Candidates speak

The Herald has given questionnaires to candidates in contested races in the city elections this Saturday.

The questionnaires are designed to give the voters information with which to compare the candidates. Today's questions were given to Clyde Angel, incumbent mayor, and his challenger Jerry Higgins.

Candidates were asked to keep their answers at or under 50 words for each question. The answers are being run exactly as they were received by The Herald.

CLYDE ANGEL

1. Do you feel the City's Capital Improvements Program addresses the full scope of the City's physical problems?

No. The Capital Improvements Program as presented to the citizens December a year ago was a fraction of the needs identified by the citizens advisory committees. It was felt that the City could not afford to finance all the improvements identified by the citizens groups. Further, only three of the total nine propositions were approved by the citizenry.

2. What will you do that is not being done now to lure industry to Big Spring and expand the tax base?

I would not change the technique that is now being employed to recruit industry to Big Spring. I feel the current efforts of the City, Industrial Foundation, and Chamber of Commerce are very effective. This is borne out by the success we are experiencing at the former Webb Air Force Base as well as the Industrial Foundation's industrial parks. Again, you should remember that the industrial recruiting effort is not the sole responsibility of the Mayor or any one agency, but is a combined effort between the City, Chamber, Industrial Foundation, and other existing industries and business, as well as the community in total.

3. How can the city government improve the housing shortage?

The City can improve the housing shortage through innovative planning to encourage the proper development of such things as modular housing mobile homes, etc. The actual building, financing, and development of housing must be done by private enterprise.

4. What can the City do to prepare for the growth predicted to hit Big Spring in the coming decade?

The best thing the City can do to prepare for the predicted growth within the community is to assure for proper planning. That is, to make sure that the land use plans, development standards (water, sewer, street specifications) building codes, and zoning ordinances are up to date and proper. This would insure that developers, whether residential or commercial, build quality facilities, which will last a long time with a minimum maintenance.

JERRY HIGGINS

1. Do you feel the City's Capital Improvements Program addresses the full scope of the City's physical problems?

No, the capital improvements program is not adequate because the city has allowed the utility and service programs to deteriorate to the point that it will take several years to catch up on improvements. However, our only choice is to take the money which the citizens have voted for and make the best of the situations. Including interest, the city now is in debt from bond issues in excess of $33,000,000 and we cannot afford any more debt. According to TEC the city has about a 15,000 labor force, therefore, each worker owes about $2,200. So, in conclusion let us take the available money and get these projects going as soon as possible. However, we should not, under any circumstances, increase the city debt until we can pay off a major portion of the present city debt. If we will tighten our belts we still have a chance to get out of the present mess.

2. What will you do that's not being done now to lure industry to Big Spring and expand the tax base?

The expansion of the city tax base is not always healthy financially. I think the city has done an adequate job in advertising our locality as a center for major businesses. I believe this line of reasoning should continue. However, under no circumstances should the city agree to build facilities for businesses. We are obligated to provide services to the property lines and help in any labor force and PR required, but the major expenses should be provided by the private businesses.

3. How can the city government improve the housing situation?

It is not the city's fault for high interest rates. The only things the city should do are to provide cooperation in building sites and provide adequate services to the property lines.

4. What can the city do to prepare for the growth predicted to hit Big Spring in the coming decade?

City growth in the coming decade should be viewed in the sense that all of our present utilities and services should be properly repaired so that as the city grows, our major cost will increase.

Mariah wins state championship

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

"They call the wind Mariah," goes the song, and the West Texas wind of Mariah — the Big Spring High School Color Guard — blew through the Texas State Championship competition in San Antonio Saturday.

When the dust settled, as usual, Mariah came out with the first place trophy.

Christy Garcia, a senior member of Mariah's flag corps, told The Herald by telephone that the Big Spring group finished ahead of two Louisiana groups with a score in the 70s. One hundred is considered a perfect score.

The contest judges "really liked the way the show was organized," said Garcia. "They liked the rifles and the silks (flags) and we really projected."

After a 15-minute wait following the competition, the judges announced the results.

"We rejoiced," said Garcia. "We jumped up and down — we couldn't believe it. That's when the tears broke out. To be Texas champs — that's really great. It's the first time we ever competed for the Texas championship title and we won it."

The Big Spring guard won the preliminary round of competition Saturday morning, finishing one five-hundredth of a point ahead of the second place group, Garcia said, and that close competition continued through the finals.

"The guard that came in behind us was real close — bumper to bumper," said Garcia.

The state contest brought Mariah its fourth major competition trophy in two months, following close on the heels of the North Texas Auxiliary Championship in Dallas, the Rocky Mountain Winter Guard International Regional Competition in Denver and the Smoky Hill Color Guard Competition also held in Denver.

The group plans to return to the BSHS band hall between six and seven today, Garcia said.

Mariah will face its final competition in Lake Charles, Louisiana, Garcia said.

'You get a rush of power'

Snake handler says he doesn't mind rattlers

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

Why would an apparently normal, intelligent man wade through a pit full of irate rattlesnakes, handle them casually, then allow comrades to stuff a sleeping bag with the reptiles while he calmly relaxes inside the same sleeping bag?

Jimmy Kirchenbauer, one of the Pit Masters snake handling club from Gainesville, featured at the 20th Annual Big Spring Rattlesnake Roundup, has an answer to that question.

"You get a rush of power like race car drivers talk about when you conquer something that dangerous," he says as he stands ankle-deep in rattlers. "It's also a lot of fun — you get to travel and meet a lot of nice people."

KIRCHENBAUER, a big man — well over six feet tall and weighing around 210 — moves through the deadly mass of diamondbacked spaghetti with a calm that comes, he says, from years of experience.

"I've been with the club for about two years — since it started — but I grew up around them in Gainesville," he says. "I've been about half-way involved with snakes for 10 to 15 years."

He and his comrades have conquered the instinctive fear many feel at the sight of a snake. They move through the pit casually, wearing only cowboy boots as protection against the snakes' fangs. They sometimes

Snakes draw big crowds

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

The 20th Annual Big Spring Rattlesnake Roundup, already a slithering success, will wrap up its run today, 1-6 p.m., at the Howard County Fair Barn.

Admission to the roundup, sponsored by Ambucs, is $2 for adults and $1 for children.

Members of Ambucs had set a ceiling of 2,500 pounds of snakes which would be bought at $4 per pound, according to Tom Vernon, a member of the club.

However, "the first six hunters weighed in our limit between 1 and 2:30 p.m. yesterday," Vernon said. He added that 2,800 pounds of rattlers were weighed in.

The rattler poundage limit was set because "we're having trouble finding buyers," Vernon said. "Sweetwater (the site of a much larger roundup) had so many snakes that the market is flooded."

Crowds for the roundup, which began Friday, "have been exceptional," said Vernon. "I estimate we've had around 3,000 people today (Saturday), and we're hoping to run 7,000 through during the show."

Big Spring snake hunter Lyn Carpenter took the lion's share of awards at the show. He turned in the longest snake (66½ inches), the reptile with the most rattles (17 and a button, or a half-formed rattle), and had a share in the shortest rattler (Carpenter and Marilyn Turner both turned in midget rattlers measuring 15 inches). Carpenter will receive a trophy and $70 for the longest snake, a trophy and $50 for the snake with the most rattles, and he and Turner will split the awards of a trophy and $50 for the smallest snake.

Meanwhile, Jack Pesnell took the award for most pounds of reptiles, bringing in 793 pounds of rattlers to earn a trophy and $100.

Ambucs members had originally expected 25 hunters, said Vernon, but "we had 30-some odd register."

The club bought snakes from local hunters only this year, and all proceeds from the event were earmarked "to assist the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center or local charities," said Vernon.

In addition to pit shows by the Pit Masters, a snakehandling group from Gainesville which performs stunts, milking and handling demonstrations, the fair features a flea market and several arts and crafts booths.

Alcohol called number one drug problem

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Educating young people about the effects of alcohol and drug abuse was the main interest Friday in the ninth annual Regional Institute of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Study held at Dorothy Garrett College.

Sponsoring this year's conference on substance abuse was the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, the Texas Commission on Alcoholism, Howard College and the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

In a keynote address to a crowd of approximately 100, Ross Newby, Executive Director of the Texas Commission on Alcoholism said, "Alcohol is the number one drug problem in Texas, the U.S. and the world. If it were any other disease we could have mobilized vast resources to fight it, but since it is a legal drug nothing much has been done."

Newby said 50 percent of traffic deaths, 35 percent of medical emergencies and 33 percent of arrests made by law enforcement officials are in some way alcohol related.

"Until we effectively reach young people we're never going to stop these problems. We must educate young people about alcohol to get them out of the alcohol abuse cycle," he said.

NEWBY'S PROMISE of educating young people was evident in a Friday session held for 100 high school students from Big Spring and Coahoma by Frank Stone, Area II Coordinator for the TCA.

Suspect sought in armed holdup

Howard County Sheriff's officers were searching for a white male described as being in his late 20s or early 30s following the Saturday night armed robbery of Joe's Country Store.

According to sheriff's deputy Carl Thurman, a man of that description and wearing an orange ski cap and sunglasses robbed the store on Highway 87 at knifepoint.

The culprit made off with "an undetermined amount of cash and checks" at 8:20 p.m., Thurman said.

The man "hung around the store for about 10 minutes," Thurman said, "then grabbed the clerk and held a knife to his throat."

The clerk, who Thurman identified as Paul Stovall, then opened the cash register and the thief made his escape, he said.

Shuttle pilots prepare for New Mexico landing

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia sailed on toward Monday's full-mission landing after officials decided there was no reason to fear the blustering New Mexico winds. "We have done 100 percent of the activities we had scheduled," the astronauts were told.

"We're going to make it more than 100 percent," said pilot C. Gordon

Fullerton. And commander Jack R. Lousma chimed in, "It's not 100 percent without a good landing ... and we're going to do that too."

Touchdown was set for 12:27 p.m. MST on a desert runway on the White Sands Missile Range. After that, just one more test flight remains before the shuttle begins operational missions late this year.

Q. Who started Daylight Savings Time? Is it true it is going to start early, like next week? What can be done for those who hate it?

A. Daylight Savings Time first appeared in the U.S. March 31, 1918. The current regular enactment of DST begins April 25 and ends Oct. 31. Despite passage of HB 4437 by the House of Representatives in October which would have moved DST to the last Sunday in March, no change is expected in the current dates, according to Jamie Clayton, Washington press secretary to Rep. Charles Stenholm. She said the bill has been pending in the Senate Commerce Committee since October and no action was expected on it. Direct complaints to Stenholm and U.S. Senators John Tower and Lloyd Bensten.

Drug seminar

Stone's presentation "A Three Sided Coin: Youth and Alcohol" dealt with the curses behind alcoholism, ways in which alcoholism is destructive and ways to combat alcohol abuse.

Stone said that seven out of 10 people in the U.S. use alcohol in some way. Five out of the seven are responsible social drinkers, but the other two are problem drinkers or alcoholics. The problem drinkers often are the cause of continuing cycle of alcohol abuse, Stone said.

"Alcohol is an addictive drug and worse than an addiction to heroin. Young people have chances to drink presented to them all the time by peers, television and advertisement," Stone said.

"But even if they know it's there it doesn't mean they understand what it can do to them, and too much of the time they learn about alcohol from friends who are also largely naive. Kids need to learn about the effects of alcohol from a responsible adult."

Newby and Stone both advocate some sort of alcohol education for the public school system in Texas. They both feel educating the youth of today about alcohol will make for fewer adult users and abusers of alcohol in the future.

ACCORDING TO STONE, when one parent in a family has a drinking problem, one child out of four is likely to have a drinking problem. Chances for sobriety are further reduced when both parents abuse alcohol.

"Parental alcohol abuse can create a vicious circle of family conflicts which can cause difficulty for a maturing child," Stone said. "The result is that children of alcoholic parents show an alarmingly higher incidence of disturbed behavior than children raised in non-alcoholic homes."

"Specific emotional and behavior disturbances reported include emotional instability, overactivity, troublemaking, lack of self-esteem, poor scholastic records, pronounced feelings of rejection, social isolation and antisocial behavior," Stone said.

As for possibilities of improvement Stone urged the people of Howard County to form "Alateen" groups specifically to help young people age 12 to 21 who have alcoholic parents.

"Self Image Modification Training" was presented by Marcia Friedman, project director of the Women and Prescription Drug Abuse Project in Dallas.

Ms. Friedman explained that poor self image and self perception can cause a person to turn to alcohol or drugs. She said people with well defined self images tend to stay away from substance abuse.

"Substance abuse comes not from a single cause, but from a complex interplay of psychological, physiological and sociological influences," Ms. Friedman said.

SHE EXPLAINED six steps to defining a good self image: 1) Conceptualize self and see who and what you really are, 2) Define your beliefs and personal philosophies, 3) Decide on goals and objectives for your life, 4) Evaluate your present condition to determine what changes you want to make, 5) Get with people who are in a situation similar to yours and discuss your decisions and objects, 6) Carry through with new self definition.

"If we can find out who we are and why, and then move ahead to who we want to be then we have succeeded," she said.

Attending the conference were medical and staff members of various state and local substance abuse counseling centers and agencies. Cities represented were Big Spring, Snyder, San Angelo, Midland, Odessa and Fort Stockton.

Also helping with the event was Howard County Judge Bill Tune, Clyde Alsop, chairman for the Regional Alcohol and Drug Abuse Advisory Council and the Coahoma High School student council.

Cold spell prompts patients' complaints

By CLIFF COAN Staff Writer

Several patients in the Veterans' Administration Hospital called The Herald Saturday night upset over what they said were low temperatures in the medical facility, but a hospital spokesman said a solution was only a matter of time.

The patients called about 8 p.m.

"We're freezing," said Buck Newsum, who said he was in the hospital for a check-up after a recent cancer operation. "We're up here on the fifth floor, and we've used up all the blankets. I've got a thermometer here that says it's 50 degrees and we can't get the heat turned on. The nurses are wearing coats. It's too cold up here for sick patients. These boys are cold!"

"I've been cold all day," said Dee Powell, hospitalized for treatment of a kidney infection. "They ran out of blankets."

"There's no heat," said Ed Young. "They shut the boilers down. They're giving us the runaround. They say they've been trying to turn the boilers on."

However, Victor Wrye, medical administrator at the hospital, said the cold was only temporary.

"There's no trouble with the heating system," Wrye said when contacted by phone at 8:45 p.m. "The engineers turned the heat up around 6 p.m. It just takes it a while to circulate."

Wrye said the boilers at the hospital run "all the time" and a fan is turned on to circulate the heat throughout the building.

"They're always going," he said, "but during a cold snap it takes a little while to get it up there."

Wrye called The Herald at 9:20 p.m. and said, "I've just called the nursing supervisor up there and she says it's nice and warm."

Contacted at 9:40, Newsom said, "It's went up a degree — I've just read my thermometer and it said it was 51 degrees. It hasn't (gotten any warmer) yet but they say they're trying. We've been cold up here for two days. During the day it's been all right, but at night we've been cold."

GUN SHOP MOVES — Robey's Guns and Archery has relocated to 1701 Gregg St., and a couple of Ambassadors from the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce were on hand Friday to help mark the event. From left are Ambassador Charles Wash; Jack Griffin Jr., store salesman; Ron Robey, owner of the store; and Cliff Clements, Am-

Police Beat

Man's home burglarized

Frankie Bishop of 1803 Johnson told police his residence was burglarized sometime between 9:45 a.m. and 12:15 Friday. Reported missing were $60 in silver dollars, 20 8-track tapes, sheets and a bedspread, two power tools valued at $100, socket wrenches and other items.

Dave Richardson of 1411 Johnson told police an unknown person driving a 1979 Oldsmobile pulled alongside his 1979 Mercury Capri and broke out the door glass Saturday at noon.

Shots were reported fired at 1:56 a.m. at the Park Hill Terrace Apartment Complex and at 1:58 a.m. in the 1900 block of Nolan. The scene was quiet when officers arrived, reports said.

Yolanda Ramos of 1408 "B" South Nolan was arrested Friday on charges of resisting arrest and failure to stop and identify after a hit-and-run accident at Edwards and Gregg streets. According to reports, the accident occurred when the automobile driven by Ramos struck a 1970 Oldsmobile driven by Marshall Quentin Calvey at 5:15 p.m. as Calvey was stopped at a traffic light. Police said when Ramos was apprehended at 8:50 p.m. in the 400 block of East Fourth Street, she refused to go peacefully with the officers.

Snake handler

even tease the snakes into striking the leather of their footwear.

What is the secret?

Kirchenbauer tugs at his feather-banded pin-festooned hat, scratches his reluctant beard, and says, "There's no trick to it. It takes a lot of knowledge and study of snakes — just getting in here and observing their behavior. It doesn't take bravery or a lot of guts."

Spectators, who gather around the pit where the 27-year old oilfield transport tank builder plies his avocation, recoil in horror as Kirchenbauer performs the "handful of hell," a stunt which involves picking up a coiled rattler barehanded and turning the reluctant reptile belly-up. The snake then, if all is going well, sticks its triangular head up through its coiled body — presumably to see what's going on.

IN ANOTHER STUNT which inspires awe from the spectators, the bearded snakecharmer, with the aid of his cohorts, gathers a handful of irate rattlers in each hand. That, in itself would be difficult enough, but consider this — he then picks the snakes up by the tail, leaving his body from the chest down exposed to the danger of snakebite.

Kirchenbauer's top stunt, however, calls for a great deal more nerve. A typical sleeping bag is spread on the floor of the pit, and the snakehandler crawls inside. While Kirchenbauer lies calmly, fellow Pit Masters David Estep, Jimmy Hale, Steve Gray, Dolly Hale and Rick Merriman herd a half dozen rattlers into the bag. To top the preparation, Gray places a coiled reptile atop the supine Kirchenbauer's belt buckle.

Somehow Kirchenbauer, moving slowly and carefully, eventually extracts himself from the tangle of fanged rut-runners.

