Body found

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Police today were investigating the beating death of a man who was found inside his burning residence with both of his feet severed.

Lt. Dean Summerlin of the Lubbock Police Department said the man had not been identified as of early Monday because the victim's head had been pummeled beyond recognition.

"We may have to use dental records to positively identify him," Summerlin said.

Police discovered the man's body about 9:30 p.m. Saturday near the living room fireplace in his burning home after neighbors reported the fire.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack, who received the autopsy results Sunday night, said the killing was among the most heinous he had ever investigated.

Soviets claim peace plan offered Iraq

Two U.S. warships hit mines in gulf, at least seven injured

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Two U.S. warships hit mines in the northern Persian Gulf today as allied vessels moved deeper into hostile waters. In a surprise move, the Soviets said they offered Iraq a new peace plan.

The United States — which reported allied forces have flown 80,000 sorties in the month-long aerial bombardment of Iraq — said today the attacks would continue while Iraq considers the peace plan.

"All our hopes remain in the air and on the ground in terms of pushing Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait," said Marlin Fitzwater, spokesman for President Bush.

The U.S. military said today the United States lost another aircraft in combat, but Air Force helicopters flew 40 miles north of the Saudi border Sunday night and rescued the pilot of the F-16 after he parachuted from his disabled warplane. The pilot was not identified.

The mine damage was the first of the war sustained by U.S. vessels. American officials said at least seven crewmen were injured — one seriously. Neither ship was reported in danger of sinking.

Struck were a high-tech missile cruiser, the USS Princeton, and an amphibious assault ship, the USS Tripoli, that is part of a 31-vessel task force gearing up for a possible Marine amphibious assault.

Such an invasion could be one element of the ground offensive that allied leaders have indicated is days if not hours away.

In an effort to stave off a bloody ground war, Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and the Soviet foreign minister, Alexander Bessmertnykh, held talks in Moscow today with Iraq's foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, and deputy prime minister, Saadoun Hammadi.

After 3½ hours of talks, Gorbachev's spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko said Aziz was returning to the Iraqi capital with a Soviet proposal for President Saddam Hussein. He would not provide details, but said it was "fully in line with the Soviet position that there should be an unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait."

Ignatenko called the meeting "very constructive" and said Aziz accepted Gorbachev's proposals with "interest and understanding." The spokesman said the Soviet president expects a quick response.

Gorbachev did not describe his proposal to President Bush and other allied leaders in advance, but would brief them today, Ignatenko said.

King Fahd reiterated today that Iraq must withdraw from Kuwait.

"The Iraqi leadership could spare its country and the whole region more miseries and Local rebates mirrored those statewide.

"This month's rebates are the largest in the state's history," State Comptroller John Sharp said. That's an increase of 12.4 percent.

The reports reflect sales made in December.

Snyder received rates of $102,473.52, up 9.88 percent from $93,258.61 last February. For year to date, the city has received $170,360.50, or 12.75 percent more than the $151,100.83 received during the same period of 1990.

IRA, Iraq eyed in two bombings

LONDON (AP) — A bomb went off at Victoria station today, 45 minutes after a caller with an Irish accent told officials there would be an explosion, police said. The blast killed one person, injured 37 and sent screaming commuters running from the terminal.

Commander George Churchill-Coleman, head of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist unit, told reporters there had been a telephone warning from a man with an Irish accent at about 7 a.m.

The warning came less than three hours after a device similar to the Victoria bomb exploded in Paddington station, where only a dozen employees were on duty and no one was injured.

The caller said: "We are the Irish Republican Army. Bombs to go off at all mainline stations in 45 minutes," Churchill-Coleman told a news conference.

He said the warning was passed to the British Transport Police, who were already searching all the main railway terminals.

"You will ... appreciate I am sure the vagueness of the information, the manner in which it was passed, combined with the time lapse involved was quite deliberate," Churchill-Coleman said.

Earlier today, Home Secretary Kenneth Baker said it appeared the Irish Republican Army planted the Victoria station bomb. The explosions came 11 days after the IRA fired three mortar bombs at government offices, including one at the prime minister's official residence.

Iraq's official news agency, however, said in an unattributed report that the bombings might have been in retaliation for Britain's role in the Persian Gulf War.

Man arrested after body discovered

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — A Pasadena man has been arrested after his father found the body of his girlfriend in a rental truck he had driven from California to Pasadena, authorities said.

Police said Sunday that the 34-year-old man gave officers a statement admitting he killed Theresa D. Lawson, 35, during a fight Feb. 11 in their apartment at Redondo Beach, Calif.

Police arrested the man shortly after his father discovered Lawson's body in the rear of a U-Haul truck parked at the father's heavy machinery business.

The man had dated Lawson, a nightclub waitress, for about nine months, homicide Sgt. Wayne Wendel said.

He said the couple had quarreled frequently of late, and a quarrel last Monday escalated into a fight in which the woman was slugged with a flower vase. Wendel said the man told him that when he realized she was dead, "he panicked and didn't know what to do. So he decided to move back to Texas."

The Texas man rented a truck the next day and loaded his belongings into it along with Lawson's body, which he stuffed into a large cardboard box and wrapped in plastic, Wendel said.

The man left Wednesday and drove non-stop to Houston, arriving Friday afternoon.

"His family was expecting him, and his father let him stay at his place of business," Wendel said.

The detective said an employee noticed a foul order coming out of the truck and the man reportedly told him he had two dead dogs in the back. The employee apparently believed him, Wendel said.

Wendel said the man's father became suspicious when Ms. Lawson's mother telephoned him from California, asking about her daughter's whereabouts.

The employee's suspicions were aroused again Sunday when the man got a backhoe and dug a large hole on the side of his father's business, Wendel said.

This time, Wendel said, "the employee told his (the man's) father what had happened. But his father already knew something wasn't right."

The father looked inside the truck, discovered the woman's body and immediately called police. "His father, in fact his whole family, is in a state of shock," Wendel said, "because according to them, (the man) has been nothing but a good kid all his life. His father said, 'It's really unlike this boy to do this.'"

Investigators plan to meet with Harris County prosecutors to determine if the man will be charged here or in California, Wendel said.

Protesters chain themselves to gate to delay pigeon shoot

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The final day of a three-day pigeon shoot had to be delayed after two women from an animal rights group chained themselves to a mechanized gate at the entrance of the National Gun Club.

Kay Lair, 36, a San Antonio interior designer, and Nancy Patterson, a Southwestern Bell employee, both members of Voice For Animals, were arrested about three hours after they began the protest Sunday morning.

The women were charged with blocking a public access, a misdemeanor carrying a maximum fine of $200 and were released on personal recognizance bonds.

John Hollrah, executive director of Voice For Animals, said it was the first time members of the association had attempted to stop a function it deemed abusive to animals by blocking it completely. It also was the first time members of the group suffered arrest for civil disobedience.

"We have disrupted deer hunts in the past, but I believe it is the first time in Texas that a group like ours has attempted to block something completely," Hollrah said.

Sheriff's deputies and San Antonio police officers attempted to convince Lair and Patterson that they need not be arrested.

"You can still make your point without going to jail," said Deputy Sgt. H.A. Martinez. "These men are going to go about their business as soon as you're removed, anyway."

About a dozen other protesters stood by with signs and banners critical of the pigeon shoot but were not arrested.

About three-dozen carloads of angry pigeon-shooters stood by their vehicles lined up on the road leading up to the front gate of the club, which also is headquarters for the National Skeet Shooting Association.

Hollrah provided the media with a videotape he said depicted a pigeon shoot at another gun club in Bexar County in November.

The videotape showed a group of men standing under a pavilion with shotguns. Occasionally one of the shooters would walk up to a line, a pigeon would be catapulted out of a trap on the ground 32 yards away and be shot, the San Antonio Light reported.

Houston hopes that convention spotlight benefits neighborhood

HOUSTON (AP) — Civic and business leaders hope the prospect of thousands of visitors swarming to the Astrodome for the 1992 Republican National Convention will provide the incentive to revitalize the decaying South Main strip.

The gritty stretch of South Main that bisects south Houston is speckled with overgrown vacant lots, abandoned, burned-out buildings and cheap motels that draw prostitutes and crack cocaine dealers.

