Cotton gins look for bumper harvest

By BOB CAMPBELL
SDN Staff Writer

Scurry County gins have processed about a tenth of the apparent bumper-class cotton crop, with six of the county's seven gins reporting 5,189 bales ginned Friday afternoon.

Gin spokesmen predicted total production of about 60,000 bales.

Farmers have been defoliating extensively to hasten the harvest but are still awaiting the first frost, when all the cotton leaves will be killed and the harvest will begin in earnest to run another projected 30 to 40 days.

The Inadale Co-Op has been the busiest to date, with 3,245 bales ginned and a total of more than 20,000 expected.

Inadale bookkeeper Cynthia Grinslade said the gin has been employing two crews around the clock for the past two weeks.

Linda Cline, office manager at Farmers Co-op on the Roby Highway near Snyder, reported 650 bales processed and an expected total for the season there of 10,000 to 12,000 bales.

"We're just getting started, working about 10 hours a day," she said. "We'll put on two crews after the freeze."

Fluvanna Gin manager Dan Caraway said he had produced 233 bales and should gin around 5,000 this winter. "This cotton's all ready," he said. "Ninety-nine percent of it's ready.

"It should be three-quarters of a bale to a bale to the acre. We had a man in here yesterday who had gotten a bale and a half."

Jimmy Roemisch at Hermleigh gin reported 94 bales

Prison effort down to wire

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

The issue of a state prison for Scurry County--an effort which has infused new hope in the minds of those who would reverse an economic downturn here--is expected to be decided Monday.

A final answer likely won't be known until Monday afternoon, however, following a morning of public hearings scheduled by the Texas Department of Corrections board in Austin.

Making these presentations will be representatives of the seven finalist bid proposals involving donated land. Scurry County was announced as one of 10 original finalists Oct. 21.

Monday's decision will cap a two-year effort by the chamber-sponsored Economic Development Committee, and supporters are placing their highest hopes on a project expected to generate 766 jobs and an annual payroll of $15 6 million.

Local officials say they believe Scurry County has a good chance for one of two 2,250-man prison units expected to be built by the state.

If chosen, the county would gain a $68 million facility to be constructed with state dollars using a portion of $500 million in general obligation bonds approved by voters Tuesday.

Scurry County residents--in a turnout twice as large as expected--voiced their approval of this bond package by a 75 percent margin.

In addition to possibly two 2,250-man maximum security units, the TDC board is expected to choose sites for four 1,000-bed units. The economic advantage of these projects has been estimated at 300 jobs with an annual payroll of $6 million.

At Monday's hearing, a contingent of county residents estimated between 150 and 200 is expected to be on hand.

In this group of supporters will be a cross-section of elected board members plus local civic and business leaders. To be in attendance will be the county commissioners court, the city council, and administrators, board members and staff from Western Texas College, Snyder ISD and Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Included in the group will be the head of every Snyder-based public entity to include the county judge, mayor, school superintenent, college president and hospital administrator.

Chamber Manager Bill Moss said Friday his staff has made up name badges for 160 individuals registering to attend. In addition, the chamber has chartered two buses leaving for Austin Sunday afternoon with some 75 persons expected to leave from Scurry County Coliseum at 2 p.m.

The decision regarding the prisons will come down to a 30-

W-Texas endorses TDC bid

As Scurry County makes its final plea Monday morning for a Texas Department of Correction prison facility, it will be bolstered with support resolutions from 11 other West Texas cities ranging in size from El Paso to Rotan.

In addition, members of the Economic Development Committee will offer support documents from both Region 3 of the Texas Municipal League, which includes 21 West Texas counties; and the West Central Texas Council of Governments, entailing 19 counties.

The resolutions have been passed, with others still pending, by the city councils representing El Paso, Abilene, Midland, San Angelo, Plainview, Big Spring, Sweetwater, Levelland, Brownfield, Colorado City and Rotan.

Committee members estimate the list of endorsements represent an area involving 1.4 million West Texans.

Olney Savings project helps new year's building permits

The first monthly reporting period for Snyder building permits reflect a sizable increase over last year's miserly start--a 12-month reporting period which ended 50 percent below the previous year.

The construction of a new office building for Olney Savings was the key ingredient bolstering October's permits. The month's total was some $480,000 and Olney's project accounted for $350,000 of this.

To compare to last year, the first month of the city's fiscal year generated just over $98,000 in permits.

In addition, October permits included a second commercial project estimated at some $85,000. This will involve the addition of a carport area at the Western Crest Apartments located at 3901 Ave. O.

For the two commercial projects, Electra Construction out of Electra is listed as the contractor for the Olney Savings building; and Chisum Construction is the contractor for the Western Crest Apartments work.

Another project applied for in October involves construction of an office facility applied for by C.W. York and to be built at 105 Lubbock Highway. Its estimated construction cost was $23,500.

In all, the city issued 11 building permits during the month, none involved new single family residences. One mobile home permit was issued, applied for by Ida Pinkerton at 607 North Ave. R.

Pleas here end cases

Two young Lubbock men have pleaded guilty to burglary of a vehicle and have been given four-year probated penitentiary terms.

Booker Thomas Jones and Ruben Baker III, both 17, pleaded guilty to an Oct. 17 case in which they broke into a car at a central Snyder apartment complex.

Bobbie Lynn Webb, 37, of Colorado City pleaded guilty to possession of a controlled substance, cocaine, and was given a seven-year probated term. The offense was reported July 16.

Clemente Rodriquez Jr., 22, of 1906 Coleman, No. 4, pleaded guilty to burglary of a building in an Oct. 19 break-in at a Coleman Ave. apartment in which several gallons of paint were stolen. He was assessed a five-year probated term.

Snyder lost a good one last week. Lyle Deffebach died from injuries sustained in Wednesday's tragic accident on west 25th Street.

Mr. D was routinely going to Stinson Drug about 8 a.m. Wednesday to have early morning coffee. It was a daily ritual with Mr. D--an occasion that he relished.

A senior member of the Koffee Klatch, Mr. D could trade jabs with the best of 'em. He throughly enjoyed the coffee, the conversation and the friendship. But in every situation, he was a gentleman.

There generally are two kinds of folks--givers and takers. Mr. D was a giver. A glance at his long list of his civic accomplishments is a glowing tribute that Mr. D had many times paid his "community dues."

Mr. D loved to talk--and he loved to tell you about his deceased wife, his son and daughter, and his grandchildren. He loved to tell about the old days and the new days. Mr. D never looked back and lived each day to the fullest.

He was Mr. United Way and Mr. Boy Scout in Snyder. He was a leader in community fund drives--funds that ultimately benefited others.

Mr. D had vision. He had experience and the young guys listened when Mr. D started out "You young boys..."

He was a leader in the Methodist Church. His character and integrity was well-known locally and state-wide--both in and out of church circles.

His civic accomplishments are numerous. He served as Lions Club president, chamber president, hospital board member, was citizen of the year and a member of the Colorado River Municipal Water District board.

It was the latter service that may well be one of Mr. D's greatest contributions to Scurry County. He was part of a group that had the vision to establish Lake Thomas and the water district--solving the county's water district for years to come.

Mr. D was proud of that accomplishment. Just the week prior to his death he had reminisced about the controversy as to whether Snyder should join the CRMWD.

Nobody can say that Mr. D didn't leave the local woodpile a lot higher.

Ask Us

Q — How would the construction of a TDC prison in Scurry County compare to the Stacy Dam project?

A — The estimated construction cost of a 2,250-man unit, to be funded by state bond money, is more than twice the construction cost for Stacy Dam and a 1,000-man unit is approximately the same construction cost. Stacy's construction is estimated to cost some $30 million. The construction cost of the larger TDC unit is estimated at $68 million.

South forest fires continue

By The Associated Press

Firefighters, praying for rain by Sunday, began "a hellacious weekend" battling wind-fanned forest fires in 13 parched Southern states cloaked by a thick haze of pungent smoke.

Smoke from the fires cut visibility to as low as three miles in parts of Mississippi, Alabama, North Carolina, eastern Tennessee, eastern Kentucky, southern West Virginia and western Virginia, the weather service said.

Foresters blamed the fires on the region's prolonged dry weather, wind, falling leaves and arsonists. Without rain, said Mississippi Forestry Commision spokesman Bill Colvin, "It's going to be a hellacious weekend."

"Visibility is terrible," said West Virginia forester Gerald Wimer. "We had one case where an observer in a tower saw two individuals setting fire within a quarter-mile of him and he was unable to catch them."

From Texas to Virginia, more than 121,000 acres — an area more than three times the size of Miami — has burned in 8,018 fires in 11 days, the U.S. Forest Service said.

That didn't include West Virginia, which is just outside the Forest Service's 13-state Southern Region. Damage to its 17 southern counties would bring the total to more than 250,000 acres.

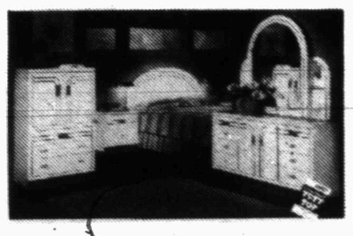

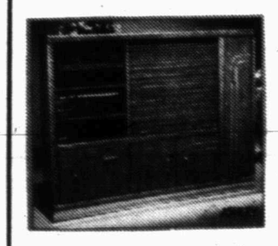

Authorities have reported no serious injuries to firefighters.

The worst spots in the South were Tennessee and Kentucky.

Deficit-reduction talks end 2nd week without solution

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican plan to cut $30 billion from the federal deficit is on the table as the second week of budget negotiations between congressional and White House officials draws to a close.

"We have several general parameters we can all think about over the weekend," House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., said Friday as the participants completed their 10th day of bargaining.

The plan was advanced by Michel amid indications that the Reagan administration was softening its stance against defense spending cuts. But it also appeared, following a White House meeting with President Reagan and GOP congressional leaders, that the administration was holding firm in its refusal to rein in Social Security spending.

The Republican proposal would reduce the deficit by $30 billion in the 1988 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, and by $45.5 billion in fiscal 1989.

Over the two years, it would reduce anticipated spending on federal benefit and pension programs by $15.3 billion. In addition, taxes and fees would be increased by $23.4 billion during the period, and $10 billion worth of government assets would be sold.

The plan would freeze the rest of the domestic budget and defense spending at 1987 levels for the first half of fiscal 1988, allow a 2 percent increase in the second part of the year and another 2 percent rise for all of fiscal 1989.

"I have to feel very good about the progress we made today," said Michel, who presented the plan to the other negotiators.

However, he conceded that the bargainers have more work to do.

"No bitter, clean, tough, long-range decisions have been agreed to," he said.

Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., chairman of the House Budget Committee, said the GOP proposal "moves the process along significantly," but cautioned, "It's unwise to think we're anywhere near compromise at this point."

The congressional Republican plan would hold defense spending to $284.4 billion this year, well below the $297.6 billion Reagan sought when he presented his 1988 budget last January.

Sandinista cease-fire plan is received with skepticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is reacting skeptically to Nicaragua's call for a negotiated cease-fire with the U.S.-funded Contra rebels, saying it is awaiting signs that the proposal was made in good faith.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman offered that assessment Friday as six senators left on a weekend fact-finding mission to Central America.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., a critic of administration policies in the region, praised the announcement by Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega that he is willing to open indirect cease-fire talks with the Contras.

"The news is very, very positive," Dodd said. "It is the most significant news since the Aug. 7 signing" of the regional peace accord in Guatemala City and puts "new life in this very fragile and difficult process."

But Redman said Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government was still "far from being in compliance" with the peace agreement.

"We would welcome any serious move by the Sandinista government to end the fighting in Nicaragua," Redman said. "This announcement can be considered a genuine step toward national reconciliation if it means the Sandinistas are prepared for real good-faith negotiations."

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., an administration supporter who joined Dodd on the Central America trip, called the Ortega announcement "a positive step" but said moves toward democracy will be the Sandinistas' ultimate test.

Despite Ortega's cease-fire proposal, the short-term indications are that fighting will intensify in Nicaragua.

Scientist reveals new tool

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers say they now can search a living cell for genetic secrets that may help provide a new understanding of such disorders as cancer and heart disease.

Robert D. Wells, chairman of the Department of Biochemistry at the University of Alabama at Birmingham, said Friday that he and his team have developed a new biological assay technique and used it to prove the existence within a living cell of so-called left-handed DNA.

"The implications are profound because we are talking about a fundamental mechanism of genetic regulation," he said. "This technology will undoubtedly accelerate basic research in a wide variety of areas, including cancer and cardiovascular research."

DNA, for deoxyribonucleic acid, is a molecule that contains the genetic code of each cell. It stores the code as paired sequences of genes arranged in a particular kind of twisted chain known as a double helix.

Most DNA helixes are twisted to the right, but more than a decade ago, scientists discovered some DNA was twisted to the left. Researchers suspected that this unusual structure could be a source of genetic abnormalities, but years of study have failed to provide proof.

Wells said the new assay technique could determine the importance of the left-handed DNA by allowing resarchers to study it within a living cell.

Report: regulators fail S&Ls

DALLAS (AP) — Executives searching for the causes of the state's savings and loan crisis say the industry's regulators failed to properly monitor thrifts and check the backgrounds of their controllers, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

The Texas Savings and Loan League criticized state and federal regulators in a 63-page report it prepared for the Savings and Loan Task Force, the Times Herald reported Saturday. Gov. Bill Clements formed the task force to find the causes of the failures of several Texas savings and loans and recommend solutions.

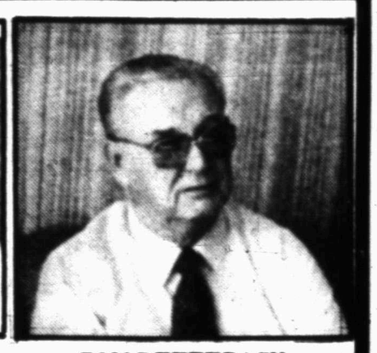

The group that prepared the report includes 29 executives for the Texas savings and loan, banking, real estate and legal industries.

"There is significant question regarding whether regulators appropriately scrutinized the backgrounds and expertise of the real estate developers and others who acquired control of Texas thrifts in the 1980s and who ultimately were responsible for the huge losses incurred and to be incurred by Texas thrifts," the report said.

Hijacker claims Mafia chased him

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A distraught man demanding FBI protection from the Mafia held a cockpit fire ax over an Air Canada pilot's head but gave up after a 3½-hour standoff at the airport, authorities said.

James Barrett Drake, 37, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., boarded the Boeing 767 at San Francisco International Airport on Friday and made rambling demands to be flown to Dublin, Ireland, or London, said FBI agent Barry Mawn.

The standoff began about 12:15 p.m., when the man raced aboard the plane with 12 crew members on board shortly after it arrived from Toronto, said airport spokesman Ron Wilson. The plane's passengers already had departed.

"The initial thrust of his demands was his fear of the Mafia and he wanted the FBI's protection," Mawn said.

The crew members, except for the captain, left when Drake entered the cockpit and told the co-pilot to prepare for takeoff.

Commissioner Kent Hance favors insurance exemption

AUSTIN (AP) — Responding to nearly 1,000 telephone calls, Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance said Friday he would try to change commission rules to exempt larger pickups and similar vehicles from new $500,000 minimum liability insurance requirements.

Under a rule adopted Aug. 31, before Hance was on the commission, the commission adopted a rule requiring owners of commercial vehicles weighing more than 10,000 pounds to file proof that they had at least $500,000 in liability coverage.

Hance's proposal would extend that exemption to vehicles having three axles or weighing 26,000 pounds or less.

During World War II, the city of Warsaw surrendered to the Germans Sept. 27, 1939, after 19 days of resistance.

'87 Christmas Happening planned by local museum

The Christmas Happening in the Scurry County Museum was discussed at a luncheon meeting of the museum volunteers Wednesday.

The annual Christmas Happening is scheduled for Dec. 6, Shirley Leftwich, museum director, said. Volunteers are needed to help make decorations for the museum's Christmas tree and the museum. Since the United States is celebrating the 200th anniversary of the Constitution this year, the decorations will have a patriotic theme.

Work tables will be set up in the museum next week so volunteers can work during available time either in the morning or afternoon. Patterns will be available for decorations and the museum would also welcome suggestions for other decorative items.

The Christmas Happening is designed to provide a family outing each year, with activities planned for visitors of all ages.

"We hope community residents will mark Dec. 6 on their holiday calendar and plan to come to the museum," Mrs. Leftwich said.

Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer is invited to go to the museum which is located on the Western Texas College campus, or call 573-6107.

'Wild Oats' run slated.

Tickets for the Western Texas College theatre department's production of "Wild Oats" will go on sale Wednesday. The play is to run Nov. 19-23 in the Fine Arts Theatre on campus.

"Wild Oats" is an affectionate, funny tribute to the men and women of the late 19th century who toured the American West as traveling players," Jim Rambo, director, said. Laura Hitchcock, drama critic for the "Hollywood Reporter" called it a goofy, delicious spoof of the old Wild West when it was produced at the Mark Taper Forum of the Los Angeles Theatre Center. It is scheduled for a future Broadway production.

Making up the cast are Jamie Cofer of Snyder, Dave Harveson of Fort Worth, Dan Hawkins of Graham, Ila Kay Gross of Knox City, Bret Dillon of Leedey, Okla., Mike Carmichael, Jim Miller and Theresa Rodriguez, all of Lubbock, Anthony Galvez of Seagraves and Shauna Gibson of Vernon.

Tickets will be $5 for adults and $3 for students. WTC students will be admitted free of charge with their ID cards but are asked to make reservations to ensure seating on the night they choose to attend.

Ginsburg...

Withdrawal said expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of a conservative political group said today a senior White House staffer told him Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg is expected to withdraw in the wake of his admission of past marijuana use

Paul Weyrich, chairman of the Free Congress PAC, made his observation at a news conference as the Reagan administration sent strong signals to Ginsburg that he should end the nomination effort.

