Tax Reform Session Launched

A-J News Services

AUSTIN — Texas legislators went to work Monday on tax relief measures that Gov. Dolph Briscoe said could save the average household $552 during the next two years.

"You have been called to participate in one of the most important special sessions in our history," Briscoe told senators and House members shortly after the opening of the 2nd Special Session of the 65th Legislature. "While tax reductions of various kinds have occured in the past, never before has a legislature been asked to accomplish a tax relief program of the magnitude to be placed before you."

The lawmakers, and a filled House gallery, listened politely but did not interrupt him with applause. At the end there was brief standing applause.

First Fuss Erupts

The House then immediately got into its first fuss of the session. With two-thirds approval needed, the House refused 88-52 to suspend its rules and allow an immediate public hearing on Speaker Bill Clayton's pet tax reform package to put ceilings on state and local taxation and spending. The hearing will be held Tuesday afternoon.

The House Ways and Means Committee set a public hearing Tuesday afternoon on four measures that would repeal the state utility sales tax for homeowners and would increase inheritance tax exemptions.

The Senate held a committee hearing Monday afternoon on assessing farm land by productivity instead of market value.

Earlier, the Senate unanimously approved the appointment of Secretary of State Steve Oaks, the first of almost 600 they have before them this session.

Sen. Raul Longoria, D-Edinburg, was renamed president pro tempore, or assistant presiding officer of the Senate.

Area Lawmakers Comment

State legislators Monday expressed support for portions of the Governor's special session call, with most saying it will last the full 30 days allowed.

Sen. Kent Hance of Lubbock said he was surprised by the call, but added that it was the Governor's perogrative.

Hance said the best measure as far as he was concerned was the increase in the homestead tax exemption, feeling that provisions could be made to keep the public school system from being hurt. He said he also hopes to see a call to move one cent of the sales tax to help school finances, and reducing property tax by a like amount.

Rep. Joe Robbins of Lubbock added he was pleased with the subjects included in the call, but said there had been "some significant omissions." Robbins said he would like to see the idea of a mandatory decrease in taxes extended to all units of local government, with state surplus dedicated to the reimbursement of lost local revenue.

Robbins also called for initiative and referendum to be extended "to include all subject matters and all levels of government."

Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland warned that "in the light of Proposition 13 in California, the peoples' expectations

"HE WENT THAT AWAY" —But truckdriver Terry Krob, 29, of 4315 61st St. didn't go far. Not after two sets of wheels were stripped away from his rig about 11:20 a.m. Monday near the intersection of Avenue A and 17th Street. The crash between the Santa Fe freight and Krob's vehicle did not result in injuries. Witnesses said Krob was unable to move his truck forward, after cars stopped in front of him, leaving the rear portion of his rig vulnerable to the passing train. Krob was eastbound when the collision occurred. (Staff Photo by Dennis Copeland)

Homeowner Tax Study Attracts Sparse Crowd

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

IT WAS HARDLY a deluge, but about 35 homeowners trickled in to the Lubbock city-school tax office to protest increased assessments Monday, the first day of equalization board hearings.

Tax officials and tax protest groups had expected many more. They were at a loss to explain the relatively small number of complaints.

According to one source, the city-school tax department was so braced for angry taxpayers that a few plainclothed police officers were standing by to handle any crowd problems that might have developed.

None materialized.

But there were developments on other tax protest fronts Monday. Mayor Dirk West received 1,928 letters — the first batch of a campaign engineered by the Lubbock Property Owners Association — seeking a 25 percent city tax cut.

West indicated he may meet with association leaders later this week.

Meanwhile, We the People — a local group fighting "forced busing" to integrate schools — started organizing its petition drive for special elections on proposed tax limitations on the City of Lubbock and Lubbock Independent School District.

Lenda Tarlton of We the People said petitions were distributed to members and plans were outlined for canvassing Lubbock and obtaining signatures.

Special Election Is Goal

The group hopes to get enough signatures so that, by city charter, the city would be required to hold a special election. Mrs. Tarlton said it is unclear whether the school system can be forced to conduct such an election.

We the People wants to limit the tax rates of the city and school district to 80 cents per $100 valuation. The city's proposed tax rate for 1978 is $1.33; the school district, which hasn't begun public budget sessions for the coming year, has a $1.58 rate.

The organization also would dictate priorities for city and school district spending. Predictably, in the group's suggested proposition for the schools, court-ordered busing is not a priority.

City and school officials have several legal questions about the proposals of We the People. They say some of the proposals, such as a policy on how to assess property, probably are unconstitutional.

"Taxpayers Worried"

Mrs. Tarlton said the group's efforts, announced late last week, have been met with "good reaction as far as taxpayers are concerned. They're worried about high taxes and where their money is going. They especially don't want it to go for busing."

Among the complainants before the city-school tax equalization board Monday was Ima Kuykendall, who said the 130 percent increase in the tax value of her house may force her to sell out.

"Maybe I'll buy a mobile home and move out to the country. I don't want to have to do that. But with these outrageous city-school taxes, I just can't afford to live in the City of Lubbock anymore," she said.

Like the other complainants, Mrs. Kuykendall lives in the city's recently reappraised southwest quadrant. And like many of them, she said, "I'm old and on a fixed income.

"I've lived in Lubbock for 53 years and

Contracts Awarded For Jail Projects

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

EQUIPMENT AND construction contracts for the new Lubbock County Jail were awarded by county commissioners Monday afternoon.

Work will start immediately on the projected 18-month project.

One of three proposed 90-man cell blocks will be left unfinished to hold the cost within the $3.8 million the county will get in federal revenue sharing money through 1980.

The contracts for electrical and mechanical work, general construction and equipment, which means mainly jail cells and related machinery, come to $3,340,500.

Total Near $3.6 Million

Additional costs of about $240,000 for architectural fees and $50,000 for kitchen equipment will bring the total expense to about $3.6 million.

The contracts were awarded to Furr's Construction Co., $1,420,934 for general construction; O.W. Chisum Co., mechanical $588,025 for mechanical work; Row-Wall Electric Co., $315,460; Pellerin Laundry Machinery Co. of Kenner, La., $26,081; and Roanoke Iron & Bridge Co. of Roanoke, Va., $990,000 for detention equipment.

Downtown traffic and parking will be affected while the project is underway as some streets are encroached upon and permanently in that Avenue G will be taken up by the new jail area from Broadway to Main Street.

The construction site will occupy a third of the widths of Avenue F from Main to Broadway; Main from the front of the present jail to Avenue F; and Broadway from Avenue F to the southeast corner of the county office building at Broadway and Avenue G.

Provided By Law

A contractor is allowed by law to take up to one-third of a street.

Architect Arnold Maeker said the main effect on the streets will be to eliminate parking in those locations.

Construction east of the existing jail should start by late this month, Maeker said.

The new jail was made necessary when U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward ruled the present jail unacceptable in the spring of 1977.

Moving to accept the separate low bids for everything but the detention equipment, Commissioner Alton Brazell said, "I don't mind making it (the motion). That federal judge told me to, and I know what the alternative is.

"Let this be a lesson to you," he said. "If you get involved in writing a national constitution, don't give too much power to the federal courts. Don't give judges the power to legislate."

Roanoke had the second-lowest bid for substitute or less expensive cells and machinery. The low bid of Willo Products Co. of Decatur, Ala., was adjudged untenable because it would have necessitated hiring seven to 10 more deputies to supervise the jail and would not have rep-

Cloud Settles Over Abilene 'Wet' Victory

ABILENE (AP) -Don't ask who won the wet-dry election here unless you're bent on cornering the market for puzzled shrugs and disgusted "I dunno's."

After the June 17 balloting, it appeared -at least unofficially - that this West Texas city would have to allow the sale of hard liquor inside the city limits.

The final, unofficial count for all 44 voting precints was 11,591 in favor of on-and-off-premises consumption of alcoholic beverages, 11,460 against.

Declared "Dry"

However, Monday afternoon Taylor County Commissioners unanimously declared Abilene was still dry.

And they did it with what figures out to be about 35 votes to spare.

The confused maneuvering involved the commissioners' decision to throw out 865 ballots from a voting box, whose boundaries the court claimed were in dispute because of annexiation proceedings implimented last year. The proceedings split the voting precinct into two justice precincts and one of the justice precints was not allowed to vote in the election.

Dry spokesman Neil Fry said he was "kinda flabbergasted" by the court's action.

"I don't know what to say," exclaimed Fry. "We came up here

Four Hostages Held By Man With Grenade

NEW YORK (AP) — A Polish-speaking machinist who wanted more money for an on-the job injury took four persons hostage Monday in the World Trade Center and threatened to blow up the office where he was cornered with what he said was 80 pounds of dynamite.

"I have a bomb here and I'm going to set if off if I don't get money," the man, Ladislaw Fraczek, in his 50s, was said to have told his lawyer, who was among the hostages.

Thousands of office workers were evacuated from one tower of the twin-towered, 110-story skyscraper, the city's tallest.

At one point, Police Lt. Frank Reilly said:

"He said he had 80 pounds of dynamite. I'm no explosives expert but if that went off it would take out two or three floors."

Police Negotiate

A team of police negotiators was rushed in under the command of Capt. Frank Bolz to negotiate release of the hostages. The team, trained to avoid overt actions that might trigger violence, also called in a Polish interpreter.

The four hostages were identified as Workers Compensation Board referee Louis Jerome, court reporter Clarence Douglas, state insurance fund lawyer Salvatore Ciaccio and Fraczek's lawyer, whose name was not immediately known.

Arthur Cooperman, chairman of the compensation board, said Fraczek lost two fingers in an industrial accident in 1975 and was awarded $6,000 in compensation, the maximum under the law.

Trials Open For Moscow Dissidents

MOSCOW (AP) — Climaxing an 18-month Kremlin crackdown on dissidents, Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg went before Soviet courts Monday in trials that have drawn the United States into a volatile confrontation with Moscow over human rights.

Shcharansky's wife, in Paris, appealed to the United States to intercede anew to help free her husband, who faces a possible death penalty if convicted of espionage.

In Washington, a spokesman for President Carter said, "This sort of repressive action, which strikes at the conscience of the entire world, is a defeat not for those who advocate and work for human rights and dignity, but rather it is a defeat and a sign of weakness on the part of those very forces of oppression and injustice which we protest."

Carter Not Silenced

White House press secretary Jody Powell added that if such actions by the Kremlin leaders "are meant to stop this president (Carter) or others in this country from speaking out on human rights, they will not do that."

Shcharansky, appearing before a three-judge panel in a tree-shaded central Moscow courthouse, pleaded innocent to the treason charge, rejecting as "absurd" allegations that he spied for the CIA, his brother Leonid said.

"I consider all that I did was right," Leonid quoted his brother as telling the court in an hour-long defense. "I think they will give him the death sentence," said Leonid.

In the city of Kaluga, 100 miles south of here, Ginzburg, accused of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda, also denied the charges against him. Irina Ginzburg said her husband, who could get up to 10 years at hard labor, told the three judges he might modify his plea if his guilt is proved at the trial.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said the trials of the two Jewish dissidents "raise serious questions" about Soviet compliance with the 1975 Helsinki human rights accords, but he rejected the idea of postponing nuclear arms negotiations in protest. Vance is to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Switzerland Wednesday to try and advance a new treaty limiting nuclear arms.

In New York, a Carter aide said Vance would carry with him a personal message from Carter to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev. Edward Mezvinsky, U.S. representative to the U.N. Commission on Human Rights, told a rally in support of Soviet Jews that Vance "will hand deliver a message from President Carter to Secretary Brezhnev ... which makes clear the strength of our nation's concern and commitment to the freedom of these dissidents on trial."

POLICE REFUSE ASSIGNMENTS

CLEVELAND (AP) — Police refused for the third straight day Monday to patrol 14 high-crime housing projects on foot, saying it is too dangerous for an officer to go into the projects alone. The officers' refusal was the latest round in a fight between the Cleveland Police Department and Mayor Dennis Kucinich, who faces a recall election Aug. 13.

John D. Rockefeller III Dies In Three-Car Crash

POCANTICO HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — John D. Rockefeller III, the eldest brother of a family whose name is synonymous with wealth, was killed Monday in a car accident near the family estate at Pocantico Hills, police said.

A spokesman for the Mount Pleasant Town Police Department, which patrols the area, confirmed that Rockefeller, 72, had died in a three-car accident shortly before 6 p.m.

Hugh Morrow, a Rockefeller family spokesman, said Rockefeller was a passenger in a car driven by his secretary, Monica Lesko. He said Rockefeller was killed in a head-on collision in which the driver of the second car was also killed and Miss Lesko was injured.

A third car was also involved in the accident, and the driver of that car was also injured. The family spokesman said that car's role in the accident was not immediately known, and the conditions of the injured were unavailable.

The Rockefeller car was driving south about a mile north from the Rockefeller estate overlooking the Hudson River.

Rockefeller's only son, West Virginia Gov. John D. Rockefeller 4th, said he would immediately leave for New York to join his mother, Blanchette.

Rockefeller, eldest of five sons of John D. Rockefeller Jr., left politics and business to his younger brothers and spent much of his life in philanthropy, support of the arts, working on population control and Asian problems.

His eldest brother, Nelson, became governor of New York and later vice president of the United States. The next in line, Laurence, divided his time between business and conservation interests, and the fourth, the late Winthrop Rockefeller, became governor of Arkansas. David, the youngest, is head of the huge Chase Manhattan Bank.

John was in the public eye as founder and chairman of the Population Council and the Asia Society and delegate to international conferences on Asia.

Fans Sell Like Crazy In Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Caught between rocketing utility bills and blistering temperatures, growing numbers of Texans are rediscovering the electric fan as an inexpensive and efficient way to stay cool this summer.

Just about everywhere across the state, stores report they can't keep portable electric fans on their shelves. Customers snap then up as quickly as shipments arrive.

"I've got two fans myself," said a salesman at a Dallas department store. "They help cut down on the electric bill because I don't have to run the air conditioning as much. I can set the thermostat to a higher temperature."

Soviet Judicial System Scrutinized

MOSCOW (AP) — The trials of dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg have again focused Western attention on the Soviet Union's criminal justice system — which Soviet officials claim is the fairest in the world.

"The Soviet judicial system is built in such a way as to make it accessible to the population and to deal quickly and fairly with all cases," according to Sergei Bannikov, vice president of the Soviet Supreme Court.

Most dissidents strenuously disagree, contending Soviet authorities often are adept at bending the nation's legal institutions to suit their own aims, resulting in court verdicts that are decided even before a trial begins.

Western legal experts point out that there is nothing intrinsically unfair about the Soviet judicial system, which involves a curious blend of continental European law and socialist doctrine.

The Soviets, for example, have borrowed from the French the procedure of giving the judge in a trial a leading role in questioning defendants.

Onto this framework of European legal tradition, Soviet courts have added various doctrinal innovations, such as great stress on examining a defendant's work record and past contributions to society.

Soviet court cases are not decided by a jury. They are both heard and decided by a professional "people's judge" — elected by the public on a one-candidate ballot — along with two "people's assessors."

The assessors, who generally do not have any formal legal training, are chosen from the local population in accordance with the socialist principle that common people should control the administration of justice.

Bannikov, in a 1976 article published by the Soviet magazine Ogonyok, said at that time there were 650,000 people's assessors sitting in district and city courts, the first level of the Soviet judicial structure.

He said nearly 99 percent of all cases were handled by such district and city courts and that the number of cases being appealed to higher courts was "noticeably and consistently decreasing."

"Court proceedings follow strictly the standards of the law," in keeping with the principles of "Socialist legality," Bannikov wrote.

Soviet law provides that decisions by district and city courts may be appealed — by either the defendant or the prosecution — through the provincial courts, republic supreme courts, Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. and ultimately as high as the presidium of the Soviet Union's central executive committee.

It also stipulates that on an appeal by the defendant, a higher court may not increase the punishment already imposed or apply a law governing a more serious crime to the same case.

Recent trials against dissidents have provided fresh evidence that in actual practice, courtroom proceedings may contrast quite sharply with the high-sounding precepts of Soviet law.

During the trial in May of dissident physicist Yuri Orlov, shouts of "traitor" and "spy" repeatedly rang out from members of the hand-picked audience as Orlov tried to defend himself against charges of "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda."

According to Orlov's wife, Irina, the presiding judge at the trial, Valentina G. Lubentsova, also frequently interrupted Orlov while he sought to present his defense.

Orlov was barred from calling any defense witnesses during the four-day trial, which ended in Orlov's conviction and sentencing to seven years in a labor camp plus five years internal exile.

"All this was like a play," Mrs. Orlov said after the verdict. "It was all decided beforehand. The trial had no influence on the decision of the court or the sentence."

Wife Rejects Traditional Role

ROME (AP) — When Socialist Sandro Pertini was elected this week Italians may have gained a president, but they got a first lady in name only.

Mrs. Carla Pertini, a crusading feminist, has decided she won't move into the sumptuous presidental palace, the Quirinal, with her 81-year-old husband.

Living in the palace would mean she would have to accept many social obligations that would interfere with her work as an assistant professor in psychology.

"My wife will never come to the Quirinal," Pertini told reporters. "But we will see each other, I'll go and see her every day."

The president need only walk a few hundred yards down the Quirinal Hill to the Trevi Fountain for his daily visits, where the Pertini family maintains an apartment and where his wife is expected to reside.

"My wife intends to continue with her professional work and I respect her desire," Pertini said. "On the other hand, how could I stop it? I always wanted to be a free man and I can't object to the same spirit in others."

There was no hint of any disagreement between the couple as news leaked out that the Pertinis won't be living together.

Pertini has not officially announced when he will move into the Quirinal Palace but sources say a wing in the 17th century complex, once the royal palace and before that a papal abode, is being readied for the new head of state.

Such a living arrangement will also require separate security measures for each.

Pertini says he considers his wife, 24 years his junior, "my best friend." The couple met when Pertini was organizing anti-Nazi and anti-fascist resistance in northern Italy.

They were married in a civil ceremony in 1946 — the first presidential couple not to be united in a religious ceremony. They have no children.

Mrs. Pertini has worked as Parliament reporter for the Genoa daily Il Lavoro and also for the feminist magazine "Noi Donne"—"We Women."

She also undertook a voluminous study of prostitution in Italy and obtained her second doctorate at 52 years of age. Her first degree was in political science.

Currently, she is an assistant professor at the psychology department of the University of Rome and devotes part of her time to working with drug addicts in a Rome hospital.

The national daily Corriere della Sera commented that Mrs. Pertini will never be "the wife of the President of the Republic.

"The new first lady will be different, neither mundane nor decorative, neither a mother of the family nor propagandist of high fashion — but a contemporary woman, an independent professional, jealous of her individuality against any role that is not her own."

Mrs. Pertini was vacationing in Nice when her husband was elected and though she returned to Rome immediately she wasn't seen during the swearing-in ceremony Sunday. Those inquiring for an official presidential family photograph were told there was none.

The first lady's only official function is to be the president of the Italian Red Cross, but it wasn't yet known if Mrs. Pertini would even accept the post.

Temperatures To Continue In Upper 90s

No respite from the heat is due South Plains residents today, as the dog day afternoons of July continue with readings in the upper 90s.

The mercury here yesterday rested at the 95 degree mark for five hours, reaching a high of 96 only briefly. Today's temperatures, forecasters say, should be even warmer as the upper high level pressure system builds over the area.

Still no precipitation is expected to alleviate the parched conditions, and sunbathers can expect 13 hours of sunshine under clear skies.

Winds are remaining in a warm, southerly direction at 5 to 10 mph thanks to the ridge of high pressure.

The extended forecast for the South Plains calls for more of the same through Thursday. Highs will be in the upper 90s and lows in the 60s and 70s.

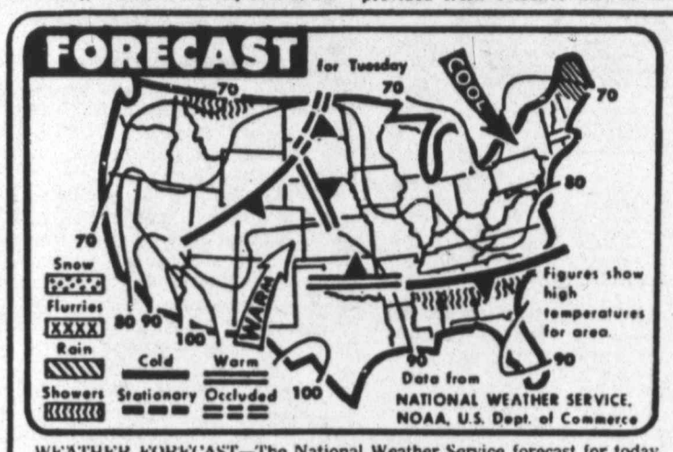
Although temperatures remained in the mid-90s in western Texas and the Panhandle, the mercury skirted the 100 degree mark across the north central portion of the state. Abilene, Temple and Tyler tied for the highest reading with a score of 101.

Dallas, Fort Worth and Temple all chalked up readings of 100 degrees. Amarillo and Dalhart with 91 degrees had the lowest temperatures in the state.

Clear skies continue to prevail across the state with the exception of a few clouds along the Gulf Coast.

Widely scattered showers gracing the coast brought the only precipitation in the state. Rainfall amounts there were light, not surpassing .72 inches.

The clouds absent in Texas brushed across the rest of the nation, spreading showers from the lower Mississippi Valley to the South Atlantic Coast States. Isolated thundershowers also dotted the Central Rockies.



WEATHER FORECAST—The National Weather Service forecast for today predicts areas of showers in parts of the Northwest and Southeast and an area of rain in parts of the Northeast. (AP Laserphoto)

Medical Journal Calls Protein Diet 'Deadly'

CHICAGO (AP) — The so-called "last chance diet" in which only liquid protein is consumed is potentially lethal and should not be used, the Journal of the American Medical Association warns.

Dr. Theodore B. Van Italie of St. Luke's Hospital Center in New York City said in an editorial in the latest issue of the journal that "there are safer alternatives to the liquid protein diet that are equally effective and nutritionally more rational.

"But, in any case," he adds, "no drastic weight reduction regimen makes sense unless adequate provision is made for subsequent maintenance of weight loss."

The journal also contains two reports documenting the deaths of three obese women who were otherwise healthy who died of heart problems after being on the liquid protein diet for five or six months. The women, ages 27 to 35, had lost 80 to 90 pounds.

A fourth patient described had suffered serious heart problems but survived with medical treatment.

The Food and Drug Administration, in a drug bulletin it mailed this week to one million doctors, pharmacists and other health professionals, said low-calorie protein diets sharply increase the sudden cardiac death rate among women. It says 58 deaths linked to very low-calorie protein diets have been investigated by the FDA and the Center for Disease Control.

Many of those who died had other medical problems that could have caused deaths, the FDA said. But there were 16 obese white women aged 23 to 51 who died after two or more months on the diet and did not have other underlying problems.

The FDA says that the sudden cardiac death rate among white women aged 25 to 44 is about two deaths per 100,000. But it estimates the rate for those on the diet as 59 per 100,000.

Van Italie said, "It is simply not possible to ignore the growing indications that prolonged use of the liquid protein diet is hazardous and potentially lethal."

He said it appears that the liquid protein materials were never tested in appropriate laboratory animals to determine their safety for long-term use in weight reduction. Because of this, he says, "Its use in the treatment of obesity cannot be justified."

Van Italie said liquid protein contains material obtained from cowhides and other connective tissues, which he termed "materials of notoriously poor protein quality."

Missouri Mixup Affects Pageant

MEXICO, Mo. (UPI) — Officials of the Miss Missouri Pageant say they crowned the right Miss Missouri — but incorrectly announced two members of her court.

Tamara Leigh Fister captured the pageant title Saturday, but pageant officials said they mixed up the positions of two runners-up.

They had announced Pamela Layne Alcorn, 20, as the first runner-up, but said Sunday they miscounted ballots. They promoted Patricia Ann Burns to the position. Miss Alcorn replaces Miss Burns as second runner-up, they said.

Miss Fister will represent the state in the Miss America competition in Atlantic City in September.

Carter Soviet Stance Hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson attacked the Carter administration's approach Monday to relations with the Soviet Union as "confused, uncertain and often contradictory."

The Washington Democrat used the debate on a $36 billion military procurement bill to launch his strongest criticism of the Democratic administration since President Carter took office 19 months ago.

Jackson, one of the men Carter defeated in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976, is one of the most influential Senate advocates of a hard-line approach to relations with the Soviets.

Until now, Jackson, while critical of some administration foreign policies, has tried to avoid direct criticism of Carter.

But in Monday's speech, Jackson said that while the president voiced a tough line in his recent speech at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, the administration's actions have failed to reflect that view.

"The tough talk was offset by weak action," said Jackson.

"It is high time we stopped the dangerous practice of entering into unequal deals with Moscow in the misguided notion that Soviet leaders will reward our generosity with restraint in international affairs," he said.

A persistent critic of the arms limitation treaty now being negotiated between the United States and Soviet Union, Jackson said, "An American willingness to enter into such a manifestly unequal agreement is certain to persuade the Russians that we are weak, however strident the rhetoric in presidential speeches.

"How are the Russians interpreting the administration's proclivity for one-way concenssions and one-sided retreats? It is clear that the Soviet leaders are increasingly confident that they can bully us and get away with it. They are becoming bolder in their policies and more prepared to take risks.

"It is time to take action that will give real meaning to the president's claim that 'we will not be pushed around.'"

Sen. Thomas McIntyre, D-N.H., also a member of the Armed Services committee, complained that Jackson was "prejudging" SALT and "carping about a treaty that we haven't even seen."

McIntyre asked Jackson, "Will you give the SALT treaty a chance or will you beat it to death before the American people have a chance to consider it?"

Arguing that the administration had already made concessions placing the United States at a serious disadvantage in missile and long-range bomber capability, Jackson said, "You don't have to be a strategic arms expert to know that the bottom line is that they get more than we do."

Jackson was particularly critical of Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's statement that the United States was determined to continue negotiations on SALT despite the Soviet decision to go ahead with the trials of dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg.

"Over the weekend," said Jackson "Secretary Vance neutralized his statement on the outrageous Shcharansky and Ginzburg trials, by just more of the same approach on SALT."

The trials of Shcharansky and Ginzburg opened Monday in Moscow.

On Friday Vance criticized the Soviet decision to try the dissidents, but said on the weekend that "it is of the utmost importance that we should proceed with the SALT negotiations."

In a radio interview Monday, Jackson called Vance's statement "the wrong signal at the wrong time."

Later, Vance said, "I respectfully disagree."

Jackson, a senior member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said in his floor speech that "strong American foreign and defense policies are the sensible course for dealing with the Soviet Union, especially now when the Russians are, under the cover of detente, seeking to exploit American forebearance in Africa, in the Middle East, and in negotiations concerning conventional and strategic weapons."

The SALT discussion was the highlight of the opening day of debate on legislation that would authorize Pentagon spending on weapons and research in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The spending level proposed by the Senate Armed Services Committee is $613 million more than requested by the administration, largely because of proposed shipbuilding changes — including construction of a $1.9 billion aircraft carrier opposed by the administration.

On a voice vote, the Senate approved an amendment to require the president, before moving ahead with a $41 million program to convert jumbo jets to carry cruise missiles, to report on its effect on arms control talks.

The Senate also approved an amendment that would reduce authorized spending for a Navy torpedo program by $28.7 million. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said the Navy has learned that the original cost estimates for the program were too high.

A floor fight is expected on Tuesday over a proposal by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., to delete all funds for the Navy F-18 fighter plane. Hart says the Navy does not want the plane and that the F-18 increases dependence on large aircraft carriers.

K-Mart Sales Hit Record In June

TROY, Mich. (AP) — June sales of K-mart Corp., the nation's second-largest retailer, hit a record, the company reported Thursday.

Sales for the five weeks ended June 28 were $1.11 billion, up 23 percent from the $903 million reported in the comparable 1977 period.

Chairman Robert E. Dewar attributed the good results to consumer purchases of hot-weather items in all parts of the country.

K-mart had 1,814 stores open on June 28, 7.7 percent more than the 1,685 it operated a year ago.

Firms To Comply With State Requests

Operators of two local businesses have signed assurances of voluntary compliance after allegations by the state attorney general's office that the businesses were engaged in unfair trade practices.

