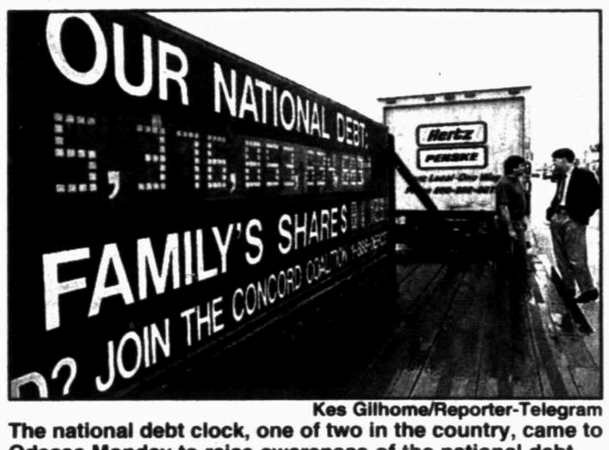
Debt clock visits Permian Basin



Kes Gilhome/Reporter-Telegram

The national debt clock, one of two in the country, came to Odessa Monday to raise awareness of the national debt.

■ Concord Coalition brings national debt clock to Permian Basin to raise awareness of burgeoning deficit.

ODESSA — Every second the national debt is said to increase $6,675, and that increase is dutifully counted on the mobile national Debt Clock which toured Odessa College and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin Monday.

The national debt clock is used by the Concord Coalition, a nationwide bipartisan group currently headed up by former U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn and dedicated to eliminating the budget deficit, said Drew Scheberle, state director for the Concord Coalition. The debt clock is a visual tool of the coalition designed to increase public awareness of the national debt.

The traveling debt clock is one of only two in the nation. The first is in Times Square in New York City, according to Scheberle. The mobile clock is on a 25-foot flatbed truck and is essentially a large electronic scoreboard with enough digits to display the $5 trillion-plus national debt, he said.

"The debt clock digitally tracks the amount of money that our nation owes and the share of this debt that each American owes," Scheberle said.

According to coalition members, and tallied second by second on the debt clock, the national debt raises $400,500 each minute, $24 million an hour and more than half a billion dollars each day — seven days a week, 365 days per year.

"As a people, we should feel shame for spending money on ourselves and expecting our children to pay," Scheberle said.

"Young people in this country know what is being done to them," he said. "Their taxes are high to make

Jury seated, Marv Albert trial begins

By Anne Gearan
Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Va. — Marv Albert scolded "You've been a bad girl" and severely bit a woman in a hotel room for not bringing another man into bed with them, a prosecutor told the jury Monday as the sportscaster went on trial on charges of sodomy and assault.

Albert

Albert's attorney, Roy Black, countered: "Everything that happened that night was consensual. It was the same thing that happened every other night when Marv and (the woman) got together."

Black portrayed Albert's accuser as a troubled, vengeful woman who "collects" celebrities and would "brag about the celebrities she has had relationships with, people like Peter Jennings."

Albert, 53, is accused of biting the woman on the back and forcing her to perform oral sex. The NBC sportscaster pleaded innocent earlier Monday, repeating the words "Not guilty" in his deep, play-by-play voice. The charges

Change has immigrants in panic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Immigrants living in the United States unlawfully will have to leave the country to apply for resident "green cards" unless Congress extends a provision that expires next week.

Currently, undocumented immigrants who are eligible to apply for legal residence are allowed to remain in the United States while completing their paperwork — provided they pay a $1,000 fine.

The impending expiration of that provision has caused alarm in immigrant communities. And the Immigration and Naturalization Service is expecting a wave of applications from people rushing to beat the clock.

"The message is to get that application in before Sept. 30," Paul Virtue, the INS' acting executive associate commissioner, said Monday.

In 1994, Congress wrote a regulation allowing undocumented immigrants to remain here while applying for permanent residence provided they pay a fine and either be already on track for legal residence or related to a U.S. citizen or legal permanent resident.

The idea for the proposal was twofold: Reduce the hardship on foreigners eligible to legalize their status and lessen the pressure on U.S. consulates overseas where immigrants previously applied.

In 1995 and 1996, some 345,000 people took advantage of the rule, which quickly provided a new revenue stream for INS. This year, the agency will take in nearly $200 million in fines.

The Clinton administration has asked that this provision be extended, but Congress has yet to decide the issue.

The Senate, in the bill that funds INS operations, approved an extension. The House, due to take up its bill later this week, doesn't have similar language — meaning House and Senate negotiators will have to resolve the issue later this fall when they iron out differences in their respective bills.

In the meantime, immigrants are flooding immigration lawyers, advocacy groups and the airwaves with calls: Should they remain here illegally or leave job and family behind in hopes of securing a green card?

"There is an awful lot of concern," said Judy Gol-

He made his debut at age 4 when he sang in a tent revival outside his hometown of Little Rock, Ark. Since then, composer Buryl Red has been author, consultant and producer of some of this country's most widely used school music textbooks, including "The Music Connection."

However, the most unusual arranging he's been called upon to do was in 1988 for The CenturyMen, a 100-plus-voice choir that performs a free concert at 7 p.m. today at First Baptist Church, 2104 W. Louisiana Ave.

"I arranged music for The CenturyMen with the piano accompaniment and sent it to Beijing, and the conductor for that orchestra scored it for their instruments," said Red, whose choral works include "Celebrate Life" and the first performing edition of Pergolesi's "Magnificat."

"So, it was a combination of Western voices and Chinese instruments."

The experience was "great," Red said of the performance, which was by invitation from China's national television.

Verbose candidate takes Serbia's presidential election by storm

Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — He talks and talks. And when he's not talking, Serbian nationalist Vojislav Seselj is shouting.

All through the election campaign, Seselj wouldn't shut up. But then he never has — even after doing jail time in 1994 for spitting on the speaker of parliament, who simply had asked him to be quiet.

> 'Order and discipline are the basis of every normal system. There is no democracy without order and discipline.'
> — Vojislav Seselj, Serbian nationalist and presidential candidate

Now it appears Seselj's "Serbia for Serbs only" rhetoric has been heard by enough voters to land him in the runoff race for president. In second place with half of Sunday's vote counted, the Radical Party leader will likely challenge Socialist candidate Zoran Lilic in a runoff Oct. 5.

In postwar Serbia, a place of political disarray and deep depression, Seselj's message rings loud and clear: Tough on crime. Tougher on non-Serb residents. In Zemun, the small town outside Belgrade where he is mayor, he has evicted Croats from their homes to make room for Serb refugees from Bosnia's war.

"Order and discipline are the basis of every normal system," he said in a recent interview. "There is no democracy without order and discipline."

But the strident nationalism that got him voters' attention likely will keep him from the presidency. The ruling Socialists have more supporters and they are expected to vote for Lilic.

Still, Seselj's first-round showing proves there are many Serbs who respond to his tough talk, and even tougher image.

To Serbia's opposition, which has threatened to boycott the runoff, Seselj is an evil worse than Lilic — the mustachioed protege of all-powerful Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic. While Milosevic's nationalist rally cry led Bosnia into war, Seselj was on the battlefield with his notorious paramilitary troops.

Seselj's name is pronounced SHEH-shey, a blurred sound that sounds like "Shuush" — something this candidate, even if he loses, is unlikely to do.

He has made himself heard for years. Under the Communists, Seselj was a clever law student whose nationalism earned him his first jail spell, from 1984-86.

Later in Belgrade, he became a fixture on TV talk shows, boasting of Serbs conquering neighboring Hungary and even vaster swaths of Europe.

Seselj's political career took off after his success as a paramilitary commander during the wars in Croatia and Bosnia. He played a major role in unleashing the war in Croatia, where his troops attacked policemen near Vukovar, driving tension so high that more bloodshed became inevitable.

Virulent in his fight for a "greater Serbia," Seselj declared that his men would "take out the eyes of Croatians with rusty spoons."

Lilic had been considered a certain first-round winner, but in the shadow of such an aggressive rival he looked rather timid.

With his jutting paunch and towering height — well over six feet — Seselj dominated the campaign with his bulk and bluster. Opponents he dismissed as "psychopaths, fools or foreign agents."

At least once, his attacks may have gone beyond the verbal.

After a TV duel with Seselj, prominent Belgrade anti-war activist Nikola Barovic ended up with a broken nose. Witnesses said Seselj's bodyguards were to blame, but the candidate said Barovic had slipped on a banana peel.

Then there was the brawl in parliament, when Seselj refused the speaker's orders to sit down and shut up. Instead, he spat and threw a glass of water at the speaker, yelled insults at the ruling Socialists, then yanked out the microphone wires.

For that, Milosevic sentenced him to four months in prison. His first words upon release: Milosevic was "the biggest criminal in Serbia."

An advocate of ethnic intolerance, Seselj appeals to people disgruntled that Milosevic dragged the Serbs into war, then switched gears by signing the 1995 Dayton peace agreement. Seselj distanced himself from Milosevic after the Dayton accords. But he was shrewd enough to direct his most stinging campaign attacks at opposition leaders — not Milosevic's Socialists.

That secured wide coverage in the state-run media — which Milosevic controls. But then, Milosevic never thought his candidate would lose the first round.

What Seselj himself thinks of his victory wasn't immediately known. Reporters who called his house Monday got his wife, who told them her husband was sleeping. Clearly, he needed some quiet time.

Seselj has dominated the pre-election political scene in Serbia both with his physical bulk and shouting voice. In second place with 50 percent after the Sunday vote, Seselj will likely challenge Socialist candidate Zoran Lilic in a run-off Oct. 5.

Nora's outer squalls pummel lower Mexican Baja

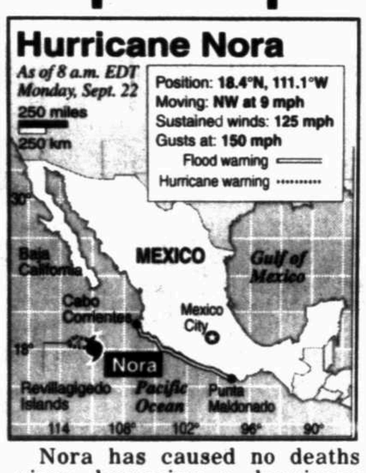
CABO SAN LUCAS, Mexico (AP) — Outer squalls of Hurricane Nora battered the rocky tip of Baja California with lashing rain, winds and 15-foot waves Monday, stranding cars, shutting businesses and sending tourists packing.

Merchants taped up storefront glass and tried to sweep out muddy water that filled their businesses in Cabo San Lucas, where a drunken man pretended to swim a knee-deep river sweeping the main drag.

Tourists idled in hotel bars or huddled under drenched awnings in this popular beach and fishing resort, marveling at the ferocity of the howling winds, which whipped thick-set palm trees like weeds.

Greg Smithey, who divides his time between Las Vegas and Cabo San Lucas, watched from the Hard Rock Cafe as a Humvee pulled a truck out of a submerged sinkhole. He decided against trying to drive back to his hotel.

"There were waterfalls coming down. We thought we were going to get swept off the road," said Smithey, 47. "So now we're stuck. We can't even get across the road."



Nora has caused no deaths since becoming a hurricane Thursday, but the rain and flooding made driving and even crossing streets treacherous.

Nora, the second hurricane this month to menace the normally sun-baked peninsula of hotels and sportfishing marinas, destroyed dozens of beachfront homes as it skirted mainland Mexico to the southeast.

Monday afternoon, Nora's large and well-defined eye was 305 miles south-southwest of Cabo San Lucas, the U.S. Hurricane Center in Miami reported. Moving at 9 mph, it packed sustained winds of 125 mph, and was forecast to veer north — toward the Baja coast — by Tuesday.

Hurricane force winds extended outward up to 85 miles from the eye, and tropical storm force winds outward up to 200 miles.

"It's a Category 3 hurricane and dangerous," warned U.S. hurricane forecaster Richard Pasch, reached by telephone in Miami.

He said he expected Cabo San Lucas would not get Nora's eye "but we are expecting the storm to come further up the Baja peninsula within the next 48 hours."

The Miami center said the hurricane's center had passed early Monday over Socorro Island in the remote Pacific. A coastal flood warning remained in effect for a large swath of the mainland.

While forecasters said the storm eventually could bring heavy rainfall to the U.S. Southwest, primarily east of California, the threat Monday was to resort areas such as Cabo San Lucas.

Here, muddy rainwater coursed down streets, carrying garbage. Celestino Cohuopoot, 26, took off his shoes and waded through floating bottles and bits of Styrofoam. "We are going to have to ask for a boat to cross," he joked.

Jaime Amador, a fitness instructor at the sandbagged Pueblo Bonito hotel, kept watch over the roaring surf in a yellow rainsuit, making sure guests didn't venture on the beach to gape at the 15-foot waves.

"It's too dangerous," he said. "We're recommending people stay in their rooms. If they want to leave the hotel, they're responsible for whatever happens to them."

For many tourists, Nora washed out daydreams of sunbathing, scuba diving and sportfishing.

"When the wind started, everybody started running around in a panic and throwing the lawn chairs in the pool" to keep them from blowing away, said Laura Taylor, 32, who sells insurance in Vacaville, Calif. "Welcome to sunny Mexico."

Failed safety mechanism causes train crash

LONDON (AP) — The main safety mechanism was broken on the express train that crashed into a freight train Friday in west London, news reports said Monday.

The crash near Southall station killed six people and injured more than 150 others.

The news reports, quoting unidentified colleagues of the express train's driver, said the train's automatic warning system was not working at Cardiff, the Welsh capital.

Still, the Intercity 125 Express carried on from Cardiff to London, a 145-mile journey, reaching speeds of more than 100 mph with the driver relying solely on his eyesight to see a red light, the reports said.

The driver, who has not been identified, was arrested and questioned Friday, but has not been charged. He was out on bail Monday for investigation into a manslaughter charge.

Great Western Trains Co. Ltd. refused to comment on the reports about the train's the safety system, which gives drivers a series of audio and visual warnings of a red stop light ahead. "That will be established in the inquiry," spokeswoman Elaine Wild told The Associated Press.

But she said it was company practice for a train to continue on to its destination if its safety system breaks down during a trip. After arriving, the train is then taken out of service.

Rail officials were also investigating reports that a computerized warning system was switched off because trials with it had been unreliable.

The separate automatic warning system is standard on all British trains. A buzzer sounds in the cab as the driver approaches a red light, or a yellow warning light and control panel in the cab changes color.

Clinton urges United Nations end nuclear tests 'for all time'

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — President Clinton sent the Senate the long-delayed global test-ban treaty Monday and urged members to "end all nuclear tests for all time" by approving the pact over the objections of some Republicans.

Announcing his action in an address to the United Nations' 52nd General Assembly, Clinton called the treaty "the longest sought, hardest fought prize in the history of arms control." He signed the accord a year ago but pocketed it while White House lobbyists tried to build support.

'We're all vulnerable to the reckless acts of rogue states and to an unholy axis of terrorists, drug traffickers and international criminals.'
— President Bill Clinton, addressing the United Nations

In a 19-minute speech to U.N. delegates, the president also called for a permanent international court to punish human rights violators.

And he pledged that the United States would pay nearly $1 billion in past-due U.N. fees to "put the question of debts and dues behind us once and for all."

Returning to the theme of his U.N. address last year, Clinton said the nations of the world must unite against "21st century predators." He warned, "We're all vulnerable to the reckless acts of rogue states and to an unholy axis of terrorists, drug traffickers and international criminals."

The president had meetings scheduled with foreign leaders, including Russian Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov, before heading to the Metropolitan Opera's season-opening performance of "Carmen." He was returning to Washington Monday night.

His submission of the test-ban treaty is expected to stir opposition from GOP senators who don't trust arms control agreements or who insist that testing is needed to maintain America's nuclear stockpile.

The debate probably will restore battle lines from the vote on the Clinton-backed chemical weapons treaty, ratified in April after many lawmakers remained undecided until the last minute. The president needs about 22 Republican senators to join Democrats in support of the treaty.

"We intend to win this vote and failure is not an option," said Robert Bell, a senior White House arms control adviser.

During a U.N. visit a year ago, Clinton became the first world leader to approve the historic Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty, which prohibits all nuclear test explosions.

The United States has not conducted a nuclear test since 1992.

The treaty would take effect next September. A Senate vote is expected in the spring. The accord is signed by 146 countries, including Russia and China.

India, which has campaigned for total disarmament, lobbied against the treaty. Longtime adversary Pakistan won't endorse it unless India does. After his speech, Clinton was meeting with the prime ministers of both nations.

Critics point out that rogue states such as North Korea also have not signed the pact.

Still, the president said the treaty "will help prevent the nuclear powers from developing more advanced and more dangerous weapons. It will limit the possibilities for other states to acquire such devices."

On the sensitive issue of America's indebtedness to the U.N., Clinton promised to work with Congress to pay most of the money.

Congress is expected to authorize about $900 million for the United Nations, provided the organization does not expand beyond current levels and agrees to put in a separate fund an additional $400 million that the United States has contested.

The president also backed changes to the U.N. Security Council. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright has already expressed support for giving permanent seats to Germany and Japan. The administration also supports adding three other seats for Latin America, Africa and Asia, with countries in those regions rotating as the council expands to 20 or 21.

Traditionally, international courts have been established on a case by case basis to investigate human rights violations — such as the panel investigating Bosnia war crimes suspects. Clinton told the delegates: "Before the century ends, we should establish a permanent international court to prosecute the most serious violations of humanitarian law."

The president also commended television mogul Ted Turner for his pledge last week to contribute $1 billion to the U.N. "I hope more will follow his lead," Clinton said.

Despite new troubles for Mir, NASA proceeds with shuttle launch plans

MOSCOW (AP) — Troubles arrived in threes Monday at the Mir space station, just three days before the U.S. space shuttle Atlantis is to be launched on a visit to the ailing station.

First the Mir's main computer failed for the third time in three weeks. That problem was followed by two new ones: the failure of a carbon dioxide removal system and the appearance of a mysterious leak of brown fluid.

Those on the Mir — two Russians and American astronaut Michael Foale — were not in danger, space officials insisted, and NASA said it was going ahead with preparations to launch the Atlantis on Thursday.

"We would strongly dislike it if the shuttle launch is postponed, because it is to bring a new computer and other spare parts," said Viktor Blagov, deputy Russian Mission Control chief.

However, the docking will only be possible if the Mir's capricious computer functions properly throughout the procedure — which is far from certain.

"It functions for one week, and then it gives us a surprise like it did this morning," Blagov said at a briefing. "It's difficult to forecast how the computer will behave in the future."

When the computer goes down, so does the gyroscope system that keeps the space station in the right position for the docking. Loss of orientation also means the Mir's solar panels lose the best angle to soak up energy from the sun, which can cause a power shortage.

Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, who met with visiting Vice President Al Gore for economic talks on Monday, sought to downplay the Mir's woes.

"Nothing prevents us from continuing the joint Russian-American research work on the Mir space station," the ITAR-Tass news agency quoted Chernomyrdin as saying. "The shuttle will bring enough spare parts to fix all the problems."

Asked about the computer breakdown, Gore said NASA was "conducting a very intensive and detailed review of the Mir."

Monday's breakdown is the fifth time since July that the computer has malfunctioned. The crew, accustomed to the problem, quickly replaced a faulty component, tested it and prepared to restart the computer, said Valery Lyndin, a spokesman for Mission Control.

As during the previous breakdowns, Foale and Russians Anatoly Solovyov and Pavel Vinogradov switched off the station's oxygen generator and most other systems to save power.

In the past, it has taken one to two days to get most systems back up and running. Lyndin said the repairs were going more quickly this time, and the crew was expected to fully restore Mir's orientation early Tuesday.