A senior White House official said Friday night, "It would be best for him to step aside."

"The worst of all worlds is that he hangs in there — hangs in there until January," said the official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity. "Something needs to happen in the next 72 hours."

Weyrich, whose news conference was scheduled prior to Ginsburg's admission, said, "I expect the nominee is going to withdraw himself."

He said "a member of the senior staff" at the White House indicated to him that the administration is already looking at other possible nominees and expected Ginsburg to withdraw

On Friday, after President Reagan reportedly told him to "do what you think is right," Education Secretary William Bennett had called Ginsburg to tell him to withdraw

Administration resolve to stand by Ginsburg began crumbling just a few hours after Reagan had defended the nominee publicly, saying that Ginsburg had "erred in his youth" but that the nomination would not be withdrawn

Reagan said Ginsburg's admission that he had used marijuana a few times in the 1960s and 1970s had nothing to do with his judicial qualifications and the nominee should be confirmed "if there's any justice left in Washington"

But the tenor of administration statements changed dramatically in the next few hours, as it became apparent the nominee faced serious problems retaining the support of conservative Republican senators essential to his prospects in a confirmation vote.

Loye Miller, Bennett's secretary, said the education secretary called the president about 3 p.m. Friday, said it was essential that Ginsburg's nomination be withdrawn and suggested that the nominee be given that message.

"Do what you think is right," Reagan told Bennett, according to Miller.

Bennett called Ginsburg about an hour later in his chambers at the U.S. Court of Appeals. Miller said. He told the judge that the fight was "not winnable" and that staying in it "hurts the president."

Bennett told Ginsburg he would be able to withdraw "gracefully" now but would not be able to do so later, Miller said

10 soldiers snared in sting operation

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Ten Fort Bliss soldiers were snared in a sting operation selling government property ranging from cheap watches to missile equipment, Army officials say.

All 10 were convicted in courts-martial this year or were given less-than-honorable discharges, officials said Friday.

Capt. Diana Moore, chief of the criminal law division of the office of the Staff Judge Advocate at the post, said the sales included electronic equipment, ammunition, missile equipment and more basic items such as cots and helmets.

She said Army investigators posed as military surplus dealers and bought the supplies from the 10 soldiers. The operation by Army Criminal Investigations Division agents took place from around September 1986 to January.

Fort Bliss spokesman Lt. Col. James Lawson said the courts-martial took place between mid-March and October. He said the Army waited until all the trials were completed before publicizing the operation.

Moore said the items the soldiers sold ranged from two Army watches worth $19.95 each up to $104,000 worth of electronic equipment, incuding items for the Patriot surface-to-air missile.

Moore told the El Paso Times she didn't know the specific nature of the Patriot equipment, but she said the court-martial involving that attempted sale didn't involve classified information.

Seven of the soldiers were given dishonorable discharges, reduced to the lowest pay grade and given from one to 15 years in confinement at either Fort Leavenworth or Fort Riley, both in Kansas, Moore said.

Two of the soldiers requested and were granted the option of receiving a less-than-honorable discharge instead of courts-martial, she said.

The 10th soldier was allowed to retire at one rank below his current one.

The only soldier not discharged for his illegal actions, Moore said, was Sgt. 1st Class Richard Hanway, who was allowed to retire at the reduced rank of staff sergeant.

Four Texas writers honored

AUSTIN (AP) — Dan Jenkins, newspaper columnist and nationally known novelist and magazine writer, joked that his wife "is probably happy for me to become a permanent part of the street I've fallen down on so many times."

Author and magazine writer Gary Cartwright told the same crowd of 300 that he was glad to have his name embedded on a sidewalk "where countless numbers of students, tourists, winos and pigeons" could get a good look at it.

The tone was lighthearted at times Friday night when Cartwright, Jenkins and fellow writers Larry L. King, author of the musical "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," and screenwriter Bud Shrake were honored on East Sixth Street.

Granite stars bearing the names of the four Texas literary greats, and set in the sidewalk, were shown off and bragged on at a ceremony held in front of Toulouse, a Sixth Street night spot.

Smith is chosen as representative

Melanie Smith, Snyder Junior High School choir director, was chosen to represent the Great Plains District during the preliminary auditions for the National Association of Teachers of Singing Singer of the Year competition held at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque on Oct. 31.

Smith will now advance to the regional auditions which include all of New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma. There will be a total of four people, one from each district, to compete at regional competition in Ft. Worth on Nov. 14. The winner of the regional audition will go to the national finals in San Antonio on Dec. 27-28.

To be eligible for the competition, the vocalist must have prepared a minimum of 22 pieces of music, representing at least four languages. The applicant must also be between the age of 21 and 35 and be sponsored by a member of the National Association of Teachers of Singing.

Smith, a 1987 graduate of Rice University with a Master of Music degree, began her teaching career in Snyder in August of this year.

Sweetwater locks up district crown

Sweetwater's Mustangs wrapped up another trip to the Class 4A state schoolboy playoffs while Monahans sewed up at least a tie for second place in District 2-4A grid action Friday night.

Sweetwater popped Andrews and former coach W.T. Stapler 38-7 to improve 7-0 in loop play. The Mustangs close out the regular season next Friday in San Angelo.

Monahans blanked a scrappy Lamesa team 21-0 to go 6-1 in district action. The Loboes aren't out of the woods yet, however. They entertain hopeful Fort Stockton next Friday.

Fort Stockton kept a game behind the Loboes at 4-2 by slugging Pecos 34-13. If the Panthers can upend Monahans next Friday, second place would end in a tie between the two teams.

In the only other game played last Friday, Big Spring rallied from a two-touchdown deficit to beat Snyder 22-14.

In addition to the Sweetwater-Lake View and Fort Stockton-Monahans games next week, Snyder hosts Lamesa and Big Spring is at Andrews.

Pecos closed out its season with a 2-5-1 loop record; 2-7-1 overall.

Behind running of White...

Steers rally to defeat Snyder, 22-14

BIG SPRING -- Snyder's Ragin' Tigers put together a two-touchdown advantage here Friday night but couldn't hold off Charles White and the Big Spring offensive line as the Steers came crashing back to take a 22-14 victory in District 2-4A gridiron play.

White carried the ball a weary 48 times for 260 yards and two touchdowns. Running behind center Joe Downey, guards Jesse Rios and Kyle Carroll, and tackles Stanley Johnson and Greg Jones, White bulled for 174 of those steps on 32 second-half carries.

Snyder, 1-8 overall and 1-6 in district play, will close out the 1987 season at home next Friday by hosting rival Lamesa. The Steers, 5-4 and 4-3, finish at Andrews.

Snyder Coach Dennis Tomlin said going into the game that Big Spring was potentially one of the top teams in the district, and the Steers proved it - between turnovers, at least. They dominated the second half, running 44 plays to Snyder's 15.

The Steers had six turnovers in the game, but none of them seemed to make a difference in the outcome. Snyder scored or set up its two touchdowns on long runs, and those runs accounted for 102 yards of the Tigers' 137 yard total output for the night.

Big Spring went into the contest having given up 28 fumbles on the season - a major reason the Steers had not repeated as district champions. The Steers' first two possessions ended in a fumble and a pass interception. Robert Talamantez recovered the fumble - one of two for him on the night - and Roy Gutierrez picked off the Shawn Shellman pass. The Steer's third try on offense went to the Snyder 35-yard line before Kevin Dollins sacked Shellman and forced a punting situation. A fifth possession died when Randy Morris recovered yet another fumble for Snyder.

The Tigers' attempts offensively had gone for naught, but this time it worked. Quarterback Lee Fletcher connected with Craig Watkins for a 5-yard gain, and Scott Lanier rambled for 10 yards and a first down to the Snyder 41. On the next play, Morris took a reverse and went down the right sidelines 59 yards to score. Tony Anderson kicked the conversion and a happy Snyder bunch led 7-0 with 7:31 to go before halftime.

Big Spring took over at its own 20 after the ensuing kickoff and pushed to the Snyder 22 before failing on a fourth down situation.

The Steers got one more chance prior to intermission, but things got desperate when Chad Hall and Benny Miller sacked Shellman. Pete Madrid tipped away a pass that would have gone for a first down moments later, and the drive ended when Lanier intercepted Shellman on the last play.

Snyder got another break to open the second half. Big Spring took the first possession and cranked out 31 yards before Bruce Jones fumbled and Talamantez recovered for the Tigers again at the 48-yard line.

On first down, Vyron Clay slipped through the line and broke free on a 43-yard scamper to the Steer 9-yard line. Gutierrez smacked inside for six yards from there and two plays later Tommy Lane took Fletcher's wide pitch and ran around the left side to score.

Anderson tacked on the PAT with 8:42 left and Snyder enjoyed a 14-0 lead.

That would be Snyder's final offensive spark, however, as White and company took over. The Steers countered Snyder's quick-hitting touchdown with a determined 15-play, 65-yard march. White carried the playload on 11 of the carries, including the 1-yard touchdown run on fourth down with 1:46 to go in the third quarter.

The Steers tried a fake on the conversion, but White dropped the ball.

Big Spring got a gift on the ensuing kickoff. Snyder tried to fool the Steers on the return, but a

T-Birds outlast Westerners

HOBBS, N.M. -- Coach Tony Mauldin's Westerners kept up the pace for about 30 minutes here Friday but got weary in the final 10 and dropped a 120-108 decision to New Mexico Junior College.

Western, 0-3, was to play Texas State Technical Institute at 6 p.m. (MST) Saturday in the final day of the three-day, New Mexico JC Classic.

Western played the game without the services of 6-7 sophomore Harvey Marshman, who is out with a knee injury. Marshman will not be able to play for at least a week.

"I think it made a difference, not having Harvey," said Coach Mauldin. "We needed his rebounding and all but we also needed him for depth."

The Westerners stayed with NMJC's Thunderbirds until midway through the second half, but got fatigued.

"We can't seem to sustain anything. We get so tired we stop playing defense," said Coach Mauldin. "Part of that is we are tying to pressure full court. If compromise and sag back sometimes I think it will hurt us when we do press."

Darrell Nelson led Western with 37 points. Walter Martin, a 6-8 freshman from Snook, scored 26 points and had 15 rebounds, while James Hill scored 19 points and Frank Bailey had points.

Hill, who made five three-point shots, also led in assists with a half-dozen.

NMJC was led by Rodney Jones' 24 points. Henry Jackson and Marshall Taylor pumped in 23 each.

Dusters flatten Seward Co.

LEVELLAND -- Western Texas College's Lady Dusters used their full-court press to flatten Seward County in second-day action of the Lady Texan Classic here Thursday, 91-58.

The Dusters, now 2-0, were to play a tough Northern Oklahoma team at 6 p.m. Saturday, the final day of the three-day tourney.

"They'll be tough. They beat South Plains by about 10 points (73-64) last night and I think they made eight three-point shots, so they shoot the ball really well," said Western Texas Coach Kelly Chadwick. "It will take everything we've got to beat them."

It didn't take much to beat Seward County, though the Dusters gave a strong effort.

"They just really weren't very good. That's about all I can say," noted Coach Chadwick, whose Dusters got out to a 21-point lead early in the game.

"The (WTC) kids played real hard and real well. We probably shot the ball better than we did against Western Oklahoma the other night. Staci Smith had another good game. She scored 23 points and set out probably eight minutes of the game. Kayla (Thompson) spent a lot of time in foul trouble and Stephanie McKnight came in and had a really fine ballgame. She ran the team well and played tremendous defense.

"We made a lot of fouls and a lot of that is from being so aggressive. We haven't learned what is going to be called a foul and what isn't yet," said the coach.

Chadwick said he was still concerned with the Dusters offense.

"Right now we're playing good defense and doing a good job of running the break. That's our strengths right now. Our half-court offense is very suspect in my mind," he said. "But the kids are playing really hard."

Smith's 23 points led the Dusters. Allen notched 13 while Jackie Reed and Lisa Houston had 9 each. Julie Roewe and Carolyn Colbert 8 each and Nancy Bals and Shearon Rosemond pitched in 7 each. Everyone on the team played and everyone scored.

Tonya King, a 6-0 freshman, led Seward's Lady Saints with 18 points.

Eric Dickerson to get start as Colts challenge Chargers

by The Associated Press

A San Diego-Indianapolis matchup didn't figure to be a big game this season, but thanks to the strike and the presence of Eric Dickerson, it is.

Dickerson, a three-time NFL rushing leader when he played for the Los Angeles Rams, makes his first start Sunday when the Colts play the Chargers, winners of six straight, at the Hoosier Dome.

Dickerson replaces Albert Bentley, who gained 145 yards in 29 carries and caught three passes for 32 yards in last Sunday's 19-14 victory over the New York Jets.

Dickerson, playing as a reserve last week against the Jets because of his unfamiliarity with the Colts' system, gained 38 yards on 10 carries and caught one pass for 28 yards. Dickerson is expected to be more of a force on Sunday. "The team is a real good football team," said Dickerson, who has been reunited with Ron Meyer, his coach at Southern Methodist University.

Neither Indianapolis nor San Diego were expected to be challengers this season. But the Colts, 4-3, are tied with New England for first place in the tight AFC East race, while the Chargers head the NFC West with a 6-1 record. Seattle is second at 5-2.

The Chargers have become a real surprise team under Coach Al Saunders, who took over last year after the Chargers started 1-7.

In Sunday's other games, it is Atlanta at Cleveland, Chicago at Green Bay, Dallas at Detroit, Denver at Buffalo, the Los Angeles Raiders at Minnesota, Pittsburgh at Kansas City, Tampa Bay at St. Louis, Washington at Philadelphia, Houston at San Francisco, New Orleans at the Los Angeles Rams, Miami at Cincinnati and, in a night game, New England at the New York Giants.

Seattle visits the Jets Monday night.

Atlanta, 2-5, tries to rebound after last Sunday's 38-0 loss to New Orleans. Cleveland is 4-3, with three of the losses by a combined 15 points. The Browns have beaten the Falcons four in a row.

Quarterback Jim McMahon has been a savior for Chicago, 6-1, in the two games since the strike ended. But McMahon has an injured groin and is a questionable starter against Green Bay, 3-3-1.

Detroit, with a 1-6 record that has made Coach Darryl Rogers' job shaky, goes against an apparently revitalized Dallas, 4-3 after a victory over the Giants last Monday night.

A passing duel between Denver's John Elway and Buffalo's Jim Kelly promises excitement. The Broncos, 4-2-1, don't run the ball that well, but they're far ahead of the Bills, 3-4.

Both Minnesota and the Raiders are 3-4, but last week's 28-17 loss to Seattle was a tough one for the Vikings. Minnesota's Wade Wilson may stay at quarterback, even though Tommy Kramer's pinched nerve is healed. Raiders quarterback Rusty Hilger threw for 277 yards against New England last week.

Both Pittsburgh, 4-3, and Kansas City, 1-6, try to break the habit of blowing big leads. The Steelers blew 14 and 10-point leads against Miami in a 35-24 loss last week, while the Chiefs twice led by 14 before a 31-28 setback to Chicago.

Tampa Bay is 4-3 and in playoff contention, while St. Louis is 2-5 and apparently a lame-duck franchise.

Washington, 6-1, won the first meeting against Philadelphia, 3-4, but the Eagles regulars are much better than their strike replacements.

The strike didn't hurt either Houston, 5-2, or San Francisco, 6-1. Forty-niners Coach Bill Walsh expects a high-scoring game.

The Rams, 1-6, will have to wait for the draft choices they got in the Dickerson deal. New Orleans, 4-3 and hungry for its first playoff berth, ranks first in the league in defense.

The contest between Miami, 3-4, and Cincinnati, 2-5, is the first between quarterbacks Dan Marino of the Dolphins and the Boomer Esiason of the Bengals. Marino is the NFL's No. 1 rated passer, while Esiason is No. 3.

Jeff Rutledge starts at quarterback in place of the ailing Phil Simms for the Giants, 1-6. New England, 4-3, has a much more experienced backup quarterback in Steve Grogan, who steps in for the injured Tony Eason.

Robinson to pocket 24 million cool ones

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Center David Robinson, the top pick in the 1987 NBA draft, signed a contract with the San Antonio Spurs Friday that reportedly will pay him at least $24 million over eight years.

The 7-foot-1 Robinson, who was named College Basketball Player of the Year as a senior at the Naval Academy, said he wants to fulfill his two-year service commitment before starting his pro career.

Robinson, his agent, Lee Fentress, and Spurs Chairman Angelo Drossos declined to discuss the details of the contract.

Team spokesman Wayne Witt said no details would be announced. Published reports placed the contract's value at amounts ranging from $24 million-$30 million.

"I have one of the best contracts. As far as pay goes, I guess there might be some people around with more total money or something like that, but I'm happy with the contract," Robinson said.

Robinson said money was not the only incentive to join the Spurs, who had their worst season last year at 24-58.

"There is no amount of money I would have signed for if I didn't think this team had a commitment to becoming better and to becoming a successful franchise," Robinson said during a news conference attended by about 700 fans. "Bringing me in I feel like wouldn't be enough to make a successful franchise, but there are some talented young players who are going to get a lot of experience in the next few years.

"I feel I can come in here and make my impact and we will be successful," he said.

Drossos, who had negotiated with Fentress and Robinson for 10 days, said Robinson would be among the highest paid athletes.

He said Robinson could have an impact on the team and fans as early as this season, another rebuilding year.

"I think that this team could surprise a lot of people and the players may be that just more determined to show that 'we can do it on our own,'" Drossos said.

TIGERS

handoff from Tracy Odom to Clay never connected and the Steers fell on the loose ball at the Tiger 22.