Signing the compliance agreements, filed in the district clerk's office here Monday, were the operator of Medical Weight Loss Clinic at 3724 34th St. and operators of National Auto Sales at 4511 Ave. H.

The attorney general's office alleged in the civil action that, as part of a weight program, the weight loss clinic sponsored a plan which included adherence to a 500 calorie per day diet and a series of injections of a drug known as human chorionic gonadotropin (HCG).

The injections were scheduled daily for a six-week period, the state alleged.

The attorney general's Consumer Protection Division alleged that:

—It was represented that the drug, in conjunction with the diet, causes reduction in body fat. The state alleges there is no substantial evidence for such a claim.

—It was represented that HCG facilitates redistribution of body fat. The state alleges there is no substantial evidence for such a claim.

—It was represented that HCG causes a decrease in hunger and other discomforts associated with a restricted diet. The state alleges there is no substantial evidence for such a claim.

The state also alleged the weight loss clinic failed to advise customers of a disclaimer concerning HCG required by the federal Food and Drug Administration.

According to the state, the disclaimer says in part that the the drug has not been "demonstrated to be effective adjunctive therapy in the treatment of obesity." The alleged failure to inform customers of the disclaimer constituted a deceptive act, the state contended.

The clinic operator promised, in the voluntary compliance agreement, to discontinue permanently and never resume the described practices.

The agreement specified that the assurance was not to be considered an admission of any violation of the Texas Business and Commerce Code.

The compliance agreement signed by operators of National Auto Sales included allegations that:

—The business customarily did not provide an odometer statement.

—The business had charged an excessive amount of interest when selling autos on an installment basis.

—The business had sold cars on an installment basis without providing customers with a duplicate certificate of title.

The two operators of the auto sales business promised in the compliance agreement that described practices in the attorney general's civil action would be discontinued and not resumed.

It was specified in that agreement also that the agreement did not constitute an admission that the alleged acts or practices are unlawful.

CASS Motion Briefs Due By July 30

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward has given parties in the Lubbock school desegregation case 20 days to respond to a motion by a local citizens' group to intervene in the litigation.

The Citizens' Alliance for Successful Schools (CASS) Friday filed a motion to become a party in the case so that it can push for an appeal of the integration plan that the school board proposed and Woodward approved for implementation this fall.

On Monday, Woodward acknowledged receipt of CASS' motion. He said the Lubbock Independent School District and the U.S. Justice Department have until July 30 to file briefs regarding the motion.

The school system is expected to oppose CASS' proposed intervention.

CASS wants to intervene because it fears the Justice Department won't appeal the case and push for systemwide integration of schools here.

Nursery Rhyme Guides Career

DES MOINES (UPI) — Art Alber has been a butcher and a baker and now plans to become a candlestick maker — just like the nursery rhyme.

"I figure I was a butcher for more than 30 years and now I have been a baker for more than 10 years — where else could I logically go?" he asked. "Seriously, I plan to go into decorator candles when I do retire. I figure there's a market there like anyplace else."

Alber, who now owns the only wholesale pie shop in town, said he never really intended to become a pieman. He said he was forced into the job.

"I had bought the shop for my son and then we discovered that he was allergic to flour and couldn't run it, so I had to get into it to protect my investment," he said. "And once I got in, I got hooked."

Soviets Call Cold War Shots

ANY DOUBT BUT that the Cold War is "heating up" has been dispelled by a series of recent events in Moscow and Washington.

Not to mention what had been happening in numerous parts of Africa for the past two years.

For years now, the word Detente has come to mean a more or less truce as well as effort on the part of the U.S. and Russia to seek some way of living with one another in a nuclear world. In that it has avoided confrontation at an atomic level, it has been successful.

HOWEVER, THERE are those who will argue, with good reason, that the only reason Detente has been "successful" is because of the concessions the U.S. made to keep the Soviets happy.

This, critics say, has involved everything from beneficial trade involving U.S. grain to an export of technological know-how which helps Russia compete with America in the rest of the world, as well as enhance Soviet science and industry.

In addition, and especially under the Carter administration, it is a fact, not speculation, that the U.S. has made a series of moves at the military level which in the opinion of experts, past and present, has given the Russians a definite edge in the skies, on the seas and in land forces.

IN THE LATEST moves in the "new" Cold War, Moscow has sent a clear signal to Washington and a vacillating President that it is not through.

For those who can remember the post-World War II Cold War era, the events involving seizure of American business people, trumped-up charges against U.S. newsmen and general harassment of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow is a pattern all too familiar.

Back in those days, including those of the Red Blockade of Berlin, the U.S. response was quite different from what it has been of late.

Then, because of a different attitude among the nation's top leaders and because we militarily had an edge on Russia, we were able to stand our ground, and as in the case of the Cuban Missile Confrontation, force Moscow to back down.

TODAY, THERE is strong talk and occasional protests, but little more.

While giving a somewhat restrained "tit for tat" response to the harassment of U.S. citizens in Russia, the U.S. still has given no clear warning to the Russians that it no longer will tolerate such acts.

Nor has the administration given anything more than lip service—promptly challenged by U.S. Ambassador to the UN Andrew Young—to doing something about the Russian-Cuban conquests in Africa.

Truly, this may be Cold War, Act II. Unfortunately, the star performers on one side are unchanged in their zeal to take all they can get. On the other, it is a weak performance. We can only hope Act III does not have the tragic ending which seems all too evident.

AN EDITORIAL:

Rage Blights Up Their Life

AS CIVILIZATION advances, our hold on the things that keep us civilized seems to become more and more difficult to maintain.

That was the consensus among social critics and a good many average citizens a year ago this month (July 13) when New York City experienced its second major power failure in a dozen years.

The first time the lights went out back in 1965, New Yorkers took the darkness in stride. Not so last summer when the blackout left stores looted and sections of the city in ruin.

WHAT CAUSED the mayhem and destruction? Undoubtedly summer heat and humidity had something to do with it. The power outage of 1965 came on a cool fall evening, and people treated the inconvenience as a lark.

Psychologist Morton Bard noted that the rioting in 1977 had about it "a quality of madness." Others saw it as a byproduct of inner-city frustration that had been building over the past decade.

"We have reduced people in the ghetto to the point where they function on the level of predatory animals," said black educator Kenneth Clark.

However, author Midge Decter wrote that the youth "who went rampaging on that hot July night were neither innocents nor savages...

"They were people in the grip of a pathology that arises from moral chaos. They were doing something they knew to be wrong but had been given license for, and had not been able to find the inner resources to overcome their temptation."

WHATEVER THE motivation for last year's night of pillage, the opportunity was provided by an act of God—a lightning bolt that knocked out a major power station.

But municipal officials around the country know that nature does not confine its whimsies to the Big Apple. Lightning can strike anywhere.

And given the combination of failed generators and total darkness, who's to say that what happened in New York couldn't happen in almost any other American city?

ANDREW TULLY:

Title VI Failed To Ring High Court Mental Bell

WASHINGTON—In the Bakke case, the country seems to have come to its senses after being caught up in the hysteria of the program its supporters call "affirmative action," but which too often actually constitutes an illegal negative approach.

Allan Bakke was twice denied admission to the University of California Medical School at Davis because he was white. The university admitted it, and conceded that Bakke's admission test scores were higher than many of those admitted under the minority program.

Don't ask me why it took the Supreme Court so long to make up its mind. It accepted the case in February 1977, but a year and four months elapsed before the highest bench discovered—or remembered—the applicable law.

THAT LAW IS found in Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which prohibits discrimination on account of race in any federally assisted program. Bakke was discriminated against by the medical school on account of race.

I was surprised at the Court's slim 5-to-4 decision for Bakke. How could any man on that bench ignore Title VI? How could such a simply stated law be misinterpreted by even a high school freshman?

The answer to both questions obviously is that the minority was influenced by the powerful lobby of civil rights zealots. One of the main arguments of those zealots is that blacks should be compensated for past injustices.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, the Court's only black, and a man of integrity, was taken in by that argument. He concluded that:

"IN LIGHT OF the sorry history of discrimination and its devastating effect on the lives of Negroes, bringing the Negro into the mainstream of American life should be a state interest of the highest order."

I agree. Who doesn't? But Marshall was saying that it was okay to violate a law of the land—Title VI.

Regrettably, he was also saying that Allan Bakke should properly be penalized for the sins of the admitted slaveholders of more than 100 years ago, and of the more subtle injustices imposed since by closet slaveholders.

No. To paraphrase an old saying, one wrong cannot be corrected by a second wrong. Title VI still protects blacks and other non-whites from discrimination on account of race.

THAT'S IMPORTANT. But so is the law's flatly stated pronouncement that its protection is also extended to whites. Justice Lewis Powell Jr., speaking for the majority, said the only relevant words:

"Preferring members of any one group for no reason other than race or ethnic origin is discrimination for its own sake." Nothing in that statement suggests that "affirmative action" programs must be discontinued.

Indeed, the Court's majority agreed that race may be considered in deciding who is admitted to a college.

But the decision struck down the extremist policy of the California medical school which set aside 16 of 100 places for members of minority groups. That was setting a quota inimical to Title VI.

AT ANY RATE, the Court endorsed Harvard's approach in its search for minority students. Harvard does not set a fixed number of places in an entering class and reserve them for blacks or other minority students.

Instead, it sometimes lets the race of an applicant "tip the balance in his favor," just as it sometimes decides that a farm boy from Idaho can bring something to Harvard College that a Bostonian cannot offer.

Similarly, a black student often can bring something that a white student cannot offer. Fair enough and—more important—legal.

Most colleges have always sought educational diversity by mixing rich kids with poor kids, Italians with WASPS, football players with musicians, farmers with budding physicists. Unfortunately, the University of California took the fatuous, "Look-Ma-How-Liberal-I-Am" approach.

Homeowner Relates Tax Plight, Asks For Help

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Where do we go for help? To whom do we turn? Our state senator will not be our senator any more. Our U.S. senator may not be our senator any more. Our U.S. representative is retired. The politicians who are running for office will promise anything to get your vote. We need help right now!

In some five years our little two-bedroom house will be paid for and clear. It is in less than two blocks from Wheelock school. That means nothing now. A young couple who might like to buy this house could find that their children would have to attend grade school across town.

We are in walking distance from Hutchinson and Monterey but a student living in this house might have to attend school miles from this area by government order.

Yet, we do not want to sell this house. We want to live here in our retirement some 10 years from now. The local tax office tells me that the value of this house went up 73 percent recently. My taxes go up from $200 to over $350. They have two more shots at raising my taxes before I retire.

My wife and I will have to retire on a very small income. We have very little retirement and because of low salary and high income taxes we have been able to save very little. For the past ten years we have worked hard and dreamed of our retirement in our little house. That dream is now a nightmare.

To whom do we turn? Who will help us? America the land of opportunity yesterday has turned into a land of hopelessness tomorrow. Who is there to hear our cry?

Plans For Nude Scene In Tech Play Draws Protest

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

After reading Mr. Kerns' feature article Sunday, I suppose that congratulations are in order for Ronald Schulz and Richard Weaver of the Texas Tech theater department.

These two educators, with the sanction of Dr. Lawrence Graves, dean of Arts and Science at Tech, will have the great distinction of bringing Texas Tech its first play with a totally nude scene.

In the article, Weaver acknowledges that they are "breaking new ground" by bringing the stage drama "Equus" to the campus with its totally nude scene presumably to be played by Tech students.

Weaver states that Tech is legally bound to perform the drama exactly as written. He then proceeds at another point in the article to detail at least three other schools which did not perform it as written, apparently without being hauled into court.

This noble concern to adhere to the letter as well as the spirit of the law is at best suspect when so little concern for the local statutes relative to public nudity seems evident. Schulz states that the nude scene is a very minor part of the play hardly ever mentioned in reviews.

At another point in the article he appears to contradict himself by stating that there would be no reason to do the play (if the scene was altered in any way). Ironically, while the realism of a totally nude scene seems so important to both of these men, actors play the role of horses in the drama.

If the Texas Tech Regents saw fit to ban the sale of alchohol on the campus, surely they will take note of what's happening in the Theatre department. Let's encourage our Regents to stand firm and not be influenced by the old argument that "everyone else is doing it" or by misuse of the term "artistic freedom."

While the taxpayers of the country are in a mood to revolt, they should broaden their sights to include a call for a greater degree of accountability from the public employes in our institutions of higher learning. Even though most of them are tenured, we might still find ways not to fund this sort of foolishness.

Jerry Nislar, 2319 17th St.

Veteran Teacher Has Some Thoughts On Big Brother

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I was interested and dismayed by your editorial Sunday, June 11. Interested because I agree with you: Most Lubbock people are law-abiding. By laws, however, I mean those passed by the Congress or by the Texas Legislature.

Rules by government "Big Brother" bureaus are not law and are unconstitutional. Neither the Congress nor the Legislature has the authority or the implied right to delegate its law-making power. Nor does a court have the right to rewrite the law. Your editorial dismayed me because you did not seem to recognize these facts.

Your paper was dismayed by the Supreme Court's ruling that the police could search a newspaper office. You were not so dismayed when that Court rewrote the Constitution and said that OSHA did not have to show "probable cause" to get a warrant.

Busing is a rule made by "Big Brother" not by Congress which has made its wishes plain by the prohibiting of Federal funds (i.e. taxpayers' money) for busing. I understand "Big Brother" HEW has gone to court in an effort to defy this law.

Middle-income taxpayers (who foot the bills) need to tell the bureaucrats, "You have gone far enough!" That was the message of the passage of tax repeal in California.

As a teacher of 28 years experience I know busing may be harmful to small children. Problems will arise with keeping records straight and with the use of equipment.

Bureaucrats do not, as far as I can tell, care about the welfare of anybody except themselves. This is fairly obvious from the storm they are raising in California. In Oakland where street-sweepers get $9 an hour, bureaucrats are firing $3 an hour librarians. That is vengeance and defiance, not economy.

School teachers are being fired ($8,000 a year) but not $30,000 a year administrators. That is vengeance and not economy.

The busing ordered in Lubbock is a defiance of the elected representatives of the people as far as I am concerned. If my children were in the public schools, I would fight having them bused. I respect people who are working to guarantee us our constitutional rights.

I am more than a little fed-up with those who try to impose their will on us. It is time for the people who pay the bills to follow those in California who said, "That's far enough! Stop or Else!"

Hale Center Woman Seeks Protection From Protectors

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I feel I must take the time to remind the people of our area that there are honest, hard-working, community-minded funeral professionals in each area of our country.

The news media blasts out about any unscrupulous ones, the Federal Trade Commission spends millions investigating and labeling the whole industry for the actions of a few unworthy to even be called Funeral Directors.

But, thank God, we do have men and women that have the desire to serve at that most difficult time, not to get rich nor to pressure people into spending more than they might wish but to assist with the many details that must be taken care of in a manner of each person's choosing.

It would be staggering to know the amount the FTC has cost the taxpayers for its many investigations into various businesses. Each time this agency starts an investigation, we not ony pay for that, but the product they are investigating ends up costing the consumer much more.

Think what government interference has done to the automobile, gasoline, farm prices, medical care, the building industry, etc. These claims by the FTC, and I might add OSHA, against an increasing number of businesses and industries are costing Americans more and more every day.

I feel the time has come when we, the people, need protection from our protection.

Mrs. Bill Freeman, Hale Center

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Sex And Violins

IF YOU'RE counting on summer "escape reading" to blot out your troubles for a couple of weeks, there'll be no escape for you this vacation. Most everything on the best-seller lists is guaranteed to make you feel you're either fat, lazy or a lousy lover.

And when they can come up with a whole book on "How to Flatten Your Stomach," it's time to hunt up "Gone With The Wind."

Not that a lot of us couldn't benefit from it, but it's not exactly the kind of thing you want to be caught reading on the beach. Especially when you're squeezed into a bathing suit that spent the winter in the attic, shrinking—and you didn't.

In fact, a quick browse through the bookstores will make you feel guilty even being there.

ONLY A SLOB would plan to lie around and read while the rest of the world is out jogging.

That's the impression you get from all the titles. There's "The Complete Runner," "Running and Being" and "The Complete Book of Running." Best sellers all.

As a jogging dropout, just thinking about what's inside those books brings up memories that leave me in complete exhaustion. Not to mention the guilt about what's happened to the old chassis since I gave up pounding around the high-school track.

They've got books to remedy that little problem, too.

ONE OF THE hottest sellers on the hard-cover list is something titled "Adrien Arpel's Three-Week Crash Makeover, Shapeover Beauty Program."

And the fact that it's been a best-seller for more than three months is even more discouraging. That means everybody in Nantucket will be made over and shaped over by the time I waddle out on the sand.

Besides, I don't think three weeks would do it. Not for this confirmed, confessed and unrepentant chocaholic.

Which is why I'm not going to buy the paperback best-seller called "The Taming of the C.A.N.D.Y. Monster," either. The jacket blurb says it's full of warnings about "continuously advertised nutritionally deficient yummies" and what kind of light summer reading is that?

DITTO FOR "Our Bodies, Ourselves." It's my vacation and my secret cache of Snickers and I don't need the Boston Women's Health Book Collective (that's the author) to make me feel any more sinful than I already do.

It's not a problem that's limited to the female sex. There's a male beauty book on the list, too, called "Looking Good." Guaranteed, I guess, to turn all the ladies on the beach into boy watchers, and you can bet I'm not going to pack that into Old Dad's suitcase.

And speaking of sex, well, there's the perennial best-seller, of course, "The Joy of Sex." With illustrations. I must get around to reading that one of these days.

But I'm sure not going to ruin my summer by finding out, after all these years, how much I still have to learn. There's time for self-improvement, but it can wait until winter.

THERE'S ALSO "Your Erroneous Zones," which I haven't read yet, either. And "Delta of Venus," which is advertised as "elegant erotica." Tempting, but maybe not quite the thing for an inelegant grandmother on sand-castle duty.

If you're overweight and underactive in the boudoir, you can kill two birds with "The Dieter's Guide to Weight Loss During Sex," but if you can flash that on a crowded beach you're braver than I am.

Moving right along to the cerebral stuff, two big sellers of the month are "Pulling Your Own Strings," which tells you "how to take charge of your own life," and "Notes on Love and Courage," a collection of essays on "self-contemplation."

ALL GOOD STUFF, no doubt, or it wouldn't be on top of the charts. But the only thing I want to contemplate on vacation is blue sky and sunshine. Time enough for "the meaning of it all" when I can't get the car out of the snowbound garage.

Even the best-selling fiction has a depressing ring to it. "The Holcroft Covenant" is about Nazis; "The Last Convertible" follows five men through World War II into middle age; "Kalki" is the story of a reincarnated Hindu god who brings down the apocalypse, and "The Woman's Room" describes one gal's "rough road to liberation."

Who needs it? I'm already liberated. And I'll tell you something else: I already know how to flatten my stomach. I'm going to lie on it and reread Scarlett O'Hara.

Cloning Researcher Suing Over Name In Book

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A prominent British biologist filed a $7 million suit Monday against publishers J.B. Lippincott Co., charging that his name was used without authorization in a book about cloning that he says is a hoax.

The book, entitled "In His Image, the Cloning of a Man," was written by David M. Rorvik.

The book claims that an American millionaire, code-named "Max," enlisted the support of Rorvik and a doctor code-named "Darwin" and financed the birth of a boy who is his clone, or genetic duplicate. The book says a nucleus from one of "Max's" cells was inserted into a human egg, which was then implanted in a surrogate mother, code-named "Sparrow." The boy, the book claims, was born before Christmas 1976.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court on behalf of Dr. J.D. Bromhall of Oxford, England. Through his attorney, Arthur Raynes, the scientist also seeks a court declaration that the book is a "fraud and a hoax, that it is fiction and not non-fiction, and that no such cloned boy exists."

The book was published as non-fiction by Lippincott, based in Philadelphia.

In the suit, Bromhall says "no such clone boy exists, and no such persons known as 'Max, Darwin or Sparrow' existed."

The scientist says in the complaint that he has a high standing throughout the United States and Europe for his knowledge in experimental embryology.

He further contends that his reputation was injured by the unauthorized use of his name in the book, and reference to correspondence with Rorvik, which he says created the impression that he was vouching for the accuracy and credibility of the book.

By using Bromhall's name, the suit states, Rorvik intended to have his readers think Bromhall believed there had been a successful cloning of a baby boy.

The author did this, the suit claims, by publishing, without authorization, excerpts from Bromhall's doctoral thesis entitled: "An Investigation of Nuclear Transplantation in the Mammalian Egg," which explores the possibility of human cloning.

Bromhall claims the book has been "scorned by the scientific community in the United States and Europe as a complete and utter fraud and hoax, and denounced as being pure fiction."

Bromhall also seeks an unspecified portion of the profits from the book in addition to $7 million in damages on the basis that part of the book's profits derived from use of his name.

Uranium Shipments Resume

BRUSSELS (AP) — The nine European Common Market countries have reached a compromise with the United States that is expected to lead to a resumption of U.S. shipments of enriched uranium to Europe, European and U.S. officials reported Monday.

Shipments of U.S. enriched uranium to the European nations were cut off by Congress April 10 because of a European refusal, led by France, to renegotiate safeguard clauses in an agreement between the United States and the European energy agency Euratom.

The cutoff, stemming from congressional fears that the uranium could be stolen or illegally used for weapons, had become one of the most difficult issues in the Carter administration's relations with European partners.

Officials said Monday that Guido Brunner, the Common Market commissioner for energy, made the compromise proposal Friday to Deane R. Hinton, the U.S. ambassador to the Common Market countries. European sources said the U.S. assisted the Common Market in drawing up its proposal with a view toward making it acceptable to Congress.

European sources said the proposal offers to renegotiate the contract, but with the exclusion of issues now under discussion in the Vienna-based International Nuclear Fuel Cycle Evaluation Program.

The Vienna study, which is to present its final report at the end of next year, is dealing with some of the toughest issues the U.S. wants to renegotiate with Europe, including the reprocessing of uranium. France already has a reprocessing project.

Most of the European energy partners had been willing to renegotiate even the difficult issues, but France resisted on the grounds that the United States had no right to demand the renegotiation of a contract already signed. But with the most complex issues deferred under the compromise agreement, sources said, France agreed to go along.

Common Market Press Officer Robert Elphick said Monday that he hoped the European offer "will mean an end to further problems in the supply of uranium".

U.S. officials had indicated previously that uranium export licenses could be issued again as soon as Europe agreed to open the negotiations.

At the U.S. mission to the Common Market, spokesman William Zavis said Monday that the United States was satisfied with the latest European offer and that new deals for the sale of enriched uranium to Europe probably "would not be subject to restrictions."

Europe receives lower-grade uranium from both the United States and the Soviet Union, but most of its highly enriched uranium comes from America.

Relatives Of Shock Victim File Suit

Relatives of a 27-year-old man killed in a Plainview accident have filed a $15 million damage suit.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court Monday asks $5 million in actual damages and $10 million in exemplary or punitive damages.

Juan Jaquez Juanes reportedly was killed Oct. 2, 1977, at a Plainview grain storage facility.

Plaintiffs — described in the suit as Mexican citizens — include Juanes' widow and four children between the ages of two and eight.

Defendants in the suit's first cause of action include Southwestern Public Service Company; Conlee Grain, Inc.; Conlee Seed, Inc.; Donald Conlee, Douglas Conlee, J.D. Conlee and Ronald Douglas.

According to the suit, Juanes died from electrical shock after a grain auger came into contact with exposed uninsulated wiring.

Defendants named above owned, constructed, maintained and operated the plant and grain storage facility and installed exposed and uninsulated wiring, the suit alleges.

The suit says Juanes was employed by Conlee Seed, Inc., and/or Douglas.

Accreditation Approved For Area School Districts

Divorce Only Means To Fund Wife's Care

NEW YORK (AP) — Howard and Marie Nini, who worked all their lives, paid their bills, and looked forward to a peaceful and secure retirement, say they may have to end their 36-year marriage in order to pay doctors' bills.

Mrs. Nini is suffering from Huntington's Disease, and the couple say they can't afford to pay for her hospitalization. They also have been told that their Social Security and pension benefits are too high for them to qualify for Medicaid.

But a divorce would make Mrs. Nini, 56, eligible. Mrs. Nini has suffered from Huntington's Disease for 10 years and has been told that she needs long-term hospitalization.

"I don't know what to do," said Nini, 63, a retired truckdriver who collects about $800 a month in Social Security and pension checks.

Nini said Monday that when he told the hospital where Marie was to have been admitted that the couple cannot raise the required $6,000 annually, aides encouraged him to admit her and not pay the bills.

"I am scared the hospital will sue me and I will have to sell my house," Nini said. It took him 27 years to pay off the mortgage.

"I would feel just awful about it all," he said at the prospect of not paying the bills. "I've stayed out of trouble all my life. I have always paid my bills. Either I just go ahead and put Marie into the hospital, or I have to divorce her.

"What do I tell the judge? That I want to dump her?"

MAY HAVE TO DIVORCE — Howard and Marie Nini hold hands in their Flushing, N.Y., home recently. The Ninis may have to divorce after 36 years of marriage so that Marie can be eligible for Medicaid to pay for long-term hospitalization she needs for treatment of Huntington's disease. (AP Laserphoto)

ICC Has Amtrak Hearings

DALLAS (AP) — In this hurry-up age of jumbo jets, it's still hard to find anybody who's indifferent about a more leisurely form of transportation -- namely railroads.

About 40 opponents and proponents of the struggling, federally-subsidized Amtrak rail system lined up Monday to voice their views at the first of a two-day public hearing sponsored by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The purpose of the nationwide hearings is to receive citizen input into the Department of Transportation's proposals to trim the entire Amtrak system from 27,000 miles to 18,000 miles and eliminate two Chicago-to-Texas routes.

Longview Mayor Bob Maness said his city's survival 100 years ago was due largely to the coming of the railroad. He added that the East Texas industrial hub will fight to keep passenger service there. If anything, Maness said Congress should improve Amtrak's passenger service. He conceded Longview's 4 a.m. boarding time on the Inter-American train — one of two DOT wants eliminated — has done little to encourage ridership.

"It would be better if we had a better boarding time, but we're willing to keep what we have," the mayor said.

Waco Chamber of Commerce Director Wade Terrell also urged improvement of the Sunbelt routes and suggested that Amtrak service through Dallas be rerouted through Waco. If DOT's suggestions are approved by Congress, Dallas' Amtrak service would be phased out in two years. However, re-routing through Waco is not part of the agency's plan.

R.E. Foiles, vice president of Trailways Inc., was one of those offering the opposing view. Armed with statistics and projections, Foiles said the government must add $2 for every dollar paid by an Amtrak customer to keep the railroad running.

"Amtrak had a $530 million operating budget last year," he said. "They will be needing $665 million in 1980 and by 1984 that figure will be almost $1 billion."

Foiles said if Amtrak is to be continued, it should be confined to sections of the country where it can break even. He said the 7-year-old service has been a "costly failure in most places."

Hearing officer Jim Tuite said a second public forum will be conducted in San Antonio Wednesday. The hearings will continue across the country until Sept. 30 when results are reported to the ICC. The agency will consider the data and make its report to Congress by Dec. 30.

City Groups Blast Council

Representatives of 14 primarily minority organizations Monday assailed the Lubbock City Council for offering only "excuses" instead of immediately passing a city ordinance prohibiting discrimination against minority residents by local nightclubs.

Spokesmen for the newly-formed Coalition for Equal Justice told Human Relations Commission members they would assist the panel in drafting an ordinance banning the alleged practices and in pressing the city council to adopt it into law.

Commissioners heard their comments in their regular monthly meeting even though a quorum of the 11-member panel was not present until almost 45 minutes after the meeting opened.

Steve McIntyre of the National Lawyers Guild said the council's action in passing a resolution denouncing the practice but not enacting ordinances to officially ban discrimination in public facilities indicated a "sluggishness in protecting the basic human rights of Lubbock citizens."

The guild is one of several legal organizations involved in the coalition, which announced its formation during a press conference called earlier in the day.

Representatives of the Brown Berets, the National Organization for Women (NOW), the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Association for Mexican-American Women, and the American Civil Liberties Union also presented similar statements to the commission.

