Clinton on crime

WASHINGTON — President Clinton on Saturday laid down his hardest line since Republicans took power in Congress, vowing to veto an attempt to rewrite a provision in last year's crime bill that was meant to put 100,000 new police officers on the street. Page 8A

Playing hardball

The pitch to U.S. Rep. Jim Moran from the owner of the only minor league baseball team in northern Virginia came in on him like a fastball thrown at a batter's chin. If Congress revokes the game's antitrust exemption, the owner warned, Moran could lose not only the minor league Prince William Cannons, but also the long-sought chance for a major league franchise in or near his congressional district. Page 9A

Two soldiers who were wounded when they moved into rebel territory die in local hospital, bringing to five the number of dead on the government side in President Ernesto Zedillo's crackdown on rebels in Chiapas state, news reports say. Police charge man in death of girl, 10

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Authorities have charged a Midland man with capital murder in the suffocation-strangulation death of a 10-year-old girl, according to Midland County Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Julianne Powell was found dead in the apartment of Henry Ortiz, 41, about 7 p.m. Friday evening at Quinten's Walk Apartments, 3100 W. Caldera Blvd. Both the suspect and the victim lived in the same building.

Ortiz was arrested and questioned by detectives following the discovery of the girl's body. He remains in the Midland County Jail without bond, Pine said Saturday.

Preliminary cause of death for the child is listed as suffocation-strangulation. Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said Ortiz also will be charged with aggravated sexual assault and kidnapping.

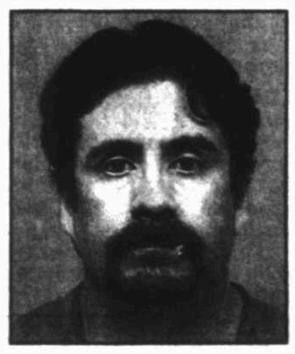

The girl was reported missing by her mother about 5 p.m. Friday.

The girl, who lived with her mother in an upstairs apartment, was found in Ortiz's downstairs apartment a little after 7 p.m. in a spare bedroom. Ortiz was home when officers arrived and consented to a police search, Midland Police Sgt. David Garcia said.

Schorre said Ortiz was sober and calm when officers arrived.

Garcia offered no motive in the case.

Winter's yo-yo temperatures confuse plants

Midland's weather has been so extreme that Mike and Melanie Wyse along with their daughter, Tory, could enjoy an outdoor outing at Wadley-Barron one day while less than a week later Jeanie Johnson had to bundle up to fight the low tempteratures.

The season's mild winter, despite the sub-freezing temperature drop Friday night, is bringing both good and the bad to West Texans and their trees, shrubs, flowers and other growing things.

Trees and shrubs may be budding prematurely in thinking with their built-in time clocks and sensors that spring is here all too soon.

But spring is not due until March 20.

And the citizenry most likely is savoring the friendly and mild winter.

"Once the temperature changes, that starts to wake everybody up," Midland horticulturist-nurseryman Joe Sperl said of the warm weather's effects on budding plant life. "They have a time clock and a temperature (regulator.) I'm almost positive that's what's happening this year."

The wake-up call may be too soon.

The Friday night freeze that dropped into the mid-20s, though far from the overall record low temperature of minus 11 degrees in February 1933 and 1985, may have caused some vegetation and budding damage, especially on deciduous fruit trees, such as peach, apple, pear, apricot and plum. Another freeze was expected Saturday night.

"I saw an apple tree yesterday (Friday) in full bloom," said Sperl, who is Alldredge Gardens' operations manager. "They (fruit trees) are going to have bad times tomorrow (Sunday)" in wake of the Friday freeze and another, less severe one that was predicted for Saturday night.

Apparently, last week was typical of Midland's unseasonably mild wintery daytime temperatures: in the mid-70s. And last week's low night-

City officials trace litigation-happy society to Rodney King affair

Officers: Lawsuit threat doesn't affect field decisons

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Police officers are faced with making decisions daily concerning the safety and welfare of not only themselves, but the community they serve.

Those decisions, sometimes made in seconds, are increasingly coming under the scrutiny of the courts, especially in the area of excessive force.

Since 1991, seven excessive-force lawsuits have been filed against Midland police officers and the Police Department. Two of those lawsuits are still pending.

Before 1991, the Midland City Attorney estimates, that number was about one every two years.

Does the increased threat of a lawsuit effect the decisions that officers make on the street? And, have lawsuits caused some officers to rethink their actions?

According to six officers who have been

Four years ago, a video tape captured Los Angeles police officers beating a man named Rodney King.

The incident not only spawned two trials and a riot in Los Angeles, but is seen by many law-enforcement officials as the point at which excessive-force lawsuits began to increase nationwide.

"When the Rodney King incident became public, law-enforcement agencies took that as a signal that excessive force cases were going to become more frequent," said Midland Police Chief Richard Czech. "Those types of suits were getting to be more frequent, but the King incident really opened the doors. And, Midland was hit just as hard."

Officer John Champion, who was named in a lawsuit in 1992, agreed.

"Residents started telling you that you couldn't arrest them or you couldn't touch them," Champion said. "Suddenly, everyone had a lawyer they were going to call. And, this goes on even during routine traffic stops."

Former Marine remembers buddies he left on Iwo Jima

By Christopher Sullivan
Associated Press

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — He was running for his life. But during those slow-motion seconds scrambling across the dark pumice-sand of Iwo Jima, Bill Bryan also was thinking.

He was measuring in his mind as he ran: Could he could make it to that shell hole up ahead before being hit by the Japanese machine-gunner's bullets tearing up the ground between his feet? Visualizing his dive into the hole, he reasoned it couldn't be a straight plunge or the bullets would "stitch me all the way up."

So he tried throwing himself sideways as if vaulting a fence, his right arm flying outward. A 25-caliber bullet found the arm, shattering the bone just before he hit the floor of the crater.

And for Marine Pfc. William Jennings Bryan Jr., age 19, that was the end of the Battle of Iwo Jima.

Eleven days before, on Feb. 19, 1945, he had landed on the beach during the first morning's assault. Japanese gun emplacements that studded the eight-square-mile island opened up.

"We piled out, and mortars were falling and the machine guns were coming down the beach," Bryan says. "The whole world was being blown apart."

HE WAS in D Company — Dog Company — 2nd Battalion, 28th Regiment, 5th Marine Division. Three days into it, their alphabetical neighbors in Easy Company raised the famous flag on Mount Suribachi.

"Morale went up tremendously," Bryan recalls. "But that was when the killing really started."

He saw buddies become gruesome casualties — one already-wounded man hit in the groin while waiting to be evacuated, another friend with half his face torn away.

Americans suffered 26,000 casualties in their yard-by-yard assault against Iwo Jima's dug-in Japanese, an official Pentagon history states. "Throwing human flesh against reinforced concrete" was one apt description, it says.

Bryan, who will turn 70 this year, retains much of the bearing of a Marine: trim, boots shined, even the teeth-gritting smile from his wartime photos. His jacket bears the patch of a disabled veterans group.

Friends died on Iwo Jima — among them a kid in the landing craft with white "flash-burn powder" on his face whom Bryan would have kidded afterward "but he got killed," and another friend with an Irish name and a wild spark, suddenly extinguished.

With the mention of each, he moves on determinedly to another topic.

"We were taught to move forward, move forward, move forward. That's what we were supposed to do. And I think that's probably what —" he stops and starts again. "We could have become pretty well demoralized."

BRYAN FIRED at least one fatal shot himself. "I know," he recalls 50 years later, his voice going flat at the thought of the dead Japanese soldier, "'cause he was there the next day."

Later, as he himself was evacuated for treatment of his wounds, complex emotions arose, mixing the natural question "Why was I spared?" with the Marine code of faithfulness, Semper Fidelis. "You can't let your buddies down," Bryan says.

At the same time, he says, "I felt extremely lucky to be alive"; 2 1/2 years after enlisting at age 17, he was en route home to a U.S. military hospital.

After his discharge, Bryan drifted for awhile, but "somebody was watching over me," he says — he met his wife, Bobby, and his life gained direction.

The G.I. Bill paid for a college education, something Bryan says he wouldn't otherwise have pursued, and he then worked for the U.S. Forest Service in his native Colorado and around the South for 32 years.

"MY PERSPECTIVE is family," he says, looking over a shelf lined with photos of several generations, from his Western pioneer great-grandparents to his four sons and his grandchildren.

His father was his strongest influence and his wife saved him, he says, but a battle half a world away — the ducking and then going forward, forward, forward; the grudging respect for an enemy; the closeness and loss of friends — did as much as anything else to shape his perspective on a puzzling world.

> "Morale went up tremendously (after the flag was raised on Iwo Jima). But that was when the killing started. ... Why was I spared?
> — Bill Bryan
> Marine on Iwo Jima

"I see a lot of grays," he says, summing up. "There's nothing really black-and-white to me."

Bryan's Purple Heart, the medal for combat wounds, is packed away. But he keeps handy a small library of books and articles about Iwo Jima. Photos show the barren plateaus and cliffs, and the faces of young Marines, including himself.

One group photo he has marked with stick-on stars, their different colors denoting those killed, wounded or decorated. Almost every face has at least one.

AMONG THE special keepsakes is a signed copy of "Iwo Jima: Why and How," by a poet in the ranks, Frank Gardner. The poem begins with a young student's question: "Why take so small an island, isolated, far at sea?"

It explains the crucial value of its military airfields, deemed worth the tremendous casualties, "one for every minute."

Marines fought, Gardner writes, for four weeks, "some places more like five; and we survivors, boarding ship; thanked God to be alive."

Lives to live, that's what the lucky ones had. That and a permanent bond.

Pulling another page from his trove, Bryan displays a letter from a buddy he'd lost track of since the war. The man quickly retold his two-year recovery from a wound that left him walking with a cane. He told of a career, start to retirement. He told of a son living in Alaska.

"That's my life," the friend wrote. "Semper Fi."

Police arrest marchers at a rally agsinst racism

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Police arrested dozens of right-wing extremists for throwing rocks and firing flares at marchers participating in a rally against racism Saturday.

The violence erupted when SOS Racism, a group working for racial equality and understanding, marched past the offices of right-wing extremist groups.

Extremists wearing black ski masks threw rocks and fired flares at the marchers. At least one demonstrator required medical care, police said.

Police spokeswoman Julia Moller said 73 members of the Nationalistic Youth House were arrested. It was not known how many would face criminal charges.

Debate over capital punishment begins in South Africa

By Patrick McDowell
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — When they fired automatic weapons at a payroll van, Themba Mkwayane and Movusu Mchunu unwittingly shot their way into South African history.

The death sentences they received for killing four people are the focus of two milestones: the seating of South Africa's first constitutional court, and the future of capital punishment in a society that once executed dozens of people a year.

Two days of arguments beginning Wednesday will pit the Legal Resources Center, a group of lawyers that battled apartheid, against the attorney general's office. The center's appeal argues that executions should be banned.

At issue are articles in the new Bill of Rights of the interim constitution that prohibit cruel and unusual punishment and guarantee the right to life, but that also stipulate no right can be absolute.

"The court will be dealing with the constitutionality of the death penalty, not the facts of the case," said Ron Pascke of the Legal Resources Center. "It's really a question of whether anyone can be sentenced to death in South Africa."

The court's 11 justices — two women (one white, one black) and nine men (six white, two black, one Indian) — will be sworn in Tuesday to seven-year terms. They will be arbiters of the constitution that took effect with the nation's first all-race election last April.

It is the first time that South Africa will have an independent body to interpret the highest law of the land, similar to the U.S. Supreme Court. Its existence marks a major shift from the white minority rule of apartheid to the rule of law under a black-led democratic government.

Debate over capital punishment has intensified since the April vote that brought Nelson Mandela's African National Congress to power.

Death penalty advocates, particularly white conservatives, blame a moratorium on executions since 1990 for South Africa's crime rate, which is among the highest in the world.

The ANC opposes capital punishment, due in part to the frequent death sentences meted out to ANC militants and black criminals under apartheid.

"It's unfortunate that the court needs to be under such pressure on its first case," said Justice Catherine O'Regan, a member of the new court and one of the nation's handful of women judges. But "being in the spotlight on this issue will be good for the debate on public values. It's important that the court be decisive."

The facts of the case are not in dispute.

Makwayane, 36, and Mchunu, 24, are survivors of a six-man team that shot up an unarmored bank van carrying a $136,000 hospital payroll on Aug. 31, 1990.

The gunfire killed two bank employees in the van and two policemen in an escort car. Before the robbers could escape with the loot, more police arrived and arrested all but one.

Two have died in escape attempts. One received a life sentence. Makwayane and Mchunu were sentenced to hang.

Their convictions came after the former apartheid regime declared the death penalty moratorium in February 1990, as Mandela was released from 27 years' imprisonment to negotiate the end of white rule.

With the ANC and the white-led National Party, the former rulers, unable to agree on whether capital punishment should be in a new constitution, the issue was left for the courts.

Under apartheid, whites ruled without a written constitution and Parliament was supreme. The new constitution contains checks and balances on power, such as the constitutional court.

SThe court's president is Arthur Chaskalson, a longtime anti-apartheid lawyer who founded the Legal Resources Center and helped draft the Namibian and South African constitutions.

Few are traditional jurists.

Albie Sachs, 62, is a longtime ANC activist jailed twice as a young civil rights lawyer in Cape Town and forced into exile in Britain, the United States and Mozambique. A car bomb planted by South African agents in 1988 cost him an arm and an eye.

Veterans offer help in study of Agent Orange

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — A group of U.S. veterans offered Saturday to help Vietnamese hospitals obtain used American medical equipment so they can treat and study victims of Agent Orange sprayed during the Vietnam War.

A study could clear up controversy over the effects on people of the defoliant, which many U.S. veterans have blamed for health problems.

"What happens here has a direct effect on Vietnam veterans," said George Claxton, chairman of the Agent Orange Committee for the Vietnam Veterans of America.

Claxton and other veterans met with Vietnamese doctors to exchange information on Agent Orange and discuss a joint study of the defoliant's effect on humans and the environment.

U.S. forces sprayed the chemical over large areas of former South Vietnam to destroy foliage that helped hide Viet Cong guerrillas and North Vietnamese soldiers.

Agent Orange contained dioxin, a chemical thought to cause cancer, birth defects and other health problems. Vietnam provides the largest pool of potential dioxin victims, but few studies have been done.

"We can't even afford to do blood screening. We can't afford to test large numbers of people for dioxin," said R. Le Cao Dai, secretary general of the 10-80 Committee, founded in October 1980 to study the effects of chemicals used during the war.

Claxton, of Lansing, Mich., said the VVA will lobby Congress to fund a major study in Vietnam.

Vietnam's hospitals and laboratories also lack modern equipment, said Dai, pointing out an old Soviet incubator that had been repaired with a piece of boiler pipe.

Expect a cloudy, mid-50s day

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies, becoming partly cloudy in the afternoon, with a high in the mid-50s and south to southwest winds 15-25 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-30s, the NWS said.

Monday's forecast is partly cloudy and warmer, with a high in the upper 60s.

Saturday's high was 51, compared to the record high of 85, set in 1962. The record low for today's date is 11, set in 1981.

STATE

Snow fell in the Panhandle with flurries and sleet reported in sections of North and West Texas Saturday as a mass of arctic air pushed southward across the state.

The cold front caused a 74-degree difference in temperatures across Texas, with 19 degrees at Dalhart in the Panhandle to 89 at Brownsville and 93 at McAllen, both in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Temperatures elsewhere in the state began dropping the afternoon, with 30s and 40s in many regions.

The National Weather Service said light rain fell at College Station, while some thunderstorms in Southeast Texas moved into Louisiana.

Winds were from the north to east at 10 to 25 mph, and gusty in South Texas.

Skies were mostly cloudy to partly cloudy statewide, with clear conditions in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

The forecast called for overnight lows from the lower 20s in northern sections to mid-30s in extreme Southeast Texas, with daytime highs from the lower 30s to the upper 40s.

It should be mostly cloudy with a slight chance of rain Sunday.

NATION

A mass of arctic air pushed southward across the central part of the nation Saturday, dragging temperatures well below zero and touching off areas of light snow.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from the minus teens in the northern Plains to single digits and upper teens farther south, from eastern Colorado through central Illinois.

Westerly wind blowing at up to 30 mph produced wind chills of 50 below zero in western and central Upper Michigan.

Saturday morning's chilliest reading in the Lower 48 states was 31 below zero at Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming, and Grand Marais, Minn., reported a wind chill of 78 below zero.

At the opposite extreme, Brownsville, Texas, warmed to a record high of 89.

While the arctic air mass was fairly dry, the cold fronts marking its leading edge generated light snow from the western Plains through northern Arkansas.

Bands of moderate to heavy snow and fog also developed across the Great Lakes, with storms leaving up to a foot of snow in parts of Michigan overnight.

Across the South, a few pockets of light snow were reported in northern Alabama. Light rain and fog were scattered over the Southeast and lower Mississippi Valley, and thunderstorms developed over parts of southern Louisiana and southern Mississippi.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

LAWSUIT: City's had 7 lawsuits since 1991

(From 1A)

Locally, since 1991, seven excessive-force lawsuits have been brought against particular officers, the Police Department and the city. Of those seven, five have been settled in favor of the city on the local level, with one appeal pending in the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. Two lawsuits are still pending.

The case that seemed to attract the most attention was the shooting of Francisco Madrid, 45, by Officer Phil Partin on Oct. 21, 1992.

According to police records, Partin responded to a disturbance call at 807 E. Kentucky. Partin found Madrid throwing furniture and clothing into the front yard. Then, according to records, the situation escalated, with Madrid trying to leave the scene in Partin's police car and then running at Partin with a knife. Partin fired three shots at Madrid, killing him.

Madrid's wife, Gloria, filed a lawsuit against Partin on June 7, 1993, claiming that Partin used excessive force and that the Police Department had not properly trained him. A jury cleared Partin on Nov. 24, 1993.

Ms. Madrid appealed to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, which upheld the jury's decision on Nov. 2, 1994.

Midland City Attorney Keith Stretcher said the allotted time to appeal the appeals court's decision to the U.S. Supreme Court expired Feb. 3, at which time the City of Midland had not received notice of such an appeal.

Other cases claiming excessive force include:

■ Christopher Columbus Cooper filed a lawsuit on May 11, 1993, against Officer Ronnie Bryant and two deputies, claiming they searched his vehicle on Nov. 14, 1991, without permission and took possessions belonging to him. He claimed his Eighth Amendment rights had been violated.

Judge Lucius Bunton ruled in favor of the deputies and Bryant on Feb. 8, 1994.

Cooper's appeal to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals is still pending.

■ Roman Estrada filed a lawsuit on Nov. 19, 1993 — nearly two years after he was arrested following a disturbance that also involved his brother — against Officer Sam Collins, the City of Midland, Midland County, Sheriff Gary Painter and other officers and deputies. He claimed he was given no reason for his arrest, was mistreated and beaten by Officer Collins and other officials and received no medical treatment in jail.

The response filed by the City of Midland, Police Chief Richard Czech and Collins, said Estrada was told why he was being arrested and that Estrada had to be restrained at the jail because he became uncooperative and combative.

Judge Lucius Bunton dismissed the case on June 24, 1994. Estrada has not appealed Bunton's decision.

■ Fred Lewis Jr. filed a lawsuit on Dec. 2, 1992, claiming his jaw was broken during his arrest by Officer Champion on June 5, 1992. He also claimed he did not receive adequate medical treatment in jail. Named in the lawsuit were Champion, Midland County and Sheriff Gary Painter.

In response, Champion claimed Lewis did not inform him of the door hitting Lewis in the jaw. Also, attorneys' for the jail claimed that there was no sign of injury and was treated accordingly, including being given pain killers for his pain.

U.S. Magistrate Louis Guirola Jr. ruled in favor of the Police Department and the jail on Nov. 17, 1993.

Lewis put in a notice of appeal to the fifth circuit, but then withdrew his appeal.

■ Celia Gonzales, mother of Celestino Jasso, filed a lawsuit on Aug. 17, 1992, concerning an incident on July 6, 1992, during which Officers David Beatty and Alvin Navarette mistook Jasso for an intoxicated subject they were searching for and chased Jasso into his residence. During the incident, Jasso's arm was broken. She claimed they had no probable cause for entering the home and the use of excessive force resulted in Jasso's injury. The lawsuit named the officers, Police Chief Richard Czech and the City of Midland.

In response, Beatty and Navarette said Jasso closely resembled the subject they were searching for and they chased Jasso into the residence because they were concerned for the safety of the occupants inside.

Judge Lucius Bunton ruled in favor of officers and city on Jan. 19, 1993.

Ms. Gonzales appealed to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. The appeals court upheld Bunton's decision on Feb. 18, 1994. The appeals court decision has not been appealed.

Ms. Gonzales also filed in state court on Nov. 6, 1992. On Aug. 25, 1994, Judge John Hyde ruled in favor of the city. Hyde's decision has not been appealed.

In the two lawsuits pending against the city, one resident claims an officer pushed him to the ground and jumped on his back and another claims that an officer threw him to the ground, breaking his arm and separating a shoulder.

"We have become a litigation-hungry society," Stretcher said. "And, it's just getting worse."

He said that before 1991, the City of Midland faced about one excessive force lawsuit every two years.

"People are going for the deepest pockets," said Czech. "I don't think it's really the officer they are after, but the city."

Defending an officer and/or the Police Department basically comes down to defending the department's guidelines concerning the amount of force an officer can use in any given situation.

"We have restrictions that exceed the state guidelines," Czech said. "We have certain steps, that begin with a verbal command and move through using chemical deterrents and/or a nightstick, that officers must use before resorting to deadly force. Our department meets national standards and that really helps in lawsuits such as these."

Stretcher agreed.

"The department usually gets sued on the issue of deficient training, so we basically go over the training that officer had concerning the situation he was in," he said. "We go step by step through his training. The Midland Police Department has very stringent guidelines and that comes out it in court."

Stretcher said police officers make an easy target for lawsuits.

"They have to make decisions that affect their lives and the lives around them in a split second," he said. "They are constantly in contact with the public. So, some residents think it would be easy to sue them. In Midland, they are finding out that is the wrong assumption."

THREAT: 'What do I need to do to stay alive?'

named in excessive lawsuits in the past four years, the answer is no.

"You do what you have to to go home alive, not to go home without having a lawsuit filed against you," said Officer Phil Partin.

Officer Alvin Navarette agreed.

"When you are forced to make a decision, your first thought is not if you are going to get sued, it's what do I need to do to stay alive in this situation, how can I go home?" Navarette said.

Partin was sued by Gloria Madrid after Partin shot Madrid's husband Francisco during a disturbance call in 1992. Madrid tried to drive away in Partin's police vehicle before running at Partin with a knife, according to police reports filed at the time.

Navarette, along with Officer David Beatty, was sued by Celia Gonzales, mother of Celestino Jasso, in 1992. The officers mistook Jasso for an intoxicated subject they were searching for and chased Jasso into his residence. During the incident, Jasso's arm was broken.

As their lawsuits moved through the judicial process, the officers have had plenty of time to review their actions.

"Looking back now, I think I should have locked by car," Partin said. "But, other than that, I wouldn't change what I did. The last thing I want to do is use deadly force on someone. But, in my mind, I know I used more that what was reasonable to get the situation under control.

I have been in several situations similar to that since then and I will not hesitate to do what I have to do to stay alive," Partin said.

"I have reviewed what I did a hundred times in my mind," Beatty said. "We thought we had the right guy and I did what I thought I needed to do and I don't regret that."

"I would have done everything the same," said Navarette, who added he has purchased a video camera for his police vehicle because of the Jasso incident.

Two other officers involved in lawsuits still feel today that they made the best decision.

Officer Ronnie Bryant was sued in 1993 in connection with a traffic stop that turned into a search of the vehicle. Christopher Cooper, who was in the car, claimed that the search was illegal.

"My situation was so routine, I really didn't think much about my decision at the time," Bryant said. "However, I wouldn't change what I did. I had consent to search that vehicle."

Officer Sam Collins was sued in 1993, nearly two years after he arrested Roman Estrada. Estrada claimed that Collins and several other officers verbally and physically abused him.

"You try to make the best decision possible at any given time," Collins said. "I didn't do anything I regret or out of line. I had three or four minutes to make a decision that a jury had three or four months to look at."

The officers agreed that excessive-force lawsuits have increased since the incident with Rodney King in 1991 and that many residents are not really after the officers, but the City of Midland.

"Individually, these people don't expect to get anything out of you," Bryant said. "However, they think the big bucks are with the city, so they go through you to get to the city."

"These are mostly frivolous suits," said Officer John Champion. "People are just going after the deepest pockets. And, people looked at these officers in Los Angeles and began putting all officers in the same boat."

GIRL: Police await results of autopsy

but indicated officers were led to Ortiz's apartment by an incident earlier in the day. He had no details on that situation.

Apparently, on-premises security looked for the girl and when she couldn't be found the police were notified.

"She (the girl) was found in the suspect's apartment, but we don't know how she got there," Garcia said. "This guy, for some reason, became a suspect and officers went to his apartment where he gave a written consent to search and after a short search officers found the body."

Police are awaiting results of an autopsy performed at Southwestern Institute of Forensic Science in Dallas for official cause of death.

Schorre said an investigation continues into whether or not Ortiz has any prior convictions.

WACKY: Mild weather teases vegetation

ime temperature of 25 degrees was mild for winter.

"This is my warmest winter," said Corey Mead, a Midland-based weatherman who was raised in North Dakota and schooled in Minnesota.

The icy Arctic cold front that was moving into West Texas this weekend was a "pretty straight shot from Canada," he said.

So far this winter, the month's low nighttime temperatures have been 26 degrees on Dec. 12; 24 degrees on Jan. 23, and 25 degrees on Feb. 8.

February's low temperatures in past years have averaged in the low to mid-teens.

Today's high temperature is to be in the mid-50s, and the overnight low temperature tonight is to be in the mid-30s.

"Everybody that I have talked to can't believe the mild winter that we have had," Sperl said.

"It really sets our vegetation back right now because over the last week, we have had such of a nice week — in the 70s," he said. Everything is starting to bud out: The roses are starting to put new growth on them. The freeze may damage them."

And an age-old question not correctly answered except by hindsight is this: "When is the day of the year's last killing frost?"

The average last frost date for this niche of West Texas is April 2.

However, noted the weatherman, the extreme range on record is March 5, 1953, for the earliest final killing frost and April 28, 1934, for the last killing frost of the season.

And the seemingly "big" concerns for home gardeners and landscapers is "what's in store for us within the next two months before Easter" on April 16, "if we are going to get some bad freezes or not, if we are going to get an early spring, and how bad is the wind going to get next month," Sperl said.

"March is usually our windy month, and yet we're getting it in February this year."

The mild winter is putting out signals that are teasing both weather observers and plant life.

Traditional tales say the budding of native mesquite trees and the migration of the scissor-tailed flycatcher to West Texas are signs that the season's last freeze is past and that spring weather has arrived.

Another precursor, not original to Texas, is whether or not the groundhog (woodchuck) sees its shadow when it crawls out of its haven-hole on Feb. 2. If the sun is shining, and the ground hog sees its shadow and thereby is frightened, then the critter re-enters the hole to prepare for six weeks of winter weather. If the sky is cloudy, and there is no shadow to spook the animal, the ground hog stays topside and enjoys the weather.

The omens that wintery weather is over for the season apparently have failed this year.

"That Groundhog Day thing sure blew up in our faces," Sperl said.

And "when mesquite starts budding, that means winter is over," he said. "Some of the mesquite are swelling. My red oak in my yard, the buds are starting to swell on it."

To protect trees' and shrubs' root systems from the freezing cold, Sperl said horticulturists recommend giving the plants "a heavy watering — a good soaking."

Meanwhile, this season of usually dormant plants is "the time to start transplanting all of your shrubs and your trees and everything."

Myrl Mitchell, a cotton farmer and ginner in the Lenorah community of neighboring Martin County, observed that fruit trees are budding right now along with incipient buds of mesquite trees.

He has yet to see any scissor-tails fly in.

Mitchell said he is familiar with those weather-related omens.

"But you know, there is another old saying: 'All signs fail.' And in recent years, I have seen the mesquites freeze back, put out (buds), and have another freeze. And that's just in recent years."

For now, cotton farmers are hoping for a hard freeze to make inroads into two of cotton's major insect nemeses, the boll weevil and the boll worm, by killing them off.

"And the way the weather is going, I think it (a hard freeze) may come tonight (Saturday). "If it does, it will kill where it is budding already — trying to bloom. It is very unseasonably warm."

Otherwise, said Mitchell, "Basically, we have not had any cold weather."

Debbie Benge-Frost, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service horticulturist for Midland and Ector counties, suggested that the season's "mild" and "very warm" wintertime weather is not going to "hurt us a lot ... for the most part.

"People are concerned because they want to know what the weather is going to do," Ms. Benge-Frost said. " Well, of course, I can't tell them what the weather is going to do. And there's not anything people can do about it."

Prime minister opposes cease-fire extension

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnia's prime minister says his government's troops will return to war rather than extend the current cease-fire unless Serbs begin serious negotiations for peace.

Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic said Saturday that Serbs are using the four-month cease-fire to consolidate the gains they have made during 34 months of war. He said the government will not keep the cease-fire past its May 1 expiration date.

To do so "would serve the purpose of our enemies, and that is to keep the status quo here forever — seize and freeze, and then pretend to talk," he said in an interview.

He said the United Nations should take action — presumably by lifting an arms embargo on the Muslim-led government — if Serbs don't budge.

Otherwise, he said, "they can say 'no' indefinitely ... which serves their purpose of keeping what they took by force."

Mediators for the "Contact Group" — consisting of the United States, Britan, France, Germany and Russia — hoped the truce would give them time to conduct talks to end nearly three years of war.

But their efforts broke down over a subtle, but vital point.

The mediators want Bosnian Serbs to accept the Contact Group's basic peace plan, saying that elements of the plan could then be open for negotiation. But Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic wants to negotiate before accepting the plan.

The plan would give the Serbs, who control 70 percent of Bosnia, about 49 percent. The rest would go to a federation of Bosnian Muslims and Croats.

The government's military commander, Gen. Rasim Delic, rejected new meetings Saturday with Serb generals and the United Nations and said his troops are using the time remaining under the truce to train.

"It is necessary to come out of this cease-fire stronger, and to continue with our initiative on the battlefield," he said.

The truce has kept much of Bosnia quiet, but has not been able to quell fighting in the northwest, and it got worse on Saturday. Maj. Herve Gourmelon, a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo, reported heavy fighting around Bosanska Krupa, on the eastern edge of the northwestern Bihac area.

He said at least 500 shell explosions were reported, accompanied by "unbearable" levels of machine-gun and small-arms fire.

U.N. officials reported one man killed when two shells slammed into Bihac, a U.N.-designated safe haven, early Saturday. Bosnian radio put the town's death toll at three.

Questions arise about crack down on guerrillas

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) — Rebel fighters withdrew into the jungle ahead of an army advance as more questions arose Saturday about the government's crackdown on guerrillas in southern Mexico.

Several of the 30 suspected members of the Zapatista National Liberation Army arrested in the crackdown have denied links to the rebel organization. One said her statements to police had been falsified.

The military continued to block journalists' access into former rebel strongholds and information was sketchy about what has happened since Thursday, when President Ernesto Zedillo ordered the arrests of Subcomandante Marcos and other rebel leaders, breaking a yearlong truce.

And there was no word on the whereabouts of Marcos. "That's what we want to know, too," said Antonio Ocranza Fernandez, an Interior Ministry spokesman.

In a Feb. 2 letter to Interior Minister Esteban Moctezuma, published Saturday by the Mexico City daily La Jornada, Marcos said there were rumors that Mexico had promised to crack down on the Zapatistas in return for the recent multi-billion dollar bailout package announced by the Clinton administration.

"If that's so, well, you can proceed as you want, we will fight to the last man," Marcos' letter said.

Troops entered rebel territory in the southern state of Chiapas on Friday, and most of the rebels apparently slipped further back into the Lacondon Jungle without risking a fight.

Peace talks with the rebels had produced no agreement, and Zedillo is under pressure to take decisive action and rally Mexico's battered peso and stock market after heavy losses blamed in part on recent rebel activity.

A high-ranking government official in Mexico City allowed last week that Marcos' arrest would be important to the crackdown.

But the official, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said the government believes it accomplished almost as much when it stripped the romantic mystery from the ski-masked leader, identifying him as Rafael Sebastian Guillen Vicente, the 37-year-old son of a middle-class businessman from the northern city of Tampico.

The Zapatistas rose up on Jan. 1, 1994, and more than 145 people were killed in fighting before a cease-fire took hold 12 days later.

The crackdown comes on the eve of Sunday's gubernatorial election in the west-central state of Jalisco, where polls indicate that Zedillo's governing party could suffer the worst loss in its 66-year history.

The Institutional Revolutionary Party admits to losing only two state elections anywhere in Mexico until now, and neither state is as large as Jalisco, whose capital is Guadalajara, the country's second-largest city. Polls have repeatedly shown the governing party 10 to 20 percentage points behind the conservative National Action Party.

The government's Notimex news agency reported Saturday that two soldiers were wounded when the army began its advance into rebel territory and they died later at a hospital in Comitan.

The Attorney General Office's confirmed late Friday that an unknown gunman had shot and killed Lt. Col. Hugo Alfredo Manterola Cedillo, 48, as he rode in a small convoy near the village of Nuevo Momon, near Guadalupe Tepeyac. It said a second soldier was wounded.

Meanwhile, three alleged rebel leaders arrested so far have denied links to the Zapatistas.

Jorge Santiago Santiago, accused of being one of five top rebel commanders, told reporters on Friday that he did not know Marcos. Santiago, 50, works for a community development organization and is well-known in Chiapas.

