Alternative station

A first of its kind alternative refueling station is set to open today in Sonora. The 24-hour facility owned by Eddins-Walcher of Midland, will be the first alternative refueling center in the U.S. to offer propane, natural gas, gasoline and diesel. Texas Railroad Commissioners Barry Williamson and Jim Nugent will be attending the opening celebration. The facility provides a glimpse into the future when alternative fuels will be as convenient for industrial fleet customers to obtain as gasoline and diesel, Williamson said. Access to the station will be provided by a computer card. He said the Sonora facility of Eddins-Walcher could be the first of many such stations to come. The grand opening for the facility is set for 2 p.m. today.

Exxon to cut 140 local jobs

Official: Company to downgrade Midland operation

■ Midland operations to go from division to production status.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Approximately 140 jobs will be eliminated in Midland when Exxon U.S.A. operations are downgraded from a division to production status, said Leslie Rogers, a spokesman for Exxon in Houston.

Midland is now Western Division headquarters for Exxon, with 410 employees and responsibility for all production in West Texas, the Rocky Mountains and California. Randy Howard is division manager.

But, under the reorganization plan, on Sept. 1 of this year, Midland will become a production office, headed by a production manager, and approximately 140 employees will either be transferred or terminated. Approximately 270 professional, technical and clerical employees of the 410 who work in the Midland office will remain to support field operations currently being served from there.

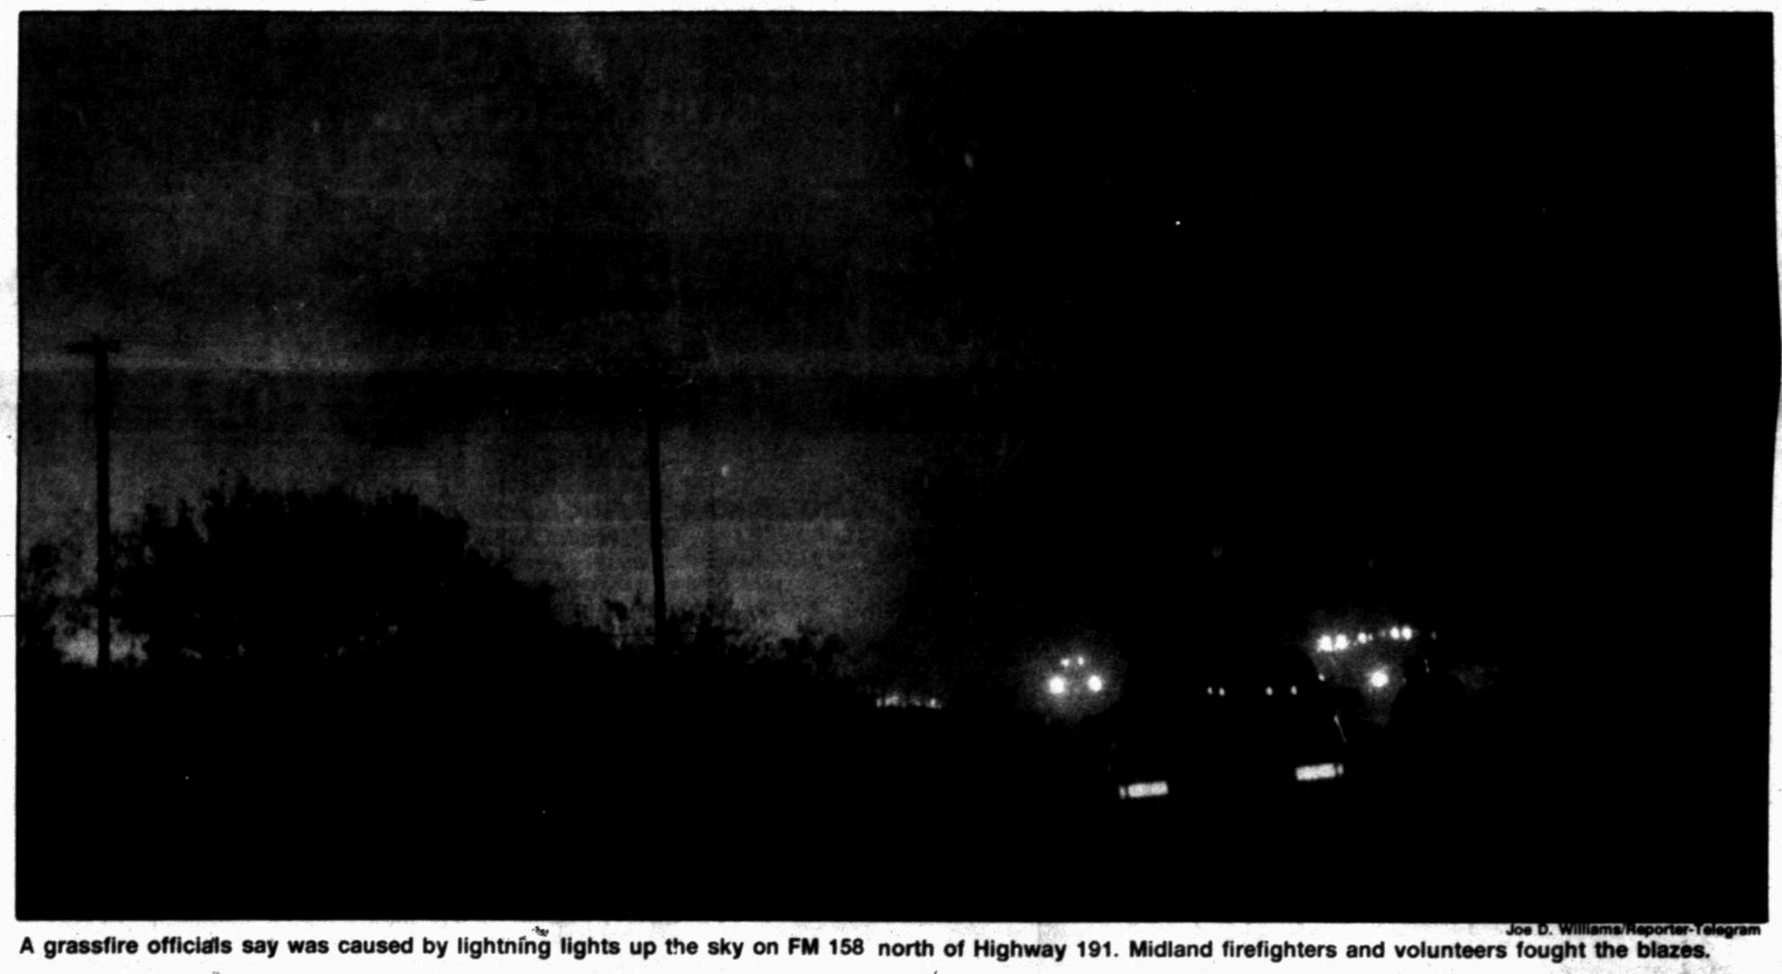

"The bottom line is that there will be 140 fewer Exxon jobs in Midland in September," Rogers said.

Operating management and most technical personnel will remain in field locations to maintain a closer relationship of day-to-day activities, while planning, project engineering and other technical staff work will be consolidated to maximize effectiveness. Production Department support activities, including Controller's, Human Resources, Law, Information Systems and Public Affairs, will also be affected by the change.

Rogers said the restructuring was based on studies initiated early this year, to improve efficiency and competitiveness in its production field operations and Houston headquarters. The major change involves consolidation of certain Production Department activities in Houston from Thousand Oaks, Ca., New Orleans and Midland.

Fire in the sky

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

A grassfire officials say was caused by lightning lights up the sky on FM 158 north of Highway 191. Midland firefighters and volunteers fought the blazes.

Officials: Lightning strikes dry grass, ignites blazes

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Lightning from an early evening thunderstorm touched into dried-out grass north of Highway 191 Tuesday, igniting more than seven grassfires — three of which still burned out of control near midnight.

Firefighters and law enforcement officials from Midland, Odessa and surrounding counties responded to the fires, which officials confirmed was started by lightning between 8 and 8:30 p.m. The fire initially moved within a half mile of Highway 191 causing traffic to be blocked off about 45 minutes after the fires started. Fireworks stands along the highway were shut down.

Strong winds then pushed the fires in a northwest direction along and west of FM 158. Officials blocked off main roads into the FM 158 area, including routes off of Highway 191 and FM 1788.

Although some vehicles turned around, many curious residents parked along the shoulder of the roadways, watching the dry grass burn.

The fires cast an eerie, orange light over much of Midland and Odessa, with reports of the smell of smoke as far east as downtown Midland.

At least two false grassfire reports were called in on

Most Cityline callers agree O.J. won't receive fair trial

Staff Report

Of the approximately 96 million people who watched O.J. Simpson lead law enforcement officers on a 75 minute chase through Southern California almost three weeks ago, many of those also feel the news media has already tried and convicted the former football player-turned-accused double murderer.

The news media took the brunt of the hit in this week's Cityline Community Pulse Poll as the majority of callers who left comments on the poll's question concerning the Simpson case felt that the media has "unfairly tried and convicted" the former Heisman Trophy winner and he

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson agreed Tuesday to provide hair samples for DNA comparison against hairs in a knit cap found at the crime scene. His lawyers also demanded prosecutors split the hairs and other evidence so the defense can conduct its own tests.

"We are entitled to our own independent tests, not to simply sit and look over the shoulder of the district attorney and the Los Angeles Police Department crime lab," defense attorney Robert L. Shapiro said at a hearing as Simpson looked on.

Grand jury indicts Texas tycoon in 'biggest scam'

By Seth Rosenfeld
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Connie Charles "Chip" Armstrong, a former Dallas firefighter turned flashy Texas tycoon, has been indicted for defrauding clients of his San Francisco tax processing firm out of $55 million and using it to speculate in oil and gas wells, buy a ranch, lease sky boxes at Texas Stadium and make hefty political contributions.

A federal grand jury in San Francisco returned a 21-count indictment Monday that accuses Armstrong of systematically diverting funds from major corporations that had hired his now-bankrupt firm, Hamilton Taft and Co., to process their state and federal taxes.

The indictment follows a three-year investigation by the FBI and Internal Revenue Service into what U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Lloyd King in 1991 called "the biggest scam" he'd seen in 25 years on the bench. It portrays Armstrong as looting Hamilton Taft's client funds to finance an opulent lifestyle and participation in the speculation that swept Texas in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

"This indictment illustrates how greed and excessive materialism often go hand in hand with corruption," U.S. Attorney Michael Yamaguchi said Monday.

Two Koreas OK historic 3-day July summit in northern capital

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — For the first time, North and South Korea on Tuesday set a date for a summit in another hopeful sign for efforts to ease nuclear tensions and end five decades of bitter animosity.

Summits have been proposed before and never actually held, and there was no guarantee this time would be different. Still, hopes were high the presidents of the two Koreas would finally hold their first face-to-face talks.

The meeting is planned for July 25-27 in Pyongyang, North Korea's capital.

"If the summit goes well, relations between South and North Korea will enter a new stage," said South Korea's chief negotiator, Lee Hong-koo.

South Korea hopes to focus the summit on suspicions that North Korea is working on nuclear weapons. But it is unclear whether the communist regime, which says its nuclear research is peaceful, will

orth Korea insists the nuclear issue can be resolved only in direct talks with the United States, which are due to restart in Geneva on July 8.

The North Koreans have agreed in the past to allow U.N. inspectors to check its nuclear facilities required under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, but it has refused to allow full inspections for 15 months.

That heightened worries that the North was rushing to produce nuclear warheads and brought threats of U.N. sanctions.

Washington has said it will improve diplomatic relations and extend aid if North Korea cooperates in resolving concerns about its nuclear program.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said the North-South summit agreement was "good news."

"We always encouraged a dialogue between North and South Korea as a step toward ultimate reconciliation and reunification. This is something that we always said they had to work out among themselves, but they appear to have done that," she said.

Negotiators agreed the meeting of northern President Kim Il Sung and southern President Kim Young-sam would be followed by a second summit in South Korea. But in a discordant note, they failed to agree on a date or place.

Nevertheless, optimism soared in South Korea.

"My heart is throbbing with excitement," said Lee Yong-ho, 68, who escaped from the north to South Korea during the 1950-53 Korean War. "I really hope that the summit will help ease tensions so that divided families in the two Koreas can be reunited."

The summit and the resumption of the U.S.-North Korean talks were arranged after a private mediation effort by former President Carter, who visted the two Koreas.

Japan moves to slash rules that stymie foreign goods

TOKYO (AP) — Outgoing Prime Minister Tsutomu Hata's government on Tuesday adopted a package of measures to ease business and trade regulations and give foreign competitors a better chance at success in Japanese markets.

Final authorization for the package, which would cut regulations that hamper trade in 279 items, must come from the next government, said Hiroshi Kumagai, a government spokesman.

Another official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the new government could alter or drop the package, but is expected to accept it.

Kumagai said he could not predict when the new government would be formed. Faced with a no-confidence motion, Hata announced his resignation Saturday after just two months in office. Political party leaders were trying to put together a coalition and find a replacement for Hata.

Japan's major trading partners argue that deregulation will help boost economic activity and encourage imports.

In November, the Foreign-Affiliated Companies' Management Association, a grouping of foreign companies operating in Japan, said in a report that Japan's refusal to accept widely acknowledged production, inspection and other standards protects local manufacturers and discriminates against foreign competitors.

Kumagai said Tuesday's package amounts to a fundamental change in the way Japan does business and will help ease relations with trading partners.

The 279 items in the package include home construction materials, telecommunications and financial services. The package also calls for import promotion activities and improving the country's distribution system.

A major item in the latest package is acceptance of foreign testing data on the suitability of home building materials, food products, pharmaceuticals and medical devices.

It would expand the acceptance of foreign test data on automobiles, while simplifying and accelerating procedures for imports.

Kumagi declined to predict how much the package would reduce Japan's overall trade surplus.

"It is aimed at creating and expanding chances" for business, he said.

Japan posted a $59 billion trade surplus with the United States last year.

U.N. commander: Bosnian conflict could last 20 years

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — A U.N. commander in Bosnia declared the 2½-week-old cease-fire a failure Tuesday and predicted "at least 20 years of war" if current international peace efforts fail.

Western and Russian diplomats met in Paris to continue work on a peace plan Tuesday, but Bosnian Serbs and government forces pressed their war in central and northern Bosnia.

"There is no peace in Bosnia and no cease-fire, not even a cessation of hostilities here," said Brig. Gen. Andrew Ridgeway, U.N. commander for Bosnia's southwestern sector.

The U.N.-brokered cease-fire went into effect June 10.

Speaking to reporters, Ridgeway predicted "at least 20 years of war" if peace efforts fail. His comments were relayed in a pooled news report.

Bosnian radio said Serb forces attacked Zavidovici in north-central Bosnia, and Serb reports accused Muslim-led government forces of firing shells and rockets at Serb-held towns farther north.

The Serbs were seeking help for 2,500 refugees fleeing a government advance near Mount Ozren, 50 miles north of Sarajevo, according to Ron Redmond, spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva.

U.N. officials were looking into the request, Redmond said.

Better-armed Serbs had occupied 70 percent of Bosnia since the war began in April 1992, but government troops have made recent advances.

U.S., British, German, Russian and French diplomats met in Paris to finish a map dividing Bosnia and devise measures to get both sides to accept it.

They propose giving a Croat-Muslim alliance 51 percent of Bosnia and the Serbs 49 percent. The Croat-Muslim side wants more, while the Serbs don't want to cede that much land.

The plan will be considered at the July 8-10 summit of industrialized nations in Naples, Italy.

Bosnia's Serbs launched the war after Muslims and Croats voted to secede from Yugoslavia. An estimated 200,000 people have been killed or are missing.

More Haitian refugees swamp Coast Guard

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — An overworked and weary U.S. Coast Guard intercepted at least 16 more refugee boats off Haiti on Tuesday, transferring hundreds of boat people to already swamped refugee facilities.

At least 300 more refugees were picked up after a record 1,486 boat people were intercepted off Haiti on Monday, the Coast Guard estimated.

From Friday to Monday, 2,472 Haitians were plucked from boats, eclipsing the number for all of 1993. Monday's figure was the highest one-day total since the overthrow of elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in September 1991.

The surge follows President Clinton's liberalized refugee policy, under which chances of winning asylum have jumped from 5 percent to 30 percent.

Haitian politicians say the development will move a reluctant White House even closer to armed intervention to oust Haiti's military leaders, restore constitutional government and stop the refugee flow.

U.S. officials were reluctant to say the wave has crested.

"There are still some boats out there we haven't gotten to," a Coast Guard spokesman, Petty Officer Rob Wyman, told The Associated Press.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager, who watched the repatriation of 170 Haitians at dockside Tuesday in Port-au-Prince, said the Coast Guard ships are overworked and under "tremendous strain."

In the Coast Guard's biggest deployment since Vietnam, 15 cutters and patrol boats alternate between picking up refugees and ferrying them to U.S. refugee processing ships off Kingston, Jamaica — a 30- to 40-hour round trip.

Ten more warships patrol Haiti's coast to enforce a U.N. trade embargo; two U.S. Navy ships took in 221 of the refugees picked up Monday, Schrager said.

The United States may be forced to reopen a refugee camp on the U.S. Navy base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

WEATHER WATCH

HEAT: Triple digits to return today

(From 1A)

Crockett Street and Loop 250 in Midland.

The National Weather Service at the Midland International Airport said the thunderstorm, which moved in from New Mexico, remained about 7,000 miles higher in the atmosphere than normal and the precipitation which occupied the storm never hit the ground because of the daytime heat. Only the high wind and lightning made it to the ground.

The fires outran firefighters through grass that had been dried by several day's of dry, triple-digit weather.

Tuesday's high hit 114, beating the high for that date set in 1980 by nine degrees, according to the National Weather Service.

And, unfortunately, the dry weather is not going to end anytime soon.

"We will have 100 degree weather for another week," a NWS forecaster said. "The high pressure that it causing the hot weather is very strong. It will probably be another a month before temperatures get back down to normal."

The normal high for this time of year is 95, according to the NWS.

Until the Pacific high pressure system decides to move, temperatures might dip into the upper 90s, but will probably continue to stay at or above 100 for the next several weeks, the forecaster said.

The hot weather has kept many residents inside, but those driving around town have undoubtedly noticed the small puddles of melted asphalt, which has melted on some roads due to the high temperatures.

Harvey Hansen, director of engineering, said the city is covering the asphalt with chaliche dust to blot it up.

"We are having to cover it around town, especially at higher traffic intersections," he said.

Today's high is expected to slide back to 109, with sunny skies and southeast to south winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low near 70.

Thursday will continue to be sunny with a high around 106.

Tuesday's overnight low was 75, compared to the record low for that date of 57 set in 1985.

STATE

EL PASO — Sweat puddled in Southern Californians' shoes. Roofers gasped for breath in Texas. Everywhere in between, a dome of hot air kept the entire Southwest a desert inferno.

"It feels like sometimes you can't get enough air because of the heat," said roofer John Lytle in El Paso, which on Tuesday experienced its sixth consecutive day of 100-degree-plus heat.

Lubbock and Midland each hit 114 degrees on Tuesday, topping 20 Texas cities at or above the century mark. It was 113 at El Paso and Wink, 112 at Lajitas and 110 at Laredo and San Angelo.

El Paso's high matched the city's all-time record, set only one day earlier.

Wink, about 50 miles west of Odessa, was the hottest spot in Texas on Sunday and Monday, according to the National Weather Service. The mercury rose to 115 on Sunday and 117 on Monday at the town of about 1,000 people.

Miss Texas USA crowns winner

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — Miss Galveston County Chelsi Smith was crowned Miss Texas USA on Tuesday and also went home with the title of Miss Congeniality.

Ms. Smith, a 20-year-old student at the University of Houston, received a prize package worth $120,000. and a spot in the Miss USA pageant to be held on South Padre Island in February.

"I'm half-black and I'm half-white," Ms. Smith said. "I just hope to be a positive role model for children of all races. Being different makes me feel special."

Ms. Smith was born in California and last year represented Southeast Texas at the pageant. She now lives in Friendswood, near Galveston.

Lisa Patino, Miss Harris County, was first runner-up. She's a 21-year-old student and fashion model.

ELIMINATE: Exxon to cut jobs

(From 1A)

At company headquarters in Houston, steps are being taken in certain staff functions to reduce management layers and consolidate personnel in order to serve the operating organizations more effectively and at less cost. Employees in Controller's, Human Resources and Public Affairs will be impacted.

Rogers said Exxon will work to transfer employees to the parts of the organization not affected by these changes, but despite these efforts, a surplus is expected to exist in professional, technical and support staff. No surplus exists in the field supervisor or wage employee category.

Exxon has 15,500 employees nationwide and Rogers noted that number will be reduced by about 2.8 percent or 430 employees.

While there will not be a company-wide severance package, a special program of severance allowances will be offered to assist surplus employees in affected departments, starting with a voluntary phase. To achieve the necessary reduction in staffing, involuntary separations in some groups will likely be required after the voluntary phase. Out-placement services will be provided to assist departing employees in their transition to other careers.

Announcement of the Exxon restructuring comes on the heels of major staff reductions earlier this year by Marathon and Arco.

SCAM: Jury indicts tycoon for defrauding clients

chief executive officer, could not be reached for comment Monday. John Milano of San Francisco, his criminal defense lawyer, said he had not seen the indictment and declined to comment on it. But he added that Armstrong's position was that he had broken no laws and had invested the funds legitimately in hopes of earning good returns for Hamilton Taft.

Also indicted on charges of wire fraud, interstate transportation of securities traceable to a fraud and interstate transportation to perpetuate a fraud was Richard Fowles, Hamilton Taft's former president. Fowles, 48, of Orem, Utah, could not be reached for comment.

Both men are to be arraigned July 20, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Eb Luckel.

Hamilton Taft processed about $3.5 billion a year in taxes for more than 100 firms, including many Fortune 500 companies.

Taft computed bimonthly payroll and Social Security taxes for each state where its clients had employees. The firms sent Taft the amount, and Taft was supposed to file the necessary paperwork and pay the appropriate agencies.

Instead, the indictment says, almost immediately after Armstrong took over Taft in 1989 he began to make a series of multimillion-dollar wire transfers from Taft's bank accounts to those of his other Dallas companies.

Relaxed by riding bulls

He then used the client's tax money to speculate in real estate and oil wells, pay operating costs of his other businesses and buy the $6.8 million, 1,700-acre "Double C" ranch near Tyler, according to court records — where he boasted of relaxing by riding bulls.

He also spent more than $500,000 on lifetime leases on three sky boxes at Texas Stadium, home of the Dallas Cowboys, and made more than $200,000 in campaign contributions to Republican candidates for Texas state offices, according to Patricia Mar, the lawyer for Taft's court-appointed bankruptcy trustee.

All the while, the indictment says, Armstrong covered up the diversions by filing false tax statements with clients, using one client's funds to pay another's tax bills and continually enlisting new clients whose total annual taxes exceeded $1 billion in order keep the fraud going.

By the time former Taft treasurer Steve Solodoff blew the whistle and Taft's irate clients pushed the firm into involuntary bankruptcy in 1991, Taft was overdue on $91 million in client taxes and had racked up $15 million in late fees with the IRS, the indictment says.

Federal Express was the client that lost the most, $30 million. Among the others were Scott Paper Co., $10 million; Stanford University Medical Center, $3.5 million; Nieman-Marcus Group Inc., $2.7 million; and Tandem Computers, Inc., $2 million.

Since he was appointed bankruptcy trustee for Taft, Frederick Wyle has moved to recover creditors' losses by suing Taft's insurer and Armstrong and by selling off Armstrong's ranch, Rolls-Royce and Jaguars, Mar said.

EVIDENCE: O.J. agrees to provide hair sample

case was "an open book" and that all test results would be handed over to the defense, Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark said there may not be enough blood and hair to share.

But after consulting with her experts during a recess, the prosecutor told Municipal Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell that she will know on Thursday — the start of a preliminary hearing in the case — whether certain pieces of evidence can be split.

The prosecutor said the DNA results will not be presented at the preliminary hearing.

An unshaven, stony-faced Simpson listened intently during the hearing. The 46-year-old former football star is jailed without bail on charges of murdering his ex-wife and a friend of hers.

In a surprise move, Shapiro didn't object to a prosecution request for a sample of Simpson's hair for comparison with black curly hairs found inside the cap at the bloody scene where Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were slashed June 12.

"Unlike his attorney, Mr. Simpson has plenty of hair for sample," Shapiro said, joking about his bald spot.

In her request for a hair sample, Clark said the hairs inside the cap "have been determined to be of African-American origin."

Both sides said they were ready to begin Thursday's crucial court battle. During the preliminary hearing, a judge will determine if there is enough evidence to put the athlete-turned-actor on trial.

Shapiro acknowledged outside court that most California defendants are ordered to trial after preliminary hearings because it takes only "a scintilla of evidence."

"We are going to present the most vigorous defense available for Mr. Simpson in the most ethical manner possible," Shapiro said.

Clark said it would probably take a week for the prosecution to present its case at the hearing, including about 60 pieces of physical evidence. Shapiro had no estimate of the time the defense would need.

Simpson's lawyers filed a motion Monday demanding quick access to evidence, including blood samples, Simpson's Ford Bronco, the cap, and gloves found at the murder scene and at Simpson's estate.

The official list of evidence in the case so far doesn't include bloody clothing found anywhere but at the crime scene, a source close to the case told The Associated Press. There had been unconfirmed reports of bloody clothing found in Simpson's home.

TRIAL: Callers feel media convicted Simpson will therefore be unable to receive a fair trial.

