Iraq forms new divisions

Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Saddam Hussein has formed five new divisions of his elite Republican Guards and they could be deployed in occupied Kuwait to counter any U.S.-led attack, an Arab military analyst said Tuesday.

The new divisions of Saddam's Praetorian Guard include 130,000 men and were formed with troops from other divisions and reservists mobilized since Iraq seized Kuwait on Aug. 2, the analyst said in an interview with The Associated Press in Baghdad.

"Most of them have good combat experience from the war with Iran and many have served in the Guards corps before," said the analyst, who has long experience in Arab military affairs. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

His claims could not immediately be confirmed independently.

They came two weeks before the Jan. 15 deadline set by the United Nations Security Council for Iraq to relinquish Kuwait or face a possible military strike.

In Washington, President Bush called his top advisers to the White House Tuesday for a fresh review of the gulf crisis after returning from a holiday stay at Camp David.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney, White House chief of staff John Sununu, national security adviser Brent Scowcroft and Secretary of State James A. Baker III were attending the meeting.

Iraqi officials have repeatedly said they want peace, but they are equally adamant that they will not withdraw from Kuwait, which Baghdad calls Iraq's 19th province.

Baghdad radio said Tuesday that Saddam visited military forces on the front lines on New Year's Eve and even cooked dinner for some of them.

The radio, monitored in Nicosia, did not give the location of the presidential visit. If it were to Kuwait, it would be Saddam's third known trip there since Aug. 2.

The report of new elite divisions came amid a nationwide mobilization by Iraq.

It was not immediately clear when the divisions would have been formed. It usually takes many weeks, if not months, to create new military formations, equip them and train the men to operate as a unit.

If the new divisions were just formed it would make little sense to fling them

Bush predicts recession will be short

■ President doesn't see evidence of a deep recession, but one that will end "not too many months from now."

By W. Dale Nelson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parts of the American economy are clearly in a recession, but it will be mild and end "in not too many months from now," President Bush said in a New Year's interview.

"I see no evidence of a deep recession," Bush told David Frost in the hour-long interview to be carried tonight on Public Broadcasting Service stations.

During the interview, conducted at the White House on Dec. 16, Bush also said:

■ If there is a war in the Persian Gulf, he hopes it will be over in a few days but he is "not predicting one way or another."

■ He will probably run for a second term and expects to be "in the fight of my life" if he does.

■ He believes Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's problems are deepening and "I'm not sure the worst has passed."

First lady Barbara Bush, also interviewed on the program, said she hopes to see a woman in the White House as president in her lifetime.

The president, responding to a question about how he would grade his own administration at midterm, said:

"Failed to do one or two things, but it's going all right. It's going all right. We're in a slowdown economically in this country, if not recession. In some areas, we're clearly in a recession, and this concerns me because people are hurting."

"I happen to believe, and I think that most economists believe, that the recession will be mild and that the whole country will come out of it, in not too many months from now," he said.

"I see evidences of some pockets of our economy that are extraordinarily strong," he said.

Pope wishes that '91 will be year of peace in Mideast

Associated Press

Pope John Paul II acknowledged the threat of war in the Persian Gulf by offering a special New Year's wish that 1991 be a year of peace in the Middle East.

The pontiff, speaking to the faithful in St. Peter's square on Tuesday, also proclaimed 1991 the "Year of Social Teaching of the Church" and said he will publish an encyclical, a letter to church leaders, updating church teachings on social issues in light of the "new issues and problems of our own times."

In another square — Red Square in Moscow — a far less serious crowd of about 2,000 foreign tourists and Muscovites gathered to greet the New Year. The din from celebrants drowned out the Kremlin chimes tolling midnight.

Many revelers drank champagne and then smashed the empty bottles onto the cobblestones. Some people brought bottle rockets and several of the small fireworks were sent whizzing toward Lenin's Mausoleum, where the hourly changing of the guard went on as ususal.

New Year's DWI arrests comparable to 'typical weekend,' deputy says

By David Morris
Staff Writer

New Year's revellers kept Midland law officers busy Monday night and Tuesday morning, but the number of people arrested for driving drunk was "no more than on a Saturday night," a sheriff's deputy said.

The deputy, who would not give his name, said DWI arrest numbers were comparable to those on a "typical weekend."

According to sheriff's office reports, deputies had arrested one person for public intoxication Monday night.

Around 2:20 a.m. Tuesday, reports show, deputies were involved in a car chase with an apparent drunk driver whose vehicle struck a residence at 2110 E. California Ave.

No injuries were reported in the incident. Deputies arrested the driver of the vehicle on suspicion of DWI and possession of marijuana, reports show. Additional details were not available from the sheriff's office Tuesday evening.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Texans have seen Ann Richards up close and personal on the campaign trail. But the rowdy, mud-slinging political fight did not reveal what delicacies the governor-elect likes to eat, her favorite expressions or how her hair manages to defy gravity.

1991 is the dawning of the age of Ann Richards, a time when expressions such as "That ol' dog won't hunt" and "Honest to Pete" will take on new popularity.

The Dallas Morning News interviewed family, friends and associates of Richards to learn more about the woman who will be inaugurated Jan. 15.

The newspaper learned that in matters culinary, Richards guzzles up to half a gallon a day of decaffeinated coffee and watches her fat intake. But she has a notorious weakness for chocolate and country style food such as fried chicken, chicken-fried steak, barbecue and mashed potatoes.

"I joke that the only reason I'm press secretary is I make sure I've always got chocolate," said press secretary Bill Cryer.

In matters musical, Richards has an eclectic

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cloudy skies forecast

Staff Report

Today's National Weather Service forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, with a high in the mid 50s. Winds will be from the northeast at 10 to 15 mph. Tonight's low will be in the mid 20s and skies will remain partly cloudy.

Thursday also is expected to be partly cloudy, with a high in the lower 50s.

Tuesday's high was 69, compared to the date's record of 73 set in 1965. Tuesday's low was 29. The record low for today's date is 0, set in 1979.

STATE

Texans shivering from the second blast of sub-freezing temperatures felt some relief on New Year's Day as mid-afternoon temperatures climbed into the 40s and 50s.

In West Texas, where Saturday's cold front brought record low temperatures, early afternoon temperatures reached the mid and upper 50s.

Wichita Falls reported 45 degrees at 1 p.m. CST after temperatures reached a record 7-degree low on Monday.

Five of the 18 deaths reported by the Texas Department of Public Safety through Tuesday afternoon have been blamed on road conditions from the weekend's Arctic weather.

The DPS projected that 28 motorists would die during the holiday counting period that began at 6 p.m. Saturday and ran through midnight Tuesday.

North Texas skies clouded up after a clear morning, but clear skies and rising temperatures in Dallas raised the spirits of organizers and participants in the Cotton Bowl Tuesday afternoon.

All major highways in the state were reported open Tuesday, but ice remained on some East Texas roads, especially in areas from north of Longview to the Red River, officials said.

Cloudy skies were reported in most of South and North Texas, with spots of fog in the Rio Grande Valley and around College Station.

Winds elsewhere in the state varied from southeast and northwest at speeds mostly in the teens.

Highs were forecast in the mid-50s for both South and West Texas, and parts of North Texas should make it to the lower 50s.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

into combat against the allied army confronting Saddam — a force that should include 550,000 troops by the end of the month.

However, if the elite units have been in existence for some time, they could be a potent addition to the estimated 519,000 men Saddam has stationed in Kuwait and southern Iraq.

The original six Republican Guard divisions led the invasion of Kuwait.

The guards also fought in most major battles of the Iran-Iraq war and led a series of lightning assaults in its closing stages that recaptured Iraqi territory conquered by Iranians and pushed into Iran itself.

Troops selected for the guards corps undergo more intensive training than other units, including commando and paratroop courses. Great emphasis is also placed on motivation and endurance.

The analyst said the guards are probably the Iraqi units most suited to carry out assaults against the U.S.-led forces in the gulf if war erupts.

The new divisions would raise the strength of the Republican Guards to 250,000. Their commander is Maj. Gen. Iyad Fathi al-Rawi, who led the force for much of the 1980-88 war with Iran and is one of Iraq's top field commanders.

There was speculation some could be assigned to the Turkish border, where Saddam is beefing up the estimated eight divisions he has deployed there.

Turkey reportedly has been reinforcing its border units as well and requested NATO fighter squadrons to bolster air defenses in the region.

Iraq has mobilized an estimated 400,000 men over the last two months. Saddam said in November that 250,000 of these were headed for Kuwait and thousands are believed to have already been deployed there.

Iraq has an estimated 1 million men under arms, backed by a militia of about 850,000 men.

The forces in Kuwait have an estimated 4,000 tanks — more than two-thirds of the Iraqi army's heavy armor — 2,500 armored fighting vehicles and 2,700 artillery guns spread behind formidable defenses.

Unlike the Iraqi army's other 50 divisions, which are identified by numbers, the Republican Guards units have names such as Babylon and Alahyu Akbar, or God is Great.

Adnan is an apparent reference to former Defense Minister Gen. Adnan Khairallah, a cousin of Saddam's killed in a mysterious helicopter crash in 1989.

Officially, the helicopter went down in a sandstorm. But Khairallah's death raised suspicions that Saddam had him killed because he was becoming a threat to the Iraqi leader's one-man rule.

BUSH: Recession to be mild

(From 1A)

On the Persian Gulf, Bush said he was "absolutely firm" in his insistence that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein must withdraw his forces from Kuwait.

"We cannot stop one inch short of successful resolution," the president said.

When asked whether, if war breaks out, it would be over in less than a month, the president said, "Well, I would hope it would be over in a few days, but what happens realistically is hard to tell ... So, I'm not predicting one way or another."

As to whether he will seek a second term, Bush said that "it seems to be the pattern" and "I probably will, but there is no Rubicon crossed on that one. I would expect so. But who knows?"

"If I make the determination, I'll go all out like I'm in the fight of my life, which I probably would be," he added.

Regarding Gorbachev's position in the Soviet Union, Bush said, "I'd probably say there is still a deterioration ... I think his problems are getting more complicated."

"And so I'm not sure the worst has passed. And I'm worried about this winter and the deprivation that goes with a brutal — a tough winter on the people inside the Soviet Union."

Bush did not specify the "one or two things" his administration had failed to accomplish, but he did say that "there's lots left to do" in improving education and that "we haven't completed" the battle against drug abuse.

DWIs: Deputies involved in chase

(From 1A)

Midland Police Department officials, meanwhile, estimated that MPD officers made six DWI arrests between 7 p.m. Monday and 5 a.m. Tuesday.

According to sheriff's office reports, MPD officers had arrested three people for DWI prior to midnight Monday. They also arrested two minors for possession of alcoholic beverages and five people for public intoxication Monday night, reports show.

Reports on Tuesday morning's activities were not immediately available.

The Department of Public Safety jailed two people in Midland Monday for DWI, reports show. DPS arrest numbers for Tuesday were not available.

Between 6 p.m. last Saturday and 8 p.m. Tuesday, a DPS spokesman said, 19 people were killed in traffic accidents on Texas roads. The DPS had estimated that 28 people would die in accidents between Saturday and midnight Tuesday.

Arthur Villarreal, MPD patrolman, said three non-fatal traffic accidents, one of them involving alcohol, occurred in Midland between 7 p.m. Monday and 5 a.m. Tuesday. Injury reports were not available at press time.

Villarreal said that in addition to traffic calls, police dispatchers were swamped with complaints about late-night fireworks and gunshots.

One of those gunshots, fired from a high-powered rifle, shattered a bedroom window at 200 E. Wolcott Ave., sheriff's office reports show. No one was reported injured in the incident, which was reported at 12:12 a.m. Tuesday.

Meanwhile, New Year's fireworks are the suspected cause in a mobile-home fire at 1600 S. Weatherford St., Villarreal said.

According to Midland Fire Department reports, three units responded to the blaze, reported at 12:54 a.m.

Villarreal was not aware of any injuries in the fire, and further details were not available from the fire department.

Details also were not available on an apartment fire at 410 W. Cuthbert Ave.

Fire department reports show that four units responded to the blaze, reported at 3:25 a.m. Tuesday.

Villarreal said he was glad to see New Year's celebrations finally come to an end.

"When I got off at 5 o'clock, they were still answering disturbance calls," he said. "Heck, at 3:30 (a.m.) it looked like 8 o'clock traffic out there."

YEAR: Revelers gather in Red Square

(From 1A)

On Tuesday night, Soviet TV showed the New Year's addresses by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to the American people and by President Bush to the Soviet people. Gorbachev welcomed February's superpower summit and renewed a call for a peaceful solution to the gulf crisis.

Thousands of gunshots were fired into the air in Managua, the Nicaraguan capital, in Nicaragua's first New Year's celebration since the end its civil war. The bullets wounded at least 10 people, including two children, hospitals said.

Juan de Dios Hurtado said a bullet came zinging into his bedroom at 12:15 a.m. Tuesday and pierced his arm just after he had gone to sleep.

"The economic situation didn't allow me to celebrate. I didn't take a drink, I didn't eat chicken. That's why I went to bed early, but I barely missed going out with the old year myself," he said.

"Even in the war they didn't wound me," added Hurtado, a Sandinista government militiaman in the war against U.S.-backed Contra rebels that ended last year.

Vietnam, whose strict policies sent more than 1 million citizens fleeing by boat, praised the overseas Vietnamese in a New Year's Day message.

State radio said President Vo Chi Cong thanked the overseas Vietnamese for their "contributions to national construction," an apparent reference to the large sums of money they have sent back to help relatives and to invest in businesses.

Since a reformist administration took power in late 1986, Vietnam has begun relaxing its domestic and foreign policies, wooing groups it once persecuted.

Lech Walesa, the new Polish president, told his countrymen in a New Year's message Monday evening that the tasks ahead for them "will not be easy" and asked for political calm while the new government carries out economic reforms.

He promised that the pace of reforms would be faster, declaring that "the times of marching in place are over. ... As of now, we will be resolutely moving forward. We have enough strength, faith and capability to change Poland."

taste ranging from classical to country. Rock star Tina Turner also is a favorite. In fact, Richards named one of her two cats after the legendary singer.

Around the office, Richards' style emphasizes phone calls over memos, short meetings and a serious tone.

"She likes to do business in the office — she's not big on socializing or glad-handing," said assistant press secretary Chuck McDonald.

Staff meetings usually last about 45 minutes, unless there's an unusually long agenda.

"She's a tough drill sergeant," said Cathy Bonner, who chairs the inaugural committee. "If you talk like a bureaucrat, instead of bottom-line efficiency, she'll just go crazy on you. She wants people to tell how to get things done: 'What is the bottom line here? How much does it cost? Can we afford it? Does it make sense?' "

Richards' benchmark for the Texas man-on-the street is, "Will my mama in Waco understand this when she reads it in the paper?"

In Richards' family, the power lies with 3½-year-old granddaughter Lily Adams. "Nanny" Richards will let the youngster do just about anything she pleases, family members say.

"I think Mom ran for governor so she could talk Cecile and Kirk (Lily's parents) into moving back here from California, so Lily could be here. And it worked," said son Dan Richards.

Richards also dotes on her second grandchild, 2-year-old Jennifer, her son Clark's daughter. And grandkids Nos. 3 and 4, Daniel and Hannah, also are in line for lots of attention. Richards' daughter Cecile, who is Lily's mother, gave birth to the twins Dec. 15.

Besides Cecile, 33, and Dan, 31, Richards is the mother of Clark, 28, and Ellen, 26.

In answer to the great hair question, Richards' secret lies with her hair dresser of 17 years, Gail Huitt. The color is her own. The curl isn't.

"I spray the hell out of it. We get it up there. We defy gravity," Ms. Huitt said.

MIT students try to make better M&Ms

By Anne M. Peterson

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Not all engineering students design brighter laser beams or more efficient computer chips. Four MIT undergraduates are looking for ways to build a better M&M.

The students devised what they thought would be a faster, more economical way to coat the candy.

The semester-long quest by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology students began with a shipment of 1,500 pounds of "naked" M&Ms. Their mission: to find a quicker and cheaper way to make the 50-year-old confection melt in your mouth and not in your hand.

One student, senior Joseph J. Berghammer of Elm Grove, Wis., said the would-be engineers reached the same conclusion in their M&M-coating study.

"They taste real good," he said.

M&M-Mars Co. of Hackettstown, N.J., donated the chocolate pieces, green dye, and a scaled-down version of a mixer used to make the candy coating for the class project.

For months, the MIT Chemical Engineering Laboratory was covered with the chocolate centers, which were lightly dusted with powdered sugar to keep them from sticking together.

The students devised what they thought would be a faster, more economical way to coat the candy, then experimented with their samples.

The results weren't all academic.

"All of us gained weight during this thing," said Professor Jeffrey L. Feerer, who oversaw the students' work.

The goal of the class, Feerer said recently, was to teach students how to apply theory to the practical problems of industry. The four students earned A's for their work, Feerer said.

"Finally, the things we've studied in textbooks for three years can actually apply to the real world," Berghammer said. His group also included junior Neelan Choksi of Corpus Christi, Texas; junior Jeffrey Falkowski of New York City; and senior Ashley K. Shih of Wichita Falls, Texas.

Feerer said he could not discuss what exactly goes into the coating process, or what the students discovered.

"I don't think M&M's would like us giving away their secrets," Feerer said.

M&M-Mars, which makes 200 million M&Ms per day, often supports research projects at universities across the country, said company spokesman Hans Fiuczynski.

In addition, he said, the company is always trying to get the best and the brightest students to consider working in the food industry.

"They all see themselves in computers. But the food industry has tremendous engineering prospects," he said.

Besides giving the four undergraduates a focus for their academic studies, the project also benefited other students at MIT. At the end of the semester, the M&Ms from the project were given away.

"After we coated the M&M's, we had all these green M&M's all over the lab, so we essentially told all the people at MIT to come in and get 'em," Feerer said, adding that some were also donated to charities in Cambridge.

"I would come in the morning and there would be five or six students waiting outside the door to get some. This lasted for about three days," Feerer said. "There were green M&Ms all over campus."

Most want to volunteer but are too busy

CHICAGO (AP) — Seventy-five percent of adults in a survey say Americans should volunteer to help the less fortunate, but few follow through and many shy away from helping the homeless, poor and ill, the study found.

Three-quarters of the 1,000 people who responded to the random telephone survey said they would like to volunteer to help the less fortunate, but are too busy, said Donald E. Banker, a vice president at Lions Club International, which commissioned the study.

The Lions Club claims to be the world's largest service organization, with nearly 1.4 million members in 171 countries.

"We're concerned about the lack of participation in our association by the younger generation," Banker said recently in a telephone interview from California. "There seems to be a hesitancy to get involved."

Forty-one percent of the respondents said they would rather donate money than volunteer their time. The survey, conducted last spring, questioned people ages 25 to 40, and had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The survey found that among the respondents who said they had performed any volunteer work, including helping at church or school, many shied away from long-term commitments.

Eighteen percent of volunteers said they spent time with children, compared to 5 percent with the homeless and 4 percent with people with mental disabilities or cancer. Twelve percent of volunteers said they worked with people with physical disabilities.

"Children are always No. 1 because volunteers can make an immediate difference there," said Jean Davis, a spokeswoman for the Midwest regional office of the Salvation Army in Chicago.

"With the homeless it takes a monumental effort to make a change. Sometimes you can't solve the problem and it's frustrating," she said.

Governor closes privately insured credit unions, banks

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Gov. Bruce G. Sundlun, just three hours after being sworn in, Tuesday ordered the closing of all banks and credit unions covered by a private insurance fund nearly depleted by an insolvent member.

"I have taken this action now as quickly as possible in order to protect depositors and taxpayers of the state of Rhode Island," Sundlun said at a news conference. "I expect we will be able to reopen some of the institutions within a very short period of time."

He pledged to work "non-stop to finalize a plan to protect their assets."

The 45 banks and credit unions, which have a total of $1.7 billion on deposit, will not be able to reopen until they obtain federal deposit insurance. There are roughly 300,000 accounts in the affected institutions.

All but two already have applied for federal insurance and the two exceptions are "not significant" because they essentially are inactive, the governor said.

THE OTHER 38 banking institutions in the state, which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the National Credit Union Administration, "will remain open," Sundlun said. "I want to emphasize that."

His order, one of his first after being sworn in Tuesday, affects only small investment and loan banks, but it does affect some of Rhode Island's largest credit unions.

Sheldon Whitehouse, legal counsel to the new Democratic governor, said the private insurer, the Rhode Island Share and Deposit Indemnity Corp., asked the state to place it into conservatorship after its board met Monday.

Whitehouse said Sundlun agreed to do that, but it essentially puts RISDIC out of business. By law, financial institutions in Rhode Island must have deposit insurance, so until federal agencies approve applications by the RISDIC members, their customers cannot get their money.

The National Credit Union Administration, the FDIC and the Federal Reserve Bank have been notified of RISDIC's failure and are scheduled to travel to Rhode Island.

The financial crisis was precipitated by the failure of Heritage Loan and Investment Co., a small two-branch bank in Providence.

NATION

AUDITORS DISCOVERED problems with its books and RISDIC assumed control of it in October. The insurer had to cover deposits after the apparent embezzlement of $13 million from Heritage.

Heritage President Joseph Mollicone Jr., who has been missing since Nov. 8, has been charged with embezzlement in state and federal arrest warrants. News reports have linked him with mob figures, but law-enforcement authorities have revealed little about their investigation into him.

RISDIC's $25 million reserve fund was drawn down when it had to cover depositors' demands for their money as the state liquidates Heritage.

Whitehouse said it was unclear how much money RISDIC has left. The state Department of Business Regulation estimated RISDIC's assets, including the building housing its offices, at between $2 million and $3 million, Whitehouse said.

But RISDIC told the new administration its assets are about $8 million.

RISDIC President Peter A. Nevola, in a telephone interview, said he believed the fund was worth $17 million to $18 million because it had been replenished by reassessing its membership after the Heritage collapse.

WHITEHOUSE SAID there is a discrepancy because RISDIC is including notes issued by Heritage to cover the missing $13 million. The state does not believe that money can be recovered.

Nevola said he has been ill for the past several days and did not attend Monday's board meeting. He said he did not know why the board decided to seek conservatorship.

Whitehouse and Sundlun Chief of Staff W. Edward Wood compared the RISDIC case to similar crises in Maryland and Ohio five years ago when governors in those states also were forced to close banks after a private insurer failed.

Wood said there was no political gamemanship behind the timing of Sundlun's order. It has been "made known the Sundlun administration was going to take action," he said. "We would have done something within the next several days, by the end of the week, probably."

May Kernan, press secretary for former Republican Gov. Edward D. DiPrete, said DiPrete and Sundlun staffers met with federal insurance officials Dec. 19 and there was concern because "not all of the credit unions would be automatically qualified for federal insurance."

The DiPrete administration on Monday completed a plan to encompass those institutions and gave it to the incoming Sundlun team, she said.

"THERE WAS a fundamental difference in approach," she said. "I think (DiPrete's) approach was to have an orderly system whereby it would have rescued the weaker credit unions short of creating an emergency situation."

It is not clear how depositors' money will be returned if one of the 45 RISDIC institutions collapses now that the state has control of the insurer. The state could follow the lead of Ohio five years ago and issue bonds to cover the deposits.

None of those options has been given serious consideration, yet, Wood said, but all will be closely examined. "We propose to take every prudent possible action to protect the depositors in these institutions," he said.

Adding to the problems of the insurer's collapse is the state's own budget woes. Rhode Island is carrying a deficit estimated by Sundlun at $160 million, or about 12 percent of the $1.5 billion budget.

Sundlun budget adviser Gary Sasse said he feared that the closing of the banks might worsen that because consumers would not be able to get at money they might otherwise spend and inject into the sluggish economy.

Eastern to comply with ruling, recall 60 union pilots

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines says it will comply with a federal court ruling and call back to work 60 union pilots who went on strike nearly two years ago.

Eastern president Bob Gould said Monday that the recall "allows us to move forward in a positive manner to solve our remaining differences."