However, all does not always proceed as expected, even for veteran snakehandlers.

"I've been bit twice," Kirchenbauer says. "Once on this knuckle (he displays a lumpy right hand) and I had to have surgery. They cut five places," he says, exhibiting a four-inch scar on his forearm and four other, smaller, ones on his wrist and hand. "I was allergic to the antivenom and they just cut to the facial layer of skin and let the poison drain out."

"From the bite itself, there's no pain," he says. "But the tightness of the skin from the swelling is very painful. It's like you were to put your arm in a vise and tighten it every minute. But it didn't make me sick or anything — I didn't die in ten minutes like you see on TV."

Kirchenbauer's last bit illustrated an often-overlooked point about snakebite — not every snake injects poison through its hypodermic-like fangs with every strike.

"I got bit three weeks ago on the finger — I was penning a snake and got careless — but the snake didn't put any venom into me. That happens about 30 percent of the time. It depends on the snake's personality."

"IF THEY'RE not out to kill you or to eat you, chances are you won't get any venom. If any of our members get bit, we take them to the hospital — if there are any cuts to be made, we let the doctor make them." Kirchenbauer says, seemingly in contradiction to the movie-glamorized cut, suck and spit technique.

"We put a constriction band about four inches above and below the bite, then put some chemical cold (a plastic bagged chemical, which, when the seal is broken, becomes very cold) directly on the bite."

The "most important thing" to remember if you are bitten, he says, "is to stay calm. It sounds hard, but you need to just realize that if you get medical attention, you're not going to die."

Strangely enough, Kirchenbauer says, smaller snakes are more likely to strike than the larger ones.

"THE SMALLER ONES are more aggressive," he says. "They're just like children — they've got more energy. The larger ones are less likely to get excited."

However, a small snake's bite can be just as lethal as that of a monster diamondback.

"It just takes one drop," Kirchenbauer says. "There's enough venom in one snake to kill 12 people."

Kirchenbauer, who is engaged, says his girlfriend is "a little bit leary" of his hobby. But he is confident her attitude will change "when she gets involved and sees what it's all about — she'll get used to it."

The Pit Masters will continue their shows at the Howard County Fair Barn today from 1 to 6 p.m.

When taxpayers' dollars are involved in any way, the taxpayers should be informed of the entire situation. If the taxpayers are tough enough to get out and make the tax dollars then I say they are tough enough to absorb the results from which the dollars are spent. Each public employee should be informed to the fact that when he or she is hired in the public eye then he or she will be fired in the public eye if he or she does not do an adequate job. This procedure would eliminate many excuses for the public officials to slam that door in our faces!

'No survivors' aboard downed twin engine plane

SOCORRO, N.M. (AP) — The wreckage of a twin-engine airplane reported missing with as many as six people aboard on a flight from El Paso, Texas, to Salt Lake City was found Saturday in a rugged, mountainous area southwest of here, authorities said.

"Everybody aboard the plane is dead. There were no survivors," said Ernie Thais, state police communications specialist in Socorro. He said a medical investigator was being flown to the area.

"The crash was so severe that at this time, we don't know how many people are aboard," Thais said.

He said the medical investigator was to arrive at the crash site early Sunday. State police and the Socorro County sheriff's office "have the area secured," and the bodies probably will be brought out Sunday, he said.

A National Transportation Safety Board investigator, J.O. Johnson of Fort Worth, Texas, said the pilot of the plane was Jack Kerbs of Salt Lake City.

A Civil Air Patrol spokeswoman, 2nd Lt. Pat Norvell, said there were six people believed aboard the Beechcraft Barron, which was reported missing Friday at 5:18 p.m.

The downed craft was spotted Saturday afternoon by a helicopter from the 1550th Aircrew Training and Test Wing at Kirtland Air Force Base about 1 1/2 miles north of Mount Whittington in the rugged San Mateo Mountains 27 miles southwest of Magdalena, state police said.

The chopper, carrying five crewmen, made a hard landing near the plane crash site, and a second helicopter was sent in to assist it, said Lt. George Sillia of the Kirtland public affairs office. He said there were no injuries to the helicopter crew.

Les Torres, a dispatcher with the state police in Socorro said the plane, a turbocharged propeller-driven craft, "started icing over and losing altitude. It was starting to ice up at an altitude of 13,000 feet."

He said the pilot "requested clearance to go to a higher altitude and received it, but he couldn't gain it and started to lose it."

The FAA reported the craft on a flight pattern that took it in a straight line from Truth or Consequences to Gallup, he said.

For the record

Friday's Herald featured a review of the local production of "Oliver" in which one line mentioned "distracting" playing by the supporting musicians. As the performance reviewed was a dress rehearsal and not an actual for-the-public presentation, the Howard College Jazz Lab Band was still experimenting with notes and music for the play.

SURPRISE AWARD — Kaki Morton, right, was named "Therapist of the Year" in a surprise ceremony Friday. Ken Olsen, president of the American Businessmen's Club, presented the award.

Kaki Morton named 'Therapist of Year'

Kaki Morton was named "Therapist of the Year" in a surprise ceremony at the American Businessmen's Club luncheon Friday at the Holiday Inn.

Miss Morton, chief of physical therapy at Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, thought she had been invited as guest speaker of the luncheon.

But before she was able to begin her speech, club president Ken Olsen awarded the plaque as the club's tribute to her ability and achievements as a physical therapist.

Miss Morton attended Big Spring schools, Howard College and Howard Payment College before receiving her degree from the School of Allied Health at Southwestern Medical College. She joined the staff of the local Rehabilitation Center in September, 1971.

After the surprise award, another presentation was made. Bill Reed, representing the Big Spring Association of Insurance Agents, gave Miss Morton a check for $500 to aid in the treatment of handicapped at the Center.

During the meeting, Olsen read a proclamation from Gov. Bill Clements declaring March as the National Scholarship for Therapists month. The AMBUCs have awarded 1,300 scholarships since 1935, many of these students from Texas.

New officers also were elected for the 1982-83 term.

Incoming officers in June will be Jerry Reid, president; Tom Vernon, vice-president; Larry Bristo, 2nd V.P.; Bill Snead, secretary; Ray Alexander, treasurer. Directors include Pat Boatler, Dub Day, Larry Hollar, and Dick Fields. The District Governor will be Wayne Rock.

Big Spring to host district Lion's Club

Representatives of 3,800 members from 71 clubs of Lions International District 2A-1 are set for the annual convention in Big Spring April 23-24.

Headquarters will be at Holiday Inn, said W.L. (Squeaky) Thompson, general chairman, and business sessions will be at Big Spring High School Auditorium.

Registration and a golf tournament will be the opening events April 23, in addition to a cabinet meeting. Dist. Gov. Russell McMeans, Stanton, has invited members to attend.

The following day's activities begin with a Key Members breakfast and the 9 a.m. business session. At 3 p.m. a score of nominees from various clubs will compete in the traditional Queen's Contest directed by Dub Martin of Big Spring. George Weis of Midland is due to be elevated to district governor, but a contest is shaping between T.C. Carter of San Angelo and C.E. McCain of Midland for the lieutenant-governor's place. Jim Lemons of Big Spring is in charge of elections, and Leonard Hanson of Midland will preside over the important Eye Bank Committee meeting. Jerry Phillips of Big Spring will conduct the traditional necrology. V.L. Perkins, 1017 Ridgeroad, will assist in reservations and information.

MEISTERSINGERS — The Big Spring High School choir directed by Majorie Dodson recently returned for Regional University Interscholastic league competition in Midland with three sweepstakes awards to their credit. A total of 25 choirs participated — six of which were 5-A schools. Only two other 5-A schools won a sweepstakes award: Odessa Permian with three and Midland Lee with one. In order to win a sweepstakes, a choir must score a rating of one in both its choral presentation and sight reading competition.

Participating in the competition were the BSHS Girl's Choir, Meistersingers and Troubadors. The program for the Meistersingers was Verbum Caro Factum Est by Hassler, Festival Manificat by Pinkham and Abendstandchen by Brahms. The girl's choir sang Hodie Christus Natus Est by Palenstrina, Holy Valley by Ahrold and Nova, Nova, Ave Fit ex Eva by Spencer. The Troubadors performed Lobet den Herren by Praetorius, Jan

Waselu by Leontovich and Kyrie Eleison by Hassler. One of the many positive comments made by the judges was: "excellent musicianship on the part of the director and choir members." This is the first time the BSHS choirs have won three sweepstakes awards in this competition. The Big Spring choir will host the Southwest Texas State University Chorale Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium. See story on page 7A.

Troops patrol San Salvador on election eve

Guerrillas step up attacks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas stepped up attacks in the northeastern hills Saturday and crack U.S.-trained soldiers patrolled San Salvador on the eve of elections that the rebels have vowed to violently disrupt.

Guerrillas also held a coastal town and threatened to shoot at any traffic except foreign journalists and Red Cross staff.

Officials urged the people to ignore the rebel threats and vote Sunday.

The big cities remained under control of the junta the guerrillas want to topple, but the Election Commission head, Jorge Bustamante, said rebels put up signs reading: "Vote in the morning and you'll be dead in the afternoon."

An explosion followed by shooting was heard Friday night near the central market in San Salvador, and residents said four people were killed. But traffic in the capital was normal Saturday and the market bustled despite broadcast guerrilla threats to shoot at vehicles.

In San Miguel and Usulután, the third and fourth largest cities, there were reports guerrillas had infiltrated outlying neighborhoods and were on the highways leading into town, but there was no word of fighting.

The rebels' Radio Venceremos said guerrillas held the towns of Yoloaiquin and Meanguera, captured from security forces earlier in the week, and had attacked in Osicala and Delicias de Concepcion. All are located in the rebel stronghold of Morazan province, between the regional army garrison at San Francisco Gotera and the Honduran border to the north.

Rebels in Usulután province, southeast of the capital, seized the coastal town of Puerto Parada after three hours of fighting Friday, took four soldiers prisoner and held the town through the night, Radio Venceremos said. Travelers from the town said at least three soldiers were killed and four others wounded.

A Defense Ministry spokesman, Col. Eusebio Coto, said army troops were trying to recapture Yoloaiquin and Puerto Parada but gave no details of fighting. He said he had no reports of a rebel occupation of Meanguera.

The Reagan administration and the Salvadoran junta are calling the election a step to isolate the guerrillas and end a 29-month civil war in which an estimated 33,000 people have died, most of them non-combatants.

The voting is for a 60-seat assembly that will write a new constitution and choose an interim president. The current junta is led by Christian Democratic leader Jose Napoleon Duarte. His main opponent in the voting is former Maj. Roberto d'Aubuisson of the rightist Republican National Alliance.

Leftists are refusing to take part, calling the election a farce amid a civil war and saying their candidates would face murder at the hands of death squads tied to the military.

Congress reluctant to put up more cash

Savings and loans to receive small relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Savings and loan associations, experiencing their worst financial troubles since the Depression, stand an increasing chance of getting more help from Congress this year, officials in and outside government say.

The assistance, though, is not expected to be a cash bailout that would be a financial drain on the deficit-ridden budget. And there has been only a little talk of extending the one-year, tax-free all-saver certificates that Congress approved last year to bolster S&L and bank deposits.

What help that does come from Congress will likely be in the form of more regulatory relief and paper transactions that would guarantee, or contribute to, an institution's financial soundness.

The paper transactions, which are opposed by the Reagan administration, would cost taxpayers only if an institution failed and had to be liquidated.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. (FSLIC) has used a similar "capital infusion" approach utilizing non-taxpayer funds to bring off several recent mergers of weak S&Ls with stronger ones.

Despite some regulatory relief and the All-Savers certificates, savings and loan associations are still having to pay more for new money than they are taking in from low-yielding home loans agreed on years ago when interest rates were lower.

Rep. Ferdinand St. Germain, D-R.I., who is pushing the "net worth guarantee" paper transactions, said in a telephone interview he felt certain that "once various parties realize they've got a horse out in front, they'll put money on it."

But the Reagan administration said last week that St. Germain's government bailout fund was not needed. Insurance funds —

FSLIC for savings and loans and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. for banks — had the resources to handle any problems, the administration said.

St. Germain, who is chairman of the House Banking Committee, also is at odds with his counterpart on the Senate Banking Committee, Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah.

Garn and the administration have favored giving the thrift institutions and banks a broad array of new loan and investment powers, among them allowing S&Ls to make commercial loans and accept corporate demand deposits.

St. Germain said a plan to give more powers to the thrift institutions would be "very, very controversial" and would immediately spark opposition. He said his "net worth guarantee" has not aroused strong opposition.

The banking and savings and loan industries — long-time competitors — have found it hard to agree among themselves on what they want from Congress.

Nonetheless, sources, who asked not to be identified, said they feel any aid package will ultimately include portions of both approaches: giving savings and loans and commercial banks some of the broader authority they want to compete with money market mutual funds and other institutions, and federal regulators expanded emergency powers to deal with failing thrifts.

The "smart money," said one source, is betting on such a package.

Even Garn is now considering whether to back a "capital infusion" program, and an announcement is likely later this week, said Senate Banking Committee staff director Dan Wall.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts rain Sunday for parts of the Pacific Northwest. Showers are also predicted for parts of Florida.

Light rain falls over much of Texas

By The Associated Press

Light rain and drizzle fell over much of Texas Saturday and fog continued to blanket most of the state north of a stationary cool front extending from the northern Gulf of Mexico through South Texas to eastern New Mexico.

Temperatures were in the 30s and 40s north of the front and in the 60s and 70s in South and Southwest Texas. Afternoon extremes ranged from 35 degrees at Dalhart to 75 at Wink.

Forecasters predicted decreasing cloudiness and warmer temperatures across West and Central Texas Sunday. Otherwise, it should be cloudy and cool with rain and drizzle.

Temperatures were below normal across most of the eastern two-thirds of the nation Saturday, and snow was scattered over the western sections of Kansas and Oklahoma, where up to 2 inches fell in some areas.

Rain dampened central Kansas and eastern Oklahoma and spread from northern Texas to the western half of the Gulf Coast region.

Brother agonizes before telling about missing child

CLEVELAND (AP) — Don Gress agonized for five days before calling authorities. He had noticed his mother was caring for a little girl who suffered from "lazy eye," the same condition that afflicted a friend's missing baby daughter.

On Friday, 4-year old Denise Kay Gravely, who disappeared from her front yard in Cleveland on Aug. 28, 1980, was found at the home of Gress' mother and stepfather in Mayville, N.Y., 150 miles away.

Authorities have arrested Charles W. Gress, Don's brother, and his mother, Susan Schmidt.

Authorities allege that Mrs. Schmidt paid Charles Gress to go with her to Cleveland for the purpose of abducting a child. John H. Thurston of the Buffalo, N.Y., FBI office said Gress was charged with violating federal kidnapping statutes.

"He so much as states that this was his mother's idea and she agreed to give him a sum of money to accompany her to Cleveland and grab a kid," Police Sgt. James Moon said Saturday.

Mrs. Schmidt, 45, was arrested Saturday at her home in Mayville, FBI special agent Joseph Griffin said here.

"All I can say ... is that we are charging her with the actual commission of the kidnapping and the transportation of the victim from Ohio to New York ... We expect additional arrests."

Police and FBI officials said Denise had apparently been abducted and had been in the custody of a woman identified as Mrs. Schmidt. Cleveland police detective Matt Pompeani said Mrs. Schmidt had four sons and had wanted a daughter since her own was stillborn.

Denise was returned to her mother, Patricia Thompson.

Don Gress was a friend of the child's father, Earl Gravely. Gravely died of carbon monoxide poisoning four months after she was reported missing. The coroner ruled the death a probable accident. His wife remarried in last year.

Moon said Charles Gress and his mother, however, had no idea the child they allegedly abducted was known by Don Gress.

Police said Don Gress told them he noticed the child on a visit to his family's home in Mayville last Sunday. He said the girl's "lazy" or "wandering" eye condition helped him make the connection.

Moon said authorities weren't aware of Mrs. Schmidt's involvement in the case until her son was taken into custody.

"He gave us a statement implicating his mother," Moon said.

Law enforcement agents said the house where the Gravely child had been kept was closely watched Friday, and the child was recovered when she was taken out of the house, Griffin said.

The child was apparently in good health, authorities said.

The girl didn't remember her family and refused to be called Denise, her mother said. Mrs. Thompson explained that Mrs. Schmidt had called the girl Susan Dawn.

Oil import tax is a good idea

The United States perhaps has a one-time opportunity to break the OPEC oil cartel while helping to solve its own economic and energy problems.

Largely due to decontrol of domestic oil prices, which allowed prices for finished products to rise to a level that forced Americans to reduce consumption, the world now has too much oil on its hands.

Prices have been falling and OPEC is trying hard to convince its members to cut production to dry up the glut.

President Reagan has the power to attach an import tax on oil without Congressional approval.

A NEW YORK BANKER, Arthur Gray Jr., conducted a study of the feasibility of the tax, considering a $5 per barrel levy on imported crude oil.

In the present oversupply condition, there is a good chance the price of gasoline at the pump would increase very little. Domestic oil producers quickly would raise the price of their oil to match the import prices, but the Federal government would get a big share of the increase in the form of the wellhead excise tax.

The tax itself, it is estimated, would raise perhaps $10 billion, while another $14 billion would come from the increased wellhead taxes on domestic oil.

ONE OF THE RESULTS of such a levy would be to force Americans to continue their rush to fuel-efficient autos and other conservation measures that have been working exceptionally well.

It also would indirectly force OPEC to absorb at least part of the tax, particularly in today's oversupply situation.

Domestic oil producers would have still another incentive to continue searching for new domestic reserves, and projects to develop alternate energy sources would be stimulated. Declining prices now threaten both efforts.

The immediate effect would be to take a big chunk out of the Reagan deficits, which in turn would help bring interest rates down and accelerate the recovery the President wants.

The import oil tax is something the Administration should seriously consider.

