Number 49

County Has 653 Irrigation Wells

Lynn county now has 653 irrigation wells which are watering a total of 43,223 acres of farm land.

This startling fact was revealed as the result of a survey of the county just completed by personnel of the Lynn County Soil Conservation District.

The number of wells exceeds all guesses The News has heard, although the acreage watered was not so surprising.

Also surprising is the fact that there are 155 eight inch wells in the county watering 16,289 acres. However, there are only five 10-inch wells.

Following is a tabulation of the

Size Well	No.	Acres
4-inch	197	6,635
5-inch	60	3,228
6-inch	228	15,692
7-inch	8	657
8-inch	155	16,289
10-inch	5	722
Total	653	43,223

Though there have been some wells in the county for many, many years, irrigation has been growing by leaps and bounds in the last two or three years.

Water for irrigation is being found in areas where heretofore windmill water has been scarce. Such irrigation water has been found even in Draw, Redwine, and Edith communities. However, most of the better irrigation is being developed in the north half of the county. The irrigation district now includes areas just north and east of Tahoka; at Wilson, New Home, Lakeview, Petty, Gordon, and Lakeland, and scattering wells in other communities.

Wilson Edwards drilled one of the early day wells on his place north of New Home possibly 25 years ago. That well is still pumping, as are three more wells on the place. All four of these wells are said to be eight-inches.

The Thomas brothers at Grassland have been pioneers in Lynn county irrigation, and their efficient use of limited water is frequently cited as a model for Plains irrigation farming.

Though irrigation is not now and probably never can be used as extensively in Lynn county as it is being used in Lubbock, Hale, Swisher, and Floyd counties, it is becoming a major factor in Lynn county to farmers. In fact, just this year it probably will make a $4,000,000 difference in Lynn county's crop production.

The irrigation well survey was made by N. E. Wood, work unit conservationist, A. E. Ware, engineer, James Phillips, Carlos Brooks, and Wallace Smith of the local Soil Conservation District office.

Seven Indicted By Grand Jury Here Monday

The Lynn county grand jury session here Monday returned seven indictments.

Dean Price and Perry Boyd, both of Brownfield, were indicted on charges of burglary of the Claude James home at New Home. One of the men is said to be in the penitentiary, and the other is under bond in another felony.

An indictment was returned against Johnnie West of Lubbock on a forgery charge.

Bennie Lee Humphrey of this county faces possible court trial on a charge of burglary and theft. He is alleged to have entered the home of Max Samulewitsch of Wilson, who recently came to the country from central Europe under the Displaced Persons program. A number of household articles were taken in the burglary.

Three indictments were returned by the jury for driving while intoxicated; second offense. These are against: Bernest William Cagle of Borden county, Lewis Johnson and Randolph W. Muck.

The station will be located on one acre of land O. C. has bought from B. R. Tate, located across the road east of the Tate home.

Elliott said the concrete driveway will extend 210 feet across the front of the property and 50 feet back east to the office and rest rooms. To the rear of the building, he expects to install his bulk plant. He has leveled off the property, and has drilled a well and installed a pressure pump for his own water supply.

Mr. Elliott is wholesale dealer for Panhandle Oil Company products. He also has a service station at O'Donnell. He hopes to attract some more of the through traffic and tourist trade, as well as local business, at the new station.

School Enrollment Equals Last Year

Enrollment Up At New Home

New Home schools opened Monday with a record enrollment of 285 students, Supt. James Vaughn reports.

Enrollment in high school totaled 77, and there were 182 in the grade school and 26 in the Negro school.

People Injured In Two Wrecks

Several people narrowly escaped death here last week end in two serious car wrecks.

Saturday morning at about 7:45 o'clock, G. K. Smith was turning around in the street near the Chancy Service Station on South Sweet, when his 1942 Chevrolet was hit by a 1952 Ford occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Melvin D. Smith and small son of Lubbock, route 7, the Ford being driven by the man and traveling south.

Mrs. Melvin Smith received a severe cut on the forehead and suffered from shock, while her husband received a cut on the lip. The little boy and C. K. Smith were only shaken up. Both cars were badly damaged, with heaviest damage to the Ford.

Sunday morning, two Lubbock Negroes were injured, one seriously, when their 1951 Oldsmobile overturned on the highway five miles north of Tahoka. They were taken to Lubbock for treatment. A third Negro in the car was not injured, but the car was completely demolished.

Jimmy Whorton Tells of Trip To New York City

Jimmy Whorton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jep Whorton, returned home Sunday from a 10-day trip to New York City. He went with his uncle Joe Whorton of Albany, to attend the American Legion National Convention.

