Huge oil find

BOGOTA, Colombia — A consortium of three foreign petroleum companies has discovered a giant deposit of crude oil and natural gas in central Colombia, the state oil company Ecopetrol confirmed late Monday. The Colombian press has quoted petroleum officials as saying the field could contain as many as one billion barrels of recoverable oil and gas. Well tests in one of the new field's formations indicate a daily production of 2,800 barrels of 30 grade American petroleum index (API) oil.

Double tragedy

EWING TOWNSHIP, N.J. — A 6-year-old boy drowned in a relative's swimming pool, just 13 days after his 3-year-old sister was killed by a van when she ran into a street. The body of Kevin Shawn Mack, of Trenton, was found Sunday in the deep end of his aunt's pool, police said. The boy had been playing by the pool earlier and did not know how to swim, an uncle, Walter Lackey, told police.

Woody Allen, whose films distill the essence of New York, is making his first television commercials — not for New Yorkers, but for Italians. COOP, Italy's biggest supermarket chain, hired him at a fee of $2 million. Allen, who says he does not make enough money from the films he produces, told a news conference in Rome on Monday that, "I have a big family, and I thought the offer was interesting." In one commercial, extraterrestrial creatures descend in a space ship and ask what's good eating on Earth.

Bush likely to suspend South Africa sanctions

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush is likely to order the lifting or suspension of trade and financial sanctions against South Africa as soon as the middle of this week, a senior administration official said Monday.

The State Department has concluded that South Africa has met or is in the process of meeting all five conditions specified in 1986 legislation for lifting the sanctions, the official said. And the State Department has recommended the sanctions be lifted, he added.

"The president is reviewing it and will make an announcement about lifting the sanctions as early as midweek," said the official, who insisted on anonymity.

The U.S. Embassy in South Africa has concluded that the government there has released enough political prisoners to satisfy the only condition that, according to the administration, had not already been met, the official said.

Yakima, Wash., wins city's '90 spirit award

By Michael Kashgarian

Concerned citizens can make a difference.

That belief prevailed when a group of Yakima, Wash., residents literally took to the streets of a neighborhood plagued with drugs about two years ago.

Their effort paid off in recognition of the accomplishment, the city of Yakima has been selected as the recipient of the 1990 Midland Community Spirit Award, Mayor Carroll Thomas announced Monday.

Sen. Phil Gramm is scheduled to make the formal presentation of the award on July 24 at the U.S. Capitol

Iraq reveals clandestine nuclear plan

N.Y. Times News Service

Acknowledgment in effect admits violation of Baghdad's obligations under the treaty on spread of nuclear arms.

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Under threat of military attack, Iraq admitted on Monday that it has been running three clandestine programs designed to produce enriched uranium, which could be used in nuclear weapons.

In a statement issued here and in Vienna, the United Nations commission charged with destroying Iraq's most dangerous weapons said Baghdad on Monday submitted a new list of its nuclear sites and material that contained information it had not given earlier.

In particular, Iraq disclosed details of "an extensive nuclear program" that contained three parallel operations for enriching uranium.

Iraq has only admitted to having produced about one pound of slightly enriched uranium from these programs. This would mean that the uranium would not be suitable for nuclear weapons.

Officials here insist that the United Nations does not necessarily believe that the list provided on Monday is definitive. As a result, the United Nations inspectors will now examine what Iraq is declaring to see whether there is any reason to believe it is still concealing material.

In particular, there are doubts as to whether Iraq has declared all the enriched uranium it has produced, officials say.

An Iraqi scientist who recently defected to American forces in northern Iraq has been widely reported as telling American intelligence officials that the country had about 90 pounds of undisclosed highly enriched uranium, sufficient for about two crude atomic bombs.

As a signer of the treaty to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons, Iraq has declared possession of about 100 pounds of highly enriched uranium and placed this under international safeguards.

Inspectors who visited its nuclear plants shortly after the Persian Gulf War say they have accounted for part of this and that the remainder is probably bur-

Flow of illegal immigrants keeps Border Patrol busy

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Since October 1990, the U.S. Border Patrol has apprehended more than 600 people in Midland and nine surrounding counties.

"We are in a location that is obviously a draw for illegal immigration, for people seeking employment, and we are — as the name indicates — the midway point between El Paso and Fort Worth," said Jim Clardy, acting patrol agent in charge of the U.S. Border Patrol in Midland.

About half of those apprehended are transient, most en route to the Dallas/Fort Worth vicinity or points further east, Clardy said. The other 50 percent reside in this area.

The typical illegal immigrant living in and around Midland is a Mexican male between 16 and 40 years old. Although there are immigrant families, most are men because of the physical hardship and dangers encountered when crossing the border, Clardy said.

"They enter the United States to seek unskilled or semi-skilled labor. Most plan

Gorbachev to send official in bid to seal arms treaty

Gorbachev

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The White House said Monday that Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev had swiftly agreed to President Bush's request that he send his foreign minister to Washington this week in an effort to conclude a new nuclear arms treaty in time for signing at a summit meeting in Moscow in late July.

Arms analysts said that since Bush told Gorbachev in a cable that he should not send Soviet Foreign Minister Aleksandr A. Bessmertnykh unless he was empowered to make the final deals needed to complete the treaty on long-range arms, the decision to send the Soviet team was probably the most positive signal yet that both leaders were finally serious about finishing the negotiations, which began in 1982.

For the first time, administration officials also are saying they really do believe the talks should be able to conclude the treaty.

"A lot depends on this meeting," Bush told reporters Monday, adding that there was "plenty of time" to complete the negotiations and still hold a summit meeting in Moscow by the end of July.

The Bush administration, by holding up a full-scale summit meeting until the nuclear accord is completed, has been effectively saying to the Soviet leader that there will be no major breakthrough in other areas of United States-Soviet relations — like economic aid —

Report: Red tape, zoning drive up housing prices

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Red tape and restrictive zoning have put the American dream of a house in the suburbs out of reach of millions of families, a presidential panel reported Monday.

Not only are the working poor economically excluded, but many suburban communities "end up as homogeneous enclaves where households such as schoolteachers, firefighters, young families and the elderly on fixed incomes are all regulated out," the report said.

The report, titled "Not in My Back Yard," blamed excessive local regulations for adding up to 35 percent to the price of a new house. It said zoning laws requiring large lot sizes and architectural conformity also are being used to keep moderate-priced houses and multi-family dwellings from being built in many suburbs.

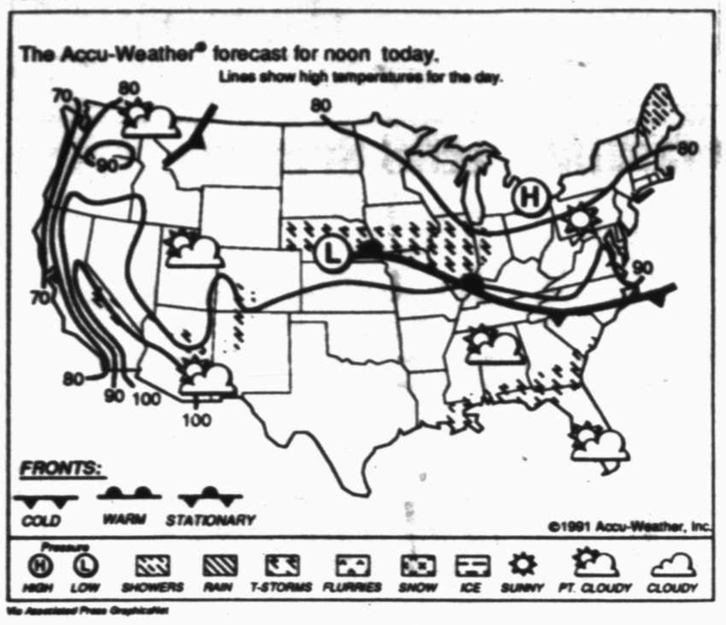

"In theory a way of separating 'incompatible' land uses to protect health and safety, zoning has become a device for screening new development to ensure that it does not depress community property values," the report warned.

Likewise, in inner-city neighborhoods, "excessive and unnecessary government regulation" have

IRAQ: Baghdad reveals secret nuclear programs

(From 1A)

ied underneath nuclear reactors and other installations bombed by the coalition forces.

Announcing the new Iraqi list, the chief United Nations nuclear inspector, Demitri Perricos, said Baghdad had provided more information as a result of "political pressure" from the United States and other countries after the United Nations said it was hiding suspicious-looking equipment from its inspectors.

President Bush has said the United States, one of the five permanent members of the Security Council, has not ruled out a military strike if Iraq does not get rid of all its weapons of mass destruction. Under the terms of the council's cease-fire resolution, Iraq must provide details of its chemical, biological, ballistic and nuclear weapons so that material can be removed or destroyed.

Acting on a tip from American intelligence last month, United Nations inspectors chased a convoy of some 60 trucks carrying equipment to two separate military camps. But on each occasion, the inspectors were refused permission to look at the trucks and on one occasion Iraqi soldiers drove them away by firing warning shots over their heads.

This is the first time that Iraq has ever admitted to trying to enrich uranium. And by Monday's declaration, Iraq in effect admits violation of its obligations under the treaty on the spread of nuclear arms.

By accepting this treaty, Iraq promised never to acquire nuclear weapons and said it would place all its nuclear material under safeguards administered by the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna to insure they are not used for military ends. But the equipment disclosed on Monday has never been revealed to the atomic energy agency and is under no international supervision.

Perricos said Iraq has admitted enriching uranium by an old-fashioned system known as electromagnetic isotopic separation, which the United States used to produce most of the explosive used in the first atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima at the end of the Second World War.

He said Iraq has also admitted to working on enrichment using the centrifuge process.

SANCTIONS: Bush still could impose restrictions

(From 1A)

The president could still impose a temporary condition on the action, or may temporarily suspend the sanctions pending the actual release of all remaining political prisoners. But administration officials felt Bush was more likely to drop the sanctions.

The Washington Post reported the shift in administration policy in early editions of today's issue.

The administration's move seems likely to meet surprisingly little opposition in Congress.

The shift in U.S. policy comes at a time when there is no more agreement on the effectiveness of the sanctions than when they were imposed in 1986.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., one of the architects of the sanctions, favors their removal. And a prominent congressional opponent of any immediate removal conceded in an interview before Monday night's report that he did not have the support to block a cancellation of the sanctions.

"If the president does lift sanctions, I don't think we have the votes to override on either side, in the House or in the Senate," said Rep. Edolphus Towns, D-N.Y., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus. The 26-member group has led an effort to introduce a more stringent basis for the sanctions.

Towns said that while his group could not win on a vote to override, it would try to rally support in Congress to dissuade the president from taking action until recent political changes in South Africa have clearly become irrevocable.

If Bush does act to lift the five-year-old sanctions, a reversal of the decision would require a majority vote in both houses within 30 days that not all the conditions had been met and that the sanctions should not be removed.

Administration officials have now concluded that South Africa has met the five conditions specified in the original legislation that authorized the sanctions.

South Africa has lifted state of emergency regulations, ended bans on some political groups, given assurances that it will enter negotiations for a new system of government and abolished the legal foundations of the system of racial separation known as apartheid.

AWARD: City honors citizens of Yakima, Wash.

(From 1A)

in Washington, D.C.

The annual award honors a community for its residents' ability to pull together to help one another, Thomas said.

From 158 nominations for 108 communities in 35 states, Yakima was chosen for its effort to fight a drug problem.

"It indicates we are making a difference. We were known as the drug capital of the Northwest," Yakima Mayor Pat Berndt said from the Washington city.

"I'm extremely pleased (about the award) because it recognized the fight on drugs."

That fight escalated in Yakima, a city of about 59,000, when residents decided to regain a southeast neighborhood overridden with drug dealers and users.

That part of town — known as "The Hole" — suffered "a great deal of street dealing, dealers on every corner, and a serious networking problem, a pipeline for drugs," Ms. Berndt said.

The change began with a parade of more than 100 people, who marched through "The Hole" demanding a cleanup of the drug problem.

That parade was followed by others. Anti-drug signs were posted, and residents and property owners overwhelmingly demonstrated their disapproval of drug dealings in the area.

"They were just a bunch of Yakima people who had enough of it," Ms. Berndt said. "They created a great deal of community awareness."

The efforts of the citizens coincided with the formation of the Yakima Coalition for the War on Drugs, made up of city, county, school and business representatives, she said.

The backbone community effort coupled with the coalition led to a purge of the drug problem.

Drug arrests have dropped 28 percent in the city and "The Hole" no longer is one.

"It used to be (The Hole), but we've abandoned that name because it's cleaned up," Ms. Berndt said.

Although the drug problem hasn't completely been eradicated, it has subsided greatly and the fight continues, she said.

"We are still working to get neighborhoods that are having problems ... it's an ongoing problem."

That spirit — publicizing the drug problem, organizing marches and committees, and unifying residents — earned Yakima the award, Thomas said.

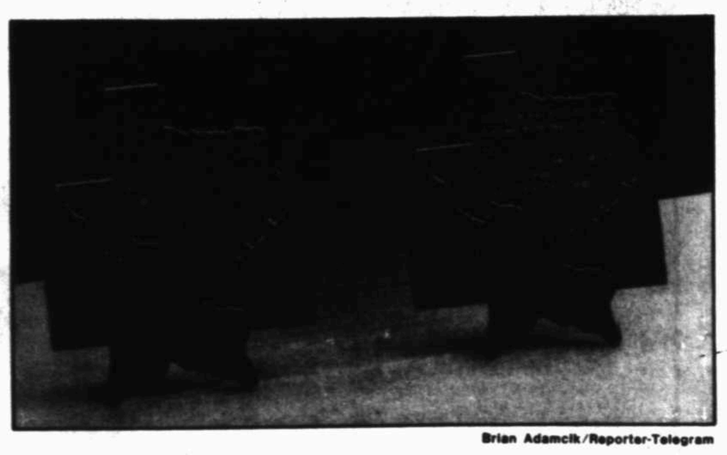

"It was the fact that the whole community was involved and that they had a problem and they tackled that problem," Thomas said.

Similar community spirit originally inspired the Midland award.

The rescue of 18-month-old Jessica McClure, who fell down a Midland well on Oct. 14, 1987, prompted the award's creation.

For the 52 hours the girl was trapped, nationwide attention was focused on her rescue by volunteers from the area and across the country.

Thus the catalyst for the award — along with some national attention.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Clovis, N.M., and Toms River, N.J., were spirit semi-finalists.

"The biggest help is Dear Abby, who lets me write her a letter and she publishes it in her column nationally," Thomas said.

Sioux City, Iowa, won the first award in 1989 for the community spirit displayed following a airline crash.

The Yakima award marks the second such presentation.

Semi-finalists for the 1990 award were Clovis, N.M.; Shadyside, Ohio; and Toms River, N.J.

In Clovis, an estimated 10,000 people assisted in the search of a missing 6-year-old boy, Matthew Roberts, in May 1990. The massive effort involving poster and T-shirt distributions and door-to-door searches ended when Roberts was found dead from positional asphyxiation after he climbed into a station wagon's rear storage compartment and was locked in.

In Shadyside, a flash flood in June 1990 took 23 lives and caused million of dollars in damage. During the disaster, heroic rescues occurred and following the destruction the community made a collective effort to rebound from the tragedy.

In Toms River, the community adopted the town of McClellenville, S.C., which was heavily damaged by Hurricane Hugo in September 1989. A donation campaign by Toms River brought 38 tractor trailers of needed goods and more than $100,000 to the hurricane-damaged city.

Selection committee members Joan Baskin, Jack Cartwright, Lynn Durham Jr., Charles Spence, Don Byerly, Linnie Donnelly, Mary Griffith, Norma Webb and Thomas chose the spirit award winner. The Midland Sears Roebuck store underwrote the award.

HOUSING: Red tape keeps American dream out of reach pushed housing costs "often higher than they should and could be," said the report by the federal Advisory Commission on Regulatory Barriers to Affordable Housing.

Urban building codes are geared to new construction rather than rehabilitation of existing buildings, the report said, and thwart efforts to revitalize inner-city residential areas. Reinvestment in the city core has also been hindered "by restrictive and racially discriminatory lending practices," it said.

In many instances, bureaucratic and financial obstacles are deliberately set up to prevent the construction of housing for the poor and lower middle class, the 22-member commission concluded.

"In community after community across the country, local governments employ zoning and subdivision ordinances, building codes, and permitting procedures to prevent development of affordable housing," the report said. "They fear that affordable housing will result in lower land values, more congested streets and a rising need for new infrastructure such as schools."

The commission presented its report on Monday to President Bush and Jack F. Kemp, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. It called for federal pressure on state and local governments to tear down the regulatory barriers that have shored up housing prices.

TREATY: Gorbachev to send Bessmertnykh

until the treaty on long-range arms is completed.

While American officials insist they have not promised the Soviets any more economic aid if the long-range arms treaty is finished next week, the mere fact of its completion would make it politically that much easier for the Bush administration to justify whatever support it gives to the Soviet economy.

Bush and Gorbachev will meet for two hours in London on July 17, after the meeting of the leaders of the major industrial democracies.

A full-scale, two- or three-day summit meeting in Moscow had long been planned for the end of June, but it was repeatedly postponed because both sides insisted it could take place only if they could sign the long-negotiated Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, which would cut long-range nuclear arsenals by roughly 30 percent.

To speed the arms talks, the two leaders said they would hold a summit meeting in Moscow only after the treaty was done. But instead the treaty negotiations lagged and ended up putting all the other aspects of the relationship, including American economic help for Gorbachev's reforms, largely on hold.