Around the Rim

Politics

Many a woman can't understand why the police need to know her age in order to catch the man who broke into her home.

Persistent Paul Harold of Midland, the husband of Curvaceous Carla and who celebrates his birthday today, noticed a Tall City sign outside a weight-reducing salon: "Come in and shoo the fat."

MOVIE MAGNATE Al Scott, former Herald advisor who observes his birthday Wednesday, says: "If at first you do succeed, try not to look surprised."

Bryan Eagle Pressman Larry Bishop, who lived it up on his birthday Saturday, says:

"The man I really feel for is the one who broke both arms. When he went to the hospital emergency room he couldn't get to his insurance card."

REAGAN IS EAGER to cooperate with Democrats on the budget. All he asks is that they acknowledge they're responsible for the shape it's in.

Reagan doesn't care whether his popularity rating is 96 percent or 59. At election time it's all Pass/Fail.

The Herald's legal-eagle reporter, Mike Downey has come up with an oldie but goodie political speech:

My fellow citizens, it is an honor and a pleasure to be here today. My opponent has openly admitted he feels an affinity toward your city, but I happen to like this area. It might be a salubrious place to him, but to me it is one of the nation's most delightful garden spots.

When I embarked upon this political campaign I hoped that it could be conducted on a high level and that my opponent would be willing to stick to the issues. Unfortunately, he has decided to be tractable instead — to indulge in unequivocal language, to eschew the use of outright lies in his speeches, and even to make repeated veracious statements about me.

At first I tried to ignore these scrupulous, unvarnished fidelities. Now I will do so no longer. If my opponent wants a fight, he's going to get one!

My opponent's second cousin is a Mormon.

His uncle was a flagrant heterosexual.

HIS SISTER, who has always been obsessed by sects, once worked as a proselyte outside a church.

His father was secretly chagrined at least a dozen times by matters of a pecuniary nature.

His youngest brother wrote an essay extolling the virtues of being a Homo sapien.

His great-aunt expired from a degenerative disease.

His nephew subscribed to a photographic magazine.

His wife was a thespian before their marriage and even performed the act in front of paying customers.

And his own mother had to resign from a women's organization in her later years because she was an admitted sexagenarian.

NOW WHAT SHALL we say of the man himself?

I can tell you in solemn truth that he is the very antithesis of political radicalism, economic irresponsibility, and personal depravity. His own record proves that he has frequently discountenanced treasonable, un-American philosophies and has perpetrated many overt acts as well.

He perambulated his infant son on the street.

He practiced nepotism with uncle and first cousin.

He attempted to interest a 13-year-old girl in philately.

He participated in a seance at a private residence where, among other odd goings-on, there was incense.

He has declared himself in favor of more homogeneity on college campuses.

HE HAS ADVOCATED social intercourse in mixed company — and has taken part in such gatherings himself. He has been deliberately averse to crime in our streets.

He has urged our Protestant and Jewish citizens to develop more catholic tastes.

Last summer he committed a piscatorial act on a boat that was flying the American flag.

Finally, at a time when we must be on our guard against all foreign isms, he has coolly announced his belief in altruism — and his fervent hope that some day this entire nation will be altruistic!

I BEG YOU, my friends, to oppose this man whose life and work and ideas are so openly, avowedly compatible with our American way of life. A vote for him would be a vote for the perpetuation of everything we hold dear.

The facts are clear; the record speaks for itself.

Do your duty.

Newspaper jargon

This week at our regular editorial staff meeting, I mentioned that our local obituaries should improve as our morgue is updated.

The staff hooted at my unintentional play on words. In a newspaper office, the "morgue" is the newspaper's library where old photographs and background news clippings are filed.

Thus, if a prominent person dies, we should be able to go to the "morgue" and look up all the stories and photographs that have appeared about that person in the past and write a more complete obituary.

We just now are in the process of establishing a morgue, and it will take several months for the advantages to be realized.

Every local story that runs in the newspaper will be filed under topical headings. Thus, if we want to look up what the city council did during the year, we'll have a complete file on City Council.

In the past we've had to rely on remembering what date a particular story ran, then look it up in our chronological files. The new system will make it much easier to find the information we need. Plus, in years to come, it will be an excellent historical reference.

In previous years we've often given away photographs that ran in the newspaper. Now, with the establishment of our morgue, the photographs will be filed away for possible future use. However, persons who desire copies of photographs can buy reprints at a nominal cost.

The use of the word "morgue" reminds me that, as in any business, there are special words that become the jargon of the trade. Here are some examples of newspaper jargon:

AGATE — the teeny type that is sometimes used in reporting a long list of results, such as sports statistics or stock show results.

ADVANCE — a story that runs in advance of an event.

ADD — an addition to a story. The first addition would be called "First Add," and so on.

BANNER — the top story on the front page.

BEAT — a particular area that is covered by a reporter, such as city beat, courthouse beat, school beat, police beat.

BYLINE — the name of the person who wrote a story, as in "By BOB CARPENTER."

BULLETS — those heavy little dots that run in front of a paragraph to separate items such as those we use in police beat.

BUMPING HEADLINE — a no-no, that is when one headline bumps into another, making it difficult to tell where one headline ends and the other begins.

COLD TYPE — The opposite of Hot Type. Hot type was the old method where letters were cast in hot lead. Cold type is the new method where letters are reproduced photographically on paper and pasted on a page. The page is then photographed again and the image is transferred to a metallic sheet that can be put on a press.

CITY DESK — the place where local news stories are assigned and read by the city editor (Walt Finley is The Herald's city editor).

COPY — stories. As in, "Do we have any copy on the Rattlesnake Roundup yet?"

CUTLINE — the caption under a picture. This is left over from olden days when pictures were called "cuts," because they were cut into zinc.

COP SHOP — affectionate name for police station.

CROP — to trim unnecessary portions from a photograph.

DATELINE — The first word in a story that tells where the story originated. Most wire stories start off with a dateline, as in "AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements today announced he will run for reelection," etc.

DUMMIES — the sheets of paper used by the news editor to design the pages of the newspaper.

FILLERS — Short stories that we keep on hand to fill up any holes that may crop up unexpectedly on a page.

GRAF — paragraph.

GUTTER — An inferior layout which allows a gutter of white space between columns to run from the top of the page to the bottom of the page.

HAIRLINE — a very thin line sometimes used to box stories.

HAMMER HEAD — A big headline that consists of one word, usually accompanied by a subhead in smaller type.

HEAD — headline.

HEAD SCHED — Headline schedule, a chart showing the exact number of letters that can go in to a particular headline size.

HOT TYPE — See "Cold Type" above.

JUMLINE — the words at the bottom of a story on the front page that tell you where the rest of the story can be located, as in "See COUNCIL,

KICKER — A little headline that floats on top of a bigger headline.

KILL — to delete, as in "Kill that story."

LASERPHOTO — a photograph that is sent over the wires by use of a laser beam.

LEAD — the first paragraph of a story.

MASTHEAD — the space across the top of a newspaper that tells you what newspaper it is, as in "Big Spring Herald."

MASTBOX — the box on the editorial page that tells you the name of the management of the newspaper.

MUG SHOT — a photographic portrait.

NAKED WRAP — same as a "raw wrap." This is a no-no, when the type of a story is wrapped up and to the side of a headline instead of underneath a headline.

OBITUARY — obituary.

Pi — pronounced "P" eye. The front page (short for Page one).

PICA POLE — Probably the most important instrument used by desk editors. It is a ruler which is marked off in inches as well as picas. (A pica is a unit of measurement — 6 picas equal 1 inch.)

The pica pole is used to size pictures, to draw lines on dummies, to scratch one's back and to whop impertinent reporters over the head.

PROOF — A Xerox copy of a page on which corrections are marked.

PROMO — An item on the front page which promotes a story inside the newspaper. We often use promos to promote our Sunday Lifestyle features.

RIM — At one time, news editor's desks were circular. The news editor would sit in the middle, and his headline writers and copy editors would sit "around the rim," waiting for him to hand them work to do. Copy editors still are referred to as "rimmers."

SIDE BAR — A side story which complements the main story.

STANDING HEAD — a headline which stays the same, as in "Dear Abby."

TOMBSTONING — Another no-no effect created when too many one column headlines and stories are put together, making them look like tombstones on a page.

WIRE MACHINE — The machine that brings us stories from all over the world.

WHEEL — Another important tool used by editors. It is a mathematical proportion wheel, used to figure the size of a photograph when it is reduced.

30 — the end of a story.

Another Navy boondoggle?

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's romantic Elizabethan dream of ruling the waves is being exploited with typical extravagance by the Navy as it plows ahead with its program to demothball four antique battleships.

Few question the need to bolster our fleet in the face of the Soviet Navy's continuing buildup, but throwing hundreds of millions of dollars around is not the way to do it. To justify the huge sums allotted to the Defense Department, the least the brass hats can do is see that the money isn't wasted.

Yet the admiral's foolhardy fantasy of a new Great White Fleet is already piling up mountainous cost overruns. Though the Navy stubbornly insists it can dust off its seagoing dinosaurs for $1.2 billion or so, there is alarming evidence that the final cost to the taxpayers will be twice that amount or more.

A secret General Accounting Office report and talks with Navy and industry sources make clear that the admirals have been shamelessly misrepresenting the staggering cost of the battleship boondoggle.

The first of the old battleships — USS New Jersey — is being refitted at the Navy's shipyard in Long Beach, Calif. The official cost estimate is $326 million. But by the time the job is completed, the bill will run to more than $400 million, sources told my associate Les Whitten.

THE SECOND SHIP, which the Navy in sworn testimony said would cost $408 million to refurbish, will eat up $500 million or more, Navy experts privately concede.

In fact, the secret GAO report casts serious doubt on the Navy's ability to get the battleship work done at all within a reasonable time, let alone at the price it promised Congress. There are just too many complex problems involved in the program, from conception to practical details.

My sources say the Navy's planners are totally out of touch with reality if they think they can get the last three battleships out of mothballs without astronomical overruns and stupefying delay. They cite four major areas where the Navy is hopelessly fogbound:

— Except for the New Jersey, it will take years to find competent personnel to man the now-unfamiliar ships. Experienced petty officers in particular are simply not available.

— The Iowa, Missouri and Wisconsin will need many radically new and replacement parts, and there is no subcontractor system to provide them.

— The Navy's own shipyards are no longer adequate to reactivate the floating behemoths. And they have long since lost the technical skills needed to repair the old ships.

— Commercial shipyards have demonstrated their inability to handle jobs of this intricacy without staggering cost overruns. They, too, lack the technology required; the know-how has been forgotten, and there aren't enough Navy experts left to teach the skills.

— Because the president has put such a high priority on the battleship boondoggle, work on other ships is being seriously delayed.

But the most serious flaw in the program is the question of whether it is a worthy undertaking at any price. When cornered, Navy officials admit that if a battleship is ever cut off from its ring of protective escort ships, it will be a sitting duck for a submarine or an air attack.

Footnote: The Navy disputed our findings on every point, denying that there's any shortage of shipyard capacity, technical skills or seagoing personnel.

Dear Editor,

As sponsors of the Goliad Middle School students who participated in the Permian Basin Regional Science Fair, we would like to say "thank you" to the Herald for your excellent coverage of the fair and also for printing the name of each student who entered.

These kids work hard on their projects and seeing their name in print is good positive reinforcement for their efforts.

A special thanks to Mr. Joe Reid, director of the PBRSF. He spends many hours putting the fair together each year and as usual, it was a great success.

Also, a great big thank you to Big Cheese Pizza. Our students had lunch there on Thursday and couldn't have been treated nicer. Big Cheese was able to "fill up" 90 sixth and seventh graders on pizza and coke and that is no easy task!

Most of all, thanks to the students. You behaved well and we are proud of each of you.

The world needs love

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why don't you talk about love more in your crusades? It seems to me that if everyone just loved each other more, then this world would be a much better place and our problems would be solved. — A.T.

DEAR A.T.: Yes, I would agree that the world would be a better place if there was more love instead of hatred and jealousy and greed. I wonder, however, if you have ever asked yourself this question: Why isn't there more love in the world? If all it took was telling people to love, then we would already have a better world. What is the problem?

The problem is that we do not have the ability to love as we should. There is something wrong with the human heart. We know that we ought to love more, but we don't. You and I are by nature selfish — we want only what we think is good for us, and we tend to forget other people and their needs. When everyone seeks only his own selfish interest, you have conflicts. The Bible says, "What causes fights and quarrels among you? Don't they come from your desires that battle within you? You want something but you don't get it. You kill and covet, but you cannot have what you want. You quarrel and fight" (James 4:1-2).

The Bible tells us that the reason we are so selfish and unable to love is because of sin — we have tried to live apart from God. There is only one lasting solution to our problem, and that is to have God forgive us and give us a life — what the Bible calls a "new birth." This can happen to you, if you will turn to Christ. Christ died on the Cross so we could be forgiven, and he rose again from the dead to give us new life. When you turn to Christ in faith and trust, he gives you a new capacity for love. In fact, love should be the mark of the Christian, and when we experience God's love in Christ we too can learn more and more about loving others for Christ's sake.

Thoughts

Life is simply a matter of concentration: you are what you set out to be. You are a composite of the things you say, the books you read, the thoughts you think, the company you keep, and the things you desire to become.

Houston's gays

Swaggering city attracts huge homosexual population

MILITANT GAY — Ray Hill marches in a gay community of Houston wearing a jail uniform to protest police harassment of homosexuals.

HOUSTON (AP) — This swaggering city — bulging up and out on the sinew of construction workers, bankrolled by independent oilmen, supplied by sweating stevedores — is home to one of the nation's largest homosexual communities.

In the last decade, homosexuals have become one of the most powerful voting blocs in town. They established their own social and civic groups, and even founded their own church.

"You show me an aspect of the straight community that we have been deprived of — robbed of — and I can show you where we've got it here," said Larry Bagneris, current president of the Houston Gay Political Caucus.

One reason for that is sheer numbers.

"We probably have a larger actual population in our gay community than San Francisco," said Ray Hill, board member of the caucus. Hill estimates about 200,000 homosexuals live in Houston, out of a population of 1.6 million, according to the 1980 census.

They work in refineries, theaters, bakeries and on the docks. They serve food, drive cabs and hoist steel.

In one neighborhood alone — the Montrose area, southwest of downtown — about 60,000 of the 100,000 residents are gay, according to Don Hrachovy, communications director for the caucus.

No one knows for sure why that enormous population gathered here,

'They've been taught discrimination because of what they are. Now they're taking that difference and flaunting it.'

but Hill and Hrachovy have some ideas.

"Money — why does anyone move to Houston?" Hill said. The Chamber of Commerce says well over 900 out-of-towners move to the Houston area weekly.

"Gays are generally less settled in their roots, so they're less afraid of moving" to places where they can make more money, Hrachovy said.

One effect is an enormous gay political clout.

Dr. Susan MacManus, associate professor of political science at the University of Houston, estimates that group influences about 100,000 of the 300,000 votes cast in the recent Houston mayoral election.

She said Houston politicians of virtually every philosophy would like to have support from the gay community.

Dick Gottlieb learned about "gay clout" the evening of his runoff for a City Council spot last November. As Gottlieb drove to a celebration of his apparent victory, the final vote counts trickled in from the Montrose precincts. They gave Rice University professor George Greanias, endorsed by the gay caucus, a narrow victory.

In the mayor's race, former city Controller Kathy Whitmire buried Harris County Sheriff Jack Heard in a landslide made up largely of ballots from gay voters. She polled 88 percent of the Montrose vote.

Last fall's city election campaigns were marked by ferocious political attacks against five candidates endorsed by the gay caucus.

The smear campaign was a disaster. All but one of the gay caucus' candidates won.

"That's the way our people vote — against people," said Steve Shiflett, former gay caucus president and now president of Citizens for Human Equality, another gay group.

"Otherwise, our people are just as apathetic as anyone else." A full-page ad placed in the Houston Post under a fictitious name claimed homosexuals were trying to turn Houston into "another San Francisco." The newspaper later apologized for accepting it.

Despite the gay caucus' political clout, homosexuals still find themselves dealing with intolerance in Houston.

"There's still a lot of what I call white punks on dope heckling and throwing bottles at the gay men and lesbians," said Hill.

But the Rev. Charles Larsen, minister of what he said is the world's largest gay congregation, said "straights" are not the only ones causing trouble.

He also contends the leather clad, bar-hopping men who walk along Westheimer at night are not typical only visible.

"The difference between the public gay and the private gay is like day and night," Larsen said.

But some of those "public gays" worry Larsen, who said he wonders if gay society will receive with proper dignity the rights its leaders are demanding. Among those are non-discrimination clauses in job contracts and repeal of Texas' law for bidding sexual acts between people of the same gender.

"There is an element (among homosexuals) that is going to continue to hustle and to cause problems in the way they act — harassing police causing public displays, and so on," Larsen said. "They have been taught discrimination because of what they are. Now they're taking that difference and flaunting it."

Don't count Harding out yet

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN—Warren G. Harding must feel like a man whose faithful dog just bit him on the toe instead of bringing his slippers.

Suddenly, his name, which carried him from an obscure job in the Dallas County District Clerk's office to one of the highest elective offices in Texas, has become a liability.

Harding, Dallas County treasurer for 27 years and state treasurer since 1977, was indicted last week on the charges of official misconduct. He is accused of using state employees on state time for political purposes.

There's no doubt that Harding has used his name—the same as the 29th president whose early 1920s term was marred by the Teapot Dome scandal—to win election both in Dallas and in the 1978 state treasurer's race.

TEXANS FOR YEARS took pride in electing a state treasurer named Jesse James as a Texas-size joke. They joyfully accepted a man with a disgraced President's name when the man with the outlaw's name died.

But now Harding's name can only serve as a reminder of the charges against him. Even if they lack the magnitude of the Teapot Dome scandal.

In the range of possible wrongdoings, the accusations against Harding may seem fairly minor on the surface.