In the state capital of Tuxtla Gutierrez on Friday, a man the government identified as guerrilla Subcomandante Vicente also denied a rebel connection. Jorge Javier Elorreaga said in court that his only contact with Marcos came during his work as a television news producer.

Also arrested was Elorreaga's wife, Maria Gloria Benavides. She said in a Mexico City court that a widely publicized statement she allegedly made to police, which had identified Marcos, was falsified. "The whole story was made up," newspapers quoted her as saying.

She said her statement was given while she was blindfolded and that she was forced to sign it without reading it.

She was arrested at her Mexico City home, where authorities said they seized rebel documents and two 9 mm pistols.

Authorities said 27 other rebel suspects have been arrested in Chiapas, Mexico and Veracruz states. Some have admitted to connections with the rebels, including a man who said he operated a weapons repair shop for them.

In Mexico state, two police officers were killed and three were wounded Thursday night during a raid on a rebel safe house on the Explosion erupts near tunnel; four workers are missing

TOKYO (AP) — Four workers were missing after an apparent volcanic explosion Saturday near a highway tunnel under construction in central Japan.

Initial reports indicated a vast amount of steam, hot water and dirt burst out of the ground with a loud bang and shot as high as 30 yards, police in Nagano prefecture said.

The gushing subsided somewhat, but hot water was blasting through the ground in a dozen or so other spots, preventing police and rescue workers from approaching.

Bursts continued late into the night, eight hours after the initial eruption, and rescue workers called off their work until after daybreak Sunday, said a duty officer at the prefectural police headquarters.

The accident occurred in an uninhabited, mountainous area about four miles from the nearest community, a hot spring resort called Sakamaki Onsen.

A total of 31 construction workers were building a concrete wall near the entrance of the tunnel at Minami-Azumi, some of them digging out dirt.

The area, which is highly volcanic and has many hot spring resorts, is about 190 miles west of Tokyo.

Friend of suspect in trade-center bombing vanishes

■ South African, his wife and child have not been seen since Tuesday.

Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — A South African who was with World Trade Center bombing suspect Ramzi Yousef the night before his arrest has vanished, and his neighbors believe he may have been the informant.

U.S. officials have said an informant guided them to Yousef and was likely motivated by the $2 million reward offered by the U.S. government. But the Americans have refused to release any information on the person that provided the tip.

Istiaque Parker, his wife and their baby have not been seen publicly since Tuesday's arrest of Yousef, who was extradited to New York and charged with the 1993 bombing.

"Mr. Parker knew Yousef and we immediately thought that he was the one who gave the tip," Salman Ghauri, who runs a video shop just below Parker's apartment, said Saturday. Parker often rented movies from the store in the Rana Market.

Parker, an Islamic religious student in his mid-20s, brought Yousef on Monday afternoon to the Su-Casa Guest House, across the street from Parker's apartment. The two also went out for coffee that night, said guesthouse manager Musawar Qazi.

The next morning, Pakistani and U.S. law-enforcement officials burst into the hotel and asked the front desk worker, "Where is room 16?" The clerk pointed to the second floor and the officials rushed upstairs where they found Yousef, tied him up, put a blindfold on him and whisked him away, Qazi said.

Shortly afterward, six U.S. and Pakistani officials walked across the street, went directly to Parker's apartment and entered without using force, said Ghauri.

Carrying cameras and video equipment, they spent hours inside the apartment. They left without questioning any of the shopkeepers or neighbors who knew Parker, Ghauri and others said.

who knew Istiaque Parker

Parker's family was gone by the time the law-enforcement officials arrived and they have not been back to the apartment since, according to people at the Rana Market who normally saw him coming and going daily. Knocks on the apartment door go unanswered.

The News, an English-language daily, reported Friday that Parker had been arrested by Pakistani police. But police and government officials told The Associated Press that they knew nothing about Parker.

Officials at the South African mission, who knew Parker well, said Saturday they were trying to locate him and his family.

"We're very concerned and we are following up," said an official who asked not to be named.

If Parker had been arrested, normal procedure would be for the Pakistanis to notify the South African mission, the official added.

Parker has been a student for about three years at the Islamic University in Islamabad, a school which draws Muslim religious students from many countries.

At the Rana Market, Parker's acquaintances speculated that the Americans had taken him and his family away for safe keeping, possibly at the U.S. Embassy or even outside the country.

U.S. officials in Islamabad and Washington refused to comment on the case.

Clinton promises to veto attempt to revise measure in crime bill

■ President's warning marks onset of more aggressive phase in drawing differences with Republican rivals, aides say

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Clinton on Saturday laid down his hardest line since Republicans took power in Congress, vowing to veto an attempt to rewrite a provision in last year's crime bill that was meant to put 100,000 new police officers on the street.

It was the first explicit veto threat from Clinton since the voters returned a divided government.

The threat comes after several months in which the president has swung between broad attempts at conciliation and brief hints of confrontation. But aides said it marked the onset of a more aggressive phase in drawing differences with his Republican rivals that will begin with an effort to enlist Cabinet officers in fights over welfare, foreign policy and other issues.

"Anyone on Capitol Hill who wants to play partisan politics with police for Americans should listen carefully," the president said on Saturday morning in his weekly radio address. "I will veto any effort to repeal or undermine the 100,000 police commitment. Period."

With the new House of Representatives already well on its way toward rewriting major portions of the anti-crime bill that the Democratic Congress approved last fall, Clinton's warning on Saturday was relatively narrow. It aimed only at a Republican proposal that folds separate programs created by the crime bill, including one providing $8 billion for hiring new police, into a single $10-billion anti-crime block grant. The White House has said that would allow mayors to spend money on things like prisons and street lights rather than hiring the police officers the current law requires.

The measure, the sixth in a Republican anti-crime package, is likely to win House approval later this week. But Clinton's threat appeared aimed more directly at the Senate, which is expected to gather its anti-crime measures into a single piece of legislation that it may not want to subject to a presidential veto.

Still, Clinton said nothing on Saturday about the five Republican-backed initiatives that have won House approval over the objections of some Democrats, including measures that would permit prosecutors to use more illegally seized evidence at trial and would place time limits on appeals by death-row inmates. That silence appeared to signal that the White House would be willing to accept them as part of a final bill.

Clinton was also silent about the crime-prevention programs, including midnight basketball, that along with financing for police officers would be put in jeopardy by the Republican block-grant program. Although he and other Democrats, particularly urban liberals, pushed hard for those programs last summer, their omission on Saturday suggested that he was not ready to use his veto to protect them, either.

But after two years and 22 days in which he has yet to veto a bill, Clinton's aides described his stern threat on Saturday as a product of their renewed thinking about how he can best use a president's ultimate weapon.

Not since Millard Fillmore left the White House 142 years ago has a president waited so long to throw down a veto. Even after the Republicans took over Congress, Clinton restricted himself to circumlocutions, as in his State of the Union address, when he said of the ban on assault weapons, which won approval last summer: "I will not let it be repealed."

But White House officials say he is now determined to employ this rusting cudgel to shape and block legislation.

Beginning with the raft of top administration officials it has dispatched to appear on the talk shows on Sunday, the White House also plans to draw sharper differences between Clinton's plan to overhaul the welfare system and the rival Republican proposal.

Scientists link genetic mutation to risk of strokes in blacks

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Many blacks at high risk of stroke share a mutation in a gene that helps control blood pressure, which may explain striking racial differences in the disease's victims, researchers said Saturday.

Strokes are the third leading killer of all Americans, but the hazard is especially great for blacks. Black men are twice as likely as white men to die from a stroke.

High blood pressure increases the risk of stroke, as does high cholesterol. But aggressive treatment of blood pressure in recent years has failed to significantly bring down black people's stroke risk.

"Among blacks, the traditional risk factors simply do not explain their increased risk. There is something else going on," said Dr. Frank M. Yatsu.

He and colleagues from the University of Texas' Houston Medical School are looking for other explanations, especially ones carried in the genes.

At a stroke conference sponsored by the American Heart Association, Yatsu described the discovery that a particular genetic mutation that can occur in both blacks and whites seems to increase the stroke risk for blacks only.

The racial difference in this gene emerged from the study of about 200 people. Yatsu said he wants to look at several hundred more to be sure.

If this gene is eventually linked to a higher stroke risk in blacks, he said it should become possible to warn those at exceptionally high risk as early as their teen-age years.

These people might be able to bring down the hazard by taking medicines, watching their diets or other changes in their living habits. When experts figure out what's causing the high risk, other strategies may become obvious.

In 1991, 27 of every 100,000 white men in the United States died of strokes, compared with 55 of every 100,000 black men. Among women, the racial difference was only slightly smaller. For every 100,000 women, 23 whites and 41 blacks died of strokes.

Just how much of a role genes may play in this racial difference is unclear. To help sort this out, Yatsu's group looked at the gene for angiotensin converting enzyme, or ACE, which contributes to both high blood pressure and heart disease.

Baseball owners gain upper hand from lobbying efforts to Congress

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

With President Clinton beckoning Congress to end the six-month baseball strike and lawmakers still studying the antitrust exemption, the politically connected baseball owners have rolled out a powerful lobbying machine.

WASHINGTON — The pitch to U.S. Rep. Jim Moran from the owner of the only minor league baseball team in northern Virginia came in on him like a fastball thrown at a batter's chin.

If Congress revokes the game's antitrust exemption, the owner warned, Moran could lose not only the minor league Prince William Cannons, but also the long-sought chance for a major league franchise in or near his congressional district.

"He persuaded me," Moran, a Democrat, said of the visit Feb. 1 from Cannons owner Art Silber, a Baltimore banker and real estate investor.

A year ago, Moran was prepared to introduce legislation that would roll back major league baseball's longstanding exemption from antitrust laws. Aides had even drafted a bill to take away the monopoly status team owners have enjoyed since a 1922 Supreme Court ruling that essentially declared baseball was not a business.

"Then we looked into it, and found it would hurt northern Virginia's chances (at a big-league team) and hurt the Cannons. That's why I pulled the bill back," Moran said.

With President Clinton beckoning Congress to end the six-month baseball strike and lawmakers still studying the antitrust exemption, the politically connected baseball owners have rolled out a powerful lobbying machine.

On the same day Silber visited Moran, 102 other minor league owners and managers fanned out across Congress for personal lobbying. A week earlier, eight major league owners had visited 66 members of the House and Senate.

With their stature as local business leaders, philanthropists and large political givers — and with a few of city's best lobbyists in their bullpen — the owners have powerful sway on Capitol Hill.

And their most potent weapon, as Moran discovered, is the threat of moving franchises, especially those in the minor leagues, which are an important part of 176 local economies from Durham, N.C., to Spokane, Wash.

"You have to remember who the owners are," said Bud Shorstein, a senior aide to Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., who is sympathetic to some of the players' concerns.

"They generally are very affluent citizens who are leaders of their communities, very charitable people, who also have been politically active for years. The players don't have the same background."

Figures compiled by the National Library on Money and Politics, a nonpartisan group that studies campaign finance, found that baseball team owners, their families and top employees have given $1.1 million to congressional candidates and to political parties over the last 15 years.

The owners are also likely to have personal connections on Capitol Hill.

Acting baseball commissioner Bud Selig, owner of the Milwaukee Brewers, was the college roommate of Sen. Herb Kohl, D-Wis. When Selig was lobbying at the Capitol on Thursday, Kohl invited him to his office for a private session with other Wisconsin lawmakers.

Selig brings to the table another asset: some of the best Washington lobbyists money can buy.

He was accompanied to last Thursday's meetings by Tom Korologos and William Cable, two lobbyists from the influential firm Timmons and Co., and Stanley Brand, former counsel to the House of Representatives.

In the House, the owners have employed as their lobbyist a former congressman, Illinois Democrat Marty Russo.

When the owners testify this week on baseball's antitrust exemption before the Senate Judiciary Committee, their spokesman will be James F. Rill, who headed the Justice Department's antitrust division under President Bush and is among the foremost experts on the subject.

The players have lobbyists, as well, but they are fewer and less well-known. While the owners have always schmoozed with Congress, the players became politically active only about a year ago.

"We can't play the owners' game," said one lobbyist for the players. "We can't promise tickets, limo rides and PAC contributions."

What players rely on is celebrity, a significant weapon in a media-sensitive institution like Congress.

That was on display last week when the Major League Players Association threw a reception starring such players as Cal Ripken, Eddie Murray and Dave Winfield. The players were swarmed by autograph-seeking members of Congress and their aides.

Advocates for the players also point to a study by Congress' own researchers that found the owners' monopoly gave them an incentive to reach an impasse over players' salaries, which would allow them to dictate the terms they want. "It is not clear what economic benefits are provided by the antitrust exemption," the Jan. 13 report concludes.

Man accused in stock fraud did not lead lavish life, kept to himself, neighbors say

By DAVID E. KALISH
Associated Press

Charles Brumfield, alleged ringleader of a far-flung, $2.6 million insider trading scheme unveiled this past week, apparently has flaunted few signs of ostentatiousness.

NEW YORK — He lives in a one-story cream-colored bungalow in a middle-class development of identical homes in Florida. He drives a 1993 gold-tinted Saturn compact. Many neighbors say they don't even know him.

Charles Brumfield, alleged ringleader of a far-flung, $2.6 million insider trading scheme unveiled this past week, apparently has flaunted few signs of ostentatiousness.

A look at his lifestyle and methods of evading detection, based on research and interviews with neighbors and federal investigators, suggests how Brumfield, who turns 52 on Sunday, covered the tracks for four years, orchestrating what authorities describe as one of the biggest securities fraud rings since the 1980s takeover boom.

The case against Brumfield and 16 other people, unveiled by the Manhattan U.S. Attorney's office and the Securities and Exchange Commission on Thursday, is startling in magnitude.

A middle manager in AT&T Corp.'s Labor Relations department in Morristown, N.J., Brumfield was said to have passed secret information about four pending AT&T takeover targets to a web of family and friends in five Eastern states, who in turn traded stocks profitably on the tips.

The scheme as described by federal investigators yielded Brumfield and Thomas Alger, his subordinate at AT&T, more than $300,000 in kickbacks. Both have pleaded guilty to securities fraud and other criminal charges.

Yet evidence of the sort of lavish spending typical of some of Wall Street's biggest accused white-collar culprits failed to emerge during research and interviews.

According to the SEC's complaint, Brumfield illegally passed along confidential information about AT&T's plans to acquire Paradyne Corp., NCR Corp., Digitial Microwave Corp. and Teradata Corp — from December 1988 through November 1991. AT&T itself isn't accused of any wrongdoing.

During that time, Brumfield and his wife Lorrie owned a two-bedroom condominium in a modest townhouse complex in Basking Ridge, N.J., which they bought for $172,000 in 1985, New Jersey property records show.

In May 1993, Brumfield resigned. Three months later, he sold the condominium for $200,000.

Irving Arntz, who bought Brumfield's condo through a property broker, told The Associated Press that he never met Brumfield. When he was shown the three-floor residence, he said it appeared "just the same as anybody else — nothing fancy."

Neighbors said it was an easy place to be anonymous.

"Nobody really knows each other around here. Everyone pretty much keeps to themselves," said John Cunnert, a neighbor who has lived at the complex for four years but says he also never met Brumfield.

In May 1994, Brumfield put down $75,000 and borrowed the rest to buy a $175,000, one-story house with a two-car garage and tiny front lawn, at 377 Kelsey Park Circle in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla.

The home is in a classic, nondescript Florida cookie-cutter development of nearly identical cream-colored houses with red-tiled roofs, nicely tended flower beds and palms. His car is another non-standout, a simple gold-colored 1993 Saturn SL2 four-door sedan.

Poking from Brumfield's small front lawn is a two-foot high pink flamingo sculpted from garden tools. A small, screened-in swimming pool occupies most of the backyard. A basketball hoop and a large gas grill were nearby.

Several neighbors in the development said they did not know Brumfield, a tan and fit-looking man with a shock of reddish brown hair and glasses, given to wearing golf shirts, shorts and tennis shoes — everyday Florida garb.

Asked about the fraud scheme on Saturday, Brumfield was polite but terse. "Please talk to my lawyer," he told an AP reporter who visited his house. The lawyer, Justin Walder of Roseland, N.J., declined to comment.

Federal authorities refused to speak about Brumfield's lifestyle. But the SEC complaint alleges that Brumfield and Alger went out of their way to keep company and government officials from discovering the scheme.

Discovery makes perfect landing; cosmonauts watch from orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery and its crew glided to a perfect landing Saturday, ending a historic rendezvous mission that cleared the way for NASA to dock with the Russian space station.

"We learned a lot about working with the Russians," shuttle director Brewster Shaw said. "The flight was extremely successful, and we're just delighted."

The next step comes in June when Atlantis actually docks with the orbiting Mir station for a crew swap. NASA rehearsed everything but the docking during the eight-day flight, pulling Discovery within 37 feet of Mir on Monday.

"Astonishing, beautiful machine that they have ... truly amazing experience," shuttle commander James Wetherbee said after landing. "We're on the right path. This agency is going places and we're doing it with Russians and I think that's the right thing to do.

"You can't feel anything but elated even now that we're down."

Wetherbee guided the shuttle through a clear sky onto the runway at Kennedy Space Center just before sunrise in what flight director Wayne Hale called "a picture-perfect landing."

About 250 people gathered in the early morning chill to welcome Discovery and its six astronauts home.

Watching from afar, via a special TV hookup, were the three cosmonauts aboard Mir.

"The Mir crew just passed along congratulations on your mission," Mission Control informed Wetherbee shortly after touchdown.

"Spasibo," Wetherbee replied — Russian for "Thank you."

Monday's rendezvous was the first U.S.-Russian meeting in space since the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz docking. NASA wanted to see how the shuttle handled next to the sprawling, 100-ton station. Wetherbee's conclusion: Beautifully.

Seven Atlantis-Mir dockings are planned through 1997 as a prelude to the construction of an international space station. The United States, Russia, Europe, Canada and Japan plan to start building that station in late 1997.

One of Discovery's primary thrusters began leaking shortly after liftoff Feb. 3 and nearly ruined the rendezvous. "My heart just sank," Wetherbee admitted Saturday.

Russian space officials were concerned the leaking fuel might damage Mir. They agreed to the close approach at practically the last minute after three days of intense negotiations.

Shaw said the thruster trouble turned out to be "a special plus."

"That was, indeed, the purpose of this whole activity: To learn those things and figure out how we're going to have to deal with each other, how we're going to operate together, how we're going to overcome unexpected things that arise," Shaw said. "Fortunately, we had the opportunity in a very non-threatening way on this mission to do exactly that."

A preliminary inspection showed Discovery to be in good shape after its 3 1/2 million-mile journey. The leaking jet was shut down two minutes before landing, and nothing spilled.

The shuttle's crew made U.S. space history in two other ways.

For the first time, a female voice was heard during the crucial phases of descent and landing. Sitting in the right seat of Discovery's cockpit was Air Force Lt. Col. Eileen Collins, the first woman to pilot a NASA spaceship.

Astronaut Bernard Harris Jr. became the first black to walk in space. He and crewmate Michael Foale spent 4 1/2 hours out in the open cargo bay Thursday to evaluate thermal modifications to their suits. The test involved keeping them completely out of sunlight, but their fingers got so cold NASA had to cut the walk short.

Discovery's crew also included former Mir resident Vladimir Titov, the second Russian cosmonaut to fly on a U.S. space shuttle.

NASA has one more shuttle flight before Atlantis leaves in June for Mir.

Abortion issue could divide Republicans over Foster nomination

By Christopher Hanson and Joel Connelly
N.Y. Times News Service

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — The abortion debate that has suddenly erupted over surgeon general nominee Dr. Henry Foster may hold far more peril for the Republicans in Congress than it does for the Democrats.

On the surface, the Democratic administration seems to be taking it on the chin for providing contradictory information about the number of abortions Foster performed. The nomination is in serious trouble.

But in fact, many experts say, Republicans are even more at risk: In the long run, the abortion issue has the potential to divide the now-united GOP and offer ammunition to Democrats for the 1996 elections.

Many Republican congressional leaders are walking very carefully, hoping Clinton will withdraw the nomination before committee hearings can be held.

At best, the abortion issue is a distraction for Republicans, who are in the majority in Congress for the first time in 40 years and in a position to enact an historic conservative agenda.

At worst, the issue could divide the party and drive off potential converts.

"No pun intended, but abortion is not the issue of choice," said GOP consultant Doug Bailey, who thinks that, nationally, the Republicans have the more serious splits on abortion, although the Democrats are also divided.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., scrupulously avoided abortion in the Contract With America, his legislative agenda of budget, regulatory and tax cuts and other conservative measures. And when anti-abortion crusader Henry Hyde, R-Ill., took over chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee, he said emphatically he had no plans to drum the issue.

Former Nixon White House aide Steven Hess says the Republicans have a unique opportunity to force a shift to the party that could last for generations if they enact their agenda. But he warns that the resurfacing of the abortion issue could easily set off "unguided missiles" in the party's huge, largely anti-abortion freshman class.

"I don't want to be sidetracked," said second-term Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash. "Right now we have the focus. We are marching in very determined fashion toward a goal. There is steady progress on all fronts. Great, historic things can be done."

Many Republicans, including Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., are struggling to cast the Foster issue as one of White House competency and Foster's credibility, sidestepping the question of whether a doctor who has performed legal abortions should be allowed to serve.

Gorton, who sits on the Labor and Human Resources Committee that would hold hearings on Foster, issued a one-sentence statement Thursday urging Clinton to withdraw the nomination. He was not available for follow-up questions.

"He's not running from it," said Gorton spokesman Tony Williams, arguing that Gorton simply wanted to avoid a bitter conflict that would divide the Senate and the country.

Bailey said Gorton and other GOP panel members have good reason to want Foster to leave the fray before televised hearings begin.

"The Republicans get all the advantage of the nomination being pulled (and) can say the reason was not abortion but the competence of the White House. The moment you turn it into a hearing (you have) a very vexatious fight with all the hard-core on both sides parading. People in both parties would like the issue to go away," he said.

But it is not going away. Not only has Foster vowed to fight on but the issue is roiling up the anti-abortion freshman contingent in the House. As Hess put it, "The genie is out of the bottle".

Although many Democrats may be uncomfortable over the issue, others are doing their best to keep abortion front and center.

Parks records are in big mess, officials report

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Record-keeping was in such a mess at the National Park Service that congressional investigators found a vacuum cleaner valued on the agency's books at $800,000 and a fire engine at one penny.

The Park Service doesn't collect enough information to tell where its limited resources can be best spent to proteet the federal property it oversees, according to a report by the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigating arm.

And when parks officials make policy improvements, they often can't tell how effective they are, a GAO report said.

GAO investigator James Duffus III said in the report, released Thursday, that four years after Congress enacted a law designed to ensure sound financial management by federal agencies, "the Park Service has made little progress in implementing its provisions."

The agency was unable to provide auditable financial statements to the Interior Department's Office of Inspector General for fiscal years 1992, 1993 and 1994, said Joyce Fleischman, deputy inspector general.

"Overall, the information contained in the financial statements was not accurate, reliable or supported by the accounting system," Fleischman told a joint meeting of two House subcommittees overseeing the agency.

Park property values were overstated by more than $90 million because of accounting errors, she said.

"Examples of inaccurate data in the automated system were a vacuum cleaner worth $150 that was listed at over $800,000, a dishwasher worth $350 that was listed at over $700,000, a fire truck worth $133,000 that was listed at 1 cent and a mobile radio worth $793 that was listed at over $79 million," she said.

Park Service spokeswoman Florence Six said Friday that many of the errors cited by the GAO resulted from computer software glitches and accounting changes. Many improvements are already in place, she said.

"We are working very hard to correct the problems," the spokeswoman said.

Fleischman also said park officials appear to be well on their way to straightening out their records.

"We are encouraged by the commitment of the current director of the Park Service to devote the necessary resources to make needed changes to the accounting system," she said. "We believe that this commitment will go a long way in correcting problems in the park services' internal control environment."

Voters league completes 75 years

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

When Pat Schneider was president of the Midland League of Women Voters five years ago, she and her daughter, Molly Clark, often engaged in political discussions.

Those talks, coupled with a concern for citizens' responsibility to vote, prompted Ms. Clark to join her mother as a member of the League of Women Voters. Ms. Clark said she thought her marketing background would be an asset in the league's voter registration drives.

"It's important to get out and vote," Ms. Clark said. "If they (league members) weren't here, there would be fewer people who would vote."

After joining the organization, Ms. Clark discovered there's more to the League of Women Voters than registration drives, she said. "We are here to inform the public" on issues and candidates, she said.

Ms. Schneider — who also serves on the Midland City Council — echoed the importance of information disseminated by the league. "It's hard (for the general public) to get information about issues," she said.

Services provided by the local league include hosting candidate forums, and creating and distributing the Voters Guide and the Voters Service, both information publications.

For many Midlanders, the Voters Guide has become an important resource during election time.

"You can ask them at the election office: people come down there (to vote) with them in their hands," said Ms. Schneider, a former chairperson in charge of the publication.

Ms. Schneider has helped inform voters for many years.

"I joined when I was in college and then I didn't participate for many years and joined again about 10 years ago," she said.

Ms. Schneider said her initial membership stemmed from her interest in politics. Years later, a newspaper article reminded Ms. Schneider of her activity in the league and led her to join the chapter

State's alcohol, drug program director resigns

AUSTIN (AP) — The head of the state's alcohol and drug treatment program, who in 1984 was convicted for mishandling money, is resigning amid calls by state leaders for an audit of the agency's funding mechanisms.

Ben Bynum said Saturday he was resigning because he is not qualified to oversee a restructuring of the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse's internal auditing system.

"I am a clinician by training and what we need ... is a business and finance person to restructure all of our auditing processes, and that's not my background and I recognize that," Bynum said.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and other state leaders have expressed concerns recently over the agency's oversight of local alcohol and drug abuse programs it helps fund.

The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday that Bullock scolded Bynum in a Feb. 1 letter for not fulfilling a promise to audit the local programs after a whistleblower reported abuses at an Austin facility.

"I've told you ... there is money being stolen and it needs to be stopped," Bullock wrote in the letter.

Bullock said he was asking Senate Finance Committee Chairman John Montford to look into "all of TCADA funding mechanisms to see where additional safeguards are needed."

Bynum, who said his resignation had nothing to do with Bullock's criticisms, said the agency did not immediately audit the programs because it did not have enough auditors to do so.

The agency since has hired a national auditing firm, which on Monday will begin examinations of the 52 substance abuse centers that receive 60 percent of the agency's funds.

At least two local abuse centers are currently under investigation by authorities, according to The Dallas Morning News.

Nueces County authorities are conducting a criminal investigation into allegations that the former head of a Corpus Christi treatment center misappropriated thousands of dollars earmarked for drug abuse.

The Travis County district attorney's office is investigating allegations involving officials at a Travis County treatment center.

Bynum said Saturday the problems at those centers began before he was named executive director last May.

"Our primary aim for sponsoring a black history observance is to provide continued awareness of our heritage and culture, and, in some way, project what the future holds for black Americans," said NB&PW member Damita S. Cornelius.

Members, Doris Richardson and Dorothy Scott, said the NB&PW has sponsored Black History Month activities for 15 years now.

The celebration is scheduled for Feb. 25 at Washington Elementary School.

Black History Month is all about providing role models for black youth while celebrating the achievements and contributions of blacks throughout history, according to several prominent African-American Midlanders.

Local community leaders agree people of all races should embrace the concept of honoring and recognizing the value in the accomplishments of blacks all year long and not just in February.

The designation of the month of February each year as Black History Month is an attempt to provide all Americans information for understanding about black Americans and their contributions to the growth of the country, according to information provided by the Negro Business and Professional Women.

The celebration was started in 1926 by Dr. Carter G. Woodson, a Harvard Ph.D. He hoped through this special observance, all Americans would be reminded of their ethnic roots and that a togeth-

Old-fashioned spanking would do thugs some good

The headline definitely got this reader's attention. Right there at the top of Page 8A last Thursday, it said: "Paddling latest weapon in war on crime."

The story was out of Jackson, Miss., and began this way:

"When it comes to punishing scofflaws from graffiti artists to petty thieves, some lawmakers think the best idea is a good, old-fashioned spanking.

"Of several states that have considered the idea, Mississippi has gone the furthest. The state House adopted a bill this week that would allow judges to order paddlings instead of going to prison."

Ott

I say: Hear, hear. Way to go Mississippi.

And, anyone out there who has been the victim of some senseless juvenile crime — be it vandalism, a minor burglary or what have you — no doubt agrees. Beat the living daylights out of the little thugs.

We're not talking about anything as severe as a Singapore caning mind you, just a good, old-fashioned spanking, the kind of beating you and I received on a regular basis while we were growing up.

And, they worked. We thought twice before we repeated one of our past indiscrections, especially if we knew our dad's belt or an assistant principal's paddle was waiting for us.

The mere threat of a spanking was enough to make most of us decide against committing the offense in question, or, at the very least, to tone it down enough so that once we did get caught it would not seem quite so bad.

In other words, the fear of a spanking often proved to be the deterrent it was intended to be.

The key, however, is for the young person to know right up front who is going to be administering the paddling. A proper choice is essential to the ultimate success of the program.

Again; think back to your youth.

If you knew your misbehavior was going to result in a spanking from your mother, you might just laugh to yourself and say, "Big deal. I won't even feel it."

But if your mom, after throwing up her hands in frustration, declared, "Just wait 'til your father gets home," you immediately started to shake. Trouble — in the form of red blotches on your fanny — was on the way.

It was the same at school. If you figured your discipline was going to be a paddling from a teacher — especially a frail female type — it would not stop you from pursuing whatever misdeed you had been contemplating. After all, the spanking would cause you little or no pain and, in fact, would in all likelihood enhance your reputation as "class clown," a distinction you had long coveted.

But the minute she pointed toward the principal's office — where the mean old assistant principal also resided — things changed. Your cocky attitude disappeared. Severe pain was about to enter your life, and you knew it.

So as Mississippi officials begin to pursue this new —or is it old? — course of disciplinary action, they need to keep one thing in mind: Who is going to administer the beatings?

Moms, bless their soft hearts, are out, as are frail teachers. Modern-day parents, as we all know, absolutely refuse to take responsibility for the actions of their children, so that rules out fathers. Assistant principals live in fear of lawsuits, so we can't count on them, either.

Where does that leave us? Where do we turn?

Simple. To the football field.

Think about it. Who was the one person who could inflict more pain on your backside than your father and assistant principal combined? That's right. Your junior high football coach. When he took paddle in hand, tears automatically formed in your eyes.

So youth of Mississippi, get ready.

Some old-fashioned discipline is coming your way.

And, better yet, there's nothing you can do about it.

Football, you see, is king in the south. Indeed, coaches just might be the only people who are above the threat of a lawsuit.

So do me a favor. Bend over and touch your toes.

Exterminator gets life sentence

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — An Austin man has been sentenced to life in prison for molesting a 4-year-old girl while working as an exterminator in her parents' home.

Gary Smith, 50, was sentenced Friday for aggravated sexual assault of the Leander girl.

Smith, former owner of Pest Control of Texas, was inspecting the home of the child's parents last March when he sexually molested her, police said. He turned himself in in July, two days after the mother reported to police that her daughter had been attacked.

Smith also faces charges of molesting a 5-year-old Travis County girl in her home. A Travis County grand jury indicted him last week on those charges.

In both cases, at least one parent was home when the attacks occurred, police say.

MONTH: Midlanders remember black history

erness in the United States' racial groups would develop out of mutual respect for backgrounds.

Woodson, called by some the father of black history in America, was thinking of symbolism when he chose a particular week in February as black history week. That week contained the birthdays of Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln.

Douglas was the leading spokesman of American blacks in the 1800s. Born a slave, he became a noted reformer, author and orator devoting his life to the abolition of slavery and the fight for black rights. Lincoln was the nation's 16th president and signed the Emancipation Proclamation.

The celebration later increased to the entire month to provide more time for programs, observances and celebrations.

Robbyne Fuller, civic leader and chief executive officer of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, believes black history is important every day of the year.

"African-American History Month is not to be celebrated just one month out of the year. The Black Chamber is doing an activity every month ... to focus that African-American history is every day of every month, 365 days a year," Ms. Fuller said.

"Black History Month is an oxymoron for me, because it's not something to do just one month, and black history is all history," said community leader John B. Love III.

South Elementary School teacher Barbara B. Yarbrough said she also believes black history is "something that should be taught every day to every child. We have to live with everyone and a man's worth, accomplishment and contribution should always be put forth instead of on the back burner."

She also noted, looks can often be deceiving. For instance, she said, former U.S. Sen. Edward Brook is black, but appeared white to her students.

"Mathematically, Biblically and historically ... it is proven the black race is the oldest race," Love said. "The oldest person found was in Africa. We're all from the same race."

Love, who serves on the Planning and Zoning Commission, as well as on the board of directors for Big Brothers/Big Sisters, as a member of the Midland Jaycees and other organizations, believes Black History Month provides a sense of pride for black people through teaching self-awareness while informing the public of the accomplishments of black people throughout history.

Through education, Love hopes some prejudices will be eroded.

Addison Dean, who works in business-marketing for Texas Instruments, believes remembering one's heroes provides a sense of accomplishment for future generations to look back upon.

Setting an example through his own endeavors, Dean is active in the community serving on the boards of directors for both Camp Fire Boys and Girls and Casa de Amigos.

"We need to celebrate black history month ... because each race of people needs to celebrate the history of great things accomplished by their ancestors," Dean said. "Remembering the way we came and where we're going."

Dean emphasized looking to the future while continuing to work and progress. But, only though realizing the past can these goals be attained, he added.

"Each race should remember our heroes as role models, to see what they accomplished ... for the youth. These are standards to be set with goals to be sought," Dean said.

