TDA opens office here

For pesticide regulations

By KIMBERLY THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

The Texas Department of Agriculture hopes that by setting up a temporary office in Hereford it can better serve both the dryland farmers who depend on pesticides and the cotton farmers who fear the powerful chemicals.

Rotating inspection crews of four or five have been manning the office on the third floor of the courthouse since June 17, and plan to keep it open until July 14.

According to Chief Inspector Dennis Maloney, TDA had several reasons for opening an office here.

First of all, the department feels it has a responsibility to be here during the county's first season as a herbicide-regulated county. Deaf Smith County Commissioners voted last fall, following extensive damage to cotton crops in Deaf Smith and nearby Parmer County, to place the county under regulated status.

In addition to placing the county under the Herbicide Law, Commissioners also outlawed the use of butyl ester formulations of the herbicide 2,4-D, which was blamed for the drift damage last summer, during the period from April 15 to Oct. 1.

Secondly, Maloney said, the department wants to be around to monitor farm chemical use now, instead of waiting until drift damage occurs and then coming in to investigate the destruction.

"We tried to get down here before any drift occurred," Maloney said. "But a small amount has been reported already." Maloney said the early damage affected about 800 acres in northern Parmer and southern Deaf Smith counties, the same areas hardest hit last year.

At least one Parmer County farmers believes the affected cotton was too early in the growing stage for there to be any serious permanent damage, and Maloney agrees.

But despite the prospect of those fields recovering, TDA decided last week to cancel all blanket spray permits issued to applicators in Deaf Smith, Parmer, Donley and Collinsworth Counties.

TDA has given applicators another way to obtain an applicator's permit, which is a third good reason for opening an office here.

Farmers who want to spray any of the herbicides covered under the Herbicide Law must apply for a permit for each field to be sprayed. A TDA inspector will then inspect each field to be treated to determine whether the application will be accepted or rejected.

So far, Maloney said, he has issued 17 permits. Only two persons have been turned down, because the fields they wanted to spray were too close to a susceptible cotton crop.

Maloney said record keeping is a big aspect of compliance with the herbicide law, and the field inspectors are checking records as they make their rounds.

"There was a big communications problem between the dealers and the applicators as to what the law really required," Maloney admitted. "We're sending inspectors out to help them bring their records up to the requirements of the law."

Another job TDA is faced with this summer is enforcing its new herbicide regulations. Designed mainly for human protection, particularly among field workers, the regulations have been toned down quite a bit from the original version announced last fall.

The prior notification clause, which was hotly contested during public hearings held throughout the state, now requires farmers to notify their neighbors only if the neighbors have requested a phone call or letter prior to the field being sprayed.

Maloney said there has been only one person in Deaf Smith County who asked that she be notified before nearby fields are sprayed.

Surprisingly enough, aerial applicators have welcomed TDA's presence in the county. In fact, Maloney disclosed, some of them requested the department's presence here.

"The applicators have been glad to see us. We've taken the burden of deciding when and where to spray off their shoulders."

Audit, districting plan on agenda

An audit report tabled from the last meeting will be presented to the Hereford city commissioners for review at Monday night's regular meeting in city hall.

Another item tabled, a request to close a portion of Sunset Drive just south of Fifteenth Street, will be considered. The request is made by Rick Brown who is proposing to construct apartments in that area.

Plans for the city's new fire station will be reviewed by the architect, Tom Mills.

Commissioners also will consider an amendment to a Texas Aeronautics Commission contract for airport work. The amendment would allow the city to use $25,000 of a cost under-run for another project.

Texas Rural Legal Aid attorney Randall Marshall will appear to discuss implementation of a single-member districting plan, money will be requested for the Satellite Center and the city will consider a bid on a scraper for the street department.

Chili cook-off set July 13

The fourth annual Hall of Fame Chili Cook-off is set for July 13 at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame.

Ten chili trophies and three showmanship trophies will be awarded for the cooking teams. Showmanship competition will begin at noon that day and "turn in time" for the chili will be at 2:30 p.m.

Chili teams, working under official cook-off rules, may register at the Hall with $15 entry fee. Admission for tasting will be $2 for adults and $1 for children.

Hearing on dike is Tuesday

The Texas Department of Water Resources has scheduled a public hearing in Canyon Tuesday, prior to ruling on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's request for an amended permit for a dike at Buffalo Lake.

F&WS asked for the amendment at the insistence of the Buffalo Lake Water District Board, which said the service acted illegally in changing the dimensions of Stewart Dike, a small dam at the west end of the dry lake bed.

Later, however, the lake board announced it would fight the F&WS in its efforts to obtain the amended permit, because Stewart Dike would interfere with water flow should the main dam ever be repaired and the lake filled once again. The board has since agreed to support the permit if F&WS agrees to remove the dike after the lake is filled.

The hearing is to begin at 9 a.m. at the Canyon City Commission Chambers, 301 Sixteenth Street.

Summer school starts Monday

An optional summer school for high school students wishing to get ahead will start Monday at 8 a.m. with registration at the Hereford High School.

Tuition for the English, health, and social studies classes is $40.

Chamber slates July 4 breakfast

Patriots are invited to set their alarms Thursday for a 6:30 a.m. July 4 celebration breakfast. The Chamber of Commerce is hosting the breakfast in lieu of a regular fun breakfast, but the format will be similar.

The Chamber will be taking reservations at 364-3333 for those who want to get an early start on the Independence Day celebration.

Signs of the growth in northwest Hereford are already in place and more is to come. Groundbreaking ceremonies for the new Smith Food & Drug Center at 15th Street and Hwy. 385 is scheduled in mid-July. Groundwork is already underway on the new Save 'N' Gain supermarket on Hwy. 385, and plans are progressing on the new equipment complex at 15th and Hwy. 385.

All this activity is in the general area of the new Senior Citizens Center, and a new nursing home is planned just south of the center. The new YMCA building is also in that area.

Back to the south, at the intersection of US-60 and Hwy. 385, construction is almost complete on the Town & Country drive-in grocery and ground has been cleared for a new motel just west of the intersection. Things are still moving in hustlin' Hereford!

As expected, there was some good news and bad news from the President's new tax plan. Winners in the new plan, according to analysists, will be most individuals, people with few itemized deductions, low-income families, those who live in low-tax states such as Texas, people who have little debt, investors who receive capital gains, most small businesses, service industries and labor-intensive industries and high-tech companies.

Losers could be most large businesses, capital-intensive firms, commercial real estate firms, restaurants, hotels, travel-related companies, corporations that defer part of their taxes, industries that now get special tax breaks including banking, insurance, mining and timber, individuals with itemized deductions, people who have a great deal of debt, and people who use the income averaging technique.

Now, the fun begins as Congress decides how the tax overhaul will finally emerge.

Tax re-appraisals to be mailed soon

Local homeowners who have been waiting for results of a countywide tax re-appraisal should get the news next week, Deaf Smith County Chief Appraiser Fred Fox said Friday.

The re-appraisal has been completed, and notices of the new appraised values are to be mailed to Hereford residents on Tuesday

County residents can expect to get their notices by July 15, Fox said.

City residents will notice an increase in the market value of their homes as a result of the re-appraisal.

"The state audited us, and determined that residential properties were on the tax roll at 48 percent of value," Fox explained. "The change brings them up to 95 percent of value."

Fox said homeowners will see an increase in their property taxes of around 25 percent this fall. He pointed out that although home values will generally double, taxes will not, because the rate will be lowered as a result of the re-appraisal.

The appraisal district does not set the tax rates, Fox stressed. The county's various taxing entities do that. He said the estimated 1985

No concessions made on hostage release

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration Saturday insisted it had made no concessions to Shiite Moslem forces in Beirut in an optimistic pre-dawn statement that was followed by a Shiite demand for "non-belligerancy" guarantees before release of American hostages from Lebabon would proceed.

The demand apparently caught the White House by surprise. Earlier, spokesman Larry Speakes had expressed optimism that the release, 15 days following the hijacking of TWA flight 847 by Shiite gunman, was already underway, via Damascus, Syria.

Speakes said only, "I've heard the report," before going off to the office of National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane. Moments later he called a briefing in the White House to say U.S. officials had "seen the reports by Nabih Berri that Americans from the TWA flight remain in the Beirut area."

Virginia governor leads off Texas blitz

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrac leaders from around the nation will kick off a six-city Texas "blitz" Sunday to shore up the party's sagging fortunes in the state.

The two-day event is sponsored by the Democratic Leadership Council, which, according to Virginia Gov. Charles Robb, is for "Democrats who would rather fight than switch."

Sparked by former Democrat Phil Gramm, who last year won a U.S. Senate seat as a Republican, several Texas politicians have jumped to the GOP.

"We intend to challenge disaffected Democrats to join us in a movement to change the party rather than changing parties," said Robb, who will be on the Dallas swing of the blitz.

About 20 prominent Democrats will meet Sunday in Austin and then split up for Monday visits to Dallas, Abilene, Houston, San Antonio and El Paso.

"We are going to show the people of Texas that Democrats are changing with the times, that we are proposing new ways to advance our party's traditional goals of growth and opportunity at home and strength abroad," said U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, a founder of the Democratic Leadership Council that organized the blitz.

The erosion of Democratic strength in Texas became obvious in 1984 when President Ronald Reagan buried Democrat Walter Mondale here and Gramm was an easy U.S. Senate race winner over Democrat Lloyd Bentsen.

Robb said Democratic roots still run deep in Texas.

"The Texas blitz is part of an historic and exciting effort to chart a new course for a great political party," said Robb. "We want to give Texas Democrats a chance to air their views about the challenges and opportunities facing our party."

Also scheduled for the blitz are Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Florida U.S. Sen. Lawton Chiles and Missouri U.S. Rep. Dick Gephardt.

Braniff expecting increased profits

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff Inc. expects to record its second consecutive quarterly profit and may expand its operations next spring, airline officials said during an annual shareholders meeting.

"I am optimistic right now. I wasn't seven or eight months ago," Braniff chairman Jay A. Pritzker told stockholders Friday.

Braniff president Ron Ridgeway said he expects the airline to record its second consecutive quarterly profit during the three-month period that ends July 31. But he declined to make specific projections.

"We expect second-quarter profitability to be improved substantially over first-quarter results," Ridgeway said.

The Dallas-based airline reported net income of $1.6 million for the February-April quarter.

Ridgeway said Braniff hopes to lease three to six Boeing 737-200 planes to its fleet next spring. A number of destinations are under consideration, he said, but none of them is in Texas.

Braniff currently owns 20 Boeing 737-200 aircraft.

Ridgeway said Braniff's June load factor, the percentage of seats filled on its aircraft, is running in excess of 80 percent.

"We are very pleased to report that our new long-haul, non-restricted, low-fare operating plan is succeeding beyond our projections," Ridgeway said.

Coroner's jury holds karate suspect

WASHINGTON, Pa. (AP) — A witness in a coroner's inquest pointed to a man accused of killing three elderly women in karate-style beatings and said she saw him helping the women into a car last week.

"It looked like he was trying to be nice to these three ladies," Kimberly Oyler said Friday.

The six-member jury deliberated for seven minutes before recommending that Roland Steele face trial on three criminal homicide charges.

The bodies of Sarah Knutz, 85, Lucille Horner, 88, and Minnie Warrick, 86, all of East Washington, were discovered in a wooded area of Cecil Township Saturday.

Steele, 38, of nearby Canonsburg, described by authorities as a karate expert, was arrested Sunday and charged with criminal homicide. Held in lieu of $450,000 bond in the Washington County Jail, he faces a preliminary hearing Wednesday.

Journalists protest suspension

ROME (AP) — Journalism trade groups protested a court's suspension of three reporters and called for legislation to end what it called an "alarming and intimidating" trend against free reporting.

Two journalists from Il Messaggero and one from Il Tempo, both Rome dailies, each were fined $250 dollars and suspended for two months.

The reporters had written articles in February 1980 about an incident on a Pescara-Ancona train in which a passenger complained that a fellow traveler was writing on train walls. The alleged offender was a magistrate from the Adriatic city of Ancona, and filed a complaint against the journalists.

One court threw out the suit, but the decision was appealed and on Thursday an appeals court ordered the fines and suspensions.

The National Union of Reporters and the National Federation of Italian Press protested. The latter organization called for urgent legislative action to protect reporters.

Union sends protest letter over

LONDON (AP) — A transportation union has protested to Iran over the holding of nine British officers on board a Kuwaiti freighter that was seized in the Gulf of Oman last week.

The Kuwaiti-registered 23,000-ton Al-Muharraq was bound for Iraq when it was approached by an Iranian naval vessel. Iran has been at war with Iraq since September 1980, and the Iranians said they were searching the ship for arms.

"We have sent a protest to the Iranian Embassy in London because we are getting increasingly concerned about the situation," a spokesman for the National Union of Marine, Aviation, and Shipping Transport Officers said Friday.

"The Foreign Office are involved, but they tell us that they have not been able to establish direct contact with the officers. We have pointed out to the Iranians that when officers work on foreign ships they are often in the dark about their destination and their cargo," the spokesman said.

Congressmen thrive on town meetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — "TOWN MEETING — Come Talk With Your Congressman, Mike Andrews" said the notice sent postage-free to everybody with a mailbox who lives in the 25th congressional district in Houston.

"There's one guy, I honestly believe he gets up at 9 o'clock and starts drinking just to get ready for me," says Andrews, recalling one of the hazards of "town hall meetings" — where constituents are invited to bring their queries and complaints directly to their congressmen at makeshift meeting halls, schools, churches or parks.

"One woman brought her water filter," said Andrews, a second-term Democrat. "I didn't know if she wanted me to fix it or what."

With the expansion of fast, reasonably direct air transportation to all parts of Texas and an increasing number of young members who need to see and be seen in the district, most of the state's representatives in Congress now hold town hall meetings as a way of staying in touch while also getting their names into newspapers and mailboxes.

Andrews said when he was first elected, other congressmen suggested he use the town hall meetings concept. He said he was "cynical" at first.

"I had mixed feelings about them," he said. "I thought they were used by congressmen to send out mail and run for re-election. But they really are useful.

"The lady with the water filter was trying to make a point," Andrews said. "I walked out of there with a dirty water filter, but she was genuinely concerned that there was something in their water."

Like other members, Lubbock Republican freshman Larry Combest says attendance at his meetings can vary from a few to more than 100 people. All types show up. Ages range from college kids to senior citizens.

"I pull up a chair. If it's warm I take my coat off and I take out a notepad. I don't give any speeches," Combest said. He said he usually opens things up by explaining how his office works.

"Then I turn over most of the meetings to them. It's their meeting. A lot of times the discussion is in the group and I'm just a bystander," he said.

Joe Barton, R-Ennis, also a freshman, said he has gotten a few intoxicated attendees and some overzealous participants. Sometimes he has to break things up, though not by physical force to date.

"One gentleman stood up and said he thought the military pension system was a disgrace and needed to be massively overhauled," Barton said. "Immediately three or four veterans jumped up in the audience and began to denounce that man's patriotism.

"You get into situations where your group is arguing with each other, debating the points. And that can be good. But when they begin to get personal, I have to step in."

Barton said he is "amazed" at how well-informed his constituents can be. The questions get esoteric.

"Sometimes you just have to say, 'I don't know,'" Barton said.

"I've had people stand up and say, 'What is your position on House Joint Resolution 1128?'" he said. The subjects can range from a Federal Trade Commission proposal to deregulate title companies to reduction of the federal deficit.

"In small towns, there are a lot of questions about the post office," Combest said. "'Are we going to lose our post office?'"

Some attendees are not quite up to speed, Barton said. He's been asked how he likes living in Austin.

"They're confused whether you're on the city council, or the state representative in Austin to you're the United States senator," Barton said.

"I don't think anybody likes to be heckled and it it always seems like there's somebody there like that, but for the most part they're pretty dog-gone useful," Andrews said of the meetings.

Combest, who has a large, rural district, says "the jury's still out on the effectiveness."

Barton's district stretches from just outside Houston to just outside Dallas. He is sold on the town hall meeting.

"There's no substitute for face-to-face contact," he said. "It keeps your feet on the ground."

Jury awards Texas couple

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A Texarkana insurance man and his wife are due $100,000 because authorities violated their constitutional rights during a late-night search of the man's office in early 1981, a federal jury has ruled.

Jurors in U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's court in Tyler had deliberated since Wednesday evening before reaching a verdict Friday in the suit filed in October 1981 by J. Ralston Crowder, 78, and his wife, Nancy, 77.

The couple had sued for $3 million in a complaint filed about nine months after police conducted a the search of Crowder's insurance office in Texarkana for stolen goods.

Authorities accused Crowder of knowingly buying stolen goods and said they confiscated some silver and gold from his office. However, a grand jury refused to return an indictment in the case.

Defendants in the suit included Texarkana police officers, Arkansas officers from Miller and Sevier counties, Arkansas State Police investigators, FBI Agent Don Lambert, Bowie County (Texas) District Attorney Louis Raffaelli and James Elliot, one of Raffaelli's assistants.

Of the $90,000 in compensatory damages, $80,000 was awarded to Crowder and $10,000 to his wife. Three of the 13 defendants were not ordered to pay punitive damages, including Lambert.

James Haltom, an attorney representing the law enforcement officers, had termed the possibility that the jury might find in the Crowders' favor "unbelievable."

There was "no question," he said, that Crowder knew he was buying stolen property from Terry Broyles — who told police he sold stolen property to Crowder several times during 1980 in 1981 — and from another confessed burglar, James Bradshaw.

"We have no comment on that statement," Speakes said. "We remain in touch with the Syrian government on this matter."

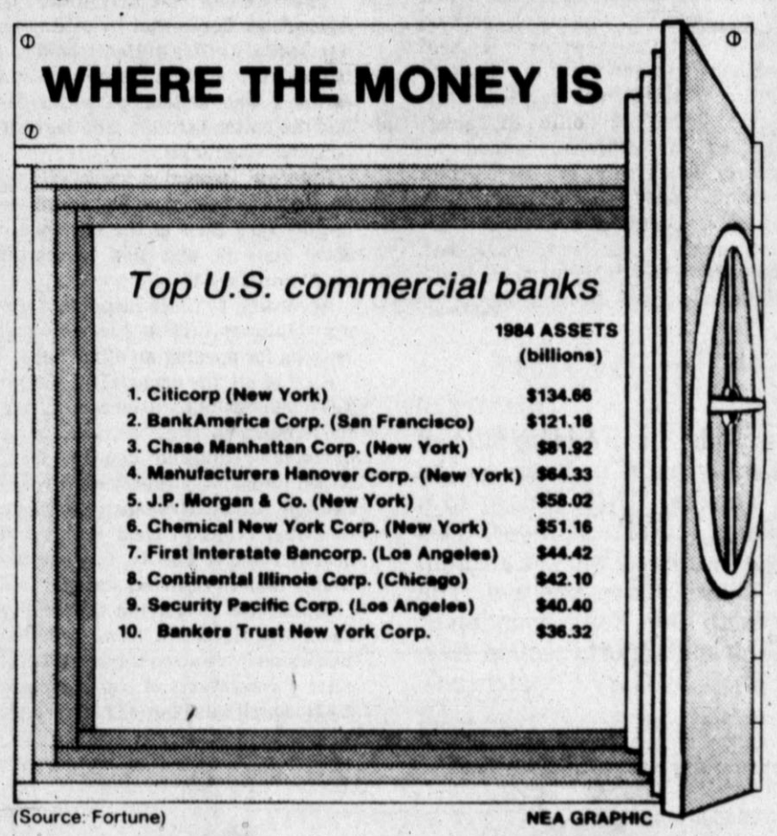

Asked if the United States had given or would give guarantees that it would not retaliate for the hijacking, Speakes refused to comment, saying "that doesn't serve any purpose."

He insisted, however, that "we have not changed our position on anything I've said in the past." Speakes and other U.S. officials have said repeatedly the United States would not negotiate with the terrorists, would not encourage others to do so and would make no concessions to gain the release of the hostages.

It was apparent from the spokesman's brief words that the United States believed it had an understanding with Syria that the hostages would be released and was pursuing that course, rather than dealing directly with Berri.

Officials had warned before midnight that it was still possible for snags to develop, and well after the hostages were expected in Damasus a Berri associate announced that they remained in Lebanon, awaiting guarantees of "non-belligerency" and Israeli action.

Ali Husseini, a member of the Politburo of the Shiite Amal militia that holds most of the hostages, said Amal wants a guarantee of no retaliation for the hijacking, a guarantee that U.S. warships positioned off Lebanon will leave, and a guarantee that 735 Lebanese prisoners held by Israel will be freed.

Six of the nation's top 10 banks — including the No. 1-rated Citcorp — are New York-based, while three have headquarters in California.

TAX

taxes listed on the notices are just that, an estimate.

Business and industries will see their inventory taxes go down slightly with the new lower rate, Fox said. They have partly been carrying the burden for property owners whose homes were appraised at much less than their market value.

Some properties stayed the same in value, some went down, but most increased because of the reappraisal, Fox said.

The owner of a $50,000 house, which until recent years has been shown at $25,000 on the tax rolls, has been paying $560 a year in taxes. This year, those homeowners can expect to pay around $840 in taxes.

