Reagan still supports his peace initiative

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is convinced his Mideast peace initiative is still alive, even though the Palestine Liberation Organization has turned it down, say administration officials. They say Jordan and Saudi Arabia have encouraged him to go on.

The initiative will be discussed at meetings today between Reagan and the Sultan of Oman, Qaboos Bin Said, who is visiting the United States for the first time since 1975. An official White House welcome for the sultan, regarded as a close U.S. friend, was planned.

John Hughes, the State Department spokesman, said Monday that both Jordan's King Hussein and Saudi Arabia's King Fahd told Reagan in telephone conversations they think his plan still is worth pursuing.

"We are determined to go forward with the Sept. 1 initiative," Hughes said. "King Hussein and King Fahd share our resolve."

"The president ... as a result of those conversations, is confident that the process is going forward," said Hughes."He is confident they have not given up."

In Jordan, sources who spoke on condition they not be identified said King Hussein believes no progress will be made toward peace in the Middle East unless the United States or the PLO softens its stand on the future of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Hughes went further than the administration has ever before gone publicly about the degree of Saudi support for the Reagan plan. A Saudi peace plan, considered a rival to the U.S. plan, was approved by Arab nations at their summit in Fez, Morocco last year.

Hughes and other officials admitted that the PLO rejection was a serious setback, and it wasn't clear how the administration planned to revitalize the Reagan initiative.

The PLO rejected it by raising last-minute objections to an agreement for Jordan to represent Palestinian interests in peace negotiations with Israel. In a statement from Jordon on Sunday, King Hussein said he wouldn't join peace talks without approval of the PLO.

The PLO insisted on having its own voice at the bargaining table and demanded a prior commitment to a separate Palestinian state on the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The Jordanian source said Hussein and his government will be turning their attention to internal affairs including the possible elections in the next few months that would exclude the Palestinians on the West Bank, who now are represented in the Jordanian Parliament.

The chief difference between the Reagan and the Saudi plan approved at Fez is that the Fez plan calls for creation of a separate Palestinian state on the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, while Reagan's plan provides for Palestinian self-government in association with Jordan.

Israel has rejected both plans.

But another indication that moderate Arab nations are moving closer to the Reagan plan came in the Sunday statement from Jordan. The Reagan initiative was called "the vehicle" that could carry out the Saudi plan approved at Fez.

Although Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Monday the PLO's demands were rejected by Reagan as well as by Hussein and Fahd, he predicted that "in the end" a way will be found for Hussein to join the peace talks under circumstances where "he is genuinely able to negotiate for the Palestinians on the West Bank and elsewhere."

Hughes said Reagan will continue his discussions with moderate Arab leaders to determine the next step.

"The president has a good Sept. 1 initiative out there," said Hughes. "The question is how do you move the initiative forward."

Another official said it was unlikely Shultz would travel to the Middle East to try to advance the Reagan plan, as had been widely speculated.

The proposed Jordanian-PLO accord would have established a Jordanian-led delegation that included non-PLO Palestinians to enter peace talks with Israel.

Reagan has said "radical elements" in the PLO have derailed the accord. But he and other officals have been careful not to lay the blame personally on Yasser Arafat, the head of the PLO, who is now regarded as a moderate here.

Fiddling around

Orchestra breaches wall with music

PEKING (AP) — The Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra didn't get any applause for its performance on the Great Wall of China, but after five encores the night before, the musicians were just fiddling around, anyway.

The orchestra, which had taken the day off from concerts and teaching, visited the Great Wall Monday on the third day of a tour almost canceled when China suspended cultural relations with the United States.

"The Great Wall is one of those magnificent places where you wish to make an impression," said Ann Koonsman, the orchestra's executive director.

The 40-member orchestra doodled around a bit with their instruments and then trumpet player Steve Weger started playing the "Ode to Joy" from Beethoven's Ninth. The rest of the orchestra picked it up.

The orchestra arrived last Friday, one day after China angrily canceled a package of cultural exchanges in retaliation for the U.S. granting political asylum to Chinese tennis star Hu Na.

The Fort Worth orchestra's tour was not part of that package, but two planned joint concerts with Chinese orchestras were banned because of the climate. The orchestra now will play alone on those two occasions.

Concertmaster Robert Davidovici also stood on a platform Monday and played excerpts of gypsy music.

"The impromptu concert attracted a crowd that was so nice and courteous," Mrs. Koonsman said.

"They made a circle and gave us some space, all smiling and nodding."

There was no applause, but the orchestra members still were talking about the five encores they played the previous night in their first concert in Peking.

"That was unprecedented for us," Mrs. Koonsman said.

Orchestra members also gave Chinese children at the wall balloons saying :"Music Makes Friends."

After one more concert in Peking tonight, the orchestra leaves for Shanghai, Hangzhou and Canton.

The orchestra also attended a performance Monday of the Chinese dance drama silk road episodes.

"They had some instruments in the pit that we are eager to check out," Mrs. Koonsman said. "We don't know what they were. They produced very touching, soulful sounds."

Vote expected soon on arms agency appointment

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private advocate of nuclear weapons reductions says Kenneth L. Adelman's nomination, coming up for a close vote in the Senate, has already brought hardship to the arms control agency he would head.

The Senate begins debate today and is scheduled to vote Thursday on President Reagan's nomination of Adelman, 36, deputy U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, to head the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Both sides say the count is close, with a dozen or so senators, most of them Republican, undecided.

William H. Kincade, executive director of the Arms Control Association, told the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on international security Monday that the arms control agency has been treated with "malign neglect" by the Reagan administration.

Kincade said the agency's budget for research has been pared from $4 million in the Carter administration to $1.8 million and its staff had been reduced about 25 percent in recent years.

"Finally, the nomination to the directorship of an individual with very problematic professional qualifications or interest in arms control and with equally problematic access to either the secretary of state or the president has worked an additional and gratuitous hardship on the agency," Kincade said.

Meanwhile, Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., a leading opponent of the nomination, told Senate colleagues in a letter that Adelman lacks "significant arms control experience" and should be replaced with a "credible nominee."

But Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., an Adelman supporter, said in a similar letter, "We are convinced that he is an advocate of balanced arms reduction, and that his views in this regard are consistent with those of President Reagan."

Kincade testified at a hearing on the administration's proposed budget for the agency, which totals $20 million, compared with $16.7 million in the current fiscal year and $17 million in the last one.

"It is not going too far to say that the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency would be an international joke, were it not that the situation is so tragic," he said.

"At a time when the limitations of purely military approaches to the problem of security are evident as never before, this institution is foundering beneath a burden of malign neglect."

Former high officials of the arms control agency seconded the testimony of Kincade, a former naval intelligence officer and an author on arms control issues.

Latest MX basing plan facing bitter battle in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest plan for basing the MX missile, similar to a proposal rejected by Congress two years ago, is awaiting President Reagan's endorsement before it faces a bitter congressional fight.

A commission appointed by Reagan proposed Monday that 100 MX weapons should be built and put in Minuteman silos in Wyoming and Nebraska and that a new, smaller land-based nuclear missile should be developed in the next decade.

"Few, if any, will consider our recommendations an optimal solution," said retired Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, the former national security adviser who headed the 11-member panel. "If such were available, this commission probably would not have been convened."

"What we have, we feel, has a reasonable, has the best chance to be successful," he told a news conference.

But most of the immediate Capitol Hill reaction came from MX opponents and it was predictably negative.

Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., chairman of the House defense appropriations subcommittee, predicted defeat. The MX "is a dog that has been around too long," Addabbo said.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said the panel's "recommendation to deploy 100 MX missiles in existing Minuteman silos makes no more sense today than it did when the administration proposed it as a temporary solution 16 months ago. It was rejected then; it should be rejected now.

Sen. J. James Exon, a Nebraska Democrat whose state would receive some of the missiles, called the plan "ridiculous."

"A dangerous, expensive fraud," was the reaction of Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, called the recommendations "nothing less than mad."

"If the commission's recommendations are adopted, we might as well also announce that America has adopted a first strike nuclear strategy," Hatfield said.

Panel expected to defy Reagan

Larger allocation for social programs anticipated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Budget Committee, which cut President Reagan's proposed defense buildup in half, is likely to defy the president again this week and approve more than he proposed for domestic social programs.

In his fiscal 1984 budget proposals, the president urged what he termed a "freeze" on overall domestic spending, including some further cuts in programs like food stamps.

The Republican-dominated committee has already added extra funds above the president's budget to account for inflationary and other increases for agriculture and energy programs.

The budget panel was scheduled to vote today on the rest of the domestic spending portion of the budget, and indications were that similar increases would be permitted. No significant cuts were expected in other categories of federal spending, including welfare programs.

Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, the senior Democrat on the committee, said Monday there is big difference between past years when Reagan's budget blueprints were generally accepted by Republicans, and 1984.

"For the first time, we are seeing Republicans think for themselves," Chiles said during a lunch for reporters.

After setting ceilings on domestic spending, the committee will turn to decisions on raising taxes including a Democratic proposal for elimination or changing a 10 percent tax cut this year.

Chiles conceded on Monday that time was running out, making it almost impossible to kill the tax reduction, the third part of a 25 percent cut enacted by Congress on Reagan's urging in 1981.

The actual reduction in withholding from workers' paychecks for the 1984 tax cut takes effect July 1, and Congress is unlikely to permit the withholding rate to change and then rescind it, Chiles said.

Despite the low probability of eliminating the tax cut, Chiles said he would continue to press for new ways to increase federal revenues in 1984 to reduce the deficit, including elimination or capping the tax cut so that middle income Americans would still benefit.

Reagan has said he would veto any legislation which tampers with the tax cut. He has also proposed a small tax increase under $3 billion for next year, all of it to come from taxes on employee-sponsored health care benefits, an idea Chiles said would be opposed by Senate Democrats.

Last month, the Democrat-controlled House approved a budget resolution calling for $30 billion in new federal income in 1984. That much income could only be generated by rescinding the tax cut.

Chiles said the outcome of the final budget resolution is now "a traveling crap game. Not a lot is fixed at this point."

Decisions on federal revenues will depend on what the committee decides on domestic spending, he said.

Last Thursday, the budget committee voted 17 to 4 with only four Republicans dissenting to approve a 5 percent increase in military spending next year, half the 10 percent urged by Reagan.

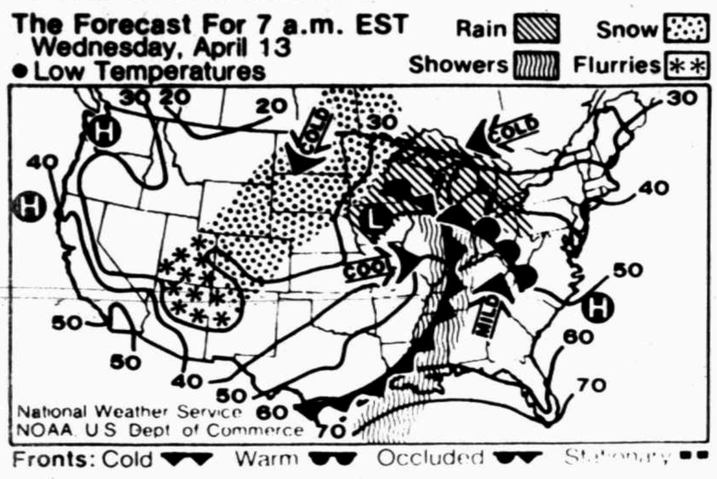
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

Snow flurries and snow are forecast through Wednesday from the Southwest to Minnesota, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are expected from the central Gulf to the Midwest. Rain is predicted for the upper Midwest and Great Lakes.

Warm weather due for few days

Although it comes with wind, Midlanders better appreciate the warm weather the next few days, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

While temperatures are expected to reach into the middle 70s Wednesday, the highs later in the week may get stuck in the 60- to 65-degree range.

Temperatures should drop into the middles 40s tonight.

The West Texas winds will continue to blow from the southwest at 15-20 mph tonight, increasing to 20-30 mph and gusty Wednesday.

Monday's high of 87 missed by eight degrees the record high of 95, set for that date in 1972. The overnight low of 47 was 17 degrees warmer than 1957's record low of 30.

Another storm forms in Rockies

By The Associated Press

As swollen rivers receded in the rain-ravaged South and Northeast, a new storm responsible for at least one death was brewing in the Rockies and Northern Plains today, spreading snow and cold across Colorado and Wyoming.

Disaster relief specialists headed for Louisiana today, where flooding killed at least five people and caused an estimated $625 million in damage during the past week.

Winter storm warnings were posted today in Wyoming, with heavy snow headed for the Rockies and the Black Hills of the Dakotas, said forecaster Hugh Crowther at the National Weather Service's severe storms office in Kansas City.

The new storm claimed one life Monday in Colorado where a man was struck by lightning in Grand Junction, authorities said.

The storm is expected to bring widely scattered showers from Louisiana through Tennessee and the Ohio Valley by Wednesday, Crowther said.

But because the storm is moving much faster than last week's almost stationary system, the consequences for an already drenched Dixie will be "nothing as bad as last week," Crowther said.

Gov. Dave Treen is seeking federal disaster declarations for 16 southeastern Louisiana parishes, which would enable residents to apply for low-cost loans to help them mop up their flooded homes.

But by today, almost all rivers but the Pearl were back within their banks, and the Pearl continued to fall slowly from its record crest of 21.5 feet early Sunday.

An estimated 40,000 people had fled their homes in Louisiana, with 11,500 people evacuated in Mississippi, and several hundred in neighboring Southern states. Damage was estimated at $425 million in Louisiana and $200 million in Mississippi.

In Ste. Genevieve, Mo., 50 families left their homes Monday as the cresting Mississippi River threatened the one road that connects the north and south halves of the riverfront town.

"It looks like we'll have water across Main Street for two weeks," said city clerk Richard Rose.

Most Southern residents agreed the worst was over, and some felt the storm's impact had been exaggerated.

"Everybody outside Louisiana thinks New Orleans is under water," said Beverly Gianna of the city's Tourist and Convention Commission, who says the Cresent City has been high and dry since Friday. "I even had calls at home on the weekend from reporters wanting to know if they could get in."

New Orleans got 14 inches of rain in a 24-hour period last Thursday, but when it stopped waters receded, Ms. Gianna said.

The New Orleans suburb of Slidell was dunked under 15 feet of water from the cresting Pearl River and 700 homes were damaged, but sandbag dikes kept many homes dry in the city of 65,000, authorities said.

One Slidell man kept his possessions higher and drier than most in a home built on 9-foot stilts.

"I was flooded out in 1979 and again in 1980," Bobby Berryhill said Monday. "After the second one, I went to a builder and said I want me a house on top of pilings 9 feet tall."

In Maryland, heavy rains submerged about 30 roads in the western part of the state. The Monocacy River remained six feet above flood level today, but officials said the Potomac River, which runs through Washington D.C., was well below flood stage.

The nearly 4 inches of rain that fell Sunday in Connecticut caused only minor damage, authorities said.

Syria, Soviets behind breakdown?

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The setback dealt to President Reagan's Middle East peace plan by the breakdown in Palestinian-Jordanian talks has given a boost to Syria and its Soviet allies.

The Soviet Union, offered no role in the proposed Reagan process, was known to have urged Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat to shun the U.S.-sponsored peace initiative.

In this regard the Soviets got support from Syria, which backs the radical wing of the eight-faction PLO. President Hafez Assad's government opposed the Reagan plan from the outset last September because it makes no specific mention f the Golan Heights seized from Syria by Israel in the 1967 war.

The decision by Jordan's King Hussein's to bow out of further negotiations with the PLO was likely to be the main topic raised by Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem, who flew to Jordan unexpectedly today for talks with the king.

Lebanese officials said their government wanted to assess the impact

An Analysis

Hussein's move may have on Reagan's Middle East policy and specifically on U.S.-sponsored efforts to negotiate Israeli troop withdrawal from Lebanon.

Reagan's plan proposes Palestinian autonomy in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip in close association with Jordan, but does not call for an independent Palestinian state. Israel and the PLO, which was not assigned a role in the plan, already have rejected it.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Monday the Reagan administration's hope of winning broad Arab support for Hussein to negotiate with Israel on behalf of the PLO "sounds nice, but it is fantasy, unrealistic and it cannot happen."

Hussein on Sunday said he would not join talks based on Reagan's plan, and an authoritative Jordanian source said the king believed no progress toward peace would be made until either the PLO or the United States softened their stands on a Palestinian homeland.

Syria's state-run media was ecstatic over the probable demise of the U.S. initiative.

"Syria's prediction of the failure of imperialist American and Zionist plans to rule over the Arab nation and strike at the central Arab cause has now started to take its course," the state radio said.

The Soviet Union, smarting from the defeat of its allies in the Lebanon war started by the Israeli invasion last June, is said by diplomats to have been waiting in the wings for a breakdown in the U.S. initiative. The diplomats predict the Soviets may now take a more active role in the Middle East, where American influence has been stronger.

"The Soviets are eagerly waiting for the failure of the American initiative to turn the area into a courtyard for their political and ideological activities," said a leading Lebanese columnist, Emile Khoury, in the independent Beirut daily newspaper An-Nahar.

Since Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's death last November, Moscow has hosted Hussein, Assad and Arafat in Moscow and sent a half-dozen delegations to the Middle East in an effort to lay the groundwork for a more active policy.

Last month, the Soviets also signed a long-term friendship treaty with Libya's radical leader, Col. Moammar Khadafy.

Arafat's top aides have expressed concern that Hussein would bow out of active participation in Middle East peace efforts, leaving them without a counterbalance to Syria and the radicals.

"The fear is that King Hussein will walk out on his role in the political efforts in the area under the pretext that the PLO is not cooperating with him. We as Palestinians will remain determined to keep the bridges between us and Jordan open," Arafat's top political adviser Hani el Hassan was quoted as saying in an interview with the Paris-based weekly magazine al-Mostaqbal.

The long-term threat to Arafat now is a loss of independent action. The PLO has no effective base except Syria after its defeat by Israel in Lebanon and the Assad government has made it clear that Syria must have a say if any peace plan is to succeed.

Families leaving embassy

MOSCOW (AP) — The six remaining Pentecostalists in the U.S. Embassy in Moscow will leave the compound late today after a five-year stay, a member of the group said.

The six believe they will receive exit visas, ending a two-decade-long battle to get out of the Soviet Union, group member Lilia Vashchenko, 25, told a reporter.

They will be returning to their Siberian hometown to file the applications, she said.

Since last Wednesday, when another of their group, Lydia Vashchenko, was allowed to leave the country, it had been expected that the remaining six might also be given permission.

The Pentecostalists — five Vashchenkos and two members of another family — dashed past Soviet guards and into the embassy compound in June 1978, in a bid to leave what one called an "atheistic system in which we cannot live."

Rain is acid, but relations aren't

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Canadian minister of the environment says the acid rain issue hasn't affected the way Canadians view Americans — yet.

"Canadians are very much aware of this problem, the acid rain problem," John Roberts said at a news conference Monday. "I believe that they think...that most of them believe the United States is not actively responding to this problem because people in the United States aren't aware of it.

"I think if Canadians ever had the view that Americans do know about the problem...and didn't give a damn or weren't concerned about responding, then I think the reaction in Canada would be very strong," he said.

Roberts stopped in Ohio to meet with officials, including Gov. Richard Celeste. He said U.S. action on the problem of acid rain has been "agonizingly slow."

"I would like to hear Governor Celeste say: 'I understand the seriousness of the problem, the urgency of the problem and that we will do everything feasible to cut back emissions,'" Roberts said.

Paul Costello, the governor's press secretary, said Roberts met with the governor but Costello didn't know what was discussed.

Some scientists blame sulfur dioxide emissions from coal-burning power plants for acid rain, which has threatened the aquatic life in streams and rivers of eastern Canada and the northeastern United States. Many of the plants are in the Midwest. Some are in Canada.

Roberts said that if technology could reduce emissions, there wouldn't have to be any "impact" on jobs.

"We're concerned about jobs in Canada as well," he said.

During the news conference, Roberts cited a 1980 agreement between Canada and the United States to solve the problem of acid rain. But he said talks have stalled since the United States rejected a Canadian proposal for joint emissions-reduction programs last June.

"Progress since that time toward an agreement that was envisaged then has been agonizingly slow," Roberts said.

Harrelsons, Chagras needn't pay costs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Four people convicted in connection with the 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. do not have to pay their court costs, a federal judge has ruled.

Assistant U.S. Attorneys Ray and LeRoy Jahn has asked U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions to force the defendants to pay the witness' costs.

Sessions ruled Monday that doing so would penalize Jimmy and Elizabeth Chagra and Charles and Jo Ann Starr Harrelson for exercising their rights to a jury trial.

He also said the defendants had no money and that dividing the costs among them would be difficult.

The Jahns had sought witness fees, and witness transportation and hotel costs. The Harrelsons and Mrs. Chagra were tried in San Antonio; Chagra was tried in Jacksonville, Fla., on a change of venue.

Defense attorneys contended the prosecutors' motion was motivated by revenge, but Sessions disagreed.

Wood was killed May 29, 1979, in the parking lot of his San Antonio townhouse complex.

Harrelson, 44, was convicted last year of murder, murder conspiracy and obstruction of justice, while his wife was convicted of obstructing justice and five counts of perjury.

Chagra was acquitted of charges he paid Harrelson $250,000 to shoot the judge, but was convicted of obstructing justice and conspiracy to import marijuana.

Mrs. Chagra was convicted of conspiracy to murder and to obstruct justice.

Chicago's voters today making historical mayoral choice

CHICAGO (AP) — After a bitterly fought campaign shadowed by racial tensions, voters today had to choose between electing the first black mayor in the city's history or the first Republican mayor in a half-century.

Democratic nominee Harold Washington and Republican candidate Bernard Epton appeared to be burying the hatchet in the waning hours of the campaign Monday evening, although both claimed they would win today's election.

Polls were to open at 6 a.m. and close at 7 p.m. for the city's 1.6 million voters.

Political analysts predicted 1.3 million voters might turn out if the weather was good. The forecast, however, was for cloudy skies with a chance of rain in the afternoon.

Officials said Monday that absentee balloting was running at twice the pace of the last mayoral election in 1979.

In recent days, both candidates have zeroed in on the liberal lakefront area, flooding it with campaign brochures, mass mailings and radio ads.

"These are the white voters most likely to be influenced by issues rather than race," political analyst Don Rose said.

"Well, I wish you well, Bernie," Washington said in a split-screen discussion Monday with Epton on WLS-TV. "You know I will do anything I can as mayor to make things easy for you."

"I certainly wish him well," said Epton at another location. "I hope he comes in second."

Both candidates acknowledged that the campaign has been marked by bitterness.

"Harold has made some remarks that perhaps he shouldn't have," said Epton. "He may feel the same about me."

During the campaign, Epton called attention to evidence of Washington's late payment of bills and the Democrat's no-contest plea for failing to file tax returns.

"One has a tendency to slough over his own faults and exacerbate and dramatize the opponent's," said Washington, who ran a television commercial portraying Epton as a puppet of President Reagan.

The candidates agreed to meet at a prayer breakfast Wednesday. Washington also invited Mayor Jane Byrne and State's Attorney Richard Daley, whom he defeated in the Feb. 22 Democratic primary.

As volunteer poll-watchers and police geared up to oversee balloting, Washington focused on still-undecided lakefront liberals and renewed his pledge to dump the city's rickety patronage system.

Epton, meanwhile, relied on a few public appearances to thank volunteers and a last-minute radio appeal. The millionaire lawyer huddled with aides for much of the day.

Epton said later he hoped "voters would go beyond the race issue and they'll vote based upon our qualifications." After the election, he said, "regardless of who wins, I think that should be put to rest completely."

Summing up his campaign, Washington said if he had to do it over again, "I wouldn't be such a gentleman."

Commodities

Precious metals futures prices advanced sharply Monday on the Commodity Exchange in New York, helped along by last week's report of a decline in the basic money supply.

Gold settled $9.40 to $10 higher with the contract for delivery in April at $431.50 a troy ounce; silver settled 32 cents to 34.3 cents higher with April at $11.308 a troy ounce; copper settled 1.30 cents to 1.55 cents higher with April at 75.35 cents a pound.

Grain and soybean futures prices fell Monday after a strong but brief rally in early trading on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Roberts Auto Supply and Machine Shop, 1003 E. Florida, has one of the most complete and modern machine shops in Midland, as well as professional machinists Troy Roberts, Paul Bustillos and Vernon Sexon to guarantee that your parts will be done the way you need to have them done. In most cases, work can be ready in one day. Come by Roberts Auto Supply, open from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. weekdays and from 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday.

Roberts for machining, reconditioning parts

When you need machine work done on your automobile parts, you don't have to look far for expert machine work right here in Midland. It's Roberts Auto Supply and Machine Shop, located at 1003 E. Florida. Roberts has one of the most modern, complete machine shops in Midland, along with experienced machinists who can assure you of a superior job.

Everything you might need done in the way of auto machining can be done by Roberts. Flywheel resurfacing is done quickly and professionally with the equipment at Roberts, as well as pressing of wheel bearing and changing of wheel bearings on the axles. Roberts also has a connecting rod machine which can recondition those parts. There is a milling machine for resurfacing heads, for doing valve jobs, grinding valves and seats. Roberts can also install valve guides and seats.

Another machine is the Sunnen CK-10 honing machine. According to Bruce Hart, manager, this machine is the best machine made for honing cylinders for blocks. There is a brake drum lathe which can turn drums from golf cart size on up to 18 wheeler size. They can also turn disc rotors for disc brakes.

For cleaning your auto parts, Roberts has a glass bead blaster. This machine will not cut metal, but cuts through carbon, rust and paint to thoroughly clean your parts. Their steel blast machine which uses small stell pellets, will leave a shiney, custom finish on work.

A special jet cleaner replaces the usual machine shop vats of caustics which required overnight soaking to clean parts. This jet cleaner sprays caustics, cleaning in minutes what used to take hours by the old method.

Roberts offers one day service on most machining jobs. They also have all the parts available for reassembling the parts on your reconditioned engine.

According to Hart, Roberts doesn't just sell auto parts and do machining, they're also there to help you with any technical advice you may need, and are happy to help you at any time with questions about your automobile repairs and parts replacement.

Right now, it's time to get yor car ready for spring. Roberts has all the parts available for tune-ups, as well as belts, hoses and radiator caps. It's also time to spruce up your car, and Roberts has all the quality car care products you might need. Come by Roberts weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and on Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 12 noon.

House of Carpets for better value, service

When you mention carpet in Midland, the name that immediately comes to mind for most people is House of Carpets, and it's no wonder. Back in 1951, when Midland's population was only 22,000, House of Carpets opened for business at its first location at 1502 N. Lamesa Rd. There were no other carpet stores in Midland at that time, so House of Carpets is literally Midland's oldest carpet dealer.

Even back in 1951, House of Carpets was more than just a carpet store. They offered furniture, lamps and other accessories, decorator window shades, vertical blinds, counter tops and resilient flooring and interior design services.

Today, House of Carpets offers all these items and services, plus many more, including area wool flooring, ceiling fans, mini-blinds, vinyl floor coverings, wallcoverings, draperies, upholstery fabrics and a complete professional design staff. This makes House of Carpets a complete decorating center for the entire Permian Basin area.

The friendly staff at House of Carpets are well-trained to help customers make the right decisions in their selections, and the quality products at House of Carpets are priced so reasonably, almost anyone can afford them.

House of Carpets is located in the Village Shopping Center and hours are from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday; 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday. Come by and see for yourself why House of Carpets has earned the reputation of being "Midland's most respected name in carpets."

We helped the Torturos when fire destroyed their home. Who can you turn to?
The Torturos weren't covered by any insurance. Red Cross found them a place to live. We gave them food, warm jackets and winter boots.
Most people think of fire as a major disaster, like a flood, a hurricane or an earthquake. So the Red Cross is to respond. But Mr. Paul and Phyllis Torturo know differently. Their Red Cross disaster relief didn't stop with just food, clothing and shelter. We helped them re-establish their source of income.
Then showed them how to use those funds to obtain a trailer home for their family.
What if the next fire in town destroys your home? Who can you count on to lend a helping hand? You can count on us.
We'll Help. Will You?

Dog paddling

Michael Savorillo reels in a "dogfish" Monday while standing on the shore of Wadley-Baron Lake. Actually, the catch is Savorillo's dog, Sheba, which chose to ignore the "No Swimming" sign and take a dip to cool off from the spring-like weather.

Group formed to aid with forms

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

He was born 65 years ago in rural East Texas. His birth certificate lay long forgotten in some county file.

When Medicare was required, he needed that piece of paper, stamped with the certified seal. Finding it can often take awhile.

The documents he so badly needed arrived two months after he took his own life.

Attorney Nancy Hart knew the man. She also knows many others like him.

"I've run into this just doing it for friends," said the former Midlander, who recently returned from Europe where she was practicing international law. "There are so many that come through. People don't understand the forms and there are so many documents that they have to get together."

After seeing the confused eyes that wandered through her door, after hearing the questions about rejections for aid, after studying insufficient checks, Ms. Hart decided to do something about it.

With help of the Human Relations Department, Department of Human Resources and Social Security, almost 20 volunteers gathered Monday night for the first of two training sessions to help others.

People Who Assist in Filling Out Forms (PAFF) was formed to do just that.

According to Ms. Hart, most of the problems people encounter when applying for Social Security, Medicare, Supplemental Security Income (SSI), food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) can be eliminated when people correctly fill out the forms and have the proper documents.

Unfortunately, many forms are difficult to understand and many people have no idea which documents are needed.

When they find out, they often don't know where to obtain them.

Handing out copies of records, forms, guidance tips and miscellaneous information, Ms. Hart led the first training session at the HRC office, 410 N. Weatherford St. Another session has been scheduled there at 6:30 p.m. April 20.

Following the training sessions, volunteers will hold clinics on the fourth Sunday of each month from 2 to 5 p.m. at the HRC office. On the second Sunday of each month, the clinics will be held from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. in Meeting Room C at the Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring Street. The nursery will be open at no charge and ramps for those in wheelchairs will be installed at the YMCA.

Homeless widow may be moving into new house

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A widow whose dilapidated frame home recently was destroyed by a fire may be getting a new house in Midland's windowpane area, while other residents in the economically depressed area will be getting water and sewer lines.

At the request of consultant Barbara Ellis, the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday approved juggling federal Community Development funds to build or acquire a new house for the widow, 67-year-old Nellie Buys.

"She's homeless right now," said Ms. Ellis, who is working with the county in its $1.6 million improvements program for the windowpane area in south central Midland. "It's an emergency situation, as she basically is without a home...Her house burned down because she had open-flame heaters in it."

Ms. Ellis speculated that "the people at HUD (U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development) would be quite amenable" to allowing $23,000 to acquire a new three-bedroom house for Mrs. Buys, who lives on about $400-a-month income, Ms. Ellis said. She said the woman could acquire a ready-built house, a mobile home or possibly a standard house and live on her old lot or wherever she could afford to move. Her present lot has a water well and cesspool.

"I sure think this is good use of money," said Ms. Ellis, who is a consultant for the architectural-engineering firm of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper.

In surveying the Buys house prior to the fire, Ms. Ellis said the house was so "structurally unsound" that HUD's allotted $8,500 for repairing the house was inadequate to finance work.

"Her house was so structurally unsound...that it was falling over," Ms. Ellis said. "If we could have fixed her house up, she wouldn't have had open-flame heaters."

The three-year $1.6 million federal program calls for replacing six houses in the 80-household area, repairing about 30 houses, paving streets and laying curbs and gutters and installing water and sewer lines. Already, a $290,000 child day-care center has been built in the area.

The windowpane area is bordered by Midland city limits, is considered part of urbanized rural Midland County but is without city water, sewer and other services.

In addition to approving efforts to get Mrs. Buys "decent" and "safe" housing, the commissioners approved a request by engineer Gary Harris to advertise for bids on installing water and sewer lines in the windowpane area.

Harris estimated the cost of laying 10,000 feet of eight- and six-inch water lines about three feet deep at about $215,000, and computed the cost of installing 10,000 feet of sewer lines six to 10 feet deep at $85,000. Bids are to be studied June 3.

In other business, the commissioners discussed means of financing drainage improvements along a five-mile segment of Loop 250 in northeast Midland. "Give us an estimate, multiply by two, and we may be close," Commissioner Durward Wright quipped in discussing the drainage with Charles Muery, right-of-way agent for the Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

"We need to get rid of the water as quickly as possible," Muery noted, "but in the natural flow."

Mind and body do have effect on one another, nurse reveals

By GAIL BURKE

Psychosomatic. No definition is usually needed. It's in the head.

Wrong, says Wanda Mohr, a registered nurse who is completing her master's degree in behavorial science.

As part of a continuing education program, about 30 Midland Memorial Hospital medical personnel gathered Monday to hear Ms. Mohr lecture on what is now called "psycho/physiological disorders."

"When I first started nursing, these two views — mind and body — were separate," said Ms. Mohr, who will enter practice with her husband, Dr. Brian Mohr.

"Nobody could come to a conclusion (about psychosomatic disorders). But, I've got news for you, we think we have an answer. Psychosomatic is a misnomer — (that) one part of the body does not affect another part is not true. The mind and the body work together."

Ms. Mohr outlined the various levels of psycho/physiological disorders, ranging from actual physical conditions related to stress to factitious disorders, which are made up illnesses.

As Ms. Mohr characterized each level of the disorders, she pointed out that "none of this is set in granite. Things may change again."

Most of the MMH employees seemed to accept most of Ms. Mohr's lecture until it came to defining stress.

"Nothing is stressful in and of itself in any situation," Ms. Mohr said, explaining that a job is not stressful, but how a person perceives that job may make the task a stressful situation.

"It's what we make of it," she added.

While one employee questioned Ms. Mohr's interpretation of stress, a few listeners arched eyebrows and others nodded in agreement.

"There are no causes — sufficient conditions — for anything which occurs in medicine," Ms. Mohr said. "Physical or mental, there must be a variety of factors.

Speaking about "learned behavior" Ms. Mohr gave an example of "a mother who pulls a kid out of school every time he has a stomach ache is setting a child up for chronic indigestion."

While women are more prone to vocalizing psycho/physiological disorders, Ms. Mohr said men are not running far behind.

What used to be called "hysteria," is now known as "conversion disorders. Most people think this kind of a condition is imaginery, but Ms. Mohr said "they (patients) truly believe there is something wrong."

She cautioned nurses and other medical personnel to be aware of all types of psycho/physiological disorders, but not to "laugh or take them lightly."

The hour-lecuture was to familiarize nurses with different levels of these disorders. Treatment procedures will be given at a later date.

Park acreage to be burned to prevent catastrophe

By PATRICK DEAREN

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK — For centuries nature went unchallenged in the Great Chihuahuan Desert. Then came man, altering by livelihood and hobby the eco-system of the desert and putting to an end the grass and timber fires which once checked the accumulation of brush.

Now, National Park Service officials are faced with creating the same fires once spawned by nature so they might avert a potential hazardous blaze in the future.

"Essentially what we're trying to do is duplicate what nature would have done with lightning before we had fire fighters on the scene," said Robert Huggins, chief of interpretation for Big Bend National Park. "We want to reduce fuel loads to lessen the possibility of a major catastrophe."

About 100 acres will be "prescribed burned" in this year's project, which includes removing by fire certain brush in the Basin.

"We started doing some burning (last week) in the Basin," said Huggins.

The Basin acreage earmarked for burning consists of dead material such as fallen limbs, pine needles and grass, all of which are situated in stands of juniper and pine. Care is being taken, however, to retain the trees.

"We have a crew in from the National Forest Service, as well as the National Park Service, and they're doing a tremendous job to make sure there's no damage to trees by keeping them damp," he explained.

The Park Service also has worked to better develop Rio Grande Village, Huggins added. A new visitors'center was opened last year and a parking lot at the site should be completed in the near future.

Additionally, a Class B campground with 150 to 200 sites has been developed from a former overflow area at the village.

Huggins noted that during spring break it was erroneously reported all primitive camping sites would be permanently closed. "As a matter of fact," he corrected, "we're encouraging people to use those areas."

An ongoing project throughout portions of the park is trail renovation, including that in the South Rim area of the Chisos Mountains. High school age students, said Huggins, volunteer their time to such projects through the Student Conservation Association program.

"They do a tremendous job for us," said the interpretation chief.

While spring break saw a tremendous influx of persons at the park — an annual phenomena — Huggins noted that back-country use is down somewhat this year. The percentage of persons challenging the back-country trails with hiking boots and perseverance has dropped 6 percent compared to the same quarter in 1982, while 5 percent fewer persons are gearing four-wheelers over back-country roads.

However, shooting the rapids of Santa Elena's Rockslide or Mariscal Canyon's Tight Squeeze — as well as leisurely slicing a canoe between the myriad-colored walls of Boquillas Canyon — remains as popular as ever. Issuance of river use permits in the initial three months of 1983 has risen 4 percent over the same period last year.

Lawyers to begin questioning witnesses in Lackey trial

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Following two weeks of jury selection, testimony in the capital murder trial of Clarence Allen Lackey, 28, of Lubbock was to begin this afternoon in Midland's 238th State District Courtroom before a six-man, six-woman jury and two alternate jurors.

Defense and prosecuting attorneys had questioned more than 90 prospective jurors since March 28 when jury selection began from a 109-member jury panel.

The state has lined up 51 witnesses, including Texas Rangers, sheriff's deputies, police officers and detectives, and pathologists, in an effort to re-convict Lackey for the July 31, 1977, rape and slaying of 23-year-old Texas Tech University secretary Toni Diane Kumpf in Lubbock.

The defense will hold the defendant mute and not place him on the witness stand.

On a change of venue from Lubbock to San Angelo, Lackey was convicted in 1978 of the capital murder of Ms. Kumpf after he had crashed into her apartment near the Texas Tech University campus and abducted her. Ms. Kumpf, whose throat was slashed, was found dead in a cotton field on the day of her abduction. Lackey was sentenced to die by lethal injection.

The sentence initially was upheld in appellate court but was overturned by a higher court due to alleged improper questioning of a prospective juror. The appellate court ruled that a particular juror, who said he could not be an effective juror due to the pressure of knowing the punishment for capital murder was life imprisonment or death, was not questioned thoroughly. The appellate court held that any normal, rational and conscientious person would be adversely affected to some degree by sitting in judgment at a capital murder trial.

But the court determined that the overriding question is this: Is that hindrance so burdensome that the person effectively would be disabled as a juror. The apparent reason for overturning the verdict was that the dismissed prospective juror might have been eligible to serve on the jury and might have voted for acquittal.

Late Monday afternoon, Trial Judge Robert Wright, who presided over the 1978 Lackey trial, admonished the 12 jurors and two alternate jurors to obey court orders, including avoiding any news reports or conversation about the case outside the courtroom and not discussing the case among themselves until testimony is over and they are deliberating on a verdict.

"It is of utmost importance...that you abide by the instructions," Wright told the jurors. "It is of utmost importance for obvious reasons." Any impropriety by the jury, any jury misconduct and any semblance of the jury not being "fair and impartial" could result in a mistrial.

The judge told the jurors that the court could sequester them throughout the trial, which could be four, five or more days, but, "We do not feel that this is important at this time. Stay away from news while you serve as jurors."

Defense motions for sequestering the jury have been repeatedly denied by the judge.