A federal appellate court last month upheld an earlier order that Eastern rehire up to 800 pilots who struck in March 1989 and were told by the company they weren't needed when they ended their strike that November. Eastern earlier had recalled about 140 pilots.

U.S. District Judge Edward Davis rejected Eastern's contention that it didn't have to rehire former strikers in place of newly hired pilots who were in training. Eastern has said it would continue appealing the ruling.

Gould said newly hired pilots would not be laid off.

Officials investigate Conoco refinery fire

PONCA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Conoco Oil has begun an investigation into the second major blaze to strike its northern Oklahoma refinery in 1990, officials said.

No one was injured in the Monday night blaze, which ignited in the No. 1 Crude Unit, Lynn Hohensee, director of public relations, said.

Unit operators reported the fire between 10 and 10:30 p.m. and refinery firefighters had the flames extinguished in 1½ hours, Hohensee said.

The exact cause of the fire or the extent of the damage was not immediately known, he said.

The fire comes some seven months after another major fire at Conoco.

On May 22, fire swept through a de-waxing unit, causing more than $1 million in damage.

Reconstruction of that plant began shortly after the damage was assessed and was to be brought on line early this year.

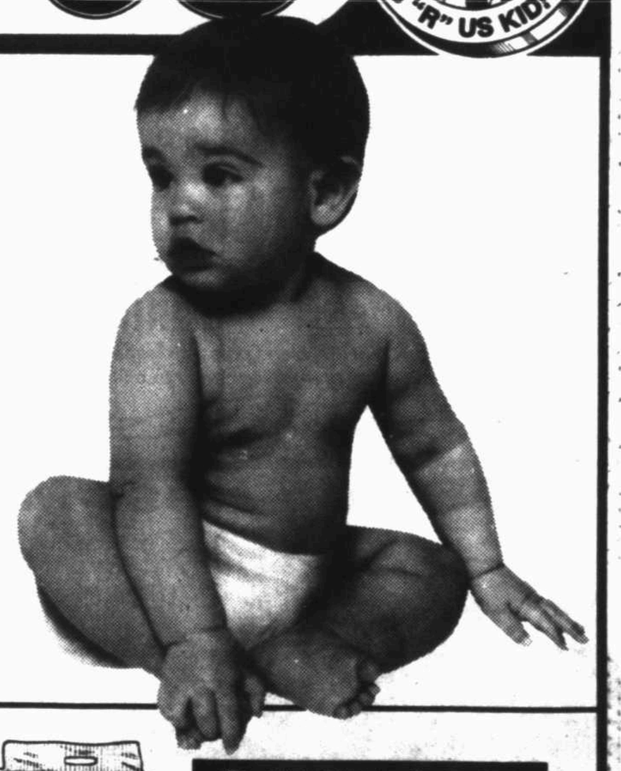

Hohensee said the crude unit will be out of operation until repairs are made.

About 18 Ponca City Fire Department personnel were on standby to assist the Conoco Fire Brigade and remained on alert throughout the fire, Hohensee said.

Units from Tonkawa, Blackwell, Newkirk and Kildare, as well as Ponca City police, Kay County Sheriff's Office and Oklahoma Highway Patrol personnel were also on the scene, said Norman Coffelt, director of public safety.

NATION IN BRIEF

Donations save historic church

CHICAGO (AP) — Holy Family Roman Catholic Church, which survived the Great Chicago Fire a century ago, has been saved once again from destruction by a nationwide drive to raise $1 million for repairs, parishioners said Tuesday.

Church bells rang out, a fire engine sounded its horns and about 40 parishioners, some of them crying in joy, stood on the steps in front of the church's massive oak doors as the Rev. George Lane announced the historic church's reprieve from the wrecking ball.

"I want to tell you this morning we not only made our $1 million cash goal — we surpassed it," Lane said through a chorus of cheers. "We have $1,011,000 cash and another $990,000 in good pledges."

The Society of Jesus, which owns the church, threatened two weeks ago to raze the gothic Victorian structure and sell the property unless the parish came up with $1 million of a $3 million repair bill by midnight Monday.

Church officials were $65,000 short of their initial $1 million goal on Sunday. Talk show host Oprah Winfrey and other donors who asked to remain anonymous had offered to provide the shortfall, Lane said.

But money poured in from across the nation, said the Rev. John Moorman, the church's pastor. Donors included a crippled man who sent pennies wrapped in aluminum foil, he said.

Results dispute link

CHICAGO (AP) — A new study has found no connection between barrier contraceptives such as condoms and an illness in pregnancy that can lead to premature delivery and fetal-growth problems.

The findings of the study were reported in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association. They contradict the findings of an earlier study that linked an illness suffered by some expectant mothers known as preeclampsia, or toxemia, to the use of barrier contraceptives.

"We believe that women should be advised that barrier contraceptives were associated with no increased risk for preeclampsia," Dr. James L. Mills of the National Insistute of Child Health and Human Development wrote in the new study.

Mills wrote that women should feel free to use barrier contraceptives without fear of the disease.

Preeclampsia occurs in about 7 percent of pregnancies. Untreated it can lead to maternal seizures and, in rare cases, can cause death to the fetus or the mother. It is characterized by high blood pressure, fluid retention and protein in the urine.

In a study reported in December 1989, researchers at the University of North Carolina's School of Public Health said women using a barrier contraceptive before deciding to become pregnant were more than twice as likely as other women to develop preeclampsia.

Officials head for Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two top Bush administration officials are setting out this week on a 17-day swing through Africa in search of ways to combat the health problems confronting millions of children there.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan and Agency for International Development administrator Ronald W. Roskens will visit Mali, Nigeria, Uganda, Malawi, South Africa, Zimbabwe and Senegal. The trip was to begin Wednesday.

Ambitious programs designed to eradicate communicable diseases and reverse dehydration from acute diarrhea have spared the lives of many African children over the past decade.

But some of these gains have been offset by a dramatic increase in acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS. The World Health Organization estimates that 10 million or more African children will be infected at birth with the AIDS virus by the year 2000.

According to government statistics, child mortality rates in Africa may increase by as much as 50 percent during the 1990s as a result of AIDS.

Newborn will go to shelter

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The newborn son of a mentally ill woman who fought a court order to undergo an abortion will be made available for adoption unless someone from the woman's family decides to rear him, a judge ruled.

Denise Lefebvre's baby, born the day after Christmas, is to be placed in a state shelter Wednesday after leaving the hospital.

A sister of Ms. Lefebvre has expressed interest in taking the child but has not made a commitment yet, said Jim Pearson, lawyer for the mother's court-appointed guardian, Kathleen Phillips.

Ms. Lefebvre, 29, a chronic manic depressive, will remain in the psychiatric ward of Broward General Medical Center, where she has been since she was committed in July.

Ms. Lefebvre stopped taking lithium, a drug used to control sharp mood swings but known to cause birth defects, when she suspected she was pregnant. She feared the drug would harm the baby.

She immediately lapsed into a severe psychotic state and was committed to the psychiatric ward. She spent much of her pregnancy strapped to a bed after she attacked several nurses

Universal language fails

CHICAGO (AP) — Esperanto, an artificial language intended to bring people closer together and promote world harmony, is having problems getting any attention.

Four speakers were on hand for a seminar on Esperanto at the Modern Language Association's annual convention — but no one showed up to listen to them.

Pierre Ullman of the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee delivered a spirited defense of the language.

"Esperanto does have an ideology. It is the wish for harmony on a linguistic basis," said Ullman, 61, a professor of Spanish.

The Esperanto League for North America says about 2 million people speak the language worldwide, including about 2,000 in the United States.

"There are probably only six or seven Esperantists in all of Wisconsin," Ullman said Sunday. "Frankly, I'm disillusioned."

Random shooting drops in Los Angeles

Two people killed in confrontations with law enforcement officers

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Although complaints and arrests for random gunfire were down this New Year, authorities reported that the practice of celebrating by shooting into the air led to two deadly confrontations with law enforcement.

In Los Angeles, officers arrested 21 New Year's revelers for firing into the air and confiscated 32 guns as of Tuesday, down dramatically from 73 arrests and 125 guns seized last year, police said. Officials cautioned that follow-up investigation might change the figures.

Complaints about random gunfire dropped from 706 last year to 82 as of Tuesday, a decrease of more than 88 percent.

"You have statistics this year that look a great deal better than last year," said Officer Francine Spada, who oversaw the city's publicity campaign against firing weapons to herald the New Year. "I think it's working — hopefully, next New Year's will bring this number further on down. Our goal is zero complaints."

Los Angeles officials credited the city's first New Year's ammunition sales ban and a $35,000 advertising campaign with changing attitudes. The campaign included 600,000 handbills and 15 billboards.

While no injuries or deaths were linked to bullets fired into the air, two men who had been firing off guns were killed when they confronted deputies or police.

Nicolas Contreras, 26, of Los Angeles, pointed a 9mm pistol at two Los Angeles police officers, who then fired four rounds with 12-gauge shotguns and killed him, police said.

The shots fired by Los Angeles police officers Gregory Mahoney, 28, and Larry Johnson, 32, hit Contreras in the face and chest. Officers found 74 spent rounds of 9mm ammunition near the porch where Contreras had been firing, police said.

The 3:30 a.m. shooting started when the two officers came to the Pueblo Del Rio housing project to investigate a theft from a motor vehicle, said Officer William Rodriguez.

"The officers heard numerous shots fired on 53rd Street," Rodriguez said.

Contreras stepped out onto his porch armed with the pistol and then pointed the weapon at the officers, Rodriguez said.

"The officers ordered him to drop the gun and when he turned and pointed his pistol at the officers, Officer Mahoney fired three rounds and Officer Johnson fired one round from 12-gauge shotguns," Rodriguez said.

In an apartment carport in El Monte, east of Los Angeles, Pedro Gonzales, 28, was celebrating with friends at 12:15 a.m. Tuesday by firing a weapon. The El Monte man was shot and killed after he ignored a Los Angeles County sheriff deputy's demand that he drop the weapon, said Deputy Gabe Ramirez.

Gonzales was hit five times after he pointed a .22-caliber revolver at the deputy, Ramirez said.

State seeks end to gas seepage in phone manhole

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Gasoline from an underground storage tank has been seeping into a telephone company manhole for at least five years, and the state Department of Environmental Quality wants it stopped.

The agency has asked for proposals from private environmental companies to conduct a study to determine the source of the leak and how best to clean it up, said Tom Scott, who is in charge of underground storage tank regulations for the DEQ's Shreveport office.

"We will do our best to identify the source and determine the best course of action," Scott said last week. The proposed study is anticipated to cost $200,000.

Scott does not blame South Central Bell for the problem. "They are the unfortunate recipient of the contamination," he said.

The leaking of gasoline into Bell's underground line system at 745 North Market has been going on since at least 1985, according to Scott. "A preliminary study was conducted in 1988 that confirmed the contamination but not the source," he said. "The department identified 20 or 21 locations where tanks are located in the immediate area."

The planned study will be more extensive and hopefully narrow down the exact source.

Lawyer proposes calendar with 28 days a month

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Stewart I. Edelstein says everyone should have a three-day weekend twice a month and 29 holidays a year, and to get that all we have to do is change the calendar to make every month 28 days long.

The current calendar should be revised by the next millennium, which begins in the year 2001, says Edelstein, 42, a lawyer from Southport.

"The calendar is an arbitrary clustering of days," he said. "It's a human invention. ... There's no reason to have 28 days in one month and 31 days in another month. What sense does that make?"

Edelstein proposes that each month be made of up of four weeks that alternate between seven and eight days. That way there would be two three-day weekends each month, and our current holidays could be scheduled on those extra days. Since the new calender would only add up to 360 days, Edelstein is calling for a five-day holiday at the end of the year.

Chamorro shows she must learn

Nicaragua is now said to be as bad off economically as it was under the Sandinistas. Its currency is worthless while the national debt soars. Washington and Western Europe are curtailing loans and the future does not look promising.

If all those troubles were not enough, there is strong new opposition to the government of President Violeta Chamorro. Various democratic leaders, former Contra troops, and peasants are rebelling against the government. More than two dozen people have been killed with another 50 wounded in gun battles between protesters and the army and police.

There are many reasons for the fighting — most over land ownership. Some former owners want their lands back. Mrs. Chamorro also has reneged on campaign promises to Contra troops that she would give them small farms.

It is ironic that the Sandinistas, who control the army and police, are now putting down many of Mrs. Chamorra's strongest campaign supporters. These include businessmen and those in the clergy.

One of the major reasons why the economy is in such a mess is that Mrs. Chamorro has retained thousands of Sandinistas as civil servants. As a result, the government has failed to keep spending in line with income. With the Sandinistas acting not only for the government but the trade unions as well, the democratic forces which brought Mrs. Chamorro to power are furious.

The Nicaraguan president has made a Faustian deal with the Sandinistas and a dangerous situation is unfolding. One would think Mrs. Chamorro learned from worldwide Marxist failures, but apparently she has not.

That's a shame. She has much to learn not only about real democracy but also loyalty to those who brought her to power. In the meantime, the long-suffering Nicaraguan people are suffering more.

'Best' ever census isn't finished yet

The Census Bureau, no longer trumpeting "the best census ever," has released a set of "final" figures. They describe a nation of about 250 million people whose center of gravity is shifting from the East and Middle West to the South and West. In this broad scope the figures are no doubt correct. But those numbers are anything but final and may not be as accurate as America needs and can have.

Pursuant to a court order in a lawsuit brought by New York and other large cities, the bureau's state-by-state tally will bear an important notation, a caution light for states preparing for the decade's legislative reapportionments. It says the figures "are subject to possible correction for undercount or overcount," and says the Commerce Department will decide by July whether to correct them.

That's because for many decades the census has undercounted large cities, where people suspicious of authority evade the enumerators and the enumerators avoid hard counting in hostile neighborhoods. In 1980 the undercount of young black males living in urban pockets was five times the undercount rate for the population as a whole. That's more than an actuarial nicety; it skews the distribution of political power in the form of legislative seats and potentially billions in economic benefits distributed in accordance with populations.

New York City, part of a state that may lose three House seats, has been joined by other urban centers such as Los Angeles and Miami, whose states are the biggest gainers in Congress, to protest the undercount. Their lawsuit has wrung from the Commerce Department an agreement to "consider" adjustments based on selective recanvassing and statistical techniques.

It's a highly technical decision that will have major political consequences. Commerce has expressed doubt that the undercount is either serious or easily corrected. The administration's hostility seems to have a partisan as well as technical dimension, since an adjustment might benefit big cities and therefore Democrats. A federal judge gave Commerce the burden of showing that its decision is reasonable and understandable.

The administration's stance is not reassuring. The bureau's announcement repeatedly speaks of the figures as though they were final. Its claim to a "best ever" census was made laughable by the widespread lack of public cooperation, a woeful budget and the alarming amount of pure guesswork by enumerators in many neighborhoods. Commerce can justly claim credit for hard work under adverse conditions, but its pride in a "full, fair and efficient" census is not yet secure.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 2, 1900, Secretary of State John Hay announced the "Open Door Policy" to facilitate trade with China.

On this date:

In 1788, Georgia became the fourth state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1921, religious services were broadcast for the first time as KDKA in Pittsburgh aired the regular Sunday service of the city's Calvary Episcopal Church.

In 1929, the United States and Canada reached an agreement on joint action to preserve Niagara Falls.

In 1935, Bruno Hauptmann went on trial in Flemington, N.J., on charges of kidnapping and murdering the infant son of aviator Charles A. Lindbergh. (Hauptmann was found guilty, and executed.)

In 1942, the Philippine capital of Manila was captured by the Japanese in the early days of the Pacific war.

Pentagon mum on body bags, coffins

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is eager to announce in grand numbers just how many tanks and troops and airplanes it has arrayed in all their terrible might against Iraq. The Pentagon will speak in less-specific, less grand terms about how many U.S. soldiers could die if war breaks out in the Persian Gulf.

Anderson

But what the Pentagon won't say is how many body bags and coffins it has stockpiled in Saudi Arabia to handle those casualties. That information is "classified."

The truth is that U.S. strategists don't want to endanger the already shakey patriotic spirit of Americans gearing up for war. While the Pentagon will talk about the clean and shiny implements of war that will assure a victory, it has repeatedly hedged on releasing information that would bring the human cost of that victory front and center in American minds.

"That kind of information" doesn't need to be splashed around in print during the holidays, one House Armed Services Committee staffer told us. "No one wants to hear it."

"No one wants you to hear it," would be more accurate.

A Pentagon spokesman told our reporter Paul Parkinson that logistical information about bodies bags, coffins and other preparations to handle the dead is "classified." He explained that by releasing the numbers, the Pentagon would "give the enemies an advantage."

Documents we have obtained show that one Marine mortuary unit and two Army Reserve mortuary units have been deployed to Saudi Arabia, but the specific number of people in those units, and the number of casualties they can handle is "classified."

The men and women of those units would clean, dress and prepare the bodies of dead soldiers for return to the United States.

Other advance work for the dead has included the installation of several large refrigeration units to preserve bodies in the heat of the Saudi Desert until they can be flown home.

One Pentagon source went so far as to tell us that there is a worldwide stockpile of 63,000 body bags in the Pentagon inventory, but he refused to say how many have been earmarked for use in Operation Desert Shield or how many have already been shipped there.

He also said the Pentagon has a stockpile of 4,000 metal caskets that can be used and reused for ferrying bodies home, but wouldn't say if any were already on the scene in Saudi Arabia.

When outspoken Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Michael Dugan was fired for having loose lips, one of his more candid comments was this: "The American people will support this operation until body bags come home."

Apparently the Pentagon and the White House now fear that the American people's support would wane if they knew how many empty body bags had been sent over.

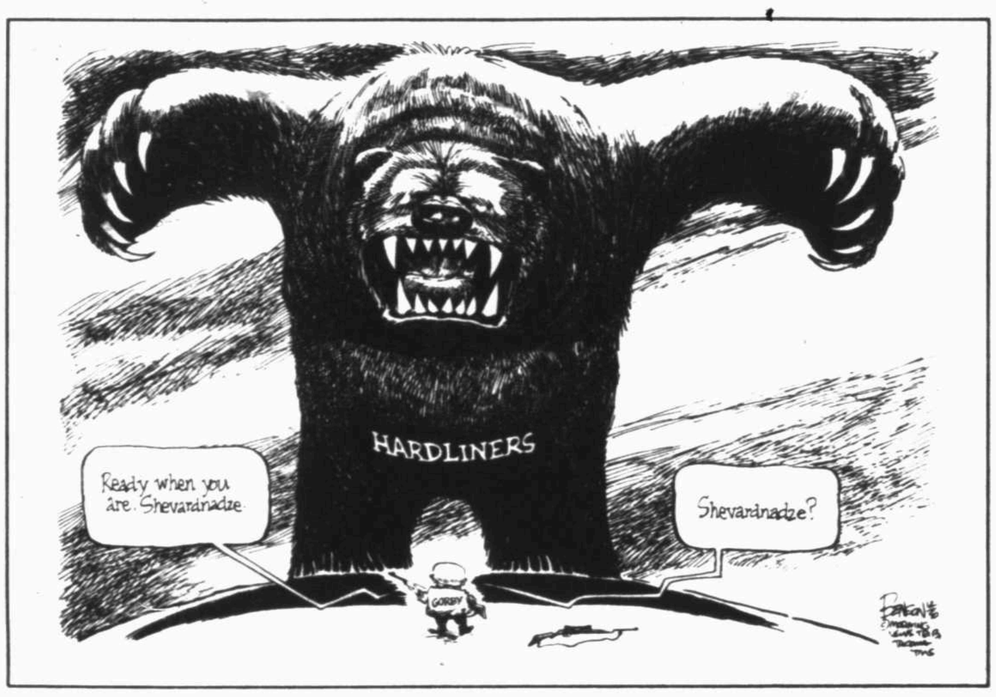

We reported in November that President Bush had been sobered by the top-secret casualty estimates the Pentagon gave him. Those figures say that as many as 10,000 Americans could die in the first week of a war with Iraq, and as many as 30,000 could be dead if the war lasted 20 days.

Iraq's Saddam Hussein has rightly figured that America has no stomach for that many deaths in a war to reclaim Kuwait and its oil. He is counting on America's soft-heartedness as part of his own battle strategy. For his part, Saddam is not hampered by similar sentiments. His own casualty estimates tell him to expect 10 Iraqi deaths for every one American soldier who dies.

MILITARY-INDUSTRIAL COMPLEXITIES — The Central Intelligence Agency estimates that 60 percent of all machinery production in the Soviet Union is defense related. That means that there is more than one superpower with a military-industrial complex struggling to stay alive. American defense plants will lose billions of dollars if Congress trusts that the Soviet Union is no longer a threat. So the Pentagon issues dire warnings that the Soviets still have a terrible arsenal and that the arms race is not over. Meanwhile, on the other side of the world, Soviet Defense Minister Dimitri Yazov is saying the same thing about America.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Some words of wisdom about American presidential campaigning were uttered recently by someone who should know. Michael Dukakis, using statistics from a Harvard University study, noted that each candidate can expect 9.8 seconds on the nightly news each day. Dukakis said, "If this thing is reduced to which one of the two candidates ... can say something that is the cleverest for 9.8 seconds, then we've got a problem." We do indeed.

Seventeen-year lapse too much all at once

Rip Van Wattle woke up. He had fallen asleep during a Gerry Ford State of the Union speech in 1974 and opened his eyes just in time to see the Madonna video on Ted Koppel's show.

Buchwald

"I must have drunk too much Sleepy Time Tea," he said. "Did I miss anything?"

"Not much," I told him.

"Have we beat the hell out of the Russians yet?" he wanted to know.

"No," I said. "As a matter of fact we're now sending them a billion dollars' worth of food because they are not doing too well."

"You have to be kidding," Rip yelled. "Why are we bailing out communists?"

"Because they have become our friends. They're pulling their troops out of Eastern Europe, and we're dismantling all our missiles in Western Europe. There is even a McDonald's in Moscow."

"Now I know you're joking. America would never permit a McDonald's to open in Russia. They could steal our recipe for french fries."

"Rip, I don't know if anyone told you this before, but the Berlin Wall is down and there is only one Germany."

"Why would they do that in a Cold War?"

"Because the Russians decided that the wall was a German problem, not a Soviet one. Germany is one country with one beer and one Volkswagen."

"I'm sorry that I woke up. What other things did I miss?"

"We're practically at war with Iraq because it invaded Kuwait."

"Does that mean we have to fight Syria?"

"No. Syria is on our side."

"How did Iraq get to be so powerful?"

"All the NATO powers armed her when she declared war on Iran."

"Does Margaret Thatcher know about this?"

"She lost her job because the party thought she was too tough."

"As a woman?"

"No, as a man."

"How much is a gallon of gas?"

"One dollar and 60 cents. It will probably go higher, unless we get a deal from Iraq."

"Is Gerry Ford still president?"

"No, he's playing golf. He was replaced by Jimmy Carter who was replaced by Ronald Reagan who spent a trillion dollars fixing up the country. You didn't have any of your money in a savings and loan institution, did you?"

"Just my life savings."

"You're lucky. Some people lost a lot more than that. Are you aware that George Bush is president of the United States?"

"No. Does it have anything to do with me?"

"Not much. Bush wants to fight in Iraq, give tax relief to the rich people at home and veto any equal rights bills. You don't fit into any of those categories, do you?"

"No, I don't. Well, I guess I'll go back to sleep."

"How are you going to do that?"

"I'll watch Dan Quayle talk to schoolchildren."

Language makes shifts to remain functional

'There's a disconnect between Baker and the White House on this one."

I heard that phrase while prowling the corridors of power. It was a hallway remark, an exchange between political appointees, hardly suitable as a citation for lexicographers, but its recording here will have to suffice.

Safire

The overheard conversation had to do with a disagreement between the secretary of state and the White House National Security Council staff. Apparently the communication between these centers of power was broken, and what was termed a disconnect had taken place. But it was not a disconnection; the word has a sense beyond the physical breakage of contact.