There were other callers, though, who felt that the media has "elevated Simpson to the status of a god" and for that reason he will be unable to receive a fair trial if, in fact, his case ever goes to trial.

Of the 205 callers who responded to the question "Will O.J. Simpson be able to receive a fair trial?" 139, or 67.8 percent, felt that he will not be allowed a totally impartial jury.

Of those who left comments, many felt sympathy for him; many did not.

"I don't feel any sympathy for him," one anonymous caller said. "He's been given preferential treatment because he's a football player and has a lot of money. He's a thug and always has been."

"My sympathy is for his children," another caller said. "They've been shown little or no consideration throughout this entire ordeal."

Another caller said "just because he's America's darling doesn't mean he should be exonerated."

To the extent that the coverage of the murders has been blown out of proportion led some people to feelings of sympathy.

"I am not an avid sports fan," one caller said, "but I have never seen a conviction of murder by the news media quite like this before. They've acted like a school of piranhas. O.J.'s guilt or innocence should be decided by a jury, but with all the quote leaks that will be difficult."

"I do have sympathy for him," another caller said. "No. 1, if he didn't do it, it has to be a terrible thing to lose your wife and then be charged with her murder. If he did do it, he needs help. A man of his stature and intelligence obviously had to have some type of mental misfunction to do such a thing."

Velma Sanders said she felt sympathy because the media has "given him the runaround" and has "railroaded him."

Another said, "I have sympathy for anybody who the media slaughters. He's not been convicted yet, but he has been in the paper."

Then there was the other school of thought, from another anonymous caller: "The media has elevated him to god status. It's time we get him off that pedestal."

"Who in the world could possibly care if he is guilty or not?" one caller asked. "Why don't you put this on your Cityline: Did Nicole Simpson and Ronald Goldman get a fair chance.?"

Others feel Simpson is being framed.

"The cab driver admitted himself that O.J. was 15 minutes late and when he got there he was hot and sweaty which means he did not have a bath or shower, and yet he was not covered with blood," said Glen Lawson. "Believe me, whoever did this was covered with blood."

"Our old time heroes were gods or sons of gods," James Beatty said. "I think we treat people like that now. I do share some sympathy for him because of the problems he got himself into."

Five children die in garage apartment fire

NEW YORK (NYT) — Five children ranging in age from 6 months to 12 years died Tuesday when a smoky predawn fire consumed two apartments over the garage of a funeral home in Riverhead, L.I.

Three adults, including two mothers, survived by hurling themselves through windows to the ground, where a neighbor said he could hear the women screaming: "Our babies. Our babies are inside. You have to save them."

But neither neighbors nor the efforts of 70 volunteer firefighters could overcome the smoke and flames that killed the children in their bedrooms.

Dan Willis, who lives next door at 713 Harrison Avenue, said he was watching television and was about to go to bed when he heard the commotion outside. "To hear women screaming like that for their kids was terrible," he said. He dialed 911 and tried to save the children, he said, but was forced back from the building by the dense smoke and heat.

Willis said the victims of the fire had lived in the building for three months at most, adding, "They were pretty good kids."

The fire broke out shortly after 4:00 a.m. at 711 Harrison Avenue, across from Riverhead High School, in a building behind the Seay Memorial Chapel, a funeral home. The Suffolk County police said they were investigating the possibility of arson, and neighbors speculated that the fire might have been set by the ex-boyfriend of a former resident of the apartments.

But as a trained dog sniffed for accelerants that might have fueled the blaze, Detective Sgt. Edward Fandrey of the Suffolk County police brushed conjecture aside, saying only, "Right now, we're dealing with the tragic death of five very young people."

Although neighbors wondered if the building, with only a single entrance and exit, met safety standards, Dennis Nowak, assistant to the county's social services commissioner, said that it had been inspected within the last three months and that "we didn't observe any health or safety violations."

Nowak, who said state law barred him from saying whether the building's residents were receiving public assistance, added that the inspection found that the apartments had smoke detectors and a fire exit.

Authorities identified three of the dead as children of Roger Gregory and Tina Fay, both 25: Raheem, 6 months; T'Keyah, 23 months, and Roger, 3. Also killed were Anthony Price, 3, who was the son of Tammy Price, 22; and Letitia Booker, 12, who was found with the children in the apartment of Gregory and Ms. Fay and identified by the police as a baby sitter.

Of the adults, Ms. Fay was the most seriously injured. She was in critical but stable condition at the burn center of Stony Brook Medical Center, where a spokeswoman said she had suffered second-degree burns of her shoulders, arms and face that covered 15 to 20 percent of her body.

Ms. Price and Gregory were in stable condition at Central Suffolk Hospital in Riverhead. Ms. Price sustained first- and second-degree burns of her face and forearm, and Gregory had second-degree burns on his back and hand.

Some neighbors speculated that the fire had been started by the abusive former boyfriend of a woman who lived in one of the garage apartments until a few months ago and who visited Tina Fay frequently.

April Blanton, 12, a friend of Letitia Booker, said of the man: "He's crazy. Somebody messing with him, he'll start a fire." Several other youngsters echoed her.

The police said all fires resulting in death are investigated for homicide.

Andrey said Ms. Price woke up smelling smoke around 4:00 a.m. in her apartment in the building, which is constructed of cinder block topped with wood framing and asbestos siding. Leaving her son behind, she ran next door to alert Gregory, but she was unable to return to her apartment to get the boy.

Peace talks move; Arafat may arrive in Jericho in July

EREZ CHECKPOINT, Gaza Strip (AP) — Israel and the PLO resumed autonomy talks Tuesday, and the top PLO negotiator said Yasser Arafat would make his long-awaited move to Jericho in mid-July if Israel guaranteed him freedom of movement.

Israeli negotiators said Tuesday they were ready to talk about a quick expansion of self-rule to the rest of the West Bank.

"I think our whole government is united in the view that we have to speed up the processes, that we have to move them up as much as possible, though we shouldn't do anything hasty," said Yossi Sarid, Israel's chief negotiator.

Sarid, the environment minister, denied reports that Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin wants to wait and see how autonomy works in the Gaza Strip and Jericho before transferring civilian authority in the rest of the West Bank.

Sarid spoke after a meeting with PLO chief negotiator Nabil Shaath at an Israel-PLO liaison center just inside Gaza where Israeli troops and armed Palestinian policemen mingled.

Shaath said he would recommend Arafat come to Jericho once he is able to freely cross the border and move between Jericho and Gaza without being stopped by Israeli soldiers.

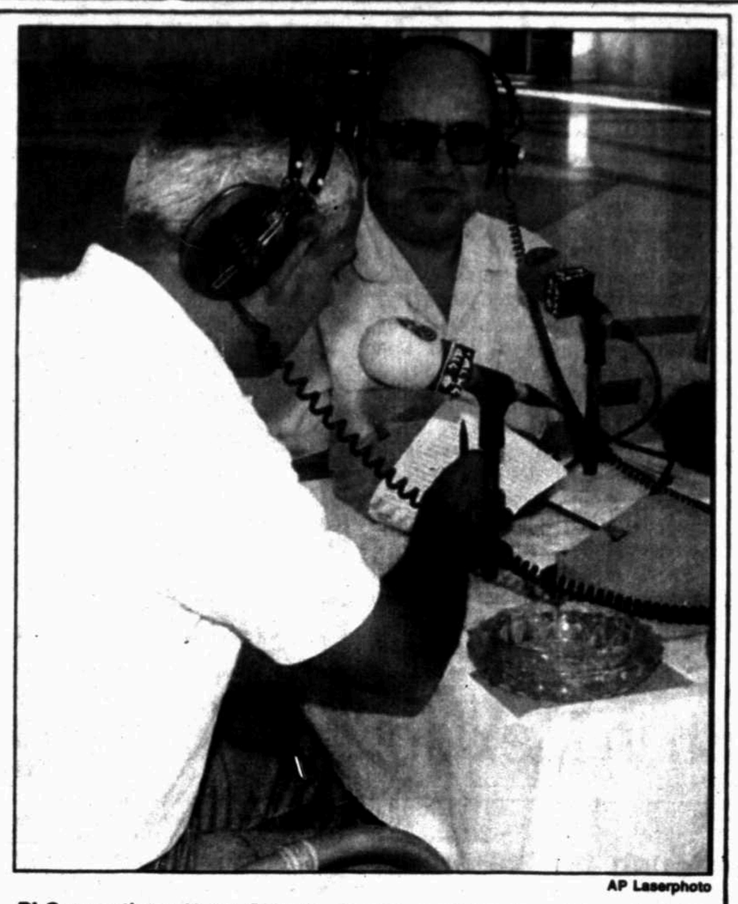

This would be possible, he said, when Israel had completed construction of border terminals at crossings into Gaza and Jericho and once Palestinians could travel along "safe passage" roads between the two autonomy zones.

Under the autonomy accord, four safe passage routes through Israel should link Gaza and Jericho, but Israel hasn't completed security arrangements for the roads yet.

Shaath said the Israelis told him construction of the new terminals would be completed by July 15. Israeli officials confirmed the Allenby Bridge terminal was expected to be ready by mid-July.

"As soon as we see these things implemented, I would be very happy to recommend heartily for him to come," Shaath said.

Shaath said that after he toured Jericho earlier this month he had recommended to Arafat that the PLO leader stay away a while longer.

French forces rescue 35 nuns, orphans in Rwanda

GOMA, Zaire (AP) — They were told to pack a single bag and assemble by dawn for helicopter rescue from 10 weeks of terror.

For 35 nuns from Belgium, Rwanda, Burundi, Ireland and the United States and eight orphans evacuated Tuesday from Rwanda — the French forces are heroes.

Since Hutus and Tutsis became locked in a blood bath in April, the ethnically integrated sisters of the Belgian-based Sisters of the Virgin Mary, and eight adolescent girls from their boarding school, lived in fear each night would be their last.

Machete-wielding militias descended on their cloistered compound in the western town of Kibuye at night looking for money or refugees to kill.

Soldiers of the Hutu-dominated government and extremist militias have massacred as many as 200,000 people, mostly ethnic Tutsis. Thousands in Kibuye who had sought shelter in the church and stadium were massacred, the nuns said. And there were the radio reports of other clergy, including seven Roman Catholic bishops, being murdered by one faction or the other.

"That's what weighed most on the sisters," said Sister Judith Parroll, of Buffalo, N.Y. "You'd hear things on the radio. Every night you'd go to bed, and you didn't know whether you'd see the next morning. Every morning was beautiful."

The French army, building up a humanitarian military force on Zaire's eastern border to aid Rwanda, made Tuesday morning the best the sisters have seen in what seems like an eternity.

Last Friday, as the first French soldiers began to arrive in Zaire, a special forces reconnaissance team arrived in Kibuye, midway between Goma and a southern French base at Bukavu. A detachment of 100 men arrived Sunday to place the nuns under 24-hour protection.

The order's Mother Superior Mary Julianne urged Brig. Gen. Jean-Claude Lafourcade to evacuate the nuns and end their plight. The Rwandan nuns, about evenly split between Hutus and Tutsis, had been joined in recent weeks by sisters from the United States and Belgium who had crossed through dozens of roadblocks manned by armed thugs to show solidarity with their colleagues.

French troops have located some 800,000 refugees during six days of reconnaissance patrols that have spanned 19 miles into government-controlled Rwanda, Lt. Col. Jean-Claude Perruchot said Tuesday.

The first French government aid flight arrived in Goma on Tuesday with 35 tons of food that will be distributed by aid agencies.

Among the nuns rescued Tuesday, there were six Belgians, two Americans, an Irishwoman and a Burundian. The rest were Rwandans.

"Many of them wanted to stay," Sister Judith said. "They wanted to minister."

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — In its 23 years of independence, Bangladesh has seen two leaders assassinated, 19 coup attempts and two military takeovers.

Yet no one in this male-dominated nation ever expected a crisis involving two boisterous women leaders, an outspoken feminist writer and conservative Islamic fundamentalist.

For three months, every opposition legislator has boycotted parliament, saying Prime Minister Khaleda Zia's government must step down because it is incompetent and corrupt. The lawmakers are demanding new elections overseen by a caretaker government.

The dispute centers on Mrs. Zia and opposition leader Sheik Hasina, rivals who don't even greet each other in public.

Both women entered politics after men in their families were assassinated while leading the country. And Ms. Hasina believes her father, President Sheik Mujibur Rahman, died in a 1975 coup helped by Mrs. Zia's late husband, President Zia-ur-Rahman.

The power struggle became more complicated when a third woman — feminist Taslima Nasrin — outraged Muslim fundamentalists by criticizing them and some Islamic laws.

The extremists offered rewards for Ms. Nasrin's assassination and the government ordered her arrest, forcing her into hiding.

In a bid to appease the fundamentalists, Mrs. Zia and Ms. Hasina have refused to defend Ms. Nasrin in a country where 90 percent of the people are Muslim and Islam is the official religion.

Daily demonstrations against Ms. Nasrin could lead to riots on Thursday between Muslim extremists and pro-Nasrin activists who both have called nationwide general strikes.

"Bangladesh can have secularism or fundamentalism, but the politicians are playing with both. You have to take one side or the other. You can't just sit on the fence," said Borhanuddin Khan Jahangir, chairman of political science at Dhaka University.

Azizul Huq, a 75-year-old fundamentalist leader, likes the crisis. He says it has finally shown all Bangladeshis what women are worth.

"It's not desirable to have a woman prime minister. As a creature, they are inferior. This has been acknowledged by the medical science," he told The Associated Press.

FBI director: America rivals Germany in hate-crime murders

■ Freeh also worries about global organized crime, nuclear bomb ending up in the hands of terrorists.

Associated Press

BERLIN — FBI Director Louis Freeh, arriving in a country long thought to have an acute problem with hate groups, said Tuesday that hate-crime murders are at least as common in the United States as in Germany.

There were 20 such murders just last year in the United States, Freeh said, citing the first report in FBI history specifically addressing this phenomenon.

"It's very, very alarming," the FBI director said.

The report cited more than 7,600 U.S. incidents of hate-motivated intimidation, vandalism and assaults in 1993. Freeh said the total falls far short of the full picture because only "a really small number of the nation's police forces," responsible for 56 percent of the U.S. population, reported hate crimes.

A 1992 law requires the FBI to compile the report, but merely encourages local police agencies to volunteer hate-crime data to the bureau.

Freeh released the report on the first day of a 10-day trip to Russia and eight other European countries. He and his hosts will discuss growing international crime problems such as hate groups, the spread of Russian organized crime and illicit traffic in nuclear materials.

Freeh said he worries that the result could be a nuclear bomb ending up in the hands of terrorists.

With 30 hate-crime murders since reunification in October 1990, Germany has averaged about 7.7 murders a year. That's just over one-third of the U.S. total last year, in a German population that is just under one-third the size of the United States.

But given that "thousands of hate crimes are not reported" in the U.S. study, Freeh said, "We have a much higher rate" of murders.

Freeh discussed the new U.S. crime data in a speech and news conference after meeting German officials. They pressed him again for help with hatemongers who send certain publications from the United States, where they are legal, to Germany, where they are banned.

In an interview en route to Berlin, Freeh said the FBI might be able to legally give German police the addresses to which hate material is shipped from the United States. This would facilitate seizures by German police.

Germany has garnered world attention for hate violence by neo-Nazis, skinheads and other groups, mostly directed at foreign workers during high unemployment brought on by combining the prosperous West with the underdeveloped East.

Germany's problem has been highlighted by fatal bombings of group houses, such as the May 1993 blast that killed five Turkish women in Solingen.

Soccer hysteria brings death in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — One person was killed and 31 others injured in a rowdy celebration that erupted in the Mexican capital Tuesday after the national soccer team advanced to the second round of the World Cup.

More than 100 youths, many of them apparently drunk, smashed car and shop windows and looted a liquor store at the fringes of the 2-mile-long party.

After Mexico tied Italy 1-1 to advance to the next cup round, hundreds of thousands of cheering people poured into the streets, blowing horns and waving Mexican flags. Motorcyclists and pedestrians raced around the Monument of Independence, a 12-story stone column topped by a golden angel.

Briefcase-toting businessmen joined with high school students in black leather jackets and mothers pushing baby strollers.

"Viva Mexico! Mexico, Mexico rah rah rah!" the crowd roared.

Marauding youths on the fringes of the largely peaceful celebration beat at least two young men, one of whom died at a clinic, said Red Cross spokesman Alejandro Calderson. The other was in serious condition.

Briefcase-toting businessmen join leather-clad high school students, moms with babies who shout 'Viva Mexico! Mexico, Mexico rah rah!'

At least 31 people were injured, said another Red Cross spokesman, Hector Avesillas. He said 16 people were hospitalized.

Riot police kept a low profile after clashes with fans injured 118 people Friday, when Mexico defeated Ireland 2-1.

The celebrations come during a tense year for Mexico. The economy has slumped, an Indian rebellion broke out in the south, the ruling party's presidential candidate was assassinated and a wave of kidnappings has frightened businessmen.

Reports: Charles admits cheating, Di settles

MOTHERWELL, Scotland (AP) — Tabloid headlines trumpeted stories that Prince Charles admitted cheating on Princess Diana, but the breathless reports didn't seem to trouble people who turned out to meet him Tuesday.

"I think he should be king. There is trouble in every walk of life, and it should be private, not made public," said David Hooper, 78, one of 400 people who saw Charles at a Scottish housing project.

British news media said the 45-year-old heir to the throne admits to his infidelity in a television documentary to be broadcast today on Independent Television. NBC's "Dateline" plans to show excerpts Thursday night in the United States.

Independent Television News said the documentary interviewer asks Charles if he was faithful to his wife. ITN said Charles answers, "Yes," pauses, then adds: "Until it became clear that my marriage had irretrievably broken down."

The prince reportedly doesn't say with whom he was unfaithful. But the tabloids zeroed in on former girlfriend Camilla Parker Bowles.

In London, Princess Diana settled her lawsuit against a city gym where she was secretly photographed as she worked out, her lawyers said Tuesday.

The LA Fitness gym has apologized for the pictures and remains under a permanent injunction stopping it from distributing any photographs of the princess taken at the club, according to the law firm of Mischon de Reya.

But the lawyers said the princess will be pressing ahead with suits against the company's part-owner Bryce Taylor.

The pictures were obtained with a camera hidden in the ceiling above a piece of equipment the princess was known to use.

Buddy can you spare $1,000? Clinton seeks help to pay bills

Fund to pay for legal fees associated with sexual harassment lawsuit, Whitwater probe limits contributions to $1,000.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton on Tuesday became the first chief executive in American history to ask Americans to contribute to his legal defense fund.

He is seeking help with bills that may top $2 million a year to deal with a sexual harassment suit and a federal investigation into his and his wife's land dealings.

The fund limits contributions to $1,000 per person and bars donations from corporations, unions and political action committees.

"The president will be faced with potentially large legal bills and it's in the best interest of the country and the president to have those bills paid," White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers told reporters.

At a briefing at the Washington offices of the Sullivan and Cromwell law firm, trustees for the new Presidential Legal Defense Trust said creating it was essential because the legal bills facing the Clintons could be enormous.

Estimates range from $1 million to $2 million a year or more.

The Clintons' 1993 income was about $293,000. The couple's net worth is estimated at no more than $1.6 million, according to financial disclosure forms.

The trustees who will organize the fund-raising effort include Republicans as well as Democrats. They will be headed by The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president emeritus of the University of Notre Dame, and Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, a former U.S. attorney general.

"No previous president has had to face the enormous personal legal expenses confronting President Clinton, because of current legal proceedings based on events that allegedly occurred well before he took office," the two said in a joint statement.

"These expenses will be many times his total compensation as president," the statement said. "...We believe it is in the public interest to assist the president in meeting a financial burden that could otherwise distract him from performing his public responsibilities."

The trust was established with a $2,000 contribution by the Clintons. All donations will be considered gifts, not income, and the Clintons will incur no tax obligation because of them. The contributions are not deductible for income tax purposes.

When all legal issues have been concluded and the trust is terminated, any unused money will paid to the Clintons, who have agreed to donate it to charity or turn it over to the federal government, according to the lawyers and trustees who briefed reporters.

"The ground rules will be administered by the trustees and we hope they will give the public the assurance that the trust will be operated in an appropriate and ethical manner," said White House counsel Lloyd Cutler.

Some initial reaction was critical.

"The $1,000 limit is too high because it has the real potential for groups of people to get together and bundle much larger amounts of money," said Josh Goldstein, project director for the Center for Responsive Politics.

Haitian refugee crisis sends administration in search of aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a sudden upsurge in Haitian refugees at sea, the Clinton administration is looking for help from other countries and considering reopening a once jampacked refugee center in Cuba.

Ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide said Tuesday he could not tell Haitians either to flee or stay home.

"I cannot ask them to stay, because they may kill them there. I cannot ask them to leave, because they may die somewhere else," Aristide said in a National Press Club speech.

The U.S. government is expected to begin beaming broadcasts by Aristide into military-ruled Haiti as early as next week.

William Gray III, President Clinton's special adviser on Haiti, told Congress that the administration is pushing a multinational approach to the refugee problem. He said announcements are expected soon from a half-dozen other countries, for land-based processing and possible asylum, and a dozen other countries are "looking at the possiblity of taking Haitian refugees for resettlement."

Gray declined to list the countries.

A land-based processing facility is to be opened on Grand Turk in the Turks and Caicos early next month, he said.

Gray also said the United States will propose a peacekeeping force for Haiti once democracy is restored that will be bigger than previously planned. He said no figure had been set but it would have to include enough forces to train Haiti's military and police, maintain civil order, protect international workers and protect democratic leaders.

Caution is required due to extreme heat

While there was doubtless much more happening in Midland on Monday than the weather, there were few Midlanders talking about anything else. The adage that everyone talks about the weather, but no one does anything about it found ample truth in Midland.

In fact, when Sunday's record-setting high temperature of 112 was shattered by Monday's 116-degree mark there was little else of concern to the city's residents other than the stifling heat and finding a cool place to wait out the hot spell.

Callers to Midland National Bank's recorded time and temperature announcements were informed that the mercury had reached the unofficial 121-degree mark by late in the afternoon. The heat was oppressive, even in Midland's low humidity.

With the unusually hot temperatures remaining and forecasters for the National Weather Service acknowledging that they could linger several more days, it becomes particularly important for Midlanders to take steps to protect themselves, their pets and outside animals and plants from the heat.

Extended heat can compound the problems caused by normally hot days.

In the extremely hot temperatures Midland has been experiencing, people who are working out of doors or spending any extended time outside can dehydrate quickly. To avoid dehydration, individuals should drink water frequently and provide ample water for pets or livestock. Dehydration can be extremely dangerous and can lead to heat stroke. So, even if Midlanders do not feel thirsty, they should still consume extra amounts of water to avoid dehydration.

Outside plants — trees, shrubs, gardens and lawns — should be watered more than usual and the watering should be done if at all possible in the early morning or late evening hours to avoid as much water loss through evaporation as possible.

People feeling ill as a result of the heat should seek medical help as quickly as possible.

Don't take chances with the dangerous heat that Midland and West Texas have been experiencing in recent days. Temperatures as high as those that have been recorded here can be deadly.

France, Russia want Iraqi oil to flow

WASHINGTON — A major behind-the-scenes showdown that will pit the United States against Russia and France is developing at the United Nations over a secret proposal to lift the oil embargo against Iraq.

Anderson

Knowledgeable sources tell us that the U.N.'s Special Commission for the Disarmament of Iraq (UNSCOM) has made significant progress destroying nuclear, chemical and biological weapons-related facilities and material. As a result, these sources say, several countries are preparing to make the case behind closed doors that enough has been done and that the oil embargo on Iraq should be lifted.

Russia and France, who have been privately lobbying other Europeans and the United States to ease the sanctions for more than a year, will argue that the Iraqis have complied. But the United States, and the tough-minded UNSCOM chief, Ambassador Rolf Ekeus, will argue that more needs to be done before the oil embargo is lifted.

For one thing, the newly implemented verification measures, including 24-hour video cameras at some sites, must be in place long enough to inspire confidence that they will curtail Iraqi "weapons of mass destruction" activities.

The Russians and the French hope to sell arms and other goods to the Iraqis in return for their oil, which Iraq hasn't been able to sell for more than three years now. In fact, France and Italy have already been secretly negotiating with the Iraqis on oil exploration and contracts under the assumption that they will get the embargo lifted.

Russia and France will insist on a legalistic interpretation of portions of U.N. Resolution 687 passed at the end of the Gulf War.

It requires Iraq to "accept the destruction, removal or rendering harmless" of all nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, "research, development, support or manufacturing facilities," "all chemical and biological weapons" and "stocks of agents," and all "ballistic missiles with a range greater than 150 kilometers."

One major loophole in Resolution 687 that peeves even the Clinton White House is that it did nothing to clamp down on the amount of conventional weaponry the Iraqis can have.