The four-lane asphalt street, which is near the dome, is divided by a ditch and pitted with potholes. It lacks curbs, sidewalks, gutters and landscaping.

It's an area many Houstonians avoid. But some hope that at least parts of the decaying strip can be cleaned up before the convention.

Before the International Economic Summit last July, volunteer crews and city workers cleaned up city parks, demolished buildings, planted flowers, swept streets and cleared vacant lots. Republican leaders are launching plans now to repeat that performance for the GOP convention.

"We're willing to do whatever to make it the best convention possible," said Andy Abboud, executive director of the Harris County Republican Party. "If that means we're going to have to go out and clean the streets and pick up garbage, then that's what we'll do."

But Saleh Mouasher, manager of Houston Luxury Limousine and Chauffeur Service, said he will steer clear of the area when he shuttles convention delegates to and from their destinations.

"No, we won't go down South Main. We want to give them a good impression of our city," Mouasher told the Houston Chronicle. "If we show them the attractive parts of town, it's a big encouragement for them to come back."

Convention visitors will dine, drink and carouse in more appealing sections of town, including the Galleria area or trendy Montrose.

They'll probably see the vast Texas Medical Center, the splendid churches and the grand old live oak trees that shade South Main near Hermann Park and Rice University.

But further south, the picture changes.

"I would hate to see someone come to Houston and only see the Main Street-Astrodome area," said Sgt. J.W. Collins of the Houston Police Department.

Stephen Fox, a Houston architectural historian, suggests the city should brighten up the South Main corridor with coordinated lighting such as the light spikes that greeted visitors to the George R. Brown Convention Center during the economic summit.

"Rather than doing predictable and ineffectual small-scale improvements, we should take advantage of the qualities we have, our propensity for exaggeration, the sense of big, wide open spaces with small buildings," said Fox, author of an architectural guide to Houston.

"We should do something really brash and imaginative... It's a way to smooth over Houston's rough edges."

Astrograph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Feb. 19, 1991

Don't be discouraged if your big plans are buffeted a bit in their early stages of the year ahead. They'll survive these encounters and should work out in the long run.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Any gains from a collective endeavor must be equally distributed today, or else hard feelings could result. If you're in charge of dispersals, make certain they come out even. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Take whatever positive measures you can to advance your personal interests today, but don't do anything at the expense of others, even if you're dealing with persons who mean little to you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Unless you're very careful today, there is a possibility that the folly of a foolish friend could cost you money. Try not to let others involve you in things that might deplete your resources.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It looks like you might have two sets of rules for governing your behavior today. Your social conduct should win you admirers, but your commercial conduct may not.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may have difficulty recognizing when victory is within your grasp today; you'll do things that could minimize your advantages rather than enhance them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to make do with what you have today instead of begging assistance from others. Your requests might be granted, but if they are, they could have strings attached.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Changes tend to benefit you today, but you might not recognize the advantages they have to offer; instead of flowing with events, you may start swimming against the tide.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone who has your best interest at heart may offer you some very constructive advice today. You'll appreciate its value, yet you may do the opposite of what is recommended.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Just because you know someone who was lucky in a risky endeavor recently doesn't mean you can replicate such good fortune. This individual may have had critical information which you lack.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll be tolerant and considerate with friends today, and they will find you a delightful companion. However, you might not treat family members as leniently, and they could have something else to say.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be careful about whom you criticize in front of a stranger today, because this individual might know the person you are discussing and report your conversation to the offended party — verbatim.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you go shopping today, try not to be an impulsive buyer, especially of big ticket items. Your faculties for discerning a bargain might not be in operating mode.

Duck roasts declarer

By James Jacoby

In December I had the pleasure of spending a week at the South Florida home of the legendary Benito Garozzo. One has to be careful walking through his den to avoid tripping over the numerous World Championship trophies.

This week you readers will have the pleasure of seeing a few of Benito's brilliancies. Today's is from the World Championship in 1963, when I was the victim of the famous Italian Blue Team. But look at the pickup Garozzo personally engineered in defending the hand as East.

Aggressive bidding by South landed him in four spades, doubled by West. A heart was led to Garozzo's ace, and Garozzo returned a spade. Declarer won and played a diamond to dummy's queen. Garozzo ducked. South led dummy's diamond eight, now wondering whether West had started with A-7 alone of diamonds. So declarer put in the nine of diamonds. West won the 10 and played another spade, and declarer wound up losing two diamond tricks and three others for down two. In the other room, against prosaic defense, four spades was set only one trick.

Note that Garozzo's play had no danger attached to it. Declarer was marked with great length in spades and diamonds, so the ace of diamonds would never get away. And ducking would be particularly necessary if West held J-7 of diamonds rather than 10-7.

Fraternity member killed by car

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Trinity University freshman celebrating his selection into a fraternity died after being struck by a car.
 Rolland Christopher Pederson, 18, of San Angelo, was pronounced dead on arrival in the emergency room of Medical Center Hospital Saturday.

The student was struck about 3 a.m. by a car driven by a 19-year-old Boerne woman as he stood on the access road just off an exit ramp from Interstate 10 near Boerne, sheriff's deputies said.
 Pederson was with three senior members of the Trinitarians fraternity when one or more of the passengers announced they were becoming ill, sheriff's deputies said. The driver then pulled onto an access road, where Pederson exited the vehicle.

James Jacoby, bridge columnist for Newspaper Enterprise Association, died on Feb. 8 at Doctors' Hospital in Dallas after a sudden and brief fight against lung cancer. He was 57 years old.

Jacoby was the ninth-ranked Grand Master of the World Bridge Federation and the fifth-ranked Life Master in the American Contract Bridge League, with more than 25,000 points. In 1988, he won the Top 500 title for the most master points collected during the calendar year, with a total of 2,223.15.

Jacoby took over the NEA column from his father, bridge pioneer Oswald Jacoby, who died in 1984. It is syndicated by NEA to several hundred daily newspapers.

Working together, father and son had devised and popularized two bidding conventions: the Jacoby Transfer Bid and the Jacoby Two No-trump Forcing Major-Suit Raise. Both are used by bridge players worldwide.

James Jacoby graduated from Notre Dame and became a stockbroker, but his lifelong interest was bridge.

He started winning national titles in 1955 at the age of 22, in partnership with his father. The son went on to earn a total of 15 national team titles and one national pair title; he was a U.S. bridge team had been in 1954. The Aces were a professional team formed and sponsored by the late Ira J. Corn Jr., and based in Dallas.

Jacoby won the World Mixed Teams title in 1972 in Miami Beach, Fla. He was on the only U.S. team to win the World Team Olympiad crown in 1988, in Venice.

He also earned the silver-medal five times: in the Bermuda Bowls of 1963 (St. Vincent, Italy) and 1973 (Guaruja, Brazil); the Team Olympiad in 1972 (Miami Beach); the Open Pairs in 1966 (Amsterdam); and the Mixed Pairs in 1978 (New Orleans).

Jacoby believed in promoting the game of bridge. He served several times on the American Contract Bridge League's board of directors, and he was a past president of the Dallas Bridge Association. He often gave speeches to organizations such as the American Bridge Teachers' Association.

Away from the bridge table, he was an expert backgammon player, had a love of sports, and was an aficionado of opera.

Firms try to halt beach erosion

SARGENT, Texas (AP) — A coalition seeking to use political pressure to find a way to halt the erosion of Matagorda Peninsula has gained the support of several chemical and refining companies.

The vanishing coastline near this small town threatens commerce on the busy Gulf Intracoastal Waterway.

Sargent residents Bill Templeton and Neill Amsler, executive director of the Victoria Economic Development Corp., created the Coalition to Save the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway to help the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers develop a solution to the beach erosion.

The group was formed to apply political pressure on lawmakers and federal officials to try and convince them that the Sargent situation is an immediate threat to national commerce.

Various statistics show that the beach is losing 30-60 feet per year, The Houston Post reported Sunday. At one spot near Sargent, only 423 feet separate the Gulf of Mexico and the canal.

Templeton said he believes the peninsula will be breached by 1995, but the Corps of Engineers predicts the Gulf will meet the canal around the year 2000.

"Three years ago, they were telling us in Sargent, 'We realize you have a problem and we hope you can do something about it,'"

Templeton said. "But it's gotten to the point now where industry is saying, 'Maybe it's not just your problem anymore.'"