That's particularly true if Harding's version of the charges is correct: That two women employees addressed envelopes for thank-you notes to contributors to an officeholder account.

Many politicians use private donations to office holder accounts to offset expenses the state won't cover. That's one of those gray areas of the present political world, which, unfortunately, allowed officeholders to mix private money with their public duties.

At this writing, the prosecutors haven't revealed details of their case. If the charges involve more blatant misuses of public trust, Harding will have a harder time convincing the voters to support him in the May 1 primary.

UNTIL RECENT years, politicians at all levels of government in Texas used the manpower of their employees to win re-election.

The practice still goes on the some extent, but more care is taken to avoid getting caught.

The possible ramifications of the charges are serious. If convicted on both counts, Harding could face up to 20 years in prison and be fined as much as $10,000. The danger to his political career is more real at the time however.

Three Democrats are challenging him in the May 1 primary, and a Republican is waiting for a turn at trying the job in the November election.

All of these were late-comers who jumped into the race when the news of a grand jury investigation of Harding broke just before the filing deadline.

Without the investigation and indictments, Harding probably would have been a sure win for re-election. With them he will be fighting for his political life.

He shouldn't be counted out yet. Friends say Harding is an excellent politician.

COMING TO BIG SPRING — The 44-voice Southwest Texas State University Chorale, from San Marcos, Texas, will perform Monday at the high school auditorium. The group is recognized as one of the top collegiate chorale groups in the southwestern United States. Dr. Kenneth Fulton is conductor.

SWT University Chorale to perform here

The Southwest Texas State University Chorale will be the guest of the Big Spring High School Choirs in a concert Monday, March 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium. The Meistersingers and Troubadours will sing on the concert as well as host the university chorale during their overnight stay in Big Spring.

The 44-voice Chorale is well recognized as one of the top collegiate chorale groups in the southwestern United States. The Chorale has given invitational performances for the Vocal Division of the Texas Music Educators Association in San Antonio, Texas and the American Choral Directors Association southern regional convention in 1981. In its 37-year existence, the Chorale has also successfully toured in Europe with the Eastern Swiss Orchestra under the direction of Urs Schneider.

The conductor of the Chorale, Dr. Kenneth Fulton is Assistant Professor of Music at Southwest Texas State University and Director of Choral Activities. He has held similar positions in public schools in Texas and at the University of Illinois. He has done extensive research on the music of Don Carlo Gesualdo and the contemporary English composer, William Walton, resulting in editions of several of Gesualdo's motets and an article for the Choral Journal of the American Choral Directors Association on the music of Walton.

Music for the Big Spring concert includes representative choral literature from virtually every period in music history. Featured selections include motets by the German composer Georg Schumann and an avant-garde setting of the "Kyrie" and "Gloria" from the liturgical mass by the Swedish composer Eskil Hemberg. The "Cantico del Sole" by William Walton will also be performed as well as "Stomp Your Foot," "The Circle Square Dance" and "The Promise of Love" from the ballet "The Tender Land" by the American composer, Aaron Copland.

Bruce Webb, a former member of Meister-singers and a bass voice, All state Choir Tenor, is a freshman in the university chorale and will be performing here Monday night.

Margaret Smith, High School Choral Director, is an alumnus of Southwest Texas State University, where she sang in the choir, participated in the Workshop, and was a member of Mu Phi Epsilon, the college music honorary.

The general public and the students of Southwest Texas State University are invited to the concert. Admission is free.

Man pushed to breaking point by nagging wife, judge rules

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — Walter Hinton, described by a judge as a "nagging man," put up with his wife's nagging for 30 years but he snapped when she pulled the plug on his stereo, according to court testimony.

Hinton, 57, grabbed his 51-year-old wife, Violet, around the neck and strangled her to death, the Nottingham Crown Court was told at Hinton's trial Thursday.

66 absentee ballots cast in bingo vote

Absentee voting in the special bingo election being held in the Howard County Clerk's office has reached 66 ballots cast in the office with four mailed out.

The Howard County Junior College District board of trustees and the Big Spring Independent School District board elections

Hinton pleaded guilty to manslaughter, but Justice Sir Maurice Drake placed him on three years' probation and released him from custody.

"For very many years you tolerated an unhappy marriage although still continuing to love a dominant wife, hoping that matters would improve," the judge said. "You were finally taken beyond the breaking point."

Hinton and his wife were married in 1948. She was killed Sept. 1, 1981.

West Texas crops remain dry

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Scattered spring rains early this week should help farmers in central areas of Texas get their crops up and should help conditions in coastal areas and parts of East Texas.

However, most western areas remain dry. Spring planting continues to increase over the eastern half of the state, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of the Texas A&M University System.

Corn and grain sorghum planting is complete over most of Southwest Texas and the Central Texas Blacklands and ranges from 70 to 80 percent complete in South Texas and the Coastal Bend, he said. Cotton planting is about 50 percent complete in the Coastal Bend and 60 percent complete in the Rio Grande Valley and is also active along the Upper Coast and in South Central Texas, Pfannstiel said.

Rice planting continues in coastal areas. Warmer soil temperatures that are vital for good seed germination and good crop stands have prompted increased planting, said Pfannstiel.

Temperature averages as recorded by the Agricultural Weather Service for the past week were as follows: Austin, 67 degrees; Beaumont, 75; Beeville, 75; Bushland, 53; College Station 66; Eagle Lake, 74; Dilley, 79; Lavon Dam (near Dallas), 66; Longview, 76; Lufkin, 69; San Angelo, 67.

The Extension Service recommends that farmers wait until the soil temperature reaches at least 50 degrees for planting corn, 55 for grain sorghum and 65 for cotton.

Some spring planting is also going on in western areas, noted Pfannstiel. Onions, potatoes and sugar beets are being planted in the High Plains.

Preplant irrigation is under way in the High Plains and continues in the Trans-Pecos area. Farmers are also irrigating wheat in western areas along with alfalfa. Most wheat looks good but needs moisture, Pfannstiel said.

supplemental feeding decreasing as green grazing becomes available.

Reports from district extension directors showed these conditions:

PANHANDLE — Wheat is making good progress but needs moisture. Some irrigation is under way along with preplant irrigation for corn. Most onions and sugar beets have been planted in Deaf Smith County. Land preparation continues for other crops. Most cattle look good, with stockers moving off wheat to allow a grain crop.

SOUTH PLAINS — Some southern counties got a good rain the past week but the rest of the area remains dry. Land preparation continues in full swing, with preplant irrigation under way.

ROLLING PLAINS — About half the counties have good moisture due to recent rains. Wheat is making good growth where rains fell; however, hail damaged the crop in Wichita County. Greenbugs continue to infest some wheat. Livestock look good.

Let us spray to stop crabgrass, dandelions

Crabgrass and dandelions are two common weeds appearing in early spring that can ruin your lawn. But with a little know-how and proper care you can stop these common weeds and enjoy a beautiful lawn all summer long.

Crabgrass is an annual, bunch-type grassy weed. It sprouts in early spring and is killed by the first frost of fall. Crabgrass is a very vigorous plant. And if crabgrass was in your lawn last year, you can be sure it will be back this year. Thousands of seeds are left behind each fall when crabgrass dies.

Fortunately, crabgrass is an annual plant — dying completely each fall. And that makes early spring the best time for control with a pre-emergence herbicide.

A pre-emergence herbicide kills crabgrass seeds before they have a chance to sprout. Apply a pre-emergence herbicide about 2 weeks before the crabgrass first appears. This prevents crabgrass from even sprouting — eliminating the chance that it will overtake your lawn later in the season.

After crabgrass has begun to grow — post-emergence herbicides must be used to control crabgrass. A well-stocked nursery, garden center or hardware store should carry pre- and post-emergence herbicides for crabgrass control.

Dandelions pose a different problem to the homeowner. Dandelions are broadleaf perennials and do not die from year to year. They only seem to die because they become dormant. Most live through the harshest of winters, popping back up with the first warm spell of spring.

Because dandelions develop deep tap roots — it is virtually impossible to get rid of them by pulling or digging. Even if you cut a root below the ground leaves, you still probably won't eliminate the weed.

A spring application of herbicide is one of the best ways to fight dandelions. They are easy to spot and spray right on target.

According to David G. Foster, Extension Agent Entomology, the best sprayer for treatment of lawns is the compressed air sprayer. Look for one with an adjustable nozzle, spray extension, and positive on-off valve. These features will help you control the spray and put it right on target.

Herbicides should be applied according to the manufacturer's directions. Always read and follow carefully all label instructions. To spray lawn weeds, set the nozzle on your compression sprayer to deliver a coarse spray and apply at low pressure to avoid drift.

As you walk over the area to be treated, move the sprayer nozzle back and forth in an even pattern. The sprayer's on-off valve will help prevent waste when you want to spot spray weeds.

After application, thoroughly rinse your sprayer with water at least two or three times. Fill with water again, pressurize sprayer, and spray, so nozzle and hose are rinsed.

Because of the nature of herbicides, Mr. Foster recommends that you keep one sprayer for herbicides and another for insecticides and fungicides. Most vegetable and ornamental plants are broadleaved and may be killed as readily as weeds. Weed killer is difficult to always clean completely from your sprayer, so it is best to keep one sprayer for weeds and another for insects and fungus control.

Damage from wind erosion reported down

WASHINGTON (AP) — New government figures show one of the most effective ways to control wind erosion in the Great Plains is for the region to get plenty of snow and rain during critical months.

Conversely, when snow and rain are sparse the vast region often does not have enough vegetation to hold soil in place, leaving it vulnerable to the wind.

According to the Soil Conservation Service, wind erosion in the 10-state Plains area during the first four months of the season that began last Nov. 1 was only about half that of a year earlier.

Through February, the agency said, wind damaged fewer than 2.1 million acres in the Great Plains, compared to nearly 4.2 million in the same period in 1980-81.

The SCS reports on Great Plains wind erosion damage during the season which runs through May 31.

Land is considered damaged by wind if enough soil has been removed or deposited on it to subject the land to further erosion hazard, or to impair its productive capacity.

Norman A. Berg, chief of the Soil Conservation Service, said this season's wind erosion decline so far has been attributable to "good snow cover and adequate soil moisture."

Total damage in the six-month 1980-81 season totaled nearly 12.5 million acres in the 10-state area, the most in 26 years and the second-largest area of wind erosion damage recorded by the agency.

A year ago Berg said "lack of moisture" was the main reason for the surge in Great Plains wind erosion.

The most land reported damaged since the service started keeping records was 15.8 million acres in 1954-55. However, the agency did not begin keeping official records on wind erosion until after it was established in 1935, and there were some years earlier in the '30s in which damage was much more extensive.

Through February, Great Plains wind damage involved 96 percent cropland, with rangeland and other types making up the balance.

Texas, with more than half a million acres reported damaged during the four-month period, accounted for 25 percent of the total. Officials said "low levels of protective residue" from previous crops were a major factor.

The northern Great Plains accounted for 55 percent of this season's damage through February, the report said.

Damage was down this season from a year earlier in all states except Wyoming, Colorado and Texas.

Pecan marketing order proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department wants to hear from pecan growers, shellers and consumers about a proposal to establish a federal marketing order for pecans grown in 16 states.

Charles Brader of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service said Thursday the Federated Pecan Growers' Association of the United States submitted the plan for consideration.

The states covered would be:

Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Florida, Georgia, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas.

Brader said the plan calls for setting up marketing research and development projects for pecans, including promotion and paid advertising. The projects would be financed by assessments to be paid by pecan shellers on pecans shelled in the continental United States.

The plan also calls for a 14-member board of growers, shellers and a public member to work with the department in administering the program.

Brader said the department "eventually may hold public hearings" on the proposal.

Copies of the proposal can be obtained from Allen Belden, Room 2541-S, AMS, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250. Comments can be sent to the same address by April 23.

Brown pushes set-aside programs

AUSTIN — Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown urges Texas farmers to participate in the Federal set-aside program, "because right now, it's the only thing standing between agriculture and a near collapse of the farm economy in grains and cotton."

"Texas agriculture is in a critical economic bind this year with large inventories of grains and cotton and a worldwide slow-down in sales. Reducing acreage can help prices. We must also increase our efforts to sell — to any nation that wants to buy," Brown said.

"We have protested the low target prices, loan rates, and the amount of set-asides since the farm bill was first introduced, but changes are unlikely."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has established a 15 percent set-aside in wheat, cotton, and rice and 10 percent in feed grains. No payment for the set-aside acreage will be made. Farmers have until April 16 to decide if they want to participate.

Overall acreage enrollment as of March 4 is very low in Texas, with 1.28 percent participation, according to a USDA report. In the past week enrollment has picked up some.

Another reason for low enrollment is the change in determining the base acreage this year. If a producer has planted a crop not recorded in the past two years, he cannot enroll the new crop, and this has cut many from the program.

Mr. G's Guide on Tomatoes

You want perfect tomatoes. The tomato plant is ready and willing to deliver if you give it what it needs. Select a variety that you have used or one recommended by Mr. G's personnel. The size of the tomato you desire is essential in making your selection.

Disease resistance is shown by "V" for verticillium wilt, "F" for fusarium wilt or "N" for nematodes. There is a hybrid variety (Hy) and standard variety (S). You may want to check the number of days from transplanting to first picking.

Too much water can drown plant roots — too little can stop tomato production: The daily requirements of nutrients is small but that amount should be available when the plant needs it. Always follow package or bottle directions for best results. Make sure soil is loose and permits good drainage. Remember roots breathe the way you do. Deprived of air, roots, or portions of roots die of suffocation. To the tomato plant light is life so give it good sunlight. If you have problems with your tomatoes come see Mr. G. He will assist you in finding the solution.

Full funding for library act urged

By JUDITH GRAY
County Librarian

New Federalism will happen this September for public libraries across the country if Congress goes along with President Reagan's proposed fiscal-year 1983 budget.

Reagan has proposed zero funding for the Library Services and Construction Act, which for many years has provided federal funds to supplement the services of local public libraries. In West Texas, the West Texas Library System currently receives 17 percent of its operating budget from this source. The Interlibrary Loan program, which provides thousands of materials each year to libraries lacking them in their own collections to fill requests from local patrons, is funded 100 percent from these federal funds. The patron pays no charge.

James Stewart, chairman of the legislative committee of the Texas Library Association, has sent out a letter urging library supporters to immediately contact their Representatives and Senators. He has been advised by the Washington office of the American Library Association that "the mood on the Hill was that this proposal would not pass if Congress received sufficient mail opposing it."

People contacting their Congressmen should also be aware that federal funding for the current year is still in doubt. An appropriation for LSCA has not been passed for the 1982 fiscal year and the continuing resolution which was passed as a stopgap measure before the Christmas recess runs out on March 31st. If you sit down and write a letter urging full funding of the Library Services and Construction Act for 1982 and mail it today, it may still serve the purpose. Remember too, urge your Congressmen to vote for funding of the LSCA in 1983.

Who to write to in Washington. Your U.S. Senators are Lloyd Bentsen and John Tower. Address: The Honorable _____, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510 (Dear Senator: _____). U.S. Representatives are Charles Stenholm (Howard, Floyd, Crosby, Garza, Borden, Lynn, part of Dawson); Kent Hance (Andrews, Cochran, Gaines, Hockley, Lubbock, Martin, Midland, Terry, Yoakum, Bailey, Lamb, Hale, part of Ector) and Tom Loeffler (Crane, Upton, Glasscock). Address: The Honorable _____, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20500. (Dear Mr. _____)

It is agreed that somewhere federal spending should be reduced, but to be cut off completely? The Library Services and Construction Act since its passage has been one of the better administered programs. Through its various sections (Titles), new buildings have been constructed, books have been purchased in areas where there is low local funding, it has assisted public, school and college library programs.

Libraries are caught in a squeeze play between higher costs for books and other materials, for supplies, for operations. Yet in spite of higher costs, public libraries (and the other types as well) try to maintain a level of service at little or no direct cost to the user. Your Howard County Library on its own and through its membership in the West Texas Library System offers free library service: no charge for library cards on registration; free film programs; lending of films and filmstrips at no charge; free borrowing of books and materials on the interlibrary loan program (no library can afford to buy every book published); lending of art works at no charge; and lending of books and records at no charge. The doors are open to every citizen. No where can better value for tax money be found. Please consider the closing statement: "Libraries will get you through times of no money better than money will get you through times of no libraries."

Wall Street's optimists are out in force

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's diehard optimists are out in force these days disputing speculation that the economy might be headed for its first Depression since the 1930s.

"We fail to see any significant likelihood of such a calamity," declares the Merrill Lynch Market Letter.

"Depressions have been forecast in every postwar recession," maintains Maury Harris, money market economist at Paine Webber. "Such gloomy prognostications are always wrong and usually best ignored."

"It is axiomatic in the market that great opportunities come clothed as great risks," says Francis H.M. Kelly, investment strategist at Dean Witter Reynolds.

Most of the observers conceded that "since the huge oil price escalation of 1973, growth has slowed significantly and budget deficits have stayed at unprecedented levels in most nations around the world."

Given these conditions, economists have been able to draw many parallels between the current state of affairs and the one that prevailed in the 1920s, before the last collapse.

But Merrill Lynch said there are several important differences as well. "Consumers, for instance, have significantly lowered their debt-income ratios since the peak in 1979," the firm said.

"Mortgage foreclosures have increased, but remain below previous highs. The economy is well along in the transition away from the speculation in land, resources and collectibles that peaked early in 1980."

Investors' fears of a severe slump seem to have eased a bit in recent days. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 12.27 to 817.92 in the past week.

That, along with an 8.28-point rise in the previous week, enabled the average to put together two consecutive weekly gains for the first time this year.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose .91 to 64.53, and the American Stock Exchange market value index added 6.58 to 260.20.

Big Board volume averaged 53.70 million shares a day, against 48.61 million a week earlier.

Harris at Paine Webber maintains the recent slowing of inflation will cushion the economy's decline.

