UTPB president named

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — The University of Texas System regents Wednesday named Dr. Duane M. Leach, chancellor of the University System of South Texas in Kingsville since 1980, as the new president of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Leach will replace Dr. V.R. Cardozier, who resigned last August after serving the upper-level university since 1970.

Dr. Donald Rippey, named acting president in October 1982, was asked to apply for the position although he was not among the four finalists considered by regents.

Rippey will remain acting president until Leach assumes his post. No date was announced.

Leach, 48, served from 1977 to 1980 as president of Texas A&I University in Kingsville, and from 1975 to 1977 as president of Northern Montana College in Harve, Mont.

A native of Platte, S.D., he received his doctorate in history and political science from the University of Oklahoma in 1964.

In announcing his appointment, regents said Leach "has extensive teaching experience and also has held a number of administrative offices during his academic career."

"From 1969, when he served as dean of the College of Idaho, and professor of history, through his years of service in Montana, and as a leader of the University System of South Texas, Leach has been active in many state and local organizations," the regents said in their prepared statement.

Leach served as chairman of the Coordinating Board Task Force of School/College Articulation and chairman of Council of Presidents of Public Senior Colleges and Universities of Texas. He recently served on the Governor's Higher Education Management Effectiveness Council and the Governor's Task Force on Higher Education.

Cardozier, who was named UTPB president ad interim in December 1974, was named president in September 1975.

Cardozier said his resignation was based on his public support of four-year status for the university.

Reagan may yet win military aid battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two weeks after appealing to Congress for a bipartisan policy to shore up Central America, President Reagan is making uncertain progress in his battle for increased U.S. military aid.

On Wednesday, the House Foreign Affairs Committee voted 36-1 to approve $65 million to equip and train the Salvadoran Army in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. This is $15 million per year more than the panel's Western Hemisphere subcommittee had recommended.

It is $20 million less than the administration requested, however.

And the committee hedged its recommendation by providing that funds would be cut off 90 days after congressional approval if Salvadoran officials balked at unconditional peace talks with leftist guerrillas.

In El Salvador, Francisco Jose Guerrero, a spokesman for interim President Alvaro Magana, criticized the committee's conditions and said there could be no negotiations with leftist guerrillas.

Guerrero said that if the rebels want to share power they could run candidates in presidential elections next December.

The committee conditionally approved an additional $65 million for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1984, subject to Congress' approval of a report by the president that El Salvador is making satisfactory social reforms.

For both years, $10 million of the aid is earmarked for military training outside of El Salvador and $5 million for medical supplies.

The panel also approved an additional $8.7 million in military aid in the current fiscal year, reversing a previous decision to deny any such assistance.

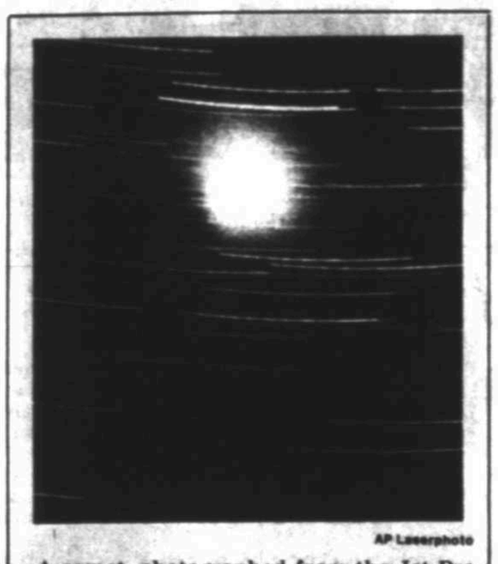

"We are prepared to live with it," William Schneider, undersecretary of state for security assistance, said of the committee's action.

"We are better off than we were when we started in this committee," Schneider said. "From our perspective, you can argue that we are crawling back to where we want to be, but are not getting there."

In contrast, Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., an administration supporter on the committee, said, "We have taken the president, put him in a straitjacket, locked him in a trunk and dropped him into a river."

Hyde voted for the proposal anyway, saying, "If you can't get dinner, get a sandwich."

Liberal Democrats on the committee said they preferred the subcommittee recommendation, which not only called for less money but for tighter restrictions on spending it.

A comet, photographed from the Jet Propulsion Laboratory's Table Mountain Observatory near Wrightwood, Calif., passes near the earth's atmosphere. Bright lines are stars that appeared to move as the telescope tracked the comet.

Comet created global waves

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A comet came so close to earth in 1908 that a piece of the outer space visitor smashed into Siberia, created a shockwave felt around the world and sparked forest fires, an expert says.

There is evidence that a piece of the Comet Encke broke off and collided with the Earth's atmosphere June 30, 1908, over a remote section of Siberia, said James Oberg, a Johnson Space Center scientist.

Oberg reported his findings in the book "UFOs and Outer Space Mysteries."

If a blast similar to the 1908 explosion occurred over heavily populated parts of the U.S., it could kill hundreds of thousands of people with a shock wave larger than an H-bomb," Oberg said.

The comet material, with the consistency of frozen cotton candy, hit with such speed that it created a sonic boom that circled the Earth twice, based on the readings of a barometer in London, Oberg said.

Trees in the Siberian Taiga Forest were felled in a 100-mile wide area and some forests caught fire, he said. The Taiga Forest is in an area sealed off by swamp land in the summer and accessable only after winter has frozen the ground, he said.

A tail of dust left in the upper atmosphere reflected sunlight to Earth for several days and so brightened the London sky that newspapers could be read on the street at night, Oberg said.

The explosion was not investigated for 20 years because of the political upheaval then under way in Russia, he said.

When scientists did visit the area in 1928, he said, they were searching for what they believed to be a meteor. But they were unable to find a crater and experts have concluded that the explosion was caused by a piece of a comet, Oberg said.

Salvadoran village becomes ghost town

CINQUERA, El Salvador (AP) — This once-thriving agricultural community in northeastern El Salvador is now a ghost town.

Fierce fighting between leftist guerrillas and government troops for the past two years have reduced most of the buildings to rubble. There is no running water, little food and there has been no electricity for two years.

After one heated battle earlier this week, the few remaining residents are leaving.

They say they've had enough.

At least 40 civilians — including eight children — and 65 troops were killed when the guerrillas seized Cinquera, 44 miles northeast of the capital, on Sunday and government soldiers drove them out after two days of fighting.

Cordelia Avalos de Hernandez, 56, the mayor, is a nervous wreck. Most of the day, she lies curled up on a mat at the edge of town, sobbing. She was barely coherent when she talked to a visiting reporter.

The pavement around her was littered with spent bullet casings.

She said the rebels looted her little soft drinks-and-groceries store.

"I lost everything. They robbed everything and they were going to kill me," she mumbled, her eyes dazed. "I have two grandsons, they have no mother or father. The guerrillas killed their mother a year ago and I have to support them now. I know how to sew a little."

"I don't have one centavo. I'm going to sell these in Ilobasco," a nearby town, she said, pointing to a little pile of wood she had gathered near her.

Cinquera has been hit several times by the guerrillas since the civil war started in October 1979, but people say never as hard as this. Most of the 5,000 residents have long left, and perhaps a couple of hundred remained.

They too are departing, to join the hundreds of thousands of refugees in El Salvador.

With the loss of population, Cinquera was not too important strategically when the rebels last attacked.

But army authorities were afraid the rebels would use it as a base to attack Cerron Grande, one of the country's two biggest hydroelectric dams on Lake Suchitlan, six miles north, and decided to retake it.

On top of the destruction, there is what people here call "the situation," a nasty local feud that began in 1980 when a dissident priest led the town's leftist sympathizers into the hills to join the guerrillas.

The rightists who remained apparently cracked down hard on some who stayed behind. So when the rebels hit shortly after midnight Saturday, they hit hard — with mortars, grenade launchers and automatic weapons.

Some 30 government troops stationed in the town were killed in the fighting, another 10 who surrendered were lined up and executed. The rebels then went from house to house, rounded up at least eight other suspected army sympathizers and shot them too.

Residents said they recognized some of the rebels as townspeople who had joined the guerrillas along with the priest.

Juan Antonio Bonilla, 22, said some townspeople rounded up to be killed were spared when some rebels recognized them as relatives or old friends. Bonilla is from San Vicente, to the northeast, and was here visiting his wife's relatives at the time.

Julia Tomasino described Cinquera as a peaceful farming community, where people traded produce and tended their small plots of land on the slopes of nearby hills. "It use to be so beautiful here, we had transportation and everything," she said.

"I have nowhere to go but I'm taking the next truck out."

A farmer, who asked not to be identified for fear of reprisals, said Cinquera is now like a ghost town.

Latin American leaders continue talks on Nicaragua

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Four Latin American foreign ministers continue talks today in what is thus far a futile attempt to defuse the Nicaraguan crisis and keep it from escalating into a war with Honduras.

The ministers from Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama met for four hours Wednesday behind closed doors and without advisers or aides. Sources said they reached no agreement and broke off to consult with their respective governments.

The four ministers — known as the Contadora group — planned to meet again today, this time with Panamanian Vice President Jorge Illueca. This is their fourth meeting this year.

The sources, who asked anonymity for diplomatic reasons, said the ministers are studying a possible formula to get talks going between Nicaragua and its Central American neighbors.

Nicaragua has warned of war with Honduras if terrorist raids by Honduran-based exiles do not cease. Officials of the leftist Sandinista regime claim 800 Nicaraguans have been killed since the raids intensified in January.

The Sandinistas also accuse the Reagan administration and the Honduran government of training and arming the rebels, who recently started mouting attacks along the Costa Rican border to the south in their effort to overthrow the Nicaraguan regime.

The Contadora group also is considering, but is expected to reject, a request by Costa Rica for an international peacekeeping force along its border with Nicaragua.

On Monday, Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto appeared before the U.N. Security Council to accuse the United States of waging what he called an undeclared war against Nicaragua.

The council postponed debate on the Nicaraguan crisis to allow the Contadora group to meet and, hopefully, submit its recommendations. The group is named after the Pacific island resort where the ministers first met Jan. 5 and drew up a document recommending that all foreign intervention in Central America cease.

The document also proposed the withdrawal of all foreign advisers from the area, including military advisers.

A total of 55 American noncombat military advisers are assigned to El Salvador and sometimes as many as 150 U.S. advisers help train the armed forces in Honduras. The United States claims there are 2,000 Cuban military advisers in Nicaragua.

Influx 'bordering' on epidemic

Border patrolman addresses Republican women

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

A corrupt government in Mexico that has brought economic woes for its people may be the major cause of the great influx of Mexican nationals in the United States, Border Patrolman James Stone of Big Spring said Wednesday.

James Stone

He was guest speaker at the Midland County Republican Women's Club luncheon at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

"McAllen Sector alone has had a 91 percent increase in apprehensions over the same period last year, and California is worse," said the 14-year Immigration and Naturalization Service veteran. "We're blaming this on food shortages in Mexico, crop failure.... Another thing we blame is the peso devaluation. Used to be, when I was a kid, pesos were 8 to a dollar bill. Now, it's 153 pesos to a dollar.

"Some of them claim they have heard about the amnesty program. They figure if they come over here and stay a while and the amnesty bill goes through, they'll automatically become a citizen. This is not true, but it's what many of them are led to believe.... Also, one thing many of the aliens we question...say is that if they can't find a job, they know they can collect welfare."

The economic desperation in their homeland, he said, leaves many as open prey for smugglers.

"We've noticed...that in the past, groups of four or five men would enter the United States illegally and take a week to get to their destination to get a job," said Stone. "Now, there are groups of 20 to 50 entering the United States, and this includes families from the grandparents on down to the children. However, they do get away from the border a lot faster, due to the amount of smuggling going on.

"These smugglers use anything from a small car to a large U-haul truck or another recent truck. They carry loads of from 20 to 60 people in those trucks.... They charge those people anything from $250 to $3,000."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Snow in Montana and the Dakotas, rain in Minnesota and the Dakotas, and showers in Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee are forecast by the National Weather Service.

Thunderstorm chance continues

Mother Nature may put an end to the hot and muggy weather blanketing the Permian Basin with another chance of thunderstorms and cooler temperatures.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, partly cloudy skies will continue to cover the area with tonight's 10 percent chance of thunderstorms increasing to 20 percent Friday.

Following today's low 90-degree high, temperatures should drop into the middle 50s tonight, climbing only into the lower 80s Friday.

Tonight's southwesterly winds at 10-15 mph should increase to 10-20 mph Friday.

Wednesday's high of 93 was seven degrees below the record high of 100, set in 1962. The overnight low of 67 was 26 degrees warmer than 1931's record low of 41.

A little cooler northern sections Sunday and Monday. Highs Saturday mid 80s to mid 90s. Highs Sunday and Monday near 80 north to mid 90s south. Lows Saturday 70s and mid 60s to mid 70s Sunday and Monday.

Texas skies cloudy

By The Associated Press

Cloudy to partly cloudy skies covered most of Texas today as forecasters expected scattered thunderstorms to continue into Friday.

Light shower activity was noted before dawn from Beeville to Victoria, while patchy fog dotted South and South Central Texas.

Clear skies were noted across the Panhandle.

Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 62 in Amarillo to 77 at Brownsville.

Southerly winds at 10 to 15 mph dominated the state.

Congress nearing missile vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pledge by President Reagan to make a "comprehensive" review of U.S. nuclear arms control proposals has satisfied some congressional critics of the MX missile as Congress nears crucial votes on the giant new nuclear-tipped weapon.

After Reagan's promise was announced in the House Appropriations defense subcommittee Wednesday, the panel voted 9-3 to permit the Pentagon to spend money appropriated six months ago.

A similar result was expected today in the Senate Appropriations Committee, which scheduled a vote this afternoon on whether to free the $560 million for research, development and flight testing of the new missile.

Reagan was "very pleased" by the House panel's vote, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said.

Speakes predicted the Senate vote would be "much more difficult." But that forecast was disputed by committee sources who declined to be identified.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the appropriations panel, planned to try to halt freeing the money "but he doesn't have the votes. They just aren't there," said one source.

Reagan outlined his promise in a letter to Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., an MX critic.

Dicks termed the letter "a good faith initial effort toward a comprehensive and stable arms control policy" and then voted for freeing the MX money in the House subcommittee.

Another critic, Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., said the letter "made it crystal clear to us" that the U.S. proposal at the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) will be changed.

If the votes by the House subcommittee and Senate panel are upheld by the full House and Senate, the Pentagon could build and test the MX.

Still to come are votes on whether to approve the recommendations of a White House commission that 100 MX weapons be put into Minuteman silos near Cheyenne, Wyo., and a small, single-warhead missile be developed.

Wednesday's vote was the second recent win for the MX. Last week, the House Armed Services refused to cut MX money from the proposed 1984 budget.

The White House commission, headed by former national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, also proposed a "new direction" in arms control efforts aimed at limiting nuclear warheads rather than missiles.

Votes on the commission proposals will come as the House and Senate decide the fiscal 1984 budget, which includes money to pay for the proposals.

Reagan has publicly endorsed the Scowcroft panel's findings, but MX critics in Congress had sought a stronger commitment from the White House.

They received it Wednesday, when Reagan said in his letter that "I agree wholeheartedly with the essential theme of the Scowcroft Commission's approach to arms control..."

Reagan promised to review the U.S. proposal at the START talks that resume next month in Geneva "with the intention of developing such modifications as are necessary to reflect the Commission's approach."

The START talks involve long-range nuclear weapons and are separate from another set of U.S.-Soviet negotiations aimed at limiting nuclear weapons in Europe.

Reagan also pledged to "promptly undertake a major effort to bring the proposal of a small, single-warhead ICBM to fruition on a high priority basis" and said he "saw merit" in proposals to create a permanent, bipartisan advisory commission on arms control.

Congress has turned down two previous Reagan administration attempts to build and base the missile the Pentagon says is needed to replace America's aging land-based missile force. The 1,000 Minuteman weapons are the heart of that arsenal, and the Pentagon says they are vulnerable to a first strike by increasingly accurate Soviet weapons.

Reagan, meantime, met for a second day with a group of congressmen to try to win their support for the MX.

The president said he supports the concept of a nuclear "build-down" which calls for destroying two warheads for each new one that is built.

But, he cautioned, "It isn't as simple as it sounds, in order to achieve equality."

MX controversy forcing shift in U.S.-Soviet arms position

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's drive for congressional approval of the controversial MX missile is forcing him to make a shift in the American position in arms control talks with the Soviet Union that could nudge them off dead center.

Reagan's soothing letter Wednesday to key House members sought to swing them behind financing deployment of the missile he has dubbed "the Peacekeeper" and considers essential in bolstering U.S. defenses.

The first test was a ringing victory for the White House: 9-3 approval by a House appropriations subcommittee of Pentagon spending of $560 million in research and development.

The first test at the negotiating table will come June 8 when the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) are resumed in Geneva, Switzerland. They have been deadlocked for 10 months, but Reagan is making major changes in the U.S. approach.

He is preparing to lift or even remove the 850-missile ceiling he proposed for both sides. He intends to prod the two sides toward a single-warhead rocket. And he wants to focus the deliberations on warheads, as recommended by the presidential panel headed by Brent Scowcroft, a former national security adviser.

The missile ceiling was rejected last year by the Soviets as unfair because it would erase the significant lead they have in heavy ground missiles.

Reagan's revised approach could set the stage for a compromise, although the Soviets are likely to try to impose across-the-board limits on bombers and submarine-launched missiles, where the United States has an edge.

At a minimum, the president is registering flexibility on a number of fronts. For instance, he told reporters he "very definitely will look at" a proposal by Sens. William Cohen, R-Maine, Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., to have the United States and the Soviets destroy two nuclear warheads for each new one that is deployed.

All this could brighten the atmosphere in Geneva and possibly reverse the nuclear arms race.

Economic ills contributing to alien influx

Central Americans, meanwhile, pay $500 to $3,000 for being smuggled into the United States, he said. "The price goes higher when they go on up around Chicago."

Stone said smuggling has created great difficulties in apprehension. "Once they get 25 or 30 or 50 miles inside the United States, then we're spread so thin out there it's just an accident if we happen upon them."

Sometimes Mexican nationals, said Stone, "will sell everything they have to make the trip...and when they get up here they're desperate — they don't want to be caught. They'll go to any means to get past the Border Patrol. Sometimes they take chances. They get into airtight vans, where they're gonna run out of air if the door's not opened within a certain amount of time.... Many times they suffocate."

One recent development in the illegal alien situation, he noted, is that more are immigrating from the interior of Mexico.

"It used to be that the Mexican states along the U.S. border contributed the bulk of the illegal alien traffic, but in the recent past this has all changed. They're now coming from the interior, and probably 70 percent of the applications in the past three months have been first-time entrances," Stone said.

Although the Del Rio Border Patrol Sector currently is witnessing an unprecedented flood of illegal aliens, Stone noted that Big Spring station operations are staying about average, while Midland apprehensions may have dropped.

"I think there are fewer (illegal aliens) here now than there were six months ago, said Stone. "I know they're getting harder to find."

Regents choose UTPB president

At the time of his resignation, Cardozier said he had told the UT System administration that he felt "some of the opponents of four-year status would eventually want to make the incumbent president an issue because of his advocacy of four-year status."

While Friends of UTPB, a citizen group made up of about 1,500 Odessans, 1,000 Midlanders and 500 other area residents, is pushing for four-year status, several junior college administrators are fighting the issue.

A bill calling for expansion of the university to include freshman and sophomore students, as well as an emphasis on the teaching of energy-related sciences and engineering courses, was passed by the Senate in April.

What happened to cloth mice?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A few years ago, to the alarm of practically nobody, American industry stopped making the little cloth mouse that your cat probably uses to entertain himself.

American cats had no problem getting their claws into the cloth mice because companies were perfectly willing to make the toys overseas and then send them here. But the toy-mice import business is complicated by U.S. Customs Service regulations.

Customs has about 25 different sets of duties for cloth mice and similar items, a New York City pet-toy seller complains. Each time a load arrives in the country, customs inspectors have to decide what it is made of, how it was made and whether it is "ornamented" to decide what duty to charge.

"Each of these distinctions is minute and such distinctions were never intended for the classification of pet toys," Jeffrey Meeks, a lawyer for VO Toys Inc., told a House Ways and Means subcommittee this week.

Ornamentation, he said, is a test "normally applied to wearing apparel and clearly inappropriate for a pet toy."

To show how "ludicrous" the current situation is, Meeks quoted a recent Customs appeal decision on whether a shipment of pet toys should be considered "ornamented:"

"With reference to the duck-like animal and the mouse, the eyes, cap, bill, nostrils, neck, feet, ears and tail create those articles ... accordingly, those features do not constitute ornamentation," Customs determined.

Meeks added, "Whether nostrils are necessary to create a duck or merely to ornament it can hardly be seen as crucial to the domestic textile industry."

Meeks is backing a bill by Rep. Robert Garcia, a Democrat who represents the district where VO is located, to set up a separate — and generally lower — tariff on imported cloth pet toys.

VO says it employs about 50 full-time workers to package the imported cloth toys together with domestically produced toys of other materials. Meeks said domestic makers of cloth toys all moved their operations overseas years ago to take advantage of lower labor costs. VO's mice are made in Taiwan and South Korea.

Meeks estimated the current duties average 20 percent, in contrast to the 8.5 percent Garcia's bill would charge. He said he could not estimate how much is now collected, or how many toys enter the country, because the figures are lumped with other items in the 25 customs categories.

Accused babysitter seeks release

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A 24-year-old baby sitter broke down and cried when a judge refused to allow her to post bail on a second-degree murder count in the death of a 7½-month-old boy whose liver was transplanted into another child.

Donna Marie Catiller wore jail-issued slacks and shirt Wednesday when she appeared before Leon County Judge Charles McClure on the charge, which carries a maximum penalty of life in prison.

Mrs. Catiller is accused in the death of Daniel Sakellarios. The infant's liver was implanted Tuesday into 11-month-old Amy Hardin by surgeons at University of Minnesota Hospitals.

Mrs. Catiller looked often at her husband, John, as Tallahassee attorney Jeffrey Talley told the judge he should release the woman from jail because there is little chance of her not showing up for trial. The woman's trial date has not been set, and the judge said Mrs. Catiller would have to appear before a circuit judge in a bond hearing before she could be released from jail.

Lebanon claims pact dispute 'nearly over'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The drawn-out negotiations on an Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal pact are "nearly over" and the agreement is to be signed in the next few days, informed Lebanese sources said today.

The sources said the Lebanese Cabinet would approve a final draft of the pact today.

The last "clarifications" sought by each side are to be discussed Friday, in the 34th and possibly the final meeting of U.S., Lebanese and Israeli negotiators in Netanya, Israel, they said.

The agreement will be signed for the Lebanese by Antoine Fattal, the head of Lebanon's delegation to U.S.-mediated negotiations, early next week, said the sources, who asked to remain anonymous in compliance with government regulations.

They said Lebanon and Israel will exchange drafts at the Netanya meeting and decide the date for signing the agreement, which calls for Israel to withdraw its troops from Lebanon and outlines security arrangements for an area of southern Lebanon near the Israeli border.

U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib has been traveling between Jerusalem and Beirut this week in an effort to ensure that Israel obtains the clarifications which it sought concerning the pact, which was worked out during U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz's Middle East shuttle.

Israeli officials said Habib was expected to return to Jerusalem from Beirut today with Lebanon's final word on the clarifications. The envoy scheduled a meeting with Foreign Ministry director-general David Kimche, who has been Israel's chief negotiator during the withdrawal talks.

Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem was scheduled to go to Damascus today to explain the agreement to Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Assad's government and the Syrian news media have been sharply critical of the withdrawal agreement, saying it compromises Syria's security and is an unacceptable reward to Israel for last summer's invasion of Lebanon to drive out Palestinian guerrillas.

Syria's agreement is vital to the pact, since Israel says it will not begin to withdraw from Lebanon until the Syrians and the Palestine Liberation Organization agree to remove their forces.

White working on tax package

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White is working on a "laundry list" tax package he'll present to lawmakers "in the next couple of days," according to House Speaker Gib Lewis.

White is looking for money to fund a 24 percent pay raise for teachers, but House members, including Lewis, have shown no appetite for raising taxes.

A public education funding bill, including teacher pay raises, has been delayed in the House until White makes his next move.

Bill would lower card interest rates

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature has passed a bill that the Senate sponsor says will give Texas the lowest bank credit card interest rates in the nation.

Sen. Bob McFarland's bill would allow the maximum interest rate on bank credit cards such as VISA and MasterCard to float between 22 and 14 percent and would set an 18-21 percentage rate for department store cards.

Present credit card rates are as high as 24 percent, a maximum figure set by the 1981 Legislature.

Bill to aid border businesses

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A pool of federal money for lending at low-interest rates by the Small Business Administration will be the principal relief offered in a new bill for Mexican border business men, the House Small Business committee reported Wednesday.

The committee headed by Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., adopted in whole a bill offered by Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, providing low-interest loans.

The level of interest was not revealed. George Grant, committee staff member, said the rate of interest is not exactly known yet as it will depend on a formula based on the cost of money and the federal government's own practice of borrowing.

Reagan, advisors to discuss cotton

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — President Reagan and his top economic advisors will discuss today whether Texas cotton farmers can sell their crop abroad, said Rep. Kika Garza of Mission. The meeting will re-examine at the congressman's request whether U.S. credit can be offered to the government of South Korea. South Korea traditionally buys Texas cotton on credit.

The country wants to buy 1.5 million bales, of which 143,00 bales would be purchased on credit.

San Antonio bases to get funds

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — San Antonio area's military installations will get $54,115,000 for new construction, Rep. Abraham Kazen, D., Laredo announced Wednesday.