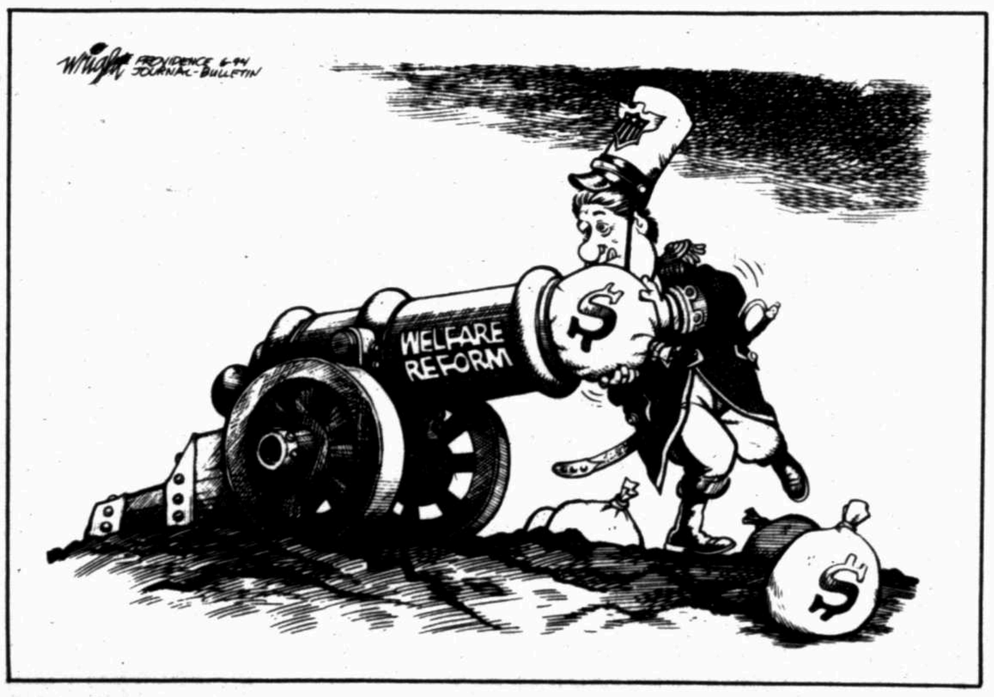

Under terms of the resolution, U.N. teams have inspected some of the conventional weapons plants, but only within the very limited framework of the contractual relationship. In other words, Iraq is allowed by the terms of the ceasefire to continue manufacturing conventional weapons and ammunition at whatever rate it desires.

Iraq tried to take advantage of equipment used for the production of the Badr 2000 (also known as the Condor II), a 1,000-kilometer-range ballistic missile believed to be far more accurate than Iraq's upgraded Scuds. Starting in 1985, the U.S. government led a major Western campaign to prevent the sale of critical manufacturing equipment to the Candor II program, parts of which were being conducted jointly with Argentina and Egypt.

UNSCOM ballistic missile teams soon discovered not one but four separate facilities in different parts of Iraq that were heavily engaged in the production of the solid-fuel Badr 2000 only days before the allied bombing of Iraq began. One of the facilities, south of Fallujah, was also manufacturing liquid-fueled Al Hussein and Al Abbas missiles, Iraq's improved range Scuds.

All four missile plants appear to have been built by German and Italian firms, although the bulk of the solid fuel technology is said to have originated in the United States and to have reached Iraq via France and Italy.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Clinton embraces loose cannon as savior

WASHINGTON — "It was kind of like a miracle," breathed Jimmy Carter, about his conversion of North Korea's dictator from lion to lamb.

Safire

No wonder Kim Il Sung denied entry to special envoys chosen by President Clinton last month. Sens. Sam Nunn and Richard Lugar would have presented a strong American position on his nuclear bomb production.

North Korea much preferred the eager — courtship of Jimmy Carter, who as president wanted to remove U.S. troops from the South. Carter went not as a representative of the United States, but as one who opposed the imposition of pressure on the North that would have made it costly for Kim to break the nuclear treaty.

Amazingly, as Carter proudly brought a CNN crew into his meeting with the North Korean strongman, the world could see and hear the American blatantly misrepresent the U.S. position: Clinton would not continue to press for sanctions, Carter declared, in direct contravention of instructions.

Even more amazing was the reaction of what is laughingly called the Clinton national security team to this usurpation of presidential authority. At the urging of Vice President Gore, Clinton grasped for some reason to believe that Carter's appeasement had worked, and that North Korea was using the Carter brokerage as a face-saving device to make a concession on its plutonium production.

Enter what Kennedyites liked to call "the Trollope ploy."

In the 19th-century romantic novels of Anthony Trollope, heroines deliberately misinterpret a squeeze of the hand as a proposal of marriage. Last week, Clinton chose to view Kim's promise of a temporary suspension of his plutonium-making — a pause required anyway to let rods cool — as the long-sought verifiable "freeze."

In response to this televised manipulation, Clinton then embraced his loose cannon as his savior. We caved in to Kim's demands to resume high-level talks that had been denied North Korea after its repeated double-crossing of negotiators. Crisis declared over.

Here, on the vital interest of the United States in stopping rogue states from becoming nuclear powers, we have an amalgam of the worst of two presidents.

Jimmy Carter, truster of Leonid Brezhnev until Afghanistan, truster and promoter of the BCCI banker until thousands of depositors were bilked of their savings, makes his pilgrimage to the last Stalinist — and again bets on the contagion of his own indisputable goodness.

Bill Clinton, passive in Bosnia, paper tiger in China, other-directed about Haiti — is again hoping for a break to distract the world's attention and to kick the can ahead for decision by his nuclear-threatened successor.

Result: the creation of President Jimmy Clinton, with the return of the malaise of leaderlessness.

Reaction of doves to this latest visit to Trollope is: What's wrong with talking? If Kim wants meetings, give him summits. Since we can't get China and Japan to help lean on him, why not test his promise to "suspend" his nuclear buildup, in return for recognition, trade and aid?

The reason for not getting suckered into another year's cat-and-mouse is the ticking of a clock. For safety's sake, we should negotiate from strength; betting on our hopes is irresponsible.

North Korea is in the business of secretly building nuclear bombs. It deceived the world by producing plutonium in the past; the CIA and the U.N. inspectors believe North Korea has at least one device ready. From Moscow we learn that the KGB was convinced of Kim's impending capability four years ago.

Remember how wrong the world nuclear police turned out to be in underestimating the advanced state of Saddam Hussein's buildup? The odds are that the experts are just as wrong about North Korean nukes today; a closed society can keep big secrets.

By pretending to be insulted by the world's nosiness, Kim has already prevented the world from checking on his past production of plutonium. Maybe it's in untested weapons; maybe some has been sold to Iran; maybe more is being made secretly beyond Yongbyon.

We are today giving him the time to make a fresh five-bomb supply. If we do not accede to his demands this fall, Kim will add to the stockpile beyond our reach.

That's the position Jimmy Clinton has placed us in. With no basis for trust, we're trusting North Korea with precious time. It's kind of like a miracle.

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

ANOTHER VIEW

Mandatory drug terms overcrowd prisons

Beneath the din of tough-on-crime shouting in the White House and Congress, a quiet strain of sober reason has begun to emerge in the fight against drugs. Both the House and Senate have voted to ease mandatory minimum sentences for certain low-level drug offenders.

That refreshing step recognizes that while the mules and messengers of drug operations must be punished, it is dumb and unfair to inflict mandatory minimum sentences of 5 and 10 years.

Both chambers would remove mandatory terms for minor drug violators. The House would apply the more flexible rules retroactively to release between 1,600 and 4,000 inmates needlessly cramming federal prisons.

Senate-House conferees can adopt the House's retroactive leniency without losing any political points. Certified crime warriors like Reps. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., and Bill McCollum, R-Fla., endorse retroactivity.

Attorney General Janet Reno hangs back, even though she was among the first in Washington to denounce the rigid minimum sentences. Her own Justice Department found last year that as many as 16,000 federal prisoners are in the small-time drug offender category.

The House bill would spring only a fraction of that number by reducing five-year minimums to two years — if prisoners' criminal records include only minor previous offenses and the Justice Department does not accuse them of being ringleaders.

Minor offenders need punishment, but existing sentencing guidelines can do the job. Otherwise, these inmates will occupy beds needed for more dangerous crime leaders and force new prison construction, eating up funds for police and crime prevention. The House has the right version.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 29, the 180th day of 1994. There are 185 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 29, 1767, the British Parliament approved the Townshend Revenue Acts, which imposed import duties on glass, lead, paint, paper and tea shipped to America. Colonists bitterly protested the acts, which were repealed in 1770.

On this date:

In 1776, the Virginia state constitution was adopted and Patrick Henry was made governor.

In 1941, Polish statesman, pianist and composer Ignace Jan Paderewski died in New York at age 80.

In 1946, British authorities arrested more than 2,700 Jews in Palestine in an attempt to stamp out

In 1981, Hu Yaobang, a protege of Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, was elected Communist Party chairman, replacing Mao Tse-tung's handpicked successor, Hua Guofeng.

In 1992, a divided Supreme Court ruled that women have a constitutional right to abortion, but the justices also weakened the right as defined in Roe vs. Wade.

Ten years ago: The Soviet Union formally offered to open direct bilateral talks with the United States on banning anti-satellite weapons in space.

Five years ago: The U.S. House of Representatives voted unanimously in favor of new sanctions against China because of its crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.

Miranda ruling needs update for media's sake

Because of the tremendous media coverage of notorious crimes these days, serious thought is being given to re-wording the Miranda ruling that police must recite to suspects.

Buchwald

This is a draft now being circulated among law enforcement agencies:

"You have the right to remain silent or, if you choose, you can go on the 'Larry King Show,' the 'Today Show,' 'Good Morning America,' or 'Hard Copy.'

"You have the right to an attorney, as well as outside legal experts such as Alan Dershowitz or F. Lee Bailey, who will explain on 'Nightline' what your lawyer's defense strategy should have been.

"The District Attorney reserves the right to try you in public on television before you are brought to justice. Mediawise you will be presumed guilty until proved innocent.

"In addition to a lawyer, you have the right to a theatrical agent to make deals for film and television and you will recent 50 percent of the profits from all books and videotapes based on your crime.

"If you sell the serial rights before your trial, that information may be used in evidence against you.

"If you remain silent the public will consider this an admission of guilt and it will be reflected as such in the latest opinion polls.

"If, in the process of being questioned by a reporter you wish to terminate the interview, you may do so, providing that you do not talk to Sam Donaldson for 48 hours.

"Depending on the notoriety of the crime, you will be judged by all the networks, newspaper editorial writers and Pat Buchanan on 'Crossfire.' If found guilty you will be featured in a four-part miniseries during sweeps month.

"The police may not question you if you would rather be interviewed by Barbara Walters or Diane Sawyer.

"If you choose to confess your crime you have a right to demand a press conference. If you are asked the same questions by Connie Chung and Katie Couric you can plead double jeopardy."

This updated version of Miranda is necessary in today's world of instant communications where the rights of the media now have priority over those of the individual.

You are on notice that district attorneys cannot prepare their cases if they don't have access to 100 microphones. Defense lawyers must plead for their defendants in front of the cameras or they will never get a fair trial.

This Miranda warning will assure those arrested that their media rights will be protected.

Remember, if accused of a crime, you are entitled to every sound bite you can get. The Constitution is broad enough to protect every citizen, even those who appear on "Geraldo."

College: Woman should shave head

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — If Shannon Faulkner wants to be the first woman to march with The Citadel's all-male corps of cadets she should have to look like one, crew cut and all, the college told a judge.

Her lawyers, however, said Tuesday that the requirement would be punitive and inconsistent with the way the military treats women.

Both sides in the sex discrimination lawsuit submitted plans Monday to U.S. District Judge C. Weston Houck for admitting Ms. Faulkner to the state-supported military school.

The judge will rule next month whether she will be admitted. Houck also has said he may hold a hearing to resolve the differences in the plans.

The Citadel proposes that Ms. Faulkner continue as a day student next school year, and then move into a private room in the college infirmary and begin military training in the fall of 1995. Ms. Faulkner wants to be allowed in the barracks and begin training this fall.

Both plans propose safeguards to prevent sexual harassment.

The college also says that Ms. Faulkner would have to get a close-cropped haircut — called a knob cut because the cadets who get them are said to resemble doorknobs.

"I disagree as a matter of policy women should be required to shave their heads," said lawyer Val Vojdik. "I think the Citadel's insistence on it is purely punitive."

She said a man's hair would start to grow back in a few days but that it might take months before a woman's hair regains its normal length.

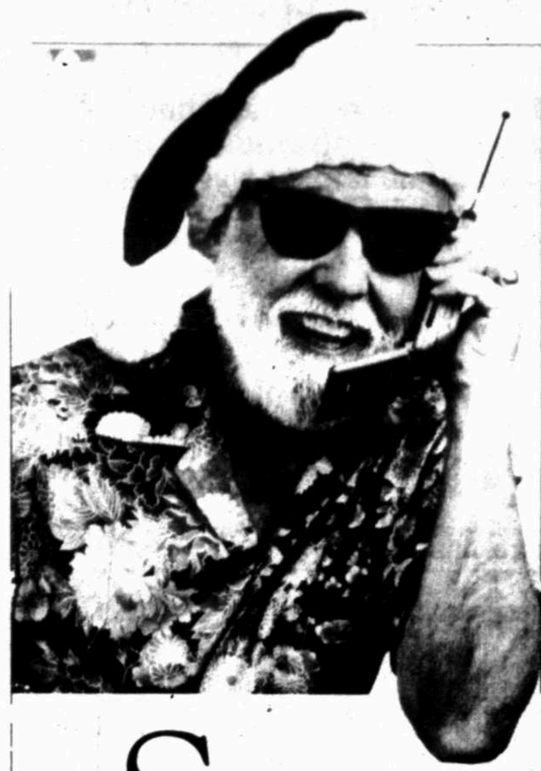

The college said Ms. Faulkner would be allowed no makeup or jewelry but later would be allowed a regulation military haircut for women — hair above the collar that doesn't interfere with headgear.

She also would have to comply with Army physical fitness standards for women, participate in cadet activities and her room door would be unlocked like those of other cadets. Any time another cadet entered there would have to be three people in the room.

Citadel lawyer Dawes Cooke said the plan balances Ms. Faulkner's interest in getting a Citadel education against the interests of cadets who arrived before her case began and expected to attend an all-male college.

Under Ms. Faulkner's plan, she and other women would be permitted in the barracks, provided separate bathrooms, be allowed to lock their rooms at night, and get supervision by military training officers and other adults. The court would monitor the progress of women at the college for five years.

"Our plan provides for other women, not just Shannon Faulkner," Vojdik said.

U.S. stumbles in as top debtor nation in 1993

New report is stark reminder that foreigners have a growing influence over Americans' economic fate, analysts say.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States cemented its position as the largest debtor nation last year, in hock to the rest of the world to the tune of $555.7 billion.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday that America's net debtor position worsened by 9.4 percent from a revised 1992 level of $507.94 billion as foreign holdings in the United States grew more than U.S. assets abroad.

Analysts said that the new report was a stark reminder that foreigners have a growing influence over Americans' economic fate. They said this influence is showing up in the current sell-off of the dollar that has sent the currency's value plunging to a postwar low against the Japanese yen.

"We have lost control of our currency and our credit markets to foreigners and speculators," said Lawrence Chimerine, chief economist at the Economic Strategy Institute, a Washington think tank.

"If you keep running huge trade deficits at a time when no one wants to hold dollars, then you are going to put pressure on your currency," Chimerine said.

As recently as 1986, the United States was still considered a net creditor country with $34.6 billion more in assets overseas than foreigners owned in this country.

However, in 1987 the United States crossed over the line.

Simply put, that means that foreigners now own more in U.S. corporations, stocks, bonds and real estate than Americans own in overseas assets.

Four Navy ships carrying Marines steam to Somalia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four U.S. Navy ships carrying 2,000 Marines are heading to waters off Somalia because of increased dangers faced by the U.S. diplomatic staff there, a Pentagon spokeswoman said Tuesday.

"The security situation has deteriorated somewhat and that concern has lead to the deployment of the USS Guam and the amphibious ready group to the region," spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski told reporters at a briefing.

"We want them to be there in case they need to be called upon to do any kind of evacuation of U.S. personnel. That doesn't mean we think it's going to happen, but we feel we ought to be ready for any contingency," she added.

The State Department has begun withdrawing diplomats from U.S. offices in Mogadishu to neighboring Kenya because of a recent increase in clan fighting.

Ms. deLaski said the move is not an evacuation, and that the clashes do not seem to be targeted at the U.S. Embassy compound.

Coffee drinkers vow to sip, despite price increase

By David Germain
AP business writer

■ More national news/5B

NEW YORK — It'll take more than a price hike caused by the latest coffee-damaging freeze in Brazil to make dedicated java junkies forgo their daily jolt of caffeine.

"Unless it goes up to $10 a cup or something like that, I think I'm pretty much OK," said Patricia Kushman, a three-cup-a-day drinker who stopped for afternoon coffee Tuesday at the Daily Caffe in Manhattan's Rockefeller Plaza. A 10-ounce cup there already goes for $1.10.

Two other customers, a pair of commodities traders named Peter Popp and Peter Impellizeri, said the frost in Brazil is of more interest to investors in coffee futures than the average drinker.

"It won't have any effect on me, that's for sure," Impellizeri said. "I like to start the day with a cup and relax in the middle of the day and chat over another cup. A little price increase won't change that."

In the two days since the weekend's frost, the price of coffee beans for delivery in July jumped 35 percent, closing at $1.703 a pound Tuesday on the New York Coffee, Sugar and Cocoa Exchange.

Because of the time it takes for the crop to mature, this year's frost will hit next year's coffee crop the hardest. Brazil, which estimates the freeze may have destroyed as much as 25 percent of next year's coffee crop, said Tuesday it had suspended exports pending an assessment of the damage.

Still, rising prices began percolating down to consumers quickly. Procter & Gamble Co., which markets Folgers coffee, and Philip Morris Cos.' General Foods subsidiary, maker of Maxwell House, are raising prices by 35 to 40 cents for a 13-ounce can because of the freeze and wholesale price jump.

Even with the increase, though, Maxwell House costs just a nickel a cup, said General Foods spokeswoman Nan Redmond.

Document changes date of Santa Fe's founding

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Has the nation's oldest state capital been understating its age?

In a newly discovered letter dated Aug. 10, 1608, conquistador Juan Martinez de Montoya writes to his superiors about having built a plaza in Santa Fe. The city's founding previously was set at 1610, when Pedro de Peralta established a capital here for New Spain.

"In an innocuous field like history, I guess you could say it upsets the apple cart," said Tom Chavez, director of the Palace of the Governors, a museum in the nation's oldest public building still in continuous use.

The letter and uncorroborated evidence of even earlier colonial activity in the area "lend weight to the hypothesis that as early as 1600 a Spanish settlement was most likely in existence where Santa Fe is today," Chavez said.

New stop signs

Stop signs will be put up at an intersection where a 3-year-old Midland girl — Yanira Terrazas — was killed after being hit by a pickup truck in May. On Tuesday, the City Council unanimously approved the signs be put up at Hamby and Tyler streets. An emotional Jose Terrazas, father of the young girl, urged the council to accept the measure that will hopefully prevent future accidents at the intersection.

Snake theft

PASADENA — A suspected serpent stealer was recovering from a snakebite Tuesday after police say he tried to make off with a pet store's seven baby pythons and his own two rattlesnakes.

The unidentified 24-year-old, who was still experience some swelling from the bite, was treated for the bite and released around noon Tuesday from Sunbelt Regional Hospital in Houston, said Pasadena Capt. A.H. Corbett.

Corbett said the 24-year-old and another man, Mathew Blake Autry, 23, entered C&C Critter Co. Monday afternoon and tried to sell owner Shawn Cochran two diamondback rattlers.

Cochran rejected their offer, saying city ordinance barred him from selling venomous reptiles.

While Autry talked with Cochran in the back of the store, the other man grabbed the baby pythons and made a dash with both the constrictors and his own rattlesnakes to his waiting pickup truck.

Cochran got into his own vehicle and chased the thief. He collided with the suspect, who was bitten by one of his own rattlesnakes.

All seven baby pythons, valued at about $1,000, were recovered and returned to the store. Autry was arrested on an outstanding bad check warrant.

Council approves curfew hearings

■ Dates have not been set, but plans indicate public discussions will be held in each of four represented districts.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A year and a few months after a special grand jury recommended implementation of a juvenile curfew, the City Council on Tuesday gave the go-ahead to schedule public hearings on the proposal. No dates have been set.

Preliminary plans indicate the hearings will be conducted in each of the four districts represented by the council. Discussions of a curfew — by officials and concerned residents — so far have brought out differences of opinion and many unanswered questions.

Juvenile curfews are under consideration in many Texas cities and already in place in others. An appeals court upheld the Dallas juvenile curfew — which the proposed Midland curfew would be modeled after — opening the legal gates for other municipalities in the area.

Last week, Gov. Ann Richards encouraged local communities to implement juvenile curfews. If need be, Richards said, she would support legislation to mandate a curfew statewide.

In Midland, the recent idea of a curfew grew from a recommendation by a special Midland County grand jury in February 1993, following a nine-month investigation into juvenile crime.

A task force was formed to look into the feasibility of a curfew and other suggestions, but the curfew was shelved pending a ruling on the constitutionality of the Dallas ordinance.

While the legality was being tested, city leaders requested local statistics from law enforcement agencies to see if those numbers would justify a curfew.

County Court At Law Judge Al Walvoord, who handles the vast majority of juvenile cases in Midland County, told the council Tuesday that from his perspective a curfew would be "an appropriate thing to experiment with to see what type of impact it has." He threw out a trial period of 6 months to a year and a half.

"I have no doubt it would impact the kids I see," Walvoord said.

One, most juvenile crime takes place at night, and second, police being able to stop youngsters during

Outdoor workers try to keep cool in record heat

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Many Midland residents are talking about the current heat wave in the air-conditioned comfort of an office building, but others must find ways to get outside work done without falling victim to the record-breaking heat.

Even with the stifling temperatures on Tuesday, many of Midland's outside workers were recalling the all-time-record-breaking heat of Monday. "It felt like I was breathing fire," lifeguard Ondrea Mize said of Monday's 116 degrees. Lifeguards must remain seated in the sun, observing swimmers, for about an hour before getting a 15-minute break.

Keeping the body hydrated, that is, drinking enough water or other fluids, is of primary importance in avoiding heat injury, explained Dr. Joseph G. Rhodes of the Midland Family Physicians office. Caffinated beverages should be avoided because they can cost the body moisture, Rhodes said. "Double that statement for alcohol," he added.

Alcoholic beverages can be very dangerous in this kind of heat, he said.

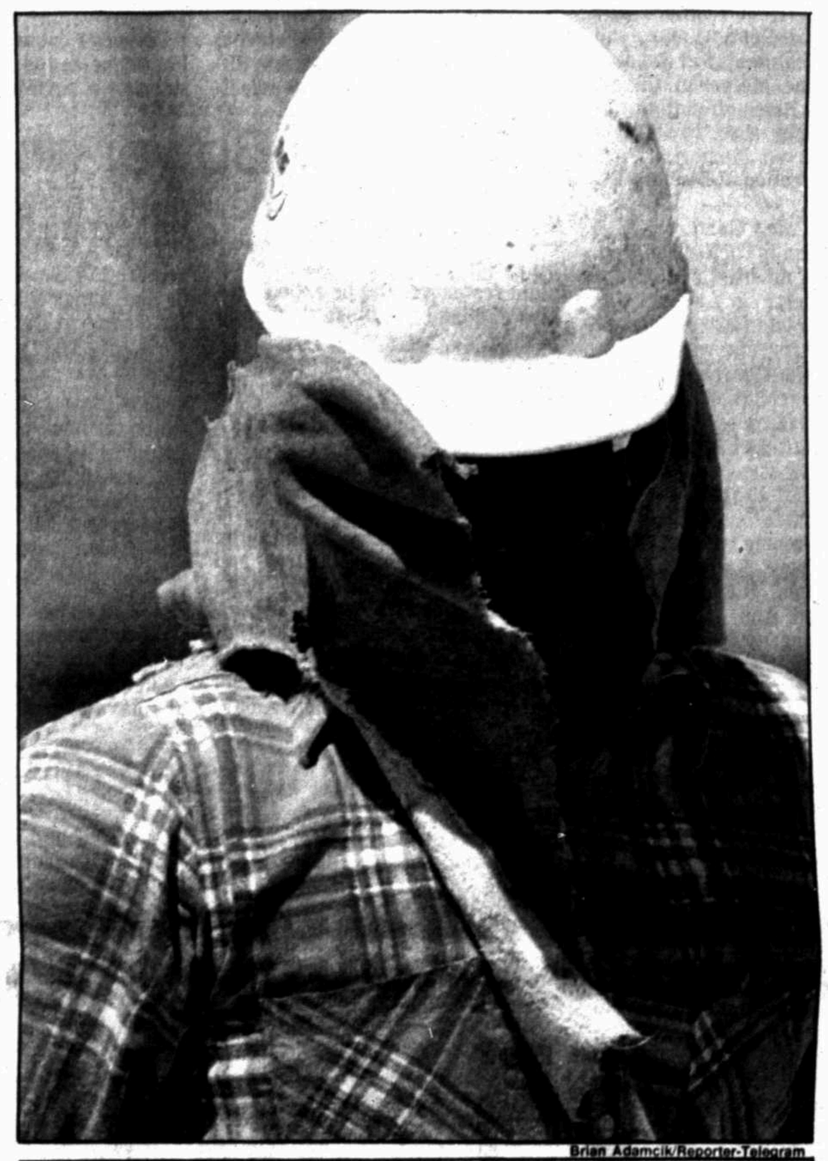

Those working outside in Midland Tuesday, however, were acutely aware of the need to drink water. "You drink water. You drink lots and lots of water," said a construction worker on the Loop 250 project.

Midland lifeguards Frank Nelson and Jeremy Denny said wearing water-soaked towels is a good way to beat the heat at the pool. The lifeguards found that eating only oranges seemed to make the heat more bearable. "You just wear as little as possible . . . and try to keep from passing out," Nelson joked.

"The advantage of being in such a dry heat is that you can get considerable evaporative cooling," Rhodes said of Midland's blazing temperatures and very low humidity. Those on the verge of having problems with the heat can quickly cool off simply by pouring water on themselves.