If a taxpayer has questions or would like to go over his appraisal value with one of the appraisers, he is invited to go by the district's office at 402 E. West Fourth Street between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

The Board of Review will be held July 23 in the county courtroom of the courthouse, and anyone wishing to meet with the board can obtain a schedule from the district office.

Pre-hearings will be held at the county courtroom on July 17, 18, 19 and 22. Fox said it is best to make an appointment for a pre-hearing.

Maloney said the commercial aerial applicators have been saying all along that the community shouldn't look just at them every time there's chemical drift.

"Ground rigs, spot sprays, even hand-held sprayers can cause damage," Maloney explained. "There's a possibility of some drift with every application."

One thing Maloney really wants to get across is that dealers need to be aware of who they are selling to, and what the penalty if they sell to an unlicensed buyer.

An applicator must have a license to purchase one-half gallon or more of 2,4-D, 2,4,5-T, MCPA, silvex, all Dicamba products including Banvel and Weedmaster, and derivatives and formulations of any of the above.

The telephone number at the local office is 364-3387. Even allowing for inspection time, a permit can usually be obtained in less than 24 hours. Sometimes permission can be granted over the telephone, Maloney said, because he is becoming more familar with where the fields are and which ones are close to cotton crops.

SPS opens power line

Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS), to buttress the reliability of its electric utility system, put a new, 345-kilovolt transmission line into service last week.

The 162-mile line, the highest-voltage transmission line ever in the SPS system, connects the utility with other utilities in the Southwest Power Pool.

The Southwest Power Pool is a group of 38 utilities that have interconnected to "pool" their electric resources, to help ensure a reliable and continued supply of electric service to customers.

The new SPS line could be used by the Southwest Power Pool utilities to back up energy supplies in case of an emergency. Supply emergencies can occur because of storms or mechanical or electrical problems. Utilities also share power supplies on a back-up basis during routine maintenance of power plants, and to lower costs of service to customers.

"This new line will improve the reliability of our service, and will help us hold down the cost of service to our customers," said Roy Thomas, SPS vice president of corporate services.

The line runs easterly from near Abernathy, Texas, to near Vernon, Texas. It connects SPS with high-voltage supply lines near Vernon at a coal-fueled power plant under construction by Public Service Company of Oklahoma.

The 345-kilovolt line is Southwestern's fourth interconnection with the Southwest Power Pool group. It can carry enough power to temporarily substitute during an emergency for the largest of the Company's power generation units.

The line is supported by 100-foot-tall, tubular steel structures. It was designed by Southwestern's in-house Transmission and Distribution Design staff. Southwestern's Construction Services Department oversaw construction of the line and related equipment.

The project was completed at a cost of approximately $25 million.

Accent on Health

Meteorologists are saying this summer can be another scorcher, as bad as some in recent years which have taken the lives of dozens of unprepared Texans. Already the elderly, the very young and those with chronic diseases are suffering from the high temperatures and equally high humidities resulting from recent rain.

Dr. Robert Bernstein, Texas Commissioner of Health, has warned that unless the populace takes common sense precautions, more needless suffering and possible deaths will occur as the hottest season wears on. "Many people, even those who have grown up in this climate, fail to realize how dangerous it can be if simple precautions are not taken," Dr. Bernstein said.

Dr. Clift Price, Associate Commissioner for Personal Health Services at the Texas Department of Health, explained that those most vulnerable to the heat need to avoid heavy clothing, make sure to have adequate ventilation, and be aware of the relationship between high temperatures and high humidity.

"One of the factors in hyperthermia, or overheating, is loss of the body's own mechanisms to cool itself," Dr. Price said. High humidity, such as we already are having in Texas thi syear inhibits evaporation as the body perspires, sometimes stopping the cooling effect of perspiration.

"People perspire constantly, although under ideal conditions they don't realize it. In dry air the perspiration evaporates quickly, cooling the body. In high humidity, however, perspiration evaporates slowly, allowing the body to overheat, and perspire more. The danger then is dehydration, or loss of to much water and salt from the tissues. This can lead to muscle cramps, nausea, dizziness, headache, and low blood pressure, which are symptoms of heat exhaustion," Price explained.

Beyond heat exhaustion, if victims fail to replace the fluids they have lost, is the threat of heat stroke, a potentially deadly condition requiring immediate medical attention. "Heat stroke results from lack of fluid replacement as the body dehydrates," Dr. Price said. "Along with fluid loss is loss of salts necessary in the body's and brain's functions. With heat stroke comes sudden weakness, severe headache, loss of consciousness, brain damage, and death if the victim is not treated quickly."

Dr. Price said all persons should be careful to replace the body fluid they lose with, "the most common medicine there is–water." He said athletes, persons working outside or in unventilated areas, or persons suffering from chronic diseases, nausea, or diarrhea should be especially careful to drink extra water. Elderly persons, infants and young children, and anyone unaccustomed to the local heat and humidity also are highly susceptible to ill effects from the climate.

Dog's pet fish has Siamese babies

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — LaVern Peters credits her dog Burger's pet fish — which include Siamese twin guppies — with keeping the 14-year-old canine healthy and busy.

Burger, a half-poodle, half-Airedale with a leaky heart valve, spends all day sitting on a chair at his favorite hobby — intently watching his aquarium, says Mrs. Peters.

"He's always been such an active dog," she said. "But with the heart condition, he's had to take it a little easier lately. At least watching the fish gives him something to do and keeps him quiet."

On Sunday, one of Burger's pet guppies gave birth to Siamese twin guppies that are joined at the stomachs from gills to tailfins. One of the fish must swim upside down because of the attachment, and the babies' eating habits are different from those of most guppies.

Guppy babies, says Mrs. Peters, usually swim to the surface of the fish tank after birth and fill their swim bladders with air. They then eat at the surface.

"But these twins didn't do that. They eat off the bottom of the tank, and only one of them eats — the one that's always on bottom," said Mrs. Peters. "I can tell the difference in the two because the one on top is slightly fatter."

She said she thinks that only one fish eats because they share a common stomach and possibly other organs.

The bottom guppy eats in its upside-down position by tilting its head backwards and sucking its brine shrimp off the bottom of the aquarium.

Mrs. Peters said Burger takes his job as a pet owner very seriously. He spends several hours a day sitting in a chair next to the aquarium watching the fish.

When visitors come, the dog jumps up and down to get their attention and runs to the aquarium to show the guests his fish.

The aquarium was a gift from a friend who knew Burger always liked fish.

When the Peters family goes fishing, Mrs. Peters said, Burger watches the minnows swim around in the bait bucket.

"Another time, we had just returned home from a fishing trip, and we put the minnows in a big tub outside," Mrs. Peters said. "When we went out there later, Burger was just standing in the middle of the tub watching the fish swim through his legs."

Welcoming begins for B-1B bomber

ABILENE (AP) — For the most part, Abilene anxiously awaited the arrival of the first B-1B bomber to Dyess Air Force Base today, but a few residents wish the military machine would stay away.

Hotel signs, store windows and newspaper ads carried the greeting, "Welcome B-1B," in this small city about 150 miles west of Fort Worth.

In a ceremony expected to draw 100,000 people to the base, U.S. senators and others were to accept the first delivery of the aircraft in the nation.

Abilene is expected to reap more than $120 million in the next two years because of spending brought by the B-1Bs and additional personnel.

Not everyone sees the occasion as a celebration, however.

Kim Collie, a 30-year-old Abilene native, said a handful of people who want to "stop the arms race" will make a public statement at the base before the plane's arrival.

And at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, a prayer vigil is scheduled for noon.

"The reason it struck a cord with me," said choir director Elizabeth Newman, "is I felt there needed to be another point of view besides jubilant celebration. I think Christians should be for peace."

The Rev. Charles Chatham, pastor, organized the vigil but is away on a retreat in Michigan. In a newsletter to parishioners, he said he suffers "ambiguity."

He understands that defense is necessary, he wrote, but worries that such military machines will bring "disaster."

Collie, who is affiliated with the Red River Peace Network, said he doen't expect any trouble at the base, particularly with only six or seven protesters.

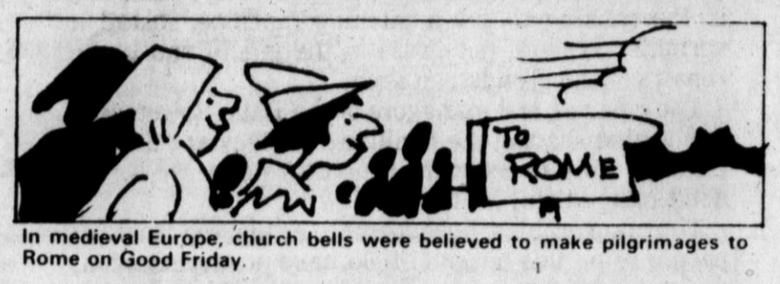

"I'm just working to make peace an acceptable viewpoint," he said.

The feeling apparently is not shared by many.

Abilene worked for almost a decade to get the B-1B bomber, which is expected to serve America's long-range bombing needs at least until a Stealth bomber can be developed. Dyess will have the only B1-B training squadron in the nation.

First on Saturday's schedule was a flyover by Confederate Air Force aircraft at 9 a.m., about five hours before the B-1B's planned arrival.

"We are delighted to have the B-1B here at Dyess," said Nancy Richards, Abilene chamber of commerce manager. "We've already seen a greater interest in our housing market.

Excessively sweaty palms can make life miserable

Sweaty palms are a common problem in stressful situations such as job interviews, but for some people this problem reaches extremes.

About one of very 2,000 people has excessive sweating of the palms, or palmar hyperhidrosis, according to the Texas Medical Association's journal, Texas Medicine. This disorder causes a person to avoid shaking or holding hands and leads to social withdrawal.

The problem also affects a person's work. Truck drivers lose control of the steering wheel; electricians suffer electrical shocks; pianists ruin the wooden piano keys; bartenders drop bottles; students blur the ink on their writing paper.

The cause of excessively sweaty palms is unknown. The problem is not related to air temperature but is worsened by emotional stress.

The Texas Medicine article describes the case of a dental student who had to stop working several times an hour to wipe her sweating hands. She started wearing surgical gloves but had to change them at least every hour because the sweat collected within the gloves and dripped out of the cuffs onto her patients. At stressful social occasions, sweat would fall freely from her hands in droplets.

A 28-year-old accounting supervisor with life-long sweaty palms could not drive a car without power steering and was unable to hold onto a softball bat or grasp gymnastic bars.

Another case involved a 27-year-old truck driver whose sweaty palms caused him to accidentally drive his car into a ditch. And a 12-year-old girl had to quit piano lessons because her sweating warped her teacher's piano keys

Fortunately for all of these patients, surgery on certain nerves of the spinal cord solved the problem. Surgery is considered when the problem is significantly affecting a patient's daily activities and other treatments have failed.

Applying special creams, gels, or solutions to the hands is sometimes effective in the mildest cases of palmar hyperhidrosis. Other medications are taken orally, and radiation therapy is sometimes effective. Psychotherapy may reduce the anxiety that increases the sweating.

For cheerleader spots

Mothers make requests

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Eight mothers of black students are asking McKinney school officials to establish extra spots for minority students on a junior high school's cheerleading squads.

The parents said the school has not had a black or Hispanic cheerleader on the two squads since 1979, although 32 percent of the students at E.H. Slaughter Junior High School are black are Hispanic.

"Our children are not to be made to feel inferior, because they're not," Cynthia Skinner, one of the mothers, told The Dallas Morning News Friday.

Ms. Skinner said her 12-year-old daughter, Erica, was one of three black students who did not make the seventh-grade cheerleader squad during April tryouts.

The mothers have given school officials a petition with 100 signatures asking that two spots for minorities be added to each of Slaughter's six-member seventh- and eighth-grade cheerleading squads.

The school board is expected to review the parents' request at its July 16 meeting, and Superintendent Scott Johnson said the district wants "all parents to feel it is a fair process, and we'll work toward that."

Vickie Rutledge, the school's cheerleader sponsor, said two-thirds of the selection process for student tryouts is based on observations of three judges from the Dallas office of the National Cheerleading Association. Ms. Rutledge also was present at the closed sessions.

"We do pride ourselves on the way we handle our tryouts," Ms. Rutledge said. "We do feel (the procedures are) fair and impartial."

Abusing privilege

It is unfortunate that a public facility such as the baseball field at the county fairgrounds is about to be closed simply because some of the people using it are creating such a mess that it has become unusable for others.

As pointed out in this week's Herald, the principal cause of the problem is the use of the field by a group of Mexican men who have abused the privilege.

The Perryton Y leases the baseball field, along with the softball fields on the county fairgrounds. This particular field is used for the Babe Ruth baseball program. It has lights, a small grandstand, and plans are in the making to get a pitching machine, install a sprinkler system, put grass in the infield and make repairs to the grandstand area.

The coaches and managers of the Babe Ruth teams don't mind sharing the facilities, but they are tired of cleaning up a mess every time they go to use it. We don't blame them for that.

The main problem here seems to be that the Mexican people using this baseball field have no organization, no spokesman, no group with whom the Y leaders can talk about this problem.

The participants come and go, some of them cannot speak English and nobody seems to be in charge of the games they play. No doubt baseball is a good recreational sport for them, but nobody should be allowed to dump beer bottles on the ground, unload dirty diapers, strew the place with trash.

This is not a racial problem or a minority problem involving discrimination. There are three Babe Ruth teams, for youngsters, and about half of the players are Mexicans.

Somebody ought to do something and hopefully something can be done to cure the problem without closing the park to the public. But if that's what it takes to preserve it, then that step should be taken.

The real meaning

A group of Washington's most influential women have banded together for the purpose of obtaining a ratings system for records like the ratings system for movies.

They are greatly concerned about the explicitness of today's rock music, and they think it would be a great help to parents if records were marked, say, PG-13, so they could make sure their children aren't listening to musical versions of "Deep Throat."

The idea is worth trying, I suppose, but I don't think rating records and albums will keep kids from listening to explicit music.

Most children are much smarter than their parents think they are, and given enough time, they usually will figure out a way to do whatever it is their parents don't want them to do.

There was much concern about the kind of music young people were listening to when I was growing up. Elvis was looked upon as the devil's own Pied Piper. Listen to Elvis sing and watch him wiggle, young girls were warned, and you could wind up pregnant.

The more our parents tried to convince us not to listen to Elvis and other pioneers of rock 'n roll, the more we were determined to do just that.

The music then wasn't nearly as daring as it is today, but what our parents didn't know–and only now can it be revealed–was that some of the supposedly nonsensical phrases in our music were really coded messages that meant all sorts of things, all of them deliciously erotic for their time.

For instance, our parents didn't know that "gop-shoo-bop" really meant, "Can I come over to your house and look at your dad's Playboy magazine that he keeps in the drawer with his socks?"

I was always going around the house singing, "Ram-a-lam-a-ding-dong," which my parents thought was just some silly chorus I had picked up listening to "American Bandstand."

All teen-agers knew better. "Ram-a-lam-a-ding-dong" meant, "I want to put a hickey on your neck at the drive-in Saturday night, baby."

There were many other such sounds that were secret communications between the musical groups and the kids who listened to them. For instance:

–"Sha-nah-nah" sounds harmless enough, but it was really an ancient tribal chant that meant "I want to kiss you so hard it'll knock the Clearasil right off your zits."

–"Dip-dee-dip-dip." This really turned us on. Translated, it meant, "When they started putting back seats in cars, they had you in mind, my sweet little sixteen."

–"Do-ron-run-dun-do-ron-run." I think it was the Shirelles who were always singing that. Translation: "The first time I put on your letter sweater, I busted out all over."

–"Ooo-eee-ooo-ah-ah-ting-tang-walla-walla-bing-bang." That wasn't a secret phrase at all. It was what the guy who was singing the song said when one of his guitar strings snapped and hit him square in his left eyeball.

If you had children during that era and you didn't have any idea your kids were listening to such suggestiveness in their music, don't feel like you were stupid.

We never let Dick Clark in on the secret, either.

The Bootleg Philosopher

Plane clothes

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek comes up with a novel idea for preventing airplane hijackings.

Dear editor:

Airlines have tourists sections in their planes, first class sections, smoking sections and non-smoking sections, but have never figured out where to put a terrorist section.

The awfullness of the recent hijacking has put a lot of people to thinking about how to prevent such barbaric acts.

Some say security has got to be tightened at airports, which seems hard to do. Metal detectors and x-ray scanners will detect pocket knives, cigarette lighters and loose change, but terrorists with guns and hand grenades keep on getting aboard.

One or two terrorists with guns can hold a whole plane load of passengers hostage, an obviously unfair advantage. One way to equalize this would be to issue guns to all passengers. This might cut down on hijackings but it'd practically eliminate air travel. Who'd want to fly with a planeload of inexperienced gunfighters?

I have an idea for positively preventing all weapons from getting carried on to a plane.

When a passenger arrives for his flight he is shown to a private room where he removes all his clothes and is handed a pair of freshly laundered cover-alls. His clothes are put in a barracks bag, tagged with his name, and stored in the plane's luggage compartment, along with all suitcases, handbags, etc. All passengers have to do this, and everybody boards the plane dressed alike, all pistol-free, hand grenade-free, switchblade-free.

On arrival at their destination unhijacked, passengers are ushered into private dressing rooms and handed the bags with their street clothes. They can dress and emerge feeling free and at least partly civilized. I have no idea what to do with a passenger whose barracks bag has been lost, especially if he lands in chilly weather.

This is a good idea but it won't be adopted. Most people would object to it. Wouldn't put up with it. But those who object won't be among those who've been terrorized by hijackers before.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

The Penultimate Word

WE MUST LAUGH

My favorite hospice is staffed by some of the most delightfully crazy people I know. Hospice is a program which deals with the terminally ill. It seems like a strange arrangement for a fun loving group to be engaged in such a serious work. They get a great deal of criticism for their humor. Folks have been heard to say, "How dare they laugh." My response is that they must laugh. If they do not find the release of laughter they will depress themselves to death.

In a world gone mad how dare we laugh? How can we have humor when hostages are taken, planes are bombed killing women and children, and none of the world's problems seem to ever get solved. It almost seems as if laughter has become inappropriate in such a world.

The truth is we dare not laugh. The real danger is that we will become like the enemy we fight. The real challenge we face is to resist the temptation of being like the enemy. The most natural thing in the world would be to go back to the old eye-for-an-eye idea. They took hostages–let's take us some hostages. If they harm ours–we harm theirs. The problem with the eye-for-an-eye idea is that before long no one has any eyes left.

The only way to keep from getting into the eye gouging business is to keep our sense of humor and our sense of hope in spite of the seeming hopelessness of a world full of people with no humor or hope.

If we become like the enemy then they win. My favorite story seems to fit here. A man bought his paper at the same newsstand every day. The newsstand owner was insulting and rude. Every day the dealer insulted the customer. One day the customer had a friend along when he bought his paper. The dealer was his usual insulting self. As they left the friend asked the customer why he bought his paper from such a rude and insulting dealer. The response was, "I do not intend to allow that insulting dealer to determine where I buy my paper."

I do not intend to allow some fanatical nuts to determine my outlook on life, nor my ability to still laugh.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Alien invasion untouched

If a million anybodies were invading the United States, our National Guard would be marching, our Army, Navy and Air Force responding, our civilian population mobilizing to repel the invader.

A million somebodies are invading the United States – illegally – and hardly anybody is doing anything.

Vietnamese are arriving in the United States as "political refugees." Poles are arriving as "parolees." Haitians are accepted as "entrants." Most Mexicans arrive as "wetbacks."

Illegal immigration now accounts for one-quarter of our nation's population growth. In Los Angeles County, 67 percent of all newborns in the county hospital system are born to illegal immigrant mothers.

Illegals are out of the closet now; demanding "rights" traditionally reserved for citizens.

They have forced Texas schools to educate their children free. They demanded and got admission to state universities in California.

They won free county medical benefits in Los Angeles.

Illegal immigrant tenants marched on city hall in Santa Ana, Calif., protesting evictions–and with the full support of city officials. Because illegals now make up one-fourth of the total population of Santa Ana.

Illegals are displacing thousands of American workers and draining billions of federal dollars.

Los Angeles is now the second largest Mexican city in the world.

Southeast Asian refugees bring a specific problem to Santa Clara County in California, where they suffer serious mental problems two to six times more frequently than the non-immigrant population.

Longtime immigration official Hal Boldin says, "The United States can throw all the manpower and money it wants into the illegal alien problem and it will not be solved until Congress approves employer sanctions."

He means employers must be punished for employing illegals.

Yet 20 nations including Canada, have found sanctions to be an ineffective deterrent.

Convicted employers merely view fines as a routine cost of doing business.

Each new reform proposal pits employers against the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Hispanic-rights groups against unionists, federal officials against local officials.

Lawmakers, frustrated and fatigued, look the other way.

There are four bills in the current Congress intended to curtail illegal immigration; none will; opponents call them "cruel."

If a million anybodies were invading the United States, our military would respond and our civilian population would mobilize to repel the invaders.

Millions of somebodies are invading the United States–illegally – and almost nobody is doing anything.