Naturally, Jimmy reports the trip was a wonderful one. He was especially impressed with the great Legion parade which lasted from 8:00 a. m. to 8:00 p. m. in which General Dwight D. Eisenhower participated.

While in the city, Jimmy took the boat trip around Manhattan Island, visited Coney Island, the Empire State building, Radio City, Madison Square Garden, and Yankee and Giants stadiums. He also visited the slums of New York City, and many other points of interest.

Several movie stars were on the stage at the Paramount Theatre the night he attended.

Jimmy was dressed as quite a Texas "drug store cowboy", and everywhere he went people would say, "Are you from Texas?" and others just walked up and greeted him with "Hi, Tex."

He met several interesting people on the train, which made his trip more enjoyable.

"We ought to be very happy right here in Tahoka to have all this space in which to live," Jimmy said on his return.

Mrs. Marlin Will Open Club Cafe

Mrs. C. A. Marlin announces this week that she has leased the Club Cafe, which has been closed the past several months, and will reopen the business Monday of next week.

The building interior is being completely redecorated and otherwise improved. Mrs. Marlin is experienced in the food service business.

Free coffee and doughnuts will be served opening day.

"Buddy" Thurman of New Lynn fell Thursday of last week and injured a knee. He is under treatment at Tahoka Hospital.

Registration in the Tahoka schools had reached 885 Tuesday, virtually the same as last year at the same time, Supt. Otis Spears estimates.

A slight drop in enrollment had been anticipated, but this did not materialize. In fact, it is known that some students had not enrolled when the count was made.

There were 191 registered in high school, 648 in the elementary school, and 45 in the Negro school.

The enrollment by grades is as follows: First, 90; second, 89; third, 77; fourth, 76; fifth, 80; sixth, 77; seventh, 78; eighth, 81; Freshman, 61; Sophomore, 57; Junior, 31; Senior, 42; and Negro school, about 45.

Two new teachers were added as school opened. Mrs. Tom Bartley, former High School teacher, is teaching High School English until mid-term, or until a teacher can be procured.

Miss JoAnn Henderson, a native Tahokan and a graduate of Texas Tech who taught last year in Tulia High School, is teacher of High School history.

Willard Edgett, the new band director, reports there will be 56 students in the High School band and 25 students in the beginners' band. He also is starting a choral club in Tahoka High, and invites all students interested in this type of musical training to enroll for this work.

J. R. Thurman Is Taken By Death

J. R. Thurman, 28, died at 3:30 p. m. Saturday in the McKinney Veterans Hospital. His ailment was never completely diagnosed, members of his family said, but he was believed to have a rear heart ailment or some fever contracted while serving overseas in the Army.

Funeral services were held here Monday at 4:00 p. m. in Sweet Street Baptist Chapel with the Rev. Bill Scantling, pastor, officiating. Burial followed in Tahoka Cemetery under direction of Stanley-Jones Funeral Home.

J. R. was born at Anson on June 15, 1924, and moved to New Lynn community with his parents about 15 years ago. He attended school in New Lynn, and served in the Armed Forces during the war, serving overseas in New Guinea and Luzon. Since, he had been working in Tahoka as an automobile mechanic. He was married to Miss Billie June Paris July 1, 1949.

Last February, he became ill and went to the Big Spring Veterans Hospital for treatment. After remaining there a while, he returned to work, but a little over six weeks ago it became necessary for him to return to Big Spring. Physicians there sent him to McKinney Hospital for further treatment and a possible operation.

Survivors include his wife and their six months old son, Leslie M.; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe M. Thurman of New Lynn; four sisters, Mrs. J. B. Kelley of New Lynn, Mrs. M. L. Wilson of Silver City, N. M., Mrs. H. E. Mize of Meridian, and Mrs. Hi Smith of Los Angeles, Calif.; and three brothers, James and Jerrel of Tahoka and Noel of Waco; several nieces and nephews. All the brothers and sisters were here for the funeral except Mrs. Smith, who was unable to come.

Odell Green, New Home Negro injured in a car wreck about 10 days ago, underwent surgery at Tahoka Hospital Saturday to tie two parts of a broken shoulder bone together.

Mrs. Abe Burgess, 57, of New Home, fell last Monday morning and broke her arm. She is a patient at Tahoka Hospital.

Bulldogs Work Out For Season Opener

Tahoka Bulldogs will open their 1952 season Friday night of next week at Kelley Field with the Sundown Roughnecks.

