Midlanders fight spring sandstorm

Winds gusting up to 51 mph Friday flipped traffic signs, ripped off roofs, knocked down trees and blew over billboards, as Midlanders fought the blizzard of sand during one of the worst wind-sandstorms this spring.

One man escaped serious injury when a billboard crashed into his pickup; meanwhile, an unidentified Midland woman was in critical condition late Friday night at Midland Memorial Hospital from head injuries suffered during a fall from a truck.

Floyd Maxwell, who is in charge of the parking lot at Midland County Public Library, drove out of an unexpected encounter with The First National Bank billboard with only scratches on his hands and a shaky feeling.

Driving to work Friday morning on Rankin Highway, Maxwell said he was at the intersection of Rankin Highway and Interstate 20.

"There's a great big First National Bank billboard there...I would say it's about 40 feet long and 20 to 28 feet high. It came loose and hit my pickup. It shattered my windshield and pieces of it (windshield) were laying back on the steering wheel. It (the sign) messed up my cab. Then it blew on over and just scattered all over the road," said Maxwell.

The crash shocked the Midlander, he said. "I couldn't see anything for a few minutes" while the billboard covered his windshield. "It's a good thing no one was in front of me. I got over to the side of the road, stopped and got out. It took me 10 to 15 minutes to get the glass swept out of my pickup so I could get back in and drive on."

All he sustained were a few scratches on his hands, said Maxwell.

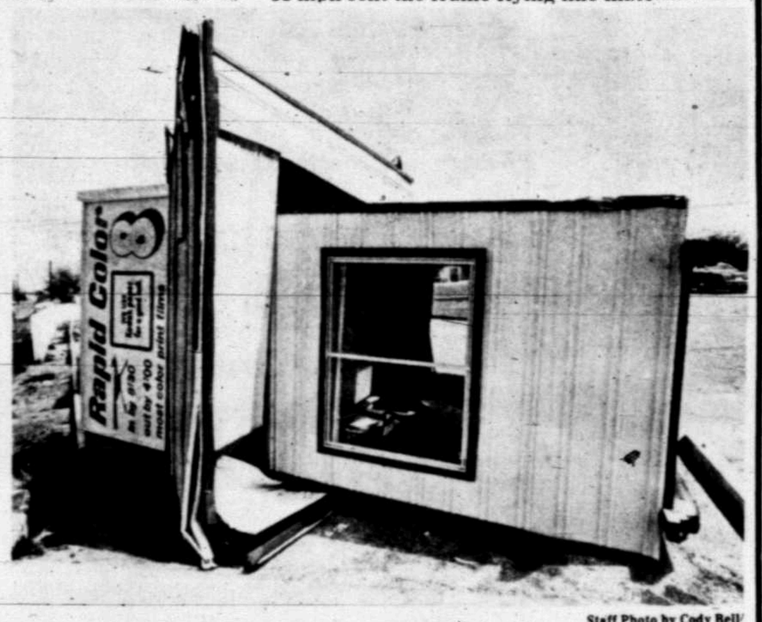

However, about noon Friday, a 26-year-old Midland woman was in the process of moving to another place and was riding in the back of a truck. One person said she lost her balance, reportedly from a strong gust of wind, and fell off the truck, suffering severe head injuries. She was taken to MMH where she underwent several hours of surgery. Her name was not being released.

Wind damage also resulted when some trees were pushed over onto two cars at 1708 Keith St. The incident occurred about 3 p.m., said a resident, and the windshields of both cars "were busted."

Part of a roof on a building located 0.8 of a mile past the I-20 overpass on Garden City Highway was blown into the parking lot of Mitco Pipe & Supply, 2701 Garden City Highway. The incident occurred in late morning.

And skirtings around mobile homes in Westgate Trailer Park south of Midkiff Road and I-20 were sent whipping through the park. According to one resident, "underskirting is blowing all over the park." And a tin building in back of that resident's mobile home had been destroyed by the wind. "The metal braces on the

Tornado strikes east Texas city

PARIS, Texas (AP) — A tornado cut a swath 200 to 1,200 yards wide and three miles long through this northeast Texas city Friday afternoon, killing at least seven people and injuring at least 115 others, authorities said.

An eighth victim was claimed by a tornado that hit Dodd City.

The Paris tornado - or possibly others spawned by the killer storm — hit Dodd City, Reno, Blossom, Bagwell, Clarksville and DeKalb, towns that stretch from 40 miles west to 30 miles east of Paris along U.S. highway 82.

The Dodd City twister killed Josie Gilbreath, about 80, and critically injured her husband, Jessie, 86, authorities said. One person was injured in DeKalb.

Paris Police Chief Charles Whitley said the number of injuries in his city — including those with minor injuries that did not require medical attention — totaled more than 200.

"We have houses unroofed, houses blown down and cars overturned," said police Sgt. Joe Julian. "We are in terrible trouble so far."

Looting was reported in 11 areas of town, said Ted Gibson, chief deputy with the Lamar County Sheriff's Department. Sheriff Roger Peterson said a 9 p.m. curfew was imposed Friday night.

The Paris City Council met in emergency session Friday night and ordered a 10 p.m. curfew for the next week in the northern part of the city. The council also voted to postpone a scheduled Saturday city council and schoolboard election for one week.

GIBSON SAID THE local National Guard unit was called up and that a guard battalion from Atlanta, Texas, just south of Texarkana, was being called in. Gibson said 150 police officers from other areas also were helping, including officers from Dallas and southern Oklahoma.

The tornado touched down on the west side of this town of 23,000 people about 4 p.m., passing within 10 blocks of the downtown square, said Trooper Harlan Sewell of the Department of Public Safety.

The twister continued along U.S. 82 about 16 miles, touching down in the communities of Reno and Blossom and destroying seven or eight houses east of Blossom, Sewell said. The tornado then jumped over Detroit and Bagwell and was sighted in the air by a trooper north of Clarksville, where the twister disappeared heading toward the Red River, he said.

The path of destruction started out about 200 yards wide and reached its widest, about 1,200 yards, exiting Paris, he said. DPS Lt. C.L. Verner described the area in Paris hit as "about a three-block wide strip that extends over three miles."

Among the dead was an infant killed at a trailer park and a woman who apparently died of a heart attack, Sewell said.

Two sisters who had fled from some apartments to First Christian Church for shelter were killed when the tornado slammed into the church, Justice of the Peace Frank Finley said. A third sister was injured.

Rescue workers were still finding people in the rubble after dark, police said.

St. Joseph's Hospital spokesman Jim Lacy said about 50 people injured by the tornado were being treated there. McCuistion Hospital Administrator Jesse Hayes said of the 65 injured people at that hospital, 55 were treated and released.

PARIS CITY MANAGER Bob Sokoll said the city was faced with a lack of phone service, broken gas lines and a shortage of water. Julian said later that the town had run of out water.

Robert Crawford, at the apartments to pick up his aunt, said he "could see roof and stuff in the air, just sailing through the air ... I grabbed her (the aunt) and we just started running. She just kept saying 'Lord have mercy.'"

Lacy, director of development and communications at St. Joseph's Hospital, said injuries ranged from cuts and bruises to critical injuries, he said.

He said the injured were being carried in by ambulances, hearses and private vehicles.

Emergency personnel from Hopkins, Van, Titus, Kemp, Hunt and Grayson Counties in Texas and Choctaw County in Oklahoma were assisting local emergency agencies.

"We haven't been told anything except to get as many people up there as fast as we could," said Joanne Jones of the Red Cross office in Dallas. "We have a truck loaded with cots and blankets already on the way. We've called all our disaster action teams and people are already on the way there from Dallas and several other cities in Texas."

The Salvation Army set up an emergency shelter for people whose homes were destroyed by the tornado.

THE NATIONAL WEATHER Service issued a tornado watch from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. for an parts of north-central and northeast Texas, including Paris.

Gibson said that when the storm was two miles outside Paris, radio stations were broadcasting a warning and fire trucks and ambulances in the city sounded sirens as part of city's emergency preparedness plan.

A tornado watch was in effect in 16 counties of northeast Texas until midnight Friday.

Verner, in charge of the DPS office in Paris, said 15 people taken to hospitals from Blossom.

Much of the damage in Paris was in residential areas.

One woman whose home was leveled wandered around the home's foundation in a daze.

"I'm always being so picky about taking care of things," she said, pausing. "What good does it do?"

"If I could just find my wedding band," she said, holding a handful of beads she had salvaged from the home. "It could have been worse. I could have been here."

Today's vote to play key role in Midland's future growth

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a 14-part series on the candidates and bond issues appearing on the ballot in today's city, school and hospital elections.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

If it hadn't been for Midland's growth this past year, there might not be any issues for the city, school and hospital board candidates. Nor would there be much need for city and school bond propositions.

When voters go to the polls today, they will be deciding the fate of Midland's growth. Like a rubber ball, the issue of growth bounced all over town last year, leaving dents of problems in its wake. The deepest dents were caused by housing, salaries and inability to provide services — or so claim candidates seeking to fill up those holes.

Candidates for City Council, Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, Midland College Board of Trustees and Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors repeatedly rattled off the same list of problems.

If there has been any semblance of a heated race in the city elections this spring, it probably has come in the MISD board races.

Joyce Sherrod ranks as the only unopposed candidate and she is seeking re-election to Place 7.

Action becomes more obvious in the race for Place 5 as two candidates are vying for the chair. One is incumbent Parker Humes and his challenger is Benton Peterson.

The hottest race appears in Place 6 with Charleen Rosebery, Patrick Chaney, Joe Golding and Paul Thorpe all hot-footing it down the road in an effort to pass the finish line first.

Major dents that popped up before the school board center around the teachers and the need for more classrooms. And the teacher issue was broken down into salaries, benefits, demands and how to attract more teachers to fill the growing need.

Three persons are vying for two positions on the county hospital board. Two are incumbents — Martin Neill and Pat Estes — while the other, Tevis Herd, is trying to change from the appointed board of trustees to the elected panel of directors. Voters will choose two in the open election.

In looking at MMH's dents, the candidates listed a need for more beds, more nurses and a long-range plan. But without housing, they can't attract the nurses and open up the additional beds, they agreed.

Three seats are up for election on the Midland College board of trustees. And the biggest dent all candidates pointed out is the need for housing for the college students. Smaller in depth but still able to cause a jolt, they related, is the dent, or need, to expand Midland College in response to the city's growth.

Unopposed for Place 4 is William H. McCright and going it alone for Place 5 is William D. Kleine. Both are incumbents. Meanwhile, a race popped up for Place 6 when Hugh G. White decided to challenge incumbent Gloria Hinojosa.

G. Thane Akins is the lone runner for the mayor's chair and will enter his second two-year term. Place 4 on the council is being sought by incumbent Steve Davidson and his challenger, Raul Jimenez Salazar. Meanwhile, Tom Sloan is walking easily into a third

Midland bank deposits reach record high of $1.98 billion

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland's total bank deposits for the first quarter of 1982 hit an all-time record high of more than $1.98 billion, and all but one of six city banks' individual deposits increased as well.

Banks are required by law to report total deposits and total loans and discounts each quarter, with this quarter ending March 31.

Loans and discounts for the 1982 first quarter totaled $1,629,677,346.05, as compared with the 1981 first quarter total of $1,097,633,189.

The First National Bank of Midland led the six banks once again with deposits of $1,386,321,355.83, which is about $397 million over its 1981 first quarter figure of $989,184,700. Loans and discounts at FNB also increased during the 1982 first quarter with a total reported of $1,197,303,151.80, compared with last year's first quarter of $796,929,868.

"We're not concerned," Hank Elder of Midland National said. "It's just a little soft spot in the first quarter."

Local attorney Williams speaks out on challenges to American Liberalism

The challenges facing American Liberalism during the 1980s will be the topic of Sunday's "Speaking Out" column, written this week by local attorney Michael L. Williams.

Williams looks at liberal philosophy of the past decade, the impact on liberalism of Ronald Reagan's election to the presidency and the changes that must take place for American liberals to continue to be a prominent political force.

"Speaking Out" is an open forum for those who want to address any topic, but particularly current issues at the local, state, national or international levels.

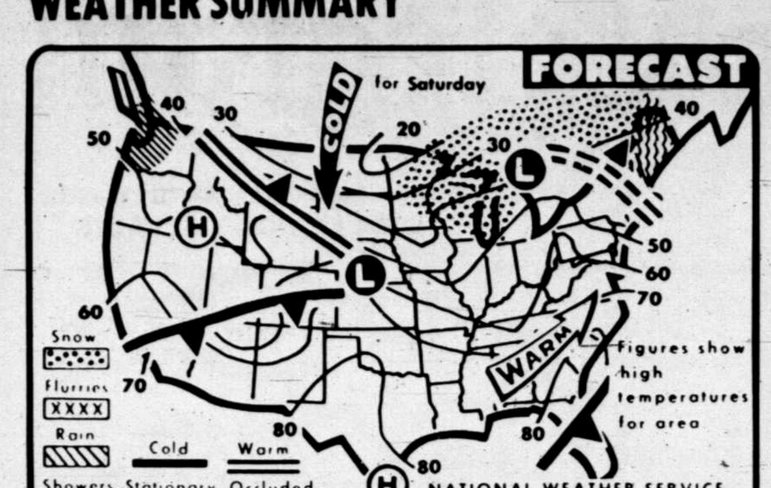

Columns, which should be limited to 750 words, should be mailed to "Speaking Out," P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702.

Odessa woman convicted of possession

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 22-year-old Odessa woman, who claimed she drove out to Midland Regional Airport last December to pick up a Christmas package from her mother, on Friday was convicted in Midland's 142nd State District Court of possession of a synthetic heroin and with intentions of distributing the narcotics.

The defendant, Gladys Diane Dorsey Powell, in turn was meted out a 13-year prison term by a 10-woman, two-man jury.

As the jurors were filing out of the courtroom Friday night, a woman juror paused by the sobbing defendant, leaned over to hug her but was spurned by Ms. Powell.

"No, don't," she cried, as she turned aside in rejecting the juror's sympathetic gesture.

AFTER JUDGE Pat Baskin imposed the 13-year sentence, the woman was released under a $12,000 appeal bond. Range of punishment for the offense is five years to 99 years or life in prison.

Ms. Powell, a clerk in a convenience food store in Odessa, testified prior to that job she had worked for Satin Skin Care. However, she denied that she had any direct connection with the Satin Slipper Massage Parlor, though "I took the girls (there) something to eat one time," she admitted.

Ms. Powell was arrested last Dec. 10 by Midland undercover narcotics officers and U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents after she had signed for and picked up the package, which had been shipped out of Los Angeles, Calif., via Continental Airlines.

The package contained 170 yellow tablets identified as hydromorphone or Dilaudid, a pain-killer, which, according to testimony, are dispensed by prescription for about 30 cent per tablet but which wholesale for $20 each and sell for $75 each "on the street." Street value of the tablets was estimated at $13,000.

THE DEFENDANT, who maintained her innocence, claimed that she had driven to the airport to pick up a Christmas package, containing a robe and necklace, from her mother in Oak Hill, near Tyler in East Texas.

Midland narcotics officers John Anastasio and Michael Charles Reed testified at the trial's onset that they had kept watch over the package to detain and, as it turned out, to arrest whoever picked up the package.

Midland lawmen had been alerted by Los Angeles authorities that the package containing the narcotic was en route to Midland via Continental Airlines. The package apparently had been intercepted by security officers and its contents analyzed prior to its dispatch to Midland.

The woman was arrested moments after she had climbed into her car, a Cadillac, and urinated in her pants, which, acccording to co-prosecutor Jim Rex, indicated her guilt.

"She did it because she was very nervous and upset, but I won't go into details here," Rex said. He speculated that the woman didn't "just happen to have a severe reaction when police showed up."

Rex also noted that the woman's two middle names, Diane Dorsey, address and unlisted telephone number were written on the package's wrapping paper. The yellow tablets, each of which was impressed with a script "K," were in a plastic bag tucked in a white sock, wrapped in paper, and shipped in unmatching halves of cardboard beer boxes.

Rex said that a "drug dealer" in California had sent the package to the woman, though defense attorney John Green of Odessa argued that the woman was a victim and implied that she was framed.

"WHY IN the world," asked Rex, "would he (the drug dealer) send it to a complete stranger?"

The prosecutor asked the jurors to find the woman guilty. "The jury is the last link in law enforcement," he said. "I hope you will not be the weakest link in the chain."

Green countered that the jury is "not the last link for law enforcement."

The defense attorney contended that "this is a simple case." Green said a telephone call from Continental Airlines in Midland was made to Ms. Powell "to tell her the package was there.

"There's no evidence topside or bottom that the defendant knowingly and intentionally possessed (the drug)." Green said the woman could not see through the package and actually didn't know what was in it until it was opened before narcotics agents in the DEA office in Midland.

Then, in referring to the prosecution's stance, Green said: "I hope a person is never found guilty or convicted based on what a lawyer says."

He also alluded to Ms. Powell's nervousness and urination the moment she was detained. "I get nervous when I'm stopped for a ticket," he said.

Co-prosecutor Carmen Eiker noted that Ms. Powell did have "an extreme nervous reaction when she was approached by the police" and suggested that reaction indicated something was amiss.

Ms. Eiker, as did Rex and Green, called on the jurors to use their "common sense. She (Ms. Powell) wouldn't let them (lawmen) look in the package.

"There's a market out there (for illegal drugs and dope), and there are people out there who are willing to capitalize on it." Ms. Eiker said the drug-and-dope scene is a "key factor" in the rising crime rate.

term for Place 5 since he drew no opponents.

And the largest potholes, so to speak, facing the council are housing and inability to keep up with services as the city grows, which includes street repairs.

Also appearing on the ballot today are two bond issues.

The city's general obligation bond issue is divided into five propositions that will total $7 million.

Proposition 1 is asking $3 million for street bonds; Proposition 2 is seeking $1 million to enlarge City Hall; Proposition 3 wants $500,000 to remodel the police station, known technically as the Public Service Building; Proposition 4 is requesting $500,000 for enlarging the city garage, known as the Vehicle Maintenance Building; and Proposition 5 seeks $2 million for constructing two fire substations and equipping them.

The school system's bond issue is wrapped up in one proposition for $9,475,000. This money will construct two new elementary schools and will add 20 classrooms to existing schools.

tin building had been pushed in and the door was buckled," she reported.

Area towns reported strong winds and blowing dust Friday. Fanned by the high winds, a grass fire unfolded over an eight-mile area near Rankin, forcing the closing of the road between that town and Big Lake for a few hours Friday afteroon.

According to a spokesman in the sheriff's department, the grass fire started about 12:30 p.m. north of Rankin and then spread to other areas. A Midland woman with relatives in Rankin said she was told the fire started on one side of the highway and then jumped the road, forcing authorities to close it until the fire was extinguished.

The sheriff's department spokesman said units from fire departments in Crane, Big Lake, Iraan and McCamey responded to the blaze and by 5 p.m. it was under control.

Peak gusts of 51 mph were recorded at 12:02 p.m., according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. During the day, winds averaged between 30 and 40 mph, said a NWS spokesman. Winds began calming about 6 p.m., and by 7 p.m. they had dropped to 10 mph, he added. A haze of sand, however, still hung over the city.

If the forecast is correct, Midland and the Permian Basin can't look forward to a calm weekend. Winds should blow from the west and southwest today at 15 to 25 mph with occasional gusts.

High today and Sunday should reach into the low 80s, with the mercury dropping to about 50 degrees tonight.

High on Friday was 81 degrees, which was a close shot to besting the record of 89 set on that date in 1978. Record overnight low for today was 29 degrees recorded in 1975.

Only a trace of precipitation has hit the record books this month, and only 0.59 of an inch so far this year, according to the NWS.

Six locations designated polling places

Six locations in Midland and one in Greenwood have been designated polling places for registered voters who want to voice their opinion in Saturday's city-wide elections.

Reagan signs executive order making secrecy easier

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan signed an executive order Friday that makes it easier for officials to stamp documents secret, reversing a 30-year trend of giving the public more access to government files.

"It is essential for our citizens to be informed about their government's activities, but it is also essential to protect certain sensitive information when disclosure could harm the security of all our citizens," Reagan said in a statement accompanying the order.

The order replaces one signed by President Carter in 1978 that added new restrictions on use of the government secrecy stamp and insisted that secrecy be specifically balanced against the public's right to know.

The Reagan order, which has gone through several drafts over the past year, has been criticized by journalists and civil libertarians as granting government officials too much power to withhold information from the public.

Primarily, the Reagan order:

—Allows classification of documents even if possible damage to national security is not "identifiable."

—Deletes Carter's mandate that officials must "determine whether the public interest in disclosure outweighs the damage to national security that might reasonably be expected from disclosure."

—Drops Carter's requirement that classified documents be reviewed after six years with an eye toward releasing them unless their continued classification is required to protect national security.

—Creates a new area of classification: "the vulnerabilities or capabilities of systems, installations, projects or plans that relate to the national security." Critics claim this provision amounts to a "blank check" for the government to keep documents secret.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Intelligence Committee, said the panel had urged Reagan to keep Carter's requirement that damage to the national security be "identifiable" before information could be classified.

"Not to have done so was a mistake," Moynihan said.

But Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., the intelligence committee's chairman, called the order the "proper commonsense balance" between government secrecy and the need for a well-informed public.

"I have never subscribed to the notion that there are no enemies within the boundaries of our country," Goldwater said. "Truly sensitive information must be kept from them."

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., chairman of Government Operations information and individual rights subcommittee, said the Reagan order's overall message is "classify, classify, classify."

He said the order appears to expand greatly the amount of information that is subject to classification, and to increase the number of bureaucrats with authority to classify.

"The new executive order appears to have been designed primarily for the convenience of bureaucrats who want to hide their actions from the public," English said.

United States vetoes U.N. resolution against Israel

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States on Friday night vetoed a Jordanian resolution in the Security Council that would have asked Israel to rescind its dismissal of two Arab mayors and a municipal council in the occupied West Bank.

Zaire abstained. Britain, France, China, the Soviet Union, Poland, Ireland, Spain, Togo, Uganda, Jordan, Japan, Guyana and Panama voted for the resolution.

U.S. Ambassador Charles Lichenstein said he voted "no" because the resolution "did not, would not, promote the cause of peace" in the Middle East.

The veto was his second in less than an hour. He previously had vetoed a Panamanian resolution stemming from a Nicaraguan complaint against the United States and calling for non-intervention in other countries' domestic affairs.

In both cases, the United States was alone in opposing the resolutions.

The vote climaxed the council's fifth meeting in a debate on "the rapidly deteriorating situation in the occupied Palestinian and Arab territories." Jordan's Ambassador Hazem Nuseibeh, chairman of the Arab group, requested the debate March 22.

The resolution sought to have the council denounce the dismissals, ask Israel to rescind them, declare that the 1949 Geneva convention on treatment of civilians in wartime applies to the occupied territories and call on Israel to abide by it. It would have requested Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to report Israel's reaction by Wednesday.

In firing mayors Bassam Shakaa of Nablus and Kerim Khalaf of Ramallah, the Israelis accused the town leaders of incitement, repeatedly disrupting public order and — allegedly under instructions from the PLO — refusing to work with the Israeli civilian administration.

The dismissals caused protests in Lebanon, Syria and Jordan, and sparked demonstrations throughout the West Bank of the Jordan River. Israel captured the area from Jordan during the 1967 Middle East War.

Israeli Ambassador Aryeh Levin, speaking before the vote, said the resolution "does nothing to promote the cause of peace in the Middle East" but only "places another obstacle in its path."

He charged that Syria, the Palestine Liberation Organization and Jordan incited the disorders — via radio broadcasts and other means — because the latter two feared they were losing their influence.

The PLO's U.N. observer, Zehdi Labib Terzi, told the council after the vote that the United States "belongs in the same ranks with the forces of darkness and oppression."

More people seek Salvation Army aid

By LYNN SIMROSS
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Like many other mothers in this poor neighborhood in North Sacramento, Dawn Pace has brought her four children to the Salvation Army's mobile soup kitchen every Saturday and Sunday since it opened six weeks ago. She is grateful for the extra assistance, she says, because the two free lunches — of homemade soup and sandwiches — each weekend help her to stretch out her food stamp allotment and money the family gets from Aid to Families With Dependent Children monthly.

Pace and her children live a block from North Venue School where the Salvation Army has set up one of three locations of its mobile soup kitchen on weekends. Pace volunteers her help with classes at school three days a week. Her family receives $686 a month from AFDC; $97 in food stamps. But she says that inflation has taken a severe toll on their budget.

"By the end of the month we just run out of money," Pace said. "I teach the kids (ages 7, 4, 2 and 1) not to waste anything. But it's getting harder now to feed them over the weekend. It makes you feel bad to have to do this. But this is a good program. At least coming here, you know the kids are eating. Families with bigger kids are having even harder times."