Texas Most Wanted Fugitive

AMARILLO – Robert Earl Garris looks more like a kindly grandfather than a man charged with murder.

But looks can be deceiving.

Garris, who will turn 50 in July, is charged with the March 25, 1984, shooting death of Glen Duckworth.

Investigators say Duckworth, 33, was sitting in his house with a friend watching television. Both men were getting very intoxicated, police reports indicate.

Suddenly a third man burst into Duckworth's house and fired one shot, striking the victim in the head. He died in an Amarillo hospital about 24 hours later. The shooting suspect fled on foot and successfully avoided a police dragnet.

Detectives say they have no idea what prompted the shooting. However, shortly after the slaying, a warrant was issued for Garris' arrest.

He is described as a white male, 5-9, 160 pounds, with brown hair, balding on top, and blue eyes. He was last seen wearing a beard.

Garris has a tattoo of an eagle on his left forearm and another tattoo of unknown design at the base of his left thumb.

Investigators say Garris uses several aliases, including the name Robert Johnson and the nickname "Virginian." He is a painter by trade.

Despite his easy-going countenance, Garris has been known to carry a 22-caliber derringer and law enforcement officers have been warned to expect the middle-aged fugitive to be armed and extremely dangerous.

This week Garris has been added to the Texas Most Wanted List. A reward of up to $1,000 is being offered for information leading to his capture.

Anyone who might know where Garris is located is asked to call the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council toll-free at 1-800-252-8477 or their loca Crime Stoppers program. In all cases, callers do not have to reveal their identities.

Texas Most Wanted is a cooperate effort between Texas Crime Stoppers and the Department of Public Safety.

Says defense attorney

Woman portrayed as vulnerable victim

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The truth came out in the trial, even if the jurors didn't recognize it, Deborah Tanner said after being convicted of 17 counts of mail and wire fraud in an adoption network prosecutors said bilked 180 couples in 40 states out of $750,000.

The eight-man, four-woman jury, returning the verdict Friday night after more than seven hours of deliberation, acquitted her on one count of mail fraud, and U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins earlier ordered her acquitted on another count.

Mrs. Tanner was released on her own recognizance pending sentencing Aug. 6, and said she would return to her home in Willcox, Ariz., and her six children, two of whom were adopted in Mexico.

The maximum penalty is five years imprisonment and $1,000 fine per count.

Mrs. Tanner also faces 16 related charges in Boston. A spokeswoman in the U.S. attorney's office in Boston said no trial date has been set.

Assistant U.S. Attorneys Sam Alba and Larry Leigh declined comment on the verdict, citing the pending cases in Boston.

Prospective parents testified in the two-week trial that they paid thousands of dollars to adopt children from Latin America but few received children or refunds.

Mrs. Tanner testified Thursday that her business partner, Bryan M. Hall, 38, El Paso, Texas, masterminded the procedures and handled the finances. She also attempted to focus blame on another associate, Lorenzo Prospero Arzola, an attorney in Mexico.

Hall pleaded guilty to two fraud charges in a plea bargain and was sentenced to three years in prison. Arzola has not been arrested.

Mrs. Tanner said after of the verdict that she was "kind of in shock, but I'm glad the truth came out. They (the jurors) didn't, I guess, hear a lot of it, but the truth has come out — and that's what I wanted to happen — about the people who ran the program and it wasn't me."

She criticized prospective parents for not waiting.

"I blame it on the media and the FBI. People should have followed through and not listened to them and they would be home with children right now," she said.

Juror Nancy Winder, 32, West Jodan, said, "I don't think she initially set out to defraud people," and she said of Hall, "I think he's the bigger culprit."

Juror Neil Phillips, 23, Pleasant Grove, said Hall "definitely took advantage of her."

The jury did not know about Hall's plea bargain and sentence.

"I view it as a hard-fought battle involving many disappointed people, with very deep human emotions and involving a young lady, who's tried very hard to obtain children for people and perhaps tried too hard in the jury's mind," said defense attorney Martin Verhoef. He said no decision had been made on an appeal.

In closing arguments, Leigh told the jury Ms. Tanner's misrepresentations to prospective parents were "so wild, so unbelievable" that it would be inconceivable she did not know they were false, "no matter how naive Mrs. Tanner may claim to be."

"To string people on year after year, month after month, people who honestly want the pleasure of the children, that shows a kind of ruthlessness, insensitivity, and callousness ... traits absolutely consistent with the specific intent to defraud," Leigh argued.

Verhoef portrayed Mrs. Tanner as a vulnerable victim who trusted Hall and Arzola. He said Hall and Arzola were motivated by profit, while Mrs. Tanner joined the business because she loved children.

Air Control Board fails to approve permit denial

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — The Texas Air Control Board has failed to give final approval to an order it issued that denied Envirosafe permission for a proposed hazardous waste landfill near Beaumont.

Six board members met in Austin Friday to approve a 22-page order explaining why they decided seven months ago to deny Envirosafe a permit for the project.

But two of the board members present abstained from voting on whether to approve the document because of conflicts of interest. That left the board with four voting members — one short of the number needed to take action.

Several board members said they hesitated to approve the permit without extensive changes in the landfill's design because they doubted whether anyone involved knew enough about the hazards of toxic air pollution.

"If you permit a factory and it starts causing problems, we can shut it down and the problem's solved," said board chairman John Blair. "But with a landfill, even if you can (revoke) the permit, you're stuck with the (toxic emissions) problems."

Jose Comacho, the board lawyer who conducted 55 days of hearings on the Envirosafe proposal, told the board in December that Envirosafe appeared to meet all the state guidelines except one pertaining to odor emissions.

Comacho last year said Envirosafe was close to proving it met the odor guidelines, but that the board should deny the permit and make Envirosafe come back with better evidence.

But Envirosafe said it couldn't present further new evidence until the board put its decision in writing.

Envirosafe attorney R. Kennan Golemon criticized the board's hesitance in deciding whether to approve the order Friday.

"This is the third change in the rules of the game in three years," he said. "We've put $3 million into this process and we're going to build this facility. But you're going to have to tell us what (standards) it is that you want us to meet."

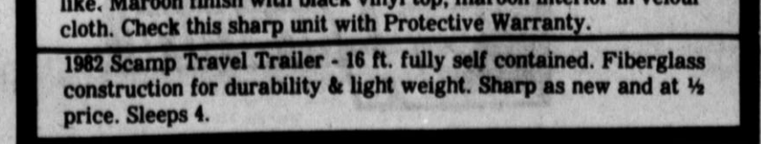

Goleman opposed the last part of the order, which stipulated that before Envirosafe could get a permit it would have to specify exactly which of some 600,000 chemcicals in use today the company would accept.

Then, according to the order, Envirosafe would have to prove none of those chemcials — or a reaction between those chemcials — would cause air pollution that could harm people or the environment.

"Right now we're just starting to understand what the effects of all these substances are," Comacho said.

Board member Vic Argento, an engineer from Duncanville who helped write the order, contended that hundreds of new chemcials are being developed each year, and a permit that would allow a landfill operator the freedom to accept any of them, puts the public's health in jeopardy.

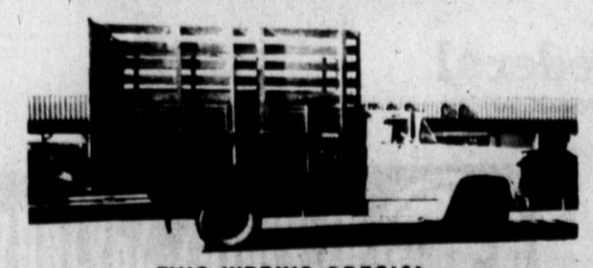

Blair said he would likely delay consideration of the order until the board's August meeting, which was already scheduled to be held in Beaumont.

For battleship Wisconsin

Corpus Christi selected as homeport

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Navy Secretary John Lehman reportedly has chosen Corpus Christi as the new homeport for the battleship Wisconsin, although no formal announcement is expected until next week.

Unnamed congressional sources told the Harte-Hanks bureau in Washington that Lehman on Friday had narrowed a list of six contenders for the facility down to Corpus Christi.

Navy Director of Public Affairs, Capt. James B. Finklestein, acknowledged that the decision has been made "and the only thing remaining is to tie up some loose ends."

But he said the Navy "has not released anything on Corpus Christi or anything else."

The original list of communities considered for the site included 16 sites. That list then was trimmed to six: Corpus Christi, Houston-Galveston, Pensacola, Pascagoula, Lake Charles, La., and Mobile, Ala.

The Houston Post reported in a copyright story Friday that unidentified sources in Washington said Pascagoula, Miss., and Pensacola, Fla., are the finalists along with Corpus Christi.

A source quoted by The Post said Lake Charles ranked at the bottom of the Navy's list of final six, with Houston next-to-last.

Lehman is expected to make the final announcement next week after Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger "signs off" on the decision, according to the newspaper.

A source quoted by the Houston Chronicle described the decision as "a crapshoot" between Corpus Christi and Pensacola.

And freshman U.S. Rep. Mack Sweeney, R-Wharton, told Harte-Hanks, "The word has come down that it is going to be a Texas port, so you've got a 50-50 shot at picking the right one."

The Houston newspapers reported Houston-Galveston port lost the bid because of problems in reaching solid ground to set a foundation at Galveston's Fort Point and because of the site's distance to deep water.

"That's just a fact of nature. There is nothing we could have done about it," John Focke, who headed the Houston-Galveston committee promoting the port, told the Chronicle. "If the issue is water depth, the Navy could have looked at navigational charts last summer and eliminated a lot of wasted expense."

Focke said the issue of deep water is important for submarine protection for the battleship and its accompanying vessels.

The Wisconsin was launched Dec 7, 1943 and commissionerd April 16, 1944. Just 15 years later, it was taken out of commission and relegated to the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard, where it has remained part of the Navy's mothball fleet.

Navy officials estimate it will cost $454.4 million to refit the battleship and $60 million a year to operate it once renovations are complete. The refitting operation has not yet started but is expected to take about two years.

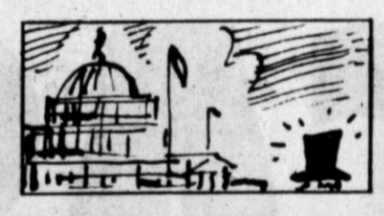

Competition has been keen for the base, which Houston officials said would bring $1.2 billion into the local economy over a 10-year period, plus create some 4,000 jobs. The joint effort by Houston-Galveston included some $18 million in incentives.

Why don't they invent a money mulcher so you don't have to lug all that stuff home to spread on the lawn?

Bet on it: There's no way you can describe a spiral staircase to someone while holding your hands behind your back.

Have you ever met anyone who could eat a baking-powder biscuit with butter and honey and not need a bath immediately afterward?

Probably the smallest of our presidents, James Madison, at five feet four inches, never weighed more than 100 pounds.

Pitcairn Island

Pitcairn Island, situated in the Pacific ocean halfway between South America and Australia, has an area of 18 square miles and, as of 1983, had a population of 61. It was discovered in 1767, but was uninhabited until 23 years later when the mutineers from the Bounty landed there. It is administered by a British representative in New Zealand.

AIDS testing set through July 24

Free testing to determine if a person has been exposed to the virus thought to cause AIDS will be available through July 4 at 26 local health departments throughout Texas.

Grants from the Texas Department of Health are paying for the testing, which determines whether a person's immune system has been activated by the HTLV-3 virus.

A positive test indicates that a person has been exposed to the virus, but it does not mean that he or she has AIDS, said Christie Reed, The TDH epidemiologist who is coordinating the state's AIDS program.

The test, licensed this spring by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, was developed to screen blood products for the antibodies against the virus. Antibodies are protective substances manufactured by the body's immune system.

Researchers developed the antibody test after several dozen AIDS cases were linked to use of blood products contaminated by the HTLV-3 virus.

The health department has set up testing sites beside those at blood banks so that persons who think they may have been exposed to the virus can be tested. Ms. Reed said the testing will be confidential, and no medical records of the procedure will be kept.

The country's blood banks are testing donor blood to prevent further transfusion-related AIDS cases.

Ms. Reed explained that AIDS is similar to other infectious diseases in that many people are exposed to the causative organism, but do not develop the clinical symptoms. Doctors do know that most cases of AIDS develop in high-risk groups of people, such as homosexual men and intravenous drug users.

But they don't understand what individual variations in a person's health status or immune system may protect him against the virus or make him vulnerable, she said.

Ms. Reed said the Texas testing sites are part of a short-term national program organized by the federal government to permit high-risk groups to be tested without having to donate blood.

Federal health officials have suggested that high-risk groups may want to be tested to know if they have been exposed to the virus and, perhaps, seek medical attention or change their lifestyle to minimize their risk.

AIDS is the abbreviation for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, a disorder that inactivates the immune system's helper cells. Those cells are important because they turn on and regulate the immune response. But AIDS patients often develop cancer and other infections because their immune system leaves them vulnerable.

DR. GOTT

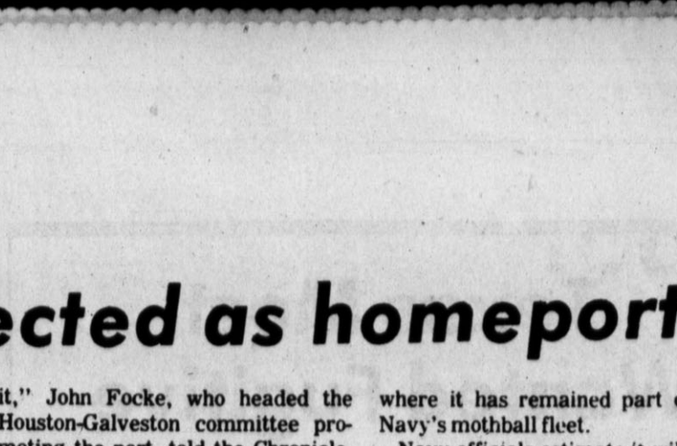

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have heard that going on an all-protein diet for a couple of weeks will cause a large weight loss, which may serve as a good incentive to continue on a more nutritious diet. How healthy is it to be on an all-protein diet for two weeks?

DEAR READER — I don't encourage anyone to go on an all-anything diet for two weeks. Protein is essential, but so are other nutrients. Without any fats or carbohydrates in your food, you'll lose weight, all right — about half of it fat and the rest muscle. You heard me correctly: You will burn about equal amounts of fat and protein during a pure protein diet or a fast.

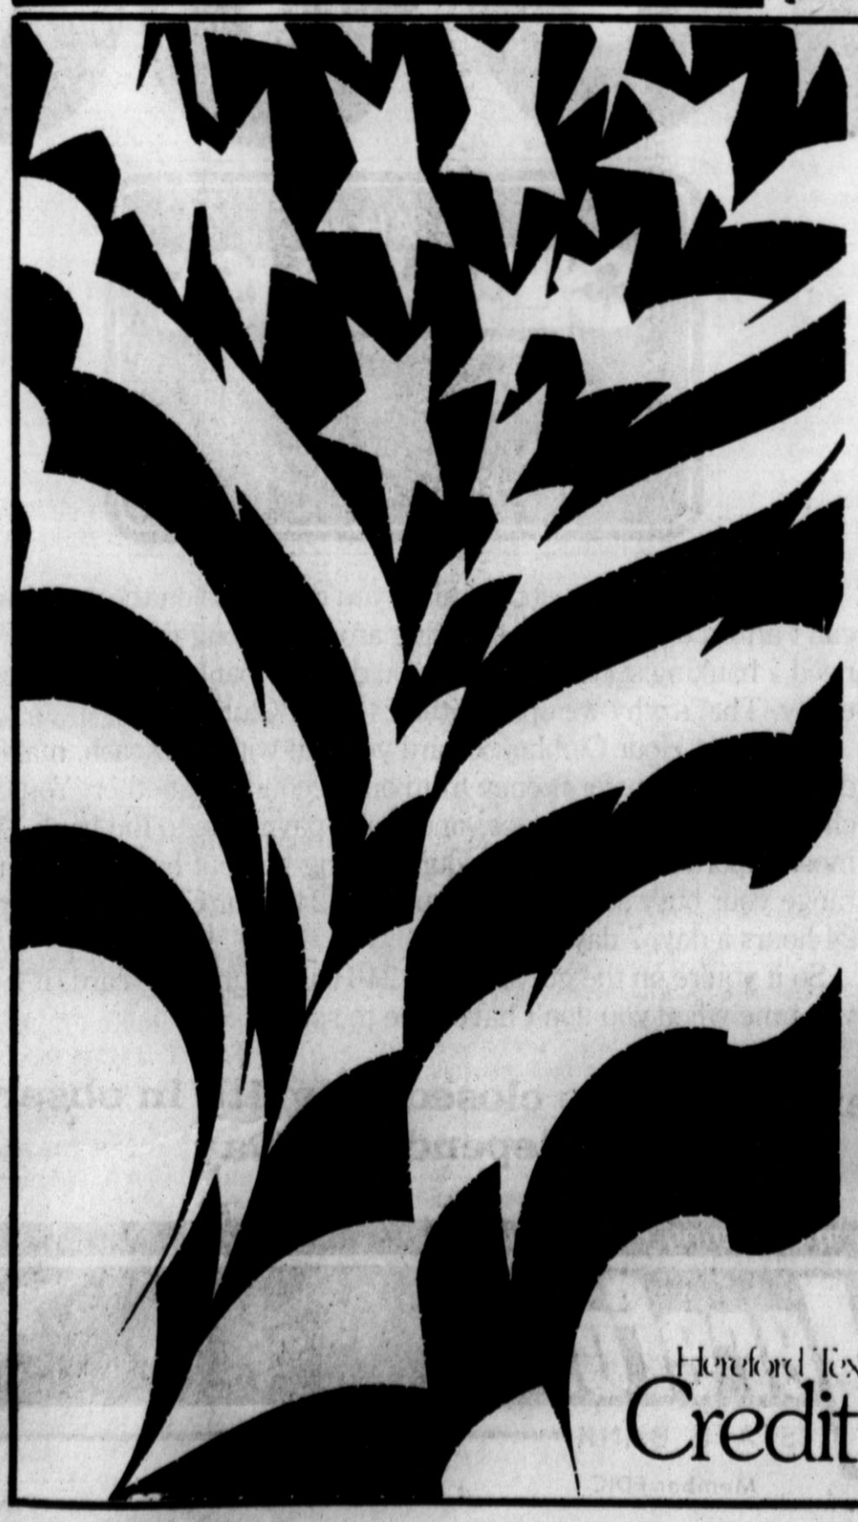

A more appropriate approach would be to keep your protein intake high, and, at the same time, to eat some complex carbohydrates — like grains — to prevent muscle wasting. The carbohydrate you can cut out is the "simple" type — in particular, sugar. That's hard, though, since sugar seems to be in everything these days. Even table salt has sugar (dextrose) added to keep it pouring when it rains. Check labels and, to the extent you can, avoid sugar. Try to maintain a diet that is balanced with other foods.

The major league baseball record for home runs in October is four by Ned Williamson of Chicago in the National League in 1884, Guz Zernial of Chicago in the American League in 1950, and Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia in the National League in 1980.

The National Football League record for most seasons leading the league in scoring is five by Don Hutson. Hutson also holds records for most consecutive seasons leading the league in touchdowns, eight; most seasons leading the lead in pass receiving, eight; and most seasons leading the league in pass reception yardage, seven.

The all-time unofficial champion of baseball in reaching first base on catcher's interferences is Pete Rose. But Dale Berra figures he can, before his career is over, top Rose's unofficial record. "I swing late sometimes. The catchers must think I'm going to take the pitch and move forward for the ball. Then their gloves get in the way."