Sundown is one of the stronger Class A teams of the South Plains, and usually gives Tahoka a ball game. Sundown has all, or nearly all, its regular starters back this year. Coach Rowe, who was assistant last year, is head coach this year. Among his three assistant coaches is Coach John Blaine, formerly of Dimmitt, considered one of the best coaches in Texas.

Though Tahoka won the district 6-AA championship last year, the entire starting backfield and most of the line was lost by graduation.

Lost from the championship team are such boys as Earl Bartley, Wayne Tekell, Wayne Martin, Bill Short, Don Brice, Lynn Halamick, James Foster, Wiley Curry, Bennie Brookshire, Jerry Sosebee, and Roy Elliott.

Coach Bill Haralson and his new assistant, Bill Sharpley, a Corsicana High School and Texas Tech graduate and athlete, are faced with the problem of rebuilding a team with largely inexperienced boys. Only seven lettermen from last year's squad are back this year.

About 45 boys reported for the team Monday, and are working out twice daily this week. Among these are 15 Freshmen.

Returning lettermen include: Charles Hyles, 132-pound elusive back, who received a broken arm last year and did not finish the season; John Foster, lineman who is being moved to the backfield this year; John Curry and Billy Stice, tackles; Joe Brooks, who is being moved from end to center; Richard Havens, end; and Steve Slover, who is being moved from tackle to end.

Among the other boys who will possibly see action in the back field are: J. B. Ables, Gordon Smith, Charley Schulz, I. V. J. Melton, Kenneth Early, and Garland Huddleston.

Candidates for line positions who show promise include: Milford Ratliff, Roswell Bartley, Willie Burl Lee, Richard Carter, Duane McMillan, and others.

There are a number of other boys who will be pushing those named above for positions.

Two new boys who have joined the squad and who may be eligible for play are Billy Tong, who comes here from Abilene, and Mack Addison, who comes from Crosbyton.

The Bulldogs will field a fairly heavy line, but the backfield is nearly certain to be pretty light. Greatest handicap is lack of experience and depth, but the coaches have some hopes of the team developing as the season progresses.

Mrs. C. T. Tankersley left Saturday for a visit of two or three weeks with her daughter, Mrs. R. M. (Nola B.) Munson in Estherville Iowa.

Negro Victim Of Shooting Scrape

Lonzie Cole, O'Donnell Negro, is in jail here charged with aggravated assault after having shot Jettie D. Miller, 24, in the arm and legs Sunday afternoon in that city.

Deputy Sheriff Otis Curry said Cole allegedly fired a .38 pistol at Jettie D. The bullet caught her in the left arm, passed through her lower left leg, and lodged in her lower right leg, without any bones being broken.

The shooting occurred in front of a cafe in "the flats".

School Program At Rotary Club

Interesting facts on the Tahoka school system were brought out in a program conducted by Charles Townes at Tahoka Rotary Club Thursday of last week.

Charles used the question and answer method, but he had the answers to the questions and had to answer most of them himself. Dr. Emil Prohl introduced Miss Savannah Tunnell, Journalism teacher in the Phillips school, who was reared here and who is being nominated by the local club as a candidate for one of the Rotary International exchange student fellowships.

Prohl also told of the respirator and resuscitator which the Tahoka Fire Department hopes to buy for emergency use in Lynn county.

Miss Patsy McGinty, student in Abilene Christian College and former club "sweetheart", was guest pianist for the day.

O. C. Elliott, owner of O. C. Elliott Oil Company and Tahoka Auto Supply, this week started construction of a large new 8-pump service station just outside the Tahoka city limits on the Lubbock highway.

The station will be located on one acre of land O. C. has bought from B. R. Tate, located across the road east of the Tate home. Elliott said the concrete driveway will extend 210 feet across the front of the property and 50 feet back east to the office and rest rooms. To the rear of the building, he expects to install his bulk plant. He has leveled off the property, and has drilled a well and installed a pressure pump for his own water supply.

Well, folks, here I am back again. It is possible that a few of you missed this Column last week. It was not in the paper for I was not in town—not in the state even. My daughter, Berta, who is employed in the state public welfare office in Seguin, came up on her vacation hunting a cooler climate. So, she and I and my two grand-daughters, Anita Jo and Sara Sue Rochelle, who reside in Lubbock, took off for the mountains on Tuesday morning, August 19. So, we were gallivanting around in New Mexico and up in Colorado for the next eight days and had no time to write Columns. But I certainly did have a good time gallivanting around, and maybe I will tell you a little about it later.