The total includes $22,590,000 for Kelly Air Force Base, $10,110,000 for Brooks AFB, $7,800,000 for Lackland AFB, $1,115,000 for the Army National Guard, and $500,000 for the Defense Logistics Agency.

In addition, $12,00,000 will go to upgrade the regional sewage treatment for the San Antonio area, this being the Military's contribution to the sewage treatment system.

Camper dies in flood; Four others missing

DRIPPING SPRINGS (AP) — Searchers recovered the body of a 12-year-old camper who died in a midnight flash flood on the Pedernales River, but two other boys, their counselor and another man still were missing today, authorities said.

The five were swept away in a rush of water early Wednesday that sent the winding river cresting 20 feet above normal and left camping equipment lodged in trees high above the river's banks, officials said.

"I don't think they (the youths) ever got out of their tent," Hays County Sheriff Alfred Hohman said.

The river still was flowing so fast Wednesday evening that searchers said they could not use boats and resorted instead to helicopters. The search was to continue today, they said.

The three youths and counselor were part of a 16-member group from the Hope Center for Youth of Apple Springs, a private, non-profit home for troubled youngsters, said director Lyndon Langford, who was summoned from Houston.

"The river just rose unbelievably high in an extremely short period of time sometime after midnight," Langford said he was told. "They were awakened by the water. It was pitch dark. In a matter of a few minutes" the water washed their tents and gear downstream.

The youth's body was found about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday three miles downstream from where the youths had camped, said Blanco County sheriff's dispatcher Jenny Gandie.

Identification was being withheld until relatives could be notified.

Blanco County Sheriff Sherman Brodbeck identified the four missing youth group members as Jamie Hendrick, 12, and Jeremy Williams, 11, both of Houston; John Clowers, 12 of Lufkin; and counselor Harold Harvey, age unknown, of Nacogdoches.

A Houston man who had camped across the river from the boys also was missing, officials said. His car was found near where he had been camping, park officials said, but the man was not further identified.

Few signs were found of any of the campers.

"I bit a hole in my tent and ripped it and I'm the only one alive," said an 11-year-old whose two tentmates were missing.

All the searchers found were scattered sleeping bags and camping utensils.

"There's really no telling how far down they could be. They could be in the lake," Hohman said. Lake Travis is about 25 miles downstream from the campsite.

Langford said the group, consisting of 12 youngsters and four counselors, had camped Tuesday night about five miles downstream from Pedernales Falls State Park after going canoeing Monday. They camped on an Austin dentist's ranch, but had not asked permission, said ranch manager Gordon Buchholz.

Three counselors managed to pull nine boys from the water and lead them to safety at the top of a hill, said counselor Nathan Josenberger. They walked to a house, he said, and called the sheriff's department.

The group was taken to the Dripping Springs United Methodist Church. Langford said the youths who made it safely out of the campsite were being sent back to Apple Springs.

Closed county jail is problem for Border Patrol

RIO GRANDE CITY (AP) — A McAllen Border Patrol official says the closing of the Starr County Jail hasn't forced the patrol to free illegal aliens apprehended in this border area.

James Selbe, deputy chief patrol agent of the McAllen sector, which includes Rio Grande City, said, however, the patrol's operation will run smoother if Starr County Sheriff Eugenio Falcon carries out his plan to reopen the jail today.

Selbe said Wednesday that the closing of the jail in late March created "operational problems" for the patrol because illegal aliens apprehended since then have had to be transported to jails in other counties.

Falcon closed the jail to federal prisoners March 24 after county commissioners cut his budget by $108,000. He said Wednesday he would reopen the jail to about 10 federal prisoners at one time pending the outcome of a commissioners' meeting Friday.

The jail has remained open for local prisoners.

Comments about the release of illegal aliens made by Lee Justice, patrol agent in charge of the Rio Grande City station, "were blown out of proportion," Selbe said.

Justice had said illegal aliens who are crossing the Rio Grande "in droves" are being set free because patrol officials have no place to hold prisoners.

But Selbe said the only difference in patrol procedures since the closing of the jail is that "we do not have the added space and the convenience" of using a nearby jail.

The figures do not represent a deluge of illegal aliens to Rio Grande City, Selbe said.

Rio Grande City patrol officials apprehended 337 illegal aliens in January and 286 in February, according to Selbe.

In April, the first full month after the jail was closed, Selbe said 377 illegal aliens were apprehended. He said 140 illegal aliens were apprehended during the first 10 days of May.

Selbe said the figures would be much higher if there were a sudden surge in illegal aliens to Rio Grande City.

He said his office does not keep track of the numbers of illegal aliens released because the cases are handled differently.

Caller says baby fine

FORT WORTH (AP) — A woman phoned John Peter Smith Hospital twice to say that a 7-week-old baby abducted from the hospital was safe, police said.

The anonymous caller, who telephoned the hospital Tuesday night after the child was kidnapped, made no ransom demands, police said Wednesday.

"A woman called someone on the hospital staff and told that person that the baby was fine and not to worry about her," said Capt. B.L. Dumas. "We can only presume it was the woman who took the baby, but we don't really know."

Cherie Ann Kennedy was abducted Tuesday after her parents, Andrew and Penny Kennedy took her to the county hospital for a routine examination.

As the couple waited in an outpatient clinic, a woman dressed as a nurse admired the child and told Mrs. Kennedy she wanted to show the baby to friends, police said.

Agency finally wins consumers' support

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post New Service

WASHINGTON — The Consumer Product Safety Commission opened its doors for business 10 years ago Friday, with the lofty mandate to "protect the public against unreasonable risks of injury associated with consumer products."

But after a brief honeymoon the government's smallest agency found itself embroiled in controversy, with critics poking fun at safety rules proposed for bicycles and matchbooks and raising questions about everything from its power to impose regulations to the behavior of the commission chairman.

Today the agency has largely succeeded in establishing the concept of product safety and the role of government in product safety, according to a consensus of officials familiar with the history of the CPSC.

And it has won the support of a great many American consumers, who think that it is doing a better job protecting consumers than any other federal or state group, including Congress, according to a Lou Harris poll earlier this year.

But at the same time the CPSC is on a downhill cycle, in part because of the Reagan administration's emphasis on deregulation and the resulting cutbacks in manpower and funding at the safety agency.

One sign of that decline is the criticism of Chairman Nancy Harvey Steorts and her style of leadership, which is similar to the kind of criticism leveled at S. John Byington when he was chairman from 1976 to 1978. Those years the agency's prestige and activity were at their lowest levels.

"All these tiny incidents — Nancy ordering the chauffeur to wear a suit, Byington and his travels — all these images are critical to the agency and its relationships with Congress and the Office of Management and Budget," said David Pittle, a member of the commission for nearly 10 years until his term expired last fall.

The relationship with OMB is important, Pittle said, because of its power to establish the size of the CPSC staff. The role of Congress is important in determining the agency's budget. When either the OMB or Congress is annoyed by the commission's performance, its members or its chairman, then CPSC is less likely to get what it needs to do its job, he said.

A review of the CPSC's first decade shows the agency clearly has had its ups and downs.

The low point appears to have been from 1976 through 1978, when the number of product recalls fell significantly from earlier years and there was limited activity by the commission in initiating civil-penalty actions against companies violating the Consumer Product Safety Act.

For example, there were 247 product recalls in 1976; 147 in 1977 and 277 in 1978. That compares with 397 recalls in 1973, the first year the CPSC was in business.

In 1977, the agency initiated for the first time some civil-penalty actions. Three cases were filed that year, but only one the following year.

Besides the slow recall and civil-penalty activity during that period, the agency's image was clouded by the controversy over Tris-treated children's sleepwear.

Manufacturers turned to Tris to meet a CPSC requirement that the sleepwear be made nonflammable. But Tris later was termed a carcinogen.

"It was a case of a little agency getting into its first big fight with a powerful industry over a complicated issue — Dand all of a sudden everyone was very scared," said one official familiar with the Tris episode.

What made the Tris controversy worse, however, was the encounter between Chairman Byington and the congressional committee holding hearings on the issue. One official who followed those events remembers that Byington brought his daughters into the hearing room and said they had been sleeping in Tris sleepwear, apparently to illustrate his point that Tris wasn't as dangerous as had been suggested by some officials. But when Byington offered to have the girls stand up as exhibits, he was gaveled out of order by the committee chairman.

Utah law removes nitrate from shelf

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Shops and bars removed butyl nitrite — a chemical inhalant that gives a short, fast high — from their shelves as a new state law took effect today banning its use as an intoxicant.

Abuse of the substance, officials say, is not widespread but is growing among teens who are looking for a less costly alternative to marijuana and other drugs.

"It's a fringe thing. We really haven't worried about it too much, but we will," said Detective Dave Bishop of the Salt Lake City Police Department's narcotics division.

The substance is popular among homosexuals and is sold in gay magazines under the names Rush and Locker Room.

The product is marketed as a "room odorizer," but users claim that when inhaled, butyl nitrite causes a brief light-headed feeling that intensifies discotheque music and heightens sexual pleasure.

The new law makes the sale or use of butyl nitrite as an intoxicant a Class B misdemeanor, with a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $500 fine. It does not ban its use in industrial products.

The chemical is used in scientific research, such as in the evaluation of rocket fuels.

The main purpose of the law, said sponsor Olene Walker, a Republican state representative, is to prevent widespread use among high schoolers.

Department of Social Services Director Agnus Mansour announced Wednesday at a news conference that she has quit her religious order and will stay in her government post.

Former nun questions church's understanding

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — An ex-nun who heads Michigan's Department of Social Services says a Vatican ultimatum to quit her order or leave the welfare agency shows the Roman Catholic church does not fully understand "the American scene."

"It does raise the whole issue of whether or not a religious cleric can ever serve in political positions," Agnes Mansour said Wednesday after announcing she had left the Sisters of Mercy after 30 years to stay with the state agency.

Ms. Mansour, 52, had been under fire from the church because the agency finances poor women's abortions through the Medicaid program, which last year paid $5.7 million for 19,500 such operations in Michigan.

The Sisters of Mercy upheld her right to hold both positions, but Detroit Archbishop Edmund Szoka eventually was backed by Pope John Paul II in his February order to either renounce her vows or quit the welfare agency.

"I don't think there is always full understanding, especially of the American (religious) scene," Ms. Mansour said of the church.

Employees may have been placed on 'hit list'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The investigation into political manipulation of the Environmental Protection Agency is expanding to include allegations that career civil service employees may have been targeted on political "hit lists."

Acting EPA Inspector General Charles L. Dempsey said in letters released Wednesday that an aide to former EPA Administrator Anne M. Burford may have maintained a hit list of senior bureaucrats "to be used in personnel decisions involving these employees."

Dempsey referred the allegations to the U.S. Merit Systems Protection Board, which began its own investigation April 22. He said the Justice Department also is interested in possible criminal violations, which Dempsey said could include perjury and obstruction of justice.

Allegations were made earlier this year that hit lists may have been used to select members of EPA's scientific advisory boards. However, those members are not government employees, and Dempsey's letter was the first indication that the practice may have been applied to career bureaucrats with civil service protection.

The allegations concern employees in the Senior Executive Service, the top echelon of the government's bureaucracy.

The inspector general, in his letters to the merit protection board, said information indicated that a hit list may have been maintained by Walter C. Miller, a program analyst in Mrs. Burford's office.

Dempsey said the investigation began because of questions over Miller's rapid rise within the agency — his salary went from $38,456 a year in April 1981 to $63,115 a year last month — as well as travel claims Miller submitted.

"During the course of this inquiry, information was developed to the effect that a list of EPA SES employees was prepared and maintained by Miller to be used in personnel decisions involving these employees," Dempsey said.

"This list allegedly identified employees by a color code which may hae been based on their political affiliations.

"Since the use of a list of this type may constitute a prohibited personnel practice within your investigative jurisdiction, we are referring this matter to you for your consideration," Dempsey wrote.

Inmate released from prison after 48 years

FRONTERA, Calif. (AP) — California's oldest prison inmate, a woman who spent 48 years behind bars and pleaded to remain there, has been paroled and is living in comfort with another elderly woman, her attorney says.

Isa Mae Lang, 94, convicted in 1935 of murdering her landlady "because she called me a bastard and a harlot," is living in a private home near Redlands, Calif., attorney J. Michael Gunn said Wednesday.

Ms. Lang was paroled March 8 from the California Institution for Women here, said Phil Guthrie, spokesman for the state's Department of Corrections.

Gunn refused to identify Ms. Lang's companion but said the two "are very compatible" and are vegetarians and Seventh-day Adventists.

A three-member parole board ruled last December that Ms. Lang would have to leave prison despite her desire to spend her remaining years in her brightly decorated prison room. She said at the time that she was happy in prison, had young friends and didn't want to live in a dormitory-style home for the elderly.

Ms. Lang did not attend the parole hearing because of what she called "do-gooders trying to get me out of this place."

The publicity about her wish to remain in prison prompted offers of help from as far away as Sydney, Australia, Gunn said.

A private organization, which Gunn refused to name, donated a wheelchair. A doctor is on 24-hour call at Ms. Lang's new home, Gunn said.

Ms. Lang is nearly blind, hard of hearing and confined to the wheelchair most of the time, he said.

She was sentenced to life in prison for first-degree murder in 1935 and, except for nine years of freedom after she was paroled in 1960, had remained in state custody.

"I was so lonely for all my friends back in prison. And I knew if I went back I'd have a room of my own," she said.

Brent Scowcroft, left, chairman, President's Commission on Strategic Forces, and former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger, center, a member of the commission, talks with Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill., Wednesday prior to hearings on the implications of the commission's report on foreign policy.

Girl dies after anesthetic

BEAVER, Pa. (AP) — A 4-year-old girl went into convulsions and died shortly after receiving anesthetic from a dentist, police said.

Christina Pounds of Aliquippa apparently suffered a heart attack, Beaver Police Chief Anthony Hovanec said Wednesday.

Results of toxicology tests were expected in a week from the Allegheny County Morgue, which is making the tests for the Beaver County coroner's office.

The youngster died Monday after receiving an anesthetic for minor dental work at the office of Dr. Laurence Dietz. The dentist who treated Christina was Neema Chiniwalla of Glenshaw, authorities said.

Truman centennial planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The late President Harry S. Truman will be honored by a year-long series of events culminating in a joint session of Congresss on May 8, 1984, the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Clark Clifford, chairman of the Truman Centennial Committee, said Wednesday the group will set up an exhibit of Truman artifacts that will be shown throughout the Midwest and hopes to produce a television documentary.

He said special exhibits at the Smithsonian Institution and a commemorative postage stamp also are planned.

Clifford said the celebration is meaningful because Truman was the first to confront expansionist policies of the Soviet Union.

Soviet diplomat pays tow fee

NEW YORK (AP) — Diplomatic immunity wasn't enough to save a Soviet envoy from paying a $33 fee, after his car was towed for being illegally parked in an apartment house lot.

The car belonging to Ivan Miroshkin, first secretary at the Soviet U.N. Mission, was towed Monday from a fire zone at the Skyview-on-Hudson apartments in the Bronx, where Miroshkin lives.

Miroshkin complained to police that he had diplomatic privileges, but was told that parking on private property was not under police jurisdiction.

He paid the money Tuesday at Trio Towing Service and got back his 1981 sedan, said George McDonald, a dispatcher at the company.

Bill may cause insolvency

WASHINGTON (AP) — An anti-sex discrimination bill pending in Congress would push many life insurance companies into insolvency, an industry group says.

The American Council of Life Insurance said Wednesday that could happen because 21 of 147 life insurance companies surveyed would, if the bill passed, be forced under state laws to increase their reserves by more than their net worth, to cover higher payments to women. Under state laws, insurance companies with reserves in excess of net worth are declared insolvent.

The legislation at the root of the problem is designed to eliminate sex discrimination in insurance and pensions. Under the legislation, sex could no longer be used in determining payments.

Auto registrations set record

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The Department of Motor Vehicles has confirmed what most rush-hour motorists already knew — more cars and trucks are being driven on California's highways than ever before.

The department reported Wednesday that California auto registrations set a record in 1982 with 13,292,130 autos. That topped the 1980 record by 130,660 autos.

The record pushes California still further ahead of all other state in vehicle registrations. Texas is a distant second with 7.8 million autos, and New York is third with 7.1 million.

Grant may affect countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional attempt to boost military grants to Israel by $300 million runs the risk of "crowding out" aid to other strategically important countries, the State Department says.

Alan Romberg, the department's deputy spokesman, said Wednesday the Reagan administration continues to believe Israeli security will be met by its request that $550 million of the $1.7 billion earmarked for Israel in fiscal 1984 be in the form of grants.

He commented in the wake of the House Foreign Affairs Committee's 18-5 vote Tuesday to increase outright grants to $850 million.

Aid may be cut to countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel's move to cut off future aid to Greece or Turkey if those countries have more troops in Cyprus three years from now than allowed under a 1959 is drawing strong opposition from the Reagan administration.

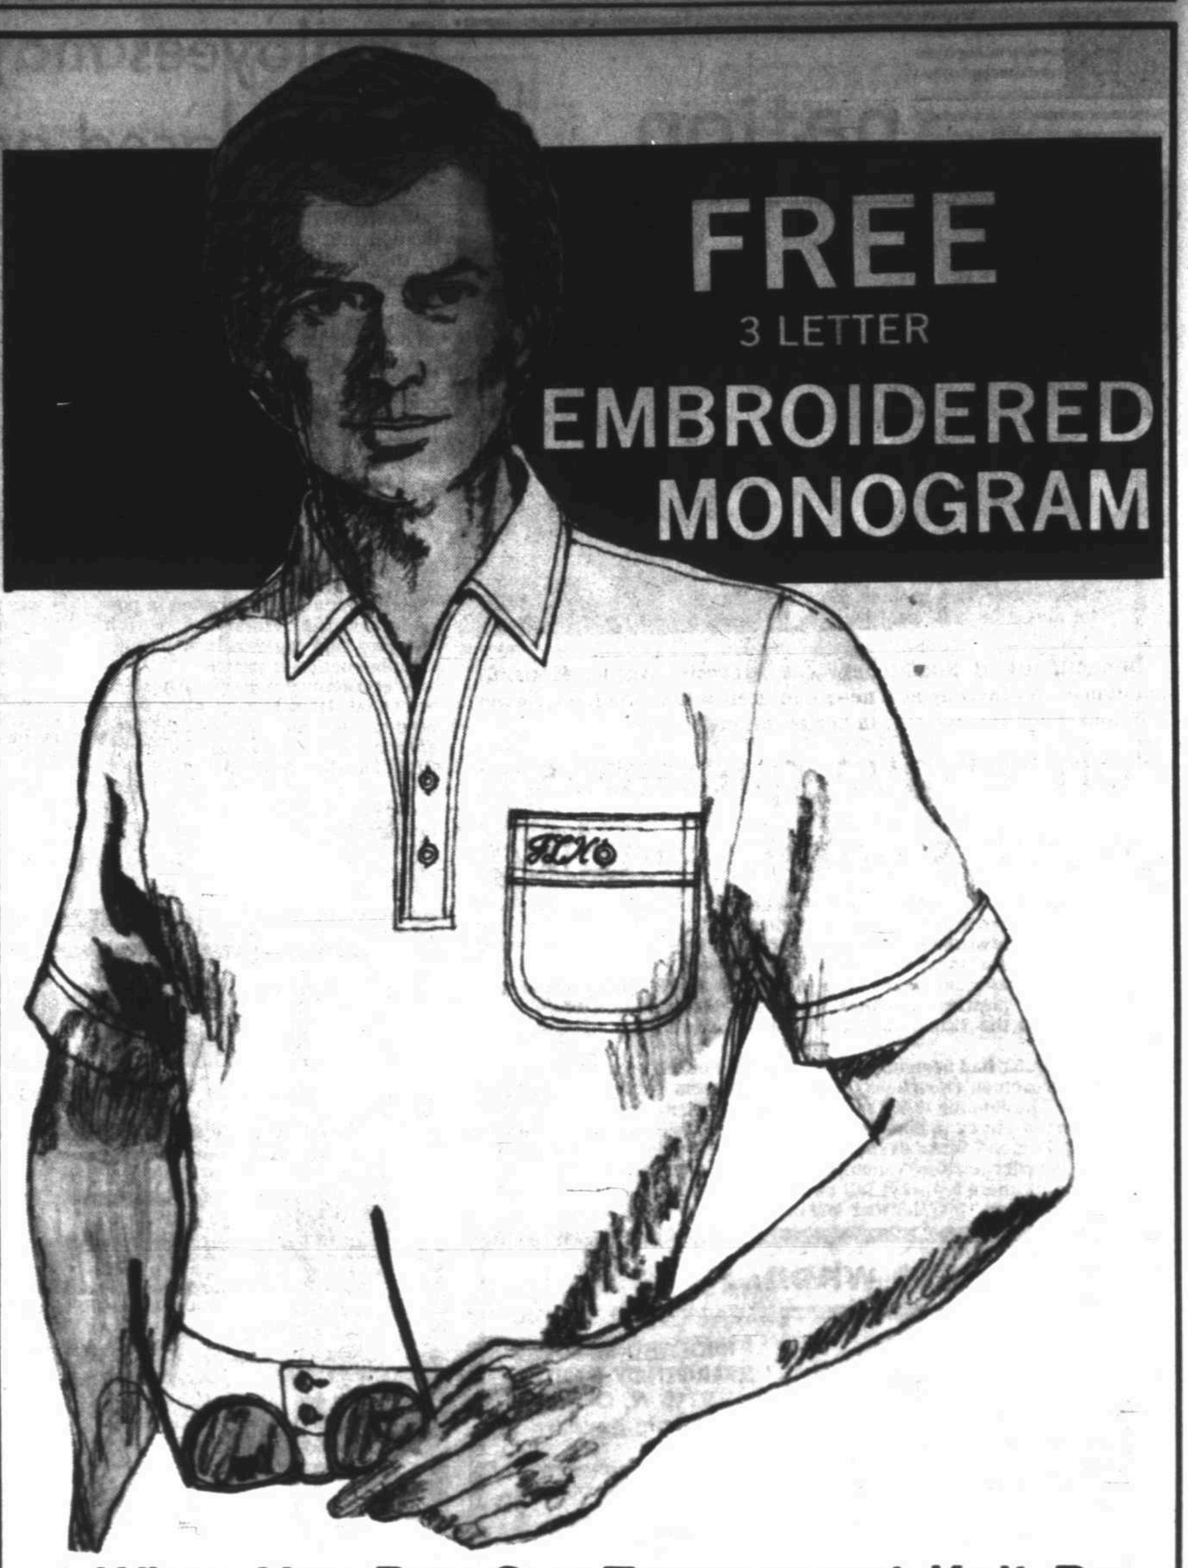

"Security assistance funding is provided to help those allies meet their NATO commitments and should not be used as leverage in other situations," said Alan Romberg, the State Department's deputy spokesman.

Although the House Foreign Affairs Committee's action on Tuesday dealt with both nations, the move — sponsored by Rep. Gus Yatron, D-Pa. — was aimed at Turkey, which sent troops to Cyprus 12 years ago.

Poll: Americans favor tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new poll says most Americans favor retaining the July 1 tax cut even though they think the rich will get the biggest benefit from it.

Of the 3,194 adults surveyed, 54.9 percent wanted the third year of the Reagan administration's tax reduction plan kept in place, according to the poll results released Wednesday by the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank.

Princess Margaret gives tips on 'perfect' picnic

Margaret

LONDON (AP) — With summer approaching, Britain's Princess Margaret has a sure-fire — if expensive — recipe for the perfect picnic: Bring your butler.

She also recommends using a proper table and chairs, and of course picking the location with care.

The 52-year-old sister of Queen Elizabeth II submitted her thoughts on dining in the country to a book on picnics coming out later this month. Excerpts appeared today in the monthly Homes.

"Nearly all picnics in this country end up, in desperation, in a lay-by (roadside parking lot) because no one can decide where to stop," said the princess.

She found her ideal picnic site at Hampton Court, King Henry VIII's palace on the Thames River.

"The queen kindly let me take some friends and I took my butler to ensure that everything would be all right," Margaret recalled.

Her ideal picnic lunch served that day was smoked salmon mousse, cold cuts and "beautiful and delicious salads. Those who had room then had cheese."

The royal picnickers later mingled with visitors in the Hampton Court gardens and watched some real tennis, the game played in King Henry's time on a special court.

"It was an altogether glorious day ... and everyone was happy," said Margaret.

BOSTON (AP) — Dr. Jean Mayer, the president of Tufts University and known nationally for his expertise on human nutrition, was reported doing well following coronary bypass surgery.

Mayer, 63, who focused on nutrition science in 26 years on the faculty of Harvard before taking the Tufts post seven years ago, underwent surgery at Brigham and Women's Hospital on Tuesday.

Jim King, hospital spokesman, described the surgery as uneventful and said Wednesday that Mayer was "progressing satisfactorily in his recovery."

Mayer, who writes a syndicated column on food health, was expected to stay in intensive care at least four days.

GERONA, Spain (AP) — Renowned Spanish surrealist artist Salvador Dali looked on his 79th birthday just "as any other day," friends reported. He took his usual walk and painted for a while.

All in all, Wednesday was described as a quiet day for the artist at his castle in Pubol on the Costa Brava.

Dali has been in seclusion since the death last year of his Russian-born wife, Gala. He also has abandoned all public activity due to his delicate health, associates said.

New hall to be dedicated to humorists

CLEAR LAKE, Iowa (AP) — J. Edward Thornberg thinks humorists have "done more for America than football players," so he has started a hall of fame for the people who keep the country laughing.