Early Monday the crew saw a small brown cloud outside the station. Blagov initially said it appeared to be a leak, perhaps fuel from one of dozens of thrusters on the station or some substance from the ruptured Spektr module, sealed off since a June 25 collision.

"It looks a bit mysterious and we will have to analyze it," he said. Later in the day, the crew watched more of the substance leak, and said it looked like a spray of oily drops.

Onboard equipment didn't indicate any fuel loss, so the substance may have been from an unused engine, Lyndin said.

And finally, the carbon dioxide removal system shut down Monday because of a fan breakdown. Blagov said the failure poses no danger: The station has enough oxygen to last for several days, a large supply of solid-fuel canisters to generate more, and the carbon dioxide won't reach worrisome levels for 26 days.

CLOCK: Town hall meeting to be held on debt interest payments on spending their parents incurred. Their taxes are high because their parents wanted tax cuts and not discipline. This is not just. This is not generational responsibility," Scheberle said.

This kind of representation of the debt may be misleading, however, according to Paul Hodges, UTPB professor of economics.

Although Hodges believes in keeping the budget deficit down to protect future generations, he points out that there are many factors at play in the national economy and numbers clicking on the debt clock might not be a proper representation of the problem.

"There are many good reasons for government spending, such as social programs — which include highways, bridges, the Federal Drug Administration, municipal, etc.," Hodges said.

Hodges said that the federal budget would have been balanced this year had it not been for new spending programs instituted. "They cut taxes and increased spending," he said.

In November, a town hall meeting is being scheduled to discuss problems in the nation's Social Security program, said Terri Brooks, public relations director for UTPB.

"The UTPB student government will be attending in order to represent the school in hopes of stimulating a response in Congress," Ms. Brooks said.

The debt clock was parked in several areas for a short time as it made its way through the Permian Basin Monday. The Coalition continued its 10-city Texas tour of the clock, moving it to Lubbock by midafternoon.

Despite the balanced budget agreement passed by President Clinton and the Republican-led Congress, the budget debt will be higher next year, Scheberle said.

"We will continue borrowing money from the Social Security Trust Fund and we will still add more than $1 trillion in additional debt by 2002, when the budget is supposed to finally be in balance. That comes out to $4,000 more in additional debt per person over the next five years," Scheberle said.

SONG: Group consists of Baptist music ministers

(From 1A)

We actually put out a cassette on that called 'The CenturyMen in China.'

"Another interesting thing about this program" was "the 90-minute telecast went throughout China. Only half of the people in China have television. That means 500,000 million.

"That's nothing to sneeze at. They allowed us to sing sacred music and, to my understanding, that had not been done before."

The resulting "Walls and Bridges" received an Emmy.

Membership in The CenturyMen is by audition. All members are Southern Baptist ministers of music. The group, which has released 12 recordings, tours abroad every five years and has performed in Turkey, Spain, Portugal, Greece, Switzerland, Israel, Brazil, Russia, Poland, the Czech Republic, and in China twice (1983 and 1988).

"The CenturyMen is an all-volunteer choir," said Red, the group's musical director. "A labor of love. Everybody contributes time and talent to that group. Even when I produce the recordings, and we just came out with a new recording, the total time is donated to The CenturyMen."

Members of the choir are supported from their own pocketbooks as well as by their churches. Originally conceived in 1969 by Paul Stevens, then in charge of the Baptist Radio and Television Commission in Fort Worth, The CenturyMen includes three Midlanders.

Ty Morris Jr., minister of music at Crestview Baptist Church, has been a member since 1978. George Koehl III, minister of music at First Baptist Church, has been a member since 1987. Barry Dowell, interim associate minister of music at First Baptist Church and former choral director at Midland High School, auditioned this summer. This tour marks his first with the group.

Also a member is Big Spring resident Joe Whitten, who directs a music ministry in prisons. Whitten has been a member since 1970.

'This kind of group is unique. The number of people in it, plus the fact they are all professionals.'

— CenturyMen arranger Buryl Red

"This kind of group is unique," Red said of The CenturyMen. "The number of people in it, plus the fact they are all professionals. There's not a lot of music available for them to sing without some kind of rearranging that would exploit their voices and their sound."

Most of the group's songs are arranged by Red, whose work has been described by the Washington Post as "uncommonly creative."

A graduate of Baylor University and Yale University, Red founded BR Productions and Generic Music in New York City. He and Joseph Joubert received a Drama Desk Award nomination for outstanding orchestration for their work on "Violet," recipient of the New York Drama Critics award for Best Musical off and on-Broadway for the 1996-97 season.

"It won all the possible off-Broadway awards," Red said of "Violet," which is based on a short story by Doris Betts called "The Ugliest Pilgrim."

Joubert, former musical director for Judy Collins and who has worked as producer and arranger in the recording field with Tramaine Hawkins, Diana Ross and Luther Vandross, is an accompanist for The CenturyMen and choir director at the Community Baptist Church, Queens, N.Y.

Also accompanying the group is John Campbell, head of the Department of Performance Studies of the School of Music at Hardin-Simmons University and organist at First Baptist Church, Abilene.

Red is a charter member of The CenturyMen. Each member is a soloist, conductor, teacher or administrator as part of his qualifications. Currently, the membership comes from close to 30 states and one foreign country.

Annually, The CenturyMen assemble for a concert tour in an area of the United States. This year's tour brings the singers to Midland for today's performance, which features selections by Copeland and Tschesnokoff as well as numerous hymns and sacred songs.

"They will hear a sound and see a group like one they've never experienced before," Red said of those attending the Midland concert. "I hope that it would be both a concert and a worship experience."

TRIAL: Accuser's life was unraveling, defense lawyer says carry a maximum penalty of life in prison.

Commonwealth's Attorney Richard Trodden said the Feb. 12 evening began with the couple watching a pornographic movie at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Alexandria and ended with Albert angrily grabbing her arms, throwing her on the bed and telling her: "You've been a bad girl, you didn't bring anybody."

Trodden said Albert pinched the woman's cheeks to force her to perform oral sex. Albert ignored the woman's pleas of "Stop, you're hurting me," and mocked her, saying, "You know you like this," the prosecutor told the jury of seven women and five men in his opening statement.

At that point, the normally stoic Albert looked away from the jury box and began taking notes. His fiancee, ESPN producer Heather Faulkiner, sat behind him, expressionless. His daughter, Denise, winced.

Albert's accuser, 42, was not in the courtroom. Witnesses in a criminal case are not allowed in until they are called to testify.

The prosecutor said the two met in 1986 when the accuser was a telephone operator at the Miami Airport Hilton hotel, and "it was a sexual relationship from almost the very beginning."

'She became unbalanced, vindictive and wanting to get revenge on Marv Albert. This is her revenge.'

— Defense attorney Roy Black

Trodden said the couple had several threesomes before, including trysts in Los Angeles and once in Miami, the last occurring in 1990 or 1991.

Because Albert's job prevented the couple from seeing each other for months at a time, Trodden said they engaged in lots of fantasy sex on the phone, and Albert's end of the conversation generally centered "on participating in a threesome with another male."

Trodden said that during their sexual encounters, Albert would "sometimes ask her to bring ladies' underwear for him to wear."

He said that on the day before the alleged attack, Albert had repeatedly told the woman of his desire for three-way sex with another man that evening.

When it was the defense's turn to address the jury, Black argued that the woman was lashing back at Albert because her life was unraveling: She had lost her job and Albert had recently told her he was thinking of getting married to another woman.

Black also noted that the woman had been released from a stay in a mental hospital just six weeks before the alleged attack.

"She became unbalanced, vindictive and wanting to get revenge on Marv Albert," Black said. "This is her revenge."

Black said the woman asked to be bitten and suggested oral sex because she did not have birth control with her.

Jennings, through a spokesman in New York, said, "I am unaware of even having met the woman referred to in the Marv Albert trial." In his nightly ABC newscast, Jennings did a brief voice-over about the trial and did not mention that his name came up.

Earlier in the day, the jury was seated in less than an hour and a half after its members gave assurances they could handle graphic testimony about violent sex. The trial is expected to last about a week.

Black opened a window into his strategy by asking about 20 prospective jurors if they had ever seen "Fatal Attraction." The movie is about an obsessed woman who refused to let go of a failed love affair and stalks her ex-lover.

"Would there be anyone uncomfortable to sit on a case involving a sexual activity, something you hadn't done before, involving biting or something like that?" the lawyer asked.

No potential jurors said they would be uncomfortable, and none said they would be disturbed by hearing about sex acts they themselves would not do.

One woman, who had a book titled "History of Christianity" with her, split with the other potential jurors on the question of whether they would think less of a person who watched adult movies. She indicated she would; she was not selected.

IMMIGRATION: Advocates call for extension of policy

(From 1A)

ub of the American Immigration Lawyers Association. "We are getting calls here from people who want us to tell them what to do and we simply can't. Too many things are too uncertain."

At a rally on the Capitol steps last week, immigrant-advocacy groups and their congressional supporters clamored for an extension of the provision, which is also backed by various business and religious organizations.

"There is so much talk in this Congress about family values, and yet they turn their backs on hundreds of thousands of families who want nothing more but to work hard, to sacrifice, to take care of their children," Rep. Luis Gutierrez, D-Ill., told the rally. "They want nothing other than that and to remain together."

Critics contend the United States shouldn't reward immigrants who either came here unlawfully or overstayed their temporary visas.

Rep. Lamar Smith, the Texas Republican who spearheaded passage last year of a tough new immigration law, has little sympathy for the family hardship argument.

"People are responsible for their own actions," the chairman of the House immigration panel said Monday. "Don't complain about a situation that they created themselves."

Adding to the confusion, many illegal immigrants who don't apply for the provision before Sept. 30 may find themselves subject to penalties stemming from an unrelated deadline.

Under the new immigration law, illegal immigrants apprehended in the United States after Sept. 27 face three-year or 10-year bans on returning to the country, depending on how long they had been here.

Teen arrested in beating death of young baby sitter

STANWOOD, Wash. (AP) — A teen-age boy who had escaped from a halfway house was arrested on suspicion of beating a 12-year-old girl to death while she was baby-sitting five children at a neighbor's home.

"She was like a flower, and it's like somebody stomped on her," said John Stephen Jones, the girl's father. "She didn't deserve to die."

Ashley Jones was attacked late Saturday, apparently during a burglary, said sheriff's spokeswoman Jan Jorgensen. It was not immediately known whether she had been sexually assaulted. The children, ages 2 to 8, were asleep and not harmed.

David Dodge, 17, of nearby Camano Island, was arrested Sunday night on a fugitive warrant for escaping Friday from a halfway house in the Seattle area where he had been serving time for theft. He was taken into custody at a friend's apartment in Stanwood, a rural community about 40 miles north of Seattle.

Police said witnesses' descriptions led them to arrest Dodge in the slaying.

Dodge was jailed as an adult for investigation of first-degree murder. Bail was set at $1 million Monday.

Ashley was found unconscious when the adults returned home to the middle-class neighborhood early Sunday morning. She was pronounced dead at a hospital. Ashley suffered head injuries and had been "very, very brutally beaten," Jorgensen said.

Police on Sunday combed Stanwood for clues, interviewing the residents of at least 150 homes in the town of 2,000.

Jorgensen said Ashley did not know her attacker, and there were no signs of forced entry or theft at the home. "He walked through an unlocked door," the sheriff's spokeswoman said.

The slaying was the first since the early 1980s in Stanwood, which has become attractive as a bedroom community for workers in the Seattle area.

Terry Entz, a neighbor, said at least 100 people gathered in front of the Jones home Sunday night, holding candles in cups and singing "Amazing Grace." The girl's parents were out there crying, Entz said, adding: "It was pretty sad."

"It's heart-wrenching to us," Mayor Matthew McCune said. "We know the child."

McCune called the killing a "reality check" for the neighborhood, where garage doors are often left open overnight and the biggest previous crime he could recall was a car break-in.

"It's scary because we all felt really safe," said a neighbor, Judith Tillett.

Fewer people buckle up in back seat, survey indicates

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Only half the adults who always use a seat belt in the front seat of a car buckle up when they sit in the back seat, a safety group said Monday.

About 77 percent of those surveyed by the Air Bag Safety Coalition said they always wear a seat belt when driving or in the front passenger seat, but only 39 percent always wear it in back.

But unbelted back seat passengers are at serious risk of being killed in higher-speed accidents or potentially killing others as they fly forward, said Janet Dewey, the coalition's executive director.

"There's a perception folks don't have to buckle up in the back seat," she said. "The back seat isn't necessarily safer if you don't buckle up."

"The tragic death of Princess Diana has put a spotlight on the importance of seat belt use," said Dewey. "The only person who survived that high-speed crash was properly buckled up in the front seat and had the added protection of an air bag."

Diana and her companion, Dodi Fayed, were unbuckled in the back seat when their car crashed in a Paris tunnel Aug. 31, according to French authorities. Diana, Fayed and their driver, Henri Paul, were killed. The only survivor, bodyguard Trevor Rees-Jones, is recovering in a Paris hospital.

"Let's learn from this tragedy," said Dewey.

About 61 percent of survey respondents said they always make sure everyone in the front seat is wearing a seat belt but only 34 percent said they did the same with all back seat passengers.

In a 55 mph crash, an average size back-seat passenger would fly forward with a force of 3,000 pounds.

The telephone survey of 800 registered voters was conducted Sept. 16-17 on behalf of the coalition by Public Opinion Strategies of Alexandria, Va. The survey has a margin of error of plus or minus about 3.5 percentage points.

Clinton answers critics

■ President Clinton publicly denied accusations of wrongdoing in soliciting campaign funds last year.

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Rejecting accusations of wrongdoing, President Clinton declared Monday that neither he nor Vice President Al Gore broke the law while soliciting campaign donations last year.

"I believe what the vice president and what I did was legal, and I am absolutely certain that we believed we were acting within the letter of the law," Clinton told reporters in New York, where he was addressing the United Nations.

The Justice Department is conducting a review of fund-raising activities by Clinton and Gore to determine if a more comprehensive investigation by an independent counsel is warranted.

The review — announced over the weekend — marked a shift by Attorney General Janet Reno, who faces intense pressure from Republicans in Congress to name an independent counsel.

The appointment of a special prosecutor could cast a shadow over Gore's quest to become the Democratic nominee for president in 2000.

At issue is whether Clinton and Gore broke the law by telephoning potential donors from the White House and whether contributions were then improperly placed in the Clinton-Gore re-election committee account rather than the Democratic Party's account.

Federal law prohibits fund-raising efforts on government property. It also prohibits mixing accounts for party-building purposes and those intended to benefit a specific candidate.

Administration officials argue campaign donations could be raised from the White House grounds if the funds were unregulated "soft money" earmarked for the Democratic Party.

Clinton's comments came after the New York Times and the Washington Post reported in Monday's editions the existence of memos asking Clinton to call 40 wealthy contributors.

The Washington Post reported that the Justice Department obtained, but did not examine until recently, documents indicating Clinton made a "handful" of fund-raising calls. Those documents apparently prompted Reno to order a 30-day review of the case.

Clinton was asked by reporters about the documents urging him to make the fund-raising calls.

"I've already said I don't know — I haven't read — I don't know what you're talking about on the memos because I haven't read them, so I can't comment on that," Clinton said, referring to newspaper accounts about the memos. "I've already answered about the calls."

The president repeatedly has said he does not recall making telephone solicitations but could not rule out having done so.

The New York Times reported it was unclear how many calls Clinton may have made but that most of the people on the list did make large contributions to the Democratic Party and that a portion of their donations were improperly transferred to the Clinton-Gore campaign.

In his first lengthy response since learning of the Justice Department review, Clinton said, "I'm going to cooperate however I can to establish the facts, but I think that's important that you and the American people understand that I believed then and I believe now what we did was legal.

"But I am absolutely positive that we intended to be firmly within the letter of the law when we were out there campaigning and raising funds as we should have been doing. We had to do that," Clinton said.

Clinton has maintained the Democrats were forced to raise vast amounts of money for the party to remain competitive with Republicans.

Democrats still raised less money than the Republican Party.

Gore previously has acknowledged making telephone solicitations from his White House office but defended his actions by saying there was "no controlling legal authority" barring the calls.

Gore said he was raising money for the Democratic Party, not specifically for candidates. But records indicated the contributions were deposited with the Clinton-Gore re-election committee.

Federal law limits contributions to $1,000 per election for individuals and $5,000 per election for political action committees.

Reno should call for Clinton probe

Attorney General Janet Reno's ordering of a preliminary 30-day review into the 1996 fund-raising activities of President Clinton marks a hesitating step toward what should be a reasonable move in light of the implications: Appointment of a special prosecutor.

For months it has been obvious that there was enough smoke coming from the allegations of foreign contributions, the solicitation and laundering of illegal contributions, and other fund-raising activities to justify appointment of a special prosecutor. Yet Reno held off and now is only beginning to take tentative steps in that direction.

Republicans have been pressing Reno for months to appoint a special prosecutor and get the probe out of the Justice Department.

Why? Even as liberal a newspaper as the New York Times noted in an editorial Monday that "Reno's attempt to narrow the preliminary inquiries to telephone calls is another ridiculously feeble response to the existing record. The purpose of the Independent Counsel Act is to maintain public confidence in the political and legal systems. Given what we know about the Clinton fund-raising machine, that can only be supplied by a counsel with a broad mandate."

Republicans have been pressing Reno for months to appoint a special prosecutor and get the probe out of the Justice Department. They contend that as long as the investigation remains in the Justice Department there will be concerns of conflicts of interest.

Reno should take that next step not only to show that she really has an interest in justice, but to give Clinton and Vice President Al Gore the assurance that they will receive a truly independent investigation of the allegations that have dogged them for months.

Army must regain trust of rank and file

The Army has taken a good, hard look at itself in the wake of a sexual abuse scandal that broke last November at its Aberdeen Proving Ground, and it doesn't much like what it sees.

The largest study of sexual harassment ever done by the Army was sparked by Aberdeen, where male instructors were accused of sexually abusing female trainees. The study said the abuse hotline the Army established and its prosecution of those accused point to a determination to root out the problem. ...

There's a lot at stake in what the Army decides to do in this case. The 10-month study also showed that the Army's rank and file "uniformly do not have trust and confidence in their leaders" on these issues.

Regaining that trust is paramount if the Army is to change.

Iowa caucus an inaccurate portrayal of America

WASHINGTON — The frenetic and unrepresentative way we select our presidential candidates should be consigned to the ash can of political history. At present, activists of both parties in Iowa meet in the nation's first caucuses to select, unofficially, that state's convention delegates. Reporters swarm; candidates spend; pollsters and pundits study campaign entrails.

Safire

Eight days afterward, in the nation's first primary, cosseted New Hampshire voters — each having shaken the hand of every candidate at least three times — make or break candidacies. Thus do our traditional "bellwether states" determine presidential fates.

But too often bellwethers ring the wrong bells. In New Hampshire in '92, Paul Tsongas beat Bill Clinton and went nowhere; in '96, Pat Buchanan beat Bob Dole and then fizzled. And as Iowa goes, so goes the Farm Belt and that's all.

The population of these two states is no sample of America. Nor do Hawkeyes and Granite Staters worry about urban issues. Why should two small states — vulnerable to media blitzes by wealthy candidates or single-issue appeals by fringe candidates — have exclusive rights to "first"?

No tradition, especially one of recent vintage, justifies such warped local influence on selecting our candidates for national office.

But hark — stealthily, at the 1996 Republican Convention, the lock that these two states have on "first" was removed. In an effort to lengthen the decision-making, bonus delegates were offered states that held primaries late; but in a little-noted move, the GOP also ruled that no state shall have its caucus or primary election before the first Monday in February.