NOW member Dannie Botros, though, was the most vocal complainant, calling the council's claims that a court of record must be obtained before the ordinance could be enforced a simple "smoke screen."

"That just won't cut it," she told commissioners. "We intend to pressure the council into passing this and we intend to keep up the pressure."

Council members have said any action on their part would lack teeth because the city can only assess a fine of up to $200 for violation of city ordinances.

Such cases then would be appealed to the county court and possibly dropped because the city has no court of record whereby appeals would be only on the basis of legal technicalities rather than privilege.

Coalition member Rodric Schoen, a Texas Tech law professor, said the commission's intent to develop such an ordinance and the council's resolution condemning the practices were "encouraging." But he too challenged the city's contentions by claiming the court of record would have "no bearing whatsoever."

Earlier Monday, Jesse George read a statement commending the council for passing an anti-discrimination resolution, but urged councilmen to take additional action.

George said the council should "take those steps necessary to enact and enforce a meaningful city ordinance — with the teeth for enforcement — against discriminatory practices in Lubbock.

"While federal statutes and guidelines may be helpful, they are far too inadequate," George said, noting a pattern of discriminatory practices must be proven under federal law — "a process which is far too time-consuming and a process which allows interim discriminatory practices."

George said the discrimination by local clubs is "Lubbock's problem and should be (halted by) Lubbock's solution."

He said other Texas cities have successfully adopted ordinances prohibiting discrimination by businesses and individuals and "if they can do it, then so can Lubbock."

Townspeople Have Final Reunion Before Moving

CALLIHAM (AP) — For the 500 folks who recently returned to this South Texas brush country community it was a final visit to the scene of their memories.

And for the 20 families that still live here it was a time for warm recollections — of the swimming hole and the old Rice Drug Store — punctuated by bitterness.

Soon there will be no residents of Calliham, only former residents. The town will fall victim to progress and be replaced by nothing.

Calliham is falling prey to the Chike Canyon reservoir. Federal officials have calculated that the area will be needed for the reservoir to spill over into during extreme flooding.

So, this past weekend, Calliham residents past and present collected here for a bittersweet reunion.

"If we'd all stuck together and decided to stay, we'd have stayed, because this place isn't going to go under water, that's a lie," said Harry Shenkir, a McMullen County commissioner.

Federal officials have estimated the reservoir at flood elevation of 233 feet would leave the town under five feet of water. Folks here don't believe it.

"They changed the engineering to get us off. That's another lie," Shenkir said.

The federal government will buy out the remaining residents and establish New Calliham — one mile south.

"It'll kill anybody," Shenkir said. "If they'd told us the truth right at the beginning...But they've been lying to us here lately. You know, when the federal government begins lying to you, why..."

Some local folks have cleared out already. Ten families headed for Three Rivers, 10 miles east, or Tilden, the only other community in this county.

Calliham was once a bustling little town — complete with three hotels, four beer joints, a plank sidwalk and two solid blocks of businesses.

But World War II marked the start of a gradual decline.

Nevertheless, the families that stayed enjoyed the pace of life.

"In 1971 there was little mention about the dam," said H.E. Sewell. "Everybody was happy about it. We put down our mobile home. We planted our trees and everything. I figured by the time I was old I'd have shade. Now they tell us we have to go."

Herman Smith built a four-bedroom house here four years ago.

"At the time they were figuring on building the dam further down, you know. Nobody thought this would happen," Smith said.

Smith complained that he found out only two years ago that his town was marked for extinction. Other residents also grumble about not being given advance notice when a Congressional subcommittee came to Three Rivers for a hearing in 1973.

"We read it in the paper after it was over," said Bobby Shannon, who has moved to Tilden.

Calliham is not a city, rather it is a community that has cared for its own. Large doses of community spirit mixed with ample helpings of volunteer labor built a water system and financed the fire department.

When the high school closed due to dwindling enrollment, the locals remodeled the old gym into a meeting room.

But the efforts will go unrecognized by the federal government. The gym will be seized without compensation because Calliham is not an official entity.

Many of the residents realize the reality of the situation is that they live in a small, uninfluential community.

Everyone else wants the dam. Corpus Christi owns the water rights to this stretch of the Frio River and Three Rivers will gain a lake in its backyard.

Even the folks here once favored the reservoir, until they found out their town would be drowned by it.

"I guess the way they looked at it, Calliham is no bigger than a city block of Corpus," Smith said.

"Not as big as," added Shannon.

Teen-Age Girl Assisted In Holdup, Victim Says

Attendant Larry Anderson Monday identified Stacy Staggs, a slight, 17-year-old Brownfield girl, as one of two persons who took part in the April 27 shotgun robbery of an Avenue Q motel.

Anderson said the only thing he was thinking of while being robbed was the possibility of "that big ball of fire" coming from the barrel of a sawed-off shotgun — and the possibility of dying.

"I am positive that is the person," Anderson, who was 31 at the time of the offense, said of Miss Staggs.

The testimony took place before a seven-man, five-woman jury during the first day of Miss Staggs' aggravated robbery trial, being conducted in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court.

The defendant is accused in connection with the approximate 10 p.m. holdup of the Imperial 400 Motel at 910 Avenue Q.

Testimony indicated Miss Staggs and a 16-year-old male companion were arrested by police about 11:30 p.m. near Slide Road and the Brownfield Highway.

Anderson said he became suspicious after a young man and woman entered the motel about 10 p.m.

He said he started to reach for a pistol he kept behind the counter when the man, dressed in an Army fatigue jacket, suddenly produced the sawed-off shotgun.

"He said: 'This is a holdup — want all your (expletive deleted) money," Anderson testified.

The witness said the woman he identified as Miss Staggs then took the money. He said she also spotted the loaded pistol behind the counter and took it.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Bonner Smith asked Anderson to describe the female bandit's demeanor. "Very, very calm and very confident," Anderson said.

On cross-examination, Anderson indicated he had not seen a weapon on the female when the holdup was announced.

Police testified that they were looking later that night for suspects in a Volkswagen bus because of information given them by Michael Cooper, whose apartment residence faced an alley behind the motel.

Cooper testified he had seen the bus in the alley about 10 p.m. and informed police of it when they responded to the robbery call.

Police Cpl. Robert Westmoreland Jr. said he and another officer stopped a Volkswagen van later that night near 34th Street and Slide Road.

He identified Miss Staggs as one of the two occupants of the vehicle.

Admitted before the jury was a purported oral statement of the defendant's.

Westmoreland said officers were advised by radio that about $160 was believed stolen in the robbery.

According to Westmoreland, the defendant stated: "(Expletive deleted) — we didn't get that much."

Cpl. Tom Smallwood Jr. also identified the defendant as an occupant. He testified that he found a loaded pistol and an unloaded sawed-off shotgun inside the van.

Smallwood said the shotgun was not operable.

Legislators, Ag Head Eye Land Use Tax

AUSTIN (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Monday Texas farmers and ranchers are paying 8 percent of their income as property taxes — twice as much as urban taxpayers.

Applause from an audience that included members of the Texas Farmers Union indicated most favored a proposal that would tax farm and timber land on its productivity, rather than market value.

Chairman Bill Patman of the Senate subcommittee on agriculture said the "key to tax reform is the adoption" of a constitutional amendment to tax farm and ranch land on its productivity.

Sen. Bob Price, R-Pampa, questioned, however, how the proposal would be put into effect.

He said Parmer County in his district produces more grain sorghum than any other county, and he added, "We don't want to penalize a man who is aggressive and a good manager."

"Should we base taxes on a five-year period, or 10 years? What is fair?" asked Price.

Patman, D-Ganado, said he thought 99.5 percent of the farm and ranch acreage in Texas "would be protected."

Texans Must Wait On Insurance Fees

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Insurance Board decided Monday to keep Texans in suspense a while longer on whether their homeowners rates will rise, fall or stay the same.

"I can't say whether it will be one or two days or one or two weeks," said chairman Hugh Yantis, who declared he was ready to vote at once to keep rates [illegible] levels. Board member Durwood Manford said he favored a slight increase.

Heavy Construction Equipment Target Of Lubbock Vandals

Pranksters, apparently on a summer lark, recently caused an estimated $6,000 damage to a small fleet of huge construction equipment.

Sheriff's deputies continue to investigate the Friday incident in which a 12-ton, a 10-ton and a 6-ton roller, a rock spreader and two pneumatic rollers were vandalized near New Deal.

Pat Patterson of the Henry Stafford Construction Company said miscreants apparently climbed aboard the machines, started their engines, then rammed them into each other.

Teenagers suspected of killing a Lubbock man's pet Siamese cat brought misery to the animal's owner recently.

Dennis R. Badgett of 6106 Kenosha Ave., who said he'd been victimized by vandals previously, told police someone shot his female cat with a BB-gun Monday before drowning the animal.

Meanwhile, burglars continued to make their presence felt around Lubbock households.

Kelly Hogan of 2220 Knoxville Ave. said someone broke through his front door Sunday or Monday then swiped his stereo system valued at $1,000.

Mito Perez of 3224 Baylor St. had similar problems during the same two-day period when intruders gathered up his television and stereo, together valued at $500.

Though nothing was taken during an apparent attempted burglary at the Bowman Lumber Co., 8301 S. University Ave., manager Joe Swan said $500 worth of damage was inflicted. Swan said a plate glass door had been smashed.

Joe Dale Wunneburger, manager of the Pizza Hut at 4206 19th St., could sympathize. Someone broke a plate glass window there Monday, causing $200 damage.

Two contractors also were victimized by burglars recently.

Curtis Whorton of 5102 40th St. said someone broke into his pickup truck during the past three days and stole a $700 paint spraying rig, while Jimmy Huron, a sheetrocker, reported the theft of $400 worth of tools.

Whoever pried a front door at Bell Pharmaceutical Co. this weekend reportedly made off with 90 dozen syringes. Reports indicated the haul was valued at $570.

Cecil McRay Pharr of 4423 37th St. said that while he was at church Sunday, someone got through a garage window at his home and stole a .22-caliber revolver and a box of shells.

The complainant also said the burglar fired several shots inside the residence.

Juan Jose Ruiz of 2134 Emory St., No. 162, reported a $100 stereo and $300 cash stolen from his vehicle while he was at a restaurant in the 100-block of N. University Avenue Sunday. The victim told police his car was not locked at the time of the incident.

According to Karen Reid of Lorenzo, a car burglar broke a window in her vehicle parked in the 2400-block of Broadway late Saturday or early Sunday and made off with her purse containing $175 cash.

Glen Dale Adams of 1317 E. 17th St., No. 10, told officers someone climbed up exterior plumbing pipes to get to his second-story apartment this weekend and stole a television set and $60 cash.

Josue M. Ramirez said whoever got through a front window at his 2508 Santa Fe Drive home Sunday stole a television, lawnmower and cassette recorder.

Cheryl Ann Lowe of 4907 10th St. told police a $1,000 wedding ring set was stolen from her home at an unknown time.

Police Searching For Hit-Run Driver

MIDLAND (Special) — Authorities today will continue the search for a driver who struck and killed a 57-year-old Big Spring State Hospital patient early Monday.

The body of Lillie Faye Holden was found two-tenths of a mile east of Midland on Interstate 20 about 3:30 a.m. Monday, a Department of Public Safety spokesman said.

It was not clear how the woman got to the highway.

A spokesman at the state hospital was not available for comment late Monday.

British Approve Boeing Aircraft Deal

LONDON (AP) — The British government Monday announced approval for state-owned British Airways to buy 19 Boeing 737's and develop, with American help, a new short-range jet aircraft designed to bring the world's most remote airfields into the jet age.

The announcements were made in the House of Commons by Industry Minister Gerald Kaufman and Trade Secretary Edmund Dell.

The development was the latest in a recent flurry of announcements of airplane purchases by the world's airlines.

Many of those have concerned the A-300 Airbus, made by a European consortium. Several European airlines last week placed orders for the mid-sized airbuses, an event analysts said was a crucial blow to the prestige of the American aircraft industry, which supplies most of the free world's commercial airliners. No American manufacturer makes an equivalent of the 250-passenger A-300.

Monday's order was a minor victory for the U.S. aircraft industry; the 737, the smallest plane in the Boeing line, is not competitive with the A-300.

Boeing Co. officials in Seattle said the $225 million purchase would have little impact on the company because it had been expected and planned for.

Company spokesman Harold Carr said the delivery schedule calls for all of the 737s to be delivered in 1980, with the first in January 1980.

But Tom Hiscox, a union leader at the Christchurch, England, factory where BAC 111's are made, said the decision spelled the end of Britain's civil aviation industry. He blasted the government for telling the public to "buy British," but then telling British Airways to buy American.

Trade Secretary Dell also announced his approval for British Airways to "enter into negotiations with British Aerospace" for the purchase of three to six BAC 111's, which are more expensive to operate than the 737.

The government plan to develop short-range jet aircraft, in cooperation with American companies, will involve spending about $475 million for full-scale development of a new commuter-type aircraft, the 146 fanjet, which has been on the drawing boards since 1973.

The plane should go into commercial operation by 1982, Kaufman told the House of Commons.

The plane will be powered by four Avco-Lycoming ALF 502-H engines, built by Avco Corp. of Stratford, Conn., which has also offered to act as a "risk-sharing contractor for the manufacture of the wings," according to Kaufman. The offer, which is being considered by the British government, apparently means the American firm is prepared to build the wings.

"We have established that a market for up to 1,200 of these aircraft exists," said British Aerospace spokesman Robert Gardner.

There was no decision, however, on the really big question facing British Aerospace,the nationalized aircraft firm: which airplane should Britain go for in the next generation of big passenger jets?

The options are subcontracting for Boeing on the new 757, working in partnership with McDonnell-Douglas on their new ATMR aircraft incorporating British Rolls-Royce engines, or joining Britain's Common Market partners in building the new generation B-10 European Airbus.

Court Hits Work Order

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—A federal judge Monday dissolved a back-to-work order issued last week against 3,500 striking workers at the Aluminum Company of America's three Blount County plants.

U.S. District Judge Robert L. Taylor said a state judge's temporary retraining order violated parts of the Norris-LaGuardia Act which forbid back-to-work injunctions for strikes on issues excluded from arbitration in labor contracts.

Circuit Court Judge James H. Jarvis issued the restraining order Thursday. The order, forbidding the strike and picketing associated with it, had been ignored by members of Local 309 of the United Steelworkers of America.

Meanwhile, officials said the two sides are to resume talks Tuesday under the supervision of a federal mediator.

The union and the company met briefly with the mediator, George Rosenberry, Saturday and Sunday, but nothing more than an outline of the issues was discussed, Elton Jones, an ALCOA spokesman said.

The workers voted to walk out July 4 over what union officials said was ALCOA's use of 200 to 300 outside contract laborers at its one aluminum smelting and two fabricating plants.

Doug Moser, Local 309's president, said use of the contractors for maintenance, construction and production work deprived the union of 200 to 300 jobs.

ALCOA attorneys called the outside contractors a straw-man issue used to call a strike in order to force the company to give in to other union demands now in various stages of arbitration.

Judge Taylor refused the union's request to dismiss ALCOA's suit seeking damages against the union for the strike. The union removed the case from Jarvis' to Taylor's court Friday.

Taylor allowed to remain in effect portions of Jarvis' order requiring that all arbitrable issues in the dispute be submitted to arbitration.

The union says the only cause of the strike is use of outside contractors, which is specifically excluded from arbitration and the no-strike clause in its 1977 agreement with ALCOA.

Refusing to say whether the company anticipates a long strike, Jones disclosed Monday that ALCOA brought more salaried personnel, food and supplies to its smelting plant Sunday.

The company's two fabricating plants were shut down when the strike began but both potlines for manufacturing aluminum ingots at the smelting plant are operating. Officials said it would take two weeks to resume smelting operations if the potlines were allowed to cool.

ALCOA says the strike costs it $3 million a week. The company's payroll at the three Tennessee plants exceeds $100 million a year.

Judge Won't Bring End To Strike

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A federal judge refused on Monday a Norfolk & Western Railway request to order several thousand striking railroad clerks back to work.

U.S. District Judge Stanley Roszkowski in Chicago denied an N&W request for a temporary restraining order against the Railroad Employees union.

The judge's clerk said, however, that N&W may try to get a preliminary injunction on Tuesday.

The strikers, estimated at 5,000 to 5,500 by the union and 4,000 by the company, are not working because of N&W's alleged refusal to negotiate a contract change, union spokesman Henry Fleisher said in Washington.

The general chairman of the Railway Employees union, James Yoffie, said the change would revise work rules and protect jobs threatened by technology.

The company said it has negotiated with the union since the change was requested Oct. 27, 1976, but the union said the company has refused to negotiate.

"We believe that the (Chicago) judge's denial of a back-to-work order underscores the correctness of our belief that N&W management has not attempted in full good faith to work out employee protection problems and work rules," the union said in a statement issued in Washington.

N&W spokesman Louis Phelps said most workers who were members of other unions were honoring picket lines set up at railroad facilities.

"None of our daylight crews have have shown up for work because of the pickets and we're struggling along with what we have left of our night crews still on the job," said an N&W spokesman in Kansas City.

In Cleveland, about 300 clerks were on strike and had set up picket lines at a downtown office and four other locations. But an N&W spokesman said supervisors were handling operations with no disruptions in service.

A spokesman for the railroad in St. Louis said trains were moving almost normally using supervisory personnel. But pickets were reported at offices and yards, and a local union representative said some 3,200 railroad clerks in the St. Louis area were not working.

Meanhile, pickets were set up briefly at the Missouri Pacific Railroad in St. Louis, Kansas City and Dupo, Ill. A union spokesman said the wallkout centered on MOPAC's violation of a mediation agreement reached last fall. The walkout, not related to the N&W picketing, was halted by a temporary restraining order.

Interest Rate Hike Seen In Home Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates for conventional home mortgages rose to the highest level on record last month, the government said Monday.

The average home buyer paid an effective interest rate of 9.46 percent for a new house if a conventional loan was used, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said. That was the highest rate since record-keeping began in 1963. The previous high was 9.37 percent, recorded the previous month and in December 1974.

The effective interest rate combines the interest rate on the contract and initial fees and charges. The interest rates have risen steadily since April 1977, when they were 8.94 percent.

The average loan was for $46,100 for 28.3 years and the purchase price was $62,900.

For previously occupied houses, the effective interest rate was 9.47 percent, an increase from the 9.37 percent rate in May.

The Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration also recently raised their insured interest rates from 9 percent to 9.5 percent.

City's Face-Lift Bothers Merchants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Part of Alexandria, Va., in suburban Washington is undergoing a face-lifting — one that has upset many merchants.

Someone armed with a brush and brown paint has been moving through Old Town — the official spelling is without the "e" — erasing the final "e's" on signs used by businesses to capture the olde spirit in Olde Towne Alexandria. The unidentified purist has attacked shoppe after shoppe in the section of town that's rich in colonial history. "We don't know who is responsible for this," said Marilyn Anderson, manager of what is now the Oldx Townx Tennis Shop. "We like the "e's". It's part of the town's heritage.

Childress School Bond Vote Today

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Voters today will decide a $1,995,000 school bond issue.

If voters okay the issue, a new school for kindergarten through fifth grade would be built and improvements would be made at the junior high school.

In April, Childress voters turned down a $5.5 million bond which would have been used to build a new kindergarten through eighth grade school and to renovate the high school.

Schmidt Wants Carter Promise On Energy

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt says President Carter will have to promise firm action on America's energy problems if the upcoming seven-nation economic summit is to be a success.

In an interview with the British newspaper Financial Times, the West German leader also criticized the U.S. Congress for failing to enact a comprehensive energy package.

"It would be very difficult to conceive a package deal in the sense of a world-wide economic set of complementary economic policies if the United States did not make serious efforts to reduce its deficit," Schmidt said. The text was released by the government press office.

Asked whether Carter must promise to take administrative action to curb oil imports if Congress fails to act by a certain date, Schmidt said, "Of course nobody in the world must do anything, particularly the President of the United States. But in general, I think that the underlying tendency of your question must be answered positively."

Schmidt, host of the conference that will also involve leaders of Britain, France, Italy, Japan and Canada, said the "enormous increase" in U.S. oil imports "has led to an enormous deficit in American trade and payment balances."

"This in turn has weakened the dollar and thus contributes to fuel domestic inflation in the United States," he said. "In my view, this is the most important single source of the upheaval in the worldwide network of balances of trade and payments and it should be corrected."

Schmidt said he believed President Carter, trade negotiator Robert Strauss and Federal Reserve Board Chairman G. William Miller were aware of the U.S. leadership role in the world.

"But this is certainly not wholly the case with respect to American parliamentary decision making," Schmidt added. "Just look how the energy bill has been dealt with so far."

The increase in imported oil has been blamed for the steep decline suffered by the U.S. dollar against the West German mark, the Japanese yen and other major currencies this year.

Coupled with the dollar's fall has been a sharp rise in the value of the mark, which makes West German exports less attractive abroad. Earlier this year, some West German officials claimed the United States was allowing the dollar to decline to improve U.S. exports.

But Schmidt, whose spokesmen have repeatedly argued the dollar was undervalued, said the West Germans had allowed their currency to appreciate to help trading partners sell more goods here.

"I would like to stress that Germany has contributed enormously to the growth of other people's exports by letting the German currency appreciate at a speed which nobody has ever conceived before," he said.

Last summer, U.S. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal called on West Germany and Japan to allow their currencies to rise against the dollar to help boost the world economy.

West German officials dubbed Blumenthal's comments an "open mouth policy," castigated the Carter administration for the stand and predicted it would lead to world economic chaos.

Schmidt said the two-day summit, which begins Sunday, may not "meet all the expectations which have so far been nurtured by some newspapers," but he hinted a package deal may well be in the works.

"No one can be ready to make a concession in one field as long as he does not receive in another field something he urgently needs," Schmidt said.

Schmidt described his relationship with Carter as "very good" but said warm personal ties between leaders of allied countries were not essential. There had been reports that personal releations between Carter, due here Thursday night for a state visit in advance of the summit, and Schmidt were chilly.

Nuclear Disposal Hearing In Midland

A-J Correspondent

MIDLAND — The first of three public hearings in Texas concerning a proposed underground nuclear disposal area near Carlsbad, N.M., will be held in Midland today.

Deputy Secretary John O'Leary of the Department of Energy will present the case for the controversial Waste Isolation Pilot Plant.

Basically, the WIPP would be a receiving station for some of the nation's estimated 100 million gallons of "transuranic" (elements heavier than uranium) garbage, as well as a giant ashcan for contaminated clothing, instruments and other such material.

The "hot" waste would be stored between 2,100 and 2,650 feet below the surface in what are believed to be geologically stable salt formations. The depth of any burial would depend on the relative radioactiveness of the waste.

If the project is approved, high level radioactive waste generated by America's nuclear weapons industry would cross Texas by truck or train en route to the site east of Carlsbad.

The City of Midland has a special interest in the project because of the city's water rights to 920,000 acre feet of water in Loving County on the Texas-New Mexico border.

Today's hearing will be held at 1 p.m. in the Midland College Fine Arts Building.

Similar hearings are slated in Amarillo on Wednesday and on Thursday in El Paso.

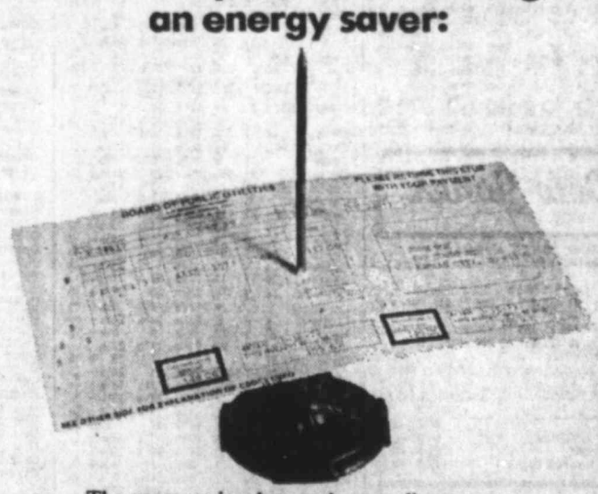
Submarine Named For Hometown

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — The USS Groton, the first submarine bearing the name of the town touted as the "Submarine Capital of the World," was commissioned Saturday. During the ceremonies at the Naval Submarine Base, U.S. Sen. Abraham Ribicoff praised the fast-attack sub as a key in the country's defense system, "the muscle of our Navy."

The high-speed, nuclear-powered attack submarine is the seventh of the SSN 688-class submarines in commission and the third to be turned out by Electric Boat. EB employs 23,000 persons at its Groton and Quonset Point, R.I., shipyards, the bulk of them at Groton.

In 1787, John Fitch demonstrated a steamboat that ran at three miles an hour with 12 mechanical oars on the Delaware River.

Here's a monthly reminder to make your next building an energy saver:



The energy crises has made us realize some things about energy: It's no longer cheap. And it isn't going to last forever.

That's why you need to make your next building a true energy saver. And that's where we can help.

We'll show you how we use special insulation methods on your building to keep the heating and cooling inside where it belongs. We offer the lowest "U" factor in the industry (a low "U" factor is a measure of good insulation effectiveness). The combination of Butler Systems and superior insulation can give you the best available protection against the weather and a high energy bill.

And we can handle your entire building project from start to finish. That saves your energy.

If you're thinking about building, give us a call. We'd like to show you how to keep those monthly reminders a little gentler. 1677

Stock Mark Posts Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted a moderate advance Monday, continuing its modest technical upswing of late last week despite weakness in the dollar in foreign exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, after drifting around last Friday's close for most of the day, turned upward late in the session to finish with a 4.33-point gain at 816.79.

In the last three trading days the average has risen 11 points.

New York Stock Exchange volume remained quiet at 22.46 million shares, down from 23.47 million on Friday.

As the day began the market was confronted with new pressure on the dollar in foreign exchange.

Weakness in the dollar is presumed to dampen interest in the U.S. stock market among foreign investors, whose buying played a significant role in the strong rally on Wall Street this spring.

But after it became evident that the dollar's problems hadn't touched off any particular rush to sell stocks, the market began to move ahead in the last two hours.

New York (AP) — Monday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

HELD IN MURDERS—Sheriff's deputies escort Linda Fay Burnett, 30, of Nederland, who is being held in the murders of a Winnie, Texas, couple, their son, daughter-in-law and grandchild. Arrested earlier was Joe Dugas, 31, of Port Acres. Dugas Sunday night led officers to a wooded area where all five persons were buried. (AP Laserphoto)

Woman Charged In Murders Of Four Adults, Child

WINNIE, Texas (AP) — A woman was charged with five counts of murder Monday after the bullet-riddled bodies of five family members missing for about a week were found dumped in a shallow, common grave.

The woman's male friend, who was related by marriage to the victims, was charged with kidnapping in the case.

Both were held under $500,000 bonds in what one law enforcement officer said was an apparent revenge killing.

Ovide Joseph Dugas, 31, a refinery worker who once was married to a daughter of two of the shooting victims, is charged with five counts of kidnapping.

Justice of the Peace Mary Dugat of Chambers County said district attorneys from the two counties involved were meeting to determine the location of the murders before considering other charges against Dugas.

The family was abducted from Chambers County and the bodies were found in neighboring Jefferson County.

Linda Mae Burnett, 30, described by authorities as "an acquaintance" of Dugas, was charged before Justice of the Peace Jack Cravy with five counts of capital murder.

Led To Grave Site

Police said Dugas led them to the grave where they found the five bodies Sunday night. The victims were dumped on top of one another in the shallow grave scooped out of the sandy soil. The site was in a wooded area of southeastern Texas between Houston and Beaumont about 10 miles from the blood-splattered rural home from which the family had disappeared during a July 4 weekend reunion.

Dead were Bishop Phillips, 64; his wife, Ester, 66; a son Elmer, 31, his wife Martha; and their 4-year-old son Jason. The younger Phillips were visiting from Woodward, Okla.

Sheriff R.E. Culbertson told The Associated Press, "The only motive was revenge." He said Dugas apparently blamed the elder Phillips' for the breakup of his marriage to their daughter, Mary.

Cravy said the victims were "just piled on top of each other. They were all in a crouched position, stacked and folded up."

Shot Several Times

All five had been shot several times and their hands and feet were bound with rope. Near the grave were several .22 caliber bullet casings.