The Salvation Army, its officers say, is having a tough time of its own lately, trying to keep up with the staggering numbers requesting aid — for food, housing and clothing.

In Sacramento, the Salvation Army has attracted media attention, locally and nationally, with its mobile soup kitchen, but there are many other people asking for aid at the Sacramento office that the press and public never see. In January, the number of people needing assistance from the family service office tripled and has doubled each month since then. That does not count the 350 lunches served each Saturday and Sunday.

IN LONG BEACH, Calif., so many people are coming to the Beachhaven family service unit that its director, Edith King, has to close her doors two and three days a week because her food allotment "just won't stretch. If anybody has any extra cash," King said, "tell them to buy groceries and send them over here."

King's Long Beach Salvation Army unit "helped 3,333 people in February. We have a lot of people coming from out of state looking for work. But there are no jobs. When I come to work in the morning, I hate to open the door because I don't know how soon I'll have to close it." A clothing giveaway one day each week also attracts long lines of people, she said.

Salvation Army officers in the city of Los Angeles, the San Fernando Valley and San Bernardino-Riverside counties in California report similar rising numbers of people seeking assistance at their offices.

"There's no question we're seeing more people," said Brig. Lewis Kendoll, head of Los Angeles' Salvation Army family service unit. "In the last two or three months, there's been a considerable increase, 40 percent to 60 percent each month. And we're beginning to see low- to middle-income people, people who lived on the fringes and used to be able to make it. Now they can't."

In December, Kendoll said, his office received 260 requests for housing assistance. In February, the figure had grown to 1,014.

Salvation Army marriage and family counselors are deluged with families asking for guidance, according to Kendoll. "This is brand-new," he explained.

"We're seeing many, many strange things happening, very serious family situations. A lot of people don't understand the total impact of what's really happening. People who have been secure for a long time, aren't now."

AT THE FONTANA office of the Salvation Army's family service extension program for San Bernardino-Riverside counties, so many transients and people looking for work have begun to come in that Robert Carey, regional director, and his wife, Katherine, have started a daily bag-lunch program Monday through Friday.

"There are just so many people out of work that it's hard to believe," Katherine Carey said during an interview this week. Unemployment figures for the area that their office serves reached 10 percent in February.

"We have more mothers with small children coming in for grocery vouchers, too," Katherine Carey said. "We try not to let people with children go out without some help."

Eileen Hoogstad, whose husband Joe is the commanding officer of the Sacramento Salvation Army, does not think people are any worse off in the capital than in other California cities, but says she started the mobile soup kitchen after requests began coming in in January for food assistance on weekends.

"People say we don't need this in Sacramento," Hoogstad said. "But I think we do. We do have pockets of poverty in Sacramento. Most people just don't see them." People who called Hoogstad told her that their children got hot lunches at school during the week, but they could not afford to give them much at home on the weekends. "The difference between now and the Depression is that kids are getting lunch at school. With our soup kitchen, we can get lunch for them seven days a week."

Helen Waara, a retired Salvation Army officer who volunteers her help to Hoogstad for the mobile soup kitchen program, said that just the thought of soup lines sends a chill through her — and anybody else who lived during the Great Depression, when Salvation Army workers fed hundreds of thousands of people across the country.

"I WAS IN Salvation Army training school in Chicago when the Depression hit," she said. "I can remember the flophouses, the people in the lines for food. I was talking with a friend of mine in Chicago the other day and told her about our soup kitchen, and she said, 'Oh, no. I hope we don't have to have those here again.'"

This week, the Employment Development Department reported that unemployment in the Sacramento metropolitan area had reached 11.9 percent, the highest since 1974. Employment officials attributed the soaring rate to a worsening of the recession, slow agricultural production because of the unseasonable amount of rain, and an increase in people moving to the Sacramento area in search of work. Jobs in government in the state capital are not readily available, as they used to be, the report said.

When Hoogstad came up with the idea for the mobile soup kitchen, she realized it would have to be an all-volunteer effort, because the Sacramento Salvation Army budget already was stretched tight. She put out the word that the Salvation Army needed donations of food or volunteers to cook, make sandwiches and distribute lunches.

The response, she said, was overwhelming. People came from all over the Sacramento area to offer their services. Wholesale produce houses in Sacramento said they would donate leftover produce each Friday.

"We don't know what we'll get from week to week," Hoogstad explained as volunteers made bologna and cheese sandwiches and readied the homemade vegetable beef soup in containers that would be put in the Salvation Army van and small trailer. "But it's always been fresh.

"Individuals have brought things from their freezers and shelves," Hoogstad said. "People have brought in nice cuts of meat that they just went out and bought. Someone donated frozen meatballs. A market in Elk Grove (a nearby town) is giving us free soup bones to boil for the stock. The Senior Gleaners here (a senior citizens organization with chapters throughout California) have been wonderful. They're giving us excess food and now are supplying our lunchmeat and all of our bread."

LINES AT THE SOUP kitchen were not so long this past Sunday, though, due to the fact, Hoogstad surmised, that the rains were heavy in the Sacramento area around noon.

One mother waiting for four of her five children said she thought a lot of people did not come this day because they were afraid the television crews would come again as they did the Sunday before.

"People hid so they didn't have to be on TV in a soup line," she said. "It is kind of embarrassing. But what are you going to do when your kids are hungry? We're real low on food. And there are some kids in this neighborhood who don't have any food at all."

Scouts are smart cookies

ATLANTA (AP) — Seven Girl Scouts from Atlanta's Troop 94, looking for a way to send themselves to Switzerland, decided they'd be the smart cookies and leave the crumbs to someone else.

They hit upon the idea of corporate marketing of Girl Scout cookies, and it worked so well that one customer bought 500 boxes.

It all began earlier this year when the girls, 12 and 13 years old, decided they wanted to visit the International Girl Scout Center in Switzerland in two years.

They trip would cost $2,000 apiece, they estimated, and because the primary source for funds for their troop is cookie sales, that meant hawking a lot of wafers.

"One of the girls came up with the idea of selling to corporate clients and they asked us to help because we've had some marketing and sales experience," said W.F. Reams, father of one of the girls and a marketing executive.

Insurance executive Van Zeiler, the father of another girl, introduced the troop to client targeting, market potential, sales incentives, product identification and sales dialogues.

After some rehearsals, the Troop 94 girls marched out into the business world, approached over 100 corporations, made 131 appointments and sold cookies to 13 companies.

One buyer was the Colony Square Hotel, said general manager Stewart Maurer.

"They came in with well-made charts and graphs and offered me an opportunity to purchase," he said. "I bought 500 boxes and we'll use them in place of our traditional bedside chocolate mint."

The seven girls made a total of $2,500 in sales, $1,500 of that from corporate clients. There are two more selling seasons before their anticipated trip to Europe.

"They learned a lot more than if daddy just handed out order forms at the office," Reams said.

He will try to auction off boulders to lawn owners who want their grassy expanses stoned.

The 27-year-old Ford Motor Co. employee and part-time auctioneer spent most of the winter collecting limestone boulders and canvassed farms around Taylor County asking farmers for any spare rocks.

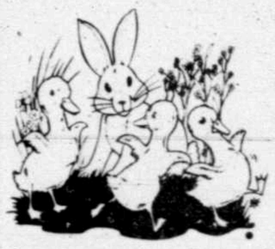

Many of them gladly donated their troublesome boulders, and a few hinted that Beams had more rocks in his head than they had in their fields.

Altogether Beams came up with 29 boulders weighing from 200 to 700 pounds apiece. He said he has no idea of how his first rock auction will turn out.

"Whatever the boulders bring at the auction is what they're going to go for," Beams said. "I'm not shooting for a majority of the people, just a few."

Victim's family feared suspect

TAYLOR, Texas (AP) — For more than a year Gina Reichenbach's family lived in fear of a former mental patient, though never pressing charges against him. The man now is charged with stabbing death of the teen-age honors student.

The Reichenbachs had reported many instances of what they considered harassment by Arcadio Torres, but said they took no formal action against him because they feared retaliation.

Torres remained jailed Friday in lieu of $100,000 bond. He was indicted Thursday on charges that he murdered the 17-year-old girl and assaulted her best friend.

About 50 other students were on a Taylor High School athletic field Tuesday when Miss Reichenbach was stabbed to death while practicing discus throwing.

Another student, Deborah Kay Bowden, was cut on the arm before some of the other students could subdue Torres, police said.

Earlier Tuesday, the 27-year-old man was fired from his custodial job at a Taylor elementary school adjacent to the field after police told school officials "he had harassed some kids."

Parents in child's near trial announce settlement

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A parental dispute which nearly pushed a grade-school spat into criminal court has been settled for $20.

The parents of 6-year-old Nancy Jo Burch and 7-year-old Shirley Lynn Nickolls held a news conference Friday to announce that the case had been resolved with the help of a private arbitrator.

Nancy Jo was accused of hitting Shirley Lynn in the face with a stick on Feb. 4, bloodying her nose and causing some cartilage damage, because Shirley Lynn had once pushed her into a puddle. The Nickolls pressed charges, and long after the girls had made up defense attorney Alan Wilhite moved for a jury trial in adult court on charges of aggravated battery when he couldn't get the charge dropped in juvenile court.

Joseph Nickolls and his wife, Nancy, said they were satisfied with results of a meeting with the arbitrator Thursday night, in which the Burches agreed to pay half of a $40 bill for a doctor's visit.

"I do want to thank the public for their concern. I hope it won't happen again," said Walter Burch, Nancy Jo's father.

Mrs. Nickolls said publicity about the case might help children realize potential consequences of their actions.

"I think, if anything, it might help other small children," she said in the converted service station used as an office by Gary Weinstein.

Weinstein is a professional juvenile-case arbitrator who took on the case as a private citizen. He persuaded the parents to talk to each other to get the case out of the court system.

Still unresolved was the fate of 13-year-old Ronnie Dexter, who was accused of holding Shirley Lynn's arms while Nancy Jo whacked her twice. Weinstein said he felt Dexter's involvement could be resolved with arbitration, also.

After the incident, sheriff's officials tried to settle the matter among the parents. When they were unable to agree, the children were booked and fingerprinted. The Nickolls family insisted on pressing charges and the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services deemed the charges serious enough to warrant prosecution in juvenile court.

Wilhite urged the jury trial, contending Nancy Jo would be acquitted and thus would have no criminal record. The trial was granted, but prosecutors declined to press the case and the case went to the arbitration program which specializes in juvenile cases.

Burch conceded that communication might have avoided the entire affair.

"If any of my daughters ever comes to me again and says, 'Daddy, someone's picking on me,' you can bet your buttons I'll be going over to talk to someone," he said.

Braniff's auditor discloses huge debt larger than assets

DALLAS (AP) — The auditor for Braniff International, raising new doubts about the future of the debt-plagued airline, has disclosed it owed $94.4 million more than it had in assets at the end of 1981.

By contrast, Braniff's net worth at the end of the previous year was $66.18 million in the black.

For the second straight year, Braniff's independent auditors, Deloitte Haskins and Sells, has stated the company "may not be able to continue." The auditor's opinion was included in papers filed by Braniff on Wednesday with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Braniff lost $160 million last year and in three years has posted consecutive net losses totaling $336.4 million.

Despite the huge debt, Braniff has managed to stay in business, generating day-to-day cash flow with two-for-one ticket deals, laying off employees, streamlining its service by coming up with a one-tier "Texas Class" and getting Pan Am to take over Braniff's South American routes in exchange for a quick $20 million now and an additional $10 million later.

The latter "route lease" is pending before the Civil Aeronautics Board and other airlines have filed for the South American routes.

Braniff's 39 major creditors — 26 banks, 11 insurance companies and two aircraft suppliers — have agreed to defer all payments on Braniff's $591 million long-term debt until Oct. 1.

Earlier this week, Braniff presented those creditors with a plan to restructure $733.2 million in debts. The airline has not made any payments of interest or principal on the debt since March 1981.

"We laid out a refinancing plan that is quite detailed and complex and they individually took that plan back to their homes and are hearing it and evaluating," Braniff vice president Sam Coats said Friday, while again refusing to divulge the plan's details.

The creditors must agree to a refinancing plan by Oct. 1

In efforts to trim expenses and gain passengers, Braniff hired President Howard Putnam from Southwest Airlines, its major short-haul competitor, and has been retrenching, scaling back from some of its national routes to focus on regional service.

When Putnam returned from Washington where he lobbied the CAB on Braniff's behalf, a large group of employees greated him at the airport with great fanfare. He wept at the show of support.

Elections high on Nigeria's mind

By CHARLES T. POWERS
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LAGOS, Nigeria — "Have you ever seen a presidential motorcade here?" the political adviser to the Nigerian president asked.

"No?" he said incredulously. "Really, no?"

The adviser, Chuba Okadigbo, clapped his hands and reared back in his office chair, his eyes closed with obvious pleasure at the picture in his mind — the squadrons of motorcycle outriders, the dark-windowed limousines cutting through the tangle of Lagos traffic.

"Well," he went on, "It is quite impressive, let me assure you." Across the room, an assistant lifted his eyebrows and nodded in affirmation.

"Quite impressive," Okadigbo repeated.

His love for politics seems to be shared by all Nigerians. Along with making money — an activity closely associated in this country with politics — getting into office, staying in office and exercising power is a Nigerian national obsession.

RECENTLY, AN American asked John Chiahemen, a Nigerian television journalist, why there was not more news of Poland on Nigerian television.

"Nobody here is interested in Poland," Chiahemen said.

If Nigerians were not interested in Poland, he was asked, were they interested in Chad, a neighboring country where about 1,200 Nigerian troops have been sent to join an African peace-keeping force? Or in Ghana and the recent coup there?

"No interest in Chad, not much in Ghana," he replied.

What were they interested in?

"Here," he said. "Nigeria and 1983."

In September 1983, Nigeria is scheduled to have its next national elections. The government of President Shehu Shagari is a little more than halfway through its first term of office. But a visitor to Nigeria might assume that elections are to be held next month.

In February, the leaders of four of the parties opposing Shagari's National Party of Nigeria met with the hope of forming an alliance to dislodge the National Party's grip on the executive branch of Nigeria's American-style system of government.

With great hoopla and heavy coverage in party newspapers — every newspaper in Nigeria is associated with a party — they referred to Shagari as a feudalist and a reactionary and predicted his defeat.

The period between now and the election will continue to absorb the attention of Nigerians, along with that of diplomats and officials of other African governments who regard Nigeria as the most interesting political experiment on this continent.

THE NIGERIAN GOVERNMENT is modeled directly on the U.S. government, with a president, a bicameral legislature and an independent judiciary. There are 19 states, each with a smaller version of the same system. When elections were called in June 1979, it took more than a month to elect all the office-holders that represent Nigeria's approximately 80 million people.

President Shagari was elected with a little more than one-third of the vote. Most Nigerians voted according to their tribal or religious connections, and control of the state governments was divided among the five parties that contested the election.

In Nigeria about 200 languages are spoken, but the political struggle has involved only the three dominant groups — the Hausa-Fulani in the predominantly Moslem north, the Yoruba in the populous states of the southwest and the Ibo in the southeast, scene of the secessionist Biafran war that lasted 2½ years and ended in 1970.

At the grass-roots level, the distrust, even hostility, among those three groups has been the dominant factor in the nation's political history, and it is likely to remain so for some time.

Shagari is a Hausa northerner, a Moslem with two wives, a man regarded by Western diplomats and by a growing number of Nigerians as the right man at the right time for this powerful West African country.

The assessment is based on the sense of calm that Shagari projects over a country charged with political invective, scandal and violence. In a manner that is rare anywhere, and particularly in Africa. Shangari has removed himself from the day-to-day cycle of attack and counter-attack that would test the restraint of a less thoughtful man.

Bespectacled and diminutive, Shagari looks like an African Mr. Peepers swathed in immaculate Nigerian robes. His reputation is that of a man of great intelligence, a deliberate decision maker skilled in the art of compromise — as befits a career civil servant who was his party's compromise candidate for president.

APART FROM RUNNING the country, and retaining for himself the role of chief executive officer for Nigeria's important oil industry, he has tried to function as a peacemaker in politics. He has overseen the distribution of federal subsidies to states dominated by political opponents and has spread his appointments carefully among ethnic groups.

Most importantly, perhaps, he cannot be baited into a public quarrel, even though other politicians take to full-page newspaper advertisements to vilify one another.

"It is indefensible," a recent such ad thundered, "that a person who calls himself a senator of the Federal Republic of Nigeria should tell...blatant falsehoods and indulge in distasteful acts of blackmail in an attempt to mislead the people in order to gain cheap popularity."

The stakes in such political warfare are high. Nigeria has large-scale development plans and vast amounts of money to spend on them.

Behind it all is an inescapable sense of the precarious. Thoughtful Nigerians are worried about the early intensity of the political rhetoric. If it is this strong this early, they ask, what might it be like in a year's time? The potential for violence, they say, is not far below the surface.

On that score, Nigerians seem more apprehensive than do many foreign diplomats, particularly Americans.

"I am very fearful about these 1983 elections," said a well-educated young Nigerian, a writer who is a junior member of the president's political staff.

"But it is not only Kano," the young Nigerian said. "There could be trouble in many other places. If the government cannot handle it there would always be the temptation for the soldiers to come back to power."

Insurance card grace time over

AUSTIN — The 90-day grace period is over. The Department of Public Safety is now ticketing drivers who fail to comply with the state's new mandatory automobile liability insurance law.

The law became effective Jan. 1 and requires Texas drivers to carry minimum liability coverage for bodily injury and property damage. DPS Director Jim Adams said the law has already resulted in more drivers carrying insurance than before.

"DPS figures show that during 1981, approximately 73 percent of drivers involved in reportable accidents had the insurance," he noted. "That number increased to 81 percent for the first two months of this year."

Failure to comply carries a $75 to $200 fine for first offenses, and from $200 to $1,000 for subsequent violations.

In addition, convictions under the new law will result in drivers license suspensions and the cancellation of motor vehcile registrations unless violators establish and maintain proof of financial responsibility for five years from the date of conviction.

Iranians reiterate position

TEHRAN, Iran (AFP) — Iran Friday re-emphasized assurances that it has no claim on Iraqi territory, with Defense Council spokesman Hojatoleslam Hashemi Rafsanjani saying Iran's aim in the Persian Gulf war is to "expel enemy soldiers from its territory."

The Iranian news agency INA quoted Rafsanjani, after a Defense Council session, as saying that Iran also wanted "punishment of the aggressor, compensation for damage and the return of refugees."

The country's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini — who also attended the Defense Council session, along with President Ali Khamenei — echoed the non-belligerent pledge in a speech marking the third anniversary Thursday of the proclamation of the Islamic republic.

"Iran wants war with nobody," the ayatollah said.

Rafsanjani said "new military operations would be necessary to expel the invaders from the Khorramshahr region in the southwest and Quasr-E-Sherin in the west."

He also countered reported concern among regional states that Iran would try to spread its revolution.

San Antonian alleges Alamo destruction

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The owner of "Remember the Alamo," a sight-sound presentation operated in a 130-year-old building across the street from the historic mission, alleges that city officals have quietly scheduled the building for demolition.

R. Jay Casell says he will fight any effort to destroy the building, which he leases on a site that served as the Alamo's original artillery command post during the 1836 battle against invading Mexican forces led by Gen. Santa Anna.

Casell said the foundation of the building dates back to 1835 and that the site formerly was the home of the Domingo Losoya family, relatives of an Alamo hero, about 1840.

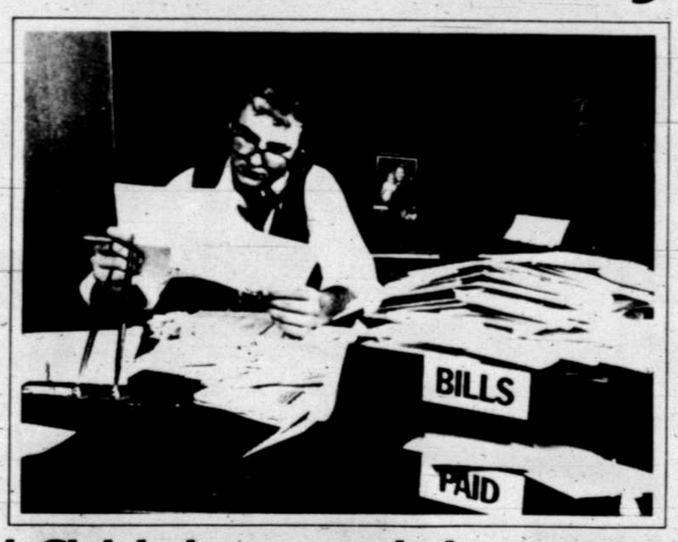

Former City Manager Tom Huebner initially targeted the building as an "eyesore" to tourists enjoying a new waterway linking Alamo Plaza with the downtown San Antonio River, Casell said.

Pat Osborne, the city's historic preservation officer, said that any demolition would have to be approved by the Historic Review Board and so far no such permit has been sought.

This is the scene in the United Nation's Security Council in New York Friday during the debate on the Falkland Island crisis. The takeover by Argentina met very little resistance. The struggle for Falkland has roots in an imperial triangle.

Falklands showdown has roots in imperial triangle

LONDON (AP) — The British-Argentine showdown over the Falkland Islands emerges from a classic, 400-year imperial triangle involving British, Spanish and French claims to one of the loneliest colonial outposts in the world.

At one point in the 19th century, the Americans intervened forcibly and declared the desolate islands belonged to nobody.

Britain and Spain didn't see it that way, and neither do Britain and Argentina, which claims it inherited Spain's claim.

The British got there first — in 1592 when Captain John Davis discovered a group of 200 islands, 325 miles off the eastcoast of South America. He reported they seemed deserted, windswept and devoid of trees and flowers.

The 4,700-square-mile Falklands remained in 1982 one of the handful of British possessions that wouldn't go away — inhabited by 1,820 islanders with a simple message: "We're British."

For Britain, which has shed all but 14 scattered pieces of its once vast possessions, just the remnants of empire can be troublesome.

Spain and Britain have argued for nearly 300 years over Gibraltar, the British rock on the southern tip of Spain, which Madrid claims. The 30,000 inhabitants insist they're British.

Britain's last colony in the Americas, Belize, with a population of 180,000, became independent last Sept. 21, after years of talks intended to persuade neighboring Guatamala not to invade the new nation. Britain maintains 1,800 troops there, just in case.

There has never been any question of independence for the Falklands, but there has been a nagging questions of who controls them. Argentina's stake involves national pride and — more recently — economic concerns.

Argentina announced in February last year its biggest offshore oil strike near the Patagonian coast. It was a long way from the islands, but adjacent to another potential oil field, Magallanes Este, which comes within 96 miles of the Falklands.

Last May, British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington warned international oil companies not to accept Argentine invitations to explore in disputed waters.

THE TROUBLE OVER THE Falklands — British newspapers now carry daily maps to show the readers where it is — was a long time coming after sea captain Davis first sighted them.

Nearly 100 years later, the islands were dubbed the Falklands when anothr British sea captain, John Strong, named them after Viscount Falkland, then treasurer to the English navy.

The first settlers came from France in 1764, when navigator Louis de Bougainville landed the first few sheep farmers.

The British came a year later, claiming the islands and landing a few more settlers and a few more sheep. The French withdrew in 1766, selling their rights to Spain.

The British proved more stubborn and Madrid and London almost went to war in 1771 over Spanish attempts to eject the British settlement. In a treaty that same year, Spain recognized Britain's title to at least a part of the group.

Spain maintained its settlement until 1806, when there was an uprising agaist Spanish authority in Buenos Aires province. In 1816, the United Provinces of the Rio de la Plata claimed to succeed Spain in sovereignty over the Falklands, and a local governor was instlled in 1828.

The colonists of the then Republic of Buenos Aires rashly seized three American seal-hunting vessels in 1831.

U.S. President Andrew Jackson dispatched the corvette USS Lexington to the Falklands, where it destroyed most of the Argentine settlement. Washington then proclaimed the islands "free of all governance."

Britain, which also never gave up its claim, resumed sovereignty in 1833 and the ancestors of the current Islanders settled down to sheep farming.

FOR THE PAST NEARLY 20 years, the dispute over the islands has come up annually at the United Nations. Britain and Argentina have negotiated almost every year without success.

Last year the islanders — and Argentina — rejected a British proposal that it cede the islands to Argentina, but lease them back.

Argentina insisted on control; the islanders insisted on remaining British.

London's Financial Times noted recently that apart from the 61 U.S. hostages held for 444 days in Iran until last January, "no recent case in diplomatic history has involved so much negotiating effort for so few people."