Workers at Concho Construction, building bridges at the Loop 250 expansion project, adapt their dress as much as possible. Using extra shirts worn under the hard hat in an Arabian-like manner keeps some of the sun's heat

Man who refuses to testify faces more prison time

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A man who was sentenced to four years in federal prison in exchange for his promise to testify in a drug case will now face a minimum of 10 years in prison for refusing to cooperate, according to a U.S. prosecutor.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery said Jose Francisco Perez-Jimenez had earlier pleaded guilty to a charge of distribution of a half kilogram of heroin.

By agreeing to the plea bargain deal, Perez agreed to testify against Lorenzo Carrasco-Garcia in his drug case, Beery said. Also, the prosecutor said he encouraged the judge to give Perez the minimum sentence for his cooperation.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton did even better than that and departed downward from the minimum sentence of five years and sentenced Perez to only four years in prison.

However, when the time came for Perez to testify against Carrasco, he refused to comply.

Beery said he told Perez he would request the judge to revoke the plea agreement and charge him with the full complaint instead of the lesser charge. He said Perez indicated he feared retaliation against family members living in Mexico.

Beery said his request of the judge to revoke the plea agreement was granted, and Perez pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of conspiracy to possess with the intent to distribute two kilograms of heroin.

Anything more than one kilogram is punishable by 10 years to life in federal prison, Beery said.

Also appearing before Judge Bunton was Alex Stanwood who was sentenced to five years incarceration for distribution of cocaine.

Jose Hector Flores Jr. was sentenced to three years probation for possession of stolen government property. Flores had several military munitions from his stint in the service, officials said.

Midlander to receive Sul Ross alumni honor

Staff Report

Ray McNeill of Midland is one of three lifetime Sul Ross State University Ex-Student Association members who will be recognized with Distinguished Alumni Awards at the Summer Reunion on Saturday.

McNeill attended Sul Ross in the late 1920s and returned to the school in 1937 to complete his bachelor of science degree in biology.

A member of the Sul Ross athletic Hall of Honor, McNeill was an all-around athlete, lettering in football, basketball and baseball. He was called the "iron man" by the news media at that time because of his durability.

During his tenure as a Sul Ross student, McNeill was a member of the Sul Ross band, Glee Club, T Club and the student council. He put his musical talents to work, organizing a dance band that played across West Texas and New Mexico. His band had a contract with the university to play for school dances for tuition and noon lunch in the cafeteria.

Austin entrepreneur launches world helicopter journey

By Rebecca Thatcher
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN — Ron Bower loves helicopters. He has to. He's planning to spend at least 22 days in one.

Bower set off this week on an around-the-world flight that will take him through Canada, Europe and Russia as he travels the northern part of the globe trying to become the second man to circumnavigate the Earth solo in a helicopter.

"The two hard pieces are getting across the Arctic waters and . . . Russia," said Bower, a founder and vice president of Austin Jet International, which specializes in retooling and customizing aircraft and sells new and repaired jets and helicopters. "The rest should be sheer enjoyment."

Bower's 3,350-pound Bell JetRanger has been outfitted with an extra 91-pound fuel tank in the back seat, computer-assisted navigation equipment and a long-range radio. Its original engine was replaced with a secondhand machine specially designed for fuel efficiency.

Bower's plan is to fly to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and then to Canada, across Greenland and Iceland to Europe.

He will zigzag through Western Europe, visiting each capital city, before heading to Helsinki, Finland, where he will pick up an interpreter to fly with him across Russia.

Russian authorities have approved the trip, but Bower understands that anything can happen as he tries to fly across the vast nation.

"They have decentralized in Russia, and there is some chaos there," he said. "There are 11 time zones in Russia, and there are people out there who are a long way from Moscow."

Though Bower is concerned about possible problems in Russia, he said he's looking forward to getting to know parts of a country that have been off limits to foreigners for years.

"There are many different cultural groups in this route," he said, pointing to a map showing the path he will follow to cross southern Russia. "I hope to make a lot of friends as we go along."

Pointing to the western tip of Alaska, he said, "This is where I will kiss the ground."

Bower plans to fly for nine hours a day, stop 75

DEATHS

O.W. Smith

Services for O.W. "Dub" Smith, 79, of Wolfforth, father of a Midland woman, will be at 10 a.m. today at the Wolfforth Church of Christ with David Emery, former minister of the Wolfforth Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Resthaven Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Smith died Monday in a Lubbock hospital.

He was born Feb. 19, 1915, in Buhl, Idaho. He married Tessie Lee Collins on Jan. 8, 1938, in Lubbock. She died on Oct. 24, 1963.

Smith had been a resident of Wolfforth since 1948, moving there from Slide. He was a farmer.

Smith was a member of the Wolfforth Church of Christ, the Wolfforth Lions Club and the Senior Citizens Center. He was a past board member of the Friendship Independent School District.

Survivors include two daughters, Leslie Patterson of Lockney and Gail Parham of Midland; two sisters, Lois Suttle of Lubbock and Alma McCullar of Wolfforth; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Childrens Home of Lubbock.

James Pasley

ODESSA — Services for James Robert Pasley, 64, of Odessa and formerly of Midland, are set for 10 a.m. Friday at the Frank W. Wilson Funeral Directors Chapel in Odessa. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park in Midland.

Pasley died Monday at his residence.

He was born Dec. 3, 1929, in Ashdown, Ark. He moved to Odessa from Midland, and he was a retired owner of a used car business.

Pasley, a Baptist, was a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Survivors include two sons, Victor Pasley of Veneta, Ore., and Keith Pasley of Kingman, Ariz.; two daughters, Sherri Taylor and Pamela Pasley, both of Eugene, Ore.; five grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

He was preceded in death by a son, Steve Pasley.

Anna Williams

Services for Anna Lee Williams of Midland will be at 11 a.m. today at Ranchland Heights Baptist Church with the Rev. Lucian Rudd officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Williams died Monday at her residence.

Pallbearers will be Frank Westerman, Jim Reid, Jimmy Holmes, Darrell Preston, J.W. Allen and James A. Patterson.

Mrs. Blank died Tuesday at her residence.

She was born Sept. 16, 1915, in Midland. She graduated from Midland High School in 1933 and attended Texas Tech University. She moved to Odessa in 1940 and worked for Gulf Oil Company. She married Oliver F. Blank on Dec. 6, 1941, in Odessa. She was a member of First United Methodist Church of Odessa, Honorary Mother's Club, O.C.C. Women's Association, Twentieth Century Study Club and Just-A-Mere Bridge Club.

Survivors include her husband, Oliver F. Blank of Odessa; a daughter, Sue Folk of Castle Rock, Colo.; a brother, Jack C. Newland of Crane; and two grandchildren.

Ruth Clary

LUBBOCK — Services for Ruth Clary, 71, of Lubbock and mother of a Midland woman, will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at Sanders Funeral Home Memorial Chapel with Kennon Rider officiating, assisted by Bobby Hise. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Sanders Funeral Home.

Mrs. Clary died Monday.

She was born in Dickens on Dec. 17, 1922. She married J.E. Clary on Dec. 31, 1947, in Abilene. She was a former member of Pioneer Church of Christ and was a member of Vandelia Church of Christ.

Survivors include her husband; a son, Steven Clary of Stamford; a daughter, Patricia Riggen of Midland; two brothers, Cyrus Beechly of Bryan and Jack Beechly of Gatesville; five sisters, Verna Goen of Seminole, Laura Bachman of Crowley, Kahki Chandler of San Antonio, Rachel Estes of Burleson and Ann McKinney of Big Spring; and four grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Mrs. Clary's nephews.

Memorials may be made to the American Cancer Society or the Children's Home of Lubbock, 4404 Idalou Road, Lubbock, 79403.

Johnnie Bargsley

CRANE — Services for Johnnie Bargsley, 49, of Odessa and formerly of Crane, will be at 3 p.m. Thursday at Richard Box Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Burial will be in Crane County Cemetery under the direction of Richard Box Funeral Home in Crane.

Ms. Bargsley died Tuesday at her residence.

She was born May 22, 1945, in Pecos. She was a homemaker and a Baptist.

Survivors include three sons, Matt Bargsley, James Bargsley and Mike Bargsley, all of Midland; and two sisters, Wanda Damron of Denver, Colo., and Sheila Tipton of Houston.

HEAT: Workers take precautions in 3-digit temperatures off.

There's not much way around working in the heat, said Foreman Cesario Arellano. "We've got to do the job ... and a man's got to work," he said.

Even so, work on the bridge was shut down early on Monday, with crews closing operations at about 3 p.m. "With that sun, it was just too dangerous," Arellano said.

"We get started kind of early, trying to catch that coolness," said Gilbert Davila of Davila Brothers Construction. Davila's crew is doing concrete work on new housing in the northwest part of the city. "We get started around 7. They were talking about getting started at 6 tomorrow, but I told them it's not daylight tomorrow at 6," Davila said, smiling.

Light clothing helps when working in the sun," Rhodes said. "Not only light-weight material, but light colors," he said.

Rhodes warns against elective heavy labor, especially those exercise enthusiasts who think it "macho" to run in hot weather. When distance running, the body's core temperature can reach 104 or 105 degrees under ideal conditions, he said. When mated with the 112-plus temperatures of the heat wave, injury can easily occur.

A dangerous situation known as heat stroke can occur easily in this kind of heat. When a person's skin turns very red and they stop sweating, this is an indication that heat stroke is occurring. The person must be taken out of the heat and cooled with ice or cold water. "...They are about to cook themselves in their own heat," he said.

A lesser, but still dangerous, condition called heat exhaustion can leave a person feeling weak and thirsty. This thirst might not be slaked with constant drinking, leading the victim to dilute his own body fluids with too much water.

A person suffering from heat exhaustion might find himself feeling goosebumps even in the heat, he said. Those feeling badly while in the heat need to get to a cool place quickly before the condition worsens.

Diluted Gatorade can be helpful in replenishing the overheated person's minerals, but full-strength sports drinks are often too strong and can be dangerous because of the high salt content, Rhodes said.

COUNCIL: No dates have been set for public hearings curfew hours could help better monitor delinquents under court-ordered curfews, he said.

Walvoord did warn that a curfew might cause delinquents to conduct their criminal acts closer to home, and that the city would have to deal with the effect of youngsters — who are not from the typical delinquent background — being picked up for curfew violation.

District 2 council representative Juluis Brooks had a somewhat different concern about youths affected by the ordinance.

"I don't want to see the young people from the other side of the tracks harassed," he said apparently referring to minorities in south Midland.

There has also been a concern that a curfew punishes law-abiding youngsters for the acts of a few delinquents. Some say the measure is a violation of the rights of youngsters.

District 1 council representative Pat Schneider said the city, in considering a curfew, should look at lowering the proposed age from 17 to 15.

She also emphasized the need to get input from businesses, which will be required to report juveniles in violation of the curfew.

District 4 council representative Claudia Egan summed up the questions that arise every time a curfew has been discussed before the council: "There are just a tremendous amount of issues concerning the curfew."

The proposed ordinance calls for minors — those under 17 years old — to be home between the hours of 11 p.m. to 6 a.m., Sunday through Thursday, and from midnight to 6 a.m. on Friday and Saturday.

Several exceptions — such as traveling to and from work, school and church, emergencies, being with a parent or guardian and being married — are included in the curfew.

District Attorney Al Schorre, at Tuesday's council meeting, suggested extending the curfew to daytime school hours as an extension of truancy measures.

times for fuel and make 22 overnight rest stops. But he expects delays and hopes to finish the trip in 27 days.

"I have a hotel reservation in Fort Lauderdale. After that, it's where I finish up for the day," he said.

Bower, 52, grew up in Houston and graduated from Texas A&M University. He was an Army first lieutenant in Vietnam, flying Huey helicopter gunships in 1965 and 1966. He came to Austin in 1966 to earn his master's degree in business administration from the University of Texas. After graduating, he worked for IBM until he and two partners opened Austin Jet International in 1982.

To set a world record, Bower is required to fly about 23,000 miles, or the Earth's circumference at the Tropic of Cancer.

There have only been two officially recorded helicopter flights around the world, according to the Guinness Book of World Records. Ross Perot Jr. and Jay Coburn set the record by flying around the world in a Bell LongRanger in 29 days in 1982. Dick Smith, an Australian, completed the first solo helicopter flight in 1983, taking 11 months.

Since those men flew around the world more than 10 years ago, technology and political geography have changed.

Perot had a jet carrying supplies and support personnel travel the route with him. Because he couldn't fly across the then-Communist Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, he refueled on a boat in the Pacific Ocean.

Bower will use a hand-held satellite locator device that will let him know exactly where he is at any time. Computerized communication equipment will enable him to send fax messages and send and receive E-mail while in flight.

But Bower is not relying entirely on high technology. He has taken a water survival course in case his helicopter goes down over water.

While he's flying across Iceland and Greenland, he'll wear a waterproof suit and carry an inflatable dinghy. Without such equipment, a crash landing in the freezing waters can be lethal.

"You go unconscious in a matter of seconds, and you're dead in a matter of minutes," he said.

Bower acknowledges that he could get around the world a lot faster in a jet. But in a helicopter, with windows in front and windows below, he'll be able to see a lot more than he would in a jet.

"There is going to be some pretty scenery. In all of Western Europe, the countryside is immaculate," he said. "I have been flying helicopters for about 30 years. I get just as much thrill today as I did when I was flying them in the Army."

Bribery confession opens probe of psychiatric hospital fraud

DALLAS (AP) — For three years the cases have been growing.

First, there were allegations that a national psychiatric hospital chain hired bounty hunters to find patients who could tap into a state crime victims fund.

An ensuing legislative probe uncovered charges that some hospitals kidnapped teen-agers for their health insurance.

This week, federal investigators got what could be their biggest break yet.

A former top executive of Psychiatric Institutes of America admitted that the company's Texas operation paid as much as $40 million in bribes to health-care providers, a confession that is expected to break open criminal cases across the country.

Former PIA executive Peter Alexis Monday pleaded guilty to conspiracy and false statement charges and agreed to cooperate with prosecutors in their probe of PIA's parent company, National Medical Enterprises Inc.

"I think that this admission signals the beginning of a long trail of righting the wrongs of these greedy people," said Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth.

Moncrief had led the legislative probe that resulted in laws to stop bounty hunting and other fraudulent activities in Texas psychiatric hospitals.

Alexis is the highest-level executive of any such firm to cooperate with federal investigators, U.S. Attorney Paul Coggins said.

"It's a very important step in what has already been a long investigation," Coggins said Tuesday. "This is a nationwide investigation. . . . We expect it will go on for years."

Alexis, 44, told investigators he attended monthly meetings in Washington, D.C., in which other NME officials shared information on soliciting and paying referral sources, as well as the disguising of profits.

Alexis' attorney, Jeff Kearney, Tuesday said his client would not comment on the case outside of court. Kearney said his client waived his right to indictment and was free pending sentencing, which has not been scheduled.

NME declined comment on Alexis, who resigned in 1990.

The Alexis plea came a year after the FBI raided National Medical Enterprises' headquarters in Santa Monica, Calif., and facilities in Texas, Denver, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Phoenix, St. Louis, San Diego, Atlanta, Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

Company spokeswoman Diana Takvam said NME has set aside $395 million for a settlement it has tentatively reached with the federal government to end all action against the company. That agreement, however, does not protect any individuals.

Most of the top-level managers have been replaced, she said, and NME is in the process of selling off its psychiatric-care centers, which have been the target of a number of civil lawsuits from former patients over the last three years.

At its high point in 1991, Ms. Takvam said NME had 86 psychiatric facilities. There were 61 facilities at the beginning of fiscal year 1994. Since then, Takvam said the company has tentatively agreed to sell 47 of their sites.

Coggins declined to say how many other people were involved in the bribery scheme. Asked if the investigation extended to other companies, Coggins said only, "We are very active in the health-care fraud area."

Moncrief said he expects to see fallout from the federal investigation hit a lot more than NME officials.

"The hearings that we held two years ago led to Texas being the location of where the first rock was flipped over. Since then, we started seeing all the ugly things crawling out from underneath," he said.

The federal investigation was initiated shortly after state probes were launched.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales sued PIA in 1991 for allegedly employing bounty hunters to find patients eligible for benefits from the crime victims compensation fund.

Those allegations, which eventually were settled with a multi-million-dollar payment to the state, prompted Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock to appoint the legislative panel headed by Moncrief.

Alexis faces 10 years in prison and fines of up to $500,000 for his role in the scheme, Coggins said.

Woman admits to check forgery

WACO (AP) — A woman on parole for embezzlement has pleaded guilty to forging more than $50,000 in checks on the bank account of a retired church music minister.

Darlyne Laurel Lopez, 50, faces up to 30 years in federal prison and up to $1 million in fines for the bank fraud conviction. Sentencing is scheduled for Sept. 12.

Ms. Lopez has admitted writing checks on the account of David Bardwell Green, a friend who moved in with her in her Waco home in January 1992.

When he moved out two months later, he unknowingly left behind a book of blank checks. Ms. Lopez said she used them to write at least 31 checks totaling $51,700 on his Bank One of Fort Worth account.

Green said he noticed he was missing money when he tried to open trust accounts for his grandchildren. Instead of having the $71,000 his records indicated, he had only $17,000, Bank One officials said.

Steven Camp, a Bank One attorney from Dallas, said the bank's investigation revealed that Ms. Lopez was altering Green's monthly bank statements, which were still being mailed to her address.

Camp said she made photocopies of the statements, deleted from the listing of checks she forged, typed up new statements and gave them to Green.

Most of the checks were made payable to her and deposited into Ms. Lopez's bank account in Waco, Camp said.

HONOR: University to recognize McNeill at its Summer Reunion

After coaching at Lampasas for a year, McNeill decided teaching was not for him. He returned to Alpine and reorganized his band. Until he joined the Air Force, he continued to perform with his ensemble and also played a season of semi-pro football.

Following his service with the Air Force and another brief stint with the band, he played semi-pro baseball with Herbert Kokernot's Cowboys. He retired from the Cactus Drilling Corporation of Texas in Midland and went into the quarterhorse business with his son, Bill.

POLICE REPORTS

Accident

A Midland woman, who was involved in an accident Sunday, was declared legally brain dead Tuesday, police said.

Betty Davis, 42, had remained in critical condition at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center since the two-vehicle accident at about 12:20 p.m. at Rankin Highway and Interstate 20.

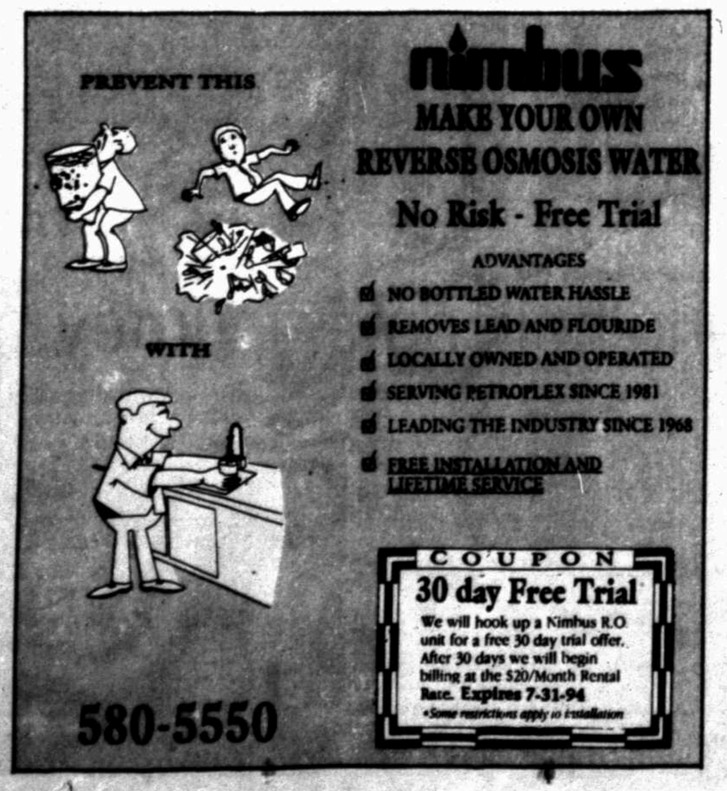

Ms. Davis was driving a Ford LTD on Rankin Highway when the vehicle was struck by a Jeep, driven by Rusty Box, 29. Box sustained no injuries.

Officials stated Tuesday that possible criminal charges are being investigated.

Tuesday

Burglary of a Vehicle: Paul Chester reported a Motorola car phone taken from a vehicle at 4615 Bowie Drive at 5:58 a.m.

Stolen Vehicle: Emma Lou Henderson reported a white 1983 Pontiac Bonneville stolen from 1707 English Drive at 12:22 p.m.

Defense rests in Koslow case

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — A twisted, bungled murder-for-hire case goes to a jury Wednesday, which will decide if a teen-age girl arranged the savage 1992 assault on her wealthy parents.

And if so, jurors must determine whether she should pay with her life.

The defense abruptly rested Tuesday after calling a single witness, a lawyer, who was prohibited by the judge from testifying that police denied him access to defendant Kristi Koslow when arrested two years ago.

Miss Koslow's attorney played a recording of the defendant's arraignment two years ago. She told the judge that morning she thought the charge against her was "conspiracy or something other than capital murder, because . . . I did not commit the crime."

The defense maintains that Miss Koslow was denied access to her lawyer the morning of her arrest and that a homicide detective coerced a "confession" from her.

Judge Bob Gill instructed the sequestered jury to return Wednesday morning to hear final arguments from opposing attorneys.

The state alleges that Miss Koslow, now 19, solicited her boyfriend and one of his buddies to murder her father and stepmother so she could get her hands on a perceived multimillion-dollar inheritance.

Jack Koslow, 51, an ex-banker, survived the March 1992 rampage at his elegant Rivercrest home. His wife Caren, 40, did not.

According to a medical examiner, the blonde oil heiress suffered 27 "blunt force" injuries to her head and body and her throat was slashed.

And in a cruelly ironic twist, her husband was the prime suspect until an informant's tip led police to his daughter and her alleged coconspirators.

As a key witness in the trial, Koslow recounted the chilling events of that night and, outside the jury's presence, said his daughter should be given the death penalty.

"That's what she gave Caren," he said.

He recalled awakening in the early morning hours to the sounds of a pre-alarm buzz and his wife's terrified scream: "They're in the house!"

Moments later, Brian Salter and Jeffrey Dillingham broke down the door of the couple's darkened bedroom and attacked them with a metal pry bar and a knife.

Dillingham beat them unconscious, then Salter cut their throats, the young men told police and prosecutors.

They were 19 at the time.

A jury convicted Dillingham last year of killing Caren Koslow and assessed the death penalty. Salter, the defendant's boyfriend, received a life sentence in a plea agreement with the state.

Salter admittedly changed his story under oath but insists that it was Miss Koslow who plotted the murders, supplied him a map of the house and an alarm code and then helped cover up the crime.

The defense maintains that Miss Koslow's "confession" was suspect and that while she discussed killing her parents, it was Salter and Dillingham who set the deadly scheme in motion.

After seven days of testimony and 23 witnesses, prosecutors rested their case Monday with a bang and a whimper.

The bang came with a courtroom video of an interview the defendant gave reporters .

Grand jury indicts former Texas A&M president, 4 others on various charges

BRYAN (AP) — Former Texas A&M Vice President Robert Smith, a 30-year employee at the school who oversaw everything from finances to football compliance, was indicted Tuesday by a Brazos County grand jury.

He was one of five A&M employees indicted on misdemeanor charges.

Smith, 59, is accused of soliciting two all-expenses paid trips to New York for his wife from the company awarded the contract to run the campus bookstore in College Station.

A&M athletics director Wally Groff and three others were indicted on charges they falsified government records used to purchase alcohol.

The indictments of Smith and Groff mark the most significant criminal charges produced from evidence gathered by state and federal authorities in a 10-month investigation of officials atop the nation's third-largest university.

Indicted with Groff on charges accusing them of disguising the purchase of alcohol on state purchase vouchers as food, soft drinks and ice were:

- Penny King, associate athletic director;
- Ronald Carter, manager of business and facilities operations in the chemistry department; and
- John Wormuth, professor and interim head of the oceanography department.

Brazos County District Attorney Bill Turner said four others, while not indicted, were also charged with falsifying government records, bringing the number of accused to nine.

Turner identified the four as Don Hellriegel, a professor in the management department; Sabrina Saladino, an academic business administrator in the management department; Jesse Malon Southerland, vice president for student affairs; and Sheran Riley, an assistant to the president.

Smith, Groff, Wormuth and Ms. King each face up to two years in jail and $6,000 in fines if convicted. Carter, Hellriegel, Ms. Saladino, Southerland and Ms. Riley each face up to one year in jail and $3,000 in fines.

Earlier this month, Smith was demoted to executive director of special projects at A&M. New A&M President Ray M. Bowen said the move simply allowed him to install his own staff and wasn't a reflection on Smith.

Bowen said Texas A&M has cooperated fully with the investigation and will continue to do so.

"Both in that role and as a concerned citizen, I accept the grand jury's decision to indict these individuals and will wait for the judicial system to offer our employees the due process they so rightly deserve under the law before making any additional comments," Bowen said.

Smith and Ross Margraves Jr., former chairman of the Texas A&M System board of regents, were the lead negotiators for a $10 million contract awarded to Barnes & Noble Bookstores Inc. in July 1990. Smith and Margraves also worked out a contract extension in June 1993 that could result in as much as $25 million in net sales for Barnes & Noble.

"The allegation is that Robert Smith solicited employees from Barnes & Noble to have his wife taken to New York City," Turner said.