I had written a little for this Column before leaving but barely got started, and now I find that I must make a new start and must discard some of the things I had intended to say.

If you remember, I had been writing about the great struggle that three of the great European nations had been engaged in to dominate the continent of North America that had been opened up for exploration and settlement by the great discoveries made by Christopher Columbus and others. These three rival countries were Spain, France, and England.

We mentioned a number of early explorers who went out in the name of one or the other of these great powers making explorations and claims of sovereignty for their countries respectively. Spain being far in the lead in this respect. But we contended that Spain was virtually knocked out of the race in 1588 when she lost her "Invincible Armada" which she sent out from Lisbon, Portugal, into English waters to destroy the supposedly less powerful fleet. While that disastrous defeat did virtually write down Spain's eventual doom as a contender for supremacy in North America, it did not mean the immediate or total destruction of her authority, power, and influence on this continent; for she still wields authority, power, and influence throughout Mexico, till this day. But in so far as her aspirations for supremacy on this continent were concerned, they sank to the bottom of the English Channel and the Atlantic Ocean with the destruction of that great Spanish Armada. So now, we must concern ourselves with the struggle between the French and the English.

Both the English and the French were slow in undertaking to plant colonies in the New World. It was nearly 115 years after Columbus discovered America before the English established their first colony on the North American continent, Jamestown, Virginia, in 1607; and it was nearly a hundred years after Columbus made his fourth and last voyage to America, 1502-1504. It was 88 years after the Spanish explorer and exploiter Hernando Cortez had invaded and conquered Mexico and since the Spaniards had planted colonies on almost every one of the larger West India islands. About 13 years after the English had founded Jamestown they planted a second colony at Plymouth, Massachusetts, December 21, 1620.

In 1605 the French explorers, Samuel de Champlain and Sieur de Monts, founded the colony of Acadia, later known as Nova Scotia, in Canada; and in 1608 Champlain founded Quebec.

Following the founding of these four settlements—two French and two English—other English settlements were established in rapid succession all along the Atlantic seaboard from Maine to Georgia; and French fur-traders, explorers, and missionaries continued to push farther and farther west into the region of the Great Lakes and the Ohio and Mississippi River valleys. La Salle finally going down the Mississippi into the deep South.

From the very first, the French and the English made conflicting claims to the region now constituting the state of Maine. From the very first also it was inevitable that other conflicting claims would arise in the future, for the English made their claims to all the territory lying immediately west of the colonies which they established along the Atlantic seaboard clear on to the Pacific Ocean or to Spanish territory in the Southwest; while the French made their claims from the heads and the mouths of the great rivers which they explored. French claims down the Ohio and the Mississippi therefore cut straight across the claims of the English.

Here we quote from the World Book, that popular high school and college encyclopedia, Volume 2, page 1180: "The reappointment of Frontenac (as governor of New France) coincided with the beginning of the struggle between France and England—France to keep New France, been wars between them before England to conquer it. There had this time. . . . But it was now clear that the French were planning a great American empire, while William III of England was beginning to organize Europe against French aggression. In 1689 the real struggle began, and for three quarters of a century it continued with occasional periods of peace or truce, during which the nations made further preparations to renew the conflict. "It was the ultimate aim of the French to hold the English to the Atlantic seaboard, or even to drive them out of North America. Frontenac at once began attacks on the New England colonies, and for years the colonies suffered the horrors of border warfare. The success of their raids encouraged the French, but infuriated the English, who made an attempt with a small fleet to capture Quebec and Montreal."

This was the first of the four French and Indian Wars, and it was indecisive. You may think that a recital of these wars makes dry-reading, but you should remember that had the final outcome of these wars been favorable to the French instead of the English, you and I doubtless would not be here today; doubtless not a one of us would ever have been born. Certainly there never would have been any United States of America, such as we have today.

So, now let's turn over to World Book No. 4, page 2607, and quote a little further.

"The claims of the English and the French settlers in North America were, from the outset, conflicting. Those who planted colonies on the seaboard, announced the English, had a right to all the land that stretched inland from those points; the French claimed that settlement at the source or the mouth of a river conferred title to all territory which the river drained. Carrying out these theories, the English pressed westward from the Atlantic coast, the French southward from Canada and northward from Louisiana, and conflict was inevitable."