Since some jurors expressed a distaste for tobacco smoking, the judge ordered no smoking in the courtroom or jury room. However, he said, "We will not overlook entirely" preferences of the smokers. "If you in the jury room want to relax it (the order) some, you have leave to do so."

Wright again reminded the jurors that they are the "sole judge of the facts" in the case and that he is the "sole judge of the law" applicable to the case.

The judge told the jurors that occasionally in the trial the jury would be ordered out of the courtroom and into the jury room when "matters of law" are discussed by the adversary lawyers and then ruled on by the judge. Wright told the jurors not to try to decipher the proceedings, particularly since sound travels from the courtroom into the adjoining jury room.

"You all talk and make some noise, because I don't want you all to know what's going on."

In a pre-trial hearing late Monday to suppress a statement made by Lackey's ex-girl friend, Carol Jean Johnson, former Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin, who prosecuted Lackey in the first trial, said the woman freely gave a statement and gave permission for her home to be searched.

"She was afraid for her own safety — not of the police or myself — but from Clarence Lackey," Griffin said. He said the woman's house was in disarray and was splattered with blood. "She knew about a brutal-type murder."

Richard and Diane Lowder spent $500,000 to restore the Thomas J. Rusk Hotel to its look of the 1920's.

Couple restores hotel to its 1920's glory

RUSK (AP) — The opening of the Thomas J. Rusk Hotel, a restored version of the structure built on the courthouse square in the 1920s, was the talk of the town.

The two-story hotel opened last month to coincide with the weekend of the season's inaugural run of the celebrated Texas State Railroad, which draws tourists from around the state for a ride on antique trains powered by restored steam engines.

The hotel and the train shared about equal time in conversations throughout this East Texas community.

"Have you seen the hotel?" they asked at a barbecue the night before the train ride. The question repeatedly popped up the next day during and after the 25.5-mile train ride to Palestine.

All the interest in the hotel was generated by Richard and Diana Lowder, the new owners who will hold a grand opening April 22.

The Lowders bought the hotel about nine months ago and restored it to designs of the 1920s at a cost of about $500,000.

The hotel opened its doors March 18 to its first guests in five years.

The guests, most of them participating in the state railroad festivities, included Texas lawmakers and employees of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

"The best way to open a hotel is to rent all your rooms, which we were quite fortunate to do," Lowder said. "That doesn't happen all the time."

Lowder is no stranger to the hotel business. The past eight years, he worked as a general manager in regional offices of the Hilton Hotels Corp. in Houston, Midland and Salt Lake City, Utah. He has opened eight major hotels for various firms.

"I did have a lot of experience in larger hotels," he said. "But it was our desire in seeking our own adventure to develop a project that has a personality of our own. We tried to do that in our design and our interior furnishing."

The original interior design lacked creativity, Lowder said. So they added wallpaper indicative of the period, wood molding on the walls and doors and tile floors in the bathrooms.

To enhance that nostalgic look, brass beds and ceiling fans were installed in each of the 36 guest rooms and three suites.

For the outside, green awnings were placed above the entrances to the lobby and the private Sam Houston Club, as well as over the windows on the second floor.

Bricks were added to the sidewalks in front of the hotel, harking back to the 1920s when brick streets and sidewalks were a familiar sight.

"People are reaching out for and touching the nostalgia of the smaller hotels," he said. "I envision that in each of the smaller communities in Texas there will be a movement in the restoration of the small hotels."

The Lowders visited Rusk upon learning that the hotel was for sale after sitting vacant for five years. It was in poor condition, and the walls had collected five layers of paint over the years.

"It's exactly what we wanted," they said.

"I wish you could see the pictures. The before and after is really dramatic," Mrs. Lowder said.

"Everyone just couldn't believe we came up with something like this," Lowder said.

They credited civic and business leaders in the community for their support.

"Well, I think it's just great to do what they've done for the downtown area," said Chamber of Commerce President Charles Hassell. "They have spruced up the area and are bringing more people to town. We think it's a great asset to Rusk. The citizens are behind it 100 percent."

Bryan Robinson, 29, a maintenance mechanic, said "I'll tell you, Rusk hasn't seen this much traffic on the sqaure in many years."

Everybody in cars and on foot was stopping and the traffic jams on the square were amazing, Mrs. Lowder said.

DEATHS

Charlotte Pitner

Services for Charlotte Faver Pitner, 51, of 3804 Gulf, were Monday at Trinity Presbyterian Church with the Rev. John Danhof officiating. Burial was in Snyder under direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Pitner died late Friday at a Midland hospital.

She was born Nov. 21 1931, in Snyder, where she lived and graduated from high school. She worked at Bell Telephone and West Texas State Bank in Snyder. She was married to Johnnie Joe Pitner May 3, 1954, in Roswell, N.M. They moved to Sherman in 1964 and to Midland in 1968. They then moved to Houston, Denver, Colo., and back to Midland in 1977. She worked for Union Oil Co. of California. She was a member of Trinity Presbyterian Church and a volunteer of Lee High Choir Booster Club.

Survivors include her husband of Midland; two daughters, Leesa Annette Stone and Kathy Pitner, both of Midland; a brother, Arel Faver of Snyder; a sister, Wernette Smith of Snyder; and three grandchildren.

Pallbearers were Marvin Lewis, Ira Riggs, E.J. Moore, Walter Turner, Ed Speck, Mac McLelland, George Blakely and Donald Jack Jones.

Memorials may be made to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Texas 79702.

Mary Steward

STANTON — Services for Mary Steward, 82, of Stanton, are pending at Gilbreath Funeral Home in Stanton.

Mrs. Steward died Monday morning in a Big Spring hospital following a brief illness.

Henrietta Runnels

Graveside services for Henrietta Runnels, 80, of 503 E. Longview, were Monday at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Street Baptist Church officiating. Services were under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Runnels died Saturday afternoon in a Midland hospital.

She was born Jan. 25, 1903, in Texas. She grew up in East Texas and moved to Lamesa in 1927. She moved to Midland in 1951. Her husband, B.F. Runnels, died March 14, 1971. She was a Lutheran.

Survivors include four sons, Herbert Steincke of Midland, Walter Steincke of Grapeland, Carl Steincke of Jersey Village, and Ervin Steincke of Amory, Miss.; two daughters, Edna Kinsey of Pasadena, and Selma Reed of Lamesa; two brothers, Walter Huse and Gus Huse, both of Hillsboro; three sisters, Elsie Schrieber of Houston, Mandy Martin of Waco and Frieda Raywall of Minneapolis, Minn.; 24 grandchildren; 13 great-grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

Mary O. Castro

A rosary for Mary Ortega Castro, 42, 1112 E. Golf Course Road, was recited Monday night at Thomas Funeral Home chapel. A mass was to be said at 10 a.m. todayat Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church with the Rev. James R. Foekner officiating. Burial was to follow in Fairview Cemetery.

She died Sunday at her home.

Mrs. Castro was born Jan. 30, 1941, in Van Horn. She had lived in Midland since 1959. She was a Catholic.

Survivors include her husband, Jose D. Castro; a son, Joe O. Castro of Midland; a daughter, Erlinda Castro of Midland; a sister, Mary Lo Mejas of Houston, a brother, Alfredo Agular of El Paso; and five stepsisters, Juanita Mendez, Leondra Tarango and Andrea Talavera, all of Van Horn, and Aurelia Luna and Maggie Navarette, both of Alpine.

Guy W. Fisher

Graveside services for Guy Wesley Fisher, 68, of 1608 N. Garfield, were Monday at Resthaven Memorial Park with Judge Pat Baskin, officiating. Services were under direction of the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Sunday afternoon in a Midland hospital, following a lengthy illness.

Fisher was born April 21, 1914, in San Bernadino, Calif. He moved to Oklahoma and then to Dallas. Later, he attended Southern Methodist University. In 1937, he was with one of the first seismic groups to go to the Middle East. He worked in Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, Libya, Algeria, Morocco and France. He came to Midland in 1953 and returned again in 1960. He was a retired geophysicist.

Survivors include his wife, Lois Fisher of Midland; three sons, Tom Fisher of Midland, Michael Fisher of Houston and John Fisher of Austin; a daughter Mary Fisher Berry of Midland; a sister Mrs. Martin Kelsey of Dallas and five grandchildren.

Group formed to help confused with forms

"Most of (the volunteers' duties at the clinic) is going to be getting the documents together — birth certificates, marriage records, divorce records, military records," Ms. Hart said. "I also envision some people coming in with letters from Social Security they don't understand. We'll be filling out a lot of forms for them."

The volunteers will be assisting applicants with different steps. According to Joy Bates, a PAFF volunteer employed with Midland Independent School District Head Start and Family Services, the Department of Human Resources helps walk its applicants through the long steps. PAFF, however, can assist the DHR with getting the valid records together and helping to correctly fill out forms.

General information also should be shared with applicants, Ms. Hart said.

For example, people should understand they need to file for Medicare before the age of 65. They need to know what other services are available if they have additional needs, such as eyeglasses, that cannot be met by one organization.

They need to know death certificates are filed where a person dies — not where he is buried. They need to know they must prove common law marriages by having both parties acknowledge the relationship. If one partner is dead, two members of the deceased person's family must acknowledge the relationship.

People should know Medicare pays a minimum amount unless an operative report is included in the application, and parents can collect on a worker's death if they are at least 62 years old and half of their support comes from the worker.

They need to know their cases will be re-evaluated at certain time periods and if they can't meet at the appointed time they should call immediately or risk losing payment that month.

The list is long but the volunteers at PAFF hope they can alleviate some of the confusion.

By helping applicants fill out forms, they may also help eliminate whatever image of red tape may be tied up in the overworked federal agencies.

According to Ms. Bates, one woman she knows received a Christmas basket and toys from the AFDC in December. Although short on money, the woman did find a way to show her appreciation to the agency for helping her.

She wrote a simple thank you note and delivered it to the office herself.

Twenty cattle killed when tractor-trailer rig overturns

DALLAS (AP) — Rush-hour traffic was snarled for miles when a tractor-trailer rig hauling 105 cattle overturned and steers scampered across the freeway toward the nearby Trinity River bottoms.

About 20 head of cattle were killed Monday in the accident. Sheriff's officers rounded up all but about nine or 10 of the other 85 that escaped, said Dallas County sheriff's spokesman James Ewell.

"If somebody else got to them first, they may already be on a butcher's block somewhere," he said of the loose cattle.

The cattle truck overturned about 4:30 a.m. on Interstate 35E, Ewell said. The freeway was reopened shortly before 10 a.m., he said.

The driver was not injured when his truck overturned, blocking all the northbound lanes of the freeway, Ewell said. Diverted traffic was bumper-to-bumper along side streets in the Oak Cliff area.

"It threw Oak Cliff traffic into a gigantic snarl that spilled over into the major thoroughfares through Oak Cliff," Ewell said.

Although Dallas police controlled traffic, the sheriff's department is charged with livestock control, he added.

The livestock control unit brought its portable corral and trailers to transport the cattle to a south Dallas livestock control center that opened in January, he said.

Agency to discuss aging

AUSTIN — The Texas Department on Aging will hold public hearings Wednesday and Thursday to discuss the "Plan on Aging — 1984-85."

On Thursday, the hearing will be from 10 a.m. to noon at the Ector County Health Department, 221 N. Texas, in Odessa.

In a press release from the TDA, executive director Chris Kyker said they "welcome suggestions from any interested individual or organization."

Among the items to be considered are family assistance in the care of the elderly, determination of priority services and identification of minimum services that should be available.

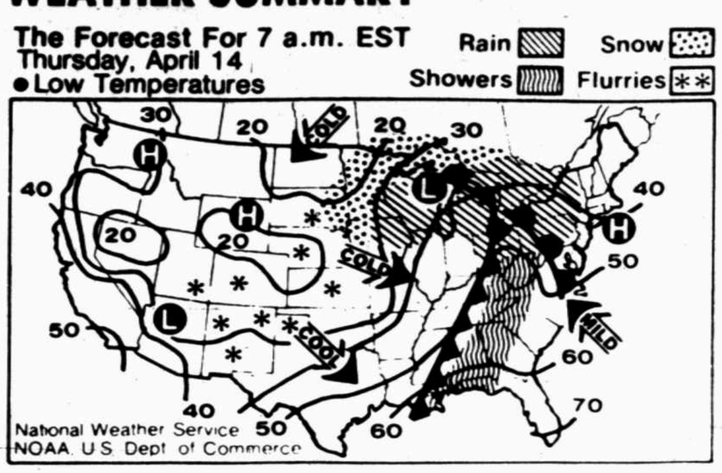
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

Rain is forecast through Thursday from the Midwest to New York and Pennsylvania. The National Weather Service also predicts snow for the eastern Dakotas and Minnesota, with flurries expected throughout the Plains.

Cool weather expected to return

Just when winter clothes are packed away and the suntan lotion is setting out, nippy temperatures are expected to sneak through the back door.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it should be partly cloudy and colder through Thursday.

While the mercury is expected to plunge to the mid-30s tonight, fickle winds are expected to breeze northwesterly at 15-20 mph, shifting to the northeast at 10-20 mph after midnight.

Temperatures are expected to creep up to the mid-50s Thursday with northerly winds blowing 10-20 mph.

But, according to the NWS, the cool weather should slowly be pushed back by the weekend.

Tuesday's springlike high of 79 couldn't match the record summerlike high of 99 set in 1972. The overnight low of 46 was considerably warmer than the overnight low of 28 set in 1957.

Wyoming, the first state to grant women voting rights, may this year be the last state to see spring. Five major snowstorms have hit the state in the past six weeks.

Snow falls, but so do river levels

By DEAN FOSDICK
Associated Press Writer

A foot of snow crippled parts of Wyoming and heavy snow was falling today in the northern Plains states as a new storm system took aim on the Great Lakes, while rain-swollen rivers fell slowly from record crests in Dixie.

The blowing flakes glazed roads Tuesday in Arizona and closed schools and businesses in Wyoming. Thunderstorms blew through Iowa, knocking down tree limbs, dropping marble-sized hail and smashing store windows.

The storm was part of a low-pressure system extending from the southern Rockies to the northern Plains, said Steve Corfidi at the National Weather Service's severe storms warning center in Kansas City, Mo.

"We're expecting up to 12 inches of snow in the Dakotas and southern Minnesota before it moves on later today," Corfidi said. "It's wet, heavy snow and shouldn't last long but it's still a significant fall for this time of year."

The storm probably will be centered in the upper Great Lakes tonight, he said.

Blowing snow was accumulating quickly Tuesday near Flagstaff, Ariz., and it turned into glare ice on Interstate highways, he said.

Douglas, Wyo., received more than a foot of snow Tuesday. More snow and winds up to 40 mph were forecast today.

"I told people that if they wanted to travel, they'd better go today, because tomorrow they probably won't be going anywhere," forecaster Ray Kowrach at Cheyenne, Wyo., said Tuesday.

Cheyenne got 9 inches of snow by mid-afternoon Tuesday and schools, most government offices and some businesses closed for the day.

Bob Budd of the Wyoming Stockgrowers Association said the storm could be dangerous to livestock. "It's pretty tough this time of year, because so many people are calving and lambing," he said.

In Ottumwa, Iowa, thunderstorms with winds up to 70 mph blew windows out of two department stores, layered the ground with hail a half-inch in diameter and scattered tree limbs, officials said. No injuries or power outages were reported.

Meanwhile, the Mississippi River was falling slowly near St. Louis, but flooding continued to create problems in several areas.

At Grafton, Ill., where the Mississippi and Illinois rivers meet, officials ferried voters to polls Tuesday by boat and high-axle trucks as much of the town remained under water.

"We're urging people to grab a boat and go vote," said Mayor Gerald Nairn. "We've got 35 families evacuated from their homes and a foot of water in the streets, but we're gonna have an election."

At West Alton, on the Missouri side of the Mississippi, more than half the town's 500 residents remained out of their homes. The town was flooded Friday when a levee gave way.

In Louisiana, floodwater from the Pearl River was receding Tuesday in neighborhoods of the New Orleans suburb of Slidell where damage was estimated at $100 million.

The weather service said Tuesday that the Pearl was continuing to fall from its record crest of 21.5 feet Sunday at the town of Pearl River, about 15 miles upstream from Slidell. Flood stage is 12 feet.

Officials said at least 40,000 people were chased from their homes in Louisiana after more than a foot of rain fell in 24 hours last Wednesday and Thursday.

Another 11,500 people were displaced in neighboring southern Mississippi.

Gov. Dave Treen has asked President Reagan to declare 16 Louisiana parishes a disaster area, enabling residents to apply for low-interest loans and other relief.

Tahitian typhoon kills one, injures 26, destroys homes

PAPEETE, Tahiti (AP) — The worst typhoon to hit this tropical island in modern times left Tahiti today with at least one person dead, 26 injured and as many as 15,000 homeless, relief officials said.

All of Tahiti was hit for 12 hours Tuesday by winds of 95 mph to 110 mph, the Weather Bureau said.

A 28-year-old woman was electrocuted by a power line brought down by a falling tree when the storm hit Tuesday, and 26 others were harmed by falling objects, emergency service officials reported.

"Tahiti is truly a scene of desolation," one said. "The damage is very, very heavy."

This morning the typhoon cut a wide corridor between the extreme southeasterly atolls in the Tuamotos and the extreme eastern part of the Austral islands. It had doubled its forward speed to 18 mph, losing a lot of the destructive wind speed, according the Weather Bureau.

But Veena was expected to cause more damage today to the Austral island of Raivavae with a population of more than 1,000, and the small Tuamoto atoll of Hereheretue, with about 30 inhabitants.

Tetiaroa, the atoll owned by film star Marlon Brando north of Tahiti, was evacuated Monday. Brando's hotel there was severely damaged last month by cyclone Reva and relief officials said they doubted much of the hotel would still be standing by the time Veena left.

In Papeete's neighboring commune of Faaa, 1,200 people were reported homeless Tuesday night, although the capital itself escaped with lesser damage, mostly to roofs and trees.

Officials said 50 percent of Tahiti's nearby sister island of Moorea suffered damage. Moorea, with a population of some 6,000, is the second most tourist-developed island after Tahiti.

ORSEC officials said there was damage in 90 percent of Tahiti-iti, a rural, mountainous farmland area with an estimated population of 10,000.

First quarter bank deposits down from previous quarter, 1982

Officials at RepublicBank (Texas National Bank) reported total deposits for the first quarter 1983 were $44,087,737, up from $41,600,000 million the preceding quarter. Net loans fell slightly, from $11,000,000 in the preceding quarter to $10,668,936. Deposits were up from the total deposits of $31,964,113 recorded in the same quarter last year.

Total loans net of discounts last year at this time were $7,884,642.

At Midland American Bank, total deposits were $3,770,728, and total net loans were $2,451,787. Both were up from $3,168,537 and $2,215,388, respectively, in the preceding quarter.

Security National Bank reported total deposits of $7,666,911. Total loans net of discounts were $5,165,679. Both figures are increases from the $3,727,469 and $3,503,484 reported respectively in the preceding quarter.

At ClayDesta National Bank, deposits for the first quarter in 1983 reached $30,966,011. Loans were $14,403,666. These figures compare with $12,168,530 and $4,309,048 in the preceding quarter which ended Dec. 31, 1982.

Panel favors four-year status

His main fear, he said, is the possibility the college would evolve into an institution it was not designed to be. The probability of MC becoming a vocational institute would be strengthened by competition in the academic offerings of UTPB. About $19 million has been funded to MC by the state while well over $40 million has been locally funded, he said.

Parrish added the community wants the college to continue being "comprehensive in nature and providing a full scope of courses."

The bill now will be heard by the full Senate and a similar bill sponsored by Jay Gibson of Odessa is expected to be heard by a House subcommittee.

Also testifying were Aubrey Barlow, chairman of Friends of UTPB; Paul Harvel, ececutive director of Midland Chamber of Commerce; Robert Clinton, director of Community College Association; Dr. Roger Griffin, immediate past president of Texas Junior Colleges' Teachers Association; and Reagan Legg, MC trustee and president of the National Association of Junior College Trustees.

China's song: 'We have no secrets'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The nosy neighbor is a fact of life in China and is even enshrined in the law. Here is a report on the neighborhood committees that enforce the Chinese Communist Party's system of supervision of the people by the people.

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

PEKING — There are no secrets in the quaint, crowded courtyards along West Old Curtain Lane — or anywhere else in China — where every little detail of life is supervised with pervasive precision.

What seems to Westerners a stark invasion of privacy is an accepted fact of life here. In China someone is always watching and frequently informing.

The nosy neighbor, tattletale and busybody are integral parts of an all-encompassing surveillance system that can care tenderly for the elderly or self-righteously investigate whether a woman is adulterous. This is known as supervision by the masses.

The neighborhood committee, a fixture of Chinese life, issues birth certificates, arranges funerals for the jobless, counsels wayward youth and finds them jobs, mediates disputes, cleans the streets, propagates the Communist Party line, checks on the visits of strangers and turns in women who are pregnant without authorization.

In a recent triumph, a vigilant Peking resident wrote to police about a neighbor whose visiting "nephew" never called his host "uncle" and strangely never stayed for dinner. The nosy neighbor figured something was afoot and went straight to the cops, thus snaring what authorities described as Taiwan's alleged top spy in Peking.

In the days before China encouraged affluence, spiteful and jealous tattletales told police if a neighbor had a new wristwatch, suspecting it was stolen. Today they are just as alert for other irregularities.

The powers of the neighborhood security committee are enshrined in law and it has the obligation to watch, investigate, report and arrest criminals and outright counterrevolutionaries.

The West Old Curtain Lane neighborhood represents 2,090 people in 732 households. They are divided into 15 residence groups, each consisting of several gray-gabled Qing dynasty courtyards. Each has a watchdog head.

Director Yuan Shu Zhen of the neighborhood committee proudly describes the diligent work in reporting and investigating their neighbors' private lives:

Li Zhao Ming, 30, a railway worker, thought his 28-year-old wife Yung Hong was having a love affair because she came home late from work at a leather factory.

When she was late he beat her, turning up the radio so that neighbors wouldn't hear her scream. He beat her so viciously once that she ran home to her parents and then demanded a divorce.

Enter the neighborhood mediating committee: with approval from the police, they went to her work unit to ask about her morals and were told she was upright and honorable. With an introductory letter from the public security bureau, or police, the committee can investigate at any resident's work unit, said Madame Yuan in an interview.

The committee informed the husband that his wife was faithful, urged him not to beat her, mediated between them and patched up the marriage.

This neighborhood network is a combination of Chinese communist organization and the ancient, complementary patterns of a tightly woven community.

During the 1966-76 Maoist Cultural Revolution, Chinese feared to speak freely before their neighbors, knowing they could be reported, "struggled" against, even tortured, just on someone's say-so. A slip of the tongue, a foreign book, an indulgently pretty scarf all could be cited by neighbors as evidence of political sins.

Today one elderly Chinese intellectual asks a foreign friend to wrap Western classic novels in plain brown paper "so my neighbors won't see and talk."

Overseas Chinese still are urged by their mainland friends to dress like proletarians so as not to arouse the suspicions of neighbors when they come to visit.

Peking, with 5.2 million residents, has nine government districts, about 80 subdistricts, an estimated 2,400 neighborhood committees and an undetermined number of street committees and residence groups.

Death camp survivors honor dead at national cemetery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of survivors of the Nazi death camps stood amid the graves of America's war dead at Arlington National Cemetery today to honor their liberators from the Holocaust.

They placed a wreath at the foot of the white stone marking the grave of Pfc. James J. King, a paratrooper with the 42nd Airborne Division who died in the Normandy invasion — the beginning of the end for those awaiting rescue from the concentration camps.

King was selected randomly as a symbol of the American troops which knocked down the walls around the camps in April 1945. The ribbon on the wreath read: "In memory of the American soldiers who gave their lives in the struggle against Nazi tyranny, who liberated the survivors from Nazi death camps."

The ceremony came on the final day of the meeting of the American Gathering of Jewish Holocaust Survivors, which attracted 10,000 participants.

Miles Lerman of Vineland, N.J., a Polish-born Jew who was among those rescued, spoke at the wreath-laying ceremony. He addressed his remarks to the dead soldier.

"You and your comrades of arms were among the first to encounter the horrors and brutalities of the Nazi concentration camps," he said.

"You have seen the abyss. You have seen mankind at its ugliest, at its lowest ebb. You sacrificed your young life to put an end to evil and to keep the world free."

A trumpeter standing in the brilliant morning sunlight sounded Taps and the ceremony was over.

In the midst of the survivors' celebration Tuesday, participants paused to honor the memory of those they call "the righteous among the nations" — Christians who risked life and liberty to give shelter and succor to Jews.

But, five scholars agreed that one thing that characterized "the righteous" was their relative rarity.

Henry Cargas, author of "A Christian History of the Holocaust," called it "a pitiful number — though glorious they are — of 3,500."

Historians of the holocaust have found instances where 3,500 Christians, among Europe's wartime population of 300 million, helped Jews avoid Hitler's death sentence. The Holocaust killed two-thirds of Europe's 9 million Jews.

Rabbi Israel Mowshowitz of New York City said he went to Europe to ask why the people of most countries looked the other way while in Nazi-occupied Denmark the story was different: Danes rallied to help most Danish Jews escape to sanctuary in neutral Sweden in the face of certain brutal Nazi retaliation.

In most places, Mowshowitz said, he was asked, "But what could we do?" In Denmark, he said, the question was, "But what else could we do?"

At the discussion of "the righteous," civil rights leader Bayard Rustin, director of the A. Philip Randolph Institute, said Americans could not take great satisfaction from the role of liberator because of this country's own record of indifference after the plight of the Jews became known.

Jury waits to hear recording of '23 minutes of murder'

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — State district court jurors have seen a crusty tape recorder that allegedly was used to record a man's death, but they still await the chance to here the "23 minutes of murder" the tape is said to contain.

Cameron County District Attorney Rey Cantu introduced the recorder as evidence Tuesday during the first day of testimony in the murder trial of Paul Wolf, accused of last summer's slaying of Pharr schoolteacher Leticia Castro.

Cantu said the tape recording made by Miss Castro's fiance, Billy Staton, during his slaying will provide key evidence in the case against Wolf, 21, of La Feria. He said the tape contains "23 minutes of murder."

Prosecutors allege Staton and Miss Castro, both 26, were killed because Wolf and his wife Sherry, 21, were upset over arrangements that allowed Staton to visit his daughter at the Wolf home. Staton was Mrs. Wolf's former husband and father of her 2-year-old daughter.

Government witness Glenn Henderson testified Tuesday that he acted out of friendship when he agreed to help Wolf kill Staton and Miss Catro.

Henderson, 19, who has confessed to his part in the slaying and is serving a life prison sentence, was described by Cantu as "my third victim" because he is a "gullible, very slow person."

Henderson explained in detail how he said Wolf plotted to kill Miss Castro and Staton. He testified that Wolf approached him a day before the killings and requested Henderson's help.

"As a friend," Henderson said, he agreed to assist.

"He was going to hit Billy in the head with a bar and Letty in the head with a hammer," said Henderson, a La Feria mechanic.

Henderson said Wolf asked for his help because he had worked as a volunteer fireman and was used to the sight of dead bodies.

Prosecutors say that on the night of the murder, Miss Castro stayed in Staton's car while he went in the house to pick up his daughter.

Staton had concealed the tape recorder under his shirt as part of a plan to demonstrate the animosity shown by the Wolfs over the child visitation arrangements.

The tape was running when Wolf and Miss Castro were "ambushed" and killed, Cantu said.

"Unknown to the three murderers, Billy's tape had been playing all the time," he said.

Henderson said that as Staton talked to his daughter and former wife in the house, Wolf snuck up behind him and beat him over the head with a metal bar.

"He fell out of the seat...moaning and groaning," Henderson said.

Wolf struck Staton twice more and then went outside and attacked Miss Castro in the front seat of Staton's car, he said.

"Paul was on top of her choking her," Henderson testified.

He said Wolf then told him to get a hammer he had hidden under a bush.

"I got the hammer and hit her on top of the head with the hammer," Henderson said.

Houston Rep. Senfronia Thompson calls attention to a House committee bill she is sponsoring which would legalize chelation therapy as a valid treatment. Holding the bottle to Ms. Thompson's arm is Gerald Baker.

Lawmaker illustrates chelation therapy safe

AUSTIN (AP) — A House committee got an unusual illustration of one proposal before it when Houston Rep. Senfronia Thompson underwent "chelation" therapy before the committee to show the treatment is safe.

With an intravenous tube in her arm and a bottle of the chelation drug hanging on a coatrack, Ms. Thompson testified before the House Human Services Committee on Tuesday in favor of her bill legalizing chelation therapy for treatment of numerous diseases.

Chelation involves intravenous administration of ethylenediamine disodium tetraacetic acid, a food additive. The treatment is recognized by the American Medical Association only for use on metal poisoning.

But some doctors and their patients contend the therapy effectively treats calcium build-up in arteries, as well as other diseases, including arthritis, senility, strokes, high blood pressure, gangrene and Parkinson's disease.

"No, I'm not ill," Ms. Thompson told the committee. "I'm being chelated."

She complained that "well-heeled medical interests have whispered that neither the (Food and Drug Administration) or the AMA has approved chelation therapy. My answer is, so what?"

She also displayed bottles of suntan oil, salad dressing, pinto beans and mayonnaise and told the committee all contain EDTA.

Ms. Thompson said she was told by a source that the medical community doesn't want chelation recognized because its alternative for heart disease, surgery, is more lucrative.

Dr. Robert Rogers, a Florida physician, said he had used the drug on patients for several years before the daughter of one complained to county medical authorities. Rogers was put on probation by medical authorities for using the unorthodox treatment.

He appealed to the courts, and in 1980, the Florida Supreme Court overturned a state medical association's sanctions against Rogers.

Rogers said Texas should avoid a court challenge by specifically legalizing use of chelation therapy.

Shocked man drives home

GALVESTON (AP) — A badly burned man drove more than 40 miles home to Houston after he was shocked when an aluminum ladder fell against a power line, killing a coworker, police said.

William John DeRuyter, 27, an employee of a Houston window awning company, was in serious but stable condition in the intensive care unit of Memorial City General Hospital after driving home from the accident Tuesday evening, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Galveston police officer Alan Rojas said DeRuyter arrived home in shock with second- and third-degree burns on his feet and chest.

Isidore Nieto, 34, of Tomball, was found dead at a resort house on the west end of Galveston Island where he and DeRuyter had been installing storm blinds.

Rojas said the ladder that Nieto and DeRuyter were using melted in two places where it touched the power line.

Officials said police spent two hours looking for the second victim after finding a pair of tennis shoes with burn marks at the scene. DeRuyter's employer, meanwhile, informed authorities that DeRuyter had left the scene and driven home.

Rojas said Harris County officials told him that DeRuyter "doesn't remember anything about the accident."

Oregon Pharmacist

Develops New Wrinkle Cream

By RICHARD MORRELL
Feature Writer

(Special). It's an exciting story of an Oregon pharmacist who developed a wrinkle cream which all of the Northwest has clamored for...and which soon the rest of the country may receive in limited quantities.

Robert Heldfond, a Portland pharmacist, developer of many national products, used knowledge from pharmacy school and years of experience to compound Formula EB5 wrinkle cream, which has produced dramatic results in symptoms of aging skin.

Women started besieging Mr. Heldfond's pharmacy when the word got around about its wonderful results in helping women look younger. The phones never stopped ringing and letters poured in, praising the results with Formula EB5 wrinkle cream.

Users reported..."I wish I had some before and after pictures so I could really show the difference"... "Thank you for helping an older woman look younger"..."My husband says I look years younger, I, never want to be without EB5"..."My skin feels soft and velvety, almost shines"...and even, "It made a difference in my life."

Formula EB5 contains natural ingredients, including Li Progen*, collagen and Lipo-protein, plus Vitamins E and B5, and other fine aids to help slow the aging look and help impart a more youthful appearance to the skin. Heldfond's base for the cream penetrates and absorbs quickly, leaving the skin, as the woman says, soft and velvety.

Because of the unique method of compounding it, Pharmacist Heldfond was able to produce Formula EB5 only in small quantities, but now production is allowing limited quantities in other areas. If your skin is aging too fast, try in your area to find Formula EB5.

Note: Formula EB5 is available in limited quantity in Midland at Dunlaps phone (694-8888) while supply lasts

Murder charges dropped

ODESSA (AP) — A judge has dropped murder charges against a 20-year-old man who wrote to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals last month complaining that he was being held in jail without trial.

But Ted Dutchover Jr. of Odessa, who was scheduled for trial Tuesday, still will go to prison to complete a five-year sentence for criminal mischief.

Dutchover was accused of shooting to death another youth during a July 4, 1981 gangfight in Odessa.

His 1982 murder trial ended in a mistrial because prosecutors failed to divulge pertinent information to defense attorneys, according to court records.

Assistant District Attorney J.E. Weatherly said Monday three key witnesses could not be located and he would not be ready for trial the next day, so State District Judge Joe Connally dismissed the case under the Speedy Trial Act.

Runnels County sheriff resigns

BALLINGER (AP) — Runnels County Sheriff William H. Hall, who recently pleaded no contest to driving while intoxicated, has resigned.

County commissioners had called on Hall, who had served as sheriff since 1976, after Hall was charged with drunken driving in connection with a traffic accident in San Angelo involving his patrol car.

Hall pleaded no contest to the charge March 7 and was placed on two years' probation.

In a letter to county commissioners Tuesday, Hall said he was quitting because of his wife's ill health. County Judge Michael Murchison said.

Hall, 55, asked that the commissioners give him a two-week vacation. His resignation becomes effective Friday, Murchison said.

Because of the "serious illness of my wife and the need of constant attention from me, I wish to resign as sheriff of Runnels County," Hall said in the letter.

Man shoots bank president

CARTHAGE (AP) — Authorities were holding a 39-year-old man today in connection with the shooting of a bank president at a trailer park south of this East Texas town, police said.

Robert Parnell, 33, the president of Texas Bank of Tatum, was shot as he approached a woman's residence at Green Acres Trailer Park about 6 p.m. Monday, according to Sgt. Duane Baushke.

Parnell, who was shot once in the forehead with a .22-caliber pistol, was hospitalized in critical condition in a Shreveport, La., hospital, officials said.

The woman's ex-husband was arrested and jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond, Baushke said.

Investigators said the assailant went to his former wife's trailer with a .22-caliber pistol and told her to call Parnell. The woman, identified as a teller in a Carthage bank, called Parnell, who drove to the residence, police said.

Man may have had seizure

SEMINOLE (AP) — A 43-year-old man who was killed when he lost control of his car and crashed into a high school, apparently had a seizure, authorities say.

Police referred all calls Tuesday to the local newspaper, the Seminole Sentinel, and fire officials could not be located for comment.

Justice of the Peace Mary Parrott said she'd "rather not say" whether she had ordered an autopsy in the case. But Sentinel publisher Marshall Day said an autopsy had been ordered.

Day said Switzer's physician told him the man had a history of epilepsy.

Switzer was driving away from a Lions Club dinner Monday night when he careened across a four-lane highway, across a field, onto a residential street and over an 18-inch guard rail surrounding Seminole High School, Day said.

Fire officials searched through the school Tuesday to determine what sparked the blaze, said School Superintendent Amos Elder. No damage estimate was available immediately, although insurance inspectors were on the scene, he said.

Inmate stabbed to death

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A state prison inmate convicted of aggravated robbery has been questioned in connection with the stabbing death of a fellow prisoner, a prison spokesman said.

Anthony Dutton, 31, died Monday afternoon during a fight at the TDC's Ellis Unit, prison spokesman Charles Brown said Tuesday.

A 46-year-old suspect, serving a 75-year sentence for aggravated robbery in Dallas County, was being questioned by TDC officials and Walker County sheriff's deputies, Brown said.

FRACTIONS

A fraction is a way to say that we have less than or only a part of one whole thing. When we have a whole dozen eggs, we have all 12 eggs. Suppose that 2 are broken. We don't have a dozen anymore. Out of a possible 12, we only have 10. A short way of saying that is $\frac{10}{12}$. The bottom number, the denominator, tells how many equal parts are possible to make a whole. The top number, the numerator, tells how many of these equal parts we really have. If we need a pound of hamburger for a recipe but we only have 13 ounces, then instead of a possible 16 ounces, we have 13, or $\frac{13}{16}$ of a pound. Thinking of time in fractions, a normal work week is 5 days out of a possible 7, or $\frac{5}{7}$ of a week.

BASIC TERMS FOR FRACTIONS

PROPER. A fraction with the numerator (top number) smaller than the denominator (bottom number). Example $\frac{2}{4}$ $\frac{21}{32}$ $\frac{7}{9}$

IMPROPER. A fraction with the numerator (top) larger than the denominator (bottom) or both the same. Example $\frac{4}{3}$ $\frac{32}{21}$ $\frac{7}{7}$

MIXED NUMBER. A whole number plus a fraction. Example $3\frac{2}{5}$

CHANGING FRACTIONS

Fractional answers that are improper must be changed to either a mixed number or a whole number. Divide the numerator by the denominator.

Examples: $\frac{24}{12}$ $12\overline{)24}$ $\frac{24}{24}$

$\frac{21}{4}$ $4\overline{)21}$ $5\frac{1}{4}$

$\frac{7}{7} = 1$

PROBLEM 1. Change $\frac{16}{7}$

PROBLEM 2. Change $\frac{8}{4}$

PROBLEM 3. Change $\frac{17}{4}$

REDUCING FRACTIONS

Reducing to lowest terms is another way of changing fractions. In order to change the fraction $\frac{8}{12}$, divide the numerator and denominator by the largest number that will divide evenly into both (8 and 12). $\frac{8}{12} = \frac{2}{3}$

PROBLEM 1. Reduce to lowest terms $\frac{6}{20}$

PROBLEM 2. Reduce to lowest terms $\frac{12}{24}$

ADDING AND SUBTRACTING FRACTIONS

When adding and subtracting fractions with like denominators, add the numerators only. Change and/or reduce answers to lowest terms if necessary. Examples: $\frac{1}{5} + \frac{3}{5} = \frac{4}{5}$ $\frac{9}{10} - \frac{6}{10} = \frac{3}{10}$

PROBLEM 1. $\frac{2}{24} + \frac{2}{24} + \frac{6}{24} + \frac{3}{24}$

PROBLEM 2. $\frac{11}{12} - \frac{6}{12}$

CHANGING DENOMINATORS

When adding or subtracting fractions, it is often necessary to do the opposite of reducing fractions, that is, to change a fraction to an equal fraction with a larger denominator. Suppose we want to change $\frac{3}{5}$ to a fraction with a denominator of 20ths.

$\frac{3}{5} = \frac{?}{20}$ $\frac{3}{5} = \frac{12}{20}$

STEPS TO CHANGE DENOMINATORS

1. Divide the old denominator (5) into the new denominator (20).
2. Multiply the result times the old numerator (3).

PROBLEM 1. Change $\frac{2}{3}$ to 15ths

PROBLEM 2. Change $\frac{5}{7}$ to 56ths

FINDING LOWEST COMMON DENOMINATORS

Denominators must be alike when adding or subtracting fractions. When all the denominators are not alike, change them to the lowest denominator possible.