The port authorities along the canal also have agreed to participate.

Companies use the intracoastal canal to receive raw materials for use as feedstocks in their plants or to distribute products.

Breaking Up Bad Marriage Is the Right Thing to Do

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1991 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A writer signed "From the Tall Corn State" asked, "Are there any other children who want to thank their parents for splitting up?"

Count me in. When my father moved out of the house, it was the biggest favor he could have done for our family. He should have done it a lot sooner. I was a teen-ager when Dad moved out. He and Mom never got along. After he and Mom divorced, believe it or not, they became good friends. They both met other people and eventually married. Their only regret was waiting so long to end a marriage that was all wrong from the beginning.

So tell "From the Tall Corn State" she is not alone — there are many children who are glad their parents had the courage to split. Sign this...

FOUR KIDS FROM THE LONE STAR STATE

DEAR KIDS: I received a surprising number of letters from grown (and some not yet grown) children voicing the same sentiments. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: My parents finally divorced after 22 years of "staying together for the sake of the kids."

They were just kids themselves when they eloped, and when they finally grew up, they grew in different directions. I don't believe people should be condemned to a lifetime of unhappiness because of one mistake made when they were too young to know any better. By that time, they wasted a lot of good years. As I look back, I realize that their staying together while we were growing up was no favor to us. We were affected more by their unhappiness together than we were by their divorce.

I wish parents would be more honest with their children instead of trying to pretend that everything is OK, when in reality it's a mess. I can still remember my sister and I pulling the covers over our heads at night to drown out the yelling and cursing of those late-night family fights.

I'll bet you get a lot of mail on this subject.

ALSO FROM THE TALL CORN STATE

DEAR ABBY: Speaking of staying together for the sake of the kids, I think our parents probably hold the record. They split up at least a dozen times in my recollection. They were actually divorced twice during their first 15 years of marriage, but got married again. My mother said she'd rather live with the devil she knew than the devil she didn't know. Theirs was a very poor example of what a marriage should be.

They had all kinds of excuses for getting back together after they split. There were four daughters and two sons in our family, and my mother kept reconciling because she thought every father owed it to his daughter to walk her down the aisle. After each wedding, there was a big fight and Father moved out of the house for a while.

Deep down, we kids always had the feeling our folks tried to stay together for our sakes, which laid a terrible guilt trip on us. If I could give young couples one piece of advice, I would tell them not to have any children until they were absolutely certain they could get along with each other. Staying together for the sake of the kids is a big mistake. A lot of couples should split for the sake of the kids. And stay split.

If you print this, please don't say where it came from.

Northwestern medical student and accused boyfriend's romance ordinary

CHICAGO (AP) — Lynda Singhsinsuk disappeared, last April from her medical school dormitory room. Two small blood spots on the carpet were the only clue to her fate.

But then her body was found in a shallow grave half a country away, and her jilted boyfriend, an attorney from her hometown, was charged with murder.

The nine-month case at first led authorities to suspect suicide. Then they thought she had run away. But they and a private investigator from El Paso, Texas, uncovered evidence of foul play, and they zeroed in on her ex-boyfriend after trailing him through Chicago, Southern Illinois, Thailand and Arizona.

It all began April 16, when 24-year-old Singhsinsuk, described as shy and studious, disappeared from Northwestern University's downtown campus, leaving her keys, car and wallet behind.

Police could not determine if the dried blood spots on her carpet were hers, or if they were the result of violence.

They theorized Singhsinsuk had been despondent after ending a six-year relationship with 30-year-old Donald J. Weber Jr., a former fellow student, and that she had drowned herself in Lake Michigan, just across Lake Shore Drive from her dorm.

Police searched the shore for several days, but time passed and her body did not surface.

Authorities then thought Singhsinsuk simply may have run away.

Family members believed the woman would not have left without telling anyone. They offered a $30,000 reward for information leading to her safe return.

"The chances she was alive were one in a million, but we still hoped," said her father, Dr. Sompong Singhsinsuk, a radiologist who had moved his wife and two children from Thailand to the small Southern Illinois town of Robinson when Lynda was a girl.

Chicago Police later asked a federal violent crimes task force to help track Weber, who was working in New York and had become a prime suspect.

A federal task force warrant says that a month before Singhsinsuk's disappearance, Weber had asked the family for $20,000 in return for not releasing nude photos he had taken of the woman. The photographs were mailed Feb. 10, 1990, to several dozen Northwestern students after the family refused to pay, Long said.

And police say that on Christmas Day — eight months after Singhsinsuk disappeared — Weber again tried to extort money from the family, telephoning to say he would reveal the woman's whereabouts in return for $50,000.

The family, meanwhile, had hired private investigator Jay J. Armes of El Paso.

Armes said the Christmas Day phone call and telephone records of other calls helped him learn Weber was in Thailand. He searched there.

"It was like trying to find a needle in an ocean," Armes said. "We actually found him out on the street."

Armes said Weber told him in detail about Singhsinsuk's disappearance and death. Weber also made a crude map so Armes could go to a wooded area near Flagstaff, Ariz., and search for the body, the investigator said.

"I couldn't find the body because (the area) was all under snow," said Armes, who then persuaded Weber to return to the United States.

"I told him he had to help me out because I would follow him through life and stick to him closer than his underwear," Armes said.

On Jan. 26, authorities who had set up a stake out in the woods moved in and arrested Weber after he helped dig up the body. Medical examiners said Singhsinsuk had been shot at least six times in the heart.

While no one is sure about the motive in the slaying, Armes said Weber complained that Singhsinsuk had lied about wanting to marry him.

"It was very simple — she rejected him," said Bob Long, a spokesman for the FBI's Chicago office.

Friends and teachers of the young woman say Singhsinsuk and Weber had an ordinary romance that had begun in 1984 when they were students at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Though they had known each other for years in the same small town, they did not date until she was a freshman and he was a senior.

"He was the kind of guy most ladies fall for," said a mutual friend of the couple who asked not to be named. "He wasn't crude or crass, and he was always sensitive to the feelings of other people."

School chums said Weber was methodical and analytical and delighted in solving complicated problems. He was a distance runner in high school and helped lead the Robinson team to the state championship in 1978.

Weber is one of five children in a family that runs a successful real estate and travel business in Robinson.

At UI, the couple often dined on Thai meals at Weber's apartment, friends said. But the relationship grew strained after Weber moved to New York to attend law school and later accepted a job with an accounting firm there.

Singhsinsuk broke off the relationship in the first week of 1990 after she started dating one of her lab partners at Northwestern.

"They grew apart," said Sarah Timmapuri, a fellow medical school student.

Gonzalez tries to stop deportation process

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Texas lawmaker is fighting attempts to deport a former Salvadoran Army official who testified that American officials knew of some death squad activities in his native land.

U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez has been asked to protect Cesar Vielman Joya Martinez from being deported to El Salvador by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Because Martinez has publicly testified his claims of U.S. military knowledge of Salvadoran death squads, deportation looms as a motive to silence the defector, said Gonzalez, D-San Antonio.

"The government is embarrassed. The American policies in Central America are bankrupt," Gonzalez said.

"We know if this guy goes back to El Salvador, he's going to be executed," said Gonzalez. "There is no question about it. I don't think the (U.S.) government would waste a minute — they wouldn't blink an eye — if it would help out their cause."

Martinez remained at the Atascosa County jail at Jourdanton, 30 miles south of San Antonio, under an INS order, a sheriff's spokeswoman said Sunday.

Attorney Daniel Alcorn asked for the help of Gonzalez and former President Jimmy Carter to protect Martinez.

Gonzalez wrote Friday to U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh and Richard Casillas, INS district director in San Antonio, warning the government not to summarily deport Martinez to face what the congressman called certain death in El Salvador.

However, Casillas labeled charges that the government planned to summarily deport Martinez as ludicrous.

"We do not summarily deport," said Casillas. "Everybody will have their day in court. That's the law, and we will follow it."

But he said he wouldn't discuss specifics of the case, or why Martinez was suddenly moved last Wednesday from a Bureau of Prisons facility in Eden to INS custody at the Atascosa County Jail.

Jail officials provide space under contract to federal agencies.

Court testimony showed the 28-year-old Martinez was an officer in the 1st Brigade Army of El Salvador, assigned to a G2 intelligence unit.

