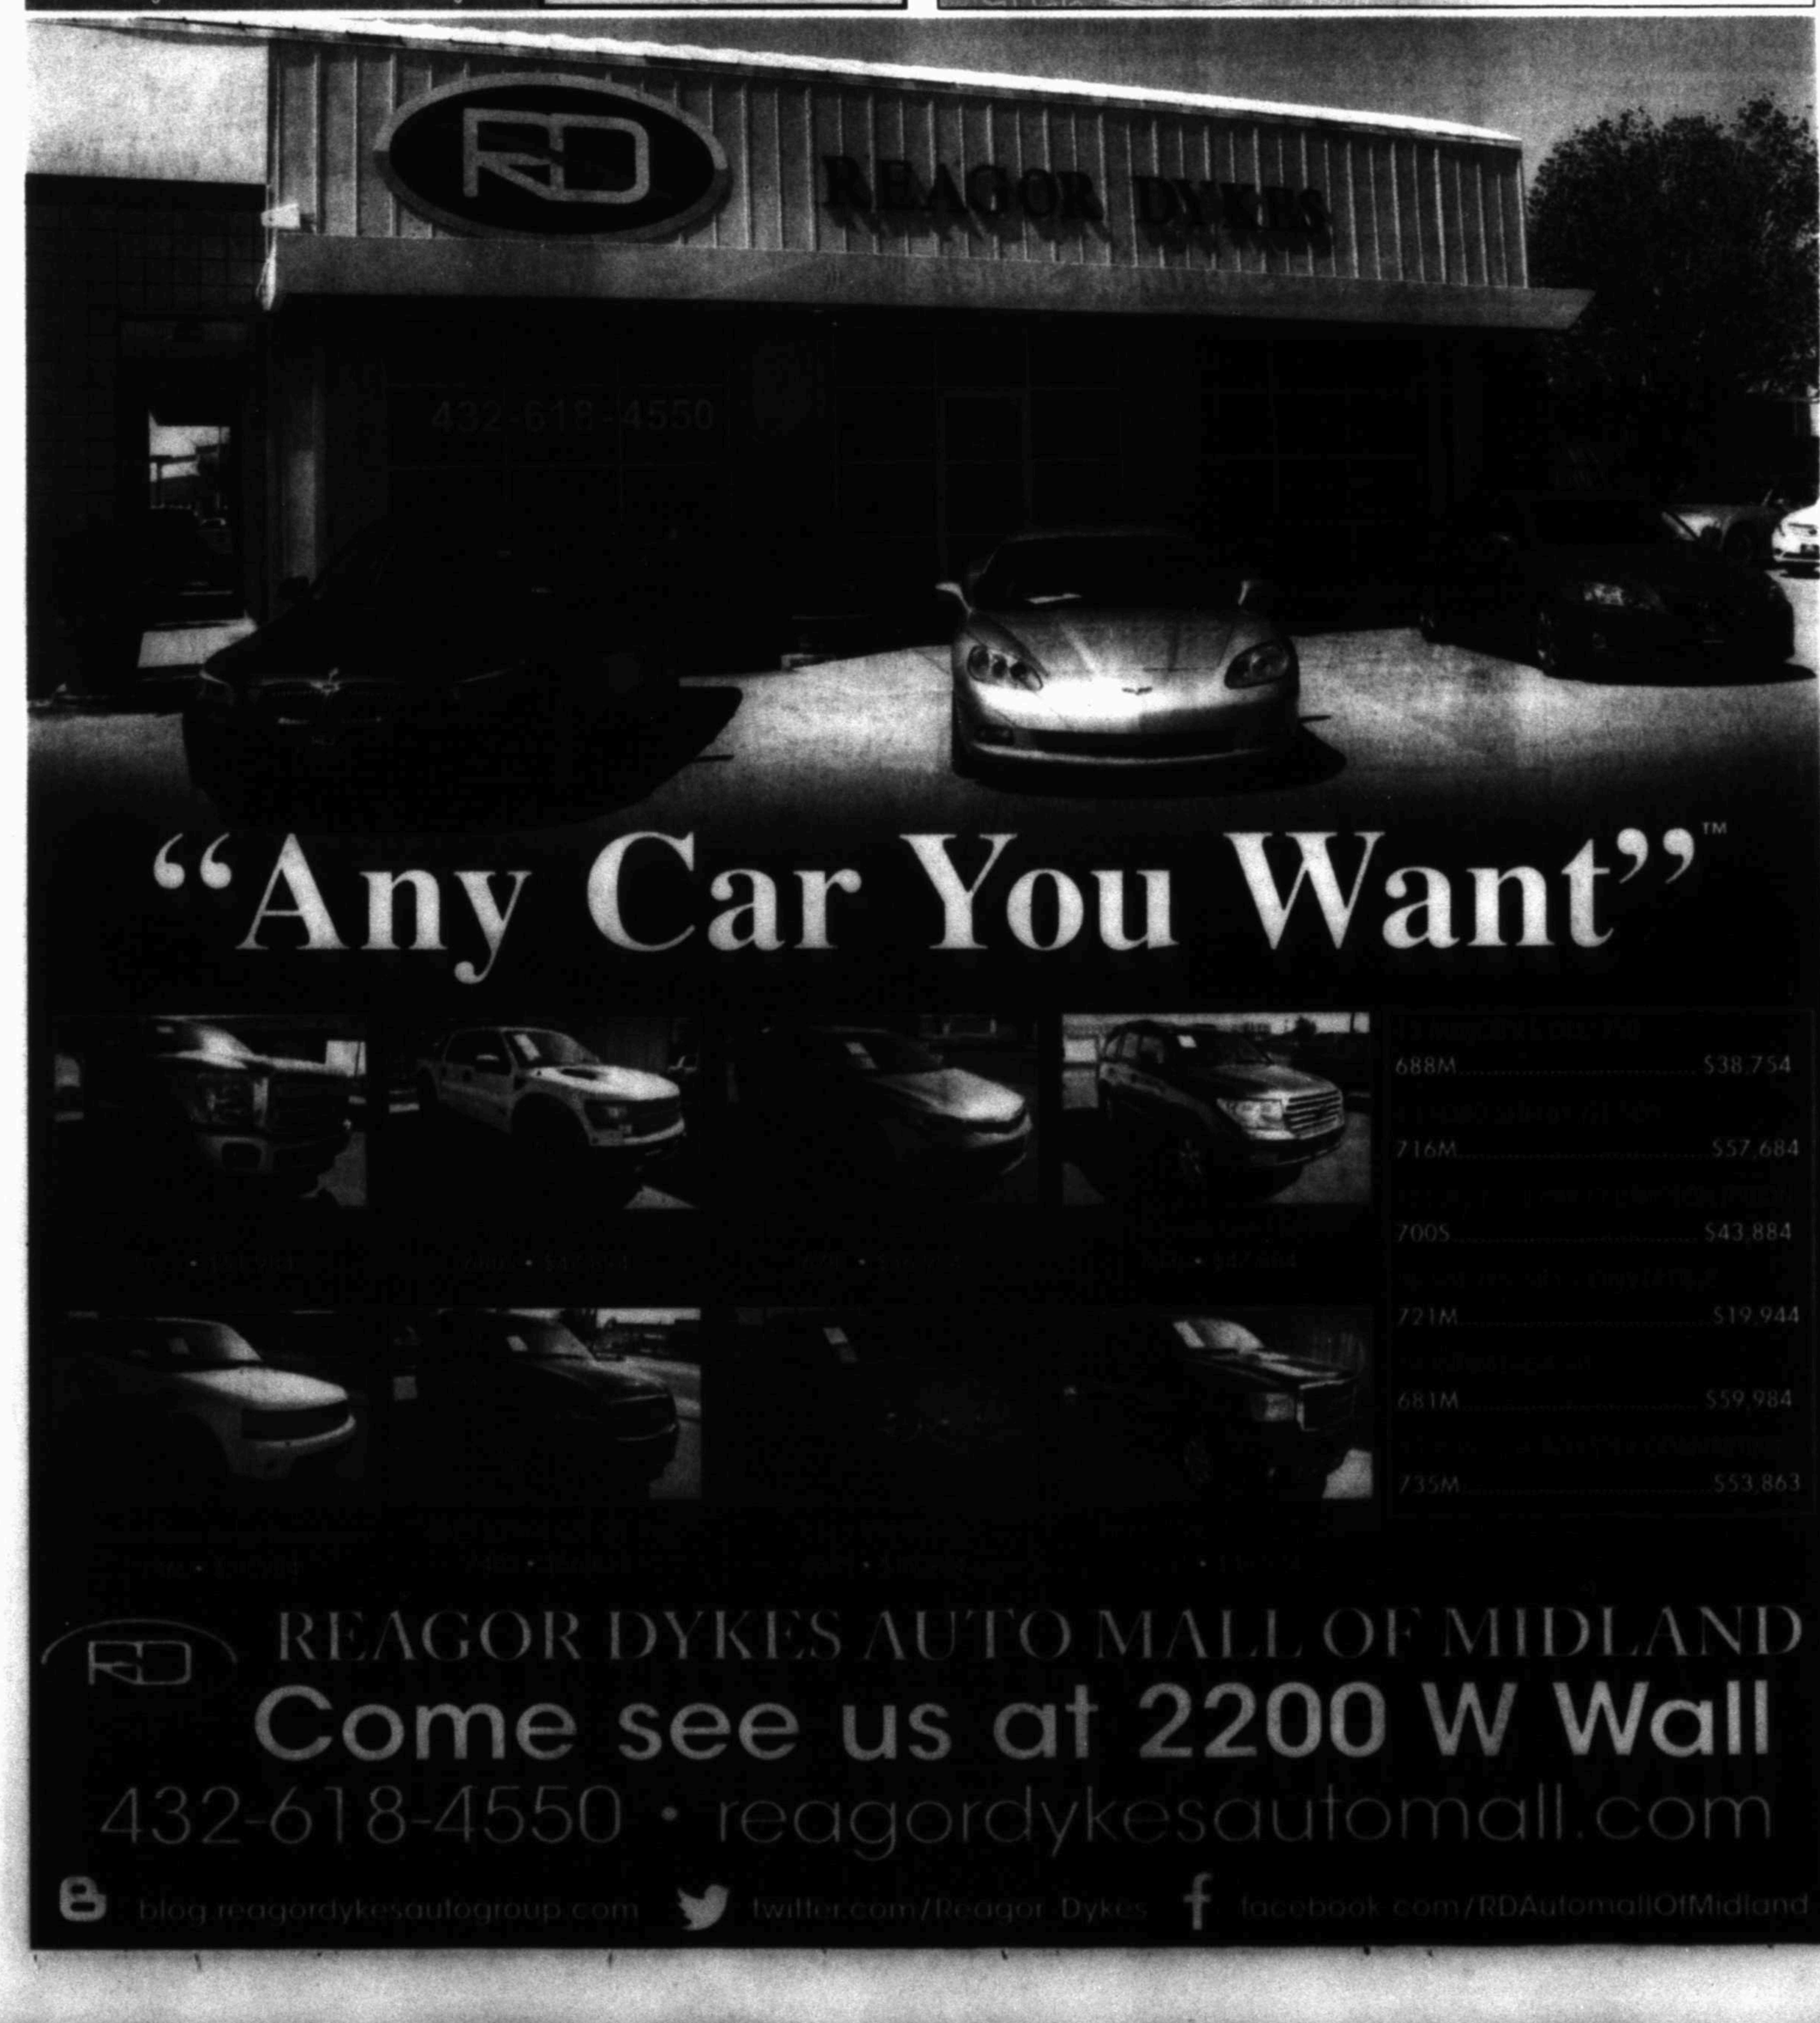

On top of that, an agreement in Libya between the central government and a regional militia was expected to lead to the reopening of two eastern oil terminals that would boost the country's crude exports by about 500,000 barrels a day. Libya currently produces around 350,000 barrels of oil a day.