That rendered meaningless New Hampshire's standing threat to move its primary back clear to Thanksgiving, if necessary, to beat any challenger. Now — if Democrats go along — any state can tie for first.

The prospect of drawing national attention is dawning on state committees of other states. Mike Hellon, soon to be elected Arizona's state GOP chairman, says, "If we decide to go early, we'll go earliest."

In Delaware, which last year was denounced by New Hampshire for daring to come within four days of its primary primacy, state chairman Basil Battaglia shows a lively interest in the first Tuesday in February. Similar sentiment is found in the caucus states Louisiana and Alaska.

Aggravating New Hampshire's problem of retaining its stranglehold is the likelihood of a campaign for president by its Sen. Bob Smith. He's an attractive conservative, a fresh face in the Quayle-Buchanan wing, and his "Live Free or Die" PAC is being formed.

If Smith gets a serious national campaign going he won't be running as a favorite son, but will dominate the New Hampshire presidential primary much as Iowa's Sen. Tom Harkin did in Iowa in 1992, or as Sen. John McCain would in Arizona in 2000.

Smith points out that New Hampshire's primary primacy should not preclude a state resident from running. (Had it been in effect in the last century, New Hampshire's Franklin Pierce would never have been president, and early ad men would have been denied "We Polk'd You in 1844, We'll Pierce You in 1852.") But most would discount its results.

In primary reform, it takes three to tango — both parties plus the state legislature that sets the primary or caucus date. If Chairman Battaglia of the Delaware GOP can get his Democratic counterpart to support a move to "earliest primary," the legislature will go along.

But will the Democratic National Committee in Washington? DNC chairman Roy Romer, stunned by a question not dealing with scandal, hasn't even thought about that yet.

But I can't see a national party going to court to overturn a state's decision about its primary election date; it would infuriate the voters of that state.

Why am I egging on these state chairmen to break up the Hawkeye-Granite axis? Not to front-load the primaries; far from it. The idea, pioneered by the South's Super Tuesday, is to move toward sectional primaries, with each region of the country to have its own month of exposure to national candidates. Every four years, each section would rotate into being first .

Sensible travel schedules; four full months before party voters decide; no stampedes or falling in love with a stranger. Primary reform beckons; who dares fail to try?

Picket fences don't turn back the clock

FISHTRAP HOLLOW, Miss. — It probably took longer for me to make the list of what was stolen than it did for the thieves to do the stealing.

Where were the papers on that gizmo that cuts the weeds, and what kind of organized fanatic keeps papers like that anyhow?

What size was the air tank? I just remember it was Camaro red.

The push mower was the cheapest one you could buy at Wal-Mart. I prefer the light ones that are easy to maneuver around a zillion shrubs and flowerbeds.

The big riding mower was my part of an estate, an inheritance, if you will, a sentimental item. And, yes, I can get sentimental about a lawn mower. Just don't ask me about its horsepower.

Johnson

The thieves will get 10 cents on the dollar for what they lifted. With my casual inventory, I'll get less than that from the insurance company.

Our forefathers had to endure the elements, hard physical labor, pestilence, primitive dentistry.

It falls our lot in 1997 to live with petty, persistent, locust-like thieves, most of whom have a chemical craving much stronger than hunger. They steal for dope.

My particular thieves had it easy. They would have noticed this place sits unoccupied most of the time, back from the lonesome road, surrounded by woods. They would have waited till dark, then backed in their big truck, almost to the concrete pig, just shy of the woodshed.

They could have sat and drunk a beer, if they wanted to, spread out the sleeping bag they were stealing, relaxed for a while. They might have heard the owl that hollers through the woods, or, at the least, the whippoorwill.

It was an easy job.

And yet, practically speaking, they didn't get much. If it took an hour — which I doubt — the take, split a couple of ways, would not be impressive. They'd be better off keeping the yard equipment to start a lawn-mowing service.

For that they were set. Even stole the gas and motor oil. I could be their first customer, bereft as I am of lawn.

It was a bum start to a weekend, discovering the thefts. But I cannot say I was surprised.

I have bragged for too long about this sanctuary, about how low property crime is in this little corner of the world, about how honest are most of the citizens. I guess it was an unconscious dare, leaving things scattered about, unlocked and unhidden.

I wanted to believe that there was a place left like that, a place like the ones we remember from childhood. I shook my head and felt somehow superior when a friend in Memphis told me how a concrete Saint Francis was lifted from her garden by what must have been strong, religious, aesthetically conscious thieves.

I remember the first night I spent here, how I backed up from the back porch and looked at the little house from a distance for a long, long while. The amber bulb next to the back door was the only light burning, and I thought the place was perfect.

Some people don't feel safe in the woods, all alone. It was the only place that I did.

A lot has happened since then.

Even before this recent, petty problem, I had been made wiser. You cannot turn back the clock, not even with elaborate props like picket fences and cobblestone walks. Ours is a country where people steal from one another.

The past is an amber light, far in the distance.

CHARLEY REESE

I'd rather protect U.S. than support NAFTA expansion

President Clinton wants fast track authority to expand the North American Free Trade Agreement. Congress should refuse.

First, it's unconstitutional, not that anyone in Washington much cares about that. Nevertheless, the Constitution, which is the sole authority for all of the federal government, places primary responsibility for trade policy with Congress, not with the president.

What Clinton wants is authority to negotiate a complex agreement, hand Congress a document of several thousands of pages and say, "Quick, now, vote yes or no, without any opportunity to amend or change it."

Reese

If Congress agrees, it is abandoning its duty.

Second, the administration stung Congress once with the original NAFTA. Administration officials claimed NAFTA wouldn't cost many jobs. It did. They claimed it would create many jobs. It didn't. They claimed there were provisions to prevent dumping and to handle environmental and labor concerns. Those provisions proved worthless. They claimed American trade would benefit. It didn't. The pre-NAFTA trade surplus with Mexico became, and remains, a trade deficit. The deficit with Canada got bigger.

Third, expanding NAFTA would be injurious to the American people.

NAFTA never was about trade and especially not about free trade. It was designed to make Mexico safe for multinational corporate investors by guaranteeing that they could set up a plant in Mexico, enjoying profitable exploitation of Mexican labor and avoiding any environmental costs, and still ship their stuff back to the United States for sale to those Americans who still had a job.

What Clinton wants to do is expand the number of countries in which the multinationals can safely exploit the cheap labor while defiling the environment. They will do this, of course, by shutting down plants in the United States and building them in the foreign countries.

This is bad for our environment and bad for the environment of the foreign countries. This is bad for our working men and women, and it is bad for the working men and women in the foreign countries. They will work at shameful wages with few or no benefits for absentee owners who care nothing about them or their country. And why should they? They care nothing about American workers and America.

In fact, it is misleading to say that Clinton wants this or that. Clinton, like most recent presidents, is a mere front guy for the multinational corporations and bankers who actually run the federal government. You will be seeing their agents spreading their propaganda far and wide. They will tell you what great benefits this will bring and what dire consequences will result if Congress doesn't go along. They will count on you being so stupid as to have forgotten their past lies and the damage their previous policies have caused. They will hope you will not ask why Americans are now among the lowest paid workers among the industrial nations.

This is the perfect issue for you to recognize which politician cares about America and which politician has sold you out to the money interests. You will find it has nothing to do with whether the politician is a Democrat or a Republican, a conservative or a liberal.

The great divide on this issue is simple: big money or the welfare of the American people.

The hirelings will call us protectionists because we oppose them. We should accept the label with pride, for what we wish to protect are the health and welfare of the American people, their jobs, their Constitution and their children's future.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 23, the 266th day of 1996. There are 99 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 23, 1779, during the Revolutionary War, the American warship Bon Homme Richard defeated the HMS Serapis after the American commander, John Paul Jones, is said to have declared: "I have not yet begun to fight!"

On this date:

In 63 B.C., Caesar Augustus was born in Rome.

In 1642, Harvard College in Cambridge, Mass., held its first commencement.

In 1780, British spy John Andre was captured along with papers revealing Benedict Arnold's plot to surrender West Point to the British.

In 1806, the Lewis and Clark expedition returned to St. Louis from the Pacific Northwest.

In 1846, the planet Neptune was discovered by German astronomer Johann Gottfried Galle.

In 1912, Mack Sennett's first Keystone short subject, a split-reel of two comedies starring Mabel Normand and Ford Sterling, was released.

In 1952, Republican vice-presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon went on television to deliver what came to be known as the "Checkers" speech as he refuted allegations of improper campaign financing.

In 1957, nine black students who had entered Little Rock Central High School in Arkansas were forced to withdraw because of a white mob outside.

In 1962, New York's Philharmonic Hall (since renamed Avery Fisher Hall) formally opened as the first unit of the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts.

In 1973, former Argentine president Juan Peron was returned to power.

In 1981, the Reagan administration announced plans for what became known as Radio Marti.

Ten years ago: Delaware Sen. Joseph Biden withdrew from the Democratic presidential race following questions about his use of borrowed quotations and the portrayal of his academic record.

Five years ago: Plans for a presidential debate fell apart, with President Bush continuing to object to a single-moderator format proposed by a bipartisan commission; it was the second such cancellation.

One year ago: Space shuttle Atlantis left Russia's orbiting Mir station with astronaut Shannon Lucid, who ended her six-month visit with tender goodbyes to her Russian colleagues. Ross Perot sued the bipartisan commission that voted to keep him out of the presidential debates, arguing that excluding him would deepen public cynicism and cause his campaign "incalculable damage."

Growth hormone use in children found ineffective

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A large study has cast strong doubt on the increasingly common practice of giving growth hormone injections to short children to help them reach an average height. It concludes that years of treatment do not achieve this goal even for the one group of children who are thought to benefit: those who are deficient in human growth hormone, a pituitary gland chemical that stimulates growth.

Earlier research has found that the treatment is ineffective and that it could even inhibit growth when given to very short children who had normal amounts of growth hormone but had been born into families where people tended to be short. But doctors have long assumed that hormone injections are necessary supplements for children with abnormally low levels of the hormone.

In the new study, doctors at the University of Paris followed hormone-deficient children from the time they started treatment until they had attained about 98 percent of their adult height. Their growth was, on average, 2.4 to 2.7 inches less than was expected, said Dr. Joel Coste, the lead author and an associate professor of biostatistics at the University of Paris. "Growth hormone treatment has not restored normal growth to these children," Coste and his colleagues wrote in the current issue of The British Medical Journal.

But a leading expert on growth hormone, Dr. Harvey Guyda, chairman of the department of pediatrics at Montreal Children's Hospital, questioned the study's conclusions, saying the research had been flawed.

The number of children worldwide who take growth hormone has increased in the last decade, ever since genetic engineering made it possible to manufacture large amounts of it. In the United States, research shows that 30,000 short children take growth hormone each year in the hope that it will lead to average heights. The treatment, which involves painful intramuscular injections three times a week, costs $10,000 to $50,000 a year, depending on a child's body weight, and usually continues for four to five years, according to the American Academy of Pediatrics.

In several previous studies, most hormone-deficient children grew to average heights for their age and sex a year or so after treatment. But most of these studies ended too soon to determine whether the children had kept growing at a normal level after the growth hormone had been stopped.

The new study is significant because it is one of the few studies on growth hormone that followed children until they were almost fully grown. It lasted from 1973 to 1993 and monitored 3,233 children for an average of about four years.

Of the 3,233 children enrolled in the study, 3,165 were identified through blood tests as having low growth hormone levels. The reasons for the lack of growth hormone included prior radiation treatments to the head or spine for cancer therapy and illnesses like kidney disease. But no cause could be found in many of the children.

The researchers calculated the target height for each child based on the average heights of the child's parents. The doctors then recorded each child's height and weight every three months, until the treatment stopped.

Most of the children in the study did not reach their target heights, as determined by the researchers. The children were evaluated according to their target heights; there was no control group.

Two groups of hormone-deficient patients did better than the rest: those whose treatment started before puberty and those whose lack of hormone had been caused by an illness. But Dr. Coste and his colleag es concluded that further research was needed to identify which hormone-deficient patients truly benefited from hormone injections.

Founder of charity faces 12 years in prison

Associated Press

Bennett also siphoned $7 million into private businesses and personal accounts, using some of the cash to buy an expensive home, a luxury car and first-class travel for his family.

PHILADELPHIA — A man who said he suffered delusions that he was doing God's work got 12 years in prison Monday for running the biggest charity scam in U.S. history.

"This is a very sad day for someone who rose to such influence and promise," U.S. District Judge Edmund V. Ludwig told 60-year-old John Bennett Jr., head of the now-defunct Foundation for New Era Philanthropy.

The charismatic former drug counselor got 500 nonprofit organizations and some of the country's wealthiest philanthopists — including Christian colleges, Ivy League universities, museums and major charities — to entrust a total of $354 million of their money to him by promising to double it in six months with matching contributions from other rich people who wanted to remain anonymous.

'I never intended to defraud or to hurt anyone. The benefactors were real to me at that time.'
— John Bennet, Jr., former head of Foundation for New Era Philanthropy

There were no such anonymous benefactors, however. The foundation was a pyramid scheme that shuffled money from newer participants to the earlier ones.

Through tears, Bennett said hallucinations and a drive to "change the world for the glory of God" led to his actions at New Era.

"The dream became a need, the need became obsession, the obsession became fantasy and the fantasy a delusion," he said.

Bennett also siphoned $7 million into private businesses and personal accounts, using some of the cash to buy an expensive home, a luxury car and first-class travel for his family.

"I never intended to defraud or to hurt anyone. The benefactors were real to me at that time," said Bennett, who said he was suicidal after the 1995 collapse of New Era.

The judge gave a lighter sentence than the 24 1/2 years sought by prosecutors because of Bennett's years of charity work before establishing New Era and his cooperation after the collapse. With his help — and the return of $1.5 million — authorities reduced charities' losses from $100 million to $20 million.

Ludwig gave some weight to Bennett's contention that mental problems affected his actions, but noted that the defendant "devised, developed and completely managed what became a very large financial enterprise."

In March, Bennett pleaded no contest to 82 counts of money-laundering, fraud and tax violations. The judge had barred him from claiming at a trial that religious zeal and brain damage from a 1984 car accident had caused him to commit the crimes.

Bennett said he believed he had held meetings with the imaginary benefactors while running New Era. He portrayed himself as a religious Christian who needed to help others, as a financial ignoramus and as someone who craved approval because he was the child of an alcoholic.

Prosecution psychiatrists had accused Bennett of faking and said he had to function on a high mental level to perpetrate such a sophisticated fraud. They did say he had at least one personality disorder: narcissism.

Victims of the scheme include the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Detroit Institute of Arts, philanthropists Laurance and Mary Rockefeller, and former Treasury Secretary William Simon.

"It's a grim sentence when you're 60 years old," said Paul Nelson, the president of Evangelical Council of Financial Accountability, which represents 100 religious groups affected by the collapse. "What he did was terrible. He created a terrible calamity within the philanthropic community. I'm content that the system of justice has been carried out."

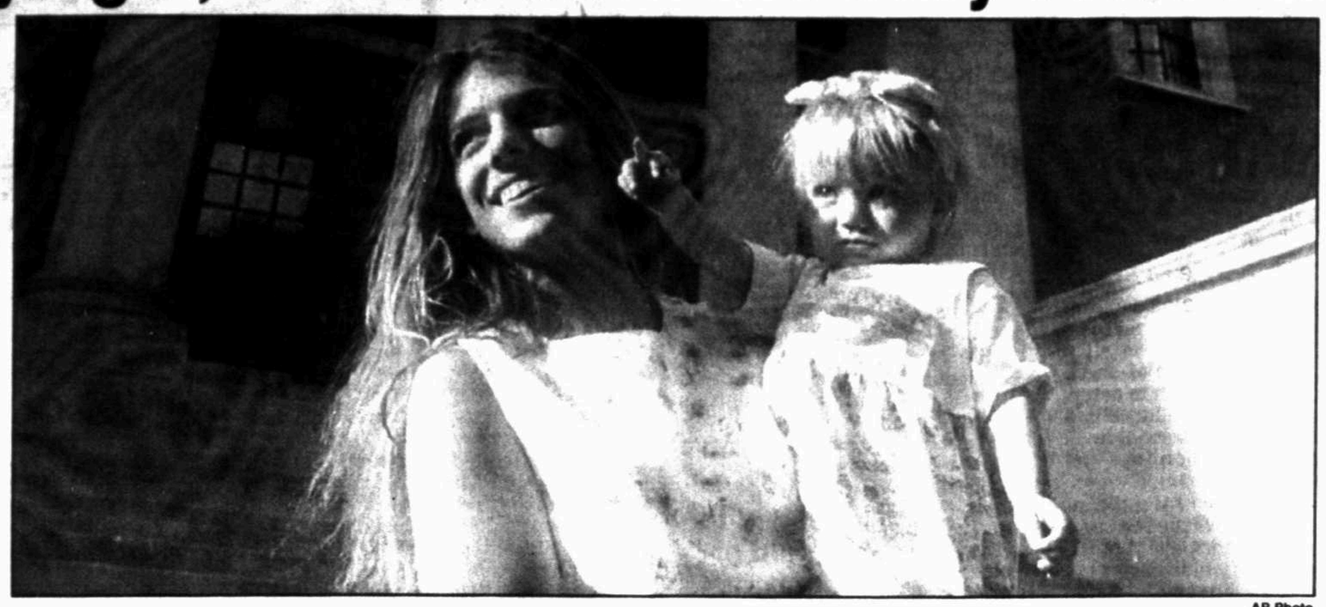
After custody fight, Harvard mom and baby settle into campus life

Associated Press



AP Photo

Gina Ocon of Lakewood, Calif., a Harvard University student, holds her 15-month-old daughter, Bailey, in her arms on the steps of Widener Library at Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass. After a bitter custody fight in California with her ex-boyfriend, which attracted national media attention, Ocon won custody of Bailey last month and was allowed to return to school and attend Harvard with her child.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — For Gina Ocon, the choice was an easy one.

The unmarried 21-year-old mother could stay at home in Southern California with her infant daughter, scraping by on welfare. Or she and little Bailey could return to Massachusetts and a $35,000 scholarship to Harvard University.

The problem was, the father of her child wanted Ocon to stay in California so he could be near his daughter.

Now, after months of rancor and court battles, Ocon and Bailey are back at Harvard, settling into a routine of classes and day care.

Ocon is pretty much a regular Harvard undergrad, except for her apartment in the graduate quarters, the diaper bills and the difficulties of chasing an active 15-month-old up the front steps of Widener Library.

Being a single parent, she said, has put Harvard in perspective.

"There are more important things than just getting straight A's and going to the best law school in the country," she said last week.

Ocon had just finished her freshman year at Harvard when she returned to her native Lakewood, Calif., a Los Angeles suburb, in 1995. She was looking for a fun romance after a tough academic year. She found it in Tommaso Maggiore, a high school acquaintance and community college student who worked in his family's Italian restaurant.

When the summer ended, the couple decided to date long-distance, and Ocon returned to Harvard for her sophomore year. She didn't realize she was pregnant until October.

She withdrew from school and returned to California to have the baby, moving in with Maggiore and his parents in Long Beach. Her Harvard friends said that she was crazy, that she was going to ruin her life.

Ocon figured she would go back to school eventually. And the idea of young motherhood didn't scare her too much. After all, Ocon's mother had her when she was just 17, raising Ocon pretty much by herself.

After Bailey was born in June 1996, the relationship between the baby's parents began to unravel. Ocon resented that she was still in California and not back at school. Maggiore filed for custody.

The case went to trial. Ocon went on welfare.

Maggiore argued that he and his family could better care for Bailey in California. And he called his ex-girlfriend selfish for wanting to move their child to Massachusetts. A court ruled in Ocon's favor.