The earliest modern citations for this noun use of the verb disconnect were non-metaphoric, purely physical: "Most of our citations have to do with phone-company usage," says James Rader, etymologist for Random House II. "In the November 1982 Maclean's magazine, this appeared: 'The number of disconnects for non-payment is no higher than usual.'" The obvious meaning of the noun was "the cutoff of telephone service because the subscriber didn't pay" (followed by a Darth Vader recorded voice informing the caller that "That number is no longer in service," a euphemism for the previous "That number has been disconnected").

When did disconnect, a noun for a cutoff of slow payers, make a connection with a meaning of "breakdown of communication between people or policies"?

The earliest citation in the Random House files credits the pollster and political analyst Pat Caddell (famed for his "national malaise memo" in the Carter era). Caddell, backing the nuclear-freeze movement in 1984, was described by Mother Jones magazine as "steaming over the intellectual and moral bankruptcy of the Democratic Party — its 'disconnect,' as he put it, from the vast forces for sweeping social change that are waiting to be mobilized: 'Look at the energy that is out in this country that is not being coalesced and put together!'"

Caddell's use of disconnect as a noun caught on; in diplomacy, it means "the breaking off of discussions or negotiations," and in politics, I find that it has gained these meanings: "1. out-of-touchedness, or the failure to perceive the direction of a movement; 2. misunderstanding based on lack of communication; 3. outright disagreement."

Thus, we have witnessed what grammarians call a functional shift — a change in the use of a word from its customary status to another part of speech.

Edmund Burke, the English political leader, would be pleased at the functional shift that turns the verb disconnect into a noun with such nice political nuances. Writing in 1769 of "the Present State of the Nation" (a phrase that was picked up by Americans writing the Constitution as State of the Union), Burke used disconnexion much as disconnect is being used today in warning of "a spirit of disconnexion, of distrust, and of treachery among public men."

Peter Norton, the computer-software genius, sends in a clipping from The New York Times Book Review: usually, the number of pages in a book is (I construe "the number" to be singular) listed right after the author's name, but in this case the word unpaged appears.

"I shudder to think what unpaged might actually mean," Norton word-processes and laser-prints, "but whatever it does, surely your colleagues meant unnumbered."

Publishers have been using unpaged to mean "having no page numbers" since 1874. but there may be an uneasiness about possible confusion with "having no pages," which is why unpaginated should be preferred.

Bill would require Israel to leave Gaza

JERUSALEM (AP) — Left-wing legislators said Tuesday they will propose a bill requiring Israel to withdraw from the Gaza Strip, as more Palestinians died in the 3-year-old uprising against Israeli rule in the occupied lands.

Soldiers shot and killed four Palestinians Tuesday, two in Gaza and two in the West Bank — territories Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East War.

The Gaza proposal would mark the first time Israeli lawmakers formally urged quitting Gaza — breeding ground of the revolt that now has cost 790 Palestinian deaths at Israeli hands and 57 Israeli deaths.

Parliamentary deputies Ran Cohen of the Citizens' Rights Movement and Amnon Rubinstein of the Shinui (Change) Party were drafting the measure on Gaza, a squalid seaside area containing 750,000 Palestinians. About 1 million Palestinians live in the West Bank.

"Continued rule over the Gaza Strip is causing tremendous damage to ... Israel, militarily, economically and also from a standpoint of preserving Israeli democracy," Cohen said.

Legislator Haim Ramon, a left-wing member of the Labor Party, the largest opposition faction, supported the measure, arguing on state TV that Gaza was a "burden" on Israel.

Ramon said the proposal would ask Israel to withdraw from Gaza after making security arrangements, or within two years. Army radio said the area would be handed over to the United Nations or to a governing body of Palestinians.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's governing right-wing Likud bloc wants to keep control of the occupied lands. In a statement read on state television, Likud accused Labor of "political bankruptcy" for considering support for a Gaza withdrawal plan.

Likud has a good chance of blocking the measure if it remains united in opposing it.

If Parliament passes the bill, it would be binding as law. Right-wingers could try to delay implementation by appealing to the Supreme Court.

The legislation underscored debate here about keeping control over Gaza, whose refugee camps have supplied many uprising activists.

Fifty-two soldiers who served in Gaza wrote Shamir urging withdrawal from there "as soon as possible." Labor legislator Yossi Beilin proposed last month that Israel agree to a Palestinian state in Gaza.

Soldiers shot two masked Palestinians to death Tuesday in Gaza, according to the army and Arab reports. The men, Osama Mohammed Abu Tiba, 20, and Adnan Mustafa Ismael, 23, were painting anti-Israeli graffiti in Khuzaa village near Khan Yunis, the reports said.

Army regulations allow soldiers to shoot at masked Palestinians who ignore warning shots.

An army statement said one man was wanted as a supsect in the unrest and that both carried knives and toy pistols and had failed to heed orders to halt. It suggested warning shots were fired.

Troop gunfire in the West Bank killed two other Palestinians during demonstrations for Fatah Day, marking the 26th anniversary of the first armed attack in Israel by the mainstream Palestine Liberation Organization faction Fatah. The army confirmed the deaths.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sent a message to PLO chief Yasser Arafat marking Fatah Day, in which Saddam urged Palestinians to persevere and fight "the infidels and their agents."

Israel radio said one man was slain near Nablus when an officer shot at firebomb-throwers. Arab reports identified the man as 19-year-old Bilal Faadiq. The other man, Saleh Abu Alrub, 20, was killed during a clash in Kabatiyeh, Arab reports said.

Albanians fleeing to Greece

MOUNT MOURGANA, Greece (AP) — Tired Albanians wearing tattered clothes fled by the thousands into Greece on Tuesday, crossing snow-covered Mount Mourgana, and many said border guards did not try to stop them.

The hard-line Communist government of Albania denied reports that the frontier had been opened and repeated that it was committed to democratic reforms.

Albanians braved sub-freezing temperatures, snow and craggy terrain to cross through the remote northwestern border outpost of Tsamandas. A police spokesman in nearby Filiates said more than 3,500 crossed overnight.

That number could be higher, however, because police said many more refugees might not have reported to Greek authorities.

Refugees, most of them ethnic Greeks, huddled around small campfires in the pre-dawn haze Tuesday while a few soldiers manning the border post along the once tightly guarded frontier tried to stay warm.

"They pick this spot to cross the frontier for two reasons: There is a small goat path leading here and the Albanian border guards are letting them out," a Greek military source said on condition of anonymity.

Clearhos Bolomos, a 45-year-old electrician, sat barefoot trying to mend what remained of his shoes after a 12½ hour trek from the Albanian village of Aliko.

"The soldier told us we were traitors, pointed his machine gun at us, spat at us and let us through," he said, referring to the Albanian border guard.

Most refugees said they left Albania because they disagreed with the Communist regime. But many others said they came to Greece seeking work and a better life.

Albania's four-decade-old leadership began minor reforms last year, then accelerated the democratic changes after anti-government riots in December.

Last month, political opposition parties were legalized and the government pledged that February elections would be democratic. Many refugees said they did not have faith in the promised reforms.

In a New Year's message Tuesday, the nation's Communist leader pledged that 1991 would be a turning point in the country's democratization.

President Ramiz Alia said the first democratic election in February will be "completely free," Albania's ATA news agency reported Tuesday.

The Greek government called on ethnic Greeks to remain in Albania, where it says they comprise about 350,000 of the 3.3 million population.

Greek authorities estimate that 95 percent of the refugees are ethnic Greeks from nearby border villages. They are given temporary residence permits; Albanians who are not of Greek origin are bused to a U.N. refugee p near Athens.

Refugees say Albanian authorities ordered border guards to stop shooting at people trying to escape across the frontier after police killed five men trying to cross on Dec. 11.

"We got a lot of townspeople together and decided to cross into Greece. Rumors said that this border (Tsamandas) was open so we came here with about 60 people from our village," said Aristides Dalamis, 32.

The Albanian government on Monday denied the 100-mile border with Greece was open. It said reports of the opening were made by foreign media in an attempt to incite Albanians to leave the country illegally.

In the Greek border town of Filiates, Mayor Pantelis Koufalas said the sudden influx of refugees had severly strained the local economy. He said there were 4,000 refugees in the town, which has a population of 5,000.

He said the Albanians had no clothes, food or shelter and many were sleeping in muddy courtyards and on sidewalks. A four-member local committee was trying to solve all their problems, he said.

"It's as if Alia has decided to just get rid of all these people who don't suport him anyway," a police spokesman said.

Former-Filipino officer arrested

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A former lieutenant colonel who had escaped from prison nearly a year ago after being jailed for trying to overthrow President Corazon Aquino was arrested before dawn Tuesday, the military said.

Former Air Force Lt. Col. Rodolfo Calzado was arrested in Manila's Paco district, said air force spokesman Maj. Alex Teves.

Calzado was convicted of involvement in a coup attempt in August 1987 and was sentenced to 12 years imprisonment at hard labor. Last February, he received a pass to visit a sick relative but never returned, Teves said.

Calzado was involved in the takeover of a naval air station at Sangley Point during the 1987 revolt, in which 53 people were killed.

Honasan was arrested in December 1987 but escaped the following April and remains at large.

Vietnamese war hero pleads for reforms

PARIS (AP) — The Vietnamese Communist war hero who accepted the surrender of Saigon in 1975 now pleads for democratic reforms in his homeland.

Saying that Hanoi's leadership must escape from narrow Marxist-Leninist dogma, Col. Bui Tin offered a grim New Year's Day prediction on a radio broadcast from Paris.

"If we don't change, there will be an explosion this year, because the people can't take it anymore," Tin said. "We must make a real opening, to do away with this breaucracy, dogmatism, conservatism."

A protege of the legendary Ho Chi Minh, Tin, 63, is a dedicated Communist and a national hero in his homeland, where he accepted the surrender of Saigon from Gen. Duong Van Minh.

Tin has been in France since late September, when he was invited by the Communist newspaper L'Humanite to participate in a seminar on the French military role in Indochina.

He stayed on, and since late November has taken to the airwaves of the British Broadcasting Corp.'s Vietnamese-language service in a series of taped interviews.

Tin has appealed for political pluralism, decentralization of power, an end to Vietnam's global isolation and foreign investment.

He also hopes to persuade some of the 2 million Vietnamese who fled overseas in the past decade to return and help rebuild the country.

"We must open to France, to Japan, to the United States, to have normal relations with all our old enemies," Tin said. "Our country needs real changes."

An estimated 2 million Vietnamese listen to his broadcasts, which conclude this month.

Penniless in Paris, Tin depends on a nephew and friends for food. He would like to return to Vietnam in a few months, but acknowledges it might be dangerous. The secret police in Hanoi have interrogated his family, he said.

The son of a justice minister in the pre-war imperial court, Tin broke with his family and joined Ho's guerrilla army in 1945 to end French rule in Indochina.

A regimental commander at 27, Tin took part in the Viet Minh's crushing defeat of the French at Dien Bien Phu in 1954 and fought against South Vietnam and its U.S. ally as a colonel and war correspondent for the army newspaper.

He helped supervise the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Vietnam in 1973 and rode one of the first North Vietnamese tanks into Saigon on April 30, 1975.

The tank commander deferred to Tin as the ranking officer and allowed him to accept President Minh's surrender.

Tin later became a newspaper editor and retired from the army in 1982.

But he was disenchanted by the long imprisonment of former Saigon officials, the flight of Vietnamese boat people and growing corruption in the party.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Peace activists think their presence can prevent war

BY Dilip Ganguly

JUDAYYIDAT AR'AR, Iraq (AP) — Deep in the Arabian desert, retired British schoolteachers, German mothers and teen-age Belgians danced to tunes from guitars and flutes and sang "We Shall Overcome."

The 50 Western peace activists believe the presence of their "peace camp" near the Iraqi-Saudi frontier could help avert war in the Persian Gulf.

They began the New Year by chanting for peace and planting an olive tree on the Iraqi-Saudi border. On New Year's Eve, candles were lighted, a bell heralded 1991 and silent prayers were offered.

Iraqi soldiers, some of them teen-agers, were bemused by it all. They watched from a distance, their anti-aircraft gun positions ready, in constant contact with radar stations.

Iraqi officers, however, joined in a special peace prayer and New Year's Eve dinner of vegetable soup, frozen meat, bread and tea served up by the peace activists.

About 260 miles southwest of Baghdad — and only a little more than a mile from the Saudi border — the peace camp presents an incongruous appearance.

It is fenced with baroed wire. Soldiers with submachine guns guard its only entrance. At night, foot patrols keep watch on the camp residents — for their safety, as an Iraqi official said.

"Watch out. There are land mines in the area. Don't try to cross the barbed wire," advised John Livesey, 61, a retired officer from the New Zealand army, pointing to the camp's perimeter.

The camp is housed in an abandoned shelter for Iraqi Muslims making the pilgrimage to Islam's holy shrines of Mecca and Medina in Saudi Arabia.

During the six-hour drive from Baghdad to the area, visiting cameramen were ordered by Iraqi officials not to take photos and reporters were told not to write about military movements.

The 21-seat bus carrying the journalists was kept under constant surveillance by two cars, and an Iraqi official sat facing the group to keep a close watch.

The camp was set up on Christmas Eve. In between prayers for peace, residents divide the chores of cooking and cleaning. In their spare time, the activists play table tennis and chess.

Organizers say the camp has accepted no financial help from the Iraqis.

The camp's residents shuttle back and forth between the camp and Baghdad. Among them is was one American — William Brown of Sioux Falls, S.D.

Brown, who said he served in Vietnam for three years beginning 1969, now organizes trips to the border from Baghdad.

Camp organizers said at least 23 Americans are scheduled to join the camp on the eve of Jan. 15. The U.N. Security Council has ordered Iraq out of Kuwait by that time and authorized use of military force if needed.

"We are right here up at the frontier between the armies of both sides," said Pat Arrowsmith, 60, who works for London-based Amnesty International. "Our only purpose is to prevent any military hostility betweeen the two forces."

Quayle stresses battle-readiness

IN SOUTHWESTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle on Tuesday stressed battle-readiness as he met with U.S. pilots and sailors whose new year holds the prospect of war.

"Happy New Year," he told the troops. "Last year, 1990, Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait. This year, 1991, Saddam Hussein will leave Kuwait."

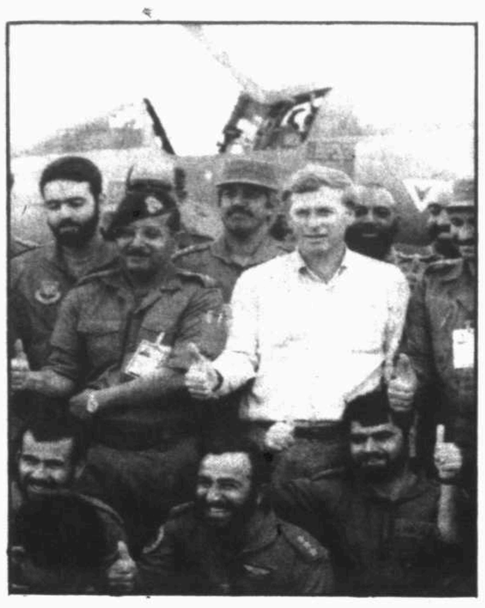

"We are ready, willing and able to do what needs to be done," Quayle told a group from the 48th Tactical Fighter Wing Provisional at their desert base.

After two days of touring military sites, Quayle sought to dispel any doubts created by the earlier statements of a top commander that the troops would not be fully ready for battle by Jan. 15, the United Nations deadline for Iraq to end its occupation of Kuwait.

"Believe me... everything is reconciled," Quayle said when a reporter asked him about the Dec. 19 remarks of Lt. Gen. Calvin A.H. Waller, who accompanied Quayle on his tour.

"The troops are ready for whatever decision the president makes," Quayle said.

Quayle declined to say what he thought was the likelihood of war, but it was clear his message to the troops was an effort to boost their fighting spirit in the face of what many said has become a long, boring wait.

"Everybody ready?" he asked a group of fighter pilots aboard the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy. "Yes sir," they replied.

Waller, asked what the vice president accomplished during his tour, praised Quayle for being "absolutely superb in bringing the message... that they are loved and supported at home."

"My job and my mission is to express the American people's gratitude" to the troops, Quayle said.

He told them "the whole world will be grateful" if they are asked to undertake the mission of expelling Iraq from Kuwait. "You are our heroes."

Before heading back to Washington Tuesday night, Quayle also met with the deposed emir of Kuwait, Sheik Jaber al-Sabah, who is now staying in Saudi Arabia.

According to administration officials, Quayle told him, as he told Saudi King Fahd on Sunday, that more money is needed from U.S. allies to help support the U.S. military effort. The emir had no objections to Quayle's request for greater financial backing, officials said.

The Kuwaiti government-in-exile has given $2.5 billion to the U.S. military effort plus $3.3 billion to poorer countries hard hit by the international trade embargo against Iraq.

Saudi Arabia has given $9 billion in cash and in-kind support for the 300,000 American troops plus $3.9 billion to nations hurt by the embargo. The 1991 cost of the U.S. operation has been estimated at $30 billion.

Quayle began the new year by having breakfast with sailors on the Kennedy and speaking to personnel on the flight deck.

Like some of the Marine and Army personnel he visited Monday, some of the men on the Kennedy said they are prepared for war and hope to get it over with quickly.

Gulf crisis hurting Egypt's tourist industry

LUXOR, Egypt (AP) — Luxor's ancient temples and tombs and its hotel swimming pools are awash with free-spending tourists. French, Italian and German accents mingle with American drawls and Australian twangs.

But as they work at a frenetic pace, tourist industry employees in the historic city 450 miles south of Cairo enter 1991 with foreboding.

Kuwait is 1,000 miles away, but the ripple effect of Iraq's takeover of the emirate makes it seem closer.

Jan. 5 has taken on a magical aura as the date the bubble of prosperity will burst. Conventional wisdom among waiters, horse carriage drivers, tour guides, and others who live off the tourist economy is that they'll stop coming after Saturday.

That's the end of the new year's first week — and 10 days before a U.N. deadline for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait or face possible force.

Tourism is the only major industry in Luxor, a city of 140,000 people at the site of the ancient capital of Thebes. The area is home to some of Egypt's greatest monuments.

This sunny and cool time of year is always peak season because of the Western Christmas on Dec. 25, the New Year holiday and then Christmas for Egypt's Coptic Christians on Jan. 7.

Khalil, a taxi driver, said his main problem normally is competition for the tourist dollar from horse-drawn carriages that ply Luxor's picturesque corniche.

"Now," Khalil said, "my problem is Saddam Hussein. He's a crazy man."

Maj. Gen. Yahya el-Bahnassawy, chairman of Luxor's city council, agreed.

"This is what Saddam did to us," el-Bahnassawy said, and reeled off statistics indicating a drop in October of almost 50 percent in tourists, down from 68,000 in 1989 to 36,000 in 1990.

Luxor is not alone in being hurt by the crisis. Fuad Sultan, Egypt's tourism minister, estimated the industry will produce a billion dollars less this year than it would have if Saddam hadn't attacked.

Across the Nile from Luxor, Mohammed Nasr, director-general of antiquities for the West Bank, quantified the harm to one of Egypt's major tourist markets.

"In a good year we have 5,000 to 7,000 people a day in the tombs," Nasr said. "Now we have 2,000 to 3,000, and that's only for the last few days (in late December). Before that, since August, we had very few: 200, 300."

New year welcomes daughter

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The 21-year-old woman was giving birth to her daughter Sydney, Midland's first baby of 1991, and partying was out of the question.

"This is a real blessing for her to come today," said Mrs. Williams, a staffing coordinator for We Care Home Health Agency. "This is luck; she was actually due Jan. 15."

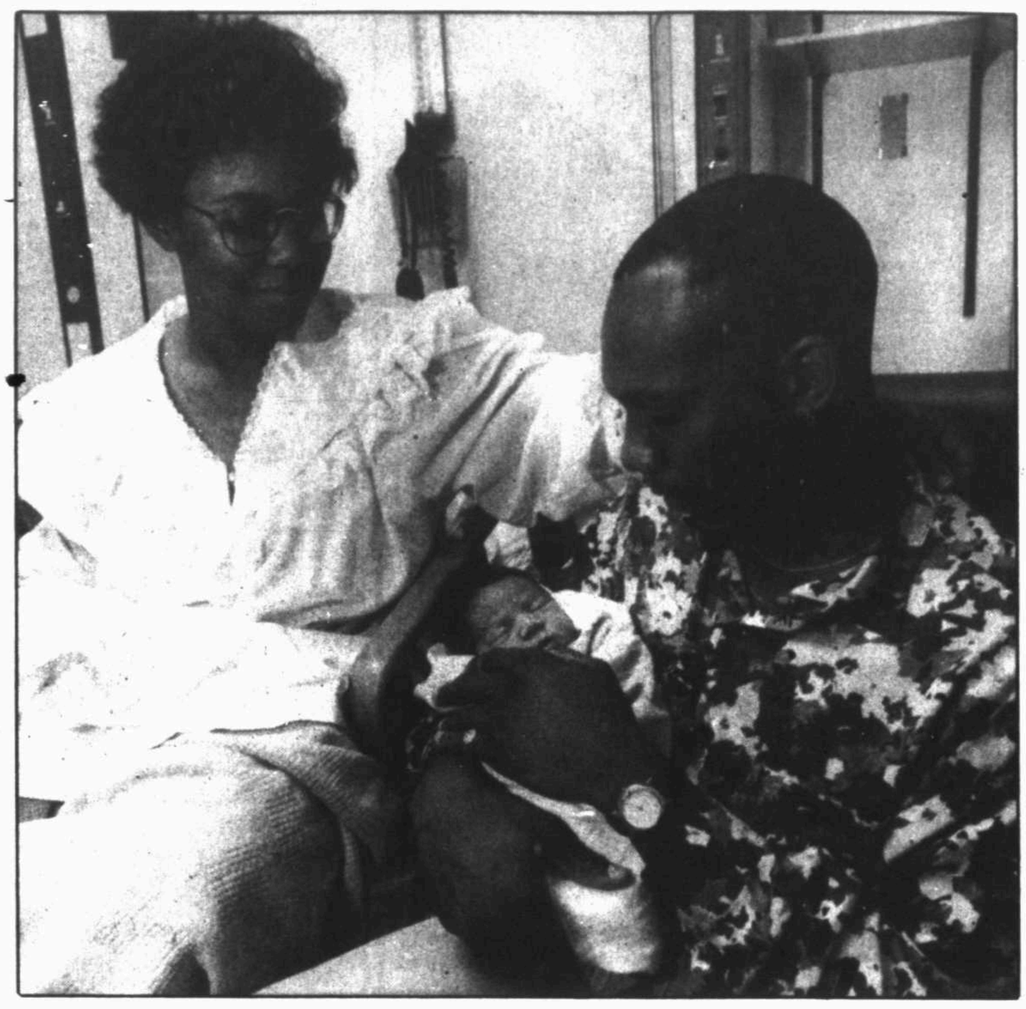

After going into labor around 2:30 a.m., Mrs. Williams gave birth to Sydney Tokia Williams at 5:52 a.m. at Midland Memorial Hospital, maternity nurses said. The 6-pound, 3½-ounce girl measured in at 18 inches.

Mrs. Williams said she and her husband, 23-year-old Terry Williams, spent a quiet New Year's Eve together, so her labor pains didn't interrupt holiday merry-making.

"We just went out and walked and that was all we did yesterday (Monday)," she said. "I told him she was coming, but he didn't believe me."

State high court returns lawsuit in police chase

■ A suit filed in Midland last month is similar to the Mesquite suit on which Monday's ruling was made.

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court ruled Monday that police may be held liable for accidents resulting from high-speed chases in some cases.

The decision reversed earlier rulings in a 1983 Mesquite crash that killed one man. The Supreme Court sent the case back to a Dallas County district court to determine if the police and the city of Mesquite should be held liable.