In other energy futures trading on the Nymex:

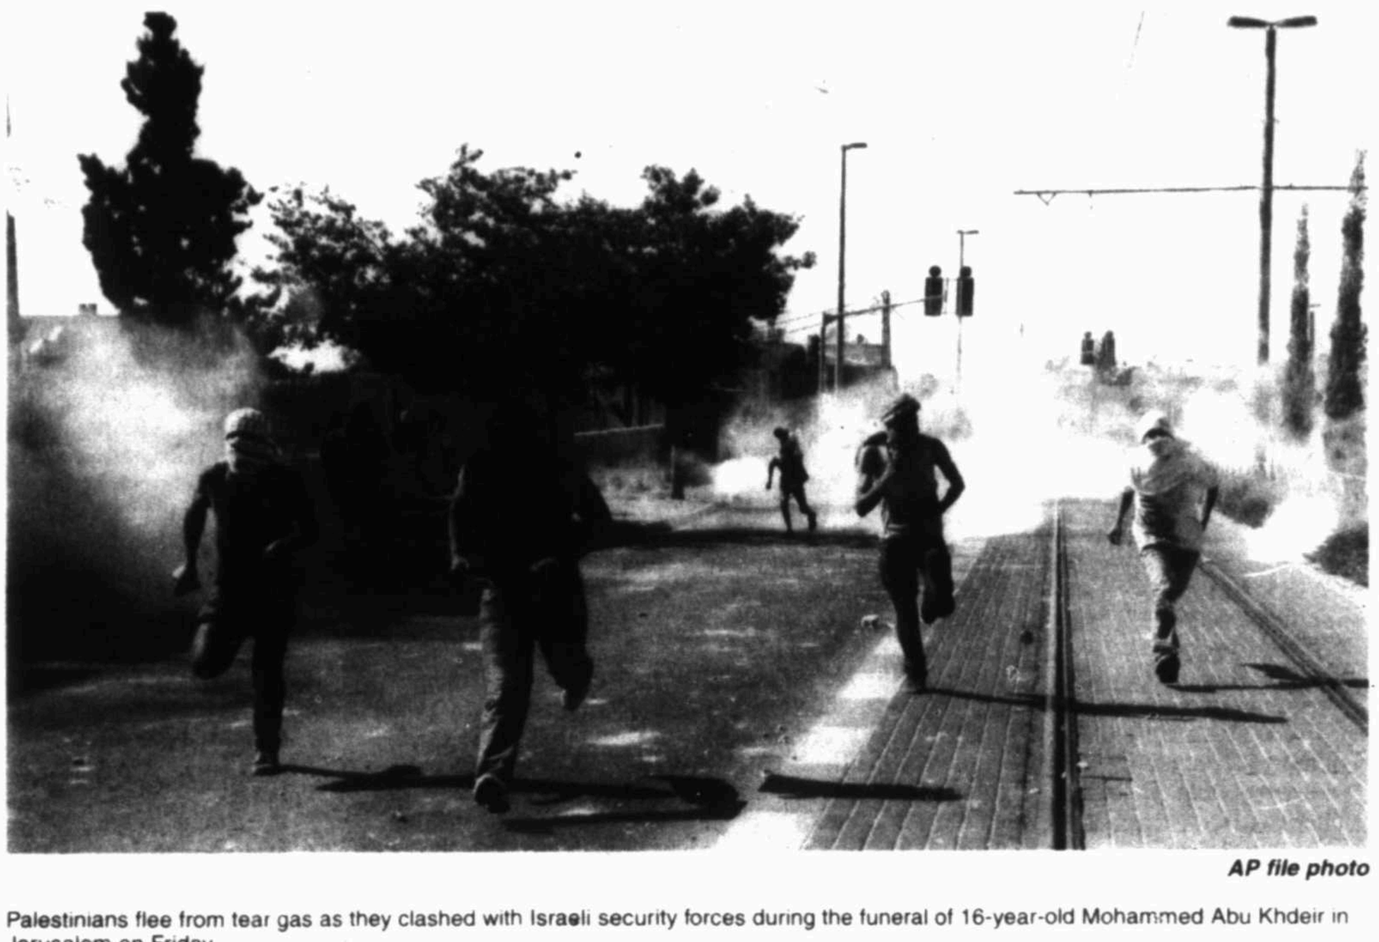

- Wholesale gasoline was down 0.99 cent at $3.014 a gallon.
- Natural gas lost 0.5 cent to $4.352 per 1,000 cubic feet.
- Heating oil fell 2.54 cents to $2.9207 a gallon.

Clashes break out during Palestinian funeral

Palestinians flee from tear gas as they clashed with Israeli security forces during the funeral of 16-year-old Mohammed Abu Khdeir in Jerusalem on Friday.

Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli police clashed with rock-throwing Palestinian protesters in Jerusalem on Friday as thousands mourned at the funeral for an Arab teen who Palestinians say was killed by Israeli extremists in a revenge attack.

Palestinian militants, meanwhile, fired rockets and mortars from the Gaza Strip into Israel, and the Jewish state later carried out several airstrikes on what it described as "Hamas terror targets" in Gaza. There were no immediate reports of casualties.

Also, the Israeli military said its troops opened fire after spotting two Palestinians planting explosives near the Gaza border fence.

An ambulance carried the body of 16-year-old Mohammed Abu Khdeir, wrapped in a Palestinian flag and traditional headscarf, to a mosque in the east Jerusalem neighborhood where he lived. Then mourners carried the open casket through the crowd to a cemetery.

During the procession, scores of masked Palestinians threw rocks at Israeli police on duty nearby, and they responded with stun grenades, spokesman Micky Rosenfeld said. He said more than 2,000 people attended the funeral.

Rosenfeld said police also clashed with hundreds of Palestinian protesters in other neighborhoods in the eastern part of the city, which has been rocked by violence since Abu Khdeir's burned body was found Wednesday in a forest after he was seized near his home.

At least 13 Israeli officers were injured by rock-throwers, with six taken to the hospital, police spokeswoman Luba Samri said.

The Red Crescent said about 30 Palestinians were hurt by rubber bullets fired by Israeli forces. Dozens of others were treated for tear gas inhalation.

Police had beefed up security in and around Jerusalem as the funeral coincided with the first Friday prayer services of the Muslim fasting month of Ramadan.

Tensions have been high since three Israeli teenagers, including one with U.S. citizenship, were abducted in the West Bank on June 12, sparking a huge manhunt that ended with the gruesome discovery of their bodies early this week.

Israel has blamed Hamas for the abduction and murder of the teens and launched a crackdown on the Islamic militant group in the West Bank, drawing rocket attacks out of Gaza and Israeli airstrikes in a near-daily cycle of retaliation.

Hamas, which has abducted Israelis in the past, praised the kidnapping of the teenagers but did not take responsibility for it.

Palestinians immediately accused Israeli extremists of killing Abu Khdeir in revenge for the deaths of the Israeli teens. Israeli police said they have not yet determined who killed the boy or why.

The killing of the youngster was widely condemned by Israeli leaders, including Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

"We don't know yet the motives or the identities of the perpetrators, but we will. We will bring to justice the criminals responsible for this despicable crime, whoever they may be," Netanyahu said Thursday. "Murder, riots, incitement, vigilantism — they have no place in our democracy."

On Friday, Palestinian militants in Gaza fired at least 14 rockets and mortars at Israel, the military said. It was far fewer rockets than the dozens of barrages reported in previous days, and when Israel did not immediately respond, waiting until late in the day to attack, there was talk that a cease-fire was in the works.

Hamas spokesman Mushir al-Masri said in Gaza, "There are some contacts and mediations regarding a truce."

There was no official comment from Israel regarding a possible truce.

In Jerusalem, Abu Khdeir's family set up a large tent outside the home for those seeking to pay condolences. Mourners chanted, "With our soul, with our blood, we would sacrifice anything for you, (Palestine)" and "Allahu akbar!" or "God is great!"

Waving a Palestinian flag and with a traditional scarf covering his face at the funeral, Rami, 20, said he came to chant and to mourn his friend Mohammed. He would not give his last name, saying he feared retribution.

"I am happy and sad," he said. "I am happy because he died a martyr, but I am sad because they kidnapped him, killed him and then burned him."

Rare interview: Militant says Jordan not immune

Associated Press

MAAN, Jordan — An al-Qaida linked Jordanian militant leader warned on Friday that the kingdom was "not immune" to the chaos befalling neighboring countries, although he acknowledged that a Sunni extremist group's recent declaration of a caliphate spanning Syria and Iraq was threatening to divide the jihadi movement.

Mohammed al-Shalabi, a senior leader of ultraconservative Muslims known as Salafis in Jordan, told The Associated Press that the fighting between rival militant factions in Syria already has already undermined the battle against President Bashar Assad.

Al-Shalabi, who spent 11 years in Jordanian jails on charges including plotting to attack a U.S. military base in the kingdom, said Jordanian Salafis have stopped sending their supporters to join the rebel ranks in Syria, fearing they will end up fighting other Muslims. More than 1,600 Jordanian have fought in Syria and 250 of them have been killed, al-Shalabi said.

Al-Shalabi spoke in a rare interview with a Western media organization at his home on the outskirts of the southern city of Maan, an impoverished area that has seen protests by supporters of the Islamic State group that has seized large swaths of territory in Iraq and Syria and announced it has established a long-sought Muslim caliphate.The announcement has been rejected and even derided by many of the rival Islamic rebel factions fighting in Syria.

Al-Shalabi urged Jordan — a U.S. ally that relies heavily on donations from the U.S. and oil-rich Gulf Arabs to keep its fragile economy afloat — to implement Islamic Shariah laws and more balanced economic and social policies.

"Jordan is not immune to what is happening in neighboring countries," he said.

Despite facing protests amid the Arab Spring wave of revolutions in the region, King Abdullah has remained in power by promising to speed up reforms he initiated since he ascended to the throne in 1999. Although Jordan's multiparty system was revived in 1991, following a 34-year ban after a 1957 leftist coup attempt, opposition parties have yet to gain real power. They say they are intimidated by tight scrutiny and security crackdowns.

California city is latest immigration flashpoint

Associated Press

MURRIETA, Calif. — Demonstrators on both sides of the immigration debate gathered Friday outside a U.S. Border Patrol station in Southern California where the agency was foiled earlier this week in an attempt to bus in and process some of the immigrants who have flooded the Texas border with Mexico.