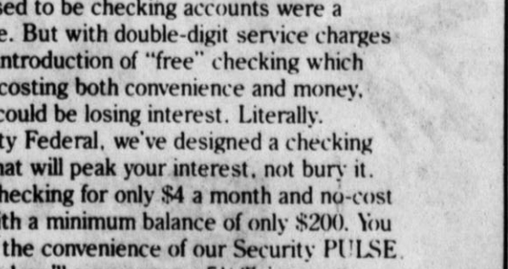

Babe Ruth League Champions

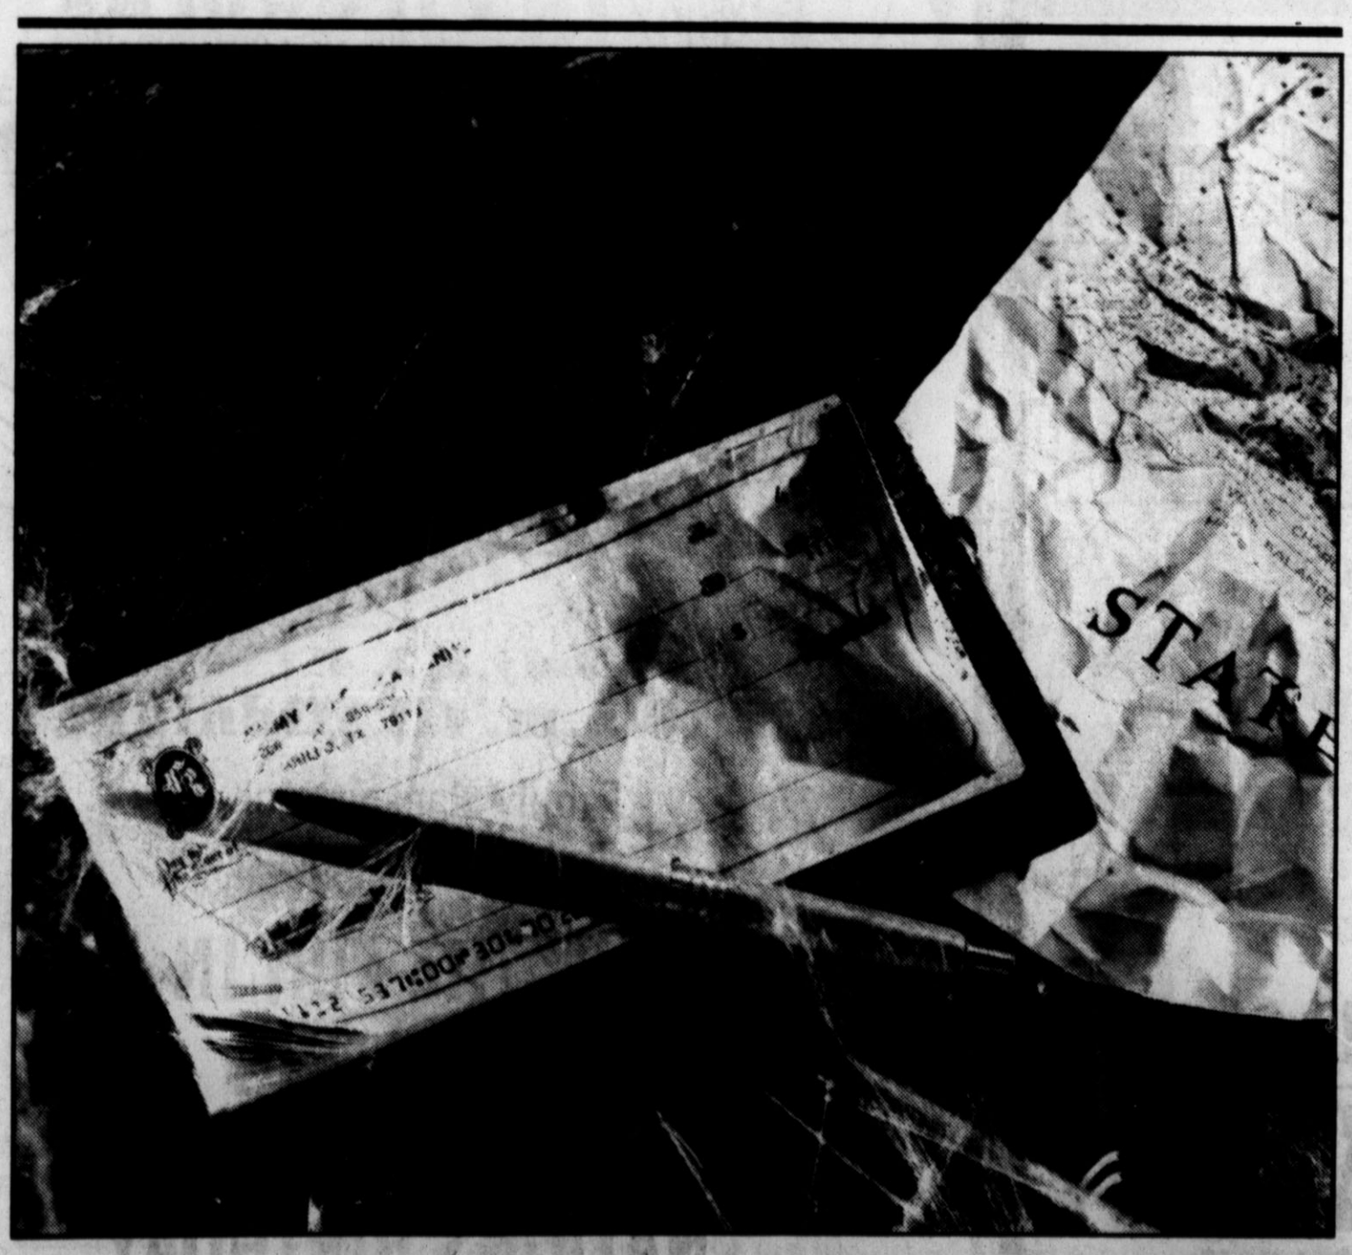

The Red Sox, who had a season record of 14-1-1, claimed the championship of the Kids Inc. Babe Ruth League this summer. Team members are: front row from left, Edward Castillo, Jim Eric Andrews, Michael Lloyd, Dewey Gragson, Scott Simons, Rickey Rieves, and Eddie Mondragon; back row from left, J.T. Heaton, Kyle Andrews, Roger McCracken, Rodney McCracken, Tim Long, and Coach Rick McCracken.

In Kids Inc. leagues

Five boys', girls' all-star teams announced

Five all-star teams were named in Kids Inc. leagues Friday night, two from the boys' Babe Ruth League, and three from girls' softball leagues.

Action for all-star teams begins as early as the second week of July when the Babe Ruth League 13-year-old all-stars serve as the host team for the district tournament.

The Babe Ruth League 14 and 15-year-old all-stars will play at Friona in the district tournament during the second week of July.

Two girls' all-star teams will compete in the state tournament in Fort Worth on July 18-21.

The 15 and 16-year-old all-stars will go to the state Pony League tournament, and the 11 to 14-year-old all-star team will participate in the state Colt League tournament.

Girls ages 12, 13 and 14 were announced Friday night for the 11 to 14-year-old all-star team. Some eleven-year-olds will be added to the team after tryouts that are scheduled Monday night.

An all-star team from the girls' minor league will play in a tournament in Amarillo in mid July.

The members of the all-star teams, the league team they were from, and the coaches are as follows:

Babe Ruth League 14 and 15-year-old all-stars: Tim Long, Jason Scott, Roger McCracken, Rodney McCracken, and Kyle Andrews, all of the Red Sox; Rob Collier, Raymond Romo, Jeff Farr, and Derrell Page, all of the Twins;

Edward Martinez, Glenn Parker, and Ross Torres, all of the White Sox; Fidel Ceballos, Charlie Marquez, and James Hernandez, all of the Indians; Rick McCracken and Jimmy Collier, coaches; and Shorty Torres, business manager.

Babe Ruth 13-year-old all-stars: Jim Eric Andrews and Edward Castillo, both of the Red Sox; Brett Confer, Karl Schumacher, and Russell Backus, all of the Twins; Johnny Cornelius, Shane Kapka, and Jason Walterscheid, all of the Indians;

Jim Anima, Robert Cavin, Keith Kelso, and Steve Tucker, all of the White Sox; Michael Dodson and Jeff O'Rand, coaches; and Randy Evans, business manager.

Girls' 15 and 16-year-old all-stars: Whitney Whitaker, Martha Ramirez, Carrie Scott Valdez, and Cindy Cordova, all of the Angels; Donna Victors and Norma Moreno, both of the Cardinals; Nadine Herrera, Melissa Lafuente, and Cindy Tice, all of the Yankees;

Trina Morgan, Sherry Chapman, Carla Gonzales, Catrina Perez, and Rachel Coleman, all of the Braves; and Lupe Ramirez, coach.

Girls' 12 to 14-year-old all-stars: Maricella Ramirez, Sally Longoria, and Blanca Cordova, all of the Angels; Candi Robbins and Roxanne Torres, both of the Braves; Jaime Victor and Denise Carreon, both of the Cardinals; Yvonne Cantu, Teresa Lee, Rosemary Rios, and Stephanie Sackinger, all of the Yankees; and Julian Zamora, coach.

Girls' minor league all-stars: Melissa Romero, Kathy Hernandez, and Teresa Selender, all of the Giants; Shantel Cornelius, Jennifer Bullard, and Kyanne Lyndley, all of the Braves; Lori Sanders, Minerva Salazar, and Melinda Jones, all of the Angels;

Veronica Casarez, Denise Davila, and Annette Guerrero, all of the Yankees; Cindy Chapman, Keiley Whitaker, and Brandy Dunn, all of the Cardinals; and Patsy Webb, coach.

Undefeated League Champions

The Angels went undefeated in 12 games this season to capture the championship of the Kids Inc. girls' major league. Members of the Angels team are: front row from left, Amber Brooks, Sally Longoria, Whitney Whitaker, Martha Ramirez, Carrie Valdez, and Blanca Cordova; back row from left, Lana Kosub, Cindy Chavez, Cindy Cordova, Darla Newton, Maricella Ramirez, Susan Bell, and Coach Lupe Ramirez. Not pictured are Dolores Segovia and Assistant Coach Americo Gamez.

Men's softball tourney scheeduled in Dumas

A men's softball tournament, the Benton Ray Memorial Classic, is scheduled July 12-14 in Dumas.

Entry deadline for the double-elimination tournament, in which U.S.S.S.A. class B rules will be used, is July 5.

Entry fee is $100 per team. Special awards to be presented at the tournament are sport watches to all-tournament team selections, television to the most valuable player of the tournament, tape players to the player with the highest batting average for 16 or more at-bats, a glove for the player with the best fielding performances, and a video cassette recorder to the winner of the home run hitting contest.

Proceeds for the tournament go to the Benton Ray Memorial Scholarship Fund, which was set up in 1983 as a memorial to an athlete who died in 1983 of Hodgkins Disease, and who had participated in high school athletics.

The tournament will be played at the softball parks at 14th Street and Twichell Avenue in Dumas.

For more information on the tournament, call 935-9090 during the daytime. After 6 p.m., call Michael Artho at 935-7507, Danny Bilbrey at 935-7312, or Clark Ray at 935-5665.

The record for most consecutive winning seasons in sports by a professional team is 39 years by the New York Yankees, from 1926 to 1964. The second best string in professional sports is 32 winning seasons, 1951 to 1983, by the Montreal Canadians of the National Hockey League.

Wilt Chamberlain led the National Basketball Association in scoring seven straight seasons, from 1960 to 1966.

Trivia Questions: How tall were both of Wilt Chamberlain's parents, and how many scholarships was he offered before he decided to go to the University of Kansas?

ANSWERS: Chamberlain's parents were both five feet, eight inches tall. He was offered 140 scholarships.

YMCA schedules tennis classes

Tennis lessons have been scheduled by the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA for beginners, intermediate, and advanced players.

The classes will be held from Monday, July 8, to Friday, July 12.

Instructor for the classes will be Ruben Vargas, tennis coach at Hereford High School.

The class for beginning tennis players is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. each morning at the Hereford High School tennis courts. There will be classes available for persons ages six and older.

Maximum enrollment for the class is 16 people on a first come, first serve basis.

Classes for intermediate and advanced players are scheduled from 10:15 a.m. to 11:15 a.m. each day at the high school courts.

These classes are also open to persons ages six and older. There will be a maximum enrollment of 16, also on a first come, first serve basis.

Fees for the classes are $10 for YMCA members and $20 for non-members of the YMCA. All fees must be paid in advance at the YMCA offices, and all participants must furnish their own tennis rackets.

For more information on the tennis classes, call the YMCA at 364-6990.

The game of volleyball was invented at the YMCA in Holyoke, Mass., in 1895. The first national YMCA championships were held in 1922 at Brooklyn, N.Y. The YMCA was the governing body of volleyball until the United States Volleyball Association (USVBA) was formed in 1928.

Only one team in major league baseball has had three or more players each hit 40 or more home runs in one season, the 1973 Atlanta Braves. Dave Johnson hit 43 homers, Darrell Evans 41, and Hank Aaron 40 for that Braves team.

Happiness Is Playing T-Ball

Carlos Mendez of the White Sox has a grin from ear to ear as he runs from second base to third base after a teammate recorded a hit in a Kids Inc. boys' T-Ball league game last week. The season came to an end last week for the nine teams in the league.

Two-women golf scramble set July 13

A two-women scramble golf tournament has been scheduled on Saturday, July 13, at Pitman Municipal Golf Course in Hereford.

The Women's Golf Cancer Benefit Tournament will have an 8 a.m. shotgun start. Proceeds from the tournament go to the American Cancer Society.

Entry deadline for the tournament is Tuesday, July 9. The entry fee of $60 per team includes the use of a cart. There will also be prizes and food at the tournament.

The first 30 teams to pay entry fees will compete in the tournament. The field will be divided into flights according to lowest handicap.

To enter the scramble, send names, handicaps and entry fee to: Women's Golf Cancer Benefit Tournament, P.O. Box 814, Hereford, TX, 79045.

The 24-second block was first used in professional basketball in the 1953-54 season. Danny Biasone, owner of the Syracuse Royals, suggested the use of a shot clock to speed up the game and get more scoring into it.

Rangers snap losing streak

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

Bobby Valentine was pleased to find his Texas Rangers hitting again after a dismal road trip that saw them bat .214 and lose five out of six games.

"The offense was great tonight," Valentine said Friday after the Rangers opened a 10-day home stand by beating the Oakland A's 7-5 in a game that snapped a losing streak at three games.

"It was just a good one to win," Valentine added. "The way our bullpen has been going, I felt if we got some runs, we'd win it. I didn't know how long it would take, but I knew we'd score."

Toby Harrah and Gary Ward hit home runs, and Pete O'Brien had three hits to pace a 12-hit by the Rangers. Harrah's two-run homer, his sixth of the year, broke a 5-5 tie in the bottom of the eighth and thwarted Oakland's rally from a 5-0 rally.

Loser Keith Atherton, 3-4, served up the home run pitch to Harrah — a 3-2 fastball that Harrah said he wasn't surprised to see.

"I don't blame him for throwing a heater the way I've been hitting them lately," Harrah said. "I was lucky enough to get the bat on it."

It was the 10th time this season that Atherton had given up a home run in relief for the A's.

"We came back and battled back, and it (Harrah's home run) makes it a tough way to lose," Atherton said. "I just threw my fastball, and he took it from there."

Oakland Manager Jackie Moore said, "All games are tough to lose, especially when you battle back. They made a couple of good plays, but we were back in it."

Texas scored in the first when Oddibe McDowell bunted for a single and later scored on Buddy Bell's sacrifice fly.

Harrah started a four-run fourth inning by drawing his 69th walk of the year, tops in the major leagues. One out later, O'Brien singled and Ward followed with his fifth home run. Don Slaught doubled home the final run of the inning, chasing starter Chris Codiroli.

The A's came back for three runs in the sixth. Carney Lansford doubled and Mike Davis followed with a single to center, moving Lansford to third. Dave Kingman followed by hitting into a double play with Lansford scoring. Dusty Baker then hit his ninth homer, and Murphy followed with single and moved to second when McDowell let the ball roll between his legs in center field. Mike Heath singled Murphy home.

Lansford singled home an Oakland run in the seventh after a two-base error by O'Brien at first base. Dwayne Murphy tied the game in the eighth with a bases-empty homer, his 11th circuit clout of the year.

Greg Harris, 2-1, picked up the win in relief.

Blue Jays 2, Tigers 0

Back in Little League, Dan Petry outpitched Dave Stieb. But these are the major leagues.

"I used to beat him then. He's trying to catch up," Petry said after Stieb shackled Detroit on three hits Friday night to help the Toronto Blue Jays over the Tigers 2-0.

A crowd of 48,002 was at Tiger Stadium for the opener of a three-game series between the American League East-leading Blue Jays and second-place Detroit. All game long, the Detroit fans were waiting for something to happen. So was Stieb.

"I haven't really pitched all that well in this park. With a two-run lead, I didn't really feel secure," said Stieb, 8-5. "I've had a couple of games in the ninth where I've fallen apart."

George Bell hit a two-run homer in the second inning and that was enough for Stieb as the Blue Jays increased their lead over Detroit to 3½ games.

Stieb, who grew up in the same Anaheim, Calif., neighborhood as Petry, struck out six and walked two in lowering his ERA to 1.93.

Royals 5, Angels 4

Greg Pryor's two-out single in the 14th inning drove home pinch-runner John Wathan from second base, leading Kansas City over California in a game that lasted almost five hours.

Steve Balboni drew a leadoff walk from Doug Corbett, 2-1, in the 14th and Wathan entered as a pinch runner. Wathan went to second on an infield out before Pryor singled.

The victory brought the Royals to within 3½ games of the AL West-leading Angels.

Mariners 8, Indians 6

Gorman Thomas hit a three-run during a four-run rally in the sixth inning, and Seattle overcame an early 6-0 deficit to win its team-record seventh straight game.

Thomas' home run, his 11th of the season, landed 35 rows into the left-field seats at the Kingdome.

Red Sox 6, Orioles 1

Bruce Hurst, banished to the bullpen two weeks ago, got another chance to start and came through for Boston by scattering six hits over seven innings.

Hurst, 3-7, gave up Gary Roenicke's home run in the seventh. But he struck out seven, including Fred Lynn three times, before leaving because of a groin pull.

"I tried to have a little fire going out there," Hurst said.

The Orioles lost their fourth straight game.

Yankees 5, Brewers 2

Ron Guidry pitched seven innings for his eighth straight victory and Dave Winfield's long two-run homer in the first inning got New York rolling.

Guidry, 9-3, had shut out Baltimore and Detroit in his last two starts, but gave up two runs in the first inning. Guidry's winning streak is the longest by an AL pitcher this season.

He evened his lifetime record against Milwaukee at 7-7.

Winfield's ninth home run of the season went over the 411-foot mark in left-center field at Yankee Stadium.

Twins 5, White Sox 4

Greg Gagne and Roy Smalley each reached base all five times they came to the plate, while Frank Viola pitched eight innings to lead Minnesota to victory in Chicago.

Gagne had three hits, a walk and was hit by a pitch and Smalley got two hits and three walks. Kent Hrbek drove in two Twins runs.

The loss was Chicago's seventh in its last eight games.

Girls' Minor League Champions

The Kids Inc. girls' minor league title for the regular season was won by the Giants this season. Members of the championship team are: front row from left, Brandie Webb, Brianna Reinauer, Audrey Tijerina, Stephanie Gonzalez, and Kathy Hernandez; middle row from left, Melissa Romero, Misty Dudley, Vanessa Gonzalez, and April Roddy; back row from left, Assistant Coach Santos Gonzalez and Head Coach Patsy Webb. Players not pictured are Teresa Selendar, Jody Decker, and Michelle Liscano.

Triple plays were accomplished by the same major league baseball team on two consecutive days. Detroit had triple plays vs. Boston in consecutive American League games on June 6 and 7, 1908.

Lightweight title to be defended Sunday

By TIM DAHLBERG AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Jimmy Paul, who got his chance at the lightweight title when Robin Blake injured his left hand, defends the International Boxing Federation crown for the first time Sunday in a match against Blake.

Paul made the most of his title opportunity when he pounded out a 15-round decision April 6 over Harry Arroyo and says he's not about to give the crown up.

"No one expected me to beat Arroyo," said Paul, who sports a 22-1 record with 18 knockouts. "I came a long way and crossed a long road to become champion. I'm not going to let it go."

A product of Emanuel Steward's Kronk Gym in Detroit, Paul fought in relative obscurity before getting his big break when Blake was forced to pull out of a scheduled bout with Arroyo.

Paul knocked Arroyo down three times in that fight, scoring a lopsided decision win and proving he could compete with the top lightweights.

The 25-year-old champion, though, feels Blake will be a tougher opponent than Arroyo, who handed the challenger one of his two losses in 29 pro bouts.

"I think Blake has more ability than Arroyo," said Paul. "But I think Arroyo has a better defense. Blake has been known to get hit a lot."

The fight promises to be a contrast in styles with Blake, a southpaw, trying to use his stinging right jab to keep Paul away. Paul, however, is known for his quickness and uncanny ability to penetrate defenses.

The fight is critical for the 23-year-old challenger from Ft. Worth, Texas, who was the top-ranked contender before two successive losses knocked him from the unbeaten ranks and threatened to derail his career.

Blake was 22-0 and a hot prospect before dropping a 10-round decision in October 1983 to Tyrone Crawley and following that three months later with another 10-round decision loss to Arroyo.

Down on the FARM

WATCH UP FOR POWER LINES

Power lines can be dangerous.

Touching irrigation pipe to a power line can divert the electricity through the pipe . . . and to anyone in contact with it. In this part of the country, this is the leading cause of farm injuries and deaths in electricity-related accidents. Any equipment of unusual height represents a potential danger. Lift arms on field equipment, combine auger spouts and even radio antennas can cause serious injury or death if they, and you, make contact with a power line.

Keep an eye up for power lines. Watch up, for safety's sake.

National League roundup

Niekro hurls Astros to win

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

The San Fransisco Giants are approaching a new standard of futility, and it could be attained before a weekend series with the Houston Astros conlcudes.

Despite collecting 11 hits and having runners on base each inning Friday night, the Giants were limited to one run by Joe Niekro, Jeff Calhoun, and Dave smith in a 3-1 loss to the Astros.

It was the Giants' straight eighth defeat, one fewer than the San Francisco record of nine established last year. The all-time Giants' losing streak is 13 games in 1944.

On the subject of streaks, the victory was the Astros' 10th in a row over the Giants, including 4-0 this season. Niekro, 6-7, hasn't lost in Candlestick Park since 1982 and is 20-13 lifetime against San Francisco.