The islands were the scene of two major naval battles. On Aug. 4, 1914, two months after outbreak of World War I, German cruisers commanded by Vice Admiral Graf Von Spee sank two British ships, the HMS Good Hope, the flagship of Sir Christopher Craddock, and the HMS Monmouth, with all hands aboard. The following December, British ships sank Von Spee's ship and four others.

In 1939, three British cruisers ambushed the German pocket battleship Graf Spee near the Falklands. The German vessel limped away to Montevideo, putting out again only to scuttle herself.

Argentine troops met little resistance

LONDON (AP) — A British reporter who was in the Falkland Islands when Argentine troops invaded said the attack "happened so quickly that everyone was stunned."

"They had gone to bed British and woken up Argentine," said William Langley, a London Daily Mail reporter who was in Port Stanley, the capital of the South Atlantic islands held by Britain for 149 years.

He said the Argentine troops quickly overcame the small force of British marines and claimed the territory. About 1,800 people, mostly sheep farmers of British descent, live on the bleak islands, about 250 miles off the Argentine coast.

"There was a lot of noise and shooting in the pre-dawn darkness on the outskirts of Port Stanley, but whatever resistance there was from the 80 Royal Marines here, it did not last long," Langley said.

Langley's report, published in Friday's Daily Mail, said an Argentine lieutenant "held his gun firmly in the small of my back" during the telephone call to his office in London.

He said that as far as was known at that time, "there were no civilian or among its assault forces, said to have numbered between 4,000 and 5,000.

Langley quoted an Argentine lieutenant who listened in to his telephone report as saying: "That's right. Everyone is OK. The British marines are OK. No one has been hurt."

Langley added: "I gathered that the marines had all been captured and were under guard." There was no official confirmation in London that the marine detachment had been captured.

Langley said the Argentines were expected to fly the Falklands' British governor, Rex Hunt, a group marine casualties." Argentina reported one dead and two wounded of British reporters in Port Stanley and the presumably captured marines under armed guard to Buenos Aires.

"You will soon all be home in your country," the lieutenant was quoted as saying.

Langley said Argentine armored personnel carriers and troops patrolled Port Stanley's streets and that "all main buildings were occupied by heavily armed troops."

Argentine officers announced that the Falklands had been renamed the Malvinas.

Student dies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Del Valle High School student collapsed and died Thursday after running a mile as part of a workout for the school's junior varsity tennis team.

Moses Jen, 17, died of natural causes described by the Travis County Medical Examiner's office as coronary artery disease.

"From what the doctors said, he had a massive severe cardiac arrest," Luce said.

Final juror selected

DALLAS (AP) — The final juror was picked Friday to hear the trial of three Limestone County officers charged in the drownings of three teenagers.

After juror Peggy Greenfield was selected, the trial was recessed until Monday at 9 a.m., when testimony is scheduled to begin, said a spokeswoman for Dallas County Criminal Court Judge Tom Price.

The panel of five women and one man will hear the misdemeanor negligent homicide case against Deputy Sheriff Kenny Elliott, jailer Kenneth Archie and probation officer David Drummond.

Company defrauds investors of $4 million

Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Two promoters who advertised a plan to produce inexpensive auto fuel with power from solar cells were convicted of carrying out what the government described as a multi-million-dollar mail fraud scheme.

A federal court jury here deliberated two days before returning guilty verdicts on all 10 counts of an indictment against Gerald M. Schaflander, 62, and Stephen M. Wright, 28.

The government said their company, Consumers Solar Electric Power Corp., borrowed about $4 million from investors between 1974 and 1979 and failed to repay most of the loans. Actor Jack Nicholson was identified during the seven-week trial as an investor who put up about $150,000 and was not repaid. The company received smaller amounts from hundreds of other investors.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Frederik A. Jacobsen said the defendants took "hopes and dreams" of the potential of solar power and represented them as realities, leading investors to believe that they had developed a way of manufacturing inexpensive solar cells when in fact they were only in the research-and-development stage.

Among other things, the government said, Schaflander and Wright boasted that a car powered by a hydrogen-based fuel produced from solar cells made two cross-country runs. In fact, the prosecution said, the car was towed most of the way on both trips. Schaflander said that he had acknowledged in a press release that the car would be towed much of the way, but the government said the acknowledgement was added to a copy of the press release after the fact for purposes of trial.

An indictment returned last September accused the defendants of misrepresenting that electricity produced with solar cells could be used to manufacture a hydrogen-based fuel that would sell for about half the price of gasoline.

In addition, the defendants were accused of representing falsely that several leading scientists in the solar-cell field were doing research for their company. Nobel laureate Linus Pauling, whose name had been associated with the company, testified that he refused when asked by Schlaflander to serve as a consultant.

Consumers Solar has moved its base of operations a number of times, operating out of several locations in California and one in Idaho. It has most recently been based in Culver City, Calif., not far from downtown Los Angeles.

Schaflander's attorney, Joseph Calderon of New York, told the jury that his client became interested in solar power in 1974 and devoted eight years "to bringing solar energy to the American public." Calderon said there was no evidence "that a single dollar received from an investor was not used for...business purposes." Schaflander "has no house, no car (and) no property of any kind," Calderon said.

But the jury accepted the government's evidence that the defendants advertised more than they could deliver, deliberately misrepresenting their company's technological achievements and profit potential. One scientist called as a government witness estimated that solar panels would have to be spread over half the land area of the United States to collect enough energy to produce 20 percent of the nation's vehicle fuel requirements.

Welsh culture fading from Argentine town

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE

GAIMAN, Argentina (AP) — He sits, straw-hatted, playing cards and sipping red wine with friends in a bar in this small Patagonian town. Argentine by birth and looking it — his hard farmer's hands and lined face deeply tanned — he calls to the barman not in Gaucho Spanish but in a clipped Celtic cadence.

His name is Ehedydd Jones and he is one of the descendents of the Welsh who colonized Patagonia — a vast expanse of sunbaked scrubland — more than a century ago hoping to preserve a culture increasingly dominated by the English at home.

Gaiman, a town of about 4,000 people in the province of Chubut, was founded a few years after the first boatload of 150 Welsh landed on the deserted Atlantic coast 40 miles northeast of here in 1865.

Tegai Roberts, director of the small museum here recounting the history of the Welsh in the area, said about half of Gaiman's residents have Welsh names — Jones, Roberts, Williams, Evans or Davies — but that the culture is disappearing.

"THE LANGUAGE is being lost," she said. "It is difficult to find a young person who speaks Welsh."

Miss Roberts said she could not estimate how many Welsh-descended people remain in Chubut. The community has been somewhat swamped in nearby Trelew where more recent arrivals swelled the city to over 50,000.

Petrus Jones, a 20-year-old fourth generation Welsh-Argentine who works in Gaiman's bank, said he knows only a few words of his grandparents' language and is not interested in learing it. He said his sister Olga studied Welsh briefly in one of the classes Miss Roberts used to give, but later married a Spanish-descended Argentine, moved to Buenos Aires and is rearing a completely assimilated family.

"If I were going to spend time learning a language," said Petrus, "I'd learn English or French — something I could use somewhere. They hardly speak Welsh even in Wales anymore."

Seventy-five-year-old Glynnis Williams' parents came from Wales in 1911, when the last group of Welsh settlers came to what by then was an Argentine province.

"My cousins write me from Wales in English," she said, adding that the Welsh still spoken in Paragonia is very correct. "A delegation came from Cardiff to dedicate a monument in 1965 and commented on how well we spoke," she said.

MISS ROBERTS said, though, some Spanish vocabulary had inevitably worked its way into the Welsh spoken here.

"Like 'patio' for example. There is no word in Welsh for that, so we use the Spanish one."

The Welsh-descended residents and those descended from later European immigrants mixed freely in Chubut. Mrs. Williams' case is not atypical. She married a Spaniard and had three children — all of whom were baptized Roman Catholic.

Gwynfe Griffiths is one of a dozen men who gather each evening in the Bar Oriental to socialize. They range in age from 25 to 60 and about half are of Welsh descent.

Gwynfe, 57, was the only one there one recent night who spoke the language, but he said he feels more at home in Spanish. His wife is an Evans and they speak Spanish at home on their 25-acre farm outside town.

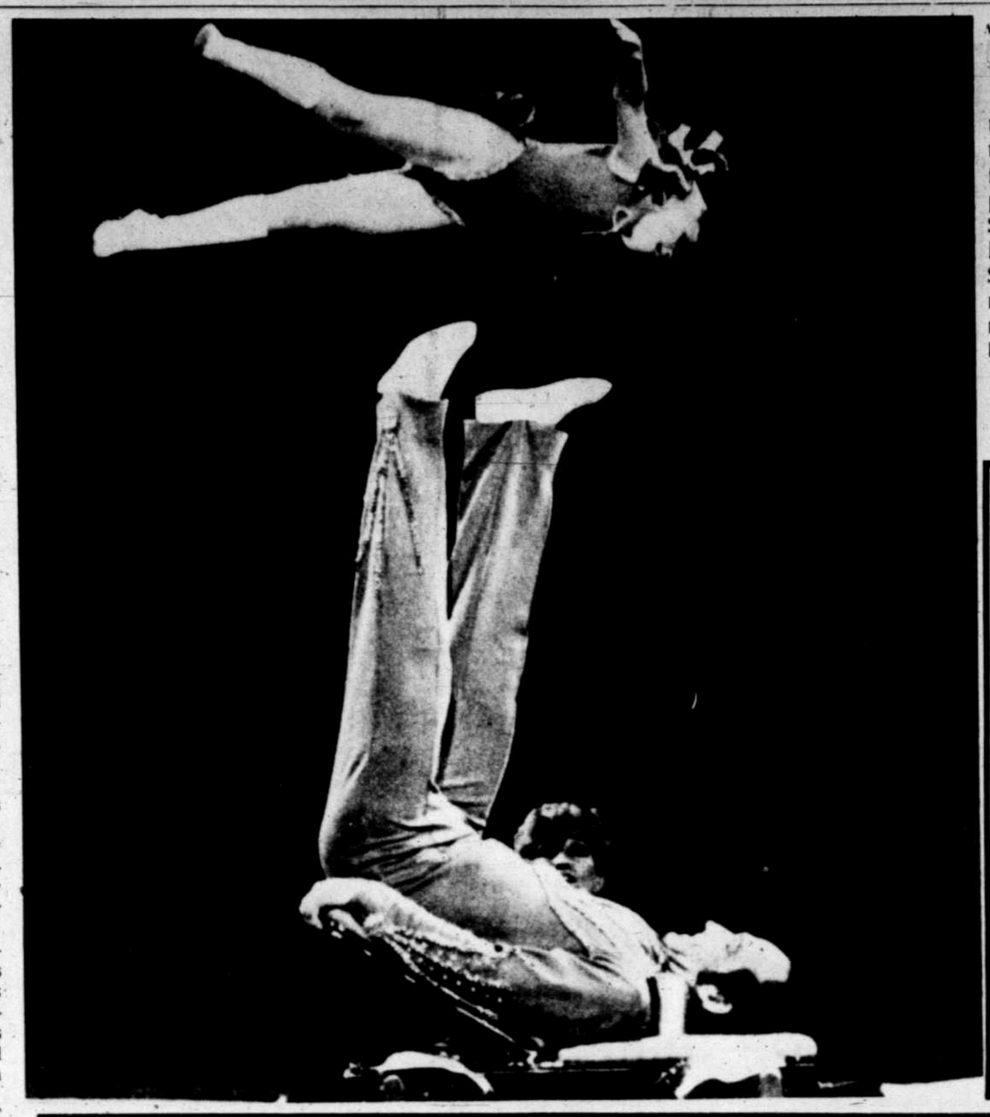

"The families on the isolated farms are the only ones still speaking Welsh, and the old people here in town," he said, his blue eyes bright beneath the bill of a flat plaid cap.

GWYNFE SAID the congregations at the two Welsh Protestant churches in Gaiman are declining because of intermarriage and assimilation into the Argentine mainstream, which is overwhelmingly Catholic.

Nevil Alan Pugh embodies Gaiman's transition. The 42-year-old machinist is one of eight children born to local Welsh farmers over a 20-year period.

"My parents spoke to us all in Welsh. The older siblings grew up responding in Welsh, but the younger ones, like me, answered in Spanish from the time we started school," he said.

He is married to an Argentine and their children speak no Welsh.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, April 4, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress and best-selling author Maya Angelou ("I Know Why The Caged Bird Sings") shares this birthday with you. Also born on this date: dance king Arthur Murray. Your outgoing and energetic ways carry you far in the months ahead. Singles find romance exciting, but are unlikely to settle down. Married couples expand their already-rewarding relationships. Business affairs benefit from the support you receive from your family and friends. Greater financial security gives you greater freedom of choice. Make the most of each new opportunity. An interest in electronics could lead to a second career. Contribute to a regular savings program.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Clean house! Get organized so that you know where things are. You will feel more comfortable with unexpected visitors if everything looks in order.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This rather slow-moving day provides a welcome change from the busy work week. Others find you less tense and easier to be around. You take special pride in young person's achievements.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put everything in writing if borrowing or lending money. Your intuition gives you a big advantage. Listen to it! Avoid being swept along with the crowd. Make up your mind for yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Others support your aims, but you must exude confidence. Do not reject offers of assistance. Lay all of your cards on the table to avoid any misunderstandings with loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Making requests at a social gathering causes trouble. Be very subtle until things settle down a bit. Forget former romantic partner and find someone more interesting!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Now is the time to make overtures to someone you have admired from afar. A spiritual experience gives you new insights. Parents take pleasure in what a child does today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone challenges you to make your dreams come true. Your enthusiasm for an idea doubles when loved one shows interest. The time spent with a child is a good investment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put your pride aside and have a heart-to-heart talk with loved one about something that seems to be keeping you apart. Be sure you know where your cash is flowing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Socializing with influential people gives you a big lift today. Member of opposite sex's comments put you in a more positive frame of mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are responsible for getting the ball rolling today. Help arrives from an unexpected source. Imaginative people come up with an idea that makes this a wonderful day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It is up to you to lighten the atmosphere at home today. A sense of humor works wonders! A phone call soothes you and influences you to accept an invitation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spend the day relaxing and pursuing your creative interests. Social activities are the most fun if only a few people are involved.

Steam rises from the lava dome in the crater of Mount St. Helens recently. An increased rate of swelling of the crater floor indicating a possible eruption was reported by a team of scientists from the U.S. Geological survey and the University of Washington.

Predicting economic future of America

By RAY STASZEWSKI
Copley News Service

Looking back from the winter of 1983, the surfacing of the financial panic of '82 began with a rather unremarkable event.

In the last week of July, sales of U.S. short-term treasury securities in the secondary market began to increase.

The boosts were first reported by the major financial wires daily news gathering during the first week of August, but since there was little impact on money market rates and the sellers were unidentified, nobody could be faulted for not noting the significance.

However, as August wore on, the volume of sales began to rise sharply. With more issues being offered in the marketplace, actual prices began to fall so that yields, or effective interest rates, in the government securities sector of the bond market began to rise.

That in itself was not too startling because short-term rates in recent years have tended to fluctuate. The advent of wide and rapid movements in interest rates has historically been linked to a time when the Federal Reserve stopped manipulating the rise and fall of interest rates, shifting instead to a new emphasis on controlling the growth in the total money supply.

In fact, the Federal Reserve itself often operates to achieve its monetary goals — of relative tightness or ease — in the secondary market for U.S. government securities.

If the Fed enters the market as a buyer of treasury securities, it adds funds to the reserves of the nation's banks. It does this by bidding for outstanding issues and paying for them with dollars it is creating, thus adding inflated dollars to the nation's money supply.

If the Fed enters the market as a seller of government securities, then the buyers, such as banks or thrifts, pension funds, insurance companies or other investors in the private sector turn their dollars over to the government, which results in a draining of funds from the banking network. This has the effect of trimming the money supply since there are less dollars out in public hands.

In less than a week in that August of '82, the lateral effect of escalating rates in short-term securities began to percolate into other financial sectors. Commercial interest rates began to rise sharply. The nation's major banks began to raise their prime lending rates. With prices being cut for treasury securities in the open market, the bond market also began a sharp decline.

Speculation was so widespread that either the Fed or, for some unexplained reason, the Treasury itself slammed the brakes on growth in the money supply, thus signaling the beginning of a new era of tight money and record high interest rates. Some bond market traders suggested that foreign central banks could well be selling T-bills, thus taking dollars out of the country.

By the following Monday, new Treasury bills for 13 and 26 weeks were auctioned at record high yields. On Tuesday, both the stock market and the bond market posted their sharpest declines in over 30 years as trading volume surged to its highest level ever.

On Thursday, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, which conducts open market operations to implement the policy decisions of the Federal Reserve, took the unprecedented step of announcing a "buy-in" of all treasury securities maturing in less than a year. It also announced that in recent days it had not sold securities for its own account or for any foreign central banks.

Following the announcement, interest rates dipped slightly then began to soar. Late in the day, an apparently unrelated news item hit the wires. A relatively small money market fund, sponsored by a California financial institution, announced that it was suspending check writing privileges to its investors for a brief period to resolve a cash problem.

By Friday, both the stock and bond market were in total disarray. Many issues could not be traded at all, while those that changed hands did so at deep discounts.

At noon on the last trading day of the week, with the markets still open, the Federal Reserve announced that the money supply for the week ended last Wednesday had soared a record $20 billion, indicating a massive injection of funds by the government into the nation's economy.

Kansas may get Nixon library

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — City officials have voted to consider establishing the Richard M. Nixon library here.

"I'd like to see a presidential library in Leavenworth, but I wish it didn't have to be his," Mayor Robert Dougherty said after the city commission voted on the proposal earlier this week.

Hohstadt says Permian Basin needs cultural balance

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The economic prosperity of Midland and the Permian Basin must be balanced culturally, said Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, conductor of the internationally acclaimed Midland-Odessa Symphony.

"If we don't balance, we create a vacuum," he said.

Hohstadt, who was touting the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, led into his remarks on "the balance" by quoting a fellow whom he had met in one of his international tours.

'"The United States is very, very big,'" the man told Hohstadt in broken English, "'but it's not very deep (spiritually and artistically).'"

Particularly since the renewed petroleum boom and the resultant nationwide publicity given Midland and the Permian Basin, "people have been looking at us," the conductor said. "We're kind of in a fish bowl."

He referred to those values — the spiritual, the artistic, the imaginative and the creative — needed to balance a city in an era of economic prosperity. And he said he hopes that some day Midland, in striving toward that balance, will become known as "The Eternal City."

"The way people seek themselves," he philosophized, "determines their future."

But, Hohstadt noted, many people view Midland as a "temporary city" rather than "The Eternal City." Within that context, he mentioned how he mysteriously had been bothered by a movie he had viewed and pondered but could understand the wherewithal. Later, Hohstadt said he suddenly realized that the bother wasn't the movie at all. "It was the title: 'Take The Money and Run.'"

Earlier in his recent talk to the Midland Downtown Lions Club, the conductor said he has seen the "cultural climate of West Texas from both extremes" during his 20 years of "active cultural life" in Texas.

Contrary to reality, Hohstadt said, "a lot of people think we still have cowboys and Indians out here and that's about it."

The conductor contrasted the braggadocio of the Old World and the New World. In Vienna, he said, a boasting Viennese would say, "My father was Count So-and-So." But in the United States, it's not the same. "When I brag," the conductor said, "I like to tell that my great-grandfather had the first store in North Texas on a wagon trail...(And) my father lived in a cave in Oklahoma. Actually," he conceded, "it was a dug-out, but a cave sounds more romantic."

"I try to do a lot of bragging," he said, and noted the tendency to "confuse the difference between humility and modesty. "Humility is really a great human virtue, he said.

"There's nothing wrong with good, old-fashioned Texas pride," said Hohstadt, who exuded pride in the symphony but who later lamented, "We are the only metropolitan orchestra in the United States that performs in a high school auditorium; we do not have an adequate performing facility for our type of organization.

Dr. Thomas Hohstadt

"A Texan's pride is his way of expressing his care," he said, "and the most important thing you can say to a person is to say 'I care.'"

Snelson spending three times as much on advertising

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Land Commissioner candidate Garry Mauro leads his two Democratic primary opponents in campaign contributions, but Pete Snelson has apparently outspent Mauro on advertising three to one, their campaign finance reports showed Friday.

Mauro has raised $301,976 — $8,333 in loans — and spent $262,713, $34,000 of that on advertising as of the end of March.

Snelson, state senator from Midland, has raised $263,513 — $130,000 in loans — and spent $260,289, $110,000 on advertising. The biggest chunk went toward running television spots in Austin.

Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale trails the other two Democrats with only $21,499 raised. He has spent $9,639.

The reports continued to trickle into the elections office Friday, although most came in Thursday since they are required to be postmarked April 1.

The four major candidates for governor had filed their reports Thursday, with two of the lesser-known candidates following on Friday.

Gov. Bill Clements has spent at least $275,000 on media and public opinion research this year in his campaign for re-election, but according to the reports, the big-ticket item so far for Clements' only Republican opponent was repair of the transmission in his 1967 Lincoln convertible.

Clements' report showed him to be the money-raising champ, with a $4 million campaign chest. He has spent $2.3 million.

His only competition for the Republican nomination, San Antonio ex-insurance salesman Lowell "Duke" Embs, has raised $1,050, $350 of it in personal loans. A $13.26 contribution from the Republican State Executive Committee was labeled a "gift." He has spent $4,493.

Embs' hand-written report showed he paid AAMCO of San Antonio $586 to "fix transmission" and spent $110 at a San Antonio Firestone dealer for a new tire.

He also spent over $1,000 on clothing at two Austin stores and got himself a new pair of Lucchese boots in Houston for $191. A $350 expenditure to an Austin liquor store was labeled "beer and booze for rallys."

Attorney General Mark White is the big-money candidate among Democratic gubernatorial contenders, with $1.2 million raised. Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple shows $593,510 raised, while Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong is trailing with $349,706 in contributions.

But Armstrong is way ahead of Democrat David L. Young of Austin, who has raised no money and spent $2,433. One of his expenditures would seem to symbolize the shoestring nature of his campaign — $94 to Radio Shack for a telephone answering device.

As of Friday afternoon, state treasurer candidate Ann Richards' report was not yet on file. She is seeking to wrest the Democratic nomination from incumbent Warren G. Harding.

Harding, who was recently indicted on two felony counts of official misconduct, reported $6,660 raised and $52,500 spent. State Sen. Mike Richards of Houston, Republican treasurer candidate, filed his report Friday, showing $56,075 raised — from 16 contributors who gave no less than $1,000 at a time

Max Sherman of Amarillo is out spending another Democratic challenger for Comptroller, Raymond Frank of Austin. But both are behind incumbent Democrat Bob Bullock.

Sherman's report, filed Friday, shows he has raised $244,692 and spent $204,386. Bullock and Frank both filed Thursday. Bullock has raised $300,311 and spent $284,467. Frank reports $20,526 raised and $22,436 spent.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown and Democratic primary challenger Jim Hightower, former editor of the Texas Observer, are virtually even on campaign money raised, but Hightower is outspending Brown.

Brown reports $135,094 raised, $54,985 spent. Hightower's report shows $136,563 has come into his campaign. He has spent $126,596 of it.

Williams agrees to suspension

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Former Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., convicted of bribery and conspiracy in the Abscam investigation, agreed Friday to a temporary suspension of his New Jersey law license.

Williams has no law practice and is registered as an inactive member of the bar, according to a statement from the state Supreme Court.

Williams ended a 23-year Senate career on March 11 when he resigned in the face of near-certain expulsion by a vote of fellow Senators.

The Supreme Court announcement also said that Alexander Feinberg, a Cherry Hill lawyer who was convicted in Williams' trial of bribery, aiding and abetting, had agreed to a suspension of his law license.

Williams' suspension was immediate, but Feinberg was given until April 12 "to enable him to conclude his legal practice in an orderly manner," the statement said.

Neither Williams nor Feinberg could be immediately reached for comment Friday afternoon.

Williams was admitted to the state bar in 1951, Feinberg in 1934.

Ethics complaints were filed against the two lawyers following their indictments in the Abscam case.

They were convicted in federal court in Uniondale, N.Y., last May.

Both have maintained their innocence, arguing they were entrapped by undercover FBI agents into a complicated deal involving shares in a titanium mine.

Poles suffer more after 'Black Monday'

By DAN FISHER
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WARSAW, Poland — Tadeusz, a 35-year-old factory worker, has a bookkeeping system that would do credit to a corporate giant like the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

His family ledger is a rainbow of figures, the various categories of spending entered neatly in pink, purple, green and brown ink. He can show you how much a kilogram (2.2 pounds) of sausage cost as far back as 1969, the year he and his wife, Ewa, were married.

And all those colorful numbers tell him that his life, and the lives of his 36 million countrymen, changed drastically and permanently last Feb. 1 — "Black Monday," Poles call it.