"We made the Moscow summit contingent on finishing the treaty and we have postponed it now for so long it is starting to become a joke," said one administration official. "We really can't get on with the rest of the relationship until this is done."

For the last two months the two sides have been trying to resolve the last three major issues holding up the treaty: how much missile test data to exchange, how to determine what constitutes new missiles that won't be covered by treaty limits, and how many warheads must be removed from each existing missile. Some progress has been made.

Ten days ago, a high-level American team of experts, carrying compromise proposals to overcome these differences, met with a team of Soviet experts in Geneva. The Soviet team, though, said it did not have the authority to accept any of the American proposals, and this is what prompted Bush's appeal to Gorbachev to send Bessmertnykh to Washington with the authority to make decisions on the spot, American officials said.

But there are other reasons for wanting to finish the treaty now.

IMMIGRANTS: 50 percent reside in this area

(From 1A)

to stay a season — three to six months — and send money home," he said.

"The majority we apprehend here are traditional migrant workers. ... Some are here for the purpose of perpetrating crimes, but it is a small percentage," Clardy said.

"Their ultimate desire is to return to their country of origin," he added.

But many find themselves going home earlier than expected.

Clardy estimated that the number of illegal immigrants apprehended in the area accounts for about 30 to 50 percent of those who are actually here.

Between October 1989 and September 1990, the U.S. Border Patrol apprehended 649 people in Midland. Of those, 635 were processed through the federal office and 628 were deportable aliens.

The majority were illegal entry immigrants and the remainder were "status violators" — that is, they did not have proper documentation, officials said.

And most were not deported.

"Approximately 85 percent elect to return to their country of origin in lieu of deportation. The other 15 percent elect to request a hearing before a deportation judge," Clardy said.

Of the Mexicans who decide to return home voluntarily, the U.S. Border Patrol provides free transportation via bus — daily — to the border, usually at Presidio/Ojinaga and sometimes El Paso/Juarez, officials said.

Status violators are sometimes allowed to return on their own. They are required to notify authorities at the point of entry to insure a record of return.

Illegal immigrants are repatriated within 24 hours.

"We try to do our job in the most humane way possible — it's foremost," Clardy said.

Ecce Iei Mendoza, consul of Mexico for the Midland area, said he has not heard of any mistreatment of undocumented immigrants.

The Mexican Consulate — which makes about 10,000 contacts with Mexican nationals a year — receives very few requests by undocumented immigrants, Mendoza said.

The Consulate does help advise legal immigrants on procedures required to stay in the country.

It also provides advice to immigrants who do not know if they should seek an appearance before an immigration judge, rather than voluntarily return to Mexico.

Voluntary repatriation and deportation are both administrative procedures, not criminal. Criminal proceedings, however, can occur when drugs, illegal documents or repeat entries are involved.

No fines are incurred and all immigrants are entitled to their personal belongings — including any wages earned while in the United States.

"Every effort is made to contact an employer and make sure that an alien is paid," Clardy said.

The U.S. Border Patrol doesn't become involved in disputed wages, but "won't be used as a shield for unscrupulous wage contractors" either, he said.

The relationship between illegal immigrants and work prompted about 60 employee/labor contacts with area businesses last fiscal year. Of those, about 70 percent were courtesy inspections for hiring policy and the remainder were investigative contacts for employment of illegal immigrants.

After immigrants finally return to their home country, there's no guarantee that they won't return.

About 60 percent of the illegal immigrants picked up previously have been apprehended somewhere on the border and voluntarily repatriated, according to Border Patrol officials.

Despite the area's proximity to Mexico, not all illegal immigrants here are Mexican nationals, although the overwhelming majority — 90 percent to 95 percent — are, Clardy said.

Nationwide for fiscal year 1989, about 865,290 of 954,000 apprehensions were of Mexican nationals, said Don Nielson, public affairs specialist for Immigration and Naturalization in Dallas.

Following in apprehensions were 20,251 nationals from El Salvador and 13,434 Guatemalans, Nielson said.

Illegal immigrants from the north — Canada — ranked sixth, with 5,794 apprehensions, Nielson said.

These numbers may be misleading, Nielson said, because of repeat incidents involving the same immigrants.

And the number picked up isn't indicative of how many undocumented immigrants may be in the country, Nielson added.

"If we could count 'em, we could catch 'em," he said.

The Midland Border Patrol office has apprehended people from Central America, Canada, several locations in Europe including France and Great Britain, and Middle East countries. Just last week, a man from Czechoslovakia was picked up, agent Clardy said.

"Race has nothing to do with entering illegally. Race has no bearing on who we inspect," he said.

Inspections are made at bus stations, airports and on freight trains. Illegal immigrants also are discovered after tips from other law enforcement agencies and the public.

"Sometimes, (it is) as simple as driving on the interstate and stopping to talk to someone walking," Clardy said.

Because of a growing young population in Mexico seeking work and changes in U.S. legislation in the mid-1980s, more immigrants are being apprehended in this part of West Texas.

During fiscal year 1989, there were 288 apprehensions, compared to 649 in 1990 and 662 so far this year. The fiscal year ends Sept. 29.

"I don't see an immediate solution to the problem. The economic recovery of Mexico would probably reduce the problem more than anything else," Clardy said.

The U.S. Border Patrol office in Midland employees seven agents: five border patrol agents and two anti-smuggling (drugs and immigrants) agents.

The office, based at Midland International Airport, opened in July 1988 as a consolidation of offices in Big Spring and Odessa.

Bush accused of filling racial quota

■ White House formally submits Supreme Court nominee's name to Senate amid stir over nomination.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said Monday that President Bush filled a racial quota when he nominated Judge Clarence Thomas to be the nation's second black Supreme Court justice.

Mitchell said he found it ironic that Bush, an outspoken opponent of racial hiring and promotion quotas, had nominated Thomas to succeed Justice Thurgood Marshall, the first black member of the high court.

"I do not accept the president's explanation that race was not a factor at all in this nomination," said Mitchell, D-Maine.

"Race was a factor. ... I do not believe there are a handful of Americans who believe the contrary," he said. The Thomas nomination shows that Bush "is against quotas for every position except the Supreme Court."

The majority leader's comments came as the White House formally submitted Thomas's nomination to the Senate and the nominee began paying courtesy calls on key senators who will vote on his confirmation.

They were also made as the NAACP deferred taking a position on Thomas pending further study of his record on such issues as affirmative action, which he as criticized as chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission during the Reagan administration.

Thomas, accompanied by Sen. Jack Danforth, R-Mo., visited separately with Mitchell and Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kansas, in the first round of visits to Capitol Hill.

Thomas declined to answer reporters' questions, saying only that he was "uncomfortable" by being placed in the spotlight.

The formal submission of Thomas' nomination revived the perennial debate about how far the Senate should pry into a judicial candidate's views.

Mitchell said the Senate had as much right as the president to take a nominee's views into account but stopped short of joining those who say Thomas should make clear his views on abortion and privacy.

But Danforth, for whom Thomas worked as a Senate aide, said, "I don't think it's appropriate to try to determine how he is going to vote."

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, said any attempts to pin down Thomas on specific issues such as affirmative action, abortion or the First Amendment, would "diminish the independence of the judiciary."

"Americans do not want judges deciding cases ... based on prior commitments to senators," Hatch said.

Dole said Thomas should avoid making statements about the abortion issue when questioned during Senate Judiciary Committee hearings. "My advice would be to stay out of it."

Dole took issue with Mitchell's statement that Bush was filling a racial quota by nominating Thomas.

If Bush had "sent up liberal activists ... you wouldn't hear Senator Mitchell or Democrats saying anything about quotas," Dole said.

Mitchell said that while race was a consideration in Thomas's selection, "I am not suggesting it was the only factor, I am not suggesting it was the determining factor but clearly it was a factor."

Dole conceded that the question of Thomas's legal experience "would probably pop up" during the confirmation proceeding, adding: "That's an appropriate place for inquiry."

But the Republican leader said that Thomas' background, which includes an eight-year stint as EEOC chairman, is "fairly broad experience for a young man of 43."

The decision by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to postpone action on Thomas' nomination was announced at the start of the civil rights group's annual convention.

In the past, Thomas has been criticized by civil rights groups for opposing affirmative action when he chaired the EEOC.

At the EEOC, Thomas focused the agency's legal resources away from class-action suits on behalf of large groups of employees or jobseekers and concentrated instead on discrimination against individuals.

A member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights on Monday urged the Senate to reject the nomination. Mary Frances Berry said Thomas' nomination "is insulting to those who marched, went to jail and died in the civil rights movement so that he and other African-Americans might become achievers in a different America."

Thomas' nomination has put civil rights leaders in a difficult position.

While he is an outspoken conservative, Thomas grew up in poverty in Georgia before segregation was abolished. Civil rights leaders, including NAACP director Benjamin Hooks, have suggested that such a personal background might make him more sensitive to the problems of minorities than other members of the high court.

Hooks told reporters in Houston that the NAACP was "not waffling" by its decision to postpone taking a position on Thomas.

Thomas declined to answer reporters' questions, saying only that he was "uncomfortable" by being placed in the spotlight.

"We're not going to be stampeded into mass hysteria just because someone says we're waffling," Hooks told reporters after the decision was announced. "What we're doing is what we've always done."

Hooks and William Gibson, the NAACP's board chairman, said they wanted to further study Thomas' record because they were troubled by his stewardship at the EEOC.

The NAACP took no position on Thomas' nomination last year to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration is not concerned about the delay in the NAACP's decision.

"They've indicated they want to take a close look at his record and we think that's appropriate," he told reporters.

Fitzwater said Bush spoke last week with Hooks when he announced Thomas' nomination to succeed the 83-year-old Marshall, the high court's first black and a liberal who said he would retire as soon as his successor was confirmed by the Senate.

The Bush administration's top-ranking black official, Health Secretary Louis Sullivan, said in a statement that he was confident that the NAACP would conduct a fair and thorough review of Thomas's background.

BU President Silber gives dean deadline to explain plagiarism

BOSTON (NYT) — John R. Silber, president of Boston University, announced Sunday that the dean of the College of Communication would be given until Thursday to explain why he plagiarized large portions of his commencement address in May.

Silber said the university administration would then make an announcement on Friday about the fate of the dean, H. Joachim Maitre.

In a two-paragraph statement issued Sunday night, Silber did not say what discipline, if any, might be taken against Maitre, who repeated virtually word for word 15 paragraphs from an article by Michael Medved, a film critic for Public Broadcasting Service.

The time between the deadline for Maitre's explanation and the university's decision seems to indicate that Silber has already determined a course of action.

Silber appointed Maitre, a former East German fighter pilot known for his conservative politics, dean in 1987 over much opposition.

Several faculty members and administrators, speaking on the condition that they not be identified, said Sunday that there was almost no remaining support for Maitre. They said that the university had been severely embarrassed by the disclosure of the plagiarism, and they believed Silber was personally embarrassed himself.

Silber, the Democratic candidate for governor last year, was narrowly defeated in November and has indicated he might like to run for political office again.

In Sunday's announcement, Silber said he and the university's provost, Jon Westling, had conferred with Maitre over the weekend about the incident, which was first made public last week.

Developer strikes again — on Page One

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a pretty good line: "Karl Marx government didn't work in Moscow — Marx Brothers government doesn't work in New York."

And it was on the front page of Sunday's New York Times.

The three-line, $600 advertisement at the bottom of page one was taken out by developer Seymour Durst, who has gone public in the past with complaints about government follies.

"It just does something good for me," he said. "I'm not saying I have any answers."

The city and the state are in the middle of budget crises that have forced them to raise taxes and cut services.

Two years ago Durst erected an electronic billboard at the busy midtown corner of 42nd Street and Sixth Avenue with rapidly flashing numbers that tracked the growth of the national debt.

In 1981, he sent every member of Congress and the state Legislature a 12-foot-long "Scroll of Housing Fatalities," buildings he said were foreclosed because of rent control.

No jurors yet in Swaggart-Gorman lawsuit

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Jury selection began Monday for the trial of an evangelist's $90 million defamation lawsuit against rival Jimmy Swaggart, with testimony expected to touch on sex scandals and Satan.

Marvin Gorman, who helped topple Swaggart by providing photographs of the Baton Rouge-based evangelist with a prostitute, accuses Swaggart of conspiring to destroy his New Orleans television ministry.

The 1987 lawsuit claims Swaggart falsely accused Gorman of numerous adulterous affairs. Gorman admitted a single "immoral act" with a woman.

The two television evangelists have accused each other of sexual indiscretions for years. Their problems followed the sex scandal that brought down fellow TV evangelist and PTL founder Jim Bakker. At the time, Swaggart was a vocal critic of Bakker.

Gorman's lawyers claim there are more than 100 "disputed facts" in the case, including whether Swaggart and others told people that Gorman had sex with 100 women, fathered illegitimate children, was possessed by a demon or is Satan.

Swaggart and Gorman declined to comment when they arrived at the courthouse, but Gorman said he was glad to get the trial under way.

Attorneys predicted the state district court trial could last six weeks.

Swaggart's lead attorney, Phillip Whitmann, focused his questions of the prospective jurors' on their religion, whether or not they were churchgoers, and on pretrial publicity.

No jurors were selected on the first day. Six prospective jurors were questioned. Two others were dismissed by the judge.

Swaggart's fall came in 1988, with his tearful confession that he had sinned. Swaggart did not specify the sin, but his confession came after Gorman gave church officials photographs of Swaggart outside a motel with a prostitute.

The Assemblies of God, the nation's largest Pentecostal denomination, expelled Swaggart after he refused to accept a one-year suspension from the pulpit. Swaggart's ministry has since dropped in television ratings from No. 1 in the nation to about fourth, according to Arbitron, the ratings service.

The Assemblies of God dismissed Gorman in 1986 after Swaggart and others confronted him about alleged sexual indiscretions. He has established a storefront church in suburban Metairie and recently returned to television for the first time in several years.

The first juror questioned said she knew little about the dispute, but when pressed admitted remembering one detail about Swaggart.

"All I remember that I heard about it was the motel on Airline Highway," said the 21-year-old college student. "I knew it had something to do with prostitution."

During the trial, Gorman will be barred from bringing up Swaggart's sex life — although his own is central to the case. A state appeals court upheld Judge Julian Bailes' ruling that Swaggart's sex life is irrelevant.

Senate rejects Rudman's crime-bill amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Monday night thwarted an attempt by Republicans to use the bulk of a $3.3 billion anti-crime bill to put more police officers on the streets.

By a vote of 49-39, the Senate killed an amendment by Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., which would have set aside $2.2 billion of the $3.3 billion for a program of direct aid to help states, counties, cities and towns hire more law enforcement officers.

Rudman, a former New Hampshire attorney general, argued that not enough of the money in the omnibus crime bill was going to localities where the crimes are being committed. The money would have been disbursed on the basis of a community's population.

"Very few Americans feel safe on the streets of America's cities today," he said. "Crime is a national scandal."

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of the Judiciary Committee and chief sponsor of the omnibus crime bill, opposed Rudman's proposal.

"There is a correlation" between the number of police officers on the streets and the reduction of crime, Biden said. "But I believe the senator from New Hampshire takes it to an extreme."

"Roughly two-thirds of the states are under court orders for prison overcrowding," Biden said. "Many dangerous felons are being released early because there's insufficient prison space. ... What they (local police officers) want is to get these recidivists off the streets."

The Senate was in its third week of work on the crime bill, and leaders hoped to finish it by week's end. Before the Fourth of July recess, senators voted, 67-32, to require background checks of handgun purchasers within five working days. The Bush administration has embraced many provisions of the bill without giving it an outright endorsement.

About $1 billion of the money in the bill would go for anti-substance abuse programs. The rest would be spread among various federal crime-fighting agencies, such as the Drug Enforcement Administration, and to the U.S. Bureau of Prisons for construction of new federal prisons. Rudman argued that the bulk of the money should go to state and local areas "where the crime is."

"We can have special grants for drug programs and prisons and so forth," he said, "but if we want to attack this, we do it in the way we launched Operation Desert Storm — with major force. What the police of America need today is overwhelming manpower to get out on the streets and attack crime."

Lawmaker said to favor census estimate

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is getting mixed advice from Congress about correcting the census numbers.

The House member in charge of census oversight said Monday he favors replacing the census count with a population estimate. His Senate counterpart has said he opposes any adjustment of the numbers.

A federal court in New York has ordered Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher to decide by July 15 whether or not to correct the numbers. The Census Bureau estimates the true population is 5.3 million more than the 248.7 million people it counted last year.

"My belief is an adjustment would substantially improve the quality of the figures and therefore ought to be done," said Rep. Tom Sawyer, D-Ohio, chairman of the House census and population subcommittee.

In a speech to the Center for National Policy, Sawyer argued the government should choose the most accurate numbers available, whether they come from a count or an estimate.

Postmaster general defends exec's bonuses

WASHINGTON — Postmaster General Anthony Frank said Monday his agency doesn't have "anything to be ashamed of" for paying nearly all its 1,200 executives annual bonuses averaging more than $5,000 at a time when it lost money.

The bonuses, which went to 97 percent of the Postal Service's executives, totaled $20 million for fiscal years 1988-90.

"We get a bargain from our executives," said Frank. He said he may tighten the bonus criteria, but principally to pay larger amounts to those who continue to qualify.

"I don't think we have anything to be ashamed of," Frank said. He expressed particular annoyance at suggestions that bonuses were inappropriate in years when the Postal Service operates in the red, as it did for two of the last three years.