The crowd numbered about 120 early in the day — about a third opposing illegal immigration and two thirds supporting immigrants. Shouting matches erupted but there was no violence.

About 15 officers from Murrieta Police Department, Riverside County sheriff's deputies and the Border Patrol kept demonstrators behind a line of yellow tape. The containment left open potential bus access to the station.

It was not certain, however, that any buses would arrive. The Department of Homeland security said that because of security concerns, it will not publicize immigrant transfers among border patrol facilities.

Earlier this week, Murrieta became the latest flashpoint in the intensifying immigration debate when a crowd of protesters waving American flags blocked buses carrying women and children migrants who were flown from overwhelmed Texas facilities to be processed at the station about 55 miles north of downtown San Diego.

The city's mayor became a hero to those seeking stronger immigration policies with his criticism of the federal government's efforts to handle the thousands of immigrants, many of them mothers and children, who have flooded the Texas border.

However, a message subsequently posted on the Murrieta city website by City Manager Rick Dudley said that Mayor Alan Long was only asserting that the local Border Patrol station was not an appropriate location for that purpose and was encouraging the community to contact its federal representatives.

The statement, suggesting that protesters had come from elsewhere in Southern California, expressed regret that the busloads of women and children had been forced to turn around.

"This was not victory," Dudley wrote. "It was a loss for the city of Murrieta, for the community that we live in and love. It made this extremely compassionate community look heartless and uncaring. That is not the Murrieta that we all know and love."

People on both sides of the issue want immigration reform, but immigrant rights advocates say anti-illegal immigration protesters chastise the mostly women and children crossing the border.

"It's sad that some community members don't see the big picture," said Luz Gallegos, co-founder of the immigration legal aid center TODEC in nearby Perris.

Thousands of children and families have arrived on the Texas border in recent months fleeing violence, murders and extortion from criminal gangs in Guatemala, El Salvador and Honduras. Since October, more than 52,000 unaccompanied children have been detained.

The crunch on the border in Texas' Rio Grande Valley prompted U.S. authorities to fly immigrant families to other Texas cities and to Southern California for processing.

The Border Patrol is coping with excess capacity across the Southwest, and cities' responses to the arriving immigrants have ranged from welcoming to indifferent. In the border town of El Centro, California, a flight arrived Wednesday without protest.

The same day, 140 miles north in Murrieta, an overflow crowd filled a school auditorium for a town hall convened on immigrant arrivals. Those in the crowd chanted "Send them back!" at a Border Patrol official.

Some local leaders said the outrage among some area residents is justified, given the already stressed social services infrastructure and the stagnant regional economy. Murrieta has a population of about 106,000.

"It's not the 140 we're concerned about," Riverside County Supervisor Jeff Stone said of the number of people on the three buses turned away by Murrieta protesters. "It's the thousands more that will follow that will strain our resources and take away the resources we need to care for our own citizens."

Immigration activist Amarily Ortiz, director of Confederacion Centro Americana (COFECA) demands the Mexican government take more measures to protect and respect the rights of unaccompanied minors and families crossing Mexico's territory, during a protest outside the Mexican consulate in Los Angeles on Thursday. Activists demanded support of migrant children and families Thursday, two days after U.S. Homeland Security buses carrying the migrants were routed away from American flag-waving protesters in Murrieta, California, and transported to a facility in San Diego.

Obama: US is a nation of immigrants

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Celebrating the ethnic diversity of America, President Barack Obama said more than two dozen foreign-born service members who became U.S. citizens at the White House on the Fourth of July are vivid reminders that welcoming immigrants "is central to our way of life."

He pleaded anew for new immigration policies, saying the vast range of backgrounds and experiences that has made America a melting pot for more than 200 years also makes the country stronger. He argued that the system must be retooled for the U.S. to remain the greatest nation on Earth.

"The basic idea of welcoming immigrants to our shores is central to our way of life, it is in our DNA," Obama said after the 25 service members representing 15 countries raised their right hands and pledged allegiance to the United States.

"From all these different strands, we make something new here in America. And that's why, if we want to keep attracting the best and brightest from beyond our borders, we're going to have to fix our immigration system, which is broken," he said. "Pass common-sense immigration reform."

The immigration issue is earning renewed attention because of the influx to the U.S. of tens of thousands of unaccompanied children from Central America. Under U.S. law, they must be returned to their home countries, angering immigration advocates who already take issue with Obama's enforcement of deportations. They want Obama to allow the children to stay.

At the same time, Obama blames House Republicans for delaying action on legislation covering the millions already living in the U.S. illegally. A comprehensive measure the Senate passed last summer has been blocked by House leaders who also have done little to advance their own immigration proposals.

Obama announced earlier this week that, as a result of inaction on Capitol Hill, he will pursue non-legislative ways he can adjust U.S. immigration policy on his own. He scheduled a trip to Texas next week, mostly to raise money for Democratic candidates, but plans not to visit the border.

"I'm going to keep doing everything I can to keep making our immigration system smarter and more efficient," Obama said Friday.

Across the country, more than 100 demonstrators, most of whom support immigrants, gathered again Friday outside a U.S. Border Patrol station in Murrieta, California, where the agency intends to process some of the immigrants who have flooded the Texas border with Mexico.

Brazil wins but Neymar ruled out of World Cup

By Tales Azzoni
Associated Press

Brazil.....2
Colombia.....1

FORTALEZA, Brazil — Not long after celebrating another all-important win at the World Cup, Brazil was jolted by the loss of Neymar.

The tournament's poster boy with the dyed-blonde fauxhawk fractured a vertebra in his back during Brazil's 2-1 quarterfinal victory over Colombia on Friday. The injury has ruled the striker out of the rest of the competition, dealing a massive blow to the team's chances of finally winning a World Cup at home.

Brazil advanced to the semifinals for the first time in 12 years, with the goals coming from defenders Thiago Silva and David Luiz. But the jubilation was quickly tempered when Brazil team doctor Rodrigo Lasmar said Neymar broke his third vertebrae and is expected to be out for several weeks, ruling him out of Tuesday's semifinal match against Germany in Belo Horizonte.

"It's a situation that leaves us in a difficult position for the match against Germany," Brazil coach Luiz Felipe Scolari said. "But we have great players and if I have to change something I will do it and we will be OK."

The 22-year-old Neymar has been the focal point of both the Brazilian team and the entire World Cup, and he lived up to expectations with four goals in the first three matches.

But he took a knee to the back late in the match against Colombia at the Arena Castelao in a collision with Juan Camilo Zuniga. The Brazilian star was crying in pain as he was carried off the field, and was taken to a private clinic. He has since been released.

"He will not be in condition to play, he will need a few weeks to be fit again," said Lasmar, the team doctor. "He is very, very sad."

The foul on Neymar came toward the end of one of the dirtiest games of the tournament as Brazil committed 31 fouls and Colombia had 23.

Niese hurt, but d'Arnaud lifts Mets over Rangers

NEW YORK — Travis d'Arnaud snapped an eighth-inning tie with a two-run double and the New York Mets overcame an early injury to starter Jonathon Niese, beating the skidding Texas Rangers 6-5 Friday night to stop a four-game slide.

Lucas Duda hit a two-run homer, and the Mets opened a 10-game homestand with their second victory in nine games. Niese left in the first with a bruised lower back after he was hit by Alex Rios' line drive. X-rays were negative, the team said.

Star third baseman David Wright missed his seventh straight game with a sore left shoulder, but fill-in Eric Campbell had three hits and an RBI for New York. Carlos Torres, pressed into long relief when Niese was injured, gave up two runs in 4 2-3 valuable innings.

Jenrry Mejia (5-3) retired Rios with two runners in scoring position to end the eighth. Mejia allowed an RBI single to Adam Rosales in the ninth before retiring pinch-hitter Robinson Chirinos on a tricky popup to finish a plodding game on Fireworks Night that took 4 hours, 8 minutes.

Shin-Soo Choo hit a leadoff homer, and Adrian Beltre also went deep for the Rangers, who have dropped six in a row and 14 of 16. Their 10-game losing streak on the road is the club's longest since a 12-game skid in 2003.

Bobby Abreu drew a leadoff walk from Aaron Poreda (2-1) in the eighth and Campbell singled off Jason Frasor with one out before d'Arnaud sent a drive up the alley in right-center.

Texas ace Yu Darvish, pushed back a day because of rain Thursday in Baltimore, entered with dominant stats against NL teams. But he was off in this one, allowing four runs and five hits in five innings.

Choo hit his second leadoff homer of the season on Niese's third pitch.

Moments later, Rios' drive nailed Niese on the left side of his lower back. He recovered in time to get Rios at first base — the only out he got — before manager Terry Collins, pitching coach Dan Warthen and trainer Ray Ramirez came out to check on the left-hander.

Niese repeatedly told Collins he was fine, but was removed without trying a warmup pitch. Torres was given all the time he needed to get loose.

An angry Niese fired his glove against the dugout wall and knocked over a bucket of bubble gum before disappearing down the tunnel.

The team's most reliable starter this season, Niese was done after 12 pitches. He has gone 21 straight starts without allowing more than three earned runs, the longest active streak in the majors.

Abreu hit a two-out RBI single in the first, and Duda followed with his 13th homer, an opposite-field drive to left that originally was ruled in play after the ball ricocheted off the top of the wall and a railing just above it.

With Duda standing on second, the umpires huddled and correctly changed the call. They never went to instant replay — though one was shown on the big video screen in center field as they talked it over.

Choo walked and scored on a single by Rios in the third. Duda chugged home from first on Campbell's fourth-inning double, but the Mets wasted an opportunity to add on.

Sockers FC looks to finally topple Austin

By Chris Hummer
chummer@mrt.com

Examine Sockers FC's 2014 schedule and it's easy to identify the pivot point of the team's season.

After a 1-2-1 start, the team faced the defending PDL champion Austin Aztex on the road. Tied 1-1 in the 90th minute, a young Sockers unit appeared to have earned a result against the best the Mid-South Division had to offer.

But instead of a tie, the Sockers surrendered a 90th-minute goal, giving Austin three points and sending a dejected team back to Midland for the start of a four-game home stand.

Clifford

Long

"We felt pretty hard done by not winning," said team captain Johnathan Clifford.

The Sockers could have chosen to sulk and declare what is a major team chemistry experiment between a number of big personalities and nationalities a misstep. Instead, the team took the experience, built on it, and reeled off a 3-0-1 record on the home stand.

Sockers FC hasn't lost since the last minute defeat to Austin and has vaulted from the bottom of the Mid-South Division standings into second place and a playoff position.

"We're starting to mold as a team and come together, and it's starting to show," said goalkeeper Clint Long. "It helps when you start to know some one's tendencies."

The team bonded. More importantly, first-year head coach Matt Barnes found a formation that suited the team. But for all of the success, their newfound mettle has not been tested by the Aztex.

Starting today at 7:30 p.m., Sockers FC will have two straight opportunities to topple the only Mid-South foe they have not earned a point against on the season. The second game will take place in Austin next Friday.

"We've been eagerly awaiting this game and we've been taking care of business coming in," Clifford said. "We're ready to play Austin, we're confident."

The team knows topping the defending PDL champion is a task easier contemplated than done. Austin reigns at the top of the PDL for a reason.

