Crews trying to restore power stolen by storm

Associated Press

Utility crews worked Saturday to restore power to an estimated 1.8 million customers who remained blacked out by Hurricane Gloria, which contributed to nine deaths and caused tens of millions of dollars in damage even though it proved less destructive than expected.

In the wake of Gloria's dash up the East Coast and across New England, sunbathers and strollers returned to beaches, and card dealers went back to work in the casinos of Atlantic City, N.J.

Police in Connecticut reported sporadic looting, with 13 people arrested in New Haven since the storm hit. In Pennsylvania, officials said a 60-mile oil slick in the Susquehanna River apparently came from an underground toxic waste dump and probably resulted from heavy hurricane-borne rains, officials said.

Damage estimates ranged from $38 million to $56 million, with figures not yet available in some states and many localities.

Connecticut and New York's Long Island bore the brunt of the storm but much of the damage was caused by fallen trees that blocked streets and pulled down powerlines. An estimated 3.5 million customers lost power temporarily as the hurricane passed.

Bob Blair, a spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency in Washington, said Saturday that FEMA had requests from the states of New York and Rhode Island for federal declarations of disaster areas and was surveying damage elsewhere.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo estimated "millions and millions of dollars" in damages, mostly on Long Island.

"I think we have a good chance for qualifying" for federal disaster aid, Cuomo said Saturday after viewing overturned cabin cruisers, flattened trees, and isolated places where roofs were peeled back like sardine can lids.

Reagan hopeful on pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, welcoming a new Soviet proposal to reduce nuclear arms by 50 percent, said Saturday he hoped the fine print will be "free of preconditions and other obstacles to progress."

"There is no reason why real reductions cannot begin promptly," Reagan said in his weekly radio address.

Reporting on his meeting Friday with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, the president said he welcomed what he called the Soviet counterproposal that was outlined at the session.

But Reagan added that "it is important that the counterproposal address our concerns about reductions and stability, just as we have sought to address Soviet concerns, and we hope it will be free of preconditions and other obstacles to progress."

At their White House meeting, Shevardnadze outlined to Reagan a Soviet proposal calling for 50 per cent reductions in U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals.

The proposal would also ban efforts such as Reagan's Strategic Defense Inititative search for defensive systems against offensive missiles. Shevardnadzee said the proposal would be presented in more detail next week at arms control talks in Geneva.

Before heading back to Moscow, Shevardnadze was asked by reporters at Andrews Air Force Base if he saw a good chance of agreement, and he replied: "We always think about the real good chances."

Shevardnadze declined to comment on particulars of the offer.

"Can you help me figure out what some of these prices are?" queried a frantic mother, who along with hundreds of others were vying for the purchase of cast-offs at Ye Royal Junque Shoppe (Ends and Odds), probably one of the most popular attractions at Saturday's St. Ann's Fair.

Standing amid the swarming mass of bargain-hunters, junk-lovers and confused others who found themselves pushed along in the massive annual garage sale, it seemed that both adults and children were getting what they came for — to buy something ridiculous, fill up on sweets and greasy things and in general, have a good time.

"Excuse me," said a blue-jeaned man with a coffee table on his head.

"Watch out," yelled another carrying the top to a billiard table. That's all, just the top.

The sights and smells of the carnival atmosphere assaulted the senses from every direction.

"Step right up here," yelped a pin-striped barker, hawking "planetanimals" — space-aged stuffed toys.

Still another booth offered cascarones — eggs shells filled with confetti and brightly-painted. (They're lots of fun, claimed a sales girl — "just break them on someone's head.")

And there was food. Lots.

More education solutions sought

AUSTIN — You're a politician with a problem. A prickly problem. What do you do?

If you're like most politicians, you set up a "high-level, select, blue-ribbon" committee to study the problem in depth and come up with a solution. The appointment draws big headlines, the final report draws dust.

In rare cases, the study delves deep into the root of the problem. The suggested solutions catch fire with the public.

Mark White faced such a problem two years ago. His campaign promises included a 24-percent pay raise for Texas teachers. The Legislature balked. With time running out in the 1983 legislative session, White chose the time-honored route.

Luckily for the governor, the Select Committee on Public Education proved an exception to the rule. With outspoken Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot at the helm, the panel's hearings, meetings and recommendations played big with the press. Lawmakers returned for a hot 30 days in June 1984 and passed a massive school reform bill and a record tax hike to pay for it.

WHITE GOT HIS teacher pay raise — and the no-pass-no-play rule, a major revamp of the public school finance system and a new State Board of Education too.

NAACP officer dreams of role in Midland

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Dallas resident Richard Dockery said he dreams that one day blacks will serve Midland in leadership roles such as mayor, the city council and commissioners court.

Dockery, regional director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said his organization may help to make that dream come true.

The NAACP "is an organization for all American citizens," Dockery said. "We have an ongoing program in the organization that lends itself to every aspect of human need.

"We have a strong political action section, housing, education, employment and economic development programs that will help improve the lifestyle of all Americans across this country.

"We also feel that what we've developed will serve as a catalyst to others around the world to fashion themselves in such a democratic way that they will find the fruits of democracy," he added.

Dockery visited Midland Saturday to install officers of the organization's newly chartered Midland branch.

As for the Midland County NAACP, it is "a fledgling unit, just beginning to move, just beginning to reach out into the community. And, certainly as they do so, there will be more and more people coming aboard as members," Dockery predicted.

He estimated as many as 600 to 700 Midlanders support the goals and philosophies of the NAACP. "That goes across all ethnic identities be they Mexican-American, caucasion or black."

Still, Dockery stressed that Midland has the potential for further growth.

"We know the past of Midland. It hasn't been too glorious," he said. "But we want to stop looking back and start looking forward."

Dockery also said Midland needs more minority representation.

"Whether it be political, economic or social — you name it — there's a need for improvement. We have more problems in colleges now than any place else. Housing is another area where we've had serious problems," he said.

To compensate, local NAACP president Ruby Runnels said her chapter plans to "create an awareness of the black communities in the Midland-Odessa area. We want to become visible as a group of people striving for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Though nobody likes to be called a racist, Dockery said, that attitude "still exists."

He added, however, there are ways of dealing with those problems. They include negotiation, influence and litigation.

"We will consult and negotiate with those people who want to negotiate.

"We'll try to influence the housing authority, city council, educational institutions, industry...to take on affirmative action programs and live by them.

"If we can't negotiate, we'll deal with it by the judicial system," he said.

The Midland County NAACP will move forcefully, undaunted and unafraid, Dockery asserted.

"We're not going to be timid about what our position is. We're always considerate when people want to negotiate...but we are not bound by anybody's personal opinions," he said. "We have guidelines, a system of legislation and we're going to use it. We hope Midland will join us."

Smokeless trend hasn't hit Midland

In Midland, newspaper job ads request "nonsmokers only" or "nonsmokers perferred."

General Motors, Boeing in Seattle, IBM in Armok, N.Y., and Honeywell in Minneapolis are a few of the growing number of corporations beginning to restrict smoking in the workplace.

States are also getting into the act with laws regarding smoking in the workplace enacted in Minnesota, Utah, Nebraska, Connecticut, Alaska, Maine, New Jersey and Hawaii.

"You can't justify smoking. It's a losing battle - an unpopular place to be right now," says one confirmed smoker, whose workplace is dominated by nonsmokers.

Nationwide there is a move to restrict smoking in the workplace, says Erin Hutchson, of the Texas Lung Association in Austin. However, the smokeless trend hasn't hit West Texas yet, he said.

Smoking restrictions are now being enforced mainly in electronic plants where smoking around circuits and computer chips has become a question of health and quality of production, Hutchson said.

One plant, Hutchson said, was not meeting the requirements of the Department of Defense because of smoking around the construction area. Short circuits have been caused in some electronic equipment because of cigarette ashes in the equipment, he said.

Texas Instruments with over 1,000 employees in Midland is one of the few local firms, randomly surveyed by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, that restricts smoking to a certain area.

"We don't have any smoking in the work area proper. We have break smoking areas," said Hank Henry, Texas Instruments personnel manager.

The micro processors produced by Texas Instruments is the reason for restrictions, Henry said.

"With the type of product we're building, we stand a good chance of equipment being damaged while it's being constructed," he said.

Parker credits grand jury selection

BEAUMONT (AP) — State Sen. Carl Parker, the veteran lawmaker indicted twice on obscenity charges, credits the special selection of a grand jury with clearing him of the allegations once and for all.

Parker maintained Jefferson County investigators' attempts to link him with the Happy Times Video Co. were "pure harassment," and proposed during the last legislative session that all grand juries be chosen randomly.

Lawmakers did not adopt Parker's suggestion, but a state district judge did and a randomly selected grand jury was impaneled in July to investigate the case.

The panel on Friday voted not to return any indictments against Parker, and the Port Arthur Democrat said the decision proved he was right all along.

"I've always maintained that a fair and impartial panel would do the right thing ... and they have," said Parker, 50, a 21-year veteran of the Texas Legislature.

The investigation began shortly after an April 19, 1984, raid in which police seized more than 400 X-rated videotapes, tape duplicating equipment and drugs from Happy Times Video, operated from a Port Arthur house co-owned by Parker and Daniel Joseph Lee.

Parker later said he had sold the property and was not involved in the business.

Parker and Lee were indicted in September 1984 on charges that included wholesale distribution of obscene material and promotion of prostitution. Pickett dismissed the charges against Parker in November 1984, saying the grand jury that returned the indictments was biased.

Parker and Lee were indicted again March 22 this year — along with David Earl Johnson. But Pickett, saying unauthorized people were in the courtroom, threw out the charges against all three men.

District Attorney James McGrath said the first set of indictments against Lee still stand.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, acting on a call for help from McGrath, assigned special prosecutor Joe Hendley to the case in July. Hendley withdrew from the case earlier this month, and Mattox named special prosecutor Wayne Johnson to work with the grand jury.

The third grand jury, whose term expires in January, was selected randomly. The previous panels were directed by McGrath and chosen by jury commissioners named by district judges.

On Friday — after 13 weeks and 42 witnesses — the grand jury announced it had cleared Parker of an allegations related to the Happy Times Video case.

Tom Hanna, one of Parker's attorneys, said the current grand jury's decision shows "the grand jury system will work if it's allowed to operate freely without any undue influence. The truth will come out if the grand jury is allowed to function as it was designed to function."

McGrath, when asked why the third grand jury failed to indict Parker as had two previous grand juries, said, "Grand juries differ in their opinions and we abide by the grand jury's opinion in every case."

The district attorney said the latest grand jury vote "concludes the investigation of Sen. Parker."

A similar problem popped up last spring, and the governor is hoping for like results.

With growing state needs battling shrinking state resources, legislative financial wizards first tried to balance the 1986-87 state budget out of the hides of Texas' colleges and universities. At one point they proposed closing two institutions — the University of Texas of Permian Basin and Texas A&M University at Galveston — to save money.

Lawmakers eventually settled on a tripling of tuition, a big increase in state fees and a study committee. Last week White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis appointed that committee and gave it a broad charge.

"The governor told me all of higher education is fair game," said Austin lawyer Larry Temple, chairman of the 19-member panel. "There's no sacred cows."

In a January speech to the Texas College and University Coordinating Board, White set a tone that could well determine the new committee's dominant theme. "I believe we must turn our whole system toward the goal of creating centers of excellence," White said. "Every campus cannot be all things to all people."

Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth, Coordinating Board director, says university administrators have criticized him for years for taking exactly such an approach.

"The problem (with many institutions) is one of overblown ambitions, and a lack of willingness to stay with a set mission," he said. "We are the naysayers and the unnecessary referees. We're the obstacle to greatness for some of the institutions."

SOME LAWMAKERS and others are talking about more than just concentrating programs at existing universities. In addition to UT-Permian Basin and A&M at Galveston, schools such as Sul Ross University and Laredo State University's Institute for International Trade were the targets of shut-em-down movements earlier this year. For years there's been talk of merging Texas Woman's University with nearby North Texas State and cutting back on the burgeoning number of junior colleges.

UTPB President Duane Leach, who served on then-Gov. Bill Clements' 1981-82 Task Force on Higher Education, said he expects the new committee to give his institution a passing grade.

"The whole issue (of closing UTPB because of low enrollment) is an invalid one," Leach said. "My feeling is that it will withstand any test of scrutiny that anybody wants to put to it."

State Rep. Tom Uher of Bay City, chairman of the House Higher Education Budget Subcommittee, routinely criticizes university systems as money wasters. Uher said the new committee should look closely at all the systems: UT, A&M, University of Houston and several others.

Uher also called for a detailed examinations of the special items — museums, special research centers — in the schools' budgets that "have grown and stayed with us for years and years and years." Last spring UTPB requested more than $2 million in special items — mostly for scientific and engineering equipment purchases — but left the Legislature with just $20,000 for scholarships.

"We've been told that we're in a scientific revolution and we've got to provide more science and better research," Leach said. "These are real needs."

With many state senators and representatives often regarding whichever of the 95 public junior colleges, universities or health science centers that lie in their districts as personal fiefdomes needing protection, some critics are already saying chances for cut-back types of change look dim.

Others, like Port Arthur Sen. Carl Parker, see an obstacle to reform in White's choice of Temple to chair the committee. Temple is also chairman of the Coordinating Board.

PARKER, CHAIRMAN of the Sente Education Committee, said he and Temple have been friends since they attended the University of Texas Law School together 30 years ago. "He (Temple) is a one-man law office," Parker said. "You have to have the capabilities of hiring staff."

The Port Arthur Democrat, who will also serve on the panel, said he fears Temple will rely on the Coordinating Board staff for help in the year-long study. "The Coordinating Board has been an integral part of the higher education structure," he said, and that structure needs reviewing too.

Temple said he agrees with Parker's concerns. "I absolutely, positively do not think the staff of the Coordinating Board should be the staff of the committee," he said.

UTPB's Leach also backs Temple. "They're fortunate to have a chairman that starts out with a good deal of background and knowledge on some of the problems facing Texas higher education," he said.

Lt. Gov. Hobby, the architect of the plan that staved off disaster for the colleges this spring, is talking about expansion, not retreat, in one key area: research.

Hobby called for state universities to recruit top faculty members, for the state to expand two or three schools -"to become nationally recognized research universities," for researchers to "try to guess what will be called "high technology' 20 years from now." Money spent along those lines, he said, is an investment whose return will be an influx of federal research grants and a booming state economy.

Most observers agree that the problems in higher education don't approach the magnitude of the disaster the Perot committee found in the public school classroom. It's not "Johnny can't read," but rather "There's not enough money for Johnny to earn any degree he wants to at any college in the state."

Perot outlines work ahead for higher education panel

EDITOR'S NOTE: H. Ross Perot, the outspoken Dallas billionaire president of Electronic Data Systems Corp., chaired Gov. Mark White's 1983-84 Select Committee on Public Education. That committee's recommendations led to House Bill 72, the massive school reform bill the Legislature passed in a summer 1984 special session. Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau Chief Steve Levine spoke with Perot this week concerning the new Select Committee on Higher Education. Some excerpts:

Levine: What do you think of the new panel?

Perot: We have a very talented group. I don't see how they could have picked a better group of people for the job.

Levine: What of some critics' claims that the committee is too elitist?

Perot: Let's assume I was going in for brain surgery. Would I want to pick a common-type folk to do the job? ...You've got to pick people who have the background and the experience to deal with problems of this size and scope.

Levine: What is your assessment of the state of higher education in Texas?

Perot: Taxpayers are not getting their money's worth in higher education. We need schools that are really world-class colleges, not just places you send a guy to join a fraternity or your daughter to join a sorority and have four years of social life.... We don't need any playground for young adults at the expense of hard-working taxpayers. If it's worth having the taxpayers put money into it, then it's worth having our children come out to be able to compete and win as adults because of the education they've got.... We've got a lot of good schools, and a lot of good things in the system, but I think this is sort of like having an audit team go through and spruce it up.

Levine: Do you plan to get involved with this study?

Perot: If they want me to help in some way, I'd be glad to provide funding or conributions.... The best thing I can do is just be quietly supportive and wish them well.

Levine: What of some critics' claims that Gov. White made a mistake in choosing Larry Temple, chairman of the Texas College and University Coordinating Board, to chair the committee? That he's too close to the problem and not independent like you were?

Perot: It's unfair to react that way until Larry's had time to go out and go to work.... One of the good things about it is he's had his nose in the tent. In my case I had no close relationship with the schools, so I had a steeper learning curve.... I think Larry will be able to do things more quickly and more efficiently than I was able to do then because of his knowledge of the system.

FAIR

The whack of sharp knives on a wooden table pulled customers over to the corn-on-the-cob booth, while wind currents and the smoky opiate of barbecue lured others.

The annual event which has attracted crowds of 20,000 to 25,000 people in the past, seemed a bit thin under the gray morning skies, but as the sun came out, they continued to pour in.

Both the traditional and the unusual met the eye.

Scared little children took their first ride on a merry-go-round while daring others braved such monsters as "The Zipper," "The Cobra," "The Swinger" and one spaceship-shaped thriller known as "Ravitron."

A line formed at the dunking booth even during a brief rain spell. The Dragon House bounced with dozens of little feet on the air mattress floor. The Fool Guesser told perfect strangers their weight, age and other unmentionables.

In short, it was a carnival in the purest sense, with clowns, popcorn, beer, rides, game booths... and wooden reindeers.

"Oh no, they're all out," whined one woman to her friends, as she waved the monstrosity, complete with red nose. "I got the last one."

The arts and crafts display, with crocheted quilts, Christmas ornaments, paintings, and an assortment of other handmade goodies (including the reindeer), was filled with adults and seniors awaiting the bingo game.

Others spent their money buying chances at the variety of prizes offered at raffles throughout the grounds including a pickup truck, hope chest complete with $1,000 of merchandise, a camera and gift certificates.

The fair had something for everyone.

Teeny-boppers flocked to the face-painting booth. The Home and Garden set gathered underneath a large broadleaf near the gymnasium to pick over baby plants for sale. Bookish individuals leafed through the book store while those with a sweet tooth queued up at The Country Store — a collection of plastic-wrapped goodies.

Still, the busiest spot remained near the garage sale.

Boys in coveralls, women with Gucci bags, the wheelchair-bound and the tall and the round, all pushed in for a bit of treasure — to purchase some relic that another once valued.

A smiling youth skipped by with a prize, a Mr. Potato Head. Two women tried out a recently-acquired lawn edger — on the asphalted courtyard.

But one girl got the best deal of all.

SMOKE

The 35-member accounting department with the Clayton W. Williams Jr. Co. is one other local workplace that restricts smoking.

"We do not hire smokers here in the accounting office. We have several people with allergy problems and feel we provide a healthful environment with a nonsmoking area," said Celia Zinn, an accountant with the Williams Company.

However, the majority of Midland area companies surveyed said they didn't have any restrictions on smoking in the office because smoking has not created a problem between employees.

"I think people are just playing it by ear to suit their own needs," said Walter Pilisko, of the Texas Employment Commission.

The other corporations surveyed included ARCO, the City of Midland, Exxon Company, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., Midland Hilton and RepublicBank First National Midland.

"We don't have a company policy in this office on that. Generally people are becoming more sensitive to the preferences of nonsmokers. We haven't had a problem or need to develop policy," said Denny Beier of ARCO, which has about 900 employees in the Permian Basin.

Gary Selvy with Republic Bank - First National, said his company does not separate smoking employees from nonsmoking employees.

"We're not getting any internal pressure from employees for it," Selvy said.

Lost labor costs in time spent smoking is one reason some employers hire only nonsmokers and are restricting smoking in the office, Hutchson said.

One study found that smoking in the workplace may cost employers an additional $4,611 per year in lost labor hours, Hutchson said. William Weis conducted the study and estimated this cost on the basis of a smoking worker with a $20,000 yearly salary. Out of the $4,611 expense, Weis estimated that $820 of that is lost when a smoker walks back and forth to the cigarette machine, Hutchson said.

Health of employees and insurance rates are another reason employers are now requesting nonsmokers and setting up programs to get their employees to quit the habit.

"Everyone is trying to discourage smoking now because of the Surgeon General's finding. There is a trend toward healthier workers as far as the government is concerned because of increased insurance costs. One way to keep insurance down is to keep workers healthy," Pilisko said.

The Texas Lung Association sets up programs with companies to help their employees quit smoking, Hutchson said.

Nonsmokers are also starting to sue for a right to a smokeless environment based on the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, Hutchson said.

The act states, "Each employer shall furnish to each of his employees, employment and a place of employment which are free from recognized harzards that are causing or are likely to cause death or harm to his employee."

Many nonsmokers successfully sued for a work area free of smoke based on this act, he said.

Employers can also refuse to hire a worker that smokes, Pilisko said.

"It's not a form of discrimination. We're still working on age, sex, race, creed and national origins. But smoking isn't a part of that," Pilisko said.

Old ways change as East Texas public housing integrates

STATE

PITTSBURG, Texas (AP) — Only last year did blacks begin moving into what had been an all-white housing complex here, a quiet, often painful process taking place in 36 East Texas counties a federal judge ruled discriminatory.

Old ways die hard in this section of the state that more resembles the old South than the new Southwest.

In this Camp County community of less than 5,000, public housing had provided an opportunity largely for white elderly women.

"They have moved so many blacks in until I'm gonna move," vows Annie Laura Carpenter, an 80-year-old white widow who has lived in Pittsburg's subsidized housing since 1958.

"We can't get to sleep until 1 a.m. They won't quieten down. There's 25...kids from 5 years up to 18 and 20. They'll laugh and squeal and holler," Mrs. Carpenter said.

Millie Harrison, a black woman who became executive director of the Pittsburg Housing Authority just a few months ago, said complaints about noise from children seem to be the biggest problem at the modest little complex of one-story brick apartment houses.

"They've (elderly whites) been used to living in a quiet neighborhood with no children," she said.

At another Pittsburg complex, similarly designed, Helen Jackson has a different complaint.

The 43-year-old black mother of three said she waited seven years for decent housing and was turned away more than once from Pittsburg's white housing complex, which she said had vacancies at the time.

During that time, she lived in a mobile home that was in such bad condition her toddling grandchild fell through the floor.

The trailer was so drafty, Mrs. Jackson said they kept warm by stuffing drapes and towels around the door and turning on the oven, which tended to leak gas fumes. The roof of the mobile home leaked, too.

"We all caught colds...I wouldn't wish that on my worst enemy," she recalled as she sat with two daughters and a granddaughter in the living room of the housing project apartment her family now occupies.

She had joined a 1980 class action suit brought by two Clarksville women, Virginia Wyatt and Lucille Young, alleging discrimination by the federally-funded housing authorities in East Texas.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice severed the individual suits against the Clarksville and Pittsburg projects from the larger issue of whether there was widespread segregation in East Texas public housing.

In 1983, the judge ordered the Clarksville project integrated.

There has been no ruling in Mrs. Jackson's case against Pittsburg, but Elizabeth Julian, one of the attorneys who filed the suit, said a settlement is being negotiated.

The Pittsburg Housing Authority rented an apartment to Mrs. Jackson in 1982. And today, she says she is good friends with her white neighbors next door in a complex that used to be all-black.

But the most significant ruling in the case came July 31, with a decision from Justice that the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development had violated the Constitution by intentionally segregating minority and white tenants in more than 200 housing programs in 36 East Texas Counties.

Mrs. Jackson feels proud to be part of such a significant case.

She said she had made the decision to take part in the class action "so if anything good was to come out of it, it would happen to everybody, not just my family and myself."

Several housing authorities are taking steps to remedy past actions which Justice described in his decision as "clearly animated by racial prejudice."

This spring HUD sent out letters instructing housing officials to correct cases of "overhousing," units that are larger than the tenant requires.

Along with the years of segregation have been many instances of elderly people living in larger apartments than they qualify for, said Charlene Berry, associate regional counsel for HUD's desegregation coordinating office in Fort Worth.

As a result, many elderly widows like Lorena McElhaney, 77, have had to move from two- or three-bedroom apartments to one-bedroom housing.

"I didn't like it," Mrs. McElhaney said. "They just called and told me (to move.)"

Mauzy seeks Supreme Court seat

AUSTIN (AP) — Longtime state Sen. Oscar Mauzy of Dallas told top Democrats Saturday he will give up his seat next year to run for the Texas Supreme Court.

"The Supreme Court has a direct impact on the lives of every citizen of the state and I want to be a part of it," said Mauzy, a senator since 1967.

Also Saturday, the State Democratic Executive Committee backed the proposed state water plan and picked Austin as the site for the June 1986 state party convention.

Mauzy is seeking the Supreme Court seat now held by Democrat Sears McGee. He said he will run regardless of McGee's plans.

Contacted at his Austin home Saturday, McGee said he "definitely" plans to seek re-election.

During his years in the Senate, Mauzy has fought laws he felt could be intrusions on personal freedom, such as wiretapping.

"The Supreme Court is the last repository to protect the rights of the people of this state," said Mauzy, a longtime defender of individual rights.

In a unanimous vote with no discussion, the committee backed the two proposed constitutional amendments needed to enact the $1.4 billion water plan approved this year by lawmakers.

The amendments face voter review on the Nov. 5 general election ballot.

Ed Cogburn, resolutions committee chairman, said the plan is "fiscally sound and sensitive to the regional needs of the state."

Officials from Houston and Austin battled for the 1986 state convention, which means 12,500 visitors. Houston's invitation was filled with numbers, such as 11,000 taxi cabs versus 200 in Austin.

Don Ward, a member of the Houston delegation, said his city needed the convention because the "economy is not as robust as it once was."

The Austin bid was a flashy, convention-floor-like demonstration. Mayor Frank Cooksey reminded the committee that Austin has long been a Democratic stronghold, while parts of Houston have voted Republican.

"If all those people in Houston hadn't voted for all those Republicans all those years, their economy would be in better shape," Cooksey said.

After Austin's well-planned presentation, Texas Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle joked, "Convention bids are never going to be the same again."

The committee also heard from other candidates for statewide office, including Houston State District Judge Hugo Touchy, who also wants McGee's Supreme Court seat, incumbent Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez and Victoria Sen. John Sharp, a Railroad Commission candidate.

Also speaking was Attorney General Jim Mattox, who confidently predicted he would be unopposed.

Crane band stricken by food poisoning

ALPINE (AP) — About 30 high school students, most members of the Crane High School band, were transported from a Friday night football game to an Alpine hospital and treated for food poisoning, hospital officials said.

Transportation of the students, who were in Alpine for a football game between Alpine and Crane high schools, began at about 9:30 p.m., said David Wiley, Big Bend Memorial Hospital administrator.

Of those transported, 19 were later released and at least one was admitted for observation, officials said.

Wiley said hospital personnel would examine lab cultures to determine what caused the poisoning. He said the "majority" of the hospital's staff had to be called in to handle the students.

"Luckily we had a disaster drill preparing for a bus crash," Wiley said.

Incest award $10 million

DALLAS (AP) — A Corsicana rancher who was ordered by a Waco jury to pay his daughter $10 million because of years of sexual abuse filed for protection from creditors Friday under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

Bob Sessions was ordered Aug. 29 by McLennan County jurors to pay the largest civil award in county history to his 18-year-old daughter.

Shelly Sessions accused her father of sexually assaulting her over the course of three years until, at age 16, she ran away from home.

In a 1983 trial, Sessions pleaded guilty to a charge of sexually assaulting his daughter. He was sentenced to 10 years probation.

Sessions, who also filed a petition Friday in Waco seeking a new trial, said he adopted Miss Sessions in 1969 when he married her mother, Linda.

TDC eyes drug tests

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas prison director Lane McCotter says he is considering requiring tests to identify prison employees who abuse drugs and become potential smugglers of chemicals to inmates, the Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

McCotter said he is studying the possibility of requiring front-line prison employees to submit to unannounced urinalysis testing at the prisons were they work.

The prison director estimated that "99 percent" of drugs smuggled into prisons are brought in by employees.

If drug usage could be eliminated among inmates, it would help reduce gang violence, which has escalated recently, he said.

"That's one of the ways that gangs stay viable," McCotter said. "If the gangs control the distribution of drugs, that gives them more power."

Cauble's bank closes

DENTON (AP) — Western State Bank, formerly owned by convicted millionaire drug dealer Rex Cauble, was closed Friday by the Texas banking commissioner and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was named receiver, officials said.

The failed bank will reopen Monday as the Texas Bank of Denton, said Steve Katsanos, FDIC spokesman in Washington.

Friday's bank closure marks the eighth bank failure in Texas so far this year, he said, adding 84 banks have failed nationwide.

Worker's comp upped

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Insurance has refused to reconsider its decision to raise workers' compensation rates by $577 million, an increase that has drawn questions from Gov. Mark White.

Board member David Thornberry, a recent White appointee, said Friday there was no way around the 30.7 percent hike.

"If you compare the rates from 1981 to the rates we are now putting in effect, there has not been a substantial increase in that period of time. I'm afraid the product has just been underpriced over the last few years and that's why the increase appears to be so big," he said.

No rehearing motion was filed by the Friday deadline, and neither eligible board member moved to reconsider the Sept. 5 decision. The new, higher rates take effect Tuesday.

Immigration discussed

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Dr. Hector P. Garcia says he just wants to offer immigrants, both legal and illegal, freedom from fear, and Ellen Cohen doesn't want to repeat the immigration policy attitudes that kept Jews from the safety of U.S. arms just before World War II.

Both immigration activists joined more than 100 others from political, religious, academic and cultural arenas from Mexico and the United States in Corpus Christi Friday at the International Immigration Symposium 1985.

Truck falls into hole

DALLAS (AP) — More than one construction worker might have been killed by a tractor-trailer rig that fell into an excavation site had a police reserve officer not yelled a warning, Dallas police say.

Artis E. Smith, 43, of Dallas was killed Friday when the truck's impact caused some steel reinforcing rods to dislodge and crush him.

The truck driver, Larry S. Nichols, 48, of Kaufmann, walked away with only a scratch.

Ruling forces cities to pay overtime

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is unlikely Congress will act before the state of Texas and 21 Texas cities have to pay about $37 million in overtime to employees because of a retroactive U.S. Supreme Court ruling, an aide to Rep. Tom Loeffler said Friday.

On Thursday, Loeffler tried to attach an amendment to the Department of Labor appropriation bill that would exempt states and cities from the Federal Labor Standards Act.

The House Appropriations Committee rejected the amendment 27-13.

The amendment would have overturned a U.S. Supreme Court ruling earlier this year on a 1979 case from San Antonio. The court said that states and cities must pay overtime in accordance with the federal labor law instead of granting compensatory time off.

The ruling goes into effect on Oct. 15 and is retroactive to April 15.

Loeffler, R-Hunt, said the ruling will cost states and municipalities about $3 billion nationwide.

Loeffler press secretary Allan Krauter said Loeffler knew that even if the committee approved the amendment, it would likely be challenged on the floor as out of order because it is legislative language in an appropriations bill.

But Loeffler felt "something had to be done," Krauter said.

A bill that would exempt the states and cities is pending before the Education and Labor Committee, but "they probably won't even meet to mark anything up until the enforcement date," said Krauter.

"The liberal majority in Congress is dragging its feet, refusing to act as time runs out on every state, every city, every county, every school district in this country," said Loeffler, who announced last month that he is running for governor of Texas.

Loeffler said the ruling will require "large local tax increases."

The Texas Municipal League estimates the overtime costs for 21 Texas cities will be at least $17 million and that the state of Texas will have to pay about $20 million, Krauter said.

Midland overtime $50,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a list, according to the Texas Municipal League, of 21 Texas cities' estimates of their obligations for overtime pay when the U.S. Supreme Court ruling goes into effect on Oct. 15. The figures are for FY 1986, unless otherwise noted.

Abilene — $100,000.
Amarillo — $790,000, after reduction of personnel hours to minimize costs.
Arlington — $200,000.
Austin — $1.5 million.
Beaumont — $360,000.
Carrollton — $100,000, April 15 through October 1986.
Corpus Christi — $200,000.
Dallas — $1.6 million, FY 1985, after reduction of personnel hours to minimize costs.
Fort Worth — $980,000, April 15 through FY 1986.
Garland — $200,000-$400,000.
Houston — $8 million.
Irving — $746,000.
Lancaster — $50,000.
Lubbock — $396,000, April 15 through FY 1986.
Lufkin — $32,000.
Marshall — $20,000, April 15 through April 15, 1986.
Midland — $50,000.
Odessa — $200,000, Oct. 15 through Oct. 15, 1986.
San Antonio — $1.35 million, April 15 through FY 1986.
Tyler — $246,000, April 15 through FY 1986.
Waco — $240,000.

Atlantis shuttle debut cloaked in secrecy

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Atlantis, the fourth and possibly last space shuttle, makes its debut Thursday on a secrecy-shrouded military mission that reportedly will launch two satellites built to withstand nuclear assault.

The Air Force has said Atlantis and its five-man crew will be launched sometime between 10:20 a.m. and 1:20 p.m. EDT Thursday. The precise time will be disclosed nine minutes before the planned liftoff.

Throughout the flight, even less public information will be forthcoming from the Pentagon than was the case during the first all-classified Defense Department mission last January.

Even the length of the flight is a secret, but the landing will be announced 24 hours in advance.

NATION

Officials decline to reveal any details about the payload, but the Federation of American Scientists, citing public sources, reported last month the shuttle's cargo bay contains two Defense Satellite Communications System satellites, the advanced model known as DSCS-3.

DSCS-3 satellites are designed to be jam-proof, have been shielded against the electromagnetic effects of nuclear explosions and have a special transponder over which the president could transmit emergency messages to nuclear forces.

The Defense Department does not classify DSCS-3 satellites as secret, but as a matter of principal and precedent it has decided to place a secrecy label on most military flights of the shuttle. Officials said this policy will make it more difficult for Soviet spy ships that regularly operate off Cape Canaveral to monitor the launch and to learn the nature of any mission.

Reporters were denied the prelaunch interviews and news conferences that are normally available with NASA shuttle crews, and they will not be able to monitor space-to-ground communications.

On the January flight, the Air Force issued a statement every eight hours which said everything was going well aboard the shuttle Discovery. Those will be dropped on the upcoming flight. There will be announcements, however, if serious trouble develops.

The commander of the 21st shuttle mission is Air Force Col. Karol Bobko. The others are Air Force Lt. Col. Ronald J. Grabe, Marine Maj. David C. Hilmers, Army Lt. Col. Robert C. Stewart and Air Force Maj. William A. Pailes.

Defense buildup hurts industry, new study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — If guns come at the cost of butter, whose butter was sacrificed for the nation's military buildup during the last five years?

Attempting to answer that question, a research organization concludes that real estate, food, retail trade and construction lead the list of industries that have picked up much of the tab for the buildup. Also named were hospitals and public education.

"These are the industries which in reality pay the highest bills for defense, and have the most to gain from a decrease in military spending," said Rosy Nimroody, an analyst for the Council on Economic Priorities who prepared the report.

The Council on Economic Priorities is a New York-based private research organization specializing in reports on corporate social responsibility and military spending.

It often has been critical of Reagan administration's decision to give military spending a greater priority than domestic concerns.

The study sought to assess what kind of economic impact would have resulted if the United States had increased military spending, after inflation, by 3 percent a year since 1980.

In 1978, NATO recommended 3 percent increases in annual defense spending for members of the alliance.

Such a rate of increase would have resulted in a $67 billion savings from the actual rate of increase — 6 percent to 7 percent — over that period, the report said. Defense appropriations were $293 billion in 1985, it said.

The report said businesses that gained the most from the increased military spending were aircraft, radio and television, and ordnance industries.

"This buildup distorts the economy by concentrating spending on a relatively narrow band of industries, particularly aircraft, radio and television equipment, ordnance and transportation equipment," said Alice Tepper Marlin, executive director of the council.

"The broader industrial base, which employs more workers per dollar in volume, has been hurt," she said in a written statement.

The study assumed that the savings from a lowered level of defense spending would be spent on non-military items.

It said industries that would gain the most from this change in spending "represent economic sectors that consume a high proportion of the American public's income and, therefore, stand to gain the most from lower defense spending." It said the recession of 1981-1983 was exacerbated by the reallocation to defense spending for those industries.

The study said real estate would gain $4.5 billion, using 1979 dollars, and a 1 percent increase in output, if the military spending was at the $67 billion lower rate this year. The food industry would gain $3.6 billion in added economic activity, for a 1.3 percent increase in output; retail sales would gain $3.5 billion, or 1.5 percent; and construction would gain $2.6 billion, for a 0.7 percent output gain, the study said.

Hospitals, health services, public education and agriculture were among other industries that would gain over $1 billion under such a change, the study said.

The figures, along with lesser increases for hundreds of othe types of industries, were the result of a computerized "input-output analysis," Mrs. Marlin said.

The analysis was done on an economic model developed by Nobel Prize-winning economist Wassily Leontief at the Institute for Economic Analysis at New York University, she said.

The economic model computed how all manufacturing in the country would be affected by the shift in government spending from military to non-military items, she said. The computer calculated to what sectors of the economy the $67 billion would have flowed and the effects it would have, she said.

"Although the 'gains' from lower military spending — a broadly dispersed 1 or 2 percent sales increase in each of the affected industries — are not likely to make or break individual firms, they are still significant for the overall productivity of the economy," the study said.

The big losers under such a change would be the aircraft industry, which would see a decrease of $10.2 billion or 27 percent. Next, the study said, would be radio and television equipment, $6.7 billion and 17 percent; and ordnance, $5.3 billion and 28 percent.

Reagan administration's influence 'a blip on the screen'

WASHINGTON (AP) — To President Reagan, nearing the end of his fifth year in Washington, his administration is "the dawn of the Second American Revolution." To Democrat Clark Clifford, a fixture in the capital since the Truman administration, it's "a blip on the screen."

As the president struggles with Congress over taxes, trade and deficits, not only liberals like Clifford but some of his fellow conservatives are questioning the boasts of Reagan's backers that his presidency will work long-term changes in American political life.

Others, on university campuses as well as in government offices, agree with his supporters and say his conservative stamp will endure into the 21st century just as the legacy of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal has dominated much of the 20th.

Reagan laid out the grounds for the debate when he declared in his second inaugural address that "we are creating a new America." He has repeated the theme often, as when he rallied a crowd in Oshkosh, Wis. on May 30 to support his tax revision plan and said, with Lincolnesque phrasing, "Let us resolve here today, during this, the dawn of the Second American Revolution, that this great task shall be accomplished."

Reagan booster Faith Ryan Whittlesey, before she left her post as head of the White House Office of Public Liaison to become ambassador to Switzerland, said, "This presidency is having the most profound effect on the political landscape since FDR....We've changed the whole direction of this country."

More recently, White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters, "There's no doubt that President Reagan has changed the direction of thinking about how government should do business."

Maybe so, say some, but how long will the change last?

Clifford, a Washington lawyer who was counsel to President Truman and served as secretary of defense in the Johnson administration, said in an interview, "If he is able to carry on in his second four years as successfully as he did in the first four years and if he pursues his major goals, then I think he will have accomplished a profound change in the political climate of the country. My own private idea, however, is that it is not likely to occur."

"I consider it a blip on the screen," he said. "You have read electrocardiograms. It just goes along with a steady vibration and then you come to an era where for a number of years you get an entirely different tracing. I think that's what's going on now."

Clifford predicted Reagan will run into trouble between now and 1988 because of a downturn in an economy plagued by a huge budget deficit and a growing international trade deficit.

"To a great extent, the popularity of Ronald Reagan depends upon the economy," he said. "The bloom is going to go off the rose and then I think people are going to say, 'Oh, oh, this isn't what he claimed it to be at all.'"

From another perspective, Edwin J. Feulner II, president of the conservative Heritage Foundation, wrote in an assessment of Reagan's first term, "Not all the old problems have been solved, and some have not even been tackled. More important, policies must be fashioned to ensure the continuation and permanence of the Reagan revolution."

In an interview, Burton Pines, vice president and director of research for the foundation, said Reagan "managed in his first four years to absolutely win the argument that government must be smaller, that government cannot continue to grow inexorably, and I think that is going to continue and that's a legacy that is going to last for certainly as long as the Roosevelt legacy, which is that government can do everything."

But Pines said Reagan will face a milestone if Congress, as many expect, sends him an over-all spending bill for the coming fiscal year that fails to meet his budgetary goals.

"If he signs it reluctantly or whatever, I will say that he has failed a major test and maybe his legacy of leaving a significantly smaller federal government will not be as strong as it might have been," he said.

Reagan insists he will veto any "budget-busting" appropriation bills but he has already accepted a budget framework that, while it cuts some domestic programs sharply, does not eliminate any, as he had proposed in several cases.

NATION IN BRIEF

Water rustler nabbed

NEW YORK (AP) — An alleged water rustler was caught wet-handed Saturday when drought-conscious police spotted him tapping into a fire hydrant to fill a 200-gallon tank in the back of his van, police said.

"I saw this huge tank. I said, 'My God, you're taking a quantity of water,'" said Officer Herb Silverman. "He said, 'Well, I guess you got me.' He just had that sign of dejection on his face."

Thomas R. Hurley, 23, of Plainview, Long Island, told police he was taking the water for his employer's truck washing company.

Ramirez wants guilty plea

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Ramirez, the Texas drifter charged with 14 slayings and 22 sexual assaults in the "Night Stalker" string of attacks, wants to plead guilty but his lawyer won't let him, his sister says.

"He just said that his life was in danger in there (jail) and that's the plea he wanted to enter," Rosa Flores told KCBS television Friday. She was relaying the message for her brother, she said.

"Due to the extensive publicity, he says he cannot receive a fair trial and wants to give himself guilty," Ms. Flores said.

Ramirez, 25, was arraigned Friday on 68 felony counts based on 20 attacks upon 28 victims in Los Angeles County.

Ferraro book revealing

NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro says her campaign last year for vice president was "almost unbearable," as she was subjected to scrutiny, bigotry and sexism.

Yet the hardships were offset by the opportunities her candidacy opened for women like her two daughters, "expanding their life options a thousandfold," the former New York congresswoman wrote in "Ferraro: My Story," to be published by Bantam Books in November.

College unscrambles education

PUTNEY, Vt. (AP) — Keith Promisel and 76 fellow students would love to read this story about themselves, but will find it much tougher than most in their college-age peer group.

They are dyslexics.

They also are students at Landmark College, a first-of-its-kind program for high school graduates that began classes last week on the former campus of the defunct Windham College.

Landmark's admissions requirements state clearly: only dyslexics need apply.

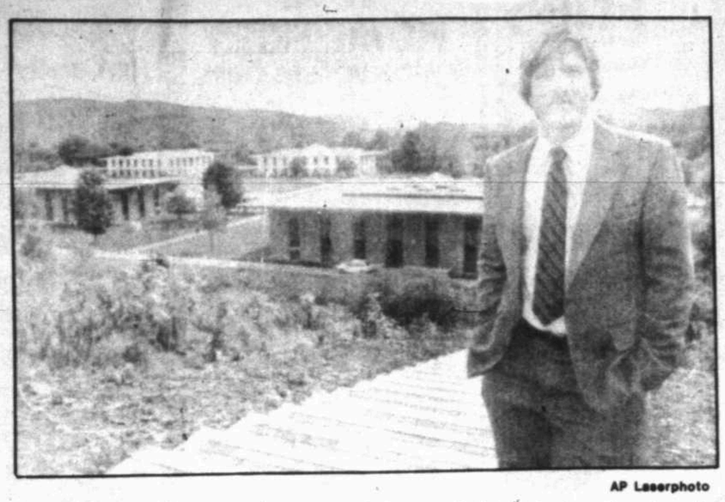
The price of the school, which is operated for profit, rivals the most expensive colleges in the country: $17,500 a year for the college program, and $18,250 for the pre-college skills programs for youngsters needing help with basic language.

But for that price, students get a 3-1 pupil-teacher ratio, with 77 students enrolled in pre-college skills development and college-level programs. Most are in the pre-college program, and classes generally have three to six students. President James Olivier said he expects it will be four years or longer before the college wins full accreditation; it now offers an associate's degree.

"Dyslexics are individuals who have average to superior intellectual ability, and who have intact sensory systems, their acuity is fine and their hearing is fine," he said. "They are people who do not have substantial emotional problems and are motivated, but are unable to learn at the same pace as others. It appears to be neurological, but no one has identified the cause of the problem."

"That doesn't mean I can't read. I can read fine. It just takes me longer," Promisel said.

"Scrambled transmission of messages," is how Olivier explained the problem.



AP Laserphoto

The first college in the United States for dyslexics, Landmark College in Putney, Vt., is overseen by President James Olivier.

Albert Einstein was dyslexic. So was Nelson Rockefeller. Twenty million Americans are estimated to have dyslexia. Male dyslexics outnumber females by 4-1.

According to Olivier, dyslexics generally are terrible spellers.

"Dyslexia is incurable in the sense that you never get over it," Olivier said. "But dyslexics can improve their skills and the way they deal with their problem."

The college is under the direction of Landmark Schools Board Chairman Charles Drake, himself a dyslexic who already operates elementary and secondary schools in California and Massachusetts as well as a shipboard study program.

Unlike other programs geared toward those who suffer dyslexia, Landmark does not use the "bypass" method of instruction: tapes and other audio-related tools that enable a dyslexic to take information in without having to employ reading skills.

Landmark's programs stress repetitious drills requiring intense concentration and discipline. Each pre-college class is followed by a one-on-one tutorial, in which the instructor repeats the key points of lessons a student has just heard.

"It's hard, hard work, especially for someone who's never worked this hard before," said Promisel, a 19-year-old Californian who has a dyslexic sister and who wants to be a writer.

He said his affliction was diagnosed when he was a high school junior, after years of being labeled "lazy" and a "troublemaker" because he grew frustrated at not keeping up.

Congress searches Superfund funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even though Congress and the White House agree that the battle against toxic wastes must be widened, money for "Superfund" is set to dry up at midnight Monday with renewal of the program still weeks away.

"The time for dawdling is down to zero," says Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee, which in July approved a $10 billion Superfund reauthorization bill still awaiting action by other House committees.

On the other side of the Capitol, the Senate on Thursday voted 86-13 for a $7.5 billion renewal plan that had been ready for floor debate since June but was delayed because of a dispute about its tax language.

Superfund was created in 1980 in response to toxic hotspots like Love Canal in New York and Times Beach in Missouri. The program had an initial five-year budget of $1.6 billion, which the Environmental Protection Agency asked Congress this year to increase to $5.3 billion through 1990.

The bulk of the money under the 1980 law comes from a tax on petroleum and basic petrochemicals that are building blocks for poisons found in the 850 landfills listed by EPA as the nation's worst toxic sites. These toxins are also found at tens of thousands of other dumps around the country.

But at midnight Monday, the first half-decade of Superfund ends with the expiration of its taxing authority, only six dumps cleaned up and work halted at 57 sites until Congress and President Reagan agree on new legislation.

There is no disagreement in Washington that the cleanup effort should be reauthorized for five years with a greatly increased budget. But there is sharp division over how to raise and spend the money.

Options open to the House taxwriters are politically delicate. Increasing the present tax would set off explosions among petroleum and petrochemical lobbyists. Taking the money from general revenues would upset lawmakers concerned with the growing federal budget deficit.

New Orleans desires streetcar homecoming

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With free rides, jazz bands and a 13.2-mile-long block party, the city is marking the 150th anniversary of the world's oldest continuously operating streetcar line.

And while an estimated 250,000 people are joining in the celebrations, officials are working to fullfill a streetcar desire, by bringing home some of the system's historic cars.

Thirty of the city's remaining 35 1923-vintage streetcars were requisitioned for a Saturday parade down St. Charles Avenue, the last remaining line, with participants wearing period costumes from 1835 to the present.

City officials expected about 400 businesses and residents along the historic avenue, lined with oak trees and mansions, to participate in the block party. And streetcar rides were free all day.

Each year more than 6 million passengers board the red and green cars to sit on mahogany seats for the clattering, clanging ride. Fares, originally a quarter, now are 60 cents.

Streetcar buffs and transportation officials who want more cars for the line have launched a drive to recover those that were given to at least 17 cities in 1964 when routes were disbanded in an age of less nostalgia.

"When the Canal Street line was discontinued, most of the cars were cut up and incinerated," said Cynthia Reeves, a director of the private non-profit Bring our Streetcars Home committee. "Others were practically given away. If you had a truck and $700, you had a streetcar."

Quake shakes Mexico's uneven economy

WORLD

EDITOR'S NOTE: As rescue workers sift through the debris, government officials sort through the numbers to determine how much damage two killer earthquakes did to Mexico's heavily indebted economy. Many believe the cost of rebuilding will be born by business owners like Javier Romero, whose uninsured design company was destroyed.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Marcos Sanchez sat in a gold velvet chair on the sidewalk, surveying what little the recent earthquakes left of his film distribution company.

As moving trucks prepared to carry desks, chairs, papers and other office goods to a new location, Sanchez estimated the damage at about $25,000 and said it would come out of his own pocket. He had no insurance.

Several blocks away, Javier Romero carried papers from his design company, Mundo Creativo, which also was destroyed by the first, killer quake Sept. 19. He also lacked insurance.

"It's going to be a big loss for me," Romero said.

The government has released no official damage figures. But the Engineering Institute at the National Autonomous University of Mexico roughly estimates damage to buildings and property at $1.5 billion.

Many buildings were believed uninsured and experts say reconstruction costs will have to be borne by owners like Sanchez and Romero unless the government helps out.

Damage estimates do not include the loss of income for those whose workplaces were destroyed or the social costs of the disruption.

The earthquakes that rocked Mexico Sept. 19-20 killed thousands of people and left thousands more homeless. An interagency commission on the quakes estimated that 1,132 buildings were damaged.

Like the rescue workers who still are sifting through the debris, government officials and economists are sorting through numbers, trying to calculate the effect of the quake on Mexico's embattled economy.

Many wonder if Mexico will be able to meet payments on its $96.4 billion foreign debt.

Roberto Meli, deputy director of the Engineering Institute, estimated that 20 percent of the collapsed or badly damaged buildings housed government offices. More than half, he said, were houses or apartment buildings and the rest were commerical property.

Abraham Martinez Rivero of the Federal District Workers Federation told English language newspaper The News that more than 50,000 people had been left jobless, some temporarily and others permanently.

"It's a very difficult social and political problem," said Luis Esteva, director of the Engineering Institute.

Mexico recently signed the final part of an agreement with its creditors to stretch out payments on about half its foreign debt. Mexico has been paying about $12 billion to creditors each year.

However, chief negotiator Angel Gurria said shortly before signing the agreement that the country still might need another $2 billion to $3 billion in new loans next year to close the gaps in its finances.

Carlos Mireles, president of the National Chamber of Manufacturing Industry, has called for a yearlong suspension in debt payments so the country can use the money to rebuild. But there has been no indication Mexico will ask for such a moratorium.

Indeed, some bankers believe Mexico may go out of its way to meet its obligations. One U.S. banker, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said bankers fear that if they give Mexico a break on the debt, it will set an undesirable precedent for other indebted countries.

President Miguel de la Madrid, after touring disaster sites, said, "Obviously, this earthquake is going to complicate the management of our economic crisis." He said the international community must be "understanding of our problems."

Jaime Serra, director of the Center of Economic Studies at the Colegio de Mexico, said, "The event (the quake) might accelerate the thinking of and the possibility of talking about new stages of managing the debt."

Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog flew to Washington at the end of the week to talk to officials of the World Bank, International Monetary Fund and the International Development Bank about financial support, while countries and agencies from around the world responded quickly with disaster relief.

Some say the quake could have positive side effects, with the flow of money from abroad giving a boost to the economy and new construction opening up new jobs.

But economist Ignacio Trigueros of the Mexican Autonomous Technological Institute worries the destruction only will add to the economy's woes.

"You have to take into account that the economy already had quite a problem because of the budget deficit, high domestic interest rates and falling oil prices," he said.

"Given that difficult situation, things are a lot worse than before," he said. He predicted the economy will grow more slowly than expected next year because money that would have gone into investment projects will now be channeled into rebuilding.

Zulus, anti-apartheid blacks die in South African clash

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — At least four blacks died Saturday as members of the Zulu tribe and supporters of the main multiracial anti-apartheid group clashed with clubs, knives and hatchets near Durban, police said. Witnesses reported even more deaths.

One man apparently was burned to death during confrontations between Zulus and supporters of the United Democratic Front in the slum township of Lamontville, outside Durban. Witnesses said a flaming car tire was forced around his neck.

Police said other victims were stabbed or chopped to death.