"I absolutely reject that criticism," he said, noting that the agency's rate system, under the law, virtually ensures up and down cycles.

The bonus program first attracted attention more than a year ago, when a Senate subcommittee questioned the payments.

The issue arose again when The Pittsburgh Press reported the latest bonus figures over the weekend.

Black church invites David Duke to speak

MEMPHIS, Tenn — A black church has invited former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke to speak at a fund-raiser for an inner-city recreation center.

Duke, a Louisiana state representative and gubernatorial candidate, said he had agreed to speak at the event sponsored by the Savior's Temple of the Pentecostal Holiness Church.

The fund-raiser is being organized by Jimmy Boyd, manager of a low-power television station that broadcasts to parts of Memphis.

"I had seen David Duke on TV. I talked to him and some of his people. I believe he has a message," Boyd said.

Duke said he plans to speak on welfare reform, drug abuse and traditional family values.

Nintendo loses big infringement lawsuit

SEATTLE (HNS) — Nintendo of America Inc. has lost a copyright infringement suit against a device that might make the games so easy even a parent could play them.

The decision last week was the first breach in the barricades the company has built around its video game systems.

U.S. District Court Judge Fern Smith in San Francisco ruled that Lewis Galoob Toys' Game Genie video device did not violate Nintendo's copyright.

Officials for Nintendo, based in Washington state, immediately said they would appeal.

Vandals desecrate grave of AIDS victim Ryan White

CICERO, Ind. (AP) — Vandals again desecrated the grave of Ryan White, the young AIDS victim who gained worldwide recognition by fighting discrimination against those with the disease, police said Monday.

White's 6-foot 8-inch gravestone at Cicero Cemetery was toppled sometime between Friday night and Saturday morning, the fourth time White's grave had been vandalized. In previous instances, vandals had used paint or uprooted flowers, police said.

Ryan's mother, Jeanne White, offered a $500 reward for information leading to the vandals' arrests.

"It's a quiet cemetery and I don't know why they can't leave him to rest," Mrs. White said.

Hamilton County Deputy Sheriff Jon Robison said no arrests has been made by Monday afternoon.

"I don't know what their motive was. I don't believe that any other graves were desecrated. I believe it was targeted to the (White) grave," Robison said.

White, a hemophiliac who contracted AIDS from blood transfusions, fought a legal battle for five years against school officials who barred him from attending classes, saying he posed a risk to other students. He won that fight, which became the basis of a television movie about his life.

White died April 8, 1990. Among those who attended his funeral were first lady Barbara Bush, entertainers Elton John and Michael Jackson and talk show host Phil Donahue.

Ulysses set for Jupiter

PASADENA, Calif. — The troubled Ulysses solar explorer fired its thrusters and set course for a 1992 swing past Jupiter on Monday as officials investigated why they briefly lost contact with the spacecraft last month.

The trajectory change was designed to bring Ulysses within about 235,000 miles of Jupiter's cloud tops on Feb. 8, 1992 — a key step in its $750 million mission to explore the sun's poles.

Navy shoots down U.S. plane; crew safe

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American plane supporting the allied relief effort in northern Iraq caught fire Monday over the Mediterranean Sea and was shot down by the Navy after its crew parachuted to safety, a Navy official said.

All five crew members were recovered by helicopters from the aircraft carrier Forrestal and the cruiser Yorktown, said Lt. Fred Henney, a Navy spokesman at the Pentagon. None was seriously injured.

The Navy E-2C Hawkeye, an early warning aircraft made by Grumman Aerospace Corp., was on a "routine air patrol" in support of Operation Provide Comfort, the allied relief effort, when one of its engines caught fire at about 5 a.m. EDT, Henney said.

The Hawkeye and the F-A-18 both were stationed aboard the Forrestal.

Yugoslav accord breaks down

Slovenia, Croatia refuse to send delegates to federal meeting

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Less than 24 hours after reaching agreement with Slovenia for negotiations on the secession crisis, members of the federal presidency charged early Tuesday that Slovenia was violating the accord.

The federal presidency, minus its Slovenian and Croatian representatives, said Slovenia had failed to lift a blockade of some federal army units, was holding police prisoners, and had not deactivated its territorial defense units.

The agreement reached early Monday on the island of Brioni in the Adriatic called for federal army units to return to barracks, the deactivation of Slovene militia, and for all forces to return to quarters by midnight Monday.

In exchange for federal army promises of peace, Slovenia and Croatia agreed to suspend their June 25 independence declarations for three months, with concerted negotiations on secession beginning no later than Aug. 1.

Despite the agreement, Slovenia on Monday had ordered its legislators to immediately vacate their seats in the federal parliament. It also boycotted the presidency meeting called Monday to confirm the Brioni agreement.

Croatia — where fighting broke out with federal troops for the first time Sunday — also appeared to be disregarding the agreement when it sent a letter to the federal Parliament urging the body to "work so the dissociation process may unfold in a peacful and democratic way."

Slovenia's capital appeared calm Monday, but threat of large-scale violence appears to be growing in Croatia.

The statement early today from the presidency said the body, which is nominally the supreme commander of the Yugoslav army, was sending two of its representatives to Slovenia to warn the breakaway republic to abide by the agreement.

Absent from the presidency meeting today were Janez Drnovsek, the Slovenian representative, and the presidency's Croatian chairman, Stipe Mesic, who was ill, Tanjug said.

Federal Defense Minister Veljko Kadijevic was present at the meeting. The army is believed to be pressing for more signs of Slovenia's good intentions before it accepts three months of enforced inaction.

Slovenia's capital of Ljubljana appeared calm Monday, but the threat of large-scale violence appeared to be growing in Croatia.

A federal army unit on the Serbian border came under fire late Monday, apparently from Croatian forces, and the army returned fire with an undetermined number of casualties, the Tanjug news agency said.

The federal troops were guarding a bridge over the Danube River linking the towns of Backa Palanka, Serbia and Ilok, Croatia. The bridge is about 60 miles northwest of Belgrade.

On Sunday, the army intervened in Croatia for the first time in the two-week secession crisis, battling Croatian militia for 10 hours in the nearby town of Tenja. As many as 33 people were killed or wounded in that fighting, according to some sources.

The army acted to separate Croatians and bands of Serbian gunmen who battled in the town after Croatian forces began shelling the Serbs.

In villages throughout the Slavonia region of northeast Croatia, ethnic Serbs who oppose Croatian independence were reportedly fortifying their positions.

Borisav Jovic, Serbia's man on the eight-member federal presidency, warned that "war could happen" if Croatia insists on splitting from Yugoslavia without giving ethnic Serbs the right to self-determination.

9 republics back Gorbachev in summit stance

MOSCOW (NYT) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev won the backing of Boris N. Yeltsin and the leaders of eight other republics on Monday for the case he will make to leaders of major industrial nations at their meeting in London next week.

Details of Gorbachev's presentation have not been made public. But the show of support from republics' leaders, with whom the president is negotiating a new union treaty — and especially from Yeltsin, the politically powerful president of the Russian federated republic — was intended to convince the Western leaders that Gorbachev will be speaking for at least a sizable portion of his country.

The common front was reached at a meeting at the village of Novo-Ogarevo outside Moscow, where the same leaders negotiated a truce in April, called the "nine-plus-one" agreement, that halted the struggle between the Kremlin and the republics and opened negotiations toward a new union treaty.

The main evening television news program, Vremya, showed a smiling Gorbachev bantering with Yeltsin and the other leaders in a spirit of camaraderie.

The six republics that have declared their independence of the Kremlin — Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Georgia, Armenia, and Moldavia — are not involved in the negotiations.

The leaders gathered in Novo-Ogarevo were those of Russia, the Ukraine, Byelorussia, Azerbaijan, and the five Central Asian republics. Since the "nine-plus-one" agreement was reached, they have been negotiating a new federation in which republics would play a determining role.

"We are united by the common responsibility that is at the basis of 'nine-plus-one,' a responsibility for the fate of the country, a responsibility to stabilize political life and emerge as quickly as possible from this profound and serious crisis," Gorbachev said.

Yeltsin declared that Gorbachev was heading for London "not only as a representative of the center, but as the representative of all nine republics, with their agreement."

"Here we demonstrated a common understanding that we can resolve all our problems, that we are one mighty economic market with a certain division of labor, that we are all interdependent," Gorbachev said.

The World

■ Flood deaths in China near 1,000

BEIJING — A month of flooding in southern and eastern China has killed nearly 1,000 people and left more than 5 million people stranded, the Xinhua News Agency reported Monday.

Washed-out rails forced officials to cancel train service over the weekend between Beijing and Shanghai, China's largest city. Portions of the track were reopened Monday, TV news reported.

Swollen rivers and lakes could provoke even more serious flooding in eastern China, Vice Premier Zou Jiahua was quoted as telling an emergency meeting of the State Council, China's Cabinet.

The water level at Taihu Lake in eastern Jiangsu province is at a record high and threatens the industrial cities of Suzhou and Wuxi, Zou was quoted as saying.

■ Five big arms sellers begin controls talks

PARIS — Officials of the world's five biggest weapons sellers met in private Monday to begin talks on curbing the flow of arms to the Middle East and elsewhere.

The unprecedented, two-day meeting marked the start of "a long, complex and subtle process," said Daniel Bernard, spokesman for France's Foreign Ministry.

The meeting was expected to be the first of a series involving the United States, Soviet Union, China, France and Britain.

The Gulf War prompted a reassessment of existing arms selling practices. Officials of all five countries — the permanent members of the U.N. Security Council — have expressed interest in easing the arms buildup in the Middle East, although they also want to maintain lucrative arms sales.

■ South Africa signs nuclear-ban treaty

PRETORIA, South Africa — In a step to end its political isolation, South Africa on Monday signed an international treaty banning member nations from building or acquiring nuclear weapons.

Foreign Affairs Minister Pik Both signed the 1970 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, bringing to 142 the number of signatories.

The move ended years of South African resistance to joining the treaty, which also commits nations to opening nuclear facilities to periodic inspection.

Last month, in announcing South Africa's intent to sign, President F.W. de Klerk cited the end of the Cold War, the resolution of conflicts in neighboring states and South Africa's warming relations with foreign countries.

■ Bulls gore two runners at Pamplona

PAMPLONA, Spain — Two bulls that began running the wrong way through the narrow streets of Pamplona gored a man and a woman Monday on the second day of the annual running of the bulls festival.

Doctors at Navarre Hospital said Urban Troll, 23, of Sweden, was in very serious condition following surgery on an 8-inch gash in his right thigh.

A Norwegian woman, Anne Karin Ruan, 24, was treated for a 4-inch wound, also in the thigh.

Three other runners — two from Pamplona and Laura Grace Ryan, 19, of Texas —suffered minor injuries in the running and were released.

Junk mail piling up? REFUSE it

Most of us complain about the never-ending pile of junk mail that is dumped in our mail boxes. The average American received about 40 pounds of third-class bulk business mail last year. That amounted to about 300 pieces of mail for each of us. The total for the entire nation was some 63.5 billion pieces of commercial and nonprofit solicitations. Add to that another 13.5 billion catalogs. That was for a six-day week.

Like the weather, junk mail is something everybody talks about but nobody does anything about — at least most of us. Psychologists say that some people secretly like to receive junk mail. They ordinarily receive few letters. But when an advertisement arrives from a department store, it shows someone is paying attention to them. It offers recluses and others a sense of worth in the world.

We may groan about how some firm got our name and address, but 100 million of us bought something by mail last year. That's a jump of 70 percent in the past eight years. By now, we know how those companies got our names — they trade them like baseball teams trade pitchers and catchers. Even the Internal Revenue Service buys lists from firms to cross-check against tax returns. At times it appears the whole world is ganging up on us.

However, you can cut your unsolicited mail to a trickle by writing the Direct Marketing Association (DMA) at 11 West 42nd St., P.O. Box 3861, New York, N.Y. 10036. By sending your name and address to DMA's Mail Preference Service, you will be added to their "Name Exclusion List," which companies use to purge their mailouts to people who do not want to receive junk mail. You must include any and all names that you use. Every national direct-mail company honors these requests. That should eliminate about 75 percent of the junk mail that you receive.

You can also write "REFUSED" on the envelope of unwanted mail. By law, you can refuse unopened mail not registered or certified.

ANOTHER VIEW

Battle of sexes is about things remote

Fraternity brothers at Cornell call it "the driver." A Washington lawyer calls it "the zapper"; a New Yorker calls it "the clicker." Others say "the remote" or "the thing-ie." They all mean the same little black box that, having transformed television, now threatens male-female relations.

With broadcast television, people used remote controls mostly to zap commercials. With the spread of cable, and its 36 or 70 or 150 channels, the luxury has become a necessity. Now the remote is to TV what page-flipping is to magazines.

What does one do, for instance, late at night when the movie ends and on comes one of those hokey "infomercials," hosted by celebrities hustling miracle ways to lose weight or gain wealth? Zap! An instant remedy for all viewers, male or female.

The trouble arises from the word "instant," and the reason becomes evident in how differently men and women typically flick, click and zap.

He clicks quickly, pausing for barely a second on each channel until he has gone through them all. How long does it take, he will say, to decide, no, I don't want to call an 800 number to buy a 10-karat gold Black Hills ring.

She moves deliberately, pausing for 20, 30 seconds on each channel — even the Spanish-language soap opera. No one can tell, she will say, whether something is worth watching until you watch.

What is it about the clicker that so renders the genders? Comedian Jerry Seinfeld offers one explanation: "Because women nest and men hunt." Such speculation earns laughter; yet it does not reach the power question: Who, nester or hunter, controls the remote control?

It is, thankfully, a rare problem. All too often, he and she glumly agree that the right button to push is the one labeled OFF.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, July 9, the 190th day of 1991. There are 175 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 9, 1850, the 12th president of the United States, Zachary Taylor, died in the White House of apparently natural causes, having served only one year and four months of his term.

On this date:

In 1540, England's King Henry VIII had his six-month marriage to his fourth wife, Anne of Cleves, annulled.

In 1755, British Gen. Edward Braddock was mortally wounded as his troops suffered a massive defeat near present-day Pittsburgh during the French and Indian War. One survivor was an aide to Braddock — Col. George Washington.

In 1776, the Declaration of Independence was read aloud to Gen. George Washington's troops in New York.

In 1816, Argentina declared its independence from Spain.

In 1819, sewing-machine inventor Elias Howe was born in Spencer, Mass.

In 1918, 101 people were killed in the worst train wreck in U.S. history as an inbound local collided with an outbound express in Nashville, Tenn.

In 1947, the engagement of Britain's Princess Elizabeth to Lt. Philip Mountbatten was announced.

In 1951, 40 years ago, President Truman asked Congress to formally end the state of war between the United States and Germany.

In 1976, Uganda called on the U.N. Security Council to condemn Israel for its raid on Entebbe Airport July 4 to rescue hostages held by pro-Palestinian hijackers.

Latvians won't accept Soviet troops

Anderson

GULF OF RIGA, Latvia — One thing comes into focus on a beach overlooking this vast body of ice-free Baltic water. The primary reason Mikhail Gorbachev doesn't want to part with the three Baltic republics is military strategy. He needs these warm waters south of Leningrad as ports for the ships and submarines of his Baltic fleet.

On principle, Gorbachev doesn't want to lose any of three Baltic states because it would encourage other Soviet republics to break away, too. But we have learned from sources in the Baltics and U.S. intelligence sources, that Gorbachev is already planning for the possibility that the three states, and their coastline, may be lost to his control.

Top military surveyors have been making plans to buttress port facilities at Kaliningrad, a small Russian enclave on the Baltic Sea between Lithuania and Poland. If Gorbachev's troops based in the Baltics have to retreat to the port at Kaliningrad, there is only one way to do it — through Lithuania. Our sources tell us that while making public demands for a total withdrawal of Soviet troops, Lithuania is willing to negotiate safe transit for them, and maybe even willing to allow some of them to stay.

Lithuanian Foreign Minister Algirdas Saudargas hinted as much to us when he said it might be "necessary" to keep some Soviet troops in Lithuania as part of the Soviets' defense needs. "I regard this as a realistic compromise," he said. "Any presence of Soviet troops on Lithuanian territory is a compromise."

The Latvians are less accommodating. They will not abide any Soviet troops in a future independent Latvian nation. "We do not see any reason why they should stay in Latvia," Vice President Dainis Ivans told us. He said Soviet generals stationed there now have been asked why they need such a large contingent. The answer is, that the soldiers need to defend Latvia against American imperialism.

But among Latvians, there is no demand for that protection. Ivans said, "Our main goal is to destroy the communist system here and cover it with DDT so it can never grow again."

The Latvians have more reason to be sensitive about the issue than Estonia or Lithuania. The Soviet Union has enforced a "Russification" program in Latvia since World War II that has included replacing huge chunks of the native Latvian population with Russians and others. Joseph Stalin started the program by massive deportations and executions of Latvians. Meanwhile, Russians came in droves to settle in the warmer Baltic climate. Latvia became a haven for retired Soviet military officers — the Soviet equivalent of Sun City.

Latvian leaders told us they aren't worried about those Russians who would remain behind when Latvia won independence. In a March 3 advisory vote on the issue of independence, the result was overwhelmingly in favor of breaking away from the Soviet Union, even among voters in cities where the population is no longer predominantly native Latvian. The immigrants want to stay, and they apparently want to their independence from Moscow, too.