A Federer-Djokovic Wimbledon final

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

LONDON — Roger Federer was on the decline — or so the thinking went.

He was past 30. Had back problems. Tried experimenting with a larger racket. Was a family man, a father to two sets of twins now. Slid down the rankings. Reached zero Grand Slam finals over the past two years. Started losing before the quarterfinals at majors, including in 2013's second round at the All England Club, of all places, to a guy ranked 116th.

Look at him now. Federer moved one victory away from a record eighth Wimbledon championship and 18th Grand Slam title overall by reaching Sunday's final, where he will face Novak Djokovic.

Federer was asked how much it would mean to add to his trophy collection.

"A lot," said Federer, who turns 33 next month and would be the oldest Wimbledon winner in at least a half-century. "I know I don't have 10 left, so I'll try to enjoy it as much as I can."

Could he have imagined 12 months ago, after his startlingly early exit, being back in this year's final?

"I wasn't sure," Federer replied. "I hoped."

After so much buzz about the rise of a new generation to challenge the supremacy of tennis' "Big 4," — a quartet, including Rafael Nadal and Andy Murray, that will have won 36 of the past 38 Slams — Federer and Djokovic turned aside up-and-comers in Friday's semifinals.

Djokovic, the 2011 champion, went first on Centre Court, overcoming dips in his play to beat 11th-seeded Grigor Dimitrov of Bulgaria 6-4, 3-6, 7-6 (2), 7-6 (7) and reach his third final at Wimbledon and 12th in the past 16 majors.

RockHounds explode past Naturals

From staff reports

Midland's bats broke out Friday evening and Sean Murphy delivered a seven-inning gem en route to a 6-0 win over the Northwest Arkansas Naturals. It's the Rock-Hounds second straight victory after they had dropped six in a row.

The offense provided the highlights, but it was Murphy's pitching that secured the victory. Allowing only three hits over seven innings, Murphy continued a stellar season for Midland (7-7) and lowered his ERA to 2.19.

Hiroyuki Nakajima led the way for Midland offensively. He had four hits, drove in three runs and scored once himself.

Blake Forsythe also had a nice day at the plate in the No. 9 hole, recording three hits, driving in two runs and scoring a run.

The RockHounds did their damage in the middle of the game, scoring two runs in the third and fifth inning, and one run each in the fourth and the sixth innings.

Midland's Russell part of A's trade to Cubs

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — A person familiar with knowledge of the deal says the Oakland Athletics have an agreement in place to acquire right-handers Jeff Samardzija and Jason Hammel from the Chicago Cubs in a trade that makes one of baseball's best pitching staffs even better.

The person, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity Friday night because the deal was still pending, said the A's will send top prospect Addison Russell, outfielder Billy McKinney and pitcher Dan Straily to the Cubs.

Samardzija and Hammel give the two-time defending AL West champion A's a powerful punch to add to a rotation that includes Scott Kazmir, Sonny Gray and Tommy Milone. The trade also is a rare move in which Oakland — one of baseball most frugal franchises — parted with talented young prospects for proven players to chase a World Series title.

Texas Tech basketball player suspended for fight

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech guard Amber Battle has been suspended for a month for her involvement in a fight with a football player at the university's recreation center.

The school says the senior is "suspended from competition for the entire month of November." Battle also says in Friday's statement that she "initiated first contact" in the fight with freshman defensive back Nigel Bethel II during a pickup basketball game last weekend.

Bethel then responded and, according to a police report, caused serious bodily injury with "hands, fists, feet, etc." He has been dismissed from the team.

Battle apologized to Bethel, the school, coaches and her teammates for her actions.

Battle led the Lady Raiders last season with 16.4 points per game.

Gilliland lands pole for Coke Zero 400 at Daytona

By Mark Long
Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — David Gilliland might have summed up Daytona qualifying best.

"It's uncontrolled chaos out there," Gilliland said Friday after landing the pole in a rain-shortened and somewhat hairy session that set the field for the Coke Zero 400 tonight at Daytona International Speedway.

Gilliland's top speed during a hectic, cat-and-mouse qualifying session was 199.322 mph, earning him his third Sprint Cup pole and first since landing the top spot for the 2007 Daytona 500. All three of his poles have been at restrictor-plate races, with the first one coming at Talladega in 2006.

"Front Row Motorsports, our strong point is definitely speedway racing," said Gilliland, who finished third in the 2011 Daytona 500. "It is something that's circled on our calendar from the start of the year. We put a lot of emphasis on it. The restrictor-plate tracks are good equalizers. David Ragan and I both have good enough cars to win, and that is an exciting feeling. It's something we don't have every week."

The top 24 drivers Friday in the first knockout stage were supposed to advance to the next round, but rain prompted NASCAR to cancel the final two sessions.

ANGELS 7
ASTROS 6

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Mike Trout homered leading off the ninth inning after the Los Angeles Angels twice rallied to tie the game, giving them a 7-6 victory over the Houston Astros on Friday night.

Trout sent an 0-2 pitch from Tony Sipp over the wall in left field and charged into a celebratory mob at home plate. Teammate Erick Aybar doused Trout with a blue sports drink, staining his white uniform, and fans chanted "MVP! MVP!"

It was Trout's second career walkoff hit, both of them homers.

Joe Smith (3-0) got the victory for the Angels, who have won eight in a row at home for the first time in nearly nine years.

Sipp (1-1) took the loss for the Astros, who dropped their fifth in a row.

Ben Margot/AP

Oakland second baseman Nick Punto (1) completes a double play over Toronto's Jose Bautista in the eighth inning Friday in Oakland, California.

WHITE SOX 7
MARINERS 1

CHICAGO — Jose Abreu hit his 27th home run, Chris Sale struck out a season-high 12 in a complete game and the Chicago White Sox beat the Seattle Mariners 7-1 on Friday night.

Sale (8-1) allowed six hits and walked none in his fourth double-digit strikeout game of the season and 14th of his career.

Dayan Viciedo and Paul Konerko also homered for the White Sox, who have won five of seven.

Willie Bloomquist went 2 for 4 for the Mariners, who saw their four-game winning streak snapped. Rookie Roenis Elias (7-7) allowed five runs in five innings. He struck out six and walked one.

Viciedo went 4 for 4 including a leadoff homer in the fourth that gave the White Sox a 1-0 lead. His 10th homer came on a 2-1 pitch.

The White Sox added four runs in the fifth.

ATHLETICS 1
BLUE JAYS 0, 12 INNINGS

OAKLAND, Calif. — Melky Cabrera couldn't corral Nick Punto's double with one out in the 12th inning, sending the Oakland Athletics to a 1-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays on Friday.

Derek Norris was walked by Chad Jenkins (0-1) leading off the 12th inning. After Jed Lowrie lined out, Punto hit a slicing double down the line in left.

Cabrera moved to his right to cut off the ball, which squirted by his glove for an error. Norris scored from first for an odd ending to a game highlighted by stellar pitching performances by starters Tommy Milone of Oakland and Marcus Stroman and both bullpens.

Dan Otero (7-1), the fifth Oakland reliever to toss a scoreless inning, earned the win.

YANKEES 6
TWINS 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Brian Roberts hit three doubles and a triple, and the New York Yankees used their bullpen to hang on for a 6-5 win over the Minnesota Twins on Friday.

David Huff (2-0) struck out three in three perfect innings of relief for the victory after starter Chase Whitley faltered, and Jacoby Ellsbury hit a two-run single in the second to finish off Twins starter Kyle Gibson (7-7).

Brian Dozier led off the first with his 16th homer and Chris Colabello went deep the next inning in his first at-bat since May 23, but Twins lost for the ninth time in 11 games.

INDIANS 1

CLEVELAND — Yordano Ventura pitched 8 1/3 stellar innings and Mike Moustakas hit a three-run homer to help the Kansas City Royals beat the Cleveland Indians 7-1 on Friday night.

Ventura (6-7) blanked the Indians on four hits until Michael Brantley hit a leadoff homer in the ninth. The rookie right-hander was pulled after Jason Kipnis' one-out single. Ventura allowed six hits and struck out four in the longest outing of his career.

Salvador Perez and Christian Colon, making his first major-league start, had three hits apiece while Lorenzo Cain snapped an 0 for 13 skid with an RBI single in the third and a run-scoring double in the fifth.

Josh Tomlin (5-6), coming off a one-hit, no-walk, 11-strikeout performance against Seattle, allowed five runs and 11 hits in 5 2/3 innings.

RAYS 6
TIGERS 3

DETROIT — Evan Longoria homered. Ben Zobrist doubled twice and the Tampa Bay Rays finally broke through offensively against Detroit, beating the Tigers 6-3 on Friday night.

The Rays had gone 19 straight games against the Tigers without scoring more than four runs, a streak that went back more than three years. Tampa Bay had seven extra-base hits Friday, including a two-run triple by Sean Rodriguez in the sixth.

Alex Cobb (4-6) allowed three runs and five hits in five-plus innings for the Rays, and their bullpen allowed only one baserunner. Brad Boxberger pitched two perfect innings of relief, Joel Peralta worked the eighth, and Jake McGee finished for his fourth save.

Detroit's Drew Smyly (4-8) allowed five runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings.

There were three hit batsmen, and umpires warned both benches in the sixth. After the warnings, Rays manager Joe Maddon argued and was ejected.

PADRES 2
GIANTS 0

SAN DIEGO — Eric Stults pitched seven strong innings to win for the first time in nearly two months and Alexi Amarista homered to lead the San Diego Padres to a 2-0 win over the San Francisco Giants on Friday.

Stults (3-11), winless in his last nine starts, was victorious for the first time since a 9-3 victory over Miami on May 10. The lefty held the Giants to four hits with six strikeouts and two walks as he snapped a six-start losing streak.

Matt Cain (1-7) pitched well but had little to show for it as he lost his fourth consecutive decision and is winless in seven starts.

The Padres won their season-high fifth straight game as they faced the Giants for the first time since they were no-hit by Tim Lincecum on June 25. San Francisco Lincecum is scheduled to start on Sunday.

DODGERS 9
ROCKIES 0

DENVER — Clayton Kershaw nearly had no-hit stuff against Colorado again, allowing only two singles over eight masterful innings as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Rockies 9-0 on Friday night.

Kershaw (10-2) extended his scoreless streak to 36 innings before being replaced by a pinch hitter in the ninth.

The hard-throwing lefty bottled up the top-hitting team in the majors in nearly matching the no-hitter he threw against the Rockies on June 18 at Dodger Stadium. Kershaw struck out eight and walked one.

BRAVES 5
DIAMONDBACKS 2

ATLANTA — Freddie Freeman drove in two runs, Ervin Santana won his second straight start, and the Atlanta Braves stretched their winning streak to eight games with a 5-2 victory over the Arizona Diamondbacks on Friday night.

The Braves (48-38) have won 10 of 11 to move 10 games over .500 for the first time since April 29. They lead the NL East by 1 1/2 games.

PIRATES 8
PHILLIES 2

PITTSBURGH — Andrew McCutchen went 4 for 5 and finished a home run short of a cycle, and Jordy Mercer drove in a career-high four runs to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to an 8-2 rout of the Philadelphia Phillies on Friday.