Dugas' brother, Richard Lee, said in a sworn statement to authorities that his brother told him July 4 he had kidnapped the family at gunpoint and taken them to a "prepared grave."

In the statement, Lee said his brother also said he "had bound the occupants of the residence, struck one of the occupants with a pistol, and in the company of an unknown female, transported Bishop Noel Phillips and the occupants of the residence ... to a prepared gravesite."

Cravy said the nude body of the older Phillips was on the bottom of the grave. The others were Clothed. Jason was on top, covered by Only 18 inches of sand.

Dugas was taken into custody Friday and Sheriff Doil Pounds of Chambers County, where the Phillips' home was located, said, "We interrogated him Saturday but he didn't talk to us. So we interrogated him about three hours and 20 minutes Sunday and he decided to cooperate. He was pretty emotional to a point — real nervous and upset."

Contracts Awarded For Jail Projects

resented a long-term savings.

The combined bid of Page & Wirtz Construction Co. of Lubbock of $2,465,000 for everything but detention equipment was considered because of concern that the extra work of supervising separate bidders would substantially increase the architectural fees.

Together, the Page & Wirtz and Roanoke bids were $3,455,000, and Maeker said his fee would be no more than an additional $40,000 and probably would not be appreciably more with separate bids.

Capacity Or 240 Inmates

The one-level, 58,600-square-foot jail will have a capacity of 240 inmates including a 60-inmate holding or temporary incarceration capacity.

Building the extra cell block and increasing the capacity to 330 would have cost an extra $700,000.

The existing jail has been holding about 130 inmates with about 30 in holding at near its capacity this summer.

Maeker said after the first set of bids for detention equipment was opened June 22 that a reduced-capacity jail probably would become overpopulated soon after it was completed in early 1980.

He said later that it could not be accurately predicted when the extra capacity would be needed.

County Judge Rodrick Shaw and Commissioner Jim Lancaster of Idalou said last week in a preview of their deliberations Monday that it should not be needed for at least five to 10 years.

Draw From Other Funds

The commissioners would have had to draw from other county funds to pay the extra cost had they decided to build a complete jail.

However, they were advised by County Auditor Dale Gallimore that $255,000 in interest in five years could be made on the money unspent in the cut-down project.

The third cell block in the southeast corner of the jail will be left without steel, electrical or mechanical work.

Before making their decision, they also inspected equipment models of Willo, Roanoke and Southern Steel Co. of San Antonio in trucks outside the county jail.

In other business Monday, the commissioners made plans to open budget hearings at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. The hearings were slated to open Monday afternoon but were postponed when the jail deliberations took all afternoon.

Criminal District Attorney-elect John T. Montford is scheduled to come in sometime Tuesday to discuss his proposed budget, which he indicated Monday to the Avalanche-Journal is ambitious and somewhat more costly than the current one under D.A. Alton Griffin.

More Deputies Sought

Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard will ask $160,000 more for 10 more deputies and an average raise of about $100 a month for everyone in the department, he said last week.

Shaw said Monday that Blanchard had not been scheduled to appear before the commissioners court but will appear as the various department heads are called in to discuss their proposed budgets for calendar 1979.

The 1978 Lubbock County budget is for $7,949,627, including about $1 million in revenue sharing expenditures.

The commissioners Monday heard Carl Morris, business officer for the Texas Department of Human Resources in Lubbock, ask if the county would pay a $20-per-month rent increase on the department office in Slaton, where the county has been paying $145 to help support the work of five department staff members.

They declined to pay the recent increase when Morris said the state would pay it if they would not.

Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton said he wanted the office to stay open, and Morris indicated that its various operations will not be interrupted.

Pay Boost Requested

Carolyn Lanier, president of the Lubbock League of Women Voters, called Monday morning for pay increases to juvenile probation officers.

She praised the commissioners for planning an advanced juvenile probation center like the Hetor County one at Odessa but said juvenile officers must be paid more.

"Consider for a moment that we have had a 100-percent turnover in personnel among juvenile officers in the past year," she read from a prepared statement. "Ask yourself how a program can be stable with this turnover."

She noted that a Lubbock County juvenile officer must have a college degree but makes a beginning salary of only $818 per month.

A $1 million center to be built with revenue sharing funds and criminal justice grants is planned for construction on nine acres of land at North University Avenue and Loop 289.

Shaw told Mrs. Lanier that her presentation will be considered during the budget hearings.

Trials Of Russian Dissidents Begin

came a key member in the Jewish emigration movement, and the 41-year-old Ginzburg, a longtime human rights activist, follows a long Soviet campaign against dissidents.

The Carter administration says the fate of the two men could have an important impact on East-West detente. President Carter has personally championed their cause, Vance contends they are being tried for "asserting fundamental human rights," and the Carter administration has canceled two trips to Russia by U.S. government specialists.

Other Trials Open

Two other trials also got under way Monday, one involving Lithuanian human rights activist Viktorus Pyatkus, being tried in Vilnius, Lithuania, and the other an espionage case against a 38-year-old office worker, Anatoly Filatov. Dissident sources in Moscow said Pyatkus was delivered to the courtroom under force by four guards and refused to take part. After 90 minutes the roceedings were recessed for two days, the soures said.

A court spokesman reported Filatov pleaded guilty. He did not name the country Filatov allegedly spied for, but said he was recruited by "a foreign intelligence service" while on a business trip to Algeria in 1974 and "betrayed his country." Filatov's trial is to resume today.

See Carter Influence

Shcharansky's wife, Natalia, told a news conference in Paris she believes further statements by Carter and the Congress might enable herhusband to "be free and go out from Russia."

Mrs. Shcharansky, a resident of Israel who said she went to Paris to help mobilize world opinion on her husband's behalf, suggested that Congress pass a resolution in the case.

In the Israeli Parliament, all parties but the Communists approved a resolution calling on the "enlightened world" to intervene on the dissidents' behalf. "All rules of human justice have been trampled," said Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Jews, Others Rally

Thousands of American Jews and others gathered at a noontime rally in New York to protest the trials. Three hours earlier a bomb exploded near the Manhattan offices of the Soviet travel agency Intourist, causing little damage and no injuries. No one immediately claimed responsibility for the blast.

Western reporters, diplomats, including U.S. Embassy representatives, and the defendants' comrades from the dissident movement were barred from the trials in Moscow and Kaluga and waited outside.

Mrs. Ginzburg said of her husband, who has been under medical care for apparent ulcers and tuberculosis during his 18 months in detention: "Into the court they brought a half-dead person. At the age of 41 he looks a complete old man. His hair is gray, he's gone thin, he hardly moves and he speaks with great difficulty."

Nationality "ZEK"

Standing before the three-judge court, he was asked his nationality, Mrs. Ginzburg said.

"ZEK," he replied, using an acronym for "political prisoner" in Russian. Ginzburg is a veteran of seven years in Soviet prisons for two previous convictions on similar charges.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Ginzburg was accused of financing "with money received from abroad ... the hostile activities of criminal elements, including professional murderers, former members of gangs and henchmen of the German fascists who took part in mass shootings of Soviet citizens."

Literature Claimed Received

Tass quoted a witness identified only as Arkady Gradoboyev as saying he received anti-Soviet literature from Ginzburg and was paid for "any information, classified included, that could be used in the West."

The agency reported "many witnesses ... described Ginzburg's private life, the sex orgies at his country house, permanent heavy drinking, all on the money of the so-called fund."

This apparently referred to Ginzburg's administration of a fund, financed by exiled Soviet author Alexander Solzhyenitsyn, to aid political prisoners here.

Accused Of Slander

Court official Arkady Kuznetsov said Ginzburg also was accused of preparing and distributing anti-Soviet literature containing "slanderous fabrications." He said these included Ginzburg's own statements, as well as such other literature as "Gulag Archipelago," Solzhenitsyn's major work on life in Soviet labor camps.

Prosecutors called 10 witnesses in the Ginzburg trial Monday and the Solzhenitsyn book was cited frequently in their testimony, court officials said.

In Moscow, Shcharansky's mother, who is to be called as a character witness for the prosecution, burst into tears after being barred from the courtroom. But his brother Leonid was allowed in and told reporters later that Shcharansky, in detention and incommunicado since his arrest 17 months ago, "looked well, self-confident and cheerful."

A court official said Shcharansky is accused of maintaining "regular connections ... with representatives of foreign intelligence services" and supplying them with state secrets on the location of defense facilities.

American Writer Mentioned

Leonid Shcharansky said the indictment specifically mentioned Robert C. Toth, former Moscow correspondent for the Los Angeles Times, who was interrogated and signed a protocol about his contacts with Shcharansky. Toth has denied any involvement with foreign intelligence.

The dissident had helped Toth collect information for an article suggesting that the locations of secret Soviet facilities could be guessed by checking the workplaces of Jews who, like Shcharansky, had been refused exit visas on the grounds they had done classified work.

The court official, Magomet Pirbabov, said Shcharansky is also accused of supplying foreign agents "with materials ... in which he urged governments of a number of countries, under the pretext of a concern for 'human rights,' to put constant pressure on the Soviet Union."

Court officials confirmed a report by Leonid Shcharansky that Tuesday's session would be closed because secret testimony would be heard about the alleged spying. Apparently one of those testifying today will be Toth's former Russian translator in Moscow.

Briscoe Opens Tax Session

may be greater than it is reasonable to expect us to accomplish."

Snelson said the Governor had placed a large load on the session and that "some of it will fly and some will not" He said he was in favor of the elimination of the sales tax on utilities and the increase in the inheritance tax exemption and felt that both would pass.

State Rep. Froy Salinas of Lubbock was unavailable Monday afternoon for momment.

Huge Surplus Accumulates

Briscoe said the possible $3 billion revenue surplus for the next three years "is money taken from the people in excess of the needs of the state. The people are demanding that a significant portion of that money be returned to them. This is a legitimate demand. I know that you will respond."

Clayton said in his opening remarks that "inequitable administration and overtaxation is the sound which rumbles like distant thunder. . . our duty here in this special session is to guarantee the right of our constituents to have taxation with representation — not without representation."

Seven-Point Program

Briscoe ticked off the seven-point tax relief program listed in his formal call on Saturday.

Repeal of the sales tax on utilities bill and increasing the inheritance tax exemption alone "would constitute the largest cut-back in state taxes in modern history," he said.

Briscoe then pushed for the adoption of a plan to assess farm property taxes on the basis of use instead of value and to give every homeowner a $10,000 exemption on school taxes, plus another $10,000 for the elderly.

"These (four) proposals alone constitute significant tax relief," he said. "They total at least $1.1 billion over the next biennium. Their passage could mean as much as $552 over the next biennium to an average household."

But he said that was not enough.

He proposed his favorite measure that would require any new tax or tax increase to be approved by at least two-thirds of those present and voting in both houses. This would require a change in the state constitution.

And he proposed another constitutional change that would allow Texas voters to get up petitions and vote on law changes, without any action of the legislature, as Californians did on Proposition 13.

Briscoe made only a passing, indirect reference to a previously announced plan to set limits on taxation and spending by local governments.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said afterwards that he thought the utility sales tax repeal and the increase in inheritance exemptions could be passed easily. Both are set for public hearings in Senate committees on Tuesday.

Complaints Heard On Tax Hikes

this will probably be the last. What can I do when my taxes more than double? I simply don't have the money to pay."

Added Mrs. H.A.C. Brummett Jr., a schoolteacher: "The tax office raised my assessed value 99 percent. That's ridiculous. My home is a quarter of a century old. There's no rhyme or reason for the value to be placed this high.

"My salary hasn't even kept up with the cost of living, and here they are doubling my taxes."

Mrs. Brummett said the tax office's appraisal may be in line with what her home would sell for, but "that's good only if you're planning to sell. I don't plan to move until they move me to the cemetery."

The 17 members of the equalization board broke into subcommittees of three to hear the cases. Hearings on residential property complaints will continue through July 21.

Wet Vote

to get a recount and we couldn't get one, but now it looks like the election turned around."

Wet forces, led by Mickey Holmes, had no comment on the proceedings. At a 10 a.m. hearing in district court Friday, the wets say they hope to force the commissioners to canvass all 44 voting boxes, including the one thrown out, and declare the results.

Unofficial results from the controversial Box 19 showed 511 votes for, 354 against. If those results remain excluded from the canvass, along with nine others the commissioners tossed out Monday, the final results give the drys a 35-victory.

Six Die When Airplane Hits Homes In Australia

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A light plane crashed into three homes near the end of an airport runway Monday night, killing six members of one family as they watched television in their dining room.

The three persons aboard the twin-engine aircraft escaped alive and the occupants of the other two houses were unhurt.

The plane crashed seconds after taking off from Essendon airport, Melbourne's light aircraft terminal.

The house in which the six persons died exploded and burst into flames as the plane ripped through the side of it. The plane then plunged on into another house and came to rest in a tangle of twisted fuselage and brickwork as it demolished the rear of a third house.

Fires broke out in two homes as fuel from the plane scattered across the area, but fire units quickly brought them under control.

Joe Corso, owner of the house where the plane came to rest, said he, his wife and two children were in the rear of the house when the plane suddenly burst through the kitchen wall.

"My wife was washing dishes in the kitchen when suddenly there was a loud bang and the room started to fall in," he said. "The next thing a fire started and I got my wife and son and daughter out."

One of the three aboard the plane, Geoffrey Walker, 33, said in a Melbourne hospital, "We tried everything possible. We just lost power. We tried to weave between the houses as best we could.

"Then all I can remember is being haulted out of the aircraft by a man whose face I could never forget."

The plane, on an instrument training flight, cleared a high protective fence at the end of the runway and leapfrogged over a busy freeway before plunging into the houses.

Killed were a 30-year-old woman, her three sons aged 12, 6 and one month, her daughter aged 14 and her mother, in her 60s. The father of the dead children, 41, was not in the house.

Fewer Citibus Routes Proposed

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Mindful of the budget-cutting mood of both the city council and the public, the Lubbock Transit Advisory Board Monday discussed possible solutions to the Citibus system's operating deficit.

The discussion focused on a consultant's report and recommendations on ways to reduce the deficit, expected to cost the city $270,000 this fiscal year.

The deficit could be reduced by about $35,000 (half city funds), the report says, primarily by reducing some routes at midday.

The realignment of some routes is recommended, including the suggestion that more routes serve South Plains Mall, but board members seemed less than enthusiastic about many of the route suggestions.

As for the suggestion that some midday service be reduced, Ernie Prenevost, manager of Lubbock Transit Corp., said cutting midday service sometimes backfires.

Although it has increased revenue per mile on some routes, Prenevost said more often the reduction eliminates morning and afternoon riders, as well as midday riders.

In rating each Citibus route by revenue per mile, the consultant ranked the Arnett Benson route first and the Melonie Park route last.

The Arnett Benson route earns nearly 34 cents per mile, while the Melonie Park route earns only 8 cents per mile.

However, even the most "profitable" routes lose money, the study shows. The Hub Homes route had the lowest loss with a $9,252 deficit each year. The greatest deficit appears on the Melonie Park route with an annual loss of $43,973.

Transit coordinator John Wilson noted the most successful routes were shorter routes and ones serving North and East Lubbock, while the Southwest Lubbock routes were both longer and less successful.

Transit board members said they have received numerous complaints of empty buses circulating in Southwest Lubbock.

The consultant's report, designed to assess the performance of Citibus since routes were curtailed last September, also reveals a fare of 89 cents per passenger would be necessary for the bus system to break even.

But "public transit cannot be expected to produce a profit," the study concludes. "While some cling to the view of public transit as a business that should pay its own way, public transit should more equitably be viewed as one of several public services such as police or fire protection, recreational facilities, sewage treatment, and other functons provided by a city government," the study says.

Although the bus system cannot make money, the study says "efficiency and effectiveness in the delivery and use of transit must be optimized to the extent possible in order to keep the deficit at a reasonable level."

However, board member Bill Dean noted, taxpayers generally do not refer to Citibus "in the same breath as the police department."

"No one accepts the fact that public transit just doesn't make money," he said.

Although the board took no action on the consultant's report Monday, board members asked Wilson to prepare four alternatives before the next meeting:

—Increasing revenue by raising bus fares.

—Cut bus mileage, for example cut midday service.

—Operate at a minimum level, but not below the level required to receive federal funds.

—Eliminate transit service in Lubbock.

The alternatives are in anticipation of questions by the council or by citizens at a public hearing on a $3.3 million capital grant.

The grant hearing was scheduled for Thursday's council meeting, but indefinitely postponed when council members and city staff decided the timing was wrong.

But the council's decision on the grant application should be indicative of whether they want to remain in the bus business.

"If they don't vote for it, it means they don't want a transit system," Wilson said, because the city will be unable to replace its current buses.

The timing was also wrong, the board decided, to hold a planned promotion in August when a trip to Hawaii was to be given to a Citibus rider. That promotion was put on the "back burner" indefinitely.

Secretary Suggests Overpayment Fines

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. proposed Monday that states be penalized if they fail to cut overpayments in their Medicaid and welfare programs to 4 percent.

The secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare also wants to make his own department pay similar penalties unless it cuts overpayments in the Supplemental Security Income program to 4 percent. Califano said reaching that goal would save taxpayers $1 billion of the $2.4 billion spent on overpayments last year in the Medicaid, SSI and aid to families with dependent children programs.

The payment error rates last year were 8.6 percent in AFDC and 7 percent in Medicaid, which are run by the states. The rate was 5.2 percent in the federally run SSI program.

Those rates include only overpayments and payments to ineligible persons, not underpayments.

Under Califano's proposed regulations, the states would be penalized if they did not make progress each year toward meeting the 4 percent goal. HEW would refuse to pay an amount equal to the overpayment in states where the error rate was above the national median.

HEW's own goal would be a 4.85 percent error rate in fiscal 1979, which starts Oct. 1 and 4 percent by 1980. Some states supplement the SSI benefits with their own funds, and HEW would pay penalties to these states if it fails to meet its goal.

HEW attempted to impose a similar penalty system on the states for AFDC errors in 1974, but a federal court threw out the standards as arbitrary.

Califano said the new standards were prepared with help from state and local officials and he called them "eminently fair."

They will be under review for the next 18 months.

HEW recently admitted that it wastes $5.5 billion to $6.5 billion annually, and Califano previously has promised Congress that he will cut waste by $1 billion in 1979, $1.1 billion in 1980 and $2.2 billion in 1981.

Daughter Turned To Prostitution

DETROIT (AP) — A $175-a-week laborer was behind bars Monday accused of persuading his 14-year-old daughter to become a prostitute after she asked him for spending money.

John Brammer of suburban Hamtramck, who according to police also used the name Ronald Miller, delivered his daughter to a red-light district on the Fourth of July to make her earn the $20 she asked him for, police said.

Police said Brammer even stayed around long enough to collect from her customers.

"I've never seen anything like this before," Sgt. Mike Dowd said.

Brammer was charged Saturday with two counts of pandering and jailed in lieu of $10,000 bond pending a hearing in Recorder's Court July 17. Each charge carries a 20-year maximum prison term.

Police and juvenile officials would not disclose the girl's whereabouts.

Police said they were tipped off to the situation after Brammer reported his daughter kidnapped. When police found her Friday with a man in suburban Southfield, they became suspicious because Brammer was reluctant to prosecute.

"Look, if you were a father and your girl had just been through something like this, you'd probably come in here after the guy with a Tommy gun," Dowd said.

The girl told police her father had suggested she start hustling and that she had asked for time to think it over. When he repeated the idea, she consented.

"She seemed like a nice decent kind of girl," Dowd said. 'She acted like a normal 14-year-old, not really loose, but maybe a little slow."

Brammer told Detroit police he had entered a store briefly to buy his daughter a soft drink and came out to see her being driven away in a pickup truck. It was the driver of that truck she was found with in Southfield. Police said the Southfield man was subsequently released without being charged.

Brammer said his daughter was visiting from northern Michigan, where he recently moved his family so his three children would not have to attend Detroit public schools. He said he planned to join them later.

The name of that town was not disclosed.

Energy Groups Get Secrets From Agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four Energy Department employees on Monday admitted leaking internal agency information to an industry trade organization, but denied they did anything illegal.

"It was unprofessional and unethical," one of the officials, Scott Bush, told the Senate Energy Committee. He said that as a result of the controversy, procedures at the Energy Department have been tightened.

Bush, who is the department's deputy assistant administrator for regulations, said procedures governing the flow of information within the department had been fairly lax in the past.

As a result, much information and a number of documents under study by the department managed to find its way to the oil industry, he testified.

The Senate committee is studying allegations that advance word of many Energy Department decisions was leaked to the American Petroleum Institute, a major oil industry trade association.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, in charge of the committee hearings, says the oil industry stands to make millions of dollars by getting advance word on goverment regulations affecting them. He says consumer groups have not had the same access to information.

In a memo to his superiors and in testimony to the committee last month, John Iannone of API said he was privy to inside Energy Department information.

He listed names of a number of his governent contacts whom he said gave him information, including Bush, Peter Holihan and Gerald Emmer.

Bush said he gave Iannone information on a proposed motor gasoline monitoring system.

Holihan, an "industry specialist" in the department's economic regulatory administration, testified he gave Iannone an advance copy of a proposal to deregulate propane and natural gas liquids.

And Emmer, who Iannone had indicated was one of his key sources, acknowledged giving Iannone verbal information on a number of matters as well as an advance copy of a department proposal to deregulate gasoline prices.

However, he denied Iannone's claim that he had also been the source of API's copy of private correspondence between Sen. Edward M. Kenndy, D-Mass., and Energy Department official David Bardin regarding oil regulations.

Newspaper In Education

For more than 200 years newspapers have been used by teachers to add revelancy and timeliness to daily class routine. During the past few years, due to the continual quest to improve our educational process, the Newspaper In Education program has been explosive. Much credit is due to teachers who use the newspaper in a myriad of instructional disciplines.

Schools now participating in the Avalanche-Journal Newspaper in Education program number 31 elementary, 11 junior high and 48 senior high. Over 3,000 copies each school day used by nearly 8,000 students!!!

The Avalanche-Journal is committed to the Living Textbook concept and our Educational Services Department is ready to be of assistance to you!

As a participant you receive these services:

- Special school rate for newspapers used in the classroom
- Free varied, instructional materials written by teachers.
- Free guides, workbooks and manuals
- Free Living Textbook Conference conducted on the campus of Texas Tech University

Federal Mediators Enter Postal Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — With only 10 days remaining in a current labor contract, federal mediators stepped into stalled negotiations Monday between the Postal Service and unions representing 554,000 workers.

Negotiators began daily meetings until the July 20 expiration of the current three-year contract. Little progress has been reported since the talks began in April.

Wayne L. Horvitz, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, said that after discussions with both sides, "I have concluded that the time has arrived for serious mediation efforts."

Union leaders welcomed the mediation. President Emmet Andrews of the American Postal Workers Union said, "I am hopeful that the presence of Mr. Horwitz will move the talks off dead center."

The chief Postal Service negotiator, Deputy Postmaster General James Conway said through a spokesman that tentative agreement has been reached on a no-strike provision similar to that in the present contract.

Conway also said that some progress has been made on work rules and that "constructive discussions" have been held on union recognition and discipline procedures.

The Postal Service has not reported any pay proposal, even though three of the four unions jointly made their wage demands June 19.

According to postal management, the average pay of the employees covered by the current contract is $15,877.

Three postal unions bargaining as a unit have asked for wage increases of $1,100 per worker in the first year of a proposed two-year contract and $865 in the second year.

This is on top of a liberalized cost-of-living clause. If inflation continues at its present pace, the two proposals together would amount to about a 14 percent wage increase in the first year.

The three AFL-CIO unions are the American Postal Workers Union with 299,000 members, the National Association of Letter Carriers with 181,000 members, and the mailhandlers division of the Laborers International Union.

A fourth union, bargaining separately is the National Association of Rural Letter Carriers with 38,000.

Meanwhile, union leaders have called members from around the country to stage a march Wednesday outside Postal Service headquarters in Washington to protest what they termed stalling by postal management in the talks.

Union organizers of the protest said they expected 3,000 unhappy workers to march from the Washington Monument to the Postal Service.

The union leaders say that management, instead of making proposals, has focused on trying to take away gains made by the unions in previous contracts.

Bomb Explodes Near Intourist Agency

NEW YORK (AP) — A small diesel-fueled bomb exploded Monday near the Rockefeller Center offices of the Russian travel agency Intourist, causing no damage or injuries but forcing dozens of employees to leave the building.

Police said that moments after the blast Intourist received a call from a man who said, "We're going to blow you up." Police said the caller then hung up without identifying himself or saying whether he represented any group.

The explosion in the stairwell on the eighth floor of the International Building came as the trials began in the Soviet Union of two dissidents, Andrei Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg.

Members of the Police Department Bomb Squad said the explosive device was made up of diesel fuel, and pieces of a timer and a dry cell battery were found in the stairwell.

Police discovered what appeared to be another device on the ninth floor, but it turned out to be an empty carton. Police said the placement of the actual bomb — in a stairwell that is sealed off from the eighth floor — indicated that the bombers did not necessarily want to cause injury.

Nunzio DePietro, assistant manager of the Parker Pen Co., which also has offices on the eighth floor of the building, said, "It was just a tremendous explosion. Everything just shook."

DePietro said the Intourist offices opened about a month ago.

A spokesman for Intourist refused comment on the blast.

Bolivian General Leads In Presidential Voting

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Juan Pereda, a 46-year-old air force general and the hand-picked candidate of President Hugo Banzer, led six other candidates in official returns from Bolivia's presidential elections as the vote counting proceeded slowly Monday.

However, the leading opposition candidate, Former President Herna Siles Zuazo, was ahead in the principal city of La Paz and claimed the government was hiding other figures favorable to him.

Votes from Sunday's election were being counted by hand in nine departmental capitals. Results were being announced for each polling place — there are about 10,000 of them — without overall departmental figures.

Totals reported on the basis of about 15 per cent of the vote showed Pereda with 116,264 votes, Siles Zuazo with 82,509, former President Victor Paz Estenssoro with 49,277, and Gen. Rene Bernal with 23,606. Three other candidates shared a small percentage.

At the counting site in La Paz, soldiers with automatic weapons and fixed bayonets weapons stood guard throughout the building and outside.

Banzer, a 52-year-old right-wing army general, is stepping aside after ruling Bolivia for seven years. He overthrew a leftist general, Juan Jose Torres, in August 1971. Banzer now expects to oversee things from his other post as commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

Siles Zuazo, 64, challenged Pereda at the head of a leftist coalition that includes the Communist Party. Siles Zuazo and Paz Estenssoro, 69, were leaders of the now-splintered National Revolutionary Movement (MNR) that governed Bolivia from 1952 to 1964. Paz Estenssoro ran in this election on a ticket called the Historict MNR. An amnesty allowed both men to come home from exile before the elections.

Siles Zuazo said at a news conference Monday that computations by his Democratic and Popular Unity Front showed it should have the majority in the new congress. He accused the government of practicing widespread fraud in rural eastern parts of the country, where Pereda had a good lead, and called on the armed forces to recognize what he said was the electoral verdict in favor of him.

Bolivians also voted for a congress, which they have not had for nine years. In the likely event that none of the presidential candidates gets a clear majority of the popular vote, the congress will elect him.

The candidate with the plurality can win in the congress, however, because the leading candidate in each department gets 80 per cent of the department's seats in the 111-seat Chamber of Deputies and two of the three Senate seats. The runnerup gets the rest.

Both the congress and president are scheduled to take office Aug. 6.

Humphrey's Widow Denies Report Of Agriculture Contributions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A published report that the family of the late Sen. Humbert Humphrey, D-Minn., received about $1 million in stocks deposited in unreported family trust funds is "completely inaccurate," Humphrey's widow Muriel said Monday.

Mrs. Humphrey, who succeeded her husband in the Senate, said all of the family's trust funds were established from her husband's personal holdings.

Scripps-Howard news service reported Monday that the Humphrey family trusts worth "a few million dollars" were largely the result of gifts from the family of Dwayne Andreas, who heads a large Minnesota agricultural firm.

Hubert Humphrey was a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, but his widow is not.

The story quoted Dwayne Andreas' brother, Lowell, as saying the trust funds were "the result of a long friendship. I'm not talking about a year or two but many, many years."