Sources in Washington told the San Antonio Express-News that Martinez fled El Salvador when he bungled an execution of a human rights worker and feared the army would retaliate. He fled to Harlingen, where he applied for political asylum in 1989.

The case was moved to Washington, D.C., where Martinez again filed for political asylum on May 29, 1990, records show. While filing for asylum, Martinez was arrested when a fingerprint check turned up a prior deportation from the United States in 1983.

Winters buys home

MONTECITO, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Jonathan Winters and his wife, Eileen, have bought a 6,000-square-foot French Normandy-style house with an ocean view and guest house in this community near Santa Barbara.

Winters, 65, who plays the father of a high school principal in ABC-TV's new comedy series, "Davis Rules," paid about $2.5 million for the 3-acre site, real estate agents told the Los Angeles Times in a report published Sunday.

The Winters are staying in a home they already own on the same block while the new one is renovated. Their chief residence is in Toluca Lake.

Woman's complaining nets money for dilapidated area

HOUSTON (AP) — Gladys House complains a lot, but it has proved to be an effective way of obtaining money for her dilapidated Fourth Ward neighborhood.

Almost every big bank and savings and loan in Houston has lent or given money to Freedmen's Town Association, a non-profit community organization that sponsors improvement projects in the poor neighborhood.

Ms. House has obtained the money by using a law to file complaints with regulatory agencies that can halt banks' expansion plans until her concerns are addressed.

The Fourth Ward, near downtown Houston, is filled with rickety shacks. Most of the businesses moved out years ago, fires have destroyed whole rows of homes and much of the property is uninhabitable.

Armed with an old law book and a home computer, she can delay banks' mergers, block their new branches and even make installing an automatic teller machine difficult.

She uses a map of bank regulatory agencies tacked above the table to determine where to send her complaints.

Her demands? In return for removing the complaints, she wants the institutions to bring money to her association.

In 1989, Ms. House said she discovered the benefits of the Community Reinvestment Act, a law that requires financial institutions to support all neighborhoods in their areas.

If an organization from a low-income neighborhood writes a regulator and complains that an institution is not meeting its community reinvestment requirements, regulators will hold up any applications the bank has pending until the matter is resolved.

Regulators started cracking down on violations of the law a couple of years ago, and that renewed interest gave Ms. House ammunition.

Two DISD board members side with plaintiffs in case

DALLAS (AP) — Two school board members have been working on behalf of plaintiffs in a federal desegregation lawsuit against the Dallas Independent School District, an attorney said.

Attorney E. Brice Cunningham billed the DISD $67,022 for three years of work, including more than $4,000 for telephone conferences and meetings with Kathryn Gilliam and Yvonne Ewell, both black board members.

Cunningham represents the Black Coalition to Maximize Education. The school board agreed to pay Cunningham's bill but some members protested.

"How can a board member sit in executive session and listen to the strategy of the school board and then turn around and work with an outside attorney to oppose the board strategy?" asked board member Ed Grant.

But Ms. Gilliam said she doesn't plan to limit her conferences with Cunningham, whom she described as an important legal voice for the black community.

"It will not change," said Ms. Gilliam. "I personally intend to contact Mr. Cunningham whenever I jolly well please." Ms. Ewell confirmed Sunday that the attorney's fee was paid, but it was for work done some time ago.

"What I am most disgusted about is that it appears from this that we had lengthy discussion during board meetings," she said. "But that did not happen. We have not had any discussion at board meetings recently about Mr. Cunningham's fees."

Officials said most conferences with Cunningham occurred during the board's 1988 and 1989 debates over whether to ask U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders to dismiss the 20-year-old lawsuit, which led to DISD desegregation.

Freud's ideas called 'outmoded assumptions'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sigmund Freud, father of psychoanalysis, made exaggerated claims of cures, drew conclusions with little evidence and generally ignored basic principles of scientific research.

Those are the conclusions of experts who have re-examined the fundamental theories and work of Freud and now believe the Austrian physician may have been more slick salesman than scientist. Their studies were prepared for presentation today at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"The kind of evidence we have now is extremely critical of Freud," said Frank J. Sulloway, a professor of science history at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

One of Freud's major works is an accounting of how he treated six patients. The work, said Sulloway, is considered a pillar of the whole concept of psychoanalysis, the so-called "talking cure" for the mentally ill or anxious.

Yet, of the six case histories, said Sulloway, recent research has shown "one involved a patient who fled therapy in disgust, two actually were not treated by Freud and another involved no real therapy."

Freud claimed to have cured two of the patients, yet when one was interviewed at length in later years the cure was found to be "a complete misrepresentation of the facts," said Sulloway.

The case histories, he said, "are rampant with censorship, distortions, highly dubious reconstructions and exaggerated clinical claims."

Freud lived from 1856 to 1939.

Thousands apply for movie roles

DALLAS (AP) — A casting call for the latest Oliver Stone movie was more like a cattle drive, with an estimated 10,000 would-be actors vying to be extras in the film on John F. Kennedy's assassination.

But the turnout pleased the man hired to organize auditions for the yet-untitled film. About 1,000 people an hour responded Saturday to the casting call at the Dallas Convention Center.

"We have some really good and after his death some of his patients were interviewed. From this and other research, flaws and faults in Freud's work became known.

Sulloway said Freud failed to follow basic science principles of openness that permits other scientists to evaluate research and results. Instead, like a high priest, his treatment and training methods were "a backward step... based on authority and secrecy that was typical of alchemy (a medieval science)."

Of Freudian psychoanalysis Sulloway said: "It's not a stuff here," said Kevin Howard, a veteran of "Talk Radio," another Stone movie. "We were looking for a lot of Texas people, especially people who were here when Kennedy was shot."

Declining to elaborate on details of the upcoming movie, Howard noted that "the rumor is that Kevin Costner is going to star, but we can't confirm anything yet."

science. It's like a religion."

Morris Eagle, a psychologist at York University near Toronto, said that the whole idea of psychoanalysis has never been subjected to the rigorous evaluation of controlled studies that are the routine scientific method in other areas of medicine and of science in general.

In accepted medical practice, a method of treatment is tested vigorously against other methods before it is generally accepted as an appropriate way to treat patients. It, in effect, has to prove to promote cures or relieve symptoms.

Yet, said Eagle, this has never been done for psychoanalysis.

Millions of people now spend years visiting psychotherapists who try to relieve mental illness or anxiety by probing the patient's psyche through talk and discussion.

Williams contributors jump on 'late train' for Richards

DALLAS (AP) — Since being elected governor, Ann Richards has received almost $150,000 in contributions from donors who had previously supported gubernatorial opponent Clayton Williams.

At least 60 supporters — both individuals and political action committees — who helped Williams outspend Richards gave her more than $148,000 shortly after the Democrat was elected in November, The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story Sunday.

"I basically did not want to be on her out list," Donald Bonham of Houston, chairman of the Fiesta Mart stores, said.

Before the general election, Bonham had supported Republican Williams with contributions totaling $25,000. But after Richards won, he gave $10,000 to help retire her campaign debt.

"I felt like she was going to be in office for four years and we would be dealing with her, and we certainly wanted to show her we had her best interest and wanted to let her know we would support her in her governorship," Bonham said.

Others joining "the late train," as the post-election windfall is known in Austin political circles, included lobbyist Billy Clayton, a close Williams adviser and major financial contributor who sent Richards a check for $1,000 after the election, the newspaper reported.

Clayton had given $9,450 to Williams before the general election, according to the report.

Using campaign finance reports filed with the Texas secretary of state, The News reviewed contributions of at least $500 in cash or in-kind contributions reported by Richards and Williams between Jan. 1, 1989, and Jan. 1, 1991.

Many of the late-train donations were made at a private club in Austin with a post-election fund-raiser for Richards, who was outspent in the contest by the wealthy Midland businessman.

Richards did not return a telephone call Sunday by The Associated Press. But a spokesman said the contributions are a sign of political good will, not an attempt to buy influence.

Andrews Classic...

SHS girls take 2nd at Andrews

ANDREWS — Kim Duncan paced the Snyder Lady Tigers with her 94-88-182 total as SHS finished second in the Andrews Girls Golf Classic held at Andrews Country Club over the weekend.