The United Democratic Front, with 2 million members, accuses hereditary Zulu Chief Gatsha Buthelezi of collaborating with South Africa's white rulers because he accepts government money to operate his tribal homeland of KwaZulu, in Natal Province along the Indian Ocean coast.

In other anti-apartheid violence Saturday:

— Police in Port Elizabeth said they discovered the body of a black man who also was apparently burned to death by other blacks.

— Police said that before dawn they shot and killed a black man hurling a gasoline bomb in Kwazekhele, a black area near Port Elizabeth.

— Residents of Soweto, outside Johannesburg, said street battles erupted when soldiers fired tear gas and rubber bullets at thousands of mourners. There were apparently no casualties. Witnesses said the mourners had chanted freedom songs at the funeral of Novel Mabasa, 17, who died in rioting last week.

— Overnight violence spilled into a white residential neighborhood when an attacker tossed a gasoline bomb at a car, wounding the white male driver, police said.

Panama 'military pressure' puts old leader out, new in

Delvalle

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The National Assembly swore in a new president Saturday after Nicolas Ardito Barletta resigned his 11-month-old presidency, citing pressure from the military and members of his own government.

First Vice President Eric Arturo Delvalle, 48, was inaugurated as president to succeed Barletta, as provided for in the constitution.

Delvalle, a business executive and graduate of Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, said in a brief speech that Panama's problems place it "in the midst of a social, political and economic whirlpool" that presents "one of the most difficult times in its history."

Barletta, the country's first democratically elected president in 16 years, had struggled since his inauguration to introduce austerity measures to pull Panama out of its worst economic crisis in half a century.

In a national television and radio address delivered at 2:45 a.m. Saturday, Barletta confirmed reports of his resignation that had been circulating since Friday, when he cut short a trip to New York where he had addressed the U.N. General Assembly.

In his farewell address, Barletta said he had been informed by members of his coalition, the National Democratic Union, and "its legislators together with the Defense Forces that they consider they could no longer work with my presidency," he said.

Because of this lack of support, and "to preserve the country's democratic institutions" he said he had decided to step down.

Barletta, 47, a University of Chicago-educated economist, served as planning minister under the late strongman Gen. Omar Torrijos and as World Bank vice president for Latin America.

Sakowitz will close some stores in reorganization bid

By JUDITH CROWN

WORLD IN BRIEF

Rescue workers dig toward sobs

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S. and Israeli rescue teams tunneled through tons of earthquake rubble at a dress factory and parking garage Saturday guided by what sounded like sobs from a woman who neighbors say may be trapped there with children.

Scores of panicked people spent the night in the streets after a new tremor Friday night revived the horror of the great quakes that struck Mexico City and the surrounding area Sept. 19 and 20.

The government said the aftershock registered about 5.5 on the open-ended Richter scale and lasted about 50 seconds. No new damage or casualties were reported.

The U.S. and Israeli crews started working at about 4 a.m. Saturday in the working-class Morelos neighborhood near the center of the city, where damage from the two major quakes was greatest.

"There appears to be someone trapped in an automobile. The voice sounds like a woman. She seems to be sobbing," said Harry Dobroski of the U.S. Bureau of Mines office in Pittsburgh, who was among 200 rescue volunteers sent by the U.S. government.

Mob of Korean students protest

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of students shouting anti-government slogans marched in the streets of the capital, and witnesses said riot police used tear gas to block them from reaching Seoul's downtown.

Newspaper accounts said as many as 10,000 students took part in the demonstration late Friday night, which followed a two-day sports meet between Yonsei and Korea universities, two leading South Korean schools.

Forty-one students were still being held by police today, news reports said. Yonhap News Agency said 223 students were taken into custody by police, but that most were released with a warning.

Witnesses said the students sang dissident songs, and shouted "Down with dictatorship," and "We oppose the campus stabilization bill."

Among other things, the bill would have provided up to six months reorientation at so-called education centers, without trial, for student radicals. It also called for a maximum penalty of seven years in prison for those supporting student disturbances.

Liverpool council lays off 31,000

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Liverpool City Council has voted to lay off its entire work force of 31,000 people for at least three months, ignoring opposition charges that it is manufacturing a crisis for political ends.

The leftist council's Labor Party majority said Friday that the fault lay with the Conservative government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, which Laborites contend is bankrupting the city by withholding money.

The dismissal notices are to take effect on New Year's Eve, with the 90-day delay designed to let the council borrow money to pay workers' salaries until then. The council said they would be rehired after a new budget is adopted next April.

Iraq bombs Kharg Island repairs

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi warplanes Saturday attacked Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal for the fifth time in as many days, and Persian Gulf shipping executives said the Iraqis appeared determined to put the facility out of service.

It was Iraq's 15th attack since Aug. 15 on the terminal, which handles the bulk of Iranian oil exports.

Boat people land in Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Twenty-six Vietnamese refugees in a 26-foot-long boat landed Saturday at Kuala Besut Beach, 180 miles northeast of Kuala Lumpur, the national news agency Bernama reported.

The agency quoted a Kuala Besut police spokesman as saying the Vietnamese were taken to a refugee camp to await permanent settlement in the United States, Canada, Australia or another country.

Some 8,000 Vietnamese refugees in Malaysia are awaiting resettlement, down from a peak of 76,500 in June 1979.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight - Cloudy and cooler with a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms, a few possibly heavy. Lows middle 50s. Southerly winds 10 to 20 mph.

More wet, cool days in store

From Staff and Wire Reports

The Midland area will be in store for more dreary weather as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal predicts mostly cloudy skies today with a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high today will be in the upper 60s. Winds will be from the east at 5 to 15 mph. Afternoon winds will shift to the north.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The low will be in the mid-40s.

Monday calls for skies to become partly cloudy. The high will be in the upper 60s.

Saturday's high of 83 was 17 degrees below the record set in 1977. The low of 68 was 27 degrees above the record set in 1945.

STATE

Moisture swept northward from the Gulf of Mexico over the eastern two-thirds of Texas Saturday, prompting showers and thunderstorms from the coast to the Panhandle and Trans Pecos.

The rains led the National Weather Service to post a flash flood watch through Sunday in the Texas mountain regions.

Afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s with highs in the 90s along the Rio Grande and lows in the 50s and 60s in the Panhandle.

In the forecast, rain is expected through Sunday in North Texas with highs in the 70s and 80s and lows from the 40s to near 70. Rains should end by Monday afternoon.

Heavy storms could bring flooding to the mountains of West Texas.

NATION

Heavy snow blanketed the central Rockies and high Plains on Saturday as thunderstorms were scattered over the southern Plains. Sunny skies prevailed over the nation's eastern third.

The heaviest snow — up to 7 inches — fell in a band from southeast Wyoming across northwest Nebraska and southwest South Dakota.

Valentine, Neb., and the foothills west of Cheyenne, Wyo., received 7 inches of snow in a 24-hour period ending Saturday afternoon, while 6 inches fell at Dayton and Big Horn, Wyo., and at Martin, S.D.

Up to 8 inches more snow was expected to fall Saturday night.

City's tax collectors go to work

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The tax collectors are after your money.

To impress and remind the people, they are bombarding the taxpayers with more than 170,000 tax notices this week.

Payments are due between Oct. 1, 1985, and Jan. 31, 1986. But the tax collectors, Frances Shuffield and Roland Wilkinson, would like to have the money — more than $65 million — long before Feb. 1, when unpaid taxes become delinquent and the errant taxpayers' burden increases.

While taxpayers are contemplating paying their taxes, Wilkinson, chief appraiser for the Midland Central Appraisal District, noted that for now there are tax benefits for homeowners who pay property taxes prior to Jan. 1. At present, property taxes may be used as deductions on the federal income tax. That may not last.

"This may be the last year that you can deduct property taxes from your income-tax liability," he said. "That's the main thing that they (the federal government) are going after" in the proposed federal tax reform.

"I don't agree with it," Wilkinson said. "It taxes you on your taxes if you are not allowed to deduct it."

"IT BEHOOVES all property owners who itemize their deductions to pay their 1985 tax bill on or before Dec. 31, 1985," Wilkinson said. He also advised property-buyers to check with their mortgage companies by early December to "make sure" that their taxes have been paid. Otherwise, they miss out on the tax benefit.

Taxpayers also will miss out on being assessed penalties and interest on delinquent taxes by paying on time and keeping off the delinquent tax roll. Wilkinson and Mrs. Shuffield, who is the Midland County Tax-Assessor Collector, will seek to collect delinquent taxes after Jan. 31. If the 1985 taxes go uncollected by mid-year, the two will turn delinquent-tax accounts over to tax attorneys, who charge a 15 percent collection fee. The late-paying taxpayers pay the fee.

"It's not right for 97 percent of the people to pay their taxes, while the other 3 percent ride a free cart," said Wilkinson, who collects about $54 million in taxes for the city of Midland, Midland Independent School District, Midland College and the Midland County Hospital District (Midland Memorial Hospital). Mrs. Shuffield collects more than $11 million in ad valorem taxes for Midland County and the Greenwood Independent School District. She brings in 98 percent before turning collections over to the tax attorneys.

TAXES ARE based on the countywide tax base of $5.123 billion, which takes in real estate, including land, homes, businesses and industries; personal property, such as recreational vehicles, boats and airplanes; and minerals, including oil-and-gas properties.

Those who have questions about their Greenwood ISD or Midland County taxes may telephone Mrs. Shuffield at 687-0158 or 563-9393. Questions dealing Midland public school, city, college and hospital taxes may be directed to Wilkinson at 699-4991.

"We are serious about collecting delinquent taxes," Wilkinson said.

Wilkinson, as does Mrs. Shuffield, has the "authority to call off" the delinquent-tax attorneys "if there is a hardship case." This particularly applies to people over 65 years of age on low limited or fixed incomes.

"We definitely have to be compassionate toward those individuals and allow them to make pay-out arrangements for payment of their taxes," Wilkinson said.

Most taxpayers pay their taxes before the deadline and thus avoid the penalty and interest exacted on delinquent taxes.

The penalty-and-interest charges are 7 percent of the tax bill in February, 9 percent in March, 11 percent in April, 13 percent in May, 15 percent in June and 18 percent in July. Thereafter, the rate increases 1 percent per month. But in addition to the 18 percent beginning in July, there is the 15 percent surcharge levied by the delinquent-tax attorneys. That would bring the add-on cost to 33 percent.

"I THINK the (Texas) Legislature was trying to impress people that they need to take care of their local government needs," Wilkinson said.

"With the prime interest rates being what they are now (9½ percent), it's definitely to the taxpayers' benefit to pay their taxes (early) even if they have to borrow the money."

In addition, law allows for the half-payment of taxes no later than Nov. 30; the other half is to be paid by June 30.

"I think it (the half-payment provision) must have been to provide relief for those who could not pay their taxes at one time," Wilkinson said.

Midland County, as does the city, Midland ISD, college and hospital, allows for the half-payment provision.

Hundreds of rescue workers still swarmed over the debris of many collapsed buildings in Mexico City Thursday, but time was slipping away for the survivors trapped inside. Seven days had already passed since the earthquake, and workers were still bringing people out alive. Demolition crews were also at work, because the thousands of bodies decomposing beneath the ruins were a potential health hazard. Doctors feared few of the still-trapped survivors would be able to survive the weekend.

Trinity's primer class offers transition time

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Primer classes may prove to be the gift of time for developmentally young students like Drew, Mendy, Brian and Matthew.

One might conclude that these 6- and 7-year-old youngsters, unlike many of their peers at Midland's Trinity School, are caught somewhere between kindergarten and first-grade.

Though some can read and write at grade level, others are unable to sit and complete paper and pencil tasks, lack sufficient coordination skills or may not be capable of following the simplest of instructions.

These youth "are not intellectually slow. They just need to develop other skills," schoolteacher Pat Freeman said.

The primer class, she asserts, will provide transitional placement to students between kindergarten and first-grade who are not yet ready to sit down at a desk and do paper and pencil tasks.

What's more, the classes emphasize the child's social and emotional well-being, Mrs. Freeman said. "Development of the child as a whole person is the goal of this transition class."

Willie Nelson: Whatever happened to the outlaw?

Watching the FarmAid concert last week it suddenly occurred to me that Willie Nelson has become "establishment."

Despite his long hair and unkempt appearance, he seems to be moving toward mainstream America. It probably started with his Stardust album, which featured a lot of songs that the older generations grew up with, things like "Moonlight in Vermont," "September Song" and at least one by Hoagy Carmichael.

Then he became buddies with Jimmy Carter. He started hanging out at the White House, doing concerts there and, next thing you knew, every time you looked in the newspaper there was a photograph of him with his arm around the president, both usually wearing jeans — Willie's were faded, Jimmy's were brand new and had perfect creases.

Next, it became known he was a golf junkie.

That shocking bit of news was followed by the fact that he quit doing drugs, telling his backup musicians "if you're wired, you're fired."

Now, he's organizing concerts for the family farmer. If you watched the program you saw him interviewing congressmen and talking, with at least a certain amount of expertise, about pending farm legislation.

I knew he had gone the full cycle when my dad, whose idea of good music is Tony Bennett singing "I Left My Heart in San Francisco," recently borrowed a couple of my albums so he could enjoy Willie, too.

There is something about the man that appeals to people. This must be particularly true with his fellow musicians because he has recorded with a long and impressive list of them. To name a few, there's Waylon Jennings, Ray Charles, Merle Haggard, Ray Price, Johnny Cash, Leon Russell, Kris Kristofferson, Roger Miller, Neal Young and, of course, Julio Iglesias.

Everyone, it seems, is a Willie Nelson fan these days. It has become fashionable.

It wasn't always like that.

There was a time when he was considered an outlaw — too weird for the Nashville crowd and too country for the rockers. "You can't dance to his music," young people constantly complained.

It has always been a source of pride for me that I first started liking him back when people, upon hearing his name, assumed he was black. They were fools, of course, but since he hadn't made a commercial name for himself at the time I suppose their ignorance was somewhat understandable. This was back in the early '70s.

Hard-core country fans can go farther back than that. He spent many years writing songs that became hits, but usually they were recorded by someone else. And, since most people remember the singer rather than the writer — a fact that has always struck me as terribly unfair — Willie remained basically an unknown.

That began to change when he left Nashville and returned home to Texas. He grew his hair long and became a cult hero of sorts, especially around Austin.

That's when people like myself, who were beginning to tire of rock music but couldn't really appreciate the Buck Owens-Conway Twitty brand of country music, decided he was on to something special. Besides, we were never good dancers anyway.

We became snooty about our music. If it wasn't recorded by a select few artists, we considered it drivel. Indeed, we laughed at people who didn't share our disdain for other types, especially disco. Either they were one of us or they were nobodies. There was no in-between.

Apparently our snobbery worked because more and more people came over to our side. Willie became a big star. He made millions, starred in movies and was even interviewed by Barbara Walters, a sure sign that he was now one of the good guys.

I'm happy for him but, somehow, it was more fun when he and his followers were considered outlaws.

DEATHS

'Stanley' Connally

Connally

Arthur "Stanley" Connally, 64, of Midland died in a Midland hospital Wednesday after a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Monday in Thomas Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Robert E. Latham of Mount Calvary Baptist Church officiatng. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Connally was born July 23, 1921, in Mineral Wells. He was graduated from Manual Arts High School in California and attended Texas College in Tyler. He was an active member of the Kappa fraternity. He also served in the United States Army.

He moved to Midland in 1947 and married Thelma Young in 1957 in Midland.

Homeward bound

Becky Stacy, 3, in the arms of grandfather Jim Miller, waves good-bye to a nurse in the pediatrics ward at Midland Memorial Hospital as she leaves for home. Watching in the foreground are brother Jonathan, and her mother, Joy Stacy. Becky was injured in a freak accident Aug. 15 when a part of a child's bow and arrow set imbedded in her head. Although the initial diagnosis was that she might not live or would be severely brain damaged, Becky progressed rapidly after coming out of a coma. She will need daily physical therapy. The family, however, has no insurance and a fund has been set up at RepublicBank First National Midland, Valerie Fields, account 3130827.

Woman may have seen killer's hand

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A banker's wife may have been killed by an alleged extortionist because she noticed his disfigured hand and could identify him.

The San Antonio Express-News quoted unnamed police sources as saying Rebecca Jo Patton was shot to death after she noticed Lesley Lee Gosch had several missing fingers on his left hand.

The newspaper said the information came from informant Stephen Hurst, who said Gosch and his alleged accomplice told him the entire story.

Mrs. Patton, 42, was gunned down inside her home in the fashionable Alamo Heights neighborhood Sept. 18. She died moments after she placed a telephone call to her husband, then put a man on the phone who demanded money.

The caller told Frank Patton Jr., president of Castle Hills National Bank, he wanted a large amount of cash in return for Mrs. Patton's safety.

Police Wednesday arrested Gosch, 30, and John Laurence Rogers, 31, and charged them with capital murder in the case.

The informant allegedly told police Mrs. Patton was killed after Gosch noticed her staring at his hand while he was talking on the telephone.

The FBI refused to confirm or deny the story and Alamo Heights Police Chief Roger Terry could not be reached for comment.

The informant also told police that the suspects decided to abandon the extortion effort when they saw Alamo Heights police cars arrive at the Patton house, the newspaper reported.

The newspaper said Hurst turned over to authorities a .22-caliber pistol used in the slaying.

Gosch planned the extortion effort, according to the newspaper, because he needed money to leave the country. He was to have been sentenced last Friday for illegally manufacturing a silencer, but never showed up at the federal courthouse for sentencing.

Meanwhile, an affidavit filed in district court indicates that Hurst learned of the killing when one of the suspects gave him a briefcase of firearms and ammunition for safekeeping. The suspect told Hurst of the aborted extortion attempt and slaying.

The affidavit was filed with state District Judge David Berchelmann along with a search warrant Berchelmann issued Wednesday.

Also on file was a list of weapons and other items confiscated when officers raided the northwest apartment occupied by Gosch and Rogers.

The affidavit said Hurst told authorities Rogers gave him a briefcase containing a .22-caliber Ruger pistol, a .357-caliber pistol, a .380 PPK pistol, two silencers and ammunition.

The afffidavit, signed by Texas Ranger Bruce Casteel, said Hurst went to the two suspects' apartment later that day.

"Rogers told him the deal went sour and that Gosch emptied a clip into Rebecca Smith Patton," the affidavit said.

In a related development, a sailboat shop owner reported Gosch may have met Patton while he worked at the store this summer.

Chris Cotham, owner of Sweetwater Sail Craft Inc., said Patton and at least 10 other bank presidents patronize his store.

Cotham said Patton came into the shop this summer looking for a boat trailer. Cotham said he does not remember Gosch talking to Patton, but they must have met sometime this summer.

"He (Gosch) may have answered the telephone (when Patton called the shop) or seen Patton walk upstairs," Cotham said.

Four persons charged in Kermit drug bust

From Staff Reports

KERMIT — A Dallas man is being held on a $500,000 bond and three others were charged during a Friday afternoon drug bust in Kermit, said a law enforcement official.

According to J.R. Carpenter, a captain with the Winkler County Sheriff's Office, an intensive investigation led to the arrest of Billy Joe Clark, 56, of 1902 Leroy Road in Dallas. Clark was charged with two counts of delivery of a controlled substance (methamphetamines) and assessed a bond of $250,000 per charge.

Also charged were three Kermit residents, Ramona Lucille Lattion, 29; Kenneth Wayne LeRoque, 30; and Joyce Elaine Jones, 31.

According to Carpenter, LaRoque and Ms. Jones were arrested about 1:30 p.m. and charged with one count each of delivery of a controlled substance. Both were placed on a $25,000 bond.

Ms. Lattion was arrested later, he said, and charged with three counts of delivery of a controlled substance. Her bond was set at $15,000 per charge for a total of $45,000.

Clark was arrested shortly after 6 p.m., Carpenter said.

The four suspects are still in custody and have not posted bond.

Carpenter added that "the investigation had been on-going for quite some time and was conducted by the Winkler County Sheriff's Office with the assistance of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency."

"We also had some assistance by the Ward County K-9 unit," he said. "The investigation is continuing and we anticipate some more arrests in the near future."

Midland police investigate separate stabbing incidents

From Staff Reports

Midland police reported two Midlanders suffered stab wounds to the arm in separate incidents early Saturday.

Greg Cessna, 771 S. Baird St., was treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital with a stab wound to the left arm after he was assaulted by three men shortly after midnight Saturday at Dallas Nights, 1006 S. Midkiff.

Cessna told police the assault occurred after an argument ensued at Kent Convenience Center, 3310 W. Wall, according to the report.

Police said an investigation into the aggravated assault continues.

Also, Dora F. Duran, 415 W. Scharbauer Drive, suffered a stab wound to the arm with an unknown object following an aggravated assault about 12:15 a.m.

Police reported an investigation into the aggravated assault continues.

In another complaint, Angelina G. Lara, 1600 S. Fort Worth, reported property, together valued at $480, was stolen either Friday or Saturday during a burglary at her residence.

Taken were two stereo speakers, an eight-track tape player, black and white television set and wrist watch.

According to reports, the burglary occurred between 7:30 a.m. Friday and 1:30 a.m. Saturday.

White praises response to Mexico relief efforts

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he is very pleased with the response to the statewide appeal for funds to help those suffering from the Mexico City earthquake.

"I'm overwhelmed," White said Friday when students and teachers of Johnston High School presented him with a $1,500 check for the Mexico relief fund.

"This is our response to your appeal to help," said Principal Adan Salgado of the Southeast Austin school. He was accompanied by a number of students and teachers.

"This is just another indication that when people work together they can do a great deal of good. This is a great example of what people in every walk of life and every age can do to help gather emergency funds for people in great need," White said.

Earlier in the week a statewide effort — Texas Response: Citizens for Mexican Relief — was announced with the goal of raising $15 million in Texas, or $1 for each resident of the state.

White said no money had actually been sent to Mexico, but as soon as the fund effort was fully under way there would be daily transfers from Austin to a special account in Mexico.

He said Thursday was the first day to receive contributions and the morning mail included 238 envelopes with over $5,000 from direct contributors.

"We are hoping there will be offering taken up at many churches Sunday throughout the state," White said, "and they will be added to the fund. Every bit of the money received will go to Mexico."

CLASS

In primer classes, children have the opportunity to progress at their own pace in a curriculum modified to an individualized approach. Much attention is given to perceptual, visual and motor skills.

Mrs. Freeman said lessons and activities in primer classes are carried out in small time segments of about 15 minutes each. The curriculum includes readiness for reading, math, social studies, science, physical education, French, writing, music and art.

Stations also are an "important" part of this classroom design. Children go to these centers to do small group projects or to receive one-on-one instruction.

"One of the things we try to work on in this class is a good self image," Mrs. Freeman said.

"I Like Me" is among the favorite songs students are learning in music class. The youngsters also completed their first social studies project — a book about themselves.

Though the primer class concept is not a new one, "it just must not be real prevalent in the Texas area," Mrs. Freeman said.

She added that primer classes are more prevalent in private schools than public schools. "I think the public schools have so many special projects now that I imagine taking on a little more between kindergarten and first-grade is more than they can handle."

The emphasis on social promotion also may be another reason for its limited use, Mrs. Freemand said. "It's difficult for a parent to decide whether their child should enter the transitional course rather than the first-grade curriculum.

"Trinity parents are involved in that decision-making process."

Rancher files bankruptcy following incest judgment

DALLAS (AP) — A Corsicana rancher who was ordered by a Waco jury to pay his daughter $10 million because of years of sexual abuse filed for protection from creditors Friday under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

Bob Sessions was ordered Aug. 29 by McLennan County jurors to pay the largest civil award in county history to his 18-year-old daughter.

Shelly Sessions accused her father of sexually assaulting her over the course of three years until, at age 16, she ran away from home.

In a 1983 trial, Sessions pleaded guilty to a charge of sexually assaulting his daughter. He was sentenced to 10 years probation.

Sessions, who also filed a petition Friday in Waco seeking a new trial, said he adopted Miss Sessions in 1969 when he married her mother, Linda.

Attorneys said Mrs. Sessions also filed for bankruptcy because she was joined as a party to the lawsuit.

"We think he probably has several million dollars in property, including a 1,000-acre ranch, a million-dollar house, jumbo CDs (certificates of deposit) and other property," Miss Sessions' attorney R.D. "Spike" Patillo told the Waco Tribune-Herald.

State District Judge Derwood Johnson said he has signed several temporary restraining orders since the trial to halt the transfer of Sessions' property.

"We think in the long run, his filing bankruptcy will probably work to her advantage, because he won't be able to pull any more shenanegans," Patillo said.

The Sessions' attorney, Dwaine Boydstun, said filing under Chapter 11 prohibits further state court actions until bankruptcy proceedings are completed.

Auxiliary puts MMH 'in the pink'

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

They're everywhere. At every turn in the corridor, their pink uniforms are seen scurrying here and there, delivering newspapers, dropping off flowers, consoling and guiding lost visitors through the labyrinth of Midland Memorial Hospital's hallways.

With more than 220 volunteers contributing two hours per week each, the MMH Auxiliary is a ubiquitous presence.

"For a hospital this size, there are a considerable number of volunteers," said Kim Modisett, director of volunteers. "I've been to state conventions of auxiliaries and I'd say we compare to even some of the hospitals in the larger cities."

A convention of sorts will bring more than 200 "pink people" together next week, according to publicity spokeswoman Carol Hall, when the annual district meeting of the Texas Association of Hospital Auxiliaries is held in Midland. Ms. Hall and Ms. Modisett estimate there will be representatives from more than 11 different auxiliaries for the event, which is being held locally for the first time in five years.

At the meeting, progress reports are given, new equipment that has been purchased is discussed and new services highlighted.

PROVIDING SERVICES and equipment for MMH is the name of the game for the auxiliary.

"The auxiliary has probably given more than $200,000 this year in donations and hours worked," said Ms. Modisett. "It's a substantial contribution."

Contributions by the all-volunteer organization — established in 1950 — ranges from expensive and sophisticated medical equipment to simply offering a few words of consolation to waiting family members.

The newest service, initiated in January, is geared toward the latter.

It's a restructured floor hostess service for the Intensive Care waiting area. "We provide coffee, tea and sympathy for the patient's family as well as serve as a direct line of communication between the patient and the family."

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Eulalia Geisler was a charter member of the Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary and still donates her time to the group.

According to Ms. Hall, the family members in the ICU lounge often spend most of their time waiting to hear word of the patient's condition.

"The visiting times are at 7 a.m., 11 a.m., 3 p.m. and 8 p.m., with 10 minutes and one family member per visit," she said. "It's 99 percent waiting and that's what we zero in on."

Having a chart of current patient conditions helps keep the family informed, indicated Ms. Hall, "but sometimes the very best thing you can do is go over and sit down and say a few words to them," she said.

BESIDES THE ICU program, the auxiliary also is involved in virtually every area of the hospital, including the gift shop (the major source of revenue for the group), the admitting office, emergency room, occupational therapy, physical therapy, radiology, the surgery waiting area and office, the blood bank and Allison Cancer Treatment Center.

In addition, the auxiliary offers such services as taking pictures of newborn infants, providing children's bags (filled with various play items), children's tours, a general information desk, car seat rentals for infants and toddlers and the delivery of magazines, flowers and newspapers to patients and their families.

The group, however, is not made up only of women and summer "Candy Stripers" (teen-age helpers), as used to be the case, suggested Ms. Modisett.

"We have several men who work for us, including our mailman, Moose," she said. "Everyone loves them, too. We couldn't do without them."

It seems, too, that many of the volunteers could not do without the auxiliary, if length of service is any indication.

"We recently had an awards banquet for volunteers and one woman was given an award for 19,000 hours of service," said Ms. Modisett.

Corrine Barley, the volunteer, is modest about her contributions, stating that "most of the hours were accumulated during holidays and Sundays when double hours are awarded."

Still, she enjoys it, said Ms. Barley, who regularly delivers newspapers and sits at the information desk.

ANOTHER VOLUNTEER, Eulalia Geisler, is still working for the Auxiliary two hours a week after 35 years of uniterrupted service.

Ms. Geisler, who also helped form the auxiliary's Memorial Fund in 1954 and still chairs it, has seen changes in the organization over the years.

"We had our first meeting in the old Midland Reporter-Telegram building on Missouri Street," she said. "We started out with about 50 volunteers and were mainly formed to help out the hospital in any way we could, but we didn't have as many money-making ideas then."

Indeed, the group thought it a major accomplishment when the Memorial Fund spent $100 to purchase a respirator for a patient room in the 1954, she said.

The last purchase by the Memorial Fund — monies collected by donations from family members — amounted to more than $15,000 in equipment.

"We just voted to buy $60,000 in monitors for the intensive care area," she said with some amazement.

Ms. Geisler, although chairing the ever-growing foundation, still contributes her time helping in the hospital — by mending sheets.

"We use a hot patch machine and replace the elastic," she said. "It's quite a chore."

The effervescent samaritan, however, said she never tires of the work.

"I enjoy it all," she said. "And when I can get up and walk out of there I consider myself lucky."

Dallas mayor wants to lose shirt in bet with Houston counterpart

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mayor A. Starke Taylor wants to lose his shirt in a bet he's placed on Sunday's game between the Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers for football bragging rights in Texas.

If the Cowboys win, Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire will wear a Dallas jersey, courtesy of Taylor, one day next week.

If the Cowboys lose, Taylor will wear a Houston jersey to Wednesday morning's City Council meeting.

Taylor and Whitmire agreed to the wager Friday morning.

"A Cowboys jersey should already be on its way to Houston," said Dorothy De La Garza, Taylor's administrative assistant.

She said Taylor told Whitmire that although he was a graduate of Rice University in Houston, he had "the good sense to move to Dallas."

Paul Mabry, Whitmire's press secretary, said all of Houston was excited about giving Dallas residents the opportunity to see high-quality TV pictures from the Astrodome, where cameramen don't have to contend with shadows caused by a hole in the roof like the one at Texas Stadium.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctor Study Says New 'Hi-Tech' Pills Give You "3 Times" Faster Weight Loss

No Dieting—Eat Normally Diet Pills Do All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—Good news for people who want to lose weight. In a recent highly successful clinical weight loss study, ALL people tested lost weight using an amazing new "hi-tech" diet pill program. The study was conducted by a panel of medical doctors in California on several groups of overweight people and the results proved conclusively that the new hi-tech pills test group lost weight almost "3 times faster" than the group tested using the famous grapefruit pill diet.

All Lost up to 1 lb. Per Day

Best of all, the pills allow you to "continue to eat all of your favorite foods without changing your normal eating or exercising habits and still lose weight easier and faster than ever before, starting immediately." Remarkably, ALL people in the new 'hi-tech' pills clinical test group lost weight (an average of ½ lb. per day up to 1 lb. per day.) It also helps eliminate bloat and puffiness.

"Pills Do All the Work"

According to the clinical study, "the pills alone do all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO special exercise, and NO hunger pangs." You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

Powerful Appetite Suppressants

The new pills contain a powerful clinically proven appetite suppressant that an advisory panel of doctors have determined to be "safe and effective for weight loss."

In addition, the pills also contain a remarkable calorie-free dietary fiber that expands in your stomach and tends to give you a partially satisfied feeling before you eat. Thus, the new combination of ingredients in the pills act 2 ways to aid in curbing your appetite, causing you to eat less, take in less calories, and lose weight without feeling deprived or hungry.

Pills Contain ALL Daily Vitamins

No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy because the pills are fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government USRDA recommended daily vitamin requirements.

The amazing 'hi-tech' diet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these new highly successful 'hi-tech' diet pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $14 for a 15-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check or money order to: HI-TECH Products, 717 Central Ave., Dept. 841, Kansas City, Kansas 66101. (30 day unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard, and Amer. Mexico's lessons

It's interesting how tragedy can bring out the best and the worst about human nature, but the fact is undeniable. Anyone who doubts it needs only look to the devastation wrought in Mexico.

Amid all the rubble, all the confusion, all the horror in the wake of those two earthquakes, the concern of people for those they had never met was in evidence. The relief pipeline from the United States and elsewhere throughout the world began flowing to help the victims of the disaster put their lives back into a semblance of order or to bury entire families lost in the nightmare.

Gov. Mark White requested a dollar from every Texan to help the relief effort and in Midland Dr. Lillian Wallis organized the Midland Earthquake Fund, which funneled several thousand dollars worth of emergency medical supplies to Mexico City this week.

Of course there were the usual reports of looting that accompany any disaster of major proportions, but without a doubt the good outweighed the bad. News reporters in Mexico City have remarked about the astounding manner in which the Mexicans have pitched in to help their countrymen through this disaster.

And in the midst of it all, there have been precious moments of life, such as when rescue workers found and freed from the rubble of a hospital more than one newborn infants.

The lessons to be gleaned from this latest catastrophe are many and varied: Skyscrapers are not constructed safely enough. Man does not hold onto his technologies for coping with such disasters long enough. The human will is stronger than at any other time during a disaster. And many, many more of the lessons will again be forgotten as the emergency slips away in the world's memory.

That's regrettable because as surely as the human race will continue, tragedies will occur from time to time and again man will have to relearn how to cope with disaster.

It is the goodness that disasters bring out in human beings and the little miracles that make such catastrophes bearable and strengthen mankind for the future. The goodness of a concerned world opening its heart and lending its hands to help a fellow nation survive. The miracle of babies found alive under the rubble. The strength of a nationality to endure when the very world is falling apart beneath its feet.

The earthquakes in Mexico brought hard lessons. But they were lessons worth embracing again.

Mrs. Ford's visit

Announcement that former First Lady Betty Ford is coming to Midland Oct. 9 should be greeted enthusiastically for a couple of reasons.

On the one hand, of course, Mrs. Ford, as the wife of President Gerald Ford, is a highly visible spokesperson whose public appearances traditionally attract large audiences. While in the White House she concentrated attention on the arts, handicapped children and women's issues. But since leaving the limelight of the White House, she has devoted attention to public speaking with particular emphasis on the topics of alcoholism and chemical dependency.

It's in that context she comes to the Tall City on Oct. 9. Mrs. Ford's visit is being sponsored by Families All Coming Together and the Junior League of Midland.

Fully understanding the subjects of alcohol abuse and chemical dependency is crucial in today's rapid-paced society and Mrs. Ford's words of wisdom regarding "Substance Abuse: A Family Illness" undoubtedly will be valuable to many Midlanders. It is a subject in which she has had personal experience.

We join the thousands of concerned Midlanders in welcoming Mrs. Ford to Midland. Her efforts in focusing public attention on these matters of concern are greatly appreciated.

Another View: France's 'blunder'

France's admission Sept. 22 that its agents sank the Greenpeace flagship Rainbow Warrior while it was docked in Auckland, New Zealand, is shocking. French President Francois Mitterrand — whether he knew about the attack in advance or not — will be damaged politically.

Mr. Mitterrand's Socialist Party government faces a tough struggle to retain control of Parliament in next year's national elections, and the Greenpeace incident will not help.

America's strained relations with New Zealand over the issue of nuclear arms also could further degenerate over the mining of the Rainbow Warrior by French secret service agents.

New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange wants to keep nuclear-armed U.S. ships out of his neighborhood and to stop France from testing nuclear weapons in the South Pacific.

Mr. Lange's positions are detrimental to maintaining South Pacific security against the "target of opportunity" adventurism of the Soviets, and the French Greenpeace attack could make his position even more intransigent.

New Zealand morally supports Greenpeace's anti-nuclear position, and French agents have promoted even more sympathy for Greenpeace by blowing up the Rainbow Warrior and killing one of its crew members.

The Rainbow Warrior had been scheduled to sail for French Polynesia to protest French nuclear tests.

France simply should have intercepted and turned back the Greenpeace ship when it approached the test zone. The fact that French intelligence officials acted in the manner they did and a coverup of one degree or another followed may lead to a Paris version of Watergate.

Mining third-party ships in foreign ports is not the most sensible reaction to political differences, especially from a country which prides itself on diplomatic skills.

The Greenpeace affair was not only shocking, but stupid.

JACK ANDERSON

Hardliner has Reagan's ear on arms

WASHINGTON — The individual most likely to influence President Reagan's arms-control position at the Geneva summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is a third-echelon Pentagon aide named Richard Perle.

Jack Anderson

As assistant defense secretary for international security policy, hardliner Perle is preparing a top secret report due for delivery to Reagan on Nov. 15 — four days before he leaves for Geneva. The deadline was actually set before the summit was agreed on, but its coincidental timing is sure to increase Perle's clout on arms-control issues — which already exceeds that of anyone in the administration, according to many insiders.

How did someone who's still a registered Democrat four years after going to work at the Pentagon gain such influence in a conservative Republican administration? The answer seems to be that Perle's ardent anti-Soviet views, expressed in sometimes undiplomatic language, are combined with a keen sense of what is politically possible and how to achieve it.

Perle came to Washington 16 years ago to work for Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson, D-Wash. Together they worked effectively to block what they considered arms-control appeasement of the Soviets. In fact, Perle's power was so unusual for a Senate aide that President Ford, among others, tried to get him fired — without success.

The pudgy, often disheveled 44-year-old has expanded his power base at the Pentagon with the full support of Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who shares Perle's views — if not his grasp of history and the arcane elements of arms control. Perle relishes intellectual combat, and though he remains affable and soft-spoken in an argument, his eyes glisten when he looses a volley of scorn at an opponent.

Undaunted in confrontation with the high and the mighty, Perle once replied to criticism of the Reagan administration's policies by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.: "Maybe you have some terrific idea you've not shared with us. I'd love to hear it." Kennedy offered none.

Nor does Perle shrink from trampling upon the niceties favored in diplomatic circles. When the occasion demands, he can be blunt, as when he responded at a dinner meeting to British Foreign Minister Geoffrey Howe's long speech attacking Reagan's "Star Wars" initiative.

"In a mere 27 pages," Perle observed caustically, Howe had "succeeded in rewriting the recent history of the Soviet-American relationship, rendering it unrecognizable to anyone who has charted its course."

Our favorite example of Perle's combative debating style was his impromptu retort to two high-ranking Soviet academicians at a "peace forum" in Geneva last June. The provocation came first from Professor Anatoly Gromyko, son of Soviet President Andrei Gromyko, and the next day from Dr. Georgy Arbatov, director of the Soviet institute of U.S. and Canadian studies.

Perle's turn came and he discarded his prepared speech to refute the Soviets' distortions point by point. As it became clear that the diplomatic gloves were off, the Russians flushed uncomfortably and the audience grew quiet.

"I shall endeavor in these remarks to be both clear and candid," Perle said. "I should prefer to be diplomatic as well ... but in the 20 minutes allotted to me there is no time to treat, in the gingerly manner customary in international diplomacy, those ideas and arguments ... that are misleading, or malicious, or just simply false. Yesterday morning, Professor Gromyko contributed arguments of all three types, and Dr. Arbatov has done so again this morning.

"In a single breath, Professor Gromyko managed to celebrate 'the great victory over Japanese militarism in World War II' while condemning as 'an indefensible, immoral action' President Truman's use of atomic weapons to bring that war to a close. The use by the United States of the atomic bomb against Japan came at a moment when the Soviet Army was busy consolidating its hold over the countries of Central and Eastern Europe that it continues to occupy to this day."

GEORGE F. WILL

Gwynne Dyer sees future of only more wars

WASHINGTON — Gwynne Dyer has seen the future and does not like it one bit.

In his seven episodes of the series "War," beginning Oct. 1 on public television, he says we are doomed to nuclear winter unless we scrap the "whole system" of nation-states. In episode seven, he says a solution is at hand in ... the United Nations.

George F. Will

In the book derived from the series, Dyer perversely applies a principle of mathematics to political affairs for the purpose of advancing the "peace" agenda. Any event that has a definite probability, however small, "that does not decrease with time," will "eventually" occur. So nuclear war is a "statistical certainty" unless the probability is decreased. But, he says, the prerequisite for that decrease is the dissolution of national sovereignty.

Wearing a semi-Trotsky beard and dressed in the designer-proletarian style favored by Europe's middle-class leftists (jeans, leather jackets, turtlenecks, never a necktie) Dyer, a Canadian, sounds at the ragged edge of weariness and sarcasm. It is, evidently, a tiring business being one of the few sensitive people on the planet.

"It is impossible to care much about who won the battle (of Megiddo in 1479 B.C.), because both sides lived long ago and far away, and most of what they cared for ... has vanished utterly. This is not at all the way we feel about the Normandy invasion of 1944, but if history goes on long enough, the day will come when Megiddo and Normandy will seem on a par: equally futile and equally meaningless .... That war of 3,400 years ago was obviously a mere power struggle with no moral justification, whereas any war our nation becomes involved in today will be just and necessary. The soldiers who were killed on the battlefield of Megiddo died in vain, but if today's generation of young men have to die on the Central Front in Europe, it will decide the moral fate of mankind forever .... And I am the Queen of Sheba."

Working back from that sophomoric ending, through the caricature (no one says any war settles mankind's fate "forever"), Dyer's message is that the war against Hitler was meaningless because all wars are morally identical power struggles. He says Britain's resistance to Argentine aggression in the Falklands had "exactly the same effect" as the aggression in undermining international order.

He uses the word "all" relentlessly to deny moral distinctions that interest reasonable people. "We all live in fortresses we call states." Well, fine, but if he wants to turn "fortress" into a classification that does not classify, he could at least notice the (some of us think) morally significant differences between the internal arrangements and external aims of the world's more than 160 "fortresses." "The Israelis live much the same way everybody else does." Oh? Dyer lives in placid London.

"All soldiers belong to the same profession" and "beneath the uniform there is very little difference." Commenting on film of Soviet soldiers, Dyer says that had their parents emigrated to America, the soldiers might be serving in the U.S. Army. When he joins two banalities (yes, young men everywhere are physically similar; yes, they join the armies where they are born) to an assertion vague to the point of meaninglessness (Hitler's and Lincoln's soldiers were in "the same profession"), he inadvertently raises an interesting question: Is this why we have public television — to treat grave subjects flippantly?

Being a determinist of the most childish stripe, he argues that the "system" (of nations; of military-industrial complexes) churns along autonomously, manufacturing concepts such as honor and valor for manipulative purposes. The Soviet and American military-industrial complexes are "exactly the same."

If he believes that, he can believe the oddest things. In seven hours he does.

RUSSELL BAKER

Never make jokes about airport security!

I sometimes fail the test of the airport security machines. It is embarrassing. A red light flashes, ominous electrical sounds occur. An official woman says, "Just a minute!"

Russell Baker

People stare, smile, glance with irritation. A uniformed man, licensed to kill, lifts an eyelid.

"Don't make a joke," I scream silently to that interior twit who is always urging me to try ingratiating myself with people who only want me to move along quickly out of their lives. "In the name of Baal and Moloch, don't make a joke now."

With great effort I refrain from joking while emptying pockets of keys, coins, pens, spare belt buckles, toenail clippers and other metal freight which the machine, an obvious imbecile, can't tell from a Kalashnikov machine gun.

The temptation to joke about the machine's stupidity is almost irresistible. Gripped by this madness, I wonder if autopsy would show I suffered from a death wish.

In their final moments, even fully grown and whiskery men call for their mothers — "Mama! Mama!" — and as I feel the urge to joke overpowering me right there in front of the entire airport security team, I recall the words of my own mama, drummed into me in childhood.

"As you ramble on through life, son, whatever be your goal, when you get to the airport never make jokes about airport security because there is nothing funny about airport security."

The official woman signals me to circle around the Kalashnikov-detecting machine and walk through again, disencumbered of metal. Another official woman, holding a plastic box containing my pocket metal, seems interested in my toenail clippers.

Amazingly, I am able to read her thoughts:

"Why would a man, especially a man as slovenly and unkempt as this man, carry toenail clippers in his pocket? Fingernail clippers? Maybe. But toenail clippers? Only a terrorist ...."

I feel a suicidal impulse to laugh aloud and ask her, "Did you ever hear the one about the guy who grabbed the pilot by the shoe, stuck the clippers into his big toe and said, 'Take this plane to Cuba if you know what's good for your toenails.'?"

I am saved by hearing the long-ago words of my mother droning on about airport security:

"And the reason they don't laugh at people who make jokes about airport security is that there are some things that are just too serious to laugh about."

Words to live by, I reflect, studying the cannon holstered on the hip of the man licensed to kill. Surely he wouldn't? Not just because somebody made a joke. But what do they, in fact, do to people for making jokes about airport security? Perhaps they are taken to a special room somewhere behind the Lost Baggage Claim chamber and, there, horsewhipped.

"So you think there is something amusing about cheese thievery, eh, Mister Christian — sorry — think there's something funny about airport security, eh, Mister Toenails? Think you can get away with telling toenail hijack jokes to personnel trained to detect the slightest trace of amusement, eh? Well maybe a taste of the horsewhip will show you how badly you erred."

They wouldn't. Not horse-whipping. It is too old-fashioned. Horsewhipping was what used to be done to editors and columnists who offended important people. It ended after television became triumphant, which is strange when you think about it. You'd suppose horse-whipping would increase with television, wouldn't you?

But wait a minute: As a matter of fact, it wasn't airport security that my mother told me never to make jokes about. It was the feminist movement. As another matter of fact, horse-whipping was what my mother always said was too good for men who made jokes about the movement. How could I have forgotten?

They didn't even have airport security when the two of us traveled together. They had trolley cars. And one day when a fire engine passed our trolley car I laughed and laughed. "OK, what's funny?" she asked.

"You better hope the feminists never succeed," I said, "because when they finally let women drive the fire engine to the saloon to pick up the beer for the firehouse, those women will be called 'beerpersons.'"

"Do you know why that's not funny?" she asked. "Because there are some things in this world that are too serious to laugh about, and those things are the feminist movement."

As the official woman returns my metal, certifying me safe to fly to Newark, I think it was probably the children who warned that airport security was one thing that was too serious to joke about. Children know things like that. Ah well, once again I have got through it without a horsewhipping, but probably only because I couldn't think of a joke to make.

Luckily, I'm not very good at remembering jokes. Someday at an airport, though, my luck is bound to run out.

BILL MODISETT

Do-it-yourself projects tend to fall by the wayside

Bill Modisett

I suffer from the same ailment that afflicts a lot of good-intentioned do-it-yourselfers. I'm great on planning and even have a few good, semi-original ideas on how to accomplish various tasks. But somewhere between final planning and starting to build, I get sidetracked and all too often the project falls by the wayside.

A great example of my proclivity for unfinished projects is sitting in my garage. It's a wooden chest-of-drawers constructed (or partially so) of ash. I started it nine years ago in San Angelo because, well, I had some free time on my hands and I like to work with wood. But I simply never finished it, although I was down to the final sanding and staining. Now it's in disrepair. It serves as a hideaway for various tools and paraphernalia, discarded paint cans and assorted junk.

Why? That's the question. Unfortunately I think I know the answer and I don't really like it.

Nearing the completion of that project I realized there were a couple of aspects of completing it that I didn't feel comfortable doing. I wasn't experienced in a couple of the processes and was afraid I couldn't do them adequately, so I simply didn't finish the chest.

That was stupid, but I don't think I'm the only one who lets a lack of confidence occasionally keep him from completing projects — or even starting particular ones, for that matter — from time to time. And that's sad.

Down through history famous men and women have struck out on unknown paths and have proven that a little willingness to gamble is a reasonable and productive thing. Without that willingness this world would be a far, far different place.

Yet too frequently each of us stops just short of completing something of value simply because we don't have the courage to go ahead and try the unexpected or forge off into the unknown. So our lack of confidence — in ourselves, our abilities, our capacity to invent — keeps us from being all that we can.

Oh well, enough of that. I wonder what color of stain would look best on that wooden chest?

OK, enough's enough!

While rescue workers in Mexico were still toiling in attempts to free trapped victims from the rubble left by the recent earthquakes, a killer hurricane named Gloria was lashing the Northeast United States and forcing literally hundreds of thousands of people to rush inland.

Maybe it's a "test" to determine just how resolute is man's will, how strong is his faith, how compassionate is his heart.

If so, I hope we pass the test because if we have to fight Mother Nature in addition to coping with all the differences that man experiences with his fellow man, I'm not really certain we'll be successful.

How about some really shocking weather for a change, like a nice, warm, sunny day with fluffy clouds? In newspaper lingo, that doesn't really make good copy but it certainly makes good living!

'Cheap shot' put head of board on the spot

That was a "cheap shot" to have TV camera and the press called to put Chairman Ed Vogler of the Appraisal Review Board on the spot Monday by Mrs. Erskine. He was not informed in advance that he would be on camera to defend the actions of the board, and on such short notice should not have been required to do so.

Planned action of this kind will get fewer and fewer people willing to serve on our boards. We are fortunate to have capable, public-minded, and dedicated men and women willing to accept such appointments.

Esteem Machine play pleasantly surprising

Recently my family and I were privileged to attend a concert which was performed by a group of talented young men and women from Midland who call themselves the Esteem Machine.

I have to admit the basic purpose in my attending this concert which was staged in the church which we attend was one of curiosity since I have read with a certain amount of interest the letters which have been both pro and con on this group in the letters to the editor section of the paper. I wanted to see for myself just what all the concern was about.

I tried to attend this concert with an open mind but again I must admit that I felt that there must be some justification for the concern based on the old adage "where there is smoke there must be fire."

I was pleasantly surprised by the manner in which these teen-agers approached and discussed subjects which are considered "taboo" by many adults. The presentation in my personal opinion is excellent in the respect that it is teen-agers discussing subjects which all young people are confronted with almost every day and while the actors don't attempt to offer a blanket solution to these problems, they do convey the fact that all teen-agers have these problems, not just a few. And that there is no problem that is so difficult that it cannot be worked out with the right approach.

I watched some of the teen-agers in the audience during this performance and while they laughed at the humorous portions of the skits, I could also see their expressions change from time to time as the various "problems" were presented. Possibly these expressions were changing as certain problems hit very close to some of these young people.

Many times we, as parents don't give our children enough credit for having the intelligence or common sense to know the difference between right and wrong, just as they don't give us parents credit for being able to understand their problems and pressures.

This presentation of teen-age problems and pressures is not only good for the teen-agers in the audience, it was to a certain extent good for me because I found myself thinking that in some conversations with my son, my attitude may have contributed more to the problem than to his solution.

I am very glad that my family and I took the time to attend this program and I am very pleased that we have young people in our community who are not scared to get up on a stage and discuss subjects that many of us feel they shouldn't know about.

Keep up the excellent work Esteem Machine. If you help just one person then in my opinion all your efforts will have been worth it.

Do we need 11 workers on one jackhammer?

Regarding city street reconstruction, earlier this past week I counted 11 street construction workers "concentrating" on one jackhammer — including the one worker operating the jackhammer.

Several had shovels to lean on while others had none. Any wonder why the tax dollar does not go far either locally or nationally.

SPEAKING OUT

Some shun reality of abuse

By ELMA F. WESTPHAL

Elma F. Westphal, a student in Odessa, has been a resident of Midland for three years.

There are several ways to treat "reality." Some people choose to shun reality and close their eyes to it; others simply accept it, shrug their shoulders with a matter-of-factness; then there are those few who want to do something — if only to speak out and perhaps arouse an atom's worth of conviction in people responsive to God.

Child abuse has been prevalent for centuries in one form or another. The only difference today is that we assume ourselves to be a more civilized society than in the days when the "heathen" offered up children as sacrifices, sold them into slavery and fed some to the lions while the more affluent watched stoically.

This apparent or professed indifference to pleasure or pain is still as widespread in this more civilized society. In "Satan is Alive and Well on the Planet Earth," Hal Lindsey writes of a cult in California which had a dead infant floating in a glass tank constituting their altar. Children are being sold into pornography by their very own parents. The one story reported over the radio which continually haunts me is of a young toddler who was placed inside an oven by her own father only to be roasted alive.

It was not until someone reported a burning odor that the next door neighbors ventured to report they had heard the child calling out, "Daddy, let me out." Even so, those neighbors did nothing but listen. No one wants to get involved. Or is it we might still have a tinge of the old Graeco-Roman dignity exemplified in the stands as some cheered and others listened and watched pain impassively?

There is another very subtle form of abuse. It is camouflaged as "respect" for adults and parents. Respect is an admirable quality, although at times it is no more than instilled fear. I once heard an adult say, "Well, if you want to believe a child before you believe an adult!" Understanding children have an imagination and may even tell a lie, a parent should investigate a statement until the truth is known. A concerned parent would want to know the truth whatever the consequence. Then, act on that truth.

The newspaper reported an incident in which a mother and father attempted to exorcise their 2-year-old son by bashing his head and gouging his tummy to the point of vomiting in an effort to remove the demons which compelled him to continually imitate Michael Jackson.