It took four plays for the hosts to score their second touchdown. Danny Williams carried the load from 11 yards out with 15 seconds showing in the quarter. Big Spring went for another two-point conversion, but Shellman was stopped short and Snyder still led, 14-12.

Big Spring's next possession began at the Snyder 44-yard line and ended at the 9 when White was stopped for a two-yard loss on fourth down. White actually fumbled on the play, and Trey Tippens recovered.

The Steers turned the drive into points, however, in a roundabout way. They earned a two-point safety to tie the score when the ball spurted through Fletcher's legs and went into the end zone.

Snyder was also penalized 10 yards on the play for unsportsmanlike conduct, and the Tigers had to free kick against a gusting wind from the 10-yard line.

Anderson's boot was caught up in the 20-30 mph wind and went only 21 yards to the 31. Big Spring took over and handed the ball to White nine straight times before he burst over from seven yards out.

Williams ran in the point-after with 51 seconds left in the game.

Snyder's final offensive effort was a futile one against the wind, with time running out, and with Big Spring expecting the pass.

Snyder was led by Clay's 65 yards on 10 carries. Morris had 59 on the TD run and Gutierrez got 15 steps on seven tries.

New land offensive feared

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes bombed an Iranian petrochemical plant.

Iran threatened to punish Iraq, raising fears that Tehran is planning another large land offensive against its enemy.

A war communique from Baghdad said Iraqi jets on Friday scored "violent and destructive strikes" on the Bandar Khomeini petrochemical complex. The plant is on Iran's coast in the northern Persian Gulf.

The facility is being built by Japan. The joint venture of Japan's Mitsui corporation and the Iranian government has been under construction intermittently for 14 years and the target of many bombing raids.

The communique said all planes returned safely.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency claimed the Iraqi planes killed one civilian and wounding 13.

Earlier Friday, Iranian commandos on a speedboat shot up a U.S.-managed tanker. The 103,584-ton Grand Wisdom later anchored off Dubai in the southern gulf with five rocket-grenade holes in its hull.

No casualties were reported in the pre-dawn assault and the crew quickly extinguished a small fire, marine salvage executives said.

U.S. warships in the gulf only escort U.S.-flagged ships, which include 11 Kuwaiti tankers that have been registered in the United States. Kuwait asked for protection from attacks by Iran, which considers Kuwait an ally of Iraq.

Also Friday, the Pentagon said in Washington that the 16th convoy of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers and Navy warships began moving down the gulf. The latest convoy includes the frigate Thach and the supertanker Middletown.

In Tehran on Friday, President Ali Khamenei of Iran said at a prayer meeting that his country will punish Iraq "since the world does not want to," feeding speculation that Tehran plans another large land offensive.

Speaking at Tehran University, Khamenei also said Iranians should "be prepared for an eventual confrontation" with the United States in the gulf.

Iran is conducting a military buildup in the southern sector of the 730-mile border warfront, and Iraqi officials have said they expect a new offensive in the 7-year-old war.

Military analysts believe the Iranians, outgunned at sea and in the air, are massing for a new ground offensive, probably aimed at Iraq's southern provincial capital of Basra.

Prison decision expected Monday

minute presentation for each bidder with 15 minutes offered to hears comments both "for" and "against."

The local project has not been without some opposition here with ads against the prison run this past week by a group calling itself the "Concerned Citizens of Scurry County."

These ads have prompted rebutting advertisements "for" the project.

TDC spokesman David Nunnlee said Friday the previously announced schedule for the public hearings will remain the same.

One change will involve the presentation from finalist Johnson County, which withdrew its proposal last Monday. Nunnlee said time alloted for Johnson County, from 10:20 until 10:50 a.m., will be used for a break period.

Scurry County's presentation is scheduled immediately following this break.

The schedule as announced by TDC will be: Gatesville, 8 until 8:30 a.m.; Marlin (Falls County), 8:35 until 9:05; Liberty County, 9:10 until 9:40; Woodville (Tyler County) 9:45-10:15; the break from 10:20 until 10:50; Scurry County, 10:55 until 11:25; Childress, 11:30 until noon; and Amarillo, 12:05 until 12:35 p.m.

The remaining sites among the 10 original finalists involve state-owned land in the Dallas and Houston area. Since these do not involve donated land, no public hearings are scheduled for these two.

In announcing its finalists, TDC officials indicated they would consider also "any and all" sites owned by the State of Texas.

Nunnlee said the selection of the prison sites is the first scheduled agenda item when the TDC board reconvenes from its noon lunch break Monday afternoon.

ginned and said the season should produce 5,500 to 6,000 there. "If the weather stays nice, we ought to get going pretty good next week," he said.

Roemisch reported an average staple length so far of an inch and a quarter to 1 1/2 inches.

Office manager Barbara Sutton at Paymaster Gin on the Lamesa Highway neir Snyder reported 767 bales ginned and a projection of more than 10,000.

"It's all white grades, grading out good and ginning good — the best we've had for so long," she said.

Alton Smith at Dunn Gin said he had produced about 200 bales and should do around 6,000 after the freeze, which he said he hopes will come this week.

Ira Gin is also open this season.

Letter to editor

To the editor:

The question was asked in a recent paid article in the Snyder Daily News. Did you ever hear of anyone wanting to visit a town because it had a prison?

The answer is "yes." My wife and I lived in Colorado Springs, Colorado for a while. Friends and relatives from the Snyder area would come to visit. One of the things we always did was to drive them over to Canon City and take a tour of the Colorado State Penitentiary. The tours were very interesting and educational. At the end of the tour, you were taken through the craft shop. Well made pieces of jewelry, leather and wood items were available at a fraction of the cost in the free world market.

We are not insinuating that a prison would be a tourist attraction in Snyder, just answering your question.

Sincerely,
Edwin & Nell Parker

Charles & Diana wind up visit

CELLE, West Germany (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana of Britain flew to Celle today on the last day of their weeklong West German tour. Back home in England, lawmakers complained about a speech Charles had made.

The royal couple were greeted at the airport in Celle by Ernst Albrecht, governor of Lower Saxony state. They were then driven in a limousine through Celle, about 25 miles north of Hanover, to city hall.

They were scheduled to tour the British army garrison at Celle and lunch with state officials at the Herrenhausen Castle near Hanover before returning to London from Hanover airport in the late afternoon.

Charles and Diana landed at Celle's airport after a flight from Hamburg, where they had been greeted by thousands of cheering people and a small pro-IRA protest during a two-day visit.

In England, meanwhile, the prince got in hot water with some lawmakers and newspapers Friday over a speech he gave in West Germany that touched on Britain's nuclear weapons and praised German military prowess.

Fire claims mobile home

Firemen fought a mobile home fire for about two hours Saturday morning, but the home, in the Key Trailer Park in west Snyder near the airport, was reportedly almost a total loss.

The cause was still being investigated, a department spokesman said.

The owner, Billy Gwynes, was out of town, and the blaze was reported by a neighbor at 8:40 a.m.

The fire had already done extensive damage to the home when fire fighters arrived, the spokesman said.

Firemen stayed at the scene until about 10:45 a.m.

Teenager sails around-the-world in 2½ years

NEW YORK (AP) — Tania Aebi, who says she embarked 2½ years ago as an aimless 18-year-old in "pure ignorance," completed her solo round-the-world sail Friday as an "an accomplished person," her father said.

The poised, smiling Miss Aebi, now 21, docked at the South Street Seaport Museum at 12:40 p.m. after being towed by a Coast Guard power boat from Sandy Hook, N.J.

She had sailed her 26-foot sloop, the Varuna, into Sandy Hook on Thursday, the real finish of her 27,000-mile eastward circumnavigation. But with a broken engine and the wind against her, it was decided to use a tow to bring her to the seaport, her starting point on May 28, 1985.

Later, amid popping champagne corks and a full-scale press conference, Miss Aebi said, "I'm happy to be home. It means I'm alive."

Cruising World magazine said she was the first American woman to sail around the world alone, and a telegram from President Reagan congratulated her for having "in a way few people have, conquered the beauty, the majesty and the danger of the sea."

Her plans now are to write a book about the voyage and do some more sailing, but not another solo voyage.

"I wouldn't do it again, not by myself," said Miss Aebi, whose name is pronounced "abbey."

A traditional harbor welcome for a hero was laid on — a fireboat with four nozzles spraying preceded the Varuna and boat horns blared as her vessel, with sails furled, landed between the museum's two 19th-century cargo sailing ships.

Miss Aebi, in a yellow slicker and white wool cap, embraced her boyfriend, whom she met at one of her Pacific Ocean stops, then was reunited on the dock with her father, Ernst, a Swiss-born artist, and two sisters and a brother.

Her mother, Sabine, died of cancer midway through the voyage and Miss Aebi flew back to her home in New York for a week.

Her greatest peril may have been in a Mediterranean storm that blew up when she was exhausted, she said.

"It was howling and lightning — I never saw lightning like that before. It was just like a strobe light going all around me. I took down the sails and waited. I went to sleep and I woke up and the boat had gone over. ... It was filled with water and everything in the cockpit was gone — jerrycans and sails and tools and all sorts of important things.

"I panicked for a little while and I pulled an emergency beacon, but then I saw I could bail it out."

After the storm, her father flew to meet her with new equipment, one of four times he saw her during the journey.

Changes in trucking laws will hit pickups, trailers

(Editor's Note: This article was taken from a story which was published in the Oct. 29 issue of the "Livestock Weekly.")

AUSTIN--A rancher hauling a load of calves or lambs to the auction will soon face a critical choice in Texas: submit to all the record keeping, medical and equipment regulations that apply to a professional trucker and his Peterbilt, or hire a trucker to do the hauling.

Imposed by two bills passed during the last Texas legislative session, the new rules will apply to any vehicle with a total loaded weight of 10,000 pounds or more when used for a commercial purpose. A ¾-ton pickup weighing 4,200 pounds, pulling a gooseneck at 3,500 pounds, has only 2,300 pounds of margin for a load before it hits the 10,000 pound trigger. That amounts to fewer than six 400-pound calves.

Once a combined vehicle and load reach the 10,000 pound threshhold, they and their driver would be treated under the law just as any 18-wheeler and professional long-haul trucker. The vehicle must be registered with the Texas Railroad Commission and carry a minimum of $500,000 in liability insurance, its lighting and braking systems must meet federal trucking standards, and other equipment standards such as inspections, fire protection, heating, fuel and speedometer accurancy would be imposed.

Drivers would be subject to mandatory physical examinations, state certification, 24-hour log books, and specific regulation of their on and off-road behavior. Owners of the subject vehicles would be forced to keep detailed records of maintenance and inspections, and the Texas Department of Public Safety would be empowered to search, without warrant, or advance notice, any property of such a vehicle owner.

The vehicle registration provision was part of Senate Bill 595, known commonly, though perhaps erroneously, as the "trucking deregulation" bill. All the other restrictions and requirements stem from House Bill 908, a "trucking safety" bill which essentially adopts federal Department of Transportation rules. Most of the specifics themselves are found in the federal rules, which the law will require the DPS to enforce.

The changes will begin going into effect on Jan. 1, 1988. At that time, DPS will begin enforcing most equipment and maintenance rules. Logbook requirements will begin June 1, and medical and driver record keeping will be imposed beginning Jan. 1, 1989.

A scant few exemptions will apply. Drivers operating within 100 miles of their home base, for example, need not log their trips, but once they travel outside that radius they must log not only the specific trip which exceeds the zone, but also their activities for seven days prior to the long-distance trip. This log must be kept in the vehicle and up-to-date when outside the 100-mile radius.

Dough art classes set

Making dough art ornaments for holiday decorating will be the subject of Continuing Education classes scheduled at Western Texas College on Nov. 17 and Nov. 24.

Students will make at least four ornaments to take home and will receive patterns and instructions for 15 ornaments to be made at home. They may choose which ornaments thay make in class and the ornaments will be complete when they leave class except for the baking which is to be done at home.

Instruction will include how to mix the dough, how to add dry tempera to dough for color, how to shape dough for leaves and hair and other basic techniques.

Martha Gist will be the instructor for the classes. Each session will meet from 6:30-9:30 p.m.

Fees will be $20 per person and this includes all the supplies to be used. Students are to bring a cookie sheet, an old towel for cleaning and a large mixing bowl.

To pre-register call 573-8511, ext. 240.

Super collider contest fierce

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Texas is a tough competitor for the multibillion-dollar "super collider" project, but that enthusiasm is matched across the country, Deputy Energy Secretary William Martin said Friday.

Because of the high stakes, federal officials will rely on a strict set of criteria to keep the bidding fair, Martin told supporters of a North Texas site.

"The enthusiasm that you have in this room today, I can guarantee you is shared by many other communities across America," he said, speaking to the annual meeting of the North Texas Commission, an organization of several cities that is pushing the area's super collider bid.

In addition to the site south of Dallas, Texas has submitted a site near Amarillo in the national competition for the lucrative atom-smasher.

"I know you're tough competitors, but let me tell you the competition is tough," Martin said. "But it's going to be fair. It's going to be equitable. There is a very specific set of criteria on which the different sites will be evaluated."

NTC chairman Buddy Langley praised Tuesday's vote approving an amendment that authorizes the sale of $500 million in general obligation bonds to prepare the site for the super collider, should the state win.

The Legislature earlier approved $500 million in revenue bonds for the project, so the state is offering a $1 billion incentive package to the federal government.

"We took a step on Tuesday with the 2-to-1 passage of Proposition 19 which should clearly demonstrate to federal decision makers that Texans have the will and the resolve to work and pay for what they want," Langley said.

Last summer, Congress barred the Department of Energy from considering offers of financial aid in evaluating site proposals. However, several states have invested more than $1 million in the site applications.

Dallas Mayor Annette Strauss stressed the importance of cooperation.

"Our financial fortunes are irrevocably tied together and in the pursuit of these fortunes freelancing as cities is just not going to work," she said.

The National Academy of Sciences and Engineering is now looking over 36 qualified super collider sites, Martin said. A list of best qualified sites will be submitted in January 1988 and the Department of Energy will designate a preferred site in 1988.

St. Elizabeth's schedules upcoming parish mission

St. Elizabeth Catholic Church will sponsor a parish mission Nov. 14-19. Fr. Joseph Wyss, O. P. will be the guest priest. He will officiate at the regular 6 p.m. Mass on Saturday and the 10:30 a.m. Mass on Sunday morning.

In addition, the parish mission will begin Monday night at 7 p.m. with the recitation of the rosary and conclude Thursday night. Mass and sermon will follow the roasary each night. Confessions will follow the evening service on Monday through Wednesday nights, but there will be no confessions heard on Thursday evening.

On Saturday and Sunday, at the beginning of the mission, Fr. Wyss will preach the introductory sermon, "Good News," at both parish Masses.

The life of the parish is centered in the real living presence of Jesus in the Eucharist. The channels of dynamic parish life are the sacraments of the Eucharist, of Reconcillation, and of Matrimony.

The theme for the parish renewal program is "Total Life in Jesus Christ." Topics for each sermon are as follows:

—Sunday: What is this thing called love?

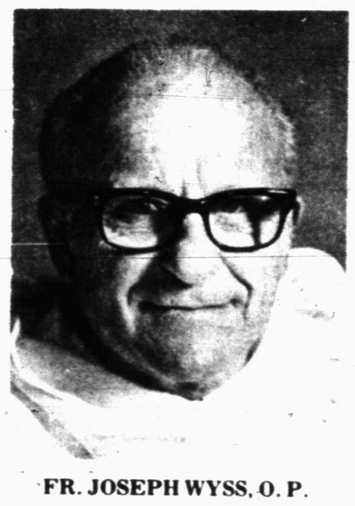

—Monday: How can God be good when he allows so much misery?

—Tuesday: Love means forgiveness (sacrament of reconcillation).

—Wednesday: Three to get married--God, bride and groom.

—Thursday: Jesus, living in our midst (sacrament of Eucharist).

Fr. Wyss is a Southern Dominican priest.

FR. JOSEPH WYSS, O. P.

First Assembly of God announces new pastor

The Rev. Cary G. Moore is the new pastor at the First Assembly of God Church in Snyder. Previously he had pastored in Slaton and Oklahoma.

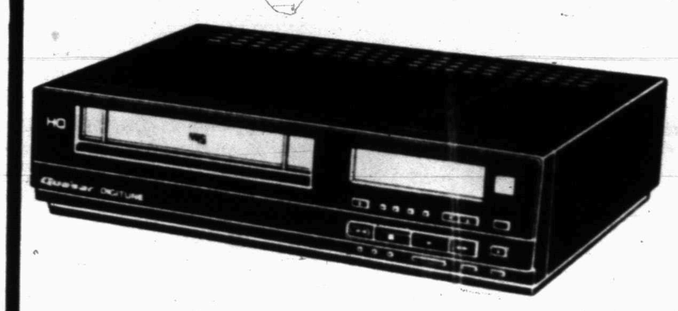

He and his wife, Janice, have one child, a daughter, Nicole. Before entering the pastoral ministry, the Moores were involved in the music ministry for six years.

Moore holds an associate of arts degree with a Christian ministry major.

"The whole Biblical concept of being a pastor is simply caring for people the way a shepherd cares for his sheep, being there to lead, feed and comfort them," Moore said. "What will fill the longing in people, both in Snyder and around the world, is a meaningful relationship with Jesus Christ and a fellowship of people who really care. Our goal for First Assembly is to provide that for the people of this town."

Scurry County Folks...

By Shirley A. Gorman

Raising wild cats can be both fun and rewarding, but it can also be frustrating and expensive as well as time consuming. In some instances there can also be an element of danger involved. This week's Scurry County Folks profiles three families who have taken on the challenge of raising and living with wildcats.

Since Katta, a female bobcat, came to live with Stanley and Marie Clark 1½ years ago, they have had more than their share of expenses and headaches. But the pleasure far outweighs the pain, and everyone in the family, including daughter, Stormy, who will be four in December, say they could not give her up.