Jury rules man likely killed father, denies him life insurance policy

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A civil court jury ruled Tuesday that a man likely strangled his father even through he has not been charged nearly two years after the murder.

The ruling denied Victor Lino Leal a chance to collect a $500,000 life insurance policy that his father had left him.

Attorneys for Dr. Victor Leal's estate contended that Lino Leal, 21, killed his father after a quarrel over the son's drug problems and frequent brushes with the law.

But Lino Leal's attorneys argued that the doctor, who himself had been indicted on federal drug charges, may have been killed by drug dealers unhappy about his reported cooperation with the FBI.

"I feel that the truth has not been known," said Lino Leal's mother, Maria Garza, who supported her son throughout the trial. "Anybody who knows him and his father knows that they both loved each other."

Dr. Leal's body was discovered bound to a chair and weighed down in bay water near the family vacation home in Port Isabel in August 1992.

Autopsy reports said he had been shot by an electronic stun gun and strangled by a rope. Pellet wounds also were found in his skull.

The federal jury's decision, reached after about nine hours of deliberations, means the $500,000 life insurance policy will go to the estate.

An older son, Victor Leal Jr., now becomes the beneficiary of the estate based on the verdict and state law, according to Crisanta Guerra, an attorney for the estate.

Ms. Guerra said the estate will file court papers to block Victor Lino from collecting a separate $250,000 life insurance policy or anything else in the estate, which she said was worth about $1 million.

Leal Jr. did not testify or show up at the trial.

Lino Leal's attorney, Hector Villarreal, vowed an appeal. He also called for a federal investigation of the way the Cameron County District Attorney's office has handled the murder case.

Although district attorney's investigator George Gavito gave testimony implicating Lino Leal during the civil case, the office has not charged him.

Killer bees' migration slows, baffles experts

AUSTIN (AP) — The northward migration of Africanized honeybees has slowed in East Texas, a puzzling development that has experts buzzing.

Scientists had thought the bees would reach Houston last year, but they have yet to enter Harris County.

"I'm probably as baffled as anybody," said Fowden Maxwell, professor of entomology at Texas A&M University and chairman of Texas' Africanized Honeybee Task Force.

Scientists speculate that the slowed migration could be due to parasitic mites that affect the bees or lower-than-normal rainfall, but no one knows for sure, Maxwell said.

Africanized honeybees, popularly called "killer bees," are more aggressive than their European cousins, which are dominant in the United States.

The Africanized bees first entered Texas in October 1990. They are confined to an area south of a line that roughly runs from El Paso County to Bell County to Fort Bend County south of Houston. They are also present in Arizona and New Mexico.

Beekeeping operations in 71 Texas counties are quarantined because of the presence or suspected presence of Africanized bees. Under a quarantine, domesticated honeybees cannot be transported to a nonquarantined area without certification by the Texas Apiary Inspection Service at Texas A&M University.

CITYLINE — The Talk of the Town

Ex-football star's genes become hot topic

■ DNA inside O.J.'s blood, hair stirs interest, controversy.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The double-murder case against O.J. Simpson could turn on DNA tests on blood and hair in a state where some judges have shied away from allowing such evidence in court.

At prosecutors' request Tuesday, a judge ordered Simpson's lawyers to turn over some of his hair for genetic comparison with hairs in a ski cap found where his ex-wife and her friend were slain. The prosecution is also conducting DNA tests on blood.

During the 1980s, California judges welcomed genetics tests. But at least two appeals courts ruled recently that DNA evidence shouldn't have been allowed in criminal trials because scientists can't agree on its reliability.

"This is a piece of scientific evidence which lawyers and experts are probably going to dispute unless they come back and exclude O.J. Simpson," said F. Lee Bailey, one of the former football star's attorneys.

Bailey has called DNA test results questionable and inconclusive. "Some experts would say it shows one thing, some experts could say, 'No it doesn't show that,' and away we go," he said.

The defense has said it wants to do its own genetic testing of the blood and hair.

So-called DNA fingerprinting looks for unique characteristics that constitute each person's genetic makeup. Laboratories extract DNA from such things as blood or hair found at a crime scene and compare it with samples from suspects and victims. The results appear like bar codes on X-ray images.

Defense lawyers are keenly aware they must overcome a public perception that DNA testing is definitive, especially when scientists say there's something like a one-in-a-million chance more than one person might have a particular DNA profile.

"Some evidence by its nature can appear so compelling that it has that danger of suddenly making the expert's judgment into the jury verdict," said Michael Pasano, a Miami defense attorney and former chief assistant U.S. attorney in southern Florida.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys agree that obvious differences in portions of DNA can easily eliminate a suspect. However, the testing provides less certainty with positive identification. Human error in conducting the tests is possible, and the image made of the DNA is open to interpretation.

California requires that scientific methods be generally accepted in the scientific community before they are admissible in court. Judges have found no problems with the test process but have found disagreement among experts on how to read the resul

In a 1991 murder case in Ventura County, an appeals court ruled that DNA evidence was properly admitted because of consensus about creating DNA images, comparing them and providing a statistical explanation of the chances two people could share a pattern.

Then in 1992, an appeals court combined decisions in a kidnap-rape case and a murder case in Alameda County and ruled that DNA results were inadmissible because experts disagreed on interpretation.

Government issues new sun-safety index

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reasons to avoid the midday sun sound like a litany of physical ills in modern America — skin cancer, cataracts, damaged immune system, premature aging. Now Americans will at least have guidelines to how bad it is out there.

The government launched a new daily solar warning index on Tuesday, an effort to help people avoid becoming part of the annual toll of more than 700,000 new cases of skin cancer and more than a million cataract operations.

The National Weather Service will issue daily forecasts of ultraviolet light exposure for 58 cities across the nation.

"I wish my parents had this information when they sent me out to play in the sun," said David Doniger of the Environmental Protection Agency, which worked with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and Centers for Disease Control on the index.

Damage from sun exposure accumulates over time, he said, and much of the injury is done when people are youngsters.

The mission of the weather service is to protect life and property in this country, and this index is part of that mission, said National Weather Service Director Elbert W. Friday.

"We're presented with a huge opponent; 700,000 cases of skin cancer annually demands some response and the UV index is a way of responding," added Stephen Wyatt of the CDC.

The index is issued daily, forecasting the amount of dangerous ultraviolet light from the sun that will be arriving at the Earth's surface about noontime the following day.

The scale will be 1-to-10 in most areas, rising to 1-to-15 in regions that receive stronger solar radiation — the higher the number the greater the danger.

The goal, officials agreed, is to remind people of the danger so they will use sunscreens, sunglasses and reduce exposure by themselves and their children.

Skin damage from solar radiation varies by skin type and color, with fair people more easily injured and those with darker skin having some natural protection. Thus, categories have to be interpreted by the individual.

And Doniger pointed out there is no evidence that darker-skin people face any less danger from eye injury or immune system damage.

The index is developed using satellite instruments to measure the amount of ozone in the upper atmosphere. The ozone layer blocks incoming UV radiation, but thins seasonally and also has been damaged by chemicals.

Clouds also block some UV, depending on type and thickness of cloud cover, and this is taken into consideration along with the season and other factors, Friday explained.

He noted that private firms such as Bausch & Lomb also produce UV warning indexes that are distributed to businesses and the public. Friday said his agency is working with those firms to coordinate the categories and types of warnings issued.

The general categories of hazard in the National Weather Service index are:

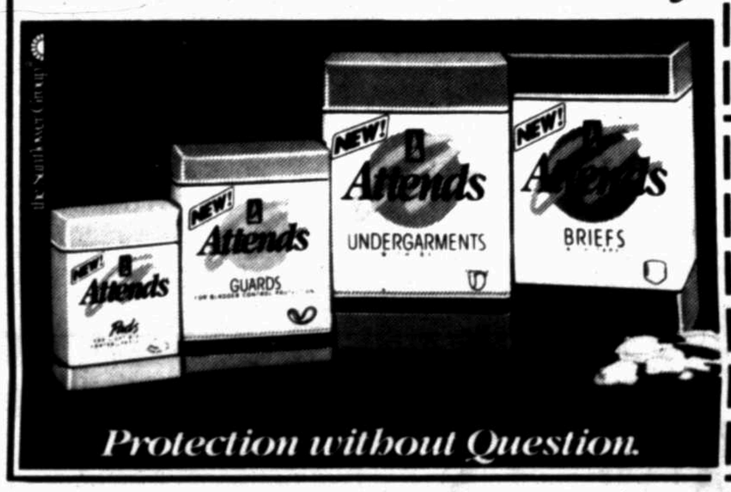

Minimal: Index of 0-2; very fair people may burn in 30 minutes, while those less susceptible to damage may be safe for up to two hours.

Low: Index of 3-4; safe time for pale people is 15 to 20 minutes, while those with darker skins face damage in 75 to 90 minutes.

Moderate: Index of 5-6; fair people safe for 10 to 12 minutes, up to 50 to 60 minutes for those with more protective skin types.

High: Index of 7-9; safe time only 7 to 8½ minutes for unprotected people with fair skin, while people not susceptible to burning should be safe for 33 to 40 minutes.

Very High: Index of 10 and up; danger range is 4 to 6 minutes for those most at risk, 20 to 30 minutes for those least affected.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 29, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR: Better money management is the key to peace of mind. Seek advice from experts only, then invest wisely. Romance needs time to grow; be patient. Issuing an ultimatum could boomerang. An exciting work project receives new public attention early in 1995. A partnership you form next spring should prove long-lasting. Overseas travel may be necessary in May. Try to combine business with pleasure!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Gary Busey, baseball player Pedro Guerrero, civil rights leader Kwame Toure, actress Ruth Warrick.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take advantage of inspired communication trends early today. Finalize an agreement after consulting a lawyer. Your attention swings to the domestic scene tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may not know exactly where you stand in a business deal. Postpone making a financial commitment. Certain plans for the evening may no longer interest you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If possible, avoid both traffic and crowds today. Errands and shopping will take longer than expected. An upbeat, confident attitude will do more for romance than passionate pleas for togetherness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Analyzing your mistakes will keep you from repeating them. Creative or artistic vibrations abound! Be receptive to new people and ideas even if they seem to come "from another planet."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Business or career pursuits get a healthy boost today. You may decide to take a new tack or return to an earlier one. A bold course of action will pay off handsomely. Contact prominent people.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friends can help you advance your business goals. Be careful not to get caught off-guard by someone's behind-the-scenes maneuvering. Lay your cards on the table when talking with potential financial backers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The areas of romance and finance could see some ups and downs over the next few days. Play a waiting game. Loved one may have an unconscious need for drama and excitement. Ignore exaggerations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Legal documents and business contracts should be put in a safe place. Travel is the answer for those seeking variety and growth. An older person's attentions may be flattering at first.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tackle the hardest part of a project first and the rest will be easy! Take constructive suggestions in the same generous spirit in which they are given.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Give bad habits the brush-off. To meet your new business or career responsibilities, you must be prepared to burn the midnight oil. Learning high-tech skills boosts your productivity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Positive thinking can help move mountains. Stop taking your loved ones for granted. Show your appreciation for their loyalty in meaningful ways. Listening to a favorite radio station can soothe frazzled nerves.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Artistic pursuits hold great appeal this week. Use your ingenuity to patch up a rocky relationship. Check out how the home folks are faring; they will be delighted to hear from you.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will be tactful and compassionate oven as youngsters. Adept at putting themselves in the other person's shoes, these conciliatory Cancerians are reluctant to criticize.

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

The average player loves to take a finesse. The expert searches for ways to avoid one. This deal is from a team match between a star team and a squad of hopefuls.

Four spades was the final contract at both tables, on similar auctions. Two clubs was artificial and forcing, two diamonds negative and two spades natural. North's jump to four spades showed good trump support, but denied a side first- or second-round control, so South reluctantly tossed in the towel.

The lead was the same at the two tables—the queen of diamonds. At one table declarer won, led a low trump to the nine and finessed the jack of hearts. West won with the queen and returned a trump. Declarer won in dummy and tried a heart to the king. That lost to the ace and West removed dummy's last trump. In the fullness of time declarer lost a third heart and a club for down one.

At the other table the expert declarer took advantage of the friendly lead to land the contract and there was nothing the defenders could do about it. Since South could afford to lose two hearts and a club, declarer immediately led a heart from hand after winning the diamond. West won cheaply and returned a trump, but South was in charge.

The spade was won in dummy and a heart to the jack lost to the queen. West persevered with a trump. Declarer won in hand, ruffed a heart, came to hand with a diamond ruff and drew the last trump. Eventually, declarer conceded a club trick, but that was the third and last trick for the defense.

Actor Jones changes his tune for voice of majestic Mufasa

LOS ANGELES — You heard him as Darth Vader, and some of us have seen his commercials for the Yellow Pages. A warm welcome, please, for James Earl Jones, direct from the jungle as majestic Mufasa in "The Lion King."

Jones worked alone when he put his voice on tape as the father of the lost lion king Simba.

"I don't know if I could have focused sitting across from Jeremy Irons or Whoopi (Goldberg)," he told USA Today, referring to other actors who took on characters in the summer hit. "I would want to impress."

Part of Jones' interest in Mufasa was that the part "was written quite simply with a certain dignity and responsibility that kings are supposed to have."

NEW YORK — Barbra Streisand's Madison Square Garden homecoming will last one night longer.

A seventh show was added Tuesday to the sold-out run, said Peter LoFrumento, spokesman for the singer. The show is July 12 and all seats will be available to the public. Tickets are $350, $125 and $50.

Barbra Streisand's Madison Square Garden homecoming to last one night longer.

"She wants as many fans to see her as possible," LoFrumento said.

Miss Streisand added a sixth show that sold out in a half-hour.

LOS ANGELES — Virgin Records is trying to stop leaks of the Rolling Stones' new album, "Voodoo Lounge."

Virgin accused KRZZ of broadcasting poorly recorded bootleg copies of four songs from the album, due out July 12, and asked that the radio station keep the material off the air, company spokesman Eliot Sekuler said Monday.

The station's program manager, Michael Lee, said he was airing songs from a compact disc that arrived with a note reading, "Have fun and enjoy." The quality of the recordings is fine, he said.

Lee wouldn't say whether the station will stop playing the songs.

Sekuler said the CD had to be a bootleg because real CDs of the album won't come out of a plant until the beginning of July.

NEW YORK — New York City's first lady, Donna Hanover Giuliani, spent Tuesday without Rudy. Willie and Dolly and Travis were with her instead.

Mrs. Giuliani made her debut as a morning radio host on country station WYNY-FM. She's filling in for a vacationing disk jockey through Friday.

"I grew up in a family that loved country music," she said. "It's lively and spirited, and tells very human stories."

She is also anchorwoman of a program on cable's Television Food Network.

BRANTFORD, Ontario — Wayne Gretzky has signed multimillion-dollar contracts, married starlet Janet Jones, traveled the world and met heads of state. But he was still impressed by a show of affection from his hometown.

"I'm a little bit overwhelmed," the hockey star said Sunday as Mayor Bob Taylor presented Gretzky and his parents with keys to the city before a crowd of about 800 people.

"I know you're the mayor, but I'll always look at you and see the principal of my public school," Gretzky told Taylor. "When people ask me where I'm from, I still say Brantford, Ontario."

PHELPS, Ky. — Ricky Skaggs left the rugged mountains of eastern Kentucky to make his way in the world of country music.

He came back home Monday to help the folks who stayed behind.

"It breaks my heart in 1994 to see kids grow up in the land of milk and honey ..., turned into a land of mink and money," Skaggs said, choking back tears.

Skaggs helped Oklahoma City-based Feed The Children unload a tractor-trailer packed with 38,000 pounds of food ranging from kidney beans to cereal to nachos.

"This is a wasteful nation, a sinful nation," said Skaggs.

NEW YORK — You never know quite what to expect from former President Jimmy Carter. Hard on the heels of his trip to North Korea comes news that he is joining the ranks of poets.

Times Books is to announce that it is publishing "Always a Reckoning," a collection of poetry by Carter.

The book, Carter's ninth, is due before Christmas and will contain 45 poems, said Peter Osnos, the publisher of Times Books.

"He shares his private memories of childhood, family and political life," Osnos said. "His subjects also include his feelings about such issues as homelessness. They are emotional without being tremulous."

Sarah Elizabeth Chuldenko, Carter's 17-year-old step-granddaughter, is to illustrate the book.

Americans finally catch World Cup soccer fever

By Peter Larsen
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The precious ticket in hand, Luis Gonzalez smiled happily outside the Rose Bowl moments before the U.S. soccer team took the field to play Romania in World Cup in Pasadena.

"I saw them (the U.S. team) win against Colombia on Wednesday and decided to come here today," explained Gonzalez of the community of Lawndale on Sunday. "And I just now got this ticket for only $10 above its face value."

For one glorious day the World Cup was the hottest ticket in town.

The upset victory by the United States over Colombia last week jump started the World Cup bandwagon and fueled the fever that Sunday turned the Rose Bowl into a cheering sea of red, white and blue.

Even the 1-0 loss Sunday to the Romanian team failed to dampen the spirits of many of the 93,869 fans who filled the stadium.

"I hate to see them lose, but they did the best they could," said Mario Casillas, who came to the game from Fresno with his father, Ray Casillas. "They put on a good show."

And most people weren't expecting the U.S. to get out of the first round, so it's already a big success for the team," Casillas said.

While the win over Colombia had provided a boost for the international reputation of the U.S. team, for the fans, that victory provided a taste of success that might help popularize big-time soccer in America.

"The whole world is involved with this," said Mario Flores of suburban Glendale, a native of El Salvador. "We grew up with soccer, ever since we were born. For us it's like football for kids born in the United States.

"But I think soccer's going to be happening here now, because of the World Cup, and because of the U.S. team making it to the finals."

Cheering the U.S. squad into the finals may be wishful thinking by Flores, but Sunday the stadium, had the look and feel of a major event — a Super Bowl or a Rose Bowl game on New Year's Day.

BOXER OSCAR de la Hoya, winner of a gold medal in the 1992 Olympics and undefeated in his professional career, said the World Cup ranks with the best of the biggest events.

De la Hoya said he always played goalie in the neighborhood soccer matches as he grew up in East Los Angeles. "That's why my hands are so good," he said with a grin.

He added, though, that he never regretted giving up the camaraderie of the soccer team for the loneliness of the pugilist.

"No way. Soccer's harder than boxing," he said.

Inside the stadium, the cheers began as soon as the U.S. players appeared on the field and continued through their introduction.

Flags were waved excitedly as fans chanted "USA" over and over again.

As the game began the stadium roared when a U.S. player bounced a shot off the goal post, narrowly missing a score.

When a Romanian player fell to the ground, apparently injured, the stadium grew silent.

When that same player rushed back into the game, apparently injured only as long as it took his teammates to catch their breaths, the crowd booed good-naturedly.

Before the game, outside the stadium, both official and impromptu vendors did booming business.

May fans purchased T-shirts or small plastic American flags to wave during the game. Others stopped to quench their thirsts at unofficial water vendors who carried hand-made signs that claimed, "Inside it's $4. Buy water here for $3."

The World Cup also is popular enough to attract a small congregation of apocalyptic street preachers.

"After the game don't forget to read your Bible," one man advised. "Heaven or Hell when you die, people. It's kind of important."

A short distance away, ticket scalpers conducted their business with little regard for its moral implications.

"I can put you right behind the U.S. bench in Row A," one salesman offered. "Only 125 bucks."

It was not an attractive offer for Jacob Segal, a Romanian-born U.S. citizen who hoped to buy five seats together at face value.

"It's very important for soccer in the U.S. that the U.S. win," said Segal, who coaches youth soccer near his home in the coastal city of Santa Monica. "Romanians, they play soccer already, so it's more important for the U.S. to win."

WHILE SEGAL expressed the hope that his adopted country win over the country of his birth, most of the small clusters of Romanian supporters at the game said that despite all the many things they love about living in the United States, their allegiance on the soccer field remains Romanian.

"I'm an American citizen, but still Romanian at heart," said Virgil Cuculiscu of St. Petersburg, Fla., who walked happily out of the Rose Bowl after the game, draped in the yellow, blue and red colors of the Romanian flag.

"I'm happy for Romania because blood is thicker than water and I never forget my roots, where I come from," Cuculiscu, who emigrated 20 years ago from the Transylvanian city of Cluj. "But I'm also happy to be here today for American, which is the best place to immigrate to."

Before the game started a group of about 20 Romanian natives from Northern California's San Jose and Hayward held a tailgate party in the parking areas organized on the fairways of the Brookside Golf Course, that surrounds the stadium.

"We are cooking Romanian sausage, which is garlic sausage," said Peter Vancea of San Jose. "You know, some of us are from Transylvania, so it's important we eat lots of garlic."

Vancea attended the game with five brothers, all of whom had followed him to the United States, along with their parents and three other siblings from their home town of Tirgu-Jui.

For Vancea's group, discussion of the game was almost secondary to that of the politics of its homeland.

"It's a great feeling for us to be here and watch our team playing outside of the country as free men," said Cornel Vancea of San Jose.

"BUT THEY are not free enough," said Peter Vancea. "We brought a big banner with us that says, 'Down with Iliescu,' who is the president of Romania and still a Communist.

"Regardless of the fact that we live here and are U.S. citizens, we want to show that we still care about our country. We want to put a political touch to the soccer.

"After the last game, we almost got into a fight with some government people over our banner, but this is the United States — we've got freedom of speech."

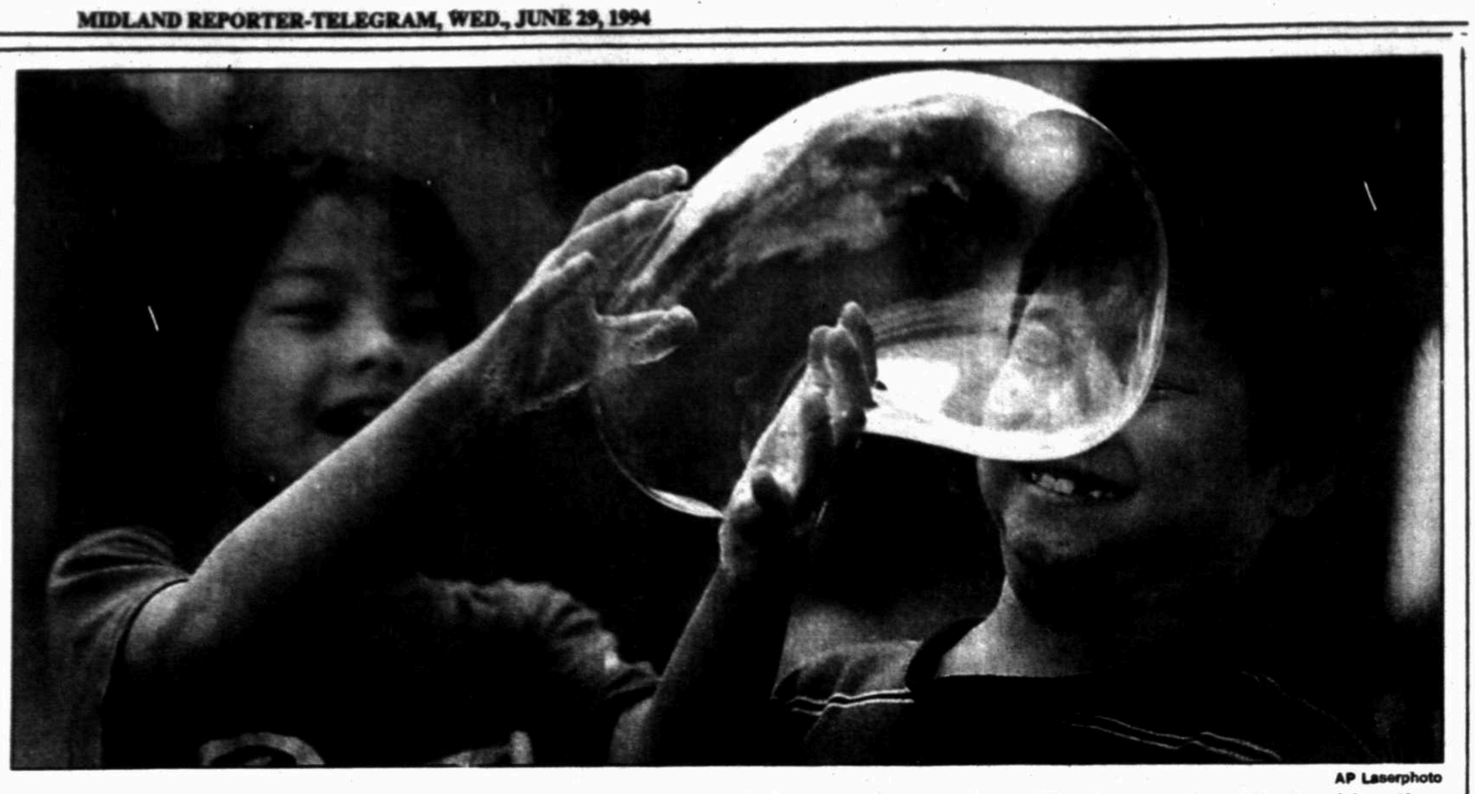

A few fairways away from the Vancea brothers, Irma de Santiago of Santa Ana and Phyllis Holl of Irvine, both in neighboring Orange County, hurried from their car toward the stadium.

For de Santiago, the current World Cup continues her love affair with the tournament that started in 1970.

When she was 5 years old, her grandfather took her to Azteca Stadium in Mexico City to watch the World Cup championship between Brazil and Italy.

"It was a little scary and I was overwhelmed, but it was fun," de Santiago said. "This is just the most wonderful sport and wonderful event there is.

"I'm hoping that it will get more popular. I was kind of disappointed, actually, that it took a win on Wednesday to build support.