Host Andrews captured first place honors with a team-total 711 off rounds of 349 and 362. Snyder's girls carded a 404 on Friday and improved to a 375 in Saturday's final round for a combined 779.

"The girls did a great job against a tough field," said Snyder coach Milton Ham. "They improved dramatically from the first day to the second. I think they'll be real competitive by the time district gets here."

Andrews, defending Class 4A state champion, was led by medalist Lisa McQuatters' 81-85-166 and second medalist Andi Lehman's 86-86-172.

Third place, individually, fell to Abilene High's Linda Dulude who registered rounds of 83 and 90 for a 173 effort.

Amy Armstrong finished just six strokes behind Duncan for Snyder. She notched a 100-88-188 finish followed by Wendy Miller's 99-101-200, a 111-98-209 from Stacie Cline and Ginny Fenton's 121-124-245.

Fenton also took Par3 Closest to the Pin honors at the tournament.

Third position in the team standings went to Andrews' B team which recorded a 405 first round and followed with a Saturday 427 for an 832 total.

Abilene High took fourth place with a 417-423-840 followed by Monahans' 424-430-854 and a 47-449-919 from Midland High.

The Lady Tigers will take their clubs to Ft. Stockton for an appearance there Friday and Saturday.

The Snyder boys' team will also be in Ft. Stockton this weekend.

On March 1 the Lady Tigers will host the Snyder Girls Invitational at Snyder Country Club.

They will travel to Brownfield on March 4 then to Abilene March 8 before ending their non-district schedule at Hereford March 15

SWC basketball...

Cougars upset 'Horns, 82-73

HOUSTON (AP) — If Byron Smith wasn't 100 percent against Texas, the Longhorns don't want to see him fully healthy.

Smith hit 9 of 15 shots from the field and scored 29 points to break out of his shooting slump, leading Houston to an 82-73 victory Sunday over No. 24 Texas, snapping the Longhorns' 10-game winning streak.

"I wasn't 100 percent today, but I was close enough that I could shoot somewhat comfortably," Smith said. "I wanted the ball today. I was letting the offense come to me instead of forcing things like the last two games."

In the last two games, Smith hit

2 of 18 shots from the field in losses to Arkansas and Rice. He was 0-for-11 against Arkansas.

Houston boosted its chances of earning a spot in the NCAA post-season tournament with a 15-8 overall record and 7-5 in Southwest Conference games.

Texas (17-6, 11-2) had hoped to keep its streak alive until March 3 when it hosts No. 3 Arkansas, unbeaten in SWC play, with a chance to tie for the SWC title.

Smith, recovering from an il-ness that slowed him against Rice, and the Cougars jumped on the Longhorns from the start of the game and allowed them to lead only briefly. A free throw by Dexter Cambridge gave Texas a 32-32 tie at halftime.

The Longhorns battled to their biggest lead of the game, 61-56, with 9:50 left to play but Smith, who hit four of seven 3-point baskets, sank a 3-pointer with 7:30 to play, giving Houston the lead for good.

"Now we have to keep playing," Smith said. "Every game is a must win. It seemed we have the momentum and we're going in the right direction. All we have to do is win four in a row."

Houston closes out the regular season at Texas Tech and Texas Christian and hosts Southern Methodist and Texas A&M.

Locksley Collie led Texas with 24 points and Joey Wright added 22, although he was hampered by four fouls late in the game.

"They were keying on him (Wright) down the stretch," Texas coach Tom Penders said. "We had other guys open (Cambridge and Courtney Jeans) but today they didn't hit their shots. In other games this year they have."

Alvaro Teheran scored 22 points for Houston, including 10 consecutive free throws in the second half, as the Cougars boosted their record to 15-8, 7-5.

The Cougars hit 23 of 28 free throws, including 20 of 23 in the second half.

"Free throws were a big key to the game," Teheran said. "I've been shooting a lot of free throws after practice. After the Rice game we got together and decided to do things a lot better."

The question is, who's going to stop the Razorbacks?

Arkansas is 12-0 in SWC play with games left at SMU, at Texas A&M, at home against Baylor on Feb. 26, and on the road at Texas in a nationally televised (ABC) game.

Earnhardt crashes...

Irvan streaks to Daytona win

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Irrepressible. There's just no other way to describe the new Daytona 500 winner, Ernie Earnhardt.

He wasn't supposed to win it. According to most of the so-called experts, that honor was to go to Dale Earnhardt. Or maybe Davey Allison. Or possibly Kyle Petty or Darrell Waltrip.

But Irvan? All he had going in to Sunday's race at Daytona International Speedway were one Winston Cup victory, that on a short track at Bristol, Tenn., last August.

He did have a strong second-place finish — behind Earnhardt — in last Thursday's 125-mile qualifying race, and most of the 145,000 spectators at Daytona International Speedway figured the 32-year-old driver from Modesto, Calif., could do no better on Sunday.

Irvan tried all week to tell people he was a legitimate contender. Nobody was listening.

"It just proves people better listen to me next time," Irvan said with a laugh.

The stocky young man with a thatch of black hair and a thick black mustache gives the impression of enjoying life to the fullest. Since joining the top-notch Morgan-McClure racing team, he's shown signs of blossoming into a driving star.

He won three poles and that Bristol race for McClure last season, but Sunday's victory in stock-car racing's biggest event puts him in with the big boys. The Daytona victory that put $233,000 in his pocket came at the expense of Earnhardt, who Irvan said in the glow of victory was "an inspiration to me."

It was Earnhardt, whose luck in NASCAR's crown jewel has been nothing short of awful, who Irvan rocketed past to take the lead on the 194th of 200 laps.

Earnhardt, who finished fifth last year after dominating the race for 155 laps when his tire shredded one mile from the end, fell back into a side-by-side duel for second place with Davey

Allison on Sunday.

With Irvan watching wide-eyed in his rearview mirror, Earnhardt slipped sideways, slamming into Allison and the two spun wildly off the track and out of contention.

The ensuing caution flag, the ninth of the day, lasted to the end of the race, giving Irvan an enjoyable ride to the checkered flag.

"I remember looking up and seeing them behind me and thinking, 'They're going to get in line and run me down.' So I just tried to run as hard as I could hoping they wouldn't catch me."

"When I looked in my mirror and saw what was happening behind me, I thought, 'This can't be true.'"

"It was coming down to the finish and we were trying to do what we could do," Earnhardt said. "He (Allison) wouldn't give me any room at all. He was trying to run door-to-door right down against me and it was taking air off me pretty bad."

"But this was the Daytona 500 and you race to win. I'm living for the 1992 Daytona 500. It's a long time off, but we made it back to this one after last year."

Sterling Marlin wound up second, followed by Joe Ruttman, Rick Mast and Earnhardt, who recovered from the late spin to finish the race. Pole-starter Allison wound up against a dirt bank and placed 15th.

Petty and Waltrip, both of whom led the race several times and appeared capable of winning it, were eliminated by crashes.

The winner, driving a Chevrolet Lumina, averaged 148.148 mph.

Blake putts to PGA crown

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The putter, Jay Don Blake said, had been killing him.

"I'd just got tired of missing all those short birdie putts, reaching the par-5's in two, then 3-putting, playing well and getting nothing out of it," Blake said.

So he killed the putter, the one he'd used since his high school days in St. George, Utah. He drowned it in a pond at Palm Springs last Monday.

"If I'd still had that Palm Springs putter, I might have kept on missing putts and messing up and not won today," he said after a final-round 67 produced a two-stroke victory with a 20-under-par 268 total at Torrey Pines.

LINING IT UP — Scotty Scott lines up a putt on the ninth hole in Saturday action of the Snyder Country Club Groundhog Golf Tournament. The event, which ran Saturday and Sunday, was won by the team of Larry Anderson and Tommy Lay who turned in a 36-hole 133. (SDN Staff Photo)

Health experts say...

Sometimes medical studies neglect women

DALLAS (AP) — Many medical researchers have excluded women from their studies or ignored physiological differences between the sexes because women have not complained, health experts say.

Organizations ranging from the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues to Women's Health Action and Mobilization, a New York activist group, have begun in recent months to demand an end to what they call a sex bias in medical research.

The groups are challenging scientists' argument that women's hormonal changes make them too difficult to study.