More frightening an aspect than a parent who will not believe a child, is that of infants or toddlers who have not yet learned to talk. How are they to be protected, especially when people don't want to get involved?

Often divorce and economic pressures drive women to remarry without realizing the potential abuse they themselves bring to their children. Abuse sometimes is condoned by the real parent in lieu of a second divorce and replay of the original pressures. Thankful I and many are for the many children who have been blessed with loving and caring stepparents. Three cheers to those who labored for passage of bills ensuring child-support payments and for the new "Most Wanted List of Non-Paying Parents."

Recently a classmate of mine attempted to form a group against child abuse. Statistics as well as the drawbacks in that effort were comparably astounding. Comparisons were made between convictions in Midland and Odessa. I was extremely proud to be from Midland when it was reported that Midland does not tolerate drug abuse. Parents of "little victims" reported witnesses were required in order to take a case into court even though the Texas Penal Code — Code of Criminal Procedures (page 247, Article 38.07) states children under 14 years of age need not have a witness to corroborate the incident. Since when do these perpetrators commit these crimes with an audience?

The most common cop-out is to claim the incompetency of a child or trauma the child might experience in front of a judge and jury. I call it a cop-out when this same book, Texas Criminal Laws, gives the courts different outlets in the handling of evidence to avoid intimidation of young victims. They just don't want to expend the money toward such a meaningless effort. Why have these laws if officials in the judicial system cannot abide by them? Perhaps too many times these criminals are set free with a spanking by our judges and juries that it doesn't seem worth it.

With the recent rash of child abuse cases reported in Midland and Ector counties, my pride is waning but I will continue to pray for people to feel conviction against such atrocities. Since one is no longer required to give out a name when reporting suspected child abuse, to simply ignore these suspicions indicates one condones the inhumane treatment of defenseless children.

Children are being educated against such abuse, but how alert or aware are adults to these signs? How many when made aware or even when just suspecting something would report it or sit stoically by, maintaining all their dignity, unbothered by anyone — not even their consciences?

GUESS WHICH ONE IS ALLOWED IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS...

Hypocrisy dominates theme of Soviet propaganda

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-In-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Hypocrisy dominated the theme of the Soviet Union seeking to make additional propaganda points about the Strategic Defense Initiative which it calls "Star Wars," as do many critics of the American administration program.

In a speech to the U.N. General Assembly, the new Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze continued with his regime's demand for a ban on the SDI and added to the list of buzzwords by calling for "Star Peace."

At a recent press conference President Reagan told the world that he would not bargain away the SDI but insisted on a go-ahead for research and development, withholding deployment of the non-nuclear defensive missile system.

Preceeding Shevardnadze, Secretary of State George Shultz reassured the U.S.S.R. about the SDI. He insisted that Soviet acts of good faith and inclination to reach substantive agreement on nuclear arms reduction are absolutely essential rather than engaging in a propaganda offensive which the Soviets already unleashed through Communist Party boss Mikhail Gorbachev.

The U.S.S.R. has only said, repeated again by the Soviet Foreign Minister, that it wants to radically slash its arsenal of nuclear weapons which is far in excess of what we Americans stockpile as a defense against a first strike. The SDI is intended, as President Reagan emphasized, to defend us and all the free world if research proves successful.

Soviet propaganda wasted no time in latching on to a report by the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment which implied that the development of a defense against intercontinental missiles might make nuclear war between the United States and the U.S.S.R. more likely.

The report did say though that if America could devise an "extremely capable" shield which could protect many cities and our arsenal of nuclear arms we would be better off. In fact, we would end up by being alive.

An entire galaxy of eminent scientists and learned physicists on the other hand have written books and papers proving that the SDI, given adequate research facilities, can be carried out successfully. Many of these people, long immersed in the field of nuclear physics beginning with the first atomic bomb, conclude that the SDI can in time be about 95 percent effective against incoming ballistic missiles. The U.S.S.R. has been conducting its own tests in great secrecy for about 15 years, in violation of an ABM agreement with us. Only when we learned of the Soviet experiments did we undertake research and development of the SDI which began about five years ago. We do not know how far along the Soviets are with this program, but we can take no chances with our defenses.

Should the U.S.S.R. develop successfully its own system their regime can easily blackmail even a superpower like America if we have nothing comparable by which to defend ourselves.

Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze conferred with President Reagan on Friday, ostensibly to set up some guidelines for the president's summit meeting in Geneva during late November with communist leader Gorbachev. The chances of any "leak" from that White House meeting are slender.

If the Soviet Foreign Minister has any detailed plans to reduce U.S.S.R. offensive nuclear arms he can do that privately with President Reagan. Somehow, the Soviets always seem to prefer any type of tradeoff privately. There was no concrete news before we went to press on what the White House meeting achieved.

Whether Shevardnadze will discuss the plight of South Africa during his meeting with President Reagan is another question. In his remarks at the U.N. the Soviet Foreign Minister alluded obtusely to the U.N. founding superpower — meaning the U.S. — being soft on the Pretoria government. What he didn't say and what most people don't realize is the massive Soviet bloc trade with South Africa.

John Wallach, Hearst Foreign Affairs Editor, learned this from sources in Washington. For example, the DeBeers Corp. pays the Soviets nearly a billion dollars annually for its supply of gem quality diamonds which are then cut in South Africa. This gives Moscow nearly $1 billion to purchase Western goods from just this one South African company.

Both Secretary Shultz and his Soviet counterpart led the way at the 40th anniversary commemoration ceremonies for the founding of the U.N. forum. Needless to say, security was heavy at the approaches to the glass building that houses the U.N. with all its strutting actors looking for a day in the sun.

Of course, America pays one-fourth of the U.N. bill and New York City bears the brunt of thousands of unpaid parking tickets and various types of felonies committed by U.N. staffers, ranging from shoplifting and nonpayment of electric bills to assault and rape.

Just compare some of the costs with our traditional portion of 25 percent of the total bill which adds up to a whopping $198 million. The Soviet Union pays about $83 million; but get a load of this — Cuba pays 00.09 percent of the U.N. budget. Fidel Castro isn't the fastest check writer either. He still owes nearly $1 million. Then Libya, with all its oil revenues, pays $2.1 million; Poland pays $5.7 million and Iran $4.6 million. They all have one voice in common: attack America. When it comes time for suggestions on transferring U.N. headquarters elsewhere, like Moscow, for instance, all these deadbeats shout in unison "NO," that the U.N. is in place already. They obviously want all the freebees and the Good Life.

The U.S.S.R. and its surrogates use the U.N. as a nesting place for one of the biggest espionage operations in the world. We cannot keep tabs on all Soviet nationals and communist bloc officials attached to the U.N. who try to infiltrate our defense installations as well as pilfer high tech secrets from many major American industries.

Actually, the biggest defection falling into American hands was that of Arkady Shevchenko, for years chief Soviet delegate to the U.N. and a confident of long term Foreign Minister and now Soviet President, Andrei Gromyko. Shevchenko has been able to tell our government how Soviet foreign policy has been made over a period of many years, who was an active spy in diplomatic guise, and how in general the Soviets traded on propaganda.

As Shevchenko keeps observing, "watch out for the Soviet Union." He knows from experience that the Soviet word is no good.

Jazz Party musicians to visit MC campus

By H.A. TUCK

Student Activities Office again has arranged for some of the musicians participating in the annual Midland Jazz Party this week to present a small concert at Midland College. Several of the performers will gather at the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium at 2:30 p.m. Thursday. Although the concert is primarily for MC students, it's open to the public without charge. If you like the best jazz in the world, come out early Thursday for an hour of great entertainment.

The musicians always have a great time...and so will you!

MC hosts the second conference golf tournament Friday at Greentree Country Club, starting about 8 a.m. The Chaparrals played their first conference tourney last Friday in Levelland, hosted by South Plains College. Final conference event of the fall season is slated in two weeks at Western Texas Col-lege's course in Snyder.

The public is welcome to attend the Greentree event without charge, but the coaches and other players can't be on the course during play.

Three other tournaments are scheduled for the spring season. They are hosted by New Mexico Junior College, Odessa College, and New Mexico Military Institute.

The Chaparral golfers helped last Monday during the Greentree Pro-Am, serving as marshals and gofers.

MC golf coach Delnor Poss thinks he's got some good players this year, thanks mainly to four sophomores. One of them is former Midland High player David Pritchett, who was medalist at last year's MC tournament at Greentree.

The huge eighth annual Midland Arts Association's Juried Art Show opens Tuesday in the McCormick Gallery, which is located in the Allison Fine Arts Building. The show remains on display daily through Nov. 1.

Thomas Livesay, this year's juror and assistant director of the Dallas Museum of Fine Art, will spend Sunday judging the show. He will remain in Midland to present a talk at 10 a.m. in the Allison Building about Texas Regionalist Art. The public is invited to attend the presentation without charge.

Tuesday is the first day of the show and Thursday evening from 7-9 p.m. is the reception and presentation of awards.

Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursdayt, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. on Sunday. The gallery won't be open today, due to the judging process.

We recently reported the the college's phone system was having some problems, with non-functioning trunk lines giving callers the sound of a ringing, but with those phantom calls not reaching the switchboard.

The college Board of Trustees has given the green light for the administration to start investigating new phone systems and collecting bids for something better.

In the meantime, the situation isn't going to get much better...so please be patient.

It was a surprise to learn that some Midlanders weren't aware there was a new building on campus until we wrote last week about the planned Oct. 20 dedication and campus-wide open house.

Perhaps it slipped by because there wasn't any bond issue required to fund the building. It was constructed through revenue bonds, using funds already being collected, plus reserves on the budget. The building is located on the north side of the campus, near the tennis courts, the Learning Resource Center, and the Science Building. Called the Health Sciences Building, it houses programs for Associated Degree Nursing, Vocational Nursing, Respiratory Therapy, Radiology Technology, Fire Science, plus an operating Child Care Development Center.

Some portions of the building appear startlingly like a hospital, with beds, connections for oxygen, and extremely lifelike dummies in the beds. The functioning X-ray lab and other medical training apparatus help add to the realistic setting.

The building also includes a lecture hall with seating for about 90 people.

Especially fun to see is the Child Care Center, with its tiny chairs, play equipment and other features. This facility operates for children of staff and students, but also serves as a training and observation center for Child Care students.

Dedication of this building is slated for 4:30 p.m. on Oct. 20, with all other buildings open for visitors from 1-6 p.m. It's going to be a lot of fun, so plan on coming out that day.

Late registration finally ended last week and the official count for the fall semester was exactly 3,500 students enrolled for credit courses. That's just two students less than the 3,502 who signed up for the fall semester in 1984.

Although it was the first time that MC had declined in enrollment during a fall semester, the drop of just two students really seems insignificant. In view of enrollment declines of other colleges and universities, Midland's drop was tiny...and you can't get much smaller. According to our calculator, that a drop of 0.000571 percent and we can live with that.

Coach Joe williams sends his Chaparral tennis teams into full-blown action for the first time next weekend at the West Texas Collegiate Championship Tournament in Abilene. And he's not sure what to expect, since he has lots of new players.

There are three returning letter winners on the women's team, each a junior college All-American, and only one letterman back for the men's team. However, Williams feels this bunch of players can be as strong as last year's squads. They'll get a lot of work this fall with three events in October and three in November.

Records sought in pre-school abuse case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge in the McMartin Pre-School molestation case has ordered prosecutors to turn over records of a meeting in which they reportedly discussed dropping charges against five of the seven defendants.

The ruling by Municipal Court Judge Aviva Bobb came Friday, after defense attorneys asked for any notes, tapes and memoranda that may have been recorded during the March 16 meeting of prosecutors.

Attorney Forrest Lainer, who represents defendant Peggy Ann Buckey, 29, said Ms. Bobb's ruling meant that records from the meeting had to be turned over to defense attorneys by Tuesday morning.

Gilbert Garcetti, a chief deputy to District Attorney Ira Reiner, said prosecutors would oppose surrendering any material from what he said was a confidential meeting.

"We would never be able to have a meeting evaluating a case if the court permitted defense counsel to have a look at notes of those meetings. That's ridiculous," Garcetti said.

Child Abuse,
It's a crying shame.

In Texas, child abuse is one of the most tragic problems we face, because the effect of abuse never ends. It can be passed from one generation to another, since abused children often grow up to become abusive parents. And at this moment, one in twelve Texas children is in danger of abuse.

But we can break the cycle of abuse by getting involved in local programs of prevention and rehabilitation.

Remember, abused children aren't the only sufferers ...
Child abuse affects us all.

But, we're not just the victims of child abuse ...

MAKING THE GRADE

WACO — Baylor University awarded degrees to 542 students during summer commencement exercises. The list of graduates includes the following students from Midland: Jimmye S. Brusenhan, 1202 Princeton; Louanna Kay Hill, 3215 Apperson; Russell A. Lee, 4509 Mockingbird Lane; Charles Jay Love Jr., 3313 Stanolind; and Jana M. Prigmore, 2502 Culpepper.

PROVO, Utah — Jana S. Tincher of Midland was among 2,308 students to receive degrees from Brigham Young University at the close of the 1985 summer session.

Ms. Tincher received a bachelor of science degree in elementary and special education.

SWEETWATER — Three Midland area students have been named to the summer quarter honor roll at Texas State Technical Institute.

Curt Edwards and Patrick Hand, both students in the Electronic Servicing Technology program, and Billy Pennington of Midkiff, a student in the Livestock and Ranch Operations program, all were listed on the Dean's Honor Roll.

ABILENE — Joseph Hilliard, son of Mrs. Joe B. Hilliard of Midland, has been selected by the Student Foundation of Hardin-Simmons University to receive a $1,000 scholarship for the 1985-86 school year.

AUSTIN — Doug Daehling, son of Del and Millie Daehling of Midland, has been named a Student Senate coordinator at Concordia Lutheran College. He will head the Athletic Council. Daehling is a sophomore business student.

AUSTIN — Mark Schneider, son of Billie and Delphine Schneider, has been named a Student Senate coordinator at Concordia Lutheran College. He will head the Religious Life Committee. Schneider is a junior business student.

The Midland Downtown Rotary Club selected Craig Brown and Karen Bates as its Students of the Week. Both are seniors at Midland High School.

Brown

Brown, son of Johnnie and Linda Brown, 2205 Neely, is a member of the Spanish Club, Junior Classical League, varsity tennis team and Young Life. He also serves as senior class vice president and was named Junior Howdy Week Favorite. He plans to attend Baylor University at Waco or the University of Colorado at Boulder and study finance or geology.

Bates

Miss Bates, daughter of A. "Tom" Bates, 2433 Whitmire, is a member of Student Council, National Honor Society, Senior Girls Organization, French Club, German Club, the varsity diving and forensic/debate teams. She also served as junior class vice president and is the current Student Council vice president.

In addition, Miss Bates is the recipient of numerous academic, French and debate awards. She also is a National Merit Commended Scholar and is listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students. She plans to go on to college and study international relations and law.

Education of minorities stressed

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Education reform should be implemented with the same fervor as the War on Poverty during the 1960s, says the state's top education official.

Speaking to teachers at the closing session of the three-day Texas Annual Migrant Conference in Corpus Christi, State Commissioner of Education William N. Kirby said the state should boost educational opportunities for minorities, the poor and those with limited English proficiency.

"The sensations of being poor are scarcely comprehendible to the 160 million Americans who are not poor. If the poor share anything, it is oppressors: credit dentists, credit doctors, credit furniture salesmen," he said Friday.

Kirby said it is up to teachers and school administrators to implement programs to provide better educational services to minorities and the poor.

But many school districts have tended to misinterpret many of the changes made by the Education Reform Act, he said.

Excessive paperwork imposed in many districts was not the goal of the reforms.

"If anybody is telling you you have to do something that is keeping you up half the night to finish, that is not what we want," he said.

Kirby also stressed accountability.

"It is not fair to say that a child's failure to learn is a problem with the child. It is a problem with the community and the school and the family," he said, calling for special attention to the children of migrant workers.

"If bilingual education has done nothing else, it has shown us how wrong it is to whip a child for uttering a word in his native language," Kirby said. "The poor, migrants and children with limited English proficiency, these children can learn like any other child if we believe in them."

Kirby talked about the struggle for civil rights in the 1960s and mentioned former leaders like Martin Luther King Jr., Wilbur Cohen and Michael Harrington.

"Our schools and newspapers point out that we believe in the freedom of opportunities," Kirby said. "Where are the national leaders like Lyndon Baines Johnson who remind us that many Americans live on the outskirts of that freedom?"

Earlier in the week, Bishop Rene Gracida of the Diocese of Corpus Christi told educators at the opening session that communities and churches, as well as teachers, were responsible for the education of migrant children.

"It would be easy to say you educators are responsible. After all, that's your job," Gracida said. "But it is a responsibility which I have and others in the church and community must share with you."

Both the church and the community must work to see that education for the migrant child is successful, Gracida said. The first step toward that success is instilling in that child a sense of self worth.

"If we don't do that, all education is doomed to fail," he said. "Our job is to see that these people have their dignity. It's the foundation, the basis, from where education will take place."

Seattle teachers accept contract

SEATTLE (AP) — The city's teachers approved on a voice vote Saturday a one-year contract worth $8.4 million, ending a strike that kept 43,500 students at home for more than three weeks.

Elsewhere, strikes continued in 10 school districts with nearly 35,000 students in Pennsylvania, Ohio and New Jersey.

The Seattle walkout by 3,700 teachers, secretaries and aides began Sept. 3, one day before the scheduled start of classes, in a dispute that centered on class sizes.

With the contract ratified, teachers will return to work Monday, followed by students the next day, officials said. Christmas and spring vacation will be shortened to make up lost days, and the term will end June 30, instead of June 12 as first scheduled.

The agreement, reached after Gov. Booth Gardner intervened in contract talks, gives teachers the option to work 3½ extra days at $225 a day, boosts pay of clerical workers, and includes $3 million to reduce classroom workloads using new staff and overtime, said school district spokeswoman Marsha Leslie.

School administrators gained a provision to exempt certain teacher transfers from seniority rules, she said.

Teacher salaries, which have been subject to a state-imposed ceiling, were not an issue.

The $8.4 million pact is nearly double last year's $4.8 million contract. The union earlier this month overwhelmingly rejected offers worth $5.1 million and $7.1 million.

In the Montour School District near Pittsburgh, one of eight Pennsylvania districts affected by walkouts, school officials said they will open schools on Monday using $100-a-day non-union substitutes.

CHOICE-VARIABLE OR FIXED LOAN

If you plan to buy a home in the near future, should you select a variable or a fixed loan? Actually, this should be a last-minute decision, not made until a home is actually selected.
The financing market changes often enough so that the best financing mode one month may not be the best the next month. Most experts consider the length of time the mortgage will be in effect as the primary input when choosing between a fixed and variable mortgage.
If you expect to live in the house for a long time and you feel that interest rates will increase, you may lean toward a fixed rate. An equally sound case can be made for accepting the lower initial interest rates offered on variable rate mortgages. If you don't expect to live in the home for a very long time, the variable rate mortgage would be the answer.
Also, since the variable rate mortgage carries a lower initial rate, thus lowering the income qualification for a loan, this may be the only alternative for certain buyers.

DOE too eager to find nuclear waste site, aide says

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Department of Energy has forsaken sound scientific data in its zeal to find a dumping ground for the nation's high-level nuclear waste, says an aide to Gov. Mark White.

The DOE is responsible for finding a suitable geologic site to dispose the radioactive waste — primarily spent fuel rods from nuclear power plants — before the end of this century. Electric utilities currently store about 23,000 metric tons of the waste in pools of water at nuclear reactors.

Steve Frishman, director of the Texas Nuclear Waste Programs Office in Austin, says he no longer relies on the energy department's ability to conduct credible studies of the potential repository sites.

"We consider the entire program to be failing in both scientific credibility and the public process that is so ingrained in the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982," Frishman said last week.

The act sets out a precise schedule for the selection of a repository site, but a variety of delays has forced federal officials to alter that agenda. Frishman said the DOE selection process is now "schedule-driven" to the point where he has "literally no faith" in the agency's work.

Linda McClain, project manager for DOE studies in Texas, said the agency is committed to fulfilling its charge "in a technically credible way." She said the department plans to construct a repository "that will fully protect peoples' health and the safety of the environment."

"We are following the letter of the law in carrying forth the program in a responsible fashion," she added, "and we will continue to do that."

The DOE has conducted extensive hydrologic and geologic studies of bedded salt formations in the Texas Panhandle since 1976. Last December, despite strong objections from both local residents and state officials, the agency named a nine-square-mile section of Deaf Smith County farmland as one of three possible locations for the waste repository.

The other potential repository locations include a section of solidified lava in Hanford, Wash., and a volcanic ash site in Yucca Mountain, Nev. The energy department is expected to formally announce the top three candidates for the nuclear waste dump within three or four months.

Once the DOE has officially designated three sites, the president must either approve or reject the recommended locations within 60 days. The next step in the selection process involves a costly and detailed examination of the potential sites, including the environmental and socio-economic impact of a repository.

The act sets March 31, 1987, as the date for completion of these detailed "site characterizations," but the DOE has delayed results of the studies until March 1991.

Ms. McClain says the new timetable will give federal officials ample time to conduct the necessary studies. Frishman says the DOE schedule is still overly optimistic.

"From our point of view, this is destroying any minimal level of technical credibility that this program may have ever had," he said. "That tells us that the scientific work will likely be compromised."

Panhandle residents have voiced their opposition to the repository at meetings with DOE officials for several years. At times, the protests have included the threat of violence from these God-fearing farmers and ranchers who have braved the elements to eke out a living on the stark High Plains.

Perhaps highest on their list of objections is the potential risk a nuclear dump poses to the Ogallala Aquifer, a rich underground lake of water that supplies water to residents from Texas to the Dakotas.

Frishman said the threat to the aquifer presents "an irreconcilable conflict" with locating a waste repository in the Panhandle.

The Panhandle is a fertile heartland for agriculture, producing about 35 percent of the state's farm and ranch cash receipts — ranging from $3 billion to $4 billion a year. Local residents have repeatedly claimed that a nuclear waste dump would irreparably damage the area's image as a prime agricultural center.

Ms. McClain says the DOE considers protection of groundwater to be of primary importance in its decision process. "We wouldn't be able to get a license to construct a facility if we couldn't ensure that protection was there," she said.

Ms. McClain added the Deaf Smith County site has a one in three chance of being selected as the repository.

Even if the DOE decides to construct a waste dump in Texas, the act allows the governor or the Legislature to veto the site. A majority of both houses of Congress must vote to override that veto for the decision to remain final.

Immigration symposium draws variety of activists

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Dr. Hector P. Garcia says he just wants to offer immigrants, both legal and illegal, freedom from fear, and Ellen Cohen doesn't want to repeat the immigration policy attitudes that kept Jews from the safety of U.S. arms just before World War II.

Both immigration activists joined more than 100 others from political, religious, academic and cultural arenas from Mexico and the United States in Corpus Christi Friday at the International Immigration Symposium 1985.

The symposium, which continues Saturday, is sponsored by Bishop Rene Gracida of the Diocese of Corpus Christi and the National Immigration, Refugee and Citizenship Forum, a non-profit, educational organization.

Friday's panel workshops ranged from explanations to the recent influx of immigrants to ideas how to slow it. But a recurrent and sometimes emotional theme was discussion of the current attempt in Congress to pass immigration legislation, the Corpus Christi Caller Times reported.

Former congressman Bob Krueger said that if employer sanctions have to be included, they must be applied universally to anyone applying for any job regardless of an applicant's surname.

Almost all of the panel participants harshly criticized any type of guest-worker program that would allow agricultural employers to hire non-U.S. citizens if no U.S. citizens were available to work.

Garcia, founder of the American GI Forum, was critical of guest-worker programs because he said such programs generally have not worked.

Ms. Cohen, Houston area director of the American Jewish Committee, said those kinds of programs create a third class in the two-class United States.

Ms. Cohen also warned that immigration quotas set up in the 1920s were used to discriminate against Jews and other immigrants. The quotas, she said, trapped millions in Europe at the onset of World War II.

Garcia advocated legalization of undocumented individuals to allow added millions of legal members to the U.S. workers and to let many of their families take advantage of education opportunities and other rights as citizens.

"But we must make a clear, unified beginning, so that it will achieve our objective freedom from fear," he said.

Arts assembly honors its workers

From Staff Reports

American author, editor, lecturer and reformer Lincoln Steffens once said, "Art is like a border of flowers along the course of civilization." Last week, Midland Arts Assembly remembered those who have helped make Midland's border of flowers possible at a special ceremony held during its annual meeting.

"It was our intention to honor our arts organization by presenting an individual worker in each with a special award," said Jean Posey, executive director for the assembly, Midland's umbrella council for arts organizations.

"Each member group came up with an individual from its organization who the members felt deserved a special thanks for his or her involvement in that particular group," Mrs. Posey said.

"All of our arts groups have been built through the hard work and dedication of many, thus it was not an easy choice for anyone."

Receiving those awards were: Fran Birdwell of the Midland Camera Club; Pam Bristol, Musicians Club; Helen Codington, Midland Community Concerts; Margaret Earhart, Midland Palette Club; Arlen Edgar, Midland Community Theatre; Donna Gore, Ballet Midland; Martha Kallus, American Association of University Women; Mary Lou King, Midland Arts Association; Marilyn Pritchett, Midland Fiber Guild; Jean Roberts, Midland Quilter's Guild; and Terry Wilkinson, Museum of the Southwest.

In addition, a special award was given to Georgia Temple, entertainment and religion writer for the Reporter-Telegram, "for her dedication to the arts and her efforts in promoting the further development of Midland arts interests," said Ms. Posey. "It is specifically designed to honor someone who we feel goes above and beyond the call of duty in working with our cultural arts organizations in a professional capacity."

Also, the Assembly chose someone "with a lifelong commitment to the arts community, whose work was representative of Midland's tireless volunteers," to receive its first annual Recognition Award. Longtime patron of the arts and former member of the Texas Fine Arts Commission, Harriet Herd, received this award.

"Tom Wageman (president of RepublicBank First National), who served as master of ceremonies at our event, introduced Harriett in our video as, 'The muse of Midland.' And, I agree."

Mrs. Herd has been a member of numerous organizations, including Kappa Kappa Gamma Alumnae, Act IX (Midland Community Theatre auxiliary), National Association of Parliamentarians, Daughters of the American Revolution, Colonial Dames of America and Magna Charta Dames.

She has served on the boards of, among others, Junior League of Midland, Inc., Midland Symphony Association, Midland Symphony Guild, Midland County Library and the Friends of the Library, Midland Community Theatre, Permian Civic Ballet (now Ballet Midland), Midland-Odessa Symphony Young Artists Competition, Arts and Recreation Committee for Objectives for Midland, Religious Committee for Objectives of the 1980; Family Counseling Service, the Women's Fitness Center at the YMCA, Board of directors of Central YMCA and the Metropolitan Board, 1970s; and chairman of the professional division of United Way.

Mrs. Herd was an active leader in Cub Scouts, Girl Scouts and PTA in the 1950s. She received the Golden Deeds award from the Exchange Club in 1967.

Trustees for 1985-1988 elected during the annual meeting and awards ceremony were Kevin Blonkvist, Charles Spence, Wally Fullinwider, Greg Elsner and Charlene Waddill.

Elected as officers were Norma Webb, president; Jack Steele, vice president; Nancy Stewart, secretary; Bob Smith, treasurer; and Jess Parish, member at large.

The ceremony was held during National Arts Week, which continues through today. This celebration of American arts is held in commemoration of the 20th anniversary of the National Endowment for the Arts.

"Each member group came up with an individual from its organization who the members felt deserved a special thanks for his or her involvement in that particular group."

Lawmaker seeks review of Houston election rules

AUSTIN (AP) — Houston's run-off election system is an illegal obstacle to minority candidates, according to a Texas lawmaker who wants a federal review of the city's voting rules.

In a Friday letter to the voting rights division of the U.S. Department of Justice, Houston Rep. Al Edwards said the run-offs should be scrapped.

"In addition to the financial burdens of a run-off election, the problem of racial polarization must be confronted. Racial appeals can be used to frighten white votes," said Edwards, a Democrat who considered running for mayor of Houston this year.

Houston's city charter, like many in Texas, requires a run-off in elections in which no candidate garners more than 50 percent of the vote. Statewide, the same rule applies to primary elections for state positions.

During his 1984 presidential campaign, Jesse Jackson frequently said run-off elections keep minorities out of office.

Edwards based his request on judge's decision that New York's run-off provision violated the Voting Rights Act and constitutional protections.

U.S. District Judge Charles Brieant ruled the New York law could dilute minority votes. Edwards said that has happened in Houston.

"Although some blacks and Hispanics in Houston have been elected in city-wide races, those obstacles mentioned in the (New York) case still exist to a great extent in Houston elections," said Edwards.

"In the New York case, testimony indicated that the two-week run-off primary period intensified feelings of racial prejudice and heightened racial tension," he said. "The New York ruling ... clearly demonstrates that run-offs discriminate against classes of black and Hispanic voters."

Houston's city election is scheduled for Nov. 5.

The city has used run-off elections for many years, according to Ed Cazares, first assistant city attorney.

In Abilene, don't mess around with He-Man, his super friends

ABILENE (AP) — Dropping the television cartoon series, "He-Man" and his macho "Masters of the Universe" gang, has turned out to be easier said than done for a local television station.

Petitions, letters, phone calls, threats and general grumblings have pressured KTXS-TV station executives to attempt to recall the kiddie hit series from its brief hiatus.

"This thing (the protest movement) is bigger than you and me. It's even bigger than Coke Classic," KTXS program director Sylvia Holmes said Friday.

"It's really not just a few mothers who talked about it and got mad," she added. "We even have a 350-signature petition from Hardin-Simmons University students.

"If nothing else, we've learned that you don't fool with mothers in the Big Country."

The heat started after KTXS decided to drop the program because of its increasing cost. And although Ms. Holmes said the station is on the side of its viewers, bringing the program back requires a renegotiating of the contract with the program's distributor.

Station management was ready to get that ball rolling Friday, but Hurricane Gloria's fury kept executives of the syndicating company away from their New York City office, she said.

DRY SKIN

The skin is one of the body's protective systems. It is an important organ in that it helps to receive senses from external environment. You need to take care of your skin just like any other important system of your body. A common skin problem encountered by many people is Xerosis or dry skin.

Xerosis can be cared for in most cases by using mild soaps, moisturizers, preferable unscented; and quick warm showers rather than hot baths. In spite of the above measures sometimes dry skin will produce mild to severe itching and eczema in which case you should see your dermatologist before the problem becomes chronic. Do not use over the counter medications unless advised to do so by your physicians.

STANTON HOSPITAL ESTABLISHES EYE DEPARTMENT

Stanton's Martin County Hospital is proud to announce a new eye surgery department which will begin operation the first of October, 1985.
The advantage of having eye surgery at Martin County Hospital over other Permian Basin Hospitals is that the institutions fee for catarat surgery, for instance, is $925.00. An additional 20% discount may be obtained by those who wish to pay cash in advance.

Martin County Hospital and a private eye surgeon have acquired the instrumentation necessary to perform these procedures with the same accuracy and precision obtained at other institutions operating in Texas.

Dr. Jospeh Ruda, M.D., is one of the physicians who will be using Martin County Hospital. Area residents are the ones to benefit from this program which is available through effective cost control and efficient management, combined with the efforts of hospital and private physicians working together to keep medical costs down.

South African visit stirs reporter's memories

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reporter Charlayne Hunter-Gault, in South Africa recently for public television's MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour, says the trip brought back haunting memories of U.S. racial segregation two decades ago.

During her first few days in Johannesburg, Ms. Hunter-Gault, a light-skinned black, went to have her hair done at a beauty parlour.

"I saw that there were black women inside, so I went in," she said. "But they looked at me, and said, 'Sorry, we only do black hair.'"

South Africa's apartheid policy places people in strict categories: white, colored or mixed race, and black.

"Suddenly, I was thrown back in time, 20 years," she said in a Los Angeles Times interview published Saturday.

In January 1961, Ms. Hunter-Gault, then Charlayne Hunter, became one of the first two black students to enter the University of Georgia.

"In South Africa, I was constantly having to readjust myself to the realities of life, including every time we were confronted with 'white only' eating and bathroom facilities," she said.

BOSTON (AP) — With a few strokes of a pen, President Reagan may have helped his wife's favorite charity and given a boost to a commercial book company.

Reagan wrote the preface to a book containing such all-America standards as Norman Rockwell illustrations and patriotic poems of Carl Sandburg and Walt Whitman.

In return, the book's author will donate royalties that could rise to $500,000 to the Drug Abuse Fund, a charity supported by Nancy Reagan.

The deal was the work of George Mendoza, 51, a Westport, Conn., writer and editor.

The book, "Norman Rockwell's Patriotic Times," goes on sale in October. In the 450-word preface, Reagan said the country had changed since the era Rockwell portrayed in his illustrations.

"Yet the values that he cherished and celebrated — love of God and country, hard work, neighborhood, and family — still give us strength, and will shape our dreams for decades to come," Reagan wrote.

HOLLANDALE, Wis. (AP) — A Wisconsin farm family whose story of imminent foreclosure was aired nationwide during the FarmAid concert won't accept offers of help that have poured in since last Sunday's fund-raiser.

Sue Massey said she and her husband, Kenneth, preferred to have those concerned send contributions to the FarmAid organization or contact their congressmen for action to help all farmers.

"As much as we'd love to save our own farm, we realize it's such a (widespread) problem...there are so many others out there who have just as many problems as we do," Mrs. Massey said. "We have food and we have each other and we have jobs and if we have that, we have it all."

Veteran movie actor Lloyd Nolan dies at age 83

From Wire Reports

LOS ANGELES — Lloyd Nolan, who won an Emmy for his portrayal of the mad Capt. Queeg in "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" and brought a touch of class to many mediocre films, died Friday. He was 83.

Nolan's career spanned more than 50 years in theater, films and television, and his slightly nasal voice and calm, reasurring presence became familiar characteristics to theatergoers and movie enthusiasts.

He made his Hollywood debut in 1934 and appeared in numerous B movies, often as a policeman or a gangster. But in 1949, when he was interviewed by "This Week" magazine, the reporter called him "Hollywood's most popular forgotten man."

His film credits included his movie debut in "Stolen Harmony" in 1935, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" in 1944.

He was lured out of retirement many times, perhaps most notably when he agreed to become the white co-star of television's first black-oriented series, "Julia."

Indiana town prepares to remember James Dean

From Wire Reports

FAIRMOUNT, Ind. — This rural town remembers James Dean. From the welcome sign posted at the edge of town to the posters in Lewis' Retreat, a cafe on Main Street where local boys punch up Bryan Adams on the jukebox for breakfast, Dean's name and image beams down on Fairmount residents.

Dean is remembered in many ways.

"We always thought so much of Jimmy. He was the cutest little boy," says Ortense Winslow, 84, an aunt who reared the Dean.

"He was very ambitious. He played basketball. He liked to be in plays. He gave readings. He debated," Mrs. Winslow said. "He didn't mind doing any chores, helping out around the house." She said he rarely dated.

Ann and Harry Warr rule over the Fairmount Historical Museum, a two-story frame house built in 1892 that houses pieces of Dean's youth: his favorite shirt — the one with the red stripes; the trophies he won at Fairmount High School; his letterman's sweater; the rare photograph of his beloved mother, and his science project for 4-H Club.

Not everything in the museum is so poignant: Ann Warr left a tiny silver model of Dean's hideously crumpled Porsche and an eerie lifelike mask of Dean's face on display in spite of Dean's cousin Marcus Winslow's protests. "For the fans," she says.

"I think we're the biggest keeper of the flame there is," Warr boasts.

And the flame burns brighter each year during the Fairmount Museum Festival Days, which this year opened on Friday and runs through Monday. The festival has drawn a few thousand fans during each of the 10 years it has been held, but for the 30th anniversary of Dean's death, Ann Warr was expecting about 10,000 to descend on the town. Visiting fans will be immersed in Deanomania:

— A bicycle tour of "James Dean Country," with visits to the grave site, the Winslow farmhouse where Dean was raised, the motorcycle shop where he bought his first motorcycle and the church he attended.

— A film festival at the Fairmount auditorium (there are no theaters or hotels in Fairmount), where a different Dean film will be shown each of the three days.

— A Giant Rock Lasso Contest — just like the rock lassoing in "Giant."

— A parade of 30 to 40 1949 Mercury coupes — just like the one in "Rebel Without a Cause."

Will turning 40 alter image of United Nations?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The United Nations was born of the bitter lessons of World War II and the victors' grand hope of sparing "succeeding generations from the scourge of war." But as it prepares to celebrate its 40th anniversary on Oct. 24, the world's peacekeeping body has been largely ignored, defied, evaded or found wanting.

By O.C. DOELLING
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS — Workmen on scaffolds busily scrape away at decades of soot and corrosion on the aluminum and steel framework of the 39-story United Nations headquarters building on Manhattan's East Side.

They are preparing for this fall's 40th anniversary celebration to be attended by 70 or more world leaders. U.N. officials hope the jamboree will help polish up the tarnished image of an organization that, even its supporters concede, has largely failed in its primary mission — to silence the guns of war.

In the words of President Reagan, "the reality has often been less than the dream."

Military analysts have counted some 300 civil and regional wars in the four decades since the end of World War II. Terrorism has carried the conflicts well beyond the war zones in the form of hijackings, bombings, assassinations.

Much of the time, the U.N. Security Council, conceived as the premier peacekeeping body, has been paralyzed by superpower rivalry. In recent years, the Third World majority has turned the 15-nation council into what former U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick described as a "Turkish bath" — a place to let off steam rather than to resolve conflict.

NOT THAT THE United Nations has been without successes. They include:

— The peacekeeping and observer operations in the Congo, Cyprus, the Indo-Pakistani frontier and the Golan Heights.

— The World Health Organization's eradication of smallpox.

— The life-saving missions of the U.N. Children's Fund and the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Southeast Asia, Africa and Latin America. Both agencies have won Nobel Peace Prizes.

— The rescue of such treasures of antiquity as the Egyptian temple of Abu Simbel through the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

— The development efforts of various agencies such as the World Bank, the International Civil Aviation Organization and the International Maritime Organization.

But, as Secretary of State George P. Shultz has said, "These successes have unfortunately been matched by many failures."

To its detractors, the United Nations has become an ineffective talk shop and paper mill with a swollen bureaucracy. Conservative critics, like the Heritage Foundation, regard it as a nest of Soviet spies.

"The problem with the United Nations," Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar has concluded, "is that it's not used or is misused by member countries."

AMERICAN DISILLUSIONMENT has mounted steadily since 1960 as more and more colonies gained their independence and joined what previously had been a Western-oriented body. From an original 51 members in 1945, the organization has grown to 159 — 125 of them developing nations.

The United States had encouraged decolonization after World War II, expecting the newly independent states to share Western values. But Americans, like Shultz, came to recognize that "the swelling ranks of non-democratic nations in the United Nations have diluted the original consensus that gave meaning to the charter."

Daniel Patrick Moynihan, U.S. ambassador under President Gerald Ford, called the General Assembly, which opened its 40th session on Sept. 10, a "theater of the absurd." Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who served during Reagan's first term, found that it could be "a very dismal show."

New York's Mayor Edward Koch, the United Nations' nominal host, denounced it as a "cesspool" and "den of inequity" because of its anti-Israel resolutions.

Last January, the United States pulled out of UNESCO after accusing that body of mismanagement, politicization and "hostility toward the institutions of a free society."

The Reagan administration also has threatened to withdraw from the General Assembly or any other U.N. body that votes to expel Israel. That is not taken lightly. U.S. funds now make up a quarter of the United Nations regular, biennial budget of $1.6 billion.

Vernon A. Walters, the new U.S. ambassador, noting that the General Assembly majority lately voted "86.5 percent of the time with the Soviet Union," has warned that he will make unfriendly delegations "feel as bad as possible."

THIS IS A FAR CRY from the euphoria of 1945. At the signing of the U.N. Charter in San Francisco, President Harry S. Truman voiced the sentiments of a war-weary world when he exulted:

"Oh! What a great day this can be in history."

Fearful that Americans might again retreat into isolationism, as they had after World War I, the Truman administration engaged in a hard-sell campaign.

Supporters in Congress plugged the U.N. Charter as the "new magna carta of peace and security for mankind" and "the greatest, most hopeful event in history."

Senate ratification in July 1945 was swift and overwhelming — 89-2. Three months later, on Oct. 24, the charter came into force and the United Nations was born.

The organization had been formed in the American image. There is an echo of the U.S. Constitution in the U.N. Charter, which begins: "We the peoples of the United Nations...."

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, shepherded into being by Eleanor Roosevelt and adopted by the General Assembly in 1948, was modeled after the U.S. Bill of Rights.

Of the 51 founding member states, 34 were in the Western camp. Eleven others belonged to a not unfriendly Afro-Asian group. Only six seats were held by Communist delegations and three of those by the Soviet Union alone.

IN ANTICIPATION of this pro-Western tilt, Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin had demanded that his country be given 16 General Assembly seats — one for each of the Soviet republics at the time. Ultimately, he settled for three seats: the Soviet Union and the Soviet republics of the Ukraine and Byelorussia.

At the wartime Yalta conference, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill also agreed with Stalin on a great power veto in the Security Council. This was a power that the Soviets were to wield more than 100 times to block Western initiatives in the council.

The United Nations was designed to succeed where the League of Nations had failed: to confront facist aggression. It was ill-prepared for a Cold War between the victors over facism.

A Soviet veto prevented the Security Council from acting in 1948 when the Russians imposed a blockade on West Berlin.

Two years later, a "freak of fate" — as U.N. Undersecretary-General Brian Urquhart termed it — enabled the United States to rally United Nations support for collective action against North Korea when it invaded South Korea.

Stymied in its effort to unseat Nationalist China, the Soviets had stomped out of the Security Council in January 1950. They had not returned when the Korean War began the following June and therefore were not in a position to cast a veto.

If the Korean War represented the high-water mark of U.S. influence in the world body, the 1971 expulsion of Nationalist China and the seating of a Communist delegation from Peking dramatically underscored how much political clout the United States had lost in the intervening two decades.

As American disillusionment began growing in the 1960s, Sierra Leone's Koroma, who chaired the special decolonization committee, said he viewed U.S. disaffection as "a sign of changing times — a shift of the United Nations away from the Cold War to subjects like southern Africa and the Middle East about which the United States does not see eye to eye" with the Third World majority.

WANING CONFIDENCE in U.N. institutions also has resulted in Washington's refusal to sign the 1982 Law of the Sea Treaty or to recognize the jurisdiction of the World Court over Nicaragua's complaint of U.S. aggression. Similarly, Washington had discouraged U.N. involvement in Vietnam peace efforts nearly two decades ago.

Soviet Ambassador Oleg A. Troyanovsky regards the Korean War period as the low point for the United Nations.

"Now, the situation is changed and the U.N. is criticized very heavily by the (U.S.) president and government quarters," Troyanovsky told The Associated Press. "We think the U.N. is the more effective today than in the Cold War days. It no longer is an instrument of U.S. policy as it was then."

Much of Washington's dismay with the United Nations stems from its stance on Israel.

In 1974, the Third World majority, bolstered by the Soviet bloc, gave the Palestine Liberation Organization permanent observer status and a world platform at the United Nations.

In the decade that followed, Arab states conducted a concerted campaign to lay the ground for Israel's expulsion from the United Nations. In 1975, the assembly adopted a resolution equating Zionism with racism.

"The campaign to delegitimatize Israel has been a persistent black mark on the United Nations," Secretary of State Shultz said in San Francisco last June in marking the 25th anniversary of the signing of the U.N. Charter.

THE PROCEDURAL BATTLE over Israel's continued seating proved that Uncle Sam still could win respect by mustering all of his diplomatic energies and power of the purse. At three successive sessions, beginning in 1982, the United States quashed attempts by Iran and hardline Arab states to challenge Israel's credentials on the assembly floor.

Secretaries-general have long played controversial roles

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — After the United Nations' peacekeeping machinery became frozen by Cold War, the secretaries-general of the organization assumed roles that went well beyond their administrative duties as described in the charter.

For example, Javier Perez de Cuellar, a former Peruvian diplomat who now holds the post, has launched U.N. investigations into the use of chemical weapons in the Iran-Iraq war and won temporary agreement from both sides to halt attacks on civilian areas. He has pursued intercommunal peace on Cyprus and guided talks between Afghanistan and Pakistan toward ending the Afghan crisis. Earlier, he attempted to mediate between Britain and Argentina in the Falklands conflict.

Though he has met with only marginal success, he has managed to keep his "good offices" alive and remains an acceptable broker, if or when the adversaries are ready to negotiate seriously.

Such activism has its pitfalls.

Trygve Lie, a blunt-speaking Norwegian who served as the first United Nations chief, quit in 1953 under Soviet pressure because of his active support for the U.N. war effort in Korea.

His successor, Dag Hammarskjold, an intellectual Swede, ran afoul of both the Soviets and the French because of his handling of the U.N. peacekeeping operation in the Congo. Hammarskjold died in a 1961 air crash while attempting to mediate between the warring factions in the Congo.

U Thant, a Burmese, drew fire when he ordered the U.N. peacekeeping force to withdraw from the Sinai in 1967, setting the stage for the third Arab-Israeli war.

During the Vietnam War, U Thant irked the Johnson Administration when he made an unsolicited attempt to arrange peace talks between Washington and Hanoi.

Kurt Waldheim, an Austrian who preceded Perez de Cuellar, caught flak from President Nixon when he urged a halt to U.S. bombing of North Vietnam to avert destruction of dikes.

On a January 1980 trip to Tehran to try to win the release of 52 U.S. hostages, Waldheim was forced to flee from an angry mob at a cemetery.

Government urged to plan for disasters

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Prudent planning after a disaster such as a hurricane often is displaced by survivors anxious to return to everyday life, a Texas A&M University researcher says.

"People tend to redevelop even more rapidly after a hurricane," said Philip Berke, an architectural research scientist who studies community response to disasters.

Local officials, Berke says, can manage development, "but people urgently want back into their homes, businesses want to start selling their goods and water systems need to be restored.

"With these pressing issues, long range plans and orderly reconstruction often is tabled."

Because of these pressures, he said, communities need to prepare in advance for natural disasters while federal and local governments should be more concerned with reducing future losses than with financing redevelopment in the same low-lying, high-risk areas.

Berke has examined emergency response and growth management programs in 51 governments in the Houston-Galveston metropolitan area.

He says many local and federal programs have actually encouraged growth in hurricane-prone areas without analyzing and minimizing risks.

Mustangs stomp on Frogs in SWC opener, 56-21

FORT WORTH (AP) — Despite the wind, rain and a week of lurid headlines, Southern Methodist tailbacks Reggie Dupard and Jeff Atkins had the times of their lives Saturday night.

"I always enjoy coming home to play in Fort Worth," said native son Atkins who, like Dupard, scored three touchdowns as the sixth-ranked Mustangs splashed to a 56-21 Southwest Conference verdict over scandal-scarred Texas Christian.

"It's always easy for me to get up for the TCU game," said Atkins, whose team also is well known to NCAA investigators.

SMU coach Bobby Collins praised the suspension-riddled Horned Frogs, saying:

"With all the distractions and with the loss of some really talented football players, TCU played with a lot of heart. They came out on that opening series really excited, executed well and scored."

It was a short-lived lead for TCU as the Ponies, playing before a national television audience, exploded for 28 points in the second period.

Despite the thrashing, TCU coach Jim Wacker sounded as upbeat as ever.

"Fiddle," he said, "We didn't have one serious injury out there tonight. You guys (writers) take this stuff too seriously.

"The sun's gonna come up tomorrow. Nobo died or anything like that. We're still gonna have a chance to beat Arkansas next week.

"It may take seven or eight miracles instead of one, but who knows?"

AFTER WHAT Dupard and Atkins did to the Frogs, TCU needed a miracle just to survive.

Dupard raced 62 yards to break an early 7-7 deadlock and open the scoring floodgates as the sixth-ranked Ponies hiked their record to 2-0 and extended the nation's longest unbeaten, untied streak to eight.

The Horned Frogs, stripped of All-America running back Kenneth Davis and six defensive veterans in a slush fund payoff scandal, fell to 2-1.

Dupard bolted a yard for a second touchdown and Atkins contributed scoring runs of 10 and seven yards as SMU rolled up 356 yards and a 35-7 halftime cushion in a game billed sardonically as the "Bag Man Bowl."

Coach Jim Wacker suspended the seven players 10 days ago to trigger the TCU scandal, while SMU earlier was placed on probation by the NCAA for a series of recruiting violations.

With rain drenching the crowd of 42,414, quarterback Scott Ankrom scrambled in from the 2 to stake the Frogs to an early 7-0 lead.

SMU quarterback Don King winged a 21-yard scoring pass to tight end Albert Reese with 4:20 left in the opening quarter before the Dupart-Atkins duo came on to torpedo TCU's flimsy upset bid.

Tony Jeffery scored TCU's second touchdown from the 1, and Stephen Howland wrapped it up with a TD from the 7, both in the final period.

Atkins and Dupart both picked up second half TDs, Atkins from the 1 and Dupard on a 46-yard pass from second-team quarterback Bobby Watters.

Atkins wound up with 139 yards rushing on 23 carries. Dupard got 182 on 21 trips.

Hunter's TD gives 'Horns 38-34 win

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Tailback Charles Hunter's second touchdown late in the fourth quarter enabled Texas to survive a furious comeback by Stanford, 38-34 Saturday in a shootout between two high-powered offenses.

Hunter, who starred at Odessa High two years ago, bulled over from the 3 with 3:55 left to cap a 75-yard drive as Texas regained the lead after being outscored 24-7 by Stanford earlier in the second half. Texas' defense then stopped Stanford on the Longhorns' 37 with a minute left to seal the victory.

SWC

David Sweeney's 22-yard field goal put Stanford ahead for the first time, 34-31, with 8:36 left.

Stanford tied the game 31-31 early in the final period as quarterback John Paye fired a 44-yard pass to Greg Baty, hit Jeff James with a 25-yard TD pass and handed off to Brad Muster for two points.

Hunter's 1-yard TD run 10 seconds into the fourth quarter capped a 13-play, 79-yard drive that gave Texas a 31-23 lead.

After Texas rolled to a 24-10 halftime lead before a crowd of about 53,000, Stanford scored two TDs in the third period, but missed an extra point, to close the gap to 24-23.

Paye scored on a sneak a few inches from the goal line on the opening drive of the second half after Thomas Henley's 53-yard kickoff return to the Texas 46.

Stanford got good field position again with an 18-yard punt return by Craig Landis to Texas's 34. Paye scrambled for 24 yards, then fired a TD pass to Muster, who made a leaping catch in the far corner of the end zone. However, Sweeney squibbed the extra point kick wide.

Bears give Tech 'a good old licking'

WACO (AP) — The Baylor Bears Saturday proved their upset victory over Southern California last week was no fluke.

Baylor mauled previously unbeaten Texas Tech 31-0 in a Southwest Conference football opener, and the Bears dominated on both sides of the ball.

"That was just a good old licking by Baylor," said Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore. "They took it to us on both offense and defense. We never could do anything in the game."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said, "Our defense played great. We just shut 'em down. Wishbone teams have trouble coming back when you get them down."

Bear quarterback Tom Muecke agreed, adding that "I just hope that we are as good as we played today. I think we are a definite Top 20 team for two reasons — our schedule and the way we are playing right now."

The Baylor Bears' Eugene Hall and Steve Grumbine destroyed Texas Tech's Wishbone-T while a hard-striking horde of runners overpowered the Red Raiders.

The Bears, who upset a No. 3 ranked Southern California 20-13 last week, increased their season record to 3-1 while the previously unbeaten Red Raiders suffered their first defeat in four outings.

Baylor dipped deep into its third string as it unleashed fresh runners on every series of downs out of the veer offense.

Seven different runners carried the ball with Ralph Stockemer scoring from 40 yards out and junior college transfer Randy Rutledge dashing seven yards for another touchdown.

Muecke threw a six-yard touchdown pass to Derrick McAdoo and scored himself in the final four minutes on a 23-yard run.

Vols knock No. 1 rating out of Tigers' hands, 38-20

Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Tony Robinson fired four TD passes and set up another with a 39-yard run as Tennessee buried top-ranked Auburn 38-20 in a Southeastern Conference game Saturday.

Robinson's 39-yard run highlighted a 76-yard drive on Tennessee's first possession, coming after the Vols defense set the tone for the day by holding Auburn to only three yards on its first series.