Brenda Ann Travis sued Mesquite and police officers who followed a suspect driving the wrong way down a one-way street, according to court records.

Ms. Travis' suit is similar to one filed last month in Midland by the father of three children injured in another chase-related crash.

In the Midland crash, which occurred in October 1989, a police officer chased a car-theft suspect the wrong way down a one-way street. The suspect's pickup truck collided with a pickup driven by Michele Demaray, injuring her and her three children.

Mrs. Demaray's estranged husband, Douglas, filed suit on behalf of his children against the city of Midland, the police officer and the suspect involved in the chase.

Demaray's attorney, Robert E. White of Odessa, said last week his client is seeking to recover the childrens' medical expenses and other "undetermined" damages.

In Ms. Travis' case, the suspect's car crashed into her vehicle, killing one of her passengers, Leonel Lozano, according to court documents. She and other passengers were injured.

The trial court ruled against Ms. Travis. The Dallas-based 5th Court of Appeals upheld that decision.

But the Supreme Court's decision, written by Justice C.L. Ray, said police must balance the public risk when deciding whether to give chase. "Public safety should not be thrown to the winds in the heat of the chase," he said.

Justice Eugene Cook wrote a sharp dissent, which in turn drew criticism from Justice Lloyd Doggett, who voted with the majority.

Cook wrote: "The majority has changed 100 years of established

House speaker says he was on trip with friends

FORT WORTH (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis, who was indicted last week on two misdemeanor ethics charges, contends there is nothing wrong with accepting lobbyist-paid trips and gifts.

Lewis

Lewis said he was not swayed by a 1987 trip to a Mexican resort with partners of the San Antonio law firm Heard, Goggan, Blair & Williams, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported in a copyright story Tuesday.

The Fort Worth Democrat's ties to Heard, Goggan led to his indictment last week by a Travis County grand jury. He was indicted Friday on misdemeanor counts of receiving a gift from Heard Goggan and of failing to report the benefit on his public financial disclosure statement.

Lewis, 54, surrendered to authorities Monday and was released on personal recognizance bonds.

The speaker said he would not have gone on the Mexican trip, on which several women were present, had he considered it to be a lobbying trip. The trip was with friends, not lobbyists, he said.

"I was there for the weekend with some friends and not to be influenced," Lewis said. "And I was not influenced."

And, he added, "Any trip we ever took was not to discuss politics but to get away from politics. That was what we always tried to do, and unfortunately we have a situation that maybe got a little out of hand — or maybe the largeness of it, as far as the number of people and everything.

"But it has been grossly taken out of its true, true meaning and perspective, and that was a very innocent thing. But it got exaggerated and people are now trying to say that was largess on elaborate entertainment — lobbyists fraternizing with members. Well, that's not true," he said.

Lewis said his family has stood behind him despite reports that he shared an $825-a-day one-bedroom suite in Manzanillo, Mexico, with a 24-year-old female former employee of the Heard Goggan firm.

Lewis condemned those reports as "trashy" but did not dispute their substance.

"I guess it's the nastiness of this whole thing that bothers me, probably, more than anything," Lewis said. "One thing I have, I've got a very fine wife and some fine kids that believe in me and stand by me under a lot of trying times.

They realize, too, that that's the territory, and that's what they got themselves into when they associated with me."

Lewis vowed to carry on with plans to seek an unprecedented fifth term as speaker Jan. 8, despite rumblings among House members of potential challenges.

But Lewis said he continues to have the support of most legislators.

"What's gratifying, too, is the continuing support I get from the members. They call me with encouragement and say, 'We're with you 100 percent,'" he said.

However, one dissident House member, Al Price, D-Beaumont, has circulated a letter calling for election of the speaker by open ballot. And at least one unnamed committee chairman told the Star-Telegram that he thinks Lewis should resign because the ethics investigation has embarrassed all House members.

During the same period that Lewis went on the Mexican trip and two other vacations with Heard, Goggan staffers, several pieces of legislation that could have hurt the law firm's lucrative delinquent tax collection business died in House committee.

The grand jury indicted Lewis last week on two counts related to Heard Goggan's partial payment of his company's 1987 tax bill. Lewis maintains that the payment was a business settlement, not a gift solicited from a person with legislative interests, as charged in the indictment.

"I have not committed any act that is in violation of the law. I have probably been investigated more than any person who ever served in state government or federal government anywhere," Lewis said.

Lewis, who assailed Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle's handling of the investigation, said he will fight the latest charges as a matter of pride.

If convicted on the two counts, Lewis faces a maximum of 18 months in jail and $3,000 in fines.

"When you're not guilty of something, why should you admit guilt? But I don't think this is going to have any effect at all on what we do in the House," he said.

Traffic toll below projections as countdown deadline nears

Associated Press

Here is a list of traffic fatalities during the holiday period as reported by the Texas Department of Public Safety. The counting period began at 6 p.m. CST Saturday and runs through midnight Tuesday. DPS projected that 28 motorists would die during the count.

1. Arnold Lynn Waid, 33, Austin, driver of vehicle that skidded on ice, left road and rolled at 11:05 p.m. Saturday on U.S. 84, 11 miles west of Snyder in Scurry County.

2. Wayne Martin Swindle, 69, Comanche, driver of pickup that ran off roadway and overturned at 7:25 a.m. Dec. 30 on Texas 36, eight miles east of Comanche.

3. Ngat Thi Cao, 68, Houston, passenger in car that skidded off ice-covered pavement and struck a vehicle stranded in the median of I-45 at 9:45 a.m. Sunday in Navarro County. Five others were injured, one critically.

4. Danny Joe Moore, 20, Rosenberg, driver of car that went out of control on ice-covered roadway and struck another vehicle broadside at 12:50 p.m. Sunday on Texas 6, 6 miles south of Marlin. Three others were injured in the accident.

5. Aletha Ann Brown, 38, Cedar Park, driver of car that went out of control on rain-slick highway and struck a tree at 2 p.m. Sunday on Texas 103, 9.6 miles south of San Augustine. Two passengers were injured.

6. Tack Chan Lee, 18, Killeen, driver of car that ran off roadway and slammed into a tree at 1:30 p.m. Sunday on FM 439, 2.5 miles west of Belton. Four passengers were injured.

7. Chiyon Julia Sin, 15, Fort Hood, passenger killed in accident that claimed life of Tack Chan Lee.

8. Policarpo Balderas, 36, address unknown, driver of vehicle that left roadway and landed upside down in water-filled canal at 8:10 p.m. Saturday on Bixby Road in Cameron County. Balderas and two occupants were trapped in car approximately 30 minutes before rescue units arrived.

9. Francisco Gracia, age and address unknown, passenger in accident that claimed life of Policarpo Balderas. Balderas' wife, Margarita Balderas, 36, was admitted to Valley Baptist Hospital with neck and head injuries.

10. Arturo Munoz Garcia, 25, Houston, driver of car struck by another vehicle which crossed median into oncoming traffic at 7:28 p.m. Dec. 30 in Pasadena.

11. Lori Gentry, 16, Houston, passenger in pickup struck by train at railroad crossing in Pearland at 10:22 p.m. Dec. 30.

12. John Wesley Severe, age and address unknown, driver of vehicle struck by another vehicle at intersection of S. Hulen and SW Loop 820 in Fort Worth at 2:25 a.m. Dec. 31.

13. Perry Davis, 37, address unknown, driver of vehicle that hit Houston Metro bus head-on while on the wrong side of a city street at 10:13 p.m. Monday.

14. Michael James Chard, 44, Seguin, driver of vehicle that left the roadway and overturned at 1 a.m. Tuesday on FM1117, 13 miles south of Seguin. Chard was ejected from the vehicle.

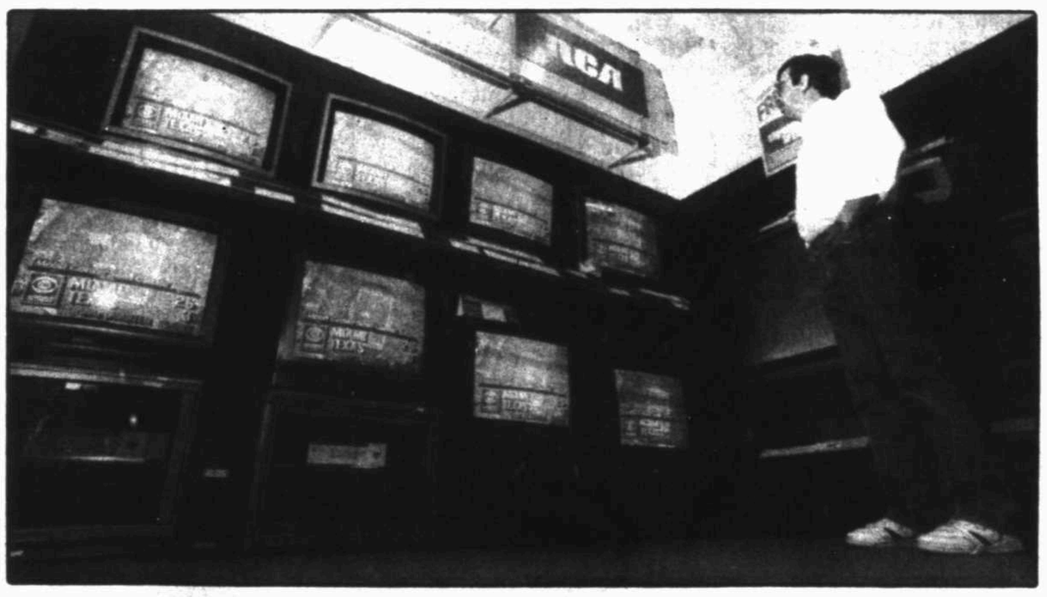

15. Rawls Keith King, 20, Grosebeck, passenger in vehicle that ran off FM164 one-half mile west of Grosebeck and struck a culvert, went airborne then hit a tree. The accident occurred at 2:20 a.m. Tuesday.

16. Kristen Marie Fitzgerald, 20, San Antonio, passenger in vehicle that hit a fixed object on I-37 at the I-35 overpass in San Antonio at 2:15 a.m. Tuesday. She was ejected from the vehicle.

17. Natividad Garza Aguilar, 25, Kerrville, driver of vehicle that swerved across I-10 at 2:35 a.m. Tuesday in Kendall County, then overturned, ejecting her.

18. Patricia Edwards Collins, 47, Nacogdoches, driver of car that ran off County Road No. 280, 5.4 miles southeast of Nacogdoches and came to rest upside down in a creek. The accident was discovered at approximately 8:15 a.m. Tuesday.

19. Gilberto Garcia, 15, Fabens, passenger who fell off farm tractor and was run over by rear tire at 12:05 p.m. on FM 76, four miles west of Fabens.

Disaster scene

There was no escaping the University of Texas' disastrous return to the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day as Midlander Gerald Hubbard, above, discovered. Hubbard said he left his house Tuesday because he couldn't stand to watch the Longhorns get defeated on TV, but when he arrived at Sears in Midland Park Mall he was surrounded by the game. Miami eventually won, 46-3. Another interested onlooker, 12-year-old Kevin Laik, left, takes a break from his shopping to check out the bowl game action. # Industry officials say American's image hurt

DALLAS (AP) — Fort Worth-based American Airlines may be able to convince passengers that its pilots are to blame for numerous canceled and delayed flights, but the public is aware that things aren't working smoothly, industry observers say.

Last week, American officials persuaded a Fort Worth fedral judge to order pilots to quit calling in sick and slowing flights. The pilot's union, Allied Pilots Association, has denied that it has been hampering airline operations.

In seeking outside help, observers say the airline admitted that it had lost control of its pilots and that a labor dispute was moving from the negotiating table and into the sky, The Dallas Morning News reported.

"Anytime you go into federal court, you take a family argument to a third party. That's something we hesitated to do," American's senior vice president for operations Robert W. Baker said. "We held on as long as we could, knowing that once we made the step into the federal courtroom that we were going to hang our laundry out in public."

A hearing is scheduled Jan. 3 at which American management will attempt to make the temporary injunction permanent.

Public awareness of the problem increased with American's criticism of its 8,700 pilots, and passengers may feel caught in a labor battle.

Last Saturday through Monday, more than 1,000 flights were canceled, the newspaper reported.

An American spokesman said 507 pilots were on the airline's sick list as of Monday morning, a much higher number than normal.

Pilots complain that the restraining order has led to the company unfairly blaming them for problems beyond the pilots' control, including bad weather, holiday traffic and Operation Desert Shield's toll on the number of available pilots. More than 250 pilots have been called into military service.

American pilots say they are now pointedly asked whether they're responsible any time their jet misses its schedule.

Baker said he thinks 80 percent of the pilots are performing professionally.

"For the 20 percent that are either calling in sick or otherwise playing these games with us, unfortunately they've given every pilot at American a black eye," he said.

An APA spokesman said union officlas recognize that the public may feel pilots are spiting the passengers, and "we don't want to do that. That's not the way to get back at management."

Man opens fire in crowd; one man killed, two others injured

AUSTIN (AP) — A man pulled a semiautomatic weapon from his jacket and sprayed bullets into a crowd between two East Austin nightclubs early Tuesday, killing one man and injuring two others.

"We were wondering how long it would take to have our first murder of the new year," said Sgt. John Jones of the Austin Police Department. "One hour and 25 minutes."

The shooting occurred between the Casanova I and the Casanova II clubs.

Kevin Edward Thompson, 25, of Killeen was pronounced dead at the scene from a gunshot wound to the back.

The two who were injured had been standing between the two clubs in a crowd.

Phillip McBryde, 36, who was shot in the foot, was listed in fair condition at Brackenridge Hospital on Tuesday. A 15-year-old boy, who was shot in the buttocks, also was listed in fair condition at the same hospital.

Jones said Thompson and a friend were talking outside the two clubs when the suspect walked up to Thompson and began arguing with him. Investigators do not know if Thompson, who moved to Austin in September, knew the man.

"Thompson did not understand what the man was arguing about and turned to walk away," Jones said. "The man pulled a large capacity, semiautomatic weapon from underneath his jacket and shot (Thompson) in the back.

Model trains become lifetime hobby

WACO, Texas (AP) — Omar McKim has a lot of jobs these days.

Even though the 72-year-old former owner of a local music store is retired, he says he has enough work to last a lifetime.

McKim is the president, engineer, conductor, brakeman, track layer and railroad car builder for the Waco and Northwestern Railroad — a large model train layout in his garage-turned-workshop.

"I guess I've always wanted to be engineer," McKim said. "I tried to become an engineer before World War II. I was 5-6 and weighed 135 pounds and they just looked at me and laughed. After the war I should have gone back and applied again."

McKim says he doesn't know how trains got in his blood, but it might have something to with growing up in Anaheim, Calif., where he watched Santa Fe and Southern Pacific trains shuffle to and from Los Angeles.

"Since I am retired and I don't have a lot that I've got to do I enjoy doing this," he said.

A look around his workshop confirms it.

Every corner and cupboard is filled with model railroading supplies, equipment, books and magazines. His workbench is cluttered with the materials of his latest project: placing decals on and painting a couple of cars.

His "pike," which is jargon for a model train layout, measures 16 by 23 feet and is mounted on benches. McKim uses a cart to position himself inside a large loop of track that he stands in the middle of.

"My wife got this cart for me and another one I use to work on the electrical wiring underneath it," he said.

The larger loop takes trains through a tiny model of Quincy, Calif., on the pike's north end and passes a mural of California mountains along two walls.

Under construction on the spike's south end is a model of the Tehachapi Loop, a railroad pass that climbs 75 feet around a mountain in the Tehachapi Mountains between Mojave and Bakersfield, Calif. McKim is building it from scratch — tunnels, mountains and all.

He started building the pike in 1970, as carpenters were closing off the garage and installing air conditioning and heating ducts. Although the garage was finished long ago, McKim isn't near finishing his pike.

"I had to have something other than just running it around in a circle," McKim said. "Since I had grown up with the railroad in California, I thought that might be appropriate.

'I had to have something other than just running it around in a circle. Since I had grown up with the railroad in California, I thought that might be appropriate.'

— Omar McKim, Model train enthusiast

"There are other layouts out there, but most of them take up so much space I would have had to expand the room," he said. His wife, Dolores, didn't mind losing the garage but put her foot down when he talked about expanding it.

"I don't blame her for that; I might have gotten carried away," he said.

McKim said he also chose to build a loop because he wanted something that ran on different levels.

"In my boyhood days they used as many as five locomotives on one train to get around that dang loop, and that gave me an excuse to buy some big locomotives" for his model, he said. "Also, since it's owned by Southern Pacific and operated jointly with Santa Fe, that gave me an excuse to have those two railroads represented on my layout.

"We railroaders trump up excuses to be able to do things," he added.

McKim doesn't work alone. Delores, who McKim describes as the real artist in the company, builds buildings and paints tunnels.

"It keeps me out of trouble during the summertime when I am not reading a book," she said, adding she doesn't have much time to help in the winter because she teaches English at China Spring High School. "Besides, I think we all have that doll-house inclination in us."

McKim's admiration for the railroad doesn't stop with models. His living room is packed with railroading books, and his video library includes tapes on steam locomotives. A few of the tapes he shot himself at area crossings.

Second of two escapees recaptured Monday night

LIVERPOOL, Texas (AP) — The second of two inmates who escaped last week from the Darrington Unit of the Texas prison system was recaptured Monday night.

Brazoria County sheriff's deputies arrested Russell Dudley Kerr, 27, of Harris County, at 10:40 p.m. outside a tavern east of Liverpool, said Darrington Major Arthur Anderson.

Anderson said tavern employees called authorities after Kerr entered the tavern, clad only in pants, seeking food.

"It looks like he was pretty cold," Anderson said.

Kerr, who is serving a 60-year sentence for aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon, has been returned to Darrington and was charged in Brazoria County with escape, Anderson said.

Led by a cocker spaniel, Brazoria County officials on Monday recaptured an inmate who escaped with Kerr.

Authorities arrested Christopher Merwin Stout, 35, about 12:15 p.m. Monday, after a family pet in the area began barking at a camping trailer between Liverpool and Danbury.

Brazoria County Sheriff's investigator Sgt. David Wallace said the dog, named Wiggles, kept barking at the trailer until his owner called authorities.

Wallace said Stout was lying in the trailer, trying to hide, but gave himself up to officers without a struggle.

"He was still in possession of a loaded shotgun, but he didn't attempt to use it," Wallace said.

Stout was wearing only bluejeans and socks and told authorities he was cold and hungry. He said he had not eaten since Thursday.

Authorities had launched a massive manhunt complete with bloodhounds and German shepherds after Stout and Kerr fled the Darrington Unit near Rosharon on Thursday. The pair allegedly stole a prison system truck and drove out passed guards about 4 p.m. Thursday.

Black newspaper pioneer dies at 82 in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH (AP) — Services for Raymond L. "Pie" Melton, considered a pioneer in the creation of the alternative black press here, are scheduled for Saturday.

Melton, co-owner of The Fort Worth Mind, died Saturday at his home after a lengthy illness. He was 82.

"He was the foremost black newspaperman in the city of Fort Worth," said Lenora Rolla, director of the Tarrant County Black Historical Society.

Melton started The Mind, which for two decades was the only black newspaper in town, in 1932 with C.R. "Coot" Wise. Wise is also deceased.

Melton published the weekly almost single-handedly until he became ill four years ago.

"He was a funny man, but a loving man as well, said a longtime friend of Melton's, Francine Morrison. "I can see him with a car full of papers, selling papers four or five weeks old.

"He loved to be out among people."

Melton was born in Waxahachie but lived in Fort Worth most of his life. He attended Morehouse College in Atlanta before dropping out to start his newspaper.

He was a World War II veteran and was active in many civic and political organizations from which he received numerous honors and awards for his services.

Ms. Rolla said Melton used his newspaper to bring current issues in politics, religion and education to the black community.

"They really covered the waterfront," Ms. Rolla said. "We relied on them."

Calvin Littlejohn, owner of a photography studio, said he met Melton in 1935, a year after coming to Fort Worth. Littlejohn remembered Melton as a "very friendly, outgoing person ... very easy to like and he had a very, very close community concern for Fort Worth.

"Anything he saw that would help the community, well, his paper was a champion for it."

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at St. Andrews United Methodist Church.

Ranch from 'Dallas' foreclosed Tuesday

DALLAS (AP) — Where was J.R. Ewing when his stately homestead needed him?

The 41-acre Southfork Ranch, home of the wheeling-dealing Ewing clan of "Dallas" fame, hit turbulent economic times and was foreclosed on New Year's Day.

An auction held Tuesday on the steps of the Collin County Courthouse in McKinney attracted only one bidder, Glenfed Financial Corp. of California.

The international symbol of Texas glitz and glamor was purchased for $7 million in 1984 by Terry V. Trippet, in partnership with the defunct Commodore Savings.

Tuesday, it was foreclosed upon for $3,150,000.

Southfork, which is not inhabited, ranked as the state's ninth most popular tourist attraction in 1989.

The ranch, located about 25 miles north of Dallas, hit hard times when the Trippet-Commodore Savings partnership, known as Collin Commodore Ltd., defaulted on an $8.2 million note to Glenfed in early 1990.

Henry Simon, an attorney representing Collin Commodore and Trippet, said Glenfed, as creditor, took the property after Trippet failed to find another buyer.

"The deal (with Glenfed) was that we had to find someone willing to pay them $6.5 million dollars," Simon said. "We were unable to do that."

Collin Commodore filed for bankruptcy in March and Simon said since then Trippet had worked with the courts and Glenfed to try to find a buyer for the ranch.

Simon said he will try to enter into an agreement with Glenfed some time this week or next week regarding operations at Southfork.

But Simon declined to say whether Trippet plans to repurchase the property or enter an agreement to take over tourist operations.

"We may enter into some sort of agreement with Glenfed and continue to operate Southfork," Simon said. "I don't think Glenfed wants to own it in the long-term. I think they want to sell it."

Trippet's wife said Tuesday he was on a hunting trip and unavailable for comment.

Simon said the current tour operators have been working at the ranch for six or seven years, but they would have to stop operations until a new agreement is made.

Arthur I. Ungerman, who acted as substitute trustee for the auction, said tourist operations were closed Tuesday.

Southfork gained fame as "Dallas" mesmerized Americans each week with the tales of a wealthy oil baron's family. But its fortunes seem to have fallen and its ties to the television series, which is broadcast in more than 100 countries and more than 30 languages, have been all but severed.

In August 1989, Lorimar Distribution, producer of "Dallas," filed a lawsuit to cut off sales at the ranch of souvenirs related to the series.

Security guard faces charges in stabbing

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police arrested a store security guard in connection with the robbery of a Fort Worth department store in which one employee was stabbed to death and another was critically wounded.

Sergio Morales Martinez, 24, of Grand Prairie was arrested Sunday after the surviving woman in the Saturday night attacks named him as the assailant, authorities said.

Martinez was charged with capital murder in the death of Penny Heath, 35, of Fort Worth, who died in Mervyn's Department Store in southwest Fort Worth after being stabbed in the neck.

He was arraigned Sunday night, then taken to the Tarrant County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bond.

Mrs. Heath and assistant store manager Leslie Graves, 24, were stabbed about 10:15 p.m. Saturday as they were closing the store, Ms. Graves told police. She said that when she went to a back room to set the burglar alarm, she saw a man with a nylon stocking over his head.

The man had a knife in his hand, and when he ordered her to walk into the store office, she began screaming for help, she said. The cry for help brought Ms. Heath from the store's north door, where she was waiting, and the man ordered both women into the store office.

Texan wants polygraph tests admitted

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Texas businessman Travis Ward wants jurors in his conspiracy trial to know that he passed lie detector tests when he denied bribing Mississippi public service commissioners.

Ward's answers to questions were "non-deceptive, and ... he was truthful," said polygraph examiner Eric J. Holden of Dallas.

Ward, 68, of Dallas, is scheduled for trial Jan. 22 in U.S. District Court in Meridian on one count of conspiracy and 13 counts of interstate travel to aid bribery.