"There are so many inventions created by blacks ... the first open-heart surgery was performed by a black physician ... the main significance is the personalization it brings to individuals and for blacks they can believe 'if they can do it, then I can do it'.

"Among adversity, when given the chance the spirit is capable of beautiful, wondrous things," he added.

Ms. Yarbrough agreed noting many inventions were created by slaves.

"Many of the inventions we enjoy today were made through slave ingenuity to make their jobs easier ... how sugar is processed and cotton. Yet, these people couldn't own the patents for their work. It was their masters," Ms. Yarbrough said.

Love said Black History Month allows children to learn about black history, which has not always been embraced in this country.

He added, "slavery is not the extent of their history."

Ms. Yarbrough said stereotypes of slaves as singers and dancers isn't always accurate. Many were writers, musicians and historians.

"Blacks are not all singers and athletes. Many have something to offer like (former Supreme Court justice) Thurgood Marshall," Ms. Yarbrough said.

"If history books had been gracious enough to include everybody's history, it would be more obvious," Ms. Yarbrough said. "It appears blacks haven't contributed, but we have."

"Through recognizing past achievements they can reach beyond the expected norms people have set for you," Ms. Yarbrough said.

She has worked to reach above the expectations and serves the community not only has a teacher, but also as a volunteer for Project Blueprint and serves on the board of directors for the Midland County Child Welfare Board and the Midland-Lee Youth Centers.

Exceeding those expectations set by society is a lofty goal, but one to seek.

"There are beauties in the world which come in all different colors, different ways, shapes and forms and once we appreciate one another's cultures ... whether it be art, literature, customs or culture in general ... then maybe we can all learn to live together.

"Awareness and traditions need to be passed on and showed to the community as a whole so they can learn and understand and begin to appreciate it," Dean said.

"Black history is an ongoing thing," Ms. Yarbrough said. "And, prejudice is still there and is never going to go away until you see a person as a person and not as a color."

BLACK: Area residents celebrate month of February

(From 1B)

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. exhibits and demonstrations will be on display with a focus on youth in the community.

Among the exhibitors will be area black organizations, churches, community service organizations and demonstrations from a black artist, beauticians and gospel singing as well.

"This year, we collaborated with other organizations which enhance the community like the Red Cross and Big Brothers/Big Sisters," Ms. Richardson explained. "These are service organizations who serve everyone in the community."

From 2-4 p.m. church youth groups will participate in a Jeopardy-style game focusing on black history. All of these events are free and open to the public.

Then, starting at 6:30 p.m., a banquet will begin with a soul food buffet and entertainment in the Washington Elementary School Multi-Purpose Facility.

Tickets for this event are $12.50 and reservations are requested. The can be made by calling 683-7549.

Ms. Richardson said the buffet will feature variations and carryovers from the early menus of black Americans including foods like greens and black-eyed peas. The meal will be catered by Sam's Bar-B-Que.

Entertainment for the event will be two featured speakers, former Midlander and Home Shopping Club personality Paula McClure-Jordan and Alis Gary, a fashion designer from Fort Worth.

The theme for the banquet is "Reflections of Our Past" and colors for the event will be red, green and black — the colors of the African flag, Ms. Scott noted. Guests are encouraged to wear Kente fashion, the traditional African attire, but it is not required.

The NB&PW will also honor some area high school students who have achieved academic success as special guests at the banquet.

"We do this to commemorate the contributions made to America by black people. Hopefully, through this awareness, it will inspire youths and others to follow in their footsteps," Ms. Richardson said about why NB&PW host a black history month celebrations.

"We invite everyone to come see, come look and come participate in the festivities. Just be a part. We want to create a whole public awareness," she added.

"It's very important as mature people and young people to remember our heritage and contributions while continuing to aspire to gain a sense of pride to use while continuing to make progress," Ms. Scott said.

The NB&PW has existed for about 35 years providing community services including, among others, Valentine's Day celebrations at area nursing homes, providing Christmas gifts for veterans in the VA hospital in Big Spring to providing a tea recital in April for city music students who may not be able to perform publicly otherwise.

Funds raised by the group provide scholarships to area students and donations for area community service organizations like Christmas in April and others.

Other Black History Month events in Midland include a performance by jazz musician Tom Braxton at 8:30 p.m. Saturday at Greentree Country Club.

His appearance is sponsored by the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs. Tickets are $15 and are available at Pages and Prints, Regency Cleaners, and Talk O The Town. In Odessa, they can be purchased at Jean Collins Insurance.

Several churches are also celebrating the month with activities.

VOTE: League of Women Voters has 75 years of service in Midland, she said.

Ms. Schneider served as president of the local chapter from 1989 to 1991; Ms. Clark has been membership chairman for the past three years.

The two women are among about 40 members, which includes seven men, who make up the Midland League of Women Voters — one of about 1,100 chapters across the country.

This Thursday, the Midland league — created in 1941 — will celebrate the national league's 75th anniversary.

At the celebration dinner, the local chapter will recognize community supporters and past league presidents.

The guest speaker at the gathering will be Diane Sheridan, treasurer of the National League of Women Voters and a former president with the Texas League of Women Voters.

The National League of Women Voters was founded by Carrie Chapman Catt Feb. 14, 1920 — six months prior to the ratification of the 19th Amendment which gave women the right to vote.

The organization began as an offshoot of the suffrage movement and has evolved with the changing times and issues of the day.

"This group takes on issues that are not just women's issues," said Donna Robertson, community affairs chairperson for the Midland league.

The non-partisan group works toward objectively educating the public about a wide variety of political issues, she said.

"I don't know of another organization that supplies you with information on your candidates and candidate issues without a hidden agenda or being partisan," Ms. Robertson said.

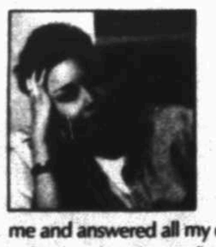

Among their contributions, the organization studies issues — through interviews and academic research — and creates publications outlining the findings. The local chapter recently participated with the state organization to compile a publication on juvenile justice and violence.

Past notable contributions made by the Midland league include their position to repeal the Poll Tax, the push for equal representation on the Midland County Commissioners Court, desegregation of the Midland public schools and being an advocate for single-member City Council districts.

On the national level, the league in recent years has sponsored the issue debate on strategic defense (SDI), sponsored presidential primary debates, campaigned for the "motor voter" bill, adopted a position on gun control, and launched "Take Back the System" : a voters' campaign to reclaim government and elections.

Holocaust survivor to speak this week

From Staff Reports

Mike Jacobs of Dallas, a Holocaust survivor, will speak in Midland and Odessa this week.

Jacobs will speak at Midland Freshman School Monday and Tuesday, at Odessa High School Wednesday and Thursday and at Temple Beth El, 1501 N. Grandview, Odessa, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. He will bring with him a slide presentation,as well as several pieces of memorabilia connected with his imprisonment in a concentration camp.

Founder and past president of the Holocaust survivors in Dallas, he also is founder of the Dallas Memorial Center for Holocaust Studies, dedicated to the memory of the 11 million peopel — 6 million Jews and 5 million non-Jews — who perished at the hands of the Nazis between 1939 and 1945.

In conjunction with his work with the museum in Dallas, Jacobs was instrumental in bringing a boxcar for the exhibit, which is located at the Jewish Community Center in Dallas and is open to the public.

The public is invited to hear him speak at Temple Beth El.

Jacobs was born in 1925 in the small Polish town of Konin, which had a Jewish population that dated its beginnings to 1379. On Sept. 1, 1939, Poland was invaded by the German army. Two months later, Jacobs and his family were herded into cattle cars and moved to the ghetto in Ostrowlec. His parents, two brothers and two sisters, were murdered in the Treblinka death camp.

Officials announce partnership with Fannie May Association

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla (R-Texas) and Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman announced a partnership with Fannie Mae (Federal National Mortgage Association) which will provide affordable home loans, down payment and closing cost assistance for 53 future home buyers.

Bonilla and Ms. Perryman made the announcement Friday along with Judith Dedmon, senior vice president of Fannie Mae.

Under the Odessa program, affordable home loans will be made available to qualified home buyers for 53 newly constructed homes in the Hendley subdivision. The Odessa Housing Finance Corporation has committed $300,000 to assist with revolving funds for the project. The city has pledged nearly $1 million of their federally appropriated home funds to provide down payment and closing cost assistance to qualified home buyers purchasing a home within the Odessa city limits. Fannie Mae has agreed to purchase the loans made through local lenders participating in the program.

"This means that hardworking Odessa home buyers will get a little help in removing the key barrier to homeownership — coming up with the down payment — and many many will be able to purchase the home they have always wanted," Ms. Perryman said. "I am pleased to see Fannie Mae team up with the City of Odessa to put deserving, low- and moderate-income families on the path home."

The Community Home Buyer's Program also allows for underwriting and credit flexibilities, enabling home buyers to use more of their monthly income for housing expenses, and alternative credit sources such as regular rent and utility payments to qualify for a mortgage. Home buyers also may use the COHP funds for closing costs.

Current income limits for COHP are an annual income of $22,500 for two persons, $25,000 for three persons, $28,150 for four persons, $30,400 for five, and $32,650 for a family of six.

"These kinds of innovative grants are an investment in the future of West Texas," Bonilla said.

MC's lower tuition rate best source for fall aid

The fall semester is more than six months away, but it's time now to start thinking about financial aid. Midland College offers a number of need-based and performance-based scholarships through the Financial Aid Office.

One of the best sources of financial aid is the choice to attend a junior college for the first two years. Because of state funding and local taxing districts, community or junior colleges are able to significantly reduce the cost of a college education.

Coombes

Students should consider the option of attending locally for the first year or two.

Spending two years at Midland College with its lower tuition rate may save the student enough money to pay for the next two years of tuition at a four-year school.

The first step in applying for need-based or performance-based aid is to stop by the Financial Aid Office in the Student Activities Office.

Eligibility for need-based scholarships is determined by filling out the Free Financial Aid Application. The results of the application will determine how much aid the student is eligible for.

Also, the Financial Aid Office is receiving information about a number of new scholarship opportunities. The scholarships include:

☐ A scholarship from the Society of Petroleum Engineers. Application deadline is Feb. 15.

☐ A scholarship from the American Council of the Blind of Texas. Applicants must be legally or totally blind. Application deadline is April 2.

☐ A scholarship from the 1995 CERA Award for Poetry. The students must submit a poem to be judged by CERA. Application deadline is Feb. 28.

To help students with information and help with completing the 1995-96 Federal Aid Application/Scholarship and to provide information about the Abell-Hanger Scholarships, the Midland College financial aid staff will be available in the Financial Aid Office in the Student Center from 6-8 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday this week.

The staff is available on a daily basis from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call 685-4693 for more information.

Boy Scouts gather in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — About 5,000 Boy Scouts from across Texas gathered at the Capitol Saturday to report to Gov. George W. Bush on their past year's activities and ideas for the future.

"Scouting is a whole lot more than a bunch of kids playing games and going camping," 12-year-old Sundip Lal, a member of Troop 450 in Sinton, told Bush during the annual "Report to State."

The annual report to a top state official has occurred for more than 40 years, said Ray Smith, a scout executive in Austin. Last year's report was made to House Speaker Pete Laney.

Nineteen delegates from troops across the state issued individual reports to the governor. Dressed in their traditional khaki shirts laden with patches, the scouts one by one stepped up to the microphone at the back of the House chamber.

A representative of Houston-area troops told the governor they had collected 750,000 cans of food for the needy.

Texas leads nation in Christian Coalition chapters

By Julia Prodis
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON — Dick Weinhold stands like Patton beside a huge American flag made of construction paper as he dispatches Texas' newest Christian Coalition foot soldiers.

Switching on the overhead projector that illuminates the classroom's chalkboard, the coalition's Texas chairman outlines his strategy to take the town of Arlington:

Identify. Recruit. Train.

"Our struggle is not against flesh and blood," Weinhold tells his newest enlistees. "We're not going to take up arms. Most of what we have to do starts on our knees."

Nine conservative Christians sipping coffee and nibbling on cookies have been summoned to the Cathedral of Praise church in Arlington to help form the newest chapter of the Christian Coalition.

A chapter has been formed almost every week in Texas, on average, since 1991, when Weinhold opened the first state office. Texas has the largest membership of any state at 63,000, with California a close second.

Nationally, the organization led by religious broadcaster Pat Robertson has surged over the past four years from 57,000 to 450,000.

The group takes partial credit for the Republican landslide in Congress. According to a Christian Coalition analysis, religious conservatives, most opposing abortion and favoring school prayer, accounted for 33 percent of the national vote in November and voted about 69 percent for Republicans.

In Texas over the past several years, the coalition and other religious right groups have scored numerous victories, including electing a Republican majority to the State Board of Education. The three GOP winners oppose teaching about homosexuality and state-approved health books they say are too graphic in discussing sex, birth control and sexually transmitted diseases.

Voters in Austin repealed a city ordinance that allowed health care benefits for homosexual partners, and several Texas school districts have passed "traditional values resolutions."

Texas is fertile ground for the coalition's message.

Not only does the state have a long history of conservative theology, but new migrations of conservatives to its big-city suburbs feed the philosophy, said Howard Miller, an associate history professor at the University of Texas at Austin.

In an attempt to counter the influence of the Texas coalition, People for the American Way — a civil liberties group that monitors the religious right — is reopening its state office, which relocated to California in 1989.

"In 1989, the Texas Christian Coalition was not even on the map," said Michael Hudson, the group's vice president. "We sort of follow the movement."

Hudson said that while the coalition's message can come across as wholesome and all-American, it has a more extreme side he considers dangerous, such as banning both textbooks and discussion of birth control in schools.

As with every coalition meeting, the formation of the Arlington chapter opens with a prayer.

Bowing their heads together, the nine Christians are a diverse group — a marketing executive in a tailored business suit, a single mother, an aging "biker for Christ" in a black leather jacket, an off-duty police officer and his wife, a real estate agent and her retired husband, an airline crew scheduler and a retired defense company worker.

As they thank the Lord for the bounty of America and pray for guidance, the flag that covered half the classroom wall crunches to the floor. They ignore it.

'I hope to God, I pray that the government is going to get out of the peoples' lives. We really feel we're committed to a cause, and that's to uplift Christ and government as well.'

— coalition member Mark Stephens

They are focused on their mission: to curb what they consider the moral decay of society. And according to a sign-up sheet at the meeting, that means opposition to abortion, pornography, homosexual rights and communism.

"Christians have been frustrated for a very long time with the direction society is going and have been waiting for a vehicle to express their political views," said Al McCann, a retired real estate agent who wants to form a chapter in nearby Colleyville with his wife, Glenda. They have come for pointers.

"We had a better society before," Mrs. McCann said, shaking her head. "I don't know how we have gone so far from family values."

A short video called "America at the Crossroads" playing on the classroom TV echoes her sentiments.

"America is a troubled nation," the strong male voice intones.

Political corruption, government waste, unwed mothers, teens with sexually transmitted diseases, Sen. Ted Kennedy sponsoring the Gay and Lesbian Civil Rights Act of 1993.

"Has America lost its moral compass?" the narrator asks. "For the sake of America, people of faith must be silent no longer."

"That's right," Mrs. McCann interjects.

Each of the nine fill out sign-up sheets, checking off areas of interest and talent — staffing a phone bank, recruiting candidates, writing articles for newsletters and organizing events.

From here, precinct coordinators will be appointed, conservative Christian voters will be identified and put on mailing lists, and activists will be recruited for school boards, city councils and even Congress.

James Mathews, who ministers to bikers at "secular rallies" from the back of his Harley Davidson, says he'll help staff phone banks for the cause.

"Of course, the abortion issue is on the forefront of it," he said. "I'm also concerned about the teaching of humanism in the education system."

Police officer Mark Stephens said he and his wife, Gina, want to "try to get America back to where it used to be."

"I hope to God, I pray that the government is going to get out of the peoples' lives," said Stephens, who has attended Christian Coalition conventions in Washington, D.C. "We really feel we're committed to a cause, and that's to uplift Christ and government as well."

Just as it began, the Arlington meeting ends in a prayer.

Weinhold urges the group to come back to the next meeting in January and bring a friend.

"Get involved and stay with it," said Weinhold, himself a volunteer.

After the meeting, Doris Redd, a retired productivity manager for a defense company, said it's about time churchgoing folks get involved in the political process.

There's no easy explanation for Texas' lead in executions

By Barry Shlachter
N.Y. Times News Service

After a plaintive, "I love you. Mom, goodbye," 29-year-old Jeffrey Motley was secured to a gurney with six yellow straps. Needles with tubes attached were inserted in his arms and a lethal cocktail costing the state $71.50 flowed into his veins.

In eight minutes he was dead.

Motley, convicted in the shotgun slaying of a Houston-area woman, last week became the 90th person put to death in Texas since 1982. His fatal injection, the fifth administered since Jan. 1, helped maintain Texas' record for executing more people than any other state.

Why Texas ranks tops has experts scrambling for explanations.

Some cite the state's size, its frontier heritage or what others call a crisis in legal representation for indigent Death Row inmates.

Texas is situated in the death belt of seven former Confederate states responsible for 86 percent of the executions carried out in the United States since 1976.

"This is a place where violence has been responded to with more violence," said Steve Hall, 42, a spokesman for the Texas Resource Center, which provides legal help for Death Row prisoners.

"It's a state where we used to hang cattle rustlers and horse thieves. It's the state where we still have the memory and imagery of Judge Roy Bean and his law west of the Pecos, of swift if not certain justice."

Hall concedes that a closely held tradition is not the sole reason that Texas ranks as the death-sentence leader of the free world. Japan is the only other democratic, industrialized nation that has the death penalty: by hanging.

Death sentences from courts in Houston's county, Harris, alone have accounted for more executions than the second-ranking state, Florida.

"As far as I can determine, people down here like it," said Johnny Holmes, Harris County's district attorney since 1979. "I don't have any explanation for it. ... We have a lot of violent crime, but that's not unique to Houston."

It's clear that the state's execution record is a result of district attorneys like Holmes heeding overwhelming support for capital punishment. According to a 1991 Texas Poll, 79 percent of Texans support the death penalty.

"Texans have a pretty strong view about the people who commit these kinds of crimes, and demand personal accountability," said Alan Levy, 45, who heads the felony section in the Tarrant County district attorney's office in Fort Worth. "Texas has a lot of crime and we put a lot of people on Death Row."

There are also very practical reasons why Texas leads.

It was among the first states to have its capital punishment law upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court after a 10-year moratorium, begun in 1972 when the court ruled that executions were administered in a capricious and arbitrary manner.

"Texas' (legal issues) were resolved first, so we began executing persons first," said Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Attorney General Dan Morales. "Therefore, over the years, we have executed many more persons than other states."

One potential rival for ranking as the nation's busiest executioner, New York, took itself out of contention when, like 12 other states and the District of Columbia, it abolished capital punishment. That may be changing, however — new Gov. Richard Pataki is in favor of the death penalty.

The most populous state, California, sought to keep the ultimate penalty but fell several years behind Texas because of successful challenges to its new capital murder statutes, Hall said.

Autism victim overcomes childhood problems

By Lou Chapman
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Until Temple Grandin was 3, she didn't speak. She screamed, peeped and hummed.

Soon afterward, doctors told her parents that she might have to be institutionalized. Grandin had autism, a developmental disability that robs people of their ability to filter emotions or process information and sensory input.

Today, Grandin, 47, is an assistant professor of livestock handling and behavior at Colorado State University. She is also one of the world's foremost designers of the equipment used to restrain and guide cattle.

"If you've eaten a Hebrew National hot dog, you've eaten kosher beef slaughtered in one of my systems," she said on Saturday in Dallas, where she was the keynote speaker at a conference on autism.

Grandin is recognized as a rarity among autistic people. With the help of early intervention by her family, good teachers and an eventual ability to express herself, Grandin was able not only to attend traditional, if private, schools, but also to go on to college. She studied psychology as an undergraduate and earned a doctorate in animal behavior.

Grandin, who is tall and has the calloused hands and firm handshake of someone in the livestock trade, is also an author. She has published more than 100 academic papers. Her autobiography, "Emergence: Labeled Autistic," is a source of inspiration for the parents and teachers of autistic children and adults worldwide. The volume has been translated into Danish, German, Icelandic, Japanese and Swedish, according to the publisher.

After her talk yesterday, sponsored by the Future Education publishing company in Arlington, Texas, Grandin was besieged by listeners seeking help — and answers. They queried her during a book-signing, in the restroom and during her lunch.

Their questions ranged from how to handle haircuts with a difficult autistic child to the benefits of Prozac, a popular anti-depressant.

Grandin said the autistic child with the aversion to haircuts is probably afraid of the noise from the clippers. She advised allowing him to turn the clippers on and off, and then to hold them. Gradually, she said, let him become accustomed to having them used on his hair again.

"Give him control," she said. "Let him know it's something he can control, too."

On the other hand, she conceded, the solution might not be that simple. The child's autism could be causing a heightened sensitivity to the noise frequency that the clippers emit.

As for Prozac, Grandin said, it has worked well in many cases to ease nervousness and anxiety, but she advised against using the amounts generally recommended.

"Take the PDR (Physician's Desk Reference), tear it up and flush it down the toilet," she said of the pharmaceutical reference book). "Those doses are for treating depression. We're trying to calm the nerves, not cure depression."

Grandin, who is not a physician, suggested starting with a much smaller dose than the recommended one and closely monitoring the reaction.

Grandin also said medications should be a last resort. They are no substitute for early intervention and individualized therapy, she said.

"The one thing I'd like to get out to people is the importance of getting these kids in a good program when the symptoms are first noticed, when the children are very, very young, at 21/2 years old, and getting them in a good program," Grandin said.

"Too many times these doctors say, 'Oh, they'll grow out of it. Let's give them some time.' No. No. No. No. No. You have to go in there and jerk them out of it. At that age, you can bring them back to reality."

Detroit's Hill at top of NBA heap

AP Laserphoto

Grant Hill stretches during practice before tonight's NBA All-Star gamein Phoenix, Ariz. Hill, who plays for the Detroit Pistons, is the only rookie in history to lead voting for the All-Star teams.

■ Nobody got more votes than former Duke standout Grant Hill; not Shaq, not Scottie, not even Sir Charles.

By Bob Cohn
N.Y. Times New Service

PHOENIX — Grant Hill won't be playing in the Schick Rookie Game today. He's too good. More than that, he's way too popular.

The expanse of Hill's professional career is just 34 games with the Detroit Pistons. He is 22.

Yet of all the big names gathered here for the 45th annual NBA All-Star Game at America West Arena on Sunday, no one received more votes.

Not Shaq, Scottie nor Sir Charles.

And since fans began choosing the starting lineups 20 years ago, no rookie before Hill ever led the balloting.

Not Magic, Michael, nor Larry.

All of which has left Grant Hill somewhat overwhelmed.

"I won't ask for everyone's autograph," he said Friday after arriving in the Valley.

"It doesn't feel right. It feels like I won one of those fantasy contests where you get to hang out with the All-Stars for a weekend. These are some of the guys I watched in high school. Some of the older guys, junior high.

"Now that I'm playing with them, it's crazy. It's wild. I can't believe it."

Sitting down at a table in a hotel ballroom during the mass All-Star interview session, Hill was immediately swarmed upon by people holding cameras, microphones, tape recorders and notepads.

"You guys are all in my face," he said good-naturedly.

"I felt like I did something wrong."

That's a laugh. Hill do something wrong? These days, he is Mr. Right.

One attribute so vital to any athlete, timing, has served Hill particularly well. He comes along at a time when the NBA is being taken to task for a recent influx of young, talented players whose behavior often ranges from outrageous to merely rude. It's been a hot topic of conversation lately.

As much as for what Hill is, a gifted, graceful, intelligent basketball player, he is being celebrated and singled out for what he is not a bad actor.

And being marketed appropriately. Let's see, there's General Motors and Sprite. Schick and Wilson and Skybox.

And coming soon, a series of commercials for FILA, the shoe company.

All for a player who missed a dozen games because of a foot injury, who doesn't even lead his team in scoring, whose 18.4 points, 5.1 rebounds and 4.2 assists a game provides a clue to his versatility but are hardly overwhelming.

Hill has provided only a whisper of his potential.

Asked why all this is happening, and 11-year old 'sports writer' takes a look at life at the short end of the All-Star game

By Michael Kosak
N.Y. Times News Service

PHOENIX — Your mission, my sports editor said, should you choose to accept it, was to find an answer to this question: "What do you think a kid needs to do to become an NBA All-Star?"

What my editor failed to tell me was I might not come back alive. My guess is he has lost a few good writers over the years at news conferences like the one I attended Friday. I had the chance to meet with many of the NBA All-Stars, along with many other media members who managed to hit me on the head a few times with cameras. (That's what happens when you're 4-foot-7 and everybody else is at least 5-6. I got a good look at a lot of waistlines that never have heard of

Spring brings wild changes for Rangers

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers start spring training next week with a new general manager, a new manager and team loaded with question marks.

The Rangers won the AL West with a 52-62 record last year in the strike-shortened season and owners were so happy about the first pennant of any kind in franchise history they fired general manager Tom Grieve.

Then manager Kevin Kenney was sacked and immediately picked up by the Boston Red Sox as their leader.

George W. Bush left as one of the Rangers owners when he was elected the new Texas governor and Tom Schieffer became club president. He hired Doug Melvin, a former executive with the Baltimore Orioles to become general manager.

Then Melvin hired Johnny Oates, who was fired as Orioles manager.

If all this wasn't dizzying enough, the Rangers traded slugger Jose Canseco to Boston without getting any pitching help which they direly need.

The Rangers have scrounged up some 100 replacement players for physicals next Wednesday in Port Charlotte. The first day of workouts is scheduled for

MHS girls suffer another tough loss

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Midland High's Rebecca Nix (11) and San Angelo Central's Becky Moreland (9) go after a loose ball in District 5-5A soccer action at Midland High Saturday.

Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

It was another one of those days for Midland High girls' soccer coach Scott Hodkinson.

The Lady Bulldogs fought and scratched with one of the most physical teams in the District 5-5A, but still came up on the short end of the stick, dropping Saturday's game 4-1 at MHS.

"It was another tough loss for us," Hodkinson said. "This is a hard luck team. It's the same story every week."

When Lady Bulldogs, 2-5 for the season and 1-5 in district play, got to the field, the cold temperatures in the low 40's and the wind chill in in the 20's let them know it wasn't going to be a day at the beach. However, It was the team with across the field not the temperatures or the chilling easterly wind that would be their worst enemy.

San Angelo put the pressure on the Midland defense from the sound of the first whistle and keep that going until they finally broke through in the game's 14th minute.

That's when halfback Becky Moreland took a rebound off a blocked-San Angelo direct kick and pushed into the goal to give the Lady Bobcats the

Associated Press

WACO — Lance Hughes scored a career-high 32 points Saturday as Texas Tech set a school scoring record by beating Baylor 122-91 in a Southwest Conference game.

The point total was the highest the Red Raiders had ever accumulated in a regulation game, surpassing 119 scored in 1981 against Texas Wesleyan.

Jason Sasser scored 27 points and Mark Davis had 24 for Tech (13-7, 7-2 in the Southwest Conference).

After the Red Raiders opened the contest with a 9-2 scoring run, the Bears (7-15, 1-8) used consecutive Aundre Branch 3-pointers to make it 9-8 before shooting 66 percent the rest of the period to take a 58-56 halftime lead.

Branch led Baylor with 30 points, while Roddrick Miller netted 16. The Red Raiders also got a 24-point performance from Mark Davis.

The Bears went nine of 16 from behind the arc in the first half, with Branch going five of six.

Baylor shot just 39 percent in the second half, while Hughes and Jason Sasser combined for 27 points in a 33-7 Red Raider scoring run that gave them a 93-71 lead.

Thirty-six of Tech's points came on free throws, while the Bears got four points off foul shots.

Rice 63, Southern Methodist 55

HOUSTON — Jesse Cravens scored 16 points and Tommy McGhee added 14 as Rice snapped a three-game Southwest Conference losing streak with a victory over Southern Methodist.

The Owls (10-10, 5-4) trailed 50-40 with 5:50 to play, then Cravens had four points during a 10-0 run that put Rice ahead for good.

The Mustangs (5-15, 2-6) scored five points in the final minute, but the Owls hit four late free throws to secure the victory.

Matt Timme and Troy Matthews led SMU with 12 points each.

SWC 'commish' among list of four Big 12 candidates

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The search for the first Big 12 commissioner is down to four candidates, including a former NCAA investigator and the first woman to head a football-playing conference.

A source told The Associated Press the original list of 32 candidates had been trimmed to the four, with the next round of interviews scheduled March 22 in Kansas City.

The four are Dan Beebe, 38, commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference and a former NCAA enforcement officer; Patty Viverito, 42, senior associate commissioner of the Missouri Valley Conference; Steve Hatchell, 47, commissioner of the Southwest Conference; and Bob Frederick, 54, director of athletics at lead.

Instead of folding to one of the district strongest offenses, the Midland High defense fought the Bobcat team and the 20-mph wind using some physical play of their own.

"I thought my defense played well, especially in the first half," Hodkinson said. "They got us out of a few jams early on."

The extra fight and solid play by sweeper Sonya Lackey, goalkeeper Tina Richardson and the rest of the defense would shut down San Angelo including the district's number-one point producer San Angelo's Brooke Stephens for the rest of the half. The physical play also paved the way for Midland's score to tie the game in the 27th minute.

The play occurred when Midland fullback Alyea Hill took the ball away from San Angelo's Angela Buselli. From there, Hill passed the ball down the south sideline to Jacque Ketter, who sidestepped and a Bobcat defender. Ketter centered the ball to Ann Smith, who took the ball and won her one-on-one confrontation with Bobcat goalkeeper Heather McGinty for her third goal in district play this season.

"Midland High's come back surprised us," San Angelo coach Walter Gilleland. "I told the girls that they would have to pick it up in the second half."

The second half started like the first with San Angelo getting on the board early. Tina Winter scored her second district goal in the game's 43rd minute. Winter caught up to a loose ball deep in the Midland zone and beat Richardson, who was charging on the play.

In this half, there would be no comeback as MHS could not muster any offense the rest off the way. A key reason was the sprained ankle suffered by Smith in the game's 52nd minute. It left the MHS offense, which was already missing Elisabeth Mathiassen, virtually depleted of their scorers.

"Ann's loss was big" Hodkinson said. "Ann was putting a lot of pressure on their defense.

Hodkinson pulled goalkeeper Tina Richardson and replaced her with backup Cathryn Valada. The move backfired as the San Angelo was able to score twice on Valada in the last 10 minutes.

Bobcats' forward Courtney Appleton scored her fifth district goal in the 71st minute when her shot went through Valada's hands and Caela Cervantez scored her first in the game's last minute.

The loss hurts, but Hodkinson feels the team will bounce back in the second half of the season.

"We're 1-5 in district, but maybe we can turn things around and suprise some people," Hodkinson said. "The girls are fighters and not quitters."

BIG 12: Hatchell among four candidates

(From 1C)

Kansas and chairman of the NCAA basketball tournament selection committee.

Frederick and Hatchell are thought to be front-runners to head the new super conference, which begins play in 1996-97 with the current Big Eight and Texas, Texas Tech, Texas A&M and Baylor of the disintegrating SWC.

A committee source insisted, however, that it's a mistake to assume only Hatchell and Frederick will have a chance when the next round of interviews is conducted March 22 in Kansas City.

"The others are there because the committee feels very interested in talking to them about the job, not because a couple of extra names were needed to fill out a list," said a source who requested anonymity.

A screening committee met Feb. 3 and trimmed the original list of candidates from 32 to six.

"There are now four names on the list," said a source, declining to say whether the others were withdrawn or eliminated.

Jon Wefald, president of Kansas State and chairman of the 12-person screening committee, said the four will be trimmed to two or three after March 22.

The Big 12 presidents, who want a commissioner in place by July 1, will make the final decision. It has not been determined if their decision will be made by simple majority vote.

The presidents are adamant that they intend for their new conference to be the premier megaconference in the country.

"It's very exciting for me," said Beebe, the only one of the four with a law degree. "That conference will be second to none. I am very flattered that the committee has chosen to consider me."

Beebe, who was an offensive lineman for Walla Walla Community College and Cal Poly-Pomona, was also the youngest head of a Division I football-playing conference when named by the Ohio Valley in 1989 at the age of 32. He became an NCAA enforcement representative in 1982. He was an assistant director of enforcement in 1987 and later became director of enforcement.

Viverito became the first woman to head a football-playing conference in 1985 when the Gateway, formerly a women's league, took in several Division I-AA football programs. She retained her title as commissioner of the Gateway Football Conference when that league merged with the Missouri Valley.

A Chicago native, she has served on the NCAA Council and women's basketball committee and currently is on the powerful NCAA executive committee.

None of the candidates has the breadth of experience of Hatchell, whose support is most solidly rooted in the four Texas schools. Hatchell was an assistant Big Eight commissioner and interim commissioner in 1980. He has also been commissioner of the Metro Conference and executive director of the Orange Bowl.

Frederick, in his eighth year as Kansas athletic director, is the only one of the four with a doctorate degree. He played basketball at Kansas in the early 1960s and was a graduate assistant coach for the Jayhawks for two years. He coached in high school and was an assistant basketball coach at Kansas, Brigham Young and Stanford.

He will be prominently in the news the next several weeks as chairman of the NCAA tournament.

SPRING: Rangers amid uncertainty as training nears

(From 1C)

Feb. 17.

"It's going to be pretty wild down there next week with all the new players and all the uncertainty," said Rangers public relations director John Blake.

New Rangers pitching coach Dick Bosman said "We have Plan A which is for the regular players and Plan B which is for the wannabes. All I know is we need at least three pitchers who can give us 200 innings plus. It's going to be interesting to say the least."