Auburn, the nation's most prolific offense after its first two games, never got untracked until the final quarter, after Tennessee had built a 24-0 lead.

The Vols held Bo Jackson to only 80 yards on 17 carries, with Jackson leaving late in the third quarter with what was announced as a knee injury, though the report was not confirmed by Auburn.

Charles Wilson scored Tennessee's first TD on a 3-yard run before Robinson, the nation's total offense leader, went to work in the air.

He completed two of his TD passes immediately after Tennessee claimed two errant pitchouts by Auburn quarterbacks — a 37-yarder to Tim McGee and a 4-yarder to Vince Carter.

Carlos Reveiz kicked a 28-yard field goal to give a 24-0 halftime lead.

Ga. Tech 14, Clemson 3

CLEMSON, S.C. — Georgia Tech quarterback John Dewberry snapped back from a bruised shoulder in the first half and led the Yellow Jackets to a victory over Clemson in Atlantic Coast Conference play.

The Yellow Jackets' defense dominated the once-mighty Clemson offense during a game marred by mistakes. Tech defensive lineman Glenn Spencer recovered Terrance Roulhac's fumbled pass reception in the first quarter, which led to Tech's first touchdown. Clemson lost two other fumbles in the game.

South

Dewberry moved the Jackets 37 yards in six plays, and fullback Malcolm King bulled the ball over from two yards out to give Georgia Tech the lead at 7-0 with 2:42 left in the first quarter.

Midway through the second quarter, Clemson's Mike Isaacs fell on a fumble by Jacket tailback Jerry Mays at the Georgia Tech 39.

Clemson, stymied all afternoon by the Tech defense and its own mistakes, could not move in for the touchdown and David Treadwell hit a 25-yard field goal with 2:15 left in the half to make it 7-3.

Dewberry, who bruised his left shoulder in the second quarter, hit seven of 10 passes for 94 yards.

Georgia 35, South Carolina 21

ATHENS, Ga. — Freshman Tim Worley ran for three touchdowns and quarterback James Jackson threw for another to power Georgia to a victory over mistake-prone South Carolina.

Worley scored on runs of 28 and 6 yards on his only carries of the first quarter and tallied his third TD of the afternoon on a 15-yard run in the third period.

Jackson tossed a 39-yard scoring strike to Cassius Osborn in the second quarter and Keith Henderson closed out the scoring with a 40-yard TD dash in the closing minutes to help Georgia to its third straight victory after an opening loss to Alabama.

Navy 17, Virginia 13

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Senior tailback Napoleon McCallum rushed 37 times for 138 yards and a pair of second-quarter touchdowns as Navy's Midshipmen posted a win over the 20th-ranked Virginia Cavaliers.

McCallum scored on runs of 3 yards and 1 yard for the Midshipmen, who won their first game after opening with three straight losses.

Virginia, which was plagued by miscues all afternoon, fell to 2-1.

After Navy's Todd Solomon opened the scoring with a 17-yard field goal in the first quarter, Virginia countered with a 17-play, 80-yard drive that ended with quarterback Don Majkowski's 5-yard touchdown run.

McCallum, who broke his ankle last year against Virginia and became the first redshirt in Navy's history, scored from 3 yards out to give the Midshipmen a 10-7 lead early in the second quarter, but Kenny Stadlin's 27-yard field goal tied the game at 10-10.

Navy took the lead for good on McCallum's 1-yard scoring burst with 2:08 left in the half.

Va Tech 24, Syracuse 14

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Quarterback Todd Greenwood ran 1 yard for a touchdown after his team got a second chance to score on a penalty to lead Virginia Tech to a victory over Syracuse.

On a fourth-and-2 with Tech trailing 14-10 early in the last quarter, Tech opted to go for a field goal. But offsides was called against Syracuse on Tom Taricani's kick, giving Tech the down over and the ball on the 1-yard line.

Reb rally foils 'I told you so'

Sitting in the east stands at Memorial Stadium Friday night, the head nodded almost involuntarily in resignation. It looked like all of the Mrs.' fears and misgivings were coming to pass. She was positively clairvoyant, a truth of which she's never failed to remind after the fact.

Lee was down 7-0 in the second quarter and going nowhere fast. And as the bright lights and muffled roar of the subdued majority was left behind, it was early in the third quarter and things looked like they might get worse before they got better.

The Mrs. had warned as long ago as last summer that "They'll be sorry. They are making too big a thing of the Lee-Permian game. What if both fall on their faces?" Then she added with the air of one who has made a career of studying these things, "You know there are years when even Oklahoma-Nebraska isn't for the national championship, years when it's only for the Big Eight."

As any coach will agree, she was right. You play these things one at a time, but, caught up in the excitement of the anticipation, I soothed, "There's nothing any one can do about it. This again will be the Game of the Year, the fight for tickets may be better than the game, just as it was last year." What made it even better was that it would be played in Midland's Memorial Stadium, where a stray ticket is even harder to come by.

If you needed proof, that this was something big, there were the negotiations for live TV coverage, necessitating the changing of the game day to a Thursday night, just like the colleges and pros, who readily let the visual media people dictate terms. If they want 'em to play at midnight, that's when they'll play.

THE NEW York Times was even astounded that a WT high school game would prempt a baseball playoff game.

The tremors were felt all the way to Dallas. AP's Mike Cochran, who specializes in covering sensational murders and earthquakes, called last week asking if he could get into the press box.

Mike had been warned that even the home press was being limited, the demand was so great for space, but was consoled that there might be some standing room available on Ramp Two in the east stands, if he didn't mind contending with the comings and goings of the Permian band.

But now, with once-beaten Lee on the way to another loss, this one in district, Mike might even be able to gain a spot in the press box, if he still wanted to come.

Back at the office, little was it realized that ground-bound Midland Lee would suddenly become the BYU of the Plains. Next thing Coach Jack Tayrien will be for outlawing concrete playing surface. Lee defied form, pulling out a miraculous victory in the last two minutes after its vaunted running attack foundered (cq) at the edge of the goal line.

The immaculate status of the Oct. 10 TV date between Permian and Lee had been preserved....well, at least, until word arrived from Abilene later on.

After Friday night's returns, despite Lee's rescue effort, the Mrs. still may be right...it looks like Permian and Lee will have plenty of company....Abilene, Odessa look capable...you won't convince anyone who saw San Angelo Friday that the Bobcats aren't still a factor and there, lurking in the shadows, is Midland High, ready to trip up some unsuspecting soul, like maybe Abilene this week.

Sept. 29

1913 — Walter Johnson of the Washington Senators finished the season with 36 victories by virtue of a 1-0 decision over the Philadelphia A's.

1915 — The Phildelphia Phillies clinched their first National League pennant, beating the Boston Braves 5-0 behind Grover Alexander's one-hitter.

1935 — Augie Galan of the Chicago Cubs played in his 154th game without hitting into a double play, a major-league record.

1954 — Willie Mays made his famous over-the-shoulder catch of Vic Wertz' long drive to center field and pinch-hitter Dusty Rhodes homered off Bob Lemon in the 10th inning to lead the New York Giants to a 5-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians in Game 1 of the World Series.

1963 — Stan Musial ended his Hall of Fame career by going 2-for-3 as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Cincinnati Reds 3-2 at Busch Stadium. When he left baseball, at age 42, he had more career hits than any player in National League history.

1963 — John Pacioreck of the Houston Colt .45s, in his lone major-league appearance, went 3-for-3 with three RBI and four runs scored against the New York Mets.

From Staff Reports

San Angelo's Bobcats continued to advance inexorably toward a District 4-5A girls volleyball showdown with Big Spring next Saturday by defeating Midland, 15-4, 15-10 at the MHS gym Saturday afternoon.

The defending champion Bobcats went to 4-0 in league play and 15-5 for the season while Midland slipped to 0-4 and 6-10.

San Angelo, with Jody Fillpot serving and Anita Allgood and Lisa Davis dominating the nets, reeled off a 6-0 lead in the first game and was never threatened. Allgood and Davis each slammed home two authoritative spikes apiece each during the run.

4-5A Volleyball

The Bulldogs were much more competitive in the second game after falling behind 9-4 early. MHS rallied to creep back to 9-7 and then, with Liz Pratt serving and the front line doing a good job of keeping San Angelo from jamming anything over the nets, actually pulled ahead 10-9 on a run of three straight.

That's when Allgood reappeared at the nets to contribute a spike and a block as San Angelo reeled off six straight points with only one loss of service.

When action resumes Tuesday, Midland will be at Abilene and Midland will travel to Abilene Cooper before next week's intra-city meeting between the Rebels and Bulldogs.

San Angelo's JV won the preliminary match by ralling after losing the first game and trailing 13-10 in the second for the 15-2 clincher.

MIDLAND LEE split with Big Spring, losing in the varsity level in straight games, 15-2, 15-12, but its junior varsity team picked up its first win in district play.

"We played real well in the second game, if would've played as well in first game we'd at least have had a chance, but we didn't. We just stood there," said Lee coach Janice Baulch. Lee is 1-3 in district and 6-13 overall.

The JV boosted its record to 1-3 in District 4-5A with a three game win in the opener, 15-12, 14-16, 16-14.

The Rebels, host Abilene High Tuesday in their first home district match.

USTA wends its way toward Midland stop

From Staff Reports

The United States Tennis Association Circuit Segment Five is currently wending its way over Texas on a month long tour that will eventually end in Midland, Oct. 14-20, with the Segment Masters.

That's when the much-sought ATP computer points will be awarded, points which are as important as the $10,000 in prize money at stake in each event. The Racquet Club will serve as host to the tournament which will bring together the top 32 players from the first four Texas stops.

The points can lead to a coveted spot on one of the big tours, where the money is.

One of those expected in Midland is Tomm Warneke, a 6-4, 210-pounder from Lakeland, Fla. An All-America in 1983 at Trinity University in San Antonio, participated in three Segments of the USTA in 1984 and reached the Masters in singles and doubles of all three.

A former member of the USTA Junior Davis Cup team in 1983, Warneke's best showing came in the Iowa Segment, where he finished runnerup in singles. In Segment Five, Texas, he tied for seventh on the strength of a quarterfinal finish in Corpus Christi and a semifinal in Dallas. He upset Bud Schultz in Dallas, ending his opponent's 15-match winning streak.

This year, the Lakeland, Fla., native reached the second round in the French Open with a win over Pablo Arraya.

Midland freshmen bounce back

From Staff Reports

Midland ninth grade football teams bounced back this week splitting their games with Odessa schools in the Midland-Odessa Conference.

On Thursday, Midland Purple upped its record to 1-2 with its first win of the season, a 13-8 decision over Bonham and Ector beat Bowie, 25-2. Saturday, Midland Gold (1-2) fell to Nimitz, 18-6. Lee Maroon moved to 2-1 by edging Crockett 13-12, and Lee White lost to Hood, 27-20, to remain winless at 0-3.

In the eighth grade Midland-Odessa Conference Midland schools won both matchups. Alamo, 2-0-1, beat Goddard, 1-1-1, 14-0 to remain unbeaten and San Jacinto picked up its first win against two losses, 22-0 over Bowie.

In the eighth grade Midland City Conference, Trinity beat Goddard 14-8 in its opener and Alamo blanked San Jacinto 28-0.

Seventh grade action in the American Conference, Goddard's White team (2-0) defeating Alamo Grey (0-2) 14-8; Goddard Red (1-1) over San Jacinto White (0-2), 12-6; and San Jacinto Green (2-0) over Alamo Scarlett (1-1), 22-14.

In the National Conference, it was Alamo Scarlett (2-0) over San Jacinto Green, 16-0; Goddard Red (1-1) beat San Jacinto White (0-2), 28-0 and Alamo Grey (2-0) on top of Goddard White (1-1) 28-8.

Texas scored in the first half on three big plays: starting quarterback Bret Stafford' 74-yard touchdown run on the third play of the game; quarterback Todd Dodge's 55-yard TD pass to Donovan Pitts, and Darron Norris' 62-yard TD run.

Texas, which also got a 26-yard field goal from Ward, racked up 289 yards rushing in the first half, and 380 yards overall.

After Norris' jaunt with 1:53 left in the half, Paye capped a four-play, 75-yard drive with a 29-yard touchdown pass to James.

Norris had 153 yards rushing to lead Texas. Hunter had 95 yards rushing.

Paye passed for 365 yards but Stanford managed only 83 yards on the ground.

TECH

Baylor built a 14-0 halftime lead on Muecke's touchdown pass and Stockemer's touchdown run, which came off of fourth-and-one with the Red Raiders deployed in a goal line defense.

The Bears upped it to 17-0 in the third quarter on Terry Syler's 26-yard field goal and put away the Red Raiders with 14 points in the final quarter.

A Parents' Day crowd of 36,000 fans watched Baylor dominate on a gray, misty day. Tech quarterback Aaron Keesee was sacked four times, two each by Hall and Grumbine.

The frustrated Red Raiders finally got inside the Baylor 10-yard line late in the game, but linebacker Byron Johnson intercepted Travis Price's pass at the three.

It was the first time Baylor had blanked an opponent in 44 games.

Murray passes Aggies to victory, 45-10

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Quarterback Kevin Murray, starting his first game in a year, threw four touchdown passes Saturday night as Texas A&M rolled over Tulsa 45-10.

The loss was Tulsa's third straight to a Southwest Conference school after the Missouri Valley Conference team defeated the SWC's Houston in its opener. The victory was A&M's second after an opening-game loss to Alabama.

Murray, who broke an ankle on Sept. 29, 1984, threw touchdown passes of 8 and 13 yards to flanker Jeff Nelson in the first half, and fullback Roger Vick carried a Murray swing pass 59 yards for a touchdown early in the third quarter.

Murray's fourth touchdown throw was a 23-yard swing pass to Harry Johnson with 7:13 left in the game.

Vick, subbing for leading rusher Anthony Toney, who sat out with a hyper-extended knee, barged over from the Tulsa 5 for a second-quarter touchdown and scored on a 1-yard run late in the third quarter.

The field was slick from a heavy pre-game rain that carried on into the first half. But Tulsa's Gordon Brown kept on his feet on a 47-yard sprint to the A&M 5, and quarterback Steve Gage ran 5 yards for a 7-0 Tulsa lead with 10:11 left in the first quarter.

The 58-yard drive started with an interception of Murray by Tulsa linebacker Steve Kropp — the first given up by A&M this season.

Cougars fool Louisville defense, 49-27

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Michael Simmons rushed for two touchdowns and Gerald Landry passed for one and ran for another as Houston defeated Louisville 49-27 in Saturday night.

The victory was Houston's first in three games this season and ended a five-game losing streak, while Louisville dropped to 1-3.

Houston scored on all but one possession in the first half enroute to a 35-14 lead at the break as Louisville's defense was constantly fooled by the Cougars' veer offense.

Simmons, a 6-foot, 200-pound junior tailback, had scoring runs of nine and 56 yards in the first half.

Landry hit fullback Sloan Hood from 12 yards out with 1:09 left in the first quarter and then lunged over from 1-yard out with 5:21 left in the half.

Landry's 1-yard run was set up when Tim Britton blocked a punt by Louisville's Kirk Kennedy and Houston recovered at Louisville's 18-yard line.

Hood broke lose up the middle for a 19-yard scoring run with 1:31 left to give Houston a 21-point lead at the half.

Razorbacks quickly bury NMSU, 45-13

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Quarterback Greg Thomas completed five of six passes for 125 yards and 10th-ranked Arkansas scored on its first five possessions in a 45-13 rout of New Mexico State Saturday night.

Thomas, a sophomore, had passes of 25, 44, 21 and 31 yards in the Razorbacks' first three touchdown drives and didn't play after the first 17 minutes of the first half.

Less than two minutes into the second quarter, Arkansas had run 30 plays for 265 yards and led 31-7. The Razorbacks went 66 yards in nine plays, 82 yards in seven plays, 53 yards in four plays and 73 yards in six plays for touchdowns.

New Mexico State threw on its first six plays and had little success — three incompletes, one interception and two completions for 14 yards.

Thomas got the first touchdown drive started when James Shibest, suspended last week for disciplinary reasons, made a fingertip catch for 25 yards on third-and-8. Six plays later, Carl Miller scored from the 11. Thomas' 44-yard pass to Miller on a deep crossing pattern carried to the Aggies' 23 and, on fourth down, Jamie Lueders tossed to Terry Tatum on a fake field goal. That play netted three yards to the 13 and James Rouse scored from the 9.

Rice rallies to 29-28 win over Lamar

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice quarterback Mark Comalander ran for one touchdown and handed off for another to rally the Owls to a 29-28 victory over Lamar Saturday night, ending the nation's longest major college losing string at 11.

Rice's fourth-quarter comeback spoiled a school record rushing performance by Lamar's Burton Murchison, who ran 10 and 76 yards in the third quarter to rally the Cardinals, 3-1.

Trailing 17-7 at the half, the Cardinals switched to quarterback Dave Money to operate a ground-oriented attack and turned Murchison loose in the third quarter.

Murchison rushed with a school-record 259 yards on 31 carries, breaking his own record of 222 yards. Brinkly finished with 244 yards on 25 carries, his best rushing day as a collegian.

Midland Gold earns City title

The girls on the Midland Gold freshmen basketball team opened their season in good form Saturday with a 30-29 win over the Midland Lee Gray team in the finals of the Midland City Tournament.

Emily Kleine led all scorers with 11 points for Midland Gold while teammate Chrissy Hall followed with 10 points.

The third place finisher was Midland Purple who outscored Lee Maroon 49-35 led by 14 points apiece from Kim Jackson and Jane Gomez. In the consolation bracket, it was Midland White over Lee White, 34-30.

NTSU evens mark, beats K-State 22-10

Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Quarterback Mike Rhone ran for 91 yards and two touchdowns and Todd Smith kicked two field goals to lift North Texas State to a 22-10 victory over Kansas State Saturday.

Tom Middaugh blocked a Kansas State punt to add a safety for the Green Eagles, who evened their record at 2-2.

Kansas State, which lost its last opportunity for a victory before facing No. 2 Oklahoma, was led by Dimitrie Scott's touchdown and Ray Wilson's 51 yards rushing.

Mark Porter added a field goal for the Wildcats, who fell to 0-4. The loss was the second for Kansas State since Interim Coach Lee Moon assumed the helm in the wake of Jim Dickey's resignation.

Rhone, who completed two of 12 passes for 69 yards, put the game on ice with a 1-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter after Kansas State rebounded from a 12-0 halftime deficit.

Texas Football

Austin College advanced to 3-1, while Sul Ross dropped to 1-2.

E. Texas St. 34, NE Oklahoma 24

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. — The East Texas State Lions capitalized on second-half turnovers to defeat Northeast Oklahoma State.

The Lions are now 2-1 while Northeastern Oklahoma drops to 2-2.

Stephen F.Austin 42, Alcorn St. 12

NACOGDOCHES — Todd Whitten completed three touchdown passes and ran for another to guide Stephen F. Austin State to a victory over Alcorn State (Miss.).

Whitten opened SFA's scoring with a 1-yard run in the first quarter before completing his first touchdown pass in the second quarter to James Noble from 16 yards out as the Lumberjacks built a 21-6 halftime lead.

Texas-Arlington 19, SW Texas St. 16

SAN MARCOS — Texas-Arlington's Scott Roper booted a 36-yard field goal with only four seconds left to carry his team to a victory over Southwest Texas State.

Its first season win improved UTA's record to 1-2, while Southwest Texas, 0-4, is off to its worst start since 1938.

At the half, Southwest Texas led 16-6 and it seemed the team might break its losing streak. But in the third quarter, Maverick David Bates ran seven yards for a touchdown, and Roper added a 43-yard field goal before his final winning kick.

Panhandle St. 21, McMurry 20

ABILENE — Panhandle State squeaked by McMurry, handing the West Texas team its fourth consecutive loss this season.

The game was decided on a successful Panhandle two-point conversion and a failed McMurry 63-yard field goal. Panhandle raised its record to 3-0-1, while McMurry dropped to 0-4.

Southern U. 14, Prairie View 12

HOUSTON — Southern tipped its way to a last-minute victory over a tenacious Prairie View A&M squad in a mistake-filled Southwestern Athletic Conference game at the Astrodome.

The win was Southern's third consecutive victory after it opened the season with a 28-7 loss to Mississippi Valley State. Prairie View is now 0-3 in the SWAC and 1-4 overall.

Texas Lutheran 21, Tarleton St. 3

SEGUIN — Freshman quarterback John Fuquay and senior flanker Jeff Engeling teamed up for two touchdown passes as Texas Lutheran defeated Tarleton State.

Tarleton, 0-4, scored in the third quarter with a 23-yard field goal by Jim Myers. The Bulldogs upped their record to 3-1.

Austin Col. 14, Sul Ross St.0

ALPINE — Austin College capitalized on Sul Ross State's miscues and a fumble to defeat the Lobos in the opening round of Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association play.

Lions perfect with victory over Rutgers

Associated Press

Penn State 17, Rutgers 10

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Kevin Woods scored on a 4-yard run and Steve Smith rambled 63 yards for a touchdown late in the final quarter to ice the game as ninth-ranked Penn State edged Rutgers 17-10 Saturday at Giants Stadium.

Massimo Manca added a 53-yard field goal, the longest of his career, as Penn State raised its record to 4-0 and dropped Rutgers to 0-2-1. The game was a defensive struggle and the Nittany Lions prevailed using the big play on offense and an outstanding defense.

East

After a scoreless first quarter, the Nittany Lions went 80 yards in just two plays early in the second quarter to take a 7-0 lead.

Senior tailback Dave Clark, playing in place of the ailing D.J. Dozier, zig-zagged 76 yards on the first play. Woods then went through a gaping hole on the right side to score.

Rutgers got back into the game late in the first half, driving 75 yards in 19 plays before settling for a 22-yard field goal by Tom Angstadt. Reserve quarterback Joe Gagliardi was at the helm during the drive and hit two key third down passes to keep the drive alive.

Miami 45, Boston College 10

FOXBORO, Mass. — Miami erupted for first-half touchdowns on a 100-yard interception return by Selwyn Brown and an 82-yard pass play from Vinny Testaverde to Brian Blades and crushed Boston College.

The Hurricanes, who improved their record to 2-1, never trailed, and turned the game into a rout with three fourth-quarter touchdowns. They got 24 of their points after turnovers. BC fell to 2-3.

Army 41, Penn 3

PHILADELPHIA — Unbeaten Army amassed 449 yards on the ground, 120 by Doug Black, to romp past Penn.

Black, who set a single-season rushing record of 1,148 yards last year for the Cadets, spearheaded a balanced attack. Bill Lampley added 95 yards and a touchdown in 14 carries, while Rob Healy ran for 69 yards and a touchdown. Healy also passed for 76 more yards.

The Cadets, led 14-3 at halftime on scoring runs of one and six yards by Clarence Jones. Army, 3-0, wore down the Ivy League champions with their relentless wishbone attack.

Colgate 21, Cornell 20

ITHACA, N.Y. — Colgate split end Tim Walsh legged out an 86-yard pass-run play and safety Neil Viserto snuffed out a Cornell conversion try with an interception to give the Red Raiders a victory.

Colgate, 2-1, notched its sixth straight triumph over the Big Red in a 72-game series dating to 1896. It was the second loss in two starts for Cornell, which holds a 43-26-3 edge in the overall series.

The Big Red, who took a 14-0 lead in the first quarter, nearly rallied for the win when reserve quarterback Chip Knapp capped a 69-yard drive with a 15-yard touchdown pass to Todd Pressley with 1:16 left to play. But Viserto stepped in front of Cornell's Jim Perrello to snuff out the two-point play.

Lafayette 20, Columbia 0

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — Junior tailback Bruce McIntyre, who was starting his first game for Lafayette, rushed for 105 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Leopards to 20-0 shutout over Columbia.

Huskies hold on to beat Bruins

Associated Press

Far West

SEATTLE — David Toy scored on a 1-yard run late in the third quarter to snap a 14-14 tie and Washington's defense blanked UCLA in the second half Saturday as the Huskies came from behind to beat the 13th-ranked Bruins 21-14 in a Pacific-10 Conference football opener for both teams.

Trailing 14-3 just before halftime, the Huskies surprised the Bruins with a 31-yard touchdown strike from Hugh Millen to Lonzell Hill as time ran out in the opening half. Millen then passed to David Trimble for a two-point conversion to cut the UCLA halftime lead to 14-11.

Washington, which went into the game with just one victory in three non-conference starts, won the game with 10 third-quarter points. Jeff Jaeger kicked a 37-yard field goal to tie the score at 14-14 with 6:38 gone in the second half and the Huskies marched 46 yards in 10 plays for the game-winning touchdown.

Toy, a reserve tailback who began the season as a starter, was inserted for freshman Vince Weathersby after Weathersby twice failed to get into the end zone from the UCLA 1-yard line. On his only play of the game, on a third-and-1 situation, Toy sliced over right tackle from the 1 to put Washington ahead for the first time in the game with 12:39 gone in the second half.

Washington evened its record at 2-2 while UCLA had its mark drop to 2-1-1.

Wisconsin 41, Wyoming 17

LARAMIE, Wyo. — Larry Emery ran for 136 yards and three touchdowns as Wisconsin overpowered Wyoming with its rushing attack for a victory in intersectional action.

Wyoming, 1-3, opened the scoring on Andy Cottingham's first-quarter 40-yard field goal, but Wisconsin, 3-0, replied with an 88-yard drive capped by Emery's 1-yard plunge with 10 seconds left in the quarter.

Emery, who didn't seem bothered by the 28-degree weather or the 5-below zero wind chill factor, scored again from the 1-yard line midway through the second quarter.

Wyoming, of the Western Athletic Conference, closed to within four, 14-10, when Stan Waddell took a pitch around the left corner for 35 yards with 4:10 left in the first half. But Wisconsin then moved 88 yards on Emery's 47-yard run, a 19-yard reverse by wide receiver Tim Fullington, and Joe Armentrout's 22-yard touchdown scamper for a 21-10 lead.

A 37-yard Todd Gregoire field goal gave Wisconsin a 24-10 halftime lead.

Wyoming's last score came when quarterback Scott Runyan ran two yards for a touchdown with 9:48 left in the third quarter. Emery's third touchdown came 1:55 later on an 8-yard run.

Wisconsin, of the Big Ten, wrapped up the scoring with a 38-yard touchdown pass from Bud Keyes to Fullington with 2:33 left to play and a 25-yard Gregoire field goal as time ran out.

Air Force 49, New Mexico 12

ALBUQUERQUE — Halfback Kelly Pittman ran for 126 yards and two touchdowns and 19th ranked Air Force used its intimidating defense to overwhelm New Mexico.

The victory improved Air Force to 4-0 and kept the Falcons atop the WAC race with a 3-0 mark. New Mexico is 1-2 overll and 0-1 in the conference.

The 5-foot-9 Pittman and Falcons quarterback Bart Weiss kept New Mexico's defense in constant retreat.

Pittman scored on runs of 8 and 62 yards and Weiss rifled a 57-yard TD pass to wide receiver Ken Carpenter and scored from a yard out as the Falcons' wishbone rolled up 580 total yards.

The Falcons also got a 9-yard halfback option touchdown pass from Randy Jones to tight end Hugh Brennan, a 3-yard scoring run by junior fullback Johnny Smith and a 1-yard TD plunge from reserve quarterback Brian Knorr.

New Mexico, which had 337 yards through the air, most of it between the 20-yard lines, did not get into the end zone until the Falcons had built a 42-6 lead.

New Mexico backup quarterback Ned James scored on a 4-yard run with 9:21 left in the game. It was only the second touchdown on the ground scored against Air Force's defense this season. New Mexico's chances of staying close in the first half evaported when the Air Force defense stopped a pair of early Lobo drives and forced New Mexico to settle for field goals of 38 and 31 yards by junior Joe Bibbo.

Air Force defensive tackle Chad Hennings lived in the New Mexico backfield much of the first half and sacked Lobo quarterback Billy Rucker three times.

Air Force, second in the nation in scoring behind Iowa with an average of 52 points a game, scored on its first two possessions and forged a 28-6 halftime advantage.

Utah 55, Texas-El Paso 19

SALT LAKE CITY — Larry Egger passed for 243 yards and three touchdowns, including two to Loren Richey, to spark Utah to a romp over Texas-El Paso in a Western Athletic Conference game.

Utah running back Eddie Lewis rushed for 134 yards and scored another touchdown as the Utes increased their seson record to 4-0 and their conference mark to 2-0.

The loss dropped UTEP to 0-5 for the year, 0-3 in the WAC.

Neither team could score until 21 seconds remained in the first quarter. Utah's Erroll Tucker returned a UTEP punt 51 yards to the Miners' 19 and two plays later Egger hit Lewis for a 16-yard TD pass.

Andre Guardi kicked the first of seven conversions and it was 7-0 for Utah.

Utah running back Gerald Johnson scored just over two minutes into the second period on a 43-yard run from scrimmage. Guardi booted a 48-yard field goal and Egger connected on scoring passes of 7 yards to Richie and 43 yards to wide receiver James Hardy and the Utes took a 31-0 lead into the intermission.

Five late TDs save Mustangs

From Staff Reports

LAKE ARTHUR, N.M. — Trailing 43-20 going into the final period, Midland Christian staged a miraculous five-touchdown comeback to down Lake Arthur, 54-43.

Quarterback Danny Sartain passed for three touchdowns in the fourth period, two to sophomore Tony Corona who also threw a TD pass in the rally, to even the Mustangs' record at 2-2.

The fourth quarter touchdown flurry began with a TD pass to Kevin Wallum from Corona, good for 19-yards, and Wallum followed with a two-point kick. The next score was 35-yards from Sartain to Corona, then a 7-yard pass from Sartain to Wallum and another two-point kick. Then Sartain hit Corona for a 27-yard bomb that put the Mustangs ahead for good, 48-43. Jamie Cloyd finished off the scoring with an 11-yard TD run.

On defense, David Johnson, Wade Emmert, Todd Mims, Cloyd and Willoughby were the stalwarts of a strong defensive effort that held back Lake Arthur in the final period. The New Mexico school fell to 3-1 on the season.

Maturing Oilers host aging Cowboys at Astrodome

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers are among the youngest teams in the National Football League but offensive coordinator Joe Faragalli isn't looking at the numbers.

"I don't look at this team as having any rookies," said Faragalli, who will try to get his young offense geared up for Sunday's National Football League game against the Dallas Cowboys.

"They've all played five exhibitions and three league games," Faragalli said. "I'd say out of the eight games, they've played well in seven of them."

Houston's average age of 24.64 is the second youngest in the National Football League behind Indianapolis. Offensive lineman John Schuhmacher is the only Oiler over 30.

The Oilers will be facing a stiff test against the Cowboys, who bring a 2-1 record into the noon kickoff in the Astrodome.

FARAGALLI'S dismissal of the age issue has a purpose.

"I'd never want to give them a reason so that they can say it's okay that they failed," Faragalli said. "I don't think we need a crutch. We are professionals and have to learn and work harder to correct our mistakes."

The Oilers were shut out by the Pittsburgh Steelers 20-0 last Sunday and held to 50 rushing yards. The Cowboys, meanwhile, decked Cleveland 20-7.

Dallas is the seventh oldest team in the league with an average age of 26.36.

But Coach Tom Landry says the team's success this season will depend on youth.

"I think our success this year will depend on how our backup people perform," Landry said. "In the past we've been able to lose a starter and not miss him because we had veteran backups. That's not the case any more. We've got a bunch of young guys."

Faragalli's youngsters have been making key mistakes that have ruined scoring chances.

"IT HASN'T been anything that was a complete breakdown," Faragalli said.

"There were times when we pass blocked well and didn't read our keys properly. The next time we'd run the ball and have nice blocks, but one guy (would) break down."

The Oilers are 1-2 with a 26-23 victory over Miami in the season opener, followed by losses to Washington and Pittsburgh.

Michigan keeps goal line uncrossed, beats Terps 20-0

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Quarterback Jim Harbaugh tossed two touchdown passes to tight end Eric Kattus and a rock-ribbed defense kept the Michigan goal line uncrossed for the third successive week as the 12th-ranked Wolverines beat No. 17 Maryland 20-0 Saturday.

Harbaugh completed 16 of 20 passes for 196 yards and Kattus, one of the Wolverines' tri-captains, caught six tosses for 81 yards in the nonconference contest.

The Michigan defense — which has not given up a touchdown all season — recovered a Maryland fumble on the Terrapins' 2-yard line, and picked off four Terps passes.

Michigan is 3-0, while Maryland evened its mark at 2-2.

Harbaugh and Kattus teamed on a 10-yard TD pass play at 11:26 of the second quarter and Harbaugh drilled a 3-yard scoring pass to Kattus at 10:39 of the third quarter.

Freshman placekicker Mike Gillette added field goals of 34 and 25 yards for Michigan.

It marked the first time since 1978 that Michigan had won three nonconference games in a season and the first time since 1980 the Wolverines had held their opponents without a TD through the first three games.

Ohio St. 48, Wash. St. 32

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Fifth-ranked Ohio State, scoring three touchdowns in 2:58 during one span of the first half, rolled over error-prone Washington State.

The victory lifted Ohio State to 3-0 on the season, while Washington State fell to 1-4.

Washington State surrendered the football deep in its own territory on three occasions in the second period as Ohio State overcame a 14-7 first-quarter deficit.

The Buckeyes tied it on a 31-yard pass from Jim Karsatos to Mike Lanese and Rich Spangler's extra point at the 1:05 mark of the second period.

Two plays later, Ohio State was back in business after a Mark Rypien pass was intercepted by Sonny Gordon and returned 15 yards to the Cougars 24.

On the third snap, Karsatos hit tight end Ed Taggart on a 17-yard scoring strike, with Spangler's boot making it 21-14.

On WSU's first play after the kickoff, Reuben Mayes fumbled at the Cougars 20. Three plays later, Karsatos carried it over from seven yards out for the Buckeyes' third TD in less than three minutes and a 28-14 lead.

On their next possession, Cougars punter Glenn Harper was hurried into a 22-yard punt that gave Ohio State the ball at the Washington State 49.

Five more plays and the Buckeyes were in the end zone again, this time on a 26-yard pass from Cris Carter to Lanese off an end around. Spangler's fourth PAT in a span of 6:51 made it 35-14 and the Buckeyes were never headed as the teams swapped field goals the rest of the way.

Nebraska 63, Oregon 0

LINCOLN, Neb. — Reserve I-back Paul Miles rushed for 156 yards and two touchdowns to lead 16th-ranked Nebraska to a non-conference victory.

Nebraska rolled to a 42-0 halftime lead as Miles scored on runs of 46 and one yard and rolled up 113 yards rushing by intermission in relief of starter Doug DuBose.

DuBose, ranked fifth nationally in rushing, went to the sidelines with just over six minutes to play in the first quarter when he injured a knee carrying to the 1-yard line on Nebraska's first scoring drive.

Fullback Tom Rathman ran in from the 1 to cap that drive. Reserve fullback Ken Kaelin then added a 3-yard score in the opening quarter.

The 2-1 Cornhuskers put 28 points on the board in the second quarter on a 1-yard run by Travis Turner, a 25-yard run by Keith Jones and on Miles' two runs.

Von Sheppard scored on an 8-yard wingback-around to open the second half for Nebraska. Sheppard added another six points on a 27-yard reverse about six minutes later before the Huskers reserves completed the game.

Third-string fullback Dan Casterline capped a 99-yard drive with a 4-yard TD run in the Nebraska fourth quarter.

The Ducks slipped to 2-2 with the loss.

Purdue 35, Notre Dame 17

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue quarterback Jim Everett passed for 368 yards and three touchdowns while the Boilermakers' defense consistently held Notre Dame in check for the victory.

Purdue, leading 14-3, held the Irish to 113 yards offense in the first half, then allowed only eight yards in the third period.

With starter Steve Beuerlein and backup Terry Andrysiak sacked six times and never able to move the Irish, Purdue maintained control with Everett's devastating passing attack.

The Purdue senior, primarily utilizing five receivers, guided scoring drives in each of the four quarters. Two of his touchdown passes were to fullback Ray Wallace, who made four receptions for 77 yards and led the Boilermakers with 65 yards rushing.

In three games, Everett has passed for 1,106 yards and 10 touchdowns. Against the Irish, he completed 27 of 49 attempts.

A 14-yard run by Everett set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Rodney Carter in the first quarter. Then Everett hit touchdown passes of 15 yards to Wallace in the second period, 12 yards to Steve Griffin in the third quarter and 32 yards to Wallace in the final period.

Purdue safety Rod Woodson iced the victory with a 30-yard interception return for a touchdown with 2:18 to go.

Northwestern 38, N. Illinois 16

EVANSTON, Ill. — Mike Greenfield threw for a school record 446 yards while fullback Casey Cummings rushed for two touchdowns as Northwestern beat Northern Illinois to earn back-to-back victories for the first time since 1975.

Northwestern's Stanley Davenport rushed for a career-high 131 yards in the game as the Wildcats raised their record to 2-1.

Davenport, Cummings and Greenfield all ran for touchdowns in the first half as Northwestern jumped to a 21-0 lead.

Greenfield, who played most of the game with a sore right shoulder that was injured in the second quarter, completed 19 of 31 pass attempts for 367 yards in the first half.

That was five yards short of the NCAA record held by former Brigham Young quarterback Jim McMahon, who threw for 372 yards against Texas-El Paso in 1980.

Greenfield finished 26 of 43 in passing for one touchdown with two interceptions.

Northern Illinois has lost three straight after a season-opening win under first-year coach Jerry Pettibone.

Northern Illinois broke Northwestern's shutout midway through the second quarter on a one-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Marshall Taylor to split end Curt Partridge.

Indiana 36, Missouri 17

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Steve Bradley, Indiana's all-time total offense leader, hurled three touchdown passes and scored on a short run himself Saturday in leading the resurgent, unbeaten Hoosiers to a 36-17 college football victory over winless Missouri.

Sophomore Ken Allen totaled 183 yards on just 10 receptions, including a 68-yard touchdown bomb, for the most yardage any receiver ever compiled in a single game against Missouri.

Winless last season,, the Hoosiers of the Big Ten Conference raised their record to 3-0 and completely outplayed the Tigers of the Big Eight, who fell to 0-3. Missouri was leading 10-0 late in the second quarter when Allen, about 30 yards from the nearest defender, hauled in a Bradley pass on the 40-yard line and sped untouched into the end zone.

Iowa 57, Iowa State 3

AMES, Iowa — Chuck Long passed for three touchdowns and Ronnie Harmon ran for two more to lead third-ranked Iowa to a romp past Iowa State in non-conference action.

Rob Houghtlin added three field goals for the Hawkeyes, 3-0, who erupted for 34 points in the second quarter en route to a 41-0 halftime lead in the regionally televised game. Iowa State, 2-1, played into Iowa's hands by committing four turnovers in the second quarter, allowing the Hawkeyes to score the final 31 points of the period in only eight minutes, eight seconds.

Iowa, which leads the nation in scoring and total defense, has outscored its first three opponents this year 163-23.

Michigan St. 7, W. Michigan 3

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Tailback Lorenzo White dived for a one-yard touchdown with just over three minutes left in the game as Michigan State edged a stubborn Western Michigan in a non-conference college football game.

White's score capped an 80-yard Spartan drive, the most potent Michigan State attack in an afternoon largely dominated by the underdog Broncos.

It overcame a dogged Western Michigan defense that throttled the Spartans nearly all day. The Broncos' only score came on a 31-yard third-quarter field goal by Bronco sophomore John Creek, his first placekick attempt in college football.

Bowling Green 27, Akron 22

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio — Senior tailback Bernard White dove one yard to score the winning touchdown as undefeated Bowling Green downed Akron in a non-conference game.

The Falcons, 4-0, trailing 22-21 in the fourth quarter, scored the winning tally. with 8:16 left on a fourth-and-goal from the one. Because of an Akron penalty, Falcon quarterback Brian McClure had two opportunities to throw a 2-point conversion, but he missed both.

Indiana State 17, Drake 10

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. — Jeff Miller passed for one touchdown and led Indiana State in rushing while directing two long drives as the Sycamores defeated Drake in Missouri Valley Conference action.

Sooners hold off Gophers

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Second-ranked Oklahoma's tough, speedy defense, led by ends Darrell Reed and Kevin Murphy, held off a late rush by Minnesota Saturday night, enabling Earl Johnson's short touchdown dive and two 21-yard Tim Lashar field goals to hold up in the Sooners' victory.

A fumbled punt by Derrick White at Oklahoma's 19-yard line led to Minnesota's only score, a 12-yard touchdown pass from Rickey Foggie to Kevin Starks with 4:15 left in the game.

Minnesota, 2-1, had one more chance to pull off the upset, getting the ball on its own 30-yard line with 1:05 to play, but could advance no farther than Oklahoma's 32-yard line.

Due to a late schedule change, Oklahoma was playing its first game of the season.

Despite holding the ball for 21:54 of the first half and outgaining Minnesota 195-30 yards, the Sooners were only able to take a 10-0 halftime lead.

On Oklahoma's second possession of the game, Lashar's first field goal capped an 11-play, 56-yard drive to make it 3-0 with 3:43 left in the first quarter. The next time they had the ball, the Sooners went 60 yards in 14 plays and took a 10-point lead on Johnson's 1-yard touchdown leap. The fourth-down play came 5:09 into the second period.

Oklahoma ran for 168 yards — 73 by Spencer Tillman, who went out with a pulled hamstring two plays into the second quarter — and picked up 14 first downs in the opening half. But when Lashar missed field goals of 49 and 50 yards, the Sooners were unable to put any more points on the board.

Late Games

Oklahoma St. 45, Miami, Ohio 10

STILLWATER, Okla. — Tailback Thurman Thomas scored four touchdowns to lead No. 7 Oklahoma State to a ictory over Miami of Ohio.

Thomas scored on a 58-yard punt return just 1:44 into the game, and added three touchdown runs — from the 3 and twice from the 1 — as the Big Eight Conference Cowboys improved to 3-0.

After the punt return, Gary Gussman drilled a 35-yard field goal for Miami of Ohio to make the score 7-3. Thomas then capped a 13-play, 76-yard drive by going in from three yards out.

The Cowboys made it 17-3 when Joey O'Donnell kicked a 36-yard field goal late in the first quarter.

Miami tailback George Swarn, averaging 156.5 yards rushing coming into the game, was held to just seven yards on 12 carries. His 5-yard touchdown reception at 9:54 of the second period ended the Redskins' scoring.

Florida St. 24, Kansas 20

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Freshman quarterback Chip Ferguson came off the bench in the fourth period to throw a 68-yard touchdown pass and direct another scoring drive as fourth-ranked Florida State came from behind to trip previously undefeated Kansas.

The Seminoles, 4-0, trailed from the game's initial drive until the first series of the fourth quarter, when Ferguson replaced starter Kirk Coker. Four plays later, Ferguson threw to Phillip Bryant on the 68-yard pass play, closing the Jayhawks' lead to 20-17.

Mississippi 27, Tulane 10

NEW ORLEANS — Nathon Wonsley revived Mississippi's anemic running game, rushing for 144 yards and a touchdown to lead Ole Miss to a victory over Tulane.

Mississippi had averaged just 41 yards a game net rushing as a team into Saturday night's game. Wonsley had a season total of 46 yards in the three previous games.Mississippi is now 2-1-1 for the season and Tulane fell to 0-4.

Wonsley's touchdown clinched the game with ten minutes left in the final quarter. It came on a 33-yard run.

Florida 36, Mississippi St. 22

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Precision passer Kerwin Bell tossed three touchdown passes, including an 83-yarder for the go-ahead score, to spark 11th-ranked Florida to a 36-22 victory over Mississippi State in a Southeastern Conference football opener Saturday night.

In running its unbeaten string to 13 over two seasons, Florida, 2-0-1, shut down Mississippi State's motion-bone offense in the third quarter and scored 13 unanswered points. State fell to 3-1.

Lions wary of Bucs' Wilder

Associated Press

The Detroit Lions are well aware of what they face Sunday in the person of James Wilder.

Tampa Bay's star running back, who will lead the winless Buccaneers, 0-3, against the Lions, 2-1, in the Silverdome, is the National Football Conference's top rusher with 393 yards, its leading pass receiver with 20 catches for 116 yards and the total offense leader with 509 yards.

Most important, he has rushed for more than 100 yards in five consecutive games, dating back to the 1984 season. That is only two short of the NFL record shared by O.J. Simpson and Earl Campbell.

Five players — Jim Brown, Franco Harris, Walter Payton, Eric Dickerson and Campbell — have had six consecutive 100-yard games.

"I think James Wilder is better than George Wonsley," said Detroit Coach Darryl Rogers, referring to the running back who gained 170 yards in the Lion's 14-6 upset loss to the Indianapolis Colts last Sunday. "So, that means we'll have our hands full."

ELSEWHERE SUNDAY, the only two unbeaten teams in the NFL will be in action, with the Chicago Bears, 3-0, playing host to the Washington Redskins, 1-2, and the Los Angeles Rams, 3-0, at home against the Atlanta Falcons, 0-3.

The Bears beat the Redskins 23-19 in the playoffs last year without quarterback Jim McMahon, who is off to a fast start in 1985. McMahon, who came off the bench last week against the Minnesota Vikings to throw for three touchdowns, did not start against the Vikings because of neck and leg injuries. But he will start against Washington.

Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann has been struggling. He has completed 45 of 91 passes for 468 yards and only two touchdowns. He also has been intercepted seven times.

If the Falcons are to beat the Rams, they will have to find a way to stop Eric Dickerson, who returned quickly to top form after missing two games because of a holdout.

NFL Roundup

Dickerson, who set an NFL rushing record of 2,105 yards in 1985, ran for 150 yards on 31 carries and scored three times in a 35-24 win over the Seattle Seahawks Monday night.

THE MIAMI Dolphins and Denver Broncos, both 2-1, meet in Denver Sunday, presenting an attractive quarterback matchup.

Miami's Dan Marino, who was a holdout and then played poorly in the Dolphins' season-opening loss to Houston, has returned to form. Last week, in a 31-0 trouncing of Kansas City, Marino completed 23 of 35 passes for 258 yards and two touchdowns and threw one interception. Denver's John Elway completed 19 of 38 passes for 291 yards and three TDs with no interceptions last week when the Broncos beat Atlanta 44-28. His totals read 65 of 119 for 783 yards, nine touchdowns and four interceptions.

Defending NFL champion San Francisco, 2-1, is back on track after an opening-game loss to Minnesota. Quarterback Joe Montana has led the 49ers' resurgence.

NEW ORLEANS, 1-2, is coming off a 20-13 victory over Tampa Bay. Quarterback David Wilson has completed 34 of 55 passes for 526 yards and four touchdowns, with no interceptions since going 2 for 22 for 30 yards with two interceptions in the Saints' opener.

Kansas City and Seattle both will be trying to rebound from their first losses following two victories. Kansas City sputtered badly in losing to Miami, while Seattle held the Rams even for a half before losing. The Chiefs will be trying for a 3-1 start for the first time since 1981.

The Raiders, 1-2, will be without injured quarterback Jim Plunkett, who has a dislocated shoulder, when they try to snap a two-game losing streak. New England is coming off a tougher-than-expected 17-14 victory over Buffalo.

Cleveland, 1-2, will pit its strong defense against the explosive Charger offense led by quarterback Dan Fouts. San Diego is 2-1.

Indianapolis, 1-2, is coming off the emotional high of its upset over Detroit, but the Jets, with quarterback Ken O'Brien coming on strong, have won two games after a 31-0 battering by the Raiders in their opener.

ST. LOUIS, 2-1, will try to get its Neil Lomax-led offense back in high gear against Green Bay, 1-2. The Cardinals scored 27 and 41 points, respectively, in winning their first two games, but got only 17 in losing to the Jets. Lynn Dickey has asked to be replaced as Green Bay's starting quarterback, so Randy Wright will start for the Packers.

The Giants, 2-1, and Philadelphia, 1-2, will be meeting for the second time this season. New York won the first game 21-0. The Eagles got their first touchdown of the season in upsetting Washington.

New York Giants (2-1) at Philadelphia (1-2)
The Giants beat the Eagles 21-0 on opening day and registered eight sacks, leading Coach Marion Campbell to switch from Ron Jaworski to the more mobile Randall Cunningham at quarterback. Cunningham engineered last week's 19-6 upset of the Redskins but ranks last among NFL quarterbacks with a 34.1 rating.

Atlanta (0-3) at Los Angeles Rams (3-0)
The Falcons have been able to score points but they haven't been able to stop anyone — their 107 points allowed are NFL's second worst. Eric Dickerson cracked a bone in his hand in his 31-carry, 150-yard debut against Seattle, but will play.

Cincinnati (0-3) at Pittsburgh (2-1)
The Bengals are emulating last season — when they began 0-5 — by allowing 113 points in three games, the most in the NFL. Last year, they almost came back to catch the Steelers but they won't do that this season unless they take this one.

Cleveland (1-2) at San Diego (2-1)
San Diego, which outscored Cincinnati 44-41 last week, is off to a typical start — first in the league on offense, last on defense. The Browns are going in the opposite direction after a 20-7 loss to Dallas — a solid defense but an offensive output that has gone down each week.

Indianapolis (1-2) at New York Jets (2-1)
The Jets' success is primarily the result of a defense that leads the NFL in takeaways — all three touchdowns in a 24-3 win over the Packers last week were the result of turnovers. The Colts, who gave up 75 points in their first two games, found a defense in a 14-6 win over Detroit last week.

Minnesota (2-1) at Buffalo (0-3)
Every so often, the Bills threaten to win one — they failed by only three points against New England last week. Bud Grant's Vikings, despite a 33-24 loss to the Bears last Thursday, continue to look like the league's most improved team.

SOUTH—

The win is the Hookies' first of the season, giving them a 1-3 mark. The non-conference loss dropped Syracuse to 1-2.

Alabama 40, Vanderbilt 20

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Alabama quarterback Mike Shula ran for one touchdown and passed for another as he guided the 15th-ranked Crimson Tide to an easy SEC over Vanderbilt.

The victory upped Alabama's record to 4-0 overall and 2-0 in the SEC, while Vanderbilt, playing its conference opener, now is 1-3.

Alabama place-kicker Van Tiffin gave the Tide a 3-0 lead on the first play of the second quarter when he capped 74-yard drive with a 40-yard field goal.

Vanderbilt came back to pull even at 3-3 after the kickoff, driving from its own 20-yard line to the Alabama 2 before settling for Alan Herline's 19-yard field goal.

The Crimson Tide took control late in the second quarter, scoring twice in a two-minute span.

Pittsburgh 10, W. Virginia 10

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — West Virginia quarterback Tony Reda plunged one yard for a touchdown with 4:38 left as West Virginia rallied in the second half to gain a tie with Pitt.

Reda's sneak on fourth down brought the Mountaineers back from a 10-0 halftime deficit and produced only the second tie in the 78-game series.

Reda, who replaced starter John Talley in the second quarter, set up the touchdown with a fourth down pass of 14 yards to tight end Gary Basil that gave the Mountaineers, 2-1-1, a first down on the Pitt 4. The Panthers held three running plays to three yards before Reda hit off the right side for the score and freshman kicker Charlie Baumann booted the tying extra point.

Baumann's 32-yard field goal brought the Mountaineers to within 10-3 with 11:28 left in the third quarter after safety Travis Curtis recovered Pitt fullback Darnell Stone's fumble at the Panther 33.

Gasping Mets win as Cards split two

Major Leagues

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The New York Mets made the most of four hits and clutch relief pitching by Jesse Orosco Saturday for a 3-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday.

With the win, the Mets moved to within 4 games of the St. Louis Cardinals in the NL East as the Cardinals split a twinbill with Montreal.

Orosco got his 17th save after relieving Roger McDowell with the bases loaded and one out in the ninth. He struck out pinch-hitter Sixto Lezcano and R.J. Reynolds.

George Foster hit his 20th home run the second inning against Bob Kipper, the ex-Midland Angel, who fell to 1-2.

Cardinals 0-4, Expos 2-2

MONTREAL — Darrell Porter's RBI single snapped a 2-2 tie in the 11th inning and led the St. Louis to a victory over Montreal and a split of a doubleheader.

The victory puts the Cardinals four games ahead of the New York Mets in the National League East, with seven games left for each club.

In the first game of the doubleheader, Bill Gullickson and Jeff Reardon combined on a four-hitter, and Andre Dawson homered for the seventh time in as many games as the Expos defeated the Cardinals 2-0.