On that day, the authorities carried out a "price reform" that pushed up the cost of some basic foods and other necessities by as much as 500 percent.

The shock, at a time of devastating economic crisis, is difficult to comprehend. It has created what an independent economist and sociologist called "a new social situation."

It is as if all the inflation of the last 20 years in the United States was brought together in one giant price increase.

Julian Auleytner, a member of the Polish Parliament and a public welfare expert, said that the minimum amount of money needed for "a human being to provide for his elementary needs" will double this year.

"No less than 9 million to 10 million Poles now live below that standard," he added.

ANOTHER EXPERT said that soon, after most families have used the last of their savings and are forced to live on their incomes, one-third of the nation will be living in a state of "permanent undernourishment," and another third "will be brought to the level of minimum social existence."

The government forecasts a staggering 25 percent decline in consumer buying power this year, and independent experts believe that the government may be wildly optimistic. Wage increases intended to cushion the impact of the increased prices will offset less than one-third of the new price levels, one said. "So families will have to pay the other 70 percent from savings or in a reduced standard of living."

The government contends that the "reform" is a painful necessity after years of subsidized prices that contributed heavily to Poland's general economic collapse. And many Poles are willing to concede the point. But that does not make it any easier to cope with the situation.

This has never been a wealthy nation. But for years, the main economic problem for Poles like Tadeusz and Ewa was not how much something cost but whether it was available.

Apartments, cars, appliances and quality clothing have always been hard-fo-find luxuries, while prices for basic food and shelter were low. Average wages, while still meager by Western standards, nonetheless tripled during the 1970s. Thus many Poles had more money than they needed for necessities and could save a large percentage of their income against the day when, by luck or finagling, they would get a chance to acquire those "luxuries."

Now, that way of thinking is obsolete.

The ultimate impact of the change on Polish life is difficult to assess, but there are clear hints — such as the uncertainty of old people as they stare at the new prices posted in the shops and go away empty-handed, shaking their heads and muttering under their breaths.

An afternoon with Tadeusz, Ewa and their family ledger underlines the sense of financial hopelessness that many Poles feel.

The experience of this couple — they asked that their last name not be used — is typical.

TADEUSZ, A stout blond with soft features and a ready smile, is a locksmith on the 6 a.m. shift at a large machinery plant, where he started working after high school 18 years ago.

Ewa, a slender brunette who covers her mouth in a self-conscious effort to conceal her decaying teeth, works part-time as a shop clerk. She likes to be home in the afternoons, when their 9-year-old son gets back from school.

They are better off than some. For the last seven years, they have had their own two-room apartment in a working class district of Warsaw's north side. Tadeusz registered to join a cooperative in 1964, as soon as he turned 18. He got the apartment just 10 years later — a short wait by today's standards.

They have managed, over the years, to furnish their apartment tastefully, if not luxuriously. Tadeuz, a talented handyman, built modern kitchen cupboards and shelving himself.

But these are by no means "privileged" Poles. They have no foreign currency, which opens the world of the special, well-stocked "Pewex" shops to many of their countrymen. What they have, they acquired by hard work and conservative money management.

"We haven't been living beyond our means," Tadeusz said. "I couldn't afford to take my wife to a restaurant more than once every six months. Our only vacation was in Poland, and to pay for it we had to take a loan.

"All our savings went for furniture and things for the apartment. Our whole marriage has been a string of loans — one to buy a television set, then another for a washing machine. But, still, I think that for us to start our married life was much easier than for people just starting now."

Tadeusz and Ewa can not figure out how they are going to get by now. Tadeusz cleared 10,450 zlotys (about $130 at the official exchange rate) last month. That is slightly more than the average wage, which is now about 9,500 zlotys (about $118). Ewa cleared 4,600 zlotys (about $57).

Their total take-home pay was 3,100 zlotys (about $38) more than in January, because of the pay rises they received to "compensate" for the Feb. 1 price increases.

But the compensation did not cover even the increase in their food bill for the month. Meanwhile, they face a 40 percent rent increase and utility bills that are expected to triple.

Moreover, the economy is so bad that Tadeusz can no longer get the overtime that used to bring in an extra 3,000 or 4,000 Zlotys a month. And Ewa's part-time job is threatened because the store where she works is cutting back.

"IT LOOKS black," Ewa said. "If I lose my job and we have to live on Tadeusz's salary, I don't know how we'll do it."

The main item in their budget, as it is for many Poles, is food, and food prices tripled after "Black Monday." More than 50 percent of their combined income went for food in February, and not because they ate particularly well.

Some personalized plates delayed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Some Texas motorists wanting personalized license plates may have to be happy with plain numerical plates for a while, the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation said.

"There was a delay in making the plates at the prison system in Huntsville," said Jim Keithley, administrative assistant for the motor vehicle registration department. "There was some bad weather and during that time the inmates could not be let out to work in the plant manufacturing plates."

He said the prison system planned to have all personalized plates shipped before April 1, but it might be several days before they arrive in some counties.

"In counties where they do not have personalized plates they are issuing regular numerical plates for the same price," Keithley said.

New book worth Saudi experience

By CURT SUPLEE
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — There were bound to be surprises. Like the falcons flying in first class.

"On the Saudi airlines, they keep the birds up there on sticks that look like giant golf tees," says Robert Lacey, author of the new history, "The Kingdom: Arabia & the House of Saud."

Or the deluge of scents. " 'The perfumes of Araby' is not an empty cliche," he says. After a dinner with the male gentry, "the servants would bring in great flasks like milk bottles full of Chanel and 4711 and the men would sort of rinse their hands in it."

Or the incredible heat. At 120 degrees, says his wife, Sandi, who lived with her husband for 18 months in the desert nation, "I'd have to get up at 6 a.m. to do the laundry — just to get water cool enough so that the colors wouldn't run."

In semi-repose in the Jefferson Hotel here, the British pair look spiffy and chipper as up-scale honeymooners. But there are latent tremors of Saudi-shock as they pound the promotional pavement in the hopes that the 38-year-old author's chronicle of the Arabian dynasty from 1900 to the present can match the success of his 1977 best seller, "Majesty," about Queen Elizabeth and the House of Windsor. After all, he says, the House of Saud "has power that makes even the Rockefellers look insignificant."

EDUCATED AT CAMBRIDGE, Lacey spent his holidays working as a tour director for groups of young women traveling in Europe. "My history tutor suggested politely that perhaps I wasn't quite suited" to academe, recommending the MI5 intelligence service. Lacey joined and might have stayed, had it not been for an essay contest in the London Sunday Times offering the winner a round-trip ticket anywhere in the world.

Lacey had fallen in love with a South African girl in one of his tour groups, and entered the contest to visit her. He placed second, winning enough for a ticket. The romance came to nothing, but the article got Lacey his next job as a feature writer at the Times. By then he had married Sandi and worked from 6 to 9 each morning on his early biographies of Robert, Earl of Essex, Sir Walter Raleigh and Henry VIII. "They got wonderful reviews, sold no copies at all," and he paid his own way to the States to promote them. But when Sandi suggested "something on the British royal family," the result, timed to coincide with the Jubilee Year, left him with nearly half a million dollars and a professional quandary.

"My British publishers wanted a sort of 'Son of Majesty,' about Prince Charles, but my American publishers wanted a book about the American royal family, the Kennedys." The Kennedys prevailed, and in 1977 the Laceys started looking for houses in the Washington area. But then one day Lacey was talking to a Palestinian woman who "told me a story I had never heard," about how Abdul Aziz (1876-1953), known in the West as Ibn Saud and the patriarch of the royal line, had set out with a handful of Bedouin raiders to unify Arabia in the first decades of this century. Lacey was excited. Sandi, a graphic designer, was not: "It was a nightmare," she says, that "nearly caused the breakdown of our marriage."

LACEY HAD FORTUNATELY "met a family of Saudi merchants who were willing to take the risk of signing my entry papers. The only way you can get a residence visa in Saudi Arabia is to find a Saudi who will take the blame for you, who puts his name to all your documents, who keeps your passport in his safe and to whom you have to go when you want to leave the country to apply for an exit visa." Although Lacey paid for these services, he is grateful to his sponsor for "risking his good name on the project." By 1978, they were in Jeddah.

Lacey, who had spent months on a crash course in Arabic and had made a preliminary trip to Riyadh, was somewhat prepared for the Islamic rituals and indigenous customs of Saudi culture. But his wife was not. "It's like landing on the moon," she says, recalling the perpetual lung-clogging nimbus of dust and sand. Not to mention: the strip search at the airport by women in heavy veils ("It's terrifying if you can't see their faces"); the exotic dinners ("hundreds of dishes" including roast goat); the virtual imprisonment at home with their daughter, Scarlett, then 6. (A son, Sasha, now 15, stayed in England at school.) "Women cannot drive, so there I was with the car outside and the keys in my pocket, but I couldn't get out!"

Sandi was at first shocked by the universal segregation of sexes. The several hundred women doctors treat only female patients; the women's banks serve only female clients. At public beaches, women appear fully clothed, wearing veils; and just before the Laceys arrived, public swimming pools had been closed To women — "Apparently two (Western) stewardesses had taken their bikini tops off" — monstrously appalling in a land where showing hair is considered seductive and where "whole blocks of flats remain unoccupied," Lacey says, "because they were designed on the Western format, with only one living room instead of two — one for men, one for women."

BUT SANDI FOUND "a great sense of sisterhood" and remembers "some fantastic times," like her attendance at a royal wedding party, or half of it, anyway — the men's side met across town at a different time.

Lacey's sponsor introduced him to many members of the royal family, and he cultivated the acquaintance of some young princes who had been educated in America, parlaying one contact into another, gaining interviews with religious and business leaders, making forays into desert camps, socializing with the younger royalty, even dining once with the king. ("So what?" said an unimpressed bus driver. "The bedouin go and sit with him every day.") The briskly paced history leans heavily on scholarship, including nearly 100 pages of appendices, bibliography and notes. But there are many contemporary vignettes, such as King Khalid hunting with his falcons. He travels in a Range Rover with the top sawed off and filled with "huge, plush sofas on which the royal party bounce off toward the hills.

"When they see the game, a button is pushed and King Khalid's armchair rises into the air," allowing him to release the birds. On the way back, "if the hunting has been good, King Khalid picks up the microphone of the walkie-talkie in his dashboard. Into it he sings the verse of a victory chant sung from time immemorial by bedouin returning from a successful raid..."

And there are vivid, gossipy anecdotes from the history of the kingdom. In 1946, Winston Churchill gifted the patriarch Abdul Aziz with a magnificent Rolls-Royce limousine, specially equipped with silver fittings and with its rear seat custom-converted to "one huge armchair...to accommodate the generously proportioned royal stern." Abdul Aziz was not impressed. "Only women sat in the back of cars," and the right-hand drive meant that the king would have to sit to the left of his driver, "the position of dishonor." He gave the car to his brother on the spot.

ALTHOUGH HIS BOOK has been banned in Saudi Arabia — "it did wonders for sales in London" — and despite his difficulty adjusting to the all-encompassing religiosity of "people who believe that reading the Koran can help you fly a fighter plane better," Lacey emerged with a positive overview of the nation where barefoot nomads consort with royalty but slavery was not abolished until 1962, where stupendous wealth co-exists with Koranic injunctions to austerity. "It doesn't attack religion — it validates it. They believe they wouldn't be wealthy if they weren't religious, so they feel no guilt, no shame."

Many worry that the Saudi regime may be susceptible to an Iran-style revolution, but Lacey is bullish, "because there is no gap between the rulers and the people. Ordinary Saudis can sit down and talk to the equivalents of Alexander Haig or Caspar Weinberger"; and oil income means that "no Saudi lacks for anything he wants, and if money can put things right, it does."

Moreover, the internal dissension that has plagued the house only shows the "great sense of preservation" in the family; and most external threats dissolve because "the Arabs are capable of feuding bitterly and then embracing as blood brothers." Still, the Saudis dread violent extremists like those who attacked the mosque at Mecca in 1979. "Life would be perfect if it weren't for the Palestinian-Israeli conflict. They fear most of all the Palestinians — and the Arab Palestinians are considered just as bad as the Jewish ones."

LACEY MAY TAKE up this subject in his next book, for which he plans to live in Israel. Sandi wants to move to New York or Washington, but seems nearly resigned. "When he came back from Saudi Arabia, he was muttering about Lebanon! So I suppose Israel is an improvement on that."

But for the time being, Lacey says, "I've had one incredibly broadening experience. I need a lot of rest before the next one." He won't be getting it soon. After a quick talk with People magazine on the phone, and a discussion with an official at his publishing firm about doing the "Merv Griffin Show," the Laceys are off for engagements at the National Press Club here and many points west.

"The Arabs have a saying," Robert Lacey says: "You Westerners are the slaves of time — and we are the masters."

Advance teams clean up before presidents' visits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even before the first briefing book is opened by a White House staffer or reporter preparing to accompany the president on a trip out of the United States, the pre-advance team is back from looking at the sites.

After the pre-advance team returns, the advance team takes off to plan, minute-by-minute, the president's day in a foreign country.

White House teams are now in Jamaica and Barbados on just such missions for President Reagan, who will visit the two island nations in the Caribbean next week.

And when Reagan gets back to Washington Easter Sunday, a pre-advance team will set out for Europe, which the president will visit in June.

Advance teams are sent around the globe to smooth the way for the president. No detail is too minor to be attended to; no problem too major to be overcome.

Among the advance staff's duties is the task of making sure the president and White House staff members receive local newspapers.

From Jamaica comes word that one of the local newspapers features a nude woman as a centerfold picture each day.

Although political violence is said by U.S. officials to have dropped in Jamaica, crime remains a problem, they say.

Staff members and reporters traveling to Kingston with Reagan are being housed Wednesday evening, the one night the president is spending in Jamaica, in downtown hotels whose parking lots are patroled by police officers assisted by dogs.

The members of the advance team already there are planning a dinner for the travelers at one of the hotels, which are near each other, so they do not have to move around in a dangerous section of the capital city.

One guest at the hotel reported that in a short walk across the parking lot, he was approached twice by women he could only assume were prostitutes and once by a man touting the quality of Jamaican marijuana.

It was the advance team sent to Lagos, before then-President Carter visited Nigeria, that discovered the local authorities scheduled weekly executions of criminals on a beach near the hotel where White House staff members were quartered.

The Nigerian hosts asked whether the staff members would like them to postpone the firing squad's work until after Carter departed. Yes, that would be appreciated, the White House staff members said.

When Malcolm Kilduff, a member of the White House press office staff, was part of an advance team visiting Ireland before John F. Kennedy stopped there, he took one look at the quay from which Kennedy's ancestors reportedly set sail for the United States and determined that something would have to be changed before the president arrived.

He discovered a pile of manure and told the local mayor that it would have to be removed.

The mayor's response: "Sure, and we'll pile it higher and deeper and make the (president) think he's climbing the Alps."

The mayor's comments notwithstanding, it was cleaned up.

Authors protest banned books

By RICHARD C. FIRSTMAN
By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Alice Childress wrote a novel nine years ago, about a 13-year-old heroin addict named Benjie, about Benjie's friends and his relatives and his pusher. The Island Trees school board thought the book was "anti-American" and ordered it removed from the shelves of the district's libraries.

On Thursday, Alice Childress read from the book, in public, between the stone lions of the New York Public Library. She wore a button and held a balloon proclaiming, "I Read Banned Books." And she described her immediate, visceral reaction to the Island Trees banning. It had nothing to do with the lofty idea of freedom of expression.

"I was hurt," she said. "People thought I didn't care about young readers, that I was just writing commercially. I wrote it out of a deep concern for the inroads hard drugs were making on our children."

Childress and a group of authors and actors read from banned books in what was advertised as a banned book "Read Out" — the first writers' protest of the growing number of school boards around the country that are removing controversial books from library shelves. The Long Island school board ordered nine books off the high school library shelves in 1975.

Feinstein: Brown can be beaten by any Republican

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Hearts Feature Service

WASHINGTON — San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein said Thursday she believes California Gov. Jerry Brown could be defeated "by almost any Republican" in his bid this year for a seat in the U.S. Senate.

Although she said she recognizes that Brown, like the legendary bird, the phoenix, can "rise from his own ashes," the mayor contended that at the moment it appears that Brown's political career is coming to a halt.

The continuing controversy over Brown's slowness in moving last year to eradicate the "medfly" from California's rich agricultural lands, she said, is but "a crystalization of many issues" on which the governor has taken unpopular stands.

After eight years as governor, Brown is seeking the Democratic nomination for the Senate seat being vacated by retiring Republican Sen. S.I. Hayakawa. Among candidates for the Republican Senate nomination are President Reagan's daughter, Maureen; Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr.; Rep. Paul McCloskey; Rep. Robert Dornan and San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson.

Feinstein, also a Democrat, told a breakfast meeting with reporters that Brown "approaches the political arena from a very esoteric point of view." She added that there are a number of issues that make him highly vulnerable in his race for the Senate.

On the other hand, she expressed the belief that Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, who is expected win the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, is "extraordinarily well-liked" in the bay area and should be an outstanding candidate.

The mayor said she anticipates that State Attorney General George Deukmejian will be Bradley's Republican opponent. Deukmejian's chief opponent is Lieutenant Gov. Mike Curb.

Bradley could be hurt in the bay area, however, the mayor said, because of his support of the proposed 43-mile long Peripheral Canal, which would channel water from northern to southern California. But Deukmejian also has supported the building of that waterway.

As for another fellow Californian, President Reagan, Feinstein said that when he was governor "he made some good appointments...which is a good measure of a governor."

But she also noted that Reagan began closing down state hospitals and increased both taxes and the budget.

The mayor also said that Reagan "represents a political genre that is extremely conservative" in a period when "you need leadership from the middle instead of one end of the (political) spectrum."

She maintained that the nation's mayors — "and I can speak for a number of mayors" — feel isolated from the Reagan administration. The mayors, she added, had far greater access to the White House during the Carter administration.

As to 1984, the mayor said she thought former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. Edward Kennedy were the Democratic frontrunners in her area. She said she is closer to Mondale than to Kennedy and, therefore, tends to favor him, but feels that the former vice president must develop a more vigorous speaking style — "a passion in what he says publicly."

"He needs to speak to the issues...to the people," she said, "and not get hung up on technicalities...like indexing." Although Kennedy would benefit from support of political activists in San Francsico, Feinstein said, she believes Kennedy and Mondale would run about even among voters at large. She supported the Carter-Mondale ticket against Kennedy in the 1980 Democratic primaries.

Bill would decrease federal workers' sick days

WASHINGTON — U.S. workers who now get 13 days sick leave each year would be cut back to five under a legislative proposal of Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, to overhaul the government retirement system and put all new federal employees under Social Security.

Stevens' bill, which has been on the drawing board for months, would put all new federal workers under a combination of the Civil Service Retirement program and Social Security. Current employees could remain in the civil service pension system if they chose, or elect to come into the new program.

Federal workers now contribute 7 percent of their salaries to the CS retirement program and the federal government matches it. They are not covered by Social Security.

Stevens says his sick-leave plan will increase paycheck protection for younger workers and people hit with long-term illness. He says the leave "loss" — the lack of ability to stockpile any sick days for future years or toward retirement — would be more than offset by provisions that provide long-term accident or illness insurance benefits.

After an employee used his five days of sick leave, he could continue at 100 percent of salary for a "few weeks" under the Stevens plan. Those ill for longer periods of time would have pay gradually reduced to 60 percent. If the employee was out more than 26 weeks, pay would be reduced to 40 percent of salary.

THE PROPOSAL — still a long way from becoming law — could benefit people who suffer long illnesses who must now must take vacation or leave without pay when they run out of accumulated sick leave. It would also benefit short-service workers who have not earned or "banked" much sick leave time, if they got a long-term ailment.

The drawback, in addition to the complexity of the plan, is that workers who seldom if ever use sick leave (and there are a lot of them) could no longer save up leave and credit it toward service time for retirement purposes.

Under Stevens' proposal, new employees and those who come into the proposed combined system would not have to contribute to the CS retirement fund. They would have to pay Social Security taxes, which are 6.7 percent of salary on amounts up to $32,400 a year.

Stevens' plan also would allow employees to contribute up to 16 percent of their salary into a new trust fund, with the government contributing up to 3 percent.

A new addition to the bill, being circulated to union leaders for comment, is the cutback in the amount of sick leave for government workers. Union chiefs contacted this week said the thought of cutting back sick leave makes them sick.

An official of the National Treasury Employees Union said, "Like they say on the TV show, 'That's Incredible.' We find it incredible that a retirement overhaul bill would even address the issue of sick leave, or that anybody would propose cutting back sick leave."

MOST UNION leaders feel that Stevens will be slow to introduce the legislation because of objections to earlier versions.

But the assistant majority leader has the muscle to get things done in the Senate. And, given the budget-cutting, anti-bureaucrat mood of Congress, this is one item civil servants should not dismiss just because it sounds too awful to be true.

Stevens, a staunch supporter of improved pay and benefits for federal workers, said he is concerned that Congress may gut or abandon the retirement system unless it feels the program is sound and well-run.

Furloughs postponed: The Census Bureau has stopped furloughs of its 3,500 workers in Washington while it checks its financial picture. The bureau last month began furloughing employees one day per pay period (so far most workers have had two days of furlough) and said the furloughs would continue though mid-summer, with 12 more furlough days a remote possibility.

The bureau — which got a lot of heat from Congress when it announced the furloughs — says the postponement is possible because many workers have retired or quit, and its reimbursable business from other agencies is picking up.

A pressroom worker checks a paper as the final run of the Minneapolis Star was completed Friday. The Star will merge with the morning Minneapolis Tribune beginning April 5.

Minneapolis afternoon paper prints last edition after 61 years

"This is it — the final edition," said the headline under the illustration.

"For those of you who loved us, thank you for years of loyalty," said a smaller headline on a Page One farewell from Jim Klobuchar, one of the newspaper's columnists.

Declining circulation and rising costs forced management to merge the Star with the stronger morning Minneapolis Tribune as part of an all-day newspaper. The merger will put about 100 people out of work.

The Star's staff gathered Friday after the final deadline for champagne and a last meeting with Editor Stephen Isaacs, who is leaving the company. They applauded at length when he walked in.

"For those of you who are staying, I wish you Godspeed," he said. "For those of us who are leaving, we'll all be fine in time."

He said the newspaper had not failed and was still making a profit despite its problems. "It had to come, but I hated to see it come," Isaacs added.

A large Star banner used at the state fair was autographed by the staff and presented to Isaacs. When the hefty editor saw it, he quipped, "I thought somebody had made me a T-shirt to fit."

Many wore T-shirts bearing the Star logo and the inscription: "Ahead of its time. August 19, 1920 — April 2, 1982."

John Oslund, a business news writer, said any profit from sales of the T-shirts would go to the Minneapolis Literacy Project. "Maybe more people will learn to read newspapers," he said.

The final press run was 13,000 greater than normal to provide souvenirs, newspaper officials said.

Circulation of the Star reached more than 300,000 during the 1960s, but fell to about 170,000. The Tribune's circulation is about 243,000. Publisher Donald Dwight, who announced the merger last week, said he exects the combined newspaper to retain mmst of the Star's subscribers for a total of about 360,000.

Charles W. Bailey, editor of the Tribune, will be editor of the combined paper, which debuts Monday.

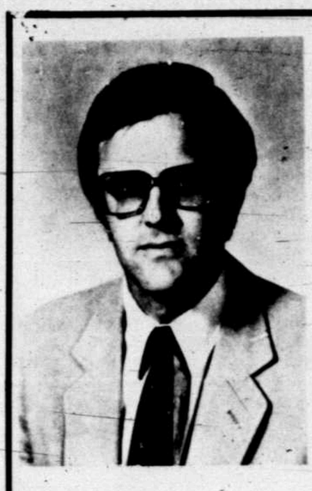

Dwight said changing reader habits had caused circulation to drop while rising production and circulation costs had driven the newspaper's advertising rates up.

About 100 workers were laid off, including a total of 55 in both newsrooms. Most layoffs were at the Star, where the staff had less seniority than at the Tribune.

The the news staff of the combined paper will be 50 percent larger than either paper had before, "making it possible for a single statewide paper to provide more depth and perspective to complex stories," Dwight said in announcing the Star's demise.

The combined newspaper will have four editions, with morning home delivery and two editions for newstands in the afternoons, Dwight said. It will have 20 percent more news space than either paper had before, he added.

Name mixup leads to mental ward

MIAMI (AP) — A Orlando woman who suffers from mental problems if she doesn't take medication was arrested, jailed, moved to Dade County and later sent to a state mental hospital without trial in an apparent case of mistaken identity.

The five-week ordeal ended Friday when a judge ordered Janette Elaine Cammock freed.