He is accused of conspiring with former Public Service Commission members Lynn Havens and D.W. Snyder to force Mississippi Power & Light Co. to settle litigation with United Gas Pipe Line Co. of Houston.

Ward is accused of paying off a $50,000 loan for Havens, paying Snyder $16,000 and giving free trips to both commissioners.

Ward's first trial in August 1989 ended in a mistrial when jurors could not agree on a verdict.

If convicted on all counts, Ward could get up to 135 years in prison and $3.5 million in fines.

In addition to his request for admission of his lie detector tests, Ward wants:

— Havens to return from a federal prison near Pensacola to testify. U.S. Magistrate John R. Countiss III has granted that request. Havens testified in the first trial that Ward gave him cash and loans which he did not repay. But Havens denied there was a conspiracy.

— The testimony of the late John R. Hutcherson, a Jackson lawyer who represented United Gas, introduced into evidence.

"The testimony ... is relevant and is critical to this case," wrote Ward's lawyer, Al Binder of Jackson.

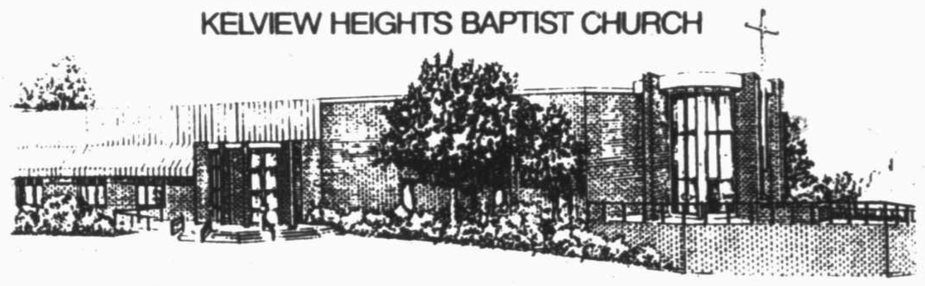

— Former PSC lawyer Hiram Eastland of Jackson to keep from repeating his testimony from Snyder's trial that Corinth businessman Thurston Little remarked after the United Gas settlement: "I'll tell you what. (Ward) not only owes me, but — you don't know this, but after the rate case he promised to pay D.W. Snyder $100,000."

— Federal prosecutors barred from questioning the $20 million paid by United Gas for Ward's natural gas wells.

— Federal prosecutors barred from inferring that money from the Cayman Islands was ever paid to PSC commissioners or others. Ward had a bank account in the Cayman Islands.

WEDNESDAY

BUSINESS WATCH

Prime lowered

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bank of America will cut its prime lending rate from 10 percent to 9.5 percent, making it the first of the nation's 10 largest banks to do so in recent weeks.

In a brief announcement late Monday, the bank said it would lower its "reference rate," the term it uses for the prime, starting Wednesday.

A few smaller lenders have reduced the key rate during the past several weeks. The first large bank — 13th-ranked First National Bank of Chicago — lowered its prime Dec. 20.

The vast majority of banks have kept their prime rate at 10 percent since Jan. 8, 1990, when it was lowered from 10.5 percent.

T-bills flat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities were unchanged to lower in Monday's auction.

The Treasury Department sold $10.02 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 6.52 percent, the same as in the last auction on Dec. 21. Another $10.04 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 6.48 percent, down from 6.57 percent on Dec. 21.

The rate on three-month bills was last lower when they sold for 6.51 percent on June 20, 1988. The six-month rate was the lowest since May 2, 1988, when it averaged 6.41 percent.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 6.72 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,835.20 and 6.79 percent for a six-month bill selling for $9,670.60.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Monday that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable rate mortgages, fell to 6.95 percent last week, down from 6.96 percent the previous week.

USG woes

CHICAGO (AP) — USG Corp. said the anemic construction industry is forcing it to defer debt payments, restructure finances and sell a major subsidiary.

The company, one of the nation's largest building products manufacturers, said it would not make a $105 million payment on principal that was due Monday, putting it technically in default and subject to court action by lenders.

USG said, however, that major bank lenders have agreed to go along with the restructuring plan while it continues to make interest payments on the $105 million.

Record expenses

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese corporate executives wined, dined and golfed their way to a record $36.53 billion in expense account spending between February 1989 and January 1990, a tax agency report said Wednesday.

The annual report compiled by the National Tax Administration Agency said the figure was 9.4 percent higher than the previous year's, which had been the record.

Company expense account spending is tax deductible in Japan.

The agency said it calculated this year's figure by analyzing reports from 59,772 of 1,962,026 businesses.

Canada seeks to join U.S.-Mexico talks

■ Obstacles to Canadian participation in U.S.-Mexico free-trade negotiations are being swept away.

By Clyde H. Farnsworth
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Officials of the United States, Canada and Mexico say they are fast sweeping away obstacles to Canadian participation in the free-trade negotiations expected to open in 1991 between the United States and Mexico.

The three countries are expected to begin shaping a single agreement that would create a North American common market of 350 million people.

"We're clearing away the underbrush and will start on the big trees very quickly," said Canada's minister of international trade, John C. Crosbie.

Since August the three countries have held a series of unpublicized high-level meetings, the latest just before Christmas, to try to work out the shape of the new negotiating table.

They have announced nothing, but trade officials say they have set a deadline of Feb. 1 by which time they expect to reach agreement on the ground rules for a three-way deal.

Most U.S. officials say they would prefer to bring Mexico into an agreement based on the accord that Canada and the United States signed two years ago, rather than negotiating a separate pact with Mexico.

Separate agreements with Canada and Mexico would mean two sets of rules, rights and obligations, complicating the tasks of exporters seeking markets in all three countries.

"If you look at it from a long-term perspective, we're going to be more regional," said a senior American trade official, who asked to remain anonymous. "So why not start being regional now? From the point of efficiency and use of resources, it makes a lot of sense."

Antonio Ocaranza, press attache at the Mexican Embassy in Washington, said: "From the beginning we have been interested in liberalizing trade in the three countries, and our long-term goal is a North American free-trade area. But for the specifics of the present negotiations, we are still studying the modalities and the requirements that such modalities would entail."

The United States is also considering something similar in the "Enterprise for the Americas" program of prospective trade agreements with South American countries willing to cut their trade barriers.

The apparent collapse in early December of a four-year effort to liberalize and revamp world trade has added impetus to the North American discussions, which would give the three partners greater leverage in dealing with the 12-nation European Community and others.

'StyroCop' enforces polystyrene foam ban

Lee Barrett stands beside a stack of polystyrene foam cups. The long-time environmentalist enforces Portland's year-old ban on polystyrene foam fast food containers.

By William C. Crum

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Like a patrolman on the beat, Lee Barrett strides into a Chinese restaurant, flashes his ID card and has a look around. "StyroCop" is on the trail of illicit carryout containers.

The city has gotten a complaint that the restaurant is putting its egg rolls and fried rice in boxes that violate Portland's year-old ban on polystyrene foam fast-food containers.

Barrett, 44, a longtime environmental activist, is the ban's enforcer. A local television reporter dubbed him StyroCop — a takeoff on the movie "RoboCop" — his first day on the job and he's become something of a celebrity.

But while he's easily Portland's most visible environmentalist, Barrett is reluctant to take credit for leading the city into the "green decade."

"What I do is a fly speck as far as recycling is concerned," he said. "Others do so much. A lot of people have been toiling ... and they're still out there doing the work."

Barrett moved to Portland from New York in 1972, a year after the Oregon Legislature passed the nation's first "bottle bill" imposing a 5-cent deposit on beverage cans and bottles.

The bill was Barrett's first real exposure to recycling.

"Except for a dim, dim memory of saving tin cans during the Korean War, there was no recycling consciousness at all," he said.

Within a few years, Barrett was on the board of Portland Recycling Team Inc., a can and bottle depot. By 1978, he was general manager. When Portland advertised for a contractor to enforce the plastic foam ban, he applied.

Barrett believes Americans must go beyond recycling by rejecting products that are overpackaged and becoming accustomed to using things again and again.

"As a recycler, our creed has always been reduce, reuse, recycle," he said. "Recycling is the last thing to do before you throw it away."

Opponents of the ban argue that environmentalists should work with the industry to make polystyrene recyclable. Otherwise, they say, restaurants will substitute paper, which will wind up in landfills.

The Portland law does not restrict containers made of paper or plastic not blown into foam. Those have been the alternatives used by fast-food restaurants, the only industry affected by the Portland law. Few have been willing to switch to glassware and dishes.

The 1.2 million people in the metropolitan area send 99,000 tons of plastic to the landfill each year. That is 9 percent by weight of Portland's garbage and 18 percent to 20 percent by volume.

Advocates pushing stricter recycling rules say the plastic is not biodegradable but simply breaks into small pieces. Birds eat the pieces of plastic and die.

Business cited by Barrett face fines of $250 for a first offense and $500 for each subsequent offense.

Neither a police officer nor a health inspector, Barrett only responds to complaints received by the city. He's written only a handful of tickets but says the law is a start and has raised public awareness.

Back at the Chinese restaurant, Barrett spots a stack of carryout containers in the kitchen and holds one up.

"That's a hundred percent polystyrene," he said. "Zero percent air." It's legal. Barrett asks to see a storeroom downstairs, where he finds more of the same.

He's satisfied but glad he pressed his inspection.

"I need a fair amount of evidence that they have complied," he said. "You can't believe everything that you see."

Few companies use sub-minimum wage

■ A survey of 167 Texas fast-food restaurants show few were taking advantage of the sub-minimum training wage, which was geared primarily toward teens.

By Louis Uchitelle
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Although a law that took effect on April 1 allows employers to hire teen-agers at less than the minimum wage of $3.80 an hour, few companies have elected to go below this level, an initial survey has found.

A survey of 167 fast-food restaurants by two university economists found that only two were taking advantage of the $3.35-an-hour wage floor for teen-agers, while one more is paying $3.50.

Executives at 83 percent of the restaurants, all part of the Burger King, Kentucky Fried Chicken or Wendy's chains, said they did not think they could attract acceptable workers at that wage.

They also expressed concern that paying some young employees less than others would be demoralizing and disruptive — a criticism that leaders of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations have often leveled at the concept of two-tier pay scales.

The behavior of the companies is a sharp contrast to the importance President Bush attached to the sub-minimum wage. When Congress passed a bill last year that raised the minimum wage to $3.80 on April 1, 1990, and $4.25 next April 1, Bush threatened a veto unless a sub-minimum wage was provided for teen-agers. Congress agreed to include that provision for three years.

The president contended that companies would resist hiring and training disadvantaged teen-agers unless they were allowed to pay less than the new minimum for the first six months of the new worker's employment.

A White House spokesman, Stephen Hart, declined to comment Sunday on the survey, which studied the 167 restaurants in Texas, where many fast-food outlets have historically paid young workers no more than federal law requires. Fast-food companies had been among the supporters of the separate wage scale for teen-agers.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Pay off saves on interest

By Bill Doyle

Q. Last year, I was very lucky and hit a state lottery for a total of almost $1 million, which will be paid to me over 20 years. I am in my 40s, happy with my work and feel it is in my best interest to continue my employment.

I have a seven-year balloon mortgage on my home, which I will be able to pay off with my lottery money. Am I better off doing that or refinancing the mortgage at the prevailing interest rate at the end of the balloon payment period?

Doyle

A. As a rough rule of thumb, refinancing pays off if the interest rate on the new mortgage is at least two percentage points lower than the rate on the old mortgage. But keep in mind that refinancing costs money. If the lower cost of interest will offset the refinancing cost in no more than two years, it is generally wise to get the new mortgage.

The preceding paragraph, however, applies to homeowners who do not have money available to pay off mortgages. Lucky you are in a far different and happier financial situation.

Unless you can invest your lottery winnings where it will produce a higher yield than the interest you would have to pay on a new mortgage, the smart thing to do is to use that money to meet the balloon payment when it comes due and get out from under mortgage debt.

Here, we are back to basics. By using cash you have available to eliminate your debt, you save a bundle of interest and come out ahead — unless you're able to put that money to work earning more than the mortgage interest.

Q. Some television channels seem to be full of self-promoting commercials, selling what are claimed to be surefire ways to get rich quick. I realize such productions should be taken with a grain of salt. But some seem to offer valuable information.

How would you suggest I check the reliability of a company from which I hope to buy an instructional course, at a cost of $199.75, on how to make money by buying real estate with no money down?

A. My suggestion is that you don't bother.

The beginning of your letter showed good common sense, to a point. Rather than with a "grain," those TV get-rich-quick scams should be taken with a truckload of salt.

Then, your second paragraph showed signs of a person being the kind of patsy preyed on by boob tube hucksters. Think it through: Anyone who had a sure method of making big bucks in real estate or anything else wouldn't be peddling it for $199.75 or any other price.

Q. My wife and I bought a building lot in the spring of 1989, obtained a mortgage and began making payments in August of that year. We have not received any statement from the mortgage company showing the interest we paid. My wife wrote to the people at the firm. No results. How can we get them to send us a statement?

A. The rule is that a mortgage lender must send you and the Internal Revenue Service a Form 1098, listing the interest, if the mortgage interest is $600 or more in a calendar year. That form is supposed to reach you and the IRS by the following January 31.

Because you didn't mention the size of the mortgage or the interest rate, it's impossible to even guess how much interest you paid. I suspect the interest didn't add up to $600 for 1989, so the mortgage company didn't fracture the reporting requirement for that year.

Assuming you made 12 monthly mortgage payments for 1990, last year's interest should have topped $600 — unless you have a very small mortgage. If you don't receive a Form 1098 by January 31, contact the mortgage company and let the people there know you intend to report them to the IRS.

Most lenders send out Form 1098s on all mortgages, even those with less than $600 annual interest, for two reasons. It's good customer relations and it's easier to program computers that way.

Report says 1988 S&L bailout unfair

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators mishandled the disposal of failed savings institutions in 1988 and likely added to the cost of the S&L bailout, a new report says.

The regulators were accused of not giving all bidders for the thrift institutions an equal chance to compete.

The four-volume report was prepared by the Washington law firm Steptoe & Johnson for the Bush administration and Congress. Copies have been delivered to the oversight board of the Resolution Trust Corp. headed by Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady and to the House and Senate banking committees.

The Associated Press reviewed the report, which has not been made public.

It sharply criticized the now-defunct Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

"It appears on the basis of all the available facts that FSLIC and the bank board were less than successful in fulfilling their self-imposed competitive mandate," the report said. Better handling of bids likely would have meant more competition and a savings for taxpayers, it said.

The Resolution Trust Corp. has replaced the FSLIC in disposing of failed S&Ls. The bank board was dismantled and many of its responsibilities passed to the new Office of Thrift Supervision in the Treasury Department.

The 1988 deals, many thrown together in the last few days of the year to take advantage of an expiring tax loophole, have been sharply criticized by congressional Democrats. The deals will cost taxpayers an estimated $69 billion over the next decade.

The new report said, for example, the combination of 87 failed S&Ls in Texas into 15 larger institutions was mismanaged.

"The plan did not provide the same opportunities for all potential bidders to compete on a fair and equitable basis," the report said.

But it added that some factors were beyond the regulators' control, including the expiration of the tax loophole, skepticism among investors about the bailout plan and the deteriorating condition of the S&L industry in Texas.

The report said that February 1988 solicitations for bidders lacked key information, including the number and identity of the thrifts to be sold in each package or their size or financial condition.

The notices also should have been published in the Federal Register or in financial publications, the report said.

A selected group of about two dozen potential investors received much more information about the proposed deals in a February 1988 meeting in Washington and March meetings in Dallas, it continued.

Eight of 14 successful bidders participated in those meetings weeks or months before the information was given to other bidders, it said.

Also, the report said, some bidders were disqualified for submitting incomplete applications apparently through no fault of their own.

"In at least two instances, groupings of thrifts appear to have been specifically created for and negotiated with only a single bidder, with no notice of the availability of these new groupings to other bidders," it said.

The report said in two cases the bank board failed to review FBI background checks of successful bidders.

TALKS: North American market seen

(From 4B)

The deadlock in the global trade talks, which centered on the European Community's refusal to cut sharply its farm subsidies as much as the United States, Canada and other food exporters wanted, is likely to generate more trade conflicts as well as regional trade groupings.

The goal in North America, trade officials say, is a common set of rules embracing the maximum number of common objectives.

The three-nation free-trade agreement would include such basics as duty-free and quota-free trade in goods, a common set of customs rules, nondiscrimination in trade in services and in the treatment of investors, protection of patents, copyrights and other intellectual property and procedures for the resolution of disputes.

Most of the elements already exist in the Canadian-U.S. agreement. Where they do not, the Canadian pact might be amended, trade officials say.

Yet some people worry that the three-way talks might delay freer trade between the United States and Mexico.

"A three-way negotiation invariably would be more complicated, increasing the likelihood that already difficult negotiations would encounter additonal delays and complications," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Crosbie countered that "there isn't any reason for trilateral discussions to take any longer than bilateral ones."

One possibility, said Jeffrey J. Schott, a trade specialist at the Institute for International Economics, a Washington policy research group, is a two-track negotiation.

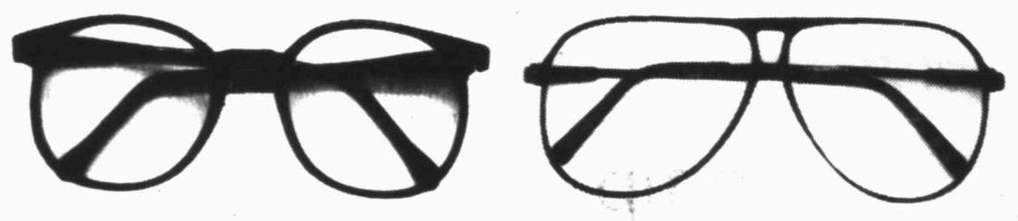

The United States and Mexico would be left to decide tariff-cutting and other specific bilateral trade issues while the three governments would work together on administrative and institutional provisions to ensure a commonality with the existing U.S.-Canadian free-trade pact.

Dallas janitorial firm a top franchiser

By Evan Ramstad

DALLAS (AP) — When Jim Cavanaugh was studying at Oklahoma University 21 years ago, he earned some extra money by finding customers for a friend's janitorial business.

Now his company, Jani-King International Inc., finds enough customers for 2,000 franchisees to make it one of the nation's 20th largest custodial service companies with annual billings of more than $50 million.

"Franchising is a very, very good concept. You have the individual who has money invested taking care of your business," said Cavanaugh, who is president of the privately held Dallas-based company. "It's about the best business arrangement there is."

By filling the company with motivated owners rather than employees, Cavanaugh said Jani-King has been able to offer its customers stability in an industry noted for personnel turnover and inconsistent performance.

For several years Jani-King has ranked among the nation's top franchise opportunities in return on investment. Money magazine recently called Jani-King one of the top 10 franchisors for the 1990s based on return and growth potential.

The key to Jani-King's success is that it provides a base of customers for the new franchisee and more when the franchisee is ready to grow, Cavanaugh said.

"There's not too many businesses where you can decide you want additional business and someone will provide it for you," he said.

For an investment of as low as $9,500, some of which Jani-King will finance, an individual can buy a franchise and be given contracts worth $1,000 a month. Jani-King helps with training, billing, hiring and even some equipment.

Jim Cavanaugh

The typical franchisee is a married couple who work during the day and then clean a few offices for a few hours at night, grossing a couple extra thousand dollars a month. The couple may hire one or two people to help and expand slowly. The business of some franchisees have grown to where they quit their day jobs, Cavanaugh said.

"This business really lent itself to a low-cost start-up situation with the possibility of a high return the more work you put into it," he said.

The janitorial industry is less cyclical than most services because companies always want clean offices, Cavanaugh said.

"We've gone through recessions. We've gone through the oil industry (downturn) and we continue to grow," he said.

Bankruptcy booms as bill for 80s arrives

By Stefan Fatsis

Visions of pizza parlors danced in the heads of the managers at Pantera's, a small Midwest restaurant chain that borrowed $65 million during the easy-money '80s to buy much larger Pizza Inn Inc.

But first they overvalued and then mismanaged the Dallas-based chain of 600 restaurants. Morale deteriorated, training evaporated, employees quit, franchisers pulled out.

In October 1989, 2½ years after the leveraged buyout, Pizza Inn couldn't pay debts and sought protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code. New management was appointed and creditors were paid. About 150 restaurants closed, but today Pizza Inn survives.

"I was amazed at the opportunity this provides a company to save the baby and not liquidate the whole thing," company President Jeff Rogers said. "The bankruptcy gave us a clean start."

Pizza Inn is a parable for the 1980s, in which wide-eyed management officials exploited loose credit to expand via leveraged buyouts financed by high-risk junk bonds. The moral is found in the company's recovery under America's benevolent bankruptcy code.

The term bankruptcy is derived from the Italian "banca rotta," which means broken bench. In medieval times, if a trader couldn't pay creditors, they smashed his trading bench. For centuries in Britain, debtors went to prison.

But U.S. bankruptcy law was designed to allow companies to rise from the ashes of collapse. The belief that failure is a forgivable outgrowth of entrepreneurship is considered uniquely American.

The 1990s are putting that notion to test. An ailing real estate market, leveraged buyout debts, tightening bank credit, increased foreign competition and new legal tactics are straining the nation's bankruptcy system as never before.

Federal statistics show more than 725,000 business and personal bankruptcies were filed in the year ended June 30, double the 1981 figure. Ten of the 25 biggest bankruptcies in history have occurred in the last 18 months, according to Beard Group Inc., a Washington research firm. Dun & Bradstreet Corp. says 55,000 businesses failed in the first 11 months of 1990 — 165 a day.

"We just ran out of space in our file room in Phoenix for 1990," said Kevin O'Brien, clerk for Arizona's two bankruptcy courts. "If nothing happens soon, we won't have anywhere to put '91."

Arizona is inundated with bankruptcies stemming from the collapse of the real estate and savings & loan industries. Annual filings have more than quadrupled since 1980, to a projected 18,500 in 1990. The state's five judges handled 216 Chapter 11 cases apiece in 1989, three times the national norm.

In New York, handwritten signs point to rooms containing the files of big-name bankruptcies such as Eastern Airlines, Drexel Burnham Lambert, Lomas Financial and Ames Department Stores. Boxes of documents are stacked in hallways.

Bankruptcy, ironically, has spawned a vibrant industry. Corporate debt restructuring is one of the few growth areas at Wall Street investment houses. "Workout" firms help companies repackage debt to delay payments without declaring Chapter 11.

Businesses even have sprung up to help manage the regulatory and paperwork maze. Finding opportunity in others' misfortune, speculators invest and trade in the debt of distressed companies.

Law firms are bulking up what 10 years ago was a necessary but unglamorous area. Many specialists in the field say bankruptcy law is to the 1990s what mergers and acquisitions law was to the 1980s.

"It's a hot area because of economic necessity," said Alan Miller, a partner at the New York law firm of Weil, Gotschal & Manges, which has the nation's largest bankruptcy group.

The first permanent federal bankruptcy law was enacted in 1898, but was based on the British model under which creditors forced companies into liquidation to collect debts. The idea of using bankruptcy to help companies survive wasn't enshrined in the law until 1938.