Example: $\frac{2}{3} = \frac{10}{15}$

$+ \frac{4}{5} = \frac{12}{15}$

$\frac{22}{15} = 1\frac{7}{15}$

PROBLEM 1. Add $\frac{3}{10} = \frac{3}{10}$

$\frac{1}{5} = \frac{2}{10}$

PROBLEM 2. $\frac{1}{2} + \frac{2}{7} =$

PROBLEM 3. $\frac{11}{12} - \frac{1}{4} =$

ADDING AND SUBTRACTING MIXED NUMBERS

When adding and subtracting mixed numbers, always add or subtract the fractions first, then add or subtract the whole numbers. Examples:

$5\frac{1}{3} = 5\frac{4}{12}$ $7\frac{5}{8} = 7\frac{5}{8}$

$+ 8\frac{1}{12} = 8\frac{1}{12}$ $- 1\frac{1}{4} = 1\frac{2}{8}$

$13\frac{5}{12}$ $6\frac{3}{8}$

PROBLEM 1 PROBLEM 2

$9\frac{1}{6} + 7\frac{2}{3} =$ $12\frac{7}{9} - 9\frac{2}{3} =$

REDUCING MIXED NUMBERS AND IMPROPER FRACTIONS

When the fractional answer needs changing, be sure to do so. If an improper fraction becomes a mixed number, add the whole numbers together. Example:

$4\frac{4}{8} = 4\frac{4}{8}$

$6\frac{3}{4} = 6\frac{6}{8}$

$(10)\frac{10}{8} = (11)\frac{2}{8} = (11)\frac{1}{4}$

1. $10\frac{10}{8}$ $(1)\frac{2}{8}$
2. Add the whole numbers (1) and (10) (11)
3. Reduce $\frac{2}{8} = \frac{1}{4}$
4. The answer is $11\frac{1}{4}$

PROBLEM 1 PROBLEM 2

$9\frac{9}{16} + 16\frac{1}{2}$ $7\frac{7}{10} + 14\frac{1}{2}$

BORROWING

Always subtract fractions first because it may be necessary to borrow from the whole number as one would borrow when subtracting whole numbers. Remember that when you borrow you borrow one whole number. A whole number is expressed as a fraction with the numerator and denominator the same. A whole dozen eggs is $\frac{12}{12}$. One whole number can be written $\frac{5}{5}$ $\frac{3}{3}$ $\frac{20}{20}$ $\frac{379}{379}$ etc. In the following problem, there is not enough in the whole to subtract the fraction. We must borrow one whole number from 6. Why not borrow a "6" as a number in the form of $\frac{10}{10}$? That way denominators will match. When you borrow a one whole number from 6, it leaves $\frac{5}{10}$.

Examples:

$6\frac{1}{10} = 5\frac{11}{10}$ $3\frac{1}{10} = 2\frac{11}{10}$

$- 2\frac{2}{10} = 2\frac{2}{10}$ $- 2\frac{2}{3} = 2\frac{2}{3}$

$\frac{9}{10}$ $\frac{1}{3}$

PROBLEM 1 PROBLEM 2

$26 - 4\frac{4}{8}$ $1 - \frac{7}{10}$

When borrowing from a whole number, the borrowed fraction must be added to the existing fraction. Example:

$17\frac{8}{8} = 16\frac{8}{8} + \frac{1}{8} = 16\frac{9}{8}$

$- 9\frac{2}{8} = - 9\frac{2}{8}$

$7\frac{7}{8}$

PROBLEM 3 PROBLEM 4

$12\frac{2}{5} - 4\frac{4}{4}$ $8\frac{2}{3} - 5\frac{4}{5}$

WRITING SKILLS

CAPITALIZATION

When writing sentences, use the following capitalization rules:

First word of:

1. A sentence. Ex: B vs. over hot dogs.
2. A direct quotation. Ex: Jack said, "Who did that?"
3. Every line of poetry. Ex: Roses are red. Violets are blue.

Names of:

1. People, initials, schools, towns, cities, states, countries, ships, languages, nationalities, streets, avenues, rivers, lakes, seas, oceans, mountains.
2. Months, days of the week, special days. Ex: Next Friday, December 25, 1981, is Christmas.
3. Events or periods in history. Ex: the Vietnam War, the Dark Ages.
4. Sacred figures, sacred books, religious denominations. Ex: God, Bible, Baptist.
5. Sections of the country, but not referring to direction. Ex: John lives in the West. The wind blows from the west everyday.

Salutation (Dear Sir,) and closing (Sincerely yours,) of a letter.

The words I and O when they are used as words. Ex: I like the hymn, O For a Thousand Tongues to Sing.

Official titles used with a name or a title used in place of a name. Ex: This is Doctor Jones. Mr. President, I have a question.

The first, last, and all important words in titles of books, poems, stories, and songs.

PROBLEMS

Capitalize where necessary.

1. charles and i go to the laundromat with my uncle.
2. we go to six flags over texas whenever we can.
3. the canadian river begins in new mexico.
4. roses are red.
   violets are blue.
   i can capitalize
   better than you.
5. my aunt mary came down with the measles last thursday.

Engineers halt efforts to raise Viking 1 lander

NEW YORK (AP) — Engineers have given up efforts to re-establish contact with the Viking 1 lander on Mars, but say an automatic internal program aboard the spacecraft might still send signals to Earth.

The spacecraft, which has been sending information back from Mars since 1976, mysteriously stopped its weekly transmissions in November, according to officials of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

Since then, engineers have been trying to revive the spacecraft, but on Tuesday the laboratory announced it was abandoning the attempt.

There is hope, however, that an automatic internal program on board the spacecraft will initiate transmission as scheduled on May 5. Jet Propulsion Laboratory engineers will be monitoring their radios closely, officials said.

If it is not detected, they will send a command to the lander to switch to alternate systems in the hope that the automatic internal program will work.

In November, a spokesman for the laboratory said engineers were "fairly confident" they could resume communications with the Viking 1 lander.

They believed the problem is due to a misaligned antenna, which apparently had been skewed by an inadvertent command sent from Earth, officials said. They tried sending strong signals to the Viking 1 lander to re-align the antenna, but there has been no response.

In a statement released Tuesday, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said the exploration of Mars undertaken by the Viking 1 and Viking 2 spacecraft was the most thorough examination of any planet ever undertaken.

The lander, launched in August 1975 to search for life on Mars as well as to study various other aspects of the planet, had been designed to operate for a minimum of 90 days, but officials said recently they expected it to continue sending information on Martian weather and terrain until 1990.

In a statement released Tuesday, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said the exploration of Mars undertaken by the Viking 1 and Viking 2 spacecraft was the most thorough examination of any planet ever undertaken.

Each spacecraft consisted of an orbiter circling the planet and a lander sent to the planet's surface. The Viking 1 orbiter ran out of gas for its orbital control system in August 1980 and shut itself off after circling Mars nearly 1,500 times.

The Viking 2 orbiter developed a leak and stopped operation two years earlier. Its lander was silenced by a battery failure in April 1980.

Judge grants sailor honorable discharge

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — A sailor who refused to wear her Navy uniform after being inspired by examples of passive resistance in the movie "Gandhi," says she'll seek a job helping people now that a federal judge has ordered her release from prison.

U.S. District Judge Walter Black, ruling Tuesday in Baltimore, directed that Leslie Cole, 28, be freed from prison and he granted her an honorable discharge from the Navy as a conscientious objector.

The Navy had court-martialed Ms. Cole in February for refusing to perform military duties, sentencing her to prison and giving her a bad-conduct discharge.

Black's order came after Ms. Cole had served 57 days of her 60-day sentence in solitary confinement at a Fort Meade, Md., stockade.

The judge ruled that even though Ms. Cole acted rashly when she refused to wear her uniform, she was entitled to be considered a conscientious objector.

"Had she shown more patience and awaited processing of her application she would not find herself in the predicament she finds herself in today," Black said.

Ms. Cole enlisted in the Navy in 1980 and served nearly two years before declaring herself a conscientious objector.

Discouraged by the Navy's slow pace in recognizing her discharge request, she told her superiors Jan. 25 that she no longer would wear a uniform or perform military duties.

Ms. Cole said she decided to use passive resistance after seeing "Gandhi," a movie portraying Mahatma Gandhi's non-violent struggle to free India from British rule.

In a telephone interview Tuesday night from her parent's home in Bethlehem, Ms. Cole said that her Navy experiences pushed her toward pacifism.

"You work on subs, see bombs coming on board and guns, and you start thinking deeper about what you were doing," she said.

Senate adds to Reagan budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the biggest and most expensive domestic programs still to be considered, the Senate Budget Committee has added almost $6 billion to the non-military part of President Reagan's fiscal 1984 budget.

"The general pattern is too high," complained chairman Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., on Tuesday as the Republican-controlled budget panel headed toward final votes on a budget blueprint for next year.

The Reagan administration issued a revised budget forecast Tuesday that adds $4 billion to the deficits previously projected for fiscal 1983 and 1984. The deficit for 1984 was put at $190.2 billion, up $1.4 billion from the last official estimate made in January.

NONETHELESS, a tacit understanding was growing between Republicans and Democrats on the committee which would exclude Reagan on the final shape of the budget plan to go before the full Senate later this month.

Under a delicate compromise now taking shape, there would be a 2 percent increase in a broad range of domestic spending categories.

By contrast, Reagan has proposed a so-called spending freeze over hundreds of programs, but the hold was to be applied unevenly, with some of the president's favored programs actually receiving increased funding, and others suffering deep cuts.

Under the new forecast, the administration's projected deficits would gradually shrink from $185 billion in 1985 to $102.4 billion in 1988, but the figures are based on adoption of the president's proposals for cutting spending and raising taxes during that period.

SO FAR, the committee has cast aside Reagan's freeze, and set its own list of cuts and additions. The total so far has reached $5.9 billion more than Reagan's recommendations, and more additions seem on the way.

Despite the committee's generosity compared to Reagan's wishes, the figures also are well below most of the recommendations of the Democratically-controlled House which restored many of the social program cuts made under the last two years of Reagan's economic policies.

Under the Senate compromise now taking shape, the 10 Democrats on the committee would accept sharp limits in the growth of federal entitlement programs, including Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps and federal student loans.

The Democrats would also drop their support for canceling this year's 10 percent tax cut, in exchange for small tax increases which would be proposed by Republicans.

AS THE committee on Tuesday slogged through votes on domestic programs ranging from crime-fighting to housing for the elderly to environmental controls, it became apparent that Reagan's budget priorities were being largely ignored.

Last week, the committee voted 17 to 4 to cut the president's proposed 10 percent defense buildup in half, and Tuesday's decisions show a continued willingness by Republican senators to defy Reagan openly.

Domenici said he hopes the committee will finish its work by Thursday.

On Tuesday, the committee:

—Added $1 billion in money for housing programs for the elderly and in rural areas. Instead of 10,000 housing units for the elderly, the committee allowed spending for 13,000 units. There was also additional money for postal subsidies for charitable groups, newspapers and magazines, and non-profit political organizations.

——Voted to include $900 million more for community development programs than Reagan requested. The committee agreed however that the Economic Development Administatration and major portions of the Appalachian Regional Commission should be eliminated.

Pepper says Medicare needs intensive care

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan commission like the one that fashioned a financial bailout plan for Social Security should be formed to help the Medicare program, say Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., and 20 other House members.

The congressmen noted that the Congressional Budget Office predicts financial woes for Medicare by 1987 or 1988 under present conditions. About 29 million elderly and disabled people depend upon Medicare to pay their medical bills.

Pepper, Congress' most prominent advocate for the elderly, had harsh words for President Reagan's plan to curb Medicare outlays by requiring beneficiaries to pay a greater share of hospital costs.

"Cutting benefits will not solve the funding problems the program faces nor will it provide senior citizens with the health care coverage we promised them back in 1965," Pepper said.

"It is time to take a comprehensive look at Medicare, to find solutions to its financial problems and to determine how we might expand the benefits so as to cover practically all of the medical costs of older people in a cost-effective manner," he said.

But Pepper and the others praised the administration for coming forward with a prospective payment system for Medicare where hospital reimbursement rates will be set in advance for 467 diagnostic categories. This new system, which was adopted along with the Social Security package, is expected to save Medicare millions over the long run.

The Medicare commission proposed on Tuesday would have 18 members — three Republicans and three Democrats to be named by the speaker of the House, the president pro tempore of the Senate and the president. Its mission would be to study Medicare and submit a report in July of 1984. Pepper said he hoped Congress would adopt the recommendations of such a panel before the 1984 elections.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House Energy and Environment subcommittee on health, criticized an existing council whose members were named by former Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker to study the Medicare problem.

The commission, headed by former Indiana Gov. Otis Bowen, a physician, is due to make a report in July. But Waxman said its members don't represent the elderly and others who ought to have a say in any Medicare solution.

Waxman said there is broad opposition in Congress to the administration's Medicare proposals which would offer beneficiaries protection against catastrophic medical costs in exchange for paying a greater portion of their routine hospital bills.

Medicare beneficiaries now pay for the first day's stay in a hospital, about $305, plus part of the cost after 60 days.

Juror demonstrates reason for suit

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Jurors hearing a $300,000 lawsuit by a woman who fell on a stairway at the Performing Arts Center took a field trip to visit the accident site — where a juror fell and hurt herself.

Elizabeth Fears, box office manager for the Tulsa Opera, said in her lawsuit that she fell and broke her hip on Oct. 30, 1980, because the emergency exit stairwell was unlighted.

District Judge David Winslow took jurors to the stairs Tuesday to let them see the scene with the house lights dimmed, as they were when the accident occurred. There, juror Virginia Millikan fell and hurt her foot. She was replaced by an alternate.

Couple finds good things come in large packages

TOMS RIVER, N.J. (AP) — The proud father of a baby who weighed 16 pounds, 6 ounces at birth thinks his son will grow up to be a football player, and even the boy's mother admits he's "hard to handle."

Kevin Robert Clark, whose birth at Community Memorial Hospital has attracted attention to match his size, is so big that nurses have placed him in a crib because he doesn't fit the hospital's standard bassinet.

"I teased my wife before she got pregnant that she would have a 15-pound boy," Kevin's father, Robert Clark, said Tuesday. "But I never expected a son this big!"

Nurses joke that "he's going to walk out of the hospital on his own," said the 24-year-old mother, Patricia Clark.

Kevin was 2½ weeks overdue and 25 inches tall when he was born Friday by Caesarean section.

"We just put the 9-month clothes on him and they're tight," Clark said. "He's got a tremendous appetite. He's not on a regular feeding schedule like the other babies in the hospital. Whenever he's hungry, he cries and my wife nurses him."

Despite his unusual size, doctors checked the infant and found him to be in perfect health, Mrs. Clark said.

The Clarks said large babies run in the family. Mrs. Clark weighed 9 pounds at birth, and is now 5-foot-8 and 145 pounds. Her husband, a Navy enlistee stationed at nearby Lakehurst Naval Air Engineering Center, was a 10-pound baby who today stands 6-foot-6 and weighs 250 pounds.

But Kevin was born more than twice the size of the Clarks' only other baby, Kristina, now 3, who weighed in at 8 pounds, 1 ounce.

"He's going to be a football player when he grows up," the proud father predicted.

Bob and Patricia Clark hold their newborn son Kevin at Community Memorial Hospital in Toms River, N.J., Tuesday. Kevin weighed in at 16 pounds, 6 ounces at birth Friday.

"He's a real bruiser," agreed Mrs. Clark. "He's hard for me to handle, so the nurses help me with him. But he's really cute and we love him just the same as if he were a little guy."

The largest viable baby ever born, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, was a 22-pound, 8-ounce boy born to a woman in Aversa, Italy, in September 1955.

Immigration agents must have warrants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Federal agents can approach people to question them about their immigration status, but can't raid homes or make arrests without warrants, a federal appeals court has ruled.

Agents also can conduct nighttime operations aimed at finding illegal aliens but can't detain or question people without a reasonable suspicion about their status, according to Tuesday's decision.

The appeals court examined a preliminary injunction issued by a federal judge in Los Angeles against a host of search and seizure tactics used by immigration agents in seven Southern California counties. It agreed with some of the lower court restrictions, rejected others and sent the case back to U.S. District Judge David Williams.

The complex case, initiated by seven Hispanics, pits the constitutional rights of those under investigation against the agents' authority to carry out U.S. immigration law.

The suit was filed in 1979 by Virginia Zepeda and six others, including U.S. citizens of Mexican descent, permanent resident aliens of Mexican origin and a Mexican national legally entitled to remain in the United States.

They claimed Immigration and Naturalization Service agents, backed by local police, entered and searched homes and private businesses without consent, detained and questioned Hispanics without reasonable suspicion they were aliens and arrested people without a warrant and without probable cause.

The appellate panel agreed with Williams that agents:

—Can't raid homes in hopes of finding illegal aliens without a search warrant, a court order or the homeowner's consent except in an emergency.

—Can't make arrests without warrants or detain or question people about their immigration status unless there's a reasonable suspicion they are in the country illegally.

—Can't raid nonpublic areas of businesses without a search warrant.

—Can't make general searches of homes or nonpublic business areas to seek documents or people without warrants.

When agents make a lawful arrest, however, officers may search the person in custody, seize evidence on that person and search the immediate area for evidence in plain sight, it said.

But it overturned other portions of Williams' injunction.

It is acceptable for agents to approach homes, businesses and public places to question people about their immigration status if there's a reasonable suspicion they are aliens, the 9th Circuit said.

Nor is it illegal for agents with the Immigration and Naturalization Service to approach homes, people or businesses at night or ask local officials for assistance in their operations, the decision said.

Merely approaching people to question them does not constitute seizure against which the Fourth Amendment offers protection, the appeal court said. And to bar agents from approaching homes would hamper the INS' ability to question neighbors, landlords and others in the course of routine investigation, it said.

In returning the case to Williams, the court said the judge should decide whether to certify it as a class action to encompass people with similar complaints.

FAA head flies into congressional flak

WASHINGTON (AP) — FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms has been given high marks for engineering the government's recovery from the air traffic controller strike, but now is running into flak over his love of flying — at taxpayer expense.

At hearings on the agency's appropriations bill, Helms was met Tuesday by a barrage of questions and accusations from Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., who accused him of "tooling out...having your own private time" with the Federal Aviation Administration aircraft.

D'Amato was the reason Congress attempted to curb Helms' use of FAA planes last year, but he charged the FAA administrator, a former test pilot, was still flying the agency's planes for transportation instead of using commercial flights that would be cheaper.

Helms, clearly irritated by the attack, defended his use of the planes and insisted repeatedly that his flights are justified and necessary to "evaluate the (air traffic control) system."

"I don't fly on FAA airplanes for personal transportation. I only fly for the evaluation of the system," said Helms. He urged the Senate subcommittee to call in industry "users of the system" to see if they object to his use of FAA planes.

"This senator just doesn't buy it," D'Amato snapped at one point.

Helms said he "routinely" uses commercial air transportation, often paying out of his own pocket and sitting in a cockpit jumpseat to listen in on air traffic controllers. But when pressed by D'Amato to supply more information about his commercial flights — as well as his use of his personal plane on FAA business — Helms said he considered that "an invasion of my privacy."

The FAA's use of its aircraft came under fire last September when the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, said the planes often are used for transporting top-ranking agency officials when commercial flights could save the government thousands of dollars.

Mayor of Times Beach wants agencies to take over town

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher Bond, meeting with residents of dioxin-tainted Times Beach, says he thinks two federal agencies should take temporary title to the town until a land buy-out is completed.

Bond met Tuesday with about 20 residents of the community. He said he had written to President Reagan suggesting the Federal Emergency Management Agency or the Environmental Protection Agency as candidates to take temporary title to the land.

Much of Times Beach has been evacuated, and residents told the governor that some of their homes had been burglarized and vandalized. The toxic dioxin, discovered after floods last December, came from oil sprayed years ago on dirt roads to control dust.

Court: Treatment discriminatory

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal appeals court, saying the U.S. policy of detaining Haitian refugees is discriminatory, has sent the case back to a lower court judge for further action.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday that discrimination was involved when the federal government instituted an improper policy change that allowed the Haitians to be held in refugee camps from Miami to New York.

The appeals court remanded the case to U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman of Miami, who ordered all 1,700 Haitians released last year. Federal immigration officials had appealed that order.

Third condor egg may hatch

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Scientists hope that a damaged California condor egg will hatch a healthy addition to the endangered species, amid signs that the embryo is growing.

"It appears to be a pretty hardy embryo," San Diego Zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said Tuesday. But he warned that the embryo could still suffer developmental problems.

According to zoo officials, the egg was exposed to too much cold in the wild. It is the third egg the zoo has attempted to hatch in a program to create a captive breeding population of the rare birds.

GM has axle problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of recently reported accidents caused by rear axle separation from some General Motors mid-sized cars indicates the problem may be more widespread than previously believed, the government says.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration disclosed Tuesday that it has received 506 reports of accidents in which the rear axle separated, including 144 cases in which the axle and wheels dropped completely from the vehicles.

The agency announced April 1 that it had 64 reports of accidents attributed to the axle problem in 1978 through 1980 GM cars and sedan trucks, and that it was concerned about a possible safety defect in the vehicles.

Richard Burdette, NHTSA's public affairs director, said the additional accident reports came from Canadian officials, GM and U.S. consumers.

In its original announcement, the highway safety agency said it was concerned that as many as 5.3 million GM mid-sized cars, covering 10 different models built from 1978 through 1980, may have to be examined. However, it added that the defect, involving a manufacturing flaw in the axle, most likely is in a much smaller number of vehicles.

General Motors, noting the large number of vehicles involved, has pointed to the small number of accident reports.

The problem involves the design of so-called "end buttons" at each end of the rear axle. In some of the cars, the buttons are too small, and under stress a "C-clip" — which holds the axle in place — can drop off, allowing the axle and wheel to separate from the vehicle.

Court backs Sadat's withdrawal of Coptic leader's recognition

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — An administrative court has upheld a decree by the late President Anwar Sadat that withdrew government recognition of Pope Shenouda III, leader of Egypt's Coptic Christian minority.

However, the court also ruled Tuesday that the appointment of a five-man papal committee to sit in for the spiritual leader was wrong.

The five-judge court said Sadat did not act unconstitutionally in stripping the pope of secular powers and banishing him to a desert monastery northwest of Cairo on Sept. 5, 1981.

Sadat accused Shenouda, a former journalist and army officer, of inciting strife between Egypt's Moslem majority and Coptic minority.

In place of Shenouda, Sadat appointed a five-member panel to administer the church, which has a following of about 6 million in Egypt.

A committee of legal advisers assigned to the court had recommended that the ruling be overturned on constitutional grounds.

Soviet families leave U.S. embassy

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

MOSCOW — Six Soviet Pentecostalists, who took refuge in the U.S. Embassy here nearly five years ago seeking help to leave the Soviet Union, left their sanctuary voluntarily Tuesday night to return home to Siberia in the hope that they will be granted permission to emigrate.

The departure marks the end of an extraordinary diplomatic episode that was an embarrassment for the Soviet authorities as the group gained worldwide publicity. It also relieves the U.S. Embassy of a delicate problem. It had granted the Pentecostalists a refuge but not asylum and it was unable to obtain assurances from the Soviet authorities that they would be granted safe passage to the West.

For the Pentecostalists involved, their predicaments remain.

A spokesman for the group, Lyuba Vashchenko, 30, told journalists gathered inside the embassy compound that they were returning to their hometown of Chernogorsk, in Siberia, where they would apply for exit visas to emigrate to Israel.

The decision to leave the embassy, she said, was taken by the group after her sister Lydia, 32, was allowed to emigrate to Israel last week. Lydia was the first of the original group of seven Pentecostalists to leave the embassy after a 34-day hunger strike. She returned to Chernogorsk in February 1982.

"Lydia's departure was a good sign for us, for our family. We plan to go to Lydia," Lyuba said clutching a guitar. "Our hope is God. He never left us and will never leave us."

The Vashchenko family leaves the U.S. embassy in Moscow after five years.

Despite uncertainties about their future, the two families are expected to be granted exit visas eventually. There was speculation here that there is some sort of understanding between Moscow and Washington on this issue.

When they took refuge in the embassy, the Pentecostalists initially slept on benches in the consular section before they were moved to a one-room basement apartment. A year ago, the embassy shifted its barber shop to another basement room to provide the families with two rooms.

Unable to emigrate and afraid to leave the compound, they lived in a crowded place with the embassy courtyard the only outdoor space they could use.

"It' s strange to imagine how I will walk along the street," said Lyuba Vashchenko, who now speaks fluent English.

The six, and four members of their families who were let into the embassy for the occasion, were taken in embassy vehicles to Moscow's Domodedovo airport to fly back to Siberia later tonight.

A number of American diplomats escorted the group, including Marine Col. Paul Rousch, who was an assistant military attache here in June of 1978 when the two Pentecostalist families rushed past Soviet guards into the embassy compound complaining of religious persecution and asking American help in getting to the West.

U.S. officials said Rousch was here on an official visit unrelated to the Pentecostalists' departure Tuesday but that he was friendly with them and for that reason was asked to accompany them to the airport.

Warren Zimmermann, deputy chief of mission, refused to comment on possible U.S.-Soviet talks about the group's fate. He said, "the decision to leave was their own."

Soviet police guards made no attempt to stop or inspect the vehicles as they left the embassy. Nor were there any problems at the airport as the group departed on two separate flights holding tickets paid for by the embassy, according to U.S. officials.

It was expected that the Soviet authorities would allow the group to emigrate to Israel although there may be some legal complications. The group consists of the Vashchenko and Chmykalov families, both of Chernogorsk. The Vashchenkos have 13 children while the Chmykalovs have nine.

Iraqi ship attacks Iranian well

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi warships launched a missile attack during the night against an Iranian oil well in the Persian Gulf, the official Iranian news agency IRNA reported today.

IRNA said one of the six Iraqi warships, all described as "cruisers," was hit and possibly sunk by Iranian naval forces.

The news agency noted that the Iraqi attack on the oil installation came as ministers from eight Persian Gulf nations were preparing to meet in Kuwait to coordinate efforts for combatting a giant oil slick originating from Iranian oil wells previously bombed by Iraqi planes.

The slick poses a serious pollution threat for the gulf states, most of whom depend heavily on desalination plants for water supplies.

IRNA said "it is not yet clear whether another oil slick has occurred" as a result of the new Iraqi attack.

The agency did not specify the exact location of the new Iraqi attack but said Iraq "aims at intensifying the hardships inflicted on the Persian Gulf states through these oil slicks."

Warship cruise defended

LONDON (AP) — A British naval convoy that includes the aircraft carrier Invincible and its royal crewman, Prince Andrew, is due to arrive at Gibraltar today, to the fury of the Spanish government.

The British Defense Ministry denied Spanish press reports that the ships, on "Spring Train" maneuvers in the eastern Atlantic Ocean, are arriving to test Gibraltar's defenses.

The Spanish government on Monday delivered a formal protest in London expressing "concern and displeasure" over the visit to the British colony on the southern tip of Spain.

It called the presence of the British warships "undesirable." and said Spain "repeats its desire to resolve the Gibraltar question through negotiations, in accordance with United Nations resolutions in order to assure Spanish territorial integrity."

Spain, which has long claimed sovereignty over Gibraltar, ceded the Rock to Britain in the 1713 Treaty of Utrecht.

The independent Madrid daily Diario 16 said Tuesday that the aircraft carriers, frigates and destroyers in the convoy would make landings on several points on Gibraltar and conduct land, sea and air defense exercises.

Britain's Defense Ministry immediately denied the report, saying the five-day visit was a routine stop-over of the kind that "have been taking place (on Gibraltar) for over 200 years."

The convoy includes the HMS Invincible, on which Queen Elizabeth II's 23-year-old son Andrew is a helicopter pilot, was one of two British carriers which took part in the Falkland Islands war last year. The other was HMS Hermes, which served as flagship of the British task force.

The Daily Telegraph today quoted a Spanish Foreign Ministry official as saying the Spanish Navy may mount extra surveillance as the British warships enter Gibraltar harbor.

But the British newspaper said he ruled out any show of strength by the Spanish Navy, saying: "We do not want any possibility of an incident, but it is obvious that we do not want Spanish territorial waters to be infringed.

"We are not treating this as routine in view of the number of warships and what fleet it is."

Medical facilities have multitudes waiting for organ transplants

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — At any one time Stanford University Medical Center, the nation's busiest facility for heart and heart-lung transplants, has a half-dozen people waiting for new organs.

At the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, 80 people are on a list for a new liver. Across the country, 6,000 people are waiting for kidney transplants.

Two million Americans die each year, many in hospitals, but only about 20,000 could qualify as organ transplant donors, doctors say. And not enough of them are donating their organs. For people needing transplants that means long and sometimes fatal delays.

"The major problem...is getting the organ donor referral to begin with," said Dr. Jack G. Copeland, chief of cardiovascular and thoracic surgery at the University of Arizona and president of the International Society of Heart Transplantations.

Donald Denny, director of organ procurement at the University of Pittsburgh, said Americans "are very good-hearted and willing to donate organs.

"The weak link is that those families experiencing a death don't think about donating an organ. Someone has to reach out" from within the medical profession, Denny said.

Getting donors "is a big problem," agreed Barbara Schulman, director of the Regional Organ Procurement Agency of Southern California. Her agency catalogues recipient needs, solicits organ donations and coordinates what becomes available from about 300 community hospitals.

Denny said Pittsburgh has experienced "tremendous cooperation" from kidney procurement programs elsewhere, noting 60 of the 82 livers the medical school transplanted last year were donated by that route.

However, the public needs to be made aware of the need for donor organs, Copeland said.

Another need, he said, is "a system for donations ... that avoids any medical conflict of interest." He said the appearance of such a conflict frequently exists for neurologists and neurosurgeons.

They have to make a determination on brain death and if they broach organ donation with a dying patient's family, they face the appearance of "some collusion or some agreement that is directly against the best interests of the patient involved; whether there is or not," Copeland said.

Ms. Schulman said most physicians feel uncomfortable with having been in the position of trying to save a person and then saying "There's nothing I can do, and by the way, how about donating an organ?"

There are about 110 organ procurement agencies throughout the U.S., each responsible for a different section of the country, said Denny.

Hospitals' medical and nursing staffs are the key components in alerting officials that a family has agreed to organ donation or that it should be approached.

Experts rescue cranes

ARANSAS NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE, Texas (AP) — Biologists trying to save the California condor from extinction can take hope from their colleagues in Texas who say efforts to save the endangered whooping crane have succeeded.

When the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service first started counting "whoopers" in 1941, four years after the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge was established, there were only 14 of the distinctive, 5-foot-tall white birds in existence.

TODAY, said refuge manager Frank Johnson, there are 71 cranes in the migratory flock that travels from the Texas Gulf Coast to Alberta, Canada. Counting the birds in captivity, there are 112 whooping cranes in all.

"We feel better about it, but not necessarily out of the woods," said Johnson. "Our objective is to have 40 nesting pairs, which would give us about 200 birds. Last year, we had about 19 nesting pairs."

Johnson said it could take 20 years to reach that goal.

Two California condors recently were hatched in captivity. There are only 19 or 20 condors in the United States, compared with about 60 two decades ago.

CONDORS ARE the larget birds in North America, with wingspans up to 12 feet. But whoopers also are magnificent, with their red crowns, white feathers and black-tipped wings that may measure 7 feet across.

Johnson said the whooping cranes almost became extinct for the same reasons as the condors — encroachment of civilization on their habitat, and hunters.

MUCH OF the department's success with the whooping cranes has come from public awareness, Johnson said, "getting the public involved, you know; 'Don't shoot the big bird with the black feathers.'"

Johnson said the campaign apparently has been successful, although he said he couldn't guarantee that no one along the birds' midwestern migratory route has shot one.

"We have put radios on a few of the chicks, and we have learned a few things that way," Johnson said. "Two birds ran into power lines, and one was struck by a golden eagle."

THE BIRDS already have begun their annual spring migration to Wood Buffalo National Park in Canada, where they are protected by the Canadian government.

Johnson said the Fish and Wildlife Department has spent about five years building another migratory flock by taking eggs from the whoopers' nests in Canada and putting them under sandhill cranes in a wildlife refuge in Idaho.

"These birds migrate to New Mexico," he said. "We have 13 out there."

There are 26 more whoopers in the department's research station in Pautuxent, Md. Two are in the San Antonio zoo and one lives at the International Crane Foundation in Wisconsin, Johnson said.

THE NUMBER of Texas whoopers dropped from 73 to 71 this year, Johnson said, when two of this year's six chicks died in Canada, probably because of predators or disease, a common occurrence.

GOP must overcome mathematical obstacle in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans have a mathematical obstacle to overcome if they expect to retain majority control of the Senate in 1984: Of the 33 Senate seats to be decided, 19 are now held by Republicans, against 14 occupied by Democrats.

Since Republicans hold a relatively narrow 54-46 majority in the Senate, even modest Democratic gains could be translated into a Democratic takeover.

"We're counting on a strong economic resurgence and anticipate that the president will run for re-election," said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate GOP campaign committee.

Of the 19 Republicans whose terms expire after 1984, only Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., has said he will not run again.

Lugar concedes the mathematical vulnerability of Republicans but says active fundraising efforts have already begun for 1984 and each of the 18 GOP incumbents expected to seek re-election are already "off to a strong start."

Even so, the apparent advantage favoring Democrats seems to be contributing to the political edginess that many Senate Republicans have been expressing lately.

Some of the hottest criticism of President Reagan's economic policies is coming from senators of his own party, especially on the Senate Budget Committee — where five Republicans, including Chairman Pete V. Domeninci of New Mexico, are up for re-election in 1984.

In fact, during a recent meeting of the committee, one Republican after another attacked Reagan's proposed rapid defense buildup.

The GOP broadsides silenced Demoratic Sen. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, an acerbic, often longwinded critic of Reagan. Metzenbaum said that Republicans had done such a complete job of criticizing the president themselves, he could think of nothing further to say.

• • •

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr., R-Tenn., usually begins each week by inserting a few lines of poetry in the Congressional Record. But last week, the Senate Chaplain, the Rev. Richard C. Halverson, beat him to it.

"Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall. Humpty Dumpty had a great fall. All the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't put Humpty Dumpty together again," Halverson intoned as he delivered his morning prayer.

A few bowed heads lifted quizzically. Then Halverson completed his thought:

"Dear God...prevent the Senate from being like Humpty Dumpty. Keep it from being so fractured and fragmented that no one will be able to put it together again."

Front scene of firing

KHIRBET ROUHA, Lebanon (AP) — With the melting of winter snows, sporadic exchanges of machine gun fire and the occasional thump of artillery have returned to the Syrian-Israeli front line in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

When the marshy land dries out, the danger of fighting on a larger scale will be heightened, say diplomats. A scant 100 yards separate Israeli and Syrian positions in some places in the sparsely populated valley, a wide fertile slice between mountain ridges.

"Two nights ago, there was a lot of shooting. It began at 8 p.m. and ended at 3 a.m. and frightened the children," said a farmer's wife near this village inside Israeli lines and only 500 yards from Syrian positions.

HER husband, a former police sergeant who was guiding a horse and plow through a vegetable patch, said such shooting exchanges have been infrequent in the Syrian-controlled valley.

"It's not like last summer," he said, pointing to the rusting hulk of a Syrian army truck near the road in front of his house.

Israel's invading force and the Syrian army fiercely battled in the Bekaa Valley in June. Talks are going on to negotiate withdrawal of the Israeli and Syrian forces, but progress has been slow.

Burned Syrian trucks and a shot-up tank are strewn on the fringes of the rolling fields. Yellow signs with red triangles warn of minefields on the roadside.

Officials in Damascus, the Syrian capital, predict that Israel will renew war this summer. Moscow, which has resupplied Syria's army after a crushing battlefield defeat last summer, has warned Israel against any new action.

ISRAELI officials have stressed they don't intend to start war with Syria. Western diplomats, who spoke on condition they not be identified, say nothing indicates the truce will soon break down.

Diplomats suggest all-out warfare is unlikely this year because Syria does not wish to risk a second major defeat and Israel cannot afford heavy casualties.

Even so, tension builds with artillery exchanges and guerrilla ambushes of Israeli soldiers in Lebanon, and residents talk fearfully of war. And there is always a danger that an artillery duel, a guerrilla raid or a retaliation strike could escalate into an all-out conflict.

"People are really scared when they hear about it on the radios and read it in the newspapers," said a hotel owner in Baalbek, in the northern end of the valley.

In a Palestinian refugee camp outside Baalbek, a young fighter said: "It is still a war situation and I don't think Israel will leave it like this."

IN THE southern part of the Bekaa Valley, Israel has at least six elaborate camps and a large logistics base on the road from the northern Israeli settlement of Metulla to the frontline.

A reporter who traveled the 25-mile road this week without Israeli military escort saw depots with rows of tanks parked on asphalt strips enclosed by wire.

Firefighters susceptible to heart attacks

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Ask the chief what makes a firefighter keep chasing flames, and he'll tell you the job gets in your blood. Chief Ray Jacks wants to make sure his crew's blood doesn't boil.

Crew members lined up recently, rolled up their sleeves, stretched out their arms and watched while a registered nurse and an emergency medical technician measured their blood pressure.

Most of the 77 tested were fine, but Jacks said two had levels high enough to require bed rest or medical attention. Each week, the EMT checks others with slightly high or borderline blood pressure, Jacks said in a recent telephone interview. He said he hoped to establish a routine program of checking all firefighters.

Heart attacks, the chief said, are the No. 1 killer of firefighters. According to statistics from the International Association of Fire Fighters, heart attacks are responsible for almost half of the deaths in the line of duty. The association says there are 58 deaths per 100,000 firefighters compared to 23 for police officers.

"If you find the high blood pressure and treat it, you prevent heart attack, strokes, diseases like that," said Sue Love, a registered nurse with Professional Home Health Care of Pine Bluff, who administered the tests.

"I think it is very necessary," Jacks said of the checkups. His two sons, both doctors, encouraged the testing. "I talked it over with my staff, and they all agreed," he said. He didn't know of any other routine testing programs in Arkansas fire departments.

One of those who found his blood pressure high was Assistant Eddie Lunsford, 43. "I couldn't believe it," Lunsford said by telephone recently. "I had her check it again. My high side was in good shape, but my low pressure was up. I'm working on it."

Jacks, a firefighter for 34 years, and Lunsford, in the business 19 years, said the job was the most hazardous profession. "It gets in your blood," Lunsford said.

Service station offers everything except gas

LAMPASAS, Texas (AP) — James H. "Blackie" Hodges says he couldn't make a profit selling gas at his service station, so now his service station only sells service.

"It had gotten to the point where I was paying for gas what my competitors across the street were selling it for," Hodges said.

Last June, he said, he pumped more than 16,000 gallons of gasoline for a net profit of $68. In July, when he hired extra help to keep up with the heavy summer demand, he lost $2,400.

"Then they came out with the 4-cent-a-gallon discount for cash," Hodges said. "That meant I'd still be paying more for gas than I brought in. Well, that was the final straw."

What you buy in security systems is what you get

Hearst Feature Service

Determining what you need in a home security system is much like deciding how much life insurance you should carry. It all depends on the level of risk you face and the amount of protection you can afford.

You can buy a ferocious watchdog, erect an electronic wall around the perimeter of your home or wire your house to detect the slightest interior movement. You can choose from self-contained units – which depend upon someone hearing the alarm and calling the police – or ones which are continuously monitored from a central location and automatically feed the alarm to local police. And, predictably, an inside row-house with few ground floor windows and doors is cheaper to outfit than a rambling one-story rancher surrounded by trees.