In the nightcap, Terry Pendleton drew a one-out walk off reliever Jeff Reardon, 2-8, stole second, took third on catcher Ned Yost's throwing error and scored on Porter's single to center. Ozzie Smith singled and Curt Ford doubled home Porter for an insurance run.

Dodgers 3, Giants 1

LOS ANGELES — Enos Cabell drew a bases-loaded walk, forcing home one run, scored twice in the third inning and defeated San Francisco.

Jerry Reuss, 14-10, allowed only four hits and a run in six innings before developing tightness in the calve muscles of both legs. Ken Howell and Tom Niedenfuer completed a five-hitter, with Niedenfuer gaining his 18th save.

The victory reduced the Dodgers' magic number to four for clinching the National League West title. Los Angeles leads second-place Cincinnati by 5½ games with eight games remaining.

Pedro Guerrero homered off reliever Greg Minton in the eighth for the Dodgers' final run. It was Guerrero's 33rd homer of the season, tying a record for a Dodgers' player in Los Angeles, matching the mark set by Steve Garvey in 1977.

Cubs 11, Phillies 10

CHICAGO — Ron Cey and Keith Moreland each drove in four runs with a pair of homers and Moreland extended his hitting streak to 17 games, pacing Chicago to a victory over Philadelphia that extended the Phillies losing streak to nine straight.

By collecting a second-inning single, Moreland, who became the first Cub since 1982 to bat in 100 runs, is now hitting .429 in the 17-game streak.

A crowd of 27,875 watched as the Cubs set an all-time club attendance mark of 2,119,373 for a seaston, topping the mark of 2,107,655 set a year ago.

Reds 5, Astros 2

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati lefthander Tom Browning, with relief help from Ted Powers, became the major leagues' first rookie in 31 years to win 20 games as the Reds beat the Houston.

Browning, 20-9, became the National League's fourth 20-game winner this season and the first rookie to reach the mark since Bob Grim went 20-6 for the New York Yankees in 1954. Harvey Haddix was the last National Leaguer to win 20 in his first season, going 20-9 in 1953.

The Reds went into the game Saturday trailing the Los Angeles Dodgers by 5½ games in the National League West. The Dodgers played at home Saturday against the San Francisco Giants.

Twins 5, Royals 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie Dennis Burtt, making only his second major league start, combined with relievers Pete Filson and Ron Davis on a four-hitter as Minnesota beat Kansas City.

The Royals started the day tied with the California Angels for the lead in the AL West. The Angels play in Cleveland Saturday.

Burtt, 2-1, gave up three hits, struck out four and walked four in 6 1-3 innings in only his fourth major league appearance. Filson and Davis finished up, with Davis gaining his 24th save by holding the Royals hitless and striking out three over the final 1 2-3 innings.

Danny Jackson, 13-12, went the first 5 1-3 innings for the Royals, taking the loss.

Red Sox 2, Tigers 0

DETROIT — Glenn Hoffman and Dwight Evans hit one-out home runs off Willie Hernandez in the 10th inning and Bob Ojeda pitched nine innings of four-hit ball to lead Boston to a victory over Detroit.

Hernandez, 8-10, started the 10th in relief of Detroit starter Dan Petry, who had allowed just two hits over the first nine. Hoffman sent his 2-1 pitch over the left-field fence for his sixth home run, snapping the scoreless tie. Evans followed with his 27th homer to right.

Ojeda, 8-11, struck out five and did not walk a batter. Steve Crawford pitched the 10th and earned his 12th save.

Indians 7, Angels 5

CLEVELAND — Jerry Willard's tie-breaking two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning capped Cleveland's comeback from an eighth-inning 5-0 deficit and gave the Indians a victory over California that kept the Angels from taking over sole possession of first place in the American League West.

The defeat left California tied with the Kansas City Royals, who lost 5-3 to the Minnesota Twins. California and Kansas City each have eight games remaining, four against each other starting Monday night at Kansas City.

Yankees 6, Orioles 5

NEW YORK — Dave Winfield, who earlier hit his 25th homer, singled with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning, driving home Rickey Henderson from third base and capping a two-run rally that lifted New York over Baltimore.

The victory kept the second-place Yankees six games behind American League East-leading Toronto, which beat Milwaukee 6-1. The Blue Jays lowered their magic number to four with their triumph.

Ron Guidry gave up 11 hits, including five doubles, a triple and Gary Roenicke's two-run homer, but pitched as complete game as he score his league-leading 21st victory against six losses.

Blue Jays 6, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — George Bell had four hits, stole two bases and scored twice to pace Toronto to a victory over Milwaukee.

It was Toronto's second straight victory over Milwaukee, reducing the Blue Jays' magic number for their first-ever American League East title to four. The New York Yankees remained six games behind.

Toronto batters shelled three Milwaukee pitchers for 16 hits, 15 of them singles. Starter Tim Leary, 1-3, left after the fifth inning.

Padres 6, Braves 5

ATLANTA — Rookie shorstop Andres Thomas' error allowed Tim Flannery and Tony Gwynn to score with two out in the top of the 13th inning to give the San Diego Padres a victory over the Atlanta Braves.

A's 7, White Sox 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Tony Phillips' three-run double in the seventh inning put Oakland ahead, and the A's went on to a victory over Chicago.

Oakland trailed 3-1 when Jose Canseco opened the seventh with a leadoff walk off Chicago starter Gene Nelson, who was then relieved by Dave Wehrmeister. Mickey Tettleton followed with a single to right and Mike Gallego was hit by a pitch, loading the bases.

COMMISSION SALES REP

Part-time or full-time. High commission dollars paid for selling local retail businesses on our bad check collection service. However, the check system we provide to merchants is actually free to them because Texas law provides that collection agencies charge a fee to the hot check writer. Our Sales Reps are paid a commission that is based on a percentage of this fee collected on each hot check written to our merchant clients. Hence, our Reps enjoy continuing repeat earnings on each client signed up as long as the Rep makes courtesy service calls on the client merchant sufficient to retain client satisfaction and a good relationship. Thus each satisfied client becomes a building block that can result in Sales Reps earning at a rate of $18,000 to $24,000 per year, after a year of part-time sales effort. Credit Verificatio Corporation is the fastest growing company of its industry, with the most advanced and comprehensive check system in the U.S. Credit Verification Corporation is providing this service currently to over 3,500 satisfied clients and is in excellent standing with all regulatory agencies and the Better Business Bureau. BUYERS GUIDE

IMPORTANT: Spoken promises are difficult to enforce. Ask the dealer to put all promises in writing. Keep this form.

VEHICLE MAKE _____ MODEL _____ YEAR _____ VIN NUMBER _____

DEALER STOCK NUMBER (Optional) _____

WARRANTIES FOR THIS VEHICLE:

☐ AS IS—NO WARRANTY

YOU WILL PAY ALL COSTS FOR ANY REPAIRS. The dealer assumes no responsibility for any repairs regardless of any oral statements about the vehicle.

☒ WARRANTY

☐ FULL ☒ LIMITED WARRANTY. The dealer will pay 100 % of the labor and 100 % of the parts for the covered systems that fail during the warranty period. Ask the dealer for a copy of the warranty document for a full explanation of warranty coverage, exclusions, and the dealer's repair obligations. Under state law, "implied warranties" may give you even more rights.

SYSTEMS COVERED: Engine: Cylinder Block and All Internal Parts, Cylinder Head Assemblies, Timing Case, Chain, Gears, Belt and Sprockets, Harmonic Balancer, Oil Pump, Water Pump, Transmission Case and all Internal Parts, Torque Converter, Drive Plate, Flex Plate, Fly Wheel, Bell Housing, Transaxle Case or Rear Axle Housing and all Internal Parts, Drive Shaft and Axle Shaft Assemblies and their Housings, Axle Shaft Bearings, Drive Shaft Center Bearings, Constant Velocity Joints, Universal Joints and Yokes

DURATION: All listed components are covered for 5 Months from the vehicle sale date or 5,000 miles from the vehicle's odometer reading at the time of vehicle sale (whichever comes first) after payment by the customer of the first $50 of covered repair costs for each repair visit ☒ SERVICE CONTRACT. A service contract is available at an extra charge on this vehicle. Ask for details as to coverage, deductible, price, and exclusions. If you buy a service contract within 90 days of the time of sale, state law "implied warranties" may give you additional rights.

PRE PURCHASE INSPECTION: ASK THE DEALER IF YOU MAY HAVE THIS VEHICLE INSPECTED BY YOUR MECHANIC EITHER ON OR OFF THE LOT.

SEE THE BACK OF THIS FORM for important additional information, including a list of some major defects that may occur in used motor vehicles.

Among the many price ranges of homes in Midland is a group popularly referred to as the "80's homes."

Though each reflects its own individual personality, many of the homes in this price range seem to share several general features.

The five "cover" homes boast many of these amenities. All five homes offer central heating and air conditioning; decorative touches such as ceiling fans, mini blinds, fireplaces, wallpaper treatments and vaulted or cathedral ceilings; double-car garages and separate living and dining areas. Also all of these homes have well over 1,500 square feet of workable living space, enabling each to easily accommodate today's busy family.

Economic feasibility of refinancing home mortgages varies

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — When Robert J. Grosso and his wife, Carolyn, bought their five-bedroom colonial in New Jersey two years ago, they financed the property with a 13⅛ percent, variable-rate mortgage. They recently discovered that they owed almost $4,000 more than they had originally borrowed. The mortgage had a negative amortization feature, so when rates increased, the monthly payment remained the same and the difference was added to the principal. Dismayed, the couple decided to shop for a better deal.

Now that mortgage money is comparatively plentiful and rates are down, many property owners are taking out their calculators to figure out whether it is worthwhile to renegotiate their loans. Some are saddled with mortgages of 15 percent or more that they picked up when interest rates peaked a few years ago. Others face negative amortization, potentially unlimited rate increases or other unfavorable terms that they agreed to as a trade-off for lower initial rates. Still others want to cash in on the equity they have built up over years of rising home prices.

"It's a common sense, economic decision," said Howard L. Braitman, a tax partner in the Philadelphia office of the accounting firm of Price Waterhouse. "You have to work out when the decline in interest rates becomes beneficial for you, taking into consideration the costs of refinancing."

The biggest cost is likely to be points: Each point is equal to 1 percent of the total mortgage, and lenders today typically charge three or four points. The amount is considered prepaid interest and thus is tax deductible, but it must be paid immediately when a mortgage is issued or refinanced.

The points are often enough to discourage prospective borrowers. Braitman, who had an 18 percent mortgage on his Philadelphia condominium, found that he could not justify paying the required four points to refinance his loan until rates dropped to 12½ percent.

Homeowners may also face prepayment penalties on their existing loans. These penalties, which typically apply to mortgages paid off in five years or less, are usually restricted to 2 percent of the outstanding loan balance, according to the Mortgage Bankers Association. Unlike New York and Connecticut, New Jersey prohibits prepayment penalties altogether.

New Yorkers must also pay a mortgage tax of 1½ percent on mortgages of less than $500,000 in New York City, 1 percent outside the city, an expense that can add substantially to the cost of refinancing. Miscellaneous minor expenses, which average about $2,500, include application, appraisal and attorney's fees, credit checks, new title insurance, and recording charges. Nonetheless, as a general rule, when you have a three to five point spread and you're dealing with a term of 20 or 30 years, there's probably no question that a new mortgage will be cheaper, said Andrew M. Rich, a financial planner in Plainview, N.Y.

However, often the decision is not so clear-cut. Homeowners today face a dizzying array of home mortgage options, with payouts ranging from 15 to 30 years, fixed rates, adjustable rates with annual or lifetime caps, or lower initial rates for the first few years of the loan.

To sort through these variables, compare the refinancing costs with the amount of interest that will be saved over the term of the mortgage. But keep in mind that these costs must be paid upfront, while the savings will be spread out over many years. Also, the interest "doesn't cost you 100 cents on the dollar if you itemize," Braitman pointed out.

He offered the following example: A homeowner who has a 30-year, 15 percent, fixed-rate $100,000 mortgage with a $1,264.45 monthly payment wants to re-finance with a 12½ percent loan that will cost him 3½ points. Re-financing costs a total of $5,500 — $3,500 in points and $2,000 for attorney's fees and other costs. His monthly payment under the new rate is $1,067.26, for a savings of $197.19. Over the term of the loan, he saves $70,988.40.

In this case, it would take more than two years to recoup the re-financing costs. Even so, "when you take the total savings over 30 years, discounted back to present value, and compare that number with the present cost of refinancing, it probably pays to refinance," said Braitman. An exception would be if you plan to move in a year or two.

Homeowners who are evaluating adjustable-rate mortgages should work with the most negative scenario, Rich advised. He recommended avoiding any adjustable agreement where the rates can climb above 15 percent, or those without any rate cap at all.

Besides rates, borrowers should also look at the size of their loans. With smaller loans, say under $50,000, rates must drop substantially before it pays to refinance. A portion of the refinancing costs is fixed, so it takes much longer to recoup the savings.

Consider the tax consequences of refinancing, too. For homeowners in high tax brackets, Uncle Sam picks up a large part of the monthly mortgage payment in the form of interest deductions. So someone in the 50 percent bracket who has a 14 percent mortgage pays only 7 percent after tax.

On the other hand, refinancing may become attractive if your tax bracket drops, since the deduction is worth less. Thus, when evaluating the trade-off between upfront costs and lower rates, homeowners who believe that the president's tax revision package will be enacted with reduced individual rates intact might give more weight to the lowest possible rates.

Homeowners who have paid down a significant portion of their mortgages can reduce their monthly payments by refinancing the balance at the same rate. In effect "they're stretching out the term of the loan and paying less in amortization," said Stephen M. Raphael, a New York attorney.

Thus, assume that a homeowner with a $100,000, 12 percent mortgage has 10 years left of a 20-year term. If the $76,700 balance is refinanced with an identical 12 percent, 20-year mortgage, the owner's monthly payments would drop $255.

As for the Grossos, they worked through the calculations and finally accepted an 8⅞ percent variable-rate mortgage. Unlike their first mortgage, the principal amount cannot increase, and they were pleased to discover that the lower rate qualified them for a larger loan. Now, with the financing finally settled, the family is settling in. "It's the fourth house we've owned, and we're planning on staying here for a while," said Grosso.

Local realtor recently attended national relocation conference

LaVada Fowler, President of Coldwell Banker Adobe Inc., Realtors in Midland Texas was among almost 1,000 relocation professionals who participated in Super Session 1985, held September 11-14 in Washington, D.C.

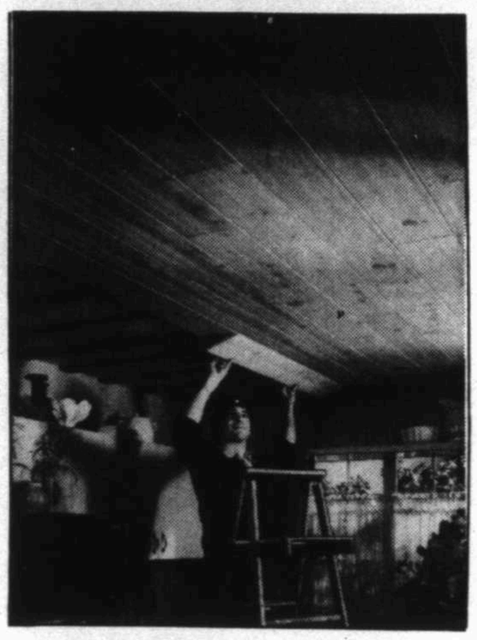
This year's Super Session, which carried the theme of "Pathways to Progress," was the largest in the four-year history of the event. The conference annually attracts some of the nation's most respected residential real estate brokers, relocation directors, corporate administrators, relocation management company operatives and consultants in related fields.

Ms. Fowler shared ideas with colleagues across the country as part of the more than 80 educational workshops that were include on the Super Session 1985 agenda. Participants benefited from the formal and informal exchange of information with the relocation industry's leaders throughout the four-day program.

From the corporate sector came speakers from such nationally-recognized firms as AT&T Communications, Westinghouse, E.I. duPont, Rockwell International, 3M Company, ITT Systems, Aetna Life and Casualty, Northern Telecom, Texas Instruments, Sperry Corporation, Hospital Corporation of America and Texas Oil and Gas.

Among the many prominent relocation management companies conducting presentations at Super Session 1985 were Equitable, Merrill Lynch, Homequity, Coldwell Banker, ChemExec ReloSystems, GenRel, VanRelco, Maenner, Relocation Realty Serivce, All Points and TransEquity.

The majority of national real estate referral networks were also represented at the meeting.



Ceiling planks can create a warm, rustic atmosphere every bit as effectively as wall paneling, and they're no more difficult to install. These planks can be stapled, cemented or clipped to the old ceiling.

Don't panel walls, plank the ceiling

A lot of labels have been hung on the 1970s. Labels like "The Me Decade" (the emphasis on self-realization), "The Cool-Down Decade" (after the incendiary '60s), "The Saudi Seventies" (the impact of oil prices on our economy) have been used to describe that time period.

From the standpoint of home remodeling, the '70s may go down as "The Great Paneling Epoch." Half the homeowners in America, so it seemed, were paneling their dens, kitchens, attics, basements. Watergate may have been the most publicized coverup, but the most utilized coverup was wall paneling.

And why not? Manufacturing methods have improved to the point where wood-veneer or synthetic materials could be made to look like solid wood. The inexpensive, lightweight sheets were easy for do-it-yourselfers to work with. And the finished results enhanced a room dramatically, giving it a warm, cozy feel.

But we're in "The Enterprising '80s" now and homeowners are looking for different approaches. Instead of wall paneling, many are opting for wallpaper, mirror panels and cutom applications like stenciling and friezes (decorative bands near the top of the wall).

The "up to her" attitude toward paneling was expressed in a recent newspaper column that gives fix-up advice. A reader wrote in complaining, "I'm tired of wood paneling. Nearly every room in our house was paneled by the previous owner. My husband and I are now planning to add a rec room and he wants to panel it, too. How can I talk, him out of it?"

The columnist suggested a compromise: The wife could decorate the den walls any way she wanted and the husband could get the rustic look he was after by putting up ceiling planks.

Good advice. Ceiling plans can help create a relaxed, homey atmosphere every bit as well as wall paneling. Though non-wood, planks are just as woodlike in appearance as the best wood paneling and no more difficult to install.

Top quality ceiling planks are designed with the same random knotting and varying densities of wood graining to be found in real oak and pine. This is achieved by using high-fidelity photographic images of oak and pine in the manufacturing process.

An oak design is dark enough to cozy up a room yet light enough to retain an open feeling even where there is a low ceiling. The pine is several shades lighter, similar in appearance to unfinished wood. It goes especially well in kitchens where it coordinates nicely with butcherblock countertops.

Many ceiling planks are designed for do-it-yourself installation by any one of three methods: cementing them directly to the old ceiling (if it's not too damaged), stapling them to wood furring strips which have been nailed to the old ceiling, or clipping them to short metal tracks.

EIGHTIES

Located on a corner lot at 701 West Spruce is an eight-year old, contemporary-style home (pictured top left on the cover) listed by Dene Kelley Realtors at $82,500. Emerging from the impressive entry with sheek Mexican tile into this four bedroom, one and three-quarter bath home with approximately 2,000 square feet of living space, one can appreciate the fine workmanship in each room.

Patterned wallpaper predominantly in "Wedgewood Blue," off-white wood cabinets with a convenient ceiling fan and parquet tile floor set the kitchen of this domain apart from many homes. An ingeniously designed wall pantry for additional storage enables the user to "stock up" for the winter months ahead.

And to really enjoy those approaching "chilly" months, roasting chestnuts before the fire while lounging in the cozy pit area of the home located at 2107 Regal (pictured top right on the cover) sounds like the perfect way to spend this winter. The immense brick fireplace in this sunken pit area of the home's great room is the focal point of the area. With a cathedral ceiling and decorative ceiling fan in the great room, complete with a wet bar, this room has a most luxurious appearance.

This home, listed by Chaparral Realtors at $89,900 has three bedrooms and one and three-quarter baths.

For the busy family on the go, the townhome located at 1201 Godfrey and listed by Charlie Linebarger Realtors-Insurance (center photo) is perfect. With approximately 1,800 square feet of living space, this very contemporary-style, three-year old home features three bedrooms and two baths.

A handsome brick fireplace in the living room stretches to the upstairs loft/game room, perfect for entertaining. A wet bar adds convenience to this open area.

With thermal windows, skylights in the large kitchen and master bath and custom drapes throughout the home, one can appreciate the comfort this townhome offers.

For a luxurious added dimension to the home located at 3103 Elma, (bottom left photo on cover) is a lovely atrium nestled within this domain of approximately 2,250 square feet. Listed by Langston-Monarch Associates at $85,000 and boasting three large bedrooms and two baths, the obvious focal point of this contemporary-style home is its atrium, adding a light and airy touch to all its bordering rooms. The atrium floor can be removed for planting foliage.

Completing the theme of the home are plantation shutters on each window of the rooms facing the street illuminating the walls of a classic pastel shade of peach.

Comfort and convenience in plush surroundings is the goal successfully achieved in the sequestered master bedroom and bath quarters of the home located at 5220 Brazos.

Featuring a separate shower and tub area in the bath with a large walk-in closet, the bath easily accommodates its users by offering ample space.

Listed by Coldwell Banker Adobe Realtors, this domain features beige plush carpeting and matching drapes throughout, window treatments and very nice wallpaper touches.

This home has a lovely open floor plan with a total of three bedrooms and two baths in approximately 1,800 square feet.

Multi-use furniture makes the most of every inch

Parlors, pantries, playrooms, smoking rooms and servants' quarters are long gone from most American homes. Even separate dining rooms are becoming something of a rarity.

These days, a single-purpose room is a luxury few can afford. Downsized homes and smaller apartments mean that every room has to work harder than ever to accommodate a variety of needs and ever-changing lifestyles.

"A hard-working, double-duty room doesn't have to look like it's working hard," counsels Peggy Dracoules, president of the Interior Design Society, a professional independent affiliate of the National Home Furnishings Association (NHFA). "Furniture manufacturers today are producing an infinite assortment of multi-functional furniture that is every bit as beautiful as it is practical and functional."

A good example of this, according to Dracoules, is a multi-function wall system. Designed to take advantage of vertical wall space without consuming precious square footage, wall units can serve a wide variety of needs. They can be entertainment centers, with storage for the television, stereo and videocassette recorder; or they can store records, tapes, board games and craft supplies.

A wall system outfitted with a drop-down table or slide-out work surface can be the ideal place for doing homework, paying bills, or even for a mini at-home office. Some are even built to accommodate a personal computer and printer. Or, when equipped with lighted shelves and a built-in bar, a wall system can be a china cabinet that works as well in the dining room as it does in the living or family room.

Another popular multi-functional-piece of furniture is the sleep sofa. Available in twin, double-bed and queen sizes, these double-duty upholstered pieces can turn any room into a guest room at a moment's notice.

"Selecting new furniture that performs in more ways than one, whether it's designed for that purpose or not is 'double-duty thinking' at its best," Dracoules notes. A game table, for instance, can be used for casual meals in the family room or the den or as a desk in the corner of the living room.

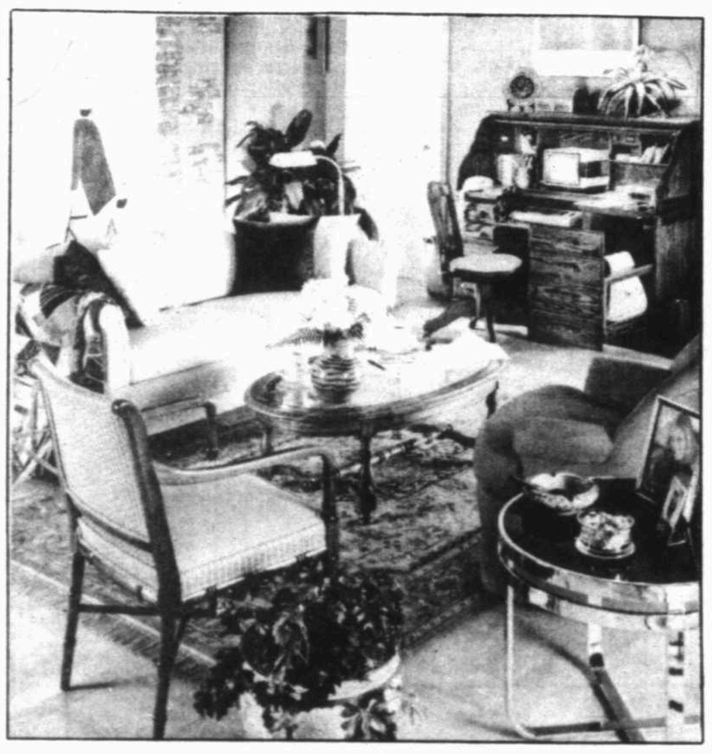
"I know people who have two games tables of the same size and design," says Dracoules. "They use on in the dining room and the matching one in the family room When they have dinner parties they put them both in the dining room."

Other options might include a cocktail table that rises to dining or desk height. Or, for extra storage space, use campaign-style or wicker chests as coffee tables. There's ample room inside for storing bedding, out-of-season clothing or games.

In the bedroom an armoire or wardrobe can be used to store linens, clothng and a television – all at the same time.

"Forget what the floor plan says and make the existing spaces work the way you want them to," Dracoules says. With today's furniture, a dining room can be an office, but still look like a dining room. A den can accommodate overnight guests without looking like a bedroom. And a living room can be a family room and still be very formal.

A room for all reasons: This ruffled and quilted country setting has more going on than meets the eye. According to the National Home Furnishings Association's spokesperson, Peggy Dracoules, "It is truly multi-functional." The sofa is really a comfortable queen-size sleep sofa while the wall system has both open and closed storage, space for home entertainment equipment plus shelves to display accessories -- even a light bridge with wine glass storage. "It's the perfect place to entertain family and friends for any occasion," Dracoules says.



A growing phenomenon: Twenty-seven million American households, triple the number of five years ago, operate an at-home business office. Keeping high-tech and home-life separate takes careful planning. According to the National Home Furnishings Association's spokesperson, Peggy Dracoules, double-duty furniutre is the way to do it. Here a commodious roll top desk, built to accommodate the latest in computer technology, can conceal any desk-top clutter when the tambour top is lowered. A double-duty sleep sofa provides seating for daytime gatherings as well as accommodating overnight or weekend guests.

Wallpaper changes ordinary items into designer accessories

What to do with leftover wallcoverings? Anything you want! Let your imagination be your guide — turn inexpensive home furnishings into beautiful designer-look accessories.

Cover a plastic etagiere (shelf unit) with matching or coordinating patterns. Desk accessories such as pencil holders, notebook covers and desk blotters give a neat, pulled-together look to a den or study. Carry a pattern theme throughout your home by choosing one main pattern and using companion prints to cover accessories in every room.

One-person households comprise fastest growing housing marketin 80's

The fastest growing market in the housing industry appears to be among one-person households. According to the 1980 census, such households comprise 30 percent of the total in the San Francisco-Oakland area and 28 percent in the New York-Long Island region.

Between 1970 and 1980, one-person households accounted for nine out of ten new households in Pittsburgh; eight out of ten in New York-Long Island; better than seven out of ten in Philadelphia; and more than six out of ten in Boston, Chicago and St. Louis.

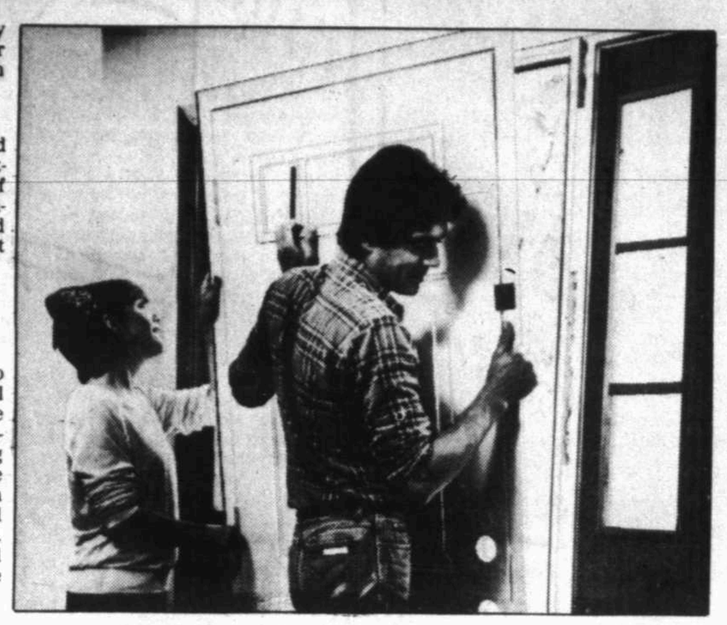
Insulated doors cut energy usage

You can close the door on energy waste by replacing those exterior wood entry doors that stick or let in drafts.

It is done easily by using insulated steel entry doors designed for do-it-yourself installation. The interiors of the steel doors are filled with insulation to shut out cold and heat and save energy. And, the doors won't warp, split, shrink or swell.

A Stanley entry door is easy to install because it has a unique steel adapter frame that attaches to the existing door opening, making it unnecessary to tear out the existing wood frames. The door and frame are handled as a single unit and can be installed with ordinary hand tools in fewer than three hours. Doors are available in embossed and raised panel designs and come prime painted.



Replace worn doors with insulated ones that shut out the cold and heat.

Tips make clean up easy

The Ultimate Householder's Book gives many help kitchen tips, such as these:

* To clean up raw egg dropped on a floor, sprinkle it with salt, let it sit for 15 to 20 minutes, then sweep it with a broom.

* If one drinking glass becomes stuck inside another, fill the top glass with cold water and immerse the lower one in hot water. The top glass will contract slightly and the bottom one expand, so they'll come apart easily.

Island: paradise for snackers

If your kitchen is the scene of what seems to be unending snacking, install an island of cabinets that can double as a snack bar.

Since the new cabinets may be subjected to knee slams, kicks and daily abuse, select cabinets carefully.

Tool selection is important

Manufacturers of hammers and other striking and struck tools emphasize that proper selection of a hammer is one of the first steps in using a hammer safely.

If you're planning some projects this fall, here are some guidelines from the Hand Tools Institute to help you put together a basic set of striking and struck tools that can perform most routine jobs around the home.

The Institute stresses that no matter what striking or struck tool is selected, safety goggles should be worn for all hammering jobs.

Here is the basic set of hammers suggested for the beginning handyperson:

1. A medium weight (16 oz.) nail hammer - to accomplish the many household projects requiring the use of the relatively soft common nail. Not for: masonry nails, cold chisels or other metal.
2. A medium (16 oz.) ball pein hammer - for striking the very small hand chisels and punches and for riveting, shaping and for straightening unhardened metal.
3. A three pound hand drilling hammer - for use with metal striking tool - cold chisels brick chisels, star drills - and for hardened masonry nails.
4. A magnetic tack hammer - for light chores. Has a magnetic face on one end to help set tacks before driving them home with the other end.
5. A 3½ inch half hatchet - for splitting wood and driving wooden stakes. Its striking face can be used for driving common nails.

TAKE A CLOSE LOOK

What do you see? Ducks? How many are there? In nature, blending in is fine but its not what you want if you're in business. Successful businesses stand out. They don't blend in with all the rest and that's where we can help. The Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Advertising staff can help you create the kind of messages that show your products and services off to their best advantage. Your ads will put you on everyone's map! If your cash register tells you that you're blending in give us a call at 682-6222. Now how many ducks are there? Look carefully and you'll see three.

A LETTER TO:
Ms. Krances Limberlips, Manager
Dead Beat Apartments
666 Crab Grass Alleyway
Bug Gulch, Texas 7777

THE JUNCTION APARTMENTS

Dear Ms. Limberlips,

This is to advise you that I have moved from apartment #13 at the Dead Beat Apartments.

Ms. Limberlips, do you remember last Monday, when I called to inform you that my air conditioner was out and it was 118 degrees inside my refrigerator and that my cat, Rufus, had died of a heat stroke? (God rest his nine lives). And when I asked when my air could be repaired you suggested a long vacation to Siberia...and you even offered to loan me your skunk parka and your St. Bernard. Now, Ms. Limberlips, I thought that suggestion was in very poor taste. I can't forget the fact that your St. Bernard ate my poor parakeet, "Tweety Pie." (God rest his soft feathers).

So my dear lady, on FRIDAY, I moved to the JUNCTION APARTMENTS and they are PAYING MY ELECTRIC BILL!! (and all my utilities) I'm relaxing in front of this sparkling pool right next door to my apartment. I have a fireplace washer/dryer connections, an all electric kitchen, a gigantic storage closet, a lofted bedroom and a bathroom that is really unique. My rent is only $390.00, and I only have one check to write each month!

The JUNCTION management team have a warm and friendly (PROFESSIONAL) attitude, sort of likened to Mary Poppins, but I've heard that they are worse than Adolph Hitler's Third Reich when it comes to dealing with inconsiderates and undersirables. (So, I will keep my nose clean and my stereo turned down.)

The maintenance guys are courteous and prompt. They are on call 24 hours.

The JUNCTION security officers are BIG fellows, and to be respected. The Manager tells me that the JUNCTION staff is the best in the west! And I agree...

So, Ms. Limberlips, you can send all my mail to THE JUNCTION APARTMENTS, 1902 Midland Drive, Midland, Texas... Instead of a Siberian vacation, please send all your unhappy residents to the JUNCTION, or have them call 699-5168.

Yours truly,
John Henry

Special Families

Being a parent is never easy.

But when a child has a disability, the parents face stresses and concerns unknown by parents of "normal" children.

Midland's Cerebral Palsy Center is one place where parents and their handicapped children can go for help, said Marsha Childers, president of the Cerebral Palsy Center Parents Association and mother of a handicapped child. But she pointed out that not all children who attend the center have cerebral palsy.

"Most of the kids who go here are not CP kids ... Children come in for speech therapy, physical or occupational therapy, spina bifida, Down's syndrome," she said.

Drs. Carolyn and Joseph Rhode are parents of two sons — Jason Creighton Rhode, 9, and Joseph Creighton Rhode, 12 — who have spina bifida. Both boys have attended the CP Center for several years, for therapy and recreation.

Spina bifida is "a congenital developmental defect of the spinal cord," Mrs. Rhode said. Both Jason and Joey are in wheelchairs. Neither is disabled in any other way.

Mrs. Rhode said when the boys were younger they could maneuver using walkers and long leg braces, but as they grew older and bigger, using these devices became more difficult. Their wheelchairs give them more mobility.

Like other children their ages, the Rhode's sons dream of their futures and what they want to be. "Some goals are unrealistic and some are more realistic," said their mother. "To guide them into an area where their physical disability ... won't get in the way is not always possible." And, as with other children, "you have to let them fantasize sometimes. They fantasize about the same things other kids do."

Joey, a sixth-grader, is interested in football and spacemen, like many other boys his age. He said he likes learning about Halley's Comet and wonders "if I could be a good astronomer if I could only get my words right and get better in science ..."

Jason, who attends third grade and confesses to having three girlfriends, is already "an avid computer fan," Mrs. Rhode said. He is becoming expert with the family's Macintosh, especially its word processor, stock market program and Airborne game.

In addition to the games, he enjoys making designs with the computer and said one of his goals is to "be an artist with the computer." He also would like to be a doctor, like his parents, and a singer.

"Jason is very verbal and quick-minded," said Rhode. "He reads the newspaper and discusses current events."

In addition to normal family stresses, Mrs. Childers said, families with handicapped children face "everything from seizures to ... sleep disorders to potty training to trying to find a way to help the child communicate to educating the public. The first thing they have to do is accept the handicap, and deal with other family members who don't want to accept it."

Parents of handicapped children often "go into a depression," she added. "It's a milestone we all have to get over."

Dealing with their non-handicapped children can be difficult for parents who must spend a large amount of time caring for the disabled child, Mrs. Childers said. "It's very important for the parents to show attention" to all the children in the family.

Prejudice against those with disabilities may be cured through education. "The school has a program to educate other kids about handicapped," she said, in order to "educate normal kids so they won't make fun of the others."

Mrs. Childers' daughter has cerebral palsy. She is confined to a wheelchair and has difficulty communicating, but is as intelligent as any other child her age.

Disciplining a handicapped child can be difficult for some parents, said Mrs. Childers and Caren Kelly, occupational therapist at the CP Center.

Benefit planned

The Beefeater's Ball of 1985, biennial benefit for the Midland's Cerebral Palsy Center, will be 7 p.m. Friday at Midland County Exhibit Building on East Highway 80.

The charitable event, sponsored by Midland Children's Service League, will feature an auction of choice steers and other items, conducted by auctioneer Gayle Ingram of Quitman. Also presented will be music by the Mal Fitch orchestra of Dallas and dinner catered by Don Strange of San Antonio.

Funds raised by the ball will help cover operating expenses of the CP Center. To raise money for the center in alternate years, the league presents a benefit luncheon and fashion show.

Chairman of this year's Beefeater's Ball is John McGuigan. Co-chairman is William Doss Rogers. Karen McIntosh is decorations chairman, with Martha Pope as co-chairman.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Kyle Raybourn and his bride, the former Susan Cowden, are now honeymooning on the island of Maui. Upon their return, they will reside in Plano, where Kyle is employed with Mervyn's Department Stores' computer division. He is the son of former Midlanders Frances and Paul Porter of Arlington.

Susan is the daughter of Margaret and Courtney Cowden and member of a pioneer Midland ranching family. She was employed by MWM ARchitects in Lubbock as an interior designer prior to her marriage.

Both graduates of Midland High and Texas Tech, Susan and Kyle exchanged their vows at 11 o'clock Saturday morning in the First Presbyterian Church, with a reception following at the Midland Country Club.

The wedding week got off to a festive start with a cocktail buffet Thursday evening at Mission Country Club. Susan's aunt, Mrs. Harriett Faudree, and cousins, Ellen and Larry Bell, hosted the party for out-of-town guests, family and friends of the couple.

The bridesmaids' luncheon was given Friday at the Racquet Club by the groom's mother and his grandmother, Marguerite (Mrs. Marvin) Folkes of San Antonio.

The bride's sister and brothers and their spouses hosted a "Rehearsal Roundup" Friday evening at Midland Country Club. Out-of-town guests enjoyed cocktails, a barbecue buffet and dancing to the music of Jazmine of San Angelo. Red balloons added a festive note to the buffet table.

The host couples were Cynthia and Dave Clark, Nancy and Price Cowden, Kaye and Holt Cowden and Caroline and Lynn Cowden.

Among the festivities honoring Susan earlier this month was a display kitchen shower and brunch in the Garden Room of Midland Country Club. The hostesses were Dorothy (Mrs. Clarence Jr.) Scharbauer, Pamela Scharbauer, Connie (Mrs. Chris) Scharbauer, Karen (Mrs. Douglas) Scharbauer and Kerrie (Mrs. Clarence III) Scharbauer.

BACK FROM A FAST-PACED but fun trip to Scotland are Donna and Joe Campbell. Staying at Gleneagles, Joe attended a title insurance seminar while Donna enjoyed shopping and sightseeing tours. In his free time, Joe took great pleasure in the superb golfing facilities.

Donna particularly relished the day spent in Edinburgh at its renowned International Festival and that evening, the Military Tattoo, an entertainment featuring music, marching and military exercises performed at Edinburgh Castle. A highlight for Joe was a visit to the pretty coastal town of St. Andrews, where the world's oldest golf course is located.

En route home, the couple stopped off in College Station for a visit with their son, Jack, who is a freshman at Texas A&M.

LONGTIME MIDLANDER Mrs. Ethel R. Banister was honored with a reception Saturday afternoon in observance of her 80th birthday. The event was held at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ, which she attends.

Hosts for the gathering were her daughter and son-in-law, Kay and Richard Fleetwood of Midland, and her grandchildren, Judy and Mike Galbraith and Jacque Buffaloe, all of Austin.

Mrs. Banister was born Oct. 3, 1905, in Granbury and moved to Midland in 1950. In addition to her daughter, she has one son, Jimmy Banister of Winters, seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

SHIRLEY IRELAND entertained with her second annual autumnal equinox party last weekend at the home of her parents, Florence and Hap Harrison.

Guests enjoyed a delicious potluck dinner and visiting in the Harrisons' backyard. Volleyball was a diversion for some of the guests following dinner.

Among those attending were former Midlanders Jean and Darold Hobbs and daughter, Jennifer, of Odessa; Faye McAdams, Lala Butler, John Buster, Betty and Radford Lane, Mary Jane and Tom Whiles, Ann and Kevin Gillaspia and Gary Bunch, as well as several of Shirley's teaching colleagues from Monahans.

Assisting with the party were Shirley's children, Kathy and Roger Hill, Paula Ireland and Sherrie and Lee Ireland.

FAMILIES

"A lot of parents feel if they discipline a handicapped child, they think others think they are mean," Mrs. Childers said. "But you must discipline every child," and a disabled child "should be treated like any other child."

For the Rhodes, "discipline hasn't been a problem," Mrs. Rhode said, though it probably is more difficult "for people who are not their parents, (such as) teachers and other child-care givers."

Her husband agreed, but added that when, as in all families, it occasionally becomes necessary "to apply the usual standards of disci-pline" in a public place, "it's incredible how perfect strangers think it's within their rights to intervene."

Dealing with strangers can cause other problems, Mrs. Rhode said. "People tend to come up and want to give them gifts or money."

Parents always have hopes and dreams for their children, but, Mrs. Childers said, for parents who "realize you have a child with a problem, the best thing you can do is reorganize and develop new dreams your child can accomplish. Look at it one day at a time."

In nearly every way, Jason and Joey are like other children, and their parents treat them accordingly. "We expect things from them like any other parents," such as picking up after themselves and clearing dishes from the table, Mrs. Rhode said, and like most other parents, "we don't always get it."

As is typical of 12-year-olds, Joey said he would like to "watch TV all day, but with Mom and Dad that would be a big problem."

Some of the children who attend the CP Center for therapy also attend school there. Children as young as 3 can attend classes accredited through Midland Independent School District at the center, Mrs. Childers said. Some students attend public schools half-days, and spend the other half-day in school at the CP Center.

Joey and Jason took part in the CP Center's summer recreational activities, but now that school has started, "both go full days to regular classrooms," said their mother.

Mrs. Kelly said another difficulty faced by parents is "knowing what to do at home. One of our objectives is to get a home program" started for the children. And different-aged children have different needs. "They need a home program especially for kids to 8 years old to improve their muscle coordination."

The younger the children are when they begin therapy, the better, Mrs. Kelly said. "Once we have a program going for the child and a home program, the more that child will improve."

Children must be referred to the center by their physicians before they can be admitted for therapy. The center's evaluation is done at no cost to the parents, she said. The CP Center is funded by the Children's Service League and private donations.

The CP parents group is a support group for parents of children who attend the center. The organization also supports the center through fund-raising efforts to purchase equipment and books which can be checked out.

Parents and other family members can help handicapped children "develop a sense of humor, develop their sense of what's wrong with them and help them feel comfortable with what they are," said Mrs. Rhode.

Jason said his favorite activity is to "go to Six Flags," where his favorite ride is the parachute drop. "It's pretty up there."

"They are normal people who can't walk," said Rhode, "and they have to be treated that way."

Octogenarian earns master's

LEESBURG, Fla. (AP) — When Hilda Wilton was graduated from a Hammond, Ind., high school in 1921, she had a dream — she wanted a college education.

But those were lean years and she was one of five children being raised by a widowed mother.

"I sent away for school catalogs. I wanted to be a teacher, but there was no money," Mrs. Wilton recalls.

Instead of college, she spent 3½ months in a business school and got a job. Then came marriage at age 21 and two children followed. Her son was killed in an auto accident at an early age.

"Maybe if they'd had community colleges or branch colleges in those days...," she wonders aloud.

Mrs. Wilton worked most of her life until she retired in 1966. Her husband died in 1972, a year after they moved to Florida. She returned to the Midwest for a few years until she joined her daughter, Joyce, here in central Florida.

Her dream persisted.

"It was an ideal time to go back to school. My daughter and grandchildren were grown," she says.

She discussed the prospect of returning to school with teachers, friends and family.

"Everyone said I would be a good influence on others."

At 73, Mrs. Wilton hesitatingly enrolled at Lake Sumter Community College, a 20-minute drive from home.

She had a rude awakening. "I had forgotten how to study."

Her dream was not to be thwarted. She cut the class load to a world history class.

"Underneath was a basic desire that was a force," Mrs. Wilton says. She relearned the art of studying.

In 1980, she was honored as the oldest student to ever receive an associate degree at Lake Sumter CC. She immediately matriculated at the University of Central Florida under an academic program aimed at a liberal arts degree.

The Orlando campus was 55 miles from home so she moved into a dormitory and was given an apartment by herself.

"I guess it was courtesy for my age." As an afterthought, she adds, "Think of what the generation gap was for me. They were all just kids."

Her bachelor's degree in literature came in 1982. She completed the requirements with a 3.4 grade average.

She hadn't quenched her thirst for knowledge. A master's diploma was her next goal. She took night classes twice a week, which meant driving from school to home on darkened roads.

But, finally, Mrs. Wilton has earned her master's. At 80, she's the oldest recipient of an MA at Central Florida.

A doctorate degree in literature is not available at Central Florida nor any other school within a reasonable distance of this quiet country city.

"If I were only five years younger," she says emphatically.

Now she wants to help others who, for whatever reason, failed to get a good education. Her immediate plan is to be a volunteer English teacher at a nearby adult high school.

In retrospect, Mrs. Wilton says anyone can do what she accomplished. "You have to have the desire.

"Education has given me the courage to face the world. You don't meet the world face to face in an office, but you do in school," she says.

Bullock to be VIPS keynote speaker

Dan Bullock, immediate past director of the Governor's office of Community Leadership, will be keynote speaker at the Volunteers in Public Schools rally and workshops, scheduled for 8:30-11 a.m. Tuesday at Scharbauer Elementary School.

VIPS, a major project of City Council PTA, encourages parent and community interest and involvement in public schools. Co-hosts at the rally and workshops will be VIPS, Midland Independent School District and Texas American Bank.

Bullock is the chairman of Austin's Adopt-A-School program, a cooperative effort of the Austin Independent School District and Austin Chamber of Commerce. He is a board member of Southwest Educational Development Laboratory, and with his wife Gayle, is past PTA president and serves on PTA boards.

Dr. Joe Rubin, MISD elementary reading and language arts coordinator, will speak on two opportunities for volunteers in his workshop, "Volunteers in Reading."

Dr. Vernon Stokes of Region 18 Education Service Center, will present a workshop on "Effective Listening."

Dan Bullock

Brenda Faught and Kathy Wilson, co-chairmen for storytelling on the VIPS team, will lead the "Storytelling" workshop.

"Library Volunteering" will be presented by Nelda Wilcox, a librarian for 15 years.

The Carpet Column
by Felix Welmaker CFS/RFI*

WHAT CAN YOU DO WHEN YOUR CARPET IS FLOODED?

A "flood" can be caused by a heavy rain, faulty or worn-out plumbing, pipes burst by freezing, a faucet left on accidentally, etcetera.

In any case, you need to act quickly! A flooded carpet can be a devastating experience: carpet ruined, furniture swelling and splitting, baseboards warping and peeling, and other problems - developing all at once!

So, what should you do? First, call a carpet cleaner you know and trust. If you don't know one, call the House of Carpets and they will get one for you. Cut your losses to a minimum by taking fast action.

After calling the floorcovering specialists at the House of Carpets, or your favorite carpet cleaner, contact your insurance agent to determine whether your loss is insured. In case a replacement is needed, House of Carpets can provide you with an accurate and prompt estimate.

Be prepared. Whether it's a flood or just a small spill, remember the House of Carpets, Midland's most respected name in carpets - since 1951. They are here to serve you.

Showmen's League serves circus, carnival people

CHICAGO (AP) -- Elephants lift their trunks everywhere at the Showmen's League of America — on the front of the building, on every shelf and on the officers' desks.

"With the trunks like that, they mean good luck to circus people," explains league secretary Noble Case, who supervises the organization's circus and carnival world charity work from its memorabilia-filled downtown building.

The five granite pachyderms at "Showmen's Rest" are different, though — they have their trunks hanging down in sorrow and their tusks are blunted.

"They're elephants of mourning," says Case as he displays photos of the South Side cemetery area the league reserves for members of the outdoor entertainment industry.

Now, with the big top all but extinct and the big traveling carnival shows being replaced by smaller localized operations, the Showmen's League serves as a link between the gaudy past and a more sober future. It buries the dead veterans of the midway, while providing scholarships for a younger generation that would rather attend college than run off and join the circus.

"More than 460 show people are buried there," Case says of Showmen's Rest. "Some of them were big men — show owners, headliners, all of them league members and some of them former league presidents. Others were just people who spent their lives working the shows and died broke. We buried them for free."

Showmen's Rest dates from June 1918, when a train carrying the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus was rammed by another train at a siding between Hammond and Gary, Ind. More than 85 circus employees were killed and another 170 people were seriously injured.

The league began in 1913 when a group of "out-of-doors showmen" met here to form a benevolent organization for circus and carnival people, who — then as now — tended to be free spirits without ties to labor unions, savings banks and insurance plans.

The league founders chipped in $1,300 to help care for their industry's needy and elected William F. "Buffalo Bill" Cody as their first president.

Bus travel up

NEW YORK (AP) — Intercity buses carried more riders in 1984 than the nation's domestic airlines and Amtrak combined, reports Travel Agent magazine.

Of the more than 363 million passengers, some 214 million used buses for chartered trips or various scenic tours, notes the international travel industry publication.

The nation's intercity bus industry is composed of 2,800 bus companies with a collective fleet of more than 25,000 motorcoaches.

Roads highest, lowest

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — The highest road in the United States is Colorado State Highway No. 5.

The 1985 Rand McNally "Road Atlas" shows the road located off Interstate 70 near Idaho Springs. The road leads up to 14,264-foot-high Mount Evans.

The lowest road in the country is an unpaved local road through "Badwater Basin" in Death Valley, Calif.

Couples work out together

Hearst News Service

Couples who stay in shape together, stay together.

"It brings us closer," says swimmer/cyclist Jeff Pfeiffer of Mountain View, Calif. "We have a lot of the same goals. I understand why she's out training instead of being at home fixing dinner."

And working out with a spouse helps people stick with a fitness regimen. Exercise physiologist Ellen Kushner says a recent survey showed that while the most frequent reason given for giving up on fitness was cigarette smoking, "the second big, big reason was lack of support at home. It often gets to the point where it's either the fitness program or the relationship.

For one competitive gymnast, Tom, it was the relationship that went. "Part of the problem, when he was married, was his wife would go to all this trouble to fix him a really nice dinner, but she'd end up putting in all the wrong things," says his current girlfriend, also a gymnast.

"It's hard foz a non-gymnast to understand a gymnast and vice versa. You almost have to do it to understand the dieting and all the sacrifices you have to make."

These days Tom does all the cooking for himself and his girlfriend. He says that if he or his girlfriend gets a little grouchy, they're usually able to blame it on to the rigors of dieting or training, and not on each other.

Of course, not all couples who work out together maintain such a strict regimen. For most, fitness means looking good, feeling good and generally having a good time.

"You can't be serious all the time," says Kushner. "Sports and fitness is a form of play. A couple needs to be playful with each other sometimes. I think there's tremendous value to humor, laughter and play."

Choosing the right activity is extremely important. Kushner, who runs the out-patient cardiac rehabilitation unit at Eden Hospital in San Francisco and who helps people design their own fitness programs, says, "If he's very proficient at a particular sport, say running or skiing or whatever and she's taking it up to please him and he's saying, 'Honey, I'll teach you,' that's not going to work.

"But if they both know how to ski or they both don't know a thing about racquetball, it's better. Generally, if the disparity in their level of skill or experience is too great, it's going to be frustrating — frustrating for both the one who's very experienced and for the one who's the novice."

Kushner also suggests that the less skilled person might take lessons from an uninvolved third party.

For some couples the answer is for the individuals to choose their own sport, but to participate at the same location.

Coat lengths vary this winter

Just like this fall's skirt lengths, coats are see-sawing above and below the knee.

Everything from long, ankle-length sweeping coats to the shorter seven-eighths length will be part of the fall coat selection. Fabrics include the traditional wool melton, flannel, tweed, alpaca and cashmere. The newest look is coats trimmed in velvet or even fur.