"I suppose it's the second childhood or second adolescence I've come into," said Thornberg, 71, a retired businessman who temporarily operates the Hall of Humor and a joke hotline in his home.

"It's the same idea as the Baseball Hall of Fame or Football Hall of Fame," Thornberg said, adding he and his partner, Bill Nelson, "thought the people that have made Americans laugh should be honored, too."

"The idea is to get a building to feature these people and have an induction like the Baseball Hall of Fame each year," he said in a recent interview.

The joke hotline is already a hit, receiving from 250 to 300 calls a day — mostly from local residents who want a laugh, but many from out of state, Thornberg said. Once callers hear Thornberg's offerings, they can leave a joke of their own on the answering machine.

Thornberg said he and Nelson, 46, a social worker and therapist, were talking one day when Thornberg proposed the Hall of Humor.

Nelson liked the idea, "so we went to an attorney and incorporated," Thornberg said.

"There were some great humorists in the country and they are forgotten," Thornberg said. 'We think that people like that should be memorialized some way. They've really done more for America than football players."

Thornberg's favorite humorists include Jack Benny, Amos 'n Andy and Bill Nye, who was editor of a newspaper in Cheyenne, Wyo., and published several humor books.

But no one can be inducted until Thornberg and Nelson get a hall, so the two have started a club to raise money.

A prospective member must tell a joke and pay $10 to get a certificate and a joke book Thornberg has written.

The first printing of 500 has sold out, Thornberg said, and a second printing is in the works.

"This humor club kind of goes over," Thornberg said. "A lady called from Stromsburg, Neb., yesterday and said 'I've got to get a birthday present for my husband.'" She wanted a club membership.

Norman Cousins, whose book "Anatomy of an Illness" details how he laughed his way to good health after contracting cancer, is a club member. So is Dr. Raymond Moody, author of Laugh After Laugh: The Healing Power of Humor.

The joke line — reached by calling (515) 357-4646 — was started on the spur of the moment, "like incorporating the day we think of something," Thornberg said.

It isn't profitable, Nelson said, but "nothing we do is profitable, yet."

"We had an answering (machine), told a joke or two on it and then couldn't use the telephone ourselves because it kept ringing in. We had to get another telephone," Thornberg said.

Thornberg, Nelson, Nelson's children and friends take turns recording the jokes. The most calls they ever received in one day was 430, according to Thornberg, who recalled, "That was a day the kids were snowed in."

48-year-old twins win mock Miss USA Pageant

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A pair of 48-year-old twins named Murl and Earl won top ugly honors in a contest spoof of the Miss USA Pageant, which crowns its own reigning beauty here tonight.

The Knoxville Ugly Club conducted its ugly pageant Wednesday night, raising more than $8,000 for a children's home and the city recreation fund.

About 500 spectators in a downtown theater suffered through the two-hour show in which a dozen self-professed uglies modeled swimsuits and business suits and displayed their putative talents.

Four judges, who openly solicited bribes, awarded first prize to Murl and Earl Householder of Knoxville.

"I knew we would win because we are double ugly," said Murl, the oldest of the pair by three minutes. "We'll never live this down."

In talent competition, the winning duo pantomimed a country ballad while strumming guitars made from toilet seats.

One female contestant made ugly faces, and a man sang a song after stuffing cotton in his ears. "I'm going to sing for you, but I'm not going to suffer for it," contestant David Emory told the audience.

At intermission, a local entertainer sang her own composition: "Just Because You're Ugly Doesn't Mean God Doesn't Love You."

Prisoner gets all tied up

NEW PORT RICHEY, Fla. (AP) — A 26-year-old prisoner James Hughes thought his escape was in the bag when he stuffed himself into a huge plastic trash sack tied to his cell bars.

At the 7:45 a.m. roll the prison guard called "Hughes"and received a muffled 'here' from the trash bag.

THE BETTER HALF

"I'm late! Don't bother to brew the coffee, I'll eat it raw!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, May 13, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of world heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis, writer Daphne DuMaurier, poet Walt Whitman, inventor Cyrus McCormick and composer Arthur Sullivan of Gilbert &. Also sharing your birthday: actress Bea Arthur, singer Stevie Wonder and theater critic Clive Barnes. Others like your style and follow where you lead in the coming months. Love and marriage become less tumultuous. In business, bypass middle management and go straight to the top. Profits grow as you learn to avoid bureaucratic red tape. Journalists have an especially productive year. Choose your confidants with care. Someone who should know better may try to steal your idea.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Artists, writers and composers get lucky breaks now. Your concern over a parent or child is natural. Just try not to let it prevent you from answering important money questions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It may be time to break with tradition and invest in new technologies. Ambitious individuals may have to restrain themselves to avoid frightening potential allies.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Success comes to those who do things to make their loved ones proud. Home improvements may be too expensive now. Wait until you can afford to do things right.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Getting outdoors puts you in a cheerful mood. Romance is possible with someone who once seemed uninterested. Moonlighting helps you over a rough financial patch.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Financing a partnership or project is difficult, but not impossible. Refuse to give up! Patience and self-discipline work wonders. Love games could boomerang.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are on the brink of an important achievement. Persevere. This is a very lucky Friday the 13th for those who are careful. A family heirloom brings back memories.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your enthusiasm allows you to enjoy life to the fullest. Just be careful not to go to extremes. A strong friend will help you ward off someone's designs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not let romantic fantasies keep you from doing your work. Greater understanding and tact are needed. Consider partner's point of view before making accusations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be prepared for a real or apparent battle. You may not see eye to eye with loved ones. Learn to be more flexible when dealing with stubborn individuals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Contracts should be signed only after consultation with accountant or lawyer. Keep any opinions that you know will offend others to yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Eventually you will find the job you want and think it was worth the wait. Your social life becomes quite active. Something you do could make the newspaper.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Increased pressures require you to do your best. Be sincere and work hard. Ally yourself with those who are helpful and constructive. Romance happens suddenly!

Network pats itself on back

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — For one afternoon, "Gandhi," one man's crusade for peace, spiritualism and non-materialism, was preempted by "Grandiose," one industry's fascination with action, sexual hijinks and million-dollar advertising campaigns.

ABC didn't actually call it "Grandiose," but the network did take monumental measures a week ago Wednesday in announcing its fall prime-time schedule to Madison Avenue. ABC rented the 1,151-seat Ziegfeld Theatre, home of "Gandhi," for its glittery presentation.

The cost of this show, and the follow-up bash at a fancy Central Park restaurant, was small change when you consider ABC had over $2 billion in commercial sales for the 1982-83 season, and knows who butters its bread.

Before the new series were unveiled, ABC showed an animated cartoon, done in video-game motif. The hero had three choices: cable, superstation or network. Only when Mr. Advertiser landed on network did he win the jackpot.

ABC followed this with a TV retrospective, accompanied by a cloying song that praised to the sky the partnership of client, agency and network, even though "our threesome may disagree some."

For last week's occasion, ABC trotted out John Forsythe and Joan Collins from "Dynasty," Madeline Kahn from the new series, "Yes, But I'm Married," and Heather Thomas from "The Fall Guy," who stole the spotlight — yes, there really was a spotlight — by wearing what seemed to be part of her dress.

Also on hand were the big brass, who took turns cheerleading ABC's new season. The whole thing resembled a pep rally to create excitement for an ABC prime-time schedule that has been flat in recent years.

ABC is going for cutesy comedies. T.K. Carter stars as a hip-talking genie in "Just Our Luck," and Emmanuel Lewis, the precious kid in the Burger King commercial, stars in "Webster," about a youngster adopted by newly-weds Alex Karras and Susan Clark.

ABC thinks "Just Our Luck" has hit potential. It will lead off Tuesday, pushing back "Happy Days" by 30 minutes. It's risky for a new show to start a night, but the strategy might also reflect that ABC is not that confident in Fonzie and Co., particularly against NBC's "The A-Team."

The rapid success of "The A-Team" might account for two violence-prone action shows in ABC's lineup at 8. "Trauma Center," about a hospital emergency-room team, is on Thursday, and "Hardcastle and McCormick," about a judge, his vigilante and their car, is on Sunday.

From the very first hand, Trump Coup Tommy knew that it was going to be his day. As you may recall, Tommy was a player who was known for the fact that, most of the time, he bid and played rather poorly. Except, that is, when he encountered a bad trump break. Then the bumbler was replaced by the assured master, and he performed miracles in the play of the cards.

On the first hand, East elected to preempt. That did not faze Tommy, who stepped in with a takeout double on a hand that had poor support for most suits. West upped the preempt and North cannot be blamed for thinking that his side might have a grand slam. The worst bid in the auction was West's double, for its effect on Tommy was like a phone booth on Clark Kent.

West led a club, and when dummy appeared Tommy knew that West's double had to be predicated on at least four trumps. So Tommy had to engineer an end play, and to accomplish that he had to find out West's distribution in the red suits — on the auction West almost surely held three clubs.

Tommy ruffed the opening lead in dummy and cashed the ace of spades. He was delighted when East produced a trump. He crossed to the ace of hearts and ruffed a club, then came back the ace of diamonds and ruffed another club. He now led a low diamond to his ten.

Had East followed to this trick, West would have been marked with at least three hearts. But when East showed out, the rest was easy. Tommy re-entered dummy with a diamond and led a fourth round of the suit for a heart discard. He cashed the king of hearts and then simply led another heart, ruffing low in his hand. West, down to nothing but trumps, was forced to overruff, and then had to lead away from his Q-10 of trumps into Tommy's K-J tenace. Six spades doubled and made.

Case for Mark

When Midland City Council rejected a woman's request for a special permit to park a mobile home behind her residence to house her crippled son, the action drew a storm of protest — and with good cause.

The underlying message in the council's 3-3 rejection of Carolyn Mitchell's request was that Midland is an uncaring city, a place wherein those in power don't have compassion for a young man recuperating from a gunshot wound. That's not the case, of course, but on the surface, the council's decision was interpreted that way.

In fact, the council actually was being responsive to the needs of Midland residents when it denied the woman's request. It was being compassionate to the small number of neighborhood residents who opposed the request. The council typically — and laudably — attempts to uphold the integrity of neighborhoods through zoning decisions. We believe, as do many of the writers of letters we've received in recent days, that the council erred in its decision this time.

Mrs. Mitchell was seeking the permit to keep the mobile home behind her residence in order to provide individual living quarters for her 23-year-old son, Mark Carlton. He's recuperating from a gunshot wound that crippled him and the mobile home was to mark another major step in the young man's rehabilitation. Everything looked good until the matter reached the city council. The request had been approved by the Planning and Zoning Commission — unanimously — and forwarded to the council with recommendations for approval from both the commission and the planning staff.

Rejection of the request was based on neighborhood opposition, but only one neighbor showed up to object at the meeting. Further strengthening the special permit request is the fact it would be granted only for a temporary period of time.

Without a doubt there are factors at play in this story that are not obvious, such as neighborhood disputes and animosities. But those matters are secondary to the primary consideration. The real question the city council was asked to address was whether the Mark Carlton case deserves special treatment on a temporary basis? The obvious answer to that question was yes. His case obviously merits more compassion than the case of neighbors. But that isn't the answer the city council gave.

We hope the council will reconsider its decision in this matter.

Controlling minds

Fifty years ago, 40,000 Berlin citizens watched German students carry books and pamphlets out of offices and libraries and dump them on huge bonfires in the city's streets.

They were purging Germany of the works of disruptive authors — Thomas Mann, Albert Einstein, Sigmund Freud, Marcel Proust. Their works were judged unfit for German readers.

The Third Reich not only sanctioned but commissioned the search, seizure and destruction of materials that contained ideas not conforming to government-approved patriotism.

Book control led and thought control followed. Nothing could be written or said that subverted the Nazi movement. These controls conditioned German minds into accepting the Holocaust.

Ah, but that was long ago. It couldn't happen today. Don't kid yourself. Last month in Martha's Vineyard, members of a local church burned books and records they called "satanic trash."

The demonstration was similar to many others that have taken place in this country. People who know what others should read have burned everything from The Living Bible to Playboy magazine.

The lessons of history are clear. Censorship is far more dangerous than anything contained in a book or a record jacket.

Censorship destroys independence of thought and spawns subservience. Let us remember the Berlin bonfires and stand strong against thought control.

Another View:

Cruel joke on dying

There are more civilized ways of treating dying old people than turning them out in the snow or even, in many cases, keeping them in hospitals.

One such way is called hospice care. Under it, terminally ill people — most (but not all) of them elderly, and most of them suffering from cancer — can remain at home, surrounded by their families, with nursing care, physicians' services and psychological and pastoral counseling for them and their families.

Dying of cancer is often very painful, but hospice care can alleviate the suffering and comfort patients as well as their families. Hospice care also can be much less expensive than hospital care. So it is not only civilized but fiscally sensible.

Last year, Congress authorized hospice care under the Medicare program. It prescribed the kinds of services to be provided, with a limit of 210 days, and a ceiling for federal payments set at around $7,000, or 40 percent of the approximately $20,000 of estimated costs for Medicare patients the last six months they live.

Now the Reagan administration, which opposed the program last year, has drafted rules that would sharply limit it, setting the ceiling that "will approximate $4,332." What can the administration be thinking of? Here is, after all, an administration that professes to want to encourage the family. Hospice care does that. Here is an administration that professes to favor voluntary efforts. Hospice care does that, too.

Saving money? Ironically, reducing the maximum payments for hospice care is likely to increase costs. As Donald J. Gaetz, president of the National Hospice Organization, a non-profit group of some 1,000 hospices, pointed out, it creates a disincentive for hospices to take sicker patients, driving the terminally ill back to hospitals, where care is much more expensive.

The rules, says Gaetz, "play a cruel joke on dying people, violate the intent of Congress and do not fulfill the promise of the legislation." If the rules are not withdrawn, as they should be, Congress should clarify the formula which allowed such an interpretation and make sure that the promise of legislation is fulfilled.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Brother facing brother in war

WASHINGTON — Like our own tragic conflict of 1861-65, the civil war in Nicaragua has literally pitted brother against brother. Families are split down the middle as both the Sandinista regime and the "contra" guerrillas try to win their loyalty.

Jack Anderson

Consider Dima, an 18-year-old boy from the village of Ciudad Antigua, in Nicaragua's northern province of Nueva Segovia. He is fighting with an anti-Sandinista rebel group in the mountains near the Honduran border. It is guerrilla bands like this that the United States has been secretly supporting with arms and training — and that the House Select Committee on Intelligence decided should no longer receive our help.

Dima told my associate Jon Lee Anderson, who spent a week traveling with the guerrillas, that he has an older brother who is a major in the Sandinista army. The young "contra" said he would kill his brother on sight.

"He has sent word out that he'll kill me, too," said Dima. "It's him or me. That's the way it has to be. It is God's will. The Bible said that families would divide, and brothers would kill their brothers. This is what is happening here."

Dima's big brother at first had tried to recruit him into the Sandinista militia. The young man was swayed instead by recruiters for the Nicaraguan Democratic Force (FDN) who visited his village and lectured the youths on the evils of the leftist Sandinista regime.

As Dima's young commander, The Sparrow, explained the contras' recruiting method: "We would gather the peasant workers and give them lectures on the goals of the FDN and the need to revolt against the Sandinistas. Then we would list the bad things the Sandinistas have done. We found them to be receptive, and in this way we began to get our first peasant recruits."

The recruiting campaign bore fruit in Ciudad Antigua. Dima said he and 28 other village youths decided they'd rather join the rebels in the hills than be dragooned into the Sandinista militia. "We dressed as peasants and went to work for two months in the coffee harvests, hoping the contras would come so we could join up."

The guerrillas eventually did come — and Dima is now a veteran of 11 firefights. Since he led the first volunteers into the hills, "almost all the young men have come out" of Ciudad Antigua, he said. "My village is only children, women and old men now."

Critics of the Reagan administration's intervention in Nicaragua make much of the fact that many of the contras are former members of Anastasio Somoza's National Guard.

And though it is true the FDN does have many former guardsmen, most of its strength is drawn from Nicaraguans who have simply become disenchanted with the Marxist tendencies of the Sandinistas. Urban university students, illiterate peasants and former Sandinista believers fight side by side against those who betrayed their revolution against Somoza.

BITING THE BULLET: I've reported in the past on environmentalists' efforts to have hunters use steel buckshot instead of lead, which poisons waterfowl that ingest it after the pellets rain down on their wetland refuges. Now it appears that American consumers may face the same danger from nimrods whose aims aren't all they should be.

Roger Hamilton, of Manhattan, Kan., discovered buckshot in his ham at dinner one night. He complained to Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who asked the Agriculture Department for an explanation.

Agriculture officials assured Dole that meat and poultry are inspected from slaughter to supermarket to ensure they're fit for human consumption. This includes the use of metal detectors, they said, but added: "Metal detectors ... are not always capable of detecting deeply imbedded metal particles. This is particularly true of lead particles, which are non-magnetic."

SEND ME IN, COACH: When Peter Broccoletti was named an enforcement attorney at the Environmental Protection Agency, the career lawyers rolled their eyes. Broccoletti's previous job was as a body-building summer coach for the Denver Broncos football team.

Broccoletti left EPA about a year ago, but the body builder hasn't left government service. He's now a consultant to the Legal Services Corporation, like EPA an agency that conservative Republicans would like to de-tooth.

Broccoletti said he is only a temporary employee, and has been "monitoring and helping to review reports coming in." He insists he is a sincere believer in legal services for the poor, and though he wouldn't say exactly how much he's paid, he said it is "a pittance."

GEORGE F. WILL

Volcker nod vital to recovery

WASHINGTON — Were a reasonable principle a sufficient reason for doing something in Washington, Paul Volcker's re-appointment as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board would be dictated by this principle: There is rarely any penalty for failure in government, so there certainly should be no penalty for success.

George F. Will

In politics, prudence butters more parsnips than principles do, and there is this reason for re-appointment: The decision will be made when the dimensions of the budget shambles are apparent. It will be a bad moment for a candidate for re-election to replace the keeper of the currency with someone suspected of being more congenial to political calculations.

The Fed is supposed to control the money supply. That would be difficult, given the blunt instruments of control, even if there were a clear definition of the money supply, which there is not. So Volcker's results are all the more remarkable. Yes, a world recession helped. Furthermore, inflation is a light sleeper, and a wake-up call is coming in the appalling budget figures.

But there is a large "expectational" component in inflation. For example, pessimistic expectations cause lenders to put an inflation premium on the price of money. Volcker's presence is, to an extraordinary extent, the sole basis of optimistic expectations.

The clearest mandate in 1980 was to reduce inflation, then known as "public enemy number one." That has been done. The real prime interest rate — the difference between the prime rate and the inflation rate — is about as high today as in 1980, but that is because lenders fear rekindled inflation. Re-appointment of Volcker is the best — given the budget numbers, perhaps the only — weapon against those well-founded fears.

The Fed is an essential anomaly, a mitigation of democracy, an agency for institutionalizing a longer perspective than representative institutions can manage. It exists to take decisions elected officials will not take, and to take abuse from elected officials who will not inflict even short-term pain for long-term gain.

But the idea that Reagan must replace Volcker because Volcker is associated with pain reflects a Republican hope that a central banker, whose name is unknown to many Americans and whose job is a mystery to almost all Americans, will be held accountable for the aggregate performance of the economy. The idea that Reagan must replace Volcker lest Volcker get credit for the recovery reflects a similar misconception about public perceptions, and also reflects a West Wing (of the White House) mania for trying to wring every imaginable political advantage, however marginal, out of every decision.

The decision about Volcker will be made against a backdrop of a budget debate in which many Democrats propose tax increases to lower the deficit (just 15 percent — $30 billion off a $200 billion deficit), but do not have the votes for such tax increases. Many Republicans want to cut the deficit by cutting entitlement programs, but they do not have the votes. And the administration is urging the Senate to increase the defense spending and lower the tax increases proposed by the Senate Budget Committee.

On the three big components of the budget — defense, domestic spending, taxes — there may be stalemate, the consequences of which can be severe economic contraction, and not necessarily after November, 1984. Congress is apt to accept less than one-fourth of Reagan's requested domestic spending restraints. His contingency tax (to be triggered if budget conditions are bad two years out) is dead. The Volcker decision must be made no later than July, at which point the world will know what is already knowable: Fiscal years 1983, 1984 and 1985 will each have deficits of more than $200 billion. A reasonable deficit projection is for $660 billion (including off-budget borrowing) through 1985 and $1.3 trillion through 1988.

Assuming 8 percent Treasury bills (and given the amount of borrowing that will be necessary, Treasury bills that inexpensive can not be assumed), the government's additional and permanent interest cost on $660 billion will be $50 billion annually. That will erase savings made from painful domestic spending cuts.

An irony of the moment is the service rendered to Reagan by a French socialist. One reason deficits are not already causing government borrowing to crowd private borrowers out of the capital market and drive up rates is that Francois Mitterrand's policies have caused a flight of French capital to America. But there are limits to such windfalls. And here is irony compounded:

Republicans are reduced to hoping they have misled the nation for decades about the dangers of deficits. For their finest accomplishment — reduced inflation — they are deeply indebted to a Democrat appointed by Jimmy Carter. The Democrat — Paul Volcker — may be more important than Ronald Reagan this summer when the recovery hangs by a thread of confidence worn thin by congressional paralysis and exploding deficits.

Ignored signs a death trap

To The Editor:

Last week my wife was involved in an automobile accident at the intersection of Michigan and Colorado streets. The person in the other vehicle was ticketed for disregarding a stop sign. This morning on Douglas street at D and G streets consecutively, I came very close to having an "accident" with two different vehicles because the drivers disregarded their stop signs.

I would like to see an explanation, printed in this paper, from our city fathers concerning the traffic law enforcement policy of our police department. Simple rules flagrantly violated, lead to serious accidents.

Jon Doe lives in Poe Dunk subdivision, Midland, Texas. He gets up in the morning and leaves for work. His mind's eye sees the stop sign at the end of his block, but he doesn't stop. He just slows down some. Why bother he rationalizes, he can see for a mile in either direction. He rolls through the stop and onto the secondary road without incident as he has dozens of times. Late that evening Jon has the family in the car. They are coming home from shoppng. Jon's tired, Mrs. Doe is relating her day to him, the two boys are squabbling in the back seat. They are driving east on Loop 250 and are approaching 349 highway. Mrs. Doe becomes irritated with the boys' commotion and reprimands them. Jon also scolds the boys, his mind's eye sees the stop sign...

After the last ambulance leaves the workover rig driver who struck the Doe vehicle tells the police officer, "I don't understand — he just slowed down some."

The automatic function of driving while pre-occupied with other things on our mind is extremely risky under optimum conditions. But add to that undisciplined habits such as rolling stop signs, or squeezing through yellow lights that turn red before we enter the intersection or simply ignoring yield signs and you have a deadly combination of errors. Let's face reality, we all "autodrive" at sometime or other. We must insist on stricter traffic law enforcement to create a continuing awareness of the dangers of falling into hazardous habits.

Keep cinders

To The Editor:

Having been sent an article written by sports writer Terry Williamson regarding the quality of Midland Memorial Stadium's track, I thought it might be interesting for any concerned Midlander to hear an ex-Midland High School athlete's opinion of the situation. Terry, you are partly right and partly wrong. You are clearly on the money when you tell of the track's state of disrepair and other team's reluctance to come to Midland and risk running on the deteriorated surface; but maybe a bit inaccurate concerning the merits of an all-weather running surface. I will be the first to admit that the track, as it is now, is a disgrace. I ran on it for many years, and my problematic flat feet condition was surely not benefitted as a result. In fact, I still have severe feet problems — a direct result of a Memorial Stadium track "career." But that is just my point — an injury resulting from Midland's track — not a "normal" cinder surface.

As far as I am concerned, all-weather tracks are a fad — an expensive one at that. Here at Princeton University, we have a $2 million Swedish-made artificial surface. It is a disaster. We could not even use one straightaway for most of last season, due to problems with the track. And times are not consistently better when the track is used.

Yale University, our arch rival, still uses a cinder track after 200-plus years. When kept in tip-top shape (as Midland's is not), a cinder track is easy to run on, and surely does not hinder performances of athletes. Granted, wet weather spells a whole different story, but, in the long run, a cinder track is fine for its purpose.

Because it is a fad, all-weather surfaces are offered in every style and color. In fact, Harvard University's track has "timing lights" bordering its perimeter that supposedly help to pace runners — taking the place of a coach's whistle. Personally, chasing lights is not my bag, and the fact that many of the lights on Harvard's track are broken or not even in place, shows that the "modern" track may not be the best track.

Nevertheless, if the Midland school district eventually chooses to replace the cinder surface now in use, I urge them to be very deliberate in their decision-making process. Gimmicks that make all-weather tracks look good do not help the athletes — or the pocketbook. So, why not stick with the cinder surface — one that is in good shape, though.

As an interesting footnote, in a meet a year or so ago at Yale, I was talking with the lane assignment clerk about that track's surface, only to learn that he ran against Eric Little of "Chariots of Fire" fame, in the Olympics — on a cinder track. If it is good enough for these two, it is good enough for us. Anyway, Midland and Lee athletes are turning in record performances on Saturdays, even after working out all week on cinders. The joke you spoke of, Terry, may be worse if Midland hastily replaces the cinder surface with some modern, "space-age" composition. Maybe I am a big nostalgic, but let's keep the cinders.

Metallurgist drills what she thinks is world's smallest hole

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — A University of Illinois scientist, analyzing a tiny ceramic conductor with an electron microscope, accidentally created what she believes is the smallest permanent hole ever drilled by mankind.