Perimeter alarm systems use magnetic detectors fastened to all windows and doors. Opening disrupts the magnetic field and triggers the alarm. Recessed installation in door jambs or window frames stymies a burglar's attempt to analyze and get around the system. If professionally installed, expect to pay between $30 and $50 per pane of glass and point of entry.

A key-operated system offered by industry heavyweight ADT Security Systems provides perimeter protection with metallic foil tape on windows and glass doors, an outdoor sounder and a control set. According to ADT's Charles Ziegler, if you live in a typical three-story row-house, expect to pay from $1,200 to $1,500 to protect all accessible points of entry on the first level. For a detached, suburban rancher with more ground-level windows and doors, add $300 to $500.

With the advent of microprocessor technology, new coded systems are available for an additional $300. These use four-digit codes rather than keys, and offer more flexibility. The system allows you to zone off parts of your home while maintaining protection in other parts. If you're having a backyard barbecue, you simply zone off the back of your house and maintain protection in the front. Additional features include a remote-control slave panel hooked to the main control and monitoring by a central station, which relays your alarm to police after a built-in delay to permit cancelling the alarm in case of unintentional triggering.

Although tales abound of the false alarm triggered by the rustling of draperies and the sound of a philodendron leaf floating to the floor, a good system shouldn't be that sensitive. But the sensors will respond to the sound of breaking glass anywhere in the house. Interior motion detectors cost between $150 to $200, and the necessary outdoor alarm sounder should run between $100 to $150, says Ziegler.

New systems include one from ADT, based on microprocessor technology, for under $1,000.

"Good movie — except for the part when you sneezed while holding a box of jelly balls!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, April 15, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Leonardo da Vinci, author Henry James and railroad labor leader Philip Randolph and singer Bessie Smith were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actress Claudia Cardinale, country singer Roy Clark, Montreal Expos relief pitcher Woodie Fryman and actress Elizabeth Montgomery. You make unexpected gains in the months ahead thanks to mate or an old business friend. See people and situations as they really are. A partnership finally begins to work the way it should. Although romance is rocky at times, you take pleasure in the bittersweet drama. Be sure to meet your work obligations on time. A missed deadline could spell real trouble.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Cooperation is the key to getting your work done today. A promotion may be nearer than you think. Reserve time to help a child solve a problem that he feels is important.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Dedication and commitment carry you far. Financial solutions appear from out of nowhere. Friends come forward with important information. Use your energies where they will do you the most good.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An even temper is a large plus right now. Mate, romantic partner will be supportive. Steer clear of those who want to involve you in their get-rich-quick schemes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your tact and attention to detail are rewarded. Although business tips can be valuable, you must follow your own intuition. You change your mind about something following a casual encounter.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accept the fact that you cannot do it all. Delegate tasks to free yourself from the detail work you despise. Although someone tries to slow progress, you eventually triumph.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Business problems lessen. A fascinating adventure is of great interest to others. Keep the details to yourself. A quick trip may be necessary. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Think twice before accepting a career idea. You do not need gimmicks to get ahead. A new business deal could alleviate your financial worries. Hard work is the only way to go.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have a chance to cash in on a trend. Follow up on something you started yesterday. Subtlety will not get you the answers you need. Once communication improves, romance will too.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Those in need of cash may have to swallow their pride and accept part-time jobs. Your image helps close a business deal. A romantic interlude could develop into something serious.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Rely on those who have proven their loyalty in the past. You could be given a humanitarian award. Stop faulting someone just because results are not as quick as you would like.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Others lean on you. Encourage them to stand on their own feet. Use your influence to help a child or older person. Call in a long overdue I.O.U.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Forget any criticism and do what has to be done to improve the bottom line. A financial setback can be reversed if you keep your temper and follow an expert's advice.

Quartet to play on PBS

NEW YORK (AP) — The Juilliard String Quartet, formed in 1946, will play Brahms, and the Muir String Quartet, formed in 1979, will perform pieces by Ravel and Beethoven, as public TV's "In Performance at the White House" series continues Wednesday night.

The hour-long concert was taped April 6, with President and Mrs. Reagan in the audience.

The format for the series is for one established artist, in this case, the Juilliard Quartet, to select a younger accompanying performer or group.

"There were a number we thought of," says Robert Mann, first violinist for the Juilliard Quartet. "The Mendelssohn is establishing itself — it gave 50 concerts this season. But the second violinist is my son. We said no to that.

"The Colorado Quartet is four girls, and that's interesting, but they studied with us at Juilliard. I guess we have parented more young quartets in the nation — about two dozen — than almost any other institution.

Chamber music has become extremely popular in America in recent years. While that thrills some people, Mann warns that bad chamber music could quickly reverse that trend.

"Popularization is a two-edged sword," he says. "The danger is that by being so popular it may lose its core of integrity, of being able to say something very special to the human race.

"This season we've got a new, very interesting piece for quartet and ghost tape by Morton Subotnick. We're playing it 17 times, putting it on enough so it doesn't get just one hearing."

The Juilliard String Quartet was formed the fall after Mann got out of the Army. He is the only original member still playing with the group. "We specialize in everything," he says. "We made our first fame playing Bartok quartets. No other quartet played all six.

"Because of our personalities, we tend to play Beethoven a lot and don't play the Romantics as much. The Budapest String Quartet in its heyday was peerless with Beethoven. We've become Beethoven specialists now," Mann says. "Last year we played the 16 Beethoven quartets in 11 cities in the world and recorded them live — no splicing — in the Library of Congress, on its Stradivarius instruments."

The Juilliard String Quartet plays about 100 concerts a season, usually 10 in New York, 18 at the Library of Congress, and makes five visits a year to Michigan State University to give master classes.

If you are looking for a no-risk guarantee, bridge is not your game. Switch to tiddlywinks, but take care that you don't flip a disk into your eye.

South had a difficult rebid. He decided that, because of his good spade fit, his hand was too strong for two no trump, so he elected to jump shift in clubs. When North took a jump preference in diamonds, South launched into Blackwood and settled in a small slam when he learned an ace was missing.

West selected the safe lead of the jack of hearts. The declarer soon showed that it was safe and sorry! He won the king of hearts, drew trumps and then forced out the ace of spades. East shifted to a club, but it was too late. When spades split evenly, declarer crossed to a high heart and sluffed his losing club on the thirteenth spade to make his slam.

Obviously, a club lead would have defeated the contract. No matter how declarer maneuvered, he could not have avoided losing a trick in each black suit. But how was West to know?

Many-time world champion Benito Garozzo's advice in his Bols Bridge Tip some years ago pointed the way. He explained that, when competent opponents bid a small slam against you, you don't have much time to develop tricks — you are going to gain the lead once more, at best. Therefore, you should make an attacking lead against the slam in an effort to build a quick trick. Obviously, the only suit that offers a real chance of that for West is a club.

Pessimism galore

Pessimists, noted novelist John Galsworthy, are people who are always "building dungeons in the air." After all, it has been said that the pessimistic, when faced with the choice of two evils, choose both.

The past 12 months would have given a heaping dose of pessimism to anyone of that bend. The nation's economy continued at a discouragingly predictable low ebb, unemployment kept fulfilled the pessimists' prospect for improving their lot in life and interest rates fell but stayed just high enough to keep a new home out of reach for most people.

On Friday — April 15 — 20 to 50 members of the Benevolent and Loyal Order of Pessimists are expected to gather in Iowa City, Iowa, for their annual convention. Actually "expected to gather" may be a little optimistic. If they show up, they'll be there.

Highlight of this possible gathering will be presentation of an award to the gloomiest pessimist of the year. The trophy is a model of the south end of a northbound horse. The award, if it really is presented (which it probably will not be) most probably will be the last of its kind.

That's because future convention plans are grim, according to foundng member David Leshtz. "After all," he noted recently, "we are coming up on 1984." That's an appropriately dreary thought.

China's shrill reaction

China's decision to suspend all cultural and sports exchanges with the United States is an unusually harsh response to the Reagan administration's decision to grant political asylum to a 19-year-old Chinese athlete.

This diplomatic overkill following the defection of tennis star Hu Na was meant to camouflage Peking's loss of face. The shrill reaction simply fulfilled public warning by high-ranking Chinese officials.

Nevertheless, it is highly improbable that the suspension of cultural and sports exchanges will be permanent, or that relations between the two nations will suffer too long.

The Hu Na case has had no impact whatsoever on scientific and academic exchanges. And, China has given no indication it will either summon home its 10,000 students from the United States, or expel 300 Americans who are studying in China.

Access to American technology is sufficiently important to the Chinese that relations will not be permanently ruptured over the granting of asylum that was perfectly appropriate under U.S. law. Actually, the Reagan administration had no alternative. It would have been unthinkable to deport this appealing young figure.

Hu Na maintained she would have been forced to join the Communist Party, had she returned home. Regardless of that threat, the mere fact she sought asylum certainly would have endangered her.

A far more serious question raised by the Hu Na affair is whether the United States is consistent in determining who receives political asylum and who does not. Disregarding her celebrity status, is Hu Na more deserving of asylum than the thousands of Haitians and Salvadorans who seek refuge here?

The Hu Na episode probably will evolve into nothing more than a minor footnote in the history of Chinese-American relations. But before she is forgotten, the administration ought to examine the country's asylum process for possible reform.

Another View:

Soviet intimidation

The U.S. movements for a nuclear freeze and unilateral disarmament seem to have succeeded in one respect.

They have caused a great many Americans to believe that the Soviets are genuinely interested in reaching a fair, balanced agreement on reducing nuclear arms when, in reality, there is no evidence the Russians are interested in anything other than increasing their nuclear superiority.

It's been reported that the Soviets have developed a new, long-range, land-based cruise missile which they may deploy on mobile launchers as a fresh threat to Europe.

This news seems to have come as a surprise to those who had accepted the word of the nuclear freeze and unilateral disarmament spokesmen that Russian leaders are reasonable people who want to reduce the threat of nuclear war in Europe and elsewhere.

The fact is that the Soviet communist rulers are not reasonable people.

There is nothing reasonable about holding power by force.

There is nothing reasonable in the way the Soviets crush dissent in their country.

There is nothing reasonable about their brutal war in Afghanistan.

There is nothing reasonable about their use of "yellow rain" and other chemical-biological weapons against those resisting communist forces in Afghanistan and Southeast Asia.

There is nothing reasonable about supporting guerrilla wars to communize Central America.

So it should come as no surprise that the Soviets are adding a cruise weapon to a nuclear arsenal aimed against West European targets. They already have an arsenal of 350 intermediate-range triple-warhead SS-20s, along with several hundred SS-5s and SS-4s, that gives them total superiority over Western Europe.

As the exiled Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn has written, the Soviet leadership is dedicated to extending its military superiority until it can gain its ends without firing a shot. The goal is to become so superior that West European leaders will conclude it is futile to try to match the Russian buildup and seek negotiations on Soviet terms.

Thus is could be fatal to the West to fall into a state of mind that assumes the Soviet buildup is going to stop any day now, and that soon the Russians are going to get serious about nuclear arms reduction. What they are going to get serious about is intimidating Western Europe and frightening U.S. allies into halting deployment of 572 U.S. Pershing II and cruise missiles that is supposed to start at the end of this year.

If the Russians succeed in their goal, it would be only a matter of time before their "aim of terror" against Western Europe could enable the Kremlin to Finlandize the NATO countries.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Admirals trying to sink critic

WASHINGTON — This may be the Pentagon's best-kept secret — and Navy spokesman officially deny it's even happening — but some ambitious admirals are quietly trying to scuttle the Board of Inspection and Survey, headed by one of the nation's most respected war heroes, Adm. John D. Bulkeley.

Jack Anderson

What bothers the brass is that Bulkeley insists on subjecting Navy and Marine aircraft to rigid testing before they're turned over to the men who fly them. So the admirals have secretly tried to change naval regulations — the Navy's Bible — to keep Bulkeley's experts from evaluating new naval aircraft.

The reason the admirals are surreptitious in their efforts to undercut Bulkeley is that he is a living legend. No swivel-chair admiral in his right mind would openly challenge a man who won the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Navy Cross, two Distinguished Service Crosses and two Silver Stars in World War II combat.

Bulkeley was a PT-boat skipper with young John F. Kennedy in the Pacific, and also distinguished himself during the Normandy invasion in 1944. A movie, "They Were Expendable," was based on his exploits in the frail plywood torpedo boats.

Medals and celebrity status aside, Bulkeley is known as a gruff, plain-spoken Navy professional who is stubbornly insistent on the kind of details that keep ships afloat, planes in the air — and Navy men alive. Among the unfavorable reviews his office has produced were critiques of the $22.5 million F-18 fighter, which failed operational tests, and the Lamps anti-submarine helicopter, which didn't cut the mustard in Bulkeley's view.

Among Bulkeley's critics is Adm. Robert Monroe, the Navy's director of research, development, evaluation and testing. Sources told my associates Donald Goldberg and Indy Badhwar that Monroe has been upset about the unkind words Bulkeley's board has had for the Navy's new weapons, and has responded with some vituperative memos directed at Bulkeley personally.

It's an ironic antagonism: Monroe himself used to head the Navy's Operational Test and Evaluation Force. In that capacity, he was himself an outspoken advocate of strict operational testing of new weapons.

Now, however, Monroe is responsible for developing the new weapons that are evaluated by Bulkeley's Board of Inspection and Survey. In other words, he's in a position where he doesn't welcome the kind of criticism he used to dish out.

If this were just another personality battle between Pentagon prima donnas, it would rate no more than a couple of paragraphs. But what Monroe and his fellow admirals seem determined to do is get rid of the Navy's only effective, independent, incorruptible critic of grandiose weapons systems.

Adm. Hyman Rickover was another cantankerous maverick who made waves by insisting on quality; now he's gone. Can the Navy afford to get rid of another old pro by dropping Bulkeley over the side?

STILL AT IT: You remember Peter Bibko, the Environmental Protection Agency big shot who prefers to travel by chauffeured limousine instead of the train, because he likes the reading lamps in his government car? I reported on his lordly habits on Feb. 24, noting that his favored mode of travel was costing the taxpayers more money than train or plane would have.

Four days later, an unrepentant Bibko once again had his chauffeur drive him and another person from his Philadelphia regional office to Washington, where he testified at a hearing the next day. The chauffeur then returned Bibko to New Jersey.

According to travel vouchers submitted later, the trip cost you and me $177.25 — $100.25 for Bibko's expenses and $77 for his chauffeur's. That's substantially more than it would have cost if Bibko had traveled alone by train.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige's campaign to encourage clear, straightforward writing in official documents has drawn mixed reviews among his subordinates. On the first day of a three-lecture course on simple English, many of those who were supposed to attend didn't show up. But the Air Force officer who taught the course was "an incredible performer," according to a department spokesman, who said, "By the second day, the word got around and the place was packed." Other federal agencies — even the White House — have shown interest. Not everyone is impressed, though. "It's an insult to us on a personal and professional level," grumbled one bureaucrat.

— Operation Exodus, the Customs Service program to catch illegal exports of high-technology items by spot checks at dockside, has been less than a rousing success. An investigator sent to the West Coast by Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., found that the overworked customs inspectors assigned to the operation — five in Portland, seven in Seattle — had uncovered only minor infractions of the export rules through the spot checks, while tying up shipments for hours on end. The few big cases uncovered were the result of tips from business competitors or intelligence agencies.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Envoy sways Latin journalists

WASHINGTON — When John Gavin, U.S. ambassador to Mexico, ended his address the Argentine newsman commended, approvingly, "Why, he speaks Spanish well."

William Giandoni

Mexicans who heard the reporter could have added "and so have all the recent U.S. ambassadors to Mexico," with the exception of President Carter's political appointee.

Gavin, a political appointee, too, has spoken Spanish all his life, having first learned it at his mother's knee.

The fact is, though, that most U.S. presidents have been quite deliberate in their selection of ambassadors to Mexico, if only in tacit recognition of the importance to the United States of the neighboring Aztec republic.

Gavin himself sought to explain how much Mexico means to the United States in the talk he gave the recent meeting that the Inter American Press Association held here.

"The U.S. Embassy in Mexico is the largest we have in the world," the 51-year-old actor-businessman-diplomat said. It employs 465 U.S. and 735 Mexican citizens throughout the country, in the embassy proper in Mexico City, in four consulates general, five consulates and nine consular agencies. They include personnel from 26 U.S. government agencies, Gavin said.

"The mission is so large because of the vast web of common undertakings that have grown up between our two nations."

Gavin pointed to "the fact that a million people cross the (U.S.-Mexico) border legally each day," something that often is overshadowed by reports of the several thousand illegal entries that are made daily.

"There is not a friendlier, more open border between two nations at different stages of development anywhere in the world," Gavin said.

He emphasized the deep commitment of the United States to maintaining friendship between the peoples of the two countries, and affirmed that "it is in our vital interests that Mexico be a strong, a free and a prosperous neighbor."

"No harm can come to Mexico that will not, eventually, do injury to my own people as well," the U.S. envoy said.

Gavin remarked about the comparatively little attention paid Mexico in most of the U.S. press, at least until 1979, by which time Mexico was well on its way to becoming one of the world's leading oil producers and, now, "the major source of oil imports into the United States."

In more recent months, though, inflation, devaluations of the peso, foreign debt problems, the shortage of foreign currency and weakness in world oil markets have combined to cause Mexico difficult times. But that doesn't mean that "Mexico is 'going down the tubes,'" Gavin said.

"The same country, the same people, the same resources are here as were here in 1979. Patently times were better then; patently they are tougher now."

Mexico has not "become a wasteland or anything like it today," Gavin said, pleading "a more realistic notion of life in Mexico" be offered U.S. newspaper readers and TV viewers in the United States.

Of course, he said, many Mexicans have "their own basic misunderstanding of how our (U.S.) society works." Some of them reacted to U.S. press and television predictions of imminent social and political instability in Mexico by concluding "that a conspiracy was afoot, in which the U.S. government was orchestrating the output of the major news organizations of the United States in an effort to destabilize Mexico," Gavin said.

He made it clear that he recognizes that "the U.S. government doesn't give orders to the American press. ... That the U.S. press is quite capable of making its own errors, without any assistance from my government."

But, over and above that, Gavin stressed that "we must recognize an overriding fact, that is, that we accept that our nations have become interdependent. There is no rational basis for supposing that U.S. policy could be directed against Mexico. That would be self-destructive. It simply makes no sense."

"That is one major reason why we have come forth with advance payments (to Mexico) for oil purchases credit guarantees for agricultural purchases, and many examples of private cooperation as well.

"Our own interests demand that we help our neighbor," Gavin affirmed.

The ambassador could have, but didn't, mention that, in addition to being the United States' principal supplier of foreign oil, Mexico is the United States' third most important trading partner, behind only Canada and Japan.

Nevertheless, he made his point in a way that impressed even often-skeptical Latin Americans, including the Argentine who so appreciated Gavin's introductory remarks in Spanish.

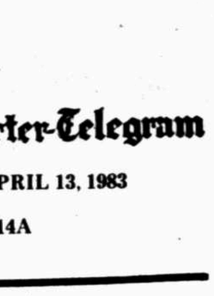
ART BUCHWALD

Physicians find owning 'enriching'

I worry about doctors. Not all doctors. But just the ones who have investments in private hospitals. The reason I worry about them is that when you're a stockholder in a hospital you might have a conflict of interest between doing what is right for the patient, and what is good for the corporation.



Art Buchwald

Dr. Wesley Heights, who owns a piece of the Kidney Stone Memorial Hospital, told me he saw no ethical problem in a doctor investing his money in a private hospital.

"Doctors should own hospitals," he said. "Then they can personally see that their patients get the best treatment money can buy."

"But some people argue," I said, "that if a doctor has a financial interest in a medical facility he may subconsciously hospitalize people, just to keep the occupancy rate up."

"That's ridiculous," Dr. Heights said. "I've never put a patient in Kidney Stone Memorial unless he absolutely needed to be there. The Board of Directors does not pressure me to send them patients. As a matter of fact, I don't even put all my sick people in Kidney Stone. I send many of them to the Sisters of Mercy, which is a nonprofit hospital."

"How do you decide?"

"It's strictly a medical decision. If they have a good health insurance plan, I put them in Kidney Stone. If they don't, I find them a bed at Sisters of Mercy."

"Sisters of Mercy must be thrilled to get all your indigent patients."

"They probably would like more who can pay their way, but Kidney Stone Memorial's computers are not set up to handle non-insured patients, while Sisters of Mercy has been doing it for years. So I know when I send a destitute patient to Sisters he'll get much better treatment than he would at Kidney Stone."

"Will Kidney Stone take a non-insured person?"

"Of course we will if it's a life or death situation. But as a profit-making hospital we owe it to our stockholders to make sure our loss-per-bed is held to a minimum. Some people have accused us of trying to put the nonprofit hospitals out of business. This is not true. We need them as much as they need us."

"Why do they need you?"

"Because we take the burden off them, by providing services for people who can afford them. If we didn't take these patients, they wouldn't be able to accommodate the non-paying patients who also need hospital care."

"I guess what troubles me is not the idea of private hospitals, but the thought that doctors own stock in them. That doesn't bother you?"

"On the contrary. Medical people should own a piece of the hospital they put their patients in. Who knows better how to keep costs down, and make sure the institution is being run at a profit? Private hospital employees are on their toes because they know we're watching them as carefully as we're watching our patients. What makes Kidney Stone a great hospital is that our doctors worry about the bottom line."

"I guess that's the only thing you have to worry about," I said.

"What the heck does that mean?"

"If you worry about the bottom line and your patient, you could have a conflict in medical judgment."

"The patient always comes first," Dr. Heights said angrily. "I don't know one doctor at Kidney Stone who has ever kept a client there longer than was absolutely necessary, unless it was a nice weekend and no one was waiting for the bed."

"You don't have to get sore."

"When I graduated from medical school I took an oath that I would treat all patients alike whether they had Blue Cross, Group Health or Medicare. I've never violated that oath. As a matter of fact, since I became an owner in Kidney Stone Memorial, I've been able to look at medical care not only from the patient's viewpoint but also from the stockholders'. This has made me a better doctor, and richer for the experience."

TODAY IN HISTORY

One year ago: The Reagan administration announced it was going ahead with the sale of military spare parts to Taiwan despite objections from the Chinese governments.

Today's birthdays: Perennial presidential candidate Harold Stassen is 76 years old. Singer Al Green is 37.

Thought for today: "The farther backward you can look, the farther forward you are likely to see." — Winston Churchill, British statesman (1874-1965).

A 30-year-old dream comes true for Chicagoans

CHICAGO (AP) — In 1951, Harold Washington and a handful of black men, all of them dreamers and most of them poor, sat on the kitchen floor in a rickety South Side housing development and vowed to become giants.

Today, 32 years later, their dream has come true.

Washington told his friends he would become "one of the great politicians of all time." And for the 60-year-old congressman, his election Tuesday as the first black mayor of America's second-largest city was more than the fulfillment of a dream.

It was a personal triumph over past tax troubles, a suspension from law practice, and a history of unpaid bills. For his friends and his black constituency, it also was a victory over cynical appeals to racism.

Washington never strayed from the promises he made in the kitchen so many years ago, a longtime friend says.

"We made a commitment to each other, vowed to support one another up and down, hot and cold, feast and famine," recalled Dempsey Travis, a real estate tycoon and author who is one of America's wealthiest blacks.

Among the 11 blacks in Roosevelt University's 1949 graduating class of 575, none was more driven than Washington, a World War II veteran whose infectious personality and voracious reading made him the natural "orchestrator," said Travis.

A sign of things to come was the 1948 election for president of the school senate. White candidates on the left and right split the vote, much as his mayoral primary foes would 25 years later, and Washington slipped in.

Washington was born April 15, 1922, in Chicago, the son of Roy Washington, a Methodist minister and attorney. He served in the Army Air Corps in World War II, and attended Northwestern University law school after college.

A year after getting his law degree, Washington became a Democratic machine precinct captain, filling the vacancy created by the death of his father Roy, who had raised his family as a single parent.

As a loyal party man, Washington was rewarded with patronage jobs, first as a city attorney, then as an arbitrator for the Illinois Industrial Commission. He was elected to the Illinois House in 1964 and served three state Senate terms.

In 1977, five years after Washington served 36 days in jail for failing to file federal income tax returns for four years, a Chicago magazine survey called him one of the 10 best legislators at the Statehouse.

As a legislator, he was known for oratory and humor as well as ardent support for civil rights, the Equal Rights Amendment and pro-union measures.

In 1980, he easily beat incumbent Rep. Bennett M. Stewart in the 1st U.S. congressional district's Democratic primary, a victory tantamount to election. On Capitol Hill, he quickly moved into a highly visible role in the fight for the Voting Rights Extension Act of 1981.

From Capitol Hill, Washington saw increasing black voter registration as a political base for a second mayoral try (he lost in his first attempt in 1977) and jumped with both feet into an exhausting campaign.

Midland's 'new look' Cubs back in town

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland's Cubs are back in town after a winter's absence to open the Texas League season at Cubs Stadium against Beaumont at 7 p.m. tonight.

Tom Harmon, who replaces Brian Murphy as manager, not only brings a lot of new faces to Midland, but a different style of baseball as well. Last year's veteran-studded roster bulged from the biceps with home run power. The 1983 edition of the Cubs will rely on speed, aggressiveness and strong, promising young pitching arms.

THE CUBS exhibited both speed on the bases and good pitching during the Cactus League season in Mesa, Ariz., and even added a little extra punch before breaking camp by adding Randy LaVigne and Tom Lombarski to the club, both of whom played AAA ball last year.

LaVigne played for Midland two years ago and Lombarski played outfield, first and third for Oklahoma City.

This is the 12th season for Chicago in Midland, but marks the second under the Chicago Tribune, Inc., which bought the Chicago Cubs from the Wrigley Company. It also is the second year for the Chicago Cubs' organization under Dallas Green who, as general manager, hopes to reconstruct the Cubs into a National League pennant-contender, much as he did with the Philadelphia Phillies.

THE PHILLIES were a last place club when Green began rebuilding the farm system and it was talent produced on the farm that eventually brought the Phillies a world championship.

Green's plan is to use the same technique in an attempt to bring Chicago its first pennant since 1945. Along that line, the Cubs have added an extra Class A club (Salinas) to help speed the flow of talent. And, this year, a full time pitching coach will be with Midland, Glen Gregson, a North Carolinian who now resides in Helena, Mont.

For fans coming out to Cubs Stadium, there also will be a few changes, according to General Manager Bill Schammel.

"We've painted the entire stadium, put up a new screen in front of the grandstands, doubled the size of the rest rooms and added two new concession stands."

Special nights? "We'll bring the San Diego Chicken in at least once and we hope to bring back Max Patkin, the Clown Prince of Baseball," said Schammel. "We'll also have our annual fireworks night as well as back-to-back Pack-the-Park nights."

AND THERE will be more music than ever from 40 to 125 tapes. "In fact, the organ will be back...on tape," says Schammel. "We taped the organ at Wrigley Field in Chicago. I think the fans will like Ed Bodecka's up tempo."

With Danita Gordan back for a second year in the front office, Schammel feels the operation should be smoother than last year, even. Last year, it will be remembered, wasn't a bad year. The Cubs set an attendance record with 104,000 paid and 71,000 actual.

Lee Velarde, who keeps the Cubs Stadium playing surface looking like a putting green should look, even has a new building to keep dry the dirt he uses to doctor the infield after a rain.

Game time this year is a uniform 7 p.m. for April and May and 7:30 p.m. June through August. Doubleheaders and the July 4 game will begin at 6:30 p.m. all season.

Beaumont, the San Diego Padres farm club which last year played in Amarillo, will be here for five games and will be followed by San Antonio, beginning Monday.

The Cubs will play 72 home games. Once again the season will be played in halves. The first half ends June 18. The winners of the first half in each division will meet in a best-of-three playoff with the survivors from East and West meeting in a best-of-five series to determine the champion. Tulsa beat El Paso for the 1982 championship.

Midland Lee third baseman Darrell Holmes sets up to field a ground ball during Tuesday's District 4-5A game against San Angelo at Lee Field. The Bobcats won 8-7 to move into first place.

Steers beat MHS in 10

BIG SPRING — What Big Spring giveth, Midland High can giveth back.

Throwing errors nearly cost Big Spring a victory in the 10th inning Tuesday but Midland High found its aim to be little better as the Steers pulled out a 9-8 District 4-5A baseball victory here at Steer Park.

The Steers tied the game at 6-6 in the bottom of the seventh inning and the two teams played scoreless ball for two more frames before the Midland High dugout became an unsafe place to sit.

WITH ONE out in the top of the 10th, Jose Carrasco connected for a single and stole second base. Big Spring catcher Marty Rodriquez tried for the pickoff but his throw went into center field, allowing Carrasco to go the third and finally home when Jay Pirkle's throw back to the infield went into the Bulldog dugout.

Though the errors cost the Steers a run, they proved to have little effect on the outcome of the game. Carrasco would have scored anyway since shortstop Doug Daehling drilled a Jinx Valenzuela pitch over the left field fence for his first home run of the year and a Midland High 8-6 lead.

Following the throwing example set by Big Spring, Midland High preceeded to throw the game away. Alan Trevino led off with a triple to right center field and was awarded home when Daehling's relay throw went into the Bulldog dugout.

Matt Warren followed with a walk, stole second and ended up on third after second baseman Darren Thorpe missed a throw from catcher Tommy Davis. One out later Rodriquez made up for his previous bad aim with a double into left to tie the game at 8-8. Valenzuela preserved his victory with a hit up the middle, allowing Warren to score under the high throw from centerfielder James Pitts.

The victory moves Big Spring into a three-way tie for third place at 5-4 with Odessa High and Abilene High. San Angelo, by virtue of an 8-7 win over Midland Lee, is in first place at 7-2 followed by the Rebels at 6-3.

THE BRONCHOS could have moved into second place but 13 runs proved to be too few as Abilene Cooper jumped out to an 11-2 lead enroute to a 17-13 victory. Abilene High was also a high scorer with a 14-7 victory.

Down by nine, OHS scored two runs in the third and seven in the fourth to tie the game at 11 only to see Cooper pick up six more runs in the next two innings to hold on for the win.

Eight pitchers went to the mound for the two teams including three Cooper relievers in the fourth inning before the Cougars could find a stopper and preserve the victory.

The Abilene High Eagles had to overcome a slow start to get past Odessa Permian for their 14-7 win.

Trailing 7-2 after two, the Eagles began to pick up steam and used a 20-hit attack to gain the victory and a portion of third place. The two teams only used five pitchers in that game.

On Saturday, Midland High will return home for a game against Cooper while Odessa High hosts Big Spring in a key third place matchup and Odessa Permian travels to San Angelo. Lee will be looking to hang onto second place when the Rebels travel to Abilene High.

Midland Lee and Big Spring broke out of the pack early in the 4-5A race and Lee held as much as a two-game lead before dropping three in a row to tumble out of first place. San Angelo got the slow start, losing two games to start the campaign, but has come back with seven straight wins in the wild league happenings.

Only five games remain to be played in district action and if the current surges continue, just about any of the two teams in the league could wind up in the playoffs.

Bobcats shake Lee from 4-5A lead

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

A disastrous fourth inning, which saw seven runs score on seven hits and one error, proved to be Midland Lee's downfall Tuesday as San Angelo held on to post an 8-7 victory to claim first place in District 4-5A baseball standings.

After going three innings, giving up only one run on four hits, Lee starting pitcher John Denton lost his stuff in the fourth and the Bobcats were ready to take advantage of the situation. Before coach Ernie Johnson could call for reliever Kerry Robertson, three runs would cross home plate and another runner would be standing on second.

Robertson is Johnson's favorite stopper when things get shakey and had he made a stronger start, Lee might have escaped with a 7-4 win. Instead, with one out, he gave up back-to-back singles to allow the fourth run of the inning to score.

Third baseman Darrell Holmes followed by mishandling a potential double play ball and had to settle for getting Ray Valadez at first, allowing Scott Bingham and Henry Klepac to advance to second and third. Both runners ended up scoring when shortstop Barry Blackwell, after making an excellent effort to get to the ball, misfired a throw to first on an Eddie Franco grounder. Franco would score the eventual winning run on Mark Smith's double to center field, his second hit of the inning.

"They stood up there and hit the ball in that one inning," said Johnson. "We had a chance to get out of it though. Darrell (Holmes) bobbled one at third in a possible double play situation and Barry (Blackwell) threw one away at first. If we could have gotten the double play, we could have gotten out giving up only two or three runs."

It was the final bit of offense San Angelo would show as Robertson settled down in the last three innings, giving up only one hit (a triple to Klepac, who went 4-for-4) while striking out six to give his team a chance at getting back in the game.

"Kerry did a real good job," said Johnson. "I'm glad to see him settle down and be effective. He hasn't been that effective in his last two or three outings."

"He might not have been warmed up when he first came in," said San Angelo coach Rex Schofield. "We were able to get to him then."

TRAILING 8-2, the Rebels started a rally in the bottom of the fifth which produced three runs off reliever Jeff Schkade, who was in for Jim Osborn. Pinch runner Keith McDonald, Steve Woodlee and Holmes scored on singles by Rob Walker and Dennis Matta to cut the lead to 8-5.

In the next frame, first baseman Mike Mercurio began a second charge when he drew a walk followed by a single by Sergio Ochoa and a walk by Woodlee. Holmes' single over the outstretched glove of Bobcat shortstop Scott Bingham made it an 8-7 ball game and Schofield called on reliever Lance Harris to end the inning.

Matta, Lee's leading hitter with a 4-for-4 performance, collected his final hit of the game in the seventh inning and moved into scoring position on Jimmy Arthur's sacrifice bunt only to get caught off base on Darren Webb's line drive to second-baseman Valadez to end the game.

"They hit the ball well and that first pitcher (Osborn) of theirs was a real chunker," said Johnson. "I was surprised when they took him out."

Osborn was having problems with his arm and took himself out of the game.

"He came to me after the fourth and said 'my arm is bothering me and I can't go anymore,' so we came in with our other starter Jeff Schkade and his arm was bothering him a bit too," said Scofield. "Harris came in and did a good job for us. He's done it all year."

WITH THE victory, San Angelo has gone from the bottom of the league's standings to the top. The Bobcats dropped their first two games of district play and have since reeled off seven straight for their 7-2 record. Lee, after a 6-0 start, is trailing by one game at 6-3 and suddenly the road to a state playoff berth is getting longer.

"Every time you lose it gets a little tougher," said Johnson. "There are fewer games left to catch up. We're now one behind and we may even be tied for second."

Almost tied. Odessa High, going into its game against Abilene Cooper with a 5-3 record, suffered a 17-13 loss on the Cougars' home field, leaving the Bronchos, Big Spring and Abilene High in a three-way tie for third.

"We've just got to keep trying to improve and keep our poise and everything," said Johnson. "We were mentally ready to play today but didn't quite get there. We have some hard games coming up on the road, in Abilene twice and at Permian. Now we're thinking about maintaining the one or two spot to get into the playoffs."

Lee will play the first of its two Abilene games on Saturday against Abilene High at 2 p.m.

FBI reports Schlichter phone calls

BALTIMORE (AP) — Thirty-three, long-distance phone calls were made to Baltimore bookmakers — mostly to place bets — during a three-month period after the 1982-83 National Football League season ended, according to an FBI affidavit filed in the Art Schlichter case.

The affidavit, which never referred to the Baltimore Colts quarterback by name, said a "private citizen ... advised he placed illegal gambling bets" between January and March.

But an FBI agent familiar with the affidavit said Tuesday the 11-page document referred to the Schlichter case. "It's the individual whom the newspapers would be interested in," agent Bob Braver said when asked if Schlichter was the "private citizen."

The affidavit, filed March 31 in U.S. District Court, said the phone calls were placed to Baltimore telephone numbers and "the purpose of most of the calls was to place gambling bets."

Schlichter, 22, a former Ohio State University football star, lost $389,000 betting on basketball games during a 10-week period this year and still owed $159,000 to gamblers, according to published reports and law enforcement sources.

He contacted the FBI and began cooperating in an investigation of sports gambling after bookmakers reportedly pressed him for payment and threatened to tell the Colts about his gambling.

Meanwhile, the Colts refused to comment on reports they planned to trade Schlichter, the team's first-round draft pick last ye

Diablos pelt Midland with big nine-run sixth

EL PASO — The Midland Cubs ended up splitting four games with the El Paso Diablos in the 1983 opening Texas League series between the two teams after dropping an 11-9 decision here Friday night.

El Paso hammered Midland pitching for nine runs in the sixth inning to make the difference in the game as Bill Max highlighted the uprising with a two-run homer, his third of the young season. Juan Castillo and Joe Henderson both had two-run hits in the inning. Max drove in three runs for the Diablos overall.

Midland made an effort at a comeback with four runs in the eighth and five in the ninth. Tom Lombarski, Randy LaVigne and Terry Brooks all drove in runs in the eighth while Lombarski, LaVigne and Don Hyman had RBIs in the ninth to go with Brooks' two-run single.

All of Midland's runs in the ninth were unearned as El Paso committed two errors and the Cubs scored all five times with two outs. Still, the rally was two runs short.

Midland's Doug Welenc, who was 13-10 with a 4.60 ERA last year at Midland, absorbed the loss.

Gilliam is Cinderella without slipper

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joe Gilliam's return to pro football Monday night was like Cinderella without the glass slipper - a beautiful story with an unhappy ending.

Gilliam disregarded the pain of new injuries and the hurt of eight years of frustration Monday night in a valiant but losing effort as the Washington Federals lost a heartbreaking 22-21 decision to the Arizona Wranglers.

In 1974, Joe Gilliam, the quarterback with the rifle arm from Tennessee State, was a star. Jefferson Street Joe was the toast of Pittsburgh as he started the first six games of the season compiling a 4-1-1 record in what eventually would be the Steelers first Super Bowl season.

Benched in favor of Terry Bradshaw in the seventh game, Gilliam spent the remainder of his NFL career coming off the bench.

His playing time reduced, Gilliam found solace in drugs, an expensive habit that eventually would cost him his career.

In 1975, Gilliam mopped up in a game against Cleveland and threw a 45-yard touchdown pass to Reggie Garrett. He would not throw another in pro ball for eight years.

Waived by the Steelers prior to the 1976 season, Gilliam failed in two tryouts with the New Orleans Saints and then spent five years in football's minor leagues, playing for the Pittsburgh Wolf Pack, Baltimore Eagles and New Orleans Knights.

"I never got discouraged playing in the minors," Gilliam remembered. "I always knew I was going to get to play pro football."

Three weeks ago, the Washington Federals, the losingest team in the United States Football League, gave him a call.

"I can still play, still zing the ball," said the now 31-year-old Gilliam who weighs some 10 pounds more than the 175 he carried as a Steeler.

On Monday, Gilliam's first three passes were incomplete. His fifth was intercepted.

On the Federals' third possession, Gilliam brought a crowd of 13,936 to their feet throwing a 42-yard bomb on the run to Joey Walters.

Steve Renko fulfills 18-year dream

By The Associated Press

Steve Renko waited a long time to get home. Or, at least, close to home.