Yes, Ocon admitted last week, perhaps it was a bit selfish to want to return to Harvard and an Ivy League education. But she added: "If I'm happy, confident and successful, that's going to spill over to my daughter. If I'm miserable and on welfare, that's also going to spill over to her."

Ocon has sole custody. Maggiore can see Bailey during school vacations. The parents split Bailey's day-care costs, and Maggiore pays $214 a month in child support.

Harvard agreed to increase the scholarship package Ocon was receiving, providing additional money for living expenses, a one-bedroom unfurnished graduate student apartment overlooking the Charles River and health insurance for the baby.

Yard-sale specials have helped Ocon furnish the apartment, which she decorated with photographs that include her ex-boyfriend. She said she wants her baby to see Maggiore daily, if not in person, then at least in color 8-by-10s.

Maggiore did not immediately return calls for comment. In an interview being aired this week on TV's "Inside Edition," Maggiore said that he still loves Ocon but that she wants him out of their baby's life.

"But it is not going to happen because I love my daughter," he said.

For a time, he considered moving east to be closer to Bailey but decided against it.

Ocon said the love she once felt for Maggiore is gone. Each claims the other is confrontational during visits with the baby. Maggiore faces charges of assaulting a friend of Ocon's during one visit.

Now a sophomore majoring in social studies, Ocon finds that parenting, homework and an on-campus clerical job leave little room for a social life. Classmates are always offering to baby-sit, but it doesn't give her enough time to rejoin the rugby team she left two years ago.

Harvard officials won't say if there are any other parents among Harvard's 6,600 undergraduates. Ocon said she knows of four, although she has yet to meet them. One of the single mothers, she said, is much older.

The friends she started school with are seniors now, writing theses, interviewing for jobs, applying to graduate school. Ocon, who dreams of becoming an ambassador or an international lawyer, is directing her energies elsewhere.

"It takes a lot of pettiness out of being a Harvard student," Ocon said. "I've got a smiling face to wake up to and a smiling face to put to bed."

Senate panel conducts stock fraud investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators are delving into the slippery world of stock fraud, examining abuses in the penny-stock market estimated to rob ordinary investors of $6 billion a year. The government's top securities regulator promised improved enforcement.

At the same time, the Securities and Exchange Commission and state securities regulators issued a "cold-calling alert" Monday, warning consumers to hang up on aggressive brokers selling investments over the telephone.

The long-running bull market has drawn multitudes of eager new investors but also has created more victims of rogue brokers' aggressive stock schemes and unauthorized trading on accounts, securities regulators say.

In May, regulators in 20 states began a crackdown against 14 brokerage firms accused of fraudulent sales practices. And the FBI has been working with securities regulators to investigate stocks of 19 small companies allegedly manipulated by organized crime.

A Senate investigative subcommittee is looking into the problem and also is trying to put a human face on stock fraud, which often involves low-priced shares of high-risk stocks that are thinly traded. Besides summoning top regulators to testify at a hearing Monday, investigators are hearing first-hand from some small investors who allegedly were bilked.

Many victims of such fraud are elderly.

"In a market like this, parasites crowd in to feast on the bull's success," SEC Chairman Arthur Levitt Jr. told the Governmental Affairs' permanent subcommittee on investigations.

"We have stepped up both our civil and criminal enforcement efforts — we are working with criminal (law enforcement) authorities as never before to lock up bad brokers and deter wrongdoers," he said.

Levitt said he has directed the SEC's enforcement officials to help the Justice Department and local law enforcement authorities in prosecuting more stock fraud cases.

He said the agency also is looking to close loopholes in the rules governing the penny-stock market and is focusing more attention on unscrupulous brokerage firms, not only individual brokers.

Many of the companies involved in penny-stock fraud are actually corporate shells without any real business operations.

Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, the subcommittee's chairwoman, asked Levitt whether he would consider a "zero tolerance" policy which would require brokers to be booted from the securities industry after one violation.

The SEC is "absolutely relentless" in pursuing bad brokers and is moving in the direction of such a policy, Levitt said.

Collins cited regulators' estimates that investors are being defrauded of some $6 billion annually — three times the peak amount during the 1980s before enactment of the Penny Stock Reform Act of 1990.

That law resulted from an epidemic of penny-stock fraud during the last decade. Then as now, rogue brokers often used high-pressure sales tactics over the telephone and the Internet, pushing up stock prices, then dumping their own shares, sending prices abruptly and sharply lower.

Texas executes killer of cab driver

■ Jessel Turner is 27th Texas inmate to receive lethal injection this year. Two more are set to die before month is over.

Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — A former truck driver was executed Monday for fatally shooting a Houston taxi driver 11 years ago during a crime spree that also left another man shot, four women abducted and one of them raped.

Jessel Turner, 37, was pronounced dead at 6:18 p.m., seven minutes after a lethal dose of drugs began flowing into his arms.

Turner had a lengthy final statement in which he praised God and thanked his fellow inmates, family members and prison chaplains. He also asked the forgiveness of his victim's family, none of whom were present.

"First give praise and honor to God," he said. "I would like to acknowledge and thank many men I have been blessed to share my time with, to share my struggles and who have allowed me to help them."

He closed his statement by saying, "Until we meet again, amen."

As the drugs took effect, Turner gasped and grunted before he stopped breathing.

The U.S. Supreme Court rejected Turner's final appeals about two hours before the scheduled execution.

He was the 27th condemned Texas inmate to receive lethal injection this year, adding to what already is a record year for executions in the state. Two more inmates are scheduled to die this month.

Turner was convicted of capital murder for shooting taxi driver Charles Hunter with a .22-caliber pistol the night of Feb. 10, 1986, robbing him of his wallet, dumping the body on the street and then driving away in his cab.

Turner was arrested a short time later, driving another stolen car. The murder weapon was found in the second car. The ransacked cab was found at Turner's apartment complex.

"This was a freak accident by any stretch of the imagination," Turner said in a death row interview last week. "I never would have imagined how this got blown out of proportion."

"This was not an isolated incident," David Brothers, a former assistant district attorney who prosecuted Turner for capital murder, said. "He terrorized people. He kidnapped a number of people, raped one of them, shot other people, assaulted other people, stole property. He

BASIN BRIEFING

Volunteer effort

KPMG Peat Marwick, LLP, a professional services firm, Monday launched its "World of Spirit Day," a nationwide employee volunteer effort. The community service program was held in conjunction with the firm's year-long Centennial anniversary celebration.

During World of Spirit Day, KPMG closed all of its offices nationwide, allowing its 20,000 partners and employees to volunteer their time in the local communities in which the firm operates.

In Midland, KPMG's 29 partners and staff spent Monday in a variety of community endeavors. Half of the employees participated in a High Sky Children's Ranch project, painting as many of the children's rooms as possible during the day. The other half participated in a Christmas in April project by siding and painting a house at 704 S. Clay Street. Afterwards, all of the Midland KPMG employees gathered at High Sky Children's Ranch for a barbecue finale to celebrate the day with the children at High Sky.

KPMG Peat Marwick LLP is the U.S. member firm of KPMG International. In the U.S,. KPMG partners and professionals deliver a wide range of value-added consulting, assurance, tax, and process management services.

A Day in the Lives of George Koehl and Ty Morris Jr.

Baptist baritones minister with music

Baritone George Koehl III had a "glorious experience" singing with The CenturyMen in Hangzhou, China.

"At the conclusion of the concert, we all sang 'God Be With You Till We Meet Again,'" said Koehl, who is minister of music at First Baptist Church here. "We sang in English, and they sang in Chinese. And I thought to myself, 'This must be what Heaven is like.' People from all nations and different languages singing praises to God."

The singers, all Southern Baptist ministers of music accepted by audition into the group, arrived at the Chinese church 45 minutes before the concert began and found the crowd had already filled the overflow room and the benches in the basement.

"As we ascended the stairs, my eyes saw a completely filled church, balcony filled, people standing everywhere," Koehl recalled. "It was a tremendous experience to look at the faces of the Chinese people singing the same words. And you could see a glow on their faces."

Baritone Ty Morris Jr. also recalled a memorable moment that came from being on tour with The CenturyMen, who perform here at 7 p.m.

Students call 'press conference' to share insight on beetles

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

Armed with the scientific method, some young local scientists decided to tackle a problem that has been bothering many Midlanders for weeks.

And a group of Anson Jones Elementary students called a "press conference" on Monday to announce what they have found out about the infamous mesquite twig girdler beetles.

Two of the school's fourth-grade classes spent a week conducting experiments on the beetles, which have been migrating through the Midland area for about a month.

The critters have been seen swarming on the city's streets and sidewalks and have been called a nuisance by local residents. But they are loved by ranchers, who have no love for the insects' food source — mesquite tree twigs.

Marillyn Odum, Jones principal, said the appearance of the insects gave her and fourth-grade teacher Jackie McMillan an idea for a science project.

"They have lived the scientific method this week and last week, studying this sudden insect invasion," Ms. Odum said. "We have not seen them before, but they are in such quantities that I asked Mrs. McMillan if she was doing any kind of study on this.

"And she said, 'well we need to be,' " Ms. Odum added.

After five days of studying the insects at Jones and neighboring Emerson and South elementaries, the children decided it was time to announce what they learned.

So the children held a press conference and the local news media obliged. The students had charts of twig girdler migrations, pictures of their field experiments and lists of the beetle's characteristics.

Code enforcement volunteers search for eyesores, beauty

By Johnnye Montgomery

BIG SPRING — When Pat Simmons isn't volunteering for the Nazarene Church, or bird watching, or leading an exercise class at a local nursing home, she puts in a little windshield time for the city of Big Spring, looking for tiny houses sitting in the middle of patches of green grass, surrounded by flowers and alive with butterflies.

Or maybe the house will ramble toward the back of the lot, with a winding walk and a trail of ceniza, vinca, or hollyhocks following it from the street and up to the door.

She also keeps a lookout for the eyesores — abandoned vehicles, accumulations of debris, littered construction sites.

Ms. Simmons is coordinator of a corps of more than 70 Big Spring volunteers who travel the streets of Big Spring as members of the Trade delegation from China visiting Midland

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

An eight-member trade delegation from Midland's sister city in China, Dongying, is arriving in Midland this morning as the two cities work to deepen their business relationship. The visitors will be greeted at Midland International Airport by Midland Mayor Bobby Burns.

Although Midland has hosted a number of delegations from Dongying since the sister city relationship was established in June 1986, this delegation is a little different, according to Greg Dove.

Dove, a board member of the non-profit Midland-Dongying Sister City Association, explained that

Sitcom that makes you laugh out loud is sure to be canceled

More rambling thoughts ...

— Following yet another humiliating loss several years ago, Tampa Bay's original head football coach John McKay was asked what he thought of his team's execution. He replied, "I'm in favor of it."

— It is always amusing to watch the reaction of an individual who is a definite "non-hugger" when he, or she, is being approached by an obvious "touchy" kind of person.

— Overheard: "When opportunity knocked, I wasn't home."

— Do young people still go out on double dates, and if so do the guys still argue over who gets the backseat?

— I hate it when my glasses fog over, especially when I'm driving.

— I really shouldn't have to say this, of course, but grown men, at least those who are not employed as professional baseball players, should not spit in public.

— As a general rule, I don't watch, and certainly don't enjoy, prime time sitcoms, but Dan Aykroid in "Soul Man" actually had me laughing out loud a couple of times last week ... meaning, of course, that the program will surely be canceled, if it hasn't already.

— Speaking of sitcoms — Why am I talking about sitcoms? — it seems that the latest trend, at least based on my limited research, is that each show is now required to have at least one gay character, and usually one who is just a little bit smarter than everyone else.

— The phrase, "We'd better have a meeting about that," is probably used more often in more offices than any other in the English language.

— Some people can describe their recent vacation so vividly and with such passion that they can make the rest of us jealous right on the spot.

— You know you are getting on up in years when the words "company is coming," especially when spoken on a Sunday evening, get you excited. You almost expect to turn on the television set and have the Ed Sullivan show suddenly appear on the screen.

EXECUTE: Turner gave several versions of events

(From 1B)

did it all. So his time has come."

Turner said when the shooting took place he was "sloppy drunk" and just wanted to get home after he and two men spent three days drinking and taking drugs. Turner said he had passed out in the back of the cab when Hunter shook him to wake him up. While jostling Turner, the driver felt the pistol in his pocket and thought it would be used to rob him, Turner said.

"He freaked out," the inmate said. "That's when we started wrestling and the pistol went off."

Prosecutors contended robbery was the motive. A gas station attendant who said he saw the shooting identified Turner as the gunman. A firearms expert at his trial testified that anyone firing the weapon would have had to do so intentionally because the trigger was difficult to pull.

Court records show Turner told a number of versions of the incident, including his original report to police that Hunter had pulled the gun on him. Turner also speculated someone else did the killing because he shoved Hunter out of the car as the driver was yelling for police.

Turner was accused but not tried on additional charges of kidnapping and robbery for earlier episodes in the weekend-long crime spree. Prosecutors said a ring taken from one of the robbery victims was offered to the slain cab driver as payment for the ride. Among witnesses at his trial was another person who claimed to have been shot by Turner and a woman who said she was raped by him.

"I'm not scared," Turner said last week. "I've become a man here. I came here at 25. By God's grace, a lot of men here have taught me how to endure this place and how to not allow it to halt my growth as a man and how to help others, like the young fellows coming in here."

MINISTER: Position makes for life of variety, says Morris today at First Baptist Church, 2401 W. Louisiana Ave. The 100-plus-member choir is directed by composer, arranger and producer Buryl Red.

"In 1988, on the CenturyMen's return visit to the People's Republic of China, we were involved in a 22-hour video-taping session at China's Central television," said Morris, who is minister of music at Crestview Baptist Church. "About midnight, the entire proceedings were interrupted by a surprise intrusion by an official Chinese government censoring committee, who demanded to see the text to all of the songs that were being recorded for the television special, which was to air later to 500,000 million viewers.

"After about an hour of deliberation, they approved all of the songs except Buryl's hymn arrangement of the hymn 'Fairest Lord Jesus.' The text talks about Jesus being lord of all creation, ruler of the universe, the one and only person who is worthy of our worship, praise and obedience.

"Apparently, that was just too much for those communist committee members. Despite that interruption, we succeeded in completing the marathon project, quite proud of ourselves that we had survived, but even more grateful that our message through music had gotten through to the Chinese people."

Although delivering God's message through music propels these Midlanders, both feel, Koehl said, "The call is very significant in a minister's life, and Ty and I are both called to be ministers first and musicians second.

"That doesn't mean that we want to settle for mediocre music. It means that our main emphasis is ministering, but music is our medium through which we minister.

"We're going to go to the hospital and visit people. We can marry folks. But our main focus is trying to help people worship through music or music for a wedding or for a funeral."

The job description encompasses duties other than praising the Lord through music.

"A music minister's life is filled with a great deal of variety," said Morris. "Everything from writing letters and articles for the church news letter and the various music organizations to publicity concerning the new choir year."

'(God) is the true audience. We are only the enablers that guide our people in worship of Him.'

— Ty Morris Jr.

In addition, Koehl said, "You have meetings with different staff members to plan calendar events from fellowships to banquets to conferences to seminars."

One of the biggest blocks of time each week, Morris said, "is spent in worship planning, which includes conferring with the pastor about his planned sermon and the overall focus of the church on a particular day and then trying to build a worship service that follows a unified theme."

Time also is spent listening to music and "making decisions about which music every different music group should have," said Morris. "The music then has to be ordered and processed so that it's ready for rehearsal at the appropriate time."

Both also spend time planning youth choir tours, special musical events, and conducting weekly choir rehearsals.

"You have a myriad of rehearsals from children's choirs to youth choirs to adult choirs, hand bell groups, orchestra groups, drama rehearsals," said Koehl. He laughed and added, "And we (Morris and Koehl) take our children to school and go watch them play ball, football, soccer, whatever. So we do a lot of dad things because families are very important to us."

Koehl and his wife, DiAnn, are the parents of four children — George, 15, a tenth-grader at Midland High School; Wade, 13, a seventh-grader at San Jacinto; Candace, 10, a fifth-grader at Fannin Elementary School; and Brittany, 8, a second-grader at Fannin Elementary School.

Morris and his wife, Linda, have two children — Tiffany, 13, an eighth-grader at San Jacinto; and Meredith, 9, a fourth grader at Bonham Junior High.

Both are involved in the denomination's The Singing Men of Texas program.

"One of the special joys of life for me is serving as the director of The Singing Men of West Texas," said Morris.

The Singing Men of West Texas is comprised of Southern Baptist ministers of music from this area of the state. The group is one of six regional choirs sponsored by the Baptist General Convention of Texas under The Singing Men of Texas banner. More than 400 men participate in the regional choirs, presenting six to 10 concerts annually in area churches.

Koehl is among the 400 voices and sings in the group Morris directs.

"I've been involved in singing men's organizations for 18 years," said Koehl. "I enjoy getting together with the other guys and making music together. We sing some great music — a wide variety of styles — and we have the opportunity to develop friendships with people we have a lot in common with. Obviously, we have the same job so we can trade ideas, we can encourage one another, and we can pray together."

The highly visible work of a minister of music offers little measure for earthly failure.

"What you do is being looked at and participated in and evaluated by the entire congregation," said Morris. "Although that is an exciting aspect of our work, it is also stress-producing. You either succeed or fail each time you present yourself and your choirs to the people."

But the music's ultimate audience lies outside this world.

"In reality, what we're trying to do is present ourselves to God with worship that would honor Him," Morris said. "He is the true audience. We are only the enablers that guide our people in worship of Him."

At a Glance: Ty Morris Jr.

Born: Athens, Ga.

Hobbies: Comedy, sports, and German language.

Favorite Book: "On the Anvil" by Max Lucado.

Favorite Movie: "Nobody except the people who have seen the movie I like will recognize it. It's not a famous movie. The movie is "Day of the Jackal." It's the story about an assassination plot on the life of Charles DeGaulle. I love intrigue and the drama of the police attempt to find the Jackal through his many disguises and to eliminate him before he is able to carry out his mission.

Favorite Food: German, and I'm not able to get that around here very much. The closest place I know is the Edelweiss Restaurant in Fort Worth.

Favorite Vacation Spot: Grindelwald, Switzerland. It's a "Sound of Music" type country with the beautiful Alps all around you and quaint little villages every few miles and beautiful flowers. My wife and I went there in 1981 as music leaders for a senior adult conference and just fell in love with the people and the countryside. It's also not too far from Germany where I lived for three years and have many unfulfilled travel dreams.

If I could go anywhere in the world, I would go to: Prague in the Czech Republic. I've been there twice before, but I have a good friend and his family who still live there with whom it would be nice to have another reunion. Prague is one of the most beautiful cities in the world, as far as I'm concerned, with a rich heritage and Old World mystique.

If I could change anything about myself I would: Become a better time manager.

If I won the lottery, I would: I don't play the lottery, but if I did I would take my family on a Caribbean cruise. I would also buy my sister a new home. She is recovering from a stroke and is unable to work. I would try to set her up for life.

At a Glance: George Koehl

Born: Midland.

Hobbies: Racquetball, softball, and skiing.

Favorite Book: It's called "Descending into Greatness" by Bill Hybels. It talks about that the way to up is down. It gives vignettes of people's lives like Mike Singletary, who used to play for the Chicago Bears. At the height of his profession, his family was falling apart. He recommitted his life to Christ. The book says that in order to be the best in life, you have to be willing to help others. So it's not people serving you, but you serving people.

Favorite Movie: It's usually the one most recently that I've seen. "Chariots of Fire" and "Ben Hur" are the greatest.

Favorite Food: Mexican.

Favorite Vacation Spot: Singapore. My wife grew up in Singapore and we were married there. We went back one time and took the kids. It's fabulously beautiful.