The Andreas family controls Archer-Daniles-Midlands Co., which processes agricultural commodities.

Scripps-Howard said the trusts were established for Hubert and Muriel Humphrey, each of their four chilren and nine of 10 grandchildren at the National City Bank of Minneapolis, a bank controlled by Archer-Daniles-Midland Co.

Quoting an unnamed source, the news service said Archer-Daniles-Midlands stock comprised most of the Humphrey trusts. Each of the four Humphrey children were given trust funds worth between $100,000 and $200,000, the story said.

But in a statement, Mrs. Humphrey said her family lawyer, Joe A. Walters, reports "that the charges in the Scripps-Howard story are completely inaccurate."

She quotes Walters as saying a blind trust set up by Humphrey acquired corporate securities during the 1960s "as a result of the investment of Humphrey's accumulated savings."

"At no time did (Humphrey) or members of his family or trusts for the benefit of any of the Andreas," Mrs. Humphrey's statement said.

Jurisdiction Denied In Brooke Probe

BOSTON (AP) — After a three-week investigation into whether Sen. Edward Brooke should be charged with perjury, the Middlesex County district attorney said Monday he has no jurisdiction in the case.

District Attorney John J. Droney, a Democrat who was defeated by Brooke in the 1972 Senate race, said he would take no further action on the matter because any possible offense occurred in Suffolk County.

Asked why it took three months to determine jurisdiction, Droney's investigator, Assistant District Attorney Richard Kelley, said, "A matter of this delicacy should not be taken lightly."

Droney said that if the case is to be pursued it should be by the state attorney general, Francis X. Bellotti, or the Suffolk County district attorney, Garrett Byrne.

Bellotti said he would take action only if the case is referred to him by the Probate Court where the matter originated.

Byrne was not immediately available for comment.

Brooke, a Massachusetts Republican, admitted making a false statement about his finances in a divorce deposition taken in Boston, which is in Suffolk County.

Brooke admitted last month that he had made "a misstatement and a mistake" on the deposition when he claimed that he owed $49,000 to Boston liquor dealer A. Raymond Tye, a close personal friend. He later admitted at a news conference and in court that he owed Tye only $2,000. The rest of the money he said was owed to the estate of his late mother-in-law.

The deposition was probated in Middlesex County because the Brookes had a residence in Newton in that county. Probate Court Judge Lawrence Perera found that at most Brooke owed his mother-in-law $37,000 at the time and had, therefore, overstated his liabilities.

Brooke's divorce from his wife of 31 years, Remigia, was to take effect June 15. But a week earlier, Judge Perera ordered a new hearing in the case. After finding that Brooke had failed to make a "true and complete" disclosure of his finances, Perera allowed Mrs. Brooke to reopen the divorce case.

A hearing on the divorce and Mrs. Brooke's request for an increase in alimony payments is scheduled for Thursday.

Just one hour before Droney made his announcement Monday, Brooke formally opened his campaign headquarters in downtown Boston. He has strong competition in his campaign for a third term.

Since the published disclosures, Brooke's personal finances have also become the subject of a Senate Ethics Committee probe and an investigation by the state Public Welfare Department of Medicaid payments received by his late mother-in-law.

ODDS AND ENDS AT SMITHSONIAN — This storage room at the Smithsonian Institution's Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C., contains items that some day may go on display. Each year curators accept donations of thousands of items found lying in someone's attic but most items are rejeced and returned to those offering the items. (AP Laserphoto)

Smithsonian's Curators Kept Busy With 'Gifts'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution may turn down your son's favorite model airplane or that strange bug you caught in a pickle jar, but each year curators accept donations of thousands of items found lying in someone's attic.

Since its founding, the Smithsonian has had curators who looked with varying degrees of interest on donations from the public.

For instance, during the administration of Spencer Fullerton Baird, who became the second secretary of the Smithsonian in 1878, its annual report listed donations of "sealed bottles containing water from the Dead Sea...a chicken with four legs...a living duck."

But Joseph Henry, the first secretary, was more selective. He wrote that he did not want to fill the Smithsonian with a "series of domestic feather dusters" or "grasshoppers from Indiana."

Every day, people walk into what has been called "the nation's attic," offering what they believe will be splendid additions to the national collection. Some think that what has been gathering dust in their own attics will make curators and visitors happy.

Sometimes they're right — the institution added 1½ million items last year, many from just plain folks. But the Smithsonian turns down many more donations than it accepts.

For example, curators recently rejected "meteorites" that turned out to be ordinary rocks, plastic models of famous airplanes, dozens of political campaign buttons and a 44-ton milling machine.

They also turned down what a would-be donor thought was Martha Washington's wedding dress. It was found to be machine-stitched.

And the National Portrait Gallery is frequently offered paintings of George Washington. Curator Robert Stewart says he's always looking for the best picture of a famous person, but "judging by the number of George Washington portraits we turn down — about two a week — every American artist produced a Washington portrait at some time in his career."

The Museum of History and Technology has a similar problem. Herbert Collins, the political history curator, says it seems every old attic in America contains a copy of the 19th century reprint of the New York Herald Tribune's story on the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

Any trunks that don't have that reprint, he says, apparently have the commemorative hatchet marking the 100th anniversary of George Washington's death.

OFFICER HONORED — Richard L. Failor, right, of the Federal Aviation Administration's Fort Worth office, congratulates Maj. Robert M. Federal Aviation Agency Honors Reese Officer

Maj. Robert M. Negley Jr., air operations officer for T-37s at Reese Air Force Base, received a certificate of appreciation from the Federal Aviation Administration at a noon meeting at the Reese officers club.

Presenting the award for Negley's "many professional contributions to the FAA's aviation safety programs," was Richard L. Failor, chief of the Air Traffic Division in the FAA's Southwest Regional Headquarters in Fort Worth.

Negley, who has been at Reese since 1973, was lauded also for "his enthusiastic support of and participation in accident prevention programs, design of communications materials to educate aviation groups in safe flying practices and his expertise in the development of a Terminal Radar Service Area for Reese Air Force Base."

As air operations officer, Negley's responsibility has included designing the local flying areas for the basic training jet and also the procedures to get to and from areas safely.

Negley will be leaving Reese this month to attend the Air Command and Staff College at Maxwell AFB.

The FAA certificate is signed by Henry L. Newman, director of FAA's Southwest region which includes Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Also attending the award luncheon were Brig. Gen. Kenneth R. Fleener, assistant director of operations for the Air Training Command; Col. Joseph H. Brotherston, deputy commander for operations at Reese; and Col. Bobby R. Bagley, commander of the 64th Air Base Group at Reese.

Similar certificates were presented on five other occasions over the past year, including three to Lubbock men for their "extraordinary heroism in rescuing a trapped pilot from a burning aircraft."

Negley is an Ohio native who grew up in Montclair, N.J., and attended Colgate University before entering the Air Force through the ROTC program.

He served as administrative officer at Grand Forks AFB, N.D.; won his wings at Vance, AFB, Okla.; and was an instructor pilot at Lardeo AFB before going to Thailand where he flew the OV-10 as a forward air controller.

During his year in Southeast Asia, he also served as flight commander and flight examiner. He has "just under 3,000 hours flying time" and 110 combat missions.

U.N. Role Urged In Asian Conflict

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The United Nations should intervene in the border dispute between Vietnam and Cambodia to curb growing Soviet influence in Southeast Asia, says former Cambodian president Lon Nol.

The 65-year-old retired field marshal, living in exile in Hawaii, said the yearlong clash between the two Communist neighbors represents an attempt by Vietnamese leaders to dominate Southeast Asia.

In a rare public appearance Sunday at a picnic of Cambodian emigres, Lon Nol warned that the Soviet Union could use Southeast Asia as a military base against both the United States and China.

"We are relying on the conscience of the world," said Lon Nol, who still considers himself the legal president of his country.

State Water Task Force Opts For Switching Over Fighting

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Members of the Governor's Water Task Force have decided to go to Washington to meet with federal water agencies, apparently agreeing that it may be better to attempt to change national water policy proposals than simply to fight them.

At the group's regular quarter meeting here, Trinity River Authority General Manager David Brune, of Arlington, outlined the presidental water policy proposals released early in June by President Carter.

Brune noted that there likely would be disagreement about some of the recommendations, which have stressed increased emphasis on environmental considerations, greater participation by states and local entities in paying for projects and water conservation.

But, Brune said, the policies are "well drafted and consistent in the emphasis placed throughout on water conservation."

Brune, along with several other members of the group, expressed concerns over some specifics of the proposals — such as the provisions for "federal reserve water rights" which Brune said could be a "sleeper" in view of the national forests and military reservations in Texas.

But he noted that the president, in his message to Congress accompanying the proposals, has said he has no plans to attempt to change the legislative discount rates on projects — something which has been of concern to water development interests.

While several task force members expressed displeasure at the proposals, Sabine River Authority General Manager John Simmons urged that the group adopt a "positive approach," noting that for years, state officials have been calling for Congress to come up with a national water policy.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please discuss the pros and cons of a man in his early 40s having a vasectomy. It is my husband's idea. But I am concerned about the mental acceptance. A friend knows of three men who had a nervous breakdown within two years of the vasectomy. My husband also wonders if this would decrease his sexual performance any. — Mrs. C.

I would look more closely at your friend's reports of nervous breakdowns resulting from vasectomy. I have no evidence of any such connection, although folks being the way they are, I would not be surprised to find such a thing in an isolated case or two.

Neither is there any evidence it will alter sexual performance in the slightest, except that the absence of potential pregnancy could be a spur to more activity in some men. Mrs. A.K. writes me on this same subject, asking whether vasectomy will make a man more promiscuous. The answer is that it might, depending on the moral character of the man. Here again, this is not a medical question.

I am often asked whether the operation is reversible. Up until quite recently the answer was a qualified no. However, newer techniques are improving the chances of successful rejoining of the spermatic cords considerably. Still, what took only a few minutes to do can take a couple of hours of surgery to undo. So I urge that the tying procedure be considered more or less permanent.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What do you recommend for nighttime leg cramps in children? — J.S.

Not much except the gentle art of midnight massaging. It is usually a matter of an energetic child playing too hard. Even young muscles can go into spasm if overworked. See my booklet on the general subject of leg cramps. Send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My wife is a hemodyalisis patient. She has had this intense itching over her entire body for more than a year and nothing seems to help her. Thousands of persons like her would bless you if you knew of any remedy for itching. — H.J.E.

For the sake of other readers, I might explain that hemodyalisis is the use of a filtering machine to remove blood impurities in persons whose kidneys have failed them or been removed. The machine does the work the kidneys formerly did.

The itching is due either to an increase in her blood calcium or the deposition of urea crystals on her skin. Lotions such as Alpha Keri or other anti-itch applications may be tried. A thin coating of petroleum jelly has used successfully in this. Soaking in a tub of warm water to which to a quarter of a cup of vinegar has been added is also recommended.

In severe cases, where high-blood calcium is to blame, removal of the parathyroid glands may have to be done. The parathyroids have to do with control of calcuim.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it true there is a hormone that can be given to a child to help his testicles descend to the proper position in the scrotal sac? — Mrs. O.R.

The hormone to which you refer is chorionic gonadotropin. This has been tried, but reports of effectiveness are controversial. It's estimated that about 4 percent of male babies have undescended testes at birth. If they fail to reach the scrotal sac by the sixth week they rarely will later on their own. Surgery to bring the testes into the scrotum should be done between the 5th and 10th year. Otherwise they degenerate and may become malignant.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have geographic tongue. What causes this? The doctor gives me Mycostatin rinses, which I put on it twice a day. — L.A

Geographic tongue is a form of glossitis. It produces a patterned redness or whiteness on the tongue surface. Often the cause is unclear. But if Mycostatin (nystatin) has helped, one might assume it is a fungus infection (such as candidiasis). Nystatin is an antibiotic which is effective against fungi.

Diverticulosis is a bulge in the digestive tract. To learn more about it, write for Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Don't Let Diverticulosis Throw You," P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

RASPBERRY CHEESE DELIGHT

Sparkling red raspberries complement a smooth frosty cheese mixture in this elegant summer dessert. Whirl 2 cups creamed cottage cheese in blender until smooth. Add juice of 1 lemon and 1 cup sugar. Blend until smooth. Fold in 2 cups dairy sour cream. Turn into refrigerator tray and freeze until firm. Cut into serving peices and top with 1 package partially thawed frozen raspberries. Makes 6 servings.

RASPBERRY MELON

This colorful, refreshing salad could also be served as a light, low-calorie dessert. Thaw 1 package frozen raspberries. Combine 2 cups honeydew melon balls and 2 cups cantaloupe balls in individual compote cups. Spoon raspberries and syrup over each. Makes 6 servings.

FLORENCE SUTTON LOST OVER 124 POUNDS AND 143 INCHES

Since I started Pat Walker's I have lost 124 lbs. and 134 inches.
A lot has happened since my first picture appeared in the paper. I have lost more weight and I have even lost a 1/2 size in my shoe size.
Needless to say, I feel and look like a different person.
I made a New Year's resolution to do something about my weight problem. I think I have kept that resolution. I have tried a number of diets but the Pat Walker routine is one I could live with the rest of my life.
The biggest thrill I get is shopping for clothes and being able to pick and choose. When you wear a size 24 1/2 you don't have much choice, but size 8 you have a better selection.

If you have a weight problem this is the place to come.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Why do bird lovers take such a holier-than-thou attitude? I've yet to meet one who didn't feel sanctified. Our next-door neighbors are the worst. I happen to be a cat lover and it seems I am always on the defensive.

Cats seldom catch healthy, alert birds. Only the sick or injured are "victims." Cats DO catch healthy and alert mice, however. This is a vital service to humanity.

The neighbors insist our cat should be on a leash at all times. I've tried to explain that this is contrary to the nature of cats. They don't understand. I did promise to cooperate, however, if they would keep the birds off our lawn and prevent them from waking us up at sunrise.

Even though I find bird lovers a bore, I do not believe (as some Orientals do) that people who hate cats were actually rats in a previous life. Comment, please. — Finding It Hard To Love My Neighbor

Dear Love: Call me "Fraidy Cat" but I'm not going to risk bringing the entire membership of the Audubon Society down on my head. I shall remain silent and sign my cop-out "Me-owoow and Tweet Tweet."

Dear Ann Landers: I have two children under five years of age. I hope I will live to raise them. The outlook is not good.

No, I am not ill, I'm just done in. The three-year-old (boy) is not toilet-trained yet and he has terrific temper tantrums. He bites, hits and scratches his playmates. Three mothers have already told me they will not permit their children to play with Robert. If this is the way he handles friendships at the age of three, what will he be like when he is 13?

My four-year-old (girl) is pleasant enough but she is a "dawdler." I cannot get her to eat a thing. She is slow about EVERYTHING — putting away her toys, learning how to dress herself, etc. We had her tested and she is not retarded, in fact she is brighter than the average child of four. But she drives me up the wall with her pokiness. Her refusal to eat is making me crazy. Our pediatrician says she is in good health, which is a miracle. He also says, "Don't worry."

How can a mother NOT worry about such things? Please say something to help me with my children. — Not Making It In Missouri

Dear Not: I'm going to recommend a book which deals with the problems you have mentioned and many more. It is for children from one to five years of age. The title: "Your Young Child and You," by Eleanor Weisberger. (Publisher: Dutton, and the price is $7.95.) It's got more good sense packed into 166 pages than anything I've seen in a long time.

Dear Ann Landers: Now that the women's libbers are getting so doggoned picky-pick-pick-picky and insisting that hurricanes be given male names as well as female, how about from now on when they go to the bathroom if they would say, "I am going to the 'June,' not the 'John'"? — Fair Is Fair In Akron

Dear Akron: Where have you been? Women have been saying "Jane" instead of "John" for at least two years. If you prefer "June," be my guest. P.S. I am very big with maids who work in the powder rooms around the country. Mention my name and you'll get a good seat.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious — lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Most declarers would run off five rounds of trumps while discarding three clubs from dummy. Then they would go after the club suit and, assuming that East and West had not thrown any clubs, would go down one because of the club break.

A careful declarer would look for and find an extra chance. He would pay attention to North's five spades.

At trick two he would lead a spade to his king. Then he would return to dummy with the nine of trumps and discard one club on the ace of spades. If that got ruffed he would pay off to the improbable 6-1 spade break. When it held he would ruff a spade.

If one opponent showed out he would abandon spades and go back to clubs but both opponents would follow whereupon he would be sure of his slam.

He would simply ruff his king of diamonds in dummy, ruff another spade to set up the fifth one, draw trumps and score the slam.

SPECIAL HOGS

It is estimated that there are about 300 different breeds of hogs in existence today. However, fewer than a dozen breeds are popularly used in this country for producing pork. The breeds used are those which most naturally produce the leaner, neatier pork that has become so popular with the American public, according to the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — Every summer, like clockwork, when the kids, teens and college coeds are on vacation, you can count on soap operas to concentrate on youth-oriented plots and characters.

On "The Doctors," for example, the late spring months were spent laying the ground (and bedroom) work for a storyline involving unwed pregnant teenager Greta and her conflicts with her family and the father of the child, Billy, who refuses to marry her. This theme, incidentally, has been handled with tender, well-motivated and well-balanced care. Conservative viewers are apt to be offended by the thoroughly frank discussions of teens caught in this type of predicament. But the young summer audience will undoubtedly find this "Doctors" plot to be pertinent. Recently, Greta entered a home for unwed mothers and her new hardboiled friend there, Kim, is portrayed by Jane Fleiss.

From its title, "The Young and The Restless" conjures up youth appeal. But this summer there will be a story concentration on at least one pubescent lass, Nikki Reed (played by Erica Hope). Nikki's being pushed against the wall by her doctor sister, Casey, to abandon her promiscuous ways. Of course, Nikki can't keep her hands off a 6-foot-2 blond surfer-type whom the directors love to show tearing off his shirt and pants at a moment's notice. And surely it hasn't passed any "Y&R" viewers' notice that nubile Jill Foster abandoned her lovelorn heartache for muscle-bound hairdresser Derek while turning her attentions to Stuart Brooks, a man old enough to be her father. In fact, Jill's widowed mother has shown an interest in Stu herself.

Minneapolis-born, 5-foot-9, svelte Roberta Leighton (Casey) is drawing positive fan mail as teen heartthrob Dr. Snapper Foster's potential new love match. One of Roberta's first Hollywood jobs was as a massage parlor hooker on "Baretta." So, she's prepared to handle the potentially steamy "Y&R" antics that place Casey and Snapper in the "fun" situation of sharing the same bathroom in adjoining hospital residence quarters.

On "All My Children", the previously prim and proper Devon Shepard has been making stabs at seducing a sexually oblivious Yale friend, Wally McFadden, in retaliation for being forsaken by her true love, Dan Kennicott. It is somewhat incongruous that a Yalie would be so utterly dense about Devon's advances. But attractive adolescent actor Jack Magee will lure the teenboppers to their summer TV sets.

"Search for Tomorrow" has lost the talents of Joel Higgins and Anne Wyndham as young marrieds Bruce and Amy Carson. Joel had decided months ago that he'd leave the soap if "Angel," the Broadway show in which he starred, didn't last the summer. It lasted a few nights on the Great White Way, so Joel's on his way to Hollywood. Since the "Search" audience fanatically loved the Carsons, the decision was made not to recast, and to ship out Amy after she realized that home and husband meant more to her than her medical mentor Dr. Maria Thompson's career-consuming way of life. Actress Dana Ivey has also left as Maria. But there will be a notable emphasis on the other young folk on the show, including dying singer Steve Kaslo and the romantic twosome of Kylie Halliday and Tom Bergman.

Over at "One Life to Live", troublesome teenager Tina Clayton, portrayed by Andrea Evans, recently arrived on the scene. On "Love of Life" several youngish stud actors have been added to the cast including Ted Leplat (ex-"Where The Heart Is" and "Somerset") as Elliott Hampton Lang.

Brooklyn Background Helpful For Veteran Actor

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tony Lo Bianco is an actor with the demeanor of one of "the Godfather's" hit men, a natural-born heavy.

He is lean, sharp-featured and hard as nails. His voice is studded with the harsh accents of Brooklyn. His dark eyes express nothing he does not purposely wish to convey. Next to him Robert DeNiro is a collar ad.

If you encountered Tony in a deserted alley at midnight, you'd be inclined to hand him your wallet before he asked for it. In a street brawl you'd bet the rent money on the spare, cat-quick and graceful Lo Bianco.

Tony was, in fact, a street kid who survived a childhood in Bay Ridge and later in Bensonhurst, two of Brooklyn s neighborhoods not singled out as cultural garden spots.

Lo Bianco learned to fight at age 5. By the time he was a teen-ager he fought in the Golden Gloves as a welterweight. There were scrapes with the constabulary but nothing very serious. At any rate, Tony doesn't enjoy dredging up the details.

He knew about poverty and crime and drugs and gangs. But inside the rough, tough exterior dwelled a creative spirit.

Determination and a will to succeed enabled Tony Lo Bianco to break out of the lifestyle he knew as a kid. He has no regrets about his roots. He is, in fact, proud of his background and the savvy he gained in the streets.

Tony said the hard knocks have been an asset to him as an actor. He has used his experiences in scores of plays and such movies as "The French Connection," "The Seven-Ups," "The Roots of the Mafia," "The Honeymoon Killers" and, more recently, "F.I.S.T."

If the titles sound violent, they match Tony's physical appearance. He looks like trouble. The sort that prevails.

Tony, who continues to make his home in New York, has been playing less violent roles of late, one of which was the recent TV movie "The Last Tenant" with Lee Strasberg.

"I guess you could say I was a borderline delinquent," Tony said on a brief business trip to Hollywood. "I was a pretty good street fighter but I never hung around with a gang. I didn't like the idea of following gang rules.

"My background is a terrific place to come from in life. It helps me appreciate where I am now and where I am going.

"And it's been a long time since I was in a fight. The last time was at Harvard where I was working in a production of "Waiting for Godot.' Three guys decided to push me around. I wound up in jail."

The breaks didn't come easily for Tony. No one was particularly anxious to hire him as an actor and he had no experience.

Always a practical man, Tony made his own breaks by literally building his own theaters, then writing, producing, directing and acting in them.

"I was studying acting at the Dramatic Workshop in Manhattan," Tony recalled. "But I needed practical experience. So I founded and built the Weekend Theater in 1956. I built the sets, the stage and put in the lighting. I got it going.

"Two years later I left for the Actors Repertory theater on Third Avenue and 33rd Street. I did the same thing there, including a revolving stage.

"After a couple of years I moved to 88th Street and built the Triangle Theater. My partner, Burt Brinckerhoff, and I built it from scratch with our own hands. The stage, the wings, the lighting — everything.

"It's important to an actor to feel at home on a stage. And that place was like a home to me. I knew every nail and board and drop of paint in it. I even mopped the floors.

"All the time I was building those theaters and studying I was trying to manage my career as an actor. The first two theaters operated only on weekends. But the Triangle was different. We rehearsed plays for weeks and then we'd put them on and invite the public to see them.

"It operated in the black even though the audience got in free and none of the performers or musicians or technicians or directors was paid anything.

"I went the rounds of the professional theaters in town, making friends and borrowing props and scenery and costumes. I made friends with the property guys on TV shows and they contributed things too.

"The Triangle was a place where actors, directors, writers and technicians could come and work out. It was sort of like an artistic gymnasium where creative people would sharpen their talents."

Tony ended his association with the Triangle to concentrate on his acting career. He was featured in several Broadway and off-Broadway productions and won an Obie Award for his role as the tragic baseball player in "Yanks 3, Detroit 0, Top Of The Seventh."

Among his stage credits are "The Royal Hunt of the Sun," "The Rose Tattoo," "The Goodbye Paople" and "The Threepenny Opera."

Of all of his work, Tony Lo Bianco speaks most glowingly of his newest movie, "Blood Brothers," the story of an Italian working class family in New York.

"It's very close to my heart," Tony said, flashing a rare grin. "I now the characters like I know my own family."

Brewery's Hot-Air Balloon Up For Sale

LONDON (UPI) — You could own the world's largest hot-air balloon for the price of one British pound, about $1.88.

The Whitbread Brewery, owners of the 500,000-cubic-foot, four-year-old balloon, said the asking price is no gimmick.

"Rather than see it lying idle, we felt someone else should be offered the opportunity of enjoying it," a company spokesman in London said.

The balloon, named the Gerard A. Heineken, once made one of the longest crossings of the English Channel.

It may be cheap to buy, the spokesman allowed, but not to run.

It can be flown only by very experienced pilots and needs at least a dozen ground crew to help inflate it.

It will cost about $35 an hour to fly and the buyer will have to remove the advertising slogan from the side at his own expense.

Whitbread thinks maybe an aviation museum or exhibition would be its best resting place. But the company wonders if there is a building big enough to accommodate it.

The craft stands 140 feet high and is 100 feet in diameter.

Surgery To Transform Woman Into Elvis Imitator

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Debbie Rhyne may not look like Elvis Presley, but a Central Florida rock group promoter is hoping a little plastic surgery transforms the 23-year-old woman into a spitting image of the late singing star.

"The world's first one and only female Elvis impersonator ...," says Danny O'Day, who several months ago promoted plastic surgery that made a young man resemble Elvis.

"I mean, we got so much play on that, you know what I mean? The people have taken this Elvis thing so far, you would think 'How much farther can it go?' — well, here it goes."

O'Day says he's got two more clients heading into the hospital for plastic surgery to look like rock 'n' roll's late great stars — one young man who also wants to resemble Elvis and another who hopes to look like singer Jim Croce.

O'Day, 29, says he picks up the bills for the operations.

Public Broadcast Funding Approved By Representatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation authorizing $721 million over the next five years for funding public broadcasting facilities was passed by the House Monday.

The measure also contains provisions encouraging use of funds for programming, limiting salary and administrative costs, requiring open meetings of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, directing stations to establish community advisory boards and removing the prohibition on broadcast editorials by public stations.

A voice vote sent the bill to the Senate.

The bill would limit the salaries of executives of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, Public Broadcasting System and National Public Radio to the level of federal cabinet members, currently $66,000.

The total internal administrative costs and salaries of the corporation would be limited to 5 percent of its budget.

The measure sets maximums for funds to be provided. Annual appropriations will determine the actual amounts.

GARDEN FOR BLIND

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — Some 16 beds of flowers and plants — selected especially for blind persons — have been installed in Hamburg's City Park. The beds are on platforms some 30 inches high and are surrounded by a hanrail. They contain herbs, evergreens, small trees, flowers and various types of grasses, all arranged in sequence and for easy access to the hands of the blind. Each bed contains a tablet describing the contents in Braille.

'Song Sharks' Search For Prey

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — "Write the words for a song! We revise poems, write music and publish for you. Submit poems on any subjects. Big profits."

If this ad seems enticing, beware of the "song shark." Chances are you are about to be taken.

"There is a problem in Nashville," says Charles Bradley, a consumer affairs coordinator for the state of Tennessee. "We get calls — both inquiries and complaints — from all across the U.S.

"Music complaints are becoming one of our top priorities."

The consumer protection office is relatively new. The law was passed for consumer protection in August 1977, and the attorney general's office has just filed its first suit. Officials said they are contemplating more.

The Better Business Bureau believes that most Nashville firms who provide publisher services for songwriters are ethical. But the BBB reports an increase in the number of complaints concerning misrepresentation.

"We had 79 complaints filed with us last year," a bureau spokeswoman says. "We had 2,455 inquiries on music companies in the Nashville area."

According to Postal authorities, the "song shark" takes millions of dollars annually out of the pockets of new and inexperienced songwriters.

The Nashville Songwriters Association warns that the racket has grown to phenomenal proportions in the U.S. and Canada.

Companies usually can be divided into two distinct types: Those which deal with established professional artists, and those which advertise and promote services and various "plans" designed specifically to appeal to amateur artists.

Companies in the first class do not accept a song for publication or sign an artist to record unless they believe the song, as well as the songwriter, have a good chance to make money.

It's companies in the second class that cause the most grief for the amateur artist, consumer affairs spokesmen say.

The state Consumer Affairs Division warns that companies designed for the amateur artist reach their clients through advertising. They do not publish music. Instead, they print several copies of the completed song for the use of the artist.