Mercer had two of Pittsburgh's 13 hits, and each of the Pirates' eight position players who started the game had at least one.

CARDINALS 3
MARLINS 2

ST. LOUIS — Lance Lynn bounced back from his worst start of the season with 6 2-3 scoreless innings and the St. Louis Cardinals placed consecutive two-out RBI doubles just out of right fielder Giancarlo Stanton's reach in a three-run sixth of a 3-2 victory over the Miami Marlins on Friday night.

REDS 4
BREWERS 2

CINCINNATI — Alfredo Simon moved into a tie for the National League lead with his 11th win and Billy Hamilton homered as the Cincinnati Reds snapped a three-game losing streak with a 4-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Friday night.

CUBS 7
NATIONALS 2

WASHINGTON — Justin Ruggiano homered for the second straight game for the Chicago Cubs, who used another solid outing from Jason Hammel to beat the Washington Nationals 7-2 on Friday.

Spurs' Ginobili has stress fracture of right leg

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Spurs say Manu Ginobili has a stress fracture of the lower fibula of his right leg.

The injury could knock the key reserve for the NBA champion Spurs out of the upcoming World Cup of Basketball, where he was scheduled to play for Argentina.

The tournament starts at the end of August in Spain. Ginobili wrote Tuesday on his Facebook page that his availability will depend on how he feels in about three weeks, but that he remains optimistic.

It's unclear when Ginobili was injured. He averaged 14.4 points in the NBA Finals, when the Spurs beat Miami in five games to give Ginobili his fourth championship.

In reversal of earlier strategy, Knicks ploy Anthony with cash

By Scott Cacciola
NYT News Service

NEW YORK — Phil Jackson, the New York Knicks' president, had gone out of his way in recent weeks to emphasize the importance of cap space and financial flexibility, buzzwords for his interest in fiscal responsibility. As Carmelo Anthony approached free agency, Jackson continued to preach the virtues of sacrificing cash for the greater good.

The message, essentially, was that if Anthony was truly interested in winning, he ought to be willing to take less money from the Knicks.

Of course, things can change. On Thursday night, during a private meeting in Los Angeles at the conclusion of Anthony's four-city recruiting tour, Jackson told Anthony that he would be willing to give him a maximum contract worth about $129 million over five years. The offer was first reported by ESPN and confirmed by a person briefed on the discussions.

As of Friday, it remained unclear where Anthony intends to play next season — or how much he will earn. The Knicks, as has been cited repeatedly, can offer him the longest deal and the most money, per league rules. But he has other suitors, including the teams he met with this week: the Chicago Bulls, the Houston Rockets, the Dallas Mavericks and the Los Angeles Lakers.

How much does Anthony value winning? How much does he trust Jackson? How much does he want to play with one of his high-profile friends? These were all questions without obvious answers. Under NBA rules, no signings or trades can be consummated until July 10. Players and their agents are free to confirm deals, however.

Anthony has never won a championship, and the Knicks could be staring at a significant rebuilding process under Jackson. At the same time, Anthony has said that he enjoys playing in New York, and staying with the team would prevent him from having to uproot his family, a factor that he recently said was important to him.

The Bulls and the Rockets presented Anthony with the most direct paths to championship contention.

With a presumably healthy Derrick Rose and Joakim Noah, the league's reigning defensive player of the year, Chicago could immediately vie for supremacy in the Eastern Conference next season. The Rockets, already a playoff team, could become even more of a threat in the Western Conference.

Beyond the money, Anthony's decision-making process could hinge on how confident he feels about Jackson's chances of assembling a winning roster. Jackson has unmatched credentials as a coach, but he has never been an executive. In addition, next season will be Derek Fisher's first as a coach.

Hawks, Sefolosha agree to 3-year deal

By Charles Odum
Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Hawks have reached an agreement with small forward Thabo Sefolosha on a deal that leaves the team sufficient salary cap room for additional offseason moves.

The Hawks and Sefolosha have agreed to a three-year, $12 million contract, a person with knowledge of the deal said Friday. The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because teams can't officially sign free agents until the NBA's moratorium on deals is lifted on Thursday.

The agreement was first reported by The Oklahoman newspaper.

The deal with Sefolosha comes after the Hawks on Tuesday cleared more than $15 million in salary cap space by trading guard Lou Williams and the draft rights to center Lucas Nogueira to Toronto for forward John Salmons. The Hawks could have about $11.5 million for additional signings if they pay the $1 million buyout of Salmons' $7 million salary.

The Hawks are believed to have interest in Chicago Bulls free-agent forward Luol Deng.

The 6-foot-7 Sefolosha averaged 6.3 points as a starter in 61 games last season for Oklahoma City. He is known as a strong defender but his 3-point percentage fell from 41.9 percent in 2012-13 to 31.6 percent.

Sefolosha, a native of Switzerland, has averaged 5.8 points in eight seasons with the Chicago Bulls and Thunder. He set career highs with 108 3-pointers made and 7.6 points per game in the 2012-13 season with the Thunder.

DeMarre Carroll was Atlanta's primary small forward last season. Kyle Korver, normally a shooting guard, also played small forward in small lineups.

Kaman agrees to deal with Blazers

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Free agent center Chris Kaman has agreed to a two-year deal with the Portland Trail Blazers.

A person with knowledge of the negotiations confirmed the agreement, which cannot be formally announced until new contracts are finalized next Thursday. The deal, worth a reported $9.8 million, was first reported Thursday night by Yahoo! Sports.

Kaman confirmed the deal with a post on his official Twitter account. "Portland is a great fit for me, it's a team that has done great things" he posted.

SOCKERS FC

From 1B

said Clifford: "They just have a winning mentality."

It's an attitude that resonates from top to bottom of the Aztex's organization and is one of the main reasons the team will make the jump to the professional ranks of the USL next season.

That winning demeanor is something Clifford and the Sockers are attempting to develop on the fly, and notes were scribbled following the team's previous meetings with the Aztex.

"When they have a chance, they finish it," Long said. "When we have the lead we kind of let teams back in sometimes."

The team remembers that all too painfully from its second loss to the Aztex. But despite their tough finishes against Austin, the team remains upbeat about the two upcoming games.

Sockers FC almost has to. Earning points against the Aztex is critical for holding off the hard-charging Laredo Heat, who sit five points behind the Sockers for second place. The Sockers, similarly, fall five points behind Austin for first place in the Mid-South Division.

Two straight victories could jump the team into first place, but Sockers are far more concerned with posting a pair of positive results and holding off the Heat.

"We want to get that first-place berth, but first and foremost we have to get into the playoffs and get away from Laredo," Long said.

Both Long and Clifford view this set of games as a measuring stick, not only for the team, but for each individual as they look forward to the pros.

"For a lot of guys on this team trying to play professionally next year, it's a good indication what level they're at and if they're ready for the jump up," Clifford said.

This is an entirely different rendition of the Sockers than the team that faced the Aztex in early June; at least the players believe so. Now the team must prove their six-game streak without a loss isn't a fluke.

"Everything seems to be clicking on at the right time," Clifford said. "We're not going into the game (today) looking to draw or avoid goal difference. We're trying to win the game."

Germany beats France

Germany 1
France 0

By Steve Douglas
Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO — It just wouldn't be the World Cup without Germany in the semifinals.

Harnessing all their big-game experience, the Germans delivered a performance of maturity and efficiency to hold off France 1-0 on Friday and become the first team to reach four straight semifinals in the sport's marquee tournament.

Defender Mats Hummels scored the winning goal in the 13th minute, outmuscling his marker at a free kick to glance a header in off the underside of the crossbar.

Criticized for poor defending in earlier matches, Germany selected a more robust lineup and restricted a flat France team to only a handful of clear-cut opportunities in muggy conditions.

"There was not much in it," France coach Didier Deschamps said. But, "we don't have the international experience Germany has."

While France's young players slumped to the ground and some shed tears after the final whistle, the Germans soberly saluted all corners of the Maracana Stadium.

One job done, nothing more.

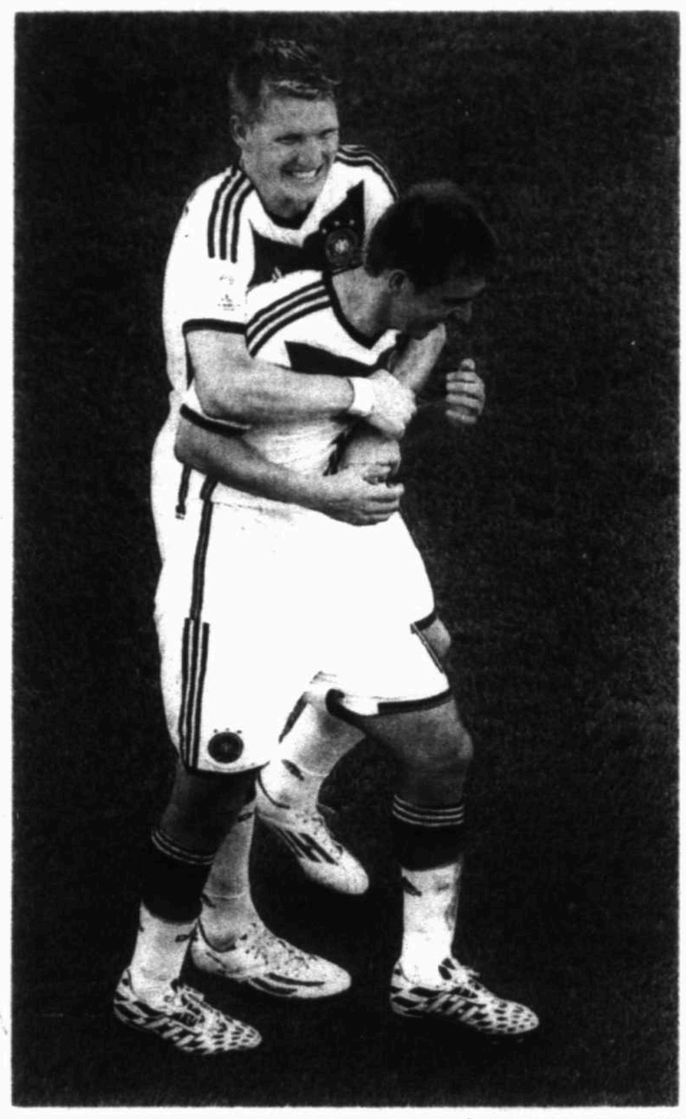

And next up for Germany is a meeting with host nation Brazil, which beat Colombia 2-1 later Friday. It will be Germany's 13th appearance in the semifinals in 20 editions of the World Cup.

"I guess we're playing the kind of football which will give us a chance to win," said Hummels, who produced a couple of decisive blocks to snuff out two good chances for France striker Karim Benzema.

"We defended well today. I think we deserve to carry on."

France struggled to impose the kind of attacking game that made the team one of the most exciting in Brazil during the group stage, although Benzema — the team's chief attacking threat — squandered chances in both halves.

Late in the first half, the Real Madrid striker seized on a rebound following Manuel Neuer's save from Mathieu Valbuena's shot but his close-range effort was deflected wide by Hummels. Then, in stoppage time, he created space for himself about eight yards out at an angle, but a fierce shot was swatted away by Neuer.