These conflicts, four in number, were known as the French and Indian Wars, for the Indians were allied with the French in every one of them. The first of them was King William's War, to which we have already alluded. The main struggle, starting in 1689 and continuing until 1697, was in Europe between France and England, but it extended to the French and English settlers in America also. "In America," says the World Book, "it began with the sending of French expeditions from Canada against the English frontier. Hundreds of settlers were captured or killed; all the English expeditions against Canada, except one, failed almost before they started." Nothing had been decided respecting America in this war, and the Treaty of Peace which closed it ceded back to the English all the territory that the French had captured during the war.

Queen Anne's War, 1701-1713, was also a European struggle between France and England, but France had the aid of Spain in Europe and the aid of the Indians in America. In the South, the Spaniards of Florida, assisted by the Indians, made attacks on the English colony of South Carolina; and the English attacked St. Augustine, Florida. In the North, the French from Canada and their Indian allies, the Algonquians, made brutal attacks on the English settlers in New England, inflicting some horrible butcheries. The English, however, captured the French colony, Acadia, but they treated the colonists humanely, allowing them to retain their homes and possessions in Acadia. The Acadians remained loyal to France, however, in the two French and Indian Wars that followed, and the English, tired by their assistance to France during the last of these wars, ruthlessly snatched them away from their homes and their beloved Acadia and deported them to various points throughout the English colonies. It was this tragic ending of the French colony of Acadia and of its people that inspired Henry W. Longfellow to write the beautiful but pathetic epic poem entitled Evangeline, the Acadian maiden separated from her lover, whose devotion to him impelled her to make a long and fruitless search for him, leading her as far away as the forests of Louisiana. This deportation of the Acadians by the English does seem to us like a heartless and inexcusable act, but we must remember that the English colonists had suffered horrible murders and other outrages at the hands of the Indian allies of the French. In Queen Anne's War, for example, the French and their Indian Allies, attacked and captured the town of Litchfield, Massachusetts, killed 53 of the inhabitants, took 111 others as prisoners, and afterwards murdered 17 of the prisoners. So, it can be seen that the English had suffered great provocation.

The third of these wars was King George's War, 1744-1748. It was just about as fruitless in the end as had been the other two that preceded it. Nothing of importance gained by either side.

It was the last of these wars, known simply as the French and Indian War, waged from 1754 to 1760, that really got results. The English in the end were completely triumphant. And a triumph for the English at that time was a triumph for all the English colonists.

It was in that war that youthful George Washington won his first military spurs, or nearly the first. He had tangled up with the Indians sufficiently before that to know their methods of warfare, their stealthiness, and their treacherous habits. Washington was serving under General Braddock, who had been sent out by the Governor of Virginia to clean up on the Indians. Braddock, of course, would not listen to any counsel from the young Virginia captain to be cautious, and so he struck out boldly through the woods to capture Fort Duquesne which had been established by the French at the junction of the Allegheny and Monongahela Rivers, which constitute the head of the Ohio River, and sure enough, the Indians attacked from ambush, killed Braddock, and almost destroyed his little army. Washington fell into the breach and saved the English forces from utter destruction.

It was in this war too that two generals, one the French Commander and the other the English Commander, on the heights of Abraham, fought to the death, but by their valor and courage in the hour of death, won death less fame.

The Heights of Abraham overlook the old city of Quebec. In September, 1759, in the last French and Indian War, the French Commander, Marquis de Montcalm, was stationed with an army of 15,000 men in front of Quebec to defend the city against the English. His position seemed to be impregnable. In fact, the English Commander, General

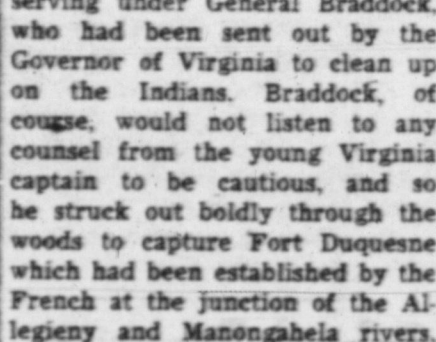

James Wolfe, had made an unsuccessful frontal attack in July of that year. Wolfe then saw that to capture the city of Quebec, his army, by some means or other, must first scale the Heights of Abraham. So, he conceived the idea of gliding down the St. Lawrence River by night in boats with muffled oars, making a noiseless landing, and climbing the precipitous

Letters From News Readers—

(The News welcomes letters from its readers on any current subject, not libelous, of course. All communications must be of reasonable length and must be signed. On request, the signature will not be printed. The Editor.)

Dear Mr. Hill:
At this late date I would like to express our thanks for the very nice article you wrote on Jess. Turner and Tom Preston.

We had a most enjoyable time while in Tahoka and hope to return for the home-coming next year.