Bosman replaced Claude Osteen who was on Kennedy's staff. Texas pitching was 13th in the AL last year with a 5.45 earned run average, the second highest figure in the majors.

The Rangers haven't signed ace lefty Kenny Rogers but got some help when they picked up free agent Kevin Gross.

"We'd like to sign Kenny to a longterm contract," Melvin said. "But there has been kind of a freeze on the signing situation. Everything is up in the air because of the strike and whether Kenny is really a free agent or not."

Melvin said the Rangers are looking everywhere for pitching help.

"Any pitching available we will take," Melvin said. "We need to add two relief pitchers and two starters."

Melvin, 42, the sixth GM in club history, has three years to put the Rangers pieces back together again.

He has been in pro baseball since his playing days began in 1972. He has been an executive since the New York Yankees made him scouting director in 1985. He joined the Orioles in 1986.

"Defense and pitching and staying free of injuries are the three areas the Rangers need to improve as a ballclub," Melvin said. "Good defense will make pitching better.

The problem right now is the Rangers don't know who will be pitching or playing defense.

This leaves Oates with a major headache.

"Baseball is baseball," Oates said. "If a replacement player can play we'll find him."

"Our plans are to provide baseball for our baseball fans," Melvin said. "Our fans want to see it. There will be baseball in Arlington."

Rangers ticket sales are slower than last season but officials said some 10,000 orders have been filled.

Texas attracted 2,503,198 fans in just 62 home dates The Ballpark in Arlington. It e highest total in franchise history, surpassing the record of 2,297,720 in 1991.

Jacobsen pulls away at Buick, shoots for second straight victory

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Shooting for his second straight win, Peter Jacobsen pulled away on the back nine Saturday with an eagle and two birdies, finishing with a 4-under-par 68 and a three-stroke lead after three rounds of the Buick Invitational.

Jacobsen, who had a 54-hole score of 15-under 201, won the AT&T National Pro-Am at Pebble Beach last weekend with a 17-under 271, a tournament record.

■ Golf Roundup

The record here is 22-under 266 by George Burns in 1987, when the tournament was known as the Shearson Lehman Brothers Andy Williams Open.

Tied for second at 12-under 204 were Hal Sutton, who also shot 68, and Kirk Triplett, who had a 66. Dan Pohl (66), Mark Calcavecchia (67) and Mike Hulbert (70) were tied at 205.

The final two rounds are being played on the par-72, 7,000-yard Torrey Pines South Course.

Jacobsen was one of seven leaders at 11-under early on the back nine when he made his move. He chipped in from 35 feet to eagle the par-5, 535-yard 13th and go 13-under. A downhill 18-foot birdie putt dropped him to 14-under on the par-4, 398-yard 14th.

He missed a birdie putt on 15, but pushed his lead to three strokes with a breaking 12-foot birdie putt on the par-3, 203-yard 16th.

Sutton, fourth here last year, could have closed the gap on the par-5, 498-yard 18th. But he missed a long eagle putt from the fringe, then missed a 5-foot comebacker and had to settle for par.

Triplett began the round at 6-under after consecutive 69s. He made a late move with four birdies on his last five holes and five overall on the back nine to finish at 6-under 66.

Defending champion Craig Stadler shot par and joined 10 others at 8-under 208.

Phil Mickelson, the 1993 Buick champion who was tied for the first-round lead, fell apart with a 3-over 75 and was at 209, eight shots out.

Senior Intellinet Challenge

NAPLES, Fla. — Bob Murphy shot a 2-under-par 70 to take a one-shot lead over Ray Floyd into today's final round of the Senior PGA Tour's IntelliNet Challenge, yet couldn't figure out what went wrong.

In gusty winds of 25 mph, Murphy toured The Vineyards Country Club course with a total of three birdies and just one bogey, but figured he came up short. Literally.

Nevertheless, with a two-day total of 7-under-par, Murphy is one stroke in front of Floyd, who shot 69, and three in front of Mike Hill and Rockey Thompson, both at 4-under.

Hill, the two-time defending tournament champ, is trying to become just the fourth player in Senior Tour history to win the same event three years in a row. He shot 69, while Thompson had his second straight 70.

Four strokes back are a group of five golfers: Larry Gilbert — whose 67 was the day's low round — Jim Albus, Bob Charles, Jerry McGee and Richie Karl.

Australian Skins

LAGUNA QUAYS, Australia — John Daly knew he was lucky.

After hitting his worst drive of the day, Daly staged an important recovery, using a 6-iron to get within 6 feet of the pin and set up a birdie that was worth $22,500 on the opening round of the Australian Skins championship Saturday.

The recovery on the 426-yard sixth hole left Daly as the only player to earn money as fellow American Tom Watson and Australians Craig Parry and Peter Senior were shut out.

MHS boys stay perfect in district

SAN ANGELO — Sean Parnell scored a goal 11 minutes into the game and Midland High went on to a 2-1 District 5-5A win over San Angelo here Saturday. The Bulldogs end the first half of league play at 6-0, 8-1 overall. They are now two games ahead of Odessa Permian in the league standings.

Parnell's goal was unassisted but came after a corner kick by Patrick Stewart. The Bulldogs took a 2-0 halftime lead over the Bobcats (2-4, 6-7) when Tyson Yarborough headed in a shot from point-blank. The ball deflected off an San Angelo fullback and went in the net. It was the second time in two games the Bulldogs controlled the game but won by only one goal.

"We dominated, we just couldn't finish (our shots)," said senior sweeper Tyson Yarborough. "I think our team's good enough that we'll get back into it. Everybody plays us good. We just need to score more and not lapse every time we go up 2-0."

San Angelo scored with 3:24 left in the game on a goal by Mike Marsh. MHS coach Tom Esikhati said the game was different from Tuesday's 2-1 win over Abilene High because of injuries. Forward Tyler Berry was held out of the game with a hamstring injury and midfielder J.D. Garcia came out with a bruised knee.

MHS plays at Midland Lee Tuesday at 4:30 p.m.

Holy Bull pulls up lame, ends career

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Holy Bull heard the cheers Saturday — for the last time.

The colt was cheered lustily as he walked onto the track for the Donn Handicap at Gulfstream Park. He couldn't have heard the groans from the fans as he was pulled up on the backstretch with an injured left front leg.

"It's over," owner-trainer Jimmy Croll said of the 1994 Horse of the Year's career.

Holy Bull was back in his barn, his left front leg in a steel cast, by the time jockey Mike Smith tearfully told his wife, Patrice: "He's going to be all right."

Although his life wasn't in jeopardy, Croll's dream horse had run into a career-ending nightmare — ligament damage apparently sustained while battling for the lead with Cigar, who won the 1 1/8-mile race.

"I can't be more disappointed," said Croll, Holy Bull's 74-year-old owner-trainer. Then he pointed at the gray colt standing quietly in his stall and said, "He's all class."

"I know it is a big disappointment for everybody and it is sad for the sport," Billy Croll, Jimmy's son and assistant said.

Holy Bull, carrying high weight of 127 pounds, veered in sharply from the outside post at the break, causing horses inside of him to be checked, but he was running easily when Smith pulled him up.

"As we came into the backstretch," Jerry Bailey, Cigar's jockey, said, "I heard a pop and then I heard Mike yell, 'Oh, no.' Then I lost him as he pulled up his horse."

■ More Sports/8C

Smith, who was aboard Prairie Bayou when that colt was fatally injured in the Belmont Stakes in 1993, said, "Devastating. I can't put it into words. I feel like the life has come out of me.

"He warmed up great, playing and having a good time. He was well in hand through the lane the first time and felt fine. He pinned his ears and then about two strides later he went.

"I tried to pull him up as quickly as I could but I also wanted to keep him as straight as I could. When they go side to side, it can be worse."

Holy Bull remained on his feet after being pulled up and then was loaded into a horse ambulance.

Mary Scollay, the track veterinarian, made a cursory examination of Holy Bull before he was led into a horse ambulance. Back at his barn, he was examined by Peter Hall, his regular veterinarian, who said: "He has strained a ligament below the left front ankle and strained ligaments on the tendon."

Agassi dismantles Washington at San Jose Open

Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Andre Agassi's march to the top of the tennis world took another strong turn Saturday when he dismantled MaliVai Washington 6-4, 6-2 in the semifinals of the San Jose Open.

"Right now, I'm not struggling at all," Agassi said. "It's a joy to be out there and a joy to be playing. I've been saying that for seven months now, and there's no reason I can't do it for a few more."

Top-seeded in the tournament and ranked No. 2 in the world, the 24-year-old Agassi has gone 33-2 in match play since starting his drive to win the U.S. Open as an unseeded player last September.

"He looks the same, appears to be the same to me," said Washington, who beat Agassi in straight sets last year in Atlanta. 'He's always produced. But the difference is now he's producing it week after week."

In 1995, Agassi has won 29 of 30 sets he has played. He waited until a late break to take the first set Saturday against Washington, who led 4-3 before losing nine out of the next 11 games — and the match.

Neither player had lost a service break in the tournament coming into the game, but Agassi broke Washington four times. Agassi also lost a break early in the second set, and finding himself down 2-1, it forced him to regroup.

"I really didn't feel in control of the match until I broke him at 5-2," Agassi said.

The $328,000 tournament at the San Jose Arena is sponsored by Sybase, a computer software firm.

Dubai Open

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — South Africa's Wayne Ferreira, the No. 4 seed, reached the Dubai Open final, beating Spain's Javier Sanchez 5-7, 6-1, 6-4 Saturday.

Ferreira's opponent in Sunday's final will be unseeded Andrea Gaudenzi of Italy, a 3-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-4 winner over No. 6 Petr Korda of the Czech Republic in the other semifinal.

Marseille Open

MARSEILLE, France — Top-seeded Boris Becker needed only about an hour to win his semifinal match, beating Frenchman Olivier Delaitre 6-4, 6-2.

Becker will play Czech Daniel Vacek in Sunday's final. Vacek beat another Frenchman, Lionel Roux, 6-1, 7-5 in the other semifinal.

Becker will be playing in his 64th career final, while it is only the second for Vacek. Becker has 42 career titles with Vacek lost his only other shot at a final.

Political spotlight growing brighter

While the political spotlight in Washington, D.C. has been focused during the past few weeks on the Congress - and appropriately, we think because of the Republican majority there and the mandate for change issued by voters last November - there actually have been some other important developments on the national political scene in recent days.

Most recently, of course, was former Vice President Dan Quayle's decision late last week to bow out of the race for the 1996 GOP presidential nomination. Quayle's reasoning was plain and simple; he wasn't getting the backing that a political hopeful must get today to wage a successful campaign - monetarily and otherwise - and, as a result, the outlook that he could wage a respectful campaign was growing dim.

On the other hand, the other three GOP prospects - Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas and former Gov. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee - appear to be holding their appeal with the public.

Without a doubt, Quayle's decision will be advantageous to Alexander, Dole and Gramm, and we're inclined to believe that Gramm or Dole will eventually garner the Republican nomination. Of course, it's still early in the political game and much could happen that would alter any of the three GOP candidates' chances.

Meanwhile, over on the Democratic side of the potential ballot, President Bill Clinton has to get the nod as the man to beat - not only because he is the sitting president but also because the Democrats seem uncertain about whom else they might support. Clinton's support has climbed in recent months, but it's still a tossup as to how he would fare were the election held now.

Of course, it's much too early for politics to begin heating up for 1996 and we're happy to worry about other matters currently - like the unresolved baseball strike or even, heaven forbid, the O.J. Simpson trial. But the political spotlight is going to eventually flood over us all - and when it does, we want to at least be aware of who is in the running.

Government has no business in baseball

WASHINGTON — Two much diminished institutions — the presidency and major league baseball — saw their downward spirals intersect last week. The episode, which did neither of them any good, should illuminate the nation's thinking about the uses and abuses of government.

Will

President Clinton, whose exasperation is more understandable than his decision-making, is asking Congress to empower him to impose binding arbitration on the players and owners. But even if Congress had spare time to invest in a matter of such marginal importance to most Americans and of negligible importance to the national interest, it should not do so. Rather, it should use the president's improvident invitation to intervene as an occasion for demonstrating a mature sense of proportion and limits.

Relations between players and owners are so poisonous that there does not exist the minimal trust that is requisite for real negotiations. With spring training camps set to open on Thursday, there is not even agreement, even among the owners, concerning the industry's basic financial facts.

Further negotiations may be unproductive. Unless binding arbitration is imposed, the season may begin with the comic operetta of "replacement players" and baseball will go from 1993 to at least 1996 without a serious season. Presidents cannot impose binding arbitration whenever it suits their fancy; this would not be a free society if they could. But these facts do not establish a case for Congress to authorize Clinton to impose such arbitration by law. In a free society government should not, even if it could, save private parties from the consequences of their mismanagement of their institutions, unless their institutions are crucial to the social order, which major leage baseball is not.

Robert Reich, the secretary of labor, speculates that "if the public is concerned about baseball, well, I imagine that a lot of members of Congress will give the president the authority that the president is seeking to order binding arbitration. But on the other hand, if the public basically wants to say, 'A pox on both your houses,' well, at least we tried." Which is to say, the government is going to keep its ear pressed firmly to the ground, even though it is hard to look dignified in that position.

Actually, there is no need for it to get dirt in its ear. A few facts are clear: Baseball's core constituency consists of at most 15 million repeat customers; baseball is no longer even close to being the most popular sports component of the entertainment industry. There is no way to torture the word "public" to make a settlement of baseball's dispute important to "the public."

Reich offers a number of reasons for binding arbitration, perhaps hoping that quantity can substitute for quality. He says "many cities" are "dependent" on baseball. But no metropolis large enough to support a major league team can be "dependent" on it. He says "many cities have put up enormous amounts of money for stadiums." True, but that does not generate a federal obligation to guarantee that those dubious investments — civic socialism — shall always be remunerative. Reich rightly notes that Florida and Arizona have "major" stakes in spring training. But not even the Phoenix area, where seven of the 28 teams train for six weeks, is "dependent" on this.

Reich finally resorts to the rhetorical mode familiar regarding baseball. Call it Full Gush: Baseball "is intimately related to the morale of the nation," and "after all, baseball is baseball." But a tautology is not an argument. And such dewy-eyed sentimentality about baseball's status is a large part of baseball's problem. It is impossible to see clearly through misty eyes.

Denied the hope of an imposed solution, and face to face with the reality of replacement players and another ruined season, baseball's two sides may recognize that they are already in the realm of splittable differences. If so, Congress, by refusing to rescue them from failure, will have facilitated success.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Devolution appears to be latest political trend

WASHINGTON — A quick insight to illuminate the political landscape: China, Russia and the United States — all in their own ways — are sending power long concentrated in their capital cities out to the boondocks.

Safire

Curiously, when Americans see this happening in China, we tut-tut about "warlordism." After Beijing-centric Deng dies, political power in China will probably devolve to centrifugalmen in a half-dozen regions, thereby reflecting economic reality.

Beijing's central grip will be broken because it has raised government-army-business corruption to a national scale — but such corruption works best, mafia-style, in alliances among regional "families."

Meanwhile, devolution continues apace in Russia, which is down to 150 million people; its hope of gaining back population is in the immigration to the motherland of Russian-speaking "near abroad," unhappy in the broken-off states.

Chechnya's bid for independence, brutally repressed, reminds the varied peoples of the unmanageably farflung Russian Federation that Moscow rules by force. But the successor to Boris Yeltsin will have to submit to the stronger centrifugal force, recognizing that ever-greater autonomy within each republic is the way to maintain sovereignty over all.

The American tut-tutters at this trend call the coming devolution "dismemberment." They foresee nothing but Balkan-like trouble in breakups, and pose a legitimate question about the control of nuclear weaponry in China or Russia if either nation sinks into anarchy.

But is anarchy the necessary result of the flow of power to the people? Would not downsizing benefit nations that have over-conglomerated? Even Europe, after a decade of rhetoric about continental integration, is now finding new respect for local culture and national identity.

On devolution, it ain't what you do, it's the way you do it. The United States is pointing the way to the orderly dispersion of political power. By striking down "unfunded mandates" beyond safety and civil rights, the new Congress is taking burdens of taxation off states. By turning the administration of welfare, Medicaid and ultimately Medicare to states, the nation is allowing for diversity and encouraging competition.

That's the new direction in our democracy. You might think that by our example, we could influence this historic devolution in countries that we want to see turn democratic.

But U.S. policy works toward the opposite goal. Clinton diplomats and most of the foreign policy establishment fear the new direction and seek "stability" above all.

In China, Mr. Clinton at first ties trade advantages to human rights, then abjectly caves in. Beijing, having taken our president's measure, participates in the most brazen piracy of U.S. intellectual property. But when the trade negotiator Mickey Kantor huffs and puffs about retaliation, his house is blown down by Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary, who announces a junket this month of 50 American oil men to Beijing.

As a result, hard-line Beijing centrists claim victory: Li Peng can argue that only a strong national government can continue to humble the United States in trade.

In the same way, by putting all our diplomatic chips on the continuance of the current regime in Moscow, we take the side of the two men — the shrewd authoritarian Yeltsin and the nutty authoritarian Zhirinovsky — who stand for an all-powerful central government against the forces of devolutionary change.

Time to open our eyes. What's good for our democracy could be good for nascent democracy in Russia and the un-Communist devolvers in China. We should stop touting order imposed from the center for others even as we come to reject that course for ourselves.

On the contrary, we should encourage others to go with the flow of centrifugal political forces all over the world.

We should face up to the likelihood of some dispersion of control, and stop our wishful thinking that a small circle of leaders in China and Russia will be calling the shots tomorrow.

GOP should insist on true spending reports

For years, Democrats blamed the national defense for their budget deficits. Never mind the fact that military spending has fallen. The party line is to blame the Pentagon for all the goofy spending in Washington.

It's a crock. Democrats have padded the defense budget for years.

Check out these items — paid for by the Pentagon, whether it wants them or not:

•$1.5 million for a new gym and community center at Windsor Elementary School, which is in the district of former House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash.

•$20 million for a National Defense Center for Environmental Excellence in Johnstown, Pa. That's in the district of Rep. John P. Murtha, who chaired the defense appropriations subcommittee for the Democrats.

•And $1.6 million for the Oregon Museum of Science and History. And $3 million for the Boy Scout Jamboree. And $5 million for the Solomon Islands parliament building.

Pork-barrel projects tacked on to the defense budget add up to $13 billion. While the defense budget fell 25 percent between 1990 and 1994, this kind of spending tripled.

When Democrats complain about wasteful spending in the defense budget, they speak from experience. They're the ones who put the waste in that budget. That skews the picture on military spending.

In addition to reducing the federal budget, Republicans should make sure the document reports federal spending honestly.

Border crossing fees would add unfair 'tax'

President Clinton should change his mind about supporting federal fees to be charged people crossing into the United States from Canada and Mexico. It's a bad idea for a number of reasons, most of them economic.

The administration wants federal border crossing fees of $1.50 per pedestrian and $3 per car. Much of the money would go to intensified efforts against illegal immigration.

The timing is poor. Sales to Mexican customers on the U.S. side of the border have fallen precipitously since the value of the Mexican peso fell more than 40 percent against the dollar. The fees could price many poor Mexicans out of making shopping trips north of the border and harm the economies of Southwestern border communities.

The fee would send the wrong message about the president's continuing efforts toward trade liberalization with Canada and Mexico, this nation's first and third trading partners, and its partners in the North American Free Trade Agreement.

There is strong support in the United States, Congress and the Clinton administration for improved immigration control. It's a national problem. That's no reason to tax people who cross the border legally to catch those who cross the border illegally.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Feb. 12, the 43rd day of 1995. There are 322 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 12, 1809, Abraham Lincoln, the 16th president of the United States, was born in present-day Larue County, Ky.

On this date:

In 1554, Lady Jane Grey, who'd been queen of England for nine days, was beheaded after being charged with treason.

In 1733, English colonists led by James Oglethorpe founded Savannah, Ga.

Some material provides ready-made columns

Due to ease-taking, the next eight issues of this column will not appear. Following are eight pieces of inspirational material — some of it's been moldering in our "Ideas" file for years — on which they would have been based. Mold doesn't matter in this column. Its only concern is timeless philosophical truth.

Baker

Each of the eight items will make you instantly visualize quite clearly the entire column it would have inspired. (Saves you a lot of tedious reading.) Each comes with an appropriate headline, compliments of the management.

1. When the Hanging Was Good: Jasper Ridley's "Henry VIII: The Politics of Tyranny" says that by 1536 hanging had long been a punishment in England for all felonies — murder, rape, sodomy, arson, forgery, robbery and theft. Officials' letters surviving from those days often give the number of people hanged (theft was the most common hanging offense) after a recent assize, or court session.

Ridley found that the figures usually varied from six or eight to 12 or 14. "If an average of 10 persons were hanged at every session, this means that 40 a year would be hanged in every county, which means 1,600 a year in the 40 counties of England."

This would amount to about 60,000 hanged during the 38 years Henry reigned, or over 2 percent of England's 2.8 million inhabitants.

2. More Free Zones, Please: The Long Island Rail Road has declared Car 161 on Train 2710 "cellular free." Also Car 141 on Train 2708. Signs: "Please refrain from using your cellular phones inside these cars." Great blow against the barbarians. Now how about gun-free zones, rudeness-free zones, laptop-computer-free zones ...?

3. University Prez Says Mom and Dad Made Him a Breather: Richard Berendzen, former president of American University, says he was driven to make obscene phone calls because he was sexually abused once by both parents, and often by his mom. He has written a book. Of course. How about a confession-free zone?

4. Harold Pinter Yearns for Early Grave: In a 1966 interview Pinter told Lillian Ross: "My doctor advises me against drinking, but I'm ignoring his advice. It's a short life. And I have no wish to be 88. I feel pretty exhausted now that I'm 36."

How does he feel 29 years later, in 1995, now that he's 64? Or is he dead? Check!

5. Easy Millions Against Anita: The Washington Post reports that one of the Oklahomans fighting an endowed chair for Anita Hill at the University of Oklahoma is E.Z. Million, president of the Oklahoma Conservative Committee.

6. Letting the Side Down: Has everybody heard the one about the space program that didn't cost enough? The government wanted to shut it down. It would have, too, if there hadn't been a lot of TV and newspaper attention paid to pictures it took of the under side of the moon.

7. Deviancy Defined Down at Yankee Stadium: At the New York Yankees' 1994 home opener, says Newsday, materials thrown between the stadium's upper deck and bleachers included pretzels, crushed cans, beer in cups and hot dogs, "not to mention vulgarity." A priest said he couldn't look toward home plate "because you wanted to anticipate the beer and mustard spray or the openly thrown missiles of all kinds."

A stadium official said, "It's not that unusual for a crowd of 56,000."

8. The Grievance Profession — Father of Whining Dies: British playwright John Osborne died in December. He'd won an Academy Award for his screenplay of "Tom Jones" and Broadway's Tony Award in 1964 for his play "Luther."

His obit writers, however, remembered him, not surprisingly, as Britain's famously "angry young man," whose long kvetch of a play, "Look Back in Anger," marked a new age of British soreheads. The Washington Post obit said, "Grievance was virtually a life's work for Mr. Osborne." In short, he was a total pioneer of the modern age.

Teen-agers need more places to socialize

In the past few months, there has been a crackdown on teen-agers and the places they choose to go to socialize. This is causing the crime rate to become higher. People today don't realize that if there were more places for teen-agers to hang out, get out of their cars, and have fun, that the violence and vandalism would drop. Teen-agers need a place where we can go so we don't get caught up in all the crimes. I believe that if there were more places to socialize that the crime rate would be lowered.

The Police Department has been trying to keep teens off the roads to help stop vandalism and violence. What it is leading to is more and more teen-agers out on the road. Teen-agers need a place where they can go to socialize. We can't go to the Sonic and get out of our cars to socialize, we have to stay in our cars and order something or leave. We have to keep driving around because the cops don't want us parking anywhere. They think that it will lead to vandalism or violence.

The cops of Midland want teens to stay off the roads, but what they don't understand is that we don't have a place to go. We can't go to a parking lot and get out and socialize or to see who drives by. If you get caught on the parking lot now it's a warning. But if they catch you a second time, then you go to Culver or jail. They have run us off from all places we can stop and talk. Cops need to quit wasting time on things like this and start putting real juveniles in Culver, that's what would keep crimes off the streets.

Seminar contains too much misinformation

While Dr. Sam Goldstein's ADD seminar on Feb. 2 contained much information that was useful, helpful and true, there was enough misinformation to warrant this letter. First, there is the logical inconsistency (as reported by the Reporter-Telegram Feb. 3) of being wary of unproven treatments while at the same time keeping up with new research. How does one prove a treatment if it is not used?

But more important was Goldstein's failure to mention the excellent and documented research which has been done by Lubar, Othmer, and Horn (included with this letter and available to anyone through our office here in Midland) regarding the use of EEG Biofeedback. In fact, he lumped all biofeedback into one category and compared it to other "quack cures" like the spinning chair.

While nothing works for everyone, EEG Biofeedback works for most, and as a neurotherapist I felt that parents of ADD children should know that there is hope even if it is not recognized by the experts who are always from out of town.

Improvements in city needed, not terminal

You are to be commended for publishing the two fine letters from Messrs. Dollahite and Kyser regarding the proposed airport terminal building. I concur with both of these gentlemen that a project of this magnitude should be placed before the voters. If the voters approve, then full speed ahead. If the voters disapprove, then the project should be reconsidered.

Let us review the project's cost. For a fee of $290,000, an out-of-state consulting firm has estimated that construction will cost $29,000,000. Since costs of projects funded by taxpayer money tend to overrun by 10-15 percent, I believe that actual costs will be closer to $32,000,000 than to the estimated $29,000,000. Assuming that we received the hoped for $12,000,000 from the federal government, cost will be $20,000,000. Assuming financing at 6 3/4 percent and a 20-year amortization period the airport will have to generate slightly over $152,000 per month for debt service alone. This translates into slightly over 50,000 boardings per month at the $3 boarding fee. This in turn equates to almost 1,700 boardings per day, every calendar day for 20 years. The airport has been collecting the boarding fee for several months. Are these collections providing $152,000 in revenue each month? Hopefully the city council will see fit to provide an answer to this question.

One proponent of the project has stated: "If the project fails financially, we will simply form an Airport District and obtain financial help from nearby communities." I submit that anyone who believes that citizens of other communities will vote themselves additional taxes to bail out Midland's airport surely must also believe in the tooth fairy.

There are many places in Midland where improvements are needed more than we need a new terminal building. There are approximately 18 miles of unpaved streets whose paving should be given a higher priority than a new terminal building. There is enough litter and trash along the right of way of West Industrial Avenue to cause a person to wonder if he has been suddenly transported to Haiti. When the wind blows from the west enough paper and other litter accumulates on the east side of our beautiful new library to make it resemble West Industrial. Certainly a program to clean up the city and to keep it clean should be of more benefit than the proposed terminal. I could go on and on.

Publicity some time back indicated that 40 percent of the people using the present terminal are Midlanders and 60 percent are from other communities. This 40 percent is really a small number of Midlanders who travel by air for business or pleasure. A large majority of Midland's citizens do not use the airport at all. Yet they are being asked to assume fiscal responsibility.

I hope that the City Council will consider the above points before proceeding further with the terminal project. Also, I urge the city council to place the airport project before a voter referendum.

Article makes difference in event's ticket sales

I would like to let you know what a difference your newspaper made in a recent event. Fannin Terrace Baptist Church sponsored a Mother-Daughter Event on Jan. 28 with Patty Ellis as the speaker. We had been placing an ad in the religious section on Saturdays for three weeks, but still were not getting the response we had hoped for by that time. I talked to Georgia Temple, and she suggested she call Patty for an interview to be placed in Tuesday's paper on 1B.

Georgia wrote a wonderful article on the important issues teenage girls and their mothers go through in today's society, and how Patty would speak to them. Due to the article we received calls that increased our ticket sales about 400 percent! The main issue was not money, but the people being reached with a very important message.

Patty speaks in schools all over the United States and Japan, and also has a video series, "A Friend Like Patty," used in the schools. Due to the overwhelming response, Fannin Terrace is able to purchase the tapes to be shared through their church library.

Many of the mothers are interested in having Patty come speak at our schools. If anyone is interested in making that possible or having Patty, author of "Girl Power," speak for their organization, call 570-4209.

SPEAKING OUT

Exhibit depicts historical, not current truths

By Michael D. Kaufman

The controversy over the Smithsonian Institution's planned display of the fuselage of the Enola Gay, the aircraft that dropped the atomic bomb on Hiroshima, has broached the question of historical accuracy. The dispute pits the museum's curators against numerous veterans groups. The curators created a display which purportedly questions the character of Harry Truman, his advisors, and the U.S. military, suggesting that the decision to drop the bomb was not based on military necessity, but rather on racial prejudice and hatred. Those who have questioned the display's accuracy believe it portrays the United States as the aggressor and Japan as the victim while downplaying Japan's own role of aggression and brutality during World War II.

Michael D. Kaufman, lieutenant colonel USAF (Ret) is president of the Permian Basin Chapter, Air Force Association.

A recent Associated Press article quoted an upset Paul Tibbets, the retired general who piloted the fateful aircraft, as saying "They're trying to evaluate everything in the context of today's beliefs." The article continues with the thought that, in fact, that was precisely the duty of historians: "to examine what has gone before in the context of todays beliefs." To support that thesis, the article referenced Neery Malkonian, the associate director of the Center of Curatorial Studies Museum at Bard College, who attested that the "truth" about Hiroshima was different in 1945 than in 1995, and will be different still in 2045.

Oh, really? Not by my dictionary (Webster's), which defines "truth" as "being in accordance with experience, facts, or reality." Historical truth is related to facts. It is not related to opinion, spin, political correctness, or "todays's beliefs." In studying for my own degrees in history and political science, I was taught that the process of understanding history was rooted in understanding the facts, beliefs, and social conditions at the time the events were occurring, not in understanding my own times. While historical research can discover previously unknown facts which may change our interpretation of recorded events, that does not change the truth of what happened.

These are the facts as related to the Enola Gay. The Japanese mounted a bloody campaign to dominate the Far East. They ultimately brought the United States into the war with an aerial sneak attack on Pearl Harbor. Hundreds of thousands of Americans lost their lives in the island-hopping battle for the Pacific. The United States was fighting a total war with the stated goal of the "unconditional surrender" of all of its opponents. The Japanese had shown a fanatical will to fight to the death, even intentional death in Kamikaze attacks. The United States developed the first atomic weapons and used those weapons on Aug. 6 and Aug. 9, 1945. The Japanese sued for peace on Aug. 10 and signed a formal surrender on Sept. 2. No more American lives were lost in an invasion of the Japanese mainland or other remaining Japanese-controlled territories. It was a totally effective military decision.

Obviously, there was a strong anti-Japanese sentiment during the war. Certainly, there was little concern for limiting Japanese losses as compared to our own. But in reviewing those times, rather than today's beliefs, is it so difficult to grasp the concept that in the middle of an all-out war there was an enemy? Could we have expected Americans in 1945 to put their own husbands, brothers, sons, and fathers at peril in order to avoid using the ultimate weapon, the long-term radiation effects of which were as yet unknown, on that enemy?

The destruction and subsequent radiation effects of the bomb were horrendous and gave the world a sobering vision of a possible future. But the men who fought the war and made the decision to use the bomb were not, in so doing, racist. We dishonor them with such a suggestion. Whatever the Smithsonian finally displays regarding the Enola Gay, the real "truth" of history will not change to suit current political dogma. While hatred based on race is a serious concern in 1995 and is justifiably unacceptable in American society, let us remember that our troops and government in 1945 were just finishing a fight they didn't start, in the best way they knew how.

DAVE BARRY

Voice of Satan can be very convincing

When you're 47 years old, you sometimes hear a small voice inside you that says: "Just because you've reached middle age, that doesn't mean you shouldn't take on new challenges and seek new adventures. You get only one ride on this crazy carousel we call life, and by golly you should make the most of it!"

Barry

This is the voice of Satan.

I know this because recently, on a mountain in Idaho, I listened to this voice, and as a result my body feels as though it has been used as a trampoline by the Budweiser Clydesdales. I am currently on an all-pain-killer diet. "I'll have a black coffee and 250 Advil tablets" is a typical breakfast order for me these days.

This is because I went snowboarding.

For those of you who, for whatever reason, such as a will to live, do not participate in downhill winter sports, I should explain that snowboarding is an activity that is very popular with people who do not feel that regular skiing is lethal enough. These are of course young people, fearless people, people with 100 percent synthetic bodies who can hurtle down a mountainside at 50 miles per hour and knock down mature trees with their faces and then spring to their feet and go, "Cool."

People like my son. He wanted to try snowboarding, and I thought it would be good to learn with him, because we can no longer ski together. We have a fundamental difference in technique: He skis via the Downhill Method, in which you ski down the hill; whereas I ski via the Breath-Catching Method, in which you stand sideways on the hill, looking as athletic as possible without actually moving muscles (this could cause you to start sliding down the hill). If anybody asks if you're OK, you say, "I'm just catching my breath!" in a tone of voice that suggests that at any moment you're going to swoop rapidly down the slope; whereas in fact you're planning to stay right where you are, rigid as a statue, until the spring thaw. At night, when the Downhillers have all gone home, we Breath-Catchers will still be up there, clinging to the mountainside, chewing on our parkas for sustenance.

So I thought I'd take a stab at snowboarding, which is quite different from skiing. In skiing, you wear a total of two skis, or approximately one per foot, so you can sort of maintain your balance by moving your feet, plus you have poles that you can stab people with if they make fun of you at close range. Whereas with snowboarding, all you get is one board, which is shaped like a giant tongue depressor and manufactured by the Institute of Extremely Slippery Things. Both of your feet are strapped firmly to this board, so that if you start to fall, you can't stick a foot out and catch yourself. You crash to the ground like a tree and lie there while skiers swoop past and deliberately spray snow on you.