Two other families in Snyder also keep exotic cats. Mark and Jeana Duke also have a bobcat named Billy Bob, one of Katta's littermates, and Charlie and Deana Cooper currently have both a bobcat appropriately named Bobbie and a cougar or mountain lion aptly named Ambush that they have raised since they were cubs.

Katta, which means girl cat in Norwegian, was two days old when she came to live with the Clarks. A man at Dunn had found three baby bobcat cubs. Mark Duke came into possession of one and offered the other to Clark.

The third member of the litter ended up with a Lubbock family and made the news one day when it got out and wandered into a stranger's house.

"Stanley brought Katta home to me and said she was my Mother's Day gift," Mrs. Clark laughed. "I had raised house cats before but never a wild cat."

Clark had lived with bobcats before, but he had never tried raising one Katta's age. She was 10 days old before she could open her eyes.

The first days were precarious as they fed Katta a special formula for orphaned kittens which they obtained from their veterinarian.

When Katta was two months old, they had her declawed. This was two months sooner than recommended, but the family wanted to take the newborn along on a car trip to Minnesota.

They said they opted to take her to help her adjust to living with a human family.

Katta was defanged at age 10 months. Between Clark, a dentist and a veterinarian, they suceeded in taking turns filing her fangs off rather than pulling them out.

Clark said Katta can be hard to handle at times and he has no doubt that she would have hurt one of them if she were still an intact cat. That is why they do not recommend that just anyone get a wild cat. The responsibility can be tremendous.

She weighs about 25 pounds today.

The Clarks say Katta can go tearing through the house at breakneck speeds. They note she has accidentally knocked them down because she is so big, quick and powerful.

Katta has also done her share of damage to the home by getting into things and breaking things. She has her own room and is locked in at night because she does not sleep the same hours as the family does. They note her purring is so loud, it keeps them awake.

Katta also has figured out how to open doors so they put a sewing machine in front of the door to her room at night to keep her from getting out.

Mrs. Clark said Katta is very smart and she loves to play. Clark said it is like living with a "very smart dog."

Katta uses a litter box just like a regular house cat.

When she thinks it is playtime she has a special sound she likes to make. One game involves waiting for a member of the family to come by.

"She is very patient," Clark said. "She can wait for a long time."

"We keep a bell on her collar just so she can't sneak up on us," Mrs. Clark said. "She likes the element of surprise."

Katta loves to chase and be chased. And she loves to stalk members of the family. She loves to bump heads with them and she can get aggressive when she wants to be.

Katta also has a doll which she grew up with. As a cub she snuggled with it, but today it is rather chewed up from all her attention.

"Katta also knows to come into the kitchen and create a disturbance whenever she is hungry or thirsty," Mrs. Clark explained. "Usually she eats three or four times a day, depending on how active she is."

Mrs. Clark said when Katta stands on her hind legs, her head reaches the kitchen cabinet. When she cooks, she said Katta rests her chin on the counter and watches her every move.

"How many people have to put up with a bobcat watching them cook?" she laughed.

Today, Katta eats mainly raw chicken wings, but as a cub the Clarks tried to feed her regular cat food. At that time, Katta was chewing up everything in their home.

"We thought she might be doing that because of a deficiency," Clark said, "So we added raw meat and bone to her diet. It stopped a lot of the chewing."

They say the cat is almost fearless. One exception is the vacuum cleaner which sends her scurrying under the bed.

Katta is definitely Mrs. Clark's cat since she is able to spend time with her during the day. "I helped form her personality," she explained. "Katta likes to find people in the family when they have been gone for awhile."

They have thought about breeding her, but are not sure if they want to raise any more bobcat cubs. Also, Mrs. Clark said they are not sure if becoming a mother would change Katta's personality and make her fiercely protective of her cubs.

Katta loves most people, Clark said, but sometimes she meets someone that she does not like.

"A bobcat is not meant to be caged or kept inside," Clark said. "But when Katta was offered to me I couldn't resist. I had thought that I never wanted another bobcat."

They expect Katta to live from 16-18 years and are committed to taking care of her for her natural life. Since she has been declawed and defanged, she could never survive in the wild.

Bobbie, Charlie and Deana Cooper's bobcat, was two years old in April. Ambush, the mountain lion, was a year old in May.

Bobbie came to the Coopers quite by accident. She and her litter mates were found wandering alone one day. No one ever knew what became of their mother, but Cooper speculated that she had either gotten killed or trapped.

Bobbie was brought to the Coopers and they decided to take her in. At that time, their mother Siamese cat was nursing four kittens. Cooper removed them and gave her the bobcat cub instead.

"She accepted Bobbie and raised her as her own kitten," Cooper explained.

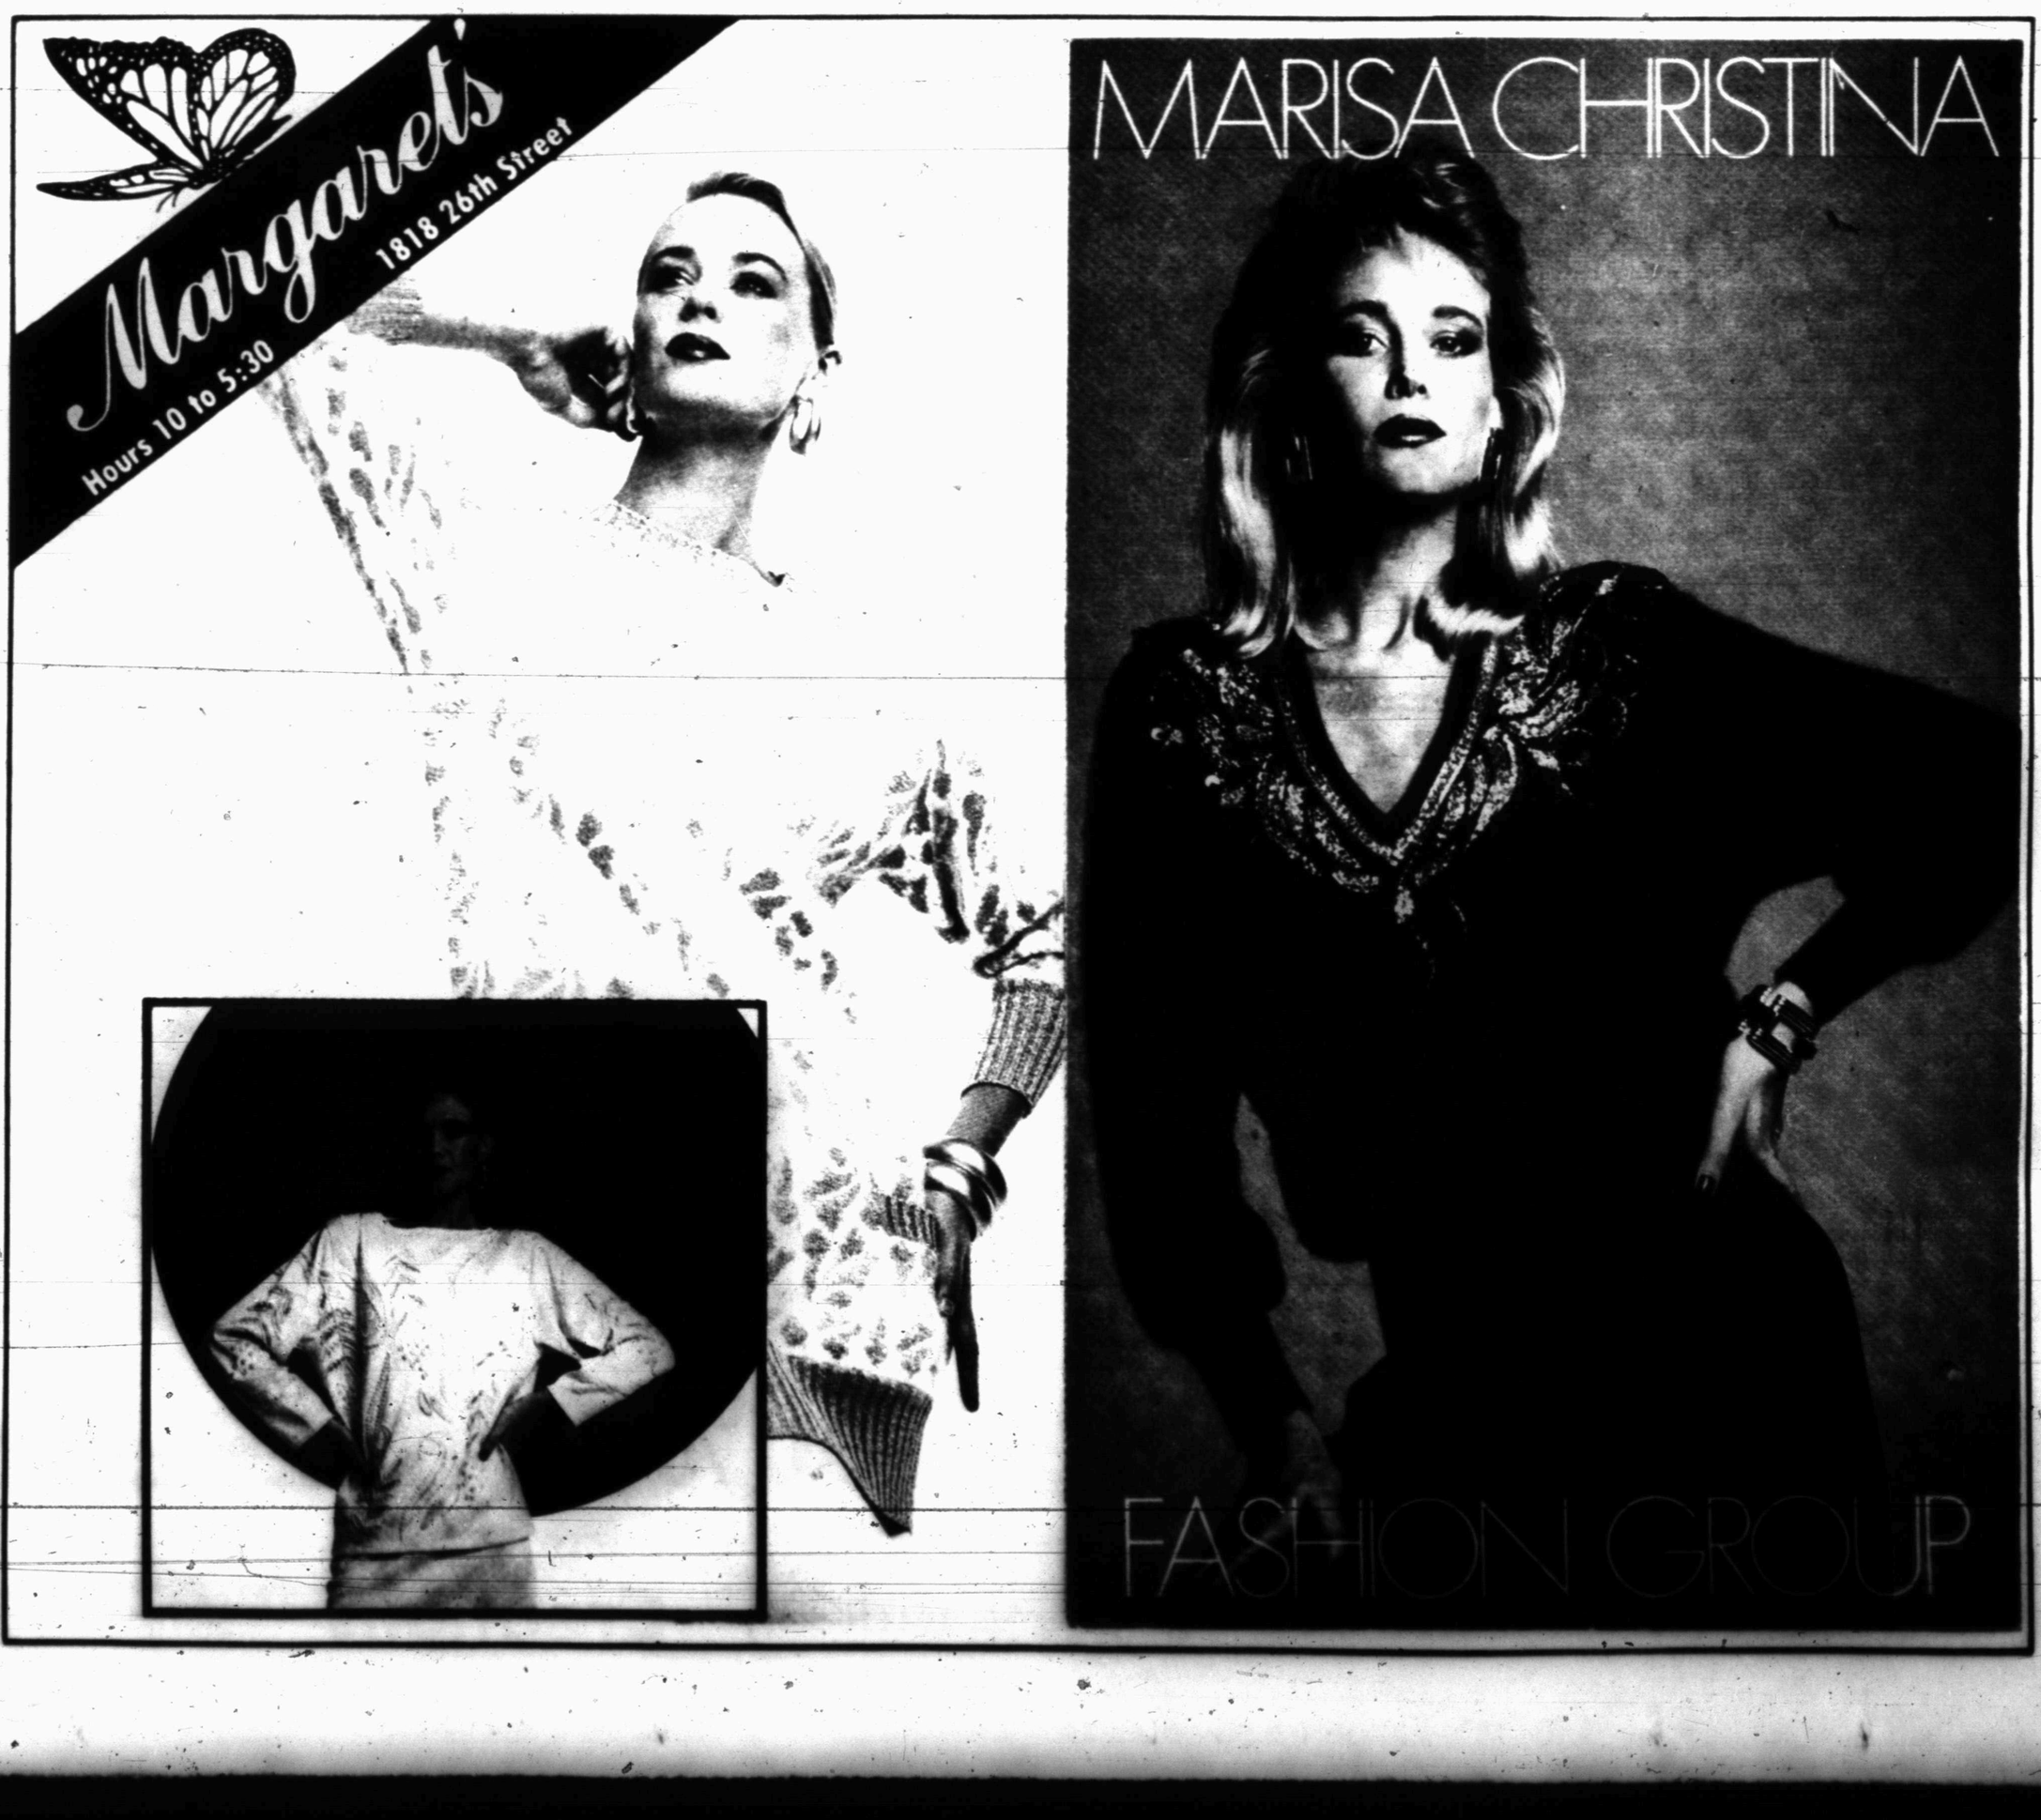

Since Bobbie had been raised partially by her mother, Cooper said she already had been influenced against people. She knows Cooper very well and will even get into his lap, but no other human is afforded that privilege

Happiness, triumphs, problems of wild cat

BOBBIE--This bobcat named Bobbie is owned by Charlie Cooper. She was born in the wild and he and his family raised her from a young kitten after she was orphaned. Bobbie lived in the Cooper home at one time but now lives in a special cage. (SDN Staff Photo) he said.

Ambush was purchased from a man in Aspermont who sells exotic cats. She was born in Colorado, either the third or fourth generation in captivity.

The cougar is about 50 pounds in weight and is about four feet long, including her tail. She was aptly named Ambush because as a cub she liked to wait in hiding for Jason, Cooper's son, and when he came along she would jump out at him. He always yelled "ambush" and the name has stuck ever since.

At one time, both Bobbie and Ambush lived at the Cooper residence and each was trained to use the litter box. Ambush pretty much had the run of the home, but now both live in cages which are kept at Cooper Appliance.

As a cub, Cooper said Ambush was cute and they didn't mind her living with them, but as she grew older she became harder to handle.

One day, the cat found her way into the family freezer, devouring the meat stored inside.

She also had an affinity for chewing things and went around chewing up everything she could get her mouth on. That habit later prompted an operation to remove the things she had been eating. X-rays taken by the veterinarian showed numerous jean buttons inside her stomach.

While Ambush was recuperating from surgery, The Coopers' grandchildren were in the home one day and inadvertently let the cat out. She began getting rough with them and succeeded in pinning one of the children. Even though she did not hurt the child, Cooper said his wife decided enough was enough. It was time for Ambush to find another place to live.