"I've got to feel fortunate to give up 10 hits and one one run," Niekro said. "The wind had a lot to do with the way I was pitching. It made it difficult, especially on the knuckler."

Niekro, who posted his 199th major league victory, blanked the Giants until the sixth. Gary Rajsih and Jose Uribe singled with two outs, pinch hitter Scot Thompson walked and Dan Gladden was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded.

The Giants stranded 15 runners and continued to lend poor support to loser Bill Laskey, 1-10, who lost his seventh straight. His teammate have scored 13 runs in his 10 losses and only three runs in his last six starts.

The Astros scored an unearned run in the first and added solo homers by Denny Walling in the second and Alan Ashby in the fifth. Ashby's blast, his fourth of the season, landed in the upper deck in right field.

"I've never hit one that far in the big leagues," Ashby noted. "But I was sturggling. Catching the knuckler was tough with runners on base. We have to feel fortunate."

"We got an awful lot of base hits, but we didn't get them at the right time," Giants maanager Jim Davenport groaned. "It's hard to believe we got 11 hits and only one run."

Conversely, the Astros made the most of their seven hits, stranding only three runners. "We dodged some bullets tonight," manager Bob Lillis said. "It's a credit to our pitchers that they kept bearing down and working out of trouble."

Reds 11, Padres 9

Cincinnati's Dave Parker has been looking at the downside of his career since 1978 when he was the National League's Most Valuable Player.

But the decline, which saw the former Pittsburgh slugger fall from 30 home runs and 117 runs batted in that season to six homers and 29 RBI in 1982 in only 73 games, is definitely a thing of the past. Parker's re-emergence began last season when the Reds signed him as a free agent and he drove in 94 runs.

This season he is again a major force in the game.

Parker, who hit a game-tying home run Friday night as the Reds defeated San Diego 11-9 for their fourth straight victory, is third in the league in hitting at .319, second in runs batted in with 55 and tied for third in homers with 14.

Cardinals 3, Mets 2

Jack Clark gave St. Louis teammate Tom Nieto a tip before Nieto went to bat with runners on second and third and two outs in the second inning.

"In that situation, Clark told me I should widen my strike zone," the Cardinal catcher said. "He said the pitcher might make a mistake and even if it's not a strike, it might be a pitch I can hit. That's just what happened."

Met pitcher Ed Lynch threw a chest high breaking ball and Nieto smacked the pitch to left field to give the Cardinals a 2-0 lead. Tom Herr's third homer accounted for the other.

The Mets, who have lost three straight, scored on George Foster's 11th homer and Mookie Wilson's third.

Expos 5, Phillies 3

Mike Fitzgerald wasn't all that excited by his first two home runs of the season, but rookie Mitch Webster was glad he got three hits.

"One game doesn't make a season," Fitzgerald said. "I've been struggling and putting pressure on myself, but the team is doing well and that's what counts."

Fitzgerald, hitting .196 coming in, gave the Expos the lead with a second-inning homer off Charles Hudson, 3-7. He also homered in the eighth off Larry Andersen.

Cubs 5, Pirates 0

Chicago is back, according to Steve Trout who pitched a seven-hitter for his first shutout since last season.

"Even when we lost 13 in a row, we showed a lot of character," Trout said of the Cubs, who have now won three straight. "We all kept our sanity pretty well."

Keith Moreland hit his sixth homer in support of Trout, 7-3, who has beaten Pittsburgh four times this season and has a 0.60 earned run average against the Pirates.

Braves 11, Dodgers 2

Atlanta won its fifth straight game with Ken Oberkfell driving in three runs with a triple and a single, Terry Harper getting four with a three-run homer and a single and Glenn Hubbard adding a three-run homer.

Steve Bedrosian, 5-6, earned the victory and combined on a four-hitter with Jeff Dedmon and Rick Camp.

Tournament Champions

Andretti, Sullivan share auto racing spotlight

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Mario Andretti and Danny Sullivan have been sharing a lot of headlines this year.

Andretti, the defending CART-PPG Indy-car champion and current series leader, has won three of four races this season. Sullivan won the Indianapolis 500 — with Andretti finishing second — and is second to Andretti in the point standings, 81-47.

During a session Friday at the New Jersey Meadowlands sports complex, the two shared the podium as the top two provisional qualifiers for Sunday's U.S. Grand Prix.

Andretti, breaking his own track qualifying record of 96.012 mph, set prior to the inaugural Meadowlands race last year, turned a fast lap Friday of 98.452 in his Beatrice Lola T-900.

Sullivan, in a March 85C, was just behind at 97.244, followed by the March of Bobby Rahal at 96.030.

Andretti, 45 and at 5-foot-6 about six inches shorter than the 35-year-old Sullivan, looked up at his closest pursuer and said, "Whoever is closest to you, whether you're the chaser or chasee, he becomes the yardstick that you measure yourself against.

"Danny and I have had things going pretty well this season, so I look at what he's doing and if I'm ahead of him then I know I've got the field pretty well covered."

Sullivan is relatively new to stardom on the racetrack, unlike Andretti, who won the Indy 500 in 1969 and was Formula One world champion in 1978.

"Mario has been the guy to beat since the beginning of last year," said Sullivan. "But, obviously, we're getting closer. The two teams we're talking about are two of the best, two of the best prepared.

"And Mario is definitely one of the best guy's to race with. I'd just like to switch things around a little and let him chase me for a while."

Rain threatened throughout the day, but there were only occasional sprinkles.

More of the same, with possible rain, was forecast for today, but the National Weather Service was calling for clearing conditions on Sunday.

Sunday's 100-lap race, which will be televised live by NBC, is scheduled to start at 4 p.m. EDT.

Amos Alonzo Stagg holds the record for longest service as a college football coach, 57 years. He coached at Springfield College, 1890-91; University of Chicago, 1892-1932; and College of Pacific, 1933-46.

American Heart Association to hold 50th annual meeting

AUSTIN – The Texas Affiliate of the American Heart Association will hold its 50th Annual Meeting of the Membership on July 12-14 at the St. Anthony Inter-Contenental Hotel in San Antonio.

Over two hundred volunteers serving as delegates, officers and board members from throughout the state will gather in San Antonio to review the activities of the American Heart Association in Texas. Delegates will recommend policies for guidance of the Board of Directors, and will elect officers and directors for the 1985-86 fiscal year.

A Leadership Conference designed to help volunteers develop leadership skills as officers, directors and chairmen on the local level will be held on Friday, July 12. Participants will learn how to conduct successful fund raising activities, market AHA community service programs, and utilize local committees to inform the public of Heart Association activities.

The 12th Annual Stroke Conference will also be held in conjunction with the Annual Meeting. This conference is designed to demonstrate how stroke victims can help themselves, and the role of the family in the patient's rehabilitation.

James L. Childress, M.D., a surgeon from San Benito, Texas, will address the stroke conference delegates. His topic will be "Stroke Recovery: A Personal Experience."

San Antonio Mayor Henry G. Cisneros will wecome delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Membership on July 13. The keynote speaker of the Opening Session will be T. Boone Pickens, Jr., President of Mesa Petroleum Co. of Amarillo. Mr. Pickens founded Mesa Petroleum Co. in 1964 and has gained a reputation as a shareholder's advocate. Mesa's investments in other companies have netted the 750,000 shareholders of those companies almost 13 billion dollars. Mr. Pickens is a dedicated Heart Association volunteer, having served as a member of the Corporate Cabinet both in Texas and Nationally. He has worked actively on the local level as well, serving as Campaign Chairman in Amarillo-Potter County Division and promoting the Heart Association's corporate wellness program, Heart At Work.

A Delegate Research Luncheon will highlight the AHA-sponsored research programs of the American Heart Association. The Lyndon Baines Johnson Award will be presented to Michael J. Davis, Ph.D. for obtaining the highest meritorial ranking for his research project entitled, "Vascular Smooth Muscle Mechanics in Single Arterioles."

Astronaut Drew Gaffney, M.D. will address the Research Luncheon. Dr. Gaffney received a research grant from the AHA in 1977, and has gone on to become a payload specialist for the Spacelab Life Sciences flight scheduled for early 1986.

The highlight of the Annual Meeting will be the Awards Dinner on Saturday evening. Awards will be presented to the outstanding lay, nurse and professional volunteers of the Affiliate, and to over twenty other outstanding volunteers for their service in Texas.

Newly elected officers and board of directors will conduct their first board meeting of the 1985-86 fiscal year on Sunday, July 14.

Fly the flag on the Fourth

It is not the flag of your king – it is the flag of yourself and of all your neighbors.

Alvin M. Owsley
Past National Commander
The American Legion

Jimmie Hazzard and Amanda Hagar
... giving a civilian salute.

Independence Day – The Fourth of July – is one of many state and national holidays that encourage the proud display of the American Flag.

Traditions of flying the flag have been instituted into the Flag Code and sanctioned by Congress. A few of the rules of respect follow.

It is the universal custom to display the Flag only from sunrise until sunset on buildings and stationary staffs. it may be displayed 24-hours a day if illuminated during darkness.

When carried in a procession with other flags, the U.S. Flag should be on the marching right, or if in a line of flags, in front and center.

When displayed with a group of flags, the U.S. Flag should be at the center and the highest point. On a staff with other flags the U.S. Flag fies at the top.

If not flown from a staff, the flag should be displayed flat or suspended so that is falls free. The union, or the starred section, should be uppermost to the flag's own right.

When displayed over the street the Flag shoud be suspended vertically with the union to the north in an east west street, or to the east in a north and south street.

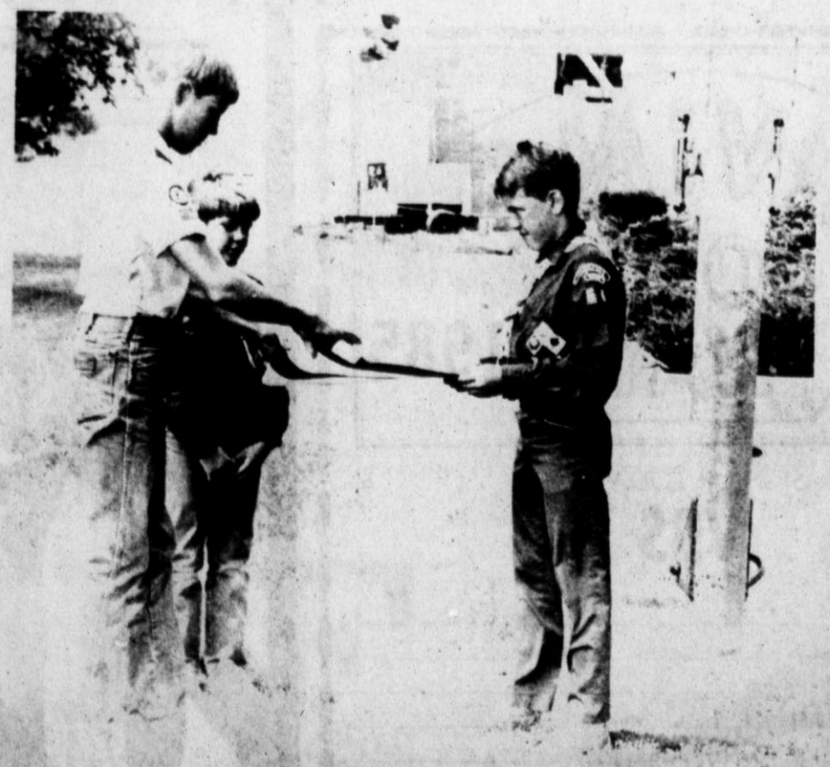

When used on a speaker's platform, the Flag should be above and behind the speaker. On a staff in an auditorium, the Flag should be in a position of prominence to the audience and at the speaker's right.

Flags are not to be used as coverings for unveiling ceremonies of a statue or monument. When used as a covering for a casket, the union is at the head and over the left shoulder. The flag stillshould not touch the ground or be lowered into the grave.

When flown at half staff, the Flag is to be hoisted up to the top for an instant, then lowered to half staff. Before the flag is lowered for the day, it should again be lifted to the top.

MRS. MICHAEL NORRIS
...nee Cyndi Kiker

Kiker, Norris vows spoken Saturday

Cyndi Kiker of Amarillo became the bride of Michael Norris, also of Amarillo, during an afternoon ceremony Saturday at First Church of the Nazarene in Hereford. Officiating was the Rev. Bob Huffaker of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Kiker of Amarillo and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Norris, also of that city.

The bride's cousin, Debbie Ball of Denver, served as maid of honor and Jack Foley of Amarillo was best man.

Kathie Raughton and Donna Pemberton of Snyder were bridesmaids and the groom's brothers, David and Dale Norris, both of Dallas, were groomsmen.

Flower girl was Michelle Sifford, daughter of Kenny and Gail Sifford, and ring bearer was Brian McDonough, son of Jerry and Raenell McDonough of Amarillo.

Becky Parker of Amarillo lit candles.

Featured vocalists included Carolyn Barrett Marimba of Fresno, Calif., Heather Harney of Amarillo, Jan Weaver of Lowden, Wash., and Lori Rankin of Plainview. They sang "The Wedding Song", "All In His Own Sweet Time", "Bridal Prayer", "Flesh of My Flesh", "I Wish You Jesus" and "Our Love in Christ." They were accompanied by Naomi Gregg of Plainview playing the piano, Raenell McDonough on the organ, and Donna Pemberton on the flute.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown designed by Lizzette creations. It featured a Victorian neckline with a band of chantilly lace and her shoulders were covered with bridal illusion net topped with a row of bridal lace around the shoulder tops. The full French pouf sleeves were styled with a tightening effect to the wrist points.

The gown's bodice was decorated with jewels and pearls and set off to the waist with satin ribbon streamers. Her waist was cinched and gathered to a point.

The country lace skirt featured full skirts of taffeta petticoats, accented by rows of ruffles and chantilly lace, which billowed underneath. The skirt was adorned with scallops and topped off with silk organza ruffles. It swept into a full chapel-length train with cascades flowing down the center of the circles.

Her bridal illusion veil was attached to a turn of the century styled hat which was graced with pearls and sequin jewels over alencon lace.

She also wore pearl earrings.

Bridal attendants were attired in rose and burgundy colored semi-formal dresses, burgundy halos in their hair and gray pumps.

Mindy Mitchell of Amarillo invited guests to register at the reception held in the E.B. Black House.

Brenda Brock and Barbara Yerby of Amarillo served the four-tiered cake arranged on a table which featured a floral arrangement and brass and silver candle holders.

Diana York of Amarillo poured punch and coffee with the assistance of Rosemary Shook, Marge Bell and Joyce Kaul.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Acapulco, the bride wore a white two-piece suit, rose colored blouse, white shoes and carried a burgundy handkerchief.

The couple will make their home after July 3 in Amarillo,

The bride, a graduate of Amarillo College, received her bachelor of science degree in elementary education from West Texas State University. She has instructed at Shirley Elementary School for four years and toured with the Contintal Singers in 1983.

The bridegroom also graduated from AC and received his bachelor of music education degree from WTSU. He toured with DIDOMI, a christian group, and is a choir director at Travis Junior High School in Amarillo.

Contrary to popular belief, bats are not blind, but their vision is extremely poor, thus they navigate by a kind of radar.

Brand Policies

The Hereford Brand welcomes news articles of interest from local residents groups, and organizations. These guidelines should be followed when submitting news items:

–The Brand reserves the right to edit any and all copy submitted.

–Photos of club officers, donation presentations, etc., can be made at the Brand office, preferably after 2 p.m. Appointments for such photos must be made at least 24 hours in advance.

–On-location photos can be made, on approval, providing The Brand has at least two days notice.

–Reservations for cover pages need to be made as soon as possible to insure a desirable publication date. Arrangements for photographs need to be made with the photographer so that all photos are completed at least one week prior to publication date. The Brand also reserves the right to refuse a cover page request.

-New items or changes for the calendar of events must be submitted one week before the Wednesday or Sunday of publication.

–General news items for the Lifestyles section must be submitted by 1 p.m. the day before publication.

–The Brand has forms available to aid in preparing engagement announcements and wedding stories. Neither will be taken by phone.

–Engagements should be announced six weeks before the wedding to insure publication. Couples submitting engagement announcements after that deadline must choose to have either the engagement or the wedding photo published. Photos should be in black and white. A color photo may be used if the contrast is suitable for reproduction.

-Wedding and anniversary writeups must be submitted one week prior to the ceremony. Wedding notices submitted late will be edited considerably.

–Birth announcements are obtained from Deaf Smith General Hospital. Information on local babies born elsewhere, or who have grandparents in Hereford, must be reported to The Brand within two weeks. Forms are available, or the information may be called in.

–Club reports must be submitted within three days of the meeting or will be subject to considerable editing or omission. Forms are available at The Brand.

–Brief items of interest about former residents or children of Hereford residents are welcome when they concern degrees earned, academic honors, college news, career promotions, etc.

–Photos may be picked up from The Brand after 3 p.m. of the publication date. Published photos taken by Brand staffers may be purchased for $1. Reprints are available at $3.50 for 5x7 photos and at $4.50 for 8x10 prints.

Residents' grandchildren home after recent marriage

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Wells McDowell are making their home in Sulphur Springs following their recent marriage.

Jo Alison Easley and McDowell exchanged wedding vows recently in Tarrytown United Methodist Churhc in Austin with the Rev. Barry Fulton officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe C. Easley of Austin and the granddaughter of Oscar E. Easley of 110 Centre. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Ansel L. McDowell of Lake Jackson and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Ansel McDowell of 207 N. Texas.

Candlelighters were Kalen and Cyrena Cameron of Fredericksburg, cousins of the bride.

A prelude of nuptial music and the traditional wedding marches were played. Kevin Pitts of Oklahoma City, Ok., accompanied by his wife, Susie Pitts sang "O Promise Me" and "Wither Thou Goest."

At the close of the double ring ceremony the congregation prayed "The Lord's Prayer" in unison.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white silk bridal satin featuring a bodice covered with silk lace, pearls and irridescents. The full A-line skirt fell to a hem trimmed with silk lace which cascaded into a cathedral train.

The Juliet-style cap with a cathedral-length veil of bridal illusion completed her attire.

A centered white orchid surrounded by white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath made up the bridal bouquet. For something old, the bride wore a diamond brooch that had belonged to her grandmother.

Lacey Pitts of Oklahoma City was her sister's matron of honor and Cheryl Easley of Austin served as her sister's maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Nancy Seybert of Denning, N.M., Seree Doan and Tracey Mencia, both of Austin.

Ansel McDowell III of San Antonio, brother of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen included Stan Kaplita of Rochester, N.Y., Rick Autrey of San Antonio, and Andy Newton and Bob Baughman, both of Austin.

Escorting guests were Wade Easley of Hereford, the bride's cousin, and Todd Pitts of Edmund, Okla.

Megan Easley of Hereford, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

A reception in the Lost Creek Country Club followed the wedding.

The three-tiered bridal cake and the chocolate groom's cake was served by the groom's sisters, Linda Slaughter of Perryton, and Marian McDowell of Washington, D.C. Guests served themselves to the buffet supper.

Following the reception, the couple left for a wedding trip to Nassau, Bahamas.

The bride graduated from Perryton High School and received her bachelor's degree of business administration in petroleum land management from the University of Texas in Austin.

The groom attended Perryton schools and graduated from Brazewood High School. He also graduated from the University of Texas with a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering. He is employed by Rockwell International.

A rehearsal dinner was held prior to the wedding at the Green Pastures Restaurant in Austin hosted by the groom's parents.

Impact on children too often neglected

In the battle to end family violence, an often forgotten victim is the child exposed to violence between parents.

Shelters for battered wives provide services for the abused woman, but the impact on children has often been neglected, according to Texas Tech University Social Worker Margaret Elbow. However, the trend is moving toward for help for children, she said.

Elbow said there are increasing reports of battered men, although her own studies deal with battered wives.

A child's reaction to violence in a home can span the range from withdrawal to aggressive behavior, Elbow said. The danger lies in a learned pattern. Many times the child grows up to be a part of a violent marriage, she said.

"A girl grows up thinking she's helpless in the face of men, and a boy grows up with the idea that men hurt females," Elbow said.

False guilt and responsibility are common to the child in a violent home, she said. The child feels a responsibility to stop the violence. Children may try to physically stop the violent fathers from beating the mother. Some mothers draw the child into the battle by asking the child to call the police or a relative.

"Children are basically egocentric," Elbow said. "They think things either happen to them or because of them. A child may think – if I would take out the trash they wouldn't fight about it."

The most tragic thing for a child in a violent home is not being allowed to be a kid, Elbow said. The child won't ask for new shoes because mom will have to ask dad for money and a fight will ensure.

The effect on a child's personality varies. Some will be high achievers in school because they respond to the strokes from teachers. Some children will be so distraught over what is happening in the home that they can't concentrate and school work suffers.

The basis of family violence, Elbow said, is that our society is violent, resulting in a built-in role model.

"If children get angry, they're told not to hit but the pattern they see at home is violence and hitting," she said.

Stereotyped sex roles also are a part of the problem, she said. The idea remains that men are the breadwinners and women are passive, but the stereotypes are slowly changing, she said.