The hole, apparently caused by the beam of electrons from the microscope, is just 20 angstroms wide, research metallurgist Margaret Mochel said.

That is so tiny, she said, that 100 trillion of them could be drilled in a square inch — even allowing for an 80-angstrom space between holes.

Mrs. Mochel said she also was able to cut a 20-angstrom-wide slot in the material — sodium beta-alumina.

The discovery could be used in the electronics industry to make smaller computer chips, she said.

The material was brought to the university by an Oxford University professor who wanted to use the sophisticated electron microscope to analyze the sample.

"When we put the probe on it, it left a very small hole behind," Mrs. Mochel said in an interview last week. "It was quite a dramatic thing. It just took a couple of seconds."

Most material into which tiny holes are drilled breaks down when it is removed from the electron microscope, she said. But, the hole in the sodium beta-alumina was permanent.

"It's like a long tunnel through the material, and the walls are very rigid," she said.

The depth of the hole was about 100 times the diameter, which did not vary from end to end.

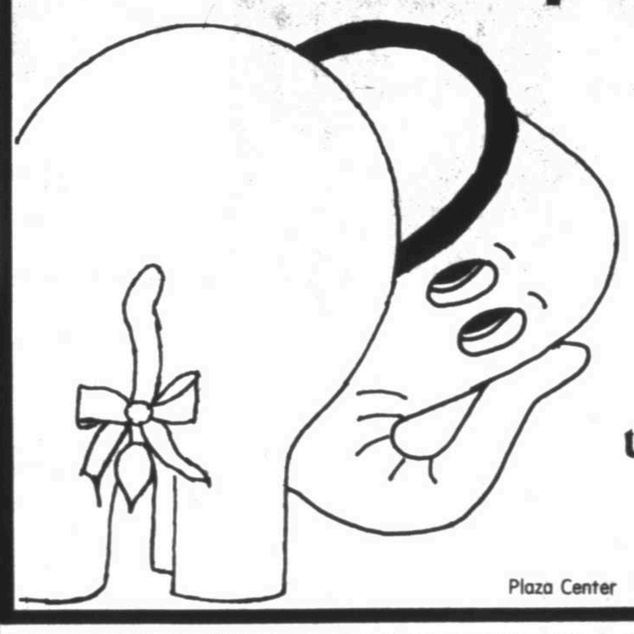

"It appears that the strong electron beam is evaporating away the material," she said. "We need to examine why that is happening."

A striking Parisian law student tries to ward of the blow of a baton during rioting Wednesday on Paris' Left Bank.

Irish extremists torture man crippled by kneecappings

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP) — Eight masked men forced a crippled man from his home today and dropped cement blocks on his hands in what appeared to be a kangaroo court punishment, police said.

None of Northern Ireland's extremist Protestant or Roman Catholic groups claimed responsibility for the assault.

Police declined to identify the victim but said he was in his early 50s and the father of 13 children.

A police spokesman said some of the assailants held the man's family hostage while the others took him outside. Then they dropped cement blocks on both his hands and struck him with a poker.

The man suffered several broken bones in his hands and was undergoing treatment in a hospital, said the spokesman, who refused further identification in accordance with police regulations.

The spokesman said the man was unable to walk because of several previous kneecappings, a terrorist punishment in which a person is shot in the legs for such crimes as petty theft.

Student riots erupt in both Cannes, Paris

PARIS (AP) — Riot police teargassed hundreds of students demonstrating outside the Cannes Film Festival and arrested 113 in Paris, where students also rebelled against the government's proposed educational revisions.

In Cannes, tear gas created a chaotic reception Wednesday night for people in formal evening dress who arrived to see a film by Japanese director Nagisa Oshima, and witnesses said many fled the acrid fumes along with the protesters. However, several guests made their way through the smoke to the entrance to present their invitations, the witnesses said.

Authorities said a policeman and reporter were slightly injured in the melee, which began when medical students dressed in white smocks managed to invade the festival's exhibition hall by breaking down a barrier.

The screaming protesters marched through the center of Cannes, making bonfires out of stacks of old tires, and briefly blocking the Cannes-Antibes motorway along the Riviera.

Law students in Paris and Lyon built barricades in the streets and set them on fire, causing injuries to passersby and 12 policemen, officials reported.

It was not known how many demonstrators were injured, but witnesses saw several people clubbed during police charges, including a news photographer.

Police said 106 of the demonstrators arrested in Paris later were released, and the remaining seven being held for further investigation. Two buses were damaged in the fray that ended about 1 a.m. today.

In the southwest city of Toulouse, police questioned 11 students after 20 fires were set at the end of a student demonstration Tuesday night.

Medical students, who have staged protests throughout the country over the past three months, oppose the Socialist government's plans to introduce a tough new exam in their next-to-the-last year of studies. The students say the exam is unnecessary and part of a plot by the government and the medical profession to reduce the number of doctors in France.

British Labor Party platform focuses on unemployment

LONDON (AP) — The opposition Labor Party has unveiled an election platform focusing on massive public investment in industry to reduce Britain's record postwar unemployment of 13.3 percent.

The 15,000-word platform, endorsed by Labor leaders Wednesday, is diametrically opposed to the policies of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government, which has been selling off state-owned industries to private investors and closing unprofitable plants and mines.

If returned to government in the June 9 elections, Labor is pledging to cut the sales tax, freeze rents and curb transport fares, property taxes and fuel costs.

In other measures reversing Conservative policies, it would cancel the government's order for U.S. nuclear Trident missiles for the British nuclear submarine force, stop the deployment of American nuclear cruise missiles in Britain, close all nuclear bases and pull Britain out of the 10-nation European Common Market.

Labor's deputy leader, Denis Healey, said in a TV interview Wednesday night that the program is a rational document and not extremist.

He said its nuclear policies combine both unilateral actions, such as the withdrawal of nuclear bases and multilateral steps such as negotiations with the Russians over the nuclear Polaris missiles already in British nuclear submarines.

Healy said his party hopes to deliver a four-page summary of the program to every one of the country's 21 million homes before polling day.

Mrs. Thatcher has called early elections in hopes of capitalizing on popularity she gained from lowering inflation and directing Britain's victory in last year's Falklands War with Argentina. Her term could have continued until May 1984.

A Gallup Poll published today gave the Conservatives a 17.5 percent lead over Labor, which has veered sharply to the left since being ousted from government in May 1979 elections.

Rebels can't worry about second game

Lee must win first game or 1983 season comes to end

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebels have just one life left in this the 1983 baseball season. Whether or not it will be extended in the bi-district playoffs depends on the outcome of the first game of a doubleheader Friday at Lee Field against the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen.

Monterey, leading the three-game series 1-0, can advance to the District playoffs with a victory over Lee in the first game at 2 p.m. or, should they lose the first, advance with a win in the second. Lee needs to win both games to continue on the State playoff trail.

Tuesday afternoon, the Plainsmen won a pitching battle in Lubbock by scoring a run in the bottom of the eighth inning to break a 1-1 deadlock. Danny Riddle's two-out single to left field scored Alan Hernandez from third with the winning run.

WITH BOTH teams boasting a hitting lineup with a .500-plus hitter and several in the .300-plus range, a pitching battle was the last thing anybody expected. Anybody, that is, except Monterey coach Bobby Moegle who said before the game, "In the years we've played against each other, the good pitching has come to the top. I don't know how good Lee's pitching is now, or ours for that matter, but I would say they'll rise to the occasion."

And, "rise to the occasion" they did.

Monterey's Kevin Short was throwing a no-hit shutout at the Rebels through 4⅓ innings of duty before Dennis Matta stroked a solid double to right field. His shutout was lost in the top of the seventh when Steve Woodlee and Darrell Holmes walked followed by a two-out double by Rob Walker that scored pinch runner Keith McDonald. Short finished the game with a two-hitter.

Lee's John Denton lost both his no-hitter and shutout at the same time in the third. Jimmy Simpson waked and with two gone Short's single to right gave Monterey a 1-0 lead. For Denton, it was a three-hit pitching performance in seven innings of duty.

"I though John pitched as well as he possibly could," said Johnson.

Riddle's game-winning single in the eighth came off reliever Kerry Robertson.

IN THE 'win or else...' situation the Rebels are now facing, Johnson is ready to throw everything Lee has at Monterey.

Craig Ray is the probable starter with Robertson as the first reliever and possibly Bryan Willis, who has once again recovered from an injury.

"We've got to go all out in that first game," said Johnson. "We can's worry about the second one. We'll worry about the second game when and if we get to it."

If Willis is ready to go, he'll take a heavy burden off the shoulders of the pitching staff.

"Ready or not, he may have to go," said Johnson. "He didn't seem like he was throwing all that well in our intra-squad game, but he may be all right. He didn't seem like he had too much velocity."

Other than Denton, with only three days rest, there is nobody left on the staff who can throw. Nobody, that is, except...

"I may have to pitch the second game," said Johnson who has had a little more than 25 years to rest his arm. Ernie was a pitcher for Brunswick, Ga., during his two years of pro ball back then and he claims he was a "wild fastball pitcher."

Danny Riddle, who threw a no-hit shutout at the Rebels in the Tournament of Champions, will probably by the Plainsmen's starting pitcher.

RAY WAS on the mound in the second meeting of the two teams, in a pre-district doubleheader at Lee Field, and, according to Johnson, he has to keep base runners close to the bag to help neutralize Monterey's speed.

"We don't have any particular strategy against Monterey," said Johnson. "I wish our catcher could throw a few base runners out thought. That's going to be crucial for Craig Ray. They (Plainsmen) stole the bases at will the first time he faced them."

IN SAN ANGELO, the Bobcats find themselves in the same situation as the Rebels — win the first game or it's all over.

Lubbock Coronado took a 4-3 decision Tuesday in their three-game series and needs to win only one of the two games scheduled for Friday, starting at 2 p.m.

Area athletes seeking life long dream at state

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

AUSTIN — The crowning glory of a season's work will work itself out here Friday and Saturday at Memorial Stadium when the state's elite compete in the state track meet.

It's where hearts are broken in the space of seconds and where life long dreams are rewarded for the rest of life.

Six Tall City athletes and numerous area thinclads will be among this exotic group this weekend when they throw all the talent they have in one final yearly goal — win a state championship. That's the ultimate experience in high school athletics.

Some events will start Friday morning at 11 a.m., but the meet proper begins at 7 p.m. Friday with the 3A and 4A competition. Saturday the majority of the Class A, 2A and 5A competition will begin at 12:30 p.m.

MIDLAND LEE'S Damon Polk, a senior, will have his final high school fling on the Memorial Stadium track Saturday afternoon in the 110-meter high hurdles. It is a period of time he would like to prove himself as the best.

Polk went through nine meets this yeav untouched, but his unbeaten string came to an end in the Region I meet when he was beaten by Eastern Hills' Andrew Livingston. Livingston had a 13.88 while Polk had a 13.9. Polk has beaten 13.88 three times this year. His best is 13.72, a District 4-5A record, and he might need that to pull off the state dream.

"I didn't run my best (in the region meet) and I know I can do much better. I found it hard to concentrate after dropping the baton in the sprint relay on Friday. I'll have to put that behind me and work for state," Polk said.

Midland High's Chuck St. Germain, also a senior, will put his fate to two-laps around the Memorial Stadium track in the 800 meters. St. Germain's state battle will also be a District 4-5A battle with Odessa Permian's Bruce Bennett, each winning twice against each other this year. Both had career bests last week at the Region I meet with Bennett turning in a 1:55.85 and St. Germain a 1:55.90.

"Bennett won't be the major concern Saturday," St. Germain said. "I think it will take a 1:53 to win at Austin and I need to concentrate on staying with whoever is in the lead."

THE SURPRISE state entry for Lee is its 1600-meter relay team and again two 4-5A schools are featured. Lee posted a school record of 3:14.5 at the region meet while Permian won with a 3:13.7.

Lee's team features sophomores Walter Jones and Marc Brackens along with seniors Carleton Johnson and Luther Johnson. Permian will have Thurman Hines, Randy Ensch, Bennett and Dennis Alexander on the relay team and Permian will also have a sprint relay team in the meet.

Lee earned entry in the 1600 relay with a last-minute switch at the region meet when Coach Sam Volpe put Brackens in the relay unit in place of Billy Gibbs.

"I thought the change would give us a chance, but I didn't know we could run that kind of time," Volpe said.

Permian's Ensch will also be in the 200 meters and Alexander in the 400 meters. Odessa High will have Thomas Taylor in the high jump, who has a goal of 7-feet. Abilene High will have Russell Mangum in the 1600 run.

A LOT of eyes will be cast on the Class A competition where Greenwood and Rankin have key entries. Rankin's Dennis Black will be out to make up for a mistake in last year's 400 meters. He stopped running before the finish line and ended up third, but has another chance this year with a 48.99 to his credit.

Greenwood's Stewart Burleson will try to repeat in the high jump. He has a 6-8 this year and had a 6-10 last year. He will be watched since he is also trying to win his second straight singles title in tennis this weekend, a rare double in two sports.

Rankin will also have two relay teams in the meet with the sprint relay team owning a 3:26.87 and the sprint relay, 44.74.

Reagan County's Gregg Fisher will shoot for double gold in the hurdles. He is not the favorite, but close. He has a 14.25 in the highs this year and a 38.3 in the intermediates. Stanton's Timmy Bryand will be in the pole vault with a qualifying leap of 12-6 in the Region I meet.

Andrews' Kirk Pearcy will be in the 4A division's 1600 run Friday night and is rated as one of the favorites.

Christian signs with NMJC

BY CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Sheila Christian, Midland High's best all-around athlete for 1982-83, has signed a letter of intent to play basketball at New Mexico Junior College in Hobbs.

The 18-year-old will be making history as she joins 11 other players comprising the first womens' basketball team the Thunderbirds have had.

Christian gracefully declined recruiting efforts by other schools including Sul Ross State University in Alpine.

"Right now I think there are more advantages in going to a junior college," she said, "and the campus is very nice."

The Thunderbirds will be coached by Sharon Falor who moved to Hobbs from Lancing, Michigan in April. She was head coach at Lancing Community College where her team complied a 46-8 record over the past two years and was ranked as high as seventh in the nation among JUCO schools.

"I first heard about Sheila from Big Spring coach Anne Fowler," she said. "I haven't seen Sheila play but Anne spoke very highly of her."

Christian has lettered in three sports — basketball, volleyball and track — since her sophomore year and was named the Most Vauable Player in District 4-5A in volleyball and basketball this past year. She plans to use her full athletic scholarship to major in elementary education.

Asked if she expected to start as a freshman Christian said, "Yes, of course."

Falor agrees.

"Sheila is the only point guard we've got," she said. "Everyone we've recruited is their district's all-state nominee and I expect her to be a starter."

Falor said the type of game the Thunderbirds will play depends on personnel.

"I like to run a motion offense, have a tendency to run and use a disciplined shot selection," she said. "We'll use a matchup (man-to-man) defense, half and full court press."

"I emphasize the transition game and play agressively to get the ball inside."

According to Falor the addition of NMJC leaves only two of the eight teams in the WJCAC without women's basketball, Midland College and New Mexico Military Institute.

Gil pitches Midland to 8-1 win over Tulsa

TULSA, Okla. — Midland pitcher Carlos Gil gave up one run in the bottom of the first inning Wednesday and went on to throw eight shutout innings to lead the Cubs to an 8-1 Texas League victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

In nine innings of duty, Gil allowed six hits and only one walk while striking out six to improve his season record to 3-2.

With the score tied at 1-1, Bill Hatcher drove in his first run of the game with a double The Cubs added another run in the inning and then Hatcher brought home three more in the sixth with his fifth home run of the year.

Two final two runs came in the seventh inning off reliever Dennis Long.

Tulsa starting pitcher Frank Brosious, 1-4, was tagged for 10 of the Cubs 14 hits while Long gave up four.

The victory gives Midland a 2-0 edge in the five-game series and a 16-15 record overall.

The victory also pulls the Cubs to within 1½ games of West leading San Antonio. Jackson helped the Cub cause Wednesday night with a 5-3 win over the Dodgers.

The loss drops to Tulsa to 10-19.

Midland has two more games in Tulsa before traveling to Shreveport Monday for a five-game series. When the Cubs return home it will be for a return engagement against Tulsa and Shreveport

Flakey left-handers with zeros don't bother Elia

One thing and another, and bet you can't name the highest paid Big 10 football coach...

Former Midland Cubs left-hander Craig Lefferts is considered a typical "left-handed" flake because his t-shirts say "Leffty." Beleaguered Chicago Manager Lee Elia won't care, just so long as the former University of Arizona pitcher keeps putting zeros up on the scoreboard...

If it weren't for Vanderbilt, the Southeast Conference wouldn't have been able to pick an all-academic basketball team...

IT'S a success in Japan and there's no reason why it can't be a success here, argues the coach trying to introduce a new spring sport in the U.S. A soccer coach waxing optimistic? No, George Allen of the USFL's Chicago Blitz...

Midland Manager Tom Harmon looks on the Texas League East-West rivalry as an opportunity to "do something in the race. "It seems like all of our intra-divisional series are going down to 2-2 before being decided. As a result, we're all hanging together."

Recalling last year's first half, that isn't all that bad, Tom. Midland was so far behind that it was almost mathematically eliminated at this stage of the first half...

ONE-TIME Midland Cub infielder Tony Franklin, now roving infield instructor for the Chicago Cubs, was in Midland for the last home stand and it will probably be the last time he'll be around. In June, he'll be managing the Class A Geneva Rookie League club.

TED BATTLES BATTLE SCENE

"Last year was my first as a manager and I really liked it. We finished a half game out of second." Tony's team will be composed of "June draft picks and players who are currently struggling at Quad Cities."

"I worked two years with Doc Edwards and then two with the Expos' organization," says Tony. "I want to stay with the Cubs, because I think they have some good talent in the organization and what I like is that the coaching staff is so strong on teaching. If they can just buy a little time, I think the fans in Chicago will eventually have something to cheer about."

A mild-mannered guy off the field, Tony takes managing seriously, "Maybe, too seriously. I may be the only manager ever thrown out of a Fall Instructional League game. And there's the guy who did it," he said pointing at Kip Arnold, who had given Harmon the thumb the night before...

THE LOUD voice was full of accusation. "You gave Tomy Lee back to Fred Turner, but then you took the Kentucky Derby away from him. It was Tomy Lee who won the Derby. It's really very simple. Willie Shoemaker was riding Ralph Lowe's Gallant Man when he mistook the 16th pole for the finish in the Kentucky Derby. Just associate Lowe and Shoemaker and you won't make that mistake again."

Contritely, "That's simple enough. By the way, who rode Tomy Lee?"

"I don't remember, but you won't go wrong if you just link Lowe and Shoemaker."

Very comforting, until it was discovered that Willie Shoemaker was Tomy Lee's jockey, too.

Incidentally, Tomy Lee, which beat Sword Dancer in the Derby, did not try for the Triple Crown, the Preakness and Belmont, after winning the Derby. A smaller, English bred horse, it was not felt Tomy possessed the physical stamina to try such a feat...

Highest paid Big 10 football coach? If you said Michigan's Bo Schembechler or Ohio State's Earle Bruce, guess again. It's Michigan State's George Perles at $95,000 a year. Minnesota's Joe Salem is the low man on the totem pole at $51,000...

Sixers' defense defeats Bucks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Defense was the name of the game as the Philadelphia 76ers took a 2-0 lead over the Milwaukee Bucks in their National Basketball Association Eastern Conference final.

The 76ers won the second in the best-of-seven series 87-81 Wednesday night.The series now moves to Milwaukee for the third and fourth games Saturday and Sunday. The 76ers won two of three games there during the regular season.

A fifth game, if necessary, is scheduled in Philadelphia Wednesday night.

The winner advances to the NBA championships against the survivor of the Western Conference series between the Los Angeles Lakers and San Antonio Spurs. That series is tied 1-1.

While defense prevailed, Moses Malone and Andrew Toney gave the 76ers the offense needed to win. Malone scored 26 and Toney 20.

Malone, who was disappointed after scoring only 14 points and grabbing 12 rebounds in Sunday's first game, wasn't excited about his return to form.

"I just did the same things tonight that I did in the other game," he said. "Only the results were better. I got a little more aggressive going to the hoop. And when they weren't pressuring me at the top of the key I made my moves to the hoop.

"Neither team can run on each other in this series, but it probably will be different in Milwaukee. They know now their back is to the wall."

Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham noted that his team is 6-0 in the playoffs (including a four game sweep of the New York Knicks), "but we haven't had an easy one yet."

Philadelphia led by 11 with 9:08 to play at 77-66. The Bucks then went on a 14-3 surge to tie at 80 on a hook by Bob Lanier over Malone with with 3:08 left.

But Maurice Cheeks, who scored 15, hit an 18 foot jumper to send Philadelphia ahead.

Then came what many felt was the big play.

The Bucks came down and Brian Winters lofted a shot. Bobby Jones, who stole an inbound pass Sunday to trigger a 111-109 victory in overtime, blocked the shot.

The ball went to Cheeks who passed to Julius Erving under the basket. Erving, who had just six points, slam dunked for a four-point lead that seemed to take the starch out of the Bucks.

Milwaukee got just one point in the final three minutes.

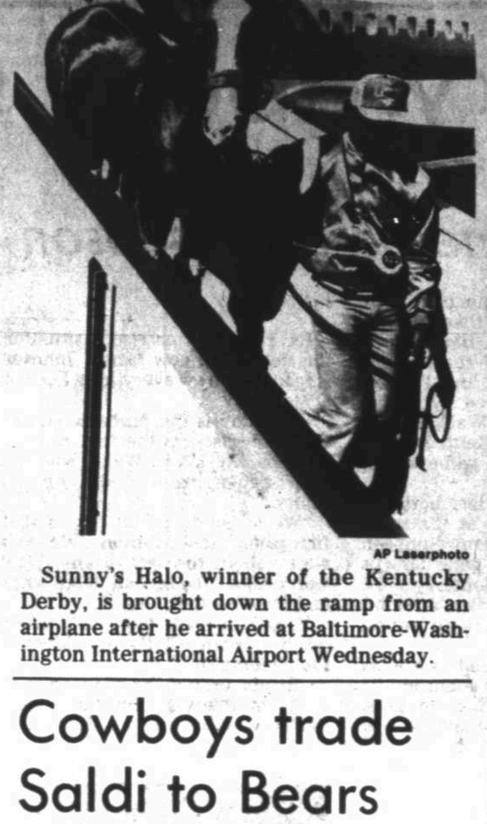

Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said he thought Jones got more than the ball on the block at the end, "but he made a good play, I'll give him that."

"We have to play one game at a time and try to win and get back into contention," Nelson said.

Marques Johnson, who scored 30 Sunday, led his team with 25. Sidney Moncrief, held to one field goal Sunday, came back to hit eight and total 21 points.

Lanier, who scored 10 points and was out rebounded 17-10 by Malone in the battle of giant centers, was upset.

"I thought we made so many mental errors. It is unbelievable. It's crazy, crazy, forgetting things, forgetting plays, forgetting simple instructions coming out of the huddle," he said.

Jackson rallies to beat San Antonio

By The Associated Press

Kevin Mitchell and Terry Blocker provided the game-winning hits as Jackson came from behind to beat San Antonio 5-3 in Texas League action.

In another TL game Wednesday night El Paso edged Arkansas in a 12-10 slugfest.

A game between Beaumont and Shreveport was rained out.

Kevin Mitchell hit a two-run double in the top of the eighth for Jackson and scored the winning run on Terry Blocker's single.

San Antonio scored three runs in the bottom of the seventh on Robbie Allen's bases-loaded triple.

Shortstop Earnest Riles had two doubles, a triple and drove in a run for El Paso, while teammate Bobby Glen Smith banged out two doubles and added two RBIs.

Tim Crews, 2-2, picked up the win for the Diablos. Jerry Johnson, 3-4, was tagged with the loss for Arkansas.

Cowboys trade Saldi to Bears

DALLAS (AP) — Tight end Jay Saldi, unhappy about his future with the Dallas Cowboys, has been traded to the Chicago Bears for an undisclosed 1984 draft choice, a Cowboys spokesman said.

Saldi, who had asked to be traded, will be rejoining former Cowboy receivers coach Mike Ditka, who left Dallas last year to become head coach of the Bears, said Cowboy spokesman Greg Aiello.

The Cowboys signed Saldi in 1976 as a free agent out of the University of South Carolina.

Saldi hurt a knee and ankle in training camp last summer and missed most of the season. Playing behind Doug Cosbie and Billy Joe DuPree, Saldi caught only one pass for nine yards.

Lady Chaps fourth; Alvarado All-American

OCALA, Fla. — Midland College dropped into a tie for fourth place in the National Junior College tennis tournament here Wednesday. The Lady Chaparrals won both doubles matches but split in singles.

Cooke County Community College, Tyler Junior College and Palm Beach are all tied for first place with 14 points while MC and Broward (Florida) are tied for fourth at 11.

No. 1 Liz Alvarado advanced to the fourth round of competition with her 6-3, 6-0 victory over Tammy Skelton of Pease (Georgia) and in process qualified for JUCO All-American honors.

Jodi Wertenberger was the other singles winner for MC as she won her No. 3 match against Illinois Valley's Rebecca Huhn, 6-4, 6-1.

No. 2 Kym Sommerville and No. 4 Therese Devine both had trouble with Palm Beach Junior College. Sommerville lost to Linda Locke, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3 and Devine to Icela Rivera, 6-3, 6-7, 6-4.