"Recent price cuts as businesses liquidate excessive inventories will help stabilize real household purchasing power," he said. "In a related vein, the overpricing that was at the heart of the automobile and construction industries' problems is finally being rectified in the marketplace."

Harris also pointed out that a 10 percent income tax cut and a cost-of-living increase for Social Security recipients are scheduled to take effect at mid-year.

OPEC warns of meeting

KUWAIT (AP) — OPEC's president said Saturday the world oil cartel may call another emergency session to take measures against Shell Oil Co. and other firms unless they stop pressuring Nigeria to drop its price.

"I have made contacts over the past 48 hours with OPEC ministers on the possibility of holding another emergency session," OPEC President Mana Saad Oteiba said in Abu Dhabi.

"This is in application of Article 4 of OPEC's constitution, stipulating that if a member country is subjected to pressures from oil companies...the organization may call an emergency meeting to adopt measures in support of the member concerned," he added.

"We shall call for this meeting immediately unless the oil companies change their attitude toward Nigeria," Oteiba stated.

Irrigation field day set Friday

This Friday, the Glasscock County Underground Water Conservation District will host an irrigation field day on the Hubert Frerich Farm. Speakers will be Mr. Leon New of the TAEX engineering staff and Mr. Jerry Walker of the Amarillo Area SCS office.

The purpose of the field day will be to educate agricultural professionals and local farmers in pumping efficiency of motors and the amount of water needed to efficiently water the soil. Metering equipment and other tools will be discussed from the SCS trailer which will be on display during the field day.

The cost of pumping ground water has been spiraling severely due to the increase of energy prices. Inefficient pumps cause lower pumping levels, increased cost, limitation on water yield and a restriction on the available drawdown. In irrigated agriculture where ground water pumpage constitutes a large percentage of the total crop expenditures, irrigation well improvements can offer the best in dollar return to the farmer.

The benefit this is hoped to achieve in measuring water efficiency is to have the ability to water more acreage or to water a given area in a shorter period of time.

The meeting is open to the public. The Frerich farm is located 4 miles east on Hwy. 158 out of Garden City toward Sterling City. It will start at 9 a.m. on April 2.

Before you say "I've heard it all before," listen once more!

The signs of the times are clear: God is speaking to our generation.

World events are racing toward the crisis predicted so long ago in the Bible. It seems like things are out of control, but they're not.

And before you decide to turn your back on what God is saying, you owe it to yourself to listen once more.

If you listen — really listen — you could find a new life unfolding before you... a life full of promise and hope and victory... a life that will last forever.

Plan now to join us for a week of crusade... for a look at where the world is headed... and what we can look forward to... because you only have to listen now to hear forever.

Listen now. Hear forever.

Auction at huge honky tonk to benefit Olympians

EDITOR'S NOTE: You might say it's the revelry of the rich, with a twist. In boots and jeans, the affluent will gather Sunday night at a giant honky tonk to eat, drink, dance and bid on prizes ranging from a Texas Longhorn and a Hawaiian vacation to a hot air balloon ride and John Wayne's eyepatch. And it's all for a good cause.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — For $1,000 a table, or $100 a head, you're invited Sunday evening to bid on a signed portrait of Elvis Presley.

Or how 'bout the autographed original script from "Who Shot J.R.?"

Maybe you'd like to purchase a walk-on part in those daytime dramas "Days of Our Lives" or "The Young and the Restless." This includes lunch with the cast.

If show biz isn't your bag, there are vacation trips to Hawaii, Aspen, Winter Park or the Caribbean.

You can even spend a weekend on former baseball magnate Brad Corbett's yacht out of Pompano Beach, Fla., or take a VIP tour of the White House.

The occasion is the "First Annual United States Olympic Auction" from 5 p.m. until midnight Sunday at Billy Bob's Texas.

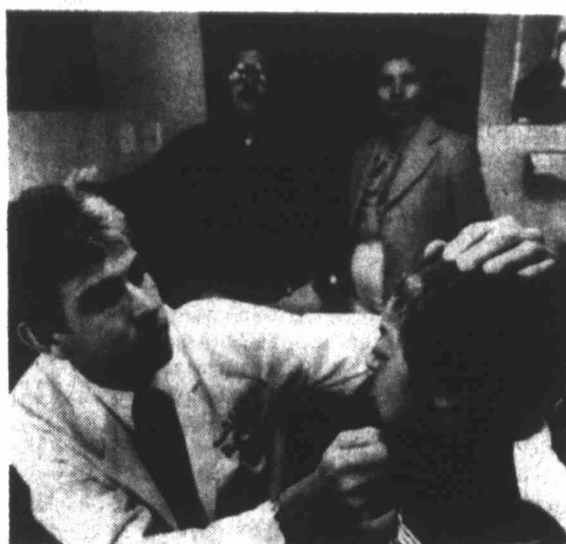

Almost any Texan can tell you that Billy Bob's is the world's largest and liveliest C&W palace, notwithstanding Gilley's of Houston and "Urban Cowboy" fame.

But no matter. The party overshadows the place and the good surely outweighs the bad, even if John Wayne's "True Grit" eyepatch is a bummer.

Proceeds go to support and train America's 1984 Olympic team.

The auction, while innovative, also has an admirably unique touch. One of the gift items is craniofacial surgery for the deformed child of a Pecos truckdriver.

The recipient, Kevin Leyva, 5, suffers from Crouzon Syndrome, a defect which prohibits natural growth and development of the brain, head and face.

TO BENEFIT FROM AUCTION — Kevin Leyva, 5, is examined by Dr. Kenneth Salyer, as his parents watch. Kevin suffers from Crouzon Syndrome, which prohibits natural development of the face, brain and head. Surgery for the Pecos youth is one of the items to be auctioned off Sunday at Fort Worth's Billy Bob's Texas nightclub. The Texas-size auction's purpose is to support the 1984 US Olympic team.

Corrective surgery will curb facial distortion and prevent potential mental retardation and blindness.

Such surgery and hospital bills would cost at least $25,000, medical experts say. Though the surgery was donated, it still will be auctioned and the money funneled into the Olympic fund.

"Craniofacial surgery is a new specialty of plastic surgery," said Dr. Kenneth Salyer, the Dallas donor who heads the medical team.

"It combines techniques of the neurosurgeon and plastic surgeon working together to effect major changes in the cranial and facial skeleton."

Salyer told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram: "If the surgery were not done (for Kevin), it would be a major disaster."

The idea of such an unusual auction item grew from a suggestion that Salyer donate a facelift, which would hardly raise an eyebrow among some of the other items.

No doubt there will be a scramble over Sylvester Stallone's custom-made Harley-Davidson used in "Rocky III."

And who could live without Hugh Hefner's autographed pipe or Carol Burnett's trademark washerwoman hat? With the pipe you get a tour of the Playboy mansion.

Should you want a Texas Longhorn to go with your Texas Longnecks, L.S. Ranches has donated one. There's also a quarterhorse named "Dusty Deck Bar" for sale.

For the daring, there's a hot air balloon ride for two, dubbed the "Champagne Flight Adventure."

More conventional items include a full length natural mink coat with sable collar, a case of Chateau Lafite-Rothschild, a Buick Skylark and a baby blue 1975 Cadillac.

Billy Bob himself has donated a steer, slaughtered and packaged and earmarked for the charity of the buyer's choice.

For the athletic among you, there is Texas Ranger catcher Jim Sundberg's baseball glove, six tickets and parking pass to a Dallas Cowboys game or a round of golf, and lunch, with Byron Nelson.

In that vein, Gerald Ford's putter is up for grabs.

Jetsetters can vie for the first-class, round-trip fare to London via Braniff... if there is a Braniff. Or five nights in Mexico City.

There is some truly spectacular art work on the block, but autographed portraits of Mork and Mindy, Carroll O'Connor and Ryan O'Neal hardly fit that category.

Nor does the original theater poster from Elvis' first movie, "Love Me Tender," or Gene Autry, John Wayne, Clint Eastwood and Dustin Hoffman posters.

Dolly Parton, Jacqueline Bisset and Jane Fonda posters come a little closer, but still seem somehow less than true art.

For the clothes horse, there is Sally Field's original wedding gown worn in "Smokey and the Bandit" and Sissy Spacek's outfit from "Coal Miner's Daughter."

U.S. Jaycees lose discrimination fight

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The U.S. Jaycees have lost another court fight in their effort to exclude women from full membership.

U.S. District Judge Diana Murphy ruled that Minnesota laws against sex discrimination were constitutional and were applied properly to the Jaycees. The group had argued the law unconstitutionally deprived the organization of its right of free association, specifically to "associate for the purpose of advancing only the interests of young men."

Ms. Murphy held Thursday that such a right cannot be used as a foundation for excluding women.

The issue dates from the early 1970s, when the Jaycees were challenged on their policy of granting only associate memberships to women and of denying them rights such as voting or holding office in the organization.

In 1974 and 1975 the Minneapolis and St. Paul chapters of the Jaycees admitted women.

Q. Our home has been on the market for six months. We have had only one offer, contingent upon the sale of the buyer's house. That home is overpriced and on the market for over a year. We're tempted to take the offer. What's your advice?

A. You know why the buyer's house isn't selling, but have you determined why yours isn't? Have you looked objectively at the price you're asking for your house? Are you asking for an all-cash transaction when you could offer to take back a second mortgage? In other words, before you accept a questionable offer, take a look and see if there isn't a way to have a few more offers — perhaps more attractive ones — from which to choose.

Takes two teams to do title tango

• 'Heels headed for NCAA 'prom night'

By JOHN NELSON

AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sam Perkins and James Worthy carried North Carolina down the stretch, and Coach Dean Smith's four-corner offense nailed down a 68-63 victory for the top-rated Tar Heels over Houston Saturday in the semifinals of the NCAA Basketball Championship Tournament.

Worthy and Perkins combined for nine points in the final 9:33, while Houston struggled to cope with North Carolina's spread offense.

Leading 52-48, the Tar Heels went into their slowdown, which has drawn much criticism in recent weeks. It almost cost the Tar Heels the Atlantic Coast Conference title against Virginia, but on Saturday it became a potent offensive weapon.

Worthy, who had scored North Carolina's previous two baskets, was the first to score from the four-corners with a slam dunk that put North Carolina ahead 54-48 with 6:46 left. Then Perkins took over. He drove to the basket and was fouled for a three-point play, and one minute later he hit another layup that gave the Tar Heels a 59-53 lead with 3:33 left.

The Cougars pulled within four, 59-55, on a basket by a Clyde Drexler with 2:54 remaining, but North Carolina scored the next six points, all from the foul line, to open a 10-point lead, 65-55, with 2:14 to go.

That was it for Houston, and the victory sent North Carolina into the championship game for the second straight year.

The Tar Heels, top-ranked in the country and with a 31-2 record, on Monday night will meet the winner of Saturday's second semifinal between Georgetown and Louisville.

The victory also gave Smith another chance at the national title, which has eluded him in six previous Final Four appearances. Last year, North Carolina lost to Indiana in the title game.

The loss prevented Houston Coach Guy Lewis from registering the 500th victory of his 26-year career as the Cougars' mentor. Houston ended the season with a 25-8 record.

The game was played before an estimated crowd of 61,000 at the Superdome, setting an NCAA record. Perkins scored 25 points and Worthy added 14 for North Carolina. Freshman Michael Jordan scored 18 for the winners. Lynden Rose led Houston with 20, and Larry Micheaux had 18.

Rob Williams, whose average of 21.8 points a game was the best of any player in the Final Four, was held to just two points for Houston, both from the free throw line.

North Carolina opened a 14-0 lead in first 4:48, then Smith nearly took his team out of it. He put in substitutes Buzz Peterson, Chris Bruft and Warren Martin. The Cougars scored 13 of the next 17 points and trailed by five, 18-13, with 10:36 left.

Micheaux had five points in that run, including a three-point play.

The Cougars finally tied it 29-29 on a feed underneath to Micheaux with 1:45 left in the half. North Carolina clung to a two-point lead, 31-29 as the second half began.

The Tar Heels opened the second half in a fashion similar to the way they began the game, outscoring Houston 7-2 in a 2:49 stretch to take a 38-31 lead. North Carolina led by as many as nine, 46-37, when Worthy drove the lane and hit a jumper with 12:15 left.

• Hoyas become finals dance partner

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Georgetown parlayed the finesse of Eric Smith and the power of Patrick Ewing into a 50-46 victory over Louisville in the semifinals of the NCAA Basketball Championships Saturday, giving the Hoyas their first chance at a national title since 1943.

Smith, carrying much of the offensive load for foul-troubled Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, scored eight straight Georgetown points in a 14-4 run that erased a one-point deficit and produced a nine-point lead.

Smith, who averaged only 9.3 points a game in the regular season, scored 14, including an assortment of twisting layups, back-door plays and jump shots to help the Hoyas end Louisville's title hopes.

The victory earned Georgetown the right to meet top-ranked North Carolina Monday night for the national championship. In their only other appearance in the Final Four, Georgetown lost to Wyoming 51-43 in the 1943 title game.

Battling Louisville all the way, the Hoyas intimidated the Cardinals inside, with the 7-foot freshman Ewing blocking shots, causing turnovers and harrying shooters.

The Cardinals, national champions in 1980, trailed by only 24-22 at the half. They outscored Georgetown 8-5 in the first 4:03 of the second half, twice taking one-point leads, the final time on a 15-foot baseline shot by Wiley Brown that made it 30-29 with 15:57 to play.

That's when Georgetown exploded. Floyd, Georgetown's All-American guard, started it with a pair of free throws and Ewing added a layup on a feed from Fred Brown.

Then Smith took over. He scored two baskets before Floyd picked up his fourth personal foul, forcing him to the bench. Smith then hit another basket and pair of foul shots and Ewing capped the run with two free throws that made it 43-34 with 5:50 left.

Sixth-ranked Georgetown still clung to a nine-point lead, 47-38, when Louisville began to show championship-caliber courage. The Cardinals, ranked No. 20 in the final Associated Press ratings, outscored Georgetown 8-2 over the next three minutes and trailed by only 49-46 on a basket by Derek Smith with 14 seconds left.

Georgetown's Eric Smith had a chance to sew up the victory when he went to the line with a one-and-one with 11 seconds left, but he missed the first shot. But Louisville lost the rebound out of bounds and when Georgetown inbounded, Floyd was fouled. Floyd sank the first of two free throws, sending Louisville home for the season with a 23-10 record. Georgetown upped its record to 30-6 in only its seventh appearance in the NCAA Tournament.

Louisville, with four starters back from its championship team of two years ago, managed to neutralize the brute force of Ewing through much of the first half by using a swarming, double-and-sometimes triple-teaming defense. The Cardinals were able to force Georgetown to shoot from the outside.

The Hoyas built their biggest lead of the first half, 18-12, by scoring six straight points, including four in nine seconds by freshman Anthony Jones.

MIDLAND — Things looked a whole lot better Saturday Frank Ibarra said. For Midland High, things looked a whole lot bleaker in the first half of district play for the Bulldogs.

Adam Rodriguez stifled Midland with a five-hitter and Blake Rosson collected three hits to pace the Steers to a 3-1 victory over the Bulldogs at Memorial Stadium.

The win evens Big Spring's record in league play at 1-1 while the Bulldogs, picked to finish third ahead of the See 5-A round-up and standings on page 5-B.

Steers, slipped to 0-2. Big Spring hosts Permian at 4 p.m. Tuesday with Domingo Rubio expected to go against Mojo ace Bruce Hollander.

"We played good defense today," Ibarra said after his team cleared the field. "The one error they made led to their only run. We talked about it this week and decided we had to get our heads into the district race. The kid's were mentally ready today and that made the difference."

Rodriguez kept the Bulldogs off stride with a very good curveball Saturday. He fanned seven Midland batters including Hipolito Zarate for the final out with two men on. He gave up five singles but the only run scored off the junior righthander was by Jose Carrasco who walked and scored on an error by David Anguiano in the third inning. Zarate and Jim Gunnels singled in the second inning with one out but Rodriguez fanned Mark Williams and Judd Ryan to end the frame. In the seventh, pitcher Billy Miles singled after Tim Davis drew a full-count walk but Zarate went down on three pitches to end the game.

In a strange first inning, Big Spring grabbed a 1-0 lead thanks to two big mistakes by Davis, the Bulldog catcher. Oscar Limon reached on an error by Faustino Granada and Rosson came up with his first hit of the day with one out.

Interference by Davis on Olague loaded the bases and when Tom Cudd rapped into an apparent doubleplay, Davis was called for interference again, allowing Limon to score.

In the second, Marcus Armendariz singled and scored when shortstop Carrasco booted a bouncer by Limon.

The Steers put an insurance run on the scoreboard in the fifth when Rosson doubled, moved to third on an error and scored on Cudd's sacrifice fly to left.

Pitchers Joel De La Garza and Miles allowed just four hits — three hard shots by Rosson — and all three runs

Perhaps a little explanation would help.

Things have been going quite well for this new sports editor, although a few kinks have developed in the line of communication. Thus the flow gets clogged occasionally and the line needs straightening out before the stream is cut off completely.

Priority No. 1 is to cover Big Spring and area sports. This includes news stories, features and pictures. Despite the bad attitude some members of the community have toward the local high school, I have found the kids possess a great attitude. They work hard at making a name for their school and don't think they are unaware of embarrassing comments made around town.

If bringing a more positive attitude to local athletics through the newspaper is possible, that becomes my top goal here at The Herald. I think the plan is working so far and perhaps the momentum will carry through the '82 football season.

Besides, if you can't read about Big Spring news in the town's own newspaper, where else will you find it? The Dallas paper? No chance. Please don't try to brainwash me with the "loser" bit about Big Spring. It won't work ... primarily because it isn't true. Ask Danny Stephens, Jerald Wrightsil, Kip McLaughlin, Karl Wolfe, Carla Jackson, Speight Grimes, Moe Rubio, Dana Cannon, Patricia Jones ...