"The women's movement brought out the idea that the woman is not to blame for the violence. Much of the literature blamed her," she said. "Women don't feel quite as helpless as before."

The child often plays an important role in the woman deciding to leave the marriage, Elbow noted. The mother knows the children need a father and her violent husband may be a good father. His anger toward the children is often directed toward the wife.

If violence is destroying a home, the child should talk to someone – a teacher, nurse or counselor, Elbow said. Unfortunately, guilt or shame often prevent the child from opening up to anyone. Threats by the abusive parent may also prevent the child from sharing the family secret.

The answer to family violence is not an easy one, Elbow said. Some abusers want help and others simply comply with counseling to get the family back.

Art workshop for children set July 8

The Hereford Independent School District, through its community education class, will be sponsoring a three week art workshop for children.

Registration fee is $22.50 for each participant and workshop instructor will be Gayla Kimball.

The session will begin July 8 and conclude July 26. Enrollment in the workshop will be limited to the first 20 paid participants. The first class will be held at 9 a.m. July 8. It will meet one hour each day in Room 201 at Hereford High School.

The session will be conducted around the theme "Rainbow Connections."

Each participant will be asked to bring an old shirt as a cover-up and to wear old clothes. Otherwise, all supplies will be furnished.

The child may be registered by writing their name, age and address and the parents' name, address and telephone number on a sheet of paper and returning it to: Hereford ISD, Attn. Kenneth R. Helms, P.O. Box 1698, Hereford, Tx. 79045. Be sure to include a check for the registration fee.

Kimball will be striving to create artistic awareness and sensitivity in children by allowing them to use their imagination and inventiveness as a means of self-expression through various fine art medias (drawing, painting, printmaking, construction of three-dimensional forms, manipulating fibers and photographic imagery).

She is an experienced certified elementary and secondary art instructor and is currently teaching art at HHS.

CINDY SIMPSON, BILL COLE

Marriage planned

Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Simpson Jr. announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Cindy Simpson of Lubbock, to Bill Cole of Hereford.

The couple plan an August 17 wedding in the First Baptist Church in Floydada.

The bride-elect is a homemaking teacher with the Lubbock Public School District and her fiance, son of Mrs. Floyd Cole of Hereford and the late Floyd Cole, is engaged in farming and ranching in Deaf Smith County.

The couple will live in Hereford.

Fireworks related injuries rose in '84

Parades, picnics and fireworks displays are all July Fourth traditions enjoyed by most Americans. Another, often overlooked tradition, comes in the aftermath of the holiday–those new reports about people blinded, maimed, or killed by fireworks-related injuries.

The Texas Society to Prevent Blindness, reports that in 1984, fireworks-related injuries rose 19 percent over the previous year. An estimated 9,857 people required hospital emergency room treatment last year, 1,255 of them having sustained eye injuries.

"Fireworks are not toys," cautions Dr. J. Franklin Howell, Medical Advisor of the Amarillo Branch. "Yet, 74 percent of all those people injured last year were under age 24. Without doubt, we need to keep fireworks out of the hands of young people."

In a recent study conducted by Arkansas ophthalmologists, bottle rockets were found to be a leading cause of fireworks-related injuries there.

The study revealed that nearly three-fourths of all injuries resulting in permanent vision loss were sustained by people harmed by bottle rockets.

"Small, but lethal, a bottle rocket is a single firecracker attached to a stick, and shot from a stationary object. Usually, the suggested object is a pipe. However, more often than not, people use soda-pop bottles," says Dr. Howell.

According to the National Society to Prevent Blindness, these bottles can explode. Glass shrapnel thrown during the explosion can strike the face and eyes of bystanders, often causing severe, painful and irreversibly blinding injuries.

Among the other commonly available fireworks involved in injuries are firecrackers, M-80s, Roman candles, salutes and snakes. Even sparklers are unsafe. The Society says that a blinding burn can result if the sparkler makes contact with the eye.

"We recommend that people enjoy fireworks the one safe and sane way this July Fourth," Dr. Howell adds. "That is, view them at a licensed public display. Not on a street corner or in the backyard."

The Jewish year of 5746 begins on Sept. 14, 1985.

CAUTION: DO NOT CARMELIZE MILK IN CAN

An old method of caramelizing sweetened condensed milk to make caramel pudding is experiencing a new surge of attention. This potentially dangerous method calls for heating an unopened 14-ounce can of sweetened condensed milk in the oven or in a kettle of boiling water. Borden, Inc., the leading manufacturer of the product, reports that this method of caramelization may cause injury and should not be used.

Because heat causes expansion, if any unopened can of food (no matter what the contents) is heated in boiling water, in an oven, in an electric cooker or over a flame, the can could explode. Serious injury to anyone nearby could result. Each can of Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk is labeled with a "Caution" that says "Never heat unopened can."

To prepare the delicious and well-known caramel pudding easily and safely, consumers can follow these simple instructions. Oven Method: Preheat the oven to 420 degrees; open one 14-ounce can of sweetened condensed milk and pour contents into a glass pie plate. Cover with aluminum foil; place in a shallow pan of hot water and bake for 1 to 1½ hours, or until thick and light caramel-colored. Remove the foil; cool, then chill before serving.

Stovetop Method: Open one 14-ounce can of sweetened condensed milk and pour contents into top of double boiler; cover. Place over boiling water; simmer water 1 to 1½ hours or until thick and light caramal-colored. Beat until smooth. Cool. Chill thoroughly.

Benin

The kingdom of Abomey, which rose to power after wars with neighboring African kingdoms during the 17th century, came under French domination in the 19th century and was made part of French West Africa by 1904. Under the name of Dahomey, it became independent in 1960, and it got its present name, Benin, in 1975.

President Grover Cleveland had more than one "first" to his credit. He was the first president to marry while in the White House. He wed Frances Folson in 1886. He is also the only president to have served two non-consecutive terms. Both records have yet to be broken.

KATHY MCNANEY, JOHN T. WALLER

Couple to wed

Kathy McNaney and John J. Waller, both of Austin, will exchange nuptials Aug. 17 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. McNaney of 604 E. Fourth St. and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Helen Joann Waller of Colorado Springs, Colo.

McNaney, a 1974 graduate of Widefield High School in Colorado Springs, graduated from West Texas State University in 1978. She is a member of Chi Omega Sorority, Mortar Board and Alpha Chi Honor Society. She is presently employed as a manager with AT&T Information Systems in Austin.

Waller, also a 1974 graduate of Widefield, graduated from Colorado State University in Ft. Collins, Colo. in 1979. He is currently employed as manager with Merritt, Schaefer and Brown in Austin.

RESILIENT FLOORING

Considering the installation of smooth-surface flooring? Be sure to consider its underfoot resiliency in areas where standing will take place for long periods of time. For areas like this, such as the kitchen, vinyl sheeting offers its own cushioned backing for greater resilience. It is now used in places where linoleum once held sway. In fact, depending on its quality, finish, color, and texture, vinyl is often elegant enough to use in an enterance hall or dining room. It comes in its own textures as well as in imitations of natural materials such as wood graining, parquet, brick, cork, marble, terrazzo, and ceramic. Inlaid patterned vinyl sheeting is offered in a staggering choice of designs and is highly durable. The pattern is built all the way through the material.

Ann Landers

Down's child a blessing

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just finished reading the letter from "Down About Down's" and I am thoroughly disgusted with the woman who wrote it. She felt that life had cheated her because her child was not "normal." That insensitive mother should get down on her hands and knees and thank the good Lord she has a child.

My husband and I have been wanting a baby for eight years. If God sent us a Down's Syndrome child we would be thrilled. My sister and her husband have a Down's child. She is the sweetest, most adorable 11-month-old I have ever seen. The youngster never cries. She has a golden disposition and goes to everyone in the family without a minute's fuss. I've seen her cuddled by at least 15 different people in an evening and she just loves it.

I believe God sent us Down's children for a reason. These special youngsters teach us so much about compassion and real love. The gentleness of the little darlings is a model that many adults could learn from.

Please print this letter. Every parent of a Down's child will be grateful.–R.S.T. IN QUEBEC

DEAR QUEBEC: Thank you for a splendid letter. The late Sen. Hubert Humphrey's first grandchild was a Down's child. Vickie brought tremendous joy to Hubert and Muriel. She was the darling of the family and captivated everyone.

I have already heard from hundreds of parents and brothers and sisters of Down's children who expressed the same sentiments. Thanks to all who wrote.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This letter is in response to "His Wife" in Pensacola. Relax, Toots. I do not want to marry your husband. I was married once myself and decided husbands aren't worth the trouble.

When I was a wife I cooked meals every day. My husband was very fussy. More than once he left the table because the meat was too well done or the fish "didn't smell right." I washed, ironed and cleaned house constantly. The minute I sat down to relax in the evening he wanted a beer. If the newspaper was on the other side of the room he would call me from the kitchen and ask me to get it for him.

Now my life is a breeze. The house is neat. I cook when I feel like it and am much slimmer. I love my job and there is no pressure to be home at 6 p.m. I can see women friends, go visit my mother, take in a movie with my sister and enjoy the opera, which my husband loathed.

The one evening a week I spend with your husband is a pleasant change of pace for me. I believe he likes to fantasize that we are madly in love, but this is not true. I have another male friend whom I actually prefer. I see him on Saturday nights.

Perhaps your life would be simpler and you could make plans if you knew the exact day of the week your husband and I get together. It's Tuesday.--HANGING LOOSE IN FLORIDA

DEAR LOOSE: You're completely honest, if nothing else. If "Mr. Tuesday's" wife wants equal time, she's got it.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex–Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

MR. AND MRS. RICKY RUIZ

Nuptials exchanged

Mr. and Mrs. Ricky Ruiz are making their home in Hereford following a private wedding ceremony held Saturday afternoon.

Elida Castillo and Ruiz were married in Primera Iglesia Bautista by Ruben Flores, pastor of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Jesus Castillo of Hereford and Maria Castillo of 206 Lake. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dionicio Ruiz of 108 Ave. J.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Jesus Castillo Jr., is a 1985 graduate of Hereford High School and is employed by Max's Big Burger.

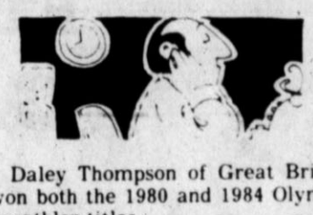

Her husband, a graudate of Rosebud High School in Rosebud, Tx., is employed by Taylor's Grocery.

The couple are making their home at 108 Ave. J.

Guests from California were present at the ceremony.

Table knives are a rather late innovation. Until about 1600, diners brought to the table their own knives, which served as daggers between meals.

Auction to benefit research to be aired on Channel 10

The annual multiple sclerosis Beef-A-Thon Television Auction will be aired from noon to 5:30 P.M. July 7 on Channel 10, KFDA. "We've got the Beef" is the theme of this year's event.

Proceeds from the annual auction make up one-third of the Panhandle Chapter of the NationalMultiple Sclerosis Society's budget.

The name Beef-a-Thon originated from the large number of donations from beef producers throughout the Golden Spread area. Today, fine jewelery, sporting goods, paintings, appliances and trips join the list of auction items in addition to beef.

The merchants of Amarillo and the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandle have donated over 200 items and the beef producers from the golden spread have donated 23 head of beef. Items range from a mink coat to a talking alarm clock, to a Seiko watch that has a tape recorder in it, to a microwave oven, a recliner, fine paintings, a saphire and diamond ring, an Elvis Presley collector's doll to a Blue Heeler puppy.

Intersperced throughout the auction will be patient interviews and interviews with physicians who deal with the MS patient. Drs. who will be interviewed are Loralu Raburn, Joe Batson, Michael Ryan, Rush Snyder, Jan Werner, Gary Rose and Robert Gerald. Bob (Pappy) Watson will conduct the patient interviews.

Barbara and Wade West will co-host the Auction. Assisting them will be Bill Sexton, Bob Izzard, Royce Bodiford, Bedford Forrest and Cpl. Dianne Bosch.

By making a purchase, the viewer will enable the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and the Panhandle Chapter to continue its participation in the worldwide battle against MS, the mysterious crippler of young adults.

Skeletons on both sides of long term EC-US dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long-standing dispute between the European Community and the United States on farm policies has heated up recently. And Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says there are skeletons in both closets.

As a result, the United States and the EC are pricing themselves out of the lucrative international commodity market, Block said Tuesday. Each is trying to take up the slack by subsidizing exports.

"Both of us are using export subsidies," Block told reporters at the National Press Club. "They do that, and we do exactly the same thing. There isn't a nickel's worth of difference."

"They're priced out of the world market because their internal prices are too high, so they use subsidies to buy their market. Our internal prices are too high, so we're using subsidies to compete in the market," Block said.

He added: "We really ought to sit down and find a way to bring a halt to this whole thing."

The nudge by Block coincided with a visit by Frans Andriessen, the EC's commissioner for agriculture and fisheries, who has been meeting with Block and other U.S. officials.

Block later on Tuesday told reporters after another meeting with Andriessen that they had agreed "to intensify" bilateral efforts to work out some of the trade problems. Block also said he planned a trip to Europe next week for meetings in West Germany and Austria.

For years, Block and other U.S. officials have complained about the EC's practice of triggering more European farm production through artificially high price supports — and then unloading the surpluses through subsidized exports.

Recently, Block put into effect an export subsidy program using free surplus commodities as bonuses to help boost U.S. exports in selected markets. Algeria was singled out as the first target country, but so far it has not participated in the program.

Block said he could not predict when — or if — Algeria will avail itself of the U.S. export subsidy program.

"I'll guarantee this much," he said. "We'll offer more sales to other countries" besides Algeria. "I think we'll know what's going to happen fairly soon."

Block said the tensions that have built up between the EC and the United States "have to be brought down by some agreements between the two of us." New multilateral talks such as the ones that led to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade would be in order, he said, but some kind of bilateral understanding is necessary in the interim.

Block said he has not proposed a formal new series of U.S.-EC meetings. "We haven't agreed to do that," he said. "I'm just saying that there's going to be more intensive contact than there has been the last year or so."

Looking at the U.S. problem, Block said he wants Congress to include in new farm legislation a provision for reduced crop price supports. The supports, which effectively set a floor price for the market, are too high and make U.S. commodities less competitive, he said.

"I, for the life of me, can't see how anyone can oppose being competitive," Block said. "If we aren't competitive, we're just going to shrink up."

Spud crop may fill market void

LUBBOCK – The U.S. summer potato market can accommodate about a 50 percent increase from Texas potato producers, according to a Texas Tech University vegetable marketing expert.

Agricultural economics Professor Bob Davis said that the 10-county High Plains potato producing region in 1983 harvested 9,300 acres valued at $21.3 million.

"This accounts for about 13 percent of the nation's summer potato crop," he said.

New storage methods and increasing fuel costs have accounted for a production decline in many summer producing states, causing a general decrease in the total summer supplies. Texas producers may be able to fill this void, Davis said.

Fall producers have developed facilities to store potatoes for up to 10 months, allowing fall potatoes to compete in the fresh market with summer potatoes, Davis said.

He also noted that fuel costs have risen about 10 percent annually since 1979, increasing the cost of shipping potatoes to market.

Because Texas producers are near many large population centers, however, higher fuel costs may not affect them as drastically as producers in other parts of the country.

Davis said because individual sellers rarely select the geographic location of their buyers, Texas suppliers, as a group, might benefit from promotional activities aimed at increasing the demand for Texas potatoes in Southeast and Midwest markets.

Davis said that while the apparent opening in the market will allow some vegetable producers to expand, potatoes are not a savior for the Texas farmer.

Davis pointed out that growing vegetables is a riskier operation than growing many field crops normally associated with Texas. Farmers must have close management of water and fertilizer to produce quality vegetables, he said.

"Returns are risky in the vegetable business," Davis said. "Supply not federal programs, determines the price of potatoes. Too much quantity supplied will force the price so low that farmers will lose money."

Commercial tomato output predicted to drop 14 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial output of tomatoes for processing in 11 of the leading countries is expected to drop 14 percent this year to around 16.4 million metric tons from 19.1 million tons in 1984, the Agriculture Department says.

Slightly larger 1985 crops are expected in Greece, Portugal, France and Turkey, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Thursday. But smaller harvests are expected in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Italy, Spain and Taiwan. Production in Israel is expected to be unchanged from 1984.

The United States is the leading producer of processing tomatoes. But the contracted acreage for 1985 points to an output of about 6.4 million tons, down from 6.97 million tons last year.

New port proposed in China

WASHINGTON (AP) — China continues to show signs of staying around for some time as a serious exporter of farm commodities, including some that compete with American farmers, according to an Agriculture Department trade report.

The latest indication was a brief item published Thursday by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service. It said China reportedly plans to build a new port for ocean vessels.

"It will have 100 berths, capable of handling 50 million tons of bulk and containerized cargo per year," the report said. "Plans are to have four berths, capable of handling over four million tons of cargo per year, operational by 1990."

The facility is planned for the port city of Dalian, one of 14 coastal cities in which China has offered special terms to lure foreign investment.

Couple raffles farm

UNIONVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Despite a $1,000-a-month public relations campaign and national publicity, Bud and Hazel Hirst aren't finding enough takers to make it worthwhile raffling off their 476-acre farm.

The couple, both 53, had hoped to raise $400,000, enough to pay off their $200,000 debt on the place and give them a stake when they move on.

But so far, Hirst said Tuesday, only about 15,000 people have sent in $10 for a copy of Mrs. Hirst's book of poems, "Bitter Harvest," about the trials of farm life, and a chance to win the farm.

The Hirsts have been running their Bitter Harvest Great Farm Sweepstakes for a year. It was to have ended July 4 with a drawing in the town square of this farming community of 2,200 near the Missouri-Iowa line.

When interest in the sweepstakes declined earlier this year, the Hirsts decided to postpone the drawing until Labor Day, which is also their 34th wedding anniversary.

"I'd do anything rather than take bankruptcy," Hirst said. "I've got pride and want to pay my bills."

All money will be returned if there aren't enough tickets sold to raise the $400,000, he said. "I hope it will pick up enough ... to get people to buy more books and get us over the hump. We're so unsettled.

"We don't know if we're going to make it. We don't know if we're going to stay here."

In January, an interview on ABC's "Nightline" and a story in Time magazine sparked a flood of phone calls and book orders.

The Hirsts bought their farm in 1972 for around $85,000, planning to raise cattle and hogs and grow corn and soybeans. High interest rates, low prices for farm products and bad weather kept their debts rising, they say.

Last year, the couple took out a $4,500 loan on their car, the only property they owned that wasn't already mortgaged.

Both have taken odd jobs to make ends meet. Mrs. Hirst tried selling mail-order recipes and did a stint as a $2.75-an-hour cook. Hirst got a real estate license.

They drummed up the idea for the sweepstakes to give up their way of life gracefully.

"We're resigned to leaving, if we have to," said Mrs. Hirst. "Walking away with some pride and dignity is better than being sold out and having this place put on the auction block."

China becoming major competitor to America

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once hailed as a potentially huge market for American farmers, China has turned into an export competitor of the United States and will continue as such this year, the Agriculture Department says.

"Exports of corn, cotton, soybeans and soymeal will remain in competition with U.S. goods, particularly in Asian markets," the department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday. "Purchases of wheat, China's remaining major agricultural import, are falling, and U.S. agricultural exports to China during 1985 will be the lowest since 1977."

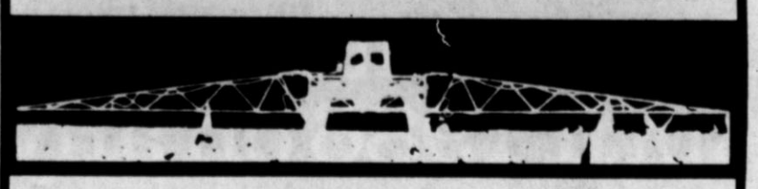

Bumper harvests in recent years helped China turn the corner in 1984 from being an importer to an important exporter of corn, cotton, soybeans and soybean meal.

"Surpluses will keep exports up for the next several years, but rapid development of the livestock sector may cut into exports as domestic demand for corn, soybeans and meal increases," the report said. "Substantial cotton exports will continue indefinitely."

Rains boost south, some plains cotton hurt

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Crops and pastures in south central and coastal areas of Texas got a boost from rains the past week, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The rains of 1 to 6 inches came in time to relieve moisture stress in developing crops, Carpenter said in his weekly report on the state's agriculture. The moisture also will improve grazing conditions for livestock and assure second cuttings of hay in many locations, he said.

Scattered rains also continued to fall over the plains and far western areas of Texas, but west central and eastern counties remained dry.

Most spring crops are making good progress over the state, Carpenter said, although adverse weather in the South Plains has taken its toll of the young cotton crop. Cotton in that area lost to recent heavy rains and hail is being replanted to soybeans and sunflowers.

Crops vary widely in their stages of development, with a little cotton still being planted in far western counties while cotton bolls are developing in South Texas. A little sorghum planting continues in the South and Rolling Plains while harvest operations are about to start in the Rio Grande Valley. Some peanut planting continues in North Central Texas.

Wheat harvesting remains active in the Panhandle and South Plains but is complete in most other areas of the state. Yields are good over the plains, with dryland yields generally above average, noted Carpenter.