Alvarado and Devine teammed up to easily win their doubles match against Sirlin-Jones of Central Florida, 6-0, 6-1

Jodi and Jill Wertenberger had an equally easy time against Skelton-Lewis of Pease, winning 6-0, 6-1.

Horner feels 'weird' after struck by ball

ATLANTA (AP) — Third baseman Bob Horner of the Atlanta Braves complained of feeling "weird" following a game against the Montreal Expos in which he was struck by an outfield throw sliding into third base in the fifth inning.

AC honors McGookey

Doreen McGookey has been named Outstanding Freshman Woman athlete at Austin College in Sherman after breaking the school record in the 1,650 freestyle and swimming on the record-breaking medley relay team.

She qualified for the NAIA championships in four individual and two relay events.

The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Donald McGookey, Midland, Doreen swam for the City of Midland Swim Team for four years. Previously, she was on the Dad's Club of Houston team. She lettered three years in swimming at Lee High School and captained the girls team in her senior year.

ONE OF THE FEW LUXURIES STILL AVAILABLE IN TEXAS FOR UNDER $35.

The Hertz Lincoln.

® REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. © HERTZ SYSTEM INC. 1983

From its classic styling to its richly appointed interior, the Lincoln Town Car is truly a luxury automobile.

But at these prices, it could almost be considered an economy car.

Especially when you consider that Hertz never charges you a penny for mileage at all corporate locations in Texas.

This low weekend rate is available from Thursday noon to Sunday noon.

But reserve your Lincoln as early as possible. Like many luxuries, its availability is limited.

For information and complete details, call your travel agent. Or call Hertz at 1-800-654-3131.

You'll find that renting from Hertz is as much a pleasure as driving a Lincoln.

Hertz

#1 For Everyone.™
Hertz rents Lincolns and other fine cars.

Minimum day weekend rental requirements apply. Weekend rate is non-discountable. For this rate to apply, cars must be returned to renting city. Gas, C.D.W., P.A.I. and state and local taxes not included. Rate subject to change without notice.

IN THE WILD

Turkeys make come back

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Wisconsin's turkey hunt this spring marks another successful effort to re-establish the big game bird in areas where it died out years ago, game managers say.

"It's been one of the real brighter areas in wildlife management in recent years," said Ron Nicklaus, the head of the turkey restocking program that resulted in Wisconsin's first turkey hunt in 15 years.

The wild turkey, hallowed as the main dish at the Plymouth colonists' first Thanksgiving Day feast in 1621, fell victim to hunting pressure and habitat distruction.

According to the state chapter of the Wild Turkey Federation, only about 18 states still supported turkey populations by the 1930s. Prior to the recent restocking, Wisconsin's last authenticated sighting of a native wild turkey was in 1881.

Today, however, turkey populations are growing and the birds are hunted legally in about 40 states, Nicklaus said.

Nicklaus said Missouri, which provided live-trapped turkeys that were released in Wisconsin, harvests about 20,000 or more of the birds a year.

"Turkey hunting down there is as big as deer hunting is here," Nicklaus said.

In Wisconsin, sporadic attempts to re-establish the birds met with little success, although a project at the Central Wisconsin Conservation Area near Necedah allowed limited hunting from 1966 to 1968 — the last year the state had a turkey hunting season before this year.

The current effort got underway in 1976, with the release of 45 turkeys from Missouri in the southwest part of the state. The birds established a prolific breeding population in the hilly area of woodlands and farmlands.

Nicklaus estimated the population numbered about 5,000, as 1,200 holders of turkey hunting permits prepared to take to the field. The tightly controlled season was scheduled for three successive long weekends — April 21-25, April 28-May 2 and May 5-9.

The first weekend, 71 turkeys were shot and registered, including several in the 26-pound range. Nicklaus said he was sticking with his preseason guess that only about 150-200 of the birds would be bagged.

"They're pretty cagey, even though this is the breeding season and they have other things on their minds," he said. "You still have to get them in close enough, within about 40 yards, and their eyesight is about 20 times as good as a man's.

"They can detect very small movements at very great distances."

Nicklaus said he expects continuing growth in the turkey population because of the birds' compatibility with the terrain and agricultural practices of the region, where, for example, waste grain left in fields provides a supplementary food supply in the winter months.

He estimated the restocking program, in which the state traded Wisconsin ruffed grouse for Missouri turkeys, costs less than $100,000 a year but is "going to provide a lot of recreation."

Think twice before adopting wild animal

By RODNEY RIEHLE

Think twice before adopting a wild creature, advise Texas Parks and Wildlife biologists.

More often than not, efforts by well-meaning individuals to assist seemingly abandoned birds or animals result in harm or death.

"You should avoid taking young animals from the wild with the idea that they are abandoned and need human care," says Bruce Thompson, TPWD. "In most cases, the parent is near, and taking the youngster is traumatic to the animals and provides no real benefit to wildlife as a whole.

Thompson said the most common incident may be the discovery of "orphaned" deer fawns. "Fawns are seldom ever orphaned. The does is usually nearby. Adopting these animals nearly always causes problems."

Another form of interference with nature may not always be intentional, but it also can be damaging. "Water birds, including the endangered brown pelican, often gather in large colonies for nesting. The disturbance of even one colony could have serious impacts on the total breeding population of some species within the state," Thompson said.

J. Lee Evans, Ike Pate and Heather Mulanax, from left, work bass in hatchery at Oak Creek. Some 80,000 bass fry were placed in the lake recently.

THE BOB Hall and Horace Caldwell fishing piers off the barrier islands of the Texas Gulf Coast will be be open soon. Long favorite fishing spots, the piers were destroyed by Hurricane Allin in 1980. It has taken a long time, but anglers soon will be able to stroll out on the 15.5 foot walkway the length of the 1,200 foot piers to a 160-foot T and drop a line.

Each pier has fish-cleaning tables, concession stands and restrooms. Shark fishermen prefer Bob Hall, although redfish, speckled trout, sand trout, mackerel, flounder, sheepshead, gafftop, drum, ling and sometimes a tarpon are caught in season.

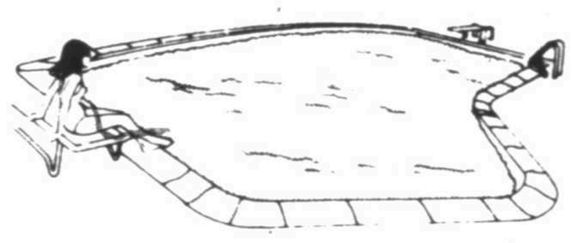

AGED LAKE Medina still is a good place to fish, thanks to some new arrivals. Smallmouth bass, hybrid striped bass and threadfin shad, recently introduced to the lake, are doing well....Meanwhile, largemouth bass, hybrid stripers, crappie and catfish are doing well at Coleto Creek reservoir near Victoria...Lake Murvaul is celebrating its 25th anniversary by producing even more trophy-sized bass than it did during younger days. At least three bass in excess of 10 pounds each have been caught at Murvaul since Jan. 1...

Treanor Equip. has 3-year, 5,000-hour warranty on brand-new Caterpillars

Now, the strongest warranty in the heavy-equipment industry is available from Treanor Equipment. It guarantees, for the first three years or 5,000 hours: the machine's power train, including engine, transmission, and final drive; 48-hour maximum parts availability; and 48-hour maximum repair turnaround.

Treanor's new 'Plus 3' program covers 23 different models of Caterpillar machines, including D3 through D6 track-type tractors, 931 through 973 track-type loaders, 910 through 966 wheel loaders, 613 through 615 scrapers, 120G, 130G, and 140G motor graders, 215 and 225 hydraulic excavators, plus a couple of other machines.

The guarantee assures that you will get any part you need for the proper operation of your Cat machine within 48 hours, or you get the part free. It also guarantees that if your machine is down for repairs, we'll have it running again within 48 hours of when we start repairing it. If we can't, we'll either lend you a comparable machine at NO COST...or we'll give you a credit equal to our customary rental charge for an equivalent unit. Weekends and holidays are excluded from the 48-hour period.

In addition to this, the warranty can move with the machine to the next owner, should you decide to sell the machine. That adds to the machine's value, and should mean a higher resale price. Treanor can offer such a strong guarantee, with money-backed promises, only because of the proven quality of Caterpillar machines and Treanor's unmatched parts and service backup.

If you need machines for only a short time, call Treanor about their complete rental fleet of equipment. You can rent the exact machine you need by the day, week, month or longer. Treanor also offers the new Royal Motor Grader in their rental fleet. It is a small motor grader powerful enough to grade base, and is ideal for small projects like parking lots. Treanor also has tractors, wheel loaders, track loaders, Cat motor graders, scrapers, pipelayers, excavators, and compactors in their rental fleet. For farmers and ranchers, grubbers and brush rakes are available with many of the tractors and loaders.

For any of your rental machine needs, or for more details on Treanor's tough 'Plus 3' guarantee, call Rob Allen in Abilene at (915) 692-1600, or call toll-free 1-800-592-4738. In Odessa, call Kevin Maberry at (915) 337-5521, or call toll-free 1-800-592-4528. Rental rates start as low as $200 a day. Give them a call today.

Traditional artists' expressions available at Shop of Blue Gem

"Expressions in traditions" summarize both the philosophy and much of the inventory of The Shop of the Blue Gem.

Specializing in American Indian jewelry and crafts along with Indian and Southwestern art, the Shop has a large inventory of native American jewelry ranging from the traditional squash blossoms in silver, silver and turquoise, silver and coral, to Concho belts for both men and women. In fact, the Shop even has link Concho belts suitable for young children.

Owner Dorothy Davis has found a good blend of the more contemporary jewelry designs along with the traditional styles. She carries the designs of Melody Lightfeather and Artie Yellowhorse, both featuring very distinctive and individual styles. Florentine Panteah has long been recognized as a leader of outstanding Indian jewelry. The Midland Shop has two pieces of her work and several pieces are in the Santa Fe Shop.

In addition to fine jewelry, the Shop features the bronze work of Theresa Martin from Lubbock and handles such other outstanding bronze artists as Lincoln Fox, Dave McGary and G. L. Sanders.

In the Gallery, Mrs. Davis proudly points out oils and watercolors by Tom Darrah, plus watercolors by Terri Sodd and pastels by Jerry Montoya. Also in the Gallery is Virginia Stroud's new serigraph, "When Water Was Sweet".

The Shop has a Bert Seabourn original watercolor and originals by Gary Gore and Justin Wells. Local Midland artists represented by the Blue Gem Gallery include Annora Pate, Paula Mallams, Lula Belle Klinger and Carol Greenwood.

Authentic Indian pottery in the Shop includes work by the Montoya family of Cochiti, Mary Small of Jemez and Blue Corn of San Ildefonso. In addition, both the Midland and Santa Fe shops have limited work by the late Maria Martinez, renown potter from San Ildefonso.

Within the last month, the Blue Gem has received a new shipment of Chimayo rugs ranging in size from small 10-inch square to 36 by 72 inches. All come in a wide assortment of colors and designs.

If you are searching for a unique appointment for a special place in either your home or office, an American Indian sandpainting lamp, available in three styles, or a sandpainting clock in several sizes and designs may be exactly what you need for a finishing touch. Also available are Navajo rugs in all the popular and traditiional patterns. A Navajo rug can become a focal point in almost any room, be it in a home or office.

Two new items at the Blue Gem are pottery coffee mugs and pottery canteens, all by Eliz. Olquin of the Isleta Pueblo near Albuquerque.

The Shop of the Blue Gem in Midland and Ruidoso and Blue Gem of La Fonda in Santa Fe are exclusive outlets of the jewelry and art of Melody Lightfeather, Indian Arts and Crafts Association Artist of the Year for 1983.

If it's made by American Indians, the Blue Gem either has it or can get it for you. Visit the Shop at 3323-B W. Wadley in LaVallita Center, or telephone Dorothy, Susie or Marie at 697-2346.

Energy Committee kills Ford amendment

By TOD ROBBERSON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Senate Energy Committee on Wednesday narrowly defeated an amendment to the Reagan administration's natural gas decontrol bill that would have prevented pipelines and gas producers from canceling existing wholesale contracts in 1985.

Defeat of the amendment, proposed by Sen. Wendell Ford (D-Ky.), struck a blow to groups like the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, which has lobbied against the "market-out" provision of the administration's decontrol bill and has favored amendments protecting the sanctity of existing contracts after decontrol takes effect.

The Ford amendment would have eliminated the ability of either a gas producer or pipeline company to cancel an existing contract in hopes of securing a more advantageous contract when gas decontrol takes effect. Under the administration proposal, an existing contract could remain in effect after decontrol only if both parties to the contract agreed to keep it intact.

The PBPA, in a recent letter to Rep. Tom Loeffler (R-Hunt), expressed general support for the administration bill but had serious objections to the provision allowing for contract cancelations, according to a Loeffler aide.

Loeffler, in a statement Wednesday, commended the PBPA for its evaluation of the Reagan bill, saying the association "expressed generally the same reservations I have expressed previously, principally with regard to the sanctity of contracts."

Loeffler did not offer a point-by-point evaluation of the PBPA letter, but he offered to make his views available to Energy Secretary Donald P. Hodel and interested parties in Congress.

An aide to Sen. John Tower (R-Texas) had no immediate comment on Wednesday's committee vote other than to say Tower "shares the concern" of PBPA members regarding contract sanctity.

The Energy Committee's 10-10 tie vote on Ford's amendment, under previously adopted rules, meant that the bill's original wording would remain intact except for a 16-page amendment passed Tuesday to permit local utilities to purchase gas directly from producers. That amendment, by Sen. Bill Bradley (D-N.J.), would enable gas purchasers to require a pipeline to transport gas under contract from the wholesaler rather than having the pipeline serve as a gas wholesaler itself.

During Wednesday's proceedings, committee chairman James McClure (R-Idaho) used a bit of parliamentary maneuvering to sidestep Ford's amendment in favor of McClure's own amendment addressing the market-out provision.

At the beginning of the session, Ford and McClure exchanged accusations about the effect of decontrol on the gas market. Ford claimed the Reagan bill's market-out provision would "create massive market dislocation," and he complained of chaos breaking out if Congress were to legislate an effective end to existing contracts as of 1985.

McClure countered that "there is almost utter chaos out there in the market today" and that under current regulations there already are "unilateral abrogations of contract obligations" between the producers and pipelines.

The amendment McClure offered was his attempt to retain the market-out provision while providing "for a more orderly and phased transition to a deregulated natural gas market" — an apparent answer to the opponents of deregulation who fear the effects of an abrupt price increase for consumers.

McClure's amendment would delay the start of market out beyond the winter peak-heating season, to April 15, 1985 through April 15, 1986. It also would increase the notification period for contract cancelation to 60 days.

The amendment also would enable pipelines to require that current contracts with producers remain intact until a new purchaser is able to take deliveries. The producers would have the option of forcing purchasers to continue receiving gas under existing contracts.

If producers invoke that option, their gas would sell at the lower applicable price of either the existing contract price or the "gas cap" price set under the administration's bill. Purchasers would continue under contract with the producers either until a new purchaser is found or until April 15, 1986, whichever is earlier.

A committee vote on McClure's amendment is not expected until the middle of next week.

PBPA not surprised

Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said this morning he was not surprised that the amendment to prevent abrogation of contracts was narrowly defeated.

"We weren't really all that surprised, because the vote was so narrow on previous votes," he said. "We're working now to do whatever we can to salvage the best bill we can get."

Thompson said vote results on the Senate Energy Committee which is wading through the Hodel/Reagan decontrol bill have not been surprising "when we have people like Bradley and (Sen. Howard) Metzenbaum who are trying to 'do it' to the domestic petroleum industry."

The PBPA will continue working for passage of points it mentions in its May 2 position paper on the natural gas deregulation issue, he said.

The oil industry organization basically stands behind the Hodel bill. It supports the provision that any contract may be renegotiated and may operate by its new terms. This support is subject, however, to any renegotiation occurring as a result of existing contract terms and not through abrogation of existing contracts by any party, the PBPA said.

"Most of us from the oil producing states are in agreement on that phase of the bill (cancellation of contracts). Unfortunately, there are more consumer than producer states.

"Our main opposition to abrogation of contracts was that it would present an increase in natural gas prices to the consumer. We still believe this," Thompson said.

FNB shuffles funds, breaks even

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

The First National Bank of Midland reports that it broke even in the first quarter of 1983, after electing to transfer profits to its loan loss reserve.

The amount of money on deposit at the bank fell by $228.2 million in the period, according to the bank's quarterly balance sheet.

Bank officers said last weekend that the board of directors decided to place approximately $2.2 million in pre-tax income into the bank's allowance set aside for loan losses, in anticipation the bank's loan problems would continue.

The move left the bank reporting zero net income for the quarter ended March 31, versus net income of $4.9 million in the comparable 1982 quarter. First National reported net income of $11.9 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1982.

Chief executive officer Donald L. McCall said the bank probably wouldn't pay any dividends to shareholders through the remainder of 1983. The bank did declare a 30 cents per share dividend for the first quarter 1983.

Net loans for the quarter were $1,324,114,000, an increase of $139 million, or 12 percent, from $1,185,312,000 reported in the same quarter of 1982. The loan total was also up $23 million from the $1,301,420,000 reported in the previous quarter ended Dec. 31.

Deposits in the first quarter 1983 were down by 15 percent and net income was off by 100 percent from the same quarter a year ago. The bank reported deposits of $1,185,065,000 at the end of March 1983, compared to $1,413,283,000 at Dec. 31 and compared to $1,389,432 at March 31, 1982.

First National's deposit total is thus down by $204.4 million from the same quarter a year ago. Total deposits have decreased by $228 million from Dec. 31 figures.

Assets at the end of the quarter were $1.82 billion, up by 7 percent from $1.71 billion reported a year earlier. The figure includes cash, investment securities, loans, income receivable and bank equipment.

Short term borrowings increased from $222.1 million at year end to $487.1 million in the quarter. This figure includes $207 million of federal funds purchased from other banks within the Federal Reserve System, securities sold under an agreement to repurchase them later, and other, unspecified borrowings.

Total liabilities of First National at March 31 were $1,699,836,000 compared to $1,677,875,000 at year end. Liabilities are up $78 million from the $1,621,847,000 reported in the first quarter of 1982.

Total shareholders' equity in the bank increased to $121.6 million in the quarter, up from $88.4 million a year ago, but down slightly from $122.6 million at Dec. 31, 1982.

Trustee says Nucorp can be saved

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN DIEGO — The court-appointed trustee of Nucorp Energy Inc. said Wednesday that he believes the company can avoid liquidation and may even become a growing concern again with a "disciplined program" of acquisitions.

In a report to the federal bankruptcy court here, Barry J. Galt, Nucorp's trustee, said the "preferability of reorganization over liquidation is virtually indisputable."

He said he plans to press for a reorganized Nucorp with little or no long-term debt and $40 million to $60 million in cash that otherwise would be distributed to Nucorp creditors if the company were liquidated.

Nucorp also reported that its fourth-quarter loss nearly quintupled to $181.3 million from the year-earlier loss of $38.5 million. Fourth-quarter revenue totaled $29.1 million, down more than 26 percent from the year before.

For the full year, Nucorp reported a loss of nearly $471 million, nearly eleven times the year-ago loss of $43.5 million. Full-year revenue totaled $106.9 million, down nearly 13 percent.

Last July, Nucorp sought court protection under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code, citing a weak market for its oil and gas drilling equipment and high interest costs.

In January this year, a dissident shareholder group charged that Nucorp's former management, including its chairman who abruptly resigned earlier that month, systematically falsified sales to materially inflate its reported earnings. Nucorp also decided that month to terminate or suspend 22 of its 27 subsidiaries.

In his report, Galt did not mention the status of his investigation of the shareholder charges.

In his report to Bankruptcy Judge Ross M. Pyle, Galt said the future of Nucorp's "core" companies — the three units that make up the oil and gas group; Maverick Tube, an oil field tubing maker; and Del-Tex, Inc., a sucker-rod manufacturer — depends on future oil prices. But, he said, their cash flow is expected to be more than enough to fund anticipated capital and maintenance programs.

Galt's report said, however, that these core companies are not "large enough or strong enough" to service or retire significant amounts of debt.

The core companies can generate about $10 million annually over the next decade after reinvestment needs and costs of managing the reorganized Nucorp, Galt said.

"Ironically," Galt wrote in his report, "the most appropriate business strategy for Recovery Corp. (the reorganized Nucorp) would be to expand the size and scope of its businesses and operations by effecting an orderly and disciplined program of growth by acquisition," thereby increasing profits and expanding the asset base. He was not more specific and did not cite any acquisition candidates.

A court hearing to consider the Galt report is scheduled for May 20.

Rocks tell story of major mass extinction

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Researchers have found evidence of an early major mass extinction of animals, the sudden disappearance of three-quarters of the plankton in the sea 650 million years ago at a time when such single-celled creatures dominated life on earth, according to a National Science Foundation report released Tuesday.

About 70 percent of algae species disappeared, and almost all protozoan life was wiped out in the event, including all the most complex creatures living near the sea surface, said Andrew H. Knoll of Harvard University, who discovered the extinction along with Gonzalo Vidal of the University of Lund in Sweden.

The algae that disappeared were spherical, one-celled animals with a variety of spiked, knobbed or otherwise "decorative" surfaces, Knoll said.

At that time the earth was inhabited only by one-celled animals, including bacteria, protozoa and algae.

The popultion crash came during an era of glacial expansion, and so Knoll speculates that the movement of the glaciers may have caused it.

Of the approximately 40 species of algae then alive, 34 vanished in the incident, and virtually all the half-dozen protozoans of the sea disappeared from the fossil record for 100 million to 150 million years.

Until now, the earliest known mass extinction was 450 million years ago, when many species of shell-covered marine animals disappeared.

The evidence for the mass extinction of 650 million years ago came from the analysis of sedimentary rocks from several locations, including Scandinavia, the Baltic region and Greenland.

"Extinctions are a fact of evolutionary life," Knoll said. "The fossil record clearly shows that most of the species that have sat, run or swum on the earth during its history no longer exist."

President honors Texan

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A south Texas woman who turned a small doughnut eatery into a paying proposition was honored by President Reagan at a White House ceremony in the Rose Garden Wednesday.

Mrs. Phyllis Griggs was named Small Business Administrator of the year for Texas. She is president of Ahora Que, Inc., 4309 North 22nd Street, McAllen. She is affiliated with the Mister Donut franchise with outlets in McAllen, Mission and Edinburg. She previously sold similar businesses in Harlingen and Brownsville.

The Small Business Administration, celebrating Small Business Week, brought the Texan here for a three-day round of events cuiminating with the President's reception for all state winners. She attended a special luncheon for women professional business owners Wednesday.

Mrs. Griggs, from South Dakota, started a small business in 1973 with her husband. Divorced a year later, she bought out her husband and continued in the business although she had only had experience at the secretarial level. She borrowed $26,000 from a bank and in 18 months, had paid that back. By 1982, her sales amounted to $1.6 million.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground after opening higher today, extending Wednesday's broad retreat.

Nearly four stocks fell in price for every three that rose in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down 9.96 points Wednesday, dropped another 5.23 points to 1,214.49 by noon. The blue-chip average had been up 2.51 points in the opening half hour.

Analysts said traders were selling stock to cash in on recent record-setting gains. The Dow Jones industrials peaked at 1,232.59 last Friday, while broad indexes of the NYSE, American Stock Exchange and over-the-counter market reached record heights Tuesday.

The NYSE's composite index fell .31 to 94.68. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.11 at 446.98.

Big Board volume slipped to 39.14 million shares a third of the way through the session from 45.62 million in the same period Wednesday.

Eastman Kodak, which plunged 11⅛ points over the previous eight sessions, rose ⅞ to 74⅛ as the most active issue on the NYSE. A block of 140,000 shares changed hands at 74½ a share.

Oil issues, which surged Wednesday, were mixed in active trading. Technology issues continued to slide.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Assumptions often incorrect

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You can find many a study purporting to show that after 45 years on the job Americans want nothing more than a secure retirement.

The assumption is even built into the Social Security concept, which for years assumed that at age 65 you should be ready to call it quits as a worker and begin to take it easy.

But the assumption may be wrong, and badly so. The Travelers Corporation surveyed employees 55 years of age and older and found that the closer people came to retirement age the greater was the desire to continue working.

Among those age 55 through 60, about 15 percent expressed a wish to work after age 65. The rate rose to 22 percent among those age 61 and 62, and among those 63 to 65, no less than 43 percent wished to work after age 65.

Earlier surveys tended to show a different pattern. One study cited by the Travelers people showed that in 1950 about 90 percent of male workers beyond age 54 planned to retire before 65.

Why the change? Most often cited are inflation, the enjoyment of association with others at work, and a difference between biological and chronological age.

Do small businesses create most of the jobs in America?

That assumption gained many adherents in the past few years, particularly from small-business organizations. But it is now contested.

In 1979, David L. Birch, a researcher at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, found that 87 percent of all new private sector jobs between 1969 and 1976 came from firms with fewer than 500 workers.

The results of his research were seized by various groups seeking to publicize the importance of entrepreneurship and promote the interests of small business in terms of legislation and government assistance.

But another study, using data from the Brookings Institution, has now found that small firms generate jobs roughly in proportion to their employment. Companies of 100 or fewer workers, it found, added 39.1 percent of new jobs.

The latter study was for a different time period, 1978 to 1980, but it seems likely that the differing results could hardly be explained by timing. Perhaps, suggests Professor Karl Vesper of the University of Washington, the problem is in the studies themselves.

How, he asks, should you deal with Apple Computer Inc., a relatively new but rapidly growing company?