The agency offers some tips to the new artist:

— Be wary of any advertisement that promises to make you a star overnight. It just doesn't work that way.

— Successful producers and record companies don't go from town to town looking for new talent.

— Watch out for the guy who for $1,500 allows you to sing over a music track with the promise to try to get you on a record label.

— Never pay a publisher to publish your song.

— Check up on any company before signing a contract.

To make a record, you need good songs, a studio, musicians and background voices. The single most important factor in coordinating these details is to find a talented, reputable producer.

A three hour session would include recording time, remix time, six musicians, two background singers and a roll of tape and cost about $2,000. That price doesn't include the cost of the producer. Add another $500 and you've got 1,000 mastered, plated and pressed 45 rpm records.

It took Johnny Cash years to make it big. Roy Clark didn't sign a large contract when he broke into the business. Even Dolly Parton wasn't an overnight sensation.

Baez Explains Show Cancellation

NEW YORK (AP) — Folk singer Joan Baez says a dispute between her sponsors forced cancellation of a July 4th speech she had planned to give in the Soviet Union in support of Russian dissidents.

The 37-year-old, New York-born entertainer — known for her outspoken stands against the Vietnam War — had hoped to make the remarks before Monday's start of the trials in the Soviet Union of dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg.

But her forum, a concert with other American performers in Leningrad's Winter Palace Square, was canceled because of a dispute between the Russian and British sponsors.

Miss Baez instead made a sightseeing trip to Moscow and returned this weekend. She told an NBC-TV Today Show interviewer Monday that had she given the speech, her message would have been:

"In a great country like that, one should not turn away and imprison dissidents, but one should welcome and support them."

While in Moscow, Miss Baez said she recorded 10 songs for the Soviet record company Melodia. She translated the lyrics of one of the songs as "Let us polish our white wings while our mad sultan prepares our ways to prison."

San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge was opened in 1911.

Tax Cut, Spending Limit Mood Grows

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

"The people in Idaho feel just like people do all across the country: Government is growing too big." — Don Chance, Idaho Property Owners' Association.

"Anger, resentment, frustration." — S.H. "Zeke" Brauer Jr. "The LID Petition Drive" in Nebraska.

"The people ... want the fat and waste taken out of government." — Jack Orr, Colorado Spending Limitation Committee.

The sharp talk of tax revolters is taking on a cutting edge. With signatures as their weapons, proponents of proposals similar to California's Proposition 13 are advancing from talking to testing. They are pushing property tax cuts and spending limits onto state election ballots.

Some legislatures are taking the hint and looking at property taxes and spending on their own. Gov. Dolph Briscoe of Texas, for example, called the Legislature into a special 30-day session beginning Monday to "construct a tax reduction and limitation program."

Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama announced plans for a similar special session on July 31. And in New York State, the Legislature passed, and Gov. Hugh Carey signed, a law that would allow renters to deduct part of their rent, as property tax, on state income tax returns.

An Associated Press survey found a tax-cut initiative already certified for the November ballot in Idaho and similar tax or spending proposals spawned by petition drives virtually certain to be put to a vote in Colorado, Oregon and Nebraska. In Michigan, where the deadline for filing signatures was Monday, backers predicted success by "a squeaker."

Backers of tax-cutting or spending initiatives are still collecting signatures in Illinois, Montana, Nevada and Florida. Petition drives in Utah, Washington and Arizona were unsuccessful, although Arizona residents still can vote on state spending, via a proposed constitutional amendment, approved earlier by the legislature.

The Idaho tax-cut proposal drew more signatures than any other initiative in the state's history, more than twice as many as needed to get the measure on the ballot. Chance explained why: "There is too much interference by the federal government, too much control of private property ... and a property tax which is unfair..."

Like Proposition 13, Idaho's "Initiative 1" would limit property taxes to 1 percent of the market value. In California, that meant a cut of 57 percent on the average. In Idaho, it would mean a cut of 41 percent. Chance said that "by the time we get through counting, we will have certified some 62,000 signatures." Only 26,000 signatures were needed to get the issue on the ballot.

Oregon officials have until July 22 to certify signatures seeking a vote to limit property taxes to 1½ percent of market value. If approved, it would reduce property taxes by an average of 42 per cent.

Backers need 61,646 signatures to get the measure on the November ballot; by the July 7 deadline, they had turned in an estimated 200,000.

Brauer said his Nebraska "LID" group had turned in 77,911 signatures by the deadline last Friday; 45,131 are needed to get the measure on the ballot. Brauer's proposal calls for a 5 percent ceiling on increases in local ballot. Brauer's proposal calls for a 5 percent ceiling on increases in local government budgets.

Sponsors of an amendment to limit increases in government spending in Colorado to increases in the cost of living submitted 101,960 signatures on July 6, almost 39,000 more than the 63,040 needed. Certification of the signatures was expected to be complete by Tuesday and opponents have 30 days to issue challenges.

"Our amendment is not a tax-cut measure," said Orr, a rancher. "It's a spending limitation amendment ... The goal is to bring growth in spending within an acceptable range without disrupting the necessary functions of government."

The Coalition for Political Honesty, an Illinois group, is trying to get taxes ... until the property tax burden on owner-occupiers and renters is reduced by 25 percent."

The coalition has until Aug. 21 to get the required 625,000 signatures. Spokesman Patrick Quinn said more than 55,000 have been collected so far. The Illinois referendum would not be binding, but, said Quinn: "Politicians understand the language of votes."

Leaders of unsuccessful petition drives generally blamed a lack of time for their failure. In Nevada, for example, a group known as "Concerned Citizens to Reduce the Tax Rate" got only about two-thirds of the signatures needed to force a vote on a plan to offset inflationary increases in property values. Coordinator Doug Cameron blamed low interest in Las Vegas, lack of time and too few people circulating petitions.

Another Nevada drive, sponsored by the "Peoples Advocate Committee," would amend the constitution to limit taxes. To become law, the plan would have to be approved by the voters in November and again in 1980. Backers have until Aug. 9 to turn in signatures.

The campaigns have some lawmkers worried. "If all things government does are initiated by the voter, then there is no need for representative government," said state Sen. John M. Mutz of Indiana, speaking at the National Conference of State Legislatures in Denver. "There are lots of suggested remedies for reducing property taxes, but some of them are too complicated and cannot be communicated to the electorate."

Carter Grants Reprieve To Federal Law Agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter granted a reprieve Monday to the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, an agency he had criticized as wasteful and which his advisers discussed abolishing.

Sweltering in 90-degree heat and wilting humidity during a half-hour ceremony in the White House Rose Garden, the president formally proposed to let LEAA live on — in somewhat altered form.

His proposals, immediately endorsed by key members of Congress, would keep LEAA money flowing to state and local governments in about the same amounts, or more, as the present $641-million-a-year rate.

The plan would outlaw use of LEAA money for police pay raises or hardware such as helicopters or bulletproof vests, something which has already been curtailed.

And it would attempt to focus some extra money on crime-ridden areas if Congress increases spending or LEAA is able to make savings in what it spends for management.

Carter claimed his plan would cut paperwork for state and local officials, improve crime research and statistics and allow increased local involvement in the spending of LEAA money.

In a companion announcement, the president said $209 million in federal money, which already has been appropriated for various purposes, will be spent in a consolidated effort to improve about 50 to 60 of the most crime-infested public housing projects.

The plan would allocate $159 million to rehabilitate vacant housing units and to install improved security measures; $32 million to employ younsters who live in projects; $16 million to upgrade project management, and $2.5 million to encourage neighborhood revitalization projects.

The LEAA reorganization would set up a new National Institute of Justice to research ways to reduce crime and improve such civil procedings as divorce, title transfer and lawsuits.

It also would create a Bureau of Justice Statistics to handle crime and civil justice statistics. The bureau eventually could take the FBI role in gathering national crime figures. Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said such a move would save money.

As a candidate for president, Carter scolded the LEAA, which has spent about $6 billion since it was created following the urban riots of the 1960s. He said the agency spent a lot of taxpaver money "while making almost no contribution to reducing crime."

Carter predicted Monday that the LEAA would "have a beneficial effect on the crime problem" and "continue to reduce the excessive crime rate in our nation" if reshuffled according to his plan.

He said crime statistics have begun to decline, but attributed this to reducing unemployment rather than to LEAA's past spending.

Attorney General Griffin Bell said that under the Carter plan 70 per cent of LEAA grant money would have few strings attached in a virtual revenue-sharing program. The rest would go to projects admired by Justice Department officials for their crime-fighting potential.

State, Firm Bicker Over Sunken Cache

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — A goof by a state employee delayed for 24 hours the takeover by U.S. marshals of a king's ransom in gold and silver, the object of a court battle for ownership between the state and the private salvager who recovered it from a sunken Spanish ship.

Curtis Peterson, archaeologist in charge of the state laboratory, inadvertently fixed the time lock on the vault to open at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday instead of Monday. So all the marshals were able to get Monday was some ship fittings, olive jars, pots and pans, cannon balls and the like dating back to 1622 — valuable only for historical purposes.

Peterson was embarrassed and, for a while, feared he might be arrested and carted off to jail for failure to comply with the U.S. court order to turn over the treasure, valued at anywhere from $600,000 to $2.3 million.

Marshals Bill Joyce and Bob Montgomery assured Peterson they believed it was a mistake and would be back Tuesday for the real treasure.

The federal takeover is temporary — for the purpose of holding the treasure in limbo until the federal courts finally decide whether the state or the private salvage company that brought it up from the bottom of the sea is the rightful owner.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, settling a claim by the federal government, ruled Treasure Salvors Inc. of Key West, headed by Mel Fisher, was entitled to all the treasure because the sunken Spanish ship, Our Lady of Atocha, was outside the territorial waters of the United States.

The U.S. Supreme Court upheld that ruling. But Assistant State Attorney General Bernard McLendon said Florida is pursuing its claim because the state also had a contract with Treasure Salvors entitling the state to 25 percent of whatever was recovered. The contract is valid, he said, regardless of where the ship was located.

McLendon said the state will pursue its claim to the U.S. Supreme Court.

'Exorcist' Star Lands Role In Family Picture

TORONTO (AP) — Canadian film producer Bill Marshall says Linda Blair, the possessed child in "The Exorcist," has signed to star in a $2.8 million family movie to be filmed in Alberta in August.

Marshall, whose latest film success is "Outrageous," said the yet-untitled film is about a university student who saves 30 wild horses from ranchers who want to kill them. It is based on a book, "The Wild Horse Killers," a factual account of how some teen-agers got the U.S. Congress to revoke a law permitting the killing of wild horses.

Slaying May Rekindle Feud Between Families

ROME (UPI) — Police at both ends of Italy said Monday they hope the fatal shooting of a man in Turin will not reignite the nation's most murderous feud, the vendetta between the Gioffres and the Pellegrinos.

Antonio Gioffre, 36, was killed by two masked gunmen who fired seven bullets into him in front of his Turin home earlier this month.

The name Gioffre rings alarm bells down in Seminara, a dusty whitewashed farming town overlooking Sicily to the southwest and the volcanic island of Stromboli to the northwest.

It is also the bloodiest place in Italy: 51 men, women and children have been slain and another 102 wounded since the end of World War II in a series of fratricidal feuds.

It all began when a Pellegrino called a Gioffre an "illegitimate ofa" in a barroom argument Sept. 17, 1971.

The last killing definitely connected to the vendetta was that of Carmine Pellegrino, 62, who fell in a hail of shotgun pellets near Seminara Feb. 1, 1975.

Since then, however, younger members of both families have revolted against their eye-for-an-eye traditions. They are anxious to end the killings, which have wiped out nearly 1 percent of the town's 5,750 people and wounded another 2 percent.

The Seminara dead included a grandmother, an 18-month-old baby blasted by a shotgun as he rode piggy-back on his father's shoulders and the 27-year-old widow of another victim.

Younger members of both families who want to become doctors or university students denounced the vendetta after the Carmine Pellegrino slaying, saying it was absurd.

And until the Turin shooting of Antonio Gioffre, no member of either family had died violently, a hiatus of more than three years.

The chief of Seminara's small carabinieri (state police) station said Monday: "Our information from Turin is that this killing was not connected with the feud."

Many people of Seminara have left their hometown for the industrial north or foreign lands to escape the vicious cycle of killing.

Turin detectives believe Antonio Gioffre was killed because of involvement in underworld activities.

"We certainly hope so down here," the Seminara police chief said. "And we certainly hope the local people realize it."

Heartline

(HEARTLINE is a service for senior citizens of all ages. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Senior citizens will receive prompt replies, but a stamped, self-addressed envelope must be included with the request. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.)

HEARTLINE: My husband has recently passed away. I have four children who are all grown and married and have children of their own. I also have a rather large savings account that I do not want tied up in probate after I die.

My oldest daughter has been named executor of my will. I also want her wishes to prevail with regards to this account. Is there anything I can do to make it easier for her to withdraw money from my savings if I die suddenly or become ill? — N.T.

The first thing to do in this case is to get the advice of your attorney. This is because he or she can more easily see your entire financial picture and help decide what is best for you.

Here is one possibility for you to consider: establish a trust account at your bank, and name your daughter beneficiary to this account. Talk to a person in the trust department of your local bank about specific conditions.

Along with the trust account, which will allow you full control over this while you are alive, you might grant your daughter power of attorney so that she can handle your affairs if you become incapable of doing this. This assures that your daughter would have access to your account if you became ill.

To sign your daughter as a joint owner of your savings account may be practical for the moment, but some problems may develop later. For one thing, in the event of your death, anyone can contest her ownership of the account. And if you were the source of the most money of the account, it may be easy to establish her ineligibility to the claim.

With the combination trust account and the grant of power of attorney, you probably won't have the account probated. But, as in the case with any legal problem, consult an attorney to be sure you cover all aspects of gift and inheritance laws pertaining to your situation. Generally, state laws vary.

HEARTLINE: My father is 80 years old and he is in the hospital recovering from a stroke. He is going to have to be moved to a skilled nursing facility very shortly. Would Medicare cover the cost of an ambulance in these circumstances? — N.E.

Medicare's Part "B" medical insurance covers 80 percent of the reasonable charges for ambulance service only when both of the following conditions are met:

1. The ambulance service, its equipment and personnel must meet Medicare requirements.

2. Transportation of the patient by any other means could endanger the patient's life. Medical Insurance will only pay the reasonable charges for transportation to the nearest facility. Transportation under these conditions applies when being transported from a hospital to a skilled nursing facility, hospital to hospital, or skilled nursing facility to a person's home.

For all persons on Medicare or going on Medicare shortly, Heartline has a very easy to understand book covering the whole program. To order, send $1.75 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I used my home loan eligibility shortly after World War II and recently sold that home. Can I use my VA loan guaranty again to buy another home now? — J.D.

If your previous loan has been paid in full, you are eligible for another VA loan guaranty. The current interest rate is 8.75 percent.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Many young mothers read your column for hints on baby care and I thought I'd tell you about a little trick that has saved me a lot of hard work and frustration.

Have you ever taken the baby's bottles out of the sterilizer and found a film of lime on them from the water?

The solution is simple. One or two teaspoons of vinegar (any kind) in the water in the sterilizer keeps the lime off the bottles.

It's good to know there are still people like you around to let folks share their experiences and to learn from others. All of us love ya, Heloise. — R.J. Greer

Makes me feel good all over to receive letters like yours and to know that I am helping others. I try.

Here is something you might be interested in.

I had to go to the dentist immediately after work so I put a dab of toothpaste on my toothbrush at home, placed it in a sandwich bag, rolled the bag tight and attached it to my thermos with a rubber band.

At clean-up time I unfolded the plastic bag, brushed my teeth and was ready for the dentist. — Jim

Here's a tip for a new mother whose baby is learning to feed itself.

Spread newspaper under the highchair and relax. Baby enjoys eating and when he's through, roll up the newspaper and discard it. No more mopping floors or vacuuming carpets after each meal. — Mrs. Wayne Swearingen

Fun for baby and no shattered nerves for Mom. A star for you. Hugs — Heloise

Recently I noticed instead of using the usual round bowl for the liquid mixture, he was dipping the bread slices into a small square casserole.

Now that really makes sense. A square bowl for square bread slices! I never thought of that and I bet I'm not the only one... — Heloise

Sign Up For Independence

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

If you are interested in stepping into the business world and declaring your own independence, contact our carrier manager right now. He'll give you all of the important facts about carrier work. Then, if you are still interested, he'll provide the pen and show you where to sign . . . even if your name is John Hancock.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is great for working out important details of any plan of action you have. Eliminate any confusion, misunderstanding with other persons during evening hours.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Get into the details of work ahead of you before you and associates have a meeting and then you know how to proceed. Take any needed health treatments early in the day. Improve diet.

TAURUS (April 20 To May 20) Make those appointments for recreational purposes and then get right down to the work ahead of you. Show loved one your true affection and come to a finer understanding.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take the initiative and bring more accord at home. Your creativity is high and you can accomplish a good deal. Be happy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Good time to get information you need to improve your routine work, make it more profitable. Shop early. Handle fundamental affairs intelligently. Be an expediter.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good time for handling monetary matters, and getting into agreements with right persons. Plan repairs to property. Iron out petty disagreements you may have with others.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Tend to health and appearance problems you may have. Put in economy measures so you build up a reserve. Set up a social appointment for tomorrow.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get together with a good adviser and then get busy at improving your affairs. A special thought for a loved one brings fine response.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Talk your plans over with good friends and then delve right into the work ahead of you and get it done. Go after a personal aim and get it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 To Dec. 21) Make a good impression on bigwigs and take care of a community matter early. Do whatever will improve your career before you take time to visit with friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study a new interest from every angle before you commit yourself to it. Get help from an expert for other problems you may be having.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Come to a better understanding with a loved one. Make new plans for great success and happiness in the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Talk over with an associate how to improve operations and then get right down to specific duties. Some benefits accrue but see that you use them wisely.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will need to be taght early the finest moral and religious precepts. Slant education along lines of work in laboratories of whatever is of an investigative nature for best results. Make sure the diet is good in order to develop the rather delicate body.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JULY 11, 1978

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 2, 13, 25, 36, 48, 59, 71 ... Not prime time physically
Highs: 3-12, 26-35, 49-58, 72-75 ... You can do more today
Lows: 1, 14-24, 37-47, 60-70 ... Tire easily today

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 10, 24, 38, 52, 66, 80 ... Can't take teasing
Highs: 11-23, 39-51, 67-79 ... Can't be dismayed
Lows: 1-9, 25-37, 53-65, 81-85 ... Try to postpone decisions

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 1, 17, 34, 50, 67, 83 ... Be guarded
Highs: 2-16, 35-49, 68-82 ... Good for concentration
Lows: 18-33, 51-66, 84-95 ... Hard to retain facts

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

ERA Extension Gets Lobby Effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment met with members of Congress Monday to ask for more time to seek ratification of the embattled amendment.

Mildred Jeffrey, head of the National Women's Political Caucus, estimated that up to 5,000 women and men lobbied Congress during the day for an extension of the ratification period.

A smaller number of opponents of the amendment were also visiting members of Congress. There was no estimate of their number.

"I don't think any reasonable man will want to go down in history as the man who stood between women and the Constitution," said Allie Hixson of Greensburg, Ky.

"That's what this is all about," she said. "We're talking to our congressman, Romano Mazzoli, who has said all along he's for the ERA but is now waffling on an extension of time. But if you're for the ERA, you're for the extension."

The pro-ERA lobbyists were carrying that messages to Congress following a march and rally Sunday by thousands of ERA supporters.

Court Sets Bond For Officer In Shooting

LAREDO (AP) — Justice of the Peace J.P. Vela Monday set bond at $20,000 on a Laredo police officer charged with the weekend murder of a Mexican national and remanded the officer to Webb County jail officials.

Antonio L. Elizalde Jr., 32, is accused of the shotgun slaying of Benito Martinez, also 32, about 3 a.m. Saturday near the International Bridge here. Elizalde, a five-year veteran of the force, was off duty when investigators said he told them he saw a man leave the rear of a gas station.

The officer, who has been suspended without pay pending disposition of the case, said he stopped a van containing three men for suspicion of robbery. However, police claim no such robbery was reported.

Witnesses reported Elizalde was holding a .12-gauge shotgun on Martinez while he was searching the van when the weapon discharged.

Elizalde remained in county jail Monday evening, unable to post his bond.

State To Protect Baby Hitchhiker

UVALDE, Texas (AP) — State District Judge Jack Wooley ruled Monday that state welfare officials should continue to care for a 13-month-old infant left with a truck driver by her hitchhiking mother.

Denise Marjorie Engberson was taken to welfare authorities last week by Curtis King, a Memphis, Tenn. truck driver who picked up the infant's mother and a companion. The infant's mother gave the baby to King after he dropped off the hitchhikers at Mountain Home.

King had said he and his wife would adopt the child, but a Texas Department of Human Resources spokesman said King did not attend Monday's hearing.

The child's mother called Uvalde authorities last week from Utah and said she would hitchhike back to Texas to reclaim the baby. She also did not appear for the hearing, the spokesman said.

Denise's grandmother was located in Oregon and said she would keep the child. State welfare authorities are investigating the woman's references and home conditions before granting her custody of the child.

The infant is being kept in a foster home, officials said.

Talk Show Parody Cancellation Set

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "America 2Night," Norman Lear's syndicated spoof of TV talk shows, is being canceled after 13 weeks on television, Lear's business partner said Monday.

"Economic considerations make it impossible for 'America 2Night' to continue," Alan Horn, head of T.A.T. Communications Co., said in a prepared statement.

The nightly half-hour show was set in Hollywood and featured major personalities as satirical "guests." It aired in 35 markets in the United States.

The show, starring Martin Mull, evolved from "Fernwood 2Night," which aired last year as a 13-week summer replacemennt show for Lear's syndicated soap opera satire, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," set in mythical Fernwood, Ohio.

T.A.T. blamed its axing of "America 2Night" on the show's high production costs. It said the series was a ratings success, but didn't earn enough revenue to allow it to continue.

Military Deposes Mauritania Leader

NOUAKCHOTT, Mauritania (AP) — The army deposed President Moktar Ould Daddah in a bloodless coup Monday and promised to form a new government soon to rule this vast West African nation beset by a guerrilla war.

A military communique broadcast to Mauritania's 1.6 million people said the 53-year-old president was arrested before dawn "in the utmost calm and without bloodshed" just before he was to leave for an Organization of African Unity meeting in Khartoum, Sudan.

A 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew had been imposed on the capital, Mauritania radio said.

The new rulers of this mineral-rich nation that sprawls across much of the western Sahara Desert to the Atlantic Ocean called themselves "The Military Committee for National Redress" but did not make clear their political orientation.

Chinese Seeking Birth Rate Cut

HONG KONG (AP) — China is trying to cut its birth rate to less than one percent within three years, two Communist newspapers here reported.

Ta Kung Pao and Wen Wei Po said Saturday that the birth control committee of China's state council held its first meeting June 26-28 in Peking under the direction of Vice Premier Chen Mu-hua. She said the new birth control goal was proposed by Communist Party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng at the fifth National People's Congress in February.

China has not disclosed its birth rate or population, which foreign estimates have placed at above 800 million.

New Leadership Network Seeks To Assist Women In Politics

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frances (Cissia) Farenthold, first woman president of Wells College, said Monday a new leadership network aims to make young women smart about winning at politics.

the program fill run on a $250,000 Carnegie Corporation of New York grant to five women's colleges, including Wells in Aurora, N.Y.

Mrs. Farenthold, veteran of Texas politics and first woman to be nominated for vice presidency of the United states (400 delegate votes at 1972 Democratic convention), said females hold just 10 percent of elected offices.

"The median age is 48 and we hope to change both the median age and the number of women in elected offices by teaching young women about the opportunities and realities in the political process," said Betsy Wright, executive director of the National Women's Education fund in Washington.

Wright is a longtime political associate of Mrs. Farenthold. The organization she heads and the Center for the American Woman and Politics, Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N.J., will provide technical assistance to the five different programs at the colleges.

Not just college women will be made wise about poitics, according to Mrs. Farenthold. She told of the one at Carlow College, Pittsburgh, led by Sister Jane Scully, president.

As Mrs. Farenthold described that one, non-college women will be welcome at weekend workshops for residents of the Pittsburgh area.

Other college demonstration projects in the new network of practical politics for females:

— Goucher, near Baltimore, will work out internships for its students with women officeholders in Maryland.

— Spelman, near Atlanta, will develop two courses about the role of women in United States public life, with emphasis on black women's political participation.

— Stephens, near Columbia, Mo., will launch two-year women politicians-in-residence teaching courses on its campus. Four politicians will be invited.

Wells, in the Finger Lakes region of New York, will stage a series of eight co-curricular Saturday seminars on current public policy. Community women will be invited to join with the college students participating.

The Carnegie Corporation of New York is a philanthropic foundation set up by Andrew Carnegie.

Mrs. Farenthold and the others administering the new network of practical political education look for a change in composition of women in office.

Now, 47 percent come from the ranks of secratarial-clerical, teaching, social work or health fields, compared to eight percent of the male office holders coming from those specialties.

They want more females to win big offices. Among the 10 percent of elected offices held by women today are school board memberships.

"It's an important office," Wright said, "but we're hoping for greater representation in . . . congress."

Mrs. farenthold, 51, served two terms us the only woman in the Texas House of Representatives, from 1968 to 972. She ran for governor in 1972, finishing second in a six-way race for Demoncratic nomination. n

She was first chairperson of the National Women's Political Caucus, serving from 1973 to 1975. She now heads NWPC's Advisory Board.

LULAC Takes Scholarship Applications

Applications are now being accepted for the League of United Latin American Citizens National Scholarship.

Sponsored by the local LULAC Ladies Council 281, the scholarship is not restricted to applicants of Spanish origin although the thrust of the fund is to assist Hispanic-Americans.

Or the applicant may have a Scholastic Achievement Test combined math and verbal score of 1,100 or an American College Testing score of 21.7 or above.

While financial need is the primary basis for the need scholarships, the scholarship committee must believe the applicant will complete his or her degree program. Good grades may be considered but an individual's motivation and leadership qualities will also be a factor.

The amount of money awarded for the need scholarships will depend on personal financial backgrounds and expenses involved at individual colleges.

Further information may be obtained through the LEARN Educational Talent Search at 1203 University, Suite 200. Interested persons may call them at 763-4256.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens of legal residence and accepted or enrolled in a college, university or graduate school. Two types of scholarships, based on need or achievement, will be offered.

Recipients of the achievement scholarships must meet one of several requirements. They must have placed within the top five percent of their graduating high school class or the top seven percent of their graduating college class or have a present college or graduate school grade point average of 3.65 or higher.

SURPRISE WITNESS — Robert D. Doyle of Martinsburg, W.Va., right, appeared uninvited Monday at a House Oversight and Investigations subcommittee with the tire in foreground he said blew out on him over the past weekend and was invited to testify. The panel is hearing testimony concerning Firestone 500 Steel Belted Radial tires, such as this one, which the government wants recalled. John F. Floberg, vice president, secretary and general counsel of the Firestone tire producer, left, addresses remarks to the panel.(AP Laserphoto)

Firestone Tire Recall Proposed By Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Problems with steel-belted radial tires are not industry-wide but appear limited to the Firestone 500 model, a House investigations subcommittee chairman said Monday.

Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., said that manufacturers of radial tires "can be very proud of their product. There is an exception. It is the Firestone 500."

The Department of Transportation said Saturday that the tire has a "safety-related defect," and proposed a recall of all Firestone 500s still on the road. Firestone, which estimates there are more than 13 million of the tires still in use, said there is no safety problem with the tire and that the recall is not warranted.

A final determination on whether to order a recall will be made after a public hearing Aug. 7.

Moss, concluding a series of hearings on alleged safety problems of the Firestone 500, said, "Clear indications of a safety problem in these tires continue to mount."

He said his panel's investigation has triggered more letters than any other probe — some 600, of which 70 percent complained about Firestone 500s. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said it had looked into almost 7,000 consumer complaints dealing with "more than 14,000 individual tire failures, 29 deaths, more than 50 injuries and hundreds of property-damage accidents."

Tires identical to the Firestone 500 are sold by Shell Oil Co. dealers under the brand name "Super Shell Steel Radial," and by Montgomery Ward Co. as the "Grappler Radial 8000." They also would be covered by any recall.