Alfalfa and other hay crops are producing good to excellent yields due to recent rains. Farmers in central areas are harvesting excellent second cuttings of Coastal bermuda. However, dry conditions in many eastern counties are hampering second cuttings of hay.

Mid-season peaches are now being harvested in many locations while late maturing varieties continue to develop.

The state's livestock picture remains good although grazing is limited in parts of west central and east Texas where moisture is short, Carpenter noted.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Wheat harvesting is moving toward completion in some counties; dryland yields are above average. Most spring crops are making good progress. Grasshoppers are increasing in some counties and are damaging young crops and ranges. Alfalfa and lovegrass hay are being harvested. Cattle and ranges look good.

SOUTH PLAINS: Farmers are continuing to replant lost cotton acreage to soybeans and a few sunflowers. Young cotton is continuing to struggle due to cool, wet conditions while corn is making excellent progress. A little late sorghum is still being planted. Wheat harvesting is about 65 percent complete, with good yields.

ROLLING PLAINS: The wheat harvest is generally complete, with excellent yields in most counties. Some short-season sorghum is still being planted while early fields are heading. Cotton looks good; grasshoppers are increasing and damaging some young cotton. Livestock and range conditions generally are good due to recent rains.

NORTH CENTRAL: Farmers have harvested most of their wheat crop but are still harvesting oats for grain and hay. Spring crops are doing well, with some peanuts still being planted. Early peaches remain in production and pecan prospects look good. A good hay harvest continues.

Human growth gene tried on animals

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers have for the first time inserted a human growth gene into rabbits, pigs and a sheep in a controversial step that could lead to bigger, more feed-efficient and disease-resistant livestock, a report says.

It is the first demonstration that a foreign gene injected into a fertilized egg of a large mammal will be taken up by the growing animal, Robin Lovell-Badge of London's Medical Research Council Mammalian Development Unit wrote in an article accompanying the report in the British journal Nature.

The report deals with research at the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Washington and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The USDA was sued in October by groups opposed to research on transferring human genes into livestock. The suit is pending in U.S. District Court.

A gene is the basic unit of heredity that issues marching orders to plant and animal cells.

The researchers worked with the gene that orders production of growth hormone in humans, joined to a portion of a mouse gene that can turn the human gene on. That combination gene had already been shown to "express" itself, or settle in and go to work, in laboratory mice.

Finnie Murray, senior scientist at the Edison Animal Biotechnology Center at Ohio University, said Tuesday the newly reported work is "a significant step forward because it demonstrates that, simply put, the phenomenon of expression of foreign genes is not restricted to the mouse."

Researchers reported that the gene was taken up by one of 73 sheep, 28 of 218 rabbits and 20 of 192 pigs that grew from fertilized eggs into which it was injected.

In some of those pigs and rabbits, the gene issued its chemical instructions to make growth hormone, and the human hormone itself was found in some of the animals.

But no unusual growth was observed. The gene appeared damaged in the sheep, the only rabbit that produced the growth hormone had a dental problem and could not eat normally, and the hormone in the pigs hasn't noticeably increased their growth.

"We don't know how much they will grow," said Ralph Brinster, one of the researchers and professor of reproductive physiology at the University of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine. Offspring of the animals will be studied to see if the gene improves their growth, he said.

The most important practical outcome for such research may not be simply bigger animals, but rather animals that use feed more efficiently by growing more per unit of feed eaten, according to Brinster.

Inserted genes might also make animals produce valuable chemicals that could be harvested from their milk or other body fluid, he said.

Press aide leaves USDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gene Hemphill, a press aide to Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, says he will be leaving soon to take a job in Denver, Colo.

Hemphill said Monday that he plans to go to work as director of public affairs for the American Sheep Producers Council Inc., effective July 22. He said the move had been contemplated for some time.

Before joining Block's staff early in the Reagan administration's first term, Hemphill was news director of the Illinois Farm Bureau.

Two-thirds of exports will be grain, soybeans

WASHINGTON (AP) — About two-thirds of this year's $33.5 billion worth of agricultural exports by American farmers will be grain and soybeans, and their products. But there also will be shipments of more exotic items.

A buyer in Dublin, Ireland, for example, is interested in dried or dehydrated "edible blood or plasma" of the best quality available, with delivery as soon as possible.

In France, a company is interested in duck or goose liver pate from the United States, including the possibility of having its products produced under license or setting up a joint venture with a U.S. firm.

Those and many other items were mentioned Monday in "Export Briefs," a weekly trade report issued by the Agriculture Department.

The shopping list included wheat sought by buyers in West Germany and Bangladesh; corn and soybean meal by a firm in Lebanon; and food-quality soybeans by a processor in Malaysia.

A feature of the department's Foreign Agricutural Service, the report is compiled from trade opportunities noted by U.S. government officials serving abroad. Traditionally, the weekly report includes a wide range of inquiries that mean potential business for American companies and producers.

Japan, the leading single-country market for U.S. exports, is a big buyer of soybeans and corn. But the latest shopping list also includes bourbon whiskey and bottled wine. Another buyer in Tokyo is interested in frozen horse meat.

And it was another Japanese company that is seeking in information about buying live pet animals, including prairie dogs and flying squirrels.

The Far East also is a market for items that some people believe can make them healthier, wealthier or sexier. In Taiwan, a company seeks a trial order of ox gallstones and American wild ginseng. One in South Korea is interested in race horses.

In Mexico, a prospective buyer is interested in getting 5,000 young Suffolk ewes, one to three months pregnant, plus 1,000 registered Suffolk rams of the same age.

A Greek company wants furskins — mink, fox, beaver and coyote.

King crab legs, fresh or fresh frozen but not boiled, are wanted by a West German firm, up to 330 pounds a month.

The brief items include addresses, telephone or telex numbers, and often credit references. But the report says USDA "does not guarantee the reliability of the overseas inquirer" and that potential suppliers should contact the foreign firm directly.

Those interested in the weekly "Export Briefs" service can contact: Agricultural Information and Marketing Service, Foreign Agricultural Service, USDA, Room 4645-S, Washington, D.C. 20250. Or telephone (202) 447-7103.

Farm production expenditures drop slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — A preliminary report by the Agriculture Department says farm production expenditures in 1984 dropped 2.3 percent to $128.3 billion, the lowest in six years. In 1983, spending was $131.3 billion.

The department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday that lower prices for replacement livestock, along with inventory reductions, resulted in major declines in expenditures for feed and livestock.

Feed expenditures in 1984 were put at $18.3 billion, down from $20.3 billion in 1983. Spending on livestock and poultry dropped to $14.5 billion from $16.04 billion the year before.

The report showed that spending for farm services — which includes custom hire, insurance, transportation, equipment leasing, cash and share rents, and marketing expenses — was the biggest category at $23.6 billion, up from $22.6 billion in 1983.

Fuel and other energy cost farmers $9.23 billion, down from $9.56 billion in 1983.

Spending categories that reflected, at least in part, the continued financial bind on many farmers included expenditures for tractors and self-propelled machinery. Those dropped to $3.8 billion from $4.01 billion in 1983. In 1981, spending in that category was about $6 billion.

The report showed that expenditures on "other" machinery rose slightly to $2.57 billion last year from $2.46 billion in 1983. Farm spending in that category was $4.6 billion in 1981.

Farm expenditures on buildings, fences and other improvements dropped again to $4.37 billion in 1984 from $4.63 billion in 1983 and $6.4 billion in 1981, according to agency records.

Spending on interest payments dropped to less than $13.5 billion from a peak of $13.9 billion in 1983.

The report said the average production expenditure in 1984 was $55,145 per farm, down from $55,521 in 1983.

Farm services averaged $10,143 per farm in 1984; livestock and poultry, $6,244; feed, $7,869; interest, $5,789; fuels and energy, $9,227; building, fencing and other improvement, $1,877; and tractors and self-propelled machinery, $1,636.

Even strongest

Stress disorganizes families

COLLEGE STATION – The bitter economic realities of low prices, high debt loads and increased bankruptcies translate into stress for farmers, ranchers and their families.

"Even a strong family can be temporarily disorganized under stress," says Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service family life specialist Dorthy Taylor. "When pressures become greater than the strength of the family, or stress uses up all the family's resources, devastating effects like alcohol and drug abuse accidents or suicides result."

The specialist says that early signs or symptoms of too much stress are dreading to go to work, feeling tired all the time without cause, a change in sleeping habits and problems with digestion.

Becoming extremely critical, developing negative attitudes about everything and everybody, withdrawing from people, becoming self-centered, being unusually worried about your health and losing faith in other people and yourself are also signs of stress, she says.

"Farmers and ranchers who are going through stressful times and realize they are struggling unsuccessfully with their difficulties may fear they cannot regain control over their situation and become depressed, confused or fear a nervous breakdown," Taylor observes.

Stress in farm or ranch families is not unusual, considering their close working relationships and the overlap of their personal, family and work lives, she notes.

But those families with open communication, shared decision-making and long-range planning seem to handle it better than those with little communication, authoritarian decision-making and day-to-day planning.

Developing communication, decision-making and planning skills may help families better cope with stressful situations Taylor says. But if farmers or ranchers notice the signs of severe stress in themselves or other family members, they should seek professional help.

Reports research service

Not necessarily new concept

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once again, the old adage about nothing new under the sun comes to mind in the Agriculture Department concerning the "new" export payment-in-kind program.

The department's Economic Research Service says in a report that the $2 billion program, which uses surplus government-owned commodities as bonuses to attract new overseas business, "is not an altogether new concept."

"An export payment-in-kind program was implemented between 1956 and 1966," the report said. "The purpose then was to place the bulk of export business in the hands of commercial traders and reduce the volume handled by the Commodity Credit Corp. Under the original program, payments were made to exporters in the form of commodity certificates redeemable for CCC-owned stocks."

The current program differs in two ways, the report said. First, the earlier program was not targeted at regions where the United States may have lost its share of the market. This is an aim of the new export PIK program.

Second, the mode of payment is different. The new export PIK calls for specified commodity payment to exporters upon proof of commercial export sales from free-market stocks.

"The original PIK program made subsidy payments based either on daily bids or on the difference between U.S. domestic and world price," the report said.

Today in History

Today is Sunday, June 30, the 181st day of 1985. There are 184 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 30, 1934, Adolf Hitler began his "blood purge" of hundreds of political and military leaders in Germany. Among those killed was Ernst Roehm, leader of the Nazi stormtroopers and Hitler's one-time ally.

On this date:

In 1834, the Indian Territory was created by Congress.

In 1859, French acrobat Emile Blondin crossed Niagara Falls on a tightrope as 5,000 spectators watched.

In 1870, Ada H. Kepley of Effingham, Ill., became America's first female law school graduate.

In 1906, the Pure Food and Drug Act and the Meat Inspection Act became law.

In 1936, the novel "Gone With the Wind" by Margaret Mitchell was published in New York.

In 1971, a Soviet space mission ended in tragedy when three cosmonauts aboard Soyuz 11 were found dead inside their spacecraft after returning to Earth.

Also in 1971, the 26th Amendment to the Constitution, lowering the minimum voting age to 18, was ratified.

Ten years ago: The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that a criminal suspect who is mentally competent has the right to refuse a court-appointed lawyer and defend himself.

Five years ago: By a 5-4 vote, the U.S. Supreme Court held that neither the federal government nor states are required to pay for most poor women's abortions.

One year ago: Playwright and author Lillian Hellman died at Martha's Vineyard Hospital in Massachusetts at the age of 79.

Today's birthdays: Actor David Wayne is 69. Singer Lena Horne is 68. Drummer Buddy Rich is 68. Actress Nancy Dussault is 49.

Thought for today: "I cannot and will not cut my conscience to fit this year's fashions." — Lillian Hellman, on her refusal in 1952 to cooperate with the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Government tries to get rid of money-losers

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government has gradually acquired over the past five decades an unwieldy jumble of nearly 1,000 companies from airlines to metal foundries, many of them money-losers.

Now, in an uphill drive to promote efficiency, the government is trying to get rid of hundreds of them. Some are being sold, others closed down or transferred to state governments.

But officials of President Miguel de la Madrid's administration call the push only a pruning and say it will not change the government's longstanding policy of maintaining a firm grip on the economy.

"What we're aiming for is rationalization. Getting rid of the marginal companies and using the resources to further improve the remaining government companies and making them more efficient," said Ignacio Lara, spokesman for the Department of Energy, Mines and Government Industries, which oversees most of these companies.

The government's wholly or partly owned companies enable it to control an estimated 65 percent to 70 percent of the nation's economic activity. The rest is in private hands.

Because the constitution stipulates that "national strategic" enterprises should be state owned, the government is keeping full or controlling ownership of such giant monopolies as Pemex for the petroleum industry, Telephones of Mexico in telecommunications, the railways, electric power and uranium.

It is also keeping shares, in partnership with private enterprise, in shipbuilding and ship repair industries, heavy petrochemicals, steel-making, airlines and other major industries, even though some of them lose money.

Lara said in a recent interview the purpose is to assure their continued development, despite big administrative difficulties.

Pemex, for instance, handles all oil and gas sales, which made up nearly three-fourths of the nation's $20 (b) billion exports in 1984. But an overblown, corruption-riddled bureaucracy keeps its productivity low.

The divestiture program, put in place in March, calls for the disposal of 236 companies, some of them acquired as far back as the early 1940s. They include movie-making and book publishing outfits, restaurants and nightclubs, gas stations and laundries in remote areas, lumber mills and distilleries.

Seven wholly owned, money-losing state corporations are being transferred to state governments that want them for political or social reasons but up to now have been unwilling to put up the money to keep them running.

An additional 55 companies are being closed, including a string of "tortilla" factories, some laundries and others which — like a sugar mill hundreds of miles from the nearest sugarcane field — were started on paper years ago but never got off the ground.

The rest are being sold, either as units or piecemeal as shares on the stock market. The powerful Mexican Labor Federation, which represents more than 4 million workers, recently bought the Condor bicycle factory and said it is interested in acquiring a handful of others, including a mineral water bottling plant.

"Many of these non-strategic industries were started by the government in fields where private enterprise either was afraid to venture in, did not have the money to do it or lacked the expertise," Lara said. "And, to preserve jobs, many more companies were acquired by the government over the years as they went bankrupt."

Jobs are a foremost issue in Mexico.

The country has had a combined unemployment and underemployment rate estimated at nearly 40 percent for several decades. And, with an annual population growth rate of 2.6 percent, it needs to create 850,000 new jobs annually just to keep up with the number of youths seeking employment for the first time.

For the past three years, since falling world oil prices helped plunge Mexico into economic crisis, the number of new jobs have been about half that.

"A lot of these companies were neither strategic nor priority ones, but were acquired for social and political reasons. And they made the government obese. They once served their purpose. But the limit has now been reached," Lara said.

The government control of the economy was increased when, three months before he turned over the presidency to de la Madrid in December 1982, then-President Jose Lopez Portillo expropriated Mexico's 34 private banks, accusing the owners of "sacking" the country of badly needed dollars. The banks' holdings in private companies became part of government holdings and are gradually being put back on the market.

State control of the economy has long been an important political issue in Mexico. The takeover of the oil industry in 1938 still is marked by ceremonies on March 15.

City reaps benefits as it serves as host to conventions

DALLAS (AP) — Lately, it's difficult to tell just who is meeting in Dallas.

With numerous groups staging conventions in the city's meeting halls, Dallas has become a giant revolving door, sweeping one group in while whisking another out.

During the past year that door has picked up some speed as the city reaps the benefits of playing host to the 1984 GOP National Convention.

As 45,000 Southern Baptists were making their exit, more than 20,000 members of the Lions Club International arrived, and then departed the same weekend as about 10,000 people arrived from the NAACP's annual convention.

In August, 20,000 people are expected for a Veterans of Foreign War convention.

"What it (the GOP convention) has done is helped put into the minds of people that Dallas is a convention city," said Frank Poe, Dallas convention center manager.

But the title isn't newly assigned, Poe said. For the past five or six years Dallas has been the third busiest convention host in the nation, running behind first-place New York and second-place Chicago.

"With all the attention Dallas got — the press, articles — it helped improve an already good image."

Dallas came of age as a convention city in 1972 and 1973 when it hosted the National Association of Home Builders, the American Food Marketing Institute and the American Academy of Opthamology, Poe said.

"When you do those key events, that's when you get recognized as a convention center," he said.

The Southern Baptist's convention this summer was also a "key event," he said, because Dallas showed it could handle very large groups of people.

The average convention brings 15,000 people to Dallas, each pumping money into the city's economy. Convention business in the 1984-85 convention season will amount to about $761 million a year for the local economy, $30 million of which goes to city coffers through sales and liquor taxes.

"That's money our property owners don't have to pay," said Charles Bass, director of the city's Convention and Visitors Bureau.

The Southern Baptist's convention contributed $35,000 alone for parking at the Dallas Convention Center and another $200,000 from food and beverages sold at the center during the convention.

"The benefits are many," Bass said. "But the greatest (benefit) is keeping 60,000 people employed."

During the 1983-84 convention year, which included the Republican National Convention, Dallas received about $743 million in convention money with 1.9 million people attending meetings during that year.

That's an increase of almost $200 million from the 1982-83 total, Bass said.

Already the city has surpassed its forecast of $85 million in convention center revenue by reaching $93 million in May, Bass said.

That goal was reached with 50 groups — 15 less than the city had forecast.

"That means the groups were much more substantial than expected," Bass said.

The flourishing business also is good news for area hotels.

"About 60 percent of our business is conventions," said Brian Hile, sales manager for the Fairmont Hotel. "I would say we share in about 85 percent of city-wide conventions that come in — conventions that use more than one hotel."

Hile, too, said the GOP session last summer helped Dallas convention business.

"That showcased Dallas as a city that can handle conventions that are very demanding," Hile said.

United Nations Decade for Women to end

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The United Nations Decade for Women, launched in Mexico City 10 years ago to improve conditions for women around the world, comes to an end here in July — most likely in controversy and disagreement along ideological lines.

Three thousand delegates will converge on this mile-high, equatorial city to grade the progress of women since 1975 and to devise strategies for their well-being in the decades ahead.

U.N. reports on the decade say the last 10 years have brought worldwide recognition of problems faced by women and advancement in many areas. Nevertheless, discrimination of various kinds and degrees remains in world societies and not all women have been relieved of burdens place on them by tradition over the centuries, the reports concluded.

Now, as the U.N. effort nears its end, older political issues — South African apartheid, the Palestinians, the new international economic order — threaten to disrupt the third and final world forum for women's views.

In the months leading up to the July 15-26 sessions at the Kenyatta Conference Center, there have been complaints from all sides that the conference was becoming "politicized" at the expense of the women's issues it is intended to address.

Delegations long ago split into the three traditional three blocs — East, West and the Group of 77. The last is made up of representatives from developing nations.

The United States has led the Western bloc in arguing that "extraneous political issues" would unnecessarily bog down the conference — as evidenced, Washington insists, by the 1975 conference in Mexico City and the mid-decade conference in Copenhagen, Denmark.

"If we debate an issue that is being debated in the United Nations or in disarmanment conferences, we have robbed women," Maureen Reagan, head of the 37-member U.S. delegation and daughter of President Reagan, said in a speech to a women's forum in Los Angeles.

But those who argue for inclusion of such issues on the agenda maintain that they are legitimate concerns of women, and, indeed, were discussed at the two previous meetings.

The main working document of the inaugural conference in Mexico City was a draft convention calling for the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women.

In 1979, the U.N. General Assembly adopted the document as a convention, but only 60 of the world body's 159 members had ratified it as of late last year. The United States has not.

The Mexico City conference also adopted a declaration on the equality of women and their contribution to development and peace.

That document is the basis for the theme of the Nairobi conference — equality, development and peace — but it also has brought about many of the differences now threatening to undo the conference.

The United States opposed the declaration because of its equation of Zionism with racism. Nevertheless, the document was adopted by an overwhelming majority.

During the mid-decade women's conference in Copenhagen, the Palestine Liberation Organization used its status as an official observer to get a controversial clause included in the meeting's only official document — the 1980 program of action.

The clause asked that all governments and international organizations assist Palestinian women "in consultation and cooperation with the PLO as the legitimate representative of the Palestinian people."

The United States, which does not recognize the PLO and has steadfastly refused to talk with the group, vehemently opposed the inclusion of the item, but again lost to the majority.