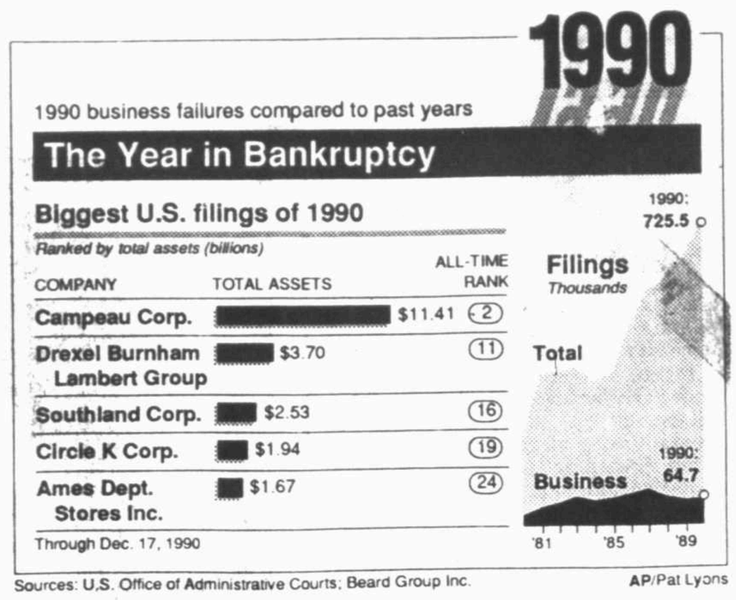

U.S. bankruptcy statutes remained unchanged for another 40 years, until Congress in 1978 overhauled the Depression-era laws to account for the nation's more sophisticated business environment.

Under the reform, business reorganizations of all sizes were combined into Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy code. Existing management was allowed to run a company during bankruptcy instead of a court-appointed trustee.

But none of the reformers envisioned today's multibillion-dollar cases with multiple tiers of complicated debt and creditor committees.

"When I became a judge in 1973 I never heard of a junk bond," said Robert L. Ordin, who stepped down from the Los Angeles bankruptcy bench in 1983 and now is with the law firm Loeb & Loeb.

The costs of reorganizing in bankruptcy court also have escalated. A typical case spins off big paychecks for attorneys, investment bankers and accountants. Those fees can siphon millions of dollars from a debtor's estate that could otherwise be used to pay creditors.

Sources: U.S. Office of Administrative Courts; Beard Group Inc. AP/Pat Lyons

"The costs for big companies are simply off the charts," said Stephen Weinroth, chairman of Integrated Resources Inc., which staggered into bankruptcy court 10 months ago $1.6 billion in debt.

The financial firm expects to spend more than $50 million on professional fees during its reorganization.

Drexel is paying up to $18 million every three months to professionals hired by three creditors' committees and a shareholders' committee. Including those hired by Drexel, about 20 law firms, four accounting agencies and three investment advisers are involved in the bankruptcy.

Some judges are fighting back. In the Drexel case, Judge Howard Buschman III slashed lawyers' fee requests by 25 percent. In North Carolina, judges are forcing debtors and creditors to streamline cases to save time and money for smaller companies.

"The Chapter 11 law was designed for the large corporation," said Judge A. Thomas Small in Raleigh, N.C., who has cut case completion time to six months from the national average of 18 to 24 months. "It just doesn't fit for small ones."

In a Chapter 11, companies continue operating but all debts and other legal obligations are put on hold. Creditors fight with the debtor and each other over who gets how much. Secured creditors such as banks are first in line; shareholders typically are last. The two sides negotiate and vote on a reorganization plan.

But the process can be nasty. Bankruptcy disputes increasingly are feeding a wave of legal wrangling that can prolong cases, sometimes by years.

WAGE: Unions' criticism being proved correct

(From 4B)

Princeton University, the co-authors of the survey, said the response of the fast-food restaurants suggested that the minimum wage played a social role beyond the supply-and-demand laws of economics.

The federal minimum wage has come to be accepted by most employers and employees as a sort of guide to the least that should be paid for the most menial jobs, they added.

Officials at the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said they knew of no other study that had attempted to measure the use of the new sub-minimum wage.

Indeed, future studies might turn up more use of the sub-minimum wage. But the bureau's wage and employment data tend to confirm the survey's findings.

Month after month, for example, bureau data show that about 2 percent of the nation's employed workers earn less than the minimum wage, including 6 percent of the 16-to-19-year-old wage group, the one most affected by the sub-minimum wage.

This 2 percent receives less than the legal minimum because of loopholes in the law or violations of it. And since April 1, the percentage has not risen.

The bureau's unemployment data also fails to turn up evidence bearing out the administration's concern that joblessness would rise among teen-agers without the sub-minimum wage to offset the April 1 rise in the minimum to $3.80 an hour, from $3.35.

Although few employers appear to have resorted to the sub-minimum wage, the teen-age unemployment rate remained unchanged until late summer. Bureau officials and most private economists attribute the increase not to wage levels, but to the downturn in the national economy.

Texas quarterback Peter Gardere, left, was consistently pressured by an imposing Miami defense, including monstrous guard and Outland Trophy winner Russell Maryland (67), who caused a Texas turnover on this first quarter play.

Miami burns Orange

■ With four touchdown passes from quarterback Craig Erickson and a dominating defensive effort, the Miami Hurricanes came away with the most lopsided victory in Cotton Bowl history, defeating Texas 46-3.

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The fourth-ranked Hurricanes, making a last desperate attempt to impress the poll voters, battered No. 3 Texas 46-3 on Tuesday in a record-smashing Cotton Bowl.

David McWilliams, coach of orange-clad Texas, said "Miami deserved to be considered for consideration as No. 1. If Miami isn't the national champion, then I don't want to play the best one."

Only the brash Hurricanes could be penalized a record 16 times for 202 yards yet inflict the worst rout in the 55-year history of the Cotton Bowl on the Longhorns.

Craig Erickson threw a Cotton Bowl-record four touchdown passes to earn offensive MVP honors.

"I think any team in the country would have a tough time beating us," Erickson said. "It was a great way for me to put up my Orange and Green uniform. A great way to go out."

No team with two losses has ever won the national championship and Miami lost to Brigham Young and Notre Dame while winning 10 games.

Miami coach Dennis Erickson said he would let the score speak for itself.

"I think we are the best team in the country but I'm not going to politic," he said. "We lost twice. We made our bed and have to sleep in it. That's all I have to say about it. I would politic for a playoff, though."

Top-ranked Colorado played Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl on Tuesday night and No. 2 Georgia Tech defeated Nebraska 45-21 in the Florida Citrus Bowl.

The Hurricanes made a strong appeal to the voters by scoring the most points in Cotton Bowl history and producing the widest margin of victory.

"It didn't seem like we were getting much respect and we were on a mission to get respect," Dennis Erickson said.

The previous Cotton Bowl record was 45 points by Boston College in 1985. Oklahoma A&M's 34-0 victory over Texas Christian in 1945 was the previous largest margin of victory.

Texas, the Southwest Conference champion, finished the year with a 10-2 record after Erickson destroyed its man-to-man defense and Russell Maryland led the mauling of quarterback Peter Gardere with three of the eight sacks the Hurricanes recorded.

Buffs claim national title

■ Colorado had the luck of the Irish on its side — thanks in part to a huge break on a negated punt return — and the Buffaloes will wake up to find itself in possession of a national title Wednesday.

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

MIAMI — Colorado used one big break instead of five downs to claim its first national championship.

Backup quarterback Charles Johnson, who scored the winning touchdown in the infamous fifth-down victory over Missouri, took over for injured Darian Hagan and led the top-ranked Buffaloes to a 10-9 win over No. 5 Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl on Tuesday night.

Colorado survived a late scare when Notre Dame's Rocket Ismail returned a punt 91 yards for an apparent touchdown with less than a minute left only to have it called back because of a clipping penalty.

The victory apparently clinched the national title for the Buffaloes (11-1-1), a goal that eluded them last year when they were beaten by Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl.

Every top-ranked team that has won a bowl game has been crowned national champion, so it would be a major break with tradition if Colorado doesn't finish No. 1 when the final Associated Press poll is released on Wednesday.

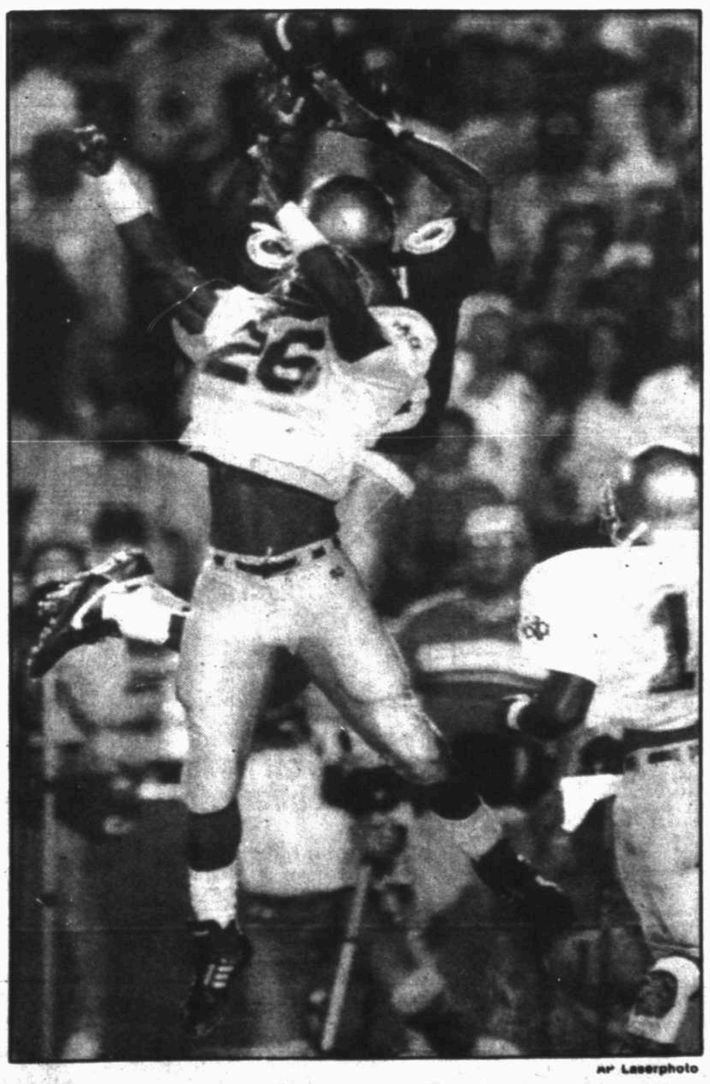

"That's the way I feel," Colorado Bill McCartney said.

"You've got to give our defense a lot of credit for holding that team to nine points. We got a little lucky on the clip on Rocket's runback."

Second-ranked Georgia Tech (11-0-1) bolstered its claim to the title by beating Nebraska 45-21 in the Citrus Bowl and No. 4 Miami (10-2) made its case by routing No. 3 Texas 46-3 in the Cotton Bowl. But it seems highly unlikely that either team will pass Colorado in the rankings.

Things looked bleak early in the second half for the Buffaloes, who were trailing 9-3, struggling on

Jackets emerge loss-free

■ The Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets exit the only undefeated major college football team after a 24-point win over No. 19 Nebraska; now the Techsters say they have just as much a right to No. 1 as anybody.

ORLANDO, Fla. — Georgia Tech went into the Citrus Bowl as one of college football's best. It came out claiming to be THE best.

"We played. We're undefeated. We should be No. 1," coach Bobby Ross said Tuesday after quarterback Shawn Jones led No. 2 Georgia Tech to a 45-21 victory over No. 19 Nebraska.

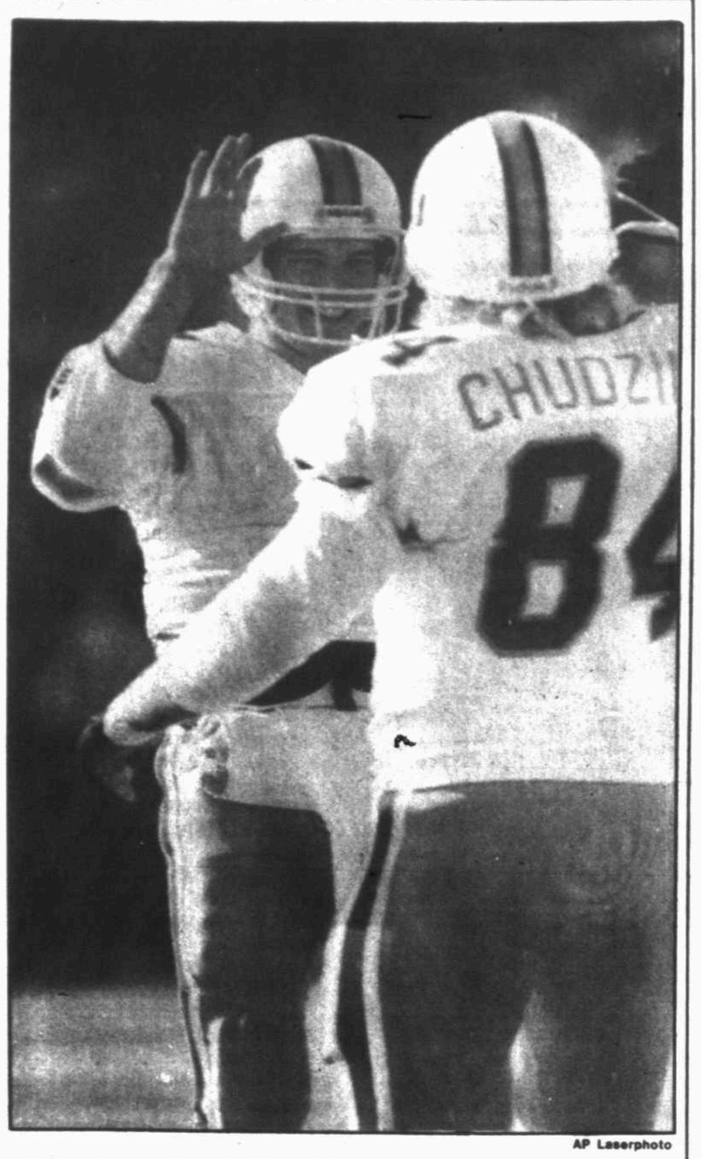

"I feel that we deserve it right now," said Ross, who had downplayed Georgia Tech's quest for its first national title during the regular season, saying his team had other business to take care of.

The Yellow Jackets did just that, completing an 11-0-1 season — the only major college team without a loss.

From 1C

"We weren't getting a lot of respect and I think today we proved we're a very good team," said Maryland, the defensive MVP. "We got a lot of penalties. Everybody hates the 'Canes. We're the team you love to hate."

Erickson was 17-for-26 for 272 yards in his near flawless performance.

Miami led 19-3 at halftime — despite 132 yards in penalties — on two Erickson-to-Wesley Carroll touchdown passes and two field goals by Carlos Huerta.

"We hurt them early and they never recovered," Craig Erickson said.

The tone of the game was set early when Miami got consecutive personal foul and unsportmanslike conduct penalties on the first series after both teams had taunted each other coming down the tunnel.

"It was ridiculous the penalties we got," Dennis Erickson said. "We made some dumb mistakes. We got carried away."

The Hurricanes overcame a first-and-40 situation following the penalties and took a 3-0 lead on Huerta's 28-yard field goal.

"That was something when we made first down after it was first-and-40,," Craig Erickson said. "That showed Texas something right there."

After a Cotton Bowl record-tying 50-yard field goal by Huerta, Maryland made the second of his three sacks, forcing Gardere's fumble which was recovered by linebacker Maurice Crum.

Carroll caught a 12-yard scoring pass from Erickson to give Miami a 12-0 and Texas took advantage of two Miami penalties to get a 29-yard field goal from Michael Pollak, the Longhorns' only points of the game.

Miami linebacker Darrin Smith returned an interception 34 yards for a touchdown and Erickson tied the Cotton Bowl record with his third touchdown pass, a 48-yarder to Randal Hill, as Miami upped its lead to 33-3.

"We just self-destructed, we just blew up," Texas running back Chris Samuels said. "Give Miami credit. They took it to us."

Erickson broke the Cotton Bowl and school bowl record with a 4-yard scoring pass to Randy Bethel. Doug Flutie of Boston College and Ernie Lane of Rice had shared the previous mark.

"It's a game I'll always remember," Craig Erickson said. "What a way to go out."

Leonard Conley's 26-yard scoring run with 9:33 to play made it the most points ever scored by Miami in a bowl.

The Cotton Bowl record for penalties was 90 yards by Boston College in 1940 and 11 times by Ohio State in 1986.

offense and missing Hagan, who ruptured a tendon in his left knee after being tackled shortly before halftime. But Johnson, a junior who started two games this season, came in and led the Buffaloes to the go-ahead touchdown — a 1-yard run on third and goal by Eric Bieniemy with 4:26 left in the third quarter.

The Irish had a chance to regain the lead after recovering a Bieniemy fumble on their own 46 with 7:26 remaining in the game, but Colorado stopped them on four downs.

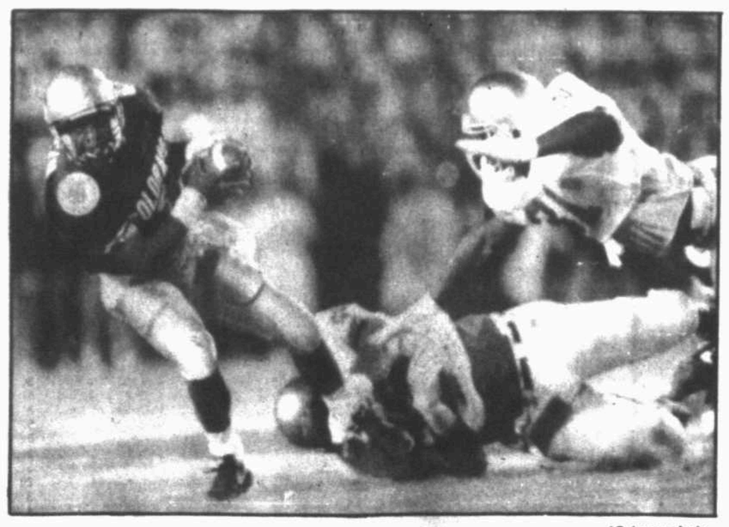

Before the game, Johnson was best known as the player whose 1-yard run on fifth down (the officials goofed) beat Missouri 33-31. Now he will also be known as the substitute who helped Colorado gain the biggest win in school history.

Johnson completed 5 of 6 passes for 80 yards, including three completions for 32 yards during Colorado's second-half scoring drive.

Bieniemy, who fumbled away a sure touchdown in last year's game, redeemed himself this year by scoring the go-ahead touchdown and leading the Buffaloes in rushing with 86 yards on 26 carries.

Ismail, who caught six passes for 57 yards, nearly became the hero with his tackle-breaking punt return with 45 seconds left. But a clip by Greg Davis, of nearby Hollywood, Fla., nullified the spectacular run and a last-second desperation pass by Rick Mirer was intercepted by Deon Figures.

Mirer completed 13 of 31 passes for 141 yards, but was intercepted three times.

Both teams entered the game with high-powered offenses, but it was defense that dominated. Colorado, which was averaging 32 points and 431 yards per game was held to 295 yards by Notre Dame's much-maligned defense. Notre Dame, averaging 32 points and 417 yards per game, gained only 264 yards.

There was little scoring, but plenty of excitement in the first half as Notre Dame took a 6-3 lead.

In the opening 2½ minutes, Colorado ran a reverse, fumbled the snap on a punt, intercepted a Notre Dame pass and tried a flea-flicker play. But the game remained scoreless until Colorado's Jim Harper kicked a 22-yard field with 12:04 left in the half.

The Buffaloes had a first-and-goal on the Notre Dame 7, but the drive stalled at the 5 following a failed halfback pass by Bieniemy and an incompletion by Hagan.

After Harper's field goal, Notre Dame drove 62 yards in nine plays for the only touchdown of the half, a 2-yard run by Ricky Watters. The tailback appeared to be stopped at the line of scrimmage, but bounced off the pile and scored on a strong second-effort. Craig Hentrich's extra-point kick was blocked by Ronnie Bradford, leaving the Irish with a 6-3 lead.

Hentrich, who made 16 of 20 field-goal attempts during the regular season, missed his only two tries in the first half. His 50-yard attempt late in the first period hit and right upright and bounced away, while his 48-yard kick sailed left with 1:07 remaining in the half.

Hagan, the sparkplug of Colorado's option offense, was injured with 50 seconds left after scrambling for a 5-yard gain. He was sandwiched by two Notre Dame tacklers and had to be helped off the field.

Although there was a lot of pregame talk about Colorado's improved passing game, it wasn't apparent in the first half. Hagan completed only 4 of 12 passes for 29 yards and missed several open receivers.

After Colorado stalled on its opening drive of the game, punter Tom Rouen dropped the snap from center and Notre Dame took over on the Buffaloes' 48. But Colorado got the ball back on the next play when Greg Thomas intercepted Mirer's first pass after it was tipped by linebacker Kanavis McGhee.

Cotton Bowl records established

DALLAS (AP) — The No. 4 Miami Hurricanes became the most penalized team in Cotton Bowl history and set three offensive records during their 46-3 rout of Texas on New Year's Day.

Craig Erickson's four touchdown passes, Miami's 46 points and the 43-point differential all were records.

Miami was flagged 16 times for 202 yards, which more than doubled the 90 penalty yards compiled by Boston College in 1940 and Nebraska in 1980.

Texas and Miami combined for 24 penalties for 270 yards, which also qualified as a bowl record.

JIMMY PATTERSON

Patterson

■ If in any way rodeo intrigues you, tonight is THE night to attend the Sandhills Hereford and Quarterhorse Show at the Ector County Coliseum. Ty Murray, the former Odessa College cowboy and the world's best in saddle bronc, bareback and bull riding, will be among the riders featured beginning at 7:30 p.m. Joining him will be Kermit's Jim Sharp, champion bull rider at the 1990 National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas last month, Clint Branger, the third-place NFR bull rider, and Tuff Hedeman, fourth-place bull rider at the NFR. The rodeo continues through Jan. 6.

■ I may not be the first to admit it when I'm wrong, but I usually come around. OK, OK, so the Dallas Cowboys aren't back. But they would've been if the Philadelphia Eagles hadn't destroyed Troy Aikman's shoulder.

■ In any event, when you have to hope for another team to lose (ala New Orleans) in order for your team to make the playoffs, its hardly worth watching (although I did have hopes up during the Monday night Saints-Rams game.)

■ Best thing about football's regular season being over: We won't have to hear again the over-used phrase "They're in control of their own destiny." Never has a phrase been so oft repeated in recent sports memory.

■ If hearing Brent Musburger on ABC's Citrus Bowl coverage weren't enough, we all got to enjoy Jim Nantz and Tim Brando, Musburger's two main disciples at CBS' telecast of the Cotton Bowl. Considering the outcome of the bowl, it's not likely we were forced to endure much of Tim or Jim, who I personally can't even tell apart.

■ It would be a better 1991 for me if this Madonna person would sit down, put her clothes back on and just quit singing forever. A much, much better year.

■ Recommended sports reading: Dan Jenkins' "You Call it Sports But I Say It's A Jungle Out There." Not recommended for children, however; the first three-quarters of the book is good sports recollecting from one of the best sports writers anywhere. The last 75 pages or so, though, are forgettable.

And then there's L.A. Times columnist Gene Wojciechowski's "Pond Scum and Vultures". Although it's a fairly predictable account of the stormy relationships between sports writers and some of the more seamy professional athletes out there, the book does have its moments. Pedro Guerrero, Doug Rader, and Eric Dickerson are just three examples of athletes prortrayed in "Pond Scum" who have yet to mature mentally (and doubtfully ever will).

■ Doesn't Minnesota Vikings head coach Jerry Burns look like he could be the father of that Vern guy?

■ Bill Bates is the hardest working Cowboy since Walt Garrison and the hardest hitter since Cliff Harris. Also the last remaining real Cowboy from the Landry days. Not the last Landry Cowboy left, but the last real one. There's a difference.

■ Super Bowl prediction: Another all-California affair: San Francisco over the L.A. Raiders.

■ If I had a vote for the national championship ... After witnessing the Cotton Bowl, who else could you pick but Miami? Unless of course you're a Colorado fan.

■ Best song lyrics heard of late: "Brother jukebox, sister wine, mother freedom, father time, they're the only family I've got left." Courtesy Mark Chesnutt, who incidentally provides the entertainment at the Sandhills rodeo at Saturday night's dance.

■ Dallas Cowboy fans are a bunch who'll always remember George Allen. The virtual inventor of the Washington-Dallas rivalry, Allen will be deeply missed. Tom Landry (who else) put it best: "Even when we were great enemies, we were great friends."