"We haven't made a proper statement," said Nancy Brinker, founder of the Dallas-based Susan G. Komen Foundation, which has raised more than $2.6 million for breast cancer research. "Women tend to hang back. Women tend to suffer gladly," she said.

A Texas psychiatrist who developed a two-tiered regimen of lithium doses to compensate for manic-depressive women's hormonal changes said her work was poorly received by her male colleagues.

Dr. Jean Hamilton, who believed that manic-depressive women's symptoms grew worse before their menstrual periods, suggested that the relationship of hormonal changes to medication be studied.

But her boss at the National Institute of Mental Health was less than enthusiastic, she said. Ms. Hamilton went public on the sexism issue in a 1983 article for a medical journal.

"I took the beating that is to be expected for whistle-blowers," said Ms. Hamilton, now an associate psychiatry professor at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

"I was isolated. My work was belittled, even within NIMH. Basically, I had just been told that my research would not be supported any further at NIMH, and so my investigation was stopped in 1983," she told The Dallas Morning News.

U.S. Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., a chairwoman of the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues, said the situation has not improved much since then.

"If we did only research on women and assumed it was applicable to men, people would be upset," said Ms. Schroeder. "I think it's very interesting we're doing it the other way around and no one says anything."

But some scientists say studying men is often cheaper and easier than studying women, and much of the information learned can be applied to both sexes.

Candidates vie for attention as race nears climax

PHOENIX (AP) — Voters pick a new governor Feb. 26, though it's hard to tell. With the Gulf War and a state corruption scandal filling front pages and the evening news, the state's first gubernatorial runoff is all but unnoticed.

Republican Fife Symington, a millionaire developer, faces Democrat Terry Goddard, son of Samuel P. Goddard II, a former Arizona governor and the current state party chairman.

Democratic Gov. Rose Mofford, who completed the term of impeached former Gov. Evan Mecham, chose not to run.

Goddard, 43, was mayor of Phoenix from 1984 until he stepped down last year to run for governor. Symington, 45, was a political unknown when he entered the race in 1989.

The race is close, as it was in the Nov. 6 election.

Symington won 49.7 percent of the vote then and Goddard had 49.2 percent. Several write-in candidates split the remaining votes. State law requires a runoff in the absence of a majority.

Since then, two recent polls favor Symington to win by 9 and 10 percentage points, respectively. But a third survey found the race too close to call.

Cut your own taxes and save

Tax shelters must earn their keep

By George W. Smith

Only a few years ago, taxpayers, with few exceptions, could use deductions from an activity to offset income from any other activity. Similarly, most tax credits could be used to offset tax on income. Often this was accomplished by the taxpayer's investing in tax shelters.

Congress determined that extensive tax shelter activity contributed to public concerns that the tax system was unfair. In response to those concerns, Congress enacted special rules for tax shelters.

Investments in passive activities (formerly called tax shelters) that taxpayers acquired before Oct. 23, 1986, are eligible for a gradual phase-in of the passive activity loss and credit limitations. Because of the phase-in provision, a certain percentage of these passive activity losses and credits will be allowed to offset non-passive income (wages, salaries, commissions, etc.) until the phase-in of the limitations is complete in 1991.

The percentage of loss allowed for each year in the phase-in period is as follows:

Year deductible	Percentage
1987	65 percent
1988	40 percent
1989	20 percent
1990	10 percent
1991	0 percent

Losses and credits from passive activities, such as investments and low-income housing or increasing research credits, acquired after Oct. 22, 1986, can only offset income and taxes generated by income in passive activities. Passive activity losses and credits not allowed in the tax year may be carried forward and added to next year's income or loss.

Rental income and losses. Rental income is accounted for on Schedule E, Supplemental Income and Loss, of Form 1040. The income may be from an apartment, mobile home, condo-

Police, DPS note arrests

An incident between two women was investigated by police Sunday. At 8:46 p.m., both parties were at police headquarters to file complaints. Two separate reports for Class A assault and a report for Class B criminal mischief were filed. No arrests were made.

At 12:24 p.m., Marla Peterson requested an officer at 500 31st St. in reference to damage done to the residence. A report for Class B criminal mischief was filed.

David Pena Jr. of 307 32nd St. advised police at 7:50 a.m. that someone had broken into his daughter's car. A report for Class B criminal mischief was filed.

The weekend's only arrest occurred at 6 p.m. Saturday in the 2300 block of Ave. I. A 27-year-old male was arrested for driving while intoxicated and no driver's license. He was transported to Scurry County Jail.

The Department of Public Safety logged a DWI arrest at 12:46 a.m. Sunday. A DPS trooper charged a 46-year-old male with DWI and transported him to the county jail.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 46-year-old woman diagnosed with premature ventricular contractions. An echocardiogram revealed mitral valve prolapse. My doctor says the condition is not life-threatening, yet after hearing of the death of a young basketball player who suffered from arrhythmias, I'm terrified this could happen to me. Now I refuse to even take a brisk walk. How dangerous is my condition?

DEAR READER: Premature ventricular contractions are extra heartbeats. They are exceedingly common and affect most people once in awhile. They are harmless and do not require treatment unless they are frequent or occur in long bursts that lead to lightheadedness, shortness of breath or other symptoms.

PVCs are not usually associated with mitral valve prolapse, a weakness of the mitral valve that causes a murmur (extra heart sound). Rather, patients with MVP are more prone to supraventricular tachycardia, prolonged episodes of rapid heart rate due to electrical impulses arising in cardiac tissue above the ventricles. This is usually treated with beta-blockers, such as Inderal.

If your physician has pronounced you in good health and has judged your PVCs to be harmless, I believe you can relax and engage in normal activity. Brisk walking and other exercise is entirely appropriate for you.

Young athletes occasionally die unexpectedly and tragically from heart irregularities. In most cases, such arrhythmias are caused by unsuspected cardiac abnormalities, especially disorders in the heart's conduction system. Death can occur during periods of strenuous physical activity. Fortunately, such devastating events are extremely rare, given the huge number of young people who engage in competitive sports.

Also, the key appears to be the high level of activity, a level at which you, as a 46-year-old woman, will probably not participate. Of course, if you were to choose to exercise strenuously — long-distance running, for example — you should check with your doctor and, perhaps, have a stress test to make sure your heart is sound.

However, given the information you provide, I believe your condition is not serious enough to warrant fear and apprehension. Because you are interested in preventing heart disease, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Eating Right For A Healthy Heart." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their names and addresses to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Simon well liked

NEW YORK (AP) — Playwright Neil Simon reaped the fruits of Broadway hits, but 30 years of commercial success isn't the kind of respect he likes to bank on, he says.

"I know how the public sees me because people are always coming up to me and saying, 'Thanks for the good times,'" Simon, 63, told Sunday's New York Times Magazine.

minium, vacation home, commercial building or from a rented portion of your own residence.

Net Losses. It is not an uncommon occurrence to end up with a net loss from rental operations, particularly in the first few years of ownership. Often a loss occurs as a direct result of the large interest payments on the mortgage. A net loss could also occur in a year of frequent and costly repair the passive loss rules are carried over to subsequent years and may be claimed in full when:

- 1) There is passive income to offset the passive losses, or
- 2) There is a sale or other disposition of the entire interest in the property.

Simply stated, beginning in 1991, if there is no current passive income, passive losses, such as rental losses, cannot be deducted (subject to the following paragraph).

Tax break for rental activities — or, all is not loss. If you actively participated in your rental activity, $25,000 of rental losses in excess of rental income may be deducted if your adjusted gross income does not exceed $100,000. For taxpayers with adjusted gross income over $100,000, the $25,000 special allowance is reduced by one-half of the excess, so that a loss is not allowed once adjusted gross income reaches $150,000.

To actively participate in a rental activity, you must own at least 10 percent of such activity throughout the year. Also, you must participate in the making of management decisions or arranging for others to provide services (such as repairs) in a significant sense. Management decisions may involve, for example, approving new tenants, deciding rental terms and approving capital or repair expenditures.

If you have passive losses from one or more activities, you must complete Form 8582, Passive Activity Loss Limitations, and attach it to your tax return.

Abilene Christian University...

Heston receives honorary degree

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — As Moses, actor Charlton Heston received the Ten Commandments in the movie by the same title in 1956.

His performance in "Ben Hur" earned him an Academy Award for best actor in 1959.