At Calvin Klein, city coats are cut with full-flare skirts, falling from a curved, broadened shoulder. The Grand Coat, as Klein is calling it, is belted at the waist and looks great over Klein's high-waisted trousers that taper into narrow legs. Other long coats are double-breasted polo coats in rich shades of garnet, ochre or jade. His Chesterfield, a coat that moves easily from day into evening, is in navy or camel cashmere

ROLLER SHADES

When the tops of roller shades are to be exposed, it is more attractive to reverse the way they are usually hung. This way avoids the look of seeing the rolls at the top. That is, turn the roll to the outside instead of inside. If the shade is to be permanently pulled down to block a view, the shade itself should have some decorative interest. It may even be hand-painted. Vinyl roller shades are generally inexpensive and are simple to sponge clean. They come in different degrees of opacity, from light-filtering to room-darkening strengths. They also come in a variety of textures, from a linen look to a puckered seersucker-looking material. Muted, neutral colors blend with any color scheme.

For a variety of window coverings visit WINDOW DECOR, 30 West Industrial Loop, 685-0875. We can come to your home or office to put ideas into a design for your needs. Draperies are custom designed and manufactured and we have shades, woven woods, vertical blinds, top treatments and drapery hardware. Open: 8am-4:30pm Mon. thru Fri. and by appointment.

Psychologist: Women, men think differently

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

CLAREMONT, Calif. — By way of illustrating her point — that care-focused morality is primarily a female phenomenon while the traditional male definition of morality is justice-focused — Carol Gilligan was retelling Aesop's fable of The Porcupine and the Moles:

Seeking refuge from the cold, a porcupine asked to share a desirable cave for the winter with a family of moles. The moles agreed but, theirs being a small cave, they soon found that they were being scratched each time the quilled porcupine moved about. Finally, they asked the porcupine to leave, but the porcupine stood his ground, saying, "If you moles are not satisfied, I suggest that you leave." The poor moles, burdened with a permanent guest, had learned their lesson: "It is well to know one's guest before offering him hospitality."

Now, said Gilligan, researchers presenting the dilemma of the moles and the porcupine to a study group of 11-to-15-year-old suburban American children and asking for their solutions found the boys opting for justice — "It's the moles' house. It's a deal. The porcupine leaves" — while the girls looked for solutions that would keep all parties content and comfortable, such as "Cover the porcupine with a blanket."

Gilligan is not here to say that one gender is superior in its thinking, just that there are differences, long ignored in the psychological literature, in people's ways of thinking about relationships, ways that she refers to as "male and female voices."

AND, WHILE those differences are not strictly biological, she believes, it is clear that they "arise in a social context where factors of social status and power combine with reproductive biology to shape the experience of males and females and the relations between the sexes."

Gilligan, a psychologist and associate professor of education at the Harvard University Graduate School of Education, has spent more than a dozen years exploring these differences, which she delineated in her acclaimed 1982 book, "In a Different Voice" (Harvard University Press).

Her work has won for her academic honors, honorary degrees and, in January, 1984, Ms. magazine's cover as its "Ms. Woman of the Year."

In retrospect, Gilligan said during a visit last week to here, where she participated in a three-day symposium sponsored by the Claremont Colleges, the Ms. honor was a mixed blessing. "I live a very private life," she explained. "I guess I thought I could send my work in without myself."

After the magazine came out, she said, she received considerable criticism from some feminists who felt she was giving aid and comfort to the enemy. But, Gilligan said, "My work has always been criticized by certain groups of feminists who thought to talk about differences was to invite oppression." There was criticism, too, she said, from psychologists "who took exception to my methods."

On the plus side, Gilligan noted, the Ms. article brought her considerable support from other academics, initiated a "really exciting" exchange of data and prompted comment from "men who will write letters and say, 'You spoke to my experience.' This is tremendously gratifying."

THERE WAS a turn-away audience for Gilligan's talk at the Garrison Theater of the Claremont Colleges. Many in the audience were women, who related instantly to her recounting "one of the more illuminating moments in my research" — a woman, given a moral problem to resolve, had asked, "Do you want to know what I think or do you want to know what I really think?"

The implication, Gilligan said, was that she had "learned to think" in a way different from how she "really thought."

Historically, she said, there has been the implication that there is a single standard of morality, defined as the moral perspective — and it is the male perspective, measured against which women's moral development has been found wanting.

Gilligan pointed out that Freud, early in the century, concluded that women had a lesser sense of justice while Jean Piaget, the eminent Genevan, stated, "The most superficial observation is sufficient to show that in the main the legal sense is far less developed in little girls than in boys."

She traced the origins of morality to early childhood relationships and the two factors that shape this development: inequality, "reflected in the child's awareness of being smaller and less capable," and attachment to others.

In early childhood, she said, "the experience of attachment lessens the experience of inequality by empowering the child in relation to the parent who otherwise seems unmoveable and all-powerful. Perhaps because girls generally identify with their mothers, to whom they are attached ... the experience of inequality seems less overwhelming in female development and the experience of attachment more salient. Women may pay less attention to the consequences of unequal relationships, especially when norms of feminine behavior impede striving toward equality."

ON THE other hand, Gilligan said, "If boys identify with their fathers and are not closely attached to them, concerns about equality and justice become more salient, and separation or independence more necessary to self-esteem." When their childhood feelings of inequality are compounded in adolescence by social inequality and by norms of male dominance, she said, "feelings of helplessness and powerlessness become heightened and the potential for violence increases."

Children experience "genuine moral dilemmas," she said, from "conflicts that arise when the demands of attachment and the demands of equality clash." By way of illustration, Gilligan spoke of the quandary of the schoolchild who is uncertain whether to obey the rules or to help a friend on a test.

Gilligan said that she has observed a tendency for girls to see attachment where boys saw inequality.

Good looks may be liability

Associated Press

Beauty has always been considered an asset for women, but in the executive suite it becomes a liability.

"Good looks are a benefit to a man," psychologist Madeline Heilman said in the October issue of Science Digest, "but often present problems for women in their climb to the top."

Heilman and graduate student Melanie Stopeck of New York University recently completed a study that shows attractiveness a positive attribute for a man on his way up the corporate ladder, but a detriment for women.

The researchers asked 113 randomly chosen men and women working in the New York City area to review career descriptions and photographs of fictitious executives.

The career descriptions were identical, except some were "overnight successes" who had climbed to the top in three years, and others represented a more normal 10-year success story. The photographs were of attractive and unattractive men and women.

The 113 people were given questionnaires and asked to rate the factors responsible for the executives' success.

The results:

— Handsome male executives were perceived as having more integrity than less attractive men. Their success was attributed to effort and ability.

— Attractive women executives were considered to have less integrity than unattractive ones and their success was attributed to factors such as luck, not to ability.

— All unattractive female executives were seen as more capable and having more integrity than attractive women.

"Attractiveness enhances gender characteristics," Heilman and Stopeck said in explaining why attractive women are not thought to be capable.

An attractive, therefore more "feminine," woman has an advantage in traditionally female jobs but appears to lack the "masculine" qualities needed for a traditionally male job.

Barbie earns own magazine

Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — You've come a long way, Barbie. You've got a little pink dress-for-success suit, a Nautilus gym set, furs, diamonds and that hunk Ken at your beck and call. And oh yes, you even have your own magazine.

It's named after you, of course, Barbie: The Magazine for Girls. The publication is a slick, glossy lifestyle magazine for the 6-to-12 set, featuring that famous plastic blonde on the cover of each quarterly issue.

The publishers (Telepictures Publishing Inc.) are hailing the magazine as Vogue for pre-teens. The issues contain sophisticated fashion spreads on children's clothes, recipes, tips for craft projects, games, celebrity interviews and "The Barbie Drama," a photo serial that finds our heroine in the most glamorous of adventures with little sister Skipper and Ken, the perfect boyfriend: searching for treasure in the Yucatan, modeling in New York, ice skating and appearing on the "Tonight" show.

The issues average 32 pages and sell for $1.25 on newsstands. Advertising is minimal and is for products like cookies, breakfast cereal, stickers and other Mattel dolls like He-Man and She-Ra. With a circulation somewhere between 700,000 and 800,000, Barbie magazine has found its niche.

Some of the magazine's New York editors were here recently for a fashion layout featuring Natalie Gregory, the star of Irwin Allen's remake of "Alice in Wonderland."

"The reaction to the magazine has been spectacular," said editor Karen Harrison, 28. "We have sacks of mail coming in every week from people who like the magazine."

Children's names lose, gain popularity

Hearst News Service

Want to name your kid something really unusual? Something he or she won't share with dozens of classmates between now and college graduation day in 2007? How about William or Mary?

Those names — just plain, grand, old and good enough for a college — were once prized by English-speaking parents. They are now relegated well below the Jeremies, Justins, Ambers and Stacies. Yes, William and Mary are even less popular than Joshua and Dawn.

Dr. Catherine Cameron of the Behavioral Sciences Department at the University of La Verne in southern California did a research project for a book she called "The Name Givers." This is a far cry from the checkout stand lists of names and derivations. "The Name Givers" must be the definitive work on why people get the names they do.

Children are named for religious reasons, out of revenge for being "afterthoughts," as a result of sibling rivalry, because of Mama's love for "The Siegfried Idyll" or simply because Uncle Seymour has the money in the family. The book also examines how names can affect people's lives and suggests a host of ways to avoid choosing a burdensome name for a child. (Saying it aloud, surprisingly, is one trick many folks forget.)

Tucked into all the information about the name givers are tables of the most popular girls' and boys' names today compared to their rankings in 1975, 1950, 1925 and 1900. The rise and fall and, in some cases, the mere existence of names is a telling reflection of the culture of this past century.

• Mary: After leading the pack as the name of choice for 50 years and surviving the onset of air travel, television, color movies and two world wars, Mary fell into a decline in the '70s and has dropped to 34th place among the Top 50 for newborn baby girls.

• William: It was in second place in the 1900s and was still the seventh favorite in 1950. Currently, it is wallowing in 31st place, only three spots ahead of Brandon, if you can imagine that.

• Jennifer and Michael: Both have been riding high for the past decade. Jennifer wasn't even heard of in the top 50 until it took over first place in 1975. The next most popular girls' names, Melissa and Kimberly, weren't in the top 50 before '75 either. Michael had begun appearing on birth certificates often enough to take over fourth place by 1950.

• On the boys' list, nine names now in vogue never made any of the previous Top 50 lists. (Brandon is, of course, one of them. Craig, Jesse and Kyle are some others.) The current girls' list contains 19 first-timers, twice as many as the boys' list holds. (Amber is among them, with such associates as Jamie, Crystal, Tiffany, Tara, Ashley and Courtney.)

Antique truck visits 'home'

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — When Kenneth Fisher brought his antique Adams truck back "home" here for a visit, it was an emotional experience for one of the last descendants of the vehicle's builders.

"This really has me a little choked up. I can't seem to help it," said John C. Adams of Findlay as he ran a hand across a gray fender of the 72-year-old, one-ton truck.

"The old truck's come home for a few days," said Fisher, of Xenia, Ohio, who trucked the vehicle to the city of its origin as part of an annual Steam and Gas Engine show.

Adams' great-uncles, Newton, Jim and Don, started the Adams Brothers Co. here as an outgrowth of a foundry business. It began making trucks in 1910. The first vehicle produced was a two-ton truck.

In August 1911, a run was scheduled between Findlay and Chicago to test the truck's endurance. Weighed down by 2,300 pounds of sandbags, the truck left Findlay at 4 a.m. on a Monday and arrived in Chicago at 11 p.m. on a Tuesday. No breakdowns occurred.

By 1917, the company had switched from making trucks to producing automobile axles, and a few years later it moved to Syracuse, N.Y.

Dental care may suffer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Future dental care my suffer because fewer and fewer dental school graduates go into research and teaching in dental science, says Dr. William H. Bowen.

Bowen is chairman of dental research at the University of Rochester Medical Center.

An effort to counter this trend, funded by the National Institute of Dental Research, is beginning in the university's Department of Dental Research, where dentists will be trained for five years for certification in dental specialties and Ph.D.'s in basic sciences.

Motels closing

NEW YORK (AP) — Motels are gradually closing their doors and vanishing from the nation's highways, says a management advisory specialist.

Two factors are responsible for the trend, according to Albert J. Gomes of Pennell Kerr Forster, an accounting firm associated with the U.S. lodging industry:

The greater part of the interstate highway system has passed its original design life, and gasoline taxes are insufficient to maintain and rehabilitate existing roadbeds, to say nothing of completing the overall system.

Thus, says, Gomes, "people who once drove from city to city or state to state now prefer other means of transportation, especially air travel. American hoteliers recognize this and they're building more hotels in centers of cities and at airports."

Telephone flower answers many calls

By ELVIN McDONALD

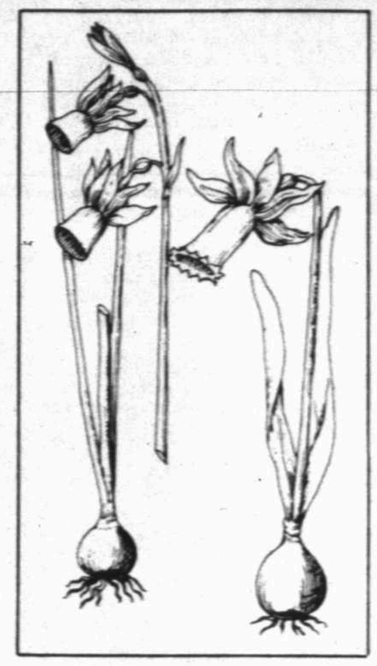
Dear Elvin: When I requested bulbs of the telephone flower at my local nursery the clerks all laughed and said no, that was something they didn't carry as there'd never been any calls for it. Can you help? Sign me, "Sorry, wrong number in Chicago."

Dear Reader: Ask those funny people down at the garden center for daffodils and they'll put your call right through, down that aisle: Choose any of the 'King Alfred' type plain golden trumpets.

In fact, you might say the lines are jammed with calls for daffodils at this time of year, in early autumn when narcissus in general are making roots even though it is not yet the season for leaves and blossoms. 'King Alfred,' set off in single quotes because it is a recognized cultivar, is the standard -bearer for the type once likened to the telephone, as it was shaped 50 years ago. Miniaturized forms such as 'Tete-a-Tete,' 'February Gold' and 'W.P. Milner' make better choices in cramped quarters — for pot forcing, growing in container gardens outdoors such as window boxes and terrace tubs.

If you had in mind large telephone flowers, three recognized as superior to the King are 'Unsurpassable,' 'Fortune' and 'Mt. Hood.' There is also a current proliferation of pink daffodils, kinds having doubel form or fantasy split cups — not to mention al lthe narcissus types, especially the paper-whites and 'Soliel d'Or,' early-blooming naturally and easy to bring into bloom in any bright window garden by Thanksgiving.

Before I ring off this subject, here's a tip from Houston bulb expert Sally McQueen Squire: To have paper-whites with short, sturdy leaves and flower stems, add a little gin to the water (a tablespoon per cup) when filling the bowls of pebbles in which they are traditionally rooted.



Daffodils are sometimes called "telephone flowers."

Q. Please tell me what to do about some tan or brown colored bumps that have appeared on the leaves of my Aloe vera. At first that was the only plant infected, but now the bumps seemed to have dropped to a table below, especially on the spider plants. Is this a disease, or a natural growth?

A. Well, not exactly either one: Your plants have brown scale which, in the earliest stages are pale and apparently flat. With age they get fatter, becoming hemispheres about an eighth of an inch long, and appear as bumps on leaf as well as stem surfaces. You can get rid of most of them simply by working carefully — using a cotton swab dipped in alcohol to rub all traces of the scale insects away. Or you can spray with an insecticidal soap such as Safer's, or simply use a household preparation such as one teaspoon liquid dishwashing detergent (Ivory Liquid, for example) to one quart of water; apply with an ordinary pistol grip mister, which you can purchase at the dimestore or wherever plants are sold. It is important to apply any spray only when the leaves are turgid with moisture (water well the day before, or at least a few hours ahead of time), and spray only when sun is not shining directly on the leaves. Repeat evey five to seven days until no trace of insect pest remains.

Q. Is it possible to take a cutting from crown to thorns without hurting the main plant?

A. Yes, presuming there are plenty of shoots so that you are not removing the only one. Take a piece a few inches long, say 5 or 6 inches, and remove from the parent by cutting with a sharp knife. Set aside for a few hours or overnight so that the cut end can dry (milky white sap will "bleed" from it at first), then set an inch or two deep to root in clean, sharp sand. Keep nicely moist and set to grow in a warm, sunny window. After roots are growing, say in six weeks to two months, transplant to a size or two larger pot, perhaps one 3 to 5 inches in diameter, using a mix of about equal parts soil, sand and peat moss.

Elvin McDonald is a columnist for King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Many houseplants good candidates for cuttings

Hearst News Service

Lots of houseplants are candidates for cuttings and leaves to grow as new plants — African violets, spider plant, peperomia, dumb cane, grape ivy and so on. Most root easily if even, constant moisture is provided. Here's how to start.

Cuttings or leaves taken from these and other houseplants grow the strongest roots in a mixture made of four parts peat moss to one part perlite. Perlite is composed of the tiny white balls often found in commercial potting soils or in potted plants. It helps hold moisture.

Many gardeners swear by plain tap water as a rooting medium. Its big drawback is the roots that form in it are very fragile and often break when the new plant is transplanted into a soil mix. Better to start with a rooting medium that's close to the consistency of the mix that will be the new plant's home.

Dr Lee A. Taylor, professor of horticulture at Michigan State University, recommends using tips of stems of houseplants where possible. This is because the new plant starts life with existing leaves and needs grow only roots. Use stem tips that are three to five inches long and remove the bottom leaves so no leaves touch the rooting medium.

African violets cannot be multiplied with stem tips because they grows leaves from a central stem. One option is to take healthy, young leaves and root them individually.

'Good vibrations': Electricity used to block dental pain

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — By twisting a knob on a little black box, Richard Kindy was able to block the pain as his dentist cleaned out a large cavity and filled his tooth.

Kindy had not been given pain-killing drugs before Dr. Dennis Hogan began working on his tooth. He was trying a new system that blocked his perception of pain by electrically stimulating his nerves.

The makers of the patient-controlled device expect it to replace injection of drugs to block pain in many dental patients once it gains federal approval.

All Kindy felt as the dentist worked was pressure and a tingling sensation underneath his right eye, where an electrode was attached to his facial skin.

"I wouldn't have known whether he was working in and around a nerve or not. I didn't feel a thing," said Kindy, 58, of St. Louis Park, Minn. "I was not aware of pain."

The system combines the technology of Medical Devices Inc. of St. Paul, which produces the electrical stimulator, and LecTec Corp. of suburban Minnetonka, maker of a synthetic tape that adheres to the skin and transmits electrical impulses to stimulate nerves.

Bruce MacFarlane, a scientist and director of clinical services for Medical Devices, said the use of electrical stimulation in dentistry is an adaptation of the TENS system widely used to block chronic pain and to make patients more comfortable following surgery.

"It's stimulating nerves. How that interferes with the perception of pain simply is not known," MacFarlane said. "What we do know is that in chronic pain, especially in acute pain, it is clinically effective."

He said components of the system had been approved separately by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Approval of the complete unit for marketing is expected to be routine, he said.

The Association for Advancement of Medical Instrumentation sets standards for recommended maximum output of electrical stimulation devices, he said. "Ours is only 20 percent of their recommended maximum, and that maximum has a safety factor built in."

Controlled scientific testing of the system is scheduled to begin Tuesday at the University of Minnesota Dental School. MacFarlane predicted that national marketing would begin March 1.

Hogan has used transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulation, or TENS, on about 200 patients over the past two years, as part of preliminary tests.

"At this time, we're using it mainly for fillings, some crown preparations and in the treatment of periodontal disease," he said. "Most of these situations usually require the injection of Novocain."

Voice reveals certain diseases

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — The voice is being scientifically scrutinized here to reveal symptoms of certain diseases.

Voice samples, analyzed by computer like blood samples, provide an Edinburgh University research team with clues to early indication of diseases, according to the Scottish Development Agency.

The computer analyzes all elements of the voice, including harshness, pitch, etc. It also weighs physical factors, such as muscle tension, tongue, lip and jaw positions.

The researchers says harshness is a key factor. Progressive harshness and irregular operation of vocal cords reflect throat diseases, they say.

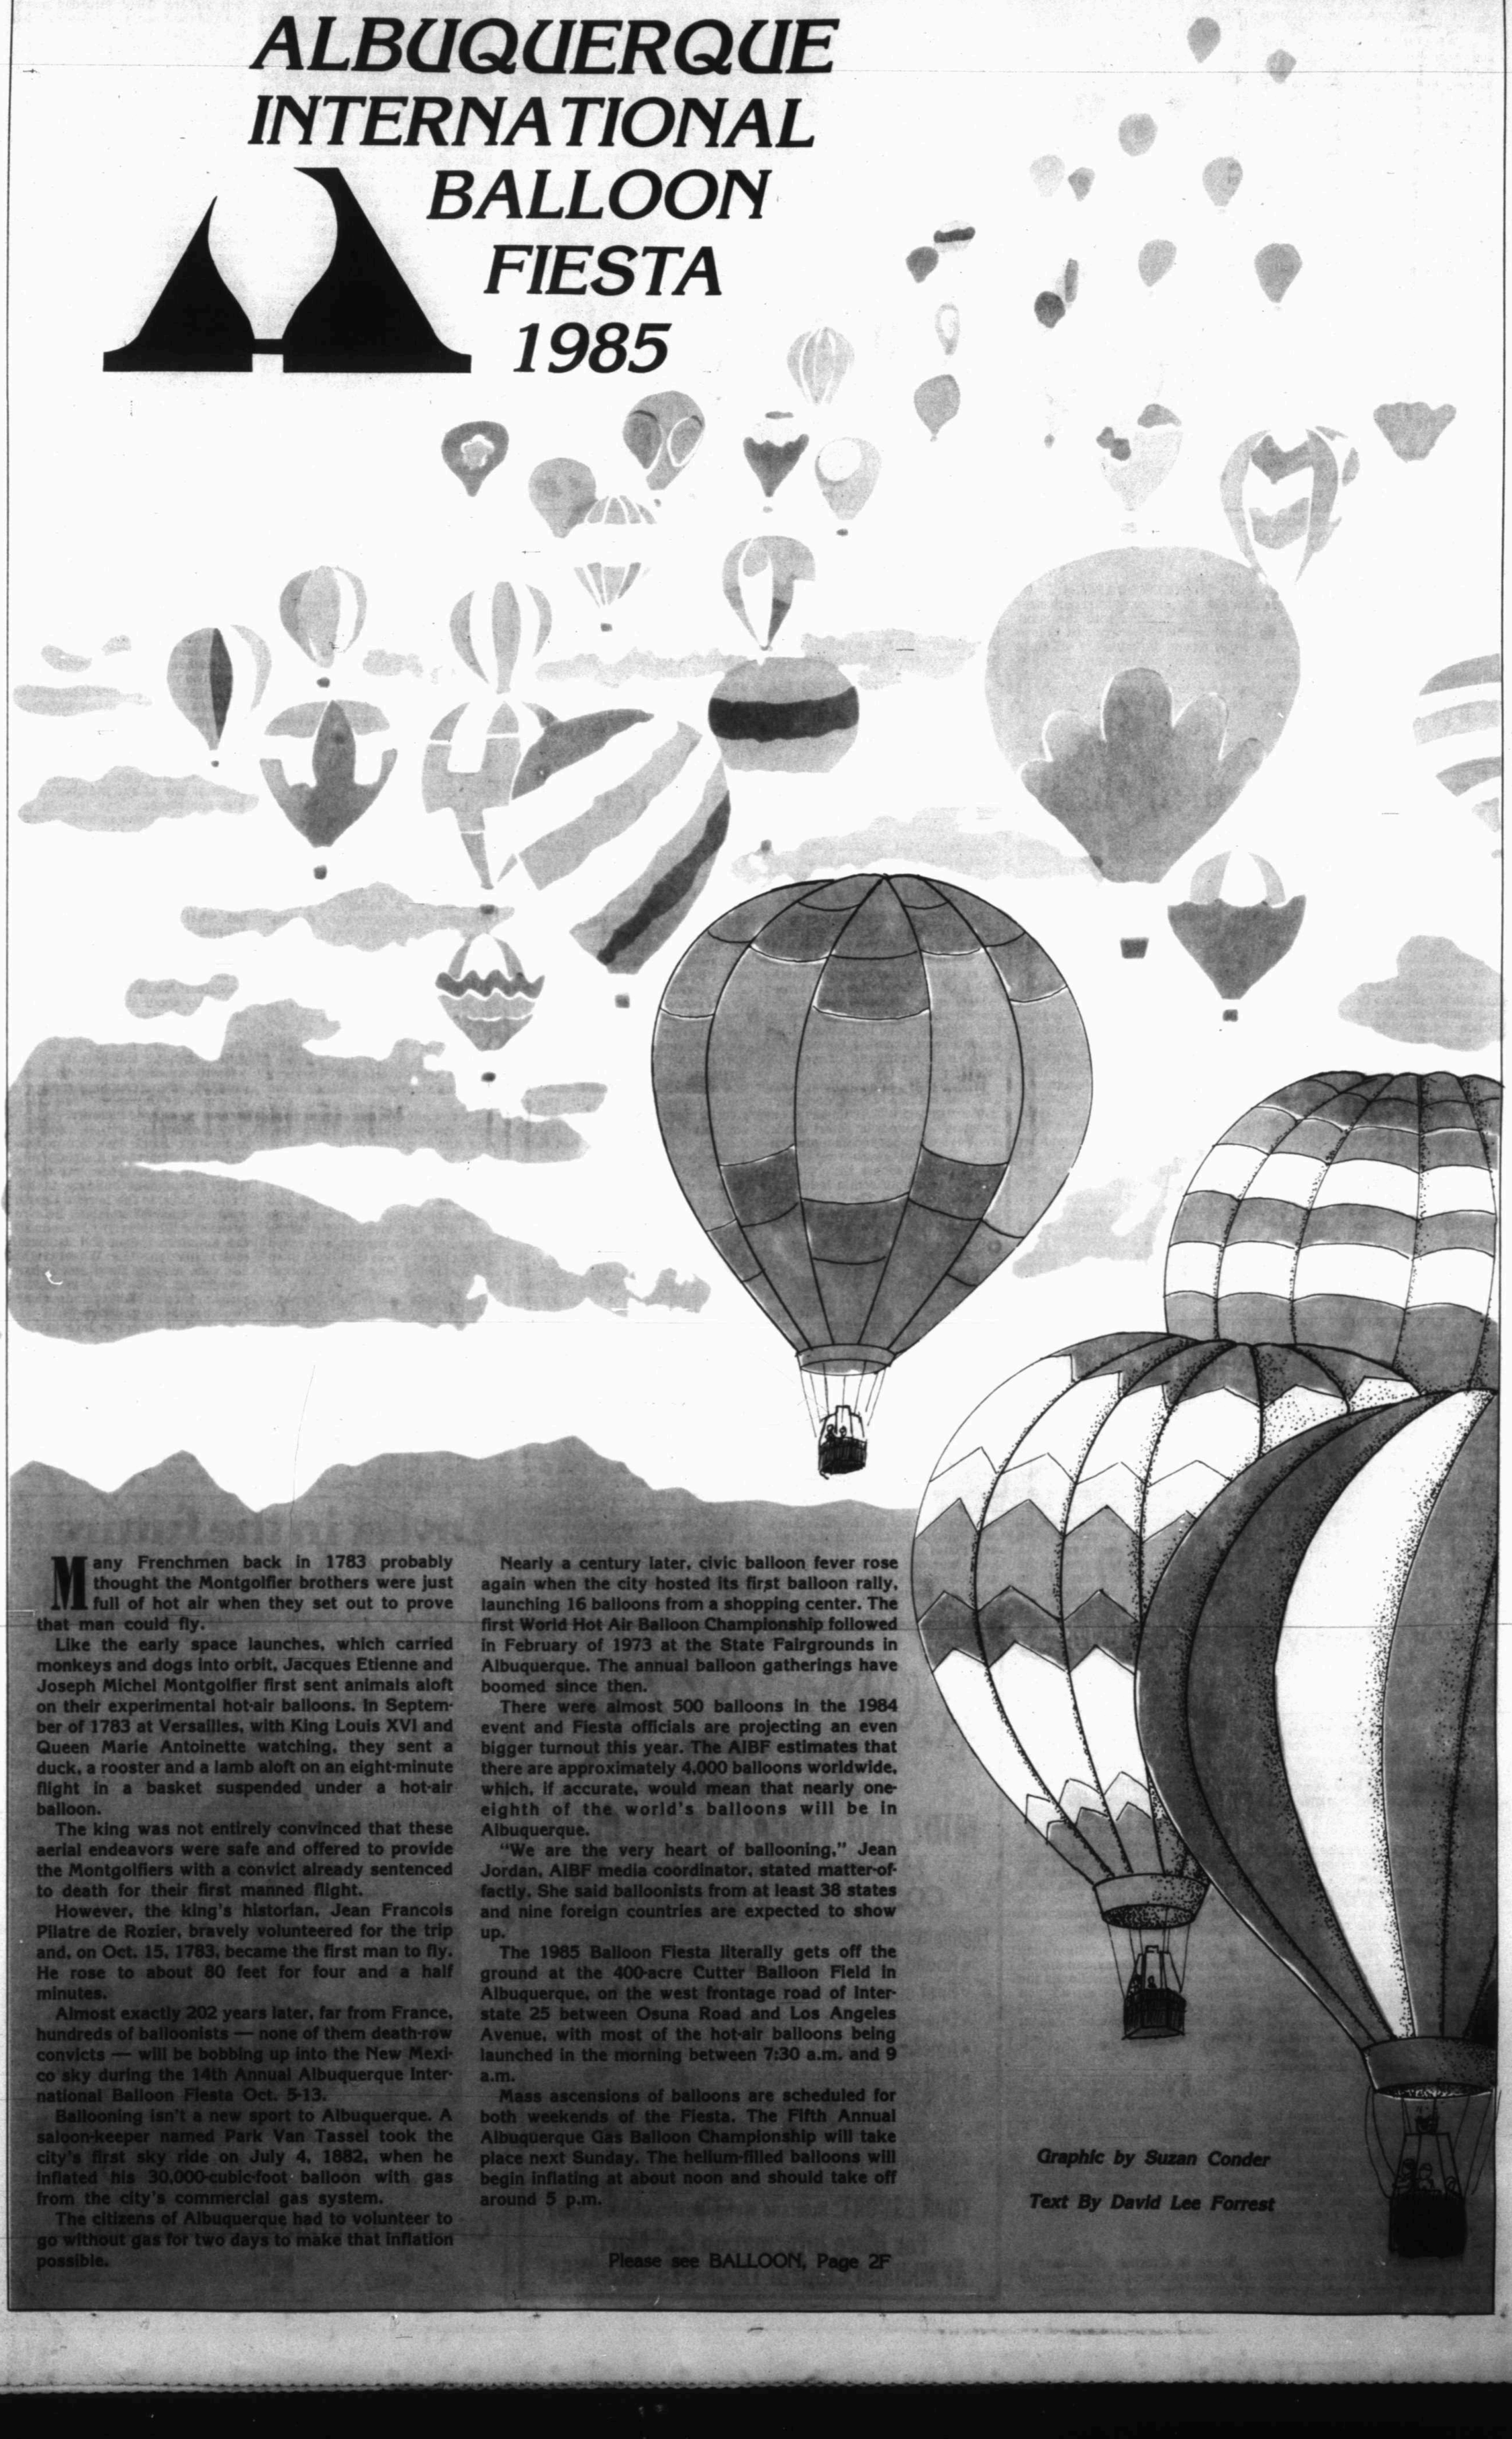
ALBUQUERQUE INTERNATIONAL BALLOON FIESTA 1985



Many Frenchmen back in 1783 probably thought the Montgolfier brothers were just full of hot air when they set out to prove that man could fly.

Like the early space launches, which carried monkeys and dogs into orbit, Jacques Etienne and Joseph Michel Montgolfier first sent animals aloft on their experimental hot-air balloons. In September of 1783 at Versailles, with King Louis XVI and Queen Marie Antoinette watching, they sent a duck, a rooster and a lamb aloft on an eight-minute flight in a basket suspended under a hot-air balloon.

The king was not entirely convinced that these aerial endeavors were safe and offered to provide the Montgolfiers with a convict already sentenced to death for their first manned flight.

However, the king's historian, Jean Francois Pilatre de Rozier, bravely volunteered for the trip and, on Oct. 15, 1783, became the first man to fly. He rose to about 80 feet for four and a half minutes.

Almost exactly 202 years later, far from France, hundreds of balloonists — none of them death-row convicts — will be bobbing up into the New Mexico sky during the 14th Annual Albuquerque International Balloon Fiesta Oct. 5-13.

Ballooning isn't a new sport to Albuquerque. A saloon-keeper named Park Van Tassel took the city's first sky ride on July 4, 1882, when he inflated his 30,000-cubic-foot balloon with gas from the city's commercial gas system.

The citizens of Albuquerque had to volunteer to go without gas for two days to make that inflation possible.

Nearly a century later, civic balloon fever rose again when the city hosted its first balloon rally, launching 16 balloons from a shopping center. The first World Hot Air Balloon Championship followed in February of 1973 at the State Fairgrounds in Albuquerque. The annual balloon gatherings have boomed since then.

There were almost 500 balloons in the 1984 event and Fiesta officials are projecting an even bigger turnout this year. The AIBF estimates that there are approximately 4,000 balloons worldwide, which, if accurate, would mean that nearly one-eighth of the world's balloons will be in Albuquerque.

"We are the very heart of ballooning," Jean Jordan, AIBF media coordinator, stated matter-of-factly. She said balloonists from at least 38 states and nine foreign countries are expected to show up.

The 1985 Balloon Fiesta literally gets off the ground at the 400-acre Cutter Balloon Field in Albuquerque, on the west frontage road of Interstate 25 between Osuna Road and Los Angeles Avenue, with most of the hot-air balloons being launched in the morning between 7:30 a.m. and 9 a.m.

Mass ascensions of balloons are scheduled for both weekends of the Fiesta. The Fifth Annual Albuquerque Gas Balloon Championship will take place next Sunday. The helium-filled balloons will begin inflating at about noon and should take off around 5 p.m.

Balloons to go 'up, up and away'

From Staff Reports

The following are some selected ballooning facts offered by officials of the Albuquerque International Balloon Fiesta:

— WEATHER: Clear days and cool temperatures with light and variable winds are preferred by balloonists. Balloon flights could be cancelled by precipation or strong winds. Launches become difficult in winds over 10 miles-per-hour and almost impossible over 15-20 mph.

— TYPES AND SIZES: The two common types of balloons are propane-fired hot-air balloons and helium-filled gas balloons.

Most of the balloons at the Fiesta are in either size class AX-6 or AX-7. An AX-6 has a capacity of 56,000 cubic feet and an AX-7 has a 77,000-cubic-foot capacity. They usually stand 50-60 feet tall. Under most conditions, an AX-6 can carry 2-3 passengers and an AX-7 can carry 3-4.

— MATERIALS: The envelope of a normal balloon is constructed of either polyester or nylon fabric coated with polyurethane. The basket, or gondola, can be made of wicker, aluminum or heavy-duty synthetic material.

— FLIGHT TIMES: Flight time for a hot-air balloon averages one or two hours depending on the amount of propane fuel carried. Flights have lasted up to 24 hours with extra fuel. Normal distances covered are three to 12 miles, but the world hot-air balloon distance record is over 707 miles. Hot-air balloons have flown above 53,000 feet, but most flights don't rise higher than 2,000.

Gas balloons are not as limited. In 1978, three Albuquerqueans made the first trans-Atlantic balloon flight in the helium-filled Double Eagle II, covering more than 3,107 miles in just over 137 hours.

— FUEL COSTS: While the price of propane varies around the country, the average fuel cost for a hot-air balloon flight is approximately $15-20 per hour. The cost to fill a typical helium balloon for one trip can be $1,000-$2,500.

Mass ascensions of hot-air balloons will occur during the cool morning hours during the Albuquerque International Balloon Fiesta scheduled to begin next weekend.

— MANEUVERABILITY: Of course, the pilot can't actually steer a balloon; it drifts with the wind. However, since the wind often blows in different directions at different altitudes, it's possible for him to partially control his course by changing altitude to find a wind blowing in the direction he wants to go.

— PRICES: New balloons start around $10,000 for a basic balloon system. The average cost is approximately $15,000, but some custom designs and special equipment can cost more than $30,000. Used balloons may sell for $5,000 or less. Gas balloons are more expensive than hot-air balloons.

— PILOT REQUIREMENTS: Balloonists, like all pilots, are licensed by the Federal Aviation Administration and must pass written and in-flight tests. The written exam covers federal aviation regulations, meteorology and general rules about ballooning. The minimum age is 16. Private pilots must have 10 hours flight time, including one-hour solo.

Commercial pilots must have 35 hours of flight time, as well as pass an additional test check flight. Every two years, pilots must renew their ratings by passing a Biennial Flight Review administered by a commercial pilot.

BALLOON—

"We anticipate having about 10 gas balloons" hotly competing for the championship, Ms. Jordan said. "The last two years, they've drifted all night long and ended up somewhere over Texas."

There will be a series of other competitive events Oct. 8-12. Among the balloon competitions is a game called "Coyote-Roadrunner" in which a pack of up to 70 balloons (the "Wile E. Coyotes") chase a lead balloon (the "Roadrunner"). The Roadrunner has a head start and uses any trick winds available to him to try to lose the pursuing pack. He lands wherever he wants and the Coyotes attempt to land as close as they can to him. The nearest balloon wins.

Another contest is an odd airborne version of "Black Jack." The balloonists launch two to three miles away from Cutter Balloon Field, attempt to fly over the field and drop a ping-pong ball on a target at its center. Then, back on the ground, the balloonists' scores are augmented by randomly-selected playing cards.

Each morning, "Judge Declared Goals" will also be announced. These are points around Albuquerque that pilots attempt to fly to and then land as close as possible by.

Entertainment at Cutter Field will include both the U.S. Army's official parachute demonstration team, the Golden Knights, and the Navy's official parachute demonstration team, the Leapfrogs. The Golden Knights will perform early Saturday morning and the Leapfrogs are scheduled to jump Oct. 12 and 13.

The Navy's famed precision flying team, the Blue Angels, is also scheduled to appear next Sunday afternoon. McDonald's is sponsoring the "Wild Waco Air Show," featuring aerobatic pilot Jim Franklin of Texas and his Waco JMF-7 biplane, for all nine days of the Fiesta.

At least 500,000 spectators attended the 1984 Fiesta, Ms. Jordan said, and hotels in the area already seem to be filling up for this year's event. For information on accommodations in Albuquerque, contact the Albuquerque Convention and Visitors Bureau at (505) 243-3696.

"We have wonderful weather" in Albuquerque, said Ms. Jordan, but she did warn that "the mornings are a little nippy." She advised persons attending the early-morning hot-air balloon launches to wear layered clothing, so they'll be warm in the morning and can then take layers off as the day heats up.

For more details on the ballooning events and entertainment, contact the Albuquerque International Balloon Fiesta Inc. at 4804 Hawkins NE, Albuquerque, N.M. 87109, (505) 344-3501.

Transcontinental flights not without scenery

By WALTER SULLIVAN
New York Times News Service

"You can't see anything from 30,000 feet. Get an aisle seat, order a drink, lean back and go to sleep." So goes the refrain that denies to countless air travelers what, on a transcontinental flight, can be an exciting visual experience.

On a clear day the panorama passing below unfolds a history of colliding continents, ice sheet invasions, floods, meteorite impacts and volcanic eruptions of great magnitude. One can trace the evolution of those most intriguing of land forms — river meanders of strikingly uniform sinuosity. One can follow the westward march of the pioneers and the dynamic, continuing evolution of cities and suburbs. Only from earth orbit is the perspective grander.

After heading west from New York, for example, one does not have to be a geologist to marvel at the incredibly uniform folds of the Appalachians, vestiges of the great collision of Europe and Africa with North America several hundred million years ago.

New York To Los Angeles

The standard route to Los Angeles crosses the Susquehanna River near the ill-fated nuclear power plant at Three Mile Island. To the left, contour strip farming, designed to curb erosion, has imprinted on the landscape patterns like those of an abstract painter. To the right, at Harrisburg, the river has cut multiple water gaps through the ridges. Beyond, on the left, are the Chambersburg and Gettysburg battlefields.

In Ohio, after crossing the Ohio River at Wheeling, W. Va., one begins to see the rectangular divisions that become far more striking farther west. These are products of the National Survey, inaugurated largely on the initiative of Thomas Jefferson when the young republic emerged from the Revolution deeply in debt. Selling land to colonizers was a way to liquidate at least part of it, and the plan devised by Jefferson and his colleagues ended by dividing most of the United States into counties six miles on a side subdivided into square-mile sections.

Nowhere else on earth is geometry so dramatically imposed on the landscape. Because the meridians, or north-south lines, converge toward the north (they all meet at the North Pole), they must be offset periodically to maintain the six-mile spacing of counties. Such offsets can often be seen in north-south county roads.

Some areas are watered by center-pivot irrigation systems, resulting in panoramas of circular fields, each exactly filling one quarter of a mile-square section. Other patterns have been imposed on the landscape by terracing for soil conservation or strip-cropping in which alternate strips of land are farmed or left fallow to reduce wind losses and allow restoration of soil moisture.

While pilots may digress to avoid storms or for other reasons, the standard route to Los Angeles crosses the Mississippi south of Mark Twain's hometown of Hannibal, Mo., and follows the Missouri River to Kansas City. At many points one can see where back-and-forth migrations of a meandering river have left a multitude of concentric arcs delineating its former loops. The curves are preserved in rows of trees, intervening fields and swampy areas, forming repetitive patterns only visible from on high. Beneath the flight path west of Kansas City, the Oregon and Santa Fe trails diverged, but in only a few stretches are the wagon tracks still visible from aloft.

One of the greatest thrills of the transcontinental traveler, be it by Conestoga wagon, automobile or plane, is the first glimpse of the Rocky Mountain Front Range. On the Los Angeles route it rises as the glittering, snow-clad peaks of the Sangre de Cristo, a 220-mile arc of mountains that was said to have been named by a Spanish priest who, on first seeing them, exclaimed: "Sangre de Christo!" ("Blood of Christ!")

In northeast Arizona the path crosses coal-rich Black Mesa, scarred by a strip mine of the Peabody Coal Co. Beyond and to the north stretches an extraordinary feature — the Echo Cliffs Monocline — formed where many sedimentary layers were draped over a steplike break in the landscape. The layers have been eroded away, exposing the edges of each as a multitude of parallel ridges.

In this arid region canyon walls and freestanding towers document millions of years of sediment accumulation — periods of desert winds, tropical landscapes and changing climate. Over the south rim of the Grand Canyon such a history is exposed in as magnificent a fashion as anywhere on earth. The final stretch crosses Lake Mojave on the Colorado River and then follows the San Bernardino and San Gabriel Mountains into Los Angeles.

Los Angeles To New York

The standard Los Angeles-New York route lies farther south and crosses other wonders of the American landscape, including the world's freshest meteorite impact crater. Initially, the route passes over the luxurious resort of Palm Springs and Joshua Tree National Monument. Most flights then follow the route across the desert of the Colorado Aqueduct, which, by delivering water from the Colorado River, helped make Los Angeles possible. That river is crossed where Parker Dam has impounded long, narrow Lake Havasu.

Across Arizona the route follows the scenic south margin of the Colorado Plateau, a region of Arizona, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico that has been raised a mile above the surrounding landscape, yet has remained largely flat, like the floor of a rising freight elevator.

Here, near Sedona, towering outcroppings of the plateau are layered in countless shades of red, yellow and brown. Volcanic eruptions on the plateau have poured lava over the rim, producing ramps such as the one that carries Interstate 17 up onto the plateau between Phoenix and Flagstaff. Eruptions near the San Francisco Peaks, prominent remnant of a shattered volcano north of the flight path, have occurred as recently as 1064, two years before the Norman invasion of England.

A short distance to the east, the route passes over Meteor Crater, gouged out 25,000 years ago by the explosive impact of a meteorite thought to have been 140 feet in diameter traveling at 45,000 miles an hour. The crater is three miles in circumference, forming a natural stadium so vast that on its floor 20 football games could be played simultaneously before two million onlookers.

The Rio Grande rift valley is crossed near Taos pueblo, north of Santa Fe and south of a large open-pit molybdenum mine in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains. Beyond the mountains the Santa Fe Trail is followed across the Oklahoma Panhandle. In the Flint Hills of southeast Kansas, past Wichita, there are striking chevron patterns on the landscape where rivers have cut through alternate layers of white, flinty sandstone and gray shale.

The Mississippi and Missouri Rivers are crossed at their junction above St. Louis, and the Ohio River is passed in southern Indiana. Beyond that, strip mines cut into the coal-rich mountains near Charleston, W. Va. After traversing the strikingly uniform Appalachian ridges and the Blue Ridge at the south end of Skyline Drive, the route passes south of Washington and northeast toward New York.

Santa Fe super for shoppers

By MICHAEL CARLTON
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Statisticians claim one out of every five adults living in Santa Fe is an artist, and no one would dispute those statistics if he had walked with me recently along Canyon Road. In a short walk I passed the following stores and studios:

Nature Market Folk Art, Jeffrey Adams Antiques, Harvest Women's Clothes, Agnes Sims Gallery, Ernesto Mayans Gallery, Studio 610 Gallery, Santa Fe Weavers, Rios Leatherwear, Canyon Road Custom Framers, Laroch Gallery, The Studio of Gina Andrea, Running Ridge Gallery, Howard Bobbs Gallery, Posters of Santa Fe, Keats Gallery and Antiques, Munson Gallery, Country Americana Antiques and Folk Art, Phil Daves Gallery, Silver Sun Gallery, Options: A Gallery of Choice, Concepts: A Contemporary Gallery, Rufus Tile and Metal Studio, Artistic Alliance Handcrafted Jewelry, Canyon Trading Post, Wyeth Hurd Gallery, Desert Son Leathersmiths, Nancy Bloch Weaving, Artisans Santa Fe, Bill Tate Gallery, Designs in Wood by Volker de la Harpe and the Claiborne Gallery.

There were also four restaurants — the Compound, Duran's, Alfonso's and The New Haven Cafe — to serve a starving shopper; a roadside stand where a young entrepreneur sold cold lemonade for 50 cents to slake your thrist; and four big, fluffy dogs lying outside gallery doors just waiting to be petted.

All this — art work which ranged in price from a few bucks to many thousands, one-of-a-kind dresses and blouses blowing dreamily in the wind, and the lovely little adobe houses lining the narrow lane called Canyon Road — was contained in an area about the length of a football field.

Shopping in Santa Fe is uniquely rewarding, be it buying an inexpensive charm or a sandpainting from an Indian sitting in the shade of the Governor's Palace, or purchasing an $8,000 acrylic by John Neito from the Enthios Gallery.

But shopping can also be frustrating in Santa Fe because of the breath of the selections. Most of the finest Southwestern artists are represented, as are artists from throughout the world. A day or two is not enough time to even touch the surface in this place. If you are serious about buying art, a friend passed along some suggestions:

— Visit as many galleries as possible to get an idea of the style of art — and perhaps the individual artist — you most admire.

— Gather together as much information as you can about Southwestern art, and use publications such as Gallery Guide to find out what current exhibitions are being shown in the city.

— The Santa Fe Gallery Association's 55 members are particularly reputable and you can purchase goods at any of the member shops with confidence.

— Unless you are an investor, buy with your heart, not your head. Most of us should buy art we cherish for itself, not its value.

— Ask questions and get recommendations from friends who have bought art in Santa Fe. What artist is hot, what gallery shows his works, who is the up-and-coming star? These questions are vital, particularly if you ARE buying art as an investment.

— Have fun. Don't be so serious and grim about the whole episode that you become nervous, or angry or — worst of all — lose your appetite, for we are now going to stop gallery hopping and go eat.

Mostly we are going to eat Mexican food, with a couple of continental and one Japanese restaurant thrown in for good measure.

In addition to festivals, shopping and eating, Santa Fe offers a vast variety of attractions, ranging from the Palace of Governors, the oldest (1610) government building in the United States, to the Loretto Chapel with its "miracle" staircase. Be sure to see the Wheelwright Museum of the American Indian and its excellent collection. The Wheelwright also sells some of the finest Indian artwork in Santa Fe. You should plan to visit neighboring Taos, which also abounds in galleries.

Santa Fe is served by Interstate 25 and Amtrak.

There are accommodations to suit every taste and budget. Of particular note are Bishop's Lodge and Rancho Encantado, both located outside town, and La Posada de Santa Fe and the Inn at Loretto, downtown.

For more information write the Santa Fe Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 1928, Santa Fe, NM 87504-1928.

Travel advisory issued for Uganda

By 'GENE BURKE
Copley News Service

TRAVEL ADVISORY: UGANDA — The State Department advises that although Uganda's airports and land borders are open, travel to Uganda is not encouraged due to unsettled conditions within the country.

Q. My passport will expire in October. Can I submit this passport, photos and the $42 fee to a passport agency for a new passport? I live in Carefree, Ariz.

A. You may use the mail-in application procedure, since your passport was issued since your 18th birthday and is not over 8 years old. Application forms can be secured from a county clerk's office accepting passport applications. The fee is $35. Follow instructions on the reverse of the application because incomplete or unacceptable applications are returned by the passport agency without action.

Q. My name has been changed by court order. I asked a clerk in a local post office how I could have my name changed in my passport. I was given form DSP-19 which appears to be for use in amending my present passport to my new name. I want a new passport with my new name only. How do I go about handling this?

A. File an application for a new passport at a post office authorized to accept applications. Submit your present passport (for cancellation), two new passport photographs, the court order and the $35 fee. This application (DSP-82) may be mailed in. However, since you will pick up the form at a post office, you may expedite the process if the post office mails your application to an issuing agency.

Q. I read your column each week. Keep up the good work. I have a question that I'll bet has never been asked. My 3-year-old got hold of my passport and drew what looks like a horse on one of the pages. Every other page is OK, but I am wondering if my passport is still usable.

A. Some time ago a question such as this was asked. Sorry, but any alteration or mutilation invalidates the passport. If you travel abroad, you will have to file for a new passport as only official entries can be made on passport pages.

DEAR ABBY

Bachelor's day suggested

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We have a Mother's Day, Father's Day, and now someone has proposed a Wife's Day. Therefore, why not a "Bachelor's Day"?

There is a long list of bachelors who have made worthwhile contributions, and I think it's time the state of bachelorhood was appropriately honored. Some famous bachelors:

The saints: Paul, Luke, Francis of Assisi, Thomas Aquinas, Jerome and both Augustines.

There were Plato, Voltaire, Immanuel Kant and Thomas Paine. Also, Christopher Marlowe, Walt Whitman and Marcel Proust. And the famous artists Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael and El Greco. Musicians: Beethoven, Brahms, Liszt, Chopin, Schubert and Handel.

And let's not forget Roger Bacon, Sir Isaac Newton, Andrew Carnegie and Thomas E. Lawrence (known as Lawrence of Arabia). Also J. Edgar Hoover.

What do you say, Abby? Does Bachelor's Day get your vote? — ED P. IN RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR ED: Absolutely. If Congress can rule that Oct. 26 be declared Mule Appreciation Day, I see no reason why it would not also approve a National Bachelor's Day. And lest you think I jest, Rep. Robert Garcia, a Democrat from New York, introduced the bill to "honor" the mule, and it was passed unanimously.

P.S. You overlooked two of the most important bachelors of them all: Jesus Christ and the pope.

DEAR ABBY: My sister is 35 and I am 32. We're both married and have families. We get together occasionally and have always gotten along fine, until now.

The other evening my husband and I decided to go to bed early. He was in his briefs and I was in my nightgown when our doorbell rang. It was 8 p.m. and we weren't expecting anyone, so we didn't answer the door.

The next day my sister called to say that she and her husband had been in the neighborhood around 8 p.m., had rung our bell, but apparently nobody was home.

I told her we were home but didn't answer the door because we weren't expecting anyone and were ready for bed. She became very upset and said she thought we were very rude. I said I thought they were rude to ring our bell without calling first. Now we aren't speaking. I want very much to make up with her, but she's still mad.

Is she blowing this all out of proportion, or am I the one who's wrong? — RIGHT OR WRONG?

DEAR RIGHT: Your sister is wrong. They should have phoned in advance to ask if it was convenient for you to have company. This is a basic rule of common courtesy, and family members are no exception to the rule.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning your reply to "Aunt Cassie in Ottawa": "Motherhood is not for everyone," thank you, and triple thank you!