But some Latvians are afraid that time is running out for true natives, and that the immigrants will forever change their country, even if it wins independence. Romualdas Razukas, the leader of the Latvian Popular Front, pointed to the number of Soviet troops being pulled out of Eastern Europe who may end up in the Baltics. "It is not only a military problem, but a political one. These people are rude. They are not so shy as the specialists who were here earlier. They are demanding flats, places in schools, food, water, electricity and everything. But we don't have it." (The waiting list for apartments in Riga is 91,000 names long.)

Razukas said of the newcomers, "Everyone is thinking, how do we get rid of them? Everyone is angry. It is a great big problem."

CHARLEY REESE

Patriotism more than hating U.S.' enemies

Americans need to learn to love their country in the absence of a foreign enemy.

I have observed that many people equate patriotism with war or preparations for war. Moreover, the government subtly encourages that association of patriotism with war. If there are any television stations left which sign off these days, you may note that many of the video clips of the national anthem, supplied by the government, show military scenes with the playing of the anthem. The anthem itself is war-related.

Reese

Patriotism, an old word derived from the Latin, means love of the fatherland, and it is certainly appropriate in times of war and preparations for war. Most of the time, however, our nation is not at war. At any given time, most of us are not in the military services. Yet the need for and the value of patriotism does not vanish when the guns fall silent.

Loving our country has to mean more than just hating the designated foreign enemy on cue from our political leaders. In truth, hating a foreign enemy doesn't really equate with loving our own country. Some people hate the foreign enemy but do not love this country either. Some people are very good at hating but not very good at loving. Patriotism has to mean more than being proud of warplanes, missiles, and troops, or else it's just jingoism.

So what is loving our country all about? It's about the land itself and the people. That's all there is to a nation — land and people. If you don't care anything about the land and you're indifferent to the people, then obviously you don't love the country.

A true patriot is as concerned when his fellow Americans are unemployed as he or she is when they are under fire from a foreign enemy. A true patriot is as upset when the civil government fails as he or she would be when the military weapons failed. A true patriot will be as outraged by an elected politician who betrays his trust as he or she would be by a citizen who went over to the enemy in time of war.

The true patriot is concerned about degradation of the land from neglect or abuse just as he or she would be if the damage were caused by foreign bombs. A true patriot, while he may be sympathetic to the plight of foreigners, will focus his attention on the plight of his own people — his fellow citizens. A true patriot would not willingly see a single fellow citizen go hungry or die of neglect. He would insist that the government spend its limited resources on solving the problems of his fellow citizens. A true patriot rages when his politicians forgive foreign debt and foreclose on Americans; subsidize foreign development while watching American cities decay; squander tax dollars lavishly on themselves while telling Americans to get by on less.

Do you want to know who the real enemies of America are? They are those among us who care nothing for the land and nothing for their fellow citizens. They are those who cheat their fellow citizens, who waste their hard-earned money, who neglect their problems, who sell out their interests for personal gain.

They are men like John Sununu, who thinks he's so important that $4,000 worth of American sweat should be burned in jet fuel so he can go to the dentist. How many man-years of taxed-labor were consumed just to finance his personal trips? How many American children cry with a toothache because they can't afford a dentist?

When I think of people like a divorced mother who took a dangerous night job clerking in a convenience store just so she would have health insurance for an ill daughter and I see these (expletive deleted) squandering the people's money like Roman emperors, I develop a fine, permanent rage, like a red-hot coal in the center of my heart.

One day there will be a just society in our land and some people ought to tremble at the very thought of it.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Most Americans don't care about Sununu

I was reading the 932nd John Sununu story, column or analysis in the papers this summer. A subversive thought popped into my mind: Do most Americans care a tinker's curse about the travels and revels of Sununu? About his stamp collection, his plane rides, the wrath of his critics, the warmth of his defenders? All such matters have a foreignness to the daily concerns of the toiling classes.

Murchison

What has Sununu to do with the price of eggs in Arkansas? What's he to Hecuba or Hecuba to him? Where are the Sununus of yesteryear? Questions of this kind sizzle like microwave popcorn.

The kernel of an answer can be discerned: The Sununu story is a classic Washington story: by Washingtonians about Washingtonians, chiefly for the delectation of Washingtonians.

Sununu is the president's chief of staff. He matters because, to Washingtonians, Washington is the center of the universe, and the White House the center of Washington. The notion may be banal and absurd, but there it is.

Because of Washington's genial willingness to run things in behalf of the rest of the country, we must all from time to time indulge our betters in their kinky habits, such as rending each other limb from limb.

Do I see fingers wagging in my direction? Thought so. I hear it argued that Sununu's offenses are not imagined but substantive — that he has imposed on the taxpayers by traveling in unseemly and expensive ways.

Fine. I agree. Someone, the president preferably, should make him stop. The argument for his uniqueness is what puzzles.

A few days ago, L. Brent Bozell III of the Media Research Center blasted the Washington Post for its obsession with the Sununu story, vs. its indifference to similar stories about other, more politically correct Washingtonians.

Bozell found it enticing that the Post, so wrought up over Sununu's transgressions that it ran 25 stories on him in 68 days (including three pages on Sunday, June 23), that this same Post ignored the story of Rep. Les Aspin's $28,000 military plane ride last February. Aspin, to be sure, is a Democrat and chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

Bozell retailed several other travel scandals of minor, if any, interest to the Post. He concluded: "Clearly, the Washington Post is out to get John Sununu fired, one way or another ... John Sununu is the conservatives' standard bearer in the White House, and the chief impediment to the enactment of the kind of liberal agenda the pious scribes at the Post so dearly would like to see."

I'd bet dollars to doughnuts that Bozell is right. Still, we don't want to leave the matter there. What's really wrong with Washington stories?

It's that the people writing the stories rarely ask the right questions. They want to know who did what when. The question really is, how'd we get here in the first place?

Washington stories overwhelm us only because we have silently, consensually permitted Washington to overwhelm us. The president's chief of staff outranks any state governor. Where he treads, the earth groans, and forest animals run for cover. There is something wrong in all this; something contrary to the original American understanding of what government is and does.

It is widely alleged that the Sununu's root problem is arrogance. The problem really is the incalculable power of the government he serves: whose power merely feeds personal arrogance, hubris and disdain for mere voters, garden-variety taxpayers.

In Washington, the seat of power, you lose sight of these realities. You grope for the morning paper, firm in the conviction that life's supreme good is the amassing and wielding of power.

William Murchison's column is distributed by Heritage Features Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY

Man takes 'best friend' for ride

DEAR ABBY: "Liz in California" expressed her concern that pets in motor vehicles should be secured (buckled up) similar to small children. Well, here's another one for your "Now I've Heard Everything" file:

Van Buren

As I was driving along a Twin Cities freeway, I passed a man on a motorcycle doing no less than 60 miles an hour. Abby, he had a full-grown black Labrador dog perched behind him on the passenger seat of the motorcycle! The poor animal looked paralyzed with fear.

When I called the Minnesota Highway Patrol to report the cycle license number, I was told they could do nothing because the guy wasn't breaking any laws.

Abby, how about cruelty to animals? That terrified dog could jump or fall from the motorcycle and shatter all four legs on the concrete! Or, startled motorists could swerve out of control or be rear-ended slamming on their brakes, with a dog that size rolling down the pavement.

To me, it's just another indication that there is no shortage of idiots on the road in Minnesota. — SANDY IN MAPLE GROVE

DEAR SANDY: Why pick on Minnesota? There's no shortage of idiots on the road in any other state that has no law to protect man's best friend from this kind of brutality.

As a concerned citizen and animal lover, why don't you write a letter to the editor of your newspaper and cite this blatant cruelty? It might spur a state legislator to action.

DEAR ABBY: I fully agree with your response to the woman of good character in Anchorage, Alaska, who had bought a second-hand car and found $42 in the glove compartment. Her husband said that inasmuch as they had purchased the car "as is," she should keep the $42. You told her to return it.

Your advice was similar to the story told by Rabbi Simeon, whose students bought a donkey from a merchant to assist their teacher in his livelihood of selling flax. His students found a costly pearl attached to the neck of the donkey, and they said, "Rabbi, you will not have to labor any more — we found this precious gem on the donkey!"

Rabbi Simeon responded, "Does the seller know of this pearl?" They answered, "No."

The sage then said, "I bought a donkey, not a pearl." The jewel was returned.

As a rabbi concerned that people don't simply tell themselves, "Business is business," I am pleased you chose to print that woman's letter.

The great writer Macaulay wrote: "The measure of a man's real character is what he would do if he knew he would never be found out." — RABBI GEOFFREY BOTNICK, WILMETTE, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: I got a chuckle out of some of the messages left on telephone answering machines by people who had obviously misdialed. Add this one:

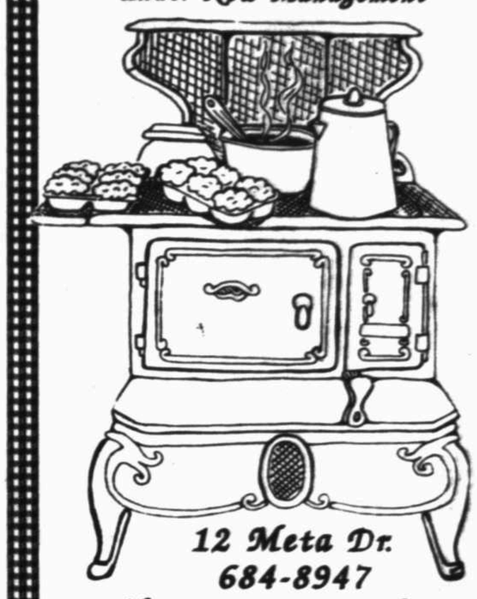

A female voice left this message on my machine: "Honey, I just came back from the doctor's office, and he says I'm pregnant."

Abby, I am a single man, living alone. I'm also ... 68 YEARS OLD

Abby's family recipes are included in her cookbooklet. Send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

For his mom's sake, find that man a wife!

It's time for another International Yenta Alert.

Bombeck

Crown Prince Naruhito, the heir to the Japanese throne, is 31 and not married. Sound familiar? Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, was 32 before he married, and the Queen never thought she'd get him off the dime, either.

Prince Naruhito can sit on his throne with an inflatable by his side if he so chooses, but it's his mother I bleed for. There is only one reason a child does not zero in on a bride and settle down by the time he is 30. He wants to make his mother miserable.

Take Prince Charles. For years, he dated horses and went to funerals. I ask you: Where are you going to find a bride in an atmosphere like that? I don't expect him to hang out at happy hour at TGIF's, but you have to get off that throne and mingle. I think it was only through tabloid pressure and the virgin data bank that he was able to find a suitable wife. Today, 10 years later, he has fulfilled his mother's wildest dreams of two children, an unhappy mate and a bad back.

Most parents today are asking their children to swim against the tide of the '90s. In my era, the battle cry from parents was, "We're not asking you not to get married. We're just asking you to wait." Today it's, "What are you waiting for?"

It's not the end of the world waiting until you're thirtysomething, but a pattern seems to be developing. Men in their 30s want to marry a woman with young batteries in her biological clock. A younger woman is more likely to bear children and come with less excess baggage than a woman his own age.

But I've digressed. Back to Japan's problem of finding a wife for their ruler-apparent. A magazine in Japan suggested his hair was the problem. It's long and straight and worn in the style of his father's. They're probably right. He's nice looking, has a steady job, a car and owns his own country. What more could you ask for?

If any of you know a nice, young girl who doesn't mind walking behind her husband, can give birth to male heirs and be happy with a career of smiling and waving, now is the time to make your move.

As for my own children, I encourage you to remember those inspiring words of John F. Kennedy: "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your mother."

Yoshie Enomoto, now 75, greets patrons at a Geisha house in a picture from her collection.

Japan's 'flower and willow world' wilts

By Mari Yamaguchi
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO — The once-haughty "flower and willow world" of the geisha has fallen to the level of advertising for recruits.

Fifty years ago, thousands of geishas hurried through neighborhood lanes every evening in the distinctive flowered kimonos and painted white faces.

Today, the few remaining in Tokyo appear regularly only in the famous Ginza shopping area, where they travel in black rickshaws to parties for wealthy businessmen and politicians at exclusive restaurants.

Houses of the flower and willow, traditional symbols of feminine beauty and sexuality, have been losing ground for two decades to more modern and pedestrian establishments.

Such places feature "hostesses" who, like the geishas, pour drinks and sweeten all-male parties with feminine banter. The word geisha literally means entertainer.

The slow disappearence of one of Japan's cultural icons inspired a call to action among shopkeepers in Asakusa, one of the few Tokyo neighborhoods to retain some of its traditional charm.

They want businesses to join in establishing a company to recruit about 15 women aged 18 to 25 for a three-month training program in the fine arts of coquetry and traditional entertainment.

Teruko Tominaga, owner of a noodle shop, said the company would provide kimonos, musical instruments and other items needed for parties in the traditional geisha style.

In return, businesses in Asakusa anticipate a tourist windfall.

Ms. Tominaga said the new geisha would receive a slightly higher salary than the average female employee in Japan, who normally earns about $15,000, half the pay of a man.

"Business in Asakusa has been declining, so we are hoping to revive geisha entertainment and promote tourism," she said.

For the first time in their 400-year history, even Kyoto's geisha houses have begun advertising. The ancient capital 235 miles southwest of Tokyo is considered a treasure house of traditional arts.

"How about maiko-san as a next career?" said a Kyoto ad in the popular magazine Travel Handbook. "If you're interested in becoming maiko-san, please give us a call."

Teen-age girls hoping to become geishas traditionally spend a few years qualifying to become apprentices, or "maikos," earning the right to wear trailing embroidered kimonos and high wooden clogs adorned with bells.

By the time an apprentice becomes a geisha, she usually is the mistress of a wealthy patron who provides her with expensive gifts and money, said Yoshie Enomoto, 75, who was a geisha in Tokyo for almost 35 years.

Geishas and bar hostesses share a multimillion dollar-industry called "mizu-shobai," or "the water trade." They fill the public role played in the West by wives, who are excluded from after-hours business socializing in Japan.

It's called the water trade because income, working hours, staff, customers and the product — liquor — are fluid.

For many women, the easy money to be made by providing a few hours of flirtatious companionship as a hostess is more attractive than the rigors of a geisha's calling.

"Being a geisha is not that easy; it's tough work," said Kazuo Seto, head of a geisha association in the oldest of Kyoto's five geisha districts.

Seto said a chronic shortage of geishas forced him to take the ad in the travel magazine.

"Now, many young women pursue higher education," he said. "The strict apprenticeship and hierarchical relationship are repelling them" from becoming geishas.

Lewis pushes for lottery, cooperation

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — State leaders Monday touted a lottery and cooperation as keys to solving Texas' budget problem without a major tax increase during the special legislative session.

House Speaker Gib Lewis stated flatly that lawmakers face the choice of a lottery or a huge tax bill to cover a projected $4.7 billion shortfall to pay for the current level of services over the next two years.

And Gov. Ann Richards urged her party members and Republicans to cooperate in order to pass a number of cost-saving measures proposed by State Comptroller John Sharp.

"This session is not a partisan session. This is a good-government session," Richards said after a luncheon meeting with Lewis, a number of House committee chairpersons, budget staff, and at least one senator.

"We have an opportunity that I think that we have not had since I've been in government: to have consolidation and cuts that have needed to be done for a very, very long time," she said.

Despite stepped up Republican criticism of Richards as the July 15 session draws nearer, Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland, chairman of the House Republican Caucus, agreed with Richards.

"I think the idea is that people across the state, Republican or Democrat, want to see cuts and the budget brought in line," he said.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said lawmakers will probably vote on a state-run lottery in the second or third week of the session. He said it would raise about $600 million in the first year of operation.

"I am certainly going to support it, going to push for it very hard," he said. "It's going to be a tremendous tax bill or a lottery. That's the choice they'll have."

Despite public opinion polls that indicate most Texans favor a lottery, the issue has consistently been rejected in the state House.

During the regular session, the House voted 90-56 for the lottery proposition. That is 10 votes short of the required two-thirds needed in the House to place the question on the ballot for voter ratification.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, who has been a frequent sponsor of the lottery, said the time is ripe for a lottery to clear the House hurdle because of the need to find revenue, and the sentiment against a tax hike.

"I would not want to have to face my voters having voted down a lottery and voted for a tax bill when I could have avoided a tax bill by voting for a lottery," he said.

If approved by the Legislature, the lottery question could be placed on either the November ballot, or in an earlier special election, Wilson said.

In another budget development, the president of the Texas AFL-CIO said organized labor supported most of Comptroller Sharp's audit recommendations, "in part because of the humane treatment of state employees."

'Air Rescue'

■ Aircraft-rescue/firefighting division chief hopes every landing at International airport is a smooth one.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The 12 firefighters assigned to Midland International Airport spend 200 hours a year training for an event they hope will never occur.

But that event — a major airline crash — is always a possibility. And it's up to Carl L. Rodgers to ensure that those 12 firefighters would be able to handle the situation.

"It's my job to see that their training is developed and their training is delivered," said Rodgers, a pilot and former paramedic who has been the Midland Fire Department Aircraft Rescue/Firefighting Division Chief since 1989.

Although there has never been a major airline disaster in Midland and crashes are relatively rare nationwide, Rodgers said the potential for crashes makes the airport a firefighting priority.

"The vast potential is where you get your justification," he said. "You take the Indy 500. They don't have that many major wrecks in the race, but they have the fire crews there ... because of the potential."

Flames hot enough to burn through an aircraft's metal hull within 90 seconds are what airport firefighters potentially could face if

Commissioners set to draw 'bottom line'

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Once again, the Midland County Commissioners' Court is preparing to do battle with the budget to somehow match anticipated revenues with proposed expenditures in the 1991-92 fiscal year.