This weekend, he got an honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree from Abilene Christian University.

ACU president William J. Teague presented the honor during a private dinner Saturday at the Abilene Civic Center, during which Heston read selections from the Old Testament book of Exodus.

"Mr. and Mrs. Heston represent the family in American celebrity life in ways consistent with the thrust of the university," Teague said.

Heston's wife, Lydia Clarke, received a special certificate of appreciation that read: "No degree of true greatness in this life is achieved without love, support, companionship and abiding confidence."

Heston amused the crowd of more than 600 after he clumsily put his doctoral hood on backward.

When the audience began to snicker and ACU board chairman H. Lynn Packer quipped, "That's OK. You can wear it as a bib or a hood," Heston responded, "One thing I should know how to do is wear funny suits."

Noting that his wife has the couple's only college degree, he said, "You see before you a deeply uneducated man. For that reason, among others, I'm especially grateful for this honor."

Heston began developing a relationship with ACU in 1983 when he was asked to speak at the university. He also viewed that year's homecoming musical, "The Sound of Music."

In 1985 his wife, a renowned photographer, exhibited her photographs in ACU's Shore Art Gallery, her only exhibit in Texas to date. The Hestons also attended the school's 1985 musical "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers."

Heston has more than 50 movies, including "The Greatest Story Ever Told" "El Cid," "Midway," "Khartoum" and "The Omega Man."

V-22 Osprey project survives opposition

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Persian Gulf War may give a needed boost to the beleaguered V-22 Osprey, which likely won't face a battle for survival in Congress this year, military analysts say.

That's despite the tilt-rotor aircraft's absence from the president's defense budget for the second year in a row and a battle for congressional funding in 1990.

In the previous budget battle, Osprey supporters in Washington called in the Marines, landed an early version of the craft on the Capitol grounds and passed out toy models, T-shirts and caps.

"I think the V-22 will come back this year," said Natalie Goldring, an analyst for the Defense Budget Project, a Washington research group.

"After the Persian Gulf, people will be looking more closely at systems that aid a rapid response to a crisis."

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has targeted the on-again, off-again V-22 for cancellation, saying the craft is too costly to fit into the picture of the scaled-back military he envisions.

But intensive lobbying last year secured $165 million in procurement money from Congress and another $238 million for development.

Rep. Pete Geren, D-Fort Worth, said he is confident that Congress will fund the program for the second year in a row, despite Cheney's opposition.

"I feel very good at this point about our situation," Geren said. "We were able to assemble a coalition last year that represents a majority. I'm optimistic that congressionally, this will be a good year for the Osprey."

The Marine Corps hopes to buy about 500 Ospreys, at a cost of $33 billion, to replace an aging fleet of transport helicopters. The V-22 can fly twice as fast and twice as far as conventional transport helicopters, and can carry twice as many troops.

"The V-22's range characteristics and mobility are attractive," said Ms. Goldring. "There were even rumors that Secretary Cheney was going to give in to the Hill and give some (research and development) money even if he didn't give procurement funds."

But Cheney has delayed giving funds to Osprey contractors, Bell Helicopter Textron of Fort Worth and Boeing Helicopters of Ridley Township, Pa., while working to kill the program.

Rep. Curt Weldon, a Republican from the Philadelphia suburbs, wants funds appropriated for the tilt-rotor craft to be spent soon.

"The administration has thought they could be successful in canceling the program — that by dragging this out long enough, the contractors would become convinced that it's not worth keeping their investment in," Weldon said.

In the interim, Bell and Boeing have continued tests on the six V-

22 prototypes built so far. The tilt-rotor craft made its first shipboard landing in December, officials said.

Bell, which wants $1 billion from Congress in fiscal 1992, wants to pursue the start-up of V-22 production in the next year. But the defense contractor is not sure how long it can afford to continue its fight for the Osprey, said Dick Spivey, the director of Osprey business development at Bell.

He estimated Bell has already invested $100 million of its own money in the program and that Boeing has done the same.

New team to coach

FOUNTAIN VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda has a new team to coach: Operation Home Front.

Lasorda was named national chairman of the program, which will organize sports activities for children with parents serving in the Persian Gulf.

Woman and maid of honor die in wreck

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Eighteen hours before her wedding, an Arlington woman and her maid of honor were killed when a truck collided with their car as they were leaving the rehearsal dinner.

Traci Gayle Kiser, 23, and Tracy Elizabeth Johnson, 23, were killed shortly after they left the dinner in this Dallas-Fort Worth suburb Friday night.

Funeral services were scheduled at 2 p.m. today for Miss Kiser, who was scheduled to marry her high school sweetheart Saturday. She and Ms. Johnson, of Dunwoody, Ga., were pronounced dead at Arlington Memorial Hospital after the 11 p.m. wreck.

Traci Kiser's fiancé, Michael McBride of Arlington, said the couple had been planning their wedding for months.

"I feel like my whole life has been taken from me," McBride said Saturday. "All the plans we made and all the dreams we had are gone. Just like that. Gone. And I'll never have them back."

Texas Rangers catcher Geno Petralli and third baseman Steve Buechele, who happened upon the accident scene, drove relatives to a hospital. Petralli also called Miss Kiser's parents at home and notified them of the wreck.

"He was so very nice to everyone," Sheryl Kiser, a close relative, said of Petralli. "He called here again (Saturday) to check on everyone and to express his sympathies."

The truck driver told police he did not see the women's car pull out from a restaurant until it was too late. The truck then struck the car broadside. The truck driver was not seriously hurt and has not been charged in connection with the accident.

College student hurt during freak accident

RANGER, Texas (AP) — A freak parachute accident left a 19-year-old Ranger Junior College student hospitalized in stable condition, authorities said.

Gary Murry was taken to Eastland Memorial Hospital following the mishap Sunday. He was being treated for broken bones and a collapsed lung, authorities said.

Ranger Fire Chief Darrell Fox said a group of college students were taking advantage of high, gusting winds to take parachute rides by using a parachute tied to a pickup truck.

The parachute would lift the students about five feet into the air, Fox said.

A rope anchoring the parachute broke when a gust of wind hit it. The chute lifted about 100 feet into the air and it traveled about 1,000 yards, said Fox, who witnessed the accident.

"Then it started going down, down, down," Fox recalled.

The parachute landed in the bleachers of the college's softball field. Murry was injured when he struck the bleachers.

Elephants — some as far apart as two or more miles — synchronize their activities through rumbles so low-pitched that they are inaudible to the human ear, says National Geographic.

Desert Storm Update

DAY 33

Around the gulf

- War developments in brief:
 - Two U.S. warships struck floating mines in the northern Persian Gulf early Monday. Both the USS Tripoli and USS Princeton were in no danger of sinking; seven servicemen were injured, U.S. officials said.
 - Iraq's foreign minister, Tariz Aziz, held talks in Moscow Monday with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in a last-ditch effort to avert a full-scale ground war. Prospects for a diplomatic breakthrough appeared remote.
 - Skirmishes between U.S. and Iraqi troops intensified over the weekend along the desert border. A U.S. Apache attack helicopter destroyed two U.S. military vehicles, killing two soldiers and wounding six, the military said.
 - In Baghdad, Mayor Khalid Abdul-Munim said residents face the threat of cholera and typhoid epidemics because allied air raids have wrecked the sewage system and disrupted water supplies.
 - Travelers coming out of Iraq said up to 5,000 people staged an anti-Saddam Hussein protest Feb. 9 in the southern Iraqi city of Diwaniyah. They quoted unnamed Iraqi officials as saying demonstrators shot and killed 10 officials of Iraq's ruling Baath Arab Socialist Party who intervened.
 - President Bush refused to discuss his timetable for a ground attack, but predicted Sunday that Iraq's takeover of Kuwait will end "very, very soon."

War in gulf largely an electronic war

EDITOR'S NOTE — The following dispatch was subjected to censorship by military authorities.

IN NORTHERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — A generation of video whizzes is getting the chance to test the military's high-tech wizardry in war.

These gadgets are not arcade amusements with make-believe targets. They are the most lethal weapons on the conventional battlefield, guided by microchips to pinpoint their accuracy.

Soldiers call one version "Atari artillery." These howitzers home in on their targets using invisible laser beams directed by commanders at computer screens.