I regret so much time has elapsed since the article was published and our letter of appreciation, but Mr. Turner has been seriously ill in the hospital for weeks and weeks. Am happy to report he is doing nicely and is around once more. Thanks again. Sincerely,

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Turner
1115 Thompson,
Houston 7, Texas.

Dear Friend:
We are a shade late with our renewal but to enjoy The Lynn County News, and especially your Odds and Ends. Hope you are well and will write many more of your great experiences.

We are still hot and dry here, and sort of wonder why the rain-makers have quitted down so. Maybe they decided the Lord had the rain business in his hands yet. Good luck to you and yours.
F. M. Billman.

SLATON PHOTOGRAPHERS WIN AWARDS AT CHICAGO

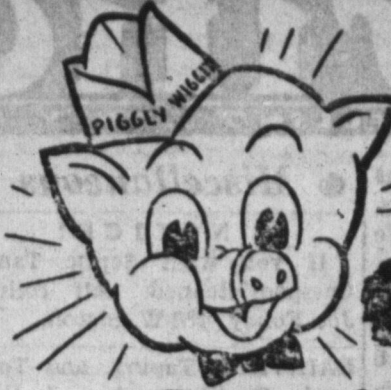

Photographs of two Lynn county children taken by the Marinell Portrait Photographers of Slaton figured in the granting of awards to the Slaton photographers at the close of the 1952 convention of the Photographers Association of America on last Friday night at the Conrad Hilton Hotel in Chicago. The Lynn county children whose portraits helped the Slaton couple to win the awards were little Monty Botkin, age 1, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Botkin of Tahoka, and little Cathy Cummings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cummings of Wilson. Photographs of two Lubbock children and one Slaton child also figured in the granting of the awards, which consisted of a gold medal and a parchment.

The Slaton photographers are B. Frederic and Marinell Devries operating as the Marinell Portrait Photographers. They were also awarded the degree of Photographic Craftsman, a degree held by only 15 photographers in the entire United States prior to the awards made last Friday night. It is given for outstanding service to the profession and for Photographic ability. The convention had been in session all the week and was attended by 5,000 photographers, according to a Chicago news dispatch.

Winston Reeves of the Reeves Photography, Lubbock, also won an award, but he was not present and the award was to be sent to him.

Mrs. O. D. (Faye) Pierce of Crosby and Mrs. Marie Sanders and daughter, Donna Faye, left for their homes last Friday after a week's visit here with their mother, Mrs. Pearl Brown.

Edwin (Tiny) Jolly and wife of Dallas spent the weekend here visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Jolly.

For Sale, Bargain: Stainless Steel Teeth

Not many people know it, but Uncle Sam buys millions of dollars' worth of stainless steel teeth. Don't get upset. They're not the chewing kind. They're the jet plane kind.

You see, stainless steel teeth are blades that fit inside the engine walls of jet planes. The blades help to drive air into the firing chambers. There are more than 1,000 of these teeth in each engine, and up to a little while ago each one had to be forged—a slow, fussy, expensive method.

The problem was dumped in the lap of G-E specialists, and they solved it.

The result is that today we roll a continuous strip of stainless steel, cut the teeth to length, and weld them to a base. Works fine. The cash saving: 55%. Critical material saving: 39%.

There's an extra reason to be happy about this, since all of us taxpayers have to foot the bills. Millions of dollars will be saved by the military services in future blade production. And the how-to-do-it is being shared through the U.S. Air Force with other jet engine builders.

Odds & Ends

uscliffs unobserved by the eney. This, he said, his troops succeeded in doing; and there, on September 13, 1759, the decisive battle of the war was fought.
Volfe was thrice wounded, the first wound being fatal. As he was lying on the battlefield, he herd outs, "They Run! They run!"
Who runs?" he asked. "The eney," he wa stold. "Now God be raised, I die in peace," he calmly answered.

General Montcalm was also mortally wounded but he lived until the next morning. His last words are said to have been,

"Thank God, I shall not live to see the surrender of Quebec."
That battle ended the War.
Louisburg, Fort Duquesne, Crown Point, and Niagara had already fallen into the hands of the English. The capture of Quebec rendered the victory complete. It also decided the question as to whether the French or the English should rule America. As the World Book further says, The battle . . . was a turning point in American history . . . When Quebec fell the long struggle was ended, England was to be supreme in North America. The Treaty of Paris, signed in 1763, gave to England Canada and all the French possessions east of the Mississippi, with one 'Isle of Orleans' including the city of New Orleans." The only possessions left to France were some tiny islands in the vicinity of New Foundland, allowed to France as fishing grounds.