Germany's Philipp Lahm, right, and Bastian Schweinsteiger celebrate after Germany beat France on Friday in a World Cup quarterfinal match at the Maracana Stadium in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

"We played like a team again," said Germany captain Philipp Lahm, who returned to right back in one of a string of tactically astute changes made by coach Joachim Loew. "Overall it was a good performance from us."

In Loew's eight-year tenure, Germany has reached the last four in every major tournament it has played — but remains without a title since winning the European Championships in 1996.

While the German team seemed comfortable at this level, the occasion was perhaps too much for a young, revamped France team playing together at the World Cup for the first time.

And it continued Germany's recent dominance over France at World Cups.

The most notorious of those previous meetings was in the 1982 semifinals in Spain, when Germany won on penalties following a 3-3 draw in a match marked by a late and high tackle by Germany goalkeeper Harald Schumacher on France defender Patrick Battiston that escaped punishment.

That went down as one of the most riveting matches in World Cup history, but the rematch — 32 years on — couldn't have been more different.

A turgid first half was illuminated by the goal from Hummels, who held off Raphael Varane and met a typically dead-eye delivery from Toni Kroos with a header that gave goalkeeper Hugo Lloris no chance.

The warm and humid conditions played a part in the slow tempo of the game but France stepped up the pressure in the second half.

Benzema's late chance got French fans excited but Germany should have been 2-0 ahead by then, with Lloris saving a low shot by substitute Andre Schuerrle on a counter-attack.

"We just weren't efficient enough," said Valbuena, who sat, dejected, on the field after the final whistle. "Our efforts just weren't enough, it's incredibly disappointing."

getting his second yellow card of the tournament after impeding Colombia goalkeeper David Ospina.

Brazil, which is trying to become the first host to win the World Cup since France in 1998, had been eliminated in the quarterfinals at the last two tournaments. The "Selecao" lost to the Netherlands in the quarterfinals in 2010 and to France in 2006 after winning its fifth title in 2002.

Back in 1950, Brazil needed only a draw in the final match to win the World Cup, but the team lost to Uruguay in a match known as the "Maracanazo."

This time around, Brazil won its group and then beat Chile on penalties in the second round.

On Friday against Colombia, Silva gave Brazil the lead in the seventh minute, scoring with his left knee after a corner from Neymar passed through the Colombian defense. He celebrated the goal by pointing to the emblem on his jersey and shouting, "This is Brazil, this is Brazil."

Luiz added the second from a free kick in the 69th, side-footing a long-range shot into the top of the net.

Colombia got one back in the 80th. James Rodriguez scored his tournament-leading sixth goal from the penalty spot after Brazil goalkeeper Julio Cesar brought down substitute Carlos Bacca inside the area.

Rodriguez tried to control the pace of the match, but it was Brazil that created most of the scoring chances as Ospina had to make a series of saves in the first half alone.

The Colombians tried to pressure after Rodriguez's late penalty, but Brazil held on with solid defending.

Colombia, playing at the World Cup for the first time since 1998 and in the quarterfinals for the first time ever, had entered the match after scoring 11 goals, second only to the Netherlands.

"After not playing in the World Cup for so long, we were able to show the value of the Colombian football and the talent of some of our players," said Colombia coach Jose Pekerman, an Argentine. "They showed great spirit and presence of mind. They came to play a great World Cup, not just to participate."

Stealth World Cup ads raise sponsorship questions

By Anne M. Peterson
Associated Press

In an ad for Beats by Dr. Dre stereo headphones, Neymar jams to Jay-Z's remix of the song "Jungle." Fans cheer, toast and pray across Brazilian neighborhoods and cameras flash while reporters shout questions, but the pounding rhythm of the rap drowns out distractions for the Brazilian striker and fellow soccer stars Jozy Altidore and Cesc Fabregas.

As the ad closes, cameras close in on Neymar's determined face for soccer's grandest tournament.

What's missing are the actual words "World Cup." That's because Beats Electronics, recently acquired by Apple for $3 billion, is not an official sponsor of the event. Soccer's international governing body, FIFA, closely holds the World Cup brand as intellectual property.

It hasn't stopped the company from marketing its way around sponsorship, and it isn't the only one doing it, prompting questions over how far soccer's international governing body can go in preventing non-sponsors from capitalizing on the World Cup, and whether pushing the boundaries of so-called "ambush marketing" diminishes the value of formal sponsorships.

Samsung's Galaxy 11 ads feature Cristiano Ronaldo, Lionel Messi and Landon Donovan playing a match against aliens with the fate of the universe on the line. Volkswagen USA uses legendary soccer announcer Andres Cantor to introduce the new VW Golf GTI. Gatorade has its (hash)win-fromwithin campaign featuring Messi set to the song "Bibbidi-Bobbidi-Boo."

None of the companies are official World Cup sponsors.

"Obviously the big events are being watched by hundreds of millions of people, and (the World Cup) is the kind of event that everybody wants to be a part of in some way," said Bob Dorfman, a sports marketing specialist for Baker Street Advertising in San Francisco. "The ambush marketing becomes a way of getting in there and doing what you can without having to pay the big price, and maybe looking a little more clever in doing so."

Nike sponsors several soccer stars playing in the World Cup, including Neymar and Ronaldo. The company has produced several spots that also imply a connection to the tournament. But adidas is the official FIFA sponsor.

So far Nike is scoring big with its non-World Cup campaign (hash) RiskEverything. Three online ads the company released have had over 380 million online views through different platforms, including Twitter, YouTube and Facebook, Nike reported. Two of the spots are ranked among the top 20 all-time for such brand campaigns.

To be fair, Nike isn't really going guerrilla in its marketing as much as some other companies piggybacking on the worldwide appeal of the World Cup. The Beaverton, Oregon-based athletic company is tied to the event because of its athletes, the shoes they wear, and the national team uniforms it designs.

There was also talk that FIFA was looking into whether Neymar's patriotic underwear — revealed when he went to swap shirts following a match with Cameroon — was a case of ambush marketing. The Brazilian undergarment maker, Lupo, sponsors Neymar.

FIFA declined requests for comment from the Associated Press about non-sponsor advertising until after the World Cup.

Given the increasingly blurred lines, FIFA can try to regulate it as much as possible. But in the end, there are other ways to make sponsorships valuable, Dorfman said.

Navy vet Billy Hurley takes Greenbrier lead

By John Raby
Associated Press

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. — Billy Hurley III has been waiting for a breakthrough moment on the PGA Tour. On Independence Day, the former U.S. Navy officer might have set himself up for one this weekend in the Greenbrier Classic.

Hurley shot a season-best 7-under 63 on Friday to take the second-round lead.

Hurley's bogey-free round included a chip-in from 29 feet on No. 4 in cool conditions before the wind picked up considerably late in his morning round.

"You know, anytime you play good, it's great, right?" Hurley said. "There's special days of the year for our country, and having served ... adds something to it. It's kind of pretty cool, I guess, to shoot 7 under on the 4th of July."

It's a nice storyline. Then again, having military experience wasn't on his mind in jumping to the top of the leaderboard.

Billy Hurley III lines up a putt on the 10th green during the second round of the Greenbrier Classic on Friday at the Greenbrier Resort in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia.

"I was just trying to keep getting the ball in the hole," he said.

Hurley was at 9-under 131 at Old White TPC. Eleven players were within four shots of him.

Kevin Chappell (65) and Chris Stroud (66) were a stroke back. Troy Matteson

Troy Matteson had a 61 to vault into fourth place at 7 under. He has made the cut in all five years of the Greenbrier Classic.

Brice Garnett (66), Steve Stricker (68) and Chris Kirk (69) were another stroke back at 6 under.

Hurley graduated from Annapolis in 2004 and spent five years in the Navy. He playing golf sparingly while stationed in Hawaii and worked out as much as he could.

Being mentally tough on the course comes easy for Hurley, whose missions included steering a Navy destroyer through the Suez Canal.

Tour de France gears up for UK start

By Jamey Keaten
Associated Press

LEEDS, England — So your national team is out of the World Cup in Brazil, Wimbledon doesn't seem the same without Serena Williams or Rafael Nadal and your baseball team is slumping.

This weekend, fans of many stripes could join die-hard cycling buffs and tune in to the start of the 101st Tour de France for that much-needed sports fix.

Cycling's big event gets going today through bucolic countryside in northern England, where officials have paid for the right to host it, hoping to draw tourists, capture media attention and feed the recent cycling craze among Britons.

It could first require getting over a nagging belief that, after Lance Armstrong's doping exposure, the sport may still be dogged by drug cheats. Cycling chiefs and experts generally agree that the era of widespread doping is over, but few would claim to know that today's pack is fully clean. Drug testers will conduct hundreds of blood and urine checks during the race.

Bookmakers' odds foresee a victory either by defending champion Chris Froome, a 29-year-old Kenyan-born Briton who leads Team Sky, or two-time champ Alberto Contador — a 31-year-old Spaniard with Tinkoff-Saxo Bank — to take home the yellow jersey when the race finishes on Paris' Champs-Elysees on July 26.

Few of the 198 riders on the 22 teams stand a realistic chance of winning, based on recent performances, skill sets and team priorities. Most are "domestiques" who race above all to help their team leaders win. Vincenzo Nibali of Italy, plus Spaniards Alejandro Valverde and Joaquin Rodriguez, stand an outside chance.

Conceding home-road advantage, Contador said Friday that "local hero" Froome remains the favorite. The Briton, who succeeded Sky teammate and compatriot Bradley Wiggins as Tour winner, said: "I don't think many Tour champions get to come back as defending champions and can start in front of their home crowd."

July 27 — 21st Stage: Evry to Paris Champs-Elysees, flat (137.5-85.4)
Total — 2,275.2 miles

Five of the 21 stages end in summit finishes, which usually promise drama as the cream of the climbers rises to the top first. In all, the riders will cover 2,277 miles of roads in England, France, Belgium and Spain.

Aside from cobblestone treachery in Stage 5, the mountains mostly matter this year. For the first time in 61 years, this Tour has only one long time trial — a race-against-the-clock, where racers set off one-by-one down a starter's ramp. It comes in Stage 20. Contador and Froome are among the best in both climbing and time-trialing.

This year marks the second time that the Tour de France is starting in Britain, after a successful time in London in 2007. Local officials use municipal funds to pay for the right to host the race in their cities, hoping for short-term tourism revenues plus a longer-term return from the international media spotlight.

The Tour's route changes every year. After three stages in England, this 101st edition enters France on Tuesday. The riders will cover many of the same roads their forebears covered since the race was first run in 1903. Among novelties this year: the first-ever Chinese rider in the race, Cheng Ji, and 11 climbs in the eastern Vosges mountains — though long, steep ascents await in the Alps and Pyrenees too.

If turnout on English roads during the 2007 Tour de France is any precedent — when millions lined up two- to three-people deep to watch the pack zip by — expect big crowds again this year.

Chestnut gets mustard yellow belt

Julie Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK — High-ranking chowhound Joey "Jaws" Chestnut dropped to one knee and proposed to his longtime girlfriend before Friday's annual hot dog eating contest, then packed away 61 franks and buns to hold onto his coveted mustard yellow winner's belt.