If I could go anywhere in the world, I would go to: Machu Picchu in Peru. It's up there on that big mountain, an ancient civilization. I've been to Russia and I've been to China. I think it would be great to go up there and see how they used to live.

If I could change anything about myself, I would: Procrastinate less. But the true thing is a lot of creative, artistic people tend to put things off.

If I won the lottery, I would: I don't play the lottery but if I did, I would put it on my bills as far as it would go. Now that's if I won a million dollars. It's a joke obviously. I would use it for the college education for my four children. That's probably what it will cost.

DEAR ABBY

Home schooling gets good grade from present students

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm 11 and in sixth grade. I'd rather be home-schooled than stuck in a classroom with a bunch of misbehaving kids. When I mention the fact that I'm home-schooled to kids who go to a public school, they tell me how lucky I am.

Van Buren

I read on an adult level and enjoy it very much. Cooking is another thing I enjoy. I have a collection of cookbooks. Recently I became interested in writing stories and poems. I entered one of my poems in a contest for adults and got an honorable mention.

Home-schooling may not be perfect, but as far as I'm concerned, it's more perfect than anything else. These are my own words, Abby. Nothing I have written was even suggested by my parents. — RAQUEL MUTTON, BLOOMSBURG, PA.

DEAR RAQUEL: Thank you for sharing your opinion. It echoes the vast majority of enthusiastic letters I received from hundreds of home-schoolers and former home-schoolers nationwide. I was impressed with their level of literacy, and regret that space does not permit me to print more. Read on for a sample:

DEAR ABBY: I'm a high school junior who has been home-schooled since first grade. I have many friends that I met in the neighborhood, at church and on sports teams.

The success of home-schooling isn't in the location, it's the spirit of the instructor. If my parents were abusive and kept me isolated, I would probably hate home-schooling, too.

Being home-schooled has taught me it's OK to look to my parents and authorities for guidance instead of my peers, who are often just as ignorant as I am. Home-schooling, though, is not a magic pill. I know home-schoolers who are one step from reform school (sometimes they've been expelled from school), and I know plenty of conventional school students who are responsible, intelligent and well-behaved. I'm proud of being home-schooled.

Please don't judge me on what you've heard about home-schooling. Judge me for myself. Thank you, Abby, for the chance to express my opinion. It's something I've wanted to do for a long time. — REGINA BURGESS, FORT BRAGG, N.C.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in ninth grade. My 3 1/2 years as a home-schooled student have been great. We start at 9:30 a.m. and finish around noon. The decreased time is due to the lack of distraction. At public school, if I finished early, I would have to wait for the rest of the class. Now, whenever I finish, I can just move on.

I'm definitely not isolated. We take more field trips because of the flexible schedule. There are also home-school organizations where I've made friends. Home-schooling has been great for me, but it's not for everybody. I know of families that do isolate their children, and others that don't even "do" school.

I hope my opinion on home-schooling is what the majority of home-schoolers think. — SCOTT CLEMENT, MESQUITE, TEXAS

DEAR SCOTT: It definitely is!

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 and entering my second year of college at the University of California-San Diego. I attended private schools through fifth grade, and was home-schooled through middle school. Those years stand out in my mind as the most productive, educational and enlightening of my scholastic career. Later, because I felt I was "missing out," I chose to attend a public high school. I was appalled at the attitude of my peers and the faculty. I was treated as an inferior because I had not received a public school education, and it was assumed that I was probably socially inept from being home-schooled.

It has been my experience that in public school settings, students are exposed to verbal abuse, drugs and violence. Home-schooled children can easily learn to relate to peers through extracurricular activities such as sports, music and clubs like Girl Scouts.

I wish I had been home-schooled throughout high school as well. I would have received a better education. I realize that home-schooling is not an option for everyone, but I firmly believe that I am a well-adjusted, better person today because of it. — KELLY IN ESCONDIDO, CALIF.

BEETLE: Teacher says study taught the scientific method

(From 1B)

Warren Maurer led off the conference and noted the recent invasion.

"Approximately 10 days ago statements like 'yuck,' or 'I'm going to be sick' were common," Warren said.

Warren said his group observed where the insects were most commonly found, what temperatures they preferred and whether they liked moist or dry places.

Then Mari Ervin presented some of the findings.

"We started out first by listing everything we knew about the insects," Mari said.

That included the insect's shape, their color and their scientific classifications.

The students didn't originally know whether the girdlers were true insects, but close examination made it apparent, Mari said. The bugs have the distinct three body parts and six legs.

Mari also noticed some other characteristics.

"They could bite. They like the concrete better than grass or driveways," she said.

Rudolfo Salcedo said his fellow students did some research in the school library. They later called a county agricultural extension agent, who gave the children the insects' common name.

Mari said afterwards that she learned a lot about the bugs through the experiments.

"I thought the bugs were really weird because we had not seen them before," she said. "I learned that they are insects. You didn't see their body parts. If they put their wings up you could see their third body part."

Ms. Odum said the week of observations gave the children a chance to learn the scientific method, including forming a hypothesis, then doing research before reaching a conclusion.

"This is a wonderful way to learn, to learn by using a scientific process with certain steps and parameters," Ms. Odum said.

out to do."

— People are basically divided into two groups: those who stop and read historical markers along the highway and those who don't ... and, as everyone knows, mothers generally fall into the first category while fathers do not.

— When it comes to politics, long hair is no longer a sure sign that a man is left of center.

— There is something inherent in all of us, I suppose, that makes us want to play footsies under the table with any member of the opposite sex who is even remotely attractive.

— I hope no one ever refers to me as "a litigious kind of guy."

— And today's final quote comes from H.L. Mencken, who once said, " 'Tis more blessed to give than to receive; for example, wedding presents."

CODE: City now gives out 'Yellow Rose' certificates city's Code Enforcement Patrol. She said the volunteers come from all over the city, from all age groups and economic levels, with a common pride in the city's appearance as the glue that holds them together.

(From 1B)

"Most of us are retired, because we have more time to do things like this," she said. "We remind people to close the Dumpster lids, and to keep stacks of junk out of the alleys, and we keep on the lookout for trash in empty lots. When we find one, we write a patrol report and submit it to the city.

She said, though, that code enforcement is only one side of the job the Code Enforcement Patrol has taken on. The other, a much more pleasant task, is to look for beauty.

"I like to look for grandpa and grandma yards that are kept by people who don't have full-time yard men. They are usually little old places that you can tell have been loved and cared for for years. Sometimes you'll see them out in the yard, walking with a cane or a walker, or sitting in a chair, pulling weeds, and they're the cutest people.

"I stop and get out of the car and talk to them, and they'll say 'Oh, but it's so bad looking now. You should have seen it last month — or two months ago, or two years ago.' They always think their yards aren't as pretty as they used to be."

Ms. Simmons said she has always felt that the CEF should point out the pockets of beauty as well as the pockets of shame in the community. The City Council thought so, too. They recently began a special recognition program for just such sites.

"Whenever one of our patrol notices a beautiful place, they'll write up a report, and I will go to the location to see if it's what I'm looking for," she said. "I take a picture, then I go to the door and tell them they've won a 'Yellow Rose' certificate which will be presented at the next City Council meeting."

Ms. Simmons said with the program just getting started, some of the protocol is still being worked out, but the general agenda has Community Service Director Todd Darden to read the names of home owners, and mayor Tim Blackshear to present the Yellow Rose certificates. Ms. Simmons then reads a brief summary of the circumstances leading to the recognition for each site, and the city manager Gary Fuqua presents them with the photos Ms. Simmons took during her inspection. After the flood of good feelings generated by the first ceremony, a local merchant, Johansen's Nursery, came forward to offer gift certificates to all Yellow Rose certificate recipients.

Ms. Simmons, when asked about the possibility that the group might be regarded as busybodies, said she guessed there was always a chance of having that reputation, but she feels the code patrol as a whole is well thought of by the community.

"We certainly don't consider ourselves busybodies, but rather people who care about their community," she said. "We've been talking about soliciting good neighbors who may be able to help people who are unable to care for their yards and property the way they'd like. Some people have mentioned this might be a good project for the Scouts."

She said an amazing number of Big Spring residents 80 and over still maintain their yards. One woman scheduled to receive the Yellow Rose award is 94-year-old Mrs. Johnny Lane, who still waters and weeds her yard — managing, with the aid of a neighbor who mows, to have one of the prettiest yards in Big Spring.

VISIT: Group includes people from outside oil industry

(From 1B)

"this particular group is made up of people not just in the oil and gas industry. There are people representing finance, petrochemicals and aquaculture, other aspects of business."

Normally, he continued, trade delegations from Dongying are comprised of representatives of the Shengli oil field, the second largest company in China and largest in Dongying.

"This is a chance to expand the scope of business we do with them," Dove said. "That's what they have in mind sending these people over."

While the delegation is interested in visiting local oil and gas facilities, Dove said they also will visit other businesses such as Jacobs Electronics, Teraco Inc. and Tomcat Inc. Also on the itinerary are visits to Henry Petroleum, Hy-Bon Engineering, the Shell Odessa Refinery and Huntsman Chemical in Odessa. The group will tour the Petroleum Museum and Confederate Air Force American Air Heritage Museum.

Dove, who is also a senior landman at Henry Petroleum, noted that the two cities are in the process of exchanging permanent cultural exhibits. Last year a Midland delegation that included Dove and Burns traveled to Dongying and presented Midland's exhibit on the 10th anniversary of the sister city agreement.

Dongying has shipped its exhibit to Midland, Dove said, incorporating many photographs as well as objects from their culture and their area of China. A governmental delegation is expected to come to Midland in late October or early November to formally dedicate the exhibit to the City of Midland. It will be temporarily housed at the Petroleum Museum.

"Considering that they're on the other side of the planet, we've done a lot together. It's been a very fruitful relationship on the cultural side, now we hope to expand that," Dove said. "I think this is going to lead to some good things and be a continuation of our sister city relationship."

Dongying was incorporated in 1983 and is located in the north of Shandong Province near the Yellow River. It borders Binzhou City on the west and Zibo City and Weifang City on the south.

The Midland-Dongying Sister City Association consists of 15 directors and more than 75 active individual and corporate members. The mayor sits in as an ex-officio member.

Traveling to Midland are Zhang Junlin, general manager, Haitong Corp., which has interests in natural gas and light oil recovery, real estate, trade and other interests; Han Zhengfa, chief accountant of Haitong Corp. and former director of the Dongying Financial Bureau; Xu Yuxiang, deputy director of China Industrial and Commercial Bank, Dongying Branch; Jiang Wenxiang, manager, Guangrao Petrochemical Plant; Nie Renqing, manager, Huaxing Petrochemical Co.; Mei Zhongyuan, president, Zhongyuan Co., which has interests in aquaculture; Xue Guiyao, president, Huitong Scientific & Technological Equipment Service Co.; and Zhang Shichang, head of the Sister City Affairs section, Dongying Foreign Affairs Office and a former exchange student in Midland.

Natural gas surges

Heating oil and natural gas futures prices rose sharply Monday on the New York Mercantile Exchange after a weekend cold snap heightened speculation early demand for heating fuels could quickly consume comfortable inventory levels.

Crude and unleaded gasoline futures prices also advanced.

The surge took some investors by surprise. Heating oil and natural gas inventory levels are far higher than a year ago, and some forecasters are predicting a warmer-than-normal winter in major heating areas because of the El Nino warming trend, said analyst Gerald E. Samuels at ARB Oil Inc.

Heating oil inventories stand about 20 million barrels above year-ago levels and on par with the three-year average, according to the American Petroleum Institute. Natural gas inventories in storage are 4.1 percent above year-ago levels, but below the three-year average, the American Gas Association reported.

Natural gas futures also were supported by hot weather in the South. Temperatures in the 80s and 90s boosted cooling demand, causing utilities to use more natural gas to power turbines for electricity that goes to air conditioners. The unexpected demand was hampering efforts to build inventories, particularly in Texas.

Heating oil for October delivery rose 1.28 cents to 54.73 cents a gallon; October natural gas rose 15.6 cents to $2.993 per 1,000 cubic feet, the highest since Jan. 20.

The expiring October crude contract rose 25 cents to $19.60 a barrel.

Seminole bank

SEMINOLE — Seminole National Bank announced that it has received regulatory approval of its purchase of First National Bank in Denver City.

To accommodate First National's plans to sell its charter to First Sierra Bancshares and to relocate the charter to Anthony, final closing of the transaction will not be completed until Jan. 2, 1998. This will allow First National's shareholders to maximize their stock value.

Effective Oct. 2, Paul Elam will be come Denver City Bank's president. He presently serves as a vice president of Seminole National Bank and has 13 years experience banking in the Yoakum and Gaines County area.

Denver City Bank will have lending capacity of $750,000 with access to total bank resources of $160 million through Seminole National Bank and its affiliate banks, First National Bank of Pecos and First National Bank of Fort Stockton.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar was mixed against other major currencies Monday, rising against the mark as German interest rates appeared stable but retreating from a four-month intraday high vs. the yen to end lower.

The dollar fell back to settle in late New York trading at 121.75 yen, down from 122.28 late Friday. It also was changing hands at 1.7914 marks, up from 1.7759.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.4712 Swiss francs, up from 1.4630; 6.0145 French francs, up from 5.9265; 1,745.00 Italian lire, up from 1,730.00; and 1.3883 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3897.

The British pound was quoted at $1.6049, down from $1.6124.

Dow near 8,000 level again

■ IBM announcement energizes markets, but Dow fails to stay above 8,000.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A new technology unveiled by IBM energized the blue-chip sector Monday, but the Dow Jones industrial average came up shy again in a bid to push back above 8,000.

The Dow, which bobbed above 8,000 for the first time in a month on Thursday, also made four fleeting forays above 8,000 on Monday before settling at 7,996.83, up 79.56 on the day.

Similarly, the Standard & Poor's 500 index nudged into record territory for the first time since early August, but also faltered slightly in the afternoon.

The reluctance to bid the blue chips back to record levels continued to benefit smaller-company shares.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index, which includes a substantial contingent of secondary shares, closed at a record high for the first time since the blue-chip sector peaked in early August.

Meanwhile, the Russell 2000 index of smaller companies notched its seventh straight closing record and 16th in 18 sessions. And the Nasdaq Stock Market and the American Stock Exchange, both home to a large number of small-company issues, also set the latest in a series of new highs.

The Dow, which has been down as much as 8 percent from Aug. 6's record close of 8,259.31, hasn't finished a day above 8,000 since Aug. 20.

"A lot of people are using strength in the blue chips to sell and move money elsewhere," particularly mid-sized and smaller companies, said Bob Dickey, managing director of technical analysis at Minneapolis-based Dain Bosworth. "A break above 8,000 (by the Dow) would do a lot to improve investor sentiment."

Falling interest rates in the bond market, which has been bolstered by reports showing that inflation has remained tame, fueled the stock market for the seventh consecutive session. A jump in the dollar's exchange rate against other currencies, which spurs foreign demand for U.S. investments, also helped lift the Treasury market on Monday.

With no major economic report due before next week, there are few potential potholes to upset to the widely held belief that Federal Reserve officials won't slow the economy with higher interest rates when they meet next Tuesday.

"Investors are pretty confident that there won't be any surprise at the Fed meeting," said Dickey.

IBM surged 4 5/8 — or the equivalent of 17 1/2 Dow points — after introducing a new technology to make semiconductor circuitry with copper instead of aluminum, which costs more and transmits less quickly.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a 13-to-9 margin on the NYSE, where volume was a modest 490.40 million shares.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock list rose 4.92 to 955.43, about 5 points shy of record territory; and the NYSE composite index rose 2.60 to 499.16, beating Aug. 6's record close of 497.00.

The Russell 2000 rose 1.81 to 448.98; the Nasdaq composite index rose 9.09 to 1,689.45 for its third straight record close; and the American Stock Exchange composite index rose 3.00 to 689.94 to set its seventh consecutive closing high.

Texan accused of reckless bank practices

■ Businessman faces millions in fines over collapsed thrift.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Texas businessman Charles Hurwitz is back in the news this week over his involvement with United Savings Association of Texas, a collapsed thrift that required a $1.6 billion taxpayer bailout.

Hurwitz, embroiled in a redwood logging controversy in California involving his Pacific Lumber Co., stands accused in Houston by the federal Office of Thrift Supervision of reckless banking practices.

OTS officials charge Hurwitz' malpractice led to the thrift's 1988 collapse and subsequent bailout.

On Monday, an administrative law judge from Washington began listening to the case against Hurwitz at a hearing in Houston.

The hearing is not a formal trial but could result in Hurwitz being fined millions of dollars.

It will conclude when the administrative law judge issues a recommendation, which is forwarded to the oversight agency. Officials there can accept the recommendation, parts of the recommendation or reach an independent decision.

Federal officials say Hurwitz failed to provide adequate funding for United Savings, and that he got the thrift into risky investments and real estate ventures.

Agency spokesman William Fulwider said Monday the agency is seeking hundreds of millions in restitution, although no precise amount has been set.

OTS also wants to prohibit Hurwitz and other respondents from participating in savings and loan business, Fulwider said.

Hurwitz' attorneys say their client did nothing improper during his tenure as chairman and chief executive of United Financial Group, United Savings' parent.

"Almost every bank holding company of any size failed or was taken over, and it wasn't because they were crooks" during the Texas oil crash, said Richard Keeton, the lead attorney for Hurwitz.

United Savings had one of the largest portfolios of real estate loans in Texas in the 1980s. But the state's land market suffered a dramatic collapse in the mid-1980s when the prices of oil plummeted.

The thrift was profitable in 1984, but started losing money in 1985 and was unable to turn itself around until regulators and new investors stepped in.

Keeton said there are no allegations that Hurwitz or any of the five other respondents embezzled company funds. They did not offer cozy deals to friends or family members, he said.

In a development that could cheapen the cost of computers and speed up calculations, IBM has come up with a way to make computer chips with copper instead of the aluminum long popular in the industry. International Business Machines Corp., the world's largest computer company, announced Monday it will start selling copper chips early next year. The prototype copper-based chip is shown on a stack of U.S. pennies, left; a cross-section of the chip is shown at right. The technology will enable chips to operate on less electricity, making them useful for laptop computers and other battery-operated electronics products.

IBM plans to make chips from copper

■ Move could lower cost of computers, speed up calculations.

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — In a development that could cheapen the cost of computers and speed up calculations, IBM has come up with a way to make computer chips with copper instead of the aluminum long popular in the industry.

Aluminum has been the metal of choice since the microprocessor industry was born more than three decades ago. Copper carries electrical signals faster but is harder to apply to the silicon surface of chips.

International Business Machines Corp., the world's largest computer company, announced today it will start selling copper chips early next year.

IBM will use copper in chips that are the tiny brains and storage bins of computers it sells, as well as in chips it sells. The copper carries signals between the millions of transistors packed into each thumbnail size surface.

The Armonk, N.Y. company said switching metals could speed up a microprocessor by up to 40 percent, resulting in computers that think faster and store more information. Also, the new chips are up to 30 percent less expensive than aluminum versions, partly because copper is slightly cheaper but mainly because of the simpler process and less expensive machinery needed to make the semiconductors.

The technology will enable chips to operate on less electricity, making them useful for laptop computers and other battery-operated electronics products.

"I think it will change Intel's plans. Intel will now realize they need to step on the accelerator and get to copper sooner," said Drew Peck, an analyst at Cowen & Co. in Boston.

Last week, Intel Corp. unveiled a way to boost the storage capacity of "flash memory" chips, the circuitry that lets computers and other devices hold information even when they're turned off.