New museum to give human biology same punch as dinosaurs

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Touch a real brain — yes real, not a model. Measure the skeleton of a fetus. Perform surgery with the same computer simulator medical students use.

It's all part of the newest museum planned for the capital's Mall — the National Museum of Health and Medicine, a place where human biology will get the same punch that the Smithsonian gives to dinosaurs and rockets.

"We are a museum about the human body on a human scale," said museum officer Libby Videnieks. "We don't say, 'Here's a picture of a smoker's lung.' It's there, the smoker's lung next to the non-smoker's lung, the healthy brain next to the Alzheimer's brain.

"It's not a morbid thing, it's a learning tool."

The National Museum of Health and Medicine already exists, but most of its unique artifacts are hidden in a cramped Army building in north Washington, out of sight and out of mind of the 25 million tourists who come here each year.

That's about to change.

The museum plans to move onto the Mall by 1999, where it will teach visitors to take charge of their health and translate medical advances into their everyday lives.

"We haven't had a great national museum doing the kinds of work in health that great museums like the Smithsonian do in earth sciences," said museum director Dr. Marc Micozzi.

Americans want to learn about medicine and they want it to be fun, said Bonnie VanDorn of the Association of Science-Technology Centers.

Beltone introduces amazing new hidden hearing aid.

Chicago, IL —Beltone Electronics Corporation has developed an exciting new hearing aid called Invisa (pronounced In-VEE-za). Now the joy of better hearing comes in the tiniest aid Beltone makes. Invisa, is called the "hidden hearing aid" because its incredibly small size allows it to hide deeply, yet comfortably inside your ear canal. Out of sight and out of mind.

Invisa is also available with a selection of faceplate colors designed to match the shadow of your ear canal. This natural camouflage can make it virtually impossible for anyone to see Invisa once it's in place.

Want more? Invisa also gives you the luxury of totally hands-free operation. Your Beltone specialist will pre-select a volume setting that's right for you, so you'll never have to mess with a volume control.

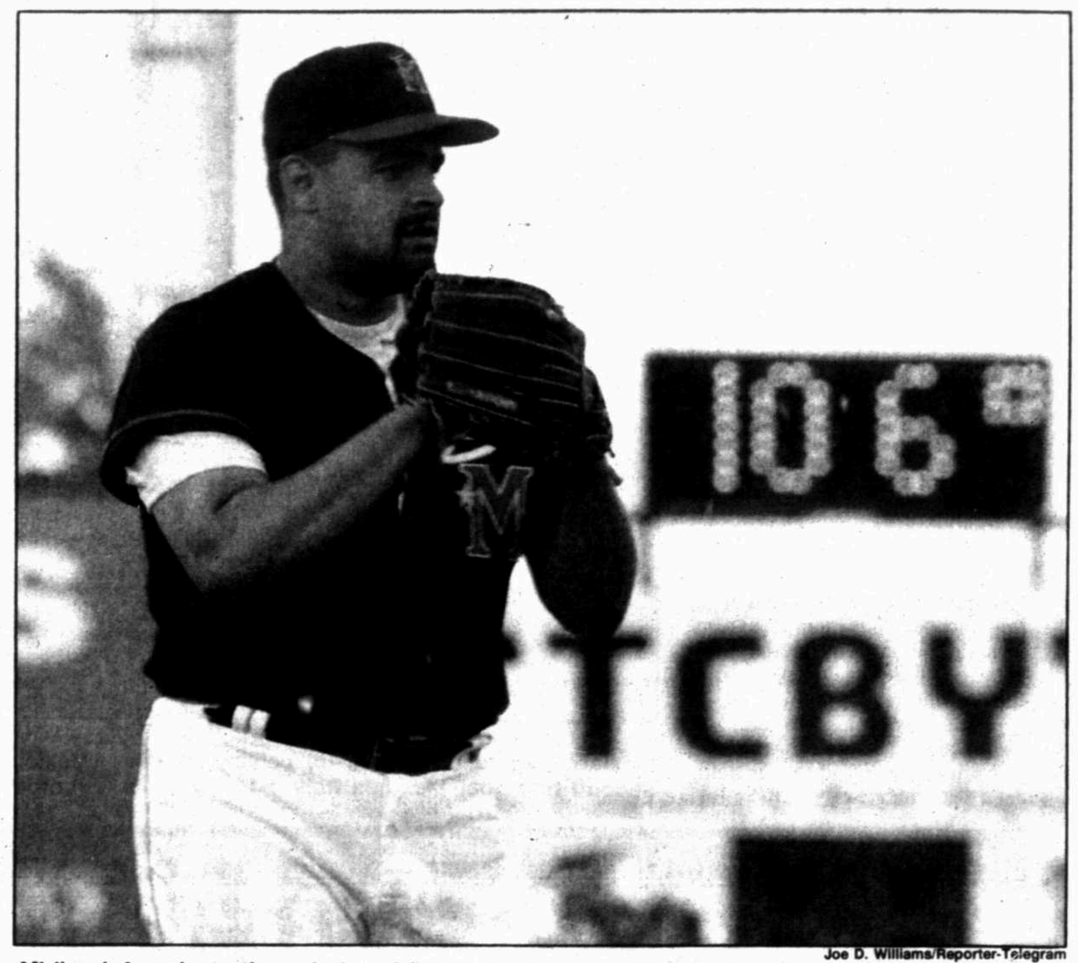

Of course, the Invisa hearing aid is not appropriate for everyone. The benefits of hearing aids vary by type and degree of hearing loss, noise environment, accuracy of hearing evaluation and proper fit. That's why we feel a personal evaluation is necessary to determine if the Invisa is right for you. So call Beltone today.

Only Beltone offers both Invisa and BelCare™, a commitment to customer satisfaction unmatched in the hearing aid industry.

Harkrider rescues Angels

Midland Angel starting pitcher Julio Valera works against the Wichita Wranglers Tuesday at Christensen Stadium. The Angels won 9-8 in 13 innings.

Tim Harkrider had a season's worth of heroics at the plate Tuesday. And because of it, the Midland Angels beat Wichita 9-8 in 13 innings and are still in the early second half race for first in the Texas League West.

Angel shortstop Harkrider had gone 0-for-4 in this long and strange game before he came to bat in the bottom of the ninth. He got three hits in his next three at bats, the first two keeping the Angels alive and the last with the bases loaded winning the game in the last of the 13th.

"It wasn't real emotional in the dugout but I think people were concentrating," said Angel first baseman Chris Pritchett, who singled to open the 13th and scored the winning run. "It was more like on a professional level, just doing your job."

Harkrider did more than his job. The 22-year old had a two-out, three-RBI triple in the ninth to tie the game at 8-8. He had a two-out single in the bottom of the eleventh to tie the score again, 8-8, and keep Midland with the possibility for a win.

The game included eight wild pitches, 110 degree heat and a short rain shower.

"I'd be lying if I said the heat didn't bother us," said Pritchett. "(But) I was real impressed with the way we hung in."

Midland (4-4) played before the smallest crowd of the year, 1,849. And it wasn't over until four hours and four minutes had gone by. But the win kept the Angles from falling below .500, further behing West leading Wichita (5-3).

Midland held a 4-2 lead into the sixth inning. That's when starter Julio Valera faltered. With two outs he gave up back-to-back home runs on three pitches to even the score to 4-4.

Wichita then got three runs in the ninth, largely due to the wildness of reliever Juilan Heredia. The right-hander threw two of his four wild pitches and catcher Jose Monzon had two passed balls. That and an error let the Wranglers take a 7-4 lead with only one hit in the frame.

But the Angels almost made up for their sloppy play in the ninth with a three-run rally. Pritchett singled to right and Mike Wolff did the same. Chris Smith then beat out a grounder to loac

The Doc is out

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets was suspended for 60 days by Major League Baseball Tuesday for violating his drug aftercare program.

Gooden, who missed a month of the 1987 season to undergo treatment for cocaine use, recently returned to the Mets after being out with a toe injury.

The 29-year-old right-hander had the worst outing of his career on Friday night, allowing nine runs in 5 1-3 innings in a 9-4 loss to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Gooden, with a $3.7 million salary this season, was suspended without pay.

"Dealing with this sort of problem is one of the toughest parts of the game," Bud Selig, chairman of the Major League Executive Council, said in a statement. "I hope Dwight uses this time productively and can return to the game healthy and ready to play."

As part of his rehabilitation program in 1987, Gooden agreed to submit to random drug testing.

Gooden was 3-4 with a 6.31 earned run average in 41 1-3 innings this season after losing seasons the past two years. He was 10-13 in '92 and 12-15 in '93.

In 1985, Gooden had his best season, finishing 24-4 with a 1.53 ERA and 268 strikeouts.

Maxwell wanted

SAN ANTONIO — A county court-at-law judge issued an arrest warrant Tuesday for Houston Rockets guard Vernon Maxwell stemming from a fight at a San Antonio nightclub.

Judge Timothy Johnson issued the warrant for Maxwell after he allegedly failed to respond to a summons on a charge of assault causing bodily injury resulting from a nightclub altercation March 8 after a game between the Rockets and the San Antonio Spurs.

Maxwell was accused of hitting another patron with a bottle. The charge against Maxwell was filed later.

Maxwell could not be reached for comment Tuesday through the Houston Rockets. His attorney, Jeffrey Newport, did not immediately return a telephone call Tuesday evening from The Associated Press.

The San Antonio warrant marks the fourth time in the past two years the guard for the NBA champion Rockets has had a run-in with the law.

A Houston judge fined Maxwell $1,500 on March 24 after he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of illegally carrying a gun in his car.

U.S. earns first second round berth

By Barry Wilner

Thank you, Mexico and Italy. Way to go, Ireland and Norway.

The U.S. soccer team and the World Cup itself owes you their gratitude.

The waiting game ended for the Americans Tuesday as they watched television. Mexico tied Italy 1-1 and Ireland played a 0-0 tie with Norway. That gave the Group E title to the Mexicans and placed Ireland second.

STANFORD, Calif. — There have been 1,528 goals scored in the World Cup since the tournament began in 1930.

But nobody, not even the great Pele, ever had a day like the one enjoyed by Oleg Salenko.

The Russian striker, a reserve player before the tournament and a member of his national team for just the last seven months, put on the greatest scoring display in World Cup history.

Salenko scored a record five goals Tuesday as Russia routed Cameroon 6-1 and retained a mathematical chance to advance to the second round.

"I think most important was the result of the game, and only then how many goals I scored," he said through an intrepreter. "Of course, I'm happy I scored this amount of goals. It's kind of a day in my life, but it can be the day in

Barkley decides to play

By Walter Berry
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley, who frequently hinted at retirement while leading his team to the NBA playoffs, said Tuesday he'll return for another shot at the championship despite a back injury.

Barkley

Barkley, not know for his diligence in the off-season or in the training room, said he was committed to a rigorous course of therapy his doctors say he must undergo to strengthen his back. Retiring now, Barkley told a news conference at the America West Arena, would be the "lazy" way out.

"I never backed down from a challenge and for me to let it all end just because I didn't want to work out, I didn't think that was right," Barkley said.

■ Draft preview/6C

Barkley has made frequently contradictory predictions about retiring since coming to Phoenix from Philadelphia two seasons ago, and had said the back problem could well end his career.

The Suns had been pressing Barkley to make a decision Wednesday's NBA draft.

Martina marches into semis; Becker outlasts Medvedev

Martina Navratilova stunned Jana Novatna Tuesday to advance to the women's semifinals Tuesday.

■ Three Americans reach the women's semifinals on Thursday.

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Martina Navratilova, pursuing a 10th title in her 22nd and final Wimbledon appearance, stormed back after losing the first set Tuesday to beat Jana Novotna and reach the semifinals.

The fourth-seeded Navratilova ran off nine straight games after the first set en route to a 5-7, 6-0, 6-1 victory over No. 5 Novotna, the woman who beat her in straight sets in the semifinals last year.

Unseeded Lori McNeil and Gigi Fernandez also advanced, but the possibility of four Americans reaching the semifinals was thwarted when Lindsay Davenport lost in three sets to Spain's Conchita Martinez.

The 18-year-old Davenport saved a match point at 2-5 in the second set and won a tiebreaker to force a third set, but the third-seeded Martinez regained command to complete a 6-2, 6-7 (7-4), 6-3 victory.

On the hottest day of the tournament, with temperatures reaching 105 degrees on Centre Court, McNeil reached the semifinals for the first time by beating Larisa Neiland 6-3, 6-4.

Fernandez, known more as a doubles specialist, overcame a thigh injury to beat Zina Garrison Jackson 6-4, 6-4. Fernandez had her left thigh strapped by a trainer near the end of the second set and, although she was clearly in pain, managed to close out the match.

In Thursday's semifinals, Navratilova will play Fernandez and Martinez will face McNeil.

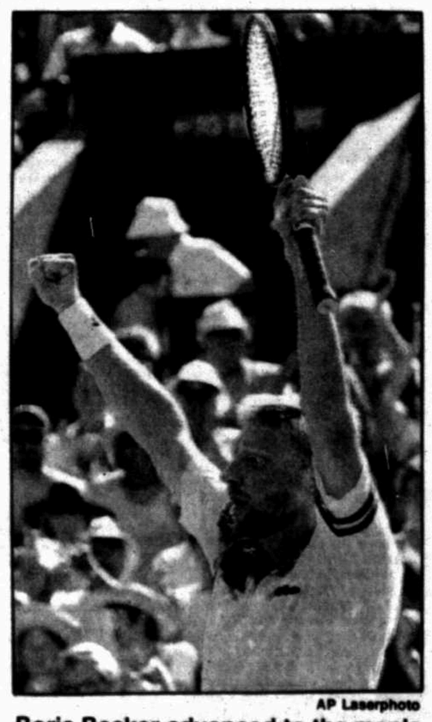

In men's play, three-time champion Boris Becker reached the quarterfinals by winning the fifth set of a suspended match against Andrei Medvedev.

Novotna seemed in command after she saved a set point in the ninth game of the first set with an ace, broke Navratilova for a 6-5 lead and then served out the set in the next game.

But the 37-year-old Navratilova dominated the rest of the way — serving and volleying with authority, hitting superb serve returns and keeping the charging Novotna at bay with passing shots.

the life of any soccer player. I don't really feel special. Maybe that will come later."

Dmitry Radchenko had Russia's other goal in the 82nd minute, set up by a pass from Salenko.

Nine other players in World Cup history scored four goals in a game, the last being Emilio Butragueno of Spain in 1986.

Salenko, who plays for Valencia in the Spanish League, joined the team in November as an expected backup to Sergei Yuran. He also had a goal in Russia's second game of the tournament, a 3-1 loss to Sweden. His six goals makes him the tournament's top scorer.

"Our players really played hard today. They showed what they can do," Russian defender and captain Viktor Onopko said. "Of course, we didn't plan to score a lot of goals. But we did what we did."

The victory was a stunning turnaround for Russia, which shook off the effects of a player rebellion and dissatisfaction with its coach.

"Judging by the results, you can tell the players were determined to win," said beseiged Russian coach Pavel Sadyrin, reported to be on the verge of quitting this week. "We're hoping that we'll be one of the teams that qualifies for the next round."

Roger Milla, 42, the hero of Cameroon's quarterfinal finish in 1990, became the oldest player to score in the World Cup. But it was hardly enough to save Cameroon from elimination.

Milla came in as a substitute to start the second half and scored in the 47th minute when he picked up a pass, dribbled through a cluster of Russian defenders and delivered a kick from just outside the penalty box that shot past goalkeeper Stanislav Cherchesov.

The Russians have been playing without four of their top players, who disliked what they called Sadyrin's authoritarian style. When the Russian federation refused their demand to fire the coach, the players decided to stay home.

"They might have been useful but I forgot about them," said Sadyrin, who used different lineups in each of the three games, including four new starters for the Cameroon game.

one of the four best third-place records in the tournament. The Americans finished Sunday with four points and a 1-1-1 record in Group A. Because the United States scored three goals, while Ireland and Italy had only two — and all three had 0 goal differentials — the hosts moved on.

So did Mexico, which won Group E with a plus-1 goal differential as all four teams finished with four points. Ireland, which like Italy scored two goals and allowed two, got second place because it beat Italy. The Italians wound up third and must await other results to see if they advance. Norway was eliminated.

"We were able to muster the class and courage for the win," said Marcelino Bernal, who scored for Mexico.

The United States had moved closer to advancing when Germany eliminated South Korea and Spain took out Bolivia on Monday. The Americans will play either Brazil or Sweden at Stanford on July 4.

The Germans hobbled off the field Monday, looking like losers. They spent forever in the showers, then went for massages. They didn't feel much like talking.

These were the world champion Germans, who had just squeezed into the second round of the World Cup?

Yep. It might have seemed more like torture than triumph, but the Germans survived the searing heat in Dallas and the second-half charge of the South Koreans to win 3-2. That victory gave them first place in Group C.

It also gave them relief, lots of relief.

"I don't forsee any problems," said Juergen Klinsmann, whose two goals helped Germany to a 3-0 lead in the first 37 minutes. "The only problems we've had were the last 30 minutes against Spain and the last 30 minutes against Korea.

"Even though the team is older, we've got more experience. Now that we go into the knockout system, I don't forsee any problems. Now we feel it's high time to play."

The 100-plus temperatures were too high for the Germans and seemed to suit the Koreans, who dominated the second half. Klinsmann sought an explanation of just why the champions were forced to play all three first-rounders in the middle of the day.

"I have one question to ask: Why is it that we have to play at 3 p.m?" he said. Then he answered his own question. "In the afternoon heat for European TV."

They wilted in that heat and had to rely on goalie Bodo Illgner to make three sparkling saves in the final minutes.

In the other game Monday, Spain sent Bolivia home with a 3-1 decision, giving the Spanish second place in the group.

The U.S. players were upset that the U.S. Soccer Federation misinterpreted the rules concerning yellow cards in the first round. The USSF failed to tell players that two yellow cards in separate first-round games would result in a one-game suspension. John Harkes would miss the second round because of that rule.

"It's embarrassing, actually, to tell you the truth," defender Alexi Lalas said. "It's the rules of the game. It doesn't matter what your experience is or how many World Cups you played in, at the very least you should know the rules of the tournament you're in, and we didn't."

At Chicago on Monday, Bolivia got its first World Cup goal, by Erwin Sanchez. It wasn't nearly enough as Jose Luis Caminero connected twice and Spain also got a goal on a penalty kick by Josep Guardiola.

Caminero will be suspended for the second-round game against Switzerland at Washington after getting his second yellow card of the opening round.

"Time was almost up and," he said, "at that stage of the game, you are unsure of all that is going on. I lost control."

LL all-stars win opener

ODESSA — The nine and ten-year-old Mid City Little League all-star team scored seven runs in the first inning on their way to a 15-7 win over North Ector Monday in the District 3 Little League Tournament.

Michael Smith had a three-run double in the first and Colby Overstreet a two-run home run in the third to make the score 12-1. Cole White got the win for Mid City with Overstreet getting a save.

Carpenter wins Gaines Co. Pro-Am

SEMINOLE — Chris Carpenter of The Club at Mission Dorado won the pro division of last weekend's 23rd Gaines County Pro-Am. Carpenter edged Terry Dear of Lubbock's Lakeridge Country Club with a 204 three-round total. Dear shot a 207.

Results from the amateur division of last weekend's Gaines County Pro-Am golf tournament played at the Gaines County Golf Club.

Fernando wins in Philly debut, 2-1

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Fernando Valenzuela pitched six strong innings in his return to the major leagues, but the Florida Marlins spoiled his night, beating the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 on Jerry Browne's sacrifice fly in the ninth inning.

Valenzuela, who was 10-3 with Jalisco of the Mexican League before signing with the Phillies last Friday, allowed six hits and one unearned run. He struck out one, walked two and went 1-for-2 with a crowd-pleasing double.

Pinch-hitter Matias Carrillo doubled to open the Marlins' ninth, went to third on Chuck Carr's sacrifice and scored on Browne's fly ball.

Jeff Mutis (1-0) pitched 1 2-3 innings, striking out two and allowing one, and Robb Nen pitched the ninth for his seventh save, striking out Mickey Morandini with Kevin Stocker on third to end the game.

Cardinals 8, Mets 6

NEW YORK — Ozzie Smith broke a tie with a two-out RBI double in the seventh inning and St. Louis added four runs in the eighth to beat a reeling New York.

The Mets, stung earlier in the day when pitcher Dwight Gooden was suspended for 60 days by major league baseball for violating his drug aftercare program, lost their fifth straight and for the seventh time in eight games.

Bob Tewksbury (9-7) snapped his losing streak at six. He went six innings, allowing three runs and six hits while striking out three and walking none.

Doubles by Jeff Kent and Jim Lindeman tied it in the bottom of the inning, and the Mets moved in front with an unearned run in the third.

Remlinger reached when Whiten dropped his fly ball to right, took third on Todd Hundley's double and came home on a sacrifice fly by Joe Orsulak.

Consecutive doubles by Brogna and Lindeman in the fourth made it 3-1.

Dodgers 7, Giants 4

LOS ANGELES — Matt Williams tied Willie Stargell's NL record for most home runs before July with his 28th, but Mike Piazza homered for the fourth straight game to lead Los Angeles to a victory over San Francisco.

Orel Hershiser (4-4) ended his four-game losing streak despite giving up four solo homers to the major's worst-hitting team with men in scoring position. Todd Benzinger hit two and Barry Bonds had the other as the Giants tied a season-high with the four homers.

Rockies 10, Padres 9
Padres 11, Rockies 3, 11 innings

DENVER — San Diego salvaged a split of their doubleheader against Colorado, winning the nightcap 11-3 in 11 innings after they blew an 8-0 lead and lost, 10-9, in the opener.

■ NL Roundup

Melvin Nieves hit a pinch RBI single and Tony Gwynn a two-run single in the Padres' five-run 11th. A wild pitch and hit batsmen allowed two more runs, and three more came home when pitcher Darren Holmes and shortstop Walt Weiss made errors on Brad Ausmus' bases-loaded bouncer up the middle.

San Diego's nine runs were the most ever in the 11th inning of an NL game.

Trevor Hoffman (3-3) pitched two innings to win the second game, which was extended when both teams scored in the 10th inning. Greg Harris (3-9) lost.

The nightcap, though, had a hard act to follow after the opener. That ended on Dante Bichette's bases-loaded infield single in the eighth inning, which capped the Rockies' biggest comeback ever.

Pirates 6, Cubs 5

CHICAGO — Brian Hunter hit his first career grand slam and Don Slaught also homered in leading the Pirates to a win over the Cubs.

Hunter's two-out base-loaded homer deep to center capped a five-run third and gave the Pirates a 5-1 lead. Hunter's ninth homer of the season came on an 0-1 pitch from starter Mike Morgan (1-8) and scored Carlos Garcia, Jay Bell and Dave Clark. Slaught had led off the inning with his second homer of the season.

Expos 8, Braves 7

MONTREAL (AP) — Wil Cordero's RBI single finished a two-run rally in the ninth inning and gave Montreal a victory over Atlanta.

Rondell White opened the ninth against Steve Bedrosian (0-1) with a single. After Moises Alou walked, Larry Walker singled for one run, and Cordero followed with his single, Montreal's 16th hit, to score the game-winner.

Walker had four hits in his first game back from a four-game suspension.

Montreal pulled within a half-game of the Braves in the NL East.

Ryan Klesko had given the Braves a 7-6 lead in the top of the inning with a pinch-hit home run, his 14th, off eventual winning pitcher Mel Rojas (3-2).

Reds 5, Astros 3

HOUSTON — Reggie Sanders had a home run and two doubles and Bret Boone added two hits and two RBIs to lead Cincinnati to a victory over Houston.

The Reds, who lead the NL Central by 3½ games, have won eight of their last 10 games, while Houston has lost five of seven.

John Smiley (7-8) recorded his fourth straight victory, allowing three runs on nine hits over 6 1-3 innings. Jeff Brantley got the final three outs for his eighth save.

The Angels will start Dom Johnson tonight against Wichita's Glenn Dishman.

ANGEL DUST: Pitcher Pete Janicki's struggles earned him a demotion to Single-A Lake Elsinore. Janicki was hit hard in his last two starts, giving up eight hits and seven runs at Wichita and facing eight batters at El Paso without recording an out and allowing seven runs.

Rangers use long ball to beat Twins

■ Home runs from Rusty Greer and Juan Gonzalez give Texas a 10-6 win.

MINNEAPOLIS — Jose Canseco had a tie-breaking single and Rusty Greer hit a three-run homer in a seventh-inning rally that gave the Texas Rangers a 10-6 victory Tuesday night over the Minnesota Twins.

Rookie right-hander Hector Fajardo (3-4) broke a personal three-game losing streak with the victory, allowing seven hits and six runs in 6 1-3 innings. Tom Henke got the final four outs for his fifth save.

The seventh inning began with the score tied 5-5, but Dave Stevens (2-2) walked the first two Texas hitters. Carl Willis relieved and gave up Canseco's tie-breaking line single to right, and Greer's homer, which barely cleared the fence in right, broke the game open.

Juan Gonzalez also homered for the Rangers, who are in first place in the AL West despite being six games under .500.

Indians 9, Orioles 8

CLEVELAND — Albert Belle hit Cleveland's fourth home run of the game with one out in the ninth inning as the Indians beat Baltimore.

Baltimore had its four-game winning streak snapped. The Indians had lost their previous three at Jacobs Field following their team-record 18-game home winning streak.

Belle, who had three hits, drove an 0-1 pitch from Alan Mills (2-3) into the stands in right center for his 21st home run. Manny Ramirez, Candy Maldonado and Alvaro Espinoza also homered for the Indians.