Renko fulfilled a long-time goal when he started for Kansas City on Tuesday night and pitched six strong innings in the Royals' 5-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

"It took me 18 years to get here, but I made it," said the 38-year-old Renko, who was born in Kansas City, Kansas, and later played football at the University of Kansas in the same backfield with Gale Sayers. "Everybody wants to play in his hometown. All I want do is help this team get into the World Series."

Renko had wanted to come to Kansas City in 1979 as a free agent, and was disappointed when the Royals did not draft him. He instead went to Boston and then to California before being released. He then signed with Kansas City.

But for his good effort Tuesday — he gave up one run on seven hits — he did not get the victory. That went to reliever Mike Armstrong, 1-1, who benefited from Kansas City's four-run eighth inning that was triggered by Frank White's run-scoring single.

Rangers 2, Indians 1

Texas ran its record to 6-1 as Dave Hostetler drove in both Ranger runs with a solo homer and a bases-loaded walk.

Rick Honeycutt, 2-0, scattered seven hits in seven innings. Odell Jones pitched the ninth inning for his second save.

American League Roundup

Tigers 13, Yankees 2

Tom Brookens homered, doubled and singled twice as Detroit spoiled Billy Martin's home debut before 55,579 fans, the largest crowd ever at a Yankee Stadium opener.

Martin, starting his third term as manager of the Yankees, watched Ron Guidry suffer through his second straight poor outing as he gave up six runs in 5⅓ innings. Guidry, 0-1, now has been raked for 10 runs and 13 hits in eight innings this season.

Orioles 10, White Sox 8

First, Baltimore shelled Floyd Bannister in racing to an early 7-0 lead. Then the White Sox pounded Mike Flanagan in taking an 8-7 advantage. Finally, Rick Dempsey drilled a two-out, two-run double in a three-run seventh as the Orioles rallied to win.

John Shelby's solo homer and Gary Roenicke's three-run blast helped stake Baltimore to its big lead before Tony Bernazard and Tom Paciorek cracked consecutive homers and Ron Kittle added a two-run shot for the White Sox.

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 5

Paul Molitor doubled in Jim Gantner, who had doubled, to snap a 5-5 tie in the eighth inning as Milwaukee's Don Sutton evened his record at 1-1.

Molitor had three hits, including his game-winner off Mike Morgan.

Mariners 8, Angels 1

Right-hander Bob Stoddard pitched a five-hitter and Orlando Mercado's two-run double highlighted a six-run sixth inning.

A's 4, Twins 3

Bill Almon lined a two-out single in the bottom of the 14th inning to score Bob Kearney from second base and give Oakland its come-from-behind victory.

Home is bummer for Bucs

By The Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Pirates' road show was a huge success. It was their home opener that was a bummer.

After reeling off five straight victories on the road, the Pirates returned home Tuesday where they fell 4-3 in 10 innings to the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I'll take five out of six all season long and like our chances," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner.

While Pittsburgh was losing its first game, the Cubs were tasting victory for the first time this season, blanking Montreal 5-0.

"I read an article in the paper that the trout season was just around the corner. Maybe they're right," said Cubs pitcher Steve Trout, who scattered nine hits before needing ninth-inning relief help. "I think the team needed this win more than I did."

The Cardinals broke a 3-3 tie in the top of the 10th, then had to stave off a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the bottom of the inning.

"If you had taken odds on that at Las Vegas, you would have gotten tremendous odds," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said of Bill Madlock's grounding into a pitcher-to-home-to-first double play. Gene Tenace then lined out to end the game.

Cubs 5, Expos 0

Keith Moreland cracked a three-run homer in the first inning as Chicago posted its first triumph of the season.

The Cubs, winless in their first six starts, jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning, then boosted their margin to 5-0 in the third when Leon Durham hit a solo homer.

Braves 4, Reds 1

Rick Behenna, making his major league debut, hurled a two-hitter for five innings and singled his first two trips to the plate to lead Atlanta over Cincinnati.

"I think I overdid it a little," Behenna said, referring to his not being able to go the distance. "I think I was trying too hard at times."

Atlanta Manager Joe Torre said he removed the 23-year-old right-hander after the fifth because "he got tired."

Behenna, who jumped from Class AA to the majors, yielded only two singles to Cesar Cedeno and an unearned run in his five innings. Rick Mahler came in to pitch three scoreless innings and Terry Forster finished up in the ninth.

Dale Murphy homered in the eighth for Atlanta.

Phillies 4, Mets 3

A bases-loaded, two-out single by Larry Milbourne in the bottom of the 10th inning gave Philadelphia its come-from-behind victory over New York.

The Mets had taken a 3-2 lead into the bottom of the ninth before Pete Rose's sacrifice fly scored Bob Dernier with the tying run. That denied Tom Seaver his first victory since returning to the Mets in a trade with Cincinnati last winter.

Seaver pitched seven innings, allowing five hits and two runs, walking four and striking out four.

Dodgers 3, Astros 1

Pedro Guerrero, Steve Yeager and Greg Brock socked solo homers and Alejandro Pena was strong in his first big-league start as Houston lost its eighth straight game to remain the only winless team in the majors.

Pena, 2-0, scattered six singles in 6⅔ innings and Steve Howe gave up one hit the rest of the way. Vern Ruhle, 0-1, lost his seventh consecutive game to Los Angeles.

Giants 6, Padres 5

Chili Davis homered twice and Fred Breining continued his success over San Diego as the Padres lost their rain-delayed home opener before a crowd of 45,397.

Davis, who now has four homers this season, had a two-run blast in the first and a solo homer in the fourth. Breining, who pitched seven strong innings, is now 5-0 lifetime against San Diego.

Steve Garvey, making his home debut for the Padres, homered and doubled.

Life at the top of the NBA is a mass of arms as Seattle's Danny Vranes (23) proves by blocking a shot by Portland's Calvin Natt (33).

Atlanta moves closer to playoffs

By The Associated Press

The game had the intensity of the playoffs, and for Atlanta it was just as important.

The Hawks, locked in a tight battle with New York and Washington for the last two Eastern Conference playoff spots, moved into fifth place ahead of both teams Tuesday night with a 102-97 National Basketball Association victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

Tree Rollins and Tom McMillen fouled out for the Hawks, who also committed four technical fouls. But that was offset by six technicals against Philadelphia, which clinched first place in the East weeks ago.

"It was a big game. We're just trying to get in the playoffs and now we're in fifth place," said Dominique Wilkins, who scored 26 points for Atlanta and put the Hawks ahead for good with 2:03 left in the game. "There were a lot of Ts, but they were on both teams. It was very much like a playoff game. It was real intense."

"I've seen more intense games, but they were in the playoffs," said Hawks forward Dan Roundfield. "It was a must game. We had to win, there was no question about that. There's added pressure when you have that situation."

Kansas City's triumph and Portland's loss left them tied for fifth in the West, one game ahead of Denver. Two of those three teams will make the playoffs, and they all have three games remaining.

NBA Roundup

Kings 112, Bulls 102

Kansas City won an important road game as backup guard Mike Woodson hit 11 of 16 field goals and 12 of 14 free throws for 34 points.

The Kings, who have won four games in a row, also got 27 points from Larry Drew as they handed Chicago its seventh consecutive loss.

Jazz 125, Nuggets 116

Utah hurt Denver's playoff hopes as Darrell Griffith scored 30 points and Rickey Green added 28 points and 12 assists for the Jazz.

Green hit a three-point shot at the halftime buzzer to give Utah a 72-65 lead, and the Jazz held on in the fourth period after extending the margin to 103-91 after three quarters.

Sonics 106, Blazers 101

Seattle clinched the homecourt advantage in the first round of the playoffs as Jack Sikma scored 24 points and Gus Williams hit 10 in the fourth period against Portland.

The Sonics, who have won eight straight games and 15 of their last 17, went ahead for good at 96-95 on a basket by Sikma. Then Williams hit two straight baskets to make it 100-95 with 3:39 left.

Suns 115, Warriors 108

Maurice Lucas scored six of his 22 points during a 12-0 spurt that carried Phoenix past Golden State.

The Warriors, who got 39 points from Joe Barry Carroll, led 100-97 with six minutes remaining, but they didn't score again until the final minute, and by then the Suns led 109-100.

Celtics 99, Nets 93

Kevin McHale had 20 points and 14 rebounds in relief of the injured Larry Bird to lead Boston past New Jersey.

With Bird at home resting a pulled groin muscle, McHale helped the Celtics overcome a season-high 33 turnovers to win their seventh game in eight outings.

Lakers 114, Rockets 113

Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 31 points for Los Angeles, including six in the final two minutes, and fed forward Kurt Rambis for the game-winning layup with six seconds left against Houston.

The Rockets, who have won just 14 of 79 games, led 104-90 with seven minutes left, but Johnson had five points during an 8-0 spurt to get the Lakers close. Three straight layups by Johnson gave Los Angeles a 112-111 lead with 36 seconds left, and after Allen Leavell gave Houston a 113-112 edge at the 22-second mark, Johnson made his decisive pass.

Wolfpack finally loses one in closing minutes

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's championship basketball team finally lost one in the closing minutes Tuesday when the NCAA ruled it could not accept a company's offer to pay for a trip to meet President Reagan.

Capitol Broadcasting Co., based in Raleigh, had offered to pay for the trip to Washington after it learned the university could not pay the team's way. Air fare for each player was $118. The total fare for 15 players would be $1,770.

Reagan invited the team to the White House after it won the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship on April 4 in Albuquerque, N.M., beating Houston 54-52.

The team was to meet with Reagan Monday, but the trip was delayed while the NCAA's administrative council discussed whether to make an exception to rules that limit postseason travel outside a 100-mile limit.

University Chancellor Bruce R. Pwaid he was notified Tuesday by NCAA president John Toner after the five-member administrative committee voted in a conference call not to make an exception for State.

Poulton said he will work at the NCAA's next meeting to change the rule and said Toner promised to supports his efforts.

The NCAA said the rules can only be changed at the NCAA convention. The next convention is scheduled for January 1984.

David Berst, director of enforcement for the NCAA, said permission was denied because the trip because it was not connected with intercollegiate competition or an established award.

He said similar requests from North Carolina, Indiana, and last year for the Alabama football team also were denied. He said the only way for team members to make the trip is to pay their own way.

"We have to determine what is appropriate for these individuals. Frankly, they can spend from now until the end of the academic year making trips and I don't believe that's what intercollegiate athletics was designed to do," Berst said.

Poulton said the invitation to the White House "was more than a social visit."

Indiana's Knight predicts Longhorns will be power

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Longhorn basketball team — perhaps the worst in the school's history — will be battling among the nation's top 20 within four years, predicts Indiana Coach Bobby Knight.

Knight, whose teams have won NIT and NCAA championships, came to Texas Monday night at the request of his former assistant and current Longhorn mentor, Bob Weltlich.

Weltlich's first Texas team, which was riddled by defections and injuries, had a 6-22 record and was last in the Southwest Conference.

Nevertheless, his first Longhorn basketball banquet Monday was billed as a sellout with over 400 tickets sold at $15 each.

Houston Yates' Craven Holcombe, generally regarded as the No. 2 schoolboy player in the state, was among the recruits at the banquet.

Knight spoke to Texas' current players in private for 20 minutes.

Chaparrals sign Chuckie Graves

The Midland College Chaparrals have signed their first potential player for the 1983-84 basketball season, Dallas Kimball guard Chuckie Graves.

At 18-plus points per game, the 6-foot-2½ Graves led the District 12-5A Knights into the Region II finals where they were defeated by eventual state champion Bryan.

"I was a little surprised he signed this early," said MC head coach Jerry Stone. "He's the first guy to sign this year. He's a great shooter and a good kid."

Though he led his team in scoring his senior year, Graves was playing in the shadow of teammate Dwayne Brown, who is currently being sought after by most of the Southwest Conference schools as well as others around the nation.

MC may also have a shot at landing Dallas Skyline's Cedric Walker, a 6-5 forward. Walker reportedly has narrowed his choices to Midland College, Sam Houston State and Paris Junior College.

The Dallas Morning News reports that MC's Spud Webb has eliminated North Texas State from his list since he will graduate this spring. Webb apparently has narrowed his choices to Bradley, N.C. State and Oklahoma City University, where Abe Lemons was named coach Saturday.

UT shot putter tries to bite through cuffs

Compiled from Wire Reports

University of Texas shot putter Oskar Jakobsson was arrested early Sunday and charged with public intoxication and resisting arrest after a scuffle with police officers outside a night club near the campus. Once the police had Jakobsson in a squad car, reported officer Stephen Forman, the 6-foot-5, 260-pound shot putter began biting the chains of the handcuffs. Jakobsson, a 28-year-old native of Reykjavik, Iceland, was taken to city jail and released on his recognizance.

Jim Bush, the UCLA track coach for 19 years, is retiring at the end of the 1984 season. Bush, 56, has guided the Bruins to four NCAA championships and seven Pacific-8 or Pacific-10 titles in the past 18 years. UCLA had its string of 34 consecutive dual meet victories snapped last weekend by the Oregon Ducks, only the 19th dual meet loss for Bush in 19 season. Bush said of his Monday: "I've always said that I wanted to retire before I was 60 to do other things. When I started coaching, I set certain goals and I've reached every goal."

Basketball

Texas Tech's assistant basketball coach, Brad Adkins, has resigned to enter private business, school officials have announced. Athletic Director John Conley said the search for a replacement would begin immediately.

Jo Jo White and Bob Hill will be retained as assistant basketball coaches at the University of Kansas, new Coach Larry Brown said Tuesday. White, a former Kansas and NBA star, and Hill were assistants under former Coach Ted Owens, who was fired last month after 19 seasons at the Jayhawks helm. "I certainly appreciate all of the work and efforts that Ted Owens put into making the Kansas basketball program what it is," said Brown. "And in order to keep the progress at its high level of achievement, I felt it necessary to keep continuity among the staff and players.

New North Texas State basketball Coach Tommy Newman says that he can recruit some "quality" players, even though signing day is Wednesday. "Wednesday will be the first (signing) day, but we will try to use the entire month of May and I think we will be able to get some quality people," Newman said.

Football

The Texas-Texas A&M football game this fall, originally scheduled for Thanksgiving Day and then moved to Friday for national television, has been pushed back another day to Saturday, Nov. 26. ABC will televise the game from College Station with an 11:20 a.m. kickoff.

Baseball

Former Midland Cubs pitcher Mike Krukow, obtained by the San Francisco Giants this year in a trade for Joe Morgan, will be on the disabled list for 21 days with an inflamed right elbow. The team announced that it would likely bring up right-handed Mark Calvert, who was cut by the team in spring training, for a three-game series opening Tuesday night in San Diego.

Rickey Henderson finished the first week of the baseball season with one stolen base, a turtle-like pace for the man who set a major league record with 130 last year. That first steal of 1983 came in the Oakland A's opening game, and he hasn't attempted one since. But there have been few situations where a stolen base attempt was practical or needed. "I think that's kind of cool," the A's star said after ripping a double and a single, walking once and scoring two runs in Sunday's 11-4 victory over the California Angels.

A fire that broke out Tuesday morning at Crockett Park, home of the Charlotte O's minor league baseball team, was described by firemen as "very, very bad." Dozens of firefighters were battled the blaze through mid-morning. Firemen said the two-alarm fire apparently started in the concession area.

Utah loses Jerry Pimm

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Jerry Pimm, who led Utah into the NCAA tournament in five of his nine seasons as head basketball coach, resigned Tuesday to become coach at the University of California-Santa Barbara.

Pimm made the announcement at a morning news conference where Utah Athletic Director Arnie Ferrin named Pimm's assistant, Lynn Archibald, as the Utes' new coach.

"This is the toughest decision I've ever made," Pimm said. "We have so many great friends here, but this is a great opportunity professionally and a great opportunity for me and my wife to start a new life."

PIMM, 44, has been at Utah since 1961 as an assistant or head coach. He compiled a 173-86 overall record and his 88-42 Western Athletic Conference record was tops among active league coaches. Utah was 18-14 in 1982-83.

Archibald, 38, joined Pimm's staff a year ago after resigning as head coach at Idaho State, where he fashioned a 66-66 record from 1977 to 1982.

Pimm, whose Utes finished in a three-way tie for the WAC title this year and upset Illinois and UCLA in the NCAA tournament, served as an assistant to Jack Gardner and Bill Foster before becoming head coach at Utah in 1974.

As a player, Pimm was a three-year starter at the University of Southern California and for two years was named to the All-Coast team before graduation in 1960.

Indy may have father-son drivers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — For the first time in history, a father and son could be racing against each other when the Indy 500 race begins on May 29.

Both Al Unser Jr., who only was 7-years-old when his father won the race for the first time back in 1970, and his dad are pleased with the possibility.

"Little Al didn't have to be a race driver," said Al Sr., who will be driving for the highly successful Roger Penske racing team this year as he seeks to join A.J. Foyt as a four-time winner here.

"BUT, IT is something I've always wanted. I always thought that someday it would be nice, if this could happen and luckily it has. So, it's neat," said Al Sr., who will celebrate his 44th birthday on the day of this year's race.

There's been an Unser driving in the Indy 500 since Bobby Unser, Al's older brother, made his debut in 1963. Bobby announced his retirement from Indy driving last year after also winning the race three times.

"I guess when you're an Unser, you're born to race," said Al Jr., 20. "I'm an Unser and I'm glad of it."

The son, who shares a snowmobile dealership in Albuquerque, N.M., with his father, started driving go-carts when he was 9. He later drove sprint cars and won the national supervee championship in 1981. Last year, he moved into the Can-Am series and another national tile.

Like other Speedway rookies, Al Jr. is participating in an orientation at the 2½-mile oval track conducted by the U.S. Auto Club this week. The session is provided to assist drivers who have had limited experience in champ cars.

THE YOUNGER Unser comes to the Speedway with only one champ car start — a fifth at Riverside, Calif., last year.

"We feel we're ready for this. We're most definitely going to try to make the show. That's the reason to come back here next month," he said.

The entry list for the race climbed to 93 Tuesday with six new entries announced by Speedway officials. The list included Amber Furst, who became the second woman entered for this year's race.

Furst, a resident of Brightwood, Ore., joins Desire Wilson in the bid to become the second woman to compete here. Janet Guthrie became the first female to qualify for the race in 1977. Guthrie qualified three consecutive years and her best finish was ninth in 1978.

Speedway officials said little information was available on the driving record of Furst, who has driven mainly in sports car events at the Portland International Raceway. She was entered by Rose Pedal Racing Inc. of Portland, Ore. and is scheduled to drive a Drake-Offy — an entry that has not been able to compete with the more powerful Cosworth-engine powered cars in recent years.

WILSON, WHO was entered last week, made her debut at the Speedway last year. However, the South African native who recently moved from England to New York, failed to qualify for the race.

Entries had to be postmarked prior to last Friday and Speedway officials said a few more entries might still be in the mail.

Spurs, Lakers to play doubleheader

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs and the Los Angeles Lakers will play two NBA games here tonight — but one of the games is scheduled to last just three seconds.

The Lakers and Spurs will replay the final three seconds from a protested November 30th game, which Los Angeles won 137-132 in double overtime.

The next game, the regular-season finale between the two clubs, will begin two minutes later.

The disputed game picks up with Los Angeles' Norm Nixon at the free throw line with one toss, and the Spurs up by two points at 116-114.

Nixon had made one free throw to cut San Antonio's lead to the two points with three seconds remaining in the first overtime.

Nixon faked several times while preparing to take the second shot, pulling members of both teams into the lane.

Instead of simply putting the players back in place and shooting the final shot, referees Jack Madden and Ed Middleton called a double lane violation and a jump ball ensued.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar tipped the ball to Nixon, who hit a desperation 15-foot shot to tie the score at 116-116. The Lakers then won it in the second overtime.

San Antonio coach Stan Albeck and the Spurs bench angrily protested when the referees called the double lane violation, but the club's official protest came the next day.

Spurs General Manager Bob Bass prepared a case and sent film of the game and a letter to National Basketball Association Commissioner Larry O'Brien, along with the required $1,500 protest fee.

O'Brien ordered the final three seconds replayed.

Los Angeles has no timeouts remaining in the disputed game, and the Spurs have one timeout and one 20-second timeout.

San Antonio leads the Spurs-Lakers series 2-1, with all three decisions coming in Los Angeles.

Both teams already have qualified for the NBA playoffs, with the Spurs clinching the Midwest Division and the Lakers taking the Pacific Division.

Wallace examines detrimental regulation

Mack Wallace

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Free enterprise and America should be synonymous terms, but they are not so any longer, Mack Wallace told students and the public attending the second in Midland College's Free Enterprise Lecture Series Tuesday morning.

Wallace, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, has championed the free enterprise system in the oil and gas industry since he became a member of the RRC in 1973.

He spoke off-the-cuff Tuesday to illustrate ways legislation has blocked free enterprise in the energy business. Wallace said as a result of governmental interference, energy prices are higher than they should be, and that artifical shortages and gluts have been created through "panic" legislation.

"I call it drilling by legislation, through the stroke of a pen," he said.

The Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 was passed by Congress to regulate interstate gas sales, because it was in a panic about gas shortages in the Northeast.

"They faced a shortage of supply, and the only supply they saw, short-term, was a bubble in Texas. But it was not really a bubble, it was a supply bought and paid for by Texans," Wallace said.

"Privately, they'll tell you the Act preserved the Union.

But, by regulation, you can create a shortage or an abundance. Wallace said. Another example is when Congress pays farmers not to grow wheat because previous regulations made them grow too much, creating a surplus."

Wallace likened NGPA's complex pricing mechanism for gas to a shopper in a shoe store who faces many similar pairs of shoes offered at different prices.

"All the shoes are exactly the same, but they are priced one way for people 14 years old, and another way for people over 25, and another way for people six feet tall — yet they are all the same shoes."

Today, Congress is reacting in panic again, Wallace said, by considering new legislation to alter the NGPA. "They say they are going to roll back prices. Fine, we'll get cheaper gasoline, but what are they going to do in five years, when they turn on their bathroom heaters and nothing comes out?

"They'll pass another bill."

Governmental regulation of commerce is nothing new, Wallace said. In the American Revolution, the Continental Congress passed laws putting a ceiling on the price wagonmasters could charge the Colonists to haul freight.

There was no such limit placed on freight hauled to the British. This, Wallace said, was the reason the Continental Army starved at Valley Forge, while British soldiers lacked for nothing.

"And, keep in mind, the Colonies were a long way from England. You never hear stories about the British soldiers starving, do you?"

Wallace cited the impediment to the Alaska pipeline, and the cancellation of the Long Beach, Ca.-to-Midland pipeline in 1980 as examples of regulation interfering with free enterprise.

During World War II, the United States built the 1,400-mile Big Inch pipeline from Texas to the East Coast in 11 months to fuel the war effort. German analysts said after the war that the ample fuel supply was the key to the Allies' victory.

"The Germans had more sophisticated equipment than we did, and more of it, but it was lined up bumper-to-bumper because they had no more fuel," Wallace said.

"Texas supplied between 25 percent and up to 75 percent of the Allies' fuel needs."

He quoted Roman historian Epictetus, who said in a Roman war manual: "Whoever would be free, let him wish for nothing which depends on others, else he must necessarily be a slave."

Wallace said this is still true, and that America must be energy-independent.

"Figure out what your necessities are, and demand that they be developed here, in this country," he advised.

Analyst explains positive role of regulation

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Business-Energy Editor

Securities analyst Sharon Laufer told a tiny audience Tuesday evening governmental regulation can play a positive role in the free enterprise system.

Laufer, a supervising analyst with the State Securities Board, an expert in limited partnership offerings, made her remarks at the third in a series of Free Enterprise Lectures Sponsored by Midland College.

Governmental regulation of the securities industry allows only securities of reasonable quality to be offered for sale publicly, Laufer said. Securities regulation protects the public from unscrupulous activities.

"A security is basicly an investment contract," Lafer explained. "Any time an investor decides they want to put their money at risk, where they're not managing it, they're having a professional individual manage the asset for them, and they are passivley putting their money into that asset and expecting a return on it, you've got a security."

The securities industry is possibly the most highly regulated industry in the nation, Luafer said.

"Just as a general overview, if you were going to do a nationwide offering of securites of any kind ... you could have up to 54 separate regulatory agencies involved looking at your offering."

The State Securities Board has two functions, Laufer said. The first is to protect the public's interest. The second is to encourage capitol investment in the state.

State security reglations are not rigidly fixed, Laufer said. "There is a lot of flexibility. It is a give-and-take. There is a lot of common sense involved."

The history of regulation in the securities industry is traced back to the stock market collapse of 1929, Luafer said.

"That went very bad for most people, because most of the people who had stocks and securities at that particular time where unsophisticated investors."

Following the collapse, the Securities Exchange Commission was established by the federal government and many states also passed "Blue Sky" laws to further protect investors.

Luafer said there are two types of regulation in the securities industry. They are full disclosure and merit regulation.

The SEC and some states require full disclosure of every material fact about a security, so investors may decided the quality of an investment offering for themselves.

States with Blue Sky laws — like Texas — also examine the merit of an offering, making sure it is fair and reasonable before allowing its sale within the state.

The State Securities board looks at every security offered in Texas, Laufer said.

"So that means that every stock that you buy, that every limited partnership you buy — whether its in oil or gas, research and and development or real estate — any type of security would be looked at by our agency if it's a public security."

"It's very important to realize we're there. Because, if you don't realize we're there, you don't realize some of your investments are closely watched. And it does effect the type of investments you can put your money into — and the type that can be offered to the public.

"Certain limited offerings ... don't have to be registered with either the SEC of State Securities Board," Laufer said. "We don't look at them at all."

In Texas an offering is considered private if there are less than 35 investors holding the security, the offering is not advertised publicly and there is no public solicitation to buy the security.

Midland's MGF Oil given Thai concession

The Government of Thailand recently concluded the award of a Petroleum Concession Agreement to MGF Oil Corporation, Midland.

The agreement will authorize MGF to explore for and produce petroleum from an area of approximately 1.3 million acres in the north central region of the country. The MGF tract is located above 200 miles north of Bangkok. Preliminary geologic studies have indicated the likelihood of several promising structures within the concession area.

In addition, the first significant commercial production of crude oil in Thailand has commenced from five wells located about 3 miles distance from the eastern border of the MGF concession boundary. Initial geological indications suggest that this field, which is already producing 5,000 barrels of oil per day and is expected to incrase to 17,000 barrels per day by 1985, may extend well into the MGF concession area.

The Concession Agreement was completed at a signing ceremony which was presided over by Thailand's Minister of Industry, Major General Chatichai Choonhaven. Also in attendance was the United States Ambassador to Thailand, John Gunther Dean.

R.O. Major, President of MGF who represented the company at the signing ceremony, expects exploration activity in the concession area to commence in the near future.

Major indicated that no firm plans have been made regarding participation in the concession by others, however he emphasized that MGF's ultimate goal is to limit its capital exposure while still retaining a significant interest in the concession.

MGF is a domestic petroleum company that engages in exploration, production and contract drilling activity throughout the western region of the United States. "Our interest in the Thailand concession," Major said," is to diversify our area of operations while taking advantage of what appears to be an excellent geological economic opportunity."

The terms of the three year concession agreement with renewal provisions will minimize front end costs of investment by MGF. The company will be obligated to spend 14.3 million dollars during the first three years in seismic, drilling and completion costs of at least two wells. Approximately 25 percent of the revenues from production of up to 10,000 barrels per day will go to the Thai Government. This share of revenues increases to about 57 percent for production in excess of 30,000 barrels per day.

Price talks continue

LONDON (AP) — Some major oil companies say they are renegotiating prices for North Sea oil with British National Oil Corp., just a day after the government-owned BNOC announced acceptance of its latest price reduction.

BNOC said Monday that an "overwhelming majority" of its customers accepted its proposed $30-a-barrel price for Brent grade oil, retroactive to March 1. That was down from $30.50 a barrel in February.

The announcement appeared to confirm that oil prices had stabilized after earlier sharp declines.

"You are still eligible for one of the biggest tax breaks in history."

Fantasy advertising makes instant tradition

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

In the brewing industry, the technique is used to help sell "instant traditionals" — new products that spring on the market with a full-blown and usually romantic history. In a few instances there may even be a trace of truth in these advertising campaigns, but in most there's not even much effort used to disguise the pretense.

The approach works like this: Pabst launches a new beer called Jacob Best. Its ad agency then creates a stirring Western history for Jacob Best. The fiction, it's believed, creates an ambiance of permanence and legitimacy around the product. In this case, there just happens to have been a real Jacob Best, and he was a beer baron. But he was hardly the devil-may-care Bret Maverick character portrayed in the company's commercials for the beer.

It could be that the liquor industry is the largest user of this type of fantasy advertising. The first that commanded much attention came from Heublein with its "Tales of the Brass Monkey" campaign several years ago for a product that was "a secret combination of liquors." Each ad had a minimum of art and a great deal of copy. Each told another whopper about a secret U.S. agent named H.E. Rasske, who took the code name Brass Monkey from a small figurine in a Macao bar. The exploits of this dynamo in 1941-43 read exactly like what they were, an ad man's fabrications.

"I put in as many disclaimers as I could," says Alan Kaufman, who as creative director of a small, now-defunct ad agency created the Brass Monkey campaign. "But even when I told them it was all hogwash, people would write in and ask for more details about Rasske."

After that campaign lost emphasis, Heublein tried the same gimmick with a drink called the Sergeant Major, which Kaufman also created. He was a British sergeant in the Punjab who always accused the natives of abusing his gin. But it soon fizzled. Then came a bourbon liqueur from the same company called Jeremiah Weed, accompanied by an advertising campaign about one "helluva railroad man" as "gutsy and lusty as you'd expect." Gutsy as he was, not too much has been heard from Jeremiah Weed lately.

Heublein was not alone with the gambit. A few years ago, Hiram Walker introduced Two Fingers tequila. The ads told of a macho character who in the 1930s drove an old truck loaded down with an unusually good tequila into the United States from Mexico. Why the truck and the character both had to be past their prime was never satisfactorily explained. That campaign faded, too.

In fact, there isn't much of this type of advertising around anymore. The genre has never really carried over to television. The nearest thing is some of those "vignettes" from the coffee and soup companies. But those often are more irritating than intriguing, and they make no attempt at fun.

Still, the technique hasn't died out altogether. In one briefly seen commercial for Calandre, a Paco Rabanne fragrance for women, a man is supposed to be running a projector. The grainy film shows a beautiful woman emerging from a chateau. A number of limousines with chauffeurs are waiting.

When someone says breathlessly, "She is coming now," there is a rush forward, a lot of camera flashbulbs go off and there is much commotion as several people try to ask her questions. The woman gets into a limo and the window closes, electrically shutting out the scene. It is obvious from the projector someone is keeping track of her, but little is known about her "except that she always wears Calandre."

Unfortunately, the ad budget for Calandre is small, so the commercial is seldom aired. But the print version is running fairly widely.

It shows a grainy picture of the same woman followed by a man holding an umbrella. The picture is pulled halfway out of a manila envelope. Attached to it is a note: "Robert — I caught up with them at Verfour. The man is definitely Max, her bodyguard. The woman may be Danielle ... or it may be her damn double again. One of the few things anyone knows about her is that she always wears Calandre."

It doesn't really matter that whoever is keeping the dossier doesn't know that there's no French town by the name of Verfour, that it was created by Ogilvy & Mather. It is intriguing. Who are these people? What are they looking for?

Could it be the Brass Monkey?

• • •

In what it says is the first time in history, British Airways is launching a worldwide television advertising campaign in which the same commercials will simultaneously run in more than than 40 countries. Only the announcer's voice will be changed to translate the ads from one language and culture to another.

Two-day Central American mission to conclude today

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The foreign ministers of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama today complete a two-day mission to five Central American capitals proposing negotiations to settle the region's border and guerrilla wars.

The peace mission calls itself the "Contadora Group" after the Panamanian island where the ministers drafted a document Jan. 5 calling for an end to foreign intervention in Central America.

Diplomatic sources said the group wants to arrange bilateral meetings of the foreign ministers of Honduras, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Guatemala, followed by a regional summit.

It also is urging suspension of all military aid to the region, a negotiated settlement of El Salvador's 3½-year-old civil war and talks to end fighting in Nicaragua between the leftist government's troops and Honduran-based exiles.

Salvadoran prisoners freed

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The government has freed 31 political prisoners in the past two weeks, the most extensive release of its kind since the start of the 3½-year-old civil war.

However, a government spokesman said the move was not linked to a proposed amnesty for leftist rebels, aimed at wooing them out of their mountain strongholds to participate in general elections set for December.

Nicaragua claims casualties

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Defense Ministry says 285 soldiers on both sides have been killed or wounded in fighting between government troops and Honduran-based exiles in the past two weeks.

A Defense Ministry communique Tuesday night said 197 rebels have been killed and 40 wounded, while the leftist government's casualties were 34 dead and 14 wounded in fighting since March 30.

The ministry said government forces killed 49 rebels Saturday in a battle at Rancho Grande, a village 150 miles northeast of Managua in Zelaya province.

Insurgents, meanwhile, claimed Tuesday they repelled a series of attacks in northwestern Nicaragua and killed more than 100 soldiers.

The rebels' clandestine radio, monitored in Honduras, said the anti-Sandinista forces overran three army posts in Matagalpa and Chinandega provinces, but did not say when the fighting occurred.

Vietnam to withdraw troops

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam said today it will withdraw some of its troops next month from Cambodia, where they have engaged in a major offensive during the past two weeks against Cambodian resistance fighters.

Radio Hanoi, in a broadcast monitored in Bangkok, said the withdrawal was announced Tuesday by the foreign ministers of Vietnam and the Hanoi-backed Cambodian government at a meeting in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital. No details were given on the date or extent of the withdrawal.

Vietnamese troops have been in Cambodia since 1978, when they ousted Communist leader Pol Pot and installed another Communist regime headed by Heng Samrin. Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge guerrillas continued a resistance campaign and have formed a coalition with two non-Communist resistance groups.

Lech Walesa again arrested

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Police took Solidarity leader Lech Walesa into custody at his apartment in Gdansk today, witnesses said.

The move came the day after he announced he held a weekend meeting with underground leaders of the outlawed labor movement.

It was not clear if Walesa had been arrested or if charges would be brought against him.

Man loses war crimes appeal

TORONTO (AP) — Albert Helmut Rauca, a naturalized Canadian charged with murdering thousands of Jews in a Nazi death camp during World War II, has lost an appeal and could be extradited to West Germany within two weeks

The Ontario Supreme Court on Tuesday rejected his contention that Canada's new Charter of Rights prohibits the extradition of Canadian citizens to stand trial in other countries.

Rauca's lawyers told reporters they had not decided whether they will ask the Supreme Court of Canada to overturn the ruling.

If not, Rauca could be returned to West Germany within 15 days to face five indictments charging that he murdered 11,584 Lithuanian Jews at the Nazi concentration camp in Kaunas, Lithuania, in 1941-1943.

Cardinal will visit Poland

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Cardinal Carlo Maria Martini, archbishop of Milan, will visit Poland April 22-25, his office has announced.

Martini, who was invited by Polish Cardinal Jozef Glemp, will stop at Czestochowa, Poznan and Niepokalanow. He will take part in celebrations for the feast day of St. Adalbert, which is marked on April 23.

Ball of ice lands in China

PEKING (AP) — A ball of ice more than two feet in diameter fell from the sky and shook nearby utility poles in the east China city of Wuxi, the official Xinhua news agency reported today.

Xinhua said Zhu Hongji of the Wuxi Weather Bureau said hail was common in the region this season, "but a lone big piece of ice falling is a rare thing in meteorological history."

The ice ball landed Monday and broke into smaller pieces, the biggest measuring four inches in diameter, Xinhua said.

Korean food dealers charged

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Government prosecutors said today charges have been filed against 27 South Korean health food dealers, including some who imported most of their products from the United States and Japan.

Prosecutors said the dealers were placed under non-restraint arrest on charges of selling foreign-brand food products through false advertising. Thirteen others were referred for possible prosecution, they said.

One product involved, the prosecutors said, was about $2 million worth of processed cactus imported from the United States.

They said the 40 dealers also included importers of earthworms and snakes, whose products were sold as stamina builders.

Arafat says talks with Hussein continue

By The Associated Press

Philip Habib

PLO chief Yasser Arafat says negotiations between his guerrilla movement and Jordan's King Hussein will continue, a Swedish political leader said today, but sources reported that a proposed Arab Summit to consider Middle East peace plans has been postponed indefinitely.

Arab diplomatic sources in Rabat, Morocco, said today the planned summit meeting has been postponed from later this month to "a future date." But the sources said Arafat still is expected to arrive towards the end of this week for talks with Morocco's King Hassan II.

The summit originally had been expected to take place this weekend but was delayed by the breakdown in talks between Hussein and Arafat. President Reagan had been pushing for Hussein to join the peace process representing the Palestinians, but Arafat was unable to get agreement from the Palestine Liberation Organization executive committee for this course.

Arafat still sees possibilities to reach an agreement with Hussein and finds "positive elements" in Reagan's peace plan, Sweden's Social Democratic Party leader Olof Palme said today in Stockholm.

Palme emerged from more than two hours of talks with Arafat and other Social Democratic leaders saying "we have a definite impression that the talks in Amman are not over, as President Reagan stated."

Arafat himself was noncommittal as he left the meeting place.

Asked if he intended to go to Rabat for further talks on the peace process, the PLO leader only would say "Maybe. I am awaiting a message from his Majesty (King Hassan)" He made no other comment as he was hurried out to a car surrounded by security men.

Earlier, Swedish radio quoted Arafat's spokesman, Abdul Rahman, as saying the talks will continue in Rabat starting Monday and that Arafat has dispatched PLO emissaries to Hussein and Hassan in preparation for them.

Officials in the Jordanian capital of Amman could not be reached immediately for a response to Arafat's remarks. Jordan's information minister, Abnan Abu Oudeh, was quoted a Kuwait newspaper today as saying the "old dialogue" with the PLO would continue but that the talks concerning the Reagan plan had indeed been called off.

In another development, the Israelis said Tuesday they would expand Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, a move likely to anger U.S. and Middle East leaders who suggested a freeze on settlements might improve prospects for peace talks.

Ben-Zion Rubin, the Israeli deputy minister for Labor and Social Affairs, announced in Tel Aviv that his government will expand 68 settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip over the next 18 months to increase the Jewish population from 30,000 to 50,000.

In Washington, Shultz blamed the PLO for the latest setbacks to the Reagan plan, which envisioned limited Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank and Gaza in association with Jordan.

Shultz said the next move was up to the Arab countries and he suggested they should withdraw the mandate they had given the PLO in 1974 to act as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

In Amman, a leading Jordanian newspaper reported that Hussein had sent Reagan a message Tuesday saying the new Israeli settlements on the West Bank was a major reason why the talks with the PLO broke down.

The newspaper, Al-Rai, today quoted the king as saying Israeli's West Bank policies would have "very negative repercussions" on Mideast peace efforts.

In the Soviet Union, Radio Moscow said today that Jordan's refusal to enter U.S.-sponsored peace talks has "buried" Reagan's plan.

In another development, U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib unexpectedly joined the negotiations Tuesday in Netanya, Israel on the withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon, and then returned to Jerusalem for talks with Foreign Minister Yitzkhak Shamir.

Haitians: Bombings pose no threat to Duvalier rule

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haitian officials call a recent wave of bombings a dangerous nuisance, but maintain that neither the bombers nor an exile's announced plans for an invasion poses a threat to the 26-year rule of the Duvalier family.