"Should it be counted among the small companies because it started from nothing in 1976?" he asks. "Or among the large ones because by 1982 it employed 4,000 people?"

Another highly publicized assumption, this one concerning the relative costs of producing cars in the United States and in Japan, is being challenged by Timothy Bresnahan, a Stanford University assistant professor.

Bresnahan challenges the findings of James Harbour, a consultant and authority on automobile costs, that the Japanese, because of efficiencies, have a $1,500 to $2,000 advantage in producing subcompact cars.

"Grossly exaggerated," says Bresnahan. "A big myth," he adds.

He contends that the Japanese cost advantage for subcompacts probably runs between $300 and $800 a unit, a significant difference, he acknowledges, but which he claims indicates the U.S. cars remain competitive with imports, which have larger transportation costs.

He questions Harbour's methodology. For one thing, he says, the earlier study assigned idle plant costs to U.S. cars at a time when Japanese automakers were operating near capacity.

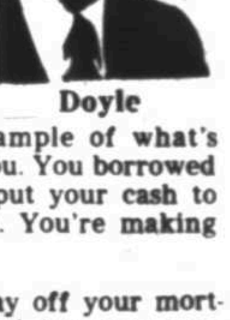

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Don't pay off cheap mortgage

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My husband is 64 and hates his job. We have an old 6 percent 30-year mortgage on our home, with only about $4,000 left to pay. It would take at least four years to finish paying the mortgage, because we add a little extra to the payment each month.

We have $3,000 in the bank. I want to put at least $2,000 of that on the mortgage, so my husband can retire and not worry about a mortgage. My husband opposes this. What is your advice?

Doyle

A. Don't do it. And stop putting that "little extra" into you regular mortgage payments. Keep the $3,000 in the bank, where I assume it's in a money market deposit account earning more than 6 percent. If that nest egg is in an old-fashioned savings account, drawing only 5.25 or 5.5 percent, switch it to the higher-paying type of account.

Here, we have a classic example of what's called "leverage" working for you. You borrowed money at 6 percent. You can put your cash to work at a higher interest rate. You're making money on the deal.

The only time you should pay off your mortgage or other debt is when the interest you are paying is higher than the return you can get by investing your money elsewhere.

Oh, how fondly I remember a 6 percent mortgage and wish we still had one at our house. That's "cheap money." Pay it off only in the scheduled installments.

Don't fret about taking a mortgage balance into you husband's retirement years. As long as you have the cash in the bank, it will be there in case you need it. Meanwhile, it will be earning more for you.

Superior meeting should be hot

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The annual stockholder meeting of Superior Oil Co. scheduled today in Reno, Nev., should bring to a boil a long-simmering battle between the aging, wealthy son and daughter of company founder William B. Keck. The feud also extends to a probate court in Los Angeles, where the siblings are fighting over their father's legacy — a fabulously wealthy private trust with assets of more than $468 million.

The immediate issue — opposed by Superior's management — is a proposed change in the company bylaws that would refer major offers for company stock to a special committee of outside directors.

Although control of the company, whose stock is traded on the New York Stock Exchange, is not directly at stake, analysts say a victory by dissidents led by Willametta Keck Day could have major effects on the future of the huge, Houston-based independent oil and gas producer — especially as a takeover prospect. Superior, which had revenues of more than $2 billion last year, explores, develops and produces oil and gas in the Southwest and Gulf Coast area.

The chief antagonist of Day, 67, is her brother, Howard Keck, 69, of Los Angeles, who retired in 1981 as Superior's chairman but is still a director and its acknowledged top power.

Although Day and Keck control substantial blocks of Superior stock, the balance of power in the voting on her proposal is in the hands of financial institutions that hold 40 percent of Superior's 127 million shares.

One of the biggest institutional holders, with more than 1 million shares of Superior, is New York-based Eberstadt Asset Management Co., which has publicly said it would vote with Day, and others reportedly have said the same thing privately to persons close to the fight.

Some have indicated that they want Day to prevail because they are unhappy with anti-takeover measures enacted last January by Superior's board, which did not seek stockholder approval.

But the contest at the stockholder meeting is only part of a wider dispute between Day and her brother. She has fought him over matters involving the W.M. Keck Trust and the W.M. Keck Foundation, which hold much of the fortune left after their father died in 1964. Those matters are slowly working their way through the court in Los Angeles.

Among the issues is the six-figure annual fee Howard Keck has received as sole trustee of the trust, which holds 8.6 percent of Superior's stock.

Since last fall, Day has gone public in her opposition to her brother's actions. Keck for the most part has kept silent. Neither was available for comment Wednesday.

Day, who owns 3.5 percent of the company's stock, reportedly submitted her resolution last January after coming to the conclusion that she and other stockholders were not getting sufficient dividends — 15 cents a share in 1981 when earnings per share were $2.85, and 20 cents a share last year when earnings per share were $1.75.

Her resolution would provide that any offer to acquire 45 percent or more of Superior's outstanding voting stock for a price not less than the market price in the preceding four weeks would be referred to a special board committee of outside directors. The committee would review any such offer and, unless it determined the price to be unfair, would recommend its approval.

Later in January, Superior's directors adopted anti-takeover measures, including staggered terms for directors and elimination of a mandatory retirement age for directors. Keck, who will be 70 next September, and two allies already 70 would have had to leave the board shortly under the old bylaws.

"Something is wrong," Day told shareholders in a letter recently.

Crosby stops in Midland on book tour

Kathryn Crosby holds a Midland relative, Theodore Forrest Windecker, during a stop in Midland Wednesday on her national tour promoting her book, "My Life with Bing."

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Five years of Kathryn Crosby's life have been devoted to a single project — telling the story of her courtship and marriage to Bing. Now that the book — "My Life with Bing" — is complete, she is touring the country giving interviews and signing autographs.

Her recent Midland stop was more than just another lap on the national circuit. It was special.

Mrs. Crosby, who was born Olive Kathryn Grandstaff in West Columbia, Texas, was in town last June for another important event in her life — the marriage of her cousin Carolyn Stokely to Sam Hooper.

This trip allowed Mrs. Crosby, who has friends and business interests in the Permian Basin, to visit a new family member, 6-weeks-old Theodore Forrest Windecker.

Staying with Theodore's parents, Charlotte and Ted Windecker, allowed Mrs. Crosby optimum conditions for her twofold trip. When Theodore wasn't sleeping comfortably in Mrs. Crosby's lap, he was snoozing in his special crib, a gift from Mrs. Crosby.

THE ONLY PIECE of furniture Bing and Kathryn purchased together, the crib housed their three children upon their arrival into this world. Its skirt, inner lining and veil are made from the formal wedding dress Katheryn didn't get to wear when she and Bing were finally married.

After meeting Bing in 1953 — she was 19; he was 53 — the two married in 1957.

At the time, she had refused to see him for a year because his offers of marriage had been followed by his constantly changing the date — at the last minute.

"We did have plans to marry about 20 times, and I always accepted, but things happened (surgery for Bing, a son's car accident, Gary Crosby's going AWOL from the Army) usually before we were actually in the physical environment," Mrs. Crosby said, adding with a laugh, "We'd planned to be married in most of the churches in California and a couple in Idaho."

When they finally married, she said, "I hadn't spoken to Bing for a year before we married...The wedding was all arranged through a woman that I called Aunt Mary. She was not a blood relative, but a very dear friend.

"THEY DISCUSSED all the plans. I really couldn't have cared less.

"Well, I thought I couldn't have cared less. I really was removed because something had always happened to prevent our marriage and I assumed something always would happen.

"And I was signed to do another movie for Columbia Pictures.

"When I went to Las Vegas, I had a wardrobe fitting at 10 o'clock that morning in Hollywood supposedly, and we were at the county courthouse at 8 o'clock in the morning to get the license.

"When the reporter came up and said, 'Mr. Crosby, who is this? Are you getting married?' I just turned and walked through the door because this was just one more in the series.

"I never felt that Bing intended it to happen that way. But he was able to change the world and I suspected that the fact that he didn't change the world meant that he was content not to marry me."

But this time was different. The two were wed, beginning the next chapter in Kathryn's life, one which was to last 20 years.

It is these 20 years that form the substance of her book, which is sold exclusively in Midland through Dillards.

PERHAPS THE MAJOR unresolved conflict that occurred during their years together centered around Kathryn's working.

"Before we married, Bing and I agreed through Aunt Mary that I would be able to be a nurse and certainly continue with my acting.

"After we married, though, it became apparent to him that he was going to be getting up at 5'o'clock every morning for that nursing business and he thought that after a few weeks I would tire of it but I didn't. I liked it very much."

And Kathryn "always loved acting."

But a career in either was incompatable with the life Bing had planned. Kathryn's working or not working was not an issue that was ever resolved.

"I found that I could do a play in the summertime and take the children with me and that Bing was not exactly pleased to have me go away. He would sulk for a little bit and then he'd come and see me with a ridiculously beautiful present and court me again.

"My life was not ever boring and while he was serene our life together was not exactly serene, but it was fascinating."

Her greatest regret when Bing died in 1977 was, as she said, "I tried very hard not to let him know how much I loved him, which is probably what gave me the most anguish when he died. When he was gone, it was too late. Maybe he knew."

The reason was simple.

"I feel that adoration is fairly boring. I'm sure God knows we love him, but he loves all of us equally — the sinners and the saints. Bing was beloved of everyone and from the time we married I wanted him to find me devoted, the perfect wife, but interesting."

Parks Department plans flurry of summer activities

Sporting senior citizens, active adults and tumultuous tykes are in for a flurry of summer activity during four summer sessions scheduled by Midland's Parks and Recreation Department.

Registration for the various programs is Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., in the Parks and Recreation Department building at 300 Baldwin St. Children must be registered by a parent or guardian and no telephone or early registration will be accepted.

Depending on the availability of vacancies in the programs, registrations will be accepted after Saturday. For additional registration information, call 683-4281, extension 316.

Session One begins June 6 and continues through June 17. Session Two runs from June 20 to July 1. After the Fourth of July holiday, Session Three goes from July 5 through July 15. Finally, Session Four runs from July 18 through July 29.

Two senior centers will provide elderly Midlanders with a host of activities, including crafts, stitchery, oil painting, games, pottery, needlepoint, dancing, exercise, pool, woodworking, blood pressure checks, social dinners and a library.

The Midland Senior Center, at 2500 Delano Ave., is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. with lunch served daily, by reservation, at 11:45 a.m. Hillcrest Manor, 700 W. Scharbauer Drive, is open from 1-5 p.m.

"LIFE. BE IN IT." Day is scheduled for June 4, with canoe racing and rides, a mini-triathlon, a splash party, softball, a picnic, a free western band, dancing and senior center activities.

Young and old can splash away to their hearts content through a variety of swimming programs offered during the summer.

Red Cross swimming lessons are offered at both Doug Russell and Ulmer Pools for both children and adults for an $8 fee.

Parents and children between six months and 3 years may participate in Tots and Parents swimming at Ulmer Pool, Aug. 1-5, from 11-11:30 a.m. Several Red Cross swimming programs will be offered at Doug Russell Pool, including Beginner, Advanced Beginner, Intermediate, Swimmer for kids 6 years old and older.

Basic Water Safety, Rescue and Aid — for people 14 and older who can swim 250 yards — will be offered at Doug Russell Pool during Sessions One and Three. Advanced Lifesaving — for people who can swim 500 yards and are 15 or older — will also be offered during Sessions One and Three.

Ladies Swim and Stay Slim, including exercises, lap swimming and sun bathing, will be offered June 6 through Aug. 19, Monday through Friday from noon to 1 p.m. at Doug Russell Pool. The fee is $13.

ADULT EVENING Fitness Swim classes will be offered at Doug Russell Pool from 5-8 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday, June 7 through Aug. 8 for a $10 fee.

Adult Evening Swimming Lessons will be available at Ulmer Pool during Session Four for a $9 fee.

The West Texas Invitational Swim Meet is scheduled for June 17-19 at Doug Russell Pool.

The Red Cross Water Safety Instructor course will be conducted at Midland High Pool, May 9-20, from 4-8 p.m. Those interested in registering must be 17 and have a current Red Cross Advanced Lifesaving Certificate.

Tennis lessons for children and adults will be offered during all four sessions at Lee High School.

The city also owns and operates a number of tennis courts for recreational use, including courts at Lee and Midland High schools, Washington Park, Midland College, Ulmer Park, Garrett Brown and Hidalgo Park.

BASIC CANOEING classes will be offered for people 12 and older July 12-14 on Wadley Barron Lake. All equipment will be furnished and the charge is $8.

Jazzercise classes will meet from 6:15-7 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays and at 9 a.m. Saturdays in the Parks and Recreation Gym at 300 Baldwin St.

Swingers may be interested in free golf lessons to be offered June 6-10 at Hogan Park Golf Course. Lessons for golfers 12-17 will be offered at 9 a.m. and for those 18 and older at 10:15 a.m.

Baton will be offered for those 5 and older during one session June 6-17 in the Parks and Recreation Gym.

Summer Fun Day Camp is available for youths 6-12 for four, two-week sessions beginning June 6. The camp includes swimming, field trips and practice in soccer, baseball, tennis, basketball and other sports skills.

Midland's Parks and Recreation Department will offer canoeing classes and canoe rental for modern day voyageurs at Wadley-Barron Lake this summer. From left, Forrest Muire, the course instructor, Gerald Petty with the local Boy Scout council which furnished the canoe, and Em Carnett of Parks and Recreation portage one of the canoes expected to get a watery workout this year.

The camps run from 8:30 a.m. to noon and cost $22 per session. Transportation is available at $2 per round trip through MidTran.

PRE-SCHOOL FUN Time for children 4-6 will also be conducted in four, two-week sessions beginning June 6 from 9-11:30 a.m. The program, $5 per session, includes play and artistic activities at the Parks and Recreation Gym and Dennis the Menace Park.

The Cerebral Palsy Recreation Center for the Handicapped at 802 Ventura Drive, providing special activities, crafts and swimming, will be open for four, two-week sessions beginning June 6 from 9-11:30 a.m.

Recreation Center Programs are scheduled at Lee Freshman School, Carver Center and Alamo Junior High School on weekdays from June 6 through July 29. The centers are open to anyone and will offer tennis, volleyball, Frisbee, basketball, ping pong, foosball and other activities.

City-wide contests are also planned in skateboarding, hula hoop, hoppy taw, Frisbee, distance Frisbee throw, catch & fetch, checkers and The Great Turtle Race.

A Play Day is set for Dennis the Menace Park July 29 from 9-11:30 a.m. and children up to the age of 12 are invited.

In addition to specially scheduled activities and classes, the Parks and Recreation Department offers many continuing attractions.

Dennis the Menace Park, at 300 Garfield St., is a unique park and play are for youngsters. The Midland Outdoor Learning Center at Hogan Park offers 2,800 feet of nature trail. And the Petro Parcourse in Windlands Park provides an asphalt, lighted trail with 18 exercise stations and a playground adjacent to the course.

HOGAN PARK GOLF Course offers 27 challenging holes of golf and green fee packages for the entire family. For more information, call the pro shop at 682-7891.

Midland also has as many as four swimming pools for relief from the summer heat. Doug Russell Pool, 900 N. Midland Drive; Halff Pool, 100 E. New Jersey Ave.; Ulmer Pool, 2800 W. Kentucky Ave.; and Washington Pool, 1602 E. Indiana Ave., are open for public swimming and can be rented for private parties.

Hogan Park offers a picnic area and activities building — including barbecue pits, lighted volleyball courts and horseshoes — which are available for rental.

Canoes can be rented for $10 per day or $2.50 per hour at Wadley-Barron Lake.

And game bags, which include horseshoes, a softball, a bat, a volleyball and a volleyball net, are available at the Parks and Recreation Building from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Information on all these and more programs and services offered by the Parks and Recreation Department is available by calling the department at 683-4281, extension 316.

Accident victim walks again

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

A Midland woman who was given a "slim chance" for walking again, gripped the parallel bars in Midland Memorial Hospital's physical therapy room and walked May 5.

Teresa Bell — who fractured her back in a motorcycle accident April 19 — underwent surgery, tottered 20 hours a day on a new type of therapeutic bed and remained in good spirits through her 3½-week stay at MMH.

On Tuesday she left for Dallas to continue rehabilitation. She is expected to stay at the Dallas Rehabilitation Institute up to 60 days.

But her first steps were May 5.

"She just did beautifully," said MMH physical therapist Lynn Dammann. "It's short of a miracle. People just don't walk that quickly with that kind of an injury.

Contradictory testimony characterizes former deputy's trial

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Following a day of testimony characterized by contradiction, both sides rested their cases Wednesday in the auto theft trial of former Midland County deputy sheriff Joe Brownlee.

At one point during testimony by Brownlee's wife, Joan, Assistant District Attorney Janet Copeland said, "Would it surprise you if your husband testified he never saw the pickup at the track?"

"Yes it would," replied Mrs. Brownlee, who had been called as a defense witness.

Brownlee is accused of "appropriating" a 1978 Ford Super Cab pickup belonging to the Rittenhouse Oil Co. of Midland. He testified that he paid a man by the name of David Marcus $500 cash for the vehicle after meeting Marcus at a stock car track near Odessa in the summer of 1981.

He told jurors he and his wife saw Marcus two or three times at the track, but that Marcus did not have the Super Cab with him on any of those occasions.

Recalled to the stand by defense attorney Hal Brockett after his wife's contradictory testimony, Brownlee said the pickup she saw was "vaguely the same" but different from the one he later bought.

The actual transaction took place on the parking lot of an Odessa apartment complex in the presence of his wife on Nov. 2, 1981. Brownlee said "she was upset" because he had used the family's Christmas money to purchase the vehicle, apparently sight unseen.

Another discrepancy in the two-day-old trial occurred Wednesday when Department of Public Safety auto theft specialist Sgt. Arvin Kilpatrick said his investigation took him to Fort Stockton, where he met a man by the name of David Freeman.

Freeman had bought a 1974 Ford pickup from Brownlee about the same time Brownlee said he purchased the '78 Super Cab from Marcus — an oilfield worker who could not be located as a witness, according to testimony by Texas Ranger Maurice Cook.

But Kilpatrick said the description Brownlee gave of Marcus matched that of Freeman, who was not brought in as a witness in the case. Recalled to the stand to rebut Kilpatrick's testimony, Brownlee contradicted Kilpatrick by saying Freeman bore little or no resemblance to Marcus.

The prosecution alleges Brownlee acquired the pickup unlawfully and altered its identification numbers to match those of a title he already had in his possession. The vehicle was not repainted, however, and certain dents and scratches were not fixed.

Brownlee used the pickup for the better part of a year before its owner, Dale Rittenhouse, recognized the dents and scratches after seeing the vehicle on the parking lot of an Andrews Highway restaurant last October.

Rittenhouse testified Tuesday that it leaked oil and had been parked in the company yard on West Industrial Avenue. He said he owns about 30 pickups and did not realize the Super Cab was missing until he saw it at the restaurant.

PBRPC housing board OKs bonds for Big Spring housing

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

The board of directors of the Permian Basin Housing Finance Corporation voted Wednesday to issue $5 million in multi-family housing revenue bonds to finance a 128-unit apartment complex in Big Spring.

Following a meeting of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission board of directors, the housing board unanimously approved an inducement resolution which commits the PHFC to selling the bonds.

The developer, Brinkcraft Development, proposes a 128,000-square-foot apartment complex to be located on a portion of a 15½-acre tract in the Coronado Hills area of Big Spring.

Delbert McDougal, a partner in Brinkcraft, Inc., of which the development company is a subsidiary, told the directors that the complex would include about 38 one-bedroom and 90 two-bedroom apartments.

The entire project is expected to cost about $5,236,000, and revenue from the development will be used to pay back the PBHFC's loan to Brinkcraft Development.

McDougal said at least 20 percent of the rental space will be set aside for low and moderate income residents. He said the development company also plans to develop about 25-35 lots for single-family homes near the apartment complex.

He said Brinkcraft Development recently completed a similar, 124-unit complex in Lubbock. Plans for the Big Spring project, to be called Bent Tree Apartments, include a swimming pool, large clubhouse, a hot tub, gazebos and outdoor grills.

According to Sylvia Clark, financial advisor to the PBHFC, each governmental entity within the PBHFC will be allowed a public hearing on the project prior to issuing the bonds.

The PBHFC includes the city of Big Spring and Andrews, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Martin, Pecos, Reeves, Terrell, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties.

Before the PBHFC meeting, the PBRPC board of directors approved several Head Start grant applications during its monthly meeting in the PBRPC building at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The directors gave favorable comment on a grant request from the Midland Independent School District to the Department of Health and Human Services. MISD is seeking $272,442 from HUD to pay salaries and buy supplies for its Head Start program from Sept. 1, 1983, to Aug. 31, 1984. MISD expects to match the grant with $101,966.

STANTON — Addie Etta Button, 85, of Stanton died Wednesday morning in a Stanton hospital.

Graveside services will be at 4 p.m. Thursday in Resthaven Memorial Park in Midland with the Rev. Ed Carson officiating and the Rev. Ralph Inman assisting, directed by Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Mrs. Button was born Feb. 21, 1898, in Dibble, Indian Territory. She had lived in Sulphur, Okla., 30 years and in Stanton 4½ years. She was married to Marshall Button Feb. 5, 1922, in Criner, Okla., and was a member of First Baptist Church of Stanton.

Survivors include her husband; a daughter, Faye Hawkins of Midland; a granddaughter, Sara Allison of Midland; a grandson; and two great-grandchildren.

Royce Barton

ODESSA — Services for Royce Barton, 65, of Odessa, will be at 4 p.m. Friday in Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Earl Cleaveland officiating. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Gardens.

Barton died Tuesday in an Odessa hospital.

He was born Sept. 8, 1917, in Paduca. He married Francis Alyne Taylor Feb. 2, 1968, in Iowa Park. He was a rig builder, a veteran of the Korean and Vietnam Wars and a member of the Baptist church.

Survivors include his wife, of Odessa; a son, Robert Gene Ferrell of Bryan; his mother, Ella Virginia Barton of Midland; a brother, Glen Barton of Wichita Falls; and two sisters, Jo Burns of Midland and Billie David of Odessa.

Lisa Holloway

STEPHENVILLE — Services for Lisa Jane Holloway, 20, of Englewood, Colo., and formerly of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at Lacy Funeral Home in Stephenville with the Rev. James Holman of Midland officiating. Burial will follow in a Stephenville cemetery.

Ms. Holloway died early Wednesday morning from injuries suffered in a one-car automobile accident near Brighton, Colo.

She was born April 18, 1963, in Dallas. She was a college student and had attended Midland College during the 1981-82 school year and the 1982 fall semester. While at Midland College, she was a member of the student senate and the dance team and was a watergirl for the basketball team. She moved to Englewood from Midland eight months ago.

Survivors include her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Holloway of Englewood, Colo.; a brother, Robert Lance Holloway of Englewood, Colo.; her grandparents, Bob Holloway, Marion Holloway and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Farmer, all of Dallas; and a great-grandmother, Mrs. Hugh Cox of Stephenville.

Willie Robinson

Services for Willie L. Robinson, 37, of Midland, are pending at Thomas Funeral Home.

Robinson died Wedneday in a Midland hospital following a sudden illness.

Iris Stephens

Services for Iris Corine Stephens, 86, of 511 E. New York St., will be at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel.

Mrs. Stephens died Tuesday afternoon at a Midland hospital.

Survivors include two sons, O.C. Stephens of Andrews, and Louis W. Stephens of Midland; a daughter, Leta Deel Friday of Midland; a sister, Bertha Carter of Rising Star; three brothers, Lynn Butler of Gorman, Altus Butler and Arley Joe Butler, both of Rising Star; 14 grandchildren; 25 great-grandchildren; three step-grandchildren; nine step-great-grandchildren; and a step-great-great-grandchild.

MMH will present Health Fair in recognition of Hospital Week

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Shoppers browsing through Midland Park Mall Saturday may need to be reminded where they are as they wander through a maze of blood pressure checks, respirators and gurneys.

In celebration of Texas Hospital Week, Midland Memorial Hospital will present its fourth annual Health Fair from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday at the mall near Sears.

Gov. Mark White has designated this week as Texas Hospital Week in recognition of the hospital's efforts promoting health care.

"Apart from and through the Texas Hospital Association, hospitals have effectively promoted the health of the people of our state by treating them like family," the governor wrote in a news release.

"In every community, this personalized care reminds Texans that our hospitals are truly concerned for their well-being."

The state theme this year, "We Treat You Like Family — Texas Style," coincides with MMH's year-round slogan: "Professionally We Serve — Personally We Care."

Twenty departments throughout the hospital will spread their wares on display tables, offering free demonstrations and testing.

According to Arlene Strickland, MMH public relations director, the cardio-pulmonary department will offer free lung functioning tests, area dentists will be on hand to test for oral cancer and nursing service will give free blood pressure checks.

Other attractions include a cartoon on poison prevention for children, which will shown by the Medical Explorers Post.

And an action-packed demonstration will be scheduled at 11 a.m., 3 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Ms. Strickland said MMH emergency room personnel will show how a person is resuscitated.

Also, the newest technical advances in orthopedics and surgery will be available. Pamphlets on health care, including how sound nutrition can lengthen and stengthen life, will be distributed.

Committee tables water legislation

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Eight pieces of legislation comprising a water plan for Texas were laid on the table Tuesday by the House Natural Resources Committe with Midland Rep. Tom Craddick — who chairs the committee — saying the package could be given a favorable recommendation in a week.