The county's budget study starts at 9 a.m. Wednesday in the Midland County Courthouse.

"Trying to hold the budget is a non-ending battle," Commissioner Win Brown said Monday following a routine Commissioners' Court session.

The county's $18.7-million budget for 1990-91 is fueled by an 18-cent property tax rate, which brings in about a third of the revenue, and by fines, fees, sales tax, and service charges.

"We will go through it (the budget study) like we have in the past and trim and whack where we can," Brown said.

Brown, who in years past has termed Midland County's a "bare-bones budget," said Midland County historically has maintained one of the lowest tax rates in the state.

"We have people that want (county) services," he said, "and we try to deliver (them) within reason and within the law."

The county, Brown said, has had "a pretty lean budget.

"There have been no extravagant things. We are going to try to keep it down."

'We will go through it (the budget study) like we have in the past and trim and whack where we can.'

— Midland County Commissioner Win Brown

The county's employees "need an adequate salary," said Brown. County employees' salaries range from about $15,000 to above $30,000.

County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer said the Commissioners' Court is not going to spend any more money than it has to.

"Certainly, the disposition of this court is not to raise taxes if we have a choice," he said.

However, Seltzer said that neither he nor the four commissioners know "how much money we are going to have coming in. The (state) Legislature has made certain things binding on us that we are going to have to fund."

Even so, Seltzer said, the Commissioners' Court has always kept expenditures at a minimum and "will always try to do that and

County tables sex-ordinance amendments

File photo

In April, District Judge Lucius Bunton ruled portions of Ector County's sex-shop ordinance were unconstitutional.

Staff Report

ODESSA — Ector County commissioners on Monday tabled proposed amendments to the county's ordinance regulating sexually oriented businesses, Precinct 1 Commissioner Jack Crider confirmed.

Crider said the amendments, drafted in response to a federal court decision, likely will be approved at the commissioners' July 22 meeting.

He said commissioners decided to postpone action because the text of the amendments was not available for review until late Monday morning.

"We got our information in the morning about 9 o'clock and we met at 10 o'clock and we really didn't have time to digest it," Crider said.

Nevertheless, he said, he expects commissioners eventually to approve the amendments, which were prepared by the Ector County Attorney's Office.

The amendments are the county's response to U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III's April ruling that portions of Ector's sexually oriented-business law were unconstitutional.

Bunton ordered the county to pay $1,500 in damages, plus attorneys' fees, to the adult-bookstore owner and employees who challenged the ordinance in court.

Sharon Lee Wright, owner of the B&L Adult Bookstore at 5890 W. University Blvd., filed suit against the county last June after sheriff's deputies arrested her and five of her employees for disobeying the ordinance.

Those arrested — Ms. Wright, Terry Dale Miles, Loretta Mae Johnson, Jimmy Wayne Wright, Wanda Jean Barrett and Paul Eugene Hudson — claimed the law was unconstitutional and that the arrests violated their civil rights.

Although Bunton declared that there was no conspiracy to violate the plaintiffs' civil rights, he agreed with their contention that the ordinance requires revision.

County commissioners approved the ordinance in February 1990 and began enforcing it the following June. It requires inspections and licensing of sexually oriented businesses, including adult bookstores, massage parlors and nude dance clubs.

Among other things, Bunton said, the ordinance needs to be altered to include:

■ A provision stating why such an ordinance is needed in Ector County.

■ A requirement that the sheriff's office make a specific ruling on each license application it receives rather than "implicitly" de-

Midland planetarium offers safe solar-eclipse viewing

Staff Report

The Marian Blakemore Planetarium of the Museum of the Southwest will sponsor an eclipse viewing between 12:30 and 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

Planetarium director Mark Hartman will set up telescopes and direct safe viewing techniques. He also will demonstrate the making of pinhole projectors for watching the eclipse.

The eclipse Thursday is being called the "eclipse of the decade." In West Texas, it will be a 63 percent eclipse with first contact at 12:44 p.m. and last contact at 3:18 p.m. Europe will see a full eclipse as the moon passes between earth and the sun.

Hartman warns that the eclipse should not be viewed directly even with sun glasses. Two safe methods to avoid eye damage are with #14 welder's glass or with a pin-point projector.

The Marion Blakemore Planetarium is at the corner of K Street and Indiana Ave. For more information, call 683-2882 or 570-7770.

Vireos to live at expense of nest-raiding cowbirds, agency says

■ Plan is part of U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's recovery plan for endangered vireo.

By Bill Collier
New York Times News Service

AUSTIN — In order that several thousand black-capped vireos might live, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service says several billion cowbirds may have to be killed.

"It's an extreme measure, but that's what's called for in this case," says Bob Short, who heads the agency's main Texas office in Arlington. "I don't lose any sleep over it."

That proposal is a key element of the Wildlife Service's draft recovery plan for the vireo. The plan is being made available for public inspection and comment until July 15.

The vireo — a tiny songbird placed on the endangered species list by the Wildlife Service in October 1987 — is one of 220 avian species victimized by the cowbird, a nest parasite.

The Wildlife Service says the vireo is now extinct from its former breeding range in Kansas and that only an estimated 300 adults still nest in Oklahoma. Some 5,000 adult birds nest in Texas and an unknown number in the Mexican state of Coahuila. The bird winters on the Pacific coast of Mexico.

Cowbirds lay their eggs in the nests of other birds, preventing them from raising their own young. The cowbirds frequently destroy the eggs of the host birds. Should any of the host birds' eggs hatch, the much larger cowbird chicks easily win the competition for food from their adopted parents.

Biologists believe cowbirds evolved the habit so the species could survive while following the great buffalo herds that once inhabited North America. It is an instinct that has paid off handsomely: Its nesting habit has enabled the cowbird to vastly increase its numbers and expand its range despite the disappearance of the buffalo.

The effect has been devastating on birds such as the vireo and the golden-cheeked warbler, another Austin-area songbird on the endangered species list. Unlike some species in the cowbird's traditional range, the vireo and warbler have not developed effective techniques to foil the parasite.

Studies have documented cowbird parasitism of up to 90 percent of the vireo nests in some areas. The Wildlife Service blames the cowbird for the vireo's "alarmingly low" annual breeding success: as few as a single young per two pairs of parents on the average.

That's why cowbirds are trapped and killed around known vireo breeding sites. But the Wildlife Service says existing efforts just scratch the surface of the cowbird problem.

The agency's recovery plan proposes a "broad-based reduction" of cowbirds, "on the order of hundreds of millions, perhaps even several billion cowbirds."

Annihilating cowbirds on such a massive scale would require considerable study — both to make certain it is necessary and to determine how it can be accomplished. The plan proposes $50,000 for such research.

Eliminating billions of members of a species is a new and uncomfortable role for the Wildlife Service, which devotes its resources to helping threatened creatures like the bald eagle and whooping crane to survive.

Says Short: "There doesn't seem to be any other way. The cowbird is such a problem for reproduction that the vireo just wouldn't have a chance."

Clif (cq) Ladd, an Austin biologist and consultant who has studied both birds, says species such as the golden-cheeked warbler will benefit.

"I'm all for it," Ladd said. "It's not just the vireo. A lot of other species will be in similar trouble if we don't do something about the cowbird."

'It's an extreme measure, but that's what's called for in this case. I don't lose any sleep over it.'

— Bob Short, U.S. Fish and Wildlife

Short says cowbird populations would be monitored to make certain they would not be threatened by extermination.

Cowbirds eat both insects and grains, but Ladd doubts that eliminating enormous numbers of cowbirds would let the insect population get out of control. "I can't image how we'd be creating any biological imbalance. I think we'd be correcting an imbalance," he says.

At this point, the plan is just hypothetical: Short says the Wildlife Service has no idea how cowbirds could be killed on such a large scale.

"Possibly safe chemicals that would target that particular species, or a biological control that would affect the cowbird's reproduction," says Short. "Nothing we have or know about at the moment."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Arrests

Staff Report

ODESSA — Two criminal defense attorneys — husband and wife — were arrested Monday evening at their residence for possession of cocaine, according to Tom Finley, commander of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force.

Robert Allen Leahey and Eva Marie Leahey, 2701 Oakwood Drive, were arrested on a warrant issued by District Judge Gene Ater earlier that day following an ongoing investigation.

Bond is expected to be set today.

Law enforcement officials confiscated about one-sixteenth of an ounce of cocaine and drug paraphernalia.

Fatality

ODESSA — A 65-year-old man died in a one-vehicle accident in West Odessa Monday morning, police said.

An autopsy was ordered for Levi Otis Wright Jr., who sustained numerous cuts and lacerations to his head, police said.

Wright was driving a 1985 Dodge Caravan south in the 3400 block of North Country Road West about 7:05 a.m. when the accident occurred, police said.

The vehicle veered off the right side of the road, hitting a metal pole and a utility pole before crossing over to the left side of the road, striking another pole.

The vehicle came to rest just south of the Kermit Highway intersection.

Jailed

ODESSA — A 23-year-old man remained in jail Monday charged with an aggravated kidnapping that reportedly occurred on June 20, police said.

Andres V. Franco of Odessa remained jailed in lieu of a $20,000 bond set by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly.

Franco was arrested on a warrant in connection with an abduction reported by a 32-year-old woman, who claimed Franco, an acquaintance, forcibly took her to Goldsmith. The woman told police the man made her perform oral sex and unsuccessfully tried to have sexual intercourse with her.

Jailed

Two men remained jailed Monday night following an alleged failed robbery early Sunday morning, police said.

Mitchell Blane Ellis, 33, was arrested for robbery and Kevin Lynn Reeves, 28, for attempted robbery about 4:10 a.m. Sunday at Friend's convenience store, 2110 W. Front Street.

Bond was set at $20,000 for each man by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

The two were apprehended when police responded to a panic alarm at the store. Upon arrival, police were told by a clerk that Ellis, who was in the store, was in the process of robbing the place.

Reeves, in a GMC pickup truck outside, was subsequently arrested.

AIR: Airport-rescue crews train 200 hours yearly

(From 1B)

there were ever a major crash here.

"For years, the airport firefighter was sort of the step-child of the fire department," said Rodgers, who joined MFD in 1978. "Finally, most cities have begun to realize that the airport is where they need their best people."

How do they become the best? Through a never-ending regimen of classroom and field training that Rodgers coordinates.

Airport firefighters must learn the layout of the airport and how to communicate with the control tower; they must learn how to operate specially designed airport firefighting equipment, including pumper trucks and chemical sprayers; and they must learn something of Federal Aviation Administration regulations.

Training includes sessions at the International Aircraft Rescue/Firefighting Academy at Texas A&M University, where Rodgers serves as an instructor and curriculum coordinator.

There, firefighters try their hand at dealing with simulated crashes and the types of fires they'd have to extinguish if the unthinkable ever happened.

"The guys out here are required to do hot-drill fire training every year, and that's for everyone who works out here — even the relief people who come out here," Rodgers said.

Rescue training includes responding to a large-scale simulated disaster every three years. The next such disaster drill — a simulated airline crash with dozens of "fatalities" — is scheduled for later this month.

As far as classroom training is concerned, airport firefighters spend much of their time on aircraft familiarization — learning things like the location of emergency exits on various types of planes.

The training is required by the FAA, which keeps close tabs on Rodgers' procedures.

It was the FAA that suggested the creation of the position now held by Rodgers back in 1988, Airport Director Ken Day said.

In addition to training firefighters, Day said, Rodgers — an MFD employee — serves as a liaison between the airport and the fire department, keeping airport officials abreast of new safety regulations.

"I'm totally satisfied with the results we've had working through him," said Day, who added that Rodgers' training methods seem to be particularly effective.

For Rodgers, a licensed pilot himself since 1969, teaching firefighters about airplanes gives him an opportunity to combine his interest in flying with his passion for firefighting.

And getting to see crashes up close — the airport dispatches him to all accidents involving Midland-based aircraft — has had a sobering effect on him.

"It takes away a lot of the complacency of flying," Rodgers said. "It's made me more aware, more safety conscious. You've only got one chance to check it (the aircraft), and that's when you're on the ground, before you leave."

Although actual crashes are few, Rodgers said the airport has its share of scares — usually involving aircraft with apparent landing-gear problems. Most of the time, however, the problem is not with the landing gear but with aircraft warning apparatus.

"Ninety-nine percent of the time it's just a light bulb that's burned out or a microswitch that's gone bad," Rodgers said. Nevertheless, he said, fire crews scramble when they get an "unsafe gear" call.

"We treat everything as a worst-case scenario, and every time we train, we train for a worst-case scenario," he said.

Although such a scenario is unlikely, Rodgers said, airport firefighters don't seem to mind being "all dressed up with no place to go."

"Every one of them that works here takes a lot of pride in what they do," Rodgers said. "It's easy to motivate them — we just say, 'Your family is on this airplane. There's a problem. What are you going to do about it?'"

Bunton also pointed out that the ordinance does not define the terms "church" and "school," although it forbids sexually oriented businesses from locating within 1,000 feet of such institutions.

He wrote that while the distance rule is not necessarily unconstitutional, it is not sufficiently justified in the ordinance.

Crider said the proposed amendments "address all of the questions that he (Bunton) had."

10 people thrown from van in collision

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A car traveling the wrong way on an interstate collided head-on with a van Monday, causing the van to roll over several times and eject 10 of its 11 occupants, authorities said.

The collision occurred about 2:35 a.m. on U.S. 287 when the car was traveling south in the northbound lanes, police said.

Three of the passengers in the van, Sherry Byrne, Heather Caldwell and Brett Miller, were listed in serious condition Monday night at Northwest Texas Hospital, a nursing supervisor said.

The driver of the van, Cheryl Fletcher, of Garland, was not injured.

The hometowns for the other passengers were not immediately available.

BUDGET: Commissioners set for budget study

hold the tax rate down if at all possible."

But since the county has public services to fulfill, Seltzer said, "I cannot tell you that taxes won't have to be raised."

In setting up the budget study's time schedule, Seltzer slated Wednesday morning sessions with County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, District Attorney Al Schorre, and, if time permits, with County Court-at-Law Judges Jim Fitz-Gerald and Al Walvoord.

Those will be among the "more difficult" offices to work out budgets with, Seltzer said, due to the professional nature of the work and the salaries of lawyers and judges.

Additionally, commissioners will have to wait to set the salaries of the judges since, by law, the judges' salaries are linked to those of the Texas Supreme Court justices, whose 1991-92 salaries have not been set. In 1990, Texas Supreme Court justices were paid about $90,000 per year.

The law requires that the salaries of Texas District Court judges be 10 percent less than that of Supreme Court justices and that county court-at-law judges be paid $1,000 less than district court judges.

In the current 1990-91 fiscal year, Midland County's county court-at-law judges are being paid about $70,000 each.

Midland County's three district judges, Pat Baskin, John Hyde, and Dean Rucker, are paid by the state. The judges' 1990 salaries were $76,806 each, sweetened by about $4,000 in county funds.

At 1 p.m. Thursday, the Commissioners' Court is to give a cursory look at Sheriff Gary Painter's 1991-92 budget.

"That's not putting them under the microscope," Seltzer said. "That's just a quick once over" until more detailed studies are scheduled.

The sheriff's current budget is about $4.5 million. Of that, $3.77 million is in salaries.

The sheriff's 1990-91 salary is pegged at $44,699.

The salaries of most other elected officials range from the high $30,000s to the lower $40,000s. There are exceptions. The county attorney and the county judge, for examples, each draw almost $58,000. And the commissioners, who have the option of making their jobs full-time or part-time, each earn a base $28,185 per year, with additional seniority pay for years seved on the court. Additionally, each is paid $4,200 in travel expenses.

Commissioner Guy McCrary suggested that the less fiscally complicated departments — the "quick ones" — be interviewed early in the budgetary study so that the commissioners can "send them back for more information, which we always do."

"It's more of a workshop session," Dettman said of the study, which will continue into August and, possibly, early September.

By then, said Commissioner Durward Wright, the five members of the Commissioners' Court will "have to look at our bottom line, and see what our expenditure will be.

"If they don't match, we will have to do whatever is necessary to make them come close to matching."

The 1991-92 fiscal year begins on Oct. 1.

Going into the study, County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin said that unless taxes are increased, the Commissioners' Court may be faced with a $2-million shortfall.

But that, he said, is based on current in-house budget requests, which the commissioners traditionally have cut or, in Commissioner Brown's vernacular, "whacked."

"There could be a slight increase in the tax rate," Jarnagin said.

The county's 1990-91 tax rate is 18 cents per $100 valuation.

Create your own hearing aid with Beltone's new Composer

Josh Villasenor, A.C.A. Audioprosthologist, demonstrates a Composer hearing aid to J.D. McCaleb. Beltone Hearing Aid Center is located at 2002 W. Wall, in Midland. Call 682-2180 for a FREE hearing evaluation appointment or for more information about the Composer Hearing System.

If you are going to buy a hearing aid, you want it to sound great and to help you hear everything that you have been missing. And with Beltone's new Composer programmable hearing aid, you help create a personalized instrument that delivers the best possible sound for you.

By listening to various words and sounds through the Composer system, the customer can compare different settings and choose the combination that sounds best — in much the same way an optometrist shows a patient different lenses to select the ideal prescription.

Modern advances in digital technology give the Composer unbeatable flexibility. "Customers can't find a more personal choice for better hearing," said Josh Villasenor, manager of the Beltone Hearing Aid Center at 2002 W. Wall in Midland.

Unlike most conventional hearing aids which may need to be adjusted at the factory, the Composer is fine-tuned in the Beltone office. "Since customers can now help choose the best settings for their Composer hearing aids, they leave our office ready to enjoy the best hearing possible," said Villasenor.