Moving on, folks have found out I'm willing to travel, work extra hours and even do some things on my own time to get a variety of sports news in the paper. I have one request.

Because I am limited by time and space, I need advance notice on events. I can't do much when I'm alerted to a story the day before it happens. And don't think I'm omnipotent. I pawned my crystal ball a few years ago that told me everything that I wanted to know about the sports world.

I need your calls and tips of possible features (which I thank you for already) but don't expect overnight service. Folks sometimes fool around and get behind on their publicity and run to the newspaper in hopes we'll save face for them.

Sometimes we can, more often we can't drop everything and give them "a big headline."

That applies to sports — give me some leeway in time and you'll be happily surprised at the results.

While I'm getting these things off my chest, I have three more.

It's easy to call the paper, radio or TV stations when you win, but we media types find the calls fail to come in when a loss is involved.

Please, we support you when you win and we hate it when you lose. But give us a call anyway. It makes us both look like good losers.

Another thing. We can't give excessive publicity to sponsors in the paper. Yes we'll recognize their sponsorship in a story or in the title of the event. Our main job is the event itself, however, and that's what we need to dedicate our space to.

One final thing. When a sports event happens one day or night, give us a call the next day with the outcome. Any later and it's old news ... like a popsicle left out in the sun, the news value melts away.

The Herald wants to be a NEWSpaper, not an OLD NEWSpaper.

That's it. Thanks for hearing me out.

College football bigger business than pros

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

In 1980, the average National Football League team spent $6 million, not counting player salaries, and made a profit. The University of Oklahoma will spend $2.5 million more than that this year and lose money.

Those figures illustrate the problem of running a bigtime college sports program today.

All bigtime sports schools have comparable sized big-budgets, and even the most stable programs are struggling to balance the books.

At Oklahoma, for instance, anyone other than a student or faculty member had to pay $12.50 for a single ticket to a single football game at Owen Field in 1981. This year, the price for that same ticket will be $15.

But don't for a moment think that on opening day Sept. 11 against West Virginia, any of the 76,000 or so seats will be empty because of the increase. Football is king in Sooner country and if the ticket price goes up again next year, the fans still will pay.

Yet the Oklahoma athletic budget, inflated by the growth of women's sports and interest on long-term debts for such things as construction, has some people at Norman worried.

The average NFL team had revenues of almost $13.5 million in 1980, the last year for which figures are available. Oklahoma's 1981-82 sports budget shows receipts of slightly more than $8.1 million. So, while the NFL teams had an average profit of more than $1.4 million that year, Oklahoma's current sports budget of $8.5 million has a deficit of about $350,000.

For this reason, the next six months represent a crisis period for the future of sports at OU. That is the opinion of Robert Smith, assistant athletic director and business manager at the university. The budget is his domain and the numbers trouble him.

"This is a crucial time for the program here," Smith said. "We are at a financial crossroads."

In the back of Smith's mind is the situation at Colorado, which, like Oklahoma, is a member of the Big Eight Conference. From a budget surplus of $200,000 to $300,000 annually, Colorado suddenly found itself with a deficit approaching $1 million. Some sports were eliminated completely and others cut back to club level to close the gap.

"That is the kind of nightmare that could happen here," Smith said. "I see parallels between our program and theirs prior to their downfall and, frankly, that scares me. With our debt service ($908,950 this year) and multiplicity of sports, our total size is such that one shockwave, one fault in the crust and the whole earth could open up and swallow us like it did them."

So important decisions must be made. Where do you cut? Which sports are dropped? How do you bridge that dollar-and-cents gap? OU is searching for those answers right now.

Wade Walker, the university's athletic director, knows full well that he is operating a big business.

"A lot of people don't like to put it in that vernacular, but that's what it is," he said. "Our budget is probably bigger than any other department here. Health sciences or engineering might be larger; I'm not sure."

The difference, however, is that academic departments receive money from the university; OU's athletic department is self-sustaining. Not one penny of its funds comes from the university or its students. In fact, Sooner teams turn income over to the university rather than drawing from it.

"We receive no state or federal funds or student fees," Walker said. "Our income is generated from gate receipts, television-radio revenue and private donations."

That money can be substantial. A regular-season national television football game last year typically carried a $400,000 fee from ABC. Oklahoma's share of that would be $200,000, which is turned over to the Big Eight and redistributed to the conference schools. Participating schools in each game get an extra slice of the pie.

Bowl games, of course, are worth considerably more than that. And tournament bids in the other sports like basketball are important moneymakers. Every one of the 48 teams invited to play in the current NCAA basketball hoedown, for example, earned a minimum of $121,000. Even after sharing that income within the conference, the payoff is impressive. That's for one game. Advance past the first round and the money increases to $364,000 for a regional final and finally to a top of $500,000 for making the Final Four.

This formula has been adjusted twice in the past three years. Tom Jernstedt, assistant executive director in charge of championship events for the National Collegiate Athletic Association, said that had the old formula been maintained this season, a Final Four team would have been paid $1 million.

The National Invitation Tournament, with 32 teams, generates less income because it doesn't have the advantage of a national network television contract.

And a money is the bottom line. Everywhere. "I tell my football and basketball coaches after I hire them that I really don't care what their won-lost records are, as long as they sell peanuts and popcorn while getting those records," said Ted Bredehoff, athletic director at Wichita State.

Oklahoma's basketball team brought home NIT revenue this year, invited there after going 19-10 following a 9-18, no-tournament record in 1981. It was a major plus in a difficult budget year.

Still, though, football is No. 1 in Sooner country. It accounts for almost 33 percent of the budget expenditures and nearly 66 percent of the athletic department's income. "Football is our kingpin," Walker said. "All sports produce some revenue, but football is the only one that takes in more than it spends. It is the catalyst that allows the rest of them to exist."

So when Oklahoma's sports program slices come, as Smith insists they must, don't expect any of the trimming to be done at the expense of the flourishing football program.

According to Walker, Oklahoma's sports budget is comparable to those maintained at schools such as Southern California, Michigan, Ohio State and Texas — high-visibility universities where sports and success are a top priority.

Sometimes, though, schools normally considered somewhat lower on the athletic ladder, get into the high stakes swing of things. Consider the $1.7 million package Jackie Sherrill received from Texas A&M to move there from Pittsburgh as football coach. If Sherrill delivers victory, then the people in Texas who arranged for that windfall will consider the money well spent.

Some college administrators view success in sports as a vital element to the overall health of their university. Dan Gibbens, a law professor who is the faculty representative for athletics at Oklahoma, understands that position.

"Does athletics impact on general fund-raising?" he said. "President (William Slater) Banowsky is an expert at private fund-raising. He believes excellence in athletics is contagious. We look for excellence throughout the university. That excellence helps him gain academic funding."

Sometimes, Gibbens said, the emphasis on athletics upsets other elements of the university community.

"Some faculty and students are dismayed at the amount of attention and money spent and all that goes into sports," he said. "They ask whether this is a distraction from the academic side of the university."

But the fact is that a school with a championship football team is going to get noticed more widely in America today than a school with a championship chemistry department. Nobody trumpets the accomplishments of the chemistry professors with quite the flair and attention that is routinely paid to the achievements of the quarterback and linebackers.

What's more, nobody is offering the chemistry professors $1.7 million to move from one school to another or $500,000 to reach the Final Four. So strictly from an economic standpoint, sports occupies a dominant role on many campuses.

Gibbens was one of the leaders of the College Football Association movement, a group of bigtime football schools which wanted to break away from dependence on the whims of smaller institutions. There was an effort at signing a separate television contract and it resulted in a juicier deal for the member schools.

"Its major effect was to generate more television revenue," Gibbens said. "The CFA served its purpose. Because of it, we got 50 percent more (in the TV contract) than what we could have anticipated under the original NCAA contract."

And at Oklahoma the extra money went right into an athletic department program.

Because at Oklahoma, sports is supreme. As George Cross, Banowsky's predecessor as Oklahoma president, once said: "We hope to build a university that the football team can be proud of."

Spurs enjoy Jazz

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — George Gervin scored 47 points as the San Antonio Spurs handed the Utah Jazz their 17th straight loss, 114-110, in National Basketball Association action Saturday night.

The loss moved Utah another game closer to the league record of 20 losses in a row, set by Philadelphia in the early 1970s.

Gervin, who scored 29 points in the first half and had 40 by the end of three quarters, was held scoreless in the final nine minutes of the final quarter. But he then scored five in a row after Utah had pulled to within two points, 105-103.

The Spurs never were threatened after that.

Darrell Griffith led the Jazz with 22 points. Jeff Wilkins added 21 and Adrian Dantley finished with only 18 after being held scoreless in the fourth period.

The Spurs improved their record in the Midwest Division to 44-27. The Jazz, who haven't won since Feb. 23, are in last place in the same division at 19-52, 25 games out of first place.

San Antonio led 33-31 after a quarter thanks to 19 points from Gervin. Ricky Green scored 14 points for the Jazz in the second period as they came back to tie it 62-62 at intermission.

It was still tied at the end of three periods, this time at 84, but San Antonio quickly moved ahead in the final stanza and Utah played catchup ball the rest of the way.

Atlanta 96 Dallas 85

DALLAS (AP) — Eddie Johnson and John Drew each scored 21 points to lead Atlanta to a 96-85 Saturday win over Dallas in a lackluster National Basketball Association contest.

The Hawks, 35-35 and second to Milwaukee in the Central Division, held the lead throughout the second half, jumping ahead by eight points late in the third period and building on that margin throughout the final quarter.

Rookie Jay Vincent led Dallas with 20 points. Rookies have paved Dallas scoring in all but three of the Mavericks' 71 games this season. Wayne Cooper and rookie Rolando Blackman each added 14 points for Dallas, now 24-47.

Reserve guard Mike Glenn scored 10 of Atlanta's 12 points in a five-minute outburst that shut off an attempted Dallas rally. The Mavericks had shaved a nine-point lead to four points when Glenn went on his tear.

It was the seventh win for Atlanta in eight games, the 11th victory in their last 14 outings.

Neither team could manage more than a four-point lead in the first two periods, with the Hawks taking a 48-44 advantage into the locker room at intermission.

H & R BLOCK SAYS "MANY WILL OVERPAY"

H & R Block, the income tax people, would like you to read a quote worth quoting. Recently a former IRS official said, "Many taxpayers will leave money on the table, will actually overpay their tax liability."

Taxpayers overpay their taxes because of a lack of tax knowledge and the fear of an audit. People file the form they receive without checking to make sure that they have taken all of their deductions and credits. H & R Block believes every client should have a complete personal interview and the return done while the client is with the tax preparer. Block knows taxes. Not only are they the world's largest tax firm, they also conduct the world's largest tax school.

Most taxpayers feel their return is done correctly and to their advantage if they are not audited, and they receive the refund shown on their tax return. This is not always true. The IRS does not check every return to see if the taxpayer took all legitimate deductions, or if the taxpayer's financial circumstances have changed from year to year. H & R Block, using a thorough interview, makes the tax laws work for the client. Every return is then double checked for correctness in both math and theory.

H & R Block will make the laws work for you at their Big Spring office — located at 1512 Gregg, Telephone Number 263-1931. Appointments available. Closed Sunday. ADV.

Semifinals thoughts--

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — After playing what they considered some of their poorest basketball of the season in the NCAA semifinals, both North Carolina and Georgetown are looking for better things in Monday night's championship game.

"We're going to have to get stronger on the backboards," said North Carolina guard Jimmy Black after Saturday's 68-63 victory over Houston. "We're going to be boxing out a lot harder in practice tomorrow."

The Tar Heels were outbreathed by the Cougars 33-26, and Coach Dean Smith admitted, "It gives me some cause for alarm" in the national finals. "Georgetown is a tough rebounding team."

Georgetown Coach John Thompson, meanwhile, said his Hoyas would have to play better offensively against North Carolina than they did in beating Louisville 50-46 Saturday in the second semifinal at the Superdome.

"I can't remember our offense ever playing this poorly since I've been at Georgetown and still winning," Thompson said. "Louisville just took us out of our game."

"Carolina will change defenses a lot more than Louisville — and that's something to worry about," Thompson said.

Tax & financial planning

WHAT IF I CAN'T PAY?

For various reasons, you might find it difficult or impossible to pay taxes to the federal government on the due date. If you truly can't pay, what do you do? This is one place where ignoring the problem will not make it go away.

There are three types of assessments for taxes which are paid late. The "penalty for failure to file" is assessed if the tax return itself is not filed by the due date. This penalty is 5% per month or fraction of a month if the return is late, up to a maximum of 25% of the balance of the tax due on that return. The second is the "penalty for late payment." This penalty is 1/2 of 1% of the unpaid tax for each month or part of a month that the tax remains unpaid. The third is the simple interest which the Internal Revenue Service is entitled to assess. As of February 1, 1982, the interest rate is 20%. It is adjusted annually to reflect the going bank rate of interest.

The penalty for late payment and for failure to file are not interest and if you are required to pay such penalties, you are not entitled to deduct them as interest expense on your tax return. The 20% interest, of course, is allowed as a deduction.

Even if you are not able to pay the taxes at the time the return is due, you should file the return by the due date to avoid the 5% per month failure to file penalty.

The IRS has a formal procedure for allowing you to pay your taxes in installments if they determine, after reviewing your financial situation, that you are unable to pay all of it at one time.

When you file your return without attaching the balance due, the IRS will send you a bill. Upon receipt of this bill, contact the IRS and ask them if you qualify for an installment plan.

To maintain a good line of communication, answer all IRS correspondence in a timely manner.

against the duo were unearned.
"Adam did a super job ... his curveball was working a lot better," Ibarra said.
"I thought I pitched pretty good," Rodriguez answered.
"I tried to throw the curve and keep the ball away from them."

Rosson said Big Spring's success on the road was due to a change in attitude this past week in practice. "The team attitude was a lot better. Everybody was pepper up." He also reported the Steers had worked on hitting a curveball during the week and the extra work paid off. Rosson's hits came on hanging curves.

"Now we've got to get ready for Permian," Ibarra changed ideas. "It'll be a close game."

Mojo gets another upset win

By GREG JAKLEWICZ

Sports Editor

Obviously upset about being picked to finish last among eight teams in District 5-AAAAA, the Permian Panthers have set about to embarrass the sports writers and coaches that penciled their name in that position.

Mojo erupted for five runs in the sixth inning and blanked Abilene High 5-0 behind the three-hit pitching of Bruce Hollander to improve its record to 2-0. In other games around the league, San Angelo surprised Midland Lee 1-0, Big Spring topped Midland 3-1 and the Cooper-Odessa game was rained out.

Here's how they went around the league Saturday afternoon:

Permian 5, Abilene 0

ODESSA — The Panthers loaded the bases in their big sixth inning on two walks and an error. A double by Stacy Gaddy drove in two runs and Kurt Strayhan put the game away with a two-RBI single.

Hollander improved his record to 5-3 as Permian stepped up to 10-9 with the win. Abilene, picked second in the pre-season poll, slipped to 10-5 overall. Jeff Waits, 4-1, tossed five innings of shutout ball before being knocked out in the sixth.

San Angelo 1, Midland Lee 0

SAN ANGELO — An unearned run in the first inning was enough to carry the Bobcats passed the Rebels in a game played in below 40-degree weather.

Morrie Hartgraves opened the game with a single, was sacrificed to second and advanced to third on an error by

Tors blow away Ector in opener

LAMESA — A five-run third inning highlighted by Lasaro Arrendondo's two-run double sparked the Lamesa Golden Tors to an 8-4 District 2-AAAAA victory over Odessa Ector Friday afternoon.

The win came in the league opener for both teams and boosted Lamesa to 4-6 on the season. Ector fell to 6-8 with the loss. The Tors tangle with Andrews at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Andrews.

After falling behind 1-0 on Eugene Morris' RBI single, the Tors struck back when Gilbert Arrendondo drove in a drive, Lasaro Arrendondo a pair and Steve Teague capped the rally with an RBI double.

Lamesa got another run in the fourth when Alfred Morales singled home a run. In the fifth, Ben Morales came around on an RBI besehit by Leroy Rodriguez. Rodriguez later scored on an Ector error.

Ector scored three runs in the top of the seventh, as the Tors committed their only two errors of the game.

Lasaro Arrendondo evened his record at 2-2 with the win. He scattered five hits, struck out and walked five. Gilbert Arrendondo is the likely starter for Tuesday night's ballgame.

Card of Thanks C-6
 In the midst of our sorrows, we wish to express our heartfelt thanks and appreciation to our many relatives, friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy shown us in the loss of our beloved husband and father, Luther Cunningham. We especially wish to thank Byron Corn and Royce Clay for their consoling words, all the donors of the many beautiful floral offerings, the pallbearers, the singers, and Trinity Memorial Funeral Home for their efficient management of the services.
 With Love,
 The Luther Cunningham Family

SPACE STUDY — Carol Peterson, a University of Houston biology researcher, holds a drawing of the plant experiment package which she helped develop for the third flight of Columbia. She believes such experiments may lead one day to gardens in space.

Columbia sprouts potted plants

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Potted plants tucked away in cabinets are sprouting unseen aboard the space shuttle, performing spadework for what scientists hope will someday be gardens in the sky.

The pine trees, oats, Chinese mung beans and sunflowers won't be there long enough to produce flowers or fruit, but their growth may help astronauts of the future grow their own food in space.

One experiment, involving sunflowers, is to determine the amount of water needed by plants growing in weightlessness.

On Earth, the water, pulled by gravity, moves downward and the roots of plants are accustomed to this. But in space the water should be uniformly distributed, and this may affect the amount required by the plants.

Results from this experiment will be used in the flight next year of Spacelab 1. On that two-week mission, which will include a spacious laboratory module, plants will be grown for other tests. By applying what is learned on the current flight, scientists will know exactly how much water to give the plants on Spacelab.

The second experiment, which uses the other three plants, was developed by scientists at the University of Houston to determine how weightlessness affects formation of lignin, a substance that enables plants to stand upright.