Seagram to buy Viacom's half of USA network

NEW YORK (AP) — The drawn-out battle for control of USA Networks ended Tuesday with a deal for Universal Studios owner Seagram Co. to buy out partner Viacom Inc. for $1.7 billion.

The deal benefits Seagram by giving it sole control of USA Network and Sci-Fi Channel to distribute Universal's movies and television shows. It also helps Viacom's attempts to climb out from under a mountain of debt.

"The feeling was that each side would rather take control of its own destiny," said Universal chairman Frank Biondi, Viacom's former chief executive and a key figure in the companies' courtroom fight.

The agreement includes a clause that Viacom will not start a competing network to Sci-Fi Channel in the United States for an unspecified period of time, Biondi said. It also includes some programming licensing arrangements with Viacom's Paramount studios.

Biondi said the popular Universal-produced shows "Hercules: The Legendary Journeys" and "Xena: Warrior Princess" will go to USA after their current syndication deals expire.

Jill Krutick, an entertainment analyst at Smith Barney, said Seagram paid a fair price given the networks' growth potential.

The companies' dispute over their 50-50 stake in USA began in April 1996, when Seagram filed a lawsuit saying Viacom's ownership of competing networks such as MTV and VH-1 violated their agreement.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Focus on trusted resources for on-line financial advice

By Eric Tyson

Q: I recently bought a computer and want to surf financial websites. How would you recommend that I go about selecting good investing sites, and what things can I best do on-line?

Tyson

A: My first piece of advice is to focus on trusted resources. Just because every Tom, Dick and Jane can easily and cheaply set up shop on-line doesn't mean their sites and advice are worthy of your time.

You can stake a lot on the reputation of a site's sponsor. Not surprisingly, the financial companies with reputations for integrity off-line are the ones that offer some of the best integrity on-line.

For example, Vanguard's (http://www.vanguard.com) financial advice reflects the successful investment firm's conservative, educational-oriented philosophies. Its site offers an on-line university, retirement-planning calculators and the ability to download mutual fund prospectuses.

Try to find organizations that stick to their specialties. For example, Morningstar (http://www.morningstar.net) has researched mutual funds for many years, and its on-line financial content reflects its knowledge of the subject matter.

When evaluating a newly encountered website, your first priority should be determining the sponsor's agenda. If you see an "About Us" button, click it, and read the fine-print disclosure statements. You might discover that some on-line "Mutual Fund Newsletter" purporting to provide editorial content is in fact sponsored by a handful of companies that are providing that content — not exactly objective advice.

The Internet can be a great place for doing grass-roots consumer research, especially in the newsgroups. One of the more enlightening message-board conversations that I've come across started with someone asking what others thought about a particular brokerage firm he was considering. Within days, he got a lot of great feedback from people who had experience dealing with that firm.

Doing the same grass-roots research off-line would be very time-consuming. In order to find a dozen people off-line who have done business with a given firm, you probably would have to speak with hundreds of people. On-line, it's a snap.

Just remember that you shouldn't believe everything you hear, and watch out for postings from people with an interest to defend — for example, an employee of the given firm.

You can enhance the value of the on-line information you gather by verifying it elsewhere. Resources exist both on-line and off-line for you to do some fact-checking.

For example, if you are contemplating the purchase of some stock based on financials that you read on some message boards, check those numbers before buying by going to the library or checking the on-line sites of Hoover's (http://www.hoovers.com) or the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (http://www.sec.gov). Public companies are required to file important financial documents with the SEC electronically, and you can download many of those files right off the commission's website.

A lot of Internet advice — much of it bad — focuses on smaller companies and investment start-ups. Unfortunately, those often are the most difficult businesses to research.

The SEC requires companies that are raising less than $1 million to file a "Form D," which can be obtained by contacting the SEC. Also check with your state securities regulator: the numbers for all 50 regulators are on the SEC's website.

And if something does sound too good to be true, you can report your concerns to the Internet fraud-fighting organizations. In addition to the SEC's website, you also can utilize NASD Regulation's website (http://www.nasdr.com) and the National Consumers League's Fraud Information Center (http://www.fraud.org).

Have-nots want bragging rights

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Beat the crosstown rivals. How hard of a task can it be?

For three schools —Odessa High, Midland High and Abilene High — it has become as difficult as any the teams face in District 4-5A.

■ 4-5A Report

In the 1990s, the three schools are a combined 1-20 (on the field) in the battle for city bragging rights (the only win coming in 1990 when Abilene High defeated Cooper 13-10). This Friday, all three will again try to grab that special win that recently has been unobtainable.

It can make for a week that is challenging to say the least.

"To a point, (the week) becomes aggravating," Abilene High coach Steve Warren said.

Abilene High will play Cooper this week in a battle of 3-0 teams. Cooper moved to No. 4 in the state in this week's Associated Press poll. Abilene High, however, is also playing solid with lopsided wins and impressive individual numbers.

Last year, the numbers didn't matter as AHS lost 31-3 after being tied 3-3 at the half. Also, since winning in 1990, the Cooper has outscored the Eagles by an average of 31-12. Still, nothing AHS has done before will matter at Shotwell Stadium if the Eagles don't think they can win.

"Our big deal is believing we have a chance to win Friday night," Warren said. "A big part of winning is believing you can win. When they believe they can, that is half the battle."

One team trying to win the whole the battle is Odessa High, a team that has played the picked-on stepbrother like no other since Larry Gatlin became the last OHS quarterback to lead his team to a victory in 1964. Since then OHS has not won on the field (in 1993, Permian had to forfeit its win for the use of an ineligible player). Overall, Permian leads the series with a record of 34-3-1 and more recently, Permian has outscored OHS by an average of 25-4 in the 1990s.

The job for OHS coach Randy Quisenberry is to make his team remember what the team is doing now and forget what Bronchos teams have done in the past.

That Jerry, he's a complete scream

■ Players, Switzer amused over Jones' 'coaching' aspirations.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Need a laugh? Some of the Dallas Cowboys players and even Barry Switzer had one Monday, snickering at the suggestion that Jerry Jones might be the team's next coach.

"Jerry makes a great owner, leave it like that," a bemused Emmitt Smith said. "It's not even worth talking about. It's not worth expending energy about it."

Nate Newton got a kick out of the latest story speculating on Jones' plans.

"Well, he signs my checks, he can do anything he wants to do," the guard said. "He'd do like any other coach, turn it over to his assistants and just be a PR man."

Added safety Bill Bates: "The media has been drumming up stuff for 15 years and I'm not surprised by anything. Jerry would be energetic as a coach, that's for sure."

Switzer, only the third coach the Cowboys have ever had, said the story Sunday in The New York Times made him laugh.

"I do get a chuckle out of it," Switzer said. "But Jerry is too smart to set himself up like that. I know how it happened. Somebody asked him a question if coaching ever crossed his mind and someone took it and ran with it."

Switzer said he has no doubt Jones would be good at whatever job he tried.

Switzer said Jones has never interfered with his coaching. The team has made repeated mistakes in its 2-1 start, and Switzer worked the team long and hard Monday coming off a bye weekend.

"Jerry has never, never since I've been here called a play or a defense or drawn up a scheme," Switzer said. "Larry Lacewell (personnel director) sits with him in the press box and Larry said Jerry doesn't even second-guess the coaches. He's a team player, a team guy."

■ Haley thinks owner could get job done if he took over at coach.

By Scott Soshnick
Bloomberg News

Former Pro Bowl defensive end Charles Haley said if Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones decides to coach the team himself, he'd do a good job.

Jones was quoted in the New York Times saying that he is considering coaching the team himself, whether next year or soon after. If he did, Jones would become the first owner-coach in the NFL since George Halas's last season as coach of the Chicago Bears in 1967.

"I think he would be very successful," Haley, who spent 1992-1996 with the Cowboys, winning three of his National Football League-record five Super Bowl rings, told Bloomberg News. "Jerry is so competitive that he could change roles if he wanted to."

He just might. While the Times reported that Jones said the number of qualified coaching candidates likely would prevent him from assuming both roles, he stopped short of ruling it out.

There are no NFL rules that would prevent such a move by Jones, who unlike many NFL owners, has been successful as a player. At the University of Arkansas, he was a starting guard and co-captain of the 1964 team that went 11-0 and defeated Nebraska in the Cotton Bowl to win the national championship.

The team's current coach, Barry Switzer, embarrassed Jones this summer when he was charged with trying to bring a loaded handgun onto an airplane. The arrest came as Jones was trying to polish the team's image.

Haley said his former teammates would respond well to Jones.

"He who has the purse, controls the players," Haley said. "They'll always be resentment, but the players won't have enough guts to show it."

Ballesteros wants to keep Ryder Cup in Spain

By Clifton Brown
N.Y. Times News Service

SOTOGRANDE, Spain — Spain is his homeland, golf is his passion, and winning the Ryder Cup has become his mission.

To Seve Ballesteros, this year's Ryder Cup means more than any other. He is Europe's captain. And Spain is host to the three-day event for the first time, beginning Friday at the majestic Valderrama Golf Club. As one of the sport's ambassadors and career great players, Ballesteros would be deeply wounded if the United States left Spain with golf's most precious team trophy.

So while the United States team was on its way to Spain Monday morning aboard the team flight that left from New York, Ballesteros had already hit the ground running, planning strategy and talking with confidence. When Ballesteros competed as a player in the Ryder Cup, he was a dominant presence who could will a match in his favor. As captain, he hopes to wield the same kind of influence. When the news media fired questions at him Monday, Ballesteros was more than willing to fire back.

Was he nervous?

"When people are nervous, it's normally because they don't have confidence and are not sure what they're doing," Ballesteros said. "I have tremendous confidence, not just in myself, but the whole team."

Was he worried that 5 of Europe's 12 players are Ryder Cup rookies?

"It's a very good combination," Ballesteros said. "I don't think I could have a better team."

Does he believe the furor surrounding Miguel Angel Martin, who was angrily dismissed from Europe's team after wrist surgery, will hurt Europe?

Football week was wild, wacky and unpredictable

What a wild a wacky week in football.

The Dallas Cowboys start it off with a 21-20 Monday night win over the Philadelphia Eagles, who muffed the potential game winning field goal; then Midland Lee loses its second in a row on Thursday; Andrews stuns Midland High at home on Friday; North Texas shocks Texas Tech in Lubbock on Saturday; and what's with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers being 4-0?

LeRoy

It makes a sports writer want to go nuts or almost have a heart attack, as was the case on Saturday while standing on the sidelines at Jones Stadium.

GO FIGURE: I've been trying to figure out the series with Midland Christian and Jal, N.M. Last year, when Jal was No. 1 in the New Mexico Class A poll, I thought, surely, they could beat a team that was new to playing 11-man football. The result was 35-13 in favor of the Mustangs. OK, I figured it out, or so I thought. This time Jal, which is not as strong as last year comes to visit Midland Christian, which was beating up opponents by an average score of 98-6 (so I'm exaggerating a little), the Mustangs would trot to victory. The result was the Panthers winning 22-14 in front of a Mustang homecoming crowd.

So what happened?

"We just didn't play very good and Jal came into the game ready to play," said Midland Christian coach Mike Spradlin. "We turned it over at our own 1-yard-line and you can't do that if you expect to win."

Despite the loss, Spradlin has plenty of confidence in his team's ability as it heads into the toughest part of the schedule with games against Stanton and Rankin coming up.

"We feel real good about this team right now," Spradlin said. "Don't get me wrong, Jal is a very good and solid football team and they came here prepared to play us. I'm sure we'll bounce back this Friday night when we play Stanton."

QB BATTLE: One of the match-ups to look for in that game is going to be the battle of the quarterbacks in Midland Christian's Josh Miller and Stanton's Kyle Herm. Both of those juniors anchor their respective teams and make the offensive motors runs. Let's compare the two.

In three games, Miller has 51 carries for 437 yards, and is 16-of-48 passing for 275 yards. He has been responsible for 11 touchdowns, eight of which have been on the ground.

Herm has carried the ball 28 times for 197 yards and four TDs. He has also completed 15 of 31 pass attempts for 238 yards and five TDs.

BALANCED ATTACK: The 3-0 Buffaloes are stampeding teams because they are well-balanced. Not only can they throw the ball but the rushing attack with James Jenkins adding 293 yards and two TDS, the Buffs are a team on the hunt this year. Coach Mark Cotton said that the running game is something that they worked hard on in pre-season and it seems to be paying off. Cotton has also reason to smile about the Buffs defense which has held opponents to without a touchdown since the fourth quarter of the first game.

POLL RESPECT: The Buffs got 13 votes in the latest Class 2A AP poll, while Iraan is ranked No. 4 in the poll. Cotton said the Braves are deserving of the ranking. "I saw them a few weeks ago when they played Dalhart and they look to be a very big a physical team. They've got a lot of kids back who got plenty of playing time last year."

RANGER WOES: The Greenwood Rangers are still searching for their first win of the season and they seem to be coming close but need some maturing. Coach Bob Purser says it's just the case of "being our own worst enemy."

"We're making progress and the kids haven't given up on themselves and we haven't given up on them. We'll go ahead and practice this week and see what happens," Purser said.

Purser added that of their troubles comes from piling up the penalty yards. He said that just has to do with inexperience in some areas. Purser has been pleased with the defense where some sophomores have stepped up and done a good job. Greenwood travels this Friday to Alpine, a place where the Rangers haven't walked away with a victory since 1987.

WILLIAMS WATCH II: Andrews' Shaud Williams added to his totals in the win over MHS on Friday. The junior has now piled 490 yards in three games on 58 carries (an 8.4 yard per carry average). He also has scored eight touchdowns.

BROWNFIELD — The Midland Christian 7th and 8th grade volleyball teams made it to the championship round of a tournament for the second week in a row over the weekend.

The eighth graders (11-2) won the first two matches against Andrews "C" abd Brownfield "A" before losing the championship game to Andrews "A" 15-11, 7-15, 12-15. Natalie Taylor, Kelci Young and Cara Brininstool led the team in kills.

The seventh graders (8-2) took first place with a 15-5, 15-7 win over Andrews "A" in the championship. They also had victories over Andrews "C" and Brownfield "A". Hayley Whiteside had 24 service points, Paige West had 18, and Melissa Patton had 10 for the Lady Mustangs.

Permian Basin Speedway results

Four Odessa drivers won their divisions at the Permian Basin Speedway this weekend.

The winning drivers were Rick Campbell (Super Stock Division), Mike Pool (Street Stock Division), Jim Breeding (Mini Stock) and Troy Cottrell (Sprints). Also, Lubbock's Monte Bolton won the IMCA Modified Division. The total purse paid this weekend was $4,490.

Midland bowlers strike gold at state

Jennifer Williams took home seven awards and including the trophy for the Division 3 Girls High Scratch Game at the state competition.

Williams was among many Midlanders who were honored by the Midland YABA for their bowling at the state tournament.

Williams also took home a second, third and teamed with Felicia Williams, Mandy Martin, Stephanie Williams and Kay Gibson to win the Division 5 Handicap team competition.

On the boys side, Trevino Rojas, Bobby Martin, Steven Henderson, Jason Opperman and Neil Harris won the team title in the Division 8 Scratch title after taking second in the team handicap title.

Another bowler honored was Charles White who received an invitation to compete in the Texas State Youth Invitational Scratch Tournament, which will be held on Oct. 4 in Arlington.

Pittsburgh Steelers defensive back Randy Fuller (29) tries to grab Jacksonville Jaguars running back Mike Logan (32) during the opening minutes of the first quarter Monday night in Jacksonville.

Jacksonville latest team to benefit from weird late field goal mistakes

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — There must be something about the night air that brings out the gremlins in kicking games.

The Jacksonville Jaguars welcomed those gremlins Monday night, beating Pittsburgh 30-21 when the Steelers botched a field goal attempt on the final play of the game, Clyde Simmons blocked it and Chris Hudson returned it 58 yards for a touchdown.

It was the second straight Monday night in a row that it happened — last week, the Philadelphia Eagles botched a snap and were unable to get off a game-winning field goal attempt in Dallas.

"Don't ever take anything for granted," Jaguars coach Tom Coughlin said.

"One of the things I've noticed this year are the number of errors that take place in field goal protection and field goal coverage. I had a good feeling that we could block it."

This one was the good fortune of Jacksonville, and capped a battle of the Bs — Pittsburgh's Jerome Bettis and Jacksonville's Mark Brunell, who returned from a knee injury earlier than expected and threw for 306 yards for Jacksonville. With the help of a roughness penalty on Pittsburgh's Nolan Harrison, Brunell drove the Jaguars into position for Mike Hollis' 27-yard field goal with 4: 14 left that gave them a 23-21 lead.

It was the third home win in three tries over Pittsburgh for Jacksonville (3-0), which joined Denver, New England and Tampa Bay (all 4-0) as the NFL's only unbeaten teams. It was the Jaguars' seventh straight regular-season victory, dating back to Nov. 17.

Brunell, who watched as Rob Johnson and Steve Matthews won the Jaguars' first two games, threw for 306 yards and a touchdown as Jacksonville lost a 17-7 halftime lead, then rallied to go ahead 23-21 before the final play.

The Jaguars added the final extra point after many players had left the field. Unlike overtime, NFL rules require a team to attempt a conversion on a touchdown at the end of regulation — even if the game is already decided.

It was Bettis who rallied the Steelers (1-2), rushing for 114 yards, 97 in the second half as the Steelers took a 21-20 lead.

But it was Brunell and Jimmy Smith who did the work, overcoming the second-half heroics of Bettis. Smith had 10 catches for 164 yards.

Jacksonville controlled the first half, holding the ball for more than 21 of the 30 minutes and scoring off two turnovers.

Then the Steelers turned to Bettis. They went 80 yards in 13 plays off the opening kickoff, 44 of the yards by Bettis.

Then, after Hollis' 45-yard field goal extended Jacksonville's lead to 20-14, the Steelers struck again. Will Blackwell's 52-yard kickoff return gave Pittsburgh the ball on the Jacksonville 48, and from there the Steelers took seven plays to score — on Kordell Stewart's 1[illegible] yard pass to Mark Breuner on the first play of the fourth quarter.

Each team scored on its opening drive.

Bucs keeping their perspective

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — They're young, bold and unbeaten — "America's Darlings" as one recent headline described them.

But more than anything, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers are trying to keep the team's best start in 18 years, as well as the attention it's received, in perspective.

The Bucs haven't finished with a winning record or earned a post-season berth since 1982, and coach Tony Dungy and his players are doing everything they can to avoid mention of the "p" word in assessing the club's 4-0 record.

Sunday night's 31-21 victory over the Miami Dolphins was the fifth straight for Tampa Bay, dating back to 1996, equaling a franchise record set in 1979 when the Bucs won their first five games on the way to an appearance in the NFC championship game.

"I think it's still a little too early to be talking about the playoffs. But that is something that I have talked about with our players," said Dungy, whose even temperament has set the tone for the way the players have handled success.

"We talk about winning championships. We talk about winning playoff-type games. We'll talk today about letting Miami score at the end of the game, and how when you're in a tight playoff game or you're in a big game, you're not going to be able to allow that to happen."

To a man, the Bucs say the challenge the remainder of the season is to keep improving. The goal is to eventually win the Super Bowl, not merely win enough games to make the playoffs.

The fast start has rekindled fan support and attracted national media attention. However Dungy is confident the team will be able to retain its focus.

"I really think we've got the type of team where it's not going to be that big of a deal," said Dungy, who held the team together a year ago in the wake of a 1-8 start. Since then, the Bucs are 9-2.

Defense has carried the team through much of the stretch of success that began the middle of last season. But without injured defensive starters Warren Sapp and Rufus Porter against the Dolphins, the offense rose to the occasion.