Her family had insisted she was innocent of any crime. "If they are looking for a person ... aren't they supposed to have some identification of them? They can't just put a person in jail like that," Mrs. Cammock's husband Oswald said Thursday.

Dade Circuit Judge Herbert Klein agreed Friday, telling a beaming Mrs. Cammock, "You are released of all charges here and you can go home with your relatives." He cautioned her lawyer to see that she takes her medication daily to avoid future problems.

"I have some, judge, I'm taking it three times a day," she said.

After an attorney for the family went to court this week demanding Mrs. Cammock's return, Klein on Thursday had ordered authorities to return her to Miami from the state mental hospital at Chattahoochee in northwest Florida and unravel the situation.

"Obviously, any judge would be indignant if it is the wrong person," Klein said Thursday.

Mrs. Cammock, 28, was arrested Jan. 29 in Orlando in central Florida, the Miami News reported Friday.

"She had been walking back and forth in traffic on a busy street, screaming and yelling," said Orange County sheriff's Deputy Mike Burk.

SHE HAD NO IDENTIFICATION and her speech was difficult to understand, Burk said. When he asked her name, he said, her answer sounded like Joan Hammock. He asked for her date of birth and wrote down Jan. 30, 1953 — a year off.

At the station, Burk checked the state crime computer with that name and found bad-check warrants issued in Miami for a "Jo Ann Hammock." There was no birth date.

"The teletype came back the same name and three aliases," said Burk. "One of the others was a hit. It was the same birth date as her."

Both women are black, but there are few other similarities between the descriptions. Mrs. Cammock was described on a jail booking sheet as 5 feet 4 inches and weighing 170 pounds. The bad check warrants put Jo Ann Hammock's weight at 120 pounds and her height at 5 feet 6 to 6 feet.

The day after her arrest, Cammock, a food and wine steward for an Orlando restaurant, filed a missing persons report on his wife. He told the Orange County sheriff's department his wife needed constant medication but had been out of it for several days.

Five days later, Dade County jail officials said, she was lying naked in her own filth in a cell, in what psychiatrists described as an acute schizophrenic episode.

After a psychiatric examination on Feb. 16, Dr. Lloyd Miller of Jackson Memorial Hospital said she was a "danger to herself and others" and should be hospitalized.

On Feb. 24, Assistant State Attorney Dan Lewis and Assistant Public Defender David Raben agreed with Miller's assessment and Klein ordered her sent to Chattahoochee for treatment.

Doctor kills son, self

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — A physician who snatched his 4-year-old son from a day care center last year ended his eight-month flight from authorities by shooting the boy and himself as FBI agents closed in, officials said Friday.

The boy, Timothy Scott Linerode, was dead on arrival Thursday at a Canton hospital. His father, Dr. Phillip Linerode, 47, died in surgery.

Last Aug. 6, Linerode walked into a day care center in Bryan, Texas, and walked out with Timothy. The boy had been in the custody of his mother, Dr. Kathleen Linerode, a pediatrician.

Judge says charges politically motivated

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An El Paso district judge running for re-election says charges of official misconduct against him are politically motivated.

District Judge Woodrow Bean II was indicted Thursday by a state grand jury on three charges of official misconduct for appointing C.R. "Kit" Bramblett, his uncle by marriage, to represent a criminal defendant in three trials before Bean's 243rd District Court.

If convicted, Bean could receive a fine between $100 and $1,000 on each misdemeanor indictment, but not removal from office or other punishment, Assistant District Attorney John Bradford said.

Edwin Berliner, 171st District Court judge, set a $250 personal recognizance bond on each indictment.

Bramblett received $9,500 in county funds for representing Efren Castro Ibanez in a capital murder trial, a murder trial and an escape-from-jail trial in 1981. Ibanez was convicted on all three charges.

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A judge on Friday rejected Claus von Bulow's bid for a new trial, saying evidence against the wealthy socialite justified his conviction on charges of twice trying to kill his heiress wife.

Superior Court Judge Thomas H. Needham increased von Bulow's bail from $100,000 to $500,000, and von Bulow's lawyers said the $50,000 required to secure his immediate freedom was posted in the form of five certificates of deposit.

Needham said sentencing will take place May 7. Von Bulow could be sentenced to up to 40 years in prison on the two counts of attempted murder.

The judge said his decision rested heavily on uncontradicted medical evidence that Martha "Sunny" von Bulow was pushed into two comas, the second a lasting one, by injections of insulin.

Defense attorney Herald P. Fahringer asked Needham to set aside the conviction returned March 16 because von Bulow was found guilty on only "the sheerist of circumstantial evidence."

BUT PROSECUTOR Stephen R. Famiglietti said: "All the evidence and all the testimony points in one direction and one directon only and that is to the guilt of the defendant, Claus von Bulow."

Fahringer contended the state never refuted medical testimony that drug or alcohol abuse could have been contributing factors in Mrs. von Bulow's comas.

He also argued his client was never physically connected to the black bag taken in January 1980 from a locked closet at the von Bulows' estate in Newport, Clarendon Court. Inside the bag were an assortment of drugs and a hypodermic needle tainted with insulin and barbiturates.

Fahringer recalled that the locksmith who opened the closet for von Bulow's stepson, Prince Alexander G. von Auersperg, and a private detective testified that their search did not turn up the bag.

He said the state never rebutted the locksmith's testimony, saying: "That kind of omission ... is devastating, I think. That omission is like a thunderclap in this courtroom."

Famiglietti said the medical evidence presented by the state led to only one conclusion — that Mrs. von Bulow's comas were triggered by insulin injections.

He said the locksmith's testimony had been contradicted by von Auersperg and private detective Edwin Lambert in their earlier testimony about finding the bag. Both men said locksmith Marshall Salzman left the mansion before they searched the closet.

NEEDHAM, referring to the medical experts called to the stand by Famiglietti, said "The weight of the credible medical testimony ... was that in 1979 and 1980 Martha von Bulow received exogenous insulin ... which pushed her into both comas."

Mrs. von Bulow, 50, has been comatose since Dec. 21, 1980 and is not expected to recover. The state contended von Bulow caused the lasting coma and a brief one Dec. 27, 1979, in attempts to kill his wife during Christmas visits to their Newport estate.

The state argued von Bulow, a Danish-born financial consultant, wanted his wife dead so he could inherit $14 million and be free to marry Alexandra Isles, a 36-year-old divorcee and actress who once played in the television soap opera "Dark Shadows."

Von Bulow's lawyers argued his wife brought on her own comas by indulging in alcohol, drugs and sweets. They also suggested she used insulin in a misguided effort to control her weight.

Fahringer contended the state never refuted medical testimony that drug or alcohol abuse could have been contributing factors in Mrs. Von Bulow's comas.

He also argued his client was never physically connected to the black bag taken in January 1980 from a locked closet at the von Bulows' estate in Newport, Clarendon Court. Inside the bag were an assortment of drugs and a hypodermic needle tainted with insulin and barbiturates.

FAHRINGER recalled that the locksmith who opened the closet for von Bulow's stepson, Prince Alexander G. von Auersperg, and a private detective testified that their search did not turn up the bag.

He said the state never rebutted the locksmith's testimony, saying: "That kind of omission ... is devastating, I think. That omission is like a thunderclap in this courtroom."

Famiglietti said the medical evidence presented by the state led to only one conclusion — that Mrs. von Bulow's comas were triggered by insulin injections.

Rightists accuse Duarte of unfairly keeping power

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Rightist parties on Friday accused the Christian Democrats of trying to unfairly keep a grip on power and ultra-rightist Roberto d'Aubuisson said he's willing to be interim president.

D'Aubuisson also said his Republican Nationalist Alliance, if it controls the government, will stick to plans to revamp the reform policies started by the military-civilian junta led by Duarte and which the United States has said must continue.

"At no time will we take one step backwards as to what we said we will do with respect to social reforms," d'Aubuisson said, referring to campaign pledges to turn them around.

His party wants to change the agrarian reform program to divide cooperatives into small land holdings, and a return of the nationalized banking system to the private sector distributed among many stockholders.

D'Aubuisson added, during a news conference, that he expects the national assembly elected Sunday could be seated by April 10. But he said there will be a news blackout on alliance plans while negotiations are under way.

The centrist Christian Democrats, led by Duarte, finished first with 40 percent of the popular vote in last Sunday's election, but fell short of a majority in the constituent assembly that is to name an interim president to take over from the military-civilian junta and prepare for general elections.

No coalitions to lead the assembly have been announced and the bitterness between the rightists and the Christian Democrats is expected to increase as the days pass without a power-sharing agreement.

THE FIVE rightist groups, which have formed a caucus they say could lead to a coalition government of national unity, together took a total of 36 seats to 24 for the Christian Democrats. The distribution could vary slightly when the apportionment process is completed based on final vote totals from each state.

A communique printed in the newspaper El Diario said the five rightist parties "reject the ridiculous pretensions and the threatening attitudes of the Christian Democratic Party in taking (over) the direction of a government which the people with their massive vote denied them."

The Christian Democrats, who insist that no workable government can be formed without them, called their supporters to a "great meeting of the '82 victory" Friday in the downtown's Plaza Libertad.

Their announcement said, "Onward ... it is now or never that we will win peace."

D'Aubuisson, whose party finished second in the vote count, reiterated at a news conference that rightists are willing to talk to the Christian Democrats to "share the destinies of our country.

"But we have not considered and will not accept Duarte as the head of the government," said d'Aubuisson, an army major cashiered in the aftermath of the October 1979 coup and linked to right-wing "death squads" accused of killing leftist sympathizers.

Chain-smoking and obviously jittery in the meeting with reporters at his party's headquarters, he said that the Christian Democrats were resorting to "aggression and blackmail." He claimed Duarte's "personal ambition is provoking more disorders."

THE RIGHTEST parties hold Duarte responsible for the reforms that have taken place since the coup ousted a rightist regime. Their main complaints center on a land reform program that is breaking up some large holdings and redistributing land to peasants, and the natjonalization of the banking system.

Duarte also is blamed for the economic crisis that is caused in part by the civil war here. Leftist rebels are fighting to overthrow the U.S.-backed regime. An estimated 33,000 people have been killed in the past 29 months of political violence, most of them noncombatants killed by rightists and by Duarte's admission, perhaps security forces.

D'Aubuisson said his party is "not taking revenge and will not cause damages to anyone" after the new government is formed.

He said he would be willing to serve as provisional president if asked. He also denied that he had been meeting privately with U.S. Ambassador Deane R. Hinton and had been pressured by the United States not to form a strictly right-wing government.

The Reagan administration has said Congress would be unlikely to support further military and economic aid if a new regime backpedals on reforms. The State Department said Thursday it expects the reforms started under the current junta to continue.

The communique from the five rightist parties repeated their call for a national unity government but said they "interpret and understand that the majority vote of the Salvadoran electorate was against communitarianism as a social-political platform and against its spokesman and principal supporter in El Salvador, the engineer Jose Napoleon Duarte."

Duarte won the presidential elections in 1972 but was never allowed to take office.

Hewitt: Cult personality important to '60 Minutes'

By TOM JORY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Don Hewitt, executive producer of CBS-TV's newsmagazine "60 Minutes," talks about his experiences on the show since its inception 14 years ago.

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Hewitt, the producer, recalls a question put to Morley Safer, the correspondent, at one function or another, some time ago:

"Morley was asked why the crooks always agree to an interview with '60 Minutes,'" Hewitt relates. "Morley's answer was classic.

"He said, 'A criminal doesn't believe he's made it until he's been on '60 Minutes.'"

* * *

Through six months of the current TV season, "60 Minutes" is second only to another CBS show — "Dallas" — in the continuing race for dominance in prime time. "Dallas" was No. 1 last season, "60 Minutes" the year before.

"After 14 years," says Hewitt, who has produced every edition of the newsmagazine since its premiere in September 1968, "most TV shows have begun to fade on the horizon — if they haven't disappeared long before.

"People ask, 'Why you guys?' It's simple," Hewitt says. "It's Morley, it's Mike Wallace, it's Harry Reasoner and it's Ed Bradley. There's a cult of personality around here, and it's vital to the thing.

"Our audience is not necessarily interested in what's happening in China," Hewitt says. "They are interested in what Mike Wallace finds out about China.

"And there's something else," the producer says. "It's not a news broadcast. While the rest of television dealt with make-believe, I decided 14 years ago we would do a program that dealt with reality, in an entertaining way.

"That can include anything," Hewitt says, "that has happened, that is happening, that will happen, that people are interested in knowing about, or knowing more about."

* * *

Despite the enormous popularity of the program — "60 Minutes" is broadcast into more than 23 million homes on an average Sunday evening — Hewitt has been called on with increasing frequency to defend the program's approach and, in one recent case, a correspondent's character.

In fact, this season's premiere show, "Looking at '60 Minutes,'" examined a number of the journalistic techniques, including the confrontation, or "ambush," interview, that have contributed to the program's popularity.

Hewitt, at one point in that show, conceded that the confrontation interview "is probably a technique that has been abused, and I have a feeling that we shouldn't be trying to get people to talk to us who obviously don't want to talk."

Potentially as damaging as the general criticism was a report in the Los Angeles Times, in January, that Wallace had been caught — on videotape — making a racially disparaging joke. Wallace was quoted as saying he frequently tells ethnic jokes, but added that his friendship with the minority community over the years speaks for itself.

Capra's secret:Love of people

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It has been a long, long season for show business awards, but Sunday night brings one that is really special: "The American Film Institute Tribute to Frank Capra."

For a director who hasn't made a movie in 20 years, Capra is remarkably current. He is a hit during his frequent visits to college campuses. Film festivals throughout the world devote retrospectives to his remarkable movies. Young filmmakers speak with hushed reverence about "the Capra touch," and many try to emulate it.

A few years ago I introduced Capra to young Steven Spielberg, then riding the crest of "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." Spielberg was awed. "Every time I go on location, I take a print of 'It's a Wonderful Life,' " he told Capra. "I run it for the cast and crew and tell them, 'This is the kind of picture we're trying to make.' "

Stewart is the appropriate emcee for the CBS tribute, which was taped at the Beverly Hilton on March 4. Among those tossing posies to the director were Capra players Claudette Colbert, Bette Davis, Donna Reed, Peter Falk, Lionel Stander, Fay Wray and Jane Wyatt.

Also others who wished they had worked for Capra: Bob Hope, Steve Martin, Jack Lemmon, Fred MacMurray, Bette Midler, Donald Sutherland and Charlton Heston.

Miss Colbert, who won the Oscar for "It Happened One Night," observed: "Frank created the genre of the romantic comedy, I know, because I played in plenty of them."

Miss Davis, who drew laughter by proclaiming she was "an actress, not a song," cited the deprecating cognomen of "Capracorn" by critics of the director's sentimentality. Her conclusion: "Let's get more corn back into the business."

Capra was in his usual sprightly form as he accepted the AFI's Life Achievement Award, and his remarks remained in character.

"I love listening to all this talk about the so-called art of Frank Capra. Because you've been so kind to one Francesco Capra, born a peasant nearly 85 years ago in Bisaquino, Sicily, tonight I'm going to tell you the real secret to the whole thing.

By KATHY BAKER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — There is no other way to describe Joe Ely's entrance — he blasts onto the stage. One second he's not there, the next second he is, his audience already in a shrieking fever before he's even opened his mouth.

In his red jacket, string tie and black patent-leather cowboy boots, he is a smaller, dark-haired reminiscence of late rock'n'roller Bill Haley.

The fans are on their feet. As if on cue, their hands become a spidery mass as they wave their spread fingers over their heads. They are pounding make-believe keyboards in response to one of Ely's showcase numbers, "Fingernails."

"I keep my fingernails long, so they CLICK when I play the pe-anna," he sings, barely audible above the throb of the boogie-woogie beat.

Ely is a small man, but he is in charismatic control, bobbing up and down over his guitar and striding back and forth across the stage.

It doesn't seem possible, but the tempo heats up even more when he begins firing the machine-gun lyrics of "Musta Notta Gotta Lotta," the title tune from his album that Time magazine named one of the top ten rock'n'roll recordings of 1981:

"Please understand me, everything's all right,

Ely has come a long way from the shy singer who in the early '70s asked an Austin club owner if he could play quietly in a corner for what he could get by passing the hat through the sparse crowd of drinkers.

Off-stage he is a shrugging, toe-digging Lubbock boy, perplexed by all the fuss. He picked the place for the interview — Austin's only Indian restaurant. He says he developed a taste for eastern food on a half a dozen tours in England.

Ely recently returned to his Austin ranch — he moved from Lubbock about a year and a half ago — after opening for the Rolling Stones at the Sun Bowl in Phoenix on their U.S. tour.

Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richard "knew the last album we did, 'Musta Notta Gotta Lotta,' so I guess it came down through that," Ely says of the invitation to play with the superstars before 80,000 fans.

"...Needless to say, I was terrified," he said. "It was three times bigger than anything we'd ever played. I just lost sense of scale. It was almost like playing to nobody.

"It's no wonder they (the Stones) like to break off from the big shows and play small clubs."

Playing small clubs became a way of life for Ely and two other Lubbock-produced musicians who have written much of Ely's material — Butch Hancock and Jimmie Gilmore. The three have tried to analyze the mystical role of their West Texas upbringing in their creative lives.

"There's not any real physical inspiration there," Ely said. "Butch always theorized it had something to do with the wind. It constantly blows about 30 miles an hour.

"I kinda think it's just the sheer flatness of it — that bowl of sky all the way around you."

But if West Texas was bereft of scenery, it had a healthy music scene that left an early impression on the son of a Rock Island Railroad worker.

"I remember seeing Jerry Lee Lewis on a flatbed truck in front of a Pontiac dealership," Ely said. "That was a real socker for me as a kid — seeing 'The Killer' pounding on the piano with his feet."

Ely easily harkens back to the hair-raising days of playing honky-tonks in dry Lubbock.

"At 14 or 15, I used to play at these places called 'private clubs.'" he said. "It was kind of a loophole in the law. But the liquor stores were 130 miles from there. I think Big Spring was the closest, or maybe Midland-Odessa. So the bootleggers were always out on the parking lot.

"There were some mean old club owners. There were always club wars going on. A club would get torched down about once a week, if a guy was doing too good. It was a little like a continuation of the Old West."

Ely left Lubbock for Austin and began playing on his own at Austin dives for pennies a night. Then he and Butch and Jimmie formed a band called the Flatlanders.

Their one album is a collector's item now, a foreign release never produced on a U.S. label even though it was recorded in Nashville by producer Shelby Singleton. Gilmore, who does all the Jimmie Rodgers-inspired singing on the album, signed a contract with Singleton and has done no more recording.

"That was kind of a shaky deal," Ely said. "We never even got paid for the sessions ... All we really expected to do was get paid for the sessions, which we never were. But I'm glad it's available, because it's a real unique piece of work."

They never made any money off the album, which gets regular airplay in Europe and gave rise to a fair-sized continental following for the three Lubbock boys.

After the Flatlanders "kind of dissolved in all directions," Ely formed his own band, landed a recording contract with MCA records and now tours in Europe "about twice a year," playing "everything from big festival type things to dingy basements."

"We've gotten radio play there like we've never gotten in Texas," Ely said. "Butch and Jimmie get played on the radio on the BBC stations in London. They seem to take to Texans a lot for some reason."

Back in Austin, Ely is trying to put together scratchings of songs he "wadded up in the corners of suitcases." He plans to record another album later this year.

'Inside America' just not '60 Minutes'

The above promotional message, which comes mid way through ABC's new Sunday night magazine show "Inside America," symbolizes to a great degree what's wrong with television.

Any show that pretends to do justice to important issues in two minutes and, in the same breath, hypes a former Miss Universe and her pandering fashion show is insulting the intelligence of the American viewer.

And that's exactly the point of "Inside America," the transparent show being tested this month in the hot seat against "60 Minutes," CBS' high-rated, high-brow newsmagazine show.

Everything that "60 Minutes" is, "Inside America" isn't. As hygienic host Dick Clark says in the opening, "Inside America" goes beyond the headlines of war, inflation and bad news to "what we're all really interested in."

Does Dick Clark, America's Peter Pan, really know what America wants? Maybe he thinks all we want is junk-food television.

Sunday's "60 Minutes" lineup includes a piece on little-known Japanese experiments on American POWs during World War II, and a profile on Ted Watkins, founder of an anti-poverty agency in Watts.

Meanwhile, "Inside America" will ask: "Who's Sexier: Tom Selleck or Burt Reynolds?" and "If you could do away with one of the Ten Commandments, which one would you drop?"

But it's not all fluff. "Inside America" gets serious, too, with the two-minute debate. The pilot show asks: Should the government take steps to restrict the import of foreign cars? A senator and a trade association president each get a minute, then another minute of rebuttal.

Only "Inside America" can raise America's consciousness on a multi-faceted issue by parceling out the same time it allots to station breaks. This is just a sop, anyway, since the Federal Communications Commission requires the first hour of prime time Sunday night to be news or kiddie programming.

Which one is "Inside America?" The network said it's "a non-fictional, informational program."

Actually, if the FCC finds "Inside America's" news hole a little shallow, the program could qualify as a kid's toy. Its speeding-bullet pace is aimed at the younger generation's limited attention span, or making certain that viewers won't have time to think.

Chinese-American school idea caused more than culture shock

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post NewsService

LOS ANGELES — Suffering from a case of acute cultural shock, three Chinese acupuncture professors will be returning to their homeland shortly after spending five months here teaching at a school whose goal was to blend traditional Chinese medicine with the Western method.

Known as the American University of Chinese Health Sciences, the school closed its doors at the end of classes Friday night, a shattered dream that reportedly cost its founder $250,000.

Things went bad from the beginning. Apparently neither the professors nor the school administration was sufficiently prepared to cope with the other's expectations, not to mention the complex task of integrating two diverse medical philosophies.

Also, students and others who have been close to the school said that the professors were very unhappy with their living quarters and the domestic chores they performed during part of their stay.

The professors, all of whom declined to be interviewed by a reporter, have been living in cramped and sparsely furnished quarters, without heat, at the rear of the school in Hollywood. Those quarters are more than 100 feet from a bathroom.

Lilia Li, a Chinese-American journalist who has become interested in the school, asserted that the professors may have put too much stock in their belief that America is a land of milk and honey.

"In China everybody has 'U.S. fever' and wants to come here," Li said. "But when they arrive they don't know they must do their own cooking and laundry.

"They are so naive they think that when they come here they have arrived in paradise."

David C. Chu, a Chinese-American acupuncturist who holds a Ph.D., conceived the idea of a university that would "integrate the traditional Eastern concepts of preventing illness with the accurate scientific diagnostic techniques of Western medicine."

While on a trip to China several years ago, Chu obtained the cooperation of the Peking government, which sent the three professors — all of whom headed acupuncture departments at medical schools in China — as part of an experiment in international friendship.

The ultimate goal was to issue a medical doctor's degree after a five-year program — four years in Los Angeles and the fifth in China. The MD degree would have been awarded in China by a Chinese medical school.

Some of the students and members of the board of directors were not happy with the teaching performance of the Chinese faculty. Although the professors speak English, their command of the language and their method of teaching posed problems for the American students, according to Dr. Martin S. Mok, a University of California, Los Angeles anesthesiologist and member of the school's advisory board.

For example, he said, the professors taught simply by reading from a text, a method that Mok said is unsatisfying to American students who are used to hearing prepared lectures that supplement a text.

But the basic reason for the school's failure, according to various individuals who were on the now-defunct board, is that insufficient planning took place before the school began operations.

For example, the school opened its doors before it had obtained its legal nonprofit status and before it had achieved the standards necessary to make its graduates eligible for a California licensing exam in acupuncture, let alone its ultimate goal of training students for medical doctor degrees.

Several weeks after the school opened, a member of the national board that accredits medical schools in the United States told the Los Angeles Times that the board "wouldn't go near the school if it plans to issue its (medical) degree from a Chinese school."

Softball championship divisive issue

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post NewsService

PEKING (AFP) — The forthcoming women's world softball tournament in Taipei has become a "political issue" between the United States and China, the head of the Chinese Softball Association (CSA) said here Friday.

In an interview with Agence France-Press, Jiang Rongchang accused "some Americans" within the International Softball Federation (ISF) of "being linked to people in the United States bent on creating two Chinas."

The CSA recently lodged a protest with the ISF after the federation authorized Taiwan to hoist its flag and play its national anthem at the fifth women's world championships scheduled for July 2-11 in Taipei.

China, which claims sovereignty over the nationalist Chinese-ruled island, regards the decision as a new bid for the recognition of Taiwan as a separate state.

Jiang noted that when China was admitted to the ISF in November 1979 the ISF executive committee passed a resolution stipulating tht the softball association of Taiwan should be renamed "softball association of Taipei-China" and should no longer be allowed to use its flag, anthem and emblem symbolizing the Republic of China.