For people who frequent noisy places, the optional noise reduction system in the in-the-ear model dramatically improves their ability to hear and understand when background noise is present.

An exclusive benefit of Beltone's Composer is its ability to be readjusted at any Beltone office offering the Composer system as the customer's hearing changes over time. This makes the Composer a lasting investment in good hearing.

The Composer comes in both discreet in-the-ear and small behind-the-ear versions, so more people can experience the truly customized fit and sound of today's programmable hearing aids.

The Composer is available at the Beltone Hearing Aid Center of Midland, 2002 W. Wall, which is offering FREE demonstrations of the Composer hearing aid system and FREE hearing evaluations. Anyone who brings in this story will receive $50.00 off the price of a Composer Hearing Aid. (This offer is not good with any other coupon or special offer).

Call 682-2180 to make an appointment. Beltone's business hours are Monday through Friday, 9:00 to 12:00 and 1:00 to 5:00.

Mid-West Door & Window puts out the fire of hot skylights

With hot weather here, this is the perfect time to explore the many options available to make your home more comfortable and energy efficient. Mid-West Door and Window now offers a solution to "put out the fire of hot skylights."

Whether your skylights are clear, tinted, insulated or white translucent — if they transmit light, they transmit heat. Skylight sunscreens made to fit on the outside of your skylights are a perfect way to block out up to 70 percent of the sun's heat while still letting light through.

These screens are made of a special anti-tear vinyl coated polyester. It's woven so the yarn is interlocking and then heat treated to bond the material for strength and durability. The cover has a double folded and sewn hem pocket that houses an architectural rubber shock cord for fastening. They are easy to install and are available in brown, white or gray.

In the winter, the close weave of skylight sunscreens does an excellent job in reducing the wind chill factor on the skylight's surface. This will maintain a warmer, more consistent surface temperature while reducing frost buildup on the exterior. If free solar heat is your goal, you can simply remove the cover in the winter and put it back in the spring.

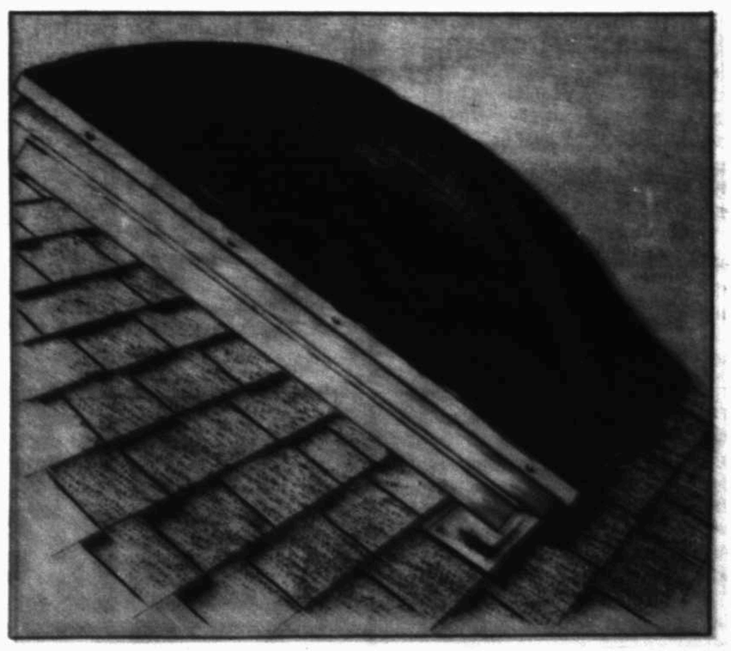

Sun screen is available for your windows as well. It also cuts as much as 70 percent of the sun's heat and glare before it strikes your window's surface. This protects your home's interior from fading and sun rot as well as providing daytime privacy.

The savings on energy costs alone will normally pay for the installation of sun screen in two summers or less.

Replacing old, outdated windows and doors can also boost your home's energy efficiency. Mid-West offers a wide variety of doors and replacement windows in both wood and aluminum frames with clear or tinted insulated glass.

So whether you're interested in skylights, windows, patio or entry doors, siding, gutter, sunscreens or plain screens, Mid-West has a complete line of quality products to choose from to enhance the beauty of your home as well as increase its value and energy efficiency.

Call 682-4632 or come by the showroom at 2400 W. Front and see all of the displays and visit with Mike Smith and his staff. Mid-West has been in business since 1976 and assures quality products with service after the sale.

Custom made skylight sunscreens block up to 70 percent of the sun's heat and still lets the light through. For more information, please call Mid-West Door and Window at 682-4632.

Bucy's surpise resignation leaves Capitol Hill scrambling

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The resignation of Fred Bucy as chairman of the state's Superconducting Super Collider commission reverberated in the top levels of the Bush Administration Monday as officials scrambled to address the troubling questions raised by Bucy's dramatic departure.

Bucy said in an interview Monday he quit as chairman of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission to focus attention on the failure of a U.S. plan calling for its allies to share the cost of building the $8.25 billion atom smasher.

The retired president of Texas Instruments said he has come to believe that the leading potential partner, Japan, will not join the United States in the venture, leaving Congress — and Texas — in the position of footing almost the entire bill.

The U.S. Energy Department moved quickly to soften the impact of Bucy's resignation. Skeptism has long simmered around the department's foreign participation program, but now those concerns have been thrust into the glare of public debate.

Deputy Energy Secretary Henson Moore, the top Administration official overseeing the project, issued a statement announcing that the Soviet Union has responded "positively" to an offer by the United States to participate in building the collider, planned for a site 35 miles southeast of Fort Worth in Ellis County.

"The two governments agreed to form a Joint Working Group which will work out the details of possible Soviet participation in the SSC," Moore said.

Moore provided scant specifics, but promised that the group "will begin work no later than August 1991."

Bucy's parting shot created high anxiety for Texas collider officials as well.

"If we don't get foreign funding, which I don't think we will, then I think the program will be canceled."
— Fred Bucy, SCC chairman

Roy Schwitters, director of the Superconducting Super Collider Laboratory in Dallas, Monday sent a memorandum to his staff disputing Bucy's claims, then took the unusual step of releasing the memo to the news media.

Schwitters wrote: "While it is true that foreign contributions to SSC construction are still uncertain, there have been recent, encouraging signs in this area as well."

Discusssions with the Japanese are ongoing, he said, adding, "Though, to be honest, it is too soon to know with any certainty whether they will bear fruit."

Schwitters urged lab employees, who are in the early stages of building the collider, to take in stride newspaper articles that "cast a negative light on the SSC project."

"We will, by virture of our achievements, silence the critics and underscore the value and importance of the SSC," he said.

Emerging from a meeting with Gov. Ann Richards, who received Bucy's resignation letter on Friday, U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, said Monday that he and the governor discussed strategy for keeping the project on track.

While acknowledging that international cooperation is a problem, Barton said Bucy was wrong to force the issue. Congress, he said, has yet to fully debate whether the project should be made in America or shared with foreign governments. Though construction of the collider is underway, Barton contended that such a debate is "premature."

"In any event, (Bucy) saying the project is in trouble is simply not true," Barton said.

In an interview, Bucy said, "If we don't get foreign funding, which I don't think we will, then I think the program will be canceled."

That is why Congress should immediately begin debating whether it is prepared to commit American taxpayers to paying the entire cost, which could run as much as $900 million a year by 1994 without Japan's help, Bucy said.

Contributions from countries other than Japan account for little, he said.

The Soviet Union, South Korea and the European community at best would be able to contribute about $400 million of the total cost, he said, while Japan is being counted on for roughly $2 billion.

Texas taxpayers have committed $1 billion to the project, much of which they stand to lose if the collider is scrapped.

Drawing on his overseas contacts as commission chairman and as a former Texas Instruments executive, Bucy said he has learned that neither of Japan's two most influential government ministries, those overseeing state finance and international trade and industry, have accepted the role of promoting the collider in the Japanese government.

The responsibility has fallen to the Ministry of Education, which is under pressure from the influential Tokyo University to stay out of the collider program and spend the money on improving secondary education.

Also, he said, President Bush tangled with Japan over paying a fair share of U.S. military costs in Operation Desert Storm, creating what many have acknowledged is a poor climate for a U.S.-Japan scientific joint venture.

If Bush believed he would get a favorable response, the collider likely would be on the agenda for his talks Thursday with Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, but it is not, Bucy said.

"The fact is, Japan is pulling back from the SSC, he said.

Moore, in a recent interview with Texas reporters, said Japan's interest remains strong. The delay, he said, is in the Diet, the Japanese parliament, which takes up to two years to act on international proposals.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said the issues raised by Bucy are unlikely to affect an expected Senate vote this week on a fiscal 1992 appropriation of $509 million for the collider.

But congressional opponents can be expected to seize on Bucy's resignation in the their ongoing campaign to stop the project.

"Even supporters are beginning to doubt foreign participation is going to come," said Dan Pearson, an aide to collider opponents on the House Science and Technlogy Committee.

Ryan continues to amaze

■ Legendary Texas pitcher Nolan Ryan came within six outs of what would've been his eighth no-hitter Sunday against California; instead, with the help of a catcher young enough to be his son, he pitched a masterful two-hitter.

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez was learning to walk when Nolan Ryan threw his first no-hitter. In his 16th major league start, the teen-ager came within six outs of catching Ryan's eighth wonder of the world.

With Rodriguez calling the shots on Sunday night, Ryan retired the first 18 batters before losing his first perfect game in the seventh and his no-hitter an inning later.

The 44-year-old Ryan and 19-year-old Rodriguez have become quite a pair. Theirs is the first battery in 28 years with a pitcher over 40 and a catcher under 20, since the California Angels duo of Art Fowler and Ed Kirkpatrick.

In three games with "Pudge" behind the plate, Ryan has a 1.96 ERA, having given up just four runs on five hits in 18⅓ innings while walking six and striking out 24. Ryan (5-4) left Sunday's game — a 7-0 Rangers' victory — after 8⅓ innings.

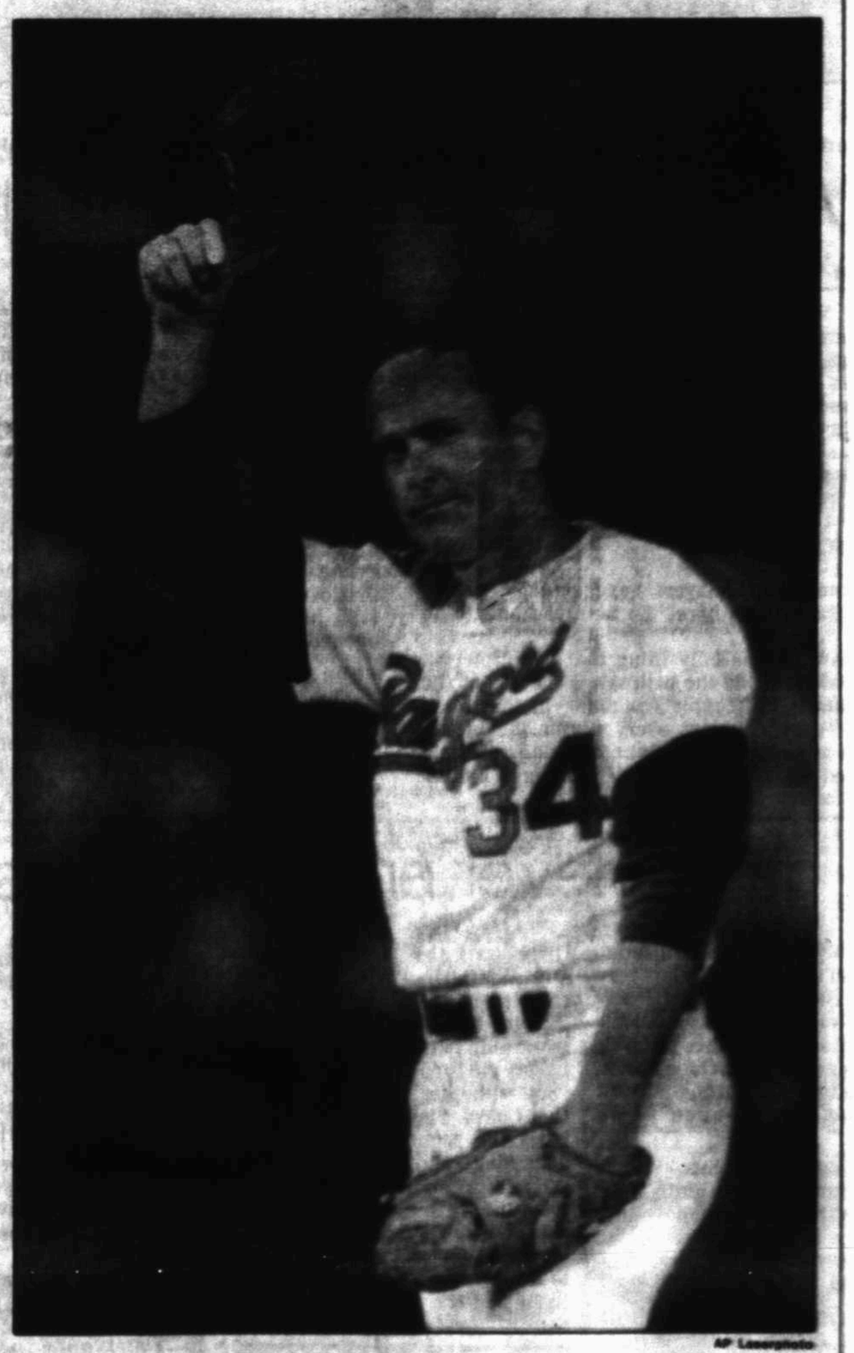

Take out homers last week by Oakland's Harold Baines and Jose Canseco, and Ryan has given up no runs on three hits in that span.

Ryan became a father nine days before Rodriguez was born in 1971, but the pair have hit it off like brothers since Rodriguez joined the club last month.

"I like him," Ryan said. "He knows how to call a game."

Rodriguez said he thought Ryan was going to get the no-hitter because his command and mechanics were razor-sharp until an 0-2 fastball to Dave Winfield tailed back over the plate in the eighth inning.

"I was excited," Rodriguez said, "because I called the game and he followed me. He got 14 strikeouts and I called those pitches."

Nolan Ryan acknowledges the cheers of his always-appreciative crowd with a tip of the cap.

Rodriguez has caught three no-hitters in the minor leagues, including one this year at Class AA Tulsa. "But this is the one we wanted," he said.

"He threw the fastball down the middle. He's got to throw the fastball outside," Rodriguez said. "If he

First-half memories

Associated Press

With winning streaks, losing streaks, managerial firings, fan abuse, another Nolan Ryan no-hitter and Rickey Henderson's record, the first half of the 1991 baseball season has already provided enough thrills and chills for most other full seasons.

Some of the moments and players to remember from the first half of the 1991 season:

■ Long Day's Journey ...

On April 10, Philadelphia and New York combine to walk 24 batters in a 10-inning game that took 4 hours, 51 minutes to complete before the Phillies won 8-7. The Phillies walked 15, including six by starter Jose DeJesus in 1 1-3 innings.

■ Comiskey Crush

The Chicago White Sox opened the new Comiskey Park on April 18, and lost 16-0 to the Detroit Tigers. The White Sox became the fifth team shut out in the opener of their current ballpark, joining Houston, Seattle, Cleveland and Milwaukee.

■ Moving Managers

Six managers lost jobs in the first half the season: Nick Leyva (Philadelphia), Don Zimmer (Chicago Cubs), Buck Rodgers (Montreal Expos), Frank Robinson (Baltimore), John Wathan (Kansas City), John McNamara (Cleveland). Leyva was fired after 13 games and replaced by Jim Fregosi. It was the third fastest firing in baseball history. In 1988, the year Baltimore lost its first 21 games, the Orioles sacked Cal Ripken Sr. six games into the season.

■ Wild Thing

On April 28, Philadelphia's Jason Grimsley threw a wild pitch in his ninth consecutive appearance to set a major-league record. Jaime Cocanower of Milwaukee set the previous record in 1988.

■ In a Fog

The New York Mets beat San Diego 6-3 on April 30 at Shea Stadium in a game shortened to 6½ innings by fog.

■ May Day

On the afternoon of May 1, Rickey Henderson stole his 939th career base to break Lou Brock's all-time record. A few hours later in Arlington, Nolan Ryan pitched his seventh career no-hitter, beating Toronto 3-0.

■ Tall Tale

Seattle's Randy Johnson, 6-foot-10, and Baltimore's Ben McDonald, 6-foot-8, opposed each other on May 12th in the tallest pitching matchup in baseball history.

Authorities conclude anti-steroid sweep

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Law enforcement officials, flexing new weapons against the sale of anabolic steroids as body-building drugs, arrested more than a dozen people on Monday in Arizona, the Drug Enforcement Administration said.

The arrests in the greater Phoenix area concluded a sweep begun there last week and raised the total number booked to 31, officials said.

The operation occurred about a week after former football star Lyle Alzado publicly blamed steroid use for his inoperable brain cancer, and it represented the first major enforcement action since trafficking and possession of steroids were subjected to tougher federal penalties in February.

In addition to the arrests, authorities seized four businesses — three gyms frequented by body builders and a liquor store — more than $95,000 in cash, two dozen firearms, four vehicles and thousands of steroid pills, said DEA spokesman John Albano in Phoenix. Ten homes as well as the businesses were searched, he said.