And so, as the result of this crushing defeat, France, at the end of this last French and Indian War, appeared to have been more completely knocked out of the race for supremacy on this continent than Spain had been in 1688. France, in fact, did remain quiescent for 40 years and showed no apparent intention of making another effort to gain vast possessions in North America until about 1800. But powerful military dictators are never trustworthy, and one can never know what schemes and machinations
they are hatching up to increase and perpetuate their power.

Napoleon Bonaparte was one of the most ruthless and ambitious military leaders that have arisen since the days of Alexander the Great. In 1800, while at the zenith of his power, he decided that he wanted to become not only the master of Europe
but also to extend his empire over the North American continent.
Accordingly he extorted a Treaty
from Spain ceding to him all her territory in North America lying West of the Mississippi River and north of Mexico. This cession of territory did not become known to the President of the United States until 1802, who immediately saw the possible ruinous consequences to the United States that such ownership might entail, for the territory included the lower course and the mouth of the Mississippi River; and if France should choose to close the mouth of that great river to the commerce of the United States it would prove ruinous to a large portion of our country.
President Jefferson therefore wrote to our Minister to France to open negotiations with Napoleon for some arrangement by which the great river would be kept open to our commerce.
Livingston, our Minister to France, acted accordingly, and to his amazement Napoleon offered to sell him all of the entire Louisiana territory. The truth of the matter was that reverses had come to Napoleon and he had decided that it would be impossible for him to hold New Orleans and the mouth of the Mississippi against the naval power of England, with which nation he was then at war, and besides he needed money and a lot of it to carry on the war. The upshot of it was that he sold all of the Louisiana territory to the United States for the sum of $15,000,000, which was considerably less than $15.00 for each square mile of the territory,

which embraced 1,172,000 sections
So, Napoleon's ambitions and schemes not only brought about his own eventual downfall, but they also resulted in his throwing into our lap before his fall
all this vast and valuable territory for a mere song—a territory which he had wrenched by fair means or foul from the Spaniards.
From this territory we have carved in whole or in part fourteen states lying west of the Mississippi River.

By a chain of circumstances almost as marvelous as those which resulted in our acquisition of the Louisiana Territory, our country in 1819 came into possession of Florida. At the close of the French and Indian War, it was ceded to England by the treaty of Paris made in 1763, in exchange for Cuba which England had taken from Spain the preceding year. Twenty years later, in 1783, England traded Florida
to Spain for the Bahama Islands.
As a Spanish possession, Florida
again became a menace and a bad neighbor for the United States. It became the refuge for criminals, for run-away slaves,
and for thievish and troublesome Indians. These classes dealt us plenty of misery, and so by another treaty agreement Spain
ceded Florida to the United States in 1819, which was ratified and became effective in 1821. Florida embraced 72,101 square miles and we paid Spain $5,500,000 for it, about $72.00 per section.

Furthermore, at that very time,
1819, Mexico herself was fighting to throw off the Spanish yoke
and succeeded in doing so in 1821.
But for 300 years Mexico had been under Spanish rule and Spanish culture, and Spanish ideologies continued to prevail
without much change or modification. Hence, when Texas was thrown open to English-speaking peoples for colonization and English-speaking people swarmed into the boundaries of the state to make their homes, these peoples were suddenly thrown into closer contact with the Spanish-speaking and Spanish-culture people than ever before, and it was hard for each race and nationality to understand the other. So different were they in background, in training, in ideals, and in ideologies that conflicts were inevitable.

These conflicts resulted shortly
in the Texas war for independence and a little later in the war between the whole United States and Mexico. The slavery question entered only incidentally and in a minor way into the causes of these conflicts.

Such wars are not likely to occur again, for we are coming to know and to understand each other better every day.

I think it would be fine if we could speak the Spanish language
as well as most Mexicans can speak the English language; and I think that students in our high schools and colleges should study Spanish and learn to speak it correctly and fluently. That, in the course of time, would help a lot.

Bear Almost Gets Mrs. J. B. Oliver While She Was On Vacation Trip

Mrs. J. B. Oliver has written for The News the following interesting account of their recent vacation trip and their attendance at the National VFW and Auxiliary Convention in Los Angeles.

In Colorado, we visited Pike's Peak, Royal Gorge, Seven Falls, Cave of the Winds, Will Rogers Shrine, and Broadmoor museum and zoo—Lots of beauty around Colorado Springs.