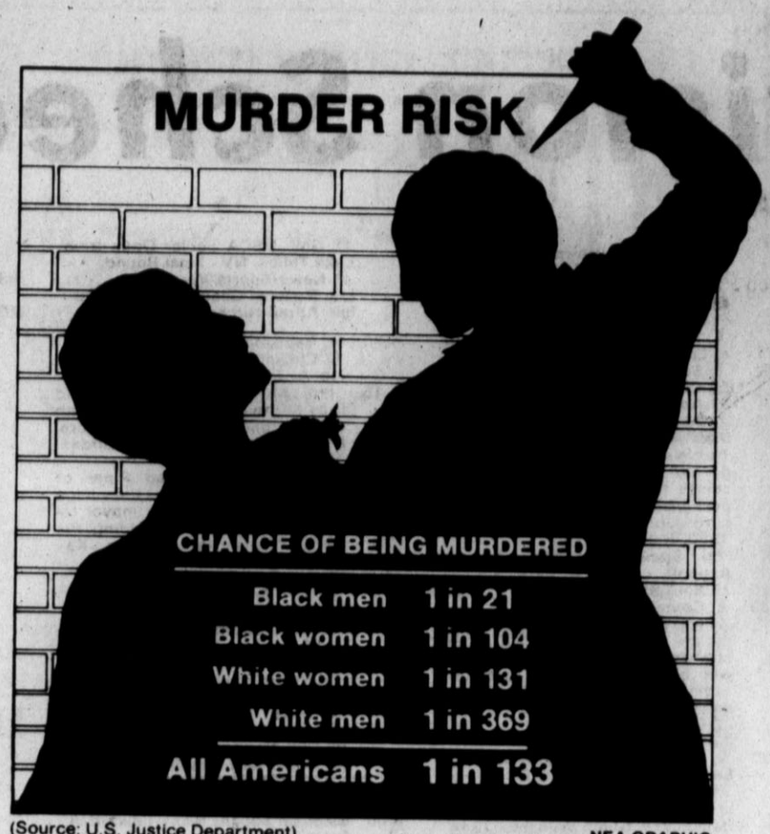

To head off any more items counter to Washington's thinking slipping into the Nairobi conference documents, the United States has insisted that the final statement at Nairobi be decided by consensus, not by majority vote.

A preparatory committee is preparing the draft of a final conference statement, entitled, Forward-Looking Strategies.

The United States has hinted that it would withdraw its 37-member delegation and its money — about 25 percent of the total conference budget — if "extraneous political issues" are given too much weight.

Critics have accused the United States of trying to dictate the women's conference agenda in order to avoid adoption of any policy that might be contrary to the Reagan administration.

"No one is saying you had better not bring up Palestinian women, or the U.S. is going to pull out of the conference," said Victor Jackovich, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi. "What the U.S. is saying is don't let the conference become bogged down with these issues."

World womens' report recently lists results

Here are some facts and figures from the State of the World's Women Report 1985, drawn up in connection with the United Nations Decade for Women, which is now coming to a close.

—If housewives demanded payment for domestic work they could reasonably claim a salary of more than $14,500 a year.

—In Pakistan, village women work 63 hours a week on family and household chores.

—Women do 60 to 80 percent of the agricultural work in Africa — twice as much as African men.

—In 1950, women held 31 percent of the world's jobs; today they hold 35 percent.

—While boys outnumber girls at school worldwide, girls are edging forward slightly faster in the race toward literacy.

—On average, women live six years longer than men in the industrialized world and two years longer in the developing world.

—Males outnumber females by 20 million around the world. The United States, the Soviet Union and Europe have considerably more females. The sexes more or less balance out in Latin America, Africa and Southeast Asia. Males predominate in other parts of Asia and North Africa.

—Women hold about a quarter of the national legislative seats in some countries with centrally planned economies and in some parts of Scandinavia. But in most other parts of the world one woman serves to every 10 men.

BORROWING AGAINST PENSIONS

Your pension may be one of the most economical sources available for borrowing money. Thanks to a change in the tax laws a couple of years ago, many corporate pension and profit-sharing plans (but not IRA's) are now eligible to lend money to plan participants. Under the new rules, such loans are not considered to be pre-retirement distributions which would ordinarily be taxable as soon as the money was received. Not all plans choose to provide this option, however. If yours does, considerable paperwork could be avoided and you could get a loan at a cost that is often below that of comparable loans from other lenders. If your pension has not taken advantage of the law, you may want to explore getting this option approved for all participants.

Before you borrow against anything you have, come into RICK ROBERTS, CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT (364-7525) for some expert financial advice. We are your local full service accounting firm offering persona, caring service to our customers. If you don't already do business here, you owe it to yourself to stop by and find out why we have so may satisfied customers. We are conveniently located at 138 Third, Suite A, Monday thru Friday 8:30-12 and 1-5.

The maximum loan allowed from a pension is $50,000.

Cable TV has effect on backwoods

KATY, W.Va. (AP) — Cable is bringing more than just television to the backwoods, as evidenced by the sexually explicit note recently passed from one second-grader to another at the local elementary school.

"On the one hand, I was surprised by the level of sexual sophistication; on the other, I was appalled by what I was reading," said Richard Petras, principal at Barracksville Elementary School.

"When I asked the little girl about it, she immediately bragged that her parents let her watch dirty movies at home all the time."

Such events are becoming more common in rural areas, Petras said, due to an unprecedented amount of information arriving via cable TV and home satellite dishes.

It was only last September that cable reached Katy, a town of 170 houses nestled in a range of mountains in north-central West Virginia.

"Now, all but three houses have cable and all of them have some form of pay television," said Burtrum "Boots" Cousins, general manager of Group W Cable in nearby Fairmont, adding that nothing racier than HBO and Showtime is offered.

Teachers are beginning to notice a difference.

"Students who come from homes with no guidance frequently make wrong choices," Petras said. "In many cases, they're doing exactly what they see on television in real life."

A first-grade teacher, Sharon Hibbs, said the children had become more verbal, more precocious, and better able to understand spoken words.

Ribbon For Peace ceremony slated

Members of Church Women United in Hereford have joined with CWU members from all over the United States to prepare for the Ribbon For Peace ceremony in Washington, D.C.

On Sunday, Aug. 4 over 100,000 people from across the nation are expected to wrap peace ribbons around the Pentagon to dramatize their vision for peace on the 40th anniversary of the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The local CWU members have sent their segment of the Peace Ribbon to Houston where all the segments made by Church Women United in Texas, churches and individuals will be joined together and taken to Washington.

Participants (assigned according to state) will gather Aug. 4 at one of three staging areas including the mall entrance to the Pentagon, west front of the Capitol building and the Lincoln Memorial.

The three sections will meet to form a continuous ribbon throughout Washington. There will be no speeches, no ceremonies, only silence, except for the sound of bells all across the country ringing for peace.

Church Women United in Hereford ask that all churches join others throughout the nation to endorse this observance of peace by ringing their church bells Aug. 4 at 12 noon and that the local residents pause in prayerful silence.

The Peace Museum of Chicago has agreed to become the repository for the ribbon after it is tied around the Capitol buildings. Texas plans to bring back some, if not all of its ribbons.

Red Cross Update

The chapter is lending safety seats for children to parents of those children through a program named K.I.S.S. or Kids in Safety Seats. We also rent seats to aunt, uncles, grand parent, etc. for short term use.

Call the Red Cross office for further information. This program is made possible by Toujour Amis Study Club and a grant from the Texas Department of Health.

A Senior Citizens Fitness Swim will be held Tuesday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the city pool.

Registration for the second session of water safety classes will be Saturday, July 6, 9 to 11 a.m. at the city pool. Classes will begin Monday, July 8. The classes will finish Friday, July 19. A water safety instructors class will be held July 22. Call the office for further information about the W.S.I. class.

An advanced lifesaving class is now being formed. If you would like to take advanced lifesaving call the office, 364-3761.

The uniformed volunteers and any others interested will make quilts in an all day work session at the Red Cross office. Lottie Wertenberger has made quilt tops and they will be made into quilts July 11, Thursday. Volunteers will be working at various times throughout the day. Those wishing to bring a sack lunch should do so.

The board of directors will meet Tuesday, July 16, noon, at the Red Cross office.

A standard first aid class is now forming. Anyone interested is asked to call the office or Kim Sanders. The class will be held in the evenings.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

An aquatic exercise class will begin Saturday, July 6, from 11 a.m. to 12 noon at the city pool. It is open to the public at a cost of $1 per class. Elaine Taylor will instruct.

The H.J. Heinz Co. owns 9-Lives Cat Food.

Annual reminder issued

As the July 4 holiday approaches, the Texas Department of Public Safety issues its annual reminder that drinking and driving are often associated with holiday celebrations.

"For some there will not be much to celebrate this Fourth of July, as lives will be lost and people injured in traffic accidents," reminds Regional Commander Mayor Vernon Cawthon. "At least 50 percentof all traffic deaths are alcohol related."

Cawthon said anyone who drinks can be a problem once he is on the highway. "Many of these drivers go undetected until they get into a tight traffic situation, at which time a brain depressed by alcohol cannot think fast enough to keep them out of an accident-producing situation."

The best way to have a safe, accident free holiday, Cawthon reminded, is by not drinking and driving, observing all traffic laws and wearing seat belts."

Notre Dame's football team won its only Rose Bowl game, defeating Stanford 27-10, in 1925.

Make new wicks

DEAR POLLY — How can I make candlewicks? I have a lot of old candle pieces I would love to use to make new candles, but I don't know how to make the wicks. — RUTH

DEAR RUTH — You can buy candlewicking in many craft shops, but you can make your own. Use cotton yarn such as that used for crocheting. First, soak the yarn in a solution of 1 tablespoon salt, 2 tablespoons boric acid and 1 cup water for 12 hours. Allow it to dry completely. To make a wick, braid three strands of the dried, pre-soaked cotton.

If you're pouring your melted candlewax into molds, you'll need a way to suspend the wick in the mold. The easiest way is to fasten one end of the wick to the center bottom of the mold with a piece of tape, then tie the other end to a piece of doweling or an ice-cream stick rested across the top of the mold. Many molds made specifically for candlemaking have a small hole in the bottom through which the end of the wick is passed, then the wick is knotted to keep it from pulling back through the hole.

Happy 60th Birthday June!

George Murray

Anyone who has trouble hearing or understanding words is welcome to have a free hearing test with modern electronic equipment.

Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who may have been told nothing could be done for them should have a hearing test to find out if they are among the many a hearing aid will help.

It may surprise you to know that many people with hearing problems do not need hearing aids. But they do need a hearing test as a first step in finding out exactly what the trouble is. There's no charge for the test and absolutely no obligation.

The free hearing test will be given by Beltone Hearing aid Specialists (or Licensed Hearing Aid Dispensers) at the Beltone Hearing Aid Center (at the Hereford Senior Citizen's Center, (Tuesday July 2, 1985) from 1:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m.). To avoid waiting, call for an appointment for the free test at our office or in the privacy of your own home.

Bestsellers will be available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. The bestsellers available are Dr. Berger's "Immune Power Diet" and "A Passion For Excellence" by Tom Peters and Nancy Austin.

Recent scientific discoveries have cast a whole new light on the relationship between what we eat and how we feel and lok. Dr. Stuart M. Berger, a leading medical authority, has built these state-of-the-art breakthroughs into a weight-loss program designed to improve the immune system and provide a broad range of dramatic and lasting benefits. Using his program people have lost significant amounts of weight and are healthier and more energized than ever before.

Dr. Berger's immune power diet shows you exactly how to build an effective immune system through a diet specifically tailored to your individual needs. This personal diet is scientifically designed to produce: important and lasting weight loss, increased resistance to colds, flu, arthritis, and a host of other ailments, enhanced sense of happiness and stress-free well-being, and a more youthful appearance and greater longevity.

"A Passion For Excellence" by Tom Peters and Nancy Austin highlights the methods and accomplishments of those who have always had "the leadership difference," as well as those, who have recently turned their organizations around. This book zeroes in on the three key areas of competence that determine the long-term excellence of any organization–superior service to customers or clients and constant innovation and describes the day-to-day acts of leadership at every management level that add up to superior performance.

"A Passion For Excellénce" will be invaluable for anyone concerned about the pursuit of excellence in the business world and in public service.

Other new books available this week include "Cider House Rules" by John Irving, "Vital Signs" by Barbara Wood, and "The Troubadour's Romance" by Robyn Carr.

LIBRARY EVENTS:

Tuesday morning - 10 a.m. Awesome Adventures activity - jungle masks. Each child will get to make his own jungle mask to take home during the library program. Bring a paintbrush, scissors and wear old clothes!!!

Thursday morning pre-school story hour - 10 a.m.

DR. GOTT

Peter Gott, M.D.

Stop the cracks about knuckles

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son has a habit of cracking his knuckles, finger by finger. I keep telling him he's going to have big ugly knuckles if he continues this, but he says that's an old wives' tale. Is there anything wrong with cracking your knuckles, aside from the annoyance factor?

DEAR READER — I am certain that your comments reflect the concerns of generations of women whose sons cracked their knuckles. As far as I know, knuckle-cracking does not cause any long-term harm. The major problem is the perception your son may have that you are nagging him. I have yet to meet a young man who is the slightest bit concerned about having big knuckles, and nothing you — or I — say will make the slightest difference. I suggest you drop the subject and concentrate on more germane issues. If you are going to go down in history as a "knuckle-nagger," you will probably better expend your energy emphasizing more important issues. Your credibility can be put to better use. For example, how's he doing in school?

DEAR DR. GOTT — My nephew came down with severe intestinal pain when he was 13 and it was diagnosed as Crohn's disease. He had three attacks since then and long periods of remission. He's now 18 and healthy in every respect, except that he's held steady at 5 feet 6 for the past two years. (His younger brother is 6 feet 2.) Is this the end of his growth?

DEAR READER — By 18, most adolescents have reached their adult height; the bone-growth plates have closed. Your nephew is unlikely to exceed his present 5 feet 6. Although he may wish to be taller, he is going to have to accept his present stature. I am sure that you and his family appreciate the blessing of his good health; he seems to be handling a chronic intestinal disorder very well. That is immensely to his credit.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My hands get quite cold, sometimes even in heated apartments or in moderate weather. Aside from causing other people discomfort when I shake hands, is there any health danger in having cold hands? Can anything be done about this?

DEAR READER — There is no danger in having cold hands unless this reflects an underlying disease. If the circulation to your fingers is really diminished, tissue damage can result. I suggest you have a medical examination to make sure that you don't have a form of arterial spasm. Such periodic constriction can be treated with antispasmodics. Of course, if you smoke, this habit can make the situation much worse.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Why do some people have bad breath? My uncle is the most meticulous man; he brushes and flosses twice a day and doesn't drink or smoke, yet his breath is powerful.

DEAR READER — Halitosis may result from a variety of diseases that affect the liver or kidneys. It can be related to diet, particularly to certain foods that contain spices. It also can result from dental disease, especially infected teeth or gums. Your uncle needs a thorough checkup and, if he is medically well, his dentist should be consulted. Although bad breath may tend to occur with age, it is a treatable — albeit challenging — condition.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is it true that a calcium deficiency can cause frequent headaches and excessive menstrual cramps? Is taking calcium supplements an effective way to reduce the likelihood of getting headaches and cramps?

DEAR READER — I think not. People who are calcium-deficient may experience muscle cramps and weakness. Therefore, supplemental calcium may help in these instances. But ordinary headaches are usually due to tension and muscle contraction, and menstrual cramps are due to the effect of a chemical called prostaglandin. Therefore, calcium will not usually affect these conditions.

By and large, calcium supplements are harmless for normal people. You may choose to take them anyway to see what happens. If you have headaches and menstrual cramps, however, I suspect that you will obtain more benefit from other, more specific treatments.

Lee Greenwood to appear in concert at Six Flags July 4

LEE GREENWOOD

Lee Greenwood, recently honored as Entertainer of the Year by Music City News, will appear in concert at Six Flags Over Texas on July 4.

Adding to Greenwood's "winning streak" is the popularity of his latest single record, "Dixie Road." The song is currently ranked in the Top 10 by Billboard Magazine and is steadily climbing in the rankings.

Greenwood's Six Flags concerts will be held in the theme park's Music Mill Amphitheater. Due to the size of expected audiences, two performances will be presented. The first show is scheduled for 6 p.m. and the second performance is set for 8 p.m.

Six Flags' regular admission price is $14.95. An additional $3 charge will be made for each Greenwood performance.

Children under 42 inches tall are admitted to Six Flags for $7.95.

Ecstasy users stock up before drug turns illegal

DALLAS (AP) — Local users of the controversial drug ecstasy are collecting stockpiles of the amphetamine and planning parties to celebrate the final days of its legal use.

Frustrated drug counselors say they don't think many users realize ecstasy may be as dangerous as other controlled drugs they may shun.

"It's a very dangerous drug," said Roy May, a counselor at Help Is Possible, a drug ,treatment center. "According to reports we've gotten here, they (users) go into shakes and have palpitations. I think it should have been illegal a long time ago."

A new federal ban that goes into effect at midnight Sunday will make possession of the amphetamine a felony, carrying maximum penalties of 15 years in jail and a $125,000 fine.

The end of the drug's legal days has become a social event for some.

At a shop in the Texas Ranch, a local bar where the management openly sells ecstasy for $20 per tablet, sales have climbed sharply, the Dallas Times Herald reported Friday.

"They're coming from all over" to buy it, said a shop manager who asked that he not be named. "Older people, younger people, black, white — a real variety."

Many other bars are buzzing with talk of private ecstasy parties.

"The crowd I run with is going to have a couple hundred people celebrating it (the deadline) Friday," said a man in Popsicle Toes, a north Dallas club.

Initial research indicates the drug causes major changes in brain chemistry. Its origins aren't clear, but some experts say it was synthesized in the 1970s by a California biochemist who slightly modified the molecular composition of an amphetamine.

When the drug grew wildly in popularity and supply this year, the federal Drug Enforcement Administration enacted an emergency ban to classify it with the most prohibited drugs such as heroin and LSD.

For local and federal drug agents, the drug's current legality has led to awkward moments.

In one case, police intercepted 3,600 tablets of a drug at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. But when the drug turned out to be ecstasy, they had to return it to the owner.

Users of the drug say they doubt the ban will have much effect.

Word is circulating in the city that black-market chemists already have modified the drug, again making it street-legal.

"I heard the new one is called 'Eve,' " a sound engineer told the Times Herald. "All they have to do is change a molecule or something. This is going to be a never-ending battle."

Paul Harvey

The number of Roman Catholics in the United States declined last year.

Professed Catholics and their children still comprise 22 percent of the United States population, but there were fewer last year by 106,891.

And the National Conference of Catholic Bishops notes a corresponding decline in the number of church schools and of Catholic clergy.

At the same time, the 800 million-member church worldwide i divided as never before – on sex, women, abortion, birth control and priestly celibacy.

Pope John Paul II is convinced that vacillation and compromise and deluded dogma are weakening his church.

He is determined to remain strict and to demand strictness: "The requirements of the Gospel are in fact requirements."

Pope John Paul's most recent visit to the Netherlands was surely both terrifying and disheartening to the Pontiff. Radical youths hurled rocks and bottles and carried protest signs and shouted epithets.

Even the Dutch prime minister, himself a Catholic, warned the Pope that his countrymen were "suspicious" of Rome.

The head of a Dutch missionary group challenged the Pope. "Are we preaching a liberating Gospel if we exclude unmarried people living together, divorced people, homosexuals, married priests and women?"

The Pope, determined to restore traditional absolutes of rightness and wrongness to the church, has made himself a lightning rod for Catholics urging change in "the old ways."

Indeed, stateside surveys show that 70 percent of American Catholics oppose the Pope on abortion, 80 percent oppose him on birth control and priestly celibacy, 65 percent oppose him on remarriage after divorce, 60 percent oppose him on ordination of women.

And yet the Pope and those Catholics who stand with him remain convinced that the church dogma–like the 10 Commandments--must remain a mirror in which we can see and measure our own sinfulness.

And he is naming to church leadership only those who share his views.

Critics within the church are well aware they are being "monitored."

Chicago Cardinal Bernardin who authored the 1983 pastoral letter opposing nuclear arms is said to have had his wings clipped.

The Pope has clamped down on liberal Jesuits and more recently on Franciscans.

This Pope visualizes a worldwide need for imposed discipline, is convinced that weeding out the "liberation theologians" is worth it – at the cost of lost membership – in order for the church to become dynamic again.

It's GOP playing politics

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — A Democrat appointed to the Texas Department of Corrections board says Republicans, not Democrats, are trying to play politics with the TDC.

James Parsons, appointed to the prison board in February by Democratic Gov. Mark White, said Friday that the chairman, Robert Gunn, who has announced he will resign soon, "like other Republicans on the board, has chosen to play politics" with the TDC.

Gunn, of Wichita Falls is a Republican appointed in 1981 by then-Gov. Bill Clements. Saying White tried to mix "prisons and politics" and interfered in the selection of a new prison director, Gunn has said he will resign and support U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler in a bid for governor if Loeffler runs next year.

When Texas Department of Corrections Director Raymond Procunier resigned last week, most of the nine prison board members favored TDC counsel Steve Martin for the job. But Assistant Director Lane McCotter was unanimously selected after White talked with the four board members he appointed.

White also had favored McCotter for the job when Procunier was hired last year.

"I feel that prisons and politics don't mix," Gunn said. "It's the role of an executive (governor) to take the advice of his advisers and experts, which should be the board of directors."

"It should be pointed out that Gunn voted for McCotter too," Parsons, an attorney, told the Palestine Herald-Press.

Parsons said he and three other board members met with White the morning before McCotter was elected just to "kick around our views."

But Parsons added, "White said he would go along with whoever the board selected."

Gunn said that after he resigns he will be "active to some degree" in Loeffler's gubernatorial campaign, should the Hunt congressman decide to run.