Skiers hate snowboarders. It's a generational thing. Skiers are (and here I am generalizing) middle-aged Republicans wearing designer space suits; snowboarders are defiant young rebels wearing deliberately drab clothing that is baggy enough to cover the snowboarder plus a major appliance. Skiers like to glide down the slopes in a series of graceful arcs; snowboarders like to attack the mountain, slashing, spinning, tumbling, going backward, blasting through snowdrifts, leaping off cliffs, getting their noses pierced in midair, etc. Skiers view snowboarders as a menace; snowboarders view skiers as Elmer Fudd.

I took my snowboarding lesson in a small group led by a friend of mine named Brad Pearson, who also once talked me into jumping from a tall tree while attached only to a thin rope. Brad took us up on a slope that offered ideal snow conditions for the novice who's going to fall a lot: approximately seven flakes of powder on top of an 18-foot-thick base of reinforced concrete. You could not dent this snow with a jackhammer. (I later learned, however, that you COULD dent it with the back of your head.)

We learned snowboarding via a two-step method:

STEP ONE: Watching Brad do something.
STEP TWO: Trying to do it ourselves.

I was pretty good at Step One. The problem with Step Two was that you had to stand up on your snowboard, which turns out to be a violation of at least five important laws of physics. I'd struggle to my feet, and I'd be wavering there and then the Physics Police would drop a huge chunk of gravity on me, and WHAM my body would hit the concrete snow, sometimes bouncing as much as a foot.

"Keep your knees bent!" Brad would yell, helpfully. Have you noticed that whatever sport you're trying to learn, some earnest person is always telling you to keep your knees bent? As if THAT would solve anything.

Needless to say my son had no trouble at all. None. In minutes he was cruising happily down the mountain; you could actually see his clothing getting baggier. I, on the other hand, spent most of my time lying on my back, groaning, while space-suited Republicans swooped past and sprayed snow on me. If I hadn't gotten out of there, they'd have completely covered me.

So I think, when my body heals, I'll go back to skiing. Maybe sometime you'll see me out on the slopes, catching my breath. Please throw me some food.

NFL combine all about three days of intense competition

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It's all about competition, three days of intense competition, with huge rewards in the offing.

Players fresh out of college compete with the aim of becoming a high pick in the NFL draft and landing a big contract. Meanwhile, the 30 NFL teams compete with each other for a little time with the more than 300 players brought in by the combine for three days that will help produce decisions for the April 22-23 draft.

"It is kind of like a competition out there," said Michigan's Todd Collins, one of the quarterbacks hoping to make a big impression this weekend.

And, unlike some who were reluctant to go through a full wo out, Collins arrived determined to show all of his abilities.

"I'm going to go through all the drills. I don't think I have anything to hide," he said. "I'm confident in my abilities to throw the football in every different way. Hopefully, I'm going to move up with my performance here."

The combine includes personality interviews and psychological testing in addition to football skills.

"Everybody wants to get at you first, get you while you're fresh. Because once you start taking those tests ... by the 20th one, if you're not crazy already, you probably are after you've taken them all," said Collins. "It's pretty hectic."

The psychological test administered by the New York Giants is one most participants talk about.

"I took that at the Shrine Game ... 461 questions. I'll never forget that one," Collins said. "They had so many questions. They were repeating questions, just to make sure that you weren't just flying through it, and not cheating. They have a built in lie detector."

Collins, who passed for 2,356 yards and 11 touchdowns with only seven interceptions among his 264 attempts during the 1994 season, said it took him more than 90 minutes to complete the Giants' test.

The 6-foot-5, 216 pounder from Walpole, Mass., said he's been telling the teams "that I'm not a big scrambler. I wasn't encouraged to run the football too much at Michigan. I tell them that I'd like to work on my running."

Collins arrived Friday, was scheduled to run the 40-yard dash on Saturday and demonstrate his passing ability in the RCA Dome on Sunday.

Hectic weekend continues for new Rams coach Brooks

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A hectic weekend continued Saturday for Rich Brooks as he began work as coach of the Rams only hours after saying farewell to his former players at Oregon.

"It's been a whirlwind 48 hours, coming out of Eugene this morning on a 6 o'clock flight, connecting through a snowy Denver and landing in a very cool Indianapolis," said Brooks, who joined the Rams on Friday. He took a flight here to be introduced at a news conference before meeting potential members of his staff and some of the more than 300 former college stars participating in the annual NFL scouting combine.

"It was a journey that I had a lot of time to think about and reflect on what has transpired," said Brooks, who decided to leave Oregon after 18 years, the last highlighted by the Ducks' first undisputed Pac-10 championship.

"I'm really looking forward to the challenge of taking this football team back up the ladder, into the playoffs and to the ultimate goal" of the Super Bowl.

Brooks, whose only experience with the NFL was three years in the early 1970s as an assistant with the Rams and San Francisco, admitted that the transition after three consecutive double-digit losing seasons by the Rams will be a challenge.

"We have a lot of work to do. Obviously the transition that is going to take place ... right now not knowing which city we'll be playing in ... is going to be difficult," said Brooks, realizing that the team's plans to move the franchise from Los Angeles to St. Louis must still be approved by NFL owners.

Brooks, 53, said he believes the new NFL labor agreement could be an asset in rebuilding the Rams.

"Free agency, the salary cap, it's a totally different ball game than it used to be," he said. Brooks added that he will depend heavily on club personnel with NFL experience in preparing for the draft and assembling his 1995 squad.

"In one sense, it's come a little bit back to the college game, in that you're going to turn probably 20 to 25 percent of your team almost every year in the NFL now," Brooks said. "There's a lot of similarity between a cycle of replenishing a professional team as you do with recruiting in college."

Brooks accepted a four-year contract which reportedly was worth about $2.5 million.

Brooks, 91-109-4 since becoming Oregon's coach in 1977, succeeds Chuck Knox, who was fired last month with a year remaining on his four-year contract.

"There are a lot of things that are going to need to take place in the next six months. I am really looking forward to the challenge of getting a staff put together first, evaluating some of the talent here this weekend, and then hopefully getting the team assembled to have a little mini-camp and try to establish what direction the team is going," he said.

The staff is his first priority and he planned to meet with the coaches still on the staff today.

"My first concern with the coaching staff, and I believe I'm going to start very early tomorrow morning, is I'm going to interview the coaches that remain under contract on the Rams staff," Brooks said. "There are several people that are going to get high consideration. I'm very interested in talking to them. I'm also looking at other people in the NFL.

"I have in my mind four or five key hires that need to be made with NFL experience, and then we'll go from there. I don't have any specific plans on anybody, at this point, on the Oregon staff. But I have confidence that there are many coaches on the staff who could come and do a good job.

He promised Rams' fans aggressive football on both sides of the ball. "I want a team that is not adverse to taking some chances with the football on offense," said Brooks

"I like to have a play or two going into a game that we can have some fun with ... and it has a great chance of working "

Million-dollar miss

Rangerettes change old guard

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Buckingham Palace it ain't. But the Greenwood girls basketball season, which coach Allan Wootan refers to as "a changing of the guard," has itself been an attraction.

The Lady Rangerettes won district for the first time in Wootan's four years by beating District 8-3A rival Reagan County 61-51 Friday. They play Alpine Thursday in Pecos at 7:30 p.m. in a bi-district playoff.

"I had one returning starter so I'm real proud of this group," Wootan said. "We start two sophomores and they have done a real good job for us." Greenwood finished league play at 9-1 and 18-12 overall.

Sophomore Cassie Henkel averages 10 points a game for Greenwood. But versatile senior JoAnne Pallanez, who has played post, wing and point guard, leads the team at 16 points per game, 18 in district.

"She's not real big but she's real effective in the lane, believe it or not," Wootan said of the 5-foot-6 1993 league sophomore of the year. "She's not real orthodox She can shoot the ball with a little hook shot right or hook shot left."

The Rangerettes fell to Reagan County the first time they played the Lady Owls. But Friday they got even with them by changing the outcome of the third quarter.

"The first time we played real poorly in the third quarter and they outscored us something like 18-8," said Wootan who had taken the Rangerettes to the playoffs three times. "This time we held them to four points in the third quarter."

Part of Greenwood's success is due to their tough pre-district schedule. The Rangerettes played several Class 4A and 5A and went into league play at 8-11. "We just try to tell the kids if we go through those games and keep our heads up we'll be better off in the long run."

Rankin's girls, who beat Sanderson 67-38 Friday in a District 25A runner up playoff, face Ira Friday at 7 p.m. in Greenwood. The 20-1 Lady Red Devils feature a two-post combination.

We've got a good inside game," Rankin coach Jeff Beardon said. "We've have three post players playing pretty consistently. One of them always comes through. If all three of them come through we're real tough."

Rankin uses its post players in a three-player rotation. They are juniors Heather Hord, Ana Guadarrama and senior Kelly King. Beardon starts only one senior, but plays four off the bench.

Technicals fuel Jayhawk rally over Oklahoma

Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Technical fouls against Oklahoma fueled rallies in each half for No. 2 Kansas as the Jayhawks defeated the Sooners 93-76 Saturday with a dominating inside attack.

The Jayhawks (18-3, 7-2) had five players in double figures. Seven-footer Greg Ostertag led the way with 17 points, while his front-court colleagues Raef LaFrentz scored 13 and Scot Pollard had 12.

Jerod Haase had 16 points and Greg Gurley scored 12.

No. 4 Massachusetts 94, SW Louisiana 63

LAFAYETTE, La. — Donta Bright had 15 points, and Lou Roe added 14 with 11 rebounds as Massachusetts shook off a rough week with a victory over Southwestern Louisiana.

The Minutemen (18-2) made easy prey of the Cajuns from the start, taking a 16-1 lead and staying on top by at least 20 points much of the way. Massachusetts, toppled as No. 1 after a 78-75 loss a week earlier to George Washington, avoided losing two stright games for the first time since March 1992.

No. 6 UCLA 98, Wash. St. 83

PULLMAN, Wash. — J.R. Henderson scored 21 of his 28 points in the second half as UCLA overcame a second-half deficit to defeat Washington State.

The Bruins (16-2, 9-2 Pacific-10 Conference) won their fourth in a row and snapped a 13-game Cougars home winning streak that dated to last season.

No. 7 Mich. St 68, Penn St. 53

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Shawn Respert scored 21 points as Michigan State held onto first place in the Big Ten with a victory over Penn State.

Penn State (13-7, 5-6 Big Ten) controlled the pace of the game early, forcing the Spartans into a slow, half-court contest that the Nittany Lions led 32-28 at halftime.

No. 8 Maryland 80, Florida St. 65

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Maryland, in danger of losing the momentum gained by its win four days earlier over No. 1 North Carolina, shook off pesky Florida State with an 11-0 run in the closing minutes.

Joe Smith and Johnny Rhodes each scored 18 points for the Terrapins (19-4, 9-2 Atlantic Coast Conference), who led by only two points with 5:20 remaining.

No. 11 Wake Forest 62, Duke 61

DURHAM, N.C. — Wake Forest guard Randolph Childress embellished his reputation as one of the Atlantic Coast Conference's best clutch players, beating Duke in the final seconds for the second straight season.

No. 12 Arkansas 97, Vanderbilt 94 OT

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Corliss Williamson, shut down with five points in the second half, scored the first seven for Arkansas in overtime as the Razorbacks edged Vanderbilt.

Arkansas (19-5, 7-4 Southeastern Conference) trailed by as much as 10 in the second half and managed only two ties, the last at 88-88 on Clint McDaniel's 3-pointer with 4.4 seconds left that forced overtime.

No. 13 Missouri 81, No. 24 Oklahoma St. 79

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Julian Winfield led a balanced attack with 13 points and 10 rebounds and Bryant Reeves followed a career game with a clinker as Missouri beat Oklahoma State.

The 6-foot-5 Winfield, who had a career-high 18 rebounds against Iowa State on Wednesday, enabled Missouri (18-3, 7-2 Big Eight) to overtake Oklahoma State (16-7, 6-2) and tie Kansas for the conference lead.

No. 14 Arizona St. 79, No. 15 Stanford 70

TEMPE, Ariz. — Isaac Burton scored 14 of his 19 points in the second half to lead Arizona State past Stanford 79-70 in Pacific-10 Conference action.

Arizona State (18-5, 8-3) won its fifth straight and for the sixth time in seven games against Stanford (15-5, 6-5).

No. 16. Villanova 81, Seton Hall 67

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Eric Eberz scored 19 points and hit three 3-pointers to short-circuit second-half rallies by Seton Hall as Villanova won its ninth straight.

No. 17 Virginia 62, Clemson 44

CLEMSON, S.C. -- Junior Burrough scored 9 of his 13 points during a second-half run and Virginia held Clemson to two field goals down the stretch.

The Cavaliers (15-6, 8-3 Atlantic Coast Conference) squandered a 10-point halftime lead, but then outscored Clemson 22-7 over the final 13 minutes for their fourth victory in five games.

No. 19 Iowa State 72, Nebraska 69

AMES, Iowa — Fred Hoiberg scored 20 points, including seven of Iowa State's 12 points in overtime, as the Cyclones ended a four-game losing steak with a Big Eight win against Nebraska.

Hoiberg got the Cyclones (18-6, 4-5) a 67-67 tie with his second basket of the overtime session, a three-pointer from well beyond the line, then fed Julius Michalik under the basket as Iowa State took the lead for good, 69-67, with 31.6 seconds remaining.

Auburn 70, No. 21 Mississippi St. 69

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Former Odessa College standout Moochie Norris scored 19 of his 23 points in the second half and Auburn held off a furious last-minute rally to beat No. 21 Mississippi State.

Auburn (12-8, 5-6 Southeastern Conference) appeared to have the game wrapped up when Ray Donald's free throw provided a 62-50 lead with 1:30 left.

No. 22 Oregon 107, Ore. St. 86

EUGENE, Ore. — Kenya Wilkins scored 18 points and Henry Madden 16 Saturday as No. 22 Oregon romped to a win over Oregon State, giving the Ducks their first season sweep of the Beavers since 1961.

No. 23 Alabama 74, LSU 66

NEW ORLEANS — Jamal Faulkner and Antonio McDyess combined for 30 points, enough for No. 23 Alabama to overcome Louisiana State and Ronnie Henderson's 40 points.

SWC: Texas ends Aggies home win mark

(From 1C)

Texas 98, Texas A&M 88

COLLEGE STATION — Terrence Rencher scored 35 points and Roderick Anderson added 26, helping Texas hand Texas A&M its first home defeat of the season.

The game was close in the first half, then the Longhorns (15-5, 6-2 Southwest Conference) got last-minute 3-pointers from Tommy Penders and Brandy Perryman to take a 41-33 lead at the break.

TCU 106, Houston 95

HOUSTON — Kurt Thomas scored 43 points and grabbed 19 rebounds to nullify a desperate late Houston charge and lead Texas Christian to a victory.

The Horned Frogs (14-7, 6-3 conference) built a comfortable 95-74 lead with 4:34 to play when the Cougars (7-14, 4-5) went on a 16-4 tear that cut TCU's lead to 99-90 with 1:43 left in the game.

Women

No. 4 T.Tech 100, Baylor 48

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech knew the best way to rebound from a crushing defeat and the loss of a star player would be to pound the next opponent. Poor Baylor.

The Lady Bears were the sacrificial victims as the Lady Raiders got back on the winning track with a victory that included points from 12 players and a school record-low six personal fouls.

The Lady Raiders (22-3, 8-1 Southwest Conference) were led by Alicia Thompson, a 6-foot-1 true freshman from Big Lake who scored 21 points in 16 minutes.

Texas A&M 86, Texas 79

AUSTIN — Lana Tucker and Kelly Cerny each had 18 points, leading Texas A&M to an 86-79 victory over Texas.

The Lady Aggies (15-6, 6-3), fresh from their upset of No. 4 Texas Tech, were tied 41-41 at halftime and broke away in the second half.

Houston 91, Texas Christian 68

FORT WORTH — Pat Luckey had 33 points and 15 rebounds and Rosheda Hopson had 13 points and 10 rebounds as Houston easily beat Texas Christian.

SHORT: Stars hand out advice to NBA's future stars of the 8-minute abs videotape.)

Many of the people I interviewed had very good advice. I especially liked the remarks of Philadelphia's Dana Barros, because at 5-11, he reminded me much of myself (well, sort of).

"For me, it was just constant work," Barros said. "Being a little guy my whole career, I had adversity. I had people saying, 'He's too small, he's too little, he's too this.' I just learned to take everything negatively that everyone said and have it work for me.

"I used to take articles that people had written about me saying I was too small and put them on my mirror so that every day when I woke up I would look at those articles and it would make me want to work harder just to prove people wrong."

Compared to the other All-Stars there, he's considered an NBA shrimp. But not to me. (He didn't know this, but while I was interviewing him, I put my shoe next to his and and compared shoe sizes. He only had a few inches on me.)

The next All-Star, my friend Brett would have a field day with. Well, since most of you don't know Brett, the All-Star I interviewed was Seattle's Shawn Kemp. I was pleased with his first bit of advice. I qualified.

"A kid just has to be a normal kid," Kemp said. "He doesn't have to be anything special. Sure, he should play basketball and work on his game, but he shouldn't just focus on basketball. It would really help to play other sports to be good in basketball. I played football and baseball in high school and all those sports make me a good athlete."

Many people may not know who this next man is. (Right.) He wasn't drafted all that high. (Right.) He'll never make it in Hollywood. (Right.) But he had some good advice.

"You have to work on your skills," Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway said. "Shooting free throws, shooting jump shots. Dribbling with both your left and right hand. You really have to get into a position to be an NBA All-Star. Work hard."

Why are all these guys giving us this free advice? Maybe they plan to retire in a few years.

You've probably heard the NBA promoting its Stay in School program. Many of these players are good spokesmen. (Of course, maybe they learned their spokesmen skills from all the shoe ads they do. But that's another column.)

"School is always very important," the Suns' Dan Majerle said. "If I didn't stay in school and graduate and go on to college and make my grades, then I wouldn't have been able to play basketball. The NBA scouts these days look not only for talent but for guys who are smart and who have high morals and are good people. It's not just skills."

Said Denver's Dikembe Mutombo: "I didn't play basketball until I was a sophomore in college. So education was always what I thought about first. You must think about college first, and then try to improve your NBA skills and try to become an NBA All-Star."

While I was interviewing Mutombo, I couldn't help but think he could palm my head with his hand.

One nice thing is, the players didn't spit on me (they were actually quite nice), although sometimes I felt like the other reporters might. They were giving me some funny looks.

(Michael Kosak, 11, is a sixth-grader at Liberty Elementary School in northeast Phoenix. His column will run throughout All-Star Weekend.)

HILL: Last thing rookie wants to do is rile peers

(From 1C)

why he got more votes than anyone, Hill, a 6-foot-8 forward, professes not to know.

"I have no idea," he said. "I've thought about it a lot, and I still have no idea. I'd like to think it's for my talent on the court."

The last thing Hill wants to do is rile up his peers. He's heard of "a few so-called problems" with some players, "but I'm not really aware of it," he said. "I'm not good with current events."

Right. Hill majored in political science at Duke (where he was part of two national championship teams) and likes to hang out in bookstores.

He also recently traded quips with David Letterman, then played the piano.

"It was a little weird," Hill said. "I used to watch him and get in trouble, staying up late."

This just in: Hill got in trouble once.

Hill is fortunate, and he knows it. He has benefited from a solid support system, which includes his parents Calvin, the former Yale and NFL running back, and Janet, a lawyer who was a Wellesley classmate of Hillary Clinton and his college coach, Mike Krzyzewski.

Then, more good luck. Hill is drafted No. 3 by the Pistons and gets to hook up with veteran guard Joe Dumars, one of the league's most respected players.

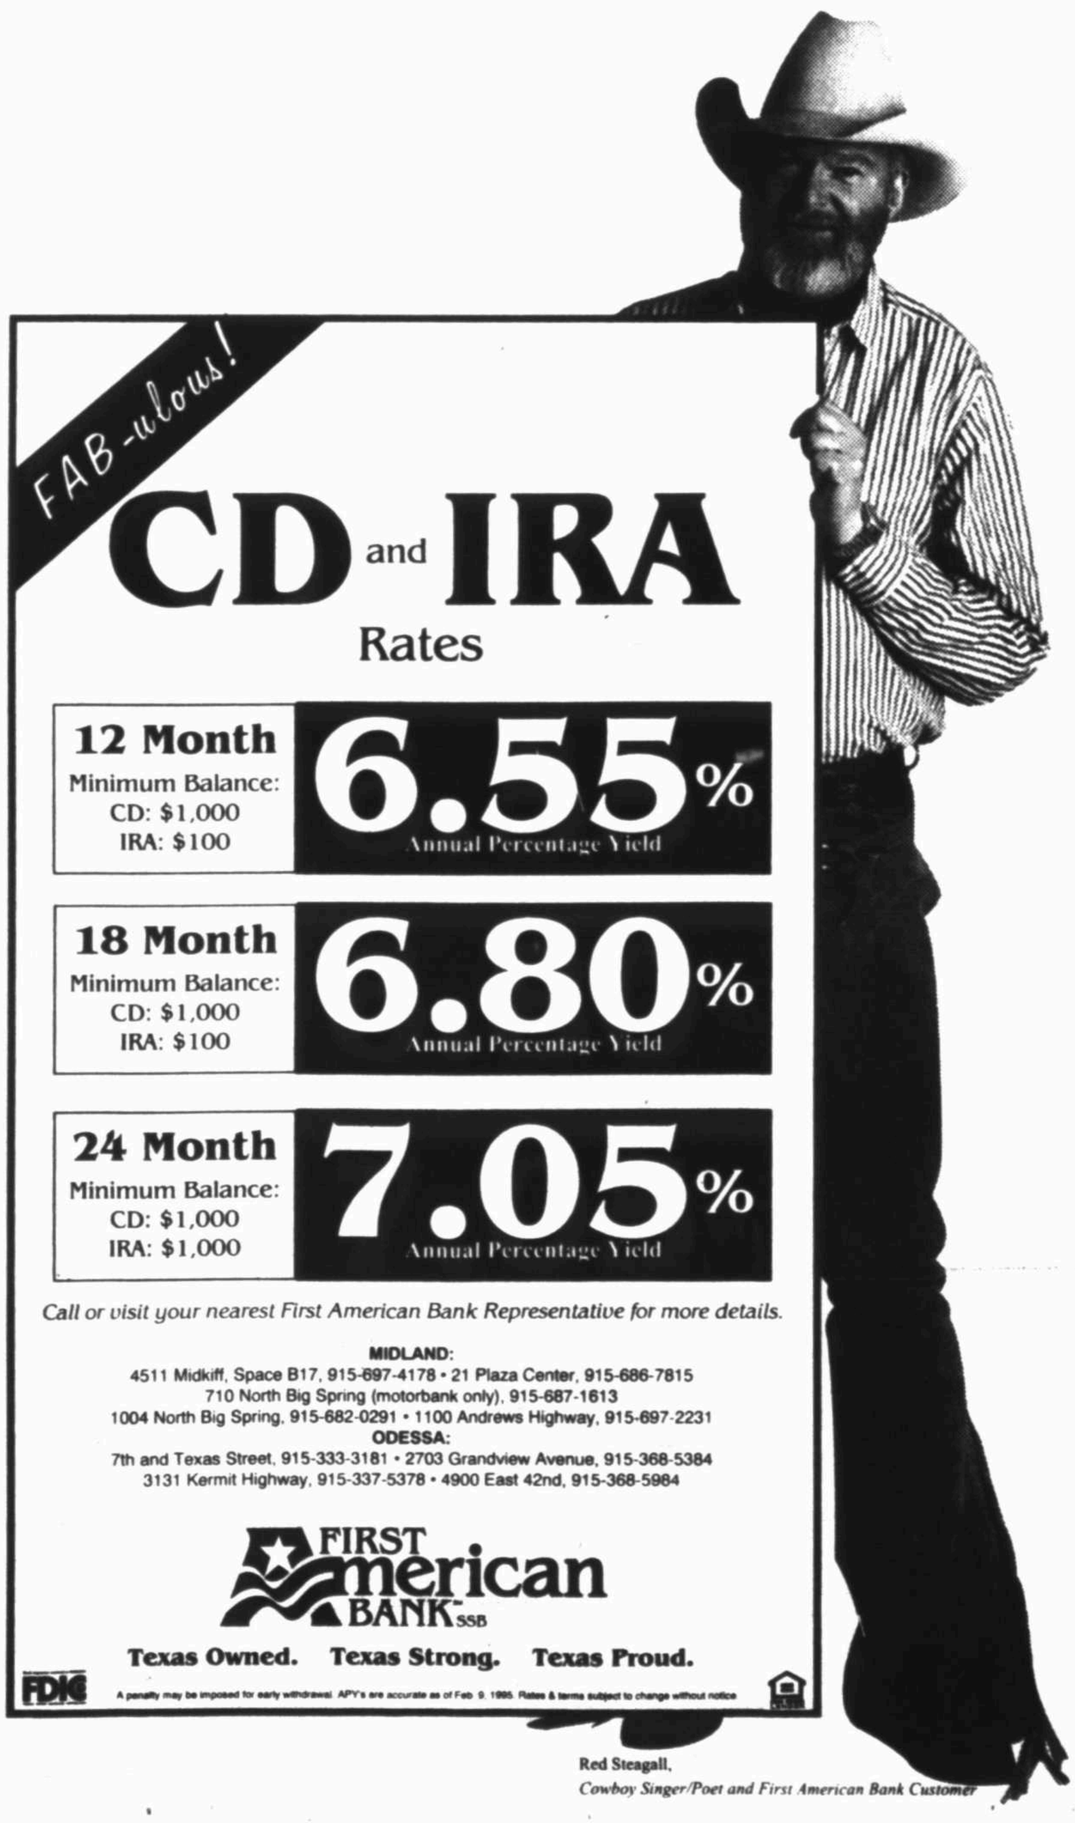

"He put his locker next to mine," Hill said. "On the court, off the court, he does everything he can to make me feel comfortable, feel part of the team. It's good to play with a guy like that, because he's so smart and so talented.

"It's also good to know a guy like that, what he is and what he stands for."

Dumars, in his 10th season and the 1994 winner of the NBA's Citizenship Award, said he doesn't try to impose himself on Hill.

"He's very composed for a young guy," said Dumars, the Pistons top scorer this year.

"With everything that's been thrown at him, he hasn't gotten sidetracked."

Classic Southern

Reminiscent of an older Southern home, with its high ceilings and dramatic facade, this large, four bedroom family home at 3901 Arroyo offers a tremendous number of special features.

From the two story, high ceiling in the formal dining room, to the second floor play-room which overlooks the family room this is a home that was built with large spaces in mind.

The center of family life in the house is certainly the large, open-plan combination of kitchen and family room. Opening out onto the charming pool and patio area, the whole area is diffused with the soft light that slants in through the plantation shutters. The quality of this soft light adds a classical touch to the whole house.

The kitchen is fully equipped with double ovens, triple cook-top, triple sink, planning desk and walk-in pantry, making it perfect for entertaining. An integral part of the suite, it is demarcated by the use of easy care tiles that continue into the breakfast nook set into the bay window.

All of the areas in this elegant suite benefit from the views over the swimming pool and yard. Equipped with a water slide and diving board the pool area is decorated with contrasting blue tiles that help define the steps and seating areas as well as serving a practical function.

This is a huge property set on two floors which offers the finest in contemporary living. Nowhere is this more evident than in the master bedroom which demonstrates all that is wonderful about the house.

The master bedroom also leads out to the swimming pool, but this time via French doors and a winding, tree covered path. This increases the atmosphere of privacy that one finds in the suite which also boasts a sitting area.

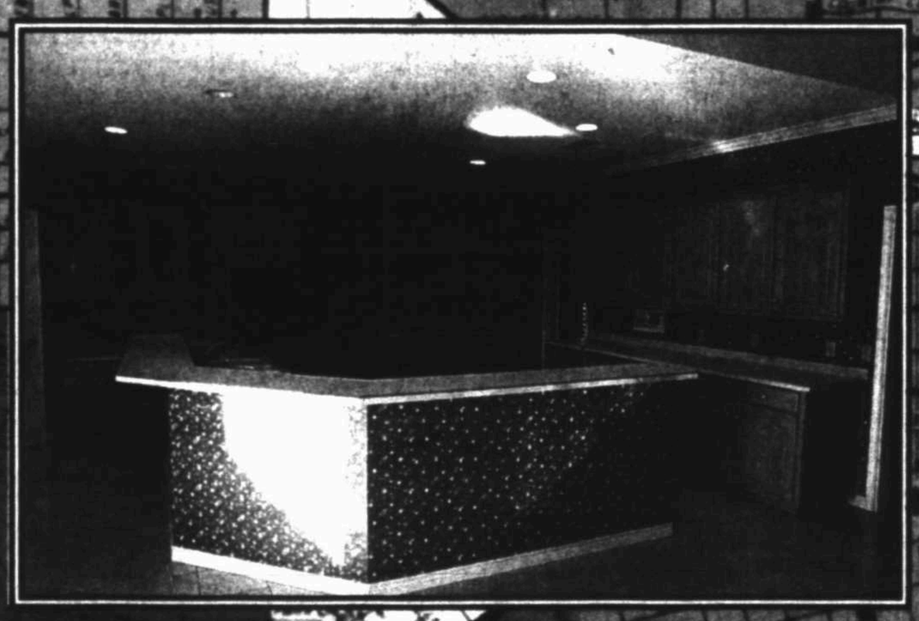

It is however, the bathroom that is the really stunning feature. The bedroom and bathroom share a double sided fireplace with . This providing the focal point to a bathroom that already contains a large Jacuzzi, tiled double vanities and a huge shower with double heads.

Just off from the entrance hall is an elegant study. With its built-in bookcases and light wood paneling it could be used as an extra bedroom or even an extra living area because it has a closet and adjoining bathroom.

Set in landscaped grounds with a circular drive in the front, this is an imposing custom built property that offers a tremendous amount of space and luxury.

Listed at $259,500 by Pat Paxton, CRS, of Langston Realtors, the house will be open for viewing between two and four o'clock this afternoon.

To arrange an alternative appointment to view this property, call Paxton at 682-9495.

Test kits provide important information concerning lead content in drinking water

Peggy Strong CRS, GRI
Chaparral Realtors

Last week we covered the basic problems associated with lead-based paint and in further discussion with Texas Consulting Services, we will review the testing procedures, removal of lead base paint, and lead in drinking water.

Lead-based paint can be tested for in a variety of ways:

1. Chemical - the paint layers are exposed and a chemical evaluation is applied which gives a color change.

2. Bulk sampling - a sample of the paint is taken and processed in a laboratory.

3. X-Ray Fluorescence - an XRF unit is used to determine the lead concentration.

4. Wipe Sampling - a treated cellulose wipe cloth is used to pick up dust from surfaces and is analyzed in a lab.

Lead can be found in the interior and exterior painted surfaces of the home. As a rule of thumb, the higher the quality of paint that was used (per 1978) the more lead was used. Door surfaces, trim, cabinet work, and weather resistant surfaces are more likely to have lead based paint due to its durability.

Removal of lead based paint is a costly proposition. The contractor sometimes will remove painted doors, windows, etc. and replace with new units. Painted walls will be covered with a new layer of sheetrock to encapsulate the lead-based paint. If the option to remove the paint is used, chemical strippers and needle guns are commonly used.

If the exterior of the home has lead-based paint, removal is much the same except that lead-base paint oxidizes and leaves a dust which then contaminates the soil around the drip line of the house.

Lead in drinking water is fairly common. According to Consumer Reports, February 1993, every city has recordable lead amounts in their drinking water, it is just the determining amount that counts. It can be the result of lead water lines, lead solder joints, or public/private water supplies. Several test kits are on the market for do-it-yourselfers. Be sure to follow the proper test procedure. This will let you know if the lead is in the lines of the house, from the house to the meter, or from outside the residence. Remember, some water well pumps use lead parts.

Next week, we will discuss radon.

PERMIAN BASIN
OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, February 12, 1995 — SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

NEXT WEEK
Permian Basin
Oil and Gas
Forecast '95

BRIEFING

Gas plant plumbing casts a hard shadow at a facility near Odessa.

Prices retreat

Oil prices weakened this past week but remained above the $18 level.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate for March delivery closed at $18.24 per barrel late in the week. A report from the American Petroleum Institute indicating a sharp increase in the nation's crude supply was largely responsible for the weaker prices, analysts said.

March contracts for natural gas closed at $1.48 per thousand cubic feet late in the week.

Phillips suit

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge has dismissed a $150 million lawsuit by 46 plaintiffs disgruntled with settlements they received for the 1989 Phillips plant explosion in Pasadena that killed 23 people.

The 46 plaintiffs were suing their attorneys over the settlements. The lawsuit was thrown out this week by state District Judge Mark Davidson.

The group had received a combined $33 million from Phillips Petroleum Co. in 1991.

A weight indicator tells a downhole story.

Rigs steady

Drilling activity in the Permian Basin held steady during the first week of February, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

For the week ended February 3, the Permian Basin rig count was 107, the same as the previous week and up from 95 a year earlier.

Lea County, N.M. was the most active in the basin with 17 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M.

The national rig count continued to slump, dropping seven rigs to 724 for the week. A year ago the count was 752.

Among major producing states, Colorado and Wyoming showed the sharpest drop, three rigs each, while Oklahoma posted the biggest increase, four rigs.

Please see COUNT GRAPH/8E

Activity highlights

There was a sharp jump in completions reported for the past week, with over twice as many completions reported by Dwights Energy Service for the week. There were approximately 65 completions reported in Eddy County, N.M. alone.