From there we went to Denver and on 50 miles to Estes Park and Big Thompson Canyon, which is a paradise. Next stop was Cheyenne, Wyoming, scene of the "world's biggest rodeo."

Our next scenic visit was to the Black Hills of South Dakota—some more beauty we didn't realize—saw Rushmore Mountain with its carved heads of four great presidents, called the Shrine of Democracy, and went through Rushmore Caves. But the caves were a disappointment after having seen the great Carlsbad Cavern. The Black Hills and the Bad Lands of South Dakota are indeed indescribable.

We then drove to Yellowstone National Park, where we saw plenty of bear, saw Old Faithful geyser erupt, Old Dragon Head on the Rampage, and took pictures of the deer and bear until a big black bear chased me. Did I give that bear a run for his money! I thought Pappy was going to run off and leave me with the bear. He said he was trying to start the car in order to run the car between me and the bear and was so scared he couldn't start the motor. But I still believe he was gonna run off and leave me. The bear and I really put on a show, and everybody got pictures but me and the guy that was trying to help me. He whistled and got the bear's attention and gave me a chance to catch my breath. Boy, they say that I did good for "an old plug."

From Yellowstone, we went down to Salt Lake City, and visited the Great Salt Lakes, the Salt Flats, the great Brigham Copper Mines, and the Mormon Tabernacle. Pappy and I got on television in the museum there on the grounds of the Temple on the "Welcome Travelers" program. I went through with a guide. All day long, guides take crowds through. About five groups were going through while we were making the trip.

From Salt Lake, we drove to Sacramento and San Francisco, saw Alcatraz prison, the Golden Gate and Oakland Bay bridges, and Treasure Island, in which we were especially interested since Billy spent his last two months of Naval service and got his discharge there.

From there, we headed for Los Angeles and the National convention of the VFW and Auxiliary. On the way down, we went to Yosemite National Park and the Redwood Forest of big trees, another scenic wonderland, and saw the Big Tree with the road through it which all children study and see in the geographies. Took pictures of Pappy and my car at the tree.

We were in Los Angeles eight days, and learned to get around pretty well. We took in Hollywood. The meetings were held at the Ambassador Hotel, just across the street from the Brown Derby, where we ate as long as we had plenty of money. Saw the Fish Markets, a sight you will never forget.

We went through many studios, the NBC, CBS, Columbia, and Warner Bros. We visited "Queen for a Day", "Breakfast in Hollywood", and saw many other radio and TV shows, Link Ledbetter's "People Are Funny".

We also took a sight-seeing trip by bus, saw movie stars' homes, the beach, and went through Will Rogers' ranch home, which was given the City of Los Angeles three days before she died. "The Story of Will Rogers" was filmed there.

The Communists don't like the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and decided they would run us out, but since VFW members have seen some tight and scary places they don't scare easily. It did look for a while as if we might have a little war of our own. Since I'm not a fighter, I was really scared. On Monday, fourteen of the big Communists were sentenced—that was the day our meetings opened, and they acted like we were responsible.

"Ike" Eisenhower led the parade and made a talk. He had on his VFW cap. About seven state governors and several senators and congressmen were there. Our own VFW Past Dept. Commander, Senator-Elect J. T. Rutherford of Odessa was there. The Communists surely didn't like him. From Los Angeles, we came by Grand Canyon, the Petrified Forest, Painted Desert, and then to Ruidoso, N. M., where we spent the last few days before coming home. Pappy wanted to stay two more weeks, but four weeks was long enough for me.

Methodist WSCS Will Have Tea

The Methodist Women's Society of Christian Service will entertain the ladies of the church Monday at 4:30 p. m. with a tea in the home of Mrs. Emil Prohl. Highlighting the affair will be a book review of "The Gown of Glory," by Mrs. William Mingus of Lubbock.

Anyone wishing to hear this widely known reviewer is invited to the tea, according to Mrs. A. M. Bray, President.

Thirty-five members and guests were present last Monday for a luncheon given by the W.S.C.S. Several members of the O'Donnell W. S. C. S. attended the meeting to hear Mrs. A. C. Walker of Lubbock who spoke to the group. Mrs. J. H. Sharp, Mrs. Ira Joe Hart and Mrs. John Price were hostesses for the affair.

Pledge Sunday was observed last Sunday in the local Methodist church by a talk from Mrs. Howell Spencer. Mrs. Spencer told of her experiences in Hawaii where she was a W.S.C.S. worker before her recent move to Lubbock. Thirty-one new members have been added to the W.S.C.S. rolls since Pledge Sunday.