Carol E. Peterson, one of the investigators, said the formation of lignin is believed to be gravity-dependent. Plants control the amount of the compound produced based on the amount of gravity present.

She said plants that have been sprouted in centrifuges, which produce a higher gravity force, tend to deposit more lignin in the stems.

Miss Peterson said the current experiment may determine if the absence of gravity causes the opposite effect — less lignin.

Lignin is essential to plant growth in gravity, but it is a problem for paper manufacturers. The compound must be extracted from pulp when paper is made.

The three plants were selected because they grow rapidly and each represents a different family.

Astronauts Jack R. Lousma and C. Gordon Fullerton never see the plants, but they do make daily temperature readings and report them to the ground.

Scientists have identical plants on the ground receiving the same light, nutrition and water. Temperatures are adjusted to match those in space.

Bill Scheld, a University of Houston scientist, said the control plants are "growing very nicely."

He said the pine is expected to sprout to about six centimeters, the oats to about 10 centimeters and the beans to about seven.

When Columbia returns to Earth, the plants will be removed within an hour and immediately compared to the control plants.

Miss Peterson said such experiments eventually may enable astronauts aboard large space stations to grow their own food. Even if food can't be produced, she noted, the presence of plants will give a precious touch of home to astronauts spending

Genital herpes spreading faster than almost all other viruses

ATLANTA (AP) — The incurable venereal disease genital herpes is spreading faster in the United States than any other virus except the common cold and influenza, a federal health official says.

The National Centers for Disease Control reported Friday that a study showed an epidemic of genital herpes infection in the United States from 1966 to 1979, the latest year for which data are available.

"This is the first time we've been able to document the national trend," said Dr. Mary Guinan, a clinical research investigator for the CDC.

In 1966, there were 29,500 consultations with physicians for genital herpes, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. The number of cases increased nearly nine-fold to 260,890 by 1979, the CDC said, citing figures collected by the National Disease and Therapeutic Index.

"This is spreading faster than any other (virus) with the exception of the common cold and influenza," she said. "It's a terrible problem. I wouldn't want to scare the nation, but I would think our alerting the public is the only way to (control it)."

Office-based doctors who are paid for their services were consulted for genital herpes in 3.4 of every 100,000 patients in 1966, the CDC said. That rate jumped to 29.2 cases per 100,000 consultations in 1979.

Other sexually transmitted diseases have leveled off to about 2 million cases a year — 1 million reported and another 1 million that officials estimate are not reported, Ms. Guinan said.

Genital herpes, which cannot be cured, is characterized by genital sores that can blister and form ulcers, Ms. Guinan said. The sores heal by themselves but may recur. The disease is most contagious when the sores are present, she said.

BAM-BAM program battles book crooks

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A book thief once almost put publisher-collector John Jenkins out of business, and Jenkins has been on their cases ever since.

His 10-year war against book thieves crystallized Jan. 1 with the completion of a security system utilizing FBI and federal customs agents, telephone reports and a computer program called BAM-BAM.

Jenkins, president of the Antiquarian Booksellers' Association of America, Inc., said the system works so well a person would have to be "awfully stupid" to try to steal rare books and sell them for profit.

In 1971 a stranger offered to sell Jenkins a hundred Audubon prints, which the seller said he had found in his aunt's attic. Jenkins held back and later read in a trade journal that an entire folio of Audubon bird prints had been stolen from Union College at Schenectady, N.Y.

The FBI arrested the man in New York, where Jenkins had arranged a meeting at his hotel, supposedly to buy the prints.

"I realized that if I had not been accidentally suspicious of this man who offered them to me, I would have paid out between $50,000 and $100,000 for the Audubons that would later turn out to be stolen, and I would have had to return them, and these crooks would have hit the road," Jenkins said.

"It would have bankrupted me at that time," Jenkins said. "I would have been absolutely out of business, and I realized that for the whole book world there was no protection, there was no system established to pass the word about thefts."

Establishing the security system was not easy. There had been little coordination between archivists — who handle manuscripts — and booksellers. Also, law officers had had virtually no experience with book thieves, and librarians and school administrators had been reluctant to report major thefts.

"It reflected on them personally," Jenkins said. "Their jobs were on the line, so they would just sit tight until they saw their books somewhere or someone pointed it out and then they would act. All of which adds up to some bookseller getting stung for a great deal of money."

Jenkins explained in a new booklet and in an interview what to do when books are stolen.

On thefts of more than $5,000, call Jenkins, who is security chairman for the rare book dealers association, then FBI agent Mike Burns in Austin. Next, call your attorney and your insurance agency.

Jenkins will call five chapter chairmen of the antiquarian association, and they will call their members. The relay notifies 500 professional booksellers. Within 24 hours the word of the theft is passed to BAM-BAM (Bookline Alert-Missing Books and Manuscripts) in New York, which makes it available on computer terminals throughout America and Europe.

"Within 24 hours, 95-98 percent of the potential buyers have been notified," said Jenkins. "Even if the airlines were running on time, I don't believe a thief could get away with them quickly enough to succeed."

For a few dollars, AB Bookman's Weekly, a trade journal which goes to 11,000 book people, also will carry a notice of the missing book or books on its back cover. By the end of seven days, more than 100,000 people in the book world will have been notified of the theft.

Jenkins said three book thieves have been arrested since the system went into effect. "We've literally been 100 percent successful," he said. "There are no major unresolved book thefts at the present time."

"I do not believe that it's possible now for someone to successfully steal (valuable books) for profit," he said. "It would take an awfully stupid person to make a major book theft thinking he could get away with it and profit from it."

They won the battle with spina bifida

By TINA MILLER
Lifestyle Editor

When Becky Jo Walker was born Aug. 6, 1975, her parents had every reason to believe they had a perfectly normal baby girl. They were wrong.

Becky was the first child of Ryan and Pam Walker, Rt. 2. She was born in Malone-Hogan Hospital, and Ryan was with his wife when Becky was born. "I looked at her and counted her fingers and toes," Ryan said. Dr. Ray Owen, who delivered the baby, examined her and gave her to the nurse.

Thinking everything was fine, Ryan left the delivery room to tell waiting members of the family that he had a beautiful baby girl. The nurse, however, noticed a bubble developing on Becky's back. While Ryan was talking with his family, Dr. Owen came out and told him he needed to talk to him.

"He took me into the father's lounge, and I couldn't understand it. I think all the blood just rushed to my head. I knew what he was saying, but it was taking a while for it to sink in. I was like three or four words behind.

"He called it a meningomyelocele, which means there is a severity of the spine. The term is also used to cover all birth defects the spinal covering does not develop normally." Spina bifida is the minor type of the disease, while meningomyelocele is the intermediate form of the disease. Meningomyelocele is the most severe form of the birth defect. Nerves and the spinal cord are exposed as the result of the failure of the spinal covering to develop normally. The problem occurs, for no known reason, during the first three months of pregnancy.

Pam's memory of Becky's birth and the events that took place afterward is blurred. Shortly after the baby's birth at 11:20 a.m., "he (Owen) came in and told me, 'We're going to bring her in in the incubator and let you see her.' And that's really all I remember him saying. I know he explained to me what was the matter and all, but I was still out of it. And they kept me so doped up." When Pam did see her baby, she said, "I didn't have my contacts in, and all I could see was that on her back it looked like a half lemon."

At about 12:20 p.m., Becky was taken by ambulance to Lubbock Methodist Hospital. Ryan and his mother, Susan Walker, along with a hospital nurse, rode with the infant in the ambulance. The nurse was not required to ride in the ambulance, Ryan said, but he is grateful she did. "Becky was kicking so much, and she had straps across her. They had laid her on her stomach and strapped her down. She was kicking and wiggling so much that it (the strap) was squirming up toward that (bubble on her back)." The nurse unstrapped the baby and held her down. "If it had burst," Pam said, "she would have lost all those nerves that were in the sac." Infection also was a dangerous and very real possibility.

'All I could see was that on her back it looked like a half lemon.'

The doctor that Owen had recommended was unavailable, so Dr. Lloyd Garland took Becky's case. He was in surgery when the ambulance arrived, and Ryan said Becky's surgery didn't begin until after 5 p.m. "It took forever for them to start operating," Ryan said. "Dr. Garland really bragged on Dr. Owen for sending her so soon. He said the sooner you get to it and have surgery, the better chance you have.

"He said you wouldn't believe the doctors that keep them in a nursery for a week then decide that they'll send them (to Lubbock). There's no chance then because they're nearly dead or a vegetable by then. He was really bragging on how it was good to do surgery as soon as you could, and there we waited and waited from like 1:30 p.m. or so till about 5 p.m."

Ryan has yet to live down the fact that he passed out after talking to Garland. "He's the kind of doctor that comes in, and he tells you the very worst that can happen," Pam said. "Everything is up from that."

Ryan said, "I thought, 'Well, this is a problem that surgery can take care of. There's a problem, but it's not that bad.' I just thought, with all the stuff they can do, it's no big deal."

After a few minutes with Garland, however, Ryan found out that Becky's problem was a "big deal." He said that 95 percent of the time they're retarded," Ryan said, and there was a 95 percent chance she would never have bowel or bladder control, and 95 percent of the time they do not have lower extremity use — she couldn't walk.

"So all this was just hitting: she's not going to walk, she can't go to the bathroom, she's going to be retarded. It really sounded bad. That's when I passed out, after hearing that." Garland also told Ryan there was a chance Becky wouldn't even make it through the surgery. After hearing how Becky's life might be, Ryan found himself wondering if it would be better if she didn't make it.

"With our first one, I didn't want to lose her, whether it was our first or last one," Ryan said. "But still, when they tell you how hopeless it sounds..." Though Becky was kicking before the surgery, which was unusual, Garland told Ryan that she probably wouldn't after the surgery.

THEY BEAT THE ODDS — Despite predictions at birth that she would probably never walk and would probably be retarded, Becky (second from left) now lives the life

Ryan isn't sure how long the surgery lasted. But when Garland came out at about 9 p.m., the family heard the first words of encouragement: Becky was moving her legs.

Meanwhile, while Ryan and several members of his family were in Lubbock, Pam was left to recover in the hospital not knowing if her daughter would live. "I really didn't know what was going on till Ryan and them got back from Lubbock about 11 p.m. that night," she said. "He came to the hospital and told me that everything was okay then."

"During the day, and I don't remember this — I remember people telling me that I said this — I would just say, 'If God wants us to have her, He'll let us have her. He'll take care of it.' I guess it was subconscious. I think your faith stands up in those times."

"I didn't know it until I had Robb," Pam said, "and I had so many people come to see me in the hospital then — friends that I went to school with and just other friends that I've met since we married. They said, 'I didn't know up to see you when you had Becky because I didn't know what to say to you.'"

"I thought so many times since then it doesn't matter if you don't know what to say to somebody. Just go by and let them know that you're concerned and let them know that you care. I stayed in the hospital two days, and people that I went to school with didn't come to see me, and a lot of other people that I really expected to, and I didn't know until four years later why they didn't. And it didn't help matters any. I wanted somebody to talk to."

Ryan added, "It was hard anyway, her being in the hospital and Becky in Lubbock. At feeding time all the other mothers get their kids, and there you are with nothing to do except think."

*'If God wants us to have her,
He'll let us have her.
He'll take care of it.'*

At first, Pam had painful feelings of guilt because she believed she had done something wrong during her pregnancy to cause Becky's problems. "I didn't drink, I didn't smoke, I didn't fall," she said. "I was always just bound to put it (the blame) on the birth control pill. I just hated it. But they tell me there's nothing to it."

According to literature the Walkers have received, spina bifida is the second most common birth defect, and the cause is unknown. "They'll say one time that it's hereditary," Ryan said. "Then again they'll say it's diet." One report found a high instance of spina bifida babies in Ireland and attributed it to blighted potatoes. Latest medical magazines attribute the defect to lack of folic acid. Another prevalent opinion is that spina bifida is simply an accident of nature. It is this view that is supported by Garland.

Becky remained in the hospital for 10 days. Once she was home, the couple could not bathe her or put clothes or diapers on her because of the risk of irritating the back. When she was about a month old, Becky had to have surgery again this time to implant a shunt to drain fluid from her brain. Though Garland had warned the Walkers of the possible necessity of the shunt, they had hoped it would not be necessary.

The couple was told Becky would vomit and become fussy to indicate the shunt would be necessary. "Of course, the very first time she ate too much formula and threw up we called Dr. Owen," Pam said. "We panicked. Every little thing that would be normal with a normal baby, with us it was like it was a sign of something. We just panicked, and it wasn't anything."

Doctors determine the need of a shunt by measuring the baby's head. If it is too large, too much fluid is indicated. "We had to go twice a week and let Dr. Owen measure her head," Pam said. "One time hers would grow just over the normal limit, and the next time it would be normal. She was just a borderline hydrocephalic."

"We had an appointment in Lubbock, and Dr. Owen tried to tell me to be prepared for the surgery, but I still wasn't. We got to Lubbock and went in to talk to Dr. Garland and he said, 'Well, I've got her a room over at the hospital.' I just started bawling." During the operation, a plastic tube was implanted that goes behind Becky's ear, down her neck and to a vein that goes to her heart.

The Walkers were lucky because the shunt operation was successful the first time. "A lot of times they have problems with the shunt and it doesn't take," Ryan said. "They have to come back and do several revisions, and that's what we dreaded. Nearly everybody we talked to, their kid had had to come back at least once."

The couple was allowed to take Becky home again after about a week in the hospital. Becky had to be kept propped up at least half of each day to ensure that the shunt drained the fluid properly and that it did not become clogged.

In addition to the shunt and surgery at birth, Becky also had plastic surgery to correct a minor problem with one of her ear lobes that did not form properly. The Walkers were told that when spina bifida occurs, it is usually accompanied by other problems such as club feet or a cleft palate. "They (the hospital) said they guessed we were lucky," Ryan said. "Of course, we didn't think so at the time because we expected a perfect one."

When Becky was less than two years old, several members of Ryan and Pam's families began to comment that Becky seemed to lean to one side or one of her hips was higher than the other. "We finally went to the doctor because of them," Ryan said. "We didn't think there was anything wrong."

A local doctor found nothing wrong and said Becky was just "not a symmetrical baby." Family members still were not satisfied, however, so when they took Becky back to Garland for an appointment they mentioned it to him hoping he would tell them nothing was wrong. Instead, Garland told the couple scoliosis (curvature of the spine) is a problem that often accompanies spina bifida. "He looked at her and said, 'She has scoliosis,'" Pam said.

When X-rays were taken in September, 1977, they revealed a 32 degree curvature of the spine. By December, when Becky was taken to Scoliosis Associates in Methodist Hospital in Houston to be fitted for a brace, her back had a 65 degree curve.

"When they put the Milwaukee brace on her she couldn't look down to see what she was eating," Pam said. "It went from under her chin down to her hips." The brace was also equipped with a chin guard that kept Becky from turning her head or seeing her toes. "To a two-year-old child it's very frustrating," Pam said.

The very first day she got the brace she cried and cried. You could ask her where it hurt, and she'd point to her arm or to her head. She didn't know where it hurt. But she adjusted real fast."

Becky now wears a low-profile brace which is not so noticeable or confining. The family travels to Houston about once every three or four months. Ryan said doctors in Houston are understanding about his farming schedule and allow them to make the trip when it is most convenient. With doctor's permission Ryan and his father have occasionally adjusted the brace when necessary and when a trip to Houston was not possible in the near future.

Becky is now wearing her fourth brace, and although she doesn't enjoy it, she does accept it. "She knows she's got to wear it," Ryan said. "We went through that — that if she wanted her back crooked then she could leave it off. But if she wanted it where it was straight like it's supposed to be, then she'd have to leave it on."

The brace has caused a few problems, however. Pam recalls several times the brace rubbing Becky so badly that an ulcer formed. Once, the ulcer was so bad that Becky's hip bone could almost be seen. Becky can't feel the sores when they occur because the brace limits the circulation in areas where the sores happen. When this type of sore occurs, the brace is left off until one day after the sore has completely healed. The brace also occasionally causes heat rash.

Except for the ulcers, the only other time Becky is allowed to remove the brace is when she goes swimming, takes a bath, or on a few very special occasions. The brace is replaced when she outgrows it, usually about once a year. When doctors determine that she has stopped growing, Becky will have an operation to correct her spinal curvature, and after that no longer will be required to wear the brace. Ryan said her growth could stop as early as 13 — or as late as 19-years-old.

*'We didn't have insurance
when Becky was born, and nobody would take her.'*

Though she is an active six-year-old, the brace prevents Becky from participating in several activities such as contact sports, gymnastics and horseback riding. In her physical education class at Coahoma Elementary School, Pam says Becky tries to do everything other kids do. "If she can't do it she'll just go sit down against the wall," Pam said.

"She gets upset when I do exercises here at home, and she can't bend down and touch her toes because she can't bend." But, Pam adds, "She was swimming across the pool at the YMCA when she was three years old. I wanted her to get the brace off as often as she could so I took her swimming."

Had it not been for the Crippled Children's Fund, which comes from the state of Texas, the Walkers, who had no insurance at the time would face high medical bills. With the Fund, however, the couple had only to pay a small amount of the total costs for the operations and special care Becky required.

"Really, Becky's (bill) wasn't bad at all because she only had two surgeries, and then the third if you count the ear. But most kids are having those surgeries and then several shunt revisions. Then they have to have surgeries on their hips (because their hips are out of place) so they can get them to where they might walk. Then they have to have either the bladder or the bowel (surgery)."

"We didn't have insurance when Becky was born, and nobody would take her," Ryan said. "We got on (insurance) before Robb was born and they took Pam and me and Robb when he was born, but they never would take Becky — not even for a cold or a broken arm, nothing."

"If I would have gone to work at any of the school systems or out at Cosden, wherever, they have it (insurance) that they have to take the whole family. But where I was self-employed, there's no such rule." Only recently did the Walkers obtain insurance that did accept their entire family, and they hope insurance for their daughter will no longer be a problem.