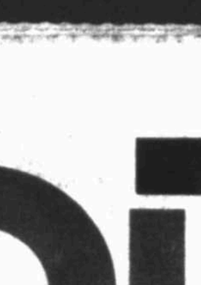

Costilla Petroleum of Midland completed two Fusselman gas discoveries in Howard County, while Yates Petroleum Corp. tested two Canyon discoveries in Eddy County, N.M.

TRC seeks relief from pollution act

■ Harsh regulations could cost Texas producers almost $5 billion

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Barry Williamson and Commissioners Carole Keeton Rylander and Charles R. Matthews have asked the Texas Congressional delegation and the U.S. Minerals Management Service for legislative and regulatory relief from provisions of the federal Oil Pollution Act of 1990 that could cost Texas oil producers almost $5 billion, or 60 percent of the value of all crude oil produced in the state annually.

Williamson

In letters to each U.S. senator and representative from Texas and to Cynthia Quarterman, acting director of the Minerals Management Service (MMS), the commissioners sought immediate changes to the financial responsibility requirements of the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 (OPA 90) before they devastate Texas oil and gas operators. They estimated bonds required by the act could cost industry over $4.95 billion.

"The total value of current oil production by Texas is roughly $8.2 billion annually. Obviously, Texas cannot bear this cost. These financial responsibility requirements, particularly if applied to inland facilities, would devastate Texas' oil and gas exploration and production industry. The result would be a crippling blow to Texas' economy due to lost oilfield jobs, state royalties, and tax revenues," the commissioners wrote.

The biggest problems, said the commissioners, result from vague wording in the Act which subjects inland oil production facilities to the same unreasonably strict financial responsibility requirements that apply to offshore facilities. The act requires operators of such facilities to maintain a $150 million bond to cover cleanup cost of any spills, regardless of the actual risk. A bond of that size would cost each operator some $1.5 million a year - a burden that would drive many operators out of business.

"We do not believe that Congress intended the OPA 90 financial responsibility requirements (enacted after the Exxon Valdez tanker spilled oil in Alaskan waters) to apply to facilities located landward of the inland extent of tidal includence," the commissioners wrote. "Nor do we believe that Congress intended that a facility such as an onshore oil terminal be required to demonstrate financial responsibility merely because the terminal includes a pier that extends into tidally influenced waters."

The Act's financial responsibility requirements would actually be counterproductive from an environmental standpoint, the commissioners pointed out. Operators struggling to meet the stiff bonding requirements would not have funds to implement state and federal environmental protection programs. Funds from operators that the Railroad Commission uses to plug abandoned wells and clean up polluted sites would also shrink.

"The result would be a crippling blow to Texas' economy.
The state's three Railroad Commissioners

The Railroad Commissioners recommended amendments to the Act that would clearly define offshore facilities, which are subject to the bonding requirement, and clearly exclude onshore facilities, which typically have a low risk of significant environmental damage from oil spills. They also recommended exemption for facilities that handle less than 1,000 barrels of oil at any one time, noting they were exempted in provisions of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act which OPA 90 replaced. Finally, they recommended that on offshore facility operator be required to demonstrate a level of financial responsibility commensurate with the risk of a spill from that facility, up to a maximum of $150.

On-site system reclaims cuttings

■ Remediation system will be used on highly environmentally sensitive drill sites

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

The drill site may soon take on a new look, as the result of a new drill site remediation system that will be marketed worldwide by Parker Drilling Co.

The Tulsa-based drilling Co. announced this week that it had reached an agreement with National Fuel & Energy Inc., to market its system which permits the on-site reclamation of drill cuttings.

The proprietary remediation system heats the drill cuttings to a point where all the liquids in the cuttings are vaporized in a desorption unit. Gases are then drawn into a condensing unit and returned to a liquid state, while the reclaimed oil is recycled back into an oil based drilling mud.

Tim Colwell, a spokesman for Parker Drilling, said the innovative system was brought to the attention of the company by a field representative who witnessed the system being used on a location.

"This agreement allows Parker to expand beyond our traditional role of drilling contractor," said Robert L. Parker, Jr., president of Parker Drilling. Parker said the NFE system was unique and well-suited for a growing number of environmentally sensitive drilling locations where additional safeguards are required of the operator.

Some drill sites could take on a new look as Parker Drilling Co. begins to market a new on-site system for reclamation of drill cuttings.

Tom Wingerter, Parker Vice president North American Operations, said the agreement, which was consummated in mid-January, is the first step for Parker in looking at and acquiring new environmental technology for the drilling industry.

"We feel environmental regulation will increase and that there will be a need for this type of technology," Wingerter said.

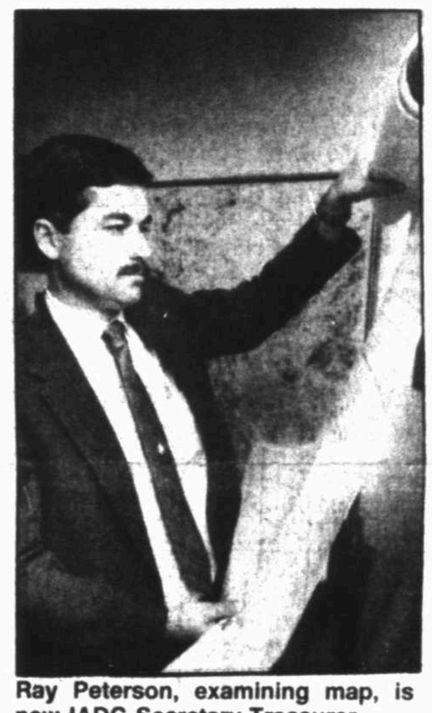

"We're glad to be working with NFE marketing an environmentally sound process, that complements both companies strength and represents a potential profit opportunity as well," Parker added.

National Fuels & Energy Inc. is a subsidiary of Environmental Safeguards Inc. of Springville, Utah, and specializes in soil remediation, water reclamation and environmental clean-up. Parker Drilling Co. is an international drilling company that specializes in deep, remote and difficult drilling operations.

While there are a number of dirt burners around, Wingerter says the NFE system is different in that cuttings are heated in an inner barrel that allows vapors to form and be collected by a condenser. If the liquids are not re-introduced into an oil based mud system, they are disposed of at a proper facility.

Eventually, where needed, Parker Drilling hopes to incorporate the remediation system into the drilling loop and the active mud system.

The drilling company feels that most demand for the system will come from the U.S., but that may be some international applications because of growing environmental concerns overseas. "We don't have any clear feeling for how many units we might eventually put into the field, nor have we calculated the exact cost," said Wingerter.

Ray Peterson, examining map, is new IADC Secretary-Treasurer.

Midlander named to IADC office

Staff Report

Ray Peterson of Midland-based Peterson Drilling has been named Secretary-Treasurer of the International Association of Drilling Contractors to fill an unexpired term for 1995. He succeeds Donald L. Frankel, who resigned effective Jan. 31.

Peterson has long been active in IADC affairs. In 1985 he chaired the IADC Permian Basin chapter. He was twice elected IADC Regional Vice President, once for West Texas and again for the Central United States. In addition, he has served four years on the association's Executive Committee.

A native of Fort Worth, he spent his early years on a farm outside Lovington, N.M. He launched his career in the oilfield by roughnecking during summers, Christmas and spring vacations and weekends to pay college expenses. Both his father and father-in-law worked as drillers.

He graduated in 1974 from New Mexico State University in Las Cruces with a bachelor's degree in agricultural business and an ROTC commission as a 2nd lieutenant in the U.S. Army. He served in the Army Finance Corps at Fort Benning, Ga., also undergoing airborne training and earning his parachute jump wings. While in the Army, he earned his masters degree in business administration from Georgia State University. He was discharged from active service in 1978 and entered the inactive reserve with the rank of captain.

Upon relocating to Midland in 1978, he accepted a position with Landis drilling, where he had responsibility for contracts and safety. He subsequently moved to Sterling Drilling as vice president. In May 1981, he and his father, Martin Peterson, founded Peterson Drilling. As president, Ray handled contracts and administration, while his father, vice president and drilling superintendent, managed field operations.

PEMEX to stay state owned says Vargas

HOUSTON (AP) — The new head of Petroleos Mexicanos says the company will go ahead with plans to privatize its petrochemical business although the rest of the company known as Pemex will continue as a state-owned firm.

Adrian Lajous Vargas, speaking Wednesday at a Houston energy conference, would disclose no details, saying only that information would be released over the next few weeks.

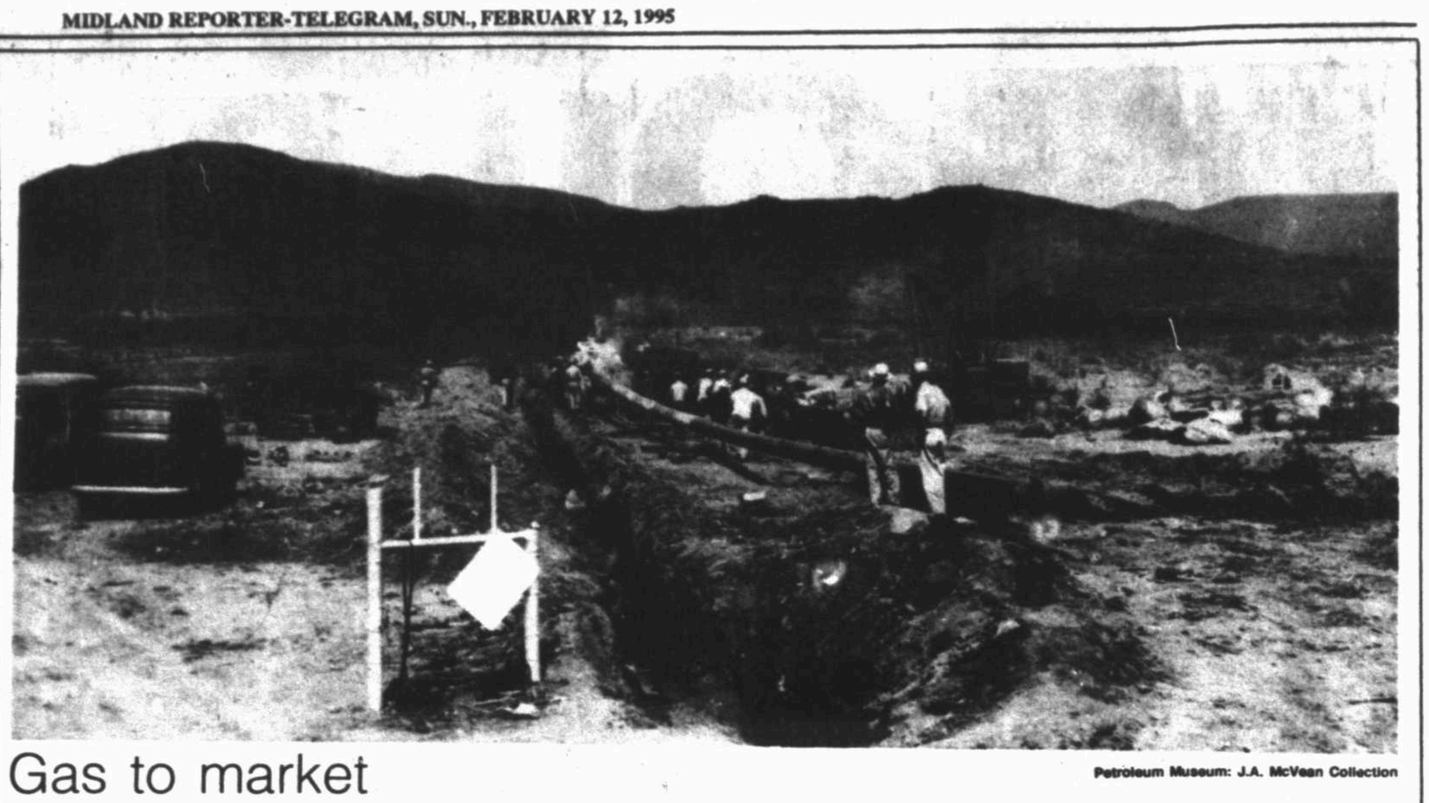

"The objective is to transform Pemex into a modern, well-managed, internationally competitive integrated oil company that will continue to be wholly owned by the state," Lajous said.

The government announced in 1992 it would divest from petrochemicals but then postponed the move "due to cyclical conditions in the world petrochemical industry and the fact that we were approaching a change in administration," he said.

"Both of these cycles — the industry's cycle and our political cycle — have turned, and now is the time to renew this process."

Pemex is the world's second- or third-largest oil producer and the eighth-biggest oil refiner, Lajous said. The company accounts for 6 percent of Mexico's gross domestic product and 28 percent of the country's federal tax revenues.

Lajous, 51, is an economist and a 12-year veteran of Pemex. He was named director-general of Pemex late last year as part of a government shakeup following the disastrous devaluation of the peso.

Shell pays $3 million on environmental suit

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — After more than two years of fighting environmentalists and commercial fishers in court, Shell Oil Co. has agreed to pay $3 million for dumping illegal amounts of selenium into San Francisco Bay.

In the settlement with California Public Interest Research Group (Calpirg) and Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations, Shell also agreed to incrementally cut selenium in its wastewater discharges to the Bay at its Martinez refinery.

The settlement, announced Tuesday, must be approved by U.S. District Court Judge Thelton E. Henderson, It says Shell would pay $2.2 million in penalties and $800,000 in court costs.

Two dozen environmental projects would benefit from the penalty money, including restoration of wetlands by the Sierra Club and Audubon Society and recycling of waste oil by the Lindsay Museum.

The largest payment of $250,000 would go to the University of California for research on Bay pollution. Verde Elementary School's restoration of Wildcat Creek in Richmond would get $15,000 in the smallest project.

Selenium is a toxic byproduct of petroleum refining. In the Bay, it has poisoned bird embryos and contaminated diving ducks.

White sturgeon, harbor seals, snowy egrets and black-crowned night herons have been found to carry the metallic element in their bodies, some at higher concentration than in the thousands of birds that died at the Kesterson National Wildlife Refuge near Los Banos a decade ago.

The lawsuit, filed in October 1992, charged that Shell was going unpunished in 1991 and 1992 for hundreds of violations that were subject to up to $2,500 a day in fines under the Clean Water Act.

The San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board, which is responsible for enforcement of the act, wasn't levying any fines against Shell or the five other major refineries that discharge selenium into the Bay. The board agreed with the companies that there was no sound, cheap technology that could control selenium.

When Calpirg and the commercial fishers sued Shell, it was discharging more than 6 pounds a day, half the total selenium going into the Bay from the six refineries.

Within months of the suit, Shell brought down the daily discharge by using a removal process. Shell dropped to No. 2 after Union Oil Co.

In December 1993, Henderson ruled for the plaintiffs, unconvinced by Shell's argument that there wasn't an effective technology to remove selenium. Henderson wrote: "Given the strict liability imposed by the Clean Water Act, they are simply beside the point for purposes of determining liability."

From that time on, the parties fought over the amount of penalties.

In disputing both liability and penalties, Shell has argued that it is in compliance with the water board's interim standards.

Tomi Van de Brooke, community relations manager for Shell, said, "There is no technology available today that doesn't have a negative effect on the environment."

But Van de Brooke said Shell hopes to meet the 1998 deadline of 2.13 pounds of selenium a day that the refinery agreed to in the settlement. The company says it discharged an average of 4.1 pounds per day in 1994.

"We are optimistic that by 1998 we will have the technology to meet the tighter limit. We're continuing to dedicate significant resources to finding a way to reduce selenium in the discharge water from this facility."

Calpirg Program Director Mary Raferty said, "Our lawsuit is an example that for the Clean Water Act to work, enforcement action by citizens plays a critical role. Government agencies are not doing it alone.

"It's possible that Shell paid more in their fight in court than it would have cost to come into compliance in the first place. We think it's a matter of corporate will and not technical know-how."

Jury issues damages against Dresser, others

BALTIMORE (AP) — A jury finished its work in the nation's largest consolidated asbestos case by setting punitive damages for three companies that knowingly exposed their workers to the cancer-causing material, a lawyer for the plaintiffs said.

The three companies ordered to pay punitive damages were Westinghouse; Harbison-Walker, a division of Dallas-based Dresser Industries; and Rapid-American Corp.

It took the jury 5½ days to determine how much each of the companies should pay, said lawyer Ted Flerlage.

The jury decided Westinghouse and Harbison-Walker will have to pay twice as much in punitive damages as compensatory damages and Rapid-American will pay equal amounts of compensatory and punitive damages, Flerlage said.

"We are thrilled," said Flerlage. "They came back with extremely fair verdicts right down the line."

The ruling was a continuation of a 1992 case in which six companies were found negligent for making or selling asbestos products. The case, the nation's largest asbestos proceeding, involved a total of 9,700 defendants and 18 companies. More than 40 companies were originally named as defendants in the case, but most elected to settle out of court.

In December, the same jury found the three companies and eight others liable and awarded more than $20 million in compensatory damages to five plaintiffs. The jury awarded compensatory damages ranging from $500,000 to $9 million for each plaintiff.

The companies ordered to pay compensatory damages were Asbestospray Corp., A.W. Chestertown Co., Corhart Refractories Co., E.L. Stebbing & Co., Hampshire Industries, John Crane Inc., Lloyd E. Mitchell Inc., and U.S. Mineral Products Co.

Four of the plaintiffs are still living. John Goodman, who was awarded $9 million, died a year ago of mesothelioma, a cancer of the lung lining and abdomen. He wrapped pipes with insulation containing asbestos for Standard Oil in Baltimore from 1951 to 1957.

Asbestos was used for decades in insulation products at shipyards and steel mills. It was banned in the early 1970s after it was linked to cancer and respiratory disease.

Medical reports estimate that 200,000 to 365,000 Americans will have died from asbestos-related diseases by the year 2030.

Credit rating firm upgrades Apache senior notes

CHICAGO — Duff and Phelps Credit Rating Co. has removed the senior notes of Apache Corp. from Rating Watch — Uncertain and reaffirmed its 'BBB+' (Triple-B Plus) rating following a review of the company's recent acquisition activity. Approximately $175 million in debt securities are affected.

Apache has announced three major additions to its portfolio within the last two months, including the merger with Dekalb valued at 4285 million announced last month and the $600 million acquisition of Texaco properties and $101 million purchase of Crystal Oil Co. announced in November.

These additions are consistent with Apache's strategy of acquiring producing properties in and around core operating areas, with a high degree of ownership, and with the potential to increase production and reduce costs.

In addition, the Dekalb merger expands Apache's scope of operations into a new area where it plans to apply some of the same management and operating methods that have proven successful elsewhere. Even without production and cost enhancements, the acquired properties are immediately additive to cash flow and will allow Apache to maintain strong interest coverage ratios.

Duff and Phelps' rating recognizes that Apache's fundamental operating strategy relies to a significant extent on acquisitions to achieve its growth objectives. In the past, this has led to demands for cash which exceed internally generated funds and has caused considerable volatility in the company's financial leverage.

Most notably, following the $545 million Amoco property acquisition in 1991 when Apache was a much smaller company, the company's leverage climbed to 55 percent from 31 percent, but was subsequently reduced to under 40 percent through property sales, equity issuance and the conversion of subordinated debentures to equity.

In the case of the Crystal Oil and Texaco property acquisitions, financing will be primarily provided by increases in the company's existing bank facilities and from the sale of $150 million of convertible Eurobonds.

The Dekalb merger will be effected by an exchange of Apache's shares and the assumption of Dekalb's debt. While leverage will rise to about 61 percent of total capitalization immediately after the closing of the Texaco transaction from approximately 45 percent in the third quarter of 1994, Duff and Phelps expects financial leverage to be reduced to under 50 percent over the next 24 months.

Phillips plaintiffs dismissed

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge has dismissed a $150 million lawsuit by 46 plaintiffs disgruntled with settlements they received for the 1989 Phillips plant explosion in Pasadena that killed 23 people.

The 46 plaintiffs were suing their attorneys over the settlements. The lawsuit was thrown out Tuesday by state District Judge Mark Davidson.

The group had received a combined $33 million from Phillips Petroleum Co. in 1991. In 1993, after some other victims had received higher settlements or damages, the 46 accused their lawyers of fraud and malpractice, saying they had been sold out for a quick settlement.

As the case neared trial, however, the judge granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment, saying the plaintiffs had not shown the attorneys' actions had damaged them.

"If any time any plaintiff thinks, two years after obtaining a settlement, that they did not get enough money, there are few attorneys in our country safe from claims of negligence and trials on those claims," Davidson said.

Plaintiffs were headed by Carol Arce, widow of refinery worker Bert Arce, who was killed in the explosion.

The plaintiffs' attorney, Steven Smoot, said the dismissal would be appealed. Defense attorney Kenneth Tekell said the lawsuit was groundless.

The Board for Lease of University Lands has approved lease provisions pertaining to the 87th Oil and Gas Lease Sale, providing for an opportunity to earn reductions in the standard required royalty. The following explanations related to the earned royalty reduction rates are provided for your information:

20%: The 25% royalty will be reduced to 20% if production of oil or gas in paying quantities is established within the first eighteen (18) months of the lease term. (This validates the 20% royalty rate for the entire lease and for the life of the lease.)

A dry hole and extension provision will also be in effect for royalty considerations. If one or more dry holes are completed on the lease, the following royalties can still be earned:

20%: If an additional well or wells are commenced within the first eighteen (18) months, and by virtue of a 90-day extension, if needed, the production of oil or gas in paying quantities is established by the end of the 21st month of the lease term.

22.5%: If an additional well or wells are commenced within the second eighteen (18) months (19th-36th month), and by virtue of a 90-day extension, if needed, the production of oil or gas in paying quantities is established prior to the end of the 39th month.

Oil patch stars in oilman's novel

By Debbie Blossom

WILSON, Okla. (AP) — In his tiny office, Dale Bulla is surrounded by a collection of exotic artifacts and a number of boxes, most holding copies of his new, self-published book, "Roughnecks."

Items from the travels and experiences in his 33 years working for Exxon and Arco International crowd his office in a house where he and his family have lived only since July.

Pictures of drilling rigs he worked on line the wall and shelves are crowded with hand-carved statuettes and other souvenirs depicting an existence very different from everyday life in Wilson, a town of 1,600 about 90 miles south of Oklahoma City.

Unlike many struggling writers, Bulla said he probably started writing because he was bored.

How could someone who spent almost 43 years of his life in the oilfields of nine countries on four continents be bored?

Just ask anyone who has worked on a drilling rig in the middle of the North Sea, Bulla said. Even as a drilling supervisor, there were many days he didn't have a lot to do.

Lucky for him oil rigs came complete with computers.

The wording on the book cover describes Bulla's fictitious story in a phrase: "The story of post-war Oklahoma and the men who worked and played there."

Bulla said he drew his ideas from a creative imagination and a life that started in the oilfields of southern Oklahoma near Dillard.

His oilfield experiences began before he graduated from Wilson High School in 1952, and he said he has lived the book's story.

Focusing on a period from 1953 to about the middle of 1955, the storyline is set around a drilling rig and incorporates characters and incidents that actually happened in his life, Bulla said.

Although it's fiction, the book mentions real places in Texas and Oklahoma and notable people from the era, such as Will Rogers.

"The characters are composites of people I have known," he said. "I may have taken characteristics from six different people and combined them into one person for the book."

Some of the happenings detailed in the story were real, too, Bulla said, but he said he will never identify which ones they were.

"I tried to portray the times and the people as they really were and as best as I can remember," he said.

Bulla admitted there would be many people who would look down at him and his book because of his efforts to remain "true to real life."

"The men from the oilfields didn't talk like Sunday school teachers," Bulla said with a smile. "But most of the people weren't violent, even if they talked that way."

Bulla said he hopes readers pick up and enjoy the humor that he saw and tried to incorporate that into the story.

"The book won't be appreciated widely, but people from the oilfield area of Oklahoma and Texas who lived during this time frame can relate and understand."

What binds the whole story together, Bulla said, is the oil rig itself. It's what all the characters involved have in common, and in some cases, it is the only thing they have in common.

At 60, Bulla doesn't really look old enough to be retired, but years of traveling and hassling at international airports finally wore thin.

He has worked in Indonesia, Africa, Scotland, England, The Netherlands, Germany and in six states including Alaska. He can name the 69 airports he has flown to and spent time in.

Back in his hometown after 20 years in eastern Texas and California, Bulla said he plans to stay busy on his computer. He is adding to some short stories started years ago while on the rigs, and has now started on his second book, a story that will take fictitious characters and events and put them in a time period starting at about 1817.

Bulla said the new book will chronicle the story of his mother's family from the time they left Ireland until they came to Oklahoma. He doesn't know when the book will be finished, but said he is enjoying the historical research involved.

For now, Bulla is busy trying to settle in a new environment and sell some of the 500 copies of "Roughnecks." He set up his own publishing company, DRB-ROUGHNECK Publishing Co., to ensure he has enough control and protection over the contents of his work, and which would allow it to be sold in bookstores and placed in libraries.

Pennzoil posts $11.5 million loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co., citing depressed oil and natural gas prices, reported a fourth-quarter loss of $11.5 million, compared to earnings of $92.4 million in the same period a year ago.

The Houston-based energy company noted the year-ago figures reflected a pretax gain of $171.6 million from the sale of Chevron Co. stock.

The loss per share in the October-December period of 1994 was 25 cents, compared to earnings per share of $2.01 in the 1993 quarter.

Revenues totaled $657.4 million, down 16.8 percent from $790.8 million in the 1993 period.

"Pennzoil's results reflect a large number of nonrecurring charges, the decline in oil prices and the sharp decline in natural gas prices," James L. Pate, Pennzoil chairman and chief executive officer, said.

For the year, Pennzoil reported a loss of $288.7 million, compared with earnings of $141.9 million in 1993.

"Charges in 1994 related to the settlement of the tax dispute with the Internal Revenue Service, the resolution of long-standing litigation, and the sale of our sulphur operations and other nonstrategic assets," Pate said. "Lower oil and gas prices reduced operating income approximately $100 million."

Costilla completes Fusselman strikes

COSTILLA PETROLEUM CORP., Midland, has completed two Fusselman gas discoveries in Howard County.

The No. 1 Talbot "40," 15 miles north of Big Spring, was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 7,750 Mcfd from perforations 8,665 to 8,680 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons of acid.

Scheduled as a 9,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,691 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 2,148 ft. from north and 2,292 ft. from east lines of Section 40, Block 32, T-2-N, T&P survey, Abst. 1373.

Costilla also tested the No. 1 Bynum "46," nine miles north of Big Spring, for a calculated absolute open flow of 5,400 Mcfd from perforations 8,667 to 8,685 ft.

Permitted as a 9,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,688 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 1,673 ft. from north and 890 ft. from west lines of Section 46, Block 32, T-2-N, T&P survey, Abst. 1507.

YATES PETROLEUM CORP. has tested two Canyon discoveries in Eddy County, N.M., 31 miles northwest of Carlsbad.

On potential test, the No. 3 Anemone "ANE" Federal pumped 411 barrels of crude, 684 Mcfd and 2,245 barrels of water from Canyon perforations 8,106 to 8,156 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFe acid.

Total depth was 8,700 ft., where seven inch casing was set, and the well was plugged back to 8,250 ft.

Location is 810 ft. from north and 1,930 ft. from east lines of Section 9, T22s, R24e.

The No. 2 Anemone Federal was completed to pump 411 barrels of crude, 684 Mcfd and 2,245 barrels of water from perforations 8,106 to 8,8156 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFe acid.

Drilled to 8,700 ft., where seven inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 8,250 ft.

Location is 1,090 ft. from north and 840 ft. from west lines of Section 9, T22s, R24e.

Atoka gas opened in Lea County field

A plugback operation has opened the Southeast Lusk (Atoka) field in Lea County, N.M.

FINA OIL & CHEMICAL CO. tested the No. 1 Federal "HH-33" for a calculated absolute open flow of 2,197 Mcfd. Production was natural from perforations 12,040 to 12,049 ft.

Originally drilled to 12,850 ft., the well was plugged back to 12,400 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 12,820 ft.

Location is 1,680 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 33, T10s, R32e.

The well was originally completed in an undesignated zone, tested to flow 27 barrels of crude and 828 Mcfd from Morrow perforations 12,545 to 12,552 ft.

Atoka gas strike finaled in Lea

MITCHELL ENERGY CORP., with recompletion of a Lea County, N.M. well, has gained an Atoka gas discovery

The No. 1 McKittrick "30" Federal tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 460 Mcfd from perforations 10,540 to 10,592 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,500 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe acid.

Drilled to 11,660 ft., the well was plugged back to 11,225 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 2,285 ft. from west lines of Section 30, T22s, R26e.

Penn Reef find flows 82 barrels

A Pennsylvanian Reef discovery has been recorded in Scurry County, offsetting 2,350 ft. Clearfork production in the Sharon Ridge field and two miles south of similar production in the Gill field, 1.5 miles west-northwest of Ira.

SHARP IMAGE ENERGY finaled the No. 1 Ira West to flow 82 barrels of 38 gravity crude and 84 Mcfd on an 11/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 265 psi. The well flowed from perforations 7,117 to 7,128 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

Scheduled as a 7,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,128 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,117 ft.

The well topped the San Andres at 1,456 ft., Clearfork at 2,240 and Wolfcamp at 4,557 ft. on ground elevation of 2,285 ft.

Location is 2,500 ft. from north and 1,827 ft. from east lines of Section 121, Block 97, H&TC survey.

PARALLEL PETROLEUM CORP. of Midland has announced the completion of a discovery well, the No. 2 Germer-Sample, in Jackson County, onshore the Texas Gulf Coast, utilizing data developed by 3-D seismic imaging.

The well has a current sales rate of 1.8 million cubic feet of natural gas and 236 barrels of condensate per day on a 9/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,800 psi.

The open flow potential of the well was calculated at 13.6 Mmcfd and 1,687 barrels of condensate per day. The production is from perforations made in an eight-foot interval from 9,580 to 9,588 ft. in the Downdip Expanded Yegua Trend.

Parallel owns a 17.5 percent working interest in the well before payout and a 13.125 percent working interest thereafter. Parallel's net revenue interest is 13.125 percent before payout and 9,844 percent thereafter. Privately held Cox & Perkins Exploration Inc. of Houston is the operator.

Parallel further announces that two other exploratory wells are being drilled on locations identified through the use of 3-D seismic technology. The No.1 Molinar is currently drilling in Wharton County, also onshore the Texas Gulf Coast, with the Expanded Yegua Trend as its objective at approximately 9,300 ft. Parallel owns a 20 percent working interest in the well. Additionally, the company said the No. 1 Red Raider is drilling toward a combined Wolfcamp/Granite Wash objective at approximately 5,300 ft. in Oldham County in the Texas Panhandle. Parallel owns a 25 percent working interest in the well.

MEETINGS

WTGS schedules Tuesday meeting

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesay at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Gerry Calhoun of New Paradigm Exploration in Midland, who will speak on "Oil to Soil Fluorescence: A Vital Link."

Cost is $7 per person and reservations can be made by calling 683-1573.

IPAA past president addresses API group

John Rex Jones, past president, Independent Petroleum Association of America, will be the guest speaker at Thursday's meeting of the Permian Basin chapter, American Petroleum Institute. The meeting will be at the Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 1:30 a.m.

Jones will speak on "The Future of the Independent Oil Producer" and pass along information learned at the 1995 National IPAA conference in Washington, D.C.

Cost is $15 and reservations should be made by noon Wednesday by calling 684-5282.

Well loggers host Texas Tech director

The Permian Basin Well Logging Society will meet Thursday at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Dr. George Asquith, director of the Center for Applied Petrophysical Studies at Texas Tech University will present a talk on "The Recognition of Possible Oil and Water Wettability Changes in the Permian Delaware Mountain Group Sandstones from Petrophysical Well Logs."

He will employ crossplotted log data and relative permeability data to estimate wettability in Delaware Mountain Group sandstones. His findings suggest that wettability in the Delaware can vary greatly and may be a major factor in determining whether a Delaware sand unit will produce significant hydrocarbon or water.

Cost is $11 for members, $13 for non-members. Reservations can be made by calling 694-9561.

SPE computer users discuss upgrading

The Computer Users Group of the Permian Basin chapter, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will meet Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Speaker Jeffrey Jackson will discuss "Upgrading Your Computer." He will present a look at the various choices facing the owner of an aging computer. Upgrading a system, he says, may be as simple as adding a few RAM chips or as complex as replacing the motherboard. Topics covered will include: Is it worth upgrading? as well as compatability, choices, data transfer, recommended configurations, pricing of components and safety procedures.

Cost is $12 per person. Reservations should be made by 9 a.m. Thursday by calling 686-7329.

Land Office hosts alternative fuels fair

Phillips raises capacity at plastics plant

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. will increase its polyethylene production capacity by 22 percent at its Houston Chemical Complex to meet growing demand, the company said.