John Floberg, vice president and general counsel of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., said debate over the safety of the tire has caused a major financial setback for his firm. "I do know we have been hurt to the tune of scores of millions of dollars," he said.

Army Contract Passed Despite Disputed Bidding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army officials said Monday they are going ahead with the awarding of a $2.4 million contract for radio equipment despite allegations that the manufacturer used questionable bidding practices.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, said a congressional investigation of E-Systems Inc. of Dallas, has uncovered a "sweetheart pattern" of contract awards to the firm.

Agreeing, Rep. Frank Horton, R-N.Y., said, "It certainly sounds fishy to me."

As described by Brooks, E-Systems bids far below competing firms seeking contracts for electronic equipment needed by the Army.

Then, after winning the bid at a price below cost of production, E-Systems recovers the losses by selling the same product to foreign governments at much higher prices.

The foreign sales are almost always paid for out of U.S. military aid programs to nations like South Korea, Belgium or Saudi Arabia, Brooks said.

At issue in a committee hearing was a contract to E-Systems for 1,488 radar detector sets, devices used to tell a pilot when an enemy plane is using radar to pinpoint his location.

On May 10, 1978, the Army signed a contract with the firm for 355 detectors at a cost of $5,584 each, according to Maj. Gen. John K. Stoner, who heads the Army Communications and Electronic Material Readiness Command.

On that contract, there were no competing bids.

On May 12, Stoner acknowledged, bids were opened among seven competitors seeking a contract for 1,488 identical detectors.

E-Systems submitted the lowest bid of $1,605, almost $4,000 below the price for each detector in the first contract.

Meanwhile, Brooks said, South Korea has been told by E-Systems that the price for each detector is $13,000.

Brooks said the contract is one of a series in which E-Systems has attempted to "buy-in" to a major contract by bidding far below realistic production costs, then recouping losses by later changing terms of the contract or making large profits on sales to other nations.

The ultimate cost to the U.S. government is very high, Brooks said.

Americans Seek To End Nationals' Dominance

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Vida Blue, the winning pitcher the last time the American League won an All Star game, will try to keep the Nationals in control of this midseason rivalry tonight in the 49th annual game.

Blue was the starting pitcher for the AL in the 1971 game at Detroit. The Americans won 6-4. They haven't won since, and they'll try to end a six-game losing streak with Blue on the mound for the Nationals. He switched leagues in a spring-training trade from Oakland to San Francisco.

National League Manager Tom Lasorda announced his selection of Blue Monday. He will face Baltimore's Jim Palmer, the starting and losing pitcher for the American League last year when the Nationals scored their sixth straight victory and 14th in the last 15 years, 7-5 at Yankee Stadium.

"He's familiar with their batters, but that's not the only reason I'm starting him," Lasorda said of Blue. "Right now, I think he's the best pitcher in the National League."

AL Manager Billy Martin hoped Palmer, Baltimore's ace right-hander, does better than he did a year ago when he was belted for first-inning home runs by Joe Morgan and Greg Luzinski. Morgan and Luzinski are both back in the NL starting lineup.

Monday, Martin took a swipe at the fan balloting, which gave him a lineup of three leftfielders—Jim Rice, Richie Zisk and Reggie Jackson. However, Jackson withdrew from the game late Monday after suffering from a high fever, and he was replaced by teammate Graig Nettles.

Nettles had previously been withdrawn from the game because of an injured toe, but he will now be on the team.

Martin, meanwhile, had other injury problems to consider. Yankee catcher Thurman Munson and Boston outfielder Carl Yastrzemski have already been scratched from the AL's roster because of injuries, along with Red Sox' shortstop Rick Burleson.

Burleson banged up his foot in a slide Sunday and it swelled up on the plane to San Diego. "Then his eye began to bother him and when we landed, he went to the hospital emergency room," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer, who will serve as an AL coach. "They found a cyst in the eye, and that has to be removed."

That means Burleson will be scratched from the AL roster. Martin indicated that he would look for a second baseman as a replacement. The Yankee manager already had named outfielder Larry Hisle to replace Nettles, catcher Darrell Porter for Munson and outfielder Dwight Evans for Yastrzemski earlier.

The National League had its own injury problems. Johnny Bench, elected starting catcher for the ninth straight year, pulled himself out of the NL lineup because of continuing back problems. "He's wearing a corset," said Lasorda. "The best he could have done would be pinch hit."

Atlanta catcher Biff Pocoroba replaced Bench on the NL roster, and Lasorda announced that Ted Simmons of St. Louis would be the starting catcher.

First baseman Steve Garvey of the Dodgers suffered a 20-stitch cut in his chin Saturday night, but played Sunday and will be in the starting lineup for the NL tonight.

Martin's selection of Palmer as his starting pitcher raised some eyebrows. Left-hander Ron Guidry of the Yankees, who won his first 13 games this season, had been expected to start.

"My pitcher's a little tired," Martin said of Guidry. "In his last couple of starts, he didn't have his usual velocity. When they go to their left-handed hitters, I'll go to my left-handed pitchers."

Lee MacPhail, president of the American League, was asked about NL domination of the series, which has seen his league fall behind 29-18 with one tie.

"I could say there's a lot of embarrassment for a league as superior as ours to lose as many as we have," he said. "But there are a lot of things you just can't explain in baseball."

The Brain Drain

WITH A NEW Jersey accent well stretched into a drawl by years and years in the South and Southwest, Bob Patterson allowed that, yes, he was interested in becoming athletic director at Vanderbilt University.

And the interest he had shown in the position came just as Tech's head football man, Rex Dockery, was rounding up two more assistant coaches to make his staff complete. It's time to be getting the nameplates affixed to the doors and areas of responsibility assigned.

That nameplate business at Tech this spring has kept the maintenance men busy, starting back in December when Steve Sloan resigned to move to Ole Miss.

Half a dozen coaches followed him there, and Dockery not only moved into Sloan's office but began building a staff of his own.

He had it wrapped up last week, with the hiring of Donnie Laurence from Mount Pleasant and Watson Brown from Jacksonville State in Alabama. But, there is the possibility that Patterson could be giving notice, if. . .

CLAY STAPLETON RECENTLY turned in his resignation at Vanderbilt, launching an AD search at that Nashville university. And, after serving 12 years there in a coaching capacity and as Sloan's administrative aide, Patterson is well known.

"The president called me (after Stapleton's resignation)," Patterson said last week, "and asked if I would be interested. I told him I was.

"We talked, and I've heard from other people up there about it since then. But, I haven't been up for an interview.

"Sure, I'm interested. It is a good situation, and anyone is interested in a promotion. But, I'd like to know something fairly soon (with start of Tech football drills beginning Aug. 19)."

Vanderbilt appears to be looking from within its organization as well as outside. Hootie Ingram, the assistant commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, has been mentioned in connection with the position. Charley Thornton, the asstant AD at Alabama who was interviewed for the Tech position, has asked that his name be withdrawn from consideration.

Larry Schmittou, the Vandy baseball coach who has dipped into the professional game as general manager of the Nashville team in the Class AA Southern League, is interested in it. Schmittou has helped revive the pro baseball game in the city and the way he has boosted minor-league baseball attendance there has made him one to be considered.

But, it is reported in Nashville that school officials may wait until the middle of August to make a decision.

FACT THAT VANDERBILT sought out Patterson has to be a compliment to him and to Tech. It is an indication of Patterson's popularity and the impression he made on school officials while serving there. It also is indicative of the quality people within the Tech community and how well they are respected in other areas.

But the list of quality people hired away from Tech in the past year continues to grow. . . Sloan, taken to Ole Miss. . . Bill Parcells (defensive coordinator under Sloan) named head football coach at the Air Force Academy. . . Ralph Carpenter (ten years as Tech sports publicist) named director of sports publicity at Ole Miss. . . Jess Stiles hired away from the football staff by a sporting goods organization. . . Pat Hodgson taken from the grid coaching staff by the San Diego Chargers. . .

Then, there is Dockery himself, promoted from the assistant's level at Tech. Of all these men receiving advancements —and evidently more pay—only Dockery is still on campus.

IT HAS TO be a credit to the school —and its athletic administration watched over this decade by J T King—that it could assemble such a group of men capable of handling such a variety of more responsible positions elsewhere. Standing with the challenge of replacing them is the thought of the loss of experience which they take with them.

Each had special qualities which contributed to the strength of the athletic department. And, as with the others, the loss of one such as Patterson would certainly affect the school. In addition to coaching, Patterson supplied a dimension which is most vital in any organization—especially an organization where young men are concerned.

As an older member of the staff, Patterson owned a sympathetic set of ears, to listen to homesick freshmen, to young men with problems—touching academics, girls, home, finances—that a dad or mom would help with back home. These are qualities necessary but not usually covered by a coaching contract.

But, while Patterson is under consideration at Vanderbilt, he is also concentrating on his defensive line challenge for this fall. And while Dockery is hoping he has filled his last vacancy for this year, he has his challenge, too: Molding his first college team with the smallest number of returning starters of ant team in the Southwest Conference.

But, there is a challenge facing Tech as well, a challenge to make its program stable and attractive enough to hold these people who are leaving. It's a compliment others want Tech's people; it's a lot bigger chore to keep them.

Boston Owner Sets Conference

BOSTON (AP) — With Red Auerbach still mulling his future, new Celtics' owner John Y. Brown scheduled a news conference for noon today to discuss his plans for the National Basketball Association team.

Brown, former owner of the Buffalo Braves, swapped teams last week with former Celtics owner Irv Levin, who will move the Braves to San Diego.

The owners also unveiled a multi-player trade, without advance consultation with Auerbach, Celtics president and general manager.

Brown made what was described as a substantial financial offer to Auerbach. The former coach said Monday he wants to discuss the proposed contract with Brown and will not announce his future plans on Tuesday.

Coach Tom Sanders and assistant K.C. Jones recently signed new contracts.

POOR FINISH—Forego, the second-best money winner in the history of horse racing, is shown as he finished fifth in the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park on July 4. It turned out to be the eight-year-old's last race, as he was retired Monday after winning $1,937,000 in prize money during his career. If he had won the Suburban, he would have been the first $2 million horse in history. (AP Laserphoto)

Forego Retires Short Of $ Goal

NEW YORK (AP) — Forego was retired Monday without having reached his goal of becoming the first racehorse to reach $2 million in earnings but with his place among racing legends secure.

"The horse was good to us. It is time to be good to him," a tearful Martha Geary, Forego's owner, said of the decision to retire the magnificent 8-year-old gelding.

He leaves the racetrack as the second-biggest money winning thoroughbred of all time, $1,938,957, to Kelso who had earned $1,977,896 when he was retired in 1966 after fracturing a right front foot while training for a race. Kelso, also a gelding, was 9 at the time.

Forego, plagued by gimpy front legs, tried to surpass Kelso and break the $2 million barrier in the 1¼-mile Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park July 4. But he finished fifth on a sloppy track, carrying — as usual — the top weight. On that occasion it was 132 pounds.

Trainer Frank Whiteley said Forego's left front pastern (just above the ankle) was aggravated and that Manuel Gilman, the Belmont track veterinarian, confirmed the presence of bone chips there.

But Whiteley said the decision to retire Forego wasn't the result of his performance in the Suburban but rather a "culmination of old troubles, wear and tear.

Wear: 57 starts over distances ranging from six furlongs to two miles under Herculean weights. Twenty-four times he carried 130 pounds or more — 138 was the highest — and 13 times won — 137 was the highest.

Tear: supensory ligment and ankle problems in left front left and akle problems in his right foreleg. Forego's success is high praise for trainers Sherrill Ward, who trained him from his 2-year-old through 5-year-old campaigns, and Whiteley, who trained him for the last three years.

The Kentucky-bred son of Forli-Lady Goldconda went to the post 57 times and returned with 34 wins, 9 seconds and 7 thirds and was worse than fourth only three times. Of his victories, 24 of were in stakes races and helped him to Horse of the Year honors in 1974-76.

After his incredible performance in the 1976 Marlboro Cup, Bill Shoemaker, who has ridden more than 7,400 winners, called him "the best horse I've ever ridden." With about 20 yards remaining Forego, carrying 137 pounds, was obviously beaten by Honest Pleasure, 119.

But Forego won.

But as great as Shoemaker's compliment, Forego's true worth can be judged by his acceptance by the fans. He drew noses out of racing forms and the big-cigar guys away from clubhouse television sets.

People cheered him from paddock to finish line ... and when he came back mud-splattered, a beaten favorite in his last start, he was greeted by applause.

As he left the paddock for the last time, a fan hoisted a sign that read: "God bless Forlie and Lady Golconda."

Forego did not race as a 2-year-old and went to the post the first time Jan. 17, 1973. The big horse, who became a chalk player's delight in his last years, went off at 10-1 and finished fourth. His first victory, by eight lengths, came 12 days later in a six-furlong maiden special weight race.

His first stake races was the Hutcheson at Gulfstream Park and he finished second. He followed this with a win in an allowance race, a second in the Florida Derby and a fifth in the Blue Grass Stakes.

In his next start he finished fifth in the Kentucky Derby, won by a strapping chestnut named Secretariat.

Forego raced throughout the summer of his 3-year-old season but didn't make another stakes start until Oct. 20, when he finished second by a head in the Jerome Handicap at Aqueduct. His first stakes win, by five lengths under 123 pounds, came in the Homer Handicap at Aqudeuct two weeks later. The remaining races of his career were all stakes, except two — an allowance which he won to open his 1976 campaign and an allowance which he won June 19 in his only other start this year.

A list of his stakes wins include such famous races as the Woodward, the Widener Handicap, Brooklyn Handicap, Suburban Handicap, Metropolitan Handicap and the Jockey Club Gold Cup.

Following the great Cup of '76 performance, Shoemkaer said:

"That's a real racehorse."

That was Forego.

Borg Might Become New Tennis Example

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Now that Bjorn Borg has established himself as No. 1 in the world of men's tennis, apt to reign for years, there is hope for a widespread change in court manners.

"The kids quickly adopt a hero, they always copy the champion," one highly placed U.S. official was heard to remark after watching Borg systematically disect Jimmy Connors in the Wimbledon final. "They could have no better example than Borg."

In recent years, spurred by the open boom and absence of authority, the game has been trending toward a state of anarchy.

Umpires and linesmen have become open targets for abuse, the fans for insults and profanity. Kids have been learning to throw racquets before mastering the proper toss on a serve. Their vocabulary would make a showgirl blush.

Brian James, writing in the London Daily Mail, took note of it during Wimbledon's latter stages when the teenagers and first-round losers took over the outer courts for the Consolation Plate and the Juniors.

"The game is being gouged by shrapnel from the great American tennis explosion of the last 10 years," James wrote.

Pointing out that of the 256 singles entrants at Wimbledon 106 came from America, he added:

"This sort of massive numerical dominance has always given America more than her fair share of superb players. Inevitably it must also burden her with more than a fair share of brats."

He cited 19-year-old John McEnroe, a semifinalist a year ago, as one of the chief offenders, recalling this incident after the Douglaston, N.Y., player had been eliminated — gesturing and growling — on an outside court:

"Isn't that the boy they said was going to be the next Jimmy Connors?" Someone asked.

"Yes", replied another, "but not if he plays like that. Let's hope he grows up as Jimmy has."

Connors, who openly acknowledged that he was once "a punk," has matured in the last couple of years. He was the epitome of grace and good conduct in his losing bout with Borg.

But there are still youngsters who have adopted his early court histroinics and picked up similar umpire-baiting, gesturing, cursing habits from the mad Romanian, Ilie Nastase, now under three-month suspension.

The promoter of a junior tennis program called it "a jungle."

John Lloyd, Britain's no. 2 player, was quoted as saying: "Some of these new young Americans are blasting away with tricks from the moment they appear, which is a new, ugly development."

Borg, 22, has been a model of court behavior since he came out of Sweden at age 16 to make a place for himself in the adult tennis world.

He has never been seen to chew out a linesman or umpire, to try to rattle an opponent or to insult a crowd.

Cool, poised, almost inhuman in his lack of emotion on the court, he plays the game with a businesslike dispatch, impervious to bad calls and outside distractions. When his work is done, he blends into the outside world, fulfilling his obligations to his legion of autograph-seeking admirers, the public and the press.

Let's hope the kids are watching.

Second Seed Wins Match

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Second-seeded Tim Gullikson, in his debut as a defending champion, claimed a first-round victory Monday in the $75,000 Hall of Fame Tennis Championships as one other seeded player bit the dust.

Gullikson, who ousted Australia's John Marks, 7-5, 6-2, had a difficult time in the first set but the lanky Australian began to lose his touch and the match belonged to the Onalaska, Wis., native from there on.

Brian Teacher, the Grand Prix tournament's No. 6 seed, was upset by South Africa's Bernie Mitton in a hard-fought center court duel, 7-5, 7-6. It was the second year in a row Teacher has lost in the first round.

Top-seeded Arthur Ashe, Wimbledon singles champ in 1975, had the day off as did No. 5 Colin Dibley of Australia.

Gullikson, the right-handed half of the tennis-playing twins, said he came to Newport immediately after being eliminated in Wimbledon's round-of-16 to work on his grass-court game.

"I've been practicing really hard to get ready," Gullikson said. "I wans't as confident as last year. I'm not volleying as well, but I'm returning (serve) better."

The 1977 event was Gullikson's first title.

"I've never beeen a defending champion before. This the first tournament I've ever won, so that makes you play harder," he said.

Gullikson said his game improved as the match wore on. He said Marks seemed to be discouraged when he broke the Australian's serve early in the second set.

"I just lost a little bit of heart after the first set," said Marks. "The courts were a little hard to get used to."

NASL's Cosmos Could Outdraw Rival NY Mets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — If fans continue to flock to Giants Stadium to see Cosmos matches as team officials expect, it's possible the defending North American Soccer League champions will outdraw the New York Mets.

The Cosmos have drawn 545,135 fans in 12 games, an average of 45,428 in their second year at the Meadowlands complex. By comparison, the Mets have drawn 585,175 for 43 dates at Shea Stadium, an average of 13,608.

Five years ago, before signing Brazilian superstar Pele, the Cosmos played in relative obscurity at Randall's Island. The team now has three regular season home games remaining and general manager Krikor Yepremian is certain even bigger crowds are on the way.

"We play New England Wednesday night, and after losing to them last week, we're hoping for over 50,000," he said. "Our other two games are against Toronto and Tampa Bay. Tampa Bay is one of our big rivalries and we think we can draw 65,000 for them."

That would put the Cosmos season attendance at approximately 700,000 — with the league playoffs still to come.

Last year, the Cosmos drew crowds of 57,828, a standing room crowd of 77,691, and 73,669 for three playoff games. The Cosmos have three potential playoff games at Giants Stadium this year, providing, of course, they don't get eliminated early. Yepremian said he expects full houses for those contests.

Soccer Bowl '78 is also being played at Giants Stadium and the game is already close to a sell out. If the Cosmos make it to the finals, their season attendance would be close to the one million mark.

The Mets, however, will be hard pressed to keep their fans interested. Their record at the all-star break is 36-50. If they continue to draw at their current pace, their season total would be approximately 990,000.

Donald Conway, Mets' assistant comptroller, said the team drew 1,066,825 last year. No projections have been made for this year's attendance, he said, adding, "A lot depends on the weather and how the club is going."

The Yankees have attracted 966,290 fans for 34 dates, an average of 23,420. In winning the 1977 world championship, the Yankees drew 2,103,092.

FCA To Hold July Meeting

The July meeting of the adult chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes is scheduled for Thursday at Furr's Town & Country Cafeteria. The meeting begins at 7:30 a.m.

The program will feature talks by students that attended the recent summer FCA national conference in Colorado.

All FCA adult members and newcomers are invited to attend.

Brock's Skills Begin Eroding

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Less than a year since inscribing his name in the record book, Lou Brock is at a crisis stage to his career.

The once-irrepressible speedster, who reached his 39th birthday three Weeks ago, is no longer the generating force to the offense of the St. Louis Cardinals. And, without him, the Cardinals are not winning.

"What hurts the most is that we're losing and I can't do anything about it," Says Brock, who has been out of the starting lineup during 15 of St. Louis' last 17 games.

"It's a helpless feeling, sitting on the bench. I just want to be out there where I can do us some good and help us get started. I'm just going to have to sit it out, I guess, and stay ready."

Brock, whose 913 stolen bases rank him as baseball's all-time top thief, began the season with 2,834 lifetime hits and bright hopes for closing in rapidly on a total of 3,000, which would put him in additionally elite company.

But a slump which originated early in the year has seriously impeded his progress. The owner of a .328 batting on May 3, he has since collected only 18 hits in 125 trips to the plate and plummeted to .206.

Cards Manager Ken Boyer, Brock's teammate on St. Louis' World Series title team in 1964, benched the aging outfielder in mid-June, reassigning catcher Ted Simmons for a time to the left field position.

Recently, Boyer has juggled the personnel of the National League's weakest-hitting team even more and alternated George Hendrick and Jerry Mumphrey at Brock's station.

"I'd probably give him a chance," Boyer said last week of the outlook for Brock, "but I wouldn't hamper a particular pitcher's chance of winning a ballgame if he were going bad."

Paradoxically, Brock's absences from the outfield have taken their toll on the St. Louis defense, resulting in mental lapses and uncaught fly balls which have been converted into opponents' runs.

"They say it's not personal, but it has to be," Brock says ungrudgingly of his awkward status. "I've been through this kind of a slump before, but I can't be second-guessing the manager. It's his responsibility, not mine."

Unsuccessful in seven trips this year as a pinch-hitter, Brock lined out in that capacity Sunday during the Cards' 6-1 loss to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Hendrick, meanwhile, twice failed to catch bloop drives to shallow center field. He kicked one after it hit the turf, helping the Pirates score four unearned runs.

Boyer, although rankled by the defeat, declared Hendrick would remain at the key position, because "That's what he's getting paid to do," with Mumphrey staying in left.

Brock's hit total, now stationary at 2,872, leaves him a tantalizing 128 shy of the 3,000-hit pinnacle attained by only 13 players in major league history.

He accepts his position with equanimity for the most part, however, and says he will return to play out his two-year contract in 1979 regardless of what transpires during the final half of the current campaign.

"It has to be taken in its proper perspective," Brock says of the 3,000 mark, a coveted level reached in early May by the Cincinnati Reds' Pete Rose.

"There's still a short list of players who are in the 2,900 club. Sure I said I wanted 3,000 hits, but it may not be possible now."

Zachry Tires Of 'Albatross'

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a great deal of irony in the fact that Pat Zachry, National League All-Star pitcher, entered the midseason classic with a better record than one Tom Seaver. But Zachry isn't impressed.

"Tom Seaver has been like an albatross around my neck," said the 26-year-old right-hander. "I really don't want to talk about or be compared with him any more."

Zachry was NL co-rookie of the year in 1976 after a 14-7 record and a 2.74 earned run average for the Cincinnati Reds. On June 15, 1977, he was traded to the New York Mets in the celebrated five-player deal that sent Seaver to the Reds. He finished the 1977 season with a 10-13 record while Seaver, enjoying the support of a potent offense, wound up 21-6.

This season, however, Seaver has been a streaky performer who carries a 9-7 record and a 3.33 ERA into the All-Star game. Zachry, a model of consistency, is 10-4 with a 3.15 ERA.

"Being named to the All-Stars is the fulfillment of a childhood dream," said Zachry. "I want to pitch in San Diego and prove the selection was right."

Zachry learned he had been picked for the squad just before he started against the Philadelphia Phillies July 4. As if to justify NL All-Star Manager Tom Lasorda's selection, Zachry blanked the Phillies on two hits after hurling 62-3 innings of no-hit ball.

"These guys (the Phillies) have been kicking me around ever since I came into the league," said Zachry. "So it was an extra thrill beating them.

"But I was out there also thinking about the All-Stars. I had something to prove — that I deserve to be on the All-Star team."

Last season at times, Zachry wondered whether he deserved to be a major leaguer.

"I was having mechanical problems, I had no confidence. It's kind of an up-and-down world.

"The sophomore jinx is a lot of junk. That wasn't it. I wasn't physically ready for the season. I had to go to Puerto Rico in the off-season and get myself back together. Now, I'm not afraid to go out there and pitch. Sometimes I was last season. But things are working out this year.

"It's an incredible difference in one year. This year, I feel like I really belong in New York with the Mets. I'm getting used to the city, the traffic. And the club seems to pick up for me and play so well when I'm out on the mound."

Junior Golf Meet To Start Today

More than 300 hundred junior golfers will be competing for the 61st Western Junior Golf Championship which begins today at the University of New Mexico Golf Course in Alburquerque.

Several golfers from the West Texas area—including Mike White, a 17-year-old youngster from Lubbock—have qualified for the preliminary rounds of the tournament.

The golfers will play in qualifying rounds today and tomorrow. The top 64 players after 36 holes will advance to the match play which gegins Thursday.

The Junior Champion will be determined Saturday.

Heading the list of potential favorites in the tourney is last year's runner-up David Abell, a Wake Forest University sophomore from Florida. Seven of last Yyear's 32 qualifiers are returning.

Bobby Clampett, who was the low scoring amateur in this year's United States Open Championship is entered also.

Players with a handicap of four or less and between the ages of 16-18 are eligibile for the tournament.

Other players from the West Texas area include Chris Adkins, 17; Kyle Kolls, 17; and Ross Vaughan, 18 from San Angelo. Three youths from Midland will compete, including Kelly Eng, 18; Mike Young, 16; and Kyle Rowland, 18; and Jim Kern, 18.

Ft. Stockton has two representatives: Mike Dawson, 18; and Mike Waller, 19.

George Yocum, 19, from Herford and Mike McCord, 19, from Wichita Falls have qualified for the match also. Arthur Romero, a 17-year-old youth from Roswell, N.M. will play in the five-day tournamenttoo.

charuson Pearce, who hit .340, and outfielder Greg Watts of Abilene Cooper, who hit .320, also have signed with LCC.

Day, a centerfielder, hit .470 as a senior for the Westerners and played in the Texas High School All-Star game in Houston last month.

Hays added three new moundsmen to the team. Heading the list is New Mexico all-stater Chris Cook, a southpaw from Deming who was 13-2 with a 0.84 ERA. Kevin Burks of Burkburnett, a 16-3 moundsman for the Class AAA state runners-up, and Nowell Delgado, who was 10-4 with 0.44 ERA for victoria, also signed with the Chaparrals.

Delgado finished with a 30-6 career mark at Victoria.

Junior Golf Tourney To Begin

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The 11th Junior World Golf Championships, with the most countries in competition of any athletic event except the Olympics, gets under way today over four local courses.

The field of 670 young players represents 35 nations, including 120 from foreign countries. A big contingent of Hawaiians is granted a good chance to fly home again with trophies.

Among the Hawaiians is Ralden Chang, favored to become the first repeat champion among boys 13-14 years old.