Former UA cager shot to death

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A former Arkansas basketball player whose troubled college career ended in his dismissal from the team was fatally shot by a former Razorback track team member at a Fayetteville nightclub Tuesday morning.

William Arnold Mills, 26, of Fayetteville, was pronounced dead at Washington Regional Medical Center, according to a news release from the Fayetteville Police Department. The shooting occurred at 1:49 a.m. at a club called Hollywood's, police said.

Mills' body is being sent to the state Medical Examiner's office in Little Rock, police said.

Michael Landon Byrd, 27, of Fayetteville, is being held in the Fayetteville City Jail on a charge of first-degree murder and three counts of aggravated assault. Byrd is awaiting transfer to the Washington County Jail, police said.

Police say they were told by witnesses that the shooting was done either by a shotgun or a small caliber semi-automatic pistol.

Huskies shut off Iowa, 46-34

Rose Bowl

PASADENA, Calif. — Mark Brunell ran for two touchdowns and passed for two more, and Washington's defense and special teams provided big plays Tuesday as the eighth-ranked Huskies rolled to a 46-34 victory over No. 17 Iowa in the Rose Bowl.

Washington (10-2) took control early, taking a 33-7 halftime lead against the error-plagued Hawkeyes (8-4) in the highest-scoring Rose Bowl ever.

Despite the convincing win by the Huskies, they realistically had no shot at the national championship. Ranked No. 2 heading into their next-to-last game of the regular season, they lost 25-22 to three-touchdown underdog UCLA to drop out of contention for the final No. 1 ranking.

The loss in the Rose Bowl closed out the Hawkeyes' year with three defeats in their last four games, including a 31-24 loss to Minnesota in the final regular-season game.

The Huskies set the tone for the 1991 Rose Bowl with a couple of big plays in the first half — Andy Mason blocked an Iowa punt and Dana Hall picked up the ball and ran 27 yards for a touchdown, and Charles Mincy returned an interception of a pass by Matt Rodgers 37 yards for another touchdown.

Brunell, with 444 yards the Huskies' second-leading rusher this season behind tailback Greg Lewis, scored on a 5-yard run and threw 22 yards to Mario Bailey for another TD in the first half, then scored on a 22-yard run in the third quarter. He connected again with Bailey for Washington's final touchdown.

Lewis, coming back from a knee injury that sidelined him for the final regular-season game, gained 128 yards on 19 carries.

Brunell completed 14 of 22 passes for 163 yards and ran 10 times for 28 yards.

The Huskies' defense, led by Mincy, linebacker Donald Jones and tackle Steve Emtman, limited Rodgers to 15-of-33 passing for 196 yards, although most came in the Hawkeyes' 20-point fourth quarter.

Mincy had two interceptions, the second setting up Brunell's scoring run in the third quarter; Jones had two sacks and kept constant pressure on Rodgers; and Emtman helped the nation's top-ranked defense against the run shut down Iowa's rushing game.

The blocked punt in the first quarter that seemed to get the Huskies started was the third run back for a score this season. The Hawkeyes worked on that area during preparations for the Rose Bowl.

Vols rally for last-minute win over unranked Cavs

Associated Press

Sugar Bowl

NEW ORLEANS — Tony Thompson ran for 151 yards and two touchdowns, the last with 31 seconds left Tuesday night, to rally 10th-ranked Tennessee to a 23-22 victory over Virginia in the Sugar Bowl.

It was the third time in the last five games that Virginia, which climbed to No. 1 in the nation midway through the season but was unranked by bowl time, led by at least 14 points at halftime and lost.

Kelly completed 24 of 35 passes for 273 yards with two interceptions, both in the first half. Thompson gained 151 yards on 25 carries.

Virginia quarterback Shawn Moore couldn't throw deep because of a surgically repaired right thumb, but he threw short often enough and ran well enough to give the Cavaliers a 22-17 lead with 2:34 remaining.

Virginia (8-4) also got big plays from a defense pummeled for 31 points over its last four games, shutting out Tennessee (9-2-2) through the first half, the first time this season that the Volunteers were shut out for a half.

CITRUS: Osborne says Ga. Tech No. 1

From 1C

wave a flag," Ross said. "I think we've done what we had to do."

The Yellow Jackets went into New Year's Day behind only Colorado in the poll. The Buffaloes (11-1-1) met No. 5 Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl Tuesday night. The final AP poll will be released on Wednesday.

"We're the only undefeated football team in the country, and I think we won well," Ross said. "I don't think we looked sloppy."

Jones had Georgia Tech's offense rolling from the start, driving 70 yards with the opening kickoff to start a surge to a 21-0 lead that Nebraska (9-3) was never able to overcome.

Jones completed 16 of 23 passes for 277 yards, including touchdowns of 22 yards to Emmett Merchant and 2 yards to William Bell.

Jones rushed for 41 yards on 11 carries, scoring on a 1-yard bootleg in the third quarter.

Bell, who had 127 yards on 16 carries, scored two touchdowns in the final quarter on runs of 6 and 57 yards, the latter when he bounced out of a stack near midfield and found an open lane to the end zone.

Ross, who almost quit when Georgia Tech struggled through a 2-9 season in his first year in 1987, said he wasn't going to worry about the final poll.

"There are a lot more important things in life," he said.

The victory was the sixth straight for the Atlantic Coast Conference champions since the only blot on their season — a 13-13 tie with conference rival North Carolina.

"This game is one of momentum," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said. "We lost ours after the Colorado game and today we caught a very good football team that was on a roll."

The Cornhuskers lost two of their last three regular season games. This was their fourth consecutive bowl loss and the 45 points was the most ever scored against Nebraska in a bowl game.

"Tech is undefeated and they certainly have every right to claim a national championship," Osborne said.

He also said Big Eight rival Colorado would deserve the title with an Orange Bowl victory.

"I certainly would have a difficult time selecting one over the other," Osborne said.

"I feel like there's no way that people can deny us and say that we're not the No. 1 team in the country," said Georgia Tech's All-American safety Ken Swilling.

"The first job was to win the game, and then the next thing was to make an emphatic statement because we felt we had to win convincingly because we haven't gotten any respect all season," added safety Thomas Balkcom, who had two sacks on blitzes.

Haase threw touchdown passes of 30 yards to Johnny Mitchell and 21 yards to William Washington, and Derek Brown scored on a 50-yard run.

Cardinals silence Alabama, 34-7

Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — Browning Nagle threw for a Fiesta Bowl-record 451 yards, 223 during a 25-point first quarter, as 18th-ranked Louisville celebrated its first postseason appearance in 13 years by routing 25th-ranked Alabama 34-7 on Tuesday.

Nagle, named the game's most valuable offensive player, completed 20 of 33 passes and threw for three touchdowns, with one interception. He completed nine of 16 for two TDs in the first quarter alone and was rested for most of the second quarter.

He broke the bowl record of 422 passing yards set last year by Florida State's Peter Tom Willis.

The Cardinals, making their first postseason appearance since the 1977 Independence Bowl, finished 10-1-1, the best record in school history.

Alabama, which started the season 0-3, wound up 7-5 after its worst bowl defeat since a 38-6 thrashing by Nebraska in the 1971 Orange Bowl.

The Crimson Tide had allowed only 38 points in the last seven games, but Louisville turned an interception, a fumble and a blocked punt into a 25-0 lead.

Nagle, whose first-quarter passing yardage was a record for the 20-year-old bowl, threw a 70-yard touchdown pass to Latrell Ware 7 minutes, 25 seconds into the game, tying a Fiesta mark for longest TD.

Fiesta Bowl

Nagle, who had a 60-yard TD bomb negated by a penalty, threw a 19-yard scoring pass to Cummings for a 32-7 lead with 10:17 remaining in the third quarter.

Backup quarterback Danny Woodson was called for intentional grounding out of the Alabama end zone, giving Louisville a safety with 10:16 to play.

Crimson Tide starter Gary Hollingsworth completed only 10 of 23 passes for 59 yards with one interception before being replaced late in the third quarter.

He also was sacked three times as the Cardinals had a bowl-record six sacks.

Louisville outgained Alabama 571 yards to 189.

Clemson blanks Illini in Hall of Fame

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — DeChane Cameron ran an efficient ball-control offense and Clemson's defense scored one touchdown and set up another Tuesday in the 14th-ranked Tigers' 30-0 rout of Illinois in the Hall of Fame Bowl.

Cameron threw for 141 yards and two touchdowns and also rushed for 76 yards on 17 attempts as Clemson, runnerup to Georgia Tech in the Atlantic Coast Conference, finished with a 10-2 record for the fourth consecutive season.

Illinois (8-4) averaged 26.6 points during the regular season but was no match for the nation's top-ranked defense. The 16th-ranked Illini finished with 247 yards total offense, but couldn't score on three possessions that ended inside the Clemson 35.

Chris Gardocki kicked field goals of 18, 26 and 43 yards and Cameron threw for touchdowns of 14 yards to Doug Thomas and 17 yards to Howard Hall — the latter only the third TD reception by a Tigers fullback in 18 years.

John Johnson recovered Howard Griffith's fumble on the Illinois 14 to set up Clemson's first touchdown. Arlington Nunn intercepted Jason Verduczo's pass and returned it 34 yards for a second-quarter TD that gave the Tigers a 24-0 halftime lead.

Cameron, who completed 14 of 20 passes and was voted the game's most valuable player, sat out the fourth quarter. But Clemson's defense never took a rest.

The Tigers stopped Illinois on downs at the Clemson 20 with six minutes remaining, then survived Steve Feagin's 21-yard run to the 29 to preserve the shutout in the closing seconds.

Elvis comes alive at Gator Bowl

Gator Bowl

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Bo is gone and the pass is back at Michigan.

"We used play action most of the day to open things up," said Michigan wide receiver Desmond Howard, who caught six passes for 167 yards and two touchdowns in the Wolverines' 35-3 Gator Bowl victory Tuesday over Mississippi.

Elvis Grbac threw a career-high four touchdown passes, including two long scoring throws to Howard, as Michigan rolled up a Gator Bowl-record 715 yards and 35 first downs.

"They are the best football team we've ever played at Ole Miss, ever," said Mississippi coach Billy Brewer. "They kept us spread out, and we didn't expect them to throw as much as they did.

"We had an outstanding season. We can't let one bad day spoil the entire year."

The 12th-ranked Wolverines scored three touchdowns in the third period, moving to a 35-3 advantage on Grbac's 31-yard TD pass to Derrick Alexander. Michigan accumulated 563 yards in the first three quarters, including 290 in the third period.

"We just exploded," said senior fullback Jarrod Bunch. "The truth is, we practiced so hard we were getting on each other's nerves."

Howard caught touchdown passes covering 63 and 50 yards from Grbac, who also threw 7 yards to Bunch for another score. Bunch also scored on a 5-yard run in the third quarter and had a 21-yard TD nullified by a holding penalty.

Michigan (9-3) accumulated 324 yards in the air as Grbac completed 16-of-25 for 296 yards before retiring in the final period.

"We were able to mix up the run and the pass, able to open up into their secondary," said first-year coach Gary Moeller, who succeeded Bo Schembechler this season.

Lee had missed seven straight tries coming into the game and was just 3 of 13 on the season with his last field goal a 19-yard kick Sept. 29 against Tulane.

The victory evened Michigan's Gator Bowl record at 1-1 while Ole Miss dropped to 1-2 in its Gator Bowl appearances.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 2, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will work harder than ever, making fantastic gains. Romance will bring new sunshine and stability into your life in early spring. You will achieve better footing by midyear, thanks to changes in the economy. Those around you might not be as trustworthy as you believe. Stay on your toes next September! Family members are likely to play a larger role in your business affairs in late 1991.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Isaac Asimov, evangelist Jim Bakker, actress Wendy Phillips, football star Calvin Hill.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Changing your style could alert influential people to your true potential. Financial concerns must be dealt with in a mature manner. Be candid when recruiting family's support.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Learning new skills will help you achieve a long-sought goal. A member of the opposite sex lends a helping hand. Realize what is most important to your future and set fresh priorities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Financial matters require careful handling. Seek experts' advice if legal questions arise. Read the fine print before signing documents. Donate to a good cause even if you will be inconvenienced.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you are contemplating starting a second career, avoid acting impulsively. Give the matter serious thought. Your mate or partner could feel neglected. Show more consideration.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Although your work is sometimes tedious, it will ultimately prove rewarding. Welcome new challenges. A relative's stubbornness tests your patience. Romance improves if you admit past mistakes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Timely telephone calls make your plans go without a hitch today. Dress fashionably but on the conservative side. A private meeting will suit you fine this evening. Say exactly what you mean.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Leadership is your forte. Your words weave a powerful spell! Working together for mutual benefit should be the idea you sell. You need all your energy now. Eat wisely and get more exercise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Newcomers may not have the expertise they need to make team effort productive. Help them get oriented. Seeing a former romantic partner in a new setting could rekindle romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You wake up alert and energized — able to say and do everything just right! Meet all deadlines on time. You may want to be alone tonight to recharge your batteries.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Small children could play an important role in your domestic affairs now. Keep in touch with people who have aided you in the past. They could be the answer to a current problem.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Creative work enjoys very beneficial influences today. You can make excellent progress. Dine somewhere elegant tonight. Your curiosity about a stranger could lead to romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Although wearing rose-colored glasses is not normally your style, consider donning them today. What you see could make you smile! Give in to an urge to do something different.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have strong opinions they are quick to share. Let them know the importance of listening to other people's views. These curious youngsters may show an early interest in boy-girl relationships. Their romantic attachments are apt to be both intense and fleeting. Marriage will probably be postponed until they approach their 30s. Talented and persistent, these Capricorns are quick to achieve acclaim in their chosen field.

"In a tournament in our area," writes a reader, "several pairs managed to get to six spades on this hand. All went down one trick, for a poor score. Not a single pair reached the laydown contract of six diamonds! Is there a logical way to get there?"

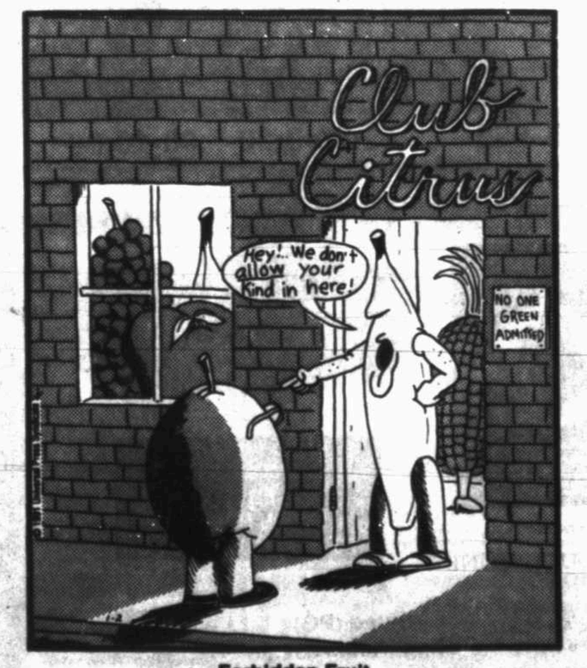

Yes. The first three bids in the auction are self-explanatory. Once a major-suit fit has been found, a return to opener's minor suit is forcing, so North need do no more than bid three diamonds next. South, whose hand is limited by the two-spade raise and who could hardly hold more, can now afford to make a cue-bid of four clubs.

North should be eager to probe for a possible slam, and can do so below the level of game with a four-heart cue-bid. South, with nothing further to add, can only sign off with four spades, but now North can stress the quality of the diamond raise by bidding five diamonds. With three aces and a known good fit in two suits, South should accept the slam invitation by bidding six diamonds, offering North a choice of strains. Rather than correct to the higher-scoring contract, normally desirable in a pairs contest, North should opt to play in the 4-4 fit and pass. You'll see why in a moment.

Why does the major-suit slam fail while the minor-suit slam comes home? Playing in spades, North-South cannot avoid losing one heart trick and one club—since the diamond suit is evenly divided between the two hands, declarer cannot obtain a discard. Playing in diamonds, declarer needs only a 3-2 trump split. After drawing trumps, declarer discards a heart on dummy's fifth spade and loses only one club trick. North knew that might be the case; thus, the decision to play in six diamonds.

Soprano Sutherland retires

LONDON (AP) — Admirers threw flowers and Luciano Pavarotti and Marilyn Horne joined in song as Dame Joan Sutherland, one of the great sopranos of the century, tearfully bid farewell at the Royal Opera House.

She was showered Monday with bouquets thrown from orchestra stalls and carnations tossed from the boxes above the stage as she sang with friends Pavarotti, the Italian tenor, and Horne, the American mezzo soprano.

The 64-year-old Australian diva offically retired after a performance at Sydney Opera House in October. But she decided to sing once more at the Royal Opera House, where she made her debut in 1952.

The opera house arranged a special interlude in "Die Fledermaus" by Johann Strauss so the three singers could appear together at the New Year's Eve show. Miss Sutherland wept as Pavarotti sang to her.

BERLIN (AP) — Reclusive screen legend Marlene Dietrich made a rare public appeal to save the famous studio where she filmed "Blue Angel" more than 60 years ago.

Dietrich, 89, said in a New Year's Eve telephone interview on Germany's ARD television that she had "only the loveliest memories" of her days at the now-foundering DEFA Film Studios outside Berlin.

"I hope they have the success that they rightly deserve," she said from her home in Paris.

DEFA was known in the 1920s as the Universal Film Co., where Dietrich began her career. Fritz Lang filmed his classic "Metropolis" at the huge studio complex, located in the small town of Babelsberg outside Berlin.

Babelsberg became part of Communist East Germany and the studio, renamed DEFA, became an outlet for forgettable movies with socialist themes.

Now that Germany has united under democracy, DEFA must venture into the private market without government subsidies. It had 2,400 employees but the studio plans to trim employee rolls to 800.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Baseball pitcher Fernando Valenzuela became a father for a fourth time Tuesday with the birth of a healthy, 8-pound girl.

"The family is in very fine spirits and the baby is as beautiful as the other three," said Valenzuela spokesman Antonio De Marco.

Maria Fernanda Valenzuela was born New Year's Day at 4 a.m. at San Pedro Peninsula Hospital, De Marco said. The Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher drove his wife, Linda, to the hospital. They already have two sons and a daughter.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A young girl's impromptu direction near the end of singer Bobby McFerrin's 24-hour chant for healing drew laughter from participants, whose voices rose every time the girl raised her tiny hands.

McFerrin

McFerrin, a nine-time Grammy Award winner best known for the hit "Don't Worry, Be Happy," hoped the event would encourage self-healing.

Several hundred spectators, including homeless people and executives resting between work and New Year's Eve parties, watched as the event neared conclusion.

"I feel good," the San Francisco resident said.

"Bobby was here for the full 24 hours," said the Rev. Lauren Artress, cannon pastor at the Episcopalian cathedral, adding that some 300 singers were heard by 3,500 people over the course of 24 hours.

Andersen single-footedly ruined it for Dallas

Associated Press

NFL

It came down to the final two seconds of the NFL's regular season and the final 48 minutes of 1990 — at least in the East — but the playoff matchups are finally set.

The final spot was determined Monday night, when Morten Andersen's 24-yard field goal gave New Orleans a 20-17 win over the Los Angeles Rams and the final spot in the expanded playoffs. The Saints, at 8-8 only the second .500 team ever to qualify for postseason, now go to Chicago for a first-round game with the Bears on Sunday.

Had the Saints lost, the Dallas Cowboys would have gone to Soldier Field.

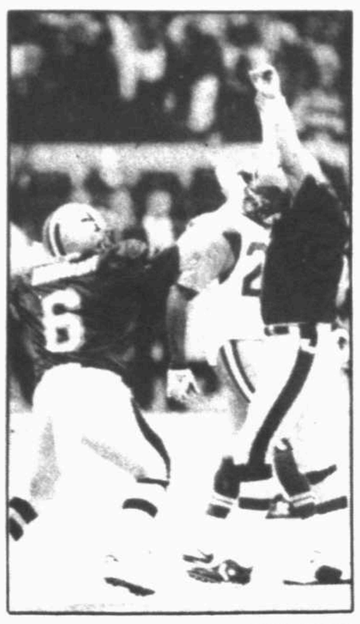

The Saints will go against a Chicago team missing quarterback Jim Harbaugh. Mike Tomczak will start over rookie Peter Tom Willis, although Tomczak was dismal in Chicago's loss to Kansas City last Saturday and coach Mike Ditka suggested then that his playoff quarterback was still in doubt.

But he announced Monday that he'll go with Tomczak, who has started two NFC championship games for Chicago.

"He's going to do great, and I'm going to support him just like his teammates," Ditka said of Tomczak.

The Saints, 10-6 two years ago and 9-7 last year but out of the playoffs, made it this time because of the expanded format. But that didn't lessen the pleasure.

"We were 2-and-5 at one point and a lot of people gave up on us," coach Jim Mora said. "Buried us, said our season was over, dead, gone, close the door, call the hearse. A lot of people in this room said that.

"It didn't happen."

The other wild-card matchup in the NFC will be Saturday, when Washington (10-6) is at Philadelphia (10-6).

That will be followed by an AFC matchup pitting Kansas City (11-5) at Miami (12-4). Houston and Cincinnati, each 9-7, will meet for the second time in three weeks at Cincinnati on Sunday.

San Francisco (14-2) has the top seed in the NFC and will meet either New Orleans or the Philadelphia-Washington winner Jan. 12. The New York Giants (13-3) are the second seed and will host the Bears or the Philadelphia-Washington winner the next day.

In the AFC, Buffalo (13-3) is the top seed and will play either Houston or the winner of the Kansas City-Miami game on Dec. 12. The Los Angeles Raiders (12-4) will play host either to Cincinnati or the Kansas City-Miami winner.

The Eagles and Redskins split their games — Washington winning 13-7 at home, then losing 28-14 at Philadelphia in a game in which the Eagles knocked out two quarterbacks, Jeff Rutledge and Stan Humphries.

But Washington now has regular Mark Rypien back, although he's been up-and-down since returning four games ago and his lack of mobility could hurt him against the Philadelphia pass rush.

Miami, 9-1 at one point this season, won just three of its final six games and lost the NFC title in Buffalo to a Bills team run by backup Frank Reich.

They also gained just 122 yards rushing in their four losses — all to physical defensive teams like the Chiefs. They were also vulnerable to the run in those losses, which is what the Chiefs do best.

Cincinnati, the AFC Central champion, beat Houston 40-20 two weeks ago and the Bengals have won nine straight games there against division opponents.

Aggies open league against Longhorns, 2,000 Tom Penders

Associated Press

The Texas A&M Aggies won't see Texas coach Tom Penders on the bench at Erwin Center in Austin Wednesday night, but they will see his face just about every time they look up in the stands.

Some 2,000 Tom Penders masks will be handed out so students and fans can make up for the absence of their coach. Penders will be serving a one-game suspension for criticizing Southwest Conference officials last season.

He won't even be allowed anywhere in the arena, unless, of course, he can wear one of the masks and watch the 7:35 p.m. CST game incognito from the bleachers.

Texas, which along with Arkansas made it to the NCAA final eight last year, is 5-4 and the Aggies are 4-6.

In other games on the first night of conference matchups, preseason favorite and second-ranked Arkansas (11-1) travels to Rice (4-5), and Houston (8-2) visits Baylor (7-2). Also, Texas Tech (3-9) visits Southern Methodist (3-6). All games start at 7:35 p.m.

Western Kentucky visits Texas Christian (7-2) for a non-conference game at 7:35 p.m.

SWC Basketball

The Aggies aren't heading into SWC play the way they'd like to. A&M is coming off a blowout loss to Kansas State, 81-49, and a 70-68 loss to South Alabama.

The Longhorns are struggling, too. They have fallen out of the Top 25 with four losses in their first nine games.

Penders refused to accept the runner-up trophy after the Longhorns' 89-82 loss Saturday night to Arizona State in the championship of the ASU Tribune Classic.