The San Jose, California, resident fell far short of his record last year of 69 dogs and buns, but he still easily beat second-place finisher Matt Stonie, also of San Jose, who downed 56.

"Winning was the only option," the newly engaged champion said afterward. "I wasn't going to taint today with a loss."

Chestnut took a quick timeout before the annual Nathan's Famous Fourth of July Hot Dog Eating Contest at Coney Island to make it official with his longtime girlfriend, Neslie Ricasa, who is also a competitive eater.

In the women's division, defending champion Sonya "Black Widow" Thomas lost her title to Miki Sudo.

Sudo, of Las Vegas, wolfed down 34 franks and buns. Thomas, of Alexandria, Virginia, devoured 27 3/4.

Chestnut has won eight times in a row. In 2010, his former rival Takeru Kobayashi refused to sign an exclusive contract with Major League Eating, the food equivalent of the NFL, and was banned from competition.

This year, the Japanese native, nicknamed the Tsunami, competed against five other eaters at a separate event in Manhattan in a quest to down the most hot dogs without buns in 10 minutes. He was victorious in that bun-less eat-off, downing 113 frankfurters, an event spokeswoman said.

Machida takes on Weidman at UFC 175

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — While the rest of Lyoto Machida's lunch party digs into steaks and cheesecake, he eats from a small plastic container of vegetables and pasta.

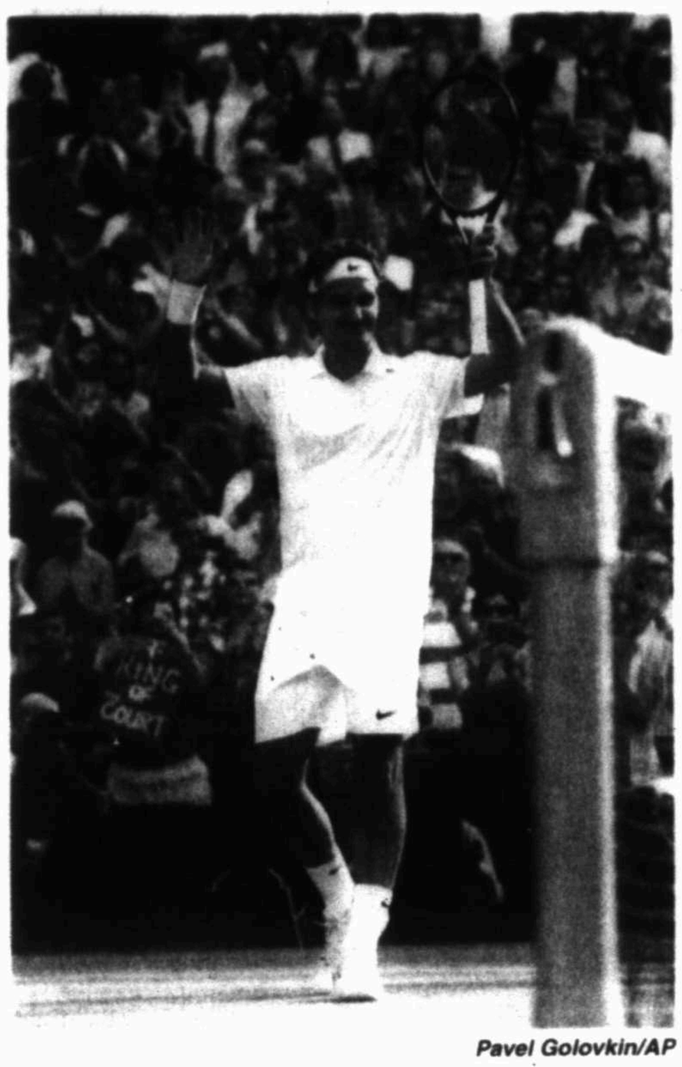

Machida doesn't mind. It's no small thing to drop 20 pounds as a mixed martial artist, and the Brazilian veteran believes he'll get the payoff for his sacrifices at UFC 175.

Machida has won and lost a UFC championship belt during his lengthy career, and he moved down from light heavyweight to middleweight in his quest to win another title.

"I feel good and strong," Machida said through a translator. "I knew I could do it, and I did it the right way. Now I'm going to show everybody that I can win at any weight."

Machida (21-4) takes on middleweight champion Chris Weidman in the main event at UFC 175 in Las Vegas tonight, headlining the promotion's biggest event of the summer. Bantamweight champion Ronda Rousey also faces Alexis Davis on the card in the UFC's hometown.

Roger Federer celebrates defeating Milos Raonic on Friday after their men's singles semifinal match at the All England Lawn Tennis Championships in Wimbledon, London.

King holds court, excited by newcomers

By Dennis Passa
Associated Press

LONDON — Billie Jean King believes Wimbledon finalists Petra Kvitova and Eugenie Bouchard are creating one of the most exciting times in women's tennis in decades.

King ought to know. She helped start the Women's Tennis Association more than 40 years ago.

The 24-year-old Kvitova of the Czech Republic won the 2011 Wimbledon title. She'll face the 20-year-old Bouchard, who will play in her — and Canada's — first Grand Slam final today.

They're from a generation of fitter and stronger players who have "closed the gap on power and belief" with their older contemporaries, King said at a news conference during Wimbledon.

"They have definitely caught up," King said. "Women have more confidence overall. Serena (Williams) is not in the same place as she was, she's a little more vulnerable.

"The men have had their 'Top 4.' Now we've got a lot of younger women who want to be here. They like the show time."

Here are five things to know about the big show Saturday on Centre Court:

WHAT A YEAR: Bouchard was the only woman to have advanced to all three Grand Slam tournament semifinals this year, and now she's taken it another step. She's received support from her home country, prime ministers and mayors, along with "The Big Bang Theory" actor Jim Parsons. She finished 2013 ranked 32nd, and she's projected to improve to No. 7 — the highest ranking for a Canadian woman — by reaching the final. She would be the youngest Grand Slam champion since Maria Sharapova won the 2006 U.S. Open at 19.

ONLY MEETING: Kvitova and Bouchard have played just once. They faced off on hard courts in Toronto, with Kvitova an easy winner 6-3, 6-2.

NEW GENERATION: The final Saturday is the first to feature two players born in the 1990s. Kvitova is the only player born in that decade to win a Grand Slam — her 2011 title here — while Bouchard is the fourth player born in the '90s to reach a Grand Slam final. The others are French Open runner-up Simona Halep (who lost to Bouchard in the semifinals) and former No. 1 Caroline Wozniacki, the 2009 U.S. Open runner-up.

KVITOVA'S THOUGHTS: "Bouchard is playing very solid game. She's a very good mover. She's nearby the baseline. I think it's very similar to my game. I beat her for the first time last year, but it's long time ago. This is totally different. So, I mean, I really have to be focusing on everything and try to push her."

BOUCHARD'S PLAN: "She has good shots which are very powerful compared perhaps to opponents I played in the tournament. I think she will try to attack, but I will try to do the same thing. I think both of us will try to put pressure on each other. I think it will be important to start the points well on serve and on return. It will be the first shots that decide the match."

WIMBLEDON

don titles, followed with a 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 victory over 11th-seeded Milos Raonic of Canada. Returning serves that topped 130 mph, Federer broke Raonic once in each set and took 61 of 80 points on his own serve.

"Just seeing Roger around, seeing his persona, his aura — you know that a lot of people could have, and have, written him off in a lot of ways," Raonic said, "(but) you knew this was very (possible) for him."

Dimitrov (who beat defending champion Murray in the quarterfinals) and Raonic (who beat the man who beat Nadal in the fourth round) are 23 and were making their debuts in a Slam semifinal. Federer was in his 35th; six-time major champion Djokovic was in his 23rd.

It was sunny, 77 degrees (25 Celsius) and windy, and Djokovic and Dimitrov found themselves slip-sliding around the worn court, especially along swaths of brown dirt. One of their many lengthy, entertaining exchanges ended with both face-down on the turf.

Djokovic appeared ready to run away with a win, one point from leading by a set and two breaks. But Dimitrov, cheered on by girlfriend Maria Sharapova, hit an ace to erase a break point and reeled off five consecutive games to grab the second set.

For Djokovic was volleying poorly — something that surely bothered one of his coaches, three-time Wimbledon champion Boris Becker — and generally struggling to find his strokes.

BAPTISM

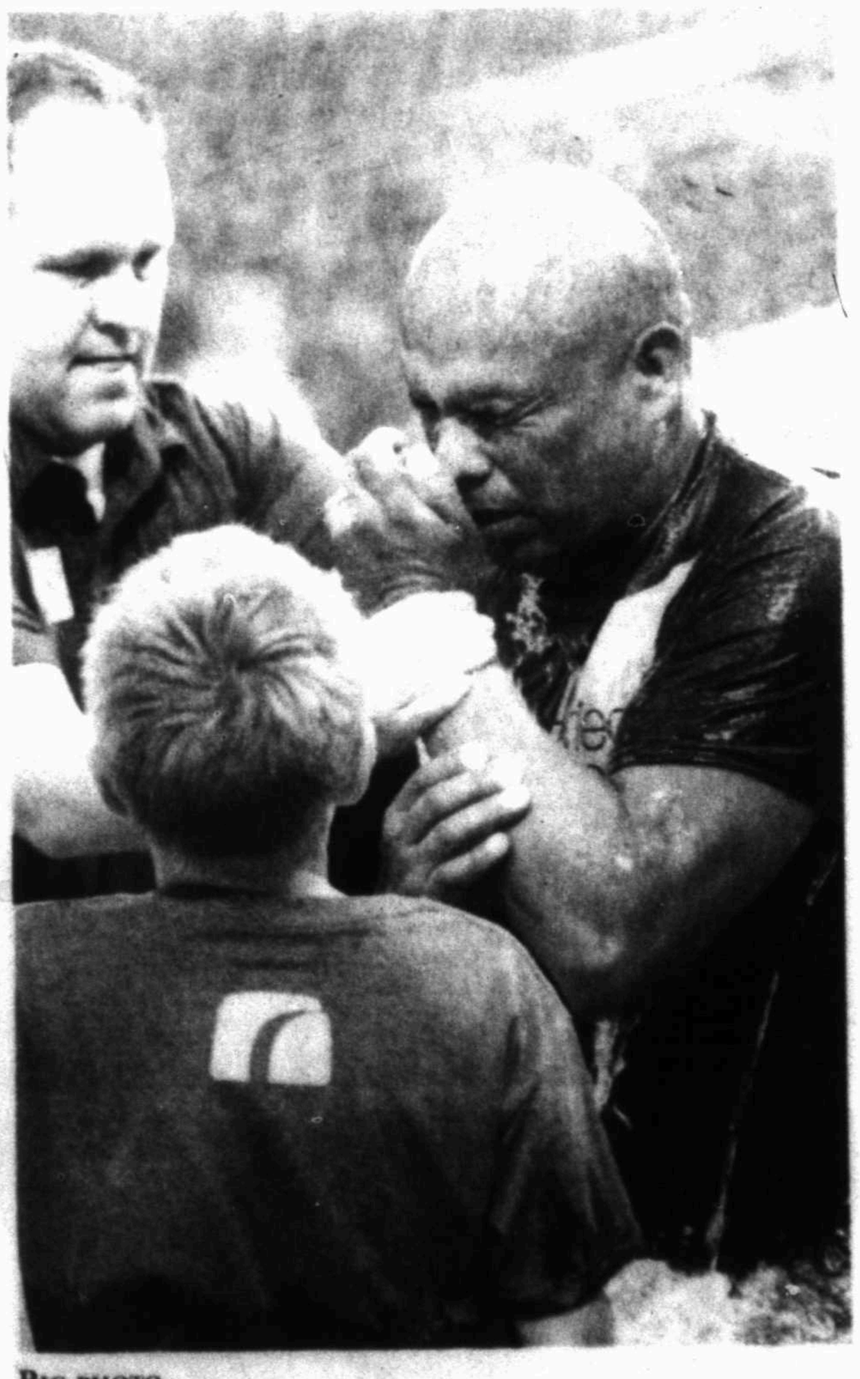

Stonegate baptizes 47 at ballpark

Zoe Zeigler makes a profession of faith, right, and is baptized, below during the Stonegate service at Security Bank Ballpark on Wednesday.