Tanks and missile launchers find their targets with thermal sights. These magic scopes can defeat the night and detect a man at 7,000 yards away from the red spotches emitted by his body heat.

The scopes can tell if an engine in an Iraqi truck or tank is running or not by the amount of heat it emits. In the dead of night, they can spot desert mice playing 1,000 yards away. "It's an electronic war out there," said Maj. Robert Pinson, executive officer for a brigade of paratroopers.

"We haven't appreciated how good some of our equipment is," said Pinson, 39, of Columbia, S.C. "Some of the stuff has worked even better than we thought."

When G-Day arrives, signaling the start of ground war, an array of high-tech killing tools will be field-proven for the first time on a large scale.

Much of it is second nature to soldiers who grew up with Pac Man, the Super Mario Brothers and Master Blaster.

Field commanders hope the ground war gizmos will work as well as the "smart bombs" that follow laser beams and cruise missiles aimed by microchips which gave the coalition air supremacy.

"I'm looking at the ground stuff being as effective as the air technology," said Col. Ron Rokosz, a brigade commander encamped near Iraqi front lines.

Take "Atari artillery," directed by a combination of radar screens, computers and laser beams. The electronics ensure accuracy of about 90 percent for steel shells that explode on impact to become thousands of flesh-piercing fragments.

Staff Sgt. Victor Malloy said you don't even have to put in quarters to operate it.

"No quarters. You put in lots of hours of training, though," said

Malloy, 34, of Indianapolis, a forward observer who guides artillery fire. "It's very much an electronic war."

Then there's the thermal sight of the TOW, a tube-launched, optically sighted, wire-guided anti-tank missile. Soldiers have been using the TOW scope to spy on the Iraqis at night.

Gulf soldiers use maps made in San Antonio

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — American ground troops, pilots and warships are finding their way through Operation Desert Storm with defense department maps produced in Louisville and San Antonio.

About 250 employees at the U.S. Defense Mapping Agency in Louisville have been working double-time to produce the secret charts since U.S. forces were deployed to the Persian Gulf in August, an official said.

The agency had declared its office at the federal building in Louisville off limits to reporters. But officials agreed to describe what the office does and how the Gulf War has changed work there.

George F. Lumley Jr., director of the office, said few workers have complained about an unrelenting demand for the maps that has required employees to work overtime, including weekends and holidays.

Some of the agency's workers have friends and relatives in the Mideast, and are proud to be playing a vital role in the war, Lumley said.

"We've had a lot of team spirit," he said. "Just about everyone in our office is wearing a yellow ribbon."

The agency produces about 4,500 different Desert Storm items — maps, charts and databases. The 80 million figure includes many copies of the individual items it produces.

Desert Storm maps range from some showing entire countries or regions to others showing extremely detailed, minute parts of an area — the kind a commander might need to plan a maneuver or a pilot might need to identify a bridge or highway selected as a bombing target, said David L. Black, public affairs director for the Defense Mapping Agency in Washington.

"The maps are very critical," Black said. "There isn't a military operation or a weapons system that can operate without some kind of (mapping agency) product."

Both the Louisville and San Antonio mapping offices are under the jurisdiction of the federal Hydrographic Topographic Center in Maryland.

The agency, which is part of the Defense Department, has a separate division to produce aerospace maps, and has a total of about 7,500 employees.

Louisville was selected as a site for a field office when the mapping agency was created in 1972 because the city had previously been the site of an Army map-making office, Black said.

In peacetime, the agency — which employs mostly cartographers — produces and updates maps and charts of land, waterways and airspace outside the United States. It also compiles a database of map information for users to call up on computers.

Although some maps are drawn by hand, many are produced by computer. Black said the agency is converting to a computerized map-making operation that should be complete by the early 1990s.

Adoptee finds mom before deployment

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Anticipating duty in the Persian Gulf, reservist Christy Mathews knew she had little time to find the mother who gave her away 19 years ago and to tell her: "I understand."

A hectic search brought only a few clues: Ms. Mathews' mother was 18 when she gave up her newborn baby, had dropped out of high school and was unmarried.

Ms. Mathews had almost given up hope when, on Feb. 7, she left her Russiaville, Ind., home for training at Fort Campbell, Ky. Her deployment was only weeks away.

The next evening, she called home to talk to the parents who raised her, Jim and Jean Mathews. "We found her," Mrs. Mathews said.

At that moment, Karen Raef sat trembling in the Mathews' living room, just hours after learning her lost daughter was alive and headed to war.

More Air Force reservists reporting for duty at KAFB

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Another 604 Air Force reservists have been called to active duty at Kelly Air Force Base to repair and service huge C-5 transport planes, officials said.

The reservists are attached to the 433rd Military Airlift Wing at Kelly and were activated effective immediately by a special presidential order early Sunday.

Wing spokesman Maj. Meade Warthen said nearly 615 members of wing units already had been activated. Many of them have helped fly non-stop C-5 missions to Saudi Arabia since the Persian Gulf buildup started in August.

C-5s have carried tanks, armored personnel carriers and other military vehicles and cargo to the gulf region.

In addition to maintenance and inspection personnel, the new group of reservists reporting will include higher-echelon positions, such as supervisors and other administrators, Warthen said. Warthen declined to say whether talk of an impending ground war was the reason for the latest call-up.

"I probably don't know anymore about that than anyone else," Warthen said, referring further questions about the ground war to the Pentagon.

Pentagon spokeswoman Lt. Cmdr. Joan O'Connor said, "We really can't speculate on the ground war, or whether it is related to the deployment."

Commanders of Kelly's Air Logistics Command Center have said the need for additional personnel might arise if the war intensified and as aircraft already deployed to the gulf needed service for worn parts or air battle damage.

Special air battle damage crews at Kelly deal with structural damage suffered in armed conflicts, Kelly officials said.

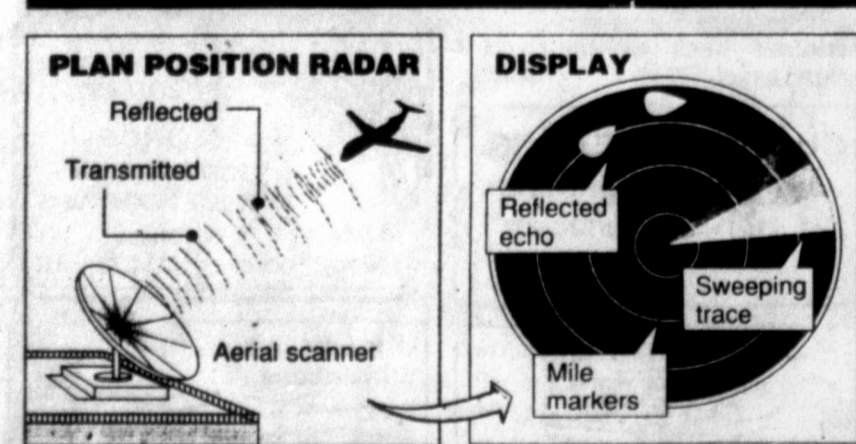

Saddam Hussein's strategy

Hunker down and outlast the Allies

In its 1980-88 war against Iran, Iraq was unable to hold on to its early conquests, and found itself struggling to stave off "human wave" onslaughts. The Iraqi army learned how to defend, patiently waiting for the enemy's attack and then inflicting maximum casualties from well-prepared fortifications. Unlike Iran, the coalition allies go to great lengths to avoid casualties. Saddam Hussein may hope to "win" simply by denying his enemies a quick victory and making the price high for the allies to stomach.

HOW RADAR WORKS

WHAT IT IS: Radar (from Radio Detection and Ranging) is a method using radio waves to detect and locate distant objects. A radar system includes a radio transmitter, which produces short bursts of radio waves, and a radio receiver, which concentrates the reflections of the radar waves bounced off distant objects.

HOW IT WORKS: An automatic switch trigger enables one directional aerial to both transmit and receive. The gap in time between the transmitted pulses of radio waves is longer than the amount of time it takes to receive a radio wave reflected from an object. The short interval of time between a transmitted pulse and a received reflection is a measure of the distance to the object.

WHAT IT DOES: Relatively simple search or surveillance radar provides the radar operator with range and bearing information. More complex systems also provide elevation. In combat aircraft, radar is used to locate and track a moving target.