"I'm hoping we'll take some action on them (bills) next week," Craddick said, noting the committee has only had a few days to study the measures and needs more time to discuss them, particularly a bill aimed at protecting bays and estuaries which has caused some controversy.

The measure, SB 1026 sponsored by Sen. John Sharp of Victoria, has been criticized for putting severe restrictions on river authorities. It was attacked Tuesday by the general managers of the San Antonio and Trinity River Authorities, who said a provision requiring the "historic levels of productivity of bays and estuaries can be maintained" was flawed.

Most testimony before the House Committee opposing the water package, developed in the Senate and passed there last week, concerned Sharp's bill.

Calling SB 1026 "part of the price to be paid to secure environmental support," Austin attorney Frank Booth, whose clients include water districts, said maintaining a historic level of productivity of bays and estuaries would require an average of 9.1 million acre-feet of water each year from the Neches, Trinity, Colorado, Guadalupe, San Antonio and Nueces River Basins.

"In 20 years, Texas will not have sufficient state water to supply its municipal and industrial water requirements," Booth testified, adding the Texas Water Commission could not issue any more permits for irrigation or the mining of minerals if SB 1026 went into effect.

In addition, no more dams and reservoirs for water supply could be constructed in the Trinity, Colorado, Guadalupe, San Antonio or Nueces River Basins, he said.

While SB 1026 is "a little vaguer than we like," Catherine Perrine, water director for the League of Women's Voters, urged the committee to promptly pass the water package as a whole.

Other measures laid on the table by the committee are:

— SJR 41 by Sen. John Montford of Lubbock, a proposed constitutional amendment which would establish a program involving low-interest loans to farmers for water conservation.

— SJR 40 by Sen Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls, which adds $300 million to the existing debt authorization of the Water Development Fund. Half the amount is to be used for water supply purposes and half for water quality.

— SJR 42 and SB 1236 by Sens. Carl Parker of Port Arthur and Ed Howard of Texarkana, creating loan assistance and bond insurance programs for water conservation and development. The measure also authorizes the Legislature to make appropriations to loan programs for major water projects and flood control planning.

Ship events set

Organizers of the 1984 Louisiana World Exposition, to be held in New Orleans, have invited river interests to take part in op ship '84, similar to op sail '76, held in New York, except that it will include vessels of all types, particularly river boats. The 1984 fair's theme is rivers and how they serve people. Two boat parades are planned.

Head Start provides educational training and opportunities for preschool age youngsters, many of whom are from low-income families.

Big Spring Independent School District also received favorable comment on its application for $329,619 from the HHS to fund its Head Start program for the same period. BSISD plans to offer $82,404 in matching funds.

Favorable comment was also bestowed on a request by The Community Council of Reeves County for $14,000 and $1,200 grants from the HHS. The $14,000 — along with $3,500 local matching funds — would buy a new van for Pecos Head Start Center and the $1,200 and a $300 match is for play equipment for the Saragosa and Pecos Head Start Centers.

An application by Clover House, Inc., of Odessa, which provides intermediate care for male alcohol abusers in the 17-county PBRPC area, also received favorable comment. Clover House is seeking $11,901 from the Texas Commission on Alcohol and expects to supplement the grant with $32,979.

Mullins Center of Odessa, a facility which provides detoxification and transitional living facilities for alcoholics, is applying for $15,937 in continuation funding from the TCA. The center's application calls for a local matching money of $76,506.

Finally, the board approved the appointment of Peggy Phipps of Monahans to the Regional Alcohol and Drug Abuse Advisory Committee and consented to contracting for auditing services on a three-year, rather than one-year basis.

Accident victim walks again

Another physical therapist, Rachel Degenstein, attributes Teresa's "quick recovery" to her attitude.

"She was the type of person who would just visit everybody," Ms. Degenstein said. "She'd cheer up everybody else. She was always in good spirits. Other patients will miss her."

Teresa, a 28-year-old mother of three, lay on the special bed — a Roto Rest Kinetic Treatment Table — for two weeks. The bed gave a continuous side-to-side rocking motion that didn't actually help Teresa walk, but prevented complications that many bedridden accident or ill patients endure.

Cuban charged in Big Spring man's death

BIG SPRING — Andreas Vargres Pereida, 30, a Cuban national living in Big Spring, has been charged in connection with the Tuesday shooting death of Hector Gaspar Valdez, 30, of Big Spring.

Pereida is being held without bond in Big Spring because he is on parole for burglary.

Valdez died at Malone-Hogan Hospital after sustaining four gunshot wounds shortly before 9:30 p.m. Tuesday.

16-year-old arrested in shooting

ODESSA — Police have arrested a 16-year-old girl in connection with the Tuesday shooting death of Alice Odessa Blackwell, 69, whose body was found lying on the floor of her bedroom about 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Det. Lt. Rusty Baker today said the arrest resulted from "luck and good police work" after the girl, who knew the victim, voluntarily came into the police station for questioning Wednesday morning.

"One thing led to another," noted Baker, who said a .22-caliber pistol was recovered from Mrs. Blackwell's home at 1807 W. 13th St. Police are not sure, however, if it is the murder weapon.

Mrs. Blackwell's 1977 Mercury also was recovered. It had been involved in an accident and was found abandoned in the 600 block of College Street about 8 p.m. Monday — 21 hours before her body was discovered by police who had been asked to check her welfare.

She was last seen alive about 6 p.m. Monday. Police said they could find no evidence of forced entry or of a struggle. She had been shot several times with a small caliber weapon. Autopsy results are still pending and no motive has been established.

Baker said patrolman Cliff Davis knew the victim and "furnished some key information" that led to the girl's arrest after Davis learned Mrs. Blackwell's car apparently had been stolen. Baker would not elaborate.

"The investigation is continuing," he added. "But no more arrests are expected."

The girl is being held at the Ector County Center.

Written exam first place winners were Kevin Smith, Carl Piccolo and Chris Johnson while project competition first place winners were Karen Carpenter, Leonard Freeman, Mark Webb, Ricky Hartzoge, Kevin Smith (2), Tommy Minihan, David Brown, Glenn Starnes, Chris Johnson, Glenn Owens, David Fuentes (3), Charlie Diaz, Matt Jones, Bryan Bearden, Gary Carr, Terry Wilson and Brad Locke.

Glenn Starnes won second place in written exams and second place winners in project competition included Leonard Freeman, John Denton (2), Thomas Manley, Carl Piccolo, Phil McCain, Glenn Owens, Jack McCranie, Amy Kirkpatrick, George Miles, Mark Webb, Mike Jocobs, Mario Olgin and Andy Lookabaugh.

Winning third place in written exams were Lynn Nabi, Mark Webb and Gary Carr. Project competition third place winners were Greg Lisso (2), Mario Olgin, John Denton, Sergio Ochoa, John Simmons, Craig Swearengin, David Fuentes, Greg Cleeré, Lynn Nabi (3), Chris Johnson, Brenon Young, Leonard Freeman (2) and Keith Roberts.

MHS Honor Band rated highly

The Midland High School Honor Band was picked as the most outstanding of the 44 bands competing in the Mountain States Music Festival April 30-May 2. Bands from New Mexico, Utah, California, Texas and Arizona participated in this major national contest.

Contest judges rated as superior only seven of the bands. Both participating MHS bands — the honor band, directed by Clyde Wilson, and the Symphonic Band, directed by Dan Green — earned superior ratings. MHS was the only school to earn superior ratings for both bands.

The Mountain States Music Festival was held at Arizona State University in Tempe, Ariz.

GHS band named Best Band

The Greenwood High School Band, under the direction of Chuck Hazlewood, was named the Best Band in Class A at the Carlsbad Music Festival in Carlsbad, N.M., recently.

The band received a first division in concert.

Trinity School honor roll named

Twenty-five students in grades seven through nine were named to the All A and All A and B honor rolls at Trinity School for the last grading period.

Seventh graders Ginny Graham, Clint Hamilton and Shannon Mohr were named to the All A honor roll while Christi Brimer, Noreen Buster, Janet Cabascango, Margaret Mogford, Tracy Johnson, Tad Peterson and Dee Anna Velasquez made A's and B's.

Eighth grader Bill Rulla made all A's and Andrea Comola, Allison Dillard, Adam Goff, Steve Hartman, Laura Hinchey, Paul Morrow, Sherwood Wagner and Lance Wood were named to the All A and B list.

Sharon Graham received high honors in the ninth grade. Listed for honors in grade nine were Marla Brusenhan, Joe Gourlay, Millard Kimery, Kaye Knox and Jay Wells.

Midlander on school committees

Former Midland High School student Jeff Robnett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Robnett of Midland, was appointed to two prestigious committees at Princeton University in Princeton, N.J.

Chosen from 73 students, Robnett will serve on the Princeton University Honor Committee and Student/Faculty Committee on Discipline.

The Honor Committee upholds the 90-year-old honor code while the discipline committee acts as a judicial body, trying any individuals accused of breaking university rules on discipline.

A 3.5 grade point average student, Robnett is a junior and plans to attend law school after graduation.

He was a 1980 graduate of Midland High School and is active at Princeton in football, track and Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Scholarships open to minorities

ODESSA — Several scholarship awards are available to area minority students planning to attend The University of Texas of the Permian Basin this fall.

Joyce Thompson, director of financial aid and placement at UTPB, said three or four awards of $250 to $300 each will be available to minority students this fall through the Nojem Libson Scholarship. Applications must be in before June 1.

The scholarship is available to any minority male or female student with preference given to Ector County residents, she said. Applicants must meet admission requirements and show finanical need.

For further information, persons may contact the financial aids office at 367-2354.

Midlanders to attend symposium

Two Midlanders will be among science students from across the state converging on The University of Texas at Austin May 31 through June 3 for the annual Texas Energy Science Symposium for High Schools.

Selected from Midland to attend are Barry Friemel, Lee High School, and Charles Krusekopf, Midland High School. Science instructors Dale Biggs of LHS and John Hicks of MHS will accompany the students.

The event, in its 23rd year, is expected to attract more than 400 students and their teachers who will hear scientists and engineers discuss energy-related topics.

Participants will spend two afternoons touring the university's science laboratories.

Among the facilities to be toured are the Texas Experimental Tokamak (TEXT), a national facility for fusion research built and operated for the Department of Energy by the UT Fusion Research Center.

The symposium is being sponsored by the university and the Texas Atomic Energy Research Foundation, which is made up of 10 investor-owned electric utility companies in Texas, including Texas Electric Service Co. The foundation was created in 1957 for the advancement of knowledge of energy through scientific and educational acitivities.

Teen-ager convicted of murder

ANGLETON (AP) — A 17-year-old defendant who escaped briefly from a courthouse holding cell has been convicted of capital murder in the robbery and shooting death of an Angleton man.

Brady Lynn Beck was found guilty Wednesday. Because he was 16 when arrested in the shooting death of Benjamin Hudson Jr., Beck is too young to be sentenced to death so a life prison sentence is mandatory.

On Tuesday, Beck escaped from his holding cell at the Brazoria County courthouse during a recess in the trial. He was recaptured about eight hours later, officials said.

Midlander's relatives in Cowboy Hall of Fame

The father and two uncles of a Midland resident were inducted into the National Cowboy Hall of Fame at its annual Western Heritage awards banquet recently at Oklahoma City.

Honorees were the late Miller brothers — Joseph, Zackary and George — founders of the famous Miller Brothers 101 Ranch Wild West Show, which had its beginning in 1905 at the 101 Ranch near Ponca City, Okla.

The Midland relative is Virginia Flood, daughter of Zackary Miller, and a Midland resident since Jan. 1, 1945. She attended the awards banquet as a special guest. Her father, who was in charge of the ranch's livestock operations, had visited Midland occasionally, prior to his death in the early 1950s.

The Millers' Wild West Show, which performed for several decades, was one of the most popular Western shows at the time. It featured buffalo, mustangs, elephants, trick riders, cowboys and Indians. Tom Mix, Will Rogers and Hoot Gibson were among those who got their start at the show.

Report: Jobs are available

AUSTIN (AP) — Most Texas college graduates should be able to find jobs the next two years, despite the slow economic state, according to a report released by the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board.

The board, which oversees state colleges and universities, estimated more than 150,000 new jobs will be available each year through 1985.

The report said employment prospects are brightest for students in computer science, data processing, engineering and technology and medical and health fields.

It said a good market exists for medical doctors, veterinarians and osteopaths but a declining market for dentists.

Both shortages and surpluses of school teachers are expected.

Berenice's Hair passes in Mid-May

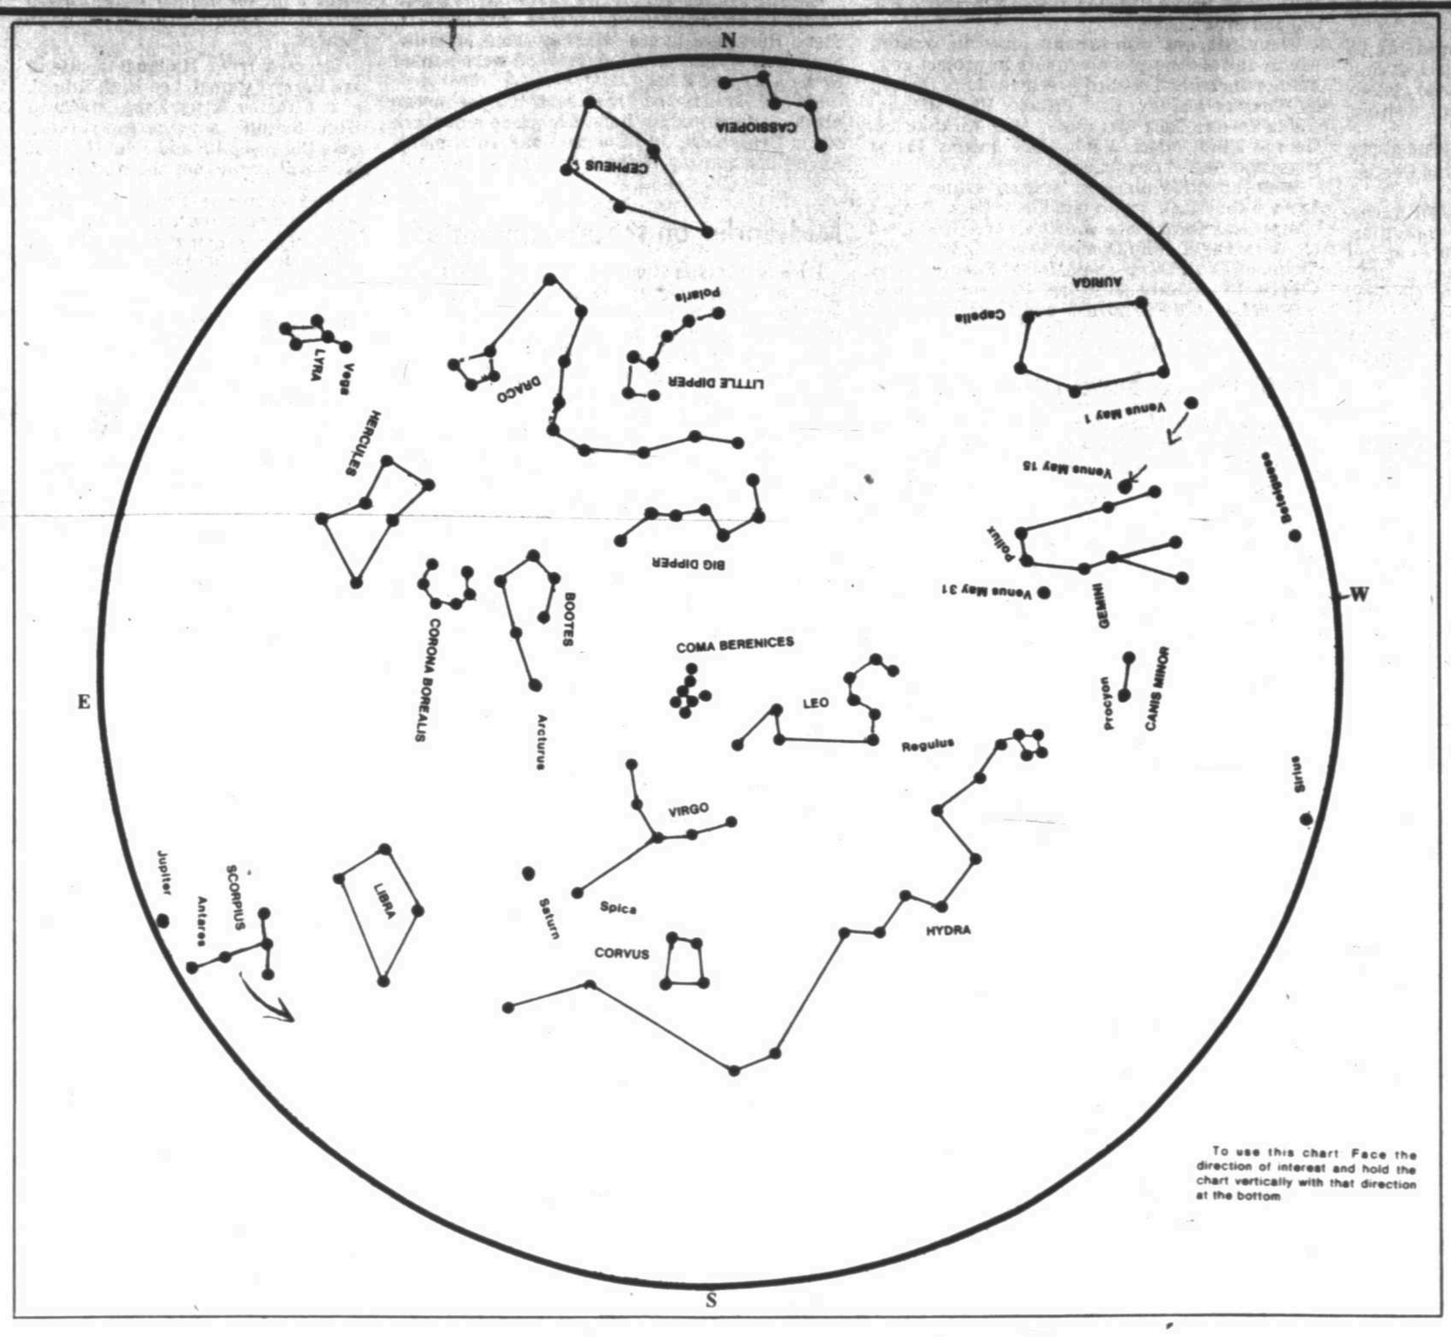

Coma Berenices, or Berenice's Hair, is a dim constellation that can be seen only on the clearest of moonless nights. It appears as a sparse open cluster of stars moving together through space. It is situated in the direction of the axis of rotation of our Milky Way galaxy at the North Galactic Pole.

During mid-May this open cluster will be passing overhead as twilight ends. At this time our Milky Way, which is parallel to the horizon, forms a barely visible circle around us.

As we look toward the top of the May evening sky, Coma Berenices appears as a dark hole through which we can see into the deep space beyond. It is as if we are looking out the skylight of our Milky Way house and the sky we are seeing is the universe of galaxies beyond. Past the dim stars in Coma Berenices, but only visible through a telescope, lies the Coma Cluster of galaxies. This consists of 10,000 galaxies and is one of the 100 clusters that make up the super cluster of galaxies to which our local group of galaxies belong.

Coma Berenices, in mythology, is associated with an Egyptian king and his beautiful wife Berenice. The king went to war and Berenice, who feared for his life, went to the temple to pray for his safe return. In her prayer she offered to sacrifice her hair to Venus if the king returned safely. The king did return safely and Berenice cut off her beautiful locks and laid them on the altar.

The next day when the king and queen went to the temple to view her sacrifice, they found it had been removed. However, the priests at the temple saved themselves from the royal wrath by explaining that Venus appreciated the sacrifice so much she placed it in the sky between Leo and Virgo where it could be admired by everyone.

Female trainers respected

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Navy women here are playing a major role in training male recruits who ultimately will serve aboard ships, even though the women have limited or no experience at sea themselves.

Commanders at the Naval Training Center and Recruit Training Command see the involvement of women in the traditionally all-male recruit environment as an asset.

And a male company commander directly involved in the training of recruits said he has lost his apprehension over his assignment under a woman officer and now has the "utmost respect" for her ability and leadership.

However, one male master chief petty officer, who declined identification, said he felt the ratio of females to males in the command was too high.

Although he could not detect any degradation in the training process, he said women could not project to young recruits the male-model image of a seagoing sailor.

Boatswain's Mate 1st Class Kevin Bradley, 29, a veteran of 11 years' sea duty, said, however, that recruits get their role models from company commanders such as himself, who are all male and have limited contact with women in the command unless they have problems or need to be disciplined by their division officers.

Capt. John "Jay" Gardella, commander of the Recruit Training Command, said two of the eight division officers in his command are women and he is getting a third female division officer soon.

He said 45 percent of the Recruit Training Command's officers are women.

Surrogate parent support group unites

By The Los Angeles Times-Washinton Post News Service

CHEVY CHASE, Md. — Almost anything in the Washington area takes on national proportions. A single, quite ordinary office building in this close-in suburb, for example, houses the National Academy of Conciliators, the National Center for Alcohol Education, the National Institute for Child Support Enforcement, the National Board of Examiners in Optometry and the National Foundation for Infectious Diseases.

Just down the hall from the latter organization, a plain-lettered sign announces yet another such entity, the National Center for Surrogate Parenting. Behind the door, executive director Harriett Blankfeld sinks into a soft, safely neutral sofa in the waiting room of what might as easily be a law firm or employment office. Explaining the title of the firm she founded one year ago, Blankfeld fairly parses each word.

"Well, 'national,'" she begins: "Well, we're located near the capital, and maybe one day we will be — national.

" 'Center,' " she continues: "That's obvious, that's what we are."

As for the "surrogate parenting" part, that too, to Blankfeld, is about as clear as it comes.

Blankfeld's organization matches couples whose childlessness has been traced to female infertility with women who, for a fee, will become inseminated by the husband's sperm. The fee is $25,000.

Husband, wife and surrogate mother remain unknown to each other throughout gestation and, for that matter, even after the birth of a child, said Blankfeld's assistant, Pamela Leonard. "They never even meet."

Of the total fee, $10,000 is placed in an escrow account and paid to the surrogate upon the delivery of the husband's child. From the remainder come funds for the surrogate's medical fees, the cost of insemination, fees for psychological screening as well as the constant psychological monitoring Blankfeld requires of her surrogates, and reimbursement for legal fees incurred by the surrogate. The surrogate also receives what Leonard calls perks: a $50,000 life insurance policy or disability policy if she is employed full time, and $200 for a maternity wardrobe.

Five surrogates from the National Center for Surrogate Parenting are wearing those wardrobes at the moment; the organization's first baby is due in late June.

The mother of two children brought into this world by "the conventional method," Blankfeld is hardly the first to conjure up this kind of collective parenting. Largely on a sub rosa basis, surrogate parenting has gone on for years, even centuries. Defenders of the practice, in fact, like to cite the Old Testament tale of Sarah and Abraham as a kind of biblical endorsement.

Counterpart organizations — profit-making companies that make up what Leonard calls the surrogate parenting industry — have taken hold in 15 to 20 other locations in the United States. And given what is either a growing incidence of infertility or a growing awareness of an age-old condition, the industry is expected to expand.

LAT Photo

Harriet Blankfeld, right, director of the National Center for Surrogate Parenting, and marketing director Pamela Leonard interview a surrogate mother. Blankfeld's center, in Chevy Chase, Md., matches couples whose childlessness has been traced to female infertility with women who will become inseminated with the husband's sperm. The center's fee is $25,000.

"If I had a list of the hot topics of the day," Blankfeld said, "I would have to put surrogate parenting at the top."

"Hot" is no exaggeration. Even before it reached industry dimensions, surrogate parenting was controversial. Critics blast the practice as tantamount to baby-selling — or, as one cynic called it, womb-renting. In February, the issue received renewed attention when the paternity of a potentially retarded infant born to a surrogate mother in Michigan was publicly debated. In another celebrated case not long ago, a surrogate mother sent all parties involved steaming to court when she refused to part with her newborn infant. The incident dramatized yet another element of surrogate parenting: that it is virtually unregulated by any kind of legislation, anywhere.

As Blankfeld is the first to agree, the issue is as complicated emotionally as it is legally. Although untouched personally by infertility, the topic, said Blankfeld, had always been "close to me." For years, she said, she had watched friends and family go through "hell and high water" trying to adopt — "for which they paid dearly." Three years ago, Blankfeld, a woman with "absolutely no business experience ... I had never even sold Tupperware," decided to explore the business of surrogate parenting.

As she points out, upwards of 3 million couples in the United States are childless. "Take off one-third for people who have chosen not to have children, one-third for male infertility, that still brings you down to 1 million couples in this country who are childless because of female infertility."

And, she continues, a growing professionalism among women has often meant postponing plans for having children.

Indeed, profiling the average couple that has sought help from the National Center for Surrogate Parenting, Leonard describes a man and woman "who are usually in their late 30s and early 40s, and usually married between 13 and 15 years. They're professionals, college graduates. Generally they've put off having children because they wanted to establish careers." Then, as Leonard describes it, those couples fall prey to "one of life's cruel tricks": They find they are unable to conceive.

"Many of these women have been trying to become pregnant for between three and seven years," she said. "They've explored all the options" — from in vitro fertilization to adoption. "But if you find out at age 35 that you're infertile," Leonard said, "you're out as far as adoption is concerned." At least for "a newborn white child," she said, "the (adoption) waiting list is anywhere between five and eight years."