I've been married for nine blissful years and am childless by choice. Unfortunately in this town, that's a no-no. I've been asked whose "fault" it is — mine or my husband's. I've been told from the pulpit to pray that my "curse of barrenness be lifted, that I may be fruitful."

I've also been told that one day I'll want children, then I'll be too old, and I'll be sorry.

In the meantime, my husband will probably have his instrument pilot's license and I'll almost have mine and we won't miss not having children.

It's awfully hard to miss something you've never had. — REBECCA I.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Qualia

50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Qualia celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a dance and reception Saturday night at the Midland Civic Center. The gathering was hosted by the couple's children, Mrs. T.E. Webb of Dallas, Shirley Qualia of Houston and Ernest Qualia Jr. of Dallas.

Qualia and the former Dorothy Evelyn Daniels were married Sept. 26, 1935, in Del Rio.

Wine served at the reception was furnished by Val Verde Winery of Del Rio, which was founded by Qualia's grandfather Frank Qualia.

Canada's Expo 86 scheduled to open next May in Vancouver

Hearst News Service

In eight months, residents of Vancouver, B.C., will pop their buttons like proud mamas and papas as they unveil their bright new baby: Expo 86.

Centered on the theme "World in Motion — World in Touch," Expo 86 will mark two centennials: the founding of Vancouver and the arrival of the transcontinental railroad across Canada. The educational focus will be on transportation and communication, but fair officials promise a large dose of fun and entertainment far beyond the formal theme.

Participating nations already number 43. The nation pavilions must touch on the exposition's theme but they'll also dabble in cultural expressions, cuisine, craft shops and tourism promotion.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in North America, you'll be able to visit pavilions of the United States, China and the Soviet Union on the same fairgrounds. Among the rest of the nations are a number of smaller countries which have never participated in exhibitions in this part of the world before. Another 40 provinces, states and corporations will sponsor additional pavilion exhibits.

Besides the many pavilions, there will be special displays throughout the fair's run. Just a few of the highlights:

- More than 80 priceless treasures from the tomb of Egyptian Pharaoh Ramses II will be shown.
- Japan will operate a wheelless, driverless train that uses a magnetic field to float above its rails.
- Steam Expo will spotlight more than 25 steam locomotives and vintage rail cars operating in a rail yard adjacent to the main Expo site.
- The World Festival will feature classical and popular artists from around the world in more than 250 performances of drama, dance, theater and music at sites spread around the city.
- The appearance of Russia's Kirov Ballet will be the first in North America in 20 years. Among other performances: Britain's Royal Ballet, the Philadelphia Orchestra and an Indonesian monkey-dance company that has never performed outside the island of Bali.
- For boating enthusiasts, a fleet of tall ships, those traditionally-rigged sailing craft from around the world, will gather on Burrard Inlet.

ALSO SCHEDULED ARE state-of-the-art amusement rides, films and 14,000 performances — dancers, singers, mimes, minstrels, jugglers, clowns and even robots — throughout the fair at 14 venues. Theaters ranging from 1,500 to 4,500 seats, as well as cabarets, bandstands and even the boulevards of Expo will host entertainers.

Expo 86 will open May 2, 1986, and run through Oct. 13 from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. A special international nightlife program — Expo After Hours — will provide entertainment throughout the site after a fireworks and laser show signals the closing of the pavilions at 10 p.m.

The striking architectural signature of Canada Place — five huge, translucent, fiber-glass-teflon panels suspended from 90-foot masts to look like giant white sails — will etch this scene in your memory. Here you'll find the Canada Pavilion, largest of the nation buildings, as well as a new pier for cruise ships, a convention and trade center which will be operational after Expo completes its run, and a major hotel, the 550-room Pan Pacific, due to open this winter.

A MONORAIL SYSTEM will circle the main Expo site in 20 minutes, with six stops along the way. It will connect with a rapid-transit rail system for a short ride through downtown Vancouver to the Canada Place site.

Several cruise ship companies which sail the Inside Passage route during the summer will offer special packages that pair visits to Expo with a luxury cruise. Early reports indicate a typical package might offer three days at the fair and four aboard ship.

Just 31 miles from the U.S.-Canada border, Vancouver is easily reached by car, bus, hydrofoil, ferry and plane. Customs and highway patrol officials are forming plans to smooth international arrivals and departures and ease traffic movement across the border. Negotiations are still going on in an attempt to restore the Amtrak rail link between Seattle and Vancouver in time for Expo.

EXPO OFFICIALS promise a mix of fun and education. Children will enjoy many hands-on exhibits, exciting films and live entertainment. There also will be five on-site amusement rides. The very brave will climb on the Scream Machine, a high-tech roller coaster featuring a corkscrew, a sidewinder, a 360-degree vertical loop and two spirals in a two-minute ride.

More than 50 restaurants are expected on the main site, offering international cuisine of all kinds. For less-adventuresome eaters, there will be five McDonald's outlets, including the company's first floating restaurant.

THE REST OF British Columbia won't let this prime opportunity escape. More than 65 communities are planning Expo-related events for 1986, among them chances to win an island or 86 ounces of gold or have a mountain named after you. A couple of examples of events near the Expo site:

- About 1,400 vintage cars from North America and Europe will roll into Vancouver for the Vintage International Antique and Auto Tour Convention. B.C. Place Stadium, immediately adjacent to the main Expo site, will display 700 of the vehicles July 7-9. The other 700 vehicles will participate in events in Vancouver and nearby communities.
- An International Aviation Exhibition, the largest ever staged in North America, will be co-sponsored by Expo and the Abbotsford International Air Show. The show will feature the Canadian Air Force Snowbirds, U.S. Navy Blue Angels and U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Vasectomies not painful

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been thinking about getting a vasectomy, but I'm pretty much a coward when it comes to pain. Is pain an important factor after this kind of opertion? — Mr. I.L., New London, Conn.

Dear Mr. L.: In one study of 476 patients who had had a vasectomy, 27 reported having experienced moderate pain. The others described the pain after the operation as ranging from nonexistent to slight.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can understand why pregnant women should not drink, but what about men? It seems that women get the short end in everything. They're the ones who have to take birth control pills, and they're the ones who have to take all the precautions when they are pregnant. Doesn't anything the father does make any difference in what happens to the baby? — Cindy, Baltimore, Md.

Dear Cindy: Prospective fathers would also be advised not to drink heavily since the excessive use of alcohol can damage the sperm. Moreover, a sober father would be better able to provide moral support for his wife at all stages of the pregnancy as well as later on.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When you write that pregnant women who smoke have smaller babies than women who do not smoke, you are writing about something that becomes known only after the baby is born. Is there any evidence that can be gathered while the mother is still pregnant that can show that smoking affects the baby? — Mrs. M.L., Topeka, Kan.

Dear Mrs. L.: Researchers at Queen Elizabeth Medical Center in Birmingham, England, report that the heart rate of the fetus is increased and the frequencey of movement of the fetus is decreased in women who smoke. It is significant that several of the women who took part in the study stopped smoking after the study was completed, or reduced their consumption of cigarettes by more than 50 percent.

Dear Dr. Solomon: There may be a simple explanation, but I don't understand what psychological problems have to do with pain. If something hurts me, it hurts, and no one can tell me that it is all in my mind. If I'm wrong, would you please tell me where? — Craig, White Plains, N.Y.

Dear Craig: Emotional problems may have nothing to do with the initial cause of the pain, but pain that continues for an extended period of time can eventually lead to tension and depression that make it even worse. Emotional stress can also intensify the perception of pain.

If you think about this in regard to your own situation, I believe you will be able to appreciate that emotional problems may be linked with chronic pain.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My boyfriend has been using cocaine for some time and he now says that he wants to stop. The thing that's keeping him back is that he is afraid he won't be able to handle the withdrawal symptoms. Cn you give me some idea about what such a person might expect in relation to these symptoms? — Ms. O.B., Chicago.

Dear Ms. B.: Withdrawal from cocaine use may be associated with depression, muscle cramps and deep distrubance. Most of these symptoms should resolve by the end of one week, although the sleep distrubance and feelings of fatigue may continue for a more extended period of time.

The symptoms can be minimized if a nutritionally sound, well-balanced diet is followed. Additionally, this is one situation in which vitamin supplements may be beneficial. Finally, the symptoms won't get any easier to tolerate if your boyfriend delays getting the help he needs.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why is it that a person may seem to be getting older very gradually, and then one day he suddenly seems to have become very old? Everyone gets older, but older people seem to get older faster. Is there any explanation for this? — Mr. J.E., South Bend, Ind.

Dear Mr. E.: Your perception of the aging process does not appear to be an accurate one. Dr. Richard W. Besdine, of Harvard Medical School in Boston, notes that the cumulative effects of the aging process may make it appear as if aging occurs more rapidly in older people. The fact is, however, that the rate of change remains the same as a person grows older.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Some kids I know claim to get a high from drinking cough syrup. I'm curious about what the manufactureres put in cough syrup that makes it so attractive to kids. — Gerald, Baltimore, Md.

Dear Gerald: The drug that appears to attract the youngsters to whom you refer is the same one that attracts so many adults — alcohol. Some over-the-counter cold or cough preparations may contain as much as 25 percent alcohol, enough to give a person a high if the product is abused.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I visited a friend of mine who has shingles. Although he has some pain, he doesn't have a rash. Isn't this unusual? — Guy, Montreal

Dear Guy: Shingles with pain but no rash is unusual, but not particularly rare. According to Dr. Richard J. Whitley, of the University of Alabama School of Medicine in Birmingham, about 5 percent of patients with shingles may experience pain but no rash.

For Loretta, Worcester, Mass.: Only about 20 to 40 percent of the calcium consumed in the diet is actually absorbed, and the percentage of calcium that is absorbed declines as a person grows older.

DR. KURIANSKY

Loving not 'performance'

By DR. JUDITH KURIANSKY

Q. This is hard for me to ask, but I've been married very happily for 36 years and want to stay married for another 36. But all of a sudden I am not able to keep my stamina and please my wife sexually as much as I used to. Please tell me what I can do to perfom better. I can't even concentrate on my work because I'm thinking about it. I can't go on being a softie like this. My doctor said there is nothing wrong with my body, so what's wrong with my mind?

A. What's wrong is using the word "perform." Don't think of sex in terms of a performance. As real performers know, the more you measure the applause, the more you judge yourself; the more you wonder about pleasing the audience, the more likely you'll stiffen up (or in sexual terms, go limp). Anxiety over performance is the main culprit.

Of course it's good to want to please your partner. Especially when you're genuinely in love. Do, by all means, find out what she enjoys and do that. But sex therapists know you have to concentrate additionally on pleasing yourself and on the sensations you feel, not on working too hard trying to please.

What's also wrong is labeling yourself a "softie." Too many men either deflate their ego or get a swollen head depending on what happened sexually the night before.

I'm glad you had courage to ask me this question. Talk to your wife too. Reassure her that your losing your erection does not reflect a loss of love for her. Focus on pleasurable touching of each other. A good trick: Agree you won't have an erection one time! Taking the pressure off that way and eliminating expectations gets your blood flowing beautifully again.

Q. I never wrote to anyone for advice before, but I'm desperate. I'm on my second marriage. My first one lasted 10 years and ended with us being close best friends. The sex was very good, but we just grew apart in other areas.

This time has been a rough three years, and I never encountered such problems before. My husband had been married three times. He gives very little foreplay and reaches a climax fast. Then he blames me for taking so long for mine (which does not always come). I know we need therapy, but he won't go because he says I'm the one with the problem. Is that true?

A. The problem you have is that you buy your husband's blame. Did it ever occur to you that it could be his fault? It is true that on the average a man can take only two minutes to get very aroused with physical stimulation compared to 10 minutes for a woman. But loving couples learn each other's timing and give necessary attention. And a woman with self-esteem doesn't degrade herself for not being quick on the draw. You deserve to take all the time and special touches you need.

Rather than accepting blame, take responsibility — for how you contribute to your unhappiness in this relationship. Are you punishing yourself for what happened to end your first marriage?

Think about a man who can't give to a woman and makes her feel inadequate. Isn't it possible he's the one who feels inadequate but can't face that? If I were you, I'd find out what went on in that man's past three marriages. Since he isn't willing to change, there's a good chance you're in for the same fate. If your husband won't go for therapy, go yourself and find out why you are putting up with being put down.

Q. I read your answer to a question once in this column from a woman who asked you what to do about her husband looking at those girlie magazines and cable TV movies. She was very distraught thinking he didn't want to make love with her anymore. You said that if he was using the pictures to avoid sex in real life, he had a serious problems with intimacy that required professional counseling or marriage therapy.

Otherwise, she could use his interest to make a better sex life between them. You told her to find out what his fantasy is about these scenes and to whatever extent she feels comfortable, to share it with him — either talking about it in a sensuous way or acting as if she were the woman in his mental picture.

I needed that advice too, but I have a more serious problem. My husband likes to look at these pictures during the act, not in private. I feel like I must be ugly to him. What should I do?

A. You have less — rather than more — of a problem. After all, your husband is being open with you, rather than hiding "secret" desires or sneaking around. By his actions he is telling you something, but not necessarily that you are not attractive enough.

A survey of women once showed that their main objection to men looking at pictures of nude women is that they're jealous of those women. Rather than comparing yourself and coming up short, feel as good about your body as you can, or make the changes you want to make.

Nagging him, burning the magazines or feeling rejected and inferior will only drive you further apart. Indeed your feelings are normal. And indeed he may be reverting to adolescence, looking at pictures to act out a fantasy. But recognize that he is sharing with you and may be frightened to really let you know what his secret desires are. Ask him to talk it out.

You know that phrase, "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em"? A variation of that works here. Ask your husband to alternate the image of that "other woman" in his mind with a real glimpse of you. The more he associates the images of the two of you in this way, the more likely it will be that he will see you in the same fantasy and passion picture.

AT WIT'S END

Soldiers real dolls

By ERMA BOMBECK

The next major battle in this country is shaping up as we speak: the battle of the dolls.

Ironically, it's between two males: G.I. Joe and Rambo.

By Thanksgiving both of them will be vying for space on toy shelves all over the country. And if marketing plans are on target, if a child does not find one of these dolls under his Christmas tree, he will lose his will to live.

The toy world is a jungle. No one knows better than G.I. Joe. I pulled him out from under a child's bed and interviewed him about his current competitor.

"Didn't you used to be taller?" I asked.

He drew a deep breath into his one-inch chest and said, "Affirmative. You're talking the 1960's when I first came out. I was 11½-inches tall then with my own tank, weapons and hydrofoil."

"You were the same size as Barbie."

"What have you heard? I never laid a hand on her," he said.

"You were one of the first dolls for boys."

"That is correct. I maintained that position until 1973, when I encountered my first action ... the Arab oil embargo. The cost of plastic quadrupled and I became too expensive to produce so I was stripped down to nine inches. That was in '76. My code name was Super Joe."

"So, you shrunk two and a half inches?"

"Affirmative," he said. "I worked with the space program. It was years ahead of the Star Wars phenomenon."

"Where were you from 1977 to 1982?"

"A secret mission I'm not at liberty to talk about."

"But when you came back to the toy shelves in 1982," I said, "you were only four inches tall!"

"Is there something wrong with being short?"

"No, it's just that you don't seem as authoritative anymore."

"Begging your pardon, Erma Sir, I can still move my arms, legs, head, knees and elbows. Feel this muscle? I'm over 40 and I head The Cobra Command. We call it the G.I. Joe Team."

"What is it you do?"

"We combat terrorism around the world."

I hesitated, "Have you heard about Rambo?"

"What does he do?"

"He fights for patriotism and has a thirst for justice."

"You mean the sissy with the aerobics headband?"

"Do you feel threatened by him?" I asked.

"Negative. I've got a lot of goodies I haven't even revealed yet. Wait until you see my new aircraft carrier. It's seven and a half feet long by three feet wide and will sell for about $100-$120."

"Do you honestly think parents are going to spring for that kind of a defense budget?"

"Look, does this country want to sleep safe at night or not?"

"What kind of an enemy are you looking for?"

Joe winced. "Rambo!"

BUSINESS/OIL

Veteran retailer remembers ups and downs in Midland

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Some have called H.C. "Nub" Jones the "Dean of Midland Retailers" and that title may not be too far from the truth. One thing is certain, when he retired earlier this year, it marked the end of a long and distinguished career in the fashion business.

A partner in the S&Q Clothiers stores since 1950, and general manager of the Midland store for 39 years, Jones joined the clothing chain in San Angelo in 1936 at the age of 17, and in the following 49 years saw lapels and neckties expand and shrink more times than the fortunes of Midland.

When he brought the S&Q operation to Midland, World War II was ending, and merchandise was hard to come by. "It took me from August, 1945, until April 14, 1946 to gather enough merchandise to open the store," he noted.

HOUSING WAS HARDER to find. Although Jones had bought a house, he couldn't get the people living there to leave. "Back then, you had to give six months notice to give the other people a chance to find another place to live. During the last oil boom," he commented, "you could find a place to live if you had the money. Back then, you couldn't find a place even if you had the money."

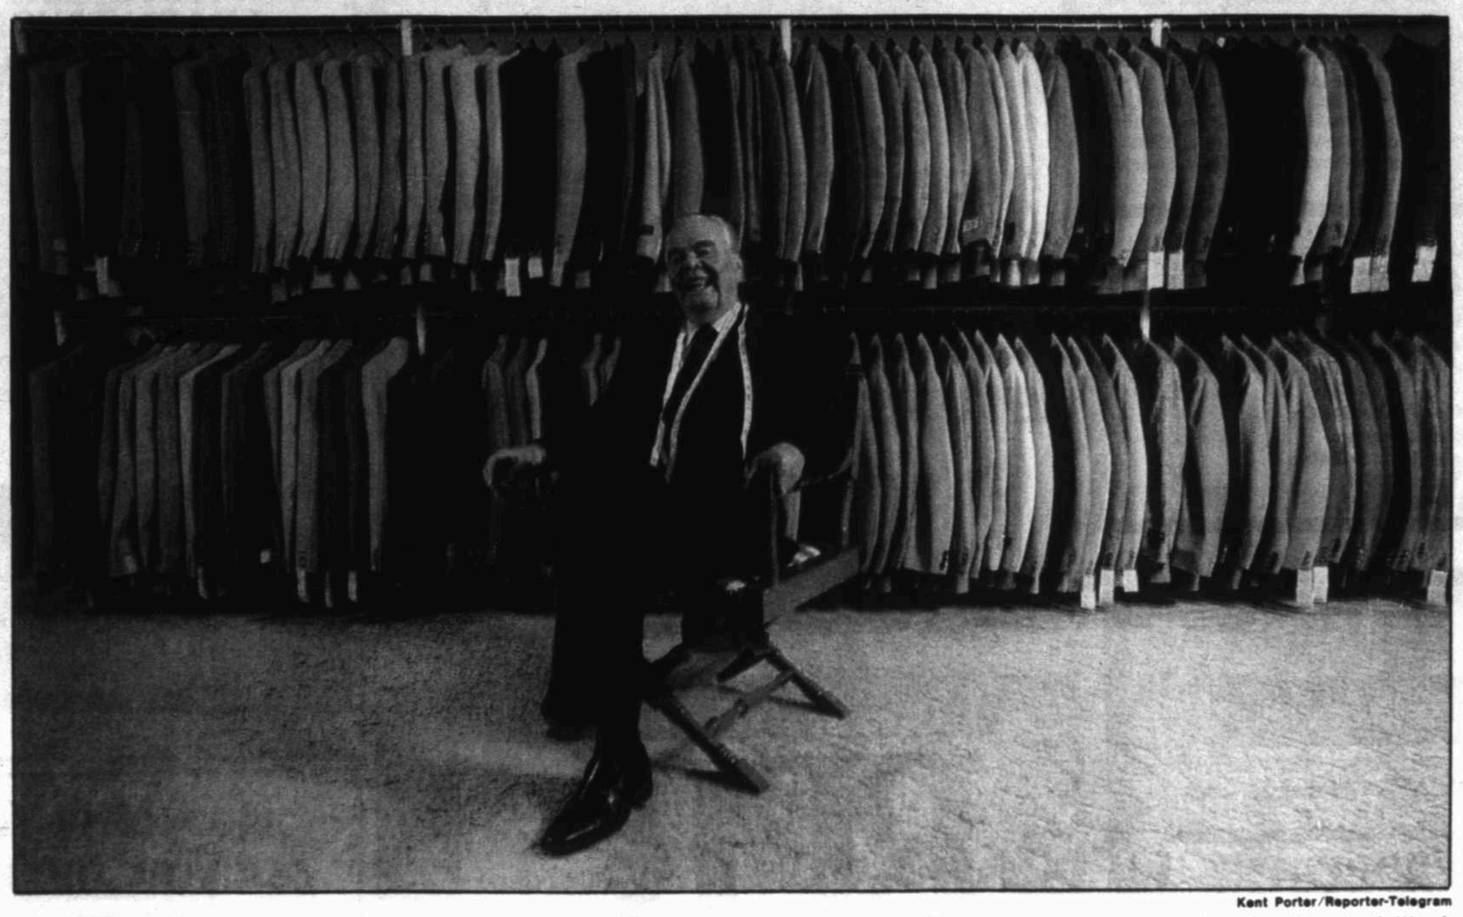
Various shortages during the war took their toll on the fashion industry. Before the war, almost all suits came with a vest and two pairs of pants, Jones commented. After the war, he noted, manufacturers didn't want to use the extra cloth for a second pair of pants and a vest, so suits were sold without a vest and with only one pair of pants. To compensate for the lack of a vest, Jones said, manufacturers began making double breasted suits.

After the war, the economy boomed, including the oil industry, which meant Midland's economy was healthy. When Jones decided to add a second store, his partners thought he was crazy - he became a partner in 1950 - but he said he knew the town was growing, especially the suburban area. He and the owners of Career Girl and Barnes Pelletier hired Lloyd Mackey to build their stores on Dodson Street. S&Q's suburban store opened in 1955, and Jones says there's never been any regret.

AT THE TIME the suburban store opened, Midland had a population of about 22,000 and two or three blocks of retail on Main Street. "Both First National and Midland National banks had moved off Main Street, and I just couldn't see my store sitting on Main Street and drying up. I knew we had to move off of Main Street."

In 1960, he leased an old pool hall and tavern on Colorado Street that had been empty about a year and a half, leased it from the owner's widow, and spent about $250,000 renovating it into S&Q Clothier's second downtown location.

S&Q flourished at that location for 24 years, but closed in 1984. Said Jones: "The lease was up and we couldn't renegotiate a lease, besides I was getting ready to retire. We were still doing good business. The year had been tough, with the bank failing, and business was off 15 percent, but we weren't losing any money." He added that the suburban store still does good business.



Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

H.C. "Nub" Jones relaxes in an area he knows best, the suit department of S&Q Clothiers. After almost 50 years of retailing in West Texas, the veteran clothier has retired with a "pocketful" of memories.

PROFILE

The Midland suburban store is one of three still open. The first S&Q store, founded in 1915 by Sam Sheinberg in Ada Oklahoma, is still open, as is a store in Abilene. At one time, there were 12 to 15 stores, according to Jones, but the company tried to expand too fast, and had to close down most of the stores, including a store in Wichita Falls that had been open 65 years, and two in Corpus Christi that had been open 40 years, as well as stores in Beaumont, Temple, Victoria, Odessa and the downtown store in Abilene.

THE TWO MIDLAND stores were the backbone of the S&Q company, Jones stated. "The store's policy, and mine, was service and quality. We had a personal store - that's what made it successful. You don't see much of that anymore. It's all pretty much self-serve."

He said the lack of a personal touch was probably one of the things that hurt Sakowitz. He noted that they needed a personal store but probably couldn't get the right people for the job. He attributed much of the success of S&Q Clothiers to its professional employees.

"I had a credit manager who worked for me 36 years. I had salespeople who worked 32, 28, 27, 25 years. You're only as strong as the people around you." While touting the virtues of mature employees, he also put great stock in the younger generation.

His younger employees saw changes in men's clothing that he didn't, so he sent them to market every year. "I wasn't ready. I didn't see the changes coming." One of the biggest changes in men's fashions has been the shift from suits to sports wear. The most ridiculous thing in men's fashion were the zoot suits of World War II, he said.

James Avery turned a garage business into a major jewelery firm.

James Avery: Bohemian to multimillionaire

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — James Avery twists and turns in his orange leather desk chair, reminiscing and philosophizing.

He can talk for hours about his life and his love — the 31-year-old James Avery Craftsman jewelry company.

"I didn't start this business to make money," he says, leaning back behind his slab-wood desk at his headquarters north of Kerrville. "I started it because I thought what I had to say and do was important."

White-haired and red-faced, the 63-year-old Avery is the quintessential artist. And he has turned his creativity into a multimillion-dollar jewelry business with widespread appeal in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

Emphasizing the less expensive silver, brass and copper metals, Avery's jewelry all is handcrafted, with few stones.

Sales hit $15 million last year, but Avery says his eye isn't on the bottom line.

"The only thing that counts for me is the top line," he says. "Making something worthwhile — giving people the opportunity to work."

Avery likes to think his jewelry has a childlike quality.

"It's somewhat understated, simple. It takes a more direct approach. We stay away from all the cutesy things. It has a formality about it," he said.

He hasn't pushed diamonds and other precious gems in his jewelry because he says he doesn't want to "foist something on the market" just to sell stones.

"It ought to have more meaning to it," he explains.

Avery has a somewhat unique marketing plan. His jewelry is sold only in stores his company owns, in some Christian bookstores and on some wholesale markets.

There are 23 James Avery Craftsman shops — 19 in Texas, two in Oklahoma, one in Louisiana and one in California.

Avery's jewelry has a heavy religious accent, with many crosses, doves and other Christian symbols adorning his array of merchandise.

"I feel very strongly about it," he says of his faith. "I know it's important to others and I'm going to say something in my jewelry about it."

It was a religious experience Avery says he had more than 30 years ago that sparked the idea for the jewelry business.

"I was a bohemian, a born iconoclast," he said of his youthful days.

But he said he eventually "came back to the church — reset my values. I realized I wasn't going to be another Da Vinci."

A new program for gas contracts

Software package pays off

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Natural gas contracts once were relatively simple documents with namely a price and time frame on them. Today, however, in the constantly changing natural gas markets they have become highly complex legal instruments with a multitude of variables that sometimes change daily and must be monitored continually.

Initiating such contracts and keeping them up to date has fostered an entirely new breed of experts in the oil patch — the natural gas contract consultant. It has also bred a new generation of computer software to handle the complicated feat.

One of those software packages is Gas Contract Management System, which its creators and marketers say provides unique applications for gas producers. The program is marketed locally by Gathers Software Inc., the only main frame company with an office in Midland, and according to Mike Wellman, president BHT International Inc. and leader of the design team that perfected the program, it is the most sophisticated on the market.

Wellman says the comprehensive contract management system goes far beyond the simple spreadsheet and sort and list procedures and will:

- Monitor take or pay obligations
- Track split-stream balances
- Monitor price redetermination and generate worksheets for redetermination negotiations,
- Calculate prices based on fixed, sliding scale, pegged prices or inflation factors or a complex combination of any and all of these
- Perform contingency or exposure analysis for situations such as a price in dispute or pending new law,
- Monitor contract reserves,
- Monitor market-out provisions based on specific triggering mechanisms,
- Compute all taxes, deductions, and reimbursements,
- Automatically compare amounts received against the adjusted contract price,
- Monitor and report on all key dates and generate notices for escalation, redetermination and renegotiation.

"One of the features we consider to be most unique and helpful," said Wellman is the ability of the system to determine a price based on a number of senarios.

The GCMS system will determine price based on a fixed price, sliding scale, inflation factors and a reference fuel on a BTU basis.

Said Wellman: "The program will also automatically calculate balance for take or pay contracts and perform split stream calculations when gas is being sold out of a well to more than one purchaser. It will also handle royalty-in-kind balances and compute all applicable taxes."

"Probably the most important thing the system does," says John Roos, president Gathers Software Inc., "is make sure the producer is getting properly paid for his gas. By computerizing the entire contract monitoring system, a producer has at his fingertips immediate and complete information regarding thousands of contracts, and is freed to plan renegotiations rather than being bogged down with administrative details."

Designed to operate on 30 computers from a PC to an IBM mainframe, cost for the software ranges from $7,500 to $30,000.

Now is the time to get our energy act together

Despite a loosening of the OPEC noose, America's neck is still in jeopardy when it comes to crude oil. In fact, the U.S. is probably as vulnerable to the whims of foreign treachery, as it ever was — perhaps even more so.

That's the story Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace has been trying to get across in meeting after meeting across Texas and even into the heart of anti-oil country in the northeast. It is also the story that Frank and Shelby Pitts (no relation to this writer) of Pitts Energy Group in Dallas have reduced to a colorful and comprehensive graphic presentation complete with graphs and maps of crude oil tanker routes.

The essence of both presentations is that America had better get its energy act together while the getting is still good. It is a view shared by many in the oil industry, but one which falls on too many dead ears in other quarters of our society, including Congress and the Administration.

Field Marshall Rommel learned in Africa during World War II that an army does not travel on its stomach. When supply lines were interruped, he quickly found that an army could go for days on an empty stomach, but it couldn't go one foot on an empty gas tank.

Wallace, The Pitts Energy Group, and others in the industry continue to warn us that America could face that same hopeless, miserable situation if it continues to depend on imported crude oil. We now import about 5 million barrels of oil daily from the Middle East, a distance of 9,000-12,0000 depending on routes.

"To deliver that amount of oil requires a string of floating bombs (tankers) strung out 50 miles apart half way across the world — try to defend that!" said Mack Wallace. He pointed out that the task is impossible, because some of the routes pass within miles of Soviet submarine bases.

If that floating supply line was disrupted by hostility or politics, the armies of the free world would be virtually paralyzed. Approximately 93 percent of the petroleum purchased by the U.S. military is used to mobile defense equipment. Most would agree that to spend hundreds of billions on defensive weapons such as tanks, planes and ships and then put the task of providing fuel for those weapons in the hands of madmen is insane. Yet, that is exactly what has happened in terms of U.S. foreign policy.

"U.S. oil vulnerability is the single, surest threat that the future poses to our security and that of our allies," Defense Secretary Harold Brown told President Jimmy Carter in 1979. Despite similar warnings from practically all Treasury and Defense secretaries since 1975, the U.S. Treasury Department has now embarked upon a course diametric to those concerns.

Obviously mistaking a temporary surplus as termination of a sentence of future economic blackmail, the administration has seized upon the opportunity to launch bold and noble social reforms. And, as so often happens in the process of pursuing bold and noble ventures, it has developed tunnel vision, blocking out the dangers of energy dependence.

Lord knows this nation needs tax reform, but it needs energy even worse. We have survived decades under an unjust tax code and can probably manage a few more if need be, but we probably do not have five years to get our energy act together. It is a miracle that we have any time at all, that the God of America has granted us a reprieve (not a termination of sentence) from the boot heel of foreign oil producers.

If we do not learn to live on the oil we produce and produce all the oil we can, we will again be at the doorstep of satanical holy men, maniacal communist terrorists, and backward Bedouins, begging for oil at any price.

The numbers predetermine this event, because the Middle East has 433 billion barrels of oil reserves as compared to 265 billion for the rest of the world. If the world wants to continue to use oil, sooner or later it will go begging in the Middle East. It may be sooner than we think.

As Sheik Amad Aaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia Minister of Petroleum, has already warned us: "The golden age of Arab oil was not in the seventies, but will be in the nineties of this century."

John Paul Pitts is business-oil editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Permian Basin Oil, Gas Recovery Conference set for March

The 1986 Permian Basin Oil and Gas Recovery Conference will be held March 13 and 14 at the Midland Center in Midland, Texas. This fourteenth biennial conference is hosted by the Permian Basin Section and the Trans-Pecos Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers.

Over 500 industry personnel are expected to attend the conference to hear technical presentations of regional interest and to visit the exhibits of about 50 companies. The conference theme is "Energy Tommorrow Through Technology Today."

Preceding the conference on Wednesday, March 12, will be a pair of special events: a field trip to Chevron's SACROC carbon dioxide project and an SPE short course entitled "Enhanced Oil Recovery by Carbon Dioxide Flooding."

The advance registration deadline is February 28, 1986. The cost will be $50 for SPE members and $65 for non-members.

General chairman and assistant chairman respectively for the 1986 symposium are Anil Kumar, Chevron USA, Inc., and Sal J. Pagano, O'Brien-Goins-Simpson & Associates. David A. Rowland of the University of Texas-Permian Basin, Glenn R. Smith of Phillips Petroleum Co. and Douglas D. Frey of Amoco Production Co. are all program co-chairmen. Other committe chairmen include: Mark V. Langston, Chevron USA, Inc., Arrangements; Tom Garvin, Halliburton Services, Entertainment; Omer Roberts, Sohio Petroleum Co, Exhibits; David C. Basin count continues strong showing

The Permian Basin rig count continued a strong showing, increasing by nine over last week. This represents the second week of big gain in the count, having increased by eleven for the previous week.

The U.S. count also made large advances, up 43 from last week, after falling in prior weeks.

Locally, Andrews County reported nine more rigs at work, making their total the highest it has been in a year. The count there stands at 47. Midland County slipped one this week, down to 11, while Odessa kept its four week total of 13.

New activity was seen in Grant County, New Mexico, as well as in Concho and Edwards counties. Menard and Culberson counties lost their only rigs this week to drop off the report.

Nationally, New Mexico posted the largest gain, up nine to 76. Colorado and Wyoming each added eight for counts of 57 and 105, respectively. Texas posted an overall gain of two rigs for a total of 637.

A year ago, the U.S. rig count stood at 2,441 and the Basin count showed 361.

La Gloria adds new gasoline blends

HOUSTON (SWN) — Texas Eastern Corp. has announced that its subsidiary La Gloria Oil and Gas Company has added six new gasoline blends containing Oxinol (TM) 50 to the existing four grades of gasoline available to wholesale customers at its Tyler, Texas truck terminal. Oxinol 50 is a patented blend of 50 percent methanol and 50 percent gasoline-grade tertiary butyl alcohol and has a 109 octane blending value.

Blanchard said La Gloria has become unique in the industry by converting one of its truck loading lanes to a blending rack with a custom built computerized multi-product blender. "Since no appropriately sized blending system was available, we designed our own. As far as we know," he added, "We are the only refinery able to offer such a wide range of blends containing Oxinol 50 at a truck loading rack." Existing gasolines offered through La Gloria's multi-product blender are:

89 octane leaded, regular,
87 octane no lead,
89 octane no lead, "power plus" and
91 octane premium no lead. New gasoline blends offered through La Gloria's multi-product blender are:
89 octane leaded regular w/Oxinol 50,
92 octane leaded regular w/Oxinol 50,
87 octane no lead w/Oxinol 50
89 octane no lead w/Oxinol 50
91 octane no lead w/Oxinol 50 and
93 octane no lead w/Oxinol 50

Preliminary estimates indicate volume through La Gloria's multi-product blender will be approximately 150,000 barrels per month.

DETROIT — William T. McCormick, who recently resigned as chairman of the American Natural Resources Co. following a takeover by the Coastal Corp., was named chairman, president and chief executive Wednesday of the Consumers Power Co., based in Jackson, Mich.

He replaces John D. Selby, who announced his resignation in March, after the cancellation of the company's $4 billion Midland nuclear power plant. Selby's resignation is effective Oct. 31, and McCormick will assume his new duties Nov. 1.

McCormick, who is 41 years old, was elected chairman and chief executive of ANR late last year, shortly before Coastal made its takeover bid. He joined the company in 1978 as vice president in charge of strategic and financial planning and was made president in 1982.

More rigs utilized in Permian Basin

EDITORS NOTE: The totals on the utilization chart represent the depth at which each rig is rated. However, some rigs that have been depth-rated for deeper depths are drilling at shallower depths. That will account for some disparity that might appear in the above tables.

A few more rigs available in the Permian Basin area were being utilized last week according to Smith Tool's latest report.

A 44.9 percent utilization was reported in the area, compared to the previous week's total of 43.8 percent. Most of the increase was seen in the shallower depths, from 2,500 ft. to 7,500 ft.

The higher utilization reflects in this week's working rig count. The Basin count was up from 294 last week, to 301 this week.

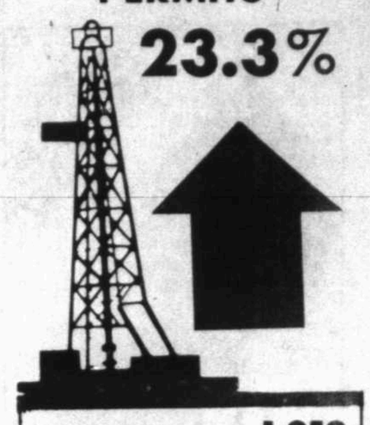
U.S. DRILLING PERMITS



More permits issued

DENVER — Permits issued to drill for oil and gas in the U.S. totaled 1,959 during the week ended September 20, up 23.3 percent from previous week's total, according to Petroleum Information Corp.

During the same week one year ago, 2,306 permits were issued. New field wildcat permits — those for purely exploratory drilling — total 6,891 for the year, compared with 7,526 permits issued at this time a year ago, a decline of 8.4 percent. Development drilling permits total 50,182 for the year, down 16.6 percent from 1984 totals of 60,135.

Among the most active states for permits issued during the week were: Texas, 601; Oklahoma, 217; Louisiana, 160; Illinois, 157; Pennsylvania, 123; Kansas, 110; and Kentucky, 104.

Texas American Bank/Midland recently announced two appointments to the bank's staff.

LEZLIE W. FORSTER has been named vice president, commercial lending. Forster was most recently affiliated with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. as section chief, commercial loans in the Midland office.

Prior to moving to Midland, she spent seven years in commercial lending with Allied Bank of Texas in Houston. Forster is a graduate of the University of Texas where she obtained a BBA degree in finance.

SHERYL L. OVERTURF was named assistant vice president, commercial lending and joins Texas American Bank/Midland with five years experience as commercial lender and credit analyst with another major Midland financial institution.

She earned a BA degree from Austin College in Sherman, Texas and a Masters from the University of Texas. Additional professional training includes RMA Omega and the Texas Tech School of Banking. She is active with the American Cancer Society, the United Way and the Midland Centennial Kickoff.

ROBERT S. COOKE has been named a Distinguished Member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers at the Society's recent 60th Annual Technical Conference in Las Vegas, Nevada. The Distinguished Member grade honors those members who have attained eminence in the petroleum industry or the academic world who have made unusually significant contributions to the Society or to a local section.

He was recognized for having participated in Society and AIME activities in several leadership positions, having served on the boards of directors of both the Society and AIME and was vice president of AIME as well as a member of numerous SPE committees.

Cooke, who retired last year after a 31 year career with Unocal Corp., has been a Midland resident for 22 of the last 24 years.

Five new members have recently been elected to serve on the Board of Directors of West Texas Epilepsy Association. The new members are GLEN FRADENBURG, BETTY HEGBOUM, LEE ROY CHILDRESS, K.M. (MIKE) THORNTON, and LARRY WADZECK.

Fradenburg is a 1984 graduate of Auburn University where he majored in finance. He was active in school politics, and was one of the top ten Auburn seniors in academics and activities. He is presently an account executive with E.F. Hutton & Co., Midland.

Hegboum is a graduate of Midwestern University in Wichita Falls. She has recently retired from Exxon Co., USA, after 28 years service as a draftsman in the exploration department. She has been a Midland resident for 17 years.

Childress attended West Texas State University and has been a Midland resident for 15 years. He is owner of Childress Equipment Sales, Inc. and is an officer on the board of Permian Basin Cook-off.

Thornton attended Colorado School of Mines in Golden, Colorado and joined Amerada Petroleum Corp. in 1963. He moved to West Texas ten years ago and has been district superintendent with Amerada Hess Corp. in Midland for the past six years. He is active in volunteer work and is vice president of Permian Basin Cook-off.

Wadzeck attended Odessa College and Texas A&M University. He has been employed with Kelco Rotary Drilling Service, Inc. in Odessa since 1978 as regional sales manager.

He serves as director of Permian Basin Cook-off.

Namedropping policy

Business Namedropping is intended to inform our readers of promotions, achievements and changes among the professional, business personnel and leaders of Midland.

New presidents, chairmen of the board, directors of major corporations or new officers of organizations are normally treated separately as free-standing stories.

Namedropping generally appears in the Sunday edition but may be published during the week if necessary.

Information for Sunday pages must be in the Business-Oil Department by the preceding Thursday at noon. Items published during the week should be in the department two days in advance.

All information must be submitted in writing and include the name and telephone number of the person submitting it.

If a photograph is included, the person in the picture must be dressed professionally.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

JONES

Jones said that competition in the clothing business has always been stiff, but it's harder to make a dollar today because of the increased competition. He added, "Our big business used to be Easter. Mothers would bring their little boys in, dress them up. It seemed then that everyone bought their clothes at S&Q, but today it seems they just don't dress up that much anymore, even though they are still style conscious."

MIDLANDERS, HE SAID, are very style conscious. "Most of the wealthier Midlanders travel a lot, and end up doing much of their shopping in Dallas or Houston. I once got a list of the charge accounts for Neiman-Marcus, so I could send out mailings to try to encourage people to shop at S&Q. There were five pages of Midlanders on the list," he recalled.

Midland's wealth comes from the oil industry, and, afars in Midland, Jones figured he's seen about four booms and busts - a cycle about every ten years. "When the oil industry is good, the retail industry is good", he said. After so many years in Midland, he said he feels he's been through two generations."I've seen many people go, and I've watched a lot of people grow up. He's quick to add, "changes happen if you stay anywhere long enough."

Now retired and a senior vice president with S&Q. Jones is still active in community affairs. He has served on the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Midland Chamber of Commerce, United Way, and was a charter member of the Midland Optimist Club. He also helped organize the first high school booster club.

"I've enjoyed living here. The town's been good to me," the native San Angeloan said.

What does one who has spent 50 years in the retail clothing business do in retirement? "I have done a lot of travelling, but right now I'm getting the itchy feet to get back into the retail business," said Jones.

AVERY

After the experience, Avery married a woman from Kerrville and moved here. Wanting to keep his life simple, he started making a few crosses and other jewelry pieces in his garage. He sold his wares to girls attending summer camps near Kerrville, many of whom would write him after returning home and order more jewelry.

"Slowly and very surely, I started to grow," he said.

His first year — 1954 — Avery grossed $5,500. The second year, he earned $7,500.

The business probably never will go nationwide. Avery doesn't want it to.

"We don't have the artisans that can hammer out the jewelry," he said. "I can't see us getting real big and keeping the quality."

Avery offers more than 4,000 pieces of jewelry and says he still approves most of the designs and supervises the final production work. He also reads letters written to him from customers asking him to create jewelry for them, and handwritten letters with crude drawings of jewelry litter his desk.

Avery says he can't take credit for his success.

"I've had a lot of help," he said. "I don't believe anybody's self-made."

Let market shape telecommunications, says U.S. official

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The federal government should minimize policy changes in the telecommunications industry and let competition and marketplace forces shape the future of the field, a top Department of Justice antitrust official says.

Charles F. Rule, deputy assistant attorney general in the agency's antitrust division, said in a recent interview that any new intervention in the rapidly changing telephone industry should be restricted only to cases of market failure or the need to regulate a natural monopoly.

"You want market forces and competition to determine whether or not it makes sense for there to be five, 10 or 15 competitors, not some government policy," Rule said.

He said he considered the 1982 Department of Justice consent decree that broke up AT&T as providing "a stable, understandable policy." But a key controversy since the breakup stems from charges by AT&T's rivals that the company still retains its monopoly on long-distance service.

Several of the competitors have asked the Federal Communications Commission for relief, including a request to slow the removal of curbs on AT&T's ability to offer more flexible rates and new services.

While conceding that AT&T's competitors may have some valid points, Rule said that the mere fact that AT&T retains a large share of long-distance market is no justification for its continued regulation.

"How much sense does it make to continue to regulate AT&T now that AT&T is, at least by definition, in an industry that is not characterized by a natural monopoly?" he asked.

Rule says that if there is no monopoly and if competition is sustainable, then other companies will enter the market and, over time, take market shares from the old company.

Forcing a company with a large market share to keep its prices low "may in the short term save money, but the long-term costs can be rather substantial by distorting these market forces," he said.

Moreover, he added, such restrictions would "foster a lot of waste and inefficiencies and higher prices to consumers in the short term for very little gain, except perhaps to some company shareholders."

In contrast, Rule said that if market forces and competition were allowed to set the pace for telecommunications development, consumers would benefit from new services and products and lower prices.

In addition, he predicted that "there are going to be phone companies that come in that are going to be tremendous successes that we don't know about today — and there will be others that won't exist over time."

Ex-Apple president says he's not bitter toward firm

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Jobs says he is not bitter toward John Sculley, the man he selected as president of Apple Computer, for ousting him from the company he co-founded 10 years ago.

Jobs, 30, said he learned he was no longer wanted at the company at two meetings in which Sculley said there was "no role for me there then or in the future."

"That was about as black-and-white as you need to make things," Jobs said in an interview in the Sept. 30 issue of Newsweek.

He said he felt as if somebody had "punched you in the stomach and it knocks the wind out of you and you can't breathe."

But he added: "You know, I respect his right to make that decision ... I'm not bitter."

He conceded he might not be the best person to run a company.

"It probably is true that the people who have been able to come up with the innovations in many industries are maybe not the people that either are the best skilled at, or, frankly, enjoy running a large enterprise ...."

Jobs resigned last Tuesday from the $2 billion company he founded with his friend Stephen Wozniak in a garage 10 years ago in California's Silicon Valley. Wozniak left Apple last February in a disagreement with Jobs over the firm's priorities.

Apple, which at one point had a 45 percent share of the personal computer market, now has less than 30 percent. It suffered its first loss in its last fiscal quarter.

Sculley said last week, "People tend to confuse vision with innovation ... Steve contributed to vision, and it's an immense contribution, no doubt about it."

Jobs said he was proud of what he had accomplished in the last 10 years and "I'd like to do something again where when I'm 40 will look back and say, 'You know, I spent my 30s well.'"

In announcing his resignation, Jobs said he had plans for a new venture that would involve higher education and working with Paul Berg, a Nobel Prize-winning geneticist.

Jobs said Berg, a professor at Stanford University, told him "he does experiments in a wet laboratory that take a week or two or three to run. I asked him, 'Why don't you simulate these on a computer? Not only will it allow you to run your experiments faster, but someday every freshman microbiology student in the country can play with the Paul Berg ... software.'"

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE℠

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

1. Call the StockQuote Hotline number listed below. A computer voice will answer and ask you for the Account Code.
2. Enter the Account Code, then depress the star key (*) on your telephone. The computer will then ask you to enter your Stock Code.
3. Enter the Stock Code for the stock you wish quoted, the computer will quote the Ticker Symbol; Current Price and Net Change from the previous day's close.
4. After the stock is quoted, the computer will ask you to enter another Stock Code. You have two options:

A. You may request the quote for another stock simply by repeating Step 3, or...
B. You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more depressing the star key (*) in which case the computer will respond with the Price, Net Change, Volume, High and Low. The computer will then ask you to enter another Stock Code (repeat Step 3).

You may enter up to 10 requests per call.

STOCK CODES

All Stock Codes are based on industry standard Ticker Symbols provided by your broker or available from any Standard & Poor's Stock Ticker Guide. Codes are made up of a series of two-digit numbers, each representing one of the letters in the Ticker Symbol.

To determine the two-digit code for any letter of a Ticker Symbol, remember: The first key to be depressed is always the one on which the letter appears. The second key is always a "1," "2" or "3" indicating that letter's position on its own key (first, second or third position). EXAMPLE: "IBM" = "43 22 61"; "BX" = "22 92." Remember to depress the star key (*) after entering each code.

ADDITIONAL ASSISTANCE

Call the StockQuote customer service number (915) 682-5311 (Monday thru Friday 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.) for additional information or to report any problem with the service.

Editor hopes companies catch on to little-known microcap stocks

Copley News Service

In a telephone interview the other day, Margaret Brill stripped some of the mystery out of the microcap stocks. Brill is the editor and publisher of the Burlingame, Calif.-based newsletter PSR Stockwatch.

She likes to call the subject "Microcaps and the Rock of Gibraltar."

MicroCap stocks, she explained, are those with micro-capitalization, less than $100,000.

"That sounds very small, but there are about 12,000 American public companies trading, and 5,000 are this small," Brill notes. "That's quite a large universe from which to select. We hope they won't stay small long, of course."

Her motive? "I look at companies small enough that institutions can't really take a position. To take a position of the size the institutions require, they would own 30 percent of the company. They don't want to control companies," she explained.

"The Rock of Gibraltar" refers to the second half of her stock-picking formula. She wants solid companies.

As a rule, Brill wants her companies funded with at least 50 percent shareholders' equity, she said.

"I don't like debt," she emphasized. "And when possible, look for a company that sells below book value. It's nice to feel you're getting a bargain."

"Our focus is on the individual investor. Our goal is to educate and help individual investors use common sense when making selections. We want them not to listen to their broker, or when they do, ask probing questions," she said.

Brill, who studied political science at Stanford University and tried various jobs before becoming a stockbroker, is suspicious of stocks touted by brokerage houses. Too frequently, she claimed, brokerage houses are pushing stocks that institutional investors want to dump.

"PSR's approach is to measure a stock's popularity by percentage of sales per share," she said.

"For example, if a company had 10,000 shares outstanding and made $100,000 in revenues last year, you don't want to pay more than $7.50 per share for the company — no more than 75 percent of sales per share. Now if the stock price climbs to $15, 150 percent of sales, people are becoming aware of it. As it gets past that — 200 percent or 300 percent, it's time to watch out. It's too popular. There's not much upside potential left."

This is the time, she said, to "take your money and go find another low priced stock."

She and a colleague started the twice-monthly newsletter almost three years ago. She's now buying his interest in the 1,000-circulation publication and will run it on her own.

For the first quarter of this year, Brill's model portfolio increased 40 percent in value.

Hy-Bon Pro-Boost

(Casinghead Pressure Reduction System)

Improve production by relieving pressure on your oil & gas wells

- ☐ Increases revenue from increased production
- ☐ Works equally well on stripper wells or high production wells
- ☐ Helps prevent gas lock

How it works:

The Hy-Bon Pro-Boost© unit - a control system for automatically regulating the desired pressure on a well - is connected directly to the casing.

By reducing annulus pressure the control system relieves back pressure on the perforations at the pay zone, allowing an increase in the incoming flow of oil and gas. The gas accumulated in the bottom of the hole is brought to the surface and compressed into the sales line.

Because the unit is pressure sensitive, and operates on pressure demand, it allows the well bore to stay clear and stable . . . resulting in a steady flow of hydrocarbons into the bore.

The stabilization of pressure in the bore has also proven effective in minimizing re-occurring gas lock problems.

Low cost - quick payback:

The Hy-Bon Pro-Boost© Unit provides a sensible, dependable, and economical method of compressing gas at the wellhead. Increased oil and gas production quickly pays back your investment, often within 30 days. And the Hy-Bon Pro-Boost© Unit can be rented, leased or purchased through Hy-Bon's flexible customer-oriented acquisition plan.

Proven Hy-Bon design

Each product manufactured by the Hy-Bon Corporation reflects 30 years experience in the industry . . . with Hy-Bon manufactured components and design insuring long lasting, dependable performance. The proven Hy-Bon rotary compressor used in the Pro-Boost© system is the industry standard for performance and reliability.

Yuppie bids adieu to lifestyle to travel around the world

By JANE CLIFFORD
Copley News Service

Jan Percival recently hung up her navy blue business suits, sold her BMW and bid her Yuppie lifestyle adieu.

"I had begun to feel like a nonperson," she said matter-of-factly.

"I felt like I was doing everything for a reason that somehow revolved around work. ..." She paused, resting her chin on her hand, then quietly ticked off a typical day. "There were early breakfast meetings, luncheon meetings, at least one meeting after work. ... I was gone from 6 in the morning till 10 at night."

And there were visits to a health club, she said, but only because she could ride a stationary bicycle, which allowed her to watch TV news and catch up on her reading.

"I even got to the point where I was booking two breakfasts — one at 7:30, one at 8:30 — that's ridiculous," she said, laughing. "On the other hand, I felt proud of the good job I was doing."

Yes, she acknowledged, she was a success.

At 31, she was vice president of a successful public relations firm, owned her own home, was active in Republican politics and professional organizations and well-known around San Diego, home to her since she was 6 months old.

At the University of Arizona she had minored in archaeology and earned a journalism degree. Back home, she steadily built her reputation and career.