Rafael Palmeiro had three hits for Baltimore, including a pair of RBI doubles, and Cal Ripken Jr. had three hits and three RBIs.

Royals 4, White Sox 3

CHICAGO — David Cone won his 11th game of the season as Kansas City survived a bases-loaded threat in the ninth inning and beat the White Sox.

Mike Macfarlane had two RBIs for the Royals, who scored just one run in Cone's two previous attempts at victory No. 11. Cone (11-4) gave up eight hits over 6 2-3 innings, walking two and striking out three.

The White Sox trailed 4-2 entering the bottom of the ninth before Tim Raines had an RBI single and Chicago loaded the bases. Jeff Montgomery got his 13th save by getting Julio Franco on a grounder to first to end the game.

Wilson Alvarez (9-3) took the loss, scattering six hits over eight innings, walking one and striking out five.

Yankees 10, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — Daryl Boston had three RBIs and New York scored 10 unanswered runs in its seventh straight win, a victory over Boston that gave the Red Sox their longest home losing streak in 68 years.

Melido Perez (6-3) pitched eight innings to win his third straight game, settling down after allowing four early runs. The Yankees scored three unearned runs in the third and four runs in the fourth to overcome the 4-0 deficit.

The Red Sox have lost 11 straight at home, their second-longest skid since the team moved to Fenway Park in 1912. Boston lost 14 straight home games in 1926.

John Valentin and Damon Berryhill homered for Boston.

Red Sox manager Butch Hobson was ejected in the seventh inning after Boston pitcher Sergio Valdez was warned for throwing a pitch behind the back of New York's Jim Leyritz. Hobson shoved umpire Larry Barnett three times after being ejected by home plate umpire Greg Kosc.

Mariners 6, Tigers 4

SEATTLE - Edgar Martinez hit a two-run home run and added an RBI single helping Seattle end a five-game losing streak with a victory over Detroit.

Bill Risley (6-4) worked 1 2-3 innings for the win. Bobby Ayala pitched 1 1-3 innings for his 10th save.

John Doherty (6-6) took the loss, pitching 6 2-3 innings, allowing 12 hits, six runs, walking none and striking out none.

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 4

MILWAUKEE — Greg Vaughn and Dave Nilsson broke open a close game with back-to-back homers as Milwaukee sent Toronto to its 10th straight loss.

John Jaha added a solo homer off Tony Castillo in the eighth to give the Brewers a 6-4 lead.

Reliever Jose Mercedes (1-0) picked up his first major league victory, allowing one run on one hit and four walks in 2 2-3 innings. Mike Fetters got the final three outs for his eighth save.

Athletics 3, Angels 0

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bobby Witt pitched a two-hitter for his second straight shutout as Oakland won its sixth straight game.

Witt (6-7), who pitched a one-hitter against Kansas City in his last start, has not allowed a run to the Angels in 15 innings this season.

WIMBLEDON: Martina moves into semifinals

(From 1C)

before Novotna finally held serve for 3-1. Novotna had four break points in the next game, but Navratilova saved each one and held.

"That was huge," Navratilova said. "We could still be out there if I hadn't won that game."

On match point, Navratilova won in typical fashion — following her serve to net, punching a forehand volley, then ending the contest with a backhand volley into the corner.

"She started to return so well there was nothing I could do," Novotna said. "She was just playing really, really well, much better than she did against me last year ... Martina believes more in herself than last year. I'm sure she can (win the title)."

It's the 17th time in her career that Navratilova has reached the Wimbledon semifinals. After her victory, British bookmakers installed her as the 10-11 favorite for the title.

Navratilova compared her run here to the U.S. Open in 1991, when Jimmy Connors reached the semifinals at the age of 39 and she got to the final.

"Here it is three years later and I'm still running for it," she said. "It's pretty amazing. It's fun to be in the middle of it. I'm loving it."

Asked whether she felt as though she were in a dream, Navratilova said, "This is reality, not a dream. I'm living it."

McNeil, playing a classic serve-and-volley game, reached the semifinals of a Grand Slam tournament for only the second time in her career. She got to the semis at the U.S. Open in 1987.

"I'm not surprised," said the 30-year-old Houston native, who upset top-seeded Steffi Graf in the first round. "I fought very hard. It's a great feeling. It represents a lot of hard work for me."

Five of the women's quarterfinalist were from the United States: Navratilova, Davenport, McNeil, Garrison Jackson and Fernandez. That's the best U.S. showing since 1985, when six Americans made it to the quarters. Except for Davenport, the Americans are all in their 30s.

It's the first time in Wimbledon history that the top two women's seeds failed to reach the quarters. The 1981 U.S. Open was the last Grand Slam tournament where neither the No. 1 or No. 2 seed played in the final.

The men's quarterfinals are set for today: Pete Sampras vs. Michael Chang, Todd Martin vs. Wayne Ferreira; Goran Ivanisevic vs. Guy Forget; and Becker vs. Christian Bergstrom of Sweden.

The seventh-seeded Becker completed a 6-7 (7-5), 7-5, 7-6 (7-3), 6-7 (7-3), 7-5 victory over No. 9 Medvedev. The match had been suspended by darkness Monday night at 1-1 in the fifth set. Becker went down a break at 2-4, 0-30, but came back and broke for the match in the 12th game.

Robinson locks down top pick in mock draft

By John Hillyer
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — It's a dirty job, selecting the first round of the NBA draft, but somebody's got to do it. Actually, a lot of people do it, but rarely does it come out 100 percent accurate until the teams themselves do it.

Robinson

In some cases, events prove they would have been better off letting the papers pick for them. In some cases, but not many.

This year's draft will commence with the first selection today, with Indianapolis' Hoosier Dome serving as headquarters. That's where most of the hopefuls will gather, ready to don the proper cap for photo and TV opportunities as soon as they're selected.

Sometimes it's good to have another cap handy. A year ago, Chris Webber was a member of the Orlando Magic for a matter of minutes before the Warriors acquired him.

Those doing the selecting for each team — coaches, general managers, scouts, owners, etc. — will be sequestered in their home cities, exploring trade possibilities, arguing, talking to agents, making decisions. They then will relay their decisions to representatives in Indianapolis.

Barring trades, those decisions should go down approximately — very approximately — like this:

1. MILWAUKEE: Glenn Robinson, F, 6-8, 225, Purdue — The one pick about which there is no argument. The Bucks basically gave away Ken Norman, their small forward last season, to make room for him.

2. DALLAS: Jason Kidd, G, 6-4, 205, Cal — The Mavericks no doubt are wrestling with his off-court slippages, alleged as well as documented, but surely they won't pass up this talent?

3. DETROIT: Grant Hill, F-G, 6-8, 225, Duke — The only senior to make the top seven, and he's really, really ready. The Pistons have only two problems: signing him and finding another team for Sean Elliott.

4. MINNESOTA: Donyell Marshall, F, 6-9, 210, Connecticut — The Timberwolves need a center more than anything else, but at this level you take the best player available, and here he is.

5. WASHINGTON: Juwann Howard, F-C, 6-9, 250, Michigan — Tough but polished post-up scorer and defender who stood up huge in the NCAA Tournament. He's just what the Bullets need.

6. PHILADELPHIA: Sharone Wright, F-C, 6-11, 260, Clemson — Inconsistency has been his downside, but he should provide some authoritative help in the paint for skinny Shawn Bradley. Can shoot, block and rebound.

7. L.A. CLIPPERS: Lamond Murray, F, 6-7, 220, Cal — Bears' all-time scoring leader will be more than just a hometown (Pasadena before his family moved to Fremont) pick for the Clips, provided he doesn't let that uniform drag him down.

8. SACRAMENTO: Brian Grant, F, 6-9, 254, Xavier — The school that gave you Tyrone Hill now produces a player who can score as well as rebound. He "never makes a mistake and never takes a bad shot," according to LaSalle coach Speedy Morris.

9. BOSTON: Eric Montross, C, 7-0, 275, North Carolina — He's big and works hard and can score from the post. He's slow and cumbersome and has small hands. Bottom line: The Celtics need a center.

10. L.A. LAKERS: Eddie Jones, F-G, 6-6, 190, Temple — The Atlantic 10 Conference Player of the Year is an athletic type who can do it all: run, shoot, defend, rebound. Could help bring "Showtime" back.

11. SEATTLE (from Charlotte): Yinka Dare, C, 7-1, 265, George Washington — One of the draft's great mysteries is where he'll end up. He's raw and mechanical and his work habits are suspect. But look up "NBA body" in the encyclopedia, and there he'll be.

12. MIAMI: Khalid Reeves, G, 6-3, 207, Arizona — Another versatile type — he can handle it, drive it, shoot it — who took the Wildcats to the Final Four. Tough New York kid.

13. DENVER: Jalen Rose, G, 6-8, 210, Michigan — Webber's best buddy has no chance to be a teammate, and in fact may be gone before this pick. Leader of the Fab Five, he knows how to win.

14. NEW JERSEY: Wesley Person, G, 6-6, 195, Auburn — Chuck's little brother can fill it up and could be the perimeter threat the Nets have missed since Drazen Petrovic's death.

15. INDIANA: Carlos Rogers, F-C, 6-11, 220, Tennessee State — Active, athletic big man in the mold of the Warriors' Chris Gatling who can score, rebound and block shots.

16. WARRIORS: Eric Mobley, C, 6-11, 250, Pittsburgh — Best of the rest of the centers. Rebounder, shot-blocker, hard worker who showed up well at Phoenix Desert Classic. Not much offensively, but so what?

17. PORTLAND: Aaron McKie, G, 6-5, 209, Temple — A big guard in the best sense in that he not only scored (18.8 as a senior) but also rebounded (a team-leading 7.2) from that position.

18. MILWAUKEE (from Orlando): Jim McIlvaine, C, 7-1, 240, Marquette — The Bucks need interior defense, and he led the nation as senior, averaging 4.3. He doesn't just stand in the way of shooters, either — he goes after them.

19. DALLAS (from Warriors): Clifford Rozier, F-C, 6-9, 235, Louisville — He has size and skill, but his shooting range is suspect and his negative attitude may cause him to slide even beyond this pick.

20. PHILADELPHIA (from Utah): Eric Piatkowski, G-F, 6-7, 215, Nebraska — MVP at the Desert Classic scouting tournament in Phoenix. Outscored only by the immortal Dave Hoppen in Nebraska history.

21. CHICAGO: Greg Minor, G-F, 6-6, 210, Louisville — Another medium-sized swing type, he made all-tournament at both the postseason scouting events (Portsmouth and Phoenix) after being voted Metro Conference "Best Player in the Clutch" by his peers.

22. SAN ANTONIO: Charlie Ward, G, 6-2, 190, Florida State — You know him better as the Heisman Trophy winner, but as a pro he could make his mark as an NBA point guard after going undrafted by the NFL.

23. PHOENIX: Tony Dumas, G, 6-6, 190, Missouri-Kansas City — At 26.0 the nation's No.7 scorer. If the Valley of the Sun isn't big enough for two guys named Dumas, this one can stay and Richard can take a hike.

24. NEW YORK: Askia Jones, G, 6-5, 205, Kansas State — The Knicks' quest for a reliable young outside shooter continues, and maybe the son of former 76ers star Wali Jones will be the answer.

25. L.A. CLIPPERS (from Atlanta): Monty Williams, F, 6-8, 225, Notre Dame — A model citizen with a heart problem in his history, but with medical clearance he has played the last two seasons without incident. A scoring machine.

26. NEW YORK (from Houston via Atlanta): Dickey Simpkins, F, 6-9, 248, Providence — Averaged only 11.8 points and 6.3 rebounds as a senior, but then averaged 20 and 12.5 at Portsmouth and 17 and 10.3 at Phoenix to make all-tournament at those events.

27. ORLANDO (from Seattle via L.A. Clippers): Bill Curley, F, 6-9, 220, Boston College — All-Big East as a junior and a senior, leading the Eagles in scoring and rebounding all four years. Had 18 points and nine rebounds in NCAA upset of North Carolina.

Texas teams needs differ in draft

DALLAS (AP) — All three Texas teams enter today's NBA draft looking for different things.

The Dallas Mavericks need anything and everything. The San Antonio Spurs need one thing: a point guard. The Houston Rockets just hope for something.

Dallas has three picks among the first 28, giving the Mavericks a now-or-never chance to turn around the team that's been the worst in the league the last two years.

"It's very important," new player personnel director Keith Grant said. "When a team builds as we are, this should make us even better."

Grant and coach Dick Motta have a can't-miss pick at No. 2 and likely will take Jason Kidd despite his recent off-court problems and the rising stock of Grant Hill.

For Dallas, the thought of a 1-2-3 combination of Kidd and previous top choices Jim Jackson and Jamal Mashburn is too good to pass up.

The real key to this draft for the Mavs is at No. 19 and No. 28 where they must take either a big man — possibly Marquette's 7-foot-1 center Jim McIlvaine — or find guys who can be quality backups for many years.

San Antonio only has one pick at No. 22, which is fine because the Spurs may be only one player away from turning last year's first-round upset victim into next year's top title contender.

The lack of a point guard may have cost the jobs of coach John Lucas and longtime executive Bob Bass.

So now it's up to former assistant Gregg Popovich, the team's new vice president of basketball operations, to find the right person to bring the ball up the court and get it to scoring champion David Robinson.

An interesting choice to quarterback the Spurs' offense would be Florida State's Charlie Ward, the Heisman Trophy winner bypassed in the NFL draft. Other possibilities include B.J. Tyler of Texas, Tony Dumas of Missouri-Kansas City and Tony Tolbert of Detroit.

Then there's the NBA champion Rockets, who will have to take off their party hats and scour their ratings charts if they're going to add anyone to their roster.

Houston's only pick this year is No. 53 — the second-to-last of the draft.

The Rockets found starter Robert Horry and sparkplug Sam Cassell in the middle and latter part of the last two first rounds, but even finding anyone capable of making their 12-man roster is unlikely unless they trade up.

Pippen trade rumors abounds as draft arrives

CHICAGO (AP) — Is Michael coming back? Is Scottie on the trading block? And what about Horace, will he re-sign?

Rumors have been flying the last several days as the Chicago Bulls get ready for today's NBA draft.

Just a month after their three-year run as NBA champions ended, the Bulls may be in the process of dismantling and rebuilding for the future.

Both the Chicago Sun-Times and Chicago Tribune say Pippen, the team's best player who just completed a tumultuous first season as team leader after Michael Jordan's retirement, is being mentioned in trades.

One report says the Bulls are interested in Duke star Grant Hill and would be willing to swap Pippen to the Detroit Pistons for the third pick. Chicago is slated to pick 21st.

Yet another rumor says the Sacramento Kings could be interested in Pippen in exchange for guard Mitch Richmond and their No. 8 pick.

BARKLEY: Suns' star opts to keep playing

(From 1C)

NBA teams can begin negotiating with free agents on Friday.

If Barkley had retired, the Suns will have half of his salary slot — which is about $3.3 million — to lure a free agent.

Suns president Jerry Colangelo said the doctors have predicted Barkley can achieve his top level of play if he is diligent with the rehabilitation. Colangelo said he was sure Barkley would put in the necessary work.

"I don't think Charles Barkley has ever let anyone down when he's given his word," Colangelo said.

Barkley predicted the Suns — who made the playoffs two years straight — can again be contenders. Watching the Houston Rockets win the championship, Barkley said, convinced him the Suns can make it.

"If we'd have been healthy we could have played with them," he said.

Barkley, 31, collapsed during a preseason practice.

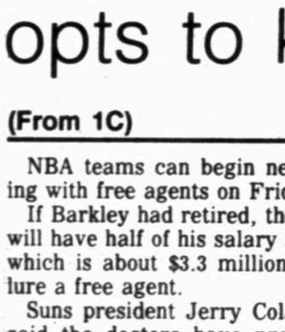

Doctors found a bulging disk in his back, and a nerve in his back that was surrounded by a thickening of tissue, causing weakness and pain in his legs. Later in the season, he also tore a quadriceps tendon, forcing him to miss 17 games, and he played with a badly strained groin in the playoffs.

That didn't stop him from turning in a 56-point effort in Game 3 of a first-round sweep of Golden State. Barkley set an NBA playoff record with 38 first-half points.

The rehabilitation treatments will begin this summer, and Barkley said it would be the first time other than the Olympic year when he trained during the summer. The program begins in mid-July and will consist of two-hour daily sessions for eight weeks.

Barkley spent his first eight years in the NBA with the Philadelphia 76ers. Colangelo pulled off what proved to be one of the most lopsided trades in team history in June 1992, sending Tim Perry, Andrew Lang and Jeff Hornacek to the 76ers to bring in the biggest superstar ever to play in Phoenix.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — Oil prices pulled back from a steep drop on Tuesday to rally toward the close on expectations of continued tight supplies of crude in the Midwest.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $19.27 per barrel, up 26 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Crude had slipped as low as $18.67 during the day.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $18 a barrel.

The late rally was also credited to nervousness over a possible Norwegian oil workers strike and possible snags in a plan to sell Iraqi crude stuck in a pipeline in Turkey.

After the market closed on Tuesday, the American Petroleum Institute reported that inventories of crude oil in the Midwest rose just more than 1 percent last week, but remain about 13 percent below year-ago levels.

Tight supplies in the region, while pipelines run at full capacity, has helped push prices higher in recent weeks.

The industry group also said crude inventories nationwide rose.

The API said crude stocks rose 2.76 million barrels to 327.36 million and distillates, which include heating oil, rose 243,000 barrels to 116.64 million. Gasoline inventories fell 542,000 barrels to 217.4 million. Refineries increased production to 96.4 percent of capacity from 94.8 percent.

Natural gas prices were higher, with contracts for delivery in August settling at $2.200 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 6.4 cents.

Dollar weakens

NEW YORK — The troubled dollar fell Tuesday for the third consecutive day against key currencies, tumbling with American bond prices weakened by inflationary fears.

The dollar set another record low against the Japanese yen and sold near a 13-month low against the German mark.

In New York, the pound fetched $1.5525, down from 1.5445 Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared to Monday: 1.5795 marks, down from 1.5835; 1.3280 Swiss francs, unchanged from Monday; 1.3855, down from 1.3858; 5.4125 French francs, down from 5.4265; 1,561 lire, unchanged from Monday.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — Recurring worries about the dollar's weakness and rising interest rates bedeviled stocks Tuesday and the market closed broadly lower.

A flurry of renewed buying late in the session helped the market finish well above its worst levels. The Dow Jones industrial average ended off 15.86 at 3,669.64.

Sales of new homes rebound

■ Analysts say sales have reached '94 peak, will taper off.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sales of new homes increased in May despite the effects of higher mortgages, which were tempered by growing consumer confidence in the economy, analysts said.

Still, many analysts said sales may have reached their 1994 peak and will taper off while remaining at the highest level in eight years.

Economist David Lereah of the Mortgage Bankers Association said he suspected the housing market gave its "best shot" in May, when sales rose 4.2 percent despite the most expensive mortgages in two years.

Sales totaled 738,000 at a seasonally adjusted annualized rate, up from a revised 708,000 in April, the Departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development reported Tuesday.

It was the highest since sales reached an 817,000 annual rate last December. Many analysts, citing higher rates, had expected May sales to change little from the government's initial 683,000 estimate for April.

The revised April figure represented a smaller 3.4 percent drop from March than the 6.8 percent plunge originally reported.

Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. surveys showed 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.6 percent in May, up from 8.32 percent a month earlier and the highest since 8.67 percent in May 1992.

But despite higher rates and a weather-related slowdown last winter, new home sales for the first five months of 1994 were 13.3 percent above the same period a year earlier.

Many analysts are predicting new home sales will total 700,000 this year. If so, it would be the most since sales reached 750,000 in 1986. Sales totaled 666,000 last year.

Although new sales largely escaped the effect of higher rates in May, the National Association of Realtors reported Monday that sales of previously owned homes slipped 0.7 percent, the first dip since February.

Still, economist Mark Obrinsky of the Federal National Mortgage Association predicted nearly 4 million existing homes will be sold this year. That, combined with 700,000 in new home sales, would total about 4.7 million units, second only to the record 4.8 million in 1978.

Although rates are higher now than the 25-year low of 6.74 percent last October, analysts note they remain at relatively low levels. Rates were in the double-digits through much of the 1980s.

"The net impact (of rates) hasn't been very negative yet, in part because it takes a while to develop and because we have some positives as well — improvements in employment, in consumer confidence and in overall economic conditions," contended economist Michael Carliner of the National Association of Home Builders.

But Carliner said Home Builder membership surveys show that higher rates may have a greater effect later in the year.

"Builders are telling us they are getting less traffic from potential customers," he explained. That means "mortgage rates are starting to bite."

Amoco Corp. to get $440 million refund

N.Y. Times News Service

The Amoco Corp. announced that it would receive a refund of $440 million from the Internal Revenue Service to settle a long dispute over a tax aimed at limiting windfall profits.

The payment, however, will add only $270 million to the company's second-quarter earnings after federal income taxes are paid.

The IRS will pay the amount after it has calculated exactly how much interest is due, Amoco said. Of the $440 million, the company estimates that $284 million is interest.

The dispute between Amoco and the agency arose over differences in interpreting certain parts of a law passed in the late 1970s to limit the profits that oil companies could make on sharply rising oil prices, which jumped about $15 a barrel, to more than $30 a barrel, from 1973 to 1974. Amoco benefited from the higher prices because it is a leading producer of oil.

James Antonopoulos, a tax lawyer for Amoco, estimated that the company paid about $5 billion in taxes from 1980 to 1986, when the price of oil began to drop and the law no longer had any effect.

The IRS, however, claimed that Amoco had underpaid what it owed on the windfall profit tax, and was seeking to collect $180 million in back taxes, Antonopoulos said.

The company disputed a number of positions held by the IRS, including the agency's opinion that liquid recovered from some of the processing of natural gas was to be considered crude oil and subject to taxes.

Another issue was how the agency interpreted the income on certain properties. Under the law, the tax on windfall profits could not exceed 90 percent of the net income from certain properties.

The refund settles claims that stem from seven cases filed by the Amoco Production Co. and its subsidiaries in the United States Tax Court.

Frederick P. Leuffer, an oil analyst for Bear, Stearns & Co., said the settlement would add 54 cents a share to Amoco's second-quarter earnings, on top of the 75 cents that he had projected.

Japan to end regulations that irk partners

TOKYO — Japanese who want to drive large motorcycles must pass an excruciatingly difficult test administered by the police. Those content with a smaller motorcycle can pass an easy test given by a driving school. The United States has complained that these rules impede sales in Japan of U.S. motorcycles, which tend to be large.

But the large-motorcycle test will be eliminated in two years as part of deregulatory plan announced by the Japanese government Tuesday intended to sweep aside dozens of arcane regulations that have irked trading partners and sometimes domestic consumers, as well.

Tuesday's plan follows up on a preliminary one announced late in March in an attempt to break Japan's trade deadlock with the United States.

But the new package lacks crucial economic-stimulus measures that Tokyo had promised. One missing element is a substantial increase in public works spending above 430 trillion yen — now about $4.3 trillion — that is budgeted for this decade.

Another is an extension of this year's income tax cut to future years to stimulate consumer spending.

General manager Larry Burdette describes the restaurant as offering "fusion cuisine" — a mixture of central European and continental cuisines.

The restaurant features three separate dining rooms. The larger room is a non-smoking room, the smaller room allows smoking, and the third is a private dining room that can accommodate 20 to 23 diners.

Lunch will be served beginning July 11 from 11:15 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday and there will be daily lunch specials. Dinner is served from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday with daily dinner specials.

Burdette recently came to Midland from Naples, Florida, where he spent eight years managing restaurants for a large management group. Cafe Central's chef, Colombian-trained Ruben Velez, worked with Burdette in Naples.

Burdette said he and the restaurant's owners are unfazed by HEB's plans to buy the center and build an HEB grocery store. He said plans are to have the restaurant open in its present location for at least nine months to a year.

Cotton Bowl votes to stay put

DALLAS (AP) — The Cotton Bowl Athletic Association voted unanimously Tuesday to keep the traditional New Year's Day game at the state fairgrounds rather than move it to Texas Stadium in suburban Irving.

In a closed door meeting, board members accepted a counter offer by the city of Dallas intended to keep the game at the same site near downtown where it has been played for 58 years.

The association last week had proposed moving the game from Fair Park to Texas Stadium after Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones proposed putting a retractable roof on the stadium.

The city of Dallas responded with an offer that includes $4 million in improvements at the Cotton Bowl, plus another $4 million for free food, transportation, lodging and other bonuses aimed at helping the Cotton Bowl remain a top-ranked, New Year's Day college football bowl game.

NCAA conference commissioners have said they expect to retain only the Rose Bowl and three other major bowls on New Year's Day.

"Our main objective is to make sure the Mobil Cotton Bowl Classic survives as a tier one bowl and I think we're arm in arm and in concert in terms where we would like to play that game and continue to play it at Fair Park," Cotton Bowl Association president John Crawford said after meeting.

A major factor in the aborted decision to move the game, Crawford said last week, was the "perception" among college football and network television officials that the downtown stadium is too exposed to inclement winter weather, Crawford said.

Since 1937, when Crawford's father-in-law, oilman Curtis Sanford, founded the Cotton Bowl, the game has been played in the Fair Park stadium whose name it bears.

Dallas drafts scoring Wolverine in NHL draft

■ Dallas drafts University of Michigan left wing Jason Botterill in the first round of the NHL draft Tuesday.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Stars were able to target a weakness by drafting left-winger Jason Botterill with the 20th pick of Tuesday's first-round.