Ambush has been declawed and at one time her fangs had been sawed off. They have since grown back, however. Cooper said he may defang her again, especially if she continues to be rambunctious. After they are cut off the second time they will not grow back, he said.

Bobbie still has her fangs and back claws, but her front claws have been removed.

Both cats subsist on a diet of raw meat and bone, plus they are given vitamin and calcium supplements. Cooper said the proper feeding of a wild cat is very important because they can develop serious deficiencies. Ambush eats either a brisket or roast every day. She is usually fed one meal a day.

Ambush likes to chase dogs and considers it great fun. However, according to Cooper, the family dog does not care for it.

Cooper said he receives lots of visitors who are fascinated with his two cats and many express the desire to own one, but he said wild cat ownership is not for everyone and in general he tries to discourage people from going out and "buying a cute wild kitten or cub."

"Very soon that cute cub begins to grow up and then the trouble starts. Many times people end up abusing and abandoning the animals because they are not prepared to take care of them."

He also does not recommend keeping wild cats around children because he said it is important that the person who has the cat be big enough and strong enough to make the cat behave itself. In addition, since children are small they look like prey to the big cats.

Cooper takes wild cat pet ownership very seriously. He said he recognizes that once he declawed and defanged his cats he was making a life time commitment to caring for them.

Cooper said that it is very hard to place a full grown wild cat. If they have been defanged, zoos won't take them because the animal will have no way to defend itself against the other zoo animals.

Keeping big wild cats is not new to Cooper since he was raised on a ranch in the Big Bend Park area. Throughout his life he has raised various wild animals from bobcats and mountain lions to wolves, coyotes and chicken hawks, just to name a few.

Cooper said wild cats are no different from house cats as far as their habits go, but he said the main difference is that they are bigger and more powerful animals.

He said his cats have never really hurt anyone but he admits that they have the capability to do so. That is why he stresses that not everyone should go out and purchase a wild cub on a "whim."

As a "just in case" recommendation, Cooper said if an individual gets their hand caught in a wild cat's mouth, instead of trying to pull the hand out, they should force the hand down the animal's throat thereby causing it to gag and release the hand.

Cooper also said his cats are good weather barometers. Since they have already begun to put on thicker coats of fur, he expects a long, cold winter.

Bobbie and Ambush may he hard to manage at times and expensive to feed and maintain, but Cooper and his family have no plans to part with them.

Mark and Jeana Duke acquired Billy Bob, their male bobcat, a year ago last May--Mother's Day to be exact. Duke's cousin found three bobcat kittens in a barn in Dunn.

Stanley Clark got one of the females and the other female went to live with a cousin in Lubbock. However, that person was forced to give the animal away after it got out and caused a commotion in the neighborhood. Since he was going to have to carry $300,000 worth of liability insurance after that, Mrs. Duke said he decided to part with the animal instead.

Billy Bob was about a day old when the Dukes took him home with them. Since they had no experience with raising wild cats, they relied on Clark and Mrs. Duke's father, Max von Roeder, who had raised one while he was growing up.

They bottle fed him formula for about two weeks. Then he nursed on a friend's mother cat for about a month.

For solid food, Billy Bob was started on turkey necks and now eats about one pound of them a day. He also eats chicken and wild game.

When Billy Bob eats a quail or dove, he eats everything, including the feathers, Duke said.

Billy Bob was kept in the Duke home for the first few weeks of his life, but they later had a special cage, 6 feet by 8 feet, built. While living in the Duke home, they said Billy Bob had a penchant for eating personal items, anything with the human scent on it.

The Dukes have a baby girl and large dog and all get along with the bobcat. However, they are never left alone without supervision. Billy Bob was defanged and declawed at one year of age, but he still has his back claws.

"Billy Bob thinks he is in charge. The dog knows better but he does not pursue it," Duke said.

Duke said having Billy Bob is enjoyable but he admits that the still growing animal can be hard to manage. "He likes affection but he wants it on his terms," Duke explained.

"He is an independent character and I think if I had more time to spend with him he would be easier to manage."

Billy Bob liked to sneak up and pounce on people while he lived inside and they admit that they miss not having him do that since the cage became his permanent home.

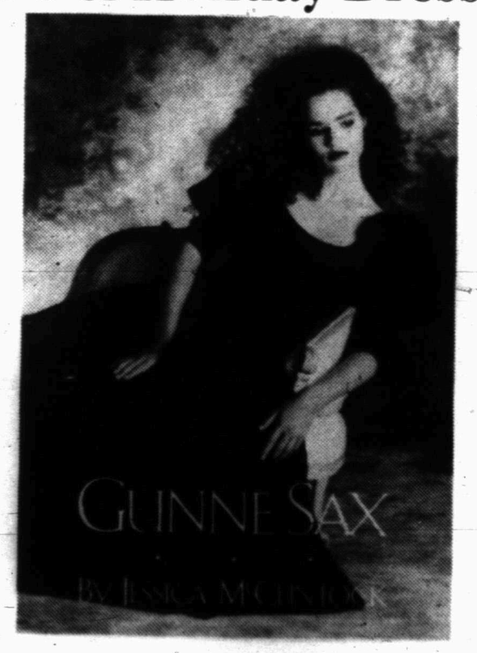

Duke said Billy Bob has never caused a problem, but he said they never lose sight of the fact that he is a wild animal and not a domesticated cat. "We're cautious with him because we THREESOME--Mark and Jeana Duke and their bobcat, Billy Bob, make a happy threesome in this photo. The Dukes have raised the cat since he was a day old. HIGH JUMPER--Katta loves to play this very special game with Marie Clark. Marie holds a feather high off the floor and Katta jumps as high as she can to retrieve it. have to be," Duke said.

Mrs. Duke says she regrets that Billy Bob has to be caged all the time. She doesn't think wild cats are meant to live like that, but Duke said that given the circumstances of how Billy Bob came to live with them, he thinks he is doing okay. The alternative all those months ago was certain death.

Without hesitation, Duke said he would definitely take Billy Bob in if he had it to do over again.

Parents' actions reflect memories of their childhood

WASHINGTON (AP) — When people have good memories or feelings about their childhood they try to repeat the experience for their own children, says Vivian Boul, director of The Catholic University of America's Center for Child Services.

"If they have had negative nurturing experiences, parents will try to raise their children differently. People move toward pleasure and avoid pain — as Freud maintained," she explains.

She has found that parents who were read to as children will enjoy reading to their children and those who remember taking leisurely walks with their parents will enjoy doing the same with their own children on weekends.

"Good times are not related to money, but are simple, ordinary shared experiences," she points out.

Mrs. Boul observes that parents who received harsh unjustified punishment as children often maintain they will not do the same to their children.

"People who were not able to negotiate with their parents, or whose parents did not appreciate their ideas, vow not to be that way as parents," she says.

She points out that today it may not be the mother, but rather the stepparent or parent with primary child-rearing responsibility, who tries to repeat or recreate the good memories and the past joys experienced as children.

"When Benjamin Spock wrote his first child care book, he said mothers needed to stay home and raise their children," she says. "Today, with increased numbers of working mothers, he's readjusted his thinking."

Working "moms" shouldn't feel guilty if they can't duplicate the full-time mothering their own mothers may have provided, she suggests.

"Time may be shorter, but the essential ingredients in loving relationships don't change with the times. There's sufficient evidence that quality, not quantity, of mothering is what counts," Mrs. Boul says.

She defines quality as times when parent and child enjoy each other and take pleasure in the give and take.

"In a sense the giving is one-sided — it's the parent's responsibility. There should be no strings attached, but unqualified unselfish giving in meeting the child's needs."

McCormick, Wells...

Couple joined in afternoon ceremony

Lori Ann McCormick and Brent Kim Wells were united in marriage at 4 p.m. Oct. 10 at the Eastside Church of Christ. Officiating the double-ring ceremony was Gene Polvado, minister of the Abell St. Church of Christ of Wharton. He is a friend of the groom.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Billy A. McCormick and Mr. and Mrs. Harley C. Wells of Plainview. Grandparents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Claude E. McCormick Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. John T. Gee.

A lighted stained glass window panel flanked on each side by 15-branch rainbow brass candelabra holding white tapers decorated with greenery and baby's breath formed the background for the ceremony.

Completing the decorations were tall silk trees in brass on each side of the candelabra. Seven-angle lights below the stained glass windows accented greenery and baby's breath. The center isle was marked by red bows with greenery and baby's breath.

Chrystal Godair of Odessa, niece of the bride, served as candlelighter.

Guests were registerd by Sherri Potter of Austin and Kathy Wells of Canyon, sisters of the groom. The registry table was covered in a floor-length cloth of white eyelet fashioned by Mrs. Arvis Carey. An arrangement of red anthurium, white roses, miniature red carnations and baby's breath in a silver epergne centered the table.

Completing the registry table were a wedding invitation framed in silver, programs tied with red satin ribbon on a silver tray and the bride's book.

Acappella music was provided by a choral group of friends composed of Susan Clark, Paula Bowden, Sue Parham, Carol Lewis, Nelda Brooks, Sue Lyon, Melanie Smith and Bonnie Naple of Waco. Also singing were Bill Lyon, Terry Bowden, Kevin Tate, Arlie Eicke, Randy Lyon, J.B. Tate, Robert Neblett and Mark Lyon of Abilene.

Selections chosen for the occasion were "This Is the Day," "Sweet, Sweet Spirit," "To Me," "You and I," and "He Has Chosen You for Me." Also sung were "I've Waited a Lifetime," "English Wedding Hymn," "Alleluia," "Sometimes" and "Father Hear the Prayer We Offer." "Joyful, Joyful, We Adore Thee" and "May the Good Lord Bless and Keep You" were used in the recessional.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a wedding gown designed by Zurc for the Princess Collection. Created of white bridal satin, the gown was embellished in French Alencon lace. The sweetheart neckline was of scalloped lace and led to a gently puffed satin and tulle wrist-length sleeve.

The fitted bodice fell to a basque-point waistline and held a straight slipper-length skirt accented with Alencon lace appliques. The detachable train of satin ruffles cascaded into chapel-length. The sheer back bodice closed with satin-covered buttons.

To compliment the gown, the bride chose a veil designed by T&G Bridals. The wreath was of pearls on filament and crystals on wire wrapped with white satin. The horsehair edge created a flowing ruffle effect on the one layer of elbow-length illusion. The curling poof in the back added height to the headpiece.

The bride carried a cascade arrangement of white roses, gardenias, stephanotis, springeria fern and baby's breath trailed by white picot ribbon tied in love knots.

In keeping with tradition, something old was a bracelet worn by the bride's maternal grandmother, her mother and both sisters at their weddings. Something new was the gown and something borrowed was pearl earrings belonging to the bride's sister. Something blue was a garter from England given as a gift to the bride by Louise Stone of Plainview.

Serving as matrons of honor were the bride's sisters, Terry Godair of Odessa and Marie Dennis of Snyder. Bridesmaids were Cindy McCormick of Boston, Mass. and Judy Parish of Tallahassee, Fla., cousins of the bride. Also serving were Belinda Fagin of Lafayette, La. and Valerie Gammon of Austin.

The attendants wore red satin gowns designed by Jordan. The scooped necklines led to puffed sleeves. Each back was V shaped and adorned with a bow at the waist. The tea-length dipped to a longer length in the back. Red satin shoes accented the attire.

Each attendant carried a free design hand bouquet of white anthurium, spider mums, baby's breath and mixed greenery.

The candlelighter's dress was fashioned like the attendants'. She wore a wrist corsage of miniature red carnations and baby's breath.

Jodi Dennis, niece of the bride, and Jennie Martin of Tyler, cousin of the groom, served as flower girls. They wore identical dresses of red satin with heart-shaped necklines, puff sleeves, full tea-length skirts tied with a bow sash in back. They each carried a white wicker basket adorned with a red lace bow, long streamers and filled with red carnation petals.

Bert Wall of Plainview and Tim Leslie of Lubbock served as best men. Groomsmen were Donny Bowen of Dallas, Robert St. Clair of Lubbock, Steve Cargil of Uvalde and Johnny Davis of Edmond, Okla. Ushers were Steve Brigante and Chuck Locke, both of Dallas.

The groom was attired in a black full-dress tailcoat with white vest and tie. His boutonniere was a white rose, stephanotis and greenery. The attendants wore black tuxedos with white shirts and black ties. Their boutonnieres were miniature red carnations.

The ring bearers were Jared Dennis, nephew of the bride, and Jacob Martin of Tyler, cousin of the groom. They wore black tuxedos with red boutonnieres and carried white pillows fashioned for the bride by Belinda Fagin and Janet Martin.

Following the ceremony, the couple was carried in a horse-drawn surrey with a driver attired in a full-dress tuxedo to the reception held at Willow Park Inn.

Tables were covered in red cloths and were decorated with a bouquet of a white spider mum, baby's breath and springeria fern.

The bride's table was covered in a white net cloth over a floor-length white felt underskirt. The cloth was hand-appliqued with sequined and beaded love birds, wedding bells and flowers. Satin streamers entwined the design on the cloth. The cloth was loaned to the bride by her cousin, Marilyn Shaw of Austin, who used it at her own wedding 14 years ago. The cloth was designed and created by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Lucille Miller of Petersburg.

The table was centered with a silver egergne holding an arrangement of white roses, red anthurium, miniature red carnations, baby's breath, mixed greenery and eucalyptus. Red punch was served from a crystal punch bowl. Red hearts and white bell mints and toasted pecans were served from silver appointments.

The three-tiered wedding cake was white with zig-zag scallops around each tier. Inverted shells filled the scallops with a rose bud accenting the top of each scallop. Between the second and third tier and on the top of the cake were sugar bells and a bouquet of icing roses. Donna Wilson baked and decorated the cake.

Lisa Gee of Houston, cousin of the bride, Mary Tom Hoover of Dallas and Carla Hunley served.

The groom's table was covered with a round floor-length cloth of woodprint Hoffman Calif. fabric of red with gold inlay woodblock print. A brass vase with eucalyptus and mixed greenery centered the table. Guests were served coffee from a brass coffee service. A chocolate cake and chocolate candy kisses completed the table.

Donna Chesser and Sandy Pollard served.

A table covered in red held various catered finger foods.

A flowing punch fountain was held on a round table covered in white crochet from India. Spider mums and red carnations adorned the top of the fountain.

The pool was decorated with a large heart arrangement of red anthurium, spider mums and mixed greenery.

Following a honeymoon trip to Las Hadas Resort in Manzinillo, Mexico, the couple is at home in Dallas.

The bride was graduated from Snyder High School and Abilene Christian University with a bachelor of business degree in marketing. She was a member of Ko-Jo-Kai Social Club. She is a sales assistant for Brown Brothers, Harriman and Company in Dallas.

The groom is a graduate of Plainview High School, attended Lubbock Christian College and graduated with a bachelor of science degree in education from Abilene Christian University where he was a member of Sub-T Social Club. He is a gas contract administrator for TXO Production Corporation in Dallas.

ASSESSMENT SET FOR 1987 CROP

The Scurry County Cotton Producer Board met to determine the assessment for the 1987 cotton crop. The assessment was set for one-half cent per pound.

The Scurry County Cotton Producer Board was established by the 1984 cotton referendum. The referendum was determined by the vote of all cotton producers in Scurry County, excluding the Fluvanna area. The referendum allows producers to assess themselves and use the funds to scout and control cotton insects, and to conduct research and educational programs. The referendum was sponsored by the Scurry County Producers Association. The primary objective of the program is to raise the funds needed to combat the cotton boll weevil. The funds can also be used in the other areas affecting cotton production in Scurry County.

Due to poor yields in Scurry County for the past few years, the new cotton assessment program has not collected near what was projected. The farmers in Scurry County have only paid an average of 80¢ per acre for the past three years ($2.50 total for three years) and this is only for the farmers that had a harvestable crop. The funds collected have been used for a scouting program and educational activities. A survey cotton insect scouting program is conducted in Scurry County. The purpose of a survey program is to provide information on a general basis concerning insect populations. To gather this information, individual fields are scouted across the area. Some fields are scouted every year for historical purposes while others are rotated.

In 1987 approximately 3500 acres were scouted. The scouting program is supervised by Deanna Myers, the local County Entomologist.

Boll weevil pheromone trap monitoring was also conducted during 1987. Trap catches are above the past several years, and as high as 1983. A cold, dry winter would be helpful in reducing the number of weevils emerging next spring. Area producers benefited from the harsh winter of 1983-84 which created a high mortality rate in the weevil population.

In general the 1987 season had very high insect numbers. Some of the other pests included fleahoppers, bollworms, budworms, and aphids.

The spray equipment purchased by the cotton board has been used for research in thrip and fleahopper control and field bindweed demonstrations.

The current scouting program and the resource people depend upon the money collected from the assessment. Without the program, farmers would not have available the information they currently depend upon for insect control.

If sufficient funds are accumulated with the assessment, then a county-wide fall diapause spray program may be implemented. The diapause spray program was used in 1977-79 to control the boll weevil numbers.

FOOD LABELS AND FOOD SAFETY

Most products in food stores have dates and handling directions on them, even though manufacturers are not required to put this information on packaging.

The date stamped on product packages can indicate produce freshness and serve as a guide to safe storage time, if you know how to use it.

The "sell-by" date is the last day the product should be sold, the "use-by" date indicates how long the product will retain top eating quality after purchase, and the "expiration date" tells the last day the food should be eaten or used.

Reading handling directions can also help you make sure food remains safe to eat.

All perishable products must give handling instructions, such as "keep frozen" or "keep refrigerated." Some meat and poultry products may be labeled "ready-to-eat" or "fully cooked" which means no further cooking is necessary.

Check the labels of aseptically packaged products, since many will require refrigeration after opening.