The alleged steroid sales were primarily to people who work out at local gyms and health clubs, he said. Much of the distribution was done by people who also use the drugs and who would buy for themselves and their friends to bulk up and gain a competitive edge despite the medical risks.

"There were some real hulksters" among those arrested, Albano said, but he said he knew of no resistance by any of those taken into custody.

The Phoenix Police Department learned of the problem when a local woman complained in March that her teen-age son had been offered steroids, Albano said. The police and the DEA then began an undercover investigation, he said.

"We have eight individual cases stemming from this one investigation," he said.

Two "principal subjects" of the investigation were arrested Monday, Albano said. He identified them as Thomas Ruffino, 37, owner of a seized gym, and Robert Clapp, whose age and occupation were not immediately available.

"Clearly, we have a problem with abuse of anabolic steroids in our country, and much of that is centered around athletes and body-builders, and regrettably some adolescents who are trying to improve their physical appearance," DEA Administrator Robert C. Bonner said Monday.

Bonner stressed that steroids now carry two dangers: legal and health.

"I think it's cases like the one that's being brought in Phoenix that are going to help put out the message that there are some very severe federal penalties for individuals who possess or sell anabolic steroids," Bonner said as he headed to Arizona for a news conference Tuesday.

The Anabolic Steroid Control Act raised the maximum penalty for trafficking and illegal dispensing of anabolic steroids to five years in prison and a fine of $250,000. It also says possession of even small quantities of the drug for uses not validly prescribed by a doctor is a federal crime punishable by a maximum of one year in prison and a minimum $1,000 fine.

As usual, managers, fans differ in selections

Associated Press

Darryl Strawberry, Ken Griffey Jr. and the Alomar brothers may be the fans' favorites, but they have no business starting the All-Star game, major league managers say.

Rickey Henderson, Mark McGwire and Chris Sabo also would not be in Tuesday night's lineup if managers picked the teams, a survey by The Associated Press shows.

Twenty managers, including recently fired John McNamara, selected starters for their league. Several did it under the condition of anonymity.

Strawberry, the fans' top choice among National League outfielders, was not chosen by any of the eight NL managers. Strawberry is batting just .229 with eight home runs and 30 RBIs, and will skip the game to rest his sore shoulder. He has been voted to the starting lineup in seven of the last eight seasons.

"Darryl Strawberry doesn't belong on the team based on the year he's having," St. Louis manager Joe Torre said. "That shows why the fans don't pick the best team. A lot of times they just vote for somebody they're heard of or seen on television some time."

Tony Gwynn, who will start in the outfield, was the only unanimous pick among NL managers. He is hitting a league-leading .358.

David Justice, sixth in the fan balloting, was second among NL managers in the outfield with three votes. Andre Dawson, elected to start, tied for third with Brett Butler, Willie McGee and Felix Jose, each with two.

Griffey led AL vote-getters, but was picked by only one manager — his own, Seattle's Jim Lefebvre. Rickey Henderson and Dave Henderson were the fans' other choices for the outfield.

According to the managers, it should be Dave Henderson, Joe Carter and Kirby Puckett, each with seven votes. Carter and Puckett both made the team as reserves.

Sandy Alomar Jr., selected by fans as the AL catcher for the second straight year, was picked by just two managers. Instead, Detroit's Mickey Tettleton and Minnesota's Brian Harper were tied with three each.

"The fans voted and I'm going to the All-Star game. But it was a much better feeling last year," said Alomar, batting only .241 for Cleveland. "I had great numbers. This year, it has been different. I've been bothered by injuries, and the team has been struggling."

Alomar's brother, Roberto, got nearly twice as many fan votes as Julio Franco for the AL's spot at second base. But Franco was picked by eight managers, and Alomar just four.

Franco is hitting .318 with nine home runs and 40 RBIs, plus 17 stolen bases, for Texas. Alomar is batting .283 with five homers, 37 RBIs and 27 steals.

Franco and Alomar have been feuding since the results were announced. Franco said he "knows he's better," but Alomar said his rival is "going to have to wait five or six innings before he gets into the All-Star game."

McGwire was voted the AL's starting first baseman for the fourth straight year, but was not picked by any managers. He's batting .201 and is hurt. Cecil Fielder, the managers' top pick with six votes, will start.

Sabo won the popular vote for the second consecutive season as the NL's third baseman, although only one manager chose him. Instead, Howard Johnson, listed on the ballot as a shortstop, was selected by four managers.

"He definitely belongs on there ahead of Sabo," Torre said. "Based on his performance this year, Terry Pendleton belongs."

'91: Thrills, chills aplenty for ball fans

(From 1C)

Yankee Stadium on May 13. The fan, Ken Shabby, yelled something about Madonna.

✓ Cleveland outfielder Albert Belle, who spent 10 weeks in an alcoholism rehabilitation program last summer, hit a fan in the chest with a baseball after the fan, Jeff Pillar, jokingly invited him to a keg party.

✓ On May 24, Gregg Jefferies of the Mets sent an open letter to the fans explaining why he wasn't a crybaby.

■ It's Easy Being Greene

In perhaps the most surprising event of the first half, Tommy Greene of Philadelphia pitched a no-hitter at Montreal on May 23 and beat the Expos 2-0.

■ Batting Practice

After scoring no runs on 13 hits in 1-0 loss at Pittsburgh on June 7, San Diego came back to beat the Pirates 11-0 with 18 hits the next day.

■ Easy as 1-2-3

Philadelphia rookie Andy Ashby struck out the side on June 15 against Cincinnati on just nine pitches. It was only the 12th time in National League history that it had been accomplished, and the first time by a Phillies pitcher.

■ Best Performance by a Batter

Chris James drove in nine runs and broke Cleveland's club record for RBIs in a 20-6 rout of Oakland on May 4. James hit a pair of three-run homers, an RBI single and a two-run single in five at-bats. Earl Averill set the Indians' record of eight RBIs twice in 1930.

■ Worst Performance by a Batter

Darryl Strawberry struck out five times and dropped a fly ball for a three-base error in Montreal on May 1.

Wrigley Field, there's no chance of that happening Tuesday night. At the first hint of showers, the 22-million pound roof will shut in 20 minutes — it takes less than $20 in electrical costs to close it.

"To try to figure out how the roof opens and closes is just amazing to me," Milwaukee's Paul Molitor said. "We played the first game here and what I remember is that it started raining and as the roof started closing, the pitcher and batter were in a dry area, but in between them it was raining."

"I know some players have actually walked along the catwalk here," he said. "I'd love to do that."

Meanwhile, the only thing that has grown in two seasons inside the ballpark is the size of the story about the couple frolicking in that hotel room. To hear it now, every person in Toronto was in attendance that night, and none of them watched the game — kind of making it Exhibition Stadium II.

"If you don't like it here. ... Every day I can't wait to get to the ballpark," said Joe Carter, traded to Toronto last December. "Every night, 50,000 fans come to the SkyDome and playing here is just like playing in a country club."

And, what a perfect place it is to house all the hoopla. Baseball blending with entertainment in a stadium with all the attractions of an amusement park.

More than 50,000 will be on hand for the big event, including President Bush and Canadian Prime Minister Mulroney. The 70 hotel rooms that overlook center field, ranging from $150 to $750, have been sold out since before the hotel opened two years ago.

The Hard Rock Cafe in right field isn't taking any more reservations, and the fancier Windows on SkyDome in center, where Jose Canseco once hit a ball that dropped in for lunch, is also booked. Maybe McDonald's, with its McHotDog, would be a better choice.

All-Star starting lineup announced

Associated Press

TORONTO — As always, a lot of All-Stars mean a lot of lineup switches for the All-Star game.

Tony Gwynn, who usually bats third and plays right field for San Diego, will lead off and be in center field for the National League on Tuesday night.

"This is my seventh game, and I've been in right only once," Gwynn said, without complaint. "Usually, Darryl Strawberry is over there."

Strawberry was elected to start, but is injured and will not play. So this time, Gwynn is moving to accomodate Andre Dawson. Gwynn played some center field last season, but has not been there this year.

Gwynn, the leading hitter in the majors at .358, will bat first and be followed by Ryne Sandberg and Will Clark. Cleanup hitter Bobby Bonilla also will be out of position — in fact, he's got no position because he will be the designated hitter.

Cincinnati's Chris Sabo and St. Louis' Ozzie Smith, who each usually bat near the top of their lineups, have been dropped to make room for others. Sabo will hit seventh and Smith, batting .315, will be ninth.

RYAN: Perfect game never entered Texas pitcher's mind throws the fastball outside, Winfield's got to have very long arms."

(From 1C)

Winfield, an unlikely culprit, stroked the pitch into center field. Nobody else had come remotely close to getting a hit.

"I guess I'm the only guy old enough to figure him out," said the 39-year-old Winfield.

Ryan said his fastball to Winfield was supposed to hit the outside corner, but it tailed, and so did Ryan. His momentum off the mound carried him too far and he wasn't able to grab the comebacker.

Winfield was least likely to break up Ryan's latest no-hit bid. He had struck out his first two times at bat and was 1-for-22 lifetime off Ryan with 13 strikeouts.

"I wasn't going to take very many pitches because of the way the strikes were being called," Winfield said. "If the pitch is close, I'm going for it. Once I hit it, I'm thinking, 'Go through. Don't hit a bag and bounce to an infielder.'"

Ryan allowed two hits — Gary Gaetti doubled in the ninth — as he helped the Rangers move into first place in the AL West at the All-Star break for the first time since 1983.

The perfect game ended with the first batter in the seventh when Luis Polonia drew four consecutive balls after falling behind 0-2.

"When Polonia walked, you have a tendency to go, 'Whew! There goes the perfect game,'" said Winfield. "You almost get complacent."

Ryan said losing the perfect game didn't affect him because he never envisioned throwing one, "not with the history of control that I have. You can count on one hand the number of times I've gone nine innings with no walks."

Ryan was attempting to become only the fifth pitcher in major league history to throw two no-hitters in one season. The last one to do it — you guessed it — was Ryan in 1973.

Ryan is the only pitcher in baseball history to throw more than four no-hitters.

The crowd of 37,307 got their money's worth from Ryan, who fanned a club record seven consecutive hitters and caught eight batters looking at third strikes.

Winfield and Dave Parker criticized umpire Durwood Merrill's strike zone, but California manager Doug Rader refused to concur, saying he didn't want to tarnish the accomplishments of Ryan, who threw 76 of 110 pitches for strikes.

"You really have to watch the reaction of the hitters to tell how well a pitcher is throwing," Rader said. "I didn't have to look very hard."

Tour de France

DIJON, France (AP) — A quick look at what happened Monday on the Tour de France:

Stage
The third stage began the real Tour after leaving the vicinity of Lyon and headed north to Dijon a distance of 131 miles, on mostly flat ground.

Weather
It was a third consecutive hot and humid day. During the stage, temperatures rose to 85 degrees.

Stage Winner
Etienne de Wilde of Belgium, who finished in 5 hours, 15 minutes and 11 seconds. Nearly all of the other riders finished in the same time.

Overall Leader
Rolf Sorensen of Denmark holds on the second consecutive day.

How The Favorites Fared
All the leaders finished in the same time as the stage winner and the overall standings remain unchanged.

Greg LeMond, U.S., overall second, 10 seconds behind; Erik Breukink, Netherlands, third, 12 seconds behind; Laurent Fignon, France, 20th, 1:46 behind; Gianni Bugno, Italy, 57th, 2:33 behind; Pedro Delgado, Spain, 84th, 2:38 behind; Claudio Chiappucci, Italy, 89th, 2:40.

Tour Tidbit
In the 1908 Tour one of the stages ended in Dijon. It was won by Frenchman Rene Pottier who then captured the Tour de France title. A year later Pottier, who never smiled, was found hanging in his garage.

Quote of the Day
"Breukink is a favorite. He has a very good chance of winning the Tour. But LeMond is really the big favorite." — Sean Kelly, who has been riding in Tours de France since 1978.

Angels downs Missions, guarantee series win

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — Midland assured itself of its first road series win against a Western Division opponent this season, as the Angels took a 4-2 victory over the San Antonio Mission in Texas League play here Monday night.

The Angels, now 9-8 in the league's second half, have won four of the first five games in the scheduled six-game series against the Missions (8-9).

Midland scored all its runs in the second inning and Angel starting pitcher Todd James (9-4) made the four-run lead stick. James allowed six hits and two runs while striking out six in eight full innings.

On one down note for the Angels, center fielder Reggie Williams saw his 14-game hitting streak snapped with an 0-for-3 performance at the plate.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JULY 9, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The spotlight is on the things you treasure most in life — loved ones, home and travel. Stay on your toes! A job promotion is most likely in September. Consult family members before agreeing to a major move in November. An unexpected career or financial opportunity beckons in December. You may have to work longer hours in early 1992. A temporary sacrifice will bring handsome rewards.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Tom Hanks, Jimmy Smits and Fred Savage, actress Kelly McGillis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A far-reaching agreement will provide you with a brighter and more secure future. Listen to friends who have had plenty of experience. Mixed trends require patience and persistence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your day may be filled with meetings, discussions and phone calls. Long-range plans begin to take shape. Advance your ideas at an opportune moment. A former employer may have need of your talents.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Although active involvement with a community group may not suit your mood today, the benefits could be greater than you imagine. Be willing to learn from others. Romance is on a roll.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make requests rather than demands and your loved ones will be more willing to offer their assistance. What happens at work this week will be very enlightening. Something you visualize now can come to pass.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A member of the opposite sex boosts your lagging spirits today. Go ahead and let your hair down when talking with a close relative. The results will be positive. Focus on the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your savings grow, thanks to changes in your spending habits. Show your best side at work and a major policy decision will be favorable. You are surprised to hear what the boss is thinking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are able to move ahead with a new project. Do not let an emotional upset delay progress. You cannot afford to let other people interfere in your financial decisions now. Stand firm.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The spotlight is on your relationship with your mate or business partner. Underlying conflicts may come to a head. It will not be as difficult as you think to resolve your differences. Compromise!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A hidden talent comes to the surface. Travel plans may have to be put on hold while you deal with more pressing matters. Make certain you have all the financial details.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some important decisions must be discussed. Your relationship with your mate picks up nicely. There may be a special event planned. Children contribute to your domestic happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Both your personal finances and joint holdings are in the spotlight. While you could be successful in landing a contract, you should still curb a tendency to be extravagant. Romance sizzles!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may feel like splurging on your loved ones now. Be careful not to deplete your bank account. If your energy is low, make dietary changes and get more exercise. Romantic ties will deepen.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are sentimental, home-loving and highly intuitive. These youngsters are loath to part with any of their toys and regard their cluttered bedrooms as treasure troves. Humor these moody children when they are down in the dumps but do not commiserate! Sympathy will make them brood even longer.

The bidding:

Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

Good technicians don't like to have to guess the location of a key card. By delaying the decision as long as possible, they hope to garner enough information to change a 50-50 proposition into a sure thing.

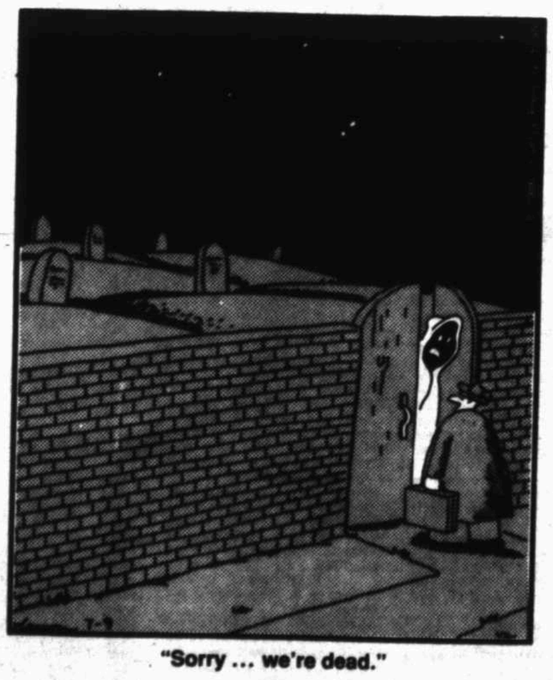

North would rate high on our list of considerate partners. Since South could have a relatively weak hand for his one-spade bid in the balancing seat, North made a jump raise to three spades rather than hang partner for not selling out by leaping to game. With a very sound reopening bid, South proceeded to game forthwith.

The defense started with three rounds of hearts. Since declarer would have to lose a trick to the ace of trumps, the contract hinged on finesses in the minor suits. The club finesse could only be taken one way, but either defender could be played for the queen of diamonds. South decided to consign that card to the opening bidder and eventually finessed West for the lady—down one.

Rather than arbitrarily relegate her majesty to either defender, declarer should proceed on an exploratory mission. After winning the third heart, declarer should force out the ace of trumps. Once trumps have been cleared, the mandatory finesse of the queen of clubs is taken and, when that wins, South should pause to take stock.

What has declarer learned so far? West, who had only four hearts, has a balanced hand with 14 known points—ace-king of hearts, ace of spades and king of clubs. Had West held the queen of diamonds, that defender would have started with a balanced 16 points and stoppers in all suits—an automatic one-no-trump opening bid! Since West had opened one heart, the queen of diamonds had to be with East. Therefore, declarer should cross to the king of diamonds, finesse the jack and claim the contract.

Columnist Lewis Grizzard signs to record two albums

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Syndicated columnist Lewis Grizzard has signed on with Sony-Tree music publishers to record two albums on which he'll sing, but he's modest about his vocal abilities.

Grizzard

"They've got computers up here, they can make my dog sound like George Jones and they can make me sound good," Grizzard said Sunday. "I don't think I'm going to get anywhere particularly with the lilt of my voice."