After all the medical problems with Becky, Pam became nervous after finding she was pregnant with their second child. "The first four months, until I had my first sonogram, I did not sleep past one o'clock in the morning — ever," she said. "I would not take an aspirin, I would not take a Tylenol, nothing, I was just a fanatic," Ryan added. "She had a headache all the time, and she wouldn't take an aspirin because they don't know what causes it (spina bifida)."

Statistics from the Spina Bifida Association indicate a one in 100 chance that a child will be born with the defect, Pam said. "But after you have had one, there is a one in 20 chance that another child will have it," she said. When the couple asked doctors about this, however, they were told that none of them knew of any couple who had two children with spina bifida. "But that didn't help my feelings at all," Pam said.

'We didn't have any problems.'

'We thought we did at the time.'

"When we got to Lubbock to have our first sonogram run the doctor said, 'What if the baby does have spina bifida? If it does, have you considered abortion?' I said, 'I don't know. I just want to know for sure. If it does have spina bifida, let me know — let me get prepared for it. And if it doesn't then let me sleep through the night. Let me get some rest.'"

The first sonogram, when she was four months pregnant, showed everything was fine. At six months, she had another sonogram just to be sure. "The guy that was giving it (the sonogram) kept saying, 'Well, it's a girl. I kept looking up at Ryan, (who wanted a boy) saying, 'I'm sorry.' Robb — a boy — was born July 24, 1979, normal and healthy as predicted."

In spite of her initial problems, Becky is now, except for the brace, a typical six-year-old. After talking to doctors, nurses and parents of children like Becky, the Walkers have realized how lucky they are. "We didn't have any problems," Ryan said. "We thought we did at the time. Everybody we talked to said she is one of a kind."

Ryan and Pam say they are emotionally stronger after their ordeal with Becky. "You can handle what you have to, I think," Ryan said. Pam added, "I think if it would have been worse, I say now I think we could have handled it. Back then I think that we were handling absolutely all that we could just to get through each day. But I think God gives you just what He thinks that you can handle. It's sink or swim. Take it and make the best with what you've got and do what you can, or moan and groan about it."

The couple's advice to those who face problems similar to their own is simple. "Talk to somebody that's been through it," Pam said. "Somebody that can tell you, 'You're going to make it. Just take each day as it comes, look for the best and be thankful for what you've got.'"

DINNERTIME — After school Becky helps feed one of the motherless lambs in the family's back yard. The brace she wears to correct her curved spine is barely noticeable under the blouse she wears.

BROTHER AND SISGER — After going through so much with Becky, Pam was worried that their second child might have the same problems. Before Robb was born, she had a sonogram which showed the baby was normal.

Business women gaining influence

Mrs. H.H. (Doris) Huibregtse, Business instructor at Howard College, was guest speaker at the Tuesday meeting of Business and Professional Women's Club. The group met at Lee's Chinese Garden Restaurant with Mamie Roberts presiding.

Mrs. Huibregtse spoke on the growing number of women who are successful in business. She quoted "Texas Business" magazine, which selected 10 leading business women in Texas and several other states and presented a resume of each.

The women all stressed the importance of being well-informed concerning finance and current events; taking advantage of educational opportunities available; learning to speak in a plain and straightforward manner; being at the right place at the right time, and not being afraid of taking risks.

"The golden age of the 'new' American business woman has already begun," Mrs. Huibregtse said. At present, women make up almost half of the nation's work force.

The average, competent woman can be as successful at the mid-management level as the average man she said. Often, a female

Saving Vitamin C is a delicate matter

Saving the vitamin C in foods is a delicate matter — and important, too so you get the vitamin you've paid for — especially in orange juice.

Vitamin C, a water-soluble vitamin, can be completely destroyed in some cases by air, light, alkali and heat — when the vitamin is in liquid. That includes orange juice, the beverage from which many people get most of the vitamin C they need each day, so be careful about the way you treat it.

Vitamin C in orange juice has a "short life" — only one-third or one-half is left after just two or three days in the refrigerator.

If you get your orange juice from a frozen concentrate, prepare only the amount your family will use within one or two days, and store it in an air-tight container. If you drink already-bottled orange juice, but only the size your family will drink in one or two days after you've opened the container.

Put the orange juice in the refrigerator promptly after meals and cover it with an air-tight lid.

Another way to be sure you're getting the vitamin C you're paying for is by eating at least one citrus fruit plus three other servings of fruits and vegetables every day.

If you cook the vegetables, remember you can easily destroy their vitamin C by overcooking. To save the nutrients, cook vegetables quickly in a small amount of liquid with tight-fitting lid on the pot or pan.

Store all canned fruits in a cool dry place for no longer than one year in order to save the most vitamins and ensure a high-quality food.

Finally, read the labels on foods you're buying: do they really contain the vitamins you want, or are you merely buying flavored water?

Dr. Donohue

Blood in urine follows jogging

Dear Dr. Donohue: Sometimes after my one-hour jogging in the morning my urine is bloody. After morning coffee, juices and other kinds of liquids, it diminishes. After four or five hours, the color is normal. There is no pain or discomfort connected with it. My doctor has told me not to worry about this. Give me your opinion. — A.W.

Blood may appear in the urine after concentrated running, a fact that was established more than 70 years ago from a study of 19 marathoners after a run. Urine tests revealed that 18 of the 70 had blood present. Some may experience it after moderate to heavy jogging, or after swimming and cycling.

One unproven explanation is that blood is shunted away from such areas during activity, to supply the exercising muscles. This in turn may disturb urinary tract vessels, causing them to leak blood. Others feel that lack of proper hydration may contribute. Regardless of the cause, if blood appears in urine a complete examination of the urinary tract is important to make sure nothing is seriously wrong with the kidneys or bladder — such as a tumor.

If no hidden cause of such bleeding can be found and if it clears in one or two days, then it is considered harmless. This kind of bleeding may reappear. If that happens, the person should again let the physician know. A second examination is not needed, but the doctor should know about the reappearance. The only preventive measure I have heard is to keep well-hydrated.

I want to emphasize a few points about this so there will be no mistaken assumptions in anyone's mind. Transient passing of blood in the urine is not a worry if there has been a complete examination of the kidneys and bladder and the doctor is satisfied nothing serious is happening to cause it. But bloody urine should be reported. And, finally, I am not speaking of bloody urine following trauma — kidney blows and the like. That must be checked out to see if there has been permanent damage to the urinary tract.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I read recently about some people having success in treating athlete's feet with a solution of some kind of acid. Do you know what kind of acid that may be? — P.J.W.

Perhaps it was undecylenic acid. That is the active ingredient in many powders, creams and lotions for athlete's feet. It varies in concentration in various products.

I'd better say a little more about this since you seem to have had the problem for a long time. Usually, one of the available lotions, powders or creams will take care of the problem, but they have to be used for from six to eight weeks, even when the skin appears to be clearing up. The fungus can still be present and will start to grow if the treatment is stopped too soon.

I don't know why you have had the problem so long. Maybe you are stopping the medicine too soon. And remember that warmth, dampness and lack of foot ventilation can foster fungus growth. Be sure your feet are dry and exposed to air as much as possible.

Other common medicines besides undecylenic acid are haloprogin and tolnaftate. If nothing applied to the feet brings relief, then there are oral medicines (griseofulvin).

Membership program presented to chapter

A program on membership was presented by Karen Bellinghausen during the March 3 meeting of Mu Zeta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. The meeting was held in the Energas Flame Room. Ms. Bellinghausen was assisted by Lisa Murphy, Diane Turner and Diane Clinton.

Plans were made for the rush social that was held March 17 in the home of Connie Edgemon. Teresa Wash reported on the aims and purposes of Beta Sigma Phi. Other reports were given by Mrs. Edgemon on City Council and Mrs. Turner on Mu Zeta's history. Members were reminded that Mu Zeta will celebrate its 30th anniversary soon.

Peggy Payne presented a report on the yearbook and the "Torch," the monthly publication of Beta Sigma Phi. The meeting was followed by a wine and cheese party.

Mrs. Payne and Ms. Bellinghausen will present programs at the next meeting April 12.

Program on diet presented

Keith McVay, minister of recreation at First Baptist Church, spoke to members of Alpha Kappa Omicron Tuesday. The meeting was held in the home of Janie Swafford with Cecil Bedell.

Recycling discussed at meeting

Various kinds of recycling the Sew and Chatter Club participates in were discussed at their meeting Wednesday. The club met in the home of Marie Daniels.

The club recycles used nylon hose and cancelled stamps for the Rainbow Girls, paper for the Lions club and eyeglasses and cases for the blind. The club uses old ties, handkerchiefs and used cotton material for quilts.

The quilt finished at the last meeting was reported to be sold. Money from quilt work goes into the fund for various charity projects.

The hostess showed various needlework items to the members and served refreshments.

The next meeting will be held in the home of Twila Lomax.

A new quilt will be started and members are asked to come early.

McVay informed the club of the importance of running proper warm-up and diet in an exercise program.

New officers were elected. Officers are Barbara Kennedy, president; Carol Swafford, vice president; Janie Swafford, recording secretary; Doris Arcand, treasurer; and Cecil Bedell, corresponding secretary. Carol Swafford, Cecil Bedell, and Barbara Kennedy will serve as representatives to the BSP City Council.

A salad lunch was planned for members which will be held Saturday in the home of Carol Swafford. A program on diet was presented by Janie Swafford while members ate refreshments.

The next meeting will be held April 13. Mrs. Arcand will present a program on medicine.

MR. AND MRS. SALVADOR BIHL
...married in San Angelo

Ramirez-Bihl

Gloria Ramirez became the bride of Salvador Bihl in an evening ceremony March 21 in Monte de los Olivos Assembly of God Church, San Angelo. The Rev. Javier Fernandez, pastor, officiated the ceremony before an altar decorated in white and violet flowers.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chon Ramirez, San Angelo.

Monte de los Olivos, a guitar group, and Juan Rivera, vocalist, provided music for the ceremony.

The bride wore a semi-formal dress in white and violet and carried a bouquet of white and violet carnations.

Belinda Ramirez was maid of honor and Joe Fuentes was best man.

Following the ceremony, the couple was honored with a reception held in the church's annex. The bride's table was covered in a white cloth with violet trim and featured a three-tiered wedding cake accented with dark violet. The cake was topped with two doves and was made by Eidolina Ruiz, the bridegroom's sister.

Following a wedding trip to Mexico, the couple will make their home in San Angelo.

Dear Abby

Lutheran rites — wrong for some

DEAR ABBY: You were off base in your response to "Lutheran Mother of Four Daughters" who wrote in support of the pastor who refused to allow an obviously pregnant bride to have "I'm Having His Baby" sung at her wedding.

Your answer: "A pregnant bride is also entitled to a church wedding with a soloist, fanfare, etc." if that's what she wants. It is not the pastor's function to judge her. That's the Lord's job."

That answer might have been all right if you had preceded it with: "In my opinion." As it stands, it is dead wrong — at least in Lutheran practice.

Lutherans consider a church wedding a religious service and have strict rules as to how it is to be conducted. No secular music is allowed. There are rules on the types of floral arrangements. A specific liturgy must be followed; bride and groom may not prescribe their own rites, etc.

The Lutheran pastor is charged with seeing that these rules are carried out and may refuse a church wedding to those who insist on deviating from them. He may, in fact, refuse to marry a couple if he feels they are not entering the marriage in a right relationship. On the other hand, he may perform a secular marriage for the couple at another location if they choose not to abide with the church wedding rules.

So you see, a bride (pregnant or not) is not necessarily entitled to a church wedding with a soloist, fanfare, etc., if that's what she wants — at least not in a Lutheran church. I think you owe your readers a correction.

AN OHIO LUTHERAN

DEAR LUTHERAN: I do, and you provided the evidence, for which I thank you. I stand corrected.

Shower honors Mrs. Buck

A lingerie shower in honor of Natalie Fulham Buck, bride of Mark Buck, was held Monday in the home of Ms. JoAnn Fuller.

Mishell Fuller, Jarryl Fulham and Angie Fulham co-hosted the shower. Corsages were presented to the honoree and her mother, Mrs. Nancy Fulham.

Refreshments were served from a table covered in white cloth and centered with an arrangement of blue silk roses and blue candles in a basket.

The couple was married March 20 in St. Mary's Episcopal Church.

Learning to wait important to child

The ability to wait a while to have a need or a wish satisfied, to be good humored about delays, is one of the most attractive and endearing traits in an adult or a child.

Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter, points out that this quality of personality doesn't just suddenly happen when an individual reaches adulthood. It develops slowly from beginning in early infancy. And, strange as it may seem, it develops in young children whose needs are satisfied. That is, the baby who is not frustrated learns to endure frustration.

A study sponsored originally by the National Institute of Mental Health indicated that there is a close relationship between the degree of pleasure a baby experiences during his feedings and the gradual development of his ability to wait. Feeding is important, because hunger is the strongest physical drive of a baby.

The study found that, as a baby learns to look forward to pleasurable relief from the tension caused by hunger, he gradually begins to put up with necessary periods of waiting — provided, of course, that in the beginning the delay is brief and bearable.

At the end of their first year, children who had had their physical and emotional needs adequately met showed increasing ability to pay attention to tasks and to handle test objects well. Introduced to activities such as fitting pegs in holes or dropping blocks into a container these children showed interest in the tasks and pleasure when they succeeded. Further, they were not too frustrated by failure.

In contrast, those children whose feeding experiences had been less pleasurable showed less interest, less patience and less concentration. Many showed anxiety about what was expected of them.

The study is careful to point out that it is the repeated good or unhappy experiences that matter — not the occasional interference of teething, fatigue, illness or family stress.

As a child moves out of infancy and into early childhood, his ability to tolerate frustrations will continue to develop as his changing needs continue to be met.

Wise parents learn to recognize early signs of frustration in their child, and to relieve the child's tension before increasing frustration leads to loss of control, disorganized behavior or temper tantrums.

This avoidance of frustration does not imply over-permissiveness. Rather, it results in setting realistic limits on behavior, and maintaining them consistently. A child can feel secure when he knows what to expect of his parents and what they expect of him.

Further, avoiding frustration includes recognizing the effects of over-fatigue or over-stimulation and protecting the child from these stresses when possible; providing pleasurable distracting substitutes for undesirable activities; and allowing the child freedom to grow into independence.

The emotional security provided by continued meeting of his physical and emotional needs frees the child from anxiety and uncertainty. Thus freed, he can concentrate on a task, wait his turn when necessary to meet the demands of cooperative play, and accept with reasonably good humor the inevitable disappointments of life.

He wants to date others

Breaking up with a boy friend is hard to do. It hurts. Sometimes it feels like the worst thing that's ever happened. But there is a way to survive a breakup and it can help your self-esteem. Psychologists say we should express our feelings. This is sound advice. It is also sound advice not to overdo it. "Better to leave him wondering if he hasn't made some terrible mistake, thinking you're really one heck of a gal, than — after he's finally untangled himself from your clutches — signing with relief: "Whew, I'm glad that's over!" You can ask him why; you can talk it over — but when the end is really there, accept the situation.

"The body may react to sudden loss by grieving, but it's unusual for these symptoms to continue," says Dr. Janet Kennedy, clinical professor of psychiatry at New York University College of Medicine. "It's not the kind of pain usually associated with illness. It is only when we deny the grief and the anger that follow a breakup that we may experience symptoms such as loss of appetite or ulcers."

IS YOUR SEX LIFE GOING UP IN SMOKE?

Science has long known that heavy smoking can cause stillbirth and miscarriage. Now there is suspicion that sexual performance may also be impaired.

Paul and Linda Conrad had been married six years, and since the third anniversary had been going from doctor to doctor in a vain attempt to discover why "we can't have a baby!" Finally Paul agreed to be tested, despite a typical male ego, "I'm sure I'm not to blame!"

The Lansings were also childless, but their problem was somewhat different. Patricia's first baby had been stillborn—a tiny full-term girl, barely weighing four pounds. They desperately wanted another baby, but feared "something might happen again!"

Although he was only 31, Ken Farrell was worried about his health. His lists of complaints included shortness of breath, fatigue, edginess, occasional pains in the legs, chronic cough and a recent decline in his sexual capabilities.

"I keep reading about guys that are 70 and going strong," Ken confided to a doctor, "and I'm having trouble at 31!"

Three medical cases involving real people who seem to have little in common, except all have a problem that is sex related. And, the prescription for each was identical—STOP SMOKING! Most habits are hard to break. Smoking is one of the toughest.

Midland psychologist Marie Moore has successfully worked with hundreds of people. She specializes in hypnotherapy. She can help you Stop Smoking!

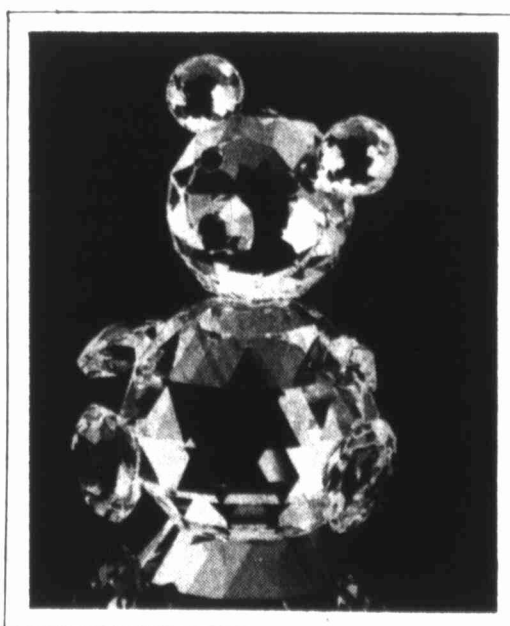

"There is strong evidence that smoking mothers have a significantly greater number of unsuccessful pregnancies due to stillbirth and neonatal death..."