These decisions were later endorsed by the ISF general assembly in Honolulu in May 1981, he added.

"The issue now is not whether China will take part in the Taipei tournament. The crux of the matter is that senior American officials within the ISF have violated this resolution and that they must therefore rectify their mistake," Jiang said.

Asked whether the tournament should be shifted to another venue, he said that since Taipei had "violated" the ISF resolution, it "can therefore no longer be allowed to host the upcoming tournament."

However, Peking has not formally requested such a transfer. "We are talking about it," the CSA chief said.

Noting that other national associations had already called for the transfer, Jiang added: "We are following this affair closely and we are in touch with many associations. We are optimistic."

China probably hopes that under the pressure of other national associations, the ISF will be forced to transfer the tournament to another country, giving China a major diplomatic victory in its "softball war" with the rival nationalist Chinese regime in Taipei, according to observers here.

Iran provides protection

TEHRAN, Iran (AFP) — Iran has moved to provide special protection for foreign diplomats posted in the country after terrorist attacks this week against two embassies here, Deputy Foreign Minister Ahmad Azizi announced Friday.

Azizi said the government had decided to take "energetic measures" to protect diplomats in Iran. A new "special headquarters" to supervise the task had been set up, he said.

In two raids last week, unknown assailants in a car opened fire on the Turkish Embassy and the Italian Embassy. No one has claimed responsibility for the attacks.

Azizi said Friday that the Western press had "exaggerated" the raids. They were carried out by the political opposition, he said, in a bid to show that "insecurity and disorder reigned" in Iran.

Permian upsets Lee cindermen

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebel track team, which had not lost a points battle to another District 5-5A team this year, not only got shocked once Friday night at the running of the Tall City Relays at Memorial Stadium, but got fried twice.

Lee finished third in the seven-team field as both Odessa Permian and San Angelo avenged earlier losses to the Rebels. Permian poured out 151 points while San Angelo proved to be the major surprise with 128½ points. Lee produced 119¼ points for third.

"We got disqualified in the sprint relay to open the night part of the meet and lost at least 16 points. I think our kids were deflated from that point on," said Lee coach Sam Volpe.

Midland High scored only 19 points in the varsity division for sixth place with only two fourths the highest finishes of the day for the Bulldogs. "We have a young team and we concentrated on the junior varsity division and I thought they did well," noted MHS coach Johnny Williams.

But Permian also took the JV run with 139 points while Lee was second with 117. Midland High was third with 102.

Permian never skipped a beat in the varsity run after rolling out 57 points in the afternoon field events, taking a 14 point lead into Friday night's running finals. After Lee started too fast in the sprint relay and Permian picked up 20 more points on Lee, the Rebels were doomed early as far as the team crown went. And San Angelo jumped in there to spill Lee to third before the night was over.

Lee did win four firsts: Roosevelt Fort, who was also a surprise second in the 400 meters, won the long jump with a season best of 23-6½. Darren Williams won the 100 with a season best 10.76 and he defeated Permian's Billy Howell for the third time this season. Still, Howell owns the best 100 meter time this year.

The big surprise for Lee came from Luther Johnson in the 300 hurdles where he beat both teammate Damon Polk and San Angelo's Steve Yarbrough. "I was so disgusted after finishing fifth in the high hurdles that I just had to win the intermediates, Johnson stated. It was his first varsity victory ever.

Polk, who was suffering from pulled thigh muscles, was third in the highs and fourth in the intermediates. He will also miss next week's meet in Levelland.

Lee's 1600 relay team was fourth after two laps, but Troy Barber took the lead on the third lap and Williams coasted home with the victory with a 3:24.16, not a best.

Times were slow on the dirt oval overall with the exception of Williams' performance in the 100.

Lee's Darrell Clark was a surprise in the high jump with a 6-4 for second and the Rebels got a tie for second in the pole vault with Wayne Brandt and Darrell Mooney at 12-0.

MHS' Chuck St. Germain was fourth in the 800 meters, an event he figured to do better in and the Bulldogs' only other fourth came from the 1600 relay team.

Permian won three field events with Britt Hager in the shot put, Coy Brown in the pole vault and Carl Chancellor in the discus. San Angelo's Ryan Thoma took the high jump with the same 6-4 as Clark.

Permian also won the 400 relay with a fair 42.59 while Bruce Bennett took the 800 in 1:58.73. Howell got the only other Mojo win in the 200 with a 22.11.

San Angelo's Rueben Aguillon won the 3200 with a 9:51.40 and Yarbrough won the highs with a 14.59, the second week in a row he has defeated Polk. The Bobcats' David Jackson won the 400 with a 50.61 as Lee went 2-3-4 in the event. The only other winner in the varsity run was Palo Duro's Jeff Raef in the 1600 meters with a 4:36.03.

In the JV division, Lee's Tom Manley won the pole vault with a 10-6, the only one to clear the opening height while Greg Woodberry took the 100 in 11.29. Lee also won the 400 relay with a 44.46 and the 1600 relay with a 3:39.64. Midland High's Jesse Diaz was the only Bulldog winner on the night with a 10:45.16 in the 3200 meters.

The 5-5A boys will gather again at Memorial Stadium in three weeks for the district track meet and Lee now looks like they might have some improving to do before then as do the Bulldogs.

Cougars hold off Steers at wire

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Abilene Cooper had a lock on the girls District 5-5A track title going into the final race Friday at Memorial Stadium, but for awhile it looked like Big Spring had a chance of catching up.

The Steers, trailing 94-74 through the 400-meter run, picked up 18 points when Carla Jackson won the 200-meter run in a time of 25.39 followed by teammate Randi Rutledge in second at 25.88. Cooper scored 10 points with a third and fourth place finish to bring the score to 104-92, and with a 20-point relay coming up, Big Spring had a chance.

Cougars Noemi Espinoza and Angie Dunnam ended that chance in the next event, the 1600-meter run. Espinoza won it in a time of 5:53.40 while Dunnam finished fifth in 6:06.42. Big Spring failed to place in the event and Cooper had the meet put away with a 24-point lead, 116-92.

The Steers did win the final event of the evening, the 1600-meter relay, and they did it in grand style as they took a little over seven seconds off the 4:16.11 district record with a 4:08.51 time. Permian outran Cooper by a narrow five-feet for second and third with both times also eclipsing the record mark. The Panthers ran 4:12.18 to the Cougars 4:12.38.

THE 1600 relay proved to be a downfall for Midland High. The Bulldogs, going into the event, were in third place with 83 points but ended up in fifth at 87 after a fifth place in the event. Both Permian and San Angelo, second and fourth respectively in the 1600 relay, moved ahead of MHS as the Panthers finished third with 97 points and the Bobcats fourth at 93.

The Bulldogs tallied most of their points from their strong contingent of sprinters. Lydia Jackson won the 100-meter dash in 12.39 and was a member of the winning 400-meter relay, along with Demetra Fort, Sheila Christian and Arlene Adams, with a time of 50.01.

The Bulldog sprinters also brought home a second place finish in the 800-meter relay (Penny Griffin, Jackson, Virgie Cooks and Adams) behind Big Spring (Teresa Smith, Rondi Rutledge, Sylvia Randle and Jackson) which won the event in 1:46.09. The Bulldogs overcame a muffed handoff on the second leg to finish in 1:47.55 to qualify for regionals.

"Any time you run a relay, there is the chance of a poor handoff," said MHS coach Brenda Mitchell. "We ran well in that relay (800 meters), but lost time in the handoff. I think Lydia Jackson and Arlene Adams ran super splits for us to finish second. I still think the strongest point for us is the sprint relay (400 meters) even though we didn't run our fastest times tonight. Both will be competing at Regionals."

To qualify for the Region I tournament, which is being held on April 23-24 in Lubbock, individuals or relays had to place in first or second. Nothing else counted in that respect.

MHS pulled a second place in the triple jump as Fort leaped to personal best of 36-7¼ behind Carla Jackson's meet record jump of 37-5.

"It was only the third time in my life that I've performed in the triple jump," said Fort.

FOR MIDLAND LEE, two girls qualified for Regionals as Felicia Farias cleared 5-1 in the high jump and then beat out San Angelo's Callie Petty (also 5-1) in a jumpoff to earn the berth. Carla Seldon of Cooper won the event clearing 5-2.

Lois Hall was the only other Rebel runner to qualify as she placed second in the 400 run in 1:02.75. Cooper's Kelly Smith won in a record time of 59.80.

In other events, San Angelo's Lopez won the 3200-meter run in a record time of 12:16.23 and Paula Baccus of Permian finished second with 12:18.39; Sandra Greene of Cooper won the 100-meter hurdles in 14.98 followed by Janet Fleckenstine of Big Spring in 16:20. Cooper's Angie Dunnam won the 800-meter run in 2:34.23 with Elsa Ornelas of San Angelo at 2:26.45.

Shirley Dixon of Big Spring won the shot put with a throw of 37-0½ with Permian's Melissa Harrison second at 34-1. Jackson won the long jump with a 19-1¼ for anew record with Seldon of Cooper in second at 18-5. Lisa Barrera of San Angelo won the discus with a throw of 114-8 followed by Big Spring's Elise Wheat at 111-8.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Oakland Raiders have contacted New York City about a possible move here if they lose their court battle to shift the National Football League franchise to Los Angeles, the New York Times reported in a Saturday edition.

The Times said that Joseph Alioto, chief attorney for the Raiders in their antitrust suit against the NFL and former mayor of San Francisco, telephoned Allen Schwartz, sports advisor to New York Mayor Edard Koch, two weeks ago to ask if the city would be interested in having another professional football team.

"I told him we're interested in keeping the Jets, but we're interested in what he had to say," Schwartz told the Times. "But my primary interest is keeping the Jets."

The Jets' lease at city-owned Shea Stadium has two years to run. There has been speculation that the team might be considering a move across the Hudson River to share Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J. The Giants formerly played at Yankee Stadium before moving to the Meadowlands Sports Complex in New Jersey.

"We are with L.A., but we would be interested in New York in the event we are shut out and can't get in here," Alioto told the Times from Los Angeles, where the retrial of the Raiders' suit is being conducted.

Schwartz said Jets' owner Leon Hess told him in a letter that he did not want to begin negotiations before next January concerning the Jets' future in New York. He said Hess felt any prior negotiations might affect Koch's chances in the gubernatorial race.

Ranger JC blazes to national mark

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Ranger Junior College blazed to a national record in the distance medley relay and Baylor's Paul Montgomery ran the fastest 400 meter hurdles by a Southwest Conference performer in history Friday night in the 55th annual Texas Relays.

Ranger's run of 9:46.41 topped the six-year old national JC mark of 9:50.8 by Fullerton (California) JC.

Montgomery came from behind to beat Texas' Karl Smith in the 400 meters hurdle Invitational. The winning time of 49.79 beat the previous SWC best of 49.84 by Charles Wigham of Houston in 1979.

"I've got a bad habit of getting a late start," said Montgomery, a junior at Baylor. "I ran a dumb race and almost paid for it."

MONTGOMERY added "Smith went out so fast I thought he would die. He did on the last hurdle."

Rice set a record in winning the college distance medley and Oklahoma State, running in the preliminaries, established a new standard in the 800 meter relays in the afternoon.

Oklahoma State, which had a 1:21.90 in the prelims, came back in the finals to take the first place medal, overtaking Texas Christian on James Butler's fine anchor.

OSU trimmed the record down to 1:21.82 in the Friday night finals as Butler ran a 19.8 anchor leg.

Though his immediate foe is Jose Hernandez of Mexico City in the scheduled 15-round fight here, O'Grady's sights are on the recognized welter king, Sugar Ray Leonard.

"If and when I win this title ... and if Leonard wants to be recognized by his peers in boxing, he'll have to come to me," O'Grady said Friday after winding up training for the fledgling World Athletic Association's welter crown.

"Right now the welter is the most popular division. The only match that would mean anything would be a a Leonard match," the veteran of 81 fights said.

"I'm not interested in 400 fights before I get the 'big fight.' I don't need any more experience," the soft-spoken fighter from Oklahoma City said.

O'Grady, 78-3 has won 67 fights by knockout. That's more knockouts than the total fights of both Leonard and Tommy Hearns combined.

(Compiled from R-T wires)

BOXING—Unbeaten batamweight Richie Sandoval, 12-0, who handed Harold Petty his only loss when he captured a split decision in January, meets Petty, 7-1, again today at Las Vegas in a hastily arranged 10-round bout. The CBS TV fight replaces the fight that matched WBC lightweight champion Alexis Arguello against Andy Ganigan and was cancelled when Arguello came down with the virus...

Lucien Rodriquez of France retained his European heavyweight boxing crown Friday, outpointing Mikan Popovic of Yugoslavia in a one-sided 10-round fight. The victory boosted Rodriguez's record to 32-7-1. Popovic now is 14-2-1 as a pro.

TRACK—American Steve Scott, taking advantage of a straight, downhill course, ran the fastest mile in track history Saturday, winning the inaugural Queen Street Mile in 3 minutes, 31.25 seconds at Auckland, N.Z., 16.08 seconds faster than the world record of 3:47.33 held by England's Sebastian Coe. Scott's time will not count as a world record, however, since the race was straight, not on a closed track...

BASEBALL—Toronto traded third baseman Aurelio Rodriquez, 34, a .346 hitter in 2[illegible] games with the Yankees last year, the Chicago White Sox for outfielder-catcher Wayne Nordhagen, who hit .308 in 65 games with six homers and 33 rbi...

A San Diego radio survey indicates overwhelmingly support for changing the team name of the San Diego Padres, but club officials say such a move is unlikely. In response to a call-in topic Friday, dozens of radio listeners urged the National League team to do away with the club's 13-year-old name. Suggestions ranged from Condors, Destroyers, Bulls, Toros, Sharks and Leathernecks to the improbable: "Name them the Gophers so they come out of the hole and go for broke," one caller offered...

TENNIS—Bjorn Borg, rusty after a five month layoff, defeated Paolo Bertolucci 7-5, 6-0 in a qualifying match for the Monte Carlo Grand Prix. "I was struggling in the first set, then I began concentrating better," the 25-year-old Swede said. "But I didn't have any butterflies in my stomach before I played this match." In other qualifying matches, American teen-ager Jimmy Arias scored a 6-4, 6-7, 6-4 victory over Sweden's Per Hjerquist. Arias, a 17-year-old from Grand Island, N.Y., turned pro only 13 months ago and now is ranked 75th...

Vitas Gerulaitis beat John Fitzgerald 6-7, 6-1, 6-0 in the Zurich WCT quarterfinals while Bill Scanlon defeated Guillermo Vilas 6-4, 6-4; Kevin Curren and Pascal Portes...

Yannick Noah beat Ramish Krishnand 6-3, 7-6 and Balazx Taroczy downed Jose Luis Damiani 6-7, 6-1, 9-7 at Nice, France...

A special report of the State Racing and Wagering Board reaffirmed that a number of triple and exacta races were fixed by jockeys at New York Racing Association tracks in 1973-75. But the report recommended that no legal action be taken against the jockeys because "their involvement in the scheme is not legally sustainable." It did, however, make recommendations that jockeys involved have their licenses suspended or revoked. The report recommended that exacta and triple wagering be eliminated at thoroughbred and harness tracks in the state...

Rookie Wright sticks with Texas

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — This was just supposed to be a sightseeing tour for George Wright. A little sun, a little experience and a chance to rub elbows with the big guys for four or five weeks before he was shipped back to the Texas Rangers' minor league camp in Plant City.

But suddenly, or maybe not so suddenly, things have changed. Wright is not just along for the ride any more. With opening day less than two weeks away, the 23-year-old Oklahoma City outfielder may just earn himself a big league uniform before this spring boot camp is over.

WITH CENTERFIELDER Mickey Rivers on the shelf indefinitely with a twisted knee, Wright has played in all 17 Ranger exhibition games and has been nothing less than spectacular. He's hitting .369 this spring (21-for-57) and leads the team in base hits, doubles and stolen bases and is third in runs batted in behind a couple of other rookies, Bobby Johnson and Mike Richardt.

Then there is his fielding.

"Mickey Rivers with an arm," was how one member of the Ranger organization described the speedy Wright, who spent last summer at Texas' Double-A farm in Tulsa. Thursday, in a 4-3 Ranger exhibition loss to the Atlanta Braves, Wright displayed that arm.

With the game tied and the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth, the Braves' Brett Butler hit a fly ball to centerfield that seemed certain of getting Claudell Washington home from third with the winning run. But Wright snared the ball and then rifled a bullet on the fly to catcher Don Werner to nail Washington and send the game into extra innings.

"The minute the ball was hit I figured there's no way he can get him out," said an impressed Zimmer. "Especially since he was playing shallow in the first place. Then he goes back, gets himself a running start in and guns it. Not bad. Not bad at all."

ZIMMER ISN'T ready to say if Wright has earned himself a spot on the club. "He's still here, ain't he?" he said.

"Ask me in another week or so. I'll tell you one thing though. Everything's worked in the guy's favor so far. He's capitalized on everything. If Rivers doesn't get hurt, he would've been playing three innings a game instead of nine. Then he goes out there and hits the bleep out of the ball and plays defense like Willie Mays. He's caught my eye."

While Wright has been on a hitting tear this spring, the fact remains that he has hit higher than .260 only once in five minor league seasons.

"I started switch-hitting a couple of years ago," said Wright, and I'm just now starting to feel good. There was a long period of adjustment there. But everything is kind of falling into place now. Being here is a great experience for me. I think even the most confident players wonder if they can play in the big leagues. And I'm learning that I can."

ONE OF the many people who have been impressed with Wright this spring is Ranger hitting instructor Dick Allen, who knows a little something about swinging a bat.

"He's looked as good as anybody in camp," Allen said without hesitation. "I like him. When you can play the field like he can, anything he can do with a bat is gravy. But he won't be a liability. He can swing a bat. Don't look at his minor league stats. Sometimes, you're only as good as the people around you."

Pokes have more to lose

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS — The Dallas Cowboys just may have more to lose than any other National Football League team if there is a players strike.

This struck home recently with the arrival of the Cowboys' slick preseason prospectus which conveniently flopped open on page eight — "Things to Look For In 1982."

—The Cowboys reaching the playoffs for the 16th time in 17 years and tying the record of eight consecutive playoff appearances.

Quick now, which season in the last 17 did the Cowboys fail to crack the playoffs?

It was 1974, wasn't it...the year the players went on strike.

The very thought of a parallel between this year and 1974 sends cold shivers through the Cowboys' front office.

Dallas needs training camps and exhibition games like a roof needs shingles. Any delay is considered highly toxic.

It takes Coach Tom Landry's complex offensive and defensive machine at least four exhibition games and sometimes two to three regular season games to lurch into running gear.

Landry won't blame the 1974 strike which didn't last very long for the Cowboys' most recent season without a playoff check.

He hasn't made an excuse since the Cowboys finally won the Super Bowl in VI, getting the tag of "Next Year's Champions" off their backs.

But he admits that the 1974 club was "distracted" by the negotiations.

"We had trouble getting into our offensive flow that year," said Landry of the 8-6 campaign. "We lost four out of our first five games."

The Cowboys lost to Philadelphia, the New York Giants, Minnesota and St. Louis all in a row, leading to their only Christmas without a bonus in the 1970s.

The Dallas management, despite an image of being as ice cool as the blue star on its helmet, has displayed nervous signs.

Hefty raises have been given to key players such as defensive backs Dennis Thurman, Mike Downs and Everson Walls.

In Thurman's case, he was given a bigger raise than possible even under the unions' highest demands.

Dallas must have a solid camp defensively if nothing but for the retirements of linebacker D.D. Lewis and strong safety Charlie Waters.

Landry said in the prospectus: "Linebacker is a concern for us because of the experience loss in Lewis...linebackers need so much experience to play our (flex) defense."

Without Waters, his defensive signal caller, Landry said, "A new leader has to emerge."

The Cowboys, of course, will follow NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and the other owners down whatever path is necessary if a strike occurs. Dallas management plays NFL team ball.

But they'll be grinding their teeth every step of the way. Training camp determines what kind of season and Landry team will field.

Daigneault wins 1,500

MONCTON, New Brunswick (AP) — Guy Daigneault of Montreal and Maryse Perreault of Sherbrooke won the 1,500-metre men's and women's finals in the World Indoor Speedskating Championships Friday, and fellow Quebecers were not far behind.

Daigneault, 18, edged veteran Gaetan Boucher of Ste. Foy, Que., North American indoor champion and holder of several outdoor world records.

Perreault, 1980 North American indoor women's champion, had Louise Begin of Quebec City breathing down her neck at the finish and had been threatened by Sylvie Daigle of Sherbrooke until Daigle fell halfway through the race.

It was the first day of the three-day championships.

OSU's Wood in front

HOUSTON (AP) — Defending champion Willie Wood of Oklahoma State battled gusting winds Friday, to secure his lead in the 28th All-America Invitational golf tournament.

Wood fired a one-over-par 73 for a 209 third-round total but still held a 2-shot lead of Houston's John Slaughter.

"I just wasn't hitting the ball real well," said Wood of the 25 mph winds. "When the wind blows it magnifies your mistakes. But I hit a lucky shot to make birdie at 15 and then hit it four feet for birdie on 17 to salvage something."

OSU's Tommy Moore finished in third place at 212, followed by Billy Ray Brown of Houston at 213. Orla Robets' Bill Glasson had 214 to tie for fifth place with Steve Valdez of Texas El Paso.

OSU shot 296 for a 855 third-round total, keeping its lead in team competition even though none of the Cowboys broke par. Host team Houston was in second place at 856, followed by Oklahoma 879.

Raiders nudge Owls, 1-0

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Tech pitcher David Carroll allowed only one hit as the Red Raiders defeated the Rice Owls 1-0 in a Southwest Conference baseball game Friday.

Tech's only run came in the second inning. Losing pitcher Norm Charlton walked Gene Segrest, who scored on a two-out single by Jimmy Zachry.

By FRED GOODALL

MIAMI (AP) — Although no exact figures are available, Florida tourism interests agree that baseball's annual spring training camps, which close Sunday, are as welcome as a game-winning grand slam home run in the bottom of the ninth inning.

A survey of Chamber of Commerce officials in the 16 communities that host 18 major league teams for nearly two months each year indicates that the training camps pump from $50 million to $100 million into local economies.

"There are no firm figures. They're are all guesses," notes Lou Fifer, chamber president in Daytona Beach, which lost the Montreal Expos — and an estimated $5 million per year — to West Palm Beach in 1980.

Conservative estimates project that each major league club generates between $3 million and $5 million locally, but in Vero Beach and Lakeland — where the Los Angeles Dodgers and Detroit Tigers, respectively, are the principal tourist attractions — the projections are considerably higher.

THE DODGERS, who have made Vero Beach their winter home for 35 years, generate some $20 million for the local economy during spring training, according to J.B. Norton, chamber president.

In Lakeland, chamber officials said they were working with outdated figures, but that a few years ago, surveys placed the Tigers' economic impact at about $15 million.

"There is no way to determine how many people come into the area for spring training, but that figure ($20 million) is in the neighborhood," said Norton. "But, of course, the Dodgers mean much more to Vero Beach than spring training."

Indeed, the team operates 10 businesses year-round on the club-owned, 450-acre layout called "Dodgertown." The club reportedly pays about $120,000 in property taxes each year and employs 220 people with a payroll of $1.3 million.

"It's really an industry. The Dodgers are a continuing contributor to the economy," said Norton. "Besides providing great entertainment, they've put us on the map. People associate Vero Beach with the Dodgers."

THE ATLANTA Braves have trained in West Palm Beach for more than a decade, but the city lured the Expos south from Daytona Beach only two years ago — doubling the impact on that city's economy.

St. Petersburg, which has the New York Mets and St. Louis Cardinals, is the only other Florida city with two teams.

Robert Belavance, president of the West Palm Beach Chamber of Commerce, said it is estimated that the Braves and Expos, who share the same training facilities, each attract 10,000 tourists and bring $5 million apiece to the city.

"Having spring training is like having whipped cream and a cherry on a sundae," he said. "The body of our economy is there and spring training is something extra."

Fifer said that Daytona Beach's tourism business still is booming despite the loss of the Expos. But he emphasized that the city would like a replacement for the Montreal club.

"WE'RE IN the midst of spring break when we have 250,000 collegians coming in here," said Fifer. "Spring training meshed with that and all the other tourist events we have going on at this time of year."

The Daytona Beach chamber director said the city was courting three teams whose existing contracts with other cities expire soon and was optimistic about landing one of them.

"When (Fernando) Valenzuela reported to (the Los Angelees Dodgers') camp (this year), every newspaper in the country carried the dateline 'Vero Beach,'" noted Norton. "There's no one who could buy that kind of advertising or say what that means to a community."

No surgery for Walker

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — University of Texas halfback John Walker does not need surgery on an injured knee, but Walker is still questionable for the fall season.