Songwriting has its advantages, said Grizzard, whose books include "When I Get Back to Georgia, I'm Gonna Nail My Feet to the Ground."

"You write a good chorus, you ain't got to write another one, you can keep going back to that one. In a column you can't repeat paragraphs," he said.

Grizzard plans to record a comedy album this month that will include three songs. An all-music record will follow later.

GENEVA, N.Y. — Actor Christopher McDonald, who plays Geena Davis' lout of a husband in "Thelma and Louise," said he doesn't consider the female buddy movie a feminist film.

"I think all the feminist stuff is a lot of baloney," McDonald said in a recent telephone interview with the Finger Lakes Times of Geneva.

"Just because a woman wrote it, and two women star in it, that doesn't make it feminist. Just because we're in supporting roles to the women doesn't make it a feminist film. Just watch how many movies come out now about pistol-packing mamas."

McDonald, a native of Romulus, said the men in the movie who are the targets of the women's wrath deserve it.

"There are guys like the ones we portray," he said.

McDonald, who lives in Lake Arrowhead, Calif., was engaged to Davis in 1985 until she left him to marry actor Jeff Goldblum, whom she later divorced.

McDonald said he and Davis were able to work amicably on the set, and the two even became friends again.

"Having that baggage only helped our performance," he said.

RICHMOND, Va. — The son of retiring Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall said his famous father never pressured him to follow in his footsteps, but was disappointed when he left college to become a policeman.

"He didn't downgrade me or talk down to me," State Police Sgt. John W. Marshall, 33, said recently. "I know him well enough, I could tell when he's disappointed. I felt pretty bad about it. I told myself I was going to go back to school."

A few years later, while working shifts as a trooper, John Marshall went back to Georgetown University part-time. He kept it a secret from his parents, and finished his degree in government and sociology in 1986.

CLEARWATER, Fla. — Now that Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf is a national hero, unrelated Schwarzkopfs say their oft-maligned moniker is getting them more than a little attention.

Schwarzkopfs, Schwartzkopfs and Schwartzkoffs are being bombarded with strange telephone calls, mail addressed to the general and requests to meet the cherubic-faced military leader who commanded some 540,000 U.S. troops during the Persian Gulf War.

"In any store I go to, the minute you hand them a charge card they have to ask," said Jean Schwarzkopf of New Port Richey.

Friends and strangers pose the same questions: Are you related to the general? And can you get me an autographed picture?

SPOLETO, Italy — Gian Carlo Menotti, Pulitzer Prize-winning composer, director and impresario, showed no signs of slowing down as he celebrated his 80th birthday with a surprise appearance in one of his operas.

Menotti

Sweltering heat didn't stop friends and townspeople from turning out Sunday to applaud Menotti, who turned a sleepy medieval hill town into a thriving center by founding the Festival of the Two Worlds here 34 years ago.

Menotti's success in Spoleto led him to found similar festivals in Charleston, S.C., in 1977, and in Melbourne, Australia, in 1986.

His day started at 9 a.m. when a brass quintet serenaded him from outside the palace where he lives during the festival. In the evening, Menotti made a cameo appearance in the first scene of his most recent opera, "Goya," in its European debut at the festival.

Menotti capped off the day at an open-air dance in his honor. As Menotti sat with his family, some 700 people sang "Happy Birthday."

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined slightly in quiet trading today after the market in Japan tumbled to its lowest level of the year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .67 to 2,931.80 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outstripped gainers by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 615 up, 820 down and 557 unchanged.

An index of Tokyo stock prices fell 3.15 percent overnight, still under pressure from the scandal in the Japanese securities industry.

Analysts say Wall Street traders are worried that international investors suffering losses in Japan might choose or be forced to cash in some of their U.S. holdings.

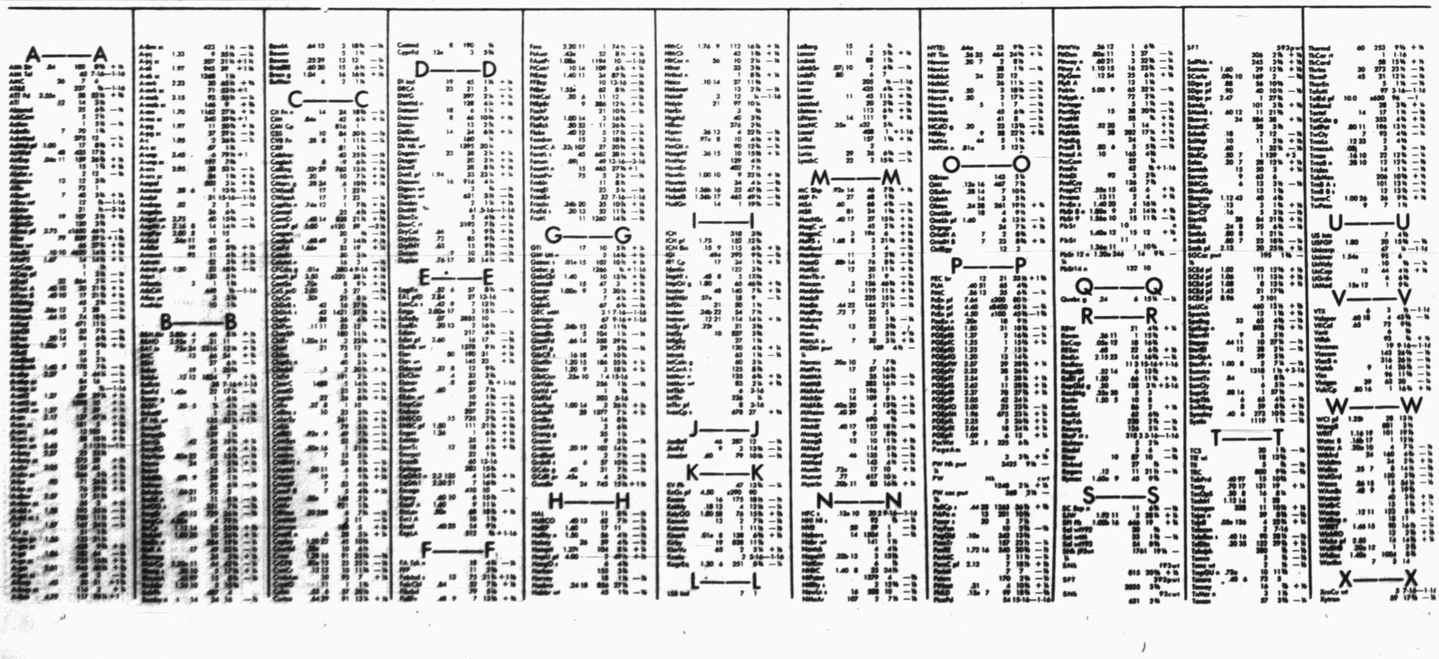

At the same time, the U.S. market also had to contend with uncertainty about the outlook for both interest rates and corporate profits.

Earnings reports for the second quarter are due out in large numbers over the next two or three weeks.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines gained ¾ to 99%; General Motors rose ¼ to 42¾; Philip Morris was unchanged at 65%, and American Telephone & Telegraph was down ⅛ at 38¾.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .02 to 204.94. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.23 at 358.18.

Prices climb

NEW YORK — Oil prices rallied Monday in response to a pipeline problem in the North Sea and anticipation that gasoline demand might pick up. West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $21.24 per barrel, up 35 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. After the market closed, local crude purchasers such as Permian Corp., Scurlock Oil and Texaco Trading and Transportation raised their posted price 25 cents to $20.

Traders said the prices were moving higher amid a follow-through to buying that began on Friday, when Shell U.K. Exploration and Production said seepage from a North Sea pipeline was forcing it to divert some oil production into storage, keeping some 102,000 barrels off the market each day.

T-bills mixed

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities were mixed in Monday's auction. The Treasury Department sold $10.5 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.58 percent, down from 5.59 percent last week. Another $10.5 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.71 percent, unchanged from last week.

AT&T, Sony agree

NEW YORK — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. on Monday said it would lease the company's landmark headquarters building to Japan's Sony Corp. AT&T said it would remain a New York-based company and would move its executive offices from the Madison Avenue skyscraper to another site in the city. It said it had not selected that site. Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

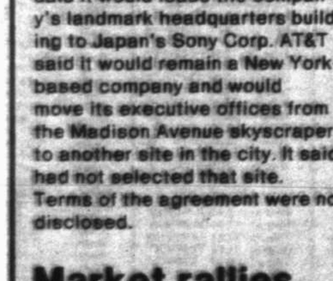

Market rallies

NEW YORK — The stock market snapped out of an early sinking spell to post a moderate gain Monday. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down about 25 points in the early going, was up 29.52 points at 2,961.99 by the close.

Dollar loses

NEW YORK — The dollar lost ground against most major currencies Monday amid worries over German interest rates and a reduction of tensions in Yugoslavia. Gold was slightly higher. The dollar fell to 1.8110 German marks in European dealings, down from 1.8336 late Friday.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.48 yen to a closing 138.75 yen.

Japan cracks down on brokerages

Finance Ministry restricts 'Big Four' brokerages' business dealings

TOKYO (AP) — The government on Monday cracked down on Japan's "Big Four" brokerages, temporarily restricting business dealings and ordering them to stop compensating favored clients for stock market losses.

Critics said the punishment amounted to a slap on the wrist for the firms — Nomura, Nikko, Daiwa and Yamiachi Securities — but said it would discourage the compensation payments that have enraged small investors.

Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto told the brokerages to curtail business for four days. The firms immediately agreed to the order and announced that dozens of officials, including top executives, would take salary cuts and that six would resign.

The presidents of Nomura and Nikko resigned two weeks ago to take responsibility for the scandal.

"It's absolutely pitiful that this was going on in the market," Hashimoto said.

Market analysts said the penalties were stringent for the Finance Ministry, which is tightly linked with the securities industry, but mild by international standards.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange on Monday announced fines totaling about $116,000 for the four brokerages for their dubious dealings. Nomura alone posted pretax profits of $1.74 billion in its last fiscal year.

"The securities firms must be very happy about it," said Hiroshi Okumura, economics professor at Ryukoku University in Kyoto. "This will do them no harm at all."

But analysts said the disciplinary action shows the ministry is trying to assuage outraged smaller investors, who have pulled money from the stock market to protest preferential treatment for wealthier customers.

Their mass retreat has dragged prices on Tokyo's stock market down to the lowest level since Dec. 5. On Monday, the market's key barometer tumbled 3.15 percent. In the past five trading days, it has dropped a total of 8.02 percent.

"The bottom line is that compensation for major clients is not going to be one of the unwritten rules of the game anymore," said Gerald L. Curtis, director of the East Asian Institute at Columbia University.

The crackdown came just two days before Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu was to leave for a summit with President Bush in the United States.

Kaifu said he was distressed by the scandal. But a Foreign Ministry official quoted him as saying, "That kind of incident .. . should not be misunderstood as a problem of Japan as a whole."

Under the Finance Ministry directives, the four brokerages will refrain from soliciting business from corporate clients for four days starting Wednesday.

Additionally, the head offices of Nomura and Nikko, which are accused of making millions of dollars of loans to an ex-gangland boss and of pushing up prices of stock in which he invested, will be restrained from soliciting business for the four days.

Japanese tycoon tops 'richest' list

■ Founder of the Wal-Mart Stores would be world's richest individual, but he split his money among family members.

NEW YORK (AP) — An 87-year-old Japanese real estate tycoon worth an estimated $15 billion is the world's richest person, Forbes magazine says.

Taikichiro Mori moved past Yoshiaki Tsutsumi, who made his money in railroads and golf courses, to lead the magazine's annual list of billionaires.

Tsutsumi

Tsutsumi, 57, with an estimated worth of more than $14 billion, had topped the list for four years.

Sam Moore Walton, founder of the Wal-Mart Stores discount chain, would be the world's richest individual, but he split his money among five family members. The Waltons' $18.5 billion is nearly $9 billion more than the next family fortune, the duPonts', Forbes said.

John Werner Kluge, founder of Metromedia, an entertainment and communications conglomerate, remained the richest American individual, the magazine said. He was estimated to have a net worth of $5.6 billion.

Mori

The United States led the list of billionaires, with 64 individuals and 32 families estimated to have a net worth of more than $1 billion. Japan was second with 41 billionaires and Germany had 40.

The American billionaires are worth a total of $207 billion, Forbes said, and the Japanese are worth more than $126 billion.

Two of the billionaire fortunes identified are Colombian cocaine smugglers. Pablo Escovar Gaviria recently turned himself in, and the Ochoa brothers are in prison. Both of their fortunes are estimated to exceed $2.5 billion.

The list appears in the magazine's July 22 issue.

American companies dominate Fortune list

■ U.S. firms capture 164 spots; General Motors remains world's largest industrial company.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — American companies again dominated the list of the world's 500 biggest industrial concerns last year, capturing 164 spots, including six of the top 10, a compilation by Fortune magazine shows.

Japan ranked second in the international tally, claiming 111 companies on the list, followed by Britain with 43 and France and Germany each claiming 30.

General Motors remained the world's largest industrial company, posting revenues of $125.1 billion. But tough times in the auto industry put GM near the bottom in terms of profits: a $1.99 billion loss ranked the company a lowly 485th based on net income.

Other U.S. giants to vie with two British, one Japanese and one Italian company for the leading 10 places were Exxon, Ford, IBM, Mobil and General Electric.

Overall, however, the United States suffered a net loss of three companies from the list: 15 were deleted, including steelmaker Armco, floormaker Armstrong World Industries, computer concern Control Data, and cosmetics maker Revlon. Twelve were added, among them conglomerate Berkshire Hathaway, glassmaker Corning, and Hershey Foods Corp.

Fortune's "Global 500" ranking was released Monday and appears in its July 29 issue. The list differs from the magazine's annual Fortune 500 listing of the biggest U.S. industrial corporations and the Fortune Service 500, a ranking of the biggest U.S. non-industrial corporations. All the lists are ranked by annual revenues.

Underscoring the economic difficulties companies encountered in 1990 was a steep, 17 percent decline in profits for the global 500. But Fortune said there were "plenty of signs that the worldwide economy was readying for a rebound" — notably a 10 percent rise in sales to $5 trillion.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Rates are higher on longer-term securities

By Bill Doyle

Q. You have me confused. In one column, you advise an individual who is looking for a greater return to invest in eight-year U.S. Treasury securities, which you say are yielding a bit more than 8 percent. In another column, you advise a couple who need more income to keep investing in certificates of deposit. You do not suggest they switch to Treasury securities.

Doyle

Aren't Treasury securities as safe as CDs? Do not Treasury securities pay interest on a regular basis — at least every six months? Isn't an 8 percent yield on Treasury securities pretty good — certainly better than the 6.4 percent I am getting on six-month CDs?

A. You get qualified "yes" replies to all three queries.

U.S. Treasury securities — bonds, notes and bills — are backed by the full faith and credit of our federal government and are counted as the safest investments in the world. CDs are equally safe — up to the limit of Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage of $100,000 per depositor per institution.

Treasury bonds and notes pay interest every six months. Treasury notes are issued with maturities of two to 10 years. Treasury bonds have maturities of more than 10 years to 30 years. Interest on Treasury bills, which are discount securities, is collected when each T bill matures — 13, 26 or 52 weeks after its issue date.

Of course, 8 percent is better than 6.4 percent. As I write this, Treasury securities due to mature in 1999 are still yielding a smidgen more than 8 percent. And, because interest rates have come down since your CDs were issued, you would have to search long and hard to find a bank or savings and loan association paying 6.4 percent on six-month CDs. But many pay 8 percent on eight-year CDs.

That's the crux of your confusion. You overlooked the obvious fact that rates are higher on longer-term interest-paying securities than on interest-paying securities with shorter maturities.

It stands to reason that you want and can get higher annual interest on an eight-year investment than on a six-month investment.

Q. Is there anything wrong with buying U.S. Treasury bonds, notes and bills through a bank's brokerage affiliate? What should I expect to receive as a receipt or monthly statements?

A. The only thing that can be called "wrong" in buying Treasury securities that way is it is more expensive than making the purchases on your own. Going the latter route, you open a "Treasury Direct" account and do your buying of newly issued Treasury bonds, notes and bills by mail from the Federal Reserve Bank or branch serving your part of the country, thus saving the fee charged by a local bank or a brokerage firm.

Nevertheless, many people prefer face-to-face contact — and, often, individual help and advice — available by dealing with a broker or local banker. When you buy that way, you should receive a confirmation statement giving all details of a purchase a day or two later. After that, you should get monthly or quarterly statements showing everything you have in the account.

Q. The brokerage firm through which I buy Treasury securities does not send me checks for interest paid on those securities until I phone. Is this customary?

A. It shouldn't be, if you have given instructions for the money to be sent to you as soon as it reaches the brokerage. But it happens all too often in the case of Treasury and other interest-paying securities as well as dividends on stocks left with brokerages.

It's time for you to tell your broker you will take your business elsewhere if you don't receive that money pronto.

One of the advantages of having your own Treasury Direct account is all interest payments are sent by wire — on the very day due — to the bank account you designate and are immediately available to you.

BLANKET CHEST
Here's the perfect end-of-the-bed chest for storing blankets, pillows and linens. Measuring approximately 20" high, 20" wide and 47" long, the unit can be built from oak, or any wood of your choice. The fragrance of cedar helps discourage moths, so you may want to cover the inside bottom of the chest with cedar closet liner. The step-by-step plan is so thorough that even the beginning woodworker can build this project.