Local businessman, however, fear the bombings are worsening an already dismal tourism season and exile leaders warn that the autocratic government may use the bombings as an excuse for more repression.

Five people have been killed in two bombings this year, and other explosions damaged the government newspaper building and the sidewalk in front of the national bank.

A Miami-based group called the Hector Riobe Brigade asserted responsibility for the first bombing, a New Year's Day car blast that killed four people about a block from the National Palace. No group has claimed responsibility for the others, the most recent at the Duvalier-owned Toyota agency that killed a night watchman March 19.

"The brigade has been busy distributing tracts and literature in the community. Because of the nature of their activities, it's impossible to tell how many Haitians are involved."

"The group in Miami is responsible. The American police tell us that they (the Riobe Brigade) pay Americans to come here and plant the bombs," said a Haitian government official, who asked not to be identified.

His comment about the American police report could not be independently confirmed. An official at the U.S. Embassy here declined comment on the bombings, saying: "It's an internal affair."

However, Haiti's Ministry of Information said Haitian police requested and received FBI assistance in probing the bombs. Thomas Enders, assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, pledged U.S. help against terrorists during a visit in January to Haiti, important strategically because of its proximity to Cuba.

Tourism dropped about 50 percent between 1981 and 1982, and while the government has no statistics yet, quiet restaurants and hotel lobbies indicate an even worse season. However, the drop is part of a general decline in tourism throughout the Caribbean.

Little is known about the Riobe Brigade, which takes its name from a young Haitian insurrectionist who killed himself after a lengthy battle against army troops laying siege to his cave hideout in 1963.

"The brigade has been busy distributing tracts and literature in the community," said the Rev. Gerard Jean-Juste, a leader of Haitian exiles in Miami. "Because of the nature of their activities, it's impossible to tell how many Haitians are involved."

The group sent a communique to the papal nuncio here in February, warning that Pope John Paul II should not to get too close to President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier during the papal visit March 9. But there were no incidents and the pope admonished Duvalier for doing little to improve conditions in the Western Hemisphere's poorest nation.

Another mystery figure is Hilertaut Dominque, a Haitian arrested in December at Las Americas Airport in the Dominican Republic, which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti.

Dominican police said Dominque tried to slip machine guns and other weapons wrapped as Christmas presents through airport security.

Brasilia now hometown for one million people

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — For a million people, Brasilia is now their hometown. It was not always thus, even though the modern inland capital of Brazil will be 23 years old this month.

Brasilienses, as the inhabitants are called, have settled into a life on what a quarter century ago was a prairie of red dust in summer and red mud in winter. They no longer stampede the airport on Fridays to flee for weekends on the beaches of Rio de Janeiro or the bustling metropolis of Sao Paulo as they did in Brasilia's early years as the capital.

"People now have families here. Instead of going to Rio or Sao Paulo, relatives come to Brasilia," said Luiz Barbosa, a Brazilian journalist who has lived here for 20 years.

It wasn't too long ago that Brasilia, which formally opened April 21, 1960, was the capital in name only, a place where people came to work during the week but cleared out on Fridays.

The birth of the inland capital was said to be the subject of a clergyman's dream in 1883, an idea included in the first constitution in 1891, and a presidential campaign promise by the late Juscelino Kubitschek in 1954. Kubitshek won the election and become known as the president who built the new capital.

After the city officially became the capital, foreign embassies and government workers were reluctant to leave the old capital, Rio de Janeiro. Ten years of foot-dragging led President Emilio Medici, one of the military leaders who took over in 1964, to insist that all embassies and federal agencies relocate to the new city, 600 miles from the Atlantic coast on Brazil's rolling central plateaus.

Civil servants were asked to volunteer to come here in return for hefty salary increases and tickets home on weekends. The embassies, threatened with losing their accreditation, moved their operations but in most cases left behind consulates and friends often they went back to visit.

Flights to Rio were fully booked early every week.

Now, said a clerk at the Vasp airline ticket counter, "our flights to Rio are not usually filled."

Brasilia now has a population of 1.35 million, about half of whom live on the outskirts in what are called the "satellite" cities.

The central area of Brasilia, laid out in the shape of an airplane by architect Lucio Costa, still looks deserted. It is a driver's dream as Costa planned, but a stroller's nightmare. Brasilia is made up of wide streets and cloverleafs originally designed to reduce accidents, but it lacks sidewalks and areas for people to gather.

People go by car or bus from homes on the city's artificial lake or apartments in the wings of the airplane design to their workplaces in the modernistic government buildings designed by Brazil's Oscar Niemeyer, a student of the famed French architect Le Corbusier.

Vermont Democrats argue over presidential primary

WASHINGTON (AP) — What if a state held a presidential primary and no candidates came?

That's what could happen in Vermont in 1984 as state and national Democratic Party officials scrap over just when the state will hold its "beauty contest" primary.

National party officials are trying to convince presidential contenders to boycott the "beauty contest" primary that Vermont wants to hold on March 6, 1984. That primary would be outside the "window" the party is trying to establish to shorten the primary season.

At least one candidate has said he won't enter the Vermont race if it is in violation of the spirit of the party rules, but the others are undecided as national officials worry that Vermont's early primary could shatter a fragile package of rules and timetables for picking the party's 1984 presidential nominee.

State party officials said they had not heard of the national officials' effort and they don't think it will work.

"I don't think it is going to have any effect," Vermont party chairman Edwin Granai said. "We have commitments from candidates to appear here and we have campaign staffers working already."

The situation arises because neighboring New Hampshire has an exemption from the rules to hold its traditional "first-in-the-nation" primary on March 6.

But if Vermont also goes that day, New Hampshire officials have threatened to move their primary up a week. National party officials are worried this could set off a rush by states to move their primaries earlier and earlier, making a mockery of the rules.

Those rules specify that all the primaries but one must take place between March 13 and June 12, 1984.

To try to keep New Hampshire on March 6 and hold down the length of the primary season, national rules chief Nancy Pelosi has been calling presidential candidates and asking them not to submit the petitions necessary to get their names on the Vermont ballot.

Granai said he was not aware of Ms. Pelosi's effort.

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale already said he would not compete in any primary held the same day as New Hampshire's, according to Maxine Isaacs, Mondale's spokeswoman.

...s neighborhood wanted a chan...

...— The folks drinking ...mp saw neighbor ...amroller his way ... times over three ...

...day's mayoral election, they saw how much and how quickly things have changed.

The Bridgeport neighborhood, a Democratic stronghold since the turn of the century and the home of four Chicago mayors, voted overwhelmingly — and in vain — for the losing Republican candidate, Bernard Epton.

"I'm 60 years old, and in all that time I never thought I'd vote for a Republican," added Ed O'Brien, a lifelong resident of the white, blue-collar neighborhood, as he watched election returns that showed Democrat Harold Washington would become the city's first black mayor.

Schaller's was a natural election-night gathering place for people from the neighborhood. Old-timers said they remembered the days when the young Richard J. Daley would stop off for a beer or two after a softball game.

Around the corner and down Lowe Avenue is the pink bungalow where the mayor's widow, Eleanor, still lives. Across the street a billboard on the Democratic ward office still urges passers-by, "Elect Richard M. Daley Mayor on Feb. 22."

But a radical change ca... the neighborhood in the days ... Washington defeated Daley — ... the late mayor — and Mayor ... Byrne in the Feb. 22 Democratic primary. Windows, doors and cars blossomed with Epton signs and stickers. On Tuesday, Bridgeport went for Epton by more than 4-to-1.

"In my precinct there were better than 500 for Epton and 44 for Washington," said Democratic worker Jimmy Barrett, 52. "I'm going to find every one of those (Washington voters) and kill them."

Guns, liquor sales election issues

By The Associated Press

Two village trustees who helped give Morton Grove, Ill., the nation's toughest handgun ban won re-election, while members of a renters' rights group were being swept into municipal office in Santa Monica, Calif.

In another municipal election Tuesday in Jacksonville, Fla., City Councilman Harold Gibson's hopes of becoming the city's first black mayor were dashed when incumbent Jake Godbold drew 71.4 percent of the vote in Tuesday's Democratic primary. Godbold will face Republican Dean Treible in the general election May 24.

In Morton Grove, three Action Party incumbents — including one trustee who opposed the city's handgun law — won re-election despite efforts by a former neo-Nazi and members of the new "We the People Party" to unseat them.

The ordinance bans the sale and possession of handguns in the city except by police and licensed antique gun dealers. It went into effect in February 1982 and has survived four court challenges.

Independent candidate William Blameuser, a member of the National Socialist Party of America from 1976 until 1978, drew 254 votes in unofficial totals against the 5,000-plus ballots given each of the winners and the roughly 3,100 votes cast for each of the losing "People" candidates.

After a bitterly fought election in the prosperous coastal city of Santa Monica, Calif., voters were handing a sweep to the Santa Monicans for Renters Rights, a group that already holds a majority of the current city council seats.

Judge prevents party's efforts to stop count of absentee ballots

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A judge has rejected an effort by the White Panther Party to prevent absentee ballots from being counted in the April 26 recall election faced by Mayor Dianne Feinstein.

Superior Court Judge Stuart Pollak dismissed Tuesday as "entirely speculative" the argument that Ms. Feinstein's campaigners were violating the constitutional guarantee of a secret ballot by visiting prospective voters at home and lobbying for the mayor.

"There's absolutely no evidence of any kind to show what will occur, is likely to occur or is threatening to occur," the judge said.

THE PROCEDURE FOR MAKING A CALL FROM A PUBLIC PHONE AND BILLING IT TO A THIRD NUMBER CHANGED APRIL 1.

In the past, customers could charge a Long Distance call from a public phone to a third number and the call would go through. While this was a convenient service for some people, it was also an opportunity for other people to bill their calls to unauthorized numbers.

So, as of April 1, operators can bill calls to a third number (calls made from a public phone) only if someone is available at the third number to authorize the call.

This means, for example, that if a person tries to bill a call to his or her office after closing hours or on weekends, the call will not go through unless someone is there to confirm it.

Here are the options.

There are four ways to pay for calls from a public phone: dropping in coins, reversing the charges (or making collect calls), billing to a third number and using a Bell Calling Card.

If dropping in coins or reversing the charges isn't convenient, or if billing to a third number can't be confirmed, it may be easiest to use a Bell Calling Card. Calling Cards may be obtained from the Bell Business Office.

Council 'kicks tires' on car-towing deal

Wheels set in motion to sell bonds

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

While Midland City Council only "kicked the tires" on a controversial proposed car-towing arrangement during its Tuesday meeting, the council set the wheels in motion for selling $7 million in bonds to finance airport improvements.

The council also acted on several parks and recreation items and voted to swap grazing rights for water rights at its T-Bar Ranch on the New Mexico-Texas border.

Before recessing until 8 a.m. Tuesday, as the final order of business in a meeting which stretched until 10 p.m., the council voted to proceed with preliminary paperwork required for the eventual sale of $7 million in certificates of obligation to fund improvements at Midland Regional Airport.

Fred Poe, assistant city manager, reminded the council that unless bonds are issued by July 1, the city stands to pay tax penalties as provided under the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsiblity Act of 1982.

Aviation Director Victor White also suggested the council consider changing the timetable for construction of the improvements, which include expansion and improvement of parking lots, roads and drainage at the airport.

WHITE SAID the cost of making the improvements, estimated at $15 million, could be spread over a longer period of time by delaying some portions of the project.

He said the Federal Aviation Administration could fund as much as $6.5 million of the project, $3.7 million is expected to come from a government airport improvement fund and bond sales will finance the remaining cost.

By delaying construction on about 25 percent of the proposed roadwork, White said the project's short-term cost could be whittled to about $11 million, enabling the city to better meet the heavy initial expenses of beginning construction.

Poe said reducing the initial expenses would allow the city to sell about $7 million in bonds now, and return for additional sales later as the project demands.

The council voted to commence with paperwork for selling the $7 million in bonds and instructed White to consult with the project engineer about the possibility of delaying portions of the road work.

After debating a proposed car-towing arrangement and listening to comments from several wrecker operators, the council voted to delay action until its April 26 meeting.

Police Chief Wayne Gideon and Lt. Herman Wicker approached the council with bids on a proposed 24-hour towing contract with a single wrecker company. Wicker explained the police department hopes to contract with one wrecker company, rather than the eight wrecker firms which now participate in the city's rotation system for towing wrecked and abandoned cars.

WICKER SAID the plan, patterned after a system developed by the city of Richardson, would regulate towing fees while relieving the police of time-consuming paperwork and trips to the city impoundment lot.

He said the one-company plan would also eliminate the "subterfuge" present in the current system, where no prices are set and wrecker owners "double-dip" by operating more than one wrecker service.

"I've been in this end of the business for 15 years, and the biggest headache I've had is wreckers," said Wicker, who heads the police traffic division.

Allen Frasier, owner of ARC Truck and Auto Body, said the one-company system would drive several wrecker operations out of business and create a monopoly in Midland.

"To me, they (the city) are going into direct competition with us," Frasier said.

Mayor G. Thane Akins said the council would like to avoid creating a monopoly if possible. Councilmen Tom Sloan, who seemed to capture much of the council's confusion over the proper approach, said: "Contrary to my usual opinion, I'm really at kind of a loss."

Gideon said he expects to return before the council with bids for a one-company wrecker system on April 26.

The council voted to accept a bid from Tom Linebery, who offered to trade water rights on four sections of his land adjoining the city-owned T-Bar Ranch in exchange for a 30-year lease for grazing rights on the ranch and four adjoining sections.

Poe said the trade allows the city to add to its water reserves under the T-Bar Ranch, a supply that has been estimated as sufficient to meet Midland's water needs for the next 100 years.

THE CITY REJECTED two other bids, one seeking grazing rights only and the other offering 80 acres of water rights for a 30-year grazing lease.

The council accepted a bid of $18,900 from West Texas Consultants for preliminary design work on repairs and improvements at Doug Russell Pool. Councilmen rejected two more expensive bids and the option of working directly through a pool contractor.

The council also gave its approval to a grant application by the United Girl's Softball Association of Midland. The UGSA is seeking matching funds from the Land and Water Conservation Fund Program for a six-field softball complex at Ulmer Park.

The Midland Adult Soccer League's request to use an undeveloped portion of Hogan Park to build a three-field complex was also approved by the council.

In other action, the council:

—HEARD A REPORT from Utilities Director John Lowe on the progress of an effluent pond project to be located about 15 miles southeast of the city. Lowe said he'll spend the next several days talking with about eight owners of pipelines, oil wells and utility easements inside the pond site. He said he'll advise the owners of the city's plans and possible arrangements for new easements.

—Authorized MidTran to enter into contract with National Coach Builders for purchase of seven diesel buses. An earlier contract for the buses was negated when the company under contract went bankrupt.

This dog's days of fighting in pits should be over. The pit bulldog and four others will be auctioned off at 2 p.m. April 20 to the highest bidders. Midland County, which confiscated the dogs in a raid of a pit bulldog site last year, by law must auction off the dogs or destroy them. The auction will be conducted by Constable Tom McGinnis at the Tall City Veterinary Hospital, 4606 Highway 80 West.

Council corks permit request

City Hall Council Chambers ranneth over with emotion Tuesday as opponents of a proposed lounge north of Loop 250 on Midkiff Road attempted to put a cork in a nightclub owner's request for a specific use permit.

The City Council, which eventually voted 5-0 to deny the permit, was considering a request by Dale Forse, the owner of a nightclub called the Classiest which he expects to open at the end of this month.

Forse, who was already granted a permit to operate a restaurant with on-premises consumption of alcohol, sought a lounge permit in order to keep his nightclub open even while the kitchen was closed.

A permit for on-premises consumption demands that liquor only be served while the kitchen is in operation and mandates a 60/40 ratio on sales of food and alcohol.

Dick Moise, spokesman for the nightclub owner, said Forse was hoping to keep the nightclub open from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, close from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., and reopen until 2 a.m. Moise said a lounge permit would allow Forse to close the kitchen at about 10 p.m., and still serve liquor until the 2 a.m. closing.

Moise, addressing the council prior to the opposition, attempted to dampen their arguments by noting that the nightclub is located in one of Midland's prime retail development areas and is largely removed from residential development. He also offered a 512-signature petition from people not opposed to the lounge.

Opponents argued that a lounge would create traffic accidents — most notably of the liquor-induced variety — in the heavily-traveled area near Loop 250 and would, as Ken Nolen put it, "set a bad precedent for the neighborhood."

Nolen, co-chairman of the Saddle Ridge Country Estates Homeowners Association, said his survey of residents within 1½ miles of the nightclub — north of Loop 250 — indicated overwhelming opposition to the lounge request.

"It looks like a pretty thin veil has been put up over the bar. It's still a bar," Nolen said. "We think the accident possibilities will be increased in that area."

"I believe that this is one of the worst locations in Midland that you could have a lounge," said George Ochsner, of 11 Tattenham Corner.

Kem Merren, of 3100 Bluebird Lane, said: "My main objection to this is it's directly on the way to almost anywhere we go from our house. If the kitchen closes at 10 but it stays open to 2, then obviously the main activity between 10 and 2 is going to be drinking."

"I'm not Carry Nation," said Carol Schmickrath, of 3403 Cardinal Lane, told the council. But "I do not wish to have to dodge drunken drivers."

Councilman Tom Sloan reminded the opponents that the sale of alcohol is legal. "We tried prohibition, you know," Sloan said.

Mayor G. Thane Akins, an automatic "no" vote on alcohol permits, quickly countered Sloan, suggesting that alcohol is sold in Midland only so long as the City Council chooses to approve permits.

Sloan said bar and restaurant owners would likely have some legal recourse if the council refused to grant liquor permits.

Their recourse, Akins told Sloan, would be "the ballot box."

Councilman Gordon Marcum II made a motion, seconded by Councilman Carroll Thomas, that the council reject the request. With Councilman Jesse Hatfield absent, the council voted for rejection.

Trustees take time out on athletes' eligibility decision

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A proposal to provide academic motivation for junior high school athletes was punted Tuesday when Midland Independent School District trustees realized students earning three D's and three F's would be eligible to participate in athletics.

In other action, trustees accepted bids on a street paving and campus improvement project, requests for the use of school recreation facilities and a gift from the Midland High School booster club. The 1983 valedictorians and salutatorians were recognized, and two re-elected board members were sworn in.

The proposed eligibility requirements for junior high athletes were recommended by administrators who designed them after high school guidelines, according to Athletic Director Gil Bartosh.

Under the proposal, seventh and eighth grade students must have passed at least three courses the previous semester, provided two were in the academic area.

"This means a student could have three F's and three D's (as long as one D was in a non-academic course)," said Trustee Joyce Sherrod.

"IF THEY CAN'T make any better grades than that, they don't need to be participating in athletics, Gil," added Trustee Ron Britton.

According to Dr. Wayne H. Moore, assistant superintendent of instructional services, the proposal was made to set standards similar to the University Interscholastic League regulations on the high school level. At the same time, the standards would provide counseling for students if they were having difficulties with academics.

No retrictions were placed on seventh grade athletes during the fall semester.

The proposal also said the athletic chairman would be responsible for checking grades at the end of each semester for eligibility and monitoring participants' grades each six weeks after report cards are issued.

"Our intent, of course, is to have good grades, but also to allow them to participate in other extra-curricular events," Moore said.

Trustee Ann Page pointed out junior high cheerleaders must maintain C averages. The same standard applies to student council members, according to Baressi. Board President Parker Humes said band and choir students do not have eligibility requirements.

The junior high school principals recommended the requirement, according to Bartosh, who added that athletics help keep students who have academic troubles in school.

"THE PRINCIPALS felt we'd be (more closely) monitoring the kids. They would be in the halls just hanging around (if they weren't in athletics)," Bartosh said.

"At least you could catch them and make them study," Britton said.

"It's the fact that we'll be checking every six weeks," Baressi explained. "I don't think we should make the standard so high they'll be unreasonable for some kids."

Because ninth grade athletes fall under UIL regulations, Bartosh said junior high requirements will help lead up to it.

Under UIL rules, "three D's and you're out," Bartosh said.

School districts, however, may raise local standards, Moore said.

"I don't think it's fair to single athletics out," Trustee Joe Golding said. "If you're going to put something stricter on them, we need to look at (the entire extra-curricular program."

Trustees voted to table the matter until administrators could study academic requirements in all extra-curricular activities.

THE ATHLETIC department came in for more scrutiny when board members accepted a gift of carpeting for the MHS Field House and a public address system for the baseball stadium. Total value of the gifts from the MHS booster club was $3,675.

According to trustees, calls have come from parents of Lee High students who noticed the gifts were in use before trustees knew about them.

"We're approving stuff that's already been installed," Golding said. "I'm not singling out athletics, but we catch the heat on it."

Apparently the sound system has been in use on the baseball field. Trustees did not comment about the carpet, already installed in the field house.

In other action, the 1983 valedictorians and salutatorians were recognized. Valedictorian at Lee High is Stacey Bradshaw; salutatorian is Dana Tompkins. At Midland High School, valedictorian is Steve Baskin; salutatorian is Amy Candiotti.

A contract was awarded to South Texas Construction Co. of Midland for pavement of Whitman Drive between Bluebird and Mockingbird lanes near Santa Rita Elementary School. Total project cost is $121,647.25. Completion time is 70 days.

Lackey's former girlfriend testifies he admitted killing secretary

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

In testimony Tuesday, an ex-girlfriend of convicted murderer Clarence Allen Lackey told jurors he admitted killing 23-year-old Toni Diane Kumpf, a Texas Tech secretary whose nude body was found in a field south of Lubbock July 31, 1977.

The former girlfriend, 30-year-old Carol Jean Johnson, told of coming home from work about 7:40 that Sunday morning and finding "a big red puddle of wet blood on the bedroom floor" of the apartment in Lubbock she and Lackey shared at the time.

Lackey initially told her some friends had gotten into a fight while she was at work the night before and that one of them had been cut with a knife.

Later, however, Ms. Johnson said he told her: "Baby, I've got something to tell you. I'm the one they're looking for. I didn't mean to hurt her."

The 28-year-old defendant has been convicted and sentenced to die by a San Angelo jury for raping Ms. Kumpf and slashing her throat after breaking into her apartment and abducting her about dawn that day.

But an appeals court threw out the 1978 conviction and death sentence on a technicality in the jury selection process.

Ms. Johnson testified that she "was scared" and at first lied to police when they questioned her about the case. But she broke down and told them of Lackey's admission after being asked to take a lie detector test.

Police through testimony first linked Lackey to the murder by neighbors of the slain woman. Neighbors said they heard a fight going on in her apartment and saw a man drive off in a white pickup truck shortly after 6 a.m.

Lubbock police officer Daniel Villegas testified that he arrived at the apartment about 6:30 a.m. and found the door had been kicked in. Inside, "flower pots and a lamp had been overturned."

The slaying apparently took place in Lackey's apartment and the victim's body dumped in a cotton field along U.S. Highway 87, where it was found about 9:30 a.m. by a farmer who testified that her "throat had been severely mutilated."

The farmer, 51-year-old John Allen, said he was "shaking so bad" he couldn't use his CB radio to notify authorities. He instead drove to his house and police were called.

In other testimony Tuesday, it was established that Lackey had spent the night drinking with friends and was last observed leaving the scene of a house party in his white pickup about 5:15 a.m.

One of the people Lackey had been drinking with, 43-year-old Betty Edge, testified that she called police after seeing televised news accounts of the murder and learning police were looking for a suspect who matched his description and that of the pickup he was driving.

Testimony was scheduled to resume at 8:45 a.m. today. Judge Robert Wright, who presided at Lackey's first trial, is hearing the case on a change of venue in Midland's 238th District Court.

Ad agency promoting 'de-Texification'

AUSTIN (AP) — Of course Texans know that not every resident of the Lone Star State eats chili. Or acts like J.R. Or wears boots. Or even remembers the Alamo.

But New Yorkers and Californians are less savvy. So the state is setting them straight through a high-priced adverising campaign to lure them and their dollars away from their subways and hot tubs. Full-page ads debunking Texas traits and promoting Texas tourism have been placed in the New York Times and the Los Angeles Times.

"Our studies show that Americans still think of Texas as a John Wayne movie set — cactus, cattle and cowboys," said Frank Hildebrand, director of the Texas Tourist Development Agency. "We're not saying we're not Western — we're very proud of that. At the same time, we're trying to convey that Texas is far more than the stereotype."

Such "de-Texification" may smack of heresy, but Hildebrand said the approach seems to work.

In 1963, when the Legislature created the tourist agency, the state ranked 23rd in the nation in the visitor trade. Today it ranks third, just behind California and Florida. Agency studies estimate that visitors spend $12.5 billion in Texas each year, about $400 million of which goes into state and local tax coffers. That's $2.5 billion more than the revenue generated by Texas agriculture.

"No state has come on so strong (in tourism) so rapidly as Texas," said Hildebrand, who had headed the agency since its inception. "I think the state is realizing that old standbys (of income) are weakening and it has to incorporate new sources of wealth."

Hildebrand thinks the state can do even better. His agency is paying almost $1.3 million this fiscal year to tout Texas in such diverse publications as Reader's Digest, Bon Appetit and the London Sunday Times.

The ads were developed by Neal Spelce Communications of Austin.

Bond election absentee voting light

Absentee voting in Midland County's $11.69 million bond election on a proposed courthouse annex and jail has been "light, very light," Elections Administrator Janeice Builta said today.

"Everybody should vote not just because they own property," Ms. Builta said. "This affects everybody."

Since absentee voting started April 4, only 127 of Midland's 43,665 registered voters had voted absentee through Tuesday.

The Midland County Commissioners' Court has called the bond election for April 23 to get the voters' approval to issue $11.69 in bonds to finance building an annex adjoining the present 1930-vintage courthouse.

The proposed annex essentially would double the size of the courthouse, would provide more space for an expanding judiciary and would increase capacity of the jail to 225 prisoners.

Should the bond issue be approved by the electorate, the county tax rate would be increased by a projected 4.4 cents to 22.43 cents per $100 valuation. The county's present tax rate is 18.03 cents. The increase would be about 24 percent.

Absentee balloting will held at the Elections Administrator's Office at 709 W. Washington Ave. through Tuesday.

"Anyone who has any idea that they are going to be out of town or called out of town (on day of the election) or senior citizens can vote absentee," Ms. Builta said. "It's very accessible," she said of the office. For Ms. Builta or her deputies may be reached by telephone at 687-0231.

5-year-old girl injured by car

BIG SPRING — A 44-year-old Amarillo man is in custody today after his vehicle jumped a curb and injured a 5-year-old girl on Big Spring's northside about 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Sonya Yanez, daughter of David Yanez of Big Spring, sustained broken legs and is in "real good" condition at Cowper Hospital, according to the attending physician.

Investigators said the girl was playing near a stop sign out of the street when a vehicle jumped a curb, crashed into the sign and struck her. The vehicle fled the scene but was located an hour later and the man was arrested.

Other survivors include three daughters, two sons, a brother, 17 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Council tables car-towing discussion

The buses are expected to cost about $260,000. Midland will pay about $18,150 and the remainder will be financed with state and federal funds.

—Adopted several amendments to the city health code. Don Goodrum, city-county health department chief sanitarian, said the code changes eliminate outdated regulations and bring Midland's code in line with that maintained by the Texas Department of Health.

—Approved a request for a specific use permit for a bar in a bowling center planned by Abbott Development Co. The proposed bowling center is to be located northeast of the intersection of Holiday Hill Road and Loop 250.

—Voted to seek an appraisal on a parcel of land, located on the west side of Big Spring Street south of its intersection with Marienfeld Street, which the city may later sell.

—Agreed to establish 45 feet of one-way alley off Scharbauer Drive between Marienfeld and Pecos streets, in an attempt to prevent accidents at the alley's intersection with Scharbauer Drive.

—Approved on second reading several liquor permit requests, speed limits on Loop 250 and an ordinance making it illegal to use restrooms designated for persons of the opposite sex.

—Agreed to purchase 1,375 gallons of yellow paint and 1,100 gallons of white paint for marking streets. Fred Baker, public works director, said the city is expecting a new street painting machine in about two months.

Trustees take time out on decision

South Texas Construction Co. also received the contract for campus improvement at the new Quanah Parker Elementary School. According to Leon Hartter, MISD purchasing agent, soil on the campus is not sufficient to grow grass. And drainage flows to the residential area located northeast of Quanah Parker School. Dirt and drainage improvement contracts were awarded at $22,860. Cost will be met through bond money issued for campus improvements.

TRUSTEES APPROVED the addition of a new library and 12 classrooms, including science and art classrooms, at Midland Freshman High School following a tour of the completed project.

Authorization to advertise for bids for renovating the MHS office area was granted. Bids are expected to be awarded in May. Estimated cost is $127,000, which includes $66,000 for construction, the architect's fee, furniture, equipment and a $25,000 air conditioning system.

Trustees also approved requests made by the Midland Junior Baseball Association and the Midland Metropolitan YMCA for use of school facilities for recreational programs. Trustees also marked ballots for two positions on the board of directors of Region 18 Education Service Center.

Ron Britton and Bill Jackson were sworn in for another term on the board. Both won their re-election bids April 2.

A request from the Midland County Commissioners Court to use 15 schools as voting places in the April 23 bond election was approved. The county will pick up the estimated cost of $2,400 for custodial overtime.

The board's next regular meeting will be April 28, a Thursday, because trustees will be attending a national meeting on the usual Tuesday meeting date.

Mauling may be probed

The Midland County Grand Jury may call a special session in the investigation of the mauling of 31-year-old Raul Paredez by a Midland police dog, District Attorey Vern Martin said today.

"We could begin the investigation (this week)," Martin said. "It depends on what the grand jury wants to do."

Martin dismissed rumors of a "public inquiry" into the April 6 incident as without substance. However, he noted that a justice of the peace inquest could be held on the matter.

Paredez, a custodian for The First United Methodist Church in downtown Midland, was attacked and reportedly mauled by the police dog after officers saw a person enter the church building shortly after 2 a.m. on April 6, and suspected a burglar had entered the church.

Paredez, who is undergoing treatment by a plastic surgeon for injuries to his face, is in Midland Memorial Hospital.

"I think it (the Paredez case) is going to the grand jury," Gayle Newman Shackelford, one of the custodian's three attorneys, said today. "I'm not sure when." But Ms. Shackelford speculated the case might go to the grand jury after Paredez is released by his surgeon and can testify before the grand jury.

In addition to Ms. Shackelford, her law partner, Sandy Torres, and Darrell F. Smith are representing Paredez in any civil or criminal litigation which might stem from the April 6 incident.

Cheese sandwich: Not boring anymore

Reubens and Rachels. Monte Cristo. Croque Monsieur. Yes, they're names with fame. They're also names for some of the famous cheese sandwiches, which you may have sampled at one time or another.

In the beginning, there was simply melted cheese on toast. Later grilled cheese sandwiches were featured on menus from coast to coast. Coeds made it in their dorms by placing cheese between two slices of bread, buttering the top and then ironing until the bread toasted while the cheese melted. We don't know what it was called, but it was a great snack!

Of course grilled cheese can also be glorified for variety: Just add a thick slice of tomato and a strip or wo of crisp bacon to nestle on the melted cheese.

Since this tasted so good, it wasn't too long before people decided that cheese would be terrific on the ubiquitous hamburger. And that led to stuffing the burger with cheese or sandwiching cheese between two beef patties. Soon plain buns gave way to sesame seed and other varieties, including pumpernickel or rye.

Hot dogs weren't about to be left out of the cheese picture. They were split lengthwise to be filled with mustard, chili sauce and pickle relish mixed with shredded cheese before grilling. Stuffed with a strip of cheese, wrapped in bacon and broiled, they went by the fanciful name of Ponytail Franks.

Heroes may come and go, but the one that reamins is the big hero sandwich. Its filing varies with the times and like the Dagwood, is made from whatever your tastebuds desire and what your refrigerator can supply.

The Reuben is one of the most famous American sandwiches, originated by Rueben's Restaurant in New York. It's made of Swiss cheese, corned beef and sauerkraut, buttered and grilled on rye bread. A Rachel is corned beef and cole slaw on rye bread.

Monte Cristo is made of slices of ham, chicken and Swiss or Gruyere cheese between buttered white bread sliced. The whole sandwich is then dipped in a mixture of eggs and milk similar to that for French toast and sauteed until golden brown on each side and served with a dusting of confectioners' sugar and a dollop of preserves.

CHEESY PONYTAIL FRANKS
(Serves eight)

2 cups (8 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
1/4 cup chili sauce
1/4 cup sweet pickle relish
1/8 teaspoon leaf oregano
8 frankfurters
8 frankfurter buns

In bowl combine cheese, chili sauce, relish and oregano. Slit frankfurters lengthwise, but do not cut through. Place about three tablespoons cheese mixture in each. Place frankfurters in buns. Place each on double thick rectangle of aluminum foil. Fold foil down onto sandwich in tight double fold. Twist ends. Place on grill folded side down for 10 minutes; turn and heat 10 additional minutes.

TOASTED CHEESE SANDWICHES
(Two servings)

4 slices Swiss or Cheddar cheese
4 slices cracked wheat or white bread
2 tablespoons butter

For each sandwich place two slices Swiss cheese on slice of bread; top with second slice of bread. Butter bread on outside and saute sandwiches in skillet or electric frypan until lightly browned on both sides and cheese begins to melt. Serve immediately.

WAFFLED REUBEN SANDWICH
(Serves six)

12 slices rye bread
3 tablespoons prepared mustard
3/4 cup sauerkraut, drained
12 slices (1 lb.) corned beef
12 slices (12 oz.) Swiss cheese
1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter, melted

Preheat waffle baker according to manufacturer's directions for heating sandwiches. Spread six slices bread with mustard, allowing 1/2 tablespoon for each. Cover each with two tablespoons sauerkraut. Arrange two slices corned beef and two slices Swiss cheese on each. Top each with a slice of bread. Brush both outer sides of each sandwich with melted butter. Bake until cheese begins to melt and sauerkraut is heated. Serve immediately.

Note: Substitute dairy sour cream flavored to taste with chili sauce and prepared horseradish for the mustard.

COOL RACHEL SANDWICH
(Serves four)

Yogurt slaw *
8 slices large size rye bread
Butter, softened
8 slices corned beef
8 slices Swiss cheese

Spread bread with softened butter. Spread generous 1/4 cup yogurt slaw on each of four slices bread; top each with two slices corned beef and two slices Swiss cheese. Close sandwiches with remaining bread.

Yogurt slaw: Blend together 1/2 cup plain yogurt, 2 tablespoons chili sauce, 1/2 to 1 teaspoon seasoned salt and 1/2 teaspoon finely grated onion. Toss with 1-1/2 cups shredded cabbage. Chill to blend flavors. Makes 1-1/4 cups.

MONTE CRISTO SANDWICHES
(Serves six)

3 eggs, beaten
1/3 cup milk
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter, softened
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
12 slices white bread
6 slices (2 oz. each) Swiss cheese cut in half
6 slices (2 oz. each) smoked cooked ham
Confectioner's sugar
Cherry preserves

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Beat together eggs and milk; set aside. Beat together butter and mustard until well blended; spread on one side of each slice of bread. For each sandwich, top one slice of bread with one slice of cheese, one slice of ham, a second slice of cheese and a second slice of bread, butter side down. Dip each sandwich in egg mixture; brown on both sides on a lightly buttered griddle. Place on a cookie sheet and bake eight to 10 minutes. To serve, slice each sandwich in half, sprinkle with sugar and top with a spoonful of preserves.

New Orleans drink roster stars Sazerac

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

New Orleans is a city of many charms, with its creole cuisine and a delightful array of cocktails, from the Ramos Gin Fizz to the Sazerac.

I visited the venerable city some years ago and spent time in the Vieux Carre, or French Quarter. Its fine array of restaurants is the chief attraction, and many of them go in for the creole cuisine, a mixture of French, Spanish, Anglo-Saxon and Indian cookery which features crabs, oysters and crawfish seasoned with hot pepper sauce and file powder made from crushed leaves of sassafras.

Creole cookery is partly based on economy fare. Leftover rice and meat are often used to make the savory dish known as jambalaya. And a cheap cut of meat prepared properly can become that gourmet treat, daube de boeuf.

An outstanding feature of most of these restaurants is the list of fine wines and cocktails, especially the delightful Sazerac.

I looked up the origin of this drink and found that during the 19th century a popular gathering place in the French Quarter was the Sazerac Coffee House, named after a brandy.

In 1870, Thomas H. Handy, a bookkeeper, took over the place and renamed it the Sazerac House. He eliminated cognac from the Sazerac cocktail and replaced it with rye whiskey. Absinthe, a key ingredient, was also deleted, since it was banned in most places because of wormwood it contained, and replaced it with Pernod, which tastes much the same.

1 lump sugar
3 drops Peychaud's bitters
1 dash Angostura bitters
1 ounce rye whiskey
1 dash Pernod
1 slice lemon peel

Fill a heavy bottomed 3½-ounce glass with cracked ice and allow to chill. In a similar glass place the lump of sugar with enough water to moisten it. Crush the saturated sugar with a spoon. Add Peychaud's bitters, Angostura, the ounce of rye. Add several cubes of ice and stir. Never use a shaker. Empty the first glass of its ice and dash in several drops Pernod. Twirl the glass and shake out the Pernod. Enough will cling to the glass to give the needed flavor. Strain into this glass the whiskey mixture, twist the lemon over it but don't drop the peel into the drink. Serve.

Banana splits please family

COME FOR DESSERT
New Banana Splits & Coffee

NEW BANANA SPLITS

It's quick and easy to assemble.

10-ounce package frozen sliced strawberries with sugar, thawed
1 pint vanilla ice cream
1 pint chocolate ice cream
4 small ripe bananas
Chocolate Sauce

In an electric blender or a food processor puree strawberries — there should be a scant cup; cover and chill. At serving time, arrange scoops of vanilla and chocolate ice cream in four long glass sundae dishes. Pour a scant ¼ cup of the strawberry puree over the vanilla ice cream. Spoon chocolate sauce over the chocolate ice cream. Cut each banana in half lengthwise; arrange halves on opposite sides of ice cream. Makes 4 servings.

Low-sodium diet: What to eat?

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: Can you tell me what beverages, soups, juices and soft drinks I can take on my low-sodium diet?

I have high blood pressure and I need to lose weight so I thought if I just took some low-cal juices and soups instead of solid food it might help me to get my weight down. My doctor says I must not take a lot of salt or sodium. Does that have calories?

I have always loved Coca-Cola. Is that high in sodium?

Is white wine OK? How about beer?

I am a 57-year-old man and I hate to give up everything I like. — Mr. R.B.

Dear Mr. R.B.: You do not have to give up everything you like, but you may have to make a few changes to improve your health.

Coca-Cola, beer and wine are low in sodium, but are fairly high in calories, so you can take them occasionally in moderation.

Sodium is a mineral and does not have calories, but it can aggravate high blood pressure by causing severe water retention.

Avoid all canned soups and V-8 juice because they are very high in sodium. Grapefruit, orange, apple and pineapple juices are all low in both sodium and calories. Ginger ale and Perrier water are too, and make good mixes with juices.

Coffee and tea have neither sodium nor calories, but should be used moderately.

I don't suggest that you take just low-calorie juices or beverages instead of food to get your weight down, because you need more nutrients than they provide, especially fiber.