Although some product labels carry directions on how long and at what temperature to cook a product, the directions are not required or verified by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

When cooking instructions are not included on the label or you have some doubts about them, the safest course is to cook the product thoroughly.

REMARRIED COUPLES NEED FINANCIAL PLAN

A budget and spending plan can benefit any family, but for remarrieds it may be critical.

Finances, children and child-rearing have been identified by researchers as the major problems in many remarriages, with finances often ranking the highest.

People entering a remarriage often have assets — and debts — to bring to the new marriage. When couples share this information prior to the wedding, it will make it easier to develop a financial plan.

Fluctuating income from child support can be a major strain on the new family's budget.

One recent study of remarried couples in Kentucky found that when child support was awarded, 36% either never received it, received it irregularly or regularly received it but not in the full amount.

A financial plan for remarrieds can involve saving ahead for large annual or semi-annual bills and unexpected expenses, so they won't be caught short by fluctuating income.

Like any family, remarried couples can also benefit from planned spending that enables them to meet bills, reduce debt and save for future goals.

A dramatic false-card

If you've read the Jacoby column the last couple of days, you may think that doctors of medicine make good declarers. In today's vintage deal, Dr. Llewellyn Lord of Baltimore demonstrated his skill as a defender, employing an unusual coup.

With the queen of [illegible] lead, the defenders quickly took the first three tricks against South's four-spade contract. West then played a club. Declarer won the ace and entered dummy with a diamond to play a spade. When he led dummy's spade two, Dr. Lord played the king. Now if you were South, what would you think? Are you surprised that declarer did in fact believe that West held 10-8-5-3 of spades originally? And so he confidently played back a low spade to dummy's nine. Dr. Lord produced the 10 for the setting trick.

For what it's worth, another K-10 doubleton of trumps came up in a world championship some 40 years later, with declarer in a seven-club contract. Since the A-Q doubleton of clubs was in the dummy and the K-10 was in the pocket, the ambitious contract made. But if the defender had not despaired when dummy came down and had instead remembered the play made by Dr. Lord, there might well have been a different winning team.

WOMAN IN THE MISTS By Farley Mowat

Deep in Central Africa live some of the rarest, most intriguing animals on earth, the mountain gorillas. And the extraordinary American woman who pursued her dreams into the very heart of Africa to study them was Dian Fossey. "Woman in the Mists" is her story. Written by Canada's most distinguished and beloved author, Farley Mowat, it is the true story of a magnificent obsession, and of one special woman's empathy for the highly intelligent mammal that is one of the closest primate relatives of man. A book of singular importance for everyone who shares a concern for the vanishing creatures of our planet.

Expert says children are more ready for first days of school

CINCINNATI (AP) — The time has passed when children, accustomed to spending most of their early years at home with parents, cry profusely in their first days at school, a child development specialist says.

Today's children are more socialized and accustomed to outside influences because of television, preschool instruction and play groups that some parents place their offspring in as early as 18 months, says Earladeen Badger.

"I disagree with the concept that kids are anxious about going to school today. I think they're excited," she said. "What we find now is nary a tear as kids go into kindergarten. There may be some apprehension ... but this is just another school to go to.

"We're finding that in most schools in the United States, kindergartens are teaching school skills like reading and writing. In the last 10 years, we're finding that children are socialized much earlier than they were before."

In previous years, when fewer women worked, young children who frequently spent most of their time at home found it harder to adjust to leaving the home for school classrooms, Ms. Badger said.

"Kids who went to school cried because, essentially, they were raised by the parents at home and did not have any other separating influences," she said. "Kids aren't raised in the back yard any more. Now it all goes on outside the home. So school is another place. It's no big deal."

Ms. Badger, a developmental psychologist at the University of Cincinnati Medical Center and Children's Hospital Medical Center, has been devising child development programs for parents since 1966.

Before that, Ms. Badger, who has three children of her own, spent nine years as a probation officer in the San Francisco area.

Children's "cognitive abilities" are already in place at age 4, earlier than the average of years ago, she said. She includes among these skills understanding numbers and amounts, and the ability to identify and classify people, animals and things in categories.

These abilities include thinking in abstract concepts and being able to assign words to one's experiences.

The increased influence of television plays a role in earlier development of the young, Ms. Badger said. She also credits neighborhood play groups, which expose toddlers to other children, and preschool programs that offer a variety of subjects such as gymnastics, music and infant stimulation programs.

"The preschools now are pretty heady stuff. They're not just play-school any more."

Cook holiday chicken and stuffing in microwave

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Wouldn't old-fashioned chicken and stuffing taste good? With a full-size microwave oven (one that has 625 to 700 watts cooking power), you can cook it tonight in under an hour. For the juiciest, most tender and evenly cooked chicken, use 50 percent power (medium). If the wing tips and legs seem to cook too fast, shield them with foil. Check your owner's manual for instructions about using foil in your oven.

MICROWAVE CHICKEN WITH ORIENTAL STUFFING

4 slices whole wheat bread, cut into ½-inch cubes
3 slices bacon, cut up
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
¾ cup shredded carrot
½ cup bias-sliced green onion
½ of an 8-ounce can (½ cup) sliced water chestnuts, drained and chopped
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon dry sherry
1 tablespoon cooking oil
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
⅛ teaspoon ground ginger
3 to 5 tablespoons chicken broth
2½ to 3 pound broiler-fryer chicken

For the stuffing, spread bread cubes in a 12- by 7½- by 2-inch microwave-safe baking dish. Microcook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) 4 minutes or until crisp, stirring after 2 minutes. Set aside.

In a 1½-quart microwave-safe casserole cook bacon, covered, on high 3 to 4 minutes or until crisp. Remove bacon and drain. Reserve drippings in casserole. Add mushrooms, carrot and onion to drippings. Cook, covered, 3 to 4 minutes or until vegetables are crisp-tender. Add bread, bacon and water chestnuts.

Combine soy, sherry, oil, garlic powder and ginger. Add 1 tablespoon of soy mixture and the chicken broth to bread mixture; toss to moisten. Cover bread mixture; set aside.

Rinse chicken; pat dry. Pull neck skin to back of bird; twist wing tips under. Tie legs to tail. Place chicken, breast side down, on a microwave-safe rack in the 12- by 7½- by 2-inch baking dish. Brush with some of soy mixture. Cover with waxed paper. Microcook on 50 percent power (medium) 10 minutes. Turn breast side up; brush with remaining soy mixture.

Cook, covered, on medium 22 to 27 minutes. Chicken is done when drumstick moves easily in its socket, juices run clear and no pink remains. Cover with foil; let stand 10 minutes before carving.

Microcook stuffing, covered, on high 2½ to 3 minutes. Serve with chicken. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

High-flying flowers sending cheer

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — People are sending a record number of flowers-by-wire and they are sending them for everyday occasions in addition to the traditional holidays, according to the Florists' Transworld Delivery Association.

"The most frequent occasions for sending flowers-by-wire, in order, are holidays, sympathy, illness and birthdays-anniversaries," says the FTD. "Another trend is that men are now getting, as well as sending, more flowers than ever before."

FTD says it posted a new high of more than $626 million in flowers-by-wire sales for its 1987 fiscal year, up 5 percent from the previous year.

Treatment of bladder spasm

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — About a year after prostate surgery, my bladder problems began. If I do not get to the bathroom as soon as I have the urge to urinate, my bladder will close off and I cannot void. Within five to 10 minutes, I get very severe pain and have to use a catheter. Urologists are no help. I also have diabetes and take blood pressure medicine.

DEAR READER — You seem to be describing bladder-outlet obstruction, a blockage of urine flow caused by muscle spasm. Prostate surgery often results in unavoidable nerve and tissue damage that can interfere with both urination and ejaculation. This can be made worse by diabetes-induced nerve malfunction and by certain medicines that are used for hypertension.

If your local urologists cannot help you, ask for a referral to urological specialists at a teaching center. You need cystoscopy and cystometrics, two related tests to examine bladder function and control. Perhaps special medicine — or alteration of the drugs you are currently taking — would solve this uncomfortable problem. In any case repeated self-catheterization should be a last resort; the procedure will eventually introduce bacteria into your bladder and give you a urinary infection.

DEAR DR. GOTT — In a previous column you said there was no connection between eczema and hormonal imbalance. You're the doctor, but I'm not sure you are correct in my case. I developed "housewife's eczema" after my first child was born. It resisted treatment, but disappeared when I went on birth-control pills. We moved a lot, and sometimes my prescription would run out. Like clockwork, the eczema returned until I started the pills again. There is a definite connection in my experience.

DEAR READER — OK. I won't argue with your analysis of your case. Although eczema is commonly associated with small residues of soap or detergent that stick to the skin and provoke an allergic reaction, the condition involves complex responses in the skin. In some people, hormones probably play a role. So does stress. My brother used to get fierce eczema from handling our housecat. I suppose that the most important consideration regarding eczema is: If you can discover the factors triggering your eczema and can avoid them, fine. Otherwise, remove your rings when bathing or washing dishes, thoroughly rinse your hands and use over-the-counter cortisone cream on the affected areas.

Yearly exam fails the test

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

The annual complete physical examination for healthy adults is a time-honored tradition, an expensive habit, a sacred cow in the medical profession.

It is probably obsolete.

For many years, adults and well children have been programmed to feel guilty if they are not examined yearly. This ritual was brought to its apotheosis by corporations that insisted on free annual testing for their higher management executives, as a white-collar "perk."

Some experts are claiming that the annual physical gives false assurances at best and false-information at worst. For example, lab tests may be in error, a normal cardiogram is not a valid guarantee against heart disease, batteries of blood tests provide practically no useful information, sophisticated tests produce few benefits when applied to large numbers of well adults.

As a result of the reassessment of the annual physical, primary-care doctors are now being encouraged to be more parsimonious. The emphasis today is on individualization, rather than cookbook medicine, so that each patient's needs can be met by a custom-made program, called Periodic Health Evaluation, or PHE.

Writing in "Patient Care," a medical journal for primary-care physicians, Dr. Paul Frame (assistant professor of family medicine at the University of Rochester Medical Center) and his colleagues summarized the appropriate basic testing for healthy adults without symptoms. Their observations may force practitioners and patients to change their priorities:

— Blood pressure: Hypertension, a treatable condition, is clearly associated with heart disease, stroke, visual ailments and kidney failure. Blood pressure determinations should be obtained in every adult and, if normal, monitored every two years for life.

— Obesity: Individuals whose body weight is more than twice ideal weight risk mortality up to 12 times that of the general population. People should be weighed every four years and must be encouraged to trim down if they are more than 50 percent over ideal weight.

— Cholesterol: High cholesterol is associated with coronary artery disease. Blood fats should be checked every four years. People with high levels or a family history of elevated cholesterol need dietary counseling (and, perhaps, medication) as well as more frequent follow-up and more meticulous analysis of blood-fat components.

— Tobacco: Cigarette smoking has been shown to be a risk factor in lung cancer, emphysema and coronary artery disease; it nearly doubles the risk of death from all causes. A smoking history should be obtained at 10-year intervals and patients must be actively discouraged from smoking. (In addition, my experience leads me to believe that alcohol and drug abuse are issues that should be dealt with as part of PHE screening).

— Breast cancer: Women should check their own breasts for lumps every month or two. This should be followed by breast examinations by doctors every two years. Mammograms are recommended every year for women over 50. Women who are anxious about breast cancer or who are at high risk (personal or family history of breast tumors), should be checked more frequently.

— Cervical cancer: Sexually active women should have annual Pap smears until menopause. Thereafter, the frequency can be reduced to every two or three years, depending on the woman's personal preference and associated risk factors.

— Testicular cancer: Adult males should learn self-examination and practice it monthly.

— Prostate cancer: Rectal examinations should be performed at one- or two-year intervals on all men over 50.

— Colorectal cancer: All patients over 40 should have annual tests for hidden blood in the stool. These occult blood tests are inexpensive and easy to perform.

— Immunizations: These should be reviewed and brought up to date.

— Heart disease, diabetes, glaucoma, stroke, osteoporosis and cancers other than those mentioned above (including malignancies of the lung, bladder or uterus): No practical screening methods exist for patients without symptoms.

The concept of the annual physical is being constantly revised. Although healthy adults do not need to be tested yearly, they should be examined at intervals by a doctor who knows them. At present, the following schedule seems appropriate for well adults: one exam in the 20s, one in the 30s, two in the 40s, every two to three years in the 50s, and annually thereafter.

Continued buildup of West Texas drilling said pledged

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Because of improved oil industry prospects, Exxon has ordered a step-up in its West Texas drilling activity, company officials say.

Exxon plans to drill 150 wells in the area before 1987 is over, with about three-fourths of that occurring in the last months of the year, outgoing Exxon president Randall Meyer told a gathering at Midland Petroleum Club.

The 150 wells represents about half of all domestic wells being drilling by New York-based Exxon in the United States this year, Meyer said Thursday.

Exxon expects the Permian Basin to continue to play a major role in the addition of reserves to the company and has designated almost $300 million in capital expenditures for 1988, he said.

Meyer said Exxon gradually is rebuilding its drilling program in the Permian Basin following the collapse of oil prices in 1986.

Exxon expects to increase its Permian Basin activity by 40 percent in 1988, to more than 200 wells, provided oil prices remain stable, he said. Most of the drilling activity again can be expected to occur in the last half of the year, he added.

Several Exxon officials from Houston, including Bill Stevens, who will succeed Meyer as president in January, accompanied Meyer to Midland.

Meyer said Exxon would continue to aggressively add reserves in the Permian Basin by exploration, development, enhanced oil projects and acquisitions.

He said Exxon USA has acquired over 300 million barrels of oil reserves since 1984 through acquisitions, with most of the barrels being purchased in the Midland division.

He said Exxon earmarked $200 million in capital expenditures for the two division offices in Midland this year and that a 40 percent increase to $280 million is possible for 1988.

Enhanced oil projects, "particularly carbon dioxide flooding, will play a major role in increasing that production even more," Stevens said.

Ansel Condray, vice president of production, said that an oil price in the "mid-20s" would probably be needed to get future tertiary projects off the drawing board. West Texas crude oil closed at $19 Thursday in New York.

He said he expects most of the projects to be kicked off in the 1990s, assuming oil prices continue upward.

Meyer said oil companies have not fallen too far behind in tertiary development over the past two years because although drilling was brought to a near standstill, research and planning continued.

Meyer said the most profound change to take place in the oil industry during his career has been the globalization of the oil business. "It used to be pretty much a Texas game, but no longer," he said.

In past years, Exxon has been one of the most active in drilling for deep gas in the Permian Basin, and the president of the world's largest oil company said that Exxon still has confidence in deep gas.

"In the long term, there's going to be a demand for all the hydrocarbons the free world can produce. We need to keep sight of the long term and not get blinded by the conditions of the near term," he said.

Racing enthusiasts prepare for opening of the track

WEATHERFORD, Texas (AP) — As soon as it became clear that pari-mutuel betting had been approved — not only statewide but for Parker County — the co-owners of Trinity Meadows Race Course began making plans.

Jimmy Bradley and Jack Johnson said they plan to apply for a permit as soon as possible and prepare the track for a large number of visitors expected to attend the racing events.

Because pari-mutuel passed at the state level Tuesday and local voters approved the option, large race tracks may be established near Houston, San Antonio and Dallas-Fort Worth, where the measure won overwhelming approval.

Race tracks in smaller counties — such as Parker County, just west of Fort Worth — that approved the local option also may have pari-mutuel betting, but will likely have shorter racing seasons.

A state racing commission, to be appointed by Gov. Bill Clements, will have to approve track permits in the counties that opted for betting.

"We'll immediately go apply for a pari-mutuel license for a Class 2 track," Bradley said. "We'll make general improvements like improve the grandstand, put in (betting) windows, improve the parking."

Bradley is looking forward to the opening, saying he anticipates demand for training facilities in Parker County to increase threefold.

"We're going to get the horses from Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas," he said. "It's not just Texas that's going to stay home; we're going to get them from other states.

The track near Weatherford is one of many that have had racing for many years, but without legalized gambling.

Statewide, the question of legalized race track gambling won approval from 57 percent of the voters on Tuesday.

The local option proposition carried by 1,188 votes in Parker County, but an erroneous report by county officials made it appear it was headed for defeat.

Parker County officials were announcing both to the media and the Secretary of State's office the votes on a jail bond election as the votes for local betting option. They didn't discover their mistake until Wednesday.

Proponents of legalized gambling say keeping horse- and dog-racing in the state will bring in millions of dollars and provide Texans hundreds of jobs that had previously gone to neighboring states that allowed race track betting.

Horse trainer Sally Pike says she has traveled every year to New Mexico to pursue her career in the horse-racing business.

"We have to move to New Mexico every summer where we can make more money," she said. "The purses are bigger there."

Ms. Pike said she was earlier uncertain of the final results of Tuesday's election concerning the racing issue because of what she called a misinformation campaign waged by opponents.

"At first I thought it would win by a lot. But as the campaign went on, I didn't know what was going to happen," she said. "You heard so much from both sides. The thing that really shocks me is the ignorance on the subject."

DIURETICS - DIETING

It is unwise to take diuretic pills to lose weight. You may lose a few pounds of water - not fat - in the first few days, but it returns when the pills are stopped. Diuretics can cause the body to lose potassium, with serious complications, even death, when combined with fad diets low in potassium. Take diuretics only under medical supervision.

SDN Opinion Page

Editorials-Columns-Cartoons-Kid Stuff-Look Back-Letters

Paul Hogan (aka Crocodile Dundee, "G'Day mate," and "put another shrimp on the barbee") credits his success in his home country of Australia to the fact that he is just like everyone else.

That is, he says, he thinks like the average Australian, he acts like the average Australian and, as a result, the average Australian "identifies" with him.