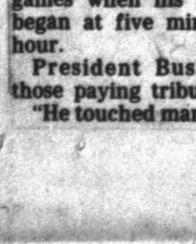

Penders was concerned with the fouls. Both teams were whistled for 30 fouls, but Penders complained about one official, saying, "The other guys called a heckuva game."

He said one of his assistants charted a stretch where the Sun Devils got 14 calls to the Longhorns' two.

"Hell will freeze over before I come back here," Penders muttered as he walked through the press room after the trophy ceremony.

Landry remembers Allen as 'great friend'

George Allen

His sudden death left them stunned but confident his legacy of excellence would survive.

The 72-year-old Allen, former coach of the Los Angeles Rams and Washington Redskins, came out of retirement to reorganize the struggling Forty-Niners and in 1990 gave them their first winning season since 1986.

"He was for us. He was an idol to me," Long Beach quarterback Todd Studer said Tuesday. "Words really don't work at a time like this."

Allen died of natural causes at his home Monday. The specific cause of his death had not been determined, said his son, Bruce Allen.

A memorial service open to the public will be held Friday at the Rolling Hills Convenant Church in Rolling Hills Estates, located near Allen's Rancho Palos Verdes home. It will start at 2:05 p.m. because, Bruce Allen said, NFL games when his father coached began at five minutes after the hour.

President Bush was among those paying tribute.

"He touched many lives in a profound way and for six decades was a leader in the sport. Our nation will miss him," spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in a statement issued on behalf of the president.

"George was the type of guy you felt would go on forever," former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry told CBS Sports during halftime of the Cotton Bowl.

"Our rivalry between Washington and Dallas — even though we were great enemies we were always great friends. Anytime you lined up across the field from George Allen you knew you were in for a great ballgame because he did his homework."

Landry said Allen's turnaround of the Long Beach program was remarkable.

"He was just 110 percent football-committed. His life was football, every minute of it," Landry said.

Allen said last week, that he hadn't been completely healthy since his players drenched him with ice water to celebrate a season-ending victory over UNLV on Nov. 17.

Funeral arrangements were pending, his son said.

He was the winningest coach in team history for both the Los Angeles Rams and the Washington Redskins. He was 49-17-4, a .742 percentage, with Los Angeles, and 67-30-1, .691, with Washington. He left the NFL in 1977 with a 116-47-5, 71.2, career record. It was the league's third best among coaches with 100 or more victories.

Corporate Banking & Business

Q. What is the difference between a Warranty and a Limited Warranty?

A. In today's society, there are very few full Warranties granted on sales of goods by a manufacturer or merchant. The Uniform Commercial Code provides that, unless modified, a Warranty that the goods will be merchantable is implied in any contract with respect to such goods if the seller is a merchant. Accordingly, most manufacturers issue a Limited Warranty which denies merchantability and fitness for a particular use. Such a limitation on the Warranty must be effectively communicated to the purchaser. Failure to effectively communicate the Warranty or other dealings between the parties will often broaden the scope of the Warranty. Used goods are usually sold "as is, where is", which denotes no Warranty.

Family Law

Q. What is a Board Certified Attorney?

A. The Texas Board of Legal Specialization recognizes attorneys who have special competence in various areas of law and allows them to use the term specialist in those areas in which they are board certified. The requirements a board certified attorney must meet are that he or she must be licensed to practice law for at least five years, and must have devoted twenty-five to fifty percent of the attorney's time for three years in the field of specialization. The attorney must also pass a difficult test and demonstrate the capability of handling a wide variety of difficult cases, which further proves his or her expertise in the field. The attorney is required to attend continuing legal seminars each year in order to keep current with the changes in the field of specialization. In order for an attorney to remain board certified, he or she must apply for recertification every five years and continue to meet the requirements for specialization.

Estate Planning And Probate

Q. What does it mean to probate a will, and when is it necessary?

A. Probate is the procedure where a will that was executed by someone who has died (the Decedent) is admitted into the records of the county in which the Decedent resided at the time of his/her death. The decedent's will is presented to the judge, and the will is proven to be the last will and testament of the Decedent. Once this is done, the judge will admit the will to probate, and the Executor may use a certified copy of the will as evidence and authority to transfer the Decedent's property in accordance with the will. In Texas, probate is a fairly simple procedure, and in most cases, once the will is admitted to probate, there is no need to return to court for any further action other than to file an Inventory, Appraisement, and List of Claims of the Decedent's estate.

Expert tells secrets to perfect cheesecakes

By Erich Smith

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Come on, says Mother Wonderful. Have some cheesecake. It won't kill you.

"No one ever got cardiovascular disease from a sliver of cheesecake now and then," says Mother Wonderful, alias Myra Chanin. "Don't eat cheesecake three times a day, but when you do have it, enjoy it to the max."

Chanin's book, "Mother Wonderful's Cheesecakes and Other Goodies," first came out in 1982 and went out of print. The second edition now is in its second printing.

Chanin, whose cheesecakes come in flavors like ginger pear, mocha blanca and honey fig, isn't surprised. She sees good food as essential for marital bliss.

"Soft lights, sweet music and diaphanous gowns may create an evening's diversion, but comes the dawn and even Casanova must eat," she says in the book's introduction.

Professional bakers agree that cheesecakes haven't lost their attraction.

"We're selling more than ever," said Janet Rosing, owner of Cheesecakes by J.R. in Chicago.

Ms. Rosing estimates she sells more than five tons of cheesecake a week. "It's fun to visualize, isn't it?" she said.

Nancy Bier, owner of Miss Grimble Associates in New York, says people think of cheesecake as something special.

"When people want dessert and want to splurge, they say, 'Let's have a piece of cheesecake.' Everyone likes the flavor and the fact that it's so rich."

MISS GRIMBLE'S has been in business for about 20 years and turns out about 50 different cakes and pies, but Mrs. Bier said cheesecake still is the No.1 item.

"The classic vanilla with a sour cream topping is the best seller," she said.

Several qualities come together to make a good cheesecake, Ms. Rosing said.

"It's a combination of creamy texture, which is very satisfying, and the flavors of the cream and the sweetness," she said. "People feel they're really getting value in cheesecake. There's really something substantial there. It's not some light, fluffy thing."

Even a doctor from the American Heart Association went along — somewhat — with Mother Wonderful's idea that a sliver of cheesecake once in a while isn't all that bad.

"I would certainly agree with a sliver now and then, but what does one call a sliver?" said Dr. Alan Chait, chairman of the AHA's Nutrition Committee. "And if you bake a whole cheesecake, who's going to eat just a sliver?"

Chait, a professor of medicine at the University of Washington, said the AHA doesn't preach the idea of good or bad food.

"The important thing is a person's total diet — a diet that is low in saturated fat and cholesterol — rather than the individual food," he said.

Both the AHA's cookbook and Mother Wonderful offer low-fat cheesecake suggestions.

Chanin also offers encouragement to the nervous cook.

"Cheesecake is the easiest dessert to make! How did it get such an awesome reputation? Bakers lie. When you find out how easy it is to make cheesecake, you'll stop paying $25 for theirs and start baking your own."

SHE THINKS the problem is the old-fashioned ways of baking.

"People are still using recipes that were created in 1850. Ovens then had no thermostats, so they'd tell you to bake the cake in the oven for half an hour and leave them in the oven with the door ajar. You couldn't leave the house!

AP Laserphoto

Myra Chanin, also known as "Mother Wonderful," poses in her Philadelphia kitchen with one of her cheesecake creations. Her book, "Mother Wonderful's Cheesecakes and Other Goodies," first published in 1982, is in the second printing of its second edition.

"Then there are those recipes that tell you to put your cheesecake pan in a pan filled with boiling water! I think that one was invented by Johnson & Johnson, to sell more Band-Aids. There's no better way in the world to scald yourself."

There's none of that in this cookbook. What Chanin does offer is advice such as how to get that creamy, custardlike texture.

"Since I never want to unwrap another package of cream cheese, I pass on all my secrets to you," she confides before introducing her "Ten Commandments for Making Perfectly Baked Cheesecakes Every Time."

Actually, there are 17 commandments, which Chanin admits tends to prove her husband's contention that she is "bossier than God." Among them:

- Thou Shalt Not Chintz on Ingredients.
- Thou Shalt Never Defile Thy Crusts with Graham Cracker Crumbs.
- Thou Shalt Never Even Think About Using Those Gunky Cornstarch Toppings.
- Thou Shalt Measure Out Ingredients before Beginning to Bake.
- Thou Shalt Always Add Eggs to Thy Batter with Thy Mixer on the Lowest Speed.

SHE REALLY means it about using the best ingredients.

"The cost differential between a sublime cheesecake and a third-rate one is less than $3. If money is a problem, make an 8-inch version and serve petite wedges, but always make sure anyone who tastes it will rave about your skill and beg for more."

The following recipe for Pumpkin-Ginger Cheesecake is not as seasonal as it sounds. Although it is from "Thanksgiving Dinner: Recipes, Techniques and Tips for America's Favorite Celebration," by Anthony Dias and Kathryn K. Blue (Harper & Row, 1990), the recipe is delicious any time of year.

PUMPKIN-GINGER CHEESECAKE

CRUST:
1½ cups graham cracker crumbs
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground ginger
1 tablespoon sugar
1 stick unsalted butter, melted
FILLING:
3 8-ounce packages cream cheese, at room temperature
1½ cups sugar
5 eggs
1 16-ounce can pumpkin puree, or 2 cups fresh puree
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
2 tablespoons dark rum
2 tablespoons minced crystallized ginger
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon grated nutmeg
TOPPING:
1½ cups sour cream
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 tablespoons dark rum

In the bowl of a food processor fitted with the metal blade, combine graham cracker crumbs, cinnamon, ginger, sugar and melted butter, pulsing two or three times to blend evenly. Pour into a buttered, 10-inch springform pan and press the mixture onto the bottom and one-third up the sides of the pan. Chill for 30 minutes.

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. In the bowl of an electric mixer, beat the cheese and sugar until smooth. Continiung to beat at medium speed, add eggs one by one, beating well after each addition.

In a mixing bowl combine pumpkin, vanilla, rum, ginger, cinnamon and nutmeg. Mix until smooth. Add pumpkin mixture to the cream cheese and beat to combine.

Pour the filling into the crust and bake for 1½ hours, or until set.

Whisk the sour cream, sugar, cinnamon and rum together and spread over the cake. Allow to cool and then chill for at least five hours before serving.

Can be made up to two days ahead. Cover and refrigerate.

Keep taste in fat-free foods

NEW YORK (AP) — Today's variety of fat-free or low-fat foods includes cheese, salad dressings, ice cream and cake. But when the fat is removed, what happens to the taste?

"For years, removing the fat from food meant sacrificing taste and flavor," says dietitian Laura Conway, a contributor to the Environmental Nutrition newsletter. "Now, standard ingredients in food can be manipulated to fool the taste buds into thinking that you're eating a full-fat food."

Fat-free products offer an easy way to cut dietary fat intake without feeling deprived, Conway says. However, eating fat-free foods doesn't guarantee a better diet. In addition to choosing reduced-fat and fat-free foods, consumers must also select lower-fat versions of all foods, she says.

To help reduce the total fat in your diet, Environmental Nutrition offers these tips:

- Eat more fresh fruits, vegetables and whole-grain products.
- Switch from whole milk to low-fat (2 percent or 1 percent) milk or skim milk.
- Choose "select" grades of meat instead of "prime." Trim meat of all visible fat before cooking.
- Use non-stick vegetable sprays in place of oils when baking and frying foods.
- Eat angel food cake, frozen fruit bars or fat-free frozen desserts instead of rich desserts.

Sandwich lovers put anything between bread

By Lena Williams
N.Y. Times News Service

A sandwich is a work of American culinary imagination.

"Once, when I was mad at my brothers, I mixed lard with peanut butter, raw egg and sugar, spread it on white bread and gave it to them," said Benita Rodney, 38, a private secretary who lives in Washington. "And don't you know, they ate it."

James Rodney, one of her older brothers who sampled her spite sandwiches, recalled that as a child, he and his siblings would make pork and beans or syrup sandwiches when there was no luncheon meat or a traditional spread such as peanut butter or jelly available.

A ham is a ham, but a sandwich is a work of American culinary imagination at its best, or worst, depending upon one's tastes.

It seems that almost every ingredient imaginable has, at one time or another, found itself nestled between two pieces of bread.

Fruits, meats, vegetables, even cicadas, have been garnished with everything from honey to mayonnaise, olive oil to pepper, sugar to mustard, butter to curry powder, and have found their way into a sandwich.

Jalapeno pepper sandwiches, cucumber sandwiches, dill pickle and mayonnaise sandwiches, french fry sandwiches, baked bean sandwiches, syrup and marshmallow sandwiches, to name a few.

AT THIS TIME of year especially, when people are stuck with all those odd leftovers in the refrigerator from Thanksgiving dinner and weekend football gatherings, and when housebound children develop insatiable appetites, a hearty sandwich seems the perfect solution to an attack of the munchies.

"You can put almost anything on bread, and people will enjoy it," said Judy Gethers, the author of "The Sandwich Book" (Vintage, 1988).

"The sandwich has become an integral part of American culture, with components as varied as the people eating them. The fillings are limited only by the imagination."

The fourth Earl of Sandwich, John Montagu, may have given the sandwich its name in 18th-century England, but Americans, from fictional characters such as Dagwood Bumstead to adolescent campers, have given it its legendary appeal.

Nowadays, sandwiches increasingly reflect the nation's growing ethnicity, as well as contemporary life styles and attitudes about nutrition.

Even Ultra Slim-Fast and Teddy Graham crackers have been used as condiments. Sandwiches once considered unusual — bananas and peanut butter, for example — are now quite ordinary.

Food historians trace the origins of strange sandwich combinations to the Depression and World War II, when people fortunate enough to have two slices of bread would put between them whatever meager fillings were available.

Sometimes, a layer of olive oil on a piece of crusty bread sufficed. In any era, the poor seem to have a knack for culinary ingenuity.

"The po' boy sandwich from New Orleans is believed to have come from that period when beggars would go around asking for food," said Susan Costner, the author of "Great Sandwiches" (Crown, 1990).

"It's from the French pourboire. The poor boys would knock on doors of French convents, and rather than let them go hungry, the nuns would scrape out the larder, assembling leftovers between split loaves of French bread."

The hero, hoagy or submarine sandwich is nothing more than a modern-day version of the original po' boy, to which cooks added a layer of very thin slices of lemon for flavor.

MANY SANDWICH LOVERS say they are convinced that peculiar sandwiches were born from childhood pranks. College students and single people also contribute greatly to the repertory of sandwiches.

Cullen Murphy, in a story published in the November 1987 issue of The Atlantic, told of how he and his siblings deliberately spread "jelly over tuna fish or combined peanut butter and egg salad," when instructed by their mother to make sandwiches for each other's school lunches.

Despite its universality, the sandwich is also subject to regional and cultural variations.

People in the South and Southwest tend to prefer "sandwich spread," a creamy salad dressing made from egg yolks, olive or vegetable oil, pickles and pimento, to Northerners' choice of mayonnaise.

Baked or fried bean sandwiches are popular in the Midwest. Vegetarian sandwiches, using combinations of alfalfa or bean sprouts, avocado or tofu, are popular in California.

The British are known for their cucumber and butter tea sandwiches, while Belgians spread butter on plain bread, topping it with thin chocolate bars.

"As a child, we'd spread rendered chicken fat on rye bread and add salt on fried onion," said Sydell Kane, who grew up in the Bronx and Manhattan during the 1930s, noting the sandwich was especially popular in the Jewish community.

But, alas. It seems the younger generation, a group raised on dietary principles of eating nutritionally sound, organically grown, minute-made snacks, no longer finds great joy in creating unusual sandwiches.

"KIDS ARE NOT great experimenters," said Vicki Lansky, the author of "The Taming of the C.A.N.D.Y. Monster" (Book Peddlers, 1988) and "Feed Me, I'm Yours" (Bantam, 1981).

"They're traditionalists, especially when it comes to food. They don't like it when the juice from one food on their plate mixes with another. They like their food simple. That happens well through elementary school. Kids don't start to become adventurous until after that."

When Dowbrands Inc., the maker of Ziploc resealable bags, sponsored a national sandwich contest last month for elementary school students, most of the recipes used traditional fillings, like tuna fish, cheese or jelly.

The most daring ingredients found in the contest's sandwiches were a tablespoon of Ultra Slim-Fast powder — over apples and bananas on wheat bread — and crumbled Teddy Grahams cookies over peanut butter on raisin bread.

The award-winning sandwich, called the "steak-a-rama," contained a quarter pound of chopped steak, one slice of provolone cheese, three strips of bacon, one tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce, a pineapple slice and an olive on an onion bun.

Its creator, Trent McDaniels, a fifth-grader from Greenwood, Ark., had difficulty thinking of the strangest sandwich he'd ever eaten or seen eaten by his classmates.

Tammy McDaniels, Trent's mother, admitted that growing up, she had enjoyed her share osandwich combinations is, she said, "heating up peanut butter crackers in the microwave."

DEAR ABBY

Caretakers are for trees; caregivers are for people

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently saw a letter in your column signed "Lonesome Caretaker." Well, Abby, my longtime companion and I take exception to the term "caretaker" when it's used to identify one who looks after the daily needs of another. The term "careGIVER" seems kinder and much more loving and personal.

Van Buren

I have a terminal illness, and my longtime companion has now become my very loving caregiver. He does not take; he gives.

After all, what do caretakers actually do? Trim your shrubs? Paint your house? Fix your faucet? They maintain objects or property, or look after cemeteries.

Regardless of how the dictionary defines caretaker, I would like to see the word "caregiver" used when referring to one who lovingly cares for another. Abby, you can do a great deal toward making people aware of the difference and set a precedent for change. — GARY IN CACTUSLAND

DEAR GARY: Thank you for pointing out the important difference between caregiving and caretaking. I learned something today.

DEAR ABBY: This is my first letter to you. It concerns my daughter and her husband. My wife and I allowed them to occupy our home for two years for $600 per month. (We could have rented it out for double what we charged them.) My daughter had her first child near the end of the two-year term, and they asked for a six-month extension, which we granted.

Her husband was fired a year ago and refuses to look for another job. He baby-sits while my daughter supports him. They haven't paid us a penny in the last six months.

I suggested they hire a baby sitter to come into their home. They told us they do not trust anyone else with their baby. I have contacted them three times asking for a plan by which they will pay us in the future and give us a moving date, so we can sell our home! Nothing is forthcoming except excuses. They say we are "harassing" them and are only concerned with receiving money.

Should I turn them out into the street? Should I sue for back rent? Our home is our only real investment, and we want to get on with our own lives. We love our daughter and grandson, but the problem is clear. Have you any suggestions? — IN A CORNER IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR IN A CORNER: Since you purchased the house as an investment for yourselves and not as a retirement home for your son-in-law, you need to talk with an attorney and get his advice on how to handle this. Unless your daughter can convince her husband to get a job, he will continue to be the baby sitter — at your expense.

They are blackmailing you emotionally because you are her parents. You are not villains because you expect them to act responsibly.

Parades, football kick off year

Associated Press

Honeymooners began married life in Las Vegas, crowds cheered flower-covered floats in the Rose Parade, and dozens of string bands strutted their stuff in Philadelphia. It was all part of New Year's Day 1991.

"This is really a different way for me to start off the New Year," said comedian Bob Newhart, the grand marshal of Tuesday's 102nd annual Tournament of Roses in Pasadena, Calif., which comprised 60 flower-covered floats over a 5½-mile-long route.

Fans of the University of Iowa and the University of Washington football teams, which played each other in the afternoon, cheered wildly as cheerleaders and bands from the universities marched past the crowd.

Millions of Americans watched the Rose Bowl, which Washington won by 46-34, and seven other New Year's Day college bowl games on television.

Rose Parade-watchers started the day wrapped up in sleeping bags and parkas, drinking coffee, trying to keep warm. Temperatures, which were in the 30s in the morning, eventually rose into the 60s.

It was in the 30s, too, in Philadelphia, where organizers of the 91st Mummers Parade said they expected more than 10,000 people to take part in the 2½-mile cakewalk from South Philadelphia to City Hall. Musicians, mimes and regular people in offbeat costumes took part in the parade, which has its roots in centuries-old European celebrations in which men dressed as women, women as men and poor as rich.

Despite the chill, the weather was beautiful compared to 1989. That year, some string bands were booed when they rode buses part of the way to avoid rain and snow.

Even a severe fiscal crisis didn't prevent the city from giving away nearly $300,000 in parade prizes.

Christine Pandola, 16, of South Philadelphia, admired some men wearing pig outfits and a fellow in a rolling bed. "He was gorgeous," she said.

New Year's Day also marked the inauguration of new local, state and federal laws. In fact, liquor sales in some areas were reported up on New Year's Eve as people scrambled to beat Jan. 1 increases on alcohol taxes.

Three governors — John Engler in Michigan, Bruce King in New Mexico and Bruce G. Sundlun in Rhode Island — were sworn into office.

The Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Authority predicted a record 142,000 visitors welcoming the new year; most hotels reported no vacancies for the four-day weekend.

Hundreds of couples who lined up for marriage licenses on New Year's Eve were honeymooners by Tuesday. New Year's Eve is the second-busiest day for weddings in Las Vegas, surpassed only by Valentine's Day. The city is a marriage mecca because Nevada requires no waiting period and no blood tests.

In Nebraska, all 13 heated cabins at Platte River State Park about 25 miles southwest of Omaha were taken.

"People want to get away from the city — and it's really pretty out here," office manager Lois Kemp said. Guests went sledding and hiking in the park, which is three miles from the nearest town, restaurant or bar, she said.

Police reported six homicides and one suspicious death, even as the city awaited a final murder count for 1990 that was certain to be a record. Forty people were murdered between Christmas and New Year's; 14 of the victims died in the last 24 hours of 1990.

Final 1990 figures won't be released until March, but the city's top detective predicted the toll from murder would reach at least 2,200, easily a record for the second year in a row.

Three house fires in Indiana and Illinois on New Year's Eve and into the morning killed one adult and nine children aged between 3 and 10. Authorities said one fire was caused by an exploding Christmas tree light.

In downtown Buffalo, a mob of about 20 to 30 youths randomly attacked and robbed New Year's revelers on Main Street early Tuesday, police said. Two people were injured and a 16-year-old youth was charged with second-degree assault.

In Menlo Park, Calif., near San Francisco, police reported success in their "Operation Safe Skies" campaign against people firing guns in celebration of the new year.

"It was very successful," said Lt. Al Giovannoni. "The concentration of gunfire seemed to be much lighter than in past years."

Floods leave Midwestern families homeless

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Widespread floods kept an estimated 1,000 families out of their homes Tuesday across Indiana and elsewhere in the Ohio Valley but flood crests on most streams began moving out of cities and into more rural areas.

"It looks like the rivers in the northern part of the state are starting to recede. Southern Indiana is what we're really concerned about now," said Alden Taylor, a spokesman for Indiana's State Emergency Management Agency.

A disaster emergency declared by Gov. Evan Bayh remained in effect across about a third of the state in Indiana's worst flooding in a quarter of a century.

Rivers also began to recede in parts of Ohio and evacuees were allowed to return home in some communities. But the Ohio River was rising and flooding some West Virginia communities.

Near Pittsburgh, the Ohio crested at 27.2 feet, its highest level since the floods of Hurricane Agnes in 1972.

A 19-year-old woman who attempted to wade across a bridge partly submerged by the rain-swollen Mahoning River at New Castle in western Pennsylvania was carried away by the current and drowned early Tuesday, police said.

In Plymouth in northern Indiana, firefighters and merchants struggled to save downtown stores from the water of the Yellow River. About 20 homes were evacuated in three different neighborhoods, said Plymouth firefighter John Brown.

The Yellow River appeared to have stopped rising downtown by midday and firefighters pumped water lapping at business doors over a temporary dike. Sandbags surrounded stores.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