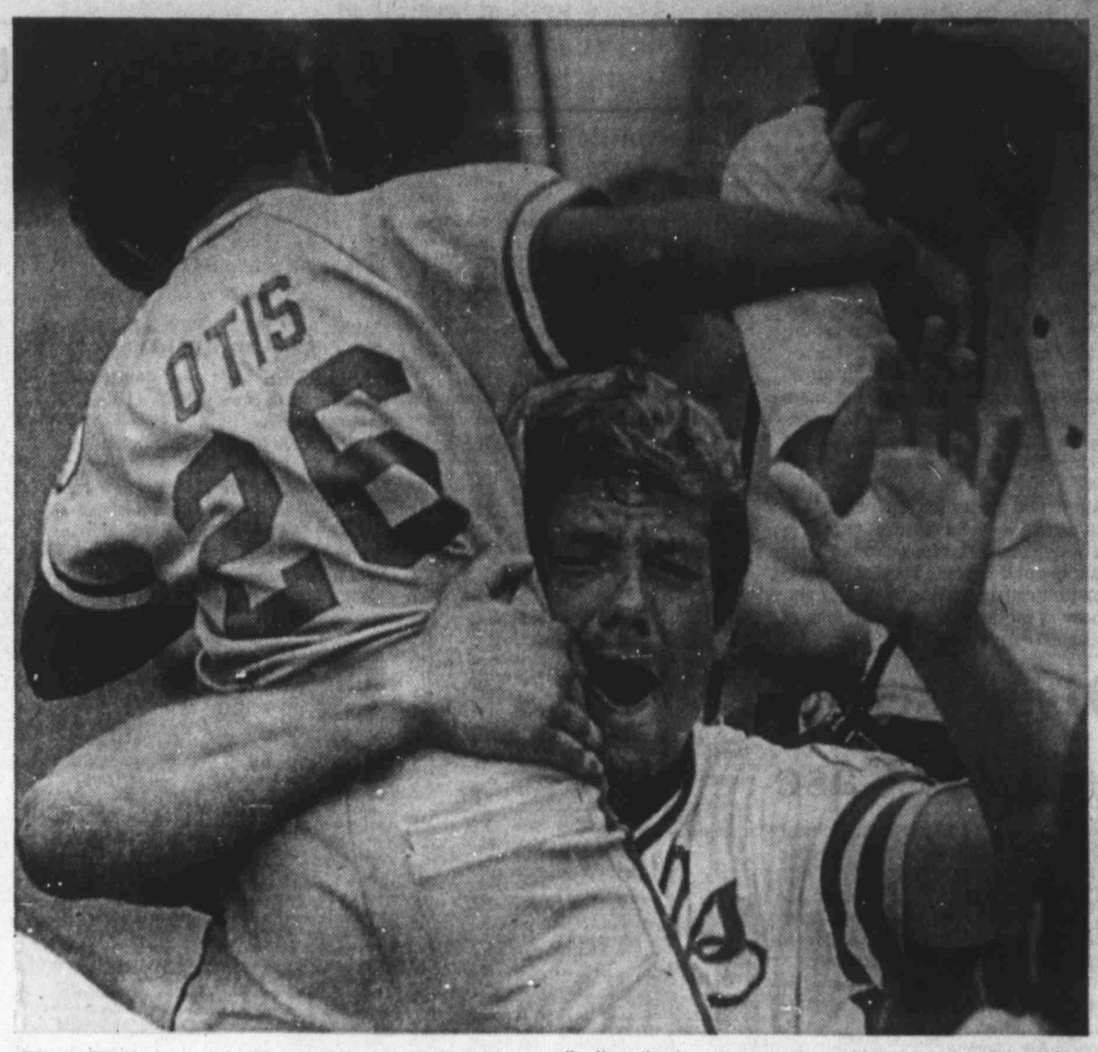
The 5 foot 4,130-pound Chang was joined by 24 teammates including Lori Castillo, who was the girls 13-14 winner in 1975, the U. S. Junior Girls' champion in 1977 and is defending titlist in the Hawaiian Women's Amateur.

Hawaii once before had a two-time winner in Charles Barenaba Jr., who took the boys 13-14 in 1968 and the 15-17 in 1971.

In the opening round, the boys play at Torrey Pines south and girls at Torrey Pines north, all golfers 13-14 years old at Balboa Park, the 11-12 aged at Mission Bay and under-10 at Presidio course.

The older players wind up 72 holes on Friday with the other divisions concluding Thursday after 54 holes.

A lone contender from Rhodesia, 17-year-old Elizabeth Glass, flew from Salisbury to compete. She has won two ladies' tournaments in her country already this year.



BIG BATTLE—Barry Otis (26), son of Kansas City Royals' outfielder Amos Otis, "attacks" Royals' third baseman George Brett during the annual children vs. fathers game at Royals' Stadium Sunday. Brett, while pitching, hit young Otis with a pitch and then tripped him while he was going to first base, precipitating a charge from the childrens' dugout. (AP Laserphoto)

Americans Note St. Andrews' Large Greens

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — "These are not greens. They're building lots for houses," said Hale Irwin. "You could build a house in the middle and still have an acre of lawn left over."

"I was putting from one side of the green to the other, and it was so far I lost my ball," said Hubert Green.

The two American stars, both former U.S. Open Champions, were exaggerating — at least slightly — about the size of the huge, double greens on the Old Course at St. Andrews. But they were completely serious about some adjustments they'll make for the 107th British Open Golf Championship that gets under way Wednesday.

The Old Course, the birthplace of golf and in existance at least since 1552, is unique in that seven greens service 14 holes. The outgoing nine holes completely parallel the incoming nine. On all but four holes, a single green services both an outgoing and incoming hole.

These double greens range up to an acre in size. They come complete with knobs and swales and ridges and the famed "Valley of Sin," a deep depression in 18th green.

"You're going to be faced with situations where you have to chip on the greens," Green said after a practice round over the 6,933-yard, par 72 layout on Scotland's East Coast.

"You can be on the green, but so far away from the pin, that it's ridiculous to try to putt. The object of the game is to get the ball as close to the hole as you can. There's no rule that says you can't chip on the green."

"I agree completely," said Irwin, "I will not hesitate to chip on the green.

"Lord help you if you hit a bad shot, a really bad shot.

"You can put yourself in the position where the putter won't be enough club. You'd be bending the shaft trying to get the ball to the hole."

Both agreed that luck will play a larger-than-usual role in this tournament.

"Two men can hit identical shots into a green," said Irwin. "Say the balls hit only one foot apart. One can run to the flag and the other catch a ridge and run 40 feet away. A lot of luck will be involved, more than usual.

"But you can't win on luck. You have to have the ability, too. It will probably be a good, strong, established player that wins."

Irwin and Green obviously fall in that category. Green has picked up two victories this year, Hawaii and Heritage; was second in the Masters, but missed the cut in both the U.S. and canadian opens.

"I think after I won those two early in the year I got so busy patting myself on the back I let my game slide," Green said. "I'm starting to play better now, but my putting is still horrible."

Irwin described his season as "pleasantly frustrating"

"I haven't won, and that's frustrating. But I've played well and that's pleasant," he said. "I've had a lot of top five finishes. I've been close and I really haven't blown anything. It's just that I haven't got the right bounce at the right time. I could have won two or three.

"I feel I'm playing well enough to win here. I'm striking the ball very, very well."

While Green and Irwin rank high among the list of challengers for this ancient title, the favorites are defending champion Tom Watson and, of course, Jack Nicklaus, who engaged in one of golf's classic confrontations last year at Turnberry.

Both appear at or near the peak of their game. Watson has won three times this year, Bicklaus twice. They're each listed at 6-1.

Green and Lee Trevino, winner of one tournament and a five-time runner-up this year, are 14-1; Spain's 21-year-old sensation, Severiano Ballesteros, Masters champ Gary Player of South Africa and former British champ Tom Weiskopf are 16-1.

Other contenderss are Irwin and Johnny Miller, 20-1; Ben Crenshaw, Ray Floyd and Andy Bean, winner of three titles in his last five starts, 25-1; George Burns, nick faldo of England, Australian Graham Marsh, Tom Kite and Jerry Pate, 33-1.

Portions of Saturday's final round will be telecast on a delayed basis to the United States by ABC.

Hewitt Hits Wimbledon After Win

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Ever controversial, Bob Hewitt won his sixth Wimbledon doubles title Saturday and lost no time in repeating his long-standing complaint that doubles players get a raw deal.

Hewitt partnered Frew McMillan to a 6-1, 6-4, 6-2 victory over young Americans John McEnroe and Peter Fleming — their third victory together at Wimbledon in 12 years.

McMillan won his second final of the afternoon when he and Betty Stove of Holland teamed up to beat Ray Ruffels of Australia and Billie Jean King of the United States 6-2, 6-2 in mixed doubles.

Afterward the men's doubles, Hewitt, the balding, bearded former Australian, said, "We deserve better."

Hewitt noted he and McMillan will share $12,600 for their work, while Bjorn Borg took home $33,200 for his men's singles victory.

Addressing 10 reporters where earlier there had been nearly 100 for Borg, Hewitt said the lack of recognition was "a bit of an insult."

Hewitt, who won two doubles titles with his former partner, Fred Stolle, and also won a mixed doubles title with Greer Stevens last year, said that despite being 38 years old he intends to continue playing doubles and singles.

"We will go on as long as we can," he said. "There is no basic reason why we should stop playing.

"I'd like to keep on winning and also to boost doubles."

McMillan was possibly the busiest player at Wimbledon this year. In the last three days of play he played over 200 games in the men's and mixed doubles.

Tway, Huff Lead Golf Qualifying

DALLAS (AP) — Bob Tway, a freshman on Oklahoma State's 1978 NCAA championship team, and Kenny Huff of Dallas shot four-under-par 67s Monday to set the pace in the first of two qualifying rounds for the Trans-Miss, a prestigious match play competition which starts here Wednesday.

Tway, 19, of Marietta, Ga., offset two bogeys with four birdies and an eagle at Brook Hollow Golf Club, whose narrow fairways and high rough chewed up and spat out most of the 200 amateurs who struggled around it.

Only five sub-par rounds were fired all day either at Brook Hollow or at Las Colinas Country Club in nearby Irving, Texas. Tway's was the only one at Brook Hollow, where 80s and 90s were common. He led one competitor by 30 shots.

The golfers played in temperatures that reached 102 degrees. It was the 10th straight day the mercury went over 100 in Dallas, and golfers were delayed several times while course officials sprayed water on the greens.

John Shackleford of Austin was two shots off the pace with a 69 at Las Colinas. Lindy Miller of Fort Worth, another member of the Oklahoma State team and the low amateur in the 1978 Masters and the 1977 U.S. Open, tapped in a birdie on the 18th hole for a one-under 70, sharing the day's third-best round with Andy Blossom of Stockton, Calif.

Britt Harrison, another Oklahoma State golfer, was one of seven who fired one-over par 72s at Las Colinas. Others in the logjam were former Walker Cup players John Farquhar of Lubbock and John Grace of Fort Worth; John Paul Cain of Houston; Dale Blackburn of Houston; and Jimmy Adams of Port Arthur.

Doug Clarke, the 19-year-old Stanford University star who won the Trans-Miss two years ago at Pebble Beach, Calif., made a strong bid for a repeat with a 72 at Brook Hollow. With him were Steve Bowman of Tyler; Chris Gutilla of Fresno, Calif.; and Bucky Smith of San Marcos.

Another Oklahoma State golfer, Rafael Alarcon, was even par at Las Colinas until the 17th. Playing in the same foursome with teammate Miller, Alarcon finished double bogey-bogey for a 74.

The 400 amateurs in the field switch playing sites today, and the low 64 will qualify for the Trans-Miss match play elimination. They will battle in 18-hole matches Wednesday and Thursday, a double round Friday and a single round Saturday to pare the field to two finalists, who will go head-to-head in a 36-hole match Sunday.

McClendon Gets Okay

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Those people hoping that newly hired athletic director, Paul Dietzel, will fire LSU football coach Charlie McClendon "are in for a rude surprise," predicted former Gov. John McKeithen Monday.

McKeithen's love for LSU football and his personal involvement in LSU football was well known during his active years in politics.

"The move wasn't to get Dietzel as athletic director," he told the Press Club of Baton Rouge. "It was to get a football team. But, I predict Peachy Paul is not going to fire him for awhile."

McKeithen said Dietzel, Alabama coach Bear Bryant and many other professionals respected McClendon as being one of the best men around in teaching the basics of the game.

If the coach has any shortcomings, it's in the area of public relations and recruiting, said McKeithen, adding that those areas are made to order for Dietzel.

The former governor noted that McClendon had teams in the 1960s almost as good as Dietzel's 1958 national champions. "I recruited about half of those teams," McKeithen said.

"I think Dietzel and McClendon can be a great combination," he said.

Son Of Olympians Signed By OSU

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Mark Connolly, the son of the star-crossed lovers of the 1956 Olympic Games, has signed a letter-of-intent to play basketball at Oklahoma State University, the university said Monday.

He is the son of Harold Connolly, who won a gold medal for the United States in the hammer throw, and the former Olga Fikotova, who won a gold metal for her native Czechslovakia in discus.

The 1956 Olympics were held in Melbourne, Australia, and Connolly followed Miss Fikotova home after the games were over. They were married in Czechslovakia and began a lengthy fight to get out of the country and come to the United States.

Connolly was forced to sell his hammer to finance their fight, and finally they were allowed to leave and now live in Culver City, Calif.

Mark Connolly averaged 19.7 points and 16.5 rebounds per game his senior year in high school. He graduated in 1977 but stayed out of school for a year because of a back injury.

He won All-California Interscholastic Federation honors and was twice named to the all-district team and was named district player of the year.

Soviet Grain Prospects Higher Than Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Improved prospects point to a Soviet Union grain harvest this year of about 215 million metric tons, the third largest on record, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

A month ago the department tentatively estimated 1978 Soviet grain production at between 185 million and 225 million tons, indicating that it might be in the middle of that range, 205 million tons.

In its second estimate, the department's special task force on Soviet grain production said the crop now is expected to range between 195 million and 230 million tons.

"Barring unusual conditions during the balance of the growing and harvesting season, a total grain outturn of approximately 215 million tons is now indicated," the report said.

The harvest would include about 105 million tons of wheat, 100 million tons of coarse grains such as corn and 10 million tons of miscellaneous grains, rice and pulses such as beans and peas.

If the Soviet harvest turns out to be 215 million tons, it would be 10 percent larger than last year's production of 195.5 million tons. The record was 223.8 million tons in 1976, followed by 222.5 million tons in 1973.

Last July the department estimated the 1977 Soviet grain crop at 225 million tons, up from 215 million forecast in June. The estimate was later reduced to 220 million tons and then to 215 million tons last Sept. 29 where the official estimate stood until Moscow announced in November that 1977 grain production was much less.

The experience last year of overestimating the crop has helped make the department more cautious in forecasting Soviet grain output and accounts for the use of ranges of possible production in announcing new figures.

Even so, the report said that yields "seem likely" to be about 10 percent larger this year. And since the amount of land planted to grain is about the same as in 1977 — approximately 130 million hectares — total grain production is expected to be up. A hectare is about 2.47 acres.

"The expected yield increase is attributable to significantly better soil moisture conditions and more evenly distributed rainfall than has been experienced so far in the growing season," the report said.

After grain production faltered in 1975 — a decade low of 140.1 million tons — the Soviet Union was forced to buy large quantities of U.S. grain. This led to a five-year pact calling for regular annual purchases of at least six million tons of wheat and corn.

Indictments Dismissed In Manpower Funds Case

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Indictments against seven of 16 persons charged with abusing federal Manpower funds in the Rio Grande Valley were dropped Monday by State District Judge Harry Lewis on the eve of jury selection in the case.

Cameron County District Attorney Joe K. Hendley told newsmen he had exercised his discretion as prosecutor to move for dismissal of the indictments.

The indictments followed a court of inquiry last December in South Texas. The trial was moved here from Brownsville on a change of venue.

Among those indictments dropped was a witness tampering charge against former Cameron County District Attorney Fred Galindo. The ex-prosecutor was indicted for allegedly attempting to change the testimony of two members of the Governor's Office for Migrant Affairs.

Indictments were also dropped against:

— John David Osborne and John Willard, trade school instructors, each charged with one count of theft for allegedly receiving free repairs to their houses performed by Manpower trainees with materials bought with federal funds.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

MOST COTTON FIELDS REMAIN relatively pest free on the South Plains, although activity is beginning to pick up.

James F. Leser and William P. Morrison, area extension entomologists, point out that cotton generally can be expected to begin squaring once plants have five or six true leaves.

And once fields begin squaring, they add, farmers should keep an eye open for cotton fleahoppers and fleahopper damage. While fleahopper numbers remain extremely light, they still could cause problems on late-planted cotton.

"Fleahoppers may have time to develop in damaging levels by the time the late-planted fields start squaring," the entomologists say.

LIGHT NUMBERS OF THRIPS AND APHIDS can be found in many fields. These insects, Leser and Morrison say, should not be of concern and should provide an excellent food source for beneficials.

Grasshoppers are numerous in pasture and grasslands and could cause problems to cotton if they move into the borders of fields, Leser and Morrison say.

"The dry weather we are experiencing will dry up rangeland and force grasshoppers to seek food elsewhere," the entomologists add.

Beet armyworms have made an appearance on the Plains. Leser and Morrison know of at least two fields with high numbers and moderate to heavy damage.

"This pest feeds on foliate and fruit, but right now the biggest concern is loss of stand in pre-squaring cotton due to leaf feeding," they point out. "Squaring cotton can tolerate no more than 30 percent foliage loss at this time if yield loss is to be avoided."

Beet armyworms aren't easy to control and insecticides are most effective when applied against small worms.

LIGHT BOLLWORM ACTIVITY has been found in a few scattered fields. Damaged squares and first and second instar larvae are present.

Beneficial insects thus far are taking care of this early infestation, Morrison and Leser report, as evidenced by the frequent presence of some square damage but no worms.

"Producers who attempt to control these early initial bollworm infestations will surely get into trouble," the entomologists say.

Egg laying activity is likely to increase next week, they say, but add that the greatest egg laying probably will occur during the second and third weeks of August.

CORN LEAF APHIDS HAVE INCREASED in sorghum during the past week, with some moderate to heavy infestations observed.

"Sorghum plants can withstand very high populations of corn leaf aphids because these aphids do not inject toxin while they are feeding," Morrison says.

"Greenbugs, on the other hand, do inject a toxin while they feed and so inflict more damage on their host plant. Corn leaf aphids live in the whorl and after the boot stage, populations decline rapidly."

Greenbugs appear to be a little lighter than in the last coupie of years. Populations generally are light.

An estimated 80 percent of the sorghum on the High Plains this year is in greenbug-resistant hybrids.

Cotton Crop Roots Hampered By Soils

VERNON (Special) — Medium-textured soils of the Rolling Plains, generally considered permeable, can deceptively restrict root growth in cotton crops.

What this means, says the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station's Dr. C.J. Gerard, is that "shallow reservoirs" of available water in these soils must be replenished frequently during dry spells when cotton is blooming and fruiting if high yields are expected.

Gerard found that similar conditions can exist in the vertisol or fine-textured, shrink and swell soils of South Texas.

The scientist, based at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center at Chillicothe-Vernon, points out that soils with shallow reservoirs are those with limited capacity to hold water. What moisture there is, is used quickly when the cotton plants are blooming and fruiting and the weather is dry.

Increased organic matter and improved tillage techniques will help boost the water storage ability of such soils, notes Gerard.

The scientist adds that the most important feature of root systems of annual crops is their rapid expansion into previously unoccupied soil. This process enables plants to grow for days or weeks without rain or irrigation.

Such desirable root growth, however, can be hindered by the shallow reservoirs, he says.

Live Cattle Futures Mixed On Exchange

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 62 points higher to 27 points lower on 22,089 sales Monday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

January was up the most, with nearby August off the most. The market reacted on late profit-taking after prices had climbed 95 points.

Initially, the market sagged 67 points on heavy cattle runs and lower prices along with easiness in beef. Good outside support developed after local short covering touched off stops.

The discount of futures to cash was positive and lifted prices to four-week highs, up 537 points from lows.

Wholesale beef was off one cent at 84 1/2 cents a pound for 500 to 700 pounds. The six markets expect 13,600 head today.

Cash cattle were steady to off $2.50, with the best top at $57 at Joliet. Slaughter was 136,000 head.

Feeder cattle futures recovered from outset losses of 50 points and ended unchanged to up 87 points. Sales were 2,891 cars. August led the advance after having climbed 147 points for a time.

Selling at the start was in response to weak fundamentals, including heavy cattle runs and a lower trend to beef.

However, this was easily absorbed and fresh buying expanded as live cattle futures moved ahead. Selling at the end included some of the early buyers, with profit-taking presumably involved.

The six markets expect 1,600 head today. Cash feeders were up $7 to off $2, with the best top at $86 at San Antonio.

Hog futures finished 60 points lower to five points higher. Sales were 4,932 cars. October was down the most, with July and Frebruary ranging higher. The market fluctuated 80 points higher to 75 points lower in erratic action.

Selling at the start was pressed by heavy hog runs and lower prices. Support developed as cattle futures moved ahead and prices rose to the highest level in one week before reacting. A mixed trend to cash hams and weakness in loins were late factors.

Wholesale hams were off one cent to up one-half cents at 72 to 78 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. The six markets expect 26,000 head today.

Cash hogs were off 50 cents to $1.50, with the best top at $48, the lowest since April. Slaughter was 271,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 85 points higher to 65 points lower on 6,703 sales. Distant July was up the most, with nearby August off the most. The August contract was off 115 points, while nearby July gained 175 points in sharp early swings.

Initial selling followed heavy hog runs and lower prices along with delivery of eight cars. Good outside support was attracted on reduction of 600,000 pounds in local stocks Friday and 1.8 million pounds last week.

Deliveries total 16 thus far. Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1 1/2 cents at 49 3/4 to 57 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures slipped lower, but other grain prices were narrowly mixed on the Chicago Board of Trade Monday.

Analysts described the activity as largely technical prior to the government's upcoming estimates of corn and wheat production.

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was slow on Monday. Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was light.

Growers sold mixed lots at 800 to 1,100 points over loan rates.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations advanced 20 points. The base price of grade 41, staple 34, mikes 3.5-4.9, stood at 53.95 cents per pound, 20 points higher than a week earlier.

LUBBOCK SPOT COTTON

Quotations are the approximate prices reported to the Agricultural Marketing Service for qualities equal to the U.S. Official Grade and Staple Standards. Prices are for micronaire (mike) readings of 3.5 through 4.9, in mixed lots, uncompressed, free of all charges in the warehouse in the market.

Price trend: Higher on Monday.

Arms Talks, Dissidents Worry Vance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, citing the spectre of "mutual annihilation," said Monday a new arms limitation pact with the Soviet Union must not be conditioned on Soviet behavior in such other areas as human rights.

Vance strongly defended, during a news conference, his decision to proceed with plans to resume U.S.-Soviet arms talks this week despite his deep concern over trials of two Soviet human rights activists.

Vance will meet on Wednesday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Geneva to try to remove the remaining obstacles to a new strategic arms limitation agreement.

"We are dealing with negotiations that effect the national security of our nation and the well being of the world in general," Vance said.

"It is a question which deals with the prospect of mutual annihilation on either side, with the consequences that could have not only on the two countries involved but on the world in general. Therefore, we think this issue should be treated differently from others."

Only hours before, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said Vance's decision to go ahead with the Geneva talks is the wrong signal to be sending to Moscow. Jackson, a leading Senate student of Soviet-American relations, said in a radio interview that the United States is responding with rhetoric and not substance to Soviet actions.

Later, on the floor of the Senate, Jackson said that the administration's approach to relations with the Soviet Union is "confused, uncertain and often contradictory."

"It is clear that the Soviet leaders are increasingly confident that they can bully us and get away with it. They are becoming bolder in their policies and more prepared to take risks," Jackson said.

In another development, a Jewish delegation suggested to Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security assistant, that Vance delay his talks to protest the Moscow trial of dissidents.

Stanley Lowell, acting chairman of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, said the Soviet leaders took for granted technological and economic aid from the United States while violating human rights issues that go "to the very heart of what America is."

In retaliation for the Soviet crackdown on dissidents, Vance announced Saturday the administration was cancelling planned visits to Moscow by delegations from the Environmental Protection Agency and from the office of President Carter's science adviser.

Vance said the administration is considering further retaliatory measures but he refused to specify them.

As Vance spoke, the trials of dissident leaders Anatoly F. Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg got under way in the Soviet Union. Shcharansky was charged with high treason and Ginzburg with anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

Vance said the trials would "inevitably affect the climate of relations and impose obstacles to the building of cooperation.

"I regret the steps which have been taken recently and deplore the specific actions with respect to the dissidents. This does not help the relations btween our two countries."

Vance said, however, he believes the Senate will ratify an arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union even though the "general atmosphere has been aggravated."

Vance also indicated that the strain in relations with the Soviets on the human rights issue will not affect mutual efforts to reach agreement on a reduction of forces in Central Europe.

He praised a recent Soviet proposal as a "sound basis for negotiations" but said the two countries are still apart in their respective estimates on the number of Warsaw Pact forces.

On other issues, Vance said there is still no timetable for completing the process of normalizing relations with China despite press reports that the administration has set early 1979 as a target.

Of his meeting with the foreign ministers of Egypt and Israel in London early next week, Vance said the peace proposals set forth by both sides have "deficiencies" as well as "positive elements."

He said "there is hope for progress" in the reopening of dialogue between the two countries. The United States, he said, "will try to act as a bridge between them."

Ruling Party Of Paraguay Investigating 'Leftist' Opponent

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — A judge is investigating arrested opposition leader Domingo Laino for alleged "links to the extreme left," Interior Minister Augusto Montanaro said Monday.

The minister did not elaborate, but unofficial sources said the investigation stemmed from Laino's 1976 attempt to unite opposition elements for the first time against President Alfredo Stroessner.

The Stroessner regime, which has ruled Paraguay since 1954, said at the time it considered Laino a Communist and his unity effort a threat to public peace. An official investigation stalled because Laino, as a member of the Chamber of Deputies, was immune from arrest.

Laino's main opposition Liberal-Radical Party split last year, and the government barred his majority faction, now called the Authentic Liberal-Radicals, from running in the 1978 election.

Patria, the official publication of Stroessner's ruling Colorado Party, noted that Laino's immunity had expired and said his arrest Friday meant the 1976 investigation was being reopened.

The police have held Laino, 43, and human rights lawyer Francisco de Vargas, 32, incommunicato since Friday, when armed men in civilian clothes seized them from the lawyer's car in downtown Asuncion.

The Carter administration, the Inter-American Human Rights Commission and all Paraguayan opposition groups expressed concern over the arrests. They occurred one day after Laino's return from Washington, where he publicly urged the U.S. government and international lending agencies to halt aid to "the Stroessner dictatorship."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I own 2,432 shares of growth mutual fund and reinvest my dividends to pay more shares. I am 68 and do not need my dividends for income. If I live long enough, I may need them. If not, I have two daughters who can share the dividends. My daughters are big spendthrifts and I would not want them to get their hands on the principal after my demise. How can I make sure my wishes are carried out?

Also, the representative of the mutual fund is trying to convince me to transfer my investment to a different mutual fund — an "income" fund — for a $5 fee. He says I would do much better, in the long run, with the income fund. What do you say?

A. To solve your first problem, you should sit down with a good attonery — one who practices estate planning. The attorney will probably recommend that you have a trust set up to receive your assets after you leave this vale of tears. The trust should be set up so that your daughters receive the income from it but will not be able to invade the principal.

It must be stressed that estate planning is complicated and should be tailored to individual situations. This column cannot come up with blanket suggestions to fit different family situations.

As for that mutual fund representative's recommendation to switch funds, I would agree — were it not for the fact that you don't need the cash dividends.

Most mutual fund organizations allow shareholders to switch from one fund to another within the same group for a $5 fee. And, because most people your age need income, a move from a growth fund — which hopefully will grow in value — to an income fund — which produces higher income — normally makes good sense.

But, because you don't need current income, I'd say hang on to the growth fund. You can make the switch into the income fund, when you get pinched for cash.

Q. My husband will retire in three years, at 55. We will move to a different area of the country. We wonder if it would be wise to buy our retirement home now and rent it out for the next three years. This would give us a tax break and would beat the ever-rising costs of construction. Would we be fairly safe in making this investment?

A. Yes, you will be — if you get a good tenant. That's the key to the whole situation. I know a number of people who have done what you have in mind. Some have come out happy as larks and way ahead financially. Others tell some horror stories.

The tax breaks can be considerable. You would have deductions for mortgage interest, real estate taxes, maintenance, management and depreciation. Your thoughts about beating sky-rocketing building costs also carry weight.

From the tone of your letter, it's pretty clear that you are going ahead with your plan. I say go ahead but pick your tenants carefully.

Q. I am a young woman, single and relatively poor — assets of only $2,500. Some years ago, I bought 10 shares of airline stock, at $34.50 a share. The price dropped to $8 and is now about $12. I don't see any point in hanging on. If I sell, I will take the tax loss and put the proceeds into my savings account. What do you think?

A. I think it's a shame that a young person has had such a bad first experience in the stock market. I would not be surprised to see the market price of that stock improve in the future. It could very well be worth hanging on to.

But, because you are so sour on that stock, you might just as well sell. Take your tax loss. But don't turn your back on the stock market forever. When you have more cash put aside, try your hand at investing again.