He says he is popular because his opinions--at least the one's shared with the public--are the identical same one's fostered up by any other Aussie who takes the time to rub two brain cells together.

He claims to be an "everyman" representing his kith, kin and kind. And he has made it pay off.

First of all, imagine our surprise.

We've always believed the trick to being admired was to have something someone else wanted.

That is, a beautiful wife and kids, broad shoulders, a dimpled chin, ample dollars or a brain that continues to work when everything else goes kablooey.

(We might add luck to the list, for as dad used to say (almost), if you've got sufficient quantities of luck, shoe polish will substitute for brains.)

The problem with this "respect" theory is that respect and envy often wind up in an elbow-flying foot race with envy the general winner.

At the finish line, most folks don't want to be like that person, they want to "be" that person--a goal doomed to fail until medical science perfects the brain transplant.

Paul Hogan's idea of "sameness" as a method of gaining respect is a new wrinkle. All of which got us to thinking all over again about heroes, a concept we've been wrestling with since Roy Rogers had Trigger stuffed.

In fact, Mr. Hogan is not "normal," but rather a normal human being magnified slightly. So slightly, in fact, that it doesn't show.

But Hogan's idea is still a goal within the reach of anyone, freeing mankind forever from the burden of bad genes.

To pull it off, you wouldn't strive to be normal. You would work to be a "perfect" normal.

Take the intelligence factor, for example. Most folks are uncomfortable around a real brain ("We took the DNA strands, transposed the amino acids, and again we had a virus."

But, then again, no one wants to be stuck in a row boat with Mortimer Snerd for a week, "Yup, yup."

So "enhanced" medium intelligence would be the goal. The state is even moving this direction, as they test students for "competency," which we figure is one bubble above average.

Personality, ditto. A slight bump above medium would be recommended. To illustrate, on a range between a game show host and the contestants he caters to, a little more on the Pat Sajek side than, say, Fred (Bad Dog) Ott from Mesquite.

As for looks, we would no longer have to be handsome or beautiful, a factor which might in fact be a detriment. Just as long as the sum total of the parts add up to something a bit higher than zero.

This could be achieved with diet, exercise and the cosmetic affects of hair and clothing.

To create, all in all, someone who pleases but does not threaten. Who is nice to look at and be around, but is still "attainable."

It's a concept that deserves research. For, if you could identify, then duplicate it, you could personally achieve at least one of our earlier mentioned "respect" categories. The one involving big bucks.

How many folks would pay to learn such things? And what if you could mass produce it, like painted dance steps on a cardboard diagram?

There is a "how-to" book here with a million copy print run waiting.

The untapped market of teaching normalcy-plus.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

It was late in the afternoon — after 5:00 — and the day already had the golden cast of evening to it as the large white car made its way down the road in front of our house, leaving a trail of dust behind like a memory.

It was not a good day for unexpected company, and I groaned inwardly. The muscular disorder that plagues me had shown its ugly face in a particularly nasty flare-up, pinning me to my bed for the entire day. Like most writers, I had plenty of research beckoning and had passed the day pleasantly reading and note-taking, oblivious to the breakfast dishes littering the kitchen or laundry scattered over the living room furniture. Now the clutter seemed to breed in front of my eyes as I made my way around it to get to the door, praying that the people were just lost and needed a turn-around spot.

Six people, obviously retirement age, beamed at me from the car windows, and I frantically scanned my memory to place their faces. One white-headed woman from the back seat said, without introduction, "I used to live in this house. May I come in and take a look around?"

I knew the previous owners had bought this farm in 1934, and this house had been moved in and rocked at that time. Many of the family members have made the pilgrimage to see their old home, and I'm always glad to see them, but as I said, it was not a good day for unexpected company.

"Well, sure," I said in a not-too-welcoming tone, "but the place is a mess," and added, "I've been sick in bed all day." (Maybe they would feel sorry for me and leave, I thought.)

But the woman was not to be deterred. She got out of the car, and as she headed for the back door, said, "I was born in this house."

I stared at her. She was eighty if she was a day. "Um," I began delicately, "When were you born?"

"1908," she answered proudly, and stepped into the little enclosed back porch we call a "mud room." "I was one of eleven children," she added. "There are only three of us left now."

I scrambled after her. "Are you sure it was this house?" I asked. "They told me this house was moved in. I mean, are you sure you lived here?"

She fixed me with bright, alert blue eyes. "If they moved this house in here," she said, "they had to have moved our old house out first."

I could see right away that, unlike the previous owners, this lady (and I do mean lady, in the nicest sense of the term), was uninterested in what we had done to fix up the place. In fact, she was not seeing our house at all, and I felt myself slipping and sliding back into the turn of the century. "This was a bedroom," she said as she walked through the kitchen. "Yes," she said approvingly as we walked into the next room, "we used this room as a living room, too."

Then we stepped into my messy bedroom; the covers on the waterbed were flung back just as I'd left them. "This was the kitchen," she said, "but it was bigger."

"The kitchen?" I asked dumbly. "But, where was the sink?"

She chuckled at my ignorance. "Why, honey, we didn't have a sink."

"But what did you cook on?"

"A wood-burning stove, and it set right there." She gestured towards the wall of closets. (Of course, I realized, the closets were built in later — that explained why the room was larger then.)

She didn't care to see the bathroom. "We didn't have a bathroom, honey."

In the hall, she held both arms straight out in front of her. "There was a hall," she said, "right here."

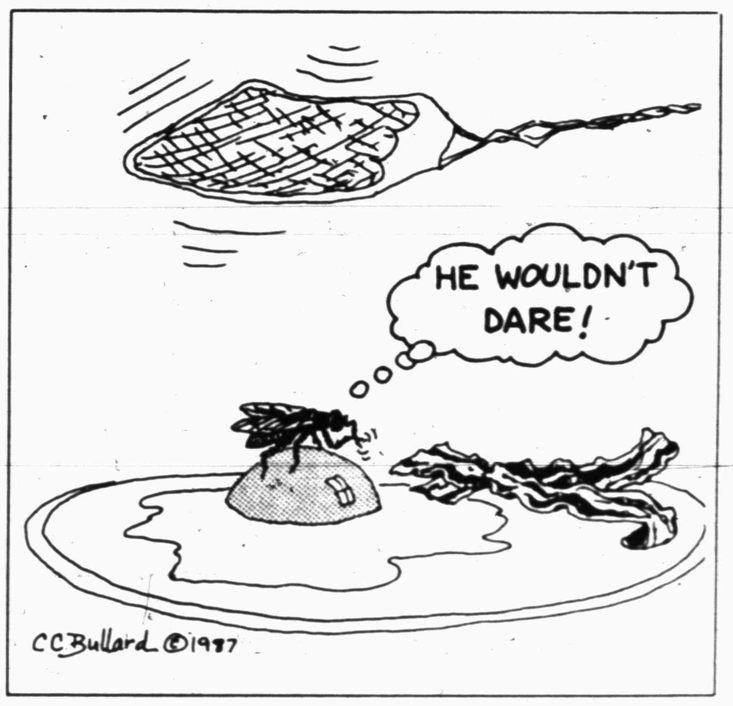

Outside, her lovely face shown with peace of mind and joy of spirit. "That old concrete water trough! I remember when Daddy built that!" (We'd wondered why the date "1928" had been scratched in the concrete, when no one lived there until 1934.) "That's where we had our lots, too. And that old well house is still standing! I can't believe it."

Questions flooded my mind: What was it like out here before the first World War? Where did they go to school? What did they farm? Did the Chinaberry grove exist then? Did they find many Indian artifacts? What games did 11 children play?

I thought of the solid wood walls and ceilings, craftsmanship from another day, insulation not known in modern houses. I had a feeling of continuity with the years, and I wanted to reach back and touch time.

They were leaving. I begged them to stay, but obviously, they didn't want to intrude on a sick person. (Like Roger Miller says: Dang me!) She said her name was Horton, and when I called her, "Mrs. Horton," she giggled like a young girl and said, "Honey, that was my maiden name. I'm a Jones now. I live in Carlsbad."

And before I could think to get her address, they drove away, leaving behind a trail of dust in the golden evening like a memory.

SUNDAY
November 1

Municipal Court Judge Tommie J. Mills announced Sunday plans to begin a monthly session of "night court" for individuals facing misdemeanor charges, including traffic fines, in his court.

These sessions are now planned for the first Tuesday of each month and the first night docket has now been slated this Tuesday from 6:30 until 7:30 p.m.

MONDAY
November 2

City council members agreed Monday to seek state grant monies to finance a prioritized list of street projects here, shifting the ranking slightly of four projects city staffers said the city needs most.

The top ranked project by both council members and city staffers is the widening of 37th St. from Austin Place to College Ave., an area which Councilman Paul Zeck called "the worst bottleneck in the city."

A Scurry County grand jury Monday issued indictments against 10 persons, including three men who were true-billed for aggravated kidnapping in the abduction of a Snyder man last week.

The three are accused of abducting a local man from his home at gunpoint on Oct. 27, allegedly because of a debt owed to the three by a relative of the man.

TUESDAY
November 3

The list of eight finalist sites for state prison facilities involving donated land--a list which includes Scurry County--has been narrowed to seven, it was reported Tuesday.

A spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections indicated Johnson County, one of the finalist announced Oct. 21 by TDC, has withdrawn its bid for a facility.

In a related story, State Senator Ray Farabee, who has assisted Scurry County in its effort to ultimately be chosen, said at an appearance in Rotan that he believes there is a "strong feeling" among the TDC board for a West Texas site.

Scurry County's bid is one of three from cities and counties considered to be West Texas.

The Cogdell Memorial Hospital board of managers voted unanimously Tuesday night to accept an offer from St. Mary of the Plains Hospital officials in Lubbock to act as management consultants for the facility.

In effect, the agreement will replace the current type of management at Cogdell involving a hospital administrator.

In addition to the board, Cogdell medical staff members had endorsed the St. Mary's offer.

State Rep. Steve Carriker of Roby said Tuesday that junior colleges are worth strong legislative support because they represent the "best bargain" for the state in the Texas higher educational system.

Speaking to about 50 persons in a noon appreciation luncheon at The Shack restaurant, Carriker said Western Texas College "came out relatively unscathed compared with what could have happened" in the last legislative session.

WEDNESDAY
November 4

Scurry County election results were finalized at mid-afternoon Wednesday, and the final result indicated Proposition 8 had won by a 75 percent approval locally with 3,061 individuals voicing their opinion on the measure.

The ballot count was 2,286 voters in favor of the prison-building amendment to 775 opposed. In all, 3,196 registered voters went to the polls here Tuesday, an unexpectedly heavy turnout of about 35 percent of the county's registered voters.

THURSDAY
November 5

Community leader Lyle Deffebach, whose association with Snyder dates to two year's after its incorporation as a city in 1907, died Thursday morning as a result of head injuries suffered in a one-vehicle auto accident here Wednesday.

Time of death was placed at 8:15 a.m. at St. Mary of the Plains Hospital in Lubbock.

Deffebach, 84, was injured as the roof of his vehicle was sheared away as it struck a truck trailer partially parked across the south lane of traffic on the Lamesa Highway.

Snyder has launched its own "Christmas in April" program, an all-volunteer program to repair the homes of the elderly and handicapped.

Nationally recognized Christmas in April leader Bobby Trimble of Midland met with 21 representatives of 19 Snyder civic clubs and organizations Thursday afternoon, and officers were elected afterwards to begin raising money for the project.

FRIDAY
November 6

A controversial ranking of Texas school campuses--using a combination of last year's TEAMS test scores and a "projected" performance level based on the number of low income or minority students--has been rescinded by the state agency which initially released it.

The listing, with the "projected" formula figured in, ranked Snyder High School as among the state's lower 25 percent in test score rankings, while in actual scores SHS ranked in the 43 percent level.

To the editor,

I would like to commend the Stanfield Parent Council for a job very well done on Saturday's Halloween Carnival.

It took a lot of work and determination to do the job. Today too many people want something for nothing and it just doesn't work that way. You have to work for everything you get.

Personally, I thought it was a lot of fun. Also, it's very rewarding to do something like this, then to see the benefits in our school. It provides supplies for our children and teachers.

I am new in Snyder, but I am proud to know there are people who want to do things like the carnival and devote their time and energy to help the teachers and children. Next year when it's time to sign up for a booth or an activity, I will. Will you?

Candidate asks ethics reform

AUSTIN (AP) — If a public official's holdings pose a conflict of interest, divestment and not a blind trust is the way to solve the problem, says a Railroad Commission candidate who wants stricter ethics and campaign finance laws.

"It's difficult for me to understand how a blind trust can be truly blind if you know what went into it in the first place," Ed Emmett told a Thursday news conference. "Really, the blind trust is nothing more than a mask."

Emmett, a Republican running for the seat now held by Democratic Commissioner Jim Nugent, said commissioners should be prohibited from accepting funds from parties in cases pending before them as well as from holding stock in companies regulated by the commission.

"It seems the public is largely unaware that we have a major flaw in our ethics and campaign finance laws," Emmett said.

He said it doesn't make sense to forbid parties to discuss a pending case with a commissioner while allowing them to make contributions to the commissioner's campaign.

"I still support them not being allowed to go in and talk to a commissioner specifically about an issue that's pending," he said.

"That same person, though, that's prohibited from discussing the issue is allowed to host a fundraiser and contribute money to a commissioner, and that to me is just wrong," he said.

Commissioners also are prohibited from owning railroad stock under what Emmett called an antiquated law.

The law "doesn't say anything about owning stock in oil and gas companies or trucking companies, and the railroad commission regulates oil and gas and trucking. It doesn't even regulate railroads any more in an economic way," he said.

Nugent said he sold his oil and gas holdings when he joined the commission, on which he has served since January 1979. The incumbent also said he does not solicit contributions from people he knows have pending cases.

"We do not know whether or not someone who makes us a contribution has a pending case," Nugent said. "I would not want to limit contributions anyone can make to a candidate."

The commmission should change its policy, and the 1989 Legislature should toughen the laws for the commissioners and other "quasi-judicial" state officials, he said.

Emmett is executive director of the Texas Association to Improve Distribution, a shipping association. Also running as a Republican for Nugent's seat is Ralph Hoelscher, a Tom Green County farmer and rancher.

Pari-mutuel vote is bringing big changes to small town

MANOR, Texas (AP) — This week's elections mean big changes for this community of 1,200 east of Austin, where Manor Chamber of Commerce President Andy Norton had said "you can see the whole thing in 2½ minutes."

With voter approval of the statewide referendum on race track gambling, the owners of Manor Downs, one of the state's few existing horse tracks, say they plan to be among the first to seek a pari-mutuel license.

And Austin voters decided to move their airport from the city's east side to Manor. The airport is to be built on a 3,460-acre site east of Manor.

Manor, which for years has been projected as the most likely location for Austin's airport, is a different place since Tuesday.

With or without the airport, the Manor area was in for some big changes, said Neil McDonald, executive director of the private Northeast Association, and Manor City Administrator Mike Bamer.

"Austin is really, whether they realize it or not, putting Manor in a nice position economically for the next several years," Bamer said.

McDonald prefers to think of the planned airport not as Austin's airport or the Manor airport, but as a regional airport for all of Central Texas. The effects of the airport — and of legalized betting at Manor Downs — will touch Elgin, Taylor and Pflugerville as well as Manor, he said.

"The confluence of Manor Downs and the airport at almost the same time will mean the rebirth of a once-thriving community," he said of Manor, where Bamer estimated that 70 percent of the residents have low to moderate incomes.

With the support of Austin and other governments, the Texas Highway Commission last spring raised the priority of the proposed expansion of four-lane U.S. 290 to a six-lane freeway with frontage roads between U.S. 183 and FM 973.

Highway department spokesman Mark Ball said Wednesday that the plans probably would be modified to extend the new freeway slightly, taking it virtually to the entrance to the new airport. Construction on U.S. 290 probably will begin within five years, he said.

Utilities also have been laid toward Manor from Austin, about 10 miles away. Much of a $600 million bond issue approved by Austin voters in 1985 was for water and sewer lines for the northeast section of the county near Manor.

A 12 million-gallon reservoir on U.S. 290, approved by Austin voters in 1982, is nearing completion to serve already planned housing sub-divisions.

"It will be an accelerator to all these other activities," McDonald said of the new airport.

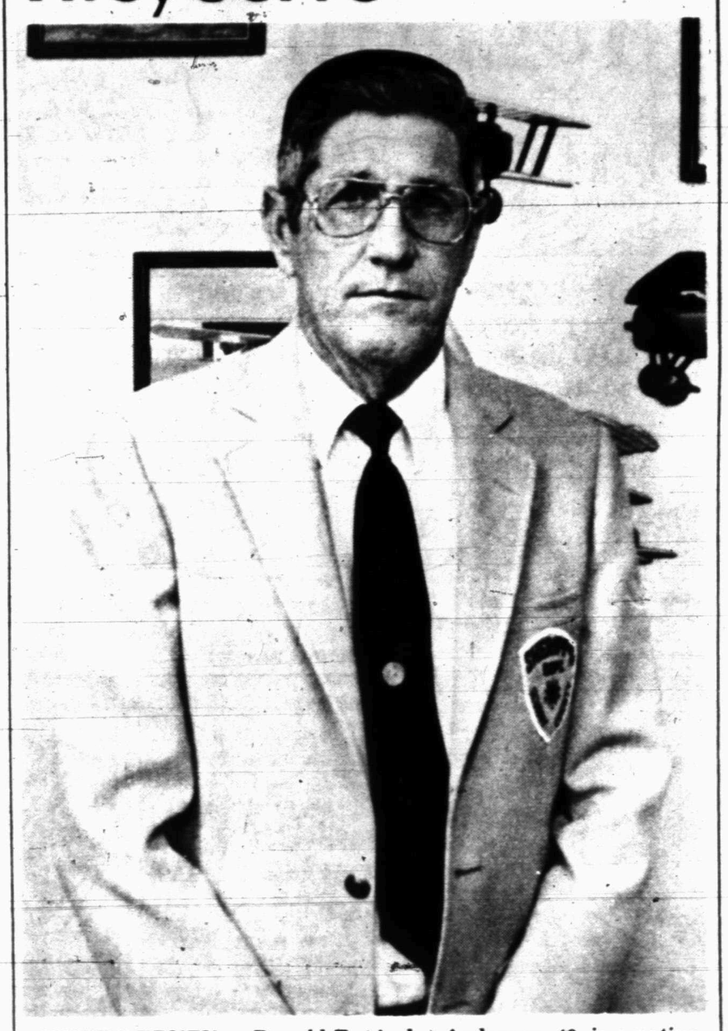

Industrial recruitment will not be needed, Bamer said.