Spanky Stephens, head trainer, said letting such tears heal without surgery has been a successful technique. Walker's knee will be in a cast for two months before he can start the rehabilitation process, said Stephens.

Weltlich named Longhorns' cage coach

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Bob Weltlich of Mississippi, who got his early training from Indiana's Bob Knight — a "giant" among college basketball coaches, accepted the coaching job Friday at the University of Texas.

Weltlich, 37, said he would emphasize shot selection and man-to-man defense and would "push the brake" to slow down the offense "when we have an opportunity."

He told a news conference his Texas teams "are going to center around good people, good athletes and good workers — in that order. You win championships with character, not characters."

WELTLICH REPLACES Abe Lemons, who was fired March 10 with two years remaining on his contract. Lemons guided Texas to its only National Invitation Tournament title in 1978 and had been at Texas six years, winning two Southwest Conference co-championships.

Lemons' team this year ran up a 14-0 record but lost its second-leading scorer and rebounder, 6-foot-9 Mike Wacker, with a knee injury and won only two of its final 13 games.

Weltlich coached Mississippi for six years, compiling an 83-88 record. He went to Ole Miss from Indiana, where he helped Knight direct the Hoosiers to an NCAA title.

He served with Knight for two years at West Point and five years at Indiana and said he talked with the Indiana coach, whom he described as one of the "giants of the game," before accepting the Texas job. "I wouldn't go anywhere without talking to Bob," he said.

WELTLICH'S LAST three teams at Mississippi had records of 17-13, 16-14 and 18-12, advancing to the NIT in 1980, NCAA in 1981 and the NIT again this year.

He said he would try to bring one assistant coach from Mississippi and was in no hurry to fill a third position on the staff.

He said he had met with Texas players but had not talked individually with 6-10 LaSalle Thompson, the nation's leading college rebounder, who is considering bypassing his senior year to turn pro.

"We need to get about the business of recruiting," said Weltlich, who added that he would "recruit Texas very hard."

ASKED ABOUT a recent incident when Weltlich cried over the officiating after a Southeastern Conference loss, Weltlich said, "You don't always have a chance to control your emotions. We all have ghosts in our closets."

Asked about his salary at Texas, Weltlich said that was "personal," and he suggested that reporters "can find out — it will give you something to do."

"I feel he brings great expertise and experience to our program," said Dodds. "We're looking forward to some great basketball."

Red Sox slam Mets, 7-5; Rick Leach spurs Tigers

By The Associated Press

The Boston Red Sox slammed six straight hits off New York's Pat Zachry in the sixth inning for five runs and downed the Mets 7-5. The outburst included doubles by Wade Boggs, Carney Lansford, Rich Gedman and Glenn Hoffman.

Rick Leach, recently named as Detroit's first baseman, drove in his fourth run of the game with his fourth hit, a two-out single in the ninth inning, to lift the Tigers to an 8-7 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates, who had tied the score 7-7 in the sixth on a three-run pinch-hit homer by Willie Stargell.

AL HOLLAND, who will start San Francisco's season opener, allowed one run and two hits in five innings and Jeff Leonard delivered a double and two-run single as the Giants broke a four-game losing streak by beating the Cleveland Indians 7-2.

Larry Hisle hit his fifth home run of the spring, sparking a five-run Milwaukee ninth inning as the Brewers and Chicago Cubs played to a 7-7 tie in a game called after 10 innings by mutual agreement because the Cubs had to catch a flight to Chicago.

Brad Mills' 12th-inning single gave the Montreal Expos a 3-2 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles. Tim Blackwell started the inning with a walk off Bill Swaggerty and took third on Tim Raines' single. Baltimore's Eddie Murray homered off Woodie Fryman to the the game 2-2 in the eighth.

DUANE WALKER'S bases-loaded single in the 11th inning gave the Cincinnati Reds a 2-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. Mike Vail's one-out home run in the ninth inning off Eric Rasmussen sent the game into extra innings.

Buck Martinez bounced a bases-loaded single over a drawn-in infield in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving the Toronto Blue Jays a 2-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins. Toronto's Alfredo Griffin homered in the first inning.

Dave Winfield drove in four runs with a homer, single and two-run double as the New York Yankees beat the Philadelphia Phillies 7-2. Rick Cerone followed Winfield's homer in the fourth inning with a home run of his own, both off Phillies ace Steve Carlton and the only runs Carlton gave up.

Rozelle claims LA would hurt ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A football team in Los Angeles would hurt television ratings, National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle testified Friday he was told by an NBC official before a $2 billion television contract was signed this month.

The commissioner also testified that plans had been set up for a receiver to take over business operations of the Oakland Raiders in 1980 when the club was proceeding with plans to move to the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Rozelle testified for a second day in the retrial of a suit by the Los Angeles Coliseum and the Oakland Raiders against the NFL, which has refused permission for the Oakland team to move to Los Angeles.

Raiders attorney Joseph Alioto sought to prove the NFL violated its own bylaws by agreeing to a suit by the city of Oakland to use the right of eminent domain to keep the club in that city.

That suit has been turned down but is on appeal to the California Supreme Court.

The NFL last month signed a $2 billion contract with the three national television networks for televising games from 1982 through 1986.

Rozelle testified that he was told by Art Watson, president of NBC Sports, that a second team in the Los Angeles area would hurt ratings and revenue of both NBC and CBS because on days when one of the two teams plays at home they could televise only two games instead of the normal three.

Rozelle, who will return to the standon Monday, also said that having two teams in the same area will make no difference in the new contract.

The television testimony was questioned by Maxwell Blecher, attorney for the Los Angeles Coliseum which lost the Rams to nearby Anaheim in 1980.

Alioto attempted to prove the NFL violated its own constitution when it supported Oakland's bid to use eminent domain to temporarily take over the Raiders from Managing General Parner Al Davis and his partners.

Rozelle said that on March 6, 1980, he was informed by Davis that the Raiders had moved to Los Angeles without the approval of the league.

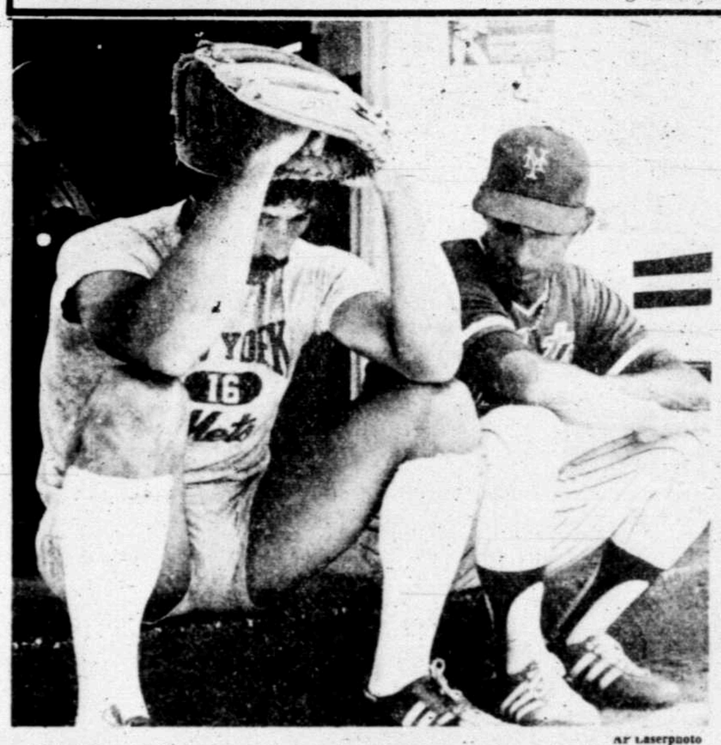

The antitrust suit attacks the league's Rule 4.3 which prohibits a team from moving without a three-fourths vote of the 28 members.

Rozelle admitted the league wrote banks informing them of a temporary restraining order prohibiting the Raiders from moving in violation of the league's constitution.

On March 10, 1980, at the league's annual meeting in Palm Springs, the vote was 22-0 with five abstentions against permission for the move. The Raiders did not vote at that meeting.

Rozelle, who testified on behalf of the NFL, said, "I wanted to stop their action and I took every step to achieve it."

Asked by Alioto if he and the NFL retained the right to name a new owner in Oakland if the eminent domain suit was sustained, Rozelle answered, "We learned through our attorneys that the other 27 members of the league had the right to name a new owner."

Who will follow Fernando, Raines?

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

A new baseball season brings with it new faces, youngsters who survive the competition of spring training to win roster spots and, in the case of a few, jobs in starting lineups.

Last year, the magic rookie names were Fernando Valenzuela, a left-handed screwball pitcher who sparked the Los Angeles Dodgers to the world championship, Montreal's Tim Raines, a fleet outfielder who led the major leagues with 71 stolen bases, and Dave Righetti, a slick lefty who helped the New York Yankees win the American League pennant.

This season, the emphasis is on family ties with two of the brightest prospects the sons of former professional players. Baltimore will open the season with Cal Ripken Jr., son of the Orioles' third base coach, playing third base. And Montreal's starting outfield could include Terry Francona, son of ex-major leaguer Tito Francona.

RIPKEN has been the brightest prospect in the Orioles' organization for a couple of years and was the Rookie of the Year in the International League last season when he batted .288 with 23 home runs and 75 runs batted in for Rochester.

Baltimore had enough faith in the 21-year-old infielder to trade veteran Doug DeCinces to California during the off-season. Manager Earl Weaver glowed over Ripken in spring training, especially when the youngster drilled a ninth-inning, two-out, two-strike pitch from Goose Gossage for an RBI single in an exhibition game against the Yankees.

Francona was the American Association Rookie of the Year in 1981, when he batted .352 at Denver. He started the year at Memphis, where he hit .348 before being promoted. By the end of the season, he was the Expos' left fielder, replacing Raines, who was injured during September.

CINCINNATI has turned right field over to rookie Paul Householder, a switch hitter who batted .300 ith 19 homers, 77 RBI and 33 steals. Los Angeles broke up its veteran infield after nine yearw and gave Davey Lopes' second base job to Steve Sax, who led the Texas League with a .346 average at San Antonio and batted .277 in 31 games for the Dodgers.

Los Angeles also has two promising young pitchers, Ted Power and Tom Niedenfurer. Power was the only 20-game winner in professional baseball last season, 18 of those victories at Albuquerque. Niedenfurer was 13-3 with a 1.80 earned run average at San Antonio and 3-1 in a brief trial with the Dodgers.

Montreal has high hopes for second baseman Wallace Johnson, who batted .363 at Memphis and .298 at Denver last season and contributed some key hits in Montreal's drive to the playoffs. The Expos traded another top rookie prospect, first baseman-outfielder Dave Hostetler (.318, 27 homers and 103 RBI at Denver), to Texas in a deal for outfielder Al Oliver.

The New York Mets, who struck gold with rookies Hubie Brooks and Mookie Wilson last year, hope to repeat with second baseman Wally Backman and shortstop Ron Gardenhire. Both played in 26 games for the Mets last season. Backman, a switch hitter, batted .278 and Gardenhire hit .271.

SAN FRANCISCO is counting on young Chili Davis in center field. He batted .350 with 19 homers, 75 RBI and 40 stolen bases at Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League in 1981.

With injuries sidelining regulars Roy Smalley at shortstop and John Castino at third base, Minnesota expects to have three rookies in the regular lineup. They are first baseman Kent Hrbek, third baseman Gary Gaetti and shortstop Lenny Faedo. Hrbek had the highest batting average in organized baseball last year, hitting .379 with 27 homers and 111 RBI at Visalia. Gaetti hit .277 with 30 homers and 93 RBI at Orlando and Faedo batted .250 at Toledo.

Boston hopes that Luis Aponte can help in the bullpen. He was 7-5 with 15 saves and a 1.94 earned run average at Pawtucket last year. California outfielder Tom Brunansky (.332, 22 homers, 81 RBI at Salt Lake City) could crack the Angels' lineup of all-stars.

St. Louis is high on three youngsters, outfielders David Green (.270 at Springfield) and Gene Roof (.348 at Springfield), and pitcher David LaPoint (13-9 at Springfield). Roof is the brother of ex-major league catcher Phil Roof.

Bell hits 3 singles for Rangers

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Buddy Bell lined three singles and drove in two runs and Larry Parrish made his Texas debut with a home run Friday as the Rangers walloped Kansas City 9-3 in exhibition baseball.

Parrish, acquired in a trade with Montreal earlier this week, belted a two-run homer to right center in the third. Every Texas starter had at least one hit off Kansas City left-hander Larry Gura.

George Brett was 3-for-4 for the Royals, including a two-run homer in the first off Ranger starter Doc Medich. Medich picked up the win, going seven innings.

Braves top Astros, 7-5

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Catcher Bruce Benedict drove in four runs as the Atlanta Braves won their 18th exhibition baseball game of the spring Friday, defeating the Houston Astros, 7-5.

Benedict had a two-run homer in the second and drove in single runs in the fourth and sixth innings with a single and sacrifice fly as the Braves improved their record to 18-6.

The Astros tied the game, 4-4, in the fourth on back-to-back doubles by Alan Ashby and Joe Niekro.

Benedict then gave Atlanta a 5-4 lead in the sixth on a sacrifice fly to drive in Rufino Lineras, who had tripled. The Braves added two more runs in the seventh on an RBI fielder's choice by Jerry Royster and a sacrifice by Biff Pocoroba.

Houston lost its fourth straight game and is 6-13 this spring.

Carolina's Worthy at top of NBA list

By BLACKIE SHERROD
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

The question before the college bucket brigade, it would seem, concerns the future of the sport's most recent hero, James Worthy.

Heretofore, basketball gossips spent their conversation mostly on Ralph Sampson, the longest drink of water on the Atlantic seaboard. The speculation was whether Sampson would join the professionals and forego his senior competition at Virginia. If so, it was accepted that Ralph would be the No. 1 player chosen in the draft because it is not every day a 7-4 human comes along who is able to dribble and listen to the stereo at the same time.

Also it was assumed the Los Angeles Lakers would move heaven and earth to acquire his talent. They want the beanpole as eventual replacement for Kareem Abdul-Jabbar whose wheels, after 13 seasons of pounding the NBA boards, have begun to show tread. The Lakers already own Cleveland's first draft pick and Cleveland is sure to be one of the two clubs eligible to pick first. The other is San Diego, and the Lakers will try to hornswoggle the No. 1 choice from the Clippers. San Diego will trade that privilege away because it is in dire straits in several departments, such as meat and potatoes and rent.

BUT THE feeling around the NCAA crowd in New Orleans last weekend was that Sampson would stay put at Virginia for another year. This being the case, the Lakers probably won't be as eager to trade for the No. 1 choices. There is no other 7-footer in Sampson's class, unless it is Sam Bowie of Kentucky and Patrick Ewing of Georgetown. Bowie is expected to stay in school and Ewing is only a freshman and probably won't think pro for at least one more college season.

All of which brings us to this James Worthy, the fearless forward who spurred North Carolina to a national championship Monday evening. Worthy, like Sampson, is a junior. And his attractiveness to the pros took a magnificent leap forward after his stunning performance against Georgetown in the most pressurized game of our era.

On second thought, pro scouts probably already recognized the depths of Worthy's determination. Several weeks ego, the Mavericks' Norm Sonju thought Worthy would be the No. 2 collegian picked in the draft, if both he and Sampson turned pro.

STILL, THAT one magnificent game in the Superdome could have a marked effect on Worthy's basketball career. That night already i a legend, how the skinny 6-9 junior scored 28 points against Ewing and the fierce defenders of Georgetown. How he swiped three possessions from the Hoyas, including the climactic one that practically won the night. How he played defense and rebounded and screened and blocked and all of the household tasks.

And most of all, how he refused to be cowed by the towering shadow of Ewing who guarded the Georgetown goal like a medieval dragon, obviously intimidating several Carolina players. And how Worthy rallied his mates countless times with vicious dunks and daredevil moves. It was these inspirational hijinks that will catch pro scouts' eyes. The gung-ho verve with which he met his biggest challenge doesn't show in computer readouts.

So, most courtsiders came away from that game feeling that Worthy could find no better timing to turn professional. He has accomplished it all. He has his All-America plaques. He was the force in the first national championship for North Carolina. He satisfied the team thirst to win the title in behalf of his coach, Dean Smith, who had been bridesmaid more times than Eva Gabor.

And now Worthy is a hot item. He has the negotiating advantage of having a choice: turning professional now or remaining at Chapel Hill for another season. A pro club probably would offer him a better deal now than next year, when he has no alternate avenues.

TARHEEL COACH Dean Smith could be an influence on Worthy's decision. Several times during the Final Four week, Smith referred to the departing seniors on his Carolina squad.

"I would like to win it for the seniors' sakes," Smith said. "James and I will probably have another chance." Interpretation: he expected James Worthy to be a member of his squad next year, not that of the Clippers or the Jazz or the Lakers.

However, Smith probably would not stand in the way of Worthy's ambition if he chose cash over classes.

In the aftermath of this outstanding event, Worthy was asked what effect the game would have on his future, a veiled inquiry about his pro decision. And James fielded it like a pro.

"This win is what we've been working for ever since Oct. 15 and it's great that we won for our coach and ourselves and the university," he said tactfully. "I really don't have any idea what effect this game will have on my future. I have a month and a half of school left that I'm concerned about and I got to go back and continue that before I even think about it."

9 ex-big leaguers make Japan debuts

By DON SAWATO

TOKYO (AP) — Nine former U.S. major and minor leaguers, including Mike Lum, Ken Macha and Larry Harlow, will make their debuts in Japanese professional baseball when the 1982 season opens Saturday.

The twc leagues with six teams each, playing a total of 130 games, are allowed three foreign players each on their rosters. Two are permitted on the regular team and the third is assigned to the second team to replace one of the two if he fails to live up to the manager's expectation.

Lum, a first baseman-outfielder, is the most well-known among the newcomers. He was obtained by the Yokohama Taiyo Whales from the Chicago Cubs. He had been sought after by at least two other Japanese clubs.

In his 15-year major league career, with the Atlanta Braves, the Cincinnati Reds and the Cubs, Lum enjoyed his best season in 1973 with 16 home runs, 82 runs batted in and a .294 batting average.

MACHA, formerly with the Toronto Blue Jays, will be in the outfield for the Nagoya-based Chunichi Dragons. He averaged .259 in six years in the majors with the Pittsburgh Pirates, Milwaukee Brewers and Montreal Expos.

Harlow, a former California Angels' outfielder, was signed by the Yakult Swallows of Tokyo. He had a lifetime major league batting average of .248 with 12 homers in six years.

Outfielders Kim Allen, formerly with the Seattle Mariners, and Greg Johnston, a one-time member of the Minnesota Twins, are with Osaka's Hanshin Tigers. Larry Wolfe, a former Twins' infielder, is with the Kintetsu Buffalos of Osaka.

THE OTHER new Americans are Mark Budaska with the Taiyo Whales, Dave Denton with the Yakult Swallows and Joe Dotson with the Nankai Hawks.

Meanwhile, former major league infielder Don Blasingame is managing the Nankai Hawks for the second season. He also piloted the Hanshin Tigers in 1979.

Returning to Japan for the 1982 season with the Yomiuri Giants are former major league outfielders Roy White and Gary Thomasson. Hiroshima's roster include ex-major-league outfielder Jim Lyttle and infielder Art Gardner.

Nippon has one-time major leaguers Tony Solaita, a first baseman, and Tommy Cruz, an infielder. The Lotte Orions' roster includes the Lee brothers — Leron and Leon Lee, both outfielders.

INFIELDERS Bobby Marcano and Wayne Cage are with the ~~Hankyu~~ Braves. Outfielders Terry Whitfield and third baseman Steve Ontiveros dot the roster of the Seibu Lions.

By BOB GREEN

GREENSORO, N.C. (AP) — Denis Watson one-putted 11 times on the way to a 7-under-par 65 that staked him to a one-shot lead Friday in the second round of the $300,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

The 26-year-old native of Rhodesia — and no relation to Tom — came from six shots off the pece with the best round of the tournament and took the top spot at 137. He was seven strokes under par for two trips over the 6,984-yard Forest Oaks Country Club course.

Watson, a playoff loser in the Bay Hill Classic last month, was helped to the lead this time by the double-bogey disaster that hit first-round pacesetter and former champion Danny Edwards on the 18th hole.

Edwards was 8-under par when he drove into a fairway bunker, hit his next into a greenside trap, took two to get out of that one and eventually finished with a fat 6 on the hole and a round of par 72 for the mild, overcast day.

"I didn't play bad, but the breaks all seemed to go the wrong way this time," Edwards said.

Watson, now a resident of South Africa, took a round-about route to reach the American PGA tour.

"I had to leave Rhodesia to find out if I was good enough to play the tour, which was always my dream," Watson said.

He worked as a club pro for a short time, then played two years on the European tour.

"I didn't win anything, but I learned a lot," he said, then joined the American cicuit on a full-time basis last season, winning a respectable $49,153 as a rookie.

"I wanted to come here because this is the right place to learn. All the knowledge is here, on the American tour," he said. "My game has improved every year, incredible improvement."

Crisp iron play was the key. He scored two of his birdies from tap-in range and got four more after approach shots left him within eight feet or less of the cup. He capped it off with a 50-footer from the fringe on his 16th.

Hollis Stacy forges 65 for lead in Dinah Shore

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Hollis Stacy, deadly accurate with her approach shots and her putter, fired a 7-under-par 65 Friday to claim the second-round lead in the $310,000 Nabisco-Dinah Shore women's golf tournament.

Stacy's 36-hole total of 6-under-par 138 gave her a 3-stroke edge over Pat Bradley, who had a 69 Friday.

Sandra Haynie, who has won just one tournament in the past five years, was another shot back at 142 after also carding a second-round 69.

Sally Little's 67 and Beth Daniel's 71 put them at 143. Patty Sheehan, JoAnne Carner, Donna Caponi and Cindy Hill were six strokes off the pace at 144 midway through the 72-hole tournament.

"I'm happy to play in some warmth; this is perfect scoring weather," a smiling Stacy said after her round that included a 5-under-par 31 on the back nine of the 6,255-yard, par 36-36—72 Mission Hills Country Club course.

The 28-year-old Stacy, who has won two Ladies Professional Golf Association events this year and four of the last 10 in which she's competed, took just nine putts on the back nine.

She hit her approach shots well and rolled in putts that included one from 40 feet, another from 25, two from 18 and one from 15 feet away en route to five birdies and four pars on the back nine.

"I'm hitting the ball extremely well," said Stacy, who began the day two strokes behind co-leaders Kyle O'Brien and Lori Garbacz. "Thursday I hit just seven greens, so I was scrambling.

Stacy, a native of Savannah, Ga., who joined the ladies' tour in 1974, includes among her 10 LPGA victories a pair of U.S. Open titles. She has not, however, won the women's richest event — the Dinah Shore.

Garbacz shot a 74 FRIDAY TO JOIN Jan Stephenson at 145. O'Brien struggled to a 76 to drop nine strokes off the pace.

By DAYTON BLAIR

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Nolan Richardson, buoyed by a contract extension and support for a good program, announced Friday he will remain as basketball coach at the University of Tulsa.

He had been contacted by Arizona State University and the University of Wisconsin about possibly moving.

His talks with the schools were limited to telephone conversations and telegrams, Richardson told a news conference he called to end speculation he might leave after two successful years coaching the Golden Hurricane.

RICHARDSON HAS led Tulsa to 26-7 and 24-6 seasons since coming here, and the National Invitation Tournament championship a year ago. This year Tulsa, which won the Missouri Valley Conference postseason tournament, competed in the National Collegiate Athletic Association playoffs.

He met with Dr. J. Paschal Twyman and Emory Turner, president and athletic director of the university, before announcing his decision to stay.

"At this point," he said, he would "not resign and not even attempt to be interviewed' by other schools.

"I wasn't out looking for a job," he said of the two contacts that had been made.

He said he received a one-year extension of his contract, which had four years left to run, bringing it back to the original five years.

"I didn't get a tremendous increase in salary, but that wasn't the most important part of it," he said.

HE SAID if a coach win 20 games in a season his contract should be reviewed and that he thinks the university planned to do that before the contacts with the other two schools arose.

After Tulsa won the NIT a year ago, he was given the five-year contract and a salary that the Tulsa World said Friday it was told by reliable sources was $44,000. The same source said Richardson's new salary would be $50,000, the World reported.

San Antonio pastor holds services at First United Methodist this week

The First United Methodist Church, 305 N. Baird St., is holding services conducted by the Rev. Dan E. Solomon, pastor of Travis Park United Methodist Church of San Antonio, at 7:30 p.m. Sunday through Wednesday.

Solomon will speak on "The Fundamentals of Faith and Life: God, Jesus Christ, Holy Spirit, the Church." Sunday's service will include three selections performed by the Lee High School Choir, directed by Marilyn Jones.