Despite its demands, she loved her job — and the salary and prestige that went with it. Six months ago, she decided to walk away from all of it, she said, before she was so tied to position and possessions that she could never make a break.

She shook her head as she remembered coming to the realization that what she had acquired and achieved somehow wasn't what she wanted.

"I always, always wanted my own house," she said, her sea-blue eyes twinkling. And she bought one — a three-bedroom bungalow. She had a sunny kitchen, a big back yard and a garden, none of which she ever had time to enjoy.

"The only thing I used my little dream house for was to come home, throw my clothes off, sleep. ... I ate out all the time. I cooked one meal at my house. And that was a barbecue in the back yard."

Don't mistake her sentiment for regret, however.

"You know, it was fun. It was a blast. I did have a very good life."

Percival just felt that she had stopped learning, stopped growing.

"I felt my life was tunneled in one direction and to do it well meant giving up all my free time," she said.

She sheepishly admitted she hasn't read a book for pleasure in more than a year. "And I'm a voracious reader." She paused again, looked out the window. "We get so involved in the pace we keep." She turned her attention back to the interview. "You push your family to the back burner. You push everything but work to the back burner."

So she's paid her debts, put furniture and family heirlooms in storage, placed two cats in happy homes and is off to see how people live in the rest of the world.

"I'm going to seek out women in similar age groups and find out what's important to them," she said.

She bought an airline pass that basically allows her to shuttle around the world, and she plans to be gone at least six months. Her first long stop is at an Israeli kibbutz, where she'll live and work for three months. In the glittery world capitals of Paris, London, Rome, Cairo, Athens, Bombay, Bangkok, Singapore, Hong Kong, Sydney and Tokyo, Percival will be in bed-and-breakfast inns or youth hostels. Her luggage for travel to these and other cities is one carry-on bag.

She acknowledges that, without husband, children or other ties, it is easier for her to liquidate and leave. But reaching that decision was not easy.

Roni Hicks, her boss and friend, was her No. 1 support.

"I thought she would feel betrayed and feel I was ungrateful for everything she'd done for me," Percival said. "Of all the people in my life, she was the most supportive of the trip."

Jeff Lipscomb, triathlete and stockbroker, was No.2.

"He feels I won't be happy, truly happy, until I take the time to do this. For me to stay just for him would eventually catch up with both of us and destroy the relationship. Both of us really want it to work, so, even though it will be tough, we're hopeful and optimistic."

API chapter sets meeting

The Permian Basin chapter of the American Petroleum Institute has scheduled a meeting for Oct. 1 at Greentree Country Club. The speaker will be Roger Hemminghaus, president of Diamond Shamrock Refining and Marketing Co., who will speak on "Refinery Issues."

Social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m., with dinner at 6:30. Cost of the meal is $15, and reservations can made by calling 682-4221.

Graduate Center sets five courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer five courses during the first part of October.

"Deals, Farmouts, Options, Dry Hole Contributions," in Principles of Land and Leasing will be held Thursday, Oct. 3, from 7 to 10 p.m. Joe Thomas, District Landman, Exxon Co., U.S.A., will instruct. Fee is $25. Eligible for three CPE credits.

"H2S Safety Training," will be offered Thursday, Oct. 3, from 6 to 10 p.m. The course will teach what H2S is, its past, present, and projected future; what is being done with regards to it; and a general knowledge of safety procedures. Greg Bonner, Javelina Energy Services, Inc. will instruct. Fee is $50.

"Word Processing on a Microcomputer" is scheduled for Oct. 7-9 from 7 to 10 p.m. This course will answer the questions "What is word processing and what can it do for me?" Hands on use of WordStar, the top selling microcomputer word processing program, will enable the student to learn how to create, edit, and print documents. It will also teach the student how to merge data into documents to create "form letters." Ted Windecker, president, T.R. Windecker, Inc., will instruct. Fee is $90. Eligible for 9 CPE credits.

"Oil and Gas Office Systems - There Really is a Better Way," is set for Oct. 8 from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This course focuses on small independent oil and gas producers,support personnel, and anyone wanting exposure to oil and gas office management. Yolane Hartsfield, owner, TYMD Production Systems, will instruct. Fee is $120. Eligible for seven CPE credits.

"How to Manage People at Work" will be held Oct. 8 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Many individuals who have the technical skills needed to perform their jobs lack the necessary ability to manage people effectively. This course will help develop the confidence and skills needed to deal successfully with others. MarionKimberly, an individual, marriage, family, group and career counselor, will instruct the course. Fee is $85. Eligible for eight CPE credits.

Nestle plans closing Libbys headquarters, production facilities

New York Times News Service

CHICAGO — Nestle Holdings Inc., the U.S. subsidiary of Nestle S.A., the giant Swiss-based food company, said Wednesday that it would be closing the headquarters and food production facilities of its Libby, McNeill & Libby division within the next six to nine months. The closings will idle 655 employees. Both facilities are situated here.

The plant's distribution center will be closed in the next 9 to 15 months, the company added.

Libby, which got its start shortly after the Civil War as a processor of corned beef, has been a Nestle unit since 1970.

James M. Biggar, president and chief executive of Nestle Holdings, said that Libby's product lines, which include the Libby name, would be split between two other Nestle divisions: the Los Angeles-based Carnation Co. and the Nestle Foods Corp., based in White Plains. The Libby label and the other brand names will be retained by Carnation and Nestle Foods, the company said.

Biggar said, "Where feasible, Libby people will be transferred to Carnation or Nestle Foods."

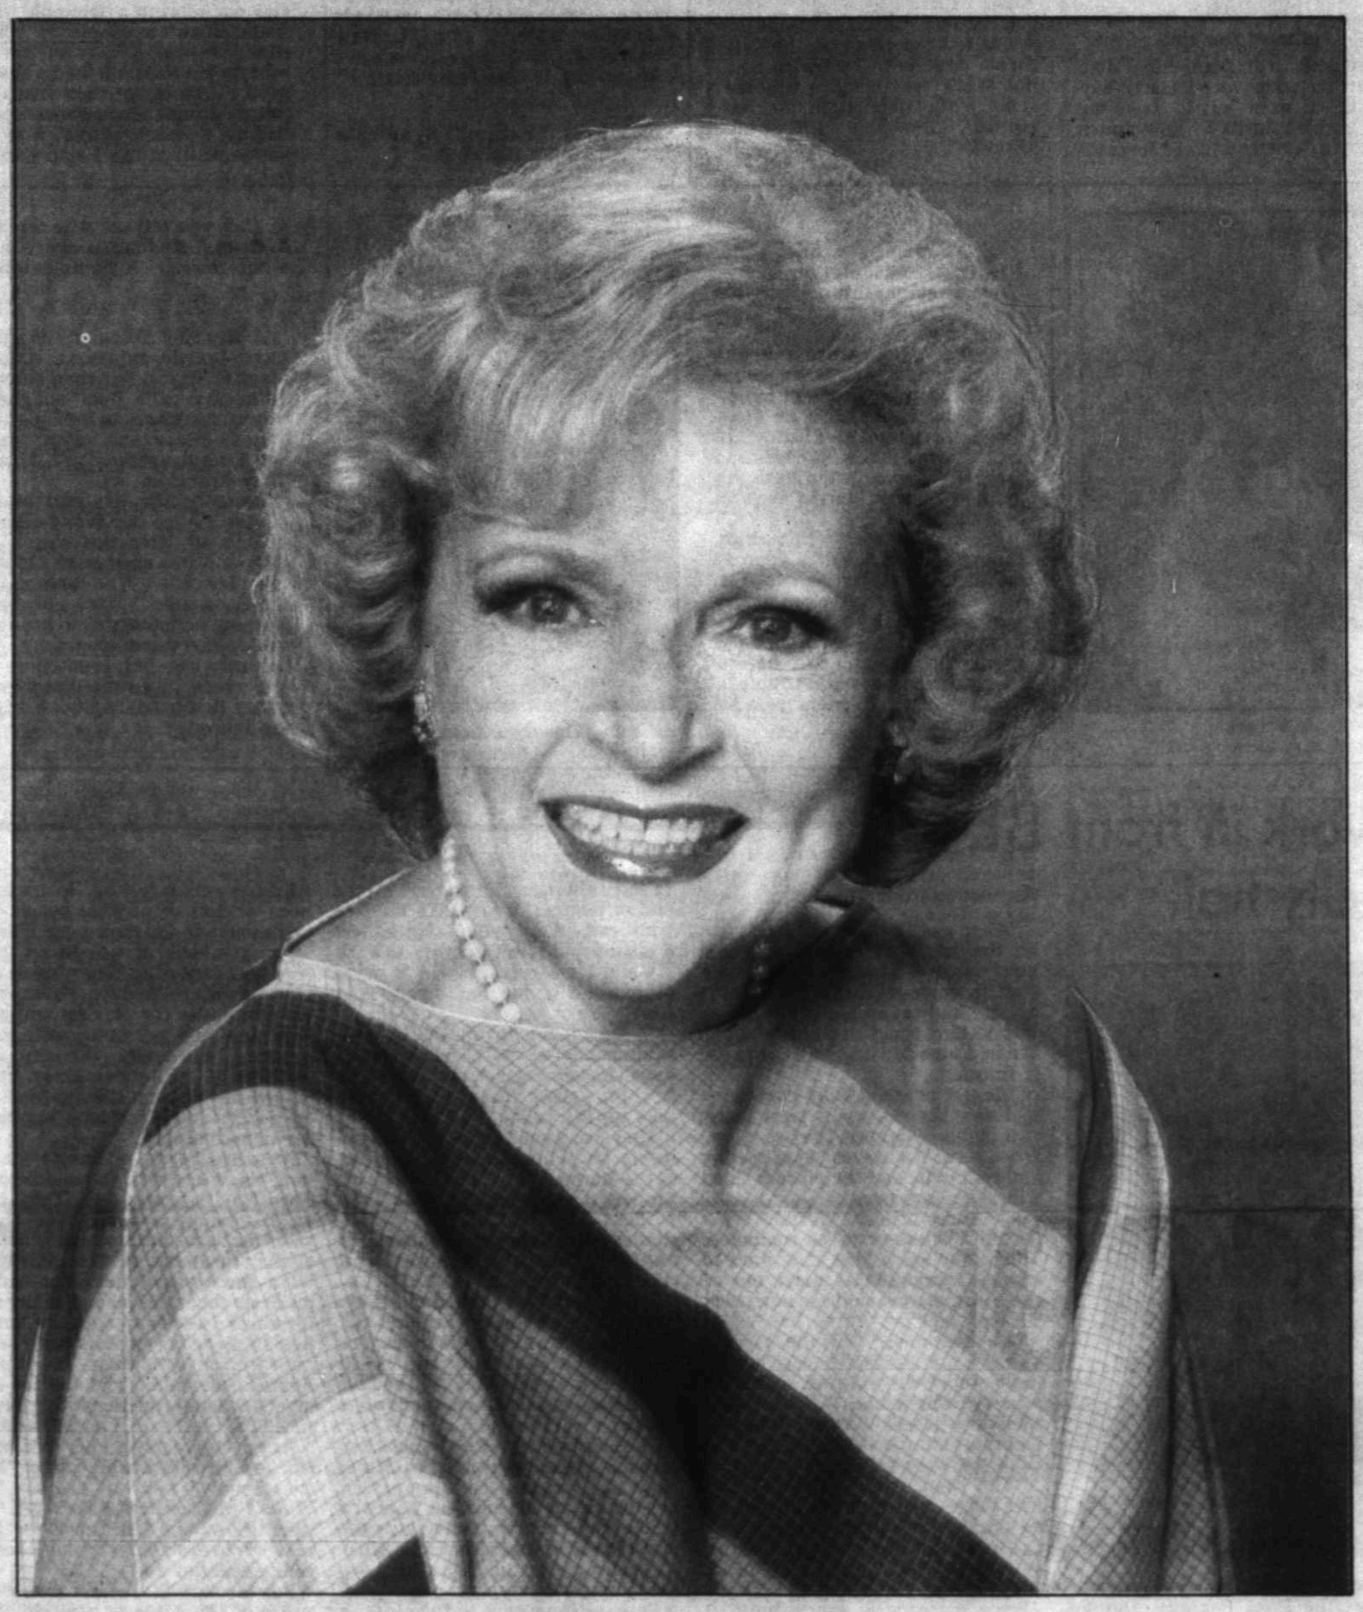
Betty White's Pet Love



Actress Betty White, one of the stars of NBC's new series "The Golden Girls," is very active in the care and support of animals.

When national advertisers assembled recently to be shown NBC's new season series, they viewed 10-minute clips of everything, except "The Golden Girls" — the Saturday night series pilot starring Betty White, Bea Arthur, Rue McClanahan and Estelle Getty — was shown in toto.

And what was the gentlemen's reaction to what might seem a distaff series? They howled with laughter, applauded and gave it a standing ovation. Obviously, writer Susan Harris, whose credits include segments of "All in the Family" and "Maude" and director Jay Sandrich, who was responsible for "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and for every episode of the "Bill Cosby Show," have come up with something special.

It's the story of four independent women — two widows, a divorcee and her mother sharing career interests and spending their golden years together in Miami.

"What fun we've had filming it!" says Ms. White. "Everyone has been so dear and so positive; our characters are so funny and human. Everybody has an aunt or mom who is still busy and energetic, interested in men and with a kind of wisdom, sometimes a trifle addled, which cuts through everything.

"In a world where so often the attitude toward women over 45 is 'forget it,' these women are marvelous individuals, and their adventures are universal."

Ms. White explains, "I have a lot of scripts sent me, and you can't believe the garbage! Then all of a sudden, here was 'Golden Girls,' a dynamite script that knocked my socks off. I read it first to create the part of Blanche which would certainly have been type-casting.

"Blanche is romantic and just Southern enough to suggest moonlight and magnolias. She has a lot of beaus and is what you might call Betty-White-enthusiastic. I loved her. Then somehow, in the transition, all of a sudden, Jay suggested, 'Why don't you look at Rose?' 'Rose?' I thought, 'I love Blanche.'

"Then I read with Rose in mind and fell in love with Rose because she's completely different from anything I've ever done, just as Blanche is different from anything Rue McClanahan has ever done. So I'm Rose and she's Blanche, and as she said so perfectly the other day, 'I'm playing you, and you're playing me!'

"She's right. She brings values to Blanche I'd never have thought of. I'd have played it 'what you see is what you get.' It would have been so easy. Instead I'm Rose and that's acting. Rose, you understand, is a nice warm lady just a little bit out to lunch. She has been a widow 15 years and still likes to talk about her husband in the present tense.

"She takes everything literally. If someone should say, 'I'm so hungry I could eat a horse,' she would call the SPCA. She's not too contemporary, not to quick, and she is scared of Bea (who plays Dorothy), completely intimidated by Bea. Anything Bea says, Rose does. A total innocent. To her, life is a kind of musical comedy, and she can't wait to see how it turns out."

White explains, "She is not unaware of today's life. She just can't quite...well, let's say she marches to her own drum. She is a grief consultant, counseling people who are dealing with grief, and she's very good at that, merely unaware that she has problems too."

Laughter...None is more joyous than Ms. White's. She is living proof of joy despite grief and problems of which she has been deeply aware.

She sits in the big chair in her Brentwood farmhouse living room wearing a brilliant, blue velvet lounge suit and her inimitable, dimpled smile, holding close to either side and in her lap, "the kids": Timothy, the coal-black 8-year-old miniature poddle who spent so many happy years with her and her late husband, Allen Ludden; TK (Timmy's Kitty), the black cat who came to dinner; and Cricket, the bichon Frise pale-beige cuddler whom she met in Oakland when she was on tour two years ago promoting her book, "Betty White's Pet Love."

"We must have been on a collision course. It was love at first sight. He kept showing up each time I was to autograph my book. They had these adorable puppies as atmosphere. I managed to walk away from him each time. I flew back to Los Angeles, and the next day phoned to say, 'Keep that little dog for me. I'm coming back to get him.'"

"The kids" — these four-footed members of the family — are the ones who add so much joy to her daily life ("otherwise I'd be a loner") and who comforted her since Ludden's death in June 1981.

As she has expressed it so well in her book, "Life does not come equipped with an instruction manual and neither does death. Allen and I had worked together on and off during almost 18 years of marriage, but in our private life we were always very much a team. As well as lovers, we were each other's critic, editor, fan and friend. While we had two long years to get used to the idea of his dying, when he died, I was shattered."

There was an outpouring of love, of course, from friends and family and from the public who had known them both from television. Ms. White's mother was incredible support. She is ill now, but she was well then and was "a great help — moving in when I needed and pulling back when I needed space."

Ms. White says, "She was really classy. So many people move in on you and you think, 'I'll never get out from under.' Time is the only thing, time and work and the fact that we had such happiness. Oh, yes. No regrets, no guilts. Whatever we thought, we told each other. None of those little naggy things that worry you. There's a personal security in having a relationship like that.

"You know the world isn't going to fall away from you. You have a personal problem, but the world will go on and you just have to climb back aboard. You've had happiness, lost it, had it again. Even the blackest time will pass. If sometimes you want to utter a primal scream...well, what I do is go to Carmel where we knew such joy.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. I've never read any personal information about Anthony Hopkins. Could you fill me in?
M.L.F.
Atlantic City, N.J.

A. He's 47, from Port Talbot, Wales, the only child of bakery owners who, envisioning a more elevated life for him, sent him to an expensive boarding school which he hated. Returning from school, he worked on his father's bread van and in a steel mill before joining the Royal Artillery.

After all of that, he drifted into acting in a major way: at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts. A few years in provincial theater followed, as did an audition for the National Theater and its director, Laurence Olivier.

For that audition, Hopkins chose a scene from "Othello," in which Olivier was then appearing. Olivier's response to the scene: "I don't think I'll lose any sleep tonight, but would you like to join us?"

While at the National, Hopkins gave a number of standout performances, including one in

Anthony Hopkins

"Macbeth" with Diana Rigg. However, he wasn't particularly happy there, so he left to strike out on his own. In 1967, while understudying Olivier onstage, he made his film debut as Richard the Lion-Hearted in "A Lion in Winter."

Other fine performances have followed in the films "Magic," "The Elephant Man" and last year's "The Bounty," among others. In 1974, Hopkins moved to New York to star in "Equus" on Broadway. When the play moved to Los Angeles, so did he, explaining at the time that "I always wanted to be a movie star, to be famous and rich."

Ironically, while living in Los Angeles, he did a greater number of TV movies and miniseries, starting with "QB VII," "The Lindbergh Kidnapping Case," for which he won an Emmy, the remake of "Dark Victory" and "The Bunker," in which he portrayed Adolf Hitler.

Recently, though, Hopkins seems to have given up the California beaches to return to London. He's just bought a house there while starring in the National Theater's hit play "Pravda."

Q. Can you tell me about Sam Neill from "Reilly: Ace of Spies"? Is he American or English and how old is he?
L.S.
Kansas City, Kan

A. He's 36, English, the son of a British army officer, but he was born in Ireland and raised in New Zealand, which is where he got his start as an actor. He has spent some time recently in Britain and the U.S. filming, however. Look for him soon in the film "Plenty" and in the miniseries "Kane and Abel," due to air on CBS this fall.

Anything you'd like to know about prominent personalities? Write JOSIE: SUNDAY WOMAN magazine, 235th E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. Sorry, we can't answer any letters individually.

Q. I really love the actress Jean Arthur, who did so many good movies with Cary Grant, Jimmy Stewart, etc. Could you tell me more about her?
Mrs. J. Wallin
Mt. Prospect, Ill.

A. She was born Gladys Georgianne Greene in New York's Washington Heights 77 years ago and was drawn to Hollywood after a film company executive saw and ad for which she'd posed while in high school. While there, as you said, she did a number of very good movies such as "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "You Can't Take it With You," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," and "Only Angels Have Wings."

She left Hollywood, though, and came to Broadway, scoring a triumph with "Peter Pan" in 1950 and not scoring a triumph with "Saint Joan" a couple of years later.

In the mid-'60s, she had a short-lived TV series but then virtually retired from show business, preferring to teach acting, first at Vassar, then at the North Carolina School of the Arts. Her well-known insecurity and need for privacy were among the reasons given. Most recently, she's been living quietly in Carmel, Calif.

Jean Arthur

Q. I would like to know if Prince is ever going to do another movie and if he has truly stopped touring.
S.H.G.
Edinburgh, Texas

A. We asked an associate of the Elusive One, and she confirmed that you could count on him to make at least one more movie. Something called "Under the Cherry Moon" is being assembled right now for him. Regarding touring, he has definitely stopped, at least for the present.

Prince

Q. We sometimes hear about Brooke Shields' mother but we never hear anything about her father. Is he still living? Mary Costa, Tulare, Calif.

A. Yes. His name is Frank Shields Jr., and he's an executive of an executive placement company. Through him, Brooke qualifies for Social Register listing: His father was Francis X. Shields, a tennis champion in the 1930s; his mother, Princess Marina Torlonia of Rome.

Because of their backgrounds, they didn't particularly approve of their son's marriage to Teri Schon, a Seventh Avenue model-restaurant manager, and the marriage dissolved before Brooke was a year old. She still sees her father, though, and has a couple of half-brothers and sisters from his second marriage.

Brooke Shields

Q. Can you tell me who Shelley Winters' husbands were and what she's been doing lately?
Janet B.

A. Her first husband was a Chicago textile salesman named Mack P. Mayer. She then entered what she calls her "spaghetti years": marriages to Italian actors Vittorio Gassmann (with whom she has a daughter, Tory, 32) and Tony Franciosa.

Recently, she was part of the all-star "Alice in Wonderland," due to air later this season on CBS, and was onstage in Chicago in a play called "The Rooster and the Snowangel." She's also been working on the sequel to her very well-received autobiography. Apparently she has even more to tell, which, given the gossip level of her first installment, is intriguing indeed.

Ex-Midlander's work in front of San Angelo's city hall

SAN ANGELO — John J. Vinklarek, art instructor at Angelo State University, has had a lifesize bronze figure depicting a firefighter rescuing a small child erected in front of San Angelo's city hall and auditorium.

Vinklarek, a former Midlander, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F.V. Vinklarek of Midland and a 1969 graduate of Midland High School. He received his bachelor of fine arts from Texas Tech University and his master of fine arts from the University of Oregon.

He has done other momentual sculpture works including a wood carving erected in a city park in Lubbock while he was an undergraduate at Texas Tech.

The 6-foot tall sculpture by Vinklarek was unveiled at ceremonies marking the 100th anniversary of the San Angelo Fire Department. The sculpture, entitled "Helping Hands," was selected by the school children of San Angelo through a contest held earlier this year. The statue was commissioned by the San Angelo Firefighters.

A time capsule was placed in the stone pedestal of the sculpture which contains fire department memorabilia. the bronze statue was cast at the Hoka Foundry, Dublin, Texas.

Guitarist-pianist plays at Custer's

Classical guitarist and pianist Henry Lewis is performing Tuesdays through Saturdays at Custer's, 2800 N. Big Spring St.

Lewis begins at 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, for happy hour, and at 8 p.m. Saturday. The Lounge is open until midnight Tuesday through Thursday and until 1:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Lewis has just recently released "Jalapeno Lips" through Burgundy Records.

BETTY

"Allen and I had bought land right on the water at Point Lobos and built our own house. We were halfway through when we found that my darling was on a one-way street. But nothing could stop our building. We had such fun and he lived to see it finished.

"He got to see it fully completed and slept there, actually slept there, two nights. Glorious! The sea is our front yard. The waves come peeling and rolling in, and the place is filled with Allen's presence."

Ms. White reflects, "I know some people don't want to be reminded. When they lose a love, they want to change everything — move out of the house, start something new, start all over. Not me. I'd be lost."

She continues, "All the joy we knew is still in this house, in this room where we're sitting. Allen and I adored this house. We were both such busy people. We'd come back to it each evening as to a shell. This was were we were safe.

"The same with Carmel. It was half house, half boat. He helped design it. We'd go up on vacations, pick drawer handles, carry around swatches of color to match to fabrics and to paint. We picked everything. Allen's presence is everywhere. It makes me feel safe and I still go — it balances the pressures."

She reflects, "For a while I tried getting there once a month. If I'd go in early February, I'd be back by the end of March. I'd just take the two 'kids' and we'd drive up. We go less often now that my mother is with me and I am responsible for blood counts and giving her insulin and stuff.

"I don't feel alone up there. I feel safe, anchored with memories. I have Tim and Cricket, and Doris Day is within yelling distance. She lives a mile up the valley."

They are good friends and animal lovers. Ms. White has been president of the Morris Animal Foundation for the last three years. This is a fund without government help which studies specific health problems for canines, felines, equines and wildlife.

It has an advisory board of six top scientists to evaluate proposals. Of the proposals which come in and are scientifically evaluated, the board then has to decide which proposals are valid, nonrepetitive and most needed.

"It is better to go through us than through the universities" Ms. White explains, "because we are not paying any overhead or salaries. There is ample government money to take care of food animals like cattle. That all comes under the FDA. What we are talking about are companion animals — so important to the old, the young, the handicapped, and to everyone with problems of any kind."

Ms. White explains, "Pets, I discovered long ago, always seem to know what a person is feeling. Reams have been written about what people can and should do for their pets. When I wrote my book, it was to tell how pets take care of us. They lower our blood pressure, reduce stress, provide an outlet for playing, mitigate loneliness and promote feelings of intimacy, continuity, security and well-being. Mine certainly have helped me pull my life together after Allen's death and have enriched me immeasurably."

As president of the Morris Foundation, Ms. White is in the middle of a huge funding campaign. They had an $11-million campaign for three years and now, within eight months of their goal, are at $9.5 million.

"In three years that's not bad! I make speeches, travel and really dig for funds. I also work with the American Humane Society and have been a zoo trustee for 10 years. The Morris Animal Foundation and the zoo are my two main functions. Whatever time I have left over, I do television."

Again laughter, for her program will be altered drastically. Since "Mama's Family" went off the air, Ms. White's appearances have been on game shows and talk shows "which kind of keeps things going, keeps your eyelashes on."

But through the years, she's well aware of the rigors of a weekly TV show. Ms. White began her professional life in 1949 as Los Angeles's first woman disc jockey, as Al Jarvis's Girl Friday, then as his replacement. Then she was doing "The Betty White Show" mornings on on NBC and "Life with Elizabeth," the weekly series which won her her first Emmy.

It was a schedule which left no room for fun, parties, dates or adequate sleep. She went on to become the game-show darling and the talk-show favorite and to win more Emmys: two in 1975-1976 for her role of Sue Ann (the happy homemaker) on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and one as hostess of the NBC daytime game show "Just Men," in 1983.

The MTM years were especially happy ones because of the camaraderie everyone shared. "This program has the same atmosphere as the old MTM days. We're all encouraged to contribute."

It's important to have joy behind the scenes as well as on camera, and no one is better at promoting it than Betty White. In one upcoming script, she smuggles a man into her room, and he subsequently dies. The next morning she has to go down and tell Dorothy, Blanche and Estelle that, well, she has this man in her room. And then, incidentally, that he's dead!

As she tells about it, Timmy and Cricket watch her face and wag their tails. She has such vitality. Her inner glow is so enhanced by her maturity ("I wouldn't be five minutes younger. It takes so long to learn anything") — she is indeed a Golden Girl.

Not even O'Toole can save 'Creator'

Forrest

"Creator" is a bizarre, uneven amalagam of science fiction, teen sex comedy and "Love Story."

Peter O'Toole stars as a scientist — considered mad by many of his colleagues — who has been cultivating the cells of his dead wife for 30 years, waiting for the technology to regrow her from scratch.

That doesn't exactly sound like the kind of film one would find O'Toole in; Vincent Price sounds like a much more likely candidate.

O'Toole has tackled many offbeat roles before. He was wonderful as the obsessed director in 1980's "The Stunt Man" and as an alcoholic matinee idol in 1982's "My Favorite Year." He was even good playing an English nobleman who thought he was both Jesus Christ and Jack the Ripper in the caustic 1972 dark comedy "The Ruling Class."

O'Toole is easily the best thing in "Creator." He exudes charm and floats lightly above the story's poorly conceived science fiction underpinnings. He can even make wisecracks about Hegel and Heisenberg's Uncertainty Principle sound hilarous.

His co-star, Vincent Spano, though, seems to have wandered in from one of this summer's "Back to My Real Weird Genius Future Science Project" teen comedies.

Spano, as O'Toole's lab assistant, is relentlessly puppy-dog cute, owns a cute robot and falls in love with an almost unbearably cute coed, played by Virginia Madsen.

Apparently, we're supposed to believe that Ms. Madsen's character is a sensitive intellectual because, while showering nude with Spano, she says, "I can't believe I'm doing this; it's so middle class."

Mariel Hemingway, on the other hand, is downright seedy as the unintellectual, salty teen-ager who O'Toole hires after putting out a want-ad reading "Fertile Female — Will Train."

Ms. Hemingway, who somehow manages to be both cute and gratingly obnoxious at the same time, is terribly misplaced. Her character seems to have mistakenly been pulled out of a John Irving novel — "Hotel New Hampshire," perhaps — and plopped down into the wrong movie.

By pairing O'Toole with Ms. Hemingway and Spano with Ms. Madsen, "Creator" gives the audience not just one, but two thoroughly contrived romances. The contrived romance between Spano and Ms. Madsen also leads directly into a contrived illness.

Lucky for her, Ms. Madsen gets to spend this extremely embarrassing part of the movie lying in a coma. Unluckily, both Ms. Hemingway and Spano are conscious and moving about.

Ms. Hemingway moves right into an overwrought fit of jealousy about O'Toole's undying devotion to his late wife's cell culture. Meanwhile, Spano manages to use up an entire repetoire of patently artificial emotions at the comatose Ms. Madsen's bedside.

By this point, even O'Toole's crisp performance and the film's quirky humor can't save "Creator." Only divine intervention, perhaps, would have been enough to really bring this awkwardly created movie to life.

"Creator," rated R, for strong language, brief nudity and some sexual content, is now showing at the Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

David Lee Forrest is film critic of the Reporter-Telegram.

Ice Capades show set to close

ODESSA — Ice Capades' newest revue "Dream World" closes today at Ector County Coliseum.

Featured in this year's edition are World Professional Champion, Robert Wagenhoffer; U.S. Professional Champion, Vicki Heasley; pair skaters Tricia Burton and Burt Lancon; adagio artists Tony Paul and Terry Pagano; new soloists Priscilla Hill, Jeff LaBrake and Lesley Perceily; and comedy partners Biddy and Baddy and Dave 'n' Joey.

"Children of all ages will be captivated by the fantastic travels of 'Alice in Wonderland," says Kelly Akers, a spokesperson for Ice Capades. "In an adventure through Danceland, Alice meets the Mad Hatter, Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum and the March Hare. It's a journey you'll never forget."

Special black lighting is used in several numbers, including, "Six Sexy Strangers" and the show's finale, "Star Time."

Tickets are priced at $7 through $9. There are special prices for youths, senior citizens and groups. For ticket information or to charge tickets by phone call 1-366-3541. Ice Capades' Odessa run is sponsored by the Chuck Wagon Gang. Tickets for today's 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. performances may be purchased at the door.

City officials desire more street cars

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — On the 150th birthday of New Orleans' streetcar line, officials are feverish with streetcar desire.

Thirty-five 1923-vintage cars clatter and clang down the 13-mile track between oaks and mansions lining historic St. Charles Avenue.

But streetcar buffs and transportation officials want more cars for the line. They've launched a drive to recover those that were given to at least 17 cities in 1964, when routes were disbanded in an age of less nostalgia.

"We'd like to find all of the streetcars that once criss-crossed the city of New Orleans," said Cynthia Reeves, a director of the private nonprofit "Bring our Streetcars Home" committee.

"When the Canal Street line was discontinued, most of the cars were cut up and incinerated," Reeves said. "Others were practically given away. If you had a truck and $700, you had a streetcar."

The Regional Transit Authority, which runs the city's transportation system, has tracked down many of those cars. They are scattered throughout the country, sitting outside museums, serving as restaurants, offices and — in one case — a corn crib for cows, she said.

Less than two weeks ago, the first of them came home. No. 919, which had been a tourist attraction in the Dallas State Fair Park for the past 20 years, was sold back to the city for $70,000.

Rusted and dilapidated, it's sitting in the original streetcar barn, where crews say they'll make 919 look like new.

Negotiations are underway to get another car from Dallas and one from Atlanta soon, said Karen Wilson-Sider, a spokeswoman for the transportation agency.

Every year, the red and green cars on the St. Charles line carry more than six million passengers on a 60-cent ride — kids to school, grown ups to work and tourists on a joy ride.

It's known as the oldest continuously operated streetcar line in the world.

On September 26, 150 years ago, the first steam-operated streetcars took folks downtown for 25 cents. Anniversary rides were free on Saturday. Weekend events included a streetcar parade, jazz bands and the city's biggest-ever block party.

In the 1840's mules and then steam dummies pulled the cars. Four lines perservered in the 1860's, despite Union occupation and years of rule by soldiers.

Finally electric railways were introduced at the world's fair in New Orleans in 1884, when two models hit the big show.

But it wasn't until Feb. 1, 1893, that the first electric streetcar made its way down St. Charles Avenue.

The electric cars multiplied and saw their heyday in the 1920's, the golden age of the streetcar.

Nearly 700 cars on 26 lines travelled virtually everywhere in and around the city. Each line was named for the street it travelled or a particular destination.

The Magazine, West End, Slaughterhouse, French Market, Spanish Fort, Cemetary and Napolean Avenue "Royal Blue lines" were among the most travelled.

The Desire streetcar, immortalized by Tennessee Williams, was actually one of many cars that ran to Desire Street beginning in 1923.

In 1948, it was replaced by a new form of transportation. Today, a bus named Desire roams downtown.

Only one line operates now. The cars making the St. Charles run were built in 1923 by Perley Thomas, a company that makes buses now. New parts and steel wheels for the trolleys are made right in the barn's shop — often by hand.

Frank Nettles, who's been repairing New Orleans streetcars for 38 years, said for the most part the cars run better than buses.

Occasionally the wiring in the trolley pole needs reworking, he said. The pole slides along a wire and feeds electrical power to the motor.

The cars rarely travel in reverse. When an operator reaches the end of the line, he reverses the passenger seats, sits at the duplicate controls on the other end and goes the other way.

Frank Fassy replaces the mahogany seats occasionally or repairs the hand pulls that keep standing passengers upright when the car sways from side to side.

"We don't change anything," he said. "We only got 35 left. Even the shade rollers we use over and over again."

Most of the maintenance equipment is as old as the streetcars, Nettles said, but it does the job.

"We've got 60-year-old cars running on a 150 year-old-track, repaired by 100 year-old-equipment," Reeves said. "It's done a darn good job."

To Marie Finhold, 63, the streetcar is more than just a way to get around. It's an engineering wonder rivaled only by the steamboat.

In 1943, she was hired as a "conductorette." Women weren't usually hired for the job, but the war had made it a necessity. As soon as the soldiers came home, the women were dismissed.

But dismissal came sooner than that for Ms. Finhold. When her boss found out she was only 19, he was forced to fire her under minimum age rules.

In 1973, after she left the convent, Marie was rehired as a streetcar operator and soon became known as "the flying nun" of the tracks.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Art Outreach slated

The series of Art Outreach programs that are co-sponsored by the Midland Parks and Recreation Department and Midland Arts Assembly will hold its first program from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Saturday at Midland Park Mall.

This first session is titled "Blazing Banners" and participants will paint their own colorful and unique banner to be displayed in the mall.

The series of programs is designed for kindergarten through sixth graders to promote fun cultural activities. The program will be located in the mall's east end near Jerry's Perfect Pets.

A maximum of 40 children can participate and a parent or guardian must sign in each child. There is no charge and refreshments will be served.

Other outreach events are:

— Nov. 2, sock puppet theater and puppet making; Dec. 7, Christmas rhythms; Jan. 18, Kick up your heels and all that jazz; Feb. 8, The arm of liberty reaches far; March 1, kaleidoscope kolor.

For more information call the Parks and Recreation Department, 683-4281, extension 317.

Bodmer exhibit to continue

The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., major exhibition of the fall, "Karl Bodmer's Journey through America," is up through Nov. 3.

The museum acquired the complete portfolio of hand-colored aquatint engravings by Bodmer which illustrate the book "Travels in the Interior of North America" by Prince Maximilian of Wied, Germany. This acquisition was made possible, in 1984, through money raised locally.

The exhibit features Bodmer's entire portfolio of 81 hand-colored aquatint engravings, three original watercolors on loan from the Joslyn Museum, Omaha, Neb., and artifacts from museums around the country.

Docented tours of this exhibit may be arranged by contacting Sue-Ann Goodman, curator of education, at 683-2882.

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. There is no admission charge to view exhibits at the museum.

Final derby to be Oct. 6

The Coors Wolves, the San Angelo Super Chicken, The Skoal Bandit and Wilbur the Playful Freckle-Faced Gorilla will be on hand when the final demolition derby in a series of three being sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions Club begins at 2:30 p.m. Oct. 6 at Twin Cities Speedway.

Twin Cities Speedway is located 15 miles west of Midland on Highway 80. Capacity crowds have attended the previous derbies. Gates open at noon Oct.6. Cost of admission for spectators is $6.50 for adults, $2 for ages six to 11 and those younger are admitted free.

Entry fee for a car in the derby is $25 per-car. Individual or team entries are accepted. A cash prize of $500 is being given for the most cars entered in a derby team as well as a 6-foot trophy. No experience is necessary. The derby is open to anyone who wants to test his or her skill in wiping out the competition. Pre-entry deadline for derby cars is Oct. 5.

For more information or to enter the derby, call J.A. "Monty" Coldwell, a member of the Midland Suburban Lions Club, 683-8541.

'Song' to open Friday

"They're Playing Our Song" is next up at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. The Neil Simon musical comedy with music by Marvin Hamlisch and lyrics by Carole Bayer Sager opens Friday and closes Oct. 19.

The story deals with two characters, based in real life upon Hamlisch and Ms. Sager. Characters are Vernon, an Academy Award winning composer, and Sonia, an author of off-beat lyrics for contemporary songs. The story revoloves around the conflict they experience in developing and maintaining a romantic relationship.

In Midland Community theatre's production Renee Spicer will play Sonja, and her three alter-egos will be portrayed by Nancy Cook, Charlotte Larson and Sharon Perkins. Jim Salners will play Vernon, and his alter-egos will be Dennis Anderson, Billy Cook and Oza Whitten. The story will be supported by a chorus which includes Richard Atchley, Becky Engelstad, Ann Fullinwider, Christopher Goree and Kevin Shepel.

The production, which is being staged in the Davis Theatre, will be directed by Michael Spicer. Musical direction is by Susie Roberts. Sharylynn Shaw is the choreographer.

For reservations call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

Hayes book to be reviewed

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum will have a book review on the first lady of American theater, Helen Hayes, Monday. The review will be given by Pat Halberstadt.

Her portrait of Miss Hayes will be drawn from Miss Hayes' autobiography "Helen Hayes: On Reflection," with excerpts from the recent book, Jhan Robbins' "Front Page Marriage."

She will discuss many aspects of Miss Hayes' life including her "growing up" years, her grandmother, Graddy Hayes, and her "loveable" father and "restless" mother, who had ambitious for her daughter.

An Odessa resident for 17 years before moving to Dallas eight years ago, Ms. Halberstadt was well-known in this area for her volunteer work at Permian Playhouse and Midland Community Theatre.

Tickets for the benefit book review, "A Portrait of Helen Hayes," are on sale at the Presidential Museum. They may be obtained by calling 1-332-7123 or by going by the museum, 622 N. Lee St.

Christian concert slated

ODESSA — Sparrow Records' artists Steve Camp and Rick Cua, and Light Records' Rob Frazier have embarked on their first joint United states tour, encompassing more than 40 performances from Aug. 29 through Nov. 23. The three will perform Monday at Odessa's Street Level Youth Outreach.

Billed as "Shake Up Tour '85," the concert series will appear in 44 cities across the country. A specially designed, multi-colored set has been created for the tour.

For more information on this Christian concert call the local promoter, John Cope, 1-368-4051 or 1-362-8195.

Bandy, Stampley to play

ODESSA — In celebration of the first public opening of the newly remodeled Building G of Ector County Coliseum, Moe Bandy and Joe Stampley will perform from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday.

The building has a big dance floor and seating for 3,000. Tickets are priced at $8 in advance and $10 at the door. They may be purchased in Odessa at Luskey's Western Wear and, in Midland, at Wells Boots City.

Quartet's season to start

The Thouvenel String Quartet begins its 1985-86 Chamber Music Series at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium, Midland College.

The concert series includes five performances, Nov. 9, Feb. 1, March 1 and May 11. All are at 8 p.m. at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium. The May 11 concert is part of the Midland Celebration of the Arts Festival.

Season tickets are priced at $25 for adults, $15 for students, $50 for sponsors and $100 for patrons. Patrons and sponsors are listed in the program for each concert of the season. To puchase season tickets by phone call 563-0921.

Also, now is the time for Thouvenel fans to sign up for The Friends of the Quartet. Formed last season, Friends is an organization whose primary goals are to encourage concert attendance and provide general support through volunteer efforts to quartet members as their needs arise. Those interested in becoming members may do so by calling 563-0921.

'School' auditions slated

Auditions for the upcoming Midland Community Theatre production of "School for Wives" will be held at 7:30 p.m. today and Monday in the Redfern Rehearsal Room at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Roles are available for six men and two women. The male roles range in age from 20 to 60. The female roles include one woman who is young and the other may be any age.

The adaptation is a free version of Moliere's comedy by Miles Mallison. The production will be staged Nov. 8-23. Scripts may be checked out at the theater's business office. For more information call 682-2544.

Nero opens MCC season

Midland Community Concerts begins its 1985-86 season Oct. 16 at Midland High School Auditorium when Peter Nero comes to town for one-night only.

Newcomers to Midland may still purchase season tickets by writing Midland Community Concerts, P.O. Box 10836, Midland, Texas 79702. Membership price is $20 for adults and $10 for students through high school.

Other concerts in the series are Duo-Harpists, featuring John Escosa and Michael Rado, Nov. 18; Two Gentlemen of Opera, featuring Abram Morales and Robert McFarland, Jan. 18; Jury's Irish Cabaret, Feb. 24; and William Hall Chorale, March 13.

Individual tickets will not be sold at the door.

Houston band to perform

La Mafia of Houston will perform Friday at the Crown Royal Club.

The benefit dance is sponsored by Crown Royal Hispanic Society. Proceeds go toward scholarship money for Hispanic students.

Tickets, priced at $13 in advance, may be purchased at the Crown Royal Club, Freddies Instant Shopping or from a CRHS member. Tickets will be priced at $15 at the door.

Officers of the society are Cruz Nunez, president; Luis Galan, vice president; Mary Lopez, secretary; and Sylvia Henson, treasurer. Other members are Mr. and Mrs. Marcos Balderas, Mr. and Mrs. A.C. Diaz, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Lopez, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Quiroz and spouses of the officers.

'Stagecoach,' 'Shane' among Westerns at Museum of Southwest

The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., will host a series of classic Westerns beginning Thursday and continuing through October.

Films to be shown include:

— Slim Green: "Master Saddlemaker," will be shown Thursday. Green has been a saddlemaker for over 50 years. This film reviews his years of learning and effort and examines, through the production of a saddle, what it means to become a master.

— Fred Harvey: "The American West" will be shown Thursday. Through images of old photographs, the recollections of former waitresses or Harvey Girls and visits ro cities that once boasted of the Fred Harvey establishments, this film pieces together the intricate and fascinating story of an American entrepreneur's rise to success during a period of great commercial instability.

— "The Westerner" will be shown Oct. 10. Walter Brennan won his third Oscar for his performance as Judge Roy Bean in this 1940 release. Gary Cooper plays the saddle tramp unjustly accused of horse stealing.

— "Stagecoach" will be shown Oct. 17. This 1939 film relates the sage of a westbound stagecoach with eight passengers as it travels through Indian territory. Starring John Wayne, the film was directed by John Ford.

— "Shane" will be shown Oct. 24. In this famous Western, a retired gunfighter heroically adis a family of homesteaders terrorized by a cattle baron and rides off as mysteriously as he came. Released in 1953, the part of the gunfighter is played by Allan Ladd.

Showings will be at 7:30 p.m. Thursdays during October. There is no admission charge.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

Monday, September 30, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Resist peer pressure in the months ahead and you will enjoy great career or business success. Be a leader, not a follower. Set your own goals and follow your own timetable. You will be strengthened by the love and support of those who believe in you. The financial outlook is rosy. A special grant or endowment allows you to continue work on an important project. Be discreet about a romantic mistake. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Irish tenor Kenny Baker, author-Nazi hunter Elie Wiesel, Deborah Kerr and Angie Dickinson, singers Marilyn McCoo, Nancy Ames and Johnny Mathis, Senator James Sasser (D-Tenn.), author Truman Capote.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A conflict between work and home could put a crimp in your social plans. A compromise helps alleviate tension. Someone tests your loyalty -- you pass with flying colors! Romance is triumphant.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A hobby can be turned into a profitable business enterprise. A child plays a key role in an important decision. A loan comes through for a college-bound teen.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Postpone doing those tedious tasks that prevent you from focusing on the real money-makers! An emotionally-charged situation requires delicate handling.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An out-of-town visitor could play havoc with your work or business plans. Offer a sweet diversion! Communicating with a former employer could lead to a lucrative second career.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Taking classes to sharpen your skills could help you land a better-paying job. Complete old business before starting a new project. Loved one wants to spend more time alone with you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Working behind the scenes helps you conserve your energy. Avoid revealing secrets. Good timing is the key to your continued success. Pay bills on time to protect credit rating.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A business or romantic partner could keep you guessing. Let others take the lead and you will find out more. A financial situation shows improvement. New benefits come from an unexpected quarter.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A new interest adds excitement to your life. A change of lifestyle attracts some fascinating people to your side. Be discreet when dealing with a jealous member of the opposite sex.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The pieces of a financial puzzle fall into place. You are the winner! Talk candidly with mate or partner if something is troubling you. It is time to assert your independence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Mate or partner comes to your aid with previously-hidden resources. A financial embarrassment is averted. Recycling an old project creates new profits. Romance receives an unexpected nudge.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Community work is an appealing option for the retired or unemployed. Your reticence in discussing business works to your advantage. Check the credentials of a new love interest.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Teamwork is the key to larger profits. A hasty decision could prove costly. Take your wins and losses in stride. Flexibility wins you new friends and allies. Romance looks very promising.

Former Midlander to show works at Stables Gallery

Former Midlander Dorothy Peterson is in town today to open a showing of her work, "Plus Five: 1980-1985," in the Stables Gallery at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Now residing in Roswell, N.M., Ms. Peterson lived in Midland for a number of years and was an active volunteer at the Museum during the 1970s. This exhibit features works created by her since her return to New Mexico five years ago.

She received her bachelor of science degree from the University of New Mexico and her master of arts degree from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. She also studied art at the Dallas Museum School with Texas artist Otis Dozier and has attended workshops given by Millard Sheets and Robert Wood.

Her subjects come from the people and the landscape of the Southwest. She works in a variety of medium, including oil, watercolors, muxed media, graphics in pen and ink, lithography and serigraphy. Her work has appeared in "Saving the Southwest," a cookbook featuring favorite Southwestern recipies and in Roswell Symphony publications.

Ms. Peterson has received numerous awards, including, Watercolor New Mexico, 1982, second award, New Mexico Water Color Society, Museum of Albuquerque; and the New Mexico Watercolor Society Invitational Exhibition, 1984, Honorable mention, Thompson Gallery, University of New Mexico.

Active in the arts community, Mrs. Peterson is a member of the Texas Watercolor Society and the New Mexico Watercolor Society. She was appointed commissioner of the New Mexico Arts Division in 1983 and, in 1984, she was elected to be an artist's representative to the New Mexico Arts and Crafts fair.

Her work has been shown in regional and national competitions and in solo shows throughout southeastern New Mexico and West Texas. Since returning to New Mexico in 1980, her showings have included the New Nexico Watercolor Society exhibits, the New Mexico Arts and Crafts Fair and the New Mexico State Fair.

Museum hours are 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. All exhibits are open to the public free of charge.

Photos, sculptures on display

Showing through Oct. 12 at Gallery 1114, 1114 Big Spring St., are photographs by Michael Banscbach and ceramic sculptures and paintings by Boyd Harris.

Harris is from New Mexico where he received a bachelor of science degree in geology. He pursued art as an undergraduate in school. The various cultures in New Mexico, both prehistoric and historic, have influenced Harris' work.

"My sculpture as I execute it, travels along several levels," Harris says of his work.

"My interests in anthropology is of major concern to me as I create a piece. I want to convey a feeling of age, religious icon and consequent abandonment. I make no direct connections to past or present cultures or religions. My sculptures, I hope, could work just as well in alien worlds. I leave it to the observer to make his own connections and judgment."

Banscbach is a graduate of the Colorado School of Mines with a degree in chemical engineering. His artistic interests lie in black and white and color photography.

His current show includes only black and white and is concerned with subject matter ranging from landscapes to abstracts.

Gallery 1114 is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
©1985 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—My partner and I play a five-card major system. As a result, our rebid of a major suit shows six cards. The other night I picked up: ♠84 ♡AJ983 ◇75 ♣AK62

I opened the bidding with one heart and partner responded two diamonds. What am I supposed to do now? Every rebid I could think of was flawed. I settled for three clubs and we got too high. Your help would be appreciated—J.P., Sun City, Ariz.

A.—You start off with a misconception. When you play five-card majors, you would like to show six cards when you rebid your suit. However, sometimes the auction develops in a way that makes that impossible, as in your case.

You argue that you could not rebid hearts, since that would show six. But consider the options. You could not bid two no trump since your hand was unbalanced and you did not have a spade stopper. It is unthinkable to support partner with only two low cards in his suit, and to rebid three clubs would be a high reverse showing a hand at least a king better than you held.

The problem arose because partner's response took away all the bidding room between one heart and two hearts. Had you opened one heart and partner responded one spade or one no trump, then indeed you would be showing a six-card suit by rebidding hearts. With only five hearts, you must have another bid available over either of those responses. On your actual hand you would be able to rebid two clubs, but you would always have either a balanced minimum, in which case you would pass one no trump, or bid one no trump over one spade; or you would be able to raise spades; or you would have a second suit of your own to introduce.

When partner's response takes away all your bidding room, however, you are sometimes forced to rebid a five-card suit.

Church to do musical comedy

"A Musical Comedy of Selected Highlights in the History of First Presbyterian Church of Midland" will be presented in the church's fellowship hall, 800 W. Texas Ave., at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

"Original songs and skits will be performed by an all-star cast of singers and actors," says Bill Pomeroy, narrator for the presentation. Included in the cast are Daphne Pemberton, Louis Kluck, Paula Cahoon, Janet Pollard, Jim Salners, Becky Engelstad, Jack Steele and Tom Roberts. Tony Norris, the church's organist, will accompany the singers on the piano.

Pomeroy calls the show "a delightful concoction of music and fun." It will last for an hour and will follow the 5:30 p.m. Wednesday night supper.

The public is invited to attend.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
©1985 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—My partner and I play a five-card major system. As a result, our rebid of a major suit shows six cards. The other night I picked up: ♠84 ♡AJ983 ◇75 ♣AK62

I opened the bidding with one heart and partner responded two diamonds. What am I supposed to do now? Every rebid I could think of was flawed. I settled for three clubs and we got too high. Your help would be appreciated—J.P., Sun City, Ariz.

A.—You start off with a misconception. When you play five-card majors, you would like to show six cards when you rebid your suit. However, sometimes the auction develops in a way that makes that impossible, as in your case.

You argue that you could not rebid hearts, since that would show six. But consider the options. You could not bid two no trump since your hand was unbalanced and you did not have a spade stopper. It is unthinkable to support partner with only two low cards in his suit, and to rebid three clubs would be a high reverse showing a hand at least a king better than you held.

The problem arose because partner's response took away all the bidding room between one heart and two hearts. Had you opened one heart and partner responded one spade or one no trump, then indeed you would be showing a six-card suit by rebidding hearts. With only five hearts, you must have another bid available over either of those responses. On your actual hand you would be able to rebid two clubs, but you would always have either a balanced minimum, in which case you would pass one no trump, or bid one no trump over one spade; or you would be able to raise spades; or you would have a second suit of your own to introduce.

When partner's response takes away all your bidding room, however, you are sometimes forced to rebid a five-card suit.