Trent Dilfer raised his quarterback rating to an NFL-leading 112.0 by throwing for 248 yards and a career-high four touchdowns. Two years ago, he threw four TD passes all season.

One of the most gratifying moments for him came in the first quarter when he returned to the game after taking a hit in the left knee and leaving the field for one play. The record crowd of 73,314 at Houlihan's Stadium gave him a huge ovation, the first time Tampa Bay fans have really embraced him in four seasons.

"I would hope it's because of the perseverance, not

4-5A: AHS, OHS, MHS want to break hex

are playing those kids, " Quisenberry said. "I don't know how you can take stock in last year (a 13-6 Permian win). I don't know how it was as close as it was. It is a new year. They have different kids, and we have different kids."

Odessa High is a strong team this season. The Bronchos will take a 2-1 record into the game as will Permian, but the focus of the game is to capitalize on the momentum the team has and get to a 1-0 start in 4-5A. Ending the streak will just be a bonus.

"From standpoint of the records and the streak, that is for the fans, we need to worry about district race," Quisenberry said. "With Lee looming, we need a win under our belt."

In Midland, The Bulldogs last defeated Lee in 1988, the year of the dreaded coin flip. Since then MHS has fallen by an average score of 40-7, and Lee has outscored MHS, 275-23 in the last six years. In the series, Lee holds a 24-10-2 advantage. Those numbers mean little to Midland High coach David Browning.

"We don't talk about streaks or any of that stuff," Browning said. "Each year is a new team and what happened five or 10 years ago has no bearing on this team."

Neither will the 1-2 records that both Tall City teams will take into the game. Both teams were 3-0 going into last year's contest, and both teams probably should be again this season. What will matter is if Midland High has progressed and can be 1-0 in district for the second time since the intra-city games opened the district schedule in 1985.

GETTING THE RECORD STRAIGHT: J.R. Norman, cousin of John and Josh Norman, has transferred to Midland Lee from Odessa Permian. J.R. went to Permian last year and started the school year as a Panther, but as his mother was laid off from her job with MCI in Odessa and she decided take a job in Haltom. That left J.R. with the choice — either go to Haltom with his mother or move to Midland where his father lives and attend Midland Lee.

The latter is what he chose. Now, family members of Norman are upset with a report in the Odessa American that said that J.R. was "forced" to leave Permian.

"He chose to stay with his dad, and that is the bottom line," said an upset Jerry Norman, uncle of J.R. Norman. "Saying the dad forced him to leave, that is a lie. Where was he going to stay in Odessa? On the streets?"

Coaches at Lee expect Norman to play with the Rebels in the not-to-distant future. Lee coach John Parchman said that Permian didn't release J.R. Norman — citing that he moved for athletic purposes. The district's executive committee is expected to rule on Norman's eligibility soon. Meanwhile, J.R. is practicing with the Rebels.

RODGERS SCORES...AGAIN: San Angelo Central's Chris Rodgers enjoyed scoring his first touchdown of the season so much that he did it again and again and again. And after the Bobcat was done on Friday versus Del Rio, Rodgers had rushed for four touchdowns and 209 yards on 14 carries in Central's 34-7 win.

It was the biggest day by the oft-injured Central back in coach Gary Gaines' two seasons. Last year, Rodgers suffered a separated shoulder against Del Rio.

"He's always been there now he showing what he can do," Gaines said.

It was the biggest day by a running back in Gaines' two seasons as head coach. Last year, Sam Singleton rushed for 100 yards twice with the highest being 134 yards against Midland High. This season, quarterback Julio Guerrero topped the 100-yard mark with 112 vs. Killeen Ellison.

Tech aims for more consistent defense

Associated Press

Texas Tech defensive coordinator John Goodner said the team has to do a better job on his side of the football. The Red Raiders were upset by North Texas, 30-27, in a game Goodner said they had a chance to win.

"The main thing is we just haven't been very consistent defensively. We play well at spots, then we kind of have some lapses and let the people make some big plays," Goodner said. "That's what we're trying to do this open date is trying to work a little bit where we can eliminate the big plays.

"Another concern for us is we're giving up a high percentage of completions on pass defense."

The Red Raiders are currently giving up somewhere around 60 percent, where in years past it was down in the 40s, he said.

OKLAHOMA (1-2, 0-0)

Oklahoma quarterback Eric Moore, who injured his groin in the Sooners' 40-36 loss at California, is expected to play Saturday against Louisville, but he probably won't start, coach John Blake said.

"He'll probably miss a couple of days of practice, which means we're probably going to start Justin (Fuente)," Blake said.

OKLAHOMA STATE (3-0, 1-0)

Oklahoma State coach Bob Simmons said he won't know until Saturday when the Cowboys play Northeast Louisiana if his undefeated team might have lost a bit of its edge with a bye-week.

"But I thought the timing for us physically came in good because you realize we've been practicing ever since two-a-days started in August," he said. "Yeah, we're 3-0. We're happy to be that, but we had some kids that had we played last week would not have been able to play. From that perspective I think the week off came at the right time."

Quarterback Chris Chaloupka has a hairline fracture in his left wrist, Simmons said.

Big 12 South Notes

TEXAS (1-1, 0-0)

After a humiliating 66-3 loss to UCLA, the Longhorns spent much of their off week on the practice field getting ready for Rice's wishbone and just playing a little football, coach John Mackovic said.

"It was just a matter of trying to see if we could identify players who are going to do things and step up and improve what they're doing."

By week's end Mackovic felt good.

But, he said, "We are a long ways from being ready to play the kind of football we need to play on a regular basis."

TEXAS A&M (2-0, 0-0)

Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum said North Texas' 30-27 upset over Texas Tech will without a doubt help the Aggies prepare for their matchup with the Eagles.

"It helps because the players, in most cases, are products of their environment," Slocum said. "There has been a lot of talk about our schedule and people tend to downplay some teams like North Texas. I think they pointed out dramatically this weekend what I've said all along, that on a given weekend, anybody can win. And they did it."

BAYLOR (1-2, 0-0)

After two games on the road, Baylor coach Dave Roberts said he's ready to get home and is getting fired up about the Bears' first conference matchup against Texas Tech.

"We want to get the Baylor Bears back to how they used to play, which is play hard and play well," Roberts said. "We're starting to play hard, we just hadn't got the well part done yet."

Roberts said Tech will play hard and Baylor must do the same.

"What we're telling our guys is, 'Hey guys, you've got to play hard and continue to play hard, then we've got to make some tremendous progress over the next two weeks.'"

Foreman slated to take on possible contender Briggs

Bloomberg News

MASHANTUCKET, CONN. -- Former heavyweight champion George Foreman, 48, is scheduled to fight Brooklyn, New York, boxer Shannon Briggs on Nov. 22, a spokeswoman for Foreman said.

Foreman, a career 76-4 fighter who will turn 49 in October, became the oldest world champion in boxing history in 1994 when he knocked out Michael Moorer in the 10th round of what was billed as Foreman's farewell fight. Foreman was stripped of the title the following year because he wouldn't fight designated challengers.

The Foreman-Briggs fight will be sandwiched between two more noteworthy matches. On Nov. 8, in Las Vegas, Nevada, Evander Holyfield will fight Moorer for Holyfield's World Boxing Association and Moorer's International Boxing Federation titles. On Dec. 6, in Atlantic City, New Jersey, Oscar De La Hoya will defend his World Boxing Council title against Wilfredo Rivera.

For Briggs, 25, the fight scheduled for Mashantucket, Conn., will be a chance to continue an unbeaten streak after sustaining his only loss in March 1996. Briggs, 25-0 at the time, was knocked out by Darroll Wilson at 2:17 of the third round. Wilson was 15-0-2 at the time.

Briggs, now 29-1 with 24 knockouts, was trained as a teenager by Teddy Atlas, who also worked with Mike Tyson, has won his last four decisions.

LOCAL VOLLEYBALL TODAY

Midland High at Central

Time: 7:30 p.m. Place: San Angelo.
Saturday's Results: Midland High def. Abilene High 15-7, 15-13; Odessa Permian def. San Angelo Central 7-15, 15-9, 15-7.
Records: MHS is 10-9 overall and 2-1 in 4-5A. Central is 12-7 and 1-1.
Coaches: MHS: Terri McColloch. Central: Cynthia Williams.
Previous Meetings: None this season. Last year, Central swept MHS in 1996 district action last season.
About Central: Graduation hit the Lady Bobcats, who finished second in 4-5A, worse than any other team. Gone are 1996 first-team, all-district players Patrina Pearson, Casi Halfmann and Brett Thurman. Pearson was the district's Most Valuable Player and Halfmann was the district's outstanding setter. Among the top returnees are Jaime Salter and Kerry Hocker.
This year, Central came into district play with mostly consolation appearances in tournaments. The Lady Bobcats defeated Abilene High to open district.
About MHS: The Lady Bulldogs come into today's match having played their best match of the district season against Abilene High. The Lady Bulldogs had good balance in the offense and took control of the net play early on.

Buy, sell or trade at Basin Camera and Video Exchange

Camera and video shop lets customers trade up

Are you ready for a new film or camcorder with a few more features? Maybe it sounds like moving up is a great idea, but what will you do with your old camera? Don't let it gather dust, let it gather some money toward your next purchase at Basin Camera and Video Exchange.

From simple point-and-shoot cameras to single lens reflex (SLRs), camcorders, photo and darkroom equipment and digital cameras, Basin Camera has just about any photographic items you can think of. Plus, owner Vince Bernhart has one of the largest selections of new and used cameras in the Permian Basin. Basin Camera rents camcorders for special occasions such as birthdays, weddings, graduations or Christmas gatherings. They also rent film cameras and lenses. Rentals are available by the day, week or month.

If you have what you need but it needs repair, Basin Camera can help. In fact, Vince suggests getting repairs done now so you'll be sure everything's working when Thanksgiving and Christmas gatherings come along. Most repairs are done in about 10 days, but the backlog grows as Christmas approaches, so don't wait.

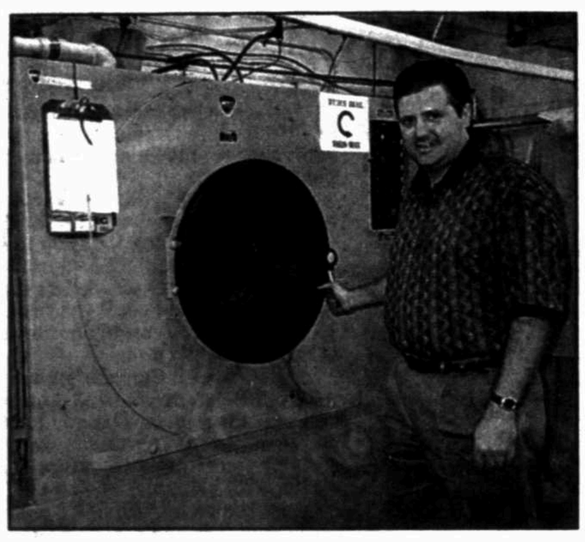
If you're buying your first camera or camcorder, Vince can help you get what you'll be comfortable with. He'll begin with a few questions to find out what you need. Do you want interchangeable lenses or built-in; built-in zoom or a fixed lens; auto focus or manual (or fixed) focus? How much do you want to spend? How will the camera be used? Camcorder options include variations in zoom length, special effects, built-in titlers and other features.

While there's a wide range of prices to go with all the possibilities, Vince says quality is tied to price. "I won't try to sell you more than you need. For some uses, an inexpensive camera will do the job," he says. "If you want the best quality, though, you'll have to pay more for it."

One way to save money on higher quality equipment is by considering Basin Camera's selection of trade-ins; or, if you have a working camera, you may be able to trade it in toward the purchase of a new unit. If you're a college or high school photography or journalism student, the store offers student discounts for you.

Basin Camera and Video Exchange is located at 700 Andrews Highway, near Luby's. They buy, sell and trade a wide selection of cameras, camcorders and other photographic equipment. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays. The phone number is 683-7011.

Ready to move up to a new camera or camcorder? Vince Bernhart at Basin Camera and Video Exchange can take your old equipment (assuming it's in good condition) and apply that toward the cost of something newer and better. Drop by 700 Andrews Highway and see the huge selection of new and used cameras, as well as darkroom supplies and accessories.



Philip McCain stands by the new, bigger capacity washer that's helping Fashion Cleaners prepare for the future.

Fashion Cleaners prepares for business growth

A larger capacity washer and dryer will allow Fashion Cleaners to provide a better cleaning service to their customers, according to Fashion's Philip McCain. Philip, whose grandfather founded Fashion Cleaners in 1937, adds that their new dryer is environmentally safe, capturing and recycling the dry cleaning fluids from clothing.

"Our regular customers may have already noticed we're trying to get their clothes back to them in a more timely manner," notes Philip. "Our latest investment should help us achieve this. We always want to make sure our customers get the best service possible."

With cool weather approaching, now is a great time to get those winter clothes out and have Fashion clean them. It'll be cool at those football games before you know it. Remember, you haven't worn those jackets, sweaters and woolens for awhile, so try them on to see if they still fit. If not, let Fashion make alterations when you bring them in for cleaning: that way you'll get it all done in one stop.

Fashion Cleaners has two convenient locations: 801 W. Wall and in the Imperial Shopping Center at Midkiff and Wadley. They do all kinds of cleaning and laundry, as well as alterations, reweaving and keepsaking of bridal gowns. Pickup and delivery are available.

VAN PEARCY of Edward Jones & Co.

KNOW your goals when looking for a broker

Developing a successful, long term relationship with a sound, West Texas broker means finding someone you can trust and feel comfortable with. But before you can feel comfortable with someone else, you first must know yourself. Here are a few questions to think about before you look for an investment professional:

Van Pearcy

- Where do you want to be 10, 15 or 20 years from now? This helps you focus on long-term goals rather than short-term results. For example, if your long-term investment goal is a comfortable retirement, make that dream come alive by picturing yourself in your ideal retirement setting.
- What kind of income will you need to enjoy this dream? Now you have a tangible goal on which to put a price tag.
- Where are you today? This is a starting point. Inventory your assets. Properly invested, will they grow enough to pay for your dream? Reasonably project what the value of your current assets will be when you plan to use them. If that comes up short, determine what will be required to meet those future needs.
- What kind of risks are you prepared to take? Don't answer too quickly. Many people confuse risk with profit. They think you don't make money if you don't take a few chances.
- One way to view risk objectively is to ask yourself what has been your most successful investment over the years. What has been your worst? Consider these two and evaluate the risks of each. Be honest. Don't consider a hot day at the casino or a few bucks made on a high-flying stock a successful investment. Look at those investments, no matter how dull, that have made you financially stronger.

Answering the risk question also helps identify your view of success. One person may consider a conservative four percent to five percent annual return successful as long as the investment remains stable. Another aims for a more ambitious 10 percent to 12 percent, knowing that principle fluctuates over time. Fairly identify your expectations and your tolerance for risk.

- What do you expect of your financial professional? Some investors want to pay their broker a fee; others prefer a commission. How you choose to pay your broker is unimportant as long as he or she does the job to your satisfaction.

Your investment representative's most important responsibility is seeing that your objectives are met. That's why it's so vital for you to have those objectives well thought out before you begin working with a financial professional. Both you and your broker should understand and agree on investing fundamentals such as objectives, risk, time, types of investments and more. A good professional will always honor these objectives.

You also should expect a regular accounting of your investment progress. This includes detailed statements of transactions and necessary tax-reporting documentation.

You should be able to trust your financial professional as you would your minister, physician or attorney. Establishing your goals and expectations and communicating them clearly will make it easier for you to trust your broker to carry them out and to give you the service you deserve.

"Both you and your broker should understand and agree on investing fundamentals such as objectives, risk, time, types of investments and more.

Houston Astros' Richard Hidalgo (15) is congratulated by his teammates after hitting a solo home run in the fourth inning against the Cincinnati Reds Monday in Cincinnati. Houston won 6-3.

Bagwell's at 30-30, Astros close in

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

CINCINNATI — They don't have the Atlanta Braves' pitching, the Florida Marlins' payroll or a lineup that overshadows the NL West contenders.

Instead, the Houston Astros have Jeff Bagwell and a lot of grit. And it looks that will be good enough to get them into the playoffs with the big guys.

Bagwell became the franchise's first 30-30 player Monday as the Astros rallied for a 6-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds that reduced their clinching number to three. The NL Central leaders scored four runs in the eighth inning to move a step closer to their first division title since 1986.

"It was a great comeback for us," Bagwell said. "It was something we really needed. All year, we really haven't done that too often — come back. Today was a start. Hopefully we can carry the momentum from here."

Bagwell doubled twice, walked three times, stole two bases and extended his hitting streak to nine games, leading the Astros to their third consecutive win.

He has a club-record 42 homers, doubled home a run in the first inning and stole third for No. 30. He's the first full-time first baseman to steal 30 bases and hit 30 homers in a season.

Cleveland's Joe Carter hit 32 homers and stole 31 bases in 1987, but split time between first base (84 games) and the outfield (62 games). Bagwell has started 152 games at first base and was the designated hitter for one game during interleague play.

"He's such a terrific player," manager Larry Dierker said. "He hasn't done anything selfishly. He's not trying to steal bases for some kind of arbitrary record. He's trying to help get runs and win.

"In that way, we really have a nice team. We're not loaded like the Braves or Marlins, we don't have the power of the Dodgers. But we have a lot of guys that know how to play. We have some versatility. And when we get pitching, that's enough."

After losing the series opener, the Astros won the next three to end the Reds' home season on a down note. The Astros' comeback Monday also gave Cincinnati a scare.

Closer Jeff Shaw, who leads the NL with 40 saves, took Bob Abreu's liner off his left kneecap and was carried off the field in the eighth inning. It was the first time since Aug. 24 that Shaw had failed in a save opportunity and it ended his streak of consecutive saves at 15, the third-longest in NL history.

X-rays found no fracture, and the injury was diagnosed as a bone bruise. The Reds said he might be able to pitch again this week if the knee doesn't swell up too much.

"It looked a lot worse than it was," Dr. Timothy Kremchek said. "We were really lucky this time."

Trailing 3-2, the Astros put together two walks, a hit batter and three hits for four runs in the eighth.

Stan Belinda (1-5) gave up a walk and a double to Chuck Carr that prompted the Reds to bring on Shaw. Abreu lined an infield single off the pitcher's kneecap to tie it and Derek Bell's sacrifice fly off Gabe White made it 4-3. Bill Spiers hit a two-run, bases-loaded double to complete the rally.

Russ Springer (3-3) got four outs for the win, and Billy Wagner pitched the ninth for his second save of the series and his 21st in 26 chances.

Richard Hildago's second homer put the Astros up 2-1 after four innings, but a balk by starter Shane Reynolds set up Bret Boone's tying sacrifice fly in the sixth.

The Reds sold 17,411 tickets for their final home game and drew 1,785,788 for the season, their lowest gate since 1986.

More Sports/8C

Pirates 3, Cardinals 1

PITTSBURGH — Jason Schmidt limited St. Louis to four hits over seven innings and started Pittsburgh's two-run fifth inning with a double.

Mark McGwire, who leads the majors with 54 homers, was 0-for-4 with two strikeouts and finished the series 1-for-15. He is 0-for-12 since homering in the fifth inning Friday night.

The Pirates outscored the Cardinals 27-4 to win the final three games of the four-game series. Schmidt (10-8) became the fourth Pirates' pitcher to win at least 10 games.

Mets 10, Marlins 3

MIAMI — The fireworks malfunctioned, the crowd booed, and the Florida Marlins' bid to clinch a playoff berth in their final home game ended with a dismal defeat.

Carlos Baerga hit a three-run homer and Bobby Jones pitched eight strong innings to help the New York Mets win their third in a row against the uncharacteristically sloppy Marlins.