Use fresh fruits and vegetables (except celery), low-sodium milk and dairy products, low-sodium breads, fish, poultry and lean meats in your diet.

Avoid all canned and preserved foods and use salt substitutes in cooking and at the table. Enjoy all kinds of herbs and spices, wines and wine vinegars for flavorings.

Dry white wine may help your outlook considerably, but watch the quantity.

Dear Shirley: I have two children ages 7 and 9, both boys. I am having a hard time with after-school snacks. They always want cake, cookies and candy when they come home, because that's what their friends have at their house. I don't want them to have a lot of sugar, because I think it is bad for their teeth.

Do you have any good ideas to help me cope with other mothers who don't seem to care how much sugar their kids are eating? What are some good, easy things I could fix? — Mrs. L.J.P.

Dear Mrs. L.J.P.: You are faced with the age-old problem of competing with parents who disregard nutrition and give their kids anything that's handy. I remember it well, when my kids were in school.

The best defense is a good offense. Show you children pictures of people with ugly, rotten teeth and mishapen bodies, and associate ugliness with poor eating habits, excess sugar and bad teeth. No kid wants to be ugly. They will understand that your concern for what they eat is an expression of love for them. All kids understand love.

Then proceed to have only good snacks at your house, and show disdain for junky kinds that make people ugly. Try colored milk shakes with various fruits and ginger ale added. Use colored straws and decorative glasses.

Popcorn, all kinds of nuts and cheeses, fruits and vegetables cut into interesting shapes and strung on tooth picks as kabobs have great appeal for kids.

Peanut butter and softened cream cheese go well on whole grain beads that have been cut into cookie shapes.

Oatmeal and bran cookies with raisins, dates and other dried fruits are hard to beat, especially when accompanied by a luscious milk shake.

Your kids may even begin to brag about your snack.

Crock-pot prepares easier meals

Copley News Service

A crock-pot is a valuable addition to the vegetarian kitchen. If you have one, you will have noticed that vegetables stay flavorful and retain their color and consistency even after long hours of cooking. What you might not know is that the crock-pot method of vegetable cookery is helpful in retaining nutritional value as well.

The cooking is done very slowly and at low heat. This enables you to put your dinner together in the morning (or the night before) and leave it to simmer all day. What a bonus to the working cook — and what a pleasure to come home to find your dinner hot and ready to eat!

If you're lucky enough to have a crock-pot, bring it out and try one of these recipes. The preparation for each of these meatless main dishes is done hours in advance.

ZUCCHINI PARMESAN

8 small zucchini, cut in ¼-inch slices
1 onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
4 tbsps. olive oil
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1 tsp. salt
2 tsps. basil leaves
4 tsps. fresh parsley, chopped
½ tsp. freshly ground black pepper
½ cup freshly grated Parmesan
2 ripe tomatoes, peeled and quartered
Sliced black olives

Combine all ingredients except Parmesan, tomatoes and olives in crock-pot; ix well. Cover and cook on low setting 7 to 9 hours. Just before serving, pour into ovenproof casserole. Cover with Parmesan and garnish with tomato quarters and olive slices. Broil until cheese is lightly browned. Serves 6.

VEGETARIAN SPAGHETTI SAUCE

1 eggplant (1 lb.), cut into 1-inch cubes
1 medium onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, crushed
4 tsps. fresh parsley, chopped
1 tsp. leaf oregano
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. freshly ground black pepper
1 tsp. brown sugar
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
4 tomatoes, peeled and chopped
1 (6 oz.) can tomato paste
½ cup red wine

Combine all ingredients in crock-pot. Stir well; cover and cook on low settng 10 hours (last 2 hours at high setting). Serves 4 to 6.

CREAM OF LENTIL SOUP

1 lb. dried lentils
1 large onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 large carrot, diced
2 stalks celery, sliced
¼ tsp. crumbled leaf thyme
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 cup half-and-half

Soak lentils overnight in 7 cups water (or follow alternate method describe above). Add all ingredients except salt, pepper and half-and-half. Stir; cover and cook 5 hours on low, 3 hours on high setting. Then turn to low, stir in half-and-half, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Serves 6 to 8.

Potato pancakes easy, delicious for brunch

A spring morning deserves a celebration! As the fresh, new day is awakening, surprise the family with an extra-special breakfast. Or share the beauty of a spring morning by inviting a few friends over for brunch.

Try easy-to-prepare dishes so the cook has time to enjoy the spring morning, too. By including potatoes as part of the menu, you can provide a hearty meal that just says it's a speial day. It's easy to do with varieties of boxed potatoes.

One way to make breakfast special is with this variation on potato pancakes. Tender potato strips are dressed up with sliced green onions, imitation bacon and Swiss cheese. Start with boxed hash brown potatoes so the potatoes are already shredded and peeled for you.

DELUXE POTATO PANCAKES

1 package (6 oz.) hash brown potatoes
4 cups hot water
1-1/2 teaspoons salt
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese (about 4 oz.)
1/4 cup sliced green onions, with tops
1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon imitation bacon
2 eggs, beaten
1 to 3 tablespoons vegetable oil

Cover potatoes with hot water in 2-1/2-quart bowl; stir in salt. Let stand uncovered 15 minutes; drain thoroughly. Mix potatoes, cheese, green onions, imitation bacon and eggs. Heat oil in 10-inch skillet. For each pancake spoon about 1/3 cup potato mixture into skillet; press into patty, about 3 inches in diameter, with back of spoon. Cook over medium-high heat until brown, about 2 minutes; turn and cook other side until brown, about 2 minutes. Makes five servings (10 pancakes).

DEAR ABBY

Couple puts money over morals

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My nephew and his wife (early 30s) own a nice home in Phoenix. (I'll call them Tom and Terri.) They have no children.

Recently when Jean and John, an out-of-town unmarried couple from Los Angeles who live together, came to stay with them, they were asked to use separate bedrooms!

Now Tom and Terri are going to L.A. for the weekend and plan to stay overnight with Jean and John. I told Tom that it seemed rather hypocritical to me, since the issue is not the ownership of the house, but whether or not to sleep under the same roof with a couple whom they regard as "sinners."

To avoid their being sanctimonious, I suggested that Tom and Terri stay in a motel. They said to ask your opinion. — UNCLE ROG

DEAR UNCLE: It seems to me that if Tom and Terry want to be consistent in the matter of unmarried people of the opposite sex sharing living quarters, they should stay in a motel.

But hypocrites have been known to stay with "sinners" to save a buck.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the letter you received, 'And Baby Makes Three," in which the bride wanted to carry her 7-week-old baby down the aisle cradled in her arms, let me say this:

When my husband and I got married (three years ago), we had our cat at the altar with us. (The best man held him.)

Sure, some of the guests thought we were crazy, but that's too bad. The "three of us" had a wonderful day to remember. After all, it was our wedding, right? — CAT LADY IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR CAT LADY: It's purrrfectly all right with me.

DEAR ABBY: What do you do about late-night telephone callers who ring you up at midnight (or later) for a social chat?

My sister, who lives several thousand miles away, thinks just because she calls long distance I should be happy to talk to her regardless of the hour. I have asked her repeatedly not to call me after 10 p.m. unless it's an emergency because I have to get up at 6 a.m. and need my eight hours of sleep.

Well, she called at midnight about three weeks ago. I was sound asleep and didn't feel like talking, so I asked her to please write a letter or call me again — before 10 p.m. She hasn't called or written since.

I'm truly enjoying the respite, but family is family. Any suggestions? — ENJOYING MY SLEEP

DEAR ENJOYING: You may be enjoying your sleep, but your conscience must be bothering you or you wouldn't have written.

You could get in touch with your sister and apologize. But if you do, she will continue to disregard your wishes and call you whenever she feels like it.

Or you could let her know that you would like to hear from her — and reiterate the 10 p.m. deadline. And if she disregards your wishes again, give her the same treatment until you have her trained. Good manners and consideration are for family as well as strangers.

(If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Zinfandel good choice to serve with homemade pizza

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

When pizza is served at the nation's pizza houses, beer seems natural, and there's nothing wrong with that choice.

Pizza is a fun food, and rarely do we sit around and fawn over the delicacy of the herbs.

However, when making pizza at home and when using better ingredients than are found at the corner pizza hall, then I prefer a hearty red wine — but again nothing to worry about or pontificate over.

And that brings to mind Zinfandel.

I bring this topic up because I've recently tasted a wide range of Zinfandels and I found that, in spite of declining popularity in this variety, it offers the best hearty red wine for the money in these days of escalating prices for Cabernet Sauvignon.

I admit that many of the Zinfandels I've had in the last few months are high in alcohol and rough on the palate because of their youth, but many others offer such great concentration of taste and richness that they'll hold up to any sort of topping you plop on the pizza.

Picking out the best Zinfandels I've tasted in the last few months is impossible because of the wide range of styles in which they are made.

But among the best is a new effort by Iron Horse Vineyards.

This 1981 Zinfandel is 12.9 percent alcohol, and thus doesn't have the harshness of many of the "monster Zins" out these says.

Cross Creek offers special cooking

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Here's a food-travel report my friend, Jonathan Dudley, was good enough to send me. I hope you find it as edifying as I do:

"When I was young, Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings meant 'The Yearling' to me — that wonderful film adapted from her Pulitizer Prize-winning novel. Later, as you know, she wrote her 'Cross Creek' and 'Cross Creek Cookery', both evocations of life before World War II in the northern Florida backwoods.

"When my mother moved to a small town north of Orlando, I learned that Cross Creek was only about 75 miles from her home. Early this spring I left the New York City drizzle to visit her, and one sunny day we drove through the northern-most Florida orange groves to Cross Creek.

"We found the Rawlings house, now a state historic site, a group of three connected cottages. Spruce logs glowed in the fireplaces, and in the large old-fashioned kitchen the sun burned through the many windows where Marjorie Rawlings kept constantly in touch with Florida's backwoods.

"A friendly attendant suggested that my mother and I have lunch at a nearby restaurant called 'The Yearling.' It has an unprepossessing exterior, but large comfortable dining rooms, and a menu that — to a New Yorker — was downright exotic: fresh frogs' legs, catfish, alligator tail and cooter. I knew from 'Cross Creek Cookery' that cooter is a soft-shell turtle, and assuming I might never have another chance to taste it, I ordered it. It's much like a gamey chicken, with light and dark meat, but a firmer flesh. My mother, less adventurous, settled for broiled grouper. It was a marvelous lunch."

CROSS CREEK HUSH PUPPIES

1 cup stoneground white cornmeal
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 medium onion, minced
1 large egg
¼ cup water

Stir together the cornmeal, baking powder and salt; stir in the onion. Break in the egg and beat vigorously. Stir in the water. Using 1 level measuring tablespoon for each, form mixture into small round or finger-shaped patties. Drop, without crowding, into hot (375 degrees) deep fat and fry until hush puppies are a deep brown. Serve hot and at once. Makes about 1½ dozen.

Adapted from "Cross Creek Cookery" by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings (Scribner's).

THE BUTCHER

School teaches delicatessen arts

By MERLE ELLIS

"How can you tell a good sandwich?" Bob Severini asked, pointing his finger at the class as if to punctuate his question with an invisible question mark before he answered it himself. "By the first bite!" he said punctuating that with a definite exclamation point. "Today, we're going to discuss sandwich making."

The scene was a classroom at Deli University in South San Francisco, California. I'll bet you didn't know there was a school for sandwich making, did you? Well, there is and I went there last week.

Actually, Deli U is much more than that. It offers a complete curriculum in which the total range of successful delicatessen management skills are taught. Classes are led by instructors with years of practical experience. They discuss and demonstrate such topics as the appearance of personnel, the importance of establishing an ongoing relationship with customers, the techniques required to insure correct inventory control, and how to use, clean, and maintain all the equipment necessary to run a delicatessen — from the meat slicer to the walk-in box. They lecture on pricing and percentages, product selection and merchandising — everything you need to know to run a successful enterprise.

Deli U is a week-long (Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.) seminar designed to train employees in the fine points of delicatessen operation. There is a growing need for qualified deli people. Supermarkets all over the country are going back to those wonderful old-fashioned delicatessens where you can have lunch meats and sausage sliced to order, just as thick or as thin as you want.

I didn't realize until I went to Deli U that there were such fine points to the making of a good sandwich. There are lots of little things that need to be taken into consideration. You can't just slop some meat and/or cheese, lettuce and tomato between two pieces of bread; smear on some mustard and call it a sandwich — not if you're a graduate of Deli U. You need to consider such things as: Should the mustard go on the top or the bottom? Does it make a difference? What about the mayo? How thick should the meat be sliced? How much meat does the ideal sandwich contain? Where should the lettuce go?

Here are a few of my class notes on sandwich making:

Always put the mayonnaise on the top half of the roll or the top slice of bread, and the mustard on the bottom. Meat sandwiches should have the meat placed on the mustard side and the lettuce and tomato on the mayonnaise side.

Why? Bob Severini explains it this way.

"Many of our taste buds are in the roof of the mouth. If the first bite of sandwich shocked the taste buds with the harshness of mustard, it would not be as pleasant an experience as it would be if the first bite was mellowed with mayonnaise."

Float on the mayonnaise gently. Don't force it down into the bread, and do be generous. Both mayonnaise and mustard are high acid foods and help prevent bacteria from developing, which is particularly important for sandwiches that are to be kept out of refrigeration for a couple of hours.

Thin-sliced meat makes a much more flavorful sandwich than the same amount of meat sliced thick. Three-and-one-half or four ounces of meat is all that is required for a great sandwich, and it should be sliced as thin as possible without falling apart.

It should not be shredded. About half the thickness of most packaged luncheon meats is perfect. Fold the slices in such a way that they cover the bread completely. Nothing is more annoying than to have to look for the meat in a sandwich.

Lettuce is best cut into 1/8-inch shreds rather than left in leaf form. It has a better texture, allows for uniform distribution over the meat and makes a nice bed for the tomato slices. Have you ever bitten into a sandwich and had a slice of tomato slide out onto your lap? If you coarsely shred the lettuce, it helps to hold the tomato slices in place.

There is just no substitute for knowledge.

Consumers economically vital

By SHARON A. HILLIS
Midland County Extension Agent
Home Economics

President Reagan has declared the week of April 24 as National Consumers Week. In his declaration the president states that we must "fully recognize the crucial role consumers play in our economy."

Most of us know what government, agriculture, industry and labor contribute to the economy. But we don't often recognize how we as individual consumers contribute to the economic health of the nation.

The theme of this year's National Consumers Week is "Consumers Supply Demand." As consumers we are important to the economy because we create a demand for products — from homes to housewares; a demand for services — from medical care to auto repair; and a demand for information — from cost comparisons to safety information.

Consider how many stores, businesses and services in our country would close if it was not for the demand of the consumers who live here.

But it is not enough to simply recognize that consumers are important. We need to work at being more effective consumers to make our economy function at its best.

In the kick-off ceremony for National Consumers Week, Louis V. Gerstner, chairman-elect of the Joint Council on Economic Education, said there is a "strong need to improve the economic literacy of the American consumer as the country's economic environment becomes more complex and difficult."

Any consumer who has tried to figure out the advantages of different types of bank accounts, read the energy usage labels on major appliances or understand a warranty can appreciate Gerstner's comments. Although consumers now have greater choices in making purchase decisions, the increased amount of consumer information that goes with those choices can be confusing.

According to Virginia Knaur, director of the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs, the answer to this problem is consumer education which will "help us to function as competent, creative consumers."

For nearly 70 years the Texas Agricultural Extension Services has provided consumer information and education. But you don't need to wait for National Consumers Week to take advantage of this service.

Midland County Extension Service is sponsoring a home buyers clinic Thursday from 7 p.m. — 10 p.m. at the New Energas Building Flame Room, 2402 W. Wall Street (West Entrance). This clinic will assist prospective homebuyers to understand how to analyze how much they can afford to pay for a home, become familiar with current sources of home financing and understand the legal aspects of real estate transactions.

For more information on consumer programs and materials, contact Midland County Extension Service, 218 W. Illinois, Midland, 79702, or call 682-9481, Ext. 437.

Pasta: Not just noodles

Hearst Feature Service

What first pops into the mind when someone mentions the name James Beard?

Most likely, bread. That's because the erstwhile gourmet and New York Times food writer not long ago elevated the art of American kneading, baking and enjoying to the heavens with his best-selling cookbook, "Beard on Bread."

But anyone who has followed Beard's writings knows that he knows plenty about a lot more things than bread — as his ample figure bears mute testament. He he has been the author or co-author of no fewer than 18 other cook-books on such diverse items as hors d'oerves, Parisian cuisine and low-cost cookery.

But now, Beard has turned to pasta, that combination of flour and eggs that shows up on American tables in literally hundreds of shapes, from macaroni to spaghetti to noodles to bowties to fettucine.

Ever since diet boosters discovered that noodles need not be fattening, dozens of cookbooks about pasta have appeared on the market in recent years. But "Beard on Pasta" (Knopf, $13.95 hardcover) clearly is in a different class than most of those toss-offs. This, truly, is a pasta cookbook for pasta lovers, or as Beard proclaims it, "a book of good times to have with pasta."

AND GOOD TIMES they are indeed. Beard writes with lyrical ecstacy about the wonders of angel hair, cannelone, stuffed shells, ravioli and dozens of others. But don't make the mistake of thinking that "Beard on Pasta" is an Italian cookbook. Beard makes it clear that no single nation can claim its origin, and he provides scrumptious treatments for noodles from China, Japan, Greece, Germany and Israel, not to mention the United States.

The book begins with some common-sense talk about pastas of many varieties, but even here America's master cook has some surprises lurking inside the stuffed shells. For instance, while many contemporary "gourmet" chefs would have it that freshly made pasta is necessarily better than the dried kind you buy in stores, Beard says that isn't necessarily true.

"There is so-called fresh pasta that is sold in cardbord trays in supermarkets that is far inferior in quality to good dried pasta," he writes. "I believe it's far better to use a first-rate dried pasta made of durum-wheat flour than a trendy, mushy brand that dissolves in water like a dumpling."

That's not to say, however, that Beard is not a great fan of fresh pasta straight from the kitchen. To prove it, he offers a chapter loaded with tips on making your own, what equipment you need, and what works best. He includes startling variations on pasta itself (among them: tomato, beet, basil and avocado flavored versions), and recipes for making no-cholesterol noodles, Japanese Udon noodles, Bulgarian shredded noodles, Spatzle, potato gnocchi and the like.

HE ALSO OFFERS a handy guide to the cheeses that so often pair with pastas, from hard-grating types to bland varieties for folding, each with appropriate substitutions.

It's a helpful start, but the heart of the book is the recipes — they are enough to set a dieter counting shells, wagon wheels and twists to get to sleep — using pastas in everything from soups to main dishes to desserts.

To be sure, not all of Beard's recipes are food for dietic thought — the butter, the cream, the bacon — but then, one only lives once. While some of the recipes are admittedly complicated, there are an equal number that can literally be tossed together in a few moments from things you already may have in your cupboard and refrigerator.

Beard provides his personal preferences as to which shapes of pasta go with which sauces: big tubular or envelope shapes with bits of meat and fish, delicate angel hair with golden caviar, chewy twists and shells for cold salads. But even here, he urges experimentation and says you should do as you please. "Consult your own taste and style, feel free to experiment. Take chances. We Americans have been intimidated for far too long by other people's opinions of what we should eat."

"Beard on Pasta" is one of those free-spirited, delicious cookbooks. It seems destined to become yet another classic of the kitchen.

Here's just a sample of the contents. Read 'em and drool:

PASTA PRIMAVERA
(Serves four to six)

1/2 cup fresh peas
1/2 cup tiny, new beans
1/2 cup sliced stalks thin asparagus
1/2 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
4 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 cup light cream, warmed
Lots of freshly ground black pepper
1 pound pasta: Angel hair, linguine or orzo
Grated Parmesan

Lightly cook the peas, beans, asparagus and mushrooms in the butter until everything is crisply tender. Add the cream and pepper and cook down briefly. Cook the pasta, drain it and toss with the sauce. Sprinkle with lots of grated Parmesan cheese.

PASTA WITH PARSLEY PESTO
(Serves four to six)

4 to 5 bunches parsley, stems removed
3 large cloves garlic
1 cup whole walnuts
1 cup olive oil
1-1/2 teaspoons salt
3/4 cup Parmesan cheese
4 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/4 cup chopped dill, or one tablespoon dill weed
1 pound cherry tomatoes
1 pound pasta
2 tablespoons olive oil

Combine the parsley, garlic, walnuts, olive oil, salt and cheese in a food processor. Process the ingredients until you have a well-blended pesto. Melt the butter in the top of a double boiler over simmering water. Add the chopped dill and the tomatoes. Toss the tomatoes to coat with the dill butter and leave just long enough to heat through. Cook and then toss the freshly cooked pasta with two tablespoons olive oil. Place a portion of the pasta on each plate with some of the pesto on top. Arrange the cherry tomatoes alongside the pasta, and spoon some dill butter over them. Serve at once.

ANGEL-HAIR SOUFFLE
(Serves four)

4 ounces angel-hair pasta
6 egg yolks
3/4 cup shredded Cheddar, Parmesan or Gruyere cheese
3/4 cup finely diced prosciutto (or ham)
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1/8 teaspoon Tabasco
8 egg whites

Cook and drain the pasta. Put the egg yolks in the bowl of an electric mixer and beat them until they are thick and butter-colored, as long as five minutes. Stir in the cheese, prosciutto (or ham), pepper, Tabasco and the cooked pasta. In another bowl, beat the egg whites until they form soft peaks that just bend over. Stir a large spoonful of the whites into the yolk mixture, and then fold in the rest of the beaten whites gently but thoroughly, using a rubber spatula. Pour the mixture into a buttered two-quart souffle dish, and smooth the top with the spatula. Draw a circle with your finger on top of the souffle about two inches from the rim. This will make the center rise higher than the sides to form a cap. Bake in the center of a preheated oven for 15 to 20 minutes. Serve immediately.

Martini: English gin, American ingenuity

Hearst Feature Service

Gin, the most popular hard drink in England, came over to Britain from the Netherlands, brought back by soldiers sent by Queen Elizabeth I to fight the forces of Philip II of Spain. The Low Country locals called it "genever," and the English shortened the name to gin. We Americans, though, can claim credit for the martini, for it was a New York bartender named Signor Martini who first offered clients a drink of gin and dry French vermouth flavored with a drop of bitters and twist of lemon or a green olive.

And the martini, Harper's Bazaar advises those who don't already know, in an article in the April issue entitled "Enjoying the Gin Game," "is not merely a cocktail, it is the cocktail, the most popular cocktail of all time, and for many people, the only one."

But there are martinis and martinis. Many British favor half gin and half vermouth, uniced — a desecration of noble ingredients to many American martini drinkers. Most Americans like iced martinis.

As for the proportions, Bazaar notes that Ernest Hemingway favored 15 parts gin to one part vermouth. DeVoto — martini fan and author of a book on the cocktail hour — considered 3.7 to 1 perfection, and he may have been right.

"It should be stirred, not shaken, of course. And it should always be very cold. The cold, sharp sting of that first sip of a well-made dry martini is eminently satisfying — a special pleasure indeed."

The article decries the claim by some that strong spirits numb the palate and limit appreciation of fine wines with dinner. "Unless you overindulge, the stricture is unfounded. A single dry martini does not ruin your palate.

Annual 'rite of spring' in progress

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two new U.S. proposals to reduce the pileup of nuclear weapons are the latest steps in a deadly "Rite of Spring" with the Soviet Union, played before an audience that fears if the superpowers flop the result could be annihilation.

When the curtain rises again on arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland, on May 17, it will be the U.S. turn to lead. The chief American negotiator, Paul Nitze, will inform the Soviet delegation that President Reagan is prepared to modify his demand for an agreement banning intermediate-range missiles.

The Soviet response — Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's rejection at a Moscow news conference April 2 is not considered final — will be carefully measured by the Kremlin's military judgment and by the impact it will have on the talks.

But the Soviets are sure to keep the gallery in mind as well, for across Europe there is deep concern that without an agreement halting the scheduled deployment of new U.S. missiles in December and dismantling the deadly Soviet SS-20s the risk of nuclear warfare will be high.

WHATEVER THE UNITED States and the Soviet Union think of the other side's weapons-limitation proposals, neither wants to lose the propaganda contest being played out in Geneva, in public statements by their leaders and in the media.

This helps make this spring's arms control negotiations a curiously deadly game. National bargaining positions are based not only on security considerations, but on how they will play in Peoria, Pinsk and, especially, in Western Europe.

The Soviets hope that if they stake out positions that appear reasonable and put the Reagan administration on the defensive, they can weaken the already shaky commitment among many West Europeans to the 1979 NATO decision to deploy new U.S. medium-range missiles beginning in December.

Reagan, by the same token, must factor into U.S. proposals the mood of conciliation in the NATO countries. He is giving ground on "zero-option" not only because a deadlock in Geneva was in prospect, but because his best friends among the allied leaders counseled him to seek an interim deal.

It's a safe bet that Yuri V. Andropov was also trying to look good in Europe when he launched his career as Leonid I. Brezhnev's successor last year with a catchy offer to cut down to the 164 missiles the British and French have targeted on Soviet territory if NATO would shelve the planned U.S. missile deployment.

An Analysis

ON CLOSER INSPECTION, the offer was judged unacceptable, since it would still leave the Soviets with 164 triple-warhead SS-20s, while all 572 of the American Pershing 2 and ground-based cruise missiles would be kept at home.

Besides, Andropov did not say what would be done with the force of about 110 Soviet SS-20 missiles on the Asian side of the Ural Mountains, or if those being cut back in Europe would be dismantled or simply shifted across the Urals.

Considering the mobility and 3,000-mile range of the SS-20s, American officials expressed concern that the 164 the Soviets kept could be moved around to keep all of Western Europe in their range.

The second set of talks in Geneva, due to resume in early June, involve strategic nuclear weapons — ballistic missiles and bombers that can span oceans and continents.

There, too, the United States has edged off Reagan's initial proposal with a compromise.

The Soviets were not buying his suggestions for a treaty that, in its first phase, would require them to scrap most of the heavy ground-based missiles that are the heart of their strategic arsenal.

REDUCTIONS IN bombers and cruise missiles, where the United States enjoys a lead, would have been left for possible inclusion in a second phase.

The Soviets proposed an immediate nuclear freeze, followed by a pact that would cut the number of land-based and sea-based missiles and bombers by 25 percent by 1990.

The talks were headed toward a deadlock. They are not as politically sensitive as the Euromissile negotiations, but neither Reagan nor Andropov wants to be blamed for an impasse.

Seizing the initiative, U.S. negotiator Edward Rowny put a new U.S. offer on the table last month that would set equal ceilings of 400 strategic bombers on both sides and limit air-launched cruise missiles.

The Soviets' response was "caustic and acerbic," according to a knowledgeable U.S. official. They demanded a ban on all cruise missiles and accused the United States of trying to gain nuclear superiority.

But the administration is not taking the negative Soviet response as final. The nuclear stakes are too high, and all the world is watching.

Texas farmers worried about part-time farming

CHAPPELL HILL, Texas (AP) — Texas farmers are concerned that a trend towards part-time farming could have adverse effects on an already troubled industry.

According to the Texas Department of Agriculture, nearly six of every 10 farms in the state are now owned by people who don't depend on agriculture to make a living.

Agriculture observers say more and more city dwellers are abandoning weekday pressures by spending their weekends reaping the fruits of the land and the numerous tax advantages that come from part-time farming and ranching.

The trend is alarming to full-time farmers, they say, because part-timers are able to sell at low prices since they don't have to show a profit to survive.

The weekenders also are driving up the price of land and taking valuable acreage out of production, hastening the time when agricultural land will be in short supply, serious farmers say.

"The part-time producers are people without an interest in developing a strong, single-source income from the farm and are not really interested in expanding," said Dempsey Seastrunk, assistant director of the U.S. Agriculture Department's Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Their personal goals are different from what the free-enterprise system says you should be interested in," he said.

Residents pour money down pothole

HENDERSON, Minn. (AP) — Public-spirited residents of Henderson have a new outlet for their largesse — they can pour their money down a pothole.

For $10, the south-central Minnesota town will fill a pothole in your name and give you a certificate of appreciation.

For $20, the city will fill the pothole, give you a certificate and a color photo of the pothole and, if you like, paint an inscription of your choice over the repair.

"This is a good year for potholes," said City Administrator Joel Dhein last week.

Hard-boiled type downs 36 quail eggs in 30 seconds

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — It takes a hard-boiled type to gulp down 36 pickled quail eggs in a half-minute.

But Kirk Jordan of Grand Prairie claimed a share of the world record in the event by doing just that over the weekend.

Jordan, a member of a team fielded by the Wax Museum of the Southwest, beat 13 others in the world championship contest.

Billy Joe Shaver

Shaver eloquent as songwriter

"I been to Georgia on a fast train, honey.
"I wasn't born no yesterday.
"I got a good Christian raisin' and an 8th-grade education,
"Ain't no need in ya'll treatin' me this way."
— Billy Joe Shaver.

COUPLAND, Texas (AP) — It is late, and this tiny Central Texas town is only a dot of light amid miles of darkened, rolling plains.

Cars and pick-up trucks line the street outside the Coupland Tavern, a venerable old honkytonk with a wooden dance floor worn so slick you can slide clear across it, up to the stage where Billy Joe Shaver is playing.

Every seat is taken, and people stand along the walls. Some are young professionals who have driven the 25 miles from Austin. Most have come from the farms and ranches or small towns nearby.

Shaver has no clever, between-song patter. As his bass player re-tunes, he shifts awkwardly and finally mumbles, "I wish I knew what to say during this time — but I don't."

But Shaver is pure eloquence when he sits down to write his songs. He says what all here wish they could, putting down elitist intellectuals with a clever, dirt-road wit, or celebrating the call of the highway and the peculiar bond among the seekers who inhabit it.

After years of struggling, Shaver's songs have paid off. He has had four No. 1 county hits: "I'm Just an Old Chunk of Coal (But I'm Gonna be a Diamond Someday)," by John Anderson; "I Couldn't Be Me Without You," by Johnny Rodriquez; "Because You Asked Me To," by Waylon Jennings; and "Ride Me Down Easy," by Bobby Bare.

WILLIE NELSON, Tennessee Ernie Ford, Elvis Presley, the Oak Ridge Boys, Johnny Cash, Kris Kristofferson and Tom T. Hall, are among the 30 major artists who have recorded his songs.

But success has not affected Shaver, 43. He still takes his hat off when he's introduced to a woman. He just calls himself a poet.

"Long ago and far away,
"In my old common labor shoes,
"I turned the world all whichaway.
"Just because you asked me to."

He and his wife, Brenda, met in Waco, where Billy Joe moved from Corsicana when he was 12. Now they live in the Texas Hill Country southwest of Austin when Billy Joe isn't traveling to Nashville or New York.

Their 20-year-old son, Eddy, an accomplished guitarist, plays in his father's back-up band. Billy Joe can only strum a guitar with the thumb of his right hand because he lost three fingers in a sawmill accident 17 years ago.

At an interview later, Shaver apologized profusely for being late. He had just come from visiting his old friend Willie Nelson, who lives west of Austin, and had trouble tearing himself away.

He and Nelson are fellow self-proclaimed "outlaws" of the business (and perhaps society as a whole.) "The devil made me do it the first time," Shaver once wrote — "The second time I done it on my own."

After a while, he opens up a little, and it's easy to see where the songs come from.

"MY DADDY LEFT me before I was born," he said. "My childhood was really very sad. I didn't have my mother, I didn't have my father. My mother, she wouldn't have much to do with me because she hated my father so — and it's easy to understand that she wouldn't like me. So those days back then were very lonesome.

"I can remember even being a teen-ager walking down the road and saying, 'I'll never be smart enough to drive a car.' I mean I was humble. And I still am, because, boy, I didn't have nothin'. I can remember seeing cars whizzing by and thinking, even if I had the money to get into a car I couldn't never figure out how to get by another car without hitting it. Can you believe that? It's true. It's just the way I felt.

"I still feel that way sometimes," he said. "That's what saved me, I hope. Because I know everybody sitting around is capable of writing a million seller. I know all those hits are really the same. Everybody's got one. Everybody is one."

Shaver and his sister were raised by their grandmother on a pension. Sometimes the checks were late and they would have to overdraw their account at the general store.

"Pretty near all the time we'd have to overdraw," he said. "That lady down there knew that I sang. I was about 5 years old, and that lady would say she'd give me some more credit if I'd sing. Well, I sang my heart out. I sang 'Pins and Needles in my Heart,' all that old Roy Acuff stuff. I'd make up whatever I couldn't remember. That's how I got started writing songs."

Part Four: Married at last

MY LIFE WITH BING by Kathryn Crosby

The newlyweds' arrival in Palm Springs

Barrels of hate mail

It was the fall of 1956, and once again I had flown to Hayden Lake to marry Bing Crosby, but he had been receiving barrels of hate mail from fans who disapproved of his marriage to "a mere child." So once again he hesitated.

I had recourse to tears which, like most actresses, I can produce at will, and often to good effect. "Bing, please tell me you don't love me so I can go home. That is what I should do, isn't it?"

"Maybe if we had a little more time things would work out."

"We've had all the time in the world. Just say you don't love me. Then I can quit. I've known you since I was nineteen. I'm twenty-two now. That's long enough."

My whole body was shaking with sobs, so I stopped to admire my performance. If I hadn't known better, I'd have said I was out of control. But the circumstances seemed to warrant a heroic effort, and I really had had too much easy banter, too much moonglow on the lake, too much treading water, too much unilateral love. It was time to make a home for Bing or a life for myself.

"I can't say I don't love you, Kathryn, because I do. I always have and always will."

The blue-eyed devil. He had said the one thing that would twist the knife in my heart. To my surprise and horror I found myself screaming. Somewhere back there I'd abandoned the script.

"Take me to the airport. Take me there now."

"I'll take you in the morning."

"No," I stormed. "You take me right now. If you wait until morning, I won't go. I will stay with you until the bitter end and ruin both our lives."

"We can't get married now. The church is full of reporters."

"Well, what's so sinful about getting married? Let's invite them all to rejoice with us."

"For one thing, I left my hairpiece in Hollywood."

I was not amused. In fact I was wailing like a banshee and dissolving into a slobbering mess. Since I couldn't see, I don't know how Bing looked. But he sounded simply perplexed, as if an untoward fate had thrust all this confusion upon him.

"Come on, I'll take you back to the house."

I had gone to Hayden Lake to marry Bing. I had abandoned my home, my employment and my reputation. I had entrusted my fate to a masterful matinee idol, who now seemed paralyzed as a direct result.

Someone had to make a decision. I left, and refused to see him for about a year.

Kathryn's last stand

On October 2, 1957, I received a long letter from Bing which ended "I would give anything to see you and hear about your work, your life and your times. Won't you drop me a note at 594 Mapleton and tell me I can phone. I miss you so much. So write, even if just to say no. Yours, Bing."

No, no, this wouldn't do. My environment was under control. I was going to be a great actress, or failing that, learn more about the real world by becoming a nurse. I had read letters as sweet as this before, if not quite so obvious. He wasn't going to entrap me again.

Undecided to howl or throw up, I grabbed a piece of stationery and slashed. "Yes, I still love you. No, I won't see you. Kathryn."

That seemed to cover it nicely. I changed my unlisted number again.

He put it in writing!

The evening of October 22 I found in my mailbox a note, which had been delivered by hand. It read, "Dearest Kathryn, I guess this will be my last letter since you won't see me. I do feel I should tell you what I want to say. I want to marry you—any time, any place you wish. I really feel this proposal deserves a personal response and, as I'm supposed to return to the Springs tomorrow, won't you please call me this evening at Crestview 55633? This is the very last thing I'll ask of you. Love, Bing."

I read the note, then reached for the phone, picked it up, dialed three numbers, and hastily replaced it in its cradle.

No, he must have asked me to marry him twenty times over the last four years. I had accepted every time and was still single, I'd sleep on it.

The marriage broker

Unable to reach me, Bing phoned Aunt Mary and agreed with her that I could continue my acting and nursing if only I would marry him. I left everything in her hands, and drove off to work, wondering vaguely if what I'd needed all along was a marriage broker. If so I'd simply been a victim of cultural deprivation. We hadn't heard of them in West Columbia. But even that was no excuse for my dimwittedness in this town, where everyone was for sale and even the agent had agents.

Mary arranged for us to fly to Las Vegas, where we registered at the Desert Inn as Mary Banks and her daughter Olive. I dined on eggs Viennese, and was reclining in a big bubble bath by the time the phone rang.

"Of course we're here," Mary cooed. "Oh no, don't tell me!" Later she informed me that Bing had been calling for hours, only to be informd by the desk that Kathryn Grant had not registered.

"I know she would love to chat with you, but she's in the bath right now and it's very late, so why don't you tell me all your plans."

I watched the bubbles pop, and listened languidly to a conversation that affected me not at all. This particular enterprise had brought me such pain that I could no longer identify with it. I wondered idly what excuse would be found to delay my marriage this time.

My wedding day

The desert dawn was clear and cold, with streaks of rose on the horizon. I dressed with fatalistic calm. No more palpitations. I had gone that route.

At 8:15 we picked Bing up at the Sands Hotel. Mary and I were sitting in the back. When Bing opened her door, she started to slide out. My grip on her hand tightened, as I firmly refused to lose my security blanket. She laughed nervously and remained at her post.

Bing kissed her on the cheek, said "Good morning Miss Grant," and slid into the front seat.

At 8:25, the county courthouse loomed before us. Bing came around to my side of the car and helped me out. My hand must have been freezing because his seemed very warm. I dropped it, and started up steep marble steps toward a black, iron door.

I filled out the form with relative calm and walked back down those thousand courthouse steps. This time Mary sat in the front seat, and Bing joined me in the back. Ten minutes later, we were at St. Anne's.

We drove around to a rear door framed by oleanders, entered the vestry, where an enormous Irishman seemed as worried about his robes as I had once been about my trousseau.

The good father looked at me wistfully. Might I be a helpful lass with an iron? My glazed stare disillusioned him. "Well," he sighed, "a few wrinkles won't change the sacrament."

Bing laughed gaily, but I continued to observe the priest dispassionately. He filled out the certificate of marriage, added the official stamp of the church, and made two copies.

I regarded Bing warily, still waiting for the moment when he would break and run. Oddly enough, I wouldn't have been surprised or even hurt this time. I'd have felt only a mild concern lest he break a leg leaping over the oleanders.

But, wonder of wonders, he wasn't retreating. He was actually guiding me in this situation, moving me through the side door toward the altar.

Two little boys were waiting, their robes as formally starched and pressed as Monsignor Ryan's was wrinkled. The kneeler was luxuriously padded. As I sank into it I tried to pray, but discovered to my horror that I was simply catechizing the Deity:

"Can this be the right thing, Lord? I haven't seen the man for a year. Surely he's changed. I have. Can I still commit myself to him as completely as ever? Can I remain as calm as I am now? Will I be a good wife for Bing Crosby?"

But it was too late for misgivings; the ceremony had begun.

Mrs. Bing Crosby

My hands clutched a white orchid and a little missal. When Bing said, "With this ring I thee wed," I simply dropped them so he could place that six-dollar special on my short, square finger.