Not all couples who have contacted her agency are white, Blankfeld stresses. But the fact is, the vast majority of her clients are Caucasian. "Some people," she said, "simply can't live with the idea of foreign adoption. As far as white Caucasian babies, well — " Blankfeld shrugged.

In Baltimore, National Center for Surrogate Parenting attorney Michael Freedman dismissed the notion that the cost and concomitant exclusivity of surrogate parenting might somehow imply a kind of veiled racism. "A fact of life," Freedman said, "is the shortage of Caucasian infants available for adoption. That is a fact of the marketplace. That is a business fact of life."

Since opening the center last March, Blankfeld and Leonard said that they have been flooded with inquiries. Hundreds of couples have called for information, they said, and at least as many women have sought information about acting as surrogates.

Those who choose to pursue the route of surrogate parenting with Blankfeld and Leonard must also undergo psychological evaluation: testing and dialogue that Blankfeld believes force a couple to confront their true feelings about parenting in general, about surrogate parenting in particular. To date, 12 couples have signed contracts with the National Center for Surrogate Parenting.

Like the parents, surrogate mothers undergo three to four months of what Blankfeld calls initial screening. For the most part, said Leonard, these women are around 26 years old, married and with children of their own. To comply with Blankfeld's requirement of weekly psychological counseling and to ensure quick delivery of a newborn infant, all her surrogate mothers live within an hour's driving distance of Washington. They are healthy, with a well-researched medical history, and are "of normal intelligence."

Dominion home suited for elegance

Copley News Service

The Dominion is a home suited both for graceful and elegant entertaining and for leading a private life with all the luxurious touches. Much of the effort is removed through design work that pays careful attention to details.

A broad front entry guards the entrance to a sunken living room with a full wall of windows.

A step up from the living room but open to it for large-scale entertaining, is a formal dining area.

Two or more can work together comfortably in the adjacent kitchen with its long counters, built-in desk area and island work counter with a Jennaire cook top.

The sunny breakfast nook offers a pleasant spot for informal meals with a view of the deck that extends from the garage to the master bedroom. Sliding doors to that deck open from the family room. There is a built-in bar here, and a woodbox filled directly from the outside to keep the fuel readily available for the den and family room fireplaces.

The den offers a quiet retreat. Also useful as a guest room or private study, the french doors between the den and master bedroom make it an ideal sitting room away from family activities.

Chicken a la King

Around the turn of the century, legend has it, Chicken a la King was concocted by a chef at a beach hotel outside New York City. Its popularity spread.

By the time the 1920s rolled around, Chicken a la King was considered one of the most festive of dishes. And it became even more elegant when the toast points it was originally served with were replaced by puff-paste patty shells.

Although Chicken a la King isn't come on much these days, it's still an utterly delicious dish. Here's a version of it recently concocted in my kitchen.

CHICKEN A LA KING

5 tablespoons butter
2 to 3 tablespoons flour
½ cup clear fat-free chicken broth
1 cup heavy cream
¼ pound mushrooms, thinly sliced (1¼ to 1½ cups)
1 large (5-ounce) green pepper, seeded, quartered and cut into thin strips
3 cups diced (¾ inch) cooked chicken
4-ounce jar pimiento, drained and diced
Salt, pepper and paprika to taste
10-ounce package (6) frozen patty shells, baked

In a 2½-quart saucepan, over low heat, melt 2 tablespoons of the butter; stir in the flour. Off heat, gradually stir in chicken broth and cream, keeping smooth. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Reserve this sauce.

In a 10-inch skillet, melt the remaining 3 tablespoons butter; add mushrooms and pepper; cook briskly, stirring often, until pepper is wilted and mushroom liquid has evaporated. Stir into the reserved sauce with chicken, pimiento, salt, pepper and paprika. Heat through. (Makes about 4½ cups.) serve in the warm patty shells.

Makes 6 servings.

NBC wins network Nielsens with science fiction thriller

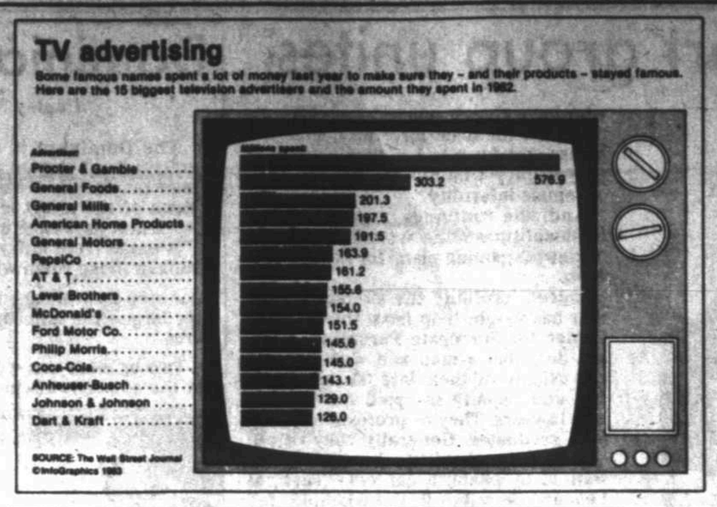

ENTERTAINMENT

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC scored with "V," the costly science fiction thriller, and won the network ratings competition for the first time since the week ending Jan. 30, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

NBC, which finished behind CBS and ABC in the recently completed prime-time season, had four shows among the top 10 in the week ending May 8, including the concluding episode of "V" in first place, "The A Team" third, "Facts of Life" fifth and "Remington Steele" 10th.

NBC's rating for the week was 15.5, to 15.4 for ABC and 14.6 for CBS. That means in an average minute of prime time during the week, 15.5 percent of the nation's homes with television were tuned to NBC.

The rating for Part II of "V" was 27, meaning that percentage of TV-equipped homes saw at least part of the show. The first installment of "V" was runnerup in the previous week's competition to an ABC show called "Life's Most Embarrassing Moments."

Crestview Baptist to present 'Joy Comes in the Morning'

"Joy Comes in the Morning," a musical drama by David Danner, will be presented by the ministry of music at Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave., at 7 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Crestview's production of this relatively new work will include a fully staged and costumed portrayal of the events of the week leading up to Jesus' crucifixion and concluding with the resurrection and ascension.

The production emphasizes the sorrow experienced by Jesus and those close to him, and how their tragedies were turned into victory and hope. The role of Jesus will be sung by Crestview's minister, the Rev. Kenneth L. Hall, who was a music student prior to becoming a minister.

The 70-voice Sanctuary Choir, accompanied by organ, piano and symphonic-percussion ensemble, will be directed by Crestview's minister of music, Ty Morris Jr.

The public is invited to attend this free presentation. No offering will be taken.

Junior Federated Music Club meets to perform festival music

The Junior Federated Music Club, "Klaviatur Verein," met recently at Mr. and Mrs. Barry Beck's home.

The senior "Klaviatur Verein" Federated Music Club meet at Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller's to perform their festival music.

Those performing included Jill Sager, Sharon Karcher, Shawn McCarter, Spencer Sale and Cynthia Miller.

The groups are sponsored by Harriet A. Motter.

Larry L. King to attend Midland's 'Whorehouse'

Co-author Larry L. King and Houston investigative reporter Marvin Zindler will attend tonight's premiere of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" at the downtown Yucca Theatre.

A native of West Texas, King attended Midland High School. He later worked at The Midland Reporter-Telegram, KCRS Radio and The Odessa American.

Zindler works for KTRT-TV, Channel 13 in Houston. He is the reporter who originally broke the story of the famed "Chicken Ranch" at LaGrange.

"Whorehouse" is a fictionalized version of Zindler's revelation and the events that followed.

Premiere night tickets are $200, $1,000 and $2,500 per couple.

The show opens to the public Friday. Prices are $12.50, $10.50 and $8.50. Tickets may be purchased at Theatre Midland's box office, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

'Texas West of the Pecos' on display at museum

"Texas West of the Pecos" is on display through May 31 at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and Library Hall of Fame, Interstate 20 East.

The exhibit features color photographs by Texas native Jim Bones which portray the drama and beauty of a region often thought of as desolate and barren. The 34 dye transfer prints depict landscapes containing colorful vegetation, rushing streams and sheer canyon walls.

The photographs also appear in the book "Texas West of the Pecos," published by Texas A&M Press. The exhibit, originally organized by the Dallas Museum of Natural History, is being circulated by the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth.

The Midland petroleum museum is the first stop for the traveling show.

Museum hours are Monday-Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m. Admission is $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children under 12 and free for preschoolers.

Murderers of Georgia family wait on death row

DONALSONVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Corn now grows in the field where 10 years ago six members of the Alday family were slain one by one as they came in from their chores.

The years have done little to dim the memory of one of the most celebrated crimes in Georgia history.

Surviving family members and townspeople, mindful of the row of black marble tombstones, want to know why the three men sentenced to die for the slayings are still alive.

"The Alday family is like a bank," said a family friend, who asked not to be identified. "They've got a note due, and they can't collect. In a way, it's true for the whole community. We all want to see justice done.

"The death penalty opponents are doing their part to keep the killers alive, but the state isn't doing a thing to see justice is done."

It was May 14, 1973, when Ned Alday and his son, Jerry, were planting corn and came in to investigate a suspicious car near Jerry's mobile home. When they failed to return, Jimmy, another of Ned's sons, went to find them. When he didn't return, Ned's brother, Aubrey, and another of Ned's sons, Chester, went inside the mobile home. All died of gunshot wounds, police said.

ACCORDING to court testimony, when Mary Alday, Jerry's wife, arrived at the mobile home after grocery shopping, she was raped and taken to a nearby field where she was shot in the head.

Carl Isaacs, Wayne Coleman and George Dungee, all Maryland prison escapees at the time of the slayings, were convicted of murder and sentenced to die in Georgia's electric chair.

They all wait on Death Row at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center in Jackson, outside Atlanta. No one has died in Georgia's electric chair since Oct. 16, 1964.

Each man's case has been before the U.S. Supreme Court twice, and each now is before the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, which must decide whether lower courts erred in conviction or sentencing.

Carl's brother, Billy Isaacs, testified for the state and received a lesser sentence of 40 years in prison for armed robbery. Several years ago, he wrote a letter to the surviving members of the Alday family apologizing for the crime.

The slain Aldays are buried together in the Spring Creek Baptist Church cemetery beneath a large, black marble marker bearing the words, "Alday Family." Inscribed on the tomb are the words, "They steered the course to the same quiet shore, not parted long and now to part no more."

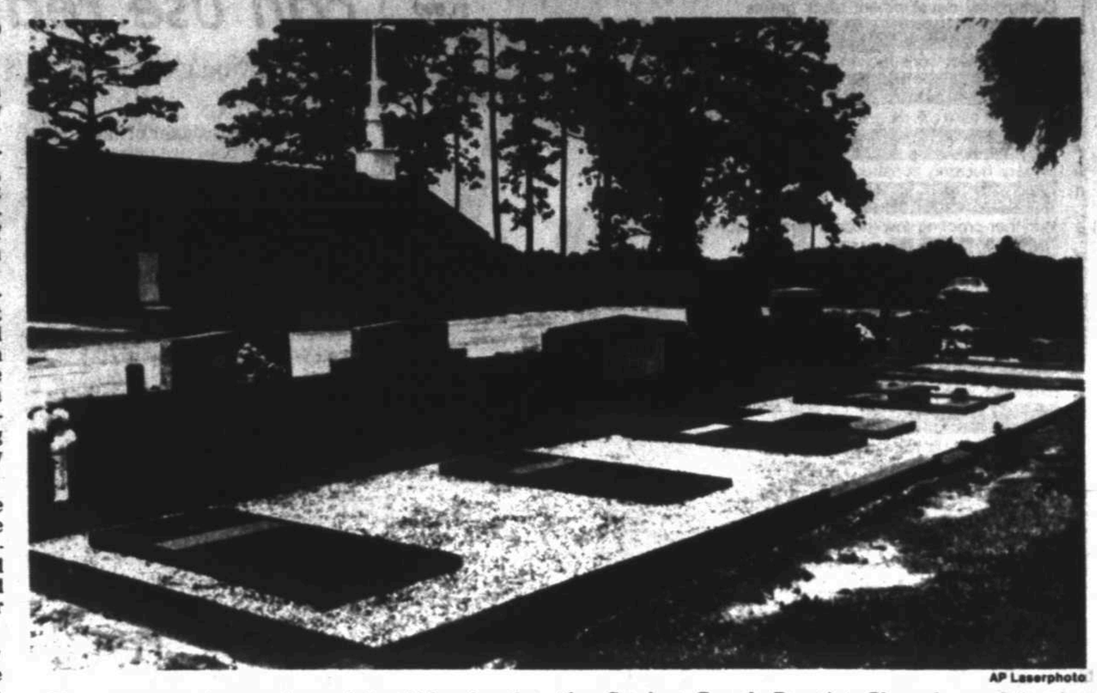

IN THIS southwest Georgia town of 3,300 residents, friends and family feel the wound may never heal.

"That means they must be executed," said 61-year-old Bud Alday, brother of Aubrey and Ned. "I'm not saying we'll ever get over this tragedy, but the wound will be closed if they aren't allowed to sit in prison and laugh at us."

"I didn't even know them (the victims)," Carl Isaacs said in a copyright interview with The Albany Herald in 1975. "I had never seen them before May 14, but I didn't like them. Working people don't do a thing for me...They were just farmers, just beefeaters...the only thing they ever did...was get killed by me."

Billy Isaacs, who was 15 at the time of the slayings, testified the three others — Carl Isaacs, his half-brother Coleman and Dungee — had escaped from prison in Maryland and needed money to continue their getaway.

"I don't blame the Aldays if they want revenge. I'd feel the same way," Carl Isaacs said. "But then again, I'd like to get out and kill more of them. They represent the type of society I don't like..."

Doctors disagree about aspirin

Dear Dr. Solomon: If taking aspirin will keep a person from having a heart attack, why shouldn't everyone take it? It sure is cheap enough and if they even give it to babies, I imagine it must be pretty safe. Would you recommend it? — Douglas, Peoria, Ill.

Dear Douglas: There is some controversy among physicians about the advisability of using aspirin in an effort to reduce the risk of heart attacks. Very competent cardiologists have taken stands on oppposite sides of the issue, and a simple yes-or-no answer to the question you raise is not possible.

Some studies have shown that aspirin may indeed have a beneficial effect insofar as reducing mortality following a heart attack is concerned, but the results of these studies have not been statistically significant. Moreover, no drug is completely free of side effects, and aspirin is no exception.

Therefore, while I would not recommend that everyone begin taking aspirin daily as a means of preventing a myocardial infarction, there may be some people who would benefit from such a course. This determination would have to be made by a physician on the basis of his or her personal knowledge of the patient and the patient's medical history.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I gave birth a few months ago but I have been too busy to write to you until now. What I would like to know is why you think I was allowed to go past my due date, and the doctor did not try to induce labor. Any ideas? — Mrs. M.B., New Haven, Conn.

Dear Mrs. B.: I would have to assume that your obstetrician did not believe that the induction of labor was medically advisable. There is a time and place for induced labor, but it should not be done indiscriminately.

Dr. Jyun Honma, of the Kawasaki Rinko General Hospital in Japan, has pointed out that inducing labor may have an adverse effect on the cervix. In view of this, speeding up labor and delivery may result in more negatives than positives.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Please settle an argument. I know I've read that there are drugs that can lower the amount of cholesterol in the body. My wife says that if there are such drugs, why aren't they being used? Can you straighten us out? — Dennis, Springfield, Ill.

Dear Dennis: Let me provide the essential information and then the two of you can decide who is correct. There are drugs that lower cholesterol levels. However, they are associated with adverse side effects, including an increased risk of death. Physicians therefore are understandably cautious about prescribing any of these drugs for their patients.

For Benjamin, Augusta, Maine: I don't know where you got the idea that a diagnosis of testicular cancer is a death sentence. Today many such cancers are completely curable, and some experts are predicting an eventual cure rate of about 80 percent.

Escaped fish swamps southern Illinois

GORHAM, Ill. (AP) — When fishermen talk about the ones that got away, Larry Brown can top all their stories. It would take $100,000 to replace all the fish he just lost.

When heavy rain hit southern Illinois last week, Brown, who has the largest fish farm in the state, lost 40,000 to 50,000 pounds of large catfish and 100,000 to 200,000 fingerlings. The water topped the levies around the growing ponds at his Gorham farm and the scaly creatures swam away.

Brown figures they could be roaming through about 7,000 acres of Jackson County fields that are still under water.

"We'll just be out of big fish this summer," Brown said Tuesday. "We'll survive."

Brown said word of his loss "spread pretty far, pretty fast" and has meant a bonanza for nearby fisherman.

"I've heard of some people catching up to 500," Brown said. "The people that are catching the most are setting trotlines up."

Reagan proves he can use real money

By MAUREEN SANTINI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yes, Andy Rooney, the president of the United States really does use money.

Rooney, the tongue-in-cheek humorist on the CBS television show "60 Minutes," contended dryly on Feb. 13 that the reason the federal budget wasn't balanced was because "once a president gets into office, he gets out of touch with money."

"Do you think President Reagan takes his money out of his pants pocket every night and puts it on top of his dresser? Or in his dresser drawer, so Nancy won't pick at it?" asked Rooney, his expression puzzled.

"Of course not," Rooney said. "A president doesn't carry money, because he never needs any. What's he going to do with it? He can't spend it."

Well, Reagan has been proving Rooney wrong ever since.

Within 24 hours — it happened to be Valentine's Day — the president made an unscheduled stop at a small card shop near the White House to purchase Valentines for his wife, Nancy. He bought four cards (he later gave one to a military aide who didn't have one for his wife) for $5.30, paying with a $10 bill.

During a brief trip to Klamath Falls, Ore., on March 5, the president had just walked down the steps from Air Force One and was heading for his armored limousine when he noticed a group of Girl Scouts behind a police rope line. He got out of the limo, walked over to the troop, and pulled a $5 bill out of his pocket to buy a box of Girl Scout cookies. No change.

And on his trip to Phoenix, Ariz., last Thursday, the presidential motorcade came to an abrupt, unscheduled halt in front of Peacock Flowers. Reagan went in to buy a Mother's Day bouquet of flowers for his mother-in-law, Edith Davis, with whom he dined that evening.

Reporters weren't allowed in the store, but deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes later said Reagan paid with a $20 bill.

The president also is reliably reported to have cashed a check for $100 in Los Angeles during a recent visit, although there was no word on how he spent it.

And like a lot of men, Reagan occasionally looks to his wife when he needs money. On Easter Sunday, for instance, as the collection basket approached during a service at Santa Ynez Valley Presbyterian Church near their California ranch, Mrs. Reagan took a folded bill from her handbag and gave it to her husband to drop in.

But to be totally fair, Reagan once tried unsuccessfully to use real money in public before Andy Rooney's broadcast. That was during an impromptu stop at an Irish pub in Boston on Jan. 26. Speakes reported that the president offered the bartender $2 for his draught beer, but the bartender said it was on the house.

Rooney had predicted as much.

"I'll bet the president doesn't have a nickel in his pants pocket this very minute," Rooney surmised. "It's not that President Reagan's cheap. It's just that no one ever lets a president pay for anything."

Rooney offered some suggestions that, so far as anyone knows, the president hasn't taken him up on:

"I'd like to see him have to write $1 trillion on the blackboard 100 times every day. And it wouldn't hurt if he had to go out every morning and buy his own newspaper with cash, either."

Blind woman wants to show that she 'can do the job'

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. (AP) — A blind political science professor who won a seat on the City Commission says she hopes her victory will show that sightless people "can do the job."

Shirley Chapman, 53, an East Tennessee State University professor, was elected earlier this week to a four-year term on the five-member commission.

"It's up to people like me to open the door for others," she said. "Maybe we can educate the public not to put people on the shelf when they go blind.

"We're fighting to make people realize we can do the job. I always wanted to run for the commission, and when I became blind I thought, 'Why should that hold me back?'"

She was defeated for a commissioner's seat two years ago by 46 votes.

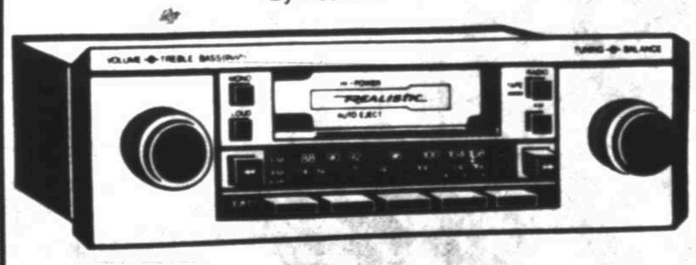

Miss Chapman, who campaigned with the assistance of her guide dog, Halo, has been legally blind since 1975 as a result of diabetes and has been completely blind for three years.

Iraq fires missiles at Iranian city, killing about 10 civilians

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq fired missiles today at the southern Iranian city of Andimeshk, killing at least 10 civilians and destroying about 40 buildings, the official Iranian news agency reported.

Iraq had no immediate comment on the Iranian claim.

Both sides have accused each other in recent weeks of shelling border cities and towns along their 300-mile-long battlefront, and warning that further attacks would invite severe retaliation.

Botha pledges more reforms

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A strong showing by far-right parties this week won't discourage the governing National Party from seeking limited power sharing with Indians and people of mixed race, Prime Minister P.W. Botha was quoted as saying today.

"The government will go forth with the mandate from the voters in the 1981 general election, and there is no question of putting on the brakes," Botha told the pro-government, Afrikaans-language Beeld newspaper.

Presidium discusses session

MOSCOW (AP) — The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the executive committee of the national parliament, met in Moscow to discuss economic questions and an upcoming full session, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda said today.

News of the meeting Wednesday followed a report from Tokyo that the parliament will convene in June and choose a new chairman of the presidium.

Chileans join one-day protest

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Thousands of Chileans curtailed their activities and kept their children out of school in a nationwide one-day protest organized by six labor unions to demand an end to military rule.

Several marches were held Wednesday as part of the campaign, and police arrested 34 seminary students and one priest who marched in Santiago carrying placards bearing only question marks.

The "National Social Protest" called by the unions was the first such demonstration against the regime of Gen. Augusto Pinochet, who seized power in a 1974 coup that toppled the leftist government of President Salvador Allende.

Under the authoritarian constitution, Pinochet may stay in power until at least 1989.

Treason trial begins for Repin

MOSCOW (AP) — A former custodian of a dissidents' aid fund set up by author Alexander Solzhenitsyn is being tried as a traitor in Leningrad and faces a possible death sentence.

The official news agency Tass said Valery Repin, 32, went on trial Wednesday charged with "high treason in the form of rendering assistance to a foreign power in conducting hostile activities against the Soviet state."

Repin has pleaded guilty, according to Tass, which said one of the purposes of the trial is to seek corroborating testimony.

Colombian policemen killed

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Government officials say four policeman in a southern Colombia town were killed by a leftist guerrilla group allegedly trained by Cuba.

More Poles relying on private enterprise

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland — The hostess at the dinner party spread a sumptuous table of smoked eel, herring, veal and apricot cake, along with a bottle of chilled vodka. The last item was the only one produced by the state.

"General Jaruzelski should see this. He would never believe there was a crisis," one of the guests said, referring to Wojciech Jaruzelski, Poland's Communist Party leader, premier and defense minister.

The remark, and the spread on the table the other night, underlined a growing reliance by Poles on the private market to live what they describe as a "normal life."

Despite the visible improvement in supplies at food stores, private markets are selling still hard-to-get goods the Communist government cannot supply.

Poles now take as a matter of course a trip to the country to pick up meat, cheese and poultry that is either rationed in the state stores, or difficult to get.

A look at the dinner table at the party bore this out: the eel came from a private smokehouse, the herring from a similar supplier, the veal from a friend and the apricots from someone's back yard.

"Before holidays, the private smokers won't take orders...because they have more work than they can handle. Their meats are just better," one Pole said.

But food is not the only commodity being sought more and more from private enterprise, which is flourishing as the economy of the state continues to struggle despite post-martial law economic reforms.

Women who want the latest fashion go to private boutiques where prices are high. One shopper, hesitating for a day over a $220 silk dress, returned later with money in hand only to find the dress had been sold.

The average Pole earns $139 a month, but many have large savings because of the shortage of items to spend their money on in the state stores.

Tennis shoes, another hot commodity, sell in "flea markets" outside Warsaw for $139 a pair if they are of Western make. State stores don't carry them.

"You must pay more in a private store or market, but the quality is far better," said a woman who buys all her clothes and most of her food privately. "That is assuming that the goods you want are in the stores at all."

There is no question that the market situation has improved since the martial-law days of 1981 when someone smoking a cigarette and drinking a cup of coffee could reflect that the cigarette, the coffee and even the match used to light up were all rationed.

"Now coffee is not rationed anymore," one woman said. "But it doesn't matter because there's no coffee anyway."

But there is coffee, if one wants to pay $10 for a four-ounce can at a private shop that also sells ground pepper, lollipops, cocoa mix and potato chips — all things either difficult or impossible to find in a state store.

Much of the problem for the state centers on the difficulty in generating goods, despite Jaruzelski's vow to promote economic reforms.

While heavy industries and factories are all part of the socialist state, Poland has many private restaurants, boutiques, shops and markets that are tolerated by the authorities. Private owners must make a profit, a motive that is often lacking in the state-run enterprises.

WE'VE SET NEW STANDARDS ON THE USED CARS WE SELL.

Not too long ago, we could accept trade in cars and place nearly all of them for sale in our used car department. But today...people are keeping their cars a lot longer, putting on thousands more miles before trading for a new model.

This means we have to be extra careful in choosing those trade ins that measure up to our standards. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance...buying your used car.