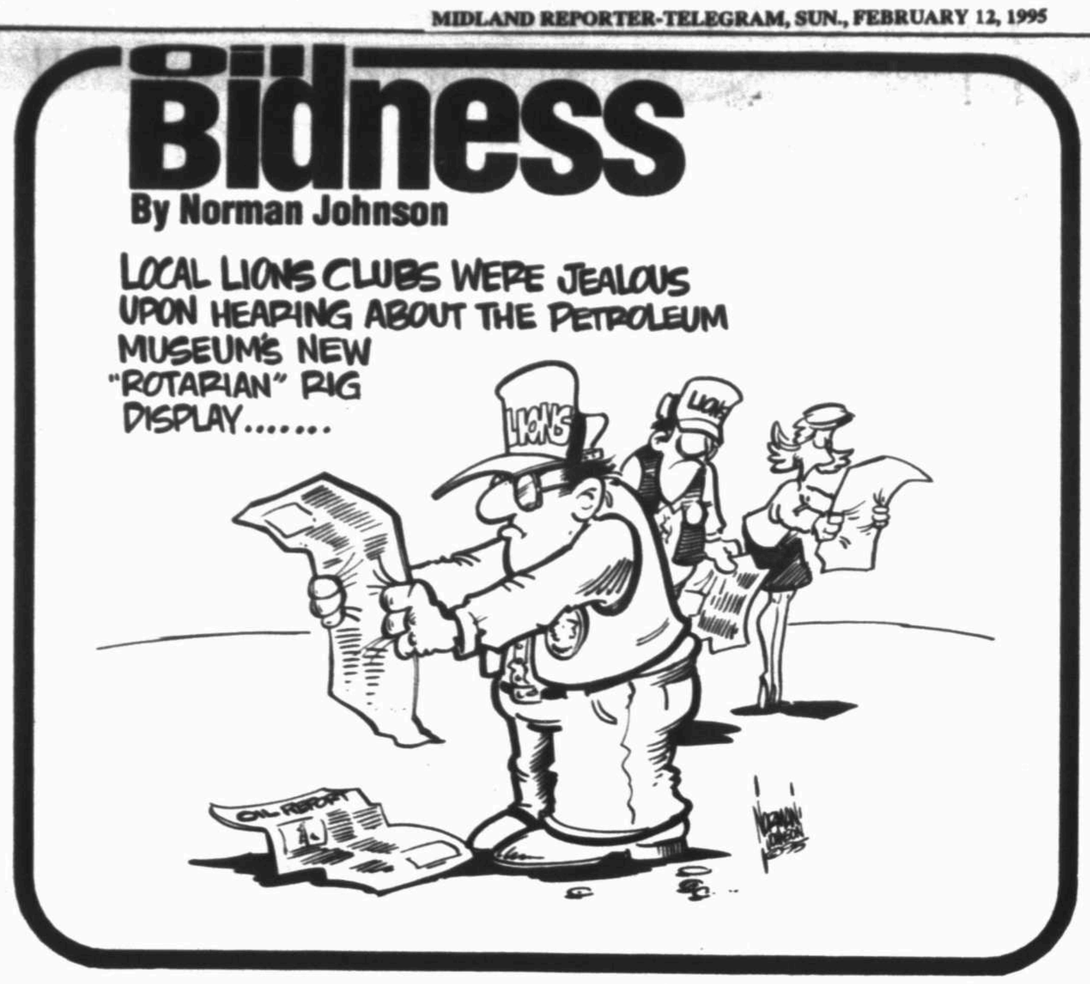

The Pasadena plant will add 400 million pounds of production capacity to 2.2 billion pounds a year.

Polyethylene is used to make products such as milk jugs and plastic pipe. Demand has increased at least 7 percent a year since 1990, and the supply has nearly reached its limit to satisfy the market, said Don Brady, polyethylene manager for Phillips.

"We're forecasting growth to continue, but at a somewhat slower rate for the next few years," Brady said.

Work to increase production capacity will begin next month and should be finished by 1997. Phillips said the work will not interrupt regular production.

Phillips did not disclose the cost of the project.

Partners plan storage facility

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Williams Underground Storage Co. and HNG Storage Co. announced plans to jointly develop a natural gas storage plant in Kiowa County, Kan.

Williams Underground is a part of Tulsa-based Williams Companies Inc.

The 5.6 billion cubic feet facility would consist of 16 gas storage caverns leached in bedded salt, and related pipeline and compression facilities.

After receiving regulatory approval, the project will be built in four phases, the companies said. The first phase is scheduled for completion by the 1996 heating season. The remaining phases should be completed in seven-month increments, and the project should be running at full capacity by late 1998.

The facility will provide direct access to gas supplies and markets on the systems of ANR, Northern Natural Gas, Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line and Williams Natural Gas, the companies said.

Mesa narrows quarterly loss

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Inc. says it narrowed its loss in the fourth quarter from the year-earlier period, which included a sizeable litigation settlement.

For the three months ended Dec. 31, Mesa lost $14.3 million, or 22 cents per share, the company said Tuesday. That's up from a loss of $43.4 million, or $1.06 per share, in the fourth quarter of 1993, which included a $42.75 million litigation settlement.

Revenues, mostly from natural gas and natural gas liquids, rose 5 percent, from $65.2 million to $68.6 million.

For all of 1994, Mesa lost $83.4 million, or $1.42 per share, on revenue of $228.7 million. Mesa's loss was $102.4 million, or $2.61 per share, on revenue of $222.2 million in 1993.

The Dallas-based company said its 1994 total production increased 11 percent, or 12.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas equivalents. That higher production more than offset lower natural prices, the company said.

The increased production was mainly from Mesa's Hugoton field properties.

Oklahoma, horizontal drilling don't mix

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Horizontal drilling wouldn't offer much enhanced recovery in Oklahoma oilfields, but it could be used to improve results in some areas of the state, two researchers have concluded.

"Success with horizontal drilling depends on where existing wekls are located relative to the structure of the reservoir," said petroleum engineer Roy Knapp.

Knapp and geologist James Forgotson, both researchers at the University of Okahoma, studied the potential for horizontal drilling in the state after small drilling booms were reported elsewhere when operators used the different approach.

Horizontal wells generally start out as vertical wells but are diverted directionally to enter geologic formations horizontally to expose more oil and gas bearing rocks to the open hole and to increase drainage.

The horizontal drilling has been strong in the Austin Chalk formation of south Texas and the Baaken Shale fomration in North Dakota.

Forgotson said the wells were successful because they penetrated multiple sets of unconnected fractures and allowed higher production rates.

Southern Loving

I Love Southern Women

By Gary Ott

The first time I can remember realizing that southern women were truly special was back in the summer of 1965. I was 13 years old, having just joined the ranks of America's teenagers.

We were headed east on a winding two-lane blacktop highway lined by tall pine trees that were being swayed every so slightly by an early-evening breeze. According to the latest road sign, we were exactly eight miles west of Augusta, Ga.

The new Chevrolet, which had a dark blue interior and white wall tires, seated the five of us very comfortably. Joining me in the roomy backseat were my two male cousins, one a year older than I, the other a year younger. Up front, on the righthand side, was my older sister. And, to her left, driving the car, was the "special southern woman" in question, my Aunt Erline, who at the time had spent all 35 years of her life in the small towns of East Georgia and western South Carolina.

Aunt Erline, who was quite pretty and always quick with the hug, had agreed to give the other grown-ups a break that night by taking the four kids to a movie "up the road in Augusta."

But instead of being a stuffy chaperone, she cut loose and became one of the gang. She let us turn up the radio full blast when Bob Dylan's "Like a Rolling Stone" came on and she actually joined the debate about what he seemed to be trying to figure out what his words really meant.

She later suggested that upon arriving in the big city of Augusta, before going to the theater, we might want to

I Love Southern Men

By Mary Frances Beverley

I can't help it. I've been this way ever since a slow-talkin' Mississippi boy turned my young heart to mush long, long ago. I love Southern men.

I love the way they treat women, the way a Southern man who is taking me out greets me at my front door. I know the first words I'm going to hear are how nice I look. Flattery? Not a bit. The words of this Southern ritual tell me how the whole evening is going to go.

I like the way Southern men open doors to cars and buildings. Those early memories of their fathers and grandfathers hover ever close.

I like it when they hold chairs for me to sit down at a table, stand up when I leave the room and again when I return. I like it when they stand whenever any other woman enters the room or stops by our table at a restaurant. Oh, Southern men, you are beautiful.

I know in advance that a real Southern man will walk me to my car, ask me

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Couple honored with pre-nuptial parties

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

Our congratulations and best wishes to Trish Humes and Phillip Speight, who returned to their hometown to be married Saturday evening at St. Luke's United Methodist church. After a wedding trip to Vail, Colo., they will be at home in Houston.

McKnight-Harrison

Pre-nuptial festivities for Trish and Phillip began last August when the couple's parents, Pat and Parker Humesand Phyllis and Carl Speight, hosted an engagement party at the Humes home. The following evening, a dinner honored the couple at the home of Irene and Alois Munzer. The other hosts were Becky and Jack Huff, Iris and John foster, Jr., Joann and John Foster, Judy and Walter Rankin and Raye Ann and Boley Embrey.

In November, Trish was feted with a Christmas shower at the home of Eleanor (Mrs. Mike) Morse. Co-hostesses were Carole (Mrs. Terry) Clay, Jane (Mrs. Gary Garlitz and Sally Mogford.

In January, the pair was honored at a couples' miscellaneous shower in the Houston home of Christina Vargo. Also hosting were former Midlanders Tracey Hardy and Margaret (Mrs. Larry) Whitfill.

The wedding week began with a tea Thursday afternoon at the Humes home. Hosting were the mothers of the couple and Trish's grandmother, Virginia (Mrs. Billie) Gilbert.

Trish and her attendants were honored at a manicure party Friday morning at Head West. Hostesses were Phillips' sisters-in-law, Janice (Mrs. Paul) Speight, Becky (Mr. Carl) Speight and Connie (Mrs. Mike) Speight.

That afternoon, a bridesmaids luncheon was given for Trish at the Racquet Club. The hostesses were Trish's sisters, Paige (Mrs. Philip) LeMasters of Kirksville, Mo., and Pam Humes, and her aunts, June (Mrs. Rex) Timms of Irving and Dorice (Mrs. Tom) Worley. Concluding the day's events was the rehearsal dinner hosted by the groom's parents at the Plaza Club.

A wedding day brunch was given at the home of Becky and Doug Ferguson. Also hosting were Joan and Pat Baskin, Sarah and David Grimes and Sue and Ted Kerr.

THE SANTA RITA CLUB, volunteer arm of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, held its annual winter dinner recently at the Petroleum Club of Midland.

Both Bob Leibrock, head of the museum's board of trustees, and Bill Snyder, club president, addressed the group. Musical entertainment was provided by The Dusty Dollies of Odessa.

Host couples were Joyce and Jack Hauke and Tommie and Forrest Underwood.

Among those seen at the event were Joyce and John Hammett, Helen and Pat Fletcher, Doris and George Welsh, Ann and Marvin Harges and Wanda and Elton Ramsey.

MIDLANDERS TURNED OUT in full force the evening of Feb. 4 to join in St. Ann's School's Mardi Gras Celebration '95 at Midland Country club.

As guests arrived, they were welcomed by the Dixieland music of the West Texas Brass. The partygoers had a wonderful time, dancing to the music of the band, The Project of Dallas, dining on New Orleans cuisine and taking part in a silent auction of unique items.

Mardi Gras colors of purple, gold and green were featured in the decorations. Tables held sequined masks and bouquets of balloons with twinkling lights, nestled in metallic tissue. The ballroom featured a false ceiling of balloons with streamers.

In the serving area, an ice sculpture of a court jester was the conversation piece. The menu featured Blackened Red Snapper, Seafood Etoufee over rice and Carved Beef Round with Au Jus and horseradish and a delicious array of salads, vegetables and desserts, including the traditional Mardi Gras King Cake.

According to chairman Judy (Mrs. Mike) Canon, response to the gala was overwhelming. Proceeds from the celebration which culminated Catholic School Week activities at St. Ann's are earmarked for the school's Endowment Fund

Among those seen in the crowd were Ann and Bill Kleine, Janet and Lon Kile, Barbara and Don O'Shaughnessy, Mary Jo Drury, Drs. Carolyn and Joseph Rhode, Louise and Loyd Whitley and Anne and Joe Morris.

Marilyn McKnight-Harrison is social columnist for the Reporter-Telegram.

MEN: Courtesy of Southern men special

if I mind if he smokes, allow me to pass through a door first, offer a hand for me to step onto a high curb and extend a dozen other gestures that women who live elsewhere may never know, poor souls.

I appreciate it when a Southern man watches his language and doesn't tell me a shady joke without a gentle warning or even asking my permission. I don't worry he'll think me a prude. A real man lets me know that this attitude makes me more feminine, more of a lady, and, what's more, that he likes it.

I like to see a man remove his hat when he enters a restaurant or an elevator. It's a fading custom, but older Southern men can still be seen touching the brims of their hats and nodding gently to women as they pass by.

I like to listen to Southern men talk, their soft, mellow syllables as soothing as syrup. From Strom Thurmon to Jesse Helms, from my mechanic to an old lover, I've been known to believe their every word simply because they sound so good. Granted, it's a risky addiction, but I'm hooked.

I like the way a Southern man touches a woman he's fond of in public, his fingertips lightly brushing her waist, the gesture spelling all at once a tenderness and gentle protectiveness that is uniquely Southern. And where else can a man causally touch a woman he barely knows — to make a conversational point or to offer friendship — without her calling the sheriff?

A Southern man knows that touching is an attitude in the South and doesn't flinch when a female he's known a day or a year embraces him for a friendly hug. He's been hugged all of his life — by aunts, cousins, grandmothers, school teachers, his mother's friends.

I LIKE THE way a Southern man treats other women when he is with me, especially waitresses and others whose job is serving the public. He remembers what Henry Higgins told Eliza Doolittle about good manners: it isn't a matter of having bad or good manners but of "having the same manners for all human souls." He is as courteous to them as he is to me, and I don't mind when he addresses a waitress or any woman younger than he is as "Ma'am." Early habits endure.

Only Southern men understand that my parents gave me two names and that, like most of the other Mary Jos and Mary Janes in the South, I use both of them. The minute a man I've just met drops my middle name and calls me "Mary," I know this is no Southern boy. Even with all the Southern women who have moved up North and with Southern women with two names depicted on TV shows, most men from north of the Mason-Dixon line simply can't get the hang of it.

A southern man doesn't feel that his masculinity is threatened by a show of sentiment. He will talk with unashamed tenderness about memories of his grandmother's house or his first grade teacher. And he'll openly admit that his favorite song is "As Time Goes By."

SOUTHERN MEN know how to give wonderfully romantic gifts, for Valentine's Day or for any other time of the year: rings engraved with messages inside, books of poetry, flowers on small anniversaries or on no anniversary at all.

I like the fact that no matter how sophisticated he may appear, a Southern man doesn't try to hide the kid inside who grew up going to Sunday school. Even though these days there are some who may seldom occupy a pew, they show by the way they treat women — and everyone else — that they remember what they learned there.

Southern men are secure enough not to consider it a woman's job to: write a thank you note, clean up the kitchen, run the vacuum cleaner, change the baby or the sheets. And it didn't take the evolutionary switch of male/female roles to make them take on these tasks. They've been doing them for generations.

But I admit that sometimes it isn't a matter of geography. Men from places other than the South can certainly have good manners and treat women in that old-fashioned way we used to call "respect." Being a Southern man is having a quality, an attitude that men everywhere can have. And many do, bless 'em all.

Watching television hazardous to health

By Erma Bombeck

Have you heard of the latest diet plan to suppress your appetite? You just watch an hour of TV commercials before breakfast, lunch and dinner.

Bombeck

During that time you will be subjected to every disgusting body part you don't want to talk about — let alone treat.

As a reader pointed out, she watched a pitch for curing a vaginal yeast infection at breakfast, a man dealing with jock itch for lunch, and a loser with rectal problems just before dinner.

She didn't say how much weight she had lost, but she has certainly cut back on television viewing.

If you really have a lot to lose, watch the one with the small child picking up germs by sifting through a garbage can. You won't eat for a week.

When television was new, there were some maladies that were never discussed. Then they began to creep onto the airwaves. Advertisers whispered the word "diarrhea" and put white coats on actors so they could talk clinically about hemorrhoids. Soon, the term "embarrassing itching" became a table topic.

I know television commercials pay the bills, but I feel guilty running the disposal when a woman just took the pregnancy test and she and her husband are talking about their feelings and hopes while awaiting the results. It should be a mystical, personal moment — and I'm making garbage.

I don't know how commercials are scheduled, but I don't want to be eating meatballs just after I've seen a dirty litter box. Seeing my TV screen fill with roaches discourages me from a bowl of cereal with raisins. And I certainly don't want to be standing around at a party with a drink in my hand when a commercial for bladder protection comes on. The power of suggestion is very strong.

There are a couple of reasons we are getting more medical reality than we can handle. First, there are more people who rely on home remedies as an alternative to going to a doctor. Second, you can see it all on "ER" and "Chicago Hope" in prime time.

In retrospect, it seems incredible that I watched Dr. Welby and Ben Casey for years and never saw a body part or a drop of blood.

As for commercials, all they could give me back then was whiter teeth and an aspirin that raced to my bloodstream like a comet.

Maybe we caught all this new stuff from the commercials. Can you catch a yeast infection from a TV set?

Drug receives FDA approval

The drug, named Navelbine, is the first of its kind to receive FDA approval in 20 years.

WOMEN: Mischievous side gives Southern women special charm

(From 1G)

dine on Krystal Burgers, which had recently joined the fast-food war and was now viewed as the fashionable alternative to McDonald's.

But topping off the evening was the movie itself she agreed to let us see ... Woody Allen's latest release, the scandalously titled "What's New Pussycat?"

It was right then and there — as I glanced up at the flashing neon lights on the theater's marquee — that I learned an important lesson that would remain engrained in my brain for the rest of my life.

Southern women are indeed special. They are pretty. They are not afraid to have fun. And, most importantly, they have that mischievous side which allows them to push the prim-and-proper boundaries of conventionality.

This is not to imply, by any stretch of the imagination, that they are — shall we say — "loose" women. No, indeed. If anything, they are quite the opposite. It is just that they like to flirt. And, for whatever reason, they can do it better than most. It might be with a subtle wink here, or a sexy crossing of the legs there. But in any case, it comes out natural. There is nothing phony about a southern woman or her ability to make a man — regardless of which part of the country he comes from — feel like a million bucks.

Need I say more?

Perhaps not, but I will anyway. For it is that lilting sound, with its almost rhythmic accent, that has come to best signify the southern woman.

When she speaks, it is all a normal, red-blooded male can do to keep from melting at the knees. And when she adds a hearty laugh or a casual touching of the man's knee with her hand, the southern woman becomes all the more lethal.

Probably the most often asked question about this phenomenon is: "Does the southern woman realize what kind of effect she is having on men?"

One group says, "Absolutely not. What you see is what you get. There is nothing contrived."

The other group says, "That may be true. But these women are no fools. They can tell when a man is melting. And they love every minute of it."

As for me, I say, "Who cares? The fun is in the melting, and no one can make it happen better than southern women.

Fashion designers segue into furnishings

By Julie Hatfield
N.Y. Times News Service

Having designed jeans to death, Calvin Klein is switching to something new: sheets, towels and furniture.

When his new home collection hits stores this fall, Klein will become the latest in a large group of fashion designers who have branched out from designs for the body to designs for the home. Mary McFadden, Bill Blass and Liz Claiborne each have collections of designer sheets. Ralph Lauren designs furniture befitting a country squire. And other designers like Eileen Fisher are waiting on the sidelines, hankering to jump into the fray and try their hand at designing a fashionable towel or two.

"I'm desperate to do things for the home," says Fisher. "The fact that fashion designers want to do this is because it's about lifestyle, which is more encompassing than just clothes."

Indeed, designers have moved so far into the design mainstream that Filene's reports that at least 50percent of all the sheets, towels and bedding on store shelves has a designer label on it. And as another sign of how far swear designer Alexander Julian was named chairman of the annual International Design Conference in Aspen, Colo. It was the first time a fashion designer was asked to be chairman.

HERE'S WHAT a few fashion designers are offering for your home:

■ Ralph Lauren: Lauren launched his home collection in 1983, and unveiled a lower-priced Ralph home collection in 1994. The reason the fashion designer got into home design, according to his publicity director, Ann Randall, is because "except for the antiques, he wasn't finding the things he wanted for his own homes, so he began to design them himself."

There is sometimes a close connection between each season's clothing line and the home design. For instance, when Ralph came out with his Cottages and Castles home collection last fall based on British looks, his clothing, too, reflected the velvets, plaids and mohairs, even a chain-mail-like silver leather, of medieval England and the English and Scottish countryside. For spring, Lauren introduces a home collection under the name Ralph. Called Spectator, the sheets, towels and furniture will be done in the same pinks, yellows and whites that he used in his spring clothing collection for Ralph.

Sample prices: Bath towel in Ralph line, $13. Ralph Lauren sheets, $75 each. Upholstered chair, $2,700. Metal queen-size bed, $4,185. Armoire. $13,425.

■ Geoffrey Beene Beene has just designed a group of 20th-century pieces of furniture, lamps, objects and upholstery fabric for Architectura, a Greene Street furniture store in New York.

BEENE'S LAMPS, tables and chairs are very graphic, with much of his furniture done up in black lacquer with silver leaf. The pieces mirror Beene's fashions, which are largely black and white, with silver fabrics always used in each collection.

Sample prices: Beene pillows, $150 to $300. Pyramid lamps with faux leopard shades, $540 in aluminum, $600 in maple. Chairs, benches and dining tables, all in the lacquer, black and silver leaf detailing, are $750 to $4,000.

■ Alexander Julian. Not only is Julian delving into sheets, towels and upholstery fabric, but the designer has gotten into furniture too, introducing his first furniture collection in October at the High Point, N.C., furniture market.

Julian is known for his exuberant use of color in menswear fabrics, so much so that his line is called Colours. Julian uses purple, red, turquoise and other nontraditional colors for his menswear, but always with a sense of style and classicism. The same is true for his upholstery, wall colors and draperies.

Many of his home furnishings make use of menswear touches like argyle, wingtip shoes and tortoise-shell buttons. Julian describes his new user-friendly furniture as "neckties to curl up on."

Sample Prices: Two Julian pillow cases, $20. Queen-size sheet and mattress cover, $75. Duvet cover, $150. Dining chair, $365. Leather sofa, $3,000.

Aggressive job seekers have good results

By L.M. Sixel
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — Aggressive job seekers often find jobs faster than meek ones. Using that logic, Jeff Royston thinks he should be very successful.

Royston was at Houston's Hobby Airport one morning recently, handing out his resume to people waiting for airplanes. The 25-year-old man is looking for a marketing job or management trainee position, and he figures that business people who fly are in the position to give him work.

Royston, who lives in the Houston suburb of Sugar Land, said the technique worked when he was looking for a job in Austin. He handed his resume to a vice president of 3M Corp. and got a temporary customer service representative job that recently ran out.

Royston figures more business leaders fly through Houston than Austin, so he expects to have better luck here. Wearing dress slacks, dress shoes, a white shirt and tie, he said he so far had handed out 1,700 resumes and had six interviews lined up as a result, including positions as warehouse and retail management trainees.

"It's just one of the ways I'm looking for permanent work," said Royston, who has a bachelor's degree in business and has been in the job market for three weeks. He is also calling friends, going to temporary employment agencies and dropping resumes at companies.

"For the time it takes, it's really not a bad way to search for a job," he said.

Jack Bradshaw agreees. Royston is probably getting better exposure than writing a bunch of letters, said Bradshaw, managing director of A.T. Kearney, a headhunting firm.

Lois Crowley, director of the jobs program at Northwest Assistance Ministries, isn't as bullish on the resume-at-the-airport scheme. "Usually cutesy things like that don't work," said Crowley, who counsels job seekers.

A conservative corporation wouldn't go for that approach, she said. She admitted, however, that some people might be impressed with the gutsy scheme.

Get better home care for elderly parents

By ANDREE BROOKS
N.Y. Times News Service

Helen Lisefski, 78, had gone from the living room to the sun porch of her daughter's home in Rye, N.Y., dozens of times, so when she tripped there last year following a series of other mishaps, it became clear she could never live alone again.

Her daughter, Rosemary Casson, then began a frantic search for home support services. But, she said, "We didn't know what to do."

More and more adult children are likely to face similar problems in the future. There are now some 33 million Americans 65 years or older, and that number is expected to double in the next 35 years, according to the Census Bureau. One-third live alone, sometimes into their 80s and 90s.

It's small wonder that as early as 1987 a congressional committee on aging predicted that adults, women in particular, would soon be spending more years caring for elderly parents than for their own children. The demands could grow even more intense, experts are warning now, if hospitals continue to discharge patients sooner than has been customary in the past.

A growing awareness of all these factors is already changing the universe of home help. Because both insurance companies and the federal government are demanding that families increasingly rely on home-based care, the range and availability of home support services are expanding rapidly. And so Mrs. Casson's search turned out to be easier than she had expected.

In addition to nursing services, help can be obtained for cooking, cleaning, laundry, bathing, dressing and other daily needs. There are transportation services, centers for the elderly, medication delivery services, meals on wheels, shopping escorts, live-in or 24-hour aides who work in shifts, bill-paying help, regular checkup calls by telephone and companion visits.

Laura Aronowitz is one of these companions. A former secretary at the United Nations, she now works as a companion for the elderly with Selfhelp Community Services of New York, a nonprofit agency. She spends about four hours a week with each client, visiting between two and four times. She has been trained to handle personal tasks like bathing, shaving and dressing.

"I read to them if their sight's failing," she said. "We talk about current events. Sometimes we go to a movie or out shopping."

To help navigate this dizzying array of services, a new level of intervention has also sprung up — the case or care manager. This type of helper is usually someone with a social work or nursing background who provides an initial evaluation, then helps the family make a selection based on their needs and what they can afford.

"The worst mistake most families make is waiting until there's a crisis," said David Stern, executive vice president of the Jewish Association for Services for the Aged (JASA), a New York-based nonprofit agency. "Then they rush to sign up with a particular service without the proper overall assessment."

"I read to them if their sight's failing. We talk about current events. Sometimes we go to a movie or out shopping."

— Laura Aronowitz
elderly companion

He recommends finding and signing up a care manager whom the family likes and trusts when an elderly parent begins to appear frail. The care manager may be provided by a social services agency like JASA or hired privately. That person often becomes the family's trusted adviser.

A good first step in looking for services is to call the local municipal office on aging, which is listed in the blue pages of the telephone book. At the least it can normally provide a list of home support services (including those offering care management) in the area.

Some of the services will normally be available for people of any age. Many religious organizations can also help.

Families who can afford it may prefer to call the National Association of Professional Geriatric Care Managers, 602-881-8008, an eight-year-old organization based in Tucson, Ariz., with some 650 members nationwide. For $25 (payable by credit card over the phone) it will send a complete list of its members. Private managers charge about $75 an hour, and about an hour and a half is normally needed for an assessment.

With three daughters under age 8 and a part-time job, Mrs. Casson was too busy to do all the research herself — and she could afford a private care manager. So far, Mrs. Casson has paid $1,500 for help that has included an evaluation and appraisal; help in selecting services; support and counseling for herself, and help completing the application forms and filling out the mountain of insurance forms (health insurance has helped pay for some of the actual services).

These helpers made it possible for Mrs. Lisefky to stay with her daughter for several months. When it became necessary for her to move her into a nearby nursing home temporarily, the care manager helped evaluate alternatives.

For the more affluent, private long-term-care insurance policies are beginning to cover a wider range of in-home services. Some even cover the cost of a private care manager.

Home support workers usually cost from $8 to $16 an hour. But there are cost-sharing programs, aimed at households with incomes that are modest but still exceed the Medicaid limits. JASA uses a sliding scale.

Vivian Sirianni, 85, who has a heart condition and lives alone in an apartment in New Britain, Conn., has paid for her services with a cost-sharing mix. Last year, when she went for a hip replacement, she was afraid she would need a nursing home. But a statewide care management agency, Connecticut Community Care Inc., of Bristol, which she had found through a social worker, helped maintain her independence.

The agency sent in a helper three to five hours a day at $7 an hour. And Mrs. Sirianni says she is teaching the helper, Patty Jones, to cook Italian-style, "just like I like it."

Mexican foods can be healthy

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

At first glance, the menu at your favorite Mexican restaurant looks fairly healthful. You feel confident when you order beans, rice and meatless or seafood enchiladas.

Don't be fooled. It pays to look a little closer. The following points will help you order wisely.

Tortillas, the foundation of Mexican cooking, are fairly nutritious on their own. It's how they're filled and cooked that makes the nutritional difference.

Scan the menu to find nonfried offerings. For example, look for a burrito, the baked (and healthier) version of the deep-fried chimichanga.

When you crave fried foods, ask that they be cooked in vegetable oil (which contains polyunsaturated fats) instead of lard, which has saturated fat.

Go easy on the fried tortilla chips and salsa.

Request that the amount of cheese (queso) in your entree be halved, or that a lower-fat cheese be substituted. Cheesy, meatless dishes are often higher in fat than meat entrees.

Avoid entrees that are swimming in creamy or cheesy sauces. Even if they're made with low-fat chicken or seafood, the sauce may negate any fat savings.

Limit indulgences. If you have a high-fat favorite, order a small portion as part of a combination plate that offers predominantly healthful choices.

Put together your own nutritious combination plate from a la carte or side-dish menu sections.

DEAR ABBY

In order to be loved, first you must love and be loving

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We spent last weekend with our son, his wife and their children. On their bulletin board was one of your columns, dated Feb. 11, 1978. It was wonderful! Please run it again. — PATRICIA McCARTHY McDERMOTT, BELLEVUE, WASH.

Van Buren

DEAR PATRICIA: Thank you. It was one of my better ones, and here it is:

DEAR READERS: Tuesday is St. Valentine's Day, so don't say you weren't tipped off in time to come up with flowers, a Valentine, or a token of your affection for her — or him. But being lovable is a full-time job, so if you want to make yourself lastingly lovable, post this checklist where you can see it daily:

LADIES: Never ask him if he loves you, but tell him often that you love him. Never criticize him in public. If you have a criticism, offer it in the spirit of helpfulness — never in anger or as a put-down. Clip newspaper and magazine articles that might help him in his work — or perhaps a cartoon you think he'll enjoy. Don't bad-mouth his friends. Or worse yet, his family. (He can't pick his relatives.)

Every man needs a desk, a cupboard, a closet or nook to call his own. Don't try to "tidy it up," even though it's a mess of clutter and an eyesore. Never call him at work unless it's very important. If he eats (or drinks) too much, don't nag him about it. But do remind him in a loving way that you wish he'd take better care of himself because you want him to be around for a long, long time.

Develop some interests other than his. The more outside interests you have, the more fascinating he'll find you. Don't quiz him about where he's been, or who he saw when you weren't along. Never try to make him jealous. Never lie to him. Reserve the right to refuse to answer, but if you tell him something, be sure it's the truth.

Don't sulk. If something is bugging you, talk it out and clear the air. Surprise him occasionally. Leave a little love note on his pillow, with his lunch or taped to his bathroom mirror — it will warm his heart.

GENTLEMEN: Tell her you love her. If you like the way she looks, cooks, dresses, walks, talks, smells — let her know it. You can't compliment a woman too much. Never keep her waiting. If you know you're going to be late, call her and let her know.

Dig up a date for her lonely cousin. Remember your manners, and show your beloved the same respect and courtesy you give to those you don't know as well. Tell her she's prettier than her mother. In addition to remembering her on all traditional gift-giving occasions (her birthday, your anniversary, Christmas and Valentine's Day), surprise her with a small gift for no special reason. If she's flat-chested, and a 38-D walks by, pretend not to notice. Walk up behind her and plant a kiss on her neck for no reason at all.

Remember, cleanliness is next to godliness, so when you feel turned on, turn on the shower and jump in! When you're at a party together, never leave her alone while you're off entertaining someone else. Tell her she is absolutely the most wonderful person in the world — and she'll believe YOU are!

Now — both of you — if you want to be loved — love! It pays enormous dividends — and it won't cost you a dime.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps there's a doctor somewhere who will try one of my great ideas. For example, having writing tablets with a clever letterhead saying, "While waiting in Dr. Feelgood's outer office, I thought I'd drop you a line ..."

Abby, everybody owes somebody a letter — and patients in a waiting room would use these writing tablets in a minute!

Also, some exercise equipment — such as a stationary bike or a treadmill — in the waiting room would really make the time go quickly. Some patients might appreciate the opportunity to exercise. I can't be the only person who can't find time for writing letters or exercising.

What do you think, Abby? — FULL OF IDEAS

DEAR FULL: If people steal magazines that are six months old, how long do you think Dr. Feelgood's clever stationery would last?

Also, I doubt if people waiting to see a doctor are up to expending the energy to exercise. Further, I have yet to see the waiting room of a doctor or dentist that could accommodate exercise equipment.

DEAR ABBY: I am extremely allergic to most white fish. Sole is an exception that I occasionally enjoy, except when I fail to ask the waiter to inquire of the chef if it is truly sole — and not white-fish substitute.

Last night I forgot to ask at one of the most prestigious restaurants in town. Well, I spent the night itching and scratching, despite an antihistamine tablet, which I took too late.

I, and several thousands like me, would appreciate your advocacy concerning restaurants that substitute similar, but possibly lethal, food without informing their customers. — HIVING OUT IN L.A.

DEAR HIVING: The government's truth-in-labeling policy requires all eating establishments to identify substitutes. And you would be within your rights to report this "prestigious" restaurant to the Health Department. However, people with allergies, when dining out, should always ask if whatever they are allergic to is being served.

DEAR ABBY: My husband died several months ago. Is it proper for me to continue wearing my wedding ring? I have worn it for 36 years.

I hesitate to remove it, but I don't want to look foolish to others. Is there some rule of thumb concerning this? — PERPLEXED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR PERPLEXED: It is a very personal decision. There is no timetable for the length of time a widow should continue to wear her wedding ring, but those who wear theirs may give the impression that they have no interest in dating again.

In a previous column I have said: A widow who has no interest in looking for another mate may continue to wear her wedding ring on the third finger of her left hand; it will serve as a very effective "stop" sign should a single man find her attractive.

A widow who wants to date again will wisely switch her wedding band to her other hand, or retire it to the jewelry box.

For an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person, order "How to Be Popular." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. Postage is included.

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Aphids sometimes are best ignored

By Deborah A. Benge-Frost

Benge-Frost

Mild winter weather has been enjoyed by everybody, including many insects. One insect in particular that has not only basked in the balmy weather, but has literally proliferated, is the aphid.