To secure a wild-card spot, Florida still needs one victory, or one loss by both Los Angeles and New York. The Marlins play their final six games on the road, beginning Tuesday at Montreal.

Ho-hum, Braves win division again

ATLANTA (AP) — Another year, another division title for the Braves.

Atlanta became the first team to win six straight division championships, clinching the NL East when Florida lost to the New York Mets prior to the Braves' 3-2 victory over the Montreal Expos in 11 innings Monday night.

"It's hard to put six in perspective," Tom Glavine said in a champagne-filled clubhouse. "It certainly puts this team in a special place in history."

Steven Kline threw a third-strike wild pitch to Mike Mordecai with the bases loaded, allowing Danny Bautista to trot home with the winning run. By then, the division title already belonged to Atlanta.

Word of New York's 10-3 victory over the Marlins reached Turner Field after Greg Maddux escaped a one-out, bases-loaded jam in the eighth. The crowd of 41,268 cheered throughout the break while the scoreboard flashed "1997 NL East Division — Champions."

"It's so hard to win one division," general manager John Schuerholz said. "Six? It's incredible. I've got to credit all the guys in here. They are fighters."

Division titles, however, aren't the ultimate goal in Atlanta. The Braves want to be considered among the great teams in history, a ranking that will likely elude them unless they add to the one World Series title they have managed to win this decade.

Three other times, Atlanta has lost in the World Series, including a six-game defeat to the New York Yankees a year ago.

"It's a great feeling every time we do this," third baseman Chipper Jones said during the postgame celebration. "I've done it a few times, but we want to do it a few more times this year."

In the bottom of the eighth, the Braves had a chance to break a 2-2 tie and give Maddux his 20th victory when they loaded the bases with one out. But Danny Bautista struck out and Andruw Jones popped weakly to short.

"Sure, I want to win 20," said Maddux, at 19-4 one of the top contenders for an unprecedented fifth Cy Young Award. "But I really want a (World Series) ring."

Mike Cather (1-4) picked up his first major league win and Shayne Bennett (0-1) took the loss, the first decision of his career.

Atlanta already was assured of becoming the first team to reach the playoffs six seasons in a row — not counting the strike-shortened 1994 season — after locking up a wild-card berth last week. The players were caught off guard by that moment, but they celebrated the division title with hats, T-shirts and champagne.

"This is one small step, but I'll admit it is exciting," said Kenny Lofton, who was part of the Cleveland team that lost to Atlanta in the 1995 World Series. "In Cleveland, we used to go crazy, but here the veterans are used to it. It's more subdued, but I like it this way."

Yanks' Wells bounces back, makes playoff case

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

NEW YORK — David Wells, trying to secure a spot in the Yankees' postseason rotation, won for the first time in nearly six weeks, pitching New York past the Toronto Blue Jays 8-1 Monday night.

The Yankees, who have already clinched at least a wild-card berth, trail Baltimore by three games in the AL East with six games remaining for both teams.

Wells (15-10) had been 0-5 in six starts since his previous victory on Aug. 14. The left-hander pitched eight innings and allowed seven hits, striking out seven and walking one.

Bernie Williams' two-run triple highlighted a four-run fifth inning against Pat Hentgen (15-10). Hentgen gave up five runs and seven hits in five innings.

Tigers 5, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Bob Hamelin hit a two-run homer to cap a four-run eighth inning that carried the Tigers past the struggling Orioles.

The improbable victory put the Tigers at .500 (78-78) for the first time since April 15 and kept the Orioles' magic number to clinch the AL East at three.

Rafael Palmeiro hit his team-high 37th homer for the Orioles, who have lost nine of 14 and 11 of 17. Baltimore closes the season on the road after a 5-9 homestand that included three losses in four games against Detroit.

The Orioles were 77-3 when taking a lead into the eighth inning; the Tigers had won only six of 69 games when trailing after seven.

Brian Hunter had three hits and stole his major league-leading 72nd base for the Tigers, who won their first series in Baltimore since 1994.

Twins 5, Brewers 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Damian Miller hit his first career grand slam and Travis Miller earned his first win of the season as the Twins beat Milwaukee in their final home game of the year.

The loss left the Brewers on the brink of being eliminated from the AL Central race. They will be knocked out with either one more defeat or one win by the first-place Cleveland Indians, whose game against Kansas City was rained out.

Damian Miller, a rookie whose only previous homer came Aug. 19 at Detroit, lined the first pitch he saw from Jeff D'Amico over the left-field fence for a 4-0 lead.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 23, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Sept. 23, 1997:
You feel an underlying push and pull this year. Decisions could be hard to make, especially vis-a-vis a relationship. Impulsive decisions will ultimately sabotage you. Sometimes, it is more important to go within and make choices that benefit you. Work requires your concentration and efficiency. If you are single, a friendship could become more. Do not put yourself down or feel insecure. Recognize your assets, emotionally and otherwise. You offer a lot. If attached, use the period before February 1998 to warm up your romantic ties. It's time to release a moot issue. CANCER can be demanding.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Tension is high. Think through your options in a family matter. How you deal with another could impact the end results of what goes on. Be as direct as possible, yet avoid uproar. Take care of personal and domestic matters first. Tonight: Anchor in at your pad.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Be your happy-go-lucky self, and express what is on your mind. You are so distracted that you don't get your work done. You need to prioritize. Be careful with a coworker who lets you know he don't agree with you. Do one task at a time. Tonight: Clean up your desk!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Recent risks could come home to roost. You are on overload. Take care with finances and romance. Everything could easily get out of control. Though you want to indulge, the time is right for a little self-restraint! Tonight: Know your limits when shopping.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You are full of get-up-and-go. But a domestic problem could cause controversy. Pull within, in order to be sure of yourself and your choices. Others respond to your charisma, personality and need for a good time. Be open to another's help. Tonight: Just ask with a smile!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★ You are uncomfortable with what is going on. Think through a decision. Don't feel you have to do anything until it is right, according your time schedule. Stay on top of communications. A message is easily lost. Tonight: Do for yourself!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Aim for success, but don't get upset when matters don't tumble your way. This is an occasion when intentions are important. Focus on what you want; don't dismiss anything as impossible. A friend comes through for you. Tonight: Get together with the gang.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Schedule what you want to do, but count on unusual demands coming from out of the blue. Be sure about what you want. Proceed carefully with a boss. Others push you hard but know they can count on you. Tonight: Plan on a late night.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Instincts are off. Rationalizing a course of action might not work. Detach from what is happening; gather as much perspective as possible. Show your caring in a way that others can hear. Listen attentively to what someone offers. Tonight: Escape to the movies.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Your objectives get tossed to the wind, but you have no one to complain about but yourself. Be careful with financial concerns involving partners. There could be a misunderstanding where you least expect it. Tonight: Be a snuggler.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Defer to another, and listen to feedback. There is a strong conflict between work and home, but you will resolve it. It is an excellent day to network and handle the social aspects of work. Pace yourself; you have lots of ground to cover. Tonight: The party begins with you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You feel surrounded by work, work and more work. You might have to cancel plans that take you out of town. Avoid office gossip, and remain direct. Confusion surrounds long-distance communications. Be sure about what you want. Tonight: Take a drive to clear your mind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Use your creative, dynamic thinking to formulate a new idea that could improve a partnership. You might find a financial matter too heavy for you. Regroup, then make a decision that works. Let your playful side come out. Tonight: Keep the peace.

LONG LIVE THE KING

East-West vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ J 10 7 2 ♡ A ◇ 7 3 2 ♣ A K 10 9 8
WEST ♠ Void ♡ 9 4 2 ◇ A Q J 8 5 4 ♣ J 7 4 3		EAST ♠ A 9 8 6 ♡ K Q J 8 3 ◇ K 6 ♣ Q 5
	SOUTH ♠ K Q 5 4 3 ♡ 10 7 6 5 ◇ 10 9 ♣ 6 2

The bidding:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♠	Dbl	1♠	2◇
3♠	Dbl	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ◇

Humans are by nature grasping creatures, reluctant to surrender their assets. But this deal proves there is a time and place for everything. It is from the Slovenia-Denmark match at the recent European Championship. In one room the Danish East-West pair played in four hearts and were defeated one trick after the defenders started with three rounds of clubs. That promoted a second trump trick for the defense. They were delighted with the result, however, because it seemed that North-South had only three losers in four spades.

In the other room the Danish North-South pair did bid to four spades on the auction shown. However, there's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip, as Silvana Rojko of Slovenia, sitting East, demonstrated. After the lead of the ace of diamonds, assume East followed low and won the second diamond with the king. What could the defender do? Not even ace of spades and another could stop declarer from establishing dummy's clubs and scoring 10 tricks.

That predicament was neatly avoided when East jettisoned the king of diamonds under the ace! West continued with the queen and jack of diamonds, East discarding a club on the latter. Now there was no way for declarer to set up clubs without permitting East to ruff the second round, and the ace of trumps was the setting trick.

Seagal film threatened by calls from self-proclaimed Montana militiamen

ENNIS, Mont. — Steven Seagal is having run-ins with the Montana militia in his new movie, and filming hasn't even started.

Seagal is scheduled to begin rehearsals for "The Patriot" this week. But the film crew already has called the FBI because of anonymous threats from callers identifying themselves as militia members.

Steven Seagal faces militia threat — and filming hasn't even gotten started.

"The Patriot" is about a doctor-rancher, played by Seagal, who tries to save Ennis from a deadly biochemical toxin. In the story, a renegade government lab worker steals the toxin, which somehow falls into the hands of the militia, killing militia members and townspeople.

Early media reports, however, incorrectly said the script has the militia stealing the toxin and deliberately unleashing it on the town.

A member of a militia-affiliated group in Bozeman denied that anyone in her organization would threaten the filmmaking.

"But anyone can say they belong to the militia and make a threat," said Kamala Webb, member of Citizens for a Free America. "The best militia is unorganized. We don't have membership lists or officers. So we can't really say someone wouldn't do it."

SAN FRANCISCO — Chelsea Clinton's big week allowed another presidential progeny to sneak into the San Francisco Bay area with little fanfare.

With only a few flashing cameras, John F. Kennedy Jr. mingled at Saks Fifth Avenue last Friday with San Francisco bigwigs like Mayor Willie Brown, 49ers President Carmen Policy, socialite Denise Hale and Supervisor Gavin Newsom.

After being barraged recently with questions about the paparazzi and the death of Princess Diana, Kennedy seemed more eager to talk about his role as editor-in-chief of George magazine than to chastise the press.

After all, he's one of them now.

"It's wonderfully ironic, so it's been fun so far," he said.

Asked how the press should police itself, he begged off.

"I haven't been around long enough to tell the established media what to do," he said.

But he did have some advice for Chelsea, who began her freshman year at Stanford University last week.

"Just try not to think too much about it," said Kennedy, a Brown University graduate. "Enjoy your first year of college."

NEW YORK — Aerosmith has been one of rock 'n' roll's hardest working bands for a quarter century — selling 50 million records along the way — but that doesn't mean Steven Tyler has always been happy with his group's effort in the early years.

Aerosmith work ethic wasn't always what it is now, Tyler says in new book.

"I knew what this band is capable of, but on stage I couldn't get them to go there," Tyler said in Monday's Daily News. "I'd be kicking the horse, waiting for it to gallop, and it pulled up short."

Tyler discusses the band in his new book "Walk This Way," coauthored by Stephen Davis. Tyler makes it clear Aerosmith has done its share of arguing over the years, something his bandmates don't dispute.

"We've always argued a lot," drummer Joey Kramer said. "What's served us is that we make great music together, and we respect each other's musical opinions."

BERNARDSVILLE, N.J. — A neighbor who has tended to Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis' house since her death in 1994 now owns it.

The secluded two-story converted barn was purchased by longtime friend Marjorie "Peggy" McDonnell Walsh for $1.47 million on July 27, according to deed records.

Ms. Walsh and New York attorney George Goodman, who represented Mrs. Onassis' daughter, Caroline Kennedy, in the sale, declined comment on the sale.

The former first lady bought the house on 9.9 acres in 1974 for $200,000. She used the house as a weekend home and neighbors often saw her in riding pants or sweatsuits, horseback-riding on her property.

Mayor Hugh Fenwick said Ms. Walsh was an old friend who was the reason Mrs. Onassis bought the house in the first place.

Katrina Nimmers practices in a park in the South Central area of last week. Nimmers and childhood friend Venus Williams, both products of South Central Los Angeles, may form tennis' most attractive rivalry.

From South Central, is another Venus rising?

By John Nadel
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — Venus Williams may soon have some familiar company on the tennis tour, a 17-year-old friend from the same hard courts where gunfire crackles in the distance.

Williams and Katrina Nimmers have known each other most of their lives, growing up together in South Central Los Angeles.

Now there is the possibility of the two players forming what would be one of the most attractive rivalries in tennis. Of course, much has to happen before that comes to pass.

But Williams certainly showed what she could do when she reached this month's U.S. Open finals. And Nimmers, for now, has the look of a winner, relishing a chance to join Williams.

"We're close friends," Nimmers said. "We know there's going to come a time when we're going to have to play. On the court, you take care of business."

Business begins Tuesday when Nimmers makes her professional debut against Elizabeth Cameron in prequalifying for the $50,000 Citibank USTA Challenger, a circuit tournament in Santa Clara.

Wimbledon in England and Arthur Ashe Stadium in New York are a long way from the Green Meadows Recreation Park's tennis courts at 89th and Avalon, where Nimmers learned the game.

"One time my practice partner and I saw a car coming, we were going from the courts to the car, sure enough, he shot," Nimmers recalled. "We hit the ground, it was very close.

"It's happened way more times than once. We were caught in the middle of the riots (after the Rodney King verdict), we've been caught in random shootings.

"I think I've seen it all. I think it just makes you stronger, it puts your goals clearer. I'm not going to be fearful. Where I'm from, not too much else is going to scare me."

The Williams family moved to Florida several years ago, thinking such an environment would be better for the tennis future of Venus and her 15-year-old sister Serena, also a top prospect.

The Nimmers family has remained in South Central, close to Watts — site of rioting in 1965 — and not far from Florence and Normandy, the flashpoint of the 1992 riots after the King verdicts. Katrina and her father, Mike, who serves as her coach, spent some time this year at the John Newcombe Prince Tennis Academy near San Antonio.

"Newcombe's gives you a freedom to really bring your kid up, and they emphasize education as well as tennis," Mike Nimmers said. "We took Katrina to the ranch for the kids overseas, not so much for the kids in America."

One of those kids from overseas, 16-year-old Martina Hingis, is the world's top-ranked woman player. It was Hingis who beat Williams in the U.S. Open finals at Arthur Ashe Stadium.

Phil Hendrie, the assistant director of the Newcombe academy, says Nimmers has the potential to be a top professional.

"She's a great athlete, she's extremely quick on the court," Hendrie said. "She definitely plays a game that will be successful in the '90s, and that's aggressive and hard-hitting.

"Her work ethic is definitely professional. The thing I liked about her the most is she loved the game of tennis. She truly played it with passion. Not every kid that comes in plays it like that."

Mike Nimmers said he and Richard Williams, the father of Venus and Serena, played tennis together before their daughters were born.

"Make no doubt that Richard's girls were destined to play professional tennis before they were born," Mike Nimmers said. "I enrolled Katrina in modeling school. I had no idea."

Arizona St. hires Newman as stopgap coach

Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — Former Sacramento State coach Don Newman has a new head-coaching job, but not the mandate that usually goes with it.

■ College Basketball

Newman, hired in May to help Bill Frieder recruit players for Arizona State, replaced his former boss Monday even though he was told he will hold the top spot less than a year.

"I wanted to be fair to him," athletic director Kevin White said about briefing Newman on his plans to begin a national search in January. "I think you've got to take an up-front position."

White gave Newman the interim job after failing to hire a big-name coach on the level of Utah's Rick Majerus or Kelvin Sampson of Oklahoma. Frieder resigned Sept. 10 following a 10-20 season, new federal activity in point-shaving allegations involving 1994 games, and theft charges filed Aug. 30 against two current players.

The FBI has said neither the school nor its officials are implicated in the point-shaving probe, but a federal grand jury is investigating the matter. Newman, 39, said he would prepare for the season with a win-or-else attitude and hope to impress White.

"I just cry for the support of everybody to rally around this group of young men, and when it's all said and done, when the smoke is cleared, I wish a very, very tough decision on him," Newman said.

The appointment was popular with the team. Center Michael Batiste said Newman can banter with players and still enforce discipline.

"When this man talks, it means something," Batiste said. "You'll never see a player's eyes blink, not once. All eyes are on him — the power and the motivation and confidence that he has come through."

White wanted to hire Majerus or Sampson, but both issued statements Sept. 16 denying interest. White, a five-year athletic director at Tulane before Arizona State hired him a year ago, then considered Green Wave coach Perry Clark, but returned Thursday after a week on the road without offering the job to anyone.

Newman joined Arizona State as Frieder's third assistant, filling a vacancy created when George McQuarn, who was with Frieder throughout his eight years in Tempe, retired last spring.

The other assistants are Jim Phillips and Doc Sadler. Newman said Phillips would stay on, but Sadler was in negotiations with the athletic department to determine his future.

Newman coached Sacramento State to a 20-114 record during five years when the program moved up from NCAA Division II to Division I. Before that, he was an assistant to Sampson at Washington State for five years, finishing as recruiting coordinator.

He played football and basketball in college. He began at LSU and transferred to Idaho, where he earned all-Big Sky Conference basketball recognition and was drafted by the Boston Celtics in the third round in 1980.

Walton's son is Arizona bound

TUCSON, Ariz. — Luke Walton, son of NBA great Bill Walton, has committed to play basketball for defending champion Arizona. That means he'll be competing against his father's alma mater, UCLA.

"My dad didn't put any pressure on me to go to UCLA or anywhere else," Walton said. "He respects coach (Lute) Olson very much, so he was very happy when I told him I was going to Arizona."

Walton, a 6-foot-8, 200-pound forward, attended San Diego University High School and is highly rated by many recruiting services.

RYDER: Europeans trying to play it cool

(From 1C)

"I am here only to talk about the team and nothing else," Ballesteros said. "There are no comments on that. We talk about the team, and that's it."

Will Martin be coming to Valderrama?

"I don't know," Ballesteros said.

Ballesteros may not care, either. But he does care about winning, which will only add to the intensity when the real action begins Friday.

Monday's weather was similar to what was expected all week — afternoon temperatures near 90 degrees, with occasional breezes that will make the challenging layout even more tricky. Both teams begin full practices on Tuesday, and Ballesteros announced his twosomes for the first full practice session — Colin Montgomerie and Darren Clarke; Per-Ulrik Johansson and Jesper Parnevik; Nick Faldo and Ignacio Garrido; Costantino Rocca and Jose Maria Olazabal; Bernhard Langer and Thomas Bjorn, and Ian Woosnam and Lee Westwood.

Tom Kite, the United States captain, has been secretive about how he plans to use his 12 players — Tiger Woods, Justin Leonard, Davis Love 3d, Fred Couples, Jim Furyk, Tom Lehman, Phil Mickelson, Jeff Maggert, Lee Janzen, Mark O'Meara, Scott Hoch and Brad Faxon. On paper, this looks like one of the best United States Ryder Cup teams ever.

But Ballesteros sounded unfazed, and it would not be surprising if he changed many of Tuesday's pairings by Friday's first day of competition. Ballesteros is known for his gamesmanship, and he has already succeeded in getting this year's format changed for the first two days. Four-ball play (two-man teams, best score wins hole), normally played in the afternoon, will be held in the morning, while foursomes (two-man teams, alternate shot) will be held in the afternoon on both Friday and Sunday. As usual, Sunday's action will feature 12 one-on-one match-play showdowns.