"I think they'll be standing at the doorstep and we'll be in the unique position of selecting which businesses locate in Manor," he said.

"On the other side of the coin, we stand to lose some of the privacy we have enjoyed," Bamer said. "We're going to be urbanized rather than ruralized."

Senate passes treaty barring any ocean dumping of plastics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate ratified an international treaty that would prohibit the dumping of plastic garbage anywhere in the ocean and ban the disposal of all garbage other than foods within 12 miles of land.

Attached to the treaty by a 93-0 vote Thursday was a Senate recommendation that the Gulf of Mexico be designated a "special zone" where more stringent anti-dumping regulations would apply.

The plastics agreement, known as Annex V of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, takes effect one year after nations representing half of the world's shipping tonnage have approved it.

Proponents are pushing the United States to quickly process the documents because American shipping tonnage, currently 4.8 percent of world levels, would put the treaty over the 50 percent mark.

Ratification earlier this year by the Soviet Union, which represents 6.2 percent of the world's shipping, brought the total to 48 percent.

An impediment to quick action is a State Department policy of not officially delivering a treaty unless it has accompanying legislation defining and authorizing how the United States will enforce it.

"The reason is that we don't like to be in a position where we have international obligations under a treaty and don't have legislation in place by which we can carry out our oblig

Former computer operator indicted

DALLAS (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a former employee of a Dallas-based credit-reporting firm on charges accusing her of altering computer credit records in exchange for cash payments.

The indictment charged Ruby Grant, a former employee of Chilton Corp., with one count of conspiracy and 71 counts of altering credit records, a misdemeanor.

Iran-Contra panel calling for changes in CIA, White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressional Iran-Contra committees will recommend tighter controls on the CIA and changes at the White House in a report due out in two weeks, according to panel members.

The recommendations for legislative action include more rigorous requirements for CIA notification to Congress on covert action plans and a restructured National Security Council staff to keep it under civilian control, lawmakers familiar with the 600-page report said Thursday.

Members of the House and Senate committees voted Thursday to approve the final report, with all but three Republicans voting against it and saying they would come out with their own dissenting version. Both versions are to be unveiled Nov. 17.

Leaders of the two panels called the majority-written document fair and balanced, tough in laying blame for the Iran-Contra affair at the feet of President Reagan and as thorough as could be achieved within time limits imposed on the committees.

But GOP members were quick to brand the report biased, saying it was too harsh on Reagan and used critical rhetoric unsupported by evidence brought out during the summer's public hearings on the secret sale of U.S. weapons to Iran and the diversion of proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Rep. Jim Courter, R-N.J., quoted the report as saying Reagan's "unabashed zeal for the Contras" set a climate at the White House that led staff members to circumvent normal controls in aiding the rebels.

"It implies that the president was less than candid and less than honest to Congress and the American people," Courter said.

But a Republican who sided with the majority, Sen. Warren Rudman of New Hampshire, said the report was "tough but fair" and called Courter's criticism "prattle."

"Our mission was to get the facts," Rudman said. "I believe we succeeded."

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House panel, said publication of the report will mark only the midpoint of the investigation process. He said leads will be followed by the government's independent counsel, Lawrence E. Walsh, who is pursuing criminal cases in the affair, and legislation will be recommended to congressional committees.

"There are strands of the story we cannot follow to the end because of time limits and other restraints," Hamilton said. He cited the shredding of documents, the death of former CIA Director William J. Casey and the adversarial nature and forgetfulness of many witnesses.

Sources speaking on condition of anonymity have said Walsh's targets include fired White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North; former national security adviser Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter; retired Air Force Gen. Richard V. Secord; and arms dealer Albert Hakim, Secord's business partner.

The Los Angeles Times reported in today's editions that Alan D. Fiers, chief of the CIA's Central America task force, has been notified by prosecutors that he also is the subject of a criminal investigation. However, the newspaper cited unidentified government sources as saying Thursday that Fiers is not now a target for criminal indictment.

Freed ANC leader vowing renewed political activity

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — Anti-apartheid activists said the release of an African National Congress leader was as a major victory, but right-wing groups today said the nation had embarked "on a dangerous course."

Govan Mbeki, 77, was freed Thursday after 23 years in prison, fueling speculation that other prominent prisoners such as Nelson Mandela may soon be released. Mandela is considered by many black South Africans to be the country's preeminent black leader.

Mbeki told a news conference Thursday evening he would remain active in opposing the white-led government's apartheid policies, but that he would not hold office with any organization.

Asked if he had a message for the young blacks, he said: "They must continue with the struggle."

"The ideas for which I went to jail and for which the ANC stands, I still embrace," said the gray-haired Mbeki. He said he still considered himself a member of the ANC and the South African Communist Party.

The ANC said from its headquarters in Lusaka, Zambia, that Mbeki emerged from jail "unbowed and unbroken, a living legend in the minds of our people."

"If the government wants to do something dramatic to influence an intractablee.ituation, it should release all our leaders," Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, said Thursday.

The far-right Conservative Party said today the Mbeki's release was "a calculated risk."

"The government is on a dangerous course if it releases people without them renouncing violence," said party leader Andries Treurnicht.

Mbeki was to meet today with his 71-year-old wife, who was being flown to southern city of Port Elizabeth from the black homeland of Transkei. They have not seen each for six years, friends said.

Mbeki also said he wanted to see his three sons, who all live in exile. One of the sons, Thabo Mbeki, is a top ANC official based in Zambia.

The couple is expected to settle in the Port Elizabeth area, where Mbeki worked as a journalist and ANC official before the organization was outlawed in 1960. Tentative arrangeements for Mbeki to visit New Brighton, the Port Elizabeth township where he plans to live, were canceled on short notice today, without explanation.

Mbeki was one of several jailed black leaders whose release was requested in anti-apartheid legislation the U.S. Congress enacted in October 1986.

Mbeki, former national chairman of the guerrilla movement, was one of eight ANC members, including Mandela, jailed for life following their 1964 convictions for sabotage. Mbeki met with Mandela on Thursday morning and described him as "healthy and fit."

Of the seven blacks convicted at the 1964 Rivonia sabotage trial, Mbeki is the first to be released. The only white convicted at the trial, Dennis Goldberg, was freed in 1985 and later moved to London.

The government released six other men Thursday who were jailed for politically related crimes.

U. S. banks slash prime lending rate

NEW YORK (AP) — A coordinated drive to help push down global interest rates has given Wall Street a much-needed shot in the arm, but the ailing dollar only grew weaker in foreign exchange.

On Thursday, major U.S. banks cut their prime lending rates another quarter percentage point to 8.75 percent, as European central banks lowered their interest rates to stem the economic crisis precipitated by last month's stock market crash.

The decline in rates aided stock prices in London and on Wall Street, where the Dow Jones industrial average recovered 40.12 points Thursday, to 1,985.41.

The dollar continued to plunge in value today, sinking to its third-straight record low against the yen on the Tokyo exchange. On Thursday, it also fell to record lows against most major currencies in the United States and Europe.

In addition to spurring economic growth, lower overseas interest rates normally would allow the United States to hold interest rates down without jeopardizing the health of the dollar, which has been falling steadily for months.

The first announcements on the prime-rate cut came from Citibank and Chase Manhattan Bank, two of the nation's largest banks, shortly after the stock market opened Thursday. Other banks quickly followed suit.

Around the same time, West German and Swiss central banks said they were cutting key interest rates, a day after Britain made a similar move.

The cut in the U.S. prime rate — the benchmark used by banks to set interest rates on a variety of corporate and consumer loans — was the second in two weeks. Major banks lowered the rate for the first time this year on Oct. 22, to 9 percent from 9.25 percent.

The prime had been raised five times since August 1986, when it stood at 7.5 percent, because of the falling dollar and fears of higher inflation. At least two big banks had boosted the rate to 9.75 percent in early October but promptly reduced it to 9.25 percent in the wake of the Oct. 19 stock market collapse.

Pressure had been mounting for lower rates during the past few weeks to help shore up the economy and stock prices. And analysts said Thursday's reduction was expected given that the Federal Reserve has eased its credit policies significantly and rates in the credit markets have fallen sharply in response.

"I think there's a real effort on the part of the Fed and the banking system to provide a lot of liquidity in an effort to keep short rates down and safeguard against a slowing in the economy," said Nancy Vanden Houten, a money market economist for Merrill Lynch Capital Markets Inc.

A drop in interest rates often stimulates economic growth by making corporate and individual borrowing less expensive.

The latest prime cut could lead to lower interest payments on mortgages, home equity loans; credit cards and other consumer debts.

Prosecution drops bribery charges against Hernandez

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Mayor Emilio Hernandez says he's ready to start living a normal life now that a state district judge has dismissed a felony bribery charge against him.

"I'm very happy that this is over with, and I'm ready to get on with my own life and my work," Hernandez, who has served two terms as mayor of the border city since 1979, said Thursday.

Hernandez had been indicted in a Texas Rangers-led probe of city government.

But Judge Darrell Hester dismissed the bribery indictment after special prosecutor Sharon MacRae filed a motion for dismissal, citing contradictory statements by the state's key witness in the bribery case.

Of 22 indictments ultimately resulting from the probe of city hall, 21 have ended in either acquittals or dismissals.

Hernandez, who leaves office Nov. 16, was convicted in August on a felony aggravated perjury charge. He was accused of lying under oath before a grand jury during the city probe. A jury gave him a two-year probated sentence, but the conviction is under appeal.

In the bribery case, Hernandez, 56, was accused of improper activity with a company that was seeking a garbage contract with the city.

Ms. MacRae's dismissal motion referred to testimony by Browning-Ferris Industries district sales manager Juan Gonzalez during Hernandez's perjury case, which contradicted the BFI executive's earlier statements to investigators.

The prosecutor said the witness originally told investigators Hernandez solicited a bribe in exchange for help in obtaining the garbage contract, but in June testified that the mayor never solicited a bribe.

Hernandez in June was cleared of a third charge of felony theft by a public servant when the prosecutor dropped the case mid-trial.

Waitresses Search for Tips To Customers' Table Choice

DEAR ABBY: I'm always telling my co-workers that I'm going to write to you with a question that puzzles us all. I'm finally doing it. We work in a coffee shop in a tourist town and want to know why people prefer to sit at dirty tables. It's not because there are no clean tables, because this often happens when there is only one dirty table. A party leaves, and before we've had a chance to clear the table, someone else sits there!

If we're busy, we put out a "Please Wait to Be Seated" sign, but people walk right past it and sit at the dirty table anyway!

It is much easier on a waitress if customers sit at a clean table. Sometimes when we're busy, we might not realize that they aren't the previous party, so they won't be served as fast. Also, we'd rather have them sit at a clean table because it gives a better impression of our establishment than if they start out with someone else's dirty dishes in front of them.

So, Abby, if you can tell us why so many people prefer to sit at a dirty table, we'd sure appreciate it.

WAITRESS IN
BANFF, ALBERTA

DEAR WAITRESS: Beats me. Perhaps the location of the dirty table is preferable to the available clean ones. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: Four and a half years ago my brother (age 49 — an aerospace executive — borrowed 50 record albums from my mother and me. These albums belong to us.

After two years and no return, I asked my mother to please ask my brother to return the record albums. Brother brought them back in anger, without a word of thanks, and at the same time he asked to borrow 50 more albums!

It's been two years, and still no return of the 50 albums, so I called my brother, and his wife answered the phone. I very politely reminded her that her husband had 50 albums of mine and I would appreciate having them.

She said, "I thought we brought those back."

I replied, "No, you didn't."

Then she had the nerve to say, "Well, you shouldn't loan things to people if you're going to worry about getting them back."

Abby, we enjoy sharing our videocassettes and records, but we would like them returned after a reasonable length of time. How should we handle this if they want to borrow something in the future?

LENDER

DEAR LENDER: When you lend something, have a clear understanding of when it should be returned. And if the borrower "forgets," remind him.

DEAR ABBY: I need to get a couple of things off my chest: I work in the personnel department of a Fortune 500 company, and we receive approximately 100 resumes every day from people applying for jobs or scholarship money.

At least 20 of those 100 people do not include an address in their letters, and/or their handwriting is not legible, so obviously we have no way of responding to their requests.

The other thing that irritates me is the number of people who write to ask for jobs and use the stationery/letterhead of their present employer.

ANONYMOUS, OF COURSE

DEAR ABBY: "No Name" asked you how a woman could tell a homosexual from a bisexual man. Take it from one who knows — there ain't no way!

For 29 years, I was happily married to an attractive professional man. Together we raised four fine children. He was a great lover, and never did I doubt his loyalty to me. He died suddenly at age 62. When I dismantled his office and opened his office safe, all the uglies came spilling out!

He had been an active homosexual since he was 15. I found love letters from Toms, Dicks and Harrys across the United States and Europe. There were canceled checks, proving that for years he had been supporting two guys with generous monthly checks. I found pictures of himself living in two separate worlds — one with his family, the other with his secret companions ranging in age from teen-agers to older men. I was devastated!

Not only did this revelation destroy 29 years of beautiful memories, but the embarrassment of feeling humiliated before those who probably knew was worse.

He's been gone for 10 years, and looking back, there were some clues, but at the time I never suspected a thing. Bizarre? Yes. If this could happen to me, it could happen to anyone.

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Your chilling tale should signal a valuable warning to others who have locked away similar memorabilia, which if discovered could break some hearts and tarnish a lifetime of golden memories. So, readers, the time for spring cleaning is now.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl and am told I'm very attractive. Just once, I'd like to go on a date and not have the guy expect sex afterward. So many guys tell me they won't like me if I don't do it with them. No matter how much I like them, I never give in. So I end up getting dumped!

I know there are guys who aren't like that, but where are they?

16 AND STILL WAITING

DEAR WAITING: They're busy getting an education, working at after-school and weekend jobs, participating in clean, healthy sports and paying attention to their families by being helpful to their siblings, parents and grandparents whenever possible. They're camp counselors during the summer and volunteers who work with the disabled and elderly. And they're waiting for a girl exactly like you.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had a terrific sex life until he turned 40. Then he said he was getting "old," and he began to lose interest in sex. He's 50 now, and hasn't touched me in two years. He's also a heavy drinker and smoker (even after lung surgery). He tells me how much he loves me, but I'm lucky to get a good-night peck on the cheek.

I am sure there is no other woman — he's home all the time. Can nicotine and alcohol kill a person's sex drive?

LONELY AND ANGRY

DEAR LONELY: Yes, in varying degrees. And sometimes they kill the person.

AIDS virus can be 'turned on' by some infections

WASHINGTON (AP) — A substance normally produced by the body during infection or drug use can play a role in changing latent exposure to AIDS into an active disease that kills, a federal researcher says.

Dr. Anthony S. Fauci said in an interview Thursday that in research at the National Institutes of Health he and four colleagues for the first time were able to show how a natural body chemical can "turn on" the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Fauci said the findings suggest that perhaps those people who have tested positive for the presence of the AIDS virus could delay the active stage of the disease by making fundamental changes in their lifestyle. He emphasized, however, that this was still only speculation.

Fauci was a member of a team of researchers that included Thomas M. Folks, Jesse Justement and Audrey Kinter at NIH, and Charles A. Dinarello at Tufts University. Their findings were reported today in Science magazine.

AIDS is caused by the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV. This virus typically lies dormant for five to seven years before it progresses to an active infection that disables the body's immune system.

A key goal of AIDS researchers has been an understanding of the mechanism that causes the HIV virus to evolve from a harmless latency detected only by blood tests into a vicious infection that kills.

Using human cells infected with the AIDS virus, Fauci said he and his colleagues were able to cause the virus to become active by exposing the cells to cytokine, a protein substance that is secreted into the bloodstream by the body's immune system.

The scientist said the experiment suggests the AIDS virus gradually can be activated by infections or chemicals that would cause the repeated secretion of cytokine.

"This may be one of the mechanisms that turns a latent infection into an active infection," Fauci said. "We're not saying it's the only way because there may be others."

A mechanism to activate the dormant AIDS virus has not been demonstrated previously, but Fauci said the experiment "was not a breakthrough" because there still is much unknown about the process.

Although the finding suggests that infections can help activate the AIDS virus, Fauci said, "you cannot extrapolate this to mean that a common cold would trigger it."

Activation of the virus, he said "does not occur rapidly or overnight." Instead, he characterized the process as an "insidious conversion."

Fauci said the study also suggests, "but does not prove," that people who have tested positive for AIDS could delay active symptoms of the disease by adopting a lifestyle that limits the secretion of cytokine.

That, he said, would include avoiding "noxious insults to the body," such as recreational drugs, which can trigger cytokine.

Fauci also suggested persons exposed to AIDS start following "safe sex" practices for their own benefit, because "sexually transmitted diseases are potent modulators of the immune system" that might hasten the active expression of the AIDS virus.

AIDS is transmitted by intimate contact with an infected person, such as through sexual activity, sharing of contaminated needles or from transfusion of contaminated blood or blood products.