According to "A Gardener's Dictionary," by Beard and McKie, the definition of aphid is: insect pest that inphests gardens and makes gardeners phoam at the mouth, stamp their pheet and utter phour-letter words. While this isn't the scientific definition, in term of the real world, it's pretty accurate.

Aphids are very small and go unnoticed most of the time. It's not until the "evidence" starts showing up that they get noticed. The evidence, of course, is the sticky, shiny substance that drifts onto cars, windows, pations and anything else that gets in the way. This sticky coating is thought to be plant sap by many, and indirectly it is. The sticky stuff is called honeydew, and it is excreted by aphids as they feed, so in a sense it is double-processed plant sap.

Aphids are kind of like greeting cards - there's one for every occasion. The species are numerous, but in general they are smaller than a pinhead, pale green or yellow in color and translucent in appearance. They hang out on the bottom side of leaves, buds and growing points of almost any kind of plant. If you've got a live oak in your landscape, chances are it's infested with a healthy aphid population. If there's an oak tree close to your driveway, I know you've noticed the results of aphids.

Actually the aphids have been hanging out on live oaks for quite some time, at least two months. The damage they are doing is minimal. If it weren't for the honeydew, most people would never know the aphids were even there. Since the trees are at their lowest level of activity and will be shedding their leaves in about a month, it's best to do nothing. In some cases of weakened trees, there is some light to heavy leaf shed, but even with leaf shed there's no emergency to spray the aphid.

Left alone beneficial parasitic insects may move into the area and reduce the aphid population. It could be that Lady Bird Beetles will be the ones to move in and take care of the problem without any help from man.

Keep an eye on the aphid situation. If they continue to get worse and beneficals don't move in, you may want to take control steps at the time of bud break. A hungry aphid population at the time new leaves are emerging can cause leaf distortion. If you see a big colony at the time old leaves are being pushed off, treatment could protect the new growth.

Not an emergency, but enough to make you phoam at the mouth, stamp your pheet and utter phour-letter words is when the honeydew excreted by the aphids finds your windshield as a target. Just a few hours parked near an infested tree can cause you to think it's time for an eye exam. If this is the case, and you are fighting the honeydew, spraying may be the best solution.

If control measures are warranted, there are several to try. Soaps, preferably insecticidal soaps or a summer weight oil (not domant oil) willdo a good job on aphids. Anytime you use an insecticidal soap or oil to control bugs, good spray coverage is essential to good control. Some insecticides you could try include diazinon (good spray cover important), acephate or dimethoate. Acephate and dimethoate have some systemic movement in the plant.

Aphids are hard to fight. They can reproduce without a male, give live birth, sprout wings when needed, reproduce at alarming rates and develop resistance to insecticides quicker than technology can develop them, so the small, innocent-looking aphid is not as innocent as it may seem. Nature is much better equipped to fight the aphid than we are, so don't fight the aphid unless you have to and then do it correctly.

French toast 'comforting' dish

Associated Press

Baked tomato French toast is an easy, comforting breakfast or brunch dish that comes together in about 30 minutes. Sliced tomatoes crown layers of bread, Canadian bacon and tangy cheese. The dish bakes together with eggs and half-and-half.

BAKED TOMATO FRENCH TOAST

3 large (1½ pounds) fresh tomatoes
16 slices (8 ounces) ¼-inch thick firm white bread, crusts removed
2 tablespoons butter, melted
12 slices (about 8 ounces) Canadian bacon
2 cups shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
8 eggs
3 cups half-and-half
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

Core tomatoes. Cut off a thin slice from the top and bottom of each tomato; reserve for another use. Cut each tomato into four slices; set aside.

In a 15x10x1-inch baking pan place bread in a single layer, cutting to fit, if necessary. Using a pastry brush, lightly brush bread with butter; turn slices over so buttered side is against the pan. Arrange Canadian bacon over bread; sprinkle with 1¾ cups of the cheese; set aside.

In a large bowl lightly beat eggs with half-and-half, salt and black pepper until blended; slowly pour over bread and cheese. Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 350-degree F oven until nearly firm, about 15 minutes. Arrange reserved tomato slices over the top; bake until set, about 8 minutes. Sprinkle with remaining ¼ cup cheese; cut into squares and serve. Makes 6 servings.

Allison Butts as Cinderella, right photo, is surrounded by her stepsisters, Amanda Rambo, left and Tami Glenn, right and stepmother, Nancy Lovett. Matt Logan, from left ,the wine steward, Camilla Blain, Ryan Toomire, Allison Butts, Christopher White and David Hinson, chef, prepare for a ball scene in the Globe's production of "Cinderella." The musical is on stage through Feb. 19 at the Odessa theater.

'Cinderella'

ODESSA - Magic, a fairy godmother and young love weave a spell for West Texas audiences during the production of Rodgers andHammerstein's "Cinderella," on stage at the Globe of the GreatSouthwest at Odessa College through Feb. 19.

"Rodgers and Hammerstein have followed the original French version," said director Carlene Wadley. "It is delightful."

Playing the starring roles are two Permian High School students. Alison Butts, 16, is Cinderella ; Ryan Toomire, 15, is the prince.

"The prince and Cinderella are just lovely and look the way you would think a young prince and Cinderella would look. She's very wide eyed and innocent."

Also in the cast are several Midlanders, including Charles Poisall, Beca Poisall, Joyce Poisall, Joshua LeFevre, Allen Eskew, Robin Salars and Kathy Salars.

"It's a cast of about 45 people of all ages from 7 up toabout 50," Mrs. Wadley said. "It's not a children's production.

It's a regular Broadway -type show."

Tickets, priced at $8 for adults, $6 for seniors and studentsand $5 for each member of a group of 15 or more, may be reserved bycalling 1-915-332-1586.

The musical "Cinderella" was originally written for television in 1965 with Julie Andrews in the starring role. Later it wasperformed on Broadway and again for television with Leslie Ann Warren in the title role.

"What I love about the Broadway show over the televisionproduction is that they often cut things on television and theyleft most of the really good dialogue out of the TV production," Mrs. Wadley said. "They centered it around the music. The king and queen scenes were cut to almost nothing for the televisionproduction. The story has a humorous and very delightful chubbyking."

A stage production offers its own hurdles to overcome.

"Things you can do on screen and even on TV are more difficult on stage," Mrs. Wadley said. "In this case, the magic -- making things appear and disappear. We will be using a lot ofspecial affects to make those things happen."

And the horses to pull the coach have to be considered aswell.

"We will be using at least one real horse on stage," Mrs. Wadley said. "We decided we probably couldn't get two."

The horse, Cameo, is a miniature.

"In order to make this really delightful for the children, we're using a miniature from the Tiner Horse Farms. They breed and show miniature horses."

The unpredictability of using live animals can greatly complicate stage productions.

"I put a lot of prayer into these kinds of things," Ms. Wadley said.

She recalled just such a complication in the Globe production of "Two By Two" she directed several years back.

"It's the story of Noah and we used a lot of animals on stage. We had bunny rabbits, all of the same sex, so I wouldn't have any problem."

Too late, the cast was to discover the rabbits were not all the same gender.

"Those little bunny rabbits decided to do their thing on stage. The cast members who could see what was happening were having a really difficult time keeping a straight face. So, we have had some interesting things."

For the past four seasons, Mrs. Wadley has been directing productions at the Globe. Her background includes studying voice at Indiana University and studying. theater at Christian Theological Seminary. She was a member of the Indiana Repertory Theater and has sung under the baton of such conductors as Tibor Kozma and Don Th. Jaeger, conductor of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Inc.,while he was in Midland, Mich.

She and her husband, Tim, who plays the French horn andconducts, were on the staff of Liberty Christian College,Pensacola, Fla., when they received a telephone call to come andinterview in Odessa for a job developing a fine arts program for alocal church.

"We were excited about fine arts being developed, and we moved here for that purpose," Mrs. Wadley said. "Every chance weget, we try to plug the fine arts overall." Fine arts in generaland the Globe in particular, "desperately need more people tofinance the arts and to work whether it's doing costumes or raisingmoney. We will try to help back it if it's fine arts in the Permian Basin."

The Wadleys teach classes at Parker Heights Christian Churchand are involved in the music program at Redeemer Lutheran Church.In addition, he works for Texas Roofing Company.

"Tim enjoys being on stage as well as directing," Mrs.

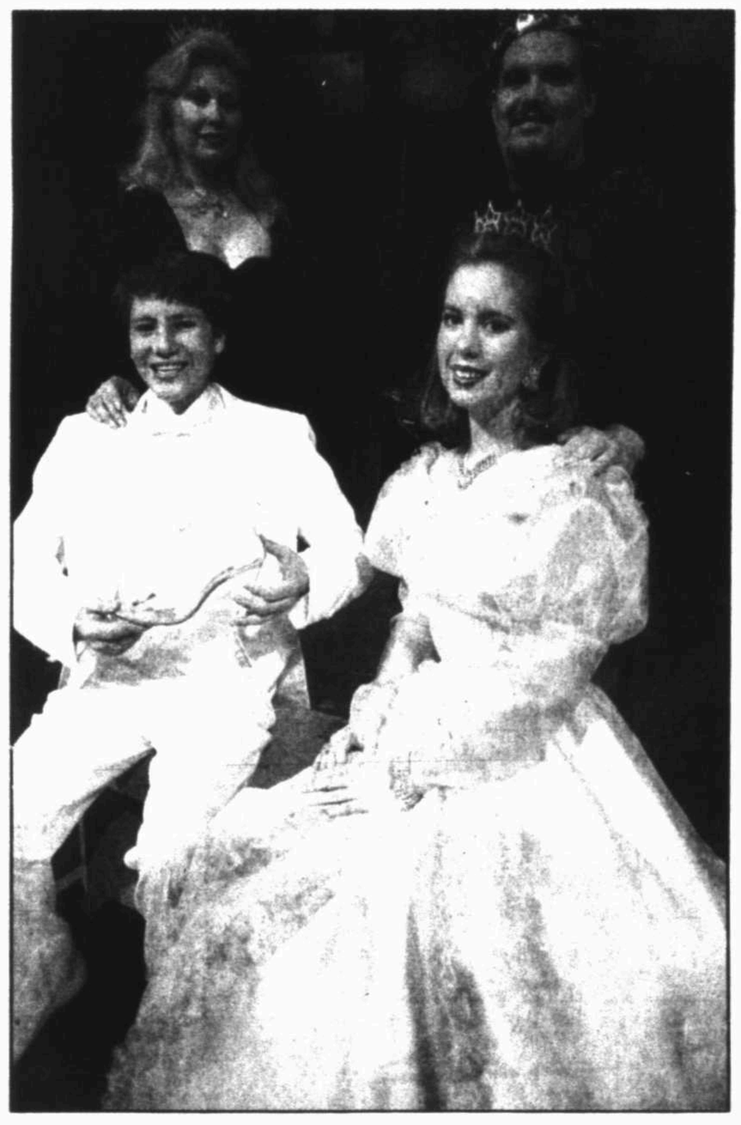

Wadley said. She said he is music director for the Globe's productionof "Cinderella."

This particular musical was selected by the play-readingcommittee because it appeals to all ages.

"They try to have a very nice balance between the classicslike Shakespeare or a modern classic like 'The Diary of AnneFrank,' and musicals which are appealing to children.

In 'Two By Two,' we had live animals and people dressed up as animals.

"I try to do as many unique things as possible which are visuallystimulating to the audience and exciting for children."

Romance novels have universal appeal

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

Heroes, heroines and love create marketable assets in the world of fiction.

"According to a variety of sources, romances account for a staggering 35 to 40 percent of all mass market paperback sales,"said romance author Cathie Linz in her essay in the book "Dangerous Men and Adventurous Women: Romance Writers on the Appeal of the Romance,"published in 1992.

"The world's largest publisher of romances, Harlequin Enterprises, has reported sales of over 190 million books worldwide. These books are translated into more than 20 (now 21)languages, including Japanese, Greek and Swedish. They are published in over 100 international markets."

In 1994, Harlequin, which includes Mills & Boon and Silhouette lines, sold more than "204 million books, which is sixbooks a second , or two books to every woman in the United States," said Huntley Fitzpatrick, editorial assistant in Harlequin's NewYork offices.

Romances are big sellers in the Midland market.

"Romance is probably one of the largest sellers that we have-that and children's books," said Sharron Massey, manager of Waldenbooks Midland. "There is definitely a market for the romanceand definitely a Midland market. Romance is a very large portion of my sales and people buy the series, they buy authors. It's not just one or the other. They buy both."

Harlequin is "probably be the fastest turnover because we gotthose once a month," Ms. Massey said. "And Zebra and Avon are both very big."

"I'd say they (romance novels) make up half of my sales, or close to it," said Sherry Dummer, owner of Miz B's Books.

"Probably I sell more Silhouette than I do the others, but I don'tknow. I sell so many of all of them."

The quantity of romance novels sold, Ms. Linz said, suggest the "underlying appeal of romance novels is universal in nature, crossing cultural and political boundaries."

ROMANCE: Novels are big sellers in Midland market

quin/Mills & Boon Ltd., would agree.

"Romance is universal," Ms. Fildew said in an interview in her office at Eton House, Richmond, Surrey. As an example of the universal appeal of romances, Ms. Fildew recalled a meeting withthe imprint's Japanese editorial director.

"One of my burning questions to her was in that we have totally different cultures, what is it within the Western idea ofromance that you find so attractive? She said, 'Well, what you need to understand is that obviously women are the same emotionally around the sphere.' And she said particularly in that society where it's very patriarchal still, that the men are not so demonstrative.

So they look for sensitivity within the modern day Harlequin books."

The American writer is very good at portraying the sensitive hero, Ms. Fildew said. "The heros that they develop are very three-dimensional. They are giving hero's point of view quite often within the book, which our readers in the UK (United Kingdom) pick up on and enjoy."

Romances have shifted slightly to accommodate a changing world.

"The heroine is much more on a level with the hero," said

Ms. Fildew. "Gone are the Jane Eyre types where they're coming as the governess. The secretary books still have appeal, but within the American books, particularly now, there's much more the sense of them meeting head to head. She might be the owner of the company and the hero comes in to work for her for example. But he is still charismatic. He is still attractive enough to win the heroine."

Also, the heroine is maturing.

" I think it probably started with the books I was reading from the U.S., the heroine is getting a little bit older now," Ms. Fildew said. "We still maybe would get a heroine in her young 20s, but more often than not they're in their late 20s, early 30s, even 40s now."

Thus, the idea of the heroine's virginity has been revamped as well.

"They don't have to be virgins these days," said Ms. Fildew.

"It's quite rare in fact for me to come across one in the American lines these days. But I have to say when they're there, they do well."

Most of the heroines in the American lines have either suffered through a divorce or been widowed, Ms. Fildew said, adding that it's not unusual to have a heroine who has children.

"In that way the heroine has changed in the last 10 years," Ms. Fildew said. "She's gotten much more of an independent life of her own. She doesn't necessarily need a man in her life. She can look after herself. But he's the icing on the cake. Perhaps he made life complete. She can function on her own, but she wants that companion. She wants the shared love and sex, too."

No longer is marriage mandatory at the novel's conclusion.

"There is an explicit understanding between the reader andthe author that those people are going to be together for the rest of their lives," said Sue Curran, editor for Harlequin/Mills & Boon, Ltd. "So there's a committed relationship there by the end of the book. It doesn't always necessarily end at the altar anymore as the books did in the early years. The sexual content, again it's changed with the years. We've gone, as we say, beyond the bedroom door.

"But that doesn't mean to say that we go in for clinical or pornographic descriptions. Every author approaches love scenes in her own way. Some authors will have just one or two kisses in the book and that's fine. And other authors want to take that further and again that's fine provided it is within the parameters of a loving and committed relationship. There should never be violence or coercion or anything like that in the relationship. It's a relationship between equals."

What has remained constant in romance novels is the impliedcontract between reader and writer that whatever problems theheroine and hero face, the book will have a happy ending.

"You might get a tortuous route to get there, but there is always a happy ending because it's that very reassurance our readers are looking for," Ms. Fildew said. "If we started tucking in the odd unhappy ending, it would be as startling as it could be.

In a way, I think it would shake the foundation of what Harlequin/Mills & Boon is about."

Valentine's Day has early origins

By Gerogia Temple
Staff Writer

The actual origin of Valentine's Day is obscured by time and legend.

The holiday may trace its origins back to either one or two 3rd- century martyrs named Valentine said to have been beheaded on Rome's Flaminian Way. The celebration found its way onto the Christian church calendar in AD 496.

The date, Feb. 14, was selected for the celebration of these Christian martyrs, some authorities say, as a diversion from the Roman pagan festival of lupercalia, celebrated Feb. 15. This festival, held for protection from wolves, featured the barbaric practice of young men striking people with stripes of animal hide.

Women took the blows because they believed the whipping made them more fertile.

Other sources trace Valentine's Day back to an old English legend that credits Feb. 14 as the day birds chose their mates.

Regardless of its origin, love has become the central theme for most Americans when they select cards to give others. Few know, when they select that perfect card for the right person, where the tradition of sending cards began. A Frenchman, of course. In 1415, Charles, Duke of Orleans, was captured by the English. He was taken to England and imprisoned. On Valentine's Day, he sent a rhymed love letter from his cell in the Tower of London. The recipient? His wife.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Defining your objectives will help you attain them. February is starred for romance. Do not tell everything you know. Romantic partner likes to think of you as hard-to-get. Your financial position will improve in early summer. Team up with someone whose talents complement your own. A student obtains college financial assistance. Remember those who have stood by you through thick and thin.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Judy Blume, singer Chynna Phillips, naturalist Charles Darwin, sportscaster Joe Garagiola.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be strictly aboveboard in all dealings with your loved ones. You cannot expect to succeed by forcing issues. Apply practicality in money matters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A confidential talk is fine. Resist the temptation to embroider the truth, however. A sudden romantic development could make this a memorable day. An out-of-the-way restaurant will add special appeal this evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Shrewd financial choices are essential. A family tiff should not be allowed to fester. Scholarships or loans will determine what you do about a college education. Zero in on sports opportunities if seeking exercise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Ideas take longer to come into focus now. Patience and tact are your strongest allies. A profitable new partnership is possible. Loved ones drop hints; pick up on them. Your suspicions could prove true.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A sermon or inspirational talk holds a special message for you. Reading the great philosophers provides valuable insights. A heart-to-heart chat draws you and mate closer together. Show your tender, considerate side.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Loved ones may be unsure where they stand. Clear up their confusion immediately. Your reassurances will work wonders. Falling behind on credit card bills can be a disaster. Exercise restraint when shopping in stores.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Redesigning your diet along more healthful lines will boost your energy level. Speak out forcefully on a topic crucial to the community. You can expand your social horizons by inviting a new friend for supper.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Distance yourself from relationship battles. Remember, it takes two to tangle. Romance is favored if you proceed slowly. Take out your tennis racket and get some exercise. Jot down a clever idea before it is forgotten.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day for reading, cooking and handicrafts. Those who have been burning the candle at both ends should catch up on their rest. Getting better organized on the home front will bring peace of mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Developing your communication skills will speed your rise up the career ladder. Curb a tendency to spend more money than you can afford. Take a positive approach when talking with a teen-ager. Become a better listener.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Slow down. News from those at a distance could make you rethink a situation. Analyze the risks involved, but do not overreact. Be willing to take a chance to gain new knowledge. Pamper mate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Adopting a new approach to a recurring problem could solve it once and for all. Your ESP is right on target. Act from your emotions and you will not go wrong. Keep in touch with your parents.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1NT	Pass	2NT	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ◇

Look at all four hands. Would you rather play or defend three no trump after the lead of the nine of diamonds?

The auction is straightforward enough. With 26 points and good intermediates, three no trump should have a reasonable play. However, let's suppose you opt to defend.

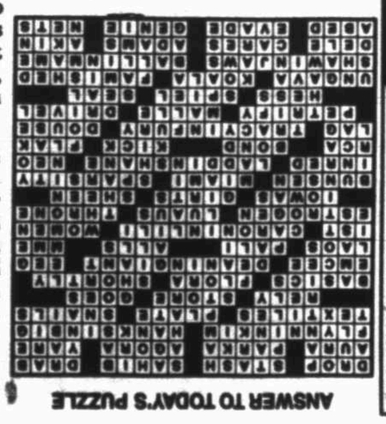

You insert the jack of diamonds when declarer plays low from dummy, and it loses to the ace. A low spade is led to the queen. There's no point to ducking so you win and shift to the nine of hearts. Declarer plays low, the queen wins and a low heart is returned, declarer winning in hand. Back comes the king of hearts to your ace.

If you win and cash your remaining heart, declarer will eventually be able to execute a squeeze. East can safely discard a spade on the fourth heart, but he will have no spare card when declarer cashes three rounds of clubs. Whether East discards a spade or a diamond, declarer can take an extra trick in that suit.

Well then, you would have been right to declare after all. Not quite. Suppose you elect to let declarer win the first heart! The defense is now in control. If declarer returns a heart, you lead another diamond and the defense scores three hearts, a spade and a diamond. An attempt to establish an extra trick in diamonds is equally futile. When East gains the lead with the queen, the defender simply pushes another heart through declarer, allowing West to collect three tricks in the suit for a one-trick set.

Retired oilfield hand pens novel full of Bulla

By Debbie Blossom
Associated Press

WILSON, Okla. — In his tiny office, Dale Bulla is surrounded by a collection of exotic artifacts and a number of boxes, most holding copies of his new, self-published book, "Roughnecks."

Items from the travels and experiences in his 33 years working for Exxon and Arco International crowd his office in a house where he and his family have lived only since July.

Pictures of drilling rigs he worked on line the wall and shelves are crowded with hand-carved statuettes and other souvenirs depicting an existence very different from everyday life in Wilson, a town of 1,600 about 90 miles south of Oklahoma City.

Unlike many struggling writers, Bulla said he probably started writing because he was bored.

How could someone who spent almost 43 years of his life in the oilfields of nine countries on four continents be bored?

Just ask anyone who has worked on a drilling rig in the middle of the North Sea, Bulla said. Even as a drilling supervisor, there were many days he didn't have a lot to do.

Lucky for him oil rigs came complete with computers.

The wording on the book cover describes Bulla's fictitious story in a phrase: "The story of post-war Oklahoma and the men who worked and played there."

Bulla said he drew his ideas from a creative imagination and a life that started in the oilfields of southern Oklahoma near Dillard.

His oilfield experiences began before he graduated from Wilson High School in 1952, and he said he has lived the book's story.

Focusing on a period from 1953 to about the middle of 1955, the storyline is set around a drilling rig and incorporates characters and incidents that actually happened in his life, Bulla said.

Although it's fiction, the book mentions real places in Texas and Oklahoma and notable people from the era, such as Will Rogers.

"The characters are composites of people I have known," he said. "I may have taken characteristics from six different people and combined them into one person for the book."

Some of the happenings detailed in the story were real, too, Bulla said, but he said he will never identify which ones they were.

"I tried to portray the times and the people as they really were and as best as I can remember," he said.

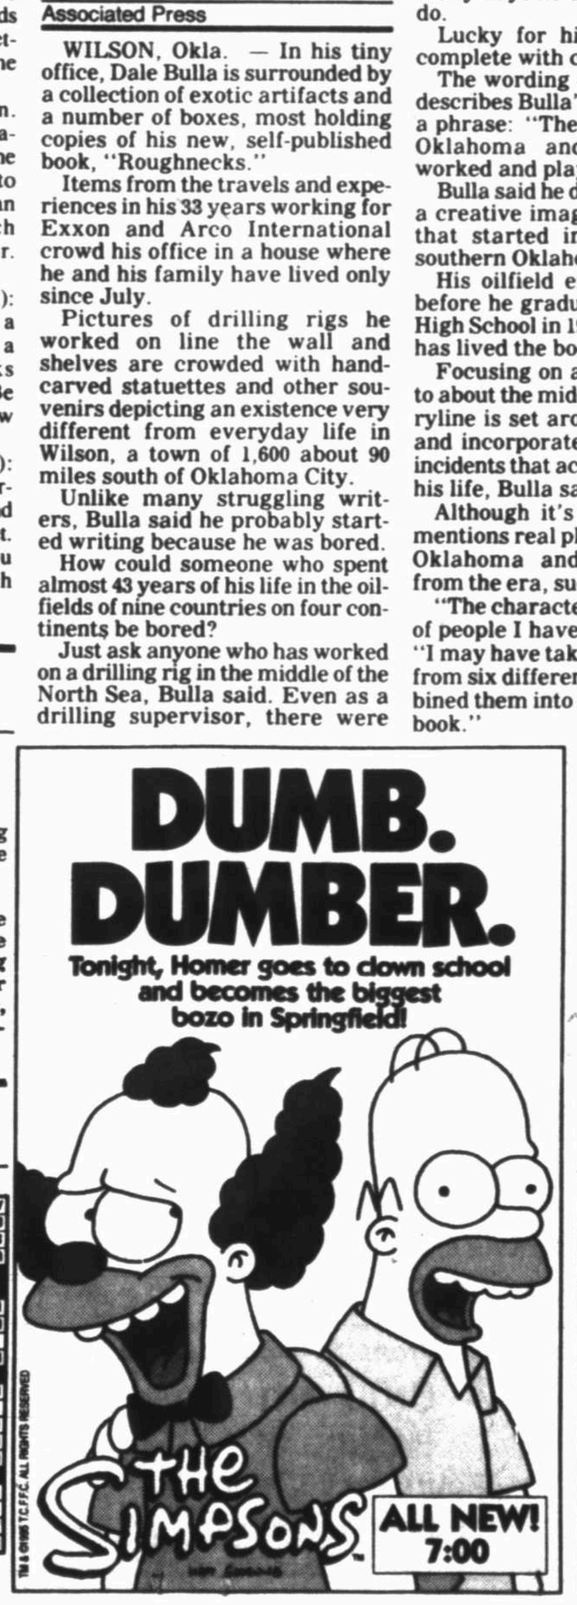

Bulla admitted there would be many people who would look down at him and his book because of his efforts to remain "true to real life."

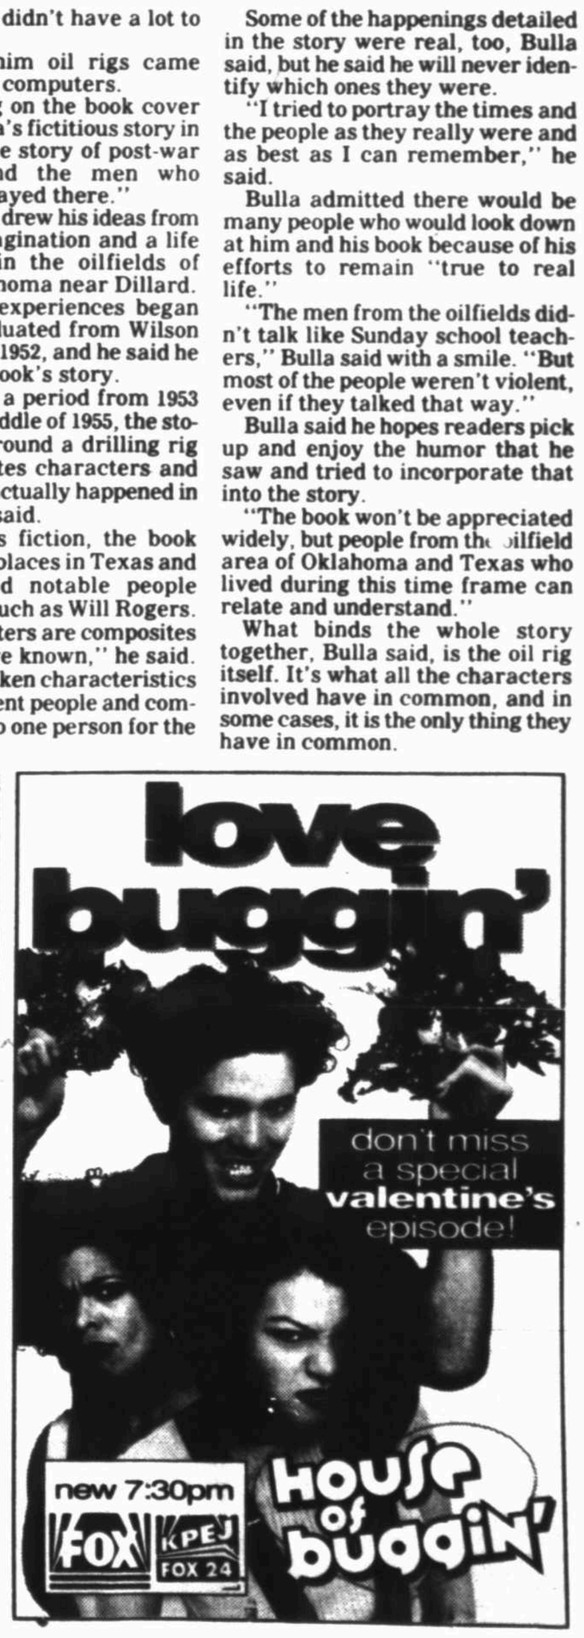

"The men from the oilfields didn't talk like Sunday school teachers," Bulla said with a smile. "But most of the people weren't violent, even if they talked that way."

Bulla said he hopes readers pick up and enjoy the humor that he saw and tried to incorporate that into the story.

"The book won't be appreciated widely, but people from the oilfield area of Oklahoma and Texas who lived during this time frame can relate and understand."

What binds the whole story together, Bulla said, is the oil rig itself. It's what all the characters involved have in common, and in some cases, it is the only thing they have in common.

Wilde secures high place in Anglo-Irish writing world

By Matt Wolf
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — British commentators point to a "rehabilitation"; Oscar Wilde's own grandson prefers to call it a "reassessment."

Whatever the word, Wilde is being honored again and again this year in Britain. A century after the nation's authorities put him in prison as a "sodomite," Wilde has secured a high place in the brilliant world of Anglo-Irish writing.

On Tuesday, Wilde takes his place with Shakespeare, Milton and Chaucer with the dedication of a stained glass panel in Poets' Corner at the south transept of Westminster Abbey.

What could be more gratifying for the man who declared, "There is only one thing in the world worse than being talked about, and that is not being talked about."

The date, Feb. 14, celebrates the centenary of the opening of "The Importance of Being Earnest," Wilde's classic play of glittering wit and profound emotion.

"There was a side of Wilde which would be slightly suspicious that the establishment at whom he poked fun for so long now saw fit to honor him in this way," said his grandson, Merlin Holland.

But, "as a man of letters, his delight at the honor would outweigh the questioning," Holland, 49, said in a telephone interview.

Plaques commemorating Wilde and his work were unveiled on Jan. 3 in London and Feb. 6 in Dublin, where Oscar Fingal O'Flahertie Wills Wilde was born in 1854.

"It is through art, and through art only, that we can realize our perfection; through art and art only that we can shield ourselves from the sordid perils of actual existence," Wilde wrote in 1891.

Though Wilde emerged from prison a broken and bankrupt man, dying in 1900 in Paris, his art has triumphed over the sordid perils of his life. Even his time in jail was productive, prompting both "The Ballad of Reading Gaol" and his eloquent essay "De Profundis."

All four of his 1890 masterworks — "Lady Windermere's Fan," "A Woman of No Importance," "An Ideal Husband" and "The Importance of Being Earnest" — have been revived in London in the last few years. Sir Peter Hall's revival of "Ideal Husband" is due on Broadway in April, at the Longacre Theater.

Playwright David Hare has written a screenplay about Wilde and his lover, Lord Alfred Douglas, and Liam Neeson and Hugh Grant are being considered to star. Nicholas Hytner, of "The Madness of King George," has been approached to direct.

Meanwhile, Kenneth Branagh and Stephen Fry, who co-starred in Branagh's "Peter's Friends," are talking of a film biography of their own, while the writer-director team of Hanif Kureishi and Roger Michell are adapting for the screen Wilde's 1891 novel, "The Picture of Dorian Grey."

On tape, a new BBC radio version of "Earnest" pairs Dame Judi Dench and Miriam Margolyes as Lady Bracknell and Miss Prism, while theater director Terry Hands prepares a fresh "Earnest" revival to open in late May at the Birmingham Repertory Theater.

"He is incredibly appreciated," said Andrew McDonnell, 43, head of the Oscar Wilde Society, whose membership has "gone berserk" since it was founded in 1990.

With honorary patrons including Literary Review editor Auberon Waugh and critic and biographer Michael Holroyd, the society publishes a twice-yearly magazine, The Wildean, and hosts an annual summer lunch in the playwright's former rooms at Magdalen College in Oxford.

Neil Titley, an actor who has spent 16 years touring a solo show on Wilde entitled "Work Is the Curse of the Drinking Classes," said Wilde's real interest lay in his range of views.

"There is great value for Wilde in today," said Titley, 48. "To a large extent, he was a great disciple — prophet, even — of tolerance."

Titley cited "a sort of laidbackness" to Wilde that has contemporary resonances: "In the professional Thatcherite or post-Thatcherite world, the essence of Wilde is a counterbalance."

The plays, too, have a lasting appeal, their delight only enhanced by the familiarity of the polished epigrams. The final revelations — in "Earnest," particularly — pack an emotional wallop that recall the most sublime of Shakespearean comedies.

Miriam Margolyes, the veteran British character actress who plays Miss Prism on the new BBC audio recording of "Earnest," said the play was "just about perfection; nobody cannot be enchanted by it."

She called Wilde "one of our glories. He's going to be compared to Shakespeare and Mozart — he's almost a combination of the two."

So Wilde's fans don't see his induction into Poets' Corner as a rehabilitation.

Annie Paul, director of a BBC film about Wilde to be aired in April, said: "People see it as a pardon or acceptance by the British establishment; really what the Abbey is doing is recognizing his extraordinary literary talent and greatness."

Holland expressed his own delight that the "Earnest" centenary would be preceding that of Wilde's trial and subsequent imprisonment.

"What is nice is that one can commemorate his greatness before we have to turn over the poor man's private life once again."