With all the years of instructions and rehearsals, I should have known what to do, but I didn't. Bing had to guide me every step of the way. He took my elbow, helped me to rise, pulled me down when it was time to kneel. From deep in my trance I watched the altar boys glide smoothly through their tasks. So at long last this was getting married. Bing gave me a peck on the cheek, and it was done. We marched into the tiny anteroom.

There, for the first time in many months, he kissed me on the lips. It was a small kiss, but at last I was free to hug him. Feeling his shoulders shaking, I backed away and saw that his eyes were full of tears. Instinctively I clutched him again and turned so no one else could see.

"It's all right, Bing," I whispered, desperately trying to still my own doubts. "We'll make it."

CBS, TV Guide still fighting over documentary

ENTERTAINMENT

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Last summer, CBS News investigated CBS News to protect the integrity of CBS News. The resulting report attempted to respond to charges by TV Guide that a 1982 CBS News documentary on Gen. William Westmoreland was a "smear."

But the unusual tactic of a formal in-house investigation and the subsequent admission of some procedural mistakes by CBS News did not make the accusations go away. In fact, they resurfaced in the past two weeks.

"Our credibility is our entree into the living rooms of America," said CBS News President Van Gordon Sauter last July, after releasing summarized findings of the Benjamin Report, the internal inquiry conducted by Burton Benjamin, CBS News' senior executive producer for hard-news broadcasts.

This same journalistic credibility, plus a $120 million libel lawsuit filed by Westmoreland against CBS News, apparently were the background forces sparking recent back-and-forth charges by CBS News and TV Guide.

CBS News had waited almost a year before it publicly attacked the TV Guide story of last May 29, entitled "Anatomy of a Smear." The story questioned the way CBS News went about proving the thesis in its "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception" that Westmoreland led a conspiracy to fabricate enemy troop figures during the Vietnam War.

Then last month, the story won the award for distinguished magazine reporting from Sigma Delta Chi, the Society of Professional Journalists.

"We're not attempting to tear down the article," Gene Mater, CBS News' senior vice president for communications and news practices, said Monday. "We're responding because somebody gave them an award."

In a March 28 letter to The Quill, Sigma Delta Chi's magazine, Sauter said the TV Guide story "deserves closer examination." Sauter cited three "serious errors within the article," illustrating a "shocking disregard for the truth."

Sauter cited a June 29 letter he received from Allen, who said his remarks in TV Guide were "lifted out of context." Allen said he "did not attempt to dissuade CBS from doing the show, and I do not believe the show made a mountain out of a molehill."

Television rated as 'less entertaining'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Americans have become more demanding about what they see on television, but they are not particularly interested in electronic newspapers, "electronic yellow pages,"" or in using their sets for home banking, a survey indicates.

"Although people continue to watch as much — even a little more — than they did in the mid 1970s, they tend to rate television as less important in their lives, less entertaining and less of a technical marvel," Larry Patrick, a private research consultant, told delegates Monday at the annual National Association of Broadcasters convention.

"Our conversations with viewers also reveal that they judge TV programming by what appears on the screen, and not on whether the programs arrive via local stations, microwave, cable or satellite," said Patrick, a former NAB vice president for research.

"The study re-emphasizes that programming is the key to broadcasting's future. The service with the best programming — the one which pays attention to audience needs and tastes — will always win the battle."

The nationwide survey that Patrick unveiled Monday is the result of research conducted in viewers' homes and by telephone under NAB auspices. It was released at a time when conventional broadcasters have begun to fear the loss of their audiences to cable and pay TV and such emerging technologies as satellite-to-home broadcasting.

The broadcasters attending the convention were told, however, they should be paying less attention to new technologies and more to understanding "the evolution of a new kind of TV audience" that still considers television a friend but wants more and better programming.

"Our study shows that viewers still regard television primarily as a source of entertainment," he said. "But they report more selective use of television, and greater reliance on it as a source of information."

There is clearly more competition for viewing time, the study found. Almost a quarter of the respondents reported they were using auxilliary equipment — such as video games, computers and video cassette recorders — more than 10 hours a week.

Revon Craig of Beaumont poses with his collection of boots. A few of them were custom made, but most were purchased off the shelf. He owns approximately 40 pairs.

Man gets kick out of hobby

He owns 40 pairs of boots

BEAUMONT (AP) — Revon Craig says one of his earliest memories is that of a neighbor who visited his father's farm in northeastern Oklahoma wearing a new pair of boots.

"My daddy told him how foolish he was for paying $25 for them," Craig remembers. "I was impressed, and I told myself one day, I would own a pair of $25 boots."

When Craig was 12, his parents finally bought him his first pair. "I wore those things 'til there was nothing left but the tops of them," he says.

Craig's boot collection has come a long way from the scant beginnings. He owns 40 pairs and plans to acquire more.

He also has paid considerably more than $25 per pair.

Craig says the most expensive was probably a pair of alligator skins that cost $1,200. He estimates his total investment at between $15,000 and $17,000.

He has another pair of 'gators, his favorite skin, on order that will cost him $2,800.

For now, his favorite is a pair of alligator skins "all the way up."

"I've only worn out one pair since 1970," says the bearded, affable Craig, owner of Golden Triangle Cycle Center.

"Probably the reason I started collecting at that time was I had just moved next door to Sam's Western Store. It was convenient to just go next door and buy a pair of boots."

He still has the first pair, gray elephant skins he bought 13 years ago.

"They've been caked with grease, paint, most everything. But you can clean them right up.

"I wore them to paint my store, and they came out barn red. But look at them now," says Craig as he looks at the spotless skins admiringly.

A few pairs were custom made, but most were bought right off the shelf, he says.

Two pairs are made from ostrich skin with the outline of Texas engraved on one boot and a diamond chip inset within the state boundaries.

They are numbers 104 and 726 from a limited edition of 1,000 produced by Justin, a popular Texas bootmaker.

The skins represented in Craig's collection include Oriental lizard, anteater, boa constrictor, eel, ostrich, hornback lizard and sea turtle.

"There are some skins I don't have, like frog, turkey leg, kangaroo, water buffalo and shark skin," Craig said. "Kangaroo is real soft, but water buffalo and shark skin are tough."

He wears most any pair on most any occasion, "whatever coordinates with what I have on. Alligator is the most durable. Eel is a little delicate."

He owns only two pair made of non-exotic skins, a pair of handtooled cowhide and a pair of blue cowhide.

"I have several pairs of shoes, but I can't remember the last time I had a pair on."

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Cholesterol production determined by heredity

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard people say why cut down on butter and gravy and things like that because the body manufactures its own cholesterol anyway. How much does the body manufacture and where does it come from? — Tony, New York City, N.Y.

Dear Tony: About 80 percent of the cholesterol in the blood is produced by the liver. The amount is determined by the individual's heredity and is not affected by diet.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I think I may finally be pregnant (after trying for several months) and I'd like to make everything as nearly perfect as possible. You have written about how people use too much salt. If I thought it would help me and the baby, I'd cut it out entirely. What do you think of this idea? — May, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Dear May: It is true that many Americans use too much salt and that a significant reduction in salt intake is generally a good idea. But since you may be pregnant, I would advise against any such drastic change at this time.

If you have not seen an obstetrician yet, do so and let him or her tailor a nutrition program to your specific needs.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Sometimes something is said so many times that it is taken for granted even though it may not be true. I've often heard people talk about someone who is described as being fat and jolly. Is this a common combination? — Stephen, Long Beach Long Island, N.Y.

Dear Stephen: I assume there must be some people who could be described as being fat and jolly, but I would say that this was much more the exception than the rule. For example, on Canadian study indicates that obese women who have been unable to control their weight are much more likely to suffer from depression than are women in the general population.

I don't really believe that studies are necessary to emphasize this point. Who would be jolly about being at increased risk for heart disease, high blood pressure and diabetes? Who would be happy about carrying around excess weight that could seriously aggravate an arthritic condition?

In my private practice I treat obesity as a serious medical condition. Occasionally a new patient may tell me that he or she really doesn't care about losing weight. Invariably, however, as we get to know each other, these patients enter wholeheartedly into a program of weight control. And I can assure you that they are much happier when they begin to look and feel better than they were when they first walked into my office.

Dear Dr. Solomon: In a previous column you had talked about face-lifts. Exactly how is it done? Does it leave scars? Can anyone have a face-lift? — Mrs. C.I., San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Mrs. I.: Incisions are made in the hairline at the temples and extended down in front of the ear, around the lobe and up behind the ear, ending in the hair at the back of the neck. They type of incision varies according to the surgeon's preference and with the problem presented by the individual case. Then the skin of the face and neck is undercut, forward into the cheeks, downward and backward into the neck, thereby freeing it so it can be drawn up, tightened and smoothed. The excess is cut away. The skin edges are carefully tailored to fit into the scalp and around the ear.

The incisions do leave scars, but they are so placed as not to be readily visible. The surgeon may show the patient where the scars will be. Only certain people can have a face-lift. Only those for whom the surgeon feels a significant improvement will result for a reasonable length of time.

This is fairly extensive surgery, and should be undertaken only by surgeons who have demonstrated ability and have had specific training and experience in the procedure. It should be done in hospitals or clinics or offices well equipped with operating facilities. Aesthetic surgery, including face lifting, is an important part of the plastic surgeon's practice. Face lifting involves a major dissection of the skin and should only be undertaken by plastic surgeons, or other individuals who have had specific training and experience in this procedure and have demonstrated their ability to perform with skill and safety.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My child rarely sleeps through the night. It wouldn't be so bad if I thought he would outgrow it. How long is something like this likely to continue? Is this something that anyone can predict? — Mrs. P.Y., Detroit, Mich.

Dear Mrs. Y.: Any prediction based on your bare-bones description would not be of much value to you. You do not mention your child's age and, of course, much would depend on the reason his sleep is so poor.

However, one study has shown that sleep disturbances in 4-year-old children do not predict the child's future sleep behavior. This conclusion is based on a study by Dr. Gunnar Klackenberg, of the Karolinska Hospital in Stockholm, Sweden, who studied a group of children, 4 to 16 years of age.

If you have not already done so, I would suggest that you have your youngster seen by your pediatrician so that the cause of the sleep disturbance can be determined.

For a reader in Wilmington, Del: Splashing with water when running long distances (not necessarily a marathon) appears to be helpful in preventing severe heat injury. This conclusion is based on a review of the experiences of runners during a 10-kilometer race when the temperature was about 76 degrees Fahrenheit. Twenty-nine runners were severely affected by the heat, although all recovered promptly.

For Marjorie, Falls Church, Va.: Dr. David B. Herzog, of the Harvard Medical School, suggests that bulimia (binge eating followed by self-induced vomiting or the use of laxatives) may reflect a type of depression.

Of 30 patients with bulimia who were studied, more than three-fourths had serious depressive symptoms. In the addition many of the family histories were characterized by emotional illness, alcoholism, chronic illness, and death.

This contemporary Cupid cake plate, on loan to the Museum of the Southwest from The Total Table, is typical of modern jasperware by Wedgwood. The museum's Wedgwood display includes antique Wedgwood, on loan from the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library. The display is in honor of Londoners Barbara and Hensleigh Wedgwood, who will present a free lecture and slide show on their book "The Wedgwood Circle" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium.

'Wedgwood Circle' recounts family legacy

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

In 1759, when he created his first piece of pottery under his family's name in Burslem, England, he didn't know his family's name would become one of the foremost names in fine china. Nor did he know that his work would make him the outstanding leader in the pottery industry during the greatest period of British pottery making.

Wedgwood. Josiah Wedgwood.

He was 29 years old. By 1762 his efforts were rewarded in his successful line "Queen's Ware," named in honor of Queen Charlotte, wife of George III.

Almost 200 years later, in the 1950s, Dallasite Barbara Boyd, a recent Southern Methodist University graduate who was working on her masters in psychology at The University of Texas at Austin, didn't know her career decision to work in Neiman-Marcus' executive training program would bring her into "The Wedgwood Circle." While she was working as Neiman's buyer of china and glass, she met and and married Hensleigh Wedgwood, the great-great-great grandson of Josiah Wedgwood.

"Hensleigh was president and chairman of the board of Wedgwood at that time," Barbara said in a recent telephone interview. Laughing, she added, "I bought a lot of china from him and he decided to marry me."

Barbara and Hensleigh Wedgwood will be giving a free lecture at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium. The lecture is sponsored by the Museum of the Southwest.

They will be talking about their book, "The Wedgwood Circle 1730-1897," which took four years to research and a year to write. Published in 1980, "The Wedgwood Circle" is a history of the Wedgwood family through four generations beginning with Josiah Wedgwood.

The material in the book comes, as Barbara said, "from a lot of old family letters that had never before been made public.

"There hadn't been a book on the entire family, though, of course, there had been many books on Josiah Wedgwood and on his grandson Charles Darwin. This book covers the Wedgwoods as a family and their many famous friends."

One such famous friend was the poet Robert Browning.

It was his relationship with Julia Wedgwood that inspired Barbara to write the play "Browning's Other Romance." This work, which has had several readings by Barbara and Hensleigh in London at the May Fair Theatre and in the United States, will be produced by the BBC this year.

Julia Wedgwood's "been an important part of my life," Barbara said. "She was Hensleigh's great aunt. She was born in 1833 and died in 1913. She's probably best known today for her having had a love affair with the poet Robert Browning after Elizabeth Barrett's death.

"Julia apparently resembled Elizabeth both physically and in her intellectual leanings. The two eventually ended the relationship after a tragic misunderstanding."

In Thursday's lecture and slide show presentation Barbara and Hensleigh will talk about the Wedgwood family's associations with such names as Samuel Taylor Coleridge, William Wordsworth, Charles and Mary Lamb, John Ruskin, George Eliot, Thomas Carlyle, and, of course, Robert Browning.

The family story is packed with vignettes: One Wedgwood took piano lessons from Chopin and another had a poem dedicated to her by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Chinese audience voices approval of U.S. orchestra

PEKING (AP) — An enthusiastic Chinese audience voiced approval of trumpet soloist Stephen Weger with a roar of bravos as the Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra performed for a second time here.

But the orchestra, which played five encores at its opening concert Sunday night, had to stop with two Tuesday night.

Conductor John Giordano explained to the audience that the heavy instruments and other equipment had to be packed quickly to be sent ahead to Shanghai, where the orchestra goes on tonight for two more concerts.

"That's a beautiful audience," said Weger, who impressed the 1,100 listeners with virtuoso technique, especially in cadenzas he devised himself, in Hayden's Trumpet Concerto.

Weger took four curtain calls at the end of the concert's first portion and left the audience clapping for more.

The audience stayed for a while after Giordano's annoucement, clapping rhythmically, but the 40-member orchestra walked off stage.

"I think we could have played more than we did the first time," Giordano said. "We had prepared six encores. It's too bad, but I'd rather have the instruments (in Shanghai)."

He said of the Chinese audience, "I felt like people already were expecting to like what we were going to do before we did it."

The orchestra included the Chinese piece "Moonlight on Second Spring" on the regular part of its program Tuesday after playing it as an encore on Sunday.

Casa de Amigos cancels concert

Casa de Amigos benefit concert scheduled for Friday at the Midland Hilton Ballroom starring jazz artist Bubbha Thomas and The Lightmen has been cancelled.

Citing poor ticket sales resulting from the heavy schedule of entertainment events currently taking place in the Midland-Odessa area, the Casa de Amigos board of directors voted Monday night to cancel the engagement.

Money will be refunded to ticket holders.

U.S. started Nazi hunt 20 or 30 years too late

NEW YORK (AP) — After decades of seeming apathy about reports of alleged World War II criminals living quietly in America, government activity against suspected Nazis or their collaborators is at an all-time high.

The Justice Department is investigating 200 cases as well as conducting a separate inquiry into reports that U.S. intelligence agents might have shielded Klaus Barbie, head of the Gestapo in Nazi-occupied Lyon, France, after the war in exchange for his help in post-Soviet espionage.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, has launched its own probe of the post-war relationship between American intelligence agencies and certain Nazis, including Barbie.

The investigations come at a time when public sentiment in this country favors action against alleged war criminals — a marked change from the past.

"WE'RE DEFINITELY coming in late," said Allan A. Ryan, head of the Justice Department's Office of Special Investigations.

"As a result, we're probably the most active country right now. But that's a dubious distinction. Other countries did this work 20 to 30 years ago."

Ryan currently is on leave from the OSI to head the Barbie investigation. The OSI seeks alleged Nazi war criminals in the United States and moves to deport them on immigration violations. Those who are U.S. citizens must first be stripped of their citzenships.

The alleged Nazi collaborators being prosecuted by OSI were believed to have slipped into the country in the late 1940s and early 1950s, fooling immigration officials. But the allegations about Barbie, implicating high-level U.S. officials, have raised some uneasy questions.

After initial resistance, Attorney General William French Smith agreed to have Justice investigate the Barbie affair. Barbie has been twice convicted in absentia in France in connection with the deaths, torture or deportation of 11,000 Jews and French resistance workers during the war.

Ryan said he intends to examine whether the Army Counterintelligence Corps worked with Barbie, whether U.S. officials shielded him from French authorities after the war and whether the U.S. government had any relationship with him after he fled to Bolivia.

"IT'S IMMENSE," John Tipton, a GAO senior evaluator, said of the GAO project, while declining to discuss details. He said the agency was coordinating its efforts with Justice, but that the two groups were working separately.

Forty years after the war, the OSI has denaturalization cases pending against 13 East European-born U.S. citizens suspected of having concealed past collaboration with the Nazis. The defendants would lose their citizenship if the government proves they hid past activities when immigrating.

The OSI also has deportation cases pending against nine resident aliens and six former citizens who have already been denaturalized. Four other cases were closed after the defendants died.

Ryan says in all about 200 cases are under investigation, although many may never result in charges.

Two former citizens — a native Romanian and a native Ukrainian — now await deportation, the first people to be ordered out of the United States for Nazi activity.

Valerian Trifa, 68, a Romanian Orthodox bishop in Grass Lake, Mich., and Feodor Fedorenko, 75, a retired factory worker living in the Philadelphia area, were found by U.S. courts to have hidden past activities as Nazi collaborators when they came to the United States.

A THIRD deportation case is nearly completed. Hans J. Lipschis, a Lithuanian-born citizen of West Germany, agreed to deportation last Dec. 23 and said he would return to Germany by April 21.

In the 1950s and '60s, immigration officials did little to investigate suspected cases of Nazis living in the United States. Simon Wiesenthal, the famed Nazi hunter in Vienna, Austria, said Americans were more concerned with fighting communism in those Cold War days.

"The U.S. efforts came too late," he said. "Too many witnesses have died."

Action was first brought against Trifa in 1975, a time when the public mood began to shift away from Cold War attitudes and Congress pressed for action, creating OSI in 1979. Because the United States cannot prosecute anyone for the actual war crimes, OSI brings suspected war criminals to trial on charges of violating U.S. immigration law.

U.S. investigators and prosecutors now travel to the Soviet Union, Poland, and other Eastern European countries to gather evidence against the defendants. Some concentration camp survivors are brought here to testify in court. In all, the OSI spends $2.6 million a year.

To get leads, Ryan says government investigators search documents from the 1930s and 1940s, comparing names of concentration camp guards and SS officers against U.S. immigration files.

"THAT TENDS to be a much more reliable source than someone calling to say they think their neighbor is a Nazi," he said.

Ryan explained that it had been relatively easy for former Nazi collaborators to enter the United States after the war.

Most of those currently implicated entered from refugee camps in Europe after the war. The U.S. Displaced Persons Act of 1948 and subsequent laws opened the door to refugees, but barred anyone who had aided the enemy.

"Refugees did not have a lot of paper documentation," Ryan said. "It was not that easy to find out what they did during the war, unless there was some specific adverse information against them. They generally passed themselves off as farmers."

Ryan also said the collaborators being investigated were willful accomplices of the Nazis, not innocent bystanders trying to survive under the occupiers.

Only one American, Hermine Braunsteiner Ryan, has been extradited to another country to be prosecuted for war crimes. In 1973, Mrs. Ryan, of Queens, N.Y., was sent back to her native West Germany, where she was convicted of having served as a guard at the Nazi death camp in Majdanek, Poland. She was sentenced to life in prison in 1981.

THE UKRANIAN-BORN Fedorenko, who lost his citizenship in 1981 after a U.S. Supreme Court ruling, has indicated he would return to the Soviet Union, where he has a wife and two sons. His deportation order is on appeal.

Trifa asked to go to Switzerland, but the Swiss government refused to eccept him. The U.S. government also asked the Italian government to take him, but Italy said no.

"We've been talking to a number of different governments," Ryan said. "Now we are free to locate any other country that will accept him."

Ryan said he was confident a country would be found for Trifa, but if none was, the bishop would remain here as a stateless person and could not be prosecuted.

Thatcher under fire over bill which increases police powers

By ED BLANCHE

News Special

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government is under fire from jurists, clergymen and other professional groups over proposed legislation to give police wide-ranging powers, including access to confidential files and new search rights.

Even the police are divided on the issue.

The Police and Criminal Evidence Bill now before Parliament has united professional bodies who claim it will violate civil liberties and the long-cherished confidentiality of clergy, the press, the medical profession and social workers.

The bill seeks to empower Britain's 130,000 policemen to hold suspects for up to 96 hours without charge and without access to lawyers for 48 hours. At present, police can hold suspects without charge for 24 hours.

Suspects now have access to a lawyer as soon as possible after their arrest — usually within a few hours — provided such access does not cause "unreasonable delay or hindrance" to police investigations

THE BILL also seeks to force doctors and clergymen, with the approval of a judge, to grant police access to their records. It also would allow police to stop and search anyone if they they have "reasonable suspicion" the person may have carried out, or be planning, a crime.

The bill has passed through the House of Commons virtually unscathed, but it faces a stormy reception and probable revision next month in the House of Lords The Lords can delay and amend legislation, but the house no power to defeat proposed bills outright.

The bill does not address the controversy over whether British bobbies should be armed. This debate heated up last week when the city of Manchester put armed police mobile units on the city's streets for the first time in British history because of a sharp increase in crime involving firearms.

Lord Salmon, former Lord Justice of Appeal, branded the bill on police powers "shocking and monstrous" and charged that it would move Britain "closer to being a police state."

THE POLICE Review, an independent monthly reflecting the views of many officers, said that access to confidential files is a power "few police officers want, none of them need and hardly any will exercise."

But Leslie Curtis, chairman of the Police Federation representing officers up to chief inspector, declared: "To hear some people talking, you'd think that the lamp of freedom in this country is about to be snuffed out and a new dark age of police tyranny is upon us. That's dangerous nonsense."

He hailed the bill as the first real "framework" for a fight against crime.

David Mercer, spokesman for the Law Society representing 30,000 lawyers, said: "We support codifying our extremely vague laws. But the bill tips the balance too far towards the police against the freedom of the individual."

In the face of this protest, government sources said Mrs. Thatcher, a stern law-and-order advocate, may be forced to dilute the bill's most controversial provisions.

HOME SECRETARY William Whitelaw last week pledged to limit police access to doctors' confidential records. But he has not spelled out his planned amendments and fears remain that they will be cosmetic.

A new art complex has appeared in the Paris Forum des Halles, the ultra-modern three-level underground shopping mall that opened in 1979. Standing in front of St. Eustace Church, right, it is the latest addition to the structures which replaced the old bustling Les Halles food market.

Critics: Les Halles 'disfigures' Paris

PARIS (AP) — Few urban renewal projects in France have aroused as much controversy as Les Halles — the crater in the heart of Paris that once was the city's bustling wholesale food market and a place to get an early morning bowl of onion soup.

Nobody liked the 26-acre hole created when Les Halles moved to the suburbs in 1971, but now, after 12 years of indecision, the hole is being plugged, and some don't like it any better.

"A monster," wrote art critic Pierre Cabanne in the leftist newspaper Le Matin about Les Halles' newest addition — a vast cultural complex which opened recently with a major show of works by the French sculptor Cesar.

The Pavillon des Arts, designed by architect Jean Wilerval, is "one of the most distressing architectural white elephants ever imagined," Cabanne wrote. "The heart of Paris has been forever disfigured and plundered."

The new art complex is the brainchild of Mayor Jacques Chirac, and it is intended to bring cultural activity to the area the author Emile Zola once called "the belly of Paris."

Cabanne gave high marks to the Cesar retrospective which features the sculptor's best works.

"Cesar gives us a lesson in the mastery of forms and materials whereas the building is a bluff and a fake," Cabanne wrote.

The 62-year-old Cesar, one of France's most popular artists, is best-known for his ingenious use of everyday materials; such things as blue jeans, plastic bottles, cardboard, and hubcaps are compressed and turned into blocks of sculpture. But the show also features his realistic sculpture such as a finely detailed, six-foot thumb.

The five new buildings that make up the art complex are around the Forum des Halles, the ultramodern, three-level underground shopping mall that opened in 1979.

Defenders of the new complex of gleaming white enameled steel and lots of glass say its curved shape captures the architectural flavor of the old market's elegant cast iron and glass pavilions — whose destruction caused an earlier outcry.

But Michele Champenois, architectural critic of the newspaper Le Monde, says the building looks like "a wheat silo in the American Midwest."

"The glass is overwhelming, and just takes over," wrote Miss Champenois. "It is a poor-man's Palm Beach."

Women free of 'golden lotuses'

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Chinese no longer bind the feet of their young girls, but vestiges of the ancient practice can still be seen on the streets of Peking. There, old and crippled women recall the time when bound feet were considered the epitome of beauty and allure.

By LIU HEUNG SHING

PEKING (AP) — "Ah, her two golden lotuses drove me to distraction again and again," says the hero of the novel "The Golden Vase of Plum Blossoms." He was praising his favorite concubine with a slender waist, plump thighs and minutely, torturously bound feet — her golden lotuses.

For more than a thousand years bound feet were the supreme fetish of men and the enslavement of women in the Middle Kingdom. Among the wealthy, unbinding the foot and fondling it was an integral part of making love. Kissing a woman's unbound foot was considered infinitely more erotic than kissing her lips.

Despite the excruciating pain and crippling of women, foot binding survived the first years of Communist China after 1949.

Today, old women still hobble about Peking, many aided by canes and wheelchairs. Today, their golden lotuses no longer are shod in exquisitely embroidered red satin boots with white high heels, but in quaint black cloth slippers.

RELICS OF feudalism, some 2 million women with bound feet survive, according to the major June 1 Children's Factory that turns out about 1 million pairs of tiny shoes a year.

> "I couldn't endure the kids jeering and saying, 'Your big feet arrive before your body.' They said I would never find a husband and so I would die alone and be buried in my parents' grave."

Wang Xiucheng and two other golden lotus ladies told of their ordeal. They were crippled for heavy field work, finally spurned by their husbands. Their lives were not the stuff of novels about cherished women who dipped their feet into fragrant water in Ming porcelain vases.

Madame Wang, 60 and still spry, grew up in Siziwang, a desolate frontier town in inner Mongolia. Even after 1949, she says, girls there were having their feet bound mercilessly into golden lotuses.

"I'll regret it until the day I die," says Madame Wang, a widow, as she and her crippled friends sat on a kang bed and took off their childlike shoes in a rare, intimate display for a photographer.

Even today, she says, the heels become inflamed and the pain is unbearable. "Sometimes I cannot stand it and I must crawl on my hands and knees," she says.

IN 1928, however, she had no choice. "No girls would play with me," she says. "I was so humiliated I finally begged my mother to bind my feet." Normal feet were ridiculed as deformed "wild cactus."

"I couldn't endure the kids jeering and saying, 'Your big feet arrive before your body,'" she says. "They said I would never find a husband and so I would die alone and be buried in my parents' grave."

Foot binding is said to go back to the Emperor Li Yu of the late Tang Dynasty (907 A.D.). He is said to have asked all women dancers at a party to bind their feet in an arch so they could tiptoe and sway more seductively.

The imperial fetish was adopted by Sung Dynasty aristocrats and became a fad in the Ming period. It caught on, too, in the countryside, where there were no ladies of leisure, nor sedan chairs to carry them about.

The "ideal" bound foot measured 3 to 4 inches in length, according to rare books on the subject.

MADAME WANG was 6 when her mother bound her feet. By the age of 7 it would have been too late since the bones could not be bent in a vice with the toes curling clawlike under the big toe and foot.

All the weight rested on the heel and women walked with the mincing gait that men called alluring. The bound foot was called a golden lotus because it resembed a lotus bud.

"For 15 days I suffered such pain that I could not sleep," Madame Wang says.

That was the beginning of womanhood. A girl with bound feet no longer was permitted to speak with boys or men, not even her own uncle.

Madame Wang was married off at the age of 12 to a man 15 years older. "I never saw my future husband before," she says.

Her husband didn't unbind her feet. He thought they were loathsome and believed it was a bad omen to see a woman's naked unbound feet.

So she always wore her little pointed shoes to bed.

"BUT HE wouldn't have considered marrying a woman without bound feet," she says. Her crippled friends nodded in agreement at the irony.

"No matchmaker would touch a big foot woman," says her friend Wang Hsuxi, 80, another victim of the golden lotus. "The first question they would ask was, 'Are the feet bound?' Not 'Is she pretty?'"

After 1949 the golden lotus fetish began to wither. Madame Wang took off her foot bindings and her feet grew a little. They now measure what would have been a monstrous 5 inches.

Madame Wang buys special handmade shoes in Peking's "red flag" shop, for $2.80. The shop turns out 100 pairs each month.

Madame Wang now lives with her only son, an invalid, in a tiny house in a courtyard and survives on $16 a month.

Everyday, with the painful gait that once won admiring stares, she takes her daily walk into modern Peking, a lady in black, limping on golden lotuses.

Japan will remove ban on nine food additives

TOKYO (AP) — The Health and Welfare Ministry said Tuesday Japan plans to remove bans on nine food additives, apparently in response to complaints from the United States and other countries.

Japan has been criticized by the United States and other trading partners for restricting imports of food products by banning additives internationally accepted as posing no health problems.

The ministry officials said the nine additives were recommended for use in Japan by an advisory group.

The government probably will begin authorizing imports of foods containing the newly approved additives in late July, officials said.

100,000 'Jews by choice' in U.S., sociologist finds

DALLAS (AP) — Judaism is making so many converts that fears of the past decade of intermarriages eroding the Jewish population are largley unfounded, a sociolgist says.

"There is every reason to believe that if the current rate of conversion into Judaism continues, even with the high rate of intermarriage, the size of the Jewish population should not be adversely affected," said Egon Mayer, a professor at Brooklyn College in New York.

Mayer, who studied the impact of Jewish converts on American Jewry, presented his findings Tuesday to the annual convention of the Rabbinic Assembly meeting here.

A 1979 study found that the rate of conversion into Judaism over the past 30 years has tripled.

Authorities have estimated that there are about 100,000 "Jews by choice" in the United States, and Mayer said he would not be surprised if the number were twice as large.

But he warns that the converts do not share the same appreciation for Jewish ethnic hertiage, although they tend to be more religious than natural Jews.

Converted Jews tend to view Judaism as no more than a religion, Mayer said.

"Because 'Jews by choice' learn to be Jews primarily through religious practices, their Jewishness tends to be somewhat more religious than ethnic," he said.

"This, of course could be of great benefit to organized life. But...in the long run it could lead to a rupture between religion and ethnicity which have hitherto been very closely intertwined in American Jewish life."

Even so, the high conversion rates have led to the "strengthening of the role of the rabbi," because the new Jews normally consider religious ritual important and look to the leaders for support.

They are also reinforcing the beliefs of natural Jews, he said.

Most American Jews "have sustained their faith and their Jewish lifestyle through the stategies of compromise," Mayer said.

But the converts reconfirm the commitments "of those already within the fold," he said.

"As a matter of fact, it is all too common to find that when a Gentile becomes a "Jew by choice" she makes two people Jewish: herself and her spouse, who in many cases has long neglected taking his Jewishness seriously."

Mayer bases his conclusions on interviews with converted Jews in the religion's three main streams of thought: reform, conservative and orthodox.

Those surveyed were asked about how often they practice religious customs and observe holy days, and their attitudes toward various aspects of being Jewish.

They were asked to respond to several statements, including, "Being Jewish is very important to me," "American Jewry and Jews in Israel are parts of one people," and "A Jew has a greater responsibility for other Jews than for non-Jews," Mayer said.

Intermarriages have long concerned Jewish leaders because the offspring of a Jew and Gentile sometimes are not raised in the Jewish heritage.

Jewish scientists challenge theory of evolution

JERUSALEM (AP) — Jewish scientists and some parents in Israel, where the Bible is read as the nation's history as much as religion, are beginning to challenge Darwin's theory of evolution.

Israeli schoolchildren learn the Bible as the straightforward chronicle of the Jewish people.

But evolution also is taught in high school, and many religious Jews who read the Bible literally feel a contradiction with the story of creation in Genesis.

There have been no court cases such as those in the United States last year, but a group of Orthodox parents reportedly is preparing to petition the Supreme Court of Israel to order all schools to give equal time to evolution and divine creation.

Although scientific creationism is barely making a ripple, Orthodox Jewish scientists organized a conference last month which dismissed as "speculation" the notion that man could be descended from the ape through a series of genetic changes.

No original theories were offered, and the lecture by a Bar Ilan University professor, Lee Spetner, was typical. While debunking evolution as statistically impossible, Spetner said, "For me it is enough to say that man was created by the Creator of the world. Maybe you need other explanations. I don't."

The only surprise of the conference was that it won official backing from the Education Ministry, which urged all science teachers in the state schools to attend. Few did.

Chemist Moshe Trop, who organized the scientists' conference, believes the schools should teach evolution as a questionable supposition rather than fact. "You can't ignore it when so many people think differently," says Trop, of Israel's Ben Gurion University and a recent visiting professor at Rutgers University in New Jersey.

Israel actually has two parallel state school systems for Jews, religious and secular. Both have required courses in the Bible and in physical sciences. But in secular schools the Bible is taught as history and there is no question of mixing science and religion.

Ultra-orthodox Jews, who have their own schools and seminaries outside the state system, do not teach science.

In the state schools, "evolution is a thread which runs through the whole program of high school biology," says Avraham Amir, director of the Education Ministry's biology department.

Amir says creationism "is a belief, not a scientific theory," and it has no place in the science classroom. "There are many scientists who are religious and who accept evolution," he said in an interview.

"I don't think religion and science are in the same vein of thought. There is no contradiction between them, except when you try to combine them," he said.

The problem arises in the religious schools, attended by 20 percent of Israel's Jewish students.

Rabbis have been grappling with the contradictions between tradition and modern science since the time of Galileo. They have had to face scientific evidence, for instance, that the world is 2 billion years old, while religious Jews believe the creation was exactly 5,743 years ago.

To help teachers explain such conflicts to their religious students, the Education Ministry compiled a collection of rabbinical treatises for a teachers' guidebook.

Avraham Ron, head of the ministry's division of religious education, said many rabbis believe the Bible is open to interpretation that departs from the literal text. They admit that the world may have been created in six epochs rather than in six days, he said.

The students also are told that science "is a tool to organize data into a consistent system, but it is not a picture of the world as it really is," said Ron.

He said science is taught "in a religious spirit, that nature is the creation of God" and that ultimate truths may be undiscoverable.

Ron says the religious schools teach the same courses as secular schools and students take the same graduation exams. "The difference is the philosophical framework," he said.

"All this is a new trend. Not enough is known about it yet in Israel."

Professor: Some science teachers behind the times

DALLAS (AP) — Science teachers should beware that the skills they learned in college may not be up to date with what their students need to know, an educator says.

"If you are still teaching industrial science in a post-industrial (high technology) society, you are teaching an anachronism," Dr. Glen Aikenhead, professor of science education at the University of Saskatchewan, told a recent convention of the National Science Teachers Association.

Greater cooperation between business, industry and education would help teachers keep up with rapid changes in science and technology, Dallas Independent School District Superintendent Linus Wright said.

At the convention, Gayle M. Ater, 31, of Baton Rouge, La., won a $5,000 cash prize as the Outstanding Science Teacher of the Year.

BLOCK SAYS "MANY WILL OVERPAY"
The New tax Laws are complex and if you aren't familiar with all of the changes you could be overpaying your taxes unknowingly. Some of the tax revisions make you lose other deductions which would have benefited you more. The instruction (you received from IRS) booklet doesn't answer all the questions that could affect your income tax return.
The New Income Tax revisions affect every taxpayer regardless of income. Your H&R Block Tax preparer can show you how the new Tax Laws can save you money or cost you money if you don't know how to apply the revisions to your benefit.
I.R.S. doesn't check every tax return to see if the taxpayer took all the available deductions and credits to the taxpayer's benefit. Thus many taxpayers overpay their taxes.
If you don't know taxes you need H&R Block. Locations at 114 Andrews Hwy. 684-6741, Dellwood Plaza Annex No. 4-697-3681, Sears-Midland Park Mall-694-2581. Appointments available but not necessary. Call Now!

CBS still battling ruling

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lawyers hired by the 14 judges in the U.S. District Court in New Orleans have asked the court to order CBS Inc. to defend itself against a charge of criminal contempt.

In a separate but related action Tuesday, the judges asked that their lawyers be allowed to argue before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on a censorship dispute with CBS.

The motion sought permission for the U.S. District Court to intervene in the case as an active party, or at least to be allowed to file a brief as "friend of the court."

There was no indication when a ruling would be made by the 5th circuit, which twice struck down censorship orders issued by Judge Adrian Duplantier, one of the 14 judges.

The motion to intervene said the network contends that the 5th circuit's actions upholding CBS "necessarily invalidate any adjudication of contempt" by the district court. The 14 judges contend there is nobody to argue against this point except the court itself. In order to do so, they seek to keep the 5th circuit case alive.

CBS aroused Duplantier's ire in refusing to produce an advance transcript of a 60 Minutes broadcast so he could see whether to try to censor it.

When Duplantier cited CBS for contempt, the Department of Justice refused to prosecute. The 14 judges met secretly and decided to back Duplantier. They hired two lawyers as their own special prosecutors.

Tuesday's motion to intervene, and the application for an order hauling CBS into court, marked the first moves in the legal dispute by the prosecution.

Duplantier wanted prior censorship of a 60 Minutes story broadcast on Jan. 16 about a 1980 investigation, triggered by the murder of a New Orleans policeman, that resulted in the death of four blacks.

At the time the 60 Minutes program was scheduled, seven policemen indicted on federal civil rights charges, accused of beating possible witnesses, were about to go on trial in Dallas, Texas. The trial had been moved to Dallas at the request of the defense, which said it would be difficult to find unbiased jurors in New Orleans.

In asking Duplantier to block the 60 Minutes broadcast, the defense argued that the network report would also make it difficult to seat an impartial jury in Dallas.

Delayed by this censorship fight, trial was delayed for a month. Three officers wound up convicted, four acquitted.

After 60 Minutes refused to give him an advance look at the script, Duplantier had issued an order on Jan. 14 forbidding the broadcast. The 5th circuit knocked it down. The judge then issued another order, forbidding the broadcast in the Dallas area. That one, too, was knocked down.

Americans still moving

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half of all Americans changed residences between 1975 and 1980, with Florida attracting more movers than any other state, a Census Bureau expert says.

More people moved to the Sun Belt in general than in the previous five years with the population shift likely to continue, Kristin Hansen, of the bureau's migration statistics staff, said Tuesday.

The bureau said that the 1980 national head count found 94 million Americans living in a different place than five years earlier.