The church is also holding Holy Week services in Glass Memorial Chapel from 12:10 to 12:40 p.m. Solomon is also the speaker for these services, talking on "The World's Most Awesome Week." Soloists will be Jane Ward, Jill Roberson, Natalie Eustace and Candace Markel.

Lunch will be available 30 minutes before and after the services.

The traditional Maundy Thursday Service of Holy Communion will be in the sanctuary at 7:30 p.m. Officiating for the service will be the Rev. Charles Lutrick, First UMC's senior minister. The Chancel Choir will sing the anthem "Jesu, Work of God Incarnate," by Mozart.

Child care is available for all the week's services.

Jewish leader celebrates birthday

NEW YORK (AP) — Hassidic Jews this Sunday are celebrating the 80th birthday of Rabbi Menachem M. Schneerson, leader of the Lubavitcher community in Brooklyn and followers in many other lands. An address by him Sunday night is to be transmitted via satellite to cable TV stations across the United States and beamed to other countries.

Holy Trinity names week's services

The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois Ave., has scheduled a number of Holy Week services beginning with Holy Eucharist at 8 a.m. Sunday, followed by a 9 a.m. Procession of Palms and Holy Eucharist. Holy Eucharist will be held again at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Maundy Thursday services will be held at 7:30 p.m. with dinner preceding it at 6 p.m. in the Parish Hall.

Good Friday services will be held at noon with Mass of the Pre-sanctioned and a 12:30 p.m. sermon on "The Way of the Cross."

Baptism will be held Saturday at 5 p.m. Services Easter will include an 8 a.m. Holy Eucharist-Rite I, a 9 a.m. Holy Eucharist-Rite II and an 11 a.m. Holy Eucharist-Rite I.

Special sunrise service scheduled

The Midland Association of Churches is holding an Easter sunrise service at Resthaven Memorial Park, Lamesa and FM 868, from 6:15 to 6:45 a.m.

The sermon will be given by the Rev. David Baker of Hope Lutheran Church with musical accompaniment provided by Darryl Knapp, director of music at First Christian Church. The liturgy will be given by Tom Roberts, director of music at First Presbyterian Church.

The public is invited to attend. In the event of rain, the service will be cancelled.

Prior to the Easter service, on Good Friday the association is holding another special community service at First United Methodist Church, 305 N. Baird St., from 12:15 to 1 p.m.

Catholics set mission week for men

Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, 1004 N. Tyler St., will have a mission week for men today through April 10 at 7 p.m. with the Rev. Enrique Fernandez.

Other services this week include 8 p.m. Thursday, "Washing of the Feet of the Twelve," "Procession of the Holy Sacrament" and "Adoration of the Holy Sacrament"; Friday at 10 a.m. "Stations of the Cross" and 3 p.m. "The Last Seven Words of Christ," both given by Fernandez; and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. the service will be Veneration of the Crucifiction with Vigil of Easter and Benediction with the procession of candles.

The public is invited to attend.

Guest evangelist at Church of Christ

Eddie Cloer of Searcy, Ark., will be the guest evangelist for a series of gospel sermons Friday through April 11 at the North A and Tennessee Church of Christ.

The gospel meetings will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday through April 10, with services April 11 at 9:30 a.m., 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m.

He has spoken in 400-plus gospel meetings in his 18 years of preaching. Cloer is the editor of "The Preachers Periodical."

21 to be confirmed at First Methodist

Palm Sunday is Confirmation Sunday at First United Methodist Church, with 21 members of the confirmation class being confirmed and received into the church membership during morning worship.

The Carol Choir and the confirmation class will participate in the Procession of Palms as the service begins. The Carol Choir will sing "The Little Grey Donkey," with The Chancel choir performing Handel's "Lift Up Your Heads."

First UMC's senior minister, Dr. Charles Lutrick, will speak on "A Time for Shouting."

Choirs to present Haydn's 'Creation'

The combined chancel choirs of First Christian Church and Memorial Christian Church, plus The Friends of Music, will present Haydn's "The Creation" at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., at 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

This masterwork will be accompanied by full orchestra, with Dr. Stan Engebretson conducting. Soloists for the concert will be soprano Mary Jan Sikes; mezzo-soprano Debra Patchell, alto Sharon Kohout, tenor Scott Hammond, and bass Dub Shepherd. The 60-voice chorus will be directed by Darryl Knapp, First Christian's music director and organist.

The public is invited to attend.

Parenting Seminar to be at Trinity

Trinity Presbyterian Church, corner of Louisiana Avenue and Andrews Highway, is holding a Parenting Seminar April 18, April 25 and May 2 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The April 18 session will be "Humor in the Family" presented by Dr. Douglas Brady; April 25, "Pre-Adolescence" presented by Dr. Mary Renfer; and May 2, "Adolescence" presented by Dr. David Kocn. Each session will include the speaker's talk from 6:30 to 7:20 p.m. followed by small group discussions.

Trio to perform at Chaparral Center

The Bill Gaither Trio will perform at Chaparral Center May 4 at 7:30 p.m.

Bill and Gloria Gaither, joined by Gary McSpadden, are known in gospel circles for their renditions of "He Touched Me," "Because He Lives," "Something Beautiful" and "Let's Just Praise the Lord."

Tickets may be purchased at Chaparral Center, Sonshine Corner, both locations of Music Haul and Endless Horizons, Love Shop and Rudd's Christian Bookstore, all in Odessa. Information on group rates is available at all outlets.

Maundy Thursday Services scheduled

The community is invited to attend Maundy Thursday Services at 7:30 p.m. at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., with the evening's highlight being the Chancel Drama depicting the Last Supper and the footwashing scene.

Portraying Jesus will be Darrell Ward, with Charles Dixon playing Peter.

Communion will be served during the service.

23rd annual Lecturship scheduled

The 23rd annual West Texas Lecturship, hosted by the Lee Street Church of Christ, 101 N. Lee St., will be held Sunday through Thursday.

This year's theme is "A Plea for Fundamentals." Service time Sunday is 2:45 p.m. until 5 p.m.

Hours Monday through Thursday are 9 a.m. until 9:30 p.m., with workshops, lectures and seminars for church leaders and lay persons being included in each day's activities. There will also be nightly singing.

Traditional Tenebrae Service scheduled

Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 North A St., will hold a traditional Tenebrae Service at 7:30 p.m. Friday. Dating back to the fourth century AD, the Service of Tenebrae was celebrated as a solemn observance of the events that occurred on the first Good Friday when Jesus of Nazareth was crucified.

The public is invited to attend.

Hope Lutheran planning Family Fair

Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 North A St., is planning a Family Fair April 17 from 3 a.m. to 8 p.m.

The fair will include a garage sale, auction, arts and crafts, baked goods and performances by several groups. The day's activities are open to the public.

Last Supper pantomime to be presented

The First Assembly of God, 110 W. Wadley Ave., will present a pantomime of the Last Supper and Judas' betrayal at 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

The church's minister, the Rev. Raymond Schaeffer, invites the public to attend the annual presentation.

Church groups to converge in protest of Reagan budget

NEW YORK (AP) — Numerous church groups were set to converge on Washington, D.C., next week to protest President Reagan's proposed new budget, which they see as depriving the poor of basic needs.

The "Easter Week Mobilization" was organized by the National Council of Churches, which said delegations of local church people from across the country plan meetings with Congress members considered to hold pivotal votes on budget issues.

Council general secretary Claire Randall says the church delegations will voice "deep concern about the fate of poor people under the proposed budget" and about the shift of funds from social welfare programs to armaments.

Church-going adults up 1 percent

PRINCETON, N. J. (AP) — The proportion of American adults in church or synagogue each week has inched up to 41 percent, says the latest Gallup poll figures. This is 1 percent above the 40 percent weekly attendance for the previous year.

Church-going has remained relatively constant since 1969, varying less than 2 percentage points. The highest average attendance registered was 49 percent in 1955 and 1958.

Graham to preach in Moscow in May

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Although urged by the Reagan administration to decline, evangelist Billy Graham has accepted an invitation to preach in Moscow in May.

"We feel it is a God-given opportunity to proclaim the gospel of Jesus Christ," Graham says.

The invitation came from Patriarch Pimen, primate of the Russian Orthodox Church, and leaders of the All-Union Council of Evangelical Christain-Baptists of the Soviet Union.

"My purpose in going...is spiritual, and it is not my intention to become involved in political or ideological issues," Graham says.

Commission thinks religious reunion

NEW YORK (AP) — In the beginnings of Christianity, each community of believers chose its own leader, its bishop. Gradually the bishop of Rome came to be seen as chief bishop — since the post first was held by Jesus' chief apostle, Peter.

That is the traditional background out of which an international Roman Catholic-Anglican commission has agreed on the propriety of papal leadership in a proposed relinking of the two global wings of the faith.

But in the envisioned unity, the pope's oversight would be shared with all the other bishops and their people, a kind of rallying center to reflect the common convictions of the whole church.

The joint commission, in its final report issued this week after more than a decade of work and an accumulated succession of other agreements on matters of worship, doctrine and ministry, said of the papal role:

"We can now together affirm that the church needs both a multiple, dispersed authority, with which all God's people are actively involved, and also a universal primate as a symbol of visible unity in truth and in love."

In the agreed conclusions, papal authority is seen essentially as a service of "unity and harmony," not as overruling control, in line with recent tendencies.

Yet, at first sight, some Anglicans may regard the proposed papal position as too strong, while some Catholics may regard it as too weak.

The papal role has been a main obstacle between Roman Catholicism and other churches, both in the 11th century split betwen Rome and Eastern Orthodoxy and the 16th century break between Rome and Protestantism.

The worldwide Anglican communion, now involving 66 million people in 26 national or regional branches, including the U.S. Episcopal Church, threw off papal jurisdiction in 1534 in the midst of the Protestant Reformation.

As in Roman Catholicism, however, Anglicans (including U.S. Episcopalians) trace the succession of their bishops back to the apostles, an ancient line sometimes technically obscure but upheld theoretically in both cases.

Anglican churches in their local communities still elect their bishops, as was the custom in early Christianity. So do Lutherans, Methodists, Eastern Orthodoxy and most other churches with bishops.

While the pope now, and through recent centuries, has appointed bishops for the world's 750 million Roman Catholics, many Catholic thinkers have advocated a return to their selection by the people.

That operational difference is not dealt with in the agreement proposed by the joint team of experts, nor are various other differences in practice, such as Rome's rules against contraception and female or married priests.

But these are disciplines, open to variation, not basic doctrine. In fact, Roman Catholicism has married priests in some eastern jurisdictions and is now accepting some in the United States among about 60 ex-Episcopal priests switching to Roman Catholicism.

Nevertheless, what happens to the broad agreement calling for a "new relationship" between the two Christian bodies remains up to future decisions by their governing bodies.

That means the pope, in counsel with recently instituted world synods of bishops, and the representative conventions of the far-spread, independent Anglican churches, along with their periodic international Lambeth conference of bishops.

Church officials claim agreement on basics

NEW YORK (AP) — After years of sizing up each other's beliefs, an official international team of Roman Catholics and Anglicans says it has found agreement on the basis for new ties between the two churches.

But what the institutions will do about it remains the big question mark.

To a striking extent, the new accord issued this week is a supercharged document, the first of its scope in the history of Christian divisions, proposing a way through the old obstacles and tangled misunderstandings.

The experts, who for 16 years have probed, analyzed and become directly acquainted with each side's concepts, report concurrence on the major points, including that old hurdle, the role of the pope.

The sweeping conclusions had been handed to church administrators, and the next move was up to them. Their initial reactions, both in Rome and Canterbury, were typically cautious and hesitant.

"That's the kind of thing you'd expect at this stage," says the Rev. John F. Hotchkin of Washington, D.C., the ecumenical officer for U.S. Roman Catholic bishops. "But the two churches now will have to deal with it."

In short, the ball was in the court of officialdom, to act on if or not. The indicated prospects were for further extended examining, absorbing and simmering.

But as for the joint commission, it offered unanimous agreement on the doctrinal, operational framework for overcoming past barriers and for establishing a "new relationship" between the two global churches.

Episcopal Bishop Arthur A. Vogel of Kansas City, Mo., one of 10 Anglicans on the 20-member joint team, says it resolved the issues of the 16th century break between Rome and other Western churches.

"We found those causes no longer were adequate reasons for division, that there is sufficient agreement for mutual recognition and a shared sacramental life," he said in a telephone interview.

"What we're asking our respective churches to do is to make this agreement their own statement, to say 'yes, this is our faith,'" he said. On the other hand, they could reject it, shelve it, or most likely defer and work some more on it.

"The basis for unity is there, yes," said Vogel, whose Episcopal Church is the U.S. branch of the world-wide Anglican communion. "But it will be achieved only by living together."

Hotchkin said time is needed to clarify people's questions, to adjust to differing terminology for common concepts used by the world's 720 million Roman Catholics and 66 million Anglicans, to build trust.

"It takes a lot of trust for two communities of people who have lived apart for so long really to commit themselves to a common destiny," he added.

At the Vatican, the head of the doctrinal office, Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, commented that the agreement was not "truly substantial" for all the "totality of questions."

WHAT A SAVIOR

At what great cost God provided salvation for us. The Bible says: "Christ Himself bore our sins in His body on the cross, that we might die to sin and live to righteousness; for by His wounds you were healed." I Peter 2:24. But if you have not made Him your Savior, He died in vain.

The Newspaper BIBLE

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

"I was blinded by the intense light, and had to be led into Damascus by my companions. There a man named Ananias, as godly a man as you could find for obeying the law, and well thought of by all the Jews of Damascus, came to me, and standing beside me said, 'Brother Saul, receive your sight!' And that very hour I could see him!.

"Then he told me, 'The God of our fathers has chosen you to know his will and to see the Messiah and hear him speak. You are to take his message everywhere, telling what you have seen and heard. And now, why delay? Go and be baptized, and be cleansed from your sins, calling on the name of the Lord.' (Acts 22:11-16)

So Philip began with this same Scripture and then used many others to tell him about Jesus. As they rode along, they came to a small body of water, and the eunuch said, "Look! Water! Why can't I be baptized?"

"You can," Philip answer, "if you believe with all your heart." And the eunuch replied, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." He stopped the chariot, and they went down into the water and Philip baptized him. And when they came up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, and the eunuch never saw him again, but went on his way rejoicing. (Acts 8:35-39)

The Faith Temple Church of God in Christ, 1605 N. Terrell St., has started a series of Family Life Films presented by Tim and Bev LaHaye. The films are aimed toward strengthening and maintaining the institution of marriage and family structure according to Biblical application.

The series consists of four films to be shown on consecutive Sundays at 6:30 p.m. in the church's fellowship hall. This week's film will be "Coping with Hostility." The film April 11 will be "Overcoming Fear, Anxiety and Worry" and April 18 will be "Six Keys to Marital Happiness." The first film has already been shown.

The public is invited to attend.

Groups joining freeze movement

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — The late soldier-statesman, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, once said that people someday are going to want peace so much that governments are going to have to give it to them.

That insistence is building up in religious organizations these days, catalyzed by nuclear weapons and their potential horror. A couple of events are adding impetus to the trend.

One is a cross-country tour, starting this weekend and sponsored by U.S. religious groups, of European peace leaders. The other was a groundswell of church backing for a "nuclear weapons freeze" resolution introduced last week in both houses of Congress.

It was quickly endorsed by more than 125 religious leaders and organizations, ranging from evangelist Billy Graham to the president of the National Council of Churches, United Methodist Bishop James Armstrong.

He says such a moratorium on nuclear weapons development is desperately needed to help insure a "future for humankind" and to avoid a "holocaust that would incinerate the globe."

The Rev. Timothy Healy, president of Georgetown University, says there is a "growing consensus in the Roman Catholic community" opposing "the threatened use of atomic weapons."

That surge of Catholic concern has involved individual statements by more than 30 Catholic bishops, with a review currently going on of church teachings on war in the light of nuclear weaponry, with some bishops challenging past "just war" theories.

"People are increasingly concerned about the danger," says the Rev. John Collins, executive director of Clergy and Laity Concerned, a national interreligious group. He says "saber rattling" in the Reagan administration has "made many people nervous."

A manifestation of that convergence comes in the scheduled U.S. tour by a group of 10 peace leaders from Great Britain, the Netherlands, West Germany, Italy and Denmark.

Arriving Saturday, they were to split up into five two-member teams, visiting 52 U.S. cities in the next two weeks, speaking to city councils, at churches, universities and evening public gatherings.

Terry Provance of Philadelphia, coordinator of disarmament programs for the American Friends Service Committee (Quakers), a co-sponsor of the tour, says it aims to "strengthen the ties" between European and U.S. peace movements.

"There is a real upsurge of disarmament actvity in the United States," he says, attributing it in part to "fear created" by Reagan administration policies, and to the impact of massive peace demonstrations in Europe last fall.

The "nuclear freeze" resolution, parallel to an idea percolating in religious groups for two years, calls on both superpowers to stop production and further deployment of nuclear weapons, followed by "major, mutual and verifiable reductions" in them.

Commending it, Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, calls present nuclear proliferation "morally abhorrent, adding, "It is ghoulish to imagine a limited nuclear war or to call some weapons 'clean.'"

The resolution was introduced March 10 in the Senate by Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., a Baptist, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D.-Mass., a Catholic, signed by 19 senators, and in the House by 130 sponsoring members.

Hatfield credited the momentum gained for the idea in "communities and houses of worship across the land." Saying the timing of the resolution is critical since the two superpowers have "rough equivalency" in nuclear capability," he adds:

"It is the height of blasphemy that we threaten destruction of God's creation."

Kennedy, saying both the U.S. and the Soviet Union prefer "existence to extinction," says the freeze would be "in the national security interests" of both countries, adding:

"The next world war could be a war against the world itself" in which "all life could be the loser."

Polish church life strong, religious visitors report

NEW YORK (AP) — After a five-day visit in Poland, an international church team says church life there is vigorous but that ruling Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski declares he will tolerate no political opposition.

He was also reported to have said the government would cooperate with the churches in areas limited to ethical and moral values and education.

"The general is obviously used to giving orders, but he is also prepared to dialogue," says Bishop David Preus of Minneapolis, president of the American Lutheran Church.

Preus was among a four-member ecumenical team of American and European churchmen who visited the country, where military rule was imposed Dec. 13 after 16 months of unrest. Their trip included a two-hour meeting with Jaruzelski.

They said Jaruzelski told them he foresees an early lifting of martial law restrictions if some internal or external problem doesn't prevent it.

In its report, the team said it was most impressed by "the strength and vitality of the churches in the midst of a complex situation."

They "hold intercessory prayers for those who are interned," maintain contact with them and aid their families, the report said.

It said the Solidarity labor movement has a "very wide mass base" of support, and it obviously will retain a place in the future, but "not necessarily" as it functioned before the crackdown.

Preus said that while the "vast majority" of church people support the movement, they're more cautious about it, with Solidarity buttons concealed under coat lapels and Solidarity literature kept hidden.

"We ran into no one who thought that Poland would go back to pre-Solidarity days," he said, but the movement's present leadership may not be allowed to continue. The people are "unsure exactly what will happen."

The trip was organized by the World Council of Churches at the invitation of the Polish Ecumenical Council, representing Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches in the mainly Roman Catholic country.

The group met with numerous congregations and their leaders and for an hour with Bishop Bronislaw Dabrowski, secretary of the Polish Roman Catholic Bishops Conference.

The group said martial law seems "generally accepted as a painful necessity" or as a "lesser of evils" to avoid a civil war or Soviet military intervention.

"We raise our voices in the name of that freedom without which men and women cannot live a life that is truly human," the 14 Roman Catholic, Protestant and Eastern Orthodox officials said.

Farm worker support garners criticism

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The new director of the decade-old National Farm Worker Ministry finds himself at the center of criticism that has buffeted the militant religious organization since its inception.

But the Rev. Richard B. Cook, 36, insists the ministry will remain deeply involved in helping unionize farm laborers.

Cook is a Southern Baptist minister from Salinas, Calif. He has been involved with the the NFWM for 10 years and says he was most struck "by the isolation of those who go from field to field to work."

Almost from its formation in 1971 by the National Council of Churches, the ministry was accused of taking sides and fomenting conflict in the nation's agricultural fields — especially in California, where Cesar Chavez's young United Farm Workers union was waging pitched battles with growers.

"The ministry is without question a full-time support group for the UFW, devoted to rallying church support for the Chavez movement," Angell insists.

He points out that the ministry's workers from the outset worked side by side with UFW organizers and helped arrange the UFW's grape and lettuce boycotts. In addition, he says, the ministry's founder and longtime director, the Rev. Chris Hartmire Jr., has for years been a Chavez confidant and recently took over the No. 2 position in the UFW.

Angell also notes the NFWM succeeded more docile statewide migrant ministries that were founded in the 1920s and limited their activities to what he termed "legitimate functions" such as finding housing, providing financial aid and health care and giving Christmas toys to farm workers.

"But the National Farm Worker Ministry is totally politicized and frequently misuses the church to supplant Christian activities with militant force on the picket line, coercive secondary boycotts and telling lies about how farmers treat farm workers," Angell says.

Cook, a father of three whose wife is a doctor at the Monterey County Natividad Medical Center in Salinas, does not contest claims that the ministry works closely with the UFW. Rather, he says that is the most effective way the ministry can help farm workers "achieve social justice."

"Given the relatively peaceful beginnings of the migrant ministry, how did nice church folks like us get into this complex, unrelenting, bruising union struggle in the fields?" it asked.

"We were trying to care about migrant farm workers in our midst. We tried in our own way to help them, but their ministry haunted us. We tried day-care centers, recreation programs, Bible classes, legislation, toilet kits, food baskets, community centers, toys at Christmas. But it wasn't enough.

"Slowly we recognized our special responsibility. We yearned for the day when farm workers would have enough strength in their own hands to fight their own battles, negotiate with their employers, control their school boards and buy toys for their own children."

The NFWM has 24 staff members, three of them doing administrative work and the rest working with unions. Staff members earn $10 a week.

LIVING LORD'S SUPPER

The script for the "Living Lord's Supper" was written, based on much research of Bible scripture and history. As a result, many interesting facts were discovered.

The program begins with special singing, followed by narration and pantomiming as Christ and each apostle is introduced. The table is prepared to resemble and portray that night as near as possible. This is an informative program. It is also a program of deep emotions, that awakens in the human heart a refreshed view of the price Jesus paid at Calvary. You will feel the intensity of each moment and will feel as if you are actually there.

MEN'S TOWERS AND GOD'S

In many of our villages the church spire still dominates the skyline. No longer in our cities.

Don't read some dire implication into that fact. The truth of the matter is that efficient use of commercial property requires tall buildings.

Efficient use of religious property requires people—people who are earnest believers, people who are faithful worshippers, people who care about God and their fellowmen.

In city, town or country the church which is strengthened in its sacred mission by the fervent faith of its members is never dwarfed by the towers of trade.

OUTFOX HIM!

Rent payments aren't tax deductible. Interest payments are. Town Plaza's low interest package plus the tax benefits of owning instead of renting result in net monthly payments about the same as apartment rental. The interest rate offered during March is 13.25%, and is guaranteed for three years. Minimum down payment 5%. Families welcome. One and two bedroom units $43,175 to 64,020. Let Town Plaza show you how to outfox Uncle Sam.

*The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 12.5% for 90% loan to value. Interest will be charged at the most recent six-month Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5% rounded to the highest 1/8 of 1%, but not to exceed the maximum rate allowed by law. Payments on GPAM mortgages are graduated so as to increase 7.50% each year for the remaining four years. At the end of the first five years' payments, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan.
ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 13.25% ON 90% LOANS.

WILD RIVER CANYON IS FOR SALE
Bids are being sought for over 14 acres of C-3 zoned land, appraised at over $2,000,000, located near the southeast corner of Andrews Highway and Loop 250 and which contains Wild River Canyon theme park. Approximately 10 building are included in the sale, along with numerous water structures. Personal property and equipment are not included unless bids specifically state.
The property is ideal for continued use as a theme park, or for conversion to apartments, condominiums, townhouses or office and commercial use.
Plans are available for conversion of the park land and adjacent 30 acres, also zoned C-3 into an office complex. In addition the numerous landscaping improvements, waterways, and existing buildings make the site ideal for an architecturally pleasing apartment, condominium or townhouse development.
Separate lots are being solicited for personal property and equipment, arcade equipment, architecutural specialties and ride equipment. Minimum bid on any grouping of these items is $5000. Items will not be sold on a piecemeal basis.
P.O. Box 8529
Midland, Texas 79703
Telephone 697-2352
Plats, plans and appraisal are available at 5025 W. Princeton, Suite 4. Owners reserve the right to accept or reject any bids.