Stonegate Fellowship hosted its monthly baptism celebration Wednesday at Security Bank Ballpark. Church staff set up two baptistries on home plate where 47 people were baptized. A worship service then was led from the pitcher's mound. A free fireworks show followed the baptism service. The evening also included a picnic, jumpers and Kona Ice.

Stonegate hosts a baptism service the first Wednesday of every month. Church staff said the number of people baptized Wednesday is on par with its monthly average this year. This was the first time the church rented the ballpark. Organizers anticipated about 1,000 attendees; 1,200 people attended the picnic. A total of about 2,500 were at the ballpark throughout the evening.

Friend has hard time finding a few kind words for bad book

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: My friend's husband has been writing a novel for several years. He just self-published it, and it's available on Amazon. He gave me a copy, asked me to read it and enter a great review on the Amazon page. The problem is the book is filled with misused and misspelled words, and there is missing punctuation. He even switched the names of two characters. (His wife, who is a "perfectionist," was his editor.)

Aside from the fact that I don't want to finish the book, I know he or my friend will ask me how I liked it. I don't want to lie because I'm afraid if someone else brings these things to their attention, they'll know I didn't read it or think I should have told them. I know they will be embarrassed if I bring it to their attention.

Frankly, I think it's too late to say anything negative because the book has already been printed. I also don't want to cause hurt feelings because I know how long he worked on this project and he's proud of it. How do I handle this? — READER IN THE SOUTHWEST

DEAR READER: He's a friend, right? And you're only a reader, not a literary critic whose credibility will suffer if you don't point out every flaw. Find SOMETHING you liked about the book and mention that on the Amazon page. You could call it a "page turner" because you had to turn from Page 1 to Page 2, didn't you?

In a case like this, less is more. And remember, you're doing this in the capacity of being a friend, not an English teacher.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend whose son was involved in a shooting which ended in a death in her house. Should I send food, flowers and a nice note in the mail or stand back and not intrude? I sent a text asking if she was OK and if I could do anything for her family, but I don't know what else to do. We are more than acquaintances but less than great friends. — UNSURE IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR UNSURE: If the funeral has been held, your friend does not need flowers. At a time like this, she could use some moral support. Call her and tell her you would like to bring some food over and ask what she may need. Then bring it to her, and be ready to listen if she wants to talk. Your presence and your caring will be meaningful, because when a tragedy like this happens, people don't know what to say, which isolates the person who is grieving.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, July 5, 2014:

This year you will be quicker to let others know when your feelings are hurt. Your directness helps you with groups, community commitments and even work. You often find yourself in situations where you are pushed to make a decision. If you are single, someone important could mosey into your life this year. The chemistry between you could be high. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy hanging out together. You will feel more indulgent than you have in years, if you can just go with the flow with your significant other. LIBRA might seem easygoing, but he or she has quite a temper.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You'll want to wind down from recent celebrations. The problem might be that others are still off carousing. You could find it difficult to stop with all the upbeat smiles and partying happening around you. Be careful with a close loved one. Tonight: Get some rest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ You might have to make certain calls to certain people. You will feel a lot better once you do. Kick back and help others relax. You will see a problem in a different light as a result. Squeeze in a walk or some other form of exercise while you can. Tonight: Relax with others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You could become resentful of someone's need to be in control. Tension will build around your finances if you are not careful. You seem to have the wit and personality to help lose the edge that others believe you have. Tonight: Love the moment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Your inner voice will encourage you to stay close to home and relax. You could be dealing with someone from a distance. You enjoy this person's calls, but you would like to visit with him or her more often. Tonight: At home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ You could find yourself deep into conversations, which might cause you to lose track of time. Don't worry — just enjoy it. You will be happy to hear someone else's news. A neighbor or cousin will seek you out, as he or she has some unusual information. Tonight: Catch up on news.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Remain sensitive to a certain agreement that could cost you more than you initially anticipated. Be sure to clearly establish your limits, and others will honor them. Scheduling a fun get-together later in the summer will feel great. Tonight: Give a child some extra attention.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ You might opt for a summer sport this summer or a visit to someone you never see. Know that your attention means a lot to this person. Surprises seem to surround others. You might want to rethink a relationship. Tonight: You naturally know what to do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Do what you feel, rather than what you think you should do. You could prevent a backfire that way. If you start to feel angry or frustrated, do not lash out; instead, find out what is really going on beneath the surface. Tonight: Not to be found.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You might want to see what is happening around you more clearly. A friend could invite you at the last minute to join him or her for a fun adventure. Do what feels right to you, and you can't go wrong. Tonight: Avoid an argument at all costs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ You could be more in touch with an older relative than you realize. This person would love it if you spent more time with him or her. Try to make that a possibility instead of always making excuses. Do what feels right to you. Tonight: A must appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Reach out to someone at a distance. Your caring means much more than you realize to a person you rarely speak to. You might feel as if he or she does not make an adequate effort. Be direct in how you deal with an assertive individual. Tonight: Listen to a favorite band or group.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You'll want to deal with one specific person directly, as he or she is pivotal to your well-being. You might not always get the answers you want, but this individual is as open as he or she can be. Allow yourself to be a little more vulnerable. Tonight: Go for closeness.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING
FAIRGROUNDS ROAD WIDENING
FROM PECAN AVENUE TO LOOP 250

The City of Midland will hold a public meeting to discuss the proposed improvements to Fairgrounds Road, from Pecan Avenue (Ave) to Loop 250, in the City of Midland, Midland County, Texas. There will be no formal presentation. The public meeting will be held in an open house format on Thursday, July 10, 2014

6:00 p.m. - 8:00 p.m.
MLK Community Center
2300 Butternut Lane, Midland, TX 79705

The proposed project would widen Fairgrounds Rd. from two lanes to five lanes, from Pecan Ave to Loop 250, a distance of approximately one mile. The proposed project would provide a continuous five-lane roadway from Business Interstate (BI) 20 to Loop 250.

The proposed project is needed to address existing traffic congestion and increasing traffic volumes due to commercial and residential development along Fairgrounds Road. The project will also address the lack of pedestrian access between neighborhoods and parks along the roadway.

The purpose of this project is to improve traffic circulation by providing a continuous five-lane operation between BI 20 and Loop 250 and to enhance pedestrian access by providing a pedestrian path along a portion of the roadway.

Maps and drawings reflecting the proposed build alternative will be displayed at the public meeting. Plans and other information about the proposed project will be available beginning July 8, 2014, for public inspection at the City of Midland Engineering Office, 300 North Loraine, Midland, TX 79701.

Verbal and written comments relative to the proposed build alternative may be presented at the meeting. All written comments must be submitted by 5:00 p.m., July 24, 2014, to Mr. Jose Ortiz, P.E., City of Midland, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, TX 79702, in order to be included in the public meeting record.

Persons interested in attending the public meeting who have special communication needs or require physical accommodations are encouraged to contact Shellie Mitchell at 432-685-7287 at least three (3) working days prior to the public meeting. The City will make every reasonable effort to accommodate these needs.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
I have a wonderful niece, Becky, who studied hard through the years and is soon off to college. And while her grades are great, her financial resources are limited. She works two jobs to save up for college. I'd like to help her get the degree she deserves. Although I don't have a lot of spare cash, I do have an antique sword from the Civil War era that I inherited from a distant relative. It doesn't have any sentimental value to me, so I was thinking of selling it and giving the money to my niece for college. It is something I really want to do for her. After doing some quick research on the web, I think the sword has good value, but I have no idea on how best to sell it. Do I try to attend the next Antiques Roadshow when it's in town or can I do this on my own? Do I take out a classified ad? How does one go about pricing and selling something like this?

Cash: It's very kind of you to try and help your niece pay for school. Your gift will certainly be an education in generosity.

Carry: Whenever you're trying to sell an antique, memorabilia or something of value, you always want to give yourself time to research its worth and find a buyer willing to pay a fair price.

Cash: You're already on the right path by doing your homework. Researching on the web is a great place to educate yourself about the history of the sword. The next step is to have it appraised. If you're lucky enough to have the Antiques Roadshow in town, it may well be worth a visit. The professionals at those venues may be able to give you some information on the sword's history and overall worth.

Carry: Otherwise, try to find an appraiser who specializes in Civil War items so you can get a true sense of the sword's value. Often, rare items can be placed on auction and made available to collectors or others interested in memorabilia from the Civil War era.

Cash: Keep in mind though that everything old isn't necessarily valuable. The sword will need to be authenticated as a rare antique in order to fetch a really good price.

Carry: Although regardless of its value, it's still a very generous offer for your niece. However before you sell it, you might want to let her borrow it for school. It could help her get an "A" in American History.

Fast Facts

High-Priced Education

The cost of college tuition continues to increase an average of 6% every year. That could add up to another $1,500 out of your pocket. But don't fret just yet. While a private 4-year college can cost over $35,000 per year, only about 9% of full-time students choose these universities. Nearly 56% of students enroll in 4-year colleges charging less than $10,000 per year. And about 38% of full-time students attend colleges and universities that cost only $4,000 to $8,000 per year.

On the Road Again

The Antiques Roadshow is a television series that travels around the country encouraging people to bring in family heirlooms, unique pieces and antiques to be appraised by professionals. While the US version began in 1997, the original idea belongs to the British. Their version of the Antiques Roadshow was developed in 1977 and revolved around a London auction house touring the West Country of England. The show's popularity has created spin-offs in numerous other countries including Canada, Sweden, Germany, Finland, Australia and the Netherlands.

Old-Time Courting

My grandmother loved sharing stories about her youth and one day decided to tell me the story about how she and grandpa met.

It seems that when she was in her 20's, the young man she was dating left for the war. "We were completely in love," she shared, "and wrote to each other every week for the four years he was gone. It was during that time that I really discovered how wonderful your grandfather really was."

Seeing the loving smile on her face, I asked, "So did you marry grandpa as soon as he came home from the war?"

"Oh I didn't marry the man who wrote the letters," she corrected me. "You're grandfather was the mailman!"

(Thanks to Sandra W.)