In the second round, Dallas went for a center, taking Lee Jinman with the 46th-overall pick. The Stars have eight more picks in the third through 11th rounds of the draft scheduled for Wednesday.

Botterill, 18, scored 20 goals and had 19 assists in just 36 games last season for the University of Michigan in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association. The Wolverines were ranked No. 1 most of the season.

The 6-foot-3, 205-pound winger from Winnipeg, Manitoba, was a member of gold medal-winning Team Canada in the 1993 World Junior championships.

Botterill also was named to the 1992-93 New England All-Star team and was first team All-League.

"He has all the tools to be a successful pro," Michigan coach Red Berenson said. "His skating and agility will be important in his development. He has no real holes in his game."

Scouts say Botterill is a strong fighter for pucks along the boards and in the corners. A left-handed shooter, he has a hard, accurate shot and he shows good instincts around the net.

He's also an unselfish, skilled passer, who moves the puck quickly, according to scouting reports.

Botterill, who graduated high school in three years and was on the freshman honor roll at Michigan

Jinman, 18, led OHL rookies in scoring last year with 97 points in 66 games with the North Bay Centennials. He had 31 goals and 66 assists.

Lawyer defends Texas gridder's actions

AUSTIN (AP) — The lawyer for Texas wide receiver Mike Adams says Adams didn't physically assault his ex-girlfriend or a police officer and that felony charges against Adams are "blown way out of proportion."

Lawyer John Carsey said Adams didn't touch Senior Sgt. Leo Enriquez. He said Adams may have used profanity after being sprayed with pepper mace because he didn't clear out quickly enough.

"It was just a bunch of yelling," Carsey told the Austin American-Statesman in an interview published Tuesday. "Going from there to aggravated assault on a police officer is a different thing ... The charge is several levels higher than what conceivably happened. The officer was not injured. Maybe Mike should have held his temper, but they drove him over the edge."

Adams, 20, was arrested Saturday after allegedly cursing and shoving Enriquez and allegedly punching a 19-year-old woman in the head and chest. He was charged with aggravated assault of a police officer and with assault and injury.

Carsey said the woman, who refused to press charges, told him Adams did not hit her.

The lawyer said Adams would plead innocent. The player is scheduled for a July 28 first appearance in court.

Texas football coach John Mackovic gave Adams a 60-day leave of absence Sunday to seek counseling for personal problems, which will keep the All-Southwest Conference player from joining the Longhorns until late August.

49ers ponder move for Cowboys' center

FORT WORTH (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers are considering luring All-Pro center Mark Stepnoski from the Dallas Cowboys with a one-year deal worth as much as $1.3 million, according to a published report.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram cited sources close to negotiations between agent Ralph Cindrich and the 49ers in reporting the talks Tuesday.

"The Cowboys have their long-term priorities, and they have prioritized other areas," Cindrich told the newspaper. "In the short term, if the Cowboys don't pay him at least $1 million, he won't be playing in Dallas.

Dallas owner Jerry Jones said the Cowboys hope to sign Stepnoski, coming off surgery to repair the torn anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee, for one more season.

"The logical thing is for Mark to have a big year, then get a free agency bonanza next year," Jones said. "We haven't been told of his talks with other teams. I believe we're on track to have Mark with us. I think with training camp just a few weeks away, we're progressing with him very well."

The source told the newspaper that it is likely Stepnoski will attempt to solicit at least $1 million from the 49ers. The source also said two other teams have expressed interest in Stepnoski.

"He wants to prove he's healthy now, then go for the big contract in 1995," the source said. "The only problem (with San Francisco) is how to be creative under the salary cap."

Jones said signing Stepnoski is now the No.1 off-season goal. But as has been the case with each of the Cowboys' high-profile free agents, affordability is as much a consideration as ability.

"We've wanted to keep all our players," Jones said. "But 'want-to' and being able to are two different things. What we've done with our budgeting should allow us to make a very credible offer to Mark."

Texas Tech reaches settlement to gender complaint

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech must initiate a women's soccer program this fall and add another female sport by the 1995-96 school year under a settlement to a Title IX complaint filed against the university.

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 requires equal opportunity for men and women at education institutions that receive federal funding.

The complaint charged Texas Tech's athletic department with discrimination against women in its hiring and recruiting practices. It was filed with the Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights just months after the Lady Raiders basketball team captured the school's first national championship in March 1993.

"Texas Tech University has for some time studied gender issues within the athletic department," Texas Tech President Robert W. Lawless said at a news conference Tuesday. "It was never our intention to be out of compliance with Title IX."

Requirements of the settlement include:

■ the disparity rate between the enrollment and athletic participation for male and female athletes will not be greater than 5 percent by 1999.

■ the university must monitor the participation ratio and add other female sports or take other measures to ensure the disparity rate is not greater than 5 percent.

■ the university will ensure that facilities and supporting budget are equally comparable between male and female athletes and sufficient to support these activities.

Lawless said Texas Tech already has met some conditions of the settlement, including equalizing the salary budgets for men's and women's basketball coaches.

Blood can mean life to children with meningitis

By Carolyn Poirot
N.Y. Times News Service

Debra Jordan still cries softly as she recalls the terror of watching her 16-year-old daughter, Shawne Rich, slip into a coma, convulsions, respiratory distress and kidney failure with the most severe complications of meningitis.

What started with a simple sore throat on April 3 had developed into severe headaches, fever, vomiting and weakness three days later. By the time she took Shawne to an emergency room about 5:30 a.m. April 7, her feet were blue and the tips of her fingers were turning purple. She was having great difficulty breathing.

By noon she was in a coma, on a respirator, being taken by CareFlight helicopter to Harris Methodist Fort Worth, where she could undergo continuous dialysis while on the respirator.

It took 184 units of blood and the countless, endless prayers of 24-hour prayer teams organized by friends at Burton Adventist Academy in Arlington to bring Shawne back from her 10-day coma.

Jordan told of the frightful ordeal recently as part of her effort to muster support for blood donations during the crucial summer months.

Most people think of blood transfusions for patients with extensive wounds from automobile accidents, gunshots or other trauma and those undergoing major surgery — not children with meningitis.

Although bacterial meningitis is life-threatening and requires prompt medical treatment, it was actually a rare side effect of the disease, disseminated intravascular coagulation or DIC (a condition in which blood clots and clumps throughout the body), that almost killed Shawne and made all those transfusions necessary.

"Meningitis is one of the most rapidly fatal bacterial infections we've got. People fall apart and die before your eyes, in a matter of hours," said Dr. Elvin Adams, the doctor who originally treated Shawne. "It can be just an overwhelming, fatal infection that goes from nothing that would alarm you to just critically ill in a matter of hours."

The mortality rate from bacterial meningitis is 20 percent; with DIC it is about 98 percent.

Preparing that much blood (120 units were needed in the first three days) that quickly was a herculean task that no single hospital blood bank could have mastered.

"Carter Blood Center has the resources, and as a result, Shawne has life — her whole life in front of her, fully restored to health," the doctor said of the Fort Worth blood bank. (She lost only the tips of three toes and a little lung function that could prevent her from ever becoming a sprinter but should not otherwise interfere in her life.)

"Her friends and friends of her sister, on their own, started praying around the clock. Hospital chaplains and her pastor told these kids Shawne was very critically ill and not expected to live, but the kids were optimistic," Adams said. "The pastor said that instead of him preparing them for death, they prepared him for a miracle."

New diet pyramid

If you want to eat right, don't follow the U.S. Department of Agriculture's food guide pyramid, advises Walter Willett, M.D., chairman of the nutrition department at Harvard University. He says it's more likely to do you in than save your life.

So Willett and colleagues at Harvard have invented their own plan, called the Traditional Healthy Mediterranean Diet Pyramid.

Willett's biggest gripe with the USDA's pyramid is that it favors eating 4 to 9 ounces of red meat a day. From Willett's research, you shouldn't eat beef, pork, lamb or veal more than a few times a month. And even that might be too much. One study on colon cancer found that the "optimum amount of red meat you should eat is zero," he says.

However, the new Harvard pyramid is not Spartan or stingy about fat, except for animal fat. Olive oil is highly touted as the main source of fat. The pyramid also calls for fish a few times a week, and abundant amounts of fruits, vegetables, legumes and grains.

Wine is all right in moderation, but optional.

As the name implies, the diet is based on the eating habits of Mediterranean peoples who have little chronic disease and long lives.

Celebrating beans

If you're having beans on the Fourth of July, you are doing right for your heart.

Baked beans, kidney beans, navy beans, black beans, chickpeas, pinto beans and soybeans all lower cholesterol.

Indeed, beans take top honors among all high-fiber foods in cutting cholesterol, according to a new analysis by Stephen Glore, Ph.D., at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center. Fully 100 percent of studies on beans and legumes found significant reductions in blood cholesterol. For example:

About a cup of cooked navy or pinto beans depressed total cholesterol 15 to 23 percent and bad-type LDL cholesterol 13 to 24 percent within in three weeks, according to research by James Anderson, M.D., at the University of Kentucky.

Even canned baked beans work. Eating a half-cup of canned baked beans a day depressed total cholesterol by 8 to 11 percent in men with high cholesterol in three weeks.

Beans work best on high, not normal, cholesterol. Those older than 50 also seem to get heftier reductions.

Beans' clot-busting secret: primarily, soluble fiber, which is also found in oats, apples (pectin) and psyllium.

Hold your liquor

It might seem like a plus to be able to drink alcohol and not show it. But being able to hold your liquor when young is a strong sign that you might become an alcoholic later in life.

So says Marc A. Schuckit, a psychiatrist at the University of California Medical School at San Diego, on the basis of new studies.

Schuckit found a low "sensitivity" to alcohol — that is, the ability to throw down three to five drinks in a row with few signs of intoxication — a predictor of future alcoholism in men.

Schuckit has followed a group of young men from age 20 to 30. He now finds that 43 percent of those who at age 20 had the lowest response to alcohol became alcoholics. Only 11 percent of the men most physiologically affected by drinking were afflicted.

At highest risk were men with both a low alcohol sensitivity and alcoholic fathers. Fully 56 percent had serious alcohol problems at age 30.

Not always equal

Generic drugs are often a safe, inexpensive alternative to brand-name medications. But a University of Florida study found some generics may be less effective and can cause more side effects than name versions, reports the July issue Reader's Digest. Dr. Leslie Hendeles and colleagues identified more than 100 such prescription and over-the-counter drugs. Pharmacists can check for a drug's equivalency in the FDA publication known as the Orange Book.

"Life Watch" is compiled from Reporter-Telegram news services and from "Food Pharmacy" by Jean Carper.

Light therapy may alleviate many Alzheimer's symptoms

By A.J. Hostetler

ATLANTA (AP) — After many restless nights filled with hallucinations of bears in her bedroom, Eveleth Harshman proudly says she now sleeps soundly after reading a single magazine article.

The same kind of light therapy used to treat the winter blues has alleviated much of the disturbed sleep and agitation the 80-year-old woman suffers as a result of Alzheimer's disease.

Mrs. Harshman, who can remember the name of the brain surgeon who operated on her at age 9 but can't recall her telephone number, is among 30 patients participating in a study of light therapy at Emory University.

Light therapy may enable Alzheimer's patients to remain at home or ease the problems they have living in nursing homes, said Dr. Robert Green, director of Emory's Neurobehavioral Program and Memory Assessment Clinic.

"If it works, you would have a treatment option that would be low-cost, low-tech and easily available to caregivers and nursing centers across the country," he said.

More than 4 million Americans are believed to have Alzheimer's, which gradually wipes out the memory until its victims can no longer perform even the simplest task. There is no test to definitively diagnose Alzheimer's; doctors rule out all other possibilities and confirm a diagnosis during autopsy.

The Emory research, funded by the National Institute on Aging, is based on previous studies of people with severe winter blues, or Seasonal Affective Disorder. The depression they experience can sometimes be restored by the systematic exposure to high levels of artificial light.

Exactly how the light affects the brain isn't known, but it apparently affects the levels of two brain chemicals, a neurotransmitter called serotonin and a hormone called melatonin.

Similarly, the brightness and duration of light also affect sleep patterns, restoring a person's ability to sleep well at night. Disrupted sleep frequently occurs among Alzheimer's patients, resulting in restlessness, pacing, wandering, irritability and other behavioral problems.

Drugs can lessen those problems, but often result in unwanted side effects. Emory's Green and his colleagues be-

Grandparents offer positive benefits

By Dr. Ilisse Perlmutter
Associated Press

There are many benefits to the grandparent-grandchild relationship.

Grandparents, for example, can impart a sense of family roots, history and family continuity that will help grandchildren pinpoint their identities within the family — and, in the broader scope, the outside world. By sharing their experiences, grandparents who settled in the United States from other countries can provide children with an understanding of different cultures and traditions. This can give a children a sense of identity and support that can help them grow into independent and responsible adults.

There are also benefits for grandchildren on an emotional level. The grandparent-grandchild relationship differs from the parent-child relationship. Unlike parents, grandparents are generally not required to set limits and enforce rules on a consistent basis.

A close relationship with the grandparents can be especially valuable if there is a loving but conflictive parent-child relationship, or during adolescence, when the parent-child relationship may be strained. At these times, grandparents can serve as another set of loving caring adults to whom a youngster can turn for advice and discussion. They may add perspective and insight by discussing how they handled the parents' behavior when he or she was young.

There also are some responsibilities for grandparents that come with the Sudden pain can signal health problem

By Dr. David Schwartz
Associated Press

A person who suffers the onset of sudden pain is always confronted by the question: how serious is it?

In most cases, the answer is self-evident, and people either dismiss the pain as not serious — or do the opposite and seek emergency medical attention. However, people are often uncertain about what to do.

For those times of uncertainty, there are a number of indicators by which to make a judgment about the seriousness of pain. These pain indicators can help you determine whether you should visit an emergency room or wait it out.

■ Indicator 1: Severity. As a rule of thumb, the more severe the pain, the more serious the illness or injury. The two don't always match up, however. For instance, a pulled muscle may be extremely painful and even immobilizing, but it is not generally a serious medical condition. On the other hand, heart attack pain can, on occasion, cause only mild chest discomfort.

■ Indicator 2: New or different. Our bodies all have their low-level aches and pains with which we are familiar. For instance, if you go jogging for the first time in months, chances are that your legs will be sore the next day. However, if a pain is radically new, dif-

Active life lessens heart disease risk

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Men who are active in middle age are less likely to die of heart disease as they get older, a study says.

But the study indicates a lot of activity is needed to get the benefit — much more than other researchers think.

The 23-year project found the most active men had 26 percent fewer deaths from coronary heart disease than did the least active men. The most active group also was 17 percent less likely to develop the disease.

Being active seems to help fight heart disease by reducing the risks of conditions that contribute to disease, such as high blood pressure, obesity, diabetes and high cholesterol, said the report in the American Heart Association journal, Circulation.

Researchers in the Honolulu Heart Study looked at 7,074 Japanese-American men who were 45-64 years of age in 1965. The scientists examined the men's blood pressure and cholesterol levels, and the state of their hearts, as well as estimating how much fat the men carried.

The men answered a detailed questionnaire on their activities in a typical 24 hours. Researchers used the information to divide them into three groups.

Ninety percent of the most active third spent at least five hours a day in moderate or heavy physical activity, ranging from gardening to digging or shoveling, much of it on the job, said Dr. Beatriz L. Rodriguez, principal investigator.

Ninety percent of the middle third spent one hour a day, and 90 percent of the lower third spent little or no time this way.

The study then tracked the men's disease records in Oahu's major medical centers. They found death records in newspaper obituaries and state death certificates.

The record-keeping worked because the state has excellent health data and virtually none of the men left the state, Rodriguez said.

During the 23 years of follow up, 789 men developed coronary heart disease, and 340 died of it. But relatively few were among the most active men, and the benefit for these men continued even as they got older, the study found.

There was no meaningful difference for disease and death rates between the other two thirds. Even in men reporting moderate levels of activity in these smaller amounts, their effort had no protective effect, the study found.

This is counter to other studies that have found that the benefit starts with as little as 30 minutes a day of moderate exercise. And Rodriguez does not want her findings construed as advice not to exercise.

The apparent divergence between the Honolulu Heart Study and the other projects may be a result of the way in which the Hawaii subjects were split into groups, Rodriguez said.

The differences in activity between the bottom two groups were not that big, Rodriguez said; the big difference was in the top group.

The Honolulu study also found that the benefit seemed to result from lower risk factors such as weight, cholesterol and blood pressure in the most active men, the report said.

"It makes a lot of sense," said Rodriguez. Exercise is known to improve those conditions, she said.

This could let some people off the exercise hook, said Dr. Paul D. Thompson, director of preventive cardiology at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center.

Those with low blood pressure, weight and cholesterol might ask whether the effort is worth the trouble, Thompson said: "This might give them an opportunity to continue sitting on the

DEAR ABBY

Sweepstakes scams sweep sums

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for mentioning the trouble some people get into by investing their hard-earned money in those contests or sweepstakes.

Van Buren

I am a CPA who's had some of my elderly clients taken in by contest/sweepstakes promoters. One client wrote checks totaling more than $17,500 in 1993. She had received 134 mail solicitations in a single week! Multiple requests came from the same address — each with a slightly different pitch. In addition, there were two or three telephone requests every day.

The mail solicitations requested less than $100 — some less than $20; however, the telephone calls were something different. They asked for sums from $500 to $2,500, and "guaranteed" that she had won! If she didn't agree to send the money, they became verbally abusive! (They do not use the U.S. mail — they use Federal Express, thereby avoiding a mail-fraud charge.)

I have spoken with FBI agents regarding those "boiler room" calls. As soon as the FBI finds these people and shuts them down, they set up at a different location.

Sadly, many elderly people do not want a son, daughter or bank trust officer stepping in to control their finances, yet their failing vision, limited financial resources and the assurance that they have WON the lottery make them easy prey for these promoters. — LINDA G. MONTGOMERY, SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR LINDA: Thank you for the input. Read on for another point of view:

DEAR ABBY: I have been enjoying your column since it began. Usually I agree with you, but regarding the daughter who said her mother was "hooked" on sweepstakes, I think you should have done some investigating before answering.

A legitimate sweepstakes never asks for money. I know this for a fact because after I retired, I tried electric hair curlers, etc.

Once in a while, I received a request for money. After talking to the postal inspector, I was instructed to tape the original envelope "sweeping" as a hobby. Every entry blank I saw in a store or newspaper, I sent in. All together, I won 27 prizes in three years. The largest was $1,000; other monetary prizes were $600, two for $200, five for $25, and one for $10.

I also won a Singer sewing machine, two pressure cookers and a large world atlas. The rest were small items such as egg timers, lope shut and write "Forward to Postal Inspector" on the envelope, then drop it in the mailbox.

I have received letters from postal inspectors thanking me for helping them stop some of these fraudulent practices. — AUDREY JONES, TUCSON

DEAR AUDREY: Thanks for pointing out that not all contests are scams. However, those that require the contestant to send money usually are.

PAIN: Indicators may signal serious problem

ferent and inexplicable, then you should be concerned and seek medical evaluation.

■ Indicator 3: Rapidity of onset. Rapid onset of pain is often an indicator of a serious illness. For example, when the blood supply to the body is disrupted, pain and other symptoms usually develop rapidly. For example, a severe headache of abrupt onset — unlike any previous headache that one has experienced — could be from bleeding of a blood vessel within the brain.

■ Indicator 4: Persistent pain. Pain that doesn't respond to simple treatments and pain relievers often requires medical attention. This is especially true for pain that persists and worsens.

■ Indicator 5: Other symptoms are present. When, in addition to pain, a person experiences fever, nausea and vomiting, generalized weakness or faintness, then the pain is more likely to be serious. On the other hand, many people become anxious when they are in pain and anxiety can create similar symptoms. However, as with all other instances of pain, when in doubt, seek medical attention.

■ Indicator 6: Persons at higher risk for serious illness. If you have a pre-existing medical condition, such as heart disease or diabetes, or if you are an older person, you should be especially attentive to pain and other symptoms. The older you are, the greater the risk of serious illness.

No matter what your health status or age status or total number of pain indicators, do not hesitate to visit an emergency department if you are in severe pain. Emergency departments are not just for victims of major trauma or other catastrophic illness. In deciding whether or not to seek medical attention, it is always best to err on the side of caution.

LIGHT: Therapy may help patients

lieve that exposing Alzheimer's patients to bright light may provide a safer way of improving their sleep and alleviating their agitation.

"There are studies that show that this (sleep problem) is in fact one of the things which disrupts family members the most and actually leads to nursing home placement," Green said.

Dr. Norman Rosenthal, an expert on Seasonal Affective Disorder and a psychiatrist with the National Institute of Mental Health, said the study "makes sense."

"Light is known to help consolidate the sleep of some people," he said. Light therapy would not cure the patient's Alzheimer's disease, but anecdotal reports indicate it may succeed at relieving some of its symptoms. "There's a reasonable hope that some relief could be provided," he said.

Patients entering the study wear a watch-like device on their wrist to measure the amount of light they are normally exposed to and the amount of movement or time they are awake. The patients wear it throughout the four-week study.

After a week spent in normal light, they then spend two weeks in light therapy, followed by a fourth week without the light treatment.

During the treatment, participants sit on a pastel sofa in a waiting room facing a bank of six light boxes about 3½ feet high to 5 feet high. For 1½ hours, they read or talk with sitters while the flurorescent light penetrates their eyes. Green estimated that patients receive light about five times as bright as in an office.

Mrs. Harshman joined the study in April after her son Bill learned of the project. Initially she wasn't interested, but decided she had "nothing better to do."

At her first treatment, "they gave me a pile of magazines and I read, and after awhile, I realized a lot of time had passed," said the former teacher. "I was very curious the whole time — and I'm still curious — about what the end result will be."

The positive results are so obvious to Mrs. Harshman's family that they would like her to continue to participate in the research. But Green said the outcome is uncertain and adds that many more patients will have to participate to determine whether the therapy is at all effective.

Green cautioned caregivers against trying to re-create his experiment at home, saying that he has no evidence yet that light therapy is effective.

GRAND: Family roots offered

territory. It is important, for example, that the grandparent avoid interfering with the relationship between a parent and child. If a grandchild is having a serious problem, the grandparents may want to discuss it with the parent — depending on the relationship of the grandparent with his or her own child.

The grandparents must bear in mind that the parents' wishes and rules must be obeyed no matter how they differ from those of the grandparents. It is also important that grandparents avoid playing favorites among their grandchildren and give each one equal attention. One child may have a special place in the grandparents' hearts, but playing favorites may cause tension among other family members.

The grandparent-grandchild relationship can be fostered in many ways, including spending some special time alone with the grandchildren. The relationship does not have to be limited by the proximity of the family. Making regular phone calls, and sending pictures, cassettes and letters through the mail can also help foster and maintain the relationship.

Dr. Ilisse Perlmutter is assistant professor of child psychiatry at New York University School of Medicine.

ACTIVE: Lifestyle can reduce risks

couch and not feel guilty."

On the other hand, exercise would benefit people not blessed with consistently low risk factors, Thompson said.

And another expert voices some skepticism about the Honolulu results.

Although the Hawaii research indicates there's a threshold of effort at which the heart benefit kicks in, the bulk of other research does not, said Steven N. Blair, an epidemiologist at the Cooper Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas.

"I can't see any plausible reason that there should be a threshold," Blair said.

And the Honolulu research may be underestimating the independent benefits of activity, Blair said. Although activity influences the other factors it might still have benefits beyond them, he said.

"I don't like to get into a contest over which is more important," Blair said. "They are all important, and to some extent they are all interactive."

Frozen dessert from 'Uncola' family

By Linda Anderson

My children are always vigilant on their search for new things in the sweet department. Their favorite aisle in the supermarket is the freezer section with the ice cream and frozen desserts on it. And their current favorite is frozen 7Up Spot Coolers, which basically seems to be chunks of frozen 7Up and Cherry 7Up on a stick.

Anderson

Spot Coolers are kind of like Push-Ups, since they are on a stick that you push up through a cardboard tube. The product has another form, which is like a Popsicle, which is the kind my children seem to prefer, but oh well, frozen 7Up is frozen 7Up.

A box of six assorted (that means plain and cherry 7Up) Spot Coolers and a box of 12 Popsicle-type 7Up cost $2.50 each.

Label advertising is practically non-existant. All it says is "The Uncola" and that the product is a "Naturally and Artificially Flavored Sherbet" that is "made with real 7Up and Cherry 7Up." I guess customers are just supposed to know what 7Up is. Let's face it, most of us do.

The side label has the required nutrition information: one cooler has 150 calories and 20 of them are from fat. That's from the milkfat and nonfat milk that makes Spot Coolers a sherbet.

On the other side label is a coupon for two liter bottles of 7Up. Keep it all in the family you know.

In the taste-test, the older kid decided she really like the Popsicle-type 7Up much better than the Push-up kind. They both decided the frozen 7Up tasted just like frozen 7Up but of course didn't have any fizz. Some of the older, more adult tasters that were recruited said the product just tasted like sweet ice — one couldn't taste 7Up at all.

But the regular tasters liked the product so much that I've had to make a special trip to the supermarket just for a box of frozen 7Up. The things we do for our children...

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

WHAT SHOULD YOU EXPECT FROM A "CHILD-CENTERED" PRESCHOOL?

Research has shown that children attending a "child-centered" preschool program demonstrate the following attributes:

- Enhanced verbal ability
- Appropriate social skills when interacting with peers and adults
- Low levels of aggression
- A lively curiosity towards new situations and experiences
- An acceptance of people different from themselves, either physically, socially, or culturally
- Strengthened motor skills, fine and gross
- Confidence in his/her own ability to learn
- Positive self-image

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?
YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
A small deposit is required.
